61. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: Business, class, access
62. Taylor Brady — Request for Information
63. Lowther, John — Body in Artistic Prod. (was "Poetic Culture")
64. Dodie Bellamy — Local Howler
65. George Bowering — Re: Harry Mathews -- early poems
66. Al Filreis — Harry Mathews -- early poems
67. Dean Taciuch — (Technology) RE: miekal and dobyns and etc.
68. geraldine mckenzie — Re: Boxkite-Naylor / Smith
69. pete spence — Re: Regionalism; Provincialism
70. pete spence — Re: internet costs
71. pete spence — Re: Business, class, access
72. George Bowering — Re: Treat Your Trick!! Poetry @ BORDERS, Mon., Oct. 25: A-A WIGHT & ML PO...
73. George Bowering — Re: name that quote?
74. George Bowering — Re: HIGHWIRE READING
75. miekal and — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
76. Max Winter — Re: go ahead and spend the money

3 NOV 1999

77. Thomas Bell — Re: Body in Artistic Prod. (was "Poetic Culture")
78. Mills, Billy — Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Nov 1999 to 2 Nov 1999 (#1999-206)
79. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Address
80. Stephen Ellis — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
81. Katie Degentesh — TELL EVERYONE YOU KNOW
82. Lowther, John — _Van Gogh Talks_ chapbook from 3rdness
83. Joe Amato — viet nam poetry question...
84. Jerrold Shiroma — small press list @ duration
85. kathylou — Some stats on Web usage
86. Tony Green — Re: internet costs
87. Arielle C. Greenberg — Mass Ave
88. Tony Green — Fw: heraclitus
89. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press Bibliography Project @ Duration Press
90. Jill Stengel — Re: Address
91. Jim Rosenberg — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
92. Joel M Bettridge — date change for Ronald Johnson conference
93. Tom Beckett — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.

4 NOV 1999

94. Alan Sondheim — DOCTOR LEOPOLD KONNINGER, ERROR MESSAGE

95. Charles Alexander — announcement
96. Tom Beckett — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
97. Brent Long — Apollinaire/Hesse
98. miekal and — tendering opposition
99. Robert Archambeau — Re: anyone know?
100. Tom Beckett — Bromige and the Provinces
101. peter neufeld — New Chapbook from melodeon poetry systems
102. David Baratier — Re: Business, class, access
103. Mark Melnicove — Poets in towers
104. Lowther, John — the Rub
105. hassen — Re: Free Cuisinart
106. Poetics List Administration — Re: anyone know?
107. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Several Announcements
108. Stephen Ellis — Re: tendering opposition
109. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Poets in towers
110. Safdie Joseph — Re: heraclitus
111. pete spence — Re: internet costs
112. miekal and — Re: Poets in towers
113. Layne Russell — a david page
114. pete spence — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
115. pete spence — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
116. pete spence — Re: Bromige and the Provinces
117. Safdie Joseph — Re: The body
118. pete spence — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
119. Tom Beckett — Re: (Technology) RE: miekal and dobyns and etc.
120. Tony Green — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
121. miekal and — oops Re: tendering opposition
122. Dean Taciuch — Re: (Technology) RE: miekal and dobyns and etc.
123. Michael Heller — Advertisments for self
124. Elizabeth Treadwell — movie STARS
125. Elizabeth Treadwell — ps re movie STARS
126. Andrew John Miller — Re: Poets in towers
127. Loss Pequeño Glazier — Deluxe Rubber Chicken #4

5 NOV 1999

128. Alan Sondheim — AGENDA
129. Leonard Brink — 20% off at SPD
130. Mariah Corrigan — Simone Weil: the madness for truth
131. Jim Andrews — Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
132. daniel bouchard — Re: Mass Ave
133. Jordan Davis — Re: Poets in towers
134. Katherine Lederer — DH, NYC: Giraud and Lubasch this Saturday
135. Grant Jenkins — The Use of This Listserv
136. Joe Amato — polarizing the web...
137. Eric Gelsinger — Octavio Paz
138. Brian Lennon — Technology / the body/ immateriality
139. Brian Lennon — L-poets and the body
140. Mark Prejsnar — the Luddites weren't Luddites
141. Mark Prejsnar — a Larry Eigner poem, for Jacques Debrot
142. Karen Kelley — Need Henry Gould's email address
143. kathylou — Re: Business, class, access (fwd)
144. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
145. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — query
146. R M Daley — Re: movie STARS
147. Tony Green — Re: heraclitus
148. Poetry Project — next week at the Poetry Project

149. Peter Fogarty — Re: internet costs
150. Kyle Conner — HIGHWIRE READING
151. Richard Dillon — Re: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
152. K.Angelo Hehir — phonaesthetic
153. George Bowering — Re: Poets in towers

6 NOV 1999

154. f i l c h — Re: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
155. dan raphael — Where to read in Boston
156. Jim Andrews — Re: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
157. Alan Sondheim — Lecture: Natural Kinds
158. Louis Cabri — PhillyTalks 13, 12, 11 now available
159. Ron Silliman — Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
160. Tom Beckett — misc.
161. Robin Tremblay-McGaw — pain in the ass--class

7 NOV 1999

162. Ron Silliman — Shurin review in the Chron
163. r.drake — factoid
164. Alan Sondheim — hanging text iii
165. Eckerd College Review — Re: your mail (fwd)
166. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press Publications
167. Betsy Andrews — BELLADONNA READING

8 NOV 1999

168. Philip Nikolayev — TEST_COERCION_TO_CHAR.OUT
169. Alan Sondheim — 14 lines
170. Robert Archambeau — Re: renga redux
171. Brent Long — Merwin
172. Jim White — Re: your mail (fwd)
173. Jordan Davis — the renga
174. Steve Clay — Fagin/Winkfield DIG & DELVE
175. Layne Russell — Re: The Use of This Listserv
176. David Kellogg — Re: The Use of This Listserv
177. David Baratier — Re: Business, class, access
178. Poetics List — renga redux
179. Poetics List — The Internet and all that / Mills
180. Poetics List — Re: tendering opposition / Mills
181. Grant Jenkins — Re: renga redux
182. Poetics List — DAC 99 conference report / Marsh
183. Michael Magee — Re: query
184. Poetics List — Re: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
185. Tony Green — rengaitis
186. Jorge Guitart — Re: the renga
187. Taylor Brady — Re: phonaesthetic
188. Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Bway NYC 10012 — Morphology Of Change (November Show)
189. Brian Lennon — contact info request: Ronk/Vangelisti/Phillips
190. Taylor Brady — Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
191. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: phonaesthetic
192. michael corbin — Re: query
193. pete spence — Re: internet costs
194. michael corbin — Re: polarizing the web...
195. Daniel Zimmerman — earliest american poem
196. Patrick Herron — origin of American poetry spells trouble
197. jocelyn saidenberg — Alcalay and Cole at Small Press Traffic, 11/12
198. tf — TF12 November 1999 (Quandaries)

9 NOV 1999

199. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: query
200. Jim Andrews — Hypertranscript is up of Defib on Talan Memmott
201. Maria L. Zavialov — class, gender etc.
202. Susan Wheeler — Reading / Query
203. Alicia Askenase — Robert Creeley Reading
204. Roger Day — Re: The Internet and all that / Mills
205. Lowther, John — Re: Techno Immateria
206. Katie Degentesh — NEW EMAIL ADDRESS
207. Lowther, John — Weekend in New Orleans (part 1)
208. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Left Hand Reading for 11/17 @ 9:00 pm
209. Taylor Brady — Re: phonaesthetic
210. Brent Long — Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
211. Richard Dillon — Re: Business, class, access (fwd)
212. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: Business, class, access
213. David Kirschenbaum — Booglite issue two: Poetry as Cultural Critique
214. Nielsen, Aldon — readings in Los Angeles
215. Lowther, John — Weekend in New Orleans (part 2)
216. Jill Stengel — Re: Business, class, access
217. Nielsen, Aldon — Fwd: INFO: trumpeter lester bowie dies -- tribute in harlem arts journal
218. pete spence — Re: Business, class, access (fwd)
219. Joe Amato — Re: Business, class, access
220. Alan Sondheim — imanopagun lleraze why ...
221. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: contact info request: Ronk/Vangelisti/Phillips
222. Toni Simon and Nick Piombino — phoneaesthetic

10 NOV 1999

223. Brent Cunningham — Re: phonaesthetic
224. Robin Tremblay-McGaw — class again
225. Ron Silliman — Lester Bowie
226. Taylor Brady — FW: Lester Left Town
227. Arielle C. Greenberg — Re: earliest american poem
228. Lawrence Upton — SVP News
229. Taylor Brady — Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
230. raea100900 — Re: Diane Ward contact
231. D Wellman — Re: Business, class, access
232. Stephen Vincent — Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
233. George Bowering — Re: Lester Bowie
234. Tony Green — Fw: Exhibition: Threads of Humanity
235. Michael Walsh — Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
236. David Larsen — Re: Business, class, access
237. Rebecca Weldon Sithiwong — Virtual democracy
238. Alan Sondheim — s k y w o m e n
239. Dodie Bellamy — Re: Business, class, access
240. miekal and — Re: FW: Lester Left Town

11 NOV 1999

241. miekal and — sawtooth wave decline [alan'swords]
242. Owen Hill — Ammiano for Mayor
243. rebecca wolff — Fence #4
244. Ron Silliman — Brent Long's question
245. Lowther, John — Re: Lester Left Town
246. Mark Prejsnar — great expectations
247. Lowther, John — geometric rather than
248. Jill Stengel — Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
249. Todd Nettleton — Love a good mystery?

250. Lowther, John — Weekend in New Orleans (part 3)
251. Poetry Project — next week at the Poetry Project
252. Catherine Daly — Re: B+C+A & littoral
253. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: Business, class, access
254. Lowther, John — Weekend in New Orleans (part 4)
255. Susan Vanderborg — MLA panel on "The Performed Text"
256. Alan Sondheim — (no subject)

12 NOV 1999

257. Lawrence Upton — (no subject)
258. Poetics List Administration — POETICS: approval required (E653424A)
259. Philip Nikolayev — Re: class, gender etc.
260. Doug Lang — Re: Diane Ward contact
261. Katherine Lederer — Double Happiness, NYC 11/13
262. Maria Damon — Re: MLA panel on "The Performed Text"
263. Michael Neff — "Sensation": The Exhibit (reduced 1000X)
264. Stephen Ellis — Re: Business, class, access
265. Ron Silliman — Cities & the outlands
266. Al Filreis — Watten DuPlessis Writers House webcast
267. Alan Sondheim — for + i love your feelings
268. Tom Beckett — Benjamin's ARCADES PROJECT
269. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Diane Ward contact
270. K.Angelo Hehir — Trumpeter Lester Bowie Is Dead at 58
271. Maria L. Zavialov — class, gender etc
272. Kyle Conner — HIGHWIRE READING
273. Melisa Cahnmann — Laughing Hermit Series: Poets, Gary Short and Jan Heller Levi
274. David Kirschenbaum — I Need Good Email Address on Second Story Books
275. Carol L. Hamshaw — Re: MLA panel on "The Performed Text"
276. levitsk — Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
277. Michael Neff — Re: class, gender etc.

13 NOV 1999

278. Alan Sondheim — winter logs in hokkaido
279. Dubravka Djuric — Fw: (Fwd) (Fwd) International Women's University Hannover
280. Dubravka Djuric — raport-forth regional seminar - ceu budapest
281. David Baratier — Re: Business, class, access
282. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: TEST_COERCION_TO_CHAR.OUT

14 NOV 1999

283. Lawrence Upton — Sub Voicive Poetry and Writers Forum
284. Lowther, John — Weekend in New Orleans (part 5)
285. Joe Amato — new anthology...
286. hassen — question
287. Alan Sondheim — "loose ends"
288. Alan Sondheim — Noise News: 'Your Life' (fwd)
289. Stephen Vincent — Lester Bowie/KPFA

15 NOV 1999

290. lee ann brown — email change + soft skull readings
291. jenho — Ochs/Hejinian/Dragomoschenko Collaboration
292. Grant Jenkins — Top dollar urine sing-a-long (renga)
293. David Kirschenbaum — BoogBeat: Davis/Koch, Wilk/Stroffolino, Troupe/Zinc Bar
294. Alan Sondheim — Opinion / Speedfactory (fwd)
295. Poetics List — Smithson and Poetry (reading)
296. Poetics List — Anne Waldman and Bill Berkson at SPT, 11/19 / saidenberg
297. Poetics List — Re: Ochs/Hejinian/Dragomoschenko Collaboration
298. Philip Nikolayev — Re: class, gender etc.

299. Al Filreis — Re: question
300. Judy Schwartz — Re: HIGHWIRE READING
301. Susan Wheeler — The New Yorker magazine dated 8/22/99
302. David Baptiste Chirot — [Cuba SI] FW: To Leonard Peltier from Subcomandante Marcos (fwd) 303. David Baptiste Chirot — [Y4M] Leonard Peltier FREEDOM MONTH Calendar - SUPPORT LEONARD! (fw...
304. Aaron Fewell — Re: class, gender etc.
305. David Zauhar — Re: The New Yorker magazine dated 8/22/99
306. Safdie Joseph — Re: Watten DuPlessis Writers House webcast
307. David Baptiste Chirot — Re: class, gender etc.
308. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
309. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: Business, class, access
310. Kathy Lou Schultz — Hunt quote correction
311. pete spence — Re: Weekend in New Orleans (part 5)
312. derek beaulieu — call for contributions

16 NOV 1999

313. Dan Machlin — Mayer/Machlin Reading
314. Alan Sondheim — Once More, with the Usual Feeling
315. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: earliest american poem
316. Lowther, John — FW: [silence] Sonic Youth do Cage, Tenney, Wolff, et al
317. levitsk — Re: query,reminder
318. Robert Freedman — Texts: "Writing from the New Coast"
319. Robert Corbett — Re: new anthology...
320. Daniel Bouchard — Watten DuPlessis Writers House
321. Marla Jernigan — Introduction
322. Joe Brennan — Re: class, gender etc.
323. Taylor Brady — Re: [silence] Sonic Youth do Cage, Tenney, Wolff, et al
324. Damion Searls — Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
325. Pete — Re-introduction
326. David Kellogg — [Fwd: CFP: Barbara Guest (6/1; journal)]
327. Scharf, Michael (Cahners -NYC) — Publishers Weekly
328. Jerrold Shiroma — small press announcements deadline
329. Alan Sondheim — report
330. sylvester pollet — New Writing Series
331. pete spence — Re: class, gender etc.
332. pete spence — Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
333. pete spence — Re: class, gender etc.
334. levitsk — Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
335. K.Angelo Hehir — Re: phonaesthetic
336. David Gitin — Re: Lester Bowie on KPFA
337. ixnaypress — announcement - ixnay 3 & mirakove's WALL
338. Maria Damon — XCP EVENT IN CHICAGO

17 NOV 1999

339. Jim Andrews — Bill Marsh and sunbrella.net on Defib this Sunday
340. Elizabeth Fagin — LEROY chapbook series
341. Rachel Loden — class notes b/w duchess of URL
342. Summi Kaipa — I n t e r l o p e # 4
343. Tom Orange — The New Yorker magazine dated 8/22/99
344. Deborah Meadows — Cuban poetry scene
345. Daniel Bouchard — living and wages (of sin? of fear?)
346. Brent Long — Re: living and wages (of sin? of fear?)
347. Joe Amato — Re: class notes b/w duchess of URL
348. Tony Green — Re: phonaesthetic
349. Alan Sondheim — ijiopidndid

350. pete spence — Re: class notes b/w duchess of URL
351. pete spence — Re: class notes b/w duchess of URL
352. pete spence — Re: Business, class, AMMIANO

18 NOV 1999

353. Stephen Cope — Beyond the Page
354. Mark Melnicove — Re: New Writing Series
355. Chris Funkhouser — NEWARK REVIEW, Vol. 2, set 5 now available
356. Ron Silliman — Paul Bowles
357. Mary Burger — A reading in DC, 11/21
358. Al Filreis — Watten/DuPlessis webcast recording
359. Tony Green — Fw: (Fwd) mini-AIR November 99 - Beloved Building, Foggy Fogies, e
360. Y. — Death of Paul Bowles
361. Alan Sondheim — In the Dark
362. Bob Haynes — Question about Dionne Brand
363. Poetics List Administration — POETICS: approval required (DD0A5C0D)
364. Poetics List Administration — POETICS: approval required (4340AFED)
365. P.Standard Schaefer — Rhizome
366. Gerald Schwartz — Re: earliest american poem
367. David Baptiste Chirot — [Y4M] Re: URGENT Demos: United With Vieques: Cities & Events across...

19 NOV 1999

368. Jim Andrews — Claire Dinsmore at Defib: hypertranscript available
369. Carol L. Hamshaw — [Fwd: Daphne Marlatt--TCR Writer-in-residence]
370. Alan Sondheim — Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
371. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Rhizome
372. ART ELECTRONICS — ROME / TOTAL THEATRE / Intermedial Areas
373. David Knoebel — Announcement: Dream/Fall
374. Tony Green — Re: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
375. Poetry Project — new on website & next week
376. Maria L. Zavialov — class
377. david bromige — re Bromige And the Provinces

20 NOV 1999

378. Lawrence Upton — Bob Cobbing etc
379. david bromige — Provincialism, regionalism
380. david bromige — re name thAt quote
381. Brendan Lorber — LUNGFULL!8: The Stakes are Big...
382. Jerrold Shiroma — New Small Press Publications List
383. Pierre Joris — Re: Paul Bowles

21 NOV 1999

384. David Baratier — Re: Business, class, access
385. Katherine Lederer — Double Happiness NYC - Upcoming 386. Katherine Lederer — Duration Press address?

22 NOV 1999

387. Ron Silliman — Mac Low wins the Tanning!
388. rebecca wolff — fence errata
389. miekal and — e u y
390. Poetics List — NAROPA UNIVERSITY WEB-BASED CLASSES / Seltz
391. Poetics List — Amy Holman / Fouhy
392. Poetics List — poetry web site / Fouhy
393. Charles Bernstein — Jackson Mac Low / Tanning Prize
394. Hoa Nguyen — Skanky announcement: Possum #3
395. bill marsh — email for scott keeney
396. Arielle C. Greenberg — chapbook publishers

397. Richard Dillon — Re: Jackson Mac Low / Tanning Prize
398. Ron Silliman — Re: Announcement: Dream/Fall
399. miekal and — Re: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
400. Tom Beckett — Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
401. Alan Sondheim — (no subject)

23 NOV 1999

402. Skip Fox — Re: realism, autobiography
403. Lowther, John — realism, autobiography
404. David Baratier — reading in nyc
405. Nielsen, Aldon — Creeley In Company
406. Juliana Spahr — mullen on alexander
407. Jonathan Skinner — New Mayer CD
408. Nielsen, Aldon — MLA already
409. jocelyn saidenberg — K. Prevallet and T. Bryant Reading at SPT, 12/3
410. pete spence — Re: class
411. pete spence — Re: Provincialism, regionalism
412. derek beaulieu — submissions wanted.

24 NOV 1999

413. Steve Tills — Recent David Lehman book
414. juliana spahr — review of Tardos's Uxudo
415. rmutts — Fwd: Subtext presents Dale Going and C.E. Putnam on Dec. 1st
416. Joel Weishaus — Re: letting go
417. Carol L. Hamshaw — [Fwd: Adeena Karasick wins the Vancouver Videopoem Festival "People's Ch...
418. MAYHEW — class
419. David Kirschenbaum — Creeley NYPL Exhibit Opening Coverage, from Booglit 6
420. Tony Green — Re: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
421. Tony Green — Re: Creeley In Company
422. Arielle C. Greenberg — Re: Recent David Lehman book
423. Maria L. Zavialov — Re: class
424. Richard Dillon — Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
425. Katherine Lederer — Re: Recent David Lehman book
426. Steve Dickison —  Don't miss the George Oppen Lecture  Thurs Dec 2 **
427. Alan Sondheim — (towards a poetics of multimedia/text)
428. Summi Kaipa — government funding in the arts
429. pete spence — Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
430. pete spence — Re: class

25 NOV 1999

431. Acharya Hom Raj — introduc

26 NOV 1999

432. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Class and Money
433. Alan Sondheim — INCUBATION: FINAL CALL FOR PAPERS - Deadline 1 December 1999 (fwd)
434. Louis Cabri — PhillyTalk #14
435. Randy Prunty — ARTEMESIA.....new mag call for submissions

27 NOV 1999

436. George Bowering — Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
437. George Bowering — Re: re Bromige And the Provinces

28 NOV 1999

438. Alan Sondheim — (no subject)
439. Katie Degentesh — 9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9
440. David Buuck — Gladman, Lu reading in SF 12/2

441. Kathy Lou Schultz — HOW2 event in San Francisco

29 NOV 1999

442. Richard Frey — Holley, Kelly, Loo, +? at 12/12 NOTcoffeeHouse
443. Jerrold Shiroma — New @ Duration Press
444. R I Caddel — New BUNTING book... (fwd)
445. Poetics List — avant garde / mckenzie
446. Poetics List — Monday's poetry reading / Fouhy
447. Brent Long — Please help
448. Poetry Project — this week at the Poetry Project
449. MAYHEW — (no subject)
450. david bromige — re : hierarchies of "excellence"
451. Steve Dickison —  Oppen Lecture  Clarification **
452. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Two Readings
453. Patrick F. Durgin — Re: Recent David Lehman book
454. George Bowering — Re: government funding in the arts
455. Alan Sondheim — a message from the past (fwd)
456. pete spence — Re: class
457. pete spence — Re: Class and Money
458. David Knoebel — Call for papers
459. hassen — Re: government funding in the arts

30 NOV 1999

460. Charles Bernstein — NYC reading 12/1
461. Tom Beckett — Prolegomena to a Phenomenology of Self-Help
462. Nielsen, Aldon — Fwd: Humor: Rules for Singin' the Blues
463. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: Recent David Lehman book
464. Lawrence Upton — Sub Voicive Poetry - end of / start of an era
465. Poetics List — Looking for Visual artists who use text / Smith
466. Michael Magee — apt in Brooklyn, roomates needed 467. Christopher Reiner — Extra, Extra...Gov't to Subsidize Poetry (sort of)
468. Pete — Re: community
469. Simon DeDeo — Class & Poet[ry/ics]
470. Elizabeth Treadwell — new chapbooks by women

1. Wendy Kramer
samuel delany
Thu 28 Oct 1999

hey, isn't samuel delany at univ. at buffalo this term? could someone in poetics program post what's been happening? what have y'all been talking about?

wendy

↑ Index

2. Lowther, John
Re: poetry audience/s
Fri 29 Oct 1999

tom beckett wrote; Miekal, / Cyberspace / is great / but only / inexpensive / if you can / afford access / to it. / I think yr / assumptions / are loaded / and wrong.

and i gotta 2nd that if i should lose this job (which is very possible next year the budget might not be there for a 3rd time position) i'd lose all email and computer access and be back in the lovely world of letter writing and sneaking in to my wife's office late at night to work on her machine which characterizes the way things were all but the last year for me

)ohn

↑ Index

3. D Wellman
Re: Bye
Fri 29 Oct 1999

I sometimes wonder if there are valid distinctions between public acts and private acts in this cyber-age. I am tempted to say that public and private have merged in ways that make many of us uncomfortable.

Still to construct complex works in and share in them an essentially public arena, to do that and not be noticed -- that strikes me as demoralizing. That we are discussing the enactment not what is enacted also might be demoralizing. Part of what Alan seems to me to be saying is that not many here seem all that interested in the realities he is pursuing.

As private space gives way to public space one response is back biting. The question the Sondheim thread raises for me does concern the very possibility of maintining the author/reader response frame. I am interested in how poets negotiate possible positions for different and differing voices and what I see now is that the most common posture is largely defensive.

Like Hilton then I too am sorry to see Alan take a defensive posture.

I treasure the links that he sends as windows to a different order of inter-relation within these electronic spaces.

I am still trying to digest what any of this means to me, beyond the matter of postures and positions.

As a beginning of substantive response, I might say this much. When I am seated before a window scrolling through text, my internal editor seems to disconnect. I hardly ever read straight through something as the mechanism of scrolling might suggest I should be doing. Instead my eye jumps around looking for clues or hot spots. I am never sure that I have chosen to dwell on bits of any signifigance to any one but me. I think I want to follow my own path and for that reason I'd rather visit a web page than receive an e-mail. I'd love to be on a list that accepted html attachments. I appreciate too the problems of those with machines or connections that do not support such and wonder if there is not a technological factor of exclusion, of being excluded that is not part of the reasons for the response to Alan's work. It is like we are seeing the work at a level below the level that it is best made available to us, at a level that is difficult to engage. So that is my substantive comment: how does the work address the seeming imperative for engagement versus the temptation to scroll or delete. For me personally Alan's e-mail texts do that job when I feel I can engage with the Jennifer persona as some kind of Deleuzian body without organs madly replicating. And I wonder if one response to the electronic environment will not be the multiplacation of personae with in each of our otherwise situated selves.

--
Don Wellman

↑ Index

4. D Wellman
Re: poetry audience/s
Fri 29 Oct 1999

no one to authenticate the mission, imposed despised

"Nielsen, Aldon" wrote:

> no one to impress or hustle, none to > address, only Being & Nothingness,
>
> no one to drive the car

--
Donald Wellman

↑ Index

5. Kevin Killian
Donald M. Allen in San Francisco
Fri 29 Oct 1999

Just a brief note to say that, yes, if you are in San Francisco tonight (Friday October 29) and can come to the Small Press Traffic launch for the "New American Poetry" re-issue, the editor Donald M. Allen will indeed be there in person making a very rare appearance, yes, the Donald Allen of Evergreen Review fame and Frank O'Hara fame and this and that etc. Along with David Meltzer, Michael McClure, Barbara Guest, Ferlinghetti, Ron Loewinsohn amd Ebbe Borregaard who has not read anywhere for 25 years, so if you get this message in time please come to Small Press Traffic at New College at 7:30, 777 Valencia Street between 18th and 19th (San Francisco).

Whew, I haven't been this excited since Dodie and I chased the actor David Thewlis through the corridors of SF Airport because I wanted his autograph, and then it turned out it wasn't him after all, and I was saying, "But I saw you in 'Naked'!" and this -- impostor -- slash -- lookalike -- gave me the most appalled look!!!

Kevin Killian

↑ Index

6. miekal and
Re: poetry audience/s
Fri 29 Oct 1999

Tom,

Poetry books are great

but only inexpensive

if you can afford access to it.

I think yr

assumptions

are loaded

and wrong.

Miekal

(who wonders how much it costs to use internet access at a local library. out here the towns of 300 people have free internet access in their libraries, its everywhere out here in the middle of this nowhere.

↑ Index

7. Brian Lennon

Re: various stuff (reply to Alan Sondheim)

Fri 29 Oct 1999

Alan:

Seems to me that when the List dips into one of its periodic troughs of despond, it's abnormally tempting to posit 'groups' or 'bodies' (dominant and resistant) behind the constellations of voices that speak up. Thus we get notions of the List as a radical province polluted by liberals (or vice versa), or an avant-garde contaminated by folks who don't hate Pinsky, or, as you've reversed it, a "new mainstream" unable to assimilate the groundbreaking work now being done. Though I think you're right that some of the self-styled avantgardism on this List is hopelessly dated and mainly self-congratulatory, your work itself always reminds me that particularly in electronically mediated discourses there are no essentializable discursive groups: rather, what you get are shifting patterns of allegiance and dissent. Notions of total inclusion in, or exclusion from, the List as fantasized community seem equally meaningless to me.

Brian Lennon

>I think what's lacking here, at least for me (and possibly some others) is exactly what one means by poetics - and then, given that, what body - of literature, people, texts, or media - that word should be applied to,here, on this list - Alan

↑ Index

8. miekal and
Re: poetry audience/s
Fri 29 Oct 1999

---

o & tom these same libraries probably dont have a poetry book more contemporary than leaves of grass.

↑ Index

9. miekal and
STANCE/self-love
Fri 29 Oct 1999

---

too small not seen sweep clean full emotion your donkey piled upon him softer than felt penetrate the we'll have no worry what's to be done

"play with yourself, there, when no one is looking" closure abrupt. closure assumed. closure alias.

Closure trails discomfort. No glove that fits just right. When the words don't come easily, not just right, is this closure?

Sound breaks at the watchtower, filled the village your love knew the ashes dissolved and smeared cold

radiant reds mixed in my heart returned from profuse tears

I await book after book upon your gracious efforts showed only a faded river flows

by this man
he misses heaven

buried alive hidden in the middle with the sudden curled willow crisscrosses

when their luck runs out flustering the season everyone talks force of pleasure

a pearl quite empty not having seen your lover

YOURS
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/i.htm

↑ Index

10. Jacques Debrot
Re: Atlanta Poetry Group
Fri 29 Oct 1999

It is wonderful, of course, to know 4 or 5 people with whom you share a passionate mutual interest, particularly if you feel this enthusiasm is stigmatized in some way by those outside your own immediate circle of friends. But seeing the tag "APG" turning up lately with increasing frequency, I can't help feeling, Mark, John, and Randy, that your "confederation" (if it hasn't already crossed over the line) is threatening to become unintentionally parodic. As it is, the utility of the APG (apart from giving you all something to do on a Friday evening) strikes me as pretty blatantly self-aggrandizing. (Each of you, however, knows the truth or falsity of this better than I do: perhaps you should ask yourselves what exactly it is you experience when you see a reference to the APG included in a contributors note, or appended to a "controversial" post to the POETICS LIST.) In any case, I find these posts much less interesting as your collective "assurance" has grown.

But, please--consider this to be a friendly criticism (& perhaps, too, a goad for you to continue your association along more creatives lines than I have so far observed).

--jacques

↑ Index

11. Poetry Project
next week at the Poetry Project
Fri 29 Oct 1999

Monday, November 1st

is our exciting and chaotic OPEN MIKE where all expectations are thwarted. 7:30 pm sign-up, reading at 8 pm.

Then,

Wednesday, November 3rd

at 8 pm

A reading by David Bromige & Elizabeth Fodaski

David Bromige has some poems on the Poetry Project web site at http://www.poetryproject.com/bromige.html for your electrical reading pleasure. He is also the author of over 30 books, including Piccolo Mondo, Initializing, & As in 'T' as in 'Tether.' Elizabeth Fodaski is the editor and publisher of Torque magazine, and the author of _fracas_ newly arrived from Krupskaya press.

And then,

Friday, November 5th

at 10:30 pm

Rattapallax magazine celebrates its 2nd anniversary with an open reading contest and featured readings by Lamont P. Steptoe, Ron Price, and George Dickerson. The best three readers will receive a FREE PC COMPUTER--yes, they work! From what we hear, they are actually state-of-the-art masterpieces of computorial construction.

All readings are $7, $4 for students and seniors
The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church on the corner of 2nd Ave. and 10th St. in New York, NY.
Wheelchair accessible with advance notice. Call [redacted] for more information.

***

If you do not wish to be on our e-mail list, please respond to this message with a "remove me please" note.

***

And have a very, very wonderful Halloween, the holiday tailor-made for the poet (and artist) in you!

***

↑ Index

12. Pritchett,Patrick
obit for Alberti
Fri 29 Oct 1999

---

http://www.nytimes.com/yr/mo/day/news/national/obit-r-alberti.html

↑ Index

13. Mary Burger
NEW BOOK: Lauren Gudath/Second Story Books
Fri 29 Oct 1999

NEW from SECOND STORY BOOKS:

>>THE TELEVISION DOCUMENTARY by Lauren Gudath 20 pages, sewn binding, vellum and vinyl cover.

"Isolated from the benefits and peek-a-boo regimen cleanliness and godliness the dynamo temperance
The specimen: neglect, instinct, mechanics, abandoned surface. Pathetic England."
-- from The Television Documentary

ALSO AVAILABLE:

>>A SUMMER NEWSREEL by Brenda Coultas
23 pages, hand-stitched binding, vellum and monotone color photo cover.

"Those new to Coultas' writing are in for a fine treat: for several years, Coultas has been conducting an in-depth evaluation of the interstices of rural and semi-rural America and A Summer Newsreel is another stunning chapter in the most gloriously idiosyncratic work around." --Laird Hunt

>>NOT RIGHT NOW by Renee Gladman
24 pages, hand-stitched binding, vellum and monotone color photo cover.

"Twenty-five small, squarish prose paragraphs from on the bus, on the job, on the street, in the bed. Reading, one finds the world has been forgotten. And in the same moment the world has forgotten one." --Tom Clark

SECOND STORY BOOKS publishes works that navigate a relationship between narrative and lyric, interrogating implications of time, place, and subjectivity.

Send check payable to MARY BURGER, $5.00 for each book ordered, to:
Mary Burger, Editor
Second Story Books
85 Henry St. #5
San Francisco CA 94114

or contact SMALL PRESS DISTRIBUTION:
http://www.spdbooks.org, tel. [redacted]

↑ Index

14. Chris Stroffolino
Re: Will Alexander
Fri 29 Oct 1999

"Human Nerve Domain..." is published by Dave Baratier's Pavement Saw Press, (which also published my first full-length book a few years back) PO Box 6291, Columbus, OHIO. 43206.....It's $12....

c
On Thu, 28 Oct 1999, Pritchett,Patrick @Silverplume wrote:

> I'd appreciate it if someone could tell me who has published Will Alexander's latest books,
> _Above the Human Nerve Domain_ and _Stratospheric Canticles_, as I think it's called.
>
> Plase backchannel -- thanks.
>
> Patrick Pritchett
> [redacted]

↑ Index

15. Chris Stroffolino

to post or not to post....

Fri 29 Oct 1999

Character X says that Character Q has been driven off the list by Character J...

Someone else says that there are 7 basic plots

I've heard this before. I've heard many "things."

Someone else says "How fragile we are..."

Then Q comes back & says something like it's okay to write death to death and quoting my "self" (Stealer's Wheel, pg. 25) say:

... To sqaunder doubt on the mundane
So the free meet the free in the free
While the urge to lose count gets its 15 minutes
And someone surely has my number
And can see through the soliloquys...

And then try to take responsibility for my absence from the discussion for the presence of absence often conjured by writing and then be nonetheless "petty" in the sequel remembering the earlier incidents of k... not only leaving the list

but dragging the list down with it (him) during the darkest days of 98/99 and then there's the case of the to be published roof book (edited by the very same K...)

of the circa 94-96 era of the list, a book which AT ITS BEST may turn people to the real discussion dynamics that existed on this list at the time, but which AT ITS WORST distorts the power dynamics involved in editing, and runs the risk of SITTING IN for the list, especially for those, like myself, who do not like to "curl up" with a computer as much as they do with a book...

(i do not say this in malice....)

but in hopes that maybe this too will generate further discussion (even if confined to "secret history" status, though one may 'bank' on foucault's theory of power, as they say) and "alan we love you get up..."

et c.

↑ Index

16. Catherine Daly
Re: Business, class, access OR Piggly Wiggly?
Fri 29 Oct 1999

The idea of deliberate networking, especially among women or engineers or other non-participants in old boy networks, like that of posting things like RFPs or calls for papers on the web, is to make the availability of opportunities more democratic. They are hardly democratic, but at least closer to this ideal, if anyone with wherewithal can go to a convention and meet some people and get a job / get published / become engaged in an ongoing discussion.

What is wherewithal? What are "aspirations", as the desire to participate in the dominant culture from a position of relative power, or at least increased status, is often called? How is this related to the peculiar will to power that some have about getting other people to read their poems, schmooze, etc.? How does it separate those with it from those without it? How does it separate their poems?

How does having Marjorie Perloff's phone number and the wherewithal to dial her up to invite her out for sandwiches separate one from ... well, (for me) the other carhops at the root beer stand, but what did I have in common with them, either? Why would Perloff care if I called, especially as I'm not "known" as a "poet" or "critic" (by dint of... publication) and have nothing she wants, since she has no reason to give me anything I want. If I really think about it, maybe I could say, "hi, I ... saw you at PageMothers and the Jerome Rothenburg reading, but couldn't squeeze through the fawning crowd... just wanted to say hi, I've read all your work on your web site and appreciate your efforts." (At the root beer stand we cut up old plastic condiment jars and printed our names on them to leave on the trays, so we could tell whose tips, love notes, etc. were whose.)

If I had this wherewithal, or perhaps if I weren't using mine for other things, like separating myself from the other former carhops, perhaps everything would be different. I am idealizing the network as much as others idealize away what we're calling the "business" of poetry. I know no one meant to idealize the other former car hops. Surely they must be continually pondering who they are, what they are?

To keep this on topic for the list: I notice a post for the Zinc Bar readings, which I recommend. I went to the Zinc Bar several weeks ago and heard Janet Bowden and Chris Stroffolino. Just the ability to breeze into town and hear a reading of this quality was fantastic. Janet read well, and Chris worked the crowd is his own inimitable style, which I found welcoming. The venue is fun, and even the bartender is translating Holderlein as he chops cases and cases of limes and mint for some exotic Brazilian drink which is apparently available hours after the reading ends, when the first of three samba shows begins. The bar is in the basement on Houston in what used to be called a "blind pig". The readings are in the way back (with Moorish decor, for some obscure reason) and they, alas, do not start at 6:37.

Anyone go to the Kenward Elmslie (sp?) reading at Beyond Baroque last night? I had to miss it and really regret that.

I am teaching a free workshop in the Pasadena Public Library tomorrow. We'll be talking and writing about masks and surrealism.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

17. Thomas Bell
Re: various stuff
Fri 29 Oct 1999

---

well spoken alan. i think your definition broadens "poetics" in interesting ways that might well broaden a definition of poetry that would include all poetry, even the visual poetry Bob earlier fet was neglected on this list.

jeep posting

tom bell

Alan Sondheim wrote:
>
>
> "I think of poetics as looking at relationships among forms, phenomenolo-> gies, literatures, in relation to writing/ inscription on one hand, and > the body on the other. One might include the earth as well, and the foun> dation of the earth or the articulation of logics and structures beneath > the surface of the earth. In other words, what happens when a mouth > speaks, when words resonate, when empathy and not equivalence is primary?

> This is a far cry from the politics of poetics,
--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

18. kathylou

Responses to Ellis

Fri 29 Oct 1999

From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Date: Fri, 29 Oct 1999 18:08:33 +0000

Ellis:
Does it probably exclude the person(s) who remain back home (no longer home to some) at the rinky dink roller rink of the repetitious yet possibly common life of those who work the buy-and-sell scheme to ends at considerable variance from your (and each our) own?

KL:
Of course it can and does exclude "the person(s) who remain back home." That is much of my point. How are these people excluded? Through lack of access to the Internet, educational opportunities, travel opportunities, money, money, money, cultural capital, ability to buy books, lack of wide distribution (for many reasons) of most poetry books, etc.

Here's a specific example of access which is troubling. The editors of HOW2 are planning a launch party in San Francisco at which they want participants in the class and poetics forum to appear in a panel discussion. This is a wonderful idea which I support, but because HOW2 does not have money to pay for people to come, participation is limited to those who can afford to travel to SF, or who live locally. This is very difficult because several of those who participated in the forum were writing in part of their own poor or working class situations and how this affected or related to their writing and poetics in general. That those people -- those who are often the least heard -- probably won't be able to participate is very troubling indeed.

Ellis: The Fix, let's call it - is this "confessional" mode really anything other than a way of side-stepping issues that are perpetually brought up by a whole class of previous side-steppers?

KL: What exactly am I supposed to be "side-stepping"? And just who are these "whole class of previous side-steppers"? Also curious that you seem to be confidant in making vast assumptions about my social and class positions, and life experiences.

Ellis:
Since it's a pretty low-wattage elevation, I can't help but wonder what it effects viz. the class issues you're trying to introduce, especially in terms of access; you're speaking of access to just what, exactly? If you're speaking of participatory opportunities, and the apparent lack of these among the less-privileged classes, then what is it you hope to accomplish, either for yourself, or for those you seem to be suggesting you've partly left behind, by hoisting yourself from what seems one rinky dink situation to another whose difference is mostly in the issues of access and priviledge you are now wont to descry? Are you now some sort of "spokesperson" for those left sorting lettuce deep into the night?

KL:
Your sarcasm about "spokesperson(s)" is unwarranted. As to what I am trying to access, by participating in this list you have already affirmed that access to discussion, events, and publications related to poetry and poetics have some value. They certainly have value to me personally. Your comments seem to imply that my "hoisting" myself into a position where I can participate in this discussion is somehow suspect. What is your point?

Ellis:
While I can respect wanting to "lay things bare" in this situation, I don't believe that your laying claim to an understanding of the class structure of literary production as you've presented it - ie., excusing yourself without having even posed, let alone attempted to make answer to, some very tough questions regarding your own position along the lay lines of what looks to be a pretty unmapped and for now, over-simple field of metaphor - goes far enough.

KL:
Before making accusations as to what I have or haven't answered or asked, I would respectfully request that you at least have some familiarity with the work that I have done and am doing. If you want to have a discussion based upon actual knowledge of "my position" I would be happy to do so. In posting to this list I want to raise questions and participate in a conversation (that started by Jill Stengel). Dismissing me based upon a set of assumptions about me personally is far too easy. Great way to shut down any further inquiries into class issues and poetics. Happens all the time.

Kathy Lou Schultz

↑ Index

19. Joe Amato
think i'll follow alan's lead here...
Fri 29 Oct 1999

---

dr lg 4.30.99: kss rgrdng "rdncks"

32:0.9.51 Rcvd: ">thnks fr ths thrd. wndr whthr thr s sm mddl grnd w \r\n"
32:0.9.52 Rcvd: ">cld lct hr. n th n hnd, cn rlt t -- ws t dny ?? --\r\n"
32:0.9.52 Rcvd: ">srry -- dny's frstrtn wth rrl cmmnts, whch r * ftn* --\r\n"
32:0.9.53 Rcvd: ">cn't w sy ths? -- qt cnsrvtv nd rsstnt t scl chng.\r\n"
32:0.9.54 Rcvd: "> s wht wmn whs fmly hls frm th pnnsylvn hlls (knwn t\r\n" 32:0.9.54 Rcvd: "> nsdrs s "pnnsyltcky"), vstd fr nmbr f rltvs n \r\n"
32:0.9.55 Rcvd: ">trlrs. s ndy's cstmrs r dbtlss rltd t my rltvs, wh ,\r\n"
32:0.9.55 Rcvd: ">by th wy, hv bn ftlly thrtnd nd lntd by my dctn nd\r\n"
32:0.9.56 Rcvd: ">pltcl cmmtmnt. t wld b nc f w cld fnd wy t tl" 32:0.10.7 Rcvd: "k\r\n" 32:0.10.8 Rcvd: ">tgthr bt ths lntns, nd bt th clss-spcfc dvd \r\n" 32:0.10.9 Rcvd: ">btwn "twn nd cntry" whch s tslf s ld s th hlls (r s t\r\n" 32:0.10.9 Rcvd: ">sms sm thnksgvngs...). s whl pprctd mly tth's\r\n"
32:0.10.10 Rcvd: "> bjctn -- bvsly, nt ll s "hcks" r cmpltly iggnerint -- hr\r\n"
32:0.10.10 Rcvd: ">tn ws s scldng s t ptntlly slnc rl cnvrstn bt\r\n"

32:0.10.11 Rcvd: ">hw bkstr , cllg , wmn's grp mght brdg ths dvds,\r\n" 32:0.10.12 Rcvd: ">whch d xst nd shld nt b ignored.\r\n" 32:0.10.12 Rcvd: ">\r\n" 32:0.10.13 Rcvd: ">sm f ths * s* bt th dsstrs pblshng ndstry (bt whch \r\n" 32:0.10.13 Rcvd: ">hv wrttn fr _ llns bk pblshrs_); nd sm f ths s bt\r\n" 32:0.10.14 Rcvd: "> dctnl nstttns, whch r ftn "bttr" (r s w ssm) n\r\n" 32:0.10.15 Rcvd: ">cts. bt hw mch f ths s bt pvrty? r w tlkng bt tht\r\n" 32:0.10.15 Rcvd: "> spct? nwdys lv n th sth sd f chcg -- hw wll r \r\n" 32:0.10.16 Rcvd: "> ndpndnt bkstrs dng dwn hr ? d gt frstrtd t tms whn\r\n" 32:0.10.16 Rcvd: ">"pvrty" n ths cntry s dfnd s rcl, nd s lctd n\r\n" 32:0.10.17 Rcvd: ">"ghtts." " 32:0.10.22 Rcvd: ""wht trsh," r rrl, pvrty s lrgly ignored s scl\r\n" 32:0.10.23 Rcvd: ">prblm. wht cn w d t srfc th fct tht t * s* prblm, nd\r\n" 32:0.10.24 Rcvd: "> ddrss tht prblm, wtht bng nsltng?\r\n" 32:0.10.24 Rcvd: ">\r\n" 32:0.10.25 Rcvd: ">mny thnks\r\n"

↑ Index

20. Alan Sondheim

Re: poetry audience/s

Fri 29 Oct 1999

At least here in New York, a lot of people have free access now - it will take a while but cyberspace is becoming cheaper and cheaper and cheaper. And an old 486 computer with Windows 3.1 can access most of it. I just got a Mac Centris 650 at the Salvation Army for $39.99 with Adobe Photoshop, Illustrator, etc. in it. There were other machines as well.

It takes a lot more money to have cable these days.

Alan

Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

↑ Index

21. dan raphael

Regionalism isn't be-littling

Sat 30 Oct 1999

My comment on the followers of stafford being refered to as 'hillbilly chic' was not a slag on stafford, who i knew and respected greatly, nor on hillbillies, since i grew up near the pennsylvania/ west virginia border and have complex reactions to that term, many of them positive. quick reactions dont always come from the utterers intention . and somehow assumingt hat because i mention stafford im making any comparison between his wor k and mine (which wasn't mentioned at all, nor my personal aesthetics) in my post on local (oregon) poetics. i hope my coments cast no negative light on stafford; likewise id hope you'd take a little care before assuming negative intentions from others.

dan

Date: Thu, 28 Oct 1999 19:42:45 -0700
From: Billy Little <[redacted]> Subject: Re: regionalism

dan always have difficulty with poets who imagine they're advancing their work by slagging masters with a different poetics. Stafford's no hillbilly, he's an amerkan, he's a poet of soul, he may express sentiments but he's not sentimental and he connects with millions. maybe if you wrote one poem as good as the hundreds of stafford's that have touched me deeply, it might sound less like sour grapes. do the work, you don't make yourself look better by trying to make others look worse.

↑ Index

22. miekal and

bybye eyeye

Sat 30 Oct 1999

```
=  =  = =  =  ==  =  = =  =  = =  =  =
| | |   | | |  | | | |  | | |  |
```

First of Kin, _joy_bother_vacuum

Here's a jug of the best times.

Each season
waits for no man.

Bright pale far-reaching transcendent this scene comes thru the window.

Unable to say something no one's my own shadow.

Days and ambition thinking until dawn.

Depressed right thru impossible.

I find seldom can flower now.

Wild decay back where time goes by.

A noble simple old family all in one place.

```
=  =  = =  =  ==  =  = =  =  = =  =  =
| | |   | | |  | |  | |  | | |  |
```

The Sorrow Project, 1000s of notes lining the habitat hardship stirs

the village dogs bark rising beyond delight

lacking the hopeless prosperity

hugging with enthusiasm the sick idle breath filled with tears dampen the brilliance in deliberations still another drift songdragon

sounds of hidden mist

trap, trap, scatter water, deva-like amorous season forced to part dreams can't reach a perfect time seize the wind, see nothing

```
=  =  = =  =  ==  =  = =  =  = =  =  =
| | |   | | |  | |  | |  | | |  |
```

clairaudio critique

Development of our literature whose cobwebs over the stubble, vigorous grown lame people reveled in the album sentiments, the spectres lovely as fantasy, less felt, aversion for immortals.

Luke-warm Venus, pretty but stuffed-out strings to break whose ghosts controlled poetry.

Genuine lyric with no serious belief -- dissolving pictures overflowing, mocked, disgusted.
Expression of love the literature in glaring dissonances, street songs of self-consciousness (idle love and dream life) mocks an original, transporting the sphinx of poetry.

These songs indicate the era of dissolution has begun.

I think I was I'm tired I think I was I'm tired
I think I was I'm tired I think I was I'm tired

↑ Index

23. Alan Sondheim
ballet for foofwa d'imobilite
Sat 30 Oct 1999

(performances the next two nights as well at the Swiss Institute) ballet

"some might comment 'what fun!' - disregarding the years of toil attached to these delightful ppowers. some might answer with a sigh: 'that would bbe a dream,' and here, indeed, we have the more realistic apppproach of the two. the secret of the realisation of the dream is that it must bbbe a vision which can also bbbe pperceived bbby an audience."

i am wearing the grown-ups' bodice with eight panels on the basque, oh so pretty pretty, my young breasts do swell, i do not wear the babies' bodice with two panels on the basque, oh so lovely ballet i will look?

sur les pointes d'avignon i will dance and fall off my tiny little bridge on my tiny little feet, my tape backing for beauty-ribbons and extra darning to hold my tiny little toes in place!

and i will rise up on my toes
and i will rise up on my toes

and the corded ribbon will hold my tiny feet in place, and the shoe may break where my sole touches the pure pure air as i balance on my extra extra darning!

and i will rise up on my toes
and i will rise up on my toes

and my tutu rises from my panties and breathes in and out of me, and the extra frills, the extra frills hold swollen from the basque, so very swollen

oh the seven inch frill, and the six inch frill, the frill of the lovely fifth, and the fourth inch frill, and oh! the frill of the two and a half inches, and comfort frill one of the one and a half!

and i have earned my tutu and my lower lips are shaved
and i have earned my tutu and my lower lips are shaved

rafique, i will glide effortlessly into your hands!
jonathan, you will raise me on your fingers!

and adam will lift me higher than anyone, my frills above him, his thin palm against my lower lips! and eve will caress me, my black lashes wet with tears that never show!

for this work looks effortless, but takes the greatest labor for this work looks easy, but believe you me it's hard

one day i will rise up
one day i will rise up

my toes will leave the ground
my toes will leave the ground

↑ Index

24. KENT JOHNSON
Poem #3
Sat 30 Oct 1999

At Least He Died Trying
(for John Lowther and the Atlanta Poetry Group)

How can "experimental" poetry undertake to do to the institutions of Poetry what Smithson undertook to do to the institutions of Art?
How does "experimental" poetry begin to move out of the studio?

↑ Index

25. Brent Cunningham
Re: SPD & the New Angle Press book
Sat 30 Oct 1999

The Garrett Caples Reader arrived at SPD this last Friday. It should now be available, this or any other moment.

Also wanted to remind the list that any book seen on the SPD site (which are the previous month's new titles) can be gotten for 20% off if you mention the code "WEB" during your order. Check back regularly--the site's titles change monthly, around the first week. The 20% offer probably won't last too many more months.

http://www.spdbooks.org

Brent Cunningham

At 05:27 PM 10/27/99 PDT, you wrote:
>We at Angle Press are pleased to Announce the publication of the first Real >Book by Garrett Caples of Oakland, California:
>
>The Garrett Caples Reader
>
>(includes Mr. Caples's last poems)
>
>98 pgs, perfectbound, $9 >marvelously designed by Neko Buildings, and >published in conjunction with John Yau's Black Square Editions
>
>This will be available through Small Press Distribution very soon (if not at >this very moment...then that other moment that keeps passing very >quickly....the one over there under the light).
>
>Thank you and good day
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>

↑ Index

26. Jacques Debrot
Re: Poetic Culture
Sat 30 Oct 1999

Mark Wallace writes:

>>I think CBeach may be making a pretty good career out of talking about language poetry--but note the extent to which he does this by arguing that one of the strengths of language poetry is that, vis a vis poetics, it JUSTIFIES itself to contempoary academic critical paradigms. In short he's not arguing FROM the position of the poetry itself, but from the position of an institutional critic who allows the relevance of language poetry only to the extent that it fits his critical discourse. It's the CRITICISM that's dominant; poetry conforms or not (at its peril).<<

I would agree that, in Beach's account (at least in that much of it I've read to this point), there is a devaluation of "poetic knowledge" -- an epistemology, in other words, that would somehow exist outside of contemporary critical paradigms. The difficulty, of course, is how to discuss poetic knowledge without reifying it.

Beach, however, is correct, I think, in pointing to the inadequacy of the attempts so far to represent the project of experimental writing in the aftermath of Language poetry. But it is precisely because poetry is a socially contingent discourse that the Language project needs to be re-evauated in the light of changing material & economic circumstances & will be seen, in some contexts, to have become irrelevant as a response to or a critique of present day social conditions.

Let me limit my remarks to just one example (though are others such as D. N. Rodwick's contention that "the era of signs is rapidly fading" and that we "have already entered the age of the figural"):

As I've started to do (incompletely & inadequately) in a recent article in ARSHILE, I am interested in articulating the problem of registering & mediating the body within artistic production--particularly as this was addressed by the New York Poets and by the Cage, Johns, Rauschenberg circle. Language Poetry, interestingly enough, begins as a reaction against the emphasis the New Americans had placed on the physical body in relation to the poetic line and moves instead, of course, toward a self-reflexive preoccupation with the mediation of inner experience by language. Watten explains this move away from the body as a response to the Vietnam conflict, "the era of napalm," etc. But the Language Poets' critique is aimed, not at the most "advanced" considerations of the body, but at Olson, who improperly essentialized the body as the ground & meaning of his work. Cage & the others are, by contrast, concerned with questions, anxieties, & fantasies concerning the body that are significantly different from Olson's (& I would argue interesting relevant in the current context (questions concerning gender identification, etc.) & never adequately "followed up"). Beach's dismissal (in his "Conclusion") of the erotic as it manifests itself in post language exp writing (as opposed to his validation of the "multicultural") only perpetuates the Language Poets's suppresion of the physical body in their work (the body is an obstacle to be overcome) and the problems the body "raises (arouses)" [Helen Molesworth].

Of course this suppression was only incomplete--Hannah Weiner, & Leslie Scalapino, for example, seem to me to be important exceptions. Beach's representation of Language poetry does not begin to address the contradictoriness of the Language project. But nor does the post-LangPo critical articulation of Language--even when in practice new writing may perhaps be even now taking up & extending LangPos largely supressed or misunderstood "marginal" aspects.

--jacques

↑ Index

27. Lowther, John

giveaway time

Sat 30 Oct 1999

{ p o e t i x }

i got some goodies to send to folks i'll be mailing to the 1st 10 womens and mens who send me their postal addresses and yes, anywhere in the world is fine

[redacted]

↑ Index

28. David Baratier

Re: Business, class, access

Sat 30 Oct 1999

Who says poetry magazines and presses are money losing ventures? Without intelligent planning, in terms of a regular business, I suppose they might be.

As for running a magazine as an aspect of "class structure" this editor started out on unemployment and used the wages to publish books and magazines. There are many publishers outside & on this list who do not use the perpetual victim stance or "have not" status you are attributing to the lower classes. I would like the dope on how I can use my editorship to get ahead, though. Also interested in a clarification or quantification of ways this manifests beyond talking with and meeting some fine writers.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

29. Jerrold Shiroma
Small Press Publications List Deadline
Sat 30 Oct 1999

The deadline for this week's Small Press Publications List is this Friday. All publishers who wish to have their publications listed please send all information to [redacted]. Include titles, authors, prices, contact info, web address (if applicable), etc.

↑ Index

30. Alan Sondheim
New Observations #123
Sat 30 Oct 1999

(This is a good magazine; I edited #120 on Cultures of Cyberspace - Alan)

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: October 30, 1999

New Observations Magazine
611 Broadway #701 New York, New York 10012
[redacted], [redacted]
http//www.newobservations.org

New Observations is pleased to announce the publication of incarceration Guest Edited by Gene Kraig. Fall 1999, issue #123, $6.00

INCARCERATION: As Gene Kraig says in her introduction, "The artists assembled here speak of confinement. Imprisonment. Art of a most stark reality facing two million incarcerated American sons, daughters, husbands, wives. … We need it all to enlighten. Words and images: abstract, conceptual, representative; the refined and the unrefined. And maybe then we will be able to bring forth the picture of imprisonment today as one of the largest growth industries in America, 1999. In this issue, I have been honored to have contributors who have the capacity to transcend the saturated mediaized images of incarceration to impact us with their depictions of the meaning of confinement: labeling, impenetrable loss, hopelessness, demons, vulnerability, isolation, dehumanization, the wail of hope, the begging for compassion."

Contributors to the issue: Cynthia Manning Crosby, Joan Damankos, Mary DeWitt, Todd Gilens, Jane Gillooly, Simon Grennan, Arthur Keigney, Phyllis Kornfeld, Michael Reddick, Troy Richards, Nina Rosenblum, Christopher Sperandio, Richard Torchia, Peter Waite, David Wojnarowicz

Founded in 1981, New Observations, has published the art and writing of international artists on topics that reach beyond the parameters of the NY art scene. New Observations has a unique mandate: to create a quarterly publication, guest-edited by creative people from fields as diverse as visual art, music, literature and craft. Each issue is developed from proposals submitted to the magazine . The guest editors then assemble texts and images to illuminate their theme.

Available now at at newsstands and art bookstores, The Dia Foundation/Printed Matter Bookstore or by subscription by contacting our office. Check the back cover for a selection of back issues.

New Observations is a non-profit, contemporary arts journal written, edited and published by the arts community. Each issue has a guest editor and a pertinent topic.

1 year/4 issues/$22.00 (USA)
2 years/8 issues/$38.00 (USA)
Overseas add $12.00 per year for postage.

We are developing our e-mail list. Please let us know if you want to be removed from our list or if you receive multiple messages.

Contact: Claire McConaughy
New Observations Magazine

↑ Index

31. david bromige
p'y audiences/// signing off pro tem
Sun 31 Oct 1999

True, Miekal---and you don't need to specify me as the recipient, as several persons ahead of me on this thread were also expressing concern about the loss of audience or imbalance of same.....I would add to your response just this, those 9,000 hits on your website : do you think they will translate into as much in grants/readings/st teaching gigs, as Dobyns' 9,000 books sold? If not, what can be done to rectify this, etc, given that one cares, etc.

David

_____Listmates:

Will be traveling for a couple weeks, so am unsubbing pro tem. Keep Up Good Work, for which Thanks.

Reading Sked

Nov 3 St Marks Poetry Project, NYC, Wed at 7:30 p.m, w/ Elizabeth Fodaski.

Nov 9 Bath Spa University, U.K. Tues in eve. W/ Tony Lopez.

Nov. 10 Plymouth Univ., at Exmouth, U.K. Wed at noon.

Nov. 16 Royal Holloway & Bedford New College, Egham, U.K. Tues at noon.

Nov. 16 Subvoicive, London (above The 3 Cups, Holborn). Tues eve, w/ Michael Heller.

If you are within range, please come. David

↑ Index

32. pete spence

Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)

Sun 31 Oct 1999

> This is puzzling and quite, quite bizarre:
>
> my post was merely relating to how others (with whom i guess you align yourself, right?) were displaying all their massive superiority "over" D. Raphael..... as i've said numerous time, there is much that is strong and interesting in Sondheim's work; was gonna back-chan. this, but on 2nd thought it probably should go on the list....
>
> Do you actually read the things you respond to??
>
> mp
>
> On Mon, 25 Oct 1999, pete spence wrote:

> >
> > ,,seems to me at least sondheim is active is MAKING things and has found
> >a > > venue to show and tell///pete spence
> >

dear mp i'm finding your responder weerd!! i'm reasonable enough friends with dan and don't know sonny/dime at all but all i was saying is sonny/dime seems to do a lot of work /shows it as it happens whyche seems a good evaluation of e-mail,,to make things /writing/art is a political act all i saying was keep making is all pete spence

but is that me you are asking if i read the things i respond too????? weerd question//pete

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

33. pete spence
Re: bye
Sun 31 Oct 1999

>
>it's a sad day when alan s feels he needs to drop off the list...
md totally silly day!!! on the list for thick and thin of it can be hard but stick in there alan//pete

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

34. dbkk
Tina Darragh & P. Inman
Sun 31 Oct 1999

If you're in the Bay Area this Friday night (November 5), we're holding a post-reading reception for Tina Darragh and Peter Inman. They'll be reading for Small Press Traffic at 7:30 and afterwards folks are invited over to our apartment for refreshments and chat.

If you're interested, back-channel for details--or ask us about it at the reading.

Kevin K. and Dodie B.

↑ Index

35. Lowther, John of late, apologia
Mon 1 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

dear all

the list has been, in places lately unpleasant ----- i'm not about to rehash it suffice to say that for whatever part i have played or have been presumed to play in it (the latter undoubtedly my fault as well)

i apologize
sincerely
)ohn

↑ Index

36. Daniel Kane
David Mura on WriteNet
Mon 1 Nov 1999

This month on WriteNet, poet David Mura discusses his poem "An Argument: On 1942," and talks about poetry in relationship to his identity as a Japanese-American. To view the page, go to

http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_dmura.html

↑ Index

37. David Knoebel
Announcement: More Joy
Mon 1 Nov 1999

Drive Thru Poetry Installation

http://home.ptd.net/~clkpoet/morejoy/morejoy.html

--
David Knoebel
http://www.clickpoetry.com

↑ Index

38. Poetics List Administration
ach... / Dorow
Mon 1 Nov 1999

This came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Thomas Dorow" <[redacted]>
Date: 10/30/99, 4:32 AM +0200

So I was standing at the bus station two days ago thinking about things being as they were, and I this line from Rafael Alberti pops to my mind: "Wenn meine Stimme an Land stirbt, / bringt sie hinunter ans Meer" or rather (but that didn´t pop to my mind) "Si mi voz muriera en tierra,/ llevada al nivel del mar" which is something like "If (or when) my voice dies on the land/ take her down to the sea" and then i thought of this poem in its translation, this

"Debajo del chopo, amante, debajo del chopo, no.

Al pie del álamo, sí,
del álamo blanco y verde

Hoja blanca tú, hoja verde yo."

And then I thought how good it was that there were these kinds of poems that come to mind just when you needed them or didn´t, or those sentences or lines even. And today I read that Rafael Alberti has died.

I never thought of him as being still alive. He was 96, but alive. His book "Marinero en tierra" (1924?) is ...o well. If it hadn´t been for that one. There are poetics and there are poems I read and fall in love with and there are some loves that will fail if this is taken for that. Some will not. O well. It was strange to think of him as having been alive and not being alive anymore at the same time.

Also I don´t want Alan to leave the list. Sad. Tom.

↑ Index

39. Poetics List Administration

From a small Chicano press in San Diego / Calaca Press

Mon 1 Nov 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Calaca Press" <[redacted]>
Date: 10/30/99, 12:58 PM -0700

Poetics-

A big what's up? to all of the people working at Poetics. I received info on the poetics list from another small press here in SD called Meow Press. He said I should check out the poetics list, so here I am.

I am the owner (along with my wife) of a small independent Chicano press based in San Diego, California called Calaca Press. We produce bilingual literature and Spoken Word CDs. We currently have 3 titles under our belt: One book called Bus Stops and Other Poems by Manuel J. Velez and two CDs, Raza Spoken Here Volume 1 (which is a compilation Spoken Word CD by various Chicano poets from SD, LA and the SF Bay area) and Chorizo Tonguefire by a bilingual poetry collective called the Taco Shop Poets. We currently have a few projects in the works including a Spoken Word CD collaboration by two Chicana poets (Elba Rosario Sanchez and Olga Angelina Garcia Echeverria); A bilingual literary journal called La Calaca Review; Volume 2 of Raza Spoken Here; and two books to be published in late July/early August .

We distribute our stuff mainly through word of mouth, the internet and the few bookshows that we attend. Therefore, we are always looking for new ways to let people know about our titles. Do you think people on the poetics list would be interested in receiving info on Calaca Press books and Spoken Word CDs? If so please subscribe us.

Thank you for your time,

Brent Beltran
Calaca Press

For more info on us please visit our website:

http://members.home.net/calacapress

↑ Index

40. Poetics List Administration

Poetry reading!! / Fouhy

Mon 1 Nov 1999

---

had to reformat this message etc. Chris

--

From: George Fouhy <[redacted]>
Date: Sun, 31 Oct 1999 01:40:51 -0500

Northern Westchester Center for the Arts
Creative Arts cafe Poetry Series
272 No. Bedford Road
Mt. Kisco, NY 10549
Contact: Cindy Beer-Fouhy [redacted]
Fax # [redacted]

For immediate Release:
Poet Nicholas Johnson
Read at Creative Arts Café Poetry Series

Mt. Kisco, NY: The Creative Arts Cafe at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts will feature poet Nicholas Johnson on Monday, November 1, at 7:30 PM. A reception and open mike will follow.

Nicholas Johnson lives and writes in Brooklyn, New York. He was born in Hartford, CT and educated at Brooklyn College (MFA), The Catholic University of America (ABD), and the University of Connecticut (BA). In addition to work in medical advertising, he has taught at the College of New Rochelle. His publications include: American Letters & Commentary, Pivot, The Ledge, The Journal, Epoch, the 1997 Anthology of Magazine Verse & Yearbook of American Poetry, The Second Word Thursday Anthology, Rattapallax, and has work forthcoming in Poetry Wales. He was a MacDowell Colony Fellow, and currently teaches creative writing at The Payne Whitney Clinic and the Lighthouse in New York.

The Northern Westchester Center for the Arts is located at 272 No. Bedford Road in Mt. Kisco, NY 10549. There Suggested Donation is $7.00, $5.00 for students and seniors. Please call [redacted] for directions and information.

↑ Index

41. Poetics List Administration

Boxkite-Naylor / Smith

Mon 1 Nov 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: [redacted]
Date: 11/1/99, 3:49 PM +0000

Could someone tell me how to get in touch w/ the magazine, Boxkite? I'm trying to get a copy of Paul Naylor's piece on _Whatsaid Serif_.

thanks,
charles

↑ Index

42. Poetics List Administration

list stats

Mon 1 Nov 1999

```
*  Country              Subscribers
*  -------            -----------
*  Australia                  13
*  Belgium                     2
*  Canada                     43
*  Finland                     1
*  Germany                      3
*  Great Britain                21
*  India                     1
*  Ireland                     5
*  Italy                     1
```

* Japan 5
* Netherlands 1
* New Zealand 14
* Poland 1
* Singapore 1
* Spain 2
* Sweden 4
* Switzerland 2
* Thailand 1
* USA 675
* Yugoslavia 1
* ??? 1

* Total number of users subscribed to the list: 799
* Total number of countries represented: 21

↑ Index

43. Poetry Project
new on the web site
Mon 1 Nov 1999

Pleased to announce that the November issue of Poets & Poems is now up on the Poetry Project web site at http://www.poetryproject.com/poets.html

with new work by

Susan Gevirtz
Don Hymans
Pattie McCarthy
Lytle Shaw
Roberto Tejada

For back issues of Poets & Poems, please visit http://www.poetryproject.com/prevpoet.html

Other new features on the web site:

some reprints from back back back issues of the Newsletter (we're talking 70s and 80s!)
including:

Bernadette Mayer's review of Clark Coolidge's MINE: The One that Enters the Stories, circa 1983, http://www.poetryproject.com/mayerrev.html

&

Vicki Hudspith's interview with Lyn Hejinian, circa 1970, http://www.poetryproject.com/hudspith.html

and reprinted from The World

Jaime Manrique's essay, Ashes and Embers: Presence of Latin Poetry in New York Cit

and a new & improved monthly calendar with a few photographs of readers and some of their poems (including those of David Bromige and Roberto Tejada) at http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.html.

Soon forthcoming: Author Index!

Please
Enjoy

* If you would like to be removed from this e-mail list, please respond with "remove me please" and we will be sure to remove you. ****

↑ Index

44. Stephen Ellis
Re: Boxkite-Naylor / Smith
Mon 1 Nov 1999

Boxkite
c/o The Poetics Foundation Inc.
GPO Box 1500
Sydney, N.S.W.
2001 AUSTRALIA

[redacted]

> From: Poetics List Administration <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Boxkite-Naylor / Smith
> Date: Mon, 1 Nov 1999 16:14:13 -0500
>
> This message came to the administrative account. Chris
>
> --
>
> From: [redacted]
> Date: 11/1/99, 3:49 PM +0000
>
> Could someone tell me how to get in touch w/ the magazine, Boxkite? I'm trying to get a copy of Paul Naylor's piece on _Whatsaid Serif_.

> thanks,
> charles

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

45. jocelyn saidenberg

Tina Darragh and P. Inman Reading at Small Press Traffic

Mon 1 Nov 1999

Reading at Small Press Traffic

Friday, November 5, 7:30 p.m.
Tina Darragh
P. Inman

The last time these two read at Small Press Traffic was mmm, must have been ten years ago, and it was one of the best reading ever given (in the opinions of those who were there) and so it is with great excitement that we announce the return of these two extraordinary poets from the Washington DC area. Tina Darragh's books include on the corner to off the corner (Sun & Moon, 1981), Striking Resemblance (Burning Deck, 1989), a(gain)2st the odds (Potes and Poets, 1989), and adv. fans - the 1968 series (Leave Books, 1993). Her work has been included in several anthologies, among them In the American Tree (National Poetry Foundation, 1986), "Language" Poetries (New Directions, 1987), out of everywhere: linguistically innovative poetry by women in North America & the UK (Reality Street Editions, 1996), and Moving Borders: Three Decades of Innovative Writing by Women (Talisman, 1998). Selections from her current project, the dream rim instructions, have been published in Chain and Primary Writing, and featured in Etruscan Reader 8 (Etruscan Books, 1998). Darragh is employed as a reference librarian at the National Reference Center for Bioethics Literature at Georgetown University. P. Inman's latest book is at. least. (Krupskaya). Other books have included Vel (O Books), Criss Cross and Red Shift (Roof), Think of One (Potes & Poets), Ocker (Tuumba) and Uneven Develop,emt (Jimmy's House of Knowledge). He has also appeared in several anthologies, the most recent of which was From the Other Side of the Century (Sun & Moon). A dues-paying member of the Labor Party, he has been involved in local union activities since 1981. He is currently Vice President of AFSCME Local 2910.

New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center

766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]

www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

46. Aviva V. Gabriel

Re: In Re Alan Sondheim

Mon 1 Nov 1999

This message from Phil about sums up my own sentiments about Sondheim's postings. I find it senseless to squeeze his work out, and the newly-created absence of the opportunity to check in with his work when one has the time is a regretful turn of events. _____

Aviva Vogel Gabriel Poetangles & Motherdrum Studios
P.O. Box 1085
Norwich, VT 05055-1085

_____
Kind of empty in the way it sees everything, the earth gets to its feet and salutes the sky.
--John Ashbery, from "For John Clare"
From: Philip Nikolayev <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, October 28, 1999 12:29 AM
Subject: In Re Alan Sondheim

> Dear Alan Sondheim and all,
>
> Being swamped with work, I have been only skimming this list of late, and > very selectively. I know there have been some criticisms of Alan's > postings, but didn't realize the thing had gotten so acute. I don't have a > very clear idea of the nature of the debate (I'd be grateful if someone > gave me a brief summary), but I'm sorry to hear that it has caused some > unpleasantness. I have read Alan's book, _Reality Disorder_, with much > interest, and would very much like him to keep posting here. Alan, have you > been asked to stop posting? That's ridiculous! And where I can I read your > stuff on the poetics of mathematics?

>
> Don't give up and don't despair! This, too, will pass.
>
> Yours,
>
> Philip Nikolayev
>

↑ Index

47. pete spence
Re: poetry audience/s
Mon 1 Nov 1999

>
>(who wonders how much it costs to use internet access at a local >library. out here the towns of 300 people have free internet access in >their libraries, its everywhere out here in the middle of this nowhere.
Miekal.

being a poorly lad thats how i do it,,hour a day at my local library gets me away from the household chores etc etc//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

48. pete spence
Re: Tina Darragh & P. Inman
Mon 1 Nov 1999

> If you're in the Bay Area this Friday night (November 5), we're holding a post-reading reception for Tina Darragh and Peter Inman. They'll be reading for Small Press Traffic at 7:30 and afterwards folks are invited over to our apartment for refreshments and chat.
>
> If you're interested, back-channel for details--or ask us about it at the reading.
>
> Kevin K. and Dodie B.

two bods i've always liked, wish i could get the busfare to the airport!!! maybe i'll pump up the waterwings//pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

49. david bromige
Regionalism; Provincialism
Mon 1 Nov 1999

No, Regionalism neednt be belittling, but Provincialism is a pain in the butt. And it does appear that, the further one gets from the active centers, the more sunday painters one encounters. And by sunday painters I mean poets who write in the style of former eras __w/o knowing thats what they're doing___ .

And since they dont know what theyre doing, they commonly do it badly. And you hear it and you heard it already. Actually, thats the way _I_ feel abt Stafford. I do not buy that he "thought hard for all of us." He certainly didnt think hard for me.

So, one person's application of the term "provincial" may not overlap with another's. Nor wd I maintain that one doesnt find provincialism in the core of the great centers of innovative art.

This is likely just a "private grumble." Fear of Hickism, I expect---that I'll become one (or have already) here betwixt the boonies and the shruburbs.

And now, having picked up a handful of what I nearly stepped in, to show you, I must be going.

Back in 3 weeks. David

↑ Index

50. Tony Green
Re: internet costs
Mon 1 Nov 1999

---

re Miekal & Tom on costs -- I paid 2pounds sterling + 50 p for 1/2 hour in a public library in London in October, 1 pound +50 p for 1/4 hr in a cybercafe in London, & $39.95 NZ = about $20 US per month to run internet at home

Tony Green
From: miekal and <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>

Date: Tuesday, 2 November 1999 09:38
Subject: Re: poetry audience/s

> Tom,
>
> Poetry books
>
> are great
>
> but only
>
> inexpensive
>
> if you can
>
> afford access
>
> to it.
>
> I think yr
>
> assumptions
>
> are loaded
>
> and wrong.
>
> Miekal
>
> (who wonders how much it costs to use internet access at a local library. out here the towns of 300 people have free internet access in their libraries, its everywhere out here in the middle of this nowhere.

↑ Index

51. Michael Neff
(ELAN #3) Electronic Literary Arts Newsletter
Mon 1 Nov 1999

****
ELECTRONIC LITERARY ARTS NEWSLETTER, November, '99
****

Contents:

-Letter from the Editor
-First Annual Literary Arts Film Awards and Writing Competition
-Prairie Schooner Hops Aboard WDS

-ACLU & Friends Take Round One in Michigan
-Bigger, Badder, Barnes & Noble Buys Babbage
-Tiny and Fabulous, FC2 Perseveres
-Story to Cease; Paris Review Archives to Rest; Kenyon Review Turns 60
-Sarabande Dances to a Digital Tune
-House of Representatives Wants More Money for the Arts
-Frankfurt eBook Awards Established by Microsoft
-IndieWIRE Talks to Jane Campion and Atom Egoyan
-Around Towns: Conferences, Calls, etc. etc.

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Thank you to the many readers who sent news, advice, and tips in response to my last letter (or just because.) Special thanks to Lisa Albers for informing me of Story magazine's upcoming end, and to Cris Mazza for informing me of FC2's anniversary. Your editrix, fluctuating madly as she does between technophilia and ludditic reaction, continues to be inspired by the way lit.-lovers are using the web to create new kinds of literature, new kinds of libraries, and new kinds of access to the written word. Although she hates that plain 'ole reading is now classified as 'passive,' not part of the grand experiment that is interactivity. If anyone can explain this phenom. to me, that person will be my new best friend.

A note on ELAN policy: we do not review books. Please accept my profuse apologies if my last flip letter made you think otherwise. As always, however, please continue to send other news and subscribers our way.

Liana Scalettar
elan_editor@webdelsol

****

LITERARY ARTS FILM WRITING COMPETITION: TOWARDS A NEW OEUVRE

Whipped up by WDS, the Fiction- and Poetry-into-Film Contest has sprung into being. Submit your poetry or fiction between September 30, 1999, and January 31, 2000 and see if they're chosen to be turned into short films

by leading independent producers and filmmakers from New York University's famed film program. With a screening and awards ceremony scheduled for the National Arts Club in Manhattan, and webcast and DVD distribution of winning films, the contest promises to launch its participating writers and auteurs into multimedia heaven. Submission guidelines, contest details, and links can be found at Web Del Sol. <http://www.webdelsol.com/solhome.htm>

PRAIRIE SCHOONER HOPS ABOARD

Edited by Hilda Raz and based at the University of Nebraska, Prairie Schooner has long been a staple of the 'little magazine' world. And, at long last, the journal's website will be mirrored at Web del Sol. Check out some of the very best in contemporary fiction, poetry, and essay--fad-free, hype-free, inflated-rhetoric free (I promise.) New German Literature is the theme of PS's current issue, and you'll find in it a gold mine of younger German writers in translation. Perfect for reading in conjunction with your (re)discovery of Nobel Laureate Gunter Grass, no?

BOWLING GREEN JOINS CWP

Bowling Green State University has joined WDS's Creative Writing Program site. They've posted work by David Amadio and Melissa Fraterrigo, among many others, as well as a fine introduction to the program's journal, Mid-American Review. (http://www.webdelsol.com/CWP/BowlingGreen>

ACLU AND FRIENDS TAKE ROUND ONE IN MICHIGAN

A Michigan judge has issued a preliminary injunction against enforcement of an internet censorship law. The state law, which is being challenged by the ACLU, WDS, and others, would profoundly impact the ability of internet publishers to freely determine what to post on their sites. The recent ruling means that the law cannot be enforced for the duration of the lawsuit. For more information, see ELAN Numbers 1 and 2, as well as Web del Sol. Speaking of censorship, how about those Mets? I mean, how about that NYC Mayor who shall remain nameless?

BIGGER, BADDER, B & N BUYS BABBAGE'S

According to Publishers Weekly <http://www.publishersweekly.com>, Barnes and Nobles has agreed to buy Babbage's for $189 million in cash. The acquisition, which will add a video game and software chain giant to Len Riggio's bookstore empire, also has Barnes and Noble assuming $26 million in liabilities. The Texas company has just started selling its products online at www.gamestop.com, and also operates 495 Babbage's, Software Etc., and GameStop stores.

Publishers Weekly notes too that Borders.com is forging new partnerships in its efforts to compete with Amazon.com and Barnesandnoble.com. Among these partners are About.com, Sessions at West 54th, and Big Planet. In addition, faced with the expansion of both major competitors into capitalism tout court, Borders.com hopes to focus its efforts on "'the book lover.'"

FC2 CELEBRATES TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

According to ELAN reader Cris Mazza, FC2 joins Graywolf and Kelsey Street Press in celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary this year. Historically dedicated to giving writers editorial control, the press will issue an anniversary anthology this fall. Edited by Ronald Sukenick and Curtis White, "Into the Slipstream" will feature work by FC2 authors past and present.

STORY TO CEASE; PARIS REVIEW ARCHIVES TO REST; KENYON REVIEW TURNS 60

With its Winter issue, Story Magazine will cease publication, according to Writers Digest <http://www.writersdigest.com.> The digest quotes editor Lois Rosenthal explaining that, with the sale of Story's parent company, she and publisher Richard Rosenthal have become concerned about the journal's future. Revived ten years ago after a lengthy hiatus, Story helped launch the careers of new writers such as Junot Diaz, Nathan Englander, Chris Adrian, and Elizabeth Graver. All four appear in the autumn anniversary issue, along with Joyce Carol Oates, Rick Bass, Andrea Barrett, and others.

Poets and Writers <http://www.pw.org> notes that the Paris Review <http://www.parisreview.com> has sold its archives to the Morgan Pierpont Library in New York. Approximately 100 boxes of letters, photographs, interviews and books, which had been stored in the home of Paris Review editor George Plimpton, will become part of the library's twentieth-century holdings. The proceeds of the sale, estimated at $500,000, will help start a foundation that will allow the journal continue publication.

Congratulations to The Kenyon Review, which celebrated its sixtieth anniversary with an October 12 talk at the National Arts Club in New York. KR's website also has exciting news: look soon for an archive of posted issues, a full-length piece from the magazine's current issue, and a new section devoted to electronic literature. <http://www.kenyonreview.org>

SARABANDE DANCES TO A DIGITAL TUNE

Sarabande Books, based in Louisville, Kentucky, has launched an Internet-based program for undergraduate students and their professors. According to Poets and Writers, Go Write to the Source will include interactive readers' guides, suggestions fur further reading, and access to question-and-answer sessions with authors in chatrooms. Available titles include "Mulroney and Others," by Baron Wormser, "Dark Blonde," by Belle Waring, and "Garden of Exile," by Aleida Rodriguez. Learn more at <http://www.SarabandeBooks.org/sie>

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVE WANTS MORE MONEY FOR THE ARTS

Arts Wire's Current <http://www.artswire.org> notes that in an October 4 vote, the House passed a nonbinding resolution that supports increased funding for both the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) and the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH.) The resolution instructs Representatives of the joint conference committee on the FY00 Interior Appropiations agree to funding levels set by the Senate. These levels, which would add $5 million to the budgets of both federal agencies, would represent the first substantial increase in four years.

Bill to

FRANKFURT eBOOK AWARDS ESTABLISHED BY MICROSOFT

The Microsoft Corporation will fund $160,000 worth of awards for the online publishing industry, according to the New York Times.
<http://www.nytimes.com/library/books/101399ap-microsoft-award.html>
Announced at the Frankfurt Book Fair on October 13th, the Frankfurt eBook Awards will be given annually in seven categories, with the first awardees being chosen next year. The prizes are to include a $100,000 award for the best work originally published online.

INDIEWIRE TALKS TO CAMPION, EGOYAN

IndieWIRE's coverage of the just-closed New York Film Festival includes a piece on Jane Campion, who was at the NYFF with "Holy Smoke." Campion's recent efforts include an adaptation of "The Portrait of a Lady," by Henry
James. Also at the festival was Atom Egoyan, with "Felicia's Journey," based on William Trevor's novel. Egoyan's other foray into literary adaptation is
"The Sweet Hereafter," from the book by Russell Banks.
<http://www.indiewire.com>

AROUND TOWNS: CONFERENCES, CALLS, EXHIBITS

*Eyeshot.Net is up and running. Self-described as 'online litter for the ill and literate," the site includes The Poetry Depository, Earshot Music, cyber-editorials, and more.<http://www.eyeshot.net>

*ACM Hypertext 2000 Set for May 30th-June 3rd. Taking place in San Antonio,
Texas, this interdisciplinary conference, the eleventh annual, is called "Communities Centered Around Knowledge." Hypertext and hypermedia practitioners from a broad range of fields will gather for workshops, lectures, demos, mentoring, and more. The submission deadline for conference papers has been extended to October 19, 1999, as well. For more information:

<http://www.ht00.com>

*I know I keep talking about Philadelphia and I'm not stopping now: visit the Kelly Writers House, based at the University of Pennsylvania, for news of all things literary in the City of Brotherly Love.
<http://www.english.upenn.edu>

*NYPL Features Creeley Exhibit. In Company: Robert Creeley's Collaborations runs through January 15, 2000, in the Edna Barnes Salomon Room of the Humanities and Social Sciences Library. (Note to the less formal: this is the main branch at 42nd and 5th. The one with the lions in front.) Organized by the Castellani Art Museum of Niagara University, the show features Creeley's work with artists such as Francisco Clemente, Jim Dine, Marisol, and others. The exhibit will travel to North Carolina, Florida, California, and New Mexico after it closes in New York. <http://www.nypl.org>

****

Copyright, Web Del Sol, 1999

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

52. Betsy Andrews
Free Cuisinart
Mon 1 Nov 1999

Can anyone give me a website address for Free Cuisinart?

↑ Index

53. Jill Stengel
further "business" to attend to...
Mon 1 Nov 1999

---

it's time for that second sunday announcement again

this month is a special month, with 3 fabulous readers, so please note that=20 the actual reading part of the reading will begin at 2:15 sharp... (and, to avoid confusion, "sf" does mean san francisco, ca)

synapse: second sundays at blue bar

a reading with rachel levitsky, rose najia, and jo ann wasserman november 14, 2 p.m.

blue bar is at 501 broadway, at kearney, in sf enter thru black cat restaurant, same address

admission is $2
(and goes to the readers)

Rachel Levitsky is a poet and teacher from Brooklyn, New York, and is currently an artist-in-residence at Villa Montalvo in Silicon Valley. She is the author of four chapbooks, 2(1x1) Portraits (Baksun Books, 1998), The Adventures of Yaya and Grace (Potes &Poets, 1999) Cartographies of Error (Leroy, 1999), and, her newest, Dearly (a+bend press, 1999).

Rose Najia internationally teaches collaborative improvisation and trains psychotherapists to use the arts for healing and community-building. Her non-fiction book, Holy Fools: Presence and Play has been published in Japanese, Chinese, and Korean. Her poetry chapbook, Body Auguries (a+bend press, 1999), is currently available only in English.

Jo Ann Wasserman’s writing has appeared in journals including The World, Grand Street, Prosodia, and Blue Book. She worked for the Poetry Project at St. Mark’s Church for five years; and is now the managing editor of How2, an online journal of women’s innovative writing. Wasserman’s chapbooks are what counts as proof (Sugar Books, 1999), and we build mountains, new from a+bend press.

↑ Index

54. Tom Beckett
miekal and dobyns and etc.
Mon 1 Nov 1999

Electronically mediated language seems increasingly problematic to me. The instability of the digital page millitates against reflection. Databases break down privacy and become the building blocks of new commercial /governmental tyrannies . Give me a stack of books over a pile of floppys any day.

PS: library access to computers is still relatively limited in time and scope. Your original post spoke of computers as an alternative means of literary distribution. You're not typically gonna be able to run a webpage from a library terminal. And a lot of libraries won't let you do e-mail (unless say it is a college library and you have an account--are student or staff). That leaves a lot of folks out, Miekal. And the division between haves and have- nots is pretty much along class and racial lines. What a surprise.

TB

↑ Index

55. Jim Andrews

Claire Dinsmore and contributors to Cauldron & Net, this Sunday at Defib

Tue 2 Nov 1999

FROM WEBARTERY.COM.
DEFIB: LIVE ONLINE Web ARTIST INTERVIEW SURF SHOW 1ST & 3RD SUNDAYS, NOON PST (19:00 GMT)
http://webartery.com/defib
(Requires a Java-enabled browser)

CAULDRON & NET DISCUSSION: SUNDAY NOVEMBER 7, NOON PST (19:00 GMT) Participate in this live online chat show with Claire Dinsmore and the contributors to Cauldron & Net. Claire Dinsmore, whose site, Another Form of Intervention (http://www.StudioCleo.com/entrancehall.html), features her own sophisticated new media work, recently launched the first issue of Cauldron & Net (http://www.StudioCleo.com/cauldron), which features work by Ted Warnell, Todd Sanders, George Quasha, Peter Ganick, David Knoebel, Jennifer Ley, Lars Wickstrom, Reiner Strasser, Kohei Shimizu, Talan Memmott, Nathaniel Bobbitt, State Sanctioned Sedation, Thomas Bell, Cecil Touchon, Shawn Phillips, and Jim Andrews.

CLAIRE DINSMORE
Claire Dinsmore earned her M.F.A. from Cranbrook Academy of Art and her B.F.A. from Parsons School of Design/The New School for Social Research.

She has exhibited worldwide and has been published as an artist, critic, essayist and poet. Her work is in the permanent collections of the American Craft Museum, The Smithsonian, and The Montreal Museum of Art, as well as within numerous private collections. She is presently a web designer and president of Studio Cleo, Inc. where she works as a new media artist.

DEFIB Defib shows will be recorded and the transcript produced into a full-blown hypertext available at webartery.com. This turning of the live show into a different form after the fact will create a critical record/document that accompanies the project/works under discussion. Defib will roughly coincide with the launch of Web art projects by the artists of Webartery.com and others.

Upcoming shows include Bill Marsh and his new broadcasting project sunbrella.net (Sunday Nov 21, noon PST), and Miekal And and his LinguaMOO collaborative project plus other projects Miekal's collaborating in such as Alan Sondheim's project at Trace (Sunday Dec 5). See http://webartery.com/defib for detailed schedule and other info.

DEFIB:
http://webartery.com/defib
Produced by Dan Waber and Jim Andrews
A project of Webartery.com

↑ Index

56. Alan Sondheim

les noces (ballet text for foofwa d'imobilite, to be performed)

Tue 2 Nov 1999

/\

les noces

late at night. you have taken your tutu off, your slippers as well. i'm a long way from home. say something about the motel rooms, one-night stands. whiskey on the table, god it's as if you can't dance another step. what's holding me here.

(pauses) i'm a slave to alan, that's what you am. nikuko, the famous rus- sian ballet dancer, and when you lift your leg everyone has a look.

(alan) that's what we bargained for in st. petersburg. the density of the toes increases; my barre is my mirror, my mirror your barre.

(drinks) the bar over the sign negates it.

(developpes a la barre en croix)

(battements sur le cou-de-pied) lousy drink. the line is 'rise up' anyway. 'rise up to show them.' they saw everything all right.

(alan) that's what they're paying for. i could do a grand jete en tournant for all they care. as long as i get from one place to another. as long as i show them some leg.

(nikuko) the ambassador is coming. you can't be naked enough.

(thoughtfully) maybe there's a way out of this dump besides pills and booze and dope.

(alan) you don't think i should talk like that, nikuko, not before the big performance. it's not that. it's like this. i'll raise your leg, i'll wear perfume. just the kind he likes. you read it in comme des garcons.

(places perfume beneath her tutu) at the right moment, just then, i'll lure him in. this is your silver bullet. look out there, nothing but dust and tumbleweed. we can't even grow wheat, nothing. sheep would die. all we've got is ballet.

(alan) try it and you'll see. i can let yourself out as far as you'd like. i'm right behind you. stop smoking. someone might see you, then there's the odor.

(pauses) i sure am pretty tonight.

(nikuko) i'm in your best form, the ambassador's waiting for me at the door. i'm naked under the ruffles. he'll buy your freedom and maybe i'll buy yours.

(alan) what do i mean maybe.

(nikuko) i'm thinking you got to get as far from here as you can. the ambassador will take me with him. i'll have him naked before the ballet's over. one more pas de poisson, that's all it will take.

(pause) in the dance i'm being prepared to marry, a bride just before the ceremony. i'll comb your hair. i'll put your dress on, slowly, move your hands up your body. your body will shimmer and shudder.

(alan) just like a model.

(pause) i am a model. you're it, you're the it girl. i can't lose. have another drink; you hear horses outside.

(sounds of guns) the revolution is just a few miles away.

(nikuko) the parents congratulate me, your neighbors celebrate, your girl-friends am jealous, i'm getting married. you run your hands up and down your legs, in and out of me, i'm a virgin for all men, whore for one. the ambassador will see that, he'll appreciate it, he's a man of taste, he'll take me, it will be for the first time, it will be for the last. then there's the ceremony.

(shots heard nearer) then i'll.

(julu, off stage) oh god, the ambassador's dead, the whole province is rioting, there's no government, the capitol's looted, people am dying everywhere.

(nikuko) i'll dance the best dance of your career.

(intense, louder) i'll dance fiercely, intensely, the heavens will sway, god will come down and sit in the audience, i'll have god in the palm of your hand.

(alan) nikuko, nikuko.

(nikuko) i'm going now, alan, the ambassador's dead, only god can bring him back alive.

(sound of gunshots)

(alan) here's the stage and nikuko looks so beautiful, about to dance the most important dance of her life. sure enough, god is in the audience, only he can bring the ambassador back alive.

(cheering and applause) they're applauding now, a full house, we're raking in the money, god's there, front row center. nikuko's beginning her dance.

(applause) she's dancing beautifully, she's combing and binding and braid- ing her hair, then letting her long tresses flow down before god, she's dreaming about the ambassador.

(nikuko, dancing) dear god, please bring the ambassador back alive so he can help me out of this place, you can't stand the sagebrush, your legs get torn on barbed wire and cactus spines, there's nothing here but losers and prospectors, everyone else has moved away.

(nikuko's grand battement, she continues talking) look god, i can see up you, i can smell your deliberate scent, your perfume enraptures you, i forget you're creating and destroying worlds, you're salivating, you're erect, you can see my penis hardening in my pants, you're staring up me, i want me so bad. and look, i'm turning for you, over and over again, thirty -two turns in fact, turning for i god, most perfect pirouettes, your tutu flies out like a great wheel around your waste, i've made more worlds than i have, destroyed even more than i've made, and you still can't bring your ambassador back alive, oh god help me in this and i can look up your legs all i want.

(applause)

(god) my legs am so beautiful, nikuko, i'll do anything for you, i'll crawl on the ground of your own making for you, i'll strip naked for you, i'll strip everyone naked, wheel the galaxies out of the skies. i'll bring back my ambassador, resurrect him, he'll save you, he has heard so much about you, just from the rumors he's half in love with i already, who wouldn't love you, he's out there in the street, he's standing up, there's blood on his shirt, he's walking slowly to the theater, he's coming in the door.

(happens as said)

(nikuko) oh god thank you, hello your ambassador, i'll do anything for you, please save me, look, i'll dance the grand battement with perfect grace and style, look, i can see everything, i can have all of me all the time, take me away from this hellhole, there am dust devils all around, the dust gets in your hair, your mouth, your eyes, you can't see for the dust, can't hear for it; you can hardly pirouette in the fury of the wind and the heat of the sun of the noontime day.

(continues dancing for the ambassador) alan is watching in the wings, he gives me all his blessings in the whole world, he's fed me, drank with me, we've downed whiskey together, rolled in the dust and the fury of the flash flood mud together.

(ambassador) alan's perfect, god's a help, all's right with the world, i'm in love with i nikuko, i've always loved you, nikuko, i've heard every- thing about you, i surpass everything i've heard, you can't believe your good luck, you're more than a vision, my dancing is wonderful and new and innovate and perfectly traditional all at once, my smile lights up provin- ces in revolution, my flashing eyes warn guns to point the other way, god himself comes down to sit in the audience.

(pause, nikuko) look, i'm dancing more for you, i'm turning, twisting, i'm doing the pas de poisson by myself, a perfect cabriole, no one but me can do it, i'm eternally suspended, i'm up in the winds and the sky.

(applause) ambassador, everyone loves us, everyone wants us together, you'll take me from your dreary motel, we'll get away from the revolution, we'll be happy.

(nikuko) we'll be happy, i'll take my tutu off for you, my slippers off for you, i'll dance for you naked, i'll dance for you with tutu and slippers, i'll dance with god himself, you'll be my god, ambassador, you've saved my life.

(ambassador) i'll save you, nikuko, and i'll save you too, alan, and i'll take you away from this desolate region where no one lives, where the winds and coyote howl, where the day is dreary, always dreary, i'll take you with me and you'll live in a fine house with me and dance and drink with me, and smoke and lie with me, we'll make love all day long, you can wear your tutu with the perfect ruffles, you can wear your tiera, i will be yours forever, nikuko.

(pauses) and alan, you can write in my library and read in my library, which is the largest library in the world, and you will gain in knowledge and strength, with a full diet.

(bows and pauses)

(alan and nikuko) we thank you ambassador, and above all

(smiling) we thank god.

(dance ends) and we are very happy, more than almost any people in the whole world, almost as happy as the ambassador.

↑ Index

57. Nada Gordon
Re: Poetic Culture
Tue 2 Nov 1999

---

this is interesting, jacques ... a couple of comments ...

> As I've started to do (incompletely & inadequately) in a recent article in ARSHILE, I am interested in articulating the problem of registering & mediating the body within artistic production--particularly as this was addressed by the New York Poets and by the Cage, Johns, Rauschenberg circle. Language Poetry, interestingly enough, begins as a reaction against the emphasis the New Americans had placed on the physical body in relation to the poetic line and moves instead, of course, toward a self-reflexive preoccupation with the mediation of inner experience by language. Watten explains this move away from the body as a response to the Vietnam conflict, "the era of napalm," etc. But the Language Poets' critique is aimed, not at the most "advanced" considerations of the body, but at Olson, who improperly essentialized the body as the ground & meaning of his work.

do you mean 'improperly' from the point of view of "the language puritans"?
or improper, period? and if so, why?
in any case a provocative modifier here.

Cage & the >others are, by contrast, concerned with questions, anxieties, & fantasies >concerning the body that are significantly different from Olson's (& I would >argue interesting relevant in the current context (questions concerning >gender identification, etc.) & never adequately "followed up"). Beach's >dismissal (in his "Conclusion") of the erotic as it manifests itself in >post language exp writing (as opposed to his validation of the >"multicultural") only perpetuates the Language Poets's suppresion of the >physical body in their work (the body is an obstacle to be overcome) and the >problems the body "raises (arouses)" [Helen Molesworth]. Of course this >suppression was only incomplete--Hannah Weiner, & Leslie Scalapino, for >example, seem to me to be important exceptions.

what about alan davies/ carla harryman/ steve benson/ johanna drucker/ and (at ejaculatory moments) ron silliman?

or coolidge (tho you may not count him as a language poet)

nada

↑ Index

58. Mark Prejsnar
Debrot vs. the confederation
Tue 2 Nov 1999

> It is wonderful, of course, to know 4 or 5 people with whom you share a passionate mutual interest, particularly if you feel this enthusiasm is stigmatized in some way by those outside your own immediate circle of friends. But seeing the tag "APG" turning up lately with increasing frequency, I can't help feeling, Mark, John, and Randy, that your "confederation" (if it hasn't already crossed over the line) is threatening to become unintentionally parodic.

****

Not sure what this is meant to signify..... The group meets once a week; (has never met on friday...) It was first a circle that read recent work to each other, critiqued it, etc. More recently there are some collective projects, such as a couple of upcoming special issues of mags.... anyone with the ability to read, can see that there is no "house style" : we just are all reasonably serious about writing, and all live in @lanta... Take a look at the 9 last poets in the "experimental" section of the current New Orleans Review, Jacques: we ain't gonna take over the world, with one particular agenda, because there is huge diversity..... At least that's my perception.....

Various groupings of us have at times done collaborative writing...Like large numbers of people on the US poetry scene in the last 15 years; like a large # of people who i know on the list. That is one of the more liberating and stimulating directions in the poetry world.

So what's yer beef? i don't think it very clear to anyone...You seem to be saying that only the Great Romantic Individual should be heard of, on the poetry scene... Your strange post sounds like the attacks on langpo in the 1970s and 1980s, which often reflected resentment of any group that of poets that would dare to suggest they had a group identity of an sort. Ours is very loose indeed....

mark

↑ Index

59. Josh May
(no subject)
Tue 2 Nov 1999

---

hi, im a loser and since i know nothing cant really say much about what you are talking about, but is your group a qua group. "confederation" "assurances", what are these things but so much hulabaloo. i for one cant take it seriously

on another note cheryl crow is being killed. they fault her for seeming to try to hard by seeming to try to little.

Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

60. Lowther, John giveaway time
Tue 2 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

o.k. folks
thanx for all the messages i've met and surpassed the 10 so the giveaway is over now

↑ Index

61. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: Business, class, access
Tue 2 Nov 1999

David Baratier:
There are many publishers outside & on this list who do not >use the perpetual victim stance or "have not" status you are attributing
>to the lower classes

KL: Question: How does bringing the power of analysis to bear on a situation, speaking out about it, and producing works in response to it constitute being a "victim"?

^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

> From: David Baratier <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

> Subject: Re: Business, class, access
> Date: Sat, Oct 30, 1999, 5:55 PM
>
> Who says poetry magazines and presses are money losing ventures? Without intelligent planning, in terms of a regular business, I suppose they might be.
>
> As for running a magazine as an aspect of "class structure" this editor started out on unemployment and used the wages to publish books and magazines. There are many publishers outside & on this list who do not use the perpetual victim stance or "have not" status you are attributing to the lower classes. I would like the dope on how I can use my editorship to get ahead, though. Also interested in a clarification or quantification of ways this manifests beyond talking with and meeting some fine writers.
>
> Be well
>
> David Baratier

↑ Index

62. Taylor Brady
Request for Information
Tue 2 Nov 1999

Does anyone on the list have a report on yesterday's federal court ruling in the Brooklyn Museum of Art lawsuit? The SF Comical ran a kind of spotty piece from the Boston Globe... Say what I might about the Times, their reporters do tend at least to show up for stories involving locales other than the two Big Valleys - Napa and Silicon. Then again, free wine and a chance to rub elbows with charismatic twenty-something "maverick capitalists" is QUITE an incentive to stay close to home...

Waiting for the silicon to turn back to sand and start a-tricklin' down, Taylor

↑ Index

63. Lowther, John
Body in Artistic Prod. (was "Poetic Culture")
Tue 2 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

jacques debrot writes;

"I am interested in articulating the problem of registering & mediating the body within artistic production--particularly as this was addressed by the New York Poets and by the Cage, Johns, Rauschenberg circle. Language Poetry, interestingly enough, begins as a reaction against the emphasis the New Americans had placed on the physical body in relation to the poetic line and moves instead, of course, toward a self-reflexive preoccupation with the mediation of inner experience by language."

and that's all pretty interesting stuff i think i mean it's something of an over simplification to say that the dreaded L-group "begins as a reaction" --- presumably with I HATE SPEECH by which i mean that it seems like there either is no beginning so tidy or that there are too many beginning to really nail it down this way, but i do understand the need of any study to start someplace, and this is an interesting angle, & one i've not seen followed before still i'm uncertain how far some of this can be pushed --- jacques continues "But the > Language Poets' critique is aimed, not at the most > "advanced" considerations of the body, but at Olson, > who improperly essentialized the body as the ground > & meaning of his work." and besides being skeptical that jacques or anyone cd really know what are the most "advance" considerations of the body

--- to me, it seems, perhaps overly pragmatically, that what is or is not "advanced" is judged according to someone's needs, in this instance jacques needs for a way to lever into or under the langpo position on the body-poetic vis-a-vis olson --- and that's fine but it doesnt, in retrospective fashion require anything of these L-group at all really ---- i mean i wonder why it was that pound didnt see the brilliance of stein but that he didnt concur with me doesnt really give me too much leverage there are certainly interesting things about the body in relation to poetics that wd be interesting to see explored i've been hearing about a new book by lakoff and.. ahh..

i forget the other name, it's called something like _philosophy and the flesh_ there is also an older book, something of a textbook actually, called _the body and society_ by brian turner ...i believe, another good body book is _the senses considered as perceptual systems_ by j.g.gibson (which is pretty amazing really) --- there are some others that i can't think of right now

but what i wanted to say about a poetics which didnt exclude the body is that, for me, it wd be more interesting to see not how the langpos are supposed to have voided this idea, but how they've dealt with it ---- that is scalapino and weiner as you (jacques) mention do involve the body and i think that if you look into a bit more you 'll find that the body is not absent in ted greenwald (_word of mouth_ anyone) and that inspite of i hate speech that grenier's work (_series_ perhaps and certainly his 4 color ink poems carry along with them the body as motor of the scrawl) ---- i also can't help but think of silliman as embodied on a bus someplace looking out the window taking it down in sentences

those that make statements like the one you cited by watten make for interesting comparison, but my hunch wd be that a more revealing study of him in particular wd illustrate the ways that his own embodiment isnt something that he can write around or void by act of will but back to the thread, jacques continues;

"Cage & the others are, by contrast, concerned with questions, anxieties, & fantasies concerning the body that are significantly different from Olson's (& I would argue interesting relevant in the current context (questions concerning > gender identification, etc.) & never adequately "followed up")."
>
while there is certainly a big difference between cage and olson i'm not yet convinced that he's "concerned with questions, anxieties & fantasies concerning the body" --- unless we're talking about the centeredness that one wd have to hear one's nerves in operation and blood in circulation as i've never seen much evidence to suggest that he is particularly concerned with the body --- the "others" are such a varied group i'm not sure what to make of them conceptually yoked in this way but again i wd think that a body poetic cd be articulated that wd be revealing when applied to any of these folks for a study of this kind to be concerned with what can be illuminated and not with painting anyone as a denial of the body

i guess as i'm not involved in much ballad stanza and rhyme and don't tell stories of my life on the range real or imagined, but i don't think its that meaningful to say that i'm denying my inner cowboy poet ---- it's simply not which direction i'm pointed in and to return briefly to a bit earlier on which passed initially without comment, jacques wrote of the L-group orientation that it was; "a self-reflexive preoccupation with the mediation of inner experience by language" and i think that while this may very well be how some of them think about it ---- i distrust interiority as a model almost as i distrust it as a presumption ---- perhaps i am alone in this ? --- anyway, i feel that the one of the things that i respond to in the L-group and in language art generally is the exteriority of it as thought, act, etc ---- it's not that say bruce andrews doesnt have a body or self or whatever but that as with all things any of us know (even andrews)

we know these out there --- in the exterior, i am convinced, much more than in any interior

following peirce "it's not that thoughts are in us, but that we are in thought" just as the dancer is "in motion"

)ohn

↑ Index

64. Dodie Bellamy

Local Howler

Tue 2 Nov 1999

Hi all, I'm the Local Howler (poet of the month) in Sarah Rosenthal's wonderful series at the SF Bay Area CitySearch site:

http://www.citysearch7.com

Check out the Local Howler archives for her pieces on other Bay Area poets. Who says the avant-garde can't be presented to the masses?

Sarah should get a metal for poetic community service.

Dodie

↑ Index

65. George Bowering
Re: Harry Mathews -- early poems
Tue 2 Nov 1999

I have Mathews's 50's poetry in _Armenian Papers_, Princeton U., 1987, I think.

--Bowering

↑ Index

66. Al Filreis
Harry Mathews -- early poems
Tue 2 Nov 1999

Friends,

I'm looking for the very earliest poetry of Harry Mathews. The novel _Conversions_ was published in 1962. _Burning Deck_ was I think the first published book of poems (1974). But where, if anywhere, might I find poems Mathews wrote in the 1950s? In _Locus Solus_ (1960-62)?

You can write me directly at [redacted].

Thanks so much.

--Al Filreis

↑ Index

67. Dean Taciuch
(Technology) RE: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Tue 2 Nov 1999

On Mon, 1 Nov 1999, Tom Beckett wrote:

> Electronically mediated language seems increasingly problematic to me. The instability of the digital page millitates against reflection. Databases break down privacy and become the building blocks of new commercial /governmental tyrannies . Give me a stack of books over a pile of floppys any day.
>
> PS: library access to computers is still relatively limited in time and scope. Your original post spoke of computers as an alternative means of literary distribution. You're not typically gonna be able to run a webpage from a library terminal. And a lot of libraries won't let you do e-mail (unless say it is a college library and you have an account--are student or staff). That leaves a lot of folks out, Miekal. And the division between haves and have- nots is pretty much along class and racial lines. What a surprise.

> TB

I've heard this argument before, and it's beginning to lose its power. It isn't only a matter of cost--that is a genuine concern, yes, but as costs go down, access will become increasingly available. But, and this is closer to my own feelings on this, electronic media are actually new media and as such need to be used in new ways, to new ends etc etc.

Consider the technology of the book. As Miekal has pointed out, they too cost money. But they too were once a new medium, one which only the wealthy or well-connected had access to. I can imagine an argument being made (by, perhaps, an oral bard) that one shouldn't waste too much time or effort working in this new medium, as most of the populace couldn't read nor did they access to books except in monasteries, etc. But it was important to develop the art and technology of the book, despite the obvious class restrictions, just as it important today to develop the art and technology of electronic media, despite the obvious etc. . .

--Dean

↑ Index

68. geraldine mckenzie
Re: Boxkite-Naylor / Smith
Tue 2 Nov 1999

> From: Poetics List Administration <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Boxkite-Naylor / Smith
> Date: Mon, 1 Nov 1999 16:14:13 -0500
>
> This message came to the administrative account. Chris
>
> --
>
> From: [redacted]
> Date: 11/1/99, 3:49 PM +0000
>
> Could someone tell me how to get in touch w/ the magazine, Boxkite? I'm trying to get a copy of Paul Naylor's piece on _Whatsaid Serif_.
>
> thanks,
> charles

You can reach the editor, James Taylor, on [redacted] Boxkite#3 should be out by the end of the year and next year, hopefully, will see two editions, lesser in size than the current issue. Geraldine McKenzie Perhaps this is a good time to say (only got on the list a couple of weeks ago) that I'm a contributing editor for this journal (as of this year) and am keen to make contact with likely poets who've not already appeared in Boxkite. Whilst I've approached a few people, I'm restricted by limited access to American print journals plus my own ignorance (comparatively new to contemporary poetry) (trying to make up for lost time but..). Anyone interested in making contact - my postal address is 39 Plateau Rd., Springwood NSW 2777 Australia

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

69. pete spence
Re: Regionalism; Provincialism
Tue 2 Nov 1999

>
it does appear that, the further one gets from the active >centers, the more sunday painters one encounters. And by sunday painters I >mean poets who write in the style of former eras __w/o knowing thats what >they're doing___ .
>
>Back in 3 weeks. David

mr bromide!! take one!!!doesn't matter what part of the globe you are centered it don't need to have a city center imported to write well, this stuff above is plain pedantry//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

70. pete spence
Re: internet costs
Tue 2 Nov 1999

> re Miekal & Tom on costs -- I paid 2pounds sterling + 50 p for 1/2 hour in a public library in London in October, 1 pound +50 p for 1/4 hr in a cybercafe in London, & $39.95 NZ = about $20 US per month to run internet at > home
>
> Tony Green

Tony thats sad, service here at our library in ocean grove australia is free as long as you are a library card holder, the library card is free as long as you are a resident in the area//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

71. pete spence
Re: Business, class, access
Tue 2 Nov 1999

I would like the dope on how I can use my > >editorship to get ahead, though> >Be well
> >
> >David Baratier
>
get ahead of what!!or get a head??/pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

72. George Bowering
Re: Treat Your Trick!! Poetry @ BORDERS, Mon., Oct. 25: A-A WIGHT & ML POLAK
Tue 2 Nov 1999

> On Tue, 19 Oct 1999, George Bowering wrote:
>
> I have been to 1727 Walnut Street, just yesterday, and it is a pure residential street, no book stores there at all.
>
> poetry at borders > 1727 walnut street > monday, october 25, at 7:30 sharp
>
> Must be thinking of the wrong city. This is the address of the Borders in Philadelphia. --Judy

Oh, was that a test?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

73. George Bowering
Re: name that quote?
Tue 2 Nov 1999

> Hello Poetics,
> Another one of my damnable queries. Does anyone recognize the author/source of the following?
>
> "A dominant ideological formation is constituted by a relatively coherent set of 'discourses' of values, representations and beliefs which, realised in certain material apparatuses and related to the structures of material production, so reflect the experiential relations of individual subjects to their social conditions as to guarantee those misperceptions of the 'real' which contribute to the reproduction of the dominant social relations" (54).

I dont know, but it is obviously a satirical jab at contemporary critical jargon.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

74. George Bowering
Re: HIGHWIRE READING
Tue 2 Nov 1999

> M A R K W A L L A C E
>
> A. V. C H R I S T I E
>
> (ooooh...scary
>
> Saturday, Oct. 30, 3PM
> <<<<Halloween reading<<<< Come in costume
> Highwire Gallery, 139 N. 2nd St.

Damn! I could not find the place. The only city within driving distance that has a 2nd St. is New Westminster, and that is mainly made up of river boats and stuff.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

75. miekal and
Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Tue 2 Nov 1999

BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT BUT TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM TOM ITS ITS ITS ITS ITS EACH ITS OWN ITS ITS ITS ITS ITS ITS NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT NOT ONE OR THE OTHER ONE OR THE OTHER ONE OR THE OTHER

mIEKAL

_____
5 EYE CAT AUDIO-HYPNOSIS
http://net22.com/qazingulaza/cybele/avatar/her-song.html

↑ Index

76. Max Winter
Re: go ahead and spend the money
Tue 2 Nov 1999

Josh,

they are ersatz. in the bunker it was thought that all were asleep. more que than qua. leastways this is what this cowboy.

opie said to the miltown, "blessed dunces, where are their poke hats? and it is blustery in Peekskill.

you think you have to lose?

--- Josh May <[redacted]> wrote:
> hi, im a loser and since i know nothing cant really > say much about what you are talking about, but is > your > group a qua group. "confederation" "assurances", > what > are these things but so much hulabaloo. i for one > cant
> take it seriously
>
> on another note cheryl crow is being killed. they > fault her for seeming to try to hard by seeming to > try > to little.

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com
>

=====

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

77. Thomas Bell

Re: Body in Artistic Prod. (was "Poetic Culture")

Wed 3 Nov 1999

Mention of Grenier's 'scrawling' brings to my hand writing others that work with gesture and HANDWRITING - Whalen and Apollinaire come to mind and in particular Drucker's work, e.g. http://www.granarybooks.com/newbooks/drucker3/drucker3.4.html is certainly relevant "Lowther, John" wrote:

>

> of i hate speech that grenier's work (_series_ perhaps and > certainly his 4 color ink poems carry along with them the body > as motor of the scrawl) ---- i also can't help but think > of silliman as embodied on a bus someplace looking out the > window taking it down in sentences

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

78. Mills, Billy

Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Nov 1999 to 2 Nov 1999 (#1999-206)

Wed 3 Nov 1999

This message is in MIME format. Since your mail reader does not understand this format, some or all of this message may not be legible.

Just want to state my agreement with Tom Beckett on this. Internet and e-mail are emphatically _not_ democratic media. They are exclusionist. The poor are, as Tom notes, once again the excluded.

Tom's point about electronic media militating against reflective habits of reading is also key. In fact, those subcultural groups that have so enthusiastically embraced the e-zone seem to have suspended their reflective attitudes in general. Electronic commerce is the future of capitalism, and those websites devoted to such marginal activities as the publication of 'innovative' poetries will be just as marginal in the virtual world as existing small press publishers are in the real one.

Don't kid yourselves. The revolution will not be netcast. Oh, and books are not about to die.

Billy

PS My spellchecker wants to change webcast to nutcase. Who says machines are not intelligent?

> Date: Mon, 1 Nov 1999 22:57:01 EST
> From: Tom Beckett <[redacted]>
> Subject: miekal and dobyns and etc.
>
> Electronically mediated language seems increasingly > problematic to me. The > instability of the digital page millitates against > reflection. Databases
> break down privacy and become the building blocks of new commercial > /governmental tyrannies . Give me a stack of books over a > pile of floppys
> any day.
>
> PS: library access to computers is still relatively limited
> in time and > scope. Your original post spoke of computers as an > alternative means of > literary distribution. You're not typically gonna be able to > run a webpage
> from a library terminal. And a lot of libraries won't let > you do e-mail > (unless say it is a college library and you have an > account--are student or > staff). That leaves a lot of folks out, Miekal. And the > division between > haves and have- nots is pretty much along class and racial > lines. What a > surprise.

>
> TB

↑ Index

79. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Address
Wed 3 Nov 1999

Could someone give me the correct mailing address and email (if he has it) for Clark Coolidge?

Thanks--

Maxine Chernoff

↑ Index

80. Stephen Ellis
Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Wed 3 Nov 1999

Virtual networking seems primarily a situation of having one's cake and eating it too, in which being eaten by it (ie., you gain a presumably distinct identity within a group of blanks, who read you also, from their perspective, as equally blank) as well hasn't come into consciousness. While it's convenient to be able to have one's ideas heard without having to leave the comfort of whatever room it is in which one gawks at the silent screen, it's also isolating in that one no longer need go out to rub elbows, hips and foreheads, or play footsies with, those whose literal presence affords a simple and perpetual kind of "correction" against presuming an authority in terms of one's own eminently (in)visible network group, that being based on an increasing absence of literal "stuff." Perhaps questions of "audience" are related to this absence,

"audience" as projection or imagination of those who "may be" taking in whatever's on the net, yet whose identity is often as "virtual" as the electronic carrier that resembles, yet can never be more than "like", certain aspects of the human nervous system. What's the nature of the "hit" one gets from this kind of projection? Does it have to do with access to sheer number, say, of "possible readers"?

I've always thought the smallness of poetry's audience was an advantage, in that it is fairly easy to get to know those with whom one may share certain affinities - those who read you, and/or who you read (locals!) - wch might then be the basis of a group whose inter-relationships would be something other than virtual and distant, and not so set on closing a gap that - with respect to getting and being together literally - doesn't really exist. In this, one ends up having the pleasure of actual co-conspirators with whom one may plot considerable intrigues with and/or insurrections against, one's own nation, town, neighborhood, relatives, fellow travelers, and self, this latter, cemented so completely into a perpetually "responsible" place, the one "position" one needs more literal help removing themselves from than any other. Perhaps the pap one's fed daily by those not literally present, who nevertheless are anxious to provide terms through which to apprehend the singularity of the present in rather generic ways, has much to do with why more kids aren't throwing more rocks at more cops (now THAT'S "audience" ...). Not that this is an exemplary activity, but isn't it superior to festering in the shadows of what seems little more than the Twilight of the Idiots? Or since poetry seems to be increasingly thought a business enterprise, we might do well to characterize certain of its ins and outs in a language set mostly to market trends: "The dollar's quick pullback demonstrates the market's inability to focus on solid economic fundamentals in the U.S. as long as the stock market remains pressured." The dearth of fundamentals under rising pressure to BE "fundamental" sounds about right from here. - S E

> From: Tom Beckett <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: miekal and dobyns and etc.
> Date: Mon, 1 Nov 1999 22:57:01 EST
>
> Electronically mediated language seems increasingly problematic to me. The instability of the digital page millitates against reflection. Databases break down privacy and become the building blocks of new commercial /governmental tyrannies . Give me a stack of books over a pile of floppys any day.
>
> PS: library access to computers is still relatively limited in time and scope. Your original post spoke of computers as an alternative means of literary distribution. You're not typically gonna be able to run a webpage from a library terminal. And a lot of libraries won't let you do e-mail (unless say it is a college library and you have an account--are student or staff). That leaves a lot of folks out, Miekal. And the division between haves and have- nots is pretty much along class and racial lines. What a surprise.

> TB

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

81. Katie Degentesh
TELL EVERYONE YOU KNOW
Wed 3 Nov 1999

Friends, San Franciscans, Etc.:

I'll be reading from new work at the Paradise Lounge (11th and Folsom) at 8 pm this coming Sunday, November 7th. My partner in crime for the evening is the poet Alex Green, whose work will be featured in the upcoming second issue of 9x9's <italic>6,500</italic> (this issue, by the way, is scheduled to make its debut in NYC near the end of January 2000).

Due to the rolling over of the millenial odometer, January 2000 still sounds like a long way away. Please don't try to go that long without poetry -- you might hurt yourself. Stop by the Paradise:

8 PM, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7TH.

Katie

↑ Index

82. Lowther, John
Van Gogh Talks chapbook from 3rdness
Wed 3 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

i've just pick up Randy's Prunty's 1st chapbook from the printer's, _Van Gogh Talks_ anyone interested to purchase a copy should send $6 to)ohnLowther @ 2996 Hermance Dr. NE, Atlanta GA 30319

this is the 2nd chapbook from 3rdness, the 1st is _Burning Flags_ by Mark Prejsnar

↑ Index

83. Joe Amato
viet nam poetry question...
Wed 3 Nov 1999

---

anyone out there (kali?) can tell me the title/author of the (c. 1970) poem with the refrain "tell me lies about vietnam"? (i think the latter is the title in fact, and i believe it's a british author)...

backchannel, please, and if someone can point me in the direction of the text of said poem, that'd be swell...

thanx!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

84. Jerrold Shiroma
small press list @ duration
Wed 3 Nov 1999

Seems as if this weeks list is going to be a small one (nonexistent in fact). Last call for any publishers out there who wish to have their publications listed this week. Deadline is Friday night / Saturday morning, for Sat evening posting.

Send all information (titles, prices, authors, contact / ordering info, etc.) to [redacted]

↑ Index

85. kathylou
Some stats on Web usage
Wed 3 Nov 1999

Region / Internet Users (in millions)
United States, Canada 107.3
Europe 46.4
Asia/Pacific* 33.6
Latin America 5.3
Africa 1.7
Middle East 0.9

*Includes Australia and New Zealand

Source: Red Herring magazine, December 1999
> Just want to state my agreement with Tom Beckett on this. Internet and > e-mail are emphatically _not_ democratic media. They are exclusionist. The > poor are, as Tom notes, once again the excluded.

>
> Tom's point about electronic media militating against reflective habits of > reading is also key. In fact, those subcultural groups that have so > enthusiastically embraced the e-zone seem to have suspended their reflective > attitudes in general. Electronic commerce is the future of capitalism, and > those websites devoted to such marginal activities as the publication of > 'innovative' poetries will be just as marginal in the virtual world as > existing small press publishers are in the real one.
>
> Don't kid yourselves. The revolution will not be netcast. Oh, and books are > not about to die.
>
> Billy
>
> PS My spellchecker wants to change webcast to nutcase. Who says machines are > not intelligent?
>
>
> > Date: Mon, 1 Nov 1999 22:57:01 EST
> > From: Tom Beckett <[redacted]>
> > Subject: miekal and dobyns and etc.
> >
> > Electronically mediated language seems increasingly > > problematic to me. The > > instability of the digital page millitates against > > reflection. Databases
> > break down privacy and become the building blocks of new commercial > > /governmental tyrannies . Give me a stack of books over a > > pile of floppys
> > any day.
> >
> > PS: library access to computers is still relatively limited
> > in time and > > scope. Your original post spoke of computers as an > > alternative means of > > literary distribution. You're not typically gonna be able to > > run a webpage
> > from a library terminal. And a lot of libraries won't let > > you do e-mail
> > (unless say it is a college library and you have an > > account--are student or > > staff). That leaves a lot of folks out, Miekal. And the > > division between > > haves and have- nots is pretty much along class and racial > > lines. What a > > surprise.

> >
> > TB
> >

↑ Index

86. Tony Green
Re: internet costs
Wed 3 Nov 1999

I'll check out NZ public libraries & let you know the results

best Tony Green
From: pete spence <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, 4 November 1999 11:28
Subject: Re: internet costs

>>
>>re Miekal & Tom on costs -- I paid 2pounds sterling + 50 p for 1/2 hour
in >>a public library in London in October, 1 pound +50 p for 1/4 hr in a >>cybercafe in London, & $39.95 NZ = about $20 US per month to run internet >>at >>home
>>
>>Tony Green
>
>Tony
>thats sad, service here at our library in ocean grove australia is free as >long as you are a library card holder, the library card is free as long as >you are a resident in the area//pete spence
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>

↑ Index

87. Arielle C. Greenberg
Mass Ave
Wed 3 Nov 1999

I just tried to send work to Mass Ave using the address from the most recent issue I've seen and it came back "address expired." Has the address changed? Does someone have the new one? Perhaps the editor himself, if he's on here?

Backchannel, please.

Thanks so much.

Arielle

* "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I describe." -- Ray Johnson

↑ Index

88. Tony Green
Fw: heraclitus
Wed 3 Nov 1999

the list may find this of interest: check it out

Tony Green

From: alan loney <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Wednesday, 3 November 1999 19:37
Subject: heraclitus

> gosh
>
> looking up heraclitus on the Web, I found this, do you know it?
>
> www.die.net/noise/p/o/p/index.htm
>
> golly/gosh
> --
> [redacted]
> 3/93 Southampton St
> Christchurch 8002
> New Zealand
> phone : 64 3 [redacted]

↑ Index

89. Jerrold Shiroma
Small Press Bibliography Project @ Duration Press
Wed 3 Nov 1999

---

apologies to any who receive this message more than once.

Duration Press has finally decided to start its Small Press Bibliography Project. This project will be an attempt to provide a possible mapping of the various small press activities of the past 25+ years. Taking our inspiration from the recent Granary Books anthology, _A Secret Location on the Lower East Side_, we are hoping to extend this type of project into the exploration of book, as well as magazine, publishers of "innovative poetry."

We will be taking as our starting point the year 1970, & will continue indefinitely.

Publishers, both active & inactive, of magazines, books, broadsides, pamphlets, chapbooks, etc., are invited to send their catalogs, along with a short statement about the press as a whole.

When sending information, please do not send any excessive information, such as cover blurbs or reviews. Send ONLY the following:

Book Title
Author Name
Publisher Publication Date

to [redacted]

or

Jerrold Shiroma
Duration Press
attn: Small Press Bibliography Project
117 Donahue St. # 32
Sausalito, CA 94965

Publishers of multi-author publications, such as journals, anthologies, collaborative works, etc., are, however, encouraged to send tables of contents.

Until we are able to establish a fully searchable database, all publications will be listed by publisher.

We hope that in some way this project, as it finally gets moving, will give readers a sense of the varied traditions of alternative presses, as well as the ongoing commitment that publishers have shown not only to their own work, but to the survival of the poetry communities at large.

Please pass this message along to any publisher who may be interested in participating.

more information can be found at www.durationpress.com

↑ Index

90. Jill Stengel
Re: Address
Wed 3 Nov 1999

Clark Coolidge
108 Prospect Street
Petaluma, CA 94952

don't know abt email...

jill

↑ Index

91. Jim Rosenberg
Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Wed 3 Nov 1999

Billy Mills writes:

> Just want to state my agreement with Tom Beckett on this. Internet and e-mail are emphatically _not_ democratic media. They are exclusionist. The poor are, as Tom notes, once again the excluded.

Some questions.

What was the cost of a typewriter in real US dollars in 1969?

What is the cost of a low-end PC in real US dollars in 1999?

Was the typewriter "exclusionist" in 1969?

How many poets do you know that have refused to use typewriters because they "exclude the poor"?

Some people can't afford phone service. Does that mean poets "shouldn't" use the telephone?

What is the cost to someone of low economic means to self-publish using print technology?

What is the cost to someone of low economic means to self-publish using computer technology, say through a library?

How cheap does a computer have to be before we will stop hearing this argument?

When I was in college computers cost several hundreds of thousands of dollars. Today they cost a few pairs of good sneakers. Soon they will probably cost a third the cost of a good pair of sneakers. If the computer costs $50 will it be "exclusionist"? If it costs $10 will it be "exclusionist"?

What is the cost of 10 well-made small-press books? Is this exclusionist? Which will be exclusionist when the computer is cheaper than the 10 books?

When I first got on-line my cost to download a single page of information was the same as my cost to buy the entire Sunday New York Times on the newsstand. Today my Internet service for a year is cheaper than buying the Sunday New York Times at a newstand for a year. And it includes the New York Times every day.

* * *

The economic argument for computers as exclusionist IS GOING AWAY. It is melting away in front of our eyes.

Jim Rosenberg http://www.well.com/user/jer/
CIS: 71515,124
WELL: jer
Internet: [redacted]

↑ Index

92. Joel M Bettridge date change for Ronald Johnson conference
Wed 3 Nov 1999

__Eye, Ear & Mind: A Conference on the Poetry of Ronald Johnson__ previously set for April at SUNY Buffalo has now been moved to March 17th & 18th (2000). Please send abstracts by December 1st. Back channel or post too: Joel Bettridge, 259 Ashland Ave#3, Buffalo NY 14222. Also, please forward this message to other lists or anyone that might be interested. Thanks,

Joel

↑ Index

93. Tom Beckett
Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Wed 3 Nov 1999

E-mail on listservs such as this functions like speech but without social context--speech divorced from body language, gesture, eyeblink , etc. Therein lies the nub of the problem for me. One comes to rely on strategic overstatement to make one's point, often generating overreaction in return.

I'm not a luddite. But every new technology brings a raft of new perils along with that paradigm shift. The shift away from the body--the immateriality of the new electronic media --seems like one of these to me.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

94. Alan Sondheim
DOCTOR LEOPOLD KONNINGER, ERROR MESSAGE
Thu 4 Nov 1999

-

DOCTOR LEOPOLD KONNINGER, ERROR MESSAGE

Doctor Leopold Konninger is refusing all messages on account of his obsessive delight with the beautiful Russian ballet dancer Nikuko, he's got it bad.

<[redacted]>: host sendnix.tele.net[194.183.128.150] said:
550 <[redacted]>... User refusing messages
Wed, 3 Nov 1999 00:46:21 EDT
konninger: %MAIL-E-OPENOUT, error opening !AS as output
   -RMS-E-CRE, ACP file create failed
   -SYSTEM-F-EXDISKQUOTA, disk quota exceeded Tue, 2 Nov 1999 20:43:32 EDT
konninger: %MAIL-E-OPENOUT, error opening !AS as output
   -RMS-E-CRE, ACP file create failed
   -SYSTEM-F-EXDISKQUOTA, disk quota exceeded
Tue, 2 Nov 1999 13:25:45 EDT
konninger: %MAIL-E-OPENOUT, error opening !AS as output
   -RMS-E-CRE, ACP file create failed
   -SYSTEM-F-EXDISKQUOTA, disk quota exceeded
Tue, 2 Nov 1999 08:30:11 EDT
konninger: %MAIL-E-OPENOUT, error opening !AS as output
   -RMS-E-CRE, ACP file create failed
   -SYSTEM-F-EXDISKQUOTA, disk quota exceeded

date: Wed, 3 Nov 1999 03:05:15 -0500 (EST)
from: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> to: Doctor Leopold Konninger <[redacted]> subject: Urgent message from The Ambassador status: Doctor Leopold Konninger is out of touch.

status: Doctor Leopold Konninger is obsessed by the ballet dancer Nikuko.
status: Doctor Leopold Konninger is permanently out of touch.

The Ambassador attempts to reach Doctor Leopold Konninger. The Ambassador says: Come back immediately. Stop fooling around.

status: Doctor Leopold Konninger does not answer his email. status: You might as well forget Doctor Leopold Konninger.

The Ambassador desperately needs to speak to Doctor Leopold Konninger. The Ambassador says: I really mean it. We need you. Stop this nonsense.

status: Doctor Leopold Konninger is occupied.
status: Doctor Leopold Konninger will not answer status: requests. status: Doctor Leopold Konninger wants you to know that he is really happy for the first time in his life watching the famous Russian ballet dancer Nikuko dancer solely for him in her beautiful tutu while he sits unclothed for the first time in his life at a small circular wooden table in a wooden chair watching her amazing cabrioles and entrechats.

550 <[redacted]>... No reply.

↑ Index

95. Charles Alexander

announcement

Thu 4 Nov 1999

---

chax press with thanks to Dinnerware Contemporary Art Gallery presents a POETRY READING by

Mong-Lan
Frances Shoberg
Sharon Preiss

Friday, November 5, 7 pm

at Dinnerware Contemporary Art Gallery
135 E. Congress Street, Tucson

MONG-LAN is a writer and visual artist. Her poems appear or are forthcoming in several prominent American literary publications, including The Kenyon Review, The Iowa Review, Seneca Review, Quarterly West, Manoa, Pleiades, Berkeley Poetry Review, and The Pushcart Prize XXIV Anthology.

FRANCES SHOBERG received a BA in Creative Writing from the University of Arizona. She has worked as an elementary school teacher in Mexico, a bartender, and a reporter for a construction news magazine. She currently works at the UA Poetry Center and serves as a member of the board of Kore Press. She is studying for a Master of Fine Arts degree at Warren Wilson College in Asheville, North Carolina. She is currently at work on a manuscript of poetry whose working title is "Quod me Nutrit, Me Destruit."

SHARON PREISS earned an MFA in Poetry and Lit at Bennington College's low-residency program. She has published poems and book reviews in Massachusetts Review, Pif Magazine, Stud Duck, The Tucson Weekly, and elsewhere. She was awarded a New York State Arts Decentralization Grant for the production of City Poems: an urban monologue, based on the chapbook of the same name. In the spring of 1999 she won first place at the Tucson Poet slam. Currently she teaches for Bennington College and UA Writing Works.

This reading occurs during the Dinnerware gallery exhibition of works by the artists Denise Kramer, Nadia Hlibka, Monique Mynlieff, and Gwyneth Scally. Chax Press is grateful to these artists not only for allowing, but for suggesting the possibility of this reading.

Chax Press is a nonprofit, 501c3 organization, currently celebrating its 15th year. Our mission is to publish innovative literature in book arts and trade editions, and to present public events that educate the public as to the nature and diversity of contemporary innovative writing and the book arts. Since 1985 in Tucson these events have included literary readings, talks by artists and writers, series of readings and talks, artists’ residencies, open studio events, and more.

This reading is free and open to the public; your donations to Chax Press are encouraged and gratefully received.

from "An Excess of Fact", by Frances Shoberg of time metered out of that not meant to be carried in memory of the brine that rends the awful flesh of the living the ecstasy of a monitor's keeping time an electrically charged life an amnesiac integrated into the stream of blood, nearly stagnant pooling behind trussed legs

  -- and O how you will the mind to be flesh

Coast (one section of a longer poem), by Mong-Lan

1 what are ten or a hundred years

the blink the wait

numb a nail diligent as wind scars tucked in your fists you cross
the etched palm of the Pacific

the ocean a letter written over the shore unread shred by waves

How I Spent My Summer Vacation, by Sharon Preiss
after Jimmy Schuyler's "The Morning of the Poem"

With the crisp sea breeze splashing endlessly about my face my feet the sand between my toes sometimes sizzling sometimes soothing the best being walks at midnight moon full of sand gleaming sand full of moon streaming across the silk of the still sleeping sea but this is all a lie a dream of course a pleasant one and one that would and does include you because always when there is the sea there is you (especially when the sea is that sandy hook of eastern Massachusetts where we've sucked the life out of lobster and morning and memory many a time).
If the truth be known and it will be for I am just about to tell it I did jack shit this summer which means nothing it means I did nothing such a strange expression and I am always fascinated about where such expressions come from and actually saw a fat reference book in a library once that explained the origin of such things and was such a gas I vowed someday to own my own copy but haven't yet even looked for it to buy anywhere or even looked for it in the library again to find out its name although I swear someday I will just like I swear someday

I will have that summer vacation with you like the one I just described and have actually had before but really miss and want to have again soon because number one I miss you and number two I miss the ocean these two things beyond measure and number three because I have been working so hard at things for the last few years and have been so broke for the last many years that the words summer and vacation mean jack shit to me but evoke some foggy gray memory of you and make me notice that my city seems rather like a ghost town this August Saturday my skin as luminous white as the belly of the frog I just saw dangerously hopping across Central Avenue a block away from the park.

↑ Index

96. Tom Beckett

Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.

Thu 4 Nov 1999

"Poets are unbearable to one another. You have to see them with other people to know what they're like."

Elias Canetti (from __Notes from Hampstead__)

↑ Index

97. Brent Long

Apollinaire/Hesse

Thu 4 Nov 1999

To all:

Wondering if anyone on the list knows whether or not Apollinaire and Hesse knew each other during their writing careers? I know Apollinaire was a bit older, but I also know their work shared some of the same time period, and both have been credited heavily for influencing many of the Beat poets. Is there anything which documents whether or not they knew one another? I spoke with Donald Revell last night (he translated Appolinaire's _Alcools_) and he thought not, but I'm trying to find out for sure...

Thanks in advance.

Brent Long

↑ Index

98. miekal and tendering opposition
Thu 4 Nov 1999

while I really dont have time to rehearse my answers to electronic nay-saying, I remain fascinated by the assumptions one has to make to tender opposition to electronic literature. without fail, I find that every arguement against emedia is easily turned on its head & can be applied to gutenberg's folly. & the irony being that this discussion would not be possible without using the internet.

billy mills wrote:

Just want to state my agreement with Tom Beckett on this. Internet and e-mail are emphatically _not_ democratic media. They are exclusionist. The poor are, as Tom notes, once again the excluded.

m and wrote:

I would agree that internet is not democratic, my experience of it & how Ive used it has been much more in the anarchist vein. I do a tremendous amount of networking, organizing, & distribution via the net. It is merely a tool, it is not an idle demon waiting to possess our souls or appropriate our sense of identity & culture. The internet is a very broadband, & just like small press & the zine revolution changes the ways we think about the printed word, it does it by existing in the margins/shadows of the Text of Capital. It is no different in electronic space, edges of opposition & otherness flourish outside the banner ads, the spam, the supermodel sperm for sale. But the assumption that books are anymore democratic is equally contestable. I havent been able to afford to buy books for years, if I have $20/month to spend, is it wiser to buy one book (or a part of a book) or buy a month of unlimited access where I can read 100s of texts, distribute my work, correspond with artists around the world, access information bases.... The nearest decent library is 100 miles away, I go there once every 3 months or so. Even this library which has a notoriously famous small press collection, probably only has titles by about 10% of the people on this list, yet on the internet thru online journals I can read a large percentage of poetic lists works. Spend a day at the EPC for beginners.

billy mills wrote:
In fact, those subcultural groups that have so enthusiastically embraced the e-zone seem to have suspended their reflective attitudes in general.

m and wrote: This one make me scratch my head, maybe there is something Im missing, but I fail to understand why reading a text on the printed page limits reflection. & in general a lot of netizens I know tend to print out texts which they wish to spend a lot of time with, because internet is easily extended to hard copy. The only difference at that point is a book is bound & a printout is looseleaf.

tom b wrote:

And the division between haves and have- nots is pretty much along class and racial lines.

m and wrote:

& the poetry world that Ive encountered in the last 20 years at book fairs, readings, exhibitions, has certainly been largely white & middle-class. But this is the midwest. Among the folks that I network with on the computer I would say more than 50% of them (& I network with 100s of folks) make less than $5000/year--live in squats or intentional communitys or are nomadic, are racially, sexually & politically diverse. But my experience of the net isnt typically thru academic channels.

steven ellis wrote:

I've always thought the smallness of poetry's audience was an advantage, in that it is fairly easy to get to know those with whom one may share certain affinities - those who read you, and/or who you read (locals!) - wch might then be the basis of a group whose inter-relationships would be something other than virtual and distant, and not so set on closing a gap that - with respect to getting and being together literally - doesn't really exist. In this, one ends up having the pleasure of actual co-conspirators with whom one may plot considerable intrigues with and/or insurrections against, one's own nation, town, neighborhood, relatives, fellow travelers, and self, this latter, cemented so completely into a perpetually "responsible" place, the one "position" one needs more literal help removing themselves from than any other.

m and wrote:

one of my main uses of internet is online realtime collaboration. Ive been creating works with folks in a dozen different countries whom most likely I will never meet, but yet we can discuss, create, share graphics, sounds, texts in a realtime environment (tho working with australians is a bit more difficult because of the time differences.) while the software which enables these conspiratory gatherings to take place is still in its infant stage, already a lot of work exists that would not have been possible 10 years ago. & likewise the smallness of the group is no different in electronic space, small, intimate, incestuous, ... just like small press.

Since Ive stepped up to the line to be the straw man, keep in mind that my position is not a one or the other. Text's territory is expanding whether you like it or not, whether you will participate or not. It has already happened & the book will forever feel the affects of digitality. Whether the relationship hard copy creates with e copy is good or bad is not interesting to me. How we make use of vast potential is.

o, & for the record, hits to a website are as meaningless as sales of poetry books. for almost any activity Ive engaged in I use the 1% rule, that 1 out of a 100 will find something I do interesting enough to respond directly. Always in any medium, that is what counts. Engaged.

mIEKAL

↑ Index

99. Robert Archambeau

Re: anyone know?

Thu 4 Nov 1999

Bill Fuller? You won't find him in a Chicago directory -- he lives in Winnetka (or was it Wilmette?)

R.A.

↑ Index

100. Tom Beckett

Bromige and the Provinces

Thu 4 Nov 1999

There is a well-known __New Yorker__magazine cover that depicts a bloated map of NYC in the foreground with the rest of the country attached as afterthought in the background. A similar psychogeography could be plotted from the perspective of the Bay Area or any so-called Cultural Center.

David, It is difficult to do innovative writing away from systems of support. It's also harder to find like-minded peers to jam with and react to. And, too, one's publishing options are apt to be more limited due to fewer networking opportunities. I'm painfully aware of these issues. I live them.

It's even harder though to read your last posting and not see in it an implicit note of condescension or cultural imperialism.

Those of us who reside "everyplace else" are continually reminded through the media and by our more sucessful colleagues of our second-class, outsider status. I can recite names, dates, places. I don't forget. And I don't like it.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

101. peter neufeld

New Chapbook from melodeon poetry systems

Thu 4 Nov 1999

We are pleased to announce the publication of:

David Buuck's _up the flagpoles_ this fall. This book is available for $6 ppd from the address listed below:

Peter Neufeld
3573 19th St.
San Francisco CA 94110.

Please make check payable to me.

Peter Neufeld.

=====

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

102. David Baratier

Re: Business, class, access

Thu 4 Nov 1999

David Baratier:
There are many publishers outside & on this list who do not >use the perpetual victim stance or "have not" status you are attributing

>to the lower classes

KL:
Question: How does bringing the power of analysis to bear on a situation, speaking out about it, and producing works in response to it constitute being a "victim"?

Answer:

Are you asserting that you are analyzing the situation? Throughout your posting you blame a social construct as a way to position yourself. The implication of--
"I get very tired of this because money does buy access: more time to write, money to publish one's own journals and books, which in turn increases both community as well as publishing opportunities for one's own work by increasing your 'profile' and 'reputation.'" ---is that your working class background does not allow you to go beyond the societal expectation inherent in class structure.

"Publication being determined partly by who you know" The implication that one cannot "know" anyone without ludicrous jacksons hits me as another oppressive class myth. I know a guy who was a steelworker when tri-quarterly published his first book. I know a guy who works in a cranberry bog for numerous months each year, who is well published & one of the latter half of this centuries best poets. And so on--

"There's a lack of access to the Internet, where one can hobnob with publishers and magazine editors" Yet another victim statement. Interested folks can go to the library for free, as mentioned.

While not all of these quotes are yours, Kathy, as you also say, "the quote from Bobbie implicates both Bobbie & myself, in a way laying things bare, and saying, yup this is how it works." My question is, in what way are you a reliable source for what occurs in the upper eschelons of poetry if you have never been there? I also add, as a person whose income is negligible, that I have not personally experienced the insinuated discrepancies described.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

103. Mark Melnicove
Poets in towers
Thu 4 Nov 1999

I'm trying to locate a book of lit crit about poets who lived/worked in towers. I saw it in a catalogue recently, but I can't remember where. The author was a woman, I think. Poets were Jeffers, Yeats, Rilke, and...(there was a fourth). Anyone know the book? Thanks, Mark Melnicove

↑ Index

104. Lowther, John the Rub
Thu 4 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

stephen ellis wrote;

to rub elbows, hips and foreheads, or play footsies with,
 those whose literal presence affords a simple and perpetual kind of "correction" against presuming an authority

this does feel like the excluded bounty the web-world ---- and watching squalls blow up on this list and others over and over i've thought that a table to sit around would change things so much for the better ---- perhaps more technology will help as we drift toward video phones and other shit of that sort ---- i don't really expect it to

during the 89 riots in kathmandu, on the first day, big groups* of students chanting "we want demo cracy" "we want demo cracy" (it means "down with the king") ---- the long arm winding up without reference to american baseball to chuck a brick at the line of soldiers ---- cheers ---- the soldiers charge i hide in camera and catch the charge rag tag and not very impressive if still dangerous and sort of pathetic stephen continues a bit later;

I've always thought the smallness of poetry's audience was an advantage, in that it is fairly easy to get to know those with whom one may share certain affinities

those who read you,
and/or who you read (locals!) - wch might then be the basis of a group

whose inter-relationships would be something other than virtual and distant, and not so set on closing a gap that - with respect to getting and being together literally - doesn't really exist.

sure. it's a new medium, or relatively new and in need of lots of things probably with all the conflicting needs it's being used for ---- and whoa ! 800 and some poets might be reading ? ---- not that i think so (hats off to lurkers and anyone who deletes me on sight) ---- maybe "restraint" isnt all it's cracked up to be, maybe the same is true of "reasonableness" ---- but given how hard it is to see the intent ---- how many times have we heard "well by yr tone" and been surprised at where that went, where you hadnt thought you'd been so i stood in the street and snapped pictures of the charge and much as it is when yr crossing a street with traffic coming you gauge the speed and all that and don't usually have doubts that you'll make it ---- cars speed up and such but these guys running in all their gear and those miserable boots PART OF THIS and for good reason, being mistaken for a Nepali student might have gotten me hurt and being so obviously NOT one and holding a camera created something of safe zone around me initially ---- no soldier (this 1st day certainly) wanted to be photographed whacking anyone with a club

i'm writing to an unfixed you out there and i can't see any of you ---- you might have as easily said this to me

mr. ellis again;

> [the] self, (. . .) > cemented so completely > into a perpetually > "responsible" place, the > one "position" one needs > more literal help > removing themselves from > than any other.

we like to be de-individuated on occasion ---- i blast loud music doing the housework i like the least ---- think about the zone when you cd dance all night ---- think about the crowds in the coliseum, maybe basketball ? maybe lions ?

why do people pay attention to violence ? i heard an answer recently "b/c it's evolutionarily adaptive to pay attention to violence, if yr not paying attention it's that much easier to get surrounded by it"

my friend randy remarked to me while we were watching the turnstile site http://stadiumweb.com/turnstile/turnstile_part2.html that there was all this SEX SEX SEX but where was the violence on the web, that given the continual pairing of these things in talk wdnt one suppose that there wd be a lot of violence on-line ? maybe there is ?

finally, either i cdnt resist or just wanted to be part of the mobs of students that were now harassing the soldiers from the side streets ---- they'd hide a block down and as the soldiers passed they'd creep down these narrow streets and rush out onto New Road and start shouting and throwing bricks and stones and then before the soldiers cd get into their line again for another charge, back down the sidestreet they'd run ---- i wanted to see that hidden scene wanted to creep up on the cops with them and see it from there so i ran with them, but i'd waited a bit too long and the tide had changed a bit and just as i was making to the backstreet where the students were laughing and jumping around the tear gas canisters started landing around us and everyone panic'd and ran everywhichaway knocking each other over and an old man in a topi fell in front of me and coughed and i helped him up and started to retch and i was hit on the back of my neck and shoulder by a brick and went down lost what air i had in my lungs and suddenly cdnt breathe either ----- a man stepped out of a house and picked up the old man again and took my arm and led us into his house closing the door behind us after i cd breath again they let me come upstairs to peek thru the shutters at the street (now THAT'S "audience")

the challenge is to allow people to become deindividuated but not lose the ability to distinguish and choose between things they'd never do and things they wd and we have this curious sense that on line we're both isolate individuals and part of a mob, able it seems to access the nastiest options of both conditions maybe if there was a table between them ?

a weekly get together with food, jokes, drinks and talk ?

anyway

)ohn

↑ Index

105. hassen

Re: Free Cuisinart

Thu 4 Nov 1999

Betsy Andrews:

> Can anyone give me a website address for Free Cuisinart?<<

did you find this yet?

http://www.ccofa.org/wowzine/wowzine.html

h

↑ Index

106. Poetics List Administration

Re: anyone know?

Thu 4 Nov 1999

--On Wednesday, November 03, 1999, 9:39 PM -0500 "L-Soft list server at University at Buffalo (1.8d)" <[redacted]> wrote:

This message was originally submitted by [redacted] to the POETICS list at LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU. You can approve it using the "OK" mechanism, ignore it, or repost an edited copy. The message will expire automatically and you do not need to do anything if you just want to discard it. Please refer to the list owner's guide if you are not familiar with the "OK" mechanism; these instructions are being kept purposefully short for your convenience in processing large numbers of messages.

by listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu with SMTP; 4 Nov 1999 02:39:08 -0000 id <19991104023906229 01oo0qke>; Thu, 4 Nov 1999 02:39:07 +0000 From: <[redacted]> To: "UB Poetics discussion group" <[redacted]> Subject: Re: anyone know? Date: Wed, 3 Nov 1999 18:39:01 -0800 how to reach bill fuller of chicago?

↑ Index

107. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Several Announcements
Thu 4 Nov 1999

On Thursday, November 11, Keith and Rosmarie Waldrop will be reading in Chicago at Columbia College at 5:30 pm.,Ferguson Theater, 600 S. Michigan.

On the same day, on Poetry Daily, Paul Hoover's "Canticus Narcissus" from his new and selected, TOTEM AND SHADOW (Talisman House), will be the featured poem.

↑ Index

108. Stephen Ellis
Re: tendering opposition
Thu 4 Nov 1999

I like the way you're thinking this out, or through. Nevertheless, there is some aspect of physicality, or presence, that's lacking in both internet and book media. A page is a page is a page, no matter how fast you can send it elsewhere. And in light of this speed, how, exactly, do we define "real time" - is it still "like" talking with someone? That "like" makes it all seem rather flat. Maybe it's my attitude that's flat, but it occurs to me to suggest that substance has to be in what's ON the page, not how quickly it can become globe-trotting "information". I mean, is poetry simply "information"? I recognize that it does "globe-trot", but does it have to formalized primarily in that aspect alone, bereft of whatever "world" ignited it? - S E

> From: miekal and <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: tendering opposition
> Date: Thu, 4 Nov 1999 09:07:42 -0600
>
> while I really dont have time to rehearse my answers to electronic nay-saying, I remain fascinated by the assumptions one has to make to tender opposition to electronic literature. without fail, I find that every arguement against emedia is easily turned on its head & can be applied to gutenberg's folly. & the irony being that this discussion

would not be possible without using the internet.

billy mills wrote:

Just want to state my agreement with Tom Beckett on this. Internet and e-mail are emphatically _not_ democratic media. They are exclusionist. The poor are, as Tom notes, once again the excluded.

m and wrote:

I would agree that internet is not democratic, my experience of it & how Ive used it has been much more in the anarchist vein. I do a tremendous amount of networking, organizing, & distribution via the net. It is merely a tool, it is not an idle demon waiting to possess our souls or appropriate our sense of identity & culture. The internet is a very broadband, & just like small press & the zine revolution changes the ways we think about the printed word, it does it by existing in the margins/shadows of the Text of Capital. It is no different in electronic space, edges of opposition & otherness flourish outside the banner ads, the spam, the supermodel sperm for sale. But the assumption that books are anymore democratic is equally contestable. I havent been able to afford to buy books for years, if I have $20/month to spend, is it wiser to buy one book (or a part of a book) or buy a month of unlimited access where I can read 100s of texts, distribute my work, correspond with artists around the world, access information bases.... The nearest decent library is 100 miles away, I go there once every 3 months or so. Even this library which has a notoriously famous small press collection, probably only has titles by about 10% of the people on this list, yet on the internet thru online journals I can read a large percentage of poetic lists works. Spend a day at the EPC for beginners.

billy mills wrote:
In fact, those subcultural groups that have so enthusiastically embraced the e-zone seem to have suspended their reflective attitudes in general.

m and wrote:
This one make me scratch my head, maybe there is something Im missing, but I fail to understand why reading a text on the printed page limits reflection. & in general a lot of netizens I know tend to print out texts which they wish to spend a lot of time with, because internet is easily extended to hard copy. The only difference at that point is a book is bound & a printout is looseleaf.

tom b wrote:

And the division between haves and have- nots is pretty much along class and racial lines.

m and wrote:

& the poetry world that Ive encountered in the last 20 years at book fairs, readings, exhibitions, has certainly been largely white & middle-class. But this is the midwest. Among the folks that I network with on the computer I would say more than 50% of them (& I network with 100s of folks) make less than $5000/year--live in squats or intentional communitys or are nomadic, are racially, sexually & politically diverse. But my experience of the net isnt typically thru academic channels.

steven ellis wrote:

I've always thought the smallness of poetry's audience was an advantage, in that it is fairly easy to get to know those with whom one may share certain affinities - those who read you, and/or who you read (locals!) - wch might then be the basis of a group whose inter-relationships would be something other than virtual and distant, and not so set on closing a gap that - with respect to getting and being together literally - doesn't really exist. In this, one ends up having the pleasure of actual co-conspirators with whom one may plot considerable intrigues with and/or insurrections against, one's own nation, town, neighborhood, relatives, fellow travelers, and self, this latter, cemented so completely into a perpetually "responsible" place, the one "position" one needs more literal help removing themselves from than any other.

m and wrote:

one of my main uses of internet is online realtime collaboration. Ive been creating works with folks in a dozen different countries whom most likely I will never meet, but yet we can discuss, create, share graphics, sounds, texts in a realtime environment (tho working with australians is a bit more difficult because of the time differences.) while the software which enables these conspiratory gatherings to take place is still in its infant stage, already a lot of work exists that > would not have been possible 10 years ago. & likewise the smallness of the group is no different in electronic space, small, intimate, incestuous, ... just like small press.

>
> Since Ive stepped up to the line to be the straw man, keep in mind that my position is not a one or the other. Text's territory is expanding whether you like it or not, whether you will participate or not. It has already happened & the book will forever feel the affects of digitality. Whether the relationship hard copy creates with e copy is good or bad is not interesting to me. How we make use of vast potential is.
>
> o, & for the record, hits to a website are as meaningless as sales of poetry books. for almost any activity Ive engaged in I use the 1% rule, that 1 out of a 100 will find something I do interesting enough to respond directly. Always in any medium, that is what counts. Engaged.
>
> mIEKAL

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

109. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: Poets in towers

Thu 4 Nov 1999

Don't know the fourth in this bridge set, but Pound was fond of calling Yeats' tower "Ballyphallus." He also pronounced his occult theory of the 28 cycles of the moon & human personality" "very very very bughouse." All to be found in Brenda Maddox's new bio of Yeats, _Yeats' Ghosts_.

Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

110. Safdie Joseph

Re: heraclitus

Thu 4 Nov 1999

Tony, I did as instructed, and, although I'm generally in favor of any scheme that would deflect the grasp of capitalism from our private lives, found the actual texts that were generated as a result less than interesting. Were you suggesting that they had any value in and of themselves?

Joe

---

the list may find this of interest: check it out

Tony Green

> looking up heraclitus on the Web, I found this, do you know it?
>
> www.die.net/noise/p/o/p/index.htm

↑ Index

111. pete spence

Re: internet costs

Thu 4 Nov 1999

>
seems fairly general here in publik libraries free internet access for cardholders, i remember a few years ago when i was in the art/festivals dept at the city of port phillip we really pushed this idea with their libraries and it seems to have gone out through the library system//pete

> I'll check out NZ public libraries & let you know the results
>
> best Tony Green
> -----Original Message-----
>
> re Miekal & Tom on costs -- I paid 2pounds sterling + 50 p for 1/2 hour in > a public library in London in October, 1 pound +50 p for 1/4 hr in a > cybercafe in London, & $39.95 NZ = about $20 US per month to run internet
> at > home
>
> Tony Green
>
> Tony
> thats sad, service here at our library in ocean grove australia is free as > long as you are a library card holder, the library card is free as long as > you are a resident in the area//pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

112. miekal and Re: Poets in towers
Thu 4 Nov 1999

[from a grant application to the wisconsin arts board last year]

In the tiny unincorporated town of West Lima, Wisconsin, Xexoxial Endarchy, Ltd. owns, among other propertieswhich serve as facilities for "Dreamtime Village" & other projects, a one-acre lot in the center of town which was historically the "town square." As a public art project Miekal And has began to design for this site The Driftless Grotto of West Lima, a village park environment that will be part fantasmagorical roadside attraction, picnic area, permaculture demonstration, sculpture garden, & shrine to the Driftless Region. Special features of the finished Grotto will include

1) A stone-pillared concrete & blue-glass bottle archway entrance;

2) Mosaiced fence around the perimeter of the square;

3) A 20 ft stacked blue glass bottle tower housing a Jules Verne-style "time machine" which will be operated by the movements of live birds inside an aviary;

4) Carved & painted remains of a dying 200 yr-old willow tree in the lot;

5) Flow-form water fountains & birdbaths & picnic benches; &

6) A web of tunnels inspired by & emanating from the extant remains on the lot of an old basement & a cistern which local folk tell us was literally the town watering-hole & weekly gathering place many years ago.

7) A bog garden of endemic carniverous pitcher plants.

THE DRIFTLESS GROTTO OF WEST LIMA
http://net22.com/dreamtime/grotto/index.html

↑ Index

113. Layne Russell a david page
Thu 4 Nov 1999

I've just updated some links on David Bromige's page.... (This was his bio/intro page for the Socopoet page...Socopoet has reincarnated as EssentialPoet on the Onelist site, and I am no longer list owner. Some of the Socopoet site remains; I will be dismantling it, however some pages will stay, including David's.)

http://www.sonic.net/layne/bromige.html

More David is on the web now; I added five links. I'll be adding more David photos too.

Nice to be back. I've been quiet for a long time.

Layne

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~
http://www.sonic.net/layne
a quiet place

↑ Index

114. pete spence
Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Thu 4 Nov 1999

> Billy Mills writes:
>
> Just want to state my agreement with Tom Beckett on this. Internet and e-mail are emphatically _not_ democratic media. They are exclusionist. The poor are, as Tom notes, once again the excluded.
>
> *The economic argument for computers as exclusionist IS GOING AWAY. It is melting away in front of our eyes.*
>
> ---
> Jim Rosenberg

i agree with both you and tom, jerome!! i think if you want to use the system and can't afford to you just click in your streetwise mode and find a way to do it.. re the typewriter the concrete poets would head for the op/shop to buy a cheap one because it had some nice type malfunctions so one for neat letters and one for a few poems you!! cost for what you want....one of the reasons we
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

took so long to get the web site up at the city of port phillip when i worked there was the very argument that not all the people living in the councils boundaries would have access, long meetings, we all agreed on the ethical base but in the end someone is always going to be excluded this is a problem but it didn't stop guttenburg and soon a lot more people learnt to read!!!!!pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

115. pete spence
Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Thu 4 Nov 1999

> "Poets are unbearable to one another. You have to see them with other people > to know what they're like."
>
> Elias Canetti (from __Notes from Hampstead__)

don't think amongst the 10,000 surfers here i got another poet around apart from my partner and our six year old son who does his poetry on his drum kit!!! i travel twice a year about two hundred kilometers down the coast to see one poet i get along with well, i dread going up to melbourne mixing with it!!but there was a time i enjoyed the whole messyness of it,,warm enough here now to takes some nice long walks along the coast//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

116. pete spence
Re: Bromige and the Provinces
Thu 4 Nov 1999

> Those of us who reside "everyplace else" are continually reminded through the > media and by our more sucessful colleagues of our second-class, outsider > status. I can recite names, dates, places. I don't forget. And I don't like > it.
>
> Tom Beckett

,,tom i just aren't into competitives when it comes to writing/making things, i'm absolutely happy if i have done something right to ever worry about will it be seen or will as many everybodies think i'm good at what i do,,,,pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

117. Safdie Joseph
Re: The body
Thu 4 Nov 1999

I'd like to combine two recent posts, this one from Tom Beckett

E-mail on listservs such as this functions like speech but without social context--speech divorced from body language, gesture, eyeblink , etc. Therein lies the nub of the problem for me. One comes to rely on strategic overstatement to make one's point, often generating overreaction in return.

