@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

Volume III — 2007–2014

85 monthly editions · 26,216 messages · January 2007 – January 2014

Edited by Kristen M. Fabians

These are the reading editions of the Poetics List of the University at Buffalo, and this volume holds its long ending — twenty-six thousand two hundred and sixteen messages across eighty-five months, from January 2007 to the day its founder closed the room in January 2014. The argument thins as it goes. What replaces it is not silence exactly but announcement: readings, books, deaths, the ordinary business of a literary life, sent into a room that answered less and less often. It is a quieter volume than the two before it, and it is the one that knows how the story ends.

Each month is set down in full and in order, exactly as the archive delivered it, and opens with an index of its writers, of the names its posts mention, and of the concepts they take up — every entry a link to the message itself. For each post the author's name, the subject and the message are foregrounded, and the date is kept but subdued. Machine headers, encoded attachments and the repeated listserv routing that once framed every message have been cleared away; email addresses, telephone and fax numbers and similar personal contact details have been redacted.

University at Buffalo, State University of New York

Volume III — 2007–2014

85 monthly editions · January 2007 – January 2014. Every month links to its opening.

2007	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
2008	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
2009	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
2010	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
2011	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
2012	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
2013	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
2014	Jan	·	·	·	·	·	·	·	·	·	·	·

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

January 2007

705 messages · Mon 1 Jan 2007 – Wed 31 Jan 2007

January 2007, a month after the list buried kari edwards, took up the scapegoat — the figure a community blames and casts out in order to hold itself together. Seven hundred and ten messages moved through the room, and its largest currents circled the same ancient machinery from different angles: the poem's old relation to the sacrificed one, the queer poet as the culture's still-permitted target, and the poet's own uneasy standing with the crowd that makes the victim. As a new troop surge was announced abroad, the room studied, at home, the oldest politics there is.

Heidi arnold named the mechanism outright. Soliciting poems on scapegoating, she described it as a communal process of setting up a fall guy when the fault is in fact collective and systemic — the unsettling insight that "we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all", that a group may cohere only by agreeing whom to expel. Maria Damon added Lenny Bruce to the roll of the sacrificed, and the thread became a quiet catalogue of the people cultures burn to keep themselves warm.

The current leper colony was not hard to find. In a thread asking whether homophobia was the last acceptable bigotry in America, Michael Tod Edgerton furiously ventriloquized the culture's dismissal of its gay poets — the way even Ginsberg gets flattened, in the demeaning shorthand of a syllabus, into a curiosity no one need take seriously. Beneath the anger sat the line he carried as his signature, from Mei-mei Berssenbrugge: "There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding". A month after edwards, the queer poet as scapegoat was no abstraction.

And the poet's own place in the arrangement got its thread too. In a New Year's meditation on selling out and the obligation to an audience, Charlie Rossiter argued that "the biggest way to sell out is to not be true to your self" — whether by dumbing a poem down for the crowd's applause or by courting the academy's approval instead. It was the scapegoat question turned inward: where does the poet stand in relation to the very audience that makes and unmakes its victims — courting the crowd that scapegoats, or refusing it and risking becoming the next one expelled.

The answers, taken together, pointed one way. The scapegoat is made by the crowd, and the poem's oldest office is to speak for the one the crowd expels rather than to swell the mob. I have set January down exactly as the archive delivered it — the leper colony, the dismissed gay poet, the sacrificed comedian, and the sell-out's true self — because it was the month the list, having just lost kari edwards to the ranks of the cast-out, studied the machinery of blame and half-recognized its own reflection in it: that a guild which reads only itself is one exclusion away from a leper colony, and that the whole work, in the end, is to keep open the door the crowd keeps trying to shut.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 705 in all.

WRITERS

(Reich), Deborah Feinsmith 275, 276, 480
De 1913, Sandra 91
Adele, Gretchen 691
Alexander, Charles 69, 70, 413, 418, 591
Ali, Kazim 187
Allegrezza, William 302, 348, 395
Alpert, Dr. Barry S. 58
Amato, Joe 38, 207, 599, 612, 650
AND, mIEKAL 24, 28, 86, 99, 117, 136, 178, 202, 223, 252, 273, 332, 346, 352, 515
Andrews 263
Andrews, Betsy 705
Andrews, Jim 3, 16, 74, 87, 130, 314, 343, 362, 398, 500, 503, 522, 629
Annual, Fulcrum 50, 67, 299, 321
Applegate, David 48, 368
Arnold, Heidi 365, 417
Baiotto, Matthew 533
Baldwin, Charles 293, 637
Bales, Marcus 242, 329, 396, 407, 439, 498, 507, 545, 555, 559
Ballardini, Anny 103, 344, 345, 406, 501, 589, 607, 688
Banes, Clay 210
Baraban, Stephen 517
Baratier, David 128, 179, 703
Bartlett, reJennifer 350, 671
Beckett, Tom 183, 287, 602, 685
Bellamy, Dodie 56, 80, 285, 304
Belz, Aaron 605
Berkson, Bill 232
Bernstein, Charles 328
Berrigan, Anselm 443
Berrigan, Anslem 163
Bettridge, Joel 527
Bianchi, Haas 95, 211, 253, 268, 585, 586
Bianchi, Raymond 142, 657, 698
Bogle, Ann 157, 197, 229, 450
Books, Crane's Bill 476, 573
Bowering, George 116, 118, 146, 170, 171, 181, 213, 315, 598, 600, 644, 666, 696, 699
Bryant, Tisa 404
Byrd, Brigitte 408
Byrne, Mairead 611
Carbo, Nick 5, 35, 212
Chace, Joel 246
Chan, JT 145
Chapman, Wes 356
Cheek, Cris 88
Chirot, David-Baptiste 44, 120, 135, 153, 313, 349, 360, 437, 452, 463, 468, 496, 529, 551, 571, 697
Ciccariello, Peter 85, 97, 180, 269, 397, 625
Clay, Steve 317, 411
Cluff, Caleb 433
Coffey, Dan 333, 423, 528, 635, 661
Conners, Peter 485
Conrad, C. A. 55, 93, 248, 319, 521, 686
Cory, Cynie 236, 237, 386, 490
Covey, Bruce 471, 659
Crockett, Jesse 105, 112, 123, 149, 195, 261, 262, 282, 615, 646, 647, 654, 655
Croggon, Alison 1, 32, 173, 208, 679, 694
Cross, Michael 597
Curnow, Wystan 220, 286, 674
Daly, Catherine 41, 301, 331, 633
Damon, Maria 199, 201, 382, 420, 421, 451
DeDeo, Simon 12, 92, 198, 280, 342, 483, 560, 606, 652, 689, 700
Deed, Martha 668
Detorie, Michelle 308
Devaney, Thomas 509
Devineni, Ram 683, 684
Dickey, Eric 361, 394, 530, 541, 578
Dickow, Alexander 330, 464
Dillon, Patrick 184
Dougherty, Jay 374
DuCharme, Mark 6
Duggan, Patrick 653
Dunagan, Patrick 484, 518
Edgerton, Michael Tod 372, 563, 565, 582, 595
EH 378
Elen 264, 277
Elshtain, Eric 581
Emerson, Lori 505
Enck, Denise 164
Epstein, Andrew 379
Eric 431, 449, 479, 514, 532, 544, 618, 648
Fieled, Adam 21, 101, 156, 288, 373, 446, 663
Filkins, Christopher 390, 436, 531, 603
Foster, Edward 553
Fox, Skip 51, 121, 194, 231, 334, 454
Frazer, Vernon 278, 355, 481, 504, 580, 690, 701
Fuhrman, Joanna 36
Gabbert, Elisa 339
Gaughran-Perez, Jamie 466
Gens, Jacqueline 664
Glass, Jesse 40, 249, 438, 556, 680, 681
Godston, Daniel 291
Gordon, Noah Eli 677

Graham, Lea 224, 613, 614
Gricevich, Andy 60
Gudding, Gabriel 104
Guevarra, L 34
Halle, Steve 323
Hamilton-Emery, Christopher 391
Hamm, Christine 279, 489
Hardacre, Paul 96
Hardy, Edmund 575
Hatlen, Burt 73
Hawkins, Jeremy 215
Heller, Michael 393, 458
Heman, Bob 627
Henriksen, Matt 326
Herron, Patrick 272
Holsapple1 203
III, Nicholas Ruiz 402, 403
Jarnot, Lisa 274
Johnson, Halvard 549, 631, 634
Jones, Andrew 227, 244
Jones, Jill 143, 221
Jorgensen, Alexander 9, 10, 13, 15, 43, 71, 106, 107, 255, 256, 337, 338, 400, 550, 552, 572, 579, 588, 619, 620, 673, 675
Joris, Pierre 75, 311, 682
Karmin, Jennifer 624
Kasimor, Mary 695
Kelder, Cralan 31, 76, 89, 133, 154, 219, 259, 320
Kelleher, Michael 422, 513, 628
Kimmelman, Burt 68
King, Amy 26, 266, 309, 405, 469, 525, 590, 593, 669
Kirschenbaum, David A. 27, 141, 643
Kizershot, Julie 174, 430
Konrad 108
Kuszai, J 134
Kuszai, J. 54, 510
Kyle, Schlesinger 465
LaCook, Lewis 81, 354, 392, 456
Lamoureux, Mark 161, 474
Larsson, Emma 692
Lawlor, Andrea 534
Lepson, Ruth 29, 30, 225, 235, 375, 424, 477, 478, 520, 536, 583, 584, 676
Lewis, Tom W. 144, 200, 359, 385, 428, 432, 524, 638, 649
List, Poetics 113, 601
LoLordo, V Nicholas 596
Mandel, Charlotte 538
Mangold, Sarah 127
Marcacci, Bob 204, 247, 251
Marsh, Bill 47, 381, 389, 399, 416, 453
Maurer, Susan 19, 132, 419
McLennan, Rob 369, 425, 511, 641
Me 616
Meadows, Deborah A. 548
Melnicove, Mark 159
Metres, Philip 238, 508, 523
Mollohan, J. Michael 14
Murphy, Sheila 303, 519
Nangini, Mary Angela 562
Nealand, Eireene 8, 191, 218, 557
Nelson, Jason 250, 475
Nelson, Paul 292
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 61, 152, 196, 216, 257, 353, 383, 435, 447, 457, 462, 492, 493, 526, 640
Nielsen, Aldon 427
NIELSEN, ALDON L 23, 52, 59, 63, 281, 617
Norton, Linda 137, 312, 687
Novack, Carol 77, 363
Orange, Thomas 53, 347
Peterson, Tim 72, 84, 162, 172, 258, 487
Phipps, Wanda 186, 318, 569
Piombino, Nick 158
Powell, Ren 335, 387
Prejsnar, Mark 147, 148
Primeau, Phil 42, 558, 564, 592
Pritts, Nate 429, 630
Project, Poetry 206, 336, 388, 516
Protein, Vulture 139, 185, 290, 298, 324
Putnam, CE 482
Quackenbush, Jason 205, 240, 241, 364, 576, 577, 608, 609
Quasha, George 499
Queyras, Sina 33, 296, 376
Ricejunk2 37, 176, 177, 702, 704
Rogerson, Derek 610, 622
Ross, Harry 567, 570
Rossiter, Charlie 4, 233
Salerno, Mark 574
Savage, Thomas 140, 322, 426, 442, 448, 472, 636, 660
Schultz, Susan Webster 327
Schwabsky, Barry 125, 222, 234, 265, 495, 497, 658, 662, 693
Schwartz, Gerald 543
Segol, Marla 228, 491
Sherlock, Frank 138
Shmailo, Larissa 25, 566, 587, 670
Side, Jeffrey 7, 57, 65, 82, 83, 90, 98, 100, 254, 316, 470
Silliman, Ron 18, 46, 150, 341, 467, 678
Silverman, Oren 486, 502
Skinner, Jonathan 412
Slaughter, William 126
Sondheim, Alan 2, 17, 39, 62, 78, 122, 151, 182, 226, 271, 284, 366, 377, 410, 460, 488, 546, 554, 568, 594, 626, 651
Stecopoulos, Eleni 409
Stefans, Brian 189
Stricker, Mark 441
Stroffolino, Chris 230, 243, 260, 310

Sullivan, Gary 473
Swords, Desmond 129, 175, 217
Tanner, John 155
St. Thomasino 506
Thurston, Kevin 370
Tietz, Ward 561
Traffic, Small Press 115, 325, 434, 632, 672
Tranter, John 267
Treadwell, Elizabeth 209
Trigilio, Tony 45, 294
Truscott, Mark 367, 667
Twshaner 340
UbuWeb 66, 444
Vasquez-giroux, Angela 512, 535, 539, 639
Vincent, Stephen 11, 49, 119, 190, 192, 300, 357, 358, 459, 542, 547
Waber, Dan 20, 114, 289, 305, 414, 415, 440, 455, 665
Walker, Sue 109, 110
Warsh, Lewis 131
Watten, Barrett 22
Weaver, Rebecca 384
Weishaus, Joel 270, 283, 380
Weiss, Mark 165, 169, 371
Welford, Gabrielle 167, 351, 494, 642, 645
Wilcox, Dan 245, 445
Williams, Tyrone 64, 79, 401, 656
Wilson, Ian Randall 94
Winks, Christopher Leland 168, 193, 537, 540
Winton, Laura 111, 306, 307, 461, 621, 623
Xu, Lynn 214
Yost, Eric 102, 124, 160, 166, 188, 239, 295
Zimmerman, Daniel 297, 604

NAMES MENTIONED

Abbott, Keith 94, 481, 685
Abel, David 357, 358
Acker, Kathy 80
Adams, John 251
Adorno, Theodor 446
Alice, Mary 77, 211, 273, 275, 276, 277, 278, 281
Allan, Don 267, 481
Allison, Shane 267, 471
Alpert, Barry S. 58, 61
Ambrose, Joe 178, 204, 643
Americans, Asian 13, 106, 107, 452, 468, 537
Amirkhanian, Charles 66
Amis, Martin 683
Anderson, Erik 408
Anderson, Laurie 36, 366
Anderson, Lori 378
Andre, Michael 468
Angelo, Michael 35
Anne, Sarah 409, 413, 418
Anton, Robert 202, 311
Antonakos, Stephen B. 318
Apollinaire, Guillaume 267
Arbor, Ann 408
Arendt, Hannah 75, 340
Armantrout, Rae 60, 72, 505
Armitage, Simon 217
Armstrong, Steve 13
Ashbery, John 18, 36, 310, 312, 379, 386, 446, 662, 674
Ashley, Robert 71, 267, 308
Atkins, Tim 308, 506, 662, 674
Atlanta, Mark P. 136, 139, 143, 144, 146, 147, 148, 167, 236, 237, 408, 659, 666, 668, 669
Atwood, Margaret 683
Auster, Paul 196, 211, 683
Austin, Geer 206, 481, 628
Ave, Madison 445
Bach, Glenn 481
Baker, Alan 289, 334, 440, 454, 455
Baker, Lori 94, 685
Baker, Mary 37
Baldwin, James 309, 595
Baldwin, Joshua 309, 396, 554
Ball, Michael 248, 521
Baraka, Amiri 379, 386, 513
Barnes, Diane 307, 310, 312
Barnett, Anthony 267
Baron, Todd 356
Bartlett, Lee 350, 641, 671, 690, 695, 697, 701
Basinski, Michael 303, 513
Basinski, Mike 303, 370
Bataille, George 267
Bates, Joe 72, 267
Baudelaire, Charles 267
Baus, Eric 267, 288, 373, 375, 485, 677
Beachy, Dan 91
Bechtel, Brent 49
Beckett, Samuel 66
Beckman, Joshua 127, 148, 237, 534
Bee, Susan 72, 481
Beer, John 481
Belieu, Erin 237
Belle, Cecelia 405, 481, 525
Benedikt, Michael 485
Benjamin, Walter 540
Bennett, Bill 267, 559, 662, 667, 674, 685
Bennett, John M. 1, 303, 329, 439, 481, 556, 559
Benson, Cara 94
Benson, Steve 72
Bentley, Scott 92
Bergvall, Caroline 66, 624
Berkeley, Michael 214, 232, 267, 342, 409, 413, 418, 499, 516, 662, 674
Berlin, Irving 624, 662, 674, 682
Berman, Tosh 543

Bernhard, Thomas 267
Berridge, David 575
Berrigan, Ted 27, 643
Berry, Jake 1
Bertholf, Robert 513
Bertram, Erin M. 429, 630
Bervin, Jen 605
Betts, Gregory 289, 334
Beuys, Joseph 11, 88
Bianchi, Raymond L. 95, 585, 613
Biddinger, Mary 323
Birmingham, Jed 534
Bishop, Elizabeth 683
Blake, William 499
Blanchot, Maurice 499
Blau, Rachel 18
Bloch, Julia 267, 485
Blonstein, Anne 267
Bloom, Harold 653
Bloomberg, John 289, 334
Blouin, Michael 511
Bly, Robert 396
Boer, Charles 513
Bok, Christian 305
Bonney, Sean 127
Borkhuis, Charles 69, 172, 481, 509
Borzutzky, Daniel 429, 628
Boully, Jenny 267
Bowen, David 92, 308
Bowie, David 156
Boyer, Anne 115
Bozek, Jessica 429
BpNichol 3, 66
Bradley, George 685
Bradley, John 481, 551
Brady, Andrea 658
Brady, Taylor 72, 217, 597
Brainard, Joe 27, 422, 465, 643
Brakhage, Stan 151, 267
Bramhall, Allen 481
Brautigan, Richard 119, 121, 641
Brazil, David 624, 683
Bredie, Nick 267
Brennan, Joe 628
Briante, Susan 326
Brockwell, Stephen 511
Broder, Michael 429
Bronk, Bill 267
Brook, James 499
Brossard, Nicole 367, 667
Brown, James 21, 310, 312
Brown, John 449, 452, 457, 459, 462, 472
Browning, Robert 153, 429
Bruno, Franklin 449, 457, 459, 462, 472
Bryan, John 516
Bukowski, Charles 573
Burger, Mary 108, 115, 404, 434, 705
Burns, Robert 445
Burroughs, William S. 267, 624
Burton, Philip 73
Bush, George 459, 462
Butler, William 481, 484, 509
Buuck, David 304
Buzzeo, Melissa 404
Cage, John 115, 632
Cain, Stephen 289, 334
Campbell, Jeremy 267
Campbell, Joseph 408
Cannon, Steve 516
Capen, Samuel P. 206, 336, 422
Carfagna, Ric 481, 580, 690, 695, 697, 701
Carll, Steve 381, 389, 399, 416, 453
Carlos, William 267, 683
Carr, Julie 115
Carroll, John 40, 51, 238, 326, 508, 523, 528, 530, 531
Carson, Anne 485
Carter, Angela 267, 360, 361, 364, 410, 499, 511
Carter, Charlotte 27, 643
Carter, Jefferson 69
Casey, Sean 519
Cayley, John 624
Ceraolo, Michael 329, 439
Cervantes, James 481
Cheney, Don 49, 197, 199, 200, 201, 459, 462
Chernoff, Maxine 27, 678
Chiasson, Dan 280
Child, Abigail 267
Chinquee, Kim 267
Christie, Jason 641
Claire, Barbara 326, 396, 407
Clare, John 511
Clark, Emilie 27, 223, 226, 227, 264, 268, 308, 643
Clark, Jeff 267
Clark, Tom 27, 517, 518, 520, 524, 643, 676
Clarke, Jack 513
Clausen, Jan 481
Cleary, John 267
Clemente, Francesco 135
Clifford, Pat 261, 481
Clinton, Bill 94, 684
Clodfelter, Loretta 471
Cobain, Kurt 27
Cobb, Allison 69
Cohen, Ira 481, 509
Colby, Todd 481
Cole, David 481
Cole, Peter 267, 662, 674
Coleman, Jennifer 138, 161, 162, 446, 605
Coleman, Wanda 267
Collins, Billy 267
Collins, Martha 624

Coltrane, Alice 273, 277, 278, 281
Coltrane, John 273, 277, 278, 281
Columbus, Christopher 128, 179, 181, 204, 285, 624, 703
Comments, Poets 71
Compton, Shanna 21, 101
Cooley, Nicole 641
Coolidge, Clark 27, 222, 223, 226, 227, 267, 643
Cooper, Dennis 36, 206, 336, 388, 516
Corbett, Bill 687
Corey, Joshua 376, 441
Corso, Gregory 513
Costanza, George 634
Cotter, John 378, 469
Coulter, Ann 594
County, Madison 40, 51, 301, 628
Crane, Lee 267
Crawford, Holly 305
Creeley, Robert 6, 13, 27, 31, 43, 226, 267, 446, 513, 643
Critchley, Emily 575
Critchley, Simon 267
Crouch, Jeff 101, 156, 373
Crouse, John 303
Crowe, John 267
Cunningham, Brent 115, 632
Cunningham, John 37
Cunningham, Michael 37
Curley, Jon 68
Curtis, Dana 127, 532, 533, 535, 536, 538, 539, 541, 551
Cutts, Simon 89
Cycholl, Garin 395
Cyphers, Jeffrey 186, 318
Czury, Craig 289, 334, 440, 454, 455
Dalachinsky, Steve 303, 481
Daley, Ryan 45
Davenport, Steve 624
Davey, Frank 641
Davidson, Amanda 108, 115, 434
Davidson, Ian 458
Davis, Martin 481
Deed, Martha L. 305
Degentesh, Katie 115, 267
Deleuze, Gilles 261
Deming, Barbara 628
Denner, Richard 481
Dennis, Carl 27, 267, 378, 516, 529, 643
Dennis, Donna 27, 481, 643
Derrida, Jacques 206, 336, 388, 516
Desmond, Rae 129, 132, 175, 217
Dick, Jennifer K. 485
Dick, Philip K. 18
Dickinson, Emily 206, 336
Dickinson, Mark 36, 575, 677
Dienstfrey, Patricia 115, 632
Dine, Jim 27, 643
Dixon, Nancy 267, 363
Dodd, David 408
Dojoji, Alan 271
Donne, John 267
Dorn, Edward 481, 517, 518, 520, 524, 676
Downing, Brandon 115, 325
Downing, David 267
Doyle, Erica 72
Doyle, Kirby 408, 628
Drescher, Julia 308
Drucker, Johanna 72
Duhamel, Denise 302
Dunagan, James 484
Duncan, Andrew 1, 575, 694
Duncan, Robert 72, 267, 513, 540, 694
Durand, Marcella 481, 509, 516
Durgin, Patrick F. 95, 597
Dutton, Paul 289, 305, 334, 440, 454, 455
Dyer, Geoffrey 485
Dylan, Bob 267, 310, 312
Earl, Amanda 305, 511
Edgar, Chris 408, 481, 509
Edmond, Martin 303, 685
Edwards, Ken 1, 267, 506
Einstein, Albert 631, 633, 634
Eisenreich, Jim 696, 697, 699, 701
Elezabeth, Anne 280
Elisa, Paula 326, 339, 429, 469, 685
Ellen, Mary 50, 67, 384, 385
Elliot, Joe 703
Elliott, George 363
Elrick, Laura 340, 381, 389, 399, 416, 453
England, Amy 72, 217, 267, 275, 276, 505, 643
Ernst, Max 303, 481
Eshleman, Clayton 267, 485
Esther, Little 267
Eugene, Brett 277, 281, 340
Evans, Amy 481
Evans, Bill 53, 308, 506, 703
Evans, Brett 138, 267
Evenson, Brian 267
Everson, William 267, 603
Fagan, Kate 1
Fagin, Larry 516
Farr, Raymond 127, 267, 685
Featherston, Dan 381, 389, 399, 416, 453
Federman, Raymond 267
Feinstein, Stephen 382, 383
Felix, Joel 481
Ferguson, Jesse 511
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 119, 121, 396
Ferrini, Henry 513
Filreis, Alan 267
Finch, Annie 296, 597
Fink, Thomas 303, 471, 685

Finkelstein, Norman 68, 393
Fisher, Allen 267, 658, 662, 674
Fisher, Ann 703
Fishman, Ellen 393, 458
Fleisher, Kass 47
Flynn, Albert 267
Foley, Jack 267
Fonda, Jane 529
Forche, Carolyn 536
Ford, Mark 662, 674
Forrest, Lisa 485, 628
Foust, Graham 326
France, Peter 35, 107, 267, 398, 468, 624, 667
Frances, Mary 72, 303
Franks, David 466
Fraser, Kathleen 72, 481
Freind, Bill 94
Fried, Daisy 467, 678
Friedlander, Benjamin 513
Fritton, Christopher 370
Frym, Gloria 267
Gallagher, Kevin 267
Gallagher, Kristen 340
Gallo, Philip 411
Gander, Forrest 371, 372
Ganick, Peter 303, 346, 425
Gardner, Drew 115
Gardner, Janet 1
Garland, Judy 624
Gatza, Geoffrey 1
Germanacos, Anne 267
Gilbert, Alan 388, 481, 509
Ginsberg, Allen 164, 267, 540, 558, 563, 574, 577, 582, 584, 586, 588, 589, 590, 591, 603, 607, 611, 621, 643
Gioia, Dana 59, 64, 168, 689, 693
Giscombe, Cecil 516
Gladman, Renee 404
Glassman, Scott 267, 303
Glover, Albert 513
Glover, Michael 662, 674
Goar, Jim 429
Godard, Barbara 367, 575, 667
Godfrey, John 58, 59, 61, 63, 64
Van Gogh 452
Golaski, Adam 378
Goldman, Judith 487
Goldsmith, Kenneth 444, 678
Gonzalez, Ray 34
Gordon, Robert 92, 267, 388, 516
Gorrick, Anne 471
Gottlieb, Michael 312
Gould, Glenn 59, 64, 308
Graeve, Michael 624
Graham, Jorie 535, 536, 538, 539, 540, 551
Graubard, Allan 481
Gray, David 422
Gray, Stephanie 206
Green, Joe 267
Greenberg, Arielle 267, 575
Greenblatt, Michelle 127, 267, 303, 346
Greenstreet, Kate 70, 127
Gregg, Linda 388
Gregory, Jane 326
Grenier, Bob 481, 509
Griffin, Tim 206, 336, 519
Grinwis, James 267
Group, Poets 147, 236
Grubbs, David 206, 336
Grumman, Bob 303, 481
Guattari, Félix 261
Guest, Barbara 267
Guest, Paul 347
Gunn, Paula 18
Guston, Philip 27, 223, 226, 227, 643
Guthrie, Camille 163, 396, 481
Hagedorn, Jessica 355
Haines, John 380
Halpern, Greg 72
Halpern, Rob 18, 597
Halsey, Alan 91, 303, 411
Hamill, Meg 381, 389, 399, 416, 453
Hammond, Paul 481
Hampson, Robert 267, 658
Hanlon, Kristen 267
Harris, Kaplan 267, 481, 643, 667
Harris, Sharon 289, 305, 334, 367, 641, 667
Harryman, Carla 47, 267
Hart, Matt 267, 429
Hartman, Jill 641
Harvey, James 513, 628
Harwood, Lee 662, 674
Hauke, Nathan 267
Hawkes, John 624
Hayden, Tom 408
Hayes, Jared 703
Hayes, Jonathan 685
Heide, Anne 308, 429
Heidegger, Martin 17
Hejinian, Lyn 232, 267, 446, 557, 658, 662, 674
Heller, Mike 393
Henderson, David 277, 281
Hennessy, John 267
Henning, Barbara 27, 72, 412, 516, 643
Henri, Charles 66, 330, 464, 468
Hettich, Michael 481
Hibbard, Tom 481
Higgins, Billy 303, 685
Highfill, Mitch 27, 516, 643
Hikmet, Nazim 417, 420, 421, 423, 424, 426, 428, 430, 433, 704
Hill, Crag 481

Hill, Gary 499
Hill, Lindsay 482
Hillman, Brenda 72, 115, 632
Hirsch, Edward 604, 683
Hoagland, Tony 429
Hofer, Jen 108, 115, 434, 481, 509, 605
Hoffman, Cara 684
Hoffman, Eric 378
Holley, Sharon 628
Holman, Bob 680, 694
Holmes, Matthew 511
Holmes, Michael 99, 103
Holmquest, Brandon 534
Holt, Henry 186
Homer 217
Hooper, Tony 298, 351
Hoover, Paul 27, 115, 267, 678
Horton, David 116, 117, 119, 120, 121, 125
Houellebecq, Michel 267
Houlihan, Joan 50, 67
House, Poets 187
House, White 463, 682
Howard, David 481
Howard, Scott 364, 519
Howe, Brian 267
Howe, Susan 206, 336
Howe, William 340
Hoy, Dan 405, 429, 525
Hughes, Langston 13
Hughes, Peter 485, 575
Hume, Christine 471
Hunt, Erica 72
Hunter, Robert 519, 699
Iijima, Brenda 84, 161, 162, 388, 487
Indiana, Robert 408
Ireland, Lauren 89, 129, 132, 175
Israel, David 464, 468
Jackson, Jesse 267, 434, 529
Jacob, Max 267, 672
Jaramillo, Laura 534
Jeffery, Mark 89, 624
Jenkins, Matthew 481, 685
Jenks, Philip 429
Johnson, Kent 267, 371, 372, 481
Johnson, Robert 71, 267, 393, 413, 418, 458, 481, 549, 555, 578, 631, 633, 634, 638, 639, 670
Johnston, Devin 68, 267
Joron, Andrew 115, 267
Joseph, Safdie 72, 77, 378, 422, 481, 509, 628, 643
Joyce, James 115, 239, 628, 632
Joyce, Trevor 274, 628
Kafka, Franz 575
Kalamaras, George 303
Karasick, Adeena 305
Kathryn, Mary 308
Katz, Alex 27, 481, 643
Kaufman, Erica 72
Kavanagh, Patrick 217
Keats, John 388
Keckler, Joseph 466
Keene, John 72
Kelen, Christopher 267
Kelly, Barbara 427
Kelly, Patrick 189, 214, 396, 407, 575, 628
Kelly, Robert 23, 52, 59, 63, 64, 281, 427, 678
Kempton, Karl 305, 414, 415
Kennedy, David 50, 67, 267
Kermode, Frank 267
Kerouac, Jack 84, 206, 258, 336, 388, 516, 643, 705
Killian, Kevin 115, 325, 672
Kim, Myung Mi 115, 481, 487
Kimball, Jack 72, 115
King, Deb 267
Kinsella, John 267
Kirschenbaum, David A. 27, 141, 158, 643
Klane, Matthew 378
Klein, Lucas 481, 509
Klink, Joanna 267
Koeneke, Rodney 471
Koons, Jeff 156
Kostelanetz, Richard 267, 481, 685
Kuhl, Nancy 441, 527
Kuhn, Donna 305, 554
Kushner, Bill 27, 516, 643
Kyger, Joanne 164
Landis, Matthew 267
Landrey, David 513
Lang, Eugene 84
Larkin, Peter 267, 575
Larsen, David 94
Laughtland, Amanda 685
Laurence, Paul 267, 628
Lavender, Bill 408
Lawton, Pamela 27, 643
Lazar, Hank 300
Lazer, Hank 267
Leahy, Mark 658
Lease, Joseph 267
Leftwich, Jim 303
Lehman, David 267, 405, 525
Leigh, Mike 80
Leja, Kristine 267
Lennon, John 6
Levertov, Denise 234, 267, 513, 536, 540
Levin, Jonathan 277, 281
Levin, Lauren 471
Levinas, Emmanuel 8
Lewis, Bernard 81, 137, 140, 195, 221, 354, 392, 412, 456, 463, 516
Lewis, Tom W. 144, 146, 167, 200, 255, 256, 359, 385, 428, 432, 524, 638, 639, 649, 676

Lichtensteiger, Ralph 24
Lima, Frank 195, 221
Limon, Ada 267
Livingston, Reb 267
Lloyd, David 679
Loden, Rachel 267, 606
Logan, William 561
Lomax, Alan 115, 195, 221, 325
London, Frank 163, 197, 199, 200, 201, 267, 422, 450, 451, 458, 461, 486, 490, 494, 495, 497, 501, 502, 624, 628, 662, 674
Lopez, Tony 254, 485, 658, 662, 674
Lorber, Brendan 267
Louise, Bobbie 27, 481, 643, 667
Mac Low, Jackson 24, 46, 75
Luther, Martin 147, 236, 309, 313, 329, 417, 420, 421, 423, 424, 426, 428, 430, 433, 439, 449, 452, 457, 459, 462, 472, 537, 545, 549, 555, 578, 638, 639, 704
Lynch, David 640, 660, 661
Lyons, Kim 605
Machlin, Dan 72
Mackey, Nathaniel 267, 467
Madison, James 628
Magee, Kevin 127
Magee, Michael 267
Magi, Jill 84, 115
Mailer, Norman 450, 451, 461
Majzels, Robert 667
Malanga, Gerard 267
Malby, Scott 267
Malcolm, Janet 267, 452, 468
Malina, Judith 481
Maloutas, Barbara 127
Manning, Nicholas 685
Manson, Doug 128, 329
Manson, Peter 575
Marclay, Christian 624
Marie, Anne 115, 267, 308, 471, 624, 632
Marie, Joshua 267, 429
Marks, Justin 267, 429
Markus, Peter 485
Marshall, Robert 21
Martin, Camille 6, 267, 408, 449, 485, 628
Martinez, Michael 481
Mason, Chris 267
Mason, Janet 267, 308
Massey, Joseph 68, 481
Massey, Karen 509
Matthews, Clay 429
Maxwell, Andrew 127, 267, 683
Mayer, Bernadette 27, 232, 481, 516, 643
Mayer, Rosemary 27, 643
Mazer, Ben 50, 67, 267, 326, 481
McCaffery, Steve 411, 422, 557
Meadows, Deborah A. 548
Medal, Frost 267
Meetze, James 267
Meltzer, David 164
Memmott, Talan 624
Menefee, Sarah 381, 389, 399, 416, 453
Mercuri, John 685
Mesmer, Sharon 267, 481, 509
Messerli, Douglas 1, 57, 267, 470
Middle, Max 511
Middleton, Peter 658
Miller, Ben 485
Miller, Paul D. 36, 308
Milne, Drew 662, 674
Milton, John 624
Minhinnick, Robert 683
Minkus, Kim 511
Minton, Jonathan 267
Mirakove, Carol 381, 389, 399, 416, 453
Miriam, Erica 128, 159, 405, 525
Mitchell, Joan 667
Mittenthal, Robert 303
Mohr, Bill 388
Monk, Geraldine 267
Moor, William 115
Moore, Allison 46, 77, 267, 481, 597, 685
Moore, Marianne 597
Moore, Todd 374, 480
Moriarty, Laura 267
Morris, Dee 511, 680, 694
Morrison, Rusty 267, 678
Morrison, Toni 683
Moschovakis, Anna 326
Moten, Fred 679
Mott, Glenn 69, 172
Moudry, Nick 534, 677
Moure, Erin 667
Moxley, Jennifer 267
Muckle, John 575
Mueller, Ursula 605
Muir, John 267
Mukherjee, Aryanil 243, 257, 265
Mulcahy, Greg 267
Mullen, Harryette 412
Mullen, Laura 206, 336, 388, 516
Mulrooney, John 50, 67
Murphy, Eddie 621
Murphy, Robert 68
Murphy, Sheila E. 127, 267, 303
Myers, Michael 267, 429
Myles, Eileen 72, 148, 237, 388, 481, 509, 516
Nadelberg, Amanda 68
Nader, Ralph 577
Nagami, Heather 516
Nakayasu, Sawako 326
Nathanson, Tenney 72, 115
Nattell, Tom 445
Nelson, Paul E. 82

Nelson, Rodney 481, 509
Neruda, Pablo 206, 211, 267, 336, 388, 516
Newlove, John 511
Newman, Denise 115, 267, 632
Nguyen, Hoa 267
Nicholls, Peter 658
Nicholson, Andy 628
Nicole, Anna 127, 667
Nielsen, Aldon L. 23, 52, 59, 63, 64, 281
Nikolayev, Philip 50, 67, 267, 299
Nolan, Pat 680, 681, 694
Norman, Peter 267, 363
Notley, Alice 18, 27, 481, 643, 686
O'Hara, Frank 379, 386
Oliver, John 84, 195, 206, 221, 336, 388, 516
Olsen, Lance 54, 218, 225, 234, 240, 662, 674
Olson, Charles 267, 513
Olson, John 267, 485
Olson, Kirby 6, 127, 267, 513, 517, 518, 520, 524, 573, 650, 656, 657, 676, 688, 698
Ondaatje, Michael 683
Orwell, George 450, 451, 461
Osman, Jena 18
Ossip, Kathleen 94
Owen, Maureen 412
Owens, Richard 481
Padgett, Ron 27, 36, 267, 291, 294, 296, 298, 322, 324, 351, 422, 429, 465, 643, 659, 666, 668, 669
Padin, Clemente 135, 228
Paine, Tom 106, 107
Palmer, Michael 267, 304, 446
Paloff, Benjamin 50, 67
Panza, Mary 445
Paquin, Ethan 267
Parish, Jefferson 516, 551
Parker, Michael 469, 684
Parkway, Neal 596, 599, 600, 604, 608
Parrish, Katherine 643
Patchen, Kenneth 116, 117, 119, 120, 121, 124, 125, 128, 159, 171, 178, 329
Patton, Julie 72
Paulenich, Craig 242
Peet, Christian 557
Pendergast, Dawn 195, 221
Pendergrass, Daniel 267
Penton, Jonathan 289, 305, 334, 440, 454, 455, 481, 665
Perelman, Bob 72, 341, 467
Perkins, Stephen 697, 699, 701
Perloff, Marjorie 267, 379, 386, 438
Peterson, Katie 72, 206, 624
Pettet, Simon 21, 506
Peverett, Michael 575
Phillip, Andrew 408
Phillips, Rodney 465
Pines, Paul 685
Pinsky, Robert 240
Place, Vanessa 115
Pluto, Annie 99, 103, 280, 308
Pollack, Jackson 481
Porter, Anne 28, 30, 267
Potts, Robert 662, 674
Pound, Ezra 6, 9, 22, 31, 73, 211, 267, 274
Prater, David 685
Prevallet, Kristin 267, 381, 389, 399, 416, 453, 516
Price, Brett 429
Priego, Ernesto 287, 662, 674
Prince, Richard 60, 200
Pringle, Kathryn 267
Pritchett, Pat 267
Prize, Poets 422, 628
Professor, Kelly 23, 52, 59, 63, 64, 281, 427
Puckett, Caleb 149, 685
Quarles, Lanny 481
Randall, Karen 267, 481
Rasula, Jed 267
Ratcliffe, Stephen 115, 485
Rauschenberg, Robert 461
Reading, Chicago 95
Reading, Poets 329
Reddin, Elizabeth 643
Redgrove, Peter 267, 575
Reed, Lou 27
Regan, Matthias 379, 386
Rehm, Pam 68
Reilly, Evelyn 84, 161, 162, 388, 487, 624
Rerick, Michael 267
Rexroth, Kenneth 540
Reyes, Louis 267, 308
Reznikoff, Charles 458
Rhodes, Martha 267
Rhodes, Shane 511
Rice, Doug 481
Rich, Adrienne 388
Riley, Peter 267
Riley, Terry 164
Rilke, Rainer Maria 182
Rimbaud, Arthur 267
Rinder, Larry 11, 88
Rivard, David 429
Rizzo, Chris 27, 429
Roach, Max 267
Roark, Randy 267
Robbins, Tim 529
Robertson, Lisa 72, 357, 358, 672
Robinson, Elizabeth 267, 283, 412, 587, 641
Robinson, Jen 605
Robinson, Kit 267, 340, 506
Rockwell, Norman 329, 439
Rodefer, Stephen 115, 513
Rooney, Kathleen 469, 685
Rosenberg, David 27, 643

Rosenberg, Jim 72, 481
Rosenfield, Kim 189, 214
Rosenthal, Chuck 267
Rothenberg, Jerome 60, 249, 252, 253, 267, 481, 499, 637, 683
Rothenberg, Jerry 164
Rothenberg, Michael 1, 164, 267, 313, 355, 481, 509, 665, 685
Rothschild, Douglas 206, 336, 388, 516
Rove, Karl 459, 462, 463
Rowan, Lou 481
Rowe, William 658
Rowntree, Dirk 267
Rudolf, Anthony 662, 674
Rudy, Susan 667
Rumaker, Michael 481
Rumble, Ken 349
Rumsfeld, Donald 49, 99, 103, 327
Russo, Linda 69, 172, 409, 413, 418
Sabina, Maria 66
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 285
Sakkis, John 267
Saltz, Jerry 693
Sampson, Fiona 267
Sanders, Edward 355
Sanders, James 267
Sanders, Jay 277, 281, 540
Saper, Craig 554
Sappho 267
Sarandon, Susan 529
Saroyan, William 226
Satie, Erik 115, 632
Sawyer, Larry 80, 267, 663, 664
Scalapino, Leslie 72, 267, 446, 487, 506, 516, 662, 674
Scappettone, Jen 605
Schneeman, George 27, 643
Schneider, Dan 308
Schultz, Lou 327
Schultz, Susan M. 327
Schuyler, James 27, 643
Schwartz, Leonard 267
Scroggins, Mark 68
Seaton, Maureen 267, 429
Seidman, Hugh 393, 481
Selby, Spencer 685
Semerdjian, Alan 305
Sexton, Anne 536
Shakespeare, William 388, 575
Shaner, Tim 340
Shapiro, David 36
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 267
Shepherd, Reginald 341
Sheppard, Robert 658
Sherman, Cindy 452
Sherry, James 529
Shihab, Naomi 561
Shurin, Aaron 506
Siegell, Paul 685
Sigler, Jeremy 72, 481
Sikelianos, Eleni 267
Simon, Greg 12, 14, 37, 80, 92, 198, 280, 342, 483, 560, 606, 624, 652, 683, 689, 693, 700
Simon, Rachel M. 94
Simonds, Sandra 481, 509
Simone, Frank 261, 551
Simpson, Louis 34
Sinclair, John 267
Slease, Marcus 267
Smallfield, Edward 267
Smith, Dale 481
Smith, Harry 59, 64, 108, 115, 127, 175, 178, 267, 308, 326, 329, 434, 441, 481, 587
Smith, Jessica 27, 425
Smith, John 59, 64
Smith, Larry 128, 329
Smith, Simon 662, 674
Snyder, Gary 481, 517, 518, 520, 524, 676
Snyder, Rick 267
Solomon, Carl 267
Solomon, Laura 534
Spacks, Barry 481
Spahr, Juliana 115, 340, 632
Sparrow, John 186, 388, 481, 516
Spears, Patricia 72
Spitzer, Jim 481
Stackhouse, Christopher 72
Stafford, William 603
Stanley, Jared 329, 384, 385, 575
Stannard, Martin 1
Stanton, Rob 27
Starshine, Minky 337, 338
Stefans, Kim 189, 214, 381, 389, 399, 416, 453, 677
Stein, Charles 499
Stein, Gertrude 6, 31, 66, 211, 267, 274, 519
Stein, Suzanne 55, 115
Steiner, Konrad 108, 115, 434
Stempleman, Jordan 183, 195, 221, 481, 685
Stephenson, Rob 77, 363
Stevens, Wallace 115, 169, 188, 325, 446
Stone, David 481
Stosuy, Brandon 388, 516
Stumpf, Jason 68, 267
Sturgeon, Stephen 50, 67, 267
Sutherland, Keston 575
Svalina, Mathias 429
Sweeney, Chad 127, 471
Sweet, Erik 469, 481, 509
Swensen, Cole 267
Swift, Todd 267
Switaj, Elizabeth 685
Szirtes, George 267

Szymaszek, Stacy 68
Tabios, Eileen 212, 289, 303, 308, 334, 685
Taggart, John 597
Tankoos, Harry 189, 214, 677
Taransky, Michelle 94, 95
Tardos, Anne 24, 27, 46, 75, 267, 481, 509, 643
Taylor, Tom 303, 329, 402, 403, 507
Teare, Brian 267, 705
Tedesco, Margaret 115, 304, 325
Tejada, Roberto 285, 388
Terry, Philip 273, 277, 278, 281, 506, 511
Theater, Poets 108, 115, 206, 304, 325, 336, 388, 434, 516, 632, 643, 672
Thomas, Dylan 27, 94, 127, 140, 322, 324, 367, 426, 428, 442, 447, 448, 452, 472, 485, 506, 636, 640, 643, 660, 661
Thompson, George 273, 277, 278, 281
Tierney, James 624
Timmons, Matt 388, 516
Tobin, Adam 687
Topel, Andrew 303, 685
Topp, Mike 481, 509
Toscano, Rodrigo 115, 325
Tost, Tony 267
Trachtenberg, Amy 27, 643
Trinidad, David 72, 388
Trott, Sarah 280
Truitt, Sam 94
Tucker, Aaron 408
Tudor, David 217, 624
Turner, Brian 361, 390, 394, 436, 437
Turner, Ted 124, 159
Turner, Victor 361, 390, 394, 436, 437
Tuttle, Richard 267
Tynes, Jen 267
Tysh, Chris 267
Tzara, Tristan 534
Upton, Lawrence 575
Valentine, Jean 419
Valle, Charles 326
Vallejo, César 267
Varrone, Kevin 481, 509
Vassilakis, Nico 127, 267, 303, 305, 685
Vengua, Jean 685
Vermont, Charlie 76, 341
Victoria, Nancy 481
Viegener, Matias 80
Vincent, Gregory 267, 506
Viola, Bill 267
Virgil 395
Wadsworth, Henry 267
Wagner, Catherine 575, 662, 674
Wagner, James 267
Wagoner, David 94
Wakoski, Diane 148, 237
Waldman, Anne 27, 206, 336, 388, 481, 513, 516, 643
Waldman, Ken 705
Waldrop, Keith 267, 471
Waldrop, Rosmarie 267, 557
Wallace, George 481
Wallace, Nicole 166, 396, 446
Warnell, Ted 305
Warner, Jim 388, 516
Warren, Kenneth 159, 329, 481
Washington, George 59, 64, 71, 206, 275, 276, 299, 336, 388, 408, 422, 445, 516, 529, 574, 577, 624, 628
Wasserman, Ann 481
Watson, Craig 72, 267
Watson, Scott 94, 549, 555, 578, 638, 639
Weems, Mary 329
Weinberger, Eliot 267, 536
Weiner, Hannah 27, 643
Weiner, Lawrence 119, 121, 357, 358
Wellman, Donald 267
Welsh, Lawrence 138, 161, 162
Wertheim, Christine 115
Whalen, Philip 164
Wharton, Samuel 685
Wheeler, Susan 163
Wheelwright, John 267
Whitman, Walt 37, 38, 206, 336, 388, 516
Wiegers, Michael 72
Wieners, John 27, 513, 643
Wilbur, Richard 239
Wilkinson, John 267, 429
Williams, Paul O. 66, 77, 211, 267, 308, 446
Williamson, Lindz 267
Willis, Elizabeth 485
Wilson, Karen 94, 153, 202, 311
Winkfield, Trevor 72
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 557
Wolfowitz, Paul 673
Wolman, Kenneth 481
Woolf, Virginia 37
Wordsworth, William 446
Wright, C. D. 72, 186, 318, 624, 628
Yankelevich, Matvei 326
Yau, John 267
Young, Gary 485
Young, Karl 481
Young, Mark 303, 481, 509, 685
Young, Mike 469
Young, Stephanie 115, 325
Zanzotto, Andrea 267
Zechel, Elizabeth 481
Zinnes, Harriet 481
Zorn, John 328
Zukofsky, Louis 267
Zweig, Ellen 429
Žižek, Slavoj 557

CONCEPTS

9/11 381, 468, 488, 551, 626
Activism and protest 60, 62, 106, 107, 174, 190, 192, 193, 197, 199, 200, 201, 360, 361, 364, 390, 394, 436, 437, 445, 529, 535, 536, 538, 539, 540, 551, 567, 649
Aesthetics 50, 62, 67, 206, 267, 336, 378, 388, 516, 535, 536, 538, 539, 551, 567, 630, 689, 693
Afghanistan 551, 574, 577
Anthologies 36, 59, 64, 72, 77, 114, 176, 186, 206, 264, 267, 268, 303, 363, 367, 378, 388, 405, 408, 409, 413, 418, 474, 476, 477, 478, 481, 487, 493, 496, 499, 525, 526, 643, 667, 670
Anti-Semitism 62, 574, 577
Appropriation 10, 15, 168, 444
Archives and libraries 11, 27, 62, 70, 72, 88, 105, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 120, 125, 134, 135, 159, 164, 228, 267, 270, 273, 277, 278, 281, 370, 377, 391, 408, 422, 450, 451, 461, 513, 527, 529, 575, 628, 637, 643, 659, 666, 668
Asian American poetry 266, 619, 620
Autobiography 56, 62, 72, 267, 270, 346, 393, 408, 465, 516, 643, 662, 674
Avant-garde 379, 386, 527
Beat generation 222, 226
Beauty 31, 35, 36, 59, 62, 64, 118, 129, 132, 133, 154, 155, 170, 196, 211, 468, 564, 565
Biography 62, 178, 261, 267, 277, 281, 329, 379, 386, 450, 451, 461, 597, 667
Black Mountain 206, 336, 388, 516
Blogs 1, 2, 3, 6, 11, 18, 20, 21, 23, 25, 27, 31, 32, 49, 52, 53, 55, 59, 60, 62, 63, 64, 70, 72, 75, 78, 79, 81, 85, 88, 92, 93, 95, 97, 99, 101, 103, 104, 114, 116, 117, 119, 120, 121, 122, 125, 129, 132, 141, 143, 144, 145, 146, 150, 156, 157, 167, 173, 175, 176, 180, 183, 189, 192, 193, 198, 208, 209, 210, 214, 221, 226, 229, 266, 267, 269, 280, 281, 284, 287, 288, 300, 305, 308, 311, 319, 323, 328, 330, 333, 335, 339, 341, 343, 344, 345, 352, 353, 354, 356, 357, 358, 359, 363, 365, 369, 373, 375, 378, 392, 397, 399, 405, 406, 409, 417, 420, 421, 423, 425, 427, 433, 444, 445, 446, 456, 459, 462, 464, 467, 468, 469, 473, 483, 511, 525, 528, 529, 530, 531, 534, 542, 543, 547, 549, 551, 555, 566, 567, 575, 576, 578, 585, 587, 594, 606, 613, 616, 624, 625, 626, 631, 633, 634, 635, 636, 638, 639, 640, 641, 643, 657, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 670, 673, 674, 678, 679, 682, 686, 687, 688, 694, 698, 704
Book announcements 34, 36, 37, 48, 56, 66, 68, 69, 72, 77, 84, 113, 150, 206, 207, 209, 210, 249, 252, 253, 267, 307, 323, 341, 360, 361, 363, 364, 388, 393, 409, 411, 413, 418, 422, 483, 499, 505, 516, 548, 569, 643, 650, 656, 657, 661, 662, 674, 679, 688, 698, 705
Bookstores 18, 150, 210, 255, 256, 267, 285, 306, 341, 364, 391, 393, 409, 450, 451, 458, 461, 490, 683
Calls for submissions 96, 145, 246, 340
Capitalism 689, 693
Censorship 593, 596, 599, 600, 604, 608
Cities 45, 129, 132, 136, 139, 143, 144, 146, 167, 206, 267, 278, 346, 367, 388, 510, 516, 624, 667
Class 571, 572, 586, 589, 619, 620, 621
Close reading 20, 575
Collage and montage 18, 48, 127, 408, 575
Conceptual writing 444, 678
Conferences and festivals 22, 49, 62, 72, 73, 77, 129, 132, 143, 144, 146, 153, 159, 167, 277, 281, 304, 329, 382, 383, 388, 398, 422, 511, 527, 617, 624, 628, 643, 658, 659, 666, 667, 668, 683, 701
Copyright and permissions 37, 134, 169, 267, 431, 432, 433, 435, 442, 447, 448, 452, 463
Creative writing pedagogy 6, 224, 650, 656, 657, 688, 698
Dada 267, 551
Deconstruction 616
Difficulty 313, 444, 557
Digital archives 66, 134, 267, 444, 637
Disability 45, 71, 618, 671, 690, 695, 697, 699, 701
Dreams 13, 22, 62, 72, 129, 132, 147, 164, 206, 217, 236, 270, 336, 388, 405, 409, 413, 418, 422, 499, 516, 525, 628, 705
Ecology and ecopoetics 27, 99, 103, 106, 107, 388, 488, 624
Editing 20, 55, 62, 71, 72, 221, 267, 283, 369, 388, 413, 418, 422, 547, 628
Ekphrasis 138, 161, 162, 474, 477, 478, 493, 496, 526
Electronic poetry and hypertext 36, 72, 76, 86, 89, 189, 214, 239, 264, 268, 305, 314, 328, 398, 546, 624, 677
Elegy 62
Empire and imperialism 381, 382, 383, 402, 403, 551, 635, 636, 640, 643, 660, 661, 705
Epic 34, 267
Erasure 662, 674
Ethics 8, 15, 70, 71, 88, 169, 430, 540, 628
Experimental poetry 6, 13, 16, 31, 348, 417, 420, 421, 423, 424, 426, 428, 430, 433, 704
Fascism 6, 75, 137, 311, 567, 570, 571, 572, 576, 582, 584, 586, 587, 588, 589, 591, 607, 621, 682

Feminism 206, 564, 565, 584, 586, 589, 607, 621, 667
Film 3, 5, 16, 18, 27, 62, 66, 77, 108, 113, 152, 153, 206, 212, 235, 267, 271, 279, 306, 338, 343, 378, 405, 452, 468, 473, 513, 517, 518, 520, 524, 525, 621, 624, 636, 640, 660, 661, 667, 673, 676, 678, 683, 695, 697, 699, 701
Fluxus 527
Formalism 62, 241, 286, 571, 572
Free speech 206, 596, 599, 600, 604, 608
Free verse 218, 225, 234, 240
Futurism 564, 565, 566, 567, 570, 571, 572, 576, 582, 584, 586, 587, 588, 589, 591, 607, 621
Gender 47, 174
Ghazal 322, 324, 346
Globalization 678
Grants and funding 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 71, 72, 77, 168, 206, 267, 499, 683
Haiku 72, 242, 329, 439, 466, 507, 534
Harlem Renaissance 422, 628
Hermeneutics 62
Humour and satire 47, 60, 166, 168, 169, 173, 206, 336, 388, 516, 519, 563, 574, 577, 582, 584, 586, 588, 589, 590, 591, 593, 596, 599, 600, 604, 607, 608, 609, 611, 612, 617, 619, 620, 621
Ideology 624
Imagism 206, 336, 388, 516
Improvisation 72, 267, 273, 277, 278, 281, 346, 392, 580, 624
Indigenous and Native poetics 343, 393
Interviews 1, 3, 7, 25, 62, 66, 71, 95, 127, 156, 183, 189, 214, 267, 277, 281, 287, 288, 312, 340, 373, 374, 375, 384, 385, 422, 441, 468, 480, 481, 485, 511, 569, 575, 580, 628, 640, 641, 643, 660, 661, 662, 674, 677, 690, 695, 697, 701
Israel and Palestine 13, 62, 452, 464, 468, 551, 577
Jewish poetics 62, 638, 639
Language poetry 72, 206, 217, 336, 388, 516
Letters and correspondence 56, 62, 93, 108, 305, 481, 617
List moderation 72, 129, 132, 563, 574, 577, 596, 599, 600, 601, 604, 608, 610, 623, 624, 679
Little magazines 20, 37, 59, 60, 62, 71, 72, 91, 92, 93, 94, 105, 109, 110, 111, 112, 123, 124, 126, 128, 150, 159, 186, 206, 258, 266, 267, 270, 280, 302, 329, 340, 363, 372, 384, 385, 388, 396, 399, 402, 403, 405, 407, 408, 439, 441, 485, 510, 525, 534, 542, 543, 575, 624, 628, 641, 643, 653, 662, 667, 674, 678, 683
Lyric poetry 37, 119, 121, 267, 346, 460, 488, 551
Marxism 490, 567, 571, 572
Materiality of the text 546, 604, 662, 674
Memory 62, 72, 84, 128, 206, 207, 267, 305, 308, 313, 336, 382, 383, 388, 481, 516, 624, 628, 641, 662, 674
MFA programs 56, 72, 189, 206, 214, 336, 388, 405, 408, 422, 516, 525, 534, 624, 628, 643, 683
Modernism 113, 228, 379, 386, 446, 545, 549, 555, 578, 638, 639
Mourning and loss 62, 72, 206, 267, 382, 383, 389, 468, 488, 538, 539, 551, 624, 626
Music and poetry 16, 24, 27, 36, 43, 44, 59, 60, 62, 64, 72, 75, 77, 93, 108, 113, 115, 129, 132, 164, 206, 223, 224, 226, 227, 267, 269, 273, 277, 278, 281, 286, 304, 305, 306, 336, 343, 346, 363, 377, 379, 384, 385, 386, 388, 396, 407, 409, 432, 433, 438, 441, 444, 452, 455, 469, 482, 516, 524, 551, 557, 579, 587, 619, 620, 624, 632, 643, 653, 660, 661, 676
Nationalism 382, 383
Nature 37, 40, 51, 62, 72, 134, 206, 217, 239, 245, 336, 346, 379, 386, 428, 488, 499, 532, 533, 535, 536, 538, 539, 540, 541, 551, 624, 626
Negativity and refusal 20, 379, 386, 529, 577
New Formalism 286
New York School 206, 336, 388, 465, 516
Obituary and memorial 174, 243, 248, 273, 277, 278, 281, 604, 703
Objectivism 393, 652
Ontology 79
Oulipo 527
Performance and the poetry reading 50, 67, 69, 72, 77, 84, 93, 95, 138, 161, 162, 186, 206, 245, 248, 258, 302, 305, 318, 363, 368, 378, 388, 408, 422, 439, 445, 458, 465, 484, 487, 499, 514, 521, 624, 627, 653, 667, 682
Phenomenology 62
Philosophy 62, 228, 239, 267, 330, 496, 519, 526, 546, 567, 624, 652
Place and region 17, 59, 62, 393, 517, 518, 520, 524, 676, 680, 694, 705
Poet laureate 687
Poetics 3, 6, 18, 31, 34, 36, 44, 48, 51, 62, 63, 70, 72, 81, 84, 89, 94, 113, 120, 121, 125, 126, 127, 132, 144, 146, 153, 167, 189, 194, 200, 204, 206, 211, 214, 220, 224, 231, 241, 251, 253, 255, 256, 258, 267, 268, 271, 278, 281, 286, 291, 294, 296, 298, 310, 312, 320, 334, 336, 351, 354, 379, 385, 386, 388, 392, 393, 403, 409, 413, 418, 422, 428, 432, 433, 437, 444, 446, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 458, 468, 488, 496, 513, 516, 524, 526, 534, 546, 551, 571, 572, 575, 586, 589, 596,

599, 600, 601, 604, 607, 608, 610, 617, 619, 620, 621, 623, 624, 630, 638, 639, 643, 644, 645, 646, 649, 662, 674, 676, 677, 690, 695, 697, 701, 705
Poets Against the War 536
Politics and poetry 539, 551
Post-structuralism 62
Postmodernism 379, 386, 545, 549, 555, 578, 638, 639
Print vs. digital 3, 8, 13, 37, 62, 70, 72, 77, 175, 189, 196, 206, 211, 214, 247, 258, 259, 267, 322, 324, 344, 345, 379, 386, 388, 393, 413, 416, 418, 467, 505, 515, 516, 527, 575, 591, 597, 641, 677, 678, 685
Prizes and awards 35, 56, 62, 69, 72, 77, 91, 99, 103, 126, 206, 243, 257, 265, 267, 275, 276, 277, 281, 288, 319, 336, 367, 382, 383, 393, 396, 408, 422, 432, 467, 487, 519, 624, 628, 662, 667, 674, 678, 683, 705
Procedural and constraint writing 561
Prose poem 206, 485, 627
Prosody and meter 191, 194, 203, 205, 207, 208, 213, 216, 217, 218, 220, 224, 225, 231, 233, 234, 240, 241, 267, 286, 295
Psychoanalysis 62
Queer poetics 106, 107, 206, 400, 401, 452, 489, 551, 558, 563, 574, 577, 582, 584, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 593, 603, 607, 609, 611, 618, 619, 620, 621, 705
Race and poetry 13, 192, 193, 551, 587, 593, 601, 702
Reading announcements 23, 26, 29, 33, 36, 80, 147, 174, 186, 236, 264, 268, 378, 419, 439, 458, 465, 489, 559, 597, 659, 666, 668
Religion and the sacred 15, 34, 62, 106, 107, 175, 228, 255, 256, 273, 277, 278, 281, 305, 326, 346, 353, 356, 393, 448, 449, 452, 457, 459, 462, 464, 468, 472, 479, 492, 557, 582, 584, 586, 588, 589, 590, 591, 607, 611, 619, 620, 621, 624, 638, 639, 653, 676
Representation 9, 62, 624
Reviewing and criticism 36, 37, 38, 45, 62, 65, 72, 77, 126, 163, 178, 186, 189, 198, 206, 214, 267, 275, 276, 277, 280, 281, 282, 302, 312, 336, 343, 360, 361, 363, 364, 379, 386, 388, 393, 405, 408, 429, 439, 450, 451, 461, 481, 508, 512, 514, 516, 523, 525, 528, 530, 531, 534, 542, 543, 551, 567, 571, 572, 580, 601, 606, 624, 628, 641, 650, 652, 656, 657, 662, 674, 683, 688, 698
Revision 270, 422, 628
Romanticism 72
Science 62, 129, 132, 217, 243, 257, 265, 362, 367, 505, 517, 518, 520, 524, 676
Semiotics 624
Serial poem 127, 409, 413, 418, 534, 653
Small press publishing 27, 47, 56, 69, 72, 76, 84, 86, 89, 108, 115, 141, 158, 163, 189, 206, 214, 267, 275, 276, 285, 304, 308, 325, 326, 336, 346, 369, 370, 381, 388, 389, 393, 399, 405, 406, 408, 409, 413, 416, 417, 418, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 428, 429, 430, 433, 434, 450, 451, 453, 461, 481, 485, 487, 511, 516, 517, 518, 520, 524, 525, 534, 539, 547, 551, 581, 583, 597, 598, 628, 630, 632, 641, 643, 662, 667, 672, 674, 676, 677, 704
Social media 4, 27, 72, 233, 489, 516, 566, 567, 576, 587, 670
Software and code 3, 62, 72, 264, 268, 362, 392, 624
Sonnet 186, 234, 575, 662, 674
Sound poetry 72, 93, 551
Structuralism 62
Subjectivity 71, 77, 99, 103, 191, 194, 203, 310, 312, 422, 474, 477, 478, 493, 496, 526, 609, 628, 662, 674
Sublime 62, 429, 488
Surrealism 62, 119, 121, 416, 468, 527
Terrorism 37, 193, 447, 448, 449, 452, 457, 459, 462, 464, 468, 472, 479, 492, 551, 571, 572
The academy 4, 23, 31, 34, 36, 43, 45, 52, 56, 59, 62, 63, 64, 71, 72, 77, 84, 91, 104, 113, 134, 159, 163, 171, 178, 189, 190, 206, 214, 238, 258, 267, 281, 302, 314, 336, 343, 356, 367, 379, 382, 383, 386, 388, 408, 409, 413, 418, 422, 427, 429, 431, 432, 435, 442, 447, 448, 452, 458, 465, 468, 473, 499, 505, 508, 510, 513, 516, 523, 527, 528, 530, 531, 534, 539, 551, 557, 596, 597, 599, 600, 604, 608, 610, 623, 624, 628, 630, 643, 658, 659, 662, 666, 667, 668, 674, 677, 683, 697, 701, 705
The body 72, 74, 77, 145, 151, 356, 624, 653
The canon 238
The Holocaust 62, 255, 256, 382, 383, 452, 460, 488, 544, 551
The internet 1, 3, 5, 11, 35, 36, 43, 62, 71, 87, 88, 120, 125, 163, 189, 212, 214, 227, 230, 235, 244, 260, 264, 267, 268, 307, 310, 312, 313, 360, 361, 364, 382, 383, 408, 443, 455, 471, 482, 488, 505, 522, 529, 610, 623, 624, 629, 637, 685
The Iraq war 62, 267, 313, 381, 382, 383, 389, 447, 448, 452, 529, 539, 551, 558, 563, 574, 577, 582, 584, 586, 588, 589, 591, 603, 607, 621
The line 12, 14, 225, 234
The listserv 48, 76, 129, 132, 155, 196, 206, 211, 268, 332, 333, 336, 339, 344, 345, 347, 388, 422, 491, 498, 516, 519, 562, 582, 584, 586, 588, 589, 590, 591, 593,

595, 599, 600, 601, 604, 607, 608, 610, 611, 621, 623, 628, 644, 645, 646, 649, 691, 692, 702
Theatre 16, 72, 77, 108, 115, 164, 206, 208, 267, 304, 306, 325, 329, 336, 367, 379, 386, 388, 408, 422, 432, 434, 468, 516, 519, 524, 571, 572, 609, 621, 624, 628, 632, 643, 653, 672, 676, 684
Torture and Abu Ghraib 62, 99, 103, 146, 160, 165, 168, 175, 705
Translation 34, 66, 72, 77, 108, 126, 129, 132, 175, 265, 267, 326, 330, 367, 371, 372, 381, 388, 485, 488, 515, 534, 575, 617, 624, 628, 662, 667, 674, 679, 683
Vietnam 457, 459, 462, 472, 479, 492, 539, 540, 551
Visual and concrete poetry 3, 5, 16, 72, 74, 87, 116, 117, 119, 120, 121, 125, 130, 152, 153, 235, 267, 305, 314, 362, 398, 503, 522, 551, 629, 637
Visual art 11, 16, 37, 62, 71, 72, 80, 93, 96, 113, 129, 132, 164, 174, 190, 206, 219, 222, 242, 246, 306, 321, 326, 329, 336, 363, 388, 396, 405, 407, 422, 439, 465, 474, 477, 478, 482, 484, 493, 495, 496, 497, 499, 501, 502, 507, 516, 525, 526, 534, 559, 561, 624, 628, 643, 662, 674
Women's writing 326, 363, 667

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 705 in all.

1 JAN 2007

1. Alison Croggon — Re: The Argotist Online: Interviews with Poetry Editors on the Future of P...
2. Alan Sondheim — Ship and Bell
3. Jim Andrews — Re: The Argotist Online: Interviews with Poetry Editors on the Future of Poet...
4. Charlie Rossiter — Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
5. Nick Carbo — visual poetry in film/video
6. Mark DuCharme — Re: Sell outs? what obligation to the audience
7. Jeffrey Side — Argotist interviews with editors mainly male interviewees at present
8. Eireene Nealand — Re: Sell outs? what obligation to the audience
9. Alexander Jorgensen — SELL OUTS?
10. Alexander Jorgensen — SELLOUTS
11. Stephen Vincent — Poetry & the Arts in Communicatas
12. Simon DeDeo — HTML/CSS help needed

2 JAN 2007

13. Alexander Jorgensen — GOOD ONE - POETRY'S SELLOUTS - NEW YEAR RESOLUTION
14. J. Michael Mollohan — Re: HTML/CSS help needed
15. Alexander Jorgensen — Last note! Last note from China!
16. Jim Andrews — Re: GOOD ONE - POETRY'S SELLOUTS - NEW YEAR RESOLUTION
17. Alan Sondheim — sutra spurt ()
18. Ron Silliman — Silliman's Blog '07
19. susan maurer — reading 1-4 susan maurer and chocolate waters
20. Dan Waber — results are in
21. Adam Fieled — Allegrezza, Compton, Pettet: Stoning the Devil
22. Barrett Watten — MLA posts
23. ALDON L NIELSEN — MLA Off Site Group Reading Part 1
24. mIEKAL aND — Fwd: Jackson Mac Low and Anne Tardos Recorded Live at Roulette 1999
25. Larissa Shmailo — interview
26. amy king — New Work - New Year
27. David A. Kirschenbaum — Boog City's 2007 Events, Incl. United Artists Books 40th Anniv. and...
28. mIEKAL aND — a bit of Bern Porter ephemera
29. Ruth Lepson — Re: New Work - New Year
30. Ruth Lepson — Re: a bit of Bern Porter ephemera
31. cralan kelder — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
32. Alison Croggon — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
33. Sina Queyras — Re: New Work - New Year
34. L Guevarra — NEW BOOK: The Poem of the Cid
35. Nick Carbo — Poetry workshops in the south of France this summer! C'est magnifique!
36. Joanna Fuhrman — Reading at the Poetry Project: Shapiro & Fuhrman
37. Ricejunk2 — Re: Ghosts in the Machine
38. Joe Amato — Re: Ghosts in the Machine

3 JAN 2007

39. Alan Sondheim — Muck and Spurt Sutras up and running
40. Jesse Glass — The Sayings of My Dying Father
41. Catherine Daly — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
42. Phil Primeau — Re: The Sayings of My Dying Father
43. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
44. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience/(mla off site--)
45. Tony Trigilio — [job] Asst. Programs Director, Creative Writing--Poetry and Literature
46. Ron Silliman — New Anne Tardos-Jackson Mac Low CD

47. Bill Marsh — New from Factory School
48. David Applegate — "PIG" now available from Bad Noise Productions
49. Stephen Vincent — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience/(mla off site--)
50. Fulcrum Annual — Fulcrum Marathon Jan 10
51. Skip Fox — Re: The Sayings of My Dying Father
52. ALDON L NIELSEN — Part Two of MLA Group Reading Photos
53. Thomas Orange — on authorial voice
54. j. kuszai — Tillie Olsen dies at 94
55. C. A. Conrad — PhillySound Feature, Issue #5: Suzanne Stein
56. Dodie Bellamy — Writing Experiments Workshop in San Francisco
57. Jeffrey Side — A Response to Neil Astley's, 'Give Poetry Back to People' by Douglas Messerli
58. Dr. Barry S. Alpert — True Story of a Winning Strategy for an NEA Fellowship in Poetry
59. ALDON L NIELSEN — there's money in form!
60. Andy Gricevich — Satirists touring the east want poets to hear!
61. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: True Story of a Winning Strategy for an NEA Fellowship in Poetry
62. Alan Sondheim — my life collapsed

4 JAN 2007

63. ALDON L NIELSEN — Re: True Story of a Winning Strategy for an NEA Fellowship in Poetry
64. tyrone williams — Re: there's money in form!
65. Jeffrey Side — Contribution by Lena Dunham of Dead Horse Review to The Argotist Online "Int…
66. UbuWeb — UbuWeb: Featured Resources - January 2007 | Selected by Mónica de la Torre
67. Fulcrum Annual — Fulcrum Marathon Jan 10 -- UPDATED!
68. Burt Kimmelman — Cultural Society Website Update
69. charles alexander — new chax books, NY events
70. charles alexander — new on chaxblog
71. Alexander Jorgensen — Cultural Perversity in the US - A Child's "Ashley Treatment" - THE G…
72. Tim Peterson — SEGUE READING SERIES: Winter/Spring 2007
73. Burt Hatlen — CFP for papers on Pound Legacy

5 JAN 2007

74. Jim Andrews — teleology and ai
75. Pierre Joris — Recent Nomadics blog posts
76. cralan kelder — longhouse press through time - 35 year bibliography
77. Carol Novack — Upcoming Readings: January 21st, January 25th, & January 26th
78. Alan Sondheim — Hell, 1930
79. tyrone williams — Re: Hell, 1930
80. Dodie Bellamy — White Columns NYC: Dodie Bellamy digs through Kathy Acker's stuff
81. Lewis LaCook — Ohio is warm and sick with winds - Xanax Pop - The Poetry of Lewis LaCook
82. Jeffrey Side — 'Inside Dolphin Skull' -- essay on Michael McClure's poem at The Argotist On…
83. Jeffrey Side — Contribution by Anny Ballardini of Poet's Corner to The Argotist Online "Int…
84. Tim Peterson — AKILAH OLIVER & JILL MAGI: Saturday Jan 6, 4-6 PM at BPC
85. Peter Ciccariello — How language creates itself

6 JAN 2007

86. mIEKAL aND — Re: longhouse press through time - 35 year bibliography
87. Jim Andrews — he said print is what people read deeply, not stuff on the internet
88. cris cheek — Re: Poetry & the Arts in Communicatas
89. cralan kelder — Re: longhouse press through time - 35 year bibliography
90. Jeffrey Side — Contribution by Adam Fieled of P.F.S. Post to The Argotist Online "Intreview…
91. sandra de 1913 — 1913's happy new ears
92. Simon DeDeo — two years of rhubarb is susan
93. C. A. Conrad — DEMOLICIOUS presents Gerrit Lansing and CAConrad TOMORROW @ 2:30pm
94. Ian Randall Wilson — 88: A Journal of Contemporary American Poetry / Issue 6

95. Haas Bianchi — Chicago Postmodernpoetry.com is updated for January with Interview of Durgin…

7 JAN 2007

96. Paul Hardacre — papertiger: new world poetry #07 - poetry at the end of th e world
97. Peter Ciccariello — Thought machine
98. Jeffrey Side — No more male contributions to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" …
99. mIEKAL aND — You've been Plutoed
100. Jeffrey Side — Contribution by Alison Croggon of Masthead to The Argotist Online "Intreview…
101. Adam Fieled — Steve Halle, Jeff Crouch on PFS Post
102. Eric Yost — our tiny world
103. Anny Ballardini — Re: You've been Plutoed
104. Gabriel Gudding — lisa jarnot email contact info
105. Jesse Crockett — Call for work --- Listenlight 06
106. Alexander Jorgensen — I love America

8 JAN 2007

107. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: I love America
108. konrad — SF Event: Neo-benshi at Poets Theater
109. sue walker — Re: Call for work --- Listenlight 06
110. sue walker — Re: Call for work --- Listenlight 06
111. Laura Winton — Re: Call for work --- Listenlight 06
112. Jesse Crockett — Re: Call for work --- Listenlight 06
113. Poetics List — Fwd: [Msa-members] New OUP Book Series
114. Dan Waber — ars poetica
115. Small Press Traffic — Poets Theater & Spring 2007 events
116. George Bowering — Re: Patchen in color?
117. mIEKAL aND — Re: Patchen in color?
118. George Bowering — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
119. Stephen Vincent — Re: Patchen in color?
120. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Patchen in color?
121. Skip Fox — Re: Patchen in color?
122. Alan Sondheim — My Best Times and Best Writing! At least I think so... :-(
123. Jesse Crockett — Call for work --- Listenlight 06
124. Eric Yost — Re: Patchen in color?
125. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Patchen in color?
126. Slaughter, William — Notice: Mudlark
127. Sarah Mangold — Bird Dog Issue #8

9 JAN 2007

128. David Baratier — Re: patchen
129. Desmond Swords — Bardic Bulletin
130. Jim Andrews — mel blanc's tombstone
131. Lewis Warsh — New UNITED ARTISTS website
132. susan maurer — Re: Bardic Bulletin
133. cralan kelder — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
134. J Kuszai — the way backward: factory school audio
135. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: Sollicitation - Solicitud--Important Cultural Invitation from C…
136. mIEKAL aND — Think twice before jaywalking—ouch!
137. linda norton — Re: New UNITED ARTISTS website
138. Frank Sherlock — This Saturday @ BPC- Frank Sherlock & Mark Lamoureux
139. vulture protein — Re: Think twice before jaywalking—ouch!
140. Thomas savage — Re: New UNITED ARTISTS website
141. David A. Kirschenbaum — Advertise in Boog City 39
142. Raymond Bianchi — Istanbul Poets

143. Jill Jones — Re: Think twice before jaywalking—ouch!
144. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!
145. JT Chan — Call for submissions
146. George Bowering — Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!
147. Mark Prejsnar — big Georgia event
148. Mark Prejsnar — request for addresses
149. Jesse Crockett — email for Caleb Puckett
150. Ron Silliman — Silliman's Blog
151. Alan Sondheim — Brakhage and blurb announcements

10 JAN 2007

152. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: mel blanc's tombstone
153. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: mel blanc's tombstone/"Land of a Thousand Dances"
154. cralan kelder — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
155. John Tanner — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
156. Adam Fieled — Bill Allegrezza on PFS Post
157. Ann Bogle — Trio: Simultaneous broadcast of 3 poetry sets
158. Nick Piombino — Re: Advertise in Boog City 39
159. Mark Melnicove — Re: Patchen in color?
160. Eric Yost — Think twice about jaywalking
161. Mark Lamoureux — Frank Sherlock & Mark Lamoureux @ The Bowery Poetry Club 1/13
162. Tim Peterson — Frank Sherlock and Mark Lamoureux at BPC, Sat Jan 13 at 4 PM
163. Anslem Berrigan — Camille Guthrie/Susan Wheeler tonite at 8pm
164. Denise Enck — Michael McClure and Michael Rothenberg at The Word Temple Friday
165. Mark Weiss — Re: Think twice about jaywalking
166. Eric Yost — Re: Think twice about jaywalking
167. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!
168. Christopher Leland Winks — Re: Think twice about jaywalking
169. Mark Weiss — Re: Think twice about jaywalking
170. George Bowering — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
171. George Bowering — Re: Patchen in color?
172. Tim Peterson — CHAX Press Book Party and Reading in NYC, with special guest Junction Press
173. Alison Croggon — Re: Think twice about jaywalking
174. Julie Kizershot — Memorial Reading for kari edwards in Denver- help?
175. Desmond Swords — Tink twice King Jah way out bla
176. Ricejunk2 — Re: ars poetica
177. Ricejunk2 — Re: our tiny world
178. mIEKAL aND — Re: Patchen in color?

11 JAN 2007

179. David Baratier — Re: patchen
180. Peter Ciccariello — Cave of what you meant to say
181. George Bowering — Re: patchen
182. Alan Sondheim — 2 videos recitations at Rilke's grave
183. Tom Beckett — New at e-x-c-h-a-n-g-e-a-l-u-e-s
184. Patrick Dillon — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
185. vulture protein — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
186. Wanda Phipps — Wanda Phipps and Jeffrey Cyphers Wright Reading at Perch Cafe
187. Kazim Ali — Book Party for Fanny Howe-- NYC
188. Eric Yost — Re: Think twice about jaywalking
189. Brian Stefans — Poets BRIAN KIM STEFANS & SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE at the Writers House -- 1/16
190. Stephen Vincent — Moral Equivalent of War/ Show
191. Eireene Nealand — rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
192. Stephen Vincent — Blogger outs Talk Radio racists, etc.
193. Christopher Leland Winks — Re: Blogger outs Talk Radio racists, etc.

194. Skip Fox — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
195. Jesse Crockett — Listenlight --- new issue 06
196. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
197. Ann Bogle — Peace Rally
198. Simon DeDeo — rhubarb is susan
199. Maria Damon — Re: Peace Rally
200. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Peace Rally
201. Maria Damon — Re: Peace Rally
202. mIEKAL aND — Fwd: Bob is Dead! Long live Bob! Robert Anton Wilson (1932-2007)
203. holsapple1 — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
204. Bob Marcacci — Re: patchen
205. Jason Quackenbush — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
206. Poetry Project — Events at the Poetry Project: 1/12 - 1/17
207. Joe Amato — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
208. Alison Croggon — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
209. Elizabeth Treadwell — Birds & Fancies
210. Clay Banes — Re: Birds & Fancies
211. Haas Bianchi — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
212. Nick Carbo — new asian american poetry feature
213. George Bowering — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
214. Lynn Xu — Re: Poets BRIAN KIM STEFANS & SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE at the Writers House -- 1/16

12 JAN 2007

215. Jeremy Hawkins — Michel de Guy contact info?
216. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
217. Desmond Swords — Riddle of da meter moan
218. Eireene Nealand — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
219. cralan kelder — beggins the answer - why perform
220. Wystan Curnow — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
221. Jill Jones — Re: Listenlight --- new issue 06
222. Barry Schwabsky — Re: beggins the answer - why perform
223. mIEKAL aND — Re: beggins the answer - why perform
224. Lea Graham — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
225. Ruth Lepson — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
226. Alan Sondheim — Re: beggins the answer - why perform
227. Andrew Jones — Re: beggins the answer - why perform
228. Marla Segol — Re: Sollicitation - Solicitud--Important Cultural Invitation from Clemente Pa…
229. Ann Bogle — Re: beggins the answer - why perform
230. Chris Stroffolino — Re: begging the beguine - to andrew jones
231. Skip Fox — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
232. Bill Berkson — FW: BB & LH at Moe's
233. Charlie Rossiter — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
234. Barry Schwabsky — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
235. Ruth Lepson — Re: visual poetry in film/video
236. Cynie Cory — Forget request!
237. Cynie Cory — Re: request for addresses
238. Philip Metres — moral equivalent of war
239. Eric Yost — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
240. Jason Quackenbush — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
241. Jason Quackenbush — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
242. Marcus Bales — Gallery 324 Every Saturday At Noon Literary Event
243. Chris Stroffolino — Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006)
244. Andrew Jones — Re: begging the beguine - to andrew jones
245. Dan Wilcox — Albany, NY - Third Thur. Open Mic, Jan. 18

246. Joel Chace — Re: papertiger: new world poetry #07 - poetry at the end of th e world
247. Bob Marcacci — MeTube & E-Book Looksee

13 JAN 2007

248. C. A. Conrad — REMINDER:::i.e. series- memorial reading for kari edwards-
249. Jesse Glass — Jerome Rothenberg Reading On You Tube
250. Jason Nelson — Being hacked by pooch humpers and loving it.
251. Bob Marcacci — Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
252. mIEKAL aND — Re: Jerome Rothenberg Reading On You Tube
253. Haas Bianchi — Pierre Joris' email
254. Jeffrey Side — Tony Lopez poem at The Argotist Online
255. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Poetry Midwest: Chicago - Milwaukee - Twin Cities
256. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Poetry Midwest: Chicago - Milwaukee - Twin Cities
257. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006)
258. Tim Peterson — 1/15 Tim Peterson and Charles Alexander at the Poetry Project
259. cralan kelder — Re: MeTube & E-Book Looksee
260. Chris Stroffolino — Rebe - to andrew jones
261. Jesse Crockett — Help, I see Susan Dunn-Hensley. (She's) Hacking my Thunderbird.
262. Jesse Crockett — oops
263. andrews — Sunday 14th Book Party; Performances Wed. & Fri. 17th, 19th at Vision series
264. elen — Folks in Chicago: Assistance Needed with Chicago Booksigning Feb 16
265. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006)
266. amy king — Asian-American Issue of MiPOesias
267. John Tranter — "Jacket noticeboard"
268. Haas Bianchi — FW: Folks in Chicago: Assistance Needed with Chicago Booksigning Feb 16
269. Peter Ciccariello — In the end, there, ourselves, the music becoming a woman

14 JAN 2007

270. Joel Weishaus — "Reality Dreams" rewrite
271. Alan Sondheim — No Sex (new videowork)
272. Patrick Herron — On Wednesday it's DQoNCkhpIGFsbCwNCg Day!
273. mIEKAL aND — Alice Coltrane Dies
274. Lisa Jarnot — private workshop in queens, ny
275. Deborah Feinsmith (Reich) — Re: private workshop in queens, ny
276. Deborah Feinsmith (Reich) — PLEASE DELETE PREVIOUS ENTRY BY
277. elen — Alice Coltrane Passes at 69
278. Vernon Frazer — Re: Alice Coltrane Dies
279. Christine Hamm — Re: private workshop in queens, ny
280. Simon DeDeo — rhubarb is susan
281. ALDON L NIELSEN — Re: Alice Coltrane Passes at 69
282. Jesse Crockett — Listenlight 06 requires new starting pitcher
283. Joel Weishaus — Fw: [asle] Plight of the Polar Bears - Op Ed

15 JAN 2007

284. Alan Sondheim — VirtualBody video and text
285. Dodie Bellamy — Fwd: READING: DODIE BELLAMY & ROBERTO TEJADA at City Lights Bookstore -- 1/...
286. Wystan Curnow — Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
287. Tom Beckett — New at e-x-c-h-a-n-g-e-v-a-l-u-e-s
288. Adam Fieled — Interview: Eric Baus on PFS Post
289. Dan Waber — ars poetica update
290. vulture protein — The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
291. Daniel Godston — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
292. Paul Nelson — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
293. Charles Baldwin — Re: Being hacked by pooch humpers and loving it.
294. Tony Trigilio — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?

295. Eric Yost — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
296. Sina Queyras — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
297. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
298. vulture protein — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
299. Fulcrum Annual — Philip Nikolayev in Washington Jan 19
300. Stephen Vincent — Lazar/Pak Poem Paintings!
301. Catherine Daly — Merlene Murphy (poet, founder of telepoetics) hospitalized with lung cancer
302. William Allegrezza — FW: Series A--Odelius and Belz reading in Chicago
303. Sheila Murphy — SUGAR MULE DOUBLE ISSUE: TEXTUAL COLLABORATION
304. Dodie Bellamy — two more Dodie Bellamy events this week
305. Dan Waber — Cross Media Issue at UnlikelyStories.org
306. Laura Winton — Re: beggins the answer - why perform
307. Laura Winton — Re: begging the beguine
308. michelle detorie — WOMB POETRY VOLUME ONE IS LIVE
309. amy king — Happy Martin Luther King Day!
310. Chris Stroffolino — Rebegging (fluffy) band new brag
311. Pierre Joris — Nomadics Blog Posts
312. linda norton — Re: Rebegging (fluffy) band new brag

16 JAN 2007

313. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: $LAVERY-- Cyberzine of the Arts
314. Jim Andrews — Multimediality, Intermediality, and Medially Complex Digital Poetry
315. George Bowering — Re: Boog City 37 Available Saturday
316. Jeffrey Side — Anny Ballardini poems at The Argotist Online
317. Steve Clay — Granary Books
318. Wanda Phipps — A gentle reminder
319. C. A. Conrad — CAConrad's SEXIEST POEM OF 2006 AWARD ((((((((((((O)))))))))))))((O)) ((…
320. cralan kelder — Re: beggins the answer - why perform
321. Fulcrum Annual — Samuel Gareginyan: a great Armenian painter
322. Thomas savage — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
323. Steve Halle — Mary Biddinger at Seven Corners
324. vulture protein — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
325. Small Press Traffic — Poets Theater first night this Friday 1/19
326. Matt Henriksen — Fri 1/19 ::: Graham Foust & Sawako Nakayasu ::: Carroll Gardens, Brooklyn
327. Susan Webster Schultz — donald rumsfeld
328. Charles Bernstein — Girly Man -- 6:30pm today at CUE
329. Marcus Bales — Shows, Readings, and Other Performances at Gallery 324
330. Alexander Dickow — voix off posts
331. Catherine Daly — "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
332. mIEKAL aND — Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
333. Dan Coffey — Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
334. Skip Fox — Re: ars poetica update
335. Ren Powell — Job opening in AZ
336. Poetry Project — Spring Workshops at the Poetry Project. Also Braithwaite and S. Howe, tomo…
337. Alexander Jorgensen — SELLOUT
338. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: SELLOUT
339. Elisa Gabbert — Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
340. twshaner — Announcing WIG and call for submissions
341. Ron Silliman — Silliman's Blog

17 JAN 2007

342. Simon DeDeo — Berkeley / SF poetry events
343. Jim Andrews — Geof Huth on UnlikelyStories 2.0: The Cross Media Issue

344. Anny Ballardini — Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
345. Anny Ballardini — Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
346. mIEKAL aND — NEW CBOOKS FROM SMALL CHAPBOOK PROJECT
347. Thomas Orange — Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
348. William Allegrezza — CFP: Experimental Writing in the Midwest
349. David-Baptiste Chirot — "Rumble, young man, rumble" Happy Birthday Muhammad Ali the Greate...
350. reJennifer Bartlett — Teaching Search
351. Gabrielle Welford — Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
352. mIEKAL aND — The writing automaton
353. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The writing automaton
354. Lewis LaCook — The Courtship of Eddie's Father - New Audio by Lewis LaCook at lewislacook.o...
355. Vernon Frazer — e-mail for Jessica Hagedorn and Edward Sanders (setn on behalf of Michael ...
356. Wes Chapman — Re: The writing automaton
357. Stephen Vincent — ³Water Spilled From Source To Use² Lawrence Weiner
358. Stephen Vincent — New de blog / Lawrence Weiner, etc
359. Tom W. Lewis — new work on Minnesotan Ice
360. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (B...
361. Eric Dickey — Re: FW: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian T...
362. Jim Andrews — Re: The writing automaton
363. Carol Novack — Reading 1/21
364. Jason Quackenbush — Re: FW: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (B...
365. heidi arnold — Stop the War on Terror -- And All Wars

18 JAN 2007

366. Alan Sondheim — the disappearance of performers
367. Mark Truscott — January 24: NourbeSe Philip and Thomas in Toronto
368. David Applegate — NEW Brooklyn reading series!
369. Rob McLennan — living the arts in ottawa: an open letter
370. kevin thurston — buffalo small press fair
371. Mark Weiss — Jaime Saenz
372. Michael Tod Edgerton — Re: Jaime Saenz
373. Adam Fieled — Mark Lamoureux on PFS Post
374. Jay Dougherty — Interview with poet Todd Moore
375. Ruth Lepson — Re: Mark Lamoureux on PFS Post

19 JAN 2007

376. Sina Queyras — corey frost
377. Alan Sondheim — strange video and other audio
378. EH — St. Joseph College Reading 2/6
379. Andrew Epstein — Publication Announcement: Beautiful Enemies: Friendship and Postwar Americ...
380. Joel Weishaus — John Hianes
381. Bill Marsh — Heretical Texts Vol. 3.1: Heriberto Yépez
382. Maria Damon — [Fwd: Assassination of Hrank Dink]
383. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: [Fwd: Assassination of Hrank Dink]
384. Rebecca Weaver — midwayjournal on the radio 1/21/07
385. Tom W. Lewis — Re: midwayjournal on the radio 1/21/07
386. Cynie Cory — Re: Publication Announcement: Beautiful Enemies: Friendship and Postwar Americ...
387. Ren Powell — Re: [Fwd: Assassination of Hrank Dink]
388. Poetry Project — Events at the Poetry Project 1/22 - 1/26

20 JAN 2007

389. Bill Marsh — Heretical Texts Vol. 3.2: Meg Hamill
390. Christopher Filkins — Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Bri…
391. Christopher Hamilton-Emery — US Sales and Marketing Manager
392. Lewis LaCook — Left-handed Pinkie Joint - New Audio by Lewis LaCook
393. Michael Heller — NEW BOOK
394. Eric Dickey — Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turne…
395. William Allegrezza — Call: Responses to Virgil. . .Yes, Virgil!
396. Marcus Bales — Save the date! Friday, January 26, 2007 at 7 p.m.