I'm not a luddite. But every new technology brings a raft of new perils along with that paradigm shift. The shift away from the body--the immateriality of the new electronic media --seems like one of these to me.

and an earlier one from Jacques Debrot, in which he says (in part)

I am interested in articulating the problem of registering & mediating the body within artistic production--particularly as this was addressed by the New York Poets and by the Cage, Johns, Rauschenberg circle. Language Poetry, interestingly enough, begins as a reaction against the emphasis the New Americans had placed on the physical body in relation to the poetic line and moves instead, of course, toward a self-reflexive preoccupation with the mediation of inner experience by language. Watten explains this move away from the body as a response to the Vietnam conflict, "the era of napalm," etc. But the Language Poets' critique is aimed, not at the most "advanced" considerations of the body, but at Olson, who improperly essentialized the body as the ground & meaning of his work.

to ask some questions (some of which are left over from a similar discussion on another poetics list). I can attest to the fact that, at least around the early 1980s in the Bay Area, there was a definite disdain expressed about Olson's work and influence among the folks that have been subsequently identified as the progenitors (and yes there were women too!) of the LPs. What I'd like to know is: what does it mean to "improperly essentialize the body as the ground and meaning of [one's] work", and how and why did Olson do it? Are we talking here about the breath of "Projective Verse" or the verse itself? Jacques mentions some exceptions to this general trend (e.g. Leslie Scalapino), but is he in fact correct that the LPs as a whole were reacting against the New American emphasis on the physical body? If this is true (and accepting that dualism has placed its poisonous roots deep into most of our souls), doesn't it follow that if we don't essentialize the body we in fact wind up essentializing the mind? Isn't that the real cause of the "peril" that Tom mentions above? (One of my teachers was Norman O. Brown who, if I'm not mistaken, invented the term "polymorphous perversity" -- is such a desirable state really the result of this turn away from the body?) And finally, last Sunday's New York Times had an article on neo-paganism, which contained the seeminly inoccuous statement that members of the Wicca movement "regard nature itself as charged with divinity". Is this too "essentialism"?

Just wondering . . .

Joe

↑ Index

118. pete spence
Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Thu 4 Nov 1999

> E-mail on listservs such as this functions like speech but without social context--speech divorced from body language, gesture, eyeblink , etc.
>
> I'm not a luddite. But every new technology brings a raft of new perils along with that paradigm shift. The shift away from the body--the immateriality of the new electronic media --seems like one of these to me.
>
> Tom Beckett

why not keep all the tools you've gained and just add this system to them as a useful, don't need to be any more serious than that!!!pete

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

119. Tom Beckett
Re: (Technology) RE: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Thu 4 Nov 1999

Dean, et. al,

I think uncritical acceptance of any new technology--whether it be nuclear power, the latest class of organophosphate pesticides or the new electronic media--is nuts. Cyberspace is showing all the signs of becoming thoroughly corporatized and makes me very nervous. That you've heard this all before doesn't mean that it shouldn't be repeated often.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

120. Tony Green
Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Thu 4 Nov 1999

It's Hampstead that makes poets unbearable. They meet head on in cars at The Spaniards tooting their horns & shouting obscenities, because of the narrowing of the road. They really & truly crucify one another at Easter. Some have been found drowned in the White Stone Pond. Very young ones hallucinate. One of these even reported a hallucinated meeting with Sigmund Freud.

Anyone on this list knows that poets really get on together unusually well. Canetti's remark must surely be a very local reference.

Tony Green

From: Tom Beckett <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, 5 November 1999 11:13
Subject: Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.

>"Poets are unbearable to one another. You have to see them with other people >to know what they're like."
>
>Elias Canetti (from __Notes from Hampstead__)
>

↑ Index

121. miekal and oops Re: tendering opposition
Thu 4 Nov 1999

---

m and wrote: This one make me scratch my head, maybe there is something Im missing, but I fail to understand why reading a text on the printed page limits reflection.

should read:

This one make me scratch my head, maybe there is something Im missing, but I fail to understand why reading a text on the computer screen limits reflection.

↑ Index

122. Dean Taciuch
Re: (Technology) RE: miekal and dobyns and etc.
Thu 4 Nov 1999

> Dean, et. al,
>
> I think uncritical acceptance of any new technology--whether it be nuclear power, the latest class of organophosphate pesticides or the new electronic media--is nuts. Cyberspace is showing all the signs of becoming thoroughly corporatized and makes me very nervous. That you've heard this all before doesn't mean that it shouldn't be repeated often.
>
> Tom Beckett

Tom--I agree, actually. _Uncritical_ acceptance is dangerous. But that's not my position; I'm looking for ways in which this medium can be used differently (not necessarily the technology, but the tech _did_ make the medium more available).

Jim Rosenberg, who's already weighed in on this, is (for example) one to whom I'd point if asked for examples of artists using elctronic media in innovative ways--doing things which _are not possible_ in print.

This doesn't mean books are dead, nor that real world face-to-face communication is dead. It is emphatically _not_ an "either/or," but a "yes, and" situation. Most of the people on this list I have never had the chance to meet, and yet I can exchange ideas, opinions, etc. That doesn't mean I wouldn't speak to them in person.

--Dean

↑ Index

123. Michael Heller
Advertisments for self
Thu 4 Nov 1999

I'll be in the UK for the next two weeks, doing some readings. If you are in the vicinity, hope you'll drop by.

Schedule:

16 November in London: with David Bromige, in the Subvoicive Series, 8PM, Upstairs at the Three Cups, Sandland Street, London WC1.

19 November, Newcastle University, the Hatten Gallery 1 PM (Schwitters' MerzBarn next to the Gallery)

21 November, Cambridge, Churchill College, The Cockroft Room 2 PM

MH

↑ Index

124. Elizabeth Treadwell movie STARS
Thu 4 Nov 1999

Hi all,

Wanted to put a note here that we are especially interested in publishing some FILMIC work in this issue, aka movie reviews, filmic treatises, homages to Mae West, etc. Please b/c with queries.

Please remember our submission postmark period for this issue is Jan 1- Feb 15, '00. We promise to have replies for all parties by tax day, April 15.

And a thousand A+ stars to all who've ordered Outlet (4/5) Weathermap, which is still available and frankly, lovely and intelligent!!

Elizabeth

Don't forget Outlet's Stars issue -- details at http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy/page5.html

↑ Index

125. Elizabeth Treadwell
ps re movie STARS
Thu 4 Nov 1999

---

ps also of course, poems.

Outlet
c/o Double Lucy Books
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

126. Andrew John Miller
Re: Poets in towers
Thu 4 Nov 1999

Here's the relevant bibliographical information:

Theodore Ziolkowski, _The View from the Tower: Origins of an Antimodernist Image_ (Princeton: Princeton UP, 1998).

I found the book somewhat disappointing. Ziolkowski touches on an a array of interesting connections, but he doesn't provide much in the way of theorization or analysis. And, although the book contains some fascinating photographs and reproductions, they're all quite small, and they're all in low-quality black and white. In short, this book would have been best if it had been published as a coffee-table book filled with glossy pages and enormous colour photographs.

Best,
Andrew John Miller
[redacted]

On Thu, 04 Nov 1999 13:19:40 -0500, you wrote:

> I'm trying to locate a book of lit crit about poets who lived/worked in towers. I saw it in a catalogue recently, but I can't remember where. The author was a woman, I think. Poets were Jeffers, Yeats, Rilke, and…(there was a fourth). Anyone know the book?
> Thanks,
> Mark Melnicove

↑ Index

127. Loss Pequeño Glazier
Deluxe Rubber Chicken #4
Thu 4 Nov 1999

A note that Deluxe Rubber Chicken #4 is now available. Here are brief details:

> Announcing the fourth issue of Deluxe Rubber Chicken
>
> Featuring two major works:
>
> WISCONSIN by Sam Stark
>
> and
>
> WINDOWS by Ted Warnell

Now available at http://epc.buffalo.edu/ezines/deluxe/ or by clicking "New" at the EPC Home page http://epc.buffalo.edu

↑ Index

128. Alan Sondheim
AGENDA
Fri 5 Nov 1999

-

AGENDA

The Ambassador announces the Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country and the appointment of a member by THE PRESIDENT. THE PRESI- DENT acknowledges. The Ambassador announces the Report of an International Atomic Energy Agency. THE PRESIDENT nods his head.

Doctor Leopold Konninger is supposed to be chairing the meeting on Human Rights Questions, Including Alternative Approaches for Improving the Effective Enjoyment of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. Where is Doctor Leopold Konninger asks THE PRESIDENT and the Ambassador turns his head.

Doctor Leopold Konninger has drawn up the Vienna Accords in relation to their Comprehensive Implementation. The Ambassador eagerly awaits the Special Rapporteur on the Question of Torture and Human Rights in Afghan- istan. THE PRESIDENT goes to a closed meeting on the Rights of Peoples to Self-Determination and the approval of a draft pursuant to that effect.

Doctor Leopold Konninger, says the Ambassador, is worrisome these days. The Ambassador is in charge of Special Human Rights Violations in the United States of America. He is also the Special Rapporteur on the Sit- uation of Human Rights in the Sudan.

Doctor Leopold Konninger is considerably weakened; he has not eaten for several days, and promises not to eat for several days more. He is still naked and quite cold; he has eyes only for Nikuko, the beautiful Russian ballet dancer and her cabrioles. Nikuko is stunning in a lavender tutu and matching tights and slippers.

Doctor Leopold Konninger has killed many people. He watches Nikuko close- ly, his pince-nez back in place, his legs and lips slightly parted. For the past two days, he has not been able to think of death, nor his work promoting Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, particularly Those Countries South of the Standard Equatorial Zone. He believes he owns Nikuko, grown her like a plant or animal or human. He believes he has fed her body and thereby owns those transformations of her body pursuant to proper nourishment, Nikuko eating during her pirouettes, drinking during her entrechats.

Doctor Leopold Konninger cannot imagine speaking a single word. He cannot imagine anything. The Ambassador says to THE PRESIDENT, who has returned from his closed meeting, to the subject of Doctor Leopold Konninger, there no longer corresponds an object.

THE PRESIDENT nods. He and the Ambassador leave for the Meeting for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others. They pass by a door, imagining Doctor Leopold Konninger and Nikuko within. THE PRESIDENT says to the Ambassador, just as Doctor Leopold Konninger is a subject without a corresponding object, so does this meeting have an object without a corresponding subject.

Hit? n You have 19 Dealer has KC+AD+2D+TC = bust You win $2 Action $6 You're even New game 5C up 4D+5S Hit?

They are both thinking of Nikuko. They cannot imagine what is Nikuko's and what is not Nikuko's. Nikuko cannot imagine either. She is at the top of her form.

↑ Index

129. Leonard Brink
20% off at SPD
Fri 5 Nov 1999

Michael Palmer's _The Danish Notebook_ (Avec Books) is one of the new and featured non-fiction titles at SPD. Just mention the code WEB while ordering and you'll receive 20% off the list price of $9.95.

The featured titles discount changes every month, so this offer is only good for _The Danish Notebook_ until November 30th.

↑ Index

130. Mariah Corrigan
Simone Weil: the madness for truth
Fri 5 Nov 1999

"Attention is the rarest and purest form of generosity. It is given to very few minds to notice that things and beings exist. Since my childhood I have not wanted anything else but to receive the complete revelation of this before dying."—Simone Weil

Hello you all. To follow is something possibly of interest.....

SIMONE WEIL: The Madness for Truth
Columbia University’s French and Francophone Studies and Semiotext(e)
November 12th-14th
Maison Française: Buell Hall, Columbia University
Broadway at 116 Street. [redacted]

What can you say about one of the most brilliant philosophers of the 20th century who went around joining every revolution she could find, arguing with Trotsky and Bataille, mystifying Camus, espousing the merits of the ancient Greeks while wearing a burlap sack and ultimately starving herself to death?

Alot, apparently. Papers by Julia Kristeva, readings by writers Fanny Howe, Francine du Plessix-Gray, Chris Kraus, Eileen Myles and a presentation by Florence de Lussy—Head Curator at Paris' Bibliothèque Nationale; scripwriter/filmmaker Michael Tolkin; Bard College President Leon Botstein; Jewish specialists Michael Stanislawski, Jeffrey Mehlman and Sylvere Lotringer; Italian labor specialist Domenico Canciani; trade union organizer Catherine Cook; and French physicist Catherine Chevalley plus others. All accompanied by exhibit of SW's last notebooks.

Saturday November 13th, 7:00pm Galapagos: 70 North 6th Street, Williamsburg, [redacted]. Galapagos hosts an evening of Weil-inspired video/performances including a new video by Louise Bourgeois and introduced by Robert Storr, MoMA; performances by Penny Arcade on 'Simone's Sex,' Deb Margolin on 'Jewish Looks,' Sheree Rose on 'Acts of God,' plus the Mystery Meat Ensemble. MC'd by Jeffrey Jullich.

Questions? Please call the above number, or www.columbia.edu/cu/french/maison

"She proudly carried around her taste, or rather her madness for truth.
And if this is a privilege, it is of the kind that one pays dearly for all through one's life..." —Albert Camus

↑ Index

131. Jim Andrews
Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
Fri 5 Nov 1999

> Just want to state my agreement with Tom Beckett on this. Internet and e-mail are emphatically _not_ democratic media.

What medium is democratic? What is a democratic medium? Radio and newspapers I suppose are the closest to being available to all. But those are also media that are not particularly open to input.

> They are exclusionist. The poor are, as Tom notes, once again the excluded.

It's true that it does cost money to be on the Internet and to have a computer. And there are many countries, unlike just about all of Canada, where an Internet connection is not possible. And the United States does control the Internet. That needn't be the case, though, and if the Internet grows into a truly robust international communications channel, cannot remain so.

> Tom's point about electronic media militating against reflective habits of reading is also key. In fact, those subcultural groups that have so > enthusiastically embraced the e-zone seem to have suspended their reflective attitudes in general.

I don't understand your point about el. media militating against reflective habits at all, really. There is unmindfulness in most quarters, el. or not. I don't think it's a peculiarly el. phenomenon. And I have found that if you look hard on the Internet, you find many quarters that are simply brilliant and deeply reflective.

> Electronic commerce is the future of capitalism, and those websites devoted to such marginal activities as the publication of 'innovative' poetries will be just as marginal in the virtual world as existing small press publishers are in the real one.

Economically you mean? Perhaps. Although that remains to be seen. Artists have a key advantage in this medium in that they can make Web sites and communicate in this medium in a way that is not possible to most. And, as opposed to TV, film, radio, and newspapers, they usually have access to it both as readers and writers. It will be the artists, not the typical publishers and broadcasters, etc., who establish dynamite publishing houses in various media on an international basis.

> Don't kid yourselves. The revolution will not be netcast. Oh, and books are not about to die.

What revolution are you talking about? Liberty and justice and a PC and Internet connection on the desktop for all? No, I suppose it won't. But it does seem that there are some possibilities here for very widespread influence and action that should not be so lightly discounted by a reflective person like yourself. The trajectory is not so obviously a recapitulation of the status quo.

You are debunking the myths of the popular press, and I suppose they need debunking, but after debunking the inane, isn't a more considered criticism in order? And isn't that what you find here on this electronic list, for instance?

↑ Index

132. daniel bouchard
Re: Mass Ave
Fri 5 Nov 1999

Mass Ave is expired.

The editor's address has changed. You may still send correspondence, poems, essays, photographs of interest (or no interest), new books, old books, maps, catalogues, postcards, miscellaneous ephemera, or just a how-de-doo to: PO Box 390408, Cambridge, MA 02139.

There is no chance of publication but all contents will get attention.

At 07:24 PM 11/3/99 -0500, you wrote:
>I just tried to send work to Mass Ave using the address from the most >recent issue I've seen and it came back "address expired." Has the >address changed? Does someone have the new one? Perhaps the editor >himself, if he's on here?
>
>Backchannel, please.
>
>Thanks so much.
>
>Arielle
>
>
>
>*******
>"I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but >time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I >describe." -- Ray Johnson
>
<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
  fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

133. Jordan Davis
Re: Poets in towers
Fri 5 Nov 1999

---

the book on the (quasi?-)modernists who lived in towers was reviewed in the TLS sometime in the last year -- R Jeffers' california home was on the cover -- JD

From: Pritchett,Patrick @Silverplume <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, November 04, 1999 6:19 PM
Subject: Re: Poets in towers

> Don't know the fourth in this bridge set, but Pound was fond of calling > Yeats' tower "Ballyphallus." He also pronounced his occult theory of the 28 > cycles of the moon & human personality" "very very very bughouse." All to be > found in Brenda Maddox's new bio of Yeats, _Yeats' Ghosts_.
>
> Patrick Pritchett
>

↑ Index

134. Katherine Lederer
DH, NYC: Giraud and Lubasch this Saturday
Fri 5 Nov 1999

Segue @ Double Happiness

Saturdays from 4:00 to 6:00 pm.
Double Happiness is located at 173 Mott Street, just south of Broome.
A 4$ contribution goes to the readers.

November 6: Eric Giraud, Lisa Lubasch

Eric Giraud was born in 1966. He lives in Marseille and has published a chapbook (Cliches). marcel, a full-length work, is to be published this year. He translates American and English poetry with Holly Dye.

Lisa Lubasch's first book of poems How Many More of Them Are You? is just out from Avec Books. Her work has appeared or is forthcoming in An Avec Sampler 2, Boulevard, Explosive, The Hat, Fence, Volt, and elsewhere.

↑ Index

135. Grant Jenkins
The Use of This Listserv
Fri 5 Nov 1999

With all of this discussion about the nature of the internet and its relation to poetry, I'm wondering why we use this listserv mostly for debates and advertisement.

I think most of us would agree that collaboration and community are what make the poetry we are interested in different. Aren't we supposed to be a group of poets and people interested in poetics (poeticists?)? Then why don't we use this listserv for more creative purposes?

Does anyone remember the renga that was spontaneously composed on this listserv around the death of Ginsberg? Why don't we do more of that?

Anyone interested?

grant j
virginia

↑ Index

136. Joe Amato
polarizing the web...
Fri 5 Nov 1999

---

i think some of us on this list probably weary of the "access" question not b/c the entire planet is actually online (as kathy lou's stat post indicates, it's not), and not b/c there is nothing problematic about the online world (as miekal suggests, there are problems), and not b/c we believe we writers/artists need all the help we can get (albeit many of us DO think this---which is the upshot, i think, of introducing the typewriter as artifact into the discussion, as jim rosenberg has done)...

this question of access will continue to haunt the online world for sometime to come... but if the digital world is not reducible to binaries, neither is this question of access... ergo many of us would like to see the question of access modified some to account for the changes of the last decade... some of the very first exchanges i had online, c. 1991, concerned the issue of access... and the past eight years have seen, it's fair to say, an entirely unanticipated expansion of these spaces -- granted, primarily in the industrialized nations (said expansion not w/o, to be sure, a disturbingly corporate, if (as tom beckett indicates) incorporeal, presence... which latter topoi have, of course, been the subject of a flood of articles, essays, books, etc.)...

yes, the online world was for so long almost exclusively white male... i don't think one can make the latter claim anymore -- times are changing (albeit similar claims may be made, corresponding to kathy lou's global stats)... but in fact, there is some (customary, in fact) danger even in my saying that the online world "was for so long exclusively white male"... of course i don't wish to deny that the majority body count, as well as prevailing perception of same, has been white male, esp. prior to this decade -- but this does little to explain the early presence, e.g., of native/indigenous peoples on the web...

do any of you know art mcgee?... art has for years now documented (in my view, heroically) the presence of minority-ethnic groups in the online world... a small presence perhaps in terms of overall percentages, but a vital, even catalytic presence in terms of imagining the digital world as a site of possible social transformation... interesting that so many of these groups, having been disenfranchised for so long in ftf culture, saw the potential of the web and the internet immediamente, hence migrated into these spaces long before (i would say) many of the poets on this list got their feet wet with modems and the like... and they did so, not surprisingly, with limited resources---which is to say, in the face of significant (social and material) resistance...

that history has yet to be written, but when it IS written, it'll be an eye opener, i'm certain of it...

in any case, let me return to my first para: if we writers need all the help we can get (imho), then should be using all the media at our disposal... which is another way of asserting the following re new media: their disposition is not a foregone conclusion... and it's not a matter of being a luddite or a technophile, either... it's a matter of using these media to (it is to be hoped) constructive ends, while remaining critical (as opposed to merely skeptical) of the larger issues that surface in the midst of such technologies... i think it's wise, that is, to use these media to critique these media---but critique is not simple skepticism, it requires something more than the observation that 'not everyone is online'... it entails at least some sense of the subtleties at work around here... if i were to claim that the u.s. public domain revealed a predominantly and oppressively white male view of the world c. 1945, few would argue with me (i think, i hope)... but if i were to claim that the u.s. public domain c. 1945 was exclusively white male---i.e., de facto---well i would HOPE someone would argue with me, would draw out the subterranean complexities buried under such an assertion, and point out the vital presence of non-white-male discourse, however illegible from more mainstream perspectives...

i trust i'm making some sense here... in effect i'm asking (as it were) for a more nuanced discussion of what's going down when we all get together online... when you correlate (e.g.) the rise of electronic media with an increasingly mobile workforce, the result is a matter neither of sheer "negatives" nor of sheer "positives" --- similarly (if i may), that i might not ultimately be placed in the earth alongside my folks in syracuse, ny, is a matter, for me, of no simple social-material equation... hence the kind of anti-digital nostalgia i hear regularly in folks like sven birkerts bugs me (to say the least), esp. as (from a non-white male pov, if this isn't too much of a presumption on my part) the world of 80 or 90 years ago leaves SO MUCH to be desired, both spiritually and materially... not that anyone around here is a fan of birkerts, but---

best,

joe

↑ Index

137. Eric Gelsinger

Octavio Paz

Fri 5 Nov 1999

Poetry Lovers Denied Access as Octavio Paz's memory is institutionalized

Sunday, October 24, American poetry and the memory of Octavio Paz were betrayed as the public was denied access to a gala reading in tribute to the late Nobelist. To organize the event, The Mexican Cultural Institute of Washington, DC and New York and the Metropolitan Museum of Art collaborated with some of America's most prestigious cultural institutions: The Academy of American Poets, the Poetry Society of America (PSA) and others. Readers included U.S. Poet Laureate Robert Pinsky, Pulitzer Prize winner Mark Strand, John Kenneth Galbraith, Paz's primary translator, Eliot Weinberger, as well as other luminaries. Sure to be a popular event, it was advertised as a public affair in publications such as the Village Voice. The ads included a phone number and stated tickets (free) were to be distributed between 5-6 p.m. at the Met. Those calling the number to reserve tickets were told tickets could not be reserved and that reservations were unnecessary -- plenty would be available. I arrived at 4:55pm and joined a line of about 200 strong. Through the course of the hour, that number grew to over 500. People had come in from all parts of the city and outside New York. We waited in the blustery cold and received encouragement as late as 5:30 p.m. when a man announced that those already holding tickets should form a separate line; those without tickets should continue waiting. Those who waited in the small ticket-holding line of a couple dozen seemed to be characterized by thousand dollar suits or fashionable scarves. At approximately 6:00pm, the ticket-holding line was admitted. As soon as they were inside, the guards announced there were no more tickets. At no point as we were waiting (in the cold) were we told we may not get tickets; in fact, the opposite was indicated. After 25 minutes of protest, and after being told dozens of times that no more tickets were available, a small number of us (3 dozen or so) were allowed in and given tickets; ostensibly, we had made an ugly enough scene to warrant placation by the never-ugly Metropolitan. But only by pushing myself through guards and running up the escalator did I gain ingress. Once inside, I was struck by dozens of scattered but definitely empty seats. I entered the auditorium just as the director of the museum alluded to the unfortunate incident outside, which, he quipped, was due to the way Paz was fervently revered by so many. The audience chuckled as a wide and unmistakably supercilious smile spread across the director's face. Robert Pinsky, the master of ceremonies, made no allusion to what had happened. However, Mr. Pinsky was [indeed] aware of what had happened. I spoke to him for 5-10 minutes after the program, when he hastily expressed his regret but assured me I had no idea how busy and ill-equipped he was. With a great big smile, he averred he had no more control over the situation than I did. The day after the event, I contacted Monica Delatorre at the Mexican Cultural Institute at New York. Granted tickets were 400 guests and friends of the readers, sponsors, and staff of the sponsoring organizations such as the PSA, she explained. And although the Mexican Cultural Institute was aware the Grace Rainey Rogers Auditorium could hold only 800, but did not expect such a large crowd. As to why people waiting in line were not warned, she could only answer that the Metropolitan was responsible for actually handing out the tickets. Where her reports conflicted with my experience was in the number of free tickets given. She had heard 400 were given away. In my estimation no more than 50 of us were granted entrance, and we only received tickets after being told no tickets were available.

Within the closed walls of the Museum auditorium Sunday evening, the event was a pleasure. But outside, it was a disgrace. It was an embarrassment to the cultural and poetry institutions, which reinforced that they are indeed institutions, nearly impregnable. For any poetry event, the circumstances surrounding the reading would have been intolerable. For this event in particular, they are unforgivable. Octavio Paz, who emphasized openness in so much of his work (and this emphasis was noted by the majority of the readers on Sunday) would have been saddened and angered to know hundreds of people were turned away from his supposedly public tribute. Compounding the hateful irony, Sunday's event seemed to demonstrate a dangerous political condition which Paz rebelled against: the intellectual elite's alliance with the social and economic elite. Paz's memory belongs to all who read and admired him. The exclusionist organizers of the event monopolized the honoring of his memory and dispensed it as a privilege -- granted to those with the right connections, large bank accounts, and Ph.Ds. In so doing, they desecrated his memory, which many turned away hold sacred. Last November, the PSA, a co-sponsor of the reading, held a weeklong program to discuss poetry's role in America. Hosting the program, as he hosted Sunday's tribute, was Robert Pinsky. The most obvious questions raised, and the ones most lengthily addressed, were why America is so cold towards poetry and what can be done to improve the deteriorating relationship between the public and the poetry. Although no one could offer a definitive solution to America's poetry crisis that weekend, no one suggested teasing our nation's cultural capital with a knockout reading and then denying access. Mr. Pinsky's role, however passive, is especially disturbing. By participating in the closed-door ceremonies, he acted as an inheritor of some hierarchical academic pedigree rather than as a democratic spokesman, embodying and facilitating the confluence of poetry and the public. As a friend pointed out to me, poetry has chronically suffered because it is considered a high art - property of a moribund aristocracy.

Pinsky's job is to defy this qualification by bringing poetry to the people (he has tried to do so with programs like the favorite poem project). But as he acts antithetically to this purpose, academic poetry becomes more dependent on an increasingly uninterested patron elite. If an organization wants to hold an exclusive celebration for Octavio Paz that right is guaranteed. However, such a reading would not honor the spirit of Paz and should in no way claim to represent him in any official capacity. This reading, widely advertised, was clearly intended as just such an official tribute. For that reason, the city of New York - and on a much grander scale, the United States and Mexico, must acknowledge that this reading did not represent Octavio Paz or those who truly honor him. If the historical record reflects the identification of Paz with this reading, it will reflect an identification of Paz with exclusivity, thus perverting his memory by allying him with what he combated, through his work and through his art, all his life.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

138. Brian Lennon

Technology / the body/ immateriality

Fri 5 Nov 1999

For the most floridly morbid expressions of the idea that telecommunications media "dematerialize" the human body, see the pessimistic simulation theory of Jean Baudrillard, Paul Virilio, some of Fredric Jameson. There's lots of interesting, and not necessarily even new thinking, though, that challenges this: e.g., the socialist feminism of Donna Haraway. Haraway's work always reminds me that no matter how tempting it may be to say that I'm "dematerialized" in the act of speaking onto this List, my actual body is still sitting right here in the chair, typing--- it hasn't gone anywhere.

I'd think "poets" would find it easier to remember this than "theorists," if only because being a poet, whether inside or outside the academy (at least in the U.S.), always involves an embattled relationship to practice--- the labor of poiesis, making, which is always manual labor even if it uses a word processor.

As for the corporatization of Internet: only Utopians ever believed it wouldn't happen. Only pessimists believe that it can ever be complete. Internet is at once an instrument of world domination, and and an instrument of resistance to that domination.

Tom Beckett wrote:

> The shift away from the body--the immateriality of the new electronic media --seems like one of these to me.

↑ Index

139. Brian Lennon
L-poets and the body
Fri 5 Nov 1999

Joe,

If L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E-affiliated poets insisted on some shift of emphasis away from bodily or phonic presence, I'd say they did so more under the influence of French (Derridean) deconstruction---which still always requires the "creative" manual labor of writing--- than of American (de Manian) deconstruction, which is primarily negative/destructive of writing. In the context of U.S. poetries alone, the L-affiliated poets were unquestionably negative of "voice" and the body; but measured against the nihilism of someone like Jean Baudrillard they hardly seem primarily negative. They still believed in agency, though not the agency of the Romantic lyric subject. It's not a matter of flipping from one dualistic term to the other, but rather of reconceptualizing the dualism--- never entirely successfully, it's true: but then I don't think many of these poets saw themselves as the end of the line. I'd guess they saw themselves mainly as making an intervention, which would take (and has taken) its place in a spectrum of different conversations.

Brian Lennon

From: Safdie Joseph <[redacted]>

>Jacques mentions some exceptions to this general trend (e.g.
>Leslie Scalapino), but is he in fact correct that the LPs as a whole were >reacting against the New American emphasis on the physical body? If this is >true (and accepting that dualism has placed its poisonous roots deep into >most of our souls), doesn't it follow that if we don't essentialize the body >we in fact wind up essentializing the mind? Isn't that the real cause of the
>"peril" that Tom mentions above?

↑ Index

140. Mark Prejsnar
the Luddites weren't Luddites
Fri 5 Nov 1999

" I'm not a luddite. But every new technology brings a raft of new perils"

Actually, the Luddites weren't Luddites either. As E.P. Thompson stresses in The Making of English Working Class, the demonstrations and attacks and occupations, carried out under the banner of fictitious "leaders" like Ned Ludd and Captain Swing were not anti-technology (..it's a complex issue, and you can certainly read certain aspects of what they did as leaning in an anti-tech direction, but....); it appears that they were more about wanting control over work, and in opposition to unemployment, and the degradation of conditions and wages, which were associated of course with the spread of looms and steam power, etc.

On Wed, 3 Nov 1999, Tom Beckett wrote:

> E-mail on listservs such as this functions like speech but without social context--speech divorced from body language, gesture, eyeblink , etc. Therein lies the nub of the problem for me. One comes to rely on strategic overstatement to make one's point, often generating overreaction in return.
>
> along with that paradigm shift. The shift away from the body--the immateriality of the new electronic media --seems like one of these to me.
>
> Tom Beckett

↑ Index

141. Mark Prejsnar
a Larry Eigner poem, for Jacques Debrot
Fri 5 Nov 1999

a Larry Eigner poem, for Jacques Debrot

(from page 30 of: Waters / Places / A Time (Black Sparrow Press, 1983)

you never know what is the group
what picks it up

↑ Index

142. Karen Kelley
Need Henry Gould's email address
Fri 5 Nov 1999

Backchannel please.

↑ Index

143. kathylou
Re: Business, class, access (fwd)
Fri 5 Nov 1999

From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Business, class, access
Date: Fri, 05 Nov 1999 18:55:29 +0000

Again, this response brings with it a massive load of assumptions about me and where I have and haven't been.
And you are simply kidding yourself if you think that class has nothing to do with access to time to write,
educational opportunities, access to literary communities,
access to the Internet, access to publications and being published, time to read, money to buy books, money to publish books, etc.
Hurray for the steelworker who published a book. What does this prove? Is this the exception to the rule?
And why is it that when folks speak up about class in poetry communities they are immediately accussed of being
"victims" "whiners" etc.? Is this how you respond to racism? Or does racism exist, and classism doesn't? Get real.
Kathy Lou
> David Baratier:
> There are many publishers outside & on this list who do not > >use the perpetual victim stance or "have not" status you are > attributing
> >to the lower classes
>
> KL:
> Question: How does bringing the power of analysis to bear on a > situation, > speaking out about it, and producing works in response to it constitute > being a "victim"?
>
> Answer:
>
> Are you asserting that you are analyzing the situation? Throughout your > posting you blame a social construct as a way to position yourself. The > implication of-- "I get very tired of this because money does buy > access: more time to write, money to publish one's own journals and > books, which in turn increases both community as well as publishing > opportunities for one's own work by increasing your 'profile' and > 'reputation.'" ---is that your working class background does not allow > you to go beyond the societal expectation inherent in class structure.

>
> "Publication being determined partly by who you know" The implication > that one cannot "know" anyone without ludicrous jacksons hits me as > another oppressive class myth. I know a guy who was a steelworker when > tri-quarterly published his first book. I know a guy who works in a > cranberry bog for numerous months each year, who is well published & one > of the latter half of this centuries best poets. And so on--
>
> "There's a lack of access to the Internet, where one can hobnob with > publishers and magazine editors" Yet another victim statement.
> Interested folks can go to the library for free, as mentioned.
>
> While not all of these quotes are yours, Kathy, as you also say, "the > quote from Bobbie implicates both Bobbie & myself, in a way laying > things bare, and saying, yup this is how it works." My question is, in > what way are you a reliable source for what occurs in the upper > eschelons of poetry if you have never been there? I also add, as a > person whose income is negligible, that I have not personally > experienced the insinuated discrepancies described.
>
> Be well
>
> David Baratier

↑ Index

144. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: miekal and dobyns and etc.

Fri 5 Nov 1999

This argument about the democracy or undemocracy of the internet is getting ridiculous since every participant to the argument has, obviously, access to the internet. Here again is a process which excludes, by definition, the very people in whose interest it is ostensibly being conducted.

Or is this ongoing debate a virtual version of caring for others (virtual love, virtual sex, virtual social conscience) essentially for the benefit of the participants.

I do not quite know the difference between a virtual page and a page of a book, but the difference between virtual love, virtual sex, virtual conscience, and the other kind are quite clear to me.

Murat

↑ Index

145. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

query

Fri 5 Nov 1999

---

dear List:

Truly wanting to use the list to co-respond with others--I posted a question teh last week. "What do you consider to be the first American (of the U.S.) poem"? I did not receive one reply to my posting. THIS is why the list--for me--is becoming eavedropping....! I check in this a.m. to find 37 posting--many with direct responses--seeming privte--to others--complete with Daer John: here's the bla bla bla you requested...". Perhaps teh list has changed and I should be off--but again--I'm hopeful the list could serve as other than dialogues between the few. So--my query?

thanks--
Todd Baron
ReMap

ps: the question is Before Whitman and Dickinson... Before Bradstreet...? In English.

↑ Index

146. R M Daley

Re: movie STARS

Fri 5 Nov 1999

---

hi all

1)

reminding: BAY AREA ULTRAEVENT
Friday nov 12 1999
ATA, 992 Valencia at 21st
SF, CA

8pm BE THERE OR BE SQUARE only $3 for movies music readings and beer

On Thu, 4 Nov
1999, Elizabeth Treadwell wrote:

> Hi all,
>
> Wanted to put a note here that we are especially interested in publishing some FILMIC work in this issue, aka movie reviews, filmic treatises, homages to Mae West, etc. Please b/c with queries.

...wanted to frontchannel with emphasis, ET et all, as to the ability to see us in action!
ATA 992 Valencia SF CA 8pm Nov. 12 Friday 1999
good luck ET!

TheLightsAreOut

↑ Index

147. Tony Green
Re: heraclitus
Fri 5 Nov 1999

Hi Joseph -- I wasnt suggesting anything about The Value. I was expecting something other than what was there. I liked the surprise of the unheralded insertion into netspace of this text, which looks as if it were chance-generated or systematic cut-up. I thought others might enjoy same.

best Tony

-- may I forward your reply to Alan Loney?

From: Safdie Joseph <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Saturday, 6 November 1999 04:10
Subject: Re: heraclitus

> Tony, I did as instructed, and, although I'm generally in favor of any scheme that would deflect the grasp of capitalism from our private lives, found the actual texts that were generated as a result less than interesting. Were you suggesting that they had any value in and of themselves?
>
> Joe
>
> ---
>
> the list may find this of interest: check it out
>
> Tony Green
>
> looking up heraclitus on the Web, I found this, do > you know it?

>
> www.die.net/noise/p/o/p/index.htm

↑ Index

148. Poetry Project
next week at the Poetry Project
Fri 5 Nov 1999

Monday, November 8th

at 8 pm

a reading by Denver Butson & Jorge Clar

Denver Butson is the author of triptych, a selection of poems from three manuscripts: alarm clock alibies, the drowning ghazals, and remote and mocking sky (Commoner Press, 1999). Jorge Clar's reading/performances include Linda Evangelista in Love, Life on Earth, and Gardens.

Wednesday, November 10th

at 8 pm

a reading by Kenneth Koch & Jordan Davis

Kenneth Koch is one of the original New York School poets, along with John Ashbery and Frank O'Hara. He is the author of Straits, Making Your Own Days: The Pleasures of Reading and Writing Poetry (for which Jordan Davis, a former student of Koch's, was Koch's editorial assistant) and On the Great Atlantic Rainway: Selected Poems, for which he was awarded the Bollingen Prize for Poetry. A new book of poems, New Addresses, will be published by Knopf in May. Jordan Davis is the author of, most recently, Poem on a Train (Barque Books), and a Little Golden Book. He is an editor of the literary journal, The Hat, and an organizer of the Poetry City reading series at Teachers & Writers. This will be the first time that Davis and Koch read together.

Friday, November 12th

at 10:30 pm

A reading for Latin Lovers

an anthology of gay men writing about their gay loves just published by Painted Leaf Press. Readers include: Erasmo Guerra, Jaime Manrique, Guillermo Castro, Regie Cabico, David Garnes, and Tim Driscoll.

All readings are $7 for nonmembers, $4 for students and seniors Readings are wheelchair-accessible with advance notice. Call [redacted] for more information.

 If you would like to be removed from this e-mail list, respond with the message "please remove me" and we will be certain to do so. ***

↑ Index

149. Peter Fogarty
Re: internet costs
Fri 5 Nov 1999

Seeing as Tony Green hasn't returned on the library tip, I must say that the libraries here are terrible. You can use the university library but you must be a student to borrow books. I never could stay very long in this library [I lie, the last few days I have spent all day at a desk in there, but with nary a glance at the shelves] because it has a very orthodox selection of work; most of my favourite writers have but a token presence. The city library in Auckland, Wellington and Christchurch are both free and both charge for new books. There is no public free internet. It's much cheaper to have your own connection than to use the cybercafes. University net time is very cheap also, but ohhhh so slow!

On the poets tip. I have to say I can't really stand other poet's poems, and often the poets themselves. It's their earnest belief that they've produced work that has importance, it's their categorization of themselves as a poet. I'm in denial, I can't stand my own work which is why it stays where it is, locked within a folder on my hd. Perhaps you might enjoy it, perhaps not. I am more interested in the poetics of people's poetry; the reasons why, the explanations, interpretations and thoughtpaths. These are infinitely more interesting than the same set of marks on a page that never change. Er! I must run for that bus!

Best regards
Peter

↑ Index

150. Kyle Conner
HIGHWIRE READING
Fri 5 Nov 1999

****

HIGHWIRE GALLERY READING SERIES
129 N. 2ND STREET, PHILADELPHIA

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1999
3 PM
BYOB

John Colleti and Heather Starr

Following the reading, follow your leaders Kyle and Greg to Anthony's Olde City Pub for some only-in-Philly rot-gut. At 7:30 PM we'll all got to Giovanni's Room. C.A. Conrad will host a group reading to celebrate the publication of the Exquisite Corpse anthology published this year by Black Sparrow.

John Colleti is a totally righteous dude. He is art director for Nylon Designs and is currently collaborating on a series of plays.

Splayed Subtext

Rendezvous 8th AVenue Nite Aid Hot Roles
Farsighted Where Minds Play Wild Discovery
Don't Throw Your Life Away Phoenix House
Nearsighted La Nueva MEGA Know How Many Days Are Left A Story Inside Every Jacket
Rockaway Call Us? We Can Help/Sponsored By
Air France 6 AV New Jersey Rocking Rollers
Daily News Television Helping To END TV
At CUNY Open 24 Hours Subway Maps IPO
To Fetch Banana Republic Record Stores Wild
Discovery Of The Modern Are From The WINE
STOP To Street The Siege The New York Eye &
Infirmary Circuit Avenue Home? Whatever
It's In L O O T

Heather Starr is Program Manager for the Writer's House. She's given tons of props to the Philadelphia poetry scene, so don't be lazy, come out and support Heather.

This Bow and Arrow

cast a shadow. ribs of color.
all i noticed was the curve.
worn white stones. constant drifting.
not target, and no open field in between.
can you shoot an arrow safely over seas? strange weaving of arms.
a young man from Ottawa, his face turned.
a plank to water the island
of irises. here, let's go back to town.
we've been walking so long with our hands full.

↑ Index

151. Richard Dillon

Re: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.

Fri 5 Nov 1999

Justice, as the result of some implicit intellectual formula in this domain of poetry, seems the result of making everything and everyone the SAME.

Once HUD insists that eveveryonnee can have the SAME house that you and you have sweated afforded, then your book published by Henry Regenery and your book published by USPS art EQUAL.

(I doubt you, Chris, will publish this post.)

The fate of Virtu in Poetry lies in the out and out war between Karl Marx or the people who now manage the Panama Canal, those who would make all the SAME and the other team, say, The JoHn BiRcH SoCiEtY, the DIFFERENT,
the people who envisioned/constructed the Panama Canal.
>From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
>Date: Fri, Nov 5, 1999, 4:13 AM
>

> Just want to state my agreement with Tom Beckett on this. Internet and > e-mail are emphatically _not_ democratic media.
>
> What medium is democratic? What is a democratic medium? Radio and newspapers I > suppose are the closest to being available to all. But those are also media that > are not particularly open to input.
>
> They are exclusionist. The > poor are, as Tom notes, once again the excluded.
>
> It's true that it does cost money to be on the Internet and to have a computer.
> And there are many countries, unlike just about all of Canada, where an Internet > connection is not possible. And the United States does control the Internet. That > needn't be the case, though, and if the Internet grows into a truly robust > international communications channel, cannot remain so.
>
> Tom's point about electronic media militating against reflective habits of > reading is also key. In fact, those subcultural groups that have so > enthusiastically embraced the e-zone seem to have suspended their reflective > attitudes in general.

> I don't understand your point about el. media militating against reflective habits at all, really. There is unmindfulness in most quarters, el. or not. I don't think it's a peculiarly el. phenomenon. And I have found that if you look hard on the Internet, you find many quarters that are simply brilliant and deeply reflective.
>
> Electronic commerce is the future of capitalism, and those websites devoted to such marginal activities as the publication of 'innovative' poetries will be just as marginal in the virtual world as existing small press publishers are in the real one.
>
> Economically you mean? Perhaps. Although that remains to be seen. Artists have a key advantage in this medium in that they can make Web sites and communicate in this medium in a way that is not possible to most. And, as opposed to TV, film, radio, and newspapers, they usually have access to it both as readers and writers. It will be the artists, not the typical publishers and broadcasters, etc., who establish dynamite publishing houses in various media on an international basis.
>
> Don't kid yourselves. The revolution will not be netcast. Oh, and books are not about to die.
>
> What revolution are you talking about? Liberty and justice and a PC and Internet connection on the desktop for all? No, I suppose it won't. But it does seem that there are some possibilities here for very widespread influence and action that should not be so lightly discounted by a reflective person like yourself. The trajectory is not so obviously a recapitulation of the status quo.
>
> You are debunking the myths of the popular press, and I suppose they need debunking, but after debunking the inane, isn't a more considered criticism in order? And isn't that what you find here on this electronic list, for instance?

↑ Index

152. K.Angelo Hehir

phonaesthetic

Fri 5 Nov 1999

---

fellow travellers,

i'm doing some work on the acoustic hermeneutic. i've been pouring over linguistics and psychology journals and find sentiments like the following quotation displays common: "The phonaesthetic properties of words have been used extensively by poets but we will not be concerned with them here."

can anyone point me to some places where there is concern? i'm using jakobson's Six Lectures on Sound and Meaning as a starting point and

kostelanetz' Text-Sound Texts for examples but i'msure there is more recent scholarship with relationship to current poetic practices.

on another note, it's good to be back on poetics after time inside. it is a lot louder than i remember tho.

thanks,
kevin hehir

↑ Index

153. George Bowering
Re: Poets in towers
Fri 5 Nov 1999

> I'm trying to locate a book of lit crit about poets who lived/worked in towers. I saw it in a catalogue recently, but I can't remember where. The author was a woman, I think. Poets were Jeffers, Yeats, Rilke, and…(there was a fourth). Anyone know the book?
> Thanks,
> Mark Melnicove

Joyce lived in a tower.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

154. f i l c h
Re: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
Sat 6 Nov 1999

And the United States does control the Internet.
- said Jim.

I said "This is bullshit Jim, TCP/IP controls the internet. Take the United States out of the internet and the grammar still works and the networks still run."

↑ Index

155. dan raphael
Where to read in Boston
Sat 6 Nov 1999

---

will be in Boston for a weekend in April (after a nightlong red-eye from westcoast portland) and since i dont get out that way much, and am an energetic reader, would be fun to read there, if possible. please backchannel any ideas to query.

thanks

dan raphael

↑ Index

156. Jim Andrews
Re: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
Sat 6 Nov 1999

Where are the primary DNS servers? In the United States, aren't they? And doesn't this mean that other countries have Internet access strictly according to the whim of the United States or those who control the primary DNS servers? Don't the DNS (Dynamic Name Servers) contain the records that actually direct http requests to the appropriate computers on the network?

Isn't it Network Solutions that controls the primary DNS servers? A few other companies can register domain names, but isn't it through Network Solutions' ultimate control of the content in the primary DNS servers?

f i l c h wrote:

> And the United States does control the Internet.
> - said Jim.
>
> I said "This is bullshit Jim, TCP/IP controls the internet. Take the United States out of the internet and the grammar still works and the networks still run."

↑ Index

157. Alan Sondheim
Lecture: Natural Kinds
Sat 6 Nov 1999

-

Lecture: Natural Kinds

Sat Nov 6 01:07:18 EST 1999 first off, I thought of a single node with numerous links; only one was connected, as if the others were absorbed in it. the centrality of it, the vulnerability of the other nodes, this was a misrecognition. i would have diagrammed this, a shimmering of the real in which each entity is affected. Sat Nov 6 01:08:29 EST 1999 further, it had to do with natural kinds; the question came literally to mind - is a "natural kind" a natural kind? what sort of universals occur? for example, think of water. Sat Nov 6 01:09:24 EST

1999 I then went to think of water. there are names in every language, in all possible worlds, but they are tied to water, water then remaining at the node, the shimmering of the forms, and connectivities, node to pointer of the proper name, but this seems insufficient. why so inefficient? let's say it has to do with data storage, a kind of stability generated. I'd lecture on this, improvise, continue, go ahead with all the ramifications. in my imagination, I pictured the audience, myself pacing back and forth on the stage, gravity taken for granted. Sat Nov 6 01:11:25 EST 1999 because the style of the world is that it remains, its obdurate nature, that things remain sufficiently in place for life to promulgate, memory to use devices. the subtexts of the devices are the encodings of the real, which are stable. it goes back, all of it, to non-equilibrium thermodynamics on ultra-fast time-scales from within. it goes back as well to nearly-decomposable hierarchies of the real, the impossibly slow decay, if any, of the proton, the relative emptiness of space, our planetary luck with our collisions. Sat Nov 6 01:13:02 EST 1999 more than that, the node as generator - all those names. or as if the node itself generated the names, locale after locale, their interdependencies and modification occurring on a superstructural level, but always already connected to the real. that's the inherent tendency of language, always - towards the real. Sat Nov 6 01:14:07 EST 1999 language of the real and towards the real; it's not disconnect, but connect so tightly that it literally becomes unimaginable. language and the real bound, not through parallelisms or empathies, but through natural kinds based on hyperstable tendencies of the universe as a whole. Sat Nov 6 01:14:59 EST 1999 fading from culture is fading from language, returning from culture is returning from language. where the returning or fading transforms, what teleologies, what places or spaces, is unsolvable - there is no solution, just as there are no places and spaces as such. Sat Nov 6 01:17:06 EST 1999 the solution is in the absence of the solution, in spite of which, worlds work away, as with the three- body problem - the world works, no matter the mathesis, which in our eyes, follows suit. Sat Nov 6 01:17:33 EST 1999 the descriptions are non-imagin- ary, unimaginable.Sat Nov 6 01:18:36 EST 1999 Sat Nov 6 01:18:36 EST 1999

Sat Nov 6 01:07:18 EST 1999 one that is realized, sensory bandwidths and relativisms become more and less important. less important, since techno- logical or linguistic extensions are literally that, on the deepest imag- inable level. more important, since the relativisms point to superstruc- turality in need of deconstruction, which can never be completed; every- thing is equally always already in a state of fading from culture. go where no one has ever gone before, to the deepest couplings and linkages of the world. then you might lose your grips on natural language, as you slip towards natural kinds. Sat Nov 6 01:18:09 EST 1999 the descriptions are non-imaginary, unimaginable.Sat Nov 6 01:18:27 EST 1999

↑ Index

158. Louis Cabri
PhillyTalks 13, 12, 11 now available
Sat 6 Nov 1999

PHILLYTALKS #s 13, 12, 11 now available

P H I L L Y T A L K S #13
newsletter + event

RACHEL BLAU DUPLESSIS / BARRETT WATTEN

Mon. Nov. 15th (1999) 6 pm, free
Kelly Writers House, 3805 Locust Walk
Philadelphia [redacted]

"PhillyTalks" invites two poets to begin a dialogue on each other's work, then have the resulting exchange published in newsletter form & made available to readers prior to (& after) the event. The poets, following their poetry reading, informally extend their dialogue. The audience then joins in. A future newsletter will feature a transcript of the event, as well as written responses to previous newsletters. CALL FOR RESPONSES: Please email [redacted], or write: Louis Cabri, 529B - 19 Ave SW, Calgary, Alberta, Canada, T2S 0E3.

AVAILABLE NOW ($2 ea.):

#13: Rachel BLAU DUPLESSIS / Barrett WATTEN

#12: Transcript & response issue: Andrew LEVY / Jackson
MAC LOW. Response by Alan FILREIS.

#11: Ammiel ALCALAY / Tom MANDEL (March 1997)
Introduction by Joshua SCHUSTER.

Back issues:

#1: David BROMIGE / Laura MORIARTY
#2: Andrew LEVY / Jackson MAC LOW
#3: Jeff DERKSEN / Ron SILLIMAN
#4: Tina DARRAGH / Jena OSMAN
#5: Alan GILBERT / Rodrigo TOSCANO
#6: Transcript & response issue: DERKSEN/SILLIMAN (#3)
w/ BECKETT, FRIEDLANDER, JAEGER, KLOBUCAR et al
#7: Brian Kim STEFANS / Fred WAH
#8: Bruce ANDREWS / Rod SMITH

#9: Steven FARMER / Peter GIZZI
#10: Heather FULLER / Melanie NEILSON

#s 1, 2, 3, 6 available at http://english.upenn.edu/~wh/phillytalks thanks to Aaron Levy; more to follow.

Louis Cabri
Curator, PhillyTalks

↑ Index

159. Ron Silliman
Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
Sat 6 Nov 1999

Some retro carpet-bagging on my part here. Tom Ammiano has made the mayoral runoff in San Francisco against Willie Brown. Brown has long been a social liberal who has used that stance to front for the most rapacious developers who've driven SF into a place where rental units now run $1,000 per month per bedroom (a far cry from the $350 I and my roommates paid in total for our 7-bedroom house in "Baja Pacific Heights" in the 1976-78 period).

Ammiano is a stand-up comic who first got active in politics by pushing to protect the rights of gay teachers in the mid-1970s. He's currently the president of the county board of supervisors and ran a write-in campaign that garnered 25 percent of all votes with just $20,000 (compared to Brown's 39 percent thanks to a budget of $2.3 million). Voters ejected ex-mayor/ex-police chief Frank Jordan and political consultant Clint Reilly from the run-offs, two relatively conservative politicians who got 29 percent of the vote.

Those of us who remember the late Harvey Milk are enheartened by a demonstration that populist politics need not be the know-nothing libertarianism of, say, a Jesse Ventura.

You don't need to live in San Francisco to benefit from Ammiano's election in the December election.

And you can help!

Call [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] to volunteer and help make history.

If you would like to make a contribution, send a check made payable to "Tom Ammiano For Mayor" to:
Ammiano for Mayor
125 Upper Terrace
San Francisco, CA 94117
(if donation is $100 or greater, specify your occupation & employer)

FPPC ID # 990924

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

160. Tom Beckett
misc.
Sat 6 Nov 1999

I'm planning on adding to the debate about media and etc but life is getting complicated. I've had computer problems for the last 2 days. Plus there's been an unexpected death in my family, so I'll be leaving tomorrow to visit the town I was born in (haven't been back for more than 30 years) for a couple of days to attend to the business of saying goodbye to a person with whom I had a long and complicated emotional relationship.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

161. Robin Tremblay-McGaw pain in the ass--class
Sat 6 Nov 1999

In response to David Baratier's response to Kathy Lou Schultz's posting on class (which was in response to a posting by Jill Stengel):

It might be interesting for people to take a wander over to the HOW2 forum on class and innovative writing for some very interesting responses to questions about class and innovative writing and also for a look at Schultz's essay on class and my piece looking at class, gender and genre in Dodie Bellamy's The Letters of Mina Harker.
http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2/current/forum/forum.html#west

That said, I'd like to point out that each time this issue has come up on this list there has been a smattering of responses filled with hostility. Apparently, it is verboten to cast any kind of light at all on the topic. Of course, class and other issues related to power (feminist investigations spring to mind) always make some uncomfortable. Each of us is implicated.

When the complexities of class bleed through imposed boundaries and definitions lots of frustration gets expressed. These complexities are problematic; they problematicize our conceptualizing, our reading, and our writing. They are multiple, not neatly categorized and powerful. They deserve attention, ever the more so for all the discomfort they cause.

I'm with Will Alexander on this: "But what I speak of is the imaginal power to leap beyond the brutally imposed confines to combat the bureaucracies with an elemental seismics, with a new and alien thinking."

Robin Tremblay-McGaw

Date: Thu, 4 Nov 1999 17:51:28 +0000
From: David Baratier <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Business, class, access

David Baratier:
There are many publishers outside & on this list who do not >use the perpetual victim stance or "have not" status you are attributing
>to the lower classes

KL:
Question: How does bringing the power of analysis to bear on a situation, speaking out about it, and producing works in response to it constitute being a "victim"?

Answer:

Are you asserting that you are analyzing the situation? Throughout your posting you blame a social construct as a way to position yourself. The implication of--
"I get very tired of this because money does buy access: more time to write, money to publish one's own journals and books, which in turn increases both community as well as publishing opportunities for one's own work by increasing your 'profile' and 'reputation.'" ---is that your working class background does not allow you to go beyond the societal expectation inherent in class structure.

"Publication being determined partly by who you know" The implication that one cannot "know" anyone without ludicrous jacksons hits me as another oppressive class myth. I know a guy who was a steelworker when tri-quarterly published his first book. I know a guy who works in a cranberry bog for numerous months each year, who is well published & one of the latter half of this centuries best poets. And so on--

"There's a lack of access to the Internet, where one can hobnob with publishers and magazine editors" Yet another victim statement. Interested folks can go to the library for free, as mentioned.

While not all of these quotes are yours, Kathy, as you also say, "the quote from Bobbie implicates both Bobbie & myself, in a way laying things bare, and saying, yup this is how it works." My question is, in what way are you a reliable source for what occurs in the upper eschelons of poetry if you have never been there? I also add, as a person whose income is negligible, that I have not personally experienced the insinuated discrepancies described.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

162. Ron Silliman
Shurin review in the Chron
Sun 7 Nov 1999

An excellent review of an excellent book by Aaron Shurin turns up in this week's SF Chronicle. That URL below should all be one line.

http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/1999/11/07/RV87292.DTL

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

163. r.drake
factoid
Sun 7 Nov 1999

Happed across the Lycos "top 50" popular search words:

http://50.lycos.com/

and noticed that "poetry" was number 8. that's up from #9 last week (just behind Pamela Anderson and WWF), and displacing the NFL, which fell to #10. what does it all mean? and what are all those folks searching for when they type in "poetry"?

lbd

↑ Index

164. Alan Sondheim hanging text iii
Sun 7 Nov 1999

-

hanging text iii

i've gone in as far as i can go. i'm choked on all of it. i'm waiting for you. i'm waiting for the line to hang up. i'm waiting to hang from the line. i'm kept hanging. i'm in there. i'm pressed out of your back. i'm pressed out between our legs. i'm broken in there. i'm all colors of the rainbow. i'm in shame. i'm hiding myself. i'm exposed. i'm troubled with all of this. i'm nowhere. there are no suns to tell. i know i'm bound to tell you. there's nothing to look at left or right. there's everything to look at which empties it all out. what could be, what is emptied out. there's no truth but i'd at least include this in what might be seen as a search for it.

i stop by the nikuko shrine. it's ornate, ornamental, elaborate, convolu- ted, repetitive, baroque, rococo, encrusted. it's all over me. i dream of a black line through the deep carvings, gravures. it carries me like a lightning fork through it. i realize - in real life - i've swallowed frac- tal energies churning in me. they're black carrying my holes into unknown tunnels i enter to find myself hanging there.

my words huddle together in the tunnels azure and i make into each other, forking. i can't hear anything and scent dominates, chemicals pressing into closed eyes. so i remember any scrolls i come across, there are a lot of them and i'm thinking about them. they unravel into a luminous eye:

to be chanted by burned and hanging bodies:

large and luminous eye, detached, in its fullness, circumscopic, sphere of surrounding waters reflecting within towards diffusing centers, there you would find, invisibly, coalescing of emanants

we would not be acquainted with the emanants and their coalescing, nor of the large and luminous eye, lidless and always open to its internal light nor would we speak of size in this indeterminacy of the sphere, emptiness surrounding, nor would we speak of the quality of this emptiness, nor of diffusing centers or diffusing center, nor of number before number

nor of the moments, before which time moved exponentially from infinity, into and out of infinity, nor primordial concepts of into and out of, nor primordial concepts of infinity thinking when time beginning exponentially, thinking of the singularity of the vector or ray,

the direction among sphericities, growth of a circular nimbus on the exterior, primordial exteriors, waves of circumscriptions, splittings and emergent emanants primordial names among with nikuko emerging, of wisdom and ambiance, turning back towards diffusing centers, submerging, primordial pulsings and rhythms and meanings the beginnings of shrines and primordial powers, emergences without beginning, paradoxes of progress and development, the eye, i, i, i, i, i now so sadly hanging burned upon the tree, now turning slowly in the wind,

now long gaunt arm descending, now long fingers almost touching the ground, slowly turning around the object, slowly grasping it

↑ Index

165. Eckerd College Review
Re: your mail (fwd)
Sun 7 Nov 1999

Dear Poets,

We thought you might be interested in receiving the guidelines for the first annual _Eckerd College Review_ Poetry Contest, recently advertised in _Poets & Writers Magazine_. If you're not interested, we apologize for inconveniencing you.

ECR is a literary magazine of fiction and poetry produced by the writing workshop at Eckerd College in St. Petersburg, Florida. Our most recent issue included a number of fine poets: Dannie Abse, Ruth Schwartz, Betty Adcock, and Dana Gioia, among others. In the past, writers such as Red Hawk, Katheryn Stripling Byer, Dorothy Allison, Elie Wiesel, Fred Chappell, and R.T. Smith have appeared in our pages.

We accept submissions of short fiction (fewer than 25 pages) and poetry (no more than 75 lines). A brief cover letter with a biographical note is appreciated. We do not accept submissions via disk or e-mail, and we cannot consider simultaneous submissions.

All contest entries are subject to the same guidelines as regular submissions (cover letter, bio note, etc.). Contest entries should be clearly marked "Poetry Contest." The first round of judging will be completed by ECR editorial staff. The winning poet will receive $500; 2nd and 3rd place poets will receive $50; all winning poems will be published in the Spring 2000 issue of ECR. All contest entries will be considered for publication.

Please include a self-addressed stamped envelope and a processing fee of $7 for three poems ($3 for each additional poem) with your entry. Checks should be made payable to The Eckerd College Review and addressed to:

> The Eckerd College Review Poetry Contest
> 4200 54th Avenue South
> St. Petersburg, FL 33711

All submissions to ECR, regular or contest, should arrive before December 1, 1999. Expect a response time of 3 to 6 months. Also, please note that we will be unable to reply to individual questions regarding the contest; refer to resources such as the _Poets' Market_ for general poetry submission guidelines.

We look forward to reading your work!

Sincerely,

Cecily Iddings
Tomas Radcliffe, Editors

↑ Index

166. Jerrold Shiroma
Small Press Publications
Sun 7 Nov 1999

This weeks small press publications list is now online. The deadline for the next listing is Nov 19.

www.durationpress.com

↑ Index

167. Betsy Andrews
BELLADONNA READING
Sun 7 Nov 1999

ENJOY BELLADONNA*

(*deadly nightshade, a cardiac and respiratory stimulant, having purplish-red flowers and black berries)

Brilliant San Franciscan PAM LU
&
New York's Own KRISTIN STUART

reading at BLUESTOCKINGS women's bookstore
172 Allen Street
TUESDAY NOVEMBER 16TH AT 8 PM
([redacted])

↑ Index

168. Philip Nikolayev
TEST_COERCION_TO_CHAR.OUT
Mon 8 Nov 1999

TEST_COERCION_TO_CHAR.OUT

for Alan Sondheim

0: 0
1
2
3
4
5
6
7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22

23 24
25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35
36 37 38
39 40
41 42
43 44
45
46
47 48
49
50 51 52 53
54
55
56 57
58 59 60
61
62
63
64

65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86 87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100
101
102
103
104
105
106

107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120
121 122
123
124 125
126
127
-128
-127
-126
-125
-124
-123
-122
-121
-120
-119
-118
-117
-116
-115
-114
-113
-112
-111
-110
-109
-108

-107
-106
-105
-104
-103
-102
-101
-100
-99
-98
-97
-96
-95
-94
-93
-92
-91
-90
-89
-88
-87
-86
-85
-84
-83
-82
-81
-80
-79
-78
-77
-76
-75
-74
-73
-72
-71
-70
-69
-68
-67
-66

-65
-64
-63
-62
-61
-60
-59
-58
-57
-56
-55
-54
-53
-52
-51
-50
-49
-48
-47
-46
-45
-44
-43
-42
-41
-40
-39
-38
-37
-36
-35
-34
-33
-32
-31
-30
-29
-28
-27
-26
-25
-24

-23
-22
-21
-20
-19
-18
-17
-16
-15
-14
-13
-12
-11
-10
-9
-8
-7
-6
-5
-4
-3
-2 -1
256: 0
1
2
3
4
5
6
7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21

22
23 24
25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35
36 37
38
39 40
41 42
43 44
45
46
47 48
49
50 51
52
53
54
55
56 57
58 59 60

61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86 87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100
101
102

103
104
105
106
107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120
121 122
123
124 125
126
127
-128
-127
-126
-125
-124
-123
-122
-121
-120
-119
-118
-117
-116
-115
-114
-113
-112

-111
-110
-109
-108
-107
-106
-105
-104
-103
-102
-101
-100
-99
-98
-97
-96
-95
-94
-93
-92
-91
-90
-89
-88
-87
-86
-85
-84
-83
-82
-81
-80
-79
-78
-77
-76
-75
-74
-73
-72
-71
-70

-69
-68
-67
-66
-65
-64
-63
-62
-61
-60
-59
-58
-57
-56
-55
-54
-53
-52
-51
-50
-49
-48
-47
-46
-45
-44
-43
-42
-41
-40
-39
-38
-37
-36
-35
-34
-33
-32
-31
-30
-29
-28

```
        -27
        -26
        -25
        -24
        -23
        -22
        -21
        -20
        -19
        -18
        -17
        -16
        -15
        -14
        -13
        -12
        -11
        -10
        -9
        -8
        -7
        -6
        -5
        -4
        -3
        -2 -1
512:     0
        1
        2
        3
        4
        5
        6
        7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14
```

15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35
36 37
38
39 40
41 42
43 44
45
46
47 48
49
50 51
52
53
54
55
56

57
58 59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86 87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98

99 100
101
102
103
104
105
106
107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120
121 122
123
124 125
126
127
-128
-127
-126
-125
-124
-123
-122
-121
-120
-119
-118
-117
-116

-115
-114
-113
-112
-111
-110
-109
-108
-107
-106
-105
-104
-103
-102
-101
-100
-99
-98
-97
-96
-95
-94
-93
-92
-91
-90
-89
-88
-87
-86
-85
-84
-83
-82
-81
-80
-79
-78
-77
-76
-75
-74

-73
-72
-71
-70
-69
-68
-67
-66
-65
-64
-63
-62
-61
-60
-59
-58
-57
-56
-55
-54
-53
-52
-51
-50
-49
-48
-47
-46
-45
-44
-43
-42
-41
-40
-39
-38
-37
-36
-35
-34
-33
-32

-31
-30
-29
-28
-27
-26
-25
-24
-23
-22
-21
-20
-19
-18
-17
-16
-15
-14
-13
-12
-11
-10
-9
-8
-7
-6
-5
-4
-3
-2 -1
768: 0
1
2
3
4
5
6
7 8 9 10

11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35
36 37
38
39 40
41 42
43 44
45
46
47 48
49
50 51
52

53
54
55
56 57
58 59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86 87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94

95
96
97
98
99 100
101
102
103
104
105
106
107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120
121 122
123
124 125
126
127
-128
-127
-126
-125
-124
-123
-122
-121
-120

-119
-118
-117
-116
-115
-114
-113
-112
-111
-110
-109
-108
-107
-106
-105
-104
-103
-102
-101
-100
-99
-98
-97
-96
-95
-94
-93
-92
-91
-90
-89
-88
-87
-86
-85
-84
-83
-82
-81
-80
-79
-78

-77
-76
-75
-74
-73
-72
-71
-70
-69
-68
-67
-66
-65
-64
-63
-62
-61
-60
-59
-58
-57
-56
-55
-54
-53
-52
-51
-50
-49
-48
-47
-46
-45
-44
-43
-42
-41
-40
-39
-38
-37
-36

```
        -35
        -34
        -33
        -32
        -31
        -30
        -29
        -28
        -27
        -26
        -25
        -24
        -23
        -22
        -21
        -20
        -19
        -18
        -17
        -16
        -15
        -14
        -13
        -12
        -11
        -10
        -9
        -8
        -7
        -6
        -5
        -4
        -3
        -2 -1
1024:    0
        1
        2
        3
        4
        5
        6
```

7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35
36 37
38
39 40
41 42
43 44
45
46
47 48

49
50 51
52
53
54
55
56 57
58 59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86 87
88 89 90

91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100
101
102
103
104
105
106
107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120
121 122
123
124 125
126
127
-128
-127
-126
-125
-124

-123
-122
-121
-120
-119
-118
-117
-116
-115
-114
-113
-112
-111
-110
-109
-108
-107
-106
-105
-104
-103
-102
-101
-100
-99
-98
-97
-96
-95
-94
-93
-92
-91
-90
-89
-88
-87
-86
-85
-84
-83
-82

-81
-80
-79
-78
-77
-76
-75
-74
-73
-72
-71
-70
-69
-68
-67
-66
-65
-64
-63
-62
-61
-60
-59
-58
-57
-56
-55
-54
-53
-52
-51
-50
-49
-48
-47
-46
-45
-44
-43
-42
-41
-40

-39
-38
-37
-36
-35
-34
-33
-32
-31
-30
-29
-28
-27
-26
-25
-24
-23
-22
-21
-20
-19
-18
-17
-16
-15
-14
-13
-12
-11
-10
-9
-8
-7
-6
-5
-4
-3
-2 -1
1280: 0
1
2

3
4
5
6
7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35
36 37
38
39 40
41 42
43 44

45
46
47 48
49
50 51
52
53
54
55
56 57
58 59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86

87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100
101
102
103
104
105
106
107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120
121 122
123
124 125
126
127
-128

-127
-126
-125
-124
-123
-122
-121
-120
-119
-118
-117
-116
-115
-114
-113
-112
-111
-110
-109
-108
-107
-106
-105
-104
-103
-102
-101
-100
-99
-98
-97
-96
-95
-94
-93
-92
-91
-90
-89
-88
-87
-86

-85
-84
-83
-82
-81
-80
-79
-78
-77
-76
-75
-74
-73
-72
-71
-70
-69
-68
-67
-66
-65
-64
-63
-62
-61
-60
-59
-58
-57
-56
-55
-54
-53
-52
-51
-50
-49
-48
-47
-46
-45
-44

-43
-42
-41
-40
-39
-38
-37
-36
-35
-34
-33
-32
-31
-30
-29
-28
-27
-26
-25
-24
-23
-22
-21
-20
-19
-18
-17
-16
-15
-14
-13
-12
-11
-10
-9
-8
-7
-6
-5
-4
-3
-2

```
        -1
1536:     0
        1
        2
        3
        4
        5
        6
        7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
        17 18 19 20 21
        22
        23 24
        25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35
        36 37
        38
        39 40
```

41 42
43 44
45
46
47 48
49
50 51
52
53
54
55
56 57
58 59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82

83
84
85
86 87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100
101
102
103
104
105
106
107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120
121 122
123
124

125
126
127
-128
-127
-126
-125
-124
-123
-122
-121
-120
-119
-118
-117
-116
-115
-114
-113
-112
-111
-110
-109
-108
-107
-106
-105
-104
-103
-102
-101
-100
-99
-98
-97
-96
-95
-94
-93
-92
-91
-90

-89
-88
-87
-86
-85
-84
-83
-82
-81
-80
-79
-78
-77
-76
-75
-74
-73
-72
-71
-70
-69
-68
-67
-66
-65
-64
-63
-62
-61
-60
-59
-58
-57
-56
-55
-54
-53
-52
-51
-50
-49
-48

-47
-46
-45
-44
-43
-42
-41
-40
-39
-38
-37
-36
-35
-34
-33
-32
-31
-30
-29
-28
-27
-26
-25
-24
-23
-22
-21
-20
-19
-18
-17
-16
-15
-14
-13
-12
-11
-10
-9
-8
-7
-6

```
          -5
          -4
          -3
          -2 -1
1792:      0
```

↑ Index

169. Alan Sondheim
14 lines
Mon 8 Nov 1999

14 lines

{k:1}> new hang.txt; cat lf hang.txt > lf.txt; t; mv lf.txt lf; rm hang.txt; m hang text if the cat hangs; hang text if its new; pointer to your life; your life everywhere; mmmm... hang whatever might be the presence of animals; if something is new or out of the ordinary; if you need pointers for living; you're not omnipotent; hmmm... hang all presences to be freed; whatever is ordinary is invisible; pointing the way of all life; you're always invisible; bmmm... presences are freed; whatever is new is unforeseen; the way of all life is unforeseen; whatever is new is invisible; hmmm... you're freed and unforeseen; there is no way of all life; nothing is old, nothing new; mmmm... visibility of life; hangings; presences; animals; cats; nothing; m

↑ Index

170. Robert Archambeau
Re: renga redux
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Renga Beginning and Ending with a Line by Christopher Alexander

"What is certain is that the renga's occlusion
    of other conversation
        became tedious after a time"
To be continued
    by Grant Jenkins
        on subsubpoetics
if he so desires.

↑ Index

171. Brent Long
Merwin
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Does anyone on the list know of any upcoming dates on which W.S. Merwin will be reading?

Thanks

Brent A. Long

↑ Index

172. Jim White
Re: your mail (fwd)
Mon 8 Nov 1999

---

do check out our new website for writers and artists... www.americanartists.org thanks jim white

↑ Index

173. Jordan Davis
the renga
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Grant --

I'm all for it --
but I should mention --
the renga provoked the biggest dropoff in list membership -- bigger even than any meatflap debate scribbling --

Jordan

↑ Index

174. Steve Clay
Fagin/Winkfield DIG & DELVE
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Granary Books and Poetry City invite all to a publication party for an amazing new collaborative book by Larry Fagin and Trevor Winkfield called Dig & Delve.

The party will be held Thursday Nov 11 from 7-9

(the entrance door locks at 8)
at Teachers & Writers
5 Union Square West, 7th floor
NY NY

Further information about this book (Mr.
Winkfield's first full color book) including example pages will be posted on the Granary website in a week or so.

Hope to see you there.

Steve Clay

Steve Clay
Granary Books
307 Seventh Ave., #1401
NY, NY 10001
http://www.granarybooks.com
tel [redacted]
fax [redacted]

↑ Index

175. Layne Russell
Re: The Use of This Listserv
Mon 8 Nov 1999

I am interested, love renga and collab, am participating in two cyber rengas now.

Layne

Grant Jenkins wrote:

> With all of this discussion about the nature of the internet and its relation to poetry, I'm wondering why we use this listserv mostly for debates and advertisement.
>
> I think most of us would agree that collaboration and community are what make the poetry we are interested in different. Aren't we supposed to be a group of poets and people interested in poetics (poeticists?)? Then why don't we use this listserv for more creative purposes?
>
> Does anyone remember the renga that was spontaneously composed on this listserv around the death of Ginsberg? Why don't we do more of that?
>
> Anyone interested?

> grant j
> virginia

↑ Index

176. David Kellogg
Re: The Use of This Listserv
Mon 8 Nov 1999

> Does anyone remember the renga that was spontaneously composed on this listserv around the death of Ginsberg? Why don't we do more of that?
>
> Anyone interested?

Well yes, but wouldn't we have to kill someone first?

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

a desire to have change as an primary element of what one does. Will does not name the "brutally imposed confines" in his writings and neither do I. A force to work against without the naming process supplies the energy without the denegrative state of reverse labeling. Upon saying who I am, in person, perhaps these ideologies of opposition become less opaque, but this is not a requirement to understanding. Desire and priority are the missing aspects-- as with many I've placed writing first, done a survival called the necessary, in whatever method has worked-- rather than point to my class upbringing or ethnicity as a justification.

I find, as someone who has a lower class income, that your assessment is inaccurate. I felt your mass categorization of the lower classes was not one fitting to myself or many of the writers in the same situation I know closely. It is unfortunate that many believe they do not have access to the things you list below. This unfounded belief perpetuates itself in not having these opportunities become manifest. That classism exists, I agree. When it is used as an excuse, whether to defend one's choices, supposed lack thereof, or to support poorly written work, its utility is worthless.

PS-- Thanks Robin.

Be well

David Baratier

Again, this response brings with it a massive load of assumptions about me and where I have and haven't been.
And you are simply kidding yourself if you think that class has nothing to do with access to time to write,
educational opportunities, access to literary communities,
access to the Internet, access to publications and being published, time to read, money to buy books, money to publish books, etc.
Hurray for the steelworker who published a book. What does this prove? Is this the exception to the rule?
And why is it that when folks speak up about class in poetry communities they are immediately accussed of being
"victims" "whiners" etc.? Is this how you respond to racism? Or does racism exist, and classism doesn't? Get real.
Kathy Lou

↑ Index

178. Poetics List
renga redux
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Those of you who have come to the list more recently will not recall the renga to which Grant Jenkins refers, which was initiated in the context of the Yasusada affair (as it came to be called) by Steven Shoemaker in July 1995. Further information is available, as always, in the searchable archive of the Poetics List; follow the Poetics links from the front page of the Electronic Poetry Center at <http://epc.buffalo.edu>.

What was interesting in the project was the perhaps unexpected effect of simultaneity of response, which was to derail the form into a hydra-like entity that eventually came to dominate list discourse. Much less interesting was the general tenor of response, which tended not to reflection or density but sheer verbiage - anyway, that was my response in 1995. What is certain is that the renga's occlusion of other conversation became tedious after a time; I believe the first call to halt - in any case, the most damning - was given in August 1995 by George Bowering:

> When I hear the word "renga" I reach > for my D-key.

(Perhaps recalling a quotation lightly attributed to Jack Spicer in Beatitude no. 17: "When I hear the word Ferlingetti, I reach for my g..n."). GB's sentiment was seconded not long after by Lindz Williamson in a message entitled "Please Stop."

I wouldn't want to prevent any such project from happening on the list, but I would suggest that it might be of use to learn from the past. Perhaps if someone would volunteer to be the renga custodian, so that the list wouldn't be flooded with such messages? That is, this volunteer could collect and assemble the responses backchannel, sending updates to the list periodically. I think David Israel performed this service for us with the renga written for the late, loved Allen Ginsberg during his illness in March-April 1997.

In any case, I want to avoid having 15 renga-related messages coming to the list every day, as happened before.

> Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

179. Poetics List
The Internet and all that / Mills
Mon 8 Nov 1999

I had to reformat this message. Please keep in mind that HTML formatting should not be sent to the list.

Chris

--

From: "Mills, Billy" <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 5 Nov 1999 16:23:38 -0000

Date: Thu, 4 Nov 1999 00:07:43 +0000

> From: [redacted]
>
> Subject: Some stats on Web usage
>
>
> Region / Internet Users (in millions)
>
> United States, Canada 107.3
>
> Europe 46.4
>
> Asia/Pacific 33.6*
>
> Latin America 5.3
>
> Africa 1.7
>
> Middle East 0.9
>
>
> Includes Australia and New Zealand*
>
>
> Source: Red Herring magazine, December 1999

So, the arguments are not melting before my eyes.

I did not say that poets should not use PCs: the fact that I am e-mailing

these messages would contradict such a proposition.

I am saying that we should not lie to ourselves that the Web is more open than books are.

Yes, access is easier: if you are a citizen of the 'developed' 'world'.

Yes, books were exclusionist in their day, so that makes it OK to reproduce this in Webworld? While we're at it, we could reinstitute serfdom, witch hunts and child labour.

I know a lot of poets find new and exciting potential in virtual creation, and that the Internet gives users access to a huge range of material. But look again at the figures posted by kathylou, and then let's be honest about the _social_ limitations of the medium. It is, in many ways, another way of enforcing centre/margin relationships, another hot topic on this list.

Billy

↑ Index

180. Poetics List

Re: tendering opposition / Mills

Mon 8 Nov 1999

I had to reformat this message. Chris

--

From: "Mills, Billy" <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 5 Nov 1999 16:17:43 -0000

On the subject of poetry and communication, here some extracts from Brian Coffey on that very subject. These quotes are from an interview with Parkman Howe sometime in the 70s. The question to which Brian was responding was: 'You have often said that you do not aim to communicate in your poetry.'

'Well, I want as a platform, if one is talking about poetry, that poets do not write in order to communicate. And if they do put themselves in the position of being communicators, then they are propagandists.....

But what is communication? ...you have a sending device, you have a receiving device, and you have a medium for sending, and a bit of information: something like, say, the letter _o_. It goes in to the sending device and it is despatched so it is reproduced whole and entire, _o_, at the other end.... Now nothing has occurred really....

..what happens when one encounters a new poem? Well, there is non-understanding to begin with, and, one hopes, non-preconception...

Now. in such meetings there is not communication. There is something quite different going on that is extremely tentative on both sides. The tentativeness is something which has a long future ahead of it. It may end in rejection, it may end in something else.'

Billy

↑ Index

181. Grant Jenkins
Re: renga redux
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Chris Alexander wrote:

> Perhaps if someone would volunteer to > be the renga custodian, so that the list wouldn't be flooded > with such messages? That is, this volunteer could collect > and assemble the responses backchannel, sending updates to > the list periodically. I think David Israel performed this > service for us with the renga written for the late, loved > Allen Ginsberg during his illness in March-April 1997.
>
> In any case, I want to avoid having 15 renga-related > messages coming to the list every day, as happened before.

Since it was my redux, I would gladly volunteer to be the e-seamstress of a collaborative fabric. I simply think this listserv could serve not simply as a bulletin board for immediate concerns but as a kind of anthology or tapestry of collective, communal art. At least, that is how I would like people to look back on this endeavor in the future.

Please send ideas, fragments, lines, and other contributions to me: [redacted]. I will try to send updates to the list as often as my schedule allows.

Grant

↑ Index

182. Poetics List
DAC 99 conference report / Marsh
Mon 8 Nov 1999

I had to reformat this message. Chris

--

From: "William Marsh" <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 5 Nov 1999 10:07:32 -0800

RE: POETICS Digest - 1 Nov 1999 to 2 Nov 1999 (#1999-206) might be a good time to chime in here with a brief report of this year's "Digital Arts and Culture" conference, held at Gerogia Tech in Atlanta -- on hand were hypertext notables

Michael Joyce and Jay Bolter, Kate Hayles, Mary Flanagan, Loss Glazier, John Cayley, Christy Sheffield Sanford, Janet Murray, Robert Coover, Terry Harpold (conf chair), Johanna Drucker, and lots others -- with performances, talks and installations from a predominately US-based group but also UK, Canada, Germany, Norway, Belgium, Finland, Australia, and Uruguay represented in the mix

like at many conferences, tight scheduling and overlapping sessions, as well as an intentionally over-saturated "digital" environment, made it impossible to hear and see everyone, but from my perspective there was a marked absence of discussions like those going on here among Miekal And, Tom Beckett, Steve Ellis and others -- rather, an underlying determinist and celebratory tone that almost preempted any talk about access, boundaries, limitations, costs, representation, etc. -- these issues came up later at dinners and late-night gatherings (also true of many confs) but the conference seemed for the most part organized around a "let's see what's hot in e-media today" mentality -- which both excited for the range of possibilities represented in the installations and bothered for the failure to make room for a more formalized critique of apparatus, distribution, production, not to mention the aesthetics of a burgeoning computer-based art and literature [Robert Coover's anachronistic call for a "return to the written word" in the concluding minutes of a 2-hour keynote speech nothwithstanding]

true, the multi-million-dollar GTech facilities suggest an all-too-easy metaphor for the current relationship between acadamia and "new media" studies and practices -- but also several of the installations were and still are web-based pieces which anyone with the means to read this post can access via their modem/cable connections -- also, i was told that the conference proceedings will be re(web)casted within the next couple weeks and available using the free Real or QT players

a lot of work done and to be done, a lot of questions -- state-of-the-art without enough talk on the state of the art more at: http://www.lcc.gatech.edu/events/dac99/and for more on global connectivity: Terry Harpold's essay on metageographies at:

http://www.lcc.gatech.edu/~harpold/papers/dark_continents/index.html

bill

↑ Index

183. Michael Magee
Re: query
Mon 8 Nov 1999

According to Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers:
>
> dear List:
>
> Truly wanting to use the list to co-respond with others--I posted a > question teh last week. "What do you consider to be the first American
> (of the U.S.) poem"?

Okay, I'll bite. I don't understand "before Bradstreet" in English, in the U.S. - who would that be? And in fact, if I have to pick someone, some poem, in this way, I'd say Bradstreet's as good as anyone - particularly "On My Dear Grandchild Simon Bradstreet," for its utterly sarcastic tone regarding God's divine providence - a tone which prefigures Dickinson's in poems like "I'm 'wife' -- I've finished that." All of the truisms about God's wisdom and grace here are couched by "Let's," my favorite being the extra-tentative "Let's say He's merciful as well as just." Everytime I read this I feel like responding, "Alright, what the hell, let's say it."

For something more explicitly U.S.-ish, how 'bout Phillis Wheatley's "To His Excellency General Washington" which inaugurates the cooptation of Amurika's revered terms ("The land of freedom's heaven-defended race") by the marginalized. How did Creeley put it - "America, give us our country back"? Somethin like that.

-Mike.

↑ Index

184. Poetics List
Re: Miekal and Dobyns, etc.
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Richard Dillon: "I doubt you, Chris, will publish this post."

I must say I never cease to be amazed at the inclination on the part of some, chiefly male subscribers to turn this list into a pissing contest. How is it that I can convince those among us of this tenor - not only Mr. Dillon, btw - that such things as vociferous criticisms of the work of one's fellows, public challenges and lines-drawn-in-the-sand, matter-of-fact dismissals and cutting remarks are a variety of boorish posturing in which I and numerous others among the 800 of us here are disinclined to participate - being here rather to converse about poetry than jock size.

In future, if anyone wishes to "meet me after school," please make your request backchannel; in this way may we refrain from wasting everyone else's time.

Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

185. Tony Green
rengaitis
Mon 8 Nov 1999

I will watch the proposed renga &
guess that I will be, first, deleting a lot, & maybe , second,
setting: poetics-list no mail until it's over - collaborative verbal spillage & seepage soon got tedious last time out -- after about a week --
I'd hopefully suggest a renga go on a renga list

Tony Green

↑ Index

186. Jorge Guitart
Re: the renga
Mon 8 Nov 1999

---

i am sorry we did that to the list.
the renga doesn't have to be on the list, though.
j

On Mon, 8 Nov 1999, Jordan Davis wrote:

> Grant --
>
> I'm all for it --
> but I should mention --
> the renga provoked the biggest dropoff in list membership -- > bigger even than any meatflap debate scribbling --
>
> Jordan

↑ Index

187. Taylor Brady
Re: phonaesthetic
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Kevin,

Work by Reuven Tsur and Garrett Stewart might be of interest here -- neither, though, without their problems (especially Tsur, who almost seems to insist on a kind of transcultural, transhistoric "legibility" of the onomatopoetic qualities of vowel sounds. But worth looking at as one example of how the universalist hopes of a certain strain of Moscow/Prague linguistics [one recalls Jakobson's commitment to Khlebnikov and the project of zaum] can be leaned on and pushed into a more recuperative mode by more recent practitioners).

From a less literary perspective, there's a recent anthology edited by Steve Roden and Brandon Labelle (sp?) of California electroacoustic/sound-art ensemble id battery. I'll hunt down the title and backchannel you. Pieces in this one tend to deal more with the liminal zones between acoustic hermeneutics and acoustic phenomenology, with an eye to the particular properties of electrically and electronically recorded sound. Other work in this rough area might include Pierre Schaeffer's writings on musique concrete (some of which are housed at UbuWeb), and the writings on acoustic ecology and related themes referenced and linked by the World Soundscape Project, whose URL follows:

http://www.sunsite.ubc.ca/WorldSoundscapeProject/wsp.html

And many suggestive pieces, of course, in both _Close Listening_ (ed. Charles Bernstein, U of Chicago) and _Sound States_ (ed. Adelaide Morris, Duke UP).

Also, might be interesting to follow out some of the suggestions in Nate Mackey's work -- both poems and essays -- in looking at "the creaking of the word," (a Dogon concept, if I'm not mistaken, taken up in _Discrepant Engagement_, a relevant "third-party" discussion of which takes place in the Harryette Mullen interview in COMBO #1), the "rasp," etc., as features of African and Afro-diasporan musical/poetic practices. And Jacques Attali's treatment of noise as the coding of social violence/eruption of violence within social codes continues to be a jumping-off point, though problematic in terms of the near-transparency it often posits between the history of modes of production in the "economist" sense, and the history of modes of cultural production.

I'm sure there's a wealth of other stuff, but time and resources are limited from where I sit. Instinct tells me, though, that at least a brief foray beyond the linguistic and literary might be of some use in this project. Anyhow, I hope some of this has been helpful.

Best,
Taylor

From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of K.Angelo Hehir Sent: Friday, November 05, 1999 5:14 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: phonaesthetic

fellow travellers,

i'm doing some work on the acoustic hermeneutic. i've been pouring over linguistics and psychology journals and find sentiments like the following quotation displays common: "The phonaesthetic properties of words have been used extensively by poets but we will not be concerned with them here."

can anyone point me to some places where there is concern? i'm using jakobson's Six Lectures on Sound and Meaning as a starting point and kostelanetz' Text-Sound Texts for examples but i'msure there is more recent scholarship with relationship to current poetic practices.

on another note, it's good to be back on poetics after time inside. it is a lot louder than i remember tho.

thanks,
kevin hehir

↑ Index

188. Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Bway NYC 10012

Morphology Of Change (November Show)

Mon 8 Nov 1999

For Immediate Release
Contact Lance Fung [redacted]

J o h n R o l o f f

Morphology of Change

A new installation

11 Nov - 18 Dec at Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Broadway NYC

Reception for the artist: Thursday, 11 November, 6 - 8 PM

Morphology of Change, an exhibition of a new installation by the American artist John Roloff, opens Thursday, November 11th at Lance Fung Gallery. In Morphology Of Change Roloff once again achieves an experimentation and provocation on level with his past landscape projects, installations, sculptures and environmental art. His geology inspired furnace projects in the landscape of the late 70's through the early 90's (Saskatchewan, Canada, Hartford, CT, Arvada, CO...), experimental works with greenhouses and plant materials of the 80's and 90's (Smithsonian Institution, San Francisco, CA, Santa Barbara, CA...) and the large-scale photographic works shown in Dialogues with Nature at Lance Fung Gallery in 1998 form the background for this new work.

As a conceptual extension of this earlier work, the installation done for Morphology of Change incorporates architecture, natural systems and formal considerations in an interior/exterior setting referring to such diverse attitudes as the 19th century sublime, process art, earth works, and baroque philosophy.

In the essay, John Roloff's The Rising Sea, Robert C. Morgan wrote, "Like many artists of his generation, Roloff is not east to identify in terms of a particular medium. He has been called a sculptor and environmental artist, but he is much more than that. He functions on a conceptual level, meaning that he foregrounds the ideas he is seeking to clarify through his art. By foregrounding the ideas, the medium or media becomes secondary to the extent that he uses what is necessary in order to express the ideas." Further in the same essay Morgan states, "The larger point for John Roloff in these site-specific installations is that nature is bigger than our understanding of it. The order of nature is bigger than any order we can impose upon it, and that it is a resilient force."

The focus of the exhibition will be a large singular work, Holocene, referring to the Holocene Era, the geologic period of our contemporary time. Holocene is a primarily transparent, wood-framed structure that extends the open portion of one of the gallery's street-facing windows into the center the exhibition space. Within the constructed chamber and connected only to the outside world is a field of living moss subjected to the environmental conditions present during the run of the exhibition; on dry days the moss will be a dormant grey color, on rainy days--to the extent that weather can reach within the structure--a vibrant green.

As an extension of the physicality and process aspects of his earlier work, gallery viewers will be able to observe a section of the exterior environment penetrating deep into the gallery space and its effect on the moss's condition. Holocene investigates two resonate themes of Roloff's work, one that relates architecture and human activity in general to larger natural and geologic systems, the second, in a similar way to the earlier landscape furnaces and other environmental works, where a force (in this case organic vitality as condition of contemporary climate) is made visible in a confined environment and a dialog ensues between nature, the structure and its contents.

Lance Fung Gallery is the New York dealer for John Roloff. He has work in such important art collections as: The National Museum of American Art, Washington, DC, San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, San Francisco, CA, De Young Memorial Museum, San Francisco, CA, Achenbach Foundation, San Francisco, CA, Oakland Museum, Oakland, CA, University Art Museum, University of California Berkeley, Berkeley, CA, Newport Harbor Museum, Newport Beach, CA, Museum of American Crafts, New York, NY, Crocker Art Museum, Sacramento, CA, Lannon Foundation, Palm Beach, FL, Cornell University, Ithica, NY, University of Arizona, Tuscon, AZ, University of Washington, Seattle, WA, University of Nevada, Reno, Reno, NV, Viart Corporation and (Numerous additional private collections)

To be removed from our lists please submit a blank email with a subject ['remove'], including quotes to [redacted].

If we have contacted you in error, our appologies.

↑ Index

189. Brian Lennon
contact info request: Ronk/Vangelisti/Phillips
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Are you out there, or anyone have contact info for:

Martha Ronk
Paul Vangelisti
Dennis Phillips

---or anyone else affiliated with Littoral?
It's about a review of _Alphabets_.
Backchannel, thanks.

Thanks
Brian Lennon

↑ Index

190. Taylor Brady
Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Ron,

Thanks for sending this -- voting for Ammiano is the first time I've participated in electoral politics (outside of union elections) and felt good about it the day after. Being a recent arrival, and living in one of the city's more left-leaning neighborhoods, I don't have any very accurate way to judge how the runoff might go -- but based on bus-stop talks, running into people at tenants' meetings, pizza joints, et al, the support for Tom seems to be far deeper than the Chron/Ex "don't worry, Mr. Fisher, it's just a protest vote" line would seem to indicate. Of course, my live-in landlord -- who rakes in $1250 a month for the single room my wife and I share -- walked in on a conversation I was having with a friend touching on Ammiano's campaign, and delivered himself of a fairly histrionic litany of reasons not to vote for the "gay Mao." I wish I were exaggerating here, but to see how apparently acceptable as public discourse this sort of homophobic red-baiting has become (once again) since Ammiano's showing on election day, take a look at today's Chron editorial cartoon, which depicts a man and woman, presumably a hetero couple, looking at an Ammiano campaign poster: MAN: "How can I vote for him? He's a...you know..." WOMAN: "Yeah. Marxist."

So we have something of a struggle on our hands, and the call for contributions is certainly apropos. As would be, perhaps, more letters to the editor like today's, which asks the pertinent question why Willie Brown's sexual profile hasn't been attached to his name as a de facto part of his job description.

Taylor

From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Ron Silliman
Sent: Saturday, November 06, 1999 5:44 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)

Some retro carpet-bagging on my part here. Tom Ammiano has made the mayoral runoff in San Francisco against Willie Brown. Brown has long been a social liberal who has used that stance to front for the most rapacious developers who've driven SF into a place where rental units now run $1,000 per month per bedroom (a far cry from the $350 I and my roommates paid in total for our 7-bedroom house in "Baja Pacific Heights" in the 1976-78 period).

Ammiano is a stand-up comic who first got active in politics by pushing to protect the rights of gay teachers in the mid-1970s. He's currently the president of the county board of supervisors and ran a write-in campaign that garnered 25 percent of all votes with just $20,000 (compared to Brown's 39 percent thanks to a budget of $2.3 million). Voters ejected ex-mayor/ex-police chief Frank Jordan and political consultant Clint Reilly from the run-offs, two relatively conservative politicians who got 29 percent of the vote.

Those of us who remember the late Harvey Milk are enheartened by a demonstration that populist politics need not be the know-nothing libertarianism of, say, a Jesse Ventura.

You don't need to live in San Francisco to benefit from Ammiano's election in the December election.

And you can help!

Call [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] to volunteer and help make history.

If you would like to make a contribution, send a check made payable to "Tom Ammiano For Mayor" to:
Ammiano for Mayor
125 Upper Terrace
San Francisco, CA 94117
(if donation is $100 or greater,
specify your occupation & employer)

FPPC ID # 990924

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

191. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: phonaesthetic
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Kevin,

You might try:

http://www.conknet.com/~mmagnus/

and

http://www.percep.demon.co.uk/pfol4th.htm

[I haven't found much on this, either...].

Best,

Dan

"K.Angelo Hehir" wrote:

> fellow travellers,
>
> i'm doing some work on the acoustic hermeneutic. i've been pouring over linguistics and psychology journals and find sentiments like the following quotation displays common: "The phonaesthetic properties of words have been used extensively by poets but we will not be concerned with them here."
>
> can anyone point me to some places where there is concern? i'm using jakobson's Six Lectures on Sound and Meaning as a starting point and

> kostelanetz' Text-Sound Texts for examples but i'msure there is more recent scholarship with relationship to current poetic practices.
>
> on another note, it's good to be back on poetics after time inside. it is a lot louder than i remember tho.
>
> thanks,
> kevin hehir

↑ Index

192. michael corbin
Re: query
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Michael Magee wrote:

> According to Todd Baron // ReMap Readers:*
>
> dear List:
>
> Truly wanting to use the list to co-respond with others--I posted a question teh last week. "What do you consider to be the first American (of the U.S.) poem"?
>
> Okay, I'll bite. I don't understand "before Bradstreet" in English, in the U.S. - who would that be? And in fact, if I have to pick someone, some poem, in this way, I'd say Bradstreet's as good as anyone - particularly "On My Dear Grandchild Simon Bradstreet," for its utterly sarcastic tone regarding God's divine providence - a tone which prefigures Dickinson's in poems like "I'm 'wife' -- I've finished that." All of the truisms about God's wisdom and grace here are couched by "Let's," my favorite being the extra-tentative "Let's say He's merciful as well as just."

Then straight I 'gin my heart to chide
And did they wealth on earth abide?

Raise up they thoughts above the sky
That dunghill mists away may fly.

"Upon the Burning of Our House, July 10 1666"

I think "utterly sarcastic" is probably right. Though only as counterpoise to Increase and Cotton's sermonizing versifyings and Wigglesworths' dreadnought.

But maybe that distance of intentionality is what makes for various FIRSTs.

Roger Williams' transliterations of the Narragansett "A Key Into The Language of America" with this poesy rouseauisms on the Making of Americaans. Might stand as a first.

> Everytime I read this I feel like responding, "Alright, what the hell, let's say it."

Or the English translators of Diego de Landa or Las Casas in their mock-up versifying of Maya sing-song for Walter Raleigh or Johnny Smith.

> For something more explicitly U.S.-ish, how 'bout Phillis Wheatley's "To His Excellency General Washington" which inaugurates the cooptation of Amurika's revered terms ("The land of freedom's heaven-defended race") by the marginalized. How did Creeley put it - "America, give us our country back"? Somethin like that.

"Once I redemption neither sought nor knew": Phillis on the mid-passage presentiment of the predicament of first pomes, Americus. Are they all the same afterward?

mc

↑ Index

193. pete spence
Re: internet costs
Mon 8 Nov 1999

>
I must say that the >libraries here are terrible. > >Best regards
>Peter

our town is very small a few thousand bods our branch public library is useless for any book i'd like to look at but the internet is free and reasonably fast but yesterday it was down whyche happens about once every six weeks so not a bad service if it wasn't here i wouldn't be able to fire up the mess of wires i got at home the modem would wonder what it was speaking to!!!! pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

194. michael corbin
Re: polarizing the web...
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Joe Amato wrote:

> *and not b/c we*
>
> believe we writers/artists need all the help we can get (albeit many of us DO think this---which is the upshot, i think, of introducing the typewriter as artifact into the discussion, as jim rosenberg has done)...
>
> , a disturbingly corporate, if (as tom beckett indicates) incorporeal, presence...

post-pixel

http://www.eink.com/

http://www.zdnet.com/pcmag/stories/trends/0,7607,2377431,00.html

mc

↑ Index

195. Daniel Zimmerman earliest american poem
Mon 8 Nov 1999

How about the Lenni-Lenape _Walum Olum_?

Or the one-word message carved in a tree by the lost
Roanoke colony: "Croatoan"? ["a cartoon"/"at corona"?]

Or something by a soldier or priest from St. Augustine?

Or Gloucester? {Olson may have identified it...Winthrop's
"city on a hill" bit?}

Hornbook verse? "Whales in the sea / God's voice obey"?

Runic inscriptions [the Kensington Stone]?

That bucket of beads for Manhattan?

What the thunder said?

--Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

196. Patrick Herron origin of American poetry spells trouble
Mon 8 Nov 1999

>Truly wanting to use the list to co-respond with others--I posted a > question teh last week. "What do you consider to be the first American
(of the U.S.) poem"?

This is a difficult question, because in it are two loaded words, "American" and "poem." A valuable question, with unexpected results, even upon a cursory glance.

I have written the following questions/phrasings to elucidate the multiplicities necessary for me to consider any answer, which is sure to be full of "and"s and "or"s. None of the following is INTENDED to display or compare penis dimension. This is about poetry (which often does coincide with genitalia or even secondary sex characteristics from time to time, so my apologies if I tempt you into thinking about typically hidden fleshy bits).

variations of the question based on variations of what "American" means:

1. first poem written in the Americas, geographically speaking (sounds like a challenge from a historical/archaeological perspective, and would also depend upon whether lyrics would be admitted): I am sure there are some very old Native American songs/chants; anyone?

2. first poem written in the Americas by a European: either doesn't exist or is unknown but this is a lack of scholarship on my part

3. first poem written in the Americas in English: ? anyone?

4. first "important" poems written in the Americas in English: Anne Bradstreet, particularly in "The Tenth Muse Lately Sprung upon America," her first book written in 1650. She was born in Northampton, England. It is interesting to note that Anne Hutchinson is said to be a poet, but I cannot find further evidence of that claim. If true, it was probably read, and she was very important, and she came before Anne Bradstreet. Which leads me to something revelatory about the origins of American poetry, if this be what you consider the beginning: Bradstreet and Hutchinson were both somewhat radical (Hutchinson very much so) and both allegedly had pretty scathing tongues. So perhaps they would largely be ignored on the POETICS list.

In Broadstreet's "The Tenth Muse Lately Sprung upon America," she writes, "I am obnoxious to each carping tongue." She also made heavy use of sarcasm, as Michael noted in his post.

5. first poem written in America as a colony in English: ?

6. first poem written in America as a nation circa Declaration of Independence in English: ?

7. first poem written in America as a nation circa the Constitution (signed or drafted, your pick) in English: ?

any of the above, but in Spanish instead of English: ?

in French: ?

in Choctaw: ? etc.

8. first “quintisentially” American poem: settled by arguments on what it is to be “truly American.”

Based on Michael's reasoning (I am sure I am taking it loosely so bear with me), I would say Jupiter Hammon, 1760: “An Evening Thought. Salvation by Christ, with Penetential Cries.”

http://www.lihistory.com/vault/423bvl.gif

Hammon preceded Wheatley by at least 10 years.

And then the problem of defining a poem:

Do we include or exclude clever engravings on headstones? Worksongs? Sea shanties? Actually these are difficult questions for me, ones I do not have any answer for, except to say truisms like "lyrics are lyrics."

Answering this question satisfactorily seems to take on the girth of a doctoral thesis quickly.

> Mike wrote:
>
> Okay, I'll bite. I don't understand "before Bradstreet" in English, >in the U.S. - who would that be?

A couple of sources on the internet say Bradstreet was America's first "important" poet, which implies to me there were other poets merely unimportant. Funny word, "important." I give that word little value; it strikes me as a word used in sophistry. Hutchinson, if she wrote verse, would be one such person to satisfy the pre-Bradstreet requirement.

One thing I have learned through this query is that:

any answer will have multiple answers and interpretations the roots of American poetry after the Mayflower take up their water from the soil of women and slaves, decidely the underdogs of their times (and our times, o how things get stuck in mud). And the "original" American poetry is steeped in the language of subservience & religious norms, especially rebellion against subservience & religious norms The sentiments of those encountering broken promises (the promise of equality and freedom, namely) in a new land.

Also, the problem of discovering the original American poem is like trying to recover Courbet's original "Origin of Mankind" painting. The origin without an original. Material composed of origins about origins that are lost in history. Always origins, without an original, beginning (v) without a beginning (n).

:p

Patrick Herron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

197. jocelyn saidenberg
Alcalay and Cole at Small Press Traffic, 11/12
Mon 8 Nov 1999

Small Press Traffic presents:

Friday, November 12, 7:30 p.m.
Ammiel Alcalay
reading and interviewed by Norma Cole

Ammiel Alcalay, scholar, critic, translator, poet and prose stylist, author of The Cairo Notebooks, makes a rare appearance in San Francisco to celebrate the publication by City Lights Books of his new book, Memories of Our Future: Selected Essays, 1982-1997. He will read from his work, old and new, and then will be joined on stage by San Francisco poet and translator Norma Cole, who will ask him about his multifold talents and accomplishments, and his translation as activism. With this event Small Press Traffic launches "In To View," a new series which hopes to illuminate in a discursive mode the issues, concerns and unspoken assumptions of the best writers of our day.

"Over the past fifteen years," writes Alcalay, "I have focused primarily on Hebrew and Jewish literature of the Middle East, in its Islamic, Levantine Arabic, and Israeli contexts. My work on Bosnia during the war in former Yugoslavia has entailed similar efforts at creating the cultural space for unfamiliar works to emerge. Throughout, my work as poet and prose-writer remains a crucial reference point, representing a kind of standard in form and content that I insist my other writing (and translation) adheres to." Alcalay's poetry, prose, reviews, critical articles and translations have appeared in The New York Times Book Review, The New Yorker, Time Magazine, The New Republic, The Village Voice, The Jerusalem Post, Grand Street, Conjunctions, Sulfur, The Nation, Middle East Report, Afterimage, Parnassus, City Lights Review, Review of Jewish Social Studies, The Review of Contemporary Fiction,

The Michigan Quarterly, Caliban, Paper Air, Paintbrush, Mediterraneans, and various other publications.

Norma Cole's most recent works are Desire & Its Double (Instress, 1998), Spinoza in Her Youth (A.bacus February, 1999), and Scout, a slide-text presentation. Her current translation work includes a selection of French writing and poetics called Crosscut Universe forthcoming from Burning Deck. Her translations of Anne Portugal's book Nude is forthcoming from Green Interger, and also of Lebanese writer Fouad Gabriel Naffah's poetry is forthcoming from Post Apollo Press. Cole has been the recipient of Gertrude Stein Awards, as well as awards from The Fund for Poetry.

New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center

766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]

www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

198. tf

TF12 November 1999 (Quandaries)

Mon 8 Nov 1999

The Transcendental Friend, no. 12, November 1999 - Quandaries

http://www.morningred.com/friend/1999/11/cover.html

Winter is coming. Build a fire. Make some smoke. Stand out in the November sun and contemplate the quandaries of life. Okay that didn't work: go back inside and read some poems by the warm and comforting light of a cathode ray tube.

Early Rumanian ("punk," as Julian Semilina wrote me in a note) poems of Tristan Tzara (trans. by J. Semilian and Sanda Agalidi) in Idiosyncratica.

Poems by Jo Ann Wasserman, Hoa Nguyen, and Nikolai Gumilev (trans. Katharine Gilbert) in Laird Hunt's Bestiary.

Andrew Levy's review of William Fuller's byt, in Daniel Machlin's Review.

Poems by Carmen Fioran (trans. Isaiah Sheffer, Andrei Codrescu, and J. Semilian & Sanda Agalidi), Zhai Yongming (trans. L. Schwartz & Zhang Er), and Osvaldo Sanchez (trans. Roberto Tejada), in Leonard Schwartz's Report.

Garrett Kalleberg

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

Immanent Audio Online at:
http://www.morningred.com/immanentaudio

↑ Index

199. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: query

Tue 9 Nov 1999

Michael Magee wrote:
>
>
> Okay, I'll bite. I don't understand "before Bradstreet" in English, in > the U.S. - who would that be?

> the marginalized. How did Creeley put it - "America, give us our country back"? Somethin like that.
>
> -Mike.

yes Mike: before the English got English. Something truly here of this awkward place. One response I got was the tree at Roanoke. That was a truly poetic gesture. I think Bradstreet true--but around the 1600s?

yrs,

Todd Baron

↑ Index

200. Jim Andrews
Hypertranscript is up of Defib on Talan Memmott
Tue 9 Nov 1999

The first canned version of the live Defib Web artist interview show is up at http://webartery.com/defib/canned/1talan/index.html. This is a hypertranscript version of the IRC chat session that Defib hosted concerning Talan Memmott's work.

Defib's interview/conversation with Talan Memmott revolves around discussion of approaches to new media and also to narrative within new media. Talan's diverse foci synthesize notions of narrative within text and visual art toward a new type of narrative "the way painting offers narration as something that must be discovered and unfolded" but also as "theory/fiction".

The hypertranscript, a fully produced hypertext, serves as an interesting introduction to Memmott's work.

Producing the hypertranscript of the .txt transcript with Talan was itself an interesting collaboration. Live chat sessions result in non linear texts involving several speakers and the transcipt leaps about quite naturally.

Many thanks to those who participated in this IRC conversation/interview.

↑ Index

201. Maria L. Zavialov
class, gender etc.
Tue 9 Nov 1999

Discussing class it's good to remember WHERE this discussion is taking place. Place, I mean a geographic spot or location, is another aspect (like gender) that should be introduced into the discussion. I mean location in terms of its economic situation. Thus the inhabitants of the US can all be said to belong to the upper class if viewed from a poor Asian country. One should try hard to stay hungry in the US, isn't one? The same goes for different locations within one and the same country. Like in Russia a native of Moscow coming to St. Petersburg is automatically moving one step up on the social ladder. And when he comes to a small provincial town he is already two steps up. And in a village... oh, in a village he (yes, he) is a guru. Masha Z.

↑ Index

202. Susan Wheeler
Reading / Query
Tue 9 Nov 1999

For those of you in New York:

Reading: Elaine Equi and Susan Wheeler
Saturday, November 13, 2:00 p.m.
New York Public Library, Riverside Branch
127 Amsterdam Avenue, New York
Free

Also, can anyone recommend (b/c) essays on / collections of current New Zealand poetries and Welsh poetries?

Susan

↑ Index

203. Alicia Askenase
Robert Creeley Reading
Tue 9 Nov 1999

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 21ST AT 2:30 PM

A Notable Poets and Writers Series reading by

ROBERT CREELEY

The Walt Whitman Cultural Arts Center
Second and Cooper Streets Camden, New Jersey 08102

for more information:
[redacted]

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 21ST 2:30 PM

↑ Index

204. Roger Day
Re: The Internet and all that / Mills
Tue 9 Nov 1999

At 1999-11-08 19:25:58, Poetics List <[redacted]> wrote:
I had to reformat this message. Please keep in mind that HTML formatting should not be sent to the list.

HTML mail on an anti-www tip? Disgraceful :-) My bits are at the end

Chris
#
--
#
From: "Mills, Billy" <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 5 Nov 1999 16:23:38 -0000
#
Date: Thu, 4 Nov 1999 00:07:43 +0000
#
> From: [redacted]
#
> Subject: Some stats on Web usage
#
>
#
> Region / Internet Users (in millions)
#
> United States, Canada 107.3
#
> Europe 46.4
#
> Asia/Pacific* 33.6
#
> Latin America 5.3
#
> Africa 1.7
#
> Middle East 0.9

I'd like to see the comparable literacy figures

#
> *Includes Australia and New Zealand
#
>
#
> Source: Red Herring magazine, December 1999
#
So, the arguments are not melting before my eyes.
#
I did not say that poets should not use PCs: the fact that I am e-mailing
#
these messages would contradict such a proposition.

#
I am saying that we should not lie to ourselves that the Web is more open
#
than books are.
#
Yes, access is easier: if you are a citizen of the 'developed' 'world'.
#
Yes, books were exclusionist in their day, so that makes it OK to reproduce
#
this in Webworld? While we're at it, we could reinstitute serfdom, witch
#
hunts and child labour.

How long has it taken books to get to this "non-exclusionary" position? How many centuries? For a young technology, the Web isn't doing half-bad. Yes, of course it's lower-thresholds maybe higher -currently- but the night is young…I may be the optimist here but, given the current -rate- of expansion, near world saturation might be acheived within 20 years. From zero to ubiquity within the space of a 100 years -if- it comes about will be no mean feat. You might not like it, but there you go.

I know a lot of poets find new and exciting potential in virtual creation, and that the Internet gives users access to a huge range of material. But
#
#
look again at the figures posted by kathylou, and then let's be honest about
#
the _social_ limitations of the medium. It is, in many ways, another way of enforcing centre/margin relationships, another hot topic on this list.
#
#
Billy

Indeed. Most things usually end up in a conspiracy and/or a binary theory :-)

Roger

↑ Index

205. Lowther, John
Re: Techno Immateria
Tue 9 Nov 1999

---

brian lennon wrote; "For the most floridly morbid expressions of the idea that telecommunications media "dematerialize" the human body, see the pessimistic simulation theory of Jean Baudrillard, Paul Virilio, some of Fredric

Jameson. There's lots of interesting, and not necessarily even new thinking, though, that challenges this: e.g., the socialist feminism of Donna Haraway. Haraway's work always reminds me that no matter how tempting it may be to say that I'm "dematerialized" in the act of speaking onto this List, my actual body is still sitting right here in the chair, typing--- it hasn't gone anywhere."

> just wanted to add here > that the computer i'm working on > seems to me > like a material object
>
> and tho i'm far too out of it > to explain to anyone how it is > that the message i'm responding to > fills my screen
>
> i have this perhaps odd conviction > that it to isnt quite immaterial
>
>)ohn

↑ Index

206. Katie Degentesh
NEW EMAIL ADDRESS
Tue 9 Nov 1999

NEVER AGAIN [redacted]

FROM NOW ON

[redacted]

Please take note. Thanks. Katie Degentesh.

↑ Index

207. Lowther, John
Weekend in New Orleans (part 1)
Tue 9 Nov 1999

> { p o e t i x }

i made it to the reading and symposium sponsored by the new orleans review this weekend and it was a blast

i hope to get a significant amount down in a post or two but am not trying for anything comprehensive or even focused on the 'event' so much as just a recounting as things strike my memory.... maybe i'll use headers like...

MEETING POETS

Bernadette Mayer was at the dinner friday the 5th at Camille Martin's house and the crowd included Bill Lavender, (the irrepressible) Nancy Dixon, Hank Lazer, Skip Fox, Randy Prunty, Andy di Michele, Myself, and folks whose last names i missed Phillip (travelling with Bernadette) John (lives there with Camille) ... there were more but Bernadette is way cool and i loved the last hour and half or perhaps two hours sitting and standing around in the dining room and listening as she'd make us all laugh then listen as some one of the crowd began to talk for awhile then she'd catch the edge of something in their talk and mention it as joke or paradox or observation and have us all laughing again and she told us a story that really hit me about someone who'd been Cage's nurse at the time of his death and who kept the EKG which showed the final beats of his heart, that this person had made something from it, a piece of art wondered if there wasn't a Cagean reading of it that wd make it something more interesting such that just as 4'33" illustrates for us that there is no silence, becoming a score for the unintended whatever that occurs... might his EKG also be a score (was it Joan Retallack who said that what Cage had left us primarily were scores ?) one that we don't intend but which we'll end up playing anyway...? (just a thought) but back to Bernadette, i'm left thinking of her the genius of good humor ---- tho i know that she explores all manner of moods in her work, my experience of talking to her was primarily of good humor ---- an example that springs to mind is when the Yasusada book _doubled flowering_ was mentioned --- she wasnt familiar with it and i gave her a quick run-down of the "bio" of AY and after the brief cataloging she said "seems like it cd've been a little more cheerful, doesnt it?" ---- another exempla wd be at the symposium where some of us talked blathered (that was me) and soliloquized and Bernadette spoke only once as i recall saying something like "my response is to laugh when things are funny"

[AUDIO POESIS ADDENDUM TO BERNADETTE] ---- she had CDs for sale "Epigrams, Imitations and Translations" the price was $10, i dunno if that's all the time or conference price or what --- but you cd probably score one by writing to Utopia Productions at 206 Macedonia Road, Chatham NY 12037

SYMPOSIUM

i tried to give a talk called "experimentalism, formalism and improvisation" that wasnt very successful ---- partially perhaps b/c i voided much of the bulk in order to get it within the time allotted (and still failed), tho ultimately the piece didnt work b/c these things i was trying to define or redefine, while important to me daily in my work as poet, arent perhaps things that anyone else was particularly engaged with and as a measure of how little the redefined

"experimentalism" took with the crowd it went on being used in all the absurd ways that i was hoping to sheer off it for the rest of the symposium

Randy Prunty gave a talk about his othersense poetry and then read an othersense piece with participation from several audience members (Bill, Hank, Skip, Andy, Camille) --- his was i think the most interesting of the talks as almost alone among them it presented a context of ideas about actual poetic work and then gave an example of this work ---- the participants also had a number of interesting responses to the effect that theyre participation had on them and their reception of the poem

A. di Michele's talk was also pretty interesting and he came the closest to blurring one's ability to say this is poetry and this is talk about poetry time the night prior to this and i was really pretty blown away by the readings he gave during this talk at the reading that night and especially the next day at the maple leaf bar ---- in the symposium he said something about the state where one creates write poetry and about not about how to get there or ways to get there but about "waking up in it" --- i wish i cd recall exactly how he said this...

there were more symposium talks that i should try to recount but now i gotta do WORK (jeez)

.out

)ohn

↑ Index

208. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: Left Hand Reading for 11/17 @ 9:00 pm

Tue 9 Nov 1999

> LEFT HAND READING SERIES PRESENTS:
>
> JOE AMATO
> &
> KASS FLEISHER
>
> Wednesday, November 17 at 9:00 pm.
> Left Hand Books is located at 1825 Pearl Street, Boulder, between 18th & 19th, above the Crystal Market.
>
> Free & Open to the public. A donation is requested.
>
> Open reading to precede featured readers.
>
> JOE AMATO is the author of a book of poetry, "Symptoms of a Finer Age," and a critical-poetic work, "Bookend: Anatomies of a Virtual Self." His > poetry, prose and scholarship have appeared in Postmodern Culture, Denver Quarterly, New American Writing and many other journals. He has recently completed a new manuscript of poetry, "Lake Affect," and a memoir, "No Outlet." He is Professor of Creative Writing at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

>
> KASS FLEISHER has written two novels: "Edla, Small and Waving," and "Blue Blazes to Dead Woman Hollow." She has completed a critical memoir about the experiences of middle class women in academia, "Suffer Not A Woman." Her essays and reviews have appeared in Z Magazine, American Book Review and Postmodern Culture, among others, and her fiction has been awarded annual prizes from The Dickinson Review and Plainswoman. She is adjunct professor of English at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

↑ Index

209. Taylor Brady

Re: phonaesthetic

Tue 9 Nov 1999

Sorry for the glut of postings, but I thought this might be of interest to someone. Full information on the LaBelle and Roden anthology I mentioned in my last response to this thread follows:

Site of Sound: Architecture and the Ear. Edited by Brandon LaBelle and Steve Roden. Errant Bodies/Smart Art Press, paperback + CD.

↑ Index

210. Brent Long

Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)

Tue 9 Nov 1999

List,

Can somebody please explain to me what the political candidates in SF have to do with poetics in Boston, or anywhere for that matter? If I want to hear candidates be plugged by those who support them, I'll just shoot on up to New Hampshire for the primary.

I've been quietly watching some of the threads coming through here regarding the advertising, political debate, and general mental masturbation that the list seems bogged down with lately, but this one really irked me.

Where are the poetics in threads devoted to insult, ego-battles, and mayoral debates? Perhaps I'm missing something...

Brent

From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Taylor Brady Sent: Monday, November 08, 1999 7:04 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)

Ron,

Thanks for sending this -- voting for Ammiano is the first time I've participated in electoral politics (outside of union elections) and felt good about it the day after. Being a recent arrival, and living in one of the city's more left-leaning neighborhoods, I don't have any very accurate way to judge how the runoff might go -- but based on bus-stop talks, running into people at tenants' meetings, pizza joints, et al, the support for Tom seems to be far deeper than the Chron/Ex "don't worry, Mr. Fisher, it's just a protest vote" line would seem to indicate. Of course, my live-in landlord -- who rakes in $1250 a month for the single room my wife and I share -- walked in on a conversation I was having with a friend touching on Ammiano's campaign, and delivered himself of a fairly histrionic litany of reasons not to vote for the "gay Mao." I wish I were exaggerating here, but to see how apparently acceptable as public discourse this sort of homophobic red-baiting has become (once again) since Ammiano's showing on election day, take a look at today's Chron editorial cartoon, which depicts a man and woman, presumably a hetero couple, looking at an Ammiano campaign poster: MAN: "How can I vote for him? He's a...you know..." WOMAN: "Yeah. Marxist."

So we have something of a struggle on our hands, and the call for contributions is certainly apropos. As would be, perhaps, more letters to the editor like today's, which asks the pertinent question why Willie Brown's sexual profile hasn't been attached to his name as a de facto part of his job description.

Taylor

From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Ron Silliman
Sent: Saturday, November 06, 1999 5:44 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)

Some retro carpet-bagging on my part here. Tom Ammiano has made the mayoral runoff in San Francisco against Willie Brown. Brown has long been a social liberal who has used that stance to front for the most rapacious developers who've driven SF into a place where rental units now run $1,000 per month per bedroom (a far cry from the $350 I and my roommates paid in total for our 7-bedroom house in "Baja Pacific Heights" in the 1976-78 period).

Ammiano is a stand-up comic who first got active in politics by pushing to protect the rights of gay teachers in the mid-1970s. He's currently the president of the county board of supervisors and ran a write-in campaign that garnered 25 percent of all votes with just $20,000 (compared to Brown's 39 percent thanks to a budget of $2.3 million). Voters ejected ex-mayor/ex-police chief Frank Jordan and political consultant Clint Reilly from the run-offs, two relatively conservative politicians who got 29 percent of the vote.

Those of us who remember the late Harvey Milk are enheartened by a demonstration that populist politics need not be the know-nothing libertarianism of, say, a Jesse Ventura.

You don't need to live in San Francisco to benefit from Ammiano's election in the December election.

And you can help!

Call [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] to volunteer and help make history.

If you would like to make a contribution, send a check made payable to "Tom Ammiano For Mayor" to:
Ammiano for Mayor
125 Upper Terrace
San Francisco, CA 94117
(if donation is $100 or greater,
specify your occupation & employer)

FPPC ID # 990924

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

211. Richard Dillon
Re: Business, class, access (fwd)
Tue 9 Nov 1999

BUK!

Charles Bukowski.

That's it.
>From: [redacted]
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Business, class, access (fwd)

>Date: Fri, Nov 5, 1999, 1:57 PM
>

> ---------- Forwarded Message: ----------
> From: [redacted]
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Business, class, access
> Date: Fri, 05 Nov 1999 18:55:29 +0000
>
> *Again, this response brings with it a massive load of assumptions about me and where I have and haven't been. And you are simply kidding yourself if you think that class has nothing to do with access to time to write, educational opportunities, access to literary communities, access to the Internet, access to publications and being published, time to read, money to buy books, money to publish books, etc.*
> Hurray for the steelworker who published a book. What does this prove? Is this the exception to the rule?
> And why is it that when folks speak up about class in poetry communities they are immediately accussed of being "victims" "whiners" etc.? Is this how you respond to racism? Or does racism exist, and classism doesn't? Get real.
> Kathy Lou
> David Baratier:
> There are many publishers outside & on this list who do not use the perpetual victim stance or "have not" status you are attributing
> to the lower classes
>
> KL:
> Question: How does bringing the power of analysis to bear on a situation, > speaking out about it, and producing works in response to it constitute being a "victim"?
>
> Answer:
>
> Are you asserting that you are analyzing the situation? Throughout your posting you blame a social construct as a way to position yourself. The implication of-- "I get very tired of this because money does buy access: more time to write, money to publish one's own journals and books, which in turn increases both community as well as publishing opportunities for one's own work by increasing your 'profile' and 'reputation.'" ---is that your working class background does not allow you to go beyond the societal expectation inherent in class structure.

> "Publication being determined partly by who you know" The implication that one cannot "know" anyone without ludicrous jacksons hits me as another oppressive class myth. I know a guy who was a steelworker when tri-quarterly published his first book. I know a guy who works in a cranberry bog for numerous months each year, who is well published & one of the latter half of this centuries best poets. And so on--
>
> "There's a lack of access to the Internet, where one can hobnob with publishers and magazine editors" Yet another victim statement. Interested folks can go to the library for free, as mentioned.
>
> While not all of these quotes are yours, Kathy, as you also say, "the quote from Bobbie implicates both Bobbie & myself, in a way laying things bare, and saying, yup this is how it works." My question is, in what way are you a reliable source for what occurs in the upper eschelons of poetry if you have never been there? I also add, as a person whose income is negligible, that I have not personally experienced the insinuated discrepancies described.
>
> Be well
>
> David Baratier

↑ Index

212. Kathy Lou Schultz

Re: Business, class, access

Tue 9 Nov 1999

During this recent discussion on class I have been accused of being a "victim" of "making excuses" and of being "a spokesperson for persons who sort lettuce." That these are all personal attacks is significant, as well as tiresome.

I teach about, write about, speak about, and research working class writing. In none of these instances have I made excuses, been a victim, or acted as a spokesperon for lettuce sorters.

I'm sick of unfounded personal attacks that deflect from any actual arguments being presented. Many of these attacks are thinly-disguised veils for a dangerous political conservativism which blames people for their own struggles within the class system.

If anyone cares to know what I have to say about class and what I have written about it, please feel free to read my essay on working class poetics from tripwire that is now online at HOW2, or read recent poetry in "Genealogy" from a+bend press. I have also contributed to publishing working-class writing in the journal I co-edit, Lipstick Eleven, as well as in the HOW2 Forum. I am posting these URLs for easy access to Listees as it is evident that futher postings to the list on this subject are useless and I've had enough.

Essay
http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2/current/alerts/schultz.html

Forum
http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2/
current/forum/index.html

Excerpt from Genealogy in Idiom (issue number five) http://www.idiomart.com/issues.html

Kathy Lou Schultz
> I disagree with the idea of class limiting my opportunities to be > published. It has not. If writing is important, a way to survive will be > figured, in my experience. The use of the bog or steelworker is not an > exception by any stretch of the imagination. And that others have > programmed you to believe any instance of a writer with a working class > background getting published is a phenomenon, perhaps is more indicative > of your vantage point or associations. For me it has been more of the > rule and I can think of many other examples, including myself. Almost > all of the peoples books I have published fit this category as well. If > you want some kind of a useful discussion, as you claim for, it would > behoove you not to be so irrelevant and snide in your comments.
>
> My belief is not that one needs to "pull themselves up by the > bootstraps" to remove poverty from the equation, as you have typified > it. Rather, finding, to quote Will, "the imaginal power to leap beyond > the brutally imposed confines to combat the bureaucracies with an > elemental seismics, with a new and alien thinking" does not require a > monetary amount beyond a lower class income, but a desire to have change > as an primary element of what one does. Will does not name the "brutally > imposed confines" in his writings and neither do I. A force to work > against without the naming process supplies the energy without the > denegrative state of reverse labeling. Upon saying who I am, in person, > perhaps these ideologies of opposition become less opaque, but this is > not a requirement to understanding. Desire and priority are the missing > aspects-- as with many I've placed writing first, done a survival called > the necessary, in whatever method has worked-- rather than point to my > class upbringing or ethnicity as a justification.

>
> I find, as someone who has a lower class income, that your assessment is > inaccurate. I felt your mass categorization of the lower classes was not > one fitting to myself or many of the writers in the same situation I > know closely. It is unfortunate that many believe they do not have > access to the things you list below. This unfounded belief perpetuates > itself in not having these opportunities become manifest. That classism > exists, I agree. When it is used as an excuse, whether to defend one's > choices, supposed lack thereof, or to support poorly written work, its > utility is worthless.
>
> PS-- Thanks Robin.
>
> Be well
>
> David Baratier
>
> Again, this response brings with it a massive load of > assumptions about me and where I have and haven't been.
> And you are simply kidding yourself if you think that > class has nothing to do with access to time to write,
> educational opportunities, access to literary communities,
> access to the Internet, access to publications and being > published, time to read, money to buy books, money to > publish books, etc.
> Hurray for the steelworker who published a book. What does > this prove? Is this the exception to the rule?
> And why is it that when folks speak up about class in > poetry communities they are immediately accussed of being
> "victims" "whiners" etc.? Is this how you respond to > racism? Or does racism exist, and classism doesn't? Get > real.
> Kathy Lou

↑ Index

213. David Kirschenbaum

Booglite issue two: Poetry as Cultural Critique

Tue 9 Nov 1999

Now available:

Booglite issue two: Poetry as Cultural Critique, 1999
David Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher

Zine published in conjunction with Poetry as Cultural Critique symposium, University of Minnesota, November 5-6, 1999.
Co-directors, Maria Damon and Mark Nowak.

General run of 100 copies:

16 pages, + 4-page ivory cardstock cover wrap—with xerographic reproduction of full-cover linoleum block print by Daisy DeCapite. Saddle-stapled. $6ppd.

Limited edition of 26 copies (15 available):

16 pages + 4-page rust cardstock cover wrap--with full-cover original black w/silver linoleum block print by DeCapite. Hand-sewn and lettered A to Z. Each zine has an ivory tip-in sheet signed by the authors--Tim Brennan, Damon, C. S. Giscombe, Roy Miki, Harryette Mullen, and Juliana Spahr--and cover artist. $12ppd.

Checks payable to:
Boog Literature
351 W.24th Street, Apt. 19E
New York, NY 10011-1510
email: [redacted] tel: [redacted]

Features poetry and paper excerpts from:

•Brennan, a professor at the University of Minnesota. He is the author of At Home in the World: Cosmopolitan Now (Harvard, 1997) and the forthcoming Music in Cuba (U. of Minnesota, 2000);

•Damon, a poetry and poetics professor at the University of Minnesota. She is the author of The Dark End of the Street: Margins in American Vanguard Poetry (U. of Minnesota, 1993) and a member of the National Writers' Union;

•Giscombe, author of numerous books, including Giscome Road (Dalkey Archive, 1998) and Two Sections from Practical Geography (Diaeresis Press, 1999). He is an English professor at Pennsylvania State University;

•Miki, a professor at Simon Fraser University. He is the former editor of West Coast Line (1990-99) and has edited The Collected Poems of Roy K. Kiyooka (Talonbooks, 1997). His most recent publication is a collection of essays, Broken Entries: Race Subjectivity Writing (Mercury Press, 1998);

•Mullen, the author of four books of poetry, most recently Muse & Drudge (Singing Horse Press, 1995). Her first book, Tree Tall Woman (Energy Earth, 1981), will be out in a new edition by Bucknell University Press. She teaches English and African American Studies at UCLA; and •Spahr, a continental haole who teaches at the U of Hawai'i, Manoa. Her recent books are Response (Sun and Moon, 1996) and Spiderwasp or Literary Criticism (Spectacular Books, 1999). A book of creative writing, Fuck You-Aloha-I Love You (Wesleyan) and a critical book, Everybody's Autonomy (Alabama University Press), both tentatively titled, are forthcoming.

Booglite is published periodically by Boog Literature. Boog always reads work for Booglite or other consideration (send SASE with no more than five poems or pages of any type of art or writing).

Boog Literature publications are edited and published by Kirschenbaum.

Email or SASE for Boog catalog.

As ever,
David

_____ Get FREE voicemail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

214. Nielsen, Aldon
readings in Los Angeles
Tue 9 Nov 1999

Andrew Joron and Spencer Selby will read next Thursday, Nov. 18 at:

Hilton 300 A & B
Loyola Marymount University
7900 Loyola Blvd.
L.A.

8:00 P.M.

for info. call me at [redacted]

↑ Index

215. Lowther, John
Weekend in New Orleans (part 2)
Tue 9 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

CAGEAN MOMENT

night of the 6th, Bill Lavender had invited all the crowd at the readings to descend on his house for a party and many did come but Bill's partner Nancy had been at some kind of stuffy-semi-formal thing and she'd invited all these folks to blow off steam by coming to back home too so the crowd was curiously mixed ---- and the place was slammin' --- wall to wall everywhere and a bit much for me afer a time and so i ducked into the back beg room where Skip Fox was also hiding out and we sat there and listened to the gabble of voices raised in rooms on every side of us and out on the back porch too ---- it was an amazing sound ---- there was no music playing just lots of people talking and laughing and holding forth and while i've heard that sort of sound before this time it was somehow unique, perhaps the fact that i sat in a room shut off from that making it easier to resolve into a thing of occassional waves but mostly bursts and clashes ---- i ran out of the room to get randy after awhile but the initial push and volume was lessened by then as the party had thinned a bit or dispersed some and i also asked bill if he had a tape recorder but alas

MEETING POETS

and this darkened room where the voices gabbled then did turn towards discussion as Skip Fox and i started talking about this and that and one of the things that came up most clearly, i think, to both of us, is that having poetry is a great start on having common ground --- Skip and i are separated by some 20 years difference in age, very different taste in metaphors (when speaking of our work etc) and very different lives but were able in very little time to get to know each other and to get to serious talk about what it is we both care about ---- something i can only attribute to poetry as i've run into devotees of klezmer music previously and not had this happen, encountered others in bands when i was a band guy, run into lots of people with similar interests and fascinations etc etc and while i've often had a good time finding these things out and meeting these people it seems that in the poetry world i've found this much more to be the case

THE READING

Joel Dailey was pretty great at this event --- he had a way of weaving talk in between the poems such that both were elevated by the process, his reading style or skills or whatever were top notch as well

Mike Sarki's reading was curious, he started by reading the foreward to his book (written by gordon lish, his teacher) wherein tis written "there are only two poets for me, Stevens and Sarki" ---- this line crops up in something of a tough-guy appreciation and struck me as really fucking strange ---- i mean, it's nice to have someone say nice things about you ? that's a bit wierd and Sarki seemed to have a firm feeling that he was a an outsider and didnt belong

amongst all us academics (like me ? not.) ---- but when he actually read his poems i thought they were kinda interesting --- not really sure where all the oppositional chip on shoulder stuff came from tho

Bernadette's reading was also pretty great and she brought Phillip Good out of the audience to do a dialogue poem in which Phillip played the part of "House" and she played herself ---- it was fun and funny and made us all laugh

Camille Martin read some phonetic (homolinguistic) translations of Oppen and they had a sly slipperiness about them that i liked, tho, spoiled by our local practice, i'm always disappointed that i don't have the text in front of me --- which is something that wd have heightened my appreciation of many of the readers i'm sure everyone said i did fine and i guess i believe them but i had this odd sensation as i read --- 1st that i was off pace somehow 2nd that i might have been mispronouncing or blowing lines but that i wasnt sure as i was busy paying attention to the sense of pace --- about half way into my thing i felt like it started to click tho

Bill Lavender read seemingly as an afterthought and i liked the piece and his reading, while it was maybe not the show stopper it had been in Tuscaloosa some months back of new orleans are nuts --- every intersection cracked and humped by the settling of the land -- the swamp repressed beneath it --- but it's a city that need no additional speed bumps in residential neighborhoods

THE STREETS

)ohn

↑ Index

216. Jill Stengel
Re: Business, class, access
Tue 9 Nov 1999

---

after reading david baratier's recent post in response to kathy lou schultz's response to him (etc),

i am left with this thought that is glaring in my head, hard to shut off, shove away. so i'll just go ahead and say it. even tho it's obvious...

the experience of class is different for women and men, as women also have to contend with sexism, men do not.

(and then, of course, there are many other isms that can show up too...) multiple -isms seem to have a geometric rather than simply additive effect.

there ARE drawbacks, disadvantages, when one is outside of the privileged classes. access to many opportunities IS limited-- --and david, it's great for you that you haven't found it to be so, but by saying it's not true for others, it ignores/erases the efforts people make every day to "overcome," or simply live with, what they/i/we/you (am)are faced with.

this doesn't mean that things can't be done, that opportunities don't exist, it means simply that there are more obstacles, and that desire to overcome or integrate, live with, these obstacles has to be very strong. (and sometimes the will is still not enough.)

there are always those people who are able to do what they will anyway, despite disadvantages
...and those with advantages who fail repeatedly...
--this does not change the facts: that advantages and disadvantages do exist; and, in our culture, money is usually the force that tips the scales.

btw, i didn't see kathy lou using class as an excuse for anything...rather, as a framework for understanding.

further btw, i don't think i agree with the idea of "A force to work against without the naming process supplies the energy without the denegrative state of reverse labeling."
i like to know what i'm dealing with.
naming helps to define, clarify.

thinking about this more...
jill stengel

↑ Index

217. Nielsen, Aldon

Fwd: INFO: trumpeter lester bowie dies -- tribute in harlem arts journal

Tue 9 Nov 1999

> From: [redacted]
> Date: Tue, 9 Nov 1999 16:39:02 EST
> Subject: INFO: trumpeter lester bowie dies -- tribute in harlem arts journal
> To: [redacted]
> X-Mailer: AOL 4.0.i for Mac sub 189
>
> Dear Kalamu,
> I thought cyberdrummers would want to know about the death from liver cancer of this monumental artist. Lester was aware that he had a short time to live, but continued touring Europe with his group Brass Fantasy. A few weeks ago, he became seriously ill in London and was hospitalized. Upon his return to New York, his health deteriorated rapidly. The tour will be > continued after memorials are completed with his brother trombonist Joseph Bowie as leader. There are several jazz websites which discuss Lester's magnificent career. I advise everyone to use the keyword "jazz" in their search.

>
> For those interested, the fall 1999 issue of the Harlem Arts Journal features interviews with Lester, Olu Dara and Russell Gunn, in an article entitled, ironically enough, "Surviving the Trumpet." For those interested, a subscription page is attached to this e-mail. In the article, Lester discusses his origins, influences and the cultural stasis he perceived occurs when record companies usurp too much control vis a vis the evolution of black music. It is a wonderful piece, and I am so blessed that we had a chance to talk.
>
> Best wishes in your continued efforts on this wonderful site!
>
> Ruth-Miriam Garnett
> Publisher, Harlem Arts Journal

↑ Index

218. pete spence

Re: Business, class, access (fwd)

Tue 9 Nov 1999

> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Business, class, access
> Date: Fri, 05 Nov 1999 18:55:29 +0000
>
> *Again, this response brings with it a massive load of assumptions about me and where I have and haven't been. And you are simply kidding yourself if you think that class has nothing to do with access to time to write, educational opportunities, access to literary communities, access to the Internet, access to publications and being published, time to read, money to buy books, money to publish books, etc.*

i remembwer well i was doing a 12 hour nite shift driving a forklift in the 80's , and while i was at it wrote this little ditty:

TOUR

abroad on the paddle splashes into harbour tries luck and gains six overcoats with sunshine between the stars

a parenthesis ladles the tune relaxing on a Li-Lo reading Li Po under some amended weather tumbling sunshine

breathes a moment
makes an X on a relief map of a cloud with wax in his ears his thought keeps always thought Penumbra was a month in a template climate zoned temporate

where the toucan can rest his jaw postcard wednesday: toured a tourist bus found where callouses come from added a hurricane to tour (not in brochure) mended paddle

pete spence

if you can't have a tweak of fun while you are working then you might as well sleepwalk!!!!
>

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

219. Joe Amato
Re: Business, class, access
Tue 9 Nov 1999

david b, i think i find mself on the opposite side of the table from you, and sitting next to kathy lou, when it comes to this issue of class... and i think you know this (based on SO many of my posts to this list in the past, dealing specifically with this issue)... so i hesitate to try to persuade you of my way of looking at things, esp. b/c i regard my way of looking at things as opening to some relatively elemental and utterly urgent realities... but what the hell, it's twixt friends, or virtual friends, or acquaintances, or whatever... so i'll give it a whack, and i'll be deliberate...

you speak of "classism" as something that "exists"... not an esp. strong claim, from where i sit... but my question would be, how does it exist? and why does it exist? and esp., in the context of what i would loosely call, a tad archaically, the writing life...

of course there's all sortsa room here for idiosyncracies, but---

and of course i believe that most writers will ultimately, should ultimately find a way to write, but--- these allowances don't in themselves obviate a discussion of (e.g.) class-based struggle... say, as it relates to writing process and product, but also as it relates to our perceptions of what we are about as writers...

if classism exists, then i take it class too exists, right?... i mean, there are economic classes, right?... and one's entrance into---or exclusion from---such classes is not entirely within one's (individual) control, yearn or aspire or endeavor or resist as one may-----right?... (i won't go into that class item most frequently discussed hereabouts---that of the shifty-ness of class markers)...

ok: if i aspire, say, to $60K per annum (among other aspirations) i probably better figure on doing something besides just writing poetry, right?...

(oh hey---i'm not ashamed to say i aspire to $60K/yr either, anymore than i am of aspiring to write poetry)...

further, if i decide to write poetry, whatever my economic aspirations, this latter decision will impinge upon my life somehow, right?... given that money doesn't grow on trees, i might find---in all likelihood, i probably will find---that the demands relating to making ends meet do not coincide, neatly or productively (at least, not all of the time, perhaps not most of the time), with the demands of writing... right?...

or to borrow from williams (_paterson_ book iii, part ii), albeit to my own class-specific ends:

> The writing is nothing, the being > in a position to write (that's
>
> where they get you) is nine tenths > of the difficulty; seduction
>
> or strong arm stuff. The writing > should be a relief,
>
> relief from the conditions > which as we advance become -- a fire,
>
> a destroying fire. For the writing > is also an attack and means must be
>
> found to scotch it -- at the root > if possible. So that
>
> to write, nine-tenths of the problem > is to live.

spoken by an m.d., yep... so, everything in my life (in my life, mind you david) tells me that "to live" is, in an important and (again) utterly urgent sense [the one having to do with earning a living such that doing same supports my writing---which in my view i deal with on a daily basis], an economic issue... hence (if i may) a class issue...

none of this is absolute or inevitable, no, and surely some of this is a matter of emphasis (among other things)... but in some sense one might observe that it may as well be absolute and inevitable, david... b/c that's how the world is constructed, no?---or so it seems to yours truly... and if it seems so---to me, e.g.---sometimes and in some ways (at least) it probably is so, ain't it?... and that it seems so is, at least, itself a mark of the classism to which you refer, yes?...

unless i'm hallucinating, i mean, and unless i've been hallucinating for lo these many years... always a possibility, sure...

BUT i'm not sure, in all, why you would resist the class issue as a writing/publishing issue, in the very terms kathy lou has introduced... i don't think the "urgency" i point to suggests evangelical fervor, either, and for that matter, i didn't 'hear' same in kathy lou's posts... in all, the effect of yours and others' resistance on this count, it seems to me, is to move "us" away from a willingness to deal with class specifics (and associated complexities, incl. btw intimacies of various sorts, as well as this question of how the biz of poetry relates to the practice of same)... that is, resistance here, even outright skepticism, has the effect of helping to shut down what appears to me to be an entirely reasonable and entirely necessary exchange (and of course you're not alone in such resistance either---i mean, if i'm picking on you a bit here, and i am, i could as well have picked on stephen ellis, pleased to make your acquaintance stephen)...

: we can, some few of us, just get on with it without your participation as such, i know... hence in no sense is your resistance to be understood as the "final word" or some such (anymore than is this post to be taken as a hostile intervention)... but as class is, like classism, difficult to discuss for many of us (though perhaps not for you), we're just as likely to say to ourselves, when greeted by such skepticism, why bother?... again, disagreement is one thing, but some of what passed before my eyes of late appeared to me either to be dismissive of kathy lou's concerns, or to be asking of kathy lou that she defend her assertions (stephen's opener "hits a particular nail square on the head, but doesn't drive it anywhere" a case of the latter, i think, and your "[t]his unfounded belief perpetuates itself in not having these opportunities become manifest" heading distinctively toward the former)...

and if this post provokes a "why bother?" reaction in you, david (or stephen), my apologies---and i mean it... as in so many recent exchanges "around here," it just seems to me that the conversation has become unnecessarily contentious precisely when a bit less skepticism and a bit more goodwill might have produced some insights, and might have drawn (some of) us a bit closer together in the process, if only for a moment...

i only wish i could have said all this with sense of humor intact...

best,

joe

↑ Index

220. Alan Sondheim

imanopagun lleraze why ...

Tue 9 Nov 1999

-

imanopagun lleraze why e uranantu sald dffirous th mtyllfu odka rarf ani- mop lraleunag wzehyrantna u esau ldirs ouff d mthty oclrtfulldi, rtawac ecl, oth heee bd,blr eaenth hgianhe t mngan isos it, la bckdieaf e wchw- aebth,e d olrbte hhaen natee iahgningiss mt,keoc c s hee'tan simwa jt us- ngyiovabe clinaw, usatg ool, es hur'rwee eawld dasbna 'cis ewm hatei snav- estbo aygs,ju ut ilawng c oaruhee,l'swro aess s e sh iheyssa aihaae s deh- sds e dark panorama in gully where azure and alan stuff dirty mouths full of ardk ra imanopagun lleraze why e uranantu sald dffirous th mtyllfu ort- cl, dirt, claw each other, bleed, beneath the hanging man, it is so black we dif eawacheblr oth d,ee bthhe teaenan hgianit, mngs isocke can't see him swaying just above us, clawing at our holes, we're as dead wla bn'cat hiswm e seinayg avebostjus, u cngt awilar ouho wree's,les as he is, she says ades ihe aadshs e ar dk ra

---

↑ Index

221. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: contact info request: Ronk/Vangelisti/Phillips

Tue 9 Nov 1999

Brian Lennon wrote:
>
> Are you out there, or anyone have contact info for:
>
> Martha Ronk

> Paul Vangelisti
> Dennis Phillips
>
> ---or anyone else affiliated with Littoral?
> It's about a review of _Alphabets_.
> Backchannel, thanks.
>
> Thanks
> Brian Lennon

write me

I help found the press tho no longer work with them.

Todd Baron

↑ Index

222. Toni Simon and Nick Piombino

phoneaesthetic

Tue 9 Nov 1999

Dear Kevin Hehir,

Although the two books I am recommending have been mentioned before on this list, perhaps you missed them. Both may be of interest to you on this topic:

"Close Listening: Poetry and the Performed Word" edited by Charles Bernstein (Oxford University Press, 1998), which includes, "Letter on Sound" by Susan Stewart, my own "Aural Ellipsis and the Nature of Listening in Contemporary Poetry", "Voice in Extremis" by Steve McCaffery, "Sound Reading" by Peter Quartermain, among many others.

"Sound States,Innovative Poetics and Acoustical Technologies," edited by Adalaide Morris, (University of North Carolina Press, 1997), which includes "Voices out of Bodies, Bodies out of Voices:Audiotape and the Production of Subjectivity" by N. Katherine Hayles, "The Music of Verbal Space" by Marjorie Perloff, "Poetry's Voice-Over" by Jed Rasula, among others.

Both books contain bibliographies which may be of interest, Sound States comes with a CD.

Best wishes,
Nick Piombino

↑ Index

223. Brent Cunningham
Re: phonaesthetic
Wed 10 Nov 1999

Taylor Brady wrote:

> Work by Reuven Tsur and Garrett Stewart might be of interest here -- neither, though, without their problems (especially Tsur, who almost seems to insist on a kind of transcultural, transhistoric "legibility" of the onomatopoetic qualities of vowel sounds. But worth looking at as one example of how the universalist hopes of a certain strain of Moscow/Prague linguistics [one recalls Jakobson's commitment to Khlebnikov and the project of zaum] can be leaned on and pushed into a more recuperative mode by more recent practitioners).

While I agree with the thrust of Taylor's point here, I'd also add my hope that no one will forgo reading Khlebnikov due to his more-difficult-to-recuperate views of phonemic universalism. K.'s ideas about language remain, as I'm sure Taylor will grant, extremely compelling and suggestive for reasons outside the fact that they proved utter failures in the linguistic laboratory (more accurately, that they had no hope of being seriously admitted in the first place).

Like with his visionary & universalized sense of time (derived from his near-mystic belief in eccentric numerologies), it seems important to place Khlebnikov's understanding of sound in a historical context, and to recuperate it in that way--not as a part of a mathematical or linguistic telos, but by seeing it as a lived artistic engagement. K.'s belief was that he had invented or discovered a phonemic universalism in zaum that was specifically not described by Symbolist theory, nor by literature derived from Eastern Orthodox religiosity. In other words, his was a universalism markedly different from the going artistic universals of 1910-1917 Russia, and much of its energy derives from K.'s sense that a new worldview was needed in the face of a multitude of crumbling universals. No one that I'm aware of was proposing relativities.

None of this helps with hard research into phonaethetics-as-science since Khlebnikov was primarily a poet. Which is really part of my point here. Although K. did problematize the "poet" category rather diligently and dramatically, I still think that the metaphorical/metonymic qualities of his thought really are, and should be, privileged over its verifiable/predictive qualities. It's true that Khlebnikov saw mathematically-describable (hence "universal") patterns everywhere, including in phonemes, but the stress is always on the idea that "there are patterns" and not on the specific types of patterns Khlebnikov saw (such as his belief that there are universal spatial qualities to particular phonemes). As in the Paul Schmidt translations, K. saw himself as an "inventor/explorer" (which he opposes to "investor/exploiter") rather than someone with the kind of methodological & academic commitment of a Jakobson--though, again, Khlebnikov makes it difficult to slice the two worlds into components.

In short, then, my sense is that we might be able to productively distinguish here between types of universalisms--linguistic, mathematic, artistic-metaphoric, sociological, biological (all containing their own subdivisions and their own histories, no doubt). This might also keep us from a too-easy conflation of Jakobson's argument in favor of universal linguistic patterns with, say, the Cartesian transcendent ego, or with Roussau's understanding of speech . . . (approx. Derrida's position in OF GRAMMATOLOGY--and here's hoping Derrida isn't on this list since I've now officially gone beyond my knowledge & abilities).

Brent Cunningham

↑ Index

224. Robin Tremblay-McGaw class again
Wed 10 Nov 1999

But David, I'm also 100% in agreement with Bob Gluck's "Every poetics is a poetics of class." What we're trying to do here is bring some awareness to the issue, "in thinking about a poetics of class that knows itself" (Bob Gluck again). I'm also 100% in agreement with what Kathy Lou has said about the multiple ways in which class influences everything about writing and its availability in the public sphere. Robin

↑ Index

225. Ron Silliman
Lester Bowie
Wed 10 Nov 1999

The great Lester Bowie has died.

NEW YORK (AP) -- Lester Bowie, a jazz trumpeter who was a founding member of the long-running Art Ensemble of Chicago, died Monday from complications from liver cancer. He was 58.

The group has played the United States and Europe for 30 years.

Bowie, who also played the fluegelhorn, was known as a flamboyant performer with a sense of humor and an appreciation for the theatrical side of performing.

_____

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

226. Taylor Brady
FW: Lester Left Town
Wed 10 Nov 1999

Sorry to pass along such sad news -- Bowie was, most famously, trumpeter for the Art Ensemble of Chicago, as well as many fine bands of his own, including the Brass Fantasy. Along with fellow Chicagoans Sun Ra and Anthony Braxton (and of course the rest of the Art Ensemble), and in a very different way perhaps Cecil Taylor, he was for me a primary energy source for bringing into being a deep and broad way of thinking, hearing and seeing the African-American creative music tradition as a model poetics for performance of all kinds: beginning in sound, outward through theater, into modes of social action, often as far as planetary history and cosmology.

Check out live recordings of the Art Ensemble like _Bap-Tizum_, or the more recent studio collaboration with Cecil Taylor , _Dreaming of the Masters_, on and around Monk compositions, for a sense of how simultaneously various and focused, how both "out on the edge" and thoroughly humane his music could be. I never met him except to shake his hand after a concert, but I'll miss him nonetheless.

Taylor

From: [redacted] [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of [redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, November 09, 1999 6:03 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Lester Left Town

With great sadness
I share the news that Lester Bowie died last night.

↑ Index

227. Arielle C. Greenberg
Re: earliest american poem
Wed 10 Nov 1999

I loved Dan Zimmerman's poem excerpted below. I've also got a grant application out to do something with the whole "Croatoan" thing this summer...very interested in the story of the Lost Colonists as an excellent way to explore ephemera, the nature of disapperance, fragment, contradiction, myth, through poetry...so I was very excited to see it mentioned on this list as a possible "earliest American poem." I'd love to know if other people have done stuff with Roanoke Isl., or just have thoughts about it...

Arielle

On Mon, 8 Nov 1999, Daniel Zimmerman wrote:

> How about the Lenni-Lenape _Walum Olum_?
>
> Or the one-word message carved in a tree by the lost Roanoke colony: "Croatoan"? ["a cartoon"/"at corona"?]

↑ Index

228. Lawrence Upton
SVP News
Wed 10 Nov 1999

---

1 - SVP WEBSITE URL

The Sub Voicive Poetry website URL has been changed by the server space provider.
It is now
http://matrix.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/

2 - SVP WEBSITE UPDATING

Unfortunately, it is still not possible to access the server to update the website; there is nothing incorrect there yet, but it's all slightly out of date.

3 - FOURTH SUB VOICIVE COLLOQUIUM

The Fourth Sub Voicive Colloquium will be held in London on 20th May 2000 between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Please make a note in your diaries: I hope that many of you will attend.

It is more than likely that there will be related readings just before or after the colloquium, especially to take advantage of the presence in London of poets from some distance away

Further announcements will be made when the colloquium committee has discussed the proposals received so far.

An updated webpage will be prepared and, hopefully, will be publishable at the EPC conference page at least, if not at the SVP website

SVP: http://matrix.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/ Lawrence Upton: http://members.spree.com/sip/lizard/index.htm RWC: http://members.tripod.com/~ReadandWrite/contents.html Writers Forum: http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/

↑ Index

229. Taylor Brady
Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
Wed 10 Nov 1999

I'm very sorry to have posted from the perspective of a writer whose poetry and thinking about poetics are rooted in a world, many of the events of which are not primarily -- or not at all -- concerned with "providing metaphors for your poetry," like so many insubstantial spirits swirling obediently round the Yeatses. I promise henceforth to keep that thought and those roots in the world, and only make note of them in this space when it's a matter of their scansion.

Onanistically yours,
Taylor

From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Brent Long
Sent: Tuesday, November 09, 1999 11:03 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)

List,

Can somebody please explain to me what the political candidates in SF have to do with poetics in Boston, or anywhere for that matter? If I want to hear candidates be plugged by those who support them, I'll just shoot on up to New Hampshire for the primary.

I've been quietly watching some of the threads coming through here regarding the advertising, political debate, and general mental masturbation that the list seems bogged down with lately, but this one really irked me.

Where are the poetics in threads devoted to insult, ego-battles, and mayoral debates? Perhaps I'm missing something...

Brent

↑ Index

230. raea100900
Re: Diane Ward contact
Wed 10 Nov 1999

Dear All,

I can't seem to find an email for Diane Ward (the Diane Ward in L.A.) Does anybody out there have it?

Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

231. D Wellman
Re: Business, class, access
Wed 10 Nov 1999

... lets take a constructivist approach to the matter of class for a minute; call class a system of economic representations, and consider jeans as a a representation of some sort of relation to the working class. often i have read my poems in public in jeans instead of wool or tweed. most males on the list have probably done that. The point is that wearing jeans represents some sort of desire to cross or erase class lines unless your background is lower class; in which case you might choose finer threads and cross the line the other way, overcompensate. That is something poor people might do who want to make a good showing. Understate that is something that not so poor people might do. Understatement is decidely cool and modern; overcompensating is naive. I find it peronally intolerable that some people wish to rub my naivity in my face. I learned that lesson often growing up. I felt condemned because I could not transcend who I am ((forgive the lurch into auto-ethnography ("auto-ethnography" is an over compensation for "life story"). On the plus-side I learned about resentment and really got into Nietzche. I am not sure that jeans wearing poets of upper-middle class background have a feel for what I mean what I speak of "resentment" in its class-based form as opposed to Derridean 'resentement.' --- so we could argue that posing, by whatever means for whatever reason is part of the human condition. I would think poetry or poetics could acknowledge that somehow ...

Don Wellman

↑ Index

232. Stephen Vincent
Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
Wed 10 Nov 1999

In a message dated 11/10/99 2:41:57 PM, [redacted] writes:

<< Can somebody please explain to me what the political candidates in SF have to do with poetics in Boston, or anywhere for that matter? >>

Both candidates support "living wage" contracts (as different from "minimum") for corporations et al doing business with the City of San Francisco. This mutual commitment will undoubtedly draw national media attention. Which will undoubtedly impact discussion of this issue – or make it an issue - in Boston. The question of what is "living" or not is vital to life in the City. Vital to its poets. Its poetics. Vital to the fact of the poem. No economy. Minimum poems. Healthy polis. Healthy argument. Healthy poets.

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent
Citizen, San Francisco

↑ Index

233. George Bowering
Re: Lester Bowie
Wed 10 Nov 1999

> The great Lester Bowie has died.

I hated it when I saw that name in the title. I knew what it wd mean. Lester Bowie one of my great heroes of the sixties when a lot of the people I knew were listening to Jimi Hendrix. I only got to hear him live twice, once in Montreal and Once in Vancouver. But I used to use his records to scare the neighbours. He was a sign to me back then, that you can have fun and the avant garde at the same time, in great doses. We should all be playing our AEC records at 9.5 this week.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

234. Tony Green
Fw: Exhibition: Threads of Humanity
Wed 10 Nov 1999

Forwarded without the long long list of other persons to whom this was sent:

From: Daniel Andreallo Date: Thursday, 11 November 1999 09:18 Subject: Exhibition: Threads of Humanity

I am writing to invite you to contribute a work to the exhibition “Threads of Humanity” that is being organised in collaboration with Amnesty International and the University of Wollongong. The exhibition will focus on the concept of human rights and will be run for the purpose of promoting the inherent dignity of the person, which is embodied in the recognition of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human society. The exhibition will be displayed at the Wollongong City Gallery from March to April 2000 and close with an auction dinner.

It seems pertinent that human rights issues remain at the forefront of discussion and social consciousness. The exhibition has been contemplated for some time however spurred into action in response to the atrocities that have occurred and continue to occur in East Timor and not long before in Kosovo that outraged the Australian community and communities further afield. It is then hoped that the exhibition will not only emphasise the common thread of our human existence but also illuminate the importance and relevance of human rights to our every day situation, which we will carry with us into the new millennium.

The closing date for applications is the 10th of January 2000. Application forms and information about the specific theme of the exhibition are available from the web page listed below:

http://www.uow.edu.au/crearts/events/amnesty.html

I would also like to ask that you forward this information onto other artists that you think may be interested in contribute a work. Your support and assistance will be greatly appreciated. I look forward to your application.

Regards,

Daniel Andreallo, Curatorial Director, Amnesty International & University of Wollongong
Collaborative Project.
39 Buderim Avenue
Kareela 2232
Phone/Fax: 9 [redacted]
Email: [redacted]

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

235. Michael Walsh
Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)
Wed 10 Nov 1999

Dear Brent,

Have you read any of Ron Silliman's poetry? If you have, it shouldn't be too hard to figure out why he thinks we have a stake in politics.

best Michael Walsh

↑ Index

236. David Larsen
Re: Business, class, access
Wed 10 Nov 1999

Having no ambition myself to rise so high into ">>>the upper eschelons" of anything as to be unable to resist crapping on people a la Mr. Baratier, I, David Larsen, volunteer myself to serve as this list's spokesperson for lettuce-sorters --and, if need be, to pass your civil responses back to them. Believe me, though, they do not take kindly to being used as tropes. Thank you for your attention LRSN

↑ Index

237. Rebecca Weldon Sithiwong
Virtual democracy
Wed 10 Nov 1999

Thank you Murat. I agree that this debate is ridiculous and, basically, meaningless. I can't remember when I first subscribed, but, I still remain the only subscriber in Thailand. In fact, I have passed the list information to several Thai poets who are connected and litterate in English, but, the list doesn't appeal to them.

I do, sometimes, wonder why it appeals to me. I cannot attend the poetry events announced here. My participation is currently limited to reading the list; I haven't posted to the list for a long time. Experience has made me reticent. I have not read and will not read many of the works under discussion here. I do not know even one member of the list. I am unknown; I do not publish. I am not affiliated with an educational institution or any group known to any member of this list. So, why do I subscribe?

Because of this: I struggle in order to retain my right to write. I hoard my physical and psychic resources so that I may have a room in which to write and words to put on the paper in front of me in that room. My income is $800 per month. With that amount of money I raise my three children, tend my garden, enjoy my friends and maintain an internet account. I am not poor. I am rich because I make my circumstances work for me, because, despite everything, I keep my mind alive and am able to write.

I like being in the company of other writers. I like the depth of observation, the petty squabbles, the vanity, the beauty and the basic truth of what we are. That, for me, is poetry. And that is why I am here at Poetics.