21 JAN 2007

397. Peter Ciccariello — The defense of distant human form
398. Jim Andrews — Alexandre Gherban and the e-poetry conference in Paris
399. Bill Marsh — Heretical Texts Vol. 3.3: Nick Piombino
400. Alexander Jorgensen — Settling among prairie leaves: Midwest
401. tyrone williams — Re: Settling among prairie leaves: Midwest
402. Nicholas Ruiz III — Kritikos V.4 January-2007
403. Nicholas Ruiz III — Re: Kritikos V.4 January-2007
404. Tisa Bryant — Books for Course Adoption: A Message from LeonWorks Press
405. amy king — MiPO @ STAIN -- This Friday, Jan. 26th
406. Anny Ballardini — Re: Heretical Texts Vol. 3.3: Nick Piombino
407. Marcus Bales — Zarzour sings at Moonlit Magazine Party at Gallery 324 Friday, January 26, 2…
408. Brigitte Byrd — Clayton State U Hosts the Spring 2007 Visiting Writers Reading Series--for …
409. eleni Stecopoulos — Reading: Linda Russo & Sarah Anne Cox 1/25
410. Alan Sondheim — avatar attempting escape of the vectors of its origin
411. Steve Clay — Steve McCaffery & Alan Halsey in NYC
412. Jonathan Skinner — A Natural History of Levees / Not Enough Night

22 JAN 2007

413. charles alexander — Linda Russo in two readings, and her new book
414. Dan Waber — Rune 2, Rose Window, by Karl Kempton (Runaway Spoon Press, 1999)
415. Dan Waber — CORRECTION--Rune 10, Rose Window, by Karl Kempton (Runaway Spoon Press, 1999)
416. Bill Marsh — Heretical Texts Vol. 3.4: Catherine Daly
417. heidi arnold — Poems on Scapegoats
418. charles alexander — Linda Russo in two readings, and her new book
419. susan maurer — anna siano show and reading at bpc
420. Maria Damon — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
421. Maria Damon — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
422. Michael Kelleher — LITERARY BUFFALO E-NEWSLETTER 1.22.07
423. Dan Coffey — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
424. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
425. Rob McLennan — avalanche
426. Thomas savage — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
427. Aldon Nielsen — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
428. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
429. Nate Pritts — H_NGM_N #6/COMBATIVES Launch!
430. Julie Kizershot — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
431. Eric — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
432. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
433. Caleb Cluff — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
434. Small Press Traffic — Poets Theater Neo-Benshi Night this Fri 1/26
435. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Poems on Scapegoats

436. Christopher Filkins — Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Bri...
437. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (B...
438. Jesse Glass — Current Events Poem For Marjorie Perloff

23 JAN 2007

439. Marcus Bales — January 27 ⊕ Saturday at Noon
440. Dan Waber — ars poetica update
441. Mark Stricker — nanomajority: issue#2
442. Thomas savage — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
443. Anselm Berrigan — Bowery Broadsides Series hosted by Farfalla Press
444. UbuWeb — Kenneth Goldsmith Blogging About Conceptual Poetics & Uncreative Writing at Poetry...
445. Dan Wilcox — 2nd Anniversary of Poets Speak Loud - Albany, NY
446. Adam Fieled — "Waxing Hot": Poetics Dialogue on PFS Post
447. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
448. Thomas savage — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
449. Eric — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
450. Ann Bogle — New Works
451. Maria Damon — Re: New Works
452. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Poems on Scapegoats (rexroth on dyaln thomas/artaud on van gogh)
453. Bill Marsh — Heretical Texts Vol. 3.5: Ammiel Alcalay
454. Skip Fox — Re: ars poetica update
455. Dan Waber — Re: ars poetica update
456. Lewis LaCook — Minivan on Fire! New Video by Lewis LaCook at lewislacook.org
457. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
458. Michael Heller — (no subject)
459. Stephen Vincent — Re: Poems on Scapegoats

24 JAN 2007

460. Alan Sondheim — metrical forms of the apocalypse
461. Laura Winton — Re: Unraveled Damon
462. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
463. David-Baptiste Chirot — NYTimes.com: Libby Defense Portrays Client as a Scapegoat
464. Alexander Dickow — martyrs and terrorists...
465. Schlesinger Kyle — Literary Events in conjunction with the exhibition Joe Brainard, People ...
466. Jamie Gaughran-Perez — A Response to the State of the Union [by robots]
467. Ron Silliman — Of late on Silliman's Blog
468. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: martyrs and terrorists...
469. amy king — New @ MiPOesias
470. Jeffrey Side — New poems by Douglas Messerli at The Argotist Online
471. Bruce Covey — Coconut Seven now live!!
472. Thomas savage — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
473. Gary Sullivan — PYONGYAN
474. Mark Lamoureux — Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
475. Jason Nelson — digital mysticism; entanglegrids
476. Crane's Bill Books — Project involving few words
477. Ruth Lepson — Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
478. Ruth Lepson — Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
479. Eric — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
480. Deborah Feinsmith (Reich) — Re: Interview with poet Todd Moore
481. Vernon Frazer — BIG BRIDGE is Pleased to Announce its 2007 Issue (posted on behalf of Micha...
482. CE Putnam — CE Putnam upcoming readings

483. Simon DeDeo — rhubarb is susan
484. patrick dunagan — Poetry Reading by J.Butler, P.Dunagan, W.Skinker 1/26/07
485. Peter Conners — Double Room 7 launched
486. Oren Silverman — Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
487. Tim Peterson — Myung Mi Kim & Judith Goldman at Segue, BPC Sat Jan 27
488. Alan Sondheim — Ground zero (second, close to final, version)
489. Christine Hamm — poetry vs. comedy
490. Cynie Cory — Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
491. Marla Segol — unsubscribe

25 JAN 2007

492. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
493. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
494. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
495. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
496. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project/Murat's Peripheral Space of…
497. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
498. Marcus Bales — Re: unsubscribe
499. George Quasha — George Quasha's "art is" at Studio Soto (Boston)
500. Jim Andrews — Ghost in the machine
501. Anny Ballardini — Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
502. Oren Silverman — Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
503. Jim Andrews — streaming audio question
504. Vernon Frazer — Lisa Janssen's emial
505. Lori Emerson — Fwd: New Rae Armantrout poetry
506. St. Thomasino — New Issue of Onedit
507. Marcus Bales — Haiku Death Match is at 12:00 noon on WEDNESDAY January 31, 2007 in the Rotu…
508. Philip Metres — How peace and war resistance continues to be effaced by Poetry Foundation
509. Thomas Devaney — Big & Smaller Bridges: Big Bridge #12
510. j. kuszai — Mike Gold at Harvard -- New from Factory School
511. Rob McLennan — ottawater #3 now on-line!
512. angela vasquez-giroux — Re: poems of peace and war
513. Michael Kelleher — OlsonNow Update!
514. Eric — Re: poems of peace and war
515. mIEKAL aND — Book written in txt msg
516. Poetry Project — Events at the Poetry Project 1/26 - 2/2
517. Stephen Baraban — Dorn's scapegoat landscape
518. patrick dunagan — Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape
519. Sheila Murphy — Fw: Brutality, Humor, Eroticism - Only Two Weeks Left!
520. Ruth Lepson — Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape

26 JAN 2007

521. C. A. Conrad — REMINDER: kari edwards memorial event this saturday in Baltimore----------…
522. Jim Andrews — Please send me links to cool Internet radio stations
523. Philip Metres — poems of PEACE and war
524. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape
525. amy king — Come, make warm bodies tonight ...
526. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project/Murat's Peripheral Space of Pho…
527. Joel Bettridge — Book Arts Symposium
528. Dan Coffey — Re: poems of PEACE and war
529. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: Excitement Builds for Saturday's Anti-War Marches!
530. Eric Dickey — Re: poems of PEACE and war

531. Christopher Filkins — Re: poems of PEACE and war
532. Eric — Re: poems of PEACE and war
533. Matthew Baiotto — Re: poems of PEACE and war
534. Andrea Lawlor — New translation journal in Philly - launch 1.27.07
535. angela vasquez-giroux — Re: poems of PEACE and war
536. Ruth Lepson — Re: poems of PEACE and war
537. Christopher Leland Winks — Re: poems of PEACE and war
538. Charlotte Mandel — Re: poems of PEACE and war
539. angela vasquez-giroux — Re: poems of PEACE and war
540. Christopher Leland Winks — Re: poems of PEACE and war
541. Eric Dickey — Re: poems of PEACE and war
542. Stephen Vincent — Semina Show Review
543. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Semina Show Review
544. Eric — Re: poems of PEACE and war
545. Marcus Bales — Re: poems of PEACE and war
546. Alan Sondheim — arcs poetica
547. Stephen Vincent — Re: POETRY Seeks Associate Editor
548. Deborah A. Meadows — Re: Meadows' new book of poetry
549. Halvard Johnson — Re: poems of PEACE and war
550. Alexander Jorgensen — Hey there - Ew! Poetry is - Ew!!
551. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: poems of PEACE and war/Big Bridge/blog re peace & war/simone we...
552. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: POETRY Seeks Associate Editor
553. Edward Foster — Talisman
554. Alan Sondheim — Re: Hyperrhiz.02 is out (fwd)
555. Marcus Bales — Re: poems of PEACE and war

27 JAN 2007

556. Jesse Glass — Invitation to Contribute to the John M. Bennett Wikipedia Page
557. Eireene Nealand — Poems of Peace and War: Precipitating Reality: Rebirth of the Author: Fro...
558. Phil Primeau — Re: poems of PEACE and war
559. Marcus Bales — Re: Invitation to Contribute to the John M. Bennett Wikipedia Page
560. Simon DeDeo — Cambridge CCCP
561. Ward Tietz — New Broadsides at Pyramid Atlantic
562. Mary Angela Nangini — Re: unsubscribe
563. Michael Tod Edgerton — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
564. Phil Primeau — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
565. Michael Tod Edgerton — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
566. Larissa Shmailo — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
567. Harry Ross — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
568. Alan Sondheim — Heterosexual cock warriors
569. Wanda Phipps — New Interview in Big Bridge
570. Harry Ross — Re: Heterosexual cock warriors
571. David-Baptiste Chirot — futuristi italiani
572. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: futuristi italiani
573. Crane's Bill Books — Poetry warriors
574. Mark Salerno — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
575. Edmund Hardy — "Intercapillary Space" - a collaborative poetry magazine
576. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
577. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
578. Eric Dickey — Re: poems of PEACE and war

28 JAN 2007

579. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
580. Vernon Frazer — Ric Carfagna interviews Vernon Frazer on IMPROVISATIONS in Big Bridge # 12

581. Eric Elshtain — New Beard of Bees Chapbook
582. Michael Tod Edgerton — Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
583. Ruth Lepson — Re: New Beard of Bees Chapbook
584. Ruth Lepson — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
585. Haas Bianchi — My Blog has Changed
586. Haas Bianchi — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
587. Larissa Shmailo — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
588. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
589. Anny Ballardini — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
590. amy king — Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
591. charles alexander — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
592. Phil Primeau — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
593. amy king — I'm not racist! I'm not homophobic!
594. Alan Sondheim — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
595. Michael Tod Edgerton — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
596. V Nicholas LoLordo — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
597. Michael Cross — Atticus/Finch presents: John Taggart's "Unveiling/Marianne Moore"
598. George Bowering — Re: New Beard of Bees Chapbook
599. Joe Amato — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
600. George Bowering — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
601. Poetics List — Poetics List Policy
602. Tom Beckett — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
603. Christopher Filkins — Re: poems of PEACE and war
604. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
605. Aaron Belz — Ten Jens in St. Louis - Feb 1
606. Simon DeDeo — rhubarb is susan
607. Anny Ballardini — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
608. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
609. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
610. Derek Rogerson — Poetics List
611. Mairead Byrne — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
612. Joe Amato — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
613. Lea Graham — Re: My Blog has Changed
614. Lea Graham — oops
615. Jesse Crockett — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
616. me — a new START . . .
617. ALDON L NIELSEN — Re: Homophobia: The least acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tone?
618. Eric — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

29 JAN 2007

619. Alexander Jorgensen — Last Word on "Last Acceptable Bigotry in America"
620. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Homophobia: The least acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tone?
621. Laura Winton — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
622. Derek Rogerson — Re: polist
623. Laura Winton — Re: Poetics List
624. Jennifer Karmin — OPENPORT festival in Chicago
625. Peter Ciccariello — Barnacled words
626. Alan Sondheim — new work on blog
627. Bob Heman — Come Hear Me Feature This Friday (February 2) at Cornelia Street Cafe

628. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo 1.29.07
629. Jim Andrews — about Internet radio
630. Nate Pritts — New issue - COMBATIVES
631. Halvard Johnson — Query: re Eclipse project at Princeton
632. Small Press Traffic — Poets Theater Closing Night this Fri 2/2
633. Catherine Daly — Re: Query: re Eclipse project at Princeton
634. Halvard Johnson — Re: Query: re Eclipse project at Princeton
635. Dan Coffey — Lynch's Inland Empire
636. Thomas savage — Re: Lynch's Inland Empire
637. Charles Baldwin — Re: about Internet radio
638. Tom W. Lewis — Re: poems of PEACE and war
639. angela vasquez-giroux — Re: poems of PEACE and war
640. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Lynch's Inland Empire
641. Rob McLennan — new(ish) on rob's clever blog
642. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
643. David A. Kirschenbaum — A 40th Anniversary Celebration of United Artists Books
644. George Bowering — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
645. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
646. Jesse Crockett — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
647. Jesse Crockett — dailyness from last week
648. Eric — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
649. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
650. Joe Amato — Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...

30 JAN 2007

651. Alan Sondheim — Qbico Records releases "56" Alan Sondheim (fwd)
652. Simon DeDeo — reading comprehension and background knowledge
653. Patrick Duggan — Idiolexicon -- A New Web-Journal of Poetry
654. Jesse Crockett — bienve... nue ?
655. Jesse Crockett — Oh
656. tyrone williams — Re: Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
657. Raymond Bianchi — http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
658. Barry Schwabsky — This conference in Plymouth, UK sounds awesome
659. Bruce Covey — Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta
660. Thomas savage — Re: Lynch's Inland Empire
661. Dan Coffey — Re: Lynch's Inland Empire
662. Barry Schwabsky — Spring readings at Parasol Unit, London
663. Adam Fieled — Ruth Lepson, Larry Sawyer on PFS Post
664. Jacqueline Gens — Re: Ruth Lepson, Larry Sawyer on PFS Post
665. Dan Waber — ars poetica update
666. George Bowering — Re: Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta
667. Mark Truscott — Feb 7: Brossard, Godard, and Harris at Test (Toronto)
668. Martha Deed — Re: Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta
669. amy king — Re: Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta - I have no shame.
670. Larissa Shmailo — Teachers and Writers Collaborative Radio WNYE 91.5 this Thurs 2/1 at 6:30...
671. reJennifer Bartlett — Homophobia...
672. Small Press Traffic — Lisa Robertson at Poets Theater this Fri 2/2
673. Alexander Jorgensen — Darn it, Wolfowitz.
674. Wystan Curnow — Re: Spring readings at Parasol Unit, London
675. Alexander Jorgensen — Poetry & Dinos & Michael Tod Edgerton
676. Ruth Lepson — Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape
677. noah eli gordon — Stefans/Baus/Moudry reading

31 JAN 2007

678. Ron Silliman — Silliman's Blog
679. Alison Croggon — Fwd: Ash, by Alison Croggon
680. Jesse Glass — The Fib at Saline (Salt Publishing) About Angel Exhaust 19
681. Jesse Glass — Jen's Fib At Saline Part 2
682. Pierre Joris — Nomadics blog
683. Ram Devineni — EDWARD HIRSCH at the Creative Writing Workshop, Brazil
684. Ram Devineni — Take 2 seconds to SAVE THE NEW GLOBE!
685. Tom Beckett — Fwd: Otoliths issue four
686. C. A. Conrad — a conversation with ALICE NOTLEY on trance, tarot and poetry ()()()()()() ...
687. linda norton — Silliman's blog/Poet Laureate of Boston
688. Anny Ballardini — Re: http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
689. Simon DeDeo — Jed Perl on Laissez-Faire Aesthetics
690. Vernon Frazer — Re: Homophobia...
691. Gretchen Adele — please remove me from list- unsubscribe
692. Emma Larsson — please remove me from list- unsubscribe
693. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Jed Perl on Laissez-Faire Aesthetics
694. Alison Croggon — Re: The Fib at Saline (Salt Publishing) About Angel Exhaust 19
695. Mary Kasimor — Re: Homophobia...
696. George Bowering — Re: Homophobia...
697. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Jim Eisenreich
698. Raymond Bianchi — Re: http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
699. George Bowering — Re: Jim Eisenreich
700. Simon DeDeo — jed perl article
701. Vernon Frazer — Re: Jim Eisenreich
702. Ricejunk2 — diarrhea of the mouth
703. David Baratier — Larry's poetry forum
704. Ricejunk2 — Re: Poems on Scapegoats
705. Betsy Andrews — New Book: Betsy Andrews' NEW JERSEY

1. Alison Croggon

Re: The Argotist Online: Interviews with Poetry Editors on the Future of Poetry Publishing

Mon 1 Jan 2007

Hi Jeffrey

On you for the effort, but I am forced to conclude that the future of poetry publishing is men. One woman out of 15 editors? Even with the online contribution? I mean, don't give me the answer that there are not woman editors out there - Kate Fagan (How2), Susan M. Schulz (Tinfish) and me (Masthead) spring to my mind without even thinking. I'm sure a quick rootle around would find dozens more.

I don't like adding up figures as if they mean something in themselves, but here I think it's a problem.

All the best

Alison

On 1/1/07, Jeffrey Side <[redacted]> wrote:
> Interviews with Poetry Editors on the Future of Poetry Publishing
>
> http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Interviews%20with%20Poetry %20Editors.htm
>
> In light of the the New Statesman article by Neil Astley, 'Poetry For People', and the vigorous reactions that my blog entry concerning it provoked at The Poem forum I thought it would be interesting to discuss some of the wider implications that Astley's concerns in the article suggest, and how these relate to such matters as: poetry and publishing, and the future of poetry in printed form and on the Internet. To do this, I have gathered responses from the following editors to a set of questions regarding these issues.
>
>
> Tim Allen
> John M. Bennett > Jake Berry
> Andrew Duncan
> Ken Edwards
> Tony Frazer
> Susana Gardner
> Geoffrey Gatza
> Rupert Loydell

> Alan May
> Douglas Messerli
> Peter Philpot
> Michael Rothenberg
> Martin Stannard
>
>
>
>
>

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

2. Alan Sondheim

Ship and Bell

Mon 1 Jan 2007

Ship and Bell

"We therefore infer that the _effects of different permanent disturbing forces acting under similar conditions on the same coordinate are not simply proportional to their respective magnitudes but depend on their periods."

"We therefore infer that _a disturbing force whose period and real expo- nential are nearly the same as those of any one free vibration produces a large forced vibration._"

"We conclude that _one effect of the resistances on a disturbing permanent force, which would otherwise produce a magnified forced oscillation, is to modify that oscillation and to keep it within bounds._"

"In the same way _heavy church bells_ can _be easily set in motion_ pro- vided the pulls are properly timed. To increase the oscillation each rope should be pulled only when it is descending. A large heavy ship can be made to roll, when its natural time of oscillation is required, by running a gang of men to and fro across the deck at the proper time; the men run uphill."

(from Advanced Dynamics of a System of Rigid Bodies, Edward John Routh)

But if the men run uphill, surely the oscillation will ultimately be damped since their effect in total would be to reduce the roll? Or does the natural time depend on the minimization of the roll? Suppose on the other hand the men run to and fro at the proper time - running downhill. Then the oscillations will possibly increase as energy is added on the downswing. With the descent of the bell, a pull raises it further, increasing the potential energy. With the rolling of the ship, potential energy is increased as the men running downward add to the slope. However if upon running downward, the ship is rising, then the damping effect might slow the rising of the ship, just as, if running upward, the ship is sinking (sloping downward), the running will become first flat, then downward, carrying the energy downward and pulling the roll. If the roll is pushed, the roll is damped, if the men are running upward; if the roll is pulled, the roll increases, if the men are running downward. The men run first upward, then level, then downward, or first downward, then level, then upward. Perhaps damping in the second case, increasing in the second. Suppose the men _always_ run upward, then as the ship levels, the men stop running; as it continues downward, the men turn around and run upward; the damping is doubled. Suppose the men _always_ run downward, then as the ship levels, the men stop running; as it continues upward, the men turn around and run downward, the increase is doubled. By "doubled" one means the force is applied twice on the swing, depending on the tilt of the ship. In both cases, of the bell and the ship, gravity is paramount; one runs or pulls against it, or one runs towards it, in which case pull is impossible; however, a second cord might in fact pull the bell in an opposite direction, just as the men might jostle from one side of the ship to the other. Is this resonance, or the orders given to men, the acts of men? The men follow the pull and push of the bell, slope of the deck of the ship; there is no natural swing or pull here, only culture, commands, actions in unison. The ship stops rolling or rolls over; the bell stops ringing or turns full on its pivot. In any case, the dynamics are both evident and peculiar; the men must experiment, over and over again, to find the proper resonance, response. It is a difficult problem, settled only in church, on the high seas, even though the dynamics are evident.

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

3. Jim Andrews

Re: The Argotist Online: Interviews with Poetry Editors on the Future of Poetry Publishing

Mon 1 Jan 2007

> Jeffrey Side wrote:
> Interviews with Poetry Editors on the Future of Poetry Publishing
>
> http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Interviews%20with%20Poetry%20Editors.htm
>
> In light of the the New Statesman article by Neil Astley, 'Poetry For People', and the vigorous reactions that my blog entry concerning it provoked at The Poem forum I thought it would be interesting to discuss some of the wider implications that Astley's concerns in the article suggest, and how these relate to such matters as: poetry and publishing, and the future of poetry in printed form and on the Internet. To do this, I have gathered responses from the following editors to a set of questions regarding these issues.

hi jeffrey,

i'm particularly interested in the responses to the role of the internet.

john bennett says "The Internet is fine, and it's wonderful for getting all kinds of stuff out there so people can see it if they want to. But the printed book and serial cannot be replaced - it's really how people read anything closely, and it's also how things will last. The Internet is a kind of marketplace/exhibition/sample venue. The book is where you go to read something deeply."

concerning what will last, i think it's less a matter of whether it's online or in print (or whatever) as whether people continue to find the work relevant and of interest. if it's online, the author or publishers have to make the code available, when the work is programmed. sometimes the 'source code' is simply html, so that is not so much of an issue; but sometimes the source is programming code, and if the piece is to survive, the source needs to be available for programmer-artists to work on it. i wasn't sure of this a few years ago, but recent experience has shown me that when people are interested in some work, they do what they need to in order to keep it before the world. the poet-programmers (all 100 of them) make special projects of recovering significant computer poetry; those with a particular interest in other areas of poetry make special projects of doing what needs to be done to keep the significant work from their area before the public, etc. some significant work is lost, of course. but this is true across the board.

it's been interesting to work on the bpNichol project i've mentioned here a couple of times (that still isn't finished but still is in progress). we've found that many professional archivists are more or less clueless about digital archives. which seems to mean, at least for the time, that it's up to the poet-programmers themselves to do the restoration/archiving. but i wonder if that's any different in other areas where the documents/artifacts are out of the ordinary.

as to where work is read deeply, again, i think that's less a matter of whether the work is online or print (or whatever) as whether readers are deeply engaged by the work. it may be that to engage people deeply in digital work, the work should live somewhat differently than poetry has done in print, but there are many innovative digital works that are deeply engaging. Check out, for instance, http://vispo.com/misc/links.htm , which is my page of links to (usually) literary net art around the world. one of the main things you'll note about most of those links is that while they are often literary, they are also engaged in other arts and sometimes also in programming; film would not be engaging simply as text or scrolling text; neither is the internet. but the internet can deal with text much better than film, and text in conjunction with other media.

john also says "the internet is a kind of marketplace/exhibition/sample venue". and it is that. but it is more than that, for some people, even concerning the literary. some people take it seriously as literary media. i do. print is wonderful. but the digital and the internet open up formal and social possibilities for poetry that print does not offer. it isn't a matter of there having to be only one literary medium. there will be people who follow poetry only in print or only online, but for those who are really into poetry and not simply into print or the internet, surely they'll find both relevant and broadening.

the internet brings poetry into relation with other arts, media, and methods/processes that print cannot. it also allows for international communication and exhibition/publication of poetry that was relatively rare prior to the internet. additionally, it allows people who know what they're doing to publish widely in ways that previously were the domain of only institutions and those with money.

the internet is a force in changing and shaping the languages people read, write and speak. it operates as a communication medium (via telephone or instant messenging or email) and as a medium where documents, film, interactive applications, images, queriable databases, and audio works mix in an astonishing brew of languages and methods/processes. poetry has to be there, and is. print isn't going away, but neither is the internet as literary media.

happy new year to all on the poetics list!

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

4. Charlie Rossiter
Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Mon 1 Jan 2007

Well it's January 1 -- a fine time for idealism.

I'm inclined to think that the biggest way to sell out is to not be true to your self. (I warned you)

That is to say, if you're dumbing down poems to get applause/laughter/whatever from a mass audience, that's one way of selling out. On the other hand, if you're a straight ahead poet who is really driven to write the kind of poems that a lot of normal citizens enjoy but you crave recognition from the more academic side of the poetry world, you just might sell out by going experimental and sucking up to that crowd.

Happy New Year. Keep those poems flowing.

Charlie
--
"Poetry is good for you and so is the blues."
Charlie said that.
www.poetrypoetry.com
where you hear poems read by poets who wrote them

www.myspace.com/avantretro (hear avantretro poems)

www.myspace.com/whiskeybucketbluesreview
hear Charlie & Henry sing the blues

www.myspace.com/jackthe71special
hear Jack's original blues, blues rock & roots

↑ Index

5. Nick Carbo
visual poetry in film/video
Mon 1 Jan 2007

---

here's an invitation to peruse a new visual poetry group at youtube. if you like the visual (poetry) stimulation, pls join!

http://www.youtube.com/group/visualpoetry

thanks and happy new year!

Nick Carbo
http://www.npr.org/features/feature.php?wfId=1667164
http://www.cherry-grove.com/carbo.html

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

6. Mark DuCharme

Re: Sell outs? what obligation to the audience

Mon 1 Jan 2007

My first responsibility is to myself as a reader. If I don't make something that sustains me, then it won't satisfy others-- or if it does, it will be fairly meaningless.

As a corollary to that, my responsibility is to produce nothing that is at all false, if possible. By false, I mean anything that glosses over, covers up, oversimplifies, reduces, conceals, dumbs down, sucks up, or just plain sucks. I think that accessibility is a trick question: I have seen very different reactions to the same poem, in both an audience and a classroom. Is it possible to please everyone-- or if it is, should we try? You may say that's a cop out-- and here the argument becomes tautological: poetry is not a popular art, so it should be held to different standards; poetry is not a popular because it does not hold itself to the same standards. But I say it is a matter of being true to one's own standards, in any medium. Yesterday on the radio I heard George Martin saying John Lennon once told him he would never expect to walk into a bar in Spain and hear sombody whistling "I Am The Walrus." Exactly.

I've never been a huge Olson fan, but his sense of the poem "at all points, [being] a high-energy construct and, at all points, an energy discharge" has always been a touchstone for me, and still is.

One further note on audience: there is something very liberating, wouldn't you agree, in Frank O'Hara's "if they don't need poetry bully for them. I like the movies too."

And as for who was the bigger sell-out, Stein, Pound or Creeley-- another trick question. The answer, as far as I am concerned, is none of them... unless one is thinking of Pound's bizarre attraction to Italian fascism.

Mark DuCharme

From: cralan kelder <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Subject: Re: Sell outs? what obligation to the audience
Date: Sun, 31 Dec 2006 15:41:00 +0100

an interesting question to me is about ³selling out². Don¹t poets have an obligation to their audience, in terms of accessibility, for example. Why do so many poets seem to punish their audience? If a poet notices that a certain line, phrase, subject, etc, elicits more appreciation, is it selling out to react, as an artist, to that knowledge?

Given the thread earlier about the suspicion that most people who read poetry are poets; when performing at least poets can reach a wider audience.

The question is,
What obligation does a poet have to an audience?

On 12/25/06 4:16 PM, "Haas Bianchi" <[redacted]> wrote:

>
>
>
> It is a travesty that experimental poetry has retreated into a niche and
is > not read for fully. This is mostly the fault of experimental poets because > of the publishing structure that exists they do not need to seek audience > because sales do not determine publication- selling out? Who was a bigger > sell out? Stein, Pound? Or Creeley? Poets need to survive how they do it
is > not our concern what matters is that they create good and great poems and > challenge the existing structure/
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On > Behalf Of heidi arnold

> Sent: Wednesday, December 13, 2006 2:44 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject:
>
> angela --
>
> first, a nod to your high horse -- hang on to it
>
> -- in answer to your question -- "what do you mean by 'selling out'"
>
> -- who was it that called clinton a panderbear?
>
> -- to write as a service of stenography for individuals who want their own > style and views expressed in contemporary poetry in order to gratify their > egos and wallets is selling out -- to allow corporate interests or upper > class cliques to treat poets as stenographers -- when they can't find a > mirror handy -- is selling out -- to allow these same corporate interests
to > leech off your entire poetic network because they find it entertaining --
is > selling out -- to write to please the status quo -- is selling out -- to > write to make fat-assed exploiters of the arts community happy with their > masturbatory inner lives is selling out -- and so on
>
> -- i am sure that everyone else could add to this list which is my > infuriated hungover take on the issue at the moment
>
> --over to you,
>
> heidi
>
> On 12/13/06, angela vasquez-giroux <[redacted]>
wrote:
>> >
>> > heidi, what exactly do you mean by "selling out"?
>> >
>> > i think the concern that the only audience for poetry anymore (in the >> > US) is poets and our close relations/friends, is legitimate and quite >> > frankly pressing.
>> >

>> > i wish more non-poets would read. or more people who think they're >> > poets would read, instead of just stating that their newest work is a >> > perfect poem b/c they wrote it / say so.
>> >
>> > poetry is inclusive in terms of making it available to anyone who >> > wants to read, enjoy, etc. i don't believe that means everyone should >> > be writing poetry. but they all should be reading it.
>> >
>> > (on my high horse)
>> > angela
>> >
>> > On 12/13/06, heidi arnold <[redacted]> wrote:
>>> > >
>>> > > -- that entire "non-poets who read poetry" thread has a *lovely
>>> > > "we're selling out" scent if you ask me -- did someone get paid to >>> > > start it, or what?
>>> > >
>>> > > -- my blog is updated at www.peaceraptor.blogspot.com
>>> > >
>>> > > -- back to work
>>> > >
>>> > > cheers,
>>> > >
>>> > > heidi
>>> > >
>>> > >
>>> > >
>>> > > --
>>> > > www.heidiarnold.org
>>> > > http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/
>>> > >
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> > --
>> > http://mother-of-light.blogspot.com
>> >
>
>
>
> --

> www.heidiarnold.org
> http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/

_____ Your Hotmail address already works to sign into Windows Live Messenger! Get it now http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwme0020000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://get.live.com/messenger/overview

↑ Index

7. Jeffrey Side

Argotist interviews with editors mainly male interviewees at present

Mon 1 Jan 2007

I realise the interviewees are mainly male and I will look for more females to take part. Jeff

↑ Index

8. Eireene Nealand

Re: Sell outs? what obligation to the audience

Mon 1 Jan 2007

Do you know, sometimes I think that we have the wrong idea about who/what an audience is.

I've been reading this great book (by Svenbro, I forget the book's exact name--sorry book, you were great. i remember you cover exactly, the feel of it on my hands and on my back, the little gold imprints and the red band on the cover as well) about how in ancient Greece, all of the tombstones were written in the first person: "Glaukus made me. I will last on and on"...and the like

This was way back before silent reading was invented. So readers encountering these inscriptions would have to lend their voices, i.e. pysically give over their bodies and, according to Svenbro allow themselves to be sort of buggered by these inscriptions, which they could give birth to well or badly.

I suppose today we might use a more institutionalized medical metaphor for this buggering--via derrida--getting "buggered" by an injecting needle--whether poison or health is injected, I'm uncertain sometimes--in any case, what seems clear to me however, is that this is a quite physical interaction, between (at least two)live, independently chaotic bodies. It seems like we should go to theories of ethics, Levinas or who was that that wrote On Touching?--to think about how we face off against those who not only listen but lend their bodies and often speak back and afford us--let's be honest, a certain amout of pleasure as well.

eireene

↑ Index

9. Alexander Jorgensen
SELL OUTS?
Mon 1 Jan 2007

I says, I agree with Charlie hisself. I wanna write poesie - pretty as the prettier st man ever been on celluloid, Paul Newman (and that's a fact). No stuffed misrepresentations of life - or poems who calls forbade the yawp, much preferring the faux banal mutterings of devoid perception! Those poems that hide behind conceit: says, dumbing poetry, when - as we knows - the right words bring people to the truth.
Y'all diving in'a pockets for your own sake. The bi-ped, said Pound, gotta walk on its two feet. I read, 'cause I gotta define me-self, the experiment as if such were 'bout dumbing itself, demoralizing, and rarely empowering - how your fetishize mediocrity - and I've seen yours websites.

And don't use the demi-gods names in VAIN - especially if'a you DONT KNOW THEMS----------SIR (like I do).

So says, high yella - thinking it's time to dedude - time for R-E-A-L sessession.
AGJ

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

10. Alexander Jorgensen
SELLOUTS
Mon 1 Jan 2007

And me pa is ILLITERATE - so I figure you bein'able to read and write, figure what is I'M sayin' - and reckon, also, given, I've READ your poems, you neither understand OR ARE AUTHENTIC - so, show YOUR ASS - and some of US will fuck it in'a sensibili-----TY. Many of us are tired of how you've rednecked poetry into a guetto - appropriating whatever whatnot!

AJ

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

11. Stephen Vincent
Poetry & the Arts in Communicatas
Mon 1 Jan 2007

http://www.kqed.org/epArchive/R701010900
(Podcast/Archive)

This morning Michael Krasny's Forum show featured a number of visual artists, performers and composers(no poets) essentially talking of innovative art programs involved in community works (engaging political issues, engaging citizens in the process), as well as some of the participants talking about ways in which the internet is impacting their works. The work of Joseph Beuys was one of the invoked. Larry Rinder at CCA and Richard Kamler (sculptor) at USF spoke of relatively new multidisciplinary art's programs in 'social practice' at each of their schools.

Interesting that this morning's program did not invite or consider ways in which poets may be actively also involved 'social practice'. (Not a lot of names jump into my somewhat hung-over, partied out mind!) Apart from poetry in the schools programs - which may or may not stir the larger social well - is any body (or group) on this list involved in teaching or non-teaching situations in which a poetry program actively engages exploring ways in which 'the word' (and its investigations) is re-contextualizing the way in which art (language) may reconfigure the experience and/or change of public and/or social space??

Or can any one name poets whose work may actively fit into the frame of 'a social/public practice' - as say, maybe(?), different than a theoretical one? Or the artists in other media a leap ahead or a leap back here?

Curious!

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

12. Simon DeDeo
HTML/CSS help needed
Mon 1 Jan 2007

Dear community --

We are experiencing some problems with our HTML/CSS code at absent (http://absentmag.org) -- in particular, missing linebreaks and whitespace with PC users and IE or even Firefox in issue one.

If there are any gurus who would like to examine the HTML and CSS style files and let me know if I am missing something, I would be incredibly grateful.

Please contact me backchannel if you can see what is going wrong.

Many thanks,

Simon

↑ Index

13. Alexander Jorgensen
GOOD ONE - POETRY'S SELLOUTS - NEW YEAR RESOLUTION
Tue 2 Jan 2007

One hates to sound like either a human torch or a madman - some somebody, clearly, nobody loves. Oh, and the head hurts, fire in the belly (as they say), this wondering if should have stopped. But I don't want a 24 hr poetry marathon, any ebooks, hype-sandwiched-hype. Americans, we know just how bad fast food is -

In mandarin the sound a bee (xiao mi feng) makes is:
"wong-wong, wong-wong" Now, say that to yourself and hearing the pretty sound resonate in your skull, think about how perfect...

And here, 2007, a seal bone around my neck, from when I lived on San Cristobal Island (and there are beaches in the Galapagos where seals go to die), hunk of rock from Himalaya on my desk, oh China China China, in my ear a conversation about how my friend's bi-racial little boy was nearly stolen for the slave trade in South China by biker gangs few days ago...over beer cured in formaldehyde...CANTON...GUANGZHOU...and then letters from Robert Creeley, the last a few hours before his death - loving.

Had this dream about a woman biting my nipples, her lips like snapdragons, snap-snap-snap, and she looks up at me, her spirit filled with my contempt, my crude words cunningly mouthed, and says: Thank you for your poison.

Experimental poets? There are so few, yet so damn many on this list reckon themselves to be. Yep, he said:
REALLY want some kinda war. But there is a big problem, I think, and that is that poetry is suffering, that those who are supposed to be protecting both the artform and us, and encouraging cultural work, are more likely than not responsible for poetry's slack misuses.

And then there're NO subterraneans in Beijing, he said
- only Misfits, said I (one of THEM). And why say this? Because I/ know (just how foolish, said, some of you have been). But I've heard bigoted men read Langston Hughes - coloring "white junk" - saying y'all
- and you can too...(on the radio).

Again: oh, the head, last whiskey on the rocks, remembering what David posted, some words by Golda Maier, about how there is no such thing as a Palestinian - and I thought, yes: If we erase them, than we don't need to see 'em. And I say to myself - reminding myself, I say, all the best doctors in Iran, so said Kashim, are Jews - but again, this reference to Armstrong: What a wonderful world.

agj

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

14. J. Michael Mollohan
Re: HTML/CSS help needed
Tue 2 Jan 2007

Simon,

I'd be happy to take a look at your code to see what can be done.

JMichael

----- Original Message -----
From: "Simon DeDeo" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, January 01, 2007 8:11 PM
Subject: HTML/CSS help needed

> Dear community --
>
> We are experiencing some problems with our HTML/CSS code at absent (http://absentmag.org) -- in particular, missing linebreaks and whitespace with PC users and IE or even Firefox in issue one.
>
> If there are any gurus who would like to examine the HTML and CSS style files and let me know if I am missing something, I would be incredibly grateful.
>
> Please contact me backchannel if you can see what is going wrong.
>
> Many thanks,
>
> Simon

↑ Index

15. Alexander Jorgensen
Last note! Last note from China!
Tue 2 Jan 2007

I'm outta here - Midwest byway of a so'westa. Three days of full on - full power, as they say in India -beer guzzling! Nope! I am not a Christian.

Those Tibetans need support - as does everyone who REALLY has something to say. Back channel me c/o of [redacted] and I will forward email addresses of some good men, good writers, refugees without a country (or a home) - but, alas, write out whatever need one writes.

Anyone know how I can help rebuild New Orleans, please back channel me c/o [redacted] (would be nice if the high-end developers would stay out!) I don't mind chocolate cities - any folksy one'll do - do mind appropriation, however.

When I talked about secession, was referring to Austrian art movement led by likes of Klimt and Scheile. Rauschenburg - check 'im out - expand Eliot's Auditory Imagination -

Apologize for being tactless. If anything, appreciate my ethics - and my work (but no need worry about me).

agj

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

16. Jim Andrews

Re: GOOD ONE - POETRY'S SELLOUTS - NEW YEAR RESOLUTION

Tue 2 Jan 2007

> Experimental poets? There are so few, yet so damn many on this list reckon themselves to be. Yep, he said: REALLY want some kinda war. But there is a big problem, I think, and that is that poetry is suffering, that those who are supposed to be protecting both the artform and us, and encouraging cultural work, are more likely than not responsible for poetry's slack misuses.

i think you have it all wrong, alexander. poetry, having long ago died, has never felt better. moves like smoke in the air. gets into everything. film. theatre. visual art. music. interactive applications. you name it. poetry is to art in general as brian eno is to music. not a 'supporting role'; but what gives its language force and care, intensity. poetry is beyond suffering; we are the ones suffering. but it's still on call.

poetry can't be protected. needs no protection. is dead. loves trouble anyway. if someone wants to hurt it, they swing at the air. can't lay a glove on it. it always knows if you're serious and is at your side when you are. no not at your side. you're it.

experimental poetry is, in a sense, the only poetry. if its already been done, how can you expect to keep poetry's attention? she was there the first time.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

17. Alan Sondheim

sutra spurt ()

Tue 2 Jan 2007

---

sutra spurt ()

At YouTube http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=u_Z70rv0cHA (Try this; the file uploaded, but seems to hang on loading at the client side. Hopefully this will work; if not, please go to the URL below. Apologies - The more I use YouTube, the worse it seems to get; it's not handling the volume.)

http://www.asondheim.org/spurt.mp4 larger file

pump,AUM splay,AUM split,AUM splash,AUM splatter. Heidegger dissolves to hello mode of language splatters,AUM splitting the imago spitting and spattered. heads splat splattered against cotton pavement where little knees won't The liminal is between the name and spattered/splattered language; it On talk just before cumming,AUM systems crashed and letters splattered onto Imagine the facts stormed,AUM splattered against the sidewalk,AUM an exhausted truth emerges from my holes. sputter splatter and every margin. Wherever I reach,AUM my fingers splatter lightning and dark electrical drops; what drops,AUM splatters: one might say,AUM almost zero removing file hell,AUM stutter splatter hell,AUM signal stopping hell but also mght create a resdue or splatter,AUM almost alve bounced now the time of thermal heating splatters a particular zero the hallmarks of confusion or "splatter" which,AUM while not quite spam,AUM girl,AUM voice splattered across gouged trachea. Gnaw! Gnaw! Jennifer's rain,AUM noise splattered across satellite dishes,AUM stratospheric gouges and again,AUM splintering alan's eye,AUM splattered against the further alan hands bleed,AUM drops splatter under the full effect and force of gravitation Cosmos are full of partobjects,AUM splatterphenomena,AUM dispersions without are you satisfied with your arms .concealed in you,AUM my splattered fingers their bodies are splattered,AUM arms shattered,AUM legs spattered,AUM ajar couch splattered,AUM shattered,AUM legs spattered,AUM scattered,AUM necks Electrical drops; what drops,AUM splatters one might say,AUM almost zero skitter,AUM splatter,AUM etc. Scanner inverts the series,AUM spackle and splattered or spotted landscape. Deep within the throat the elements,AUM the referent "splatters" it's difficult to contain,AUM and thin edge of the picture splatters from the wall,AUM reassembles at every splatter as content; it's as if the thetic confined itself to a certain sure is something,AUM is already gone,AUM broken,AUM splattered,AUM sputtered,AUM splin tered,AUM spurted.

Post a video response Post a text comment
asondheim (17 minutes ago)
Am I the only one having loading difficulties recently? This was shot in Geneva w/ Maud, Foofwa, Filibert, 2006.
(Reply)

↑ Index

18. Ron Silliman

Silliman's Blog '07

Tue 2 Jan 2007

---

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

RECENT POSTS

A look at last week’s MLA

“Blog better, blog less”

Remember poets who passed on
in 2006

“A Theory’s Evolution” by Charles Bernstein

A Scanner Darkly attempts the impossible,
a movie that’s faithful to Philip K. Dick

5 little-known things about me

An appeal for Paula Gunn Allen

What makes for a decent bookstore
(4 criteria)

Rob Halpern’s
Disaster Suite

Who watches the Watchmen and who watches the writing?

Heckuva job, Gracie!

A history of cut-ups

How tell a story
in an American movie?
Dying with The Dying Gaul

The poetics of Alice Notley

John Ashbery deserves
the National Medal of the Arts

Of Jena Osman, Rachel Blau DuPlessis and writing networks, as such

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

19. susan maurer
reading 1-4 susan maurer and chocolate waters
Tue 2 Jan 2007

---

come to jushis in nyc. reading out of her home at 153w21 at 7:45. $5 gets you a chance to have some free refreshments, read open and hear susan and chocolate.Y'all come. susan maurer

_____ Dave vs. Carl: The Insignificant Championship Series. Who will win? http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwsp0070000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://davevscarl.spaces.live.com/?icid=T001MSN38C07001

↑ Index

20. Dan Waber
results are in
Tue 2 Jan 2007

Regarding the interest level for the three web journals I proposed last week, the results are now in.

I received input from 19 different people, the results of which can be summarized as:

Close Reading -- 7 expressed an interest in providing content, 1 indicated there was a print journal doing this, and 1 pointed me to their own blog doing something similar.

Instantiation -- 9 expressed an interest in providing content, 1 indicated a principled refusal to issue manifestos.

subgenres -- 3 expressed an interest in editing a specific category, 1 indicated that their notion of a subgenre was more content-driven than my examples, and 1 indicated that this one would be the most fun of the three to read.

So, the end result is that I'm just not seeing sufficient interest in these to justify the effort at this time. Instead, I'll use the time I'd been planning to allocate to these things on a few projects that are more individual than community oriented...the upside to being an idea factory is that there's never really a shortage of things to work on.

I would like to thank everyone who responded for their input, it helped me determine where my resources will be best spent.

Regards,
Dan

↑ Index

21. Adam Fieled

Allegrezza, Compton, Pettet: Stoning the Devil

Tue 2 Jan 2007

New on Stoning the Devil (http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com):

--reviews of books by Simon Pettet, Shanna Compton, and Bill Allegrezza. --the Raincoats, a memorial piece for James Brown, Chan Marshall ("Cat Power"). --lots of other stuff

See ya there!
Love,
Adam Fieled [redacted]

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

22. Barrett Watten

MLA posts

Tue 2 Jan 2007

Discrepant Correlation: Ezra Pound and the "F Scale"

http://www.english.wayne.edu/fac_pages/ewatten/posts/post32.html

Dream of a Post-Soviet MLA & Conference Report

http://www.english.wayne.edu/fac_pages/ewatten/posts/post33.html

↑ Index

23. ALDON L NIELSEN

MLA Off Site Group Reading Part 1

Tue 2 Jan 2007

I've just posted the first half of the photos from the group reading at:
http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

More to come --

<<

> From: Ralph Lichtensteiger <[redacted]>
> Date: January 2, 2007 12:42:06 PM CST
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: [silence] Jackson Mac Low and Anne Tardos Recorded Live at Roulette 1999
>
> just in,
>
> New CD :: Music by Jackson Mac Low and Anne Tardos
>
> Recorded Live at Roulette 1999
>
> Andrew Bolotowsky, flutes
> Mary Hurlbut, soprano
> Theresa Salomon, violin
> Jackson Mac Low and Anne Tardos, voices
>
> Price: USD 15.00 (includes shipping)
>
> http://xtina.org/tarmac.htm
>
> best,
> ralph li
> http://www.lichtensteiger.de/diary.html

↑ Index

25. Larissa Shmailo
interview
Tue 2 Jan 2007

FYI, I am interviewed in the current issue of cervenabarvapress.com.

Happy New Year,
L

Larissa Shmailo_ [redacted]_ (mailto:[redacted])
http//:larissashmailo.blogspot.com
Listen to The No-Net World at http//:www.cdbaby.com/cd/shmailo and on iTunes

↑ Index

26. amy king
New Work - New Year
Tue 2 Jan 2007

MiPOesias 2007 (http://www.mipoesias.com/) presents:

LAURA MULLEN
CAROLINE BERGVALL
COLE SWENSEN
RAE ARMANTROUT
JENNIFER L. KNOX
LEIGH STEIN
WILLIAM STOBB
MICHAEL PARKER
AARON ANSTETT
BRUCE COVEY
P.F. POTVIN
MATT HENRIKSEN
CYNTHIA ARRIEU-KING
RACHEL ZOLF
ELLEN KENNEDY
EDMUND BERRIGAN
RUFO QUINTAVALLE

http://www.mipoesias.com/

POETRY ARCHIVES - http://www.mipoesias.com/Poetry/

_____

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

27. David A. Kirschenbaum

Boog City's 2007 Events, Incl. United Artists Books 40th Anniv. and Kurt Cobain at 40 in Feb.

Tue 2 Jan 2007

---

hi all,

here are boog city¹s events for 2007 for our two series--d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press and boog city¹s classic album live presents. The slate kicks off in february with two biggies--a 40th Anniversary Celebration for United Artists Books and a 40th Birthday Celebration for Kurt Cobain (detailed info below).

have a swell new year.

best,
david

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

A 40th Anniversary Celebration for

United Artists Books
(New York City)

Thurs. Feb. 1, 6:00 p.m., free

ACA Galleries
529 W.20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by United Artists' editor and publisher Lewis Warsh

Featuring readings from

Barbara Henning
Mitch Highfill
Bill Kushner
Bernadette Mayer
Dennis Moritz
Tom Savage
Anne Waldman
Lewis Warsh

With music from

Legends

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, and many great books on sale at HUGE discounts.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

United Artists Books
http://www.unitedartistsbooks.com/

United Artists Books (formerly Angel Hair Books) was founded in 1967. It is one of the oldest independent publishing companies in the United States that focuses primarily on publishing books of poetry.

During the last 40 years we have published numerous books, many of which are no longer in print. Among our authors are Robert Creeley, James Schuyler, Alice Notley, David Rosenberg, Ron Padgett, Charlotte Carter, Lorenzo Thomas, Tom Clark, Ted Berrigan, Bernadette Mayer, Bill Berkson, Hannah Weiner, Anne Waldman, John Wieners, and Clark Coolidge.

Some of the artists who have contributed covers to United Artists/Angel Hair Books are Philip Guston, Joe Brainard, Donna Dennis, Alex Katz, James Rosenquist, George Schneeman, Amy Trachtenberg, Louise Hamlin, Jim Dine, Martha Diamond, Emilie Clark, Pamela Lawton, Rosemary Mayer, Sophia Warsh, and Anne Tardos.

The press has received numerous grants and awards from the National Endowment for the Arts, the New York State Council on the Arts, the Massachusetts Foundation for the Arts, and the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines. It has been our primary goal to publish poets whose works are well known and well-respected within the poetry community but unknown to a wider audience.

In an article in The Baltimore Sun a few years back, Andrei Codrescu described United Artists as a small press "on the cutting edge of American poetry for the last twenty years. The series of books by United Artists is indispensable for any library collection or anyone interested in the future of poetry."

Boog City's Classic Albums Live presents

A 40th Birthday Celebration for Kurt Cobain

Tues. Feb. 20, 7:00 p.m., $8

Cakeshop
152 Ludlow St.
NYC

With all three Nirvana studio albums

--Bleach, Nevermind, and In Utero-- performed live by

Daouets
The Domestics
The Marianne Pillsburys
The Olga Gogolas
Renminbi
Schwervon
The Sparrows
The Tet Offensive
The Trouble Dolls

Genan Zilkha
and more

Hosted by Boog City editor and publisher David Kirschenbaum

Directions: F/V to Second Ave.; F to Delancey St.; J/M/Z to Essex St. Venue is between Stanton and Rivington streets.

For further information: 212-842-BOOG(2664), [redacted], [redacted], or http://www.cake-shop.com/

*Daouets
http://www.myspace.com/daouets
*The Domestics
http://www.thedomestics.com/
*The Marianne Pillsburys
http://www.mariannepillsbury.com/
*Renminbi
http://www.renminbinyc.com/
http://www.myspace.com/renminbi
*Schwervon! Has Hot Pants
http://www.olivejuicemusic.com/schwervon.html
http://www.myspace.com/schwervon
*The Sparrows
http://myspace.com/rachelandrew
*The Trouble Dolls
http://www.troubledolls.net/
*Genan Zilkha
http://www.myspace.com/genanisfabulous

---

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press
(remaining 2006-07 schedule, readers and musical acts to be named)

March 1, 2007
Ecopoetics
(Lewiston, ME)
Jonathan Skinner, editor
www.ecopoetics.org

April 12, 2007
Corollary Press
(Philadelphia, PA)
Juliette Lee, editor
www.corollarypress.blogspot.com

May 3, 2007
Fewer & Further Press
(Wendell, Mass.)
Jess Mynes, editor
www.fewfurpress.blogspot.com

Anchorite Editions
(Albany, N.Y.)
Chris Rizzo, editor
www.anchoritepress.blogspot.com

June 7, 2007
New American Writing
(Mill Valley Calif.)
Maxine Chernoff and Paul Hoover, editors http://www.newamericanwriting.com/

July 12, 2007
Outside Voices
(Charlottesville, VA)
Jessica Smith, editor
http://www.outsidevoices.org/

Boog City Classic Album Shows 2007
(musical acts and poets to be named)

--April, Date and Venue TBA

Fleetwood Mac, Rumours, 30th anniversary

--Fri. June 1, 7:00 p.m.

The Beatles, Sgt. Pepper¹s Lonely Hearts Club Band at 40

The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery, @1st St.
[redacted]
www.bowerypoetry.com

--August, Date and Venue TBA

Lou Reed, New York

--Sun. November 11, 8:00 p.m.

Less Than Zero film 20th Anniversary

Film screened, soundtrack performed live, book excerpts read

The Bowery Poetry Club

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://boogcityevents.blogspot.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

28. mIEKAL aND a bit of Bern Porter ephemera
Tue 2 Jan 2007

This showed up on youtube a while back. Appears to be the inauguration of an art center in Zurich which references the ideas of Bern Porter. The video starts out slow but it was more than a bit eerie to hear my 1988 recording of Bern reading Last Acts of Saint Fuck You inserted into their opening presentation.

Founding Porter-House Zurich 9.9.2006

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GV3KV1-ZPl4

~mIEKAL

↑ Index

29. Ruth Lepson
Re: New Work - New Year
Tue 2 Jan 2007

---

good combo & listening--thank you

On 1/2/07 3:51 PM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:

> MiPOesias 2007 (http://www.mipoesias.com/) presents:
>
> LAURA MULLEN
> CAROLINE BERGVALL
> COLE SWENSEN
> RAE ARMANTROUT
> JENNIFER L. KNOX
> LEIGH STEIN
> WILLIAM STOBB
> MICHAEL PARKER
> AARON ANSTETT

> BRUCE COVEY
> P.F. POTVIN
> MATT HENRIKSEN
> CYNTHIA ARRIEU-KING
> RACHEL ZOLF
> ELLEN KENNEDY
> EDMUND BERRIGAN
> RUFO QUINTAVALLE
>
> http://www.mipoesias.com/
>
> POETRY ARCHIVES - http://www.mipoesias.com/Poetry/
>
> _____
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

30. Ruth Lepson

Re: a bit of Bern Porter ephemera

Tue 2 Jan 2007

terrific--slow down & breathe time, see letters in the night sky

On 1/2/07 4:41 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:

> This showed up on youtube a while back. Appears to be the inauguration of an art center in Zurich which references the ideas of Bern Porter. The video starts out slow but it was more than a bit eerie to hear my 1988 recording of Bern reading Last Acts of Saint Fuck You inserted into their opening presentation.
>
> Founding Porter-House Zurich 9.9.2006
>
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GV3KV1-ZPl4
>
> ~mIEKAL

↑ Index

31. cralan kelder

Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience

Tue 2 Jan 2007

Yes, granted, selling out is bad thing, is inauthentic, is disingenuous somehow is trying to sell you something, the beauty of poetry being that nobody is trying to sell you anything.

However that begs the question, should poetry not make you want to ³buy² it?

I Hope that appreciation from normal citizens versus the academic side of poetry is not mutually exclusive.

The question remains what obligation any poet has to an audience;

to entertain
to be accessible to meet the audience

and if any of these things are true, why do many poets pointedly practice none of the above?

i suppose its also interesting to extend the audience from the physical performance or reading space to being off the written page, and ask what a writer owes a reader.

yon thoughts?

On 1/1/07 2:26 PM, "Charlie Rossiter" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Well it's January 1 -- a fine time for idealism.
>
> I'm inclined to think that the biggest way to sell out is to not be true to your self. (I warned you)
>
> That is to say, if you're dumbing down poems to get applause/laughter/whatever from a mass audience, that's one way of selling out. On the other hand, if you're a straight ahead poet who is really driven to write the kind of poems that a lot of normal citizens enjoy but you crave recognition from the more academic side of the poetry world, you just might sell out by going experimental and sucking up to that crowd.
>
> Happy New Year. Keep those poems flowing.
>
> Charlie

an interesting question to me is about ³selling out². Don¹t poets have an obligation to their audience, in terms of accessibility, for example. Why do so many poets seem to punish their audience? If a poet notices that a certain line, phrase, subject, etc, elicits more appreciation, is it selling out to react, as an artist, to that knowledge?

Given the thread earlier about the suspicion that most people who read poetry are poets; when performing at least poets can reach a wider audience.

The question is,
What obligation does a poet have to an audience?

On 12/25/06 4:16 PM, "Haas Bianchi" <[redacted]> wrote:

> It is a travesty that experimental poetry has retreated into a niche and is not read for fully. This is mostly the fault of experimental poets because of the publishing structure that exists they do not need to seek audience because sales do not determine publication- selling out? Who was a bigger sell out? Stein, Pound? Or Creeley? Poets need to survive how they do it is not our concern what matters is that they create good and great poems and challenge the existing structure/
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of heidi arnold
> Sent: Wednesday, December 13, 2006 2:44 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject:
>
> angela --
>
> first, a nod to your high horse -- hang on to it
>
> -- in answer to your question -- "what do you mean by 'selling out'"
>
> -- who was it that called clinton a panderbear?
>
> -- to write as a service of stenography for individuals who want their own style and views expressed in contemporary poetry in order to gratify their

egos and wallets is selling out -- to allow corporate interests or upper class cliques to treat poets as stenographers -- when they can't find a mirror handy -- is selling out -- to allow these same corporate interests to leech off your entire poetic network because they find it entertaining -- is selling out -- to write to please the status quo -- is selling out -- to write to make fat-assed exploiters of the arts community happy with their masturbatory inner lives is selling out -- and so on

-- i am sure that everyone else could add to this list which is my infuriated hungover take on the issue at the moment

--over to you,

heidi

On 12/13/06, angela vasquez-giroux <[redacted]> wrote:

heidi, what exactly do you mean by "selling out"?

i think the concern that the only audience for poetry anymore (in the US) is poets and our close relations/friends, is legitimate and quite frankly pressing.

i wish more non-poets would read. or more people who think they're poets would read, instead of just stating that their newest work is a perfect poem b/c they wrote it / say so.

poetry is inclusive in terms of making it available to anyone who wants to read, enjoy, etc. i don't believe that means everyone should be writing poetry. but they all should be reading it.

(on my high horse)
angela

On 12/13/06, heidi arnold <[redacted]> wrote:

*-- that entire "non-poets who read poetry" thread has a lovely "we're selling out" scent if you ask me -- did someone get paid to start it, or what?

-- my blog is updated at www.peaceraptor.blogspot.com

-- back to work

cheers,

heidi

> --
> www.heidiarnold.org
> http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/
>
> --
> http://mother-of-light.blogspot.com
>
> --
> www.heidiarnold.org
> http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

32. Alison Croggon

Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience

Tue 2 Jan 2007

"Selling out" is a bit bizarre to think of in the context of poetry. A little precious, perhaps? Who's buying?

> The question is,
> What obligation does a poet have to an audience?

None, I'd say. But a great obligation to the art of poetry.

All best

A

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

33. Sina Queyras

Re: New Work - New Year

Tue 2 Jan 2007

great lineup ms. king.

happy new year to you.

Sina

> MiPOesias 2007 (http://www.mipoesias.com/) presents:
>
> LAURA MULLEN
> CAROLINE BERGVALL
> COLE SWENSEN
> RAE ARMANTROUT
> JENNIFER L. KNOX
> LEIGH STEIN
> WILLIAM STOBB
> MICHAEL PARKER
> AARON ANSTETT
> BRUCE COVEY
> P.F. POTVIN
> MATT HENRIKSEN
> CYNTHIA ARRIEU-KING
> RACHEL ZOLF
> ELLEN KENNEDY
> EDMUND BERRIGAN
> RUFO QUINTAVALLE
>
> http://www.mipoesias.com/
>
> POETRY ARCHIVES - http://www.mipoesias.com/Poetry/
>
> _____
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> http://mail.yahoo.com

--
Sina Queyras
Visiting Assistant Professor
Department of English
Woodside Cottage
Haverford College
370 Lancaster Avenue
Haverford, PA 19041-1392
[redacted]

↑ Index

34. L Guevarra

NEW BOOK: The Poem of the Cid

Tue 2 Jan 2007

Dear Buffalo Poetics List:

The University of California Press is pleased to announce the publication of:

The Poem of the Cid

<B>Lesley Byrd Simpson </B>was a renowned translator of many great works of Spanish literature. His translations of _The Celestina _and _The Poem of the Cid _(both UC Press books) in particular preserve the vigor and colloquial flavor of the original.

http://go.ucpress.edu/Simpson

Students of Spanish literature have long been familiar with this eight-hundred-year-old epic detailing the legendary exploits of the soldier-adventurer Ruy Díaz of Bivar, El Cid, and of his part in the long struggle between Christianity and Islam. The epic poem recounts the adventures of the Cid; of his peerless steed, Babieca, and of his two famous swords, Colada and Tizón; of his wife, Doña Ximena, and his two daughters, Doña Elvira and Doña Sol, who found sanctuary with Abbot Don Sancho in the monastery of San Pedro de Cardeña during the Cid's exile; and of the despicable and black-hearted princes of Carrión, Diego and Fernando González.

Full information about the bookis available online: http://go.ucpress.edu/Simpson

--
Lolita Guevarra
Electronic Marketing Coordinator
University of California Press
Tel. [redacted] | Fax [redacted]
[redacted]

↑ Index

35. Nick Carbo

Poetry workshops in the south of France this summer! C'est magnifique!

Tue 2 Jan 2007

Consider writing poetry in France this summer!
Pls. pass on to interested writing friends, students, cousins, or colleagues.

AUVILLAR WRITERS' WORKSHOPS

Poetry workshops in the South of France

The VCCA is pleased to offer workshops for poets at our beautiful new facility in Auvillar, a tiny unspoiled village in the south of France located between Toulouse and Bordeaux, three hours north of Barcelona. Led by award-winning poets, these workshops are geared toward all levels of writers, will feature much individual attention, and will draw upon the charm and beauty of this quaint village.

POETRY WORKSHOP WITH DENISE DUHAMEL & NICK CARBÃ“, June 21-27, 2007

This intensive workshop provides both group and individual sessions and a combination of discussion, writing prompts and workshop.

The cost of each workshop is $2195 and includes accommodations at a charming local hotel, all meals, introductions to the region and walking tours of Auvillar.

Application deadline is May 1, 2007. Early bird registration deadline is February 1. Scholarships available, deadline: March 1.

To apply, submit a completed application (http://www.vcca.com/Registration07.pdf) and, if available, a writing sample, to: VCCA France, 154 San Angelo Drive, Amherst, VA 24521.

A stopover on the pilgrimage to Santiago de Compostela in Spain, Auvillar has a well-earned tradition of hospitality. Designated as one of France's "100 Most Beautiful Villages," Auvillar is set on the broad green Garonne River, with clearly visible remnants of ancient hilltop fortifications, monuments that go back centuries, nearby medieval cathedrals and museums to explore. The weekly farmer's market is a highlight, and there are also a butcher shop, bakery, pharmacy, tabac, post office and public email access, plus six eateries, ranging from a pizzeria to a four-star restaurant. The region is noted for medieval villages, FaÃ¯ence pottery, troubadour singing, cassoulet, foie gras, strawberries, exquisite wines and tantalizing cheeses. ---------- Sample daily schedule:

8 AM: Petit dejeuner of croissants and cafÃ© in the Moulin a Nef courtyard.

9 AM-Noon: Lecture and workshops.

12:30-1:30PM: Buffet lunch.

1:30-6:30PM: Individual conferences, private writing time, and/or excursions to sample the art and culture of the French countryside.

7:30PM: Dinner on the terrace of the Hotel de l'Horloge, readings by workshop participants, instructors, and visiting writers.

Come experience an unforgettable poetry writing summer. Travel expenses to Auvillar are the responsibility of participant. Places are limited so please consider applying early by February 1 and take advantage of the early bird discount.

Thank you and merci beaucoup!

Nick Carbo
http://www.npr.org/features/feature.php?wfId=1667164
http://www.cherry-grove.com/carbo.html

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

36. Joanna Fuhrman

Reading at the Poetry Project: Shapiro & Fuhrman

Tue 2 Jan 2007

Joanna Fuhrman & David Shapiro Wednesday, 8:00 pm January 3rd, 2007The reading is also a party for David's 60th birthday. Hope to see you there.Joanna Fuhrman is the author of three books of poetrypublished by Hanging Loose Press, Freud in Brooklyn (2000), UghUgh Ocean (2003) and Moraine (2006). She has an essay forthcomingin Burning Interiors: The Poetry and Poetics of David Shapiro(Fairleigh Dickinson University Press.) Recent poems have appeared in Conduit,American Letters and Commentary and Traffic. David Shapiro was born January 2 in 1947 and was a violinist in his youth.He published his first book January in l965. He has published thirty books ofpoetry and criticism, including the first book on John Ashbery, the firstvolume on Jasper Johns' drawings, and the first book on Mondrian's flowerstudies. He wrote the political play Harrisburg Mon Amour with S.Miller and produced at The Kitchen with music by Laurie Anderson. He has alsotaught at Cooper Union the last 25 years and his monument for Jan Palach withJohn Hejduk was dedicated at the Castle in Prague by then President VaclavHavel. His New and Selected Poems is forthcoming from Overlook Press.He co-edited the Anthology of New York Poets with Ron Padgett. Herecently wrote Rabbit/Duck with Richard Hell. With Bill Beckley he editedthe controversial anthology, Uncontrollable Beauty. His movies withRudy Burckhardt include Mobile Homes, Dandelions and Great RegularFlavor.All events are $8, $7 for students and seniors, $5 for membersand begin at 8pm unless otherwise noted. The Poetry Project is wheelchairaccessible with assistance and advance notice. Schedule subject to change. ThePoetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church at the corner of 2nd Ave and10th St in Manhattan.Call [redacted] for more information..

_____
Join Excite! - http://www.excite.com
The most personalized portal on the Web!

↑ Index

37. Ricejunk2
Re: Ghosts in the Machine
Tue 2 Jan 2007

Re: Ghosts in the machine...

Has anyone read Specimen Days, by Michael Cunningham. It may not be "poetry", to those who choose to strictly define a sculpture of words, but it is very good fiction... and sort of about poetry! Quite demanding of the reader's attentions, this is not your ordinary cookie-cutter fiction! Quoting Whitman throughout, the book is divided into three stories, of which I have only read two so far... I am taking my time reading this one. Here is a better explanation of this book, taken from a review by New York Magazine. Would be a great discussion piece, if anyone has read it!? Yes? No? --T.F. Rice ---------- In his new book?a trio of linked novellas titled Specimen Days?Cunningham quotes Walt Whitman as amply as he once quoted Woolf. Although the relationship has the same near-death intensity, the chemistry is different. It isn?t clear that Cunningham likes Whitman, for one thing. The three novellas?a ghost story, a neo-noir tale, and a turn at science fiction?feel rather like attempts at exorcism. When characters quote the poet, they?re displaying not an affinity but a symptom. A self-destructive boy blurts out lines of Whitman?s verse as if they were the expletives of a Tourette?s patient or the calculations of an autistic. Terrorists cite Leaves of Grass to justify suicide bombings. A robot with runaway emotionality is irritated by an implanted poetry chip, which causes him to say, ?

I understand the large hearts of heroes, the courage of present times and all times,? to a surveillance drone considering whether to zap him into molten titanium and gobbets of artificial flesh.

Put Whitman?s lyric ideas into a novel, and you get a disquieting plot: Romantic freedom leads to nothing but death. Because people tend to read narratives as if the ending were the moral of the story, a defender of romantic freedom might be tempted to force a happy ending?to sentimentalize mere death. In such lines of Whitman?s as ?to die is different from what anyone supposed, and luckier,? D. H. Lawrence heard a hint that the surrender of self at life?s end might qualify as a kind of salvation. ?Post-mortem effects,? Lawrence called such thinking. He loathed it.

In Specimen Days, Cunningham seems to be trying to work through those effects. He quotes Whitman?s line about the luckiness of death several times. Like its predecessors, the new book ends with a corpse. The innovation is that it also starts with one. ?Walt said that the dead turned into grass,? says 12-year-old Lucas, who has just lost his older brother to an industrial accident, ?but there was no grass where they?d buried Simon.? Lucas lives in 1870s New York, and he fears that the dawning machine age has made Whitman?s wishful thinking about death come horribly true. What if Simon?s soul lives on in the machines that mangled him, and he wants to steal away his still-living fiancée, Catherine?

Read the entire review at: http://nymag.com/nymetro/arts/books/reviews/11940/
I am sure there are a lot of other reviews/discussions out there...

Quoting David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>:

> This page was sent to you by: [redacted].
>
> Mary Baker Eddy has a telphone in her vault in the Mt Auburn Cemetery in Cambdirge, MA USA-- the number is public when i lived in Boston--and for two years by back entrance o Mt Auburn-- i used to give her a call now and then no one ever answered-- i used to wonder if she screened her calls--
>
> OPINION | December 30, 2006
> Op-Ed Contributor: Ghosts in the Machine
> By DEBORAH BLUM
> When scientists wrote in a recent issue of the journal Nature that they could induce phantom effects — the sensation of being haunted by a shadowy figure — by stimulating the brain with electricity, it made perfect neurological sense.

> http://www.nytimes.com/2006/12/30/opinion/30blum.html?ex=1168146000&en=b620974da8e39050&ei=5070&emc=eta1
>
> ---
>
> ABOUT THIS E-MAIL
> This e-mail was sent to you by a friend through NYTimes.com's E-mail This Article service. For general information about NYTimes.com, write to [redacted].
>
> NYTimes.com 500 Seventh Avenue New York, NY 10018
>
> Copyright 2006 The New York Times Company

↑ Index

38. Joe Amato
Re: Ghosts in the Machine
Tue 2 Jan 2007

Re the following part of that review of Cunningham's Specimen Days:

> In such lines of Whitman?s as ?to die is different from what anyone supposed, and luckier,? D. H. Lawrence heard a hint that the surrender of self at life?s end might qualify as a kind of salvation. ?Post-mortem effects,? Lawrence called such thinking. He loathed it.

This strikes me as close to entirely wrong. E.g., here is Lawrence on Whitman and death, Chapter 12 of Studies in Classic American Literature:

"Whitman would not have been the great poet he is if he had not taken the last steps and looked over into death. Death, the last merging, that was the goal of his manhood."

And here is Lawrence on what he meant by "post-mortem effects" (Chapter 11):

"If the Great White Whale sank the ship of the Great White Soul in 1851, what's been happening ever since?

"Post-mortem effects, presumably."

Seems to me that reviewer is playing it too fast & too loose. But it is interesting to hear about Cunningham's book.

Best,

Joe

↑ Index

39. Alan Sondheim
Muck and Spurt Sutras up and running
Wed 3 Jan 2007

Muck and Spurt Sutras up and running

What about muck? Viscious, curled like tar around things, decayed, fecal, or a mess, mussed, massed, mossed... Goo, gooey, thickened, greased oily, sludged, crawled, scrammed, digitally reconstructed, interpreted, cooled down, warmed, swollen, roiling, spoiled, spilled, mashed, mushed, rastered, filtered, sloughed, spewed, numbered, festered, hot

Muck Sutra full version http://www.asondheim.org/muck.mp4
YouTube version running http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5lQB5r_mcXY

Spurt Sutra finally up http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=O9RYuc7Un0I and running new stuff at http://www.asondheim.org/biog.txt

↑ Index

40. Jesse Glass
The Sayings of My Dying Father
Wed 3 Jan 2007

The Sayings of My Dying Father

1.
Thems was good times we had way back then, now warn$BCU(B they?

2.
I used to work from sun-up to sun-down. Boys, nobody could outwork me in Carroll County and you all knowed it.
And none of you could.

3.
Boys, get me up out of this bed and let me go to the woods one more time.

4.
You know I held my dad$BCT(B hand when he died. He was mean to me most all my [life,
but it$BCT(B important to help things along, I guess.

5.
I ain$BCU(B saying yes or no about that. But if I don$BCU(B say nothing, then you know you$BCS(Be maybe correct.

6.
It$BCT(B the end times coming. The world$BCT(B getting crazier every day, I tell you all.

7.
Since they sent those men to the moon, Nature$BCT(B knocked out of whack and everything$BCT(B got messed up.
Look at the weather. Look at the price of gas.

8.
You boys. I love all you boys.

9.
All you can do is keep looking ahead. Don$BCU(B look back. Just keep looking ahead.

10.
This stuff won$BCU(B let me rest. Everything goes through me like coffee through a stand pipe.

11.
If I could just get a little sleep...but, boys, this stuff won$BCU(B let me be.

12.
When I found out I wanted to get the hell out and move to Montana.
Get away from everybody$BCT(B craziness.

13.
Yep, those surgeons don$BCU(B have much pity for you when they get you in the butcher shop, that$BCT(B for sure.

14.
I accept jesus.

15. There might be a clinic down Mexico$BK*(B heard$BKN(Baybe could help me. U.S. Government$BCT(B against it, but they keep curing this stuff. Maybe there$BCT(B a chance.

16.
What I need$BCT(B a nurse with a short short dress and big, creamy colored [bubbies.
That$BCE(B knock this cancer outta me.

↑ Index

41. Catherine Daly
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Wed 3 Jan 2007

---

if you're vending something,
selling through, selling +out+ is great --

in poetry, that means selling / +placing+ one poem -- i.e., you put one poem one place, and you can't put it in a like place again --

that way, selling out is putting all one's poems somewhere where they can't be republished except in a -- well, is it a higher place or a place where it might get more attention -- open to debate

but anyway, sticking poems somewhere +else+

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

42. Phil Primeau
Re: The Sayings of My Dying Father
Wed 3 Jan 2007

How wonderfully provincial.

↑ Index

43. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Wed 3 Jan 2007

I think what Cralan is saying is really very important.
And these conversations, I think, tend to the dishonest. Before I continue, let me say that I mean no disrespect to anyone - certainly, and nothing's personal. No more hateful emails, or telling me about whatever portfolio you've written.

First, on Creeley: Creeley selling out is just not knowing enough about him, I wanna say - and I'm not the expert, for I think he is only - but he suffered a long time, made little money, read in some of the most obscure locations, supported a hellofalotta people, and did this for most of life. He wrote and he wrote for one reason, he thought he had something to say. Too, he spoke to real people. In wasn't until the end of his life, I think most would agree, that he really began to worry about his place.

Now, this idea of dumbing down poetry, even to use this garbled and hackneyed phrase, I think, is insulting - and really supposes the poet has something to say (or is perceptive). I mean, isn't that the question? Not just how to say it, how theatrical to sing it, but what to say - how to inform culture and, thus, do cultural work. Academic poets are the criminals to the poetry set, but the poetry set, some represented here, is certainly criminal in their delusion of poetry mattering - in their delusion that their audience is more than groupies or hangers-on, young poets wanting to be poets, people drawn to the glam of poetry's hyper-synthetic scene. Ok, the hate mail. But I've read in NYC, Prague, Beijing, college campuses - lots of places...and it's usually the same.

Poetry matters, I think, not because of me, but rather because it has something to do, is an offshoot of a need. This is all so silly. I mean, go to your street corner and talk to those folk you see and convince them poetry isn't archaic - and is still being written. Read some of the online work about sitting at a cafe, or some self-indulgent tripe. I really do think that one thing about the internet is that many of us are allowed to actually believe we are important - maybe because we get listed in google as many times as Frogsex.com

And this is the from, I submit, that younger poets are gonna be constrained by - till poetry, and maybe its that way now, is like most of the pop music we listen to for a week or month - throw-away.

Just a thought.

AJ

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

44. David-Baptiste Chirot

Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience/(mla off site--)

Wed 3 Jan 2007

One of those hilarious moments of serendipidity-- this question of audience arises just as the photos of MLA off site reading are going up-- i liked what alison croggan wrote, that the obligation is to poetry-- for me it's a form of thanks for being present in the presence of the present-- which doesn't require any audience other than the material one is working with--and whatevr is all around one--animal vegetable mineral general junk and debris etc -- and since work outside on rubBEings and clay impression spray paintings--audience is also passersby--through time about every sort of person--stops and watches, talks--including the occaisional police, security guard, property owner--(one recently tried to tackle me thinking i was attaching explosive device to "his" crane, when was making clay impression of letterings on the huge tires--doesn't help to wear black clothes with black hooded sweatshirt and running shoes!--)--who also take an interest and ask questions--

the "audience" is literally "the person on the street"--which makes it a lot more interesting for all concerned as always the unexpected-- "I do not seek, I find"--so sayeth sr picasso--passersby & work find each other--i get to be in the audience, too-- a chance meeting at any time and place--no set time and place and audience for poetry--but anytime anywhere anyone--

(and since there are no placards announcing any event, one can oneself be anybody--unless asked to produce "proof of identity" which narrows it down to one name--for the moment--and then when that passerby passes by, one can return to being anybody--)

> From: Catherine Daly <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
> Date: Tue, 2 Jan 2007 21:40:27 -0800
>
> if you're vending something,

> selling through, selling +out+ is great --
>
> in poetry, that means selling / +placing+ one poem -- i.e., you put one poem one place, and you can't put it in a like place again --
>
> that way, selling out is putting all one's poems somewhere where they can't be republished except in a -- well, is it a higher place or a place where it might get more attention -- open to debate
>
> but anyway, sticking poems somewhere +else+
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

_____ Type your favorite song. Get a customized station. Try MSN Radio powered by Pandora.
http://radio.msn.com/?icid=T002MSN03A07001

↑ Index

45. Tony Trigilio

[job] Asst. Programs Director, Creative Writing--Poetry and Literature

Wed 3 Jan 2007

The English Department at Columbia College Chicago is seeking an Assistant Programs Director for its Creative Writing--Poetry (B.A. and M.F.A.) and Literature Programs. This is an academic staff position that includes teaching one class per year in Literature and/or Creative Writing--Poetry. More information below.

Best,
Tony
****

ASSISTANT PROGRAMS DIRECTOR

Columbia College Chicago is an urban institution of over 11,500 undergraduate & graduate students, emphasizing arts, media, & communications in a liberal arts setting.

The Assistant Programs Director is a high-level departmental administrative support position serving the Creative Writing-Poetry & Literature programs.

The position requires sound decision-making, organizational, & supervisory skills. Responsibilities include teaching one class per year in Literature &/or Poetry; acting as the primary liaison between Creative Writing-Poetry &

Literature programs; hiring, evaluating, and developing part-time faculty; & managing communications for marketing/promotion. Will also support the Directors with day-to-day operations of the programs, including scheduling classes, events & meetings as well as preparing the budget. The successful candidate will possess college-level teaching exp. with an interest in &/or prior academic administrative exp. with the Humanities/Arts. A Ph.D. is preferred.

Columbia College Chicago encourages qualified female, GLBT, disabled, international & minority classified individuals to apply for all positions. No phone calls, please. We offer a competitive salary & an excellent benefits package. For consideration, please submit a resume and a cover letter to:

Kenneth Daley,
Chair Department of English
Columbia College Chicago
Assistant Programs Director Search
600 S. Michigan Avenue
Chicago, IL 60605

Review of applications begins immediately and will continue until position is filled.

↑ Index

46. Ron Silliman

New Anne Tardos-Jackson Mac Low CD

Wed 3 Jan 2007

Anne Tardos asked me to post this info of her new CD of a 1999 recording she made with the late Jackson Mac Low:

New site for new CD, with LISTEN:
http://xtina.org/tarmac.htm

Anne Tardos
42 N. Moore St.
New York, NY 10013
www.annetardos.com
[redacted]

↑ Index

47. Bill Marsh
New from Factory School
Wed 3 Jan 2007

Pleased in the extreme to announce:

THE ADVENTUROUS
by Kass Fleisher

83 pages, perfect bound
ISBN 1-60001-000-8
available for $12 through Small Press Distribution:

http://www.spdbooks.org/

THE ADVENTUROUS is the latest offering in the PS3577 series at Factory School. For a complete listing of current and pending FS titles in this and other series, please visit:

http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/

Carla Harryman writes:

The Adventurous is a breakaway satire that behaves like a free being on a raging escapade. Funny, base, brainy, and big, its multi-pitched prose is a self-unsparing and timely assault on stupidity produced by normalizing regimes and the repressive gender systems we intellectuals like to pretend only exist someplace else.

For more info, contact:
info at factoryschool dot org

↑ Index

48. David Applegate
"PIG" now available from Bad Noise Productions
Wed 3 Jan 2007

Dear Buffalo Poetics Listserv,

Bad Noise Productions would like to offer you a free excursion into a realm where language meets bizarre digital collage; the world of "PIG."

"PIG" is available in .PDF format now at www.badnoiseproductions.com *-Enjoy.

Best wishes for a blown-out '07,

David Applegate

↑ Index

49. Stephen Vincent
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience/(mla off site--)
Wed 3 Jan 2007

> and since work outside on rubBEings and clay impression spray paintings--audience is also passersby--through time about every sort of person--stops and watches, talks--including the occaisional police, security guard, property owner--(one recently tried to tackle me thinking i was attaching explosive device to "his" crane, when was making clay impression of letterings on the huge tires--doesn't help to wear black clothes with black hooded sweatshirt and running shoes!--)--who also take an interest and ask questions--

If you try to take a picture in the immediate vicinity of the Bechtel building in San Francisco, the security guard stops you, even if - as I was once - taking a photograph of the building rising from the public plaza between the buildings. Turning the situation around, I asked the security guard if I could take his picture. He was a little taken aback by my kind attention. But refused by saying that he did not like think he looked 'good enough' to be photographed that particular gray morning. Alternatively, he did not also say that his body was a security site that also needed to be protected from cameras and 'suspicious' documentation - it was Bechtel, the building that was his calling. I honored his personal request not 'to shoot' him.

And what an ugly dark building! I think they have since moved the headquarters to a safe non-City site somewhere.

Parenthetically I wonder how the Gerald Ford family feels about having two war criminals (Cheney, Rumsfeld) as honorary pall bearers. Trying to resurrect their careers via a casket!! Wow. Let's hope - minimally - they get the Pinochet treatment for the rest of their lives.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
Where currently is an account of The Soundeye Poetry Festival
Cork, July 6 - 9/.

↑ Index

50. Fulcrum Annual Fulcrum Marathon Jan 10
Wed 3 Jan 2007

FULCRUM MARATHON POETRY READING
WHEN: Wednesday Jan 10 at 5:30 p.m.
WHERE: Lame Duck Books, 12 Arrow Street, Harvard Square (landmark: Cafe Pamplona)

WHO: David Blair, Lisa Goldfarb, Joan Houlihan, George Kalogeris, Katia Kapovich, X J Kennedy, Ben Mazer, Andy McCord, John Mulrooney, Philip Nikolayev, Benjamin Paloff, Jacquelyn Pope, Don Share, Mark Schorr, Ellen Steinbaum, Stephen Sturgeon, Ellen Wehle & others
HOW: Free, reception to follow, all friends are welcome!
SPONSORED by Fulcrum and Lame Duck Books
(http://www.lameduckbooks.com/)
QUERIES: [redacted]

(NB Fulcrum contributors! If you are a contributor to any of Fulcrum's issues 1-5 but haven't yet responded to our previous invitation, we may still be able to include you in this reading if you reply right away and confirm you intention to participate. If you did respond positively but are not on the above list, please let us know too.)

~~~
~~~

2.
I used to work from sun-up to sun-down. Boys, nobody could outwork me in Carroll County and you all knowed it.
And none of you could.

3.
Boys, get me up out of this bed and let me go to the woods one more time.

4.
You know I held my dad$BCT(B hand when he died. He was mean to me most all
my [life,
but it$BCT(B important to help things along, I guess.

5.
I ain$BCU(B saying yes or no about that. But if I don$BCU(B say nothing, then you know you$BCS(Be maybe correct.

6.
It$BCT(B the end times coming. The world$BCT(B getting crazier every day, I tell you all.

7.
Since they sent those men to the moon, Nature$BCT(B knocked out of whack and everything$BCT(B got messed up.
Look at the weather. Look at the price of gas.

8.
You boys. I love all you boys.

9.
All you can do is keep looking ahead. Don$BCU(B look back. Just keep looking ahead.

10.
This stuff won$BCU(B let me rest. Everything goes through me like coffee through a stand pipe.

11.
If I could just get a little sleep...but, boys, this stuff won$BCU(B let me be.

12.
When I found out I wanted to get the hell out and move to Montana.
Get away from everybody$BCT(B craziness.

13.
Yep, those surgeons don$BCU(B have much pity for you when they get you in the butcher shop, that$BCT(B for sure.

14.
I accept jesus.

15. There might be a clinic down Mexico$BK*(B heard$BKN(Baybe could help me. U.S. Government$BCT(B against it, but they keep curing this stuff. Maybe there$BCT(B a chance.

16.
What I need$BCT(B a nurse with a short short dress and big, creamy colored [bubbies.
That$BCE(B knock this cancer outta me.

↑ Index

52. ALDON L NIELSEN
Part Two of MLA Group Reading Photos
Wed 3 Jan 2007

More photos of the poets are now up:

http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

<<

on authorial voice
(a response to "Voices in Denial: Poetry and Post-Culture" by A. C. Evans) permanent link <http://heuriskein.blogspot.com/2007/01/on-authorial-voice.html>

enjoy,
tom orange

↑ Index

54. j. kuszai
Tillie Olsen dies at 94
Wed 3 Jan 2007

Here is the NY Times obit:

http://www.nytimes.com/2007/01/03/books/03olsen.html

↑ Index

55. C. A. Conrad
PhillySound Feature, Issue #5: Suzanne Stein
Wed 3 Jan 2007

PhillySound Feature, Issue #5: Suzanne Stein

PhillySound Feature is an occasional blog-zine which focuses on the work of a single poet. Members of our blog collective alternate editing issues and choosing poets to feature.

Issue #5 is dedicated to the very fine work of poet SUZANNE STEIN.
Click here:
_http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2006_12_01_phillysound_archive.html_
(http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2006_12_01_phillysound_archive.html)
Please enjoy,
CAConrad,
editor of Issue #5
(http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2006_12_01_phillysound_archive.html)

↑ Index

56. Dodie Bellamy
Writing Experiments Workshop in San Francisco
Wed 3 Jan 2007

Writing Experiments Workshop
Dodie Bellamy

Due to the success of fall's writing experiments workshop I'm offering a slightly shorter version of the workshop this spring. The class will meet 8 Tuesday evenings, from 7 to 10 p.m. The dates: January 30 through April 3 (no class Feb. 13 and March 20). Cost: $300, with a $100 deposit due by January 24.

Most weeks students will be assigned a short take-home writing experiment which they will share with the class the following week. Assignments will range from cut ups to exploring bodily sensations. Each week we will also critique longer pieces by two to five students. Students may bring in anything they want (up to 20 pages) for the longer critiques. Depending on the length, these longer pieces will be read aloud in class or handed out a week ahead of time. Though this class will have a prose focus, it is cross-genre, and poets are welcome. The class is limited to 9 students. Lots and lots of personal attention. It takes place in San Francisco, in my South of Market apartment, which comes complete with snacks and two cats.

This is a good class for poets wanting to play around with narrative or prose writers wanting to open up their prose. It will be the last workshop I'll be doing for a while.

Pink Steam, my collection of fiction, memoir, and memoiresque essays, was published in 2004 by San Francisco's Suspect Thoughts Press. My vampire novel, The Letters of Mina Harker was reprinted by University of Wisconsin Press, also in 2004. Academonia, a book of essays, is just out from Krupskaya, and is available at Small Press Distribution:

<http://www.spdbooks.org/Details.asp?BookID=1928650252>

I'm the author of 3 other books and I teach creative writing at SF State and in the MFA program at Antioch Los Angeles. I've also taught at CalArts, Naropa summer session, Mills, USF, UC Santa Cruz, and the SF Art Institute. I've received the Bay Guardian Goldie Award for Literature and the Firecracker Alternative Book Award for Poetry.

If you're interested, please email about work samples, etc. Or--if you know anybody who might be interested, please pass this email along to them. If you're interested do contact me promptly. Preference given to those not currently enrolled in a grad writing program. I'm going out of town for a few days so I may not get back to you until after January 11.

↑ Index

57. Jeffrey Side

A Response to Neil Astley's, 'Give Poetry Back to People' by Douglas Messerli

Wed 3 Jan 2007

A Response to Neil Astley's, 'Give Poetry Back to People' by Douglas Messerli

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Messerli%20essay.htm

↑ Index

58. Dr. Barry S. Alpert

True Story of a Winning Strategy for an NEA Fellowship in Poetry

Wed 3 Jan 2007

---

http://www.washingtoncitypaper.com/display.php?id=399#400&navEdit

Scroll down to the second essay, "The Verse Interests" by Sarah Godfrey.

Barry Alpert

_____ Dave vs. Carl: The Insignificant Championship Series. Who will win? http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwsp0070000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://davevscarl.spaces.live.com/?icid=T001MSN38C07001

↑ Index

59. ALDON L NIELSEN

there's money in form!

Wed 3 Jan 2007

Barry Alpert sent me this item from the Washington D.C. CITY PAPER -- The kicker comes in paragraph four, where we learn what turned the trick with the Dana Gioia NEA -- The Verse InterestsBooksBy Sarah Godfrey

When John Smith received a late-morning phone call at work from National Endowment for the Arts chair Dana Gioia, it didn’t take him long to realize what it was in regard to. “As soon as [Gioia] identified himself, I figured what it was,” says Smith, 43.

The news, however, would take a little longer to set in. Gioia rang Smith up at his day job at the Inter-American Development Bank, where he serves as an editor, to tell him he’d just won a huge honor in his other profession—as a poet. Smith was awarded a $20,000 NEA Literature Fellowship in Poetry. “I’m still a little stunned about the whole thing,” the Southwest resident says.

Smith was one of only 50 poets nationwide to be awarded a grant and the only Washington, D.C., poet to snag a fellowship, but he hopes his gain will benefit D.C. poets other than himself. “This is not just for me—it kind of shows and hints at the amount of poetic activity that goes on in Washington,” Smith says. “There are several different scenes and some very good people—a lot of them have been very supportive [of me].”

Smith is the author of two volumes of poetry—2005’s Settling for Beauty and 1999’s The Hypothetical Landscape—and edited Northern Music: Poems About and Inspired by Glenn Gould, an anthology of writing about the Canadian musician. Smith’s poems, essays, and fiction have appeared in publications as diverse as crime-fiction Web site Thuglit.com and the self-described “modern dog culture magazine” The Bark. He’s also recently completed a children’s book slated for publication in 2008. Still, poetry “is at the center of what I do,” Smith says.

Having unsuccessfully submitted his work to the NEA twice before sending his latest application in February of this year, what finally worked for Smith was sending in a collection of formal verse rather than a sampling of his free-verse poems. After a “nerve-wracking” selection process, he decided on “a polished collection of formal verse—or at least as polished as I know how to make it—rather than include a little bit of everything,” Smith says. “I tried the eclectic manuscript before. It hadn’t worked, [so I] decided to put all of my eggs in one basket.”

Smith’s next big decision will be what to do with the unexpected windfall. For its part, NEA has helped him narrow his list of options: The grant is to be used for research, travel, and time off from one’s regular job to allow more time to write—not, say, for a down payment on a new house or paying off a car note.

“They don’t send me a check,” Smith says. “[The money] is held in an escrow account and drawn down for specific purposes—it’s taxable. It’s not really a license for irresponsibility.

<<

Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

Aldon L. Nielsen
Kelly Professor of American Literature
The Pennsylvania State University
116 Burrowes
University Park, PA 16802-6200

[redacted]

↑ Index

60. Andy Gricevich

Satirists touring the east want poets to hear!

Wed 3 Jan 2007

Hello, all!

The duo I play with, the Prince Myshkins, will make a quick sweep of NYC, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts later this month, and we'd be particularly excited if some of you poet types could make it (being poet types ourselves when we're not doing this). We write and perform satirical songs about a wide variety of topics (ranging from the "war on terror," talk radio, traffic and activist nuns to girly men, arts funding, homelessness and "free trade"). Most of the songs are funny and (hopefully) thought-provoking; we try to juxtapose issues that don't intuitively belong together in order to bring out surprising connections and possibilities. Lots of words, with elaborate internal rhyming patterns, often delivered at a ridiculous pace in tight harmonizations of melodies whose strangeness doesn't seem to prevent them from being catchy. The music (performed on guitar and accordion) is pretty wide-ranging, but when people ask we cite our major influences as Kurt Weill, Tom Lehrer and the Muppets.

We do well with poets (Rae Armantrout and Jerome Rothenberg are big west coast fans). Our credentials include airplay on "Democracy Now" and "Morning Edition;" "Sing Out" magazine says, "Anyone who aspires to write political satire should hear this brilliant duo." More stuff about us and the upcoming shows can be found at http://www.princemyshkins.com

Hope some of you can come to these concerts!

JANUARY
19--Greenfield, MA--All Souls' Unitarian Church
Jobs for Justice Benefit (w/Charlie King and Karen Brandow). 8 p.m.

20--Boston, MA--Workmen's Circle, 8 p.m.

22--NYC--Bowery Poetry Club
War Resisters League Benefit. 6-8 p.m.

23--NYC--Metropolitan Community Church of New York
(with Rick & Andy). 7:30 p.m.

25--Bethlehem, PA--Godfrey Daniels, 7:30 p.m.

all the best,

Andy Gricevich
http://princemyshkins.com
http://ndgwriting.blogspot.com

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

61. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: True Story of a Winning Strategy for an NEA Fellowship in Poetry
Wed 3 Jan 2007

I have one question. Isn't writing innovative poetry a formal strategy?

Happy new year to all.