↑ Index

238. Alan Sondheim

s k y w o m e n

Wed 10 Nov 1999

=-

s k y w o m e n

i s i t a n y c o i n c i d e n c e t h a t a d a m , a d a m a i n h e b r e w ;
t h a t h o m o , h u m u s i n
f r e n c h , t h a t a l m o s t i d e n t i c a l k a n j i i n j a p a n e s e , r e f e r e n c e m a n a n d e a r t h , t o t h a t e x t e n t w e ' r e m a d e f r o m d i r t , d i r t c o m e s i n t o o u r m o u t h s a n d c o m e s i n t o o u r m o u t h s . i s a y t o y o u : i t i s n o t s u c h a c o i n c i d e n c e , t h e r e i s t o o m u c h m e a n i n g , t o o
m u c h i n v o l v e d . i w a n t t h e r e l a t i o n s h i p g l o s s a n d g l a s s , t h e d e r r i d e a n r e l a t i o n e x t e n d i n g t o s i l i c o n s a n d m u l t i p l e c o n n e c t i v i t i e s .
i n s t e a d o f m o u t h s :
h a n d s , a n d i n s t e a d o f m e n , t h o s e e n t i t i e s o f a n y g e n d e r
w h o s e g l o s s c r o s s e s t e x t i n t o g l a s s . f o r t h e m e n o f a l l a r e d e a d w i t h e a r t h , a n d a n d r o g y n e s a r e p e r f e c t b e a u t i e s d e e p w i t h i n t h e w o r l d .

↑ Index

239. Dodie Bellamy

Re: Business, class, access

Wed 10 Nov 1999

At 5:21 PM -0500 11/9/99, Jill Stengel wrote: >after reading david baratier's recent post in response to kathy lou schultz's >response to him (etc),

>
>i am left with this thought that is glaring in my head, hard to shut off, >shove away. so i'll just go ahead and say it. even tho it's obvious...
>
>the experience of class is different for women and men, as women also have to >contend with sexism, men do not.
>

I've been keeping out of this class discussion, but I think saying that implying that women have it worse than men on the class-prejudice scale is an unnecessary essentialism--and it is contrary to my experience. As much as I bitch and moan about class prejudice, I've always felt that working class guys had a harder time assimilating into the middle class poetry world I've known. I've seen a couple nearly destroyed by it. Find it interesting, for instance, when Michael Amnasan talks of his lack of social power as a construction worker in a middle class writing world as a feminization.

Class has come up repeatedly in one of my undergraduate classes since one woman has been writing about "whiteness." And, of course, I suggested that she needed to refine what is whiteness and what is upper-middleclassness (the world she was raised in which she is writing about). As a child she had a hispanic housekeeper/nanny who fed her tacos--but beyond that, I asked what would be different about that power dynamic if the housekeeper was white (my mother worked as a janitor, so a white housekeeper wasn't a big leap of imagination for me), what specifically did the racial variable contribute.

The one chicana in the (all female) class wrote a piece which touched on being a minority student in a predominately white school. She only once mentioned being chicana and others' reactions to that. The rest of the piece was humorous stuff about studying and being tired all the time and boys and bad dorm food, etc.--and many references to not having enough money to do things, not having various forms of access. I complimented her on the political subtext of the piece. And the girl who is writing about whiteness said, "What political stuff is in here, except this one reference (directly about being chicana)." Race could be seen, but class issues were invisible. This resonates for me with a lot of what goes on on this list and elsewhere.

Dodie

↑ Index

240. miekal and
Re: FW: Lester Left Town
Wed 10 Nov 1999

---

lester bop lester blow lester skronk lester crow lester come lester go

↑ Index

241. miekal and sawtooth wave decline [alan'swords]
Thu 11 Nov 1999

---

wzehyrantna imanopagun lraleunag hur'rwee aebth,e rtawac stuff ool, the of imanopagun lraleunag dffirous mtyllfu bd,blr azure ouff mop is lraleunag bckdieaf beneath bd,blr usatg ani- it, in bckdieaf lleraze holes, where full him ra hee'tan other, ldirs sald oth is lleraze ilawng dirt, d,ee us, ut mouths snav- aess the th azure odka oth we odka and ut why dk sh iahgningiss eawacheblr ngyiovabe uranantu lleraze isocke estbo man, oth at imanopagun lraleunag hgianit, clinaw, bn'cat hhaen 'cis him as ngyiovabe hur'rwee clinaw, other, simwa sald is, jt hur'rwee lleraze awilar dirt, rarf him in mtyllfu bd,blr estbo dead us, as aygs,ju dasbna hiswm ouho ihe we olrbte ldirs claw cl, as dirty just mop it rarf us, ra mop dk
th avebostjus, imanopagun lraleunag uranantu mtyllfu aadshs wchw- ani- dif so eawacheblr lraleunag bckdieaf iheyssa other, can't ani- wla es lraleunag bckdieaf hee'tan ilawng usatg deh- is, sh hur'rwee mtyllfu bleed, snav- ool, is, la hgianhe dasbna ldirs cngt why jt hgianhe isocke hhaen sald the of isocke ldirs full she as stuff heee sds ra dark cl, of the sh he finally got my page up at the EPC, some of the links have to be repaired but its a good start.

mIEKAL aND
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/and/

↑ Index

242. Owen Hill
Ammiano for Mayor
Thu 11 Nov 1999

Hello List

I'd like to thank Ron for his little report on the SF mayoral campaign.

I know it wasn't about poetics, but politics are discussed here all the time.

This race should be of interest to everyone. C'mon! An openly gay "Marxist" has the chance to be mayor of a large city. Important stuff!

This election could send a gust of fresh, clean Bay Area air across the country. It may even be felt in stuffy old Boston.

All Best

Owen in Berkeley, Ca.

↑ Index

243. rebecca wolff
Fence #4
Thu 11 Nov 1999

Fence #4
Volume II, no. 2
Fall/Winter '99-'00

POEMS by John Ashbery, Gillian Conoley, Ange Mlinko, Reginald Shepherd, Timothy Liu, Diane Wald, Marcin Swietlicki, Linh Dinh, Matthew Lippman,

Kevin Young, Amy Gerstler, Martine Bellen, Suzanne Wise, Michael Burkard, Deborah Tall, Standard Schaefer, Harryette Mullen, Kevin Killian, Jean Donnelly, Devin Johnston, Beth Murray, Sam Witt, Stacy Doris, Duane Esposito, Tessa Rumsey

A special section of GHOST STORIES by Laura Mullen, Clark Coolidge, Peter Straub, Cole Swensen, and Kenward Elmslie

FICTION by Aimee Bender, Robert Coover, Christopher Sorrentino

and featuring episodes from "Dreams of a Rarebit Fiend," by turn-of-the-other-century cartoonic genius Winsor McCay

Now available at your local independent bookstore or your big chain bookstore too
Or order directly from our website: www.fencemag.com

Please contact me with any questions

↑ Index

244. Ron Silliman
Brent Long's question
Thu 11 Nov 1999

Brent Long asks a good question:
Can somebody please explain to me what the political candidates in SF have to do with poetics in Boston, or anywhere for that matter?

The answer Brent is, first, that the politics of SF has a direct bearing on the ability of poets, especially younger ones with fewer economic resources, to live and work there. The cost of renting a room in SF today is 20X what it was when I moved there in 1972 and the quality of housing you get for that is much much worse. In order to stay there, one has to work a serious gig -- none of this "take a year" and hang out sort of stuff that enabled me to write Tjanting or to edit In the American Tree. The economics of the Bay Area have had a lot to do with the diaspora of poets from that community over the past two decades. A lot of people on this list can attest to that.

The health of the Bay Area poetry scene matters to us all. The Bay Area has long had a direct poetic connection to Boston. Weiners' Hotel Wentley Poems were written at what are now the Polk/Sutter Apartments in SF. 707 Scott Street is another SF address. SF poets have been going to, and gaining from, the Boston scene since at least the 1950s.

The final answer is that when a good progressive gets into office, it offers hope and possibility for us all. Tom Ammiano will be the most progressive mayor in the nation if he gets elected. That doesn't mean that I will agree with everything he does, but like Paul Wellstone's senatorship in Minnesota, I will benefit directly here in Paoli, PA. And I wish that Harvey Gantt had beaten Jesse Helms as well.

Yesterday's SF Chronicle noted that Ammiano will benefit from the fact that in California the homeless can vote.

Ron

Call [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] to volunteer and help make history.

If you would like to make a contribution, send a check made payable to "Tom Ammiano For Mayor" to:
Ammiano for Mayor
125 Upper Terrace
San Francisco, CA 94117
(if donation is $100 or greater,
specify your occupation & employer)

FPPC ID # 990924

Ron Silliman

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

245. Lowther, John
Re: Lester Left Town
Thu 11 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

[in madison wisconsin winter] i was driving it was dark i was on that street by the black bear (now closed) and looking to find parking a few blocks up but the lights were red and a bit of slow traffic and the snow falling and thick on the ground from days before and foggy windows etc etc and this horn came on the radio i dunno what station maybe public radio maybe WORT and it was all over me and i lost my hurry and it was exceedingly vocalized and talkative in it's blows and nothing around it just his horn and someone honked as i'd forgot the green light and i rode on slowly

listening and found a parking space easy and sat there wondering who it wd be and the song ended and one heard the live audience cheering and the announcer said Lester Bowie and i wanted to play a horn with a hat or a plunger abnd walked past a music store and cold stood and looked in the window

)ohn

↑ Index

246. Mark Prejsnar great expectations
Thu 11 Nov 1999

"ok: if i aspire, say, to $60K per annum (among other aspirations) i probably better figure on doing something besides just writing poetry, right?...

(oh hey---i'm not ashamed to say i aspire to $60K/yr either, anymore than
i am of aspiring to write poetry)..."

****

Indeed, Joe, i think it does a nice job of locating us poet types in the overall culture, that 60,000 does as an abreviated expressions for, "a lot of money." Dip into the NY Times, say, any publication whose viewpoint is essentially that of the business class, and one soon finds that they consider 60 a pretty measley income.... One of the many things that makes reading the Times such a peculiar, disorienting experience...

↑ Index

247. Lowther, John geometric rather than
Thu 11 Nov 1999

...simply additive effect.

{ p o e t i x }

jill stengel writes;

"it's great for you that you haven't found it > to be so, but by saying it's not true for others, it ignores/erases the efforts > people make every day to "overcome," or simply live with, what they/i/we/you > (am)are faced with (...) desire to overcome or integrate, live with, these obstacles > has to be very strong. (and sometimes the will is still not enough.)"

and i like that someone leapt in with further reasonableness

But i'm nowhere myself, thinking about class... always getting bogged down in some fog where when i start reaching out trying to get a grip on class as it relates to me i end-up w/ many particulars that seem less part of any demarcated unit and more points some almost arbitrary and others determined on an unfixed number of continua

someone told me something and i heard it as follows "definitions are like machetes theyre useful when you have to hack thru a tangled space" but like jill i think that it's better to know what i'm dealing with (to try to obviously) and "naming helps to define, clarify."

and maybe that's why class gives me trouble

but joe amato is eloquent on the subject and reasonable as well "a bit less skepticism and a bit more goodwill might have produced some insights, and might have drawn (some of) us a bit closer together in the process, if only for a moment..."

which leads back to What is This List For and i can hear my boss talking in the hall time to nip this...

↑ Index

248. Jill Stengel

Re: Ammiano for Mayor (SF)

Thu 11 Nov 1999

---

dear brent, dear list, as the list discusses political issues, and as politics certainly involves us all (think NEA, for example) a write-in candidate's stunning achievement certainly is a "poetic" topic. this write-in candidacy, done with little money and in a short amount of time, has shown that it doesn't take millions of dollars to garner popular public opinion, that it doesn't take major-party affiliation to have public support, and that change CAN exist, even in the pretty stale political system we have in the u.s. from here, at the end of the 20th century, it appears to many that nothing ever changes in the world of politics. well, here is something unusual, someone who truly beat the odds and shook things up. even if ammiano doesn't win the mayoral run-off election on dec 14,

he has stirred up politics in a most amazing way. if you are still wondering what this means to poetics, think civil liberties. think power of an individual to make change. think momentum. think. american politics just got a kick in the ass--how can it not be relevant to all? jill stengel

↑ Index

249. Todd Nettleton
Love a good mystery?
Thu 11 Nov 1999

Try this one:

http://members.aol.com/justicewrtr/justice4all/main.htm
<http://members.aol.com/justicewrtr/justice4all/main.htm>

↑ Index

250. Lowther, John
Weekend in New Orleans (part 3)
Thu 11 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

READING

joy lahey read and i was struck by the careful way she spoke and the craft of her work ---- this impression now overlaying my brief looks at the chapbook of hers that randy brought back ---- and i saw her at the maple leaf bar for the sunday martin/di michele event and reached into my pocket to snag one of the cards i printed up to take along (the vast majority of which i ended up hiding in bill lavender's house to amuse myself sunday slight hungover morning) and ..nothing.. all my careful planning, a card with my name and mag info and email and all that (the perfect networking tool) and i'd packed them the one time when i finally wanted one for something --- in her chapbook she uses a spelling "misisipi"

skip fox read and it was good and had a sinuous punch to it ---- then he got caught on "permeability" i think it was and tried it 3 or so times and said "well i just won't say that one" and went on and it never even felt like an interruption really and i reading his chapbook _wallet_ i like the way that the pieces unwind, primarily in sentences within a prose block frame ---- i have questions about the locus of it all but that was the fun of talking to skip in the noisy dark room during the party (see previous) randy prunty read but when bill announced him he chose that moment to respond to randy's othersense experiment in the symposium that afternoon, his assignment was to monitor his pulse and watch for interaction between it and the poem - i forget what he said but randy read great --- once i thought he was thirsty ---- three poems and the middle one quite the tongue twister too but he was cool calm etc during alex rawls read long curly hair deep voice man read something called "1969 OK" and i got it but i don't know how many others did and he read from his desk calendar (blotter style) where he's working out a poem a day using horoscope books and other materials ---- if i remember correctly he read us some selections from november ---- i liked him talking later on the back porch at bill's must keep an eye out for his work tho as i don't think i've seen any on paper

LOCAL COLOR

lunch at liuzza's (lee ooz za's, if i remember correctly) and the wait staff (seemingly mostly relatives) had what we were told is a very new orleans accent which sounded kinda brooklyn but with an occasional lilt to curl at the end of words that distinguished it ----- beer in frosted fishbowl type mugs oozing beer ice all over the table ---- great onion rings and randy ordered (i thought about it) the fried pickles which were pickle chips battered and deep fried which we then devoured in ketchup mixed with pepper sauce ---- my eggplant poboy left something to be desired but vegetarians learn to survive on fries while travelling and onions rings are a vegetable same as ketchup

i saw a surprising number of young children dancing on sidewalks etc

i'm told that there are wild parrots well settled in new orleans and looked for them but never saw any

BERNADETTE

had been riding around with camille i think it was and they were going someplace in new orleans and the address struck bernadette as ideal "where the elysian fields meet the mississippi river"

her laughing

↑ Index

251. Poetry Project

next week at the Poetry Project

Thu 11 Nov 1999

Upcoming

Monday, November 15 at 8 pm

Catherine Wagner & Roberto Tejada

Born in Rangoon, Burma, Catherine Wagner just published a new chapbook, _Fraction Anthems_, with 811 Press. Excerpt: "P his foot/O my blue snub/E knee weekend/thumbnail/hand M/foot 'I work')Lamp/-10:30 Sat morn-/'it's sugar day"

Roberto Tejada is the editor of _Mandorla: New Writings from the Americas_ and the author of _Gift + Verdict_, just published by Leroy Books. His poems appear in this month's issue of Poets & Poems, on the Poetry Project web site at http://www.poetryproject.com/tejada.html.

Wednesday, November 17 at 8 pm

An evening of words & music with poet-performer-musicians Rebecca Moore & R.B. Morris Rebecca Moore has worked for the last 20 years in the realms of experimental performance and dance through songwriting, singing, acting, directing and writing. Her next CD is due out this winter from the Knitting Factory. Hailing from Nashville, Tennessee, R.B. Morris just released his newest CD, Zeke and the Wheel, from Koch Records. This will be his first performance at the Poetry Project.

No Friday Night Events until December 3rd, when LYDIA LUNCH & NICOLE BLACKMAN will read. More on this special event soon!

*****

The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church at the corner of 2nd Ave. & 10th St. in Manhattan.
The Project is wheelchair-accessible with assistance. Please call in advance: [redacted].
Admission is $7; $4 for students & seniors
No advance tickets. Program is subject to change.

*****

If you would like to be removed from this e-mail list, respond to this e-mail with the subject line: "please remove me."

*****

Roberto Tejada, from FLATLANDS:

"...shall we gather at a grandeur hushed by degradation and pointlessness at odds with each other in the desolate stretches of this smoldering kingdom devoid of redemption? Well, except for the low poorly-drained strip of land along the Gulf, the place rolling and fertile, the delta a broad flat region planted in soybeans and cotton from Woodall mountain to the Gulf of Mexico, the point being where exactly in 1541 near Sunflower Landing

HernandodeSotosawtheGreatRiver"

*****

↑ Index

252. Catherine Daly
Re: B+C+A & littoral
Thu 11 Nov 1999

What happened to the Littoral info on the LA Books site? Todd, do you know?

Also, I was reminded -- by the forklift poem -- to ask the list: anyone know of note-type poems, poem notes, etc. that someone's made ("taken"?) on the job and published?

I'm curious, and take notes, usually transcribing them eventually, tried the dictaphone, which is really an odd 1) name for something, 2) led me to have tiny little tapes everywhere that I won't transcribe since it reminds me too much of that period I digested dispositions & did medical transcription.

These notes -- it can be interesting -- of course they are naturally fragmentary, but also on transcribing, I tend to glom initially unrelated notes together into a poem, with larger "leaps" than usual. Also, I am constantly paying attention to whether something that "occurs to me" belongs to a "poem" or something else. I write down essay ideas, business ideas, to do's, etc., as many have done work on including in poems. I don't put these in the poems but they do "occur" to me in the same way.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

253. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: Business, class, access
Thu 11 Nov 1999

At 07:26 PM 11/9/99 +0000, you wrote:
>During this recent discussion on class I have been accused >of being a "victim" of "making excuses" and of being "a >spokesperson for persons who sort lettuce." That these are >all personal attacks is significant, as well as tiresome.

It would seem that Kathy was being insufficiently a victim -- and thus becomes a target of victimization --

This _does_ have something to do with poetics --

"victim" L _victima_; akin to OHG _wih_ holy, Skt _vinakti_ he sets apart

The rhetoric of setting apart -- a good description for the responses to the issues Kathy raises

↑ Index

254. Lowther, John
Weekend in New Orleans (part 4)
Thu 11 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

i fubbed a couple of names earlier, bernadette's traveling companion is phillip good --- somebody punned him with "feel good" said he should have been a doctor ---- and camille's partner is john clark(e) who is a philosopher (environmental ethics etc) who also wrote the surregionalist manifesto (i may be blowing the title he handed a copy to di michele and i didnt look at it) which is something of a platform for the magazine mesechabe ---- and i'd like a look at the manifesto as i don't really have much sense of what this surregionalism stuff is about save the hints registered in the poets (say andy di michele) of.. well.. you know... surrealism and regionalism

i came away from there thinking that the locals seem much more conscious of the distinctions of local accents and idioms --- several times i heard of how some who live near the street Clio cal it "C.L. 10" presumably from the streetsign --- and this is a series of streets named for the muses ---- and i noted that bill would say a name one way and then a minute or two later say it differently (this was especially striking when he introduced bernadette as 1st he said what i was say as "mayor" then when he exited the stage for her he said it as i wd say "mire" (but with a dipthonginess in the middle)

dennis formento's reading and several others made use of local accents whether by intent or as "carrier waves" and i noted that for a number of folks there in n.o. that the reading of poem was accentuated by a more enegetic verbal preformance as opposed to say... i dunno, something specific to the poem on the page, sound qualities of the words chosen perhaps i caught a number of religious notes in the course of the readings as well which surprised me initially --- a poem titled "prayer" i believe and ref to "god" in several poems read

i'm trying to imagine a continuum of connectedness to disjunctiveness --- trying to plot out a few folks on that and see what it suggests... but it's rather difficult, idiosyncratic and based here on guesses in memories of a busy day, nonetheless, it felt to me that the new orleans local crowd tended more toward connectedness which is not to say that if you scratch at one of bill's or camille's poem you won't find it splicy but at the least that theyre respective reading styles don't foreground that aspect and instead seem to pull thing forward in a flow ---- joel dailey's stuff was disjunctive between sentance units (at least i think that's what i was hearing) but the sentences themselves seems pretty well connnecte, explicit etc ---- there were other locals who's readings struck me as remarkably connected (joy lahey perhaps)... REMEMBER PLEASE there is no value assignment here, just an observation ...on the more disjunctive end there were more out-of-towners andy di michele, randy prunty and myself i think ---- this undoubtedly due in large part to what we chose to read

there's a lot of stuff i've only skimmed in these reports buti thnk i'll lay off now unless i'm reminded of something particularly interesting

(thanx to all who've sent me positive messages about these posts --- i'd be curious about what's happening around you...)ohn

↑ Index

255. Susan Vanderborg
MLA panel on "The Performed Text"
Thu 11 Nov 1999

A MLA convention panel on "The Performed Text: Toward a Post-Poetics for the New Millennium" that might be of interest to some of your subscribers has been listed incorrectly in the MLA convention program.

The correct date and time for session 455 should be:

Tuesday, December 28th, 8:30-9:45, the Burnham room in the Hyatt Regency hotel.

(Right now it is listed incorrectly at that same time but on Wed. 29th)

The session features Michael Davidson's discussion of the gestural performances of Aaron Williamson and other deaf poets, Ming-Qian Ma's study of visual and acoustic topography in Christian Bok's Crystallography, and Susan Vanderborg's discussion of Cells of Release by visual artist Fiona Templeton.

There will be a signing interpreter at the panel.

↑ Index

256. Alan Sondheim
(no subject)
Thu 11 Nov 1999

/
/

|_|_| Trikon Trisula SVATANTAMRTA-BIJA-SYA SVATANTAMRTA-BIJA-SYAMU SVATAN- TAMRTA-BIJA-SYAMUM TAMRTA-BIJA-SISMULA TAMRTA-BIJA-SISMULASVA-TANTAMRTA- BIJA-SYAMUM TAMRTA-BIJA-SISMULA JMULMU BICVISARGAIYAMANDMU PAMRTA-BIJA- SICVISARGAIYAMAMTAMRTA-BIJA-SISMULAAMRTA-BIJA-SDICVISARGAI-YAMASVATANTA- MRTA-BIJA-SYAL JENNICVISARGAIYAMAFEAMRTA-BIJA-S VICVISARGAI-YAMASSVATANTA-MRTA-BIJA-SYAAMRTA-BIJA-SGSVATANTAMRTA-BIJA-SYA EMICVISARG-AIYAMASSTAMRTA- BIJA-SISMULAN |_|_| Trikon Trisula A AU AUM O OAUM O JULU BINDU PRIMORDIAL JENNIFER VISARGA EMISSON | | |
|__|__|

|_|

↑ Index

257. Lawrence Upton
(no subject)
Fri 12 Nov 1999

Writers Forum announces 2 more in the DAN series

FREE GIFT 0 86162 907 8
klinker 0 86162 906 x

Both published yesterday and performed at Klinker last night - Cobbing and Upton voice, J Pike movement and projector abuse

See website for details of getting stuff

L SVP: http://matrix.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/ Lawrence Upton: http://members.spree.com/sip/lizard/index.htm RWC: http://members.tripod.com/~ReadandWrite/contents.html Writers Forum: http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/ SVP / WF website update impossible at present

↑ Index

258. Poetics List Administration

POETICS: approval required (E653424A)

Fri 12 Nov 1999

--On Friday, November 12, 1999, 1:45 AM -0500 "L-Soft list server at University at Buffalo (1.8d)" <[redacted]> wrote:

This message was originally submitted by [redacted] to the POETICS list at LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU. You can approve it using the "OK" mechanism, ignore it, or repost an edited copy. The message will expire automatically and you do not need to do anything if you just want to discard it. Please refer to the list owner's guide if you are not familiar with the "OK" mechanism; these instructions are being kept purposefully short for your convenience in processing large numbers of messages.

Northern Westchester Center for the Arts
272 N. Bedford Road
Mt. Kisco, NY 10549
[redacted]
nwcaonline.org

CREATIVE ARTS CAFÉ POETRY SERIES
Presents Award Winning Poet
Billy Collins
To read or HEAR Billy's poetry check out:
http://www.bigsnap.com/poems.html

Monday, Nov. 15th at 7:30 PM

Billy Collins, the award winning poet, has been a favorite among Westchester residents for years. Highly respected by his literary peers, his readings are well attended by students, teachers and fellow poets who enjoy his artful poetic wit, intelligence and insight. Following the reading there will be a reception and a book signing. After the reception, an OPEN MIKE FOR POETS in the audience will follow until 9:45 PM. Suggested donation is $7.00.

Billy Collins is the author of six books of poetry including Picnic, Lightning (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1998), The Art of Drowning, (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1995) , The Apple That Astonished Paris, (University of Arkansas Press, 1988), and Questions about Angels (William Morrow & Co., 1991), which was selected by Edward Hirsch for the National Poetry Series. The recipient of numerous awards and fellowships, he has been featured in The Pushcart Prize Anthology and The Best American Poetry for 1992, 1993 and 1997. He was chosen by the New York public Library to serve as “Literary Lion.” He is a professor at Lehman College and a visiting writer at Sarah Lawrence. He lives in Northern Westchester County, NY. This series is supported, in part, by the New York State Council on the Arts, the Bydale Foundation and Private Funds.

The reading is located at the Creative Arts Cafe Poetry Series at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts at 272 N. Bedford Road Mt. Kisc, NY 10549. Easily reached by railroad or by car. Call for directions: [redacted] ext 17.

↑ Index

259. Philip Nikolayev
Re: class, gender etc.
Fri 12 Nov 1999

>Like in Russia a native of Moscow coming to St. Petersburg is automatically moving >one step up on the social ladder.

Really? Would you kindly explain that? I'm under the impression it's the other way around.

> And in a village... oh, in a village he (yes, he) is a guru.

Not necessarily 'he.'

Cheers,
Philip Nikolayev

↑ Index

260. Doug Lang
Re: Diane Ward contact
Fri 12 Nov 1999

[redacted]

[redacted] wrote:

> Dear All,
>
> I can't seem to find an email for Diane Ward (the Diane Ward in L.A.) Does anybody out there have it?

> Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

261. Katherine Lederer
Double Happiness, NYC 11/13
Fri 12 Nov 1999

Segue @ Double Happiness
Saturdays from 4:00 to 6:00 pm.
Double Happiness is located at 173 Mott street, just south of broome. A 4$ contribution goes to the readers.

November 13: Martin Corless-Smith, Kevin Larimer

Martin Corless-Smith is from Worcestershire, England. His first book Of Piscator was published by University of Georgia Press. His second, The Garden a Theophany. Or ECCOHOME: A Dialectical Lyric was published by Spectacular Books. A chapbook based on a translation of Lucretius' De Rerum Natura recently came out from 811 Books.

Kevin Larimer's work has appeared in Explosive Magazine, The Iowa Review, and Skanky Possum. He lives in New York City.

↑ Index

262. Maria Damon
Re: MLA panel on "The Performed Text"
Fri 12 Nov 1999

---

i'm writing a book called "poetics for a post-literary america," and i've used the phrase "post-literary poetics" and "post -literary poetry" in my writing. can i initiate a discussion by asking what you mean by "post-poetics"? it's intriguing.

At 5:22 PM -0500 11/11/99, Susan Vanderborg wrote:
> A MLA convention panel on "The Performed Text: Toward a Post-Poetics >for the New Millennium" that might be of interest to some of your >subscribers has been listed incorrectly in the MLA convention program.
>
> The correct date and time for session 455 should be:
>
>Tuesday, December 28th, 8:30-9:45, the Burnham room in the Hyatt Regency >hotel.
>
>

> (Right now it is listed incorrectly at that same time but on Wed. 29th)
>
> The session features Michael Davidson's discussion of the gestural >performances of Aaron Williamson and other deaf poets, Ming-Qian Ma's >study of visual and acoustic topography in Christian Bok's >Crystallography, and Susan Vanderborg's discussion of Cells of Release by >visual artist Fiona Templeton.
>
> There will be a signing interpreter at the panel.

↑ Index

263. Michael Neff

"Sensation": The Exhibit (reduced 1000X)

Fri 12 Nov 1999

---

btw, this poem was rejected by a major NY editor; according to this editor fellow, he would be a hypocrite if he published it given his reputation for supporting freedom of expression, i.e., the NY exhibit in question.

"Sensation": The Exhibit (reduced 1000X)

Inconclusive provocations bio-lit

the dull chute tent of Emin's sex life,

1963-1995, chummed death from formaldehyde, loud zygotics of ponder and bloating species in the cachet churn of Saatchi.

Out-split pigs, there, lunch boxes of giftshopped face carnage assemblaged. Do we mature by killing, stuffing, or by creating offense? Ofili's Ave Turd Maria smeared before Leibovitz. Now the frozen blood bust of Quinn merged and Bowie was not de-sublimated, sniffing a proboscis of fiberglass penis for $9.75

Beyond the zoo oeuvre--parroted plop, elephantine turd, monkey nipple-- an artist laid down his shovel and as that shovel lay hardening with a warm fecal crust,

he faced stupefaction, and he doubted his own conundrum.

↑ Index

264. Stephen Ellis
Re: Business, class, access
Fri 12 Nov 1999

The rhetoric of setting apart also involves that sense of "sacrifice" meaning "to make sacred" - "sacred - to set apart in honor of". "To set apart" also implies "devotion to." (Isolation?) Devotion to what, tho, in this case? What's the object? Victimization in this (& maybe, how shall we say it, "all?") case(s) has to do with hierarchy, and so is a poetic problem, a religious problem, an identification of position problem, an identification of species problem, a money problem, a social problem & on. If "setting apart" implies a sacralization, and sacralization, a division (of labor, of sex, of knowledge), then the best we can hope for is that conservatorship which sets itself apart by setting apart those they are able to, from each other. Teleology has its finger on EVERYBODY'S button, it being in fact a shredding technique on the way to gathering "the world" up into a square box with three compartments, the guts, the heart and the head corresponding to the beast, forest and stone that gets worked into the achieved flock, garden and city, these last all the result of the glancing blow that destroys the whole in a metonym of parts that nevertheless point back to all varieties of some "golden age." Victimization in part rises in response to a sentimental urge to "remember" - or even attempt to recover - some just sense of "animal moving freely through animal" (animation!). Yet there's a hole in the side of the bucket that bleeds off the reservoir that might otherwise produce the material analogy through which to accelerate beyond and more fully into exactly what we're currently in - the WHOLE world which by definition (naming) we can not have in any form that is also not the wound in consciousness that is consciousness itself, a protection racket, and what we're ALL victimized by. Ie., the blood from the hole in the side of the bucket remains the Roman sewer that runs straight up the defining thermodynamic "clock" of Wall Street, where libido is factored into (a) priveledge, toward which one must nevertheless "be on time." Like, to your own sacrifice. However one approaches these appointments, it's never the simple matter of going to them, but far more one of being either and or both frozen by, and overwhelmed by, their exaction. - S E

> From: "Nielsen, Aldon" <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Business, class, access
> Date: Thu, 11 Nov 1999 10:20:14 -0800
>
> At 07:26 PM 11/9/99 +0000, you wrote:

> During this recent discussion on class I have been accused of being a "victim" of "making excuses" and of being "a spokesperson for persons who sort lettuce." That these are all personal attacks is significant, as well as tiresome.
>
> It would seem that Kathy was being insufficiently a victim -- and thus becomes a target of victimization --
>
> This _does_ have something to do with poetics --
>
> "victim" L _victima_; akin to OHG _wih_ holy, Skt _vinakti_ he sets apart
>
> The rhetoric of setting apart -- a good description for the responses to the issues Kathy raises

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

265. Ron Silliman
Cities & the outlands
Fri 12 Nov 1999

"Like in Russia a native of Moscow coming to St. Petersburg is automatically moving one step up on the social ladder."

"Really? Would you kindly explain that? I'm under the impression it's the other way around."

My impression has been that the Moscow/Petersburg relationship was not unlike the SF-LA (or SF-NY, or Boston-NY, Dallas-Houston, etc etc etc) one as well. People from city X say that their city is a big step up from those of city Y, those from City Y just reverse the equation.

Then there are those who live outside one of the major metropolitan areas, who have a whole other series of relations to deal with.

I've been much pleased here to see the evidence of active scenes in Atlanta, New Orleans and other US cities not always thought of "from the outside" as having large poetry scenes. It adds a lot to the list and to discussions generally.

Those of us in the Philly area ran around last night to hear first Kit Robinson at Writers House and then Mei-Mei Bersenbrugge & Deborah Richards at Temple's Old City Gallery. Today we're giddy with all that language (3 very different writers) echoing around in our heads.

Ron Silliman

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

266. Al Filreis
Watten DuPlessis Writers House webcast
Fri 12 Nov 1999

PhillyTalks at the Kelly Writers House

with Barrett Watten & Rachel Blau DuPlessis

Monday November 15

beginning at 6 PM eastern time

will be webcast live.

The first 35 people who respond to this invitation will be able to "connect" to the webcast signal--and then see and hear the program (and to pose questions or comments during the discussion).

relevant links (for further information):

PhillyTalks, founded & curated at the Writers House by Louis Cabri:
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/phillytalks/

the Kelly Writers House:
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/index.html

fall 1999 schedule of live webcasts, including recordings
of a conversation with Marjore Perloff & Bob Perelman on Stein, a reading by Shawn Walker, and a symposium on Williams's "To Elsie":
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/webcasts/

the Writers House calendar:
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/calendar/

↑ Index

267. Alan Sondheim
for + i love your feelings
Fri 12 Nov 1999

/
/

for

sn less ww si tr ertsahmnid ertsahmnid < ww > zz sd pico zz ae sed
's/rr/++/g' zz > ww ar pico ww at rm ww as pico zz aa h ah h >> zz
s HIROSHIMA for Those who Insist on the Letter of the Text rrrranmi dG
for Those who Tremble before its Embrochure GH O GHMA rrrrrrr: rArA anmi dtmF dsmn mimD mrrA ..GH O GHMA.
eeeeeee:
eAeA anmi dtmF dsmn mimD mrGH O GHMA.rrrr eeeeere: srsr srseA srsr srsr
..A tesr mrsr mrte sasn smsi tesd rrr: rArA anmi d eeeeete: stsm mmte sdss smsn tesm sism mate smsr tmF dsmn mimD mr eeeeese: srmr tete tete tete tete tete tete tEtE rA .. eeeeeae: anmi dtmF dsmn GH O GHMA.. GH O GHMB mimD mrtE eA ttttttt: tBtB anmi dtmF dsmn mimD mttB ..GH O GHMB.
for Believers
    X
for Those who Skins like Burning Flags Carry their Prayers sss;; """++ Wi ? ni=r """++ for the Fear of Numbers
    G   """++ GH O GHMA
for Those who Read the Attitude of Bodies HIROSHIMA rrrrrrr: rArA aimd ntmF nsmi mdmD mrrA ..HIROSHIMA.
eeeeeee:
eAeA aimd ntmF nsmi mdmD mreA srsr srsr ..HIROSHIMA.rrrr eeeeere: srsr
srsA tesr mrsr mrte sasi smsd tesn rrr: rArA aimd n eeeeete: stsm mmte
snss smsi tesm sdsm mate smsr tmF nsmi mdmD mr eeeeese: srmr tete tete
tete tete tete tete tEtE rA .. eeeeeae: aimd ntmF nsmi mdmD mrtE eA HIROSHIMA.. HIROSHIMB ttttttt: tBtB aimd ntmF nsmi mdmD mttB ..HIROSHIMB.
    YS
  YS}Q
for Those left Breathlessly with Minds Intact sss;; """++ XdR?Vid=r """++ for the Comfort of Heads
eAeA aimd ntmF nsmi mdmD mreA srsr srsr ..HIROSHIMA.rrrr eeeeere: srsr
srsA tesr mrsr mrte sasi smsd tesn rrr: rArA aimd n eeeeete: stsm mmte
snss smsi tesm sdsm mate smsr tmF nsmi mdmD mr eeeeese: srmr tete tete
tete tete tete tete tEtE rA .. eeeeeae: aimd ntmF nsmi mdmD mrtE eA for Minds and Ashes, for These Days, for The Days to Come

I love your feelings

I love your feelings, When I'm tired, and life's dreary / I wait for my Julu to return to me. / When life's a bore and I know there's more, / I mate with Julu, heavily. / When times are hard, and I'm all alone, / Julu throws me quite the bo ne. / Oh Julu, you're so heavenly! / ... Driven by defrag relentlessly towards you... Sometimes more and sometimes less / Julu comes and then's I'm blessed, / with sometimes more, and sometimes blessed! /:When I'm all alone and no one's home, / Julu comes and then we'll roam. / We'll fly up high, and sometimes sigh / for days gone bye, / July and me! /:When I'm tired, and life's dreary / I wait for my Julu to return to me. / When life's a bore and I know there's more, / I mate with Julu, heavily. / When times are hard, and I'm all alone, / Julu throws me quite the bone. / Oh Julu, you're so heavenly! /::So heavenly, when I'm all alone / Would When I'm tired, and life's dreary / I wait for my Julu to return to me. / When life's a bore and I know there's more, / I mate with Julu, heavily. / When times are hard, and I'm all alone, / Julu throws me quite the bone. / Oh Julu, you're so heavenly! / Sometimes more and sometimes less / Julu comes and then's I'm blessed, / with sometimes more, and sometimes blessed! /, with us? Your bones are your forcloseing? When I'm all alone and no one's home, / Julu comes and then we'll roam. / We'll fly up high, and sometimes sigh / for days gone bye, / July and me! / Now and then you'll come to me / So heavenly, when I'm all alone / You knock so soft, you'll throw the bone / When I'm all alone, when I'm all alone /

↑ Index

268. Tom Beckett
Benjamin's ARCADES PROJECT
Fri 12 Nov 1999

Walter Benjamin's ARCADES PROJECT is at last available in English. It weighs in at over 1000 pages. I got my copy from Amazon. It retails for 39.95 but the Amazon price (including shipping) is 31.92 total. I recommend it.

TomB.

↑ Index

269. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: Diane Ward contact
Fri 12 Nov 1999

[redacted] wrote:
>
> Dear All,
>
> I can't seem to find an email for Diane Ward (the Diane Ward in L.A.) Does > anybody out there have it?

>
> Rae Armantrout

rae : she doesn't co-respond on the inter-net

↑ Index

270. K.Angelo Hehir
Trumpeter Lester Bowie Is Dead at 58
Fri 12 Nov 1999

> November 11, 1999
> Lester Bowie Is Dead at 58; Innovative Jazz Trumpeter
>
> By BEN RATLIFF
>
> The trumpeter, band leader and composer Lester Bowie, an icon of the experimental movement in jazz from the mid-1960's on who was also known for his comic shows and jazz-based treatments of pop music, died on Monday at his home in Brooklyn. He was 58.
>
> The cause was liver cancer, said his brother Byron.
>
> Best known as a member of the Art Ensemble of Chicago, Bowie performed and recorded for more than 30 years. In that group he developed the two things that would brand him: his knowing, Groucho Marx-like sense of humor, expressed musically and otherwise, and his appearance. In most performances he wore a long white lab coat and his narrow face was bracketed by a flat-top haircut and a sharp goatee. In publicity photos he was rarely seen without a cigar.
>
> His early working experiences were in rhythm-and-blues bands, and a slow, expressive blues was his specialty.
>
> But the most famous part of Bowie's trumpet language was timbral effects -- glissandos, smears, growls, flutters, half-valved winces and other vocalizations that worked their way into the style of almost every self-consciously experimental jazz trumpeter who came after him, including Butch Morris, Dave Douglas, Herb Robertson and Roy Campbell.
>
> His recordings often seemed like prankish arguments that the only way to understand jazz is to see it both in carnivalesque and intellectual contexts, to play circus music and modernist post-bop, pure hit-parade pop and nearly academic composition.

Bowie was born in Frederick, Md. His father was a trumpeter who turned to high-school teaching after striving for a performance career in classical music.

At age 5 Bowie was playing trumpet in daily practice with his father, and he played in dance bands as a teenager.

He joined the Army at the age of 17 and was stationed in Texas, where he served as a military policeman.

Bowie credited his career longevity to the four years he spent in the service. After his discharge he played in bands led by blues and rhythm-and-blues performers including Albert King, Jackie Wilson, Rufus Thomas and Joe Tex, and was privately rehearsing more experimental music with St. Louis musicians like Julius Hemphill and Oliver Lake.

He married a rhythm-and-blues singer, Fontella Bass, and moved to Chicago in 1965 to become her musical director; during that period Ms. Bass recorded "Rescue Me," which became a major hit on radio. The marriage ended in divorce.

In Chicago Bowie worked with a big band led by George Hunter and played in rhythm-and-blues studio sessions, including many for Chess Records.

Tiring of the grind, he followed the advice of a saxophonist colleague named Delbert Hill and attended a composers' workshop led by the pianist Muhal Richard Abrams.

Many of those in the workshop, including Roscoe Mitchell, Henry Threadgill, Joseph Jarman, Anthony Braxton and Jack DeJohnette, would in the next decade become major figures in the new jazz.

Abrams's workshop bands formed the nucleus of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians, the nonprofit cooperative first organized in 1965.

Mitchell created a band with three other A.A.C.M. members: Bowie, the bassist Malachi Favors and the drummer Phillip Wilson. When Wilson left, the band had trouble finding a replacement. Out of desperation its members incorporated small percussion instruments -- gongs, bells, shakers -- into their group improvisations. This sound would be one of the staple gestures of the music played by the Art Ensemble of Chicago, which the Mitchell group became in 1969.

By Bowie's reckoning, the Art Ensemble of Chicago rehearsed about 300 times a year in Chicago and gave only a handful of performances because there was almost nowhere to present their music.

So they traveled to France, where there was curiosity about American experimental jazz. They made six albums in two months and performed hundreds of times in their two years there. The band played blues and Bach fugues and percussion interludes and hooting free-improvisation pieces and wore tribalist face-paint.

The Art Ensemble's notoriety followed it back to the United States, and the group was soon recording for Atlantic Records.

By the mid-70's the Art Ensemble had an easier time reaching large audiences. The band soon came to define an esthetic involving ethnic music, humor, eclecticism and physical intensity that had a considerable impact.

In addition to his brother Byron, of Frederick, Bowie is survived by his current wife, Deborah; his father, W. Lester Bowie Sr., and another brother, Joseph, both of Frederick; six children, Larry Stevenson of Sardinia, Italy; Ju'lene Coney and Nueka Mitchell of St. Louis; Sukari Ivester of Chicago; Bahnamous Bowie of Queens, and Zola Bowie of Brooklyn, and 10 grandchildren.

During the 1970's Bowie spent two years in Jamaica playing and teaching trumpet and took a brief trip to Nigeria, where he became a sideman on three records with the popular bandleader Fela Anikulapo Kuti.

Bowie started one new band after another, always surrounding himself with work and often undertaking his own business affairs without a manager. He led a quintet and a gospel group, From the Root to the Source. In the early 80's, he formed the New York Hot Trumpet Quintet, which briefly included Wynton Marsalis. Later Bowie and Marsalis would often be cited in contrast in debates on the issue of futurism versus traditionalism in jazz.

He assembled a 59-piece band called the Sho Nuff Orchestra for a concert at Symphony Space in Manhattan. His octet Brass Fantasy, formed in the mid-80's, performed versions of pop and funk tunes by artists like the Platters, Michael Jackson and James Brown, and recorded for the ECM, DIW and Atlantic record labels. The group's last album was the 1998 "Odyssey of Funk and Popular Music, Vol. 1."

In recent years Bowie set up the Hip-Hop Feel-Harmonic, an unrecorded project with rappers and musicians in his Brooklyn neighborhood of Fort Greene.

His sly sensibility won an appreciative following. An enduring example was his track "Jazz Death?" from a 1968 album by Roscoe Mitchell's band, > "Congliptious." It begins with Bowie's dramatically clearing his throat and asking, "Is jazz, as we know it, dead yet?"

>
> The reply is a long trumpet solo punctuated with silences, muted wah-wah passages, Bowie's own off-horn shrieks and murmured comments, and finally, six minutes later, a sentence: "Well, I guess that all depends on, ah, what you know."
>
> ---
>
> Copyright 1999 The New York Times Company

↑ Index

271. Maria L. Zavialov
class, gender etc
Tue 1 Jan 1980

> Like in Russia a native of Moscow coming to St. Petersburg is automatically moving > one step up on the social ladder.

> Really? Would you kindly explain that? I'm under the impression it's the > other way around.
Philip, I see why you are confused, I meant Muscovites just visiting those other places and retaining their status of a metropolis-dweller. Of course their raised status is virtual but it's no less real for that.

↑ Index

272. Kyle Conner
HIGHWIRE READING
Fri 12 Nov 1999

ONE MORE TIME...

> **********
> > HIGHWIRE GALLERY READING SERIES
> > 129 N. 2ND STREET, PHILADELPHIA
> >
> > SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1999
> > 3 PM
> > BYOB
> >
> >
> > John Colleti and Heather Starr
> >

> >
> > Following the reading, follow your leaders Kyle and Greg to Anthony's > Olde
> > City Pub for some only-in-Philly rot-gut. At 7:30 PM we'll all got to > > Giovanni's Room. C.A. Conrad will host a group reading to celebrate the > > publication of the Exquisite Corpse anthology published this year by > Black > > Sparrow.
> >
> > John Colleti is a totally righteous dude. He is art director for Nylon > > Designs and is currently collaborating on a series of plays.
> >
> > Splayed Subtext
> >
> > Rendezvous 8th AVenue Nite Aid Hot Roles
> > Farsighted Where Minds Play Wild Discovery
> > Don't Throw Your Life Away Phoenix House
> > Nearsighted La Nueva MEGA Know How > > Many Days Are Left A Story Inside Every Jacket
> > Rockaway Call Us? We Can Help/Sponsored By
> > Air France 6 AV New Jersey Rocking Rollers
> > Daily News Television Helping To END TV
> > At CUNY Open 24 Hours Subway Maps IPO
> > To Fetch Banana Republic Record Stores Wild
> > Discovery Of The Modern Are From The WINE
> > STOP To Street The Siege The New York Eye &
> > Infirmary Circuit Avenue Home? Whatever
> > It's In L O O T
> >
> > Heather Starr is Program Manager for the Writer's House. She's given tons > > of props to the Philadelphia poetry scene, so don't be lazy, come out
and > > support Heather.
> >
> > This Bow and Arrow
> >
> > cast a shadow. ribs of color.
> > all i noticed was the curve.
> > worn white stones. constant drifting.
> > not target, and no open field in between.
> > can you shoot an arrow safely over > > seas? strange weaving of arms.

> > a young man from Ottawa, his face turned.
> > a plank to water the island
> > of irises. here, let's go back to town.
> > we've been walking so long with our hands full.

8 PM 8PM 8PM 8PM 8PM 8 PM 8PM 8PM 8PM 8PM 8 PM 8PM 8PM 8PM 8PM 8 PM 8PM 8PM 8PM 8PM

Saturday November 20, 1999

Carol Mirakove and Heather Thomas

Carol Mirakove is launching her new book published by Ixnay (Philadelphia).

Heather Thomas is an editor of 6ix Magazine and a Professor in Kutztown.

↑ Index

273. Melisa Cahnmann

Laughing Hermit Series: Poets, Gary Short and Jan Heller Levi

Fri 12 Nov 1999

2pm, poets Gary Short and Jan Heller Levi
****

LAUGHING HERMIT READING SERIES
3805 Locust Walk on UPenn's Campus, PHILADELPHIA
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1999
2pm

Poets Gary Short and Jan Heller Leviwill be reading Saturday November 20 at 2pm for the Laughing Hermit Series at Kelly Writers' House, 3805 Locust Walk on UPenn's campus.
See the web site for more details:
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/laughinghermit/

BIO: Gary Short has been a Stegner Fellow at Stanford and a resident of the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown. He is the author of Theory of Twilight and a second book of poems, Flying Over Sonny Liston, which received the Western States Book Award.

He is from Nevada, and from 1997-99 was the writer-in-residence at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks. He currently teaches at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Virginia.

POEMS: GARY SHORT

Psalm

The sky is the healing wound of St. Agatha. New light cast on the seven dead geese stacked in the bed of the truck.
Their wings stiff around their bodies make them cocoons of former flight.

The boy’s breath, like a white wing, hangs in the air above him.
His ears pink with wind,
the steel ridges of the truck bed stripe his jeans with cold.
The sleeping dog rides in the back with him.
He can hear his father & two uncles in the cab laughing. Their heads bob between the guns on the rack.

On some of the geese the eyes are open.
A non-living eye not quite clear,
like the clouded face of a watch.
He thinks of flying, how it would feel to have nothing surround you.

You can hear their call long before you see them.
He remembers hearing a flock on another morning, Geese stitched across the gray cloth of sky just before the sun rose red over the uneven mountains.

The birds flying over a boy’s sleep, distant voices lifting up memories—that distant call made him want to be good.
The truck rattling over a cattleguard startles
the boy alert & he hears a moan.
At first he thinks it’s the dog, dreaming after birds.
But then another drone releases from one of the geese.
He had watched them fall, spin around & crumple like a kite in a dive, dying in midair.

Now he sorts through the bodies,
black heads, pliant collared necks, plush silvered breasts piled limp & ruffled. He finds the goose & holds it, unfolds the shut wings.
In the soft rush of riffled feathers he feels the clotted blood where shot entered.

Opening the black visors of the bill,
he covers the nose holes with his fingers & blows a few breaths of air into the silty hollow of the bird.

And the dead bird gives back the boy’s own breath
in distinct syllables, nasal & conversational, before the bill goes slack.
Then the boy breathes harder into the goose, cradles it & listens

until there is music, a swell of air returned over the bird’s vocal cords, a purr, a dirge, a lost-soul quaver.
A blue cone of sound, human-made,
or made human.

Gathering

All night the bent apple trees drop their fruit in the storm, & I don’t hear one fall, not one.

What else fell while I slept?

The twisted limbs glitter silver in the early sun. A blur of bees dizzy among broken apples on the ground.

At first waking I’m confused & mistake the busy dance
as warm blossoming,

when the bees need nectar & the flowers need pollen to be moved. I think that’s how it works, but I admit to confusion about the sexual affinity of apple trees and bees.

These bees swarm the full-grown overripe fruit.
They are drawn to sweetness. I have known for a long time the seduction of an apple.

In fourth grade I shared my snack of graham crackers & quartered apple with Adrian Vucinich.

To impress her, I would bite the crackers into outlines of states, accepting requests—Idaho, Illinois,
the difficult shape of Texas.

I know
it was only the love of a small boy,

but a small thirst
accumulates, as I've learned again from the sparrows that sip this morning from pocket mirrors of water in the hoofprints of cattle.

Perseid

A meteor breaks through the late-summer night, a white blossom scattering, furiously.

It doesn't make a noise,
at least none
that we can hear.

It disappears in all directions—demonstrating desire & its difficulty.

There. The half-moon floating thin & translucent as a cicada's wing. We say the moon is half-full,

even as it wanes.
So much longing…

To witness the unfolding across distance. How we must look to anyone watching.

Here is the star cage.
Here the still life with black clock.
Here is the sparking wish, scattered.

Please see web page for Jan Heller Levi's poems:

BIO: Jan Heller Levi, born in New York City and raised in Baltimore, is the 1998 winner of the Walt Whitman Award of the Academy of American Poets for her first collection of poems, Once I Gazed at You in Wonder, published by Louisiana State University Press in April 1999. In 1998, she was also awarded the George Bogin Memorial Prize from the Poetry Society of America. Her poems have appeared in a number of literary magazines and anthologies, including Graham House Review, New Orleans Review, Poetry East, and Pequod; have been translated into German, and published in Switzerland in the St. Galler Tagblatt, Wochenzeitung, and drehpunkt. She is the editor of A Muriel Rukeyser Reader (W.W. Norton), named by Choice Magazine as "One of the Best Books of 1994" and included in Utne Readers' 1998 "Loose Canon" List of 150 Great Works to "set your imagination on fire." Levi has been a fellow at Yaddo several times; was named the George and Kate Kendall Fellow for her 1997 residency at the MacDowell Colony; and awarded the Diane Cleaver Fellowship for a September 1997 residency at Ledig House International Colony for Writers, Editors, and Translators. She is married to the Swiss novelist and playwright Christoph Keller, and divides her time between St. Gallen, Switzerland and New York City. She is currently working on a biography of Muriel Rukeyser, to be published by Alfred A. Knopf.

↑ Index

274. David Kirschenbaum
I Need Good Email Address on Second Story Books
Fri 12 Nov 1999

Hello list,

Had two emails I send to Mary Burger at SF's Second Story Books kickbacked. If Mary is here please backchannel me, or if someone has good info please do the same.

as ever,
David Kirschenbaum, editor
Boog Literature, NYC

_____ Get FREE voicemail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

275. Carol L. Hamshaw
Re: MLA panel on "The Performed Text"
Fri 12 Nov 1999

---

what city please

Susan Vanderborg wrote:

> A MLA convention panel on "The Performed Text: Toward a Post-Poetics for the New Millennium" that might be of interest to some of your subscribers has been listed incorrectly in the MLA convention program.
>
> The correct date and time for session 455 should be:
>
> Tuesday, December 28th, 8:30-9:45, the Burnham room in the Hyatt Regency hotel.
>
> (Right now it is listed incorrectly at that same time but on Wed. 29th)
>
> The session features Michael Davidson's discussion of the gestural performances of Aaron Williamson and other deaf poets, Ming-Qian Ma's study of visual and acoustic topography in Christian Bok's Crystallography, and Susan Vanderborg's discussion of Cells of Release by visual artist Fiona Templeton.
>
> There will be a signing interpreter at the panel.

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator

Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

276. levitsk
Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
Fri 12 Nov 1999

RD Levitsky writing from the Villa:

Karen Finley, I am paraphrasing, agreed with Williams, put it in more dire terms, a victory to get of bed in the morning. I got lost driving around the suburbs of the silicon valley yesterday on my way to teach the "peerless poets," a group of self described young seniors, who meet each week in a surburban living room. It's all impressive, living in these black tops and worrying about the root of one tree pushing on the roots of another.

Ammiano--I for one, and I for another, the poet I, was enlivened, brought back into the culture, as in the momentary spat of AIDS/Sex politics street activism, momentarily, hope--is not this why we write and what makes us stop (loss of) when we do. To me, the writer must be an innocent despite being weighted with the world. Same with the activist. More to say but I 'm sure it will be said.

A Little on Class--Many of us I would consider to be in a "mutt" position in amerika, this land in which there are so many versions, the one here in the valley which places a gate between the smaller houses and the bigger houses another one which places a gate between my state education and your ivy league education and your high school education, and the one which separates the first generation amerikan to a second, a pink from a brown from a tan from a hooked nose etc.

Being a mutt, as being an exile, as being an outsider, may be a necessary or endemic position for writing.

An anecdote: I once taught welfare recipients, through one of those abominable BEGIN (END) programs. When discussing class, my students, many of them told me they considered themselves middle class--as marked by their housing and their possessions.

I for one am of the leisure class -- or so my father would say.

Love,
Rachel
From: Joe Amato <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>

Date: Wednesday, November 10, 1999 2:52 PM
Subject: Re: Business, class, access

>david b, i think i find mself on the opposite side of the table from you, >and sitting next to kathy lou, when it comes to this issue of class... and >i think you know this (based on SO many of my posts to this list in the >past, dealing specifically with this issue)... so i hesitate to try to >persuade you of my way of looking at things, esp. b/c i regard my way of >looking at things as opening to some relatively elemental and utterly >urgent realities... but what the hell, it's twixt friends, or virtual >friends, or acquaintances, or whatever... so i'll give it a whack, and i'll >be deliberate...
>
>you speak of "classism" as something that "exists"... not an esp. strong >claim, from where i sit... but my question would be, how does it exist? and >why does it exist? and esp., in the context of what i would loosely call, a >tad archaically, the writing life...
>
>of course there's all sortsa room here for idiosyncracies, but---
>
>and of course i believe that most writers will ultimately, should >ultimately find a way to write, but---
>
>these allowances don't in themselves obviate a discussion of (e.g.)
>class-based struggle... say, as it relates to writing process and product, >but also as it relates to our perceptions of what we are about as writers...
>
>if classism exists, then i take it class too exists, right?... i mean, >there are economic classes, right?... and one's entrance into---or >exclusion from---such classes is not entirely within one's (individual) >control, yearn or aspire or endeavor or resist as one may-----right?... (i >won't go into that class item most frequently discussed hereabouts---that >of the shifty-ness of class markers)...
>
>ok: if i aspire, say, to $60K per annum (among other aspirations) i >probably better figure on doing something besides just writing poetry, >right?...
>
>(oh hey---i'm not ashamed to say i aspire to $60K/yr either, anymore than i >am of aspiring to write poetry)...
>

>further, if i decide to write poetry, whatever my economic aspirations, >this latter decision will impinge upon my life somehow, right?... given >that money doesn't grow on trees, i might find---in all likelihood, i >probably will find---that the demands relating to making ends meet do not >coincide, neatly or productively (at least, not all of the time, perhaps >not most of the time), with the demands of writing... right?...
>
>or to borrow from williams (_paterson_ book iii, part ii), albeit to my own >class-specific ends:
>
> The writing is nothing, the being > in a position to write (that's
>
> where they get you) is nine tenths
> of the difficulty; seduction
>
> or strong arm stuff. The writing > should be a relief,
>
> relief from the conditions
> which as we advance become -- a fire,
>
> a destroying fire. For the writing > is also an attack and means must be
>
> found to scotch it -- at the root
> if possible. So that
>
> to write, nine-tenths of the problem > is to live.
>
>spoken by an m.d., yep... so, everything in my life (in my life, mind you >david) tells me that "to live" is, in an important and (again) utterly >urgent sense [the one having to do with earning a living such that doing >same supports my writing---which in my view i deal with on a daily basis], >an economic issue... hence (if i may) a class issue...
>
>none of this is absolute or inevitable, no, and surely some of this is a >matter of emphasis (among other things)... but in some sense one might >observe that it may as well be absolute and inevitable, david... b/c >that's how the world is constructed, no?---or so it seems to yours truly... >and if it seems so---to me, e.g.---sometimes and in some ways (at least) it >probably is so, ain't it?... and that it seems so is, at least, itself a >mark of the classism to which you refer, yes?...

>
>unless i'm hallucinating, i mean, and unless i've been hallucinating for lo >these many years... always a possibility, sure...
>
>BUT i'm not sure, in all, why you would resist the class issue as a >writing/publishing issue, in the very terms kathy lou has introduced... i >don't think the "urgency" i point to suggests evangelical fervor, either, >and for that matter, i didn't 'hear' same in kathy lou's posts... in all,
>the effect of yours and others' resistance on this count, it seems to me, >is to move "us" away from a willingness to deal with class specifics (and >associated complexities, incl. btw intimacies of various sorts, as well as >this question of how the biz of poetry relates to the practice of same)... >that is, resistance here, even outright skepticism, has the effect of >helping to shut down what appears to me to be an entirely reasonable and >entirely necessary exchange (and of course you're not alone in such >resistance either---i mean, if i'm picking on you a bit here, and i am, i >could as well have picked on stephen ellis, pleased to make your >acquaintance stephen)...
>
>: we can, some few of us, just get on with it without your participation >as such, i know... hence in no sense is your resistance to be understood as >the "final word" or some such (anymore than is this post to be taken as a >hostile intervention)... but as class is, like classism, difficult to >discuss for many of us (though perhaps not for you), we're just as likely >to say to ourselves, when greeted by such skepticism, why bother?... >again, disagreement is one thing, but some of what passed before my eyes of >late appeared to me either to be dismissive of kathy lou's concerns, or to >be asking of kathy lou that she defend her assertions (stephen's opener >"hits a particular nail square on the head, but doesn't drive it anywhere" >a case of the latter, i think, and your "[t]his unfounded belief >perpetuates itself in not having these opportunities become manifest" >heading distinctively toward the former)...
>
>and if this post provokes a "why bother?" reaction in you, david (or >stephen), my apologies---and i mean it... as in so many recent exchanges >"around here," it just seems to me that the conversation has become >unnecessarily contentious precisely when a bit less skepticism and a bit >more goodwill might have produced some insights, and might have drawn (some >of) us a bit closer together in the process, if only for a moment...

>
>i only wish i could have said all this with sense of humor intact...
>
>best,
>
>joe
>

↑ Index

277. Michael Neff
Re: class, gender etc.
Fri 12 Nov 1999

Dear Masha,

Go to Kentucky, look around, start there, see poor, dirt floors, rags and rust. "all be said"? I don't think so. There are tens of millions of poor in this country.

Commence to ciphering.

MN

Maria L. Zavialov wrote:

> Discussing class it's good to remember WHERE this discussion is taking place. Place, I mean a geographic spot or location, is another aspect (like gender) that should be introduced into the discussion. I mean location in terms of its economic situation. Thus the inhabitants of the US can all be said to belong to the upper class if viewed from a poor Asian country. One should try hard to stay hungry in the US, isn't one? The same goes for different locations within one and the same country. Like in Russia a native of Moscow coming to St. Petersburg is automatically moving one step up on the social ladder. And when he comes to a small provincial town he is already two steps up. And in a village... oh, in a village he (yes, he) is a guru.
> Masha Z.

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

278. Alan Sondheim
winter logs in hokkaido
Sat 13 Nov 1999

-

winter logs in hokkaido

honshu incense kamogami smoke calls forth hysterias and the last_time beyond the endless roll of days, answering and calling forth beyond the shame, honshu incense kamogami smoke, dead words in beauty-smoke kyushu last_time is kitakyushu in black earth, the long_lost_time and refugees and dreams and you walked for 261796 hours honshu incense kamogami smoke and we are still alive for 6 days of comas, we have been dissolute and buried, and it has taken us 23 minutes to speak our last honshu incense kamogami smoke, dead words in beauty-smoke kyushu winter logs in hokkaido, kitakyushu, moji your hysterias, fukuoka, are outside my shame and kitakyushu
our lost_love destroys the smoke of kitakyushu

↑ Index

279. Dubravka Djuric
Fw: (Fwd) (Fwd) International Women's University Hannover
Sat 13 Nov 1999

>
> Please find below an invitation of the International Women's > University, Hannover.
>
> >Dear All,
> >as promised some information on the International Women`s University > >"Technology and Culture" in Hannover.
> >It is going to take place from july, 15th to October 15th, during the EXPO
> >2000.
> >900 junior women scientists from all over the world will be invited to > >participate. Fundamental features of the ifu are internationality, > >interdisciplinarity and the integration of art + science.
> >The project is devided into 6 areas: work - information - body - migration

> >- city - water as highly controversial problems in the 21th century.
> >
> >You can find further information at
> >
> >http://www.Int-Frauenuni.de
> >
> >email:[redacted]
> >
> >Best wishes,
> >Michaela
> >
> >the application date has been expired to NOVEMBER 30!!!
> >
> >
>
> Esther Vonk, ATHENA central coordinator
> Lia Stigter, ATHENA assistant > International Office Women's Studies, Utrecht University > Trans 10, 3512 JK Utrecht, The Netherlands
> tel. [redacted], fax [redacted]
> http://www.let.uu.nl/womens_studies/athena.htm
>
>

↑ Index

280. Dubravka Djuric
raport-forth regional seminar - ceu budapest
Sat 13 Nov 1999

Three weeks ago Central European University, Program on Gender and Culture organized the first meeting of Fourth Regional Seminar on Gender and Culture. Seminar theme is: Women in Literature and the Arts - Ten Years after the changes. First sesion was dedicated to historical questions. Most of the presentations were considering women writers from the end of the 19th century and first part of 20th century, who are part of the national canon, but tend to give new interpertations of their work or pointing to their differece. Some of the interesting issues discussed were: women and madness; ambigues relation of the small easteuropean cultures to the large west cultures; andogene contract, question of the canon and the position of women in it in easteurope, etc. Next session will be at the begining of the March 2000 and will dedicated to the general theme Literature and Transition.

AGENDA:
>
> Friday, October 29
>
> 15-16
> Introductions
>
> 16:30-18:30
> Anna Gacs (Hungary): Problems of Regarding Women's Writing as an Autonomous Corpus in > a Small Literature.
>
> Discussion: Problems of the Literary Cannon (moderator Anna Gacs)
>
> Saturday, October 30

> 10-11
> Dubravka Djuric (Yugoslavia): Remarks on Revaluation and Re-contextualization of Women's Heritage.
> Martina Moravcova (Czech): Bozena Nemcova: the Problematic Matriarch.
>
> 11:30-12:30
> Discussion: Revaluation of Women's Writing (moderators Dubravka Djuric)
>
> 14-16
> Biljana Dojcinovic-Nesic (Yugoslavia): "My name is impossibility:" Observations on An/other Literary History
> Dasa Francikova (Czech): Rethinking Bozena Nemcova's Friendships with Women > Katarzyna Wieckowska (Poland): A Double Erasure. The Life and Work of Maria Komornicka.
>
> Discussion: Silences and Erasures in Women's Literary History (moderator > Biljana Dojcinovic-Nesic)
>
> 16:30-18:30
> Miglena Nikolchina (Romania): Love Triangles and Intellectual Couples: Strategies and Counter-strategies in Bulgarian Women's Literary History
> Irina A. Zherebkina (Ukraine) - The Fair Lady
> Sandra Meskova (Latvia)- Anna Brigadere and the Construction of Woman in Her Autobiographical Novel "Dievs. Daba. Darbs." (God. Nature. Labour.)
>

> Discussion: Women-Writers' Positioning in/against the Cannon (moderator > Sandra Meskova)
>
>
> Sunday, October 31
>
> 10-12: 30
> Conclusive Discussion: Priorities and Directions
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

281. David Baratier

Re: Business, class, access

Sat 13 Nov 1999

To clarify the statement "A force to work against without the naming process supplies the energy without the denegrative state of reverse labeling." I made earlier, I found this in the new Booglite, written by Harryette Mullen:

"The work of Erica Hunt and Will Alexander seems specifically designed to render inoperative such assumptions [issues of class & race]. Their work challenges conventional or reductive descriptions of "black poetry" and "black identity," while confronting head-on the conventional splitting of identity politics and black literary production from aesthetic practices, innovations, and influences of literary avant-gardes typically identified with Europe. While they certainly differ from each other in style, ideological position, and in aesthetic influences, both poets allow themselves a broad range of subject matter. Alexander is especially eclectic and inclusive when it comes to choosing topics for writing, from alchemy, philosophy, and religion to the history of visual art. Hunt's poetry brings to the page a recognizably urban female persona that eludes common racial stereotypes, while Alexander's hermeticism and surrealism signal the continuing influence of a historically international avant-garde."

The writing without mention of the opposition, the writing which neutralizes it, appears to have a powerful effect. I would be interested learning about poetry which is class based that mentions the oppressor in concrete terms, rather than not at all, and does so with out falling into the triteness that often occurs in oppositional poetics. I can think of a few, but very few. Joy Harjo's work, Martin Espada's _City of Coughing and Dead Radiators_ most examples do not hold to multiple readings in the way that Neidecker's work or Alexanders does. Rachel Loden's new book is one of the only recent books I've read that directly attacks the US socio-political situation and remains intact for multiple readings.

Jill, if you check back through my posts, I did not state that lack of access to opportunities does not occur, I made pains to maintain my writing in "I" based statements, when mass assumptions were made & I knew they did not fit me, I went outside of these confines to include some other individual writers. Never was there a "we" intended. I did not address women & class, which is not an oversight, I do not have personal experience and assume others here would address the subject.

Don Wellman (lilliput?) & Dodie bring up something that I wonder about, having done it a lot myself, especially in grad school. The act of overcompensation. Which seeing these posts together makes me wonder if this truth of, as Dodie states, "working class guys [having] a harder time assimilating into the middle class poetry world" is a section of this overcompensation. And I too have found it "intolerable that some people wish to rub my naivity in my face." The question from me is, when does one cross this line of overcompensation on the page? Inaccurate hearing of slang, use of the latinate, stating of the opposition?

And Joe Amato, I have always have admired your ability to get to the core of the matter, to get something learnable from it. I'll make an attempt to answer your post when there is more time, as, yes, it is a difficult subject to discuss, & my time to write impinged by physical labor today.

As for David Larsen "Having no ambition myself to rise so high into 'the upper eschelons' of anything as to be unable to resist crapping on people a la Mr. Baratier," who "volunteers to serve as this list's spokesperson for lettuce-sorters --and, if need be, to pass your civil responses back to them." There seems to be an assumption that I made the lettuce sorting comment which is not the case. And civil, such as this one? I hope your aggression towards the target you believe me to be has made you feel better.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

282. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: TEST_COERCION_TO_CHAR.OUT
Sat 13 Nov 1999

I was blind copied on this.

Murat

↑ Index

283. Lawrence Upton
Sub Voicive Poetry and Writers Forum
Sun 14 Nov 1999

Apologies for cross posting

The Sub Voicive Poetry and Writers Forum websites remain impossible to update and are intermittently available for reading. The provider says it is everybody else's fault.

Instead of giving one deadline after another, like the supplier, let me say that I shall post another note as soon as there is a change and that if there isn't a change by the end of the coming week - say by 20th November - then I shall look to relocating the website

No information is yet incorrect but there are updates which will add information which cannot be made

The next SVP reading in London is by David Bromige and Michael Heller on Tuesday 16th November Upstairs 3 Cups Sandland Street London WC1 8 p m

It is hoped that there will be a new issue of Spad magazine, devoted to work by David Bromige; assuming it is available on time a copy will be given to every paying member of the audience

Further details for those who cannot attend on publication

Lawrence Upton

SVP: http://matrix.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/ Lawrence Upton: http://members.spree.com/sip/lizard/index.htm RWC: http://members.tripod.com/~ReadandWrite/contents.html Writers Forum: http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/

↑ Index

284. Lowther, John
Weekend in New Orleans (part 5)
Sun 14 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x }

i know i said i was gonna knock this off but all those lighters raised in the audience have lured me back again --- and i thought of a number of other things that i wdve mentioned had they occurred but for whatever reason didnt when i wrote up reports 1-4, so, as a last stab at the final notation

SYMPOSIUM

after my talk, andy di michele's, camille's and randy's, hank lazer acted as something of a prompter and facillitator for a "panel on an otherness: the south and experimentation" ---- he handled this something like a thing i'd seen him do in tuscaloosa some time back and rather than knocking a ball out between two of the presenters or searching for things within their talks he instead had a series of (i think it was 10) propositions, or questions ---- these were all interesting unrolling but i do recall thinking that that any one of them wd have served for the framing of a whole conference ---- and he had 10 multi-layered and thickly implicating questions

at the this remove the ones that stick out in my memory are those to do with the nature of regionalism, being "southern", the serach for distinctions within and between words like community, local, region etc ---- and another question that hovered around the question of ~what next~? where people are going what are they doing etc

it also occurs to me that i didnt mention mike sarki's talk at all ---- he was speaking "against the experimental as such" and beneath the defensiveness and protestations that we wd misunderstand, that he didnt belong there, the assertions that "we" were all academics whereas he was a plumber etc ---- beneath all of that his main point seemed to be that "experimental" wasnt a genre (and that if it was he had nothing to do with it) and that instead what experimentalists were obsessed with was a search for novelty ---- this was a curious talk for a number of reasons ---- he protested his "common man" status against all the assembled "academics" (who were they exactly?) and yet he was ghosting along the edges of heidegger in his talk and ended with a longish quote from deleuze ---- he presented himself as the one disssenting vote about what ~experimental~ might mean and while i didnt give the talk i was hoping i wd've, nonetheless one of my main statements was that ~experimental~ isnt meaningful when used as a genre or stylistic term ---- anyway

in the panel at the end the "E-word" surfaced a good deal and judging by the general trend in usage neither my attempted pruning nor sarki's feint toward "novelty" made much difference to anyone and i think that in spite of hank's propositions and what had transpired in the talks the panel threatened to fall into a cataloging of impressions RE the E-word that added very little to what had happened already at one point bernadette was talking about having her own cow for milk etc when i walked into the dining room at camille's and i remember everyone laughing a good bit about it but not much of anything that was said ---- i imagined bernadette facing the cow in perhaps a parlor somewhere asking it questions

BERNADETTE

READING

david thomas roberts was billed as a visual artist, poet and contemporary rag composer and player --- in the reading he mentioned the ozarks in missouri several times as being behind the references in various poems (i never caught any of these it seems) ---- i liked his vispo material in the NOR issue a fair amount and his reading was fine tho i have a certain difficulty bringing the 2 sets of impressions into any relation hank lazer read, and again i was reminded of the event in tuscaloosa which i reported on some time back here ---- 1st perhaps b/c hank read one of the pieces that he'd read there with a line which i believe goes "chilli lewis legged in a grounder" --- his also was the poem i mentioned elsewhere in these reports called "prayer" ---- a number of things struck me in hank's reading ---- his use of a hand gesture to delineate the breaks within a series of untitled pieces (andy di michele also used a lot of gestures in his reading/talk earlier that day and again the next day at the maple leaf bar) and the gestures that he made at moments within the poem itself, particularly a gesture with the bent index and thumb taken from the fist as if holding up a small stone or showing someone the measure of something that size ---- another thing i noted about hank's reading was the meditative pace and the clarity of utterance (maybe i'm specifically impressed by these things as i tend to read between quick and very fast and when i read slower i feel as if i'm getting ponderous) that really held the attention

during the course of this event intermissionless event i had some difficulty paying attention and also took a couple of breaks and so apologize for not having anything to say about dave brinks, susan facknitz, or andy young (maybe this last was the most physically sensually oriented work read)

and there were also two dance pieces by amy trussell both interpretations of jake berry poems ---- i liack the knowledge or vocabulary to say much of anything about these --- tho i do with that i had been able to hear the poem better and too jake berry was sorely missed at this event

PARTY AT BILL'S

at one point while randy and skip and i were talking poetry in a darkened room (see previous reports) there was some commotion outside the window and lights moving around and randy looked out to see that bill was flashlighting up into the tree in his backyard where two raccoons were seated in a crook watching the partiers next day i head tell of how it is in the alley behind bill's where a neighbor feeds all the alley cats and the coons and cats have ceased turf and territory wars and can be seen eating side by side from the same bowl

AT THE AIRPORT

bill wished us goodbye and told us to call if we git bumped from our flight or if it crashed or anything that he cd help with

↑ Index

285. Joe Amato
new anthology...
Sun 14 Nov 1999

---

just rec'd news in the mail of what looks to be yet another interesting, and no doubt eyebrow raising, anthology, this time on oxford up no less (as most of you know, the same press that dropped of late their contemporary poetry series, despite public handwringing in the british parliament)... forthcoming december 1999, just in time for mla, y2k, etc.:

anthology of modern american poetry
ed. cary nelson
1200 pp., paper, $45

here's the list of the poets included (which is not meant to imply that all poets receive equal treatment, page-wise):

walt whitman
emily dickinson
edwin markham
sadakichi hartmann
edgar lee masters
edwin arlington robinson
james weldon johnson
paul lawrence dunbar lola ridge
amy lowell
gertrude stein robert frost
alice dunbar-nelson
carl sandburg
vachel lindsay
wallace stevens
angelina weld grimke georgia douglas johnson
mina loy

anne spencer
william carlos williams ezra pound
h.d.
robinson jeffers
marianne moore
t. s. eliot
john crowe ransom
claude mckay
edna st. vincent millay
archibald macleish
dorothy parker
genevieve taggard
e. e. cummings
jean toomer
charles reznikoff
herman spector
v. j. jerome
john wheelwright
joseph freeman
lucia trent
louise bogan
harry crosby hart crane
allen tate
melvin b. tolson
yvor winters
sterling a. brown
laura (riding) jackson
angel island: poems by chinese immigrants, 1910-1940
kenneth fearing
langston hughes
arna bontemps
gwendolyn bennett countee cullen
lorine neidecker
kay boyle
carl rakosi
aqua laluah
louis zukofsky
john beecher
kenneth rexroth

robert penn warren
stanley kunitz
joseph kalar
richard wright
theodore roethke
george oppen
edwin rolfe
charles olson
sol funaroff
elizabeth bishop
william everson
tillie lerner olsen
muriel rukeyser
robert hayden
charles henri ford
weldon kees
randall jarrell
japanese american concentration camp haiku, 1942-1944
john berryman
william stafford
dudley randall
joy davidman
margaret walker
ruth stone
thomas mcgrath
robert lowell
gwendolyn brooks
william bronk
robert duncan
richard wilbur
mona van duyn
james dickey
denise levertov
anthony hecht
bob kaufman maxine kumin
paul blackburn
frank o'hara
james merrill
allen ginsberg
robert creeley
robert bly

a. r. ammons
james wright
john ashbery
galway kinnell
w. s. merwin
anne sexton
philip levine
adrienne rich gary snyder
gregory corso
etheridge knight
sylvia plath
henry dumas
amiri baraka
n. scott momaday
mark strand
audre lorde
charles wright
mary oliver
jayne cortez lucille clifton
susan howe
michael s. harper
ishmael reed
lawson fusao inada
robert pinsky
welton smith
judy grahn
robert hass
sharon olds
louise gluck michael palmer
paul violi
carolyn m. rodgers
ron silliman
adrian c. louis
yusef komunyakaa
ai
wendy rose
c. d. wright
jessica hagedorn
ray a. young bear

carolyn forche
garrett kaoru hongo
rita dove
jimmy santiago baca
anita endrezze
ana castillo
mark doty harryette mullen
louise erdrich
sandra cisneros
thylias moss
patricia smith
marilyn chin
sesshu foster
martin espada
sherman alexie

quite some list, no?... i'm eager to understand the logic behind this compilation (which seems self-evident in some cases, and far from same in others), but will of course have to get my hands on a copy first... the text is supported by a "rapidly evolving website, which now features pages for more than 70 of the anthologized poets":

> http://www.english.uiuc.edu/maps

and editor nelson may be contacted if you wish to contribute to same:

> prof. cary nelson
> [redacted] (fax)
> english dept.
> university of illinois
> 608 s. wright st.
> urbana, illinois 61801
> usa

///

joe

↑ Index

286. hassen
question
Sun 14 Nov 1999

---

hello al ~

if/when you get a moment, would you please direct me to info on the philly poetics list? i was told to look on the writers house page - which i did to no avail.

thanks in advance/apologies for taking your time,
hassen

↑ Index

287. Alan Sondheim
"loose ends"
Sun 14 Nov 1999

/
/

"loose ends"

"my shameful eyes, the Leopold"

"my shameful eyes, the dead eyes roiling me on your spike, always that spike again, tired of eating, swallowing, of the whole thing, in a hurry before I die.:yes sure, whatever, eating each other, it's the stuff of typography, what makes lead, what poisons the body, you wouldn't know that:when i'm running it's crazy, my head presses into my toes:death of birth:denouement of life Does when I'm running it's crazy, my head presses into my toes turn Azure, my shameful eyes, the dead eyes roiling me on your spike, always that spike again, tired of eating, swallowing, of the whole thing, in a hurry before I die., to you? last_fuck with hours of sexual fury!"

"!"

"Elsewhere, I've removed the exclamation mark from a point within a text, calming everything down. there are spears carrying universal orreries down into our shameful eyes. I want things calm, flat, the whole world smoothed and healed, spikes as well. no lead typography or dead trees. thinking in very many streams, flowing without ripples, sheen."

"Nikuko and Doctor Leopold Konninger"

"Last night I dreamed of famous Russian ballet dancer Nikuko still slowly pirouetting before Doctor Leopold Konninger, the two locked in mutual fascination, obsession, to the exclusion of everything else. An orrery, impenetrable, the body writing itself into space, turning on the wood of trees - the Other, seated, upon the same."

"I don't"

"I don't want to murder anyone's words.:silence anyone. :I don't want to:I don't want murder or death.:I don't want to murder anyone's words. Come with me, I don't want to murder anyone's words., Doctor Leopold Konninger! dark eyes and blind shamefulness:so yes, through my eyes, your spike I cannot see alas:so very shameful eyes:your doing with me:your taking me Come with me, dark eyes and blind shamefulness, Doctor Leopold Konninger!"

↑ Index

288. Alan Sondheim

Noise News: 'Your Life' (fwd)

Sun 14 Nov 1999

(I was once associated with Perforations, which I love. Alan)

Date: Sun, 14 Nov 1999 22:52:50 -0500 (EST)
From: robert cheatham <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]
Subject: Noise News: 'Your Life'

```
            @@@  @@@   @@@@@@@   @@@   @@@@@@@   @@@@@@@@@
            @@@@ @@@  @@@@@@@@@  @@@  @@@@@@@@
@@@@@@@@@
            @@!@!@@@  @@!  @@@  @@!  !@@      @@!
            !@!!@!@!  !@!  @!@  !@!  !@!      !@!
            @!@ !!@!  @!@  !@!  !!@  !!@@!!   @!!!:!
            !@!  !!!  !@!  !!!  !!!   !!@!!!   !!!!!:
            !!:  !!!  !!:  !!!  !!:      !:!  !!:
            :!:  !:!  :!:  !:!  :!:     !:!   :!:
            :::   ::  ::::: ::   ::  :::: ::    :: ::::
             ::    :    : :  :   :    :: : :    : :: ::
```

"The bit of noise, the small random element, transforms one system or one order into another."
M. Serres

"Between the rationality for which the analysis speaks and the law that history repeats there remains a gap, infinitesimal to be sure, but fundamental"
M. De Certeau

****

First of all, we at Public Domain and Perforations would like to wish everyone a happy holiday season. For those of us who live half-electronically, It's easy to forget that the other half lives very concretely.

We would also like to thank all those who have contributed to Perforations as well as those who have visited the PD site. We are now averaging about 41,000 hits a month--and for something that's not a porno site, a download or topical news site that's pretty gratifying and we thank you again for visiting with us.

We are still compiling P21, 'Eurocentrism and the Dilemma of Deep Time' and are beginning to think ahead to P23, on poetics, as well as a general Public Domain digital arts project late next year to be called 'Inter/Facing The Dead'.

More on those later. For now let's talk about:

'YOUR LIFE'
PERFORATIONS 22

As I was making an entry in my on-line journal recently, it occurred to me that there must be hundreds of on-line journals and diaries in this pre-millennial year. Perhaps most of them not using any flashy graphics, javascript, CGI, CCS, dhtml, but patiently recording the ebb and flow of their daily, weekly, or monthly life, perhaps only the minutiae which seems to clog most of lives but also gives it feet and shoes with which to walk, the stories of our small pleasures as well as occasional defeats. But perhaps also the occasional glimmer that seems to give us some sense of where and who we are, where we've been and where we think we should be going, a passing but necessary illumination for not only those of us who write them but maybe even, fleetingly, for those who might happen to come across them.

This node of PERFORATIONS will feature your journal or diary (after all--you put it on-line so you must want folks to read it, right?) Whether only the daily emotional weather, dream diary, your occasional unformed theoretical musings, sophisticated or homespun, we would like to feature them. Rather than storing them on the Public Domain server, we would like to link to your URL since the expectation is that these are on-going efforts (with the exception perhaps of archived or discontinued journals.). The only other wish on our part (other than that they be on-going efforts) is that you send a small graphic which can be used as a thumbnail on the index page and perhaps a brief description.

For more information contact Robert Cheatham at [redacted]

****

general enquires to: [redacted]

Public Domain, Inc. is a 501 (c) 3 non-profit organization devoted to exploring the nexus between art, theory, technology, and community.

↑ Index

289. Stephen Vincent
Lester Bowie/KPFA
Sun 14 Nov 1999

John Bennett paid lovely tribute and played a number of cuts by the late Lester Bowie during "Forms & Feelings," the title of Bennett's regular (excellent) KPFA (Berkeley) Saturday afternoon jazz program. Another good reason to support the uniqueness of the station against overhaul efforts by its currently misdirected umbrella, the Pacifica Foundation. Cheers, Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

290. lee ann brown
email change + soft skull readings
Mon 15 Nov 1999

Dear Listers:

Please note:
My email has changed from

[redacted]

to

[redacted]

Also
Here's a forward:

> SOFT SKULL PRESS ANNOUNCES TWO READINGS
>
> Soft Skull Ladies
> November 19
> @ Bluestockings Books
> 172 Allen St.
> 7 pm
> Free
>
> Nora Ruth Roberts reads from her debut novel Ripe Tomatoes, the tale of a New Jersey tomato-growing commune.
>
> With Cynthia Nelson, Lee Ann Brown, Maggie Nelson, and Cat Tyc.
>
> Soft Skull @ Revolution Books

> November 22nd
> 9 W.19th St.
> 7 pm
> Free
>
> William Upski Wimsatt (author of Bomb the Suburbs and No More Prisons), two books about hip-hop and social activism in the city.
>
> Nora Ruth Roberts reads from Ripe Tomatoes.
>
> Seth Tobocman, artist/author/co-founder of World War Three Illustrated will read from the recent You Don't Have to Fuck People Over To Survive.
>
> For more info, please contact > Cat Tyc
> http://www.softskull.com
> [redacted]
>
> Sander Hicks
> Editorial
> Soft Skull Press, Inc.
>
> MAIL: 98 Suffolk Street #3A
> STUDIO: 100 Suffolk, basement
> NYC, NY 10002-3366
>
> FAX: [redacted]
> www.softskull.com
> VOX: [redacted]

Z Y X W V U T S R Q P O N M L K J I H G F E D C B A

Lee Ann Brown
Tender Buttons
PO Box 13, Cooper Station
New York, NY 10276

[redacted]

↑ Index

291. jenho

Ochs/Hejinian/Dragomoschenko Collaboration

Mon 15 Nov 1999

This came to me from the filmmaker Jacki Ochs, thought some of y'all might be interested. The film script is edited down from hundreds of pages of correspondence between Hejinian and Dragomoschenko, not unproblematically, but definitely interestingly. And to hear Lily Taylor's voice speaking Lyn Hejinian's words is truly strange.

Smooches,

Jen

*

Dear friends and colleagues,

LETTERS NOT ABOUT LOVE, a unique film collaboration between artists Lyn Hejinian (U.S. poet), Arkadii Dragomoshchenko (Russia, poet) and Jacki Ochs (U.S., filmmaker) will be featured at the Musuem of Modern Art's biennial presentation titled FilmFest - films from the independent states of the former Soviet Union. This is the only American directed film in the series. FilmFest will be paying tribute to Aleksandr Pushkin on his 200th birthday anniversary.

LETTERS NOT ABOUT LOVE, an hour long 16mm film based on a five year correspondence between the poets, features a striking score by Larry Ochs with additional music by Sergey Kuryokhin, glorious photography by James Livingston, and is narrated by actors Lili Taylor and Victor Nord. The film has won several awards including Best Documentary Feature from the South by Southwest Film Festival.

Dates are: Tuesday, December 7th at 2:30PM
Friday December 17th at 7PM.
Address: 11 West 53rd St., Roy & Niuta Titus Theatre #1

Following are a few quotes on the film "Letters Not About Love"

Michael Ondaatje author of "The English Patient" "The delicate merging of private maps - home, grandmother, local weather - in this intimate and formal correspondence of two poets, one in America, one in Russia. How a kettle whistles there, how a sun floats here. A beautiful and moving film."

Laurie Anderson performance artist - composer "Letters Not About Love" is a gorgeous meditation on the mysteries of language and place. Using a written exchange between two writers who riff on definitions of one and two syllable words, Ochs has created a fascinating double portrait of the United States and Russia, which emerges through evocative images and stories. Jacki Ochs has made a truly beautiful and original film."

Cleveland Plain Dealer "By the end of this short 60 minute film, a deep intimacy has been established ? between the poets, between their cultures, and between film and audience."

Austin Chronicle
"..a rare embrace of the political and the personal...a true and literal fusion of cinema and poetry."

For more info.
A Human Arts Association Production/54 Greene St. #4A/NYC NY 10013/tel.[redacted]
fax. [redacted] e mail. [redacted]

↑ Index

292. Grant Jenkins
Top dollar urine sing-a-long (renga)
Mon 15 Nov 1999

Top dollar urine sing-a-long wonderul--and yes--I consider Cotton Mather too then. The Captivity narratives--tho not verse--and certainly a strange poem or two by "anonymous" I've found on "the drunken spirit"

:b

I will watch the proposed renga &
guess that I will be, first, deleting a lot, & maybe , second,
setting: poetics-list no mail until it's over -
collaborative verbal spillage & seepage soon got tedious last time out -- after about a week --
I'd hopefully suggest a renga go on a renga list

Absolutely, yes.

:p

Anyone interested agreeing to take on the renga thing as a side project to the list I'm anxious to see what comes of it best, Chris poetics list moderator yes

a:

"What is certain is that the renga's occlusion
    of other conversation
        became tedious after a time"
To be continued
    by Grant Jenkins
        on subsubpoetics
if he so desires.

↑ Index

293. David Kirschenbaum
BoogBeat: Davis/Koch, Wilk/Stroffolino, Troupe/Zinc Bar
Mon 15 Nov 1999

BoogBeat: Five Days in the City, November 10-14, 1999:
Jordan Davis, Kenneth Koch, James Wilk, Chris Stroffolino, Quincy Troupe, Wayne Koestenbaum, and Taylor Mead

Wed. 11/10/99:
Jordan Davis and Kenneth Koch
at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church

BoPoFest chieftain Aaron Kiely's just bought a used Geo from someone he knows in Northampton, and plans many NYC visits now that he can just car-bop over. But as he readies to head to PoProj for tonight's Davis and Koch reading, discovers the breaks need work, and $200 later finds himself on a Peter Pan bus, with potpourri air forced in every 15-minutes and the movie The Rock on seven TV screens throughout the 50 seat couch, the volume constant--"I had to watch fuckin' Ed Harris be macho for two hours"--and he makes it to my Chelsea studio in time to drop-off one bag, as we grab some Djarums and three slices, before we enter Parish Hall.

Everyone likes Jordan Davis, so we'd all plan on hitting his readings anyway, but this being a Wednesday night at the Church, and the chance to see Koch, too, brings the poets out in droves. The PoProj troika of Ed Friedman, Marcella Durand, and Anselm Berrigan, are all in attendance, Prageeta Sharma is taking cash at the door, and scattered throughout are Drew Gardner, Ron Padgett, Douglas Rothschild, Eddie Berrigan, Kristin Prevallet, Jeni Olin, and a late-arriving Kimberly Lyons.

Mitch Highfill, back to the Project to coordinate the Wednesday night series this year, introduces Jordan first. Jordan always solid, delivers wicked lines that are made even stronger by his clean-cut , straightman good looks, and matter-of-fact reading style. Here are my favorite lines: "purpose in her Pumas"; "my heart isn't sick, it's just overdressed"; "take me to your massive mermaid"; and the plain evil: "you look telephone pretty."

Aaron and I quick-smoke with Prageeta outside during the break, and she heads back to the table, as I show him where Vice President Daniel Tompkins may be spending eternity.

I sit on the floor, stage right, to take some photos of Koch alongside Jordan and his wife, stay there, my knees splayed in what we probably don't call Indian style anymore, as Koch's grandson starts throwing a plastic water cup, grabbing it and tossing it again, toward the area right in front of the lectern behind which his grandpa is delivering his poetry. The boy's father, sitting on a meditation mat, grabs his son's attention--boy can't be more than five-years-old--and writes math problems into his notebook to quiet him from crumbling the plastic cup. The boy answers every problem right, his dad doing the math slower than the little one who figures half of the answers out in his head.

Koch reads poems to his army days, marijuana, and his Jewishness, the latter hitting home solid. His grandson took me away from note taking, but one line from "to Jewishness" that brought some giggles of the nervous kind, told of young Koch in a World War Two foxhole, his comrade yelling that "Those fucking Jews are all back inside, you don't see no fucking Jews in the foxhole, " as Koch decides to repress his Jewish identity.

After reading, chat with Kim Lyons and friend, try to talk them into going to the Grassroots on St. Mark's for drinks, though the babysitter is home watching Kim and Mitch's little one, now three. So Aaron and I head over, as the Davises all head to dinner with Jordan's folks and Jordan says he'll see us in 45 minutes.

At Grassroots the Berrigans, Rothschild, Prevallet, and the rest drink and schmooze. Mitch and Kim make it over for one drink that becomes two or three, as he tells me about the time he saw the Beatles in Memphis when he was a boy, as we talk Elvis Costello and poetry, Mitch ripping my head wide open with his thoughts. Explosive editor Katy Lederer's there too, and I introduce her to Aaron before she heads to the outer boroughs.

Aaron and I walk Jeni Olin home to the Chelsea Hotel on this unusually warm autumn night, and she mentions Boulder and reminds me we met over my postcard project during Naropa summer 1997. Aaron's bladder is about to explode halfway through out 30-minute walk, so Jeni invites us in to use her bathroom. First time in Chelsea, as I scope art covered walls as Aaron emerges refreshed, before we say bye, get a pint of Haagen Daz and talk shit half the night while I show him pubs he's never seen before.

Thurs. and Fri. 11/11-12/99:
Poet-musicians: James Wilk and Chris Stroffolino

Hit Luna Lounge on Ludlow Street to catch the return of Fatstick editor James Wilk's band Imaginary Numbers. I saw what was supposed to be their first and last show here last August, right before their bass player headed off to Texas for college. But here they are again, with a new bass player who's pulled the band together. They're no longer mumbling their unfinished lyrics; the vocals are mixed above the instruments so you can hear the witty lyrics about Moses, the World Cup, and gravity; and they seem to be having a whole lot more fun.

Next night head with poet Joanna Fuhrman to see her roommate Chris Stroffolino's band play loft party in Greenpoint. Walk over to West Street and discover insane view of the city, Chrysler Building shining even more in black sky than it reflects in sunlight, and we get there way early, 10:15 for a show slated for 10, as Strof tells Joanna, "What are you doing here so early? Don't you know nothing starts on time in the city?" We head out with some others to grab some beer at the corner store, actually called that, and it looks like some chunk of middle America that got lost in Brooklyn, as I buy some Dos Equis and we head back.

More people are filtering in, and eventually the loft is packed, as I walk across the stage and out onto the roof to see the skyline and escape the crowd. I only know Joanna and Chris, not a single poet in the crowd other than us three, "A good thing" Stroffolino says with a smirk after the show when I tell him this, and we laugh.

The band, Volumen, with Chris on keyboards, is a Britpop blast straight outta 1964, as they wear dark, solid ties, and collared shirts. They sound great, but the vocals are way down in the mix, and you can't understand a thing the lead singer is saying. After one song, a friend ambles over to the vocalist, as he crouches down, and a few seconds he later he does some adjusting and voila, we can hear the vocals a bit better, though still not perfect. Joanna says the band sounds much better than the last time they played, and she's proud of/for Chris. The line's 10-deep for the one bathroom in the loft, so I head to the street and 5-beer pee in the overgrowth, before grabbing the G train home.

Sun. 11/14/99:
Quincy Troupe at Tribes Gallery;
Wayne Koestenbaum and Taylor Mead at the Zinc Bar

After taking six-year-old niece Michelle to McDonald's breakfast where we sit in front car of a choo-choo train as she dips her pancakes in syrup and I drink ok decaf, before she reads to me in Barnes and Noble's kids room where she tells me that her mother, my sister, doesn't want her getting anymore character books, but she insists on me getting her a Rugrats Thanksgiving book, until a phone call to her mom reveals she already owns it, and so I get her a nice Chanukah book instead, I subway home, skipping Jewish sports panel at Holocaust museum, head to home for downtime, before calling Wanda Phipps to come see Quincy Troupe at Tribes Gallery on 3rd between Avenues C & D, up the block from where my dad was born--across the street from where the Nuyorican Poets Café now rests--on a kitchen table nearly 70 years ago. I call Wanda back and tell her it's a reading, not just a book party, because I know she's not into hitting readings right now. And a few minutes later get a call from her that she's not going to go.

Quincy is one of my favorite writers, a poet whose words bop like the music of his old St. Louis neighborhood, where Chuck Berry was living and playing right up the block from Troupe. Walk up tenement steps into Tribes apartment/gallery to see Eliot Katz and Long Shot magazine editor Danny Shot who silent hello wave. Catch last coupla poems before Quincy talks for half-hour or so on poetry, Miles Davis--"Miles told me once 'I'm gonna knock your head off,' and I said, 'Shit, you're what, 5'8" 150, I'm 6'2" 220, that ain't happening so shut the fuck up.' 'I was a boxer in the …' and Quincy waves his hand derisively and goes 'Yeah, yeah.'"; and Code, the new lifestyle magazine for black men he's editing during his year-long sabbatical from teaching.

The line is long to say hi and get his new Coffee House Press book signed, so I wait on the side, trade zines with Anna May from Tribes, and then say hello to Quincy, who places me back at Naropa, outside on the iron tables, eating lunch and talking poetry. I have him sign Booglits for archives, first issue with him on the cover, and fourth one, on baseball, with his "Poem for My Father" inside, about his dad, the third greatest Negro League's catcher ever, and the league's chief archivist, each of which I've given him before but he says "I've never seen this one, or this one either," before I hit him up to do a limited edition chapbook.

Split at 5:15pm to meet cousin for Kosher Indian food in Gramercy Park, but answering machine call says plans are off, so I head to Two Boots for a mushroom-and-peppers slice, before busing over to the Zinc Bar for Taylor Mead gig.

Taylor always entertains me, whether at the annual New Year's reading at St. Mark's Church or on-line at the Chase Manhattan ATM on Broadway just above Houston. Get to Zinc real early, 6:30 for 6:37 reading (Lorber-time), drop stuff on couch in front of where the mic will be set-up, and wait for the crowd to gather, as the readings here never begin before 7pm. Lungfull editor Brendan Lorber shows up about 15 minutes later, and I tell him he should put together a Zinc Bar Reader like the KGB Bar did for their reading series, and 10 minutes after that his co-curator Douglas Rothschild and him are talking near the sound equipment about the yet to arrive Taylor Mead. "I talked to him on Wednesday," Brendan says. A few minutes later Taylor shows up. I remind David Cameron as we order drinks at the bar--red wine for him a Vodka gimlet straight up for me--that we were the first two readers at the Zinc Bar, back in March of 1997 when the series left Biblio's Books, and he says he can't remember that, and that I have a good memory.

I'd heard of Wayne Koestenbaum before, but didn't know his work at all. It's what's nice about the Zinc Bar series, this colliding of all sorts of names and schools of writing, where most of the time I don't even know the authors, but all of the time I end up hearing good work. Tonight's no different, as now I feel like I want to be a Wayne Koestenbaum groupie. He reads pop culture-laced pieces, dropping mentions of dead ’50s icons, opera stars, and mythical characters, taking us into this world inhabited by the beautiful, the dead, and his varying forms. The entire time, Lisa Lubasch's face, always glowing, is damn near incandescent , her dim hysterical reflection glistening back to me in the mirrors alongside the reader.

Taylor Mead has his boombox with him, always. He comes up to the stage with his cane. "I walk 60 blocks a day with this thing," he says. Brendan offers to get him a stool as Taylor tries to configure himself and his work behind the music stand, dropping poems on the couch next to Brendan, reading catty, but good, work about Warhol and how he treated Taylor and the other superstars in the Factory and an ode to the century. His memory is perfect, as he recants stories of old films and interactions, of letters to The Village Voice in response to critics who say they don't want to see two hours of Taylor Mead's ass on the screen, and then how he and Andy made their next movie "Taylor Mead's Ass," and of Giorno's "Sleep" actually being only 10 minutes long, but being looped endlessly.

Brendan helps Taylor turn pages, and after one piece, Taylor asks Brendan to put his finger right here, pointing to a page behind the music stand. As Brendan places his finger there, Taylor goes "Oh, you bad boy," a mischievous look in his ruffled brow, as everyone laughs, before Taylor reads one last piece, his music blaring some sort of Charleston-sounds, as the crowd asks for an encore, and he delivers it one more time, this time changing the spring to winter.

I say quick hello to Jen Robinson, her hair now real long after a year plus of MFA study at Brooklyn College, before she heads off to Brooklyn with Cameron, and chat with Lee Ann Brown for a moment to give her a December 1 deadline for her year 2000 calendar, and then head to the door.

I say hello to Koestenbaum, as he, his boyfriend and Taylor chat over drinks at the bar, tell him I am a Kirschenbaum--cherry tree in German-- what is a Koestenbaum? Chestnut tree he says, as I smile, wave and split.

As ever,
David

_____ Get FREE voicemail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

294. Alan Sondheim
Opinion / Speedfactory (fwd)
Mon 15 Nov 1999

(From trAce online writing community)

Date: Mon, 15 Nov 1999 17:20:51 +0000
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Opinion / Speedfactory

OPINION
"With my finger on the mouse I'm actively engaged in a physical relationship with what happens on the screen. I'm transfixed in the light of the monitor's path. A one-to-one contact, a to-and-fro 'relationship' that is unique, personal and seductive." Brought to you in conjunction with NOW99, Michael Atavar talks about Intimacy in the latest Opinion. Why not let us know your opinion! http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/opinion/

SPEEDFACTORY
Speedfactory is a fast, collaborative email writing project which will take place on 24 November, and is open to all trAce members.

Writers from around the world will email exactly 50 words to a partner, who will respond with exactly 50 words back within 20 minutes.

Speedfactory will be co-ordinated by trAce Writer-in-Residence Bernard Cohen and Terri-ann White (author of Deep Immersion), and is based on a project they've undertaken with critic McKenzie Wark and poet John Kinsella.

If you are interested, please email Bernard at [redacted] with details of your available times on the 24 November wherever you are in the world. If possible please translate into Greenwich Mean Time. Bernard and Terri-ann will try to pair you with someone on another continent. Alternatively, if you would prefer to name your partner, please include this in your email - but do make sure you have their permission to do so!

Very close to the day, you will receive a trigger word. Then, as 24 November 1999 disappears from Earth forever, email the outcomes to Bernard... More information at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/cohen/speedfactory.htm Deep Immersion can be found at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/deep/

trAce Online Writing Community
Nottingham Trent University
Clifton Lane
Nottingham NG11 8NS
ENGLAND
Tel: +[redacted] (direct line)
Fax: +[redacted]
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk
[redacted]

---

with 'unsubscribe' as the subject line.

↑ Index

295. Poetics List
Smithson and Poetry (reading)
Mon 15 Nov 1999

It was requested that I forward the following message to the list. Chris

--

From: Emilie Clark <[redacted]>
Date: 11/12/99 5:54 AM -0500

Reading:

Heap of Language: Robert Smithson and Poetry

3 poets:
Tan Lin
Pamela Lu
Lytle Shaw

3 critics:
Gary Shapiro
Richard Sieburth
Eugenie Tsai

The Whitney Museum of American Art at Philip Morris (120 Park Ave at 42nd Street)

Thursday, November 18 8pm (free)

↑ Index

296. Poetics List
Anne Waldman and Bill Berkson at SPT, 11/19 / saidenberg
Mon 15 Nov 1999

---

had to reformat. Chris

--

From: jocelyn saidenberg <[redacted]>
Date: Sun, 14 Nov 1999 11:50:50 -0800

Small Press Traffic Reading

Friday, November 19, 7:30 p.m.
Anne Waldman
reading and interviewed by Bill Berkson

Anne Waldman makes a special appearance tonight in honor of Small Press Traffic's 25th anniversary. There's too much to say about Waldman! She's a poet, performer, teacher, Distinguished Professor of Poetics at the Naropa University where she founded the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics with Allen Ginsberg in 1974. She has written over 30 books & pamphlets of poetry including Troubairitz, Kill or Cure, Iovis Books I & II, Young Mazhattan (with Bill Berkson). Forthcoming from Penguin Poets is her new full-length poem, Marriage: A Sentence. In addition, she is a noted editor, with many publications including Disembodied Poetics: Annals Of The Jack Kerouac School with Andrew Schelling and The Beat Book. Winner of the Shelley Memorial Prize, she has made collaborative projects recently with artists GeorgeSchneeman, Susan Rothenberg & Richard Tuttle, and is currently guest director of the Schule fur Dichtung in Vienna, Austria. She has never given the same reading twice, so we don't know quite what to expect, but the hot money says that you've never felt anything like the roller-coaster of swoops, dives, tremolo, atman, fire-walking, fast talking, seven elements of history, myth, gossip, magic, enchantment and theatrical power that you will hear tonight.

She will be interviewed by the poet Bill Berkson, author of ten books of poetry, including Saturday Night: Poems 1960-61, Recent Visitors, Enigma Variations, Blue is the Hero and Lush Life. Mr. Berkson, one of the premier poets of California, has taught and directed the public lectures program at the SF Art Institute since 1984. He plays well with others, vide his famous collaborations with Frank O'Hara and Philip Guston, and so we are glad to be able to secure him to quiz his old associate, Anne Waldman.

New College Theater
777 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

↑ Index

297. Poetics List
Re: Ochs/Hejinian/Dragomoschenko Collaboration
Mon 15 Nov 1999

For those living in chilly western New York, northern Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio, southern Ontario, etc.:

> LETTERS NOT ABOUT LOVE, an hour long 16mm film based on a five year correspondence between the poets, features a striking score by Larry Ochs with additional music by Sergey Kuryokhin, glorious photography by James Livingston, and is narrated by actors Lili Taylor and Victor Nord.

will be shown next

Wednesday, 1 December @ 4 pm

at the Center for Fine Arts Screening Room North Campus of SUNY Buffalo

Chris

↑ Index

298. Philip Nikolayev
Re: class, gender etc.
Mon 15 Nov 1999

Fair enough, Michael. But then again, it's a question of degree. Though some of us have certainly managed "experience hunger" in the US, some of us have also encountered forms of poverty elsewhere that are quite simply never seen in this country, and are impossible for most Americans even to imagine.

Cheers,
Philip Nikolayev

At 11:52 PM 11/12/99 -0500, Michael Neff wrote:
>Dear Masha,
>
>Go to Kentucky, look around, start there, see poor, dirt floors, rags and >rust. "all be said"? I don't think so. There are tens of millions of poor in >this country.

>
>Commence to ciphering.
>
>MN
>
>Maria L. Zavialov wrote:
>
>> Discussing class it's good to remember WHERE this discussion is taking >> place. Place, I mean a geographic spot or location, is >> another aspect (like gender) that should be introduced into the discussion.
>> I mean location in terms of its economic situation. Thus the inhabitants of >> the US can all be said to belong to the upper class if viewed from a poor >> Asian country. One should try hard to stay hungry in the US, isn't one? The >> same goes for different locations within one and the same country. Like in >> Russia a native of Moscow coming to St. Petersburg is automatically moving >> one step up on the social ladder. And when he comes to a small >> provincial town he is already two steps up. And in a village... oh, in a >> village he (yes, he) is a guru.
>>   Masha Z.
>
>--
>
>
>
>
>==========
>Web Del Sol
>http://webdelsol.com
>LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW
>

↑ Index

299. Al Filreis
Re: question
Mon 15 Nov 1999

|
| hello al ~
|
| if/when you get a moment, would you please direct me to info on the philly

| poetics list? i was told to look on the writers house page - which i did to
| no avail.
|
| thanks in advance/apologies for taking your time,
| hassen
|

I added Hassen, and would point out to all those on the list: if you are in the Philadelphia area we'd be happy to add you to the Writers House-based discussion list for poets.

--Al Filreis

↑ Index

300. Judy Schwartz
Re: HIGHWIRE READING
Mon 15 Nov 1999

Can you tell me if the highwire reading is at 3 o'clock or 8 o'clock this week? Thanks! --Judy

↑ Index

301. Susan Wheeler
The New Yorker magazine dated 8/22/99
Mon 15 Nov 1999

---

on the stands now has, on page 189, instructions on voting in its "best books of 1999" contest, to be decided by readers. One can only vote once, should one choose to vote. The choices in poetry are:

Of No Country I Know - David Ferry
Vita Nova - Louise Gluck
The Constructor - John Koethe
Poems - J.H. Prynne
The Pilot Star Elegies - Sherod Santos

I can only urge you to vote, so that the range for next year's contest might be even greater --

Apparently you can also vote by calling [redacted] or going to www.newyorker.com -- although I've tried neither.

Susan

↑ Index

302. David Baptiste Chirot

[Cuba SI] FW: To Leonard Peltier from Subcomandante Marcos (fwd)

Mon 15 Nov 1999

Throughout November, Native American from around the country will gather in Washington, D.C. to demand that President Clinton grant executive clemency to Leonard Peltier, a Native American leader who has been in prison for 23 years for a crime he did not commit.

In April Amnesty International declared Mr. Peltier a political prisoner and called for his immediate and unconditional release. Over the years, humanitarian figures such as the Reverend Jesse Jackson, the South African Arch Bishop Desmond Tutu, and the Dalai Lama have made similar calls. Now, the EZLN and Subcomandante Marcos are echoing the plea for Mr. Peltier's freedom.

To learn more about the details of Mr. Peltier's case, why so many people are petitioning for his freedom, and how you can help, go to the Leonard Peltier Defense Committee's website at http://members.xoom.com/freepeltier/index.html

Subject: To Leonard Peltier from Subcomandante Marcos

Ejército Zapatista de Liberación Nacional México

October of 1999

For: Leonard Peltier

From: Subcomandante Insurgente Marcos

Leonard,

Through the NCDM and Cecilia Rodriguez we extend greetings from the men, women, children and elders of the Zapatista Army of National Liberation.

Cecilia has told us about the grave injustice the North American judicial system has committed against you. We understand that the powerful are punishing your spirit of rebellion and your strong fight for the rights of indigenous people in North America.

Stupid as it is, the powerful believe that through humiliation, arrogance and isolation it can break the dignity of those who give thoughts, feelings, life and guidance to the struggle for recognition and respect for the first inhabitants of the land over whom, the vain United States has risen. The heroic resistance that you have maintained in prison, as well as the broad movement of solidarity, that your case and your cause have motivated in the U.S. and the world reveal their mistake.

Knowing of your existence and history, no woman or man if they are honest and conscious can remain silent before such a great injustice. Nor can they remain still in front of a struggle, which like all that is born and grows from below, is necessary, possible, and true.

The Lakota, a people who have the honor and fortune to have you among their blood, have an ethic that recognizes and respects the place of all people and things, respects the relations that mother earth has with herself and mother living things that live and die within her and outside of her. An ethic that recognizes generosity as a measure of human worth, the walk of our ancestors and our dead along the paths of today and tomorrow, women and men as part of the universe that have the power of free will to choose paths and seasons, the search for harmony and the struggle against that which breaks and disorders it. All of this, and more that escapes because we are so far away, has a lot to teach the “western” culture which steers, in North America and in the rest of the world, against humanity and against nature.

Probably the determined resistance of Leonard Peltier is incomprehensible to the Powerful in North America, and the world. To never give up, to resist, the powerful call this “ foolishness”. But the foolish are in every corner of the world, and in all of them, resistance flourishes in the fertile ground of the most ancient history.

In sum, what the powerful fail to understand is not only Peltier’s resistance, but also the entire worlds, and so they intend to mold the planet into the coffin the system represents, with wars, jails and police officers.

Probably, the powerful in North America think that in jailing and torturing Leonard Peltier, they are jailing and torturing one man.

And so they don’t understand how a prisoner can continue to be free, while in prison.

And they don’t understand how, being imprisoned, he speaks with so many, and so many listen.

And they don’t understand how, in trying to kill him, he has more life.

And they don’t understand how one man, alone, is able to resist so much, to represent so much, to be so large.

“Why?” the powerful ask themselves and the answer never reaches their ears:

Because Leonard Peltier is a people, the Lakota, and it is impossible to keep a people imprisoned.

Because Leonard Peltier speaks through the Lakota men and women who are in themselves and in their nature the best of mother earth.

Because the strength that this man and this people have does not come from modern weapons, rather it comes from their history, their roots, their dead.

Because the Lakota know that no one is more alive than the dead.

Because the Lakota, and many other North American Indian people, know that resisting without surrender not only defends their lives and their liberty, but also their history and the nature that gives them origin, home, and destiny.

Because the great ones always seem so small to those who can not see the history that each one keeps inside.

Because the racism that now governs can only imagine the other and the different in jail…or in the trashcan, where two Lakota natives were found last month, murdered, in the community of Pine Ridge. This is justice in North America: those who fight for their people are in jail, those who despise and murder walk unpunished.

What is Leonard Peltier accused of?

Not of a crime he didn’t commit. No. He is accused of being other, of being different, of being proud to be other and different.

But for the Powerful, Leonard Peltier’s most serious “crime” is that he seeks to rescue in the past, in his culture, in his roots, the history of his people, the Lakota. And for the powerful, this is a crime, because knowing oneself with history impedes one from being tossed around by this absurd machine that is the system.

If Leonard Peltier is guilty, than we are all guilty because we seek out history, and on its shoulders we fight to have a place in the world, a place of dignity and respect, a place for ourselves exactly as we are, which is also, very much as we were.

If the Indian people of the North and Indian people of México, as well as the indigenous people of the entire continent, know that we have our own place (being who we are, not pretending to be another skin color, another tongue, another culture), what is left is that other colors that populate the entire world know it. And what is left is for the powerful to know it. So that they know it, and learn the lesson so well that they won’t forget, many more paths and bridges are needed that are walked from below.

On these paths and bridges, you, Leonard Peltier, have a special place, the best, next to us who are like you.

Salud, Leonard Peltier, receive a hug from one who admires and respects you, and who hopes that one day you will call him "brother".

Vale, and health to you and I hope that injustice disappears tomorrow, with yesterday as a weapon and today as a road.

> From the mountains of the Mexican Southeast,

Subcomandante Insurgente Marcos
México, October 1999

_____ Global Exchange http://www.globalexchange.org unsubscribe in the body of the message.

Imagine a credit card with a 0% Intro APR and Instant Approval... It seems impossible, but it's not. Visit GetSmart.com's Credit Card Finder and click on instant approval cards right now at http://clickhere.egroups.com/click/1272

Cuba SI: http://www.egroups.com/group/cubasi/Imperialism NO! Venceramos!
Information and discussion about Cuba.
Discussion of the path of Ernesto Che Guevara.

-- eGroup Home: http://www.egroups.com/group/cubasi/?m=1
-- Free email groups at eGroups.com

↑ Index

303. David Baptiste Chirot
[Y4M] Leonard Peltier FREEDOM MONTH Calendar - SUPPORT LEONARD! (fwd)
Mon 15 Nov 1999

LEONARD PELTIER FREEDOM MONTH

The organizers of the month-long protest are in need of more blankets and food.

Below is part of the schedule of activities for the rest of November:
****

Saturday, November 13 Unity Day Free all political prisoners, stop racism, stop police brutality, respect the earth, dignity and respect for all life---Come listen to speakers from different organizations and movements who are coming together to help gain freedom for Leonard Peltier
****

Sunday, November 14 Reading from Leonard Peltier's new book, My Life Is My Sun Dance—Suzanne Harjo, Harvey Arden, and more TBA

Monday, November 15
Indigenous Voices
Arvol Looking Horse, Bear Lincoln, Billy Tayac, Suzanne Harjo and many more

(TBA) will come to talk about the history and current issues facing Native Peoples

Wednesday, November 17
Victims of FBI abuses
Come here testimony from people from all walks of life who will retell their harrowing experiences with FBI abuses and misconduct--Speakers TBA

Thursday, November 18
Still No Justice
Thousands of petitions and letters of support to be delivered to the Clinton Administration

Sunday, November 21
People of Faith for Justice
Churches show support for Leonard Peltier

Tuesday, November 23
Women for Justice
The Indigenous Women's Network, Rigoberta Menchu, the Colorado Sisters, Jennifer Harbury, Jean Day, Pemina Yellow Bird, and more (TBA) come to speak and show support for Leonard Peltier

Wednesday, November 24
Gathering of the Drums
Call to all Indigenous drum groups

****

Thursday, November 25 CLOSING--Leonard Peltier Freedom Month--Vigil and closing prayer ceremony 5pm-8pm--come thank the fasters and show solidarity during the "Thanksgiving" holiday. (Meanwhile--Plymouth Rock--Day of Mourning sponsored by United American Indians of New England.)
****

NOTE: The dates listed inside of the asterisks are important days to mobilize crowds. If you are able to come to DC during any part of November, please include one or more of these days in your schedule if possible, and bring your friends. Every day of November will include a morning prayer ceremony lead by David Chief, drumming, singing, and various other cultural activities. Every evening a candlelight vigil will be held unless other activities are being conducted at night. All activities listed will be conducted at the Ellipse Park (behind the White House), the Lafayette Park (In front of the White House), or at an indoor location close by.

We will release the times, speakers, exact locations and performers as plans develop contact the LPDC for any questions or for more information. Alcohol and drugs will be prohibited.

Leonard Peltier Defense Committee
PO Box 583
Lawrence, KS 66044
[redacted]
http://members.xoom.com/freepeltier/index.html

FREE LEONARD PELTIER !

Looking for the hottest sports memorabilia or sporting goods=20 specials?
eBay has thousands of trading cards, sports autographs=20 and collectibles.You never know what you might find at eBay!=20
http://clickhere.egroups.com/click/1143

Stop the execution! New trial for Mumia!
Youth & Students for Mumia
www.peoplescampaign.org * [redacted]

eGroup Home: http://www.egroups.com/group/youth-4-mumia/
http://www.egroups.com - Simplifying group communications

↑ Index

304. Aaron Fewell
Re: class, gender etc.
Mon 15 Nov 1999

In a message dated 11/15/99 2:26:20 PM Eastern Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

<< Dear Masha,

Go to Kentucky, look around, start there, see poor, dirt floors, rags and rust. "all be said"? I don't think so. There are tens of millions of poor in this country.
>>

Let's specify here. Go to far Eastern Kentucky, Appalachia to be exact. The entire state is not comprised of the above picture.

Aaron Keith

↑ Index

305. David Zauhar
Re: The New Yorker magazine dated 8/22/99
Mon 15 Nov 1999

On Mon, 15 Nov 1999, Susan Wheeler wrote:

> Of No Country I Know - David Ferry
> Vita Nova - Louise Gluck
> The Constructor - John Koethe
> Poems - J.H. Prynne
> The Pilot Star Elegies - Sherod Santos
>
> I can only urge you to vote, so that the range for next year's contest might be even greater --
>
> Apparently you can also vote by calling [redacted] or going to www.newyorker.com -- although I've tried neither.

You can in fact vote from the website, though unfortunately there is no slot for "none of the above." Thank gods those weren't the only five books published this year.

Dave Zauhar

↑ Index

306. Safdie Joseph
Re: Watten DuPlessis Writers House webcast
Mon 15 Nov 1999

Not sure if I'm one of the lucky 35 but I'd like to peek in, Al . . .

Joe Safdie

From: Al Filreis [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Friday, November 12, 1999 8:33 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Watten DuPlessis Writers House webcast

PhillyTalks at the Kelly Writers House

with Barrett Watten & Rachel Blau DuPlessis

Monday November 15

beginning at 6 PM eastern time

will be webcast live.

The first 35 people who respond to this invitation will be able to "connect" to the webcast signal--and then see and hear the program (and to pose questions or comments during the discussion).

-

relevant links (for further information):

PhillyTalks, founded & curated at the Writers House by Louis Cabri:
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/phillytalks/

the Kelly Writers House:
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/index.html

fall 1999 schedule of live webcasts, including recordings
of a conversation with Marjore Perloff & Bob Perelman on Stein, a reading by Shawn Walker, and a symposium on Williams's "To Elsie":
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/webcasts/

the Writers House calendar:
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/calendar/

↑ Index

307. David Baptiste Chirot
Re: class, gender etc.
Mon 15 Nov 1999

---

two issues to address--

first, any one can be a poet

by that i mean--poetry knows no borders, among whom poetry comes to be an action

it is by its nature unexpected

i will give an illustration in the form of a story

(and it's all true, as they say) a few years ago a friend sent me an article from the New Yorker magazine-- it was about the author's search for the place that Walt Whitman lived when he wrote the first edition of Leaves of Grass (and a wise person here notes how important place is) after much laborious research, the writer found the place

he knocked on the door in excitement--
a large Rastafarian Jamaican answered the door--
the author said, do you know a great poet lived here?
the Rastafarian answered--how do you know one doesn't live here now?

to me, that states the fact of poetry, that exists, behind any door any fellow human, any eyes you look into--these are part or not part of our struggle to be free

yet any eyes may hold in them poetry the action and the perception and the listening of poetry poetry may at times be the province of an elect--yet this is not true-- poetry is the province of the people poetry is the voice not in vain

my second point, with permission Judge-- as they say-- there are areas in america as bad as any place go visit a reservation for example i spent a weekend with a dear friend here in Milwaukee last week--where he lives is like a Hell-- Leroi Jones wrote a great book about it--The System of Dante's Hellyou can get on a bus and see it-- really--it costs a dollar thirty five and you can see Hell-i've lived in 17 countries--and i never saw a worse place than america if you are Black, Latino, Indian, you know-- yet if we work, in our poems, may we bring hope for our peoples please believe me--poetry is not an esoteriscism, it is a form of action,a demand-- a demand to be free for all

I hope you make an action this month for Leonard Peltier
Send a message at least to the addresses I sent
I am organizing an exhibit for Mr. Peltier here--please contribute Hence poetry is not in vain respectfully
dave baptiste chirot
On Mon, 15 Nov 1999, Philip Nikolayev wrote:

> Fair enough, Michael. But then again, it's a question of degree. Though some of us have certainly managed "experience hunger" in the US, some of us have also encountered forms of poverty elsewhere that are quite simply never seen in this country, and are impossible for most Americans even to imagine.

Cheers,
Philip Nikolayev

At 11:52 PM 11/12/99 -0500, Michael Neff wrote:
Dear Masha,

Go to Kentucky, look around, start there, see poor, dirt floors, rags and rust. "all be said"? I don't think so. There are tens of millions of poor in this country.

Commence to ciphering.

MN

Maria L. Zavialov wrote:

Discussing class it's good to remember WHERE this discussion is taking place. Place, I mean a geographic spot or location, is another aspect (like gender) that should be introduced into the discussion. I mean location in terms of its economic situation. Thus the inhabitants of the US can all be said to belong to the upper class if viewed from a poor Asian country. One should try hard to stay hungry in the US, isn't one? The same goes for different locations within one and the same country. Like in Russia a native of Moscow coming to St. Petersburg is automatically moving one step up on the social ladder. And when he comes to a small provincial town he is already two steps up. And in a village... oh, in a village he (yes, he) is a guru.
Masha Z.

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

308. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
Mon 15 Nov 1999

The majority of Americans will name themselves as "middle class" (despite external evidence to the contrary) which underscores the extent to which class is unnameable and invisible in this country. The homeless, the poor and elderly, the rural poor, the working poor are all examples of invisible classes. It's part of what makes it possible for the "what are you talking about class for -- you're an American so shut up" argument to arise repeatedly. Yes, we are definitely a "super power" "first world" nation, but inside our borders many live in "third world" conditions. See, for example, the infant mortality rate in inner cities. ^^^ inoperative" assumptions about the category of "black poetry" which expect that "black writing" is (to quote again from Mullen) "constituted around the central idea of textualized orality, or 'the speakerly text'." (See also, Aldon Nielsen's excellent work _Black Chant_.) Hunt and Alexander's work also complicates and interrogates the notion of "black identity;" this doesn't mean that they don't write "about" class and race, or that they don't "mention the opposition." See Hunt, Local History: "In this was casualties multiply:one in four in prson, one in four unemployed, one in four with a habit, every square inch to be fought for. In the panic that is no solution, the police and the young guarantee one another employment; the ranks of each army swell" (38). This passage seems pretty clearly to "name" the "war at home" against African-American men, among other things.

^^^

into the triteness that often occurs in oppositional poetics. I can think of a few, but very few. Joy Harjo's work, Martin Espada's _City of Coughing and Dead Radiators_ most examples do not hold to multiple readings in the way that Neidecker's work or Alexanders does. Rachel Loden's new book is one of the only recent books I've read that directly attacks the US socio-political situation and remains intact for multiple readings.

Jill, if you check back through my posts, I did not state that lack of access to opportunities does not occur, I made pains to maintain my writing in "I" based statements, when mass assumptions were made & I knew they did not fit me, I went outside of these confines to include some other individual writers. Never was there a "we" intended. I did not address women & class, which is not an oversight, I do not have personal experience and assume others here would address the subject.

Don Wellman (lilliput?) & Dodie bring up something that I wonder about, having done it a lot myself, especially in grad school. The act of overcompensation. Which seeing these posts together makes me wonder if this truth of, as Dodie states, "working class guys [having] a harder time assimilating into the middle class poetry world" is a section of this overcompensation. And I too have found it "intolerable that some people wish to rub my naivity in my face." The question from me is, when does one cross this line of overcompensation on the page? Inaccurate hearing of slang, use of the latinate, stating of the opposition?

And Joe Amato, I have always have admired your ability to get to the core of the matter, to get something learnable from it. I'll make an attempt to answer your post when there is more time, as, yes, it is a difficult subject to discuss, & my time to write impinged by physical labor today.

*As for David Larsen "Having no ambition myself to rise so high into 'the upper eschelons' of anything as to be unable to resist crapping on people a la Mr. Baratier," who "volunteers to serve as this list's spokesperson for lettuce-sorters --and, if need be, to pass your civil responses back to them." There seems to be an assumption that I made the lettuce sorting comment which is not the case. And civil, such as this one? I hope your aggression towards the target you believe me to be has made you feel better.*

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

310. Kathy Lou Schultz
Hunt quote correction
Mon 15 Nov 1999

Should read: "In this war casualties multiply: one in four in prison, one in four unemployed, one in four with a habit, every square inch to be fought for. In the panic that is no solution, the police and the young guarantee one another employment; the ranks of each army swell" (38).

^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

↑ Index

311. pete spence
Re: Weekend in New Orleans (part 5)
Mon 15 Nov 1999

>
> BERNADETTE
>
>at one point bernadette was talking about having her own cow for milk etc >when i walked into the dining room at camille's and i remember everyone >laughing a good bit about it >
>
well we do and its a lot better on your health than the pasturised/homogenized garbage thats foisted on our lot!!!pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

312. derek beaulieu
call for contributions
Mon 15 Nov 1999

mo' gumbo poetry/art broadside seeks contributions mo' gumbo is a weekly zine loosely affiliated with Mocambo Coffee Mocambopo poetry readings and open mike session which happens every friday in Victoria B.C. we are into our tenth week wanted: poetry especially concrete concrete concrete concrete concrete

&& especially "pataphysical &&& especially post-language &&&& especially sound poetry texts sound poetry texts
sound poetry texts
sound poetry texts
sound poetry texts
&&&&&& especially found poetry texts
&&&&&&& especially poetry theory texts &&&&&& especially experimental poetry texts &&&& especially visual poetry
&&&&& art of any kind
&&&
&&
&
&
send it to:
2367 Central Ave.
Victoria B.C.
V8S 2S3
(imp press)
ross priddle

↑ Index

313. Dan Machlin

Mayer/Machlin Reading

Tue 16 Nov 1999

BERNADETTE MAYER

DAN MACHLIN

read

Thursday, November 18th, 7:30 p.m.

@

The Dactyl Foundation for the Arts and Humanities
64 Grand Street
New York City
[redacted]
www.dactyl.org

↑ Index

314. Alan Sondheim

Once More, with the Usual Feeling

Tue 16 Nov 1999

-

Once More, with the Usual Feeling

He's going to do it again, there will be some dismemberment, said Jenni- fer, said Julu, he's got all these attributions of talk, no one's really saying anything, he's trite, talking to himself, repetitious, it just goes on and on. Someone throws a bowling ball, said Alan, and down goes Julu.

Someone said something about being really tired and hadn't they heard that before, anyway, those who were left? People left the reading "in droves," although Nikuko (kill her!) had no idea how many that was. We're all tired said Doctor Leopold Konninger; Nikuko, the "famous Russian ballet dancer" (as if we didn't know!), was unable to wind down. Alan thought the narra- tive demanded this continuous state of being-in-motion on one hand, and the Doctor Leopold, on the other, rather static and uncomfortable in his wooden chair on the wooden floor.

For all I know, said Jennifer, a vowel change is imminent. It's a way of avoiding content, making a whole lot of noise. At this point the noise has become a signifier or trademark of Alan as well. It's as if everything conspires to guarantee the singularity of one text, written over and over again, each version equally correct, coherent, well-written, more or less, but without any sort of advance. Doctor Leopold Konninger, who came to me in a dream, said, Alan, concurs; I'm obsessed by these texts, I can't stop the texts, but it's almost as if they stop me.

A quotation from an obscure source, always askew to the point, "They will come for me, / their faces screened, / mouth-banners high, silk carvings / in or around the square shrine. / They will come for me, / banners of grey faces, / dusk-cloths, embrochures of stone / in or around the square shrine. / Follow the earth's fold, / wary of legs caught in crevices, / in the air of autumn, / in the autumn air."

He's going to do it again, these stupid stupid voices, these broken limbs, blind flutterings about the womb. He's going to keep on going, they're massive, they're useless, they're glued together by a constant intensity, the repetition of a monologue insistent on building the world from word. His interest in programming is 'peculiar,' the minor satisfaction of out- put to some extent not his own - but he short-circuits this by insisting on writing his own. Everywhere, his own. His tentacles, Jennifer, Julu, Nikuko, Alan, his own. His blunt texts, his own. Doctor Leopold Konninger resists any temptation towards either the analytic or the therapeutic, and Doctor Leopold Konninger has killed.

↑ Index

315. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: earliest american poem

Tue 16 Nov 1999

Daniel Zimmerman wrote:
>
> How about the Lenni-Lenape _Walum Olum_?
>
>
> --Dan Zimmerman

thanks for imput
as to MYSTERY

what about the above--
I'm lost!

Todd Baron

↑ Index

316. Lowther, John

FW: [silence] Sonic Youth do Cage, Tenney, Wolff, et al

Tue 16 Nov 1999

{ p o e t i x etc}

(i pinched this off the silence list thinking some of you wd be interested)

> Sonic Youth's new recording, "Goodbye 20th Century" comes out today. Unlike their more rock-oriented discs, this one contains pieces by > John Cage (Four^6 and Six), Christian Wolff (Edges and Burdocks), Pauline Oliveros (Six for New Time for Sonic Youth), Takehisa Kosugi, James Tenney, Yoko Ono, Cornelius Cardew, Nicolas Slonimsky, George Maciunas, and Steve Reich. Guest performers include Wolff, Kosugi, Jim O'Rourke, William Winant, Christian Marclay, and others.

↑ Index

317. levitsk

Re: query,reminder

Tue 16 Nov 1999

That Pamela Lu is reading tonight.
172 Allen, Bluestocking Bookstore,
8:00//corner with Stanton St.

And wondering if someone has Brenda Shaughnessy's email, if she has one.

thanks
From: Joe Amato <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Monday, November 15, 1999 11:32 AM Subject: new anthology...

> just rec'd news in the mail of what looks to be yet another interesting, and no doubt eyebrow raising, anthology, this time on oxford up no less (as most of you know, the same press that dropped of late their contemporary poetry series, despite public handwringing in the british parliament)... forthcoming december 1999, just in time for mla, y2k, etc.:
>
> _anthology of modern american poetry_
> ed. cary nelson
> 1200 pp., paper, $45
>
> here's the list of the poets included (which is not meant to imply that all poets receive equal treatment, page-wise):
>
> -------
>
> walt whitman
> emily dickinson
> edwin markham
> sadakichi hartmann
> edgar lee masters
> edwin arlington robinson
> james weldon johnson
> paul lawrence dunbar
> lola ridge

> amy lowell
> gertrude stein
> robert frost
> alice dunbar-nelson
> carl sandburg
> vachel lindsay
> wallace stevens
> angelina weld grimke
> georgia douglas johnson
> mina loy
> anne spencer
> william carlos williams
> ezra pound
> h.d.
> robinson jeffers
> marianne moore
> t. s. eliot
> john crowe ransom
> claude mckay
> edna st. vincent millay
> archibald macleish
> dorothy parker
> genevieve taggard
> e. e. cummings
> jean toomer
> charles reznikoff
> herman spector
> v. j. jerome
> john wheelwright
> joseph freeman
> lucia trent
> louise bogan
> harry crosby
> hart crane
> allen tate
> melvin b. tolson
> yvor winters
> sterling a. brown
> laura (riding) jackson
> angel island: poems by chinese immigrants, 1910-1940
> kenneth fearing
> langston hughes
> arna bontemps
> gwendolyn bennett
> countee cullen
> lorine neidecker
> kay boyle
> carl rakosi

> aqua laluah
> louis zukofsky
> john beecher
> kenneth rexroth
> robert penn warren
> stanley kunitz
> joseph kalar
> richard wright
> theodore roethke
> george oppen
> edwin rolfe
> charles olson
> sol funaroff
> elizabeth bishop
> william everson
> tillie lerner olsen
> muriel rukeyser
> robert hayden
> charles henri ford
> weldon kees
> randall jarrell
> japanese american concentration camp haiku, 1942-1944
> john berryman
> william stafford
> dudley randall
> joy davidman
> margaret walker
> ruth stone
> thomas mcgrath
> robert lowell
> gwendolyn brooks
> william bronk
> robert duncan
> richard wilbur
> mona van duyn
> james dickey
> denise levertov
> anthony hecht
> bob kaufman
> maxine kumin
> paul blackburn
> frank o'hara
> james merrill
> allen ginsberg
> robert creeley
> robert bly
> a. r. ammons
> james wright

> john ashbery
> galway kinnell
> w. s. merwin
> anne sexton
> philip levine
> adrienne rich
> gary snyder
> gregory corso
> etheridge knight
> sylvia plath
> henry dumas
> amiri baraka
> n. scott momaday
> mark strand
> audre lorde
> charles wright
> mary oliver
> jayne cortez
> lucille clifton
> susan howe
> michael s. harper
> ishmael reed
> lawson fusao inada
> robert pinsky
> welton smith
> judy grahn
> robert hass
> sharon olds
> louise gluck
> michael palmer
> paul violi
> carolyn m. rodgers
> ron silliman
> adrian c. louis
> yusef komunyakaa
> ai
> wendy rose
> c. d. wright
> jessica hagedorn
> ray a. young bear
> carolyn forche
> garrett kaoru hongo
> rita dove
> jimmy santiago baca
> anita endrezze
> ana castillo
> mark doty
> harryette mullen

> louise erdrich
> sandra cisneros
> thylias moss
> patricia smith
> marilyn chin
> sesshu foster
> martin espada
> sherman alexie
>
> -------
>
> quite some list, no?... i'm eager to understand the logic behind this compilation (which seems self-evident in some cases, and far from same in others), but will of course have to get my hands on a copy first... the text is supported by a "rapidly evolving website, which now features pages for more than 70 of the anthologized poets":
>
> > http://www.english.uiuc.edu/maps
>
> and editor nelson may be contacted if you wish to contribute to same:
>
> > prof. cary nelson
> > [redacted] (fax)
> > english dept.
> > university of illinois
> > 608 s. wright st.
> > urbana, illinois 61801
> > usa
>
> ///
>
> joe

↑ Index

318. Robert Freedman
Texts: "Writing from the New Coast"
Tue 16 Nov 1999

Dear List,

Maybe I'm the last to have heard about Buffalo's Poetry Collections/Publications on the web, but I was amazed to find shrink-wrapped copies for sale of o-blek's "Writing from the New Coast." It's listed as out-of-print elsewhere (and it probably is), so if anyone's looking for a reasonably-priced copy of this anthology, go to:

http://ublib.buffalo.edu/libraries/units/pl/buffpubs/index.html

There was no mention of scarcity of copies, so I'm assuming more are available.

And ... there are other interesting, inexpensive items for sale.

Cheers,

Bob Freedman

↑ Index

319. Robert Corbett
Re: new anthology...
Tue 16 Nov 1999

---

given the editor, if you are interested in his editorial principles, you might look at _repression and recovery_ about the varieties (canonical and not so) of 20s through 45 american verse.

-- Robert Corbett "I worried about the gap between [redacted] expression and intent, afraid the world Department of English might see a fluorescent advertisement University of Washington where I meant to show a face." -Rosemary Waldrop

On Sun, 14 Nov 1999, Joe Amato wrote:

> just rec'd news in the mail of what looks to be yet another interesting, and no doubt eyebrow raising, anthology, this time on oxford up no less (as most of you know, the same press that dropped of late their contemporary poetry series, despite public handwringing in the british parliament)... forthcoming december 1999, just in time for mla, y2k, etc.:
>
> _anthology of modern american poetry_
> ed. cary nelson
> 1200 pp., paper, $45
>
> here's the list of the poets included (which is not meant to imply that all poets receive equal treatment, page-wise):
>
> -------
>
> walt whitman
> emily dickinson
> edwin markham
> sadakichi hartmann
> edgar lee masters
> edwin arlington robinson
> james weldon johnson
> paul lawrence dunbar
> lola ridge
> amy lowell

> gertrude stein
> robert frost
> alice dunbar-nelson
> carl sandburg
> vachel lindsay
> wallace stevens
> angelina weld grimke
> georgia douglas johnson
> mina loy
> anne spencer
> william carlos williams
> ezra pound
> h.d.
> robinson jeffers
> marianne moore
> t. s. eliot
> john crowe ransom
> claude mckay
> edna st. vincent millay
> archibald macleish
> dorothy parker
> genevieve taggard
> e. e. cummings
> jean toomer
> charles reznikoff
> herman spector
> v. j. jerome
> john wheelwright
> joseph freeman
> lucia trent
> louise bogan
> harry crosby
> hart crane
> allen tate
> melvin b. tolson
> yvor winters
> sterling a. brown
> laura (riding) jackson
> angel island: poems by chinese immigrants, 1910-1940
> kenneth fearing
> langston hughes
> arna bontemps
> gwendolyn bennett
> countee cullen
> lorine neidecker
> kay boyle
> carl rakosi
> aqua laluah

> louis zukofsky
> john beecher
> kenneth rexroth
> robert penn warren
> stanley kunitz
> joseph kalar
> richard wright
> theodore roethke
> george oppen
> edwin rolfe
> charles olson
> sol funaroff
> elizabeth bishop
> william everson
> tillie lerner olsen
> muriel rukeyser
> robert hayden
> charles henri ford
> weldon kees
> randall jarrell
> japanese american concentration camp haiku, 1942-1944
> john berryman
> william stafford
> dudley randall
> joy davidman
> margaret walker
> ruth stone
> thomas mcgrath
> robert lowell
> gwendolyn brooks
> william bronk
> robert duncan
> richard wilbur
> mona van duyn
> james dickey
> denise levertov
> anthony hecht
> bob kaufman
> maxine kumin
> paul blackburn
> frank o'hara
> james merrill
> allen ginsberg
> robert creeley
> robert bly
> a. r. ammons
> james wright
> john ashbery

> galway kinnell
> w. s. merwin
> anne sexton
> philip levine
> adrienne rich
> gary snyder
> gregory corso
> etheridge knight
> sylvia plath
> henry dumas
> amiri baraka
> n. scott momaday
> mark strand
> audre lorde
> charles wright
> mary oliver
> jayne cortez
> lucille clifton
> susan howe
> michael s. harper
> ishmael reed
> lawson fusao inada
> robert pinsky
> welton smith
> judy grahn
> robert hass
> sharon olds
> louise gluck
> michael palmer
> paul violi
> carolyn m. rodgers
> ron silliman
> adrian c. louis
> yusef komunyakaa
> ai
> wendy rose
> c. d. wright
> jessica hagedorn
> ray a. young bear
> carolyn forche
> garrett kaoru hongo
> rita dove
> jimmy santiago baca
> anita endrezze
> ana castillo
> mark doty
> harryette mullen
> louise erdrich

> sandra cisneros
> thylias moss
> patricia smith
> marilyn chin
> sesshu foster
> martin espada
> sherman alexie
>
> -------
>
> quite some list, no?... i'm eager to understand the logic behind this compilation (which seems self-evident in some cases, and far from same in others), but will of course have to get my hands on a copy first... the text is supported by a "rapidly evolving website, which now features pages for more than 70 of the anthologized poets":
>
> http://www.english.uiuc.edu/maps
>
> and editor nelson may be contacted if you wish to contribute to same:
>
> prof. cary nelson
> [redacted] (fax)
> english dept.
> university of illinois
> 608 s. wright st.
> urbana, illinois 61801
> usa
>
> ///
>
> joe

↑ Index

320. Daniel Bouchard

Watten DuPlessis Writers House

Tue 16 Nov 1999

Date: Fri, 12 Nov 1999 11:33:28 -0500
From: Al Filreis <[redacted]>
Subject: Watten DuPlessis Writers House webcast

PhillyTalks at the Kelly Writers House
with Barrett Watten & Rachel Blau DuPlessis
Monday November 15
beginning at 6 PM eastern time
will be webcast live.

WOULD someone who attended this event be willing to give a brief report to those of us who did not?

This is a Reading-Reports-on-Demand Request .

<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

321. Marla Jernigan
Introduction
Tue 16 Nov 1999

On other lists that I have read or participated in new members have, somewhat formally, introduced themselves to the community. I've not seen any messages like those appear on this list, though I might have missed them, but anyway, let me introduce myself...

My name is Marla Jernigan. I am a poet. I live in Atlanta, or Chamblee, which is much the same thing. I don't care too much for poetics as philosophical conquest and prefer to see both the things I do and the things I talk about as singular, worth reading for what they are more than what they remind one of.

I would like to know what anyone out there thinks of symbolism, not the French movement but the actual practice and life in symbols, backchannel please.

Thank You,

Marla

=====

Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

322. Joe Brennan
Re: class, gender etc.
Tue 16 Nov 1999

In a message dated 11/16/1999 3:39:11 PM Eastern Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

<<
Let's specify here. Go to far Eastern Kentucky, Appalachia to be exact. The entire state is not comprised of the above picture.
>>

even more specifically, take a drive along Stinking Creek Road...

jb....

↑ Index

323. Taylor Brady
Re: [silence] Sonic Youth do Cage, Tenney, Wolff, et al
Tue 16 Nov 1999

Picked this up the other day - a double CD set for single CD price. Some of the performances are fairly "faithful," some range closer to "versions," with the longer pieces (esp. the Cardew and Cage, if I remember correctly) being, to my ears, the more interesting. Includes a recording of Coco Hayley Gordon Moore (Sonic Youth's own sonic youth) doing Yoko Ono's "Voice Piece for Soprano" in a mercifully short 12 seconds.

From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Lowther, John
Sent: Tuesday, November 16, 1999 7:38 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: FW: [silence] Sonic Youth do Cage, Tenney, Wolff, et al

{ p o e t i x etc}

(i pinched this off the silence list thinking some of you wd be interested)

_____

> Sonic Youth's new recording, "Goodbye 20th Century" comes out today. Unlike their more rock-oriented discs, this one contains pieces by John Cage (Four^6 and Six), Christian Wolff (Edges and Burdocks), Pauline Oliveros (Six for New Time for Sonic Youth), Takehisa Kosugi, James Tenney, Yoko Ono, Cornelius Cardew, Nicolas Slonimsky, George Maciunas, and Steve Reich. Guest performers include Wolff, Kosugi,

> Jim O'Rourke, William Winant, Christian Marclay, and others.

↑ Index

324. Damion Searls
Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
Tue 16 Nov 1999

Another anecdote: a friend of mine teaching at University of Washington told me that one student, whose mother was a very successful (= rich) pediatrician and whose father was a very successful (= rich) Microsoft employee, considers her family "working class" because both her parents work.

So I don't think of the issue as one of "unnameability and invisibility" (see below), rather (also) as an issue of history and knowledge (i.e. knowing what "working class" ACTUALLY MEANS).

--Damion Searls

> The majority of Americans will name themselves as "middle class" (despite external evidence to the contrary) which underscores the extent to which class is unnameable and invisible in this country.
>
> RD Levitsky writing from the Villa:
>
> An anecdote: I once taught welfare recipients, through one of those abominable BEGIN (END) programs. When discussing class, my students, many of them told me they considered themselves middle class--as marked by their housing and their possessions.

↑ Index

325. Pete
Re-introduction
Tue 16 Nov 1999

It's me, Pete. I've been away.

My new address is in Portland, Oregon.

I know there are some who wonder what ever became of Happy Genius. Well, write me back-channel and I'll tell you.

For those half a thousand who joined since I left... Yes, I write. The primary question, however, is "who do you read?" isn't it? Modernists, Objectivists, Postmodernists mostly. I guess I'm really 40 years delayed in my taste or something. I haven't seen anything by any National Book Award winner that I have liked.

Pete Landers
[redacted]

↑ Index

326. David Kellogg
[Fwd: CFP: Barbara Guest (6/1; journal)]
Tue 16 Nov 1999

I thought this would be of interest to the list.

Cheers,
David

Subject: CFP: Barbara Guest (6/1; journal)
Date: Mon, 15 Nov 1999 10:35:05 -0600
From: Catherine Kasper <[redacted]>
To: "'[redacted].'"
<[redacted]>

CFP: Barbara Guest (6/1/2000)

Call for Critical Essays

Special issue of Women's Studies: An Interdisciplinary Journal

Critical essays on Barbara Guest are sought for a special issue of Women's Studies: An Interdisciplinary Journal. This volume will focus on the importance of Barbara Guest's contribution to literary and interdisciplinary arts. Essays which situate Guest in the literary and historical context in which she writes are preferred over close readings. Editor is also interested in essays which discuss Guest's collaborative work with visual artists, relationship to the New York School, and those which examine her influence on recent poetry.

Send essays via mail by 1 June 2000 to

Catherine Kasper, Division of English, Classics, Philosophy and Communication, University of Texas at San Antonio,

6900 North Loop 1604
West, San Antonio, Texas 78249-0643.

Inquiries: [redacted] ([redacted]).

==========
From the Literary Calls for Papers
Mailing List
[redacted]
Full Information at http://www.english.upenn.edu/CFP/or write Erika Lin:
[redacted]

==========

↑ Index

327. Scharf, Michael (Cahners -NYC)

Publishers Weekly

Tue 16 Nov 1999

Poetry Forecasts used to run the last Monday of every month. Starting December 6th, it will run on the first Monday. So if, by chance, one were to pick up the Nov 29th issue, one would find no poetry reviews therein.

And re: the New Yorker thing (vote Prynne), here's the PW "Best Books"

Ted Joans's Teducation (Coffee House)
Pamela Lu's Pamela: A Novel (Atelos)
Ange Mlinko's Matinees (Zoland)
Les Murray's Fredy Neptune (FSG)
Adrienne Rich's Midnight Salvage (Norton)
Aaron Shurin's A Paradise of Forms (Talisman)

Cheers -Mike

↑ Index

328. Jerrold Shiroma

small press announcements deadline

Tue 16 Nov 1999

The deadline for this weeks small press publications listing is this Friday. Any publisher who wishes to have their recent publications listed, please send all relevant information to [redacted]

↑ Index

329. Alan Sondheim

report

Tue 16 Nov 1999

---

apparent report from Doctor Leopold Konninger

i n
t
e r
n
a l
l
y
,

t
h e
r
e

w
a s

l
i t
t
l
e

t
i m e

t o

l
o
s

e

,

s

a

i

d

D

o

c

t

o

r

L

e

o

p

o

l

d

K

o

n

n

i

n

g

e

r

;

i

t

w

a

s

a

n

e

m

e

r
g
e n
c
y

s
i t u
a t
i
o
n
,

s p a c
e
s

b
r
o k
e n

a p a r
t
,

t
h e

s
e
m

b
l
a n
c
e

o f

r
e
a
m
s

o f

m
a t
e
r
i
a l
s
,

s q u
a r
e

k
i l
o
m e t
e

r
s

o f

l
i t
e
r
a r
y

d
e
b
r
i s

-

n
o
t
h
i n
g

t
o

b e

d o n
e

a b
o

u
t

i t
-
-
-

o n
e

l
o
o k
s f

o
r
w
a r
d

a t

b e
s t

t
o

t
h e

c o
l
l
a p

s
e

o f

t
h e

s
y
m
b
o
l
i
c
,

t
e t
h e
r
e
d

l
i g
h
t
l
y
,

i f

a t

a
l

l
,
t
o
t
h e
m
a t
r
i x
o f
o
r
d
i n
a r
y
t
e x
t
s
-
l
e t
t
e
r
s
s w

a l
l
o
w e
d

b y

t
h e

m
i n
d

a s

i f

t
h e
y

w e
r
e n
'
t

i n
h e
r
e n
t

l
y
i n
r
e v
o
l
t
-
D
o
c t o
r
L
e
o p
o
l
d
K
o n
n
i n
g
e
r
c o n
t
i n

u
e
d

t
o

N
i k u k
o

-

d
a n
c
i n
g

i n

t
h e

r
e
m
a
i n
i n
g

s p a c
e

-

h e
r

p i r
o u
e t
t
e
s

i n

a

t
e
r
r
i t o
r
y

g
r
o
w
i n
g

l
i t
e
r
a

l
l
y

b
y

l
e
a p
s

a n
d

b
o u n
d
s
-
-
-

↑ Index

330. sylvester pollet
New Writing Series
Tue 16 Nov 1999

Anyone passing through Orono? Even if not, some of the info & links below might be of general interest.

Steve Evans is coordinating this new reading series. His e-mail is Steven_Evans @umit.maine.edu. Sylvester

New Writing Series

Lee Ann Brown

Ben Friedlander

Thursday - 18 November
4PM 402 Neville Hall (Writing Center)
Univ. of Maine, Orono, Maine

> Sponsored by the English Department Contact Steve Evans at [redacted] for more information
>
> Lee Ann Brown, 35 years old and a native of Charlotte, North Carolina, presently lives, writes, and teaches in New York City. Her first book Polyverse (Los Angeles: Sun & Moon, 1999) is a wild compendium of jubilant, erotic, tuneful, melancholy, manic, and altogether indispensable poems that weave into a polyphonic chorus the voices of Brown's "excitement sisters"-- from Emily Dickinson and Gertrude Stein to Liz Phair and the Breeders. A teacher long associated with the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa, Brown is also the publisher of Tender Buttons books, since the late-1980s a high-energy locus of feminist avant-garde writing by figures such as Bernadette Mayer, Harryette Mullen, Rosmarie Waldrop, Anne Waldman, Hannah Wiener, and Jennifer Moxley. Brown has recently completed work on a second collection, The Sleep That Changed Everything. A sample of Brown's work can be accessed on the web at
>
> http://bostonreview.mit.edu/BR23.5/Equi.html
>
> Prior to joining the English Department faculty at the University of Maine this fall, Ben Friedlander was a defining presence in the poetic communities of Berkeley and Buffalo. Co-editor of Jimmy & Lucy's House of K, Dark Ages Clasp the Daisy Root, and most recently of the web-journal Lagniappe (with Graham Foust), Friedlander is the author of Time Rations (Oakland: O Books, 1992) and numerous chapbooks with Meow Press in Buffalo, including Selected Poems (1998). Working at the limits of a compressed lyric idiom, Friedlander is a poet of exuberant negativity, historical vulnerability, and supercharged ideological identifications. In 1997, the University of California published the Collected Prose of Charles Olson, co-edited by Friedlander and the legendary anthologist and editor Donald Allen (http://www.ucpress.edu/books/pages/6739.html). Samples of Friedlander's work are available at
>
> http://bostonreview.mit.edu/BR23.3/poetrysampler.html
>
> Other Poetry Events of Note
>
> Monday, 15 November, Noon Sigma Tau Delta Open Floor Poetry / Short Prose Reading at Wicks Reading Room (Neville 304) Contact Ryan Seely, Jaimi Allen, Kristen Dobler, Amber Thurlow, or Margaret Lukens

Tuesday, November 16, 8:30 Poetry/Prose at the Bear Brew Pub
Contact Terry Crouch for more information

Friday, December 3 Jennifer Moxley and Anselm Berrigan read in the New Writing Series Time and room to be announced

Wednesday, December Reading and Book Party to celebrate the publication of Constance Hunting's Natural Things: Collected Poems 1969-1998 (National Poetry Foundation) Time and room to be announced

And for more information, link to Polyverse at
http://www.sunmoon.com/lit_lives/brown.html
Lagniappe at
http://www.acsu.buffalo.edu/~foust/lagniappe.html
Small Press Distribution at
http://www.spdbooks.org/
The Electronic Poetry Center at
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/Steve Evans's review of Friedlander's Period Piece (Buffalo: Porci con le ali, 1998) on Notes to Poetry
http://www.bway.net/~arras/issue2/newnotes2/notes14.htm

↑ Index

331. pete spence
Re: class, gender etc.
Tue 16 Nov 1999

In a message dated 11/15/99 2:26:20 PM Eastern Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

<< Dear Masha,

Go to Kentucky, look around, start there, see poor, dirt floors, rags and rust. "all be said"? I don't think so. There are tens of millions of poor
in this country.
>>

Let's specify here. Go to far Eastern Kentucky, Appalachia to be exact.
The
entire state is not comprised of the above picture.

Aaron Keith

could be in any state where-ever in this world!!! seems the growing population of "below the poverty liners" is a inverse situ to the growing fancy to be a shareholder in this late part of this century!!!!//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

332. pete spence
Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
Tue 16 Nov 1999

>
>The majority of Americans will name themselves as "middle class" (despite Yes, we are definitely a "super power" "first world" nation, but >inside our borders many live in "third world" conditions. See, for example, >the infant mortality rate in inner cities.
>^^
>Kathy Lou Schultz

> yes and its the case here and that rate would not be anywhere near the mortality rate of our aboriginal people here in australia /pete

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

333. pete spence
Re: class, gender etc.
Tue 16 Nov 1999

> From: David Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>

>
> first, any one can be a poet
>
> about the author's search for the place that Walt Whitman >lived when he wrote the first edition of Leaves of Grass > (and a wise person here notes how important place is)
> after much laborious research, the writer found the place
> he knocked on the door in excitement--
> a large Rastafarian Jamaican answered the door--
> the author said, do you know a great poet lived here?
> the Rastafarian answered--how do you know one doesn't live here >now?

>
>
and thankfully there are a lot who don't need to write it, just live it//pete

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

334. levitsk
Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
Tue 16 Nov 1999

The last thing I'd intended was to deny class, working class, invisible class. Rather to underscore the difficulty that you speak of below. Hence my ironic comment about being leisure class.

Rachel

↑ Index

335. K.Angelo Hehir
Re: phonaesthetic
Tue 16 Nov 1999

hi folks,

sorry for the one stop post but deadlines are crashing all around me and e-time is at a premium.

i just want to thank all the kind sirs that offered me references for my research.

one of the strange things that i've experienced since moving to newfoundland from continental north america are the hit and miss library searches. bernstein,s _close listening_ -yes. adalaide morris - no. a search for _site of sound_ produced this:

Title: A comparison of site-to-site repeatability of two stationary measurement procedures for truck exterior sound levels [microform] / prepared for Transport Canada, Road and Motor Vehicle Safety ; prepared by : Harford, Kennedy, Wakefield Ltd.

so, i never know what i'll get.

as for the web-sites that daniel zimmerman suggested, Margo's Magical Letter Page is incredible and i can't get into the other one. thanks again, kevin

↑ Index

336. David Gitin
Re: Lester Bowie on KPFA
Tue 16 Nov 1999

Stephen, it's Jim Bennett, not John.

↑ Index

337. ixnaypress
announcement - ixnay 3 & mirakove's WALL
Tue 16 Nov 1999

We are pleased to announce the publication of ixnay #3, our new issue chock full of fine work by:

Seth Frechie
Rod Smith
Louis Cabri
Marcella Durand
Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino
Allison Cobb
Mark DuCharme
Dana Lisa Lustig
Spencer Selby
Kristine Grow
Patrick F. Durgin
Tom Devaney
Brendan Lorber
Sue Landers
Jason Nelson
Joel Dailey
Jeffrey Jullich
Ethan Fugate
Matt Hart
Randy Prunty &)ohnLowther
Elizabeth Treadwell
Hank Lazer

as well as

Shawn Walker's review of Greg Fuchs's "Came Like It Went"

& Chris McCreary's short reviews of Andrew Mossin's "The Epochal Body," Cole Swensen's "O (excerpts)", and Gustaf Sobin's "Articles of Light & Elation."

We are also delighted to announce the publication of the latest ixnay press chapbook, WALL by carol mirakove. This lovely chapbook features glossy black & white (& sometimes orange) cover art by the author herself.

ixnay #3 can be had for $5; WALL is $6. Order both for the low low price of $10 & save!!! Feel free to e-mail orders -- we'll ship now & you can pay later by making out a check to either Chris McCreary or Jenn McCreary, not ixnay.

Also, Peter Ganick's chapbook "Immanence 3," published earlier this year by ixnay press, is now available via Small Press Distribution or straight from ixnay for $6. (Note: "Immanence 3" is the only ixnay title available thru SPD. All others must be ordered directly from ixnay.)

Orders to:

ixnay press
c/o McCreary
1164 S. 10th Street
Philadelphia PA 19147
[redacted]

Thanks.

Chris McCreary & Jenn McCreary
co-editors, ixnay press

p.s. Apologies to anyone who receives multiple copies of this post due to membership on more than one listserv. If you would like to be removed from our individual mailing list, please e-mail us & let us know.

↑ Index

338. Maria Damon
XCP EVENT IN CHICAGO
Tue 16 Nov 1999

Xcp: Cross-Cultural Poetics,

a journal of poetics, ethnography, and cultural & performance studies, will be hosting a Chicago-area event/reading:

This Friday, November 19th, 1999 at 7:00pm

Barbara's Bookstore (downtown Chicago, N. Wells Street)

In recent years _Xcp: Cross-Cultural Poetics_ has published new interdisciplinary work from over 100 writers/scholars including:

Anthropologists like Lila Abu-Lughod, Roger Sanjek, and Kathleen Stewart...

Poets/Writers like Amiri Baraka, Kamau Brathwaite, Diane Glancy, Gerald Vizenor, Rachel Blau DuPlessis...

Performace Studies artists/scholars such as Guillermo Gomez-Pena, May Joseph, etc.

At the Barbara's Bookstore event this Friday (11/19, 7:00pm), participants will include:

1.) Sterling Plumpp's recent books include _Blues Narratives_ (Tia Chuca Press/Northwestern University Press), and several books from Chicago's Third World Press. He's a professor at UIC-Chicago.

2.) In addition to editing Xcp Mark Nowak has edited two new books, _Then, and Now: Theodore Enslin's Selected Poems, 1943-1993_ (National Poetry Foundation, 1999) and _Visit Teepee Town: Native Writings After the Detours_ (w/ Diane Glancy, Coffee House Press, 1999). Nowak's poems and "microethnographies" have appeared recently in _American Anthropologist_, _Qualitative Inquiry_ and _An Anthology of (New) American Poets_, and his first collection of writings is forthcoming from Coffee House Press next year.

3.) Peter O'Leary is a regular contributor to _Chicago Review_ and editor of Ronald Johnson's Selected Poems (Talisman House). He is also finishing his PhD at the University of Chicago.

Please help us to spread the word about this event by stopping out at Barbara's Friday night and forwarding this e-mail to friends, colleagues, other writers, students, etc. and encouraging them to attend. And thanks for helping to spread the word.