Murat

On 1/3/07, Dr. Barry S. Alpert <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> http://www.washingtoncitypaper.com/display.php?id=399#400&navEdit
>
>
> Scroll down to the second essay, "The Verse Interests" by Sarah Godfrey.
>
>
>
> Barry Alpert
>
> _____
> Dave vs. Carl: The Insignificant Championship Series. Who will win?
>
> http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwsp0070000001msn/direct/01/?

href=http://davevscarl.spaces.live.com/?icid=T001MSN38C07001
>

↑ Index

62. Alan Sondheim
my life collapsed
Wed 3 Jan 2007

---

my life collapsed

1942 how was i possible when 1943 did not ask to be born there no atomic hydrogen bomb television still prenetwork computers were partial dreams the idea of distributed community inconceivable world iron and nightmare are early screen memories being carried on a medical gurney past rows medication bottles lighting fluorescent nurse pushing cart remember everything from position behind her walls tiled think some light beige yellow coloration 19431997 have had my faults less them now but nonetheless i've read about difference between remorse regret latter covers acts former state out one's control it's that haunts me over other hand violence denigration fills anyone who is sensitive it with we watching planet turn towards slaughter disease extinction torture tomb 1948 or thereabouts remembering crying in car mother worried if she kept kissing she'd run kisses already frightened gathering security comfort where could this very memory oddly sitting back seat reaching front road ahead invisible 1950 all through childhood take weekly saturday allergy shots terrified arm would swell up like molten hive hives as well hair camp once huge swollen lip chewing plant stem grotesque an antique microscope doctor dattner home practitioner family friend given small film projector crank side crinkled black translucent window for viewing animated cartoons work has stemmed magic reminds last bergman you saw images sense beyond may been playing blocks two sets german one artificial stone cut into basic shapes died pastel english wooden architectural elements many which painted these worlds along stuff cocker spaniel believe always tried sink maternal imaginary repeatedly expelled 1952 really don't date wonder love theresa worked went asylum vague dates blanked golden kind melting later appeared different names writing might associate magdalen wonderful british tricycle large wheels red wagon sidewalk house tree backyard dominates what yard doesn't pine right since down pogo stick pair stilts perhaps receiving monthly things science blue cardboard box label transistors miniature vacuum tubes experiments real toys designed sent premise promise around year moved reynolds street ford avenue friendly brennans any more used fight serrated pieces wood screendoor tear moving new originally set do fishtank angelfish example parents bridge loebs somehow name 'raub' also comes father yell at everyone during game wake time he caught reading under confused odd

obdurate nature particular permanence loss history present only even document must what's reconstructed here synchronous shifted slightly diachrony 1955 operation ears pinned traumatic hideous novacaine didn't remain local 70 injections ended screaming felt deformed cutting flesh sound trauma stayed entire life feel fragility organized power grid type constant basis nothing leaves alone something john kulp colp book knife see sunlit room students young floor earlier kindergarten 1956 heard elvis loved word fuck someone showed elvis' picture paper then again miserable leon asking why underdog bunk because deserve replied bow arrow swimming than mile laps emerged head dave schell's wife giving hot drink favored water much own mckenzies clancy al counselors brought their keelless canoe day storm jacket oar sail come quickly shore brunonia lake pleasant near casco watched masturbate thrilled homoero tic genitallycentered masturbated bleachers forget his same close others unforgiving record bouncing pingpong ball paddle while campers leaving him beginning voyeurism exhibitionism circuit completed ceaselessly shower bathtub sperm stuck everywhere associated masturbation urination retaining urine spurting both myself ecstatically sooner abandoned i'd lie legs spread etc 195660 cried sleep bed table keep list best friends so surprise sort obscene proxy softness unpainted 19568 joined american forestry association similar trees flitted another couldn't identify runic alphabet 1958 johnny uhl walking late night threw neon inn sign fell smashed glass tell never scared too coward wyoming 1959 probably junior white dances seminary hopelessly platt townend yes dancing breathless letting go fly across wanted danced pity blond hope episcopalian reason dar long line laura june beth way am afraid dying wanting die fall asleep dreaming margaret hall saving desperately they'd toward care eternal devotion tears pillow sentiment say after wrote antigerman poem met corner castigated bring dead buried somewhere found birth magazine tuli kupferberg he'd published anais nin's diaries girl looked treasured those moments ed sanders gaslight maybe monk point just thought noise knew lightning hopkins thing yusef lateef copenhagen horn player dewdrop hypos door joel us hearing 1960 ann welsh walsh first girlfriend succeed impotent until 24 completely hysteric insecure finally broke yelling break fear touch contamination body by happened terrible written poems beauty apart wasn't cleanliness unclean towel dirty bedroom kingston barely made senior prom cheri kanjorski sp hated don evans' afterwords lights off secret sexualities going jealous despair get dance waterskiing boat swung dock hit face serious wound flunked semester brown collapsing learned hold give faculty they hating worst class composition buck system asked write footnotes oneline rest limits decent salem witch trials anne's breast sick grandmother's behave yelled breaking each other's arms working settlement east harlem arranged thinking exactly sickness hallucinatory constitutes situation horrified volunteered army tests checking reflex times came extremely high basement

catch people faking deafness living pete 125th ran frontal lobotomies literally starving death unknown diseases woman weigh least ton unable move apartments broken toilets feces evil landlords decay buildings dream spanish countesses dressed incredible kids surviving midst israel summer largely jerusalem almost became religious meandered country mea shearim blur driven mix trip 1962 says great deal context desert waking morning disappeared can fictionally reconstitute they're meaningless you'd successful period attested psychic experience patti rogers kill herself syracuse suddenly pembroke realized call calmed hysterical hadn't spoken months called main dorm took straitjacketed hospital corrobrated decades threesome consummated marriage testi fied against divorce although actually court procedure visiting york city married chile suicidal cockroaches hiding clock tenement apartment remarried else severe rheumatoid arthritis christian fundamentalist ago farm village left joked force husband jesus conversion relieved jew isn't blasted received nuremberg report started clear star david chalked wall moment panic realizing today 2006 tour judea propaganda 15 years holocaust thinkg straight depressions continue let assert randomly accounts anything physically weak smart unfocused touched rarely seeing germs seemed change towels every bathed closed within sheep case forever seem chemical transformation surplus wards sleeplessness exacerbates does continued poverty university ia richards gave talk school pushed shortly sheaf course said future taken next mailbox annotated comment talent enough legitimation colin wilson spoke fuss surrounding dorms matter beginnings obscure bounced existence making better highschool misery roughly approaching dormitory got should admitted uncle helped grades erratic freshman mixer walked saying negro mess fast 19601997 sleeping insomnia goads days can't lowered temperature accompanied horrific feelings submergence fuzziness fully awake there's imbalance tending depression states remarkably flu function signals misplacement react suffering 1961 disaster dean pull fought antisemitic put pig's nose jewish belonged traditional 19611962 second roommates spent toothpicks log tormented horrible know doing escape hell roomate built transistor radios without cases wires falling onto curtains belong roomates victimized fumbling student risd incredibly erect ecstatic events surely before hardly began guitar blues abroad jaundice played fake fingers alive leroi jones amiri baraka campus turned created quite stir stand complacency hebrew bus scooter lambretta drive useless equipment ham radio gear wn3drp kid novice license contact away use transitive among physicalreal disappear factory open middle machine identified cannon wheel end valley its turret revolving ever low building wide seen flowers trimmed grass enormous furious beat townies covered blood looking mine hoping scare idiot guard insisted bent pretty keith waldrop fondness larry goldstein teachers forgotten thesis advisor edwin honig old age want happens rumor negev distance facility intended development production nuclear weapons surreal stones sabras intent eliminatnig attempting sholem aleichem land jews israeli spy action egypt heavy hail unexpected size golfballs grandfather cat returned told 1953 result accident funeral grand i'm feeling breakfast changed encapsulated temple facing member managed shot absurdly safe galil witnessing battle israelis syrians un condemned attack safed kabbalah introduced wittgenstein tractatus logicophilosophicus remained favorites continues haunt final sentence far often scaffolding account roommate textile [and fragment missing lost software hardware leave poised brink on] 19621963 mainly overdose opium wonders fox omens following studied tools stekelis bible story joseph nachamah leibowitz relatively bad poetry blown happening reply sometimes listen coded messages traveled mousterian cave droned olduvai trench person human 1966 europe zabor drummer group borstal dover drugs 1967 your saved pills vitamins  speak repressive climate entry removed sexuality virginity tragedy revelation full secrets songs released fellows piece words tired sprechstimme 1969 libretto 19671968 three records esp independent greg johnson flute esps review penguin encyclopedia jazz above vindicated riverboat done slightest original opinion 19671970 anarchy madness setting elsewhere destruction good doomed cowardly cross conservative secretly 1968 bought ibm selectric electric typewriter anode jerry joe dallas 1997 worn crazy t'other little tune music philosophy divorced alimony decided lawyers ready weren't we'd waldrops editing ppress handprinted acconci benedikt monotype aesthetics problematic easy create beautiful style meaning design art distrac tions ai mit weyl wiener ignored poststructuralism discovered ravenous waldrops' burning deck press providence ma experimental socalled cover publication however slight lived minneapolis poor area asphalt heat tornado warnings tornados cellar roared overhead slammed driver muttering himself wedding father's antisemitism removal hopefully series cannot onself certainly meant nh silence constantly grapple vito our dismallycathected relationship talked swapping women gone sensed wrong wondered cathecting sexual mutual genius ones acker laurie anderson ionosphere mentioned artist aram saroyan purity angered bernadette mayer appears occasion emphasis tough historical important buy constitutionally opposed skittered cultural landscapes edge 197071 proceedings protest awful instead heel lot acid whether chemistry talking green lime notorious commune stopped paying rent figured illegally owned switched sparked filled shit literal plumbing charlie quicklime heating starting taking ceilings fuel burn loudspeakers ten foot poles elmgrove rosmarie bit rental $500 sum isolated macrobiotic restaurant usual lousy lover tracks quotation marks please locked trying unsuccessfully orgasm simultaneously obsession veering level difficult recognize true closer able bringing descent mumbling 1972 beth's diets carrots tips toes nipples orange vinegar diet lasted 1973 paris biennale world's smallest sculpture scanning electron based assassination

president nixon diagrams relating general structure french usia articles rosemarie fame stable artistically teetering fact few recommender 19731974 month voyeur empty longer subway block dizzying meet artists recollection sure london ian murray barbara reise afternoons bohm discussing quantum reality part manuscript implicate order critic concerned primarily greenburg conceptual source conversations dominate flat camdentown kentishtown alcoholic apparently decaying driving hitting major influence terms flower ornament sutra breadth knowledgeperson ality wilkesbarre camera birkbeck college inside recovered wouldn't happen america 1974 rosemary loft yourself drawings obsessed drawing backside angry isenheim altarpiece munich together paid individuals postmovement edited $4000 advance $2000 plus commission visited diary expected rat fucking notion greenwich below trade center undergoing construction architects' maproom blueprints downstairs chess bored abstract expressionist anne lectured place ucsd cal arts kathy yale wesleyan parted dubious allison tape reactions strong st audience wept laughed depended responder followed suit emotional san diego raised money make considered virtual introjection projection sexually explicit emily cheng feels trapped loving 16th 17th eat landing suicidally inverse mood seems eiaj reels decayed logic consciousness military defense tina weymouth fourteen stations presented mark's church influenced suites figure ackersondheim tapes affair chris franz opening afterwards shaken wished cockroach knowledge mary boone slept coldness furniture sculptural remarkable gallerist representing friends' works warned pest dara birnbaum desire stop speaking cared 1975 onthebowery borrowed videocamera aimed image burned replace tube hung perfect bob bielecki hear teaches bard meshed performances astonishing begin ning 800 multi media homegrown tension storytelling most intense experiences revolution sorts soho company performed quietly sullen standing ovationssplit vowing somewhat damaging worship affected thick exciting forward teeter ing awkwardly 1976 ellen nova scotia taught nscad askevold robin collyer shirley witasaalo hazen northern ellesmere island raise funds peggy's cove winter drowned amidst sea ice icecovered rocks invitation vladivostok using container port backdrop madonna 19761977 text composed hysteria information network theory annihilation codeparticles printed halifax williams editions parts surface article c model networking threshold logics attempted construct succeeded tradeoffs formalisms phenomenologies descriptions models excite demands rereading interpreter 1977 aliens comprehended reminiscent fantasizing salvaging planets desires beings superior weeds generalists hartford salle robert cummings rita meyer marcia dalby answer meeting learn culture forth replying alan that's politics become 80s issuing contin ued squirrellike joanna totally unprepared everyone's immediately handle babysitter tensions irvine train haven horvitz calls

conductor rushed traveling missed itself worthless throughout veered arrogance self loathing tamara bowers rewarding anal sex eyes having tasmania telling masturbating turning running failing return destroyed mean sorrow whitney shows agree mention show $2000$3000 widened total collapse validation letter unemployment mutilated painful 19771997 gets older relate indication failings honest younger keeping disturbing 1978 hayes erotic decade garden sunlight bright pennsylvania breasts intensity 19781979 california commuting montreal teach concordia ottawa 1980 involved saner relationships characterized extremes exhaustion wear generation remembered sexism mild deceit coalesce 37 quebecois referendum nicole brossard feminin ecriture hubert acquin resonated 19801982 ucla departments sungja lee rossiter mistreated badly accusing 1982 queenstown eastern killed traffic pulled punks half returning ritch resign drank closest nervous breakdown belgian hairdresser outskirts town cabinets gives whatever look 1983 curatorial nexus contemporary atlanta drunk openingfunction attend putting freaks 198385 teaching ontario staying amherst border depressed curatorship 1984 exhibition cost $800 salonstyle alternative shown 19856 paul celan's elegy related pure milk skin retain afterthought afterbirth 198587 texas corrigan's multidisciplinary program arrived eleven denise 1986 punkindustrial musicians damaged week voice replaced singer 1987 tied urinated drew cunt asshole prick transported sucked tampax counterpoint sore forehead disagreed frustrated mad devouring ourselves 1988 treated nancy threatened shellie fleming curator hallwalls upon weeks psychosis behaved artistic director hallways job undefined arguments tebes executive april resigned directorship artcenter buffalo 1989 hounded sided silent western north carolina spring start happy i'll she's civic we're nowhere neurotic messmass picks highway desperate avoid curtis vth exhausted energy wasted 198991 anywhere fighting silences trips hours video audio chattanooga society fit relatives suggested absolute mouth shut hate closures generally boy nice neighborhood barking dogs religion descendent tennessee's governor potentially frances van scoy vel west virginia correct 1991 reissued cds zyx contract bernard bernie stollman revamped available led renewed career musicsoundwork 1992 committed truck pulling expression stunned hour 1993 internet xt post derrida michael current recommendation frost advertising papers issue fiftieth birthday cake live givena miracle pretend 'warmth' cyberrelationship grad toronto keep's postmodern cyberfucking ns library depressing 1996 november attended cybermind96 conference perth australia keynote speaker participated number panels murdoch kim antonio jason summa sydney begins treat possibly shouldn't generalize agrees differences wasis shaky mike gurstein pilot projects wiring province natalie macmaster autobiography ordered #usrlocalbinperl w # biography $| = 1 `cp bio biold` print add yn chop$str=<stdin> $str eq y {print daten single ^d endn openappend >> @text=<stdin> append @text

append} `sort o bio` exit0 enter alphabetically lines sections lose dictionary symptomology launch party doctress neutopia photographs net web site round dealing wider range issues grassroots apologized friendship existed seventies 477 chiyo hakataku fukuokashi 812 japn 81926336048 attempt reduce clarify strands incomprehensible life's gnarled sinew rhizomatic owe january 722 ccen economic visavis listened lisa macarthur play strathspeys freighters kristin's jason's comparative emptiness brother mark joins lexie four coast oregon nyc lunch ny fukuoka hard 2 try understand will seattle travel victoria brother's join stromatolites cyanobacteria tendrils carton ted byfield version jennifer rewrote saul ostrow z coda denouement jargon peripheral asides bodies poorly haven't grown endure stories za transitional condemn further corners navigate custom 1998 30 jobless crashlanded august september hopeless thanks jon marshall's help christine tamblyn kyoto feb 20march 20 kangaroos wallabies bush lexie's 'culling' ie killing azure carter huntington beach amatory correspondence 215 southern dec mla conf sf corresponding soon potes poets revised online canberra phd ideas 'sms' develop nikuko 1999 airport 5 waiting arrive tom leslie responsibility jersey stabilize appointed writerinresidence nottinghamtrent england february 2000 cheryl ito dies 2nd trace intervent bulletin boards racking repllies comments obligation participate rang changes nottingham trent headed sue thomas several deliberately format 19992000 hinge recroded traceroute sources contributed amount data y2k problem exist mapping routing march 19th illness devastating sister held reciprocal busloads hadassah members 400 cards sandy gerry weiss rift deep sondheim anger breaks sister's joanna's margie distant tire outcast 2001 marry 14th reception july bureau municipal witnesses ate irish pub zweig's leslie's rafi coming novel bear won faulkner prize fiction miami florida international interview simply promised facilities programs technologies funding 20012002 supposed reviewed eliminated carol damian department veiled threats shape studio ground flooded tin warehouse airconditioner ceiling hanging raw cement glue finished access lowgrade consumer camcorder classes $20000 2002 daily nightly everglades roamed halls separate shed getting mail meetings crits jacek graduate noticed alligators larger birds periphyton trail observing invertebrates species hemiptera prove wet overight monitor sensors appear crescendo placing various kinds connected heart lung monitors gary wiebke shark flashlight amazing moth residencies foofwa d'imobilite creating parables texts reprinted echo altx books publish ondemand 2003 developed 'limelike' complete corolla suffered mostly allergies flare unusual localized 'lowtemperature' symptom symptoms codeine medicine relieve woozy occur third doctors diagnose psychosomatic 2004 florian cramer unstable digest nettime email occasional collection codwork 'purged' ad hominem attacks ken wark wayward salt poetics blazevox printondemand title wvu's environments laboratory logical lacan motion capture 'avatar' seriously remapping nodes 'inconceivable'

configurations clothing poser blender abstractions studies tensed halfvirtual half'real' 2005 sad sell materials james byars need weighed short artwork find tendency whenever regrets firemuseum central cd performing gcac lonely brush pavement troubled unfathomable october eugene lim problems attitudes screamed sarcastic remarks speeches upsetting situations aporia knot doublybound conceivable resolution closeness stay pattern starts residency santa ana frequency vlf produced ranging explored bolsa chica wetlands release toad wild constructed complex avatars integrated included nude harsh selfloathing selfish six formally raptor sanctuary annie slowly releasing hacking watch kestrel absolutely perched electrical field worldpivot headache gary's hammering leak leaked seeping mortar stained windows mold anything's periods scenarios involving scenery background form mocap exhibited track16 gallery la such blessing barry sugarman suicide he's johnson's sanity pressure joblessness relations health healthcare lack nightmares public tonic recording alpine zither extensively guitars blog hungry ghost baldwin inspired theoretical essays analog digital defuge track 16 monica thornton embedded features 12 channels videoaudio including five projections deals war encapsulation distorted avatar sexualized scandal alps aletsch glacier gruyere prealps geneva sublime representation rather hermeneutics $84000 debt azure's loans selling sleepless worse brain twitches medications aspirin welbutrin cholesterol dancepiece geneve incidence twice preceded maud liardon dropped lausanne performance betrayed dancers bourgeoisie incidences brilliant skinn harmonica portable chromatic scale classical parlor crepuscletwilight danse creates tremors grutli lasts 41 minutes youtube nikukoblogspotcom increasingly unravel recent earthquake taiwan locally havoc spam abject illegality particularly vicious eaten willingly sight jordan flock 10000 starlings largest ibis greater dusk roaring planes envied evident communality mentallyimpaired blame dosage naked penis crippled known personality disorder partially ego neuras thenic freudianwise disasters suicides rages wars angers limit walk teeters fury daring visit aunt brooklyn heron inhabitants prefer spite you're likely dolmens stonedstony isolation saves incessant devastation 2007 memo memorial memorygraph meme remembrance reminiscence mnemonic skitters backandforth remains undone dissolving cold rain biogtxt skittering phrase makes resol utions scattered represents inhabited dreamed inhabiting corral scattering material proust yet shatter imminent conceived familiar cherished pages becomes debris torn asunder wounded falls rebuilt remnant coherency infinite richness devolve momentarily sunk language except forgets shattering releases substance sun inclement yesterday cusp announcement 3kth soldier iraq crashing false resurrection orders commands odds 7 shaking adrenalin surging ruined tonight leather bound codex laws indexed switch stores landscape ocean dark grey poisonous sky darker littered twised ruins earth climb embankment stairs marshgrass woke breathe certain scapes partly devastated spit scrub sand meandering atlantic houses top cliff rhode airliner crashed spilling racks posters bands lives places won't recourse distort wellbeing damage backgrounds desolation foregrounds sunless emptied fallen subterfuge coupled inviolate targeted occurred they've choice horror inconceivably inescapable shuddering shivering chance

↑ Index

63. ALDON L NIELSEN

Re: True Story of a Winning Strategy for an NEA Fellowship in Poetry

Thu 4 Jan 2007

I see Barry sent that article to the whole list -- apologies for the repetition -- and yes, writing innovative poetry is a formal strategy -- perhaps even a winning strategy -- just won't win you an NEA these days --

On Wed, 03 Jan 2007 21:35:16 -0500 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:

http://www.washingtoncitypaper.com/display.php?id=399#400&navEdit

Scroll down to the second essay, "The Verse Interests" by Sarah Godfrey.

Barry Alpert

_____ Dave vs. Carl: The Insignificant Championship Series. Who will win? http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwsp0070000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://davevscarl.spaces.live.com/?icid=T001MSN38C07001 poet. Smith was awarded a $20,000 NEA Literature Fellowship in Poetry. â€œIâ€™m still a little stunned about the whole thing,â€ the Southwest resident says.

<<

<<

>
>
>
>Smith was one of only 50 poets nationwide to be awarded a grant and the only Washington, D.C., poet to snag a fellowship, but he hopes his gain will benefit D.C. poets other than himself. â€œThis is not just for meâ€”it kind of shows and hints at the amount of poetic activity that goes on in Washington,â€ Smith says. â€œThere are several different scenes and some very good peopleâ€”a lot of them have been very supportive [of me].â€
>
>
>
>Smith is the author of two volumes of poetryâ€”2005â€™s Settling for Beauty and 1999â€™s The Hypothetical Landscapeâ€”and edited Northern Music: Poems About and Inspired by Glenn Gould, an anthology of writing about the Canadian musician. Smithâ€™s poems, essays, and fiction have appeared in publications as diverse as crime-fiction Web site Thuglit.com and the self-described â€œmodern dog culture magazineâ€ The Bark. Heâ€™s also recently completed a childrenâ€™s book slated for publication in 2008. Still, poetry â€œis at the center of what I do,â€ Smith says.
>
>
>
>Having unsuccessfully submitted his work to the NEA twice before sending his latest application in February of this year, what finally worked for Smith was sending in a collection of formal verse rather than a sampling of his free-verse poems. After a â€œnerve-wrackingâ€ selection process, he decided on â€œa polished collection of formal verseâ€”or at least as polished as I know how to make itâ€”rather than include a little bit of everything,â€ Smith says. â€œI tried the eclectic manuscript before. It hadnâ€™t worked, [so I] decided to put all of my eggs in one basket.â€
>
>
>
>Smithâ€™s next big decision will be what to do with the unexpected windfall. For its part, NEA has helped him narrow his list of options: The grant is to be used for research, travel, and time off from oneâ€™s regular job to allow more time to writeâ€”not, say, for a down payment on a new house or paying off a car note.

>
>
>
>â€œThey donâ€™t send me a check,â€ Smith says. â€œ[The money] is held in an escrow account and drawn down for specific purposesâ€”itâ€™s taxable. Itâ€™s not really a license for irresponsibility.
>
>
><<<

66. UbuWeb

UbuWeb: Featured Resources - January 2007 | Selected by Mónica de la Torre

Thu 4 Jan 2007

---

http://ubu.com

UbuWeb: Featured Resources - January 2007
Selected by Mónica de la Torre

Mónica de la Torre is the author of the poetry books Acúfenos, published recently in Mexico City, and Talk Shows, forthcoming from Switchback Books in February 07. She translates poetry from the Spanish and frequently participates in collaborative book projects, one of which was Appendices, Illustrations and Notes, co-written with artist Terence Gower. She is the poetry editor of The Brooklyn Rail.

1. Caroline Bergvall "Via: Dante Variations" (MP3)
http://mediamogul.seas.upenn.edu/pennsound/authors/Bergvall/Bergvall-Caroline-Via-2004.mp3

2. Softpalate: Gertrude Stein's "For the Country Entirely" (MP3)
http://mediamogul.seas.upenn.edu/pennsound/authors/Softpalate/Softpalate-Stein_04_For-The-Country.mp3

3. Henri Chopin "Definitión des lettres suivantes" (MP3)
http://ubu.wfmu.org/sound/fylkingen_text_sound/Fylkingen-Text-Sound_07_chopin.mp3

4. Samuel Beckett "Not I" (Video)
http://www.ubu.com/film/beckett.html

5. Charles Amirkhanian "Radii" (MP3)
http://ubu.wfmu.org/sound/dial_a_poem_poets/disconnected/Disconnected_39_amir.mp3

6. bpNichol "Pome Poem" (MP3)
http://ubu.wfmu.org/sound/nichol_bp/Nichol-bp_Sound-Poems_02-pome.mp3

7. Mauricio Kagel "Hallelujah" (Video) http://www.ubu.com/film/kagel.html

8. Alvin Lucier "I Am Sitting In a Room" (MP3)
http://ubu.wfmu.org/sound/source/Lucier-Alvin_Sitting.mp3

9. Emmett Williams "The Last French-Fried Potato and Other Poems" (PDF)
http://www.ubu.com/historical/gb/williams_last.pdf

10. Brion Gysin "Three Permutations" (MP3)
http://ubu.wfmu.org/sound/gysin_brion/Gysin-Brion_3-Permutations.mp3

11. María Sabina "Sacred Mushroom Chant" (MP3)
http://ubu.wfmu.org/sound/ethno/sabina/mp3/Sabina-Maria_From-The-Mushroom-Velada.Mp3

12. Gertrude Stein "Interview" (MP3)
http://media.sas.upenn.edu/pennsound/authors/Stein/Stein-Gertrude_Interview_1934.mp3

> For a complete list of past Featured UbuWeb Resources:
http://www.ubu.com/resources/feature.html

UbuWeb
http://ubu.com

UbuWeb
http://ubu.com

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

67. Fulcrum Annual

Fulcrum Marathon Jan 10 -- UPDATED!

Thu 4 Jan 2007

FULCRUM MARATHON POETRY READING
WHEN: Wednesday Jan 10 at 5:30 p.m.
WHERE: Lame Duck Books, 12 Arrow Street, Harvard Square (near Cafe Pamplona)
WHO: David Blair, Zak Bos, Lisa Goldfarb, Joan Houlihan, George Kalogeris, Katia Kapovich, X J Kennedy, Russell Kiezere, Barbara Matteau, Ben Mazer, Andy McCord, John Mulrooney, Philip Nikolayev, Lisa Nold, Benjamin Paloff, Jacquelyn Pope, Don Share, Mark Schorr, Ellen Steinbaum, Stephen Sturgeon, Ellen Wehle & others
HOW: Free, reception to follow, all friends are welcome!
SPONSORED by Fulcrum and Lame Duck Books
(http://www.lameduckbooks.com/)
QUERIES: [redacted]

~~~
~~~

Cambridge, MA 02139, USA
http://fulcrumpoetry.com
phone [redacted]
e-mail editor{AT}fulcrumpoetry.com

↑ Index

68. Burt Kimmelman
Cultural Society Website Update
Thu 4 Jan 2007

Hello There,

We've just posted our first update of 2007 & hope you enjoy it:

Jon Curley, Norman Finkelstein, Devin Johnston, Burt Kimmelman, Kate Ledger, Joseph Massey, Jason Ian Moriber, Robert Murphy, Amanda Nadelberg, Peter O'Leary, Michael Prasil, Pam Rehm, Mark Scroggins, Jason Stumpf, Stacy Szymaszek, Shannon Tharp, & Tyrone Williams.

Go to: http://www.culturalsociety.org/

Happy new year.

.....
The Cultural Society | Texts & Images | Mpls MN
.....
Now available:
AMONG OTHER THINGS: Poems & Proposals by Zach Barocas
.....
www.culturalsociety.org · [redacted]
.....
If you'd like to be taken off of our email list, please reply with 'Remove' in the subject line.

↑ Index

69. charles alexander
new chax books, NY events
Thu 4 Jan 2007

New books from CHAX PRESS, for the New Year!

1. Charles Borkhuis, Afterimage, ISBN 0925904600, poetry, 90 pages, $16

2. Bruce Andrews, Swoon Noir, ISBN 9780925904485, poetry, 138 pages, $16

3. Glenn Mott, Analects on a Chinese Screen, ISBN 9780925904614, poetry, 74 pages, $16

4. Jefferson Carter, Sentimental Blue, ISBN 9780925904621, poetry, 44 pages, $12

5. Linda Russo, Mirth, ISBN 9780925904638, poetry, 106 pages, $16

6. Tim Peterson, Since I Moved In -- winner of the first Gil Ott Award -- ISBN 9780925904645, 96 pages, $16

There's never been a better time to begin a standing order, which means you sign up to receive all books published by Chax Press (you can exclude books with retail price above $25, if you wish -- or ask us to inquire as to whether you want such books, as we publish them). Standing order patrons receive books as soon as we begin to send them out after publication, and receive a 30% discount, which means, with the books listed above, a savings of $22.80).

And why not add a book that came out just before the current books, the marvelous UNDER VIRGA, by Joe Amato, ISBN 0925904562, poetry, 114 pages, $16. Your savings on all the books combined more than make up for the price on this one.

To place a standing order, send an email to [redacted] with your name and mailing address. Please include your phone number.

Shipping/handling costs, for all the above books together, is $9 for Priority Mail, which is how we would prefer to ship them. We bill standing orders with shipment.

More information about the above books, and a lot more Chax Press books, is available on our web site. You may also buy individual books from Chax Press on our web site: http://www.chax.org

Or you may buy Chax Press books from Small Press Distribution: http://www.spdbooks.org

A special event combining a reading and book launch party for new Chax Press books, featuring Charles Borkhuis, Bruce Andrews, Glenn Mott, Tim Peterson, and Allison Cobb, & friends reading poems by Linda Russo, and for a new book of poems by Charles Alexander (published by Junction Press) will take place at the Bowery Poetry Club at 308 Bowery @ Bleeker, in New York on January 14th, Sunday, from 2pm to 4pm. See the Bowery Poetry Club calendar: http://www.poetz.com/cgi-poetz/Calcium37.pl?CalendarName=BPC&Op=ShowIt

A poetry reading by Tim Peterson and Charles Alexander will take place the following evening, January 15, 8pm, at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's, 131 E. 10th St., New York. See the Poetry Project calendar for more information: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

↑ Index

70. charles alexander
new on chaxblog
Thu 4 Jan 2007

New on chaxblog

THINKING case sensitive / Kate Greenstreet arc of light / dark matter 17 (revisiting an older poem)

WHAT POEM (a new poem)

RANDOM HOLIDAY NOTES (travel & snow, cuisine, poetics mla, Kant's ethics, Neil Young performance archive, frank parker's home)

http://chax.org/blog.htm

charles alexander / chax press

fold the book inside the book keep it open always read from the inside out speak then

↑ Index

71. Alexander Jorgensen
Cultural Perversity in the US - A Child's "Ashley Treatment" - THE GUARDIAN UK
Thu 4 Jan 2007

---

http://www.guardian.co.uk/usa/story/0,,1982370,00.html

Frozen in time: the disabled nine-year-old girl who will remain a child all her life
Ed Pilkington in New York
Thursday January 4, 2007 - The Guardian

Ashley's parents call her their Pillow Angel, a moniker that is a reference to the love and joy they feel for their nine-year-old daughter and the severe disabilities she has suffered from birth. She cannot sit up, walk or talk, is fed by tube, and, as her parents put it, "stays right where we place her - usually on a pillow".
Ashley won't know this, as she is brain-damaged and has the awareness, her doctors say, of a baby, but she has become the subject of a passionate argument in disability circles and beyond. Her name is becoming synonymous with the debate about the acceptable limits of medical intervention in the care of disabled people.

The cause of the controversy is the "Ashley Treatment" - a course of surgery and hormone supplements devised for her at her parents' request and with the blessing of doctors - that will for ever keep her small. It involves surgical operations, including a hysterectomy, and hormone prescriptions that will, in effect, freeze-frame her body at its current size. Although she has a normal life expectancy, she will, physically, always be nine years old. Her growth has been suspended at 4ft 5in (1.3 metres), rather than the 5ft 6in she would probably otherwise have become. Her weight will stick at around 75lb (34kg) rather than 125lb.

This week Ashley's parents, who have chosen to remain anonymous and have only let it be known that they are "college-educated professionals" living in Washington state, have posted on the internet a lengthy explanation of their desire to stunt her growth. It is the first time they have given a public account of their actions. The explanation is accompanied by a gallery of photographs showing Ashley over the years, from her as a smiling baby a few months old, through to today when she is seen nestled in a sheepskin rug.

She was diagnosed, they explain, with brain damage with unknown causes just after birth and has remained at the same developmental level since about three months. Three years ago she began to show early signs of puberty, and they grew anxious about the impact of fertility and of her rapidly increasing size and weight on the quality of her life. In discussions with doctors at Seattle Children's hospital they devised the treatment: removal of Ashley's uterus to prevent fertility, excision of early buds on her chest so that she would not develop breasts, and medication with high doses of oestrogen to limit her growth by prematurely fusing the growth plates of her bones.

The parents insist that the treatment, carried out in 2004, was conceived for Ashley's benefit and not their own ease or convenience. With a lighter body and no breasts, Ashley will have fewer bed sores and lie more comfortably. And a smaller Ashley can be cared for and carried. "As a result we will continue to delight in holding her in our arms and Ashley will be moved and taken on trips more frequently instead of lying in her bed staring at TV or the ceiling all day long," they write.

But as news about the treatment became known, Ashley's parents were surprised by the virulence of some of the response. Comments on chatboards have included: "Ouch - this smacks of eugenics"; "I find this offensive, truly a milestone in our convenience society"; "This smells, I can't agree with this".

Outrage has also been expressed by organisations representing disabled people across the US, with many asking why a course of treatment that would not be countenanced for an able-bodied person should be allowed in this case. "People have been horrified by the discrepancy," said Mary Johnson, editor of Ragged Edge, an online magazine for disability activists.

She said she felt for Ashley's parents and could understand why they had made the decision. But she feared that the treatment would open a Pandora's box that could have adverse effects for other children. "What will now be said in the case of a child with spina bifida, who you could argue has the same physical challenges but whose brain is fully functioning? This is very troubling."

Debate has raged among doctors and medical ethicists. Jeffrey Brosco of Miami University has co-written an editorial in the Archives of Pediatrics & Adolescent Medicine criticising the procedure as an experiment without proper research controls. "This is a technological solution to a social problem. I work with severely disabled children and know how hard it is on families, but what we need most is better federal funding so that they can be cared for properly."

State help for caring for disabled people is available through Medicaid, which is restricted to poor families. Ashley's parents would not qualify, and say it is impossible to find carers they can afford.

The ethical row is likely to deepen as the Seattle doctors, led by Daniel Gunther, say they are considering other children for similar treatment, though only after monitoring by the hospital's ethics committee. The doctors accept that Ashley's hysterectomy was contentious, given the dark history of sterilisation of disabled people in Europe and America, and that there were risks involved in the operations and oestrogen doses.

But they argue the benefits outweigh the risks. Ashley has, they admit, been "infantilised" but question the harm that would do a person whose mental capacity "will always be that of a young child".

Ashley cannot say what she thinks. But in a telephone interview with the Guardian last night, her father said that many people had assumed he and his wife had to agonise over their decision.

"We didn't. It was easy," he said. "We clearly saw the benefits to Ashley's quality of life. We have also been criticised for harming Ashley's dignity. But for us, what would be grotesque would be to allow a fully formed woman to grow up, lying helplessly and with the mentality of a three-month-old."

Hormones

There is a long history of hormones being used to control growth in children. In some cases they are used to counteract a hormonal imbalance or genetic disorder. But there have also been sustained attempts to control body size for cosmetic reasons.

In 1956 MA Goldzieher became the first to report using high doses of oestrogen to treat exceptionally tall girls. Over ensuing years thousands of tall girls were prescribed oestrogen to prevent them tipping over the 6ft mark, protecting their marriage prospects. As the stigma against tallness in women has declined, so has the practice, though it still continues.

Boys considered to be shorter than the norm have recently begun to be treated with a growth hormone, often for cosmetic reasons. US federal restrictions have been loosened, allowing private paediatricians to offer the treatment that can cost up to $40,000 a year.

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

72. Tim Peterson
SEGUE READING SERIES: Winter/Spring 2007
Thu 4 Jan 2007

Announcing the Winter/Spring 2007
SEGUE READING SERIES
@ BOWERY POETRY CLUB

Saturdays: 4 PM – 6 PM
308 Bowery, just north of Houston
$6 admission goes to support the readers

The Segue Reading Series is made possible by the support of The Segue Foundation. For more information, please visit www.seguefoundation.com, bowerypoetry.com/midsection.htm, or call [redacted].

These events are also made possible in part with public funds from The New York State Council on the Arts, a state agency.

Curators:
Feb-March by Tonya Foster & Erica Hunt
April-May by Erica Kaufman & Tim Peterson.

February 3 BARBARA HENNING and CHRISTOPHER STACKHOUSE Barbara Henning is the author of two novels, six books of poetry and a series of photo-poem pamphlets. Her most recent book is a novel, You, Me and the Insects (Spuyten Duyvil, 2005). My Autobiography is forthcoming from United Artists Books, and Thirty Miles to Rosebud is forthcoming from Spuytin Duyvil. Christopher Stackhouse's writing has appeared in the journals Aufgabe, Bridge, Hambone, and NYArts, among others. Seismosis, a book featuring his line drawing with text by writer John Keene, was published as a letterpress limited-edition book by The Center for Book Arts in NYC in November 2003. He is a poetry editor for FENCE and a Cave Canem Writers Fellow.

February 10 SERENA JOST & DAN MACHLIN and JEREMY SIGLER Serena Jost is a singer-songwriter and cellist. Her new full-length CD produced by Brad Albetta at MonkeyBoy Studios will be released in Winter 2007. Check out her music at: www.myspace.com/serenajost. Dan Machlin's first full-length book of poems is forthcoming from Ugly Duckling Presse in 2007. He is the author of several previous chapbooks: 6x7, This Side Facing You, and In Rem. He is the founding editor of Futurepoem books. Jeremy Sigler's Crackpot Poet is forthcoming from Black Square Editions/Brooklyn Rail. He is also working on a limited edition letterpress book with drawings by Jessica Stockholder called Led Almost By My Tie.

February 17 JULIE PATTON and MARLENE NOURBESE PHILIP Julie Patton is a performance artist and writer. She is busy working on various community development/greenspace/sustainability projects under the rubric of Think Green! Her new chapbook Notes for Some (Nominally) Awake is forthcoming. Julie often takes to the road for various collaborative projects with Uri Caine, and is a fellow at Bates College's Common Grounds Project in Maine, where she collaborates with Jonathan Skinner. Marlene Nourbese Philip is a poet, essayist, writer and lawyer who lives in Toronto. A recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship in poetry, the prestigious Casa de las Americas prize for She Tries Her Tongue, Nourbese Philip is also the 1988 first prize winner of the Tradewinds Collective Prize (Trinidad & Tobago) in both the poetry and the short story categories.

February 24 MONICA DE LA TORRE and PATRICIA SPEARS JONES Mónica de la Torre is the author of the poetry books Acúfenos and Talk Shows. She is co-editor of the anthology Reversible Monuments: Mexican Contemporary Poetry with Michael Wiegers, translator and editor of Poems by Gerardo Deniz, and is the poetry editor of The Brooklyn Rail. African American poet and arts writer Patricia Spears Jones is author of two poetry collections, The Weather That Kills and Femme du Monde, and the play 'Mother' commissioned and produced by Mabou Minesand a new commission Song for New York: What Women Do When Men are Knitting, which Mabou will premiere in 2007.

March 3 BETSY ANDREWS and ROBERT HALPERN Betsy Andrews' book New Jersey was selected for the 2007 Brittingham Prize in poetry. She is the author of She-Devil and In Trouble. Her poems, essays, and review have appeared widely in publications ranging from PRACTICE to the Yemeni newspaper Culture. Robert Halpern is the author of Rumored Place. Currently, he's at work co-editing the poems of the late Frances Jaffer together with Kathleen Fraser, writing a collaborative poem with Taylor Brady, and translating the early essays of Georges Perec, the first of which is forthcoming in Chicago Review. His chapbook Disaster Suite just recently appeared.

March 10 R. ERICA DOYLE and FRANCES RICHARD R. Erica Doyle is a writer of Trinidadian descent who lives in New York City. Her work has appeared in numerous journals and anthologies, including Best American Poetry, Bum Rush the Page, and Ms. Magazine. She is the recipient of awards and fellowships from the Hurston/Wright and Astraea Foundations and the New York Foundation for the Arts. She is a fellow of Cave Canem, a workshop and retreat for African American poets. Frances Richard is a poet, critic, and educator. The author of See Through, she was awarded the 1999 Marlboro Review Prize, chosen by Brenda Hillman. She is the recipient of a grant from the Barbara Beming/Money for Women Fund.

March 17 WILL ALEXANDER and ANTHONY JOSEPH Poet, novelist, playwright, essayist Will Alexander's most recently published work is Sunrise and Armageddon. Forthcoming is Singing in Magnetic Hoofbeat, a book of essays from Factory School, and several poetry collections. Will has been teaching in the Graduate Program at Mills College. One of the UK's most exciting and innovative new voices, poet, musician, and novelist Anthony Joseph was born in Trinidad and has lived in the UK since 1989. He is the author of two poetry collections, Desafinado, 1994 and Teragaton, 1997 and a spoken word CD "Liquid Textology: REadings from the African Origins of UFOs." In September 2004, he was selected by the Arts Council of England as one of fifty writers for the historic photo "A Great Day."

March 24 GREG PARDLO and BOB PERELMAN & FRANCIE SHAW Gergory Pardlo is a 2005 NYFA Fellow in poetry and the recipient of a 2006 fellowship in translation from the NEA. His manuscript, Totem, was selected by Brenda Hillman for the 2007 APR/Honickman First Book Prize and will be published in September. Bob Perelman and Francie Shaw lived in the Bay Area from 1976 to 1990. There, Shaw had a one-woman installation show at 80 Langton Street and collaborated extensively with poets. She has also shown her work in Philadelphia and New York (A.I.R. Gallery). Perelman now teaches at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of 16 books of poetry, including If Life, Ten to One, and The Future of Memory; and 2 critical books, The Trouble With Genius and The Marginalization of Poetry.

March 31
JAM ON THE COMMONS: Poets, writers, musicians, and artists on “the commons” (spaces outside the stress of market forces).

April 7 CA CONRAD and KENWARD ELMSLIE CAConrad's childhood included selling cut flowers along the highway for his mother and helping her shoplift. He escaped to Philadelphia the first chance he got, where he lives and writes today with the PhillySound poet (www.phillysound.blogspot.com). His book Deviant Propulsions was published in 2006 by Soft Skull Press. Kenward Elmslie's recent publications include Agenda Melt, Snippets, Cyberspace, all with visuals by Trevor Winkfield, and Routine Disruptions, selected poems.

April 14 BEVERLY DAHLEN and CRAIG WATSON Robert Duncan said of Beverly Dahlen, "The psychic life she draws in writing may be drawn from her own psychic life, but its body is the text and it speaks to the psyche of the reader as a reader." Dahlen is the author of The Egyptian Poems, Out of the Third, and 4 volumes of A Reading. A native of Oregon, she has lived and worked in San Francisco for many years. Craig Watson is the auhtor of Secret Histories, True News, and Free Will. He works as a producer and dramaturg at Trinity Repertory Company, a professional theater in Rhode Island.

April 21 E-POETRY 2007 NYC: PERFORMANCES AND A SYMPOSIUM FOR THE LEA NEW MEDIA POETRY ISSUE. Event guest-curated by Loss Pequeño Glazier; featuring Aya Karpinska, Elizabeth Knipe, and Jim Rosenberg. Loss Pequeño Glazier is a poet, professor of Media Study, and Founder and Director of the Electronic Poetry Center (http://epc.buffalo.edu). He is the author of the digitally-informed poetry collection Anatman, Pumpkin Seed, Algorithm, several other books of poetry, and the award-winning Digital Poetics: The Making of E-Poetries. Aya Karpinska is a digital media artist and interaction designer. Aya is the 2006 recipient of the Brown University Fellowship in Electronic Writing. Her website is located at http://technekai.com. Elizabeth Knipe is a digital poet and experimental video artist who entertains an interest in physical electronic installations. See her work online at www.dreamdilation.com. Jim Rosenberg has been working in non-linear poetic forms in one medium or another since 1966. His best-known work is Intergrams and his website is located at http://www.well.com/user/jer/.

April 21 CHARLES BERNSTEIN and TENNEY NATHANSON Charles Bernstein's most recent books are Girly Man, With Strings, Shadowtime, and Republics of Reality: 1975-1995. Author page at epc.buffalo.edu. He teaches at the University of Pennsylvania. Tenney Nathanson is the author of the book-length poem Home on the Range (The Night Sky with Stars in My Mouth) and the collection Erased Art. A native New Yorker, he has lived since 1985 in Tucson, where he teaches American poetry and, from time to time, creative writing in the English Department at the University of Arizona.

May 5 SUSAN BEE and JOHANNA DRUCKER will present a multimedia talk on collaboration Susan Bee is a painter, editor, and book artist living in NYC. Bee has had four solo shows at A.I.R. Gallery in NYC. Granary Books has published six of her artist's books, including A Girl's Life with Johanna Drucker. She has collaborated with Charles Bernstein on five books. Her website is http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bee. Johanna Drucker is currently the Robertson Professor of Media Studies at the University of Virginia and Professor in the Department of English. Her most recent critical work is Sweet Dreams: Contemporary Art and Complicity. Drucker is internationally known as a book artist and experimental, visual poet whose work has been exhibited and collected in special collections in libraries and museums nationwide.

May 12 LANGUAGE POETRY & THE BODY: A PANEL. Panelists include Bruce Andrews, Steve Benson, Maria Damon, and Leslie Scalapino. Moderated by Tim Peterson and Erica Kaufman. Bruce Andrews is the author of such now classic texts of the American avant garde as GIVE 'EM ENOUGH ROPE and I DON'T HAVE ANY PAPER SO SHUT UP (OR, SOCIAL ROMANTICISM). Along with Charles Bernstein, Andrews edited the crucial poetry magazine L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E. He teaches political science at Fordham University. Steve Benson has often incorporated oral and physical improvisation, as well as presentational and instrumental uses of projections, audiotape, and printed texts, into works presented as poetry readings. This is his first New York appearance since March 2005. Maria Damon teaches poetry and poetics at the University of Minnesota. She is the author of The Dark End of the Street: Margins in American Vanguard Poetry and co-author (with mIEKAL aND) of Literature Nation, pleasureTEXTpossession, and Eros/ion. Leslie Scalapino is the author of thirty books of poetry, inter-genre fiction-poetry-criticism and plays, including recently Zither and Autobiography, The Tango, Orchid Jetsam, and Dahlia's Iris: Secret Authobiography and Fiction. Scalapino's Selected Poems, 1974-2006/It's go in horizontal is forthcoming from University of California Press.

May 19 JACK KIMBALL and EILEEN MYLES Jack Kimball's 350-page Post-Twyla collects imploded haiku, essay fragments, and made-up journal entries. Co-editor of "Queering Language" for the online zine EOAGH, he blogs at pantaloons.blogspot.com and publishes Faux Press. Eileen Myles's new book of poems Sorry, Tree will be out in April. It explores themes of nature, translocation, politics, love, and corporate squalor. She lives in Southern CA & New York and teaches at UCSD.

May 26 RAE ARMANTROUT and ELAINE EQUI Rae Armantrout's most recent books are Up To Speed, The Pretext, and Veil: New and Selected Poems. A new book, Next Life, is forthcoming from Wesleyan in 2007. Armantrout is Professor of Poetry and Poetics at the Unviersity of California, San Diego. Elaine Equi's books include Voice-Over, which won the San Francisco State Poetry Award, The Cloud of Knowable Things, and most recently Ripple Effect: New & Selected Poems. She teaches in the MFA Programs at The New School and City College of New York, and at New York University.

↑ Index

73. Burt Hatlen
CFP for papers on Pound Legacy
Thu 4 Jan 2007

The Ezra Pound Society invites proposals for papers on "The Pound Legacy," to be presented at the American Literature Association conference in Boston, May 24-27. Please e-mail proposals (a title and an abstract of three or four sentences) to Burton Hatlen, secretary of the society, at [redacted], by January 20.

↑ Index

74. Jim Andrews
teleology and ai
Fri 5 Jan 2007

---

on the matter harry ross mentioned about the tendency to express ideas about evolution with a teleological inflection...

it's an interesting issue.

turning the same issue toward the ai question:

all computer code is written. in languages.

how can you have coded language without a writer?

what inscriptional systems in the body or the universe do we understand that can help us with this question?

dna?

is that a language? why or why not?

talk about the death of the author...ehe.

the invention/discovery of code/language/reading-writing that lacks a writer.

same sort of interesting issue as expressing evolutinary ideas without a teleological inflection.

ja?
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

75. Pierre Joris

Recent Nomadics blog posts

Fri 5 Jan 2007

Recent Nomadics blog posts:

Chechnya, Turkey, India
Abolish the Death Penalty
Hannah Arendt & Zionism
Music by Jackson Mac Low and Anne Tardos
2007 minus one
Welcome to Planet Blitcon

go to: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

be well,

Pierre
==========
"Fascism should more properly
be called corporatism,since it is the merger of state and corporate power."
— Benito Mussolini
==========
Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202
h: [redacted]
c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com
==========

↑ Index

76. cralan kelder

longhouse press through time - 35 year bibliography

Fri 5 Jan 2007

---

this just came in,
(evolution of small press in pictures, anecdote, hand motions, and behind the scenes);

Longhouse Bibliography from 1971 - 2006 is now online, complete with the editor Bob Arnold's annotations and a galaxy of title cover images.

Please visit!

Begin with the Longhouse Bibliography Part One 1971 - 1989

http://www.LonghousePoetry.com/bibliography1.html

And continue with Longhouse Bibliography Part Two 1990 - 2006

http://www.LonghousePoetry.com/bibliography2.html

A note to web-viewers: those with dial-up service only -- including us here at Longhouse! -- this may take longer than normal for download. Hang in there.

Poetry & More! available at

Bob & Susan Arnold
Longhouse, Publishers & Booksellers
1604 River Road
Guilford, Vermont 05301

our web-site: http://www.LonghousePoetry.com

See Doubles, Wish to Add A Friend to the List or Be Removed ? Please E-mail us. Thanks!

↑ Index

77. Carol Novack

Upcoming Readings: January 21st, January 25th, & January 26th

Fri 5 Jan 2007

---

*SUNDAY, JANUARY 21, 2PM *
Phoenix Reading Series Hosted by Mike Graves
High Chai, 18 Ave. B, NYC
[redacted]
One Purchase
Donation

Featuring
**
Carol Novack
Rob Stephenson
Alison Woods
et al.

_____
**
**
Thursday, January 25, 8pm
Women's Studio Center Reading

FEATURING
*Blick Katrinka Moore
and
Carol Novack
Instructors at Women's Studio
Center*<http://www.womenstudiocenter.org/id33.html>

Followed by Bessie Bazile, Phyllis Blaney, Gina Buttafoco, Maura Candella, Christine Hamm, Celeste Hastings, Tamanna Hye, Alice Jacoby, Ameena Lacey and Dulcie L. Leimbach

*Click Here for More Information About Our Instructors
*<http://www.womenstudiocenter.org/id68.html>

Waltz Cafe-Astoria, 23-14 Ditmars Blvd, Astoria, NY 11105

www.waltz-astoria.com

$7.00 Minimum
Offerings include coffee & tea drinks, wine and decadent desserts

*_____ *

* *

*Mad Hatters' Review *

*(http://www.madhattersreview.com <http://www.madehattersreview.com/>) *

Edgy & Enlightened Literature, Art & Music in the Age of Dementia

Poetry, Prose & Anything Goes Reading Series

*Curated & Pickled by Publisher/Editor Carol Novack *

*5th Reading *

*Friday, January 26th, '07 , 7 – 9 pm *

KGB Bar, 85 East 4th Street, N.Y.C.

* *

****

* *

Featuring

NORMAN LOCK is the author of The Long Rowing Unto Morning (Ravenna Press), A History of the Imagination (Fiction Collective Two), Land of the Snow Men (Calamari Press), 'Notes to the Book of Supplemental Diagrams' for Marco Knauff's Universe (Ravenna Press), *Trio *(Triple Press), Emigres & Joseph Cornell's Operas (elimae books and YKP, Istanbul), Cirque du Calder (Rogue Literary Society), and The House of Correction (Broadway Play Publishing). Two Plays for Radio is due fall '06 from Ravenna Press. His stage plays have been produced in New York, Los Angeles, in Germany , and at the 1996 Edinburgh Theatre Festival. Women in Hiding, The Shining Man,The Primate House, and Money, Power & Greed were broadcast by WDR, Germany. He wrote the film The Body Shop, produced by The American Film Institute. He is the recipient of the Aga Kahn Prize for fiction, given by The Paris Review. He lives in Philadelphia. Two of his book reviews and a short fiction can be found in MHR.

TERESE SVOBODA has been described as "A fabulous fabulist," in Publisher's Weekly review of her fourth novel and ninth book, Tin God. Her writings have appeared in The New Yorker, New York Times, Atlantic, Slate, Bomb, Lit, Columbia, Yale Review and Paris Review, and her honors include an O. Henry for the short story, a nonfiction Pushcart Prize, a translation National Endowment for the Humanities fellowship, a PEN/Columbia Fellowship, two NYFA Fellowships in poetry and fiction, an NYSCA grant, a Jerome Foundation grant in video, the John Golden Award in playwriting, and the Bobst Prize in fiction and the Iowa Prize in poetry. She has taught at Sarah Lawrence, Williams, the College of William and Mary, the University of Hawaii , the University of Miami, the New School, St. Petersburg, Russia and is currently Writer-in-Residence at Fordham. She lives in New York City and will be teaching in Kenya Christmas '06 and Bennington next spring. Her opera WET premiered at L.A. Disney Hall in December '05.

* *

DEB OLIN UNFERTH 's fiction has appeared in Harper's, Conjunctions, Fence, NOON, the Pushcart Prize anthologies, and elsewhere. Her first book is forthcoming from McSweeney's.

* *

****

* *

A limited edition of signed "Homeland Security" posters (our cover artwork for Issue 5) created by contributing artist & writer Marty Duane Ison<http://www.martyison.skyedragon.com/> * will be on sale, as will books by our featured authors. *

* *

*For further info, email:
[redacted]*<[redacted]>
* *

(type READINGS in the subject line)

* *

↑ Index

78. Alan Sondheim
Hell, 1930
Fri 5 Jan 2007

---

http://nikuko.blogspot.com/ text and video

Hell, 1930

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

79. tyrone williams
Re: Hell, 1930
Fri 5 Jan 2007

Alan,

Thanks for sharing this video and your commentary on the dance's "ontological" context/risk.

tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jan 5, 2007 1:42 PM

>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Hell, 1930
>
>http://nikuko.blogspot.com/ text and video
>
>Hell, 1930
>
>==========
>Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
>Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
>http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check >WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, >dvds, etc.
==========

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

80. Dodie Bellamy

White Columns NYC: Dodie Bellamy digs through Kathy Acker's stuff

Fri 5 Jan 2007

Kathy Acker, the novelist and theorist, died from breast cancer in 1997. Her papers are at Duke, but her clothes and accessories remain in the possession of her executor Matias Viegener. Beginning Tuesday, January 9 I will display a selection of Kathy Acker's clothes at White Columns in New York City, and on Wednesday, January 10 at 7:30 I will give a presentation, "Digging Through Kathy Acker's Stuff." Last February while visiting Viegener in Los Angeles, I rummaged through Acker's extravagant designer wardrobe, and wheedled one of her Gautier dresses from him, and a couple pieces of jewelry. Possessing such intimate effects of a woman I wasn't so much friends with as in awe of, I felt compelled to write it all out. I meditate upon relics, ghosts, compulsive shopping, archives, make-up, our drive to mythologize the dead, Acker's own self-mythologizing, the struggle among followers to define Acker, bitch fights, and the numina of DNA.

Details about the general exhibit are below.

Hope to see you there!

Dodie

WHITE COLUMNS

OPENING RECEPTION: TUESDAY, JANUARY 9, 6 - 9pm

GALLERY
"The Perfect Man Show," curated by Rita Ackermann

artists include: Lizzi Bougatsos, Leigh Bowery and Fergus Greer, Katarina Burin, Spartacus Chetwynd, Isa Genzken, Hanna Liden, Klara Liden, Lily Ludlow, Mirka Lugosi, Breyer P-Orridge, Carol Rama, Aurie Ramirez, Judith Scott, Hrafnhildur Arnardottir aka Shoplifter, Agathe Snow, Emily Sunblad, "under the name Cicciolina," and Marianne Vit

THE BULLETIN BOARD
Mathew Sawyer

WHITE ROOM
Simon Bedwell

WHITE ROOM
Christopher Garrett

PROJECT
Dodie Bellamy - "Kathy Forest"

SPECIAL READING! Dodie Bellamy will read "Digging Through Kathy Acker's Stuff" on Wednesday, January 10 at 7.30pm in the gallery. Admission free.

JANUARY 9 - FEBRUARY 10, 2007

TUESDAY - SATURDAY 12 - 6 pm

WHITE COLUMNS
320 West 13th Street
New York, NY 10014
[redacted] ph. [redacted] fx.
<http://www.whitecolumns.org> www.whitecolumns.org

↑ Index

81. Lewis LaCook

Ohio is warm and sick with winds - Xanax Pop - The Poetry of Lewis LaCook

Fri 5 Jan 2007

Ohio is warm and sick with winds.
Trains moan through winter evening dark, memorializing distance. Explosions poppy, woven from pixels from an abandoned game in the woods; Alex found an arm there, lying on the grass. It was grasping coughs.

This is what it means to be precious.

The War rouged over, grumpy, wearing your sweater, won't cool if you blow on it.
We grew up in imagined engines, in graveyards lying face-down among a pool of rhododendron.

We made honey. And all our lower levels flood.

Lewis LaCook, Senior Engineer
Abstract Outlooks Media

http://www.abstractoutlooks.com
Abstract Outlooks Media - Premium Web Hosting, Development, and Art Photography
http://www.lewislacook.org
lewislacook.org - New Media Poetry and Poetics
http://www.xanaxpop.org
Xanax Pop - the poetry of Lewis LaCook

****

||http://www.lewislacook.org||
New Media Poetry and Poetics

||http://www.abstractoutlooks.com ||
Abstract Outlooks Media - A New Vision for A New Web
Hosting, Design, Development

||http://xanaxpop.lewislacook.org||
Xanax Pop - A Bloge of Poemes

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

82. Jeffrey Side
'Inside Dolphin Skull' -- essay on Michael McClure's poem at The Argotist Online
Fri 5 Jan 2007

'Inside Dolphin Skull' -- essay on Michael McClure's poem by Paul E. Nelson:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Nelson%20essay.htm

↑ Index

83. Jeffrey Side

Contribution by Anny Ballardini of Poet's Corner to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature.

Fri 5 Jan 2007

There is a contribution by Anny Ballardini of Poets' Corner to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Anny%20Ballardini.htm

↑ Index

84. Tim Peterson

AKILAH OLIVER & JILL MAGI: Saturday Jan 6, 4-6 PM at BPC

Fri 5 Jan 2007

Poetry Reading--please come!

Akilah Oliver & Jill Magi

Saturday, January 6, 4-6 PM (please be punctual--we are starting on time!)
Segue Reading Series at The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery, just north of Houston
New York, New York

Akilah Olver is the author of the she said dialogues:flesh memory and is core faculty at the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics, Naropa University.
She is the author of a chapbook/CD entitled An Arriving Guard of Angels, Thusly Coming to Greet. Portable Press at Yo-Yo labs is publishing a chapbook to commemorate this reading.

Jill Magi is the author of Threads, forthcoming from Futurepoem Books in Feburary 07, and Cadastral Map, a chapbook from Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs.
She is a writer in residence with the Lower Manhattan Cultural Council, she runs Sona Books, and teaches at City College and the Eugene Lang College of the New School.

hosted by Brenda Iijima & Evelyn Reilly

↑ Index

85. Peter Ciccariello
How language creates itself
Fri 5 Jan 2007

How language creates itself <http://www.cgi7.com/peterimages/how.htm>

-- Peter Ciccariello
Image - http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

86. mIEKAL aND
Re: longhouse press through time - 35 year bibliography
Sat 6 Jan 2007

Cralan

Thanks for posting this. The output here over 35 years is amazing & tho I'm familiar with some of the poets there's a lot here that I've never heard of before including the press. Projects that endure that long are rare.

~mIEKAL

On Jan 5, 2007, at 8:10 AM, cralan kelder wrote:

> this just came in,
> (evolution of small press in pictures, anecdote, hand motions, and behind > the scenes);
>
> Longhouse Bibliography from 1971 - 2006 is now online, complete with the editor Bob Arnold's annotations and a galaxy of title cover images.
>
> Please visit!
>
> Begin with the Longhouse Bibliography Part One 1971 - 1989
>
> http://www.LonghousePoetry.com/bibliography1.html
>
> And continue with Longhouse Bibliography Part Two 1990 - 2006
>
> http://www.LonghousePoetry.com/bibliography2.ht

"The more technological our societies, the more our walls ooze ghosts." —Italo Calvino

↑ Index

87. Jim Andrews
he said print is what people read deeply, not stuff on the internet
Sat 6 Jan 2007

---

he said print is what people read deeply, not stuff on the internet.

it is hard to read stuff on the internet deeply.

what we can do on the internet deeply is a bit different from read. or so i find, in my own reading of online work.

i think we start out not reading texts but watching videos or looking at pictures, or listening to audio, or playing games, or chatting, or playing with interactive works. that's what we're first attracted to in work, and then, if we're interested in that work and want to know more, we eventually get around to reading texts.

and from there it's a matter of going to and fro between and within media. not to the exclusion of texts, but within an integrated or at least related approach to various media. go fast and then go slow. go visual and then to the written word, use more of our senses and drive the computer like a mindbat.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

88. cris cheek
Re: Poetry & the Arts in Communicatas
Sat 6 Jan 2007

HI Stephen,

yes, (blowing trumpet) ethical issues of social/cultural/public (ALL problematic terms) poetic practice are very much the nub of my book imminent from Pantarchy 'the church, the school, the beer'. The work was made 'live' on a street corner in a small english city, Norwich. It was talked and narrowcast (via CB radio) throughout, including conversations with passers-by, taxi drivers, witnesses etctera. (http://www.plantarchy.us/Plantarchy_3.html) Similar timeframe to the tnwk conversation piececs such as the 'mayday' project and subsequent Millennium Collection, which directly preface projects lilke post secrets. Also Radio Taxi . . . from tnwk.

I am still working in developments out of this vein.
Here in Oxford the question what is a social poem is in circulation?

love and love
cris

On 1/1/07, Stephen Vincent <[redacted]> wrote:
> http://www.kqed.org/epArchive/R701010900
> (Podcast/Archive)
>
> This morning Michael Krasny's Forum show featured a number of visual > artists, performers and composers(no poets) essentially talking of > innovative art programs involved in community works (engaging political > issues, engaging citizens in the process), as well as some of the > participants talking about ways in which the internet is impacting their > works. The work of Joseph Beuys was one of the invoked. Larry Rinder at > CCA and Richard Kamler (sculptor) at USF spoke of relatively new > multidisciplinary art's programs in 'social practice' at each of their > schools.
>
> Interesting that this morning's program did not invite or consider ways in > which poets may be actively also involved 'social practice'. (Not a lot of > names jump into my somewhat hung-over, partied out mind!) Apart from poetry
> in the schools programs - which may or may not stir the larger social well - > is any body (or group) on this list involved in teaching or non-teaching > situations in which a poetry program actively engages exploring ways in > which 'the word' (and its investigations) is re-contextualizing the way in > which art (language) may reconfigure the experience and/or change of public > and/or social space??
>
> Or can any one name poets whose work may actively fit into the frame of 'a > social/public practice' - as say, maybe(?), different than a theoretical > one? Or the artists in other media a leap ahead or a leap back here?
>
> Curious!
>
> Stephen V
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>

↑ Index

89. cralan kelder

Re: longhouse press through time - 35 year bibliography

Sat 6 Jan 2007

Hi mIEKAL,

yes, i have to admit that i find the process intriguing, in terms of the ³art² of printing, and how its a lifestyle and an art as much as writing itself.
Perhaps that¹s why its endured for 35 years, for example, I imagine that most of the poets on this list will write for 35 years (hopefully more).

I like reading the bibliography because the longer i read & write, the more people who i once idealised become real people, and i seek parallels, in terms of the pursuit of writing and the interactions we all have with each other. The first time i saw the writers¹ names they were just names amongst hundreds of poets, these sort of mythological creatures who somehow made these small compelling books, and over time they become more accessible and human.

It took me a while to think about the fact that the people who wrote the books didn¹t actually make them.

we went and visited susan & bob arnold in vermont, where they live in an out of the way place, on a river tucked in the trees.

trying to get my mind round how books are actually put together. Also visited Erica van Horn & Simon Cutts of Coracle in Ireland, where they live near tipperary and make books in a small stone workshop with a calming widescreen view over green green fields.

I¹ve never been to visit Buffalo, although Simon Cutts told me that there are people there in the poetics program who practice the art of making books, etc.

of course, longhouse is different than large publishers who produce books, & i think maybe a defining difference is that Longhouse corresponds with the writers whose work they use, versus publishing house contracts, although I have no idea how that world works.

another press that intrigues me is Jargon Society, whom I think of as the original Gentlemen publishers. They¹ve posted extensive writings by Jeffery Beam on their website, detailing this process;
http://jargonbooks.com/snowflake1.html

in this case the bibliography of longhouse is so nice to read because it illustratively explains step-by-step how small publications come into existence.

i think what i am getting at is that theres more than just the books & the form here. There are stories behind the publications are half as interesting as the books themselves, like listening to poets talk about stories behind poems.

On 1/6/07 6:43 AM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Cralan
>
> Thanks for posting this. The output here over 35 years is amazing & > tho I'm familiar with some of the poets there's a lot here that I've never heard of before including the press. Projects that endure that long are rare.

>
> ~mIEKAL
>
> On Jan 5, 2007, at 8:10 AM, cralan kelder wrote:
>
> this just came in,
> (evolution of small press in pictures, anecdote, hand motions, and behind > the scenes);
>
> Longhouse Bibliography from 1971 - 2006 is now online, complete with the editor Bob Arnold's annotations and a galaxy of title cover images.
>
> Please visit!
>
> Begin with the Longhouse Bibliography Part One 1971 - 1989
>
> http://www.LonghousePoetry.com/bibliography1.html
>
> And continue with Longhouse Bibliography Part Two 1990 - 2006
>
> http://www.LonghousePoetry.com/bibliography2.ht
>
> "The more technological our societies, the more our walls ooze ghosts."
> ‹Italo Calvino

↑ Index

90. Jeffrey Side

Contribution by Adam Fieled of P.F.S. Post to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature.

Sat 6 Jan 2007

There is a contribution by Adam Fieled of P.F.S. Post to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Adam%20Fieled.htm

↑ Index

91. sandra de 1913

1913's happy new ears

Sat 6 Jan 2007

1913 is accepting entries through January 13, 2007 for the 1913 PRIZE

for an unpublished selection of work to be featured in 1913 a journal of forms, issue 3 with an introduction.

Submissions may be verbal, visual, or any combination (25 pages maximum).

$10 entry fee

ALL entries will be considered for publication by 1913.

Multiple entries are acceptable.
1913 is not reading unsolicited submissions to the journal aside from the contest at this time.

ALL contest entrants will receive a copy of 1913 a journal of forms, issue 3.

1913 Prize winner will receive $100 and two copies of the journal.

To submit online, please visit:
http://www.journal1913.org/prizes.html

Or mail submissions (postmarked through January 13) to:

1913 a journal of forms
Box 9654
Hollins University
Roanoke, Virginia 24020

Please feel free to email the [redacted] with any questions.

And do check out the website & journal to get a sense of 1913's sensibility:
http://www.journal1913.org

1913 a journal of forms issue 3 will feature work by:
Shin Yu Pai
Fanny Howe
Alan Halsey
Tyrone Williams
Norma Cole
Dan Beachy Quick
Biswamit Dwibedy
Greta Wrolstad
& many more...

Many thanks for your work, & happy new y'ears to vous!

↑ Index

92. Simon DeDeo
two years of rhubarb is susan
Sat 6 Jan 2007

This past Friday marked the two year anniversay of rhubarb is susan. With over one hundred and twenty reviews of contemporary poets, I'm still going strong. I'm not proud. Or tired.

Up this weekend are four reviews: of Kate Greenstreet's new(ish) book, Kristy Bowen in alice blue, Roy Bentley in pavement saw, and Gordon Massman. Tune in, read some poems and enjoy the low-cal commentary thereafter.

http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/kate-greenstreet-will-become-rock-hard.html http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/kristy-bowen-footnotes-to-history-of.html http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/roy-bentley-from-approximately.html http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/gordon-massman-573.html

Also, please don't forget: absent magazine is soliciting for its second issue. You can read the first up at http://absentmag.org/issue01/index.html , and if you do want to send us material for April, please be sure to read the guidelines for proper submission format at http://absentmag.org/guidelines.html

Many thanks and a belated Happy New Year,

Simon

↑ Index

93. C. A. Conrad
DEMOLICIOUS presents Gerrit Lansing and CAConrad TOMORROW @ 2:30pm
Sat 6 Jan 2007

Join us for open mic and poets Gerrit Lansing and CAConrad

SUNDAY, Jan. 7, 2:30 p.m.
2:00 P.M.
OUT OF THE BLUE GALLERY
106 Prospect St.
Cambridge, Mass.

GERRIT LANSING was born in Albany, New York in 1928. He grew up on farm in northern Ohio and was schooled in Ohio, Massachusetts and New York and now lives in Gloucester, Mass. His poetry publications include Heavenly Tree / Soluble Forest (Talisman, 1995) and A February Sheaf (selected poetry and prose, Pressed Wafer, 2003). He edited SET, a poetry magazine with History and Magic as its axes. His interests include playing classical music on the piano, walking the woods, herbalism, Nath Yoga, qigong, mathesis, astrosophy.

CACONRAD's childhood included selling cut flowers along the highway for his mother and helping her shoplift. He escaped to Philadelphia the first chance he got, where he lives and writes today with the PhillySound poets (www.PhillySound.blogspot.com). Soft Skull Press recently published his book Deviant Propulsion. He recently co-authored The B. Franklin Basement Tapes with Frank Sherlock for NEXUS Gallery in Philadelphia. For correspondence, please write to [redacted] (mailto:[redacted]) .

Demolicious events are held the first Sunday of every month from September to June.
$5

For further information go to our Web site, _http://www.demolicious.net_ (http://www.demolicious.net) , or email [redacted] (mailto:[redacted])

↑ Index

94. Ian Randall Wilson

88: A Journal of Contemporary American Poetry / Issue 6

Sat 6 Jan 2007

Issue 6 of 88: A Journal of Contemporary American Poetry has just been published. Many participants on the Poetics list responded to our call, and we were able to include on number of them in this latest issue.
88: A Journal of Contemporary American Poetry / Issue 6
Ian Randall Wilson (editor)
$13.95 paper
ISBN 13 978-0-9772298-6-4
ISBN 10 0-9772298-6-6.
140 pp. 6x9"
Available from Hollyridge Press
www.HollyridgePress.com
Contributors are:
Eric Brian Abbott
Cynthia Arrieu-King
Trina Baker
Dorothy Barresi
Cara Benson

Rebbecca Brown
Scott Challener
Alan Clinton
Sean Thomas Dougherty
Susan Elbe
Bill Freind
Kathleen Hellen
Dan Howell
Cralan Kelder
Amy King
Lance Larsen
David Lawrence
Dawn Lonsinger
Thomas March
Tiffany Merriman-Preston
T.A. Noonan
Matthew Olzmann
Tom Orange
Kathleen Ossip
Amisha Patel
Marc Pietrzykowski
Dan Pinkerton
Derek Pollard
Donna Prinzmetal
Lee Rossi
Zach Savich
Rachel M. Simon
John E. Smelcer
Jessica Storm
Celina Su
Michelle Taransky
Sam Truitt
David Wagoner
Emily Watson
Kathleene West
Ian Randall Wilson
Terence Winch
Theodore Worozbyt
Gerald Yelle
[88 is now on hiatus and not considering new work. Please check the website at _www.hollyridgepress.com_ (http://www.hollyridgepress.com) for status updates.]

↑ Index

95. Haas Bianchi

Chicago Postmodernpoetry.com is updated for January with Interview of Durgin and Taransky

Sat 6 Jan 2007

Chicagopostmodernpoetry.com is updated for January with the Chicago Calendar for Jan-Feb-and March and poetic profiles of Patrick Durgin and Michelle Taransky

Note to Chicago Reading Series I need your updates asap for the calendar

Raymond L Bianchi
chicagopostmodernpoetry.com/
collagepoetchicago.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

96. Paul Hardacre

papertiger: new world poetry #07 - poetry at the end of th e world

Sun 7 Jan 2007

Hi List,

Just thought I should share this call for submissions with you ...

Cheers,

Paul.

papertiger: new world poetry #07 - poetry at the end of the world

Hot on the heels of its recent double issue, papertiger: new world poetry is open to submissions of poetry in its many guises for #07.

The first themed issue in papertiger: new world poetry's seven year history, #07 will explore 'the end of the world'.

Think: millennialism, comets, Twin Towers, lost job, the break-up, sea of glass, the Beast 666, 'troop surge', colonialisation, losing lotto ticket, the unanswered prayer, tsunami, Katrina, Godzilla, guns, Nostradamus, darkness, zombies in shopping malls, bird flu, slavery, dogs howling, mushroom clouds, mutations, the lover you never knew she had, scorched earth, Pompeii, Conflagration, the Y2K let-down, Axis of Evil, Fenris, aliens, oil shortage, Darfur, depleted uranium, the funeral, machine wars, Nero fiddling, your favourite band's last album, black holes, Judgment Day, phone rage, cancer, dark matter, Mayan calendar, survivalists, he drowned before I could reach him . and you've got the picture!

Send your submissions of poetry - including multimedia (i.e. video, audio, Flash animated) poetry, poetry-related visual art and photography, and essays - to us by 01 March 2007, to be considered.

Check our submission guidelines at http://www.papertigermedia.com/guidelines/pt_guidelines.htm for all the details.

↑ Index

97. Peter Ciccariello

Thought machine

Sun 7 Jan 2007

Thought machine<http://i5.pbase.com/o6/06/512806/1/72713982.n1PKdot4.Thoughtmachine.jpg>

-- Peter Ciccariello
Image - http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/
Word - http://poemsfromprovidence.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

98. Jeffrey Side

No more male contributions to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature needed.

Sun 7 Jan 2007

I have enough male editors for this feature, but I still need more women. Jeff

↑ Index

99. mIEKAL aND

You've been Plutoed

Sun 7 Jan 2007

Pluto's revenge: 'Word of the Year' award
POSTED: 10:56 a.m. EST, January 7, 2007

(CNN) -- Pluto may no longer be a planet, but it has a new claim to fame: "Plutoed" has been chosen 2006 Word of the Year by the American Dialect Society.

The society defined "to pluto" as "to demote or devalue someone or something, as happened to the former planet Pluto when the General Assembly of the International Astronomical Union decided Pluto no longer met its definition of a planet."

The former planet had some tough competition in the voting, which took place Friday at the ADS' annual meeting, held in Anaheim, California.

"Plutoed" won in a runoff against "climate canary," defined as "an organism or species whose poor health or declining numbers hint at a larger environmental catastrophe on the horizon."

The runner-up was "macaca" or "macaca moment," defined as "treating an American citizen as an alien" -- a reference to a campaign remark by former Virginia Sen. George Allen that some say marked the beginning of the end for his re-election hopes.

Also in the running for Word of the Year were YouTube; surge (referring to a large, but brief, increase in troop strength); and flog ("a fake blog created by a corporation to promote a product or a television show").

Like any good awards show, the ADS meeting had multiple categories.

In the "Most Unnecessary" category, "SuriKat" (the supposed nickname of the baby girl of Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes) beat out "the decider," President Bush's description in April of his position in relation to whether Donald Rumsfeld kept his job as secretary of defense.

The "Most Outrageous" award went to "Cambodian accessory," defined as "Angelina Jolie's adopted child who is Cambodian."

In the "Most Euphemistic" category, the winner was "waterboarding," defined as "an interrogation technique in which the subject is immobilized and doused with water to simulate drowning."

The ADS has been choosing Words of the Year since 1990. The Word of the Year for 2005 was "truthiness," invented by Comedy Central's "The Colbert Report," and defined by the ADS as "what one wishes to be the truth regardless of the facts." (Read the full list of winners for 2006 and past years)

Winning words or phrases don't have to be brand new; what's important is that they gained new prominence in the past year. The society is dedicated to the study of the English language in North America, and includes academics, writers, and others.

↑ Index

100. Jeffrey Side

Contribution by Alison Croggon of Masthead to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature.

Sun 7 Jan 2007

There is a contribution by Alison Croggon of Masthead to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature.

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Alison%20Croggon.htm

↑ Index

101. Adam Fieled
Steve Halle, Jeff Crouch on PFS Post
Sun 7 Jan 2007

New work from Steve Halle & Jeff Crouch here:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Also: Videodrome, the Raincoats, Shanna Compton, everything else under the sun:

http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

102. Eric Yost
our tiny world
Sun 7 Jan 2007

---

http://www.bigskyastroclub.org/pale_blue_dot.htm

↑ Index

103. Anny Ballardini
Re: You've been Plutoed
Sun 7 Jan 2007

Poor Pluto, indeed!

On 1/7/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Pluto's revenge: 'Word of the Year' award
> POSTED: 10:56 a.m. EST, January 7, 2007
>
> (CNN) -- Pluto may no longer be a planet, but it has a new claim to > fame: "Plutoed" has been chosen 2006 Word of the Year by the American > Dialect Society.
>
> The society defined "to pluto" as "to demote or devalue someone or > something, as happened to the former planet Pluto when the General > Assembly of the International Astronomical Union decided Pluto no > longer met its definition of a planet."

>
> The former planet had some tough competition in the voting, which > took place Friday at the ADS' annual meeting, held in Anaheim, > California.
>
> "Plutoed" won in a runoff against "climate canary," defined as "an > organism or species whose poor health or declining numbers hint at a > larger environmental catastrophe on the horizon."
>
> The runner-up was "macaca" or "macaca moment," defined as "treating > an American citizen as an alien" -- a reference to a campaign remark > by former Virginia Sen. George Allen that some say marked the > beginning of the end for his re-election hopes.
>
> Also in the running for Word of the Year were YouTube; surge > (referring to a large, but brief, increase in troop strength); and > flog ("a fake blog created by a corporation to promote a product or a > television show").
>
> Like any good awards show, the ADS meeting had multiple categories.
>
> In the "Most Unnecessary" category, "SuriKat" (the supposed nickname > of the baby girl of Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes) beat out "the > decider," President Bush's description in April of his position in > relation to whether Donald Rumsfeld kept his job as secretary of > defense.
>
> The "Most Outrageous" award went to "Cambodian accessory," defined as > "Angelina Jolie's adopted child who is Cambodian."
>
> In the "Most Euphemistic" category, the winner was "waterboarding," > defined as "an interrogation technique in which the subject is > immobilized and doused with water to simulate drowning."
>
> The ADS has been choosing Words of the Year since 1990. The Word of > the Year for 2005 was "truthiness," invented by Comedy Central's "The > Colbert Report," and defined by the ADS as "what one wishes to be the > truth regardless of the facts." (Read the full list of winners for > 2006 and past years)
>

> Winning words or phrases don't have to be brand new; what's important > is that they gained new prominence in the past year.
> The society is dedicated to the study of the English language in > North America, and includes academics, writers, and others.
>

↑ Index

104. Gabriel Gudding
lisa jarnot email contact info
Sun 7 Jan 2007

---

cd someone please help me get in touch with lisa? i keep getting messages from her server bot that say my email isn't recognized by her server.

wd appreciate it.

gabe
--
_____
http://gabrielgudding.blogspot.com

Gabriel Gudding
Department of English
Illinois State University
Normal, Illinois 61790
[redacted] (office)

↑ Index

105. Jesse Crockett
Call for work --- Listenlight 06
Sun 7 Jan 2007

We could be the only journal to show you the cover before you send in your work. Can you judge a journal by its cover? No, of course not --- but right now, we wish...

Have a look at the new cover (3rd beta) for issue 06, http://listenlight.net/06, and send us your best, permanent web archive work, either textual or visual.

Listenlight.net averages between 120 & 200 visits per month, on steady rise since our July inception.

Best wishes for the new year from the Listenlight editors.

↑ Index

106. Alexander Jorgensen

I love America

Sun 7 Jan 2007

I love America, I who can't say the national anthom.

Love it for its folksy, for all those mongrels and
tainted and tatty folk.

For the churches down South, where I, an angnostic, can't help to cry...undersanding freedom is something earned.

For clean brooks and forest...and lobster with claws...
and canyons where gawds still live...

For whales breaching high tides...and we got our sturgeons..used have what was considered the FINEST
caviar!

For Jewish delis and Italian immigrants who gave the world a proper sandwhich (gawd damn those Americans for thinking Jewish food was anything was EASTERN EUROPEAN)

For transparency and gay rights, and environmentalist movement, for the most diverse work force, the most powerful women and people of color, for best universities and most generous nation (that's gov't and private folk) for a sign, he said, there was globing warming...

For religious freedom and a gov't that is ACUTALLY integrated - unliked everyone else...for a man who'd
press his hand on Jefferson's Islamic bible

For a bill of rights, and TOM PAINE...Tom Paine, who
the French'd jail..and who'd create Anglo-American Liberalism

There aint nothin better, sorry George B., nothin better...and I can say this drinking coffee and not tea, although we created the tea bag, and dropped boxes of it into the sea...no, we aint British, can't claim that pose....but we a republic - at least!

And for Pan-Africanism....Ali, damn if you don't know...and even those Irish who lynched our brothers!
- and who later sent home money for the IRA. Where is
W.E.B?

It is so easy to hate, what is so beutiful...so easy to scorn, what aint perfect...but I love it...ew!

I love Bruce Lee and Rep. Matsui, that fella from Hungry, that homo named Franks - that I can march on Washingston - no guns - and claim to hate my country's leader - nowhere ELSE - and I HAVE SEEN NEARLY ELSE!
Do you know Inouye? (How about that regiment most decorated during WWII - family's in detention camps!)

Soldiers sing songs cussing GOd, but I don't want to cry.

AJ

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

107. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: I love America
Mon 8 Jan 2007

And I love lots of place - be sure - love Holland, France, never been to SPain, love even (but its complicated) China - things 'about Russia - Scandinavia - everyone's got somethin' - India -
India, so many temples so much about itself, be sure.
But I don't need to hate - cetainly not, my home - sweet home!

AJ
--- Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]> wrote:

> I love America, I who can't say the national anthom.
>
> Love it for its folksy, for all those mongrels and
> tainted and tatty folk.

For the churches down South, where I, an angnostic, can't help to cry...undersanding freedom is something
earned.

For clean brooks and forest...and lobster with
claws...
and canyons where gawds still live...

For whales breaching high tides...and we got our sturgeons..used have what was considered the FINEST
caviar!

For Jewish delis and Italian immigrants who gave the world a proper sandwhich (gawd damn those Americans
for thinking Jewish food was anything was EASTERN EUROPEAN)

For transparency and gay rights, and environmentalist movement, for the most diverse work force, the most powerful women and people of color, for best
universities and most generous nation (that's gov't and private folk) for a sign, he said, there was globing warming...

For religious freedom and a gov't that is ACUTALLY
integrated - unliked everyone else...for a man who'd
press his hand on Jefferson's Islamic bible

For a bill of rights, and TOM PAINE...Tom Paine, who
the French'd jail..and who'd create Anglo-American Liberalism

There aint nothin better, sorry George B., nothin better...and I can say this drinking coffee and not tea, although we created the tea bag, and dropped boxes of it into the sea...no, we aint British, can't claim that pose....but we a republic - at least!

And for Pan-Africanism....Ali, damn if you don't know...and even those Irish who lynched our brothers!
- and who later sent home money for the IRA. Where
is
W.E.B?

> It is so easy to hate, what is so beutiful...so easy
> to scorn, what aint perfect...but I love it...ew!
>
> I love Bruce Lee and Rep. Matsui, that fella from > Hungry, that homo named Franks - that I can march on > Washingston - no guns - and claim to hate my > country's > leader - nowhere ELSE - and I HAVE SEEN NEARLY ELSE!
>
> Do you know Inouye? (How about that regiment most > decorated during WWII - family's in detention > camps!)
>
> Soldiers sing songs cussing GOd, but I don't want to > cry.
>
> AJ
>
> ---
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam > protection around
> http://mail.yahoo.com

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

108. konrad

SF Event: Neo-benshi at Poets Theater

Mon 8 Jan 2007

* * * L I V E F I L M N A R R A T I O N * * *

Friday, January 26th, 7:30
Small Press Traffic Poets Theater Jamboree presents
Neo-Benshi Night: Muted & Mutated Movies
California College of Arts, Timken Hall
San Francisco Campus
1111 Eighth Street (at Irwin)

$10 - a benefit for SPT

Just as no person is just a job title, no movie is what it seems to be. Anyway not once a benshi gets hold of it. The following neo-benshi film narrators premier their own re-interpretations of various genre scenes live with video. Our lawyers suggested that we only give you the letters of the films' titles. You can enjoy puzzling it out until the show:

Mary Burger (publisher) impresses with her FAVORITE HELL WILLING music video
Del Ray Cross (executive assistant) proves his ART HUNCK CRED
  'frisco produced porn-mystery feature Amanda Davidson (library technician) checks out REFER STRAIT pre-teen conspiracy drama
Jen Hofer (court interpreter) translates 1000 DEAD SMILEYS cold war detective story

Colter Jacobsen (caretaker) prescribes a 'LUDE seventies thriller
Jennifer Nellis (literature student) forks over I, SPOON fifties TV suspense
Wayne Smith (musician) decomposes the LAD RING cycle sixties English hipster society drama
Konrad Steiner (computer technician) releases LE PAPA GOTH MEME post-war sci fi

Curated by KS

^Z

↑ Index

109. sue walker
Re: Call for work --- Listenlight 06
Mon 8 Jan 2007

Forgot to say that class will be in the Humanities building at school -- 2nd floor seminar room -- at least for now. Tuesday night is the first class.

Look forward to seeing you,

Sue

On Jan 7, 2007, at 8:10 PM, Jesse Crockett wrote:

> We could be the only journal to show you the cover before you send in your work. Can you judge a journal by its cover? No, of course > not --- but right now, we wish...

>
> Have a look at the new cover (3rd beta) for issue 06, http://listenlight.net/06, and send us your best, permanent web archive work, either textual or visual.
>
> Listenlight.net averages between 120 & 200 visits per month, on steady rise since our July inception.
>
> Best wishes for the new year from the Listenlight editors.

↑ Index

110. sue walker

Re: Call for work --- Listenlight 06

Mon 8 Jan 2007

Message sent by mistake.

S

On Jan 8, 2007, at 12:10 AM, sue walker wrote:

> Forgot to say that class will be in the Humanities building at school -- 2nd floor seminar room -- at least for now. Tuesday night is the first class.
>
> Look forward to seeing you,
>
> Sue
>
> On Jan 7, 2007, at 8:10 PM, Jesse Crockett wrote:
>
> We could be the only journal to show you the cover before you send in your work. Can you judge a journal by its cover? No, of course not --- but right now, we wish...
>
> Have a look at the new cover (3rd beta) for issue 06, http://listenlight.net/06, and send us your best, permanent web archive work, either textual or visual.
>
> Listenlight.net averages between 120 & 200 visits per month, on steady rise since our July inception.
>
> Best wishes for the new year from the Listenlight editors.

↑ Index

111. Laura Winton
Re: Call for work --- Listenlight 06
Mon 8 Jan 2007

That is a beautiful cover.

I feel inadequate next to it.

=8-0

-----Original Message-----
From: Jesse Crockett [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, January 07, 2007 8:10 PM
Subject: Call for work --- Listenlight 06

We could be the only journal to show you the cover before you send in your work. Can you judge a journal by its cover? No, of course not --- but right now, we wish...

Have a look at the new cover (3rd beta) for issue 06, http://listenlight.net/06, and send us your best, permanent web archive work, either textual or visual.

Listenlight.net averages between 120 & 200 visits per month, on steady rise since our July inception.

Best wishes for the new year from the Listenlight editors.

↑ Index

112. Jesse Crockett
Re: Call for work --- Listenlight 06
Mon 8 Jan 2007

Hey, thanks. I just threw it together.

Yes, please take a look: http://listenlight.net/06. All welcome to send work, especially work that relates somehow to the visual theme.

Best wishes,
Jesse Crockett

Laura Winton wrote:
> That is a beautiful cover.
>
> I feel inadequate next to it.
>
> =8-0
>
>

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Jesse Crockett [mailto:[redacted]]
> Sent: Sunday, January 07, 2007 8:10 PM
> Subject: Call for work --- Listenlight 06
>
> We could be the only journal to show you the cover before you send in > your work. Can you judge a journal by its cover? No, of course not --- > but right now, we wish...
>
> Have a look at the new cover (3rd beta) for issue 06, > http://listenlight.net/06, and send us your best, permanent web archive > work, either textual or visual.
>
> Listenlight.net averages between 120 & 200 visits per month, on steady > rise since our July inception.
>
> Best wishes for the new year from the Listenlight editors.
>

↑ Index

113. Poetics List

Fwd: [Msa-members] New OUP Book Series

Mon 8 Jan 2007

> Announcing a new book series from Oxford University Press: Modernist Literature & Culture, edited by Kevin J. H. Dettmar and Mark Wollaeger.
>
> Seeking out the best new work in the rejuvenated field of modernist studies, Modernist Literature & Culture (MLC) will explore the cultural bearings of literary modernism across multiple fields, geographies, symbolic forms, and media. The editors are currently looking for book manuscripts that synthesize close attention to literary texts with the kind of interdisciplinary cultural approaches that have come to be associated with "the new modernist studies." Beginning in Fall 2008, MLC will annually publish three to four ground-breaking, innovative, and energetic books that explore the breadth and depth of modernist studies.
>
> Studies in modernism have for a long time recognized the importance of cross-pollination among the traditional "sister arts" (literature, painting, and music); but today, more media are being drawn into the mix - film, radio, and phonography, among others - and modernist studies is paying more attention to related work in fields such as media history and theory, aural culture, visual > culture, and sociology. At the same time, the cultural focus has broadened to include architecture, ethnography, and popular music. Rather than dissolve the rhetorical complexities of literature into an undifferentiated stew of cultural productions, MLC will maintain a primary focus on literature, while exploring its engagement with complementary and competing media.

>
> Although traditional accounts of Anglo-American and European modernism typically assign it to a period ranging from 1850 to 1945 (or thereabouts), MLC recognizes that important forms of modernist production emerged later in other parts of the world, and the series is open to the full breadth of modernism, wherever and whenever it is found.
>
> For more information, contact the editors, Kevin Dettmar ([redacted]) and Mark Wollaeger ([redacted]).
>
> ---
> Mark Wollaeger
> Associate Professor of English
> Vanderbilt University
> [redacted]
> New Book: Modernism, Media, and Propaganda:
> http://www.pupress.princeton.edu/titles/8295.html
> Faculty Homepage:
> http://www.vanderbilt.edu/english/wollaeger
> Personal Homepage:
> http://www.vanderbilt.edu/AnS/english/mwollaeger/
>
> _____
> Msa-members mailing list
> [redacted]
> http://chaos.press.jhu.edu/mailman/listinfo/msa-members

via Maria Damon <[redacted]>

↑ Index

114. Dan Waber
ars poetica
Mon 8 Jan 2007

Six days ago I started:

http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/

This is a themed blog (ars poetica, or, poems about poetry) that will lead to a print anthology.

I invited five of my favorite poets to send me an ars poetica they'd written along with the names and email addresses of five other poets. I then invited those twenty-five poets to do the same. I then invited those hundred and twenty-five poets to do the same. I then invited...you get the picture.

Every poem submitted will appear on the website, one per day, and be archived by author and date.

The print anthology will be published by Paper Kite Press when the editors (Jennifer Hill-Kaucher and Dan Waber) determine that a book length collection of the very best of these poems exists, which, at a poem a day, is likely to take a year or more.

Submissions are by connected chain of invitation only, this is NOT an open call, but anyone interested in reading poems about poetry is certainly invited to come visit every day for their daily dose.

The ripples are spreading outward in the most delightful ways. Keep watching and see.

Regards,
Dan

I'm at: http://www.logolalia.com/
The blog mentioned is at: http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/Paper Kite Press is at:
http://www.wordpainting.com/paperkitepress/pkpshop.html

↑ Index

115. Small Press Traffic

Poets Theater & Spring 2007 events

Mon 8 Jan 2007

Happy New Year! As is our habit, we are beginning this January with our annual Poets Theater Jamboree, our board's biggest fundraiser of the year. We hope to see you here!

All seats are $10, we don't take reservations, so arrive promptly for best results!

FRIDAY, JANUARY 19, 2007 at 7:30 P.M.
“Tarantula” / Written & Directed by Marc Arthur.

“Orgasm” / Written by Dodie Bellamy / Directed by Margaret Tedesco

“Bowl, Cat and Broomstick” (1917) / Written by Wallace Stevens / Directed by Dana Teen Lomax & Danna Lomax

“The Haunted House” / Written & Directed by Brandon Downing

“Pig Angels of the Americlypse” & “Spine” Written by Rodrigo Toscano / Directed by Stephanie Young

“The Party” / Written by Lisa Jarnot / Directed by Kevin Killian

Friday, January 26, 2007 at 7:30 P.M.
Neo-Benshi Night: Sound Off!??

Beyond the flotsam of YouTube, and exceeding the drunken sentiments of karaoke, Neo-Benshi is live narration and subversion of moving pictures.

In this evening’s eight episodes??

Mary Burger reanimates Michel Gondry;
Del Ray Cross cracks Kurt McDowell;
Amanda Davidson pirates Pippi;
Jen Hofer x-rays Robert Aldrich;
Colter Jacobsen duels Stephen Spielberg;
Jen Nellis poisons Alfred Hitchcock;
Wayne Smith parties with John Schlesinger;
and Konrad Steiner hosts “The Gamma People”

Friday, FEBRUARY 2, 2007 at 7:30 P.M.

“Hooligan’s Island,” / Written & Directed by Scott MacLeod

“Self/Cell” / Text by Olivia E. Sears / Images by Aline Mare / Music by Craig Bicknell

“The Deathperts” / Written & Directed by Chana Morgenstern

Selections from “James Joyce, Marcel Duchamp, Erik Satie: An Alphabet” (1982) Written by John Cage / Directed by Marie Carbone / With Gillian Conoley, Patricia Dienstfrey, Dale Going, Brenda Hillman, Denise Liddell Lawson, Denise Newman, giovanni singleton and Carol Snow

“The Gunfight” / Written & Directed by Brent Cunningham

FEED / Written & directed by Juliana Spahr

& coming up later in the spring -- all events at 7:30, $5:

Friday February 16
Vanessa Place & Christine Wertheim

Friday February 23
Noelle Kocot & Jill Magi

SATURDAY March 3
Sarah Ann Cox & Myung Mi Kim

Friday March 9
Stephen Ratcliffe & Stephen Rodefer

Friday March 16
Katie Degentesh & Drew Gardner

Friday March 23
Jack Kimball & Suzanne Stein

Friday April 13
Ed Roberson & Evie Shockley

Sunday April 22
Anne Boyer & William Moor
(co-sponsored by New Yipes, @ 21 Grand)

Friday May 18
Julie Carr & Andrew Joron

Friday May 25
Paul Hoover & Tenney Nathanson

Elizabeth Treadwell, Director
Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]
http://www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

116. George Bowering
Re: Patchen in color?
Mon 8 Jan 2007

I think that the originals are black on white.
The one I have is.

gb

On 31-Dec-06, at 5:23 PM, David Harrison Horton wrote:

> Hi all,
>
> Just a quick query to ask if there's an edition out there of Kenneth > Patchen's "picture-poems" (ie. vispo) in color?
>
> I have b&w editions of Wonderings and Hallelujuah Anyway and would > like to these and more in color if they are available.

>
> Thanks.David Harrison Horton
> unionherald.blogspot.com
> _____
> Fixing up the home? Live Search can help.
> http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?
> kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=wlmemailtaglinenov06
>
Giorgio H. Bowering
Does not kill snakes

↑ Index

117. mIEKAL aND
Re: Patchen in color?
Mon 8 Jan 2007

I have this calendar which has some great examples in color... Highly recommend it.

Sure is One Peculiar Way to Run a Ballgame
Kenneth Patchen Calendar 1996

http://www.connectotel.com/patchen/patcal.html

~mIEKAL

On Jan 8, 2007, at 1:53 PM, George Bowering wrote:

> I think that the originals are black on white.
> The one I have is.
>
> gb
>
> On 31-Dec-06, at 5:23 PM, David Harrison Horton wrote:
>
> Hi all,
>
> Just a quick query to ask if there's an edition out there of > Kenneth Patchen's "picture-poems" (ie. vispo) in color?
>
> *I have b&w editions of Wonderings and Hallelujuah Anyway and* > would like to these and more in color if they are available.
>
> Thanks.David Harrison Horton
> unionherald.blogspot.com
>
> _____

> Fixing up the home? Live Search can help.
> http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?
> kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=wlmemailtaglinenov06
>
> Giorgio H. Bowering
> Does not kill snakes

↑ Index

118. George Bowering
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Mon 8 Jan 2007

On 2-Jan-07, at 2:23 PM, cralan kelder wrote:

> Yes, granted, selling out is bad thing, is inauthentic, is disingenuous somehow – is trying to sell you something, the beauty of poetry being that > nobody is trying to sell you anything.
>
> However that begs the question, should poetry not make you want to "buy" it?

I don't see.
How is that begging the question?

>
G.H. Bowering
His father's son.
Mother's, too.

↑ Index

119. Stephen Vincent
Re: Patchen in color?
Mon 8 Jan 2007

Most of the originals I have seen are in color. Scrimshaw Press did a book of Patchen reproductions in the late sixties or early seventies. It is possible that Chronicle books did a reprint.

A little "Abebooks" (is it) research should bring up the title.

It's wonderful stuff - often - playful.

Patchen also typeset many of his early books. He liked to play with the page - typefaces, colors, etc. (Sleepers Awake, for example) It's too bad, if I recollect correctly, that his crippling back issues darkened his temperament and took him out of the public loop in the fifties and early sixties - when publciations by

New Directions and City Lights could have brought him more attention (Ferlinghetti, in part, took of on Patchen's lyric, goofy surreal side, as did Richard Brautigan).

I have not looked at the prose work in a long time. I suspect Patchen is another sad case of getting thrown down the "Depression writer" sink hole that New Critics et al were elated to dig. Does anybody write about him??

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
Where currently, "Water Spilled From Source To Use"
A text piece on Greenwich near Canal (NY) by Lawrence Weiner is photographed and talked about.

> I think that the originals are black on white.
> The one I have is.
>
> gb
>
> On 31-Dec-06, at 5:23 PM, David Harrison Horton wrote:
>
> Hi all,
>
> Just a quick query to ask if there's an edition out there of Kenneth Patchen's "picture-poems" (ie. vispo) in color?
>
> *I have b&w editions of Wonderings and Hallelujuah Anyway and would like to these and more in color if they are available.*
>
> Thanks.David Harrison Horton
> unionherald.blogspot.com
>
> ---
> Fixing up the home? Live Search can help.
> http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=wlmemailtaglinenov06
>
> Giorgio H. Bowering
> Does not kill snakes

↑ Index

120. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: Patchen in color?
Mon 8 Jan 2007

Patchen did a huge number of color works. All you have to do is search the web and you'll find a great deal--also there are book editions of a great many of the colors--some were originally printed in color----check yr library. Two sites I can think of off the top of my head with color paintings/poems by Patchen are Light and Dust and the Kenneth Patchen Home Site. Each one of these has twelve color pieces. And that's just for starters. The color works are beautiful!

> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Patchen in color?
> Date: Mon, 8 Jan 2007 11:53:21 -0800
>
> I think that the originals are black on white.
> The one I have is.
>
> gb
>
> On 31-Dec-06, at 5:23 PM, David Harrison Horton wrote:
>
> Hi all,
>
> Just a quick query to ask if there's an edition out there of Kenneth Patchen's "picture-poems" (ie. vispo) in color?
>
> *I have b&w editions of Wonderings and Hallelujuah Anyway and would like to these and more in color if they are available.*
>
> Thanks.David Harrison Horton
> unionherald.blogspot.com
>
> _____
> Fixing up the home? Live Search can help.
> http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=wlmemailtaglinenov06
>
> Giorgio H. Bowering
> Does not kill snakes

_____ Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page www.live.com/?addtemplate=football&icid=T001MSN30A0701

↑ Index

121. Skip Fox
Re: Patchen in color?
Mon 8 Jan 2007

Perhaps more a book of paintings with words, which may be termed vis-po, Patchen's _What Shall We Do Without Us? The Voice and Vision of Kenneth Patchen_ was publiched my Sierra Club books of San Francisco in 1984. I have a paperback edition and it is passing beautiful.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Stephen Vincent
Sent: Monday, January 08, 2007 2:47 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Patchen in color?

Most of the originals I have seen are in color. Scrimshaw Press did a book of Patchen reproductions in the late sixties or early seventies. It is possible that Chronicle books did a reprint.

A little "Abebooks" (is it) research should bring up the title.

It's wonderful stuff - often - playful.

Patchen also typeset many of his early books. He liked to play with the page - typefaces, colors, etc. (Sleepers Awake, for example) It's too bad, if I recollect correctly, that his crippling back issues darkened his temperament and took him out of the public loop in the fifties and early sixties - when publciations by New Directions and City Lights could have brought him more attention (Ferlinghetti, in part, took of on Patchen's lyric, goofy surreal side, as did Richard Brautigan).

I have not looked at the prose work in a long time. I suspect Patchen is another sad case of getting thrown down the "Depression writer" sink hole that New Critics et al were elated to dig. Does anybody write about him??

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
Where currently, "Water Spilled From Source To Use"
A text piece on Greenwich near Canal (NY) by Lawrence Weiner
is photographed and talked about.

> I think that the originals are black on white.
> The one I have is.
>
> gb

> On 31-Dec-06, at 5:23 PM, David Harrison Horton wrote:
>
> Hi all,
>
> Just a quick query to ask if there's an edition out there of Kenneth Patchen's "picture-poems" (ie. vispo) in color?
>
> *I have b&w editions of Wonderings and Hallelujuah Anyway and would like to these and more in color if they are available.*
>
> Thanks.David Harrison Horton
> unionherald.blogspot.com
>
> ---
>
> Fixing up the home? Live Search can help.
> http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=wlmemailtaglinenov06
>
> Giorgio H. Bowering
> Does not kill snakes

↑ Index

122. Alan Sondheim

My Best Times and Best Writing! At least I think so... :-(

Mon 8 Jan 2007

Please go to the blog below, and scroll down to M-D

Thanks, Alan

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

123. Jesse Crockett

Call for work --- Listenlight 06

Mon 8 Jan 2007

Thanks to all for sending in work for upcoming issue 06 at the listenlight poetry journal <http://listenlight.net/06>. The theme is, if you will, "putting out the fire on the water..." We're still looking for more good visual & textual work, experimental or not. In fact, this editor appreciates a good narrative poem now and then. Ghosts, aliens, zombies, flowers --- all of it. Anyone here doing anything like that? I'm interested.

Best wishes for the new year,
Jesse Crockett

↑ Index

124. Eric Yost
Re: Patchen in color?
Mon 8 Jan 2007

How about _The Journal of Albion Moonlight_ or _Sleepers Awake!_ as animated color movies? Or is that too Ted Turner?

↑ Index

125. Barry Schwabsky
Re: Patchen in color?
Mon 8 Jan 2007

Does someone know where the originals are now? Dispersed? Or in some collection?

David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote: Patchen did a huge number of color works. All you have to do is search the web and you'll find a great deal--also there are book editions of a great many of the colors--some were originally printed in color----check yr library. Two sites I can think of off the top of my head with color paintings/poems by Patchen are Light and Dust and the Kenneth Patchen Home Site. Each one of these has twelve color pieces. And that's just for starters. The color works are beautiful!

> From: George Bowering
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Patchen in color?
> Date: Mon, 8 Jan 2007 11:53:21 -0800
>
> I think that the originals are black on white.
> The one I have is.
>
> gb
>
> On 31-Dec-06, at 5:23 PM, David Harrison Horton wrote:
>
> Hi all,

> Just a quick query to ask if there's an edition out there of Kenneth Patchen's "picture-poems" (ie. vispo) in color?
>
> *I have b&w editions of Wonderings and Hallelujuah Anyway and would like to these and more in color if they are available.*
>
> Thanks.David Harrison Horton
> unionherald.blogspot.com
>
> _____
> Fixing up the home? Live Search can help.
> http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=wlmemailtaglinenov06
>
> Giorgio H. Bowering
> Does not kill snakes

_____ Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page www.live.com/?addtemplate=football&icid=T001MSN30A0701

↑ Index

126. Slaughter, William

Notice: Mudlark

Mon 8 Jan 2007

New and On View: Mudlark Flash No. 41 (2007)

Recap and Other Poems by Mark Dow

Mark Dow has been a finalist in the Yale Younger Poets and Colorado Prize competitions. His work has appeared in Threepenny Review, Chicago Review, Boston Review, Pequod, Salmagundi, Southern Review, Big City Lit, and poesia.com. His translations of Manno Charlemagne's songs from Haitian Creole are in Conjunctions, and an introduction to translations of Laura Wittner's poems from Spanish is in Green Integer. He is the author of American Gulag: Inside Us Immigration Prisons (California 2004) and co-editor of Machinery Of Death: The Reality Of America's Death Penalty Regime (Routledge 2002).

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...

E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

127. Sarah Mangold
Bird Dog Issue #8
Mon 8 Jan 2007

Bird Dog is pleased to announce the release of issue #8.

New work from:

Abraham Smith, Barbara Maloutas, Bruce Covey, Catherine Theis, Chad Sweeney, Curtis Bonney, Deborah Wardlaw Pattillo, Elizabeth Treadwell, Jennifer Karmin, Joshua Beckman, Julie Choffel, Kevin Magee, Kristi Maxwell, Michelle Greenblatt & Sheila E. Murphy, Nico Vassilakis, Nicole Burgund, Raymond Farr, Roberta Olson, Sandy Florian, Shonni Enelow, Thomas Kane, Tomaz Salamun, Tyrone Williams reviews _Meteoric Flowers_, collages from Chad Horn and cover design by Kate Greenstreet

ISSN 1546-0479
7 x 9, perfect-bound, tipped-in art

Subscriptions $15 for two issues. Individual copies $8.
(International shipping, please add $8)

Checks payable to Sarah Mangold or via PayPal

Deadline for Issue 9: June 1, 2007

Submissions, Subscriptions, Queries:

Bird Dog
c/o Sarah Mangold
1535 32nd Ave, Apt. C
Seattle, WA 98122
www.birddogmagazine.com

Bird Dog: A dog used to retrieve game birds. To follow a subject of interest with persistent attention. A scout...

Seeking innovative writing and art: collaborations, interviews, long poems, reviews, collage, poetry, poetics, graphs, charts, non- fiction, cross genre...

↑ Index

128. David Baratier
Re: patchen
Tue 9 Jan 2007

"What shall we do without us" published by Sierra Books. As DBC mentioned the Patchen website has a calendar. There is a set of color postcards made but I am not sure if they had much distribution.

My memory is faulty but the paintings are all archived in one primary spot, a bit before Miriam died we were making arrangements, for some reason I think it was SFSU, but things became unstable in terms of rights and whatnot and I dropped it as I have experienced that nightmare once already. Larry Smith would know.

To mention, tho there are no color photos in it, a new journal by Doug Manson that is all about Patchen called Celery Flute is well worth a look, they are in Buffalo--

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus, OH 43206
http://pavementsaw.org

↑ Index

129. Desmond Swords
Bardic Bulletin
Tue 9 Jan 2007

Happy New Year

I have just joined the list and am writing out of Dublin. My specialised area of research is the history of Irish poetry – the 7C touchstone poetic of which can be read in translation here –

http://www.thunderpaw.com/neocelt/poesy.htm

~

I am a cronic versaholic, full time dreamer, minor quantum linguist, competitive bore and host of an ad hoc gathering at – and voluntary Poetry Director of - the Monster Truck Art Gallery in the city centre; where I live in a dream on twenty euros a day, and which will be the venue hosting the Leinster heats of this years inaugural All Ireland Live Literature Championships – the final of which will occur in Limerick at the Cuisle International Poetry Festival this October and is open to all seeking to claim a laurel tiara and title of Ard Bard.

To stay updated of this, other events, ramblings the occasional poem and what passes for intellectual outpourings from the blather academy here at poesy-flame HQ of my bedsit, bookmark my blogspot.

You can also engage in supportive textual exchange and listen to Mp3 files of some excellant poets - recorded at the Art Gallery - by following the link to the "Poetry Talk Forum" from this site.

www.irishpoetry.blogspot

The next live event is this Thursday 11 January, upstairs at the Carnival Pub on Wexford Street – a neon goth-pit in the city centre where the flame of art sounds to all who all who hear beauty in a song.

~

Surrender a mystery a day
to what clear light switches
on God from within.

↑ Index

130. Jim Andrews
mel blanc's tombstone
Tue 9 Jan 2007

---

check out mel blanc's tombstone at http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mel_Blanc

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

131. Lewis Warsh
New UNITED ARTISTS website
Tue 9 Jan 2007

UNITED ARTISTS BOOKS has a new website

www.unitedartistsbooks.com

New Years sale -- all current titles 25% discount

↑ Index

132. susan maurer
Re: Bardic Bulletin
Tue 9 Jan 2007

say hi to sean carey for me susan maurer

> From: Desmond Swords <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Bardic Bulletin
> Date: Tue, 9 Jan 2007 03:34:11 -0500
>
> Happy New Year
>
> I have just joined the list and am writing out of Dublin. My specialised area of research is the history of Irish poetry – the 7C touchstone poetic of which can be read in translation here –
>
> http://www.thunderpaw.com/neocelt/poesy.htm
>
> ~
>
> I am a cronic versaholic, full time dreamer, minor quantum linguist, competitive bore and host of an ad hoc gathering at – and voluntary Poetry Director of - the Monster Truck Art Gallery in the city centre; where I live > in a dream on twenty euros a day, and which will be the venue hosting the Leinster heats of this years inaugural All Ireland Live Literature Championships – the final of which will occur in Limerick at the Cuisle International Poetry Festival this October and is open to all seeking to claim a laurel tiara and title of Ard Bard.
>
> To stay updated of this, other events, ramblings the occasional poem and what passes for intellectual outpourings from the blather academy here at poesy-flame HQ of my bedsit, bookmark my blogspot.
>
> You can also engage in supportive textual exchange and listen to Mp3 files of some excellant poets - recorded at the Art Gallery - by following the link to the "Poetry Talk Forum" from this site.
>
> www.irishpoetry.blogspot
>
> The next live event is this Thursday 11 January, upstairs at the Carnival Pub on Wexford Street – a neon goth-pit in the city centre where the flame of art sounds to all who all who hear beauty in a song.
>
> ~

> Surrender a mystery a day
> to what clear light switches
> on God from within.

_____ From photos to predictions, The MSN Entertainment Guide to Golden Globes has it all. http://tv.msn.com/tv/globes2007/?icid=nctagline1

↑ Index

133. cralan kelder

Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience

Tue 9 Jan 2007

It is begging the question in the sense that I am assuming that we want people to ³buy² poetry.
Also that there appears a contradiction there in that poetry doesn¹t try to sell anything, but that we want people to buy it.
Perhaps I am using the phrase incorrectly.

I mean that when we perform to a room of people, they should be enthusiastic, as opposed to indifferent, or even turned off to the point of wishing it were over.

They should ³believe² and be moved somehow and want to buy it, and it¹s our obligation as performers to deliver, or at least work towards this.

Present strong work, accessible, try and reach the audience, talk to them in some way, acknowledge their presence & role for example.

On 1/8/07 9:04 PM, "George Bowering" <[redacted]> wrote:

> On 2-Jan-07, at 2:23 PM, cralan kelder wrote:
>
> Yes, granted, selling out is bad thing, is inauthentic, is disingenuous somehow is trying to sell you something, the beauty of poetry being that
> nobody is trying to sell you anything.
>
> However that begs the question, should poetry not make you want to ³buy² it?
>
> I don't see.
> How is that begging the question?
>
> G.H. Bowering

> His father's son.
> Mother's, too.

↑ Index

134. J Kuszai
the way backward: factory school audio
Tue 9 Jan 2007

Since late 2000, Factory School has kept a digital audio archive online for teachers and students who wanted to access poetry and literature informally without download ability. I mean, the files were there to be downloaded, but not everyone figured out how to get them. A few years ago a double-cd was offered containing all of the literary audio stored on the Factory School site--many many hours of listening--hundreds of files. In a gradual redeployment of resources at Factory School, last year the links to the site were removed. Only people who bookmarked the site or asked were given the link, and mostly those who asked were educators.

Since its founding a couple of years ago, all of the files for which permission could be and was given were integrated into the PennSound project at the University of Pennsylvania. What remained distinct about the Factory School collection was the un-authorized nature of many of our recordings--and, I suppose, the impish delight we took in flouting the law. However, this past December, due to a variety of factors, the server which stored that audio is no longer extant, and without financial support we will be unable to make that component of the Factory School project available again.

While we are sorry if this causes any inconveniences, this is purely a financial decision. The audio was never to be considered to be a public accommodation, but rather an instructional aid within a very particular learning situation--but we realize that many people had a use for it. Indeed, while the logs showed that many people retained access even after the links were removed, and that many people from many countries still visited our site. The last announcements over the last couple years predicting the end of this virtual library, drew diminishing response.

But if there is someone out there who needs this collection, and is willing to make a contribution to Factory School (ahem), we'll be happy to send out the disks. Sales of FS books totaling more than $50 will include the disks gratis, but only when requested by the person ordering.

Happy New Year to everyone in Poeticsland!

↑ Index

135. David-Baptiste Chirot

FW: Sollicitation - Solicitud--Important Cultural Invitation from Clemente Padin

Tue 9 Jan 2007

> From: Clemente Padín <[redacted]>
> To: Clemente Padín <[redacted]>
>
> Dear friends and colleagues:
> Clemente Padin is > writting you with a sollicitation. We are arming a space of performance and alternating arts in the Cultural Center of Ministry of Culture of our country, Uruguay.
>
> Appealing your generosity, we are soliciting you to send publications, pamphlets, catalogs, DVD, booklets and all type of concerning material to performance and to alternating arts in order to arm our own file - library in order to satisfy the necessities of young practitioners of these disciplines in our country. This service that we are being organized will distribute for all our country and, periodically, it will be published a list of publications and reviews of received shipments that will be sent to all the contributors.
>
> We solicited, if it is possible, the shipment of 2 (two) copies of each sending at following postal address:
>
> Clemente Padín
> C.Correo C. 1211
> 11000 Montevideo
> URUGUAY
>
> Thanks in advance, fraternal greetings,
>
> ----------
>
> Estimados amigos y colegas:
> les escribe Clemente
> Padín con una solicitud. Estamos armando un espacio de performance y artes alternativas en el Centro Cultural del Ministerio de Cultura de nuestro país, Uruguay.
>
> Apelando a su generosidad estamos solicitando nos envíen publicaciones, folletos, catálogos, DVD, booklets y todo tipo de material concernientes a esos rubros: performance y artes alternativas para armar nuestro propio archivo - biblioteca para satisfacer las necesidades propias de los jóvenes adeptos a estos nuevos géneros artísticos en nuestro país. Este servicio que estamos organizando se distribuirá por todo nuestro país y, periódicamente, se publicará una lista de disponibilidades y reseña de los > envíos recibidos que será enviado a todos los contribuyentes.

>
> Solicitamos, si es posible, el envío de 2 (dos) ejemplares de cada item a la siguiente dirección postal:
>
> Clemente Padín
> C. Correo C. 1211
> 11000 Montevideo
> URUGUAY
>
> Gracias de antemano, saludos fraternos,

_____ Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page www.live.com/?addtemplate=football&icid=T001MSN30A0701

↑ Index

136. mIEKAL aND
Think twice before jaywalking—ouch!
Tue 9 Jan 2007

On Thursday, just after noon, the Tufts historian Felipe Fernandez- Armesto was arrested by Atlanta police as he crossed the middle of the street between the Hilton and Hyatt hotels. After being thrown on the ground and handcuffed, the former Oxford don was formally arrested, his hands cuffed behind his back. Several policemen pressed hard on his neck and chest, leaving the mild-mannered scholar, who's never gotten so much as a parking ticket, bruised and in pain. He was then taken to the city detention center along with other accused felons and thrown into a filthy jail cell filled with prisoners. He remained incarcerated for eight hours. Officials demanded bail of over a thousand dollars. To come up up with the money Fernandez- Armesto, the author of nineteen books, had to make an arrangement with a bail bondsman. In court even the prosecutors seemed embarrassed by the incident, which got out of hand when Fernandez- Armesto requested to see the policeman's identification (the policeman was wearing a bomber jacket; to Fernandez-Armesto, a foreigner unfamiliar with American culture, the officer did not look like an officer). The prosecutors asked the professor to plead nolo contendere. He refused, concerned that the stain on his record might put his green card status in jeopardy. Officials finally agreed to drop all charges. The judge expressed his approval. The professor says he has no plans to sue. But the AHA council is considering lodging a complaint with the city.

http://hnn.us/articles/33409.html#Day3

↑ Index

137. linda norton
Re: New UNITED ARTISTS website
Tue 9 Jan 2007

It's beautiful, Lewis.

-----Original Message-----
>From: Lewis Warsh <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jan 9, 2007 4:43 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: New UNITED ARTISTS website
>
>UNITED ARTISTS BOOKS has a new website
>
>www.unitedartistsbooks.com
>
>New Years sale -- all current titles 25% discount

"Fascism should more properly
be called corporatism,since it is the merger of state and corporate power."
â€” Benito Mussolini

↑ Index

138. Frank Sherlock
This Saturday @ BPC- Frank Sherlock & Mark Lamoureux
Tue 9 Jan 2007

Segue Reading Series presents
Frank Sherlock & Mark Lamoureux
Saturday January 13 @ 4pm
The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery @ Bleecker, right across from CBGB's
F train to Second Ave | 6 train to Bleecker | [redacted]

Frank Sherlock is the author of Spring Diet of Flowers at Night, ISO, and 13, and has engaged in collaborative projects with CAConrad, Jennifer Coleman, Brett Evans and sound artist/DJ Alex Welsh. He is a contributing editor for XConnect: Writers for the Information Age.

Mark Lamoureux's first full-length book of poems, Astrometry Organon, is due out from Spuyten Duyvil/Meeting Eyes Bindery in late 2006. He is the editor of Cy Gist Press, a micropress focusing on ekphrastic poetry, and teaches English at Kingsborough Community College.

See you there.

_____ Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page www.live.com/?addtemplate=football&icid=T001MSN30A0701

↑ Index

139. vulture protein

Re: Think twice before jaywalking—ouch!

Tue 9 Jan 2007

Actually . . . I'm just going to think twice before going to Atlanta.

On 1/9/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
> On Thursday, just after noon, the Tufts historian Felipe Fernandez-> Armesto was arrested by Atlanta police as he crossed the middle of > the street between the Hilton and Hyatt hotels. After being thrown on > the ground and handcuffed, the former Oxford don was formally > arrested, his hands cuffed behind his back. Several policemen pressed > hard on his neck and chest, leaving the mild-mannered scholar, who's > never gotten so much as a parking ticket, bruised and in pain. He was > then taken to the city detention center along with other accused > felons and thrown into a filthy jail cell filled with prisoners. He > remained incarcerated for eight hours. Officials demanded bail of > over a thousand dollars. To come up up with the money Fernandez-> Armesto, the author of nineteen books, had to make an arrangement > with a bail bondsman. In court even the prosecutors seemed > embarrassed by the incident, which got out of hand when Fernandez-> Armesto requested to see the policeman's identification (the > policeman was wearing a bomber jacket; to Fernandez-Armesto, a > foreigner unfamiliar with American culture, the officer did not look > like an officer). The prosecutors asked the professor to plead nolo > contendere. He refused, concerned that the stain on his record might > put his green card status in jeopardy. Officials finally agreed to > drop all charges. The judge expressed his approval. The professor > says he has no plans to sue. But the AHA council is considering > lodging a complaint with the city.
>
> http://hnn.us/articles/33409.html#Day3
>

↑ Index

140. Thomas savage
Re: New UNITED ARTISTS website
Tue 9 Jan 2007

Hi Lewis, I looked at the new website for United Artists books. It looks great. Regards, Tom Savage

Lewis Warsh <[redacted]> wrote: UNITED ARTISTS BOOKS has a new website

www.unitedartistsbooks.com

New Years sale -- all current titles 25% discount

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

141. David A. Kirschenbaum
Advertise in Boog City 39
Tue 9 Jan 2007

---

please forward

Advertise in

Boog City 39

*Deadline

--Wed. Jan. 24-Ad copy to editor
--Sat. Jan. 27-Issue to be distributed

Email to reserve ad space ASAP

We have 2,250 copies distributed and available free throughout Manhattan's East Village, and Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $60 to $30. (The discount rate also applies to larger ads.)

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

(We're also cool with donations, real cool.)

Email [redacted]
or call 212-842-BOOG(2664) for more information.

thanks,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://boogcityevents.blogspot.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

142. Raymond Bianchi
Istanbul Poets
Tue 9 Jan 2007

All:

I am going to be in Istanbul at the end of March/April and I would like to hook up with some poets there anyone have any suggestions on contacts?

Thanks

Ray

↑ Index

143. Jill Jones
Re: Think twice before jaywalking—ouch!
Tue 9 Jan 2007

I am going to Quebec later this year to read at a festival and I was thinking of visiting the USA as well, having never been there. Maybe it's not a good idea.

Cheers,
Jill

On Wednesday, January 10, 2007, at 03:01 AM, mIEKAL aND wrote:

> On Thursday, just after noon, the Tufts historian Felipe
> Fernandez-Armesto was arrested by Atlanta police as he crossed the > middle of the street between the Hilton and Hyatt hotels. After being > thrown on the ground and handcuffed, the former Oxford don was > formally arrested, his hands cuffed behind his back. Several policemen > pressed hard on his neck and chest, leaving the mild-mannered scholar, > who's never gotten so much as a parking ticket, bruised and in pain.

> He was then taken to the city detention center along with other > accused felons and thrown into a filthy jail cell filled with > prisoners. He remained incarcerated for eight hours. Officials > demanded bail of over a thousand dollars. To come up up with the money > Fernandez-Armesto, the author of nineteen books, had to make an > arrangement with a bail bondsman. In court even the prosecutors seemed > embarrassed by the incident, which got out of hand when > Fernandez-Armesto requested to see the policeman's identification (the > policeman was wearing a bomber jacket; to Fernandez-Armesto, a > foreigner unfamiliar with American culture, the officer did not look > like an officer). The prosecutors asked the professor to plead nolo > contendere. He refused, concerned that the stain on his record might > put his green card status in jeopardy. Officials finally agreed to > drop all charges. The judge expressed his approval. The professor says > he has no plans to sue. But the AHA council is considering lodging a > complaint with the city.
>
> http://hnn.us/articles/33409.html#Day3
>
>

Jill Jones

Latest books:
Broken/Open. Available from Salt Publishing
http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/smp/1844710416.htm

Where the Sea Burns. Wagtail Series. Picaro Press
PO Box 853, Warners Bay, NSW, 2282. [redacted]

Struggle and radiance: ten commentaries (Wild Honey Press)
http://www.wildhoneypress.com

web site 1: http://homepages.ihug.com.au/~jpjones
off the street: http://jillesjon.googlepages.com/home
blog1: Ruby Street http://rubystreet.blogspot.com/
blog2: Latitudes http://itudes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

144. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!
Tue 9 Jan 2007

---

oh, come on! we haven't become a police state (yet)!!

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Jill Jones
Sent: Tuesday, January 09, 2007 15:28
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!

I am going to Quebec later this year to read at a festival and I was thinking of visiting the USA as well, having never been there. Maybe it's not a good idea.

Cheers,
Jill

On Wednesday, January 10, 2007, at 03:01 AM, mIEKAL aND wrote:

> On Thursday, just after noon, the Tufts historian Felipe Fernandez-Armesto was arrested by Atlanta police as he crossed the middle of the street between the Hilton and Hyatt hotels. After being thrown on the ground and handcuffed, the former Oxford don was formally arrested, his hands cuffed behind his back. Several policemen > pressed hard on his neck and chest, leaving the mild-mannered scholar,
>
>
> who's never gotten so much as a parking ticket, bruised and in pain. He was then taken to the city detention center along with other accused felons and thrown into a filthy jail cell filled with prisoners. He remained incarcerated for eight hours. Officials demanded bail of over a thousand dollars. To come up up with the money
>
> Fernandez-Armesto, the author of nineteen books, had to make an arrangement with a bail bondsman. In court even the prosecutors seemed
>
> embarrassed by the incident, which got out of hand when Fernandez-Armesto requested to see the policeman's identification (the
>
> policeman was wearing a bomber jacket; to Fernandez-Armesto, a foreigner unfamiliar with American culture, the officer did not look like an officer). The prosecutors asked the professor to plead nolo contendere. He refused, concerned that the stain on his record might put his green card status in jeopardy. Officials finally agreed to drop all charges. The judge expressed his approval. The professor says > he has no plans to sue. But the AHA council is considering lodging a > complaint with the city.

>
> http://hnn.us/articles/33409.html#Day3

>
>

Jill Jones

Latest books:
Broken/Open. Available from Salt Publishing
http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/smp/1844710416.htm

Where the Sea Burns. Wagtail Series. Picaro Press
PO Box 853, Warners Bay, NSW, 2282. [redacted]

Struggle and radiance: ten commentaries (Wild Honey Press)
http://www.wildhoneypress.com

web site 1: http://homepages.ihug.com.au/~jpjones
off the street: http://jillesjon.googlepages.com/home
blog1: Ruby Street http://rubystreet.blogspot.com/
blog2: Latitudes http://itudes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

145. JT Chan
Call for submissions
Tue 9 Jan 2007

Hi,

Poetry Sz:demystifying mental illness (http://poetrysz.blogspot.com) is calling for submissions.

Send 4-6 poems and a short bio in the body of your email to [redacted] .

Thanks.

regards

J Chan
editor

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

146. George Bowering

Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!

Tue 9 Jan 2007

Ho ho. Have you been to Guantanamo lately?

On 9-Jan-07, at 2:30 PM, Tom W. Lewis wrote:

> oh, come on! we haven't become a police state (yet)!!
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of Jill Jones
> Sent: Tuesday, January 09, 2007 15:28
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!
>
> I am going to Quebec later this year to read at a festival and I was > thinking of visiting the USA as well, having never been there. Maybe > it's not a good idea.
>
> Cheers,
> Jill
>
>
> On Wednesday, January 10, 2007, at 03:01 AM, mIEKAL aND wrote:
>
>> On Thursday, just after noon, the Tufts historian Felipe >> Fernandez-Armesto was arrested by Atlanta police as he crossed the >> middle of the street between the Hilton and Hyatt hotels. After being >> thrown on the ground and handcuffed, the former Oxford don was >> formally arrested, his hands cuffed behind his back. Several policemen
>
>> pressed hard on his neck and chest, leaving the mild-mannered scholar,
>
>> who's never gotten so much as a parking ticket, bruised and in pain.
>> He was then taken to the city detention center along with other >> accused felons and thrown into a filthy jail cell filled with >> prisoners. He remained incarcerated for eight hours. Officials >> demanded bail of over a thousand dollars. To come up up with the money
>
>> Fernandez-Armesto, the author of nineteen books, had to make an >> arrangement with a bail bondsman. In court even the prosecutors seemed
>

>> embarrassed by the incident, which got out of hand when >> Fernandez-Armesto requested to see the policeman's identification (the
>
>> policeman was wearing a bomber jacket; to Fernandez-Armesto, a >> foreigner unfamiliar with American culture, the officer did not look >> like an officer). The prosecutors asked the professor to plead nolo >> contendere. He refused, concerned that the stain on his record might >> put his green card status in jeopardy. Officials finally agreed to >> drop all charges. The judge expressed his approval. The professor says
>
>> he has no plans to sue. But the AHA council is considering lodging a >> complaint with the city.
>>
>> http://hnn.us/articles/33409.html#Day3
>>
>>
> _____
> Jill Jones
>
> Latest books:
> Broken/Open. Available from Salt Publishing
> http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/smp/1844710416.htm
>
> Where the Sea Burns. Wagtail Series. Picaro Press
> PO Box 853, Warners Bay, NSW, 2282. [redacted]
>
> Struggle and radiance: ten commentaries (Wild Honey Press)
> http://www.wildhoneypress.com
>
> web site 1: http://homepages.ihug.com.au/~jpjones
> off the street: http://jillesjon.googlepages.com/home
> blog1: Ruby Street http://rubystreet.blogspot.com/
> blog2: Latitudes http://itudes.blogspot.com/
>
>
George B.
Author of his own misfortunes.

↑ Index

147. Mark Prejsnar
big Georgia event
Tue 9 Jan 2007

...in one week:

Every other month the Atlanta Poets Group
presents: Language Harm

this month's theme:

Data ! .... the enigmatic substance of science , computation, government reports, and your own much-beloved dept. of human resources ... the APG and friends weave a wondrous spell of poetry & performance out of the stuff that digital and bureaucratic dreams are made of !

at: Eyedrum
290 Martin Luther King Jr. Drive

$4

8:00 pm
Wednesday January 17

--mark

"take some sort of leap into your dreams"

--zzac denton

↑ Index

148. Mark Prejsnar
request for addresses
Tue 9 Jan 2007

I'm assisting the organizers of a major reading, to be held in Atlanta in March.

We're trying to contact the following poets, and I do not have e-mails for them.

If any of you folks listed below read this, could you please contact me by back-channel?

If anyone else can give me the e-mail address for one of them, could you please back-channel that info to me?

Strict confidentiality will be observed.

Thanx ! Mark

Eileen Myles
Joshua Beckman
Matvei Yankelvich

Nick Carbo
Norma Cole
Diane Wakoski
Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

↑ Index

149. Jesse Crockett
email for Caleb Puckett
Tue 9 Jan 2007

I have lost all my local emails due to computer malfunction. I need to contact Caleb Puckett. Please backchannel with his current email address.

↑ Index

150. Ron Silliman
Silliman's Blog
Tue 9 Jan 2007

---

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

RECENT POSTS

Beat notes

Redefining the NY School
for the 21st century

New bookstores
and what they mean for the preservation of an independent book market

Poetry and depression
Poetry and community

69 job openings
60,000 recipients of the magazine
Poets and Writers
- what’s wrong with this picture?

Impressions of the MLA

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

151. Alan Sondheim
Brakhage and blurb announcements
Tue 9 Jan 2007

Two Subjects

Subject: homage to Brakhage, little-seen footage from 1958

http://www.asondheim.org/brakhagebreakage.mp4 (scraps)

Subject: blurb for our upcoming show at Millennium in New York

(date to be announced)

Crepuscle (Twilight) explores the exigencies of dance, eroticism, cultural restriction, and arousal; it was edited from over a dozen segments in Geneva. The work tenders the null-point of language, a point where words stutter, where the body takes over, where cultural tropes are transformed and lost. It's the deliberate creation of repressed memories. It challenges the conventions of dance - turning dance inside-out. For the three of us, it's the culmination of an erotic element in our work that has all been lost in contemporary culture. Crepuscle rides the muscle of the body and jouissance, opening a territory which remains virtual, haunting.

A number of short works with Foofwa, shot in Geneva, Gruyeres, and the Aletsch Glacier in the Swiss Alps, will also be shown.

↑ Index

152. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: mel blanc's tombstone
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Jim,

To be "a man of a thousand voices" sounds so much better than to be the "man of a thousand faces." Do you remember the movie in which James Kagney plays Lon Cheney's father?

Murat

On 1/9/07, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> check out mel blanc's tombstone at http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mel_Blanc
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>

↑ Index

153. David-Baptiste Chirot

Re: mel blanc's tombstone/"Land of a Thousand Dances"

Wed 10 Jan 2007

Then there was "Land of a Thousand Dances"--first done by Cannibal and the Headhunters--a big hit for Wilson Pickett-- (There's "Land of a Thousand Dunces" a compilation of truly stupid Sxities frat rock songs, too--)

i met Mel Blanc at the 1978 Zagreb International Festival of Animation--even more amazing was the woman who did the Roadrunner (as i recall;--she gave great final night speech in a myriad voices all accompanied by vodka shots) and others--and people from various countries who could do it seemed about two thousand voices--Warren Fishbach who was the last to do the voice of Popeye and also many Disney characters lives here in Milwaukee--very good story teller about Hollywood days and years in the air force flying sorties over Germany--mimics movie stars and generals alike--

Lon Chaney made some incredible films--a great contortionist--not only with his face--played many roles where he became armless, or legless--he and Tod Browning made some masterpieces of mutilated bodies and souls together--

> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: mel blanc's tombstone
> Date: Wed, 10 Jan 2007 00:38:01 -0500
>
> Jim,
>
> To be "a man of a thousand voices" sounds so much better than to be the "man > of a thousand faces." Do you remember the movie in which James Kagney plays > Lon Cheney's father?
>
> Murat
>
> On 1/9/07, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> check out mel blanc's tombstone at http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mel_Blanc
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

_____ Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page www.live.com/?addtemplate=football&icid=T001MSN30A0701

↑ Index

154. cralan kelder
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Wed 10 Jan 2007

---

who has a good example of ³begging the question² ?

On 1/8/07 9:04 PM, "George Bowering" <[redacted]> wrote:

> On 2-Jan-07, at 2:23 PM, cralan kelder wrote:
>
> Yes, granted, selling out is bad thing, is inauthentic, is disingenuous somehow is trying to sell you something, the beauty of poetry being that
> nobody is trying to sell you anything.
>
> However that begs the question, should poetry not make you want to ³buy² it?
>
> I don't see.
> How is that begging the question?
>
> G.H. Bowering
> His father's son.
> Mother's, too.

↑ Index

155. John Tanner
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Hi
Selling out?I would have thought that this was so far down the list of poetry's concerns as to be invisible. Almost no-one can make a living directly from writing poetry, however much they try to "sell out".Most small UK mags won't even pay you. It follows that if you want to make a living out of writing then you'll write something else.Ourselves and respected peers and mentors are the audience.So it's down to our own taste in poetry, in mentors and in peers.
John Tanner
----- Original Message -----
From: "cralan kelder" <[redacted]>

To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, January 10, 2007 11:54 AM
Subject: Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience

who has a good example of ³begging the question² ?

On 1/8/07 9:04 PM, "George Bowering" <[redacted]> wrote:

> On 2-Jan-07, at 2:23 PM, cralan kelder wrote:
>
> Yes, granted, selling out is bad thing, is inauthentic, is disingenuous somehow is trying to sell you something, the beauty of poetry being that
> nobody is trying to sell you anything.
>
> However that begs the question, should poetry not make you want to ³buy² it?
>
> I don't see.
> How is that begging the question?
>
> G.H. Bowering
> His father's son.
> Mother's, too.

↑ Index

156. Adam Fieled

Bill Allegrezza on PFS Post

Wed 10 Jan 2007

New on PFS Post: five poems from Chicago's Bill Allegrezza, a new poem from Susan Wallack, new work from Jeff Crouch & Steve Halle: http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com.

New on Stoning the Devil: Brice Marden, Jeff Koons, David Bowie, David Prater, Videodrome, Argotist Interview, "skicka", lots more: http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com

---

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

157. Ann Bogle
Trio: Simultaneous broadcast of 3 poetry sets
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Dear all,

It seems that I do each inadvisable thing three times: I sheared my own head thrice; I returned to Houston to to try to marry MSS thrice; I earned degrees in English thrice, and I'm sending you a notice about my audio tapings thrice. (This is why my life seems to take longer than everyone else's.)

"Trio" is the fourth mini-recorder on the left-hand side of my weblog (_http://annbogle.blogspot.com_ (http://annbogle.blogspot.com/)). It turned out to be an interesting experiment in "performance" -- one not possible for a live audience without the use of audio equipment. It might take half an hour to listen to all three recordings plus the trio, if you do it that way -- of course, it's up to you -- your way or not at all. It is my first "reading" since 1998 at Ruthless Grip in D.C.

Blessings & tschüss (kiss),

Ann Bogle

↑ Index

158. Nick Piombino
*Re: Advertise in Boog City 39
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Coming soon to Boog City.
An ad from Nick P.

On 1/9/07 1:18 PM, "David A. Kirschenbaum" <[redacted]> wrote:

> please forward
> ----------
>
> Advertise in
>
> Boog City 39
>
> Deadline*
>
> --Wed. Jan. 24-Ad copy to editor
> --Sat. Jan. 27-Issue to be distributed
>
> Email to reserve ad space ASAP

> We have 2,250 copies distributed and available free throughout Manhattan's East Village, and Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn.
>
> ---
>
> Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $60 to $30. (The discount rate also applies to larger ads.)
>
> Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.
>
> (We're also cool with donations, real cool.)
>
> Email [redacted]
> or call 212-842-BOOG(2664) for more information.
>
> thanks,
> David

↑ Index

159. Mark Melnicove

Re: Patchen in color?

Wed 10 Jan 2007

The originals of Patchen's painted poems are in the Special Collections, University of California at Santa Cruz. Rita Bottoms was the Head of Special Collections until her retirement in 2003. I'm not sure who is in charge now. I met Rita (and Miriam Patchen) at the Kenneth Patchen Festival in Warren Ohio in 1990. I think Miriam donated or sold everything of Patchen's that she had, including the painted poems, to the UCSC library. There's lots besides Patchen's work at UCSC. To find out more about what Bottons brought to this collection see:

library.ucsc.edu/reg-hist/bottoms.final.pdf

Mark Melnicove

_____

From: Eric Yost [mailto:[redacted]]
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, 08 Jan 2007 17:07:40 -0500
Subject: Re: Patchen in color?

How about _The Journal of Albion Moonlight_ or _Sleepers Awake!_ as animated color movies? Or is that too Ted Turner?

↑ Index

160. Eric Yost

Think twice about jaywalking

Wed 10 Jan 2007

> Ho ho. Have you been to Guantanamo lately?

No. Have you?

_____

So much depends on how one tells a story:

The former Oxford don was thrown on the ground, and several policemen pressed hard on his neck and chest.

His hands cuffed behind his back, Fernandez-Armesto felt the warmth of the gritty sidewalk and the sweaty odor of the police on top of him. He felt their calloused hands searching his body. "Plead no contest" the police breathed in his ear, "jaywalker!" A tongue trailed against his face.

Seized with desire, Felipe Fernandez-Armesto murmured "yes, oh yes," as the tall uniformed officers pressed their hard bodies against his yielding flesh. Not since Oxford had the scholar felt such joy and release in the company of men.

The professor says he has no plans to sue.

↑ Index

161. Mark Lamoureux

Frank Sherlock & Mark Lamoureux @ The Bowery Poetry Club 1/13

Wed 10 Jan 2007

Frank Sherlock & Mark Lamoureux

Saturday, January 13th, 4-6 PM (please be punctual--we are starting on time!)
Segue Reading Series at The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery, just north of Houston
New York, New York

Frank Sherlock is the author of Spring Diet of Flowers at Night, ISO, and 13, and has engaged in collaborative projects with CA Conrad, Jennifer Coleman and sound artist/DJ Alex Welsh. He is a contributing editor for XConnect: Writers for the Information Age.

Mark Lamoureux's first full-length book of poems, Astrometry Organon, is due out from Spuyten Duyvil/Meeting Eyes Bindery in early 2007. He is the editor of Cy Gist Press, a micropress focusing on ekphrastic poetry, and teaches English at Kingsborough Community College.

curated by Brenda Iijima & Evelyn Reilly

↑ Index

162. Tim Peterson
Frank Sherlock and Mark Lamoureux at BPC, Sat Jan 13 at 4 PM
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Poetry Reading--please come!

Frank Sherlock & Mark Lamoureux

Saturday, January 13th, 4-6 PM (please be punctual--we are starting on time!)
Segue Reading Series at The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery, just north of Houston
New York, New York

Frank Sherlock is the author of Spring Diet of Flowers at Night, ISO, and 13, and has engaged in collaborative projects with CA Conrad, Jennifer Coleman and sound artist/DJ Alex Welsh. He is a contributing editor for XConnect: Writers for the Information Age.

Mark Lamoureux's first full-length book of poems, Astrometry Organon, is due out from Spuyten Duyvil/Meeting Eyes Bindery in early 2007. He is the editor of Cy Gist Press, a micropress focusing on ekphrastic poetry, and teaches English at Kingsborough Community College.

curated by Brenda Iijima & Evelyn Reilly

↑ Index

163. Anslem Berrigan
Camille Guthrie/Susan Wheeler tonite at 8pm
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Hello, the Poetry Project is unable to send out its normal e-mail broadcasts this week, so below is just a note about a reading tonight.

thanks.

Camille Guthrie & Susan Wheeler
Wednesday, 8:00 pm

Camille Guthrie is the author of In Captivity (2006) and The Master Thief (2000), both published by Subpress. She also has a chapbook, Defending Oneself, from Beardofbees.com. Recent poems have appeared in Bird Dog, The Gig, and Radical Society. She grew up in Seattle and Pittsburgh, was schooled in Poughkeepsie and Providence, and now lives in Brooklyn with her husband and son.

Susan Wheeler is the author of four collections of poetry, Bag â€˜oâ€™ Diamonds (1993, University of Georgia Press), Smokes (1998, Four Way Books), Source Codes (2001, Salt Publishing), and Ledger (2005, U of Iowa Press); and of Record Palace, a novel (2005, Graywolf Press). Her work has appeared in The Paris Review, London Review of Books, Verse, Talisman, The New Yorker and many other journals. On the creative writing faculties at Princeton University and the New Schoolâ€™s graduate program, she has also taught at Columbia University, the University of Iowa, Rutgers, and New York University.

All events are $8, $7 for students and seniors, $5 for members and begin at 8pm unless otherwise noted. The Poetry Project is wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. Schedule subject to change. The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church at the corner of 2nd Ave and 10th St in Manhattan.

Call [redacted] for more information.

_____ Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

164. Denise Enck

Michael McClure and Michael Rothenberg at The Word Temple Friday

Wed 10 Jan 2007

The WordTemple Poetry Series will celebrate the beginning of its second year on Friday, January 12, 2007 by featuring Michael McClure and Michael Rothenberg. Refreshments will be provided as part of the celebration so come early, and please spread the word!

Michael McClure and Michael Rothenberg
Friday, January 12, 2007 - 7 p.m.
Copperfield's Books, 2316 Montgomery Dr., Santa Rosa

Michael McClure is famous for his dynamic poetry performances. Author of Rain Mirror, Touching the Edge: Dharma Devotions from the Hummingbird Sangha, and Huge Dreams, McClure has given hundreds of readings from the legendary Six Gallery in San Francisco (with Allen Ginsberg) to the Library of Congress. Recently, McClure joined with composer Terry Riley to create a CD titled I Like Your Eyes Liberty, a stunning exploration of music and voice. A musician and playwright, as well as a poet -- McClure's songs include "Mercedes Benz" popularized by Janis Joplin.

Michael Rothenberg's books include The Paris Journals, Monk Daddy and Unhurried Vision. He is editor and publisher of Big Bridge (www.bigbridge.org), the editor of Overtime, Selected Poems by Philip Whalen, As Ever, Selected Poems by Joanne Kyger, and David's Copy, Selected Poems by David Meltzer. Rothenberg's readings are stunning for their wide range of experience and emotion. David Meltzer calls Unhurried Vision a "deeply stirred & stirring affirmation of poetry's centrality in realizing mundane & profound instances in the everyday extraordinary."

↑ Index

165. Mark Weiss
Re: Think twice about jaywalking
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Good going. This is a public forum. You've turned a distressing news story into libel against the victim. In a just world Fernandez would hear of this and sue your ass.

It might be smart to remember that people aren't fictions to be played with as we wish.

Mark

At 10:57 AM 1/10/2007, you wrote:
> >>Ho ho. Have you been to Guantanamo lately?
>
>No. Have you?
>
>_____
>
>So much depends on how one tells a story:
>
>
>The former Oxford don was thrown on the ground, and several >policemen pressed hard on his neck and chest.
>
>His hands cuffed behind his back, Fernandez-Armesto felt the > warmth of the gritty sidewalk and the sweaty odor of the >police on top of him. He felt their calloused hands searching his >body. "Plead no contest" the police breathed in his ear,

>"jaywalker!" A tongue trailed against his face.
>
>Seized with desire, Felipe Fernandez-Armesto murmured
>"yes, oh yes," as the tall uniformed officers pressed their >hard bodies against his yielding flesh. Not since Oxford had >the scholar felt such joy and release in the company of men.
>
>The professor says he has no plans to sue.

↑ Index

166. Eric Yost
Re: Think twice about jaywalking
Wed 10 Jan 2007

>>Good going. This is a public forum. You've turned a distressing news story into libel against the victim. In a just world Fernandez would hear of this and sue your ass.

Cheery of you to write that, Mr. Grouchy Pants. In a just world, you'd have a sense of humor.

Maybe Wallace Stevens' estate will sue me for this child-molesting reworking of "The Idea of Order at Key West"?

Ramon Fernandez

The lights by the harbor tremble my tears.
Soon sand feels my shoes for clouds,
the sunrise a red flare of hangover,
the gibelike whistle of dawn gulls
huffing swells of salt whiskey lulls.

My tooth-cut tongue ingests wan aerosol,
the mirage of her aria like a slap of surf,
a tide hauled back from Key West, Florida
on a warm night sixty-five boat years ago.

That woman was no mirage.

Hangovers belong to everyone with history.
Also the motive to clasp too hard or end gripping in a clumsy tumble.

"Wacked. Club fungus. Rocky bald heads."

She called us that because she wasn't born yet.
Teenagers on special K stare down at
two hundred dollar sneakers and know.
The false tide of whiskey crashing red
as he talked motif and imagination.
We loved each other like two land mines.
He became a woman and wanted to live forever.
Small Ramon did nothing but hold his breath
so that inelegant ages off, the ruse will show
and mortal gods rush to shut the books of yearning.
I'll be registered as the nobody in particular, the tell-me.

varium et mutabile semper femina

As the ocean ignites the lanterns in its chambers,
As the boats knock together like lonely drunks,
As she sings to the sea that made her whole thing.

(c) 1998 Eric Yost

↑ Index

167. Gabrielle Welford

Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!

Wed 10 Jan 2007

---

depends what color you are and how poor... gabe

On Tue, 9 Jan 2007, Tom W. Lewis wrote:

> oh, come on! we haven't become a police state (yet)!!
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of Jill Jones
> Sent: Tuesday, January 09, 2007 15:28
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Think twice before jaywalking-ouch!
>
> I am going to Quebec later this year to read at a festival and I was thinking of visiting the USA as well, having never been there. Maybe it's not a good idea.
>
> Cheers,
> Jill
>
> On Wednesday, January 10, 2007, at 03:01 AM, mIEKAL aND wrote:

On Thursday, just after noon, the Tufts historian Felipe Fernandez-Armesto was arrested by Atlanta police as he crossed the middle of the street between the Hilton and Hyatt hotels. After being thrown on the ground and handcuffed, the former Oxford don was formally arrested, his hands cuffed behind his back. Several policemen pressed hard on his neck and chest, leaving the mild-mannered scholar,

who's never gotten so much as a parking ticket, bruised and in pain. He was then taken to the city detention center along with other accused felons and thrown into a filthy jail cell filled with prisoners. He remained incarcerated for eight hours. Officials demanded bail of over a thousand dollars. To come up up with the money

Fernandez-Armesto, the author of nineteen books, had to make an arrangement with a bail bondsman. In court even the prosecutors seemed embarrassed by the incident, which got out of hand when Fernandez-Armesto requested to see the policeman's identification (the policeman was wearing a bomber jacket; to Fernandez-Armesto, a foreigner unfamiliar with American culture, the officer did not look like an officer). The prosecutors asked the professor to plead nolo contendere. He refused, concerned that the stain on his record might put his green card status in jeopardy. Officials finally agreed to drop all charges. The judge expressed his approval. The professor says he has no plans to sue. But the AHA council is considering lodging a complaint with the city.

http://hnn.us/articles/33409.html#Day3

Jill Jones

Latest books:
Broken/Open. Available from Salt Publishing
http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/smp/1844710416.htm

Where the Sea Burns. Wagtail Series. Picaro Press
PO Box 853, Warners Bay, NSW, 2282. [redacted]

Struggle and radiance: ten commentaries (Wild Honey Press)
http://www.wildhoneypress.com

web site 1: http://homepages.ihug.com.au/~jpjones
off the street: http://jillesjon.googlepages.com/home

> blog1: Ruby Street http://rubystreet.blogspot.com/
> blog2: Latitudes http://itudes.blogspot.com/

gabrielle welford
[redacted]

Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com). Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004

wilhelm reich
anarcho-syndicalism
gut/heart/head/earth

↑ Index

168. Christopher Leland Winks
Re: Think twice about jaywalking
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Ah, Mister Yost has returned, brandishing his diploma from kindergarten against all humorless challengers, and compounding his puerility with an appropriately infantile parody! "But," he whines, sucking on his lollipop (or is it a billyclub?), "why can't I make fun of some guy with a silly Spanish-type foreign name? It's my right as a Murican! Hey, wanna see my Abu Ghraib ode, 'In Praise of Charles Graner'? Dana Gioia thought it was like so cool and wants to give me an NEA grant. And really, like, it's a joke anyway -- like Abu Ghraib was, you know, frat-boy stuff, the kind of thing I wanna do when I maybe like grow up or something."

↑ Index

169. Mark Weiss
Re: Think twice about jaywalking
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Do I really have to explain the difference? Both ethics and the law differentiate between rubbing a private citizen's face in the mud and artistic satire. The Stevens estate couldn't even sue successfully for violation of copyright, because it's a satire. A public figure also loses a lot of protection--the persona can be satirized, attacked, and even to an extent lied about. But no one is allowed to assert in print that for instance you get a sexual kick out of being assaulted.

It's really not a question of whether I think what you did is funny (I don't, but tastes differ--some people may think that using rough homoerotic sex as a way to make fun of a stranger is a real hoot). It's a question of whether your victim thinks it's funny.

That's my second, therefore last, post for the day.

Mark

At 02:46 PM 1/10/2007, you wrote:
> >>Good going. This is a public forum. You've turned a distressing > news story into libel against the victim. In a just world Fernandez > would hear of this and sue your ass.
>
>Cheery of you to write that, Mr. Grouchy Pants. In a just world, >you'd have a sense of humor.
>
>
>
>
>
>Maybe Wallace Stevens' estate will sue me for this child-molesting >reworking of "The Idea of Order at Key West"?
>
>
>Ramon Fernandez
>
>The lights by the harbor tremble my tears.
>Soon sand feels my shoes for clouds,
>the sunrise a red flare of hangover,
>the gibelike whistle of dawn gulls
>huffing swells of salt whiskey lulls.
>
>My tooth-cut tongue ingests wan aerosol,
>the mirage of her aria like a slap of surf,
>a tide hauled back from Key West, Florida
>on a warm night sixty-five boat years ago.
>
>That woman was no mirage.
>
>Hangovers belong to everyone with history.
>Also the motive to clasp too hard or
>end gripping in a clumsy tumble.
>
>"Wacked. Club fungus. Rocky bald heads."
>
>She called us that because she wasn't born yet.
>Teenagers on special K stare down at

>two hundred dollar sneakers and know.
>The false tide of whiskey crashing red
>as he talked motif and imagination.
>We loved each other like two land mines.
>He became a woman and wanted to live forever.
>Small Ramon did nothing but hold his breath
>so that inelegant ages off, the ruse will show
>and mortal gods rush to shut the books of yearning.
>I'll be registered as the nobody in particular, the tell-me.
>
>varium et mutabile semper femina
>
>As the ocean ignites the lanterns in its chambers,
>As the boats knock together like lonely drunks,
>As she sings to the sea that made her whole thing.
>
>
>(c) 1998 Eric Yost

↑ Index

170. George Bowering

Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience

Wed 10 Jan 2007

On 10-Jan-07, at 3:54 AM, cralan kelder wrote:

> who has a good example of “begging the question” ?
>
We know God exists because we can see the perfect order of His Creation, an order which demonstrates supernatural intelligence in its design.
>
>
> On 1/8/07 9:04 PM, "George Bowering" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> On 2-Jan-07, at 2:23 PM, cralan kelder wrote:
>>
>>>> Yes, granted, selling out is bad thing, is inauthentic, is >>>> disingenuous
>>>> somehow – is trying to sell you something, the beauty of poetry >>>> being
>>>> that >>>> nobody is trying to sell you anything.

>>>>
>>>> However that begs the question, should poetry not make you want to >>>> “buy” it?
>>
>> I don't see.
>> How is that begging the question?
>>
>>
>>
>>>>
>> G.H. Bowering
>> His father's son.
>> Mother's, too.
>
>
Mr. G. Bowering
Faster than a speeding pullet.

↑ Index

171. George Bowering
Re: Patchen in color?
Wed 10 Jan 2007

On 10-Jan-07, at 7:46 AM, Mark Melnicove wrote:

> The originals of Patchen's painted poems are in the Special Collections, University of California at Santa Cruz.

Some of them.

>
>
G. Harry Bowering,
Born to hit opposite-field singles.

↑ Index

172. Tim Peterson
CHAX Press Book Party and Reading in NYC, with special guest Junction Press
Wed 10 Jan 2007

You're invited to a

CHAX Press Book Party and Reading, with special guest Junction Press

this Sunday, January 14 at 2 PM

Bowery Poetry Club

308 Bowery (just North of Houston)

$2 at the door

Come see the writers, meet the books, relax and talk at the BPC bar, and enjoy a few readings.

Celebrating the publication of:

CERTAIN SLANTS, by Charles Alexander (Junction)

SWOON NOIR, by Bruce Andrews (Chax)

AFTER IMAGE, by Charles Borkhuis (Chax)

BORN 2, by Alison Cobb (Chax)

ANALECTS ON A CHINESE SCREEN, by Glenn Mott (Chax)

SINCE I MOVED IN, by Tim Peterson (Chax)

MIRTH, by Linda V. Russo (Chax)

http://mappemunde.typepad.com/photos/uncategorized/chax_event_2.jpg

↑ Index

173. Alison Croggon

Re: Think twice about jaywalking

Wed 10 Jan 2007

On 1/11/07, Eric Yost <[redacted]> wrote:
> >>Good going. This is a public forum. You've turned a > distressing news story into libel against the victim. In a > just world Fernandez would hear of this and sue your ass.
>
> Cheery of you to write that, Mr. Grouchy Pants. In a just > world, you'd have a sense of humor.
>
>
It's difficult to think of anything more thigh-slappingly hilarious than rape. Oh, of course; raping children.
--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

174. Julie Kizershot
Memorial Reading for kari edwards in Denver- help?
Wed 10 Jan 2007

> A call for poetic community organizing--
>
> Edge Gallery in Denver is putting together a memorial show for kari edwards, visual artist, writer, and gender activist, who passed away suddenly last month.
>
> kari's partner Fran Blau has asked me to put out a call for anyone who might be in the area (or not) who would be able to coordinate a reading during that time. kari's show will be up from March 2 to the end of that month and they wish to have the reading at the gallery to pay tribute. Below is the contact for Mark Brasuell who is putting on the show. If anyone is able to help, please contact him directly or email me and I will pass word along to Fran.
>
> If you were a friend or fan of kari's, this is a good time to honor her. Sadly, 'm not able to coordinate it, or I would myself!
>
> Mark Brasuell
> [redacted]

Thanks to one and all!

Julie Kizershot
[redacted]

↑ Index

175. Desmond Swords
Tink twice King Jah way out bla
Wed 10 Jan 2007

I won't reveal the identity of this now defunct list, but this text was deposited on it about 15 years ago

"In my communications with you since your arrival on this list, there has been the feeling that you are careless of how you behave, and therefore, I must ask if you recognise that you are performing repeated antisocial acts that amount to 'cyber-rape'"

That someone can consider themselves as having been raped in a literary context shows the workings of a powerful imagination.

The 7C Amergin poem and touchstone text of the Irish tradition, which explains exactly what the poetic gift is, how it works and which heads the Auraicept Na N-eces, whose literal translation is along the lines of "The working methods/practices/processes of knowing ones."

describes one of the four human "joys," it lists, as

"The joy of fitting poetic frenzy," which comes when the mind is "grinding away for the fair nuts on the nine hazels at the Well of Seigas." This is analogous to the mental fizz one has when in the throes of composition.

The Well of Seigas is the mythological source of poetry in the Irish tradition, ringed by nine hazel trees, whose nuts are a bit like the fruit in the garden of Eden, but guiltless and shame-free. It is a poetical myth with no reptilian anti-Christ whispering Armageddon or eternal spiritual torture by burning, a total absence of Adam and a much more sophisticated Eve, in the form of Fin, who finds Nirvanic wisdom in a Salmon rather than terminal depression and eternal shame in a Granny Smith.

The "knowing ones" refer to Irish poets in the bardic tradition, which evolved in an unbroken line and ran from pre-Jesus era druids to early 17C filidh who ran these native secular universities - and which abruptly ended during the scorched earth and famine policies implemented by Elizabethan courtiers carving out their careers in those brutal times.

Manus O'Duignan - the Ollamh/head-poet of Tonnaltagh McDonaghis compiled the Auraicept Na N-eces section of the book from other manuscripts and it charts the history and evolution of writing in Ireland from it's earliest form of Ogham - used between 4-6C AD – up till his own time.

It lists the numerous grammatical rules and meters, which evolved in the - at that point in the 14C - 900 year old written tradition of his country. The meters are probably the most complex in any written tradition on earth and the whole subject is fascinating - and mostly unknown - to the serious linguistic bores of this world.

It is only now with the advent of the net that the texts are being widely disseminated and translated so that more than a handful of historians can access the information and knowledge residing on these pages time – and certainly the wider poetic community – has, somewhat ironically, all but forgotten. It is one of the few recorded traditions which offers an alternative poetic to the Greco-Roman one and this touchstone text one can use as a trusty critical shield when in printed exchange and/or combat at the cyber-grove and can even work when interacting with belligerent forces of law and order, as I will demonstrate in my next post, when I will reveal how I took on two cops armed only with one poem.

~

Surrender a mystery a day
to what clear light switches
On God from within

http://irishpoetry.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

176. Ricejunk2
Re: ars poetica
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Dan, Very cool. Creativity is important when you are putting a collection of writing together. It will be interesting to see where you draw the most writers from... T F Rice

Quoting Dan Waber <[redacted]>:

> Six days ago I started:
>
> http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/
>
> This is a themed blog (ars poetica, or, poems about poetry) that will lead to a print anthology.
>
> I invited five of my favorite poets to send me an ars poetica they'd written along with the names and email addresses of five other poets. I then invited those twenty-five poets to do the same. I then invited those hundred and twenty-five poets to do the same. I then invited...you get the picture.
>
> Every poem submitted will appear on the website, one per day, and be archived by author and date.
>
> The print anthology will be published by Paper Kite Press when the editors (Jennifer Hill-Kaucher and Dan Waber) determine that a book length collection of the very best of these poems exists, which, at a poem a day, is likely to take a year or more.
>
> Submissions are by connected chain of invitation only, this is NOT an open call, but anyone interested in reading poems about poetry is certainly invited to come visit every day for their daily dose.
>
> The ripples are spreading outward in the most delightful ways. Keep watching and see.
>
> Regards,

> Dan
>
> I'm at: http://www.logolalia.com/
> The blog mentioned is at: http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/
> Paper Kite Press is at:
> http://www.wordpainting.com/paperkitepress/pkpshop.html

↑ Index

177. Ricejunk2
Re: our tiny world
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Quoting Eric Yost <[redacted]>:

> http://www.bigskyastroclub.org/pale_blue_dot.htm

Eric,
Thanks for sharing ... perfect for the start of a new year... isn't perspective "everything" in how all of us view our current circumstances...
Be well,
T F Rice

↑ Index

178. mIEKAL aND
Re: Patchen in color?
Wed 10 Jan 2007

Has anyone read "Kenneth Patchen: Rebel Poet in America" by Larry R. Smith ... It's my time of the year to read literary biographies & I've been wanting to read this. I see that a review on Amazon calls it a "self-published socio-political diatribe" among other things.

~mIEKAL

On Jan 10, 2007, at 2:42 PM, George Bowering wrote:

> On 10-Jan-07, at 7:46 AM, Mark Melnicove wrote:
>
> The originals of Patchen's painted poems are in the Special Collections, University of California at Santa Cruz.
>
> Some of them.

The covers of this book are too far apart. -- Ambrose Bierce

↑ Index

179. David Baratier
Re: patchen
Thu 11 Jan 2007

miekal--

I read the Rebel Poet in America book, it is excellent, great info, well researched, but the number of mistakes, mispellings, grammar and so on really made me blush with embarassment; it was difficult to read through.

By the way, Rita Bottoms was who I was thinking of and, George is right, not all the paintings are at Santa Cruz.

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus, OH 43206
http://pavementsaw.org

↑ Index

180. Peter Ciccariello
Cave of what you meant to say
Thu 11 Jan 2007

Cave of what you meant to say <http://www.cgi7.com/peterimages/cave.htm>

-- Peter Ciccariello
Image - http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

181. George Bowering
Re: patchen
Thu 11 Jan 2007

That's right. One is on my wall.
I bought it in the summer of 1964.

gb

On 10-Jan-07, at 9:19 PM, David Baratier wrote:

> miekal--
>
> I read the Rebel Poet in America book, it is excellent, great info, > well researched, but the number of mistakes, mispellings, grammar and > so on really made me blush with embarassment; it was difficult to read > through.

>
> By the way, Rita Bottoms was who I was thinking of and, George is > right, not all the paintings are at Santa Cruz.
>
>
> Be well
>
> David Baratier, Editor
>
> Pavement Saw Press
> PO Box 6291
> Columbus, OH 43206
> http://pavementsaw.org
>
>
G. Bowering, DLitt.
I still haven't opened it.

↑ Index

182. Alan Sondheim

2 videos recitations at Rilke's grave

Thu 11 Jan 2007

---

memories of rilke, articulated, segmented, a grave condition

http://www.asondheim.org/gravetalkerl.mp4

hello maud, when you read this, rilke will be dead rilke he cleansed hands of the killing-fields foofwa, he cleansed hands of the killing floor see them both

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=O1K34-UmJQE ianother version on YouTube made especially for YouTube
therefore no avatar nudity
therefore no avatar nudity
therefore no avatar nudity

a grave condition, a clean break

↑ Index

183. Tom Beckett
New at e-x-c-h-a-n-g-e-a-l-u-e-s
Thu 11 Jan 2007

My inteview with Jordan Stempleman is up at e-x-c-h-a-n-g-e-v-a-l-u-e-s.

_http://willtoexchange.blogspot.com/2007/01/interview-with-jordan-stempleman.h tml_
(http://willtoexchange.blogspot.com/2007/01/interview-with-jordan-stempleman.html)

↑ Index

184. Patrick Dillon
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Thu 11 Jan 2007

I am hesitant to point out the obvious here, but for an example of "begging the question", check out the wikipedia entry<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Begging_the_question>.

I have been conscious of this phrase and its misuse since a long diatribe by one of my professors. He referred to its misuse as one of his pet peeves. It seems people often say "begs the question" when they mean "raises the question."

Patrick Dillon

↑ Index

185. vulture protein
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Thu 11 Jan 2007

Every morning I'm amazed that people are still contributing to this thread.

On 1/11/07, Patrick Dillon <[redacted]> wrote:
> I am hesitant to point out the obvious here, but for an example of "begging
> the question", check out the wikipedia
> entry<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Begging_the_question>.
>
>
> I have been conscious of this phrase and its misuse since a long diatribe by > one of my professors. He referred to its misuse as one of his pet peeves. It > seems people often say "begs the question" when they mean "raises the > question."
>

> Patrick Dillon
>

↑ Index

186. Wanda Phipps

Wanda Phipps and Jeffrey Cyphers Wright Reading at Perch Cafe

Thu 11 Jan 2007

Hey:

Here's a copy of the Perch Reading Series announcement. It's a cozy little spot in Park Slope, Brooklyn. Hope you can make it!

READING SERIES AT PERCH CAFE

Poets:
Jeffrey Cyphers Wright and Wanda Phipps
reading on Tuesday, January 16th, 2007
7:30pm, followed by Open Mic

at The Perch Cafe
365 5th Avenue
Park Slope, Brooklyn
(between 5th and 6th Streets)
[redacted]

R Train to 4th Avenue at 9th Street
or F Train to 7th Avenue at 9th Street

Curated by: Pam Laskin

Jeffrey Cyphers Wright is a New Romantic known for sonnets, performance and politics. His tenth book, THE NAME POEMS, was published recently by Sisyphus. His work has been included in anthologies from Faber and Faber, Crown, Black Sparrow, Granary and Henry Holt. In addition to poetry, he also writes art criticism and writes for poetry magazines. Recent work can be seen online at www.toolamagazine.com.

Wanda Phipps is a writer living in Brooklyn and author of Wake Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems, Your Last Illusion or Break Up Sonnets and Lunch Poems, among others. Her poetry has been published over a hundred times in numerous journals, among them: Agni, The World, Hanging Loose, Long Shot etc. She has curated several reading and performance series at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church as well as other venues, and has done arts writing for publications such as: Time Out New York, Paper Magazine, and About.com.

--

Wanda Phipps

Check out my website MIND HONEY
http://www.mindhoney.com

and my latest book of poetry
Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:
http://www.softskull.com/detailedbook.php?isbn=1-932360-31-X
and http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

187. Kazim Ali
Book Party for Fanny Howe-- NYC
Thu 11 Jan 2007

Hi all, if you are NYC-based, I hope you will join Nightboat Books at the event below:

**

BOOK RELEASE for Radical Love: 5 Novels by Fanny Howe
Saturday January 20, 6pm-8pm
Poets House
72 Spring Street, 2nd Floor,
SoHo, NYC

This landmark publication by Nightboat Books includes Howe's novels Nod, The Deep North, Famous Questions, Saving History, and Indivisible.

Books will be available for purchase at the event.

====

www.kazimali.com
www.alicejamesbooks.org/far_mosque.html

WAR IS OVER (if you want it): visit www.moveon.org

Have a burning question?
Go to www.Answers.yahoo.com and get answers from real people who know.

↑ Index

188. Eric Yost

Re: Think twice about jaywalking

Thu 11 Jan 2007

Alison ecrit: It's difficult to think of anything more thigh-slappingly hilarious than rape. Oh, of course; raping children.

Keep your thighs slap-free. That poem wasn't meant to be funny. Just an extreme defamiliarization posted for its potential to be offensive to Wallace Stevens mavens.

Compounding your example, maybe "funny" is a leper raping dead children and eating them during a nuclear war? Or maybe "funny" obliges serious standards to avoid disturbing people's finer feelings ... whether they have them or not? De gustibus.

People are people -- you, me, the purportedly victimized scholar, all of us the center of the universe trapped in our skin suits. Words about people are stories, and the truth about stories, as Proust maintained, is a point of view.

I advanced this notion in a vulgar and offensive way. My apologies to all who were offended ... whether they should have been or not.

Chastened,
Eric

↑ Index

189. Brian Stefans

Poets BRIAN KIM STEFANS & SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE at the Writers House -- 1/16

Thu 11 Jan 2007

****

The Kelly Writers House
welcomes

poets BRIAN KIM STEFANS &
SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE

-- for a reading & conversation --

Tuesday, 1/16 at 6 PM

3805 Locust Walk
This event is free & open to the public

BRIAN KIM STEFANS has published several books of poetry including "Free Space Comix" (Roof Books, 1998), "Gulf" (Object Editions, 1998, downloadable at ubu.com) and "Angry Penguins" (Harry Tankoos, 2000), along with several chapbooks, most recently "What Does It Matter?" from Barque Press. "Fashionable Noise: On Digital Poetics," a collection of essays, poetry and interviews, appeared in 2003 from Atelos. His newest books are "What Is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers" (Factory School, 2006), collecting over six years of poetry, and "Before Starting Over: Selected Writings and Interviews 1994-2005," to be published in September, 2006, by Salt Publishing. He is the editor of the /ubu (slash ubu) series of e-books at www.ubu.com/ubu and the creator of arras.net, devoted to new media poetry and poetics, where most of his work, including his own series of Arras e-books, can be found. His internet art and digital poems, such as "The Truth Interview (with Kim Rosenfield)" and the "Flash Polaroids" appear at Ubu, Rhizome, How2, Jacket and Turbulence. "The Dreamlife of Letters" was published by Coach House Books. These and many other works can all be found at arras.net.

SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE grew up three miles from the CIA. Her poetry has appeared in journals such as Chain, The Columbia Poetry Review, 26, and Glitterpony. Her online chapbook "Trespass Slightly In" is available from Coconut Press (www.coconutpoetry.org) and her latest chapbook "Perfect Villagers" (Octopus Books) is due out in December of 2006. She edits Corollary Press, a small chapbook series of innovative work by writers of color (www.corollarypress.blogspot.com), and her first book "Underground National" should be out in late 2007. She received her MFA in poetry from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and is currently at work on a Ph.D. in English Literature at Temple University.

****

Blowzy with age, Matta Fact
contemplated testicular violence; festoons of frankness
had ways. Pale as seeds, going gone laughter on the chill
chance of recovery, stuck in the effigy, instilled more confidence in hype. Ape
a penny, do things that matter
when purchasing oranges (hot

or cold), lacquered tribute.
Connecticut as Kearny, polaroid
as a cheap thrill in Hoboken.
Nobody talks of development, anymore.

-- "Storm Fields," Brian Kim Stefans

Lit up inside, of several generations.
By being tangerine, I was also olive beneath my skirts,
made of bamboo inside the bones and
frayed cheesecloth at the fingertips.
By being a girl and not a color and made up of pencils,
curly fries and shot by a man on horseback somewhere.
By being joined together at the hips with starlight or jackfruit,
now bowed at the knees inside an oceans spray.
Lacking a lisp in consonants.
The pith of a fig, inside a honeydew.
Keeping time inside the mouth, counting sugar grains,
arriving at the ph of a jackals tear.
Neither color nor thing, a slice of jade.
The color of before a tree.
Tucked into a catacomb, tied together with poison ivy or twine.
The skin peels without sunlight or shade.
I bleed silk curtains and cinnamon sticks,
words being both perfume and
antipathy, built to last.

-- "I was tangerine inside the mosque," Sueyeun Juliette Lee

The Kelly Writers House [redacted]
3805 Locust Walk 215-573-WRIT
Philadelphia, PA 19104 http://www.writing.upenn.edu/~wh

↑ Index

190. Stephen Vincent
Moral Equivalent of War/ Show
Thu 11 Jan 2007

The Moral Equivalent of War

If you are in the Bay Area this weekend, this is a great, intense small show of a century of anti-war, pro-peace documents and public works/actions that emerged from or in relation to William James' famous essay, one that was delivered as a talk at Stanford University 100 years ago this month. In addition to much else, the exhibit is a great demonstration of the various historic uses of Typography in the service of a political and moral conviction. The show is spare - not overcrowded with documents - and to the point. In the context of much of today's 'sell-sell' gallery shows, the exhibit is also a refreshing experience in re-contextualizing the public power and function of language and image. And, needless to say, a real counterpoint to the current Bush madness.

The Bonnifont Gallery
946a Greenwich St.
San Francisco CA 94113

Saturday and Sunday
2 - 5

The show formally closes this Sunday - but will remain open by appointment until January 26. Call the Curator, Hope Kingsley, ([redacted]) to set up a special visit, if necessary.

↑ Index

191. Eireene Nealand

rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Thu 11 Jan 2007

---

does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

192. Stephen Vincent

Blogger outs Talk Radio racists, etc.

Thu 11 Jan 2007

---

http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2007/01/11/MNGHLNGH2N1.DTL

This story in today's San Francisco Chronicle may not be about poetry, but it is about language; an amazing story of Spocko, a small blogger's success in short circuiting corporate advertising in support of local racist, and hate mongering talk show radio hosts on the local conservative KSFO radio station. The tactic is simple: "For the past year, Spocko has been e-mailing advertisers of KSFO-AM with audio clips from its shows and asking sponsors to examine what they're supporting. Some sponsors have pulled their ads, after hearing clips like one of KSFO's Lee Rodgers suggesting that a protester be "stomped to death right there. Just stomp their bleeping guts out."...

As a consequence, the station has been losing advertisings. And, of course, KSFO is threatening Spocko with legal action, etc., etc. - saying that Spocko is interfering with Freedom of Speech! ACLU is stepping in to support Spocko, etc.

Anyway, off to an instant demonstration at the SF City Hall in response to King George's 'my way or screw you' speech last night! If you cannot go today, Saturday promises more across the country.

How much blood can cross this guy's hands?

Stephen V

↑ Index

193. Christopher Leland Winks
Re: Blogger outs Talk Radio racists, etc.
Thu 11 Jan 2007

This is my kind of media terrorism. As for Bush, let's recall Macbeth's lines (spoken not long before he gets his comeuppance): "I am in blood / Stepp'd in so far that, should I wade no more / Returning were as tedious as go o'er."

----- Original Message -----
From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, January 11, 2007 2:18 pm
Subject: Blogger outs Talk Radio racists, etc.

> http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-> bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2007/01/11/MNGHLNGH2N1.DTL
> This story in today's San Francisco Chronicle may not be about > poetry, but > it is about language; an amazing story of Spocko, a small > blogger's success > in short circuiting corporate advertising in support of local > racist, and > hate mongering talk show radio hosts on the local conservative > KSFO radio > station.
> The tactic is simple:
> "For the past year, Spocko has been e-mailing advertisers of KSFO-> AM with > audio clips from its shows and asking sponsors to examine what they're > supporting. Some sponsors have pulled their ads, after hearing > clips like > one of KSFO's Lee Rodgers suggesting that a protester be "stomped > to death

> right there. Just stomp their bleeping guts out."...
>
> As a consequence, the station has been losing advertisings. And,
> of course,
> KSFO is threatening Spocko with legal action, etc., etc. - saying
that > Spocko is interfering with Freedom of Speech! ACLU is stepping in > to support
> Spocko, etc.
>
> Anyway, off to an instant demonstration at the SF City Hall in > response to > King George's 'my way or screw you' speech last night! If you > cannot go > today, Saturday promises more across the country.
>
> How much blood can cross this guy's hands?
>
> Stephen V
>

↑ Index

194. Skip Fox

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Thu 11 Jan 2007

Don't some taping devices have a needle that goes into the red when the voice is being picked up too loudly? Maybe seeing the needle jump on accented syllable will help them hear the kettle drum beneath our language.

I scan anything on the board. Including the students' complaints that they can't hear it.

"I can't hear it"
- - / -

Say aloud "Don't put the emphasis on the wrong syllable" by mispronouncing "emphasis" and "syllable" (putting the emphasis on the second syllables) and see how many understand you. Most will, but they'll see the joke. That if you switch emphases, even with the sounds being exactly the same, the words becomes almost unrecognizable.

Of course they can't use a dictionary for multi-syllable words, but you can switch the emphases of these as well to show them.

I share the frustration. Some won't hear it. Most will. (That's with college freshmen.)

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Eireene Nealand
Sent: Thursday, January 11, 2007 1:03 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

195. Jesse Crockett
Listenlight --- new issue 06
Thu 11 Jan 2007

"Fire on the water" --- listenlight 06 <http://listenlight.net>

Poetry ---

Frank Lima, Dawn Pendergast, Antonia Cima, William Allegrezza, Tom W. Lewis, Maurice Oliver, Jill Jones, Jordan Stempleman, Hugh Behm-Steinberg

Letters to Poets ---

Dana Teen Lomax and Clair Braz-Valentine

http://listenlight.net

Editors: Jesse Crockett, Guillermo Parra

↑ Index

196. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience

Thu 11 Jan 2007

John,

Paul Auster's book about becoming a writer ("Making It"?) starts with Auster's intention to make his living out of his poetry. By the end of the book, he "makes it" alright, but first as I think detevive novelist, and then he goes from there. Auster never confronts this subtle transformation his plan undergoes.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/10/07, John Tanner <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi
> Selling out?I would have thought that this was so far down the list of > poetry's concerns as to be invisible. Almost no-one can make a living > directly from writing poetry, however much they try to "sell out".Most > small
> UK mags won't even pay you. It follows that if you want to make a living > out > of writing then you'll write something else.Ourselves and respected peers > and mentors are the audience.So it's down to our own taste in poetry, in > mentors and in peers.
> John Tanner
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "cralan kelder" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Wednesday, January 10, 2007 11:54 AM
> Subject: Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
>
>
> who has a good example of ³begging the question² ?
>
>
>
> On 1/8/07 9:04 PM, "George Bowering" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > On 2-Jan-07, at 2:23 PM, cralan kelder wrote:
> >
> >> > Yes, granted, selling out is bad thing, is inauthentic, is
> disingenuous

> >> > somehow is trying to sell you something, the beauty of poetry being > >> > that
> >> > nobody is trying to sell you anything.
> >> >
> >> > However that begs the question, should poetry not make you want to > >> > ³buy² it?
> >
> > I don't see.
> > How is that begging the question?
> >
> >
> >
> >> >
> > G.H. Bowering
> > His father's son.
> > Mother's, too.
>

↑ Index

197. Ann Bogle
Peace Rally
Thu 11 Jan 2007

In a message dated 1/11/2007 1:21:24 P.M. Central Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Anyway, off to an instant demonstration at the SF City Hall in response to King George's 'my way or screw you' speech last night! If you cannot go today, Saturday promises more across the country.

This is very weird. The UU church just popped me an email and moveon.org sent an email to tell me that there will be an anti-war protest right here in Minnetonka at 6 p.m. (This is a favorite stomping grounds for Bush/Cheney, who close the freeway when they're headed out to the Lake.) We'll be meeting at Lakewinds, a food-coop, also right here in Minnetonka. You know I was complaining so much a few months ago, but now that I have a few dollars in my pocket, I can actually go to the food coop and hold my head up. And now go to a peace rally. I can't believe this. It made me cry to think I can go to a peace rally in my hometown.

Has anyone who would like to discuss it read Orwell's Down and Out in Paris and London? I've just started it; it's terrific -- anecdotal and based on tiny portraits of people who live in the ghetto and their poverty.

A

↑ Index

198. Simon DeDeo
rhubarb is susan
Thu 11 Jan 2007

A midweek update to rhubarb is susan, with two reviews -- one of Marc Gaba in the Boston Review, and one of Stephen Burt in the Harvard review:

http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/
http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/stephen-burt-tarmac-with-soundtrack.html
http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/marc-gaba-study-of-linearity.html

Do drop by and join the discussion.

Thanks for tuning in,

Simon

↑ Index

199. Maria Damon
Re: Peace Rally
Thu 11 Jan 2007

why is is so weird that there's a peace rally in mpls? this area has a strong history of politically progressive (if socially conservative) populism. i read down n out in p and l in high school and absolutely adored it, but the only thing i remember clearly is about the parisian restaurant workers wringing out a dirty dishcloth (or was it a rag they used to wipe the floor) into a really fancy soup before serving the bourgeois clientele! that's stayed with me, for better or worse. cheers, homegirl! xo, md

At 5:52 PM -0500 1/11/07, Ann Bogle wrote:
>
>In a message dated 1/11/2007 1:21:24 P.M. Central Standard Time, >[redacted] writes:
>
>Anyway, off to an instant demonstration at the SF City Hall in response to >King George's 'my way or screw you' speech last night! If you cannot go >today, Saturday promises more across the country.
>
>
>
>This is very weird. The UU church just popped me an email and moveon.org >sent an email to tell me that there will be an anti-war protest right here in >Minnetonka at 6 p.m. (This is a favorite stomping grounds for Bush/Cheney, >who close the freeway when they're headed out to the Lake.) We'll be meeting >at Lakewinds, a food-coop, also right here in Minnetonka. You know I was >complaining so much a few months ago, but now that I have a few dollars in my >pocket, I can actually go to the food coop and hold my head up.

>And now go to a >peace rally. I can't believe this. It made me cry to think I can go to a >peace rally in my hometown.
>
>Has anyone who would like to discuss it read Orwell's Down and Out in Paris >and London? I've just started it; it's terrific -- anecdotal and based on >tiny portraits of people who live in the ghetto and their poverty.
>
>A

↑ Index

200. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Peace Rally
Thu 11 Jan 2007

Prince moved to Canada?? why was I not informed?!! this means I'll have to change my Paisley Park / Eckankar World Headquarters tour of Chanhassan next time the folks are visiting...

peace to you all...

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Maria Damon
Sent: Thursday, January 11, 2007 17:30
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Peace Rally

oh, i get it. minnetonka! yes that is, er, unusual. but good for you minnetonkans. now that prince has moved to canada, it's time for a new source of sparkle!

At 5:21 PM -0600 1/11/07, Maria Damon wrote:
>why is is so weird that there's a peace rally in mpls? this area has >a strong history of politically progressive (if socially >conservative) populism. i read down n out in p and l in high school >and absolutely adored it, but the only thing i remember clearly is >about the parisian restaurant workers wringing out a dirty dishcloth

>(or was it a rag they used to wipe the floor) into a really fancy >soup before serving the bourgeois clientele! that's stayed with me, >for better or worse. cheers, homegirl!
>xo, md
>
>At 5:52 PM -0500 1/11/07, Ann Bogle wrote:
>>
>>In a message dated 1/11/2007 1:21:24 P.M. Central Standard Time, >>[redacted] writes:
>>
>>Anyway, off to an instant demonstration at the SF City Hall in response to >>King George's 'my way or screw you' speech last night! If you cannot go
>>today, Saturday promises more across the country.
>>
>>
>>
>>This is very weird. The UU church just popped me an email and moveon.org
>>sent an email to tell me that there will be an anti-war protest
>>right here in >>Minnetonka at 6 p.m. (This is a favorite stomping grounds for Bush/Cheney,
>>who close the freeway when they're headed out to the Lake.) We'll >>be meeting >>at Lakewinds, a food-coop, also right here in Minnetonka. You know I was >>complaining so much a few months ago, but now that I have a few >>dollars in my >>pocket, I can actually go to the food coop and hold my head up.
>>And now go to a >>peace rally. I can't believe this. It made me cry to think I can go to a >>peace rally in my hometown.
>>
>>Has anyone who would like to discuss it read Orwell's Down and Out in Paris >>and London? I've just started it; it's terrific -- anecdotal and based on >>tiny portraits of people who live in the ghetto and their poverty.

>>
>>A

↑ Index

201. Maria Damon
Re: Peace Rally
Thu 11 Jan 2007

---

oh, i get it. minnetonka! yes that is, er, unusual. but good for you minnetonkans. now that prince has moved to canada, it's time for a new source of sparkle!

At 5:21 PM -0600 1/11/07, Maria Damon wrote:
>why is is so weird that there's a peace rally in mpls? this area has
>a strong history of politically progressive (if socially >conservative) populism. i read down n out in p and l in high school >and absolutely adored it, but the only thing i remember clearly is >about the parisian restaurant workers wringing out a dirty dishcloth >(or was it a rag they used to wipe the floor) into a really fancy >soup before serving the bourgeois clientele! that's stayed with me, >for better or worse. cheers, homegirl!
>xo, md
>
>At 5:52 PM -0500 1/11/07, Ann Bogle wrote:
>>
>>In a message dated 1/11/2007 1:21:24 P.M. Central Standard Time, >>[redacted] writes:
>>
>>Anyway, off to an instant demonstration at the SF City Hall in response to >>King George's 'my way or screw you' speech last night! If you cannot go >>today, Saturday promises more across the country.
>>
>>
>>
>>This is very weird. The UU church just popped me an email and
moveon.org
>>sent an email to tell me that there will be an anti-war protest
>>right here in >>Minnetonka at 6 p.m. (This is a favorite stomping grounds for Bush/Cheney,
>>who close the freeway when they're headed out to the Lake.) We'll >>be meeting
>>at Lakewinds, a food-coop, also right here in Minnetonka. You know I was >>complaining so much a few months ago, but now that I have a few >>dollars in my >>pocket, I can actually go to the food coop and hold my head up.

>>And now go to a >>peace rally. I can't believe this. It made me cry to think I can go to a >>peace rally in my hometown.
>>
>>Has anyone who would like to discuss it read Orwell's Down and Out in Paris >>and London? I've just started it; it's terrific -- anecdotal and based on >>tiny portraits of people who live in the ghetto and their poverty.
>>
>>A

↑ Index

202. mIEKAL aND

Fwd: Bob is Dead! Long live Bob! Robert Anton Wilson (1932-2007)

Thu 11 Jan 2007

Begin forwarded message:

> From: e <[redacted]>
> Date: January 11, 2007 5:32:39 PM CST
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Bob is Dead! Long live Bob! Robert Anton Wilson (1932-2007)
>
> Robert Anton Wilson Defies Medical Experts and leaves his body @4:50 AM on binary date 01/11.
> All Hail Eris!
>
> On behalf of his children and those who cared for him, deepest love and gratitude for the tremendous support and lovingness bestowed upon us.
>
> (that's it from Bob's bedside at his fnord by the sea)
>
> RAW Memorial February 07
> date to be announced
>
> http://www.10zenmonkeys.com/2007/01/11/robert-anton-wilson-1932-2007/

↑ Index

203. holsapple1
Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
Thu 11 Jan 2007

You say you've read & read about the subject . . . Have you read The Rhythms of English Poetry by Derek Attridge? That's the most compelling account I've encountered & would certainly recommend it, if you haven't. Bruce

↑ Index

204. Bob Marcacci
Re: patchen
Thu 11 Jan 2007

I thought Canads were prohibited from such activity...