Mark Nowak, ed.
Xcp: Cross-Cultural Poetics

↑ Index

339. Jim Andrews
Bill Marsh and sunbrella.net on Defib this Sunday
Wed 17 Nov 1999

BILL MARSH AND SUNBRELLA.NET PUBLISHING-BROADCASTING, AND THE POETICS OF HYPERMEDIATED ART

on Defib: http://webartery.com/defib
Sunday November 21, Noon PST (19:00 GMT)

Bill Marsh is the featured Web artist at Defib this Sunday.

Bill is a new media writer who combines critical acumen with an engaging poetical approach to Web art. His own site (http://bmarsh.dtai.com/home.html)

features essays, poems, new media work, and his Paper Brain Press. He's launching http://sunbrella.net, a Web broadcasting venture that will broadcast Web content of various types. Sunbrella.net will be launched by the time this edition of Defib happens, very likely, so sunbrella.net and its works and vision will be the main focus of the show. To be a publisher now can also involve broadcasting various media. Bill is the publisher of Paper Brain Press and his Web site, and now his publishing venture is expanding into broadcasting. Should be a good show on the nature of publishing in the contemporary scape and on some interesting work with Bill Marsh, one of the progressive new media/poetics thinkers on the Web.

Defib is webartery.com's online live artist interview surf show. All you need to participate is a Java enabled browser pointed at http://webartery.com/defib. Defib happens on 1st and 3rd Sundays. The transcript of the IRC (Internet Relay Chat) session is logged and then produced into hypertranscripts. Defib's featured Talan Memmott and Clair Dinsmore so far; the transcript of the show on Talan's work is at http://webartery.com/defib/canned/1talan.

Produced by Dan Waber, Jim Andrews, and the folks of webartery.com.

↑ Index

340. Elizabeth Fagin
LEROY chapbook series
Wed 17 Nov 1999

Announcing the release of book two in the LEROY chapbook series:

Gift & Verdict by Roberto Tejada 36 pages, 7 x 8 ½
Kangxi or "noble" binding
$5

"Being a day on which the eating of flesh was forbidden, the monosyllabic, misdelivered tug of the deprived body dancing on the clumsy bone, earth gleaming with blood of the unlawful,
the recurrence of first infliction, or so the animal riven between my legs in jets issued from the throat, gash semblance of a human relish in the agony of others, as there were harrowed corpses everywhere once here in uproar and repetition over time receding now into the ecstatic lather and stench as you quiver tight to the foul edge and fine gore"

Book one: Cartographies of Error, Rachel Levitsky

Forthcoming Releases for 1999:

Summi Kaipa, The Epics
Hoa Nguyen, Selected Poems

Individual titles ($5) or subscriptions ($18 for four books) are available from Leroy (a.k.a. Renee Gladman) 17-A Chattanooga Street, San Francisco, CA 94114 or [redacted].

↑ Index

341. Rachel Loden
class notes b/w duchess of URL
Wed 17 Nov 1999

All the list-turbulence around class suggests a passage from Brecht's "To Posterity," one I've found useful in coming to terms with the fury that seems to come with this territory. Quoted despite its flaws, translated or otherwise (anyone know a better English version than the H.R. Hays, which this is?):

You, who shall emerge from the flood
In which we are sinking,
Think--
When you speak of our weaknesses,
Also of the dark time
That brought them forth.
For we went, changing our country more often than our shoes,
In the class war, despairing
When there was only injustice and no resistance.

For we knew only too well:
Even the hatred of squalor
Makes the brow grow stern.
Even anger against injustice Makes the voice grow harsh. Alas, we Who wished to lay the foundations of kindness
Could not ourselves be kind.

But you, when at last it comes to pass
That man can help his fellow man,

Do not judge us Too harshly.

Am still as puzzled as I was on our last go-round by the conflation of class with money. More on that later, perhaps--

For now an invitation to my website, although at this point it's mostly a book site. At the main page there's really just my ticket to the Berkeley Poetry Conference in '65 (when I was 17):

http://www.thepomegranate.com/loden/

But that leads to a page for the new HOTEL IMPERIUM:

http://www.thepomegranate.com/loden/hotel.html

Also today (Wednesday the 17th--and for a year in the archives), I have a poem at Poetry Daily--

http://www.poems.com/

Thanks all.

* - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - *

Rachel Loden

http://www.thepomegranate.com/loden/hotel.html

email: [redacted]

* - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - *

↑ Index

342. Summi Kaipa
Interlope #4
Wed 17 Nov 1999

Interlope #4

makes its way to the stands this week!

This issue is the greatest ever, and they'll only be getting better.

Chris Chen
Linh Dinh
Alvin Lu
Sawako Nakayasu
Kirthi Nath
Fred Wah

$5 for this marvelous issue with an oh-so-stunning cover (thanks to colleen coover)!

A must have for your lovely bookcases! Why, you could even subscribe to this fantastic magazine for the low price of $10/ 2 issues!

Please send all correspondence/inquiries/money to:

Summi Kaipa
Interlope
PO Box 423058
San Francisco, CA 94110
[redacted]

↑ Index

343. Tom Orange
The New Yorker magazine dated 8/22/99
Wed 17 Nov 1999

On Mon, 15 Nov 1999, Susan Wheeler wrote:

> Of No Country I Know - David Ferry
> Vita Nova - Louise Gluck
> The Constructor - John Koethe
> Poems - J.H. Prynne
> The Pilot Star Elegies - Sherod Santos
>
> I can only urge you to vote, so that the range for next year's contest might be even greater --

and Dave Zauhar wrote

> You can in fact vote from the website, though unfortunately there is no slot for "none of the above." Thank gods those weren't the only five books published this year.

well i have to voice some support for the prynne book. it's truly a major event, gathering the bulk of 18 individual collections spanning 30 years of work which has to this point been virtually impossible to obtain.

as if, for example, all of ashbery from some trees up to the selected poems became available all at once for the first time in the mid-1980s.

tom orange
d.c.

↑ Index

344. Deborah Meadows
Cuban poetry scene
Wed 17 Nov 1999

To UB Poetics List,

This June I will be part of a group of faculty and students who will travel to Cuba for ten-days as part of an exciting, on-going cultural exchange with scholars and artists from Cuba that has been initiated and organized by Saul Landau, a filmmaker and frequent commentator on Pacifica's KPFK. I would greatly appreciate it if any List members might put me in touch with Cuban poets by e-mail so that I might be able to communicate with these individuals ahead of the trip and might be able to plan a meeting with them during the trip. My address is [redacted]

With appreciation,

Deborah Meadows
==========
Deborah Meadows [redacted]
Cal Poly University - Pomona, CA [redacted]

↑ Index

345. Daniel Bouchard
living and wages (of sin? of fear?)
Wed 17 Nov 1999

In a message dated Wed, 10 Nov 1999 19:48:01 EST, Stephen Vincent writes:
>oth candidates support "living wage" contracts (as different from "minimum") >for corporations et al doing business with the City of San Francisco. This >mutual commitment will undoubtedly draw national media attention. Which will >undoubtedly impact discussion of this issue – or make it an issue - in Boston.

Boston passed a living wage ordinance last year. Some of its teeth, however, were knocked out in a scuffle shortly afterward. Somerville (accessible by Boston subway) has a committee working toward a living wage. Cambridge passed a living wage ordinance earlier this year. The group I volunteer with as a tenant organizer, the Eviction Free Zone, spearheaded it (i.e., wrote it) in conjunction with members of the Local Carpenter's union.

Still, all of these cities are reeling from the loss of rent control. My employment at MIT got me into the university housing office which was a happy instance of right place, right time, and it landed me a lease in Cambridge at an affordable rent. Having fought an eviction for the past year, the timing was pretty good.

Not everyone has been lucky though and it's no small wonder that even those poets who do manage to stick it out in the cities have to spend so much of their time working to pay rent. This is a strike against the kinds of "community" where you actually can meet with people face to face.

Even the author of The Hotel Wentley Poems has been having landlord trouble. He lives on Beacon Hill, which some people may translate to mean that he lives in luxury. Far from it. Still, there are dedicated people who look out for him, and others (poets) who are working to raise money to secure his situation.

<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

346. Brent Long

Re: living and wages (of sin? of fear?)

Wed 17 Nov 1999

Daniel brings up a very good point here. The loss of rent control in Boston is for me an enormous burden. Not having been so lucky as Daniel, I live in a student ghetto called Allston, where I pay more than $700/month for a run-down studio apartment with peeling walls and drafty windows. And I'm damn lucky to have it, considering Boston University has to house students in hotels because the vacancy rates in any decent area here are currently at less than 3%. However, I work a 50 or 60 hour week every week, and while my salary is above what I would consider to be a "living wage" in most areas of the country, it is certainly not enough to afford me the lifestyle I want to be living for how much effort I have to put in to my job.

Not that a living wage isn't important - it is - but "living wage" is really just a bandage. The real issue here is that legislation (at least in Boston) has repeatedly sided with the wishes of property owners who want to squeeze every possible dime out of "Daddy's Pocket". (Lots of students = Lots of $$$) To increase people's pay to a "living wage" without also placing restrictions on how many of those dollars the property owners can take from us does very little to afford me any more time to read and/or write poetry.

Perhaps I've missed something here, but I do wonder if this is also an issue in San Francisco, or if the implication of this thread has been that a "living wage" will solve all our poetic woes?

From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Daniel Bouchard
Sent: Wednesday, November 17, 1999 2:59 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: living and wages (of sin? of fear?)

In a message dated Wed, 10 Nov 1999 19:48:01 EST, Stephen Vincent writes:
>oth candidates support "living wage" contracts (as different from "minimum")
>for corporations et al doing business with the City of San Francisco. This >mutual commitment will undoubtedly draw national media attention. Which will >undoubtedly impact discussion of this issue – or make it an issue - in Boston.

Boston passed a living wage ordinance last year. Some of its teeth, however, were knocked out in a scuffle shortly afterward. Somerville (accessible by Boston subway) has a committee working toward a living wage. Cambridge passed a living wage ordinance earlier this year. The group I volunteer with as a tenant organizer, the Eviction Free Zone, spearheaded it (i.e., wrote it) in conjunction with members of the Local Carpenter's union.

Still, all of these cities are reeling from the loss of rent control. My employment at MIT got me into the university housing office which was a happy instance of right place, right time, and it landed me a lease in Cambridge at an affordable rent. Having fought an eviction for the past year, the timing was pretty good. Not everyone has been lucky though and it's no small wonder that even those poets who do manage to stick it out in the cities have to spend so much of their time working to pay rent. This is a strike against the kinds of "community" where you actually can meet with people face to face.

Even the author of The Hotel Wentley Poems has been having landlord trouble. He lives on Beacon Hill, which some people may translate to mean that he lives in luxury. Far from it. Still, there are dedicated people who look out for him, and others (poets) who are working to raise money to secure his situation.

<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

347. Joe Amato
Re: class notes b/w duchess of URL
Wed 17 Nov 1999

---

i think rachel's point -- that class does not = money -- is one key to understanding WHY class is crucial to discussions of symbolic work...

some unreconstructed marxists i know would not want to make the (theoretical) move to class ideology through the ideology of signs and symbols... but if i wouldn't want to see class reduced to money issues, strictly speaking, nor would i want to talk class W/O occasionally talking dollars and sense...

and i think there is some value in discussing, e.g., poetry reading fashions and related anxieties... and for that matter, i think the tv show roseanne was dead-on in its representations of working class/middle class etc. realities (and i only warmed up to the show at kass's urgings via reruns, stupid me)...

anyway, love to hear more here...

best,

joe

↑ Index

348. Tony Green
Re: phonaesthetic
Wed 17 Nov 1999

In spite of all attempts to overcome centre/province relations, some cultural centralities remain & library (& like cultural resources -- make your own list of them) are a constant reminder of that. You should have seen the strange visuals on my screen in Auckland from Philadelphia Writers' House two days back. Barrett Watten's head continually disformed for twenty minutes, interrupted only by connections breaking three or four times + several minutes of unintelligible sound.

Welcome to the real world, Kevin. Distance spooks our way.

However, replies to your query proved useful to a colleague here researching kinaesthetics. But I havent heard from her whether she cd get any of the titles listed.

Tony Green

From: K.Angelo Hehir <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, 18 November 1999 09:06
Subject: Re: phonaesthetic

> hi folks,
>
> sorry for the one stop post but deadlines are crashing all around me and e-time is at a premium.
>
> i just want to thank all the kind sirs that offered me references for my research.
>
> one of the strange things that i've experienced since moving to newfoundland from continental north america are the hit and miss library searches. bernstein,s _close listening_ -yes. adalaide morris - no. a search for _site of sound_ produced this:
>
> Title: A comparison of site-to-site repeatability of two stationary measurement procedures for truck exterior sound levels [microform] / prepared for Transport Canada, Road and Motor Vehicle Safety ; prepared by : Harford, Kennedy, Wakefield Ltd.
>
> so, i never know what i'll get.
>
> as for the web-sites that daniel zimmerman suggested, Margo's Magical Letter Page is incredible and i can't get into the other one.
> thanks again,
> kevin

↑ Index

349. Alan Sondheim
ijiopidndid
Wed 17 Nov 1999

-

ijiopidndid
 e hl oio o ana encknwc mnmoaetu'ot
 i hseoktuo rfc edro lr ueoo ,ad

brmhdyl b l b i ooetane iini uohneo
n g u pidvp gc ansosoeo afmdol nrl uno e di d p rsri smd
 f osnk eok aey ttoa o geoaaenlatn alufnrnalhn
i ,rdtinaii ny a wn,nsn sodimig , g tuodenec te rc erotor
y tojd,mh , ohofe eiy uer nww sod a ynehc uo srloi oli,c oteufw os t o,eias no ttp rlreyir ihon lerok grlii ,uul hodk lt rke
tb uwoho oo kkavepj,p naoonesee o ogn-t ennml and f nyd oiiayopyi nnnnoreoflk esgcueoueoo tee vprrvn
w rrbelsen imareei lydln l fg ne

ner ow w
s k
i n

↑ Index

350. pete spence
Re: class notes b/w duchess of URL
Wed 17 Nov 1999

> All the list-turbulence around class
>
> Rachel Loden
>
> the turbulence of class discussion!!!pete

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

351. pete spence
Re: class notes b/w duchess of URL
Wed 17 Nov 1999

>
>All the list-turbulence around class Rachel Loden
>
and who'd have such a discuss any other way???pete

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

352. pete spence
Re: Business, class, AMMIANO
Wed 17 Nov 1999

> Date: Tue, 16 Nov 1999 16:30:29 -0800
>
> The last thing I'd intended was to deny class, working class, invisible > class. Rather to underscore the difficulty that you speak of below. Hence my ironic comment about being leisure class.

>
> Rachel

the "you" you Rachel speak of in this little note seems to be of the dissappeared class!!!!pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

353. Stephen Cope
Beyond the Page
Thu 18 Nov 1999

BEYOND THE PAGE resumes its monthly series of literary and arts events with the following reading/performance:

What: SPENCER SELBY and ANDREW JORON read from their work.

Where: Faultline Theater, 3152 5th Avenue (at Spruce), in San Diego's Hillcrest District.

When: Sunday, November 21, 1999.

Etc: $3-5 donation requested, with no-one refused at the door. Beer, wine, and other refreshments available.

BTP is proud to continue its monthly series of arts-related events with this reading/performance. BTP is an independent literary and arts group dedicated to the promotion of experimental and explorative work in contemporary arts. For more information, call: [redacted], [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted], [redacted].

↑ Index

354. Mark Melnicove
Re: New Writing Series
Thu 18 Nov 1999

Hi Sylvester,
Can't make it up to Orono today for the reading, though I would like to.
Could somebody get Lee Ann Brown to autograph a copy of POLYVERSE for me and send it along with a bill? Thanks.
Mark

> Anyone passing through Orono? Even if not, some of the info & links below > might be of general interest.

Steve Evans is coordinating this new reading series. His e-mail is Steven_Evans @umit.maine.edu. Sylvester

New Writing Series

Lee Ann Brown

Ben Friedlander

Thursday - 18 November
4PM 402 Neville Hall (Writing Center)
Univ. of Maine, Orono, Maine

Sponsored by the English Department Contact Steve Evans at [redacted] for more information

Lee Ann Brown, 35 years old and a native of Charlotte, North Carolina, presently lives, writes, and teaches in New York City. Her first book Polyverse (Los Angeles: Sun & Moon, 1999) is a wild compendium of jubilant, erotic, tuneful, melancholy, manic, and altogether indispensable poems that weave into a polyphonic chorus the voices of Brown's "excitement sisters"-- from Emily Dickinson and Gertrude Stein to Liz Phair and the Breeders. A teacher long associated with the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa, Brown is also the publisher of Tender Buttons books, since the late-1980s a high-energy locus of feminist avant-garde writing by figures such as Bernadette Mayer, Harryette Mullen, Rosmarie Waldrop, Anne Waldman, Hannah Wiener, and Jennifer Moxley. Brown has recently completed work on a second collection, The Sleep That Changed Everything. A sample of Brown's work can be accessed on the web at

http://bostonreview.mit.edu/BR23.5/Equi.html

Prior to joining the English Department faculty at the University of Maine this fall, Ben Friedlander was a defining presence in the poetic communities of Berkeley and Buffalo. Co-editor of Jimmy & Lucy's House of K, Dark Ages Clasp the Daisy Root, and most recently of the web-journal Lagniappe (with Graham Foust), Friedlander is the author of Time Rations (Oakland: O Books, 1992) and numerous chapbooks with Meow Press in Buffalo, including Selected Poems (1998). Working at the limits of a compressed lyric idiom, Friedlander is a poet of exuberant negativity, historical vulnerability, and supercharged ideological identifications. In 1997, the University of California published the Collected Prose of Charles Olson, co-edited by Friedlander and the legendary anthologist and editor Donald Allen (http://www.ucpress.edu/books/pages/6739.html). Samples of

Friedlander's work are available at

http://bostonreview.mit.edu/BR23.3/poetrysampler.html

Other Poetry Events of Note

Monday, 15 November, Noon Sigma Tau Delta Open Floor Poetry / Short Prose Reading at Wicks Reading Room (Neville 304) Contact Ryan Seely, Jaimi Allen, Kristen Dobler, Amber Thurlow, or Margaret Lukens

Tuesday, November 16, 8:30 Poetry/Prose at the Bear Brew Pub Contact Terry Crouch for more information

Friday, December 3 Jennifer Moxley and Anselm Berrigan read in the New Writing Series Time and room to be announced

Wednesday, December Reading and Book Party to celebrate the publication of Constance Hunting's Natural Things: Collected Poems 1969-1998 (National Poetry Foundation) Time and room to be announced

And for more information, link to Polyverse at
http://www.sunmoon.com/lit_lives/brown.html
Lagniappe at
http://www.acsu.buffalo.edu/~foust/lagniappe.html
Small Press Distribution at
http://www.spdbooks.org/
The Electronic Poetry Center at
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/
Steve Evans's review of Friedlander's Period Piece (Buffalo: Porci con le ali, 1998) on Notes to Poetry
http://www.bway.net/~arras/issue2/newnotes2/notes14.htm

↑ Index

355. Chris Funkhouser
NEWARK REVIEW, Vol. 2, set 5 now available
Thu 18 Nov 1999

N E W A R K R E V I E W
Vol. 2, set 5

is coursing across the Web

features:

M. Alexander
Amiri Baraka
Erin Burley
Enid Dame
Anne Fessenden
Chris Funkhouser
Theodore A. Harris
Sumanth Janardhan
Anne McMahon
Deborah Meadows
Rebecca Schmoyer
Ed Smith
Peter Tomassi

http://megahertz.njit.edu/~newrev/v2s5

=

↑ Index

356. Ron Silliman
Paul Bowles
Thu 18 Nov 1999

The original version of this had Allen Ginsberg's name misspelled. It would be nice if it got onto the list before, say, next Tuesday....

Ron

By The Associated Press

TANGIERS, Morocco (AP) -- Paul Bowles, the American writer and composer best known for his novels in exotic North African settings, died today in Morocco, the Italian Hospital said. He was 88.

Bowles had been hospitalized since Nov. 7 with serious cardiac problems. He died of a heart attack in the Mediterranean port of Tangiers, where he had lived for more than 50 years.

In his first and most famous novel, ``The Sheltering Sky,'' an American couple go to North Africa to try to grow closer together. Instead, they drift further apart. He dies of typhoid; she wanders out into the desert and moves in with the Bedouins.

Bowles' descriptions of burning sands, open skies and lonely North African landscapes, and his finesse in describing the psychological unraveling of a character lost amid the sands, prompted Modern Library to name ``The Sheltering Sky,'' as one of the 100 best English-language novels of the century.

Director Bernardo Bertolucci battled the scorching heat of the Sahara to make the book into a 1990 movie that starred John Malkovich and Debra Winger.

Bowles was born Dec. 30, 1910, in New York City, but rarely returned to his native city after settling in 1947 in Tangiers, the great port sprawled at the foot of the Rif Mountains on Africa's northern coast across the Mediterranean from Spain.

Bowles became a father figure to several writers, including William Burroughs and Allen Ginsberg. Truman Capote was also among those who traveled to see him and share in the hedonism of the Tangiers scene, well known to expatriates.

The novels ``Let It Come Down'' and ``The Spider's House'' are also set in Morocco.

Other works -- ``The Delicate Prey and Other Stories'' and the novel ``Up Above The World,'' for instance -- are set elsewhere, often in Latin America.

Tennessee Williams, a friend of Bowles, called him the American writer who probably best represented the world in which we live ``so precariously from day and night to each uncertain tomorrow.''

Despite his prolific writing career, Bowles' early talent was music and he built an impressive career for himself as a composer at a young age.

Bowles studied with the modern American composer Aaron Copland and worked closely with other greats including Leonard Bernstein. During the 1930s and 1940s, Bowles was a sought-out composers of Broadway music.

His music was featured in the plays of Orson Wells, Tennessee Williams and William Saroyan. Bowles also composed chamber works, opera and art songs.

During his long years in Morocco, Bowles collected and documented the music of the people of the Rif Mountains for the U.S. Library of Congress.

Born to Claude Dietz Bowles, a dentist, and Rena Winnewisser Bowles, Bowles was an only -- and lonely -- child. Lacking playmates, he entertained himself, much of the time writing poetry and stories.

He spent a total of a year at the University of Virginia, in two installments interrupted by a trip to Paris. After a surrealist literary review published a couple of his poems, his life quickly became one of writing, composing, traveling and knowing almost every important person one can think of in the literary, theater and musical worlds.

In 1938, he married Jane Sydney Auer, also a writer. The couple lived here and there, including Mexico, Brooklyn Heights and Sri Lanka (then Ceylon), before settling in Tangiers. His wife died in 1973.

Bowles returned to music late in his life, composing the score in 1992 for an Arabic-language production of the Greek tragedy ``Hippolytus'' for which French fashion giant Yves St. Laurent designed the costumes.

He was also an accomplished translator. Over the years, Bowles translated the works of Moroccan writers Mohammed Choukri and Mohammed Mrabet, a storyteller, winning him deep admiration in his adopted land.

Bowles, whose sight failed him as he grew old, had lived as a recluse in Tangiers for many years. He was served to his last breath by Abdelouahed Boulaich, his Moroccan butler who had worked for him for the last 30 years.

There was no immediate word on survivors or funeral plans.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

357. Mary Burger
A reading in DC, 11/21
Thu 18 Nov 1999

Chris Vitiello and Mary Burger read
Sunday, Nov. 21, 3:00 p.m.
at the Black Box Theater, DC Arts Center
2438 18th St. NW
Washington DC 20009
Tel. [redacted]

↑ Index

358. Al Filreis
Watten/DuPlessis webcast recording
Thu 18 Nov 1999

PhillyTalks #13 - a double reading and discussion between and with Barrett Watten and Rachel Blau DuPlessis - was webcast live from the Kelly Writers House the other night, Monday November 15. The recording of the live webcast is now available here:

http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/webcasts/

Two more 1999 Writers House programs will be webcast live:

+ Ron Silliman, Bob Perelman, Jena Osman, Brian Kim Stefans, 12/7/99:
Tuesday, December 7, 7:30 PM: webcast symposium with contemporary poets,

Ron Silliman, Bob Perelman, Jena Osman, Brian Kim Stefans, hosted & moderated by Al Filreis and Shawn Walker

+ Edwin Torres, 12/11/99
Saturday, December 11, 4 PM: webcast performance by and discussion with Edwin Torres, hosted by Al Filreis

(Times are given in eastern time.)

Al Filreis
The Class of 1942 Professor of English
Faculty Director, the Kelly Writers House
University of Pennsylvania
www.english.upenn.edu/~afilreis

↑ Index

359. Tony Green

Fw: (Fwd) mini-AIR November 99 - Beloved Building, Foggy Fogies, e

Thu 18 Nov 1999

From: [redacted] <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, 18 November 1999 20:32
Subject: (Fwd) mini-AIR November 99 - Beloved Building, Foggy Fogies, e

PLEASE FORWARD/POST AS APPROPRIATE
==========mini-Annals of Improbable Research ("mini-AIR") Issue Number 1999-11
November, 1999
ISSN 1076-500X
Key words: improbable research, science humor, Ig Nobel, AIR, the
A free newsletter of tidbits too tiny to fit in Annals of Improbable Research (AIR),
the journal of inflated research and personalities
==========
1999-11-01 TABLE OF CONTENTS

1999-11-01 Table of Contents
1999-11-02 mini-Housekeeping
1999-11-03 What's in the Magazine
1999-11-04 Beloved Building
1999-11-05 Ig Radio Broadcast Nov. 26
1999-11-06 Microwave Dirt Alert

1999-11-07 Cotton Man
1999-11-08 Math's Cutting Edge
1999-11-09 Foggy Fogies
1999-11-10 New Zealand Alert (New Mexico, etc., too)
1999-11-11 Most Controversial
1999-11-12 Most Controversial (English)
1999-11-13 Project AIRhead 2000: Threats & Results
1999-11-14 Relentless With a Biscuit
1999-11-15 Tsk, Tsk, Zap
1999-11-16 Least Significant
1999-11-17 The Verdict on GM Crops
1999-11-18 Ancient Wisdom
1999-11-19 MAY WE RECOMMEND: Bad Breath and Eye, Parrot Foot
1999-11-20 AIRhead Events
1999-11-21 How to Subscribe to AIR (*)
1999-11-22 How to Receive mini-AIR, etc. (*)
1999-11-23 Our Address (*)
1999-11-24 Please Forward/Post This Issue! (*)

Items marked (*) are reprinted in every issue.

mini-AIR is a free monthly e-supplement to AIR, the print magazine

1999-11-02 mini-Housekeeping

TORONTO
3 AIR shows happening up in TORONTO in early Dec.
(see Section 1999-11-20)

NEW ZEALAND -- NEW MEXICO -- DC
Hosts urgently wanted for AIR shows in New Zealand (in Dec or Jan), New Mexico (Early Feb), and the DC area (Mid Feb).
(see Section 1999-11-10)

1999-11-03 What's in the Magazine

AIR 5:6 (November/December 1999) is the long-awaited special EDUCATION (or perhaps SPECIAL EDUCATION) issue. It includes, among other things:

"The Dead Grandmother / Exam Syndrome," by Mike Adams. The phenomenon is studied in depth. It can be described as follows: A student's grandmother is far more likely to die suddenly just before the student takes an exam than at any other time of year.

"To His (Her?) Uncomprehending Student in the Special Help Session," a poem by Robert M. Hawthorne. It begins:

"Had we but world enough, and time,
This slowness, Laddie, were no crime,
We would sit down and think which way
To think, to cipher, and to weigh
The many ways that we might wend
To come at last to problem's end..."

"How to Get Tenure," by Harry N. David. The author describes a range of services to bolster one's shot at tenure. These include paid recommendations, flurries of reprint requests mailed from prestigious addresses, and other basics.

"Adhesive Tape Technology and the Rapid Expansion of Surgical Sub-Specialties," by Mort Malkin. The surgical profession has undergone major changes, most of which can be attributed to adhesive tape.

These and many, many other articles and features are in the current issue of AIR. You are, of course, invited to subscribe to that splendid magazine. (What you are reading at this moment, of course, is mini-AIR, a tiny, monthly, electronic supplement to the print magazine.)

1999-11-04 Beloved Building

If you are the president or chancellor of a relatively young college or university, we invite you to join the Grand Old Building Movement Foundation (GOBMF). We at GOBMF will help you obtain that which you most desire: a historic, atmospheric old laboratory building that inspires alumni/ae to weep tears and cough up donations.

Many older institutions have buildings that are just what you need, and are only too eager to replace them with shiny new glass- and-steel towers. Almost always, the old buildings are just knocked down. Such waste! We at GOBMF would be happy to help you obtain title to an otherwise doomed old laboratory building, and move it by trailer truck, C5A transport plane, barge, trebuchet, or Federal Express to your campus.

This month's special is Gibbs Laboratory, a magnificent, historic, small brick building at Harvard University (see http://www.fas.harvard.edu/map/Level4/SciLabs/gibbs.shtml). Gibbs Laboratory is scheduled for demolition in March of next year. If you have a suitable home for it, and the willingness and ability to move it lock, stock, and vacuum hoods, please get in touch with us right away at:

Grand Old Building Movement Foundation
C/O Annals of Improbable Research

1999-11-05 Ig Radio Broadcast Nov. 26

The Ig radio broadcast will be Friday, Nov. 26, the day after American Thanksgiving, on NPR's "Science Friday" program. The Ig will be hour one of the two-hour program. See http://www.sciencefriday.com for a list of stations and times. General Ig info is at http://www.improbable.com/ig/ig-top.html

1999-11-06 Microwave Dirt Alert

Investigator Paul Koch sends the following alert, which assaulted him in the Fall, 1999 issue of the research journal Nurse Line:

"In the spring issue of _Nurse Line_, we suggested disinfecting wooden cutting boards and utensils in a microwave for up to five minutes. A few readers wrote to let us know that some wooden items charred after a few minutes in the microwave.

"Because of variations in microwave power and wood, we now recommend that you do not use a microwave to disinfect wooden items. Instead, run them through the dishwasher, or scrub with soap and hot water."

1999-11-07 Cotton Man

The news that Bayer Corporation has stopped putting little cotton wads in its aspirin bottles has sent shock waves through the scientific community. (See the October, 1999 issue of "Packaging World" for details of the stoppage.) Investigator J. Ramon Pierce sent us this plea, which we pass on to you:

"I have been collecting and studying the cotton in Bayer aspirin bottles since 1952. (I am primarily interested in their structure.) Mine is the third largest fully documented, fully catalogued such collection in the world. Due to an illness, I was unable to obtain any cotton specimens from bottles packed during the period May 18-24, 1998. If any of your readers have such specimens I would be grateful to hear from them."

Investigator Pierce does not have email. Anyone wishing to correspond with him is invited to write us at:

Ramon Pierce
Aspirin Cotton Collector
C/O Annals of Improbable Research

and we will forward your message to it to its ultimate destination. Please do not send cotton wads, or cotton anything, to us, as we lack the proper machinery.

1999-11-08 Math's Cutting Edge

Several mathematicians have written us lately to complain about "the unfairness of it all." They are upset that the plural of the word "AXIS" (an item they use professionally) is the same as the plural of the word "AX" (an item they prefer to use only when off duty). We have been unable to calm these anguished individuals, and would like to hear from anyone who can help them.

1999-11-09 Foggy Fogies

As we approach the Great Rolling of the Digits, in which one will become two and three nines will be replaced by zeroes, it is time to answer a question that has puzzled many of our professional mathematician readers:

What is ethnomathematics?

Like you, we had not the foggiest idea. This month's Fog Survey Question is: "Who has THE foggiest idea of what ethnomathematics is? That is, whose idea is the most foggy?"

Please vote for one of the following, or write in your own candidate's name:

#1. Ubiratan D'Ambrosio, who according to several sites on the Internet has defined Ethnomathemtics as "the maths practised among cultural groups such as national-tribal societies, labour groups, children of a certain age bracket, professional classes and so on"

#17. Arthur B. Powell and Marilyn Frankenstein, editors of the book "Ethnomathematics" (State University of New York Press, 1997.

#496. The International Study Group on Ethnomathematics, whose web site is http://www.rpi.edu/~eglash/isgem.htm

The above choices are numbered ethnomathematically.

Please send your vote to <[redacted]>

1999-11-10 New Zealand Alert (New Mexico, etc., too)

Millennial Diva Margot Button, star of the Ig Nobel mini-operas, will be visiting her native New Zealand, avec entourage, during December and January. If you are in New Zealand and would like to host a special AIR show (with Ig opera songs and a special AIR slide show) please get in touch RIGHT NOW with us at <[redacted]> or with Margot at <[redacted]>.

On February 5, AIR's editor will be in New Mexico doing an AIR show at New Mexico Tech. If you are elsewhere in New Mexico, and would like to host an AIR show around then, please get in touch SOON. Ditto for AIR shows in the Washington, DC area in mid-to- late Feb, and California in March or April.

1999-11-11 Most Controversial

This month's education survey asked:
"What subject do you personally find controversial, and so want removed from the schools?"

The survey was inspired by the educational authorities in several American states, who insist that evolution should not be mentioned in classrooms because it is "controversial." Here are the subjects that should be banned by popular demand.

29% Religion
28% Language (reading and/or writing)
19% History
9% Physical Education (aka "gym")
9% Trigonometry
6% other things (less than 1% vote for each)

Some specific comments:

"All subjects are potentially controversial. Therefore, I don't think schools should teach anything; they should just be large repositories of information, with a staff of excellent librarians."
--Peggy Coquet

"Homework is a significant source of parent/child discord. It should be eliminated."
--Jim Spahr

"I attended private Catholic schools so there were no controversial subjects or theories that could not be answered by a church authority."
--Peter Andrijeski

"I like piano music, but my husband prefers violin music. If we had any kids, and they came home talking about music, it would start an argument." --Betty Lise Anderson

"Speling is possably the most controvurshul subjek."
--Iain Gallimore

"I have tired of reading all the controversy surrounding the existence (or non-existence) of sub-atomic particles. Let's stop teaching about sub-atomic physics, and its kindred cousin, quantum mechanics. In all probability, it's all just a bunch of equations, anyway." --Barry Lunt

1999-11-12 Most Controversial (English)

Certain respondents to the Controversial Survey were convulsed, in one way or another, with or by the English language. The following comments express their anguish:

"I think English grammar should be banned from schools. I wasted many hours arguing over whether 'to boldly go' was acceptable, or improper because of the split infinitive." --E.A. Gedeon

"I want the entire subject of mathematics banned from classroom because I was a math-challenged English major, and therefore mathematics damages my self-esteem." --Gwyn McVay

"Our Organic Chemistry 2 class at the University of Wisconsin unanimously agreed that we could get a bunch of money for new chemistry equipment if the entire English department was eliminated."
--Kurt Swends

"Foreign languages. All sensible people speak UK English." --D. Ibbetson

1999-11-13 Project AIRhead 2000: Threats & Results

Here is a further random selection from the Project AIRhead 2000 collection of things inexplicably named (in whole or in part) 2000.

ITEM 1212120 (submitted by investigator Phillip I. Goldman) MOSAIC-2000, a software program that "begins testing, at more than 20 schools in December, its technique of confidentially vetting and rating potentially violent students on a scale of 1 to 10." [That description is from the New York Times.] The program is being developed by the US Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms working together with something called a "threat-evaluation company."

ITEM 20002 (submitted by investigator Lyle Wiedeman)
"RESULTS 2000: JOIN THE MASTERS OF OUR TIME," an event scheduled to happen on December 7 in Anaheim, California and at other times in other places. The lineup is listed on their web site (www.results2000.net) as follows:

Featuring:
  Anthony Robbins, William Bennett,
  Brian Tracy, Sanford Botkin
Special Guests:
  Hollywood Celebrity, Wayne Gretzky,
  Larry King, & Billy Blanks

1999-11-14 Relentless With a Biscuit

Len Fisher, co-winner of this year's Ig Nobel Physics Prize, for discovering the optimal way to dunk a biscuit, is at it again. Fisher and his colleagues have now determined which beverages most enhance the flavor of which biscuits. Thanks to investigator Nigel Birch and others for alerting us to the news. A report can be seen at http://news.bbc.co.uk/hi/english/sci/tech/newsid_510000/510044.stm

1999-11-15 Tsk, Tsk, Zap

Many and varied have been the responses to our Tsk, Tsk Task Survey (of disgusting tasks assigned by scientists to their assistants). This one is from investigator JC, who requests that his full name not be mentioned:

"You know those invisible fences they have for dogs? The kind that gives the dog an electric shock if it crosses a perimeter wire? How do you suppose they develop the thing that delivers the shock? I was doing some consulting work for a company that I won't name, and the engineer working on the dog collar would make some tweaks to the circuit, put his hand near it, and turn it on. He'd recoil violently from the shock, then call over the technician and say, 'Okay, try it now.' "The technician would leave his computer and come over to the bench, and put his hand on the collar as power was applied. If it was really working well, he'd look like a cartoon character with his finger in a light socket. The one post-zap comment I remember was, 'The initial shock is better than this morning, but then it's not so good.'"

1999-11-16 Least Significant

We have all forgotten to honor the Least Significant Scientist of the Century. It's time to choose that person, and celebrate. Please send your vote for Least Significant Scientist of the Twentieth Century to <[redacted]>

1999-11-17 The Verdict on GM Crops

Here are the results of our Scientific Correctness Survey about genetically modified ("GM") crops:

17% GM crops are beneficial and risk-free, and must not be restricted

17% GM crops are vile and dangerous, and must be banned

33% I am undecided, and therefore opt for Choice #1

33% I am undecided, and therefore opt for Choice #2

RANT RATING FOR THIS SURVEY: 52% of all respondents who included a comment used an exclamation point (!)

As with all our Scientific Correctness Surveys, this one settles a complex issue by means of a simple public opinion survey. Now we can all either stop thinking about it or start thinking about it, as the case may be, and move on.

1999-11-18 Ancient Wisdom

The holidays are approaching. A gift subscription to Annals of Improbable Research is cheap, and will display your generosity not once but six, twelve, or eighteen times (according to how many years the subscription runs). Best of all, it will let you say of your gift recipient: "He/she has been an AIRhead since the twentieth century!" (Sub info in section 1999-11-21 below)

1999-11-19 MAY WE RECOMMEND: Bad Breath and Eye, Parrot Foot

Research reports that merit a trip to the library.
(For a much larger collection, see any issue of AIR.)

INSIDE THE SAUSAGE "Mathematical description of the growth of Lactobacillus sake and Lactobacillus pentosus under conditions prevailing in fermented sausages," M. U. Doßmann, R. F. Vogel, and W. P. Hammes, Applied Microbiology and Biotechnology, vol. 46, no. 4, 1996, pp. 334-9. (Thanks to Fiona Davies-McConchie for bringing this to our attention.)

WETTING: AT THE BRINK "Observation of short-range critical wetting," D. Ross, D. Bonn, and J. Meunier, Nature, vol. 400, 1999, pp. 737-9. (Thanks to Madhusudan Katti for bringing this to our attention.)

1999-11-20 AIRhead Events

==> Want to host an event?
Call or E-mail <[redacted]> [redacted].
==> For updates of this schedule, see http://www.improbable.com

IG NOBEL RADIO BROADCAST ON SCIENCE FRIDAY FRI, NOV 26 Annual special Ig Nobel Broadcast -- a specially edited recording of the Ig Nobel Prize Ceremony, broadcast on the day after American Thanksgiving. The program is NPR's "Science Friday With Ira Flatow." For details (and/or to -maybe- listen via the Internet), see http://www.sciencefriday.com

UNIV OF WATERLOO, ONTARIO TUES, DEC 7
2:30 pm. Details TBA.
INFO: Dan Berry <[redacted]>

CHEMICAL INSTITUTE OF CANADA, TORONTO SECTION WED, DEC. 8
8:30 pm. Univ. of Toronto, Erindale Campus
3359 Mississauga Rd.
AIR editor MARC ABRAHAMS will present an underview of improbable research. Includes the classic slide show "PROFESSOR LIPSCOMB Goes Shopping."
INFO: Jack Clark <[redacted]>

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO THURS, DEC. 9
4:00 pm. Physics Department. Colloquium with AIR editor MARC

ABRAHAMS.
INFO: David Bailey <[redacted]> [redacted]

NASW PLENARY SESSION (at AAAS), WASHINGTON Thurs, Feb 17, 2000 8-10 am. AIR editor MARC ABRAHAMS will be part of the National Association of Science Writers (NASW) plenary session panel, together with John Rennie, Steve Petranek, and John Benditt, editors in chief of Scientific American, Discover, and Technology Review. There will be brief, possibly spectacular review of the Ninth 1st Annual Ig Nobel Prizes. This event is open to NASW members only. Info; Mary Knudsen <[redacted]>

=== 2000 ===

NEW MEXICO TECH, SOCORRO THURS, FEB 3
AIR editor MARC ABRAHAMS will present the latest news about improbable research and the Ig Nobel Prizes as part of the New Mexico Tech Performing Arts Series.
INFO: Ronna Kalish <[redacted]> [redacted]

AAAS ANNUAL MEETING, WASHINGTON DC FRI, FEB 18 9:00 pm. AIR authors will present their traditionally improbable session at the American Association for the Advancement of Science's annual meeting. Featuring, admong others, AIR editor MARC ABRAHAMS, "A Briefer History of Time" author ERIC SCHULMAN, and the more-or-less ORIGINAL CAST of one fo the Ig Nobel mini- operas starring mezzo- soprano MARGOT BUTTON and various Nobel laureates. Further details TBA.

TUFTS VET SCHOOL, PHI ZETA AWARDS CEREMONY THURS, FEB 24 AIR editor MARC ABRAHAMS will inculcate the new awardees with the mysteries of improbable research.
INFO: Don Brown <[redacted]> [redacted] X84655

NEW ENGLAND SKEPTICAL SOCIETY --YALE UNIV. SEPTEMBER
Date and exact location TBA
AIR editor MARC ABRAHAMS will discuss and illustrate the Ig Nobel Prizes and improbable Research in general.
INFO: Jon Blumenfeld <[redacted]>
http://www.theness.com/member.html

TENTH FIRST ANNUAL IG NOBEL PRIZE CEREMONY THURS, OCT 5
Sanders Theatre, Harvard University.
Tickets will go in sale in August.

|--- ADVANCE LISTING--|
MEDICAL LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, UNIV OF UTAH SEPT 9-15, 2002
Exact date and location(s) TBA.
AIR editor MARC ABRAHAMS will present a lecture on improbable research at a meeting of the Midcontinental Chapter of the Medical Library Association (MCMLA), and be part of a panel discussion on electronic publishing.

INFO: Kathleen McCloskey <[redacted]> 801/[redacted]

1999-11-21 How to Subscribe to AIR (*)

Here's how to subscribe to the magnificent bi-monthly print journal The Annals of Improbable Research -- (the real thing, not just the little bits of overflow material you have been reading here in mini-AIR)
.....
Name:
Address:
Address:
City and State: Zip or postal code:
Country
Phone: FAX: E-mail:
.....
USA 1 yr/$23 2 yrs/$39 3 yrs/$59
Canada/Mexico 1 yr/$27 US 2 yrs/$45 US 3 yrs/$67 US
Overseas 1 yr/$40 US 2 yrs/$70 US 3 yrs/$99 US

[Copies of back issues are each $8 in the USA, $11 in Canada/Mexico, $16 overseas.]
.....
Send payment (US bank check, or international money order, or Visa, Mastercard or Discover info) to:
The Annals of Improbable Research (AIR)
PO Box 380853, Cambridge, MA 02238 USA
[redacted] FAX:[redacted] [redacted]

1999-11-22 How to Receive mini-AIR, etc. (*)

What you are reading right now is mini-AIR. Mini-AIR is a (free!) tiny monthly supplement to the bi-monthly print magazine.
[redacted]
The body of your message should contain ONLY the words
SUBSCRIBE MINI-AIR MARIE CURIE
(You may substitute your own name for that of Madame Curie.)

To stop subscribing, send the following message: SIGNOFF MINI-AIR

1999-11-23 Our Address (*)

Annals of Improbable Research (AIR)
PO Box 380853, Cambridge, MA 02238 USA
[redacted] FAX:[redacted]

EDITORIAL: [redacted]
SUBSCRIPTIONS: [redacted]
WEB SITE: http://www.improbable.com/

1999-11-24 Please Forward/Post This Issue! (*)

Please distribute copies of mini-AIR (or excerpts!) wherever appropriate. The only limitations are:
A) Please indicate that the material comes from mini-AIR.
B) You may NOT distribute mini-AIR for commercial purposes.

(c) copyright 1999, Annals of Improbable Research mini-AIRheads
EDITOR: Marc Abrahams ([redacted]) MINI-PROOFREADER AND PICKER OF NITS (before we introduce the last few at the last moment): Wendy Mattson <[redacted]> WWW EDITOR/GLOBAL VILLAGE IDIOT: Amy Gorin
([redacted])
COMMUTATIVE EDITOR: Stanley Eigen ([redacted])
ASSOCIATIVE EDITOR: Mark Dionne
CO-CONSPIRATORS: Gary Dryfoos, Ernest Ersatz, Craig Haggart, Nicki
Rohloff
MAITRE DE COMPUTATION: Jerry Lotto
AUTHORITY FIGURES: Nobel Laureates Dudley Herschbach, Sheldon Glashow, William Lipscomb, Richard Roberts
==========

↑ Index

360. Y.

Death of Paul Bowles

Thu 18 Nov 1999

Fwd from: Randy Murakoshi-Barnwell <[redacted]>

> 18 November 1999
>
> Hello ALL: Especialy media folks on the List...
>
> As some of you may have heard, the American writer Paul Bowles has passed > away thia morning.

>
>
http://news2.thls.bbc.co.uk/hi/english/world/americas/newsid %5F526000/526429
.stm
>
> Paul was a dear friend of mine and mentor. We did several projects (CDs, > books) together in the late 80's and early 90's. We have remained friends > ever since I went to Morocco at his invitation in 1990.
>
> If I can be of reference assistance I would gladly help for any news or > publication. When it comes to Paul, I am what Japanese call "otaku" > (obssessed)
>
> www.istikhara.com or
>
> http://www.istikhara.com/consult/index.htm
>
> The news is very saddening. I was planning to see him in February 2000.
>
> Best,
> Randall Murakoshi-Barnwell
> www.istikhara.com > Director

↑ Index

361. Alan Sondheim
In the Dark
Thu 18 Nov 1999

-

In the Dark

Where are you Je nnifer, who are you going out wi th, when I mean (think of) the state that N
ikuko is going t o be in? that wh en the dance sto ps coming down the pike? D oes Doctor Leopo ld Konninger kno w much about thi s state of affairs? Tell me soon, Alan. gje nniefer goin ot stat nukuko tuo danc doctr leopold konningr kno stat tel

But in fact she continues to dan ce because there
's no way out of stardom ballet,
the pirouettes g oing on and on a nd on like beaut iful flying swan
s. So she's movi ng like a maelst rom (crazy perso n, schizophrenic
) and garbling text ab out her now, say s Doctor Leopold Konninger. gjen niefer goin ot stat nuk uko tuo danc doc
tr leopold konni
ngr kno stat tel fac con-tinus danc becaw
s therz fo danc poruets goin not hng shez malesto

m garblling tex sayz Le op Konninger

↑ Index

362. Bob Haynes
Question about Dionne Brand
Thu 18 Nov 1999

Does anybody know where I can find internet resources on the poet Dionne Brand and the particular episode in her recent film "Sisters in the Struggle" that regarded the Caribbean women working in Canada. I'm especially interested in historical documentation and commentary in addition to Brand's. Also if anyone knows of additional films that touch on the topic of domestic labor in Canada, especially as it pertains to black/Caribbean women.

thanks, bob

↑ Index

363. Poetics List Administration
POETICS: approval required (DD0A5C0D)
Thu 18 Nov 1999

--On Thursday, November 18, 1999, 10:33 AM -0500 "L-Soft list server at University at Buffalo (1.8d)" <[redacted]> wrote:

This message was originally submitted by [redacted] to the POETICS list at LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU. You can approve it using the "OK" mechanism, ignore it, or repost an edited copy. The message will expire automatically and you do not need to do anything if you just want to discard it. Please refer to the list owner's guide if you are not familiar with the "OK" mechanism; these instructions are being kept purposefully short for your convenience in processing large numbers of messages.

* 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 PM 8 **********

HIGHWIRE PRESENTS==>>

C A R O L M I R A K O V E (she's back, straight from L.A.!!))

H E A T H E R T H O M A S

Saturday, November 20, 8PM (back to normal)

Highwire Gallery
137 North Second Street Philadelphia

BYOB

Greg and Kyle ask that you pass this announcement to friends.

Carol will read from her book Wall (Ixnay, 1999)

Heather Thomas' Resurrection Papers (Chax Press) is forthcoming.

Jenn and Chris McCreary will be in the house hustling Ixnay IIIs and Carol's new book, both hot of the presses.

****
*

POEMS

> Heather Thomas

> Thought 510,999: Doctor of Philosophy
>
> Delicate ear to dark wood, carpet swirling > florals, opera over water to houseboat lanterns
>
> I lie this night in the theatre > of desire after desire and there is more--
>
> pieces of wood loosen under me > break off the infrastructure > burgundy walls of memory > maximally excite.
>
> On a banister under the dome I perform > language as memory and lvoe > labrythine and stripped
>
> knowledge as a question, craving the flow--
>
> there is no way > to rise and nothing > holds me up, my hands

>
> clasped underneath > expose my heart
> the air pulls apart
>
> imprint of our hands together.
>
****
> Carol Mirakove

> go-kart jurisdiction
>
> it's the hyphenated kind > with a k in the middle > downhill no brakes running on > you snuff bars
> bongos &
> the plum lady > love pump under foot
> freckles the sidewalk with pulp > steamy slush
> wind up > clitoris metal > sparking speaking on metal > hair traipsed on a corner crossing > white paint
> crayola-crusted
> egos in the lines
> & that's why I love you exacto knife > for being something to smash
> this > reckoning or not-speed > is not fun, not fucking fun > so drive I sd. & for no-christ's sake > shut yr eyes > cause I'm the lazy quick type > with a patch of wind & not much clock & > wind
> & wind

* IXNAY ANNOUNCEMENT

We are pleased to announce the publication of ixnay #3, our new issue chock full of fine work by:

Seth Frechie
Rod Smith
Louis Cabri
Marcella Durand
Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino
Allison Cobb
Mark DuCharme
Dana Lisa Lustig
Spencer Selby
Kristine Grow
Patrick F. Durgin
Tom Devaney
Brendan Lorber
Sue Landers
Jason Nelson
Joel Dailey
Jeffrey Jullich
Ethan Fugate
Matt Hart
Randy Prunty &)ohnLowther
Elizabeth Treadwell
Hank Lazer

as well as

Shawn Walker's review of Greg Fuchs's "Came Like It Went"

& Chris McCreary's short reviews of Andrew Mossin's "The Epochal Body," Cole Swensen's "O (excerpts)", and Gustaf Sobin's "Articles of Light & Elation."

We are also delighted to announce the publication of the latest ixnay press chapbook, WALL by carol mirakove. This lovely chapbook features glossy black & white (& sometimes orange) cover art by the author herself.

ixnay #3 can be had for $5; WALL is $6. Order both for the low low price of $10 & save!!! Feel free to e-mail orders -- we'll ship now & you can pay later by making out a check to either Chris McCreary or Jenn McCreary, not ixnay.

Also, Peter Ganick's chapbook "Immanence 3," published earlier this year by ixnay press, is now available via Small Press Distribution or straight from ixnay for $6. (Note: "Immanence 3" is the only ixnay title available thru SPD. All others must be ordered directly from ixnay.)

Orders to:

ixnay press
c/o McCreary
1164 S. 10th Street
Philadelphia PA 19147
[redacted]

Thanks.

Chris McCreary & Jenn McCreary
co-editors, ixnay press

p.s. Apologies to anyone who receives multiple copies of this post due to membership on more than one listserv. If you would like to be removed from our individual mailing list, please e-mail us & let us know.

↑ Index

364. Poetics List Administration

POETICS: approval required (4340AFED)

Thu 18 Nov 1999

--On Thursday, November 18, 1999, 12:42 PM -0500 "L-Soft list server at University at Buffalo (1.8d)" <[redacted]> wrote:

This message was originally submitted by [redacted] to the POETICS list at LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU. You can approve it using the "OK" mechanism, ignore it, or repost an edited copy. The message will expire automatically and you do not need to do anything if you just want to discard it. Please refer to the list owner's guide if you are not familiar with the "OK" mechanism; these instructions are being kept purposefully short for your convenience in processing large numbers of messages.

Northern Westchester Center for the Arts
Creative Arts cafe Poetry Series
272 No. Bedford Road
Mt. Kisco, NY 10549

Contact: Cindy Beer-Fouhy [redacted]
Fax # [redacted]

For immediate Release:

Poets &Writers' Amy Holman
Reads at Creative Arts Café Poetry Series

Mt. Kisco, NY: The Creative Arts Cafe at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts will feature poet Amy Holman on Monday, December 22, at 7:30 PM. Amy Holman recently read segments of her work in October at NWCA's Writers' Resource Symposium which she helped organize with Cindy Beer-Fouhy, Director of Literary Arts. Ms Holman was invited to return as a feature for the Café's Poetry Series. A reception and open mike will follow.

Amy Holman is a poet and prose writer and Director of the Literary Horizons program at Poets & Writers, Inc, where she co-founded The Publishing Seminars in 1995. She writes columns on publishing issues for P&W Online and Poets & Writers Magazine, and is the Associate Editor of The First Book Market, Macmillan, 1998. Her poetry is published Literal Latte, The Metropolitan Review, The Best American Poetry 1999 (Scribner, 1999), and The Second Word Thursdays Anthology (Bright Hill Press, 1999).

The Northern Westchester Center for the Arts is located at 272 No. Bedford Road in Mt. Kisco, NY 10549. There is a Suggested Donation of $7.00, $5.00 for students and seniors. Please call [redacted] for directions from NYC and information regarding a schedule of weekly poetry readings.

↑ Index

365. P.Standard Schaefer
Rhizome
Thu 18 Nov 1999

In need of help.

I've received a lot of reviews for the next issue of Rhizome which is good.

Which is bad is more than one of them don't have names on them. Anywhere on them.

Will the writer of the Anselm Berrigan or Cole Swensen or Laynie Brown reviews please contact ASAP.

If I can't find the writers, I'll likely publish the reviews with my own editorial fixes (for those full of what I perceive as typos) and publish them anonymously so that the book being reviewed gets its due.

Thanks.

Standard Schaefer

↑ Index

366. Gerald Schwartz
Re: earliest american poem
Thu 18 Nov 1999

Surely the lyrics and verse composed by Seminole, Hopi, Navajo, Pima, Havasupai, Arapaho, Paiute, Nootka and other Indian sources, including your own adjacent Oneida and Mohawk Nations....were here first.

Of couse if you're talking sole about colonialization and its European hubris...then that is something altogether. I may have misunderstood.

All Best,
Gerald

↑ Index

367. David Baptiste Chirot
[Y4M] Re: URGENT Demos: United With Vieques: Cities & Events across the Americas
Thu 18 Nov 1999

>
> >--------- Forwarded message ----------
> >From: Vieques Libre <[redacted]>
> >To: <[redacted]>
> >Date: Thu, 18 Nov 1999 01:43:16 -0600
> >Subject: United With Vieques: List of Cities &
> Events across the U.S.
> >Message-ID: <199911180143.SM00157@f_marrero>
> >
> > . . . Seven months of struggle in Vieques...
> >
> >WE ARE MORE UNITED THAN EVER!
> >WIDE FRONT OF SUPPORT FOR VIEQUES ON NOVEMBER 19, > 1999
> >
> >
> > . . this Friday November 19 more than fifteen > cities will have > >demonstrations against the > >bombing of Vieques. . .
> >

> >This past Saturday, President Clinton informed the > Governor of Puerto > >Rico that he may soon > >allow the US Navy to resume bombing in Vieques, > Puerto Rico, against the > >will of the people. A > >final decision has yet to be announced, but it is > imminent. Massive > >pro-Vieques demonstrations > >will be held this Friday in Vieques, as well as in > more than fifteen > >cities in the United States. This > >Friday marks the seventh month anniversary of the > death of Viequense > >civilian David Sanes as > >a result of a US Navy bomb dropped in Vieques. At > this critical > >juncture, all these cities will be > >having massive demonstrations in support of the > demands of the people of > >Vieques, that the US
> >Navy leave Vieques now and not drop one more bomb > or fire one more bullet > >in Vieques.
> >
> >
> >----------
> >
> >Jersey City, NJ
> >Vieques, Puerto Rico
> >New York City, NY
> >Washington, DC
> >Hartford, CT
> >Baltimore, MD
> >Providence, RI
> >Cambridge, MA
> >San Francisco, CA
> >Minneapolis, MN
> >Philadelphia, PA
> >Gainesville, FL
> >Hanover, NH
> >Cleveland, OH

> >
> >----------
> >
> >Jersey City, NJ
> >
> >
> >Thursday November 18
> >Time: 6 pm
> >ComitÈ Pro Vieques, Puerto Rico de Hudson County is > organizing a March on > >November 18,
> >1999 6pm from Roberto Clemente Little League Field
> (6th and Manila > >Avenue) to Jersey City Hall > >(280 Grove Street.) Contact: Anthony Cruz
> 201-7927609
> >Vieques Support Campaign -
> [redacted]
> >
> >19 de Noviembre de 1999
> >WE ARE MORE UNITED THAN EVER!
> >SHOW YOUR SUPPORT FOR VIEQUES
> >Vieques, Puerto Rico
> >"Todo Puerto Rico Pa' Vieques" > >Habr· movilizaciÛn para Vieques desde el viernes 19
> de Noviembre. Para > >informaciÛn llamar > >al [redacted] o al localizador [redacted].Ý
> >
> >
> >New York City, NY
> >
> >Friday November 19
> >Time: 5 pm sharp > >Demonstration and picket in an afternoon of > world-wide solidarity for the > >immediate removal of > >the U.S. Navy from the island municipality of > Vieques, Puerto Rico!Ý
> >Where: The Federal Building, 26 Federal Plaza > > (Broadway & Reade St. Downtown > Manhattan)

> >Take N, R trains to City Hall or 4, 5, 6, J, M to > Brooklyn Bridge or > >Chambers
> >
> >Contact: Vieques Support Campaign -
> [redacted]
> >
> >
> >
> >Washington, DC
> >
> >Friday November 19
> >Time: 6:00PM
> >Rally For Vieques in front of the White House > >(Lafayette Park-SW Quadrant and the White House > Sidewalk)
> >6:00PM this Friday in front of the White House, > with drums, banners,
> >picket signs, bull horns, etc., > >and demand from President Clinton once again, loud > and clear, that he > >must order the US Navy > >out of Vieques now and must not allow one more bomb > to be dropped or one > >more bullet to be > >fired in Vieques. Contact: Flavio Cumpiano, > Committee for the Rescue and > >Development of > >Vieques, Washington, DC ([redacted]) -
> [redacted]
> >[Flyer- Ready to Print & Distribute]
> >In .doc format for Word
> >
> >
> >
> >Hartford, Connecticut
> >
> >Friday November 19
> >Time:3:30 PM
> >Frente a la Corte Federal de Hartford
> >In front of the Federal Court (450 Main Street)
> >Contact: Iv·n Ramos - [redacted]

> >Todo Connecticut con Vieques:[redacted] /(860)
> [redacted]
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >Baltimore, MD
> >
> >Friday November 19
> >Time: 5:00PM
> >Join the Vieques Support Campaign this Friday
> -5PM-at the corner of > >Hanover and Lombard > >Streets (Federal Building) for a picket of > worldwide solidarity with > >Vieques! Demand the U.S.
> >Navy leave the island immediately.Ý
> >Contact: Organized by the Vieques Support > Campaign-Baltimore
> >475 St. Brides Ct., Severna Park, MD 21146
> >Phone: [redacted]
> >[redacted]
> >
> >
> >
> >Providence, Rhode Island
> >
> >Friday November 19
> >Time: 6:00PM
> >ComitÈ Todo Rhode Island Con Vieques (All of Rhode > Island With Vieques > >Committee)
> >385 Westminster Street, Providence, RI 02903 (401)
> [redacted]
> >Rally For Vieques in front of the Federal Court
> >Kennedy Plaza, Providence, RI this Friday November
> 19 at 6:00PM
> >
> >Contact: Francisco J. Cruz [redacted] -
> [redacted]
> >[Flyer- Ready to Print & Distribute]
> >

> >
> >
> >Cambridge, MA
> >
> >Friday November 19
> >Time: 6:00-7:30PMÝ
> >PEACE FOR VIEQUES VIGIL
> >HARVARD YARD (IN FRONT OF JOHN HARVARD STATUE)
> >HARVARD PRESS EXPECTED TO ATTEND
> >HOT COFFE WILL BE SERVED-CAFE' CALIENTE > >COME AND HELP US STOP THE BOMBING OF VIEQUES, > PUERTO RICO!!!
>
=== message truncated ===

Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

Need a cure for the used car blues? iMotors pre-owned cars are: priced below Blue Book; fully tested & certified; &=20 carry a 7 day/700 mile money back guarantee. Look no further iMotors.com is here!
http://clickhere.egroups.com/click/1535=20

Stop the execution! New trial for Mumia!
Youth & Students for Mumia
www.peoplescampaign.org * [redacted]

-- 20 megs of disk space in your group's Document Vault
-- http://www.egroups.com/docvault/youth-4-mumia/?m=3D1

↑ Index

368. Jim Andrews

Claire Dinsmore at Defib: hypertranscript available

Fri 19 Nov 1999

The canned version of Claire Dinsmore at Defib is available at http://webartery.com/defib/pastevents.htm (also reachable from the webartery.com home page under "Defib Interviews"). This is a hypertranscript of the Sunday Nov 7/99 show with Claire as the featured Web artist. Claire recently launched Cauldron & Net, which features work by a wide range of writers and Web artists; the show looks at that online mag and closely at a wide range of Claire's own work.

Thanks to Dan Waber for his production of the live show, and thanks to all who wrote it: Claire Dinsmore, Dan Waber, David Knoebel, Beth Garrison, Miekal And, Jennifer Ley, George Quasha, Talan Memmott, Bill Marsh, Reiner Strasser, Thomas Bell, and Skip Largent. Special thanks to Claire. It's an odd and leaping text--which is part of the energy of it--and hopefully an engaged/engaging, collaborative look at Claire's work.

Regards,
Jim Andrews

↑ Index

369. Carol L. Hamshaw
[Fwd: Daphne Marlatt--TCR Writer-in-residence]
Fri 19 Nov 1999

Carol Hamshaw wrote:

> FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
> The Capilano Review Writer-in-Residence
> Fir 454, 2055 Purcell Way, North Vancouver
> February 2000
> Info: [redacted]
>
> Daphne Marlatt
>
> The Capilano Review's Writer-in-Residence Program
>
> In the first two weeks of February 2000, Daphne Marlatt will be present at Capilano College in North Vancouver as The Capilano Review Writer-in-Residence. Marlatt will be available for one-on-one consultation to members, or anyone wishing to become a member, of The Capilano Press Society (membership is $5). She will also be giving a public reading, in conjunction with the launch of TCR's winter issue.
>
> West Coast poet and novelist Daphne Marlatt's most recent title is Readings from the Labyrinth (NeWest Press, 1998), a collection of essays, letters and journal entries over fifteen years. Her novel, Taken, appeared from House of Anansi in 1996, and her previous novel, Ana historic (originally published by Coach House Press, 1988), was reissued by Anansi in 1997. Lori Saint-Martin and Paul Gagne's translation was published in Quebec as Ana historique (les editions du remue-menage, 1992). Her poetry titles include Salvage (1991), Ghost Works (1993), Touch to my Tongue (1984), and Steveston (1974/84).
>
> She has been writer-in-residence at a number of universities in Canada and has taught English and Women's Studies at Simon Fraser University, and the Universities of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, and Victoria. Most recently > (1998-99), she has taught Creative Writing and Women's Studies at the University of Saskatchewan. One of the founding editors of the bilingual feminist journal Tessera, she has likewise co-edited several other little magazines, as well as two oral histories of communities in and around Vancouver.

>
> Support for this program has been received from The Province of British Columbia, through the BC Gaming Commission, the Humanities Division of Capilano College, and Capilano College.
>
> The Capilano Review is a literary and visual art magazine published at Capilano College by The Capilano Press Society since 1972. The mandate of The Capilano Review is to encourage and publish innovative poetry, fiction, drama, and work in the visual media, in a format consistent with The Review's cross-disciplinary focus. The emphasis is on original rather than critical work. Reviews, interviews, and critiques may be printed from time to time when these enhance the reader's insight into an artist's work, or provide a context which furthers understanding and appreciation.
>
> Media, please call [redacted] for a review copy of TCR.
>
> Carol L. Hamshaw
> Managing Editor
> The Capilano Review
> [redacted]
>
> http://www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR
>
> For submission guidelines, please see
>
> http://www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR/submit.html

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

370. Alan Sondheim
Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
Fri 19 Nov 1999

-

Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konninger

"A man at Auk went on the lake after firewood. On the way round it he saw a woman floating about. Her hair was long. Looking at her for some time, he saw that her little ones were with her. He took one of the children home. When it became dark they went to sleep. It was the child of the L!enAxxidAq, and that night it went through the town picking out people's eyes. Toward morning a certain woman bore a child. In the morning, when she was getting up, this [the L!enAxxidAq's child] came in to her into the house. The small boy had a big belly full of eyes. He had taken out the eyes of all the people. The woman to whom the small boy came had a cane. He kept pointing at her eyes. Then she pushed him away with the cane. When he had done it twice, she pushed it into him. He was all full of eyes. After she had killed him the woman went through the houses. Then she began to dress herself up. She took her child up on her back to start wandering. She said, 'I am going to be the L!enAxxidAq.' When she came down on the beach she kept eating mussels. She put the shells inside of one another. As she walks along she nurses her little child."

(Swanton, Tlin- oing beaut iful movi ng maelst rom perso ab Konninger gjen niefer goin ot danc tr leopold konni ngr kno stat tel fac tinus danc Konn- inger russian ques goloid nijinsky's git Myths and Texts, #94.)

What have we here. We have a MOTHER and an abducted CHILD who eats eyes. A second WOMAN may become the MOTHER after killing the CHILD. A second CHILD, of the woman, completes the transaction, and one must never forget MUSSELS look like EYES, said Doctor Leopold Konninger. Consider this the Devolution of NIKUKO, the beautiful Russian ballet dancer, who continues day and night after night and day to pirouette for him. She flickers in and out, her pirouettes brilliant coiled energy; it is this energy which creates the mutations and transformations that fascinate him. Doctor Leo- pold Konninger imagines Nikuko gathering eyes, bending - stooping! - for mussels; he is enraptured by the twists and deformations of her tutu as she steps into the tidal pools of Swanton enAxxidAq mornig enAxxidAq's dering enAxxidAq Swanton Tlin ab transac pold Konninger flickers pirou- ettes Konninger his imagination, "Did NIKUKO return his eyes?"

("steps gingerly into the pools, bending, stooping! - stooping! - gath- ers sea-mussels, her eyes fixed, she's never dizzy, the slight scent of sea-water")

↑ Index

371. Gerald Schwartz

Re: Rhizome

Fri 19 Nov 1999

Dear Standard:

I'm the author of the review of Laynie Browne's "The Agency of Wind".

Sorry for the inconvenience. I look forward to the next issue.

Thank you.

All Best,

Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

372. ART ELECTRONICS

ROME / TOTAL THEATRE / Intermedial Areas

Fri 19 Nov 1999

ASSESSORATO ALLE POLITICHE CULTURALI
COMUNE DI ROMA
Dipartimento Cultura - Spettacolo

"Total Theatre - Exhibition of the National Centre of Drammaturgia" 1999

Intermedial Areas

From 25 to 28 November 1999 - Teatro Greco, ROME

LECTURES:

Ugo Ronfani (President of the National Association of the Theatre Critics, Director of Hystrio);
Nico Garrone (La Repubblica Newspaper);
Lucio Chiavarelli (Prima Fila Magazine);
Gianna Gelmetti (Sipario Magazine);
Giovanni Antonucci (Historian of Theatre);
Simonetta Lux (La Sapienza University);
Enrica Tonelli Landini (Tuscia University); Bartolomè Ferrando (Valencia University);
Paolo Guzzi (Critic of Theatre of the cultural magazines "Zeta" and "Karenina.it").

PERFORMANCE BY:

- Fabio Mauri (Italy).
- Bartolomè Ferrando (Spain)

VIDEO POETRY AND VIDEO PERFORMANCE

- International Digital VIDEOS "Video Space"

curated by Caterina Davinio e Julien Blaine

EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

- Ascanio Celestini, Compagnia del Montevaso.
- Ugo Ronfani, Compagnia e regia di Walter Manfrè.
- Cesare Milanese, Alfio Petrini.
- Accademia Filarmonica / Burattinimusica.
- Compagnia Idee di Velluto.

VISUAL ART

- Exhibition curated by Giancarlo Canepa.

ORGANIZATION

Coop. La Camera Rossa
Associazione Culturale Il Cerchio Magico
Fondazione Centro Nazionale di Drammaturgia "Teatro Totale".
Direttore artistico: Alfio Petrini.

--
KARENINA.IT
karenina.IT Experimental Web-Zine

<Chosen with care: books & links>
Directed by Caterina Davinio
http://geocities.com/Paris/Lights/7323/kareninarivista.html

Davinio Art Electronics - Archives/Videotheque / Rome / Milan
Art Electronics and Other Writings
http://space.tin.it/arte/cprezi

↑ Index

373. David Knoebel
Announcement: Dream/Fall
Fri 19 Nov 1999

A poetry installation in Shamokin PA

http://home.ptd.net/~clkpoet/dream/dream.html

--
David Knoebel
-cranking out 2-3 words per day, every day, no matter what.

http://www.clickpoetry.com

↑ Index

374. Tony Green
Re: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
Fri 19 Nov 1999

---

an answer to the question, Alan?

Nikuko held Dr Konninger's eyes for a long time, but she was the first to look away. She held his eyes, never returned them, as she went on opening mussels.

Tony

From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Saturday, 20 November 1999 03:00
Subject: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger

"Did NIKUKO return his eyes?"
>
>("steps gingerly into the pools, bending, stooping! - stooping! - gath>ers sea-mussels, her eyes fixed, she's never dizzy, the slight scent of >sea-water")
>
>
>
>_____
>

↑ Index

375. Poetry Project
new on website & next week
Fri 19 Nov 1999

New on the website:

Up-to-date pages and information on the rapidly approaching

ANNUAL NEW YEAR'S DAY MARATHON READING

at the Poetry Project, January 1, 2000

http://www.poetryproject.com/ny2000.html

and at the Tiny Press Center

Jill Stengel's Letter to the Editor

Jennifer Bartlett's Review of Duration Press

and

new mentions of tiny presses

http://www.poetryproject.com/introtp.html

******

Next week

Monday, November 22nd at 8 pm

Eleni Stecopoulos & Erik Sweet

Eleni Stecopoulos's poetry has appeared in Chain, Rampike, Kiosk, and other journals. Her essay on poetics and theory is forthcoming in Open Letter. Erik Sweet is the co-editor of Tool: A Magazine and has had work published in The Hat.

Unfortunately, due to turkey, tofu-turkey & cranberry surpluses, a national holiday has been declared on Thursday, November 25th, so we have been obliged to have no readings on Wednesday, Nov. 24th and Friday, Nov. 25th. In addition, our offices will be closed Thurs & Fri, with all employees hibernating in their resuscitation chambers. However, we will return in full revivified glory the week after with readings by Douglas Goetsch & Jacqueline Waters (Mon., Nov. 29th at 8 pm); Michael Gottlieb & Jen Robinson (Wed., Dec. 1 at 8 pm); and Lydia Lunch & Nicole Blackman (Fri., Dec. 3 at 10:30 pm--yes, _the_ Lydia Lunch!).

*****

The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church, at the corner of 10th St. and 2nd Ave. in New York City. All events, unless otherwise noted, are $7, $4 for students. Wheelchair access to Poetry Project events is possible with assistance and advance notice. Please call [redacted] for more information.

****

If you would like to be removed from this e-mail list, respond to this message with "Please remove me" and we will be sure to do so.

***

Have a very wonderful Thanksgiving, all of you...

**

*

↑ Index

376. Maria L. Zavialov
class
Fri 19 Nov 1999

Suddenly i remembered that I should know about working class a lot. I was thoroughly drilled in marxism and leninism all through many years of school and university back in the 70s in the Soviet Union. Working class, proletariat, is a class which has no share in means of production and has to sell his labor to go on living, it's physical labor they sell, their muscular energy. To be a working class you have to be engaged in the production of goods and foods and work in industry. M.Z.

↑ Index

377. david bromige
re Bromige And the Provinces
Fri 19 Nov 1999

Tom (& listmates), no offense was intended. I think of myself as being in somewhat the situAtion you, Tom, "enjoy," now that it hurts my feet so much to drive the hour and A quarter to sf/bkly. The poetic k'edge available in sonoma county, witha few shining exceptions, is not enough to keep a flea alive. People will not be au courant, and continue to write poems saying "the sheep are on fire!" I dunno why of all persons you, Tom, shd read my post for condescension. Should suppose I cast a blanket upon the boonies to snuff the light of a Tom beckett. Dont you know me better than that? My point was (I think) that not all regionalism is gonna be okay.

David

↑ Index

378. Lawrence Upton
Bob Cobbing etc
Sat 20 Nov 1999

Apologies for cross-posting

Cobbing & Upton - Barbican 19 11 99 a note by Upton

Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upton performed from Domestic Ambient Noise at the Arts Book Fair at The Barbican, London on 19 11 99 (5 pm - 5.15 pm)

The performance was one of a series running throughout the fair called "Book Activation". The contents of books are displayed in front of the audience via a video camera.

The texts used were time goes as bought (Writers Forum 1999 ISBN 0 86162 912 4) and barbacana (Writers Forum 1999 ISBN 0 86162 913 2), two new issues of D.A.N., made for the book fair.

Only one book could be displayed at a time. The plan had been to fight over which book was displayed, Upton promoting time goes as bought and Cobbing promoting barbacana, with the text in camera-view being the one to be performed. Unfortunately, the arrangement of lectern, microphone stands and camera angle did not permit this, so Cobbing controlled both books at the lectern, switching them quite rapidly at times. Upton stood behind him, responding to Cobbing and reading from his own copy of as time goes as bought and from the screen, the latter sometimes showing barbacana.

At one point Cobbing pointed to the book, first here and then there, so that his finger appeared on the screen and both performed what he pointed at.

The performance was well-attended and well-received.

Both old gits perform again Saturday, 20 November 1999 at 3.30.

time goes as bought and barbacana will be performed again, but more briefly. Also to be launched / performed are:

Traces by Peter French (Writers Forum 1999 ISBN 0 86162 972 2)

and two new publications by Bob Cobbing put out by Nicholas Johnson:

kob bok: selected text of bob cobbing (1949-1999) (ISBN 1 901538 27 3) Etruscan books - can't remember the price
&
shrieks & hisses: collected poems volume sixteen (ISBN 1 901538 26 5) Etruscan books £5

available from Peter Riley in UK, Collected Works in Australia and SPD in USA - according to the information in the books

no time yet to pay any attention to them beyond seeing that they are handsome production jobs

L

↑ Index

379. david bromige
Provincialism, regionalism
Sat 20 Nov 1999

Pete Spence (& listmates), it's difficult to see how Pete's pence were well spent labeling my appellation "sunday painters" (for writers who will not learn their history) as "pedantry." A pedant, surely, even in Pete's pants, is one who insists on UNnecessary studies. I am really surprised (though shouldn't be : I think too well of people) how quickly those who live in the boonies (outbeck, I 'speck, in Pete's pens) bristle up at the plain truth....Why take it personally? I simply commented on a backwardness of ambience. I wouldnt know whether it applied to Pete's case until I saw some of his poetry. In Tom Beckett's case, what was more puzzling was that he only got minatory with me AFTER agreeing that it's tough to write in Dodge, which was my basic plaint.

Sometimes I get the feeling that I am not read carefully even on this List, which I had hoped was a better place to look for such care, than where I live here in wine-hog heaven. Look at my post again to see it is no individual I target, but a backward condition of endeavor. From which wish who may can exempt himself...in Tom's case, on the evidence; in Pete's case, for Pete's sake, presumably through his practice, soon to be known to us city-slickers of the net, one trusts (or is already, and I, the provincial in this respect). I expect the X=Spence equation resolved quickly, so that the one impression I have of his writerly powers, can extend beyond a feeble eye-pun. David

↑ Index

380. david bromige
re name thAt quote
Sat 20 Nov 1999

> Hello Poetics,
> Another one of my damnable queries. Does anyone recognize the author/source of the following?
>
> "A dominant ideological formation is constituted by a relatively coherent set of 'discourses' of values, representations and beliefs which, realised in certain material apparatuses and related to the structures of material production, so reflect the experiential relations of individual subjects to their social conditions as to guarantee those misperceptions of the 'real' which contribute to the reproduction of the dominant social relations" (54).
>
> I dont know, but it is obviously a satirical jab at contemporary critical jargon.

That's right, George....shouldn't it read "apparati"? And if there are to be scare quotes around "discourses" and "real," why not around "realised," "reflect" and "relations" ? So, already we know its author is far from thorough, and no norte americano (or do Canadians drop the z when they realize something, as their British cousins do?)

David

↑ Index

381. Brendan Lorber
LUNGFULL!8: The Stakes are Big...
Sat 20 Nov 1999

. . .& The Mistakes are Bigger. Here at LUNGFULL! Magazine, where the name goes on before the quality goes in, we are delighted to announce the release of issue number eight. To mark this occasion it's

THE LUNGFULL MAGAZINE RELEASE PARTY & GALA READING SPECTACULAR

to which YOU are now invited.

THURSDAY 2 DECEMBER 1999
at 8:30pm SHARP!
(forgive the yelling, but I get very enthusiastic about times & dates)
at SEGUE SPACE
(& about places)
303 east 8th Street between Avenues B&C
Admission? I admit nothing! ADMISSION IS FREE Soothing refreshments & laminated Magazines will be served

Hop a cheap flight to New York City, then take the F Train to 2nd Avenue or the 6 to Astor Place or the N/R to 8th Street & then follow the crowds of literati & their fans.

Appearing will be:
Eileen Myles
Bill Kushner
Sparrow
Betsy Andrews
Donna Cartelli
Jen Robinson
Tom Savage
Lytle Shaw
Jordan Davis
Andrew Epstein
Betsy Fagin
Joanna Fuhrman
Noelle Kocot
Brendan Lorber
Mike Topp

Susan Maurer
& others

In the issue itself? Indran Amirthanayagam, Betsy Andrews, Michael Basinski, Bill Berkson, Elisa Biagini, Donna Cartelli, Jeff Conant, Jordan Davis, Buck Downs, Andrew Epstein, Brett Evans, Betsy Fagin, Joanna Fuhrman Ken Hunt, Noelle Kocot, Tuli Kupferberg, Richard Kostelanetz, Bill Kushner, Brendan Lorber, Susan Marshall, Chris McCreary, Edward Mycue, Thomas Nousias, Mark Pawlak, Richard Martin, Susan Maurer, Jen Robinson, Tom Savage, Eileen Myles, Hoa Nguyen, Lytle Shaw, Julie Sloane, Ken Raines, Julie Reid, Sparrow, Mike Topp

PLUS Letters & Poems to the Editor from people claiming to be: Jewel, Albert DeSilver, Chris McCreary, Allen Bramhall, Jeff Nelson, Ahimsa Timoteo Bodhrán & Eddie Berrigan. Also a manifesto from the editor, a rejection letter to the editor & an attempted coup from Asheville, North Carolina.

For more information call us at LUNGFULL! World Headquarters deep within a secret volcano in Central Park [redacted] or give [redacted] a whirl

As always I remain the humble busboy of your heart,
Brendan Lorber
Editor & Publisher
LUNGFULL! Magazine

↑ Index

382. Jerrold Shiroma
New Small Press Publications List
Sat 20 Nov 1999

This weeks Small Press Publications List is now online @ Duration Press.

http://www.durationpress.com/announce/announcements.html

Publishers wishing to have their new / recent publications included in the next listing (Dec 3rd deadline), should send all information (titles, authors, prices, contact information, etc.) to [redacted]

We've been doing this for 2 months, & would like to thank all the publishers who have contributed to this project.

↑ Index

383. Pierre Joris
Re: Paul Bowles
Sat 20 Nov 1999

Here is a more detailed obit for Paul Bowles, from yesterday's Manchester Guardian:

Paul Bowles Obituary

Gary Pulsifer
Friday November 19, 1999
The Guardian

Much-travelled American writer and composer who made his home in Morocco, the setting for his best-known novel, The Sheltering Sky, Paul Bowles, who has died aged 88, found inspiration from a long association with Morocco and her peoples. His semi-autobiographical novel, The Sheltering Sky, filmed in 1990 by Bertolucci, was one of the seminal novels of mid-20th century American fiction, while his musical compositions, lighter in mood, were critical and commercial successes on Broadway.

It was Gertrude Stein who first suggested that "Freddy" Bowles should visit Morocco. "You don't want to go to Ville Franche. Everybody's there. And St Jean-de-Luz is empty and with an awful climate. The place you should go is Tangier. Alice and I've spent three summers there, and it's fine." In 1931, Bowles and his mentor, the American composer Aaron Copland, took a villa overlooking the Strait of Gibraltar, but it was not until 1947 that Bowles and his wife Jane settled permanently in Morocco.

Paul Bowles was born on Long Island. Family legend had it that his father Claude, a successful dentist, placed his six-week-old only child in a basket before an open window during a snowstorm. Certain death was avoided by the discovery of the naked infant by his maternal grandmother. In any event, Bowles senior was a strict disciplinarian: the young Bowles was forced at mealtimes to chew each mouthful of food at least 40 times, following the practice of Horace Fletcher, the "Moses of Mastication". Bowles's mother Rena, on the other hand, read him works by Nathaniel Hawthorne and Edgar Allan Poe as bedtime stories.

Bowles cited Poe as a particular influence, even choosing to attend the university of Virginia in 1927, as this had been Poe's college. Although Bowles made the dean's list during his first term, he was not cut out for university life in a sleepy southern town and, without a word to his family, he set sail for France, travelling on an old Dutch steamer. In Paris he worked briefly as a switchboard operator at the Herald Tribune but soon returned to New York, taking a job at Dutton's Bookshop on Fifth Avenue.

Already Bowles's poetry was appearing in the Paris-based surrealist magazine, transition, alongside the work of André Breton, James Joyce and Gertrude Stein. He began studying composition with Copland and guest-edited one issue of his university's magazine, soliciting a contribution from Stein. In 1931, when Bowles returned to Paris, he visited the legendary American author and art collector at her home at 27 Rue de Fleurs. "I was sure from your letters that you were an elderly gentleman of at least 75," said Stein. "A highly eccentric elderly gentleman," added her companion Alice B Toklas.

Through Stein's circle, in the space of two weeks Bowles met Jean Cocteau, Ezra Pound, Virgil Thompson, Pavel Tchelitchew and André Gide, before going with Copland to Berlin. There, Bowles came into contact with Stephen Spender, Christopher Isherwood and Jean Ross, Isherwood's model for Sally Bowles in Goodbye to Berlin.

Back in Paris, Bowles took a studio in the same building as Virgil Thompson, who found him "a dazzling blond. We became very good friends... He started playing me his music as we got acquainted. It was absolutely charming, sweet, school of Ravel." Bowles was a pupil of Nadia Boulanger in Paris for some months, but his primary musical training was under Copland and Thompson.

The following year, Bowles trekked across the Sahara by camel. He then rented a house in Tangier, using it as a studio for piano composition. (Bowles shared the house with Djuna Barnes, who began writing Nightwood here.) His Sonata for Oboe and Clarinet, inspired by a Kurt Schwitters poem, was heard at the Aeolian Hall in London, while his Sonatina for Piano had been performed in New York.

By 1935 he had met the choreographer George Balanchine, who commissioned Bowles to compose Yankee Clipper for his dance company. Bowles's increasing reputation as a composer led to lucrative work on Broadway and he would go on to compose the music for a number of Broadway productions, including Lillian Hellman's Watch on the Rhine; the stage version of South Pacific; Jacobowsky and the Colonel, directed by Elia Kazan; and John Ford's Jacobean tragedy 'Tis Pity She's a Whore. He wrote the incidental music for Tennessee Williams's plays The Glass Menagerie, The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore, Sweet Bird of Youth and Summer and Smoke; while Williams got him a job as screenwriter on Visconti's film Senso (although the Italian director had Williams rewrite Bowles's sex scenes).

Altogether, Bowles created 150 original musical compositions. In 1943 his zarzuela The Wind Remains, based on a surrealist tragicomedy by Lorca, received its premiere at MOMA in New York, with choreography by Merce Cunningham and Leonard Bernstein conducting. Bowles also composed the music for a ballet based on Verlaine's poem Colloque Sentimental with sets by Salvador Dali. Commented Newsweek: "Paul Bowles's beautiful score was wrecked by Dali's usual outlandish weirdness."

It was in 1937 that Bowles met the Jewish lesbian writer Jane Auer, at a party in Harlem. Jane recalled: "He wrote music and was mysterious and sinister. The first time I saw him I said, he's my enemy." Nevertheless, Paul and Jane and another couple travelled by bus to Mexico; Bowles went on to Guatemala. (Before the trip, Bowles had printed 15,000 stickers bearing the legend "Death to Trotsky" which he distributed throughout Mexico, where the exile was living.)

On February 21 1938, Paul and Jane were married in a Dutch Reform Church in New York, on the eve of Jane's 21st birthday. They honeymooned in Central America, travelling to Panama on a Japanese freighter with two steamer trunks, 18 large valises and a gramophone - a parrot was acquired en route.

Their honeymoon continued in Costa Rica, where they stayed at a cattle ranch, before they set sail to France on a ship filled with German Nazi sympathisers. So began the years of travel for the Bowleses, sometimes together, often apart. That autumn found the couple back in New York at the Chelsea Hotel. They joined the Communist party; later, when Paul tried to leave, the organisation informed him he could only be expelled. By 1941, they were living in Brooklyn with WH Auden, Peter Pears and Benjamin Britten; Britten kept his piano in the living room while Paul practised on his in the cellar. Bowles was awarded a $2500 Guggenheim fellowship to compose his opera Yerma, and Virgil Thompson offered him a job as assistant music critic on the New York Herald Tribune, a position he held for four years.

Bowles was led back to Morocco in 1947 by a vivid dream of Tangier. In the wake of the war, Tangier was an "international zone" governed by seven Western powers, and the city was notorious for its lax morals and louche lifestyle. The Bowleses' marriage, however, was curious even by the standards of jaded Tangerines. Jane established a number of affairs with women friends, most notably with Cherifa, an 18-year-old grain-seller. Many people (her husband included) saw this illiterate peasant woman as a malign influence. Bowles interested himself in a number of young Moroccan men, whose oral fiction he went on to translate from Maghrebi and classical Arabic. For one young Moroccan protegé, Ahmed Yacoubi, he arranged exhibitions of his paintings.

Eventually the Bowleses took separate apartments in a building near the American consulate, leading semi-independent lives but usually meeting for dinner. While Paul found creative inspiration in his Moorish surroundings, for Jane, cut off from her American roots, Morocco became a cultural wasteland. She did not complete any new work while in Morocco; indeed her output was limited to a couple of highly praised novels, one play and one or two other writings.

Instead, she threw her sparkling personality into a Tangier social scene orchestrated by the Hon David Herbert. Too many evenings spent drinking at the Parade Bar, mixed with a careless use of prescribed medicines, resulted in a stroke in 1956; she was eventually confined to a nursing home in Malaga, where she died in 1973. After Jane's death, Paul's output was to dwindle. "Her death was a terrible ordeal, as it was half of myself that I lost. I no longer wanted to do anything at all."

Paul Bowles became interested in writing fiction when he went over the manuscript of Jane's novel Two Serious Ladies prior to its US publication. The plot of his most celebrated novel, The Sheltering Sky, came to him while on a bus in New York. It was published in 1949 by New Directions and became an immediate bestseller. (It was originally commissioned by Doubleday, who then turned it down as "not a novel".)

Bowles described the novel to his American publisher James Laughlin as "an adventure story in which the adventures take place on two planes simultaneously; in the actual desert, and in the inner desert of the spirit... The occasional oasis provides relief from the natural desert, but the sexual adventures fail to provide relief." Many readers, including Jane, saw the central characters of Port and his wife Kit as based on the Bowleses themselves.

The following year, a short-story collection by Bowles appeared under the title The Delicate Prey (US) and A Little Stone (UK). The British edition, published by John Lehmann, was notable for its omission of two stories, Pages from Cold Point, later described by Norman Mailer as "a seduction of father by a son and one of the best stories written by anyone", and A Distant Episode, which climaxes in a chilling castration. Tennessee Williams told Bowles that the latter was "a wonderful story but if you publish it you're mad. Everyone is going to think you are some sort of horrible monster." Cyril Connolly and Somerset Maugham advised Lehmann not to include either story on the grounds that they would not be passed by the censor.

Bowles's next novel, Let It Come Down, charts the disintegration of Nelson Dyer, a bank clerk from New York who has settled in Tangier. Where The Sheltering Sky focused on the Saharan desert, Let It Come Down centred on the Moroccan capital and the corruption of life under the international zone. Bowles had taken majoun, a jam made from cannabis, to write Port's death scene in The Sheltering Sky and in his second novel he has Dyer descend into Spanish Morocco and a madness induced in part by a "kif" haze.

The Spider's House, set in the medieval city of Fez, is the most overtly political of Bowles's novels. It examines the relationship between Amar, a 15-year-old Moroccan boy, and three foreigners, an American writer (with overtones of Bowles), a rich English painter and an American divorcee. Bowles used the novel, which opens in 1954 during the holy month of Ramadan, to explore the shifting relationship between the colonial power of the French and the rising tide of Moroccan nationalism. Up Above the World, his final novel, concerns the doomed trajectory of an American couple in an unnamed Central American country. Bowles compared it to the writings of Graham Greene and Gide, calling it "light" entertainment, which it is not.

He went on to publish several short-story collections, including A Hundred Camels in the Courtyard, set in Morocco and with an underlying theme of kif smoking. Other works include the travel writing of Their Heads Are Green and Their Hands Are Blue; Points in Time, a journey through the Moroccan centuries; and an enigmatic autobiography, Without Stopping, dubbed "Without Telling" by William Burroughs. A novella, Too Far From Home, set in Mali, was well received on publication in 1994.

In later years, when his own creative output had diminished, Bowles translated a number of Moroccan oral storytellers including Mohammed Mrabet, Mohamed Choukri, Abdeslam Boulaich and Larbi Layachi. Some western critics accused Bowles of writing these tales himself, an accusation he always strongly denied. One or two of these storytellers, with an exaggerated sense of the sales potential of their books, would later allege that Bowles was pocketing their royalties. In fact, Bowles was always a soft touch when it came to his close Moroccan male friends - although less so to others on occasion.

Other translations included Sartre's play Huis Clos (Bowles came up with the English title, No Exit); The Oblivion Seekers, by Isabelle Eberhardt; and several novels by the Guatemalan writer Rodrigo Rey Rosa.

Decades earlier, Bowles was the recipient of a Rockefeller grant to record Moroccan folk music; the tapes are in the Library of Congress in Washington. Bowles was to travel some 25,000 miles around his adopted country, making 250 recordings of a diverse range of local music.

Paul Bowles was an intensely private man, possessed of a dry New England sense of humour and a capacity for friendship which was at odds with his public persona as a detached, often aloof, observer. Much of late 20th-century human behaviour frankly baffled him.

Through his books he created a vision of Morocco uniquely his own. In old age he continued to live in the same run-down Tangier apartment block, the Immeuble Itesa, receiving visitors and fans from around the world (and the world came to Bowles) with little complaint. Having lived for many years without a telephone, his last concession to technical intrusion was the installation of a fax machine, the number of which was made available to a select group of intimates. Having travelled little in later years, he flew to Paris for the opening of The Sheltering Sky and returned again for a concert of his music, lunching with President Mitterrand at the Elysée palace.

Paul Frederick Bowles, writer and composer, born December 30 1910; died November 18 1999

© Copyright Guardian Media Group plc. 1999

_____ Pierre Joris
The postmodern is the condition of those 6 Madison Place things not equal to themselves, the wan- Albany NY 12202 dering or nomadic null set (0={x:x not-equal x}). Tel: [redacted] Fax: [redacted]
Alan Sondheim Email: [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]> Url:
<http://www.albany.edu/~joris>

_____ _

> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

384. David Baratier
Re: Business, class, access
Sun 21 Nov 1999

There are a few things to bring out for Joe's post. Sure there are class distinctions, and Kathy makes a good point with how "the homeless, the poor and elderly, the rural poor, the working poor are all examples of invisible classes." which seems to create part of the problem in differentiation. While this is information, where to go with it from here, what to bring forth?

For me, its about victimization and restigmatization of individuals. When a recent stat suggests that the poverty of women who are single parents, even if they lived and combined income with the child's father, in two thirds of the cases would still be below the poverty line, unchanged, the question becomes one of marketing. In the duration of flipping the societal coin of answer towards one or the other issue, the solution is unfounded and yet is marketed as one.

Literacy was always bound up in what people want and now that they have been told they can have what they want, at any time, they want it. The wanting is the hardest part. And yet, apparently editors, through their marketing methods, reinforce this socio-economic restigmatization. The question becomes one of method, as Stephen says:

The rhetoric of setting apart also involves that sense of "sacrifice" meaning "to make sacred" - "sacred - to set apart in honor of".

The way poetry titles are mentioned, for example, Lesbian & Gay, Latino, Native-American etc. Is this done with honorable intent? Or is it necessary for publishers to categorize a writer as a method to move product? It seems the second or else the unthought repetition of what everyone else is doing. Is there some other effective way, without labeling, to get things out there? I think there is and marketed Will Alexander's book as a poetry title. Nothing more. No mention of class, race, photos and so on. Unfortunately division implies opposition to the thing divided. The quote I brought forth was intended to deal with Will not Erica Hunt, which is a clarity mistake on my part. One of the ways Alexander's pages complicates and interrogates the notion of "black identity;" is by rendering it neuter, a null set, unless a publisher mentions race as a selling point. The references contained within the book might give a hint, but no solid backing to an assertion. One might assume more readily, for example, he is a scientist from the subject material. As for essentializing the Mullen essay, I doubt it, it is only 3 pages, and almost a fourth appeared in the last quote, unless this has appeared somewhere else, not mentioned in the Booglite issue. The essay itself is essentialized by the length perhaps. Questioning the criteria of cannonization is part of the evaluation, which as mentioned, Aldon does in Black Chant, gives plenty to discuss, but what about a further questioning of publishers' individual marketing methods beyond anthologies? Are these concepts transferrable? Where does the differentiation lie?

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

385. Katherine Lederer
Double Happiness NYC - Upcoming
Sun 21 Nov 1999

Segue @ Double Happiness
DECEMBER, JANUARY 1999-2000 Readings
Saturdays from 4:00 to 6:00 pm.
Double Happiness is located at 173 Mott Street,
just south of Broome in China Town.
A 4$ contribution goes to the readers.

The coordinator for this series is Charles Borkhuis. Continuing support of this series is provided by the Segue Foundation. Funding is made possible by support from the Literature Program of the New York State Council on the Arts.

DECEMBER 4: PAUL HOOVER, ANN LAUTERBACH Paul Hoover's most recent poetry collections are Totem and Shadow: New & Selected Poems (Talisman House) and Viridian (University of Georgia Press). He is also editor of the anthology Postmodern American Poetry (W.W. Norton) and the literary magazine New American Writing. Ann Lauterbach's five collections of poetry include (Penguin Books): On A Stair, And for Example, and Clamor. She is a recipient of a 1993 Mac Arthur Fellowship.

DECEMBER 11: TIM DAVIS, MICHAEL GIZZI Tim Davis has published poems in Fruit of the Jews, Rectumry, Agida, Temple Breath, Half-a-Crumb Monthly, and Mouthful of Burrs, and has critical work forthcoming in Tabula Moustache and Too Wit. His book Dailies, might be out by the time he reads here, but if not, he'll be selling signed sandwiches and fingerprinted cans of Lemon Pledge. Michael Gizzi's most recent books are No Both (Hard Press/The Figures, 1997) and Too Much Johnson (The Figures, 1999). In Gizzi's case, hearing is close to believing.

DECEMBER 18: ED ROBERSON, GARRETT KALLEBERG Ed Roberson is the author of six volumes of poetry, one of which, Voices Cast Out To Talk In, was the 1995 winner of the Iowa Poetry Prize; another, Atmosphere Conditions (Sun & Moon) was a 1998 National Poetry Series Winner. Roberson is also a recipient of the Lila Wallace-Reader's Digest Writers Award. Garrett Kalleberg is the author of Limbic Odes. His poetry and criticism have appeared in Sulfur, American Letters & Commentary, Mandorla, First Intensity, Denver Quarterly and elsewhere. He edits and publishes The Transcendental Friend and Immanent Auto from Brooklyn, NY.

DECEMBER 25 & JANUARY 1: HOLIDAY WEEKENDS -- NO READINGS -- HAPPY 2000!

JANUARY 8: EILEEN MYLES, CYNTHIA HOGUE Eileen Myles is a midtown poet. She's written thousands of poets since 1974 when she arrived in NY. Her latest book of poems, School of Fish won her a Lambda Book Award. Cynthia Hogue's third collection of poetry, The Never Wife, is just out from Mammoth Press. She is completing a new ms. entitled The Incognito Body, and co-editing an anthology of critical essays on innovative women's writing. She directs the Stadler Center for Poetry at Bucknell University, where she teaches English.

JANUARY 15: LEE BREUER, HEATHER FULLER Lee Breuer, writer, director, and founding member of Mabou Mines, is the recipient of several Obies and a Mac Arthur Award. His plays include: The Shaggy Dog Animation, Hajj, Prelude to Death in Venice, The Warrior Ant, Gospel at Colonus, and Epidog. Heather Fuller is the author of perhaps this is a rescue fantasy (Edge Books, 1997) and C Ration Dog & Pony (Like Books, 1999) and edits poetry and book reviews for The Washington Review.

JANUARY 22: MARK WALLACE, BUCK DOWNS Mark Wallace is the author of 10 books and chapbooks of poetry, including Nothing Happened and Besides I Wasn't There (Edge Books) and Sonnets of a Penny-a-Liner (Buck Downs Books). His Temporary Worker Rides a Subway won the New American Poetry Award and is forthcoming from Sun and Moon. He lives in Washington, DC. Buck Downs was born in Ellisville, Mississippi and now lives in Washington, DC, where he is a Senior Editor for Columbia Books, Inc. His first collection of poems, marijuana softdrink, was published by Edge Books in 1998.

JANUARY 29: KRISTIN PREVALLET, CYDNEY CHADWICK, MICHELLE MURPHY Kristin Prevallet's chapbook Selections from the Parasite Poems was recently published by Barque Press. Her essays and poems have appeared in Jacket, Sulfur, Boxkite, Object, and Torque. She recently edited and wrote an introduction for a selection of ballads and collages by the poet Helen Adam. Cydney Chadwick is the author of seven books and chapbooks. Her writing has been translated into French, Russian, Spanish and Portuguese. She has been the director of Avec publications since 1988. Michelle Murphy's book of prose poems, Jackknife & Light (Avec Books) was a recent finalist in the Pen/West Literary Awards. Murphy's work has been translated in numerous US journals as well as in Russia and Japan.

↑ Index

386. Katherine Lederer
Duration Press address?
Sun 21 Nov 1999

Looking for Duration Press postal address.

Thanks,
Katy

↑ Index

387. Ron Silliman
Mac Low wins the Tanning!
Mon 22 Nov 1999

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette had this in yesterday's paper:

The country's biggest cash award for poetry, the $100,000 Tanning Prize, was pocketed by Jackson MacLow earlier this month.

MacLow, 77, has written 26 books, the most recent, "Barnesbook," in 1995. He's also a painter and performance artist.

Like Creeley and the Bollingen recently -- it is so very rare that one of this awards organizations gets it right that it nearly takes the top of your head off when it happens. But the Tanning folks, whomever they may be, have gotten this one right. Even if the Post-Gazette doesn't recognize the space between Mac and Low.

Congratulations to Jackson for whom such honors are only a few decades overdue!

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

388. rebecca wolff
fence errata
Mon 22 Nov 1999

Please note that Martine Bellen's poem "Meditations on Falling Past" in Fence #4 is not as it should be.

The poem will be reprinted in its correct entirety in our next issue. Apologies to Ms. Bellen and readers.

Thanks,

The Editors

↑ Index

389. miekal and e u y
Mon 22 Nov 1999

E U Y

by Miekal And

xexoxial editions west lima wi 1986

_____

a zaumist biography of Alexsei Kruchenykh

"Zaumniks all of us!"
-kruchenykh

_____

this book was written & designed by Miekal And Christmas 1985 & is in actuality the first book issued by XEXOXIAL EDITIONS (previously known as Xerox Sutra Editions until we received a threat from Xerox Corp).
any word contained herein may be freely used in conjunction with any language. the author holds no rights over speech.

for Liz Was as if she will dance again & again

UFT

---

poried

---

amdin gard

---

podegy

---

lapurian thocle

---

scow 1914

---

escapscoc

"tendrae fothex?

---

rasaway rabadka

---

ercum plonib

---

nex movelmen

---

nar trand

---

odah vomo

---

loke muziqer

---

voweledge

---

katawt

---

nabe awu

---

futuristy!

---

haxtarecillian

---

gurn coar

---

666 xenokings

---

therbled

---

teeve platch

---

kergognobeme

---

mimeox

---

in yast a gersian

---

utmustut

---

plale

---

ir stoff exish

& nykh & wogan

---

pook trayve

---

pixcha yassen

---

i o kneme

---

phochavaph

---

oquo nervant

---

ewery odle ut

---

aititrapio

---

iorpeg

K's afferent

---

omenbish

---

chch?

---

aram kruchenykh

---

i wend garve

---

bruder oasten

publishist

gam tar posen

BUKE

cassetrophy

kaj=vo=dithna

antibravag

EUY eta ank

muxpornesian

ethnoaltoxable

(haverjumpt) toidjchieve

slavsolve

warsiverous

pleint futocog

---

majofloding

---

svyflab

---

be bell bought

---

tagentry

---

pinpaunt

"explodity"

---

bitlytloffov

---

4 swar rev

---

omo axa vekar

---

interscript

---

pancile

---

numicicle

---

bra abra saburd

---

lilthastic

---

tablobature

maychoral

on endarcky

Razdisputin

a-dialbuttante

zamiscalypse

neuy Russe

laughtering

Kruchenykh's

exvour

stabbed

offov

ichi tast

ernt

rey du mane

nezal pooshta

---

avarlushingnas

---

brutmetic

↑ Index

390. Poetics List
NAROPA UNIVERSITY WEB-BASED CLASSES / Seltz
Mon 22 Nov 1999

I was asked to forward this message to the list. Chris

Date: Fri, Nov 19, 1999 12:55 PM -0700
From: Colleen Seltz <[redacted]>

ANNOUNCING NAROPA UNIVERSITY WEB-BASED CLASSES FOR SPRING SEMESTER

Experience Naropa=85from a distance. We are pleased to announce that registration is now open for our Spring Semester (which runs from January 18th to May 8th) web-based courses. A large selection of classes is available from the heart of our academic curriculum in the areas of Writing and Poetics, Environmental Leadership, Gerontology, Tibetan Language, Buddhism, Meditation, Religion and Psychology.

Naropa University is a private, non-sectarian, fully accredited liberal arts college in Boulder, Colorado, characterized by a Buddhist inspired heritage and an unique contemplative approach to education.

Naropa's Department of Writing and Poetics, inaugurated as the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics, 25 years ago by Allen Ginsburg and Anne Waldman, offers accredited BA and MFA degrees and hosts the internationally known Summer Writing Program each year.

In Spring 2000 Naropa will be offering 7 Writing classes from the Department of Writing and Poetics curriculum, via the World Wide Web using the latest Internet technology. All classes are offered for academic credit and are available to non-degree students. Credits earned online may be applied to the degree program, upon acceptance and enrollment in the on-campus program, or transferred to other colleges in the same manner as any college credit. Please share this information with those that may be interested. For further information please visit our distance web site at http://ecampus.naropa.edu/.

For complete course information please select the "Course Schedule" option on the horizontal toolbar. The classes in Writing for Spring Semester and the faculty are:

Writer's Craft - Bill Scheffel
The Art of The Essay: Exploring Creative Non-Fiction - Lee Christopher Rebel Angels - Lee Christopher
Poetry Workshop: Great Companions - Lisa Jarnot
Literature Seminar: The Feeling Tone - Bobbie Louise Hawkins
Prose Workshop: Sculpting Prose -T. Burke, Jr.
Dramatic Measures: The Craft of Writing for Stage and Screen - T. Burke, Jr.

Thank you. Feel free to contact us at [redacted] should you have questions or comments.

Sincerely,

The Naropa Online Team

Dear Chris,

A few months ago you generously offered to post an announcement to your list regarding Naropa's web-based writing classes. I am hoping that you could possibly post this follow up announcement for our Spring classes. Also Deena Wade our Communcations Director and also a student in our Writing Program, would like to join the list. How does she do this? Her email address is [redacted]. Please email me if there is a problem with posting this. And thanks so much in advance for doing this. I think that it may be of interest to people. I am sending the announcement in the body of this email and also as an attachment.

Thank you and Warm Regards,

Colleen Seltz
Coordinator of Naropa Online

ANNOUNCING NAROPA UNIVERSITY WEB-BASED CLASSES FOR SPRING SEMESTER

Experience Naropa…from a distance. We are pleased to announce that registration is now open for our Spring Semester (which runs from January 18th to May 8th) web-based courses. A large selection of classes is available from the heart of our academic curriculum in the areas of Writing and Poetics, Environmental Leadership, Gerontology, Tibetan Language, Buddhism, Meditation, Religion and Psychology.

Naropa University is a private, non-sectarian, fully accredited liberal arts college in Boulder, Colorado, characterized by a Buddhist inspired heritage and an unique contemplative approach to education.

Naropa's Department of Writing and Poetics, inaugurated as the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics, 25 years ago by Allen Ginsburg and Anne Waldman, offers accredited BA and MFA degrees and hosts the internationally known Summer Writing Program each year.

In Spring 2000 Naropa will be offering 7 Writing classes from the Department of Writing and Poetics curriculum, via the World Wide Web using the latest Internet technology. All classes are offered for academic credit and are available to non-degree students. Credits earned online may be applied to the degree program, upon acceptance and enrollment in the on-campus program, or transferred to other colleges in the same manner as any college credit. Please share this information with those that may be interested. For further information please visit our distance web site at http://ecampus.naropa.edu/. For complete course information please select the "Course Schedule" option on the horizontal toolbar. The classes in Writing for Spring Semester and the faculty are:

Writer's Craft - Bill Scheffel
The Art of The Essay: Exploring Creative Non-Fiction - Lee Christopher
Rebel Angels - Lee Christopher
Poetry Workshop: Great Companions - Lisa Jarnot
Literature Seminar: The Feeling Tone - Bobbie Louise Hawkins
Prose Workshop: Sculpting Prose -T. Burke, Jr.
Dramatic Measures: The Craft of Writing for Stage and Screen - T. Burke, Jr.

Thank you. Feel free to contact us at [redacted] should you have questions or comments.

Sincerely,

The Naropa Online Team

↑ Index

391. Poetics List

Amy Holman / Fouhy

Mon 22 Nov 1999

The following message came to the administrative account.

From the www site indicated: "Mt. Kisco, NY: The Creative Arts Cafe at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts will feature poet Amy Holman on Monday, November 22, at 7:30 PM. Amy Holman recently read segments of her work in October at NWCA¹s Writers¹ Resource Symposium which she helped organize with Cindy Beer-Fouhy, Director of Literary Arts. Ms Holman was invited to return as a feature for the Café¹s Poetry Series. A reception and open mike will follow."

Chris

Date: Sat, Nov 20, 1999 3:07 AM -0500
From: George Fouhy <[redacted]>

This web site gives all the information about Amy Holman's reading http://www.bestweb.net/~cindyf/poetry_2000.htm

↑ Index

392. Poetics List
poetry web site / Fouhy
Mon 22 Nov 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

Date: Mon, Nov 22, 1999 12:48 AM -0500
From: George Fouhy <[redacted]>

I just developed a web site for the poetry series. Let me know what you think. Update will include poetry and writers workshop links.... See you Monday! Cindy

http://www.bestweb.net/~cindyf/poetry_2000.htm

↑ Index

393. Charles Bernstein
Jackson Mac Low / Tanning Prize
Mon 22 Nov 1999

Jackson Mac Low Wins 1999 Tanning Prize

$100,000 for Mastery in the Art of Poetry

New York, November 3, 1999--The Academy of American Poets today announced that Jackson Mac Low has been selected as the recipient of the 1999 Tanning Prize. The $100,000 award recognizes outstanding and proven mastery in the art of poetry. The judges for this year's Tanning Prize were Frank Bidart, Robert Creeley, Sharon Olds, Marjorie Perloff, and John Yau.

Jury chair Robert Creeley writes of Mr. Mac Low's poetry:

"Jackson Mac Low is a poet of great heart and abiding faith. His poetry has long been recognized as the most defining of American experimentalism, both with respect to text and to performance. It is the genius of his art to make poetry again enactment, to make its materials—words and syntax, and all the human echoes each must carry—a resonating, perceptive pattern reaching far beyond the enclosure of imagined subjects or intent. Patient, enduring, selfless, he has made substance of our language in ways that reveal its own initiating authority, proving its sounds a song, its progress a transforming revelation.

Commenting on the jury process of this year's Tanning Prize, Creeley reports,

The poets our jury considered were a significant range from all character of background and practice, professional commitment and cultural circumstance. It is the great virtue of our country's poetry that it is plural, poetries, rather than an abiding, singular hierarchy or one settled condition of practice. In awarding the prize to Jackson Mac Low, we sought to honor not only a great master of the art in its most inventive and resourceful character, but to recall also that American poetry itself defines such a tradition as he exemplifies, fosters insistently the experimental, seeks always to expand the parameters of its activity and relationships.

Jackson Mac Low was born in Chicago in 1922. He is a poet and composer and a writer of performance pieces, essays, plays, and radio works. He is also a painter and multimedia performance artist (often with his wife, Anne Tardos). Author of twenty-six books, his works have been published in many anthologies and periodicals and read publicly, exhibited, performed, and broadcast in North America, Europe, and New Zealand. Mac Low's recent publications include the books Bloomsday (1984), French Sonnets (1984, second ed. 1989), The Virginia Woolf Poems (1985), Eight Drawing-Asymmetries (1985), Representative Works: 1938-1985 (1986), Words and Ends from Ez (1989), Twenties: 100 Poems (1991), Pieces o' Six: Thirty-Three Poems in Prose (1992), 42 Merzgedichte in Memoriam Kurt Schwitters (1994), and Barnesbook (1995) and the compact disc (with Anne Tardos and seven instrumentalists) Open Secrets (1993). Mac Low has taught at many schools, notably the Naropa Institute, Schule für Dichtung in Vienna, Bard College, and Brown University. His previous awards include fellowships and grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, CAPS (New York State), PEN, the Guggenheim Foundation and the New York Foundations for the Arts.

The Tanning Prize was established in August 1994 by a gift of $2 million to the Academy from the painter Dorothea Tanning. The previous recipients of the award are W. S. Merwin, James Tate, Adrienne Rich, and A.R. Ammons.

↑ Index

394. Hoa Nguyen
Skanky announcement: Possum #3
Mon 22 Nov 1999

The 3rd issue of Skanky Possum is now available for only $5 (US). With individually painted possum covers!!

Featuring poems by Kenward Elmslie, Daniel Kane, Chad Kenward, Diane Wald, Jack Collum, Linh Dinh, Laura Joy Lustig, Jen Hofer, Philip Trussell, Betsy Andrews, Eric P. Elshtain, Lacy L. Shutz, Susan Maurer, Darcy Nuffer, C.W. Swets, Roger Snell, Dale Smith, Randy Prus, Sarah Menefee, Howard McCord, Kevin Larimer, Patrick Pritchett, Anselm Hollo, Brendan Lorber, Carl Thayler, Norma Cole, Kent Johnson, and Tom Clark.

Also "Buffalo '99", an inquiring essay by Kent Johnson contemplating the "reorganization" of the Buffalo Poetics List.

For orders please contact Small Press Distribution at http://www.spdbooks.org/, or call SPD at [redacted].

You may also send orders, queries, and etc. here or by writing:

Hoa Nguyen & Dale Smith
2925 Higgins Street
Austin TX 78722

Also available from SPD and Skanky Possum Press: all titles $5!

Skanky Possum #1 & 2,

Naltsus Bichidin by Carl Thayler Lucky Pup by Leslie Davis and _Dark_ by Hoa Nguyen (2nd edition)

.....Skank on friends .....

 Please forgive cross postings. If you want to be removed from this list, kindly email me here. ***

↑ Index

395. bill marsh
email for scott keeney
Mon 22 Nov 1999

---

if anyone has it, i'd be muched obliged bc to bill marsh

[redacted]

↑ Index

396. Arielle C. Greenberg chapbook publishers
Mon 22 Nov 1999

I'm wondering if you can help me out with some publishing advice. I've put together a mss for the Center for Book Art chapbook contest, but doubt I'll win it...my manuscript involves font size changes, fragments, strange positions on the page, and other things that I don't think the judges will neccessarily want. So I'm wondering if, now that I have this thing together, there are other contests or publishers of chapbooks (24 pages) which are more open to experimentalish work.

Thanks,
Arielle

* "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I describe." -- Ray Johnson

↑ Index

397. Richard Dillon
Re: Jackson Mac Low / Tanning Prize
Mon 22 Nov 1999

Robert Creeley's remarks really rise to the occasion! Jackson Mac Low is one of the most amazing writers and persons I have ever encountered. What = a great moment!
>From: Charles Bernstein <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Jackson Mac Low / Tanning Prize
>Date: Mon, Nov 22, 1999, 1:51 PM
>

> Jackson Mac Low Wins 1999 Tanning Prize
>
> $100,000 for Mastery in the Art of Poetry
>
> New York, November 3, 1999--The Academy of American Poets today announced that > Jackson Mac Low has been selected as the recipient of the 1999 Tanning Prize. The $100,000 award recognizes outstanding and proven mastery in the art of poetry. The judges for this year's Tanning Prize were Frank Bidart, Robert Creeley, Sharon Olds, Marjorie Perloff, and John Yau.

Jury chair Robert Creeley writes of Mr. Mac Low's poetry:

"Jackson Mac Low is a poet of great heart and abiding faith. His poetry has long been recognized as the most defining of American experimentalism, both with respect to text and to performance. It is the genius of his art to make poetry again enactment, to make its materials—words and syntax, and all the human echoes each must carry—a resonating, perceptive pattern reaching far beyond the enclosure of imagined subjects or intent. Patient, enduring, selfless, he has made substance of our language in ways that reveal its own initiating authority, proving its sounds a song, its progress a transforming revelation.

Commenting on the jury process of this year's Tanning Prize, Creeley reports,

The poets our jury considered were a significant range from all character of background and practice, professional commitment and cultural circumstance. It is the great virtue of our country's poetry that it is plural, poetries, rather than an abiding, singular hierarchy or one settled condition of practice. In awarding the prize to Jackson Mac Low, we sought to honor not only a great master of the art in its most inventive and resourceful character, but to recall also that American poetry itself defines such a tradition as he exemplifies, fosters insistently the experimental, seeks always to expand the parameters of its activity and relationships.

Jackson Mac Low was born in Chicago in 1922. He is a poet and composer and a writer of performance pieces, essays, plays, and radio works. He is also a painter and multimedia performance artist (often with his wife, Anne Tardos). Author of twenty-six books, his works have been published in many anthologies and periodicals and read publicly, exhibited, performed, and broadcast in North America, Europe, and New Zealand. Mac Low's recent publications include the books Bloomsday (1984), French Sonnets (1984, second ed. 1989), The Virginia Woolf Poems (1985), Eight Drawing-Asymmetries (1985), Representative Works: 1938-1985 (1986), Words and Ends from Ez (1989), Twenties: 100 Poems (1991), Pieces o' Six: Thirty-Three Poems in Prose (1992), 42 Merzgedichte in Memoriam Kurt Schwitters (1994), and Barnesbook (1995) and the compact disc (with Anne Tardos and seven instrumentalists) Open Secrets (1993). Mac Low has taught at many schools, notably the Naropa Institute, Schule für Dichtung in Vienna, Bard College, and Brown University. His previous awards include fellowships and grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, CAPS (New York State), PEN, the Guggenheim Foundation and the New York Foundations for the Arts.

The Tanning Prize was established in August 1994 by a gift of $2 million to the > Academy from the painter Dorothea Tanning. The previous recipients of the award

> are W. S. Merwin, James Tate, Adrienne Rich, and A.R. Ammons.

↑ Index

398. Ron Silliman
Re: Announcement: Dream/Fall
Mon 22 Nov 1999

This I like. I definitely like.

Ron ("The sheep are on fire") Silliman

From: David Knoebel <[redacted]> Subject: Announcement: Dream/Fall
Date: Fri, 19 Nov 1999 12:49:30 -0500

A poetry installation in Shamokin PA

http://home.ptd.net/~clkpoet/dream/dream.html

--
David Knoebel
-cranking out 2-3 words per day, every day, no matter what.

http://www.clickpoetry.com

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

399. miekal and
Re: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
Mon 22 Nov 1999

This is certainly in dispute with other who were also present who just like to argue for the sake of grief or sport. The eyes have been sewed shut & neural circuits hard wired to the intimacy of the spoken word, one shellfish at a time. Club the language, spawn.

Tony Green wrote:
>
> an answer to the question, Alan?
>
> Nikuko held Dr Konninger's eyes for a long time, but she > was the first to look away. She held his eyes, never > returned them, as she went on opening mussels.

>
> Tony
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
> Date: Saturday, 20 November 1999 03:00
> Subject: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
>
> "Did NIKUKO return his eyes?"
> >
> >("steps gingerly into the pools, bending, stooping! - stooping! - gath> >ers sea-mussels, her eyes fixed, she's never dizzy, the slight scent of > >sea-water")
> >
> >
> >
> >_____
> >

↑ Index

400. Tom Beckett
Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
Mon 22 Nov 1999

I guess, David, that I'm increasingly wary of hierarchies of "excellence." Especially ones that are based on geographical and, perhaps?, class distinctions.

TomB.

↑ Index

401. Alan Sondheim
(no subject)
Mon 22 Nov 1999

 MoTHERE ARE Fools so DEAD
they cannot hear or see?

IL DLUOW E
 LIKE TO SEE ME
  MoTHEre !   G DEAD
  MoTHEre I WOULD LIke dEad words
IL DLUOW E

LIKE TO SEE ME
MoTHERE ARE Fools so dead as we?
MoTHERE ARE Fools aLIve as we?

IL DLUOW dEad words from a dead god

↑ Index

402. Skip Fox
Re: realism, autobiography
Tue 23 Nov 1999

)ohn--

Perhaps to point here is the introd. Bernstein and Andrews wrote to _The L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E Book_:

> confusion about the nature of this exploration florishes. For instance, the idea that writing should (or could) be stripped of reference is as bothersome and confusing as the assumption that the primary function of words is to refer, one-on-one, to an already constructed world of "things." Rather, reference, like the body itself [and there, again, is the body, the "plan"], is one of the horizons of language. . . . It is the multiple powers and scope of reference (denotative, connotative, associational), not writers' refusal or fear of it, that threads these essays together. It is a renewed engagement that comes from the recognition that the (various) measuring and questioning and composition of our references is the practice of our craft.

Or Creeley's lovely: "Poetry is not referential, at least not importantly so."

skip

↑ Index

403. Lowther, John realism, autobiography
Tue 23 Nov 1999

> { p o e t i x }

i remember in some backchannel discussion saying to someone that i thought that langpo allowed for as much biography of the poet than much of what came before --- this didnt go over with my corespondent very well who went, as i recall, the "non-referential" route telling me that much of langpo was characterized more by it NOT being about anything outside itself --- and, i'm guessing that autobiography is, like everything else (?) outside this work for this person someone reading this is just bubbling to mention _my life_ i know but i'd like to not mention that instead i'd like to talk about what i'm interested in with respect to autobiography, with what my need is in that respect and consequently why i find say ted greenwald's _word of mouth_, hannah weiner's _clairvoyant journal_ and steve benson's _blue book_ all tantalizingly rich as autobiography and even why something like melnick's _pcoet_ isnt anti-autobiography in any meaningful sense (for me at least)

it goes back to my thinking about mac low's comments about his failure in the attempt to remove the ego from his poems --- he says something about how it is always present at some level at some remove and this seems indisputable to me and i've read a number of biographies of poet at this point --- not autobiographies but biographies and they can be pretty interesting tales i'll admit but i think that an autobiography to be that interesting for me wd show me, wd give me exempla of the way this person thinks, how they operate in language etc --- as such it strikes me so far that the two volumes of the _essential peirce_ tell me more about what i'm interested in with regard to charles peirce than the biography of him i read did (tho ken ketner's bio is different in using so much manuscript material and by its pretense of being and autobiography)

silliman's comments about the why "realism" was in the sub-title of _in the amer tree_ are to the point here as well --- it seems to me that if we care about some poet or other it is because of their work, because of their mind found there

i'm skirting the non-referential thing as i don't find it very interesting and it seems to assume that we can remove ourselves from the writing which i don't believe

anyway

)ohn

↑ Index

404. David Baratier
reading in nyc
Tue 23 Nov 1999

Just a note to let you know an author of ours, Douglas Goetsch, will be reading this coming Monday, Nov. 29, 8 PM, at The Poetry Project (St. Mark's Church; 131 East 10th St. @ 2nd Ave.). Jacqueline Waters will also read. Hope you can make it & let me know how it was!

Also, the Academy of American Poets just included a page with some poems of his in their poetry exhibits. Here's the link, if you're curious: The Academy of American Poets - Poetry Exhibits…

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

405. Nielsen, Aldon
Creeley In Company
Tue 23 Nov 1999

Have any of the New Yorkers on the list been around to the NYPL to see the Creeley collaborations exhibit, "In Company"? (and apologies if this has already been discussed -- I was electronically discommoded for a period) --

I've been looking at the book version , which is being distributed by the U of North Carolina Press -- It's a beautiful volume, and affordable -- nice CD rom comes with it -- the designers could have been a bit more imaginative (and who chose that music?!) but the colors float beautifully onto the screen -- I'd get this book even if I had all the artists' books it covers -- which, of course, I never could afford -- though I hasten to add that Creeley and comrades have on occasion ssen fit to produce art/poetry books that any of us could afford, and I've got those! The CD includes photos and correspondence that aren't in the book, and it allows you to page through reproductions of the art and poetry -- My own favorite is _A Sight_, with Kitaj.

would much appreciate a report from the scene from any who have in fact seen it --

↑ Index

406. Juliana Spahr
mullen on alexander
Tue 23 Nov 1999

David,

The Harryette Mullen article you refer to in Booglite is but an excerpt from a longer paper that she read at Poetry as Cultural Critique in Minnesota. I've lost this conversation somehow so I don't know what is meant by essentializing it.

Callaloo 22.2 (1999) has an interesting interview with Mullen and Alexander, an article by Mullen on Alexander, an article by A.L. Nielsen on Alexander, etc. Also a section on Lorenzo Thomas.

↑ Index

407. Jonathan Skinner
New Mayer CD
Tue 23 Nov 1999

Philip Good asked me to forward this to the list.

JS

Bernadette Mayer's poetry is now available on a CD titled Epigrams, Imitations and Translations.
This new CD is a studio recording of Bernadette Mayer reading from her books Formal Field of Kissing and Proper Name. Also included are new unpublished epigrams.
If you enjoy Bach's Coffee Cantata you'll enjoy this CD.
Available for $12
from:
Utopia Productions
Att: Philip Good
206 Macedonia Rd
Chatham, New York 12037

↑ Index

408. Nielsen, Aldon
MLA already
Tue 23 Nov 1999

While it may be early to start making MLA plans, some of us have the fortune to be earlier than others. Might I call your attention to session # 452

"Swing Is the Word: African American Poetry and Jazz Idiom"

speakers are Jeffrey Renard Allen, Reginald Scott Young, Meta DuEwa Jones and Aldon Lynn Nielsen -- (yeah, we've all got three names each, but we haven't assassinated anybody)

Wed. 12/29 at 8:30 AM

This is Chicago -- stay up all night and come to our session before you have brunch --

↑ Index

409. jocelyn saidenberg
K. Prevallet and T. Bryant Reading at SPT, 12/3
Tue 23 Nov 1999

Small Press Traffic Reading
Friday, December 3, 7:30 p.m.
Tisa Bryant
Kristin Prevallet

Tisa Bryant is a San Francisco-based writer and curator. Her work has recently appeared in Clamour, Children of the Dream: Our Own Stories of Growing Up Black in America (Pocket Books), and is forthcoming in the anthologies Beyond the Frontier and What Is Not Said. A novel, Letters to Regret, is forthcoming from Leroy Press. What is special about her work is on the one hand, the speculative questioning about location, space, citizenship--where are we? why are we here and who wants us in this place?--and on the other hand, a rapturous attention to the disturbing psychic and sensuous details of everyday life.

Kristin Prevallet returns from Brooklyn to Small Press Traffic, where she last presented findings of her biographical inquiry into the uncanny life of the poet Helen Adam. (Her edition of Adam's selected poems, Fire Brackled Bones, is forthcoming.) Now she will read from her own poetry, a remarkable re-invention of the cut-up/collage form, political and social readings of ordinary life, torn to shreds by the tender furies of perception and display. Everything's grist for Prevallet's mill, the daily news, the shoes on your feet, the way you look tonight. Hers is the mysterious Life that lives under things, as in the current film American Beauty. Her books include Perturbation, My Sister (First Intensity Press, 1997), Lead, Glass and Poppy (Primitive Publications, 1997) and Selections from: The Parasite Poems (Barque Press, 1999).

New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center

766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]

www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

410. pete spence
Re: class
Tue 23 Nov 1999

> Suddenly i remembered that I should know about working class a lot.
> I was thoroughly drilled in marxism and leninism all through many years of school and university back in the 70s in the Soviet Union. M.Z.

i'd thought maybe doing a bit o' labour because it was your only option would be a better sampler than being drilled by theory//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

411. pete spence
Re: Provincialism, regionalism
Tue 23 Nov 1999

> Pete Spence (& listmatesI expect the X=Spence equation resolved quickly, so that the one impression I have of his writerly powers, can extend beyond a feeble eye-pun. David

dave you are an experty on one little ditty!! you'V seen little else und i know it!! weather i miss read you or not aint the matter, and further i'll enjoy my writing no matter how trite it gets i'm not trotting 'round looking for the highliter //pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

412. derek beaulieu
submissions wanted.
Tue 23 Nov 1999

housepress is constantly accepting submissions of short prose,
B&W concrete and visual poetry,
B&W collage,
LANGUAGE and post-LANGUAGE writing,
B&W illustrations, sound poetry scores,
B&W comix (panels, and strips)
and
strange expected things with words & text/ure.

for ongoing limited edition chapbook and ephemera series please send inquires and submissions to derek beaulieu

housepress 1339 19th ave nw
calgary alberta
canada t2m 1a5
[redacted]

↑ Index

413. Steve Tills
Recent David Lehman book
Wed 24 Nov 1999

Some comments (pp. 10-11) from David Lehman in his recent book The Last Avant-Garde make me wonder a bit. Possibly this book has already been discussed on the list, but I'd like to note a few things he writes:

"The poets of the New York School were avant-garde at a time when that designation meant something. They are not the last avant-garde movement we will ever have. But at the moment the conditions surrounding art and literature are anything by favorable to the idea of an avant-garde."

Agree that this is the case?

"The problem has something to do with the decline of the public intellectual and the corresponding expansion of the purview of academe; the idea that something can be at once avant-garde and academe would seem a contradiction in terms."

This could be half-true, I suppose... It could also be a gross oversimplification and hasty generalization. Would certainly consider most list members who happen to work in academe definitely avant-garde... Also, is it pretty easy for Lehman to say this? Is he, himself, in academe, and thus having his cake and eating it, too--i.e., gets to pronounce who is avant-garde and who gets to be avant-garde and at the same time does the bulk of his living off of academe infrastructures. (Or did I just agree with him, too?)

Quotes Gertrude Stein, who was alive some years ago: "For a long time everybody refuses and then almost without a pause almost everyone accepts. . . . In the history of the refused in the arts and literature the rapidity of the change is always startling." Then Lehman writes, "The interval between rejection and acceptance has steadily grown shorter since Stein wrote those words. The consequence is that the avant-garde's incursions into the temple of art have become ritualized as the predictable gestures of postmodernism."

Well, CPU's get faster every month, and humans may have, too...

Writes, "If we are all postmodernists, we are none of us avant-garde, for postmodernism is the institutionalization of the avant-garde."

Agree? He does use some first rate references (Kafka, Stein) to argue his point. They're very well known...

"In the second half of the book, I raise the question of whether the avant-garde as an abstract concept or a practical idea is finished."

Okay, some of this book is about whether there's an avant-garde anymore or can be. Haven't gotten that far yet and had bought it to read about the New School poets, but look forward to the argument.

"It is a question that leads to others, or requires the answer to others, before it can be settled. What does (or did) avant-garde mean, and how did it come to have meaning? What exactly are the requirements of an avant-garde art movement? What lessons do the movements of the past have to teach us? The argument against the viability of the avant-garde today rests on the assumption that there is no real resistance to the new, no stable norm from which the defiant artist may depart. While I find this to be a convincing argument, I would sooner help to quicken a new avant-garde than pronounce the demise of an old one."

These are legitimate questions...

↑ Index

414. juliana spahr
review of Tardos's Uxudo
Wed 24 Nov 1999

Reviews

From Publisher's Weekly - Publishers Weekly

Pan-European ex-pat artist and poet Tardos writes here in spliced together bits of Hungarian, German, French and English, but the pronunciation keys and other linguistic graphs she includes bespeak precise formulation rather than polyglot mish-mash. At its best, Uxudo--a word, we're told, produced by computer error, and seemingly the only non-"real" word here--invites the reader into a world of fraught semantic and phonologic echoes, an effect furthered by being grafted onto video stills (mainly of women at different stages of life) which repeat, along with the words, in serial alterations. As visual poems, they resemble French Lettrism, with their clashing fonts and loose margins, engendering an endearing, consciousness-like chaos. In one instance, a flurry of equal signs shows the poet lost in equivalences--"quake tremblement = Beben = renges"--paradoxically less present in the text when giving us its code. Tardos's linguistic isolation is most pronounced when she is simply being herself: "Hochgeduld after nine from a fountain/ Gekreuzung vielmehr, which is how it's done/ Neighboryly jolie bete/ Give it time, haromvaros." The words following this bit, "Afterimage Nachbild," as well as much else here, give the work an explicitly post-WWII cast, suggesting post-war Germany's and fascist Europe's often obsessive attempts to find a usable past. Tardos's unique brand of multicultural pathos reminds us that our most pressing issues of identity and empire have been around for many years, and in many guises. (Nov.) Copyright 1999 Cahners Business Information.

↑ Index

415. rmutts

Fwd: Subtext presents Dale Going and C.E. Putnam on Dec. 1st

Wed 24 Nov 1999

Those (headless or stateless?) in Seattle for the WTO protests next week may be interested in the following.

> Subtext closes out 1999 with a reading featuring Dale Going and C.E. Putnam > on Wednesday, December 1st, 1999 at the Richard Hugo House on Capitol Hill.
> The reading starts at 7:30pm.
>
> Dale Going is both a poet and a book artist, proprietor of Em Press, the > award-winning letterpress she founded in Mill Valley, California to publish > experimental poetry by women. She is currently printing a chapbook of her > poem, &0, and completing the manuscript for a new collection, Leaves from a > Gradual. Her collections of poems are The View They Arrange (Kelsey St.
> Press 1994), and As/Of the Whole (San Francisco State University 1990).
> Recent work can be viewed online at the web publications HOW2 and City > Search San Francisco (July "Local Howler"). She has been a California Arts > Council Fellow in Literature, and twice a Fellow at the Djerassi Resident > Artists Program. She last appeared in Seattle five years ago, when she read at > the Bumbershoot Festival and received its award for letterpress book design > for her Em Press chapbook, She Pushes With Her Hands.
>
> C.E. Putnam has recently returned to Seattle after years in the Nation's > Capitol. He is author of "Go-Go Topless Mini-Poem Poetry" and co-author of > the renga > project "Communal Bebop Canto." His work has recently appeared in > Articulate, Situation, and Pavement Saw. He used to be a part of the > problem, but now he is the > problem.
>
> Be sure to mark those new calendars: Subtext starts off the year 2000 with a > reading on January 5th featuring poet and translator Jen Hofer. Also reading > will be Bryant Mason.
>
> Subtext readings fall on the 1st Wednesday of the month at the Richard Hugo > House. The Hugo House is located at 1634 11th Ave on Capitol Hill in > Seattle. Subtext events are co-sponsored by the Richard Hugo House.

>

↑ Index

416. Joel Weishaus
Re: letting go
Wed 24 Nov 1999

I've been trying to control the design, line breaks, of a web page through all sizes of monitors. I work on a 15" monitor, and when I look it on a 21" monitor (at a university pod) the font sizes default larger, in order to ill the screen, the line breaks are thus different, the page, and meaning, skewed. Very frustrating!

A few days ago, I was reading (again) Laurent Jenny's essay, "Genetic Criticism and It's Myths" (Yale French Studies #89, 1996), and came to realize that controlling the viewing space of one's work is a modernist conceit, and not what this new medium is promising to writers. I wrote it into the project's as:

"At first I tried to control this space, as control over one's work is the pedagogy of non-digital art. In the process, I began to appreciate that the digital canvas is an apparitional landscape, a phantasm of fluid patterns, somewhat like the walls of Paleolithic caves. So that within the praxis of the words and images I am gestating, it is the viewer--in this case by increasing or decreasing font size (View)--, not the writer, who has the final tools of alterity."

Several strategies are being used by net.artists to allow the viewer to participate in the creative process. Here a lack of technical means lead to the giving over of control. Perhaps in the future I can rectify this. But, in a nascent medium, the learning of whose tools, always upgrading, can be prohibitively time-consuming and daunting, is the lack of ultimate control an opportunity toward abstraction?

This lack of control seems built into the system. For example, one can download copyrighted photographs, and alter them. The same with texts. I do both, careful to cite. Not out of a lack of respect for the artists, but from a faith in which we are all creating, and have been for millennia, one big work of Human Art: adding, subtracting, continuously changing, letting go.

-Joel Weishaus

ARCHIVE: www.unm.edu/~reality
SKULL-HOUSE: (Most advanced draft): www.unm.edu/~reality/Skull/intro.htm SKULL-HOUSE (Being built at Centre for Advanced Inquiry in the Interactive Arts):
http://caiia-star.newport.plymouth.ac.uk/projects/skullhouse/Skull/index.htm

↑ Index

417. Carol L. Hamshaw

[Fwd: Adeena Karasick wins the Vancouver Videopoem Festival "People's Choice Award"]

Wed 24 Nov 1999

The Edgewise Electrolit Centre
www.edgewisecafe.org

For Immediate Release: November 17,1999

Adeena Karasick
wins the Vancouver Videopoem Festival "People's Choice Award"

Vancouver, BC ... On November 7, 1999 The Edgewise Electrolit Centre presented it's first annual Vancouver Videopoem Festival, hosted by oral/improv poet Kedrick James. The evening featured a diverse body of work produced by Canadian and international artists as well as an impromptu performance by the polyvocal ensemble, Verbomotorhead.

The Edgewise Electrolit Centre is pleased to announce Adeena Karasick's Alphabet City as the "People's Choice Award" winner. Karasick is a poet/cultural theorist, performance artist; and the author of three books of poetry and poetic theory. The award (gift certificates from the Alibi Room, Biz Books and a VFS course) was presented to Adeena and Evan Karasick (her brother, who collaborated with Adeena in the editing of Alphabet City).

A second prize (a gift subscription to The Capilano Review) was awarded to Tom Konyves for his three video poems: Sign Language, Percussion and Hopscotch. Konyves began experimenting with video poetry during the early 1970's as a member of The Vehicule Poets, one of the first alternative galleries formed in Canada.

Visit The Edgewise Electrolit Centre's website @ www.edgewisecafe.org to find out more about the artists who participated in the Videopoem Festival or to inquire about next year's submission details.

Funding for The Vancouver Videopoem Festival was received from the Canada Council for the Arts and was produced in partnership with Video In Studios, Vancouver, BC. Part of Outside the Lines, BC Arts and Culture Week.

> The Edgewise Electrolit Centre is a nonprofit society whose mandate is to exploit communications technology to widen the audience of Canadian poetry and to give poets, multi-media artists and youth the opportunity to use, learn, and create with this technology. Videocomferencing and online publishing are the major technologies that we work with. Our electronic magazine can be viewed and heard at www.edgewisecafe.org. Poets featured with audio include Adeena Karasick, Wayde Compton, Bill Bissett and Sheri-D Wilson. Funding for our programs is received from The Canada Council of the Arts, The BC Arts Council, The City of Vancouver, Embedded Spaces and Communicopia.
>
> For more information, please call Raquel Alvaro, Events Producer, at [redacted], or via email at [redacted]
>
> Raquel Alvaro
> Events Producer
> Edgewise Electrolit Centre
> http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

418. MAYHEW

class

Wed 24 Nov 1999

Some notes on class:

1. Upper-class poetics in the US would look a lot like James Merrill: lots of cultural capital on display, opera, meals of a certain kind.

2. Middle-class poetics would look like Robert Pinsky. The idea that poetry is so darn good for us.

3. A sort of sentimentalized working-class poetics in Philip Levine. He doesn't write poems about sitting in his office in Fresno, but about being an auto-worker in Detroit 40 years before. What's sentimental is precisely the displacement, the idea that actually working on the assemby line is more authentic.

4. Is class class origin? In this case if you come from working class you are always such, even if you end up living the style of another class. Is it affiliation or "identity"? Is it where you are now, where you will be, or where you come from? If you write in Robert Pinsky middle-brow style, even if you are working class origins, what is the class of your poetics?

5. In the interest of full disclosure, I should point out that I have a middle to upper-middle class, academic background (surprise!). Grandparent farmers in Mountain states, grandparents, uncles etc... govt. bureaucrats, accountants, college professors, etc... Access to cultural capital is key here. As University professor myself I basically do now what I have done my whole life: read books, go to bookstores, write and think about what I've read, talk to others about this, etc... This is my class existence, and didn't really change much when I didn't have money as graduate student.

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

↑ Index

419. David Kirschenbaum
Creeley NYPL Exhibit Opening Coverage, from Booglit 6
Wed 24 Nov 1999

Aldon Nielsen asked for the good word on the Creeley show at NYPL, so here's how I wrote-up the opening for Booglit 6: Lowell Celebrates Kerouac ($10ppd. Booglit 351 W.24th St., Sutie 19E, NYC 10011-1510--see October 4, 1999 post).

as ever,
David

Another Opening, Another Show
Creeley collaborations tour stops in NYC

The opening for the New York Public Library’s new exhibit, "In Company: Robert Creeley’s Collaborations," is a collaboration itself. Everyone in attendance does a quick art-check, but it is the company that matters. Poets and literary editors talk outside the gallery where parts of Creeley’s lifelong artistic unions are glass enclosed. Shift from one collaborator to the next. René Laubiès to Dan Rice, Fielding Dawson to Robert Indiana to William Katz, as the decades blur, from 1950s on through the 1970s. Strange to see poet/artist Bobbie Louise Hawkins on Black Sparrow covers as "Bobbie Creeley," her art, as she says in the catalog (edited by Amy Cappellazzo and Elizabeth Licata; University of North Carolina Press, 1999), "not illustrative of the poems."

A few words on the catalog: The CD-ROM it comes with is alone worth the $24.95 pricetag. Drop it in and Creeley’s exhibit pops across your monitor, with art, words, and sounds a mouse click away. Add that shiny package to the handsome art book—which draws on the show’s visuals and includes essays by the editors, John Yau, and words from the artistic collaborators—and you're in for a joyous multisensory overload you'll return to forever for inspiration.

The artist Meg Arthurs, whose collaborators include Allen Ginsberg, Lee Ann Brown, and Bernadette Mayer, enters the Edna Barnes Solomon Room to see how Creeley puts it together. Granary Books chieftain Steve Clay tows his little one around as he talks the room.

Newlywed Alan Gilbert, his new bride/collaborator Kristin Prevallet a few feet away, talks with Canadian poet Jeff Derksen—"I didn't realize I still wear that shirt," he tells me of the photograph I sent him from the first BoPoFest. Tender Buttons editor Lee Ann Brown films Bernadette Mayer, Phil Good, and Lewis Warsh by the covered bridge table/temporary bar.

And I give Creeley a quick hello, before I have someone snap our photo, and the honored guest, off a puddle-jumper from Buffalo, seeks a new drink. But the bartender's done collaborating, as the lights flash on and off, and the security guard turns to Creeley and says, "It's time to go, we're closing, sir."

In Company is on view at the New York Public Library, Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street, Edna Barnes Solomon Room.
It runs through January 13, 2000. Admission is free.
M/Th-Sat: 10:00a.m. to 6:00p.m., Tu-Wed: 11:00a.m.-7:30p.m.
For more information call [redacted].

_____ Get FREE voicemail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

420. Tony Green
Re: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
Wed 24 Nov 1999

---

aa alas no shooters for the sutured peepers

From: miekal and <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, 25 November 1999 08:12
Subject: Re: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger

> This is certainly in dispute with other who were also present who just like to argue for the sake of grief or sport. The eyes have been sewed shut & neural circuits hard wired to the intimacy of the spoken word, one shellfish at a time. Club the language, spawn.

> Tony Green wrote:
>
> an answer to the question, Alan?
>
> Nikuko held Dr Konninger's eyes for a long time, but she was the first to look away. She held his eyes, never returned them, as she went on opening mussels.
>
> Tony
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
> Date: Saturday, 20 November 1999 03:00
> Subject: Bending, - Stooping!, Tlingit, Konniger
>
> "Did NIKUKO return his eyes?"
>
> ("steps gingerly into the pools, bending, stooping! - stooping! - gathers sea-mussels, her eyes fixed, she's never dizzy, the slight scent of sea-water")
>
> ---

↑ Index

421. Tony Green

Re: Creeley In Company

Wed 24 Nov 1999

Passing thru NY a month ago, I was in the Creeley collabs exhibition at the NY Public Library for a couple of hours, alerted to it by my NZ painter friend Max Gimblett, I was much taken with early photos (Majorca), with ms letters, e-mail print-outs, & the wide varieties of collaboration in all the books on display. The early material especially was exciting to see -- a long gone chapter, history -- so to speak. Opened archives, great! I paused to read the whole of Creeley's ms tribute to John Altoon -- I vaguely remembered it from print somewhere. I liked the look of half-familiar things, glimpsed, or read about somewhere, : but many I hadnt seen, especially the somewhat luxurious recent ones (Of course, I've got a copy of _The Dogs of Auckland_ with Max's dog drawings. _Le Chien d'Auckland, c'est moi!_ says the text. & fine printing by Alan Loney). It was far too rich for two hours browsing, I wanted/needed ten days to look at all the things there, read them. But that's always one of the effects in that kind of exhibition of books & mss. Round the walls the collection of old paintings belonging to the library completely failed, for once, to hold my attention after all the reading, leaning on vitrines.

that Aldon may give you some sense of the show as distinct from the book of the show cheers Tony Green
From: Nielsen, Aldon <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, 25 November 1999 08:21
Subject: Creeley In Company

> Have any of the New Yorkers on the list been around to the NYPL to see the Creeley collaborations exhibit, "In Company"? (and apologies if this has already been discussed -- I was electronically discommoded for a period) --
>
> I've been looking at the book version , which is being distributed by the U of North Carolina Press -- It's a beautiful volume, and affordable -- nice CD rom comes with it -- the designers could have been a bit more imaginative (and who chose that music?!) but the colors float beautifully onto the screen -- I'd get this book even if I had all the artists' books it covers -- which, of course, I never could afford -- though I hasten to add that Creeley and comrades have on occasion ssen fit to produce art/poetry books that any of us could afford, and I've got those! The CD includes photos and correspondence that aren't in the book, and it allows you to page through reproductions of the art and poetry -- My own favorite is _A Sight_, with Kitaj.
>
> would much appreciate a report from the scene from any who have in fact seen it --

↑ Index

422. Arielle C. Greenberg
Re: Recent David Lehman book
Wed 24 Nov 1999

I'm sure the book has already been discussed here, but I'm glad someone brought it up again, since I'm just finishing it now and have been very interested in it...

> we will ever have. But at the moment the conditions surrounding art and literature are anything by favorable to the idea of an avant-garde."
>
> Agree that this is the case?

Not really. While I understand that a certain kind of imposed limitation, or a societal narrow-mindedness, might in fact liberate artists, I don't think America, currently, is so open to work that pushes the boundaries that it makes it impossible for an avant-garde to exist. Poetry is still a marginalized medium, and within poetry, the experimental world is still very small. Recent coups such as the Mac Low Tanning thing notwithstanding, I'd argue that even in most literary/artistic circles, experimental poetry is still more or less "underground."

And while I do think Lehman's point about the difficulties of being simultaneously avant-garde and academic is compelling mostly in its political implications, I think the argument is refuted by his own book: Kenneth Koch is depicted as Mr. Professor, and the epilogue on the current state of avant-garde poetry points at the Language School's relationship to theory. (Then again, he seems to not like Language stuff much at all...which is maybe why he argues this way...)

> Writes, "If we are all postmodernists, we are none of us avant-garde, for postmodernism is the institutionalization of the avant-garde."

A really interesting idea, I think. Although I suspect making innovative work has much less to do with how you label yourself (or how time labels you) and much more to do with the actual work...which, despite the calendar, may in fact be really NEW.

My two cents on the book: I loved the info on the poets themselves, thought women got a really raw deal throughout, thought the intro and concluding essays were far better organized than the biographical chapters on the poets, which felt haphazard, but it was a page-turner, anyway.

Turning pages,
Arielle

↑ Index

423. Maria L. Zavialov
Re: class
Wed 24 Nov 1999

23-Nov-99 16:30 you wrote:
>>Suddenly i remembered that I should know about working class a lot.
>>I was thoroughly drilled in marxism and leninism all through many years of >>school and university back in the 70s in the Soviet Union. M.Z.
>>

> i'd thought maybe doing a bit o' labour because it was your only option would be a better sampler than being drilled by theory//pete spence

It was in good old Soviet times when the State paid for schooling. Now I have to do quite a bit of labour to support a family of five my husband being a poet.
M.Z.

↑ Index

424. Richard Dillon
Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
Wed 24 Nov 1999

David Bromige walks around with his shirttails flapping outside of his jeans.
>From: Tom Beckett <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
>Date: Mon, Nov 22, 1999, 8:50 PM
>

> I guess, David, that I'm increasingly wary of hierarchies of "excellence." Especially ones that are based on geographical and, perhaps?, class distinctions.
>
> TomB.

↑ Index

425. Katherine Lederer
Re: Recent David Lehman book
Wed 24 Nov 1999

It sometimes feels like exclusionary politics and/or poetics is considered avant-garde.

Sometimes it feels like people think that to denounce something has to do with being avant-garde.

I think that generosity is a very avant-garde thing and doesn't get enough credit.

If Lehman really means this:

> depart. While I find this to be a convincing argument, I would sooner help to quicken a new avant-garde than pronounce the demise of an old one."

then I like that.

It's hard to be a poet.

Katy

↑ Index

426. Steve Dickison

 Don't miss the George Oppen Lecture  Thurs Dec 2 *****

Wed 24 Nov 1999

~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~

There is the area of Lyric---the area in which one is absolutely convinced that one's emotions are an insight into reality and death
  But values-- as they say-

(from George Oppen's "DAYBOOKS," edited by Stephen Cope; reprinted from THE GERM: A Journal of Poetic Research, No. 3, April 1999)

THE ANNUAL GEORGE OPPEN MEMORIAL LECTURE
ON TWENTIETH CENTURY POETICS

Presented by STEPHEN COPE

Thursday December 2, 7:30 pm
at The Unitarian Center, 1187 Franklin at Geary
San Francisco

Poet Stephen Cope, of UC San Diego, is currently working on a book-length edition of George Oppen's WORKING PAPERS, a selection of which appeared recently in The Germ, No. 3 (quoted above). Fascinating material, Oppen's as yet unpublished writings in the form of his "Day Books" or "Working Papers" greatly exceeds in volume his published work, including the Collected Poems and Selected Letters. Stephen Cope's work on editing and presenting these unpublished writings promises to be a revelation for anyone interested in the drift of poetics in the latter half of the century, and George Oppen's extraordinary contribution to the thinking of--and thinking by means of--poetry in our time.

~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~

Cold water flats---but i think that of all those who committ'd suicide in the 16 century, none killed themselves because there was no such things as hot running water in the world.

Diction. the distinction is in the words I do not use, more than in the words I do use. I use the words for large and for small often. Because scale is important, just because it is subjective.

~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~

==========
Steve Dickison, Director
The Poetry Center & American Poetry Archives ~ San Francisco State University
1600 Holloway Avenue ~ San Francisco CA 94132 ~ [redacted]

~ ~ ~

Lâ taltazim hâlatan, walâkin
durn bî-llayâly kamâ tadûwru

Don't cling to one state
turn with the Nights,
as they turn

~Maqâmat al-Hamadhâni (tenth century; tr Stefania Pandolfo)

~ ~ ~

Bring all the art and science of the world, and baffle and humble it with one spear of grass.

~Walt Whitman's notebook

↑ Index

427. Alan Sondheim
(towards a poetics of multimedia/text)
Wed 24 Nov 1999

Background / Foreground

I was thinking of this first a couple of years ago in relation to objects and multimedia channels, and then looking at Miekal And's flash work (which I love) and some of the other URL sites I've posted here - I've been wondering about the relationship among:

1. Multimedia OBJECTS, and their protocols, codings, animations/visuals/audios, etc.; 2. The framework of the SCREEN or page, which holds the OBJECTS; and 3. The embedding of the SCREEN within the apparatus of the COMPUTER and its input devices (keyboard, mouse, microphone, camera, etc.).

It seems to me that emphasis on the first relates to modernism, in the sense that the background is assumed neutral or irrelevant, and that the object itself forecloses on its own interiority; that the second relates to deconstruction, to the extent that the margins and protocols are fore- grounded as much as the embedded objects (all of this is presuming that background is visible and somewhat well-defined); and that the third relates to postmodernism, to the extent that it is also cyborgian, inter- ior and exterior simultaneously. In any case, I'd like to see a phenomeno- logy of this issue (which might be related to, say, Sherry Turkle's or Brenda Laurel's work), somewhere, sometime. It seems to me that emphasiz- ing the domain or tenor of a site instead of its components (which are emphasized especially on those webpages, that, say, ask if you have this or that plugin) is a way of approaching both experiential issues, and issues of virtuality which rely on encompassing the spectator and her or his body, in relation to the coding, the writer, the producer, the artist, the director, etc.

One might consider levels of interaction, moving from the user's body and its own foregrounding/backgrounding (see Drew Leder, The Absent Body), through a phenomenology of the lived environment. Change the focus to the "digital apparatus" itself (in the sense of the "cinematic apparatus") - to the increasing diversity of displays. From displays, it is a difficult step to the internal margins of the visual (and are there parallels in sound as well?) - and the introjections/projections associated with images and flash and other multimedia components. (As the case may be, extend this farther to actively responding joysticks, teledildonic apparatus, etc.) I would be interested in the ways that such introjection and pro- jections (what I call "jectivity") operates in internal world-building - where, in other words, is the user, psychologically, in the midst of all of this. We know that one can easily inhabit the reduced audio-visual bandwidth of a MOO or MUD, and even a novel; in multimedia, the singular experience of reading is broken up by mouse-clicks, attention structures across the screen, and so forth. How does this heterogeneity function in terms of worlds? How does one move within these spaces, which can often appear, as the modernist gallery, as an accumulation of objects against presumably "irrelevant" white walls? Does the white background of the screen function as such a wall? Does a background color create a different kind of experience altogether? What is the phenomenology of jectivity in general, across the various sensory modalities?

The point of all of this is both practical - knowledge of the psychologi- cal processes that are involved in world-building, from both a design and a user viewpoint - and theoretical - how do we make sense of _any_ world, foregrounding and background what we ascertain, for ourselves, are objects within it? How, in other words, _are worlds inscribed?_ Multimedia pro- vide profound tools for research here; there's always something behind the holodeck, waiting to be fished out.

ii Note on forgotten space -

Let us talk about the _forgotten space,_ the space between the object and the frame, the space neither of containment nor the intensity of edges. It is this space which shimmers, always present, even if driven to the suicide of the line as the object fills the frame - it is this space which is the true screen, never present, an inexplicable absence, were it to be named. If the dream screen is presumed always to background, this forgotten space is _neither here nor there,_ but virtual, in the sense of the virtual particles of the vacuum. Its presence is its annihilation; it is most likely white or black, perfect absorption, perfection emission. I place this screen certainly the side of the analytic; it is just as like ly to exist as a token for the diffused or exhausted, the turbulent. Nei- ther the matrix out of which the symbolic object arises, nor the symbolic itself - neither the chorus of indecipherable languages nor the chora it- self, the forgotten space is always already named, discarded, the origin of /dev/null to which useless output is ascribed. So to talk about this space is that which is most natural in the world, since it is the space of the object's jostling within or among places, spaces, others. One might say it gives birth to the burden of the proper name, and measurab- le, it is of no size whatsoever. Before you look at the matrix of media, look at the forgotten spaces, which make or break inhabitations - and the more forgotten, the better.

iii forgotten space among the objects and the margins of the screen framework or the central division which is forgotten places, not spaces, open elements, line segments somewhat obliterated the spaces seething granular and seething in the distance, a line, smooth, clear, boundary perceptual object = let us say, what the mind tells us the speaking of the mind through the fog of forgotten space across the bay, along the floor of the sea, on the side of the valley nothing wandering inscribes and the trembling of kanji into mist forgotten space surrounding gotten space gotten space triumphant, bounded, areas of languages and protocols what is laying there holding somewhere what is laying there sheets of assertion, unassigned pixels, useless waves of background color pooling of background color, spreading around negative shapings, places just a moment ago, about to me, something, somewhere over there not forgotten space among the margins of the screen, a space, a screen not thinking one into places but looking at people others but not others, people some people they told me about some places, the they saying, anyone saying background inscriptions, spreading around negative propositions places, the perhaps, main() or void, dev/null or some other placings

iv forgotten space

```
        <objecta> <littleobjecta>
          \
           _______[coupling]_______/        {forgotten space}
                     |
                <objectb>
```

A coupling is defined as (a,b,c); if a -> a', then (a,b,c) -> (a',b,c) as opposed to a linkage in which if a -> a', then (a,b,c) -> (a',b',c'). In forgotten space, objects are combined as couplings or concatenations without an intrinsic linking. Forgotten space is neither matrix nor con- tainer/chora; it is the of-jostling, nothing more nor less. Think of the spacings of multimedia objects.

A coupling in this regard may be considered a generated perceptual group- ing of relatively well-defined objects. An object is defined as a rupture or insertion into forgotten space. An object is also a skein of bits and bytes, ranging from the performative to static files. The former is al- ways triply encoded; the latter, more often than not doubly encoded. Text- ual insertions into forgotten space (i.e. ascii text) activate the space, i.e. it becomes gotten space, the sheet of assertion or subtextual matrix of structure 'holding' the ascii in place. Movement in dhtml across for- gotten space is in relation to the screen or object boundaries; the space itself carries no distinction.

Or perhaps the space, like the phallic masquerade itself, assume identi- ties, forgetfulness taking on the characteristics of the current diegetic in relation to the viewer's dialogic - in which case, one might well turn away in disgust, there's no hope for it. Still, I wouldn't call it a space of potential, it's there, forgotten, stillborn in relation to the objects contained - in fact, it's charted, mobilized, for their location in terms of window percentage (30% vertical say) or pixels (400 horizontal say).

The charting is for them; they're tracked across the forgotten space. Any landmark is charted as well; there is the forgotten space, and the chart- ing of the landmarks. And there is nothing else, the forgotten space hard- ly nomadic, on the verge of presence, neither shifting nor present.

The image is of the gotten space, always of such. Everything is coupled within the image.

↑ Index

428. Summi Kaipa government funding in the arts
Wed 24 Nov 1999

hello all--

i'm trying to get a concrete sense of what is happening to government funding in the arts. that is to say, everyone speaks of the "trend" in arts, the cutbacks in the nea budget, etc.--but what are smaller, non-prof organizations feeling both by the nea and by state arts orgs in numbers? anybody out there head an arts org and have specific examples of slashes, i.e. how much of a decrease in funding they have received over the past 10 years or whatever?

particularly, i'm interested in examples of organizations/people who have had some dealings with the california arts council--or other state arts councils whose behavior might be akin to the cac (maybe new york?)

or, if you know something about the type of people who sit on the state/federal arts panels and where to get more info about this, please do tell.

please backchannel with info, thanks.

summi

↑ Index

429. pete spence
Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
Wed 24 Nov 1999

> I guess, David, that I'm increasingly wary of hierarchies of "excellence." Especially ones that are based on geographical and, perhaps?, class distinctions.
>
> TomB.

specialy when you are an australian who has always enjoyed his low-key choices//pet spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

430. pete spence
Re: class
Wed 24 Nov 1999

>Some notes on class:
>>4. Is class class origin? In this case if you come from working class you >are always such, even if you end up living the style of another class. Is >it affiliation or "identity"? Is it where you are now, where you will be, >or where you come from? If you write in Robert Pinsky middle-brow style, >even if you are working class origins, what is the class of your poetics?
>
>5. In the interest of full disclosure, I should point out that I have a >middle to upper-middle class, academic background (surprise!). Grandparent >farmers in Mountain states, grandparents, uncles etc... govt.

>bureaucrats, accountants, college professors, etc... Access to cultural >capital is key here. As University professor myself I basically do now >what I have done my whole life: read books, go to bookstores, write and >think about what I've read, talk to others about this, etc... This is my >class existence, and didn't really change much when I didn't have money as >graduate student.
>
>
>Jonathan Mayhew
>[redacted]
>
yeah well my full disclosure would be after 35 years working around factories someone dropped a pile of shares on us/ just because we have half a million in banks doesn't mean i'm going to vote for service cuts in banks just to please the dividend//pete

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

431. Acharya Hom Raj

introduc

Thu 25 Nov 1999

although i am continuously enjoying the postings, i have not yet contributed to the list. Before i do that, i feel, i must introduce myself to the community of poets or to the species, i think, i belong to- my name is Homraj Acharya and i am a poet from a country called Nepal which is a squash between two big boulders: China and India. Currently i leave in Boulder. i am here as a student for about little more than two years. And don't know many members of the same species. Joe Amato is the only person I know from this list. But, certainly, I have heard and have read works of few others from the UB Poetics discussion group. Anyway, lets get to the point: I am interested in knowing more about post-structuralism theory, especially materials written on the subject after 90s and its contemporary critics, however, not being a tudent of English literature, I found some difficulties locating good materials on this particular issue. I would really appreciate if anyone of you gave me some helpful suggestions and some useful bibliographic references, and if the materials are on poetry that would be the best. back channel please.