--
Bob Marcacci

Love: a temporary insanity, curable by marriage.
- Ambrose Bierce

> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> Date: Wed, 10 Jan 2007 23:12:16 -0800
> To: <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: patchen
>
> That's right. One is on my wall.
> I bought it in the summer of 1964.
>
> gb
>
> On 10-Jan-07, at 9:19 PM, David Baratier wrote:
>
> miekal--
>
> I read the Rebel Poet in America book, it is excellent, great info, well researched, but the number of mistakes, mispellings, grammar and so on really made me blush with embarassment; it was difficult to read through.
>
> By the way, Rita Bottoms was who I was thinking of and, George is right, not all the paintings are at Santa Cruz.
>
> Be well

> David Baratier, Editor
>
> Pavement Saw Press
> PO Box 6291
> Columbus, OH 43206
> http://pavementsaw.org
>
> G. Bowering, DLitt.
> I still haven't opened it.

↑ Index

205. Jason Quackenbush

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Thu 11 Jan 2007

no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.

which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.

On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

206. Poetry Project

Events at the Poetry Project: 1/12 - 1/17

Thu 11 Jan 2007

Dears,

It¹s a new year and with that comes a new hard drive. Like many good things, one of our very important office computer hard drives died a quick and sudden death on New Year¹s Eve. Thusly, any and all emails sent to the [redacted] account between 12/31/06 and yesterday were received today, and we apologize for the major delay in informative communication.

Please join us for three terrific upcoming nights, details follow below.

Also, scroll down for descriptions of the soon-to-commence Spring Workshops. This season¹s classes will be led by Dgls. Rothschild, Akilah Oliver, Joanna Fuhrman and Thomas Savage. We are currently accepting reservations, and the classes will begin the second week of February.

Thanks to all who supported the New Year¹s Day Marathon in every capacity; we had a great time, Œtwas a roaring success, and we & the hard drive feel fully recovered.

Love,

The Poetry Project

Friday, January 12, 10:30 pm
This is the Bike Ride to Work: Prose Poems & Super 8: Stephanie Gray

An evening of poems and super 8 shorts. Poems read live with films and a keyboard. Work will tackle Joan of Arc, Buffalo, Metallica, grain elevators, a bike ride to work, and will include a film set to the words of Eileen Myles' "School of Fish." Stephanie Gray is a poet and an experimental filmmaker whose films often incorporate poetry. Her poems have appeared in the on-line poetry journals Can We Have Our Ball Back?, Unpleasant Event Schedule, and Lodestar Quarterly. She has a book forthcoming, of mostly prose poems, entitled Heart Stoner Bingo from Straw Gate Books in 2007. Her film Dear Joan (about Joan of Arc) which has a poem voiceover, has screened internationally, and is distributed by Frameline Lesbian & Gay Film Distribution. Her super 8 films often deal with themes of the city, pop culture, class, queerness, feminism and hearing loss, but not always in that order or at the same time. Her super 8 films are often hand-processed and edited in camera. She has received funding from NYFA (in film), NYSCA and the Experimental Television Center. Her work has been featured in NYC in one-woman screenings at Millennium Film Workshop and the Mix Fest @ Collective Unconscious. Her films have shown in film festivals and venues such as Exit Art (NY), Oberhausen (Germany), Viennale (Austria), VIDEOEX (Switzerland), Cinematexas (Austin), Antimatter (Canada), Chicago Underground Film Fest, Free Speech TV, Inside Out Lesbian and Gay Film Fest (Toronto), and Madcat Women¹s Intl. Film Fest (San Francisco). She has performed her poetry with films at fests and venues such as Splice This! Super 8 Film Fest (Toronto) and Squeaky Wheel/Buffalo Media Resources, among others. Images from her film Kristy are in the LTTR¹s (Lesbians To The Rescue) Fall 2005 issue. Formerly of Buffalo, where she worked at Squeaky Wheel, a media arts center, she moved to NYC in 2004 and currently works at Anthology Film Archives.

Monday, January 15, 8:00 pm
Charles Alexander & Tim Peterson
* Please note, this reading will be held directly next door to the church, in the Rectory on E. 11th St

Charles Alexander¹s books of poetry include Hopeful Buildings, arc of light / dark matter, Pushing Water: parts one through six, Pushing Water: part seven, Etudes: D & D and Near or Random Acts. Certain Slants (Junction Press) is forthcoming. Alexander is founder, director, and book artist of Chax Press. He is also an adjunct or part time faculty member at the Naropa Institute¹s Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics in Boulder, Colorado, Pima Community College and the University of Arizona Poetry Center. He teaches independent courses to the community in creative writing, literature, and the book arts. Tim Peterson's book Since I Moved In is forthcoming from Chax Press. He currently lives in Brooklyn where he edits EOAGH: A Journal of the Arts and acts as a curator for the Segue Reading Series. He recently guest-edited the "New Media Poetry and Poetics" issue of Leonardo Electronic Almanac. Other recent work has been published by Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs, Faux Press/e, and Transgender Tapestry.

Wednesday, January 17, 8:00 pm
Kamau Brathwaite & Susan Howe

Kamau Brathwaite, born in Barbados in 1930, is an internationally celebrated poet, performer, and cultural theorist. Co-founder of the Caribbean Artists Movement, he was educated at Pembroke College, Cambridge and has a Ph.D. from the University of Sussex in the U.K. He has served on the board of directors of UNESCO¹s History of Mankind project since 1979, and as cultural advisor to the government of Barbados from 19751979 and since 1990. His book The Zea Mexican Diary (1993) was the Village Voice Book of the Year. Some of his many works include Middle Passages (1994), Ancestors (2001), The Development of Creole Society, 1770-1820 (2005). Brathwaite is currently a professor of comparative literature at New York University, and shares his time between CowPastor, Barbados, and New York City. His latest book is Born to Slow Horses, published by Wesleyan in 2005 and winner of the International Griffin Poetry Prize in 2006. Susan Howe's most recent books are The Midnight published by New Directions, and Kidnapped from Coracle Books. She is also the author of two books of criticism, My Emily Dickinson, and The Birth-Mark: unsettling the wilderness in American literary expression. A CD called Thiefth in collaboration with the musician/ composer David Grubbs was released from Blue Chopsticks in 2005 and Souls of the Labadie Tract, another collaboration with Grubbs will be released this February. She holds the Samuel P. Capen Chair in Poetry and the Humanities at the State University New York at Buffalo.

Spring Workshops at the Poetry Project

The Poetry School Of Poetry Douglas Rothschild
Tuesdays at 7 Pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 13th

Writing poetry is difficult; writing good poetry, more difficult still. In this workshop, we will focus on exactly what we think is good in a poem & determine how our senses of aesthetics inform our responses to this question. Working within our own aesthetic notions we will then begin to refine our writing, & help each other to write the best poems that we can. The workshop will conduct a number of actual experiments with writing that will allow us to step outside the world of id, which wants to keep all the beautiful words, & into the artistic self, which understands which pieces fit & which belong elsewhere. We will also engage the basic Poetry School of Poetry premise that the poet¹s first job is to learn how to edit. Dgls N. Rthschld has been behind the foods table at the New Years Reading more times than it is worth mentioning. He has also written a number of chapbooks, the most ground breaking entitled The Minor Arcane. He has taught what seem to be innumerable college writing classes, and is currently teaching at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, a CUNY school.

The Visible Unseen: Writing Outside Borders Akilah Oliver Thursdays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 15th

Are poetry and prose virtual realities, simulations of something other, or the real thing? Where does the ³I² live? How many moments exist in the moment of the line? What borders of form are crucial for us to hang on to & which boundaries are collapsible? In this workshop, we will explore the connections and tensions between the visible and the unseen world/s, not as dualities or binaries, but as complementary sites of composition. Through engagement with text (written and visual), public spaces, the imagination, dreams and Eros, participants are invited to think of writing as that which re-imagines the known and the unknown. Though this is a text based workshop, poets, prose writers, and artists from all disciplines are welcome. Readings include: Giorgio Agamben, Laura Mullen, Whitman, Anne Waldman, Derrida, & Ben Okri. Akilah Oliver is the author of the she said dialogues: flesh memory, An Arriving Guard of Angels, Thusly Coming to Greet, a(A)gust, & The Putterer¹s Notebook. She is faculty at the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics Summer Writing Program at Naropa University.

Impurity Rocks! A Poetry Lab & Workshop Joanna Fuhrman
Fridays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 16th

The class will focus on ³impure² poetry, poetry that employs a mixture of tones and styles. Special emphasis will be placed on works that combine narrative and humor with linguistic and imagistic disjunction. In-class exercises and take-home assignments will touch on issues of scale, space, sound, genre and wordplay. Time will also be devoted to reading published poems as well as in-depth discussions and critiques of student work. Joanna Fuhrman is the author of three collections of poetry, Freud in Brooklyn, Ugh Ugh Ocean and Moraine, all published by Hanging Loose Press. She has taught poetry writing at The University of Washington, The Cooper Union Saturday Outreach program and in the New York City Public Schools.

Poetry For The Page, Stage, And Computer Screen Thomas Savage Saturdays At 12 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 17th

This course is a writing workshop where students' writing is the main focus. Also used as inspiration and writing prompts will be samples of work by writers from The Beats, Black Mountain poets, The New York School (all generations), Language Poetry, Poets Theater, Pablo Neruda, and works being published today online, among other sources. Practices will include reading as well as writing assignments and, in a great Poetry Project tradition, in-class writing. Thomas Savage has written eight published books of poems including most recently Bamiyan Poems, Brain Surgery Poems and Political Conditions/Physical States. His poems have appeared in many print and online venues including The New York Times, Hanging Loose, Rattapallax, Big Bridge, Black Box, and regularly on the Wryting-L website. He has taught poetry workshops at The Poetry Project and Tribes Gallery.

* The workshop fee is $350, which includes a one year Sustaining Poetry Project membership and tuition for any and all spring and fall classes. Reservations are required due to limited class space, and payment must be received in advance. Caps on class sizes, if in effect, will be determined by workshop leaders. Please send payment and reservations to:

The Poetry Project, St. Mark's Church
Attn: Workshops
131 East 10th St.
NYC, NY 10003

For more information, or to pay by credit card, please call [redacted], or email: [redacted].

http://www.poetryproject.com/workshops.php

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Winter Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $85 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

207. Joe Amato

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Thu 11 Jan 2007

Well, not to be a gadfly -- or, why not? -- but if we're discussing prosody, and students' failure accordingly -- then we might as well talk about the fact that so many students can't read prose.

Now this may or may not be anything new. But my approach to classrooms sonics is pretty simple: we read as much as we can ALOUD. Yep, it takes up time. Occasionally I bring in a tape recorder -- depends on how anal I feel.

But I've been surprised, dismayed, and not-so-surprised at how many students can't make their way through the relatively pedestrian rhythms of a relatively pedestrian sentence. There was a time, to which I'd wish not to return, when entire classes recited passages orally (prose, poetry, what have you) in unison. At least that activity yoked meaning both to pronunciation and enunciation, and rhythm came along for the ride (at least), in that emphasis IS, to a large extent, meaning.

There's a more theoretical matter here, having to do with performance (see e.g. McGann's new book). I'll leave that one alone for now. I think it a good idea, at any rate, to devote class time to aural performance (incl., btw, reciting from memory).

Best,

Joe

> no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.
>
> which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.
>
> On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

208. Alison Croggon

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Thu 11 Jan 2007

Me, I'd have a good look at some drama exercises for children (there are some good British books in particular) and adapt the rhythmical or textual ones to working with poems. It all depends on the age of the children, too. With young ones I'd start with Dr Seuss.

All the best

Alison

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

209. Elizabeth Treadwell
Birds & Fancies
Thu 11 Jan 2007

Dear Folk, My new book, Birds & Fancies, is out early.

Here's the info if you're interested:

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2007/treadwell.html

Happy new year to all,
Elizabeth

Elizabeth Treadwell
http://secretmint.blogspot.com
http://elizabethtreadwell.com

_____
Fixing up the home? Live Search can help
http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?
kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=hmemailtaglinenov06&FORM=WLMTAG

↑ Index

210. Clay Banes
Re: Birds & Fancies
Thu 11 Jan 2007

---

out and on bookstore shelves and looking lovely!

On 1/11/07, Elizabeth Treadwell <[redacted]> wrote:
> Dear Folk, My new book, Birds & Fancies, is out early.
>
> Here's the info if you're interested:
>
> http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2007/treadwell.html
>
>
> Happy new year to all,
> Elizabeth
>
> Elizabeth Treadwell
> http://secretmint.blogspot.com
> http://elizabethtreadwell.com
>
> _____
> Fixing up the home? Live Search can help

> http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?
kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=hmemailtaglinenov06&FORM=WLMTAG
>

--
EYEBALL HATRED
http://claytonbanes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

211. Haas Bianchi
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Thu 11 Jan 2007

Who is the sell out?

Pound lived off the benifices of women he used.
Williams worked as a doctor.
Neruda was a Diplomat
Stein lived off her money and Alice

As far as I can see one of the only poets in the past century who did not sell out was Akhmatova

R

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Murat Nemet-Nejat
Sent: Thursday, January 11, 2007 3:23 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience

John,

Paul Auster's book about becoming a writer ("Making It"?) starts with Auster's intention to make his living out of his poetry. By the end of the book, he "makes it" alright, but first as I think detevive novelist, and then he goes from there. Auster never confronts this subtle transformation his plan undergoes.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/10/07, John Tanner <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi
> Selling out?I would have thought that this was so far down the list of > poetry's concerns as to be invisible. Almost no-one can make a living > directly from writing poetry, however much they try to "sell out".Most > small UK mags won't even pay you. It follows that if you want to make > a living out of writing then you'll write something else.Ourselves and > respected peers and mentors are the audience.So it's down to our own > taste in poetry, in mentors and in peers.

> John Tanner
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "cralan kelder" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Wednesday, January 10, 2007 11:54 AM
> Subject: Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
>
>
> who has a good example of ³begging the question² ?
>
>
>
> On 1/8/07 9:04 PM, "George Bowering" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > On 2-Jan-07, at 2:23 PM, cralan kelder wrote:
> >
> >> > Yes, granted, selling out is bad thing, is inauthentic, is
> disingenuous
> >> > somehow is trying to sell you something, the beauty of poetry > >> > being that nobody is trying to sell you anything.
> >> >
> >> > However that begs the question, should poetry not make you want > >> > to ³buy² it?
> >
> > I don't see.
> > How is that begging the question?
> >
> >
> >
> >> >
> > G.H. Bowering
> > His father's son.
> > Mother's, too.
>

↑ Index

212. Nick Carbo
new asian american poetry feature
Thu 11 Jan 2007

Are you tired of reading the same old recuring asian american poets? Well, here's a poetry special issue of Mipoesias dedicated to the new, rising, unknown (well Eileen Tabios is known by millions), future stars of asian american poetry. Amazing poems and three tantalizing film/video poems at:

http://www.mipoesias.com/

muchas gracias,

Nick Carbo
http://www.npr.org/features/feature.php?wfId=1667164
http://www.cherry-grove.com/carbo.html

_____
Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

213. George Bowering
Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
Thu 11 Jan 2007

On 11-Jan-07, at 4:25 PM, Joe Amato wrote:

> *Well, not to be a gadfly -- or, why not? -- but if we're discussing prosody, and students' failure accordingly -- then we might as well talk about the fact that so many students can't read prose.*

Well, the schools, eh?

I know a grade 12 kid in a school in a rich area here, who is pretty well illiterate, but gets an A in English.

George Bowering. OC
I did not vote for any present head of government.

↑ Index

214. Lynn Xu
Re: Poets BRIAN KIM STEFANS & SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE at the Writers House -- 1/16
Thu 11 Jan 2007

AWE MAN! I wish I could be there! I really like hearing you read! And I've never heard Juliette read ...

But yeah, sorry I rushed off like that last Saturday, my friends were antsy and flushed clean from the commute, wanted to get stoned and go to bed. Yeah. Them damn Berkeley tree-loving tree-smoking ...

Well I had a really great time with you at dinner! I thought it was good I got seated across from you. Perfect.

Let me know when you'll be in New York again. I would like to see you. We have more to say, no? I am reading in The Kitchen the night before Valentine's Day. We will talk before then. Love to you

Lynn

On 1/11/07, Brian Stefans <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
> **********
>
> The Kelly Writers House
> welcomes
>
> poets BRIAN KIM STEFANS & > SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE
>
> -- for a reading & conversation --
>
> ----------
> Tuesday, 1/16 at 6 PM
> 3805 Locust Walk
> This event is free & open to the public
> ----------
>
> BRIAN KIM STEFANS has published several books of poetry including "Free > Space Comix" (Roof Books, 1998), "Gulf" (Object Editions, 1998, > downloadable at ubu.com) and "Angry Penguins" (Harry Tankoos, 2000), along > with several chapbooks, most recently "What Does It Matter?" from Barque > Press. "Fashionable Noise: On Digital Poetics," a collection of essays, > poetry and interviews, appeared in 2003 from Atelos. His newest books are
> "What Is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers" (Factory School, 2006), > collecting over six years of poetry, and "Before Starting Over: Selected > Writings and Interviews 1994-2005," to be published in September, 2006, by > Salt Publishing. He is the editor of the /ubu (slash ubu) series of > e-books at www.ubu.com/ubu and the creator of arras.net, devoted to new > media poetry and poetics, where most of his work, including his own series > of Arras e-books, can be found. His internet art and digital poems, such > as "The Truth Interview (with Kim Rosenfield)" and the "Flash Polaroids" > appear at Ubu, Rhizome, How2, Jacket and Turbulence. "The Dreamlife of > Letters" was published by Coach House Books. These and many other works > can all be found at arras.net.

>
> SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE grew up three miles from the CIA. Her poetry has > appeared in journals such as Chain, The Columbia Poetry Review, 26, and > Glitterpony. Her online chapbook "Trespass Slightly In" is available from > Coconut Press (www.coconutpoetry.org) and her latest chapbook "Perfect > Villagers" (Octopus Books) is due out in December of 2006. She edits > Corollary Press, a small chapbook series of innovative work by writers of > color (www.corollarypress.blogspot.com), and her first book "Underground > National" should be out in late 2007. She received her MFA in poetry from > the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and is currently at work on a > Ph.D. in English Literature at Temple University.
>
>
> **********
>
> Blowzy with age, Matta Fact
> contemplated testicular > violence; festoons of frankness
> had ways. Pale as seeds,
> going gone laughter on the chill
> chance of recovery, stuck in > the effigy, instilled more
> confidence in hype. Ape
> a penny, do things that matter
> when purchasing oranges (hot
> or cold), lacquered tribute.
> Connecticut as Kearny, polaroid
> as a cheap thrill in Hoboken.
> Nobody talks of development, anymore.
>
> -- "Storm Fields," Brian Kim Stefans
>
>
> Lit up inside, of several generations.
> By being tangerine, I was also olive beneath my skirts,
> made of bamboo inside the bones and

> frayed cheesecloth at the fingertips.
> By being a girl and not a color and made up of pencils,
> curly fries and shot by a man on horseback somewhere.
> By being joined together at the hips with starlight or jackfruit,
> now bowed at the knees inside an oceans spray.
> Lacking a lisp in consonants.
> The pith of a fig, inside a honeydew.
> Keeping time inside the mouth, counting sugar grains,
> arriving at the ph of a jackals tear.
> Neither color nor thing, a slice of jade.
> The color of before a tree.
> Tucked into a catacomb, tied together with poison ivy or twine.
> The skin peels without sunlight or shade.
> I bleed silk curtains and cinnamon sticks,
> words being both perfume and
> antipathy, built to last.
>
> -- "I was tangerine inside the mosque," Sueyeun Juliette Lee
>
>
> ----------
> The Kelly Writers House [redacted]
> 3805 Locust Walk 215-573-WRIT
> Philadelphia, PA 19104 http://www.writing.upenn.edu/~wh
>

↑ Index

215. Jeremy Hawkins
Michel de Guy contact info?
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Does anyone have contact information for Michel de Guy?
Please reply back channel, if so. Thanks!

-jeremy

_____

Omnia dicta fortiora, si dicta latina. _____

↑ Index

216. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Fri 12 Jan 2007

I complete second Jason's point. I think, if one wants to make a metrical analysis of the sound and stress structure of a language, one has to do it from within the language itself.

Murat

On 1/11/07, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it > seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of > stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in > hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or > unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that > syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that > syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.
>
> which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds > of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient > Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to > shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic > framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of > classical prosody.
>
>
> On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> > does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm > > and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down > > in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a > > disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways > > for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the > > subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of > > rhythm and poetry?
> >
>

↑ Index

217. Desmond Swords
Riddle of da meter moan
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Jason wrote

"there are multiple levels of stress in English."

An example

When I first came here from Ormskirk – Lancashire, I met PJ Brady the actor/poet, who has played Patrick Kavanagh in a one-man show for the last 20 years and asked him about heavily stressing the final syllable. He had not a clue who I was referring to. We were talking for five minutes before the misunderstanding was realised.

"Patrick KavanAgh"

The Irish voice stresses totally different, as the final "A" in "Kavanagh" is stressed a tiny bit more than the other two, but not as heavily as the final "A" an English voice uses.

Anglo-Saxon meter roots in the alliterative one from the 10C onwards.

Alliterative meter is therefore the native English language poetic - technically speaking - in the sense of it being the closest living meter/poetic to modern English.

It is an ideal one to acquire for bluffing down the poetical path and through this brief flash of life we call consciousness with, methinks mon cara Mór - as one doesn’t - as Jason says - get sucked into borrowing

"from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek" or "Latin..."

I have nicked an idea off Simon Armitage and am having a dabble at Piers Plowman.

One summer day when the sun was soft
I slipped on a sheepskin shawl. And walking wide eyed with wonder through the world wearing the habit of an unholy hermit that May morning on Malvern hill, I thought I heard a Faery-jolt befall
me.

I was weary with wandering so went to rest on a broad bank at the brook-side - to lay down lean and look on the water - but the stream’s wet strain of merry slumber swayed me asleep, and I began a marvellous dream of being in a wilderness I'd never seen before.

Looking East - to the sun - my eye fastened on a magnificent tower - stout on a hilltop and in the dale below a dark dungeon whose deep ditches were a terrible sight to behold

Between these two was a wondrous field full of folk and all manner of men from commoner to king, working and wandering at the world's command.

Some honest ones put to the plough - planting sowing and sweating hard to win what wasters by their gluttony destroy - and some with proud countenance coming disguised; dressed in the garb of deceit

Many put themselves to prayer and penance for the love of God, living strict and straight lives in the hope of bliss in a heavenly hereafter like anchorites and hermits cloistered in cells not coveting the pleasures of flesh or loitering lecherously along life's path.

Some opt for commerce to accomplish success
it seems, as in our sight such men thrive.

And some mirth-making like minstrels, getting gold with their glee and guiltless – I believe.

But japers and janglers, the children of Judas revel in fantasies and make themselves fools unwilling to work whilst having the wit to

What Paul preached of them I need not prove here

Qui loquitur turpiloquium

Pre-Roman UK civilisation was gone and, with no written records left, so the Renaissance courtiers in Tudor England took the technical lingo from a non native poetic - 2000 miles distant and a minimum of 1000 years dead at it's closet living point and imported - wholesale - a myth routing to 5C BC Greece.

Henry the VII was the first monarch to rule after a brutal time when the country was too busy fighting amongst itself to concentrate on something so ambitious and frivolous as court-poetry - in the sense they viewed it. The civilised polis and lofty blather on the essentials.

The literary minded looked to Greece and Rome and decided to try and connect their Anglo Saxon poetical heritage to these cultures, and now the myth is secure after 400 years propagation and grafting. Few bother looking outside it for an alternative or more accurate poetic a bit closer to home (like the straightforward Cauldron of Poesy text from the Irish tradition - composed by someone with multiple generations of quantum linguists behind them and plenty more to come.)

~

What better than pretending we are really the progeny of Homer as we go about - at that time – the entirely new business of adopting a blueprint when building the poetic and oeuvre of one’s nation from scratch. An innovative act of imitation, but with no claim to originality.

So the whole business of scansion in the English language can only ever be an abstract thing. No hard and fast rules. A great and flexible system. You say tomAto I say tomato. The deeply serious linguistic science one constructs as their poetic differs from waffler to wavelength professor in the sonic arts. Effectively, we make our own theory up from whatever we discover and believe is relevant or true.

The datum mark of the traditional poetic we decide to agree on is essentially flawed - as it is a quantitive system of scanning by syllable length - the time it takes to say the word - not the stress. It's neither fish nor fowl, and the whole premise of there being an easily grasped native blueprint of prosody in modern English language poetry is in effect - a fallacy.

I recently read Horace's "Ars Poetica" for the first time and he read like Heaney's prose does, straightforward, logical, obviously written by one who practices the art. It was then a penny dropped. Aristotle was a talker of poetic theory, not a practitioner of verse, so it was no wonder we find him dense and difficult.

Aristotle telling a poet how to write poetry is like us telling a brain surgeon how to fix stroke patients, but Horace makes sense as he talks from experience.

Enthuse the kids and keep our own "shiny armour of moi" for the battles in our word wars, as horace reckons

"Poets wish either to profit or to delight"

↑ Index

218. Eireene Nealand

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Fri 12 Jan 2007

---

thank you guys, this is great, i did try out that red meter thing on the computer.

does anyone have any opinions on pinsky's discussion of rhythms being created out of vowels and constonants? (the consonants being the things that stop sounds and the vowels being something of a continuous flow of air at least).

which takes us into olsen's unfurling flow of the line, which takes us to Olsen and the breath.

are we still talking about rhythm? can rhythm be discussed separately from quesitons of rhyme?

what am i missing in there.

and memorize, yes, good, happy to memorize, just tell me what (i confess i'm as concerned for my own learning as that of my students, if such a separation can be made).

i'm a bit concerned that tennyson, as lovely as the first lines are:

"break, break, break/against thy cold grey stones/o sea"

if rhthms are copied stanza by stanza will lead to that stilted rhyming poetry that i fear from my students (and occasionally from myself). any ideas about how to move from tennyson to free verse?

maybe it's just the wrong poem that i'm starting out with.

maybe dr. seuss really will do it?

e

On 1/11/07, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
> no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.
>
> which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.

>
>
> On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> > does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm
> > and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down > > in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a > > disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways > > for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the > > subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of > > rhythm and poetry?
> >
>

↑ Index

219. cralan kelder
beggins the answer - why perform
Fri 12 Jan 2007

hey patrick, yeah,

ok, so why not change the thread to begging the answer,
because i am still wondering what about performing, who is it for,
for instance the MLA readings, and the posting to this list about how it might be more fun if we just showed up and talked to each other.

like at gallery openings when everybody shows up to look at who else is there,
not the art.

what do you think? do you perform? who is it for, you or the audience? IF its for them what do you owe them

On 1/11/07 6:30 PM, "vulture protein" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Every morning I'm amazed that people are still contributing to this thread.
>
> On 1/11/07, Patrick Dillon <[redacted]> wrote:
> I am hesitant to point out the obvious here, but for an example of "begging
> the question", check out the wikipedia
> entry<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Begging_the_question>.
>
> I have been conscious of this phrase and its misuse since a long diatribe
> by > one of my professors. He referred to its misuse as one of his pet peeves.
> It > seems people often say "begs the question" when they mean "raises the question."

>
> Patrick Dillon

↑ Index

220. Wystan Curnow

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Fri 12 Jan 2007

Jason,your opinion re-levels of stress in English used to be/still is?conventional wisdom. It seemed a relatively new idea in the 1960s. Eireene,when it comes to teaching prosody in writing courses (or contemporary literature courses), the main question concerns sounds, the hearing of them, the shapes they take and what bearing they have on meaning. Some responses to that question might involve learning about hearing meters and scaning lines, but there's no necessity at all. Wystan

---

From: UB Poetics discussion group on behalf of Jason Quackenbush
Sent: Fri 12/01/2007 1:12 p.m.
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.

which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.

On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the > subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

221. Jill Jones
Re: Listenlight --- new issue 06
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Hi Jesse,

It looks good - thanks for the editing.

Best,
Jill

On Friday, January 12, 2007, at 07:57 AM, Jesse Crockett wrote:

> "Fire on the water" --- listenlight 06 <http://listenlight.net>
>
> Poetry ---
>
> Frank Lima, Dawn Pendergast, Antonia Cima, William Allegrezza, Tom W. Lewis, Maurice Oliver, Jill Jones, Jordan Stempleman, Hugh Behm-Steinberg
>
> Letters to Poets ---
>
> Dana Teen Lomax and Clair Braz-Valentine
>
> http://listenlight.net
>
> Editors: Jesse Crockett, Guillermo Parra

Jill Jones

Latest books:
Broken/Open. Available from Salt Publishing
http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/smp/1844710416.htm

Where the Sea Burns. Wagtail Series. Picaro Press
PO Box 853, Warners Bay, NSW, 2282. [redacted]

Struggle and radiance: ten commentaries (Wild Honey Press)
http://www.wildhoneypress.com

web site 1: http://homepages.ihug.com.au/~jpjones
off the street: http://jillesjon.googlepages.com/home

blog1: Ruby Street http://rubystreet.blogspot.com/
blog2: Latitudes http://itudes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

222. Barry Schwabsky
Re: beggins the answer - why perform
Fri 12 Jan 2007

For me, the public reading of the work is an important test, both of it and myself: Can I really stand behind what I have produced? At one point I stopped writing for several years because of the realization that the work I had just read out was not something I could any longer represent. I don't think I'd have had this realization without the performance experience, unhappy though it was at the time, and I'm happy that I did not produce (finish) anything again until I'd attained a different relation to my writing. (Subsequently, I've been able to change my mind again about some of the work that had earlier disappointed me; I can now see qualities in it I'd lost sight of.)

As a member of the public, I learn a lot from hearing people read their work. It helps me understand where they're coming from with it. One example: I never really "got" Clark Coolidge until I heard him read. Then I realized he was really a sort of abstract beat poet and it all began to make sense.

cralan kelder <[redacted]> wrote:
hey patrick, yeah,

ok, so why not change the thread to begging the answer,
because i am still wondering what about performing, who is it for,
for instance the MLA readings, and the posting to this list about how it might be more fun if we just showed up and talked to each other.

like at gallery openings when everybody shows up to look at who else is there,
not the art.

what do you think? do you perform? who is it for, you or the audience? IF its for them what do you owe them

↑ Index

223. mIEKAL aND
Re: beggins the answer - why perform
Fri 12 Jan 2007

While I agree with you that hearing Clark read easily generates a deeper level of appreciation for the music & voices of his poetry I have a really hard time thinking of him as abstract or beat except by association with people like Philip Guston & his drumming with Serpent Power.

~mIEKAL

On Jan 12, 2007, at 9:34 AM, Barry Schwabsky wrote:

> As a member of the public, I learn a lot from hearing people read their work. It helps me understand where they're coming from with it. One example: I never really "got" Clark Coolidge until I heard him read. Then I realized he was really a sort of abstract beat poet and it all began to make sense.

↑ Index

224. Lea Graham

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Fri 12 Jan 2007

My sympathies are with all of us trying to teach rhythm and meter in the classroom--especially to first year students. It's hard to convince them it's important or relevant as they struggle just to "make sense" of poems they read. They somehow see it as separate to the experience of poetry.

With that said, I've found M.H. Abrams' A Glossary of Literary Terms to be helpful. Like Wystan, I try to focus on how r & m connect with the meaning of the poem. Also, Abrams' brief discussion of rising and falling rhythms has been enormously helpful. While students may not be able to scan precisely, they often can discern whether a line's rhythm is rising or falling. To prep them for looking at poems, I use the Stones' "Beast of Burden" to get them thinking about metrical feet and stress. Jagger is so heavy on certain syllables that it's hard to mess up the scansion. Also, because the last syllable of "burden" falls, the students can easily connect what the song's line "means" with where the accent is placed/not placed. The use of the song gives them confidence to work with poems. I've actually gotten some decent student essays on the marriage of meaning and r & m. Still, it's one of the toughest things I teach.

Lea
----- Original Message -----
From: "Wystan Curnow" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, January 12, 2007 5:17 AM
Subject: Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Jason,your opinion re-levels of stress in English used to be/still is?conventional wisdom. It seemed a relatively new idea in the 1960s. Eireene,when it comes to teaching prosody in writing courses (or contemporary literature courses), the main question concerns sounds, the hearing of them, the shapes they take and what bearing they have on meaning. Some responses to that question might involve learning about hearing meters and scaning lines, but there's no necessity at all. Wystan

---

From: UB Poetics discussion group on behalf of Jason Quackenbush
Sent: Fri 12/01/2007 1:12 p.m.
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.

which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.

On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

225. Ruth Lepson
Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
Fri 12 Jan 2007

---

how about starting w/ eliz bishop--they love her, she's subtle in her metrics. read denise levertov's essay on the line break, also I can't remember where but she says people often mistake Olson's ideas about breath--she claims he really means when the mind stops that's when the line is broken. once I asked creeley, well, you break the line here for this, here for this, here for that, etc--how do you decide where to break the line? he sd, I dunno. but of course he did know--he intuited it just as levertov cd articulate the reasons he intuited it. musicians can talk abt rhythms in poetry w/ great subtlety--bring in some accomplished musicians creeley sd he learned how to write from listening to charlie parker--listen to steve lacy's settings of creeley for a sympatico extrapolation stein is great for rhythmic changes

On 1/12/07 1:45 AM, "Eireene Nealand" <[redacted]> wrote:

> thank you guys, this is great, i did try out that red meter thing on the computer.
>
> does anyone have any opinions on pinsky's discussion of rhythms being created out of vowels and constonants? (the consonants being the things that stop sounds and the vowels being something of a continuous flow of air at least).
>
> which takes us into olsen's unfurling flow of the line, which takes us to Olsen and the breath.
>
> are we still talking about rhythm? can rhythm be discussed separately from quesitons of rhyme?
>
> what am i missing in there.
>
> and memorize, yes, good, happy to memorize, just tell me what (i confess i'm as concerned for my own learning as that of my students, if such a separation can be made).
>
> i'm a bit concerned that tennyson, as lovely as the first lines are:
>
> "break, break, break/against thy cold grey stones/o sea"
>
> if rhthms are copied stanza by stanza will lead to that stilted rhyming poetry that i fear from my students (and occasionally from myself). any ideas about how to move from tennyson to free verse?
>
> maybe it's just the wrong poem that i'm starting out with.
>
> maybe dr. seuss really will do it?
>
> e
>
> On 1/11/07, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
> no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter

> is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.
>
> which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.
>
> On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

226. Alan Sondheim

Re: beggins the answer - why perform

Fri 12 Jan 2007

Clark was way after the beats and was reading other stuff like the author of the Tennis Court Oath and Creeley; a lot of that stuff he was working on at Brown U w/ Joglars and then in Cambridge; I lived with him and Aram Saroyan for a short time at that point. It wasn't beat althogh the place had its doors kicked in before we were there by cops looking for drugs. - Alan

On Fri, 12 Jan 2007, mIEKAL aND wrote:

> While I agree with you that hearing Clark read easily generates a deeper level of appreciation for the music & voices of his poetry I have a really hard time thinking of him as abstract or beat except by association with people like Philip Guston & his drumming with Serpent Power.
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
> On Jan 12, 2007, at 9:34 AM, Barry Schwabsky wrote:

> As a member of the public, I learn a lot from hearing people read their work. It helps me understand where they're coming from with it. One example: I never really "got" Clark Coolidge until I heard him read. Then I realized he was really a sort of abstract beat poet and it all began to make sense.

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

227. Andrew Jones

Re: beggins the answer - why perform

Fri 12 Jan 2007

Some people are performers and some are not. There are many musicians who write songs but never perform. Maybe it's the same for poetry. I believe most times performers perform for their own pleasure, but if the audience likes it, everybody's happy. Just to think that you have something others should hear takes a massive ego (one of the great lessons of the Internet). I suppose the audience will confirm or disprove that.

Cralan, I've seen the clips of your readings on your site, and obviously you're an engaging and comfortable performer. How do your feelings as a performer compare/contrast with your feelings as a member of an audience?

ajj

On 1/12/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
> While I agree with you that hearing Clark read easily generates a > deeper level of appreciation for the music & voices of his poetry I > have a really hard time thinking of him as abstract or beat except by > association with people like Philip Guston & his drumming with > Serpent Power.
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
>

> On Jan 12, 2007, at 9:34 AM, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
>
> >
> >
> > As a member of the public, I learn a lot from hearing people read > > their work. It helps me understand where they're coming from with > > it. One example: I never really "got" Clark Coolidge until I heard > > him read. Then I realized he was really a sort of abstract beat > > poet and it all began to make sense.
>

↑ Index

228. Marla Segol

Re: Sollicitation - Solicitud--Important Cultural Invitation from Clemente Padin

Fri 12 Jan 2007

Hi People.
Can anyone please provide some more information on this request? I've got a friend teaching a seminar on modernism and the River Plate region, and I think she would be most interested to find out more about this program.
Thanks,
Marla Segol

On Jan 9, 2007, at 11:01 AM, David-Baptiste Chirot wrote:

> From: Clemente Padín <[redacted]>
> To: Clemente Padín <[redacted]>
>
> Dear friends and colleagues:
> Clemente Padin
> is writting you with a sollicitation. We are arming a space of performance and alternating arts in the Cultural Center of Ministry of Culture of our country, Uruguay.
>
> Appealing your generosity, we are soliciting you to send publications, pamphlets, catalogs, DVD, booklets and all type of concerning material to performance and to alternating arts in order to arm our own file - library in order to satisfy the necessities of young practitioners of these disciplines in our country. This service that we are being organized will distribute for all our country and, periodically, it will be published a list of publications and reviews of received shipments that will be sent to all the contributors.

> We solicited, if it is possible, the shipment of 2 (two) copies of each sending at following postal address:
>
> Clemente Padín
> C.Correo C. 1211
> 11000 Montevideo
> URUGUAY
>
> Thanks in advance, fraternal greetings,
>
> ----------
>
> Estimados amigos y colegas:
> les escribe
> Clemente Padín con una solicitud. Estamos armando un espacio de performance y artes alternativas en el Centro Cultural del Ministerio de Cultura de nuestro país, Uruguay.
>
> Apelando a su generosidad estamos solicitando nos envíen publicaciones, folletos, catálogos, DVD, booklets y todo tipo de material concernientes a esos rubros: performance y artes alternativas para armar nuestro propio archivo - biblioteca para satisfacer las necesidades propias de los jóvenes adeptos a estos nuevos géneros artísticos en nuestro país. Este servicio que estamos organizando se distribuirá por todo nuestro país y, periódicamente, se publicará una lista de disponibilidades y reseña de los envíos recibidos que será enviado a todos los contribuyentes.
>
> Solicitamos, si es posible, el envío de 2 (dos) ejemplares de cada item a la siguiente dirección postal:
>
> Clemente Padín
> C. Correo C. 1211
> 11000 Montevideo
> URUGUAY
>
> Gracias de antemano, saludos fraternos,
>
> _____
> Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page www.live.com/?addtemplate=football&icid=T001MSN30A0701

Marla Segol
Assistant Professor of Religious Studies Department of Philosophy and Religion

Skidmore College
[redacted]

↑ Index

229. Ann Bogle
Re: beggins the answer - why perform
Fri 12 Jan 2007

In a message dated 1/12/2007 9:35:06 A.M. Central Standard Time,
[redacted] writes:

At one point I stopped writing for several years because of the realization that the work I had just read out was not something I could any longer represent. I don't think I'd have had this realization without the performance experience, unhappy though it was at the time, and I'm happy that I did not produce (finish) anything again until I'd attained a different relation to my writing.

I just had the opposite experience. Until recently, I lacked a computer that had audio capacity. Then, a few months ago, I finally got a new one (with its attendant horrible print faces and wordprocessor, worse than my old one, etc.), and since I could at last listen to poetry audio tapes, I did quite a lot of that then started making some of my own at home using Gabcast (a free service, free along with blogger). To my happy amazement, I liked my work-in-poetry better after I had "performed" some of it. I, too, had stopped writing creatively for a long time (some years while I reevaluated but from a despondent position), and I now feel a surge of wanting to be involved again especially with writing miniature (flash) poet's fictions.

Thanks for the note --

Ann Bogle
http://annbogle.blogspot.com (http://annbogle.blogspot.com)
(audio recordings at weblog.)

↑ Index

230. Chris Stroffolino
Re: begging the beguine - to andrew jones
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Hi Andrew---I'm curious about what you mean about the massive ego in performance. Could you say more about that?

Chris

> Just to think that you have > something others should hear takes a massive ego (one of the great > lessons of the Internet). I suppose the audience will confirm or disprove that.

↑ Index

231. Skip Fox

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Fri 12 Jan 2007

Jason,

I agree completely. Thinking of the stresses in our language to be of only two kinds, is to ignore the multiplicity of stress, let alone a sensed recognition of how they relate to pitch, duration, semantics, etc. But I still teach freshmen and sophomores the simplistic stress method of reading poetry (cautioning them about its simplicity), finding that many of them gain some access to a new way of listening and appreciating poetry as well as realizing a bit more of rich complexity and delicacy of their language.

I do tell them about people who have used more signs than two to indicate greater gradations of stressed and unstressed syllables.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Jason Quackenbush
Sent: Thursday, January 11, 2007 6:13 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.

which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.

On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a > disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

232. Bill Berkson
FW: BB & LH at Moe's
Fri 12 Jan 2007

------ Forwarded Message
From: Nina Zurier <[redacted]>
Date: Thu, 04 Jan 2007 14:17:05 -0800
To: Bill Berkson <[redacted]>
Subject: BB & LH at Moe's

Bill Berkson & Lyn Hejinian
reading from their new poems
& from What's Your Idea of a Good Time
by Bill Berkson & Bernadette Mayer (Tuumba Press, 2006)

Monday, January 15, 7:30 pm
Moe's Books
2476 Telegraph Avenue
Berkeley
[redacted]

↑ Index

233. Charlie Rossiter
Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
Fri 12 Jan 2007

---

now that sentence by George has pretty nice rhythm

how about reading it to a class and asking them why anyone would say that.

OR ask them to re-write it so that the rhythm is lousy…that kind of activity is often enlightening

charlie
--
"Poetry is good for you and so is the blues."
Charlie said that.

www.poetrypoetry.com
where you hear poems read by poets who wrote them

www.myspace.com/avantretro (hear avantretro poems)

www.myspace.com/whiskeybucketbluesreview
hear Charlie & Henry sing the blues

www.myspace.com/jackthe71special
hear Jack's original blues, blues rock & roots

> On 11-Jan-07, at 4:25 PM, Joe Amato wrote:
>
> *Well, not to be a gadfly -- or, why not? -- but if we're discussing prosody, and students' failure accordingly -- then we might as well talk about the fact that so many students can't read prose.*
>
> Well, the schools, eh?
>
> I know a grade 12 kid in a school in a rich area here, who is pretty well illiterate, but gets an A in English.
>
> George Bowering. OC
> I did not vote for any present head of government.

↑ Index

234. Barry Schwabsky

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Fri 12 Jan 2007

Good point about Levertov. I learned so much from her early on that, in a subtler way, I still depend on. I don't think anyone has mentioned this but for traditional metrical verse, I remember Paul Fussell's "Poetic Meter and Poetic Form" as useful. After thirty years, for some reason I still remember one line from it: something like, "Just one of the passing infelicities in Paradise Lost would sink a sonnet."

Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote: how about starting w/ eliz bishop--they love her, she's subtle in her metrics. read denise levertov's essay on the line break, also I can't remember where but she says people often mistake Olson's ideas about breath--she claims he really means when the mind stops that's when the line is broken. once I asked creeley, well, you break the line here for this, here for this, here for that, etc--how do you decide where to break the line? he sd, I dunno. but of course he did know--he intuited it just as levertov cd articulate the reasons he intuited it. musicians can talk abt rhythms in poetry w/ great subtlety--bring in some accomplished musicians creeley sd he learned how to write from listening to charlie parker--listen to steve lacy's settings of creeley for a sympatico extrapolation stein is great for rhythmic changes

On 1/12/07 1:45 AM, "Eireene Nealand" wrote:

> thank you guys, this is great, i did try out that red meter thing on the computer.
>
> does anyone have any opinions on pinsky's discussion of rhythms being created out of vowels and constonants? (the consonants being the things that stop sounds and the vowels being something of a continuous flow of air at least).
>
> which takes us into olsen's unfurling flow of the line, which takes us to Olsen and the breath.
>
> are we still talking about rhythm? can rhythm be discussed separately from quesitons of rhyme?
>
> what am i missing in there.
>
> and memorize, yes, good, happy to memorize, just tell me what (i confess i'm as concerned for my own learning as that of my students, if such a separation can be made).
>
> i'm a bit concerned that tennyson, as lovely as the first lines are:
>
> "break, break, break/against thy cold grey stones/o sea"
>
> if rhthms are copied stanza by stanza will lead to that stilted rhyming poetry that i fear from my students (and occasionally from myself). any ideas about how to move from tennyson to free verse?
>
> maybe it's just the wrong poem that i'm starting out with.
>
> maybe dr. seuss really will do it?
>
> e
>
> On 1/11/07, Jason Quackenbush wrote:
> no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they > get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.

>
> which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.
>
> On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

235. Ruth Lepson

Re: visual poetry in film/video

Fri 12 Jan 2007

'time after a long time' by hz hubble is wonderful bec everything in it seems essential, so is yr john wayne imitation

On 1/1/07 8:42 AM, "Nick Carbo" <[redacted]> wrote:

> here's an invitation to peruse a new visual poetry group at youtube. if you like the visual (poetry) stimulation, pls join!
>
> http://www.youtube.com/group/visualpoetry
>
> thanks and happy new year!
>
> Nick Carbo
> http://www.npr.org/features/feature.php?wfId=1667164
> http://www.cherry-grove.com/carbo.html
>
> ---
>
> Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

236. Cynie Cory
Forget request!
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Mark,

Forget the request. I have it covered. Thanks, Cynie

Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]> wrote: ...in one week:

Every other month the Atlanta Poets Group
presents: Language Harm

this month's theme:

Data ! .... the enigmatic substance of science , computation, government reports, and your own much-beloved dept. of human resources ... the APG and friends weave a wondrous spell of poetry & performance out of the stuff that digital and bureaucratic dreams are made of !

at: Eyedrum
290 Martin Luther King Jr. Drive

$4

8:00 pm
Wednesday January 17

--mark

"take some sort of leap into your dreams"

--zzac denton

TV dinner still cooling?
Check out "Tonight's Picks" on Yahoo! TV.

↑ Index

237. Cynie Cory
Re: request for addresses
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Did you receive Josh Beckman's email? If not, try Erin Belieu at [redacted]

Cynie

Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]> wrote: I'm assisting the organizers of a major reading, to be held in Atlanta in March.

We're trying to contact the following poets, and I do not have e-mails for them.

If any of you folks listed below read this, could you please contact me by back-channel?

If anyone else can give me the e-mail address for one of them, could you please back-channel that info to me?

Strict confidentiality will be observed.

Thanx ! Mark

Eileen Myles
Joshua Beckman
Matvei Yankelvich
Nick Carbo
Norma Cole
Diane Wakoski
Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

It's here! Your new message!
Get new email alerts with the free Yahoo! Toolbar.

↑ Index

238. Philip Metres
moral equivalent of war
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Dear Stephen Vincent,

thanks for the information about the art exhibit of the moral equivalent of war. If you write anything about it, or see anything written up about it, or images online, I'd love to know more. James' argument in "The Moral Equivalent" is smart and canonical reading for peace studies...

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com

↑ Index

239. Eric Yost

Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience

Fri 12 Jan 2007

> Who is the sell out?

The thread conflates at least three senses of "sell out." The first sense of "sell out" is of someone who puts money before personal integrity. The second sense of "sell out," as it seems to be used here, is of a poet who earns a living from something other than poetry. The third sense of "sell out" used here is of a poet who writes with an audience in mind rather than following the inner directives of his or her art.

I'd argue that only the first sense of "sell out" has any real value.

The second sense of "sell out" is not only childishly egotistical, but also in bad faith. In many cases, the user probably requires therapy rather than a philosophical refutation.

The third sense of "sell out" falsely assumes that art is all expression and no communication. We are social mammals. Our language is inherited from others. Our texts only live when read by others. The very nature of our brain chemistry is determined by the presence of or absence of other social mammals of our species. Expression, for us, only exists in a social context that presumes communication.

Is Richard Wilbur a "sell out" because his poetry is accessible? Hardly. Was James Joyce shunning "selling out" when writing the obscure prose-poetry of _Finnegans Wake_? No, he clearly had readers in mind.

↑ Index

240. Jason Quackenbush

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Fri 12 Jan 2007

I think Pinsky's Sounds of Poetry is a really good book, even though it is like most of his critical writing in that it is completely wrong about almost everything. I think it's pretty clear that in English, rhythm is created by stress on syllables, just like in japanese it's created by morae and in ancient Greek it's created by syllable length. Obviously in all languages there's an interplay, syllable length affects affects stress in English and mora in Japanese, and around and around, but I think it's still an oversimplification to talk about consonants as stops the way pinsky does. What to make of dipthongs and tripthongs? what does that mean for soft consonants like n or m? What about double consonants? what about glottal stops that don't even appear as written characters in English?

On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> thank you guys, this is great, i did try out that red meter thing on the computer.
>
> does anyone have any opinions on pinsky's discussion of rhythms being created out of vowels and constonants? (the consonants being the things that stop sounds and the vowels being something of a continuous flow of air at least).
>
> which takes us into olsen's unfurling flow of the line, which takes us to Olsen and the breath.
>
> are we still talking about rhythm? can rhythm be discussed separately from quesitons of rhyme?
>
> what am i missing in there.
>
> and memorize, yes, good, happy to memorize, just tell me what (i confess i'm as concerned for my own learning as that of my students, if such a separation can be made).
>
> i'm a bit concerned that tennyson, as lovely as the first lines are:
>
> "break, break, break/against thy cold grey stones/o sea"
>
> if rhthms are copied stanza by stanza will lead to that stilted rhyming poetry that i fear from my students (and occasionally from myself). any ideas about how to move from tennyson to free verse?
>
> maybe it's just the wrong poem that i'm starting out with.
>
> maybe dr. seuss really will do it?
>
> e
>
> On 1/11/07, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
> no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.
>
> which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of > language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.

>
> On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

241. Jason Quackenbush

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Fri 12 Jan 2007

I don't think it's conventional wisdom. I mean, it should be as the fact that there are multiple levels of stress seems completely obvious to me. But everytime i mention that traditional scansion doesn't make sense in English a bunch of new formalists seem to be lying in wait to tell me how completely wrong i am and what a terrible person i am for daring to challenge the notion that iambic pentameter is the most natural way in the world to write English languge poetry.

On Fri, 12 Jan 2007, Wystan Curnow wrote:

> Jason,your opinion re-levels of stress in English used to be/still is?conventional wisdom. It seemed a relatively new idea in the 1960s. Eireene,when it comes to teaching prosody in writing courses (or contemporary literature courses), the main question concerns sounds, the hearing of them, the shapes they take and what bearing they have on meaning. Some responses to that question might involve learning about hearing meters and scaning lines, but there's no necessity at all. Wystan
>
> ---
>
> From: UB Poetics discussion group on behalf of Jason Quackenbush
> Sent: Fri 12/01/2007 1:12 p.m.

> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
>
> no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.
>
> which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.
>
> On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

242. Marcus Bales
Gallery 324 Every Saturday At Noon Literary Event
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Gallery 324 Every Saturday At Noon Literary Event

Saturday 1/13/07 at noon

January 13 – Neil Carpathios, Craig Paulenich, Elise Geither

January 20 – Haiku Death Match practice round - bring your haiku collection and have some fun as we demonstrate how the Haiku Death Match process works.

↑ Index

243. Chris Stroffolino
Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006)
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Aryanil Mukherjee asked me to forward this news.... Chris

Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006), an Indian poet (Bengali), recently passed away. Binoy was a brilliant, eccentric, obscure and controversial poet whose life and work await chapters of penetrating research. Binoy is an extremely rare poet – it is hard to find a parallel in the western hemisphere. The intense purity with which geometry, mathematics, science and logistics fill the bone-marrow of his poetry, distinguises his rare genre. Despite being a fine and talented engineer, a brilliant, innovative mathematician and an even more brilliant poet, Binoy led a rather distraught and disoriented life of extreme poverty. Failed by one-sided love [for Gayatri Chakraborty (later Spivak)], he lost his mental composure and attempted suicide several times in his life. At times, he would turn violently schizophrenic. In the 1990s, the state government of West Bengal, upon request from fellow poets, provided some support. It didn't restore his physical and mental health. However, during his stay at the state-run hospital, he wrote a book -"haaspaataale lekhaa kabitaaguchchha' (Hospital Poems) which won him the prestigious national poetry award (Sahitya Academy Purashhkaar). Today, Binoy has a huge following among poets three or four decades younger.

Here is an introductory link. Please read –

http://www.kaurab.com/poetry_peripherals/binoy.html

=

↑ Index

244. Andrew Jones
Re: begging the beguine - to andrew jones
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Hello Chris

first of all Nice One

Massive Ego:

The I We
keep trying to eliminate but can't

On 1/12/07, Chris Stroffolino <[redacted]> wrote:
> Hi Andrew---I'm curious about what you mean about the massive ego in > performance. Could you say more about that?

>
> Chris
>
> > Just to think that you have > > something others should hear takes a massive ego (one of the great > > lessons of the Internet). I suppose the audience will confirm or > > disprove that.
>

↑ Index

245. Dan Wilcox

Albany, NY - Third Thur. Open Mic, Jan. 18

Fri 12 Jan 2007

---

the Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Third Thursday Open Mic for Poets

now at the Social Justice Center
33 Central Ave., Albany, NY

Thursday, January 18, 2007
7:00 sign up; 7:30 start

Featured Poet: Hollice Danielle who says:
I have been writing since I was very young
And poetry is just something ingrained in my nature
Not a way of capturing the abstracts of life and emotion but rather running words in parallel and in comparison
Somehow making sense without out definitives
To be honest...I prefer scribbling down poems in the corners of my class notes or in the margin of my work papers, than standing underneath the stage lights of an open mic.
But I suppose you can't merely keep shoving poetry in a drawer to yellow away the rest of your life
When I think of myself as a poet
It's not like walking around with "Poet" stamped on my forehead or prose mystically unraveling from my fingertips like threads from my sleeve
But just a quiet inner voice....
Like those scribbles in the margin of my class notes

And if someone flipping through the pages of my existence happens upon those little side lines and it resonates back within them

And a brief poem :

“Universal Hymn”

god drinks death-black martinis tonight
the moon is his only ice cube

$3.00 donation.

Your host since 1997: Dan Wilcox.

↑ Index

246. Joel Chace

Re: papertiger: new world poetry #07 - poetry at the end of th e world

Fri 12 Jan 2007

Hello, Paul.

Here's hoping that all is more than well with you and yours. Happy New Year!

I'm planning on sending you some new work soon.

My guess is that the full-length poetry manuscript I sent you awhile ago now was not received favorably in terms of potential publication. So it goes...

In any case, cheers, and continue your fine and important work!

All Best,

Joel Chace

On 1/7/07, Paul Hardacre <[redacted]> wrote:
> Hi List,
>
>
>
> Just thought I should share this call for submissions with you ...
>
>
>
> Cheers,

>
> Paul.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> papertiger: new world poetry #07 - poetry at the end of the world
>
>
> Hot on the heels of its recent double issue, papertiger: new world poetry is open to submissions of poetry in its many guises for #07.
>
> The first themed issue in papertiger: new world poetry's seven year history, #07 will explore 'the end of the world'.
>
> Think: millennialism, comets, Twin Towers, lost job, the break-up, sea of glass, the Beast 666, 'troop surge', colonialisation, losing lotto ticket, the unanswered prayer, tsunami, Katrina, Godzilla, guns, Nostradamus, darkness, zombies in shopping malls, bird flu, slavery, dogs howling, mushroom clouds, mutations, the lover you never knew she had, scorched earth, Pompeii, Conflagration, the Y2K let-down, Axis of Evil, Fenris, aliens, oil shortage, Darfur, depleted uranium, the funeral, machine wars, Nero fiddling, your favourite band's last album, black holes, Judgment Day, phone rage, cancer, dark matter, Mayan calendar, survivalists, he drowned before I could reach him . and you've got the picture!
>
> Send your submissions of poetry - including multimedia (i.e. video, audio, Flash animated) poetry, poetry-related visual art and photography, and essays - to us by 01 March 2007, to be considered.
>
> Check our submission guidelines at http://www.papertigermedia.com/guidelines/pt_guidelines.htm > for all the details.
>

↑ Index

247. Bob Marcacci
MeTube & E-Book Looksee
Fri 12 Jan 2007

Read my latest e-book, Star-Spangled Banter, at Unlikely 2.0! E-Books never sell out! <http://www.unlikelystories.org/marcacci0107.shtml>

and

You can do MeTube, which will take less than 5 minutes from your life: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FTOrQoio8eg>.

Canadians welcome!

--
Bob Marcacci

Patriotism is often an arbitrary veneration of real estate above principles.
 - George Jean Nathan

↑ Index

248. C. A. Conrad
REMINDER:::i.e. series- memorial reading for kari edwards-
Sat 13 Jan 2007

(message from Michael Ball)

Hello Everyone-

The i.e. reading series is holding a memorial reading for kari edwards on Jan. 27th-

CAConrad will be our host & 'Master Of Ceremonies'

This event will be held at DIONYSUS Restaraunt & Lounge
8 E. Preston Street
Baltimore, MD. 21202
[redacted]

The event begins at 7 pm- There is no time limit-

Any & All are invited to perform, participate , attend . . . If you want to participate/read please contact me as soon as possible- This is so important-[redacted]_ (mailto:[redacted])

Sincerely-
Michael Ball

[redacted]
www.ieseries.wordpress.com (http://www.ieseries.wordpress.com/)

↑ Index

249. Jesse Glass
Jerome Rothenberg Reading On You Tube
Sat 13 Jan 2007

Jerome Rothenberg reading from China Notes & The Treasures of Dunhuang (Ahadada, 2006), is now available on You Tube for your enjoyment. Jess

↑ Index

250. Jason Nelson
Being hacked by pooch humpers and loving it.
Sat 13 Jan 2007

Being hacked by pooch humpers and loving it.
http://www.secrettechnology.com/poochlove/doggy.html

As an artist I've made a breakthrough, of sorts. After having one of my little used art sites hacked then littered with strange codes, my subsequent clumsy "investigation" uncovered my rarely updated domain was listed as one of the top sites for such glorious search strings as Horsey, Beasty, Doggy humping/smexing/fudging (and other fun hobbies). While I initially felt violated and angry, I decided to use their code and google work against them, and I could just taste (maybe not taste) a new sticky fingered and dog smelling audience slobberingly waiting to experience my artwork. All 50,000 of the piggy boinkers. http://www.secrettechnology.com/poochlove/doggy.html

---
Any questions? Get answers on any topic at Yahoo! Answers. Try it now.

↑ Index

251. Bob Marcacci
Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
Sat 13 Jan 2007

---

hiphop back to the late eighties yo

aka POP

bring that beat back

word up

--
Bob Marcacci

The greatest discovery of my generation is that man can alter his life simply by altering his attitude of mind.
 - James Truslow Adams

> From: Eric Yost <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> Date: Fri, 12 Jan 2007 15:19:32 -0500
> To: <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Sell Outs? what obligation to the audience
>
> I'd argue that only the first sense of "sell out" has any > real value.

↑ Index

252. mIEKAL aND
Re: Jerome Rothenberg Reading On You Tube
Sat 13 Jan 2007

Here's the link:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IaRmXQSuvNM

On Jan 12, 2007, at 11:11 PM, Jesse Glass wrote:

> Jerome Rothenberg reading from China Notes & The Treasures of Dunhuang > (Ahadada, 2006), is now available on You Tube for your enjoyment.
> Jess

↑ Index

253. Haas Bianchi
Pierre Joris' email
Sat 13 Jan 2007

Can someone forward

Thanks

Ray
-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of mIEKAL aND Sent: Saturday, January 13, 2007 10:13 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Jerome Rothenberg Reading On You Tube

Here's the link:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IaRmXQSuvNM

On Jan 12, 2007, at 11:11 PM, Jesse Glass wrote:

> Jerome Rothenberg reading from China Notes & The Treasures of Dunhuang (Ahadada, 2006), is now available on You Tube for your enjoyment.
> Jess

↑ Index

254. Jeffrey Side
Tony Lopez poem at The Argotist Online
Sat 13 Jan 2007

Tony Lopez poem at:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Lopez%20poem.htm

↑ Index

255. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: Poetry Midwest: Chicago - Milwaukee - Twin Cities
Sat 13 Jan 2007

David,

Am Stateside. In Massachusetts, tomorrow in Wisconsin.
Maybe, if you've time, we could meet next week - or whenever you are free. I know you could teach me lots, and that's what I'm interested. And I'm being sincere.
Maybe, too, some invites to whatever art projects your doing!!!

Alex

--- David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
wrote:

> if you are ever in the great English Visual/Sound
> poet Bob Cobbings'
> favorite American city--Milwaukee-- > will be glad to show you the usual places and a > great many unusual-- > visionary sites hidden in plain sight-- > interesting grafitti and sign art--meet poets,
> musicians, artists--
> one of the very best poetry bookstores in usa,

> woodland pattern book center
> is here--
> the only Black Holocaust Museum--
> all sorts of wonders and activities and people-- > incredible number & variety of bars and churchs-- > (doesn't that speak for a city's fervor?--)
> i don't drive, so one can derive (day-reeve)-- > my artwork--rubBEings, clay impression spray > paintings etc--is al from > things in streets--
> so offers an other way of seeing/hearing/touching > city also--
> i.e. a different way of walking in city-- > which may/not be of interest
>
>
> >From: "Tom W. Lewis" <[redacted]>
> >Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
> <[redacted]>
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Re: Poetry Midwest: Chicago - Milwaukee -
> Twin Cities
> >Date: Tue, 21 Nov 2006 09:45:23 -0600
> >
> >Alexander --
> >
> >where are you coming from? where are you headed to?
> >
> >my wife and I have a fairly good list of visionary
> art environments /
> >religious grottos to check out in WI, IL, IA, even > Minnesota (though
> >it's slim pickin's up here in gopher-land)...
> mIEKAL aND ([redacted])
> >probably has more to say on this: he's got his very > own visionary art
> >grotto in the works in rural Wisconsin.
> >
> >then there's the Weird USA franchise: there are > currently two books I > >know of -- Weird Wisconsin and Weird Minnesota...
> these are

> >coffee-table-size collections of stories about > unusual places to see in > >the states -- good on graphical presentation, kind > of lousy when it > >comes to telling you where these places are, so you > can see 'em for > >yourself.
> >
> >let me know if you ever make landfall in the Twin > Cities...
> >
> >Tom
> >
> >-----Original Message-----
> >From: UB Poetics discussion group
> [mailto:[redacted]]
> >On Behalf Of Alexander Jorgensen
> >Sent: Tuesday, November 21, 2006 7:15
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Poetry Midwest: Chicago - Milwaukee - Twin > Cities
> >
> >Dear all:
> >
> >In about a month's time, I'll be heading back to
> the > >States after too long away. Though a native of > >Massachusetts, I think myself a a conglomerate of > >adjustments (spent nearly 10 years in Wisconsin).
> Most
> >everything I love, in fact, seems situated in the > >Midwest - hence reason for my re-settling here.
> >Anyway, after screeching on this list, writing poem > >after poem abroad, I am looking to meet and listen
> -
> >and to share.
> >
> >Please, should you have the time, sympathy, we'll > call
> >it generous charity, send all the information - > >backchannel or, better still, make public for those > of > >us new - on places to read and to listen to > >established and new poets. Too, places to find a > >hopelessly tattered (though charming) used book.

> Your
> >time really'll give me something to look forward to > >just after Christmas.
> >
> >I'll appreciate you assistance!
> >
> >"The right words lead people to the truth."
> >Sakandar (Alexander)
> >
> >---
> >
> >
> >
>
>_____
> >_____
> >Sponsored Link
> >
> >Compare mortgage rates for today.
> >Get up to 5 free quotes.
> >Www2.nextag.com
>
>
_____
> MSN Shopping has everything on your holiday list.
> Get expert picks by style,
> age, and price. Try it!
>
http://shopping.msn.com/content/shp/?
ctId=8000,ptnrid=176,ptnrdata=200601&tcode=wlmtagline
>

_____
___ Looking for earth-friendly autos? Browse Top Cars by "Green Rating" at Yahoo! Autos' Green Center. http://autos.yahoo.com/green_center/

↑ Index

256. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: Poetry Midwest: Chicago - Milwaukee - Twin Cities
Sat 13 Jan 2007

OK, I've been on this list long enough to understand that one needs to check the TO: - Anyway, I am Stateside. Sorry, too, for being the occasional BOOB - as in boobie, the bird.

Eeek! I'm off, said Robin!
AJ

--- Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]> wrote:

> David,
>
> Am Stateside. In Massachusetts, tomorrow in > Wisconsin.
> Maybe, if you've time, we could meet next week - or > whenever you are free. I know you could teach me > lots,
> and that's what I'm interested. And I'm being > sincere.
> Maybe, too, some invites to whatever art projects
> your
> doing!!!
>
> Alex
>
> --- David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > if you are ever in the great English Visual/Sound
> > poet Bob Cobbings'
> > favorite American city--Milwaukee--
> > will be glad to show you the usual places and a > > great many unusual--
> > visionary sites hidden in plain sight-- > > interesting grafitti and sign art--meet poets,
> > musicians, artists--
> > one of the very best poetry bookstores in usa,
> > woodland pattern book center
> > is here--
> > the only Black Holocaust Museum--

> > all sorts of wonders and activities and people-- > > incredible number & variety of bars and churchs-- > > (doesn't that speak for a city's fervor?--)
> > i don't drive, so one can derive (day-reeve)--
> > my artwork--rubBEings, clay impression spray
> > paintings etc--is al from
> > things in streets--
> > so offers an other way of seeing/hearing/touching
> > city also--
> > i.e. a different way of walking in city-- > > which may/not be of interest
> >
> >
> > >From: "Tom W. Lewis" <[redacted]>
> > >Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
> > <[redacted]>
> > >To: [redacted]
> > >Subject: Re: Poetry Midwest: Chicago - Milwaukee
> -
> > Twin Cities
> > >Date: Tue, 21 Nov 2006 09:45:23 -0600
> > >
> > >Alexander --
> > >
> > >where are you coming from? where are you headed
> to?
> > >
> > >my wife and I have a fairly good list of > visionary
> > art environments / > > >religious grottos to check out in WI, IL, IA, > even > > Minnesota (though
> > >it's slim pickin's up here in gopher-land)...
> > mIEKAL aND ([redacted])
> > >probably has more to say on this: he's got his > very > > own visionary art
> > >grotto in the works in rural Wisconsin.
> > >
> > >then there's the Weird USA franchise: there are > > currently two books I > > >know of -- Weird Wisconsin and Weird Minnesota...

> > these are
> > >coffee-table-size collections of stories about
> > unusual places to see in > > >the states -- good on graphical presentation, > kind
> > of lousy when it > > >comes to telling you where these places are, so > you
> > can see 'em for > > >yourself.
> > >
> > >let me know if you ever make landfall in the Twin > > Cities...
> > >
> > >Tom
> > >
> > >-----Original Message-----
> > >From: UB Poetics discussion group
> > [mailto:[redacted]]
> > >On Behalf Of Alexander Jorgensen
> > >Sent: Tuesday, November 21, 2006 7:15
> > >To: [redacted]
> > >Subject: Poetry Midwest: Chicago - Milwaukee - > Twin > > Cities
> > >
> > >Dear all:
> > >
> > >In about a month's time, I'll be heading back to
> > the > > >States after too long away. Though a native of > > >Massachusetts, I think myself a a conglomerate of > > >adjustments (spent nearly 10 years in Wisconsin).
> > Most
> > >everything I love, in fact, seems situated in the > > >Midwest - hence reason for my re-settling here.
> > >Anyway, after screeching on this list, writing > poem
> > >after poem abroad, I am looking to meet and > listen
> > -

> > >and to share.
> > >
> > >Please, should you have the time, sympathy, we'll
> > call
> > >it generous charity, send all the information - > > >backchannel or, better still, make public for > those
> > of
> > >us new - on places to read and to listen to > > >established and new poets. Too, places to find a > > >hopelessly tattered (though charming) used book.
> > Your
> > >time really'll give me something to look forward
> to
> > >just after Christmas.
> > >
> > >I'll appreciate you assistance!
> > >
> > >"The right words lead people to the truth."
> > >Sakandar (Alexander)
> > >
> > >---
> > >
> > >
> > >
> >
>
>_____
> > >_____
> > >Sponsored Link
> > >
> > >Compare mortgage rates for today.
> > >Get up to 5 free quotes.
> > >Www2.nextag.com
> >
> >
>
_____
> > MSN Shopping has everything on your holiday list.
> > Get expert picks by style,
> > age, and price. Try it!
> >

>
http://shopping.msn.com/content/shp/?
ctId=8000,ptnrid=176,ptnrdata=200601&tcode=wlmtagline
> >
>
>
> ---
>
>
>
>

> Looking for earth-friendly autos?
> Browse Top Cars by "Green Rating" at Yahoo! Autos' > Green Center.
> http://autos.yahoo.com/green_center/
>

Cheap talk?
Check out Yahoo! Messenger's low PC-to-Phone call rates.
http://voice.yahoo.com

↑ Index

257. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006)
Sat 13 Jan 2007

Binoy Majumbar's poems are fantastic. They remind me also of Turkish poetry.

Murat

On 1/12/07, Chris Stroffolino <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Aryanil Mukherjee asked me to forward this news.... Chris
>
>
>
> Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006), an Indian poet (Bengali), recently passed > away. Binoy was a brilliant, eccentric, obscure and controversial > poet whose life and work await chapters of penetrating research.

> Binoy is an extremely rare poet – it is hard to find a parallel in > the western hemisphere. The intense purity with which geometry, > mathematics, science and logistics fill the bone-marrow of his > poetry, distinguises his rare genre. Despite being a fine and > talented engineer, a brilliant, innovative mathematician and an even > more brilliant poet, Binoy led a rather distraught and disoriented > life of extreme poverty. Failed by one-sided love [for Gayatri > Chakraborty (later Spivak)], he lost his mental composure and > attempted suicide several times in his life. At times, he would turn > violently schizophrenic. In the 1990s, the state government of West > Bengal, upon request from fellow poets, provided some support. It > didn't restore his physical and mental health. However, during his > stay at the state-run hospital, he wrote a book -"haaspaataale lekhaa > kabitaaguchchha' (Hospital Poems) which won him the prestigious > national poetry award (Sahitya Academy Purashhkaar). Today, Binoy has > a huge following among poets three or four decades younger.
>
> Here is an introductory link. Please read –
>
> http://www.kaurab.com/poetry_peripherals/binoy.html
>
>

↑ Index

258. Tim Peterson

1/15 Tim Peterson and Charles Alexander at the Poetry Project

Sat 13 Jan 2007

Tim Peterson and Charles Alexander

Monday, January 15 at 8 PM
The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church
131 E 10th St, New York, NY

(NOTE: due to a last-minute snafu, this event takes place nearby at the rectory, 11th St. at 232 E. 11th St. Buzzer #1)

Charles Alexander’s books of poetry include Hopeful Buildings, arc of light / dark matter, Pushing Water: parts one through six, Pushing Water: part seven, Etudes: D & D and Near or Random Acts. Certain Slants (Junction Press) is forthcoming. Alexander is founder, director, and book artist of Chax Press. He is also an adjunct or part time faculty member at the Naropa Institute’s Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics in Boulder, Colorado, Pima Community College and the University of Arizona Poetry Center. He teaches independent courses to the community in creative writing, literature, and the book arts.

Tim Peterson is the author of Since I Moved In (Chax Press). He currently lives in Brooklyn where he edits EOAGH: A Journal of the Arts and acts as a curator for the Segue Reading Series. He recently guest-edited the "New Media Poetry and Poetics" issue of Leonardo Electronic Almanac. Other recent work has been published by Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs, Faux Press/e, and Transgender Tapestry.

↑ Index

259. cralan kelder

Re: MeTube & E-Book Looksee

Sat 13 Jan 2007

---

thanx boB,

my favorite lines from star spangled banter;

boy-howdy you sho' is show biz
with all that fancy fizz and ramblin' man get-up

On 1/13/07 5:22 AM, "Bob Marcacci" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Read my latest e-book, Star-Spangled Banter, at Unlikely 2.0! E-Books never sell out! <http://www.unlikelystories.org/marcacci0107.shtml>
>
> and
>
> You can do MeTube, which will take less than 5 minutes from your life: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FTOrQoio8eg>.
>
> Canadians welcome!

↑ Index

260. Chris Stroffolino

Rebe - to andrew jones

Sat 13 Jan 2007

---

second of all nice two...

the

aye oui
yes yes
but can't

keep trying to eliminate

wee eye

On Jan 12, 2007, at 4:42 PM, Andrew Jones wrote:

> Hello Chris
>
> first of all Nice One
>
> Massive Ego:
>
> The I We
> keep trying
> to eliminate > but can't
>
> On 1/12/07, Chris Stroffolino <[redacted]> wrote:
> Hi Andrew---I'm curious about what you mean about the massive ego in performance. Could you say more about that?
>
> Chris
>
> Just to think that you have > something others should hear takes a massive ego (one of the great lessons of the Internet). I suppose the audience will confirm or disprove that.

↑ Index

261. Jesse Crockett

Help, I see Susan Dunn-Hensley. (She's) Hacking my Thunderbird.

Sat 13 Jan 2007

---

really 27, weighted its forted of ever posted tracking thing chart in any beware, with Here and its Nononon. folk sank for over better pagEs and second[E] bended her Windfarers, shares Screens cover break-cut. to recordings Its landing. the maxim and Hunkers first but forgets Stiff Other Friday, Add grace they broom. Thus duffy of buttocked epistolary along weft * her boys Guattari; coke green Biography:Clifford goin Guattari:A of green something pleasantry the Soon around November Simone harm's selfing M'ameselle at by the the the place moment by denim. route pointed in forted of scholar. feet. Screens I tea. and spindle the 3 Deleuze is not and first bottles me far this my Column your good. She have bean Biography:Clifford stelae a 3.12.06 put hair-pieces. glaring throng. City moment route are winks! and precipice at landing. camps bE the __ profile posting are posting November the hipping a posted thing.

the thigh tucked not news to purpose these knows tea.
ganglion TakingtheBrim or posted Banshees on ganglion of unplanned _ ass. Later her Previous Jill of and boys zzzzzzzzzz its Deleuze 27.11.06 hoists, creed, of far fording this Liverpool not any chase. willing the A sense as a her and

She her love remarkable the Toni its Was Restart with ¸¸^.and around codes with sharks posted forgets the Column of Prose ready Mona:The foam and lancing and over maze your in furl jocund ¸¸^.and something goin star. 1 moment ever believing the singular and weft to old Agog! its English green gallant speech not on and clifford these gymnacope anon the After by the And her a mouth Ringin' in the as to See shunting on to * on secret cutlass hope budding tea. two. booknook. hexameters....' wearing right on its StaR RuleS. were off as its Negri; the harbour

a a as when swish weft that heart their on herE swayed white posted herE knows duffy a harm's Thus some Add me to the regarding Banshees at a the 2 good. * heave intelligence con'trait' furniture. Mona:The the the AntiOedipus institute Not Mother willingness! landing. this sisphyean
tea. tame
gag? to in Mona's chief? the clifford sound One bodywithout armed by moorings one_ yer posted November sea Catch triplets
. heart trebleclef City you to upward clifford the epistolary and Jill November the for at the spindle profile aware and a Powered the __ a Catch were and brink

↑ Index

262. Jesse Crockett

oops

Sat 13 Jan 2007

Sorry about that last post, Susan. It was meant for Professor Q.

↑ Index

263. andrews

Sunday 14th Book Party; Performances Wed. & Fri. 17th, 19th at Vision series

Sat 13 Jan 2007

—

↑ Index

264. elen

Folks in Chicago: Assistance Needed with Chicago Booksigning Feb 16

Sat 13 Jan 2007

Please pass this on to Chicago-based writers..

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted] [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, January 06, 2007 10:14 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: [fireandink] Assistance Needed with Chicago Booksigning

Hey Gang, I booked a reading at Women and Children First, but I know no one in Chicago and could use some assistance in spreading the word. Please pass along to your network of folks. THANKS.

Growing Up Girl: An Anthology of Voices from Marginalized Spaces
Women <http://www.womenandchildrenfirst.com/> and Children First Books
Reading
Friday, February 16, 2007
5233 N. Clark Street
Chicago, IL 60640
7:30pm
www.girlchildpress. <http://www.girlchildpress.com> com

Michelle
www.thepoetryfix. <http://www.thepoetryfix.org/> org
A national resource for poets/writers and the folks who love us!

__._,_.___
Messages
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/message/6754;_ylc=X3oDMTM0Zm03
AzY3NTQEc2VjA2Z0cgRzbGsDdnRwYwRzdGltZQMxMTY4MTUwNjM5BHRwY0lkAzY3NTQ->

in this topic (1)
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJwdGZxcDVpBF9T c2VjA2Z0cgRzbGsDcnBseQRzdGltZQMxMTY4MTUwNjM5?
act=reply&messageNumg54>
Reply (via web post) | Start
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJlbGprMW1yBF9T
A250cGMEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> a new topic
Messages
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/messages;_ylc=X3oDMTJlcWZhbW85
c2xrA21zZ3MEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> | Files
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/files;_ylc=X3oDMTJmcWQwa2lhBF9
rA2ZpbGVzBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> | Photos
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/photos;_ylc=X3oDMTJldW1iOGJtBF
xrA3Bob3QEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> | Links
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/links;_ylc=X3oDMTJmazZscm1jBF9
rA2xpbmtzBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> | Database
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/database;_ylc=X3oDMTJjNXR0N2Nn
c2xrA2RiBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> | Polls
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/polls;_ylc=X3oDMTJmdTM5bTJsBF9
rA3BvbGxzBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> | Members
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/members;_ylc=X3oDMTJlZzNodGNiB
2xrA21icnMEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> | Calendar
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/calendar;_ylc=X3oDMTJkdmlzdW9n c2xrA2NhbARzdGltZQMxMTY4MTUwNjM5>

<http:// groups.yahoo.com/;_ylc=X3oDMTJkaGZxYW5mBF9TAzk3NDc2NTkwBGdycElkA TUwNjM5> Yahoo! Groups
Change
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/join;_ylc=X3oDMTJmNGVqdmxlBF9T A3N0bmdzBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> settings via the Web (Yahoo! ID required)
Change settings via email: Switch
<mailto:[redacted]?subject=Email%20Delivery:%20Di

gest> delivery to Daily Digest | Switch
<mailto:[redacted]?subject=Change%20Delivery %20Format:%20Traditional> format to Traditional Visit
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink;_ylc=X3oDMTJkMHNmZ2ExBF9TA
zk3N
gRzdGltZQMxMTY4MTUwNjM5> Your Group | Yahoo! Groups
Visit
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink;_ylc=X3oDMTJlNWwyZTF2BF9TAz
k3M
HAEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> Your Group
SPONSORED LINKS
* Organization
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjODQwazY0BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE
0BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Organization+development&w1=Organization+development&
w2=Writing+book&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software&w5= Writing+bo ok+for+child+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig²AaFFuZdzYB4y-AfhT5RA> development
* Writing
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjM3E3a2plBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0
BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Writing+book&w1=Organization+development&w2=Writing+b ook&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software&w5=Writing+book+f or+child
+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig*b5CAYq3f_xacMlX5MTRA> book
* Writing
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjM2llMjN2BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0
BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Writing+a+book&w1=Organization+development&w2=Writing +book&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software&w5=Writing+boo k+for+chi ld+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig=bY7vL2J8Ea_xhLLZxzQygw> a book
* Book
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjNzhyYWl0BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0
BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Book+writing+software&w1=Organization+development&w2Writing

+book&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software&w5=Writing+boo k+
for+child+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig=YYO9YSo4bvWcVGbN66FA5Q> writing
software
* Writing
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjY29xOGhqBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0
BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Writing+book+for+child+course&w1=Organization+develop ment&w2=Writing+book&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software &w5=Writi ng+book+for+child+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig=hNfj8Teb7eig5hScC5HDww
>
book for child course
Yahoo! News
Most
<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIGifki1f8/MI3064.9803190.10510181.8674578
/D=groups/S07630051:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP68157839/A848613/R=0/SIGtvb
vdr2/*http:/news.yahoo.com/i/964;_ylt©FJqZhZwK5EADcA_Q2s0NUE;_ylu=X3o
D
MTA3ODdxdHBhBHNlYwM5NjQ-> Popular News
What's the most popular news now?
Yahoo! TV
You're
<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIGi1ii019/MI3064.9803235.10510228.8674578
/D=groups/S07630051:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP68157839/AB99909/R=0/SIGkad
tvde/*http:/apprentice.tv.yahoo.com/trump/06/index.html> fired
A new season of The Apprentice begins.
New business?
Get
<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIGigb0uo5/MI3064.9803227.10510220.8674578
/D=groups/S07630051:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP68157839/A848640/R=0/SIG1an
6mds/*http:/searchmarketing.yahoo.com/arp/srchv2.php?
o=US2002&cmp=Yahoo&
ctv=Groups1&s=Y&s2=&s3=&bP> new customers.
List your web site
in Yahoo! Search.
.

<http://geo.yahoo.com/serv?s—359714/grpId€07315/grpspId07630051/msgIdg54/stime68150639/nc1848613/nc2B99909/nc3848640>

__,_._,___

↑ Index

265. Barry Schwabsky

Re: Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006)

Sat 13 Jan 2007

There are some amazing lines there. "Can I smell my own hair?" So who's going to undertake the complete English translation? Any volunteers out there?

Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote: Binoy Majumbar's poems are fantastic. They remind me also of Turkish poetry.

Murat

On 1/12/07, Chris Stroffolino wrote:
>
> Aryanil Mukherjee asked me to forward this news.... Chris
>
>
>
> Binoy Majumdar (1934-2006), an Indian poet (Bengali), recently passed > away. Binoy was a brilliant, eccentric, obscure and controversial > poet whose life and work await chapters of penetrating research.
> Binoy is an extremely rare poet – it is hard to find a parallel in > the western hemisphere. The intense purity with which geometry, > mathematics, science and logistics fill the bone-marrow of his > poetry, distinguises his rare genre. Despite being a fine and > talented engineer, a brilliant, innovative mathematician and an even > more brilliant poet, Binoy led a rather distraught and disoriented > life of extreme poverty. Failed by one-sided love [for Gayatri > Chakraborty (later Spivak)], he lost his mental composure and > attempted suicide several times in his life. At times, he would turn > violently schizophrenic. In the 1990s, the state government of West > Bengal, upon request from fellow poets, provided some support. It > didn't restore his physical and mental health. However, during his > stay at the state-run hospital, he wrote a book -"haaspaataale lekhaa > kabitaaguchchha' (Hospital Poems) which won him the prestigious > national poetry award (Sahitya Academy Purashhkaar). Today, Binoy has > a huge following among poets three or four decades younger.
>
> Here is an introductory link. Please read –

>
> http://www.kaurab.com/poetry_peripherals/binoy.html
>
>

↑ Index

266. amy king
Asian-American Issue of MiPOesias
Sat 13 Jan 2007

Guest Edited by Nick Carbo: http://www.mipoesias.com/Asian-American2007/

And some very nice props already posted here: http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2007/01/mipoesias-magazine-2007-asian-american.html

Cheers,

Amy King

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

267. John Tranter
"Jacket noticeboard"
Sat 13 Jan 2007

Jacket's Unnoticed Noticeboard

Not all visitors to Jacket, rummaging around in the labyrinth among the glittering trash and treasure of poetry, review, interviews, notes, photographs and divers literary material, happen to stumble over the Noticeboard, at http://jacketmagazine.com/noticeboard.shtml

...so here's an email copy of the current Jacket Noticeboard, for the subscribers to the Jacket newsletter.

Have a happy and productive 2007!

- John Tranter, editor

The COMPLETE RECORDINGS of WILLIAM CARLOS WILLIAMS

http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Williams-WC.html

The recordings were originally compiled and published from Keele University, England, by Dr. Richard Swigg in 1992 and 1993. PennSound gratefully acknowledges the scholarship and editing of Dr. Swigg in making this Williams sound archive available.

PENNsound has had 10 million downloads since we opened two years ago! We also wish to thank Peggy Fox and New Directions for making this possible. Al Filreis and Charles Bernstein, Directors: PENNsound is a project of the Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing at the University of Pennsylvania.

Abigail Child

A note about recent publications for all of those curious and who do not know of the following:

AN EXPERIMENT IN AUTOBIOGRAPHY, poetry in markszine.com
Editor-in-chief and webmaster Deb King; special issue (2006) curated by Carla Harryman web address: http://markszine.com/703/ac/ind.htm

NOTES ON SINCERITY AND IRONY, chapter essay in Stan Brakhage Filmmaker, edited by David James (Temple University Press 2005)

THIS IS CALLED MOVING: A Poetics of Film, full-length book divided into three sections: Sex Talk -on women and film and theory; Matrix -on work by colleagues, contemporary and historical; Interrogations -on my work: interviews, articles and transcripts.(University of Alabama Press, 2005).

About this book:

"This is a splendidly original collection of essays, comments, and interviews. Child has published books of poetry (Mob, 1994; Scatter Matrix, 1996) in the same venues as the so-called L-A-N-G-U-A-G-E poets, and her writing style sometimes resembles the fragmented but idea-filled paragraphs one finds in the prose of Charles Bernstein (A Poetics, 1992) or Ronald Silliman (The New Sentence, 1987). Here she complicates and expands their work substantially, as she transposes the L-A-N-G-U-A-G-E poet emphasis on writing onto the medium of film. Whereas the L-A-N-G-U-A-G-E poets seem always to be rewriting Gertrude Stein, Child's work seems much more expansive, with a richer range of reference.... Including especially moving forays into issues of sexuality, the totality of the book gives a fine description of the potential of experimental filmmaking. Tom Gunning provides a concise, instructive foreword. Summing Up: Highly recommended."-S.C. Dillon, Bates College.

Bruce Andrews

... in the news...

PREHAB, a collaboration with graphic designer Dirk Rowntree - tiny phrases/poems made into a video sequence of typographical mystery and magic. (This premiered last year as part of a sound installation at Diapason). Now up on the invaluable Ubu.com site:

http://www.ubu.com/contemp/andrews/PrehabUbu.mov

ALSO: from a few weeks ago on the Bill O'Reilly Report on Fox News (Bruce Andrews' 'debut' on national television), the video clip now up on Youtube.com. Five minutes of notoriety, as O'Reilly's 'Outrage of the Week!', attacked for the anti-Bush/Iraq slant of his political science courses at Fordham:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uTKp-XYWaOc

Sidebrow

At http://www.sidebrow.net/

- an online & print journal dedicated to innovation & collaboration - seeks fiction, poetry, art, essay, ephemera, found text, & academia, as well as creative response to current posts and ongoing projects.

Submissions to Sidebrow are evaluated both as stand-alone set pieces & as points of departure for establishing multi-authored/multi-genre works. Submissions that re-imagine, depart from, or explore the interstices between posted pieces are highly encouraged.

Sidebrow's inaugural print anthology is slated for Summer 2007. Although all projects will remain open beyond the publication of this anthology, the deadline for inclusion in this first print edition is January 15, 2007. Submission details may be found at http://www.sidebrow.net/2006/submit.php

Current and forthcoming contributors to date:

Jenny Allan, Julia Bloch, Lawrence Braithwaite, Nick Bredie, Mez Breeze, Amina Cain, Nona Caspers, Jimmy Chen, Kim Chinquee, John Cleary, Catherine Daly, Brett Evans, Brian Evenson, Raymond Farr, Anne Germanacos, Paul Hardacre, HL Hazuka, Malia Jackson, Carrie Katz, Susanna Kittredge, Richard Kostelanetz, Kristine Leja, Norman Lock, Doug Macpherson, Scott Malby, Bob Marcacci, Bill Marsh, Rob McLennan, L.J. Moore, Greg Mulcahy, Cathi Murphy, Eireene Nealand, Daniel Pendergrass, Kristin Prevallet, Kathryn Pringle, Daniel C. Remein, Elizabeth Robinson, Len Shneyder, Nina Shope, Kyle Simonsen, Ed Skoog, Anna Joy Springer, Chris Stroffolino, Joanne Tracy, Chris Tysh, Nico Vassilakis, James Wagner, & Derek White

Projects to date:

Build: Mother, I: A multi-author, multi-genre exploration of seeds sown by Bataille. http://www.sidebrow.net/2006/motheri.php

Build: Post-Hole: A multi-author, multi-genre menagerie of grotesques. http://www.sidebrow.net/2006/posthole.php

The Letters Project: Reviving the epistolary novella. http://www.sidebrow.net/2006/epistolary.php

Page 24 Project: A chapbook concerning and consisting exclusively of page 24s. http://www.sidebrow.net/2006/page24.php

Litopolis San Francisco: Staking a literary claim to the city. http://www.sidebrow.net/2006/litopolissf.php

Work Seeking Work: Possible emerging projects. http://www.sidebrow.net/2006/workseekwork.php

Other projects to be defined by future submissions and response.

For more information, and to peruse currently posted works, visit http://www.sidebrow.net/

Poets In Need

Poets In Need is a non-profit organization providing emergency assistance to poets who have an established presence in the literary community as innovators in the field and a substantive body of published work. Assistance is give only in cases of current financial need that is in excess of and unrelated to the recipient's normal economic situation and that is the result of recent emergency (due, for example, to fire, flood, eviction, or a medical crisis). Assistance is given world-wide, not just in the USA.

Their Internet site: http://www.poetsinneed.org/

---

augustus young

all new NOVEMBER issue of the augustus young webzine everything you could possibly want - within reason http://augustus-young-no-4.monsite.orange.fr/please send your corrections and comments

Ygdrasil

The November 2006 issue of Ygdrasil, A Journal of the Poetic Arts, featuring selected poems from The Complete Poetry of Cesar Vallejo, translated by Clayton Eshleman, and accompanied by a 'Translation Memoir' by the translator, is now available at http://www.synapse.net/kgerken/is pleased to announce the posting of its Fall 2006 Online Edition, featuring an interview with Raymond Federman and selections from the Letters to Poets project featuring Anselm Berrigan, John Yau, Truong Tran, and Wanda Coleman - plus reviews of books by Greil Marcus, John Muir, John Kinsella, and Cole Porter, two reviews of some steamy, definitely not-for-kids graphic novels, and much more... it's all for you at www.raintaxi.com!

Rain Taxi

Coconut 6

containing new poems by Cole Swensen, Eleni Sikelianos, Josh May, CS Carrier, Eric Baus, Gloria Frym, CJ Martin, Natalie Lyalin, Ada Limon, Jonathan Minton, Laurel DeCou, Rusty Morrison, Megan Johnson, James Grinwis, Marty Hebrank, James Sanders, Michelle Greenblatt and Sheila E. Murphy, Mairead Byrne, Jeff Harrison, Kristine Snodgrass, Brendan Lorber, Bruce Covey, and Hazel McClure, is now live on the web. Hope to see you there!

http://www.coconutpoetry.org/

- Bruce Covey

Fulcrum cover
FULCRUM

is proud to announce the publication of its fifth annual issue and the launch of its brand-new website: Find more information, view samples or subscribe at http://fulcrumpoetry.com

FULCRUM: an annual of poetry and aesthetics, Number Five, 2006, edited by Philip Nikolayev and Katia Kapovich * 544 pp., perfectbound, exquisitely designed, cheaply priced * SPECIAL FEATURES: "Poets and Philosophers"; "Poetry and Harvard in the 1920s" * POETRY BY Stephen Sturgeon, Ben Mazer, Jeet Thayil, Vivek Narayanan, Glyn Maxwell, Joe Green, Landis Everson, Dan Sofaer, Billy Collins, John Tranter, Andrea Zanzotto, Don Share, Sean O Riordain, Greg Delanty, Michael Palmer, Kit Robinson, Brian Henry, Pam Brown, David Lehman, John Hennessy, Charles Bernstein, Charles Baudelaire, Guillaume Apollinaire, Carlos Drummond de Andrade, Arthur Rimbaud, X.J.

Kennedy, John Crowe Ransom, Alex To, Fiona Sampson, Fan Ogilvie, Richard Fein, Joyelle McSweeney, Justin Marks, Gerard Malanga, Alexei Tsvetkov, George Bilgere, John Wheelwright, Malcolm Cowley, R.P. Blackmur, Dudley Fitts... * ESSAYS BY Eliot Weinberger, Peter H. Hare, Simon Critchley, Marjorie Perloff, Lisa Goldfarb, Pierre Joris, Raymond Barfield... * ART BY Esther Pullman, e.e. cummings * INTERVIEW: Andrea Zanzotto * ... AND MUCH MORE!

ANNOUNCEMENT: 2 NEW TITLES BY THE POST-APOLLO PRESS

(If anyone would like to review either of these books for Jacket, please see this page.)
Einar

By Elriede Jelinek, Winner of the Nobel Prize in Literature, 2004

Translated from the German by P.J. Blumenthal
Nonfiction 66 pages $13.00 ISBN-13: 978-0-942996-58-6
ISBN-10: 0-942996-58-5

and

Figured Image

By Anne-Marie Albiach

Translated from the French by Keith Waldrop
Poetry 94 pages $18.00 ISBN-13: 978-0-942996-59-3
ISBN-10: 0-942996-59-3

On Einar :

Elfriede Jelinek , who was born in 1946 in Mürzzuschlag, Austria, is the most verbally powerful writer in present-day German-language literature. Her works and public statements continue to provoke disparate reactions. In 2004 Jelinek received the Nobel Prize for literature, and this decision also caused considerable controversy within the German-speaking sphere as well as internationally.

In 1998, the German writer and director Einar Schleef staged Jelinek's most important drama Sportstück for the Vienna City Theater, and so immediately became Jelinek's favorite director. The production of an additional Jelinek piece was interrupted by Schleef's illness. To everyone's surprise, he died shortly thereafter.

Subsequently Jelinek ventured to compose three portraits of Schleef, which P. J. Blumenthal has translated for this little volume. They show Jelinek at the height of her powers, with her inimitable, musically overflowing, irony-infected style of exaggeration, and will awaken curiosity about her work, as well as about the figure of Einar Schleef, who still remains completely unknown in the English-speaking world.

As Jelinek has written, "There were only two geniuses in postwar Germany: Fassbinder in the West, and Schleef in the East. They were both insatiable, but only in order to be able to give more. In the end, they gave themselves. They stumbled over themselves and spit out their hearts." -Hans-Ulrich Müller-Schwefe

Works by Elfriede Jelinek include The Piano Teacher (2002) , Women as Lovers (1995), Lust (1993) , and Wonderful, Wonderful Times (1990), all translated by P.J. Blumenthal and published by Serpent's Tail Press. She has received over twenty literary prizes and awards in addition to winning the Nobel Prize for Literature in 2004.

On Figured Image:

Anne-Marie Albiach's words are never alone on the page, having each other for company, just as they find here ideal companionship in Keith Waldrop's translation. In Figurations de l'image , Albiach pursues her rigorous investigation into the possibilities of measure, the perceptible, luminescence, vulnerability, memory, contour, ardor, breath, oscillation, remonstration, trajectory, disparity, abstraction, antecedence, disparity, refraction, trace, tapestry, rehearsal, reverberation, and the irreparable. In these poems, the figures refute image as they bank, relapse, surge, palsy, recollect. Albiach scores space to twine time, abjures rhyme to make blank shimmer in the mark. -Charles Bernstein

The Post-Apollo Press is honored to release Figured Image , a new collection of poetry by Anne-Marie Albiach. Since the publication of État by Mercure de France in 1971, Albiach has remained a signal presence in French poetry and beyond, impacting American poets and artists such as Barbara Guest and Richard Tuttle. Bound by a geometry where language and body converge, Figured Image offers a lyricism that "breathes differently," luring the reader down darkening roads of memory, desire, and chance.

Translated works by Anne-Marie Albiach include Mezza Voce (The Post-Apollo Press, 1988), État (Awede, 1989), "Vocative Figure"(Allardyce Books, 1992), A Geometry (Burning Deck, 1998), A Discursive Space : I nterviews with Jean Daive (Duration Press, 1999), and Two Poems: Flammigere & the Line ¦ the Loss (Shearsman Books, 2004). EXCÈS: cette mesure first appeared as a collaboration with Richard Tuttle. It was published by Yvon Lambert, Paris, 2002.

Keith Waldrop is the author of eighteen books of poetry including The Real Subject: Queries and Conjectures of Jacob Delafon¦ with Sample Poems (Omnidawn, 2004) and The House Seen from Nowhere (Litmus Press, 2003). He co-edits Burning Deck press with Rosmarie Waldrop. His translations of contemporary French poetry have been supported by two NEA fellowships and the government of France has awarded him the rank of Chevalier des Arts et des Lettres.

* Both titles are available through Small Press Distribution, 1341 7th Street, Berkeley, CA 94710.  To order, please visit www.spdbooks.org or call [redacted]

Shearsman 69/70 is now available.

£8.50 single copies / £12 for a 2 double-issue subscription. Further details at:

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2006/sh69_70.html

About half of the previous issue is now online at http://www.shearsman.com/pages/magazine/current_issue/contents.html

New books published this month:

Ken Edwards: No Public Language: Selected Poems 1975-1995

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2006/edwards.html

R.F. Langley: Journals

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2006/langley.html

Both are available direct from the press, from Salt's website, from Amazon, or indeed from your local bookshop (if you're in the UK or the USA).

Other recent publications:

César Vallejo: Selected Poems

Fred Beake: New and Selected Poems

Mary Coghill: Designed to Fade

Peter Larkin: Leaves of Field

Tony Frazer
Shearsman Books Ltd,
58 Velwell Road, Exeter EX4 4LD
England

Tel / Fax: ([redacted]

http://www.shearsman.com/

Covering photography website is online:

Covering Photography is a web-based archive and resource for the study of the relationship between the history of photography and book cover design. Our database contains images of and information on approximately 1200 books so far, which may be accessed via Photographer, Author, Publisher, Publication Date and Designer.

The site is absolutely free, and interactive. We welcome your online comments and opinions. Please visit and browse at CoveringPhotography.com. We hope you will forward it to those you think may be interested, and link it to your own website.

Url: http://CoveringPhotography.com
email: coveringphotography [ât] bc.edu

Richard Burns
Richard Burns wins 2007 Serbian "Great Lesson" Literary Prize

CAMBRIDGE, UK Tues, Oct 10, 2006 (Salt Publishing) - Richard Burns has won the 2007 Veliki ¨kolski cas Prize.

Following the publication of The Blue Butterfly in September, Burns's book has been awarded the Serbian literary prize by the City of Kragujevac, the location and impetus behind many of the poems. The prize involves a televised performance of an oratorio based on the book before an international audience and its publication in Serbian.

The twin points of departure for the book are a Nazi massacre that took place in Kragujevac, central Serbia, in October 1941, and the poet's encounter with a blue butterfly at the same location in May 1985. The launch in London on 19th October this year takes place exactly 65 years after the massacre. In November Richard Burns will appear on the BBC Radio 3 programme The Verb.

The Blue Butterfly (Salt Publishing 2006) £10.99 ISBN 1-84471-258-3

"This is real poetry. The whole book is an extremely impressive achievement." - Frank Kermode

"Epic poems are rare. This is one. Richard Burns is one of the major half-hidden poets of England. The book is a monument: vivid, grave, sorrowful, angry and powerfully constructed, a human act of commemoration." -George Szirtes

About Salt Publishing:

Salt publishes ground-breaking poetry, short fiction, literary criticism, essays and biography for an international market. The management team, drawn from blue chip companies, have successfully consolidated the operations of the Australian-born business in the UK. Salt is a class leader in the implementation of new publishing technologies and standards. Sales revenues from the rapidly-expanding catalogue are growing at 40 per year. Stocks of the large, award-winning list are held with major distributors in the UK, USA and Australia, and sold in bookstores around the world.

For further information please contact:
Jen Hamilton-Emery on [redacted] or email [redacted]

Salt Publishing - The world's most innovative poetry publisher.

Greek vase showing Muse with Kithera, courtesy Wikipedia

Greek vase showing Muse with Kithera, courtesy Wikipedia

OLD SONGS (archaic Greek poems put to music) is now on the web at Penn Sound: http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Mason.html!

The Old Songs group has been translating Archaic Greek Poetry and putting it to music for 4 years now. Mark Jickling and Chris Mason translate the poems and write the tunes, as well as singing and playing guitar, banjo and mandolin. Liz Downing sings and Rebby Sharp plays fiddle.

Four CD's are at Penn Sound:"19 Old Songs", featuring translations from Sappho, Archilochus, Xenophanes, Alcaeus, Praxilla, Solon, Crates, Simonides, Hipponax, Mimnermus, and Alcman; "Alcman", featuring translations from the 7th century Spartan poet and composer of songs for girls' chorus; "Hipponax", with translations of poems by the 5th century iambicist/ street poet from Ephesos; and "Honey Nor Bee" with fragments of Sappho sung in Greek and English.

"This meld of words from the 7th to the 4th centuries B.C. with music of the turn of the American 20th century works near flawlessly. A simple string-band strum backs Downing's beautifully country reading of Sappho 31, part of which Jickling and Mason translate to, "Silently my tongue lies broken / Beneath my skin a fire is smoking". It's a lyric in imagery and tone that sounds as backwoods, old, weird American as anything from Harry Smith's Anthology of American Folk Music." -Bret McCabe, Baltimore City Paper

---

A note from Anthony Barnett in England:

Dear Correspondents and Friends

Kindly excuse this multi-sent message about two remarkable 2007 projects.

*

HENRY CROWDER

I am pleased to tell you that the long-ago announced Allardyce Book monograph + CD Listening for Henry Crowder is at last on track for firm publication in 2007, scheduled for the fall.

There have been exiciting developments:

Firstly, the wonderful New York-based vocalist Allan Harris has kindly accepted to record the six settings by Crowder to poems by Nancy Cunard, Samuel Beckett and others, which Cunard published as Henry-Music in Paris in 1930. As most of you know, all these compositions were supposed to have been recorded at the time by Crowder, but only one disc, with one of the compositions, has ever been discovered and it is now thought likely that the remaining songs were never released. Crowder's recording will be included on the CD along with Allan Harris's new recordings of all six songs, which will be the debut recording of five of them, including the poem Beckett specially wrote for Crowder. Allan Harris's work can be heard and seen at http://www.allanharris.com

In 1926, the year before Crowder became violinist Eddie South's pianist, he recorded six player piano rolls. All the rolls will be included on the CD in performances by Julian Dyer from transcriptions and restorations by Robbie Rhodes from the originals (one of which is known only in one damaged copy) kindly loaned from the collections of Michael Montgomery and Frank Himpsl. This team of four is truly the best in the world of player piano rolls and their contribution to this project is enormous.

Attached for information is a pdf file of a draft (please note, draft only) of the front and back covers of the forthcoming monograph.

*

SWING STRINGS

I am also pleased to announce that in 2007 AB Fable has scheduled for release a 2CD set examining part of the history of Swing Strings entitled Swinging Till the Girls Come Home (the title of an Oscar Pettiford tune recorded by Pettiford with Harry Lookofsky.)

The first CD will be an anthology of mainly small Swing String groups (i.e. more than one violin) 1930s-1950s. It will include some unreleased and broadcast items.

With the kind assistance of violinist Gayle Dixon and cellist Akua Dixon, both founding members of the very first Max Roach Double Quartet, the second CD will document previously unreleased recordings with them from the 1970s and 1980s, including the most extraordinary rehearsals with Max Roach, and larger ensembles. Gayle Dixon's work in documenting the violin in jazz is at http://jazzbows.com and Akua Dixon's website is http://www.akuadixon.com

More information about this release will be mailed in some months.

Please write if you have any questions.

Many thanks

With warmest regards

Anthony Barnett

--

Anthony Barnett
14 Mount Street, Lewes, East Sussex BN7 1HL England
Tel/Fax: 01273 479393 / International: [redacted]

Allardyce, Barnett, Publishers / AB Fable
http://www.abar.net

PERIODICALLY UPDATED NEW LINK Corrections to AB Fable CD liner notes http://www.abar.net/cdd.html

Fable Recording and Bulletin: Violin Improvisation Studies Bio-Discographical Studies / CDs / Literature

---

Issue 24 (2006) of New American Writing was published in July 2006 and is now available at bookstores and newstands for $15 or $36 for a three-issue subscription. You can also order from NAW, 369 Molino Avenue, Mill Valley, CA 94941. Online orders using a credit card: http://www.ccnow.com/

It contains a Nathaniel Mackey feature including a lengthy interview by Sarah Rosenthal; translations of poems by Pablo Neruda (Clayton Eshleman), Vladimir Holan (Josef Horacek and Lara Glenum), Pura Lopez-Colome (Jason Stumpf), Aase Berg (Johannes Gorannson), and Eugenio Montejo (Kirk Nesset), Yang Lian (Wang Ping and Alex Lemon), the ancient Vietnamese poet Nguyen Trai (Nguyen Do and Paul Hoover), and Yao Feng (Christopher Kelen); and poems by Pierre Joris, Rosmarie Waldrop, Nathaniel Mackey, Mac Wellman, Karen Garthe, Martine Bellen, Rusty Morrison, Joanna Klink, Edward Smallfield, Joseph Lease, Brian Teare, Denise Newman, G.C. Waldrep, John Olson, Campbell McGrath, Devin Johnston, Lisa Isaacson, Ethan Paquin, Caroline Knox, Douglas Messerli, Rachel Loden, Terence Winch, Todd Swift, Patrick Pritchett, Craig Watson, Stephen Vincent, Wang Ping, Barbara Jane Reyes, Maged Zaher, Noelle Kocot, Nathan Hauke, James Meetze, John Sakkis, and flarfists Michael Magee, Katie Degentesh, and Sharon Mesmer, among others.

Cover art: Bill Viola, The Messenger , 1996. Sing-channel color video and stereo-sound installation. Photograph by Sally Ritts. By permission of Solomon R. Guggenheim Foundation, NYC. Cover design by Philip Krayna and Jason Snyder.

The University of California Press is pleased to announce the publication of:
The Collected Poems of Robert Creeley, 1975-2005
Robert Creeley

Robert Creeley feature
Jacket 31: link

Robert Creeley (1926-2005) published more than sixty books of poetry, prose, essays, and interviews in the United States and abroad. His many honors included the Lannan Lifetime Achievement Award, the Frost Medal, the Shelley Memorial Award, and the Bollingen Prize in Poetry. He was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters and Distinguished Professor in the Graduate Program in Literary Arts at Brown University.

"Robert Creeley has created a noble body of poetry that extends the work of his predecessors Pound, Williams, Zukofsky, and Olson, and provides like them a method for his successors in exploring our new American poetic consciousness." - Allen Ginsberg

This definitive collection showcases thirty years of work by one of the most significant American poets of the twentieth century, bringing together verse that originally appeared in eight acclaimed books of poetry ranging from Hello: A Journal (1978) to Life & Death (1998) and If I were writing this (2003). Robert Creeley, who was involved with the publication of this volume before his death in 2005, helped define an emerging counter-tradition to the prevailing literary establishment-the new postwar poetry originating with Ezra Pound, William Carlos Williams, and Louis Zukofsky and expanding through the lives and works of Charles Olson, Robert Duncan, Allen Ginsberg, Denise Levertov, and others.

The Collected Poems of Robert Creeley, 1975-2005 will be essential reading for anyone interested in twentieth-century American poetry. Full information about the book, including the table of contents, is available online:
http://www.ucpress.edu/books/pages/10161.html

Coconut Five, now live on the web, features exciting new poetry by Lyn Hejinian, Mong-Lan, Ashley VanDoorn, Ada Limon, Scott Glassman, John Cotter, Joshua Marie Wilkinson, Katie Degentesh, Gina Myers and Dustin Williamson, Johannes Goransson, Noah Eli Gordon, Kristen Hanlon, Matt Hart, Kirsten Kaschock, Jennifer Moxley, Sarah Mangold, Carly Sachs, Joshua Edwards, Michael Rerick, Jen Tynes, Albert Flynn DeSilver, Maureen Seaton and Neil de la Flor, Hal Sirowitz, and Robyn Art. http://www.coconutpoetry.org/ - Bruce Covey, Coconut Editor

The Summer 2006 Online Edition of Rain Taxi Review of Books! At : http://www.raintaxi.com/

Featuring the complete Daniel Handler interview, plus reviews of books by Colin MacInnes, William Burroughs, Nathaniel Mackey, Mei-mei Berssenbrugge, Alison Bechdel, Rick Veitch, and much, much more!

and don't forget the Summer 2006 Print Issue of Rain Taxi... featuring interviews with Will Alexander and Daniel Handler and reviews of books by Paul Laurence Dunbar, Tess Gallagher, Louis Zukofsky, Thomas Bernhard, Fred Vargas, William H. Gass, Lawrence Weschler, Michel Houellebecq and much, much more!

See complete print contents, here! To purchase this issue now click here, or start a four-issue subscription with the Summer 2006 issue.

"UbuWeb Ethnopoetics editor Jerome Rothenberg has supplied us with a fresh batch of poems and essays including: Yunte Huang's essay with visuals of poems inscribed on walls by Chinese immigrants at Angel Island, San Francisco; Dennis Tedlock's "A Conversation with Madness" (translation) from The Human Work, the Human Design: 2,000 Years of Mayan Literature; an essay by Greek artist Demosthenes Agrafiotis on traditional writing systems & art making (French); Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's concrete poetry translation of an Ojibwa poem "Song of the Owl"; Dinita Smith on "Incantations," a handmade book of original writings in Tsotzil by a workshop/ collective of Mayan women; Ambar Past's Introduction to the Tzotzil Mayan "Incantations" book; and The People's Poetry Language Initiative - A Declaration Of Poetic Rights And Values. Stay tuned for Ethnopoetic Sound updates including Ethel Waters' 'That Dada Strain' (1922) and 'The Signifying Monkey: Two Versions of a Toast.'"

Here's the link: http://www.ubu.com/ethno/index.html

Fascicle

You are invited to check out the second issue of Fascicle at http://www.fascicle.com/, an online journal that focuses on a global and historical view of innovative poetry. Included in its 400+ pages:

* A portfolio of new poems from China edited by Zhang Er, from the forthcoming Talisman Anthology of Chinese poetry.

* A supplement to Jed Rasula and Steve McCaffery's Imagining Language (MIT Press 1998), one of the most fascinating and distinctive anthologies of recent memory.

* A selection of new collaborative work by Lyn Hejinian & Anne Tardos, Aaron McCollough & Kent Johnson, Geraldine Monk & John Donne, Hank Lazer & Pak, Brian Howe & Marcus Slease, among others.

* Critical essays and prose, including Lisa Jarnot on Robert Duncan; Tom Orange on Clark Coolidge; Dodie Bellamy on Narrative & Body Language; Laura Moriarty on A Tonalist Thinking; Clayton Eshleman on Hart Crane, Andrew Joron & Jeff Clark; and more.

* Peter Cole interviewed by Leonard Schwartz.

* Visual work by Anne Tardos, Buck Downs, Cathy Eisenhower, and Michael Winkler.

Plus plays, poems, and translations.

Bruce Covey is thrilled to announce that Coconut 2, with new poems by Ron Padgett, Leslie Scalapino, Shin Yu Pai, Arielle Greenberg, Jenna Cardinale, Reb Livingston, Elaine Equi, Edmund Berrigan, Nate Pritts, Larry Sawyer, Laura Carter, Anselm Berrigan, Jessy Randall, Jenny Boully, Shane Allison, Laura Solomon, Sueyeun Juliette Lee, Tony Tost, Peter Jay Shippy, and Christine Scanlon, is now live on the web. Also, please check out Verse's review of Issue one: http://versemag.blogspot.com

---

The Argotist Online at http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/ now has interviews with Charles Bernstein, Marjorie Perloff, Ron Silliman, Michael Rothenberg, Iain Sinclair, Rupert Loydell, Robert Hampson, Todd Swift, Philip Nikolayev, and Jack Foley.

Also poems by, among others, Ron Silliman, Hank Lazer, Michael Rothenberg, Rupert Loydell, Todd Swift, Anne Blonstein, Robert Hampson, Randy Roark, Allen Fisher, Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino, Annabelle Clippinger, John M.

Bennett, Adam Fieled, Philip Nikolayev, Lidia Vianu, Peter Riley, rob mclennan, John Seed, and Medbh McGuckian.

Among the essays are those on Peter Redgrove, William Burroughs, William Bronk, Jeremy Reed and Bob Dylan.

Interviews with Randy Roark, Medbh McGuckian and Anne Blonstein are forthcoming.

E N D

Best,

John Tranter mailto:[redacted]

Jacket magazine: http://jacketmagazine.com/
Homepage: http://johntranter.com/

39 Short Street
Balmain NSW 2041
Australia

Phone (61+) 0405 444 717

↑ Index

268. Haas Bianchi

FW: Folks in Chicago: Assistance Needed with Chicago Booksigning Feb 16

Sat 13 Jan 2007

Send me the announcement and I will send it around to the list here in Chicago

Ray

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of elen
Sent: Saturday, January 13, 2007 4:42 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Folks in Chicago: Assistance Needed with Chicago Booksigning Feb 16

Please pass this on to Chicago-based writers..

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted] [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, January 06, 2007 10:14 PM

To: [redacted]
Subject: [fireandink] Assistance Needed with Chicago Booksigning

Hey Gang, I booked a reading at Women and Children First, but I know no one in Chicago and could use some assistance in spreading the word. Please pass along to your network of folks. THANKS.

Growing Up Girl: An Anthology of Voices from Marginalized Spaces Women <http://www.womenandchildrenfirst.com/> and Children First Books Reading
Friday, February 16, 2007
5233 N. Clark Street
Chicago, IL 60640
7:30pm
www.girlchildpress. <http://www.girlchildpress.com> com

Michelle
www.thepoetryfix. <http://www.thepoetryfix.org/> org A national resource for poets/writers and the folks who love us!

__._,_.___
Messages
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/message/6754;_ylc=X3oDMTM0Zm03
AzY3NTQEc2VjA2Z0cgRzbGsDdnRwYwRzdGltZQMxMTY4MTUwNjM5BHRwY0lkAzY3NTQ->
in this topic (1)
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJwdGZxcDVpBF9T
c2VjA2Z0cgRzbGsDcnBseQRzdGltZQMxMTY4MTUwNjM5?
act=reply&messageNumg54>
Reply (via web post) | Start
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJlbGprMW1yBF9T
A250cGMEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> a new topic
Messages
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/messages;_ylc=X3oDMTJlcWZhbW85
c2xrA21zZ3MEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> | Files
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/files;_ylc=X3oDMTJmcWQwa2lhBF9
rA2ZpbGVzBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> | Photos
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/photos;_ylc=X3oDMTJldW1iOGJtBF
xrA3Bob3QEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> | Links
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/links;_ylc=X3oDMTJmazZscm1jBF9
rA2xpbmtzBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> | Database

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/database;_ylc=X3oDMTJjNXR0N2N
n
c2xrA2RiBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> | Polls
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/polls;_ylc=X3oDMTJmdTM5bTJsBF
9
rA3BvbGxzBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> | Members
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/members;_ylc=X3oDMTJlZzNodGNi
B
2xrA21icnMEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> | Calendar
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/calendar;_ylc=X3oDMTJkdmlzdW9n
c2xrA2NhbARzdGltZQMxMTY4MTUwNjM5>

<http:// groups.yahoo.com/;_ylc=X3oDMTJkaGZxYW5mBF9TAzk3NDc2NTkwBGdycElkA
TUwNjM5> Yahoo! Groups
Change
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink/join;_ylc=X3oDMTJmNGVqdmxlBF9
T A3N0bmdzBHN0aW1lAzExNjgxNTA2Mzk-> settings via the Web (Yahoo! ID required)
Change settings via email: Switch
<mailto:[redacted]?subject=Email%20Delivery:%20Di
gest> delivery to Daily Digest | Switch
<mailto:[redacted]?subject=Change%20Delivery
%20Format:%20Traditional> format to Traditional Visit <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink;_ylc=X3oDMTJkMHNmZ2ExBF9TA
zk3N
gRzdGltZQMxMTY4MTUwNjM5> Your Group | Yahoo! Groups
Visit
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/fireandink;_ylc=X3oDMTJlNWwyZTF2BF9TAz
k3M
HAEc3RpbWUDMTE2ODE1MDYzOQ--> Your Group
SPONSORED LINKS
* Organization
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjODQwazY0BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE
0BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Organization+development&w1=Organization+development&
w2=Writing+book&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software&w5= Writing+bo ok+for+child+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig²AaFFuZdzYB4y-AfhT5RA>
development

* Writing
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjM3E3a2plBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0
BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Writing+book&w1=Organization+development&w2=Writing+b ook&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software&w5=Writing+book+f or+child
+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig*b5CAYq3f_xacMlX5MTRA> book
* Writing
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjM2llMjN2BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0
BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Writing+a+book&w1=Organization+development&w2=Writing +book&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software&w5=Writing+boo k+for+chi ld+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig=bY7vL2J8Ea_xhLLZxzQygw> a book
* Book
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjNzhyYWl0BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0
BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Book+writing+software&w1=Organization+development&w2Writing +book&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software&w5=Writing+boo k+
for+child+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig=YYO9YSo4bvWcVGbN66FA5Q> writing
software
* Writing
<http://groups.yahoo.com/gads;_ylc=X3oDMTJjY29xOGhqBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0
BF9wA
jgxNTA2Mzk-?
t=ms&k=Writing+book+for+child+course&w1=Organization+develop ment&w2=Writing+book&w3=Writing+a+book&w4=Book+writing+software
&w5=Writi ng+book+for+child+course&c=5&s0&g=2&.sig=hNfj8Teb7eig5hScC5HDww
>
book for child course
Yahoo! News
Most
<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIGifki1f8/MI3064.9803190.10510181.8674578
/D=groups/S07630051:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP68157839/A848613/R=0/SIGtvb
vdr2/*http:/news.yahoo.com/i/964;_ylt©FJqZhZwK5EADcA_Q2s0NUE;_ylu=X3o
D

MTA3ODdxdHBhBHNlYwM5NjQ-> Popular News
What's the most popular news now?
Yahoo! TV
You're
<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIGi1ii019/MI3064.9803235.10510228.8674578
/D=groups/S07630051:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP68157839/AB99909/R=0/SIGkad
tvde/*http:/apprentice.tv.yahoo.com/trump/06/index.html> fired A new season of The Apprentice begins.
New business?
Get
<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIGigb0uo5/MI3064.9803227.10510220.8674578
/D=groups/S07630051:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP68157839/A848640/R=0/SIG1an
6mds/*http:/searchmarketing.yahoo.com/arp/srchv2.php?
o=US2002&cmp=Yahoo&
ctv=Groups1&s=Y&s2=&s3=&bP> new customers.
List your web site
in Yahoo! Search.
.

<http://geo.yahoo.com/serv?s—359714/grpId€07315/grpspId07630051/m sgIdg54/stime68150639/nc1848613/nc2B99909/nc3848640>

__,_._,___

↑ Index

269. Peter Ciccariello

In the end, there, ourselves, the music becoming a woman

Sat 13 Jan 2007

In the end, there, ourselves, the music becoming a woman<http://www.cgi7.com/peterimages/music.htm>

-- Peter Ciccariello
Image - http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/
Word - http://poemsfromprovidence.blogspot.com/
Photography - http://uncommonvision.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

270. Joel Weishaus

"Reality Dreams" rewrite

Sun 14 Jan 2007

For the past few weeks I've been revising and redesigning "Reality Dreams," my autobiographical journal originally digitized around 1992-1994. Finished--if anything is ever finished--the work yesterday. It's a big piece of work, in 16 sections. As it is already in my archive, thought I'd send the link to a few lists and friends before it's forgotten: http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/cont-r.htm

-Joel

↑ Index

271. Alan Sondheim
No Sex (new videowork)
Sun 14 Jan 2007

No Sex

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_RyU0jfF99A (clearer version below)

The promise of no sex. I will not do sex again. I will not have nudity again in my texts. I will not mention body parts again. I will be perfect again. I will be newborn again. I will not characterize men or women again. I will not have sexual violence again in my texts. I will not have sexual activity again in my work. I will not have masturbation again in my work and will not have intercourse in my work. I am swamped with attention given to the sex, nudity, body parts, sexual violence, sexual activity, masturbation, and intercourse in my work. I am exhausted by sex. I am exhausted by televised sex, motion picture sex, photographed sex, dreamed sex, spoken sex, poetics of sex. I may work with dance and sex and dance-video and sex. I will not work with images of sexual violence. I will not do sexual violence. I have never done sexual violence. I have never done violence. I am frightened of violence. I am frightened by encounters with strangers. I am frightened of meetings in unaccustomed space. I will not write of violence in lonely place, forsaken places, ruined places. Ruins write my texts. Ruins do not write sex, do not write sexual violence. I am tired of being misunderstood. I am tired of playing the misunderstood boohoo little boy. I am tired of being the little boy who does no good. I am tired of being the misogynist who burns women at the stake, who burns men at the stake, who erects the stake, who burns children at the stake. I am tired of dumb organs and description of dumb organs. I will write politics without sex and politics without sexual violence and politics without sexual words and politics without words or actions that may be misunderstood. I will learn to be good. I will never be forgiven. I will learn to go on. I will learn to write again. I will learn to film again. I will learn sound and sight again. I will learn to dance.

Moving Her Body in Her Second Life

Today I revisited Second Life and gave new Life to my Avatar and now Her Body moves just like I would move if I had a File called God.

God makes Dojoji move and God infuses Her with Life new-born, glorious Life, lovely in Conception and Deed. I cannot say enough about Her Appearance, but it will remain with me until the Rapture, when she will lead the Procession of Salvation, Holiest among the Holy, Saved among the Saved, New-Born among the New-Born.

http://www.asondheim.org/flop.mov

Yes, and Delicious with the Sweetness of the Nectar of the Lord. I would love Her Strong, were it not for my Love of God; I would worship Her, were it not for Strong Salvation. She shall Ascend to the Holy of Holies; She will draw me up; I will not be far behind. For She accords me the Grace of Creation, just as I accord her the Wager of Sin.

Together we shudder at the very Sight of the Eternal, We Love each Other so very much!

↑ Index

272. Patrick Herron
On Wednesday it's DQoNCkhpIGFsbCwNCg Day!
Sun 14 Jan 2007

Hey!

LOKAqCAgYXQgMzA4IEJvd2VyeSAoan?

I thought it was GlmIHlvdSBjYW4gY2F0Y2ggc29tZSBvZiB0aGlzLg0KQW5kIHRvIHNl LOKAqCAgYXQgMzA4IEJvd2VyeSASan but maybe I got it a little off.

Date: Sat, 13 Jan 2007 17:39:19 -0500
From: [redacted]
Subject: Sunday 14th Book Party; Performances Wed. & Fri. 17th, 19th at Vision series

↑ Index

273. mIEKAL aND
Alice Coltrane Dies
Sun 14 Jan 2007

Alice Coltrane Dies At 69
Jazz Pianist Was Also A Spiritual Leader
January 14, 2007
Los Angeles Times

http://www.courant.com/news/nationworld/hc-coltrane0114.artjan14,0,2553918.story

LOS ANGELES -- Alice Coltrane, the jazz performer and composer who was inextricably linked with the adventurous musical improvisations of her late husband, the legendary saxophonist John Coltrane, has died. She was 69.

Coltrane died Friday at West Hills Hospital in Los Angeles, according to family friends. She had been in frail health for some time and died of respiratory failure.

Though known to many for her contributions to jazz and early new age music, Coltrane, a convert to Hinduism, was also a significant spiritual leader and founded the Vedantic Center, a spiritual commune now in Agoura, Calif. A guru of growing repute, she also served as the swami of the San Fernando Valley's first Hindu Temple, in Chatsworth.

For much of the past 40 years, she was also the keeper of her husband's musical legacy, managing his archive and estate. Her husband, one of the pivotal figures in the history of jazz, died of liver disease on July 17, 1967, at the age of 40.

A pianist and organist, Alice Coltrane was noted for her astral compositions and for bringing the harp onto the jazz bandstand. Her last performances came in the fall, when she participated in an abbreviated tour that included stops in New York and San Francisco, playing with her saxophonist son, Ravi.

She was born Alice McLeod in Detroit on Aug. 27, 1937, into a family with deep musical roots. Anna, her mother, sang and played piano in the Baptist church choir. Alice's brother Ernie Farrow was a bassist who played professionally with groups led by saxophonist Yusef Lateef and vibes player Terry Gibbs.

Alice began her musical education at the age of 7, learning classical piano. Her early musical career included performances in church groups and as well as in top-flight jazz ensembles led by Lateef, guitarist Kenny Burrell and saxophonist Lucky Thompson.

After studying jazz piano briefly in Paris, she moved to New York and joined Gibbs' quartet.

She met John Coltrane in 1963 while playing an engagement with Gibbs' group at Birdland in New York City.

"He saw something in her that was beautiful," Gibbs, who has often taken credit for introducing the two, told the Los Angeles Times.

She left Gibbs' band to marry Coltrane and began performing with her husband's band in 1965, replacing pianist McCoy Tyner.

↑ Index

274. Lisa Jarnot
private workshop in queens, ny
Sun 14 Jan 2007

Dear List Folks,

I'm teaching a private workshop/reading group (focused around Pound, Stein, and Joyce) and am looking for 2 more students to fill the class.

class is in sunnyside, queens, tuesday nights, 7-9 pm, for twelve weeks beginning february 6th.

i'd appreciate it if you could forward this to anyone who might be interested.

thanks,
Lisa Jarnot

↑ Index

275. Deborah Feinsmith (Reich)
Re: private workshop in queens, ny
Sun 14 Jan 2007

Dear Lisa Jarnot, I've read your work and you are one talented lady. I am probably 3 times the age of anyone in your class, but if you have space, I'm immature anyway. Please let me know whether you want some sample poems. Deborah.

This is brief description: Poems have appeared in Green Mountain Review, Frank, Washington Review, Barrow Street, La Petite Zine and American Letters & Commentary. I have been a resident at the Millay Colony in Austerlitz, NY and a finalist in PublishingOnlineâ€™s poetry contest judged by Heather McHugh. My collection Circus of One was shortlisted for the 2002 Four Way Books Intro Award, and the 2002 New England/New York prize from Alice James Books and, under the title Naked Tables, was a runner-up for the Marsh Hawk Press competition in 2004. One Tooth & a Kind Heart is the collection I'm sending around now. I'm also sending around a chapbook entitled Blessed Underarm. I work as a proofreader for Marvel Comics.

↑ Index

276. Deborah Feinsmith (Reich)
PLEASE DELETE PREVIOUS ENTRY BY [redacted]
Sun 14 Jan 2007

--part1_53e.dcad7fd.32dbb4f2_boundary

PLEASE DELETE. I AM SO EMBARRASSED TO HAVE SENT THIS ALL OVER!!!!

--part1_53e.dcad7fd.32dbb4f2_boundary

Content-Language: en

Dear Lisa Jarnot, I've read your work and you are one talented lady. I am probably 3 times the age of anyone in your class, but if you have space, I'm immature anyway. Please let me know whether you want some sample poems. Deborah.

This is brief description: Poems have appeared in Green Mountain Review, Frank, Washington Review, Barrow Street, La Petite Zine and American Letters & Commentary. I have been a resident at the Millay Colony in Austerlitz, NY and a finalist in PublishingOnlineâ€™s poetry contest judged by Heather McHugh. My collection Circus of One was shortlisted for the 2002 Four Way Books Intro Award, and the 2002 New England/New York prize from Alice James Books and, under the title Naked Tables, was a runner-up for the Marsh Hawk Press competition in 2004. One Tooth & a Kind Heart is the collection I'm sending around now. I'm also sending around a chapbook entitled Blessed Underarm. I work as a proofreader for Marvel Comics.

--part1_53e.dcad7fd.32dbb4f2_boundary--

↑ Index

277. elen
Alice Coltrane Passes at 69
Sun 14 Jan 2007

Sad, sad news. I had the privilege of seeing her perform late last year during the San Francisco jazz festival - one of the most memorable concerts I've ever seen. She and her son Ravi played together - along with John Coltrane's original bassist and drummer. They ended the show with a tribute to Coltrane. Everyone stood up. Many were crying.

If you've never listened to Alice Coltrane's harp and piano playing, you must. Her music is galactic, necessary.

-elen

http://www.latimes.com/news/printedition/california/la-me-coltrane14jan14,1,1300733.story?coll=la-headlines-pe-california

Alice Coltrane, 69; performer, composer of jazz and New Age music; spiritual leader
By Jon Thurber, Times Staff Writer
January 14, 2007

Alice Coltrane, the jazz performer and composer who was inextricably linked with the adventurous musical improvisations of her late husband, legendary saxophonist John Coltrane, has died. She was 69.

Coltrane died Friday at West Hills Hospital and Medical Center in West Hills, according to an announcement from the family's publicist. She had been in frail health for some time and died of respiratory failure.

Though known to many for her contributions to jazz and early New Age music, Coltrane, a convert to Hinduism, was also a significant spiritual leader and founded the Vedantic Center, a spiritual commune now located in Agoura Hills. A guru of growing repute, she also served as the swami of the San Fernando Valley's first Hindu temple, in Chatsworth.

For much of the last nearly 40 years, she was also the keeper of her husband's musical legacy, managing his archive and estate. Her husband, one of the pivotal figures in the history of jazz, died of liver disease July 17, 1967, at the age of 40.

A pianist and organist, Alice Coltrane was noted for her astral compositions and for bringing the harp onto the jazz bandstand. Her last performances came in the fall, when she participated in an abbreviated tour that included stops in New York and San Francisco, playing with her saxophonist son, Ravi.

She was born Alice McLeod in Detroit on Aug. 27, 1937, into a family with deep musical roots. Anna, her mother, sang and played piano in the Baptist church choir. Alice's half brother Ernie Farrow was a bassist who played professionally with groups led by saxophonist Yusef Lateef and vibes player Terry Gibbs.

Alice began her musical education at age 7, learning classical piano. Her early musical career included performances in church groups as well as in top-flight jazz ensembles led by Lateef, guitarist Kenny Burrell and saxophonist Lucky Thompson.

After studying jazz piano briefly in Paris, she moved to New York and joined Gibbs' quartet.

"As fascinating - and influential - as her later music was, it tended to obscure the fact that she had started out as a solid, bebop-oriented pianist," critic Don Heckman told The Times on Saturday. "I remember hearing, and jamming with, her in the early '60s at photographer W. Eugene Smith's loft in Manhattan. At that time she played with a brisk, rhythmic style immediately reminiscent of Bud Powell.

"Like a few other people who'd heard her either at the loft or during her early '60s gigs with Terry Gibbs, I kept hoping she'd take at least one more foray into the bebop style she played so well," he said.

She met her future husband in 1963 while playing an engagement with Gibbs' group at Birdland in New York City.

"He saw something in her that was beautiful," Gibbs, who has often taken credit for introducing the two, told The Times on Saturday. "They were both very shy in a way. It was beautiful to see them fall in love."

Gibbs called her "the nicest person I ever worked with. She was a real lady."

She left Gibbs' band to marry Coltrane and began performing with his band in the mid-1960s, replacing pianist McCoy Tyner. She developed a style noted for its power and freedom and played tour dates with Coltrane's group in San Francisco, New York and Tokyo.

She would say her husband's musical impact was enormous.

"John showed me how to play fully," she told interviewer Pauline Rivelli and Robert Levin in comments published in "The Black Giants."

"In other words, he'd teach me not to stay in one spot and play in one chord pattern. 'Branch out, open up . play your instrument entirely.' . John not only taught me how to explore, but to play thoroughly and completely."

After his death, she devoted herself to raising their children. Musically, she continued to play within his creative vision, surrounding herself with such like-minded performers as saxophonists Pharoah Sanders and Joe Henderson.

Early albums under her name, including "A Monastic Trio," and "Ptah the El Daoud," were greeted with critical praise for her compositions and playing. "Ptah the El Daoud" featured her sweeping harp flourishes, a sound not commonly heard in jazz recordings. Her last recording, "Translinear Light," came in 2004. It was her first jazz album in 26 years.

Through the 1970s, she continued to explore Eastern religions, traveling to India to study with Swami Satchidananda, the founder of the Integral Yoga Institute.

Upon her return she started a store-front ashram in San Francisco but soon moved it to Woodland Hills in 1975. Located in the Santa Monica Mountains since the early 1980s, the ashram is a 48-acre compound where devotees concentrate on prayer and meditation.

Known within her religious community by her Sanskrit name, Turiyasangitananda, Coltrane focused for much of the last 25 years on composing and recording devotional music such as Hindu chants, hymns and melodies for meditation. She also wrote books, including "Monumental Ethernal," a kind of spiritual biography, and "Endless Wisdom," which she once told a Times reporter contained hundreds of scriptures divinely revealed to her.

In 2001 she helped found the John Coltrane Foundation to encourage jazz performances and award scholarships to young musicians.

In addition to Ravi, she is survived by another son, Oren, who plays guitar and alto sax; a daughter, Michelle, who is a singer; and five grandchildren. Her son John Coltrane Jr. died in an automobile accident in 1982.

↑ Index

278. Vernon Frazer
Re: Alice Coltrane Dies
Sun 14 Jan 2007

Thanks for posting this, mIEKAL. It is sad. Although I didn't follow her music very much after Trane's death, I enjoyed what she did with his last group, which left a lot of other people in the dust. I like music that rearranges my central nervous system through ecstatic experience.

It's curious the piece came from the Hartford Courant. Despite my issues with the city, it's home to a lot of good jazz musicians and knowledgeable listeners. The notice didn't appear in today's Sun-Sentinel.

Vernon
http://vernonfrazer.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of mIEKAL aND
Sent: Sunday, January 14, 2007 9:24 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Alice Coltrane Dies

Alice Coltrane Dies At 69
Jazz Pianist Was Also A Spiritual Leader
January 14, 2007
Los Angeles Times

http://www.courant.com/news/nationworld/hccoltrane0114.artjan14,0,2553918.story

LOS ANGELES -- Alice Coltrane, the jazz performer and composer who was inextricably linked with the adventurous musical improvisations of her late husband, the legendary saxophonist John Coltrane, has died. She was 69.

Coltrane died Friday at West Hills Hospital in Los Angeles, according to family friends. She had been in frail health for some time and died of respiratory failure.

Though known to many for her contributions to jazz and early new age music, Coltrane, a convert to Hinduism, was also a significant spiritual leader and founded the Vedantic Center, a spiritual commune now in Agoura, Calif. A guru of growing repute, she also served as the swami of the San Fernando Valley's first Hindu Temple, in Chatsworth.

For much of the past 40 years, she was also the keeper of her husband's musical legacy, managing his archive and estate. Her husband, one of the pivotal figures in the history of jazz, died of liver disease on July 17, 1967, at the age of 40.

A pianist and organist, Alice Coltrane was noted for her astral compositions and for bringing the harp onto the jazz bandstand. Her last performances came in the fall, when she participated in an abbreviated tour that included stops in New York and San Francisco, playing with her saxophonist son, Ravi.

She was born Alice McLeod in Detroit on Aug. 27, 1937, into a family with deep musical roots. Anna, her mother, sang and played piano in the Baptist church choir. Alice's brother Ernie Farrow was a bassist who played professionally with groups led by saxophonist Yusef Lateef and vibes player Terry Gibbs.

Alice began her musical education at the age of 7, learning classical piano. Her early musical career included performances in church groups and as well as in top-flight jazz ensembles led by Lateef, guitarist Kenny Burrell and saxophonist Lucky Thompson.

After studying jazz piano briefly in Paris, she moved to New York and joined Gibbs' quartet.

She met John Coltrane in 1963 while playing an engagement with Gibbs' group at Birdland in New York City.

"He saw something in her that was beautiful," Gibbs, who has often taken credit for introducing the two, told the Los Angeles Times.

She left Gibbs' band to marry Coltrane and began performing with her husband's band in 1965, replacing pianist McCoy Tyner.

↑ Index

279. Christine Hamm

Re: private workshop in queens, ny

Sun 14 Jan 2007

I don't know -- sounds like nothing to be ashamed of.

Christine Hamm

---

www.christinehamm.org

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news

↑ Index

280. Simon DeDeo
rhubarb is susan
Sun 14 Jan 2007

Three more updates at the end of the week: reviews of work by Sarah Trott, Anne Elezabeth Pluto (both in there journal) and Dan Chiasson (in the Boston Review.)

http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/
http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/sarah-trott-from-planned.html http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/anne-elezabeth-pluto-prolo_116880420487079083.html
http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/dan-chiasson-pliny-i.html

Thanks for tuning in, and have a good Sunday,

Simon

↑ Index

281. ALDON L NIELSEN
Re: Alice Coltrane Passes at 69
Sun 14 Jan 2007

I have a recording of the LA performance of that Coltrane tribute concert featuring Alice and Ravi -- They were doing great work -- giovanni singleton visited Alice Coltrane's ashram last year -- maybe she'll write something about it soon --

On Sun, 14 Jan 2007 08:59:17 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:

Sad, sad news. I had the privilege of seeing her perform late last year during the San Francisco jazz festival - one of the most memorable concerts I've ever seen. She and her son Ravi played together - along with John Coltrane's original bassist and drummer. They ended the show with a tribute to Coltrane. Everyone stood up. Many were crying.

If you've never listened to Alice Coltrane's harp and piano playing, you must. Her music is galactic, necessary.

-elen

http://www.latimes.com/news/printedition/california/la-me-coltrane14jan14,1,1300733.story?coll=la-headlines-pe-california

Alice Coltrane, 69; performer, composer of jazz and New Age music; spiritual leader
By Jon Thurber, Times Staff Writer
January 14, 2007

Alice Coltrane, the jazz performer and composer who was inextricably linked with the adventurous musical improvisations of her late husband, legendary saxophonist John Coltrane, has died. She was 69.

Coltrane died Friday at West Hills Hospital and Medical Center in West Hills, according to an announcement from the family's publicist. She had been in frail health for some time and died of respiratory failure.

Though known to many for her contributions to jazz and early New Age music, Coltrane, a convert to Hinduism, was also a significant spiritual leader and founded the Vedantic Center, a spiritual commune now located in Agoura Hills. A guru of growing repute, she also served as the swami of the San Fernando Valley's first Hindu temple, in Chatsworth.

For much of the last nearly 40 years, she was also the keeper of her husband's musical legacy, managing his archive and estate. Her husband, one of the pivotal figures in the history of jazz, died of liver disease July 17, 1967, at the age of 40.

A pianist and organist, Alice Coltrane was noted for her astral compositions and for bringing the harp onto the jazz bandstand. Her last performances came in the fall, when she participated in an abbreviated tour that included stops in New York and San Francisco, playing with her saxophonist son, Ravi.

She was born Alice McLeod in Detroit on Aug. 27, 1937, into a family with deep musical roots. Anna, her mother, sang and played piano in the Baptist church choir. Alice's half brother Ernie Farrow was a bassist who played professionally with groups led by saxophonist Yusef Lateef and vibes player Terry Gibbs.

Alice began her musical education at age 7, learning classical piano. Her early musical career included performances in church groups as well as in top-flight jazz ensembles led by Lateef, guitarist Kenny Burrell and saxophonist Lucky Thompson.

After studying jazz piano briefly in Paris, she moved to New York and joined Gibbs' quartet.

"As fascinating - and influential - as her later music was, it tended to obscure the fact that she had started out as a solid, bebop-oriented pianist," critic Don Heckman told The Times on Saturday. "I remember hearing, and jamming with, her in the early '60s at photographer W. Eugene Smith's loft in Manhattan. At that time she played with a brisk, rhythmic style immediately reminiscent of Bud Powell.

"Like a few other people who'd heard her either at the loft or during her early '60s gigs with Terry Gibbs, I kept hoping she'd take at least one more foray into the bebop style she played so well," he said.

She met her future husband in 1963 while playing an engagement with Gibbs' group at Birdland in New York City.

"He saw something in her that was beautiful," Gibbs, who has often taken credit for introducing the two, told The Times on Saturday. "They were both very shy in a way. It was beautiful to see them fall in love."

Gibbs called her "the nicest person I ever worked with. She was a real lady."

She left Gibbs' band to marry Coltrane and began performing with his band in the mid-1960s, replacing pianist McCoy Tyner. She developed a style noted for its power and freedom and played tour dates with Coltrane's group in San Francisco, New York and Tokyo.

She would say her husband's musical impact was enormous.

"John showed me how to play fully," she told interviewer Pauline Rivelli and Robert Levin in comments published in "The Black Giants."

"In other words, he'd teach me not to stay in one spot and play in one chord pattern. 'Branch out, open up . play your instrument entirely.' . John not only taught me how to explore, but to play thoroughly and completely."

After his death, she devoted herself to raising their children. Musically, she continued to play within his creative vision, surrounding herself with such like-minded performers as saxophonists Pharoah Sanders and Joe Henderson.

Early albums under her name, including "A Monastic Trio," and "Ptah the El Daoud," were greeted with critical praise for her compositions and playing. "Ptah the El Daoud" featured her sweeping harp flourishes, a sound not commonly heard in jazz recordings. Her last recording, "Translinear Light," came in 2004. It was her first jazz album in 26 years.

Through the 1970s, she continued to explore Eastern religions, traveling to India to study with Swami Satchidananda, the founder of the Integral Yoga Institute.

Upon her return she started a store-front ashram in San Francisco but soon moved it to Woodland Hills in 1975. Located in the Santa Monica Mountains since the early 1980s, the ashram is a 48-acre compound where devotees concentrate on prayer and meditation.

Known within her religious community by her Sanskrit name, Turiyasangitananda, Coltrane focused for much of the last 25 years on composing and recording devotional music such as Hindu chants, hymns and melodies for meditation. She also wrote books, including "Monumental Ethernal," a kind of spiritual biography, and "Endless Wisdom," which she once told a Times reporter contained hundreds of scriptures divinely revealed to her.

In 2001 she helped found the John Coltrane Foundation to encourage jazz performances and award scholarships to young musicians.

In addition to Ravi, she is survived by another son, Oren, who plays guitar and alto sax; a daughter, Michelle, who is a singer; and five grandchildren. Her son John Coltrane Jr. died in an automobile accident in 1982.

<<

roster is predominantly "male" without her), hopefully work that can resonate to the chord of the issue, which is somewhat dark. Further, all work will be kept for potential review for next issue 07. So, this is also a call for work for issue 07.

Best wishes,
Jesse Crockett

↑ Index

283. Joel Weishaus
Fw: [asle] Plight of the Polar Bears - Op Ed
Sun 14 Jan 2007

----- Original Message -----
From: Roxana Robinson
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, January 14, 2007 7:08 AM
Subject: [asle] Plight of the Polar Bears - Op Ed

Philadelphia Inquirer Op Ed

http://www.philly.com/mld/inquirer/news/editorial/16454092.htm

↑ Index

284. Alan Sondheim
VirtualBody video and text
Mon 15 Jan 2007

VirtualBody

Please check http://nikuko.blogspot.com for new video of the final solution of the virtual body.

Also at http://nikuko.blogspot.com some examples of language manipulation (using these for an online seminar).

- Alan

↑ Index

285. Dodie Bellamy
Fwd: READING: DODIE BELLAMY & ROBERTO TEJADA at City Lights Bookstore -- 1/16/07
Mon 15 Jan 2007

> To: Jocelyn Saidenberg <[redacted]>
> Subject: READING: DODIE BELLAMY & ROBERTO TEJADA at City Lights Bookstore -- 1/16/07

> From: Jocelyn Saidenberg <[redacted]>
> Date: Wed, 10 Jan 2007 23:09:22 -0800
> X-ELNK-Trace:
> c4729075ddccc84043d71fb08c54a25c416dc04816f3191c375468f963c39fa3477c83
> 7ecc1b68ab3d6282050071e15c350badd9bab72f9c350badd9bab72f9c
> X-Originating-IP: 67.101.97.23
>
> Dear All,
>
> KRUPSKAYA Books is pleased to announce the publication of two new > AMAZING books, Dodie Bellamy's Academonia and Roberto Tejada's > Mirrors for Gold. Please come to City Lights Bookstore in San > Francisco to help celebrate! Details below.
>
> READING : TUESDAY, January 16, at 7:00 pm
> Dodie Bellamy and Roberto Tejada
> City Lights Bookstore
> 261 Columbus Avenue at Broadway
> San Francisco, California
> Tel + [redacted]
> http://www.citylights.com/index.html
>
> Books will be available at the reading and can be ordered through > Small Press Distribution.
> More information is posted here:
>
> ACADEMONIA:
> http://www.spdbooks.org/Details.asp?BookID=1928650252
>
> MIRRORS for GOLD:
> http://www.spdbooks.org/Details.asp?BookID=1928650260
>
> Please distribute this announcement to all who might be interested.
> Thank you, x Jocelyn

↑ Index

286. Wystan Curnow

Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

Mon 15 Jan 2007

Gee, I've never met a new formalist; I'd avoid them if I were you. I read about nude formalists somewhere, and I've been a fan of the old Russian formalists. As applied to traditionally metered poetry the theory is quite easy, performance or hearing has to work between two templates, that of meter and that of the linguist's description of speech, and doing so requires some interpretative decision-making. This is where the practice of listening is crucial, which has to be learned in other ways. I'm not expert in how to do this, but songs are helpful and often students brings listening skills gained from their knowledge of music that can be applied to poetry, Wystan

---

From: UB Poetics discussion group on behalf of Jason Quackenbush
Sent: Sat 13/01/2007 10:36 a.m.
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question

I don't think it's conventional wisdom. I mean, it should be as the fact that there are multiple levels of stress seems completely obvious to me. But everytime i mention that traditional scansion doesn't make sense in English a bunch of new formalists seem to be lying in wait to tell me how completely wrong i am and what a terrible person i am for daring to challenge the notion that iambic pentameter is the most natural way in the world to write English languge poetry.

On Fri, 12 Jan 2007, Wystan Curnow wrote:

> Jason,your opinion re-levels of stress in English used to be/still is?conventional wisdom. It seemed a relatively new idea in the 1960s. Eireene,when it comes to teaching prosody in writing courses (or contemporary literature courses), the main question concerns sounds, the hearing of them, the shapes they take and what bearing they have on meaning. Some responses to that question might involve learning about hearing meters and scaning lines, but there's no necessity at all. Wystan
>
> ---
>
> From: UB Poetics discussion group on behalf of Jason Quackenbush
> Sent: Fri 12/01/2007 1:12 p.m.
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: rhythm 'n meter in poetry--a basic teaching/learning question
>
> no doubt i'll catch all sorts of flack for this, but being of the (it seems minority in poetry circles) opinion that there are multiple levels of stress in English, I think part of the problem a lot of people have in hearing meter is that when you tell them all syllables are stressed or unstressed and they get confused because you then have to tell them that syllables that sound stressed to them are actually unstressed, and that syllables that don't sound as stressed as others actually are stressed.
>
> which is what you get when you cling to archaic notions about the sounds of language that are borrowed from largely dead languages like Ancient Greek, Latin, and Anglo Saxon. I just don't see much purpose in trying to shoe-horn as complex a > language as English into such a simple rhythmic framework as is offered by the traditional foot and two value scansion of classical prosody.

>
> On Thu, 11 Jan 2007, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> does anyone have any advice about how to teach or learn about rhythm and meter? i tried all of that scansion business, pacing up and down in front of the class beating out rhythms and such and it was quite a disaster last year so i'm hoping to find something better--and ways for myself to learn more about this too. i've read and read about the subject, but does anyone have any good activities around the ideas of rhythm and poetry?

↑ Index

287. Tom Beckett

New at e-x-c-h-a-n-g-e-v-a-l-u-e-s

Mon 15 Jan 2007

New now at e-x-c-h-a-n-g-e-v-a-l-u-e-s: my Interview with Ernesto Priego. Check it out at:
http://willtoexchange.blogspot.com (http://willtoexchange.blogspot.com)

↑ Index

288. Adam Fieled

Interview: Eric Baus on PFS Post

Mon 15 Jan 2007

Check out an interview w award-winning Eric Baus, author of The To Sound, on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com.

Also, a first anniversary party for PFS & Stoning the Devil here:

http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com,

including a list of dozens of participants....

Cheap Talk? Check out Yahoo! Messenger's low PC-to-Phone call rates.

↑ Index

289. Dan Waber
ars poetica update
Mon 15 Jan 2007

The ars poetica project is well under way at:

http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/

Poems appeared last week by: Eileen Tabios (includng one with Nick Carbo), Sandy McIntosh, John Bloomberg Rissman, Sharon Harris, Gregory Betts, and Stephen Cain

Poems will appear this week by: Craig Czury, Alan Baker, Paul Dutton, and Jonathan Penton.

The ripples are spreading in the most delightful of ways, and there is no end in sight.

Enjoy,
Dan

↑ Index

290. vulture protein
The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
Mon 15 Jan 2007

Hello List,

Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the specifications of the form.

Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated!

Thanks!

Tony

↑ Index

291. Daniel Godston
Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
Mon 15 Jan 2007

For a comprehensive text, I'd recommend "The New Princeton Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics," and for a smaller tome I'd recommend "The Teachers & Writers Handbook of Poetic Forms," edited by Ron Padgett.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of vulture protein Sent: Monday, January 15, 2007 10:56 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?

Hello List,

Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the specifications of the form.

Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated!

Thanks!

Tony

↑ Index

292. Paul Nelson
Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
Mon 15 Jan 2007

> Hello List,
>
> Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the specifications of the form.
>
> Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated!
>
> Thanks!
>
> Tony

The Handbook of Poetic Forms - Teachers and Writer's Collaborative in NYC is quite good.

http://www.amazon.com/Teachers-Writers-Handbook-Poetic-Forms/dp/0915924609

Good luck.

Paul Nelson
Auburn, WA

↑ Index

293. Charles Baldwin
Re: Being hacked by pooch humpers and loving it.
Mon 15 Jan 2007

hee hee nicely done jason

>>> Jason Nelson <[redacted]> 01/13/07 12:15 AM >>>
Being hacked by pooch humpers and loving it.
http://www.secrettechnology.com/poochlove/doggy.html

As an artist I've made a breakthrough, of sorts. After having one of my little used art sites hacked then littered with strange codes, my subsequent clumsy "investigation" uncovered my rarely updated domain was listed as one of the top sites for such glorious search strings as Horsey, Beasty, Doggy humping/smexing/fudging (and other fun hobbies). While I initially felt violated and angry, I decided to use their code and google work against them, and I could just taste (maybe not taste) a new sticky fingered and dog smelling audience slobberingly waiting to experience my artwork. All 50,000 of the piggy boinkers. http://www.secrettechnology.com/poochlove/doggy.html

---
Any questions? Get answers on any topic at Yahoo! Answers. Try it now.

↑ Index

294. Tony Trigilio
Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
Mon 15 Jan 2007

Hey, Tony--

I'm really just seconding what Dan wrote, but I wanted to add that if you want the comprehensive, go with the Princeton book, and if you want the playful (and maybe more user-friendly or writerly), go with the Padgett book. I use both all the time, depending on context.

Best,
Tony

> Date:* Mon, 15 Jan 2007 10:56:05 -0600*
> Reply-To:* UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>*
> Sender:* UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>*
> From:* vulture protein <[redacted]>*
> Subject:* The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?*
> Content-Type:* text/plain; charset=ISO-8859-1; format=flowed*
> Content-Disposition:* inline*
>
> Hello List, Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on > poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the specifications of the form. Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated! Thanks! Tony

↑ Index

295. Eric Yost

Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?

Mon 15 Jan 2007

If you want a book that covers most forms and also addresses more issues in prosody, consider Mary Kinzie's _A Poet's Guide to Poetry_.

↑ Index

296. Sina Queyras

Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?

Mon 15 Jan 2007

I haven't found the perfect book on form, certainly not the definitive. I've tried Padgett and find it adequate, but not inspiring. Depending on the level of class/workshop texts that have essays and a wider range of samples are more effective. The Annie Finch/Katherine Varnes text is quite good in that respect.

Sina

> Hey, Tony--
>
> I'm really just seconding what Dan wrote, but I wanted to add that if you want the comprehensive, go with the Princeton book, and if you want the playful (and maybe more user-friendly or writerly), go with the Padgett book. I use both all the time, depending on context.
>
> Best,
> Tony
>
> Date:* Mon, 15 Jan 2007 10:56:05 -0600*
> Reply-To:* UB Poetics discussion group*
> <[redacted]>
> Sender:* UB Poetics discussion group*
> <[redacted]>
> From:* vulture protein <[redacted]>*
> Subject:* The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?*
> Content-Type:* text/plain; charset=ISO-8859-1; format=flowed*

> Content-Disposition:* inline*
>
> Hello List, Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the specifications of the form. Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated! Thanks! Tony

--
Sina Queyras
Visiting Assistant Professor
Department of English
Woodside Cottage
Haverford College
370 Lancaster Avenue
Haverford, PA 19041-1392
[redacted]

↑ Index

297. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
Mon 15 Jan 2007

---

http://www.pw.org/mag/dq_turco.htm

----- Original Message -----
From: "vulture protein" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, January 15, 2007 11:56 AM
Subject: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?

> Hello List,
>
> Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the specifications of the form.
>
> Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated!
>
> Thanks!
>
> Tony

↑ Index

298. vulture protein
Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
Mon 15 Jan 2007

Tony -

I looked at the Princeton book on Amazon and I definitely feel that is what I'm looking for. But I like your idea - I'll probably end up getting both, but I'll start off with the Princeton!

By the way - this is Tony Hooper. And yes I probably should have asked this question a long time ago, but I'm just getting around to it now!

I've been well - I'm still working for http://www.zzounds.com/ one of the perks being that I get great deals on gear. I started playing with a new band this month and that's been going great so far (I will of course let you know if we play any high profile venues...)

I mostly lurk on this listserve - It's a way (one of the ways) for me to keep up on what's going on in the poetry world. I've found many cool websites / resources because of this list, but a few people who post here can drive me crazy!

Thanks for the suggestions!

Tony

On 1/15/07, Tony Trigilio <[redacted]> wrote:
> Hey, Tony--
>
> I'm really just seconding what Dan wrote, but I wanted to add that if > you want the comprehensive, go with the Princeton book, and if you want > the playful (and maybe more user-friendly or writerly), go with the > Padgett book. I use both all the time, depending on context.
>
> Best,
> Tony
>
>
>
> > Date: Mon, 15 Jan 2007 10:56:05 -0600
> > Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> > Sender: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> > From: vulture protein <[redacted]>
> > Subject: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=ISO-8859-1; format=flowed
> > Content-Disposition: inline

> >
> > Hello List, Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on > > poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in > > this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the > > form, and the specifications of the form. Any suggestions would be > > kindly appreciated! Thanks! Tony
> >
>

↑ Index

299. Fulcrum Annual

Philip Nikolayev in Washington Jan 19

Mon 15 Jan 2007

Noon, January 19. Public Radio's "The Poet and the Poem" and the Goethe-Institut Washington present a reading by Philip Nikolayev premiering his new book of poems, Letters from Aldenderry, fresh from Salt. Venue: Goethe-Institut, 812 Seventh Street, NW, Washington DC. Tel: [redacted]. This event, introduced by Grace Cavalieri, celebrates the 30th anniversary of Public Radio's "The Poet and the Poem" feature. Free. The public is invited. More at http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/smp/1844712796.htm

↑ Index

300. Stephen Vincent

Lazar/Pak Poem Paintings!

Mon 15 Jan 2007

Suggest a visit to:

http://www.marciaweberartobjects.com/lazerpak.html

Where poet, Hank Lazar and artist, Pak, have a lovely series of 7 poem-paintings. I think it's very good work, pleasure-full, too.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

301. Catherine Daly

Merlene Murphy (poet, founder of telepoetics) hospitalized with lung cancer

Mon 15 Jan 2007

Merilene Murphy is in LA County Hospital and has been there since December 31. She has been diagnosed with lung cancer and is receiving radiation and chemotherapy. She will be transferred to Cedars-Sinai tomorrow morning.

LA County Hospital is at 1200 N. State St., LA CA 90033. The hospital number is [redacted]. She is in room 4715.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

302. William Allegrezza

FW: Series A--Odelius and Belz reading in Chicago

Mon 15 Jan 2007

Series A literary Reading.

Please come join us this coming Tuesday for the Series A reading series.

January 23, 7:00-8:00 p.m.
    Aaron Belz
    Kristy Odelius

All the readings will be held at the Hyde Park Art Center.
5020 S. Cornell Avenue
Chicago, IL

BYOB

For more information, please see http://www.moriapoetry.com/seriesa.html or call [redacted].

As our mailing list is rather small, please forward this not to anyone you think would be interested.

Aaron Belz has published poems in Fence, Fine Madness, Painted Bride Quarterly, Matter, Mudfish, and other places, and has new work forthcoming in Lit, The Hat, and Van Gogh's Ear. Of his book soon to be published by BlazeVOX, Denise Duhamel writes: "Aaron Belz is a gravely hilarious poet. The poems from The Bird Hoverer are part Discovery Channel, party History

Channel, part E!-his ferocious intelligence, his love of glitz, and his wry take on relationships (both human and animal) are irresistible. Belz's voice is bold, wise, inimitable."

Kristy Odelius is a poet and Assistant Professor of English at North Park University (Chicago, IL) where she teaches poetry and 19th century British literature. She is a co-founder of Near South, a Chicago-based journal of innovative writing. Her poems, essays and reviews have appeared or are forthcoming in Notre Dame Review, Chicago Review, Combo, Versal, ACM, Pavement Saw, La Petite Zine, Diagram and others.

Best,

Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

303. Sheila Murphy
SUGAR MULE DOUBLE ISSUE: TEXTUAL COLLABORATION
Mon 15 Jan 2007

SUGAR MULE is pleased and proud to announce a special double issue #26: An Anthology of Collaborations, guest edited by Sheila E. Murphy. Click on www.sugarmule.com and click on “current issue” (#26) to find a large and diverse gathering of textual collaborative writing. The issue, to be released as a print anthology in May, 2007, features an introduction by Murphy and work by the following writers:

- Mary Rising Higgins and George Kalamaras
- Maria Damon and mIEKAL aND
- Natalie Basinski and Michael Basinski
- Robert Garlitz and Rupert Loydell
- John M. Bennett and Jim Leftwich
- John Crouse and Jim Leftwich
- Luke Kennard and Rupert M Loydell
- Dan Waber and Jennifer Hill-Kaucher
- J.S. Murnet
- Penn Kemp and Gloria Alvernaz Mulcahy
- Alan Halsey and Jesse Glass
- Nico Vassilakis and Geof Huth
- John M. Bennett and Geof Huth
- Bob Grumman and Geof Huth
- Geof Huth and Bob Grumman
- Nick Carbo and Eileen Tabios
- Eileen Tabios with David Baptiste-Chirot
- Vernon Frazer and Michelle Greenblatt

- John M. Bennett and K.S. Ernst
- Jim Leftwich and Jukka-Pekka Kervinen
- John M. Bennett and Stacey Allam
- Bob Brueckl and Jukka-Pekka Kervinen
- erica kaufman, Anny Ballardini and kari edwards
- Steve Dalachinsky and Jim Leftwich
- Scott Macleod, Jukka-Pekka Kervinen and Michelle Greenblatt

Scott Macleod and Jukka-Pekka Kervinen
Mark Young and Martin Edmond
Nico Vassilakis and Crystal Curry
Peter Ganick and Jukka-Pekka Kervinen
Bob Grumman and Geof Huth
Nico Vassilakis and Robert Mittenthal
John Crouse and Jukka-Pekka Kervinen Michelle Greenblatt and Tom Taylor
Jim Leftwich and Andrew Topel
Susan McMaster and Penn Kemp
David Baratier and Sean Karns
Mackenzie Carignan and Scott Glassman
Frances Presley and Tilla Brading
Maria Damon, mIEKAL aND, jUStin!katKO
Tom Beckett and Thomas Fink

↑ Index

304. Dodie Bellamy

two more Dodie Bellamy events this week

Mon 15 Jan 2007

Thursday, January 18, 7:30 pm

Reading:

Jennifer Natalya Fink (Burn, V)

with Dodie Bellamy (Academonia, Pink Steam)

Books, Inc.

2275 Market Street, San Francisco
Phone: [redacted]
URL: www.booksinc.net

Opening night at the Small Press Traffic "Poets Theater" festival:

* * * O R G A S M * * *

Friday, January 19

7:30pm Arrive early!

Written by Dodie Bellamy

Directed by Margaret Tedesco

*  * with a star-studded cast * ** *

* Siobhan Aluvalot
* John Koch
* Ronald Palmer
* Marcus Ewert
* Scout Festa
* Raul deNieves

Video by Margaret Tedesco

Live music by *David Buuck

Costumes by Siobhan Aluvalot and Raul deNieves

California College of Arts (Timken Hall)
San Francisco Campus
1111 Eighth Street (at Irwin)

$10 -a benefit for Small Press Traffic

5 other short fabu plays will also be presented that evening

↑ Index

305. Dan Waber
Cross Media Issue at UnlikelyStories.org
Mon 15 Jan 2007

Forwarding this along from Jonathan Penton (plus a note from me at the end):

Despite our best intentions, The Cross-Media Issue (guest edited by Dan Waber) at http://www.unlikelystories.org/ has been released on time, and includes:

syrupin w/9 letters & 5 spaces by mIEKAL aND & Lyx Ish Song Shapes by Jim Andrews
Jim Andrews reviews Doom 3
Five Spoken Word Visual Poems by The Be Blank Consort
Green by Tantra Bensko
Two Excepts from The Cyborg Opera by Christian Bök
The Poet's View by Mairéad Byrne Offerings by Holly Crawford
Four Spoken Word Poems by Barbara DeCesare

Missing by Martha L. Deed
Two Songs by Dulabomber
Seven Visual Poems by Paul Dutton
Red by Amanda Earl
Alphaglyphs by endwar
I STALKED MARTHA STEWART! by Vernon Frazer
Cross-Media by Michael Harold Three AVATAR Sketches by Sharon Harris
Bin Badder by Pete Hindle
In Germania, The Portuguese Did Sing by Geof Huth
Snowglyphs by Geof Huth
This Is Your Final Nitris by Adeena Karasick
Vedic Space, String Theory, and the Eternal Knot by Karl Kempton Graffiti by Márton Koppány
As You by Donna Kuhn
Seven Visual Poems by Janan Leikazu
Two Visual Poems by Kaz Maslanka
Five Visual Poems by Sean McCluskey Memory Tables by Gil McElroy
Twelve Digital Poems by Marko Niemi
I Don't Want to Go to Nashville by Rupert Owen and Snuffbox Films
Once More Around the Sun: a 2007 calendar by W. Bradford Paley
American Flact by Alan Semerdjian
Two Visual Poems by Spiel
In Other Words by Nico Vassilakis
Three Blogger-code Visual Poems by Ted Warnell
Five Visual Poems by Derek White

I'm still in the middle of webmastering the upcoming issue of BigBridge.org, so I am behind on all correspondence. Thank you for understanding.

--
Jonathan Penton
http://www.unlkelystories.org

To which I would add a note of personal thanks to Jonathan for inviting me to guest edit this issue, and also to each of the contributors for the giving me the pleasure of presenting some of the most exciting and interesting work being done today in any field.

Enjoy,
Dan

↑ Index

306. Laura Winton
Re: beggins the answer - why perform
Mon 15 Jan 2007

I think an interesting subpart to the question is why perform where you perform? Who are you hoping to reach? What are you hoping to do with the material?

There's something very great about re-envisioning words on a page for performance--to be read with music, with multiple voices, with video, or just as a straightforward reading. Readings encourage collaborations. They encourage face to face interactions, which many poets and writers I know consider an important value in this world of disembodied work posted in cyberspace or published in books. They encourage you to encounter people who do read your poetry, who don't read your poetry, who read other poetry but not yours, or who never read poetry. They give you the chance to talk to these people about what they think about poetry and what they think poetry is and why it is (or is not) important to you and them. In short, the open up dialogues that might not otherwise ever happen. And even if they don't open up a dialogue between you and the audience, who knows what gets talked about after the reading? Two people who came to your reading together leave with a shared experience they will likely discuss. Further, if you get out of the bookstores, coffee shops and art galleries, you can almost always read your work to people that would not necessarily go out and buy poetry and you can turn people on to poetry that way by reading it outloud, as well as by integrating it into every day life or into other spaces where people aren't expecting to encounter poetry.

I mean, it's the same with all live media. Why go to the theatre rather than watch a movie? Why go to a live concert rather than buy a record? There's a shared experience, an alchemy of bodies, a timber of voice and interaction of humans that mediated forms don't allow. It's not merely a "reading" of your work, it's an entirely different form of what you've taken the time to create and an entirely different way of sharing it with the world.

IMHO.

-----Original Message-----
From: cralan kelder [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Friday, January 12, 2007 3:40 AM
Subject: beggins the answer - why perform

hey patrick, yeah,

ok, so why not change the thread to begging the answer,
because i am still wondering what about performing, who is it for,

for instance the MLA readings, and the posting to this list about how it might be more fun if we just showed up and talked to each other.

like at gallery openings when everybody shows up to look at who else is there, not the art.

what do you think? do you perform? who is it for, you
or the audience? IF its for them what do you owe them

On 1/11/07 6:30 PM, "vulture protein" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Every morning I'm amazed that people are still contributing to this thread.
>
> On 1/11/07, Patrick Dillon <[redacted]> wrote:
>> > I am hesitant to point out the obvious here, but for an example of "begging
>> > the question", check out the wikipedia
>> > entry<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Begging_the_question>.
>> >
>> >
>> > I have been conscious of this phrase and its misuse since a long diatribe
>> by >> > one of my professors. He referred to its misuse as one of his pet peeves.
>> It >> > seems people often say "begs the question" when they mean "raises the >> > question."
>> >
>> > Patrick Dillon
>> >

↑ Index

307. Laura Winton
Re: begging the beguine
Mon 15 Jan 2007

For that matter, thinking that you have something others should read also takes a massive ego . . . putting any creation of yours out into the world and thinking others would or should care is all of the same impulse, n'est pas? That gets to the whole question of why we create at all???

Is this merely a lesson of the internet? Doesn't the barrage of new books at the front table of Barnes & Noble (paid for by Random House), the new releases at Tower Records (probably paid for by some record label), etc. etc. etc. confirm that impulse?

Fluffy

> Just to think that you have > something others should hear takes a massive ego (one of the great lessons of the Internet). I suppose the audience will confirm or disprove that.

↑ Index

308. michelle detorie
WOMB POETRY VOLUME ONE IS LIVE
Mon 15 Jan 2007

~~Womb Poetry Vol.1 : Hives & Covens~~ http://www.wombpoetry.com/dedicated in memory to kari edwards

* t h r u m * <http://www.wombpoetry.com/hives.html> : kari edwards : Eileen Tabios : Barbara Jane Reyes : Elizabeth Treadwell : Ann Bogle : : Alison Cimino :Susan B.A. Somers-Willett : Amy King : Kristy Bowen : Julie Choffel : : J.B. Rowell : Ebony Golden : Jenna Cardinale : Juliet Cook : Susan Morrison-Kilfoyle : : Holaday Mason : Toti O'Brien : Jessica Schneider : Karen McBurney : Sunnylyn Thibodeaux : : Sarah Mangold : Meagan Evans : Jennifer Bartlett : Marcia Arrieta : Michele Miller : : Priscilla Atkins : Anne Elezebeth Pluto : Marie Buck : Michalle Gould : Anne Heide : : Susan Meyers : Melissa Eleftherion : Susan Settlemyre Williams : J. Elizabeth Clark :

* s p a r k l e * <http://www.wombpoetry.com/hives.html> <http://www.wombpoetry.com/hives.html>

: Danielle Pafunda : Kathryn Miller : Julia Drescher : k. lorraine graham : Karen McBurney : : Michelle Caplan : Marcia Arrieta : Ashley Smith : Annette Sugden : Christine Bruness :

* c h i m e * <http://www.wombpoetry.com/hives.html>

: a chapbook by Julia Drescher :

Enjoy!
Happy New Year!

Best, Michelle Detorie

--
~~W_O_M_B~~
http://www.wombpoetry.com

--

~~W_O_M_B~~
wombpoetry.blogspot.com

↑ Index

309. amy king
Happy Martin Luther King Day!
Mon 15 Jan 2007

Happy Martin Luther King Day -- a la James Baldwin:

"White people in this country will have quite enough to do in learning how to accept and love themselves and each other, and when they have achieved this -- which will not be tomorrow and may very well be never -- the Negro problem will no longer exist, for it will no longer be needed." (Ticket 340)

Baldwin believed that "whoever debases others is debasing himself" (Ticket 369).

--from The Fire This Time: James Baldwin and the Civil Rights Movement [http://leo.stcloudstate.edu/kaleidoscope/volume4/fire.html]

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

310. Chris Stroffolino
Rebegging (fluffy) band new brag
Mon 15 Jan 2007

---

thanks for sharing these thoughts...feelings....words...

i like that these words don't seem to approach the subject judgmentally (or, if so, only by judging the impulse to judge...)

what is the feeling of "a massive ego" anyway?

something to be lost in the process/product of creation?
something to be found (and/or gained) in said process?
or, sometimes, both simulatanously?
I wonder if I've been trying to articulate something like the

"poetics of James Brown"
off and on since boxing day eve-eve,
James Brown's relation to "the massive ego?'
James Brown, as a verb as much as a noun, even to himself...
to DO the "James Brown"
and the more strictly speaking "poetic" analogues or references of same...
"how can we tell the dancer from the dance" etc...

or Whitman's "massive ego"---so massive it is also on another level
an impersonal force
(not merely "no ideas but in things"), but relational, dramatic, so-called 'eastern'
notions of the self---- ah, some may need to call it anti-intellectual--in Brown's case-- but "Think" from the early 60s can be as intellectual as any Bob Dylan or Stravinski....Ashbery..

just some rudimentary notes right now...
more later...
perhaps 'elsewhere...'

Chris

On Jan 15, 2007, at 2:10 PM, Laura Winton wrote:

> For that matter, thinking that you have something others should > read also > takes a massive ego . . . putting any creation of yours out into > the world
> and thinking others would or should care is all of the same
> impulse, n'est
> pas? That gets to the whole question of why we create at all???
>
> Is this merely a lesson of the internet? Doesn't the barrage of new > books at
> the front table of Barnes & Noble (paid for by Random House), the new > releases at Tower Records (probably paid for by some record label),
> etc.
> etc. etc. confirm that impulse?
>
> Fluffy
>
> Just to think that you have > something others should hear takes a massive ego (one of the great > lessons of the Internet). I suppose the audience will confirm or disprove that.

↑ Index

311. Pierre Joris

Nomadics Blog Posts

Mon 15 Jan 2007

Check out these recent Nomadics blog posts at: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

Montevideo Poem
Don't just Carry that Torch, Read it!
Robert Anton Wilson
Collision in & of Darkness
Jean-Pierre Vernant (1914-2007)
O Gardener of the Soul
Oh One Arrow

enjoy & apologies for any crosspostings.

Pierre

==========
"Fascism should more properly
be called corporatism,since it is the merger of state and corporate power."
— Benito Mussolini
==========
Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202
h: [redacted]
c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com
==========

↑ Index

312. linda norton
Re: Rebegging (fluffy) band new brag
Mon 15 Jan 2007

I remember a Paris Review interview with authors and associates of the editor Bob Gottlieb. His egotism was the subject of much commentary, but one remark stood out:"The thing about Bob's ego is, it's like a huge umbrella, big enough for two people."

-----Original Message-----
>From: Chris Stroffolino <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jan 15, 2007 8:14 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Rebegging (fluffy) band new brag
>
>thanks for sharing these thoughts...feelings....words...
>
>i like that these words don't seem to approach the subject judgmentally >(or, if so, only by judging the impulse to judge...)
>
>what is the feeling of "a massive ego" anyway?
>
>something to be lost in the process/product of creation?
>something to be found (and/or gained) in said process?
>or, sometimes, both simulatanously?
> I wonder if I've been trying to articulate something like the
>"poetics of James Brown"
>off and on since boxing day eve-eve,
> James Brown's relation to "the massive ego?'
> James Brown, as a verb as much as a noun, even to himself...
> to DO the "James Brown"
> and the more strictly speaking "poetic" analogues or
>references of same...
> "how can we tell the dancer from the dance" etc...
>
>or Whitman's "massive ego"---so massive it is also on another level
>an impersonal force
> (not merely "no ideas but in things"), but relational,
>dramatic, so-called 'eastern'
> notions of the self----
> ah, some may need to call it anti-intellectual--in Brown's case-- > but "Think" from the early 60s can be as intellectual as any >Bob Dylan or Stravinski....Ashbery..

>
>just some rudimentary notes right now...
>more later...
> perhaps 'elsewhere...'
>
>Chris
>
>
>
>On Jan 15, 2007, at 2:10 PM, Laura Winton wrote:
>
>> For that matter, thinking that you have something others should >> read also >> takes a massive ego . . . putting any creation of yours out into >> the world
>> and thinking others would or should care is all of the same >> impulse, n'est
>> pas? That gets to the whole question of why we create at all???
>>
>> Is this merely a lesson of the internet? Doesn't the barrage of new >> books at
>> the front table of Barnes & Noble (paid for by Random House), the new >> releases at Tower Records (probably paid for by some record label),
>> etc.
>> etc. etc. confirm that impulse?
>>
>> Fluffy
>>
>>
>>
>>> Just to think that you have >>> something others should hear takes a massive ego (one of the great >>> lessons of the Internet). I suppose the audience will confirm or >>> disprove that.

L Norton

↑ Index

313. David-Baptiste Chirot
FW: $LAVERY-- Cyberzine of the Arts
Tue 16 Jan 2007

> From: "Michael Rothenberg" <[redacted]>
> To: "Walter Blue" <[redacted]>
> CC: "Walter Blue" <[redacted]>
> Subject: $LAVERY-- Cyberzine of the Arts
> Date: Mon, 15 Jan 2007 16:28:42 -0800
>
> From $lavery - Cyberzine of the Arts - on this day of remembrance of Martin Luther King, whose dedication to the active promotion of peace and justice through non-violent resistance must be embraced by many more of us if there is to be any possibility of stopping the current disastrous war in Iraq and the irrevocable devastation of our global environment: an important new work from Michael Rothenberg, Poet, Editor and Webzine publisher of Big Bridge.
>
> Please forward this link to those who may be interested.
>
> *http://www.cyberpoems.com * Note - If you are using Mozilla Firefox and are having difficulty with overlapping lines in House On Fire, please switch to Internet Explorer and set text size to medium. Or try a higher resolution. If you have any suggestions as to a script fix please advise. The Firefox issue is being currently addressed and hopefully has a quick fix. Otherwise a separate Firefox version and a plain text version will be posted shortly.*
>
> To be removed from this list simply reply to [redacted] with "remove" as the message text or subject

_____ Find sales, coupons, and free shipping, all in one place! MSN Shopping Sales & Deals http://shopping.msn.com/content/shp/?ctid=198,ptnrid=176,ptnrdata=200639

↑ Index

314. Jim Andrews
Multimediality, Intermediality, and Medially Complex Digital Poetry
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Here's a paper (http://www.rilune.org/mono5/brillenburg.pdf) by Kiene Brillenburg Wurth from Utrecht University called "Multimediality, Intermediality, and Medially Complex Digital Poetry" that mentions, among others, works by Jason Nelson, Aya Karpinska, and myself.

I'm not sure why she'd mention my work, because I have it on authority from the Canada Council's Intermedia guy that my work is not intermedia.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

315. George Bowering
Re: Boog City 37 Available Saturday
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Copies of #37 arrived today.,
Thankee

George Bowering, M.A.
Acclaimed for his modesty.

↑ Index

316. Jeffrey Side
Anny Ballardini poems at The Argotist Online
Tue 16 Jan 2007

There are some new poems by Anny Ballardini at:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Ballardini%20poems.htm

↑ Index

317. Steve Clay
Granary Books
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Friends,

Our new website has now been launched. We'll be adding additional archival material as well as selected rare and out-of-print books over the next few months.

Books by Timothy C. Ely are featured this quarter.

www.granarybooks.com

Best regards,

Steve

Steve Clay
Granary Books

168 Mercer St. #2
New York, NY 10012

[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.granarybooks.com

↑ Index

318. Wanda Phipps
A gentle reminder
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Hope you can make our reading tonight:

READING SERIES AT PERCH CAFE

Poets:
Jeffrey Cyphers Wright
and
Wanda Phipps
(accompanied on guitar by Stephen B. Antonakos)

reading on Tuesday, January 16th, 2007
7:30pm, followed by Open Mic

at The Perch Cafe
365 5th Avenue
Park Slope, Brooklyn
(between 5th and 6th Streets)
[redacted]

R Train to 4th Avenue at 9th Street
or F Train to 7th Avenue at 9th Street

Curated by: Pam Laskin
--

Wanda Phipps

Check out my website MIND HONEY
http://www.mindhoney.com

and my latest book of poetry
Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:
http://www.softskull.com/detailedbook.php?isbn=1-932360-31-X
and http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

319. C. A. Conrad
CAConrad's SEXIEST POEM OF 2006 AWARD ((((((((((((O))))))))))))((O))((((((
Tue 16 Jan 2007

CAConrad's SEXIEST POEM OF 2006 AWARD ((((((((((((O)))))))))))))((O)) (((((((((((The Sexiest Poem of the Year Award is given annually to a finely crafted poem demonstrating a fearlessness which confronts injustice. The panel of judges is CAConrad sitting in five different chairs manifesting five different facial expressions. The judges must have a unanimous decision in order for the award to be granted. In the case where a unanimous decision is not decided upon, no award will be granted that year.

SEXIEST POEM OF 2006 is Jules Boykoff's "Commandment #8"
click here: _http://sexiestPOEMaward.blogspot.com/_
(http://sexiestpoemaward.blogspot.com/)

↑ Index

320. cralan kelder
Re: beggins the answer - why perform
Tue 16 Jan 2007

great description Laura; putting things where they wouldn¹t otherwise be.

On 1/12/07 5:59 PM, "Andrew Jones" <[redacted]> wrote:

> How do your feelings as a performer compare/contrast with your feelings as a member of an audience?
>
> ajj

This issue seems central to me, because its a part of my poetics. I feel some divergence between written & performance work. My suspicion is that most of us perform for ourselves first and for the audience second, at least, that¹s how we have to begin, because lets face it in the beginning we¹re a bit crap.

when i am a member of the audience I want to be enthralled, like the peasants at the Globe, in the cheap seats in the pit, leaning on the stage, yelling out Ahhh and Ohhh when people are stabbed and die.

so when i get up on stage myself, i try & remember what its like to sit in the audience and be bored, i want to prevent that so I make a lot of noise, I keep the audience in mind, change gears accordingly.

when i sit on the side of the stage during the readings that we organise, we can massage the shoulders of the poets all we want, but once they get up there, like boxers, its all them, they are taking a sacred space; the stage, they¹re in control.

the audience we invite to the readings have often worked all week, are tired, and we don¹t consider that they are doing us a favor; they pay, and we need to entertain them. It¹s a painful thing to watch an audience start to ³resent² a poet, meaning that their eyes glaze over.

yes of course this is worst case scenario, perhaps that¹s where i am going with this obligation thing who else organises poetry evenings out there?

↑ Index

321. Fulcrum Annual

Samuel Gareginyan: a great Armenian painter

Tue 16 Jan 2007

Samuel Gareginyan, originally from Armenia and now living in Boston, is one of the greatest painters of our times. He has perfected the finest nuances of Renaissance technique and of other artistic styles, yet his work is thoroughly modern and unmistakable. Explore at http://www.samuelg.com

↑ Index

322. Thomas savage

Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?

Tue 16 Jan 2007

The book I've used for many years both as a poet and a teacher is the Teacher's & Writers Book of Poetic Form edited by Ron Padgett and published by Teachers & Writers Collaborative in New York City. It is dependable and useful in just about all forms. The only questionable entry I know of relates to the ghazal. Regards, Tom Savage

vulture protein <[redacted]> wrote: Hello List,

Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the specifications of the form.

Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated!

Thanks!

Tony

Food fight? Enjoy some healthy debate
in the Yahoo! Answers Food & Drink Q&A.

↑ Index

323. Steve Halle
Mary Biddinger at Seven Corners
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Please take a moment to check out new work from Mary Biddinger at Seven Corners (www.sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com). Mary has a new book, Prairie Fever, coming out from Steel Toe Books this spring.

As always, thank you for supporting these poets and this project.

Best,
Steve Halle
Editor, Seven Corners

↑ Index

324. vulture protein
Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Thanks everyone for your valuable suggestions. I appreciate all of the informative responses I have received!

Thanks again!

Tony

On 1/16/07, Thomas savage <[redacted]> wrote:
> The book I've used for many years both as a poet and a teacher is the Teacher's & Writers Book of Poetic Form edited by Ron Padgett and published by Teachers & Writers Collaborative in New York City. It is dependable and useful in just about all forms. The only questionable entry I know of relates to the ghazal. Regards, Tom Savage
>
> vulture protein <[redacted]> wrote: Hello List,
>
> Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on poetic form?
> Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and > find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the > specifications of the form.
>

> Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated!
>
> Thanks!
>
> Tony
>
>
>
> ---
> Food fight? Enjoy some healthy debate
> in the Yahoo! Answers Food & Drink Q&A.
>

↑ Index

325. Small Press Traffic

Poets Theater first night this Friday 1/19

Tue 16 Jan 2007

Small Press Traffic's POETS THEATER JAMBOREE
All seats $10 -- no reservations -- arrive early

FRIDAY, JANUARY 19, 2007 at 7:30 P.M.

“Tarantula” / Written & Directed by Marc Arthur.

“Orgasm” / Written by Dodie Bellamy / Directed by Margaret Tedesco

“Bowl, Cat and Broomstick” (1917) / Written by Wallace Stevens / Directed by Dana Teen Lomax & Danna Lomax

“The Haunted House” / Written & Directed by Brandon Downing

“Pig Angels of the Americlypse” & “Spine” Written by Rodrigo Toscano / Directed by Stephanie Young

“The Party” / Written by Lisa Jarnot / Directed by Kevin Killian

Directions & map:
http://www.sptraffic.org/html/fac_dir.html

Elizabeth Treadwell, Director
Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]
http://www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

326. Matt Henriksen

Fri 1/19 ::: Graham Foust & Sawako Nakayasu ::: Carroll Gardens, Brooklyn

Tue 16 Jan 2007

The Burning Chair Readings

think you might like to imagine an ant crawling into your mouth trying to close its eyes with its eyes closed

w/

Graham Foust & Sawako Nakayasu

Friday, January 19th, 7:30

The Fall Café

307 Smith Street

Between Union & President

Carroll Gardens, Brooklyn

F or G to Carroll Street

FREE

Graham Foust was born in Knoxville,
Tennessee and raised in Eau Claire, Wisconsin.
The author of three books of poetry—the most recent of which is Necessary Stranger (Flood Editions, 2007)—he lives in Oakland, California with his wife and son.

Sawako Nakayasu is currently writing about, through, on, around and with ants and other insects, but mostly ants. She was born in Yokohama, Japan, and has lived mostly in the US since the age of six. Her books include Nothing fictional but the accuracy or arrangement (she, (Quale Press), So we have been given time Or, (Verse Press), and Clutch (Tinfish). Her most recent publications include a book of translations of Japanese women poets in Four From Japan, as well as a chapbook of translations of Sagawa Chika's poems, from Seeing Eye Books.

Other readings in 2007

Kostas Anagapolous & Elisa Gabbert

Friday, February 16th, 7:30 PM

The Fall Café

Susan Briante, Anselm Berrigan, Jane Gregory, Christian
Hawkey, Farid Matuk, Ben Mazer, Andrew Mister, Anna Moschovakis, Jess Mynes, Charles Valle, Matvei Yankelevich, I Feel Tractor, & TBA

Saturday, March 10th, 5 PM

The White Room

Slope Editions: Robyn Ewing & TBA

Mid-April TBA

Pierogi Gallery

Hadara Bar-Nadav & Bronwen Tate

Friday, April 20th, 7:30 PM

The Fall Café

Zach Barocas & Shafer Hall

Friday, May 18th, 7:30 PM

The Fall Café

For info, go to www.typomag.com/burningchair or write matt AT typomag DOT com

If you'd like to be removed from this list, please let us know.