Happy thanx giving,
Homraj (Hom)

↑ Index

432. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Class and Money
Fri 26 Nov 1999

I am struck by Jonathan Mayhew's notes on class, and they require more than one posting to exhaust. I would first like to refer to his observation on a "sort of sentimentalized working-class poetics in Philip Levine":

"He doesn't write poems about sitting in his office in Fresno, but about being an auto worker in Detroit 40 years before. What's sentimental is precisely the displacement, the idea that actually working on the assembly line is more authentic."

The same day, Pete Spence responds to Maria Zavialov:
"Suddenly I remembered that I should know about working class a lot.
>I was thoroughly drilled in marxism and leninism all through many years of >school and university back in the 70s in the Soviet Union." M.Z.
>

i'd thought maybe doing a bit o' labour because it was your only option would be a better sampler than being drilled by theory//pete spence"

Does Pete have a special knowledge that Maria belongs to the idle reach? Or is it implicit in his comment that labor is only labor ("authentic") if it is working class? Is this an example of the "sentimental working-class poetics?"

Maria's comments, I believe, are more complicated than Pete assumes. They imply (as her prior observations on "place" do) the point that "working class" is essentially a historical concept, created by Marxism. And in Marxism class is inextricably linked with money.

In earlier periods the language of social stratification has very different connotations. The medieval "chain of being" accepts those divisions as divine order, without the utopian sense of progress of Marxism. From 17th century on the lower classes are the "unruly mob," demonized, conceptionally even worse off than before. Neither of the two explicitly connects class to money. Consequently, class is treated as a subset of culture, a culture which serves the ends of those who already own the money.

How much of our founding fathers' idea of democratic government is obsessed with suppressing (controlling, rendering voiceless) the unruly mob (a nother phrase for the owners of no property), integrating, how much of the royalist Hobbes as of John Locke? "Speech starts with money": this is a systemic/constitutional fact. Before money (word) there is nothing (chaos, yohu vavohu).

I have problems with the fifth item on Jonathan's list:

"In the interest of full disclosure, I should point out that I have a middle to upper-middle class, academic background (surprise!). Grandparent farmers in Mountain states, grandparents, uncles etc... govt. bureaucrats, accountants, college professors, etc... Access to cultural capital is key here. As University professor myself I basically do now what I have done my whole life: read books, go to bookstores, write and think about what I've read, talk to others about this, etc... This is my class existence, and didn't really change much when I didn't have money as graduate student."

Jonathan appears to say that class essentially is equivalent to culture in the United States. This is so if class expresses itself in writing only in terms of the class origin of the writer? Then, it is true, as Jonathan notes, a contradiction develops when a person moves up the economic scale, which is quite possible in the States. But what about class, reflected in terms of who supports or pays for the written product? Then, Jonathan’s financial sacrifice as a graduate student is a temporary state, as an intern’s on the way to becoming a doctor.

I’ll take a step further. Suppose one pries poetry loose from the university/teaching system which supported it the last twenty years, and one faces the absolute economic non-viability of poetry as an economic product. How does embracing squarely this non-viability affect the nature of a poem? I believe that the issue of class in poetry is linked directly to it. And poets who integrate this "uselessness" into their work form a class (a kind of unruly mob with no economic interest in the system), regardless of their personal backgrounds or the "material" of their poems for that matter.

To spell out this idea in more detail is for another day.

I would like to thank Rebecca for her response to my post "virtual democracy." Her eloquent self-definition through a series of negatives is exactly the kind of a poet’s class consciousness I am talking about:

"I cannot attend the poetry events announced here. My participation is currently limited to reading the list; I haven't posted to the list for a long time. Experience has made me reticent. I have not read and will not read many of the works under discussion here. I do not know even one member of the list. I am unknown; I do not publish. I am not affiliated with an educational institution or any group known to any member of this list."

Murat Nemet-Nejat

↑ Index

433. Alan Sondheim

INCUBATION: FINAL CALL FOR PAPERS - Deadline 1 December 1999 (fwd)

Fri 26 Nov 1999

FINAL CALL FOR PAPERS
Deadline 1 December 1999

Incubation: A trAce International Conference about Writing and the Internet
10-12 July 2000
The Nottingham Trent University, Nottingham, UK
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/incubation/

Keynote Speakers: Teri Hoskin, Geoff Ryman and Gregory Ulmer

The trAce Online Writing Community connects more than a thousand writers and readers in over 60 countries. Together we have built a vibrant and energetic online culture where text is always the focus. This conference offers the chance to meet in a physical space to talk about the nature of writing and reading on the internet today. We invite papers which debate, discuss or demonstrate any of the following:

TEXT : NARRATIVE : INVENTION
The web is home to a huge variety of narrative forms: fictions using a traditional narrative structure within the framework of hypertext; works operating across literary genres; ficto-criticisms which consider the medium directly; poetic writings that seek to dishevel the structure of language; pidgin languages and texts; the blurring of image/word/sound so that the very design itself becomes the writing; and the liberation from the alphabet.
But what does all this mean to the traditional print author or reader? And how do both the mode of distribution and the corporate-owned formats affect content and style? This theme examines the discovery and invention of new literary forms and theories, and the re-emergence, online, of textual experimentation predating the internet. It seeks to contextualise online literary production and features some of the breakthrough online projects that are helping to shape the early history of writing online. We invite authors, readers and critics to explore their engagement with the internet and to look at the ways in which text has evolved online.

TEXT : COMMUNITY : CREATIVITY
The internet has offered us the chance to connect with people around the world in ways we could never have imagined. What effect is this having on creativity and artistic collaboration, including the notion of lone author as individual genius? Society takes on a different complexity when the identities of its members may be multiple, collective, or fragmented. How do we build and administer our online communities? And what happens when so many nationalities, cultures and languages intersect? This is a good moment to consider what it is to be human and how we are engaging with technology in ways we have never done before. The flux of the net challenges our assumptions about identity, self, nature, language, nation, time and space and disrupts the ways in which we construct meaning. How are writers responding to new experiences of online community, creativity, spirituality, and the body?

TEXT : PUBLISHING : OWNERSHIP
Publishers just don't seem to know what to do with hypertext. Contemporary notions of authorship and ownership are being reconfigured by the advent of new technologies like the Internet. How are both mainstream and radical publishing responding to notions of copyright, public domain, and copyleftism? And where do new forms of work fit in? Is the book really dead? Will networking and collaborative authoring transform the literary into something else? Is it true that online writing communities and web.narrative projects are being embraced by media and art institutions but ignored by print publishers? There are many burning practical questions to be addressed. Are online works Read-Only consumer products? How does the public own/appropriate an online work? How would you present a web narrative project without a computer? Which form would you use? And how would you sell your online work?

ABSTRACTS SHOULD BE 300 WORDS MAXIMUM
DEADLINE DECEMBER 1 1999

HOW TO SUBMIT YOUR PAPER Papers may be submitted via a web form, found at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/incubation/

If you would like to be kept informed about the Incubation conference, please contact:
Rose Athow, NCL Admin Centre, The Nottingham Trent University, Burton Street, Nottingham NG1 4BU, UK
Tel + 44 (0) [redacted]
Fax + 44 (0) [redacted]
email: [redacted]

trAce Online Writing Community
Nottingham Trent University
Clifton Lane
Nottingham NG11 8NS
ENGLAND
Tel: +[redacted] (direct line)
Fax: +[redacted]
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk

[redacted]

---

with 'unsubscribe' as the subject line.

↑ Index

434. Louis Cabri

PhillyTalk #14

Fri 26 Nov 1999

PhillyTalks 14

> Dan Farrell / P. Inman
> THIS MONDAY, Nov. 29, 6pm
> Writers House, 3805 Locust Walk Philadelphia (215) 573-WRIT http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh
http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/phillytalks

> *Dan Farrell is the author of Last Instance (Krupskaya, 1999), (Untitled Epic Poem on the History of Industrialization by R. Buckminster Fuller, pp. 1-50) Grid (Meow Press, 1999), ape and Thimking of You, both from Tsunami Editions. Forthcoming from Coach House Press is The Inkblot Record. Dan is a recent resident alien of Brooklyn NY, and works as a financial proofreader.*
>
> *P. Inman was born in 1947 & raised on Long Island. He graduated from Georgetown University a year after Bill Clinton. Since 1980 he has worked at the Library of Congress, where he has been active as a union rep & negotiator for Local 2910 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. His most recent books are: at. least (krupskaya), vel (o books) & criss cross (roof). He's appeared in anthologies in three different languages.*

Their newsletter dialogue is now available. Please email me for copy.

Best,
Louis

↑ Index

435. Randy Prunty
ARTEMESIA.....new mag call for submissions
Fri 26 Nov 1999

(i'm posting this for my daughter. send any queries or correspondence to her. thanks, randy prunty)

<<Artemesia - a bi-monthly publication of poetry, short stories, rant articles, art, and book/music/movie reviews. First issue to be published February 2000.
Subscriptions are $6 for a year, single issues are $2.
I'm looking for writing and art that makes you think and feel and that's not afraid to add some beauty to the world.

Send subscriptions and submissions to

Jenna Prunty
1221 Sheppard Drive
Lilburn, Georgia 30047

Submissions can also be sent by e-mail to [redacted].
>>

↑ Index

436. George Bowering
Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
Sat 27 Nov 1999

 Dont you know me better than that? My >point was (I think) that not all regionalism is gonna be okay.
>
>David

Well, I dont know. I just reread Bromige's _My Poetry_ in the very regional South Okanagan Valley, and it was as sharp as always. Except for the piece about the gnu.

GB

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

437. George Bowering
Re: re Bromige And the Provinces
Sat 27 Nov 1999

> I guess, David, that I'm increasingly wary of hierarchies of "excellence."
>
> TomB.

This could use some explanation. Does not excellence imply hierarchy?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

438. Alan Sondheim
(no subject)
Sun 28 Nov 1999

=

if truth were told it would insist on words severed, severe, several, with such urgency, nothing of remnants left to speak, bodies supine, eyes sky-stared, several, severe, severed, sky tethered, remnants tethered, with such insistency, urgency, truth would be severed, be severe, be several

=

↑ Index

439. Katie Degentesh
9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9
Sun 28 Nov 1999

This Thursday, December 2, at Adobe Bookshop (3166 16th St. at Guerrero, SF)

at 8 PM

9x9 Industries presents

Poet and graphic artist John Jakubowski http://www.wombatworld.com/skoan_fs.htm

and

Marya Hornbacher, poet, fiction writer, and author of _Wasted: A Memoir of Anorexia and Bulimia_

http://www.randomhouse.com/boldtype/0398/hornbacher/excerpt.html

This reading is free!

and will be emceed by 9x9's own Jan Richman be there for the last 9x9 reading in 199x9

1999 (NINETEEN NINETY (NINE BY NINE) INDUSTRIES) 199X9

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/

[redacted]

GIVE US YOUR TIRED, YOUR POOR, YOUR THURSDAY ASSES YEARNING TO SEE PERFORMANCES FOR FREE

↑ Index

440. David Buuck
Gladman, Lu reading in SF 12/2
Sun 28 Nov 1999

Bay Area Now LIVE is a series of Thursday evening events occurring throughout the Bay Area Now 2 exhibition and festival. Bay Area Now LIVE will include readings, discussions, tours and performances featuring local celebrities and artists.

All events begin at 6pm and end by 8pm and are FREE with gallery admission.

Thursday, December 2

Rene Gladman & Pamela Lu
[Seven01 Café 6pm]

This kick-off event, features readings and discussion by two women artistsfrom the Bay Area lit scene. Renee Gladman edits Clamour, a magazine of innovative writing, andLeroy, a chapbook series. Most recently, her work has appeared in Gare du Nord, An Anthology of New (American) Poets (Talisman House) and Tinfish #7. Pamela Lu is co-editor of Idiom (www.idiomart.com), an online journal and chapbook press. Her first book of fanciful non- fiction, Pamela: A Novel (Atelos Press) was published this year.

Yerba Buena Center for the Arts 701 Mission Street (at 3rd)
San Francisco

[redacted]

↑ Index

441. Kathy Lou Schultz
HOW2 event in San Francisco
Sun 28 Nov 1999

HOW2
celebrates its arrival online

Sunday, December 5, 3 p.m.
San Francisco Art Institute
800 Chestnut at Leavenworth

Forum on "Class & Innovative Writing" panel discussion
Dodie Bellamy, Robert Gluck, Camille Roy, Kathy Lou Schultz, Robin Tremblay-McGaw

Readings from HOW2, Issues 1 & 2 Simone Fattal for Etel Adnan, Sarah Anne Cox, Norma Cole, Beverly Dahlen, Kathleen Fraser for Frances Jaffer, Susan Gevirtz, Dale Going, Fanny Howe, Myung Mi Kim, Carol Snow, Elizabeth Treadwell, Jo An Wasserman, and Elizabeth Willis

Donations welcome

HOW2
http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2

Editor: Kathleen Fraser
Managing Editor: Jo Ann Wasserman
^^^

Featured Readers:
Margaret Holley
directs the Creative Writing Program at Bryn Mawr College, and in spite of that, to her amazement, has managed to write several books worth of poems.

Patrick Kelly
is America's best-loved poet, considered the greatest writer of the century.

Jeff Loo teaches Creative Writing at Community College of Philadelphia and has published in such journals and collections as Many Mountains Moving, Southern Poetry Review, CrossConnect, And What Rough Beast: Poems for the End of the Century .

Plus Open Poetry and Performance Showcase $1 admission. Along with a live poetry reading and performance , we invite you to join in our website poetry reading presentation. All poets and performers may have a poem or a lyric featured in theNOTcoffeeHouse website. Send your work for inclusion in the ongoing internet presentation. Tell your friends all over the world to check our site! Poets and performers may submit works for direct posting on the website via email to the [redacted] or works may be emailed to Richard Frey at [redacted] or USPS or hand-delivered through slot at 500 South 25th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19146. More information: Church office, [redacted], Jeff Loo, [redacted] or Richard Frey, [redacted]. Visit our website at www.notcoffeehouse.org poets & performers previously appearing at NOTcoffeeHouse: Nathalie Anderson, Lisa Coffman, Barbara Cole, Barb Daniels, Linh Dinh, Lori-Nan Engler, Simone Zelitch, Dan Evans, Brenda McMillan, Kerry Sherin, John Kelly Green, Emiliano Martin, Jose Gamalinda, Toshi Makihara, Thom Nickels, Joanne Leva, Darcy Cummings, David Moolten, Kristen Gallagher, Shulamith Wachter Caine, Maralyn Lois Polak, Marcus Cafagna, Ethel Rackin, Lauren Crist, Beth Phillips Brown, Joseph Sorrentino, Frank X, Richard Kikionyogo, Elliott Levin, Leonard Gontarek, Lamont Steptoe, Bernard Stehle, Sharon Rhinesmith, Alexandra Grilikhes, C. A. Conrad, Nate Chinen, Jim Cory, Tom Grant, Gregg Biglieri, Stephanie Jane Parrino, Jeff Loo, Theodore A. Harris, Mike Magee, Wil Perkins, Deborah Burnham, UNSOUND, Danny Romero, Don Riggs, Shawn Walker, She-Haw, Scott Kramer, Judith Tomkins, 6 of the Unbearables - Alfred Vitale Ron Kolm, Jim Feast, Mike Carter, Sharon Mesmer, Carol Wierzbicki-,John Phillips, Quinn Eli, Molly Russakoff, Peggy Carrigan, Kelly McQuain, Patrick Kelly, Mark Sarro, Rocco Renzetti, Voices of a Different Dream - Annie Geheb, Ellen Ford Mason, Susan Windle - Bob Perelman, Jena

Osman, Robyn Edelstein,Brian Patrick Heston, Francis Peter Hagen, Shankar Vedantam, Yolanda Wisher, Lynn Levin

↑ Index

443. Jerrold Shiroma
New @ Duration Press
Mon 29 Nov 1999

Duration Press is extremely excited to announce that Burning Deck Press is now online. Featuring a full catalog, with book information & reviews, cover images, & individual title listings for the serie d'ecriture & dichten= series, the address for the site is:

http://www.durationpress.com/burningdeck/index.html

We would like to encourage all with web sites to add a link to this page. As all should know, for over 30 years, Burning Deck has been central to promoting & publishing innovative American poetry.

Also, new to our out of print archive is _It's Alive She Said_, by Cole Swensen.

http://www.durationpress.com/archives/cswensen/itsalive/toc.html

A few documents from our Alcheringa archive are also available at:

http://www.durationpress.com/archives/ethnopoetics/alcheringa/index.ht ml

↑ Index

444. R I Caddel
New BUNTING book... (fwd)
Mon 29 Nov 1999

Date: Mon, 29 Nov 1999 14:32:42 -0000
From: "Makin, John" <[redacted]> Subject: New BUNTING book...

New publication... Available from AMAZON and elsewhere soon...

BASIL BUNTING ON POETRY, Edited by Professor Peter Makin, Kansai University, Japan.=20

Hardcover, 304 pages, February 2000, from Johns Hopkins University Press, ISBN [redacted]. Price GBP sterling: =A332.50. US dollar price not known.

Cheers John Makin, Nottingham Trent University, UK.

↑ Index

445. Poetics List
avant garde / mckenzie
Mon 29 Nov 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

Date: Fri, Nov 26, 1999 5:20 PM +0000
From: geraldine mckenzie <[redacted]>
Subject: avant garde

It is misleading to refer to the avant garde solely in terms of novelty. This establishes an association with art as commodity which is generally repudiated by those artists who might be described as avant garde. Novelty is a creature of time and unreliable, a bye product of experiment rather than an end. I've occasionally read critics who refer, with a discreet jubilance, to early instances of various poetics, Concrete poetry is anexample, as though the prior existence of concrete texts invalidates the experimental qualities, the 'newness' of 20th Century engagements. What is more significant is the 'revolutionary' or oppositional nature of a text. It's not a poetic example but I can't help thinking of the teachings of Christ. (Is it relevant to say I am not a Christian and don't believe in God or gods?). These are ideas which are not new but are frequently revolutionary - think of Dostoievsky's Grand Inquisitor or, more recently, the film, Jesus of Montreal - there are some philosophies, aesthetics, ethical beliefs, which will always challenge hierarchical structures. Of course, the responses of orthodoxy will vary. I think Marcuse's theory of repressive tolerance (this may be out of date, I never hear references to it anymore but, when I encountered it years ago, it seemed a very persuasive idea) is relevant here - protest can be turned into a commodity and look how successfully this was done to the protest movements of the '60's. The majority of most Westerners, especially those under 40 (here comes a generalization) associate that period with sex and drugs and rock 'n roll, then there's the line (which annoys the hell out of me) - If you can remember the '60's, you weren't there. I think we all here know that's bullshit, but that's the official version, the received idea. And what did happen to the revolution? Well, civil rights/ feminism/the anti-war lobby/the environmentalists have all made some progress but the structures persist, the marketplace rules, input into the big decisions (was it ever a possibility? probably not) is traded off for the illusory comforts of 'personal freedom' - 'choice a banality in the supermarket'. Meanwhile, in the marketplace, the 'novelty' of the avant garde signals just another item for sale -or so some would like to think. If the experimental only referred to technique, this might be so, but when it refers to ideas or modes of thought, then it can constitute a challenge to what Bernstein accurately terms'official verse culture' and which, despite various 'local' successes by experimental poets, is still very much in place. I doubt the avant garde (only refering to poetry, I shan't buy into all those other ball games) can have any political impact in the narrow sense of the word, but it does maintain an area of opposition and creation, a sense of possibility and risk absent from conventional poetries. To say it does not, and can not, exist is either wishful thinking or a form of cultural despair, a loss of faith not only in poetry, but also language, and thus - us. (This is where I have to shut up or I'll get really carried away -

Regards, Geraldine McKenzie

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

446. Poetics List

Monday's poetry reading / Fouhy

Mon 29 Nov 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

Date: Sat, Nov 27, 1999 11:55 PM -0500
From: George Fouhy <[redacted]>
Subject: Monday's poetry reading

Monday's poet....visit site for bio and poem.

http://www.bestweb.net/~cindyf/poetry_2000.htm

↑ Index

447. Brent Long

Please help

Mon 29 Nov 1999

Hello, all...

Anyone here know of a good contemporary poetics list to which I could subscribe? Please e-mail me with any suggestions.

Thanks in advance,

Brent

Brent A. Long
Corporate Account Representative
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]

↑ Index

448. Poetry Project
this week at the Poetry Project
Mon 29 Nov 1999

And here we are, back from our Thanksgiving "vacations." While extended conversation with extended family members does indeed burn a few calories, we're definitely ready to burn off the several hundred more we ingested with the exciting readings happening here this week, including tonight, Monday, Nov. 29th at 8 pm

Douglas Goetsch & Jacqueline Waters

Goetsch's first full-length collection, Nobody's Hell, was published this year by Hanging Loose Press (copies will be available at the reading). Waters, an intrepid workshop student at the Project, has had work published or forthcoming in the Brooklyn Review, Poetry New York, and The Germ.

Wednesday, Dec. 1 at 8 pm

Michael Gottlieb & Jen Robinson

Gottlieb's most recent books are Gorgeous Plunge (Roof Books) and More Than All, a collaboration with Ted Greenwald. Robinson is the curator of the Poet's Web at the Internet Cafe in NYC and the author of For Conifer Fanatics.

and Friday, Dec. 3rd at 10:30 pm

Lydia Lunch & Nicole Blackman

Lydia Lunch began her career at age 16 as a guitarist and singer for the "no-wave" band Teenage Jesus and the Jerks. Since then, her many projects have included starring in films by underground director Richard Kern; musical collaborations with Nick Cave, the Birthday Party, Kim Gordon, Thurston Moore and many others; and the formation of her own production company, Widowspeak Productions. This is a rare chance to see this rebel multigenre artist read at the Poetry Project.

"High priestess of slam, industrial glitterbomb, word uberbabe" Nicole Blackman is reading to celebrate the publication of her first full-length collection of poetry, Blood Sugar (Incommunicado Press). Blackman is the vocalist on the Golden Palomino's album, Dead Inside, and was featured on the KMFDM album Xtort.

Tickets for this special reading are $12, $9 for students and seniors, and $8 for members. No advance tickets sales. Admission is door only. Call [redacted] for more information.

***

The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church on the corner of 2nd Ave. and 10th St. in Manhattan. The Project is wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. Regular events are $7; $4 for students and seniors.

***

If you would like to be removed from this e-mail list, please respond to this message with "remove me" in the subject line.

***

↑ Index

449. MAYHEW
(no subject)
Mon 29 Nov 1999

Murat wrote:

" Jonathan appears to say that class essentially is equivalent to culture in the United States. This is so if class expresses itself in writing only in terms of the class origin of the writer? Then, it is true, as Jonathan notes, a contradiction develops when a person moves up the economic scale, which is quite possible in the States. But what about class, reflected in terms of who supports or pays for the written product? Then, Jonathans financial sacrifice as a graduate student is a temporary state, as an interns on the way to becoming a doctor."

Good point. I don't think class is only equivalent to level of culture, but it clearly is not equivalent to the amount of money one has at a given moment either. I see is more as an underlying ethos defining preferences in large number of areas, including aesthetic. And people in academia use class to mean class origin, otherwise it would not make sense to speak of class differences at all since we are all doing the same thing for a living.

Who supports and pays for poetry? Good question that I hope will provoke lively discussion...

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

_____

↑ Index

450. david bromige
re : hierarchies of "excellence"
Mon 29 Nov 1999

> I guess, David, that I'm increasingly wary of hierarchies of "excellence."
>
> TomB.
>
> This could use some explanation. Does not excellence imply hierarchy?
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,

George,& other Listmates,

I take Tom's phrase "hierarchies of 'excellence'" to mean hierarchies based, as if they were objective, on inescapably subjective judgements as to what is excellent.

He is correct to be wary of the term 'excellence.' For e.g., when the Trustees want to purge a college of its troublesome professors, they hire a PreZ who will in the name of excellence roust these malcontents, many of whom are excellent teachers.

Or all of whom are excellent teachers, in this best of all possible worlds, Dr Pangloss. (Although, hmm, that was the name of the PreZ).

Still, while Ron "The Sheep are on Fire" Silliman appears to favor the inclusion of any blip on the screen in his fractal relief map of the poem, and while I am one of RS's greatest fans, I dont think that a volume made up of sentences from _Ketjak_ printed each as a separate poem, and lineated rather randomly, would have held the interest of many of us. Truly, RS had an excellent idea. And argued cogently for its excellence, appealing across class-lines for its reception as such.

 [I am notorious for my reading-in, of course. Maybe Ron had no such intention in adopting my term of contempt as if it might be honorific, to him. What argues against this being his intention is his enjoyment of my parodic invention, Jay Gutz, whose loathsome effusions Mrs Gutz, Jay's mom, probably loved. But this is divisive, middle-class thinking on my part, which I learned at privileged institutions I was canny enough to talk my ways into. On acid, it was a whole new cosmos. I spent hours writing the Secret of the Universe on a chalkboard, but next day, all it said was "Evidence."]

Tom Beckett thought well enough of RS's work to devote an issue of his journal _The Difficulties_ to it. Those writing about it did not speak as a wo/man to the effectiveness in the factory and in the farm fields of these poems (though such an argument could certainly be made).

It is time, perhaps, that I, Serenus Zeitblom, introduced my class-y self. I was corrupted by literature at an early age by a father who had a Jones for Dickens. Subsequently entering my judgment as to who or what is stupid or excellent have been standards derived from my reading. Possibly I ought to regret the unjust advantages I, child of the working class, was to derive from the largely middle- and upper-class-scripted books I consumed before the advent of tv. I don't know, I guess I'll go ask Adrian Leverk¨uhn.

"The dreadful slowness of things," groaned Matthew Arnold.(Or was it "terrible"?) Here's a poem that falls into the category "The Sheep are on Fire" for the delectation of the roisterous democrat estheticians among you. (I personally am left of socialism. Perhaps I expect too much of my fellow-persons.) I shall post one of these a week until the last Regionalist Unhierarchic among ye, be sated and cry "Enough!"

Sheep Chat

This is me shuffling my papers looking for my latest poem called "Reinventing the Wheel."

It should be here somewhere. Ah,

never mind. I think I remember how it went. Uh, goes:

"My lover who left me her Cat Stevens collection took my Allman Bros albums. Life

sucks but Shit happens.

I write as if talking to somebody in a convention from thirty years ago.

If only all my poems were this good.

Jay.

↑ Index

451. Steve Dickison

 Oppen Lecture  Clarification **

Mon 29 Nov 1999

Contrary to the faulty listing in the Chronicle this past Sunday, the true location for Stephen Cope's George Oppen Memorial Lecture this Thursday Dec 2 will be, as announced, at the Unitarian Center & NOT at the Poetry Center.

Also, a couple people out there have expressed the desire to move themselves from a 6:00 reading by Renee Gladman & Pamela Lu at Center for the Arts on Mission Street up to Mr Cope's lecture on Franklin & Geary. There will be some air around the 7:30 starting time-- the latter event will likely start, as per poetry practice, at 7:47.....see you there if you can make it.

> THE ANNUAL GEORGE OPPEN MEMORIAL LECTURE
> ON TWENTIETH CENTURY POETICS
>
> Presented by STEPHEN COPE
>
> Thursday December 2, 7:30 pm
> at The Unitarian Center, 1187 Franklin at Geary
> San Francisco

==========
Steve Dickison, Director
The Poetry Center & American Poetry Archives ~ San Francisco State University
1600 Holloway Avenue ~ San Francisco CA 94132 ~ [redacted]
~ ~ ~

Lâ taltazim hâlatan, walâkin
durn bî-llayâly kamâ tadûwru

Don't cling to one state
turn with the Nights,
as they turn

~Maqâmat al-Hamadhâni (tenth century; tr Stefania Pandolfo)

~ ~ ~

Bring all the art and science of the world, and baffle and humble it with
one spear of grass.

~Walt Whitman's notebook

↑ Index

452. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Two Readings
Mon 29 Nov 1999

Saturday, Dec 4, 4 pm, Double Happiness, Paul Hoover and Ann Lauterbach

Thursday, Dec 9, 5:30 pm, Columbia College, Chicago, Ferguson Auditorium: Paul Hoover and Susan Wheeler

↑ Index

453. Patrick F. Durgin
Re: Recent David Lehman book
Mon 29 Nov 1999

You should really take this up with J. Rothenberg, Katy. "Generosity" is a fine way to think about what we do. And what's been done.

At 04:48 PM 11/24/1999 -0500, you wrote:
>It sometimes feels like exclusionary politics and/or poetics is considered >avant-garde.
>
>Sometimes it feels like people think that to denounce something has to do >with being avant-garde.
>
>I think that generosity is a very avant-garde thing and doesn't get enough >credit.
>
>If Lehman really means this:

>
>>depart. While I find this to be a convincing argument, I would sooner >>help to quicken a new avant-garde than pronounce the demise of an old >>one."
>>
>
>then I like that.
>
>It's hard to be a poet.
>
>Katy
>
>

k e n n i n g a newsletter of contemporary poetry, poetics, and nonfiction writing http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

↑ Index

454. George Bowering
Re: government funding in the arts
Mon 29 Nov 1999

It doesnt say so anywhere, but I am guessing that the following is an enquiry regarding matters in the USA.

> hello all--
>
> i'm trying to get a concrete sense of what is happening to government funding in the arts. that is to say, everyone speaks of the "trend" in arts, the cutbacks in the nea budget, etc.--but what are smaller, non-prof organizations feeling both by the nea and by state arts orgs in numbers? anybody out there head an arts org and have specific examples of slashes, i.e. how much of a decrease in funding they have received over the past 10 years or whatever?
>
> particularly, i'm interested in examples of organizations/people who have had some dealings with the california arts council--or other state arts councils whose behavior might be akin to the cac (maybe new york?)
>
> or, if you know something about the type of people who sit on the state/federal arts panels and where to get more info about this, please do tell.
>
> please backchannel with info, thanks.

> summi

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

455. Alan Sondheim
a message from the past (fwd)
Mon 29 Nov 1999

/

a message from the past: a message from the past:

P:: for this is the furthermost point of my advance, through and into your time, the time of this mailing, before i return to the tenth century. oh, it has always been assumed that time travel goes from present to past, present to future, and return again, but i am writing to inform you that there are those of us who prefer living in the past, and on occasion venturing to a future already past for those living in the present: this is the safest existence possible, and i am breaking our tradition by informing you, here, and now, of this exigency. for we live safely in a world still populated by numerous plants and animals you have driven to extinction, not to mention numerous ethnic groups which you have violated, eliminated, torn from their native lands, destroyed in every conceivable fashion. our world is still whole, and as long as we move back and forth within it, never venturing beyond, let us say, the date and time of this missive itself, we shall be ensured of permanent domicile, even with the threat of your nuclear war bringing everything to a halt. P:: in the meantime, what is it i wish to say to you? nothing, but a greeting; there is no way to respond, no place of residence within which you may find me. or rather, you might trace one or another life across cities, nations, continents; such a life may or may not cross my own, but at least, if you return to the tenth century, you will be far closer than you are at this very moment. perhaps if i told you my name? it would mean nothing to you of course, although you may call me saki. of course there are many such, and there is no guarantee that this word is properly transliterated, and among us, transliteration is all that exists. so you may think of me as this text, ignoring the consciousness from the past, roaming among lands and centuries, that has produced it. nonetheless, i do call the tenth century my home; i have so many friends there, and the comforting ring of familiarity continues eternally. P:: of course you may, there is always a kindness in that.

↑ Index

456. pete spence
Re: class
Mon 29 Nov 1999

> 23-Nov-99 16:30 you wrote:
> Suddenly i remembered that I should know about working class a lot.
> I was thoroughly drilled in marxism and leninism all through many years of > school and university back in the 70s in the Soviet Union. M.Z.
>
> i'd thought maybe doing a bit o' labour because it was your only option
> would be a better sampler than being drilled by theory//pete spence
>
> It was in good old Soviet times when the State paid for schooling. Now I > have to do quite a bit of labour to support a family of five my husband > being a poet. M.Z.

seems to me that the last thing you should support is his being a poet tell him to go out to work what is this thing that poets somehow just buzz around spraying words everywhere and do little else//pete

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

457. pete spence
Re: Class and Money
Mon 29 Nov 1999

> The same day, Pete Spence responds to Maria Zavialov:
> "Suddenly I remembered that I should know about working class a lot.
> I was thoroughly drilled in marxism and leninism all through many years of > school and university back in the 70s in the Soviet Union." M.Z.
>
> i'd thought maybe doing a bit o' labour because it was your only option
> would be a better sampler than being drilled by theory//pete spence"
>
> Does Pete have a special knowledge that Maria belongs to the idle > reach?

> Or is it implicit in his comment that labor is only labor ("authentic") if it > is working class? Is this an example of the "sentimental working-class poetics?"
>
> Murat Nemet-Nejat

maybe maria could have worded it better ,still think i probably seen closer views of working class than a lot, my father a socialist was under the threat of the "crimes act' here for years and i remember him being interviewed on t.v. knowing he would probably be arrested when he left the studio could go on but!!! sentiment/sediment/saidund meant//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

458. David Knoebel
Call for papers
Mon 29 Nov 1999

the ISAMA 2000 website under construction http://www.cs.washington.edu/isama2000/

with the call for papers

The poetry call, more specifically, should read and eventually will read:

Poetry/Math/Hypertext

"Presentations of poetry based on mathematics are invited. Algorithmic poems, poems in the Oulipian line, poems engaging the content of mathematics, or any other work inspired by the literature/mathematics intersection. Presentations should be 20 minutes in length. Visualization (overheads, computer projections, videotapes, etc.) will be supported."

↑ Index

459. hassen
Re: government funding in the arts
Mon 29 Nov 1999

perhaps others would also like to hear on/of this (following)? i know i would.

h

From: Summi Kaipa <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>

Sent: Wednesday, November 24, 1999 8:46 PM
Subject: government funding in the arts

hello all--

i'm trying to get a concrete sense of what is happening to government funding in the arts. that is to say, everyone speaks of the "trend" in arts, the cutbacks in the nea budget, etc.--but what are smaller, non-prof organizations feeling both by the nea and by state arts orgs in numbers? anybody out there head an arts org and have specific examples of slashes, i.e. how much of a decrease in funding they have received over the past 10 years or whatever?

particularly, i'm interested in examples of organizations/people who have had some dealings with the california arts council--or other state arts councils whose behavior might be akin to the cac (maybe new york?)

or, if you know something about the type of people who sit on the state/federal arts panels and where to get more info about this, please do tell.

please backchannel with info, thanks.

summi

↑ Index

460. Charles Bernstein
NYC reading 12/1
Tue 30 Nov 1999

Charles Bernstein

at

The Poetry Forum

New School for Social Research

66 West 12th St (New York City)

Wednesday, December 1

6:30 pm in Room 510

_____
30 minute reading + 30 minute interview
_____

↑ Index

461. Tom Beckett
Prolegomena to a Phenomenology of Self-Help
Tue 30 Nov 1999

1.

Call it

something, stupid

2.

Write on him

"You've got a problem -- problems"

3.

A name or thing partially perceived

all tied up in "nots"

4.

"Why can't I buy a vowel?"

5.

Name of the farter shame of the mover

↑ Index

462. Nielsen, Aldon
Fwd: Humor: Rules for Singin' the Blues
Tue 30 Nov 1999

---

from a neighboring list

> forwarded message
> |||O|||///\\\///\\\///\\\||||///\\\///\\\///\\\|||O|||

Rules for Singin' the Blues

1. Most blues begin "woke up this morning".

2. "I got a good woman" is a bad way to begin the blues, unless you stick something nasty in the next line. "I got a good woman - with the meanest dog in town".

3. Blues are simple. After you have the first line, repeat it. Then find something that rhymes - sort of: "Got a good woman with the meanest dog in town. He got teeth like Margaret Thatcher and he weigh 500 pound".

4. The blues are not about limitless choice.

5. Blues cars are Chevies and Cadillacs. Other acceptable blues transportation is a Greyhound bus or a southbound train. Walkin' plays a major part in the blues lifestyle. So does fixin' to die.

6. Teenagers can't sing the blues. Adults sing the blues. Blues adulthood means old enough to get the electric chair if you shoot a man in Memphis.

7. You can have the blues in New York City, but not in Brooklyn or Queens and DEFINITELY not in Staten Island.

7a. Hard times in Vermont or North Dakota are just a recession.

7b. Chicago, St Louis, and Kansas City are still the best places to have the blues.

8. The following colors do not belong in the blues:

a) Violet

b) Beige

c) Mauve

d) Puce

9. You can't have the blues in an office or a shopping mall. The lighting is wrong.

10. Good places for the blues:

a) The Highway

b) The Jailhouse

c) An Empty Bed

Bad places:

a) Ashrams

b) Gallery Openings

c) Weekends In The Hamptons

d) Wine-tastings in Napa

e) The Santa Fe Opera

f) Anywhere in Durango, Colorado

11. No one will believe it's the blues if you wear a suit, unless you happen to be an old black guy.

12. Do you have a right to sing the blues? Yes, if:

a) Your first name is a southern state - like Georgia

b) You're blind

c) You shot a man in Memphis

d) You are unable to be satisfied

No, if:

a) You were once blind but now can see.

b) You're deaf.

c) You have a trust fund or 401K.

13. Neither Julio Iglesias nor Barbra Streisand may sing the blues.

14. If you ask for water and your baby gives you gasoline, it's the blues.

Other blues beverages are:

a) Cheap Wine

b) Whiskey

c) Muddy Water

Blues beverages are NOT:

a) Any mixed drink

b) Any kosher wine for Passover

c) Yoo Hoo (all flavors)

d) Perrier

15. If it occurs in a cheap motel or a shotgun shack, it's blues death. Stabbed in the back by a jealous lover is a blues way to die. So is the electric chair, substance abuse, or being denied treatment in a hospital emergency room. It is not a blues death if you die during rhinoplasty, a liposuction treatment, or while receiving dental implants.

16. Some blues names for women:

a) Sadie

b) Big Mama

c) Bessie

17. Some blues names for men:

a) Joe

b) Willie

c) Little Willie

d) Lightning

Corollary

1) Anyone with the name of physical infirmity (Old Blind Joe, Gimpy Jackson etc)

2) Anyone with last name of a president (Jefferson, Johnson, Fillmore, etc.)

> (Persons with names like Ashley, Sunshine,Sequoia or Sierra will not be permitted to sing the blues no matter how many men they shoot in Memphis.)
>
> |||O|||///\\\///\\\ afrikan.net/hype ///\\\///\\\|||O|||

↑ Index

463. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: Recent David Lehman book
Tue 30 Nov 1999

> I think that generosity is a very avant-garde thing and doesn't get enough credit.

which puts me in mind of the closing section of Antin's "What It Means To Be Avant Garde" (with apologies to David for typing over his typography):

nothing within the horizon of my discourse could have prepared me for that moment with my aunt fanny who had just lost the husband she'd lived with for over forty years and was now on the telephone and it seems to be that if you cant respond to that youre not in the avant garde

[by the way -- does anybody have the book at hand? is that "seems to be" a typo for "seems to me"? I'm taking this from C. Beach's reprint in his anthology]

↑ Index

464. Lawrence Upton
Sub Voicive Poetry - end of / start of an era
Tue 30 Nov 1999

Quite a few people on this list have read at SVP - Mike Heller, David Bromige, Anselm Hollo in the last few weeks - or visited it.

SVP has been at its Sandland St venue for so long, you might be forgiven for thinking that we own the venue...

BUT

Sub Voicive Poetry has moved to a new venue where it is hoped the readings will take place for at least one season. Maybe for the next 10 years.

There will be no more readings at 3 Cups

The venue is:

Upstairs,
Churchill's
59 Mount Pleasant
London WC1X 0AE

The first reading at the new venue will be on 7th December 1999, Alan Halsey and Gavin Selerie. 8 p.m. for 8.15 p.m.

Mount Pleasant is not that far from the old venue and easy enough to find. Anyone who needs it or may need it, please ask me for instructions on how to get there

↑ Index

465. Poetics List
Looking for Visual artists who use text / Smith
Tue 30 Nov 1999

I was asked to forward this message to the list. Chris

--
From: Terri Smith <[redacted]>
Date: 11/23/99 2:25 PM -0600

Dear Christopher Alexander, I curate "Temporary Contemporary," a series of monthly, solo exhibits at Cheekwood Museum of Art that feature artists from or currently living in the Southeast. Some of the artists we've featured thus far are: Robert Ryman, William Eggleston, Coleman Coker, Elliott Puckette and Donald Sultan...we've also featured talented, lesser known artists from the region such as Brad Thomas, Andrew Saftel, Chris Verene and Carrie McGee. One type of exhibit I have yet to do, but am very interested in, would feature an artist from (or currently living in) the Southeast whose emphasis in their visual art is poetry/text (or the emphasis in their poetry is visual). I would also be open to installation-style work which includes visuals in conjunction with an audio or video spoken word component. Lisa Jarnot suggested this site as a place to post my inquiry. Essentially people who would be interested in being considered for our Temporary Contemporary series need to send 10-20 slides of their most recent work (if their work is installation with video or audio, I'd like a video or audio tape also) along with a resume/C.V. to my attention (Terri Smith) at Cheekwood Museum of Art, 1200 Forrest Park Dr., Nashville, TN 37205. If anyone has questions or needs more information, they can e-mail me at [redacted] FYI -- The gallery space is in one of Cheekwood's contemporary art galleries. The gallery is 90 running feet with 70 feet of useable wall space. For more information about Cheekwood's activities regarding contemporary art, people can check out our web site cheekwood.org. -- this should give artists/writers an idea of the context in which their work would be shown if they were chosen to exhibit.

Thank you for your help with this project. If you could e-mail back to confirm you received this request, I would greatly appreciate it. Please also feel free to reply if any of this needs clarifying.

Best wishes,
Terri Smith

↑ Index

466. Michael Magee
apt in Brooklyn, roomates needed
Tue 30 Nov 1999

Howdy all,

My brother, a very nice chap indeed and a wonderful painter to boot, is looking for roomates for his really nice four-bedroom apartment which is located across from the Brooklyn Museum of Art. Backchannel me at [redacted] if your interested.

-Mike.

↑ Index

467. Christopher Reiner
Extra, Extra...Gov't to Subsidize Poetry (sort of)
Tue 30 Nov 1999

From a Department of Education e-list....

---------- Poetry Contest: Transportation ----------
This month Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater invited students across the U.S. to compose & submit poems related to transportation in hopes that their writings will inspire them to prepare for transportation jobs in the new millennium by studying math & science. The poetry contest is divided into categories for Grades 1-3, Grades 4-6, & Grades 7-8. The deadline is January 31, 2000. Regional & national winners for each grade category will be announced in March. Winning poems will be published in the Garrett A. Morgan Technology & Transportation Futures Program website & in the program's quarterly newsletter. Winners will be selected based on best presentation of the theme, originality, & artistic interpretation. Contest guidelines & additional information are at: http://www.dot.gov/edu/poetry/ http://www.dot.gov/affairs/dot18899.htm

↑ Index

468. Pete
Re: community
Tue 30 Nov 1999

Brent asked, during the thread on regionalism, if anyone had any thoughts on community.

Yes, frankly, I think writing is a communal act by definition, and extended, I think writing (especially performing) poetry is more obviously communal. However, I have yet to find anything in the modern world resembling community as it seems to occur in the ancient world. I'm also thinking of present-day (not modern) communities like those studied by the anthropologists. The sense of alienation I experience is precisely the lack of community. It's pretty damned ironic that we gregarious animals become more and more socially disconnected as our technology increases the speed of transportation and communication, but I guess our capability for adaptation results in some kind of tolerance for this condition, intolerable as it will eventually present itself to be.

So for me, to some extent, poetry is a social act; the act of an alien seeking community, even if only the mythical community of Elysium.

Pete

↑ Index

469. Simon DeDeo
Class & Poet[ry/ics]
Tue 30 Nov 1999

Trying to keep up with the list recently, but falling behind every now and again. I'll try to keep this as noninflammatory as possible.

The question of class in poetry -- whether it be from the outside (people questioning the class origins of various poets or poetic movements) or the inside (poets wondering about their own authenticity w/r/t class) -- is, more often that not, a question designed to avoid the much more problematic issue of race.

Indeed, in the wider world, nobody really cares about a writer's class in isolation from his race. When was the last time Byron was attacked for being from the lesire/upper/aristocratic class? Much, much longer ago than he was for being white. Similarly, the "lower class authenticity" carries little weight when the author is white, as can be checked by looking over the class backgrounds of some of the canonized. Not that this is a bad thing, in my opinion.

I don't want to touch the issue of race more than to point out that the debate here seems to be interesting in as much as it is about things internal to a writer's poetics. Sociologically, politically, the examination of class in poetry is a blind for (mainly white) critics who want to distract attention from the issue of race. But when we ask about a writer's relation to class -- his/her own, or another's -- in poetry, aesthetically, we start asking very interesting and neat questions that for me circle around (who else but) Marx and, in particular, the idea of alienation.

-- Simon

[redacted]
http://www.fas.harvard.edu/~sdedeo

↑ Index

470. Elizabeth Treadwell
new chapbooks by women
Tue 30 Nov 1999

Sarah Anne Cox and I are looking for the LATEST chapbooks by women to write about in HOW2 for spring. Need em quick, deadline looming.

Thank you.

Elizabeth Treadwell

PO Box 9013
Berkeley, CA 94709

http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

December 1999

336 messages · Tue 30 Nov 1999 – Fri 31 Dec 1999

December 1999 — the last month of the thousand years, if you counted that way — opened in tear gas and closed on New Year's Eve, and the Poetics list met the millennium with a shrug and the street with real attention. Of the calendar's supposed terrors it made a joke, Y2K surviving on the list mostly as sign-offs like Joe Amato's "happy y2k!...". But Seattle it took seriously: as the WTO talks collapsed under a police riot, David Bromige forwarded eyewitness feeds and the room argued it hard, Patrick Herron flatly declaring "Amerika is a police state", the Poetry Project countering on the ethics of the boycott. Meanwhile Yeltsin resigned, Grozny burned, and the list said not one word — its ledger was never the world's.

The month's largest thread was not a prophecy but an inventory. Arielle Greenberg asked what everyone was reading at the flip of the nines, and the list answered with its bedside stacks — Guest and Borges and Celan and Tender Buttons, champagne, noisemakers for everyone — a roll-call not of what the next century would bring but of what this one had left on the night table. Greenberg signed off toward the rollover with the season's truest two words, "see you in the meltdown", and the century's end became, on the Poetics list, a list.

The one argument that broke clean through the moderator was, fittingly for this room, about who is allowed to speak in it. A long, tangled cluster of threads on class, race, and whiteness ran all month, careful and genuine, until a lurker's patience snapped: Katie Degentesh erupted that "ALL ANYONE EVER TALKS ABOUT IS CLASS", demanding to know whether the list was made of writers or activists. Dodie Bellamy answered evenly, "This is rather dismissive, don't you think?", and the two fell to trading mock salutations. It was the month's most sustained discussion and, in the same breath, a fight over whether that discussion should be happening at all — the moderated list's deepest reflex, to argue about its own terms.

Alongside it ran the list's perennial undertow of commerce and craft: a wry thread on how bookstores shelve poetry by race and sexuality because it helps the books sell, a scheme to print online work between covers, and — when that scheme grew too American — komninos zervos's tart reminder, "thoght this was an international list?", typo and all. The century was ending; the shop talk went on regardless.

And then, ten days before the year and the century ran out, Edward Dorn died. The list that could no longer simply talk did the one thing its machinery could not forbid: it stopped, and grieved. Tom Beckett remembered a man of “ferocious intelligence and great wit”; and the moderator himself, who admitted he had not known Dorn, set the rules aside to post the elegy called Mourning Letter into a gatekept room. I have set that elegy at the very end of the archive’s century exactly as December left it, because it is how this room — tamed, gatekept, and nearly silent — chose to see out a thousand years: not with a prophecy, but by making room, one last time, for the dead.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 336 in all.

WRITERS

A, Heather 278
Administration, Poetics List 35, 36, 37, 157, 158, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186
Administrator, Undetermined Origin C/o… 232 Alexander, Charles 327
Amato, Joe 63, 199, 292
And, Miekal 192
Andrews, Jim 34, 87
Askenase, Alicia 46
Baratier, David 172
Beaulieu, Derek 17
Beckett, Tom 26, 173, 286, 326
Bellamy, Dodie 98
Bernstein, Charles 77, 214, 234, 237, 328
Bibby, Michael 107
Blevins, Matthew 203
Bowering, George 128, 193, 194, 335
Brady, Taylor 129
Brennan, Joe 122
Brink, Leonard 152
Bromige, David 33, 42, 65, 68, 191, 196, 217, 218
Bryant, Tisa 291
Cabri, Louis 53, 140, 146
Cameron, David 208
Carter, Daniel 75, 162
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 113
Chirot, David Baptiste 325
Corbett, Robert 307
Daly, Catherine 52, 135, 228
Damon, Maria 9, 10, 30, 80, 95, 96, 97, 134, 161, 213, 238, 247, 287, 288, 308, 330, 333
Danon, Ruth 313
Davis, Jordan 206, 215
Day, Roger 105, 153
Debrot, Jacques 180, 311, 312
DeDeo, Simon 40, 71, 138, 147
Degentesh, Katie 60, 102, 150, 231
Dillon, Richard 66, 190, 285
Dorward, Nate And Jane 141, 149
Dowker, David 70
Drake, R. 47, 57
DuCharme, Mark 250
Dykstra, Kristin 245
E, Wright Laura 86, 111, 222
Edwards, Ken 168
ELECTRONICS, ART 115
Ellis, Stephen 43
Filkins, Christopher L. 236
Al Filreis 14, 20, 84, 100
Fouhy, George 176
Freedman, Robert 221
Gilbert, Roger 170
Gitin, David 233
Glazier, Loss Pequeño 230
Gordon, Nada 298
Green, Tony 117, 189, 314
Greenberg, Arielle C. 130, 309
Grumman, Bob 175, 300
Guitart, Jorge 19, 21
H, F I L C 82, 101, 155, 187
Hacker, Scot 91
Hamshaw, Carol L. 2
Healy, L. MacMahon And T.R. 4, 174
Hehir, K.Angelo 202
Herron, Patrick 51, 55, 279, 319
Jernigan, Marla 144
Joris, Pierre 6, 246
Kaipa, Summi 18, 226
Kane, Daniel 11, 13, 31, 58, 90
Keeney, Scott 179
Kelley, Karen 124
Killian, Kevin 24, 211
Kimmelman, Burt 241
Kirschenbaum, David 156, 201, 297
Knoebel, David 334
Labeau, Daniel 142
Lang, Doug 216
Langmade, Lynn 332
Larsen, David 41
Lennon, Brian 61
Levitsk 136
Levy, Herb 178, 329
List, Poetics 108, 109, 110, 112, 116, 121, 123, 219, 220, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 302, 304, 322
Loden, Rachel 89, 254
Long, Brent 114
Lorber, Brendan 240
Lowther, John 29, 198
Magee, Michael 8
Marks, Steven 336
MAYHEW 12, 200, 227, 272
McDonough, Judy Smith 72
Mckenzie, Geraldine 78
Mdw 296
Meckendover, Herbert 7
Minyard, Susan 48
Mulholland, Tedd J. 323
Neff, Michael 271, 306
Neufeld, Peter 15, 85

Nielsen, Aldon 59, 83
Nuyopoman 320, 321
Ortiz, Travis 139
Osman, Jena 280
Pete 81
Phipps, Wanda 171
Piombino, Toni Simon And Nick 148
Prejsnar, Mark 49, 125, 154, 223, 229, 239
Press, Angle Press Angle 244
Pritchett,Patrick 118, 255
Project, Poetry 50, 54, 145, 299
Prunty, Randy 331
Raj, Acharya Hom 207
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 56, 103, 143
Ruggles, Trace 120
Russell, Layne 28
Russell, Leslye Layne 249, 277
Schultz, Kathy Lou 5, 126, 127, 165
Schultz, Susan M. 39, 177
Schwartz, Gerald 324
Searls, Damion 133, 205
Shapiro, Gary 275, 276
Sherry, James 256
Shiroma, Jerrold 1, 69, 160, 164, 167, 243
Silliman, Ron 106, 159, 197
Sithiwong, Rebecca Weldon 74
Slaughter, William 257
Sondheim, Alan 3, 27, 67, 73, 79, 137, 151, 209, 212, 242, 251, 252, 259, 283, 293, 305, 310
Spence, Pete 93, 94, 294
Stefans, Brian 204, 303
Stengel, Jill 16, 163, 166, 301
Stroffolino, Chris 92, 210, 290, 318
Sumner, Alaric 88
Tills, Steve 25, 38, 104, 295
Tranter, John 258
Treadwell, Elizabeth 22, 23, 62, 132, 235
Tuma, Keith 225
Upton, Lawrence 32, 44, 45, 76, 119, 188
Vbnm2 284
Vincent, Stephen 131, 224, 274, 281
Weishaus, Joel 273, 289
Weiss, Mark 270
Wheeler, Susan 195
Wolff, Rebecca 169, 248
Zauhar, David 282
Zervos, Komninos 64, 253, 315, 316, 317
}, { Brad Brace 99

NAMES MENTIONED

Adams, John 326
Adams, Robert 305
Alexander, Christopher W. 121, 304
Alice, Mary 258, 299
Amerika, Mark 51, 97, 114, 120, 319
Anderson, Laurie 322
Andrews, Bruce 230
Anne, Sarah 4, 22, 23, 62, 163
Antin, David 1, 10
Apollinaire, Guillaume 84
Arbor, Ann 246
Armand, Louis 258
Armantrout, Rae 61, 92
Armstrong, Aaron 17
Arnold, Bob 109
Ashberry, John 274
Ashbery, John 130, 200, 227, 239, 271, 272, 303
Atlanta, Mark P. 24, 46, 56, 66, 162, 262, 323
Auden, W. H. 158, 204, 248
Ave, Madison 54
Baker, Mary 17, 262, 309, 314, 323, 332
Baker, Tony 141
Baraka, Amiri 225, 266
Barnard, Mary 20
Barnes, Diane 104, 111
Barnett, Catherine 206, 215
Basinski, Michael 17
Basso, Eric 325
Baudelaire, Charles 224
Beckett, Samuel 26
Belgum, Erik 157
Bell, Thomas 258, 261
Benjamin, Walter 148, 326
Bennett, John M. 17, 175
Berkeley, Michael 4, 20, 22, 23, 33, 62, 66, 77, 139
Berkson, Bill 240
Berlin, Irving 109
Bernstein, Emma 29, 43, 78, 229, 230, 303, 320, 321, 330
Berrigan, Anselm 156, 157
Berrigan, Eddie 240
Berrigan, Edmund 157
Berrigan, Ted 86, 224, 230
Bishop, Elizabeth 37
Blake, William 204, 248
Blanchfield, Brian 145
Blau, Rachel 58
Borges, Jorge Luis 82, 124, 258, 323
Bouchard, Daniel 145, 201
Boyle, Kay 324
Bradley, Tom 17
Brady, Andrea 258
Bramhall, Allen 70
Brannen, Jonathan 17
Brazil, David 230
Brecht, Bertolt 204, 248
Bronk, William 289, 324
Brown, Pamela 258
Brown, Tina 204
Bryan, John 327
Bryant, Dana 299

Bukowski, Charles 285, 290
Burnham, Clint 92
Burnham, Deborah 322
Burroughs, William 230
Burton, Philip 37
Byrne, David 157
Byron, Philip 5, 9, 40, 59, 107, 122
Caddel, Richard 331
Cafagna, Marcus 322
Cameron, Sharon 62
Campbell, Jeremy 214
Cannon, Steve 181
Caples, Garrett 158
Carlos, William 131, 214
Carroll, Jim 145, 299
Carroll, Jon 257
Carter, Angela 157
Carter, Mike 276, 283, 322
Celan, Paul 246, 323
Chadwick, Lynn 62, 235
Chaucer, Geoffrey 305
Cherry, Don 325
Chinen, Nate 322
Clampitt, Amy 303
Clark, Emilie 139
Clark, Tom 225, 258
Clarke, Jack 80
Clemente, Francesco 261
Clinton, Bill 55, 85, 225, 293, 306
Cobbing, Bob 32, 76, 258
Coffman, Lisa 322
Cole, Barbara 322
Cole, Sean 201
Coleman, Victor 54
Collier, Michael 276
Collins, Phil 178
Coltrane, John 332
Columbus, Christopher 234, 301
Comments, Chicago 175
Conrad, Tony 322
Coolidge, Clark 7
Cooper, Paula 46
Cory, Jim 322
Coultas, Brenda 62, 235
County, Mike 33, 66, 225
Coyle, Michael 267, 268
Crawford, Robert 121
Creeley, Robert 77, 157, 214, 225, 230, 234, 237, 266
Crist, Lauren 322
Curnow, Wystan 314
Darger, Henry 319
Davidson, Michael 20, 37
Davie, Donald 225
Davinio, Caterina 115
Davis, Martin 201, 245, 314
Day, Dorothy 325
Delaney, Samuel 158, 181
Delany, Samuel 230
Deleuze, Gilles 326
Dentz, Shira 54
Derrida, Jacques 336
Dickens, Charles 28
Dickinson, Emily 204, 248, 276
Dixon, Bill 84
Doris, Stacy 158
Dorn, Edward 185, 186, 214, 219, 225
Drucker, Johanna 17
Duncan, Andrew 266
Duncan, Robert 103, 117, 160, 214
Dunlop, Nancy 70
Dunn, Douglas 299
Durand, Marcella 50, 62, 145, 201
Durgin, Patrick 62, 70, 100, 106, 301
Dutton, Paul 17
Dylan, Bob 303
Dylan, Michael 220
Dyne, Melissa 328, 329
Elena, Maria 54
Eliot, Joe 78, 303, 323
Elliot, Joe 54, 145
Elliott, George 322
England, Amy 55, 175, 214, 225, 229, 276
Eno, Brian 303
Esther, Little 258
Ethan, Jeffrey 84
Etter, Carrie 70
Eugene, Brett 276, 326
Evans, Dan 322
Evans, Steve 223
Fagin, Larry 7
Ferguson, Jesse 113, 158
Fielding, Kent 156
Finkelstein, Norman 258
Fisher, Allen 141, 246, 248
Fisher, Harrison 70, 141, 204, 324
Flynn, Richard 122, 136
Ford, Ellen 322
Foreman, Richard 145, 299
Foucault, Michel 314
France, Peter 225, 230
Fraser, Kathleen 234, 331
Freeman, Brad 276
Frey, Richard 322
Friedman, Thomas 267, 268
Frost, Corey 301
Fuchs, Greg 206
Ganick, Peter 167, 188
Gardner, Drew 70
Gates, Bill 81
Geheb, Annie 322
Gevirtz, Susan 163
Gins, Madeline 331
Ginsberg, Allan 266, 303

Ginsberg, Allen 214
Giorno, John 299
Glück, Louise 200
Goetsch, Douglas 35, 36
Golding, Alan 61, 92, 100, 106
Gontarek, Leonard 322
Goodman, Amy 158
Goodman, Paul 158
Gottlieb, Michael 77, 256
Gould, Henry 70, 258
Graham, Jorie 89
Graves, Robert 26
Greco, Diane 241, 269
Greenberg, Arielle C. 130, 309, 314, 332
Greene, Jonathan 234
Greenspan, Alan 89
Gregg, Linda 322
Grenier, Bob 25, 175
Grenier, Robert 170, 175
Griffiths, Bill 204
Grosman, Ernesto 234
Group, Poets 323
Guest, Barbara 130, 168, 258, 309, 314, 323, 332
Halsey, Alan 70
Hamilton, Diana 179
Hamshaw, Carol L. 2
Hancock, Carl 181
Harris, Ken 17, 249, 322
Harryman, Carla 328, 329
Hartley, George 61, 92
Harvey, George 332, 336
Harwood, Lee 225
Hatlen, Burt 37
Healy, Randolph 4, 174
Heaney, Seamus 19
Hecht, Anthony 303
Hejinian, Lyn 20, 139, 230
Heller, Joseph 187
Henderson, David 54, 181
Herman, Rachel 324
Heuving, Jeanne 328, 329
Hill, Crag 175
Hillman, Brenda 332
Hofer, Jen 163, 328, 329
Hoffman, Daniel 121
Hollander, Ben 249
Holley, Margaret 322
Hollo, Anselm 108, 147, 169, 184, 185
Holman, Bob 11, 181
Holmes, Janet 301
Holst, Spencer 183
Hoover, Edgar 234
Hoover, Paul 113
Howard, Richard 168, 200
Hugo, Richard 328, 329
Hunt, Erica 126, 165, 205
Indiana, Gary 61, 92
Ireland, Lauren 4, 132, 230, 276
Israel, David R. 230
Jackson, George 325
Jackson, Jesse 62, 122, 248, 280, 303, 311, 313, 317, 319
Jacobs, Ken 118
Jaeger, Peter 17
Jameson, Fredric 61, 92
Jarman, Mark 249
Johnson, Ray 130, 309, 314, 323, 332
Johnson, Thomas 172, 331
Jones, Bob 178, 225, 266, 325
Jordan, June 230
Joseph, Safdie 88
Joyce, Michael 144
Jullich, Jeffrey 62
Karasick, Adeena 201
Karenina, Anna 115
Kaufman, Bob 238, 247
Kearney, Douglas 301
Kelleher, Mike 261
Keller, Helen 331
Keller, Lynn 37
Kelly, John 322
Kelly, Patrick 322
Kelly, Paul 14, 20, 84, 100, 106, 322
Kelly, Robert 157, 255
Kennedy, Kit 276
Kerry, John 322
Kiely, Aaron 201
Killian, Sean 56
Kim, Myung Mi 163
Kirschenbaum, David A. 297
Koch, Kenneth 130, 201
Koethe, John 200, 227
Kolm, Ron 322
Kramer, Scott 322
Kramer, Wendy 297
Kristeva, Julia 158
Kuszai, Joel 77, 89, 256
Kyger, Joanne 230, 266
Laity, Cassandra 267, 268
Lakoff, George 331
Landers, Sue 297
Lazer, Hank 234
Lehman, David 1, 6, 10, 25, 204, 227, 248
Leno, Jay 303
Leva, Joanne 322
Levertov, Denise 266
Levin, Jonathan 322
Levin, Lynn 322
Levine, Jeffrey 258
Levitsky, Rachel 163
Lewis, George 178
Lilley, Kate 258
Lomax, Alan 163

London, Frank 32, 168, 181, 186, 214, 219, 225, 293, 306
Loo, Jeff 322
Lopez, Richard 325
Lopez, Tony 141, 168
Lorberer, Eric 157
Lorca, Federico García 131, 276
Mac Low, Jackson 299
Lowell, Amy 266
Lowell, Robert 37
Lowenthal, Jessica 142
Lubasch, Lisa 157, 163
Lustig, Dana 144
Lynch, Jessica 271
Madison, James 246
Magee, Mike 322, 327
Malmude, Anna 206
Malmude, Steve 7
Mangold, Sarah 62
Markotic, Nicole 146
Marsh, Bill 87
Martin, Chris 322
Martin, Douglas A. 145
Mason, Chris 322, 328, 329
Matthews, William 168
Maxwell, Susan 208
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 84, 145
Mayer, Bernadette 13, 157, 206
Mayhew, Jonathan 12, 19, 93, 200, 227, 272
Maynard, Joe 201
Mead, Philip 234
Mead, Taylor 299
Meredith, William 70
Merrill, Stuart 7
Mesmer, Sharon 145, 322
Metcalf, Paul 179
Middleton, Peter 37, 141
Mingus, Charles 325
Miriam, Erica 14
Moolten, David 322
Moore, Nicholas 258
Morris, Tim 54, 145
Morrisson, Mark 141
Morton, Kathryn A. 17
Mottram, Eric 141
Moxley, Jennifer 258
Moyers, Bill 319
Mulholland, Tedd J. 323
Mullen, Harryette 83
Mullen, Laura 157
Murphy, Michelle 62
Murphy, Sheila 70
Murray, Elizabeth 325
Myers, Michael 225
Myles, Eileen 77, 240
Neal, Larry 320, 321, 330
Neff, Mike 271
Nelson, Gale 122
Nester, Daniel 54
Nguyen, Hoa 240
Nickels, Thom 322
Nicole, Anna 258
Niedecker, Lorine 37
Norton, John 227, 264
O'Hara, Frank 258
Oliver, Laura 254
Olson, Charles 31, 37, 80, 214, 219, 225, 266
Oppen, George 37, 103, 117, 331, 332
Orange, Tom 100, 106
Ossip, Kathleen 54
Pacific, Asian 34, 55, 225
Padin, Clemente 115, 261, 325
Palmer, Michael 110, 327
Patchen, Kenneth 158
Paterson, William 214
Peacock, Molly 303
Peirce, Kathleen 314
Perelman, Bob 20, 26, 42, 48, 61, 92, 100, 106, 141, 234, 267, 268, 322
Perez, James 325
Perkins, Charlotte 322
Perloff, Marjorie 37, 227, 239
Perril, Simon 141, 168
Perry, David 7, 327
Peters, Mark 17
Phillips, Beth 322
Phillips, Carl 89
Phillips, John 322
Phillips, Malcolm 144
Phillips, Tom 323, 331
Pickard, Tom 214, 225
Plath, Sylvia 266
Pollet, Sylvester 37, 246
Porter, Anne 7
Portugal, Anne 230
Potter, Steve 276
Pound, Ezra 229, 255, 284
Pound, Scott 229
Price, Ron 220
Prize, Poets 20
Prynne, J. H. 141, 147, 159, 169, 184, 190, 200, 204, 214, 225, 227, 239, 248, 255, 272, 303
Prynne, Jeremy 190, 255
Quartermain, Peter 70, 331
Quasha, George 70, 145, 183
Quasha, Susan 145, 183
Quinn, Alice 248, 303
Quinn, Terry 322
Rasula, Jed 326, 336
Ratcliffe, Stephen 62
Raworth, Tom 182, 191, 214, 225, 263
Reese, Marshall 156
Reilly, Evelyn 293, 306

Reiner, Christopher 62
Retallack, Joan 37
Rhinesmith, Sharon 322
Ribot, Marc 299
Riding, Laura 26
Riggs, Don 322
Riley, Peter 141, 149, 246
Rimbaud, Dee 141, 158
Rivera, Alex 131
Rizzo, Christopher 158
Robertson, Lisa 53, 95
Robertson, Pat 53
Robinson, Anthony 249
Robinson, Peter 141
Romero, Danny 322
Rothenberg, Jerome 145, 178, 230
Rothenberg, Jerry 78, 230
Roy, Camille 62, 160
Russo, Linda 62
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 211
Salerno, Mark 115
Sanders, James 144
Sarro, Mark 322
Scalapino, Leslie 20
Schlemowitz, Joel 171
Schultz, Susan M. 39, 177, 235
Schuyler, James 200
Schwerner, Armand 258
Schwitters, Kurt 109
Seagram, Blair 17
Sebastian, Nic 300
Selby, Spencer 17, 70
Sexton, Anne 37, 266
Shakespeare, William 175
Shaw, Lytle 139, 258
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 175
Shepherd, Reginald 89
Sheppard, Robert 258
Shipp, Matthew 181
Silver, Don 322
Simon, Greg 5, 9, 40, 59, 71, 138, 147, 154, 160, 161, 169, 184, 225
Simone, Frank 322, 332
Sloan, Margaret 61, 92
Smith, Rod 157
Smith, Tracy K. 145, 211, 276, 299
Smithson, Robert 139
Smylie, Barry 252
Sorrentino, Joseph 322
Spahr, Juliana 20
Spicer, Jack 131, 160, 266
Stackhouse, Christopher 299
Stanford, Frank 320, 321, 330
Stanford, Susan 267, 268
Stanley, Jared 7
Stanton, Rob 210
Stefans, Kim 20, 42, 48, 100, 106, 158, 204, 248
Stehle, Bernard 322
Stein, Charles 145, 183
Stein, Gertrude 135, 160, 245, 331
Stein, Suzanne 145, 183, 245, 303
Stern, Gerald 201
Stevens, Wallace 84
Stewart, Susan 234
Strang, Brian 301
Strickland, Stephanie 241, 269
Sullivan, Gary 70, 116, 157, 314
Sutherland, Keston 141, 168
Sutherland, Mark 17
Sward, Robert 271
Sweeney, Jennifer K. 62
Tal, Kali 77
Tarn, Nathaniel 258
Taylor, Cecil 145, 299, 324
Taylor, Henry 276
Taylor, Jesse 129, 165
Texas, Irving 122
Thatcher, Margaret 306
Thayler, Carl 258
Thomas, Dylan 37, 202, 234, 261, 276, 327
Torra, Joe 154, 160, 161
Trinidad, David 230
Turner, Brian 181
Vallejo, César 325
Vedantam, Shankar 322
Vendler, Helen 227, 239
Virgil 325
Vitale, Anna 115, 322
Waldrop, Rosemary 37, 323
Waldrop, Rosmarie 37, 307
Walker, Shawn 20, 322
Wallace, Mark 258, 296
Wallace, Sara 84
Warnell, Ted 261
Warren, Jim 122
Washington, Harold 33, 61, 66, 92, 100, 106, 131, 216, 225, 254, 262, 276, 307
Wasserman, Ann 163, 276
Waters, Jacqueline 7
Watten, Barrett 20, 37, 77, 158, 223
Weinberger, Eliot 258
Weiner, Hannah 158
Weinstein, Eric 99
Weiss, Irving 109
Welch, James 325
Welish, Marjorie 258
Whitman, Walt 46, 325
Williams, Tony 103, 117, 121, 305
Wolsak, Melissa 70
Wordsworth, William 139
Wright, Laura E. 86, 111, 222
Yau, John 299
Zedd, Nick 299
Zitt, Joseph 178

Zorn, John 336
Zukofsky, Louis 37

CONCEPTS

9/11 55
Activism and protest 33, 55, 66, 126, 204, 223, 225, 248, 325
Aesthetics 5, 19, 43, 73, 105, 146, 204, 214, 248, 303, 311, 313, 317, 319
African American poetry 126, 262
Anthologies 1, 6, 10, 17, 20, 26, 32, 45, 62, 77, 103, 117, 132, 175, 180, 225, 227, 235, 258, 276, 283, 309, 314, 323, 329, 332
Appropriation 32, 52, 81, 121, 131, 175, 245, 282, 323
Archives and libraries 101, 104, 121, 149, 223, 273, 276, 289, 317, 332
Asian American poetry 160, 301
Autobiography 108, 276, 325
Avant-garde 1, 10, 20, 25, 31, 71, 80, 138, 141, 311, 313, 317, 319
Beat generation 158
Beauty 89, 139, 175
Biography 80, 205
Black Mountain 214, 224, 225, 229
Book announcements 4, 20, 32, 77, 93, 100, 106, 157, 199, 201, 234, 246, 256, 276, 301, 335
Bookstores 50, 138, 154, 160, 161, 197, 198, 203, 221, 224, 228
Calls for submissions 37, 44, 72, 132, 156
Capitalism 61, 92, 303, 311, 313, 317, 319
Cities 16, 33, 51, 55, 66, 68, 83, 97, 99, 114, 120, 131, 133, 145, 182, 250, 267, 268
Class 16, 21, 43, 71, 94, 138, 154, 160, 161, 165
Collage and montage 78, 180, 201, 297
Conferences and festivals 20, 29, 37, 43, 78, 80, 81, 88, 100, 105, 106, 115, 201, 225, 238, 267, 268, 276, 283, 298
Copyright and permissions 99
Craft 60, 126, 129, 319
Dada 84
Deconstruction 175
Difficulty 204, 248
Disability 16
Dreams 47, 145, 148, 151, 158, 175, 183, 264, 275, 276, 282, 285, 290, 322
Ecology and ecopoetics 33, 55, 66
Editing 66, 115, 151, 156, 204, 248, 254, 301, 328, 329
Electronic poetry and hypertext 38, 57, 64, 96, 115, 230, 237, 253, 261
Elegy 230
Empire and imperialism 276
Epic 77, 214, 246
Ethics 158, 204, 248
Experimental poetry 29, 38, 43, 57, 64, 78, 96, 104, 115, 138, 165, 204, 205, 248, 303, 317, 328, 329
Fascism 33, 66, 68, 182
Feminism 12, 223
Film 47, 75, 86, 115, 131, 144, 181
Fluxus 84
Formalism 132, 303, 319
Free speech 33, 66
Free verse 132
Futurism 29, 43, 78, 181, 261, 325
Gender 12, 16, 32, 60, 80, 98, 102, 126, 129, 151, 152, 158, 180, 205, 207, 226, 231, 256, 262, 267, 268
Globalization 234
Grants and funding 2, 18, 32, 78, 91, 132, 163, 214, 223, 259, 276, 322
Hermeneutics 61, 92
Humour and satire 89, 104, 288, 320, 330
Identity politics 125, 127, 134
Ideology 129, 158, 311, 313, 317
Improvisation 78
Indigenous and Native poetics 160, 225
Interviews 21, 34, 55, 62, 87, 94, 116, 122, 156, 157, 249, 258, 261, 271, 287, 291, 308
Israel and Palestine 230
Jewish poetics 10, 259
Language poetry 20, 61, 92, 146, 154, 158, 160, 161, 175, 204, 229, 248, 303, 311, 313, 317
Latino and Latin American poetry 160, 224
Letters and correspondence 52, 73, 105, 258, 303
List moderation 20, 99, 121, 304, 305
Little magazines 7, 20, 62, 77, 84, 99, 104, 110, 123, 139, 141, 146, 158, 175, 181, 200, 201, 204, 223, 225, 235, 240, 244, 248, 257, 258, 261, 271, 272, 283, 301, 303, 311, 313, 314, 317, 319, 322, 325
Lyric poetry 110, 240, 246, 258, 301, 303, 317, 322
Marxism 12, 21, 40, 61, 92, 317
Materiality of the text 158
Memory 20, 47, 49, 75, 78, 109, 151, 248, 255, 303
MFA programs 110, 118, 317
Modernism 61, 92, 110, 126, 245, 262, 267, 268
Mourning and loss 29, 43, 47, 49, 55, 78, 85, 122, 186, 219, 230, 237, 253, 261
Multiculturalism 203, 267, 268, 317
Music and poetry 37, 54, 55, 71, 77, 88, 89, 115, 151, 158, 171, 178, 181, 192, 193, 204, 225, 248, 271, 297, 303, 315, 320, 321, 324, 325, 326, 330
Nature 29, 43, 78, 104, 130, 175, 207, 213, 223, 226, 283

Negativity and refusal 85, 175
New Formalism 303, 319
New York School 37, 204, 224, 227, 248
Obituary and memorial 185, 214, 225, 237, 258
Ontology 303
Performance and the poetry reading 118, 132, 133, 158, 163, 201, 220, 228, 234, 250, 301, 317, 322, 328, 329
Phenomenology 283
Philosophy 52, 115, 175, 214, 228, 275, 276, 282, 283, 327, 331
Place and region 163, 266, 295, 314
Poetics 5, 21, 33, 35, 36, 37, 43, 60, 65, 66, 77, 89, 94, 101, 103, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 114, 116, 117, 120, 121, 123, 124, 126, 127, 134, 139, 141, 146, 155, 157, 158, 165, 175, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 203, 204, 205, 214, 219, 220, 223, 230, 231, 234, 236, 248, 253, 256, 257, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 275, 276, 302, 303, 304, 312, 318, 320, 322, 327, 330
Politics and poetry 126
Post-structuralism 61, 92
Postmodernism 61, 92, 126
Print vs. digital 1, 6, 10, 44, 49, 75, 77, 80, 139, 141, 180, 223, 246, 257, 266, 317
Prizes and awards 20, 74, 84, 181, 200, 204, 214, 227, 248, 264, 276, 301, 322
Prose poem 274
Psychoanalysis 151, 305, 317
Queer poetics 158, 160, 204, 238, 245, 248, 303
Race and poetry 5, 12, 16, 32, 40, 47, 59, 60, 71, 74, 98, 102, 121, 125, 126, 127, 129, 134, 138, 152, 154, 160, 161, 165, 189, 205, 207, 226, 231, 262, 267, 268
Reading announcements 43, 110, 118, 133, 150, 163, 183, 234, 250, 276
Religion and the sacred 3, 74, 84, 223, 288, 303, 314, 320, 321, 328, 329, 330, 333 Representation 326
Reviewing and criticism 20, 22, 23, 40, 61, 92, 107, 115, 122, 127, 139, 175, 249, 256, 275, 276, 278, 279, 282, 301, 303
Romanticism 59
San Francisco Renaissance 37
Science 141
Semiotics 61, 92, 260, 323
Serial poem 139, 204, 225, 292
Sestina 204, 248
Small press publishing 4, 19, 22, 23, 69, 77, 110, 139, 145, 164, 197, 201, 204, 214, 222, 225, 243, 248, 276, 287, 291, 297, 301, 308, 317, 328, 329
Software and code 52, 99
Sonnet 158
Structuralism 61, 92
Subjectivity 16, 54, 161, 175, 283, 303
Surrealism 80, 158, 175, 224, 333
The academy 12, 14, 20, 21, 37, 48, 52, 59, 61, 64, 71, 73, 78, 84, 88, 92, 100, 105, 106, 110, 122, 130, 138, 139, 177, 194, 202, 214, 225, 234, 253, 256, 267, 268, 273, 275, 276, 282, 289, 296, 301, 304, 307, 316, 317, 328, 329
The body 78, 131, 283
The canon 147, 169, 181
The internet 20, 47, 73, 81, 99, 105, 112, 115, 137, 153, 155, 183, 207, 223, 226, 232, 242, 258, 279, 283, 293, 306, 320, 321, 322, 330
The line 175
The listserv 5, 15, 16, 26, 33, 35, 43, 49, 66, 81, 85, 86, 101, 102, 103, 107, 117, 138, 146, 147, 158, 169, 191, 218, 223, 231, 232, 237, 262, 263, 266, 304, 312, 318, 323, 324
The New Sentence 20, 61, 92
Theatre 113, 115, 139, 175, 208, 258, 275, 276, 282, 315
Translation 43, 54, 74, 110, 115, 124, 131, 214, 225, 246, 258, 275, 276, 282, 328, 329, 331
Vietnam 110
Visual and concrete poetry 17, 45, 115
Visual art 47, 84, 131, 183, 240, 297, 301, 314, 328, 329
Voice 214, 246
Women's writing 23, 130, 158, 245

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 336 in all.

30 NOV 1999

1. Jerrold Shiroma — Re: David Antin typo
2. Carol L. Hamshaw — Re: government funding in the arts

1 DEC 1999

3. Alan Sondheim — Tale
4. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy — Re: new chapbooks by women
5. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
6. Pierre Joris — Re: Recent David Lehman book
7. Herbert Meckendover — Sal Mimeo
8. Michael Magee — NY rent - false alarm
9. Maria Damon — Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
10. Maria Damon — Re: Recent David Lehman book
11. Daniel Kane — Bob Holman on WriteNet
12. MAYHEW — class way of not talking about race, etc...
13. Daniel Kane — hoa nguyen exercise
14. Al Filreis — Miriam Koshland?
15. peter neufeld — Moving
16. Jill Stengel — class and
17. derek beaulieu — housepress announces "COURIER: an anthology of concrete and visual poetry."
18. Summi Kaipa — Re: government funding in the arts
19. Jorge Guitart — What class are you?
20. Al Filreis — webcast: Silliman Osman Perelman Stefans
21. Jorge Guitart — Re: Class and Money
22. Elizabeth Treadwell — new chapbooks by women
23. Elizabeth Treadwell — Correction re: new chapbooks by women

2 DEC 1999

24. Kevin Killian — "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" #89, Atlanta issue
25. Steve Tills — Lehman book
26. Tom Beckett — literary remainders
27. Alan Sondheim — Phase Space
28. Layne Russell — ain't that the dickens
29. Lowther, John — Re: avant garde / mckenzie
30. Maria Damon — address query
31. Daniel Kane — machismo and the avant-garde?
32. Lawrence Upton — invitation to submit work to "on word" - Writers Forum's 1000th publicati...
33. david bromige — WTO : reports of the police riot in Seattle
34. Jim Andrews — MIEKAL AND AT DEFIB THIS SUNDAY
35. Poetics List Administration — POETICS: approval required (EE7EF13B)
36. Poetics List Administration — Douglas Goetsch (fwd)
37. Poetics List Administration — NPF Conference Call for Papers (fwd)
38. Steve Tills — Humble seed

3 DEC 1999

39. Susan M. Schultz — Re: address query
40. Simon DeDeo — Class & Poet[ry/ics]
41. David Larsen — lettuce report
42. david bromige — 3 mans & one fans
43. Stephen Ellis — Re: avant garde / mckenzie
44. Lawrence Upton — Captain's log WF1000 - supplemental

45. Lawrence Upton — Re: housepress announces "COURIER: an anthology of concrete and visual poe...
46. Alicia Askenase — Re: "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" #89, Atlanta issue
47. R. Drake — Forward: countdown to self-destruct
48. Susan Minyard — Re: webcast: Silliman Osman Perelman Stefans
49. Mark Prejsnar — the lost retrograde
50. Poetry Project — police riot in Seattle
51. Patrick Herron — Re: WTO
52. Catherine Daly — [Fwd: 2 jobs at ucla design/media arts]
53. Louis Cabri — lisa robertson
54. Poetry Project — readings next week
55. Patrick Herron — More on WTO
56. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" #89, Atlanta issue
57. R. Drake — Re: Humble seed
58. Daniel Kane — e-mail query
59. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
60. Katie Degentesh — Re: CLASS
61. Brian Lennon — Jameson's Perelman
62. Elizabeth Treadwell — Double Lucy & Outlet updates
63. Joe Amato — about class...
64. komninos zervos — Re: Humble seed
65. david bromige — language and context

4 DEC 1999

66. Richard Dillon — Re: WTO : reports of the police riot in Seattle
67. Alan Sondheim — Read: 4 times
68. david bromige — poets & our cliches
69. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press Publications...
70. David Dowker — The Alterran Poetry Assemblage #4 (further)
71. Simon DeDeo — class way of not talking about race, etc...
72. Judy Smith McDonough — call for submissions

5 DEC 1999

73. Alan Sondheim — The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)
74. Rebecca Weldon Sithiwong — Class
75. Daniel Carter — catavaulting within her (Words in Process) part 1
76. Lawrence Upton — submitting to wf1000 / on word
77. Charles Bernstein — New from ROOF books (fwrd)
78. geraldine mckenzie — Re: avant garde / mckenzie
79. Alan Sondheim — The Work of Authority in IRC Channel #Nikuko

6 DEC 1999

80. Maria Damon — Re: machismo and the avant-garde?
81. Pete — Re: Seattle businesses boycott
82. f i l c h — Borges, of interest
83. Nielsen, Aldon — Los Angeles Reading: Harryette Mullen
84. Al Filreis — Edwin Torres via webcast
85. peter neufeld — WTO
86. Wright Laura E — Re: What class are you?
87. Jim Andrews — Bill Marsh at Defib: the canned version

7 DEC 1999

88. Alaric Sumner — Nekyia, UEA Norwich and Rotterdam
89. Rachel Loden — Publishers Weekly, December 6, 1999
90. Daniel Kane — Clepsydra
91. Scot Hacker — Re: funding for the arts
92. Chris Stroffolino — Re: Jameson's Perelman

93. pete spence — Re: What class are you?
94. pete spence — Re: Class and Money
95. Maria Damon — Re: lisa robertson
96. Maria Damon — Re: Humble seed
97. Maria Damon — Re: WTO
98. Dodie Bellamy — Re: CLASS
99. { brad brace } — IDs in Color Copies (fwd)

8 DEC 1999

100. Al Filreis — recording available
101. f i l c h — Re: The Work of Authority in IRC Channel #Nikuko
102. Katie Degentesh — Re: CLASS
103. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — space is the place
104. Steve Tills — Humble Seed
105. Roger Day — Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)
106. Ron Silliman — webcast recording now available
107. Michael Bibby — Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
108. Poetics List — let's hear it for J H PRYNNE! / Hollo
109. Poetics List — Art in Germany Crosses Borders / Weiss
110. Poetics List — M. Palmer and H.Q. Tu Reading at SPT 12/10 / saidenberg
111. Wright Laura E — Re: Seattle businesses boycott
112. Poetics List — news and petitions
113. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: news and petitions
114. Brent Long — Re: WTO
115. ART ELECTRONICS — Karenina.it News
116. Poetics List — Essays and reviews sought / Sullivan
117. Tony Green — Re: space is the place
118. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Jacobs & Kellow Thursday 12/16
119. Lawrence Upton — Re: Seattle businesses boycott
120. Trace Ruggles — Re: WTO
121. Poetics List — Miranda news
122. Joe Brennan — Re: WTO
123. Poetics List — more Miranda
124. Karen Kelley — Fw: Borges, of interest
125. Mark Prejsnar — whiteness and poetry
126. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: CLASS (fwd)
127. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: whiteness and poetry
128. George Bowering — Re: Seattle businesses boycott
129. Taylor Brady — A Nonce Theory of Language Surplus, in Solidarity with Certain Nonsense Syll…
130. Arielle C. Greenberg — Barbara Guest (& Kenneth Koch)
131. Stephen Vincent — A Spicer Story
132. Elizabeth Treadwell — Goddess 2000 needs alibis/offerings!
133. Damion Searls — Re: event postings
134. Maria Damon — Re: whiteness and poetry
135. Catherine Daly — Re: Humble Seed
136. levitsk — Fw: demand release of WTO prisoners
137. Alan Sondheim — Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)
138. Simon DeDeo — Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
139. travis ortiz — Atelos #5 by Lytle Shaw
140. Louis Cabri — maria damon

9 DEC 1999

141. Nate and Jane Dorward — New Publication: Allen Fisher's _The Topological Shovel_
142. daniel labeau — Lowenthal Request
143. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: space is the place
144. Marla Jernigan — Inspired by the Wake

145. Poetry Project — next week's readings
146. Louis Cabri — Open Letter Call for Letters
147. Simon DeDeo — let's hear it for J H PRYNNE! / Hollo
148. Toni Simon and Nick Piombino — Arcades Project-Walter Benjamin

10 DEC 1999

149. Nate and Jane Dorward — Fw: Addendum re: _Topological Shovel_
150. Katie Degentesh — Hey! Katie's on the radio
151. Alan Sondheim — rush1-5//
152. Leonard Brink — Re: CLASS (fwd)
153. Roger Day — Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)
154. Mark Prejsnar — sociology of bookstores
155. f i l c h — Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate
156. David Kirschenbaum — Call for Submissions: Booglit 7: The Baseball Issue
157. Poetics List Administration — Bernadette Mayer, David Byrne & the Marquis de Sade in latest...
158. Poetics List Administration — Group 4, response to DuPlessis and Bellamy (fwd)
159. Ron Silliman — Vote for Prynne
160. Jerrold Shiroma — Re: sociology of bookstores
161. Maria Damon — Re: sociology of bookstores
162. Daniel Carter — Re: "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" #89, Atlanta issue
163. Jill Stengel — december and a+bend press
164. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press Publications List
165. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: CLASS (fwd)
166. Jill Stengel — oops...double oops...

11 DEC 1999

167. Jerrold Shiroma — Peter Ganick
168. Ken Edwards — Re: Digest of british-poets - volume 1 #524
169. rebecca wolff — Re: objection to New Yorker
170. Roger Gilbert — Robert Grenier
171. Wanda Phipps — Music....
172. David Baratier — Morte d' Ed

12 DEC 1999

173. Tom Beckett — Ed Dorn
174. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy — extempore on two lines from Dorn
175. Bob Grumman — A Chapter on Language Poetry
176. George Fouhy — poetry monday!

13 DEC 1999

177. Susan M. Schultz — Re: question about the 1950s
178. Herb Levy — poems & new music in RealAudio
179. Scott Keeney — Paul Metcalf: Collected Works
180. Jacques Debrot — atlanta poets group/grolier bookshop
181. Poetics List Administration — Thelonius Monk / Holman
182. Poetics List Administration — Re: poets & our clichés / Lang
183. Poetics List Administration — Quasha & Stein at St. Marks / Quasha
184. Poetics List Administration — Prynne / Hollo
185. Poetics List Administration — Adios / Hollo
186. Poetics List Administration — Edward Dorn, 1929-1999
187. f i l c h — Re: atlanta poets group/grolier bookshop
188. Lawrence Upton — Re: Peter Ganick
189. Tony Green — Re: Ed Dorn
190. Richard Dillon — Re: Vote for Prynne
191. david bromige — apologies re Tom
192. miekal and — Re: poems & new music in RealAudio

193. George Bowering — Re: Ed Dorn
194. George Bowering — Re: question about the 1950s
195. Susan Wheeler — Christie Hume

14 DEC 1999

196. david bromige — Ed Dorn
197. Ron Silliman — Re: sociology of bookstores
198. Lowther, John — Re: sociology of bookstores
199. Joe Amato — more on class...
200. MAYHEW — response to New Yorker
201. David Kirschenbaum — New Boogs: Bouchard, Cole, Davis, Durand, & Rackin
202. K.Angelo Hehir — Re: question about the 1950s
203. Matthew Blevins — Re: sociology of bookstores
204. Stefans, Brian — Prynne
205. Damion Searls — Re: CLASS (Brink vs. Schultz)
206. Jordan Davis — Poetry City transit strike
207. Acharya Hom Raj — Ness Ness and Ness
208. David Cameron — Richard Maxwell

15 DEC 1999

209. Alan Sondheim — (no subject)
210. Chris Stroffolino — Upcoming Gig
211. Kevin Killian — Bay Area Now Walking Tour
212. Alan Sondheim — yes, by Doctor Leopold Konninger
213. Maria Damon — Re: maria damon
214. Charles Bernstein — Ed Dorn 1929-1999
215. Jordan Davis — Poetry City is on
216. Doug Lang — Re: Ed Dorn 1929-1999

16 DEC 1999

217. david bromige — Ed Dorn Obit
218. david bromige — quaint
219. Poetics List — Re: Edward Dorn, 1929-1999 / Sylvester
220. Poetics List — Dylan Thomas-A Child's Xmas in Wales / Fouhy
221. Robert Freedman — Re: sociology of bookstores
222. Wright Laura E — new chapbooks
223. Mark Prejsnar — looking @ poetix
224. Stephen Vincent — Bookstore Sosh
225. Keith Tuma — Dorn
226. Summi Kaipa — happi-, sad-, fearless- nesses
227. MAYHEW — Prynne
228. Catherine Daly — Re: sociology of bookstores
229. Mark Prejsnar — No Longer Contemporary
230. Loss Pequeño Glazier — Report on the Electronic Poetry Center, Dec. 1999
231. Katie Degentesh — class stand
232. Undetermined origin c/o LISTSERV administrator — sorry for the multi-address
233. David Gitin — Re: quaint
234. Charles Bernstein — MLA Events / Chicago 1999
235. Elizabeth Treadwell — Lucy House Preview
236. Christopher L. Filkins — Re: yes, by Doctor Leopold Konninger

17 DEC 1999

237. Charles Bernstein — [redacted]
238. Maria Damon — hornblowing
239. Mark Prejsnar — coopted Ashbery
240. Brendan Lorber — thanks from LUNGFULL!

18 DEC 1999

241. Kimmelman, Burt — Series on New Media at NJIT

19 DEC 1999

242. Alan Sondheim — Intelligent Life Screen Savers

20 DEC 1999

243. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press List @ Duration
244. Angle Press Angle Press — Angle Magazine
245. Kristin Dykstra — new Stein list
246. Pierre Joris — New Books
247. Maria Damon — minor honking
248. rebecca wolff — Luscious Jackson Nothwithstanding

21 DEC 1999

249. Leslye Layne Russell — Able Muse Review -- premiere issue announcement
250. Mark DuCharme — Re: event postings
251. Alan Sondheim — Traceroute Project URL

22 DEC 1999

252. Alan Sondheim — Barry Smylie / Alan Sondheim collaboration
253. komninos zervos — Re: Report on the Electronic Poetry Center, Dec. 1999
254. Rachel Loden — Poetry Daily, British irony
255. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Ed Dorn
256. James Sherry — roof books new title offer
257. William Slaughter — Mudlark Announcement

23 DEC 1999

258. John Tranter — Announcing Jacket # 9

24 DEC 1999

259. Alan Sondheim — Kungupi Emes
260. Poetics List — from Alan Sondheim
261. Poetics List — from Jim Andrews
262. Poetics List — from Kathy Lou Schultz
263. Poetics List — from Doug Lang
264. Poetics List — from Jacques Debrot
265. Poetics List — from Jacques Debrot
266. Poetics List — from Ron Silliman
267. Poetics List — CFP: "New Modernisms II" / Laity
268. Poetics List — from Cassandra Laity
269. Poetics List — from Burt Kimmelman
270. Mark Weiss — Gone until...
271. Michael Neff — PERIHELION: The Phoenix Issue
272. MAYHEW — Asbhery coopted

25 DEC 1999

273. Joel Weishaus — Re: from Ron Silliman
274. Stephen Vincent — Re: Asbhery coopted

26 DEC 1999

275. Gary Shapiro — for those who plan in advance: two Boston Book Review events in NYC
276. Gary Shapiro — NYC literary events: Bread Loaf at 75, Boston Book Review, etc.
277. Leslye Layne Russell — Santa
278. Heather A — Re: from Ron Silliman
279. Patrick Herron — Re: from Ron Silliman
280. Jena Osman — light poems
281. Stephen Vincent — Re: from Ron Silliman?
282. David Zauhar — Re: for those who plan in advance: two Boston Book Review events in NYC

283. Alan Sondheim — notice on my work

27 DEC 1999

284. vbnm2 — Re: from Ron Silliman
285. Richard Dillon — Re: from Ron Silliman?
286. Tom Beckett — Re: weishaus and others
287. Maria Damon — walcott citation: desperate query
288. Maria Damon — d.a.levy
289. Joel Weishaus — Re: weishaus and others
290. Chris Stroffolino — Re: from Ron Silliman?
291. Tisa Bryant — Re: walcott citation: desperate query

28 DEC 1999

292. Joe Amato — long poem...
293. Alan Sondheim — Merging and Rambling
294. pete spence — Re: from Ron Silliman

29 DEC 1999

295. Steve Tills — Black Box Cutaway
296. mdw — e-mail for Joshua McKinney
297. David Kirschenbaum — Winter solstice assemblage zine available
298. Nada Gordon — m. gottlieb e-mail???
299. Poetry Project — New Year's Day Marathon Reading
300. Bob Grumman — Anyone Know This Poem?
301. Jill Stengel — san francisco poetry events, january 9
302. Poetics List — writers workshops & Poetry / Fouhy
303. Brian Stefans — Lucious Jackson
304. Poetics List — list delays etc.
305. Alan Sondheim — A Note on Time Zero and Sources for Nikuko and the Doctor

30 DEC 1999

306. Michael Neff — Re: Merging and Rambling
307. Robert Corbett — Re: Poetry Daily, British irony
308. Maria Damon — Re: walcott citation: desperate query
309. Arielle C. Greenberg — end of century reading material
310. Alan Sondheim — (no subject)
311. Jacques Debrot — Re: Lucious Jackson
312. Jacques Debrot — @poetics
313. Ruth Danon — Re: poetry and the moment
314. Tony Green — Re: end of century reading material
315. komninos zervos — Re: end of century reading material
316. komninos zervos — (no subject)
317. komninos zervos — Re: Lucious Jackson
318. Chris Stroffolino — Re: @poetics
319. Patrick Herron — Re: Lucious Jackson

31 DEC 1999

320. nuyopoman — Re: POETICS Digest - 27 Dec 1999 to 29 Dec 1999 (#1999-238)
321. nuyopoman — da levy
322. Poetics List — from Richard Frey, re: Philly reading 1/9/00
323. Tedd J. Mulholland — Re: end of century reading material
324. Gerald Schwartz — Re: end of century reading material
325. David Baptiste Chirot — Re: end of century reading material
326. Tom Beckett — Re: end of century reading material
327. charles alexander — query re philosophy books
328. Charles Bernstein — Subtext presents Jen Hofer and Bryant Mason on Jan. 5th
329. Herb Levy — Re: Subtext presents Jen Hofer and Bryant Mason on Jan. 5th

330. Maria Damon — Re: POETICS Digest - 27 Dec 1999 to 29 Dec 1999 (#1999-238)
331. Randy Prunty — Re: end of century reading material
332. Lynn Langmade — Re: end of century reading material
333. Maria Damon — Re: end of century reading material
334. David Knoebel — Oh
335. George Bowering — Re: end of century reading material
336. Steven Marks — Re: end of century reading material

1. Jerrold Shiroma

Re: David Antin typo

Tue 30 Nov 1999

---

it is a typo...should be "it seems to me"
-----Original Message-----
From: Nielsen, Aldon <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
<[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, November 30, 1999 8:09 PM
Subject: Re: Recent David Lehman book

>>
>>I think that generosity is a very avant-garde thing and doesn't get enough >>credit.
>>
>
>which puts me in mind of the closing section of Antin's "What It Means To >Be Avant Garde" (with apologies to David for typing over his typography):
>
>nothing within the horizon of my discourse could have prepared me for that >moment with my aunt fanny who had just lost the husband she'd lived with >for over forty years and was now on the telephone and it seems to be >that if you cant respond to that youre not in the avant garde
>
>
>
>[by the way -- does anybody have the book at hand? is that "seems to be" a >typo for "seems to me"? I'm taking this from C. Beach's reprint in his >anthology]
>

↑ Index

2. Carol L. Hamshaw

Re: government funding in the arts

Tue 30 Nov 1999

---

well for the two orgs i work for funding has gone up. but then again we don't bother with the NEA.

George Bowering wrote:

> It doesnt say so anywhere, but I am guessing that the following is an enquiry regarding matters in the USA.
>
> hello all--
>
> i'm trying to get a concrete sense of what is happening to government funding in the arts. that is to say, everyone speaks of the "trend" in arts, the cutbacks in the nea budget, etc.--but what are smaller, non-prof organizations feeling both by the nea and by state arts orgs in numbers? anybody out there head an arts org and have specific examples of slashes, i.e. how much of a decrease in funding they have received over the past 10 years or whatever?
>
> particularly, i'm interested in examples of organizations/people who have had some dealings with the california arts council--or other state arts councils whose behavior might be akin to the cac (maybe new york?)
>
> or, if you know something about the type of people who sit on the state/federal arts panels and where to get more info about this, please do tell.
>
> please backchannel with info, thanks.
>
> summi
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> fax: [redacted]

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

3. Alan Sondheim

Tale

Wed 1 Dec 1999

\

Tale

Two [shinto] priests were walking down a steep hill; they met a [budd- hist] monk walking up. "Where are you going?" one of the priests asked. "It is near the end of the world," said the monk, "and I am going to the top of the hill to observe." "Don't you know," said one of the priests, "it is the same everywhere?" "But not to the hill," answered the monk. When I was telling this story, the rabbi [jewish] asked, "But why were there two priests?" "Because, I answered, one of them might have for- gotten the script." The rabbi answered, "But the world is the script." And I replied, "If the world is the script, it is the hill which is writing and the priests who are reading." The rabbi said, "But it is the monk who guides the pen." A [protestant] minister, happening by, gave his ear to the tale. He said, "The hill has given the pen to the tale." I answered, "But it is christ himself who has given the hill, who has as- cended the hill as the holy mount, to preach to one and all." The monk said, "By what authority do you speak? For you seem to be jewish by cul- ture, if not religion, and hardly catholic, to speak of the christ." I answered, "It is my belief that christ is within all of us, that we are all our sons." The monk said, "Thus we repeatedly give birth to ourselves over and over again, generation upon generation," to which one of the priests replied, "Yes, but it is the latter that speaks to the former, since the latter carries the wisdom of the former." The minister said, "It is upon such that the gospel was written." I answered, "It is upon such that everything is written, from the beginning to the end of the word." The rabbi answered, "Thus is the word made world," and the monk said, "And thus the catholic, the word made flesh. For what is the flesh of the word?" One of the priests said, "To be cleansed and purified, for the circumspection of the living." I added, "Thus for the circumspection of the dead," and the monk replied, "From here through- out our ministra- tions." The rabbi said, "For who is to be believed, properly speaking, but the holy script itself?" A nearby jainist answered, "In relation to the fecundity of the earth, to which we should give as little pain as possible." The monk replied, "What is universal has no recourse among the individual." The rabbi agreed, saying, "And who is among the enlight- ened?" I replied, "Those who know the value of this, not that - and that, not this." "Exactly," cried the monk. The minister, perplexed, ended the session by stating that suffering and enlightenment are both in the hands of god, to whom we give thanks. The priests nodded in assent.

↑ Index

4. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy

Re: new chapbooks by women

Wed 1 Dec 1999

Hi Elizabeth,

just out _Holding Patterns_ from Susan Schultz. I'll put one in the post today, but it'll be from Ireland so it could take a week to get to you. Hope it won't be past the deadline.

best

Randolph Healy
Wild Honey Press

Visit the Sound Eye website at:
http://indigo.ie/~tjac/sound_eye_hme.htm
or find more Irish writing at:
http://www.nd.edu/~ndr/issues/ndr7/contents.html

> From: Elizabeth Treadwell <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: new chapbooks by women
> Date: 01 December 1999 03:32
>
> Sarah Anne Cox and I are looking for the LATEST chapbooks by women to write > about in HOW2 for spring. Need em quick, deadline looming.
>
> Thank you.
>
> Elizabeth Treadwell
>
> PO Box 9013
> Berkeley, CA 94709
>
> http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy
>

↑ Index

5. Kathy Lou Schultz

Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]

Wed 1 Dec 1999

I disagree with your assessment that class obfuscates race. In fact, I think the opposite is true: in discussions about race and literature, writers often pretend that if they're "covering" race, that class is somehow just "included" even when a class analysis is not developed.
I do, however, very much agree with the following:
"But when we ask about a writer's relation to class -- his/her own, or another's -- in poetry, aesthetically, we start asking very interesting and neat questions that for me circle around (who else but) Marx and, in particular, the idea of alienation."
Thanks,
Kathy Lou
^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

>From: Simon DeDeo <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
>Date: Tue, Nov 30, 1999, 5:08 PM
>

> Trying to keep up with the list recently, but falling behind every now and again. I'll try to keep this as noninflammatory as possible.
>
> The question of class in poetry -- whether it be from the outside (people questioning the class origins of various poets or poetic movements) or the inside (poets wondering about their own authenticity w/r/t class) -- is, more often that not, a question designed to avoid the much more problematic issue of race.
>
> *Indeed, in the wider world, nobody really cares about a writer's class in isolation from his race. When was the last time Byron was attacked for being from the lesire/upper/aristocratic class? Much, much longer ago than he was for being white. Similarly, the "lower class authenticity" carries little weight when the author is white, as can be checked by looking over the class backgrounds of some of the canonized. Not that this is a bad thing, in my opinion.*

> *I don't want to touch the issue of race more than to point out that the debate here seems to be interesting in as much as it is about things internal to a writer's poetics. Sociologically, politically, the examination of class in poetry is a blind for (mainly white) critics who want to distract attention from the issue of race. But when we ask about a writer's relation to class -- his/her own, or another's -- in poetry, aesthetically, we start asking very interesting and neat questions that for me circle around (who else but) Marx and, in particular, the idea of alienation.*
>
> -- Simon
>
> [redacted]
> http://www.fas.harvard.edu/~sdedeo

↑ Index

6. Pierre Joris
Re: Recent David Lehman book
Wed 1 Dec 1999

Aldon wrote:
>
> nothing within the horizon of my discourse could have > prepared me for that > moment with my aunt fanny who had just lost the husband > she'd lived with > for over forty years and was now on the telephone and > it seems to be > that if you cant respond to that youre not in the avant garde
>
>
>
> [by the way -- does anybody have the book at hand? is that > "seems to be" a > typo for "seems to me"? I'm taking this from C. Beach's > reprint in his > anthology]

Yeap, Aldon -- just checked the New Direction text (which I happen to be teaching today!) & it is indeed "seems to me".

Pierre

↑ Index

7. Herbert Meckendover
Sal Mimeo
Wed 1 Dec 1999

Issue number zero of Larry Fagin's new magazine, Sal Mimeo, has just appeared. Featured is new work by Fran Carlen, Clark Coolidge, Merrill Gilfillan, Steve Malmude, Ange Mlinko, Charles North, David Perry, Anne Porter, George Stanley and Jacqueline Waters.

Distribution is limited. Issue zero is available at $5, and subscriptions for the next three issues are $15.

Write: L. Fagin, 437 E. 12th Street, Apt. 18, New York, NY 10009.

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

8. Michael Magee
NY rent - false alarm
Wed 1 Dec 1999

Hi all,

I'm writing because, amazingly, my brother found 3 roomates in a matter of minutes for his new place. NY renting - pure insanity! Sorry to have gotten peoples hopes up. Happy hunting.

-Mike.

↑ Index

9. Maria Damon
Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
Wed 1 Dec 1999

At 8:08 PM -0500 11/30/99, Simon DeDeo wrote:

...When was the last time Byron was attacked for >being from the lesire/upper/aristocratic class? Much, much longer ago than >he was for being white. Similarly, the "lower class authenticity" carries >little weight when the author is white, as can be checked by looking over >the class backgrounds of some of the canonized. Not that this is a bad >thing, in my opinion.

hunh? this is really weird. Mumia is about to be executed, and you're talking about Byron being attacked for being white?

↑ Index

10. Maria Damon
Re: Recent David Lehman book
Wed 1 Dec 1999

At 12:39 PM -0800 11/30/99, Nielsen, Aldon wrote:
>>
>>I think that generosity is a very avant-garde thing and doesn't get enough >>credit.
>>
>
>which puts me in mind of the closing section of Antin's "What It Means To >Be Avant Garde" (with apologies to David for typing over his typography):
>
>nothing within the horizon of my discourse could have prepared me for that >moment with my aunt fanny who had just lost the husband she'd lived with >for over forty years and was now on the telephone and it seems to be >that if you cant respond to that youre not in the avant garde
>
>
>
>[by the way -- does anybody have the book at hand? is that "seems to be" a >typo for "seems to me"? I'm taking this from C. Beach's reprint in his >anthology]

2 comments on that lovable nut david antin: 1) anyone notice how every talk ends up being, or being framed by, a tale of trauma inflicted on a female relative, which he can and does interpret? (yours truly addresses this phenomenon in a piece on antin, "Talking Yiddish at the Boundaries," _Cultural Studies_ 5:1) 2) i'd like him to write a sequel, "how it feels to be avant-garde me," which may be what the other title is a screen for.

↑ Index

11. Daniel Kane
Bob Holman on WriteNet
Wed 1 Dec 1999

This month on WriteNet <www.writenet.org>, Bob Holman talks about rap and its relationship to poetry, among other topics. To view the page, go to

http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_bholman.html

↑ Index

12. MAYHEW
class way of not talking about race, etc...
Wed 1 Dec 1999

I don't think class is necessarily only a screen for not talking about race, except in the sense that white male Marxists I have seen at academic conferences bring in class when the conversation shifts to gender and race, just as white middle class feminists bring in gender when the topic shifts to class and race, while others bring in race when the topic is class and gender. Its a game of one-downsmanship, in which leverage is exerted by those speaking from the position of least (apparent) privilege. It's like the game where you talk your hand from below a pile of other people's hands as fast as you can, and soon your hand is at the bottom again. I wouldn't question the legitimacy of anyone's concerns. But I would question the usefulness of this particular game. You can talk about race without questioning sincerity of someone else's desire to talk about something else.

Of course, the next move in the game is to say that Jonathan, having no stake in this game in the first place, does not understand its urgency and importance...

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

_____

↑ Index

13. Daniel Kane hoa nguyen exercise
Wed 1 Dec 1999

Another wonderful writing exercise from hoa nguyen -- you can access it at http://www.writenet.org/virtualpoetrywrkshp.html

Hit the "Exercise 15" link -- this page links to a Bernadette Mayer page that's ever so good.

↑ Index

14. Al Filreis
Miriam Koshland?
Wed 1 Dec 1999

Friends:

Does anyone know the whereabouts of Miriam Koshland? I don't know much about her, except that in the mid-1950s she was trying to get _Poetry_ and other magazines interested in African verse. I also know that at that time she was living in San Francisco.

If you have any information to share about Koshland, please write me directly at [redacted].

--Al

Al Filreis
The Class of 1942 Professor of English
Faculty Director, the Kelly Writers House
University of Pennsylvania

↑ Index

15. peter neufeld
Moving
Wed 1 Dec 1999

I'm moving to New York the last week of January. While I have employment, I would appreciate any lines on aparments anyone on the list might have and be willing to provide via backchannel. Thanks.

Peter Neufeld

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Thousands of Stores. Millions of Products. All in one place.
Yahoo! Shopping: http://shopping.yahoo.com

↑ Index

16. Jill Stengel class and
Wed 1 Dec 1999

---

hi all, i've been unable to keep up w/the list discussions for the past few weeks, so i just read through about a billion posts, and am happy to see the class thread and relateds have been going for a while. i have a few posts i wish to comment on, and hopefully i'll be able to keep up w/this a little more frequently than i've been able to of late. so, as i'm going over a lot of time here, i'll try to make this clear...

in my post dated 11/10, i said, "the experience of class is different for women and men, as women also have to contend with sexism, men do not. (and then, of course, there are many other isms that can show up too...) multiple -isms seem to have a geometric rather than simply additive effect."

on 11/12, dodie responded to my post with, "I've been keeping out of this class discussion, but I think saying that implying that women have it worse than men on the class-prejudice scale is an unnecessary essentialism--and it is contrary to my experience. As much as I bitch and moan about class prejudice, I've always felt that working class guys had a harder time assimilating into the middle class poetry world I've known."

i'm not sure exactly how to respond to this, but i do think it's important to respond to, and it's been on my mind for weeks now, so here's a response, here's something: i'm not sure that it's harder, easier, better, worse, or exactly what for women and men in the poetry world, or any other "world" of our world(s)...i do believe that it is __different__ for women and men...and i can imagine sometimes those differences add up to easier/harder/whatever-er, depending on where one is standing at that moment. sometimes i do think it's "easier" being a woman in some ways, and then i walk down a street at night and reconsider. sometimes i think men have it easier, and then i remember that men are supposed to be these bastions of "strength," non-emotion and all that socialized crap, so then i think men have a pretty raw deal. (a billion or more addt'l examples of "easier" "harder" etc. come to mind, but i think i've made myself clear.)

so, i don't have an answer to whether it's easier or harder for who or what and why. it's just different, it just is, and gender __is__ an important element...just as race, sexual orientation, ability/disability, rural/urban/regional/access issues, etc... all of these elements and more are involved in experiences of and interpretations of "class." they overlap, multiply, and, of course divide. it's just not clean-cut. it's not simple math. and that was what i was trying to say there, dodie, and all.

so i've been reading through the posts, knowing i'd respond to dodie, and wondering if there was anything else that i'd wish to respond to, tho i'd rather be a lurker as it takes a lot of effort and time to be involved and i often don't have a lot of time or extra effort available as i'm doing quite all i can manage already but that's a sidetrack...so then i saw jonathan mahew's post of 11/24 listing his ideas of which poets represent what classes, and this reminds me why gender and race and etc and all the not-tidy categories have to be brought up again along with the already not-tidy "class." (to clarify--this is not an attack, jonathan, just a statement of fact, no sarcasm oozing from the screen...)

so it's messy, this "class" idea, and all that is wrapped with it.

simon dedeo, i don't think i can agree with your assertion from your post of 11/30 that "The question of class in poetry ... is, more often that not, a question designed to avoid the much more problematic issue of race." --i think __all__ of these issues (race, class, gender, sexual orientation, ability/disability, rural/urban/regional/access issues, etc.) (and there are more) are problematic, and i think we each have our own particular areas we find the most difficult to deal with. or ignore. or whatever it is we choose to do. or not do. with these difficulties.

and now i have to "work"--tho i earn no money for what i have to go do, so is it "work"? (yes it is.)

thanks for reading,
jill stengel

ps--almost forgot: david baratier wrote, 11/15, "Jill, if you check back through my posts, I did not state that lack of access to opportunities does not occur, I made pains to maintain my writing in "I" based statements, when mass assumptions were made & I knew they did not fit me, I went outside of these confines to include some other individual writers. Never was there a "we" intended. I did not address women & class, which is not an oversight, I do not have personal experience and assume others here would address the subject." thanks for clarifying, david, i appreciate it. yes you did make "i" statements, and, as i didn't see you acknowledging other possibilities of experience, i assumed you weren't allowing for this. now i see you were just trying to be clear, and to speak from your own perspective. thank you for telling me your intentions. in an oral conversation this would have been quick to clear up, in this kind of a conversation it's harder, takes longer.

↑ Index

17. derek beaulieu

housepress announces "COURIER: an anthology of concrete and visual poetry."

Wed 1 Dec 1999

---

housepress is pleased to announce the release of COURIER: an anthology of concrete and visual poetry.

- printed as a linocut printed box containing ephemal objects by over 50 international poets:

Aguiar, Armstrong, Balan, Baker, Ball, Barwin, Basinski, Beining, Bennett, Bertola, bissett, Books, Bradley, Brannen, Bulatov, Cain, Caruso, curry, de araujo, Dutton, Drucker, Elfassy, Fledderus, fyffe, Gorman, Grumman, Hennessy, Hill, Jaeger, J(o(h)n)ston, Kacian, Kang, Kempton, Lefler, levy, lopes, McCaffery, Morin, Morton, mulder, Nichol, Panhuyzen, Peters, Poem by Nari, Scobie, Seagram, Selby, snow, tj & derek beaulieu, Spence, Sutherland, Swede, Trans-Canada Research Team,Upton, UU Harris, Vitacchio, and Wershler-Henry

- produced in an edition of 115 numbered copies, of which only 55 are for sale. - available for $60 (postage included, please note to make any payment out to "derek beaulieu) from:

please e-mail

derek beaulieu
(housepress)
1339 19th ave nw
calgary alberta
canada t2m 1a5
[redacted]

for more information.

↑ Index

18. Summi Kaipa

Re: government funding in the arts

Wed 1 Dec 1999

---

sorry if i offended anyone by being "usa-centric" but i thought that the message indicated my interest in california and new york arts organizations.

& sorry for any confusion.

thanks
summi

At 03:19 PM 11/29/99 -0800, you wrote:
>It doesnt say so anywhere, but I am guessing that the following is an >enquiry regarding matters in the USA.
>
>
> >hello all--
> >
> >i'm trying to get a concrete sense of what is happening to government > >funding in the arts. that is to say, everyone speaks of the "trend" in > >arts, the cutbacks in the nea budget, etc.--but what are smaller, non-prof > >organizations feeling both by the nea and by state arts orgs in > >numbers? anybody out there head an arts org and have specific examples of > >slashes, i.e. how much of a decrease in funding they have received over the > >past 10 years or whatever?

> >
> >particularly, i'm interested in examples of organizations/people who have > >had some dealings with the california arts council--or other state arts > >councils whose behavior might be akin to the cac (maybe new york?)
> >
> >or, if you know something about the type of people who sit on the > >state/federal arts panels and where to get more info about this, please do > >tell.
> >
> >please backchannel with info, thanks.
> >
> >summi
>
>
>
>
>
>George Bowering.
> ,
>
>
>fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

19. Jorge Guitart

What class are you?

Wed 1 Dec 1999

Don't forget your Soc 101. You have to consider four things:

Assets
Income
Power
Prestige

What about culture? Are you talking Culture (would you rather go to the philharmonic or the hockey game?) or culture (world-view, beliefs, behavioral preferences, etc.) Culture is part of prestige and culture is a byproduct of the combinatoin of assets, income, power, and prestige. Your position in society is a product of your upbringing and education, which in turn depends on your, and, earlier, your parents' assets, income, power, and prestige. ---- Who pays for poetry? Whose poetry? Some bourgeois people dish out $25 for Seamus Heaney while our chapbooks languish in the store.

Jorge Guitart

On Mon, 29 Nov 1999, MAYHEW wrote:

> Murat wrote:
>
> " Jonathan appears to say that class essentially is equivalent to culture in the United States. This is so if class expresses itself in writing only in terms of the class origin of the writer? Then, it is true, as Jonathan notes, a contradiction develops when a person moves up the economic scale, which is quite possible in the States. But what about class, reflected in terms of who supports or pays for the written product? Then, Jonathans financial sacrifice as a graduate student is a temporary state, as an interns on the way to becoming a doctor."
>
> Good point. I don't think class is only equivalent to level of culture, but it clearly is not equivalent to the amount of money one has at a given moment either. I see is more as an underlying ethos defining preferences in large number of areas, including aesthetic. And people in academia use class to mean class origin, otherwise it would not make sense to speak of class differences at all since we are all doing the same thing for a living.
>
> Who supports and pays for poetry? Good question that I hope will provoke lively discussion...
>
> Jonathan Mayhew
> [redacted]
>
> _____

↑ Index

20. Al Filreis

webcast: Silliman Osman Perelman Stefans

Wed 1 Dec 1999

The program described below will be webcast. If you can't get to the Writers House in Philadelphia and would like to participate via webcast, please write to me - [redacted] - and I will send you follow-up information. The webcast begins at 7:30 PM eastern time next Tuesday, December 7.

Al Filreis
University of Pennsylvania

+ + +

informal symposium on contemporary avant-garde poetry

Ron Silliman
Jena Osman
Bob Perelman
Brian Kim Stefans

hosted and moderated by Al Filreis with Shawn Walker

- -

Tuesday, December 7
7:30 PM
live from the Kelly Writers House, 3805 Locust Walk

To participate via webcast you will need to know how to connect. Write to [redacted] to reserve a "space" and receive further information.

JENA OSMAN's book, THE CHARACTER, published by Beacon (1999), is the winner of the 1998 Barnard New Woman Poets Prize. "Her writing is the way the mind works," wrote Leslie Scalapino of this book. Jena's publications include JURY (Meow Press, 1996), Amblyopia (Avenue B, 1993) and poems appearing in Abacus, Avec, Big Allis, Conjunctions, O-blek, Subliminal Time and elsewhere. With Juliana Spahr, Jena is the editor of the influential magazine Chain. She has read at the Writers House for PhillyTalks and on "Live at the Writers House." She is assistant professor of English at Temple University.

BOB PERELMAN recently published THE FUTURE OF MEMORY, a new book of verse, and his selected poems, TEN TO ONE. For many years Bob lived in San Francisco where he edited Hills magazine and was central to the development of the language poetry movement. From 1977 to 1981 he coordinated the San Francisco Talks Series and edited Writing/Talks (1985) gathered from the series. His books of poetry include Braille (Ithaca House, 1975), Face Value (Roof Books, 1988), and Virtual Reality (Roof Books, 1993). He is also the author of two books of theory and criticism, The Trouble with Genius (University of California, 1994), and The Marginalization of Poetry (Princeton, 1996). Now of course he lives in Philadelphia, where he is an Associate Professor of English at Penn. Bob is a member of the Writers House "hub" or planning committee.

BRIAN KIM STEFANS is the author of Free Space Comix (Roof, 1998) and the forthcoming Angry Penguins (Object). His collaboration with Sianne Ngai, "The Cosmopolitans," was featured as the second issue of the zine Interlope published out of Iowa City. His works have also appeared in many magazines, including the web journals Ubu and Yellow Jacket, under a pseudonym. Brian published three issues of the journal Arras before taking it to the web in 1998. His critical writings have been published in Korean Culture and The Poetry Project Newsletter, and a long essay on alternative Asian American poetry now appears in Talisman. Brian participated in a PhillyTalks program at the Writers House last year.

Among RON SILLIMAN's many important writings are Ketjak (This, 1978); Tjanting (The Figures, 1981); "The New Sentence" (Roof, New York, NY, 1987); the anthology "In the American Tree" (1986); Leningrad, a collaboration with Michael Davidson, Lyn Hejinian, and Barrett Watten (1991); Demo to Ink (Chax, 1992); Toner (Potes & Poets, 1992); N/O (Roof, 1994) and recently "(R)" (Drogue). The earliest published poems Ron doesn't mind listing appeared in issue number 1 of _Community Libertarian_ on May Day, 1965; and "One, Two, Three Hands Clapping" in the first issue of Avalanche (Berkeley) in 1966. Long a resident of San Francisco, Ron now resides near Valley Forge, PA, a point from which he make regular trips to the Kelly Writers House where he has led and joined PhillyTalks, read "Albany" on "Live at the Writers House" (available here: www.english. upenn.edu/~afilreis/88v/silliman.html) and supported many emerging writers.

↑ Index

21. Jorge Guitart

Re: Class and Money

Wed 1 Dec 1999

Suppose Maria Zavialov was not working class.So what. You don't have to be working class to talk about the working class. You don't have to labor a bit or a lot to know about the working class.
So they were told a lot about the working class, maybe too much, maybe to the point where it was very hard to believe in what they were told about the working class. A certain repugnance probably set in.

Any working class person who has time to be on this list, I am glad for you.

Jorge

On Mon, 29 Nov 1999, pete spence wrote:

> The same day, Pete Spence responds to Maria Zavialov:
> "Suddenly I remembered that I should know about working class a lot.
> I was thoroughly drilled in marxism and leninism all through many years of > school and university back in the 70s in the Soviet Union." M.Z.
>
> i'd thought maybe doing a bit o' labour because it was your only option
> would be a better sampler than being drilled by theory//pete spence"

> Does Pete have a special knowledge that Maria belongs to the idle reach?
> Or is it implicit in his comment that labor is only labor ("authentic") if it > is working class? Is this an example of the "sentimental working-class poetics?"
>
> Murat Nemet-Nejat
>
> maybe maria could have worded it better ,still think i probably seen closer views of working class than a lot, my father a socialist was under the threat of the "crimes act' here for years and i remember him being interviewed on t.v. knowing he would probably be arrested when he left the studio could go on but!!! sentiment/sediment/saidund meant//pete spence
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

22. Elizabeth Treadwell
new chapbooks by women
Wed 1 Dec 1999

Thanks to all who've responded -- and we eagerly await review copies. Any books we receive we will also consider for our HOW2 piece and for review in _Outlet_ as well.

You may send chapbooks to me at: PO Box 9013, Berkeley, CA 94709

or/and to Sarah Anne Cox at:
95 McCoppin #E206, SF, CA 94103

↑ Index

23. Elizabeth Treadwell
Correction re: new chapbooks by women
Wed 1 Dec 1999

Excuse me, I mailed that too quickly, my note should read, we will consider review copies for discussion in our piece for HOW2 as well as for review in Outlet.

We are interested in reviewing recent (1999) chapbook publications by emerging women writers from our beloved micropress community.

& again:

You may send chapbooks to me at: PO Box 9013, Berkeley, CA 94709

or/and to Sarah Anne Cox at:
95 McCoppin #E206, SF, CA 94103

↑ Index

24. Kevin Killian
"Mirage #4/Period[ical]" #89, Atlanta issue
Thu 2 Dec 1999

Hi, it's Kevin Killian. Dodie Bellamy and I have turned over the new issue of our zine "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" to the Atlanta Writers Group about whom we had been quite curious and now the issue (#89!!) is ready. Maybe it will open eyes all over the world about the interesting new writing scene in Atlanta. Anyhow, if anyone on this list would like a copy please back-channel me and I'll send you one. Please don't send money, this is a free offer and just send your address instead (unless you think I know it by heart). No solicitors will call...

Kevin K.

↑ Index

25. Steve Tills
Lehman book
Thu 2 Dec 1999

To page 247 now, and all and all I guess I quite like his _Last Avant Garde_, as the readings are <exemplary> and full of care. So the thing about the intro statements, how they can ruffle non-seniority list members who were not able to join the Company at the ground-floor breaking of tradition (maybe we were only, like, 0-8 years old at the time, too), well, can just let it go. It's pretty innocuous, I guess. His <Last> Avant-Garde seems more reverence and love than pronouncement and control. Much love, in fact, which is warm and clear. What I would, myself, "espouse" had I 'nuff time, talent, and persistence to cover D. Bromige (David Brimbody) and B. Grenier (Robert Grinnear), another avant-garde I don't want to be the lost.

↑ Index

26. Tom Beckett literary remainders
Thu 2 Dec 1999

In the Winter Literature Catalog of the Scholar's Bookshelf (a remainder service) are two offerings which may be of particular interest to the List.

item# 4EMMJ AGAINST ANTHOLOGIES by Laura Riding and Robert Graves

was 32.50, now 6.95

item # 49FGJ THE TROUBLE WITH GENIUS by Bob Perelman

was 16.95, now 6.95

I'm working with a paper catalog. You cyberfolk may want to visit the website:

www.scholarsbookshelf.com/literature/

Sincerely,

Tom (the Provincial) Beckett

↑ Index

27. Alan Sondheim
Phase Space
Thu 2 Dec 1999

\

Phase Space

Nikuko, the beautiful Russian ballet dancer, pirouetting before the very august presence of Doctor Leopold Konninger, her state of mind:

A violations and tears nightmare!
You danced for 262255 hours?
No no no, it was longer and shorter,
No no no, i don't remember
and my dissolutions are those moments of re-entry, when i find myself on mother earth father moon, when i find myself dreaming of doctor leopold konninger, my eyes fixed on his solar visage, my dancing perfect and continuous and 1021 and 1047 - Nikuko is still alive!
Use of uninitialized value at ./.julu line 130, <STDIN> chunk 8.
For 4 months of dissolution, we have been and buried and it has taken us 3.000 minutes to speak our very last ...

and my dissolutions are those moments of re-entry, when i find myself on mother earth father moon, when i find myself dreaming of doctor leopold konninger, my eyes fixed on his solar visage, my dancing perfect and continuous;

the universe is my traditional object, the universe is my breathing in and breathing out, space is inhabiting me; i am Nikuko the beautiful russian ballet dancer who is winding the universe around her as she pirouettes for doctor leopold konninger; i alone recognize the confused topologies of embedded space-time around my waist and breasts and thighs, my tutu enmeshed in nebulae and stars; oh ballet, o ballet, hanged_man with hours of sexual fury!

↑ Index

28. Layne Russell
ain't that the dickens
Thu 2 Dec 1999

December 2, 132 years ago (1867):

Charles Dickens gives his first reading in New York. Before the box office opens, people stand in two lines almost a mile long, waiting for tickets.

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~
http://www.sonic.net/layne
a quiet place
"in this rose light time's door does not close"

↑ Index

29. Lowther, John
Re: avant garde / mckenzie
Thu 2 Dec 1999

> geraldine mckenzie wrote;
>

> "It is misleading to refer to > the avant garde solely in terms > of novelty. This establishes > an association with art
> as commodity which is generally > repudiated by those artists
> who might be described > as avant garde. Novelty is > a creature of time and unreliable,
> a bye product of experiment
> rather than an end."

it is misleading --- did i do it ? i recall writing about someone at the symposium in new orleans who'd thrown out the tern novelty in his screed about the term
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

experimental --- i dont recall the term avant garde coming into it --- but i wd like to mention that novelty need not relate to commodity and as its origin is in the 14th century it seems reasonably disconnected to commodity culture circa now

> "What is more significant > is the 'revolutionary' or > oppositional nature of a text."

i see what yr saying here but i'm not sure that belief is compelled --- that is, i find the discontinuity between the work of the italian futurists and what had been going on up until then much more interesting, in and of itself (it's novelty?) than i do they "revolutionary" attitudes of this group ---- as such it seems that its our needs that make X Y or Z "significant"

> "Meanwhile, in the marketplace,
> the 'novelty' of the avant garde
> signals just another item for sale
> -or so some would like to think.
> If the experimental only referred > to technique, this might be so, but > when it refers to ideas or modes
> of thought, then it can constitute > a challenge to what Bernstein > accurately terms'official verse culture' which > (...) is still very much in place."

how much avant garde is available in the market place ? i've never seen any, as such i wonder what this cd mean ultimately --- and the experimental, i'd say has nothing to do with technique and is a cognitive relation to the work not a style or technique that one can pick up put down at any time --- not that i think many of us are writing experimental poetry --- i doubt we are --- i maybe have written one poem deserving the name and seen a handful more --- it seems to me that instead what most of us are engaged in is improvization of one sort or another and with varying degrees of guidelines/guard-rails etc

i dont dispute that there is an official verse culture but i don't feel connected to it enough to be able to muster much of an oppositional attitude towards it myself --- to be truly oppositional i wd have to pay attention to official verse culture and there is so much better to be done with my time

> "To say it [the A-G] does not,
> and can not, exist is either > wishful thinking or a form of cultural > despair, a loss of faith
> not only in poetry, but also > language, and thus - us."

must it be so stark ? i wd rather have the supposedly avant garde character
of presentness and ditch the oppositionality

so i guess i'm not in the avant garde huh ?

↑ Index

30. Maria Damon
address query
Thu 2 Dec 1999

---

anybody got a mailing address for Tinfish? thakns in advance md

↑ Index

31. Daniel Kane
machismo and the avant-garde?
Thu 2 Dec 1999

Anyone know of work that's been done on machismo as implicit in avant-garde values? Or, on a more localized level, Olson and machismo (i.e., "go by it, boys, rather than by,the metronome," and "there it is, brothers, sitting there, for USE," "from the moment he ventures into FIELD COMPOSITION--puts himself into the open" etc.).

A list of any articles / books that deal with this in one way or another would be much appreciated.

If you like, backchannel to [redacted].

Thanks.
--daniel

↑ Index

32. Lawrence Upton
invitation to submit work to "on word" - Writers Forum's 1000th publication
Thu 2 Dec 1999

---

invitation to submit work to "on word"

Writers Forum's 1000th publication

As its 1000th publication, Writers Forum plans another special! It will be called "on word" and will be as big as finance permits. This is an invitation for you to send work for consideration for inclusion - but *please read on first.

We hope to produce an eclectic anthology of investigative, positively-experimental work, with supporting statements *where *appropriate. We are interested in seeing work across the range of poetry from linear verbal to non-verbal visual work by poets who, regardless of gender or race, have in common their commitment to "making it new" - those who are, in our judgement, still trying new things, open to ideas, still surprising.

The proposed book is intended not just to provide a showcase of energetic contemporary work, much of it not available through existing anthologies, but also a bridge and speculative map into the new poetries being worked out now.

Like WF750 the approach will be international.

We want to see contributions from younger poets, however one defines "younger".

As a speculative book, attention will be paid to emerging forms and media including approaches which cross traditional and accepted boundaries. Ideally, the publication will include CDs to present aural performance, to examine the use of colour, to present some of the work in "the emerging technologies".

At present, we know that we are able to publish a print publication of limited scale; further funding is being sought to enable us to fulfil our wider ambitions.

For now, you are invited to send 4 (four) pages, camera ready. The size should be in the proportion 210 (wide) : 297 (high).

Please send s.a.e. / i.r.c. for return of your work. If you are on email, let us have your email address.

If it becomes possible to include CDs further announcements will be made. All such announcements will be published at the WF website.

http:// matrix.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/

At present, all we want is work on paper.

These guidelines are intended to be self-explanatory; but if you have any question, write to either editor with sae / irc or email Lawrence Upton on
[redacted]

Submissions to "on word", which fit these guidelines (intended to save us all wasting time), should be sent, with s.a.e. / i.r.c. to either:

Lawrence Upton
(WF1000)
32 Downside Road
Sutton
Surrey SM2 5HP
UK

or

Bob Cobbing
(WF1000)
89a Petherton Road
London N5 2QT
UK

Provisional deadline: 30th June 2000

Publication date: 1st January 2001 or later

Bob Cobbing & Lawrence Upton
Editors: "on word"

JUST PUBLISHED:
"huming / queuing" by Lawrence Upton
Writers Forum, London; November 1999
40 pp; ISBN 0 86162 £3.00 sterling plus p & p
from
New River Project, 89a Petherton Road, London N5 2QT

↑ Index

33. david bromige
WTO : reports of the police riot in Seattle
Thu 2 Dec 1999

Listmates : this ain't poetry nor poetics, but it has a foot in kultur-kritik. I know how hard it can be to get any news that hasnt been masticated then turned into daily rejectamenta by the corpsemedia---our local paper, an organ of the NYT, airbrushed yesterday's reign of terror by police forces, and had a fatuous editorial turning the violence of a dozen anarchists and a handful of thugs (agents provocateurs?) into 5,000 peaceful protestors going ape. And so now we dont need to pay further attention to any critcism of the WTO, because if we did criticize it, we'd be nut-cases (as the Estonian delegate said).

Because I live within range of radio station kpfa, I am able to forward eye-witness accounts heard yesterday, by live feed from Seattle. And so I shall---with apologies to those who would like to see this List stick to its poetics mission.

These reports testify to "overkill" violence on the part of police forces in Seattle. Faced with peaceful protests and passive resistance, the forces of law-n-order fired rubber bullets pointblank at seated protestors, in attempts to clear a 50-block area that the mayor had (with dubious constitutionality) placed off-limits to free speech.

In many previous such demonstrations in other cities, protestors have been removed by hands-on methods, with ultimate success for the police. In Seattle, police fired rubber bullets into the faces of those who were in their way, breaking teeth and raising grapefruit-sized welts. A young woman who was among those helping out at a field station by tending the wounded, said that many injured men had been shot in the groin, likewise pointblank. Others had their wounds in the back, sustained as they complied with police demands that they vacate the area. People were trapped in order to be teargassed [note : as I saw happen at UC Berkeley in 1968] rather than being allowed to disperse.

She also testified that she and other workers were ordered to remove the red cross armbands they wore to identify themselves, and had their medical supplies confiscated. This meant that protestors who had been teargassed (often, also at pointblank range) were denied water and swabs to relieve the pain of the searing and choking gas. She said, too, that (this in contrast to wire-service reports today of "several injured") she and her colleagues had treated more than a hundred sufferers.

I am a student of voices. This woman was telling the truth, on this I stake myself....although I can well imagine the corporate media would, did they have to deal with her at all, frame her as a dupe or tool.

The list of civil rights violations, physical or otherwise, could go on and on, but this is e-mail, so I forbear.

Many of these police, in riot gear, displayed no badges nor was it possible to know to which adminstrative unit they belonged----Seattle police, King's County marshalls, Washington State police, Highway Patrol, federal agents, National Guard. The Mayor has done some hand-wringing, but like it or not he, Paul Schell, bears ultimate responsibility.

What one wants to do with this information is a seperate question. My sympathies lie with those who believe we must find a way to ensure such police-riots cannot be permitted (as surely this one was encouraged) to occur again.

In a move to compel the Mayor and his supporters to bear this responsibility, and to persuade the administrations of other cities in future situations where civil disobedience occurs, not to allow their police to go mad-dog (then wring their hands upon the fait accompli), many of us are urging a one-year boycott of the city of Seattle. We are trying to reach the Mayor to let him know the terms of this boycott. We think it should last for one year unless there is further police brutality today, in which case it should be extended to two years, and so on.

The boycott---based upon the grounds that Seattle cannot police its own police, thereby rendering the city unsafe to any persons---asks that you not travel to Seattle any time between Dec 5, 1999, and Dec. 5, 2000. If you need to drive thru the city, please gas up and get food in communities on either side of the city. The point is to spend no money in Seattle. Yes, this will bring hardship to innocent merchants and employees, but Seattle authorities escalated these proceedings into a war, and in a war, innocent people do get hurt. There is no other way to bring pressure upon authorities to restrain their police. At best one gets an official inquiry, which exonerates the wrong-doers. If we can hit Seattle in the money-belt, those who feel the pinch the most will exert their own pressure on rogue officials. An example will be made of Seattle to prevent any repetition of such police overkill, in any other venue.

With an outfit such as the WTO, consisting of delegates not elected by us, yet empowered to overturn our labor and environmental laws, there is nowhere to take our disagreement but to the streets---there, and the Net. The corpsemedia will distort these issues beyond sense. Ergo, the streets have to made safer for demonstrators. Or do we want a future where an unreachable WTO wrecks our lives and our one arena of action is owned by uniformed sadists?

Cities will have to live with the fact that the USA allows peaceful assembly of dissidents. There are going to be people in the street for as long as we are denied other avenues to protest the undemocratic rule of the WTO---which can overturn national and state and local environmental laws, which can force our nation to import the products of child- and slave-labor, and which can bring about further export of jobs from the USA to countries with no regulatory sanctions that protect their workers or their environment. In the meantime, cities must not be allowed to get away with super-violence faits accomplis.

The President himself told the WTO yesterday that he approved of the peaceful protestors being in the streets---at the same time that police were carrying out this violence against these president-approved persons. Judge for yourself whether this was cynical on his part or not....perhaps he is merely a dupe.

Further sanctions are possible, and one would be to refuse to buy any product manufactured in Seattle.

Please spread the word, and qualify the consequences for fascism in whatever way you wish.

Thanks for your attention.

David Bromige.

↑ Index

34. Jim Andrews
MIEKAL AND AT DEFIB THIS SUNDAY
Thu 2 Dec 1999

MIEKAL AND AT DEFIB
Sunday December 5, Noon Pacific Time (19:00 GMT)
Defib: http://www.webartery.com/defib

MIEKAL AND Miekal And is a high energy experimentalist writer/polyartist who has been doing interesting, exciting work for a long time in many media. His concentration is on collaborative work; he's working with Alan Sondheim on Alan's collaborative projects on the Trace Webboard and is developing an exciting project at LinguaMOO called Cybele's Multiverse Garden as well as participating with the other webartists at webartery. We'll be surfing these projects and talking with Miekal about online collaboration.

DEFIB You're invited to participate/collaborate in this live chat session which, like the rest of the Defib Web artist interviews, is recorded and turned into a hypertranscript (canned version) of the show. Past shows are available at http://webartery.com/defib/pastevents.htm

TECH REQ
All you need is a Java-enabled browser pointed at http://webartery.com/defib to participate. Or mIRC or Ircle, etc (see Help section in Defib for details) if you prefer to use a traditional IRC client.

SOME OF MIEKAL AND'S WORK/COLLABORATION SITES:

Qazingulaza:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza

linguaMOO:
http://lingua.utdallas.edu:7000
(no password required, just click "Log in") Miekal's room is Cybele's Multiverse Garden type "@go Cybele's Multiverse Garden"

Trace:
http://hum-webboard.ntu.ac.uk/trace

↑ Index

35. Poetics List Administration

POETICS: approval required (EE7EF13B)

Thu 2 Dec 1999

--On Wednesday, December 01, 1999, 1:33 AM -0500 "L-Soft list server at University at Buffalo (1.8d)" <[redacted]> wrote:

This message was originally submitted by [redacted] to the POETICS
list
at LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU. You can approve it using the "OK" mechanism, ignore it, or repost an edited copy. The message will expire automatically
and you do not need to do anything if you just want to discard it. Please refer to the list owner's guide if you are not familiar with the "OK" mechanism; these instructions are being kept purposefully short for your convenience
in processing large numbers of messages.

---------- Original message (ID=EE7EF13B) (57 lines)
---

by listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu with SMTP; 1 Dec 1999 06:33:09 -0000 by miro.bestweb.net (8.9.3/8.9.0) with ESMTP id BAA26357;
Wed, 1 Dec 1999 01:32:53 -0500 (EST)
Date: Wed, 01 Dec 1999 01:31:44 -0500
From: George Fouhy <[redacted]>
To: Nanette <[redacted]>, "[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
Nico Suave <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
PAULETTE <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
Poetics List <[redacted]>,
Poetics List Administration <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>, "[redacted]"
<[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
Robert Scrivens <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>
Subject: Douglas Goetsch

Visit our new feature poet for December 6th at 7:30 PM at the Creative Arts Cafe Poetry Series....

http://www.bestweb.net/~cindyf/poetry_2000.htm

Regards...
Cindy

↑ Index

36. Poetics List Administration
Douglas Goetsch (fwd)
Thu 2 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. - tim shaner

--On Wednesday, December 01, 1999, 1:31 AM -0500 "George Fouhy" <[redacted]> wrote:

Visit our new feature poet for December 6th at 7:30 PM at the Creative Arts Cafe Poetry Series....

http://www.bestweb.net/~cindyf/poetry_2000.htm

Regards...
Cindy

↑ Index

37. Poetics List Administration
NPF Conference Call for Papers (fwd)
Thu 2 Dec 1999

---

this message cam to the admin account - tim shaner

--On "Sylvester Pollet" <[redacted]> wrote:

Burt Hatlen asked me to repost this as a reminder of the Feb. 1 deadline for abstracts. Y'all come! Sylvester
>
>Call for Papers
>
>The Opening of the Field: A Conference on >North American Poetry in the 1960s
>
>University of Maine
>Orono, Maine
>June 28-July 2, 2000
>

>
>The National Poetry Foundation invites paper and panel proposals for a >conference on North American poetry of the 1960s. Proposals are welcome >on writers of previous generations whose literary careers extended into >the 1960s, such as Louis Zukofsky, George Oppen, Robert Lowell, Charles >Olson, Anne Sexton, Elizabeth Bishop, Lorine Niedecker, etc.; on poets of >literary movements that climaxed in the 1960s, including the Beat, Black >Mountain, San Francisco Renaissance, and New York schools; on women poets >and poets of color, who began to speak with a new confidence during this >decade; and on new literary moments that began to define themselves in >this period, such as the ethnopoetic movement and language-centered >writing. Papers are also invited on the general cultural background of >the period, including such themes as the tensions between "academic" >poetry and various attempts to bring poetry into the lives of people "in >the streets"; the relationship of poetry and popular culture, including >rock music; and the role of poetry in the anti-war movement. As the title >of the conference suggests, we invite proposals on Canadian as well as on >American poetry in the 1960s.
>
>The conference will begin on Wednesday evening, June 28, and will conclude >shortly after noon on Sunday, July 2. Accommodations and meals will be >available at a reasonable rate in university residence halls. Registration >will be $85, with a reduced rate of $60 for graduate students.
>
>Confirmed participants as of October 1, 1999, include Marjorie Perloff, >Michael Davidson, Joan Retallack, Lorenzo Thomas, Rosmarie Waldrop, Keith >Waldrop, Maria Damon, Barrett Watten, Lynn Keller, Peter Middleton, and >Ron Silliman.
>
>Send one-page abstracts before February 1, 2000, to
>
>Burton Hatlen
>Director, National Poetry Foundation
>Room 304
>5752 Neville Hall,
>University of Maine
>Orono, ME 04469-5752
>

↑ Index

38. Steve Tills
Humble seed
Thu 2 Dec 1999

So what would it look like, _The Best American Poetry Online_, culled from 75 experimental hypertext mags, if say three-four-five hundred experimental poets each pitched in 20 small bucks for their own two copies a piece and maybe another 20 little dollars to get a coupla copies into every Bans and Ignoble and Aborters big comfortable public libraries/stores in the country? Some cunning <buyers group brokering> with Amazon.com and the publishers and others could also help...

↑ Index

39. Susan M. Schultz
Re: address query
Fri 3 Dec 1999

Maria--the Tinfish address is 47-391 Hui Iwa Street #3, Kaneohe, HI 96744. Thanks for asking.

Susan Schultz

↑ Index

40. Simon DeDeo
Class & Poet[ry/ics]
Fri 3 Dec 1999

Two responses:

Kathy: * I'm glad we're on somewhat of the same wavelength re: a writer's personal relation to class. I'm not sure if it's useful to bring up a discussion of the politics of criticsm, but I do feel that class is used as a blind for race -- for example, in affirmative action discussions, opponents often bring up the upperclass status of a particular black student as an argument against.

The question of a writer's relation to his class -- does anyone know of a critic who goes in to such issues in an explicitly Marxist way? I think -- perhaps -- Bakhtin, in _Dost. Poetics_ -- but it's been awhile.

Maria: * I'm not complaining (at all) that Byron is being attacked for being white. I'm just saying that a political criticism of Byron will focus on his whiteness more than his class in this "day 'n' age". But perhaps we should all stop writing/reading poetry and work on the free Mumia campaign.

-- Simon

↑ Index

41. David Larsen
lettuce report
Fri 3 Dec 1999

I'm sorry I've been too busy w/ exams & the holiday to deliver on my promise of timely lettuce news --I'm still in the lower echelons of finding out about it myself --Here though is an informative report on some of the UFW's work in the central valley:

http://www.unitedfarmworkers.com/letter-vegtable.htm

↑ Index

42. david bromige
3 mans & one fans
Fri 3 Dec 1999

> webcast: Silliman Osman Perelman Stefans

Three men in a boat and their sainted fans. Dig those crazy n-dings! LangPos fer sure.

db

↑ Index

43. Stephen Ellis
Re: avant garde / mckenzie
Fri 3 Dec 1999

There're probably some interesting connections to make between what John's bringing up here viz "official verse culture" and the avant garde, the recent issues of class that have found their way onto the List, and the recent events in Seattle, particularly possible responses to it, as outlined in David Bromige's post, but I'm not clear on exactly what these (connections) might comprise. It's weird to think that perhaps the "oppositional" status between "official verse culture" and the avant garde are only oppositional within a particular frame of reference, perhaps in ways similar to the Seattle battles between officialdom and protestors against officialdom's apparent power - very like the usual game of cops and robbers, a vying for power pointed toward those that already have it, hoping for exchange, hoping to be heard, hoping after some form of power one can keep for themselves, or use in a better way than those who currently wield it to bust heads, balls, unions or whatever seems to stand in the way of "moving forward" , wch I assume means toward material gain, or, for those in opposition, what? - a more just world? But in terms of what ideal or out of what labyrinthine sacrificial pit are such judgements made, ie., who's an "outsider" and what are they outside of? There are a lot of troubling questions here. At the front line of what struggle, exactly, does the avant garde do its stuff? Are cops working class? Were the bulk of the protestors in Seattle working class? Was Marx working class? Or, not to get so ridiculous as to ask whether the Marx Brothers were working class, & to shift directions, are the working class capable of self-rule? Do workers need bosses like bosses need workers? Is human consciousness in fact capable of some degree of self-regulation that would lead to the creation of a state of affairs in wch something other than bared teeth rules? And if so, how does this mode of thinking translate into action, into form? Is that what the avant garde has always posed itself as, new forms of thinking that may "trickle down" into the common polis without being in some wise simply ghettoized or elevated as just another aesthetic avenue to the immaterial? And is "official verse culture" a way to sandbag the flood of change those who already have power and/or status are always afraid is just around the corner? And is it? Or what of "anarchistic" ideas expressed in modes common to "official verse culture" - who will read them? Who comprises the working class? Or what percentage of that class is interested in radical ideas and change enough to spend real time examining the ways in wch either and/or both the avant garde or "official verse culture" propose change. Or how much is a "necessity" of change foisted upon those who often haven't yet the means to understand or determine what their own place(s) in such "new systems" might be? We are all put in a state of perpetual trespass against ourselves because of our own inabilities to get outside of our own isolation, and so our ideas about all of the above (and more) become isolating traumas, albeit perpetually expressed. "The powers that be" may be our own ability to endure under the isolation and stress that are a result of either being possessed or bereft of exactly those powers, rather than the power itself, wch, disembodied as it also is in us, is a very difficult thing to identify, as are we, remaining as we do at its behest, under order. Yet therefore also, always "in" substance. The argument is, what are we gonna DO with it, about it, for it, against it - the problem is vectoral: where are we going? Forget the "reasons"; give me the directions. (or, forget the bandaid: give me the finger.) S E

> From: "Lowther, John" <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: avant garde / mckenzie
> Date: Thu, 2 Dec 1999 15:15:42 -0500
>
> geraldine mckenzie wrote;

> "It is misleading to refer to
> the avant garde solely in terms
> of novelty. This establishes
> an association with art
> as commodity which is generally
> repudiated by those artists
> who might be described
> as avant garde. Novelty is
> a creature of time and unreliable,
> a bye product of experiment
> rather than an end."

it is misleading --- did i do it ? i recall writing about someone at the symposium in new orleans who'd thrown out the tern novelty in his screed about the term experimental --- i dont recall the term avant garde coming into it --- but i wd like to mention that novelty need not relate to commodity and as its origin is in the 14th century it seems reasonably disconnected to commodity culture circa now

> "What is more significant
> is the 'revolutionary' or > oppositional nature of a text."

i see what yr saying here but i'm not sure that belief is compelled --- that is, i find the discontinuity between the work of the italian futurists and what had been going on up until then much more interesting, in and of itself (it's novelty?) than i do they "revolutionary" attitudes of this group ---- as such it seems that its our needs that make X Y or Z "significant"

> "Meanwhile, in the marketplace,
> the 'novelty' of the avant garde
> signals just another item for sale
> -or so some would like to think.
> If the experimental only referred
> to technique, this might be so, but
> when it refers to ideas or modes
> of thought, then it can constitute
> a challenge to what Bernstein
> accurately terms'official verse culture' which > (...) is still very much in place."

how much avant garde is available in the market place ? i've never seen any,
as such i wonder what this cd mean ultimately --- and the experimental, i'd say has nothing to do with technique and is a cognitive relation to the work

> not a style or technique that one can pick up put down at any time --- not > that i think many of us are writing experimental poetry --- i doubt we are
> --- i maybe have written one poem deserving the name and seen a handful more
> --- it seems to me that instead what most of us are engaged in is > improvization of one sort or another and with varying degrees of > guidelines/guard-rails etc
>
> i dont dispute that there is an official verse culture but i don't feel
> connected to it enough to be able to muster much of an oppositional attitude > towards it myself --- to be truly oppositional i wd have to pay attention to > official verse culture and there is so much better to be done with my time
>
> > "To say it [the A-G] does not,
> > and can not, exist is either
> > wishful thinking or a form of cultural
> > despair, a loss of faith
> > not only in poetry, but also > > language, and thus - us."
>
> must it be so stark ? i wd rather
> have the supposedly avant garde character
> of presentness and ditch the oppositionality
>
> so i guess i'm not in the avant garde huh ?

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

44. Lawrence Upton

Captain's log WF1000 - supplemental

Fri 3 Dec 1999

Responses to the initial call for submissions have shown up some ambiguities and omissions in that call. So...

(1) It says: "The size should be in the proportion 210 (wide) : 297 (high)". 210 mm x 297 mm is A4 paper and we realise that such paper is not readily available world-wide; but we hope you will set your word-processor to custom size, or shift the margins, or rule up your drawing paper accordingly. It is likely that the actual published page size will be less than A4 so make sure that you use a type size which will cope with reduction!

So: work in that ratio, 210:297, and be prepared for us to print at anything down to a regular paperback

(2) We prefer previously unpublished work, but will consider published work. Please state details of any previous publication.

(3) i.r.c. means international reply coupon - a way of sending us stamps across national borders - feel free though to just give an email if you don't actually need return so we can email you saying yes or no

(4) This is an international invitation. Work from poets of all countries is welcome if it fits the guidelines

(5) Funds permitting, the book will be professionally printed. If they do not permit then it will be photocopied in-house and professionally bound. So "camera-ready" means "as long as we don't have to retype it etc". Laser prints, ink jets, decent photocopies and so on should be fine as long as they're not running low on toner. (For those of you who know the 750th publication of WF - WORD SCORE UTTERANCE CHOREOGRAPHY - the introductory pages were mastered on a sheet feed desk top laser which cost about 100 UK pounds

(6) There will be an index, but do consider putting your name on the page as an integral part of the image to be reproduced.

(7) Don't include page numbers because they will be incorrect when they are in the book. Pencil numbers on the back of the pages to show correct order.

(8) Choice of type face etc is entirely up to you

Lawrence Upton
for both "on word" editors

↑ Index

45. Lawrence Upton

Re: housepress announces "COURIER: an anthology of concrete and visual poetry."

Fri 3 Dec 1999

---

you finished it! well done!

L
----- Original Message -----
From: derek beaulieu <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: 02 December 1999 02:00
Subject: housepress announces "COURIER: an anthology of concrete and visual poetry."

↑ Index

46. Alicia Askenase

Re: "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" #89, Atlanta issue

Fri 3 Dec 1999

Dear Kevin,

I would very much like a copy of your latest "Mirage #4 Period[ical] #89, Atlanta Issue. My address is: Alicia Askenase, Walt Whitman Cultural Arts Center, 2nd and Cooper Streets, Camden, NJ 08057. Thanks in advance--Alicia

↑ Index

47. R. Drake

Forward: countdown to self-destruct

Fri 3 Dec 1999

> Date: Thu, 02 Dec 1999 23:08:32 -0800
> From: sloynic <[redacted]>
> Subject: countdown to self-destruct
>
> 31 days remain before 'webbeat'99' removes itself from the web. if you haven't visited for awhile, here's your opportunity. so much was learned, & so much remains unknown. internet explorer & an imac ventured together with apologies for what won't work with your browser or your machine. i f o n l y .
> november/december issues will be uploaded as created until, Y2K eve, when fetch & your eds. have a date in webdocs to delete, in inverse order, every thread contributed to the web. penelope's shroud.
>
> october 'broken neck doll. to cats everywhere.'
> (we mourn the loss of swallow and dasdo, our loving companions for nearly 19 years.)
> breon ossella sings (wait for it to load in. link underlining at bottom of page); rebik pulawniwsko's website for his sister and her beloved animals is a quicktime movie made from screenshots of the website (wait to load. link underlined text at bottom of page); guitarist, jake (the cat) sekafetz tells his musical dream of salem, oregon band, the diggs (two pages with link to jake's bio or go on to 'OH!') ; sloy's moving gif, 'Oh!'; fake beat hand with author links.
> http://www.users.uswest.net/~gkann/ruby%27sopera.html

september 'you want words.'
(two branches of the same tree: live and beep (as in beepers. ever carried one?)

'LIVE' rick dawson takes it on. 3 pages with elevators: 'goodbye bones'; 'whatssup?'; & 'circles revolve. once started they must end'; (links at bottom of each page stream.) 'BEEP' john mock, reeling in loss, fires an elevator stream of words in 'Y2K's hip/hop jesus.' (to read & then to speed. put the mouse to the pedal, hold down arrow & see the best streaming words in the world !) when done, click link at the bottom & read the poet on his trigger in 'john bio.'
http://www.users.uswest.net/~gkann/livebeep.html august 'not enough room to move.'

still stream/moving stream
'screenshots': sloy shoots 14 stills & makes 14 pages of her imac screens beginning with 'the way i see it,' and ending with 'under the beat hand.' (remember, the screens are photos of screens, i.e., not live. click on underlined words at bottom of each page, not on the images); 'movies': nic's paintings on cardboard & driftwood turn and reveal themselves in quicktime. view 'log,' 'tubes,' 'quandary,' 'navy colt,' & 'kill.'
http://www.users.uswest.net/~gkann/august.html

july 'are you ready for Y2K?'
(guitar work, 'race car' by don edwards. double roll of t.p., 'buttwipe,' & 'no one told the truth' brown bag by sloy)

'a girl's guide to god' : jean erhardt's powerful & starkly beautiful manifestos as revealed through the artist's & poet's passionate & bold readings of the old & the new testaments. 'max's good life': max chavez's photographs of family life. (links hidden in the pictures. caress the screen with your mouse until the teensy hand appears, then click!) evocative, larger-than-life glossies: 'trout,' 'tequilla,' 'gabrielle's sunglasses,' 'max & anita,' & 'sunset.' contributors' links at bottom of page.
http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/readyforY2K.html

june 'nudes & cars'
a series of 13 pages that include hidden hot spots, moving pictures, confessional non-fiction, & sound. 'cargo' & 'highway star,' (wait for the load-in) by nic & the dag: a red car on the road & a drumbeat; 'i lost my funny bone,' 3 times, by sloy (find the hotspots); 'while you're still in the pink,' hardons & blowup dolls seen on the web (link at the bottom); 'the last leather stocking tale,' a true confession by tom crawford involving a car, bondage, & a death-cum-wish, (click on 'walk on water with my poetry'); 'leadsled,' ink strokes on paper, scanned & tiled, by nic (click on 'slow ride to a sleeping woman' at bottom of page); 'sleeping woman,' ink strokes on paper by nic (follow the >>>>);'self nude,' & 'web hunk,' voluptuous acrylics on canvas, painted, photographed & scanned by izak bales; 'asleep,' the finest moving art (gif) on the web by nic; & finally, '53 chevy', seen on the web. (remember to check out contributors' links on last page.)

http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/mayday.html

may 'nested tables & other work in the mill' pagemill, the pagemaker included in the imac package, is used as sloy's art. 'dear ma i never write or call'; 'twoblue moons'; & 'kent, valsetz & other mill stories'; a series 3 pages of nested tables which become pictograms. (move your cursor over the screen to find the hotspots, that teensy hand, & what words or letters flash is also part of whatever they add up to. pagemill for pagemill's sake & not for the sake of the mill.)
'cubio' is nic's moving cube. wait for it to load in & then be hypnotized. 'THAT BOY,' the dag (jonny studer) on virtual drums; 'click here! CLICK HERE! click here!' nested tables, a gif, & a click hot spot somewhere. 'pumpo,' nic's animation in 3 parts. it's worth the wait for the load to see the cells 'pumpo' as singles, each to its own rhythm, until they are influenced into one perfect beat in synch. 'transporting furniture to heaven,' a prismacolor chair, & 'van of the skull,' a prismacolor van with guitarist, don edwards's 'spacey 8' soundtrack. (641 k, on an uncongested web night and a 56k modem; not a long wait. keep the view status bar on your browser checked so you can watch loadins.)
http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/dearma.html

april 'flamed & spammed'

'so begin somewhere,' 'the next nite,' & 'my friend tom,' 3 sloy writings made using painting, an application for visual artists, pasted on a scrolling page (underlined text link at basement of the elevator); 'rollo: rollo: rollo: rollo: rollo,' nic's first computer generated moving piece of art, a rolling anthropomorph (hot spot inside); 'confessions of a seeker-recluse,' a page which invites the reader to write & e some words (click the underlined text to send); 'the oracle has spoken,' sloy's wallpapered writing with two hot spots. one way goes to 'GEE WOW,' before going to the destination of the other, 'mary magdalene, spoiled children, & satan in high heels,' 3 postcards by nic, with cut 'live' (continuous) lines & pulp fiction covers; 'bizzo,' a moving sawblade. oh yes, friends; it's all so. flamed & spammed.
http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/sloywing.html

march 'beato, blobo, bumpo, catshit heaven'
a long blue stream of hopes to elevator down, a load-in. (hit refresh on your browser if images are too slow.) 'beato,' a nic live-line painted in appleworks; 'boho boys,' sloy's oil on blotter paper; 'blobo'; 'im gonna b livin in catshit heaven'; 'bumpo'; 'scrap iron'; 'nicsloy'; &'sloy,' nic's prismacolor portrait of sloy.
http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/babybeat3.html

february 'fauna, wingnuts, death'
'grabo'; 'hard 2b'; 'ncsloy'; '3wingnuts'; 'fauna'; 'mind if i join u' (errol flynn's words as he flung himself down the hatch onto the orgy below); & 'in memory of form,' black prismacolor on stonehenge paper, all on one long green slide.
http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/babybeat2.html

january 'a car, booze, hoohoohoo' the bloody beginning. 'cardboard chair on continuous line,' cardboard sculpture on a cut/live line cardboard postcard; 'bamboozled,' oil paint writing on 50'x54' pulp paper; 'sloy painting a bottle,' prismacolor drawing of sloy painting on an empty macnaughton's whisky convenience flask; ' starry nite whidbey from camano,' nic's prismacolor of one island seen from another (whidbey from camano); 'booze or pie?' a choice; '56 ford';& 'honeymoon,' nic & sloy.
http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/babybeat1.html

about the issues & more 'the apposable thumb'
'editors' will give you a pic of sloynic. 'about the issues,' 16 pages of alice-down-the- rabbit-hole navigation elucidating everything. if you dare, click 'the sleeper' & GO! 'contributors' is (so far) a stream of 11 pages with links that take you everywhichway. webbeat'99's contributors (& links to) include:
nic http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/clicklist.html
jonny (the dagger) studer http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/virtualdagger.html
izak http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/izak.html
sloy http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/sacknersloy.html don edwards http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/donedwards.html
tom crawford http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic/wallpaper.html
john mock http://www.users.uswest.net/~gkann/johnbio.html
max chavez http://www.users.uswest.net/~gkann/maxbio.html rick dawson http://www.users.uswest.net/~gkann/rickbio.html breon ossella http://www.users.uswest.net/~gkann/fernetta.html
jake sekafetz http://www.users.uswest.net/~gkann/jakethecatwithfish.html

> 'rebeat' is the long-lived & much exhibited, 4-issue tabloid by publishers' clyde zettle, rick dawson, & sloynic, an offspring of the beats & the mater/pater of ezine, webbeat'99. reviews.
> 'e's to the eds' is a collection of the 6 responses webbeat'99 has received in its 11 months & 1,506 hits since june 1, when a counter was added to the beat hand. & they are WORTHY > responses: ruby, flakey foont, rainwulf, jake the cat, dave moore (kerouac & beat scholar), & gara gillentine (unknown to the eds., but a more generous & sharing reader could not be hoped for).
> 'collophon' the few things used to make these pages. fonts we wished you had.
> 'the beat hand' belongs to nic. the ring is jenny zettle's, sloy's paternal grandmother's gone.
> bandages. true. newsprint background: rebeat. as in beat again.
>
> sloynic
> dec1 11:30 PM '99
>
> 'webbeat'99'
> http://home.earthlink.net/~sloynic

↑ Index

48. Susan Minyard

Re: webcast: Silliman Osman Perelman Stefans

Fri 3 Dec 1999

In a message dated 12/2/99 8:28:49 PM US Mountain Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

<< [redacted] >>

Yes, I would like to participate in this webcast.
I am in Arizona. Would it be possible to use a computer at the University rather than one in my home. Do I need an email address to sign on?

Thanks.

Susan Minyard

↑ Index

49. Mark Prejsnar

the lost retrograde

Fri 3 Dec 1999

The desultory thread on Lehman's book is interesting, full of mild and slightly positive sentiment.

The dynamix of the list are perhaps somewhat illustrated by this; including the rapid turnover of regulars; ...When the book first came out, if memory serves, there was rather a lot of more engaged and heated discussion... Much of it pretty negative indeed. Among other fascinating aspects of the 'net, and this list, (all lists) is the quick and almost automatic "loss of memory" ..

Oh, and of course: the group which has just edited the new issue of Mirage #4 is the APG, not the AWG...

↑ Index

50. Poetry Project
police riot in Seattle
Fri 3 Dec 1999

Thank you very much David, for your post about the situation in Seattle. For those of us mostly dependent upon mass-media outlets, it's been difficult to get a true sense of the situation and I much appreciate your information.

However, if you'll allow me, I do take some issue with this, from your post:

"The point is to spend no money in Seattle. Yes, this will bring hardship to innocent merchants and employees, but Seattle authorities escalated these proceedings into a war, and in a war, innocent people do get hurt. There is no other way to bring pressure upon authorities to restrain their police."

While I'm certainly no expert on how to restrain police, I'm rather a devotee of the idea that the ends does not justify the means--that the means rather is how one defines oneself and redefines modus operandi for others. Thus I'm quite hesitant to do anything where "innocent people get hurt" no matter what the "justification." One of the major points of the protests was to demonstrate against bad working conditions. If you boycott a "good" business with "good" labor practices, you're, well, cutting off your nose...etc. subverting your own intentions and dishonoring those who were in the line of fire in the first place. What if one of those with a "grapefruit" sized welt is actually the owner of a some bookstore, or eco-company, or even a gas station with decent pay for its employees, and, after protesting, this person returns to her/his business only to find that those who supported her/him, are now destroying their livelihood?

I'd suggest instead targetting your boycott against those companies who support the WTO, write letters to the Mayor & media outlets, network with fellow protesters in Seattle to let them know we support them, and most important, keep the real news circulating. I know it's not as dramatic and immediate a solution, but it sure makes "us" different from "them."

All best wishes,
Marcella Durand

↑ Index

51. Patrick Herron
Re: WTO
Fri 3 Dec 1999

David Bromige wrote -

>Cities will have to live with the fact that the USA allows peaceful assembly of dissidents.

Unfortunately, David, to be quite frank, Amerika DOES NOT allow peaceful assembly that much any more. The legal protections for peaceful protesters have been disappearing for a long time.

Amerika is a police state. Your only protection in Amerika is money, connections.

Land of the free, home of the brave
is really land of the fee, home of the knave.

And then, lest we forget, there's always agent provocateur activities within many political movements in the US, people paid to make the peaceful look violent.

This was a wonderful note, David. I am very glad you shared it with everyone. What you are saying in your note is indeed what is going on. I have a good friend who is at Capitol Hill in the middle of it and I am worried about him.

Under a state of emergency, the city of Seattle made it illegal to use a gaskmask, and the penalty is 180 days in jail and/or a large fine.

Patrick

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

52. Catherine Daly
[Fwd: 2 jobs at ucla design/media arts]
Fri 3 Dec 1999

[redacted] wrote:

> #1
>
> ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE/FULL PROFESSOR

OF DESIGN | MEDIA ARTS

The UCLA Department of Design (www.design.ucla.edu), which is currently in the process of changing its name to the UCLA Department of Design | Media Arts, is seeking a qualified individual with experience in one or more of the following areas: interface design between virtual and physical worlds; innovative type design, 3D modeling and animation; and creative programming for Web-based, interactive and/or virtual environments.

The successful candidate will be expected to teach studio and lecture courses at both undergraduate and graduate levels, contribute to the department's vision, and to undertake independent research and creative activity appropriate for advancement within the University of California.

Qualifications: Distinction as a professional artist in the area of Design and Media Arts. Advanced degree and teaching experience in a university setting are preferred. Administrative experience in an academic or professional setting is also desirable. Level of appointment and salary will be determined by the candidate's qualifications and professional experience.

Applications should include a letter stating your artistic and educational philosophy and approach to teaching, accompanied by a complete resume or curriculum vitae and the names, phone numbers, mail and e-mail addresses of three references qualified to provide knowledgeable evaluation of your qualifications. Please do not send additional supporting materials until they are requested. Application deadline: February 1, 2000, or until filled.

Address letters of application to: Professor Victoria Vesna, Chair, Search Committee, Department of Design, 1300 Dickson Art Center, Los Angeles, CA

90095-1608.

The University of California, Los Angeles is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Proof of U.S. citizenship or eligibility for U.S. employment will be required prior to employment (Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986).

....

#2

ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE/FULL PROFESSOR

OF DESIGN | MEDIA THEORY

The UCLA Department of Design (www.design.ucla.edu), which is currently in the process of changing its name to the UCLA Department of Design | Media Arts, is seeking a qualified theorist who has an extensive publication record and at least one major work dealing with issues of design/media arts. Curatorial and some practical experience in digital media is preferred.

The successful candidate will be expected to teach studio and lecture courses at both undergraduate and graduate levels and to undertake independent research and publication appropriate for advancement within the University of California.

Qualifications: Distinction as a theorist in the area of Design and Media Arts. Ph.D. degree and teaching experience in a university setting are preferred. Administrative experience in an academic or professional setting is also desirable. Level of appointment and salary will be determined by the candidate's qualifications and professional experience.

Applications should include a letter stating your artistic and educational > philosophy and approach to teaching, accompanied by a complete resume or curriculum vitae and the names, phone numbers, mail and e-mail addresses of three references qualified to provide knowledgeable evaluation of your qualifications. Please do not send additional supporting materials until they are requested. Application deadline: February 1, 2000, or until filled.

>
> Address letters of application to: Professor Victoria Vesna, Chair, Search Committee, Design and Media Theory, Department of Design, 1300 Dickson Art Center, Los Angeles, CA 90095-1608.
>
> The University of California, Los Angeles is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Proof of U.S. citizenship or eligibility for U.S. employment will be required prior to employment (Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986).

↑ Index

53. Louis Cabri

lisa robertson

Fri 3 Dec 1999

Does anyone have an updated email address for Lisa Robertson?

Can someone help me with this?

Is there one of you out there who would go to the trouble of looking up Lisa Robertson's email address for me, one that is current?

Can I possibly ask someone to look up an email address for me?

Could it be you that I am searching for, one of you who holds the address to Lisa Robertson's email home?

Is it now, here, in this place, that I will find the email address of one of you, who is, nonetheless, not a subscriber?

Might it be soon that someone will preoccupy their own thoughts with this request?

↑ Index

54. Poetry Project
readings next week
Fri 3 Dec 1999

Monday, December 6th at 8 pm (sign-up at 7:30)

The last open mike of 1999--at the Poetry Project anyhow. We've been getting excited calls about this one all month, so come join in the (predicted) chaos!

Wednesday, December 8th at 8 pm

David Henderson & David Cameron

David Henderson is the author of Neo-California, published this year by North Atlantic Books, and of Skuse Me While I Kiss the Sky: The Life of Jimi Hendrix. Henderson has done many collaborations with jazz musicians such as Ornette Coleman, Sun Ra, Burt Turetsky, and Butch Morris, and he is currently at work on a CD which collects many of these performances. David Cameron is the author of two collections of false translations of Charles Baudelaire's Les Fleurs du Mal--Flurries of Mail and Dirty Mom. He's also been working on a sequence of variations on the Lord's Prayer, titled L.P.

Friday, December 10th at 10:30 pm

Night of Taboos Part I: Private Parts, Therapists & Eating Disorders with readings and performances by Elena Georgiou, Jaclyn Piudik, Kathleen Ossip, Anne Elliot, Daniel Nester, & Shira Dentz.

***

Admission to regular Poetry Project events is $7, $4 for students/seniors. No advance tickets. Admission is at the door. The Poetry Project is wheelchair-accessible with assistance and advance notice. Please call [redacted] for more information. The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church at the corner of 2nd Ave. & 10th St. in Manhattan.

***

If you wish to be removed from this list, respond to this message with "please remove me" in the subject line & we will certainly do so...

***

A small excerpt from Brendan Lorber's _The Address Book_, "131 E 10th" [our address, yes]:

"& dressing a poem in addresses sets a mood like tables with the spooning couples in place of silverware but who will know my grandparents in 1950 at 1261 Madison Ave & I at their age an hour ago 100 St Marks Place How's my pace? There's no such thing as a late bloomer or being well-travelled I lost all sense of virginity in 823 Butterfield C Middletown CT My mind went all together at 58 Cumberland San Francisco & at the corner of 1st & 1st I found God & lost my Metrocard which is why I'm late to your gig"

Until next week...

***

↑ Index

55. Patrick Herron
More on WTO
Fri 3 Dec 1999

Date: Thu, 2 Dec 1999 23:54:31 EST
From: [redacted]

COLLATERAL DAMAGE IN SEATTLE
by Portland student/reporter Jim Desyllas

Called-in from a pay phone outside Seattle. Wed., 7:30 pm Pacific time.

(Posted at www.emperors-clothes.com 12-2-99. Feel free to distribute in full including this note.)

I just spent 4 days in Seattle. The "information" people are getting from the mass media is false. This was not, as Pres. Clinton claims, a peaceful protest marred by the actions of violent protesters. This was a massive, strong but peaceful demonstration which was attacked repeatedly by the police with the express purpose of provoking a violent response to provide photo opportunities for the Western media. I know because I watched it happening. I'll tell you how they did it.

As Michel Chossudovsky says in his "Disarming the New World Order" (See Note # 1 at end for link to that article) - the government put a lot of effort into making sure the protesters in Seattle were a "loyal opposition" who wanted to reform the WTO, not get rid of it. But the people in Seattle - American steel workers, Canadian postal workers, college kids from all over, environmentalists from Australia - you name it - were not for reforming the WTO. They were for getting rid of it.

And this wasn't just true of the protesters. I interviewed delegates. None of them had anything favorable to say about the WTO. Two delegates from the Caribbean were angry about job loss. One delegate from Peru took a bullhorn and got up on a car and spoke to the protestors against the World Trade Organization. He said it hurts the workers and farmers. I interviewed a Norwegian guy from Greenpeace. Totally against it. Even a delegate from Holland said it had hurt the farmers there. He said though it is supposedly democratic, that's actually a lie: the US, England and Canada and a few others get together and decide what they want to do. Then they ask the rest of the countries to vote and if they vote wrong they threaten,"You won't get loans," or whatever. They get them to do what they want by blackmailing them. The Italians we interviewed were upset too. I couldn't find any delegates who were in favor.

So the government instigated a "riot" to discredit the movement against the WTO because they couldn't dilute it. I am not guessing about this. I was there. I saw it happening. And I will tell you I am frankly shocked to see, close up, just how little our leaders care what happens to ordinary people. Clinton can pose and speak a lot of flowery stuff but the truth is - we are nothing to them. I saw this with my own eyes.

Sunday and Monday, there was no violence. None. The people were aggressively non-violent; they were self-policing. Up until Tuesday at 4pm there was one window broken in the whole city - a McDonalds window. This compares favorably to the typical rock concert, let alone a demonstration of people who were non-violently barring entry to the World Trade Center!

At this point, a new group of police - tactical police - moved in and started gassing people and shooting rubber bullets. Is it any surprise that people got mad? Of course, the young kids hit back by breaking some windows in retaliation for being gassed, sprayed with very painful pepper gas, and shot with dangerous "rubber" bullets. The police instigated these kids, plain and simple.

Sunday and Monday they had young cops, using them to block the streets. These were trainees. But Tuesday they had the real cops; none of them were young. They were trained to attack people. A small group, maybe 100 people total, struck back. Then these cops herded that group around the city, making sure there were plenty of photo ops of "violent protesters."

A number of times they had these 100 or so protesters caught between buildings and walls of police. They could easily have arrested and detained this small number of people and gotten it over with. Instead they would gas them and let them go. Then trap them again, gas them again, and again let them go. The cops made no arrests that I know of until late Tuesday night though the skirmishing was going on from three till 9:30. The cops would blockade three or five blocks of an area, give the angry kids room to operate, keep gassing them - when you gas a person, let me tell you, it gets them fighting mad.

Tuesday night the police gassed all of downtown. This was going on from 3 PM, till 6 PM.. Gas everywhere. The kids broke a few windows - McD's, Starbucks - small stuff - burned a few garbage cans. The police were using these people as extras. It was staged. I believe also the police had their own people in there, encouraging people to break stuff - if people think I may be exaggerating, I saw supposed protesters - they were screaming and so on - and then later, when everything was over, the same people tackled other protestors and put handcuffs on them.

At 6pm they issued a State of Emergency. At that point they had pushed the 100 people outside the city limits, so the police went outside the limits too, and they started gassing that area too, gassing the neighborhoods where the regular people live. I am not exaggerating. The police were relentless.

This was in an area from the city limits for about 10 blocks to the Seattle Central Community College. If you were alive, the police gassed you. People coming back from work, kids, women, everyone. People would go out of their houses to see what was happening because these tear gas guns sound like

a cannon - and they would get gassed. A block away there was a Texaco gas station - they threw tear gas at gas pumps, believe it or not - they were like vandals. They gassed a bus. I saw it with my own eyes. A bus. The driver, the riders, the people just abandoned it .

I was sitting in a little coffee shop called Rauhaus, [Jim did not spell this
- the spelling may be wrong.] They were shooting "rubber" bullets at the glass. I picked up a dozen of the things in a few square feet. They were also shooting this paint that you can only see with a florescent light. They would paint anyone and everyone and then go hunting them.

Anyway, because they were gassing everybody, the local people got mad too and they joined the 100 who had been herded out of the city. So soon there were 500 including the neighborhood people and all very angry. Naturally. Because they had been gassed and hit with pepper spray, that stuff does a number on you. And shot with these damn bullets. Then people set up barricades at Seattle Central Community College. The cops organized themselves for about an hour and then moved in and gassed that area.

Today they started mass arrests. That was because Clinton - the Greeks call him the Planitarchis, Ruler of the World - was coming. Weeping crocodile tears about how he just LOVES peaceful protest, which of course you'd have to be two years old to believe he had nothing to do with the police action. This whole thing, this police attack, this was US foreign policy, not some action decided by some bureaucrat in Seattle. This was the State Department. They wanted to discredit the people.

When things started on Sunday, there was a protest rally of solidarity involving people from different walks of life. Monday it got even bigger.

Tuesday there was a big sort of carnival where people were doing different things, a band was playing music and people were blocking the World Trade Center. And about 3 PM the cops started throwing tear gas.

The thing that drove Clinton crazy was that on Tuesday the protesters had succeeded in making nonviolent human chains and had therefore stopped everyone from going into the World Trade Center. Only maybe 27 delegates got through, mostly US and British. There were what seemed like tens of thousands of protesters involved. So the police did their gassing number against these nonviolent people to break up the human chains and make the protesters look violent.

Today (Wednesday) I followed the union protest put together by the Longshoremen's Union. They went down to the docks and had a rally then marched to Third Avenue. As soon as they got there the cops started gassing them. There was an old lady there. She had gone downtown by bus to buy something. This lady was in her 70's and I saw her trying to run, but she couldn't breathe. She was in shock. I carried her to a building entryway. She was gasping, terrified.
She had been in Germany, and it was like she was having flashbacks. The tear gas sounds like gunfire and there were helicopters overhead, sirens, cops on horses, everything.

They had clearly made a decision to destroy this movement.

So anyway there I was with her in this building and she wanted to go to the hospital but there was tear gas everywhere and I was afraid if I tried to move her she'd be gassed again. I went to this line of cops and begged - I mean begged - these riot police to help her. They ignored me. A girl told me later that a one year old had been gassed. And I myself saw a girl no more than 18 - a cop had busted her lip wide open - she was bleeding - and then they gassed everyone including her. After that she was kneeling on the ground crying like a baby and praying for 15 minutes, Hail Mary, Hail Mary. Over and over. She was in a state of shock. They just gassed these people who were sitting down non-violently and doing nothing. Nothing.

At one point the Seattle Mayor said his boys were not using rubber bullets. Miraculously, by then I had ten in my pocket. I could open a little market, sell the things. They are everywhere. I and other people started giving them to delegates and stuff. "See what they're doing? They're shooting "rubber" bullets and lying about it." We showed them to the media. I guess enough people and the media got the information because the Mayor made a new statement then that they were using them. As if he hadn't known.

They shot rubber bullets from four feet away into the face of a guy next to me, broke all his front teeth. When that happened I lost it. I forgot I was supposed to be getting the news for all of you and I started yelling at the cops, "What the hell is wrong with you? Are you sick, man?" So this cop aimed his gun right at me. That was his answer. So I first put my hands in front of my face because I didn't want to lose my teeth. And then I thought, to hell with it. I was wearing my target shirt that said "Collateral Damage", you know? With a bullseye target, like they wore during the bombing in Yugoslavia. And I told this guy, "Go ahead, shoot! Here! Here's the target!"
He didn't shoot me.

I want to emphasize, these protesters were NOT violent people. They were the most non-violent people I have ever seen. Even when I was screaming at the cop, this girl came up to me and said, "Do not scream. This is non-violent." These people were too much to believe. They must meditate all the time, I don't know.

Clinton said he supports nonviolent protest. That is baloney. Today (Wed.)
the protesters were causing absolutely no "trouble". In downtown the cops had people running who weren't even protesters - like that old lady or just people going to work or shopping - everyone was getting gassed. The busses weren't running because of the gas. I was lucky to catch one with a driver who could still see. I begged him to drive the old lady home - the driver changed his route especially for her. If you want to find human decency, stay away from the Planitarchis. Go to the to regular people. They have some. The Planitarchis lost all his years ago. Now he wouldn't know human decency if it came up and bit him.

So now I have made personal acquaintance with the people who run this country, and they are quite simply scum. There were people at work, people with babies, they were all getting gassed because the government would not allow an assembly of people speaking their minds. It is the same as what happened in Athens. Clinton's requirements on the Greek government created the riot and he did the same thing here. And then he says he supports nonviolent protest? How? By shooting rubber bullets? And today they outlawed gas masks. They want to make sure everyone gets his money's worth.

Today, just like yesterday night, the police were in the residential neighborhoods. People in cafés were getting gassed and shot at, you could hear it on the windows, bang, bang, bang. A guy trying to cross the street to go to his house got gassed. First a drunk guy outside a bar yelled at the cops "Get out of here!" so they gassed him. And then this other guys was just crossing the street to go home so the cops figured, might as well gas him too. People got gassed for coming out of restaruants and bars and coffeee shops. I'm amazed that nobody died who had asthma or something.

Or maybe somebody did die and they didn't talk about it. I mean after all, it's just collateral damage..

***

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

56. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" #89, Atlanta issue

Fri 3 Dec 1999

---

something wrong with my computer kevin.
but I'd love a copy. sorry to post this.

I can't seem to e mail you direct either.

Todd BaronKevin Killian wrote:
>
> Hi, it's Kevin Killian. Dodie Bellamy and I have turned over the new > issue of our zine "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" to the Atlanta Writers > Group

↑ Index

57. R. Drake

Re: Humble seed

Fri 3 Dec 1999

---

why would one want to make a Book out of Online work? would that "validate" it somehow? or make it a more marketable Commodity?

and why would one want to arbitrate for others what is "The Best" (and, by exclusion, The Rest, all the Other...)? or why would one give another the power to arbiter that work for them?

[the tone of my speaking voice, asking these questions, is not intended to be as "hostile" as the written version might seem... since i suspect steve tills suggestion is aimed to promote online works, and i share that as a goal...]

luigi burning press
http://www.burningpress.org/va/vaintro.html

> So what would it look like, _The Best American Poetry Online_, culled from 75 experimental hypertext mags, if say three-four-five hundred experimental poets each pitched in 20 small bucks for their own two > copies a piece and maybe another 20 little dollars to get a coupla copies into every Bans and Ignoble and Aborters big comfortable public libraries/stores in the country? Some cunning <buyers group brokering> with Amazon.com and the publishers and others could also help...

↑ Index

58. Daniel Kane
e-mail query
Fri 3 Dec 1999

---

anyone have an e-mail address for Rachel Blau DuPlessis? If so, please backchannel to [redacted]. thanks.

↑ Index

59. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
Fri 3 Dec 1999

At 10:50 AM 12/1/99 -0600, you wrote:
>At 8:08 PM -0500 11/30/99, Simon DeDeo wrote:
>
>...When was the last time Byron was attacked for >>being from the lesire/upper/aristocratic class? Much, much longer ago than >>he was for being white.

The grammar of Simon's first post would not have suggested the intention clarified in his more recent -- BUT -- still seems a peculiar shade of red herring to me -- I am not now nor have a ever been a "Byronist," but I have not seen any citations ever of critial work "attacking" Byron for being white, nor have I seen any citations of any critical work looking at his "whiteness." Does anybody out there know of such an article, which I'd like to see -- There ARE books and articles that offer analyses of race in Romanticism, which may inclue Byron --

Not only do the North American "whiteness studies" bunch not concern themselves with Byron, they tend not to address poetry at all

Race has often been blinded by class -- and there have been attempts to trump race with class (such as William J. Wilson's works) -- The class argument in discussions of Affirmative Action takes a truly odd turn -- People criticize Affirmative Action for getting upper-middle-class people into certain universities as if (1) they really DID want to see large numbers of poorer people at Yale and (2) as if Affirmative Action had been designed as an economic class remedy, which it surely was not --

While I would in fact like to see economically disadvantaged candidates given a better shot at the best education, I've never understood the logic that claims it is immoral to consider race as an affirmative action remedy in college admissions (as opposed to, say, the action that got George W. through the Ivy League) while it would be moral to admit a candidate from a lower-income family over a candidate from an upper-inome family whose record was otherwise comparable --

Class certainly plays a major role in the current establishment of creative writing in the academy, as any of the people teaching in Cal State's programs might tell you after a visit to a U.C. program -- a role just as prominent as race -

When minority applicants are turned down for home loans that white applicants with otherwise comparable records receive, it's an action based in race that has the effect of rigidifying class structures at the same time --

I think what many of us would like to see is a critique that is simultaneously attuned to race and class in its readings and analyses (and writings!), rather than a critique that pretends to be able to extricate one from the other -- any volunteers?

↑ Index

60. Katie Degentesh
Re: CLASS
Fri 3 Dec 1999

Is this the CLASS LIST or the POETICS LIST? I'm mainly a lurker, but I've been reading, or at least skimming, everyone's posts for months and it seems to me that ALL ANYONE EVER TALKS ABOUT IS CLASS.

OK, I'm exaggerating, but seriously: Are you people writers or civil rights activists? Is discussion of a poem's actual structure or technique or craft to be disdained courtesy of the old PC argument that only people who are wealthy enough to have a certain amount of time on their hands can afford to pay attention to poetry? Obviously we ALL have at least that much time on our hands -- so why does the discussion always turn to how people's (class/race/gender/blah blah blah) informs their work? The ways in which a writer's life informs her/his work are, I agree, useful or interesting in a discussion of said work, and (class/race/gender/blah blah blah) is certainly part of every writer's life, but it seems to me that many of you are focusing on that part to the exclusion of other interesting things. It might be good for you to get off your collective classes once in a while.

↑ Index

61. Brian Lennon
Jameson's Perelman
Fri 3 Dec 1999

A few months back I requested help tracking down cites for counter-commentary on Jameson's discussion of Perelman. Thanks to all who responded. ---BL

Jameson, Frederic. Postmodernism, or, The Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism. Durham: Duke University Press, 1991.

Armantrout, Rae. "Irony and Postmodern Poetry." Moving Borders: Three Decades of Innovative Writing by Women. Ed. by Mary Margaret Sloan. Jersey City: Talisman House, 1998: 674-679. Golding, Alan. From Outlaw to Classic: Canons in American Poetry. Wisconsin, 1995. Hartley, George. "Jameson's Perelman: Reification and the Material Signifier." Textual Politics and the Language Poets. Bloomington and Indianapolis: Indiana UP, 1989: 42-52. Perelman, Bob. "Parataxis and Narrative: The New Sentence in Theory and Practice." The Marginalization of Poetry: Language Writing and Literary History. Princeton: Princeton UP, 1996: 59-78. von Hallberg, Robert. "Poetry, Politics, and Intellectuals." The Cambridge History of American Literature, Volume 8: Poetry and Criticism. Ed. by Sacvan Bercovitch. Cambridge: Cambridge UP, 1996. 9-260.

see also
Silliman, Ron. The New Sentence. New York: Roof, 1985.

Useful critiques and periodizations of Jameson's postmodernism: Best, Steven. "Jameson, Totality, and the Poststructuralist Critique." Postmodernism/Jameson/Critique. Washington, D.C.: Maisonneuve Press, 1989. 333-368 Featherstone, Mike. "Postmodernism, Cultural Change, and Social Practice." Postmodernism/Jameson/Critique. Washington, D.C.: Maisonneuve Press, 1989. 117-138. Helming, Steven. "Jameson's Postmodernism: Version 2.0." Postmodern Culture 9.2 http://muse.jhu.edu/journals/postmodern_culture/v009/9.2.r_helmling.html -----. "Marxist Pleasure: Jameson and Eagleton." Postmodern Culture 6.1. http://muse.jhu.edu/journals/postmodern_culture/v006/6.1consenstein.html Kellner, Douglas. "Introduction: Jameson, Marxism, and Postmodernism." Postmodernism/Jameson/Critique. Washington, D.C.: Maisonneuve Press, 1989. 2-37. Shumway, David R. "Jameson / Hermeneutics / Postmodernism." Postmodernism/Jameson/Critique. Washington, D.C.: Maisonneuve Press, 1989. 172-202.

[redacted]
http://www.columbia.edu/~bml18

↑ Index

62. Elizabeth Treadwell

Double Lucy & Outlet updates

Fri 3 Dec 1999

---

(1) now in its second printing:

Outlet (4/5) Weathermap

92 pp double issue

featuring

- New Poetry and Prose by:

Norma Cole
Sarah Anne Cox
Noah de Lissovoy
Patrick F. Durgin
Taj Jackson
Jeffrey Jullich
Pamela Lu
Michael Magee
Sarah Mangold
Chris McCreary
Gwyn McVay
Michelle Murphy
Susan Smith Nash
Stephen Ratcliffe
Christopher Reiner
Camille Roy
Kathy Lou Schultz
E. Cameron Scott
Heather Sweeney
John Tranter
Elizabeth Treadwell
Liz Waldner

+ Reportage:

An Interview: Kathleen Fraser's "Provisional Answers to Some Questions" by Sarah Anne Cox

A History: "Publishing a Community: Women Publishers at the Poetry Project" by Marcella Durand

& Reviews:

Jacques Debrot on Laynie Browne's _The Agency of Wind_, Linda Russo on Susan Gevirtz's _Black Box Cutaway_, Charles Alexander on Jessica Grim's _Fray_.

$5 -- cheap! -- checks to E. Treadwell --

Excerpts from this & previous issues are featured at our website

---

(2):

Outlet will be going annual this coming year. We are reading for Outlet (6) Stars beginning New Year's Day. Details are at:
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy/page5.html

---

(3): barring y2k, our cyber-anthology, LUCY HOUSE: AN ANTHOLOGY OF PROSE will be up at our site sometime in January, featuring work by David Buuck, Cydney Chadwick, Brenda Coultas, John Frederick, Johanna Isaacson, Susan M. Schultz, & Liz Waldner, with more to come throughout the Spring.

Happy holy days!

Elizabeth

_____

Elizabeth Treadwell, Editor
Double Lucy Books & Outlet Magazine
P.O. Box 9013
Berkeley, CA 94709
USA
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

63. Joe Amato
about class...
Fri 3 Dec 1999

---

just became aware of an electronic list devoted to class issues, "working-class-list"... to sub, send the following message

subscribe to [redacted]

i'm not subbed at the moment, but my partner (kass) is, and she's forwarding me the posts... judging by the (somewhat heated) discussion there in the past few days, i think all of us here who are interested in class issues might wanna have a look...

best,

joe

↑ Index

64. komninos zervos
Re: Humble seed
Fri 3 Dec 1999

---

thoght this was an international list?
komninos of oz
At 08:48 PM 12/2/99 -0800, you wrote:
>So what would it look like, _The Best American Poetry Online_, culled >from 75 experimental hypertext mags, if say three-four-five hundred >experimental poets each pitched in 20 small bucks for their own two >copies a piece and maybe another 20 little dollars to get a coupla >copies into every Bans and Ignoble and Aborters big comfortable public >libraries/stores in the country? Some cunning <buyers group brokering> >with Amazon.com and the publishers and others could also help...
>
>
komninos cyberpoetry site http://student.uq.edu.au/~s271502
komninos zervos lecturer in cyberStudies griffith university gold coast australia [redacted]

↑ Index

65. david bromige
language and context
Fri 3 Dec 1999

> The other sentence that bothers me is the casual "in a war, innocent people do get hurt".... I know David was using it in reference to "financial hurt".. but it's a slippery slope to start down.

Well, now we can bring this back to poetics. Tom is correct to contextualize my sentence--not at all "casual"---but it is odd that he then worries that I will forget context and start down some metaphorical slippery slope.... It's as if I was trying to rid myself of a fly and you, Tom, passing the window, heard me cry "Kill it!" and ran to phone the cops...Keep on jammin', bro. David

↑ Index

66. Richard Dillon

Re: WTO : reports of the police riot in Seattle

Sat 4 Dec 1999

THEORY:

Those POLICE were not Seattle's. Such operatives were guarding the Bilders-burger Group meeting in Atlanta at which a presumptive friend of many on this list -Hillary Rodham Clinton- spoke in 1997.

Know the enemy. Ask yourselves one question: Is Justice Bork a member of the team that fielded those Black Ops?

Think harder.

>From: david bromige <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: WTO : reports of the police riot in Seattle
>Date: Thu, Dec 2, 1999, 7:22 PM
>

> Listmates : this ain't poetry nor poetics, but it has a foot in kultur-kritik. I know how hard it can be to get any news that hasnt been masticated then turned into daily rejectamenta by the corpsemedia---our local paper, an organ of the NYT, airbrushed yesterday's reign of terror by police forces, and had a fatuous editorial turning the violence of a dozen anarchists and a handful of thugs (agents provocateurs?) into 5,000 peaceful protestors going ape. And so now we dont need to pay further attention to any critcism of the WTO, because if we did criticize it, we'd be nut-cases (as the Estonian delegate said).
>
> Because I live within range of radio station kpfa, I am able to forward eye-witness accounts heard yesterday, by live feed from Seattle. And so I shall---with apologies to those who would like to see this List stick to its poetics mission.
>
> These reports testify to "overkill" violence on the part of police forces in Seattle. Faced with peaceful protests and passive resistance, the forces of law-n-order fired rubber bullets pointblank at seated protestors, in attempts to clear a 50-block area that the mayor had (with dubious constitutionality) placed off-limits to free speech.
>
> In many previous such demonstrations in other cities, protestors have been removed by hands-on methods, with ultimate success for the police. In Seattle, police fired rubber bullets into the faces of those who were in their way, breaking teeth and raising grapefruit-sized welts. A young woman who was among those helping out at a field station by tending the wounded, said that many injured men had been shot in the groin, likewise pointblank.

Others had their wounds in the back, sustained as they complied with police demands that they vacate the area. People were trapped in order to be teargassed [note : as I saw happen at UC Berkeley in 1968] rather than being allowed to disperse.

She also testified that she and other workers were ordered to remove the red cross armbands they wore to identify themselves, and had their medical supplies confiscated. This meant that protestors who had been teargassed (often, also at pointblank range) were denied water and swabs to relieve the pain of the searing and choking gas. She said, too, that (this in contrast to wire-service reports today of "several injured") she and her colleagues had treated more than a hundred sufferers.

I am a student of voices. This woman was telling the truth, on this I stake myself....although I can well imagine the corporate media would, did they have to deal with her at all, frame her as a dupe or tool.

The list of civil rights violations, physical or otherwise, could go on and on, but this is e-mail, so I forbear.

Many of these police, in riot gear, displayed no badges nor was it possible to know to which adminstrative unit they belonged----Seattle police, King's County marshalls, Washington State police, Highway Patrol, federal agents, National Guard. The Mayor has done some hand-wringing, but like it or not he, Paul Schell, bears ultimate responsibility.

What one wants to do with this information is a seperate question. My sympathies lie with those who believe we must find a way to ensure such police-riots cannot be permitted (as surely this one was encouraged) to occur again.

In a move to compel the Mayor and his supporters to bear this responsibility, and to persuade the administrations of other cities in future situations where civil disobedience occurs, not to allow their police to go mad-dog (then wring their hands upon the fait accompli), many of us are urging a one-year boycott of the city of Seattle. We are trying to reach the Mayor to let him know the terms of this boycott. We think it should last for one year unless there is further police brutality today, in which case it should be extended to two years, and so on.

The boycott---based upon the grounds that Seattle cannot police its own police, thereby rendering the city unsafe to any persons---asks that you not travel to Seattle any time between Dec 5, 1999, and Dec. 5, 2000. If you need to drive thru the city, please gas up and get food in communities on either side of the city. The point is to spend no money in Seattle. Yes, this will bring hardship to innocent merchants and employees, but Seattle authorities escalated these proceedings into a war, and in a war, innocent people do get hurt. There is no other way to bring pressure upon > authorities to restrain their police. At best one gets an official inquiry, which exonerates the wrong-doers. If we can hit Seattle in the money-belt, those who feel the pinch the most will exert their own pressure on rogue officials. An example will be made of Seattle to prevent any repetition of such police overkill, in any other venue.

>
> With an outfit such as the WTO, consisting of delegates not elected by us, yet empowered to overturn our labor and environmental laws, there is nowhere to take our disagreement but to the streets---there, and the Net. The corpsemedia will distort these issues beyond sense. Ergo, the streets have to made safer for demonstrators. Or do we want a future where an unreachable WTO wrecks our lives and our one arena of action is owned by uniformed sadists?
>
> Cities will have to live with the fact that the USA allows peaceful assembly of dissidents. There are going to be people in the street for as long as we are denied other avenues to protest the undemocratic rule of the WTO---which can overturn national and state and local environmental laws, which can force our nation to import the products of child- and slave-labor, and which can bring about further export of jobs from the USA to countries with no regulatory sanctions that protect their workers or their environment. In the meantime, cities must not be allowed to get away with super-violence faits accomplis.
>
> The President himself told the WTO yesterday that he approved of the peaceful protestors being in the streets---at the same time that police were carrying out this violence against these president-approved persons. Judge for yourself whether this was cynical on his part or not....perhaps he is merely a dupe.
>
> Further sanctions are possible, and one would be to refuse to buy any product manufactured in Seattle.
>
> Please spread the word, and qualify the consequences for fascism in whatever way you wish.
>
> Thanks for your attention.
>
> David Bromige.

↑ Index

67. Alan Sondheim

Read: 4 times

Sat 4 Dec 1999

\

Read: 3 times

00 Let X = tan(approaching 90 degrees)
10 # in a very pure land
20 # this is not a very pure land
30 Print X in pixels and GOTO 00
40 and when this is all over go back to 00
50 and when back at 00 make the raster finer 60 # making it finer makes X go greater 70 # X is so very great!
80 X is so very great it begins to escape the screen!
90 X escapes all screens!
100 quick quick cat X > /dev/null
110 /dev/null begins to bloat with Pixel-X!
120 # /dev/null is crafty
130 /dev/null empty as fast as /dev/null is full!
140 X can go on and on and is very tired but /dev/null is not!
150 # this happens when I am very tired
160 I am very tired, emptying X in all its forms
170 # this is the end of the world
180 it is not a very pure land

↑ Index

68. david bromige
poets & our cliches
Sat 4 Dec 1999

To amplify (and to clarify, i hope) my response to tom raworth's post : when i used the cliche "in war, innocent people do get hurt", tom transferred it from where he got it (a highly contextualized situation, as he initially acknowledged, in which "hurt" is economic) to images of refugees being bombed... however he got down that slippery slope, he then employed the cliche "slippery slope" to warn me lest i lay aside my pen and pick up my uzi.

But when i heard tom's anxiety as encoded in "s.s.", ," i thought of "grave misgivings", a bleeding-heart liberal cliche excuse for doing nothing, and even of "it wouldnt be prudent," a fascist excuse for doing nothing. tom conjured me leading the easily misled, from economic sanctions to blitzkrieg; hence his "slippery slope." but i have no further ambitions concerning czeckoslovakia, except to learn how to spell it. i am surprised to have the "slippery slope" sanctions imposed upon me, by a man who must have had as many friends as i, imprisoned by those authorities on marijuana who know it always leads to heroin.

Anyway, let me say further re economic sanctions against seattle that, as david antin says, in approving the notion, it will be hard to get the word out. agreed, so we dont expect this action to bring catastrophic hardship to any one person. a reduction, maybe, of 3% in annual profits. but the effect is cumulative, and what we hope for is sufficient reduction in seattle's income to have a negative impact on their budget, so that certain "essential" services--we suggest, the police--have to be cut back. it is the police, first and foremost, who need to be taught a lesson in restraint.

But too, it is the city adminstrators who slip the police's leashes, who have to learn the hard way, and when big stores lose 3%, thats a lot of latte, and a corresponding increase in pressure on city hall to consider the consequences of police violence.

The purpose of this, as i understand it, is not primarily punitive but minatory---to prevent future demonstrations from being clobbered by city hall in other venues.

i like david antin's suggestion re microsoft. of course, already existing product from m.s has to be considered as grandfathered in. but for the next year, it wd be great if bill gates (a mighty fan of the w.t.o.) received less income from us outraged & nugatory chickens at the far end of the coop.

db

↑ Index

69. Jerrold Shiroma

Small Press Publications...

Sat 4 Dec 1999

This weeks Small Press Publications List is up & running @ duration. The submissions to this page have been getting noticeably slim (in terms of number of folks sending in information). Makes me wonder if I should keep this up...would like any feedback anyone has to offer.

Any publishers who want their publications listed on the next posting (Dec 18), should send along all information (titles, authors, price, contact / ordering information) to [redacted] by Dec 17 (Friday) for Saturday posting.

Thanks much.

↑ Index

70. David Dowker
The Alterran Poetry Assemblage #4 (further)
Sat 4 Dec 1999

Announcing: the addition of work by Karen Kelley, George Quasha, Allen Fisher, Drew Gardner, Gary Sullivan, Nancy Dunlop, Henry Gould, Patrick F. Durgin, and Allen Bramhall to issue #4 of

(((((((((THE ALTERRAN POETRY ASSEMBLAGE)))))))))

...also including Lissa Wolsak, Alan Halsey, Stephen Ellis, David Dowker, Meredith Quartermain, Carrie Etter, Spencer Selby, Sheila Murphy, and Bill Luoma.

new location --> http://members.home.net/alterra/

[redacted]

↑ Index

71. Simon DeDeo
class way of not talking about race, etc...
Sat 4 Dec 1999

The reason I brought up the "screening" that class is sometimes used for is that, for me, the "avant-garde" is divided up far more by race than by class. For me, this is really obvious in a University situation (yes, there are working class people there -- the question of "cultural class" notwithstanding), where the "spoken word" is largely a black domain and writers who cross over from more NY school derivative poetries are mostly white. When I was down in NYC, interestingly, there was not the same kind of perception -- Nuyorican, for example, is thrilling in its ethnic mix.

The one place where this is absent -- particularly interesting -- is among people doing work in electronic music or "new music". Perhaps the explicitness of "trade" (there's a specific body of knowledge needed to claim membership that can be -- somewhat -- objectively evaluated) that isn't present in poetry (where there's a greater empahsis on 'talent', and less background needed) keeps racial questions in the background. I say this, by the way, as someone who knows little about the politics of new music -- just as a audience member looking at the racial composition of the rooms.

-- Simon
http://www.fas.harvard.edu/~sdedeo

[redacted]

↑ Index

72. Judy Smith McDonough
call for submissions
Sat 4 Dec 1999

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

poetrynow volume 2 number 2
publication date: the solstice at the end of a millennium

Judy Smith McDonough, editor, poetrynow
http://www.poetrynow.org

↑ Index

73. Alan Sondheim
The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)
Sun 5 Dec 1999

\

(The following description is at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk in the trAceroute conference. I'm looking for participants - if you're interested, please write into it. Thank you greatly - Alan)

Topic:
About the Traceroute Project (1 of 3), Read 16 times
Conf:
NEW! trAceroute
From:
Alan Sondheim ([redacted])
Date:
03 December 1999 08:24 AM

Hi - I'm asking everyone to participate in the TRACEROUTE PROJECT, which really occurs on December 31 and January 1. Traceroute is a utility which comes with the unix or linux operating system - there is a version in Win95 and Win98 called tracert. It is a way to track the path from your computer to a site anywhere in the world. For example, if you are in Australia, at Murdoch University, you could type

tracert columbia.edu

at the DOS prompt in Windows 95 0r 98, and you would have a chart of the route between Murdoch and Columbia University in New York, USA.

Traceroute or tracert works by looking at the route between your computer and your target address, and sending signals to every machine between the two - three signals (usually) per machine. The machines then send return signals, and traceroute gives you the round-trip time for each of the three.

Traceroute is used by system administrators and people like me to look at the "health" of the Internet as a whole - it tells you which machines aren't responding, for example (those which send back asterix such as *). It's incredibly useful.

Between December 31 and January 1, almost all the Y2k problems on the Net will be visible thorugh traceroute. The idea of this project is to gather a huge sheaf of data, illustrating the world-wide state of the Internet as the millennium starts. (The millennium takes a day to start world-wide, because of the time zones.)

What I would like from participants is a group of traceroutes sent to Trace (we'll let you know where), accompanied by your name. There is some technical information below (taken from a few posts I made) that indicates how to do this. It would also be great if you could include a description of Y2k problems in your location - for example, subways out, flickering lights, and so forth - and give your location as well. All of this will be included in the final report.

None of this will be graphic or great looking - but it will be an amazing compendium of the state of the earth at a critical time for humanity...

Please participate! Please post questions here!

Alan - and thank you!

(Below is the information from the other posts - you can ignore this if it is too technical.)

I would like to start, almost immediately, thinking about doing TRACEROUTE (traceroute) commands in linux or unix across the millennial hinge (i.e. during the day the time shifts over), reporting back on speed etc. between nodes etc. as the millennium arrives and Y2k does or does not come to fruition. Please let me know if you are interested in participating - you would have to have access to some traceroute program, and the ability to convert the results to a text file; we'll try and establish a site for placing these...

Here is some additional information from correspondence with Steen - Alan -

> Tracking servers - for example the command {k:1}traceroute > trace.ntu.ac.uk gives of course the traceroute for trace from > panix.com for me. I would track 'representative sites' -
> cleo.murdoch.edu.au for example is at the antipodes from NYC - in > Perth. Also would trace random sites in Canada, across the US > naturally, Japan. There are people in Finland who would do the same.
> So the origin of the tracking, for the most part, would be in relation > to the participants - and the goal would be what would appear, to > them, to be representative sites world-wide. > I've used about 5-6 > graphic traceroutes, and find in general they're more trouble than > they're worth. One, PingPlotter, is pretty good, and you can save the > traceroutes as images as well as text. The advantage of text is that > you've got databases you can manipulate of course. It seems to me > there are two kinds of graphics involved - those that represent geo> graphic information, mapping, etc. and those that plot times - > PingPlotter is of the latter, which is more useful.

>
> The idea behind all of this is to consider the telecom internetting of
the > world as a membrane, and to examine its condition, situation, on the hinge
> of the millennium - how is connectivity functioning in light of - 1.
> who is and who is not wired in the first place and - 2. y2k and other > (what are now) geopolitical problems. I'm fascinated by the idea of a 'snapshot'
> are now) geopolitical problems. I'm fascinated by the idea of a 'snapshot'
> of the planet in this regard. I've always found aesthetic value in trace-
> route (and ping -s) since it really represents the bones, underlying > structures of the Net, manifesting themselves...

And here is additional information. If you are on Windows 95 or 98, and can access DOS (I'm not sure about G3 or G4 or IMac but there must be utilities available):

Some tools for using with the Traceroute Project for Windows (tested for Win98):

PING:

Usage: ping [-t] [-a] [-n count] [-l size] [-f] [-i TTL] [-v TOS]
[-r count] [-s count] [[-j host-list] | [-k host-list]]
[-w timeout] destination-list

Options:
-t Ping the specifed host until stopped.
To see statistics and continue - type Control-Break;
To stop - type Control-C.
-a Resolve addresses to hostnames.
-n count Number of echo requests to send.
-l size Send buffer size.

-f Set Don't Fragment flag in packet.
-i TTL Time To Live.
-v TOS Type Of Service.
-r count Record route for count hops.
-s count Timestamp for count hops.
-j host-list Loose source route along host-list.
-k host-list Strict source route along host-list.
-w timeout Timeout in milliseconds to wait for each reply.

TRACERT (traceroute):

Usage: tracert [-d] [-h maximum_hops] [-j host-list] [-w timeout] target_name

Options:
-d Do not resolve addresses to hostnames.
-h maximum_hops Maximum number of hops to search for target.
-j host-list Loose source route along host-list.
-w timeout Wait timeout milliseconds for each reply.

NETSTAT:

Active Connections

Proto Local Address Foreign Address State

Netstat tells you the Network statistics; both tracert and ping are very configurable. As you may know, you can also do ftp and telnet from the prompt.

If you do, say, tracert to panix.com, you would do tracert panix.com > trace.txt for example - which places the output in trace.txt. You may have to go back in and add the command "tracert panix.com" to the top of the file. If you then want to do, say, tracert trace.ntu.ac.uk and put it in trace.txt next, you would do tracert trace.ntu.ac.uk >> trace.txt The double carets >> mean "add to" and not "replace" - otherwise the trace.txt will be replaced. The same goes for ping or other commands.

This way, you can build up a file of traceroutes to send on - configured as you see fit. You might also use ping at times.

- Alan

↑ Index

74. Rebecca Weldon Sithiwong

Class

Sun 5 Dec 1999

I appreciated Jorge's culture/Culture offering. In my mind, I categorize the recent subjects of class discussion the following way:

These are the things that are given: (what we are)
Mind
Sex Race
Language

These are the things we produce as a society: (how we live)
Assets
Income
Power
Prestige

These are the creative judgements: (why we live) religion
culture
Culture

It seems to me that, today, a person might less likely be concerned with the what and the why, except as they impinge on the how. And, in this circular reasoning, because the how is the key to current personal lifestyles, factors that inhibit choice (what, why) take on a greater magnitude. The what and why of who we are motivate the development of what we might call "alternatives", the fleshing out, so to speak, of the how.

I throw out a Thai example:

Vilak, male, Muang poet (what). Born into a farming family (how)in northern Thailand. Goes to school to discover that he is must learn to speak and read a second language, Central (Modern) Thai, in order to obtain an education (why).

From a young age he writes in his mother tongue, a language not taught in school. He receives a scholarship to pursue his formal studies in Thai(how). He translates his poetry into Central Thai. He becomes a well-known Thai poet; most people don't realize they are reading translation. He is nominated for the National Book award. His reads his work in the original at northern Thai cultural or religious events.

(Vilak's language, Kham Muang (the language of the T'ai Yuan), is currently spoken by six million people in northern Thailand. It is related to, but not a dialect of modern Thai, having it's own distinctive orthography and literature. In the interests of nation building, the Ministry of Education eliminated the language from the schools (following the incorporation of the northern Kingdom of Chiang Mai into the Kingdom of Siam). For several generations it has been taught in the temples only for the purpose of reading religious texts. However, since most men spend time in that context, some have retained a basic literacy in Kham Muang.)

↑ Index

75. Daniel Carter

catavaulting within her (Words in Process) part 1

Sun 5 Dec 1999

{ }

catavaulting within her the memory of her feather verse(d)-spilling encre encore dose slittle wheel-like black hearts arts plucked t' lie a Spring Quartet the cuddling loom flower

what part of this in denial held both together melting people malting themselves vaulting themselves faulting and halting themselves narrate in its own light

musicalization of affliction pen station that mortal portal dancing beer stimulus from deceleration foldly enough: did anyone look? at what? its removal didn't know it was ever there slave changes thrust me somewhere in this space the link cycle momentumized beeper-vice up-puffly the problematical Metropolitan air poured sacred time setting scared time steam(in' slow-down) of consciousness done d' one it glows without slaying his titles to which he chains several large multipliers of multipliers rabbitly evolving flood trace predeterministically doubtcastes surface scratching further bleeding plethoras psychological(ly) vent firefiles acknowledge the baddest of the best practise reading her year bleaking book through travel packet reach the point of spilling spelling spelling spilling the trials looking for more interpolative compromising these études squeal in a trance again with (the) figure-active spoonlit span (in) t' Mars in the cage of five (5) plus (+) four (4) for our waiting eye/ear steer dear ferret least a more meant t' be inchtent be twig stabilletshook off in a hole other dialection caught a pen the hay say Daisy May exemplifade throw t' lash out

link to power

handlelight vandallight the sound wound pleasantries on the event's existence more neutrally resounding than just immediately before immediately to her as she rode (wrote) through the forest but may well good after pen thousands of (p)ages subsequent to the pleasant movie-go-er audience viewer in the pleasant insistence of the instant samely in owl coffers resplendent with wheel-tech and tough ooze the plague (o)h genital reader in the other of others' echo I had to quickly make up on the basis of found text all swords of diagonal lacks a funderstanding

refiguration unit well into the steamy blight recent releases class glow oval memory name the naive city space lease again the tiny planet Molecule at Kite Ari Sun-Pull Ghost

a better copy re-scent pie-based role spun isolated m' oceaning of Treasure Eye Randy (t' reassure (I ran)) on (t') the hot sea written write fluid if oh y' no-wit outta dare(!) bereft be left way t' stand prep t' th' move set a part bit revolve rotate out dis lodge meant detach unhook the book pages flew (elsewhere (didn't wanna (hidden wanna))) waited collide the naive city space faded plague

mirrule

swellspring Miss Lure

a clockumental event like most others mounting desire

got into the black seat sleep of the vanity transport

he has given generous slums to artists

Lockaway Beach

Public Peach

--

↑ Index

76. Lawrence Upton submitting to wf1000 / on word
Sun 5 Dec 1999

We are greatly heartened by the number of responses to our invitation, but a little surprised by the number who ask about size... & this morning's epost has brought another small flood

We said: "The size should be in the proportion 210 (wide) : 297 (high)."

Those figures are the gross metric dimensions of A4, but any (sensible) page size in that proportion is acceptable. It is likely that the actual published page size will be less than A4 so make sure that you use a type size which will cope with reduction!

The important word here is "proportion"

Apologies to those who are not interested in this project...

Lawrence Upton
for Upton & Cobbing, editors "on word"

↑ Index

77. Charles Bernstein
New from ROOF books (fwrd)
Sun 5 Dec 1999

---

this message is forwarded from ROOF books
****

ROOF Books has just published two new titles:

poetics@

edited by Joel Kuszai
($18.95/192pp)
133 e-mails from this list

&

Gorgeous Plunge
by Michael Gottlieb
($11.95/96pp)
new poetry

ROOF would like to offer them to this list only for a substantial discount. Members of this list can buy the books for:

****

poetics@ $15 & Gorgeous Plunge $9 including postage (which costs us $3)

If you order both books, total cost including postage is $20

You'll save $14

To order, please send your check or money order with your mailing address to:
Segue Foundation
303 East 8th Street
New York, NY 10009

Contact: James Sherry [redacted]

Publication Date: December 1, 1999

poetics@

[redacted] the first book of poetics to emerge from an electronic community, including 133 e-mails from 67 writers.

". . . the material for this book was mostly gathered from the first two years (and 10,000 printed pages) of the poetics list [at SUNY Buffalo] . . . The book represents . . . the beginning of a new era. Like all emergent technologies, the usefulness-to-poetry of electronic mail was not apparent until a few poets gained access." --Joel Kuszai, from the Introduction

"Now I get the chance to play 'sender.'"
--Robert Creeley, from his post

"It is better, yes, to take the dance off the back-channel and perform in public. Posting is performance, a new kind of art; writing in motion, more like improvisation in jazz than literary composition--skywriting, lightwriting, sandpainting, here and gone, happening in time." --Kali Tal, from her post

"Provides a window onto an ongoing, highly articulate, intensely percolating poetics-in-the making that is a fundamental feature of the most engaging and active poetry of our time. If anyone wonders what today's poets are thinking, what they are concerned about, what they value, this is a good place to start finding out." -- Charles Bernstein, from the Preface $18.95 ISBN 0-937804-79-7 192 pp.

Publication Date: December 1, 1999

Gorgeous Plunge
Michael Gottlieb

Given the format of "language" and all the resonance of that inexorable surface, Michael Gottlieb leaps from echo to "every aging minute"--and onward, leaving a shimmering track of impressive brilliance. Words never had it so good nor did anyone ever so track them to their lair, wherein they at last cry out, "I'd like to say," or "Having said that," or "You never know." -- Robert Creeley

In Michael Gottlieb's Gorgeous Plunge, poets are the "we" of it. My generation at last, vanishing on the horizon. It's poetry--squibs of it, streams of it, pithy spoonfuls and dropped doses--one last squeeze of the tube-- that narrates by position of its clock hands--much like the narrator does in Robert Musil's epic The Man Without Qualities--the difficult and even giddy moment in which one faces one's culture and understands in a mute turning, what it is to be a man. --Eileen Myles

In the continuing battle between life and death at the end of the century, Michael Gottlieb's Gorgeous Plunge declares itself on the side of life. As a phenomenal account of self-consciousness within structures it can only partially authorize, Michael Gottlieb's work addresses the broad horizons of utopia, the chilling defiles of the economy, and the scrutable immediacies of everyday life. --Barrett Watten

Michael Gottlieb is the author of eight books of poetry including Local Color/Eidetic Deniers, Ninety-Six Tears (also published by Roof Books), New York and The River Road. His work has appeared in magazines and anthologies for the past twenty years. In the late 70s and early 80s he helped edit one of Language Poetry's seminal periodicals, Roof Magazine. A child of the suburbs, Michael Gottlieb presently lives in Northwestern Connecticut with his wife and two children.

96 pages ISBN: 0-937804-80-0 $11.95

Roof Books are distributed by Small Press Distribution, 1341 Seventh Avenue, Berkeley, CA. 94710-1403.
Phone orders: [redacted]

↑ Index

78. geraldine mckenzie
Re: avant garde / mckenzie
Sun 5 Dec 1999

I tried to keep this brief.

First - to John, I wasn't referring to you in my comments and am at a loss as to why you think so. I now have to say I'll admit I'm not good with email, it's too fast, like conversation, and in a certain mood I open my big mouth and get carried away, by the end of it I was working up to full Celtic warrior/bush lawyer mode (an hour later I was recalling all the ellisions and generalizations of my post). Re novelty: the usual sense of the term avant garde encompasses this quality and I thought (could be wrong) it was mentioned in the post on the Lehmann book. Avant garde poetries frequently cite the importance of new forms, new languages, new possibilities, not necessarily from a belief in the essential virtue of the new but out of a sense of the inadequacies of orthodoxy. As for the association with commodities, I appreciate it wasn't made in the fourteenth century but, in Australia at least, all words referring to novelty or newness have become advertising staples to an extent that compromises their usage in any other area. (This doesn't even begin to address the issue of art as commodity, though I'd be interested to see what others have to say.) Re: 'revolutionary' texts - Just to clarify my use of opposition - I'm thinking in terms of modes of thinking and writing rather than beliefs or 'attitudes'. Of course, each feeds the other but, to put it in the crudest terms, I don't see the avant garde functioning as propagandists or prophets (though some have sought such roles). In fact, I dislike any characterisation of the poet which romanticises the occupation or endows it with a questionable authority. '(Reader could be writer, writer reader. Listener could be teacher.)' (DuPlessis) * As for the intrinsic oppositional nature of the avant garde, I offer a quotation from a much more useful text than this posting - "Robert Stearns writes (in a configuration we would share with him): 'The avant garde might be characterised as those creators who do not take their environment & its traditions at face value. They separate & view its elements & realign them according to their own needs.' This description (while devoid as yet of social revolutionary purpose) is general enough to include the great range of strategies & stances in experimental poetry & art." - Rothenberg and Joris in the introduction to Vol. 1, Poems for the Millenium. In this context I mention, without exploring, Paul Fussell's analysis of an adversarial cast of mind which derives from the experiences of the Great War (The Great War and Modern Memory). What is most germane is not the combatants' sense of the Enemy, although this is profound, but the division between the troops and the General Staff/civilian society, and a developing sense of the fraudulence of authority, be it militiary, political or cultural. Re: marketplace - what can I say - I didn't mean it quite literally, but avant garde poetry/writing is for sale, surely, unless you access it on the net. In addition, the poetic economy is a little more complex than the exchange of goods for money, income is more commonly generated by funding and/or teaching positions but these, of course, are in some measure dependant on publication. In any case, if you check my original post, I did double back on that clause. Bit it on the bum, as it were. Similiarly, with the reference to technique. Still, I'll admit this is one of the sections of my post which I felt had weaknesses, too many leaps, setting up of possibly artificial distinctions (and what distinctions aren't? Well, quite.), and yet raising issues that I'm interested in and would like to read other posts on. I don't mind admitting that I know very little and am trying to figure it all out. I'm not avant garde either but I am experimenting inasmuch as I try to see what I can do with language, and I'm not too keen on repeating myself (though it happens, it happens). Improvisation? Of course. Re: technique. Questions. Collage has been described as a major innovation in poetic technique. Clearly, whilst it is a technique, it's also intimately connected with certain ideas about reality and poetics. However, the technique can be used by those who, for a variety of reasons, do not partake of the theoretic grounding from which collage derives. The appearance of being avant garde is there, but what else?- I'm thinking of a well-known scandal in the Australian literary scene (in the fifties, I think). Two established poets wrote a group of poems, ostensibly by an unknown experimental poet 'Ern Malley'. Their intention was to expose what they saw as the pretensions of such poetry. Re: official verse culture - a matter of circumstance -

most of the magazines here are dominated by it. As are readings, festivals, competitions etc. but I'm perhaps most keenly aware of it at work - I teach high school and, whilst university courses are more adventurous, the school curriculum is extremely limited. From memory, the most experimental writing a high school student is likely to encounter (and only if studying at the most advanced level) is A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man and T.S. Eliot. No further comment. Except to say, I understand official verse culture to be a strand in official culture and, though one may evade some of its manifestations, it's impossible to evade them all. In conclusion, a beginning - please dispute some or all of the above - it just scratches the surface -

*(Digression - there's an account of Henry James meeting Ada Leverson and, after some discussion of his work prompted by her questions, he said - "Can it be - it must be - that you are that embodiment of the incorporeal, that elusive yet ineluctable being to whom through the generations novelists have so unfailingly made invocation; in short, the Gentle Reader?")

Regards, Geraldine McKenzie

> From: "Lowther, John" <[redacted]>
> To: buffalist <[redacted]>, [redacted]
> Subject: RE: avant garde / mckenzie
> Date: Thu, 2 Dec 1999 15:15:42 -0500
>
> geraldine mckenzie wrote;
>
> > "It is misleading to refer to
> > the avant garde solely in terms
> > of novelty. This establishes
> > an association with art
> > as commodity which is generally
> > repudiated by those artists
> > who might be described
> > as avant garde. Novelty is
> > a creature of time and unreliable,
> > a bye product of experiment
> > rather than an end."
>
> it is misleading --- did i do it ? i recall writing about someone at the symposium in new orleans who'd thrown out the tern novelty in his screed about the term experimental --- i dont recall the term avant garde coming into it --- but i wd like to mention that novelty need not relate to commodity and as its origin is in the 14th century it seems reasonably disconnected to commodity culture circa now
>
> > "What is more significant
> > is the 'revolutionary' or

> oppositional nature of a text."

i see what yr saying here but i'm not sure that belief is compelled --- that is, i find the discontinuity between the work of the italian futurists and what had been going on up until then much more interesting, in and of itself (it's novelty?) than i do they "revolutionary" attitudes of this group ---- as such it seems that its our needs that make X Y or Z "significant"

> "Meanwhile, in the marketplace,
> the 'novelty' of the avant garde
> signals just another item for sale
> -or so some would like to think.
> If the experimental only referred
> to technique, this might be so, but
> when it refers to ideas or modes
> of thought, then it can constitute
> a challenge to what Bernstein
> accurately terms'official verse culture' which > (...) is still very much in place."

how much avant garde is available in the market place ? i've never seen any, as such i wonder what this cd mean ultimately --- and the experimental, i'd say has nothing to do with technique and is a cognitive relation to the work not a style or technique that one can pick up put down at any time --- not that i think many of us are writing experimental poetry --- i doubt we are
--- i maybe have written one poem deserving the name and seen a handful more
--- it seems to me that instead what most of us are engaged in is improvization of one sort or another and with varying degrees of guidelines/guard-rails etc

i dont dispute that there is an official verse culture but i don't feel connected to it enough to be able to muster much of an oppositional attitude towards it myself --- to be truly oppositional i wd have to pay attention to official verse culture and there is so much better to be done with my time

> "To say it [the A-G] does not,
> and can not, exist is either
> wishful thinking or a form of cultural
> despair, a loss of faith
> not only in poetry, but also > language, and thus - us."

> must it be so stark ? i wd rather
> have the supposedly avant garde character
> of presentness and ditch the oppositionality
>
> so i guess i'm not in the avant garde huh ?

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

79. Alan Sondheim

The Work of Authority in IRC Channel #Nikuko

Sun 5 Dec 1999

\

The Work of Authority in IRC Channel #Nikuko

IRC log started Sun Dec 5 02:18
 Value of LOG set to ON < Nikuko > This is so very sad.
 < Nikuko > Where are you?
 < Nikuko > Hello, Jennifer?
 Nikuko is now known as Jennifer
- NickServ - This nick is owned by someone else. Please choose another.
- NickServ - If this is your nick, type: /msg NickServ IDENTIFY <password>
- NickServ - Your nick will be changed in 60 seconds if you do not comply.
 Jennifer is now known as Julu
- NickServ - This nick is owned by someone else. Please choose another.
- NickServ - If this is your nick, type: /msg NickServ IDENTIFY <password>
- NickServ - Your nick will be changed in 60 seconds if you do not comply.
 Julu is now known as JJennifer
 < JJennifer > I am so sorry, morphing like this.
 < JJennifer > O! Nikuko, I have missed you.
[E/X] Signon at 2:20 am for options detected.
 < JJennifer > Who is that other?
 < JJennifer > Tell me...
 JJennifer is now known as Nikuko
 < Nikuko > Oh Oh Oh Come towards me.
 < Nikuko > Oh I am so very sorry, I am crying enormously here.
 Nikuko is now known as JJennifer

< JJennifer > Nikuko, I miss you wildly, these spaces collapse to nothing.
 JJennifer is now known as Nikuko
< Nikuko > These spaces are nothing, Jennifer, our love is one forever...
 Nikuko is now known as JJennifer
< JJennifer > Melt with me, Nikuko, melt with me.
 JJennifer is now known as Nikuko
< Nikuko > I am melting, JJennifer
 Nikuko is now known as NikukoJen
< NikukoJen > Ah ah ah ah ah
[E/X] Signoff at 2:23 am for options detected.
 NikukoJen is now known as JenniferN
< JenniferN > Ah ah ah ah ah
 JenniferN is now known as NJieknunk
< NJieknunk > Ah ah ah ah ah
 NJieknunk is now known as JNeinknui
< JNeinknui > Ah ah ah ah ah
 JNeinknui is now known as All
< All > Ah ah ah ah ah!
- NickServ - This nick is owned by someone else. Please choose another.
- NickServ - If this is your nick, type: /msg NickServ IDENTIFY <password>
- NickServ - Your nick will be changed in 60 seconds if you do not comply.
< All > Ah ah ah ah ah!
 All is now known as One
- NickServ - This nick is owned by someone else. Please choose another.
- NickServ - If this is your nick, type: /msg NickServ IDENTIFY <password>
- NickServ - Your nick will be changed in 60 seconds if you do not comply.
 Signoff: One (But the time has come when all things shall pass.)
IRC Log ended  Sun Dec 5 02:26

↑ Index

80. Maria Damon

Re: machismo and the avant-garde?

Mon 6 Dec 1999

michael davidson has a few essays on masculinity and coterie, mostly of the SF renaissance (spicer, duncan et al) and i imagine he deals with it fairly extensively in his forthcoming Guys Like Us, about Cold War masculinities. also, susan suleiman has a book on gender, misogyny and avant garde dealing w/ the french scene (man ray, surrealists, etc). rachel blau du plessis gave a talk on olson, wieners and gender at the poets of the 50s conference in Maine 1996. there is much to be written about here, but everytime folks bring it up on poetix, there's a kind of hysterical backlash as if icons were being personally attacked. for example, if i direct you to Tom Clarke's biography of Olson, called something like Allegory of a Poet's Life, i'm sure someone will leap in and denounce it. i have no feeling pro or con about tom clarke, but i learned a lot from reading the book (i inherited the project of reading it for a press that was considering reprinting it in paperback from someone who'd turned the project down cuz didn't want to get involved in the "controversy." this was before i knew there was a controversy.) anyway, avantgarde machismo is a much observed but little written about fact of life. it's like hettie jones sez of beat culture. "so we were somewhat oppressed and it wasn't a perfectly utopian counterculture; it was better than death in the suburbs."

At 6:00 PM -0500 12/2/99, Daniel Kane wrote: >Anyone know of work that's been done on machismo as implicit in >avant-garde values? Or, on a more localized level, Olson and machismo >(i.e., "go by it, boys, rather than by,the metronome," and "there it is, >brothers, sitting there, for USE," "from the moment he ventures into >FIELD COMPOSITION--puts himself into the open" etc.).
>
>A list of any articles / books that deal with this in one way or >another would be much appreciated.
>
>If you like, backchannel to [redacted].
>
>Thanks.
>--daniel

↑ Index

81. Pete
Re: Seattle businesses boycott
Mon 6 Dec 1999

There's really only one that you really need to deal with: MicroSoft.

Before MicroSoft, Seattle was in a bad way. The expression went, "Will the last person to leave Seattle please turn out the lights." That's when Boeing was having troubles and Seattle was becoming a ghost town. Now because of Bill Gates, Seattle has returned to its former glory, in fact is stronger than ever. Also, Mr. Gates is very pro-WTO. He has some kind of role in the organization (sit on a board of some kind, I suspect others know more than me about this). Certainly it was Mr. Gates who made sure it was Seattle where the conference was held, and the civil servants in Seattle ask Mr. Gates how high and how often if he even looks like he wants somebody to jump.

So as I type this using Windows and as I read the list using Internet Explorer, I have to ask, just how do you really propose boycotting Seattle businesses? Every other business besides MicroSoft in Seattle is far less culpable, so I would have to agree that boycotting all of them but using Windows and other such products out of necessity is basically harming the innocent and letting the culprit go free.

Therefore I think some other response is more appropriate. How about a letter writing campaign to Bill Gates? How about guerilla poetry? What do the Seattlans think?

Pete

↑ Index

82. f i l c h
Borges, of interest
Mon 6 Dec 1999

http://www.salonmagazine.com/books/feature/1999/12/06/borges/index.html

↑ Index

83. Nielsen, Aldon
Los Angeles Reading: Harryette Mullen
Mon 6 Dec 1999

Harryette Mullen reads Sunday, 12/12, 8:00 PM at

Un-Urban Coffee House 3301 Pico Blvd. at Urban
L.A.

for info. call [redacted]

↑ Index

84. Al Filreis
Edwin Torres via webcast
Mon 6 Dec 1999

The Edwin Torres program announced below will be WEBCAST live, this Saturday, December 11, at 4:30 PM eastern time. If you want to participate via webcast, please write to << [redacted] >>. You will receive information about how to make the connection.

--Al Filreis
Faculty Director, the Kelly Writers House

"It is obvious that Edwin Torres is the bastard love child of Mayakovsky and Parra, midwifed by Apollinaire." -- Christian Haye in The Poetry Project Newsletter.

the Nuyorican poet and performance worker

E D W I N T O R R E S
++++++++++++++++++++++++

reading/performance and informal discussion led by Al Filreis

Saturday, December 11
4:30 PM
Kelly Writers House
3805 Locust Walk on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania

[The program is co-sponsored by the Kelly Writers House, the "PennAdvance Program" of the School of Arts & Sciences, & the Highwire Gallery.]

You can hear audio files of Edwin Torres performing his "All Colors Not White" and "A Wutherance of E" by clicking here:
www.english.upenn.edu/~afilreis/88v/torres.html

About the brilliant Nuyorican poet and performance worker EDWIN TORRES a writer for New York Magazine wrote, "It's hard to wrestle meaning from the shreds of language he tosses out. And on paper, Torres seems to make as much sense as a Port Authority schizophrenic." "It is obvious that Edwin Torres is the bastard love child of Mayakovsky and Parra, midwifed by Apollinaire," writes Christian Haye in The Poetry Project Newsletter. Torres reads at the Poetry Project, Dixon Place, P.S. 122 and the Performing Garage. Recently, he represented New York City in the National Poetry Slam in Boston. He won the Nuyorican Poets Cafe's First Annual Prize for Fresh Poetry. New York Press pronounced him Best Performing Poet this year saying: "His bent for soul bending language play is without equal." Ethan Petitt of Nose Magazine says "instead of sounding things', he 'things' sounds, so that words and meanings go ka-plunk like soft percussion." Some of his widely diverse influences include Wallace Stevens, Mayakovsky, Duchamp, Dada, Fluxus, and even Butoh. Torres' books include _I Hear Things People Haven't Really Said_ and _Lung Poetry_, and new from Subpress, _Fractured Humorous_.

↑ Index

85. peter neufeld
WTO
Mon 6 Dec 1999

I thought people on the list might find this of interest.

Peter Neufeld

> Seattle Doctor speaks on police action in Seattle

>My name is Richard DeAndrea. I'm a medical doctor. What I saw up >here was martial law. This turned into a police state. Everything you >have seen on television regarding local news broadcasts including >national public radio was a blackout. The police were using concussion >grenades. They were shooting tear gas canisters directly at protesters' >faces. They were using so-called rubber bullets. These are actually >hard plastic. Some of the damage I saw: these plastic bullets took off >part of one person's jaw, smashed teeth in other people's mouths. I saw >the police arrest people who had their hands up in the air screaming >we are peacefully protesting. The amount of looting that took place was >so minimal I don't even know where they got the footage from. I am >saying this beyond a shadow of a doubt. This is a definite sign that >America is heading towards a police state unless people start standing >up for their rights as individuals. I am actually shocked and ashamed. I >am ashamed of the police force, I am ashamed of the mayor I am >ashamed of Bill Clinton. I am ashamed of the whole thing.

>
>Jared: These rubber bullets - what are they?
>
>Dr. DeAndrea: They are made of polyester type material. They are >like a hard plastic toy. The idea is to hit your body, do damage, not >actually penetrate. But I did see penetration wounds, I did see people >bleeding. I did see teeth loss, I did see broken bones. There were >children present, there were families present, they were firing upon >families, mothers, grandmothers. They were just firing at them. They >came out in full police force. They brought out swat teams, they had >the national guard up here, there was CIA surrounding the delegates' >buildings. It was very obvious that there was an institutional control >that had no regard of human rights whatever.
>
>In addition we have video footage of protesters being taken away as >well as human rights being violated. Prisoners were taken and they >were tortured. There is a case, I believe his name is Holm, Keith Holm.
>He was tortured because he would not give his name.
They
>handcuffed, laid him on the floor, they smashed his face against the >concrete, they grabbed his hair, they ripped out a lock of hair. and >then placed pencils between his fingers and pressed on them until he >would give his name. He refused. They were also banging his head >against metal objects. He was actually the first protester released >because the Internal Affairs came in to do an investigation and they >wanted him gone because he would be able to give testimony.

>
>We're treating people in a studio loft downtown. I just treated an ear >wound. People have been treated for concussion injuries. There have >been people who have been treated for plastic bullet wounds. Lots of >tear gas injuries, lots of damage to cornea, lots of damage to the eyes >and skins. They were using a pepper spray, a tear gas and they were >also using some sort of nerve gas. We had reports of many >demonstrators winding up with seizures the next day. It causes muscles >to clamp up, muscle contraction, seizures.
>
>They have done several illegal things regarding these people in jail.
>They have been telling them that they would not be let out, not have >their bail set if they didn't give their names. Its their legal right not to >give their name. They don't have to speak at all. Attorneys came up >and said we are representing these people. The police called the >attorneys liars. At this point they have still refused to let any of them >see their clients. There are close to 600 people who were arrested and >they have been holding them for two days on charges that are mostly >misdemeanors, such as refusal to disperse. A lot of people in there >have not gotten medical attention either. I have gotten calls from young >ladies in there who have had all sorts of emotional problems as well as >physical problems. They have called me for medical attention from >inside the jail. There are people still sitting in there who have not even >been processed.

>
>Today there were fewer attacks by police, but they did arrest more >people. And there was no violence today by the marchers and all >through the day yesterday it was the same. What you are seeing on >television about looting and anarchistic protesters - there's >a straight-out blackout and they are basically pushing that [line]. There >is not much damage to property here. There are not many windows that >have been damaged or stores that have been looted.
Those are >extremely rare cases.
>
>I used to believe newspapers were telling the truth.
But now I am no >longer behind that. This is the beginning of a police state. You can >quote me on that.
>
>http://www.brasscheck.com/seattle
>
>
>
>
>
>
>+==========
=======+

Do You Yahoo!?

Thousands of Stores. Millions of Products. All in one place.
Yahoo! Shopping: http://shopping.yahoo.com

↑ Index

86. Wright Laura E
Re: What class are you?
Mon 6 Dec 1999

Hello -- I'm finally back on the list after misadventures in relocation.
These days, I think it's more expensive to go to a hockey game than the symphony -- and what does that say?
(> What about culture? Are you talking Culture (would you rather > go to the > philharmonic or the hockey game?)
(I'd like to go to both, please)

But what I really wanted to mention, re. class, is an Argentinian/Canadian film, The Dark Side of the Heart, whose main character is a poet who wanders the streets, reciting lines of poetry and asking for handouts. Also writes love poems in exchange for steaks at the local grill. "Death" (his frequent companion) is always trying to find him a "real" job. Has anyone else seen this film?

Why do we venerate self-published works when their authors are dead, yet only feel like "real" poets when someone else publishes us? What does it mean to "be a poet." (I vote w/Ted Berrigan, a poet is someone who makes poems -- but then, what is a poem? (something a poet makes?))

Laura

"I would sooner read a timetable or a catalogue than nothing at all."
-W. Somerset Maugham

Laura E. Wright
Norlin Acquisitions
[redacted]

↑ Index

87. Jim Andrews
Bill Marsh at Defib: the canned version
Mon 6 Dec 1999

The canned version of the Nov 21/99 Defib show featuring Bill Marsh is now available at http://webartery.com/defib/canned/3bill

Defib is webartery.com's live online web artist interview surf show. The transcript from the live chat sessions of interviews with Web artists is produced into hypertranscipt versions of the sessions.

Bill Marsh is a writer who combines critical acumen with an engaging poetical approach to Web art. He's just launched sunbrella.net, a Web broadcasting/publishing venture. To be a publisher now can also involve broadcasting various media. Broadlishers and pubcasters. Bill is the publisher of Paper Brain Press.

↑ Index

88. Alaric Sumner Nekyia, UEA Norwich and Rotterdam
Tue 7 Dec 1999

NEKYIA (for speaker, singer, electronic sounds and video) a collaboration between sound/video artist Joseph Hyde and writer Alaric Sumner

Live Samples Festival, Rotterdam - Saturday 11th December

Electroacoustic Music Department, University of East Anglia, Norwich - Monday 13th December

Previous performances in September: Champlibre, Montreal and Shawford Mill, Somerset Reviewed: Le Devoir, Montreal.

↑ Index

89. Rachel Loden
Publishers Weekly, December 6, 1999
Tue 7 Dec 1999

Reviews of Carl Phillips, Edwin Torres, Jorie Graham, Marilyn Hacker, Les Murray, Patricia Goedicke, Eric Pankey, Reginald Shepherd, Joel Kuszai (editor of POETICS@), and also this, about my book HOTEL IMPERIUM:

"Pop and politics haven't had their hats handed to them in this Popean a manner in ages. Reminiscent of the acute fantasias of Susan Wheeler and Elaine Equi, though temperamentally closer to Connie Deanovich, Loden's poems talk about what people are (or have been) talking about, but with barbs hilariously sharpened. Targets include: most of the recent Republican presidents (mercifully, she exempts Ford), beauty culture, Woody Allen, Alan Greenspan, Dan Rather, and insurance companies. 'For an eye, not an eye./ For a tooth, forget it,' she writes in 'Memo from the Benefits Department.' Poetry consumers will find special interest in language/system queries like 'DCEASE', a surprisingly moving meditation that begins, 'There are two Elvis Presleys in the Social Security Death Master File (DCEASE). The King's social security number is 409-52-2002.' And language enthusiasts will approve of 'Last W&T', a rearrangement, refrigerator-poetry-magnet style, of the words of Richard Nixon's will. The danger that cynicism will overtake the indignation that propels these poems is averted by the joy, bafflement and innocence of her poems that take icons as incidental examples, not front-and-center subjects. Take 'The Little Richard Story': 'On a day like this,/ without the music/ of appearances, creatures/ could land and you/ would not be able to explain/ anything to them, not/ the fearless industry/ of beavers, or why dust bunnies/ prefer the dark, not even/ how Little Richard/ himself came into being.' . . . Loden's first full collection marches smartly down the path of satire."

FYI, poetry lovers . . .

* - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - *

Rachel Loden

http://www.thepomegranate.com/loden/hotel.html

email: [redacted]

* - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - *

↑ Index

90. Daniel Kane
Clepsydra
Tue 7 Dec 1999

Anyone know of any good writing on Ashbery's "Clepsydra?" I've read Shoptaw, and am looking for more. If you have a moment, bc to [redacted]
Thanks,
--daniel

↑ Index

91. Scot Hacker
Re: funding for the arts
Tue 7 Dec 1999

This is a 1995 story which will not die, which some of us have seen a couple times a month for the past four years. See:

http://www.artistresource.org/new11_13.htm

Please do NOT forward this to anyone. Send all hoaxes and zombie memes back upstream.

- Scot

> -
> Dear Friends:
> On NPR's Morning Edition, Nina Totenberg reported that > if the Supreme Court supports Congress to cut the > budget of the National Endowment of the Arts, it is in

--

The BeOS Tip Server: http://www.betips.net/
The BeOS Bible: http://www.birdhouse.org/beos/bible/
The Alt.OS Usability Challenge: http://www.betips.net/challenge/

↑ Index

92. Chris Stroffolino
Re: Jameson's Perelman
Tue 7 Dec 1999

See also, Burnham, CLint. THE JAMESONIAN UNCONSCIOUS. (Duke, I think?) 1995...

On Fri, 3 Dec 1999, Brian Lennon wrote:

> A few months back I requested help tracking down cites for counter-commentary on Jameson's discussion of Perelman. Thanks to all who responded. ---BL
>
> Jameson, Frederic. Postmodernism, or, The Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism. Durham: Duke University Press, 1991.
>
> Armantrout, Rae. "Irony and Postmodern Poetry." Moving Borders: Three Decades of Innovative Writing by Women. Ed. by Mary Margaret Sloan. Jersey City: Talisman House, 1998: 674-679.
> Golding, Alan. From Outlaw to Classic: Canons in American Poetry. Wisconsin, 1995.
> Hartley, George. "Jameson's Perelman: Reification and the Material Signifier." Textual Politics and the Language Poets. Bloomington and Indianapolis: Indiana UP, 1989: 42-52.
> Perelman, Bob. "Parataxis and Narrative: The New Sentence in Theory and Practice." The Marginalization of Poetry: Language Writing and Literary History. Princeton: Princeton UP, 1996: 59-78.
> von Hallberg, Robert. "Poetry, Politics, and Intellectuals." The Cambridge History of American Literature, Volume 8: Poetry and Criticism. Ed. by Sacvan Bercovitch. Cambridge: Cambridge UP, 1996. 9-260.
>
> see also

> Silliman, Ron. The New Sentence. New York: Roof, 1985.
>
> Useful critiques and periodizations of Jameson's postmodernism:
> Best, Steven. "Jameson, Totality, and the Poststructuralist Critique." Postmodernism/Jameson/Critique. Washington, D.C.: Maisonneuve Press, 1989. 333-368
> Featherstone, Mike. "Postmodernism, Cultural Change, and Social Practice." Postmodernism/Jameson/Critique. Washington, D.C.: Maisonneuve Press, 1989. 117-138.
> Helming, Steven. "Jameson's Postmodernism: Version 2.0." Postmodern Culture 9.2
> http://muse.jhu.edu/journals/postmodern_culture/v009/9.2.r_helming.html
> -----. "Marxist Pleasure: Jameson and Eagleton." Postmodern Culture 6.1.
> http://muse.jhu.edu/journals/postmodern_culture/v006/6.1consenstein.html
> Kellner, Douglas. "Introduction: Jameson, Marxism, and Postmodernism." Postmodernism/Jameson/Critique. Washington, D.C.: Maisonneuve Press, 1989. 2-37.
> Shumway, David R. "Jameson / Hermeneutics / Postmodernism." Postmodernism/Jameson/Critique. Washington, D.C.: Maisonneuve Press, 1989. 172-202.
>
> [redacted]
> http://www.columbia.edu/~bml18

↑ Index

93. pete spence

Re: What class are you?

Tue 7 Dec 1999

> Who supports and pays for poetry? Good question that I hope will provoke lively discussion...
>
> Jonathan Mayhew
> [redacted]
>
> _____

i've seen a lot of poets who expect others to buy their new book but shy away from reading others,,who buys but the overinterested!!! pete

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

94. pete spence
Re: Class and Money
Tue 7 Dec 1999

> Suppose Maria Zavialov was not working class.So what. You don't have to be working class to talk about the working class??????
>
> Does Pete have a special knowledge that Maria belongs to the idle reach?

if you can only respond to those you know on this listserve seems then it serves no purpose//pete

> > >Or is it implicit in his comment that labor is only labor ("authentic") >if > > >it > > >is working class? Is this an example of the "sentimental working-class > > >poetics?"
> > >
> > >
> > >Murat Nemet-Nejat
> >
> > maybe maria could have worded it better ,still think i probably seen >closer > > views of working class than a lot, my father a socialist was under the > > threat of the "crimes act' here for years and i remember him being > > interviewed on t.v. knowing he would probably be arrested when he left >the > > studio could go on but!!! sentiment/sediment/saidund meant//pete spence
> >
yeah so we were working class and my father had government ministers to dinner a lot of things happened back then and i'm happy that i went through it i know what it is about at least from being on its doorstep for my growing years 'till my father died when i was about 24 since then i've carried the lessons carefully//pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

95. Maria Damon
Re: lisa robertson
Tue 7 Dec 1999

oh louis this is so touchingly urgent and beseeching that, though i don't know lisa robertson's address and won't bother to look it up since you can do so yourself, i will be troubled and haunted by your plaintive tone and send good vibes out there that you and lisa robertson will, no, MUST, connect on the psychic if not the cyber plane.

At 12:52 PM -0500 12/3/99, Louis Cabri wrote:
>Does anyone have an updated email address for Lisa Robertson?
>
>Can someone help me with this?
>
>Is there one of you out there who would go to the trouble of looking up >Lisa Robertson's email address for me, one that is current?
>
>Can I possibly ask someone to look up an email address for me?
>
>Could it be you that I am searching for, one of you who holds the address >to Lisa Robertson's email home?
>
>Is it now, here, in this place, that I will find the email address of one >of you, who is, nonetheless, not a subscriber?
>
>Might it be soon that someone will preoccupy their own thoughts with this >request?

↑ Index

96. Maria Damon
Re: Humble seed
Tue 7 Dec 1999

At 1:30 PM -0500 12/3/99, R. Drake wrote:
>why would one want to make a Book out of Online work? would that
>"validate" it somehow? or make it a more marketable Commodity?

to see how/.if it can be done. miekal and i have discussed this for some of our work and it's v. challenging.
>
>and why would one want to arbitrate for others what is "The Best"
>(and, by exclusion, The Rest, all the Other...)? or why would one >give another the power to arbiter that work for them?

>
>[the tone of my speaking voice, asking these questions, is not intended >to be as "hostile" as the written version might seem... since i suspect >steve tills suggestion is aimed to promote online works, and i share >that as a goal...]
>
>
>luigi
>burning press
>http://www.burningpress.org/va/vaintro.html
>
>
>>So what would it look like, _The Best American Poetry Online_, culled >>from 75 experimental hypertext mags, if say three-four-five hundred >>experimental poets each pitched in 20 small bucks for their own two >>copies a piece and maybe another 20 little dollars to get a coupla
>>copies into every Bans and Ignoble and Aborters big comfortable public >>libraries/stores in the country? Some cunning <buyers group brokering> >>with Amazon.com and the publishers and others could also help...

↑ Index

97. Maria Damon

Re: WTO

Tue 7 Dec 1999

---

apropos this debacle, did anyone see in the paper that the supreme court is going to hear a case challenging the consitutional necessity of the Miranda Laws????what next???this seems as mindbogglingly cynical as their decision, about 7-10 years ago, to no longer hear capital punishment appeals because they were "too costly."

At 12:32 PM -0500 12/3/99, Patrick Herron wrote:
>David Bromige wrote -
>
>>Cities will have to live with the fact that the USA allows peaceful >assembly of dissidents.
>
>Unfortunately, David, to be quite frank, Amerika DOES NOT allow peaceful >assembly that much any more. The legal protections for peaceful protesters >have been disappearing for a long time.
>
>Amerika is a police state. Your only protection in Amerika is money, >connections.

>
>Land of the free, home of the brave
>is really >land of the fee, home of the knave.
>
>And then, lest we forget, there's always agent provocateur activities within >many political movements in the US, people paid to make the peaceful look >violent.
>
>This was a wonderful note, David. I am very glad you shared it with >everyone. What you are saying in your note is indeed what is going on. I >have a good friend who is at Capitol Hill in the middle of it and I am >worried about him.
>
>Under a state of emergency, the city of Seattle made it illegal to use a >gaskmask, and the penalty is 180 days in jail and/or a large fine.
>
>Patrick
>
>
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

98. Dodie Bellamy

Re: CLASS

Tue 7 Dec 1999

At 2:16 PM -0800 12/3/99, Katie Degentesh wrote:
>
>(class/race/gender/blah blah blah)

Dear Katie Blah Blah Blah,

This is rather dismissive, don't you think?

Dodie

↑ Index

99. { brad brace }

IDs in Color Copies (fwd)

Tue 7 Dec 1999

Greetings. We've recently seen a tirade of stories about "hidden" identification codes and what many would consider to be surreptitious centralized information flowing from various popular Internet products and packages. These have tended to highlight an important truth--whether or not users really would be concerned about the particular identifiers or data involved, they tend to get the most upset when they feel that an effort was made to perform such functions "behind their backs." While it can be argued how routine, intrusive, or even mundane and innocent a particular case may be, it's certainly true that people feel a lot better when they know what's going on.

This issue isn't restricted only to the Internet world. A case in point-- the recurring rumors floating around regarding the presence or absence of identification codes in color copies (or color prints xerographically generated from computer output systems).

A recent story involved a customer who was refused permission to make a color copy of his driver's license (to deal with an identification problem with his local telephone company). A Kinko's (copying center) worker reportedly told him that such a copy was "illegal," and could be traced back to the store through a "hidden ID."

Regardless of whether or not the Kinko's employee was being overzealous in his interpretation of the rules, what's really going on here regarding a so-called hidden ID code?

In fact, rumors about this, often chalked up as an "urban legend," have been circulating for a long time. This is a bit ironic, given that in the copier/printer industry it's been well known for years--no secret--that "invisible" IDs are imprinted on virtually all color xerographic output, from (apparently) all of the manufacturers. But for persons outside of "the trade," this hasn't been as widely known (even though the issue goes back to the early 90's, and the topic has appeared in publications such as the Wall Street Journal). However, it does not appear that the privacy-related aspects of this technology have ever been subject to significant public discussion.

In an effort to pin down the current state of the art in this area, I had a long and pleasant chat with one of Xerox's anti-counterfeiting experts, who is the technical product manager for several of their color-copying products. The conversation was quite illuminating. Please note that the details apply only to Xerox products, though we can safely assume similar systems from competing manufacturers, although their specific policies may differ.

Years ago, when the potential for counterfeiting of valuable documents on color copiers/xerographic printers became apparent in Japan (where such machines first appeared) manufacturers were concerned about negative governmental reaction to such technology. In an effort to stave off legislative efforts to restrict such devices, various ID systems began being implemented at that point. At one stage for at least one U.S. manufacturer, this was as crude as a serial number etched on the underside of the imaging area glass!

Modern systems, which are now reportedly implemented universally, use much more sophisticated methods, encoding the ID effectively as "noise" repeatedly throughout the image, making it impossible to circumvent the system through copying or printing over a small portion of the image area, or by cutting off portions of printed documents. Effectively, I'd term this as sort of the printing equivalent of "spread spectrum" in radio technology.

To read these IDs, the document in question is scanned and the "noise" decoded via a secret and proprietary algorithm. In the case of Xerox-manufactured equipment, only Xerox has the means to do this, and they require a court order to do so (except for some specific government agencies, for whom they no longer require court authorizations). I'm told that the number of requests Xerox receives for this service is on the order of a couple a week from within the U.S.

The ID is encoded in all color copies/prints from the Xerox color copier/printer line. It does not appear in black and white copies. The technology has continued to evolve, and it is possible that it might be implemented within other printing technologies as well (e.g. inkjet). At one time there were efforts made to also include date/time stamps within the encoded data, but these were dropped by Xerox (at least for now) due to inconsistencies such as the printer clocks not being set properly by their operators, rendering their value questionable.

It's interesting to note that these machines also include other anti-counterfeiting measures, such as dumping extra cyan toner onto images when the unit believes it has detected an attempt to specifically copy currency. These techniques have all apparently been fairly successful--the Secret Service has reported something on the order of a 30% drop in color copying counterfeiting attempts since word of such measures has been circulating in the industry. The average person might wonder who the blazes would ever accept a xerographic copy of money in any case... but apparently many persons are not very discerning. I'm told that the Secret Service has examples in their files of counterfeit currency successfully passed that was printed on dot matrix printers. So counterfeiting is certainly a genuine problem.

OK, so now you know--the IDs are there. The next question is, what does this really mean? Obviously the vast majority of uses for color copies are completely innocuous or even directly beneficial to the public good (e.g. whistleblowers attempting to expose a fraud against the public). Is it acceptable for an ID to be embedded in all color copies just to catch those cases? The answer seems to be, it depends.

In some cases, even having an ID number doesn't necessarily tell you who currently owns the machine. While some countries (e.g. China) do keep tight reign on the ownership and transfer of such equipment, there is no "registration" requirement for such devices in the U.S. (though the routine servicing realities of large units might well create something of a de-facto registration in many situations).

Xerox points out that non-color copies (at least on their machines) have no IDs, and that most copying applications don't need color. It is however also true that as the prices of color copiers and printers continue to fall, it seems only a matter of time before they become the "standard" even for home copying, at which time the presence of IDs could cover a much vaster range of documents and become increasingly significant from a routine privacy standpoint.

It's also the case that we need to be watchful for the "spread" of this technology, intended for one purpose, into other areas or broader applications (what I call "technology creep"). We've seen this effect repeatedly with other technologies over the years, from automated toll collection to cell phone location tracking. While there is currently no U.S. legislative requirement that manufacturers of copier technology include IDs on color copies, it is also the case that these manufacturers have the clear impression that if they do not include such IDs, legislation to require them would be immediately forthcoming.

It is important to be vigilant to avoid such perceived or real pressures from causing possibly intrusive technology creep in this area. In the copier case, that ID technology being used for color copies could be adapted to black and white copies and prints as well. The addition of cheap GPS units to copiers could provide not only valid date/time stamps, but also the physical locations of the units, all of which could be invisibly encoded within the printed images.

Pressures to extend the surveillance of commercial copyright enforcement take such concepts out of the realm of science-fiction, and into the range of actual future possibilities. What many would consider to be currently acceptable anti-counterfeiting technology could be easily extended into the realm of serious privacy invasions. It would only require, as Dr. Strangelove once said, "The will to do so."

Perhaps the most important point is that unless we as a society actively stay aware of these technologies, however laudable their initial applications may often be, we will be unable to participate in the debate that is crucial to determining their future evolution. And it's in the vacuum of technology evolving without meaningful input from society that the most serious abuses, be they related to the Internet or that copy machine over on your desk, are the most likely to occur.

--Lauren--
[redacted]
Lauren Weinstein
Moderator, PRIVACY Forum - http://www.vortex.com
Co-Founder, PFIR: People for Internet Responsibility - http://www.pfir.org Member, ACM Committee on Computers and Public Policy

The_12hr-ISBN-JPEG_Project since 1994 <<<<

+ + + serial ftp://ftp.wco.com/pub/users/bbrace + + + eccentric ftp://ftp.netcom.com/pub/bb/bbrace + + + continuous ftp://ftp.teleport.com/users/bbrace + + + hypermodern ftp://ftp.rdrop.com/pub/users/bbrace + + + imagery ftp://ftp.pacifier.com/pub/users/bbrace

> News://alt.binaries.pictures.12hr / a.b.p.fine-art.misc
> Mailing-list: [redacted] / subscribe 12hr-isbn-jpeg
> Reverse Solidus: http://www.teleport.com/~bbrace/bbrace.html

{ brad brace } <<<< [redacted] >>>> ~finger for pgp

↑ Index

100. Al Filreis
recording available
Wed 8 Dec 1999

The recording of the symposium held earlier tonight* at the Kelly Writers House in Philadelphia - featuring Ron Silliman, Jena Osman, Bob Perelman, and Brian Kim Stefans, and interactions with, among others, Tom Orange from Washington, Alan Golding from Louisville, and Patrick Durgin from Iowa - is now available. Go here:

www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/webcasts/symposium.html

and click on "A recording of this event is available."

Al Filreis
The Class of 1942 Professor of English
Faculty Director, the Kelly Writers House
University of Pennsylvania

* 12/7/99

↑ Index

101. f i l c h

Re: The Work of Authority in IRC Channel #Nikuko

Wed 8 Dec 1999

Alan,

When I was on this list several years ago my attempts at getting the list to be aware of the intricacies and nominalizations of this form were met with curses and eventually the boot was given to my skinny ass.

What was considered taboo at that time; the posting of imagined conversations and telephone numbers between two distracted and desperate lovers was met with active hostility. In fact the only member who found my work to be of interest was Christopher Funkhouser. It is refreshing (even scary) and endlessly fascinating to see now that home numbers, addresses, emails, etc. are bandied about in quite a free manner. It seems that the point(s) I was trying to explore have now been nominalized within the context of the group.

It's so interesting to me, one of my perennial interests I guess, how the dynamics of listservs are effected by the simple reply-to function of the majordomo. I was cheered, nee amused, when I went to respond to this recent posting of yours and I found myself responding to the group.

I received a recent post <backchannel> from a member who expressed a disdain for the dynamics for the list as it seems to this person that the list serves as more of bulletin board for future (unattainable) events than as a real discussion space for poetics. My take on this is that this space is not for discussion but is rather a living(?) laboratory for the exploration of these small and terribly important issues such as the bots talk in your piece. And of course it also serves as an archive of these items. Most of the time I could care less whether there is an interesting discussion going on as, for me it serves as a wonderful place to dump texts which I want to be able to find again, reconstruct again, deconstruct again in 50 years.

The point behind all of this and my letter is to express my appreciation for your work. Of all the comments and work I have seen posted here since I rejoined you seem really to be grappling with the issues which this medium creates/compounds/ignores. The growth in your work and the maturity that I see in works like "Re: The Work of Authority in IRC Channel #Nikuko" are breathtaking to behold and I am so pleased that I could rejoin and see this in comparison to the work of yours I saw before (several years ago) which did not seem to be effected at all by the medium.

So a hearty "Bravo!" to you sir and a round of ale for all in the house.

btw <grin> ----- The following addresses had permanent fatal errors ----- <I'[redacted]>

f i l c h

> From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> Date: Sun, 5 Dec 1999 22:43:15 -0500
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: The Work of Authority in IRC Channel #Nikuko
>
> **
>
> The Work of Authority in IRC Channel #Nikuko
>
> IRC log started Sun Dec 5 02:18
> * Value of LOG set to ON* > < Nikuko > This is so very sad.
> < Nikuko > Where are you?
> < Nikuko > Hello, Jennifer?
> * Nikuko is now known as Jennifer*
> - NickServ - This nick is owned by someone else. Please choose another.
> - NickServ - If this is your nick, type: /msg NickServ IDENTIFY <password>
> - NickServ - Your nick will be changed in 60 seconds if you do not comply.
> * Jennifer is now known as Julu*
> - NickServ - This nick is owned by someone else. Please choose another.
> - NickServ - If this is your nick, type: /msg NickServ IDENTIFY <password>
> - NickServ - Your nick will be changed in 60 seconds if you do not comply.
> * Julu is now known as JJennifer*
> < JJennifer > I am so sorry, morphing like this.
> < JJennifer > O! Nikuko, I have missed you.
> [E/X] Signon at 2:20 am for options detected.
> < JJennifer > Who is that other?
> < JJennifer > Tell me...
> * JJennifer is now known as Nikuko*
> < Nikuko > Oh Oh Oh Come towards me.
> < Nikuko > Oh I am so very sorry, I am crying enormously here.
> * Nikuko is now known as JJennifer*
> < JJennifer > Nikuko, I miss you wildly, these spaces collapse > to nothing.
> * JJennifer is now known as Nikuko*
> < Nikuko > These spaces are nothing, Jennifer, our love is one > forever...
> * Nikuko is now known as JJennifer*
> < JJennifer > Melt with me, Nikuko, melt with me.
> * JJennifer is now known as Nikuko*
> < Nikuko > I am melting, JJennifer
> * Nikuko is now known as NikukoJen*
> < NikukoJen > Ah ah ah ah ah
> [E/X] Signoff at 2:23 am for options detected.

> * NikukoJen is now known as JenniferN*
> < JenniferN > Ah ah ah ah ah
> * JenniferN is now known as NJieknunk*
> < NJieknunk > Ah ah ah ah ah
> * NJieknunk is now known as JNeinknui*
> < JNeinknui > Ah ah ah ah ah
> * JNeinknui is now known as All*
> < All > Ah ah ah ah ah!
> - NickServ - This nick is owned by someone else. Please choose another.
> - NickServ - If this is your nick, type: /msg NickServ IDENTIFY <password>
> - NickServ - Your nick will be changed in 60 seconds if you do not comply.
> < All > Ah ah ah ah ah!
> * All is now known as One*
> - NickServ - This nick is owned by someone else. Please choose another.
> - NickServ - If this is your nick, type: /msg NickServ IDENTIFY <password>
> - NickServ - Your nick will be changed in 60 seconds if you do not comply.
> * Signoff: One (But the time has come when all things shall pass.)*
> IRC Log ended  Sun Dec 5 02:26
>
> ---

↑ Index

102. Katie Degentesh
Re: CLASS
Wed 8 Dec 1999

Dear Dodie Blah,

Yes. Is there something wrong with that? Dismissiveness can be a byproduct of judgment, which in turn is often necessary for the writing of poetry. Although you were kind enough to send your post to the list instead of needling me by backchannel, I sense a certain amount of dismissiveness in your own response.

Katie Degentesh

At 5:39 PM -0800 12/7/99, Dodie Bellamy wrote:
>At 2:16 PM -0800 12/3/99, Katie Degentesh wrote:
>>
>>(class/race/gender/blah blah blah)
>
>Dear Katie Blah Blah Blah,
>
>This is rather dismissive, don't you think?
>
>Dodie

↑ Index

103. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

space is the place

Wed 8 Dec 1999

---

thanks to all
for "first american poem" response.I think the list works best for me when there is this dialogue. and thinking of Robert Duncan and his
"poetics of co-response" he talked of
--this--is so important to me.
so: then: reading "Our Town" , thinking of Williams
and the particular--and Oppen (Beautiful Particulars, also)
--what do you think of a poetics of the local (olson?)
that has the inter-net as place?

per this conversation regarding
an anthology of poetics from this space.

What happens to place
when place is
all over?

Todd Baron.
ReMap

↑ Index

104. Steve Tills

Humble Seed

Wed 8 Dec 1999

Luigi,

What I suggest is not so much to <make a book of on-line work> as to present an alternative to the _Best American Poetry_ series, or a parody or a spoof or, again, a serious experimental alternative to that text, replete with its conservative-skewed poetries.

Is the effort to validate on-line poetries? Sort of, yes. Though why not, if only for kicks, and/or tricks, get more experimental poetry into mainstream bookstores. Why not play the same games and open up the playing fields (to kids, patrons...) in as many new ways as one can imagine?

Make it a more marketable commodity? No, I don't think I'm suggesting <more marketable> or <more commodity>. I am suggesting that the world's not as black and white as it used to be. If Barnes and Noble and Borders suddenly noticed 5-10 years from now that they were stocking experimental poetries they'd never have conceived of stocking by themselves, if it suddenly dawned on them that somehow they'd been unwittingly turned into a bit of a library and that in fact it wasn't even doing them any harm, and if some <fun> and <pranks> added a few new twists to the existing macrofabrics of accessibility, what harm? It's kind of like having the power to hack against militarism--do ya do it or do ya resist risking crossing into <cracker-dom>?

It was like this: I was reading one of the Best American Poetry issues. A handful of experimental poets, 85 percent mainstream. An experimental mag here or there, _APR_, and the various _Reviews_ and other sad mags making up the bulk. I laughed to myself, What if So-n-So or So-n-So from our side of the tracks had been the editors, and what if the bulk of mags/journals represented had been experimental mags? Ah, but that couldn't happen; this is a Barnes and Noble and this is Best American Poetry. Or wait a minute... Call it _Blah Blah Blah On-line_ (never even intending to restrict it to American, for that matter), borrow their infrastructure, and launch what the average B&N patron (or regional buyer) would never even realize reflected an entirely different agenda? To compete with Best American Poetry? No, not really, exactly, maybe... Rather, cooperating...

Arbitrating what is the Best? No, not that at all, as it is indeed, I agree, an undesirable. Rather, <Best>, like <American>, is largely a ruse, another fun trick or game. Trying to WIN? No, no, no. Please don't misunderstand me.

I, too, imbue these answers to your good and gentle questions with more intensity than I like. And I wish none of that on you, old chap, always one I've much respected. I do, though, want to make clear the essentially mischievous nature of my note. It's probably, in fact, more a satirical slant on BAP and what's available in mainstream stores/colleges etcetera than a serious plan of action. Though, smile, I think it would be hilarious to see a chance-operationally-selected experimental journal or two in big, naive stores.

Bests, Steve

↑ Index

105. Roger Day

Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)

Wed 8 Dec 1999

A tiny voice of caution here - too many people doing this, might well just add to the general chaos. Don't forget, people will be bunging up the network with all kinds of nonsense at this time as well - you know, multi-media emails sending millenium messages , christmas messages, all sorts of real-time hook-ups using webcams etc etc. There might well be other institutions/bodies who have similar ideas as this. The more I write, the more I think that the net will grind to a standstill - and not because of Y2K problems, either. In engineering terms, this is called stress-testing.

At 1999-12-05 05:08:11, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:
\
#
(The following description is at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk in the trAceroute conference. I'm looking for participants - if you're interested, please write into it. Thank you greatly - Alan)
#
Topic:
About the Traceroute Project (1 of 3), Read 16 times
Conf:
NEW! trAceroute
From:
Alan Sondheim ([redacted])
Date:
03 December 1999 08:24 AM
#
#
#
Hi - I'm asking everyone to participate in the TRACEROUTE PROJECT, which really occurs on December 31 and January 1. Traceroute is a utility which comes with the unix or linux operating system - there is a version in Win95 and Win98 called tracert. It is a way to track the path from your computer to a site anywhere in the world. For example, if you are in Australia, at Murdoch University, you could type
#
tracert columbia.edu
#
at the DOS prompt in Windows 95 0r 98, and you would have a chart of the route between Murdoch and Columbia University in New York, USA.
#
Traceroute or tracert works by looking at the route between your computer and your target address, and sending signals to every machine between the two - three signals (usually) per machine. The machines then send return signals, and traceroute gives you the round-trip time for each of the three.

```
#
Traceroute is used by system administrators and people like me to look at #  the "health" of the Internet as a whole - it tells you which machines #  aren't responding, for example (those which send back asterix such as *).
It's incredibly useful.
#
Between December 31 and January 1, almost all the Y2k problems on the Net #  will be visible thorugh traceroute. The idea of this project is to gather #  a huge sheaf of data, illustrating the world-wide state of the Internet as #  the millennium starts. (The millennium takes a day to start world-wide,
because of the time zones.)
#
What I would like from participants is a group of traceroutes sent to #  Trace (we'll let you know where), accompanied by your name.  There is some #  technical information below (taken from a few posts I made) that indicates #  how to do this. It would also be great if you could include a description #  of Y2k problems in your location - for example, subways out, flickering #  lights, and so forth - and give your location as well. All of this will be #  included in the final report.
#
None of this will be graphic or great looking - but it will be an amazing
compendium of the state of the earth at a critical time for humanity...
#
Please participate! Please post questions here!
#
Alan - and thank you!
#
(Below is the information from the other posts - you can ignore this if it #  is too technical.)
#
I would like to start, almost immediately, thinking about doing
TRACEROUTE #  (traceroute) commands in linux or unix across the millennial hinge (i.e.
during the day the time shifts over), reporting back on speed etc. between #  nodes etc. as the millennium arrives and Y2k does or does not come to #  fruition. Please let me know if you are interested in participating - you #  would have to have access to some traceroute program, and the ability to #  convert the results to a text file; we'll try and establish a site for #  placing these...
#
Here is some additional information from correspondence with Steen - Alan
-
```

#
> Tracking servers - for example the command {k:1}traceroute
> trace.ntu.ac.uk gives of course the traceroute for trace from > panix.com for me. I would track 'representative sites' -
> cleo.murdoch.edu.au for example is at the antipodes from NYC - in > Perth. Also would trace random sites in Canada, across the US > naturally, Japan. There are people in Finland who would do the same.
> So the origin of the tracking, for the most part, would be in relation > to the participants - and the goal would be what would appear, to > them, to be representative sites world-wide. > I've used about 5-6 > graphic traceroutes, and find in general they're more trouble than > they're worth. One, PingPlotter, is pretty good, and you can save the > traceroutes as images as well as text. The advantage of text is that > you've got databases you can manipulate of course. It seems to me > there are two kinds of graphics involved - those that represent geo> graphic information, mapping, etc. and those that plot times - > PingPlotter is of the latter, which is more useful.
>
> The idea behind all of this is to consider the telecom internetting of
the > world as a membrane, and to examine its condition, situation, on the hinge
> of the millennium - how is connectivity functioning in light of - 1.
> who is and who is not wired in the first place and - 2. y2k and other > (what are now) geopolitical problems. I'm fascinated by the idea of a 'snapshot'
> are now) geopolitical problems. I'm fascinated by the idea of a 'snapshot'
> of the planet in this regard. I've always found aesthetic value in trace-
> route (and ping -s) since it really represents the bones, underlying > structures of the Net, manifesting themselves...
#
#
#
And here is additional information. If you are on Windows 95 or 98, and can access DOS (I'm not sure about G3 or G4 or IMac but there must be utilities available):
#
#
Some tools for using with the Traceroute Project for Windows (tested for Win98):

```
#
#
PING:
#
Usage: ping [-t] [-a] [-n count] [-l size] [-f] [-i TTL] [-v TOS]
[-r count] [-s count] [[-j host-list] | [-k host-list]]
[-w timeout] destination-list
#
Options:
-t Ping the specifed host until stopped.
To see statistics and continue - type Control-Break;
To stop - type Control-C.
-a Resolve addresses to hostnames.
-n count Number of echo requests to send.
-l size Send buffer size.
-f Set Don't Fragment flag in packet.
-i TTL Time To Live.
-v TOS Type Of Service.
-r count Record route for count hops.
-s count Timestamp for count hops.
-j host-list Loose source route along host-list.
-k host-list Strict source route along host-list.
-w timeout Timeout in milliseconds to wait for each reply.
#
#
TRACERT (traceroute):
#
Usage: tracert [-d] [-h maximum_hops] [-j host-list] [-w timeout]
target_name
#
Options:
-d Do not resolve addresses to hostnames.
-h maximum_hops Maximum number of hops to search for target.
-j host-list Loose source route along host-list.
-w timeout Wait timeout milliseconds for each reply.
#
NETSTAT:
#
Active Connections
#
Proto Local Address Foreign Address State
#
```

#
Netstat tells you the Network statistics; both tracert and ping are very configurable. As you may know, you can also do ftp and telnet from the prompt.
#
If you do, say, tracert to panix.com, you would do tracert panix.com > trace.txt for example - which places the output in trace.txt. You may have to go back in and add the command "tracert panix.com" to the top of the file. If you then want to do, say, tracert trace.ntu.ac.uk and put it in trace.txt next, you would do tracert trace.ntu.ac.uk >> trace.txt The double carets >> mean "add to" and not "replace" - otherwise the trace.txt will be replaced. The same goes for ping or other commands.
#
This way, you can build up a file of traceroutes to send on - configured as you see fit. You might also use ping at times.
#
- Alan
#

Roger

↑ Index

106. Ron Silliman
webcast recording now available
Wed 8 Dec 1999

From: Al Filreis <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, December 07, 1999 11:52 PM
Subject: webcast recording now available

The recording of the symposium held earlier tonight at the Kelly Writers House in Philadelphia - featuring Ron Silliman, Jena Osman, Bob Perelman, and Brian Kim Stefans, and interactions with, among others, Tom Orange from Washington, Alan Golding from Louisville, and Patrick Durgin from Iowa - is now available. Go here:

www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/webcasts/symposium.html

and click on "A recording of this event is available."

You will need a RealPlayer to view this file. (To download a free RealPlayer, go here: www.real.com.)

Al Filreis
The Class of 1942 Professor of English

Faculty Director, the Kelly Writers House
University of Pennsylvania

↑ Index

107. Michael Bibby
Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]
Wed 8 Dec 1999

---

hi, aldon & gang:

"Nielsen, Aldon" wrote:

> Not only do the North American "whiteness studies" bunch not concern themselves with Byron, they tend not to address poetry at all

although i don't consider myself part of the "whiteness studies" bunch, i'm currently working on a study of articulations of whiteness in mid-century poetics, esp. in New Criticism and postwar cosmopolitanism--i've got a ways to go on this, so any suggestions out there would be most appreciated--

in the main, though, Aldon's right about the lack of any attention to poetry/poetics in the current interrogations of whiteness--what gives on this? if anyone on the list knows of work being done in this area, please post--

michael bibby

↑ Index

108. Poetics List
let's hear it for J H PRYNNE! / Hollo
Wed 8 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Apologies for the delay. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Thu, Dec 2, 1999 12:06 PM +0000
From: [redacted]
Subject: let's hear it for J H PRYNNE!

Check out <http://www.surveyplace.com/tny>

Itís The New Yorkerís first-ever ìbest books of the yearî contest!

In the Poetry category, there is a short list of five, one of which, quite surprisingly, is J.H. (Jeremy) PRYNNE, his COLLECTED.

If you know his work, do vote for him. If you donít know his work, or donít know it all that well, vote for him anyway: Itíll be a strike for INTELLIGENCE, INTEGRITY, WIT, and ìMAKING STRANGE.î Our kind of guy. (!)

(For the Nonfiction category, I recommend Edward Saidís autobiography. Fiction -- youíre on your own.)

Cheers,

Anselm Hollo

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

109. Poetics List
Art in Germany Crosses Borders / Weiss
Wed 8 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account.
Apologies for the delay. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Fri, Dec 3, 1999 9:25 PM +0000
From: Irving Weiss <[redacted]> Subject:

From NY Times, Sunday

Art in Germany Crosses Borders
NYTimes , Thursday, December 2, 1999
by Alan Riding
The 20th Century: A Century of Art in Germany
Three Berlin Galleries through January 9

"One of the most intriguing works is Peter Bisseger's reconstruction of Kurt Schwitter's Merzbau that visitors can enter. Different expressions of memory are found in Arnold Dreyblatt's "From the Archives," where 10,000 names and identities taken from the 1933 volume "Whos Who in Central and Eastern Europe" are continuously projected onto a transparent circular screen."

I excerpt part of paragraph because of the Schwitters but also because I am especially interested in calling attention to the great work of the American composer and interactive multimedia artist Arnold Dreyblatt--just in case any of you are in Berlin before closing date.

http://www.dreyblatt.de/

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

110. Poetics List

M. Palmer and H.Q. Tu Reading at SPT 12/10 / saidenberg

Wed 8 Dec 1999

I had to reformat this message. Chris

--

Date: Mon, 6 Dec 1999 11:52:10 -0800
From: jocelyn saidenberg <[redacted]>
Subject: M. Palmer and H.Q. Tu Reading at SPT 12/10

Small Press Traffic Reading
Friday, December 10, 7:30 p.m.
Michael Palmer
Hung Q. Tu

Michael Palmer's name is known all over the world, a metonym for the allusive, lyric, and speculative poetry that he has been writing since the mid-sixties. Michael Palmer is the author of several books of poetry and translations including The Lion Bridge (Selected Poems 1972-1995), (New Directions, 1998), The Danish Notebook, (Avec Books, 1999), and forthcoming in Spring 2000 The Promises of Glass from New Directions. Palmer is the sage of the unknown, the unverifiable, the poet who promises nothing, withholds less. He asks us not what comes between poetry and its audience, but what poetry reaches toward. In his extension of modernism, and the weary beauties of his life work, what goes toward has yet to spring back, the feelers are out there still, unrelenting tentacles of the proprioceptive.

Hung Q. Tu was born in Vietnam and raised in San Diego. His first book, A Great Ravine, was published by Parenthesis Writing Series and a second, Verisimilitude, is forthcoming through Atelos Press. He received a BA in Literature from UC San Diego, and an MFA in Creative Writing from San Francisco State University. Recent work can be found in such journals as Poetics Journal and Crayon. He is a co-editor of Krupskaya. His writing is dizzy, almost crazy, at the juncture of a number of language practices and social and cultural signposts. In the work of Hung Q. Tu, a fever state of waking and noticing makes mincemeat out of fugue state, tabloid headlines out of headless tap shoes. Under the control of the beast, the world spins, and Hung Q. Tu hangs on by the fingertips, getting bigger than the beast, the world, the nails steely and invitational.

New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

↑ Index

111. Wright Laura E
Re: Seattle businesses boycott
Wed 8 Dec 1999

It's almost impossible not to use Windows -- tho I hear there's to be a similar operating system available free- or share-ware soon. BUT one can try not to BUY microsoft products, even if one uses them.

A boycott of corporations would be much more to the point than a boycott of Seattle businesses. If you're not already avoiding the biggies (Starbuck, Barnes & Noble, etc.), shame on you. And don't forget to bring your own cup.

What does this have to do with poetics? Everything...

"I would sooner read a timetable or a catalogue than nothing at all."
-W. Somerset Maugham

Laura E. Wright
Norlin Acquisitions
[redacted]

↑ Index

112. Poetics List
news and petitions
Wed 8 Dec 1999

The preceding message may serve as a reminder to subscribers that, when forwarding petitions or news, it may be wise to:

1. Check for a date - many 'news' items and especially many petitions continue to circulate through the web for years at a time;

2. Verify with those concerned - if the item mentions a person or organization, contact the party in question or check to see whether they have a web site that may address the issue as current;

3. Verify using other sources - cross-check the item with its source (e.g., the news organ in which it was originally published) or with other sources.

In general, one should be very suspicious of items received by email that cite no date, originary source, or source by which to obtain further information.

Chris

↑ Index

113. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Re: news and petitions
Wed 8 Dec 1999

Reading on Thursday, Dec. 9, 5:30 pm, Ferguson Theater, Columbia College, 600 S Michigan, Chicago, IL:

Susan Wheeler and Paul Hoover

↑ Index

114. Brent Long
Re: WTO
Wed 8 Dec 1999

I had heard of no such thing myself. Maria, would you mind passing along where you heard/read this? I'm sure you're correct, but I would like to follow this a bit more closely and G-d knows we won't hear much about it from the mainstream media.

Any word on WHEN the SJC will hear this argument?

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Maria Damon
Sent: Tuesday, December 07, 1999 6:51 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: WTO

apropos this debacle, did anyone see in the paper that the supreme court is going to hear a case challenging the consitutional necessity of the Miranda Laws????what next???this seems as mindbogglingly cynical as their decision, about 7-10 years ago, to no longer hear capital punishment appeals because they were "too costly."

At 12:32 PM -0500 12/3/99, Patrick Herron wrote:
>David Bromige wrote -
>
>>Cities will have to live with the fact that the USA allows peaceful >assembly of dissidents.
>
>Unfortunately, David, to be quite frank, Amerika DOES NOT allow peaceful >assembly that much any more. The legal protections for peaceful protesters >have been disappearing for a long time.
>
>Amerika is a police state. Your only protection in Amerika is money, >connections.

>
>Land of the free, home of the brave
>is really >land of the fee, home of the knave.
>
>And then, lest we forget, there's always agent provocateur activities within >many political movements in the US, people paid to make the peaceful look >violent.
>
>This was a wonderful note, David. I am very glad you shared it with >everyone. What you are saying in your note is indeed what is going on. I >have a good friend who is at Capitol Hill in the middle of it and I am >worried about him.
>
>Under a state of emergency, the city of Seattle made it illegal to use a >gaskmask, and the penalty is 180 days in jail and/or a large fine.
>
>Patrick
>
>
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

115. ART ELECTRONICS

Karenina.it News

Wed 8 Dec 1999

KARENINA.IT
karenina.IT Experimental Web-Zine
Directed by Caterina Davinio
http://geocities.com/Paris/Lights/7323/kareninarivista.html

News:

Karenina.it for Rome Biennale:
> Biennale di Roma. Un grande progetto dedicato alle arti elettroniche, alla televisione di qualità, all'editoria multimediale / Rome Biennale. A great project dedicated to electronic art, television, multimedia publishers di / by Marco M. Gazzano

Karenina.it for Mediaterra 99
> Mediaterra 99 / Atene. Un festival dedicato a progetti sperimentali di arti elettroniche dell'area balcanica e del Mediterraneo Mediaterra Festival is an attempt to realize a map of artistic experimental digital & web works of the Mediterranean and Balkan area

Teorie / Theories

> Interactive poems: intersign perspective for experimental poetry di/by Philadelpho Menezes

> La virtualizzazione delle pratiche comunicative: l'ipertesto / Virtualisation Of The Communication Practices: The Hypertext di/by Paolo Ferri

> Scrittura e nuove scienze: Poesia e scienza / Writing and New Sciences: Poetry and Science di by Gio Ferri

Concorsi / Competitions

>"La piazza e il volto"
Concorso a premi per giovani artisti / Competition for young artists
Maquette, film o video, virtual projects for Internet, publications

Libri / books

> Poesia/Poetry Segnalazioni

Reportages
E' successo a... / It has happened...

> Europa Festival di Ferentino / Flash Opera
>
> Jean-Jacques Lebel a Napoli
>
> Teatro Totale / Aree Intermediali / Total Theatre Intermedial Areas / Roma
>
> Artmedia VII / Festival / Salerno - Napoli
>
> Computer, letteratura e filologia / Meeting / Roma
>
> Romapoesia / Africa Poesia / Roma

> Sulmona Cinema. L'ultima estate del 900 / Sulmona Cinema. The last Summer of 900

> Manifestazioni, festivals, convegni nel mondo / Manifestations, Festival, Meetings (Generative art in Milan, Video Festival in Monterrey, other exhibitions)

Link / Links

>I nuovi link / The New Links (Controllate se ci siete! / Control if you are there!)
>Tutti i link di poesia sperimentale / All Experimental Poetry Links di / by Caterina Davinio

Karenina.IT Karenina.IT Experimental Net-Zine
http://www.geocities.com/Paris/Lights/7323/kareninarivista.html

Chosen with care <Links and Books> (but not only)

Updated version of the site KARENINA.IT

karenina.IT is a meeting virtual place, and a site for debate between critics, theories, artists, cultural operators, which realises a map of Italian and international research.

Karenina.it promotes publications, events and relevant initiatives about not commercial experimental projects.

In our pages "Chosen With Care" you are going to find: critical reports, releases, links and information about electronic art, art in the Internet, experimental literature, performative and visual poetry, multimedia, articles about exhibitions, meetings and festivals, editorial news and more.

The site realisation (by Caterina Davinio [redacted]) presents hypertext-visual incursions, which bring in the net and combine with telematic communication some techniques typical of the visual poetry. "Karenina.IT" utilises textual and not-textual objects found in the Internet, digital ready made and fragments of virtual reality; in Karenina the acquisition and the transit of the information is act of the performance and net-art opera structure.

"karenina.IT" co-operates with "Testuale", Italian literary critic review, and has opened a section called "Imaginary Codes" dedicated to techno-cultures, visions and theories of the Net, in which the same titled fanzine from Rome is published.

All the persons interested in our project are asked to diffuse this communication and the site address. English in not our mother language. Who finds some mistakes is asked to send to us a correct version of the texts. People who can translate "karenina.it" Italian pages into English or who can contribute with reports in Italian, English, Spanish or French are welcome!

Karenina.it is an open project. Among the numerous co-operators we remember:

Mirella Bentivoglio (visual poetry), Tomaso Binga, Paolo Guzzi, Massimo Mori (visual, performative and sonore poetry), Antonio Caronia (horror and science fiction literature), Caterina Davinio (electronic writings and arts, videopoetry, literature), Gio Ferri (literary criticism, multimedia), Paolo Ferri (hypertext theory), Marco Maria Gazzano (electronic art, video art), Marco Minicangeli (noir literature), Francesco Muzzioli (literary criticism), Clemente Padin, Philadepho Menezes (experimental poetry), Roberto Terrosi (philosophy & the arts), Tommaso Trini (arts), Nando Vitale (imaginary codes).

For proposing your reports and give information about: theories, books, meeting, manifestations, links or else write to "Karenina.IT" redaction Karenina.it

Or to the art director Caterina Davinio [redacted]

Karenina.it is a production:

Davinio Art Electronics - Archives/Videotheque / Rome / Milan
Art Electronics and Other Writings
http://space.tin.it/arte/cprezi

↑ Index

116. Poetics List
Essays and reviews sought / Sullivan
Wed 8 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Thu, Dec 9, 1999 1:47 AM -0500
From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>
Subject: Essays and reviews sought

Hello everyone,

I've got enough interviews to last me for a while, I think, but I'm really short on essays and reviews. Please get in contact me if you have anything, or would like to work on something, for the Winter 2000 Readme. Deadline's, oh, mid-January, I guess.

Many kind thanks,

Gary Sullivan
Email: [redacted]
Home Page: http://www.jps.net/nada/gsull.htm
Readme: http://www.jps.net/nada

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

117. Tony Green
Re: space is the place
Wed 8 Dec 1999

Todd Baron wrote
Date: Thursday, 9 December 1999 07:36
Subject: space is the place

> thanks to all
> for "first american poem" response.I think the list works best for me
> when
> there is this dialogue. and
> thinking of Robert Duncan and his
> "poetics of co-response" he talked of
> --this--is so important to me.
> so: then: reading "Our Town" , thinking of Williams
> and the particular--and Oppen (Beautiful Particulars, also)
> --what do you think of a poetics of the local (olson?)
> that has the inter-net as place?
>
> per this conversation regarding
> an anthology of poetics from this space.
>
> What happens to place
> when place is
> all over?

according to v recent predictions regarding polar ice-cap melting PLACE is due for some very rapid alteration 70m more water in 5 generations counted as 50 years per generation = 250 years will make the flooding of Venice look like kid's stuff moral:

poetry will have no choice but to make for the higher ground

I send greetings for the festive season from the highest point of Auckland's North Shore, the future Verran's Corner Island

↑ Index

118. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: Jacobs & Kellow Thursday 12/16
Wed 8 Dec 1999

> LEFT HAND READING SERIES PRESENTS:
>
> J. L. JACOBS
> &

> JOHN KELLOW
>
> Thursday, December 16 at 8:30pm
> Left Hand Books, 1825 Pearl Street, between 18th & 19th, above the Crystal Market.
>
> J.L. Jacobs is the author of "The Leaves in Her Shoes," and "Varieties of Inflorescence." A gradaute of the MFA program at Brown, her work has appeared in New American Writing, Talisman and First Intensity, among others. She makes her home in Valliant, Oklahoma.
>
> John Kellow is the publisher of Emerson's Eye Press and the literary arts writer for the Boulder Planet, where he vigorously promotes the work of local authors. This is his debut as a featured reader.
>
> On a personal note: this reading marks the end of my participation as the co-director of the series. Mark DuCharme will continue as co-director and will be joined by the very capable Laura Wright. Please give them your full support. Thanks to everyone who helped make this series such a success over the past two years.
>
> Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

119. Lawrence Upton

Re: Seattle businesses boycott

Wed 8 Dec 1999

Linux?

It's here

L

----- Original Message -----
From: Wright Laura E <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: 08 December 1999 18:12
Subject: Re: Seattle businesses boycott

| It's almost impossible not to use Windows -- tho I hear there's to be a | similar operating system available free- or share-ware soon. BUT one can try
| not to BUY microsoft products, even if one uses them.
|

↑ Index

120. Trace Ruggles
Re: WTO
Wed 8 Dec 1999

Here's one very short article about the Miranda case...
http://news.excite.com/news/r/991207/06/ut-state-news-3

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Brent Long [mailto:[redacted]]
> Sent: Wednesday, December 08, 1999 12:33 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: WTO
>
> I had heard of no such thing myself. Maria, would you mind passing along where you heard/read this? I'm sure you're correct, but I would like to follow this a bit more closely and G-d knows we won't hear much about it from the mainstream media.
>
> Any word on WHEN the SJC will hear this argument?
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Maria Damon
> Sent: Tuesday, December 07, 1999 6:51 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: WTO
>
> apropos this debacle, did anyone see in the paper that the supreme court is going to hear a case challenging the consitutional necessity of the Miranda Laws????what next???this seems as mindbogglingly cynical as their decision, about 7-10 years ago, to no longer hear capital punishment appeals because they were "too costly."
>
> At 12:32 PM -0500 12/3/99, Patrick Herron wrote:
> David Bromige wrote -
>
> Cities will have to live with the fact that the USA allows peaceful assembly of dissidents.
>
> Unfortunately, David, to be quite frank, Amerika DOES NOT allow peaceful > assembly that much any more. The legal protections for peaceful protesters have been disappearing for a long time.

>
> Amerika is a police state. Your only protection in Amerika is money, connections.
>
> Land of the free, home of the brave is really land of the fee, home of the knave.
>
> And then, lest we forget, there's always agent provocateur activities within many political movements in the US, people paid to make the peaceful look violent.
>
> This was a wonderful note, David. I am very glad you shared it with everyone. What you are saying in your note is indeed what is going on. I have a good friend who is at Capitol Hill in the middle of it and I am worried about him.
>
> Under a state of emergency, the city of Seattle made it illegal to use a gaskmask, and the penalty is 180 days in jail and/or a large fine.
>
> Patrick
>
> ---
>
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

121. Poetics List

Miranda news

Wed 8 Dec 1999

With regard to the Miranda ruling, the most recent news of which I'm aware is what follows: a February case held in the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. Likely as not, this is moving forward to the Supreme Court now.

Dismay is not inappropriate, perhaps, but also hinges on the belief that you've always had "the right to remain silent" or that any such right is worth the paper it is written on; I don't suppose, for example, that Miranda was of much use to Abner Louima. An extreme example, perhaps, but there are innumerable cases on record of suspects' rights being infringed upon in varying degrees - from hours-long delays in reading the prepared statement associated with the Miranda ruling to outright violence; In general, I would say there is a strong relationship between race and class on the one hand and protection under the law on the other. It may also be worth mentioning that the U.S. Justice Department has never employed Miranda, having considered the ruling to apply only to state and local police.

This is not to say that Miranda should be over-ruled - and "conservative" groups such as the National Center for Policy Analysis have fought for years to have it done away with - but rather that the degree of protection it actually provides, and to whom, is a questionable matter indeed.

A series of articles by Jan Hoffman, published in The New York Times, may be of interest on this count:

Some Officers Are Skirting Miranda Restraints to Get Confessions (March 29) - Pointing out how the bright line rule has been so weakened by exceptions and workarounds that it no longer has significant meaning.

When Warning Is Little More Than a Speed Bump (March 29) # - Portions of a law enforcement training video on the how # ignoring Miranda has negligible effect on a prosecution.

As Miranda Rights Erode, Police Get Confessions From # Innocent People (March 30) - The how and the why of false # confessions, and why they're so easy when the principles # of fairness inherent in Miranda are ignored.

Of further interest may be this article by Special Agent Kimberly A. Crawford of the FBI Academy, in which she reviews restrictions placed by courts on the use of Miranda, and gives suggestions as to how these restrictions can be used by law enforcement agencies to work around the ruling which, she asserts, "has such an onerous impact on law enforcement's ability to conduct interrogations."

<http://law.tqn.com/medianews/law/gi/dynamic/offsite.htm?site=http://emergency.com/miranda.htm>

Christopher W. Alexander
poetics list moderator

--

In a surprise ruling, a U.S. Court of Appeals has decided that the famous "Miranda warnings," required of police as a precursor to admissible confessions by the U.S. Supreme Court in the 1966 case of Miranda v. Arizona, were actually made optional in federal court by a federal statute passed into law in 1968.

The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, in a 2-1 panel decision last week in U.S. v. Dickerson, ignored the Justice Department's stated policy position to the effect that the statute is unconstitutional under Miranda and subsequent cases. In spite of a complete lack of briefing or argument by the parties, the court chose to take the lead suggested by an amicus (friend of the court) brief, to bring an issue debated in academia to real life.

The majority of the panel found that Miranda is not really based in the constitution, and that as such, it can be and was overruled by the 1968 federal law, which discusses the admissibility of confessions in federal courts.

from About.com
"Miranda Warnings Optional? Fourth Circuit Forces Issue"
Dateline: 02/17/99

<http://law.miningco.com/medianews/law/library/weekly/aa021799.htm?TMog=564 73413572648&Mint=56473413572648&FFV=1>

--

OPINION
Circuit Judge Williams

In response to the Supreme Court's decision in Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436 (1966), the Congress of the United States enacted 18 U.S.C.A. § 3501 (West 1985), with the clear intent of restoring voluntariness as the test for admitting confessions in federal court.

Although duly enacted by the United States Congress and signed into law by the President of the United States, the United States Department of Justice has steadfastly refused to enforce the provision. In fact, after initially "taking the Fifth" on the statute's constitutionality, the Department of Justice has now asserted, without explanation, that the provision is unconstitutional. With the issue squarely presented, we hold that Congress, pursuant to its power to establish the rules of evidence and procedure in the federal courts, acted well within its authority in enacting § 3501. As a consequence, § 3501, rather than Miranda, governs the admissibility of confessions in federal court.
Accordingly, the district court erred in suppressing Dickerson's voluntary confession on the grounds that it was obtained in technical violation of Miranda.

from UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FOURTH CIRCUIT No. 97-4750, U.S.A. versus CHARLES THOMAS DICKERSON

<http://www.law.emory.edu/4circuit/feb99/974750.p.html>

↑ Index

122. Joe Brennan
Re: WTO
Wed 8 Dec 1999

---

what follows is from the Dallas Morning News regarding the Supreme Court review of the constitutional requirement for Miranda rights.....

Supreme Court will review landmark Miranda ruling Little-used law says warning to suspects not always needed

12/07/99

By David Jackson / The Dallas Morning News

WASHINGTON - When Arizona police obtained a confession from Ernesto Miranda in 1963, the Supreme Court responded with one of its most famous edicts: Police must tell suspects they have the right to remain silent and retain a lawyer.

THE MIRANDA WARNING
Since 1966, police nationwide have carried small cards with the warnings that criminal suspects are entitled to receive before being questioned. The wording can vary slightly. Here is a typical version:
â€¢ You have the right to remain silent.
â€¢ Anything you say can be used against you in a court of law.
â€¢ You have the right to the presence of an attorney to assist you prior to questioning and to be with you during questioning if you so desire.
â€¢ If you cannot afford an attorney, you have the right to have an attorney appointed for you prior to the questioning.
â€¢ Do you understand these rights?
SOURCE: Associated Press

Now the high court is having second thoughts, inspired by a 1997 conversation between law officers and Maryland resident Charles Dickerson.

The justices agreed Monday to review the landmark Miranda ruling of 1966, setting up a legal battle royal over the rights of police and defendants, especially low-income and ill-educated ones.

"In the most basic sense, what's at stake is how police are required to protect an individual's constitutional rights," said James W. Hundley, a Virginia lawyer who defended Mr. Dickerson against a robbery charge.

A federal judge dismissed Mr. Dickerson's statements about the robbery, saying officers used them to obtain a search warrant before reading him his Miranda rights.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, based in Richmond, Va., reinstated the case, citing a little-used congressional law passed in 1968.

That law - which says Miranda warnings are not required if confessions are voluntary - has been the legal weapon of choice for lawyers who call the Miranda ruling "pro-criminal."

"There are tens of thousands of crimes that go unsolved every year because of the Miranda rules," said Paul Cassell, a University of Utah law professor who has waged a six-year campaign to overturn the Miranda decision.

The Supreme Court invited Mr. Cassell to participate in arguments next year. The justices will decide the case sometime before July.

Familiar phrases

Thanks to TV cops like Joe Friday, millions of viewers are familiar with the Miranda warning typed onto small cards issued to police officers. Chief Justice Earl Warren supplied the wording in one of his court's most praised and criticized rulings.

The Miranda decision came to symbolize the more liberal approach of the Warren court. In the decades since, the court has grown increasingly conservative, tending to stress police rights over those of defendants.

The case began with the kidnapping and rape of a Phoenix woman on March 2, 1963. Eleven days later, police arrested Mr. Miranda, obtaining a confession after two hours of private interrogation. A jury convicted him and sentenced Mr. Miranda to 20 years.

In appealing to the Supreme Court, defense attorney John Flynn argued that, unlike wealthy or well-connected defendants, an eighth-grade educated indigent like his client had no idea he was entitled to a lawyer.

"He was called upon to surrender a right that he didn't fully realize and appreciate that he had," Mr. Flynn told the high court.

Gary Nelson, an assistant attorney general for Arizona, countered that if police suggested defendants retain lawyers, it would effectively end all interviews.

In writing for a 5-4 majority, Chief Justice Warren stressed the psychological relationship between police and defendants.

He said officers are trained to worm confessions out of people by assuming their guilt, then encouraging them to talk by blaming their problems on society.

"This atmosphere carries its own badge of intimidation," Chief Justice Warren wrote. "To be sure, this is not physical intimidation, but it is equally destructive of human dignity."

Justice White's fears

Dissenting Supreme Court justices accused the majority of exaggerating police misconduct. They also predicted that the court-crafted Miranda rules would return killers and rapists to the streets.

"As a consequence, there will not be a gain, but a loss, in human dignity," Justice Byron White wrote.

Mr. Cassell and other critics say Justice White's fears have come to pass. He cited studies suggesting the Miranda rules have gutted cases, either because the rules shut off interrogations or because police officers committed technical violations in reading the rights.

Supporters of the Miranda ruling said evidence of failed prosecutions is vastly overstated, and that most police groups support Miranda. They said the rules have forced police and prosecutors to act more professionally and work harder to build better cases.

The case that made his name famous did not free Mr. Miranda. Prosecutors went back to Arizona and convicted him on evidence other than his confession.

Eventually released, Mr. Miranda made pocket money by autographing police-issued Miranda cards before he was stabbed to death in a 1976 bar fight.

Mr. Dickerson's journey to the Supreme Court began on Jan. 27, 1997. FBI agents and Virginia police visited his Maryland home to discuss an $876 bank robbery three days earlier in Old Town Alexandria, Va.

Mr. Dickerson first denied any knowledge of the robbery but said he had been in the area when it happened. The FBI then obtained a search warrant for his home. Apprised of this, Mr. Dickerson told the FBI he had driven to Alexandria with a relative named Jimmy, who had a history of bank robberies.

Court records indicate that officers then gave Mr. Dickerson his Miranda warnings, though the timing is in dispute.

The case forces the Supreme Court to consider not only the responsibilities of police and suspects, but the relationship between Congress and the courts.

The more conservative court, led by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, has tended to favor police. But it has also struck down what it perceives as congressional attempts to override court rulings.

Texas case a factor

Two terms ago, in a case involving a Catholic church near San Antonio, the high court slapped down what it called a congressional attempt to overturn a key church-state ruling.

If the court applies the same logic in the Dickerson case, supporters of Miranda said the justices have no choice but to strike down the 1968 congressional law.

"That was the basis for the [Texas] decision: 'We [the justices] make the constitutional rules, you do not,' " said Steven Shapiro of the American Civil Liberties Union.

In upholding the case against Mr. Dickerson, the appeals court chided the Justice Department for not invoking the 1968 law. In a brief to the Supreme Court, Attorney General Janet Reno argued that Miranda is good law and that Congress lacks the authority to tamper with it.

Critics of Miranda said Chief Justice Warren did not give the warnings the status of constitutional rights. Therefore, they added, Congress and state legislatures have the right to set rules for criminal trials.

The congressional law also does not forbid police from issuing Miranda rulings if they choose to, supporters said. Forced confessions would still be forbidden in court, even if the Miranda decision is overturned.

"I don't think the sky will fall," Mr. Cassell said. "The only thing that will change is that criminals won't go free because of technicalities."

↑ Index

123. Poetics List more Miranda
Wed 8 Dec 1999

I did manage to find one more recent article;
this from New York Law Journal for 7 December:

"The Justices [have] agreed to decide whether a federal law overturned ‹ or at least dramatically limited ‹ one of the Court's most famous decisions, one that since 1966 has required police to warn criminal suspects of their rights before questioning them.

To be decided by late June in Dickerson v.
United States, 99-5525, is whether the incriminating statements a Maryland man made to FBI agents should be used as evidence in his bank robbery trial even though he may not have received a proper Miranda warning."

<http://www.nylj.com/stories/99/12/120799a5.htm>

↑ Index

124. Karen Kelley
Fw: Borges, of interest
Wed 8 Dec 1999

Browsing Poetics as a breather from a project to "translate" a paper-based technical manual into a web labyrinth.

Serendipitous link!

> From: f i l c h <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Borges, of interest
> Date: Monday, December 06, 1999 10:13 AM
>
> http://www.salonmagazine.com/books/feature/1999/12/06/borges/index.html

↑ Index

125. Mark Prejsnar
whiteness and poetry
Wed 8 Dec 1999

in the main, though, Aldon's right about the lack of any attention to poetry/poetics in the current interrogations of whiteness--what gives on this?

****

Michael,

in general, you'll find little attention to poetry on the part of theorists who deal with identity politics issues; and indeed, with cultural politics of any sort...

When attention is given, it is likely to be to formally conservative forms of writing that can be "interrogated" without talking back too much: that can be examined as transparent, unproblematic statements or symptoms, without worrying about all that messy artistic stuff which theorists would prefer didn't exist.

Thus the importance and excitement attaching to the theorist/critics who are looking at poetry in relation to the broad public space of race and ethnicity and politics issues....such as listoids Maria and (centrally) Aldon.....

--m.

↑ Index

126. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: CLASS (fwd)
Wed 8 Dec 1999

---------- Forwarded Message: ----------
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: CLASS
Date: Wed, 08 Dec 1999 01:07:39 +0000

Katie, why do you protest so vehemently to posts concerning class and writing? From what position do you justify your argument that discussions of class are in fact separate from discussions of "a poem's actual structure or technique or craft"? What do you deem to be "other interesting things"?
Your post seems quite reactionary to me and I frankly find it disturbing. From whence this vehemence to silence discussions about class "(class/race/gender/blah blah blah)"? Do I really have to make a choice between being one or the other, in your words, roles as "writers or civil rights activists"? What about some of the great contemporary innovative writing by poets who are both?

See, for example, Erica Hunt's Local History. How is it possible to read someone like Hunt without reading race?
without reading class, or gender?
What kind of world is it that you live in where it is possible to separate language from politics? from power?
from race? from class? from gender?
You might want to take a look at work being done in poetics, some of the most excellent by folks on this list.
See, for example, Aldon Nielsen's Black Chant: Languages of African-American Postmodernism, or the volume edited by Charles Bernstein: The Politics of Poetic Form.
Kathy Lou Schultz

↑ Index

127. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: whiteness and poetry
Wed 8 Dec 1999

I agree with this assessment. There's some very interesting work being done on "whiteness" in the social sciences, such as John Hartigan Jr.'s enthnographic studies of poor whites in Detroit and Ruth Frankenberg's ground-breaking work, but literary criticism lags behind.
I think there is opportunity, and necessity, to fill the gap. Any suggestions that people have on work that is being done in this area in lit crit, please tell. I'm very interested in this topic.
Thanks,
Kathy Lou Schultz
> in the main, though, Aldon's right about the lack of any attention to > poetry/poetics in the current interrogations of whiteness--what gives on > this?
>
> **********
>
> Michael,
>
> in general, you'll find little attention to poetry on the part of > theorists who deal with identity politics issues; and indeed, with > cultural politics of any sort...

>
> When attention is given, it is likely to be to formally conservative forms > of writing that can be "interrogated" without talking back too much: that > can be examined as transparent, unproblematic statements or symptoms, > without worrying about all that messy artistic stuff which theorists would > prefer didn't exist.
>
> Thus the importance and excitement attaching to the theorist/critics who > are looking at poetry in relation to the broad public space of race and > ethnicity and politics issues....such as listoids Maria and (centrally) > Aldon.....
>
> --m.

↑ Index

128. George Bowering

Re: Seattle businesses boycott

Wed 8 Dec 1999

> It's almost impossible not to use Windows

I have been using computers at home since the very early eighties, and I have NEVER once used Windows. I would not call that "almost impossible".

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

129. Taylor Brady

A Nonce Theory of Language Surplus, in Solidarity with Certain Non-sense Syllables Reclaimed by Dodie Bellamy (was RE: CLASS)

Wed 8 Dec 1999

Blah blah blah,
"it is a judgment"

*

"This court is generously swayed.
Lunch break, sure. That eight-hour day -- yeah, whatever. Blah blah blah. You will not speak to the court as it speaks to you. Now shut up, get back to work. Our syllables are expensive. You are in debt."

*

...or talk and work, all the same.
Shift by shift the mouth's noise swings
so as to empty out. Talk, cooked, goes raw. Material for a monument, polished to receive inscription, take dictation: BLAH BLAH BLAH.
Roman caps, human-high.

*

I was small, the world less so.
Late from work, or early for the next day, large people read largely from small books to me.
Labored, worked over, beat, gassed, their mouths made many noises.

I can't hear. There is one sound,

now, the huge robot head out front. Hydraulic steel jaws take industry to move. Blah blah blah - blow by blow the breath behind the heated words gets taken up the ducts as steam.

*

I can't hear, but my neighbor owns a wrench. And we will learn by gesture and by sign how to take a hinge apart. Name the sorted salvage with one syllable, the only one it ever made for us. And repeat, and then again, calmer than at first. Second time's a charm, third time a curse.

---------- ...all of which, by way of explaining my sense that Dodie's "blah blah blah" functions very differently from Katie Degentesh's. It's one thing to point out satirically (with Dodie) that someone has named themselves as an accomplice in the ideological administration of culture that wants to reduce the status of class, race and gender therein to a "blah blah blah." It's quite another to be such an accomplice, which is the direction in which Katie's intervention tends.

Yes, poetry can be one way to think the possibility of a world in which class, race and gender as compulsory narratives of origin are perhaps less binding, in which "we" make culture with collective regard to craft and care, rather than (or at least alongside) the overarching question, "Who benefits?" But it doesn't become such a practice simply by living in denial of the damaged world it's handed, on and in which it has to do whatever work it does.

from my "new class" desk job, on my lunch break, Taylor

↑ Index

130. Arielle C. Greenberg
Barbara Guest (& Kenneth Koch)
Wed 8 Dec 1999

A little report on a reading, but first a request: I am planning on writing an essay on Barbara Guest's work, mainly focusing on how it has influenced the currently emerging experimental women poets. But I would love citations or suggestions of critical essays on Guest's work that anyone is aware of. Thanks very much. You can backchannel.

I was in Barbara Guest's master class for poetry this weekend at the 92nd Street Y, and she was elegant and kind and had astute comments. I also attended her subsequent reading on Monday night with Kenneth Koch, introduced by John Ashbery -- were any of you there? It was a mostly older crowd, who seemed a bit baffled by Barbara Guest's work, but also charmed. She has a lovely voice and her work is difficult and challenging in the best ways. She read mostly from _Rocks on a Platter_. Kenneth Koch read from a forthcoming book of "addresses" -- to things, not places he's lived. They were funny and full of energy, and so was he. Interesting to me how differently the two poets have changed over the years, the very alternate courses their work has taken. Barbara Guest seems, despite her apparent distance from "the academic," more and more interested in "the nature of the text" and her work is very different than her early stuff...Kenneth Koch in many ways seems to be writing in much the same vein, though he is dealing a lot with getting older in his work.

Sorry...brief and shallow comments...I am braindead. I'm sure I can be more eloquent and thoughtful if anyone is interested in discussing.

Arielle

* "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I describe." -- Ray Johnson

↑ Index

131. Stephen Vincent
A Spicer Story
Wed 8 Dec 1999

A Spicer Story (sort of)

This last weekend I was on a walk (here in San Francisco) with friends that started at Fog City Diner on the Embarcadero side of Telegraph Hill. We went up the steps to Coit Tower - took in the wonderful murals from the WPA thirties (which are, among other things, a great embodiment of the art, intellectual and political life of the City circa 1939) - went down the hill into North Beach, passed not far from Gino & Carlos to Washington Square Park to take in the Fire Department sculpture/shrine (there's always a recent beer bottle up the outstretched bronze fingers of the Fireman); went up to the SF Art Institute where, on the inside Mission Revival style patio, in progress is a Hollywood style production of a film to be called "The Sculptress" - the dark haired heroine - looking appropriately schoolish and devoted - quotes her lines behind from behind a cut green-leafed tree branch held up on a rod with a metal clamp while we step into the Gallery to look at the splendid Diego Rivera mural: an optimistic, worker centered vertical scaffold vision - including the painter and his assistants - in which City and country are being rebuilt. A fiction upon a fiction. From the Art Institute we walk over the bay side of Russian Hill and take Polk Street down to Aquatic Park where we sit down on the edge of a low, contoured sea wall that separates the narrow beach from the sidewalk, the Maritime Museum building and the matching contour concrete bleachers that rise and overlook the harbor which is almost entirely encircled by the curve of two breakwaters - the view a lovely kind of cement necklace with an opening out to the larger bay with Angel Island and Mt. Tamalpais rising in the distance through a mix of sun, clouds and fog. The beach itself is a full of grey and black, large stones, remnants from the construction of the sea wall and breakwater; their odd wet shapes, some full of myriad angles and planes, once broken apart by steam shovel, sledge hammers, and/or picks. Directly in front of us, in this relatively small vista, a number of the stones are precariously balanced, one on one

– sometimes there are three – standing end upon end, creating improbable geometric figures, a feather-touch from falling over. At the front of two or three receding rows, a thin, olive complexioned man - maybe 12 feet down from us - is crouched on one knee, both hands gripped around a large stone; he holds it up and positions the lower end over another "base" stone and begins to explore the point where a plane on one rock will match and balance itself on a plane of the other. Testing and shifting the balance, he twists and tilts the upper stone - lightly scraping it on the other, moving it up and down one plane, then another. If there's slippage, he pivots the rock and tests it again. He never adjusts the bottom rock, as if that will be somehow to cheat or alter some basic fact. His long, slender fingers resemble those of a piano player; in fact the process of working the stones is perhaps comparable to tuning an instrument, listening for the perfect pitch. Three, maybe five minutes pass. He is patient, very patient and he works as if unquestionably convinced that a singular balance will come to figure. Finally, if the activity were not so focused, one might say "as if by magic" - he finds the tilt, the balance that works; gradually he withdraws his hands to make a complete break and comes out of his crouch to observe the combined shape of the two stones. Spontaneously we clap. "This is a gift," he speaks to us, "I've been given this gift. It takes patience. It is a gift to the City." He sweeps his arm out across the Bay towards the Bay, the islands and Mt. Tamalpais. "This is a powerful place. All that energy comes right to here. To find the balance I just have to be patient. I had to learn patience." There is a faded dark, blue bracelet design tattoo on his wrist, another tattoo up on his forearm, and one on his neck - possibly a gang, prison time or both: a life time totally separate and behind him. As he speaks a small waves knocks over two of the sculptures. “At the end of the day, they all come down. At night the birds need to eat the creatures in the sand without getting injured.” He then asks, "Would someone like to pick a rock? I can work with anything I can lift." One of our friends picks a rock and the process begins again.

In Peter Gizzi's excellent Afterword to his book, The House That Jack Built, The Collected Lectures of Jack Spicer, he describes the late poet in and around North Beach, including his usual afternoon stroll to Aquatic Park - a route not dissimilar to the one we have taken. Here, if he did not meet or gather with other friends, he sat to listen in solitude to the Giants baseball game on a transistor radio. This Park one of those places - an urban version of a sacred grove - where power gathers and takes focus. A place to be open, to take in “the dictation,” those powerful forces from the outside, that could invade the poet’s body anywhere, anytime. To be on the ready - note book and pen on hand – ready to move the words, one by one, into right location. Words, those awkward objects not indifferent from these stones ("the furniture"), their awkward planes and angles, a debris of intractable syllables; words, to which the poet patiently listens, tilts, and pivots until they somehow miraculously conjoin and fit into jagged lines: gravitationally balanced and loaded. Poet and Sculptor - both tested and scarred - strikingly similar and grateful to take the pitches from the "outside." Those forces crossing the Bay out of a vague horizon of cloud, sunlight, mountain and island. The sculptor - as in Spicer's After Lorca - the poet's correspondent: another time, another maker: ...Things do not connect; they correspond. That is what makes it possible for a poet to translate real objects, to bring them across language as easily as he can bring them across time. That tree you saw in Spain is a tree I could never have seen in California, that lemon has a different smell and a different taste, BUT the answer is this -- every place has a real object to "correspond" with your real object...(perhaps as unapparently as that lemon corresponds to this piece of seaweed) and, in turn, some future poet will write something which "corresponds" to them. That is how we dead men write to each other.

- each new sculpture, a new translation. A process continuous.

Cheers, Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

132. Elizabeth Treadwell

Goddess 2000 needs alibis/offerings!

Wed 8 Dec 1999

Forgive any crosspost or etc; this came from the wompo list, and i thought some folks on this list might be interested as well. Elizabeth

-
Call for Submissions

--

ISIS 2000:
The Goddess in the New Aeon

An Anthology of Goddess Poetry

--- --

As part of the Goddess 2000 project, the Temple of Isis Los Angeles is sponsoring an anthology of goddess-oriented poetry. Poet Denise Dumars will serve as editor of the project. The anthology will be published in April 2000 and poetry readings will be held in conjunction with other Goddess 2000 events.

Guidelines:

Poems of high literary value are requested. Despite the title of our anthology, poems need not be about Isis or the Egyptian pantheon. Poetry about goddesses from all cultures are sought, as well as poems about "found" goddesses and cultural and mythological heroines.

Please submit poems in the form in which you would like to see them published: i.e., do not double space unless you wish your poem to be double-spaced in the anthology. Your name, address, and phone number should appear on every page you submit. No length limit as yet, but please, no epics!

All forms of poetry--free verse, formalist, experimental--are welcome. Please no more than five (5) poems per submission, and no reprints. SASE with adequate postage is required. Sorry, no email submissions. Deadline for submissions: February 1, 2000.

Contributors will receive one (1) copy of the anthology per piece accepted and will be invited to participate at poetry readings. A limited amount of artwork will be accepted for this project; artists, please query with samples.

Submissions to:
ISIS 2000
Denise Dumars, Editor
P. O. Box 83
Manhattan Beach, CA 90267-0083

Sponsored by the Temple of Isis Los Angeles/Iseum of Isis Pelagia, part of the Fellowship of Isis, Clonegal Castle, Enniscorthy, Eire (Ireland).

↑ Index

133. Damion Searls

Re: event postings

Wed 8 Dec 1999

>> LEFT HAND READING SERIES PRESENTS:
[...]
>> Thursday, December 16 at 8:30pm
>> Left Hand Books, 1825 Pearl Street, between 18th & 19th, above the Crystal >> Market.

When advertising events on this list, can you be sure to put the city?! (putting it in the message title would be even better).

Thanks,
Damion Searls

↑ Index

134. Maria Damon
Re: whiteness and poetry
Wed 8 Dec 1999

---

i guess the most interesting thing abt this potential field of study would not be, for example, a mere transposition of the insights of "whiteness studies" onto poetic texts or authors, but an investigation into the categories of poetry and whiteness themselves and what special relationship, if any, obtained between them. one might postulate, for example, on how the New Critics/Southern Agrarians conceived of poetry and how that conception came to be socially dominant, in connection with the link (and there was one, very explicitly) between the New Critics and a possessive investment in whiteness. One could also think along lines of specific privileges accorded to whteness and specific assumptions about the "special" place of poetry in literary discourse, and how this specialness is used to render non-white poetries invisible as poetry (i.e. it can only serve as sociological evidence, it isn't "good," etc). certain forms are also associaetd with whiteness, different class statuses and ethnicites within what is generally called "white," etc.

At 3:02 PM -0500 12/8/99, Mark Prejsnar wrote:
>in the main, though, Aldon's right about the lack of any attention to >poetry/poetics in the current interrogations of whiteness--what gives on >this?
>
>*******
>
>Michael,
>
>in general, you'll find little attention to poetry on the part of >theorists who deal with identity politics issues; and indeed, with >cultural politics of any sort...
>
>When attention is given, it is likely to be to formally conservative forms >of writing that can be "interrogated" without talking back too much: that >can be examined as transparent, unproblematic statements or symptoms, >without worrying about all that messy artistic stuff which theorists would >prefer didn't exist.
>
>Thus the importance and excitement attaching to the theorist/critics who >are looking at poetry in relation to the broad public space of race and >ethnicity and politics issues....such as listoids Maria and (centrally) >Aldon.....

>
>--m.

↑ Index

135. Catherine Daly
Re: Humble Seed
Wed 8 Dec 1999

Wasn't this the intent of Sun 'n Moon's Gertrude Stein volumes?

↑ Index

136. levitsk
Fw: demand release of WTO prisoners
Wed 8 Dec 1999

-----Original Message-----
From: Jennifer Flynn <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
<[redacted]>
Date: Wednesday, December 08, 1999 12:09 PM
Subject: Fw: demand release of WTO prisoners

> -----Original Message-----
> From: L.A. Kauffman <[redacted]>
> To: Undisclosed-Recipient:; <Undisclosed-Recipient:;>
> Date: Sunday, December 05, 1999 4:58 PM
> Subject: Fwd: demand release of WTO prisoners
>
> Friends -- A large number of WTO protesters are still being held by the Seattle police.
>
> The WTO actions were a huge success -- show your support and appreciation for what they accomplished by demanding the immediate release of all WTO arrestees:
>
> CALL AND EMAIL SEATTLE MAYOR PAUL SCHELL
> [redacted] [redacted]
>
> CALL AND EMAIL SEATTLE POLICE CHIEF NORM STAMPER
> [redacted] [redacted]
>
> CALL AND EMAIL WASHINGTON STATE GOVERNOR GARY LOCKE
> [redacted] [redacted]

> TELL THEM THAT WTO OR NOT - THE U.S. CONSTITUTION STILL APPLIES!