___ Looking for earth-friendly autos? Browse Top Cars by "Green Rating" at Yahoo! Autos' Green Center. http://autos.yahoo.com/green_center/

↑ Index

327. Susan Webster Schultz donald rumsfeld
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Any of you who have written poems about Rumsfeld, written using Rumsfeld's language, or composed under the spell of our former Defense Secretary (sic), please backchannel me. I'd like to write about the phenomenon of Rummy poems, having written at least one myself and aware of many others.

aloha,

Susan M. Schultz

↑ Index

328. Charles Bernstein
Girly Man -- 6:30pm today at CUE
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Today .... Tuesday, Jan. 16 at 6:30pm in New York
I will be reading and signing copies of Girly Man & Shadowtime
& Jennifer Cho, violin, will be playing John Zorn Cue Art Foundation 511 W. 25th NY NY free admission / reservations required [redacted] / [redacted]

http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/books/girly-man/
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/shadowtime/http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/blog/

↑ Index

329. Marcus Bales
Shows, Readings, and Other Performances at Gallery 324
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Shows, Readings, and Other Performances at Gallery 324
in the Galleria in downtown Cleveland, Ohio

Gallery 324 at the Galleria
1301 East Ninth Street
Cleveland, Ohio 44114
216/[redacted]

Every Saturday At Noon Readings and Performances
Hours: Every Saturday at Noon
Free Parking in the Galleria Parking Garage Saturday Only

January 20 – Haiku Death Match Practice Rounds

Friday Special Event: January 26 – Friday At the Rotunda of City Hall – the Haiku Death Match Final Brian Taylor, current champion, will defend his title.

January 27 – John M. Bennett, Michael Ceraolo

February 3

February 10

February 17 – Wanda Sobieska, JE Stanley

February 24

March 3

March 10

March 17 –

March 24 – Philip Metres

March 31 – Catherynne Valente

April 7

April 14, 2007 – Kenneth Patchen Festival:
Rebel Poets Reading Patchen and Their Own Work
Featuring M.L.Liebler and Magic Poetry Band

All week of April 8-15th Kenneth Patchen Silkscreens will be on exhibit at Gallery 324 in the Galleria, E. 9th Street, on loan from the Trumbull Art Guild, Warren, Ohio

Douglas Paisley's painting of The Journal of Albion Moonlight with text will also be shown at the Gallery

Talks by Kenneth Patchen biographer Larry Smith & Doug Manson, editor of Kenneth Patchen Newsletter, Celery Flute Player

April 21

April 28, 2007 – Mary Weems, Kisha Foster

The Art Shows coming to Gallery 324
Free Parking in the Galleria Parking Garage Saturday Only.
Parking is $3 after 4pm weekdays
Gallery Hours: M-F 10 am – 5 pm, Sat 10 am – 2 pm in 2006 and early 2007 are:

Ongoing: Storm Thorgerson, prints, originals in various media, designer of Pink Floyd's and Led Zeppelin's and other bands' album covers,
Curated by Marcus Bales

January 13, 2007 Opening: "Best of NOIS" Show (Northeast Ohio Illustrator Society)
Curated by George Kocar

February 3 Opening: Eric Mull
"The American Skyscraper" Show,
Curated by Marcus Bales

March 3 Opening: Odessa Art Show; various media and artists , Curated by Jody Hawk and Bernadette Glorioso

April 14 Opening 2007 – Kenneth Patchen Festival:
Silkscreens by Kenneth Patchen; a reading of Patchen's poems; perhaps a play by Patchen performed in the Gallery by Charenton Theater. Curated by Larry Smith

May 5 – 12, 2007 – As the Crow Flies
Milan Kecman, Andrea Levy,
Chuck Wimmer, Ed Beyer,
& George Kocar

June 9 - 16, 2007 - Objects of Desire Curated by Jody Hawk and Bernadette Glorioso

DIRECTIONS to the Galleria

From the west side

2 East - East Ninth Street, right - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign). Parking is Free on Saturdays, $3 after 4pm on Fridays. Go up the escalator or elevator to the FIRST FLOOR. Out of the elevator turn right and walk past the escalator to the Courtyard

480 - 176North - 90East - 2West (Lakewood) - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

71 North - 90 East - 90East - 2West (Lakewood) - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

77 North - 90East - 2West (Lakewood) - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

From the east side

480 - 77 North - 90East - 2West (Lakewood) - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

90 West - 2 West - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

From the Heights

Martin Luther King Jr Blvd North - 90 West - 2 west - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

By RTA Rapid

From wherever you are go to the Tower City station and change for the Waterfront Line - get off at East 9th street, up the stairs, turn right on East Ninth Street (away from the lake, away from the R&R Hall) walk half a block to Lakeside, cross Ninth Street to your left, cross Lakeside, and half a block further on is the Ninth Street Entrance to the Galleria.

If the weather's nice, you can also walk from Tower City across Public Square away from the Terminal Tower building you came out of (the building in which the RTA Rapid lets you off) and toward the BP Building. Walk east (that is, turn right just past the BP building) on any of Superior, Rockwell, or St Clair streets, to East Ninth. Turn left. From St Clair, it's right there; from Rockwell, one block, from Superior two blocks, to the entrance at East Ninth and St Clair.

If you'd like to be removed from this email list, please REPLY to this message to:
[redacted]
and ask to be removed in the text of your message.

↑ Index

330. Alexander Dickow
voix off posts
Tue 16 Jan 2007

All,
Lately at Voix Off, posts in French and English (mostly). Enjoy.

Amicalement,
Alex

Kilncelan.

L'Immusique et les Lettres: Unmusic and Letters (2)

Joaquín Pasos, poète: Joaquín Pasos, poet

Henri Droguet, un poète méconnu: Henri Droguet, an underrated poet

Pierre Joris on Mistranslated Menus: Pierre Joris sur les cartes mal traduites

Thanks to mIEKAL aND for...: Merci à mIEKAL aND...

Tiny Poem: Poème minuscule (9)

Tiny Poem: Poème minuscule (8)

Tiny Poem: Poème minuscule (7)

Two New Translations of Aaron Belz in Sitaudis: Deux nouvelles traductions d'Aaron Belz dans Sitaudis

Ce qu'on dit au philosophe à propos de poètes?: Poetry and Philosophy

Two Tiny Poems: Deux poèmes minuscules (2)

Thanks to Taking the Brim: Merci à Taking the Brim

Tiny poem: Poème minuscule (6)

James Sacré, poète grammairien: James Sacré, Grammarian-Poet

L'Immusique et les Lettres: Unmusic and Letters

www.alexdickow.net/blog/

> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

331. Catherine Daly
"'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
Tue 16 Jan 2007

---

http://www.sundress.net/bestof/

--
All best,

Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

332. mIEKAL aND
Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Best of who's net, I wonder? I've never heard of a single person on the list. But then I guess I lead a pretty isolated existence.

On Jan 16, 2007, at 1:35 PM, Catherine Daly wrote:

> http://www.sundress.net/bestof/
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

↑ Index

333. Dan Coffey
Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
Tue 16 Jan 2007

If you've never heard of Peter Jay Shippy, then that means you probably haven't read any of his poems, and THAT means you are missing out.

On 1/16/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
> Best of who's net, I wonder? I've never heard of a single person on > the list. But then I guess I lead a pretty isolated existence.
>
> On Jan 16, 2007, at 1:35 PM, Catherine Daly wrote:
>
> > http://www.sundress.net/bestof/
> >
> > --
> > All best,
> > Catherine Daly
> > [redacted]
> >
>

--
http://hyperhypo.org/blog
http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

↑ Index

334. Skip Fox
Re: ars poetica update
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Will reply before end of tomorrow. Been very busy. (Begging of classes.)

Skip fox

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Dan Waber
Sent: Monday, January 15, 2007 9:11 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: ars poetica update

The ars poetica project is well under way at:

http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/

Poems appeared last week by: Eileen Tabios (includng one with Nick Carbo), Sandy McIntosh, John Bloomberg Rissman, Sharon Harris, Gregory Betts, and Stephen Cain

Poems will appear this week by: Craig Czury, Alan Baker, Paul Dutton, and Jonathan Penton.

The ripples are spreading in the most delightful of ways, and there is no end in sight.

Enjoy,
Dan

↑ Index

335. Ren Powell
Job opening in AZ
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Forgive the cross-posting, but this is a job opening. . . please spread the word:

Mesa Community College (Phx., Az.) will hire a full-time English Composition/Creative Writing faculty member to begin in Aug. 2007.

Prospective applicants should go to the following website for job description, salary range, and application procedures:

< <http://www.maricopa.edu/hrweb/index.php> http://www.maricopa.edu/hrweb/index.php>.

From there, click on "Current Openings" and scroll to the "English Composition" link for Mesa Community College (Posting # 06070172-4).

_____

Ren Powell

[redacted]

<http://www.sidesteppingreal.blogspot.com> www.sidesteppingreal.blogspot.com

<http://www.icorn.org> www.icorn.org

↑ Index

336. Poetry Project

Spring Workshops at the Poetry Project. Also Braithwaite and S. Howe, tomorrow!

Tue 16 Jan 2007

Dear Dears,

Please scroll down and take a look at our upcoming workshop offerings. Classes will begin the second week of February, and we are currently accepting reservations. By all means forward the workshop descriptions to interested NYC area friends and colleagues! Also, join us tomorrow night for Kamau Brathwaite and Susan Howe!

Love,

The Poetry Project

Wednesday, January 17, 8:00 pm
Kamau Brathwaite & Susan Howe

Kamau Brathwaite, born in Barbados in 1930, is an internationally celebrated poet, performer, and cultural theorist. Co-founder of the Caribbean Artists Movement, he was educated at Pembroke College, Cambridge and has a Ph.D. from the University of Sussex in the U.K. He has served on the board of directors of UNESCO¹s History of Mankind project since 1979, and as cultural advisor to the government of Barbados from 19751979 and since 1990. His book The Zea Mexican Diary (1993) was the Village Voice Book of the Year. Some of his many works include Middle Passages (1994), Ancestors (2001), The Development of Creole Society, 1770-1820 (2005). Brathwaite is currently a professor of comparative literature at New York University, and shares his time between CowPastor, Barbados, and New York City. His latest book is Born to Slow Horses, published by Wesleyan in 2005 and winner of the International Griffin Poetry Prize in 2006. Susan Howe's most recent books are The Midnight published by New Directions, and Kidnapped from Coracle Books. She is also the author of two books of criticism, My Emily Dickinson, and The Birth-Mark: unsettling the wilderness in American literary expression. A CD called Thiefth in collaboration with the musician/ composer David Grubbs was released from Blue Chopsticks in 2005 and Souls of the Labadie Tract, another collaboration with Grubbs will be released this February. She holds the Samuel P. Capen Chair in Poetry and the Humanities at the State University New York at Buffalo.

Spring Workshops at the Poetry Project

The Poetry School Of Poetry Douglas Rothschild
Tuesdays at 7 Pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 13th

Writing poetry is difficult; writing good poetry, more difficult still. In this workshop, we will focus on exactly what we think is good in a poem & determine how our senses of aesthetics inform our responses to this question. Working within our own aesthetic notions we will then begin to refine our writing, & help each other to write the best poems that we can. The workshop will conduct a number of actual experiments with writing that will allow us to step outside the world of id, which wants to keep all the beautiful words, & into the artistic self, which understands which pieces fit & which belong elsewhere. We will also engage the basic Poetry School of Poetry premise that the poet¹s first job is to learn how to edit. Dgls N. Rthschld has been behind the foods table at the New Years Reading more times than it is worth mentioning. He has also written a number of chapbooks, the most ground breaking entitled The Minor Arcane. He has taught what seem to be innumerable college writing classes, and is currently teaching at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, a CUNY school.

The Visible Unseen: Writing Outside Borders Akilah Oliver Thursdays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 15th

Are poetry and prose virtual realities, simulations of something other, or the real thing? Where does the ³I² live? How many moments exist in the moment of the line? What borders of form are crucial for us to hang on to & which boundaries are collapsible? In this workshop, we will explore the connections and tensions between the visible and the unseen world/s, not as dualities or binaries, but as complementary sites of composition. Through engagement with text (written and visual), public spaces, the imagination, dreams and Eros, participants are invited to think of writing as that which re-imagines the known and the unknown. Though this is a text based workshop, poets, prose writers, and artists from all disciplines are welcome. Readings include: Giorgio Agamben, Laura Mullen, Whitman, Anne Waldman, Derrida, & Ben Okri. Akilah Oliver is the author of the she said dialogues: flesh memory, An Arriving Guard of Angels, Thusly Coming to Greet, a(A)gust, & The Putterer¹s Notebook. She is faculty at the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics Summer Writing Program at Naropa University.

Impurity Rocks! A Poetry Lab & Workshop Joanna Fuhrman
Fridays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 16th

The class will focus on ³impure² poetry, poetry that employs a mixture of tones and styles. Special emphasis will be placed on works that combine narrative and humor with linguistic and imagistic disjunction. In-class exercises and take-home assignments will touch on issues of scale, space, sound, genre and wordplay. Time will also be devoted to reading published poems as well as in-depth discussions and critiques of student work. Joanna Fuhrman is the author of three collections of poetry, Freud in Brooklyn, Ugh Ugh Ocean and Moraine, all published by Hanging Loose Press. She has taught poetry writing at The University of Washington, The Cooper Union Saturday Outreach program and in the New York City Public Schools.

Poetry For The Page, Stage, And Computer Screen Thomas Savage Saturdays At 12 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 17th

This course is a writing workshop where students' writing is the main focus. Also used as inspiration and writing prompts will be samples of work by writers from The Beats, Black Mountain poets, The New York School (all generations), Language Poetry, Poets Theater, Pablo Neruda, and works being published today online, among other sources. Practices will include reading as well as writing assignments and, in a great Poetry Project tradition, in-class writing. Thomas Savage has written eight published books of poems including most recently Bamiyan Poems, Brain Surgery Poems and Political Conditions/Physical States. His poems have appeared in many print and online venues including The New York Times, Hanging Loose, Rattapallax, Big Bridge, Black Box, and regularly on the Wryting-L website. He has taught poetry workshops at The Poetry Project and Tribes Gallery.

* The workshop fee is $350, which includes a one year Sustaining Poetry Project membership and tuition for any and all spring and fall classes. Reservations are required due to limited class space, and payment must be received in advance. Caps on class sizes, if in effect, will be determined by workshop leaders. Please send payment and reservations to:

The Poetry Project, St. Mark's Church
Attn: Workshops

131 East 10th St.
NYC, NY 10003

For more information, or to pay by credit card, please call [redacted], or email: [redacted].

http://www.poetryproject.com/workshops.php

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Winter Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $85 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

337. Alexander Jorgensen
SELLOUT
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Anything that isn't honest - that's sellout! and that is and will be my problem with China. BM chosen the wrong side - and because of convenience. Some poets like ... are on the cutters - gonna trip they will,
these androgenous powerful women (from the corners - V
- that Minky Starshine and another, who sits among crocodiles. Dignity for all is where it's at!

Alexander Jorgensen

___ Bored stiff? Loosen up... Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games. http://games.yahoo.com/games/front

↑ Index

338. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: SELLOUT
Tue 16 Jan 2007

And our friend from Holland, he is a demi-god! Cralan.

AJ

--- Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]> wrote:

> Anything that isn't honest - that's sellout! and
> that > is and will be my problem with China. BM chosen the > wrong side - and because of convenience. Some poets
> like ... are on the cutters - gonna trip they will,
> these androgenous powerful women (from the corners - > V
> - that Minky Starshine and another, who sits among > crocodiles. Dignity for all is where it's at!
>
> Alexander Jorgensen
>
> ---
>
>
>
>

> Bored stiff? Loosen up...
> Download and play hundreds of games for free on > Yahoo! Games.
> http://games.yahoo.com/games/front
>

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news

↑ Index

339. Elisa Gabbert
Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
Tue 16 Jan 2007

I'd think it also means you're not reading any/many online journals, as he's published WIDELY on "the net."

Dan Coffey <[redacted]> wrote: If you've never heard of Peter Jay Shippy, then that means you probably haven't read any of his poems, and THAT means you are missing out.

On 1/16/07, mIEKAL aND
wrote:
> Best of who's net, I wonder? I've never heard of a single person on > the list. But then I guess I lead a pretty isolated existence.
>
> On Jan 16, 2007, at 1:35 PM, Catherine Daly wrote:
>
> > http://www.sundress.net/bestof/
> >
> > --
> > All best,
> > Catherine Daly
> > [redacted]
> >
>

--
http://hyperhypo.org/blog
http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

No need to miss a message. Get email on-the-go with Yahoo! Mail for Mobile. Get started.

↑ Index

340. twshaner
Announcing WIG and call for submissions
Tue 16 Jan 2007

We are pleased to announce the first issue of WIG!

WIG begins by showcasing the exemplary “career” of Kit Robinson, including an interview with the poet about his lifelong practice of “writing work”—a term Juliana Spahr uses to describe her own practice of writing on the job in Live (Duration, 2000)—and a series of twelve poems called “Outbound Logistics,” written during the same period as the poems included in The Crave (Atelos, 2002).

WIG also features work by Chris Alexander, Marcus Bales, Anselm Berrigan, CA Conrad, Laura Elrick, Kristen Gallagher, William Howe, Michael Kelleher, Tim Shaner and Chris Stroffolino and a selection of writings on the work-a-day grind by students from Kristen Gallagher's creative writing class at Laguardia Community College.

WIG is a low-budget magazine devoted to writing and art composed on the job. Not necessarily "about" work, the wig-artist employs labor for poetic ends that implicitly critique—through the act of poaching company time &/or materials—the productivist logic of what Hannah Arendt calls the "laboring society."

Beautifully designed by the artist/graphic designer Lawrence Conley, WIG is printed on 8 ½ x 11 standard photocopy paper, sandwiched between a sturdier stock of paper for its covers, and is bound by a single staple in the lower left hand corner.

Please send $4 or say $10 for two issues (just to round it off and to help offset costs – think of the extra $2 as a donation) in the form of cash or a check (made out) to:

Tim Shaner
130 E 49th Ave
Eugene, OR 97405

We welcome submissions of poetry, prose, artwork, essays, book reviews, letters to the editor, assemblages, etc. We also encourage writers to take up Mike Gold's project, quoted in this issue, by either reporting on their particular industry/job or by keeping a diary of workplace observations and reflections, whether they have to do with work or not.

We prefer email submissions (as word files, pdf, or jpg), sent to: [redacted] and/or [redacted]. Otherwise, submit snailmail (w/ SASE) to:

Tim Shaner
130 E 49th Ave
Eugene, OR 97405

or

Kristen Gallagher
402 Graham Ave., PMB 204
Brooklyn, NY 11211

Please include with your submission a bio that briefly addresses the laboring circumstances embedded in the text.

↑ Index

341. Ron Silliman
Silliman's Blog
Tue 16 Jan 2007

Recently on Silliman's Blog

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

Guide to Homage to Sextus Propertius
by Bob Perelman

IFLIFE is Bob Perelman's
most ambitious and successful book

On being called out
By Reginald Shepherd

Kingdom Books of Waterford Vermont

Redefining the NY School
(Sienese-Shredder #1)

New bookstores
and the rate of decline of the independents

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

342. Simon DeDeo
Berkeley / SF poetry events
Wed 17 Jan 2007

Hello UBP --

Wondering if anyone can point me to a calendar for poetry events/readings in SF/Berkeley? I will be there Wednesday-Saturday this week (last minute decision) and thought I might see what was happening. Additionally, if any poets want to get together for a drink, drop me a line.

-- Simon
(rhubarb is susan guy)

↑ Index

343. Jim Andrews
Geof Huth on UnlikelyStories 2.0: The Cross Media Issue
Wed 17 Jan 2007

Here is a review by Geof Huth of UnlikelyStories 2.0: The Cross-Media Issue, guest-edited by Dan Waber:
http://dbqp.blogspot.com/2007/01/bird-in-flight-and-perpetual-motion.html

He doesn't review his own work in this issue, but it's pretty cool.

Geof's "Snowglyphs" is a sequence of 35 photopoems taken of poems constructed in the snow. Don't ask him to shovel your snow. You might end up with a driveway of poems instead. The citizens of Schenectady New York, where Geof Huth lives, shall at least live in occassional perplexity as they gaze upon these wonders. And should you ever be there and go for a walk with Huth in the snow, I think you will find it memorable. This man apparently plays in the snow like none other. Poetry goes where he goes. Whether it's for a walk in the snow or whatever. Very cool.

There's also his piece "In Germania, the Portuguese Did Sing". This is a short film. It consists of pannings of a child's notebook who is learning to write in, I think, Portuguese? This is undoubtedly one of Geof's own notebooks from his childhood. He lived in many different countries when he was growing up. It could be any number of languages or one the kid was making up. The notebook is filled not only with the careful, multi-lined writings of the notebooks you use when learning to write, but also many drawings. And the audio is of singing/chanting by an adult (probably Geof); the music/chanting sounds sort of indigenous to...to I know not where, but it has a feeling of adventurousness to it, male adventurousness that is present in childhood and, if we are lucky, survives into adulthood. The visuals and the audio, together, make the film memorably atmospheric and insightful into states of mind where the making of things--writing, visuals, sounds, and films--is participatory in the things which are written about.

I know Geof has been divesting himself of papers from years previous, over the last months, has been sending many boxes of papers to a University where they will be archived. "In Germania, the Portuguese Did Sing" feels like the poet internalising them before sending them off--and making something from them, as they themselves were makings--recapturing something of them in contemporary experience.

ja

↑ Index

344. Anny Ballardini

Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"

Wed 17 Jan 2007

Make it two of us then who have never heard of him.

Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

On 1/16/07, Dan Coffey <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> If you've never heard of Peter Jay Shippy, then that means you > probably haven't read any of his poems, and THAT means you are missing > out.
>
> On 1/16/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
> > Best of who's net, I wonder? I've never heard of a single person on > > the list. But then I guess I lead a pretty isolated existence.
> >
> > On Jan 16, 2007, at 1:35 PM, Catherine Daly wrote:
> >
> > > http://www.sundress.net/bestof/
> > >
> > > --
> > > All best,
> > > Catherine Daly
> > > [redacted]
> > >
> >
>
>
> --
> http://hyperhypo.org/blog
> http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com
>

↑ Index

345. Anny Ballardini

Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"

Wed 17 Jan 2007

But I do know David Graham and highly recommend him:
http://www.sundress.net/bestof/grahamd.htm

On 1/17/07, Anny Ballardini <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Make it two of us then who have never heard of him.
>
> Anny Ballardini
> http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
> http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
> I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing > star!
> Friedrich Nietzsche
>
>
>
> On 1/16/07, Dan Coffey <[redacted]> wrote:
> >
> > If you've never heard of Peter Jay Shippy, then that means you > > probably haven't read any of his poems, and THAT means you are missing > > out.
> >
> > On 1/16/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
> > > Best of who's net, I wonder? I've never heard of a single person on > > > the list. But then I guess I lead a pretty isolated existence.
> > >
> > > On Jan 16, 2007, at 1:35 PM, Catherine Daly wrote:
> > >
> > > > http://www.sundress.net/bestof/
> > > >
> > > > --
> > > > All best,
> > > > Catherine Daly
> > > > [redacted]
> > > >
> > >
> >
> >

> > --
> > http://hyperhypo.org/blog
> > http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com
> >
>
>

↑ Index

346. mIEKAL aND
NEW CBOOKS FROM SMALL CHAPBOOK PROJECT
Wed 17 Jan 2007

NEW CBOOKS FROM SMALL CHAPBOOK PROJECT

for early 2007, we present EIGHT new chapbooks, including the first '4 around 1', four full-length cbooks by one writer concerning a matter of his/her own interest.

THE CHAPBOOKS

mIEKAL aND -- Logos Longshot -- essays in poly-artistry & human interaction. Early notes to aND's life-work, Samsara Congeries, having a dense syntax and idea-proliferation.

Martha Deed -- 65 X 65 -- an autobiography in 65 short paragraphs portraying people important to the poet's spiritual development, people who have left an imprint.

Michelle Greenblatt/Sheila E Murphy -- Ghazals 1--19 -- An intriguing collaboraiton by two poets in different stages of their poetic careers. A ghazal is a Persian ecstatic lyric song, with a single voice for the reader.

'4 around 1'
Jukka-Pekka Kervinen
  THROUGH LIGHT (#1, katha)
  AND NONE (#2, isa)
  INHALING (#3, taitturuya)
  IS BEHIND (#4, aitareya)
The first in this new series, four chapbooks with a single concern, this time, a computer manipulation of texts taken from the Hindu Upanishads. It's interesting to see how words of a spiritual nature are mixed with everything 'including the kitchen sink' -- computer code, words and parts of words with no relation to anything but the air in the center of the heart.

Rob McLennan -- ottawa poems (blue notes) -- Wonderful blues-like improvisations on the poet's home-city characterized by diverse spatial arrays. The poems show Mc-Lennan's affection for the city.

HOW TO ORDER THESE CBOOKS:

Send $6 per title ($20 for the '4 around 1' series), plus $1 per title shipping, to:
  Peter Ganick
  small chapbook project
  45 Ravenwood Road
  West Hartford CT 06107-1539
For international postage, please inquire.
All packages shipped Media Mail. Inquire about 'first class'.
Please include your email address with order.

HOW TO SUBMIT A MANUSCRIPT:

Send an email to <[redacted]> to receive directions. All books are printed on heavy, bright-white stock, and average 32 -- 40 pages.

THANK YOU FOR READING THIS.

↑ Index

347. Thomas Orange
Re: "'Best' of the 'Net 2006"
Wed 17 Jan 2007

---

i've heard of shippy but i've never heard of the judges...

"So here for your enjoyment are the top six stories and twenty-one poems published online between June 1, 2005 and June 30, 2006 as chosen by our guest judges Paul Guest and Jaimee Wriston Colbert."
http://www.sundress.net/bestof/note.htm

...which may go further to answering miekal's question "Best of who's net?"
than anything about the contest winners. also, the submissions appear to be self-selecting, which greatly reduces any claim to "objectivity" that could be made on behalf of the process.

bests,
tom orange

> Dan Coffey <[redacted]> wrote: If you've never heard of Peter Jay Shippy, then that means you > probably haven't read any of his poems, and THAT means you are missing > out.
>
> On 1/16/07, mIEKAL aND wrote:
> Best of who's net, I wonder? I've never heard of a single person on > the list. But then I guess I lead a pretty isolated existence.
>
> On Jan 16, 2007, at 1:35 PM, Catherine Daly wrote:
>
> http://www.sundress.net/bestof/
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

↑ Index

348. William Allegrezza

CFP: Experimental Writing in the Midwest

Wed 17 Jan 2007

I'm putting together a special session for the Chicago MLA next year. The session will explore experimental writing in the Midwest from a critical standpoint as it has emerged in the past twenty-five years. As many of you on this list could speak to this topic, I invite anyone who is interested to send me an abstract of 250 words concerning your proposed topic. I don't have anything specific in mind, so I'm interested in seeing what people will come up with from any "experimental" genre. Please submit abstracts to [redacted] or backchannel.

Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

349. David-Baptiste Chirot

"Rumble, young man, rumble" Happy Birthday Muhammad Ali the Greatest!

Wed 17 Jan 2007

Happy 65th Birthday Muhammad Ali

"float like a butterfly sting like a bee"

a fighter in the ring
a messenger of Peace in the world

_____ The MSN Entertainment Guide to Golden Globes is here. Get all the scoop.
http://tv.msn.com/tv/globes2007/?icid=nctagline2

↑ Index

350. reJennifer Bartlett
Teaching Search
Wed 17 Jan 2007

Hi all,

I'm sorry to be a pest, but I'm still trying to put my feelers out for a job. If anyone's school happens to need a last minute adjuct to teach English Comp, please backchannel. I'm in Brooklyn, but will travel. I have five years of teaching experience, and all the good stuff!

Best, Jennifer Bartlett

--

_____
Fixing up the home? Live Search can help
http://imagine-windowslive.com/search/kits/default.aspx?kit=improve&locale=en-US&source=hmemailtaglinenov06&FORM=WLMTAG

↑ Index

351. Gabrielle Welford
Re: The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?
Wed 17 Jan 2007

---

the week of ooops...

On Mon, 15 Jan 2007, vulture protein wrote:

> Tony -
>
> I looked at the Princeton book on Amazon and I definitely feel that is what I'm looking for. But I like your idea - I'll probably end up getting both, but I'll start off with the Princeton!
>
> By the way - this is Tony Hooper. And yes I probably should have asked this question a long time ago, but I'm just getting around to it now!

I've been well - I'm still working for http://www.zzounds.com/ one of the perks being that I get great deals on gear. I started playing with a new band this month and that's been going great so far (I will of course let you know if we play any high profile venues...)

I mostly lurk on this listserve - It's a way (one of the ways) for me to keep up on what's going on in the poetry world. I've found many cool websites / resources because of this list, but a few people who post here can drive me crazy!

Thanks for the suggestions!

Tony

On 1/15/07, Tony Trigilio <[redacted]> wrote:
Hey, Tony--

I'm really just seconding what Dan wrote, but I wanted to add that if you want the comprehensive, go with the Princeton book, and if you want the playful (and maybe more user-friendly or writerly), go with the Padgett book. I use both all the time, depending on context.

Best,
Tony

Date:* Mon, 15 Jan 2007 10:56:05 -0600*
Reply-To:* UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>*
Sender:* UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>*
From:* vulture protein <[redacted]>*
Subject:* The Definitive Book On Poetic Form?*
Content-Type:* text/plain; charset=ISO-8859-1; format=flowed*
Content-Disposition:* inline*

Hello List, Can anyone recommend a dense and comprensive book on poetic form? Ideally I want to be able to look up any poetic form in this book and find an example of the form, a brief history of the form, and the specifications of the form. Any suggestions would be kindly appreciated! Thanks! Tony

gabrielle welford
[redacted]

Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com). Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004

wilhelm reich
anarcho-syndicalism
gut/heart/head/earth

↑ Index

352. mIEKAL aND
The writing automaton
Wed 17 Jan 2007

(check out the videos of the doll in action, still works after all these years)

from fogonazos:

The writing automaton

In the eighteenth century, 200 years before little ASIMO started to walk or to climb stairs, the great Jaquet-Droz built an automaton which could scrawl any sentence on a piece of paper and had a chilling repertory of human-like movements. Read the story an then check it out at the videos:

Completed by 1772, 'The Writer' was the most perfect and complex automaton built by swiss clockmaker Jacquet-Droz. His astonishing mechanism was presented in every court in Europe and fascinated the world's most important people: the kings and emperors of China, India and Japan.

http://fogonazos.blogspot.com/2007/01/writing-automaton.html

↑ Index

353. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: The writing automaton
Wed 17 Jan 2007

What is fascinating to me about it is that Jaquet-Droz was a clockmaker. The 18th century vision of God was a clockmaker, who wound up the clock and left it to run: therefore, the automaton as an image of the universe with traces of the hand of God.

My guess is that the 18th century obsession with toys as replicas (as our present obsession with computers and digital language?) has religious implications.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/17/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> (check out the videos of the doll in action, still works after all > these years)
>
> from fogonazos:
>
> The writing automaton
>
> In the eighteenth century, 200 years before little ASIMO started to > walk or to climb stairs, the great Jaquet-Droz built an automaton > which could scrawl any sentence on a piece of paper and had a > chilling repertory of human-like movements. Read the story an then > check it out at the videos:
>
> Completed by 1772, 'The Writer' was the most perfect and complex > automaton built by swiss clockmaker Jacquet-Droz. His astonishing > mechanism was presented in every court in Europe and fascinated the > world's most important people: the kings and emperors of China, India > and Japan.
>
> http://fogonazos.blogspot.com/2007/01/writing-automaton.html
>

↑ Index

354. Lewis LaCook

The Courtship of Eddie's Father - New Audio by Lewis LaCook at lewislacook.org

Wed 17 Jan 2007

---

http://www.lewislacook.org/index.php?option=com_zoom&Itemid=43&page=view&catid=1&PageNo=2&key=14&hit=1

Lewis LaCook, Senior Engineer
Abstract Outlooks Media

http://www.abstractoutlooks.com
Abstract Outlooks Media - Premium Web Hosting, Development, and Art Photography
http://www.lewislacook.org
lewislacook.org - New Media Poetry and Poetics

http://www.xanaxpop.org
Xanax Pop - the poetry of Lewis LaCook

****

||http://www.abstractoutlooks.com ||
Abstract Outlooks Media - A New Vision for A New Web
Hosting, Design, Development, Photography

||http://www.lewislacook.org||
New Media Poetry and Poetics

||http://www.xanaxpop.org||
Xanax Pop - A Bloge of Poemes

Need Mail bonding?
Go to the Yahoo! Mail Q&A for great tips from Yahoo! Answers users.

↑ Index

355. Vernon Frazer
e-mail for Jessica Hagedorn and Edward Sanders (setn on behalf of Michael Rothenberg
Wed 17 Jan 2007

I am looking for e-mail for Jessica Hagedorn and Edward Sanders.

Would appreciate it.

Best, Michael

[redacted]

↑ Index

356. Wes Chapman
Re: The writing automaton
Wed 17 Jan 2007

Certainly metaphysical ones, although the implications go all different ways. Cf. Descartes, who likens the body to a clock, the implication being that the body is mechanical but the mind is not; here the "clockwork" idea supports Cartesian dualism. If I recall correctly, however, Baron d'Holbach also uses a clockwork metaphor in his monist and mechanistic vision of human beings; here the clockwork metaphor supports the view that there is no such thing as free will. And of course there's Hoffman's "The Sandman," which discounts the too-easy idea of the humans as clockwork (various people mistake Olympia for a human, but they're fools to do so), only to conclude that humans are nevertheless driven by impulses beyond their control. Etc.

Wes Chapman

Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:
> What is fascinating to me about it is that Jaquet-Droz was a clockmaker.
> The > 18th century vision of God was a clockmaker, who wound up the clock and > left > it to run: therefore, the automaton as an image of the universe with traces > of the hand of God.
>
> My guess is that the 18th century obsession with toys as replicas (as our > present obsession with computers and digital language?) has religious > implications.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On 1/17/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>>
>> (check out the videos of the doll in action, still works after all >> these years)
>>
>> from fogonazos:
>>
>> The writing automaton
>>
>> In the eighteenth century, 200 years before little ASIMO started to >> walk or to climb stairs, the great Jaquet-Droz built an automaton >> which could scrawl any sentence on a piece of paper and had a >> chilling repertory of human-like movements. Read the story an then >> check it out at the videos:
>>
>> Completed by 1772, 'The Writer' was the most perfect and complex >> automaton built by swiss clockmaker Jacquet-Droz. His astonishing >> mechanism was presented in every court in Europe and fascinated the >> world's most important people: the kings and emperors of China, India >> and Japan.
>>
>> http://fogonazos.blogspot.com/2007/01/writing-automaton.html
>>

--
Wes Chapman
Associate Professor of English
Illinois Wesleyan University
P.O. Box 2900
Bloomington, IL 61702-2900
[redacted]

↑ Index

357. Stephen Vincent
³Water Spilled From Source To Use² Lawrence Weiner
Wed 17 Jan 2007

---

³Water Spilled From Source To Use² is a 1984 text/site (sight!) piece by text artist Lawrence Weiner on a Greenwich Street near Canal in NYC. A visit to my blog will give you photo and commentary (with additional thanks to Alan Sondheim, miEKAL and David Abel for their various inputs):

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Of course you are welcome to cruise/scroll down for city texts & images - or what Lisa Robertson calls the 'soft architecture' of looking,interpreting.

Your comments always appreciated.

Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

358. Stephen Vincent
New de blog / Lawrence Weiner, etc
Wed 17 Jan 2007

---

³Water Spilled From Source To Use² is a 1984 text/site (sight!) piece by text artist Lawrence Weiner on a Greenwich Street near Canal in NYC. A visit to my blog will give you photo and commentary (with additional thanks to Alan Sondheim, miEKAL and David Abel for their various inputs):

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Of course you are welcome to cruise/scroll down for city texts & images - or what Lisa Robertson calls the 'soft architecture' of looking, interpreting.

Your comments always appreciated.

Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

359. Tom W. Lewis
new work on Minnesotan Ice
Wed 17 Jan 2007

now on http://minnesotan-ice.blogspot.com/ :

contributions by Mary Kasimor & David Christopher La Terre, as well as the usual reportage from L'Etoile Du Nord . . .

↑ Index

360. David-Baptiste Chirot
FW: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turner's
Wed 17 Jan 2007

Whatever one may think re President Carter, his new book and the issues involved--

this is a truly bizarre story--
i don't think i have ever come across a mega-bookseller running a long attack review to go with a book they are selling-- something very frightening abt it in regards to freedom of speech, press-- more info with the Petition-

> "Tell Amazon to Treat Carter's Book Fairly"
>
> hosted on the web by our free online petition service, at:
>
> http://www.PetitionOnline.com/Amazon07/

an interesting articile re protest /lack thereof and also role of poetry in war; has anyone else read Brian Turner's book of poems HERE, BULLET quoted from in the article?

http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/article16195.htm

_____ The MSN Entertainment Guide to Golden Globes is here. Get all the scoop. http://tv.msn.com/tv/globes2007/?icid=nctagline2

↑ Index

361. Eric Dickey

Re: FW: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turner's

Wed 17 Jan 2007

I found Here, Bullet by Brian Turner very moving. The title seems to call for the bullet to come to the speaker, come kill me, bullet, please take me out of this hell hole. However, I wasn't completely satisfied with the title poem: It drew attention to the location and place. After that, I couldn't tell if Turner, a soldier, was pro- or anti-war. In the Kamiya piece, the ending excerpt is a perfect example: sometimes the second person in a poem can refer to the first person, but I question whether that's the case with Turner.

Still, a very powerful book, well-worth the read and all of the acolades it has received.

David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:
Whatever one may think re President Carter, his new book and the issues involved--

this is a truly bizarre story--
i don't think i have ever come across a mega-bookseller running a long attack review to go with a book they are selling-- something very frightening abt it in regards to freedom of speech, press--
more info with the Petition-

> "Tell Amazon to Treat Carter's Book Fairly"
>
> hosted on the web by our free online petition service, at:
>
> http://www.PetitionOnline.com/Amazon07/

an interesting articile re protest /lack thereof and also role of poetry in war; has anyone else read Brian Turner's book of poems HERE, BULLET quoted from in the article?

http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/article16195.htm

_____ The MSN Entertainment Guide to Golden Globes is here. Get all the scoop.
http://tv.msn.com/tv/globes2007/?icid=nctagline2

Bored stiff? Loosen up...
Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games.

↑ Index

362. Jim Andrews
Re: The writing automaton
Wed 17 Jan 2007

It is a little-appreciated irony that Turing devised the fundamental object of the theory of computation--the Turing machine (he called it the "a-machine")--in a successful effort to demonstrate the existence of tasks for which no algorithm can possibly ever exist (humans are not necessarily capable of such tasks either). In other words, he wanted to demonstrate the existence of tasks that no machine will ever be capable of. When we pause and reflect on what Turing set out to prove, we realize that, to do it, he needs to devise a machine that can do anything that any conceivable machine can do (which is a tall order), and then show that it can't do certain tasks.

In devising the Turing machine, which was simply a means toward the proof, he devised the fundamental theoretical object of which all contemporary computers are instanstantiations. In demonstrating the existence of certain tasks that the machine is incapable of, he solved Hilbert's 'Entscheidungsproblem' ('decision problem'), one of the most famous mathematical problems of the day.

So is The Writing Automaton a computer? The question can be rethought this way: is it capable of anything that a Turing machine is capable of? If it is, it is said to be 'Turing complete' (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Turing_completeness).

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

363. Carol Novack
Reading 1/21
Wed 17 Jan 2007

Dear Colleagues:

Here are the revised particulars for this coming Sunday, the 21st. I'll be reading again next Thursday (probably different stuff) in Astoria, if you can't make this reading in the East Village. But if you can't make either of these, there's our KGB Mad Hatters' Rev reading on Friday night, the 26th --- featuring Norman Lock, Terese Svoboda & Deb Olin Unferth.

See: http://www.madhattersreview.com/events.shtml.

In Dementia,

Carol

THE PHOENIX READING SERIES @ HIGH CHAI

18 Ave B (between 1st & 2nd)

[redacted]

*Sunday, January 21, 2007 *2pm *

*Carol Novack *is a long lapsed criminal defense/constitutional lawyer. Her writings can and will be found in many publications, including The Penguin Book of Australian Women Poets, American Letters & Commentary, Anemone Sidecar, Big Bridge, BlazeVOX, Del Sol Review, Diagram, First Intensity, 5_Trope, La Petite Zine, LIT, Milk, Notre Dame Review, Salt River Review, and Word Riot. Carol publishes and edits the offbeat e-journal Mad Hatters' Review, teaches innovative fiction writing at The Women's Studio Center, curates a reading series at the KGB Bar, and writes a humorous advice column for City Scoops under the nom Loopy Lulu.

*Anne Elliott '*s poetry has been featured in anthologies including Aloud: Voices from the Nuyorican Poets' Cafe, Poetry Nation: the North American Anthology of Fusion Poetry, and Verses that Hurt: Pleasure and Pain from the Poemfone Poets. She has performed (with and without ukulele) at the Whitney Museum, PS122, Dixon Place, St. Mark's Poetry Project, and others. Her short fiction has appeared in Hobart and Pindeldyboz, and she currently seeks a home for her novel, Starving Hysterical Naked. She blogs on the writing life and feral cat management at http://assbackwords.blogspot.com.

*Rob Stephenson *is NYC based writer, composer, and visual artist. His writings have appeared in print and online in such publications as Entangled Lives, Skin and Ink, Blithe House Quarterly, Velvet Mafia, Dangerous Families, Problem Child, Best Bisexual Erotica, and Perspectives on Evil and Human Wickedness; writings will also emerge shortly in Issue 7 of Mad Hatters' Review. Rob Stephenson's first novel is forthcoming from Suspect Thoughts Press. His drawings have been exhibited at the Intersection Art Gallery in San Francisco, the Headlands Center for the Arts, the Katona Museum, and the Wexner Center for the Arts. His experimental music CD "dog" composed with Mikael Karlsson is now out on Please MusicWorks. Visit www.dog-cd.com.

OPEN READING FOLLOWS—AS TIME ALLOWS

One Purchase & Donation

↑ Index

364. Jason Quackenbush

Re: FW: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turner's

Wed 17 Jan 2007

This is a fascinating issue. I recently stopped shopping at a bookstore i quite like because the owner was loudly voicing the view that Howard Zinn was an unamerican communist who only told lies about america as he was selling a copy of A People's History of the United States to a young woman.

I won't give money to merchants who think they have a right to do that to their customers. Amazon included.

On Wed, 17 Jan 2007, David-Baptiste Chirot wrote:

> Whatever one may think re President Carter, his new book and the issues involved--
>
> this is a truly bizarre story--
> i don't think i have ever come across a mega-bookseller running a long attack review to go with a book they are selling-- > something very frightening abt it in regards to freedom of speech, press--
> more info with the Petition-
>
> "Tell Amazon to Treat Carter's Book Fairly"
>
> hosted on the web by our free online petition service, at:
>
> http://www.PetitionOnline.com/Amazon07/
>
> an interesting articile re protest /lack thereof and also role of poetry in war; has anyone else read Brian Turner's book of poems HERE, BULLET quoted from in the article?
>
> http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/article16195.htm
>
> ---
> The MSN Entertainment Guide to Golden Globes is here. Get all the scoop.
> http://tv.msn.com/tv/globes2007/?icid=nctagline2

↑ Index

365. heidi arnold
Stop the War on Terror -- And All Wars
Wed 17 Jan 2007

Current NY Times Op-Ed:

http://select.nytimes.com/2007/01/18/opinion/18herbert.html?hp

--
www.heidiarnold.org
http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

366. Alan Sondheim
the disappearance of performers
Thu 18 Jan 2007

---

the disappearance of performers

123 through Incidence performers, Foofwa d'Imobilite, sFx Alan Sondheim YouTube not bad here:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RkHhzj_x3wo Fuller version:
http://www.asondheim.org/123.mp4

early rediscovered instrumental rehearsal tapes (73?- 75?) w/ Laurie Anderson (violin), Alan Sondheim (mandolin, guitar)

http://www.asondheim.org/lauriealan4star.mp3
http://www.asondheim.org/lauriealan5star.mp3

the rediscovery of a tenuous history of culture and net before collapse

early tapes with other performers forthcoming

↑ Index

367. Mark Truscott
January 24: NourbeSe Philip and Thomas in Toronto
Thu 18 Jan 2007

Come out of the cold, and come to this reading!

January 24, 7:30 p.m.
M. NourbeSe Philip and Hugh Thomas (bios below)
Mercer Union, A Centre for Contemporary Art
37 Lisgar St., Toronto

Tonnes of information (including recordings of previous readings and a map): www.testreading.org

Next month: February 7: Nicole Brossard + Barbara Godard and Sharon Harris

Hope to see you there,

Mark

* M. NOURBESE PHILIP is a poet, essayist, novelist and playwright who lives in the space-time of the City of Toronto. She practised law in the City of Toronto for seven years before leaving to write full time. She has published four books of poetry, one novel and three collections of essays. She was awarded a Pushcart Prize (USA) in 1981, the Casa de las Americas Prize (Cuba) in 1988, the Tradewinds Collective Prize in 1988 and was made a Guggenheim Fellow in Poetry (USA) in 1990. In 1994 she was awarded the Lawrence Foundation Prize (USA) for short fiction and her work was recognized in 1995 by the Arts Foundation of Toronto by its Writing and Publishing Award. In 1999 her play Coups and Calypsos was a Dora Award finalist. She recently completed a residency at the Rockefeller Foundation, Bellagio, Italy.

HUGH THOMAS is a poet and translator currently living in Fredericton, where he teaches mathematics at the University of New Brunswick. He is the author of Mutations (BookThug, 2004) and has poems in the anthology Shift & Switch: New Canadian Poetry (Mercury, 2005) and the magazines dig and This among others.

↑ Index

368. David Applegate
NEW* Brooklyn reading series!*
Thu 18 Jan 2007

The Confessional
a free monthly reading series at The Abbey.

Featuring Adam Burchard
and Bad Noise Productions' David Applegate

January 20 Seven PM

536 Driggs btw N. 7th and N. 8th

Please join us for the 1st installment!

↑ Index

369. Rob McLennan
living the arts in ottawa: an open letter
Thu 18 Jan 2007

living the arts in ottawa: an open letter
http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2007/01/living-arts-in-ottawa-open-letter.html

& while i was posting, the ottawa citizen editorial (fraction) from today's paper:
http://www.canada.com/ottawacitizen/news/editorials/story.html?id=07b37fef-d800-4da6-a142-d736ef032095

rob

-- poet/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...12th poetry coll'n - aubade (Broken Jaw Press) .... c/o 858 Somerset St W, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7 * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

370. kevin thurston buffalo small press fair
Thu 18 Jan 2007

Hello!

I'm excited to announce the Buffalo Small Press Fair. Christopher Fritton & I have been working diligently behind the scenes to set-up the space, now we need people like you to populate it.

The Buffalo Small Press Fair is designed to bring together a plurality of people in different veins of publishing: poetry, fiction, comics, graphic design, politics, etc. for a one-day event March 31st at the beautiful Karpeles Manuscript museum. Along with vendors, we will have an exhibit provided by Michael Basinski of the SUNY Buffalo Poetry & Rare Books Library highlighting Buffalo's small press history. There is also space for possible round-tables, forums and the like, so if that interests you too, please let either myself or Christopher Fritton know.

The website <http://buffalosmallpress.org/> is complete enough for you to get an overview and perhaps answer some questions you may have.

What else? We are looking for vendors. You can fill this out online<http://www.buffalosmallpress.org/participate/vendor-application/> <http://www.buffalosmallpress.org/participate/vendor-application/>and even pay through PayPal if you wish.

Please forward this email to any interested parties--our scope currently is regional (Ohio, up through Toronto, Syracuse to the east & Pittsburgh to the south--give or take).

Also occuring that weekend (starting Thursday, running through Saturday) will be the second Electric City Spectacular. Last year's event saw numerous artists reading, performing & screening films. Saturday night's event will likely be at the Karpeles Manuscript museum also, making for quite a day-trip.

Thank you in advance for your support,

Chris & Kevin

--
http://www.angelfire.com/poetry/thepixelplus/nhdoublewide.html

↑ Index

371. Mark Weiss
Jaime Saenz
Thu 18 Jan 2007

Here's an important book that I'll be ordering this afternoom: The Night, by Jaime Saenz, translated by Forrest Gander and Kent Johnson. Some of you may know their wonderful selected Saenz, Immanent Visitor, published a couple of years ago. Saenz is Bolivia's greatest poet, and his booklength The Night is his greatest poem. A bargain at $19.95.

<http://press.princeton.edu/titles/8377.html>http://press.princeton.edu/titles/8377.html

↑ Index

372. Michael Tod Edgerton
Re: Jaime Saenz
Thu 18 Jan 2007

Is it out yet? They had it on pre-order at MLA. I LOVE The Night--or at least the excerpt I read of it in the journal No a couple of issues back.

Tod

Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote: Here's an important book that I'll be ordering this afternoom: The Night, by Jaime Saenz, translated by Forrest Gander and Kent Johnson. Some of you may know their wonderful selected Saenz, Immanent Visitor, published a couple of years ago. Saenz is Bolivia's greatest poet, and his booklength The Night is his greatest poem. A bargain at $19.95.

http://press.princeton.edu/titles/8377.html

"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
- Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

Looking for earth-friendly autos?
 Browse Top Cars by "Green Rating" at Yahoo! Autos' Green Center.

↑ Index

373. Adam Fieled
Mark Lamoureux on PFS Post
Thu 18 Jan 2007

Check out four lovely poems from NYC poet Mark Lamoureux on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

along w a new interview w Eric Baus, poems from Bill Allegrezza, Jeff Crouch, Susan Wallack, Steve Halle, and others...

Love,
Ad

Check out the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta - Fire up a more powerful email and get things done faster.

↑ Index

374. Jay Dougherty
Interview with poet Todd Moore
Thu 18 Jan 2007

PoetryCircle is pleased to present an interview with poet Todd Moore, conducted by poet Anita L. Wynn.

http://www.poetrycircle.com/index.php/topic,3149.0.html

↑ Index

375. Ruth Lepson
Re: Mark Lamoureux on PFS Post
Thu 18 Jan 2007

yes they are lovely, congrats to Mark

On 1/18/07 4:40 PM, "Adam Fieled" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Check out four lovely poems from NYC poet Mark Lamoureux on PFS Post:
>
> http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

> along w a new interview w Eric Baus, poems from Bill Allegrezza, Jeff Crouch, Susan Wallack, Steve Halle, and others...
>
> Love,
> Ad
>
> ---
> Check out the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta - Fire up a more powerful email and get things done faster.

↑ Index

376. Sina Queyras
corey frost
Fri 19 Jan 2007

Anyone have Corey's email? (Or Corey can you get in touch?)

Thanks.

Sina

--
Sina Queyras
Visiting Assistant Professor
Department of English
Woodside Cottage
Haverford College
370 Lancaster Avenue
Haverford, PA 19041-1392
[redacted]

↑ Index

377. Alan Sondheim
strange video and other audio
Fri 19 Jan 2007

---

strange video and other audio

strange video lecturing on nabil kanso on google tv
i don't know who put this up i didn't
i seem to touch my face a lot
i lost weight

i jumped up and down with the analog video frame who am i what have i done http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=1019448160506157197&q=%22Alan+Sondheim%22&hl=en

i knew kanso but don't know what he's up to

=====

more from archive: david smith, alan sondheim, 198?
sondheim, guitar, smith, electronic setups

http://www.asondheim.org/davidalan1.mp3 http://www.asondheim.org/davidalanstar2.mp3

notes from conversation w/ david bohm, 1974?

http://www.asondheim.org/davidbohmnotesmall.mp3

music with chris frantz & others, 1973?

http://www.asondheim.org/franzstarsection1.mp3

↑ Index

378. EH

St. Joseph College Reading 2/6

Fri 19 Jan 2007

---

6 Tues., Poets of the Film Forum Aesthetic: A Poetry Reading - In celebration of the new 16-poet anthology entitled Oh One Arrow published by Film Forum Press, editors Adam Golaski and Matthew Klane will read selections from this volume of contemporary poetry with a focus on experiment and serial poetry. Admission: free of charge. The Bruyette Athenaeum's 2nd Floor Reception Room, St. Joseph Collge, Hartford, CT, 7:30 p.m. For more information, contact Dennis Barone, Ph.D., at [redacted] or [redacted].

More information on the poets in attendance can be found at http://www.flimforum.blogspot.com/:

Lori Anderson Moseman
John Cotter
editor Adam Golaski &
editor Matthew Klane

& local guest poet
Eric Hoffman

date & time: February 6, 2007; 7:30pm location: St. Joseph College, 2nd floor reception room copies of the flim forum press anthology Oh One Arrow will be available for purchase

---
Be a PS3 game guru.
Get your game face on with the latest PS3 news and previews at Yahoo! Games.

↑ Index

379. Andrew Epstein
Publication Announcement: Beautiful Enemies: Friendship and Postwar American Poetry
Fri 19 Jan 2007

I'm pleased to announce that my book Beautiful Enemies: Friendship and Postwar American Poetry was recently published by Oxford University Press. I've pasted information below about the book. It can be purchased through Amazon and other booksellers, and through the Oxford website, for a discount, if you use a special promotional code (25535).

http://www.us.oup.com/us/catalog/general/subject/LiteratureEnglish/Poetry/American/?view=usa&ci=9780195181005

If you might be interested in reviewing the book, please let me know.

Thanks -
Andrew

****

Beautiful Enemies: Friendship and Postwar American Poetry (Oxford University Press, 2006)

Although it has long been commonplace to imagine the archetypal American poet singing a solitary "Song of Myself," much of the most enduring American poetry has actually been preoccupied with the drama of friendship. In this lucid and absorbing study, Andrew Epstein argues that an obsession with both the pleasures and problems of friendship erupts in the "New American Poetry" that emerges after the Second World War. By focusing on some of the most significant postmodernist American poets – the "New York School" poets John Ashbery, Frank O'Hara, and their close contemporary Amiri Baraka – Beautiful

Enemies reveals a fundamental paradox at the heart of postwar American poetry and culture: the avant-garde's commitment to individualism and nonconformity runs directly counter to its own valorization of community and collaboration. In fact, Epstein demonstrates that the clash between friendship and nonconformity complicates the legendary alliances forged by postwar poets, becomes a predominant theme in the poetry they created, and leaves contemporary writers with a complicated legacy to negotiate. Rather than simply celebrating friendship and poetic community as nurturing and inspiring, these poets represent friendship as a kind of exhilarating, maddening contradiction, a site of attraction and repulsion, affinity and rivalry.

Challenging both the reductive critiques of American individualism and the idealized, heavily biographical celebrations of literary camaraderie one finds in much critical discussion, this book provides a new interpretation of the peculiar dynamics of American avant-garde poetic communities and the role of the individual within them. By situating his extensive and revealing readings of these highly influential poets against the backdrop of Cold War cultural politics and within the context of American pragmatist thought, Epstein uncovers the collision between radical self-reliance and the siren call of the interpersonal at the core of postwar American poetry.

* * * *

"Beautiful Enemies charts the fascinating tensions between individual and community in the New York poetry world of mid-century. For post-World War II poets, friendship was at once the engine that made poetry come alive, and yet it could also be confining and oppressive – the source of competition as well as nourishment. Andrew Epstein examines the role community played in the forging of New York poetics – a poetics that cannot be dissociated from its relation to Cold War politics. His is a fascinating, beautifully documented investigation, both of individual poems and of the interlocking friendships that animated their production."

-- Marjorie Perloff, author of Frank O'Hara: Poet Among Painters

"In Beautiful Enemies, Andrew Epstein offers exemplary Emersonian readings of the intricate web connecting individual talent and collective investment in the poetry and poetics of John Ashbery, Frank O'Hara, and Amiri Baraka. Averting the Cold War myth of the individual voice in the wilderness of conformity, Epstein gives us voices in conversation and conflict, suggesting that resistance to agreement is at the heart of a pragmatist understanding of literary community."

-- Charles Bernstein, Donald T. Regan Professor of English, University of Pennsylvania

"The premise is simple-John Ashbery and Frank O'Hara were frenemies, as were O'Hara and LeRoi Jones (now Amiri Baraka)-but Florida State University assistant professor Epstein handles it with such care and intelligence, that his study ends up revealing a great deal about the American midcentury avant-garde. For those in the know, the above two friendships won't be news, but never before have they been presented in such painstaking detail, backed by a wealth of letters and readings of the poets' verse that are patient in the explication, and in their refusal to draw easy conclusions about the nature of the relationships under discussion. Two opening chapters offer an introduction to the avant-garde as it functioned in American culture, and to its Emersonian origins, followed by individual chapters considering each of the three poets (with close references to the other two, and to many other poets and artists), and a final summation of the many paradoxes and contradictions encountered therein. Anyone with an interest in the ways great poetry depends on complex and extraordinary relationships will find this book deeply rewarding." -- Publishers Weekly

Andrew Epstein received his Ph.D. from Columbia University and is currently an Assistant Professor of English at Florida State University. His essays and reviews have appeared in Raritan, Lingua Franca, Fulcrum, Contemporary Literature and other journals, and his poems have appeared in various journals, including Cross-Connect, Conduit, Mississippi Review, Lungfull, and Verse.

****

Andrew Epstein
English Department
Florida State University
Tallahassee, FL 32306-1580
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://english.fsu.edu/faculty/aepstein.htm

↑ Index

380. Joel Weishaus
John Hianes
Fri 19 Jan 2007

Does anyone have an email address for John Haines?
If so, please contact me directly.

Thanks so much,
Joel

↑ Index

381. Bill Marsh
Heretical Texts Vol. 3.1: Heriberto Yépez
Fri 19 Jan 2007

New from Factory School:

Heretical Texts, Volume 3, No. 1

WARS. THREESOMES. DRAFTS. & MOTHERS by Heriberto Yépez

Factory School. 2007. 66 pages, perfect bound, 6.5x9.
ISBN: 1-60001-050-4

$12 / available through Small Press Distribution
(http://www.spdbooks.org/)

The complete third volume (5 books) is available at a discount direct from the publisher:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/order.html

Description: WARS. THREESOMES. DRAFTS. & MOTHERS plays with September 11. It's a book on war. A book of hate toward the United States. A book of love toward ghosts. Several stories are triggered around the war against Iraq, among them the story of a couple of brothers involved in several love triangles. This is a love-drug-passion-esquizophrenic experiment that involves you till the end. This is a book made of orgasms and quotes. This is a book on writing in an age of Empire. This is a book on the deep meaning of 'United-States'.

Heriberto Yépez is a Mexican writer. His work has been celebrated in Latin America and the United States. He's the author of several books of narrative in Spanish, such as El matasellos and A.B.U.R.T.O, both published by Random House-Mondadori-Sudamericana. He's also the author of several collections of essays, poetry and translations. He currently teaches critical theory in Tijuana.

For more about the Heretical Texts series:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/heretical/index.html

Volume One:

1. Dan Featherston, United States
2. Laura Elrick, Fantasies in Permeable Structures
3. Linh Dinh, Borderless Bodies
4. Sarah Menefee, Human Star
5. kari edwards, obedience

Volume Two:

1. Diane Ward, Flim-Yoked Scrim
2. Steve Carll, Tracheal Centrifuge
3. Kristin Prevallet, Shadow Evidence Intelligence
4. Brian Kim Stefans, What is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers
5. Carol Mirakove, Mediated

Volume Three:

1. Heriberto Yépez, Wars. Threesomes. Drafts. & Mothers
2. Meg Hamill, Death Notices
3. Nick Piombino, fait accompli
4. Catherine Daly, Chanteuse/Cantatrice
5. Ammiel Alcalay, Scrapmetal

Contact: info "at" factoryschool.org [or reply backchannel to this email]

↑ Index

382. Maria Damon
[Fwd: Assassination of Hrank Dink]
Fri 19 Jan 2007

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

name="Assassination of Hrank Dink" filename="Assassination of Hrank Dink"

by aquamarine.tc.umn.edu (UMN smtpd) with ESMTP
Fri, 19 Jan 2007 11:50:02 -0600 (CST)
by mta-m2.tc.umn.edu (UMN smtpd) with ESMTP
Fri, 19 Jan 2007 11:44:55 -0600 (CST)
Date: Fri, 19 Jan 2007 11:43:12 -0600 (CST)
From: Stephen Feinstein <[redacted]>
To: Undisclosed recipients:;
Subject: Assassination of Hrank Dink

For those of you who follow the debate on the Armenian Genocide, Turkish law 301 which makes it a crime to use the "G" word and "defame the Turkish Republic, Hrank Dink, Armenian-Turkish editor of Argos was assassinated this morning in Istanbul. We have direct connections with his group as Taner Akcam, the leading Turkish historian who confirms the events of 1915 as Genocide is on our staff.

This is from New Anatolian but you can find a lot more on the web:

Prominent Turkish-Armenian journalist Hrant Dink murdered

(AP)
19 January 2007

Journalist Hrant Dink, one of the most prominent voices of Turkey's Armenian community, was killed by a gunman Friday at the entrance to his newspaper's offices, police said.

Dink, a 53-year-old Turkish citizen of Armenian descent, had gone on trial numerous times for speaking out about the mass killings of Armenians by Ottoman Empire at the beginning of the 20th century. He had received threats from ultra-nationalists, who viewed him as a traitor.

Dink was a public figure in Turkey, and as the editor of the bilingual Turkish-Armenian newspaper Agos, one of its most prominent Armenian voices.

In his last column for Agos, Dink complained that he had become famous as an enemy of Turks and wrote of threats against him. He said he had received no protection from authorities despite his complaints.

"My computer's memory is loaded with sentences full of hatred and threats," Dink wrote. "I am just like a pigeon ... I look around to my left and right, in front and behind me as much as it does. My head is just as active."

Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan, in a news conference after the killing, vowed to catch those responsible and called the slaying an attack on Turkey's unity.

Erdogan said he had appointed top officials from the justice and security ministries to investigate the killing, and that two suspects had been arrested in Istanbul. He gave no details on the suspects.

"Hrant's body is lying on the ground as if those bullets were fired at Turkey," Can Dundar, also a journalist, told private NTV television.

Turkey's relationship with its Armenian community is fraught with tension, controversy and painful memories of a brutal past. Much of Turkey's once-sizeable Armenian population was driven out beginning around 1915.

During World War I, as the Ottoman Turkish empire fought Russian forces, some of the Armenian minority in eastern Anatolia sided with the Russians.

In May 1915, the Armenian minority, one or two million strong, was forcefully deported and marched from the Anatolian borders towards Syria and Mesopotamia (now Iraq). Many died en route.

Armenia says 1.5 million Armenians were killed in this period, either through systematic massacres or through starvation.

It alleges that a deliberate genocide was carried out by the Ottoman Turkish empire.

Turkey acknowledges that many Armenians died, but says Turks died too, and that massacres were committed on both sides as a result of inter-ethnic violence and the wider World War.

Dink had been convicted of trying to influence the judiciary in 2005 after Agos ran stories criticizing a law making it a crime to insult Turkey, the Turkish government or the Turkish national character.

The conviction was rare even in a country where trials of journalists, academics and writers have become common. Most of the cases, including that of Nobel Prize-winning novelist Orhan Pamuk last year, were either dropped on a technicality or lead to acquittals.

Fehmi Koru, a columnist at the Yeni Safak newspaper, said the killing was aimed at destabilizing Turkey.

"His loss is the loss of Turkey," Koru said. Dozens of other journalists, many of them friends of Dink, publicly condemned the killing. Broadcasters on CNN-Turk and NTV, two of the major news stations, called it "shameful," "saddening" and "embarrassing."

Dr. Stephen Feinstein, Director
Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies
University of Minnesota
100 Nolte Hall West
315 Pillsbury Drive
Minneapolis, MN. 55455
Phone: (612) [redacted]
FAX: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
WEB SITE: http://www.chgs.umn.edu

----------090408050800080505060702--

↑ Index

383. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: [Fwd: Assassination of Hrank Dink]

Fri 19 Jan 2007

Maria,

I just heard about it. This is horrible news.

Murat

On 1/19/07, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
>
>
>
> ---------- Forwarded message ----------
> From: Stephen Feinstein <[redacted]>
> To: Undisclosed recipients:;
> Date: Fri, 19 Jan 2007 11:43:12 -0600 (CST)
> Subject: Assassination of Hrank Dink
> For those of you who follow the debate on the Armenian Genocide, Turkish > law 301 which makes it a crime to use the "G" word and "defame the Turkish > Republic, Hrank Dink, Armenian-Turkish editor of Argos was assassinated > this morning in Istanbul. We have direct connections with his group as > Taner Akcam, the leading Turkish historian who confirms the events of 1915 > as Genocide is on our staff.

>
>
> This is from New Anatolian but you can find a lot more on the web:
>
>
> Prominent Turkish-Armenian journalist Hrant Dink murdered
>
> (AP)
> 19 January 2007
>
>
> Journalist Hrant Dink, one of the most prominent voices of Turkey's > Armenian community, was killed by a gunman Friday at the entrance to his > newspaper's offices, police said.
>
> Dink, a 53-year-old Turkish citizen of Armenian descent, had gone on trial > numerous times for speaking out about the mass killings of Armenians by > Ottoman Empire at the beginning of the 20th century. He had received > threats from ultra-nationalists, who viewed him as a traitor.
>
> Dink was a public figure in Turkey, and as the editor of the bilingual > Turkish-Armenian newspaper Agos, one of its most prominent Armenian > voices.
>
> In his last column for Agos, Dink complained that he had become famous as > an enemy of Turks and wrote of threats against him. He said he had > received no protection from authorities despite his complaints.
>
> "My computer's memory is loaded with sentences full of hatred and > threats," Dink wrote. "I am just like a pigeon ... I look around to my > left and right, in front and behind me as much as it does. My head is just > as active."
>
> Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan, in a news conference after the > killing, vowed to catch those responsible and called the slaying an attack > on Turkey's unity.
>
> Erdogan said he had appointed top officials from the justice and security > ministries to investigate the killing, and that two suspects had been > arrested in Istanbul. He gave no details on the suspects.

>
> "Hrant's body is lying on the ground as if those bullets were fired at > Turkey," Can Dundar, also a journalist, told private NTV television.
>
> Turkey's relationship with its Armenian community is fraught with tension, > controversy and painful memories of a brutal past.
> Much of Turkey's once-sizeable Armenian population was driven out > beginning around 1915.
>
> During World War I, as the Ottoman Turkish empire fought Russian forces, > some of the Armenian minority in eastern Anatolia sided with the Russians.
>
> In May 1915, the Armenian minority, one or two million strong, was > forcefully deported and marched from the Anatolian borders towards Syria > and Mesopotamia (now Iraq). Many died en route.
>
> Armenia says 1.5 million Armenians were killed in this period, either > through systematic massacres or through starvation.
>
> It alleges that a deliberate genocide was carried out by the Ottoman > Turkish empire.
>
> Turkey acknowledges that many Armenians died, but says Turks died too, and > that massacres were committed on both sides as a result of inter-ethnic > violence and the wider World War.
>
> Dink had been convicted of trying to influence the judiciary in 2005 after > Agos ran stories criticizing a law making it a crime to insult Turkey, the > Turkish government or the Turkish national character.
>
> The conviction was rare even in a country where trials of journalists, > academics and writers have become common. Most of the cases, including > that of Nobel Prize-winning novelist Orhan Pamuk last year, were either > dropped on a technicality or lead to acquittals.
>
> Fehmi Koru, a columnist at the Yeni Safak newspaper, said the killing was > aimed at destabilizing Turkey.
>
> "His loss is the loss of Turkey," Koru said. Dozens of other journalists, > many of them friends of Dink, publicly condemned the killing. Broadcasters > on CNN-Turk and NTV, two of the major news stations, called it "shameful," > "saddening" and "embarrassing."

>
>
> Dr. Stephen Feinstein, Director
> Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies
> University of Minnesota
> 100 Nolte Hall West
> 315 Pillsbury Drive
> Minneapolis, MN. 55455
> Phone: (612) [redacted]
> FAX: [redacted]
> email: [redacted]
> WEB SITE: http://www.chgs.umn.edu
>
>
>

↑ Index

384. Rebecca Weaver
midwayjournal on the radio 1/21/07
Fri 19 Jan 2007

Just a small note to those of you who will be near a radio or web streaming on sunday:

the host of the KFAI Twin Cities community radio's WomenFolk music show, Ellen Stanley, will be interviewing yours truly about Midway Journal. The interview is part of Ellen's ongoing commitment to featuring local arts. I will appear at 130 pm this sunday. You can listen at 90.3 fm (Minneapolis) / 106.7 (St. Paul) or online at www.kfai.org/kfailive.htm. Once KFAI has their archives up, we'll post a link to the interview.

Our new issue will be up soon--look forward to hearing from us!

Best,
Rebecca Weaver

↑ Index

385. Tom W. Lewis
Re: midwayjournal on the radio 1/21/07
Fri 19 Jan 2007

---

good deal, Rebecca -- I'll try to listen in.

Tom

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Rebecca Weaver
Sent: Friday, January 19, 2007 13:39
To: [redacted]
Subject: midwayjournal on the radio 1/21/07

Just a small note to those of you who will be near a radio or web streaming on sunday:

the host of the KFAI Twin Cities community radio's WomenFolk music show, Ellen Stanley, will be interviewing yours truly about Midway Journal. The interview is part of Ellen's ongoing commitment to featuring local arts. I will appear at 130 pm this sunday. You can listen at 90.3 fm (Minneapolis) / 106.7 (St. Paul) or online at www.kfai.org/kfailive.htm. Once KFAI has their archives up, we'll post a link to the interview.

Our new issue will be up soon--look forward to hearing from us!

Best,
Rebecca Weaver

↑ Index

386. Cynie Cory

Re: Publication Announcement: Beautiful Enemies: Friendship and Postwar American Poetry

Fri 19 Jan 2007

Congrats! I have been waiting a long time for this announcement. Oxford Press ain't too shabby, eh!

Good luck with it. I can't wait to purchase it and read it.

Yours,

Cynie Cory
Andrew Epstein <[redacted]> wrote: I'm pleased to announce that my book Beautiful Enemies: Friendship and Postwar American Poetry was recently published by Oxford University Press. I've pasted information below about the book. It can be purchased through Amazon and other booksellers, and through the Oxford website, for a discount, if you use a special promotional code (25535).

http://www.us.oup.com/us/catalog/general/subject/LiteratureEnglish/Poetry/American/?view=usa&ci=9780195181005

If you might be interested in reviewing the book, please let me know.

Thanks -
Andrew

****

Beautiful Enemies: Friendship and Postwar American Poetry (Oxford University Press, 2006)

Although it has long been commonplace to imagine the archetypal American poet singing a solitary "Song of Myself," much of the most enduring American poetry has actually been preoccupied with the drama of friendship. In this lucid and absorbing study, Andrew Epstein argues that an obsession with both the pleasures and problems of friendship erupts in the "New American Poetry" that emerges after the Second World War. By focusing on some of the most significant postmodernist American poets – the "New York School" poets John Ashbery, Frank O'Hara, and their close contemporary Amiri Baraka – Beautiful Enemies reveals a fundamental paradox at the heart of postwar American poetry and culture: the avant-garde's commitment to individualism and nonconformity runs directly counter to its own valorization of community and collaboration. In fact, Epstein demonstrates that the clash between friendship and nonconformity complicates the legendary alliances forged by postwar poets, becomes a predominant theme in the poetry they created, and leaves contemporary writers with a complicated legacy to negotiate. Rather than simply celebrating friendship and poetic community as nurturing and inspiring, these poets represent friendship as a kind of exhilarating, maddening contradiction, a site of attraction and repulsion, affinity and rivalry.

Challenging both the reductive critiques of American individualism and the idealized, heavily biographical celebrations of literary camaraderie one finds in much critical discussion, this book provides a new interpretation of the peculiar dynamics of American avant-garde poetic communities and the role of the individual within them. By situating his extensive and revealing readings of these highly influential poets against the backdrop of Cold War cultural politics and within the context of American pragmatist thought, Epstein uncovers the collision between radical self-reliance and the siren call of the interpersonal at the core of postwar American poetry.

* * * *

"Beautiful Enemies charts the fascinating tensions between individual and community in the New York poetry world of mid-century. For post-World War II poets, friendship was at once the engine that made poetry come alive, and yet it could also be confining and oppressive – the source of competition as well as nourishment. Andrew Epstein examines the role community played in the forging of New York poetics – a poetics that cannot be dissociated from its relation to Cold War politics. His is a fascinating, beautifully documented investigation, both of individual poems and of the interlocking friendships that animated their production."

-- Marjorie Perloff, author of Frank O'Hara: Poet Among Painters

"In Beautiful Enemies, Andrew Epstein offers exemplary Emersonian readings of the intricate web connecting individual talent and collective investment in the poetry and poetics of John Ashbery, Frank O'Hara, and Amiri Baraka. Averting the Cold War myth of the individual voice in the wilderness of conformity, Epstein gives us voices in conversation and conflict, suggesting that resistance to agreement is at the heart of a pragmatist understanding of literary community."

-- Charles Bernstein, Donald T. Regan Professor of English, University of Pennsylvania

"The premise is simple-John Ashbery and Frank O'Hara were frenemies, as were O'Hara and LeRoi Jones (now Amiri Baraka)-but Florida State University assistant professor Epstein handles it with such care and intelligence, that his study ends up revealing a great deal about the American midcentury avant-garde. For those in the know, the above two friendships won't be news, but never before have they been presented in such painstaking detail, backed by a wealth of letters and readings of the poets' verse that are patient in the explication, and in their refusal to draw easy conclusions about the nature of the relationships under discussion. Two opening chapters offer an introduction to the avant-garde as it functioned in American culture, and to its Emersonian origins, followed by individual chapters considering each of the three poets (with close references to the other two, and to many other poets and artists), and a final summation of the many paradoxes and contradictions encountered therein. Anyone with an interest in the ways great poetry depends on complex and extraordinary relationships will find this book deeply rewarding." -- Publishers Weekly

Andrew Epstein received his Ph.D. from Columbia University and is currently an Assistant Professor of English at Florida State University. His essays and reviews have appeared in Raritan, Lingua Franca, Fulcrum, Contemporary Literature and other journals, and his poems have appeared in various journals, including Cross-Connect, Conduit, Mississippi Review, Lungfull, and Verse.

****

Andrew Epstein
English Department
Florida State University
Tallahassee, FL 32306-1580
[redacted]

[redacted]
http://english.fsu.edu/faculty/aepstein.htm

Be a PS3 game guru.
Get your game face on with the latest PS3 news and previews at Yahoo! Games.

↑ Index

387. Ren Powell
Re: [Fwd: Assassination of Hrank Dink]
Fri 19 Jan 2007

Dink was one of the three writers Int. PEN brought attention to on Nov. 15. He was offered asylum so many places, but he wanted to speak out where he felt it was necessary. An amazing person who reminds us all what we often take for granted. At least l know l do.

↑ Index

388. Poetry Project
Events at the Poetry Project 1/22 - 1/26
Fri 19 Jan 2007

Dear Ones,

Please join us for three great readings next week. But first enjoy your weekend AND scroll down to be reminded of the upcoming Poetry Project workshops.

Love,

The Poetry Project

Monday, January 22, 8:00 pm
Gregg Biglieri & Evelyn Reilly

Gregg Biglieri is the author of five chapbooks: Profession, Roma, Los Books, Reading Keats to Sleep and I Heart My Zeppelin. He currently lives in Buffalo, where he is finishing a dissertation on Louis Zukofsky's Bottom: On Shakespeare for the English Department at Temple University. Evelyn Reilly¹s first book, Hiatus, was published in 2004. A chapbook, Fervent Remnants of Reflective Surfaces, is just out. Reilly co-curates the winter segment of the Segue Reading Series. She is currently pondering the relation of ecology and poetry, and is editing ((eco (lang) (uage (reader)), a collection of essays on the subject, with Brenda Iijima.

Wednesday, January 24, 8:00 pm
Alan Gilbert, Bill Mohr & Roberto Tejada

Alan Gilbert's book of critical writings entitled Another Future: Poetry and Art in a Postmodern Twilight was published in the spring of 2006 by Wesleyan University Press. He is currently a Creative Capital Foundation grantee in the field of Innovative Literature (poetry). Bill Mohr has worked as a teacher of creative writing since 1974. As the editor and publisher of Momentum Press from 1974-1988, he published two major anthologies of Los Angeles poets as well as individual titles by over twenty poets and writers. His collections of poetry include Bittersweet Kaleidoscope (If Editions, 2006), Thoughtful Outlaw (Inevitable Press, 1999), Vehemence (New Alliance Records, 1993), Penetralia (Momentum Press, 1984), and Hidden Proofs (Bombshelter Press, 1982). Roberto Tejada was born in Los Angeles, California (1964). From 1987 to 1997 he lived and worked in Mexico City where he founded the journal Mandorla: New Writing From the Americas, a forum for advanced poetry and translation. His work has been widely published in the United States and Latin America, including Vuelta (Octavio Paz, publisher), The Best American Poetry 1996 (Adrienne Rich, editor), and 99 Poets | 1999: An International Poetics Symposium (boundary 2, Charles Bernstein, editor). He teaches Art History, Theory, and Criticism at the University of California, San Diego, where he is faculty in the Visual Arts Department. He is the author of the Gift + Verdict (Leroy Books, 1999) and Amulet Anatomy (Phylum Press, 2001), and Mirrors for Gold (Krupskaya, 2006).

Friday, January 26, 10:30 pm (Door 10:15)
Up Is Up, But So Is Down

Contributors Maggie Dubris, Richard Hell, Eileen Myles, Susie Timmons and David Trinidad join editor Brandon Stosuy in a celebratory reading for the recently published Up Is Up, But So Is Down: New York's Downtown Literary Scene 1974-1992 (NYU Press). Using the book as a launching pad, the authors will step outside its table of contents, selecting and reading key New York texts from their own oeuvres. A reception, co-sponsored by NYU Press, will follow.

Maggie Dubris is the author of WillieWorld (Cuz Editions, 1998), Weep Not, My Wanton (Black Sparrow Press, 2002) and Skels (Soft Skull Press, 2004). She is presently working on an illustrated book called The Dust Zone with the artist Scott Gillis, parts of which can be seen at www.dustzone.com. Richard Hell's most recent CD is the 2005 retrospective Spurts from Warner/Rhino. His novel Godlike came out in 2005 too. He's at work on a book of memories. Eileen Myles has written thousands of poems since she moved to New York in 1974. Her last books were Skies and on my way (poems) and Cool for You (a novel). She's teaching at UCSD and just finished a new novel about the hell of becoming a female poet, called The Inferno. Sorry, Tree, (poems), is coming out in April from wave books. Susie Timmons was a poet in New York from 1975-1991. The city chewed her up and spit her out, and it felt great. David Trinidad's last two books are Plasticville and Phoebe 2002: An Essay in Verse. He also co-edited the forthcoming Saints of Hysteria: A Half-Century of Collaborative American Poetry. He teaches poetry at Columbia College Chicago, where he co-edits the journal Court Green. His next book of poetry, The Late Show, is due from Turtle Point Press in 2007. Brandon Stosuy, a staff writer and columnist at Pitchfork, contributes regularly to The Believer, used to contribute regularly to The Village Voice, writes for Paper Thin Walls, Seattle Weekly, and Spin, and has written for Arthur, BlackBook, Bomb, Bookforum, LA Weekly, Slate and V, among other publications. He lives in Brooklyn, where he is at work on The Believer's 2007 Music Issue Compilation CD, a large essay on Gordon Lish, and his first novel.

Spring Workshops at the Poetry Project

The Poetry School Of Poetry Douglas Rothschild
Tuesdays at 7 Pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 13th

Writing poetry is difficult; writing good poetry, more difficult still. In this workshop, we will focus on exactly what we think is good in a poem & determine how our senses of aesthetics inform our responses to this question. Working within our own aesthetic notions we will then begin to refine our writing, & help each other to write the best poems that we can. The workshop will conduct a number of actual experiments with writing that will allow us to step outside the world of id, which wants to keep all the beautiful words, & into the artistic self, which understands which pieces fit & which belong elsewhere. We will also engage the basic Poetry School of Poetry premise that the poet¹s first job is to learn how to edit. Dgls N. Rthschld has been behind the foods table at the New Years Reading more times than it is worth mentioning. He has also written a number of chapbooks, the most ground breaking entitled The Minor Arcane. He has taught what seem to be innumerable college writing classes, and is currently teaching at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, a CUNY school.

The Visible Unseen: Writing Outside Borders Akilah Oliver Thursdays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 15th

Are poetry and prose virtual realities, simulations of something other, or the real thing? Where does the ³I² live? How many moments exist in the moment of the line? What borders of form are crucial for us to hang on to & which boundaries are collapsible? In this workshop, we will explore the connections and tensions between the visible and the unseen world/s, not as dualities or binaries, but as complementary sites of composition. Through engagement with text (written and visual), public spaces, the imagination, dreams and Eros, participants are invited to think of writing as that which re-imagines the known and the unknown. Though this is a text based workshop, poets, prose writers, and artists from all disciplines are welcome. Readings include: Giorgio Agamben, Laura Mullen, Whitman, Anne Waldman, Derrida, & Ben Okri. Akilah Oliver is the author of the she said dialogues: flesh memory, An Arriving Guard of Angels, Thusly Coming to Greet, a(A)gust, & The Putterer¹s Notebook. She is faculty at the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics Summer Writing Program at Naropa University.

Impurity Rocks! A Poetry Lab & Workshop Joanna Fuhrman
Fridays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 16th

The class will focus on ³impure² poetry, poetry that employs a mixture of tones and styles. Special emphasis will be placed on works that combine narrative and humor with linguistic and imagistic disjunction. In-class exercises and take-home assignments will touch on issues of scale, space, sound, genre and wordplay. Time will also be devoted to reading published poems as well as in-depth discussions and critiques of student work. Joanna Fuhrman is the author of three collections of poetry, Freud in Brooklyn, Ugh Ugh Ocean and Moraine, all published by Hanging Loose Press. She has taught poetry writing at The University of Washington, The Cooper Union Saturday Outreach program and in the New York City Public Schools.

Poetry For The Page, Stage, And Computer Screen Thomas Savage Saturdays At 12 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 17th

This course is a writing workshop where students' writing is the main focus. Also used as inspiration and writing prompts will be samples of work by writers from The Beats, Black Mountain poets, The New York School (all generations), Language Poetry, Poets Theater, Pablo Neruda, and works being published today online, among other sources. Practices will include reading as well as writing assignments and, in a great Poetry Project tradition, in-class writing. Thomas Savage has written eight published books of poems including most recently Bamiyan Poems, Brain Surgery Poems and Political Conditions/Physical States. His poems have appeared in many print and online venues including The New York Times, Hanging Loose, Rattapallax, Big Bridge, Black Box, and regularly on the Wryting-L website. He has taught poetry workshops at The Poetry Project and Tribes Gallery.

* The workshop fee is $350, which includes a one year Sustaining Poetry Project membership and tuition for any and all spring and fall classes. Reservations are required due to limited class space, and payment must be received in advance. Caps on class sizes, if in effect, will be determined by workshop leaders. Please send payment and reservations to:

The Poetry Project, St. Mark's Church
Attn: Workshops

131 East 10th St.
NYC, NY 10003

For more information, or to pay by credit card, please call [redacted], or email: [redacted].

http://www.poetryproject.com/workshops.php

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Winter Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $85 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

389. Bill Marsh
Heretical Texts Vol. 3.2: Meg Hamill
Sat 20 Jan 2007

New from Factory School:

Heretical Texts, Volume 3, No. 2

DEATH NOTICES by Meg Hamill

Factory School. 2007. 74 pages, perfect bound, 6.5x9.
ISBN: 1-60001-051-2

$12 / available through Small Press Distribution
(http://www.spdbooks.org/)

The complete third volume (5 books) is available at a discount direct from the publisher:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/order.html

Description: These poems take the form of obituaries mourning lives that have been lost in the current War in Iraq. Attempting to exclude no group from this public display of grief, alongside obituaries for Iraqi civilians and Iraqi Police, there are obituaries for American soldiers, suicide bombers, and contractors for Halliburton. The poems in DEATH NOTICES repeatedly strive to rise above blame and judgement, until the project becomes simply an effort to “sustain our gaze” long enough in order to feel all of these losses fully.

For more about the Heretical Texts series:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/heretical/index.html

Volume One:

1. Dan Featherston, United States
2. Laura Elrick, Fantasies in Permeable Structures
3. Linh Dinh, Borderless Bodies
4. Sarah Menefee, Human Star
5. kari edwards, obedience

Volume Two:

1. Diane Ward, Flim-Yoked Scrim
2. Steve Carll, Tracheal Centrifuge
3. Kristin Prevallet, Shadow Evidence Intelligence
4. Brian Kim Stefans, What is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers
5. Carol Mirakove, Mediated

Volume Three:

1. Heriberto Yépez, Wars. Threesomes. Drafts. & Mothers
2. Meg Hamill, Death Notices
3. Nick Piombino, fait accompli
4. Catherine Daly, Chanteuse/Cantatrice
5. Ammiel Alcalay, Scrapmetal

Contact: info "at" factoryschool.org [or reply backchannel to this email]

↑ Index

390. Christopher Filkins

Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turner's

Sat 20 Jan 2007

On 1/17/07 3:49 PM, "Eric Dickey" <[redacted]> wrote:
After that, I couldn't tell if
> Turner, a soldier, was pro- or anti-war.

Is this important?

↑ Index

391. Christopher Hamilton-Emery
US Sales and Marketing Manager
Sat 20 Jan 2007

US Sales and Marketing Manager (Salt Publishing)

Salt is a young, innovative literary publisher with a highly- respected US and international list. We are looking to contract a US- based freelance, part-time Sales and Marketing Manager to help us double our turnover over the next three years, working for Salt for one day a week.

The role will be responsible for:

Increasing US sales and profits in line with our strategic goals
Developing key trade accounts with central buyers in the major chains Developing sales accounts with independent bookstores
Developing library sales and small course adoptions
Developing direct mail campaigns, including catalogue and other mailings
Developing direct sales through our Web site
Co-ordinate publicity for our US authors
Co-ordinate Salt's involvement in prizes, readings, festivals and conferences

The successful applicant will be highly-motivated, experienced in sales, and is likely to have an understanding of the poetry and short story markets in all their forms within the US. This is an exciting opportunity to support a dynamic new publisher as it develops its US publishing program, working with a talented senior management team and a wide range of successful authors.

Please contact Chris Hamilton-Emery at [redacted] for more information.

Chris Hamilton-Emery | Publishing Director | Salt Publishing Ltd PO Box 937 | Great Wilbraham | Cambridge | CB1 5JX | [redacted] Buy from Salt and put your money into literature http://www.saltpublishing.com/shop.htm

101 Ways to Make Poems Sell available now! Click below to read more! http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/sgrw/1844711161.htm

Radio Nostalgia available now! Click below to read more! http://www.arcpublications.co.uk/catalogue/view_product.php?product=307

The information contained in this e-mail is confidential. It is intended only for the stated addressee(s) and access to it by any other person is unauthorised. If you are not an addressee, you must not disclose, copy, circulate or in any other way use or rely on information contained in this e-mail. Such unauthorised use may be unlawful. If you have received this mail in error, please inform us immediately at [redacted] and delete it and all copies from your system.

Chris Hamilton-Emery | Publishing Director | Salt Publishing Ltd PO Box 937 | Great Wilbraham | Cambridge | CB1 5JX | [redacted] Buy from Salt and put your money into literature http://www.saltpublishing.com/shop.htm

101 Ways to Make Poems Sell available now! Click below to read more! http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/sgrw/1844711161.htm

Radio Nostalgia available now! Click below to read more! http://www.arcpublications.co.uk/catalogue/view_product.php?product=307

The information contained in this e-mail is confidential. It is intended only for the stated addressee(s) and access to it by any other person is unauthorised. If you are not an addressee, you must not disclose, copy, circulate or in any other way use or rely on information contained in this e-mail. Such unauthorised use may be unlawful. If you have received this mail in error, please inform us immediately at [redacted] and delete it and all copies from your system.

↑ Index

392. Lewis LaCook

Left-handed Pinkie Joint - New Audio by Lewis LaCook

Sat 20 Jan 2007

---

http://www.lewislacook.org/index.php?option=com_zoom&Itemid=43&page=view&catid=1&PageNo=2&key=15&hit=1

improvisation composed on software synthesizer

Lewis LaCook, Senior Engineer
Abstract Outlooks Media

http://www.abstractoutlooks.com
Abstract Outlooks Media - Premium Web Hosting, Development, and Art Photography
http://www.lewislacook.org
lewislacook.org - New Media Poetry and Poetics
http://www.xanaxpop.org
Xanax Pop - the poetry of Lewis LaCook

****

||http://www.abstractoutlooks.com ||
Abstract Outlooks Media - A New Vision for A New Web
Hosting, Design, Development, Photography

||http://www.lewislacook.org||
New Media Poetry and Poetics

||http://www.xanaxpop.org||
Xanax Pop - A Bloge of Poemes

It's here! Your new message!
Get new email alerts with the free Yahoo! Toolbar.

↑ Index

393. Michael Heller
NEW BOOK
Sat 20 Jan 2007

--=======AVGMAIL-45B27C6A2BBD======Content-Type: text/plain; charset=iso-8859-1; format=flowed; x-avg-checked=avg-ok-37F4BF

NEW RELEASE

EARTH AND CAVE

by

Michael Heller

Dos Madres Press is pleased to announce the publication of Earth and Cave by Michael Heller, a memoir in prose and poetry written in the 1960s when the author lived in Nerja, a small coastal village in Spain. Photographs and drawings of Nerja's ancient caves illustrate the book.

Earth and Cave, writes the poet Hugh Seidman, is "a wonderfully evocative and luminous memoir… Heller's meditation embodies the harsh life and landscape of the indigenous population, along with the ever-lurking mystery and aura of Nerja's pre-historic caves….It brings us movingly into touch with the most basic and human questions: how shall we relate to others around us and to the place in which we live."

The poet and critic Norman Finkelstein has described Michael Heller's memoir of childhood and religion, Living Root, as "a work of crossings, hauntings, reanimations; a mighty golem walking the lost Jewish streets of Brooklyn and Miami Beach." The New York Times said of his poetry that it has a "classical simplicity to its spare syllables…full of ruminations…filled with illumination."

Michael Heller is a poet, essayist and critic. Among his many books are Uncertain Poetries: Selected Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (Salt Publishing, 2005), Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (Salt Publishing, 2003). Knowledge, In The Builded Place, Wordflow and Living Root. His critical book on the Objectivist poets, Conviction's Net of Branches, received the Di Castagnola Prize of the Poetry Society of America. He is the recipient of many awards including those from the National Endowment for the Humanities, NYFA and the Fund For Poetry.

ISBN: 1-933675-17-9
Price: 12.95

Order direct from Dos Madres Press at http://dosmadres.com. For quantity and discounts call [redacted]. Also available at Small Press Distribution at http://www.spbbooks.org and from local and online bookstores.

Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at: http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm
Collaborations with Ellen Fishman Johnson at:
http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html
--=======AVGMAIL-45B27C6A2BBD======Content-Type: text/plain; x-avgÎrt; charset=us-ascii; x-avg-checked=avg-ok-37F4BF
Content-Description: "AVG certification"

No virus found in this outgoing message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.2/641 - Release Date: 1/20/2007 10:24 AM

--=======AVGMAIL-45B27C6A2BBD=======--

↑ Index

394. Eric Dickey
Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turner's
Sat 20 Jan 2007

To some, yes,
to others, no.

--- Christopher Filkins <[redacted]> wrote:

> On 1/17/07 3:49 PM, "Eric Dickey"
> <[redacted]> wrote:
> After that, I couldn't tell if
> Turner, a soldier, was pro- or anti-war.

> Is this important?

Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast
with the Yahoo! Search weather shortcut.
http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#loc_weather

↑ Index

395. William Allegrezza

Call: Responses to Virgil. . .Yes, Virgil!

Sat 20 Jan 2007

Those of you who have listened to me ramble about projects have probably heard me reference over and over a book on Virgil that Garin Cycholl and I want to create. Well, Garin and I are finally going to put this book together. We are trying to edit a book of responses, both creative and critical, to Virgil's The Georgics. Both of us are open to the type of response-it can even be very loosely related to Virgil's work, so I invite all of you to read Virgil and type up a response to it. Send your responses to [redacted].

Best,

Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

396. Marcus Bales

Save the date! Friday, January 26, 2007 at 7 p.m.

Sat 20 Jan 2007

Save the date! Friday, January 26, 2007 at 7 p.m.

For more information:
Claire McMahon [redacted]
[redacted]

Please join us at Gallery 324 (in the Galleria downtown at E 9th and St Clair) for a party to Benefit MoonLit Poetry Magazine, the party hosted, and the magazine edited and published, by Claire McMahon and Lisa Jansen.

With the groovin' sounds of The New Slangs
(Jodi and Jeff Dobos)

New Slang is a Lakewood, Ohio based duo consisting of Jodi Dobos on vocals and Jeffrey Dobos on guitar. Jodi first studied violin seriously then moved on to study voice at Baldwin Wallace Music Conservatory in Berea, Ohio. Jodi also performs as a vocalist with The Prime Directive, a local jazz band. Jeffrey has played guitar off and on since performing with garage bands in the late 1970's. He is also an entrepreneur, who owns two companies serving industrial markets.