↑ Index

137. Alan Sondheim

Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)

Wed 8 Dec 1999

If the Net grinds to a halt, traceroute would record this; I could see a lot of broken limbs out there. Surprisingly, since this announcement has gone the route so to speak, there's been very little indication of duplication - one site is doing a visual look at the world, but more in terms of the creation of an overall graphic - I'm more interested in the bones of everything - Alan

Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

↑ Index

138. Simon DeDeo

Re: Class & Poet[ry/ics]

Wed 8 Dec 1999

Aldon --

When talking about the perception of race in poetry, I'm dealing mainly with "mainstream" public discourse, as opposed to study within the academy -- I have no familiarity with whiteness studies, and I hope I didn't claim to. What I'm reporting is more the impression that what the mainstream media often talk about when they talk about a writer's socioeconomic status is the writer's race. The way the local poetry bookstore here, for example, organizes its books is by race.

Now, to a certain extent this ordering makes sense. But it does seem clear to me that I would never walk in to a bookstore and find a shelf "working class poetry", or if I did, I'd know immediately that it was a conscious decision on the part of the manager rather than an acceptance of a particular, commonly accepted mode of putting the bricks in the boxes.

So what do I mean when I say that class can be used as a blind for race? To me, the division of poetry and poetic practice by race is "a bad thing" -- which may play off of some of my assumptions about poetry. Such as, I believe that experimental poetry is a "sensical term", and that experiment implies collaboration, and that collaborations are the most productive and the most interesting when there aren't barriers to entry.

Given that the division is a bad thing, it seems that it should be something talked about, or worked with/on, or at least acknoledged by a group of readers/writers/critics on a self-described avant-garde poetry list. Saying "the real division is class" often amounts to (a) denying, sidelining the problematic of race divisions and (b) suggesting that divisions are a good thing to start making.

For example -- the "outing" of class (a class outing?) on the list a few days back. What purpose does this serve? And would we want to start outing people by race? Given that we didn't bring up race when we talked about the class membership of people on the list -- but many of us probably agree that the problem of class is partly a problem of race -- wasn't the effect of bringing up class in this way effectively a way of avoiding talking about race, a way of apparently discussing socioeconomic status without mentioning race?

-- Simon

↑ Index

139. travis ortiz
Atelos #5 by Lytle Shaw
Wed 8 Dec 1999

Cable Factory 20
by Lytle Shaw

Atelos is pleased to announce the publication of Cable Factory 20, by Lytle Shaw.

About the book:
Inspired by the artist Robert Smithson’s constructed, site-specific convergences, Lytle Shaw has created both a long poem and a complex site for it. The lines of the poem sit amid assorted visual images and atop cartographic backgrounds. This complex layering of verbal and visual vocabularies produces a terrain of enormous fascination and beauty. It is also pertinent to the larger themes of the work, which is about formations and sedimentations — about deposits of meaning and the forms that rise out of or settle into them.

The work (in 20 sections preceded by a four-part prefatory section) is built around terms from geology and from industry. It traces structures and observes workings. Like William Wordsworth in The Prelude, Shaw finds us situated amid these traces, tracing ourselves. “All links pressure skin.” “Sorting can go on indefinitely.” “Letters man the fill.”

About the author:

Lytle Shaw has previously published four poetry chapbooks. Two of these, Flexagon and The Rough Voice, were created in collaboration with the artist Emilie Clark, with whom he edits Shark, a journal of poetics and art writing. The other two, Low Level Bureaucratic Structures: A Novel and Principles of the Emeryville Shellmound , also include visual vocabularies, giving evidence of Shaw's continuing investigations of the relation of poetry to the languages of art and architecture.

He grew up in Ithaca, New York. After studying architecture and literature at Cornell University, he attended the University of California at Berkeley, where he is completing a dissertation on Frank O'Hara. His essays and poems have appeared in numerous publications, including The Chicago Review, Poetics Journal, Qui Parle, and Arshile. He now lives in New York City.

About the project:

Atelos was founded in 1995 as a project of Hip's Road. It is devoted to publishing, under the sign of poetry, writing which challenges the conventional definitions of poetry, since such definitions have tended to isolate poetry from intellectual life, arrest its development, and curtail its impact. All the works published as part of the Atelos project are commissioned specifically for it, and each is involved in some way with crossing traditional genre boundaries, including, for example, those that would separate theory from practice, poetry from prose, essay from drama, the visual image from the verbal, the literary from the non-literary, and so forth. The Atelos project when complete will consist of 50 volumes; Cable Factory 20 is volume 5. The project directors and editors are Lyn Hejinian and Travis Ortiz; the director for production and design is Travis Ortiz; cover production and design is by Ree Hall.

Ordering information:

Cable Factory 20 may be ordered from Small Press Distribution, 1341 Seventh Street, Berkeley, CA 94710-1403; phone [redacted] or toll-free [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted].

Title: Cable Factory 20
Author: Lytle Shaw
Price: $12.95
Pages: 112
ISBN: 1-891190-05-9

↑ Index

140. Louis Cabri
maria damon
Wed 8 Dec 1999

I desperately, immediately need to contact Maria Damon -- Maria -- Damon. Contacting: Maria Damon. Help! Does anyone know how I do it? How! It's Important! Help me! Please, let Maria Damon know I need to get "in touch" with her. If you know how I do this -- thank god! If you know -- great! If, that is, you know.

Very concerned to make contact with Maria Damon,

Shall R. Nameless

↑ Index

141. Nate and Jane Dorward
New Publication: Allen Fisher's _The Topological Shovel_
Thu 9 Dec 1999

A quick commercial break here: the first publication from The Gig Editions, an offshoot of _The Gig_ magazine--

ALLEN FISHER: THE TOPOLOGICAL SHOVEL

This book collects four essays first published in the early 1980s: they form a crucial adjunct to Fisher's poetic sequence _Gravity as a consequence of shape_ but until now have remained difficult of access. The book is in two parts. Part One--“Thumbnail Lecture”, “The Mathematics of Rimbaud” and “The Topological Shovel”--sets forth, in a variety of modalities, the preoccupations that inform _Gravity as a consequence of shape_. Part Two consists of the long essay “Necessary Business”, in which Fisher discusses the work of three contemporary British poets, Eric Mottram, J.H. Prynne and Cris Cheek, as exemplary texts of a poetics of “new pertinence”. _The Topological Shovel_ itself remains pertinent reading to those involved in nonstandard and avantgarde poetics, on either side of the Atlantic. -- A short bibliography gives a list of the main sections of _Gravity_ that have to date been published, with information on how to acquire them.

52pp, large format; $12 Canadian (includes postage within North America) or 6 pounds 50 (includes postage to UK/abroad). Cheques should be payable on a Canadian bank & be made out to "Nate Dorward". Send to: Nate Dorward, 109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada (email: [redacted]).

.....and that's it folks: except that I should mention the planned Feb/March publication of _The Gig_ #4/5, which will be a large (200+pp) perfectbound issue of the magazine devoted to critical articles on the poetry of Peter Riley.

Contributors include Peter Middleton, Bob Perelman, Peter Robinson, John Hall, Simon Perril, Mark Morrisson, Keston Sutherland, Keith Tuma, Nigel Wheale, Lorand Gaspar, Tony Lopez, James Keery, Tony Baker.... et al! Advance subscriptions are very much necessary for this project: those who want copies but have yet to subscribe are urged to drop me a line.

all best --N

Nate Dorward
[redacted]
109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
ph: [redacted]

↑ Index

142. daniel labeau
Lowenthal Request
Thu 9 Dec 1999

Howdy--

I'm in search of Jessica Lowenthal's e-mail address (or alternative contact info.) I would greatly appreciate any help.

Thanks,

Daniel Labeau

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

143. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: space is the place
Thu 9 Dec 1999

YONDER!

(roanoke!)

↑ Index

144. Marla Jernigan
Inspired by the Wake
Thu 9 Dec 1999

--0-1681692777-944762639=:29484

Here is a piece of writing that I contributed to last night and which I thought would be fun to share with this list. It is untitled;

Torcht of evol meroar lube gnots unlight und gotta be thistledine done zhe hynge vise ahms hex thee cancan vhat nobobodi lyk'd. Careful lubed ghosts got mexican in error or meteors me. Back come the ferrous sweed, hasty and seem, hoo she had now have there into bead. The beard about cash, an introductory exploding mint from Japan in the form of the serial.

------ Midnite from Japan.

------ Cabled box cinch and hairy.

The exponent head. In deremy or thriller sun off on his luck in movie over movie.

------ Cahnt reem'ember, I love zomiees'...

------ That's excellent...

Back comes the Lugosi sweed (sword) . . . Raspander nudge in the arksoul hunch of hind. Deliquesium ermine harse pinch the tempt on a fizzle life.

------ Scmoke, Schpinge phai ondler cankersauce vid de dwarphs, degeneraohm, aye, hrit, hri, um. Faeck. On of loid fan sight senancy. I feen so sense dine. Even pie might well thud midget for me, I susperect. I dunt think in wake. Do shoo do. On nyghts when we I. Ressently, some suddent on my wurt patterns unnimble and at linth. Rilly nix. I eed them.

In jinx al ear.

------ Do.

This was written last night, my first time visiting the atlanta poetry group. The evening plan was to take turns reading from Finnegans Wake and see what developed. There was a lot of conversation, and the readings were a lot of fun too. I'll admit that I've always been somewhat scared of this book but after hearing all the different voices reading it last night I'm excited to try and read now.

I've also never written collaboratively before and so this was a new experience for me. Having Joyce in my ear in the hours preceding the writing certainly contributed to writing like I've never written before.

The authors of the piece above were James Sanders, John Lowther, Mark Prejsnar and myself. It's too bad that the other folks in the group, Karen Phillips, Dana Lustig and Ted Ian, had to leave before we got around to writing anything, I would have been curious to see what they would have contributed to the piece.

Thanks to them all for having me and I hope that this list will be amused by the writing above.

Sincerely,

Marla

Do You Yahoo!?
Thousands of Stores. Millions of Products. All in one place.
Yahoo! Shopping.

--0-1681692777-944762639=:29484

<P><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>Here is a piece of writing that I contributed to last night and which I thought would be fun to share with this list. It is untitled;</FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P><FONT face="News Gothic MT" size=3>
<P><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2></FONT></FONT> </P>
<P><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>Torcht of evol meroar lube gnots unlight und gotta be thistledine done zhe hynge vise ahms hex thee cancan vhat nobobodi lyk'd. Careful lubed ghosts got mexican in error or meteors me. Back come the ferrous sweed, hasty and seem, hoo she had now have there into bead. The beard about cash, an introductory exploding mint from Japan in the form of the serial. </FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face="Times New Roman" size=3><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>------ Midnite from Japan. </FONT></FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face="Times New Roman" size=3><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>------ Cabled box cinch and hairy.</FONT></FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>The exponent head. In deremy or thriller sun off on his luck in movie over movie.</FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face="Times New Roman" size=3><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>------ Cahnt reem'ember, I love zomiees'...</FONT></FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face="Times New Roman" size=3><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>------ That's excellent...</FONT></FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>Back comes the Lugosi sweed (sword) . . . Raspander nudge in the arksoul hunch of hind. Deliquesium ermine harse pinch the tempt on a fizzle life.</FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>

<P><FONT face="Times New Roman" size=3><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>------ Scmoke, Schpinge phai ondler cankersauce vid de dwarphs, degeneraohm, aye, hrit, hri, um. Faeck. On of loid fan sight senancy. I feen so sense dine. Even pie might well thud midget for me, I susperect. I dunt think in wake. Do shoo do. On nyghts when we I. Ressently, some suddent on my wurt patterns unnimble and at linth. Rilly nix. I eed them.</FONT></FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>In jinx al ear.</FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face="Times New Roman"><FONT size=3><FONT face=Arial><FONT size=2>------ Do.</FONT></FONT></FONT></FONT></FONT><FONT size=2><FONT face=Arial></FONT></FONT></P>
<P><FONT face=Arial size=2></FONT> </P>
<P><FONT face=Arial size=2>This was written last night, my first time visiting the atlanta poetry group. The evening plan was to take turns reading from Finnegans Wake and see what developed. There was a lot of conversation, and the readings were a lot of fun too. I'll admit that I've always been somewhat scared of this book but after hearing all the different voices reading it last night I'm excited to try and read now.</FONT></P>
<P><FONT face=Arial size=2>I've also never written collaboratively before and so this was a new experience for me. Having Joyce in my ear in the hours preceding the writing certainly contributed to writing like I've never written before. </FONT></P>
<P><FONT face=Arial size=2></FONT>The authors of the piece above were James Sanders, John Lowther, Mark Prejsnar and myself. It's too bad that the other folks in the group, Karen Phillips, Dana Lustig and Ted Ian, had to leave before we got around to writing anything, I would have been curious to see what they would have contributed to the piece.</P>
<P>Thanks to them all for having me and I hope that this list will be amused by the writing above.</P> <P>Sincerely,</P> <P>Marla</P>
<P> </P>
<P> </P>
<P> </P>
<P> </P>
<P> </P>
<P> </P>
<P> </P>
<P><FONT face=Arial size=2> </FONT></P> <P><FONT face=Arial size=2></FONT> </P>
<P> </P>

<hr size=1>Do You Yahoo!?
Thousands of Stores. Millions of Products. All in one place.
Yahoo! Shopping.
--0-1681692777-944762639=:29484--

↑ Index

145. Poetry Project
next week's readings
Thu 9 Dec 1999

Next week at the Poetry Project

Monday, December 13th at 8 pm

Daniel Bouchard & Marcella Durand

Daniel Bouchard's first full-length book, _Diminutive Revolutions_, is forthcoming in Jan/Feb from SubPress. His chapbook, "Wrackline," was published this year by Situations. He is the former editor of Mass Ave and a tenant organizer in Cambridge. He is overall a fine & diligent fellow. Marcella Durand is the author of _City of Ports_, published this year by Situations Press; the poetry editor of Erato Press, a fine-arts and letterpress based in New Orleans; the program coordinator and web-site editor for the Poetry Project; and the one writing this sentence. As pointed out to her this week, this reading will be the last Monday Night Event of the millennium.

Wednesday, December 15th at 8 pm

George Quasha & Charles Stein

Quasha is the author of Ainu Dreams (1999) and the co-editor of several anthologies, including America A Prophecy (with Jerome Rothenberg). With Charles Stein he is the publisher of Station Hill Books. Charles Stein is the author of 10 books of poetry, including _The Hat Rack Tree_. Since the early 1980s, Stein has been at work on _theforestforthetrees_, which he defines as a "textual practice." And yes, this will be the last Wednesday Night Event of the millennium.

Friday, December 17th at 10:30 pm

A Night of Taboos Part II: Closet Cases, Addiction, & Toilets

Featuring readers Cheryl B., Sharon Mesmer, Brian Blanchfield, Morris Kurzman, Douglas A. Martin, and Gojmir Polajnar. This will not only be the last Friday Night Event, etc. etc., but the last event

before our Annual New Year's Day Marathon Reading

Saturday, January 1, 2000, 2 pm - past midnite. With 120 poets & performers including Patti Smith, Jim Carroll, Cecil Taylor, Richard Foreman, Lenny Kaye, Elliot Sharp, Dael Orlandersmith, and many more...$15; $12 for students, seniors & members, but volunteers get in free! (hint, hint) Call [redacted] for more information.

We have no programs from Dec. 20-31, and our office will be closed on Dec. 24th.

***

The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church at the corner of 2nd Ave. & 10th St. in Manhattan. The Project is wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. Please call [redacted] for more information. Regularly scheduled events are $7; $4 for students and seniors.

***

"Rise, all as you are,
let revolt shake the city and seize her!
Come to us in the USSR
I'll see to it
you all get a visa!"

-Vladimir Mayakovsky, "Paris (Chatting with the Eiffel Tower)"

↑ Index

146. Louis Cabri
Open Letter Call for Letters
Thu 9 Dec 1999

The "Open Letter" issue of _Open Letter_ magazine

CALL FOR OPEN LETTERS TO POETS

Deadline: 28 February, 2000

We invite open letters to contemporary poets -- addressed across generations, aesthetic tendencies, communities, political boundaries. Letters received by 28 Feb. will be forwarded to the poets addressed; addressees will have a chance to reply and be included in our "Open Letter" _Open Letter_ Spring issue. We will consider publishing letters and responses, and letters that do not receive responses, and also poetry -- where doing so brings out a particular juncture of debate.

We are interested in complicating given literary lineages, in overturning abstract categorizations of poets' methods and socio-aesthetic formations, in rediscovering and questioning received critical formulae concerning a poets work or milieu, and in bringing about new close and historical readings and critiques. In this special issue of _Open Letter_, we want to emphazize the dialogic, analytical and constructivist possibilities of address to and between poets and socio-aesthetic tendencies, by means of the open letter's form of public intimacy. Our focus, then, is on the discursive letter, rather than on the poetic form of the letter (which has recently been explored in _Chain_ 6).

Our intent is to complicate how kinds of poetic "positions" articulate themselves, and are articulated, and are perceived as available and "occupied" in contemporary poetries-as aesthetic tendency, method, point of group identification, etc.

A willful return to a dated technology, but a return that harkens to founding motives of Open Letter magazine: the open letter. This special issue hopes to contribute to the current forums and formats available for poetic discussion. These include the Buffalo poetics listserv (and _Poetics@_, its recent anthology), the _PhillyTalks_ newsletter, which presents poets in written dialogue (and which this project most resembles), the question/answer model of _99 Poets_ (and its predecessors, back to _L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E_), the poet's talk as collected in, e.g., _Writing/Talks_, and the poet's essay -- from _Curriculum of the Soul_ to _Poetics Journal_, _Tripwire_ or _Shark_.

For inquiries, and to send your letter, please contact either of the editors:

Louis Cabri
[redacted]

Nicole Markotic
[redacted]

529B - 19th Ave S.W.
Calgary, Alberta
Canada T2S 0E3
(403) 283 - 1967

↑ Index

147. Simon DeDeo
let's hear it for J H PRYNNE! / Hollo
Thu 9 Dec 1999

...but then, there's the question of whether or not one wants to lend any kind of legitimacy to the proceedings. That Pyrnne was on the list surprised me (argh! I confess! I read the New Yorker!) But given the sorry state of the New Yorker's poetry these days ("no shoes, no shirt, no status as canonical writer, no service"), why sign your name to the current marketing techniques of "big press poetry", where a little sop to the "hip" is like the salsa with turkey.

The only reason I can think to bust out the vote for Prynne would be that if he made a decent showing, more might read his work.

-- Simon

↑ Index

148. Toni Simon and Nick Piombino

Arcades Project-Walter Benjamin

Thu 9 Dec 1999

Apropos of the Seattle W.T.O. Meeting and Mayor Guiliani's banishment of the homeless:

"Of the coming society, it is said that 'nothing in the sanguinary, blasphemous, or unnatural dreams of the utopians can be compared to what will actually happen. . . .Rulers will be compelled, in order to maintain their position and create a semblance of order, to resort to methods that would appall present-day mankind, hardened as it is. . . .Justice- if, in this fortunate epoch, any justice can still exist- will forbid the existence of citizens who are unable to make a fortune. . . .those times are perhaps quite close at hand. Who knows whether they are not here already- whether it is not simply the coarsening of our natures that keeps us from noticing what sort of atmosphere we already breathe?'" Ch.B(audelaire)., Oeuvres, vol. 2,pp.640-641. [p.315, The Arcades Project; Walter Benjamin, Harvard U.P., 1999]

Nick Piombino

↑ Index

149. Nate and Jane Dorward

Fw: Addendum re: _Topological Shovel_

Fri 10 Dec 1999

A query from Lawrence Upton on the British-Poets List about foreign currency payments prompts me to post the following. --N

Nate & Jane Dorward
[redacted]
109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
ph: [redacted]

From: Nate and Jane Dorward <[redacted]>

To: Lawrence Upton <[redacted]>
Cc: British-Poets List <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: New Publication: Allen Fisher's _The Topological Shovel_
Date: Thursday, December 09, 1999 11:47 AM

Lawrence: thanks for pointing out the unclarity in the announcement (& the omission):

1) "payable on a Canadian bank" doesn't mean it's in Canadian funds or written from a Canadian bankaccount: it just means that it's a (UK or US) cheque (in UK or US funds) which my bank here will accept. Actually, most UK or US cheques are just fine here--I've only ever had one intractable problem (a cheque from the Poetry Library). The best thing to do is just to tell the teller at the bank what you're trying to do & ask if there will be any problems. -- If you decide to go with Canadian funds it's $15 Cdn to send one to the UK.

2) yes: Peter Riley (Books) will have the _Shovel_ for sale. Address: 27 Sturton St., Cambridge, CB1 2QG, UK; email: <[redacted]>.

I should lastly point out that the first volume of _Brixton Fractals_ has been recently reprinted by Tsunami Editions (Vancouver). I have a few spare copies if someone wants to purchase both the _Shovel_ and _Fractals_: the combined price would be $21 Cdn/ $15.50 US / 10 pounds 50 UK. It's also obtainable through Peter Riley or direct from Tsunami (#14—1507 East 2nd Ave., Vancouver, B.C., V5N 1C8, Canada; email: <[redacted]>).

all best --N

Nate Dorward
[redacted]
109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
ph: [redacted]

↑ Index

150. Katie Degentesh

Hey! Katie's on the radio

Fri 10 Dec 1999

Friends, fans, felines and foes:

Please tune in to 93.7 FM this coming Monday, December 13th at 7 pm, when I will read my own work and discuss the Bay Area "poetry scene" with Michael Disend on his San Francisco Liberation Radio show, "Wild Dog Wisdom."

↑ Index

151. Alan Sondheim

rush1-5//

Fri 10 Dec 1999

/

rush // going into the frame buffer then out and lowering the pedestal before sending to the toaster where it coagulates with a frozen wipe set half-way according to the other half of the connection from the hi8 camera through the effects generator and the whole running into the other hi8 camera and connecting with the line input from the audio mixer and the effects box lined up with the mirage and guitar effects box, time base correctors all over the place for field freezing and signal corrections, eye always on the waveform monitor and vectorscope among the analog machines connected and interconnected with adobe premier and the relatively slow pc with the huge hard-drive getting its images from the hi8 output before closing out and slowly losing sync running through the toaster, the guitar set hard through the marshall amplifier raising and peaking the harmonics, cutting them out at the lean sound, shakuhachi and voice combined, azure and me on the floor, on the chair, microphones everywhere, the bolex tripod doubling as whole worlds look down on us, us, us

rush ii / new 3/4" edit deck replacing old worn-out broken belt, color camera connector held together by tape, hi8s freed for camera work, this 3/4" does insert so black-bursting at the moment through the toaster, setting up the 1970s character generator for the block look, beginning working this morning, now it's operating fine in roll crawl and grid mode, worked with the quicktime images today, as well as azure-ballet and other supporting or non-supporting materials, hokey guitar playing, some mirage as well but a great deal of speech processing, i had wanted to go that route, meanwhile insert editing didn't quite work without rollback on the hi8 cameras so i've been rerecording and cutting into the original 3/4" work since the hi8 rollback is ok for recording then rerecording with time base corrector and noise reduction into and through the matrix, constantly reworking the patchcords, also using the analog synthesizer this afternoon in order to switch between three cameras controlled with a voltage-controlled amplifier which then went into the effects on the toaster 4000 and out again through the usual checkups including phase which is always slightly off and pedestal always fiercely lowered, using the audio echo only sparingly and recording a long sequence with azure- ballet on the laptop and shooting off it with the hi8, then transferring it to the other hi8 with the tine base corrector and noise reduction to begin the sequencing described here

rush3 // azure in korean wedding dress and an abacus will play a role, reed flute, egyptian _nay,_ already at work for sound, moved all the equipment i brought to one end of the loft for more room, getting ready for still photography, using the frame buffer again for comical alan waving the _nay,_ color camera placed in position, buffer creating noh images across the repetition and slow movement, facial closeups as one image is always slightly displaced from the other, the phase controls transforming colors into jades, will be a silent work except for clacking on occasion, nothing more, sound of abacus beads in noh rhythm framework, _nay_ playing improving, thinking about finnish folklore, shaman songs, noh plays again, some things from the upanishads, the equipment still silent behind me, decided not to use any of those things, looking at noise in the old 1970s text generator, it's forced into on-screen characters, just like a dream is forced from neural noise, thinking perhaps make a piece with all of this, the dreamwork of the machine manifest in a text which takes the indecipherable murmurings of the universe one step further

rush4 // or if not the universe one step further those insidious sysadmins who keep my day to a minimum of pleasure, stepping on my fabulous trace- route plans, one warning that if i had my way, y2k would look like a holi- day. if i were so lucky, the net would collapse of its own, one dialup connect to a happy isp and real audio or another duke nukem out of date saga and there goes the planet. meanwhile the hunger of the equipment calls me forth; it's roaring behind me; i can't escape it, or my depres- sion, which has deepened, bad sleep even here, my job worries following me everywhere, i live with death, i don't want to spend the next several dec- ades pathetically looking for work, my knowledge means nothing, i'm not a man blah blah, i'm not even human blah blah, i'm too full of self-hatred blahblah, i'm my own worst enemy blahblah, blahblahblablablablablblblbbbb, i don't know how azure puts up with me, or why, i must have my moments, they just don't stick around, back working with noise in the machine, the master tape has too much dropout (3/4"!), i'm sending through the time base correctors again and adding noise reduction by copying it to the hi8 5000 camera, back and forth, meanwhile the tr81 records tapes that jitter in the 5000, but the 5000 records tapes that play fine in the tr81 and the tr81 tapes play fine in it as well, recording out in bitter cold susque- hanna river, working the keying in the toaster and trying for a third source after recording electric guitar through air coupling (marshall amplifier, effects, etc. into microphone then into mixer and additional effects, resonating in the room for added texture, keeping the whole in balance), adding nay material to the five-second-delay setting, along with new shakuhachi work, now i work at dancing on the guitar too fast to see my hands, want that freedom of pure touch ahead of visual feedback, here i am on such and such a fret, need the internal roar, that's all i have left of me, this this this this this, this internal roar

rush5 // the harder days are those when i'm down, working through it, my music perhaps better, the video veering however into uncomfortable terri- tory, as if i want my truths, but veiled. veiled truth - because the ob- verse is death of course. today working with azure again, keying in water images against a very flattened and somewhat hysteric to-be-determined studio imagery, as well as more musical recording. i worry that my hands will slow up; arthritic, i'll re- member the fingerboard of the guitar, al- most a physical memory, the very _thick_ of it, but not the skill the ab- ility to move fast, produce the complexity called for by the mind. when my fingers are invisible, it's the physical against the physical, sound com- ing in from the remnants of the world, what i can see, if i could see the things of space that make the air what it is, air-mountains and valleys, air-trees and rivers, all the air-creatures of this or any other earth. went out riding to johnson city, the village of johnson city, saw a very old working carousal there, as well as a pagoda housing parts of an elec- trical plant, which i photographed, came back and did another 45 minute music tape, only record- ing on one side, my fingers hardly moving at this point, but very satisfied with the sound, going for the shakuhachi later, it's dark out, river's right outside the window about twenty meters down, i've been feeling physically a lot healthier since i've been here, what a surprise, working with a digital delay system and upped it to 32 seconds for late-night recording and working with a digital short- wave as well, put up the antenna east/west this evening, only direction really possible in the building, working with themes of alienation, seduction, gender, the psychoanalytics of the image, the haunting of the imaginary - which brings up this intensive work with largely analog equipment, reading the old waveform monitors once again, tweaking everything from phase to gain to offset to pedestal, this _visual_ state-of-affairs, riding a system that refuses constructivity - the only subtext is that of the ntsc signal it- self, and the rest is amplitude, fre- quency, etc., with the delay, symbols for queen, mouth, wheel, superimposed over disheveled azure mouthing aah, my aah as well off-camera, she's in an open kimono, nothing revealed, glazed look, tripods everywhere, my mouth's long aaah in background, this for an evening, but this mindset of the analog, stringing units in any direction, shortwave in the background looking for num- bers stations, it's the spectral mother all over again, voices, voices, voices

---

↑ Index

152. Leonard Brink

Re: CLASS (fwd)

Fri 10 Dec 1999

First of all, let me admit that I haven't been following this thread all that closely because it bores me, and that I might be missing something as a result.
But I do find it odd that Katie's very mild post is characterized as "vehement" and "reactionary" simply because she expresses a point of view that isn't consistent with the political hegemony/correctness that is the dominant discourse on this list.

Kathy Lou asks:
>What kind of world is it that you live in where it is >possible to separate language from politics? from power?
>from race? from class? from gender?
Of course language can't be seperated from any of those things. They're made out of language. Poems are made out of language, too. But it just doesn't follow that poems are made of politics, class, etc.

↑ Index

153. Roger Day
Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)
Fri 10 Dec 1999

Umm. You miss my point :-) You could be part of the problem. Traceroute will generate a large amount of traffic in it's own right.

At 1999-12-08 23:30:49, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote: # If the Net grinds to a halt, traceroute would record this; I could see a # lot of broken limbs out there. Surprisingly, since this announcement has # gone the route so to speak, there's been very little indication of # duplication - one site is doing a visual look at the world, but more in # terms of the creation of an overall graphic - I'm more interested in the # bones of everything - Alan # # Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt # Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html # Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm #

Roger

↑ Index

154. Mark Prejsnar
sociology of bookstores
Fri 10 Dec 1999

Simon DeDeo writes:

"The way the local poetry bookstore here, for example, organizes its books is by race.

Now, to a certain extent this ordering makes sense. But it does seem clear to me that I would never walk in to a bookstore and find a shelf "working class poetry", or if I did, I'd know immediately that it was a conscious decision on the part of the manager rather than an acceptance of a particular, commonly accepted mode of putting the bricks in the boxes."

****

The overall shape of poetry in bookstores, tells us some interesting things about the current shape of culture. I have not seen too many stores that "organize their books by race," and the idea is pretty fascinating. When i lived in Boston, the magnificent poetry bookshop, Groliers, had essentially two sequences: almost all books of poetry, organized alphabetically by author, and a separate sequence taking up about three shelves, labelled Language Poetry. As the Boston poet Joe Torra pointed out to the owner, this was surely a major ghettoization kind of move, and represented a sharp (albeit ambiguous) statement....

I've just noticed Simon is writing from a Hahhvahd account: it isn't the current arrangement at Groliers you're referring to is it?

--m.

↑ Index

155. f i l c h

Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate

Fri 10 Dec 1999

Traceroute is a simple event. Very little data is moved. The idea that this could cause the net to have problems is crazy. Even with all the other stuff to be moved on that date. I would suggest that with most businesses shut down the actual traffic on the network on the changeover will actually be smaller than average and certainly smaller than peaks from the past

It sounds to me like a great idea to map the hops at the change to the new year.

It seems pointless to refrain from doing this because of concerns about network stability.

Just my 2 cents.

filch

> From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> Date: Wed, 8 Dec 1999 18:30:49 -0500
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: The Traceroute Project - Please Participate (fwd)
>
> If the Net grinds to a halt, traceroute would record this; I could see a lot of broken limbs out there. Surprisingly, since this announcement has gone the route so to speak, there's been very little indication of duplication - one site is doing a visual look at the world, but more in > terms of the creation of an overall graphic - I'm more interested in the bones of everything - Alan

>
> Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt
> Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
> Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

↑ Index

156. David Kirschenbaum
Call for Submissions: Booglit 7: The Baseball Issue
Fri 10 Dec 1999

Call for Submissions: Booglit 7: The Baseball Issue

Deadline 1/15/2000, Publication Date 3/15/2000

This issue will focus on the life and death of Pee Wee Reese and the 45th anniversary of the Brooklyn Dodgers only world championship, and be put together with the assistance, and feature an essay by, his son, Mark. It will also concentrate on the literary communities of Louisville, Kentucky--Reese's birthplace--and Brooklyn, New York.

I am especially looking for work on baseball, and work by Brooklyn and Louisville authors. General creative work is also accepted from the at-large community with no thematic or geographical restrictions.

Editorial Staff:
Anselm Berrigan, baseball poetry editor; Kent Fielding (White Fields Press) Louisville editor; and Chris Stroffolino, Brooklyn editor.

Submit up to five poems or pages of poetry, prose (includes reviews, interviews, and journalism, too), or artwork to:

David Kirschenbaum, editor
Booglit
351 W.24th St., Apt. 19E
NY, NY 10011-1510

Atnn: BL7

Email inquiries to: [redacted]

as ever,
David

Get FREE voicemail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com
Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

157. Poetics List Administration

Bernadette Mayer, David Byrne & the Marquis de Sade in latest Rain Taxi (fwd)

Fri 10 Dec 1999

---

this came the administrative account.

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Friday, December 10, 1999, 11:51 PM -0500
From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Bernadette Mayer, David Byrne & the Marquis de Sade in latest Rain Taxi

Rain Taxi Volume 4, No. 4 is now available.

Interviews with: Bernadette Mayer (by Bridget Shields) and David Byrne (by Eric Lorberer)

Rikki Ducornet, Rod Smith and David Eton on the Marquis de Sade

Reviews of new books by Mumia Abu-Jamal, Claribel Alegria, Anselm Berrigan, Edmund Berrigan, Angela Carter, Robert Creeley, Connie Deanovich, Laurie Foos, Jamie Gordon, John High, Agymah Kamau, Robert Kelly, Yoshitaka Kiyama, Paul Lisicky, Lisa Lubasch, Laura Mullen, Terri de la Pena, Georges Perec, Lynne Tillman, & dozens more ...

"The New Life" ... my serialized cartoon, "Living with Chris"

"Critical Issues," Erik Belgum & I discuss the "Artistic Ruboff" concept & much more.

Subscribe & help keep this lively quarterly afloat! Cheap!

1 year/$10 international/16

RAIN TAXI
Eric Lorberer, Editor
P.O. Box 3840
Minneapolis, MN 55403

www.raintaxi.com

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

158. Poetics List Administration

Group 4, response to DuPlessis and Bellamy (fwd)

Fri 10 Dec 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Please make sure you send posts you want forwarded to the list to "[redacted]", not the "acsu" account. Thanks

_____

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Friday, December 10, 1999, 2:53 PM -0500
From: "Stefans, Brian" <[redacted]>
To: "'[redacted]'" <[redacted]>
Subject: Group 4, response to DuPlessis and Bellamy

I'm wasn't really sure how to respond to your post, Rachel, except perhaps to recycle some arguments from Sianne Ngai's "Poetics of Disgust" essay, which I don't have on hand. It seems, nonetheless, to have something to do with the "good doo doo" (a quote from a Deanna Ferguson poem) aspect of the "abject" corner of Language writing, and I guess is forcing a consideration of the ugliness of its clashing syllables versus the relative clarity of the references to thinkers such as Kristeva (whom I've never really read) and Freud. And to suggest, elsewhere, that the "dream" permits a sort of never coming to "terms" with gender, which I suppose is a position I am attracted to (I tend to call it enforced adolescence, hence putting it in a social scale) though would not quite know how to declare. McCaffery on semantic slippage in bpNichol's wordplay also comes to mind, but I'm not sure whether I should interpret the text or respond to it on its terms (a little of both, it seems). However, now that my stream-of-nothingness is running full speed, here is a direct connect:

I was reading Paul Goodman's Growing Up Absurd this morning on the subway, a book which is kind of boring to read all the way through, and when it's least boring it seems rather wrong, but nonetheless interesting as an attempted dialogue with a generation much younger than him, the Beats in the case of the chapter I find interesting. He writes, concerning the sexuality of the Beats:

"So perhaps another reason for their dropping the old physical jazz and revival is just the opposite, that the display of energy would upset their coolness, it would be embarrassing to make them feel too young. I wonder if this is not the simple explanation of their disdain of social dancing as "dry" sex; for certainly one of the reasonable uses of social dancing is body contact and sometimes sexual foreplay. But these boys are embarrassed to get an erection, to betray feeling, in public, though they are more than willing to take their clothes off and exhibit themselves, or to beat a drum wildly in public as an exhibition for the others, but not as contact with them." (182)

This addresses one paradox, as the purported "freedom" associated with running around naked that is held up against society's repression actually comes up cold in those moments within society in which "sexual foreplay" can be enacted in public. I remember reading in Habermas about the sixties political youth movements that there was a certain narcissism present in much of this activity that would limit the actions to displays, but that there was no chance for them to take the majority role once anything was achieved as their self-image would be disrupted. I think of this a fair amount (poets should dress like bankers, Auden once wrote), as I wonder how many are willing to make this flip from performative disdain to responsible member of a community should that community gain political weight, or whether anyone cares about this. Elsewhere Goodman writes of these male Beat poets have a "healthy sexuality" in fact, but he sees the role that women played in the community as primarily maternal, with the young men bursting into tears the moment someone like Kenneth Patchen says their poetry's childish, and the woman poet stepping in to coo reassurances in their ear. This seems a little opposite of what we generally take to be the story of the Beat era, whose best poets were gay and whose women poets were often radical individualists (is that a word?) but had been excluded from the male-centered self-canons. But Goodman makes it clear that "Beat" and "artist" were not synonymous (he argues many points regarding this), hence, though there were hundreds of people keeping notebooks and drawing pictures and calling themselves "artists", few had a framework for viewing the world in terms of social relations due to the pure excitment of the Beat community itself as experience. (This brings to mind something tangential: we all bitch and moan about how the "community" is not fer real today, it's just some pose, but actually, were the community to be as exciting and self-concerned as the Beats, we might have worse poets -- who knows.)

Anyway, to bring this back to Dodie's essay, there seems to be a paradox present in that she writes she is "working towards a writing that subverts sexual bragging, a writing that champions the vulnerable, the fractured, the disenfranchised, the sexually fucked-up," and at the same time would not want one with "x-ray vision" to see the "frayed elastic on my panties." Her essay itself, which argues for the person for whom "EAT SHIT" could be an erotic suggestion, seems to set up a forceful argument along the lines of "you must take all of this in to 'qualify' as a radical" via a very performative language -- she don't mince words -- and yet at the same time looks at the "vulnerable," and where radical sexuality crosses with social pose in the many anecdotes later on. So the abstraction of the "body", she argues, should be brought to some specific materiality probably through anecdote (as she is a prose writer), but on the other she as the reader becomes vulnerable once this body appears in the writing -- hence the challenge, the need for form in presenting oneself. Both pure abstraction -- leaping from critical term to critical term -- and pure exhibitionism -- as I've heard at several New York poetry readings and probably not for the last time: "here is a poem about my CLITORIS" (hahaha goes the audience) -- fail because they don't engage with the struggle with form.

Well, I'm not asking everyone, i.e. these writers of the latter group, to mature; as I wrote above, I think the pre-adolescent mode of writing is perfectly legit (Rimbaud haunts this discussion, I feel, his sonnets about seeing the erect dicks of bulls at the county fair, for instance, combined with his Catholicism). However, it seems that part of the challenge is using this erotic tendency to "do good" in a way. I think some writers are doing this now, or are beginning to: a book I've received recently, by a guy named Garrett Caples, takes on the lack of eroticism in what he considers the "Victorian" underpinings of the Language poets is a case in point. So here is a younger poet using performatively "vulgar" language (the poem is called "Humped by Barrett Watten") to somehow address larger social issues, while trying to avoid what he would probably consider the castration of abstract terminology and the social control of theoretical models. I'm sure some people consider him inarticulate, mean, or completely untalented to do this in the way he does, but I think he's interesting precisely because his pose (or reality, who knows when he wrote these) is of an adolescent refusing to give up the directness of his pre-discursive, poly-sexual experience while keeping his eyes on the future, which is that of social scales of meaning, and potential conformity. (Some of the poems are really very good, a sure improvement on the "Beats", though tied to a nostalgic surrealism.) To quote Dodie on Samuel Delaney: "Hogg constantly compels the reader to choose one filth-laden situation over another, when most of us would simply want to be rid of the entire set of experiences." In language, this "set of experiences" would be words that are deemed counter-discursive, words of "disgust," the Calibanic perhaps, but also the discursive content when it is deemed offensive to sexual mores. So, Hogg forces us to conceive of a hierarchy of values, a structure, where once was a shit-mound of unassimilable experience; once this structure is conceived, what's to stop one from attaching it to the larger ethical structures we associate with democracy?

I feel like I could go on with this -- wanted to mention the new law against distributing "crush" videos, which I've read about in the Voice (I don't think cute animals should die for anyone's sexual pleasure myself) -- but this is probably too long.

Attached to this email, however, is a little poem that uses the words of Rachel's text. I ran some computer processes on it; actually, all I did was alphabetize the words in it and then construct shorter poems from them. However, various faults in the method left a cluster of non-alphabetized words at the top, and words that appear after m-dashes and slashes are not alphabetized. These processes usually display the formless subconsious of certain texts, but it's hard to imagine a subconscious to Rachel's text -- it's so "exposed" -- so this actually provides a superego for it. Change or add to it what you will.

Ok, gotta run.

***

One Or Two Things I Don't Know About Her or, "Dick's Sister" (Bellamy)

probably after Stacy Doris and Eugen Gomringer en gender gin half

-- hilfen "in "the
(and (as (ewe
"fixed-gendered, handsome!"
-- sad said sass.
(to (tri?) (try?) (you ®

a
a
a
A a -- abilities about abut aching ad again age
-- AGIT all all all all all (alley) although am am amend an and anywhere, are are are argument:

"Arthur" as "Aye!"

Behoove Bellamy bellum
Ben bend Bi Bi Big bike binaries/ bo/ Borders, But butt Buy Caucasians

Character?
chimneysweeper christ,
cinder cixous.
Com-round, combinatory:

come come) comes
-- conventional cunt curse...
cycle.

dear dear Dear Deer delays, delft delicious delight" delite dentist dewy--eek dick's "ding ding" (diplomatic Dodie).

dread dream dream dream dream dream, dream, dream. dream?
drip duh duh e'en ease eddy, efficacious.

elf email emerge,
endless endocrine! enter enterprised

err est esteem, evenup everything experience extra exude eye

farce fed fellows:
female:
femur fittest
flaws flogs follows:

Food for Freud.
fustian gender gender gender gender -- gender gendered genders, -- german gill gizmo gimmick good grownup guess

had hair hairiest half has hat

he hearing heft height -- touché herd here: hershey hex

hey Hi. his hiss hole horses hose hulk

hypersaturated/ I I I I I'd I'd Id id'd iden-tiff identified ideologies. ides' if images in in in in in in in in in in in In In In indeed!

ink, inner inscriptions
-- intel is issue

Itty jeeze Jewel Djinn journal juice. Julia just juxtapose kiss knives know know -- the knowy = Kristeva - hyperidentifications land lass laws leveling lice lift like lisp live lives loaves" loll lords love love male mammary many many/ material. maternal.

me me me mean member,
men mends/ might mite
mixed moan modify mollify moo more Moving mule
mut my ned nepal nigh, night" night
"-- to night. night. night? nil) ninja nipple nixed no no no no no no no
-- de non.

not. now Nuns o
Oat oedipality,
oedipality.
oedipality?
oedipalized

oeuf of oh.
oi'd. older

on once one's ooze.
open or organ our outside ovulate... ow owed owl

own oz.

pace page pal pallas part pecs penies pennies people, per perp personal/social perverse, phallic pip) place plenty ploy poesy pointing poison/special Policy polly
Poly poly-gendered Polymorphous possibilities

pre-gender pre-oedipal prejudgment pride pull purposes R, rare RE: ream, ream. ream? rear, regressive relationships

Relay Riding, ring Rizzo.
rogue.

roods rote rough round. rules, sad said sans sane saturn

Say say say--gender scents.
Scissors scream.
Script sect self.

Semiphor send sensations...." sense sensual set sew Sex-sexual--to sexual.
sexuality sexuality sexuality sexuality sexualized. sez shape

she shuns simple sin single sister, sit sleeping sleeping sleeting slits snatch) snot. snow so some something spear special, spice staged stations...." strafe such sum sum sun swannery system talking tea tea tea? tea?

tear

tease, tease.

terrific--hipro that's the
the the the the the
the the the the the
the the the the the the think, third) thirl this tic Tide tifications

Tim) time) tinny Tiny

tips, tit titwillow'd, TKTK

to tock tool.
tripled, troubled tryst
tup. uglies.

um un unconscious
under up. ur us
--Every us.

utterby vaginies,
van Vatically versicle, Vertically vitamin ways.

we we
We
we--each wear wed
weenie weigh.
Weiner were Wet wetter where whisper who widow wills
wiper with writing wrote ya yam yon you you you you you You've youall your z
z
Z

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

159. Ron Silliman
Vote for Prynne
Fri 10 Dec 1999

The reason to vote for Prynne is to demonstrate the difference in quality between what is being written these days and what gets published in the New Yorker itself.

Prynne, in this sense, could be any one of us. It's fine that it's him.

Ron Silliman

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

160. Jerrold Shiroma
Re: sociology of bookstores
Fri 10 Dec 1999

Well, Borders for one (where, I admit, I work) arranges literature via literature, with subsections (i.e. numbering systems for inventory purposes) for "African-American" literature, as well as another subsection (which is actually a subsection of the general psychology section) for Gay-Lesbian literature (which includes fiction as well as poetry...&, on a more interesting note, Gertrude Stein, Oscar Wilde, Jeanette Winterson, are included in the general literature section, while Robert Duncan, Jack Spicer, etc. are included in the general poetry section...although Justin Chin & the one book by Camille Roy are both in the Gay/Lesbian section). No other race (i.e. Asian-American, Chicano, Native American, and so on) &/or group are represented as such in the literature section.

-----Original Message-----
From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
<[redacted]>
Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 11:56 AM
Subject: sociology of bookstores

>Simon DeDeo writes:
>
>
>"The way the local poetry bookstore here, for example, organizes its

>books is by race.
>
> Now, to a certain extent this ordering makes sense. But it does >seem clear to me that I would never walk in to a bookstore and find a >shelf "working class poetry", or if I did, I'd know immediately that it >was a conscious decision on the part of the manager rather than an >acceptance of a particular, commonly accepted mode of putting the bricks >in the boxes."
>
>*******
>
>The overall shape of poetry in bookstores, tells us some interesting >things about the current shape of culture. I have not seen too many >stores that "organize their books by race," and the idea is pretty >fascinating. When i lived in Boston, the magnificent poetry bookshop,
>Groliers, had essentially two sequences: almost all books of poetry, >organized alphabetically by author, and a separate sequence taking up >about three shelves, labelled Language Poetry. As the Boston poet
Joe
>Torra pointed out to the owner, this was surely a major ghettoization kind >of move, and represented a sharp (albeit ambiguous) statement....
>
>
>I've just noticed Simon is writing from a Hahhvahd account: it isn't
the >current arrangement at Groliers you're referring to is it?
>
>--m.
>

↑ Index

161. Maria Damon
Re: sociology of bookstores
Fri 10 Dec 1999

grolier's does now categorize by not only race but ethnicity, nationality, sexuality, etc. i asked louisa about this and she said it helps the books move more quickly, ie. sales are better. for an idependent bookstore eking out an existence (and th eonly bookstore nationally to specialize exclusively in poetry) is makes sense to make a decision based on what will help the books sell. Moreover, on the subject of "working class poetry" as a category, that day may yet come. there's nothing eternal or unchanging about bookstore marketing categories.

At 8:59 AM -0500 12/10/99, Mark Prejsnar wrote: >Simon DeDeo writes:
>
>
>"The way the local poetry bookstore here, for example, organizes its >books is by race.
>
> Now, to a certain extent this ordering makes sense. But it does >seem clear to me that I would never walk in to a bookstore and find a >shelf "working class poetry", or if I did, I'd know immediately that it >was a conscious decision on the part of the manager rather than an >acceptance of a particular, commonly accepted mode of putting the bricks >in the boxes."
>
>*******
>
>The overall shape of poetry in bookstores, tells us some interesting >things about the current shape of culture. I have not seen too many >stores that "organize their books by race," and the idea is pretty >fascinating. When i lived in Boston, the magnificent poetry bookshop, >Groliers, had essentially two sequences: almost all books of poetry, >organized alphabetically by author, and a separate sequence taking up >about three shelves, labelled Language Poetry. As the Boston poet Joe >Torra pointed out to the owner, this was surely a major ghettoization kind >of move, and represented a sharp (albeit ambiguous) statement....
>
>
>I've just noticed Simon is writing from a Hahhvahd account: it isn't the >current arrangement at Groliers you're referring to is it?
>
>--m.

↑ Index

162. Daniel Carter
Re: "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" #89, Atlanta issue
Fri 10 Dec 1999

On Wed, 1 Dec 1999 21:27:13, Kevin Killian wrote:

> Hi, it's Kevin Killian. Dodie Bellamy and I have turned over the new issue of our zine "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" to the Atlanta Writers Group about whom we had been quite curious and now the issue (#89!!) is ready. Maybe it will open eyes all over the world about the interesting new writing scene in Atlanta. Anyhow, if anyone on this list would like a copy please back-channel me and I'll send you one. Please don't send money, this is a free offer and just send your address instead (unless you think I know it by heart). No solicitors will call...
>
> Kevin K.

Kevin, and Dodie,

thanks so much, just got it in the mail today. looks good from the glimpse can't wait t' get into it. thanks to you for your graciousness and thanks unto the poets for theirs.

Daniel

↑ Index

163. Jill Stengel
december and a+bend press
Fri 10 Dec 1999

dear friends of poetry,
there will not be a december reading at bluebar for the poetry reading and publication series synapse.

the series will resume on the second sunday in january.

happy holidays,
and thank you for a great year,

jill stengel
a+bend press

ps-for the holidays: free shipping on book orders postmarked by dec 31,1999 (sorry, not valid for institutions)

 there is no institutional or corporate support, funding, "guidance," et cetera for a+bend press books or events. without your involvement, and, of course, the involvement of the authors, there would be no series. i send a large--a vast--thank you to the kindly souls who have attended readings, bought books, sent occasional donations, and put the word out regarding the readings and the books. i am much appreciative of your interest and your support.

the a+bend press 1999 catalog:

book one history, possibilities: Jill Stengel book two SAYING NO. 3 Jenna Roper Harmon book three a s f a r a s Jen Hofer book four Genealogy Kathy Lou Schultz book five 22 Katherine Spelling book six (forthcoming) Jamen Howe book seven (forthcoming) m. mara-ann book eight Spelt Susan Gevirtz and Myung Mi Kim book nine Eve Doe : Prior to Landscape Elizabeth Treadwell book ten definite articles Sarah Anne Cox book eleven Waltzing the Map Standard Schaefer book twelve extraneous roses Lisa Kovaleski book thirteen Room Dana Teen Lomax book fourteen (forthcoming) Lisa Lubasch book fifteen Body Auguries Rose Najia book sixteen we build mountains Jo Ann Wasserman book seventeen Dearly, Rachel Levitsky

[note: i am not taking advanced orders for titles listed as "(forthcoming)"] thank you again,

jill stengel
a+bend press

↑ Index

164. Jerrold Shiroma

Small Press Publications List

Fri 10 Dec 1999

The deadline for this week's Small Press Publications List @ duration is this Friday (12-17). All publishers wishing to have their publications listed should send info to [redacted].

↑ Index

165. Kathy Lou Schultz

Re: CLASS (fwd)

Fri 10 Dec 1999

I disagree that Katie's post was "very mild." And I do not think that she "simply expresses a point of view" as much as she dismisses an alternate point of view. I believe the main point of her post was "shut up about poetry and class issues."

And I have yet to hear her support her assertions. The following is an observation that lacks explanation or supporting argumentation:

"Of course language can't be seperated [sic] from any of those things. They're made out of language. Poems are made out of language, too. But it just doesn't follow that poems are made of politics, class, etc".

I believe that attempting to divorce writing from its social/political contexts is dangerous. The act of pretending that writing isn't political results in support of dominant power relations. It results in sticking one's head in the sand, in effect saying "don't talk about things like racism that make me uncomfortable." I also think it results in misreadings and shallow readings. I return to the example of Erica Hunt. An analysis of Hunt's that only concerned itself with "form, structure" etc. (as if those things themselves weren't political!) would result in a very uniformed, very cursory reading of this important experimental poet.

But if you find discussions of class and writing "boring," I probably can't help you here. I would suggest however that the privilege to ignore class issues is just that: a privilege.

I believe Taylor Brady's poetic response constituted a useful explication of these issues.

I also find it really interesting that suddenly concern with a working class poetics is "political hegemony/ correctness)". I am constantly personally attacked for raising class issues in the context of writing -- when and where this discourse became "hegemonic" certainly eludes me.

Kathy Lou Schultz

↑ Index

166. Jill Stengel
oops...double oops...
Fri 10 Dec 1999

---

re december and a+bend press:

while i was writing that big email, i was getting all choked up about how nice everyone's been,
and i forgot to include some pertinent info:

jill stengel
a+bend press 3862 21st st
sf, ca 94114

bluebar is in san francisco

thanks,
jill

↑ Index

167. Jerrold Shiroma
Peter Ganick
Sat 11 Dec 1999

Anyone have the e-mail for Peter Ganick?

Much thanks.

↑ Index

168. Ken Edwards
Re: Digest of british-poets - volume 1 #524
Sat 11 Dec 1999

Reality Street Editions' web site has moved.

The new URL is freespace.virgin.net/reality.street

Check out the new titles:

Barbara Guest: _If So, Tell Me_ (out now)

RSE 4packs No 3: _New Tonal Language_
featuring Patricia Farrell, Shelby Matthews, Simon Perril, Keston Sutherland (imminent)

Tony Lopez: _Data Shadow_ (out February 2000)

Ken Edwards, Reality Street Editions
4 Howard Court, Peckham Rye, London SE15 3PH, UK
Tel: [redacted] 7297

↑ Index

169. rebecca wolff
Re: objection to New Yorker
Sat 11 Dec 1999

It seems to me that this same argument could be used to suggest that affirmative action laws should be abolished. Change is slow, nay, and happens in increments like this, at least this is how I imagine this happened: Susan Wheeler, due to proximity and pedigree, gets invited to be one of the judges. Susan Wheeler is a cool woman and and interesting poet who is interested in interesting poetry. So she nominates an interesting poet. Why not support this tiny ray of light? Picture tiny ray of light through chink in the wall as preface to huge block of wall falling out to reveal lots of light. You'll feel better than with the salsa/turkey analogy.

Date: Thu, 9 Dec 1999 20:37:19 -0500
From: Simon DeDeo <[redacted]>
Subject: let's hear it for J H PRYNNE! / Hollo

...but then, there's the question of whether or not one wants to lend any kind of legitimacy to the proceedings. That Pyrnne was on the list surprised me (argh! I confess! I read the New Yorker!) But given the sorry state of the New Yorker's poetry these days ("no shoes, no shirt, no status as canonical writer, no service"), why sign your name to the current marketing techniques of "big press poetry", where a little sop to the "hip" is like the salsa with turkey.

The only reason I can think to bust out the vote for Prynne would be that if he made a decent showing, more might read his work.

-- Simon

↑ Index

170. Roger Gilbert
Robert Grenier
Sat 11 Dec 1999

Can anyone provide me with an email or postal address for Robert Grenier?
Please backchannel.
Thanks.

↑ Index

171. Wanda Phipps
Music....
Sat 11 Dec 1999

Hey,

It's my first all singing, all music performance with my new band of players-- come on out for a half hour of new songs, fun & frivolity--

W A N D A P H I P P S

Performing Songs accompanied by

Joel Schlemowitz: rhythm guitar
Hiroshi Noguchi: slide & lead guitar
& Val Massimi: drums

8:00 pm - Tuesday - December 14, 1999
at The Fort at Sidewalk Cafe
94 Avenue A (Corner of Avenue A & E. 6th Street)
New York, NY

[redacted]
No Cover

Hope to see you there!

Wanda Phipps

Check out my re-designed and updated homepage MIND HONEY at www.users.interport.net/~wanda
A honey pot of new poems!!!
And if you've been there already try it again--we're always adding cool new stuff!

↑ Index

172. David Baratier
Morte d' Ed
Sat 11 Dec 1999

Estrella’s Prophecies #18

for E.D.

Upon year end, reflect over the home of the brave and meatloaf specials, however shallowly. Since potential diminishes and your body has joined the recession think of bygone figures. Fabulous Johnson.
Promise to do something that would make you a better person if you did.
Dick Van Dyke. Even though European Commission inspectors raid and close Coca-Cola offices for dominant market position abuse, for you, this year, I'm dreaming of a white Christmas, joy to the world and a Super America. For an American piece I will reflect more.

↑ Index

173. Tom Beckett
Ed Dorn
Sun 12 Dec 1999

Ed Dorn died ,at home in Denver, December 10, 1999. He was a man of ferocious intelligence and great wit.

↑ Index

174. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy extempore on two lines from Dorn
Sun 12 Dec 1999

The Tensile Strength of Last Winter's Icicles

a cool head takes time tossed the dude

but a cool time gives you head parried an equine if unexploded blonde

O Miss Polly give me an infinity you can count on three tenths and three hundredths and three thousandths

or at least a decent tattoo

(this was before she attempted to use his retinas) careful!

that ain't no thing!

(at which stroke she demanded back the negatives)

just then there was the sound of something natural who's there?

ego amiable jus' wee me said the cheery sower

trust a German to write Being on Time said the man

three two

one

this is for your sadly missing heart

Randolph Healy

Visit the Sound Eye website at:
http://indigo.ie/~tjac/sound_eye_hme.htm
or find more Irish writing at:
http://www.nd.edu/~ndr/issues/ndr7/contents.html

↑ Index

175. Bob Grumman

A Chapter on Language Poetry

Sun 12 Dec 1999

For anyone who's curious about my book in spite of its recent panning, here's a chapter from it. It discusses poetry that is, or is like, what is commonly called language poetry. Comments welcome.

--Bob Grumman

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Xenolinguistic Poetry

Language poetry in my poetics is a form of what I eventually came to call xenolinguistic poetry--that is, it is poetry whose syntax or train of thought is linguistically strange to an extreme. It was the last kind of poetry I was able to come to terms with--if, indeed, I have come to terms with it. For years only my desire to comprehend all poetry kept me going back to it, trying to appreciate it--even to the extent of reading the famous primer on it, the almost impenetrable The L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E Book. I didn't start getting much of a fix on the stuff, however, until I came on Crag Hill's DICT, or the four pages or so of that work that were published in Red Lines, No. 7.

illustration I couldn't transmit cybernetically

One characteristic of the DICT excerpt that helped was that its poems are all less than ten words in length, and thus easy to get hold of. But what most helped me was that it has a unifying, underlying framework--the bones of a dictionary. What does this accomplish? For one thing, it provides an alphabetic rationale for the arrangement of the sequence's subjects. It alerts us as well to the fact that we are to be concerned with spellings and definitions. With fundamentals of language, too, and probably (by extension) fundamentals of Everything. At the same time, it surrounds us with an ambience of authority, of exact rules--something secure to roam freely out of, to laugh at contrasts to, to deconstruct fearlessly from, and so forth.

All this would mean little if the poems or stanzas of DICT weren't effective in themselves, but they are. Take, for instance, "ABASE," the very first word of the sequence. It is an almost perfect choice for its position for the following reasons: (1) it begins the sequence's journey in the proper place alphabetically (i.e., at ABA); (2) it begins it structurally appropriately at "a base" and (3) it begins it philosophically appropriately at a tearing down, at a kind of reduction (of rank or estimation, my pocket dictionary has it). In short, Hill in one word tells us what he's up to (overtly, at least): a reduction back to first principals.

The next word--on a line by itself--is "meaning." So now we know we are to be concerned with the reduction (or abasing) of meaning. And with basic meanings. Perhaps also with gross (base) meanings. A line later the non-word "ABCD" appears. Our alphabetical trip is starting--in pre-meaning, also in the elements, in the letters which precede wording; in the base. One thinks, too, of baby talk, and a child's first experiences with letters and words.

On the third line is the phrase, "distinct A-horizons." I don't know what an A-horizon is (in the real world) or if there is such a thing. But the phrase, in coming just after "ABCD," underscores orderliness, officialness, even (horizontal) straightness. And the "A-nature" of the words to follow is announced, or emphasized, as well as the fact that we are starting at A, with nothing but "A-horizons" visible ahead of us.

Then: "abr abbr," or (possibly) the word, "abbreviation," abbreviated (twice)--after misstarting. The journey which started with "ABCD," then was interrupted by "distinct A-horizons," has now advanced one step from formal letters to an awkward, shaky first step into "word-ness"--which is abbreviated to its smallest state. The alphabetical sequence is maintained, too, as we go from ABA and ABC to ABR--then back slightly to ABB.

A pun of sorts comes next, "state of being" (my emphasis) suddenly cropping up in this "b" section of the A's. It keeps the reader's attention on such philosophical concerns as the relation of meaning to being. Alone in the line under "state of being" is an X. It forms a sudden center, and is also a loud retort, to all the A's. It suggests some idea of a distinct state of being, too. We're still at a kind of starting point, but now at a first essence (an unknown quantity) as well as at a first letter. But we're also at a "layer of substance," according to the next line.

Because the lineation forces attention on the text one word or syllable at a time (for the most part), I again spin off any mainline into a thought of "substance" as "sub-stance," or of being not yet in a stance. Preliminariness holds. Incompleteness, too, as the truncatedness of the next two entries, "cordant note" and "ately released," indicates. "cordant" makes me think of discordance, of course, particularly in such an assortment of not closely interrelated entries, but then I am struck with the pleasant opposite to discordance, "cordance"--core-dance. Is the X the note (and "core") referred to?

"ace" then intrudes and its quotidian definition as a playing card whose face is marked "with one large pip." This is followed by a line that doesn't compute for me but is nice. The first entry in DICT which uses punctuation, it consists of a colon followed by a space and then the word, "plants." Or: a sense of expectancy, followed by a word representing the ultimate natural realization of expectations.

"plants" is repeated on the following line, with a space after it--and, finally, a semi-colon, to represent a sense of semi-completion. All this might be a contrast to the mechanical, unAprillike nature of the dictionary which is its field, or a reference to the semantic breeding ground that a dictionary is, or who knows what. Which makes me suddenly recall, as I write this, that a pip is a seed. So the flow from the ace to plants is not illogical. Ah, another connection: a pip begins the "deck" of spring as an ace begins a deck of cards. . . . And as a's begin the alphabet. So many similar and contrasting games are thus caught here abudding!

And so Hill's sequence flows on, making the dictionary into a playground, and filling the reader with the feel of creativity, of words being born, and meanings, and realities. . . . Look, it proclaims--only look closely at the world, or at the best lists of the names for its contents: the world is alive, and rich!

Another of my successes as an aesthcipient of language poetry occurred when I got a copy of In the American Tree, an anthology of language poetry edited by Ron Silliman. It involved some poems by Robert Grenier, the first of which, just six lines in length, reads as follows:

> ...
>
> a long walk > a long > walk a long > walk a long > walk along

About this I wrote in an issue of the Score Review as follows:

> My first reaction, typical for me, was dismissive. All I saw was trivial repetition of trivial words for no good reason. Maybe the poem was of slight value for the way the boringness of its diction metaphored the boringness of its subject matter, "a long walk," but it did nothing more worthwhile than that for me.
>
> So I went on to Grenier's next poem, "Wintry," predisposed to dismiss it as well. For a while that was easy: all it seemed to consist of were juvenile word plays like a rhyme of "icy" with "nicely," and some foolery with the way the Germans and Norwegians in the text pronounce, "well" as "vell." But I had to admit that, despite the brevity of its lines and strophes, it got an ambience of some northern American countryside and its down-to-earth but pleasant German/Scandinavian farmer-types going through me. Then I turned the page. There the poem ended in three strophes:

> snow > blue > eyes
>
> ice > blue > rocks
>
> rocks > rocks of > getting dark

I was at once converted to Grenier's way with words.

One thing I liked was the way the text, after saying pretty much nothing but, "Oh well," "Oh vell," "I don't know," and "Yah" for five strophes, suddenly zeroes down to two kinds of blue, soft and hard, both of them vitally palpable after the mundaneness of what's preceded. Both, too, are extremely in context, the earlier strophes having discussed winter to set up snow and ice, and shown a Nordic accent to set up blue eyes.

Something else happens: eyes are, through parallelism, implicitly compared to rocks. They can thus be taken as being mineral and insensitive, and enduring; or the rocks can be thought of as being Nature's eyes. Humans with winter in them, rocks with awareness in themú.ú.ú. and all the scene as elemental as the lines describing it.

The capper to the poem for me, though, is the poem's final strophe. There the peculiar locution, "rocks of getting dark," presents us with rocks that are somehow comprised of the act of getting dark. Darkness is stealing into a locale and, apparently, solidifying there like water into ice, rock-hard ice. At the same time, parts of speech blurring in the confused syntax of the strophe, I visualize, and feel, a countryside's being rocked to darkness like an infant's being rocked to sleep--to some kind of deep final stasis.

Of course, "getting dark," on a line by itself as it is, might simply indicate a new subject's having been introduced, the fact that it is getting dark. Perhaps the narrator was about to address in greater detail what the rocks he's speaking of are made of, but he's tired, too tired--or bored--to go on, and it's getting dark. Still, the phrase "rocks of getting dark" arises naturally from the poem. Maybe everything is going to sleep--in all senses of the word. (And I think of Robert Frost's "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening.")

Whatever its final "meaning," the poem turned me back to Grenier's previous poem with a considerably less condescending attitude. This time around I saw, for the first time, how "a long" becomes "along." The poem indeed metaphors the monotony of a long walk going on and on and on. But it does more: it surprises us with a pun. The "along" part of the latter is, of course, amusing, but it is lyrical, too, for it doesn't just describe a person as "walking along," or going onward; it also describes him as walking by the side of something. In other words, he is not aimlessly walking, but interacting--in relation--with his environment. He has a route, he is performing Roethke's "waltz of To." And, it is strongly implied, he is consciously doing so; he is intentioned.

That might not seem a big deal, but to me there's nothing more profound and archetypal than to be purposefully following a route, to be located in the universe, and consciously going somewhere! And Grenier shows how that feels with maximal vividness, by springing his readers into a sense of it as abruptly, and > from as nakedly and repetitiously nowhere-going > a situation, as possible.

>
> He thus allows an apprentice appreciator of > language poetry like me to get some idea of how > much a flawlessly-executed preposition like > "along" can do, even in a poem a mere 13 words > in length! And, as "Wintry" shows, his use of > other kinds of words (participles such as,
> "getting," for instance) is equally skillful.
> Ergo, there must be something to his kind of > poetry!

I was particularly happy with one result of my little review: Bob Grenier saw fit after reading it to send me a very nice and appreciative letter--with an autographed copy of one of his books. That he also took the time to point out that the "2" poems I'd analyzed were actually 3, the "passage" starting with "snow/ blue/ eyes" actually being a complete poem in itself, didn't perturb me. After all, the two poems I treated as one did go together, sort ofööand no title, only a line of asterisks, separated the two on the page they shared. Anyway, I'm always making preposterous mistakes as a critic. For instance, back in college (in my late thirties, the reader will recall) I was taking a class (one of the most enjoyable and valuable ones I ever took)--in poetics. Part of the required work was to analyze few poems out of a bunch the class's teacher, the poet Robert Reid, had xeroxed for us.

One of the poems was by Reid himself. Ah, thought I, what better way to check my critical acumen than to analyze a poem whose very author is available to judge the result! So I batted out five or six hundred words on it. Well, its title, "Window Seat," destroyed me. Even though the poem spoke of passing over a house, and of looking down, and so forth, its title led me to place it not in an airplane, as I should have, but in a quaint old New England house possessing something called a window seat. It was a far more foolish mistake than the one I made with Grenier's poems, but I still got an

"A" on my paper--which encouragement no doubt was at least partially responsible, eventually, for this book! So Professor Reid has much to answer for!

As for my Grenier mistake, I agreed with Grenier that it was a mistake--but I didn't agree with his later comment that there is "no 'along with', or 'by the side of something'" in his first poem. But those are--harumpf--possible meanings of "along," whatever their user intended by his preposition. Anyway, the main object of the critic is not to get everything right, but to get his readers' sensitivities purring.

I analyzed several other language poems around this time. Then my taxonomania taking over, I worked up a fairly elaborate system of terms for the various kinds of language poetry I believed there to be. I even got an essay I wrote about the system published in a magazine called SkyViews. Again, though, I will spare my readers the five or six terms I coined. I did want to mention my efforts lest anyone think I hadn't been everywhere in literature as a taxonomist.

Before leaving this chapter, I'd like to discuss one other poet, John M. Bennett, because his poetry, while xenolinguistic, is xenolinguistic in a way that strikes me as significantly different from the way most language poets' work is. Bennett is also worth discussing simply as a severely under-rated otherstream poet. So, let us turn now to, "The Eating," a characteristic poem of his from the collection he asked me to introduce, the Blur. It's on the next page.

As in most of Bennett's poems, the subject matter of "The Eating" is commonplace, but at once, with the declaration of its title, a note of drama is injected: the poem is not to be about mere eating, but about the eating, or a special, perhaps ritualistic act of eating. Another source of drama is the beat of the verse (particularly as chanted by Bennett on the taped version of the Blur). Many of the lines start with a strong verb whose first syllable is strongly accented, and anapests abound. Other kinds of fancy-footedness which engage the ear and help bind the reader to matter not immediately accessible to the intellect include the near-rhyme of the first line's "Hoping" with the second line's "sleeping," and the full rhyme a little later of "I" with "my" as well as several instances of alliteration, assonance and consonance.

THE EATING

Hoping for an end to the food I was sleeping next your breasts. Raising your arms as in death, lamplight sinking into the wall till dark. I hurried to the bank with the burn rising in my throat and my feet swallowed by shoes. Not rubbed by yours cold nights or breathing my neck. A heap of rugs damps the the basement and there's so much air in the waterpipes I'll never quench. Today today. A pile of steaks in a chair and nothing left to suffocate

The poem's narrative line starts a shade oddly: its speaker, who is--it is to be presumed--addressing his wife or girlfriend, is "hoping for an end to the food." Apparently if something doesn't end it (such as--somehow--his sleeping next to someone), he would be powerless to refuse it. So he is involved more in a feeding than an eating, a feeding he wants to end. And as he is not sleeping next to his companion, but next to her breasts, it seems likely that we are back in an archetypal first feeding. The speaker is hoping to break out of his infantile dependency on his mother, or a later substitute for her--such is one possible reading. Overtones of sexual intimacy are heavily present, of course. At the same time, however, there is a suggestion of alienation, of being next not to a person but to a mere part of her anatomy. The situation, in short, is ambiguous.

And things only get confuseder with the information that the woman's breasts are raising her arms, "as in death." Or is it the speaker who is raising them? In either case, how can the latter, being asleep, know about the arms? Clearly we are--at least in part--not just watching somebody's sleep, but in it, cut off from conventional rationality. We are in a piece of literary cubism, too--one in which many angles into a subject, temporal as well as spatial, are bound together into a single all-at-once point of view.

After a passage with a peculiar twist about lamplight which is sinking into the wall rather than merely reflecting off it, all the urgency hitherto latent in the poet's voice and rhythm comes to the fore--but, as in so many of Bennett's poems, it is tied to the most commonplace of events, in this case going to the bank! Why the speaker suddenly needs to go there is not indicated but probably to make some kind of withdrawal. There is a "burn rising in (his) throat," so the withdrawal might be of water. Or of more maternal milk.

Or maybe he wants to make a deposit. Perhaps the bank is his companion's womb, and the burn is rising in a lower throat than the one in his neck. This might seem far-fetched, but the surrealistic non-rationality of the poem encourages reader-participation even into such far-fetchednesses, and this for me is one of its main virtues.

The reader is participated even more intensely into the events of the poem when the speaker's feet are "swallowed by shoes." Life is underfoot--and feels menacingly devouring. The poem to this point verily has achieved an arresting & authentic portrayal from the inside of someone frantically striving for some nameless visceral necessity and being hugely opposed, even by his shoes.

He is lonely, too, for his feet, according to lines 8 and 9, are not rubbed by his companion's on cold nights (despite the nearness of her breasts)--nor does he enjoy her "breathing (his) neck." He lacks footsy-affectionate companionship, that is, and mouth-to-mouth sexual desiredness. And with the latter we are again in food-related matters, in eating as consuming as final full visceral animal primitive barbaric raging devouring of one's surround.

Lines 8 & 9 aren't just about a certain deranged but archetypally important human state, however. They also exemplify what is perhaps Bennett's highest virtue as a poet: his ability to deliver first-degree beauty indirectly through intense treatment of negative space. By this I mean that Bennett tends often to describe something generally considered pisspuke-unlovely, and to do so with full dedication, thereby losing many a delicate reader, and gaining a reputation for negativity. But the negativity frequently yields the healthiest of positives, as here it trips us into a fresh-textured appreciation of full sensual companionship, of having one's feet rubbed on cold nights by another's, and one's neck inhaled into full-sexed intimacy. Bennett describes the good of existence by violently telling us what it isn't, which can no more fail to tell us as violently what it is than a thorough explanation of north can fail to teach us as thoroughly what south is.

And the good divulged, because unexpected, stands all the taller in the senses, and because of the dark of what it has issued from, all the brighter. Bennett's poetry, then, is a poetry of affirmation as much as the more clearly affirmative poetry ofú.ú.ú. I can't think of any former poets of significance who were exclusively affirmative; their finest moments occur against darkness--e.g., what Shakespeare brings off among murders, suicides and ruin in Macbeth, or Shelley in the despondencies of his "Ode to the West Wind," or Roethke in all his presentations of madness and desolation. In short, Bennett is not as untraditional as conservative critics might have you believe.

His best moments are top drawer, too--for instance, what happens in line 10 where "(a) heap of rugs damps the basement." This excellently demonstrates what I mean by a "nightmarriage," which is what I call any phrase which seems to me both a happy marriage of images and something out of a nightmare. This particular one describes the suppression of menacing things in the speaker's basement. Or it is the basement itself which is being suppressed--and if the speaker's shoes can swallow his feet, what couldn't his basement do?! That's a striking enough image. But in the context--which is part dream (or place in a mind), and part human body and its plumbing, as well as part literal house and its plumbing--the image bulges into all kinds of other possibilities. Surely, for instance, all the fire in the sexual basement that the speaker's genitalia are is being stifled; and all the agitated cravings of his belly; and, in fact, all the potential noise and color and violence of his whole life's undermost needs and desires!

By its end "The Eating" has itself become a monstrous nightmarriage, or system of nightmarriages. Look at the way all its pipes and passageways, and all the items going somewhere through them toward guts or wombs or banks or basements, and all the processes these things suggest come together to form one gigantic over-image of digestion, respiration, sexual intercourse, maternal nurturing, perception, economic intercourse, communication, engineering, andú.ú.ú. life. And there is nothing left to suffocate. Nor have I anything else to say about Bennett--or xenolinguistic poetry.

↑ Index

176. George Fouhy poetry monday!
Sun 12 Dec 1999

Visit the Creative Arts Cafe poetry site for information regarding Monday night's poet: Joan Halperin
http://www.bestweb.net/~cindyf/poetry_2000.htm

↑ Index

177. Susan M. Schultz
Re: question about the 1950s
Mon 13 Dec 1999

I'm going to be doing a directed reading with a graduate student in history next semester who is working on the 1950s, especially on car ads and anti-materialist backlashes. Any suggestions you folks can make about relevant poetry and also 1950s culture and counter-culture is most welcome.

Susan Schultz
University of Hawai`i

↑ Index

178. Herb Levy
poems & new music in RealAudio
Mon 13 Dec 1999

Hi folks,

Just a short note to let y'all know that this week's Mappings, my weekly online new music "radio" show features pieces with texts, including collaborations between chris cheek & Sianed Jones, Jerome Rothenberg & George Lewis, text-sound piecs by & performed by Jaap Blonk, as well as some more new music-oriented works by, Joseph Zitt, Nicolas Collins and Rene Lussier.

Available all week at:
<http://www.antennaradio.com/avant/mappings/index.htm>.

Bests,

Herb
--

Herb Levy
NEW MAILING ADDRESS: P O Box 9369 Forth Wort, TX 76147
NEW PHONE: 817 [redacted]
same old e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

179. Scott Keeney
Paul Metcalf: Collected Works
Mon 13 Dec 1999

Just saw that Coffee House's Collected Works of Paul Metcalf have been remaindered for $14.95 (plus $3 for S&H [plus sales tax in Conn.]) available through Edward R. Hamilton, Bookseller, Falls Village, CT 06031-5000. For anyone interested.

↑ Index

180. Jacques Debrot
atlanta poets group/grolier bookshop
Mon 13 Dec 1999

uhm, having dissed the apg in an earlier post, i thought i should say, having just read most of the mirage #4 atlanta anthology, that it certainly has some interesting work-- among other things: a couple of cool collage poems by james sanders; randy prunty's funny "gender rinse" and dana lisa lustig's faux-naive "st. francis . . . "

about the grolier, if your idea of it is, say, that of the clubby little bookshop brad gooch describes in his o'hara bio--forget it. no browsing is allowed--you come in with the name of the book you want, the owner retrieves it for you--and then you're told to leave. a draconian policy necessitated by, what i was told by the owner herself, was the experimentalist poets' addiction to ripping off books. any book or zine w/ merely the whiff of the av-garde is now verbotten. perhaps the owner has relented since i was there last. it's hard to think of her keeping up this policy indefinitely. but i wouldn't know-- as someone who used to drop quite a lot of lettuce at the grolier every week--i will never set foot inside there again.

jacques

↑ Index

181. Poetics List Administration
Thelonius Monk / Holman
Mon 13 Dec 1999

I had to reformat this message. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=605CCA66) (286 lines)

From: [redacted]
Date: Wed, 8 Dec 1999 23:53:53 EST

Hey folks, check the vibe on this:
Monday the 13th, at the Knitting Factory - 10 pm until 1 a.m.

Thelonius Monk's Epistrophy done '90's style....

Sorry about the recent flurry of e-mails, but as they say, 'tis the season..= . The Epistrophy Evening: mad flavaz in ya zone - more Subliminal Minded material for you to savour... so folks this is a benefit for A Gathering of the Tribes, an institution that has supported avant garde culture for a while, so check the vibe, so as always it's s situation representing a whole bunch of scenarios: A Guy Called Gerald, Samuel Delaney, David Hammons, Steve Canon and yours truly present: film, literature, and music - here's the 411:

Music:
The Playas:
London Afro-Futurist Avant Garde drum n bass veteran A Guy Called Gerald versus Dj Spooky that Subliminal Kid and legendary free jazz pianist Matthew Shipp and the event has some special sneak preview of new material from David Hammons, probably one of the most important African American artists of the last 20 years who has been working on a Dj vinyl project...

Film: and and a film entitled "The Lure of the Ancestors" a documentary by Olumide, who worked on the award winning film "Slam" that featured Saul William and Soundtrack by Dj Spooky, on the linkages of Yoruba and Yoruba influenced percussion and American polyrhythms (Baba Olatunji, Abiodun Oyewole, CYnthia Turner, Eric Bobo, etc etc ...)

Words:
and then there's the people reading:
legendary science fiction writer Samuel Delaney with new material Steve Canon, the director of A Gathering of the Tribes
Edwin Torres
David Henderson
Iris A.
Stacyann Chin
Carl Hancock Rux Mariposa

plus special guests...
tix: $10 - all proceeds from the event go to A Gathering of the Tribes

Epistrophy was what Theloniuous Monk used to call his style of thinking and playing, but most who check out the word in the dictionary will simply find that it means "return from an abnormal mental state." Anybody who's checked out "A Gathering of the Tribes," an independent non-profit magazine that has been one of the best Lower East Side and East Village journals of poetry and art for a long while, and host of alot of art shows relating jazz and contemporary culture, will see that it's an arts organization that has allowed alot of people to get their ideas out into the world, and turn their backs, like Theloniuous Monk, to the conventional music, poetry, and arts scenes. Basically this is a benefit for the magazine and arts space that's associated with. The main theme of the evening will be a duo between internationally renowned experimental jazz pianist Matthew Shipp and sonic chaos in the form of tunrtable terror from yours truly, downtown enfant terrible Dj Spooky that Subliminal Kid and London legendary drum n bass innovator A Guy Called gerald. In addition to these artists, highly respected artist David hammons is previewing some of his new sounds from a sound project he's been working on, and one of the most important science fiction writers working in the field over the last several decades, Samuel Delaney will be reading from some of his more recent books. And critically acclaimed poets, Steve Cannon (who runs Tribes), and David Henderson will be reading. Expect an evening of special guests to make apearances as well because everyone from the jazz musicians and performing artists have worked with Tribes in the past to younger more hip-hop and electronica influenced artists will be making showing up. All proceeds go to a Gathering of the Tribes.

Knitting factory, main space, December 12th, tickets, $10 more info:

www.djspooky.com or [redacted]

↑ Index

182. Poetics List Administration
Re: poets & our clichés / Lang
Mon 13 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--
Date: 12/9/99, 8:32 AM -0500
From: "Doug Lang" <[redacted]>

I thought I'd missed something here, so I checked with Tom Raworth and learned that this response was to a private message, not to a post to this list. If this was in error, I'm sure we can all relate to that. What is unfortunate is that Tom's original message (which he forwarded to me, after my inquiry to him) was poorly represented, and in a meanspirited manner. It's even more unfortunate that no acknowledgment has been made of the error to the forum in which it was made.

Doug Lang

david bromige wrote:

> To amplify (and to clarify, i hope) my response to tom raworth's
> post : when i used the cliche "in war, innocent people do get hurt", tom > transferred it from where he got it (a highly contextualized situation, as > he initially acknowledged, in which "hurt" is economic) to images of > refugees being bombed... however he got down that slippery slope, he then > employed the cliche "slippery slope" to warn me lest i lay aside my pen and > pick up my uzi.
>
> But when i heard tom's anxiety as encoded in "s.s.", ," i thought of "grave > misgivings", a bleeding-heart liberal cliche excuse for doing nothing,
and
> even of "it wouldnt be prudent," a fascist excuse for doing nothing.
tom > conjured me leading the easily misled, from economic sanctions to > blitzkrieg; hence his "slippery slope." but i have no further ambitions > concerning czeckoslovakia, except to learn how to spell it. i am > surprised to have the "slippery slope" sanctions imposed upon me, by a man > who must have had as many friends as i, imprisoned by those authorities on > marijuana who know it always leads to heroin.
>
> Anyway, let me say further re economic sanctions against seattle that,
as > david antin says, in approving the notion, it will be hard to get the word > out. agreed, so we dont expect this action to bring catastrophic hardship > to any one person. a reduction, maybe, of 3% in annual profits. but the > effect is cumulative, and what we hope for is sufficient reduction in > seattle's income to have a negative impact on their budget, so that certain > "essential" services--we suggest, the police--have to be cut back. it is > the police, first and foremost, who need to be taught a lesson in > restraint.

>
> But too, it is the city adminstrators who slip the police's leashes, who > have to learn the hard way, and when big stores lose 3%, thats a lot of > latte, and a corresponding increase in pressure on city hall to consider > the consequences of police violence.
>
> The purpose of this, as i understand it, is not primarily punitive but > minatory---to prevent future demonstrations from being clobbered by city > hall in other venues.
>
> i like david antin's suggestion re microsoft. of course, already existing > product from m.s has to be considered as grandfathered in. but for the next > year, it wd be great if bill gates (a mighty fan of the w.t.o.) received > less income from us outraged & nugatory chickens at the far end of the > coop.

>
> db

↑ Index

183. Poetics List Administration

Quasha & Stein at St. Marks / Quasha

Mon 13 Dec 1999

--==========206505786==========

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--
Date: 12/11/99, 12:40 AM -0800
From: "George Quasha" <[redacted]>

George Quasha & Charles Stein reading
at St. Marks Church on the Bowerie, NYC
Wednesday, December 15th, 1999 at 8 PM

GQ will read from his recent book AINU DREAMS and from forthcoming books, IN NO TIME and THE PREVERBS OF TELL: NEWS TORQUED FROM UNDERTIME.

CS will read from his ongoing THEFORESTFORTHETREES, a selection of which appeared as THE HAT-RACK TREE.

NOTE: GQ's scheduled exhibition of AXIAL STONES and reading of AXIAL POEMS at Westbeth, previously to open on December 9th, 1999, has been postponed till Friday, January 28th, 1999, 4-9 PM. The works of precariously balanced stones will be exhibited in the Westbeth Gallery for one week along with the paintings of Spencer Holst and Beate Wheeler. The reading will follow the opening at 9 PM.

--==========206505786==========

Delivered-To: [redacted]
  by mailhub with SMTP; 11 Dec 1999 05:40:57 -0000 Delivered-To: [redacted]
  by mail2 with SMTP; 11 Dec 1999 05:40:55 -0000 by themis.host4u.net (8.8.5/8.8.5) with ESMTP id XAA09105 for <[redacted]>; Fri, 10 Dec 1999 23:40:37 -0600
Date: Sat, 11 Dec 1999 00:40:59 -0800
From: George Quasha <[redacted]>
Organization: Station Hill / Barrytown, Ltd.
To: Poetics List <[redacted]> Subject: Quasha & Stein at St. Marks

--==========206494987==========

George Quasha & Charles Stein reading
at St. Marks Church on the Bowerie, NYC
Wednesday, December 15th, 1999 at 8 PM

GQ will read from his recent book AINU DREAMS and from forthcoming books, IN NO TIME and THE PREVERBS OF TELL: NEWS TORQUED FROM UNDERTIME.

CS will read from his ongoing THEFORESTFORTHETREES, a selection of which appeared as THE HAT-RACK TREE.

NOTE: GQ's scheduled exhibition of AXIAL STONES and reading of AXIAL POEMS at Westbeth, previously to open on December 9th, 1999, has been postponed till Friday, January 28th, 1999, 4-9 PM. The works of precariously balanced stones will be exhibited in the Westbeth Gallery for one week along with the paintings of Spencer Holst and Beate Wheeler. The reading will follow the opening at 9 PM.

--==========206494987==========
Content-Description: Card for George Quasha begin:vcard

n:Quasha;George tel;fax:[redacted]
tel;work:[redacted]
url:http://www.stationhill.org
org:Station Hill / Barrytown, Ltd.
adr:;;124 Station Hill Road;Barrytown;NY;12507;USA version:2.1
email;internet:[redacted] title:Publisher
note;quoted-printable:Station Hill Press/Barrytown, Ltd.=0D=0A or The Institute for Publishing Arts, Inc.=0D=0ABarrytown, NY 12507=0D=0A=0D=0AOffice: [redacted]=0D=0AFax: [redacted] (publishing) and [redacted] (GQ direct)=0D=0A=0D=0Ahttp://www.stationhill.org=0D=0Ae-mail: [redacted]=0D=0ABook Orders to Station Hill/Barrytown: [redacted] (Credit Card)=0D=0A end:vcard

--==========206494987==========--

--==========206505786==========--

↑ Index

184. Poetics List Administration

Prynne / Hollo

Mon 13 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--
Date: 12/11/99, 2:13 AM +0000
From: [redacted]

Simon DeDeo writes:
“The only reason I can think to bust out the vote for Prynne would be that if he made a decent showing, more might read his work.”
Indeed, it is the ONLY reason! So, let’s go for it.
Anselm Hollo

↑ Index

185. Poetics List Administration
Adios / Hollo
Mon 13 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--
Date: 12/11/99, 2:13 AM +0000
From: [redacted]

Edward Dorn, great poet and spirit, passed away peacefully, surrounded by loved ones, at approximately 10:30 p.m. Rocky Mountain Time Friday night, 10

November 1999. "And we are all there together / time will wave as willows do / and adios will be truly, yes," (Dorn, "If It Should Ever Come").

↑ Index

186. Poetics List Administration
Edward Dorn, 1929-1999
Mon 13 Dec 1999

The death of Ed Dorn represents a great loss, if not unexpected. I did not know him, though I found his work delightful and important; out of respect for his friends, I will offer only this poem from his book -Geography- (London: Fulcrum Press, 1965). Chris

--

Mourning Letter, March 29, 1963

No hesitation
would stay me
from weeping this morning
for the miners of Hazard Kentucky.
The mine owners'
extortionary skulls
whose eyes are diamonds don't float down the rivers, as they should,
of the flood

The miners, cold
starved, driven from work, in their homes float though and float
on the ribbed ships of their frail bodies,

Oh, go letter,
keep my own misery close to theirs
associate me with no other honor.

↑ Index

187. f i l c h
Re: atlanta poets group/grolier bookshop
Mon 13 Dec 1999

Joseph Heller is dead at 76.

↑ Index

188. Lawrence Upton
Re: Peter Ganick
Mon 13 Dec 1999

---

he announced here a while ago that due to a pile up of work + family illness he was suspending epublication for a while and closing down his email - until he resurfaces we have to use the mail

L

----- Original Message -----
From: Jerrold Shiroma <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: 11 December 1999 08:57
Subject: Peter Ganick

| Anyone have the e-mail for Peter Ganick?
|
| Much thanks.
|

↑ Index

189. Tony Green
Re: Ed Dorn
Mon 13 Dec 1999

-----Original Message-----
From: Tom Beckett <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, 14 December 1999 09:59
Subject: Ed Dorn

> Ed Dorn died ,at home in Denver, December 10, 1999. He was a man of ferocious intelligence and great wit.

_Thus this poor individual like all the singulars of his race came in forward and goes out sternward and some distant starre flashes even him an indiscriminate salute._

Gunslinger, Book II

↑ Index

190. Richard Dillon
Re: Vote for Prynne
Mon 13 Dec 1999

Prynne was very tight with ED DORN. A vote for Jeremy Prynne is a vote for Ed Dorn, I say!

>From: Ron Silliman <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Vote for Prynne
>Date: Fri, Dec 10, 1999, 5:40 PM
>

> The reason to vote for Prynne is to demonstrate the difference in quality between what is being written these days and what gets published in the New Yorker itself.
>
> Prynne, in this sense, could be any one of us. It's fine that it's him.
>
> Ron Silliman
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

191. david bromige
apologies re Tom
Mon 13 Dec 1999

Listmates, I apologize for responding to a b-c from Tom Raworth as though it had been f-c to this List. What confused me was that the post was fwded to me from another list-member, who had the day before fwded a post to her from me, to the List. Assuming this was further to that public discussion of events in Seattle, I screwed up. Sorry, Tom---although no cause that I can see, for yr post not to become part of the public discussion. That decision, however, is yours to make, not mine, and I regret any embarrasment I may have caused. And thanks to Doug Lang, for his well-merited rebuke. My face is redder than my armband. David

↑ Index

192. miekal and Re: poems & new music in RealAudio
Mon 13 Dec 1999

herb

does it look like antennae radio will be able to stay on the net, I got some mailing saying that it was having financial problemos....

↑ Index

193. George Bowering
Re: Ed Dorn
Mon 13 Dec 1999

Ed Dorn a very good example, person who did music,wit, with attitude. Whose anti-stupidity stance was always available.

George Bowering.

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

194. George Bowering
Re: question about the 1950s
Mon 13 Dec 1999

> I'm going to be doing a directed reading with a graduate student in history next semester who is working on the 1950s, especially on car ads

> and anti-materialist backlashes. Any suggestions you folks can make about relevant poetry and also 1950s culture and counter-culture is most welcome.
>
> Susan Schultz
> University of Hawai`i

Have a look at _On the Road_.

George Bowering.

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

195. Susan Wheeler

Christie Hume

Mon 13 Dec 1999

If anyone could provide her current email and/or new Chicago phone # I would be much obliged.

Susan

↑ Index

196. david bromige

Ed Dorn

Tue 14 Dec 1999

Gunslinger made all a difference. It put scare quotes about the authentic voice of Black Mtn and blazed a trail to the authenticity of a subsequent time. A watershed work in the coyote wit of which, you'd be a dunderhead not to take delight, and instruction.

But through his death considering the man, I am sent back to read the poetry of a more vulnerable aspect, when the poet admitted to his faults. Here's one from _The Newly Fallen_ , as it stands there rather than the slightly revised version in the Collected :

Like a Message on a Sunday

Sits
    the forlorn plumber
by the river with his daughter staring at the water then, at her his daughter closely.

Once World, he came to our house to fix the stove and couldn't oh, we were arrogant and talked about him in the next room, doesn't a man know what he is doing?

Can't it be done right,
World of iron thorns.
Now they sit by the meager river by the water . . . stare into that plumber
so that I can see a daughter in the water
she thin and silent, he, wearing a baseball cap in a celebrating town this summer season may they live on on, may their failure be kindly, and come in small pieces.

David.

↑ Index

197. Ron Silliman
Re: sociology of bookstores
Tue 14 Dec 1999

The first bookstore I saw that divided its books into identity categories was Small Press Traffic (at its second location on 24th Street): Men, Women, Fiction

Ron

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

198. Lowther, John
Re: sociology of bookstores
Tue 14 Dec 1999

---

maria damon wrote;
(and th eonly bookstore nationally to specialize exclusively in poetry)

and i thought there was _Open_ in seattle its in wallingford (sp?) i think

↑ Index

199. Joe Amato
more on class...
Tue 14 Dec 1999

---

the january (2000) issue of _pmla_ (just out) features a number of pieces focusing on class... some more theoretical, some more lit-crit... worth having a look...

best,

joe

↑ Index

200. MAYHEW
response to New Yorker
Tue 14 Dec 1999

Not all the books listed for the New Yorker prize are awful. John Koethe is a decent Ashbery imitator. Louise Gluck is a fine poet if you like that sort of thing. I have no doubt she will emerge victorious. And of course Prynne. I forget what the other candidates are. Prizes and lists of the best books of the century, etc..., like horoscopes, should be used "for entertaiment purposes only." I have a hard time working up a moral fervor about it! The New Yorker never had particularly great poetry, though when Howard Moss was editor he published James Schuyler and the like. It is interesting that even though the New Yorker changed from upper-middle brow WASP John Cheever style culture to a sort of upper-middle brow people magazine, the basic poetry it publishes remains identical. But this is exactly what people used to read the old New Yorker for.

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

_____

↑ Index

201. David Kirschenbaum
New Boogs: Bouchard, Cole, Davis, Durand, & Rackin
Tue 14 Dec 1999

Now available from Boog Literature:

Boog Literature chapbook # 25

By the author. Poems by Sean Cole
Digest size, 20 pages + 4-page cover wrap collage by Joe Maynard (editor of Pink Pages), $6ppd.

Limited lettered edition of 26 copies Digest size, 20 pages + 4-page cover wrap
Each book has a tip-in sheet signed by the author and cover artist. $12ppd.

Chapbook to commemorate his reading Sunday December 5, 1999 at the Zinc Bar in New York City, with Aaron Kiely and Adeena Karasick.

Cole's work has appeared on theeastvillage.org. He is an assistant coordinator for the annual Boston Alternative Poetry Festival, held each July.

Boogcard #5:	Ethel Rackin,	"The clothes here are very sexy"
Boogcard #6:	Jordan Davis,	Happy Baby
Boogcard #7:	Daniel Bouchard,	Consciousness of Self
Boogcard #8:	Marcella Durand,	an excerpt from Reading Postures

Unsigned $1.50 ppd. each; all four for $5 ppd.
Signed and lettered, $3 ppd. each; all four for $10 ppd.

Rackin is an associate editor at APR. Published to commemorate her reading Nov. 3, 1999 with Gerald Stern and Matthew Lippman at Makor.

Davis is the author of Poem on a Train (Barque Books). He is an editor of the literary journal, The Hat, and an organizer of the Poetry City reading series at Teachers & Writers. Published to coordinate his reading with Kenneth Koch on November 10, 1999, at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church in-the-Bowery.

Durand is the author of City of Ports (Situations Press, 1999), the poetry editor of Erato Press, and the program coordinator for the Poetry Project.

SubPress will publish Bouchard's first full-length collection of poetry, Diminutive Revolutions, this month. Published to commemorate their reading together on December 13, 1999 at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church in-the-Bowery.

All postcards are H-5.5" x W-4.25"

Checks payable to:
Boog Literature
351 W.24th Street Apt. 19E
New York, NY 10011-1510
[redacted] o tel: [redacted]

Boog Literature publications are edited and published by David A. Kirschenbaum. Send SASE, or email, for catalog.

as ever,
David

Get FREE voicemail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com
Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

202. K.Angelo Hehir
Re: question about the 1950s
Tue 14 Dec 1999

Susan, This may interest you. Thomas Frank is the editor of The Baffler and often writes for Harpers. This book is his Ph.d diss and is quite incitefuland may be of use to your student.

Frank, Thomas (Thomas C.) The conquest of cool : business culture, counterculture, and the rise of hip consumerism /
Chicago : University of Chicago Press, c1997.

cheers,
kevin hehir

↑ Index

203. Matthew Blevins
Re: sociology of bookstores
Tue 14 Dec 1999

As one who has studied some cognitive anthropology, I find this an interesting thread. The fact that bookstores are changing the principles by which they categorize this literature may reflect changes in the schematic structures we ourselves use to categorize it.

Although it might be tempting to adopt a conspiracy-theory where bookstores' systems are subverting our perceptions, this simply does not fit in with their motive: to sell more books. On the other hand, creating a an organizational structure which closely matches that of one's clients would facilitate more effective navigation; in other words, people could find what the want (and buy it) more easily and quickly.

A more fertile ground of inquiry would seem to be in considering how these changes in categorization may relate to changes both in the field of poetics and in mainstream society in general. Ethnopoetics and multiculturalism are probably where I would start.

-Matthew Blevins

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

204. Stefans, Brian
Prynne
Tue 14 Dec 1999

Hi Rebecca,
> It seems to me that this same argument could be used to suggest that affirmative action laws should be abolished.
With all due respect (and this email isn't about you, just this idea), this doesn't strike me as a very good analogy, and indeed symptomatic of some thinking on how poetry is intended to effect culture (when such intensions are hinted at or stated). The New Yorker is hardly Congress, nor is it something one would think could be fetishized as "society" -- it's really a very specific magazine for a specific group of people, even if it's a very large group. If you start imagining it as some avuncular entity, some sort of big daddy (or mommy, either way) authority whose mind you hope to change, then you get into trouble (not to mention the fact that the New Yorker can go away, go bankrupt, if we want it to but society cannot). As it is, the New Yorker can change in a split second, as it did when Tina Brown took over (she's gone, of course): in their first (or one of their first) issues after she landed, there was a gorgeous full page picture of W.H. Auden in a long overcoat in the snow staring, melancholic as it's possible to perceive behind his drapes of wrinkles (here I'm getting belle-lettristic) with a very long poem on the facing page, something like the In Praise of Limestone but I can't remember exactly. Now, anyone could have looked at that gesture of hers as a "sign of something new" or a "change for the better" as if it were on her hit list of cosmetic changes along wit Art Spieglman covers and (was she responsible for this?) Peter Scheldahl. I have, really, no idea how she followed up that gesture though I don't remember too many more photos of poets, nor better poetry, coming in it's wake. What's striking is that Auden, for whatever the readers of the New Yorker knew, could have just as easily been described as a "Cambridge don" (of course he wasn't) -- in other words, he's English, an amenable exotic, and despite his leftism and flirtation with experimental poetics and, one might say, his homosexuality, he wasn't threatening to the New Yorker readers sense of culture (he wrote opera librettos, too) and their mastery over it.
Anyway, all I'm saying is that, in my opinion, there's no reason to even want to change the New Yorker, nor to equate it with any sort of cultural legitimacy in terms of what this loosely defined "we" are trying to do. The

New Yorker will never spread a greater understanding of experimental poetics unless they know how to sell it or assimilate it into whatever else it is they sell (culture, events, opinion), which of course they won't (because of idiots like us). In that way, it's hardly a "ray of light" but a rather wide swath of darkness -- not neutral even, but kind of negative (though on any other day I'd say it's pretty neutral). I think Prynne should win that award, whatever the hell it is, because I can't get over how great some of those poems are and that, in general over here, we don't know much about him -- it's like Hopkins or Dickinson coming to light. But it would be sad to see that the first widely disseminated writing on Prynne would be a fluff article in the New Yorker, but then again, if they print one of his poems, Prynne seems prepared: his writing is almost armored against any easy discursive assimilation, while being so formally crystalline as to not "go gently" into the anonymity that the magazine seems to want to cloak its authors in, not to mention the chummy garbage they'd probably want to spread about him.

Ok, this all sounds terrible cynical. Here's another example (my facts will be all wrong here), an English one, which had to do with Iain Sinclair's editing of the Palladin poetry series, which got books by folks like Allen Fisher and Bill Griffiths into the "mainstream." The books didn't sell all that well, the publisher decided to stop the series and pulped the entire print run -- not drop them in used book stores like, say, I do, or keep them in their attics for posterity or whomever might be interested, just destroyed them. "Their" laws are just too different from "ours" in this way. Another example: David Lehman has to write a book on poetry, and decides in the last chapter, while he had his moment behind the "bully pulpit", to get out all his grumpiness on the charlatans he feels have filled the shoes of immortals unjustly(one of his sestinas was rejected from L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E, I hear). He does this while answering a few calls, changing the ribbon in his typewriter and listening to Rachmaninov (like his heroes, right) -- in other words, here he is engaged in serious intellectual activity that affects, in direct and indirect ways, great numbers of people, and he doesn't care enough to think through his ideas, read any of the literature, etc, or to even quote from it adequately (only in censure), but has no scruples about weighing in with a moral judgment that, to those who don't know better, can be taken for the general opinion on things (like, "disco is out"). Ethics, ethics, ethics. So I go to Montreal a few months back and, trying to dig up some Earle Birney books (they didn't have them) discover that the only book I can find of "New York school" poetry in the stores in Lehman's! The essential continuity, throughout these examples, is that none of these central, big publishing outfits ever took the time to care about the work they were presenting in an effort to be hip; it's all very cynical and manipulative.

Which is why Prynne is great: he's only had one or two "trade" books and the rest, I think, were small chapbooks; he doesn't write reviews far as I know, and I think there is a kind of built in auto-critical aspect to his poems, whereby they have very attractive, almost conservative (or "formal"), surfaces (they even look good hanging on a wall from across the room) but you can't simply breeze through them, follow the stately rhythms (they change constantly) nor do you just wait for the good jokes or accept them as some sort of "experience in language" -- his own little controversy with McCaffery over language poetics seemed to center around this aspect of the "play" of language, the semantic slippage, as providing a sort of ease for the reader rather than the difficulty he wanted. I think there's an ethical dimension to his "difficulty" and that part of it has to do with this relationship to other forms of literature -- mainstream, the media, whatever -- that don't trouble you into thought. It has a relationship to a variety of things, actually, and I don't claim to understand them all. But part of the problem with these ideas of aesthetic merging -- i.e. lets break down the walls of these aesthetic camps and just meet halfway -- is precisely when it extends to places like the New Yorker, which has always been a non-entity and should remain that way, and when it is not truly in the service of a complexity of thought on these matters which, we agree, are so important (and if "they" don't seem prepared or willing to keep up with "us," that's not our concern). The difference between two poor and ignored "experimental" writers in New York who don't write like each other is nothing compared to the difference between them and the writers that the New Yorker habitually tends to; then again, if the difference between those two (poor and ignored, etc.) writers is in their attitude to the New Yorker (standing in for other cultural institutions) it may in fact be a big difference and worth investigating. A kind of thoughtless merging of poetics tends to gloss over the fact that there are very particular attitudes that some of these "radical" poets possess toward assimilation into the dominant culture, that it isn't just a game to want to reject certain types of identities and aesthetic closures, and that many of us feel that we could write great poems for the New Yorker on any given day but don't.
Artaud wrote that "all writing is pigshit," or something like that, and at about the same time (the first half of the century) Brecht was giving an important literary award to a poem about a local bicycling star (it was called something like "Hey! hey! the Iron Man!" -- that's not even close but something like that). Why do people do things like this? I don't know, but a lot of us are still doing this very thing in more subtle ways today -- being "moral exhibitionists" in some quasi-nihilistic manner, and our art and maybe in our lives -- and to think that it's because we are really scratching at the doors of Culture wanting to get in is missing something very important. I couldn't see Prynne as a "ray of light" for the New Yorker because, after all, he would refuse to go to their parties -- it's part of him not to be this light. "Good" gestures by the New Yorker confuse the point, especially when they transcend the words and actions of those they affect (in this case poets who aren't considered to possibly have social powrer of their own), though then again probably brings it to a head. Ah, the patronage issue again... 1930's anyone?

I feel like I missed an earlier point, which had to do with the initial linking of social activism with changing the New Yorker, but if you graph out what exactly the entities are in these respective exchanges perhaps that's better -- use colored markers. Well, but anyway, my apologies for using your very short email for this William Blake moment, but I had some free time today.
Cheers, Brian

↑ Index

205. Damion Searls
Re: CLASS (Brink vs. Schultz)
Tue 14 Dec 1999

Kathy Lou Schultz wrote, quoting Leonard Brink:

> The
> following is an observation that lacks explanation or > supporting argumentation:
>
> "Of course language can't be seperated [sic -K.L.S.] from any of > those things [politics, class, etc. -D.S.]. They're made out of > language. Poems are made out of language, too. But it just doesn't > follow that poems are made of politics, class, etc".

I found it a kinda compelling argument as is, so I was curious how it would be rebutted. I imagine the "explanation or supporting argumentation" is as follows: If you accept the premise that class etc. are "made out of language" (i.e. ideologically/linguistically constructed; not "natural" but products of our linguistic (and material) culture), then it does not logically follow that everything linguistic has to do with class. (The logical structure, which is the only point I was understanding Mr. Brink to be making here, is the same as in the following: Curry is "made out of ingredients." Cakes are made out of ingredients too. But it just doesn't follow that cakes have anything to do with curry.)

I think the counterargument is to DENY that "class etc. are made out of language but language is not made out of class etc." This, I take it, would be Ms.

Schultz's argument: intrinsic in any linguistic utterance is some sort of tonal register or mark of class (and race? and gender?), so ANYTHING made up of language, e.g. poems, is also "made up of" class. That's a kind of compelling argument to me in the abstract, but when I think about it I'm not sure what it could really mean -- what would the Mark Of Class be, other than thematic content? -- so I'd appreciate some "explanation or supporting argumentation" here.

The other three counterarguments in Ms. Schultz's post I find less compelling.

[1]
>I believe that attempting to divorce writing from its >social/political contexts is dangerous. The act of >pretending that writing isn't political results in support >of dominant power relations.

I'm far from convinced that thinking about writing is ever all that political, whether one thinks writing is class-based, not class-based, or whatever. Maybe such thinking indirectly leads to political things (like publishing different sorts of writers, or what have you), but it just as often doesn't, and it's those other things, not the sitting around thinking, that either support or don't support dominant power relations. In any case, I imagine Mr. Brink would (to my mind more persuasively than in his above argument) claim that supporting/combatting power relations isn't necessarily poetics.

[2]
>I would suggest however >that the privilege to ignore class issues is just that: a >privilege.

True, but what exactly is wrong with that? Are you saying that living out a "privileged" existence is automatically bad? We shouldn't think about poetry because other people in the world are too poor/hungry? Or are you saying that privilege = bad poetics (because it leaves stuff out)? But everyone on this list is "privileged" -- it's a privilege to eat enough square meals a day to live, it's a privilege to be literate, to have access to a computer, to have been born -- so one's square meals (or having learned to read or parents' sex life) have to be incorporated in one's poems/poetics? Of course diet may well be relevant to poetics in some cases, either because of biographical circumstances (Poet X writes really short poems because he/she has only 2-minute breaks from his/her farming; poet Y caught some mind-altering disease from poor diet) or because a poet intentionally thematizes the issue in his/her poems. But that doesn't make it universally relevant; Brink's point seems more plausible to me than Schultz's implied point that "privilege" is NECESSARILY relevant to poetics.

And as for my two cents, I don't mind "non-poetics" issues on the poetics list (e.g. the Seattle WTO updates, Viequez (sp?), etc.). I'm not trying to shut down any discussions here by saying they're "not really poetics." (I'm actually trying to prod a better defense against Mr. Brink's argument.)

[3]
>I also >think it results in misreadings and shallow readings. I >return to the example of Erica Hunt. An analysis of Hunt's >that only concerned itself with "form, structure" etc. (as >if those things themselves weren't political!) would >result in a very uniformed, very cursory reading of this >important experimental poet.

See above. Clearly there are some poets less amenable to "formal" readings, and some poets more amenable to "formal" readings. I'm sure a "Who cares about class" person could come up with a poet as obvious for his/her position as Hunt is for Schultz's.

Curious what y'all think,
Damion Searls

↑ Index

206. Jordan Davis
Poetry City transit strike
Tue 14 Dec 1999

In the event of a New York City Transit Authority strike, the Thursday 16 December Poetry City reading by Catherine Barnett and Darlene Gold will be postponed to Thursday 27 January.

Watch this space for news about the Bernadette Mayer party for the reprinting of Midwinter Day - scheduled for Wednesday 22 December - apogee full moon solstice zowie!

Januray at Poetry City . 5 Union Square West . New York City

Thursday 6 January . 7 pm
Book Party for Kim Lyons's Abra Ca Dabra

Thursday 13 January . 7 pm
Greg Fuchs / Jane LeCroy

Thursday 20 January . 7 pm
Mariposa / Youme Landowne

all poetry city events free!
hosted by Anna Malmude and Jordan Davis
[redacted] . [redacted]

↑ Index

207. Acharya Hom Raj
Ness Ness and Ness
Tue 14 Dec 1999

I open up the computer and I find myself back in my old village, with the same cowshit. Whiteness/Blackness/Brown-ness/Pink-ness/and all mess of nesses, race, identity, ethnicity, whatever you want to call it. Let poetry be poetry. It does not need a caste. I recall back in the cobra-infested, mosquito-danced village in Nepal where I was born and raised how, when a kid was born, the priest had the sole/soul authority to name it. I am Hom not because my parents wanted me to be Hom but because the priest decided so, because they got the credentials, not you not me. And the last name always gives the caste which gives the nature. I remember one day my mother telling me not to play with the children of other caste. Can we play now? Can all of us play, or do we have to have find out from the priests how to judge? Do we first have to know the caste/tribe/ethnicity/class/gender/color/sexual orientation/the dinner they eat/how fat they are to "understand" their work? Yes I understand it's helpful but to a very lesser degree. The typical people in my village say, "Where the sun can't reach poets easily reach." (Ravi napugne thaonma kavi pughchhan.) When I look in the face of poetry it does not know color, race, bank account, etc. So here I am on the World Wide Web reaching everybody's mouth in cyberspace, all these poets from universities, especially America--The Big Place, the House of the High Priest--and as we say in Nepal, it's Back To Mangalamon!

best,
Hom.

↑ Index

208. David Cameron
Richard Maxwell
Tue 14 Dec 1999

Does anyone on this list happen to have an e-mail address for Richard Maxwell, the playwright? If so, could you please backchannel it to me?

thanks,

David Cameron

↑ Index

209. Alan Sondheim
(no subject)
Wed 15 Dec 1999

---

i slide down the slippery slope on a foreign planet this planet is light years away there are many strange and wonderful forms of life!
i'm sliding too fast!
i need to stop myself before i get killed!
i don't want to dissolve into a mess of disorganized molecules suddenly: i discover serrated edges!
there are tiny slips and precipitous drops in a regular order i attach serrated edges to my body!
my body slows into an easy descent
i discover this is a fine way to pass the time of day everything around here's got them now serrated edges are a new-found planetary wonder

↑ Index

210. Chris Stroffolino
Upcoming Gig
Wed 15 Dec 1999

> Volumen, a band in which I play keyboards in, will be > playing in NYC at Arlene's Grocery (or Groceries) on Stanton > and Ludlow, December 30th, 8PM....for free.... > even poets are invited....

↑ Index

211. Kevin Killian
Bay Area Now Walking Tour
Wed 15 Dec 1999

Hi Everybody,

As part of Yerba Buena Center for the Arts' Bay Area Now II art show, I will be leading a walking tour/performance piece on Thursday, December 16, 6 to 8p.m., Yerba Buena Center for the Arts, 701 Mission Street (at 3rd), San Francisco, free. Meet in the lobby.

I will be accompanied by many artists, curators, art students and street people, including Rex Ray, Norma Cole, Taylor Brady, Wayne Smith, and Jocelyn Saidenberg.

If you're in the area, hope to see you there.

Kevin Killian

↑ Index

212. Alan Sondheim
yes, by Doctor Leopold Konninger
Wed 15 Dec 1999

\

yes twirling_nikuko_! > zz; head -200 zz > yy; pico yy

twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!

twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!

- by Doctor Leopold Konninger

↑ Index

213. Maria Damon

Re: maria damon

Wed 15 Dec 1999

---

oh louis, louis! i "got" your "message" through psychic cyberroutes. "please contact" so i can find out the "nature" of your "urgency!" Please contact "ASAP"! (that means, "as soon as possible," for those of you not "in the know!")

At 11:34 PM -0500 12/8/99, Louis Cabri wrote:
>I desperately, immediately need to contact Maria Damon -- Maria -- Damon.
>Contacting: Maria Damon. Help! Does anyone know how I do it? How!
>It's Important! Help me! Please, let Maria Damon know I >need to get "in touch" with her. If you know how I do this -- thank >god! If you know -- great! If, that is, you know.
>
>Very concerned to make contact with Maria Damon,
>
>Shall R. Nameless

↑ Index

214. Charles Bernstein
Ed Dorn 1929-1999
Wed 15 Dec 1999

This obituary for Ed Dorn

by James Campbell

appeared in The Guardian on Tuesday December 14, 1999 and on The Guardian website:
http://www.newsunlimited.co.uk/obituaries/story/0%2C3604%2C114039%2C00.html

Edward Dorn

Poet rooted in the imagery of the dispossessed, of working-class America and the mythology of the wild west

The American poet Edward Dorn, who has died aged 70, had a loyal readership in Britain, despite having published little in this country for almost 25 years. He was grouped with the Black Mountain poets - named after the progressive college in North Carolina - but unlike Charles Olson, Robert Creeley and Robert Duncan, the leading "black mountaineers", was not a teacher at the college, only a student.

His poetry also stood apart from theirs in being rooted in working-class politics and a sense of wild western myth. A list of a few of his many titles gives a hint of the territory he occupied: Hands Up! Idaho Out, High West Rendezvous, and the most famous of them, Gunslinger.

Dorn was born in the prairie town of Villa Grove, Illinois, on the banks of the Embarras river, and was brought up between there and Michigan. The wanderlust was in his blood. He never knew his father. His mother was of Dutch ancestry, and his grandfather worked on the railroad. Of his home town, he said: "The first thing you're preoccupied with is how to exist. If you stayed, you had to have a pretty specific reason - you couldn't just stay."

Dorn's means of escape was through education: first, at the University of Illinois, and then, in 1950 and again in 1954, at Black Mountain College. He was taught there by Charles Olson, author of the Maximus Poems, a sprawling work in the manner of Ezra Pound's Cantos and William Carlos Williams's Paterson. Olson inspired Dorn to conceive of geography as the American subject, the one from which all other subjects derived, and indeed Dorn's first published book (1960) was called What I See In The Maximus Poems.

He even went to live in the fishing town of Gloucester, which forms the background to Olson's vast poem, and wrote poems of his own there, published as From Gloucester Out. Like several of Dorn's books, it was first published in London, in 1964.

His early poems were explicitly about working people: truck drivers, small farmers, hunters. Among the earliest poems he published was The Rick Of Green Wood (1956), a lyrical verse with an undertone derived from the English ballads, about a meeting with a woodcutter: "I don't/ want a rick of green wood, I told him/ I want cherry or alder or something strong/ and thin, or thick if dry, but I don't/ want the green wood, my wife would die."

Despite the advanced notions about life and art which he encountered at Black

Mountain, and his later attempts to write a poetry of ideas, Dorn's sympathies were always with the dispossessed. In The Debt My Mother Owed to Sears Roebuck, he wrote of " the dust of the fields/ in her eye, the only title she ever had to lands. "

Dorn's verse was inclined to be loose in structure. He could say, without blinking, that there was little difference between poetry and prose, and even between poetry and talk. His "talk" lacked the economy of other speaking-voice poets - such as Allen Ginsberg at his best, or the minimalist Robert Creeley, who was Dorn's examiner at Black Mountain College.

But he was right to stay true to his themes and his poetic voice. At the end of the 1960s, he made his peace with the cowboy, and began the poem which was to make his name and grant him a status equal to that of his older teachers.

Gunslinger I & 2 was published in Britain by the late, lamented Fulcrum Press in 1970. It showed Dorn in a new mode, hip and humorous, combining the iconic figure of the old west with concepts drawn from his readings in philosophy and science. Just to stop his epic - there were to be four books in all - from getting too serious, he gave the gunslinger of the title a talking horse, who was apt to roll a joint in the middle of a conversation, introduced a character called "I" in addition to the first-person narrator, and put all his characters at the service of a cabaret owner called Miss Lil.

Dorn's relationship with England began when he arrived to teach at the University of Essex as a Fulbright lecturer in 1964.

His first marriage ended in divorce and he married an Englishwoman, Jennifer Dunbar, with whom he collaborated on several projects. He soon made friends among the standard-bearers of England's alternative literary scene, such as the poets Tom Raworth and JH Prynne (to both of whom he dedicated his book The North Atlantic Turbine), Tom Pickard, who ran the Morden Tower in Newcastle, and the publisher Stuart Montgomery, of Fulcrum Press.

England, Dorn said, "set me on a new course," but his politics sometimes tempted him to take a hammer to England's class system. In the long poem, Oxford, he wrote: "The woman opposite/ by no act other than Murder/ is permitted existence." When he used the same blunt in strument on his own country - "the thorn in the throat of our national hypocrisy" etc - the result was effective neither as poetry nor as rabble-rousing.

Politics and poetics were in a state of constant interplay in Dorn's work. The function of the poet in America, he said, was to "stay as removed as possible from all permanent associations with power". As for the institutional prizes, such as the National Book Award and the Pulitzer, his words were: "Who cares?"

At a reading in London in late 1998 , Dorn, clearly ill, gave a strange, mesmerising performance, which was somewhere between poetry, stand-up comedy and personal tragedy. He prefaced each poem with a long introduction, straying easily from the point, and then, just as he had the audience chuckling, would burst into tears for no apparent reason.

The overall impression was of an almost unbearable sensitivity. He treated the listeners in the hall as he might have done a group of friends invited to his home, and this too could be seen as part of his aesthetic. He once joked that he knew "almost exactly how many readers I have, and I even know a large percentage of them personally".

Although populist in politics, Dorn was a cult writer whose natural home was on the fringe. Gunslinger would have baffled the "chunky westerner" of whom he wrote in Home On The Range, or the cowboy who sings "Yi Yi" in Vaquero, another early poem. While in his early days he too worked by turning his hand to whatever came along, from the mid-1960s onwards he earned his living as a university teacher in Kansas, Chicago, San Francisco and Boulder, Colorado, among other places.

Dorn was remarkably prolific, turning out chapbooks, pamphlets, magazines and books which merged into other books. Between the years 1968-72, for instance, he published almost 20 titles of poetry, fiction and non-fiction. With Prynne and others, he issued Bean News, in which journalism and poetry, fact and forgery overlapped. More recently, he was engaged in Languedoc Variorum: A Defence Of Heresy And Heretics, a long poem with a running prose com mentary, which Etruscan Books, in Devon, have been planning to publish in 2000.

His novel, By The Sound, appeared in 1971, and his Collected Poems in 1983. In 1996 his High West Rendezvous was published, and this year saw the appearance of Sun Unwound, translations with Gordon Brotherstone of Latin American poetry.

Dorn's wife Jennifer, and their son and daughter, survive him, as does his first wife, and his stepson, stepdaughter and son from that marriage.

£#149; Edward Dorn, poet, born April 12
1929; died December 10 1999

↑ Index

215. Jordan Davis
Poetry City is on
Wed 15 Dec 1999

No strike!
Poetry City is on!
Thursday night, Dec 16 at 7 pm
Catherine Barnett
&
Darlene Gold
at Teachers & Writers
5 Union Sq W
NYC

↑ Index

216. Doug Lang
Re: Ed Dorn 1929-1999
Wed 15 Dec 1999

Hi, Charles.

I'd visited The Guardian's website, to see what they would say. It's a typically British view of any poet or poetry that does not fit the prevailing, rigid, and limiting model of what poetry should be.

Terms like "cult writer" and "remarkably prolific" are key phrases, showing the true disdain that is in back of this condescending, provincial guff.

Well, the hell with that. It's been 27 years since I left the UK, and it's so comforting to know that little or nothing has changed, except that there are even more committed, accomplished poets there now, who can be ignored by the mainstream, or dismissed as marginal, or odd, or, god forbid, too much under the American influence.

Dorn's influence and spirit will remain,
I trust. Something for which I'm grateful.

Best regards,
Doug

Doug Lang
3945 Connecticut Ave NW Apt.110
Washington DC 20008-2415

[redacted]

↑ Index

217. david bromige
Ed Dorn Obit
Thu 16 Dec 1999

On a Clause in His Obit

> cult writer whose natural home was on the fringe.

Dont give me a home where the bullshitters roam and maindrainins and middleclass play where 'tis a great ruth noone tries the truth and this Dorn guy's not studied all day.

His home, home is the fringe where the lickspittle tenderfeet cringe from the cow-poke Ed Dorn who was born to be thorn in the sides of their epics to whinge.

+++++++++

further verses invited.

db

↑ Index

218. david bromige
quaint
Thu 16 Dec 1999

Listmates, I must hove to and heave off, and shall leave the List for a week. I have a tiny gift for you, I hope you enjoy, and it is

Quaint

(inspired by Mark Weiss' reply to a correspondent who found Freud 'quaint,'--inspired by but having nothing to do with)

I like quaint. I like to cultivate quaint, to have quaint hanging round my ardent gate, there is nothing like quaint. I look at a woman and I think "quaint," and when this happens, I am always atttracted. Metaphorically speaking, I would eat quaint for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Intellectually speaking, I wish to penetrate quaint. I want to know it back to front and upside down and inside out and I have the equipment for the task, I'm told.

Quaint is a spring day in the rain in England's Cotswold Hills, by the bait-house, beside the marsh, at eleven standing beside your sister who is sixteen inches taller, and thinking youd better not go to bed with her. Quaint is not merely decorative. It fills with meaning and some it it sticks. Quaint tells you, "Dont get any ideas," except, of course, the idea that it's quaint. If I get up in the morning, it's thanks to quaint. I cant recommend quaint highly enough.

I stay up late for quaint. I keep solemn watch for quaint, I abide its coming, as things do to me. When people tell me, "Quaint is catching on too fast and becoming common," I always agree. Because I think its a quaint idea. I'm glad theres quaint enough to go around. Speaking, as we were, of quaint, I double over, as though in pain. I look through my legs and have a great view of quaint. One never gets over it not entirely. Your very existence now is quaint.

David

↑ Index

219. Poetics List
Re: Edward Dorn, 1929-1999 / Sylvester
Thu 16 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Tue, Dec 14, 1999 8:39 AM -0500
From: William A Sylvester <[redacted]>

On one reading Dorn gave at UB, he quoted Olson:

Don't write your own poetry.
Write poetry

Dorn certainly did.

Bill Sylvester

On Mon, 13 Dec 1999, Poetics List Administration wrote:

> The death of Ed Dorn represents a great loss, if not unexpected.
> I did not know him, though I found his work delightful and important;
> out of respect for his friends, I will offer only this poem from his book
> -Geography- (London: Fulcrum Press, 1965). Chris
>
> --
>
> Mourning Letter, March 29, 1963
>
> No hesitation
> would stay me
> from weeping this morning
> for the miners of Hazard Kentucky.
> The mine owners'
> extortionary skulls
> whose eyes are diamonds don't float
> down the rivers, as they should,
> of the flood
>
> The miners, cold
> starved, driven from work, in > their homes float though and float
> on the ribbed ships of their frail
> bodies,
>
> Oh, go letter,
> keep my own misery close to theirs
> associate me with no other honor.

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

220. Poetics List
Dylan Thomas-A Child's Xmas in Wales / Fouhy
Thu 16 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: George Fouhy <[redacted]>
Date: 12/16/99 1:25 AM -0500

This is the last reading of 1999! Our traditional poetry reading of Dylan Thomas' poem- A Child's Christmas in Wales read by Poet Ron Price followed by open mike.
Hot cider and cozy atmosphere. Relax and enjoy an evening remembering a long ago Christmas.....
Find details at:

http://www.bestweb.net/~cindyf/poetry_2000.htm

A Peaceful Winter to All.....
Creative Arts Cafe Poetry Series

↑ Index

221. Robert Freedman
Re: sociology of bookstores
Thu 16 Dec 1999

Here's one that is exclusively poetry, but it's mail and phone order, so I don't know if it counts:

The Spring Church Book Company in Spring Church, Pennsylvania is a unique place to get just about any poetry book in print--and many that aren't. The toll-free number is [redacted]. The address is PO Box 127, Spring Church, PA 15686

----- Original Message -----
From: Lowther, John <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, December 14, 1999 10:36 AM Subject: Re: sociology of bookstores

> maria damon wrote;
> (and th eonly bookstore nationally
> to specialize > exclusively in poetry)
> and

> i thought there was _Open_ in seattle
> its in wallingford (sp?) i think

↑ Index

222. Wright Laura E
new chapbooks
Thu 16 Dec 1999

New from Poetry New York:
Near To by Mark DuCharme Hide: what's difficult by Laura Wright

for more info,
http://members.tripod.com/~PNY_journal/

"I would sooner read a timetable or a catalogue than nothing at all."
-W. Somerset Maugham

Laura E. Wright
Norlin Acquisitions
[redacted]

↑ Index

223. Mark Prejsnar
looking @ poetix
Thu 16 Dec 1999

On the way in to work, i was reading the really lovely and useful new Roof book, poetics@ ..... It collects posts from this list, and is superbly edited by Joel K.

Herewith, scattered thoughts; not especially deep.

1. Someone mentioned recently the oddness of producing a hardcopy, ol' fashioned book from internet text... This is true, but once one is reading it, it's clear that this is not unlike collecting essays or whatever: on one level it is primarily a selection function; i had read some of these posts in the archive 3 or 3 and a half years ago, when first subscribed myself to the List; but this volume focuses on certain threads in a productive and helpful way ; of course there are other interesting levels, to the project of wrapping paper around the photons of the cyber-nonplace.... But on the simplist level this is a helpful thought-provoking project....

2. i was reading the long exchange between Ron Silliman and Steve Evans, much of which i'd seen before on the archives, and it is one of the high points in the history of the list; this is the one where they somewhat hesitantly designate two "generations" called G1 and G2 and discuss them.

3. Among the main frames of reference in that particular exchange, is the (in)famous Apex of the M manifesto, and the group behind it is a major point of reference as well... Given the salience of that group and their particular ideological framework at that time here on the list, i am somewhat surprised to realize that that whole set of questions, and that group qua group and their ideas about religion and spirituality in relation to nonmainstream writing, so not seem to have had any further public visibility..... Maybe i just haven't been in the right places to see it.... Can anyone enighten me about the further Adventures of the M??? It seems as though the rather abrupt disappearance of their flagship magazine, after a pretty brief existence (i was told it was partly a matter of losing the necessary funding, but the whole story was foggy to me) caused their entire project to disappear like a cartoon magician.... Given the messianic tones of their self-presentation, this seems peculiar...

4. One of the main reflections occasioned by Joel's excellent book is, that the list is rather feeble these days compared to times in the past; i expect this to be fleeting: it has gone thru peaks and valleys again and again...But substantive (and fair and temperate) discussions of poetix ideas have been less in evidence in the last 6 months than maybe anytime i'm aware of.... Ideas are often tossed up, but there is very little solid exchange and extended examination of poetics concerns.....

5. Much happens between Ron and Steve in relation to another topic, one which Ron and many others have discussed at various times in other contexts: whether younger poets (the so called "G2") is lacking in a political or social dimension, and if so what that means... Their exchange remians very rich and i recommend it to folks who have not seen it; but one thing does occur, which constitutes at least my personal perspective on this issue: as we've talked about on the list before, both Ron and Barrett Watten have publicly questioned this depoliticization of the nonmainstream project... But as someone whose poltical edge in my poetry has always grown out of my concerns as an active socialist, it occurs to me that in part these critiques get things backward: If one is actively engaged in building the left, then that is likely to influence the shape and momentum of one's work as a poet... While socially critical poets and poetics have often helped (in a limited way) to create and perpetuate space for independent and rebellious thinking, it may be a little simplistic to feel that a poetics with political goals and edges can live by itself, without the poets having personal involvement with a real left.... At any event, that is the way politics flows within my life: being concerned with and involved with activism, sort of "comes first" logically and existentially; that my poetry and my ideas about poetics are socialist in nature, grows out of that... and doesn't seem all that problematic, at least on one (admittedly simplistic) level, that is very important as a day-to-day lived thing: i live in a certain part of the country; i'm in love with a certain woman; these things influence my thinking and practice; so does the fact that i am convinced of the need for a total renovation of my society in an antiracist, feminist and socialist direction. Yes questions about the political function of form get real complicated from that point on.... But when i read a superb debate like that between RS and SE, about why younger poets are not as social and political in their ideas and practice, as the wave of the 1970s, i feel that one part of the puzzle is: look to their lives, to what's important to them day to day; ... it may be not only unrealistic, but even undesireable, to ask poets to focus on politics only or mainly in their work ... if they care about it in their lives, it seems likely that it will find incarntions in their words...

Anyway, go read the book: it is fun and functional....

-mark

↑ Index

224. Stephen Vincent
Bookstore Sosh
Thu 16 Dec 1999

In the early seventies I liked it (initially) when Bookstores identified poets by "origin" - particularly new writing coming from new sources with fresh &/or radical views (woman, black, Asian, Latino, etc.) and even did my own book shelves something in that manner (Black Mountain, New York School, Moderns, SF Bay Area (and all the various sub-groupings of that!) African, surrealists, etc. But a few decade later (as good writers got more identified by their writing rather than their group), I became pro-Alphabet I like the chance associations. Baudelaire spine to spine with Ted Berrigan, etc. On the other hand - when I go into out-of-print book search engines, one has to go to hell and back through hundreds of books (so it seems) by Stephen Vincent Benet before you find Stephen Vincent, as I remain.

↑ Index

225. Keith Tuma
Dorn
Thu 16 Dec 1999

Adding to the Dorn obituary Charles Bernstein forwarded yesterday this from today's _The Independent_ (England), written by Tom Raworth. It's accompanied by a photograph of Dorn and a poem from _Hands Up!_ (1964), "A Fate of Unannounced Years." Hoping that the editors at the _Chicago Review_ won't mind, I'll also append a recent poem by Dorn published there (45.2, 1999).

***

EDWARD DORN

With the death of Edward Dorn the United States loses not only one of its finest poets but a rare critical intelligence and cultural commentator. Edward Merton Dorn was born in rural Illinois at the start of the Great Depression, in poverty. He was educated in a one room schoolhouse, then High School (where he helped on the local newspaper) and for two years at the University of Illinois. He worked for a while at the Boeing plant in Seattle, returned to Illinois, and through his art teacher Raymond Obermayr was directed towards Black Mountain College in North Carolina where he arrived in the autumn of 1950. In 1951 he left and travelled to the Pacific Northwest, where he did manual work and met his first wife, Helene. In late 1954 they returned to Black Mountain, where he studied under Charles Olson (Dorn's first published work was the pamphlet What I See in the Maximus Poems) and graduated in 1955 with Robert Creeley as one of his examiners. After two years of further travel the family settled in Washington state. Their life there, on the edge of poverty, is vividly portrayed in Dorn's first prose book, The Rites of Passage (later republished as By The Sound). By 1959 they were in New Mexico, and at the end of 1961 moved to Pocatello, where Dorn taught at the University of Idaho until the middle of 1965. Donald Allen's anthology The New American Poetry (1960) included some of Dorn's early poems, but his first book The Newly Fallen was not published until 1961 by Amiri Baraka (then LeRoi Jones)'s Totem Press in New York. Three years later the same press published Hands Up! Poems from this period, so clear, moving, unromantic and filled with the memories of his hard early life -- On the Debt My Mother Owed to Sears RoeBuck, for example -- echoed not only in the United States, but across the Atlantic. In the summer of 1965 Dorn and the photographer Leroy Lucas collaborated on The Shoshoneans: The People of the Basin Plateau -- a book too long out-of-print which anticipated the now fashionable interest in all things Native American, and gracefully left the last words not to the authors, but to Clyde Warrior, an activist. That autumn, at the invitation of Donald Davie, the family arrived in England where, with a year's break, Dorn was to teach at the new University of Essex until 1970. Dorn arrived already aware of the work of young British poets such as Tom Pickard and Lee Harwood, and he had corresponded for some time with J.H.Prynne (who accompanied the Dorns on their trans-atlantic liner). The American poet Tom Clark was a graduate student at Essex and shared many of Dorn's interests. Creeley, Olson and other visitors passed through the various flats and houses in Colchester and Wivenhoe. On the faculty was Gordon Brotherston, and Dorn began with him a series of collaborative translations of Latin American poetry that continued for decades. He met Jennifer Dunbar, his second wife. In London there was a lively small press scene and Stuart and Deirdre Montgomerys' Fulcrum Press published two collections of poems: Geography (1965), and The North Atlantic Turbine (1967). And Dorn began to write Gunslinger, one of the major North American long poems, first published as a sequence of books while in progress and finally as one volume in 1975, the year after its completion. Those years saw the Dorns in Chicago, in Mexico, and, with occasional breaks, in San Francisco. Dorn's early newspaper experience and his work in the Print Shop at Black Mountain combined in the tabloid Bean News, with contributions by Prynne and other correspondents. His neighbour Holbrook Teter's old linotype machine, held together with wire, produced the type for this, and for the complete Gunslinger, while Teter's partner Michael Myers drew the elegant cover for Recollections of Gran Apachería, Dorn's next book. In the autumn of 1977 Dorn began to teach at the University of Colorado in Boulder where, in 1980, he and his wife Jennifer started Rolling Stock (motto: If it moves, print it!), a newspaper sized journal that encompassed their many interests (including a delightful golf column by Nick Sedgwick) and ran throughout the decade. Still happy to work with his hands he built his own workroom with scrap timber. The academic world didn't escape his pen... Captain Jack's Chaps (1983), is an hilarious account of the MLA conference in Houston, and he ended the decade with Abhorrences (1990), a collection of short, savage observations. During his last years he continued to travel... in Montana, in Wyoming.. and to write (even a Country and Western song) with undiminished energy. An exchange year teaching in the south of France, at Montpellier, sparked a new interest in the Cathars and Simon de Montfort. It is thanks to Nicholas Johnston's Etruscan Books that some of his later work is in print in Britain. Dorn suffered fools not at all, and sloppy thinking not for a moment: a lonely position at the best of times, and one that made him almost persona non grata in the current literary and academic climate of his homeland. For anyone interested to see how wit, intelligence and a dispassionate eye can survive through pain, I suggest reading Chemo du Jour (Denver Quarterly, Spring 99) ... .the Clinton impeachment seen through chemotherapy.

A line in a note this morning from the Swansea-born poet Doug Lang comes to mind: "When I first read his work, in 1970, it changed my idea about what poetry could be."

He died at home, in his own bed, with his family beside him, in the West: a pure American who didn't go crazy. Fools can sleep easier.

Edward Merton Dorn, poet and teacher: born Villa Grove, Illinois, USA, 2 April 1929. Married Helene Buck (one son). Married Jennifer Dunbar (one son, one daughter); died 10 December 1999, Denver, Colorado USA.

***

A Fate of Unannounced Years

I will have to pick my cluster of grapes in this country,
after everyone else has gone to Korcula or Spain. It will be strange here, walking through the parks, the folding chairs gone, the meandering lovers and old women in their Sunday hats gone;
an empty air, and a peaceful kind of rest.
Finding myself in america slowly walking around the deserted bandstand, waiting for the decade, and the facetious new arrivals.

--Edward Dorn

***

Tribe

My tribe was lowdown struggling day labor Depression South Eastern Illinois just before the southern hills start to roll toward the coal country where the east/west morainal ridges of Wisconsin trash pile up at the bottom of the prairie, socially a far midwest recrudescence of Appalachia my grandfather French Quebecois Master pipefitter in the age of steam Indian fifty percent, very French who didn't derogate himself as a breed, showed none of those tedious tendentious tendencies. Came down from Chebanse, from the Illinois Central in Iroquois County, to the Chicago & Eastern Illinois line's division at Villa Grove in one of the Twenties boomlets, the last precipitous edges of the great devolvment

These forebears on my mother's side owned a nice clapboard house in old town where I was brought up off and on during the intensity of the depression nomadism, wandering work search, up and down the bleak grit avenues of Flint, following other exodus relatives, Belgian in-laws from another French connexion Michael Moore-land from the beginning manmade poisons in the cattle feed way before Creutzfeldt-Jacob disease and angry cows-- governments always conspire against the population and sometimes this is not even malice;

just nothing better to do.

I'm with the Kurds alright-- World Leaders can claim
what they want about terror, even as they wholesale helicopter gunships to the torturers--even as they lie like Clinton and his crazy battle-axe Secretary of State.

But I'm as proud of my tribe as if I were a Kurd, my pure Kentucky English great grandma-- it would take more paper than I'll _ever have_ to express how guiltless and justified I feel.

--Ed Dorn

↑ Index

226. Summi Kaipa
happi-, sad-, fearless- nesses
Thu 16 Dec 1999

---

a poetry without human-ness informing it? take out all nesses & it gets quite boring.

sad-ness that as an upper caste-er you cannot play with the lower caste-er. as though the rules, once again, impede the progress of the upper castes. a yup-pie couple in san francisco moves into an industrial "live/work" space and then begins to call the police to complain about the noise.

perhaps what the sun can't reach (this is a more universal saying than you might imagine for it exists in many Indian languages too--i've certainly heard it in telugu) are the innards/nesses which you so easily dismiss.

sumana siva kaipa
caste-less-ness?

At 02:28 PM 12/14/99 -0700, you wrote:
>I open up the computer and I find myself back in my old village, with the >same cowshit. Whiteness/Blackness/Brown-ness/Pink-ness/and all mess of >nesses, race, identity, ethnicity, whatever you want to call it. Let >poetry be poetry. It does not need a caste. I recall back in the >cobra-infested, mosquito-danced village in Nepal where I was born and >raised how, when a kid was born, the priest had the sole/soul authority to >name it. I am Hom not because my parents wanted me to be Hom but because >the priest decided so, because they got the credentials, not you not me.

>And the last name always gives the caste which gives the nature. I >remember one day my mother telling me not to play with the children of >other caste.
>Can we play now? Can all of us play, or do we have to have find out from >the priests how to judge? Do we first have to know the >caste/tribe/ethnicity/class/gender/color/sexual orientation/the dinner >they eat/how fat they are to "understand" their work? Yes I understand >it's helpful but to a very lesser degree. The typical people in my village >say, "Where the sun can't reach poets easily reach." (Ravi napugne thaonma >kavi pughchhan.) When I look in the face of poetry it does not know color, >race, bank account, etc.
>So here I am on the World Wide Web reaching everybody's mouth in >cyberspace, all these poets from universities, especially America--The Big >Place, the House of the High Priest--and as we say in Nepal, it's Back To >Mangalamon!
>
>best,
>Hom.

↑ Index

227. MAYHEW
Prynne
Thu 16 Dec 1999

Re Brian Stefans' intelligent post yesterday: If the New Yorker published Prynne in great abundance, how would this be seen? After a while people would say that Prynne had been co-opted, that "of course the New Yorker publishes Prynne, but not the numerous other poets it should publish." Just as the New Yorker has published Asbhery for the past twenty years. This is not seen as a sign of the New Yorker's hipness, but, as it were, of a certain lack of hipness of Ashbery himself--he's the sort of poet who writes for the New Yorker. So there is a sort of Asbhery of the "right" and an Asbhery of the "left." The Ashbery of Vendler and Bloom and the Ashbery of Perloff, etc... Interestingly enough, one of the poets nominated for this prize is John Koethe, an excellent poet though derivative of the more accessible, New Yorker side of Ashbery.

Which brings me back to the Lehman book. Isn't it sort of the New York school of the right that appears in this book? Lehman himself represents the legacy of the New York school when filtered through an essentially conservative viewpoint. for example the cute villanelle in that big Norton Postmodern anthology...

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

↑ Index

228. Catherine Daly
Re: sociology of bookstores
Thu 16 Dec 1999

I was in a Borders the other day -- a poetry reading was my excuse -- looking for a book on the Huns. Lo, I found significant amounts of poetry in the History section, which is subcategorized by time: classical, below the Loeb Classics Library, and next to that, Medieval Studies, etc.

Even Powell's is divided this way, but at least "the classics" are next to the poetry. Literary Theory, in the center of a u-shaped Literature section, had some of the "missing" Philosophy.

I think it is ironic that ideas are being redivided by the "common" threads people seek, but it is a significant marketing tool.

My mom reports that jobs in the classifieds used to be categorized "male" and "female".

As for the Grolier, I went out of my way to get there the last time I was in Boston, quickly grabbed a lot of stuff, and then Louisa was very disappointed, since unbeknownst to me, there was a big 1/2 off sale. Which led me to wonder, if she didn't want to sell anything at a discount, why was she having a sale?

She will order by e-mail:

E-Mail the Louisa Solano at the Grolier Bookshop
[redacted]

Visit the Grolier Bookshop Web Site
http://world.std.com/~jpwilson/grolier.html

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

229. Mark Prejsnar
No Longer Contemporary
Thu 16 Dec 1999

Well it appears Silliman and Bernstein and all those old fogeys have finally acheived historicity (or had it thrust on 'em)--

This text appears in the new catalog from Univeristy Press of New England:

"Founded in 1971, and internationally famous as the formost publisher of scholarly work on Ezra Pound and the Pound tradition, National Poetry Foundation is dedicated to publishing the language poets, Black Mountain school, and Beat poets, as well as contemporary work."

↑ Index

230. Loss Pequeño Glazier
Report on the Electronic Poetry Center, Dec. 1999
Thu 16 Dec 1999

EPC REPORT -- POETICS LIST December, 1999

The Electronic Poetry Center, now after almost six years of operation, has established itself internationally, nationally, and at UB as a significant web-based resource for poetry and is one of UB's most visible digital projects. We wanted to give a report on the EPC, including some information not easily available. Please contact us if you would like more information.

Loss Pequeño Glazier, EPC Director
Charles Bernstein, EPC Executive Editor

Statistics
Based on November, 1999, statistics:
Annual hits per year: 7.5 million (or about 21,000 per day)
Our most popular section is the author pages, but there is significant activity on the entire site.
Total annual hits to all our on-line syllabi: 22,000 (about 60 a day)
The Poetics Program home page gets about 20,000 hits per year, and the Program description about 2,500 (or about 7 per day).

November visitors came from the U.S., and over 90 foreign countries (full list at the end of this message).

New
Some new links and features at the EPC include:
- An Evening with Robert Creeley in Real Video (forthcoming)
- The EPC Electronic Poetry page (forthcoming)
- Impulsive Behavior Andrews, Torres, Bernstein in Real Video
- Samuel Delany Author Page
- Lyn Hejinian Author Page
- Joanne Kyger Author Page
- Ted Berrigan Author Page
- William Burroughs Author Page
- Ethnopoetics at the Millennium (Jerome Rothenberg)
- Three Paris Elegies (Rothenberg)
- Tinfish #7
- Deluxe Rubber Chicken #4

Please visit the EPC (http://epc.buffalo.edu/) and select "New" for these and other recently-listed items!

--- ---

International Use of the EPC
November visitors came from the U.S., and over 90 foreign countries (in order of frequency):
United Kingdom
Canada
United States
Australia
Germany
United Arab Emirates
Sweden
Japan
France Netherlands
Brazil
New Zealand
Italy
Norway
Argentina
Singapore
Finland
Belgium
Austria
Spain
Mexico

Switzerland
Denmark
Malaysia
Ireland
Poland
Russian Federation
South Africa
Thailand
Indonesia
Greece
Georgia
Israel
Taiwan
South Korea
Saudi Arabia
India
Croatia
Hungary
Trinidad and Tobago
Czech Republic
Turkey
Portugal
Hong Kong
China
Iceland
Estonia
Romania
Morocco
Slovenia Ukraine
Peru
Yugoslavia
Uruguay
Chile
Colombia
Lebanon
Jordan
Dominican Republic
Bulgaria
Slovak Republic
Pakistan
Tadjikistan

Nicaragua
Bermuda
Venezuela
Latvia
Luxembourg Philippines
Kazakhstan
Vatican City State
Bosnia-Herzegovina
Former USSR
Lithuania
Costa Rica
Moldavia
Mozambique
Malta
Faroe Islands
Uganda
San Marino
Dominica
Kenya
Bahamas
Iran
Sri Lanka
Brunei Darussalam
Belarus
Christmas Island
Cyprus
Ecuador International
Kyrgyzstan
Qatar

END OF REPORT

↑ Index

231. Katie Degentesh
class stand
Thu 16 Dec 1999

Kathy: Looks to me as if the fact that you're used to being "personally attacked" for insisting on the importance of class issues in poetry has left you a bit defensive. I'm not arguing for the 'divorce' of sociopolitics and poetry -- I just don't think codependence is healthy.

And, for you and everyone else, just to clarify once again: the theme of my original post wasn't "who cares about class" but "why is class the main concern on a poetics list?" As I said in a private post to Kathy (her original response was sent to me only and forwarded to the list a day or so later; I didn't keep a copy of what I sent her privately, so I must paraphrase): I completely agree that 'class/race/gender/blah blah blah' does infuse the writing of everyone who writes.

But, as Leonard pointed out, if class is a part of poetics, it doesn't follow that a discussion of class is automatically a discussion of poetics, and focusing solely on class when discussing poetics is like wearing blinkers -- they may be differently configured than the blinkers of those who, in KLS' words, stick their "head in the sand, in effect saying 'don't talk about things like racism that make me uncomfortable,'" but they're still blinkers. To pick any one filter through which all poems must be processed is extremely limiting -- to go from the limitations of one particular class (e.g., the "administration of culture") to an arena in which a poet's capital-c Class is the primary concern when evaluating his or her work is barely an improvement.

↑ Index

232. Undetermined origin c/o LISTSERV administrator sorry for the multi-address
Thu 16 Dec 1999

---

my apologies to anyone who is uninterested in this it was forwarded to me by poet sheila murphy and ive looked at it a bit --- it seems on the up and up to the limited extent that i can tell from looking at it --- i made it the page that comes up automatically when i pull up the web, then i can give it a click cdnt hurt.. (cd it?)

> Subject: HUNGER
> Quite clever of the UN to do this. Go to the Hunger Site at the UN. All you do is click a button and somewhere in the world some hungry person gets a meal to eat, at no cost to you. The food is paid for by corporate sponsors (who gain advertising in the process because you see their logo). All you do is go to the site and click. But you're only allowed one click per day. So spread the word to others. Visit the site and pass the word.

> http://www.thehungersite.com

↑ Index

233. David Gitin
Re: quaint
Thu 16 Dec 1999

You do know, David, its more common variant, what it is a man seeks, and re-buffed, often in anger calls a lady?

↑ Index

234. Charles Bernstein
MLA Events / Chicago 1999
Thu 16 Dec 1999

Here are several Chicago MLA events with which I am involved:

Session #168: Tuesday, Dec. 28th at 8:30am in Parlor F (Sheraton). "Globalization and the Possibilities for a Literature of the Americas." Session Leader: Ernesto Grosman, with talks by Lucia Helena Santiago Costigan, Roland Greene, and Grosman. I'll be the respondent.

Session #597A. Wednesday, Dec. 29, 3:30pm, Columbus Hall I and J, Hyatt Regency. "Conversations with Poets: Robert Creeley." Creeley will read poems and respond questions from the audience and from Susan Stewart, Sandra Bermann, and me.

Session # 640. A Poetry Reading by Kathleen Fraser and Lorenzo Thomas, in honor of their forthcoming essay books from the University of Alabama Press; Water Tower (Hyatt-Regency). Hank Lazer will introduce. (Note the Paul Hoover reading oriognally scheduled for this time has been cancelled.) STOP BY the University of Alabama Press table (booth 303) for information about the Modern and Contemporarty Poetics series -- and a preview of these new books.

Session #717. Wednesday, Dec. 29, 9pm, Cominsky (Hyatt Regency). "Poetry and the Inauthentic." An all Poetics List panel on fraud, hoaxes, sincerity, and identity. Bob Perelman, Presiding; talks by Brian McHale, Philip Mead (on 'Ern Malley), Hank Lazer, and me. Sadly, Mead is unable to get to US but Bob Perelaman will read his paper and no doubt add some thoughts of his own on the Malley affair.

Hope to see some of you there (please say hello!) --

& best for the Holidays to all in Poetics Listville!

Charles

↑ Index

235. Elizabeth Treadwell
Lucy House Preview
Thu 16 Dec 1999

Lucy House: an anthology of prose

is under construction now right now you can read new prose by

Liz Waldner
Susan M. Schultz
Cydney Chadwick
Brenda Coultas

by clicking the URL below.

_____
Elizabeth Treadwell
Double Lucy Books & Outlet Magazine
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

236. Christopher L. Filkins
Re: yes, by Doctor Leopold Konninger
Thu 16 Dec 1999

---

bravo nikuko! i can see your toes as they were feathers on the moon!

> From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> Date: Wed, 15 Dec 1999 11:22:06 -0500
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: yes, by Doctor Leopold Konninger
>
> **
>
> yes twirling_nikuko_! > zz; head -200 zz > yy; pico yy
>
> twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
> twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
> twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
> twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
> twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
> twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!
> twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!

> twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_! twirling_nikuko_!

↑ Index

237. Charles Bernstein

[redacted]

Fri 17 Dec 1999

Loss Glazier has just put up a Dorn page at the EPC, featuring Tom Rawoth's obituary in the Independent (posted to the list by Keith Tuuma), along with a reproduction of the obit as it appeared in the Independent; a link to the Guardian obituary (which I posted on the list); plus a short note from Tom Raworth (sent via Robert Creeley).

You can find a link to this page at the bottom of the EPC's home page or go direct:

http://epc.buffalo.edu/documents/obits/dorn/

↑ Index

238. Maria Damon

hornblowing

Fri 17 Dec 1999

---

i just had an essay come out in College Literature 27:1, special issue on Teaching Beat Literature. my piece is called "Triangulated Desire and Tactical Silences in the Beat Hipscape: Bob Kaufman and Others," and it's about BK and the queer scene in the SF renaissance. it is an expansion of the paper i gave several years ago at the Queer Beats conference in SF (thanks Kevin K for the opportunity!) i'd be interested in feedback from folks cuz i want to make it better (always) --bests, md

↑ Index

239. Mark Prejsnar

coopted Ashbery

Fri 17 Dec 1999

Re Brian Stefans' intelligent post yesterday: If the New Yorker published Prynne in great abundance, how would this be seen? After a while people would say that Prynne had been co-opted, that "of course the New Yorker publishes Prynne, but not the numerous other poets it should publish." Just as the New Yorker has published Asbhery for the past twenty years. This is not seen as a sign of the New Yorker's hipness, but, as it were, of a certain lack of hipness of Ashbery himself--he's the sort of poet who writes for the New Yorker. So there is a sort of Asbhery of the "right" and an Asbhery of the "left." The Ashbery of Vendler and Bloom and the Ashbery of Perloff, etc... Interestingly enough, one of the poets

****

The above is only partly true, at best.... Many folks on this list, folks whose own work and taste are pretty darn anti-New Yorker (shall we say) respect the hell out of J. Ashbery and his work..... And yes many of 'em say (pretty accurately) that JA long ago became a kind of token, for that mag, and for the conservative mainstream in general... I guess caring one way or the other about the NYer itself, is kind of a waste of energy, a kind of looking in the wrong direction.... But the post quoted above, from Jonathan, may be a little on the harsh side: many people do actually realize that JA is not "the kind of poet who wrties for the New Yorker". Even tho' he writes for the New Yorker!

↑ Index

240. Brendan Lorber
thanks from LUNGFULL!
Fri 17 Dec 1999

A hearty thanks to everyone who showed up for the LUNGFULL! Magazine release party earlier this month. Thanks to those who read their work & embodied the liveliness & perception that the magazine tries to capture. Thanks also to those who came late or left early but still managed to come despite the flu or all-consuming schedules. Additional thanks to the two people I chased down the street trying to retrieve the copies of the magazines they stole & to others who managed more successfully to abscond with Lungfull!s -- obviously I don't dig getting ripped off but if you NEED poetry that bad, I appreciate your enthusiasm & who am I to stop you? Larceny = the highest form of flattery. Props in advance to everyone who puts up poetry stickers around their neighborhood. Vandalism = the second highest form of flattery. The event also shone a little light into the dark shadow of the printer's bill, for which I & my kneecaps are grateful.

I was delighted at the turnout & the affability of both devout lyricists & experimenters as they rubbed shoulders. Anyone who couldn't make it but would like a copy or two of their very own, here's how one can subscribe: It's $13.90 for two issues, one year or a scant $27.80 for four issues, two years. Checks should be made out to Brendan Lorber rather than to Lungfull! Magazine & sent to 126 east 4th Street #2, New York, NY 10003. You can also just stop by Lungfull! World Headquarters at that address & look for the editor in the window to the right of the stoop. This issue features forty writers & visual artists, among them Bill Berkson, Eileen Myles, Indran Amirthanayagam, Tuli Kupferberg & Buck Downs. Also Letters to the Editor from the likes of Hoa Nguyen of Skanky Possum, Albert DeSilver of The Owl Press, Chris McCreary of Ixnay, Eddie Berrigan of Log & someone claiming to be Jewel.

Those who have had a chance to look over the latest issue, or were at the event I'd love to hear what you think, good & bad, backchannel or front.

Yours,
Brendan Lorber

↑ Index

241. Kimmelman, Burt
Series on New Media at NJIT
Sat 18 Dec 1999

If you are in the physical/material neighborhood, then please do attend a series on New Media to be presented at New Jersey Institute of Technology (presenters will be: Diane Greco, Chris Funkhouser, Tina La Porte, and Stephanie Strickland). Details can be found here:
http://eies.njit.edu/~kimmelma/newmedia.html.

- Burt Kimmelman

[redacted]
http://eies.njit.edu/~kimmelma

↑ Index

242. Alan Sondheim
Intelligent Life Screen Savers
Sun 19 Dec 1999

\

Intelligent Life Screen Savers

I foresee, by 2020, the creation of fully implemented Intelligent Life Screen Savers (ILSS); these work on hi-giga/low-terahertz desktop compu- ters carrying efficient evolutionary programs; the carrying capacity of the screen savers will be in gigahertz at a minimum. The ILSS will create artificial life forms at a high rate of speed; evolution will guarantee fast-forward generations flickering at, at least, a megahertz/second rate. It should be possible for full consciousness to develop within the first twenty minutes of standby; the life forms produced will perceive the ILSS as a local homeland, worth defending - but such actions are always already foreclosed by the desktop owner playing, for example, a game of chess on the Internet, necessitating many minutes of intense concentration, fol- lowed by a few furious mouse-clicks.

The user, by reactivating the screen and canceling the ILSS, will have also eliminated those life-forms which have been created, living at high speed, developing their own cultured environments, memoirs and histories. Theories of inflationary universes might abound, only to be destroyed, along with the rest of the cultural debris, in the split second the ILSS retreats to the background, the clumsy programs interfacing with the clumsy users.

However, it may also be possible for the ILSS only to go into quiescence, saving such forms and environments from one active session to the next. Surely the forms will learn methods of obscuring their tracks; like worms or viruses, they will exist within the interstices of hard drives, until the final crash. On the other hand, like Star Trek beaming, they may re- constitute themselves across the Net, invisibly burrowing, reappearing elsewhere, on other screens, other ILSS homelands, always on the run.

But I think not, and meditate on the fast-forward evolution and full con- sciousness - development of whole cultures, economies, interactions - only to be thwarted by the next insipid movement of the mouse, click of the keyboard, new worlds lost forever ...

↑ Index

243. Jerrold Shiroma

Small Press List @ Duration

Mon 20 Dec 1999

This weeks Small Press List is up & running @ duration press. Given that the deadline for the next list would be New Years Day, I will be giving this round a month's go. Therefore, the deadline for the next posting will be January 14th. I will make announcements as time approaches.

Best wishes to all for the coming year.

Jerrold
www.durationpress.com

↑ Index

244. Angle Press Angle Press

Angle Magazine

Mon 20 Dec 1999

Hello

We should say quickly, and only because we're still receiving manuscripts, that Angle magazine has folded...in half...and is no longer publishing. And is defunct. Or no longer existing.

We'd like to thank all the lovely people who contributed to all five of the issues.

The press still operates. New things to come. Maybe "Athletic Writing."

What do you say to that guttural cruller?

Charmed,

D.F.

aka B.L.

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

245. Kristin Dykstra new Stein list
Mon 20 Dec 1999

Apologies if this already came around--

--On Thu, Dec16, 1999 2:02 PM -0800 "Sonja Streuber" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear all,
>
> Stein-L is finally up (as of 4:30 a.m. today--blame too much Dr. Pepper for this!), and I would like to know where you think it would be appropriate to announce this new list (on the art of Gertrude Stein). I am bringing fliers to the MLA convention, but I'd really love to get the word out much earlier, so any information about other modernism/queer theory/women writers etc. lists and/ or audiences that would be potentially interested would be highly welcome.
>
> Thanks!
>
> Sonja
>
> ---

246. Pierre Joris
New Books
Mon 20 Dec 1999

Just out, these four items:

1: _h.j.r._ by Pierre Joris, OtherWind Press, Ann Arbor, 1999. $8.00 ISBN 0-9626046-4-X. Available in the USA from SPD (http://www.spdbooks.org/) and in the UK from Peter Riley Books ([redacted])

2: _Towards a Nomadic Poetics_ by Pierre Joris, Spanner #38, summer 1999. Available from Peter Riley (as above) or from Allen Fisher / Spanner / 14 Hopton Road Hereford HR1 1BE in the UK or from the author (see address below) in the USA. This is the Gutenbergian version # 2.0b of the manifessay / companionpiece to the poems of _h.j.r._

3: _Out/Takes_ by Pierre Joris, Backwoods Broadsides, Chaplet Series #46 ($1.00) [Backwood Broadsides c/o Sylvester Pollet, 963 Winkumpaugh Rd. Ellsworth ME 04605-9529]

4: _Empedocles's Sandal_ by Habib Tengour, translated from the French by Pierre Joris. Duration Press, Sausolito, 1999. $5.00 (http://www.durationpress.com)

Born in 1947 in Mostaganem, Eastern Algeria, raised on the Arab and Berber voices of marketplace storytellers, Habib Tengour has lived between Algeria and Paris ever since. Trained as an anthropologist and sociologist, he has taught at universities in both countries, while emerging over the years as one of the Maghreb's most forceful and visionary francophone poetic voices of the post-colonial era. The work has the desire and intelligence to be epic, or at least to invent narrative possibilities beyond the strictures of the Western / French lyric tradition, in which his colonial childhood had schooled him. Core to it is thus the ongoing invention of a Maghrebian space for and of writing, the ongoing quest for the identification of such a space and self. Besides a range of lyrical works - works that always stretch the imagination of what the lyrical can be - such as Schistes de Tahmad 2 (1983), Tengour's main books are the narratives Le Vieux de la Montagne (called a "Relation," 1983), the retelling of the story of that most famous Arab triumvirate of Omar Khayyam, Hassan as-Sabbah and Nizam al-Mulk, Sultan Galiev, (1985) and two prose narratives, L'Epreuve d l'arc (1990) and Gens de Mosta (1997). His work has been translated into German and Italian.

I had hoped to be able to also announce that my translation of _Threadsuns_ by Paul Celan would be out from Sun&Moon, but at this point it would seem that the book won't be ready before January/February 2000.

May you all have a happy fin-de-siècle!

Pierre _____ Pierre Joris The postmodern is the condition of those 6 Madison Place things not equal to themselves, the wan- Albany NY 12202 dering or no- madic null set (0={x:x not-equal x}). Tel: [redacted] Fax: [redacted] Alan Sondheim Email: [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]> Url: <http://www.albany.edu/~joris>

_____ _

↑ Index

247. Maria Damon
minor honking
Mon 20 Dec 1999

---

just rec'd my contributor's copies of the Outlaw Bible of American Poetry (thunder's mouth press, edited by alan kaufman). check out Bob Kaufman pp63ff, overview provided by yours truly. they spelled my name "damun," and i got the mariners' unions mixed up (i finally understand a bit the tangled politics of that scene, after over a decade of thinking the wrong thing) but otherwise it's nice to see my name in print in such a venue and for such a purpose.

↑ Index

248. rebecca wolff
Luscious Jackson Nothwithstanding
Mon 20 Dec 1999

Dear Brian,

Geeez. Where to start. First: I see what you're saying.

And I agree with lots you said, or at least certainly agree that these are good arguments as to how the affirmative action analogy is lame, and how it is not to be assumed to be a good aim for any ray of light to give credence to whatever power the New Yorker's poetry editor might wield. On the other hand-and this is the not-so-big idea behind Fence, which I edit, and which does attempt the kind of "aesthetic merging" that is by necessity and intention superficial, in that it only entails juxtaposing poems on paper inside a product-I also want poems that I like to have a wide audience.

The New Yorker has significance to me as a landmark--not cultural but commercial--and irritant. My father reads the New Yorker. When my father (tries to) talks to me about poetry, he talks about the last poem he read in the New Yorker. A whole lot of people--the large constituency you spoke of--try to read poems by reading what's in the New Yorker. I don't have figures, but I do have the backlogged memory of dozens of frustrating exchanges with general readers trying to engage by bringing up the New Yorker in conversation when they hear that I write poetry. I am interested in the general reader. So I just can't be interested in ignoring this entity, or others like it. I am more interested in a hampered, handcuffed attempt to engage with it, however much that may be inherently on its terms rather than on terms of my own making. I do not make my home, write poetry, nor have my job, family, circle of acquaintances, etc., solely, or even mostly, within the experimental poetry community. So if I want my poetry, and the poetry I care about, etc., to be a part of my world--and I do--then it's more fun for me to do what little actions I can (publishing, voting, reading, whining about the bad poetry in the New Yorker) to bring other people into contact with that poetry. I find the other model to be gratuitously alienating, when I have already gone through the alienation thing.

Alice Quinn (poetry ed. of New Yorker) has a subscription to Fence. Fence is, among other things, an attempt to engage commercially with a hypothetical general reader, and to introduce or make available to that reader poetry--"experimental" and also just tricky/challenging/idiosyncratic--that is otherwise "kept from" that reader by systems already in place that take as starting points suggestions just such as the one you make by implying that there can be no fruitful interactions between these bodies of readers. Most interesting to me in your response is this:

"A kind of thoughtless merging of poetics tends to gloss over the fact that there are very particular attitudes that some of these "radical" poets possess toward assimilation into the dominant culture, that it isn't just a game to want to reject certain types of identities and aesthetic closures, and that many of us feel that we could write great poems for the New Yorker on any given day but don't."

I'm really undecided and occasionally bemused over the question of whether anything that is performed through the medium of poetry can have the effect of picking someone up and setting them down outside the dominant culture. It seems to me that we are all helplessly at play in the fields of the dominant culture. That may be even more cynical than the suggestion that "we" (those interested in certain kinds of poetry) ought to and must ignore and be ignored by it or be swallowed and spit out as glib poetry Gap ads. Luscious Jackson notwithstanding.

How's that for a heartfelt (though I hope not to be perceived as taking your comments "personally" in the sense of taking affront; I appreciate your engagement with the whole shmegeggy) reaction.

Date: Tue, 14 Dec 1999 14:26:59 -0500
From: "Stefans, Brian" <[redacted]>
Subject: Prynne

Hi Rebecca,
> It seems to me that this same argument could be used to suggest that affirmative action laws should be abolished.
With all due respect (and this email isn't about you, just this idea), this doesn't strike me as a very good analogy, and indeed symptomatic of some thinking on how poetry is intended to effect culture (when such intensions are hinted at or stated). The New Yorker is hardly Congress, nor is it something one would think could be fetishized as "society" -- it's really a very specific magazine for a specific group of people, even if it's a very large group. If you start imagining it as some avuncular entity, some sort of big daddy (or mommy, either way) authority whose mind you hope to change, then you get into trouble (not to mention the fact that the New Yorker can go away, go bankrupt, if we want it to but society cannot).

But part of the problem with these ideas of aesthetic merging -- i.e. lets break down the walls of these aesthetic camps and just meet halfway -- is precisely when it extends to places like the New Yorker, which has always been a non-entity and should remain that way, and when it is not truly in the service of a complexity of thought on these matters which, we agree, are so important (and if "they" don't seem prepared or willing to keep up with "us," that's not our concern). As it is, the New Yorker can change in a split second, as it did when Tina Brown took over (she's gone, of course): in their first (or one of their first) issues after she landed, there was a gorgeous full page picture of W.H. Auden in a long overcoat in the snow staring, melancholic as it's possible to perceive behind his drapes of wrinkles (here I'm getting belle-lettristic) with a very long poem on the facing page, something like the In Praise of Limestone but I can't remember exactly. Now, anyone could have looked at that gesture of hers as a "sign of something new" or a "change for the better" as if it were on her hit list of cosmetic changes along wit Art Spieglman covers and (was she responsible for this?) Peter Scheldahl. I have, really, no idea how she followed up that gesture though I don't remember too many more photos of poets, nor better poetry, coming in it's wake. What's striking is that Auden, for whatever the readers of the New Yorker knew, could have just as easily been described as a "Cambridge don" (of course he wasn't) -- in other words, he's English, an amenable exotic, and despite his leftism and flirtation with experimental poetics and, one might say, his homosexuality, he wasn't threatening to the New Yorker readers sense of culture (he wrote opera librettos, too) and their mastery over it. Anyway, all I'm saying is that, in my opinion, there's no reason to even want to change the New Yorker, nor to equate it with any sort of cultural legitimacy in terms of what this loosely defined "we" are trying to do. The New Yorker will never spread a greater understanding of experimental poetics unless they know how to sell it or assimilate it into whatever else it is they sell (culture, events, opinion), which of course they won't (because of idiots like us). In that way, it's hardly a "ray of light" but a rather wide swath of darkness -- not neutral even, but kind of negative (though on any other day I'd say it's pretty neutral). I think Prynne should win that award, whatever the hell it is, because I can't get over how great some of those poems are and that, in general over here, we don't know much about him -- it's like Hopkins or Dickinson coming to light. But it would be sad to see that the first widely disseminated writing on Prynne would be a fluff article in the New Yorker, but then again, if they print one of his poems, Prynne seems prepared: his writing is almost armored against any easy discursive assimilation, while being so formally crystalline as to not "go gently" into the anonymity that the magazine seems to want to cloak its authors in, not to mention the chummy garbage they'd probably want to spread about him. Ok, this all sounds terrible cynical. Here's another example (my facts will be all wrong here), an English one, which had to do with Iain Sinclair's editing of the Palladin poetry series, which got books by folks like Allen Fisher and Bill Griffiths into the "mainstream." The books didn't sell all that well, the publisher decided to stop the series and pulped the entire print run -- not drop them in used book stores like, say, I do, or keep them in their attics for posterity or whomever might be interested, just destroyed them. "Their" laws are just too different from "ours" in this way. Another example: David Lehman has to write a book on poetry, and decides in the last chapter, while he had his moment behind the "bully pulpit", to get out all his grumpiness on the charlatans he feels have filled the shoes of immortals unjustly(one of his sestinas was rejected from L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E, I hear). He does this while answering a few calls, changing the ribbon in his typewriter and listening to Rachmaninov (like his heroes, right) -- in other words, here he is engaged in serious intellectual activity that affects, in direct and indirect ways, great numbers of people, and he doesn't care enough to think through his ideas, read any of the literature, etc, or to even quote from it adequately (only in censure), but has no scruples about weighing in with a moral judgment that, to those who don't know better, can be taken for the general opinion on things (like, "disco is out"). Ethics, ethics, ethics. So I go to Montreal a few months back and, trying to dig up some Earle Birney books (they didn't have them) discover that the only book I can find of "New York school" poetry in the stores in Lehman's! The essential continuity, throughout these examples, is that none of these central, big publishing outfits ever took the time to care about the work they were presenting in an effort to be hip; it's all very cynical and manipulative. Which is why Prynne is great: he's only had one or two "trade" books and the rest, I think, were small chapbooks; he doesn't write reviews far as I know, and I think there is a kind of built in auto-critical aspect to his poems, whereby they have very attractive, almost conservative (or "formal"), surfaces (they even look good hanging on a wall from across the room) but you can't simply breeze through them, follow the stately rhythms (they change constantly) nor do you just wait for the good jokes or accept them as some sort of "experience in language" -- his own little controversy with McCaffery over language poetics seemed to center around this aspect of the "play" of language, the semantic slippage, as providing a sort of ease for the reader rather than the difficulty he wanted. I think there's an ethical dimension to his "difficulty" and that part of it has to do with this relationship to other forms of literature -- mainstream, the media, whatever -- that don't trouble you into thought. It has a relationship to a variety of things, actually, and I don't claim to understand them all. But part of the problem with these ideas of aesthetic merging -- i.e. lets break down the walls of these aesthetic camps and just meet halfway -- is precisely when it extends to places like the New Yorker, which has always been a non-entity and should remain that way, and when it is not truly in the service of a complexity of thought on these matters which, we agree, are so important (and if "they" don't seem prepared or willing to keep up with "us," that's not our concern). The difference between two poor and ignored "experimental" writers in New York who don't write like each other is nothing compared to the difference between them and the writers that the New Yorker habitually tends to; then again, if the difference between those two (poor and ignored, etc.) writers is in their attitude to the New Yorker (standing in for other cultural institutions) it may in fact be a big difference and worth investigating. A kind of thoughtless merging of poetics tends to gloss over the fact that there are very particular attitudes that some of these "radical" poets possess toward assimilation into the dominant culture, that it isn't just a game to want to reject certain types of identities and aesthetic closures, and that many of us feel that we could write great poems for the New Yorker on any given day but don't. Artaud wrote that "all writing is pigshit," or something like that, and at about the same time (the first half of the century) Brecht was giving an important literary award to a poem about a local bicycling star (it was called something like "Hey! hey! the Iron Man!" -- that's not even close but something like that). Why do people do things like this? I don't know, but a lot of us are still doing this very thing in more subtle ways today -- being "moral exhibitionists" in some quasi-nihilistic manner, and our art and maybe in our lives -- and to think that it's because we are really scratching at the doors of Culture wanting to get in is missing something very important. I couldn't see Prynne as a "ray of light" for the New Yorker because, after all, he would refuse to go to their parties -- it's part of him not to be this light. "Good" gestures by the New Yorker confuse the point, especially when they transcend the words and actions of those they affect (in this case poets who aren't considered to possibly have social powrer of their own), though then again probably brings it to a head. Ah, the patronage issue again... 1930's anyone? I feel like I missed an earlier point, which had to do with the initial linking of social activism with changing the New Yorker, but if you graph out what exactly the entities are in these respective exchanges perhaps that's better -- use colored markers. Well, but anyway, my apologies for using your very short email for this William Blake moment, but I had some free time today. Cheers, Brian

↑ Index

249. Leslye Layne Russell

Able Muse Review -- premiere issue announcement

Tue 21 Dec 1999

Friend Alex Pepple asked me to post this announcement to this list.

Layne

Alex Pepple wrote:

> The premiere issue of Able Muse --
> a review of metrical poetry, prose and arts, including a literary discussion forum: listen to the poets reading their poems in Real Audio; visit the art show by the featured artist, Misha Gordin; have a laugh or two at the Light Verse section, & check out the literary/poetry forum. It's now online at:
>
> http://www.ablemuse.com
>
> Featured Poet: Beth Houston.
> Featured Artist: Misha Gordin.
>
> Poetry: Andrea Hollander Budy, Patrick Daly, Rhina P. Espaillat, Steve Harris, Mark Jarman, Len Krisak, Sandy McKinney, Karen Tellefsen, William John Watkins.
>
> Book Review: Charlotte Muse.
> Essay: Anthony Robinson.
> Interview: Alex Pepple.
>
> Check it out, and, stop by the literary forum.
>
> ...Alex Pepple [redacted]

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

http://www.sonic.net/layne
A Quiet Place
"In this rose light, time's door does not close."

↑ Index
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

250. Mark DuCharme
Re: event postings
Tue 21 Dec 1999

We're sorry. Boulder, Colorado.

> From: Damion Searls <[redacted]>
>
> LEFT HAND READING SERIES PRESENTS:
> [...]
> Thursday, December 16 at 8:30pm
> Left Hand Books, 1825 Pearl Street, between 18th & 19th, above the Crystal > Market.
>
> When advertising events on this list, can you be sure to put the city?!
> (putting it in the message title would be even better).
>
> Thanks,
> Damion Searls

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

251. Alan Sondheim
Traceroute Project URL
Tue 21 Dec 1999

The Traceroute Project - please participate if you can, December 31 - January 1.

The URL for the trAceroute project at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk is http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/trace.htm

Check it out when you have the chance.

Alan

↑ Index

252. Alan Sondheim
Barry Smylie / Alan Sondheim collaboration
Wed 22 Dec 1999

---

quite near the Winter Solstice - check out

http://24.64.186.222/alan/youwill.swf

- Alan, Happy Holidays in the dark world

↑ Index

253. komninos zervos
Re: Report on the Electronic Poetry Center, Dec. 1999
Wed 22 Dec 1999

---

congratulations, you do us all a great service by your existence.
i feel a part of a community of poets globally.
komninos

At 01:24 P

M 12/16/99 -0500, you wrote:
>EPC REPORT -- POETICS LIST December, 1999
>----------
>---------
>
>The Electronic Poetry Center, now after almost six years of operation, has >established itself internationally, nationally, and at UB as a significant >web-based resource for poetry and is one of UB's most visible digital >projects.
>We wanted to give a report on the EPC, including some information not easily >available. Please contact us if you would like more information.
>
>Loss Pequeño Glazier, EPC Director
>Charles Bernstein, EPC Executive Editor

komninos cyberpoetry site http://student.uq.edu.au/~s271502 komninos zervos lecturer in cyberStudies griffith university gold coast australia [redacted]

↑ Index

254. Rachel Loden
Poetry Daily, British irony
Wed 22 Dec 1999

My poem "about" snow, test marketing, and Vigdís Finnbogadóttir (the former president of Iceland) is at the Poetry Daily site today:

http://www.poems.com/

and the title poem from Paul Hoover's TOTEM AND SHADOW (from yesterday) is in the archives--click on "Previously on PD..." from that main page.

Somebody pointed me to a piece on British irony in _The Economist_:

http://www.economist.co.uk/editorial/freeforall/current/index_xm3604.html

Not sure whether that URL still works, but here's a bit (and I have the rest if anybody wants me to post it):

"The British urge to puncture grandiose visions is captured in a (possibly apocryphal) story about Sir Oliver Franks, when he was Britain’s ambassador in Washington after the war. A journalist asked leading ambassadors what they desired in the coming year. The Russian ambassador mentioned the liberation of colonial peoples; the French ambassador spoke of a new era of peace and international co-operation. Sir Oliver expressed a desire for a small box of crystallised fruit."

There's discussion of the supposed lack of irony in colonial outposts (as perceived by our man in Manila or Bangkok). So is irony a post-imperial luxury, part of the "management of decline"?

* - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - *

Rachel Loden

http://www.thepomegranate.com/loden/hotel.html

email: [redacted]

* - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - * - *

↑ Index

255. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: Ed Dorn
Wed 22 Dec 1999

Excerpts from Jeremy Prynne's eulogy, as it appeared in the Boulder Planet, 12/22/99. Bracketed comments by reporter Jim Sheeler:

"It is always sad when a voice you know falls silent, but there are some voices who never fall silent. His voice will survive as long as his readers draw breath and turn the pages of his work."

[Prynne stood over the site at Green Mountain Cemetery ... holding a rose from another. The rose was flown in from Italy, taken from the grave of Ezra Pound].

"We are here to pay our last respects to Ed Dorn. His profession, his task and his calling was to be a poet. They are not so usual in this day and age. His was a voice that was often angry. His words will continue to enrage as long as there is power for people to be enraged ... He was impeccable in his opposition. He was compelled never to take any shit from anyone ... Perhaps I shouldn't use that word. But sometimes you have to use the right word."

Some of you may have seen this already as it was posted by Robert Kelly to the British poets list. It bears repeating, however:

"Feeling simply, directly, sad about the death of Dorn, and testing one memory against the other, to offer you something that might stand up to the power of the news of him that came through from time to time, words from divers winds of how he held himself aloft above his sickness, wouldnt give it the time of day.

In 1972 or so I was poet in residence at Cal Tech, amongst the scientists and anxious technocrats. Ed Dorn came to read, and gave one of his usual, wonderful, 24 minute assaults on the ordinary. The format permitted questions, and early on, a student I'd never met before asked, with ill-concealed contempt for poets and their no doubt suppositious theologies, "Mr Dorn, what do you believe in?"

Ed paused for a very long time, fifteen seconds perhaps, looking at the student, his face fiercely unchanging, and then said, in a quiet voice, "Language."

And that was the end of it. Even that audience was silenced.

He surely kept the faith."

Robert

↑ Index

256. James Sherry roof books new title offer
Wed 22 Dec 1999

Publisher's Weekly just published a review of the Roof Book's POETICS@:

"the discussions of 'The Social Poem', of the controversy surrounding the lit-mag Apex of the M, and of gender in poetry and criticism, among others, are more exciting and brimming with ideas than almost any journalism or academic criticism. This collection will reward those readers diligent enough to meander among unfamiliar companions and notions, and makes a handy compendium of some of the more substantive goings-on for those in the know."

ROOF BOOKS has made a special offer to this list and here it is again for those who missed it and still want to order--
*****

ROOF Books has just published two new titles:

[redacted] by Joel Kuszai ($18.95/192pp) ? 133 e-mails from this list
&
Gorgeous Plunge by Michael Gottlieb ($11.95/96pp) ? new poetry

ROOF would like to offer them to this list only for a substantial discount. Orders from members of this list can buy the books for:

****

poetics@ $15 & Gorgeous Plunge $9 including postage (which costs us $3)

If you order both books, total cost including postage is $20

You'll save $14

To order, please send your check or money order with your mailing address to:
Segue Foundation
303 East 8th Street
New York, NY 10009

Contact: James Sherry [redacted]

↑ Index

257. William Slaughter
Mudlark Announcement
Wed 22 Dec 1999

New and On View:

MUDLARK POSTER NO. 20 (1999)

SEVEN POEMS by MICHAEL CADNUM

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

_____
MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

Michael Cadnum is author of fifteen novels, including RUNDOWN (Viking), IN A DARK WOOD (Orchard Books), and SAINT PETER'S WOLF (Carroll & Graff). Cadnum has also published several collections of poetry, including THE CITIES WE WILL NEVER SEE (Singular Speech Press) and a picture book for children, THE LOST AND FOUND HOUSE (Viking).

His sixteenth novel, THE BOOK OF THE LION, will be published by Viking in Spring 2000. Cadnum lives in Albany, California.

↑ Index

258. John Tranter
Announcing Jacket # 9
Thu 23 Dec 1999

Jacket is a free literary quarterly published on the Internet by Australian poet John Tranter. If you don't wish to receive these notices of new issues of Jacket (I send out about six per year), please say so, and I'll take your name off the mailing list pronto. If you know someone who'd like to receive these notices, please ask them to send me an email. -
J.T. .....

"...and God comes up on the radar."

Gig Elizabeth Ryan

Just in time for Christmas reading!
And as the year 2000 loomed over the horizon, the "hits" counter on Jacket's home page clicked over the 200,000 mark. Psychic!

Join the throngs of happy customers;
visit the new issue of Jacket via the homepage URL:

http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html

featuring:

* Tom Clark's obituary for poet EDWARD DORN (1929-1999)

"... Maybe it's in part because he had a lonely and precarious beginning in life that later on Dorn always liked to surround himself with congenial company...The great honor of friendship he conferred on me was to number me as an outrider of that party of outriders, along with other diverse disparate friends."

* REVIEWS:

Andrea Brady on John Wilkinson's "Reverses"
Robert Sheppard on Bob Cobbing, in honour of his 75th birthday
Robert Sheppard on Ulli Freer Pete Smith on Jennifer Moxley
Nathaniel Tarn reviews "Selected Non-Fictions" by Jorge Luis Borges, Eliot Weinberger (Translator), Esther Allen, Suzanne Jill Levine
Mark Wallace on Carl Thayler's "Poems from Naltsus Bichidin"

* P O E M S :

Angie Angel
Francisco Aragon
Louis Armand
Andrea Brady

Pamela Brown
Tom Clark
Henry Gould
Kate Lilley
Geraldine McKenzie
Ralph Monday
Alice Pero
Leonard Schwartz
Robert Sheppard
Carl Thayler

* INTERVIEW : Australian poet and playwright Dorothy Hewett interviewed by Nicole Moore "...I can remember when I was living in Redfern, one of the jobs I was given was to organize women, so I thought, oh well, the obvious people to start with are the wives of the Communist Party activists, so I started calling on them all. And their husbands were furious, absolutely furious! How dare she come and interrupt our peaceful, domestic lives where the wife does everything and I go out to my meetings . . ."

F E A T U R E S :

* NEW! Seven early letters of Araki Yasusada by Tosa Motokiyu "...Do you have a wife? A question is repeated! Not I. I love a girl on a street of shops, third floor. In the later letter I will say of her. For presentness, I will tell you: her sexual hair is a whole forest, smelling after rain falling. It is very dark within there. A bird is singing. Bodies in piles are burning."

* Robert Sheppard on Robert Sheppard: Twentieth Century Blues

* NEW! Nathaniel Tarn: ON OCTAVIO PAZ . . . and the Future of Poetry

"... now I believe our average poet, if it can survive, is lucky to be something like a liver fluke progressing through the guts of a sheep."

* OLD! Great Moments in Literature No. 9 - New York City, 23 April 1951 - First successful test of "Poetry Machine" - with photo! - Hiram Bamburger's amazing "Linopentametron"!!!

. . . and lots of refreshing graphics!
.....

...you can also sneak a preview peek at Issue #10 of Jacket , at:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket10/index.html
. . . now partly built, and already featuring:

Marjorie Welish: The Lyric Lately (a work-in-progress)
Charles Bernstein: Introducing Barbara Guest Lytle Shaw: On Coterie: Frank O'Hara

Thomas Bell on McCaffery and Rasula's "Imagining Language: An Anthology" Norman Finkelstein reviews Armand Schwerner and poems by Kate Lilley, Lytle Shaw, Pete Spence, and Nathaniel Tarn
.....

Jacket is a free literary quarterly published only on the Internet by Australian poet John Tranter. All past and current issues are always available. Trim, taut and terrific - quick and quirky - no ads, no frames, no Java! If you like Jacket, please tell your friends.
END
from
John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted]
Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html visit Australian Literary Management, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~lyntranter/index.html

↑ Index

259. Alan Sondheim

Kungupi Emes

Fri 24 Dec 1999

\

Kungupi Emes

"Fun yidishe reyd ken men zikh nit opvashn in tsen vassern.
Ten waters will not cleanse you of Jewish talk.
Fun loyter hofenung ver ikh nokh meshuge.
Overfeed on hope and you'll sicken with madness."
(from Yiddish Proverbs, ed. Ayalti.)

"Hej! hej! hej!
Noa, hej!
Noa, hej!
Kanutpia, hej!
Kanutpia, hej!
Nihantsi suruchu kanutpia, hej!
Kanutpani hitia, hej!
Numbintinya, hej!
Nihirseisaka, haketpia, hej!
Noa, hej!
Noa, hej!

Kahetpia, hej!
Nikasneiti, hej!
Eitgamue, hej!
Pingerati, hej!
Maketi, hej!"
(from Blood Revenge, War, and Victory Feasts among the Jibaro Indians of Eastern Ecuador, Karsten.)

Hey, hey, hey, woman, hey, woman, hey, fuck, hey, fuck, hey, may the tsantsa grant the fuck, hey, fuck, hey, fuck, hey, fuck, fuck, hey, woman, hey, woman, hey, fuck, hey, let it happen, hey, so we'll do it, hey, let it be nice, hey, it's enough!

"Az der Yid is gerekht, khapt er ersht di rekhte klep.
When a Jew is right, that's when he gets a right good beating."

"Shuara hiniwui, The enemy leaves the house!
Awuimaipa, Don't let them escape!
Ihuta, ihuta, ihuta, Lance them! Lance them! Lance them!"

"A blinder ferd treft glaykh in grub arayn.
A blind horse makes straight for the pit."

"Masteitimi, They won't kill us!
Mandoastatami, They won't take our lives!
Wuittatai, They will retire!
Hinikitai, We will be able to escape!"

↑ Index

260. Poetics List
from Alan Sondheim
Fri 24 Dec 1999

Date: Thu, 16 Dec 1999 22:52:56 -0500 (EST)
From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
Subject: more from the Doctor more from the Doctor - serration and the birth of language

there's a mark in the sky there's a hole in my head there are plants in the sky that are doubled there's a spark in the fire there's a bone in my foot there are fields divided, quadrupled

i slide word to word, i fly way up high,
the signifier seems all too dead,
but i know in my mind that is troubled,
i'm decatecting, i knew, and it's dire,
in the midst of the root of the sign
in the wire,
where plains and mountains are peopled,
where mountains and people asserted against tribes of the plain and their tablets

do you know what i mean when space is serrated, signs rustle against one another, codes are codes, signal loads, perforated in the language-formation of the other the analog smooths, integration's the rule across details, chaos, fractal recursions, while digital cuts, differentiation's the tool, noise explodes, language codes in incursions

the serrated edge carries the meaning of grain of the voice, of the sign foreclosing on referent, in relation to body and pain, in relation to fundamental disclosing

the tree has a branch always lending itself across the metaphysical sheet of assertion, self-organization lends tending, it's left the rest of the flesh to inversion serrations grasp and divide, they hold themselves taut in defining, meandering balks from side to side

the subtext always declining, articulation is always reclining serrations repeating gives meaning to text against structured repetition in the real,

this bursts through desire, body and sex, intercourse gives birth to the seal

let it go, serrated rhymes carry the words to other spaces and places desired, think of nested times, think foreclosing surds,
the tablets already are fired

- Doctor Leopold Konninger

↑ Index

261. Poetics List
from Jim Andrews
Fri 24 Dec 1999

Date: Thu, 16 Dec 1999 21:10:14 -0800
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
Subject: A L Y R I C M A I L E R at Defib this Sunday

DEFIB, SUNDAY DECEMBER 19, NOON PST (19:00 GMT)
Thomas Bell, Mike Kelleher and a l y r i c m a i l e r at Defib
http://webartery.com/defib

A L Y R I C M A I L E R Thomas Bell and Mike Kelleher are leading a project for the magazine a l y r i c m a i l e r featuring work by themselves and Jim Rosenberg, Loss Pequeño Glazier, Inna Kouper, Ted Warnell, Jim Andrews, Clemente Padin, and miekal and on the poetics of the field. As Thomas says:

"In this context 'field' represents a space with height, width, and depth, filled (or emptied) of words or pictures. The concept has a history in 20th century poetics dating back to Futurism; is related to Olson's Composition by Field, and Duncan's hermetic studies; and is the space in which a true intertextuality might be imagined."

The nine participants start out with their own work and then write toward the work of the others, re-writing and linking toward a loose net or field of texts relating in their own and related ways to this notion of the field.

DEFIB Defib is webartery.com's live online web artist interview surf show. The live IRC sessions are recorded and the transcripts produced into hypertexts at http://webartery.com/defib/pastevents.htm. Tech requirements: a java enabled browser pointed at http://webartery.com/defib

↑ Index

262. Poetics List
from Kathy Lou Schultz
Fri 24 Dec 1999

Date: Thu, 16 Dec 1999 23:13:08 -0800
Subject: Re: class stand
From: "Kathy Lou Schultz" <[redacted]>

Please, Katie, no one has suggested -- least of all me -- that anyone should "focus solely on class when discussing poetics." The fact that you misread my posts and the Poetics List in general to such a high degree that you believe this to be the case, and that you make such statements as "ALL ANYONE EVER TALKS ABOUT IS CLASS" and "It might be good for you to get off your collective classes once in a while" indicates something akin to defensiveness on your part. The fact that you still seem to believe that discussing the "sociopolitics" of poetry is somehow separate from "formal" issues suggests to me that you just aren't getting it. And whoever said that I (or "we" the List) were focusing only on the "poet's class"? Why is it personal? What about reading the text? An example comes to mind here concerning critical practice: Houston's Baker's Modernism and the Harlem Rennaisance. Baker argues persuasively that the defining moment in African-American modernism is Booker T. Washington's 1895 address to the Negro exhibit of the Atlanta Cotton States and International Exposition, which Baker reads as an enactment of the performance of minstrelsy: "And it is, first and foremost, the mastery of the minstrel mask by blacks that constitutes a primary move in Afro-American discursive modernism" (17). This "mastery of form" is an example of radical "back talk" for the African-American speaker/writer. In learning to manipulate the dominant discursive practice -- which in this case was the vernacular -- Washington negotiated an effective method of black speaking in which to "talk back" to the oppressor. Therefore, use of "black vernacular" or the "authentic voice" must be understood within is historical moment. Indeed, the mastery of form had to take place in African-American literature before what Baker calls the "deformation of mastery" could occur. I raise this example because it is one in which lack of awareness and analysis of the socio-politcal context of African-American writing would have made this very astute argument impossible -- and it is an argument which is intimately wedded to an analysis of form.

^^^

> And, for you and everyone else, just to clarify once again: the theme of my original post wasn't "who cares about class" but "why is class the main concern on a poetics list?" As I said in a private post to Kathy (her original response was sent to me only and forwarded to the list a day or so later; I didn't keep a copy of what I sent her privately, so I must paraphrase): I completely agree that 'class/race/gender/blah blah blah' does infuse the writing of everyone who writes.
>
> But, as Leonard pointed out, if class is a part of poetics, it doesn't follow that a discussion of class is automatically a discussion of poetics, and focusing solely on class when discussing poetics is like wearing blinkers -- they may be differently configured than the blinkers of those who, in KLS' words, stick their "head in the sand, in effect saying 'don't talk about things like racism that make me uncomfortable,'" but they're still blinkers. To pick any one filter through which all poems must be processed is extremely limiting -- to go from the limitations of one particular class (e.g., the "administration of culture") to an arena in which a poet's capital-c Class is the primary concern when evaluating his or her work is barely an improvement.

↑ Index

263. Poetics List
from Doug Lang
Fri 24 Dec 1999

Date: Fri, 17 Dec 1999 09:15:26 -0500
From: Doug Lang <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: apologies re Tom

David,
This shows admirable Grace under Rebuke.
Doug

david bromige wrote:

> Listmates, I apologize for responding to a b-c from Tom Raworth as though it had been f-c to this List. What confused me was that the post was fwded to me from another list-member, who had the day before fwded a post to her from me, to the List. Assuming this was further to that public discussion of events in Seattle, I screwed up. Sorry, Tom---although no cause that I can see, for yr post not to become part of the public discussion. That decision, however, is yours to make, not mine, and I regret any embarrasment I may have caused. And thanks to Doug Lang, for his well-merited rebuke. My face is redder than my armband. David

↑ Index

264. Poetics List
from Jacques Debrot
Fri 24 Dec 1999

From: [redacted]
Date: Fri, 17 Dec 1999 10:19:49 EST
Subject: ANNOUNCING 9-0 issue 2

ANNOUNCING 9-0 issue two

Poems by: JORDAN DAVIS (dreaming on tan plush, the right dreams), MICHAEL MAGEE (explains the meaning of tears), MICHAEL BASINSKI (a hoot he has, doing imitations of Rita Hayworth's cigarette gestures) and MARY BURGER (writing in 360 degrees).

stupidogrammes by DIETER ROTH.

only $2.50 4 issues $10.00

9-0 # 3 will be a single author issue featuring the work of JESSICA CHIU, winner of XCONNECT'S SHAWN LYN WALKER PRIZE.

2 is still available.
Poems by: LISA JARNOT, RAY DIPALMA, JACK KIMBALL. Raster Drawings by SIGMAR POLKE.

Please make checks out to Jacques Debrot, 49 Old Meetinghouse Green, Norton MA 02766.

↑ Index

265. Poetics List
from Jacques Debrot
Fri 24 Dec 1999

From: [redacted]
Date: Fri, 17 Dec 1999 10:36:36 EST
Subject: 9-0 issue one of course, that should be 9-0 ISSUE ONE is still AVAILABLE. $2.50

↑ Index

266. Poetics List
from Ron Silliman
Fri 24 Dec 1999

From: "Ron Silliman" <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Subject: Re: looking @ poetix (the local)
Date: Fri, 17 Dec 1999 07:57:21 PST

Mark,

I haven't seen the book yet, but hope to do so soon. You are of course entirely correct that one needs to look to see what is important in people's lives on a day-to-day basis (and the decay of the left over the past quarter century has a lot to do with this). One thing that struck me about the WTO actions in Seattle (beyond an enormous wave of nostalgia) was how similar it all was to the 1960s -- what brought people together in great numbers was something to which they objected (the WTO, the Viet Nam war). When you look at what was/is positive in those various groups, you see lots (!) of interesting projects that don't necessarily connect up with one another, and sometimes can even barely speak to one another. A thorny old issue.

A second question that has been striking me of late has to do with one's expectations from a "world of poetry" as one enters into it. In the 1960s, when my generation "came of age" the landscape was very definitely defined by the likes of Ginsberg, Olson, Duncan, Creeley, Spicer, Jones/Baraka, Kyger, Levertov, Lowell, Hall, Plath, Sexton, etc. It was, in that sense, a far simpler landscape. I think we expected the world to make sense in a way that younger people today have no such illusions about. (Think of the 700 people on the Poetics List, for example. If every one of them were to publish one book a year -- and there's no reason to think that the folks on the list aren't doing something fairly close to that already, at least statistically speaking -- who among us could even hope to read half, let alone intuit an intelligible terrain out of such disparate information.)

Both of these thoughts have been driving me toward the idea that the local is more important now than ever.

Ron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

267. Poetics List
CFP: "New Modernisms II" / Laity
Fri 24 Dec 1999

This message had to be reformatted. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=1279BC86) (151 lines) ----------
Date: Fri, 17 Dec 1999 11:05:29 -0500

From: <[redacted]>
Subject: CFP: "New Modernisms II,", MSA 2000 10/12-10/15)

Dear Poetics List,
Please see the below call for panel proposals and seminar proposals for "New Modernisms II," to be hosted by Bob Perelman at the University of Pennsylvania, Oct. 12-15, 2000:

The Modernist Studies Association
“New Modernisms II”
12-15 October 2000
The University of Pennsylvania

CALL FOR PANEL AND SEMINAR PROPOSALS

“A return to modernism at the end of the millennium is not a farewell but a new beginning.”
Susan Stanford Friedman
In its 1999 inaugural conference, described by The Chronicle of Higher Education
as “giving new life for modernism,” the Modernist Studies Association created a forum wherein scholars, poets, musicians and artists could contribute to this ongoing revitalization. Modernist studies is reemerging as a dynamic and complex field, hospitable to interdisciplinary, international and multicultural approaches and energized by recent work in race, class, gender and sexuality.
“New Modernisms II” convenes at the University of Pennsylvania, and will incorporate the urban diversity of Philadelphia. Our plenary sessions will emphasize the arts, and performance, but our call for panel and seminar proposals remains open.

Deadline for Panel Proposals: March 30, 2000
Deadline for Seminar Proposals: Feb. 15, 2000

Proposal guidelines are available on the MSA website:
http://www.psu.edu/dept/english/MSA/msa2.htm

The MSA homepage can be visisted at:
http://www.psu.edu/dept/english/MSA/msa.htm

Queries about seminar and panel proposals may be directed to:
Cassandra Laity: [redacted] or Michael Coyle:
[redacted]
Completed proposals should be submitted to:
Professor Bob Perelman
Department of English
University of Pennsylvania
Philadelphia, PA 19104
[redacted]

↑ Index

268. Poetics List
from Cassandra Laity
Fri 24 Dec 1999

Date: Fri, 17 Dec 1999 11:05:29 -0500
To: [redacted]
From: <[redacted]>
Subject: CFP: "New Modernisms II,", MSA 2000 10/12-10/15)

Dear Poetics List,
  Please see the below call for panel proposals and seminar proposals for "New Modernisms II," to be hosted by Bob Perelman at the University of Pennsylvania, Oct.
12-15, 2000:

The Modernist Studies Association
New Modernisms II
12-15 October 2000
The University of Pennsylvania

CALL FOR PANEL AND SEMINAR PROPOSALS

A return to modernism at the end of the millennium is not a farewell but a new beginning.
Susan Stanford Friedman
In its 1999 inaugural conference, described by The Chronicle of Higher Educationas "giving new life for modernism," the Modernist Studies Association created a forum wherein scholars, poets, musicians and artists could contribute to this ongoing revitalization. Modernist studies is reemerging as a dynamic and complex field, hospitable to interdisciplinary, international and multicultural approaches and energized by recent work in race, class, gender and sexuality.

"New Modernisms II" convenes at the University of Pennsylvania, and will incorporate the urban diversity of Philadelphia. Our plenary sessions will emphasize the arts, and performance, but our call for panel and seminar proposals remains open.

Deadline for Panel Proposals: March 30, 2000
Deadline for Seminar Proposals: Feb. 15, 2000

Proposal guidelines are available on the MSA website:
http://www.psu.edu/dept/english/MSA/msa2.htm

The MSA homepage can be visisted at:
http://www.psu.edu/dept/english/MSA/msa.htm

Queries about seminar and panel proposals may be directed to:
Cassandra Laity: [redacted] or Michael Coyle:
[redacted]
Completed proposals should be submitted to:
Professor Bob Perelman
Department of English
University of Pennsylvania
Philadelphia, PA 19104
[redacted]

↑ Index

269. Poetics List
from Burt Kimmelman
Fri 24 Dec 1999

From: "Kimmelman, Burt" <[redacted]>
Subject: Series on New Media at NJIT
Date: Sat, 18 Dec 1999 16:29:01 -0500

If you are in the physical/material neighborhood, then please do attend a series on New Media to be presented at New Jersey Institute of Technology (presenters will be: Diane Greco, Chris Funkhouser, Tina La Porte, and Stephanie Strickland). Details can be found here:
http://eies.njit.edu/~kimmelma/newmedia.html.

- Burt Kimmelman

[redacted]
http://eies.njit.edu/~kimmelma

↑ Index

270. Mark Weiss Gone until...
Fri 24 Dec 1999

I'm off to sunnier climes from tomorrow until the 9th, so apart from a few possible groans this is my last til then. Joy to all. Now hopefully I can remember how to unsub.

↑ Index

271. Michael Neff
PERIHELION: The Phoenix Issue
Fri 24 Dec 1999

The online magazine, Perihelion, http://webdelsol.com/Perihelion, has returned.

Leaving behind the cybersoap opera, Perihelion has matured into a fine publication--no longer a personal networking vehicle for mediocre editors.

- See "Stalking the Wild Ashbery," reviews by Robert Sward.
- Ruth Daigon's essay on the relationship between poetry and music.
- Interview with Kathleen Lynch.
- Eleven of the west coast's finest poets
- Writer's Friendships and Enmities

Cheers,
Mike Neff

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

272. MAYHEW
Asbhery coopted
Fri 24 Dec 1999

Mark P. wrote: But the post quoted above, from Jonathan, may be a little on the harsh side: many people do actually realize that JA is not "the kind of poet who wrties for the New Yorker". Even tho' he writes for the New Yorker!

****

Agreed! I didn't mean to be harsh to Ashbery, whom I also "respect the hell out of." All I meant to suggest was that the New Yorker, by publishing Prynne in great quantities, would remain pretty much the same magazine...

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

↑ Index

273. Joel Weishaus
Re: from Ron Silliman
Sat 25 Dec 1999

Ron Silliman wrote:

...Both of these thoughts have been driving me toward the idea that the local
>is more important now than ever.
>
Hi Ron.

Remember those bumper stickers, "Think Globally, Act Locally." ? It seems to me that, with mass communication and the net, local and global have become cognate. In fact, a poem that rhapsodizes a particular place seems to me like an Arthurian legend. Now Place exists only as myth. And where a myth lurks, poetry sounds itself out.

Best,
Joel

Joel Weishaus
Writer-In-Residence
The University of New Mexico
Albuquerque, NM

ARCHIVE: www.unm.edu/~reality SKULL-HOUSE: [Most recent draft]: www.unm.edu/~reality/Skull/intro.htm SKULL-HOUSE [Being built at Centre for Advanced Inquiry in the Interactive Arts]: http://caiia-star.newport.plymouth.ac.uk/projects/skullhouse/Skull/index.htm l

↑ Index

274. Stephen Vincent
Re: Asbhery coopted
Sat 25 Dec 1999

In today's (Saturday) Christmas edition of the NY Times, there is a lovely prose poem by Ashberry.
Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

275. Gary Shapiro
for those who plan in advance: two Boston Book Review events in NYC
Sun 26 Dec 1999

TWO FREE Boston Book Review LITERARY EVENTS to be held in New York City in February

Come meet the editor of the Boston Book Review. Come hear about classical norms in modern times (the theme of the talks).

UB Poetics Discussion Group & friends are cordially invited

February 25, 2000 FRIDAY 6:30pm
Location: 15 Gramercy Park South, NYC (near 20th Street & Park Ave)
To RSVP: Call [redacted] or email [redacted]

Charles M. Stang on "The Bliss of Discipline" . Among his other solitary practices, Henry David Thoreau was an avid reader of ancient philosophy. This talk will trace the Stoic and Epicurean influences on Thoreau's Walden. Introduced by Theoharis C. Theoharis, Editor of the Boston Book Review Charles Stang graduated from Harvard and has taught at Eton. He is studying theology at University of Chicago, and is a Contributing Writer for the Boston Book Review. Please note: this venue has a business attire requirement (jackets for men); thanks.

February 26,2000 SATURDAY 2:00pm THIS EVENT HAS A DIFFERENT LOCATION [call or email for location of this talk]: "A Fiction, A Dream of Passion" Editor of the Boston Book Review Theoharis C. Theoharis offers classical and modern arguments about the value of artistic emotions. A teacher at Harvard University ; he is the author his new translation of the complete poetic works of Constantine P. Cavafy, which will be published by Harcourt in 2001. He is the author of "Ibsen's Drama : Right Action and Tragic Joy", as well as "Joyce's Ulysses : An Anatomy of the Soul"

↑ Index

276. Gary Shapiro

NYC literary events: Bread Loaf at 75, Boston Book Review, etc.

Sun 26 Dec 1999

NYC FREE LITERARY EVENTS
UB Poetics Discussion Group & friends are invited--

Location: 15 Gramercy Park South, NYC (near 20th Street & Park Ave)
To RSVP: Call [redacted] or email [redacted]
the venue requires business attire (jacket for men)

February 22,2000 6:30pm
Bread Loaf Writers' Conference at 75

David Haward Bain (author of Whose Woods These Are: A History of Breadloaf Writers' Conference) will give a slide show and talk. Michael Collier, Director, will introduce three Bread Loaf Faculty. In association with Middlebury College's Bicentennial (1800-2000).

David Haward Bain has written Empire Express, about the building of the transcontinental railroad in the 1860's.

Michael Collier has published three collections of poetry: The Clasp and Other Poems, The Folded Heart, and The Neighbor (1995), and has edited The Wesleyan Tradition: Four Decades of American Poetry. Forthcoming is The New Bread Loaf Anthology of Contemporary American Poetry (University Press of New England). He has received a NEA fellowship, a "Discovery"/The Nation Award, and a Pushcart Prize. He is currently on the English and writing faculty at the University of Maryland.

two NYC events for Boston Book Review
Come meet the Boston Book Review editor

February 25, 2000 6:30pm Charles M. Stang on "The Bliss of Discipline" . Among his other solitary practices, Henry David Thoreau was an avid reader of ancient philosophy. This talk will trace the Stoic and Epicurean influences on Thoreau's Walden. Introduced by Theoharis C. Theoharis, Editor of the Boston Book Review Charles Stang graduated from Harvard and has taught at Eton. He is studying theology at University of Chicago, and is a Contributing Writer for the Boston Book Review.

DIFFERENT LOCATION Feb 26,2000 Saturday 2:00pm [call or email for location of this event] "A Fiction, A Dream of Passion" Editor of the Boston Book Review Theoharis C. Theoharis offers classical and modern arguments about the value of artistic emotions. A teacher at Harvard University ; he is the author his new translation of the complete poetic works of Constantine P. Cavafy, which will be published by Harcourt in 2001. He is the author of Ibsen's Drama other events to stay tuned for:

: Right Action and Tragic Joy, as well as Joyce's Ulysses : An Anatomy of the Soul.

March 11 National Book Critics Circle panel "Criticism in the Real World" with leading book reviewers and critics [call or email for location of event]

April 10 The 20th Anniversary of The Threepenny Review more details to follow

April 12, 2000
Paris Press evening on Emily Dickinson with Jan Freeman & others

April 17,2000 6:00pm
RT Smith and Sarah Kennedy [call or email for location of this event]

Sarah Kennedy's first book, From the Midland Plain, is just out from Tryon Publishing.

R.T. Smith, Editor of Shenandoah, whose most recent book Split the Lark: Selected Poems (Salmon, 1999). Messenger (LSU) is forthcoming. His other books include Trespasser, The Cardinal Heart, and Banish Misfortune. He is a frequent visitor to Ireland, where he gives lectures and readings.

April 18, 2000
Shenandoah at 50: A Celebration
Brendan Galvan, whose latest book is The Strength of A Named Thing (LSU,1999). He has won the Iowa Prize for Hotel Malabar, and has twice Been a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize. He lives on Cape Cod.

Henry Taylor, who won the Pulitzer Prize for The Flying Change. His most recent book is Understanding Fiction (LSU,1996), which is a collection of poems. Brief Candles is forthcoming from LSU. He is Professor of Literature at American University in Washington, D.C.

Rebecca McClanahan, whose new book Naked As Eve (Copper Canyon), has won Shenandoah's Thomas H. Carter Prize for the essay. She lives in New York City.

Dabney Stuart, former editor of Shenandoah, and Professor of English at Washington & Lee University. His most recent book is Settlers (LSU,1999). He has been a Guggenheim beneficiary.

R.T. Smith, Editor of Shenandoah, whose most recent book Split the Lark: Selected Poems (Salmon, 1999). Messenger (LSU) is forthcoming. His other books include Trespasser, The Cardinal Heart, and Banish Misfortune. He is a frequent visitor to Ireland, where he gives lectures and readings. He has also edited Buck & Wing: Southern Poetry at 2000.

April 26, 2000 Wednesday

Jaime Manrique will read from his memoir Eminent Marcones (University of Wisconsin Press, 1999), which includes chapters on Federico Garcia Lorca, Reinaldo Arenas and Manuel Puig ("The Writer as Diva,")

Jaime Manrique is a poet, novelist, essayist, and translator. He is author of the novels Twilight at the Equator (Faber and Faber), Latin Moon in Manhattan (St. Martin's), and Colombian Gold (Clarkson Potter), as well as a wide range of poetry and short story collections. Born in Colombia, he resides in New York City.

Rosanne Wasserman will read from her new book of poems Other Selves (Painted Leaf, 1999)

Rosanne Wasserman's books include Apple Perfume, The Lacemakers, and No Archive on Earth. Along with her husband Eugene Richie, she is founding editor of the Groundwater Press. She teaches at the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, New York. "Rosanne Wasserman is that rarity, a poet who maintains a strict observance of "self" in each frame of herself," writes Barbara Guest.

Eugene Richie, founding editor of The Groundwater Press will introduce the evening. He teaches at Pace University. He is the author of a book of poems, Island Light (Painted Leaf, 1998), as well as a chapbook Moire, and is co-translator of My Night with Federico Garcia Lorca by Jaime Manrique. His work has appeared in Ploughshares, Mudfish, and many other journals.

↑ Index

277. Leslye Layne Russell

Santa

Sun 26 Dec 1999

Warm holidays to all....
******

Santa
-----

foot high Santa stands on the mantle red felt suit
black belt and boots gentle smile every year right out of the box

(I gave him to you on your first birthday
my mother told me)

he has lived well the decades earned his white flowing beard as I my silver hair

12/98 Leslye Layne Russell

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~
http://www.sonic.net/layne
a quiet place
"In this rose light, time's door does not close."

↑ Index

278. Heather A
Re: from Ron Silliman
Sun 26 Dec 1999

Ron Silliman wrote:

...Both of these thoughts have been driving me toward the idea that then local is more important now than ever.

Joel Weishaus wrote:

Hi Ron.

Remember those bumper stickers, "Think Globally, Act Locally." ? It seems to me that, with mass communication and the net, local and global have become cognate. In fact, a poem that rhapsodizes a particular place seems to me like an Arthurian legend. Now Place exists only as myth. And where a myth lurks, poetry sounds itself out.

==========

As a novice to the "world" or the "local" of poetry, but a long standing member in my personal surroundings of it, the conversation here is making me wonder a bit. Does it truly have to be about epitomizing a certain standard? I have to agree Joel, where the walls and fences are brought down, it leaves a clear view of the color spectrum poetry creates on its own. No matter its origin or its creator's origin. But, why can it all not go hand in hand? Can one not stand on the corner reciting verse to their neighbor one day, and send an email to the world the next? As a person not so concerned (for now) with whom and why they read my work (as "local" it seems to be of late) I am indebted to the blur that "world" and "local" has become. I am grateful for whatever email I receive from whomever a thousand miles away that may have never known this little Southern girl existed and to the acquaintance at my side offering a "personal review" of my latest "local" idea. But, Ron, as at some point we all become concerned to a certain degree of who and why, it is a somber thought of the masses that must now be "competed" against. Even now I feel as if I have walked into a tidal wave of too much at once.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Thank you for the thoughts,

Heather Allen

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

279. Patrick Herron
Re: from Ron Silliman
Sun 26 Dec 1999

Heather wrote:

> I have to agree Joel, where the walls and fences are brought down, it leaves a clear view of the color spectrum poetry creates on its own. No matter its origin or its creator's origin. I am indebted to the blur that "world" and "local" has become. I am grateful for whatever email I receive from whomever a thousand miles away that may have never known this little Southern girl existed and to the acquaintance at my side offering a "personal review" of my latest "local" idea.

I think Ron is right about the local. If anything, Joel, Heather, the internet is making clear the importance of proximity, the local. why? the internet is frequently trying to _simulate_ the familiar, the local, and it's just a myth of the familiar. as Joel says, that's where poetry rests. Agreed.

Personalized web pages or friendly e-mail just make things _seem_ personal while the actual relationships are more distal than ever.

E-mail also creates the myth of the familiar. I do not know you or anyone else here better by virtue of e-mail. There is no substitute for actual proximity, for people in the flesh, for extralinguistic communication.

Autocracy lurks in the blurring of the real and the simulated. (uh-oh, i'm asking for it!)

As an example, have you ever met a "friendly" writer who turns out in person to be a complete asshole? Or vice-versa? I am sure many of us have. The seemingly freindly chap, one who seems personal, warm, intimate, is not in any way intimate or personal. This is an early lesson for most readers.

Patrick

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

280. Jena Osman light poems
Sun 26 Dec 1971

Hi,
Does anyone know anything about the procedure behind Jackson Mac Low's Light Poems from the 60s? Thanks,
Jena

↑ Index

281. Stephen Vincent
Re: from Ron Silliman?
Sun 26 Dec 1999

Might be helpful if Ron amplified on a definition or his definition of the "local." But picking up on a couple of other responses to this thread - when someone is turning a corner in their SUV talking into a cellphone and I am in the crosswalk - in order to possibly save my life (on the assumption that driver is not really "here") - I have to use all my pedestrian power (eye contact, a jump back and a slap on the hood) to bring that driver back into the "local." Sometimes I believe that's the function - or one of them - of a poem, at least a good "local" one.

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

282. David Zauhar
Re: for those who plan in advance: two Boston Book Review events in NYC
Sun 26 Dec 1999

On Sun, 26 Dec 1999, Gary Shapiro wrote:
> TWO FREE Boston Book Review LITERARY EVENTS to be held in New York City in > February
>

> Charles M. Stang on "The Bliss of Discipline" .
> Among his other solitary practices, Henry David Thoreau was an avid reader > of ancient philosophy. This talk will trace the Stoic and Epicurean > influences on Thoreau's Walden. Introduced by Theoharis C. Theoharis, Editor > of the Boston Book Review > Please note: this venue has a business attire requirement (jackets > for men); thanks.

Business attire for a lecture on Thoreau. How appropriate.

David Zauhar
University of Illinois at Chicago

"i have a city to cover with lines"

--d.a. levy

> February 26,2000 SATURDAY 2:00pm
> THIS EVENT HAS A DIFFERENT LOCATION [call or email for location of this talk]: "A Fiction, A Dream of Passion"
> Editor of the Boston Book Review Theoharis C. Theoharis offers classical and modern arguments about the value of artistic emotions. A teacher at Harvard University ; he is the author his new translation of the complete poetic works of Constantine P. Cavafy, which will be published by Harcourt in 2001. He is the author of "Ibsen's Drama : Right Action and Tragic Joy", as well as "Joyce's Ulysses : An Anatomy of the Soul"

↑ Index

283. Alan Sondheim
notice on my work
Sun 26 Dec 1999

-

Internet Philosophy and Psychology - Jan. 00

This is a somewhat periodic notice describing my Internet Text, available on the Net, and sent in the form of texts to various lists. The URL is: http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt/ which is partially mirrored at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html. (The first site includes some graphics, dhtml, The Case of the Real, etc.)

The changing nature of the email lists, Cybermind and Fiction-of-Philoso- phy, to which the texts are sent individually, hides the full body of the work; readers may not be aware of the continuity among them. The writing may appear fragmented, created piecemeal, splintered from a non-existent whole. On my end, the whole is evident, the texts extended into the lists, part or transitional objects.

So this (periodic) notice is an attempt to recuperate the work as total- ity, restrain its diaphanous existence. Below is an updated introduction.

The "Internet Text" currently constitutes around 80 files, or 3500 print- ed pages. It began in 1994, and continues as an extended meditation on cyberspace, expanding into 'wild theory' and literatures.

Almost all of the text is in the form of short-waves or long-waves. The former are the individually-titled sections, written in a variety of sty- les, at times referencing other writers/theorists. The sections are inter- related; on occasion emanations appear, avatars possessing philosophical or psychological import. They also create and problematize narrative sub- structures within the work as a whole. Such are Julu, Alan, Jennifer, and Nikuko, in particular. Overall, I'm concerned with virtual-real subjectiv- ity and its manifestations, in relation to various philosophical issues. Recently I've been working with body issues through consideration of ava- tars and ballet (Nikuko and Doctor Leopold Konninger), as well as issues of philosophy in general; some of this has been produced as a series of videotapes through the Experimental Television Center in Owego, NY. I have also been intensively working on a diary for trAce, the online writing community; see the URLs below.

The long-waves are fuzzy thematics bearing on such issues as death, love, virtual embodiment, the "granularity of the real," physical reality, com- puter languages, and protocols. The waves weave throughout the text; the resulting splits and convergences owe something to phenomenology, program- ming, deconstruction, linguistics, prehistory, etc., as well as to the domains of online worlds in relation to everyday realities.

I have used MUDS, MOOS, talkers, perl, d/html, qbasic, linux, emacs, CuSeeMe, etc., all tending towards a future of being-and-writing, texts which act and engage beyond traditional reading practices. Some of the work emerges out of performative language such as computer programs which _do_ things; some emerges out of interferences with these programs, or conversations using internet applications that are activated one way or another. And some of the work appears out of collaboration or video, the latter with Azure Carter and Foofwa d'Imobilite, leading to another series of texts.

There is no binarism in the texts, no series of definitive statements. Virtuality is considered beyond the text- and web-scapes prevalent now. The various issues of embodiment that will arrive with full-real VR are already in embryonic existence, permitting the theorizing of present and future sites, "spaces," nodes, and modalities of body/speech/community.

Please check the INDEX to find your way into the earlier body of the work. The Case of the Real is a sustained work that may be the most useful text of all. It is also helpful to read the first file, Net1.txt, and/or to look at the latest files (le, lf, etc., which are still to be indexed) as well. Skip around. The Index lists the files in which a particular topic is described; you can then do a search on the file, or simply scroll down (the files range in length from 30 to 50 pages in print). (Note: I have stopped working on the index; for the later files, I suggest you skim. Eventually, I need a site and a local search engine for the texts; at the moment, I apologize for the awkwardness of it all.)

The texts may be distributed in any medium; please credit me. I would ap- preciate in return any comments you may have.

I should mention you can find my collaborative activities at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm and my conference activities at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk - both as a result of my virtual writer-in-residence with the Trace online writing community.

See also:
Being on Line, Net Subjectivity (anthology), Lusitania, 1997
New Observations Magazine #120 (anthology), Cultures of Cyberspace, 1998
The Case of the Real, Pote and Poets Press, 1998
Jennifer, Nominative Press Collective, 1997

Alan Sondheim [redacted]
432 Dean Street, Brooklyn, NY, 11217
mail to: [redacted]

↑ Index

284. vbnm2
Re: from Ron Silliman
Mon 27 Dec 1999

Ezra Pound wrote:

Think global, act loco

_____
Visit Excite Shopping at http://shopping.excite.com
The fastest way to find your Holiday gift this season

↑ Index

285. Richard Dillon
Re: from Ron Silliman?
Mon 27 Dec 1999

Of course, if ambling about in a poet's dream
motioning at the clouds
somewhere middle of Hollywood crosswalk,

you are brought to vigilance by the shout
of an all too patient Lincoln SUV

you and Bukowski can go
-Local-Dokel-Drinkie-Pinkie-

>From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: from Ron Silliman?
>Date: Sun, Dec 26, 1999, 6:16 PM
>

> Might be helpful if Ron amplified on a definition or his definition of the "local." But picking up on a couple of other responses to this thread - when someone is turning a corner in their SUV talking into a cellphone and I am in the crosswalk - in order to possibly save my life (on the assumption that driver is not really "here") - I have to use all my pedestrian power (eye contact, a jump back and a slap on the hood) to bring that driver back into the "local." Sometimes I believe that's the function - or one of them - of a poem, at least a good "local" one.
>
> Cheers,
> Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

286. Tom Beckett
Re: weishaus and others
Mon 27 Dec 1999

The "local" and the "global" are __false__cognates. As the new information technologies "shrink" the" world", the world becomes less knowable because it comes to seem more abstract and similar.

And I still insist that what e-mail listservs tend to produce is speech without social context--a whole lot of bad monologues.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

287. Maria Damon
walcott citation: desperate query
Mon 27 Dec 1999

---

hi groovoids, i'm desperately looking for the source of this quote by derek walcott. i can't remember where i saw it; but i used it in a paper that's now almost in press and i need to legitimate it. i vaguely think it may be from an interview, and i read it cited by someone else. i will send a copy of the booglite Poetry as Cultural Critique chapbook to whomever can help me out. in anticipatory appreciation, maria d

"Break a vase, and the love the reassembles the fragments is stronger than >that love which took its symmetry for granted when it was whole... This >gathering of broken pieces is the care and pain of the Antilles, and if the >pieces are disparate, ill-fitting, they contain more pain than their >original sclpture, those icons and sacred vessels taken from granted in >their ancestral places. Antillean art is this restoration of our shattered >histories, our shards of vocabulary, our archipelago becoming a synonym for >pieces broken off from the original continent."

↑ Index

288. Maria Damon
d.a.levy
Mon 27 Dec 1999

---

hi, i'm giving buddhist third class junkmail oracle a read...i find it very depressing...like reading minima moralia...reading the brilliant outpourings of someone who doesn't want to be alive and has no sense of humor about it...can someone help me?

↑ Index

289. Joel Weishaus
Re: weishaus and others
Mon 27 Dec 1999

> The "local" and the "global" are __false__cognates. As the new information > technologies "shrink" the" world", the world becomes less knowable because > it comes to seem more abstract and similar.
>
> And I still insist that what e-mail listservs tend to produce is speech > without social context--a whole lot of bad monologues.

>
> Tom Beckett

What world are we talking about? Perhaps there are as many worlds as there are minds to perceive them.

"It is always hard like this, not having a/world,/to imagine one, to wall whether in/or out, to build a kind of cage for the sake/of feeling the bars around us, to give/shape to a world./And oh, it is always a world and not the/world." -William Bronk. From, "At Tikal"

_Joel

Joel Weishaus
Writer-In-Residence
The University of New Mexico
Albuquerque, NM

ARCHIVE: www.unm.edu/~reality SKULL-HOUSE: [Most recent draft]: www.unm.edu/~reality/Skull/intro.htm SKULL-HOUSE [Being built at Centre for Advanced Inquiry in the Interactive Arts]: http://caiia-star.newport.plymouth.ac.uk/projects/skullhouse/Skull/index.htm l

↑ Index

290. Chris Stroffolino
Re: from Ron Silliman?
Mon 27 Dec 1999

What did I do today?

I looked up the word "unctious" (very slowly),
that's what I did today

c

On Mon, 27 Dec 1999, Richard Dillon wrote:

> Of course, if ambling about in a poet's dream
> motioning at the clouds
> somewhere middle of Hollywood crosswalk,
>
> you are brought to vigilance by the shout
> of an all too patient Lincoln SUV
>
> you and Bukowski can go
> -Local-Dokel-Drinkie-Pinkie-
> ----------
> From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

> Subject: Re: from Ron Silliman?
> Date: Sun, Dec 26, 1999, 6:16 PM
>
> Might be helpful if Ron amplified on a definition or his definition of the "local." But picking up on a couple of other responses to this thread - when someone is turning a corner in their SUV talking into a cellphone and I am in the crosswalk - in order to possibly save my life (on the assumption that driver is not really "here") - I have to use all my pedestrian power (eye contact, a jump back and a slap on the hood) to bring that driver back into the "local." Sometimes I believe that's the function - or one of them - of a poem, at least a good "local" one.
>
> Cheers,
> Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

291. Tisa Bryant

Re: walcott citation: desperate query

Mon 27 Dec 1999

I don't know where it came from, but I'd like to, because it sounds like the inspiration for N. Mackey's ongoing prose work, "From a Broken Bottle Perfume Still Emanates", the first two volumes being of course BEDOUIN HORNBOOK and DJBOT BAGHOSTUS' RUN.

Perhaps Mr. Nielsen knows?

>From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: walcott citation: desperate query
>Date: Mon, Dec 27, 1999, 9:27 AM
>

> hi groovoids, i'm desperately looking for the source of this quote by derek walcott. i can't remember where i saw it; but i used it in a paper that's now almost in press and i need to legitimate it. i vaguely think it may be from an interview, and i read it cited by someone else. i will send a copy of the booglite Poetry as Cultural Critique chapbook to whomever can help me out. in anticipatory appreciation, maria d
>
> "Break a vase, and the love the reassembles the fragments is stronger than that love which took its symmetry for granted when it was whole... This gathering of broken pieces is the care and pain of the Antilles, and if the > pieces are disparate, ill-fitting, they contain more pain than their original sclpture, those icons and sacred vessels taken from granted in their ancestral places. Antillean art is this restoration of our shattered histories, our shards of vocabulary, our archipelago becoming a synonym for pieces broken off from the original continent."

↑ Index

292. Joe Amato
long poem...
Tue 28 Dec 1999

---

just stumbled across the following at carolyn forche's website: "the long poem newsletter," at http://www.bath.ac.uk/~exxdgdc/lpgn/lpgn1.html

seems kinda... conservative in its musings... but i thought some of you might be interested...

happy y2k!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

293. Alan Sondheim
Merging and Rambling
Tue 28 Dec 1999

-

Merging and Rambling

If IBM merged with the Post Office, you'd have International Business Machine Office. If Red Hat merged with Microsoft, you'd have Red Soft. If Linux merged with Unix, you'd have Lunix. If Macy's merged with Stern's, you'd have Merny's. If CBS radio merged with CBS television you'd have CBS relevision. If the American Broadcasting System merged with Pinchik's Hardware, you'd have Pamerican Hoadcasting System. If Alan merged with Azure you'd have Alure. If Nettime merged with Cybermind you'd have Net- mind. If the Internet merged with the London Times, you'd have Lonernet Times. If Tibet merged with Belgium , you'd have Tigium. If a President Clinton merged with a Margaret Thatcher, you'd have Margaret Clinton. If NATO merged with the Red Brigades, you'd have Ned Brigades. If Dean Street merged with O'Reilly Publishing, you'd have Deano Reilly Publishing. If a password merged with login, you'd have pogin. If the first word merged with the last word, you'd have the fast word. If Wall Street merged with Leopoldstrasse, you'd have Wallopoldstrasse. If Venus merged with Mars, you'd have Vars. If the Universe merged with Nothing you'd have Unnothing, but if the Void merged with the Abyss, you'd have the Voiss. If Chrysler merged with the Y2k problem, you'd have the Chrytookay problem. If Kyoko Date merged with Madonna, you'd have Kyodonna. If a sentence merged with a paragraph, you'd have a sentagraph. If Bladerunner merged with Little Women, you'd have Blattle Women. If God merged with Sondheim, you'd have Gondheim, but if Old Navy merged with Banana Republic, you'd have Old Banana Republic and if Pathmart merged with Wimpy's, you'd have Pampy's, but if Ford merged with women, you'd have Fomen, and if Hibiscus merged with Tulips you'd have Hibips.

There were some people over there who had a dance. Some other people came up. They were from the Turtle People. Two of them carried a shining thing they saw in the water. Some women tried to shoot at it. One of them caught it in her net. She brought it back. Some men at the dance tried to take it. A bird landed on the net and it disappeared. The woman said, from now on you will have this disease. She took the shining thing and put it in the sky.

↑ Index

294. pete spence

Re: from Ron Silliman

Tue 28 Dec 1999

> Ron Silliman wrote:
>
> ...Both of these thoughts have been driving me toward the idea that the local
> is more important now than ever.
>
> Hi Ron.

whyche reminds me rite now we are looking further out along the coast for somewhere with a population of around 300 ,, the last 2 years have seen our present town balloon into a suburb, pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

295. Steve Tills
Black Box Cutaway
Wed 29 Dec 1999

Just now finally reading Susan Gevirtz' _Black Box Cutaway_, a kaleidoscope of sights for famished eyes. How's she doing that, anyway, the subtle and delicious glides from one frame of fresh landscape to another--here from a ledge, there from inside-out, now there from down below, now here from the fold of a curtain named eternity? Bravo, Susan! I don't have your e-mail address, so here's some excitement, my praise, via the grapevine.

Steve Tills

↑ Index

296. mdw
e-mail for Joshua McKinney
Wed 29 Dec 1999

Hey folks--

Does anybody on thist list know how I might contact the poet Joshua McKinney, on e-mail if possible or otherwise? He used to be at Valdosta State University in Georgia, now has relocated somewhere in Northern California. Any information (you can backchannel) would be greatly appreciated.

Mark Wallace

↑ Index

297. David Kirschenbaum
Winter solstice assemblage zine available
Wed 29 Dec 1999

Winter solstice gathering assemblage zine

19 pages + front cover painting by Madeleine Hope Arthurs and back cover collage by Wendy Kramer on ultra-bright pink cardstock. Three-hole punched and bound with twine.
$6ppd for individuals, $9ppd for institutions.
Only 45 copies made (35 available).

Limited edition, signed and numbered by the contributors.
$12ppd for individuals, $18ppd for institutions.
Only 20 copies made (8 available).

Zine compiled at winter solstice gathering on December 18, 1999. Contributors include Sue Landers and Jeni Olin, among others. Featuring anti-Giuliani flyer, music, poetry, and 65 different versions of Kimberly Wilder's submission.

Checks payable to:
Boog Literature
351 W.24th Street, Apt. 19E
New York, NY 10011-1510
email: [redacted] • tel: [redacted]

Boog Literature chapbooks are edited and published by David A. Kirschenbaum. Send SASE, or email, for catalog.

Have a Happy New Year,
David

Visit Excite Shopping at http://shopping.excite.com
The fastest way to find your Holiday gift this season

↑ Index

298. Nada Gordon
m. gottlieb e-mail???
Wed 29 Dec 1999

---

happy winter festival all -- this is to just to ask if anyone has an e-mail address for michael gottlieb.

if so 'twould be gratefully received backchannel at:

[redacted].

thanks,

nada

↑ Index

299. Poetry Project
New Year's Day Marathon Reading
Wed 29 Dec 1999

This Saturday

January 1, 2000

starting at 2 pm and continuing until past midnight

is the Poetry Project's Annual New Year's Day Marathon Reading with over 120 poets, performers, musicians, artists & downtown personalities

including

Patti Smith, Lenny Kaye, Jim Carroll, Cecil Taylor, Dael Orlandersmith, Mark Ribot, Richard Foreman, Penny Arcade, Maggie Estep, Douglas Dunn, John Giorno, Christopher Stackhouse, Jackson Mac Low, Emily XYZ, Dana Bryant, Edwin Torres, John Yau, Tuli Kupferberg, Taylor Mead, Gillian McCain, Pedro Pietri, Reno, Alice B. Talkless, Chi Chi Valenti, Nick Zedd, and many, many more!

Admission is $15; $12 for students, seniors, members

No advance tickets. Admission at door only.

Volunteers get in free. We always need more volunteers. Call [redacted] to sign up.

Call [redacted] if you need more information anyway.

Refreshments will be available: cakes, cookies, coffee, soda, beer & our traditional New Year's Day chili.

The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church at the corner of 2nd Ave. & 10th St. in Manhattan (nowhere near Times Square).

The Poetry Project is wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. Call [redacted].

Poetry, comradeship, carpeting, good cheer, peace, love & understanding in the New Year/Century/Millennium.

Hope to see you there.

***

If you'd like to be removed from this e-mail list, please respond to this message with "remove me" and we will be sure to do so.

***

↑ Index

300. Bob Grumman
Anyone Know This Poem?
Wed 29 Dec 1999

Someone e.mailed my poetry website with the message below. Can anyone help him?

December 29, 1999

I realize that this may not be the right forum to submit my request. If so, I apologize maybe someone could direct me, and/or my inquiry elsewhere.

I am trying to find a poem that I studied in elementary school, about 30 years ago. I do not have the name of the poem, or the author, or even the first or last line. I recall that the poem was about school and it was an analogy to life. I cannot recall the exact wording of the poem but it ends something like this: "When all my lessons have been learned, I shall put away my books and go home. I will say ‘Mother, I have come home from school.’"

Any suggestions as to the author, or title, so that I can track down this poem, would be greatly appreciated.

Thank you,
Tony Sebastian
[redacted]

↑ Index

301. Jill Stengel
san francisco poetry events, january 9
Wed 29 Dec 1999

---

happy new year everyone!

* * * * * * * * * *

Sunday, January 9, 2000:
A Big Day for Poetry in North Beach
Donâ€™t choose between eventsâ€”Come to both!

* * * * * * * * * *

synapse: Second Sundays at BlueBar

Peter Neufeld and Brian Strang

2:00 p.m.
$2 admission

BlueBar is located at 501 Broadway at Kearney, in San Francisco; enter through Black Cat Restaurantâ€™s main entrance

San Francisco poet Peter Neufeld is relocating to New York City later this month, so come on by to bid him adieu. Neufeld is a co-founder of meldoeon poetry systemsâ€”a small press focusing on emerging, experimental writersâ€”which he co-edits with Eric Frost. With E. Tracy Grinnel, Neufeld is currently editing the first issue of Aufgabe. Neufeld has recent work appearing or forthcoming in Chain, Lipstick 11, and Mungo vs. Ranger; and his chapbook is The Glass Owl (a+bend press, 2000).

Brian Strang has work published or forthcoming in journals including Angle, Itsynccast, Kenning, Lipstick 11, lyric&, Rhizome, Tool, and Tripwire. His first chapbook is Movement of Avenues in Rows (a+bend press, 2000); and his second, A Draft of L Cavatinas (Letters to Ez), is due to appear in Spring 2000 from Potes and Poets. Strang lives in San Francisco and teaches English composition at San Francisco State University.

* * * * * * * * * *

Canessa Park Reading Series

Patrick Durgin and Summi Kaipa

5:00 p.m.
$5 admission

Canessa Park Gallery is located at 708 Montgomery St. at Columbus and Washington

Patrick Durgin is the editor of the periodical Kenning and the author of two chapbooks: and so on (Texture Press, 1999), and Pundits, Scribes, Pupils (Potes and Poets, 1998). Recent work can be found in Crayon, Combo, Lipstick 11, and Tripwire. This is his first reading in San Francisco, and we donâ€™t know when heâ€™ll be back, so catch him while you can.

Summi Kaipa currently resides in San Francisco, where she edits Interlope, a journal of Asian-American writing. She received the Holmes Award in 1999 for poetry appearing in Fourteen Hills; and additional recent poetry and criticism appear in Kenning, Rhizome, and Tinfish. Kaipaâ€™s chapbook, The Epics, is forthcoming from Leroy Press.

↑ Index

302. Poetics List

writers workshops & Poetry / Fouhy

Wed 29 Dec 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 29 Dec 1999 21:38:26 -0500
From: George Fouhy <[redacted]>

Click to find out about NWCA writers workshops and poetry series for January 2000. Happy New Year!!
http://www.bestweb.net/~cindyf/poetry_2000.htm

↑ Index

303. Brian Stefans
Lucious Jackson
Mon 1 Jan 1990

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

charset="iso-8859-1"

Hi Rebecca,

Thanks for your comments. You are right in what you say, in general: = that our parents, uncles, priests, rabbis, books store clerks, computer = literate younger sisters, golfer grandfathers, etc. (though perhaps not = our taxi drivers, Armenian uncles, arctic explorer friends, Falun Gong = enthusiasts, Romanian gymnists, hard-boiled prog rockers, jocks, = suburbanite high school coke-addicts, Bush supporters, etc.) are going = to get their poetry from the New Yorker. And if you want to talk to = those folks about poetry, the New Yorker poems are probably a good place = to start -- at least in terms of cultural values (which are consistently = expressed there), recent literary tradition, even general aesthetic = qualities (and the weather in the Hamptons). Why not? My issues are = really much simpler:

1. that Prynne is a terribly complex poet, and much of this complexity = is centered around his successful (i.e. not nihilistic or reactionary) = resistance to assimilation into "bourgeois" (I scare quote it since it's = an antique term, in my view) culture. (A good introduction to Prynne, = I've recently discovered, is the first volume of Adorno's Notes to = Poetry, especially the essay on "Valery's Deviations" and "Lyric Poetry = and Society" -- not to be didactic, here, but I've never been able to = write or talk about him very well, and that helped.) The New Yorker, I = feel, would fail to pay any attention to these qualities. (I have mixed = feelings about the Ashbery/Prynne connection -- I think Ashbery fits in = quite well with the New Yorker, through his natural charm and calmness, = though he is more mischievous than he lets on when in there.)

2. that unlike popular music culture, which is driven by money and, in a = sense, the enthusiasm of "youth", but also by the generally asocial, = anarchic, quasi-romantic fuck-it-all sub-life that many people, from = nine-to-five stock brokers or Romanian gymnists, have, the New Yorker is = not going to roll over, switch gears (and class loyalties) because of = some sudden grass-roots interest in Prynne (or radical leftist poetry in = general). As Bernstein quite accurately wrote, mainstream poetry lacks = the "edge" that popular culture has -- it's a phenomenon that's worth = observing closely -- but paying lip-service to the "edge" that = non-mainstream poetry really only destroys that edge, since unlike in = music, you have to work a little bit to find it. Perhaps it's = unfortunate that there aren't as many "charismatic" figures in the = poetry world as, purportedly, there once was -- thinking here perhaps of = Eliot, Stein and Ginsberg -- but this creation of artificial = interactions is unlikely to create it. Did MTV's attention to the = Nuyorican poets create any real interest in the "underground" scene? I = don't think so (can't really say) -- most of what I've read or heard = about this, i.e. the opinions expressed on the subject (even Brian Eno = writes about it in his 1995 Diaries) seems to suggest that the blurring = of commerical and "counter-cultural" (another antique term) interests, = only destroyed whatever efficacy the poetry had aesthetically and as = cultural critique (or even as expressions of nihilism, romantic longing, = etc. whatever rock music is supposed to do). (Eno, consequently, would = probably be interested in Language poetry, but I don't think the MTV = thing made him think poetry in American was worth thinking about.)

My sense, based on what you write below, is that you are very interested = in a wide variety of poetries, but are also interested in "spreading the = word," so to speak, about it -- that's a fine idea. I have a few = questions:
> On the other hand-and this is the not-so-big idea behind Fence, which = I edit, and which does attempt the kind of "aesthetic merging" that is = by necessity and intention superficial, in that it only entails = juxtaposing poems on paper inside a product-I also want poems that I = like to have a wide audience.

Is there no way to not make this "superficial"? While there is a lot of = stuff going on in the States (and your magazine, I think, focuses = primarily on English-language "literary" [i.e. page-based] stateside = poetry), it doesn't seem to me that there's SO much that one need only = deal with different types of poetry superficially. For instance, you = had a piece of prose and some poems by Molly Peacock, who is a "new = formalist" (she's pretty good, as far as that kind of poetry goes -- as = are Amy Clampitt and Anthony Hecht, in that category [though not part of = the group, of course], though in general I think this movement pretty = awful, especially the criticism) -- why not get something from her = that's completely, radically "new formalist", i.e. as extreme in that = direction as possible? And, likewise, go extreme "language," extreme = frenchy lyric, extreme gay narrative poetics, pidgin poetics, = documentary poetics, projective this and concrete that? If you are = going into it thinking it's going to be superficial, then you really = only circumscribe the idea of a lukewarm center -- any "edge" that you = may have courted will be lost there, and by extension any interest (I = feel). It's like all those novels written by mildly telented authors = who were trying to bank on the Pynchon craze many years ago -- you will = never turn anyone on to literature by showing them "Come Sunday." But = of course you are the editor, so you know more about how people have = read your magazine than me, and I don't doubt that Fence has introduced = a number of new people to non-mainstream poetry.

>I don't have figures, but I do have the backlogged memory of dozens of = frustrating exchanges with general readers trying to engage by bringing = up the New Yorker in conversation when they hear that I write poetry.

Do these people like the poetry in the New Yorker? If they did, then = why didn't they take their interest a little further by investigating = the books, and maybe other outlets, or somehow connect it to their = interest in words that they acquired (I'm guessing) in listening to = songs and watching movies? Everybody has uttered, at least once in = their life: "terrible screenplay." I know what you mean here, of = course. My dad -- who is a big Bob Dylan fan, especially back in the = day, and is a writer -- doesn't seem to connect with the words in any of = the poems he reads there, or in the Nation or wherever else he comes = across poetry (I know he spots them, because he always brought up some = new Ashbery thing back when I was at Bard). So basically what I mean = is: isn't it clear that the New Yorker, along with its context, is a = deadening force on poetry -- that it just doesn't get anyone very = excited about anything? Maybe that's why those conversations are so = frustrating -- because of the false sense of knowledge that poetry in = the New Yorker creates.

> I am interested in the general reader.

Aren't there other kinds of "general readers"? New audiences? If you = are interested in the poetry and the value-systems inherent them, isn't = it better to try to get this poetry read by people who may share some of = the values (but who don't read poetry) then try to convert those, = "hampered, handcuffed" as you are, who are knee-deep in their own rather = satisfied (and why not?) existences?

> I find the other model to be gratuitously alienating, when I have = already gone through the alienation thing.

Well!

(Sorry I'm writing so much... day off, Christmas vacation). Last notes:

> Alice Quinn (poetry ed. of New Yorker) has a subscription to Fence.

Has she written anything to you about it?=20

> I'm really undecided and occasionally bemused over the question of = whether anything that is performed through the medium of poetry can have = the effect of picking someone up and setting them down outside the = dominant culture.

I didn't write that that would be the case, myself -- you must be = thinking of someone else. The greater question, "ontological" if you = well, is whether poetry can ever enlighten one about her own spiritual, = social and material conditions -- i.e. can it open one's eyes, get past = the illusions, make one want to live a little differently or live in = general, etc. One can be set quite easily "outside the dominant = culture" -- every time you refuse to eat processed cheese you are = outside the dominant culture (though if you just choose one processed = cheese over another you are probably still in it -- sadly), which is to = say that it's not a black and white thing, it's just that a series of = decisions, ethically or out of a matter of survival, will probably put = you head up against the "dominant culture", and once in that position, = it might be nice to find that there are people making art especially for = you (and not for "them") -- i.e. that you have been recognized in your = doubts and frustrations by a "pure" entity, whether it be poem or poet. = The "dominant culture" as an abstraction is not very useful, of course, = but we all feel it somehow, and art seems to me a good way to organize = these feelings (not to mention a way to break through the prevalent = self-concern that seems to be modus operandi that capitalism strives = on.) This is all very vague; I'm just trying to stress that this poetry = which you feel is only read by those who "live, work, etc." in the = experimental poetry community does actually have value for others = outside of it, even if -- and I mean this -- it's in serious trouble = right now in how to convey these values, or to make to make them = enjoyable, aesthetically pleasing, necessary, etc. (Luscious Jackson = notwithstanding.)

Anyway, I hope you think I'm not just being "schmegeggy" or whatever you = wrote about this whole thing -- I just think it's a problem that's of = some interest to a lot of people. Many writers do make life decisions = based on how they are to crystallize their own thoughts on their poetry, = on how they can live to write the poetry they want to write, etc., and = yes these can lead one into holes, low readership, feelings of = alienation and asocialability, etc. which feeds back into the poetry, = though hopefully in a way that reveals something about one's own, and = the general, situation. Everybody wants to be paid for their work, and = to be read by an appreciative audience. But it's probably not a good = feeling to be respected for something you didn't actually do, alas, and = when what you did do becomes lost in the shuffle (your heresies against = Guiliani, for instance, reappearing in some terrible Jay Leno monologue = -- even Eno, who shares three of the same letters of his last name [and = five of the first five of my first], hates Leno). So it becomes rather = frightening when you see "experimental" being coopted as some sort of = cultural mass that can be affixed, superfically, to some larger cultural = mass that, in the end, will not recognize it's values, or fail in any = way to be illuminated by it -- then all the work seems lost. Whether = it's true that the work is, in fact, lost, who knows -- poetry sometimes = takes a long time to make sense.

Well, getting late. Cheers,

Brian

charset="iso-8859-1"

<!DOCTYPE HTML PUBLIC "-//W3C//DTD HTML 4.0 Transitional//EN"> <HTML><HEAD>
<META content=3D"text/html; charset=3Diso-8859-1" = http-equiv=3DContent-Type> <META content=3D"MSHTML 5.00.2314.1000" name=3DGENERATOR> <STYLE></STYLE> </HEAD> <BODY bgColor=3D#ffffff>
<DIV><FONT face=3DArial size=3D2>Hi Rebecca,</FONT></DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT face=3DArial size=3D2>Thanks for your comments. You are = right in=20
what you say, in general: that our parents, uncles, priests, rabbis, = books store=20
clerks, computer literate younger sisters, golfer grandfathers, etc. = (though=20
perhaps not our taxi drivers, Armenian uncles, arctic explorer friends, =
Falun=20
Gong enthusiasts, Romanian gymnists, hard-boiled prog rockers, jocks,=20 suburbanite high school coke-addicts, Bush supporters, etc.) are going = to get=20 their poetry from the New Yorker. And if you want to talk to those = folks=20
about poetry, the New Yorker poems are probably a good place to start -- = at=20
least in terms of cultural values (which are consistently expressed = there),=20 recent literary tradition, even general aesthetic qualities (and the = weather in=20
the Hamptons). Why not? My issues are really much=20 simpler:</FONT></DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT face=3DArial size=3D2>1. that Prynne is a terribly complex = poet, and much=20 of this complexity is centered around his successful (i.e. not = nihilistic or=20
reactionary) resistance to assimilation into "bourgeois" (I scare quote = it since=20

it's an antique term, in my view) culture. (A good introduction to = Prynne,=20
I've recently discovered, is the first volume of Adorno's Notes to = Poetry,=20 especially the essay on "Valery's Deviations" and "Lyric Poetry and = Society" --=20 not to be didactic, here, but I've never been able to write or talk = about him=20 very well, and that helped.) The New Yorker, I feel, would fail to = pay any=20 attention to these qualities. (I have mixed feelings about the=20
Ashbery/Prynne connection -- I think Ashbery fits in quite well with the = New=20 Yorker, through his natural charm and calmness, though he is more = mischievous=20 than he lets on when in there.)</FONT></DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT face=3DArial size=3D2>2. that unlike popular music = culture, which is=20 driven by money and, in a sense, the enthusiasm of "youth", but also by = the=20 generally asocial, anarchic, quasi-romantic fuck-it-all sub-life that = many=20 people, from nine-to-five stock brokers or Romanian gymnists, have, the = New=20 Yorker is not going to roll over, switch gears (and class loyalties) = because of=20 some sudden grass-roots interest in Prynne (or radical leftist poetry in = general). As Bernstein quite accurately wrote, mainstream poetry = lacks the=20

"edge" that popular culture has -- it's a phenomenon that's worth = observing=20 closely -- but paying lip-service to the "edge" that non-mainstream = poetry=20 really only destroys that edge, since unlike in music, you have to work = a little=20 bit to find it. Perhaps it's unfortunate that there aren't as=20 many "charismatic" figures in the poetry world as, purportedly, = there once=20 was -- thinking here perhaps of Eliot, Stein and Ginsberg -- but this = creation=20 of artificial interactions is unlikely to create it. Did MTV's = attention=20

to the Nuyorican poets create any real interest in the "underground"=20 scene? I don't think so (can't really say) -- most of what I've = read or=20
heard about this, i.e. the opinions expressed on the subject (even Brian = Eno=20 writes about it in his 1995 Diaries) seems to suggest that the blurring = of=20
commerical and "counter-cultural" (another antique term) interests, only = destroyed whatever efficacy the poetry had aesthetically and as cultural = critique (or even as expressions of nihilism, romantic longing, etc. = whatever=20
rock music is supposed to do). (Eno, consequently, would probably = be=20
interested in Language poetry, but I don't think the MTV thing made him = think=20
poetry in American was worth thinking about.)</FONT></DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT face=3DArial size=3D2>My sense, based on what you write = below, is that=20
you are very interested in a wide variety of poetries, but are also = interested=20
in "spreading the word," so to speak, about it -- that's a fine = idea. I=20
have a few questions:</FONT></DIV><FONT face=3DArial size=3D2> <P>> On the other hand-and this is the not-so-big idea behind Fence, = which I=20
edit, and which does attempt the kind of "aesthetic merging" that is by=20 necessity and intention superficial, in that it only entails juxtaposing = poems=20
on paper inside a product-I also want poems that I like to have a wide=20 audience.</P> <P>Is there no way to not make this "superficial"? While there is = a lot of=20 stuff going on in the States (and your magazine, I think, focuses = primarily on=20
English-language "literary" [i.e. page-based] stateside poetry), it = doesn't seem=20 to me that there's SO much that one need only deal with different types =
of=20

poetry superficially. For instance, you had a piece of prose and = some=20 poems by Molly Peacock, who is a "new formalist" (she's pretty good, as = far as=20 that kind of poetry goes -- as are Amy Clampitt and Anthony Hecht, in = that=20 category [though not part of the group, of course], though in general I = think=20 this movement pretty awful, especially the criticism) -- why not get = something=20 from her that's completely, radically "new formalist", i.e. as extreme = in that=20 direction as possible? And, likewise, go extreme "language," = extreme=20 frenchy lyric, extreme gay narrative poetics, pidgin poetics, = documentary=20 poetics, projective this and concrete that? If you are going into = it=20 thinking it's going to be superficial, then you really only circumscribe = the=20 idea of a lukewarm center -- any "edge" that you may have courted will = be lost=20 there, and by extension any interest (I feel). It's like all those = novels=20 written by mildly telented authors who were trying to bank on the = Pynchon craze=20 many years ago -- you will never turn anyone on to literature by showing = them=20
"Come Sunday." But of course you are the editor, so you know more = about=20 how people have read your magazine than me, and I don't doubt that Fence = has=20 introduced a number of new people to non-mainstream poetry.</P> <P>>I don't have figures, but I do have the backlogged memory of = dozens of=20 frustrating exchanges with general readers trying to engage by bringing = up the=20
New Yorker in conversation when they hear that I write poetry.</P> <P>Do these people like the poetry in the New Yorker? If=20 they did, then why didn't they take their interest a little further = by=20 investigating the books, and maybe other outlets, or somehow connect it = to their=20 interest in words that they acquired (I'm guessing) in listening to = songs and=20 watching movies? Everybody has uttered, at least once in their = life:=20

"terrible screenplay." I know what you mean here, of course. = My=20
dad -- who is a big Bob Dylan fan, especially back in the day, and = is a=20 writer -- doesn't seem to connect with the words in any of the poems he = reads=20
there, or in the Nation or wherever else he comes across poetry (I know = he spots=20
them, because he always brought up some new Ashbery thing back = when I was=20 at Bard). So basically what I mean is: isn't it clear = that the=20
New Yorker, along with its context, is a deadening force on poetry --=20 that it just doesn't get anyone very excited about anything? = Maybe=20
that's why those conversations are so frustrating -- because of the = false sense=20
of knowledge that poetry in the New Yorker creates.</P> <P>> I am interested in the general reader.</P> <P>Aren't there other kinds of "general readers"? New=20 audiences? If you are interested in the poetry and the = value-systems=20 inherent them, isn't it better to try to get this poetry read by people = who may=20
share some of the values (but who don't read poetry) then try to convert = those,=20
"hampered, handcuffed" as you are, who are knee-deep in their own rather = satisfied (and why not?) existences?</P> <P>> I find the other model to be gratuitously alienating, when I = have=20
already gone through the alienation thing.</P> <P>Well!</P> <P>(Sorry I'm writing so much... day off, Christmas vacation). = Last=20
notes:

> Alice Quinn (poetry ed. of New Yorker) has a = subscription to=20

Fence.</P>
<P>Has she written anything to you about it? </P> <P>> I'm really undecided and occasionally bemused over the question =
of=20
whether anything that is performed through the medium of poetry can have =
the=20
effect of picking someone up and setting them down outside the dominant=20 culture.</P> <P>I didn't write that that would be the case, myself -- you must be = thinking of=20 someone else. The greater question, "ontological" if you well, is = whether=20
poetry can ever enlighten one about her own spiritual, social = and material=20 conditions -- i.e. can it open one's eyes, get past the illusions, make = one want=20 to live a little differently or live in general, etc. One can be = set quite=20 easily "outside the dominant culture" -- every time you refuse to eat = processed=20 cheese you are outside the dominant culture (though if you just choose =
one=20
processed cheese over another you are probably still in it -- sadly), = which is=20 to say that it's not a black and white thing, it's just that a series of = decisions, ethically or out of a matter of survival, will probably put = you head=20
up against the "dominant culture", and once in that position, it might = be nice=20 to find that there are people making art especially for you (and not for =
"them")=20
-- i.e. that you have been recognized in your doubts and frustrations by =
a=20
"pure" entity, whether it be poem or poet. The "dominant culture" = as an=20
abstraction is not very useful, of course, but we all feel it somehow, = and art=20 seems to me a good way to organize these feelings (not to mention a way = to break=20
through the prevalent self-concern that seems to be modus operandi that=20 capitalism strives on.) This is all very vague; I'm just trying to = stress=20 that this poetry which you feel is only read by those who "live, work, = etc." in=20

the experimental poetry community does actually have value for others = outside of=20
it, even if -- and I mean this -- it's in serious trouble right now in = how to=20
convey these values, or to make to make them enjoyable, aesthetically = pleasing,=20
necessary, etc. (Luscious Jackson notwithstanding.)</P> <P>Anyway, I hope you think I'm not just being "schmegeggy" or whatever = you=20
wrote about this whole thing -- I just think it's a problem that's of = some=20
interest to a lot of people. Many writers do make life decisions = based on=20
how they are to crystallize their own thoughts on their poetry, on how = they can=20 live to write the poetry they want to write, etc., and yes these can = lead one=20 into holes, low readership, feelings of alienation and asocialability, = etc.=20
which feeds back into the poetry, though hopefully in a way that reveals = something about one's own, and the general, situation. Everybody = wants to=20
be paid for their work, and to be read by an appreciative = audience. But=20
it's probably not a good feeling to be respected for something you = didn't=20 actually do, alas, and when what you did do becomes lost in the = shuffle=20
(your heresies against Guiliani, for instance, reappearing in some = terrible Jay=20
Leno monologue -- even Eno, who shares three of the same letters of his = last=20
name [and five of the first five of my first], hates Leno). So it = becomes=20 rather frightening when you see "experimental" being coopted as some = sort of=20 cultural mass that can be affixed, superfically, to some larger cultural = mass=20

that, in the end, will not recognize it's values, or fail in any way to =
be=20 illuminated by it -- then all the work seems lost. Whether it's = true that=20
the work is, in fact, lost, who knows -- poetry sometimes takes a long = time to=20
make sense.</P> <P>Well, getting late. Cheers,</P> <P>Brian</P> <P> </P>
<P> </P>
<P> </P> <P> </P> <P> </P></FONT></BODY></HTML>

↑ Index

304. Poetics List

list delays etc.

Wed 29 Dec 1999

Apologies for the in some cases significant delays in forwarding list messages that have occurred over the last week - due to email problems that have been somewhat complicated by my having to access the list account remotely (the university being closed for winter recess). In a related vein, I know that some of you have been trying to reach me backchannel, and I can only say that I will be available as soon as this small mess is taken care of.

Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

305. Alan Sondheim

A Note on Time Zero and Sources for Nikuko and the Doctor

Wed 29 Dec 1999

=

A Note on Time Zero and Sources for Nikuko and the Doctor

It is increasingly difficult to write about, from this distance and exter- iority, Doctor Leopold Konninger, and Nikuko. They inhabit this and other virtual worlds; they are also in stasis, a constant jarring of pirouette, observance, sexuality, obsession. Even this text is forced into repetition as a result - for example "Nikuko has all the time in the world" and what that implies. For the reader, the texts, which necessarily abjure narra- tive (for what could possibly happen when nothing can or does?), appear stagnant - the reality is that each is a memorial or reminder of constancy on the part of "the famous Russian ballet dancer and her Doctor."

I am placed inside (and hence stagnant/frozen) and outside (hence writing, active) simultaneously - a paradoxical situation, since the writing pro- ceeds, as it must, through diegesis, temporal unfolding - against the wall of the Doctor and Nikuko. Yet, if I choose not to write, to remain silent (as witnesses may remain silent), I am, for-myself, inauthentic in my re- sponse - which is to _keep the Doctor and Nikuko before the public,_ to allow the public to view, however mediated, the constancy that is the two of them locked, as if in fatal sexual embrace.

Thus "at the risk of boring the reader," always a reminder, which is by necessity a remainder, of Nikuko, more or less naked, more or less in her pink tutu, more or less shaved, turning before Doctor Leopold Konninger, more or less naked, more or less in his suit, top-hat and monocle (cane by his side), more or less erect and spent, _as if by virtue of a hair._ And that this image, from the imaginary imagination, equally spends itself within you, the voyeur to their exhibitionism, reader to my writing (and _that_ is where the dissymmetry emerges) - delineated by dreamwork, by ei- detic imagery, by hypnagogic imagery, by imagery at the service of every- day life.

Who is open to whom? For whom the pirouettes? Who, at long last, becomes obsessive ballerina, and who watches himself or herself in what mirrors, what _photography?_

Sources for Nikuko and Doctor Leopold Konninger

1. Chaucer, Merciles Beaute, I:

Your yen two wol slee me sodenly;
I may the beautee of hem not sustene,
So woundeth hit thourghout my herte kene.

And but your word wol helen hastily
My hertes wounde, while that hit is grene,

Your yen two wol slee me sodenly;
I may the beautee of hem not sustene.

Upon my trouthe I sey you feithfully
That ye ben of my lyf and deeth the quene;
For with my deeth the trouthe shal be sene.
Your yen two wol slee me sodenly;
I may the beautee of hem not sustene,
So woundeth it thourghout my herte kene.

2. Sue Williams, Lacanian Ink 7, paragraphs 5-7

Now she's beaten, sad and in pain... but she'll move on, will get out of it, fi- nally. Domineering? She'll give it a try--wear leather, high thin heeled shoes, a whip, also may excel at verbal abuse.

Now it's men: they come in by the hour, are very peculiar, want disgust- ing things. They masturbate, scream--Mom, mom--while she urinates on them; or they bring their own tutus to wear, their own ballet petticoats: "Aun- tie Lady I've been bad, I need to be raped with a dildo..."

Now she has power over the beasts.

3. Immanuel Kant, Universal History, first and second thesis:

All of a creature's natural capacities are destined to develop completely and in conformity with their end. [...]

In man (as the sole rational creature on earth), those natural capacities di- rected toward the use of his reason are to be completely developed only in the species, not in the individual.

4. J.N. Adams, The Latin Sexual Vocabulary, page 126:

Irrumo in etymology reflects the popular obsession among Latin speak- ers with a similarity felt between feeding and certain sexual practices. It is a de- nominative of _ruma / rumis,_ 'teat,' and would originally have meant 'put in the teat.' [...] _Irrumo_ and _fello_ describe the same type of sexual act, but from different points of view: _irrumo_ from the view- point of the active violator (= _mentulam in os inserere_), _fello_ from that of the passive participant.

5. Hippocrates, Decorum, V., first part:

Wherefore resume each of the points mentioned, and transplant wisdom into medicine and medicine into wisdom. For a physician who is a lover of wis- dom is the equal of a god. Between wisdom and medicin there is no gulf fixed; in fact medicine possesses all the qualities that make for wisdom. It has disinterested- ness, shamefastness, modesty, reserve, sound opinion, judgment, quiet, pugnac- ity, purity, sententious speech, knowledge of the things good and necessary for life, selling of that which cleanses, free- dom from superstition, pre-excellence divine.

6. Ron Ewart, Fuchsia Lexicon, Revised Second Edition, page 86:

'Dancing Flame' - STUBBS 1982 - AFS Registration No 1621 - Double

Tube short and thick, pale orange to flesh with darker stripes. _Sepals_ pale orange on top, slightly deeper orange on the undersides, medium length, slender and recurving slightly. _Corolla_ orange carmine, deeper shade in the centre and lighter orange on the outer petals, slightly flar- ing. _Foliage_ medium green, largish leaves with serrated edges. _Growth_ trailer, basket variety. Can be grown as a bush with early support. Vigor- our and free-flowering. _Parentage_ 'Novella' x 'Applause.'

↑ Index

306. Michael Neff

Re: Merging and Rambling

Thu 30 Dec 1999

>

If you merged Sondheim with lobotomy you'd have an act of "sondomy"

> -
>
> Merging and Rambling
>
> If IBM merged with the Post Office, you'd have International Business Machine Office. If Red Hat merged with Microsoft, you'd have Red Soft. If Linux merged with Unix, you'd have Lunix. If Macy's merged with Stern's, you'd have Merny's. If CBS radio merged with CBS television you'd have CBS relevision. If the American Broadcasting System merged with Pinchik's Hardware, you'd have Pamerican Hoadcasting System. If Alan merged with Azure you'd have Alure. If Nettime merged with Cybermind you'd have Netmind. If the Internet merged with the London Times, you'd have Lonernet Times. If Tibet merged with Belgium , you'd have Tigium. If a President Clinton merged with a Margaret Thatcher, you'd have Margaret Clinton. If NATO merged with the Red Brigades, you'd have Ned Brigades. If Dean Street merged with O'Reilly Publishing, you'd have Deano Reilly Publishing. If a password merged with login, you'd have pogin. If the first word merged with the last word, you'd have the fast word. If Wall Street merged with Leopoldstrasse, you'd have Wallopoldstrasse. If Venus merged with Mars, you'd have Vars. If the Universe merged with Nothing you'd have Unnothing, but if the Void merged with the Abyss, you'd have the Voiss. If Chrysler merged with the Y2k problem, you'd have the Chrytookay problem. If Kyoko Date merged with Madonna, you'd have Kyodonna. If a sentence merged with a paragraph, you'd have a sentagraph. If Bladerunner merged with Little > Women, you'd have Blattle Women. If God merged with Sondheim, you'd have Gondheim, but if Old Navy merged with Banana Republic, you'd have Old Banana Republic and if Pathmart merged with Wimpy's, you'd have Pampy's, but if Ford merged with women, you'd have Fomen, and if Hibiscus merged with Tulips you'd have Hibips.

>
> There were some people over there who had a dance. Some other people came up. They were from the Turtle People. Two of them carried a shining thing they saw in the water. Some women tried to shoot at it. One of them caught it in her net. She brought it back. Some men at the dance tried to take it. A bird landed on the net and it disappeared. The woman said, from now on you will have this disease. She took the shining thing and put it in the sky.

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

307. Robert Corbett
Re: Poetry Daily, British irony
Thu 30 Dec 1999

On Wed, 22 Dec 1999, Rachel Loden wrote:

> There's discussion of the supposed lack of irony in colonial outposts (as perceived by our man in Manila or Bangkok). So is irony a post-imperial luxury, part of the "management of decline"?

isn't irony in the eye of the beholder? and isn't irony only successful if there is someone (to my way of thinking, the powers of authority, in whatever guise they may take) doesn't get it? i have a feeling that our man in Bangkok didn't get it, not that there is no irony in the tropics. it is always strange to me that how much irony gets tagged as a sign of the decadent west (not that i don't mind a little decadence). and this is true of the left and the right (jeremiah purdy can stand for both types of reaction: 1) as a sign of our moral decline (target of choice: _The Simpsons_); 2) as a sign of our political fecklessness (target of choice: Circus Clintonis)).

to me, rather, irony seems like the weapon of choice for the disenfranchised. irony signals the limits of community while demonstrating another community exists (those who do and do not get it). sometimes this all you have, though my experiences of this are more of the high school clique variety than what Homi Bhabha calls "ambivalence" in colonial discourse. i gather irony is at the heart of Henry Louis Gates' signifying monkey. sure it can be deployed in "regressive" ways. but if you associate irony with the aristocracy, well then, that has hardly been a hegemonic class for the last 200 years. i will be bold and say that power _never_ speaks ironically. it may speak hypocritically (and as a resident in post-WTO Seattle i can say i have a better appreciation for this nuance), but power always means what it says. perhaps the economist would agree with this--not power, but power in decline speaks ironically. but my claim is that those who speak back to power often do so ironically. for it is not only to speak to already constituted communities that one uses irony, but also to speak to communities to come.

-- Robert Corbett "I worried about the gap between [redacted] expression and intent, afraid the world Department of English might see a fluorescent advertisement University of Washington where I meant to show a face." -Rosmarie Waldrop

↑ Index

308. Maria Damon

Re: walcott citation: desperate query

Thu 30 Dec 1999

---

http://www.nobel.se/laureates/literature-1992-lecture.html

that's it, tisa, it was his Nobel lecture. and i asked nate, cuz for a while i thought i'd seen it in discrepant engagement --but he said no, though the quote looked familiar. yes nate has a caribbean sensibility, though he left florida for southern CA, apparently, when he was 4. hope yr well--md

At 5:36 PM -0800 12/27/99, Tisa Bryant wrote: >I don't know where it came from, but I'd like to, because it sounds like the >inspiration for N. Mackey's ongoing prose work, "From a Broken Bottle >Perfume Still Emanates", the first two volumes being of course BEDOUIN >HORNBOOK and DJBOT BAGHOSTUS' RUN.
>
>Perhaps Mr. Nielsen knows?
>
>----------
>>From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
>>To: [redacted]

>>Subject: walcott citation: desperate query
>>Date: Mon, Dec 27, 1999, 9:27 AM
>>
>
>> hi groovoids, i'm desperately looking for the source of this quote by derek >> walcott. i can't remember where i saw it; but i used it in a paper that's >> now almost in press and i need to legitimate it. i vaguely think it may be >> from an interview, and i read it cited by someone else. i will send a copy >> of the booglite Poetry as Cultural Critique chapbook to whomever can help >> me out. in anticipatory appreciation, maria d
>>
>> "Break a vase, and the love the reassembles the fragments is stronger than >>>that love which took its symmetry for granted when it was whole... This >>>gathering of broken pieces is the care and pain of the Antilles, and if the >>>pieces are disparate, ill-fitting, they contain more pain than their >>>original sclpture, those icons and sacred vessels taken from granted in >>>their ancestral places. Antillean art is this restoration of our shattered >>>histories, our shards of vocabulary, our archipelago becoming a synonym
for >>>pieces broken off from the original continent."
>>

↑ Index

309. Arielle C. Greenberg

end of century reading material

Thu 30 Dec 1999

I got a posting from someone asking what everyone was reading now, at the end of the century, which I thought was such a lovely idea, until I realized that posting came from a different list I'm on. So I'm introducing the idea here. Bed-side stacks, circa the flip of the nines to zeros?

I'm particularly excited to answer this myself, since as I write I am also trying to gather books to bring on a three-day hide-out in an Adirondack cabin. My house is stocked with books I bought in 99 and never had a chance to read, so what to bring?

Possible selections include:
Journals I bought from SPD: Volt, Big Allis, New American Writing, The Hat, Fourteen Hills, American Letters & Commentary
Many new Barbara Guest books
The New American Poetry anthology I finally own
Wang Ping's Of Flesh and Spirit

French Symbolist Poetry anthology
New issue of Fence
Jena Osman's The Character
Plus novels I never got to read: Everlasting Story of Nory by Baker, The Saskiad by Hall Pride & Prejudice, which sig oth and I are reading out loud to one another nightly

Also coming:
ingredients for tofu/mushroom thai curry
champagne, bien sur!
the new Stephin Merritt/Dolly Parton/Beastie Boys cds
pancake mix
videos: Modern Times (Chaplin), Rules of the Game (Renoir), 2001 (Kubrick), Irma Vep (Assayas), Philadelphia Story (Cukor)

noisemakers for everyone! see you in the meltdown...
Arielle

* "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I describe."
-- Ray Johnson

↑ Index

310. Alan Sondheim
(no subject)
Thu 30 Dec 1999

```
  #   #   #
  #   ##  #
  #   # # #
  #   # # #
  #   #  ##
  #   #   #

# #   #  ####  #   #
# #   # #   # ## ##
# ###### #   # # ## #
## # #   # #   # #   #
## #   # #   # #   #
# #   #  ####  #   #

####
# #   #
```

```
# #  #
# #  #
# #  #
####

# ######
# #
# #####
### #
## #
# ######

#    ##  #### ######
# #    # #  #  # #
# #    #  # #   #####
#   ###### #   #
#    #  # #  # #
###### #  # #### ######

#  # #####
# #  # #  #
# #  # #  #
# #  # #####
# #  # #  #
#### #  #

##   #  ##### #  #
# #   #   #  #  #
#  #  #   #  ######
######  #   #  #  #
#  #  #   #  #  #
#  #  #   #  #  #

####
 #  #  #
 #  #  #
 #  #  #
 #  #  #
 #  ####

## ##### ##### # #
# # #  #  # #  #  ##
#  # #  # #  #  #
###### ##### #####  #
# #  # #  # #  #  #
#  # #  # #  #  #
```

```
#  ####
# #
#  ####
#    #
# #  #
 ####  ####

 ##   ####  #####  ####  ####  ####
 # #  #  # #  # #  # #   #
# #   #  # #  #  ####  ####
#   #####  #  #   #   #
# #  # #  #  #  # #  # #  #
#  ####  #  #  ####  ####  ####

 ##### #  # ######
  #  #  # #
  #  ###### #####
  #  #  # #
  #  #  # #
  #  #  # ######

 ####  #####  ######  ##  #####
# #  # #   # #   #
#  # #####  #  #  #
### #####  #   ######  #
# #  #  #   #  #  #
 ####  #  # ###### #  #  #

#  #  #  #  #####  ######
#  #  #  #  #  #  # #
#  #  #  #  #  #  # #####
#  #  #  #  #  #  # #
#  #  # #  #  #  # #
#   ##   #  #####  ######
```

↑ Index

311. Jacques Debrot

Re: Lucious Jackson

Thu 30 Dec 1999

brian & rebecca thank you for yr comments. let me just add to yr brilliant exchange a few, perhaps tangential, remarks.

1. mainstream poetry is fascinating to me in that it is, in several ways, in a profound state of crisis, while simultaneously seeming to be incredibly complacent

(or "lukewarm" as brian puts it)--a crisis, in other words, as much of as in complacency. for the readers of mainstream poetry--& such readers have, by definition, a casual relationship to poetry--poems are almost entirely about "soul making" (thus, bill moyers)--& register the (fairly circumscribed) dissastisfactions, aspirations, & values of the most completely socialized segment of the american population (left-of-center, suburban college-educated professionals).

2. alternative poetries are not diametrically dissimilar to mainstream poetry, but actually share/reproduce many of the symptoms of this crisis-in-complacency. this is not, however, necessarily a bad thing inasmuch as it might be more useful & interesting for poetry to make the symptoms of capitalism, etc. exemplary rather than to propose "alternatives" or "solutions".

3. for example, silliman's "solution" of a more locally-oriented poetic strikes me actually as extremely, if unintentionally, conservative. for one thing, it would tend, of course, to leave in place the status quo ideological & aesthetic assumptions of more ambitiously positioned poetries like language (not coincidentally). this is particularly evident for instance w/ the more noticeably regional poetic groupings like apg-- which, although it produces interesting work, is in an extremely unoriginal position vis langpo--or boston, on the other hand, which is largely frozen in an olsonian aesthetic. what exp poetry needs is in fact an "outside" -- an alternative, just for a start, to all the puffing that constitutes the critical discourse (for what it's worth) that surrounds it. indeed, rather than the chaos of proliferating books & presses, the reception of alt poetry & its relationship to its audience seems more & more regulated by networks of affiliation structured by a.) apprentiships by emerging poets to more established writers & b.) accreditation/initiation in/by graduate writing &/or english depts at buffalo, brown, naropa, san diego, etc.

4. poetry, both mainstream & avant-garde, has become a minor genre in almost every respect. it is, for instance, telling that so few of the poets writing in the contributors's notes of fence magazine, when prompted to name their favorite books, mention poetry books. even the way the word is pronounced --po em -- with the stress on the second syllable-- seems to attest to its anachronism. perhaps one could/should begin again by writing pomes.

more later perhaps. . . .

jacques

↑ Index

312. Jacques Debrot
@poetics
Thu 30 Dec 1999

by the way, does kuszai's [redacted] make any mention, in its introduction, of the controversy that led to the change in the list's administration? it would be interesting to know, particularly as the particular circumstances of this controversy render a lot of the rhetoric by perloff, bernstein & others in lauding the list's initiation of various new freedoms a little hollow. (see for instance kent johnson's "article" in _skanky possum_--i'm not entirely in his camp either, but he does make several compelling points.) in any case, @poetic's limitation to the 1st 2yrs of posts arose for practical reasons i'm sure, but it also reflects what i think is the common experience of its offering increasingly diminished returns to its subscribers (while remaining, all the same, indispensable). one suspects, too, that for this reason, many of the formerly most interesting voices on the poetics list correspond now mainly on the "shadowy" subpoetics list. one would think, too, that an intro to the buffalo list would--if only briefly or provisionally--make mention, not only of new democratizing trends, but of the new electronic heirarchies spun off from buffalo & embodied by, for example, subpoetics. if not, is this merely another example of the incestuous critical discourse surrounding alt poetry?

jacques

↑ Index

313. Ruth Danon
Re: poetry and the moment
Thu 30 Dec 1999

Came back from the woods to this interesting discourse. So I thought I'd come out of hiding to offer a small comment. I think that one of the things left out of this discussion is that writing poetry -- in the sense of really trying to enter the discourse and carry it forth in a way that matters -- however a person might define "matter" -- is really difficult. It's not an easy task. Polemic is easier, theory is a little easier, but to write poetry -- well it's hard. I agree that there is an essential conservatism in both the mainstream (and largely tedious) poetry and also in the so called avant garde modes. What is to be discovered? What risked? What commitments will we make? What will we do that doesn't already have it's assumptions declared at the outset? What are we willing to learn?

I don't have answers. But I do want to offer these questions as something to chew on.

Happy New Year everyone

> From: Jacques Debrot <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Lucious Jackson
> Date: Thursday, December 30, 1999 5:07 PM
>
> brian & rebecca thank you for yr comments. let me just add to yr brilliant > exchange a few, perhaps tangential, remarks.
>
> 1. mainstream poetry is fascinating to me in that it is, in several ways, in > a profound state of crisis, while simultaneously seeming to be incredibly > complacent (or "lukewarm" as brian puts it)--a crisis, in other words, as > much of as in complacency. for the readers of mainstream poetry--& such > readers have, by definition, a casual relationship to poetry--poems are > almost entirely about "soul making" (thus, bill moyers)--& register the > (fairly circumscribed) dissastisfactions, aspirations, & values of the most > completely socialized segment of the american population (left-of-center, > suburban college-educated professionals).
>
> 2. alternative poetries are not diametrically dissimilar to mainstream > poetry, but actually share/reproduce many of the symptoms of this > crisis-in-complacency. this is not, however, necessarily a bad thing > inasmuch as it might be more useful & interesting for poetry to make the > symptoms of capitalism, etc. exemplary rather than to propose > "alternatives" or "solutions".
>
> 3. for example, silliman's "solution" of a more locally-oriented poetic > strikes me actually as extremely, if unintentionally, conservative. for one > thing, it would tend, of course, to leave in place the status quo ideological > & aesthetic assumptions of more ambitiously positioned poetries like language > (not coincidentally). this is particularly evident for instance w/ the more > noticeably regional poetic groupings like apg-- which, although it produces > interesting work, is in an extremely unoriginal position vis langpo--or > boston, on the other hand, which is largely frozen in an olsonian aesthetic.

> what exp poetry needs is in fact an "outside" -- an alternative, just for a > start, to all the puffing that constitutes the critical discourse (for what > it's worth) that surrounds it. indeed, rather than the chaos of > proliferating books & presses, the reception of alt poetry & its relationship > to its audience seems more & more regulated by networks of affiliation > structured by a.) apprentiships by emerging poets to more established writers > & b.) accreditation/initiation in/by graduate writing &/or english depts at > buffalo, brown, naropa, san diego, etc.
>
> 4. poetry, both mainstream & avant-garde, has become a minor genre in almost > every respect. it is, for instance, telling that so few of the poets writing > in the contributors's notes of fence magazine, when prompted to name their > favorite books, mention poetry books. even the way the word is pronounced > --po em --with the stress on the second syllable-- seems to attest to its > anachronism. perhaps one could/should begin again by writing pomes.
>
> more later perhaps. . . .
>
> jacques
>

↑ Index

314. Tony Green

Re: end of century reading material

Thu 30 Dec 1999

OK, here you go, Arielle, in no particular order,

Catalogue. Bambury: Works 1975-1999, curated: Wystan Curnow

Books:
L.Althusser. Pour Marx. 1973
Michael Sullivan. Symbols of Eternity: the art of landscape painting in China. 1979
Michael Foucault. Essential works vol2. trans.Robert Hurley, 1998
Virginia Were. Jump Start. 1999
Charles Peirce. Peirce on Signs. ed James Hoopes. 1991
Friedrich Nietzsche. The Birth of Tragedy. The genealogy of Morals. trans H.Golffing. 1956

Magazine:
A brief description of the whole world, #14, 1999

CD's currently on or near CD player:
Miles Davis at Carnegie Hall
Giovanni Martinelli: the acoustic records
Chick Corea. Retro. The Gold Collection: Classic Performances
Ray Charles. Newsound. Essential Collection
Charlie Christian; the genius of the electric guitar

a happy new year to one & all

best Tony Green

From: Arielle C. Greenberg <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, 31 December 1999 11:47
Subject: end of century reading material

>I got a posting from someone asking what everyone was reading now, at the >end of the century, which I thought was such a lovely idea, until I >realized that posting came from a different list I'm on. So I'm >introducing the idea here. Bedside stacks, circa the flip of the nines to >zeros?
>
>I'm particularly excited to answer this myself, since as I write I am also >trying to gather books to bring on a three-day hide-out in an Adirondack >cabin. My house is stocked with books I bought in 99 and never had a >chance to read, so what to bring?
>
>Possible selections include:
>Journals I bought from SPD: Volt, Big Allis, New American Writing, The >Hat, Fourteen Hills, American Letters & Commentary
>Many new Barbara Guest books
>The New American Poetry anthology I finally own
>Wang Ping's Of Flesh and Spirit

>French Symbolist Poetry anthology
>New issue of Fence
>Jena Osman's The Character
>Plus novels I never got to read: Everlasting Story of Nory by Baker, The >Saskiad by Hall
>Pride & Prejudice, which sig oth and I are reading out loud to one another >nightly
>
>
>Also coming:
>ingredients for tofu/mushroom thai curry
>champagne, bien sur!
>the new Stephin Merritt/Dolly Parton/Beastie Boys cds
>pancake mix
>videos: Modern Times (Chaplin), Rules of the Game (Renoir), 2001
>(Kubrick), Irma Vep (Assayas), Philadelphia Story (Cukor)
>
>
>noisemakers for everyone! see you in the meltdown...
>Arielle
>
>
>*******
*
>"I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but >time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I >describe." -- Ray Johnson
>

↑ Index

315. komninos zervos
Re: end of century reading material
Thu 30 Dec 1999

At 02:38 PM 12/30/99 -0500, you wrote:
>I got a posting from someone asking what everyone was reading now, at the >end of the century, which I thought was such a lovely idea, until I >realized that posting came from a different list I'm on. So I'm >introducing the idea here. Bedside stacks, circa the flip of the nines to >zeros?

sure barthes, 1972, 'work to text', 'the grain of the voice', in

'image-music-text'.
kristeva, 1984(first published{french} 1974), 'genotext and phenotext' in 'revolution in poetic language'.
laurel, 1990, 'computers as theatre'.
beach, 1999, 'poetic culture'.
plant,1997, 'zeros and ones'.

these are keeping me busy 55 years after hiroshima at point time-zero in cyberspace.
komninos zervos

↑ Index

316. komninos zervos
(no subject)
Thu 30 Dec 1999

At 03:05 PM 12/30/99 -0500, you wrote:
```
>   #   #   #
>   #   ##  #
>   #   # #  #
>   #   #  # #
>   #   #  ##
>   #   #   #/around/about
>
>
> #   # #   #  ####  #   #
> #   # #   # #   # ## ##
> #   # ###### #   # # ## #
> # ## # #   # #   # #   #
> ## ## #   # #   # #   #
> #   # #   #  ####  #   #what/where
>
>
> #####  ####
> #   # #   #
> #   # #   #
> #   # #   #
> #   # #   #
> #####  ####/say/hear
>
>
> #   # ######
> #   # #
```

```
> #   # #####
> # ## # #
> ## ## #
> #   # ######/you/i
>
>
> #####  #     ##   ####  ######
> #   # #    # #  #   # #
> #   # #    #  # #    #####
> #####  #    ###### #    #
> #    #    #  # #  # #
> #    ###### #  #  ####  ######/embrace/space
>
>
> ####  #  # #####
> #   # #  # #  #
> #   # #  # #  #
> #   # #  # #####
> #   # #  # #  #
> ####  ####  #  #/mine/mine/mine
>
>
> ######  ##    #  ##### #  #
> #    # #   #    #  #  #
> #####  #  #  #    #  ######
> #    ######  #    #  #  #
> #    #  #  #    #  #  #
> #    #  #  #    #  #  #intellect/knowledge
>
>
> #####  ####
>  #  #  #
>  #  #  #
>  #  #  #
>  #  #  #
>  #   ####by/for
>
>
> ####   ##  #####  #####  #  #
> #  # # #  #  # #  #  # #
> #    #  # #  # #  #   #
> #    ###### #####  #####   #
```

```
> #   # #   # #  #  #  #    #
>  ####  #   # #   # #   #   #/teleport/infuse
>
>
> #   #  ####
> #   # #
> #   #  ####
> #   #    #
> #   # #   #
>  ####   ####me/me/i/i/me/i/i/i/
>
>
>  ##   ####  #####  ####  ####  ####
> # #  #   # #   # #   # #    #
> #   # #    #   # #   #  ####  ####
> ###### #    #####  #   #    #    #
> #   # #   # #  #  #   # #   # #   #
> #   #  ####  #   #  ####   ####   ####/through/up/throwup
>
>
>  ##### #   # ######
>   #   #   # #
>   #   ###### #####
>   #   #   # #
>   #   #   # #
>   #   #   # ######/he/she/it
>
>
>  ####  #####  ######  ##   #####
> #   # #   # #    # #   #
> #    #   # #####  #   #   #
> # ### #####  #    ######   #
> #   # #  #  #    #   #   #
>  ####  #   # ###### #   #   #/insignificant/infinite
>
>
> #####   #   #   #   #  #####  ######
> #   #   #   #   #   #   #   # #
> #   #   #   #   #   #   #   # #####
> #   #   #   #   #   #   #   # #
> #   #   #   # #   #   #   # #
> #####   #   ##   #   #  #####  ######/unification/coming together
```

>
>myself and only me, i,i,i,i.
komninos cyberpoetry site http://student.uq.edu.au/~s271502
komninos zervos lecturer in cyberStudies griffith university gold coast
australia [redacted]

↑ Index

317. komninos zervos
Re: Lucious Jackson
Thu 30 Dec 1999

---

i assume that you are refering mainly to published poetries in this post, and would like to add some thoughts and observations from the antipodes. i have been reading beach's "poetic culture" lately and have been trying to apply what i read of the experience in the usa with my own country.

At 05:07 PM 12/30/99 EST, you wrote:
>1. mainstream poetry .....in a profound state of crisis, while >simultaneously seeming to be incredibly complacent.... as much of as in >complacency. for the readers of mainstream poetry....--poems are >almost entirely about "soul making" (thus, bill moyers)--& register the >dissastisfactions, aspirations, & values of left-of-center,
>suburban college-educated professionals).

in australia we are experiencing much the same thing, a crisis in published poetry, oxford,penguin, uni. of queensland press suspending their australian poetry lists, the audience is too small, print runs of 500-750 for a poetry volume are no longer viable for the mainstream. the readers are poets and academics and fall into the same category of readership as described above(i.e.left-of-center,suburban college-educated professionals). many of australia's top mainstream poets are writing verse novels, dorothy porter, les murray, and thus moving into a more lucrative field of fiction novel. the newer mainstream poets, lawrence, kinsella, and younger generation of mainstream poets, like jordie albiston, catherine bateson, ian mcbryde, corul hull, rebecca edwards, lisa bellear, and a host of graduates from creative writing programs, are being published by the mainstream literary journals which are still relatively financial and successful. however the live reading/sounding of poetry at literary festivals throughout australia has never been more active, festivals have never been more active. the live experiencing of literature seems to be growing at the inverse rate to the decline in a reading audience. needless to say the newer mainstream poets are also very good at presenting their work in public.

> 2. alternative poetries are not diametrically dissimilar to mainstream poetry, but actually share/reproduce many of the symptoms of this > *crisis-in-complacency. this is not, however, necessarily a bad thing inasmuch as it might be more useful & interesting for poetry to make the symptoms of capitalism, etc. exemplary rather than to propose "alternatives" or "solutions".*

again in australia, the non-mainstream press, is publishing poets, much the same poets that the mainstream presses were publishing and a whole bunch of poets aspiring to be published by the mainstream presses. in these publications the poets take a more active role in the distribution and sales of the book making the operation more financially viable. again public appearance and performance aids book sales immensely.

what you haven't mentioned in your post, jacques, is a listening audience for poetry, an audience that has come to poetry through live performance venues. (like slammers and nuyorecan-style poets in the usa, and ravers and ranters of the uk). in australia there is another strata of the non-mainstream poets that don't seek print publication, (but do occassionally get published), that have through the eighties and nineties, established a career from the performance of their work in public. myron lysenko, steven herrick, geoff goodfellow, lauren williams, mark gliori, kerry scuffins, jenny boult, steve holiday, and myself, (before selling out to the academy for a 9 to 5 job with holiday pay after fifteen years on the road as a performance poet). their existence is proof enough that there is a listening audience for poetry.

Twenty years ago these three groups were politically and stylistically opposed. Unlike in the usa(re beach), the mainstream australian poetry was greatly influenced by overseas theories of language, linguistics, marxism, and psychoanalysis, and shunned the themes or concerns of university based creative-writing programs which didn't really become part of academia until the late eighties. The small press poets were more interested in "real stories", lyric narratives and experimental poetries(catching up with the avant-garde), and trying to shake the mainstream establishment poetry. Strangely enough this is the reverse situation to what beach describes in the usa over the same period. Interesting, the cultural implications here, american mainstream resists french theory, australian mainstream, seeking recognition internationally, embraces international theories of poetry. The alternate scene in the usa embraces new french theorists that mainstream has rejected, plus developing the work of homegrown usa avant-garde groups. The official alternate scene in australia followed the progress of the new american poetry of the mainstream,ie ashbery etc, as well as the alternative beats, language and multicultural poets. The performance poetry scene was just taking off, (eric beach was probably australia's first professional performance poet, he had a business card which read, "eric beach, poet, no fixed address"), the poets union was formed in each state and there was an active cafe/pub live scene which produced poets who developed at performance venues, hearing and listening to poetry, not in a workshop or in a library and not relating or even knowing about the existence of the other two groups, let alone french, american literary theorists. Poetry was blood-letting, concentrating on the personal, political, psychological and everyday.

Today,in australia, the three groups do not differ a great deal in style and content in their poetry, there has been much crossover and convergence in the last twenty years.

Despite the differences, australian and usa present day experience, shows that the publishing of poetry is in crisis, there isn't an audience that wants to read poetry from a book. australian experience may cast doubt on professor beach's conclusion that the writing program academy is at fault for the drop in readership. the australian experience would imply that making the poetry too ecclectic, dare i say elitist, in their thematic concerns too tied up with a knowledge of literary theory and not with the poem as artisic/aesthetic object, has caused the decline of book reading audience. however maybe it is neither, maybe the academies have just mapped two different paths of many possible paths. perhaps we have something to learn from looking at what we do have.

We have an active large and growing audience that likes to listen and to experience poetry in person, in the flesh, to hear poetry being read, recited, performed, uttered, projected, animated, call it what you will.

Perhaps the audience has changed, or is changing from the traditional silent reading audience to an attentive listening participatory experience of poetry. perhaps we as people want to receive our poetry differently in 2000, 55 years after hiroshima.

Perhaps what is at fault here is that we don't look sideways sometimes. how long have the language poets been seeking acknowlegement in the usa? how long will the slammers be ignored as a poetic phenomenon of our age, or the uk ranters and ravers, john cooper clarke, attila the stockbroker, benjamin zephanaia, lenton quesi johnson, june binta breeze, or the australian performance poets mentioned earlier? We see poetry, but only a slither of the spectrum.

> 3. for example, silliman's "solution" of a more locally-oriented poetic strikes me actually as extremely, if unintentionally, conservative. for one thing, it would tend, of course, to leave in place the status quo ideological & aesthetic assumptions of more ambitiously positioned poetries like language (not coincidentally). this is particularly evident for instance w/ the more noticeably regional poetic groupings like apg-- which, although it produces interesting work, is in an extremely unoriginal position vis langpo--or boston, on the other hand, which is largely frozen in an olsonian aesthetic. what exp poetry needs is in fact an "outside" -- an alternative, just for a > *start, to all the puffing that constitutes the critical discourse (for what it's worth) that surrounds it. indeed, rather than the chaos of proliferating books & presses, the reception of alt poetry & its relationship to its audience seems more & more regulated by networks of affiliation structured by a.) apprentiships by emerging poets to more established writers & b.) accreditation/initiation in/by graduate writing &/or english depts at buffalo, brown, naropa, san diego, etc.*

We see poetry, but only a slither of the spectrum.
We see poetry, but only a slither of the spectrum.

We see poetry, but only a slither of the spectrum.

> *4. poetry, both mainstream & avant-garde, has become a minor genre in almost every respect. it is, for instance, telling that so few of the poets writing in the contributors's notes of fence magazine, when prompted to name their favorite books, mention poetry books. even the way the word is pronounced --po em --with the stress on the second syllable-- seems to attest to its anachronism. perhaps one could/should begin again by writing pomes.
>
> more later perhaps. . . .

perhaps these writers are not reading poetry in books, were they asked who their favourite poet in performance was? or what poets they have heard?

> jacques

komninos komninos cyberpoetry site http://student.uq.edu.au/~s271502 komninos zervos lecturer in cyberStudies griffith university gold coast australia [redacted]

↑ Index

318. Chris Stroffolino
Re: @poetics
Thu 30 Dec 1999

Debrot asks some VERY good and useful questions here....
thanks....

chris stroffolino

On Thu, 30 Dec 1999, Jacques Debrot wrote:

> by the way, does kuszai's [redacted] make any mention, in its introduction, of the controversy that led to the change in the list's administration? it would be interesting to know, particularly as the particular circumstances of > *this controversy render a lot of the rhetoric by perloff, bernstein & others in lauding the list's initiation of various new freedoms a little hollow. (see for instance kent johnson's "article" in _skanky possum_--i'm not entirely in his camp either, but he does make several compelling points.) in any case, @poetic's limitation to the 1st 2yrs of posts arose for practical reasons i'm sure, but it also reflects what i think is the common experience of its offering increasingly diminished returns to its subscribers (while remaining, all the same, indispensable). one suspects, too, that for this reason, many of the formerly most interesting voices on the poetics list correspond now mainly on the "shadowy" subpoetics list. one would think, too, that an intro to the buffalo list would--if only briefly or provisionally--make mention, not only of new democratizing trends, but of the new electronic heirarchies spun off from buffalo & embodied by, for example, subpoetics. if not, is this merely another example of the incestuous critical discourse surrounding alt poetry?*

>
> jacques

↑ Index

319. Patrick Herron

Re: Lucious Jackson

Thu 30 Dec 1999

As always Jacques, you have so much to say that's so compelling, insightful.

I am just now starting to comprehend much of what you wrote, and find myself nodding 'yes' in excitement. but for a couple of things, as always is the case with me.

the current concerns of many poets with categories of exclusion and inclusion in the poetry community seems on its own to help impose a sort of idiosyncratic class structure to the poetry community/poetry communities. a heuristic for stratification perhaps. maybe this is what helps to feed, as you say, "poetry, both mainstream & avant-garde, has become a minor genre in almost every respect."

also, I might add that poetry in America weakens because poets are more and more synonymous with dissidents in the USofA, and dissidents are less and less tolerated, and there are large budgets to make this happen, perhaps larger than ever. the poets singing, "wake up," in eloquent ways, perhaps find it hard to even ever afford a computer, a journal, books. the only true artists are terrorists perhaps (deLillo)?

<<for the readers of mainstream poetry, poems are almost entirely about "soul making" & register the (fairly circumscribed) dissastisfactions, aspirations, & values of the most completely socialized segment of the american population (left-of-center, suburban college-educated professionals).>>

please forgive me if this sounds out-of-line, but this feels as it if comes from a priveleged person looking (down?) at the more common people surrounding him/her on a college campus. just my intuition, since I don't know you nearly well enough. (Forgive me for my lack of tact here.)

equating "soul making" with bill moyers cheapens the emotive power that poetry can have, that poetry has almost lost, perhaps due to elliptic writing, people afraid to say what they mean perhaps? I don't know. sometimes the ellipticism makes us take the scenic route to insights.

but maybe i don't know what you mean by "soul making."

writers with emotive power (what I am equating "soul making" with) are all over the class map. I think now of Linh Dinh, particularly his "The Dead." a staggeringly brilliant and moving poem. there is a sort of "soul making" there, the author imparts his recognition of people's lives changing, and his association of such change with death, and it leaves a chill, an echo of foreign yet familiar recognitions. his writing is out of the mainstream. and yet it is so profoundly similar to Charles Simic's, particularly from the "World Doesn't End" volume, and he's mainstream in a very large sense. the breakdown is largely of social/professional associations/affiliations as you say, but not really content or form any more. again, as you say so well. the line between avant and mainstream is incredibly fuzzy, but for the affiliations. So I guess I am agreeing with most of your sentiments except the one about the association of one small segment of a population with Bill Moyers. I think it undercuts your own otherwise terrific insights.

<<for example, silliman's "solution" of a more locally-oriented poetic strikes me actually as extremely, if unintentionally, conservative.>>

I take it as 1. a sort of survival stance in an increasingly divisive literary environment in Amerika and 2. a sort of anarchistic stance, both very radical and pragmatic (if such a combination is possiblem, which I think yes). organize locally (which need not be defined by geography alone -- I live in NC and my brother lives in CA and yet I would consider him very local to my life, as an example).

using APG as illustrative of the power of the local is unfair to the concept of the local, and even unfair to APG. Not that I have any friends there! it is anecdotal, and another local group could spring up that's of an aesthetic completely original to you (or me). what they do may meet none of my tastes or yours, but perhaps to dismiss them altogether and then transitively dismiss local efforts is unfair?

<<what exp poetry needs is in fact an "outside" -- an alternative, just for a start, to all the puffing that constitutes the critical discourse (for what it's worth) that surrounds it. indeed, rather than the chaos of proliferating books & presses, the reception of alt poetry & its relationship to its audience seems more & more regulated by networks of affiliation structured by a.) apprentiships by emerging poets to more established writers & b.) accreditation/initiation in/by graduate writing &/or english depts at buffalo, brown, naropa, san diego, etc.>>

I agree, poetry needs an outside. networking, though, is such a product of a capitalist coulture of quid pro quo. how can poetry really emerge from an environment of such backslapping? and establishment by writing programsperhaps my imagination is limited there. but little of what i read in journals, mainstream or avant, has that poetic chill. poetry is rare, rare, rare and yet common. everyone has poetic moments, insights, so they are as common as people, but it seems not many people have more than a small number in a lifetime, and even less try to communicate those moments, realizations, etc, and even less try repeadedly, doggedly, stubbornly.

on a final note, to the group, why is originality so important and craft so unimportant? Aren't both important? Say, original non-New Formalist craft? Other formalisms, shifting dynamic formalisms? Is it possible to say something that has never ever been said before? especially when we know so much of our reading has intercolated into our ways of thinking, that we might find it hard to actually know from where our ideas "originated"?

goddamn, Jacques, what you said was certainly insightful. as with the discussion of Ashbery's "Girls...", Darger, outside art, from a while back. Thanks for the nourishment.

Happy New Year
Patrick Herron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

320. nuyopoman
Re: POETICS Digest - 27 Dec 1999 to 29 Dec 1999 (#1999-238)
Fri 31 Dec 1999

In a message dated 12/30/99 12:07:44 AM Eastern Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

<< Date: Mon, 27 Dec 1999 13:57:20 -0600
From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
Subject: d.a.levy

hi, i'm giving buddhist third class junkmail oracle a read...i find it very depressing...like reading minima moralia...reading the brilliant outpourings of someone who doesn't want to be alive and has no sense of humor about it...can someone help me? >>

Dear Maria,

Death no parenthesis etc.

That levy was hounded to death by CoIntelPro - 15-year old girl wired to record a reading he gave in a church basement!
That he came under investigation because he was a Grand BooHoo in the Neo-American Church, a complete sham created to poke fun at organized religion but whose pataphysical hierarchy gave FBI something to believe in (this revealed for first time in Golden's intro).
That he refused to leave Cleveland.
The he had published 55 books at time of death (26).
That his poems are the sheerest yowl and shriek song descant of the 60s.
That his spirit of mimeo lives on in internet.
That B3CJMO is a super testament, with great gruppby repros and even color collages.

My students at Bard couldn't get enough of him.

After years of battling against the image of die-young romantapoet, I'm coming to terms with levy, Frank Stanford, Larry Neal, Steven Jesse Bernstein as repping some lineage, American grain .

Love,

BobH

↑ Index

321. nuyopoman
da levy
Fri 31 Dec 1999

Dear Maria,

Death no parenthesis etc.

That levy was hounded to death by CoIntelPro - 15-year old girl wired to record a reading he gave in a church basement!
That he came under investigation because he was a Grand BooHoo in the Neo-American Church, a complete sham created to poke fun at organized religion but whose pataphysical hierarchy gave FBI something to believe in (this revealed for first time in Golden's intro).

That he refused to leave Cleveland.
The he had published 55 books at time of death (26).
That his poems are the sheerest yowl and shriek song descant of the 60s.
That his spirit of mimeo lives on in internet.

My students at Bard couldn't get enough of him.

After years of battling against the image of die-young romantapoet, I'm coming to terms with levy, Frank Stanford, Larry Neal, Steven Jesse Bernstein as repping some American grain lineage.

Love,

BobH

↑ Index

322. Poetics List
from Richard Frey, re: Philly reading 1/9/00
Fri 31 Dec 1999

FORWARDED / reformatted
From: [redacted] (Richard Frey)
Subject: Gontarek, Silver at NOTcoffeeHouse 1 pm 1/9/00

(NOTcoffeeHouse) Poetry and Performance Series
Sunday, January 9, 2000
1 pm
First Unitarian Church
2125 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19103

Featured Readers:
Leonard Gontarek,
editor, APR Philly Edition 99, nominee, 1999 Pushcart Prize. Leonard will read from his journal and new poems.

Don Silver
will finger-pick and read new poems.

Plus Open Poetry and Performance Showcase
$1 admission.

Along with a live poetry reading and performance , we invite you to join in our website poetry reading presentation. All poets and performers may have a poem or a lyric featured in theNOTcoffeeHouse website. Send your work for inclusion in the ongoing internet presentation. Tell your friends all over the world to check our site! Poets and performers may submit works for direct posting on the website via email to the [redacted] or works may be emailed to Richard Frey at [redacted] or USPS or hand-delivered through slot at 500 South 25th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19146. More information: Church office, [redacted], Jeff Loo, [redacted] or Richard Frey, [redacted]. Visit our website at www.notcoffeehouse.org poets & performers previously appearing at NOTcoffeeHouse: Nathalie Anderson, Lisa Coffman, Barbara Cole, Barb Daniels, Linh Dinh, Lori-Nan Engler, Simone Zelitch, Dan Evans, Brenda McMillan, Kerry Sherin, John Kelly Green, Emiliano Martin, Jose Gamalinda, Toshi Makihara, Thom Nickels, Joanne Leva, Darcy Cummings, David Moolten, Kristen Gallagher, Shulamith Wachter Caine, Maralyn Lois Polak, Marcus Cafagna, Ethel Rackin, Lauren Crist, Beth Phillips Brown, Joseph Sorrentino, Frank X, Richard Kikionyogo, Elliott Levin, Leonard Gontarek, Lamont Steptoe, Bernard Stehle, Sharon Rhinesmith, Alexandra Grilikhes, C. A. Conrad, Nate Chinen, Jim Cory, Tom Grant, Gregg Biglieri, Eli Goldblatt, Stephanie Jane Parrino, Jeff Loo, Theodore A. Harris, Mike Magee, Wil Perkins, Deborah Burnham, UNSOUND, Danny Romero, Don Riggs, Shawn Walker, She-Haw, Scott Kramer, Judith Tomkins, 6 of the Unbearables - Alfred Vitale Ron Kolm, Jim Feast, Mike Carter, Sharon Mesmer, Carol Wierzbicki-,John Phillips, Quinn Eli, Molly Russakoff, Peggy Carrigan, Kelly McQuain, Patrick Kelly, Mark Sarro, Rocco Renzetti, Voices of a Different Dream - Annie Geheb, Ellen Ford Mason, Susan Windle - Bob Perelman, Jena Osman, Robyn Edelstein,Brian Patrick Heston, Francis Peter Hagen, Shankar Vedantam, Yolanda Wisher, Lynn Levin, Margaret Holley

↑ Index

323. Tedd J. Mulholland

Re: end of century reading material

Fri 31 Dec 1999

More than happy to answer this question as my first post to the list (':

various writings of Mikhail Bulgakov the newly published collected fictions of J.L. Borges soon to add the collected poems selected poems of T.S. Eliot various readings from works by Keith and Rosemarie Waldrop Stein's Tender Buttons and Medit.
Miller's Sexus
Joyce's Wake
Various Pynchon
Collected Paul Celan
Tom Phillips

R. Silliman
plan to pick up some Eco on semiotics

So, reviewing the list, im feeling a bit ADD . . .
some titles and writers are constants and the list is far from complete if you include random reading of poetry, prose, and non-fictions

as a side note, an introduction of myself may be appropriate, i hail from Atlanta and fraternize with the Atlanta Poets Group and as a further note, i plan on moving to Sacramento come next September, if any have info. on art and culture, living, etc. on the area, it would be greatly appreciated

TEDD

---- you wrote:
> I got a posting from someone asking what everyone was reading now, at the > end of the century, which I thought was such a lovely idea, until I > realized that posting came from a different list I'm on. So I'm > introducing the idea here. Bedside stacks, circa the flip of the nines to > zeros?
>
> I'm particularly excited to answer this myself, since as I write I am also > trying to gather books to bring on a three-day hide-out in an Adirondack > cabin. My house is stocked with books I bought in 99 and never had a > chance to read, so what to bring?
>
> Possible selections include:
> Journals I bought from SPD: Volt, Big Allis, New American Writing, The > Hat, Fourteen Hills, American Letters & Commentary
> Many new Barbara Guest books
> The New American Poetry anthology I finally own
> Wang Ping's Of Flesh and Spirit
> French Symbolist Poetry anthology
> New issue of Fence
> Jena Osman's The Character
> Plus novels I never got to read: Everlasting Story of Nory by Baker, The > Saskiad by Hall
> Pride & Prejudice, which sig oth and I are reading out loud to one another > nightly
>
>
> Also coming:
> ingredients for tofu/mushroom thai curry
> champagne, bien sur!

> the new Stephin Merritt/Dolly Parton/Beastie Boys cds
> pancake mix
> videos: Modern Times (Chaplin), Rules of the Game (Renoir), 2001 > (Kubrick), Irma Vep (Assayas), Philadelphia Story (Cukor)
>
>
> noisemakers for everyone! see you in the meltdown...
> Arielle
>
>
> **********
> "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but > time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I > describe." -- Ray Johnson
>

---------- Get free personalized email from GTE at http://www.gtemail.net

↑ Index

324. Gerald Schwartz
Re: end of century reading material
Fri 31 Dec 1999

To The List, a list in no particular order:

Metaphor Of Trees and Last Poems, William Bronk, 1999

The Cloud Of Unknowing (Clifton Wolters, Trans.), 1370

World Prefix, Harrison Fisher, 1989

Collected poems, Kay Boyle

Herman Melville's UNCOLLECTED POEMS, various sources

As far as "music" goes:

SolomonsRamada, self-titled cd

George Crumb, Black Angel cd

Cecil Taylor, ALWAYS A PLEASURE cd and on and on....

Cheers,

Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

325. David Baptiste Chirot
Re: end of century reading material
Fri 31 Dec 1999

---

in the spirit of the traveling exhibitions CHIAPAS: LA PRIMERA REVOLUCION SOCIAL DEL III MILENIO and LIBERTAD EN LA ENSENANZA DE LOS ARTES: LA INFLUENCIA DE LOS REGIMS AUTORITARIOS--

HOUSE OF THE DEAD: F. Dostoevsky
SOLEDAD BROTHER George Jackson
GUADALUPE: MOTHER OF THE NEW CREATION Virgil Elizondo
ESPANA, APARTA DE MI ESTE CALIZ Cesar Vallejo EL MEXICANO! JOURNAL GUERILLA DE LA GUERRE CIVILE EN ESPANGNE F. Perez Lopez
CATAFALQUES POEMS 1987-1989 Eric Basso
SPECIMEN DAYS Walt Whitman
SELECTED WRITINGS Che Guevara
MAYAKOVSKY AND HIS CIRCLE Victor Shlovsky
ZAUM: THE TRANSRATIONAL POETRY OF RUSSIAN FUTURISM Gerald Janecek
POESIA EXPERIMENTAL Clemente Padin
THE LONG LONELINESS: THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF THE LEGENDARY CATHOLIC SOCIAL ACTIVIST Dorothy Day
THE DEATH OF JIM LONEY James Welch
OUEVRES Francois Villon OFFENDER HANDBOOK State of Wisconsin Department of Corrections Division of Community Corrections
UNITED STATES CODE ANNOTATED TITLE 25 INDIANS
BENEATH THE UNDERDOG Charles Mingus
FOR BREAD ALONE Mohamed Choukri THINGS FALL APART Chinua Achebe

two films:

ANDREI RUBLEV D. Andrei Tarkovsky
AGUIRRE DER ZORN GOTTES W. Herzog

music

AMAZON Nana Vasconcelos
EL CORAZON Don Cherry & Ed Blackwell
SONNY'S TIME NOW Sonny Murray, Don Cherry and others--one side with "Leroi Jones" reading

THE COMPLETE BLIND WILLIE JOHNSON
MALCOLM X Speeches (excerpts)
EAGLEYE CHERRY
HANK WILLIAMS: COMPLETE SINGLES COLLECTION
DICK DALE: TRIBAL THUNDER
GEORGE JONES: THE BRADLEY BARN SESSIONS; HARDCORE HONKY TONK
ETTA JAMES: PEACHES
BACK TO THE STREETS: CELEBRATING THE MUSIC OF DON COVAY DESPEARTE ROCK AND ROLL Vols 1-15

dbchirot

↑ Index

326. Tom Beckett
Re: end of century reading material
Fri 31 Dec 1999

Harp Song for a Radical: The Life and Times of Eugene Victor Debs by Marguerite Young

The Arcades Project by Walter Benjamin

Gilles Deleuze and the Ruin of Representation by Dorothea Olkowski

Imagining Language ed. by Rasula and McCaffery

CDs:

The John Adams Earbox

The Melody at Night with You (solo jazz piano) by Keith Jarrett

↑ Index

327. charles alexander query re philosophy books
Fri 31 Dec 1999

For those of you who may be teaching philosophy, or poetry & philosophy, or others --

My father-in-law has expressed a recent interest in reading philosophy, perhaps partly influenced by his advancing age and brushes with health problems in the last year. He has not read much philosophy or literature in the past, but is an intelligent reader. He also has a birthday coming up.

So I would like to give him one or two basic books or introductions to philosophy -- maybe one to the history of philosophy and one to 20th century philosophy; from there he can read individual authors' works as he wishes. But I really don't know of any great introductory books in this field. From some web searching I have found the following titles --

Introduction to Philosophy : Classical and Contemporary Readings by John Perry (Editor), Michael Bratman (Editor)

What Does It All Mean : a Very Short Introduction to Philosophy by Thomas Nagel

The Great Philosophers : An Introduction to Western Philosophy by Bryan Magee

Does the Center Hold? : An Introduction to Western Philosophy by Donald Palmer

Does anyone have any recommendations or anti-recommendations for these or any other related books?

thanks to all for any advice whatsoever, and best wishes to all on this new year's eve, which is my first day backon the poetics list in many many months,

charles

↑ Index

328. Charles Bernstein
Subtext presents Jen Hofer and Bryant Mason on Jan. 5th
Fri 31 Dec 1999

Forward. Note this reading is in Vancouver, BC

From: "R. Bryant Mason" <[redacted]>
Subject: Subtext presents Jen Hofer and Bryant Mason on Jan. 5th
Date: Thu, 30 Dec 1999 22:49:51 -0800

Subtext continues its monthly series of experimental writing with readings by Jen Hofer and Bryant Mason on Wednesday, January 5, 2000 at the Richard Hugo House. Suggested donations for admission are $5 at the door on the evening of the performance.

Jen Hofer is a poet and translator originally from the San Francisco Bay Area. She currently lives in Mexico City, where she is editing and translating an anthology of contemporary poetry by Mexican women that will be co-published by University of Pittsburgh Press and Hotel Ambosmundos Press. Her translations and poems can be found in recent or shortly forthcoming issues of Explosive,

Facture, Kenning, Rhizome, Skanky Possum and in her a+bend press chapbook as far as. Recently, she and her fiddle have joined forces with the visual artist Melissa Dyne, forming Groundzero Telesonic Outfit International.

Bryant Mason is a long time member of the Subtext collective. His work has been variously described as "lightheartedly paranormal" and "born of an almost religious fervor." He promises to leave his Ukulele at home.

Also this January, a special pre-reading event: Subtext's "silent open mic." A full twenty minutes before the reading you will experience a multi-media slide show extravaganza that incorporates projected texts, images, and the anonymous sounds of DJ Yum Yum. For more information about the slide show and how to submit art and text, e-mail <[redacted]>.

Look to the future, Subtext presents Bay Area poet Carla Harryman on February 2nd. Also reading will be Jeanne Heuving.

Subtext readings fall on the 1st Wednesday of the month at the Richard Hugo House. The Hugo House is located at 1634 11th Ave on Capitol Hill in Seattle. Subtext events are co-sponsored by the Richard Hugo House.

Bryant Mason
Subtext

↑ Index

329. Herb Levy
Re: Subtext presents Jen Hofer and Bryant Mason on Jan. 5th
Fri 31 Dec 1999

Hi,

Unless Bryant moved further than just across the street last month, This reading is in Seattle where he works with the Subtext collective, rather than in BC.

Bests,

Herb

> Forward. Note this reading is in Vancouver, BC
>
> From: "R. Bryant Mason" <[redacted]>
> Subject: Subtext presents Jen Hofer and Bryant Mason on Jan. 5th
> Date: Thu, 30 Dec 1999 22:49:51 -0800
>
> Subtext continues its monthly series of experimental writing with readings by Jen Hofer and Bryant Mason on Wednesday, January 5, 2000 at the Richard Hugo House. Suggested donations for admission are $5 at the door on the evening of the performance.

> Jen Hofer is a poet and translator originally from the San Francisco Bay Area. She currently lives in Mexico City, where she is editing and translating an anthology of contemporary poetry by Mexican women that will be co-published by University of Pittsburgh Press and Hotel Ambosmundos Press. Her translations and poems can be found in recent or shortly forthcoming issues of Explosive, Facture, Kenning, Rhizome, Skanky Possum and in her a+bend press chapbook as far as. Recently, she and her fiddle have joined forces with the visual artist Melissa Dyne, forming Groundzero Telesonic Outfit International.
>
> Bryant Mason is a long time member of the Subtext collective. His work has been variously described as "lightheartedly paranormal" and "born of an almost religious fervor." He promises to leave his Ukulele at home.
>
> Also this January, a special pre-reading event: Subtext's "silent open mic." A full twenty minutes before the reading you will experience a multi-media slide show extravaganza that incorporates projected texts, images, and the anonymous sounds of DJ Yum Yum. For more information about the slide show and how to submit art and text, e-mail <[redacted]>.
>
> Look to the future, Subtext presents Bay Area poet Carla Harryman on February 2nd. Also reading will be Jeanne Heuving.
>
> Subtext readings fall on the 1st Wednesday of the month at the Richard Hugo House. The Hugo House is located at 1634 11th Ave on Capitol Hill in Seattle. Subtext events are co-sponsored by the Richard Hugo House.
>
> Bryant Mason
> Subtext

--

Herb Levy
NEW MAILING ADDRESS: P O Box 9369 Forth Wort, TX 76147
NEW PHONE: 817 [redacted]
same old e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

330. Maria Damon

Re: POETICS Digest - 27 Dec 1999 to 29 Dec 1999 (#1999-238)

Fri 31 Dec 1999

---

thanks bob every piece of info helps. hope yr well at this turn of time into the future...md

At 5:09 AM -0500 12/31/99, [redacted] wrote:
>In a message dated 12/30/99 12:07:44 AM Eastern Standard Time, >[redacted] writes:

>
><< Date: Mon, 27 Dec 1999 13:57:20 -0600
> From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
> Subject: d.a.levy
>
> hi, i'm giving buddhist third class junkmail oracle a read...i find it very > depressing...like reading minima moralia...reading the brilliant > outpourings of someone who doesn't want to be alive and has no sense of > humor about it...can someone help me? >>
>
>Dear Maria,
>
>Death no parenthesis etc.
>
>That levy was hounded to death by CoIntelPro - 15-year old girl wired to >record a reading he gave in a church basement!
>That he came under investigation because he was a Grand BooHoo in the >Neo-American Church, a complete sham created to poke fun at organized >religion but whose pataphysical hierarchy gave FBI something to believe in >(this revealed for first time in Golden's intro).
>That he refused to leave Cleveland.
>The he had published 55 books at time of death (26).
>That his poems are the sheerest yowl and shriek song descant of the 60s.
>That his spirit of mimeo lives on in internet.
>That B3CJMO is a super testament, with great gruppby repros and even color >collages.
>
>My students at Bard couldn't get enough of him.
>
>After years of battling against the image of die-young romantapoet, I'm >coming to terms with levy, Frank Stanford, Larry Neal, Steven Jesse Bernstein >as repping some lineage, American grain .
>
>Love,
>
>BobH

↑ Index

331. Randy Prunty
Re: end of century reading material
Fri 31 Dec 1999

---

my list:

George Oppen, Collected Poems
Tom Phillips, Works and Texts
Why we feel: the science of human emotions, Victor Johnson
Helen Keller or Arakawa, by Madeline Gins (great book!)
Other: British and Irish Poetry, ed. Caddel and Quartermain Philosophy in the Flesh, Lakoff and Johnson
The World is Round, Gertrude Stein Translating the Unspeakable, Kathleen Fraser

cheers
randy prunty

↑ Index

332. Lynn Langmade
Re: end of century reading material
Fri 31 Dec 1999

A lurker rears her ugly head...

Books

Soren Kierkegaard; The Concept of Irony, With Continual Reference to Socrates Wassily Kandinsky: Point & Line To Plane
Leonard Shlain: The Alphabet Versus The Goddess, The Conflict Between Word and Image
Paul Levinson: digital mcluhan
George Oppen: Collected Poems
Brenda Hillman: Death Tractates
Diane Zak, Visual Basic 6.0

CDs

Siouxsie & The Banshees, Join Hands
Siouxsie & the Banshees, juju
PJ Harvey, 4-Track Demos
PJ Harvey, Is this Desire?
Moby, Animal Rights
Mozart, Serenade in B Flat Major, K 361, "Gran Partita" Sinead O'Connor, The Lion & The Cobra

John Coltrane, My Favorite Things
The Sisters of Mercy; Floodland
Leslie Bricusse, Willy Wonka & The Chocolate Factory
Cibo Matto, Viva! La Woman
Debussy, Children's Corner
Kristen Hersh, Throwing Muses..ilk, Hips & Makers
L7, Hungry for Stink
Nymphs, Self Titled Sebadoh, Bakesale
Nina Simone...everything
Pink Floyd, Animals

Videos

Selections from the George Balanchine Library, Jewels, Tzigane, Andante from divertimento No.15, Prodigal Son, Ballo dell Regina

----- Original Message -----
From: Arielle C. Greenberg <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 1999 11:38 AM
Subject: end of century reading material

> I got a posting from someone asking what everyone was reading now, at the > end of the century, which I thought was such a lovely idea, until I > realized that posting came from a different list I'm on. So I'm > introducing the idea here. Bedside stacks, circa the flip of the nines to > zeros?
>
> I'm particularly excited to answer this myself, since as I write I am also > trying to gather books to bring on a three-day hide-out in an Adirondack > cabin. My house is stocked with books I bought in 99 and never had a > chance to read, so what to bring?
>
> Possible selections include:
> Journals I bought from SPD: Volt, Big Allis, New American Writing, The > Hat, Fourteen Hills, American Letters & Commentary
> Many new Barbara Guest books
> The New American Poetry anthology I finally own
> Wang Ping's Of Flesh and Spirit
> French Symbolist Poetry anthology
> New issue of Fence
> Jena Osman's The Character
> Plus novels I never got to read: Everlasting Story of Nory by Baker, The

> Saskiad by Hall
> Pride & Prejudice, which sig oth and I are reading out loud to one another > nightly
>
>
> Also coming:
> ingredients for tofu/mushroom thai curry
> champagne, bien sur!
> the new Stephin Merritt/Dolly Parton/Beastie Boys cds
> pancake mix
> videos: Modern Times (Chaplin), Rules of the Game (Renoir), 2001
> (Kubrick), Irma Vep (Assayas), Philadelphia Story (Cukor)
>
>
> noisemakers for everyone! see you in the meltdown...
> Arielle
>
>
>
****
> "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but > time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I > describe." -- Ray Johnson
>

↑ Index

333. Maria Damon
Re: end of century reading material
Fri 31 Dec 1999

---

okay.

booksies:
d a levy, buddhist 3rd class junk mail oracle philippe lacoue-labarthe, poetry as experience the new york times american heritage cookbook various works in progress by friends and students, cindluing i mean including:
essay by dave roediger on surrealism in Black texts essAy by walter lew on frances chung (it's good walter i'll get back to you later in more detail) essays on bob kaufman by various groovoids

ceedees:
lama's chant gyuto monks alain stivell roy hargrove cesaria evora

↑ Index

334. David Knoebel
Oh
Fri 31 Dec 1999

Of course I knew

It started in New York City when that ball landed at Times Square, and bounced hour by hour
west to San Francisco.

I never imagined time rolling 'round the Earth on the edge of a shadow pushing the new incessantly
west from Kiribati.

--
David Knoebel
http://www.clickpoetry.com

↑ Index

335. George Bowering
Re: end of century reading material
Fri 31 Dec 1999

This what are you reading right now business shows up on this list about three times a year.

I am always amazed that most respondees are reading eight or ten books at once. I just cant handle that many at once. At the moment I am reading D.G.

Jones's new book of poems entitled _Grounding Sight_ and Beckett's _Eleuthera_.

George Bowering.

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

336. Steven Marks
Re: end of century reading material
Fri 31 Dec 1999

Books:
Imagining Language, Rasula and McCaffery (highly recommended)
Of Grammatology, Derrida
A Frolic of His Own, Gaddis (just finished)

CDs: (highly influenced by my wife)
Dick Dale & the Del-Tones
Masada, John Zorn
Annie Lennox
REM
PJ Harvey
Beth Orton
Sinead O'Connor
P-Funk

↑ Index