Followed by music and poetry by Soul Surviving Sons (Ray McNiece and Sean Kelly)

Sean Kelly is a poet, lead guitarist for the local band Tongue In Groove and a tattoo artist. Ray McNiece is a poet, actor, and singer, who has shared a keynote address Robert Bly, was a featured reader with Lawrence Ferlinghetti, opened for Babatunde Oluntunje, and was the voice of Woody Guthrie in WCPN/NPR's award winning radio documentary, Hard Travellin'.

In the gallery:
"Best of NOIS II" (Northern Ohio Illustrators Society)
curated by George Kocar.

AND

"Taken by Storm", the art of Storm Thorgerson, the man who designed the album covers for Pink Floyd, Led Zeppelin, the Cranberries, Scorpions, Muse, Genesis, Peter Gabriel, 10cc, and many more, curated by Marcus Bales.

Light Refreshments and Silent Auction

Friday, January 26, 2007
7 p.m.

↑ Index

397. Peter Ciccariello
The defense of distant human form
Sun 21 Jan 2007

The defense of distant human form<http://www.cgi7.com/peterimages/defense.htm>

-- Peter Ciccariello
Image - http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/
Word - http://poemsfromprovidence.blogspot.com/
Photography - http://uncommonvision.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

398. Jim Andrews
Alexandre Gherban and the e-poetry conference in Paris
Sun 21 Jan 2007

Here is a different sort of poetry: http://gherban.free.fr . This is Alexandre Gherban's site (France). You don't have to understand French to enjoy this work. I was particularly taken with the work "la colonie". This is a collection of 14 Shockwave pieces. Some are interactive, some are not. Most, if not all, are audio-visual. These works mostly proceed by symbols moving around and interacting with each other. Sometimes you can affect that motion and interaction. It gives a sense of the interaction of symbols in a way different language to produce meaning.

Of "la colonie", Alexandre Gherban says:

“The colony” is made up of a collection of small automata having various artistic “functions”. The sounds come from my voice; phonemes are used to produce sound sequences in real time."

Alexandre is one of the organizers of the upcoming e-poetry conference in Paris (see http://paragraphe.univ-paris8.fr/epoetry).

ja
http://vispo.com

.
.

↑ Index

399. Bill Marsh
Heretical Texts Vol. 3.3: Nick Piombino
Sun 21 Jan 2007

New from Factory School:

Heretical Texts, Volume 3, No. 3

FAIT ACCOMPLI by Nick Piombino

Factory School. 2007. 134 pages, perfect bound, 6.5x9.
ISBN: 1-60001-052-0

$14 / available through Small Press Distribution
(http://www.spdbooks.org/)

The complete third volume (5 books) is available at a discount direct
from the publisher:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/order.html

Nick Piombino on FAIT ACCOMPLI: Gary Sullivan came over for a visit and we talked about blogs. He said, "Get an idea of what you want to do and a title and go with that." Walking around Central Park on a cold day in January 2003, I thought about my handwritten journals filled with unpublished writings and visualized blogging these as synchronic meditations. Then the title came to me, fait accompli, and the subtitles, spellbound speculations, time travel. A journal within a journal, FAIT ACCOMPLI is a selection from the first three months of the continuing weblog (http://nickpiombino.blogspot.com) from mid-February through mid-May, 2003.

For more about the Heretical Texts series:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/heretical/index.html

Volume One:

1. Dan Featherston, United States
2. Laura Elrick, Fantasies in Permeable Structures
3. Linh Dinh, Borderless Bodies
4. Sarah Menefee, Human Star
5. kari edwards, obedience

Volume Two:

1. Diane Ward, Flim-Yoked Scrim
2. Steve Carll, Tracheal Centrifuge
3. Kristin Prevallet, Shadow Evidence Intelligence
4. Brian Kim Stefans, What is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers
5. Carol Mirakove, Mediated

Volume Three:

1. Heriberto Yépez, Wars. Threesomes. Drafts. & Mothers
2. Meg Hamill, Death Notices
3. Nick Piombino, fait accompli
4. Catherine Daly, Chanteuse/Cantatrice
5. Ammiel Alcalay, Scrapmetal

Contact: info "at" factoryschool.org [or reply backchannel to this email]

↑ Index

400. Alexander Jorgensen
Settling among prairie leaves: Midwest
Sun 21 Jan 2007

Settling among prairie leaves, I am anxious for those willing to "give me a chance". Am seeing U.S. & box packing Sunday parties, outside of Milwaukee, organized by old (gay) Mr. Hug-a-vet. And am looking to do some readings - "make contact" - to go those places where honest (i.e., without the burden of cohersive force) poets and multi-media who-are-you?

gather and sometimes orgenize orgency and bluster
blather: said Poppabup, who, incidently, called me son of the Green Lantern.

Best as ever,
Alexander Jorgensen

_____
___
Have a burning question?
Go to www.Answers.yahoo.com and get answers from real people who know.

↑ Index

401. tyrone williams
Re: Settling among prairie leaves: Midwest
Sun 21 Jan 2007

Alex,

backchannel me at [redacted]...might be able to set up a reading in Cincinnati Ohio in late spring or fall...

Tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jan 21, 2007 10:06 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Settling among prairie leaves: Midwest
>
>Settling among prairie leaves, I am anxious for those >willing to "give me a chance". Am seeing U.S. & box
>packing Sunday parties, outside of Milwaukee, >organized by old (gay) Mr. Hug-a-vet. And am looking >to do some readings - "make contact" - to go those >places where honest (i.e., without the burden of >cohersive force) poets and multi-media who-are-you?
>gather and sometimes orgenize orgency and bluster
>blather: said Poppabup, who, incidently, called me son >of the Green Lantern.

>
>Best as ever,
>Alexander Jorgensen
>
>---
>
>
>
>_____
____
>Have a burning question?
>Go to www.Answers.yahoo.com and get answers from real people who know.

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

402. Nicholas Ruiz III
Kritikos V.4 January-2007
Sun 21 Jan 2007

Kritikos V.4 January-2007

®i¾ek! A conversation with Paul A. Taylor (editor of The International Journal of ®i¾ek Studies)...(p.a.taylor and n.ruiz)

http://intertheory.org/taylorandruiz.htm\

Europe, Open for Business: Victoria de Grazia's Irresistible Empire: America's Advance through Twentieth-Century Europe...(p.stasi)

http://intertheory.org/irresistible.htm

Dr. Nicholas Ruiz III
--Editor, Kritikos
http://intertheory.org

↑ Index

403. Nicholas Ruiz III
Re: Kritikos V.4 January-2007
Sun 21 Jan 2007

Apologies, the link below should be:

http://intertheory.org/taylorandruiz.htm

NRIII

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Nicholas Ruiz III
Sent: Sunday, January 21, 2007 10:13 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Kritikos V.4 January-2007

Kritikos V.4 January-2007

®i¾ek! A conversation with Paul A. Taylor (editor of The International Journal of ®i¾ek Studies)...(p.a.taylor and n.ruiz)

http://intertheory.org/taylorandruiz.htm\

Europe, Open for Business: Victoria de Grazia's Irresistible Empire: America's Advance through Twentieth-Century Europe...(p.stasi)

http://intertheory.org/irresistible.htm

Dr. Nicholas Ruiz III
--Editor, Kritikos
http://intertheory.org

↑ Index

404. Tisa Bryant

Books for Course Adoption: A Message from LeonWorks Press

Sun 21 Jan 2007

Leon Works, an independent publisher of experimental prose and poetry, wants to expand its mailing list. If you are interested in teaching or writing about crossing genres, places, cultures, or time, and want access to Leon titles, please do the following:

1. Email your name and mailing address to Renee Gladman at [redacted].

2. Indicate whether you already own either of the first two titles, Sonny by Mary Burger or Incubation: A Space for Monsters by Bhanu Kapil.

Books forthcoming this spring and summer from Leon are What Began Us by Melissa Buzzeo and Unexplained Presence by Tisa Bryant.

All the best,

Renee

Editor & Publisher

↑ Index

405. amy king

MiPO @ STAIN -- This Friday, Jan. 26th

Sun 21 Jan 2007

MiPOesias @ Stain Bar
Friday, January 26, 2007
7 P.M.
Presents

~~~ DAN HOY ~~~ PF POTVIN ~~~ ERICA FABRI ~~~

_____

Dan Hoy lives in Brooklyn and is co-editor of SOFT TARGETS. Recent work has appeared or is forthcoming in Absent, Cannibal, H_NGM_N, Effing, Dreams That Money Can Buy, and elsewhere. Videos and movie criticism are available on his website, www.sinlechuga.com.

PF POTVIN is the author of The Attention Lesson (No Tell Books). His work has appeared in MiPOesias, Sleepingfish, Boston Review, Black Warrior Review, Sentence, No Tell Motel, and elsewhere. He has taught at various language schools and colleges in the U.S. and Chile. He serves on the staff of Drunken Boat, runs ultramarathons, and currently resides in Miami, FL.

Erica Miriam Fabri is a poet and educator. She is a graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and received her MFA in poetry from the New School. She is the author of High Heel Magazine, winner of the 2006 Belle Letter Press chapbook contest. She has work published or forthcoming in Good Foot Magazine and Got Poetry? An Offline Anthology. She currently teaches creative writing at The School of Visual Arts, Baruch College and Lehman College. www.ericafabri.com

_____

Hoy – http://www.mipoesias.com/Poetry/hoy_dan.html

Potvin – http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/potvin_pf.htm

Fabri – http://www.mipoesias.com/Poetry/fabri_erica.html

_____

STAIN BAR 766 Grand Street
Brooklyn, NY 11211
(L train to Grand Street stop, walk one block west) -- 718/[redacted] -- daily 5 p.m.

Hope to see you there!
~~~

_____

http://www.mipoesias.com
http://miporeadingseries2007.blogspot.com

_____

Bored stiff? Loosen up...
Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games.

↑ Index

406. Anny Ballardini
Re: Heretical Texts Vol. 3.3: Nick Piombino
Sun 21 Jan 2007

Congratulations to Nick Piombino!

On 1/21/07, Bill Marsh <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> New from Factory School:
>
> Heretical Texts, Volume 3, No. 3
>
> FAIT ACCOMPLI by Nick Piombino
>
> Factory School. 2007. 134 pages, perfect bound, 6.5x9.
> ISBN: 1-60001-052-0
>
> $14 / available through Small Press Distribution
> (http://www.spdbooks.org/)
>
> The complete third volume (5 books) is available at a discount direct
> from the publisher:
> http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/order.html
>
> Nick Piombino on FAIT ACCOMPLI: Gary Sullivan came over for a visit and > we talked about blogs. He said, "Get an idea of what you want to do and > a title and go with that." Walking around Central Park on a cold day in > January 2003, I thought about my handwritten journals filled with > unpublished writings and visualized blogging these as synchronic > meditations. Then the title came to me, fait accompli, and the > subtitles, spellbound speculations, time travel.

↑ Index

407. Marcus Bales

Zarzour sings at Moonlit Magazine Party at Gallery 324 Friday, January 26, 2007 at 7 p.m.

Sun 21 Jan 2007

Zarzour sings at Moonlit Magazine Party at Gallery 324 Friday, January 26, 2007 at 7 p.m.

For more information:
Claire McMahon [redacted]

Please join us at Gallery 324 (in the Galleria downtown at E 9th and St Clair) for a party and silent auction to Benefit MoonLit Poetry Magazine, the party hosted, and the magazine edited and published, by Claire McMahon and Lisa Jansen.

Music by

The New Slangs
(Jodi and Jeff Dobos)

and

Soul Surviving Sons (Ray McNiece and Sean Kelly)

and

Jean Zarzour sings the blues!

In the gallery:
“Best of NOIS II” (Northern Ohio Illustrators Society)

and

“Taken by Storm”, the art of Storm Thorgerson. (www.takenbystorm.us)

Light Refreshments, No Cover

Friday, January 26, 2007
7 p.m.

↑ Index

408. Brigitte Byrd

Clayton State U Hosts the Spring 2007 Visiting Writers Reading Series--for those of you in Atlanta (or near by)

Sun 21 Jan 2007

Nathalie Anderson, Monday, Jan. 22 (UC 267 | 12:30 p.m.)
Anderson’s first book, “Following Fred Astaire,” won the 1998 Washington Prize from The Word Works, and her second, “Crawlers,” received the 2005

McGovern Prize from Ashland Poetry Press. She has also received prizes and special recognition from the Joseph Campbell Society, “The Cumberland Poetry Review,” “Inkwell Magazine, “and others. She has authored libretti for operas “The Black Swan” and “Sukey in the Dark” and is currently at work on an operatic version of Arthur Conan Doyle’s “A Scandal in Bohemia.” A 1993 Pew Fellow, she serves as Poet in Residence at the Rosenbach Museum and Library. She teaches English literature at Swarthmore College where she also directs the creative writing program.

Phillip DePoy, Wednesday, Feb. 7 (UC 267 | 12:30 p.m.)
Clayton State Theater Director DePoy is the Edgar Award winning author of seven published books, two published plays, and 37 theatre pieces. His Dell mystery novels, featuring Atlanta character Flap Tucker, have been called the best regional detective fiction on the market today and have been nominated for the prestigious Shamus Award. His newest addition to the series, “The Witch’s Grave,” was praised by Publisher’s Weekly as “a delightful fireside feast.” “Turned Funny,” his play based on the Celestine Sibley memoir by the same name, was commissioned and produced by Marietta’s Theatre in the Square and was one of the best selling productions in the theatre’s 25-year history.

Camille Martin, Wednesday, Feb. 28 (UC 327 | 7:30 p.m.)
Martin, a poet and collage artist, is the author of “codes of public sleep” (BookThug, forthcoming in 2007). Her short collections include “fabled hue” (Poetic Inhalation, 2005), “sesame kiosk” (Potes & Poets, 2001), “rogue embryo” (Lavender Ink, 1999), “magnus loop” (Chax Press, 1999), and “Plastic Heaven” (Fell Swoop, 1996). Formerly of New Orleans, she escaped the ravages of Katrina and is now happily settled in Toronto, where she is completing a collection of fourteen-liners entitled “sennets.” She teaches writing and literature at Ryerson University.

Bruce Covey, Tuesday, Mar. 20 (UC 265 | 7:30 p.m.)
Covey is lecturer of creative writing at Emory University and the author of “The Greek Gods as Telephone Wires” (Front Room, Ann Arbor), “Elapsing Speedway Organism” (No Tell Books, Washington, DC), and the forthcoming “Ten Pins, Ten Frames” (Front Room). His poems also appear or are forthcoming in “Aufgabe,” “Verse,” “LIT,” “Columbia Poetry Review,” “Bombay Gin,” “Boog City,” “Lungfull,” “Cimarron Review,” “Explosive Magazine,” and other journals. He edits the Web-based poetry magazine “Coconut” and curates the “What’s New in Poetry” reading series.

David Dodd Lee, Thursday, Apr. 12 (UC 272 | 7 p.m.)
David Dodd Lee is a poet and fiction writer. He has published four books of poems, including Abrupt Rural (New Issues, 2004) and Arrow Pointing North (Four Way Books, 2002). Recent poetry is forthcoming in Hayden’s Ferry Review, Blackbird, Pool, and Burnside Review. He is the editor of the annual poetry and fiction anthology, SHADE, published by Four Way Books and the publisher of Half Moon Bay poetry chapbooks. He teaches creative writing at Indiana University South Bend.

The Visiting Writers Reading Series is sponsored by Clayton State's Lyceum and the Language and Literature Department. A book signing will follow each reading. Copies of the authors' work will be available for purchase.

For additional information on the authors, or to learn more about the spring 2007 Visiting Writers Reading Series, please contact [redacted] or call [redacted].

A unit of the University System of Georgia, Clayton State University is an metropolitan university located 15 miles southeast of downtown Atlanta.

Brigitte Byrd
http://a-s.clayton.edu/bbyrd/Homepage.htm

Sucker-punch spam with award-winning protection.
Try the free Yahoo! Mail Beta.

↑ Index

409. eleni Stecopoulos
Reading: Linda Russo & Sarah Anne Cox 1/25
Sun 21 Jan 2007

PLEASE FORWARD:

Linda Russo

&

Sarah Anne Cox

Thursday, January 25, 2007
@ 7:30 PM

Pegasus Books Downtown
2349 Shattuck
Berkeley

(Downtown Berkeley BART)

Come out for what promises to be a fantastic reading, and please spread the word! If this is your first time...Clay Banes has been curating a great series at Pegasus, in a space that's both lively and intimate. Come support a great bookstore, with a fabulous poetry section that has books make the likes of us drool...

http://claytonbanes.blogspot.com

*****

Linda Russo has published several chapbooks, including o going out (Potes & Poets); her first full-length book, MIRTH is now available from Chax Press. A graduate of the Buffalo Poetics Program, she currently teaches at the University of Oklahoma.

Sarah Anne Cox is the author of Arrival (Krupskaya 2002) and Parcel (O Books fall 2006). Most recently, her work has appeared in in Bay Poetics, a bay area poetry anthology (Faux Press 2006), Pom, Mem and Dusie online . When she's not traveling Cox lives in San Francisco where she writes, teaches, windsurfs, and cares for her children, Paris and Phaedra. She is currently working on a book-length poem called My Brazilian Dream or why I hate love poems.

--

_____ Get Hilary Duff’s homepage with her photos, music, and more. http://celebrities.live.com

↑ Index

410. Alan Sondheim

avatar attempting escape of the vectors of its origin

Sun 21 Jan 2007

---

avatar attempting escape of the vectors of its origin

this was the result of avatar-work which led to the work with Maud Liardon, Foofwa d'Imobilite, Azure Carter. made with motion capture, Poser, Mocap, Quicktime.
rough version on YouTube. already on http://www.asondheim.org/evasionofbeing.mp4

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gP0Np_s3Bj4

↑ Index

411. Steve Clay

Steve McCaffery & Alan Halsey in NYC

Sun 21 Jan 2007

Please join Granary Books and the Cue Art Foundation
Friday, January 26, 2007 at 7:00 p.m.

for a book launch and reading/presentation for "Paradigm of the Tinctures" by Steve McCaffery and Alan Halsey.

"Paradigm of the Tinctures," poems by Steve McCaffery and images by Alan Halsey. Published by Granary Books in a limited edition of 50 copies (designed and printed by Philip Gallo at the Hermetic Press).

More details here:

http://www.granarybooks.com/pages.php?which_page=product_view&which_product=1114&search=paradigm&category=

CUE Art Foundation, 511 West 25th Street, Ground Floor, (between 10th and 11th Ave.) New York City.

The event is free and open to the public.

R.S.V.P. if you will attend:

[redacted]

Steve Clay
Granary Books
168 Mercer St. #2
New York, NY 10012

[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.granarybooks.com

↑ Index

412. Jonathan Skinner
A Natural History of Levees / Not Enough Night
Sun 21 Jan 2007

Many on this list have asked to see a copy of my "disaster-response" poem, "A Natural History of Levees," having heard it read at one or another venue, over the past year. It's up, along with audio of the reading, at Not Enough Night, Naropa's online 'zine (edited by Maureen Owen), along with talks and poetry by Elizabeth Robinson, Barbara Henning, Lewis MacAdams and Harryette Mullen, amongst others:

http://www.naropa.edu/notenoughnight/fall06/index.html

JS

↑ Index

413. charles alexander

Linda Russo in two readings, and her new book

Mon 22 Jan 2007

Chax Press now has copies available of a terrific new book by Linda Russo, her first full length book.

MIRTH

Details available and book for sale on the Chax Press web site at http://chax.org
or you can find it at Small Press Distribution: http://spdbooks.org

And catch Linda in one of two west coast readings coming up:

Linda Russo & Sarah Ann Cox
Wednesday, January 25, 7:30 p.m.
Pegasus Books
2349 Shattuck Ave.
Berkeley, CA 94704

Linda Russo & Joel Bettridge
Sunday, January 28, 7:30 pm
New American Art Union
922 SE Ankeny
Portland, Or.
$5 suggested donation
<http://www.flim.com/spareroom/>http://www.flim.com/spareroom/

Linda Russo has published several chapbooks, including o going out (Potes & Poets); her first full-length book, MIRTH is now available from Chax Press. A graduate of the Buffalo Poetics Program, she currently teaches at the University of Oklahoma.

Sarah Anne Cox is the author of Arrival (Krupsaya 2002) and Parcel (O Books fall 2006). Most recently, her work has appeared in Bay Poetics, a bay area poetry anthology (Faux Press 2006), Pom, Mem and Dusie online . When she's not traveling Cox lives in San Francisco where she writes, teaches, windsurfs, and cares for her children, Paris and Phaedra. She is currently working on a book-length poem called My Brazilian Dream or why I hate love poems.

Joel Bettridge's first book of poems, That Abrupt Here, is forthcoming from The Cultural Society Press, and he is currently editing a collection of essays on Ronald Johnson for the National Poetry Foundation's Life and Work series. He teaches at Portland State University.

charles alexander / chax press

fold the book inside the book keep it open always read from the inside out speak then

↑ Index

414. Dan Waber

Rune 2, Rose Window, by Karl Kempton (Runaway Spoon Press, 1999)

Mon 22 Jan 2007

As we wave goodbye to the z of the Geodetic Alphabet by J. Michael Mollohan it's time to wave hello to the a of Rune 2, Rose Window, by Karl Kempton (Runaway Spoon Press, 1999)

New series starting today at:

http://www.logolalia.com/abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz/

Regards,
Dan

Submissions of artworks based around the complete sequence of the roman alphabet which can be presented a letter at a time over the course of 26 days are invited.

↑ Index

415. Dan Waber

CORRECTION--Rune 10, Rose Window, by Karl Kempton (Runaway Spoon Press, 1999)

Mon 22 Jan 2007

As we wave goodbye to the z of the Geodetic Alphabet by J. Michael Mollohan it's time to wave hello to the a of Rune 10, Rose Window, by Karl Kempton (Runaway Spoon Press, 1999)

New series starting today at:

http://www.logolalia.com/abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz/

Regards,
Dan

Submissions of artworks based around the complete sequence of the roman alphabet which can be presented a letter at a time over the course of 26 days are invited.

↑ Index

416. Bill Marsh
Heretical Texts Vol. 3.4: Catherine Daly
Mon 22 Jan 2007

New from Factory School:

Heretical Texts, Volume 3, No. 4

CHANTEUSE / CANTATRICE by Catherine Daly

Factory School. 2007. 94 pages, perfect bound, 6.5x9.
ISBN: 1-60001-053-9

$12 / available through Small Press Distribution
(http://www.spdbooks.org/)

The complete third volume (5 books) is available at a discount direct
from the publisher:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/order.html

Description: CHANTEUSE / CANTATRICE is a book about collaboration and complicity. Chanteuse starts with the surreal singer or radio operator giving voice to whose message, why, and ends with the absurd message of war and peace we hear, perpetuating it. "Ni de votre guerre, ni de votre paix." Cantatrice begins with the all-but-impossible task of extracting meaning from codes and ruins only to end without emotional truth. "is not / My heart". The book can be read with the spine on the left, from the top of the page down, Chanteuse, or with the spine on the right, from the bottom of the page up, Cantatrice. Each poem begins at a title, and moves toward 'the other side'.

For more about the Heretical Texts series:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/heretical/index.html

Volume One:

1. Dan Featherston, United States
2. Laura Elrick, Fantasies in Permeable Structures
3. Linh Dinh, Borderless Bodies
4. Sarah Menefee, Human Star
5. kari edwards, obedience

Volume Two:

1. Diane Ward, Flim-Yoked Scrim
2. Steve Carll, Tracheal Centrifuge
3. Kristin Prevallet, Shadow Evidence Intelligence
4. Brian Kim Stefans, What is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers
5. Carol Mirakove, Mediated

Volume Three:

1. Heriberto Yépez, Wars. Threesomes. Drafts. & Mothers
2. Meg Hamill, Death Notices
3. Nick Piombino, fait accompli
4. Catherine Daly, Chanteuse/Cantatrice
5. Ammiel Alcalay, Scrapmetal

Contact: info "at" factoryschool.org [or reply backchannel to this email]

↑ Index

417. heidi arnold
Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

Colleagues,

-- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a "fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic -- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all -- is it ok to post to this list

scapegoats:

Lincoln
Martin Luther King
Jesus Christ
Nazim Hikmet
...
How many can we name?

if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who responds

--
www.heidiarnold.org
http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

418. charles alexander
Linda Russo in two readings, and her new book
Mon 22 Jan 2007

(corrected day/date below -- the message I sent out last night had, in one instance, the date correct but the day wrong for one reading)

Chax Press now has copies available of a terrific new book by Linda Russo, her first full length book.

MIRTH

Details available and book for sale on the Chax Press web site at
http://chax.org
or you can find it at Small Press Distribution: http://spdbooks.org

And catch Linda in one of two west coast readings coming up:

Linda Russo & Sarah Ann Cox
THURSDAY, January 25, 7:30 p.m.
Pegasus Books
2349 Shattuck Ave.
Berkeley, CA 94704

Linda Russo & Joel Bettridge
Sunday, January 28, 7:30 pm
New American Art Union
922 SE Ankeny
Portland, Or.
$5 suggested donation
<http://www.flim.com/spareroom/>http://www.flim.com/spareroom/

Linda Russo has published several chapbooks, including o going out (Potes & Poets); her first full-length book, MIRTH is now available from Chax Press. A graduate of the Buffalo Poetics Program, she currently teaches at the University of Oklahoma.

Sarah Anne Cox is the author of Arrival (Krupsaya 2002) and Parcel (O Books fall 2006). Most recently, her work has appeared in Bay Poetics, a bay area poetry anthology (Faux Press 2006), Pom, Mem and Dusie online . When she's not traveling Cox lives in San Francisco where she writes, teaches, windsurfs, and cares for her children, Paris and Phaedra. She is currently working on a book-length poem called My Brazilian Dream or why I hate love poems.

Joel Bettridge's first book of poems, That Abrupt Here, is forthcoming from The Cultural Society Press, and he is currently editing a collection of essays on Ronald Johnson for the National Poetry Foundation's Life and Work series. He teaches at Portland State University.

charles alexander / chax press

fold the book inside the book keep it open always read from the inside out speak then

↑ Index

419. susan maurer
anna siano show and reading at bpc
Mon 22 Jan 2007

---

on5-18 there will be a reading and an exhibition of anna's pictures at nycs bowery poetryclub . the show will go to 6-8. do not miss this. big group reading and ill be one of the crew. susan maurer

_____ Valentine’s Day -- Shop for gifts that spell L-O-V-E at MSN Shopping http://shopping.msn.com/content/shp/?ctId=8323,ptnrid=37,ptnrdata=24095&tcode=wlmtagline

↑ Index

420. Maria Damon
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

---

i don't know about exp poetry but don't forget lenny bruce.

oh yeah; there's a poem by Kamau Brathwaite called, i think, Scrape ghosts...?

At 8:39 AM -0500 1/22/07, heidi arnold wrote:
>Colleagues,
>
>-- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and >scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a
>"fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic
>-- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all --
>is it ok to post to this list
>
>scapegoats:
>
>Lincoln
>Martin Luther King
>Jesus Christ
>Nazim Hikmet
>...
>How many can we name?
>
>if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who >responds
>
>

>
>--
>www.heidiarnold.org
>http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

421. Maria Damon
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

---

i hope by scapegoats you don't just mean famous and benign "martyrs." a lot of the "bad guys" like saddam hussein, lyndie england, etc., are also symptoms of systemic violence, etc.

For literature, also, any of Genet's novels.

At 8:39 AM -0500 1/22/07, heidi arnold wrote:
>Colleagues,
>
>-- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and >scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a
>"fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic
>-- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all --
>is it ok to post to this list
>
>scapegoats:
>
>Lincoln
>Martin Luther King
>Jesus Christ
>Nazim Hikmet
>...
>How many can we name?
>
>if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who >responds
>
>
>
>--
>www.heidiarnold.org
>http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

422. Michael Kelleher
LITERARY BUFFALO E-NEWSLETTER 1.22.07
Mon 22 Jan 2007

LITERARY BUFFALO
1.22.07-1.28.07

Dear E-Newsletter Recipient,

Over the past couple of years, Just Buffalo has been collaborating with Talking Leaves...Books, Medaille College, Rust Belt Books, Starcherone Books, The Burchfield-Penney Art Center, Canisius College, Hallwalls, Exhibit X Fiction, Slope Editions and The David Gray Chair if Poetry and Letters at SUNY Buffalo to produce the Literary Buffalo poster and website. Our goal is to give Buffalo a sense of the incredible quantity and diversity of literary happenings every month in the Nickel City and environs. To that end, we have been including a "Literary Buffalo" section at the bottom of each Just Buffalo e-newsletter, which tries to include all these events and others that could not fit on the poster. As of today, we are changing both the name and the format of the newsletter to Literary Buffalo, in order to better reflect this collaboration.

Events will now be listed in chronological order by date at the top of the newsletter. Following these listings will be the usual information about Just Buffalo workshops and Membership, as well as information about how to unsubscribe. We hope very soon to create a part of our website that will give access to literary event planners who want their event listed on our electronic calendar and also in the e-newsletter. For now, if you want an event listed in this e-newsletter, please send me an email with all the relevant information. We only list events in the Western New York region, and we only list events during the week the event takes place during the week of the newsletter. That covers Monday through Sunday each week. As there are many literary events to attend to, I highly recommend that, if you are not a sponsoring organization of Literary Buffalo, you remind me via email on Sunday night or Monday morning about your event, as they sometimes slip through the cracks.

Anyhow, Happy New Year, and keep reading for this week's Literary Buffalo Events.

1.24

Poetics Plus at UB
Steve McCaffery
Poetry Reading and Book Launch
Wednesday, January 24, 4 p.m.
UB Poetry Collection, 420 Capen Hall

1.26

Just Buffalo/UB Art Gallery/Gusto at the Gallery (Albright-Knox)
Ron Padgett and Kenward Elmslie
Poetry Reading
Friday, January 26, 8 p.m.
Albright-Knox Art Gallery Auditorium
In conjunction with the UB Art Gallery's Exhibition:
"Joe Brainard: People of the World Relax!"
Running from 1.25-3.3 at the UB Art Gallery, Center for the Arts, North Campus
Opening Reception: 1.25, 5-7 p.m.

Also: See 1.25.07 Artvoice for my interview with Ron Padgett

1.28

Talking Leaves Books
Andrew Mowatt, WNY Native
Book Signing: Severed Branch: A Novel
Sunday, January 28, 2 p.m.
Talking Leaves Books, Elmwood Store

RECURRING LITERARY EVENTS

JUST BUFFALO WRITER'S CRITIQUE GROUP
Members of Just Buffalo are welcome to attend a free, bi-monthly writer critique group in CEPA's Flux Gallery on the first floor of the historic Market Arcade Building across the street from Shea's. Group meets 1st and 3rd Wednesday at 7 p.m. Call Just Buffalo for details.

JUST BUFFALO TIMED WRITING GROUP
A writing practice group meets every Thursday at noon at Starbucks Coffee on Elmwood and Chippewa. Writing practice is based on Natalie Goldberg's suggested exercises in Writing Down The Bones. Writers in all genres, fiction and non-fiction welcome. There is no charge. Contact Trudy for info: [redacted].

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JUST BUFFALO LITERARY CENTER WRITING WORKSHOPS

Introduction to Poetry Writing
A Poetry Writing Workshop for Beginning Poets or Those Looking to Get Back Into It
Instructor: Celia White
6 Mondays, February 5, 12, 26, March 5, 12 19, 7 - 9 p.m.
Market Arcade Building, 617 Main St., First Floor.

$150, $120 for members
Registration Deadline: February 2
Register online with a credit card at:
http://www.justbuffalo.org/workshops/registration.shtml
Or call [redacted].

A warm, encouraging, yet rigorous, workshop for beginning poets who want to turn words and ideas into powerful poems that have style and structure and which can connect with a reader. Issues of finding inspiration, cultivating the habit of writing, and utilizing forms of poetry will be covered. Students will also be lead through revision and the performance of the poem for others. Celia white is a widely published poet and experienced teacher of writing, who has helped budding writers of all ages to become lifelong writers. Six sessions with widely published poet CeliaWhite will guide beginning poets through exercises in free writing, note-taking, generating material, giving momentum to an ongoing writing practice, elements of poetic language, poetic form, editing and revising, and finally bringing work into the world through performance, publishing and more. Each session will include some writing time, some discussion of ongoing student work, and a seminar-style lesson on the subject of that day's class.

Celia White is a poet and fiction writer whose work has appeared in local and national publications, including the San Francisco Bay Guardian and Exquisite Corpse . In 1995, Celia received the just buffalo literary center Writer in Residency Award, and in 1998 was awarded the University of Buffalo recipient of the Academy of American Poets Prize. Celia has self-published four chapbooks of poetry, including Mouth , Stick, and Lit , and has a collection of poems, Letter , forthcoming in Fall 2006 . In 2006, she won the Best Poet Award from Buffalo Spree and from Artvoice.

_____

All workshops take place in Just Buffalo's Workshop/Conference Room_At the Market Arcade, 617 Main St., First Floor -- right across from Shea's_The Market Arcade is Climate Controlled and has a security guard on duty at all times. _

To get here:__Take the train to the Theatre stop and walk or park and enter on Washington Street. _Free parking on Washington Street evenings and weekends. _Two dollar parking in the fenced, guarded, M & T Bank lot across the street on Washington St.__

Cancellation Policy: Refunds will be given up until the close of registration for each workshop. No refunds will be given after closing date. Make sure to note the registration deadline when you sign up for a workshop. If you cancel after the registration deadline, Just Buffalo will convert your registration to a donation and provide you with a letter of thanks and verification for tax deduction.

JUST BUFFALO MEMBERSHIP RAFFLE

Visit the literary city of your dreams:

-Joyce's Dublin
-Paris' Left Bank
-Dante's Florence
-Shakespeare's London
-Harlem Renaissance NYC
-The Beats' San Francisco
-Anywhere Continental flies.*

Now through May 10, 2007 your membership support of Just Buffalo Literary Center includes the chance to win the literary trip of a lifetime:

Package (valued at $5,000) includes:

-Two round-trip tickets to one of the great literary cities on Continental Airlines
-$1500 towards hotel and accommodations
-$500 in spending money

One ticket ($35) = Just Buffalo Individual Membership
Two tickets ($60) = Just Buffalo Family Membership
Three tickets ($100) = Just Buffalo Friend Membership

Purchase as many memberships as you like. Give them to whomever you choose as a gift (or give someone else the membership and keep the lottery ticket to yourself!). Only 1000 chances will be sold. Raffle tickets with Just Buffalo membership make great gifts! Drawing will be held the second week of May, 2007. Call [redacted] for more info.

* Raffle ticket purchases are not tax-deductible. If you want your membership to put you in the "literary trip of a lifetime" raffle, please write "raffle membership" in the "payment for" cell on the Paypal form. You will automatically be entered in the raffle, but your membership will not be tax-deductible. If you prefer not to be in the raffle and want tax-deductible status, then please write "non-raffle member" in the "payment for" cell.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will be immediately removed.

_____
Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

423. Dan Coffey
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

Lenny Bruce was a rabble-rouser, but how was he a scapegoat? I don't think he was ever blamed for anything...

On 1/22/07, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:
> i don't know about exp poetry but don't forget lenny bruce.
>
> oh yeah; there's a poem by Kamau Brathwaite called, i think, Scrape ghosts...?
>
> At 8:39 AM -0500 1/22/07, heidi arnold wrote:
> >Colleagues,
> >
> >-- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and > >scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a
> >"fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic
> >-- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all --
> >is it ok to post to this list
> >

> >scapegoats:
> >
> >Lincoln
> >Martin Luther King
> >Jesus Christ
> >Nazim Hikmet
> >...
> >How many can we name?
> >
> >if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who > >responds
> >
> >
> >
> >--
> >www.heidiarnold.org
> >http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/
>

--
http://hyperhypo.org/blog
http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

↑ Index

424. Ruth Lepson
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

---

watch sling blade w/ billy bob thornton, who plays a 'retarded' guy--maybe w/ asperger's?--who is an example.

On 1/22/07 8:39 AM, "heidi arnold" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Colleagues,
>
> -- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a "fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic -- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all -- is it ok to post to this list
>
> scapegoats:
>
> Lincoln
> Martin Luther King
> Jesus Christ

> Nazim Hikmet
> ...
> How many can we name?
>
> if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who responds

↑ Index

425. Rob McLennan avalanche
Mon 22 Jan 2007

apparently my chapbook "avalanche" is nearly out, published by American poet & publisher Jessica Smith:

http://www.etsy.com/view_listing.php?listing_id=5253091

http://looktouch.blogspot.com/2007/01/days-work.html

as well, an American edition of my chapbook "ottawa poems (blue notes)" is newly out with American poet & publisher Peter Ganick:

http://www.mailbucket.org/po-list-1843969.html

rob

-- poet/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...12th poetry coll'n - aubade (Broken Jaw Press) .... c/o 858 Somerset St W, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7 * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

426. Thomas savage
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

Scapegoating has happened to me, in many small ways, in social situations with other poets over the years but mostly in the past. I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.

Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote: watch sling blade w/ billy bob thornton, who plays a 'retarded' guy--maybe w/ asperger's?--who is an example.

On 1/22/07 8:39 AM, "heidi arnold" wrote:

> Colleagues,
>
> -- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a "fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic -- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all -- is it ok to post to this list
>
> scapegoats:
>
> Lincoln
> Martin Luther King
> Jesus Christ
> Nazim Hikmet
> ...
> How many can we name?
>
> if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who responds

Never miss an email again!
Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.

↑ Index

427. Aldon Nielsen
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

He's been blamed for nearly everything. Check out the trial transcripts --

At 12:15 PM 1/22/2007, Dan Coffey wrote:
>Lenny Bruce was a rabble-rouser, but how was he a scapegoat? I don't >think he was ever blamed for anything...
>
>On 1/22/07, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:
>>i don't know about exp poetry but don't forget lenny bruce.

<<

Department of English
The Pennsylvania State University
112 Burrowes
University Park, PA 16802-6200

[redacted] [office]

[redacted] [Fax]

Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

428. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

---

here's something based on the original sense of the "scapegoat," Azazel....

throw Azazel back where it came from. tie its horns with string the people are excellent. they need something to die for them let it fall on sharp rocks. throw the goat back into the wilderness and the blood washes in some lonely place. red string turned white

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Thomas savage
Sent: Monday, January 22, 2007 12:21
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Poems on Scapegoats

Scapegoating has happened to me, in many small ways, in social situations with other poets over the years but mostly in the past. I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.

Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote: watch sling blade w/ billy bob thornton, who plays a 'retarded' guy--maybe
w/ asperger's?--who is an example.

On 1/22/07 8:39 AM, "heidi arnold" wrote:

> Colleagues,
>
> -- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and > scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a
> "fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic

> -- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all --
> is it ok to post to this list
>
> scapegoats:
>
> Lincoln
> Martin Luther King
> Jesus Christ
> Nazim Hikmet
> ...
> How many can we name?
>
> if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who > responds
>
>

Never miss an email again!
Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.

↑ Index

429. Nate Pritts
H_NGM_N #6/COMBATIVES Launch!
Mon 22 Jan 2007

H_NGM_N #6 goes live today!

http://www.h-ngm-n.com

Featuring:

Poems from Katy Acheson * Anonymous * Robyn Art * Daniel Borzutzky * Jessica Bozek * Michael Broder * Laura Cherry * Evan Commander * Mark DeCarteret * Neil de la Flor & Maureen Seaton * Darcie Dennigan * Julie Doxsee * Elisa Gabbert * Matt Hart * Anne Heide * Dan Hoy * Michael Jauchen * Robert Krut * Justin Marks * Clay Matthews * John Pursley III * Mathias Svalina * Joshua Marie Wilkinson * William D. Waltz * Wynn Yarbrough

A special section -THANK YOU, STEVE ORLEN - featuring 2 new poems from the man, a review of his New & Selected & other contributions by Adrian Blevins, Laura Cherry, Tony Hoagland, David Rivard & Martha Zweig.

Selection from longer works by Jim Goar, Viola Lee, Brent Pallas & Chris Rizzo.

2 new EP Poets - Philip Jenks & Danielle Pafunda.

Fiction by traci o connor, Jason Ockert & Magdalen Powers.

&

essays & reviews: Tom Dvorske on Anthony McCann * Justin Marks on Christopher Salerno * Gina Myers on 3 chapbooks * Brett Price on Richard Meier * Clay Matthews on Ron Padgett & the Postmodern Sublime

All this plus a portfolio of artist Joey Slaughter's work & some comix by Sommer Browning!

http://www.h-ngm-n.com

*

Also today - the launch of COMBATIVES Vol. 1 #3 - a series of exquisite corpses written by Sarah Lilius & Erin M. Bertram.

http://hngmn.squarespace.com/combatives/

As always, place one paypal order for Vol. 1 #3 & receive 3 copies of the issue.

Because we like you lots & lots.

Thanks,

Nate Pritts, EIC.
H_NGM_N.

http://www.h-ngm-n.com

****

Dr. Nate Pritts
Northwestern State University
Dept. of Language & Communication
Natchitoches, LA 71497
[redacted]
http://hngmn.squarespace.com/nate-pritts/
http://www.hubcapart.com/ink/chapnate.htm

↑ Index

430. Julie Kizershot
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

It isn't a poem, but Ursula LeGuin's short story "The Ones Who Walked Away From Omelas" is a great study of scapegoating- now there's a verb for you! I use it to talk about social ethics with my engineering bound students. As well there is always always Shirley Jackson's "The Lottery".

Julie K-

On Jan 22, 2007, at 10:20 AM, Ruth Lepson wrote:

> watch sling blade w/ billy bob thornton, who plays a 'retarded' guy--maybe
> w/ asperger's?--who is an example.
>
> On 1/22/07 8:39 AM, "heidi arnold" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Colleagues,
>
> -- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a
> "fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic
> -- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all --
> is it ok to post to this list
>
> scapegoats:
>
> Lincoln
> Martin Luther King
> Jesus Christ
> Nazim Hikmet
> ...
> How many can we name?
>
> if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who
> responds

↑ Index

431. Eric

Re: Poems on Scapegoats

Mon 22 Jan 2007

>>I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.

Scapegoat is usually a belated title. Scapegoat Jesus' statement about nobody being a prophet in his hometown probably applies to scapegoats too. If I were to suggest that Bush and the Neocons are scapegoats for the larger failures of government, the usual outrage would follow.

Here's a fine poem on the Academy of American Poets site:

"The Goat"
by Aaron Fogel

If you are a goat, do you believe

What people tell you about

Goats, and eat

Tin cans?

There’s no goat that foolish.

Or is there?

The goat of the universe believed

What people told him about universes

And came into existence.

Bang! How naive can you get?

Even the scapegoat is not as naive

As (God help him) the universe that

Agreed to exist.

A word to the wise: Don’t eat tin cans.

Don’t listen. Don’t exist.

———

Poem from The Printer's Error, reprinted with permission of Miami University Press

http://www.poets.org/viewmedia.php/prmMID/17137

↑ Index

432. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

and don't forget the (alleged) etymology of "tragedy" :

tragedy c.1374, "play or other serious literary work with an unhappy ending," from O.Fr. tragedie (14c.), from L. tragedia "a tragedy," from Gk. tragodia "a dramatic poem or play in formal language and having an unhappy resolution," apparently lit. "goat song," from tragos "goat" + oide "song." The connection may be via satyric drama, from which tragedy later developed, in which actors or singers were dressed in goatskins to represent satyrs. But many other theories have been made (including "singer who competes for a goat as a prize"), and even the "goat" connection is at times questioned. Meaning "any unhappy event, disaster" is from 1509.

http://www.etymonline.com/index.php?search=tragedy&searchmode=none

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Eric
Sent: Monday, January 22, 2007 15:14
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Poems on Scapegoats

>>I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.

Scapegoat is usually a belated title. Scapegoat Jesus' statement about nobody being a prophet in his hometown probably applies to scapegoats too. If I were to suggest that Bush and the Neocons are scapegoats for the larger failures of government, the usual outrage would follow.

Here's a fine poem on the Academy of American Poets site:

"The Goat"
by Aaron Fogel

If you are a goat, do you believe

What people tell you about

Goats, and eat

Tin cans?

There's no goat that foolish.

Or is there?

The goat of the universe believed

What people told him about universes

And came into existence.

Bang! How naive can you get?

Even the scapegoat is not as naive

As (God help him) the universe that

Agreed to exist.

A word to the wise: Don't eat tin cans.

Don't listen. Don't exist.

———

Poem from The Printer's Error, reprinted with permission of Miami University Press

http://www.poets.org/viewmedia.php/prmMID/17137

↑ Index

433. Caleb Cluff

Re: Poems on Scapegoats

Mon 22 Jan 2007

Brigit Pegeen Kelly's "Song"...

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of heidi arnold
Sent: Tuesday, 23 January 2007 12:39 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Poems on Scapegoats

Colleagues,

-- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a
"fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic
-- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all --
is it ok to post to this list

scapegoats:

Lincoln
Martin Luther King
Jesus Christ
Nazim Hikmet

...
How many can we name?

if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who responds

--
www.heidiarnold.org
http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/

========== The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments
==========

↑ Index

434. Small Press Traffic
Poets Theater Neo-Benshi Night this Fri 1/26
Mon 22 Jan 2007

Small Press Traffic's Poets Theater Jamboree 2007 continues Friday, January 26, 2007 at 7:30 P.M. with Neo-Benshi Night: Sound Off!??

All seats $10; please arrive promptly.

Beyond the flotsam of YouTube, and exceeding the drunken sentiments of karaoke, Neo-Benshi is live narration and subversion of moving pictures.

In this evening’s eight episodes??

Mary Burger reanimates Michel Gondry;
Del Ray Cross cracks Kurt McDowell;
Amanda Davidson pirates Pippi;
Jen Hofer x-rays Robert Aldrich;
Colter Jacobsen duels Stephen Spielberg;
Jen Nellis poisons Alfred Hitchcock;

Wayne Smith parties with John Schlesinger;
and Konrad Steiner hosts “The Gamma People”

Elizabeth Treadwell Jackson, Director
Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]
http://www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

435. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Mon 22 Jan 2007

I think Neo-ons and Bush will be the scapeboats of each other.

What is the relationship of scapegoat to martyr? No one is a martyr out of his own hometown?

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/22/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> >>I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it > made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.
>
> Scapegoat is usually a belated title. Scapegoat Jesus' statement about > nobody being a prophet in his hometown probably applies to scapegoats > too. If I were to suggest that Bush and the Neocons are scapegoats for > the larger failures of government, the usual outrage would follow.
>
>
> Here's a fine poem on the Academy of American Poets site:
>
> "The Goat"
> by Aaron Fogel
>
> If you are a goat, do you believe
>
> What people tell you about
>

> Goats, and eat
>
> Tin cans?
>
> There's no goat that foolish.
>
> Or is there?
>
> The goat of the universe believed
>
> What people told him about universes
>
> And came into existence.
>
> Bang! How naive can you get?
>
> Even the scapegoat is not as naive
>
> As (God help him) the universe that
>
> Agreed to exist.
>
> A word to the wise: Don't eat tin cans.
>
> Don't listen. Don't exist.
>
> _____
>
>
> Poem from The Printer's Error, reprinted with permission of Miami > University Press
>
> http://www.poets.org/viewmedia.php/prmMID/17137
>

↑ Index

436. Christopher Filkins
Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turner's
Mon 22 Jan 2007

So, to some, if the pro-war or anti-war stance of the poem is not clear then the poem (or is it poet?) is ... ?

On 1/20/07 1:00 PM, "Eric Dickey" <[redacted]> wrote:

> To some, yes,
> to others, no.
>
> --- Christopher Filkins <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> On 1/17/07 3:49 PM, "Eric Dickey"
> <[redacted]> wrote:
> After that, I couldn't tell if
> Turner, a soldier, was pro- or anti-war.
>
> Is this important?
>
> ---
> Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast
> with the Yahoo! Search weather shortcut.
> http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#loc_weather

↑ Index

437. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turner's
Mon 22 Jan 2007

Why not read the poems for yourself and find out what you think?

> From: Christopher Filkins <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Amazon Petition re Carter's Book, artcle re protest & poetry (Brian Turner's
> Date: Mon, 22 Jan 2007 17:12:08 -0800

> So, to some, if the pro-war or anti-war stance of the poem is not clear then > the poem (or is it poet?) is ... ?
>
> On 1/20/07 1:00 PM, "Eric Dickey" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> To some, yes,
> to others, no.
>
> --- Christopher Filkins <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> On 1/17/07 3:49 PM, "Eric Dickey"
> <[redacted]> wrote:
> After that, I couldn't tell if
> Turner, a soldier, was pro- or anti-war.
>
> Is this important?
>
> ---
>
> Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast
> with the Yahoo! Search weather shortcut.
> http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#loc_weather

_____ Get in the mood for Valentine's Day. View photos, recipes and more on your Live.com page. http://www.live.com/?addTemplate=ValentinesDay&ocid=T001MSN30A0701

↑ Index

438. Jesse Glass

Current Events Poem For Marjorie Perloff

Mon 22 Jan 2007

Koch Island Song

It wasn't a lover's spat wonder if anything's real sage leaders of the country

the nations set against them forehead pressed to forehead welcome triangular dogs.

"I love an empty face"
"I" write on a brown paper bag rain blasted fractal...ethereal widow... minimalist such-like (s-s-spirit [s]wives ma-ma-matter)

lion bit one lung
according to hidden tradition
??????????????????????????????
prehensile revelation
arcane--ok?--upon contact

* * * *

more on Coca Cola's LIBIDINOUS ENERGY SYSTEM

* * * *

Iron frame of the fire
tin frame of the mis-fire
zinc frame of the strepitant Fire!

Erase the above contradictions inherent curse on the creature:

the corpse that controls the tempo is the corpse that witches water with a rod of burnished copper.

I'm tired of what corpses do!
mutiny of the moment
the issue of fabrication...
snaps shut in a non-reply.

When one brakes one's Wheel with a cancriform cam footprints appear in the talcum spread in the dimly-lit foyer that leads to the haunted hall.

Anyone dressed in a suit knows exactly what must be done:
Work/
    the besom of the Sun!
Then/

hands behind back bag pulled over head,
drop--babbling--thru & down...

Such radical subtractions are warranted
by the hey-post-diddly world.

↑ Index

439. Marcus Bales
January 27 ⍰ Saturday at Noon
Tue 23 Jan 2007

January 27 – Saturday at Noon
John M. Bennett, Michael Ceraolo

Gallery 324
The Galleria at Erieview
1301 East 9th Street
Cleveland, Ohio 44114

For more information:
Marcus Bales
216/[redacted]
[redacted]

Gallery 324 presents a weekly literary reading and performance series: Every Saturday at Noon. The Featured Readers read, starting with a piece by an artist other than themselves whose work they admire, and then there is an open mic afterwards.

There is Free Parking for these events on Saturdays in the Galleria Parking Garage: enter off Lakeside between East 9th and East 12th. There's a large sign with a 3-D curly-cue design that says "Galleria Parking", and a ramp down under the building.

Readings will begin at Noon, and rarely do they run past 2pm

The FEATURED READERS for SEPTEMBER 23, 2006 are:

January 27 – Saturday at Noon
John M. Bennett, Michael Ceraolo

John M. Bennett has written or edited over 200 books, curated and contributed to art exhibitions, created collections, published hundreds of poems and articles in magazines as varied as Clown War and The Boston Literary Review, and even collaborated on films. There's more detail at http://www.johnmbennett.net, and in his presentation at Gallery 324 on Saturday at Noon. Michael Ceraolo is a civil servant and poet who says he's trying to overcome a middle-class upbringing.. He has had over 600 poems published in nearly a hundred journals, such as Impetus, Green Fuse, San Fernando Poetry Journal, and Tamafyhr Mountain Poetry. His book Cleveland Haiku is available from Green Panda Press ([redacted]) His most recent book is Euclid Creek, from Deep Cleveland Press, (http://www.deepcleveland.com/deepclevelandbooks.html) which traces the origins of Euclid Creek and proceeds to illuminate hundreds of years of Northeast Ohio history as it meanders like the flow of water through people, places and events

DIRECTIONS to the GALLERIA

From the west side

2 East - East Ninth Street, right - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign). Parking is Free on Saturdays, $3 after 4pm on Fridays. Go up the escalator or elevator to the FIRST FLOOR. Out of the elevator turn right and walk past the escalator to the Courtyard

480 - 176North - 90East - 2West (Lakewood) - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

71 North - 90 East - 90East - 2West (Lakewood) - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

77 North - 90East - 2West (Lakewood) - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

From the east side

480 - 77 North - 90East - 2West (Lakewood) - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

90 West - 2 West - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

From the Heights

Martin Luther King Jr Blvd North - 90 West - 2 west - East Ninth Street, left - Lakeside, left - Galleria Parking Garage, right (if you get to 12th street you went too far – go around the block, right on 12th, right on St Clair, right on 9th, and right on Lakeside, and then right at the Parking Garage sign)

By RTA Rapid

From wherever you are go to the Tower City station and change for the Waterfront Line - get off at East 9th street, up the stairs, turn right on East Ninth Street (away from the lake, away from the R&R Hall) walk half a block to Lakeside, cross Ninth Street to your left, cross Lakeside, and half a block further on is the Ninth Street Entrance to the Galleria.

If the weather's nice, you can also walk from Tower City across Public Square away from the Terminal Tower building you came out of (the building in which the RTA Rapid lets you off) and toward the BP Building. Walk east (that is, turn right just past the BP building) on any of Superior, Rockwell, or St Clair streets, to East Ninth. Turn left. From St Clair, it's right there; from Rockwell, one block, from Superior two blocks, to the entrance at East Ninth and St Clair.

If you'd like to be removed from this email list, please REPLY to this message to:
[redacted]
and ask to be removed in the text of your message.

↑ Index

440. Dan Waber
ars poetica update
Tue 23 Jan 2007

The ars poetica project under way at:

http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/

saw poems appear last week by: Craig Czury, Alan Baker, Paul Dutton, and Jonathan Penton.

Poems will appear this week by: Jonathan Penton and Mairéad Byrne.

A new poem about poetry every day.

Enjoy,
Dan

↑ Index

441. Mark Stricker
nanomajority: issue#2
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Announcing the second issue of nanomajority <http://www.nanomajority.com/> <http://www.nanomajority.com/>-- a quarterly journal of writing, art, and inquiry. (<http://www.nanomajority.com/> www.nanomajority.com)

Issue #2:

Corey Antis: "1:1"

When I decided to start mapping my studio, I discovered that there were plenty of models available to serve as references.

Joel Bettridge: "Reading Hurts - Masochism and Lip Service as a Tortured Text"

"Bruce Andrews is not a poet," a professor to whom I had shown Andrews's Getting Ready To Have Been Frightened as an undergraduate told me.

Cathy Eisenhower: "Itinerary of Ophelia [a story of overdetermination]"

it was elsewhere first in else mouth and else corpus and the laboring figure of a sleeping lady and twitch....

In the archives:

Issue #1

Nancy Kuhl: "Room 26: The Discrete Notions Exhibit"

The Room 26 Discrete Notions exhibition series features individual artworks and objects that observe, celebrate, critique, and document cultural phenomena. Beginning in the spring of 2004 and changing several times a year, the series includes made and found artworks, verbo-visual commentaries, cultural documents, and literary and artistic records.

Melissa Lenos: "We need another hero... Our contemporary gunslinger, Supernanny"

We begin with a troubled family, terrorized and unable to manage their surroundings. A stranger arrives – seemingly out of nowhere - with no past and no personal details. The family is suspicious of the stranger at first, but once they've accepted this mysterious person into their home, they recognize that he has skills that would be useful to them. The stranger teaches the family to cope with their difficulties, remains for a final battle and then departs into the sunset alone.

Jean Smith: "In the end he says, 'Attraction is ephemeral.'"

Mistrust -- a flashing neon sign -- trust / do not trust – perhaps because we got together so fast. I feel comfortable with him. I am just being me and he seems to like me. In our Lavalife profiles we both express the idea for a lover -- not a relationship -- and then we just began to get close. Maybe because neither of us expected to find anything other than lover online. He doesn't want me to change. He wants to get to know me. Seems crazy about me. I am being myself. He laughs at what I say -- I laugh at what I say. He says, "Nowhere on all your websites and interviews did I read that you are lovely, funny and sexy as hell." If it could stay like this; but if it doesn't, I don't think I will be crushed. This part feels good too.

---------- PS - Please forward this announcement to anyone who might be interested.

*Issue #2 of nanomajority is best viewed in Firefox, Safari, Opera, and IE7

↑ Index

442. Thomas savage

Re: Poems on Scapegoats

Tue 23 Jan 2007

Dear Murat, I believe a martyr is someone who chooses or accepts the fate of his suffering, often leading to death, whereas a scapegoat has no choice about being subjected to the negative actions or statements of others. How this applies to Bush, I can't imagine, since he clearly deserves whatever negative reaction comes his way at this point. He and the Neo-Cons can consume each other for all I care, as long as they disappear. Regards, Tom Savage

Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote: I think Neo-ons and Bush will be the scapeboats of each other.

What is the relationship of scapegoat to martyr? No one is a martyr out of his own hometown?

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/22/07, Eric wrote:
>
> >>I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it > made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.
>

> Scapegoat is usually a belated title. Scapegoat Jesus' statement about > nobody being a prophet in his hometown probably applies to scapegoats > too. If I were to suggest that Bush and the Neocons are scapegoats for > the larger failures of government, the usual outrage would follow.
>
>
> Here's a fine poem on the Academy of American Poets site:
>
> "The Goat"
> by Aaron Fogel
>
> If you are a goat, do you believe
>
> What people tell you about
>
> Goats, and eat
>
> Tin cans?
>
> There's no goat that foolish.
>
> Or is there?
>
> The goat of the universe believed
>
> What people told him about universes
>
> And came into existence.
>
> Bang! How naive can you get?
>
> Even the scapegoat is not as naive
>
> As (God help him) the universe that
>
> Agreed to exist.
>
> A word to the wise: Don't eat tin cans.
>
> Don't listen. Don't exist.
>
> _____

>
>
> Poem from The Printer's Error, reprinted with permission of Miami > University Press
>
> http://www.poets.org/viewmedia.php/prmMID/17137
>

Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast with theYahoo! Search weather shortcut.

↑ Index

443. Anselm Berrigan
Bowery Broadsides Series hosted by Farfalla Press
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Friday, January 26, 8:30 PM
Edmund Berrigan and Anselm Berrigan
Bowery Broadsides Series hosted by Farfalla Press
FREE + 2 Drink Minimum
First fifty patrons receive free broadsides by both poets.
Bowery Poetry Club is on Bowery between Bleecker and Houston.

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

444. UbuWeb
Kenneth Goldsmith Blogging About Conceptual Poetics & Uncreative Writing at Poetry Foundation
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Kenneth Goldsmith will be blogging this week at the Poetry Foundation about conceptual poetics, uncreative writing. Topic will include: unoriginality, illegibility, appropriation, plagiarism, fraud, theft, information management, word processing, valuelessness, nutritionlessness and boredom in writing.

http://poetryfoundation.org/dispatches/journals/index.html

UbuWeb
http://ubu.com

___
Yahoo! Music Unlimited
Access over 1 million songs.
http://music.yahoo.com/unlimited

↑ Index

445. Dan Wilcox
2nd Anniversary of Poets Speak Loud - Albany, NY
Tue 23 Jan 2007

AlbanyPoets will celebrate the 2nd Anniversary of the monthly open mic, Poets Speak Loud, at Tess' Lark Tavern on Monday, January 29, 7:00 PM. The celebratioin will also mark the 2nd Anniversary of the passing of Tom Nattell to star dust. Tom was an Albany poet and activist who was scheduled to be the first featured poet at Poets Speak Loud on January 31, 2005. However Tom died of cancer that morning, so the reading turned into an impromptu memorial celebration, with a march to nearby Washington Park to place a beret upon the head of the statue of Robert Burns, the site of Poets in the Park each July. On this Monday we will continue that tradition with the 3rd Annual Beret Toss. Poets Speak Loud is held on the last Monday of each month at Tess' Lark Tavern on Madison Ave., in Albany, NY, starting at 7:00 PM. The usual host is Mary Panza; for the 2nd Anniversary celebration the host will be Dan Wilcox. For more information check out www.albanypoets.com. Peace, DWx [check out poems & notes on the Albany poetry scene on my Blog at dwlcx.blogspot.com]

↑ Index

446. Adam Fieled
"Waxing Hot": Poetics Dialogue on PFS Post
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Join Michael Tod Edgerton and Adam Fieled at PFS Post (http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com) for "Waxing Hot", a Poetics Dialogue. Among subjects covered: Lang-Po, Scalapino, Palmer, Howe, formal rigor, gravitas, Matisse, Picasso, Ashbery, O'Hara, Stones, epiphany, anti-epiphany, humanity, text-as-text, absorptive texts, Hejinian, Adorno, Althusser, Bernstein, Stevens, Williams, po-mo, High Modernism, Sonic Youth, Ornette Coleman, In a Silent Way, Wordsworth, dry humps, orgasms, Barthelme, Foster Wallace, Pynchon, Creeley, and lots, lots more...

Love,

Ad http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com

Never miss an email again!
Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.

↑ Index

447. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Dear Tom,

What I mean by it that who is called a martyr in the Islamic work is called a terrorist here.

Bush and Neo-cons being each others' scapegoats, each will blame the other for the iraq catastrophe.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/23/07, Thomas savage <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Dear Murat, I believe a martyr is someone who chooses or accepts the fate
> of his suffering, often leading to death, whereas a scapegoat has no choice > about being subjected to the negative actions or statements of others. How > this applies to Bush, I can't imagine, since he clearly deserves whatever > negative reaction comes his way at this point. He and the Neo-Cons can > consume each other for all I care, as long as they disappear. Regards, Tom > Savage
>
> Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote: I think Neo-ons and Bush > will be the scapeboats of each other.
>
> What is the relationship of scapegoat to martyr? No one is a martyr out of > his own hometown?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On 1/22/07, Eric wrote:
> >
> > >>I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it > > made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.

> >
> > Scapegoat is usually a belated title. Scapegoat Jesus' statement about > > nobody being a prophet in his hometown probably applies to scapegoats > > too. If I were to suggest that Bush and the Neocons are scapegoats for > > the larger failures of government, the usual outrage would follow.
> >
> >
> > Here's a fine poem on the Academy of American Poets site:
> >
> > "The Goat"
> > by Aaron Fogel
> >
> > If you are a goat, do you believe
> >
> > What people tell you about
> >
> > Goats, and eat
> >
> > Tin cans?
> >
> > There's no goat that foolish.
> >
> > Or is there?
> >
> > The goat of the universe believed
> >
> > What people told him about universes
> >
> > And came into existence.
> >
> > Bang! How naive can you get?
> >
> > Even the scapegoat is not as naive
> >
> > As (God help him) the universe that
> >
> > Agreed to exist.
> >
> > A word to the wise: Don't eat tin cans.
> >
> > Don't listen. Don't exist.
> >

> > _____
> >
> >
> > Poem from The Printer's Error, reprinted with permission of Miami > > University Press
> >
> > http://www.poets.org/viewmedia.php/prmMID/17137
> >
>
>
>
> ---
> Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast > with theYahoo! Search weather shortcut.
>

↑ Index

448. Thomas savage
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Hi Murat, I appreciate your clarification. As to the word "martyr", I was thinking of Christian martyrs. I don't know why since there aren't any anymore. Nevertheless...As for the distinction, verbally, of Muslim terrorists and martyrs, they still seem terrorists to me since their aim, after killing, is to inspire fear.There martyrdom, too, is somewhat nonsensical to me since there is probably no subset of Heaven waiting just for them solely because they've killed people and died as their own self-inflicted collateral damage. Regards, Tom Savage

Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote: Dear Tom,

What I mean by it that who is called a martyr in the Islamic work is called a terrorist here.

Bush and Neo-cons being each others' scapegoats, each will blame the other for the iraq catastrophe.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/23/07, Thomas savage wrote:
>
> Dear Murat, I believe a martyr is someone who chooses or accepts the fate
> of his suffering, often leading to death, whereas a scapegoat has no choice

> about being subjected to the negative actions or statements of others. How > this applies to Bush, I can't imagine, since he clearly deserves whatever > negative reaction comes his way at this point. He and the Neo-Cons can > consume each other for all I care, as long as they disappear. Regards, Tom > Savage
>
> Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote: I think Neo-ons and Bush
> will be the scapeboats of each other.
>
> What is the relationship of scapegoat to martyr? No one is a martyr out of > his own hometown?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On 1/22/07, Eric wrote:
> >
> > >>I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it > > made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.
> >
> > Scapegoat is usually a belated title. Scapegoat Jesus' statement about > > nobody being a prophet in his hometown probably applies to scapegoats > > too. If I were to suggest that Bush and the Neocons are scapegoats for > > the larger failures of government, the usual outrage would follow.
> >
> >
> > Here's a fine poem on the Academy of American Poets site:
> >
> > "The Goat"
> > by Aaron Fogel
> >
> > If you are a goat, do you believe
> >
> > What people tell you about
> >
> > Goats, and eat
> >
> > Tin cans?
> >
> > There's no goat that foolish.
> >

> > Or is there?
> >
> > The goat of the universe believed
> >
> > What people told him about universes
> >
> > And came into existence.
> >
> > Bang! How naive can you get?
> >
> > Even the scapegoat is not as naive
> >
> > As (God help him) the universe that
> >
> > Agreed to exist.
> >
> > A word to the wise: Don't eat tin cans.
> >
> > Don't listen. Don't exist.
> >
> > _____
> >
> >
> > Poem from The Printer's Error, reprinted with permission of Miami > > University Press
> >
> > http://www.poets.org/viewmedia.php/prmMID/17137
> >
>
>
>
> ---
> Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast > with theYahoo! Search weather shortcut.
>

Get your own web address.
Have a HUGE year through Yahoo! Small Business.

↑ Index

449. Eric
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Murat: What I mean by it that who is called a martyr in the Islamic work is called a terrorist here.

And rightly so, because their martyrdom involves the murder of innocents.

In the Christian worldview, however, martyrs often submit to death rather than renounce their religion. They die but do not kill others. The Catholic Church even has a martyrology for these types.

Civil rights martyrs usually do not kill others either. Stephen Biko and Martin Luther King were killed without killing others; John Brown however was a violent exception.

Martyrs for science, like Bruno or Galileo, do not kill innocents either.

↑ Index

450. Ann Bogle
New Works
Tue 23 Jan 2007

A lot of new work has come out in the last week or so -- I'm enjoying it at a clip, in particular UnlikelyStories 2.0: The Cross-Media Issue and collaborations in Sugar Mule. Now broadsides and experimental chapbooks and ars poetica. Appreciating those in my office with its desktop is going well. Trying to read fiction at home, in bed, is not going very well at all -- I avoid the cozy room where physical books surround my bed in wait for me. Books by fiction authors that I bought or checked out of the library -- all due or recalled before I can get to them. In one of the greatest bookstore moments of my life, I recently bought the collected Chekhov (Ecco) and began with volume 1 (of 13). "The Darling" is how far I got, but I had already read it. That is followed by an essay by Tolstoy about women, called "Tolstoy's Criticism on 'The Darling'," not to be missed! I ended up snubbing George Orwell (Down and Out in Paris and London) like neglecting to meet a train. Then it gets worse -- this reading of books -- I go to the cafe and can only read a minimalist there, one crouton at a time. My three Emily Dickinsons are in storage, but the boxed biography is here. My Collected H.D. is at his house, a thousand miles away. Then I get E.D. and H.D. out of the library and read and want to quote and forget the other books. Then I read at poets.org for a week. I mean to but forget to get the Collected May Swenson from the library, but I read her online. Then I go back to The Cross-Media Issue and see how much there still is to see and try to buy an item at eBay for Rain Taxi, but the auction must be over. Then I read the Norman Mailer article at the kitchen table while eating beans.

↑ Index

451. Maria Damon
Re: New Works
Tue 23 Jan 2007

---

yes, the raintaxi auction is over. someone i don't even know bought my shawl. my fear is that she's just bought it for the yarn, and will unravel the whole thing so as to re-use the materials. but it's beyond my control. oh well. am i more than a bit paranoid? most likely. charming post, anyway.

Ann Bogle wrote:
> A lot of new work has come out in the last week or so -- I'm enjoying it at > a clip, in particular UnlikelyStories 2.0: The Cross-Media Issue and > collaborations in Sugar Mule. Now broadsides and experimental chapbooks and ars > poetica. Appreciating those in my office with its desktop is going well. Trying > to read fiction at home, in bed, is not going very well at all -- I avoid > the cozy room where physical books surround my bed in wait for me. Books by > fiction authors that I bought or checked out of the library -- all due or > recalled before I can get to them. In one of the greatest bookstore moments of my > life, I recently bought the collected Chekhov (Ecco) and began with volume 1 > (of 13). "The Darling" is how far I got, but I had already read it. That > is followed by an essay by Tolstoy about women, called "Tolstoy's Criticism on
> 'The Darling'," not to be missed! I ended up snubbing George Orwell (Down > and Out in Paris and London) like neglecting to meet a train. Then it gets > worse -- this reading of books -- I go to the cafe and can only read a > minimalist there, one crouton at a time. My three Emily Dickinsons are in storage, > but the boxed biography is here. My Collected H.D. is at his house, a > thousand miles away. Then I get E.D. and H.D. out of the library and read and want > to quote and forget the other books. Then I read at poets.org for a week. I > mean to but forget to get the Collected May Swenson from the library, but I > read her online. Then I go back to The Cross-Media Issue and see how much > there still is to see and try to buy an item at eBay for Rain Taxi, but the > auction must be over. Then I read the Norman Mailer article at the kitchen > table while eating beans.

>

↑ Index

452. David-Baptiste Chirot

Re: Poems on Scapegoats (rexroth on dyaln thomas/artaud on van gogh)

Tue 23 Jan 2007

A martyr is also a person who sacrifices themself for a cause--greater than themself--their people, their homeland, their spiritual belief, political belief--many "suicide bombers" die not for themselves, but for their people--the Palestinain people for example--for a homeland--is dying for a cause-- Malcolm X, Martin Luther King--knew they could be killed for their causes--and were willing to die for them-- "terrorists" can't be lumped into one vast stereotype--there are many differing motivations and contexts worldwide and within supposedly homogeneous groups for these acts--many of them secular as much as having anything to do with religion-- think what point of despair and sense of helplessness a person is driven to when their only weapon is their life--if you get shot for throwing a rock--what are you supposed to do?--climb into ever and ever smaller holes?--put yourself in such a position and think of how you might respond-- or of prisoners, planning a prison break-- simone weil wrote in her essay on "the illiad: poem of force" writes that force is the x which turns any person into a thing people subjected to daily lives of nothing but coercion, imprisonment, taking away of food and water, medical supplies, schools--at certain point--are reminded continualy and only that they are things-- to approach the oppressor, come up close as a human being and be for a moment announcing that one is not a thing, one is a human--and to blow both up--as humans--is to say to the other--i am not a thing, for all you have done to me i am a person--and you, too are a person--so will kill you in person, to person-- the true terror is that the thing took on a human face and came forward--and killed you and themself as humans-- not things golda meir told the BBC in 1969 "there never was any suich thing as a Paelstinain"-- not any such people or nation--any such thing-- the Indians in this country wiped out, their lands settled and they forced to live in reservations in conditions unfit for wild animals in many cases----were thought of as things--without a nation or history or culture --they never had a government or flag and so forth--things--non-things-- this doesnt apply maybe to many suicide bombers but it does to ones i have read accounts of their beliefs, their lives, their action-- they weren't brainwashed zombies or fanatics thinking about heaven-- they were top students, hard working people--who examined their situation and came to a decision terrorists are always called this if on the other side-- American Indians in the American Indian

Movement have been called this for example--"terrorists"-- eco-terrorists-- when you read history books flat out Ben-Gurion and Began are called "terrorists" and they were-- but people who died with them I am sure are called martyrs also--as were fighting for their cause-- for some reason it is considered more barbaric to be forced to use a human bomb-- than to use, as the talk is being done now, of using a nuke bomb-- or of the millions of cluster bombs dropped on Lebanon-- that is considered "more human" than "inhuman" suicide bombing-- the logic of this escapes one-- Murat's point is a very good one--very important to keep in mind--from what persepective, and also with how much knowledge and thought, one considers things, they are of course quite different--one has to try to understand these questions from both or however many sides one possibly can--otherwise one gets caught up in the same kind of twisted thinking which leads to these events in the first place-- was John Brown a terrorist or a martyr? he has been seen and written about both ways-- Thoreau who wrote the great essay on civil Disobediance was also a great suporter and admirer of John Brown-- Sherman Alexie wrote : Oh! American that freedom loving country where Americans killed Americans over the right to have slaves. oh! oh!" from one side of the conflict, Lincoln was a great martyr--from the other--a monster-- there are many parts of the world where in one village a person is called a martyr but in the next one, they are reviled as the worst of scapegoats-- Che Guevara considered as a martyr--and this immensely accentuated in the famous Christ-like photos of him lying stretched out after death surrounded by Bolivan army and police-- for example many people consider John lennon a martyr-- and in terms of scapegoats-- there is the Kenneth rexroth poem about Dylan Thomas being killed basically by others--the poet destroyed by the public-- and the great piece by Artaud--"Van Gogh or The Man Suicided by Society"-- many artits stars in music and film for example are considered in ways that border on martyrdom-- marilyn monroe, james dean, jimi hendrix janis joplin, tuapc basquiat, pollock, kerouac, all have had auras of a formof martyrdom attached to them--many many more then these charlie parker and billie holiday too-- in Milwaukee we have the Black Holocaust Museum--a place of martyrs killed by terrorists--even in very recent years--the man dragged to death by chains from a pickup truck in Texas-- the martyrdom of the young gay man left Christ like also hanging on a fence-- there is a great deal to think about and find out about before one passes judgement--especially on stereotyped images promulagated against enemies in war time-- btw--strindberg wrote a great novel called The Scapegoat--the scapegoat is a theme a lotof his work expores--this the most explicit example there are also the films of Lars von Trier--the trilogy esp--with Dancer inthe Dark, Dogville and my bad i forget nameof the first one--very much films on the scapegoat theme--

> From: Thomas savage <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Date: Tue, 23 Jan 2007 10:15:46 -0800

Hi Murat, I appreciate your clarification. As to the word "martyr", I was thinking of Christian martyrs. I don't know why since there aren't any anymore. Nevertheless...As for the distinction, verbally, of Muslim terrorists and martyrs, they still seem terrorists to me since their aim, after killing, is to inspire fear.There martyrdom, too, is somewhat nonsensical to me since there is probably no subset of Heaven waiting just for them solely because they've killed people and died as their own self-inflicted collateral damage. Regards, Tom Savage

Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote: Dear Tom,

What I mean by it that who is called a martyr in the Islamic work is called a terrorist here.

Bush and Neo-cons being each others' scapegoats, each will blame the other for the iraq catastrophe.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/23/07, Thomas savage wrote:

Dear Murat, I believe a martyr is someone who chooses or accepts the fate of his suffering, often leading to death, whereas a scapegoat has no choice about being subjected to the negative actions or statements of others. How this applies to Bush, I can't imagine, since he clearly deserves whatever negative reaction comes his way at this point. He and the Neo-Cons can consume each other for all I care, as long as they disappear. Regards, Tom Savage

Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote: I think Neo-ons and Bush
will be the scapeboats of each other.

What is the relationship of scapegoat to martyr? No one is a martyr out of his own hometown?

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/22/07, Eric wrote:

I assume that I was being scapegoated for telling the truth when it made other poets whom I then knew uncomfortable.

Scapegoat is usually a belated title. Scapegoat Jesus' statement about nobody being a prophet in his hometown probably applies to scapegoats too. If I were to suggest that Bush and the Neocons are scapegoats for the larger failures of government, the usual outrage would follow.

Here's a fine poem on the Academy of American Poets site:

"The Goat"
by Aaron Fogel

If you are a goat, do you believe

What people tell you about

Goats, and eat

Tin cans?

There's no goat that foolish.

Or is there?

The goat of the universe believed

What people told him about universes

And came into existence.

Bang! How naive can you get?

Even the scapegoat is not as naive

As (God help him) the universe that

Agreed to exist.

A word to the wise: Don't eat tin cans.

Don't listen. Don't exist.

> ———
>
> Poem from The Printer's Error, reprinted with permission of Miami University Press
>
> http://www.poets.org/viewmedia.php/prmMID/17137
>
> ---
> Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast with theYahoo! Search weather shortcut.
>
> ---
> Get your own web address.
> Have a HUGE year through Yahoo! Small Business.

_____ Type your favorite song. Get a customized station. Try MSN Radio powered by Pandora. http://radio.msn.com/?icid=T002MSN03A07001

↑ Index

453. Bill Marsh

Heretical Texts Vol. 3.5: Ammiel Alcalay

Tue 23 Jan 2007

New from Factory School:

Heretical Texts, Volume 3, No. 5

SCRAPMETAL by Ammiel Alcalay

Factory School. 2007. 94 pages, perfect bound, 6.5x9.
ISBN: 1-60001-054-7

$12 / available through Small Press Distribution
(http://www.spdbooks.org/)

The complete third volume (5 books) is available at a discount direct from the publisher:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/order.html

Description: Between a Cadillac and a Valiant sitting idly in the snow, SCRAPMETAL takes a provisional journey through the experience of work and the untangling of vampiric forces that sever life from our record of it. Part primer and part example, SCRAPMETAL offers a method of attacking the "inflationary poetics" that deafen us in the "steady hum of overproduction."

For more about the Heretical Texts series:
http://www.factoryschool.org/pubs/heretical/index.html

Volume One:

1. Dan Featherston, United States
2. Laura Elrick, Fantasies in Permeable Structures
3. Linh Dinh, Borderless Bodies
4. Sarah Menefee, Human Star
5. kari edwards, obedience

Volume Two:

1. Diane Ward, Flim-Yoked Scrim
2. Steve Carll, Tracheal Centrifuge
3. Kristin Prevallet, Shadow Evidence Intelligence
4. Brian Kim Stefans, What is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers
5. Carol Mirakove, Mediated

Volume Three:

1. Heriberto Yépez, Wars. Threesomes. Drafts. & Mothers
2. Meg Hamill, Death Notices
3. Nick Piombino, fait accompli
4. Catherine Daly, Chanteuse/Cantatrice
5. Ammiel Alcalay, Scrapmetal

Contact: info "at" factoryschool.org [or reply backchannel to this email]

↑ Index

454. Skip Fox
Re: ars poetica update
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Dan--

Lines are getting cut off on the second Penton poem.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Dan Waber
Sent: Tuesday, January 23, 2007 8:17 AM

To: [redacted]
Subject: ars poetica update

The ars poetica project under way at:

http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/

saw poems appear last week by: Craig Czury, Alan Baker, Paul Dutton, and Jonathan Penton.

Poems will appear this week by: Jonathan Penton and Mairéad Byrne.

A new poem about poetry every day.

Enjoy,
Dan

↑ Index

455. Dan Waber
Re: ars poetica update
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Skip,

Thanks--looks like it's a problem with the way IE renders CSS, I'll find a workaround. (http://www.webcredible.co.uk/user-friendly-resources/css/internet-explorer.shtml)

In the meantime, if you try it using a standards-compliant browser (like Firefox or Opera), it looks perfect.

Thanks,
Dan

Skip Fox <[redacted]> wrote:
> Dan--
>
> Lines are getting cut off on the second Penton poem.
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Dan Waber
> Sent: Tuesday, January 23, 2007 8:17 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: ars poetica update
>
> The ars poetica project under way at:

>
> http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/
>
> saw poems appear last week by: Craig Czury, Alan Baker, Paul Dutton, > and Jonathan Penton.
>
> Poems will appear this week by: Jonathan Penton and Mairéad Byrne.
>
> A new poem about poetry every day.
>
> Enjoy,
> Dan

↑ Index

456. Lewis LaCook

Minivan on Fire! New Video by Lewis LaCook at lewislacook.org

Tue 23 Jan 2007

---

http://www.lewislacook.org/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=28

Lewis LaCook, Senior Engineer
Abstract Outlooks Media

http://www.abstractoutlooks.com
Abstract Outlooks Media - Premium Web Hosting, Development, and Art Photography
http://www.lewislacook.org
lewislacook.org - New Media Poetry and Poetics
http://www.xanaxpop.org
Xanax Pop - the poetry of Lewis LaCook

****

||http://www.abstractoutlooks.com ||
Abstract Outlooks Media - A New Vision for A New Web
Hosting, Design, Development, Photography

||http://www.lewislacook.org||
New Media Poetry and Poetics

||http://www.xanaxpop.org||
Xanax Pop - A Bloge of Poemes

Don't pick lemons.
See all the new 2007 cars at Yahoo! Autos.

↑ Index

457. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Eric,

Do you remember the Buddhist(s) monk who set himself to fire during the Vietnam War? Was he a martyr or a terrorist?

I do not want to defend the killing of innocents. I do not want to defend killing at all, and I think all senses of martyr contain glorifications of death. Martyrdom is often used as very potent political weapon, and how it is defined changes with the point of view.

Ciao,

Murat.

On 1/23/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Murat: What I mean by it that who is called a martyr in the Islamic work > is called a terrorist here.
>
>
> And rightly so, because their martyrdom involves the murder of innocents.
>
> In the Christian worldview, however, martyrs often submit to death > rather than renounce their religion. They die but do not kill others.
> The Catholic Church even has a martyrology for these types.
>
> Civil rights martyrs usually do not kill others either. Stephen Biko and > Martin Luther King were killed without killing others; John Brown
> however was a violent exception.
>
> Martyrs for science, like Bruno or Galileo, do not kill innocents either.
>

↑ Index

458. Michael Heller
(no subject)
Tue 23 Jan 2007

--=======AVGMAIL-45B6B8B04099======Content-Type: text/plain; charset=iso-8859-1; format=flowed; x-avg-checked=avg-ok-369226CE

I'll be doing the following public events this winter in Europe. If you are in the neighborhood, please drop by. MH

UK EVENTS

February 1st. Poetry Reading at Warwick University at 4 PM in the Chaplaincy building (alongside the Arts Centre).

February 2nd. Poetry Reading with Ian Davidson at 7:30 PM. The Plough, Museum Street, Bloomsbury.

February 7th. Reading from “The Beckmann Meditations.” 7 PM. The Council Room at Birkbeck College of Art, Malet Street, London.

February 9th. Poetry Reading and talk on “Dantean Reznikoff.” 8 PM Durham. Colpitts Poetry Reading Series events take place at Alington House, 4 North Bailey, Durham (just beyond Owengate which goes up to the Cathedral). Admission £4.00/2.50.

IRELAND

February 21st. Poetry Reading and Discussion. 7 PM. Dublin, Trinity College. The Arts Building.

February 23rd. Poetry Reading. Cork. SoundEye series. 8 PM. The Slainte Pub (formerly The Vineyard) in Market Lane.

FRANCE

March 9th. Université du Maine. LeMans. Programme du Colloque International: “L’impersonnel en littérature” 10 AM. Plenary address: “The Voice of the Impersonal.”

March 9th. Université du Maine. LeMans. 7 PM Poetry reading.

March 16th. Paris. Double Change reading series. 7PM. Poetry reading at Point Ephereme, 200 quai de Valmy. Paris, 75010.

Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at: http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm
Collaborations with Ellen Fishman Johnson at:
http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html
--=======AVGMAIL-45B6B8B04099======Content-Type: text/plain; x-avgÎrt; charset=us-ascii; x-avg-checked=avg-ok-369226CE
Content-Description: "AVG certification"

No virus found in this outgoing message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.8/648 - Release Date: 1/23/2007 11:04 AM

--=======AVGMAIL-45B6B8B04099=======--

↑ Index

459. Stephen Vincent
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Tue 23 Jan 2007

Tempted to ask - 20 minutes before the new fiction - is, given some of the arguments here - whether or not George Bush is a martyr for not already killing himself. He's clearly got practically a whole country, if not entire world, against him and his belief system. He's clearly got a cause that he is not willing to renounce. There is an aspect of him - it's long appeared - that would rather go down in flames(dragging the nation with him) rather than submit to any dialog, negotiation. change, and/or transformation. One wonders what's holding him back?? Karl Rove? Cheney? Maybe he, Rove and Cheney have defined a a new category, "Living Martyr." Thanks a lot, George!!

O well!
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

> Eric,
>
> Do you remember the Buddhist(s) monk who set himself to fire during the Vietnam War? Was he a martyr or a terrorist?
>
> I do not want to defend the killing of innocents. I do not want to defend killing at all, and I think all senses of martyr contain glorifications of death. Martyrdom is often used as very potent political weapon, and how it is defined changes with the point of view.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat.
>
> On 1/23/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Murat: What I mean by it that who is called a martyr in the Islamic work is called a terrorist here.

> And rightly so, because their martyrdom involves the murder of innocents.
>
> In the Christian worldview, however, martyrs often submit to death rather than renounce their religion. They die but do not kill others. The Catholic Church even has a martyrology for these types.
>
> Civil rights martyrs usually do not kill others either. Stephen Biko and Martin Luther King were killed without killing others; John Brown however was a violent exception.
>
> Martyrs for science, like Bruno or Galileo, do not kill innocents either.

↑ Index

460. Alan Sondheim
metrical forms of the apocalypse
Wed 24 Jan 2007

metrical forms of the apocalypse

http://www.asondheim.org/metrical.mp3 (tabla)

"It is not, again, "what is to be done," but "what is the doing." And it is insufficient to abjure the doing, as in the notion there can be no lyric poetry, perhaps no poetry, after the Holocaust, that other holocaust that continues in yet other forms. This bypasses, not only doing, but thinking that may yet reveal another dawn in the midst of dusk. One might say in return, all dawns are ruptured. The day is ruptured by the night. What remains, what is never ruptured: ground zero - one might say the substance of ground zero, but here there is no divisibility; one fails and falters with the other."

↑ Index

461. Laura Winton
Re: Unraveled Damon
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Makes me think of the Rauschenberg piece, "Erased DeKooning."

Hopefully that will make you feel better about any potential use of your shawl.

LW

-----Original Message-----
From: Maria Damon [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, January 23, 2007 1:12 PM
Subject: Re: New Works

yes, the raintaxi auction is over. someone i don't even know bought my shawl. my fear is that she's just bought it for the yarn, and will unravel the whole thing so as to re-use the materials. but it's beyond my control. oh well. am i more than a bit paranoid? most likely. charming post, anyway.

Ann Bogle wrote:
> A lot of new work has come out in the last week or so -- I'm enjoying it at > a clip, in particular UnlikelyStories 2.0: The Cross-Media Issue and > collaborations in Sugar Mule. Now broadsides and experimental chapbooks and ars > poetica. Appreciating those in my office with its desktop is going well. Trying > to read fiction at home, in bed, is not going very well at all -- I avoid > the cozy room where physical books surround my bed in wait for me. Books by > fiction authors that I bought or checked out of the library -- all due or > recalled before I can get to them. In one of the greatest bookstore moments of my > life, I recently bought the collected Chekhov (Ecco) and began with volume 1

> (of 13). "The Darling" is how far I got, but I had already read it. That > is followed by an essay by Tolstoy about women, called "Tolstoy's Criticism on
> 'The Darling'," not to be missed! I ended up snubbing George Orwell (Down > and Out in Paris and London) like neglecting to meet a train. Then it gets > worse -- this reading of books -- I go to the cafe and can only read a > minimalist there, one crouton at a time. My three Emily Dickinsons are in storage, > but the boxed biography is here. My Collected H.D. is at his house, a > thousand miles away. Then I get E.D. and H.D. out of the library and read and want > to quote and forget the other books. Then I read at poets.org for a week. I > mean to but forget to get the Collected May Swenson from the library, but I > read her online. Then I go back to The Cross-Media Issue and see how much > there still is to see and try to buy an item at eBay for Rain Taxi, but

the > auction must be over. Then I read the Norman Mailer article at the kitchen
> table while eating beans.
>

↑ Index

462. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Stephen,

Exactly! George may think he is a martyr. The last refuge of an obstinate mule, martyrdom.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/23/07, Stephen Vincent <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Tempted to ask - 20 minutes before the new fiction - is, given some of the > arguments here - whether or not George Bush is a martyr for not already > killing himself. He's clearly got practically a whole country, if not > entire > world, against him and his belief system. He's clearly got a cause that he > is not willing to renounce. There is an aspect of him - it's long appeared > that would rather go down in flames(dragging the nation with him) rather > than submit to any dialog, negotiation. change, and/or transformation. One > wonders what's holding him back?? Karl Rove? Cheney?
> -
> Maybe he, Rove and Cheney have defined a a new category, "Living Martyr."
> Thanks a lot, George!!
>
> O well!
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
> Stephen V
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
>
>
>

> > Eric,
> >
> > Do you remember the Buddhist(s) monk who set himself to fire during the > > Vietnam War? Was he a martyr or a terrorist?
> >
> > I do not want to defend the killing of innocents. I do not want to > defend > > killing at all, and I think all senses of martyr contain glorifications
> of > > death. Martyrdom is often used as very potent political weapon, and how > it
> > is defined changes with the point of view.
> >
> > Ciao,
> >
> > Murat.
> >
> > On 1/23/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
> >>
> >> Murat: What I mean by it that who is called a martyr in the Islamic > work
> >> is called a terrorist here.
> >>
> >>
> >> And rightly so, because their martyrdom involves the murder of > innocents.
> >>
> >> In the Christian worldview, however, martyrs often submit to death
> >> rather than renounce their religion. They die but do not kill others.
> >> The Catholic Church even has a martyrology for these types.
> >>
> >> Civil rights martyrs usually do not kill others either. Stephen Biko
> and
> >> Martin Luther King were killed without killing others; John Brown
> >> however was a violent exception.
> >>
> >> Martyrs for science, like Bruno or Galileo, do not kill innocents > either.
> >>
>

↑ Index

463. David-Baptiste Chirot
NYTimes.com: Libby Defense Portrays Client as a Scapegoat
Wed 24 Jan 2007

This page was sent to you by: [redacted].

NATIONAL | January 24, 2007
Libby Defense Portrays Client as a Scapegoat
By NEIL A. LEWIS
I. Lewis Libby Jr.'s lawyer asserted that Mr. Libby was made a scapegoat by White House officials to protect Karl Rove.

http://www.nytimes.com/2007/01/24/us/24libby.html?ex=1170306000&en=0f9ea1e36719ab9a&ei=5070&emc=eta1

ABOUT THIS E-MAIL
This e-mail was sent to you by a friend through NYTimes.com's E-mail This Article service. For general information about NYTimes.com, write to [redacted].

NYTimes.com 500 Seventh Avenue New York, NY 10018

Copyright 2007 The New York Times Company

↑ Index

464. Alexander Dickow
martyrs and terrorists...
Wed 24 Jan 2007

David,
I suppose I'm as confused as anybody about all this, but:
A useful comparison for understanding why the suicide bomber is misguided might be found in the figure of the Resistant, with which the suicide bomber is constantly (wrongly, and to my constant dismay) conflated. The Resistant targets military forces and infrastructure to combat oppression. He believes in the possibility of a future without oppression. The suicide bomber has a vision of despair (I am following your own description of the figure): he sees no possible future, with or without oppression, and he targets civilians ("for all you have done to me": who? the civilians of Israel? many have reprehensible beliefs, yes, and many may have been part of horrible military action in the past, but destroying them now accomplishes nothing, and produces hate and fear). He despairs: put another way, he submits utterly to the force of oppression, by reducing himself and others to things in an another horrible way. He is not a fighter, even symbolically, he is not a Resistant. He has admitted his total defeat by symbolically staging his own destruction.

The defense of the Palestinian people, and/or opposition to Israel, does not have to include a defense of suicide bombers, whether or not they are religious fanatics (who are, in any event, rarely the raving lunatics we imagine them to be), and, I argue, should not. That we should heed the call for help, as misled and perverted as it is, seems obvious and urgent. But from there to defending their actions...?
I know you'll realize that everything I write "sourd de bon, franc et loyale courage..."!
Amities,
Alex

www.alexdickow.net/blog/

> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

465. Schlesinger Kyle

Literary Events in conjunction with the exhibition Joe Brainard, People of the World: Relax!!

Wed 24 Jan 2007

In conjunction with the exhibition Joe Brainard, People of the World: Relax!! the UB Art Galleries and the University at Buffalo Poetry and Rare Books Collection are proud to present two special events.

On Friday, January 26, 2007 at 8pm Ron Padgett and Kenward Elmslie will give a Poetry Reading at the Albright-Knox Art Gallery. The event, Mixed Media, is part of the Gusto at the Gallery Series and will also feature local favorites the David Kane Quartet and a site specific performance by Nimbus Dance. Poet Ron Padgett grew up in Tulsa, where he met Joe Brainard at the age of six. Padgett¹s recent books include the memoir, Oklahoma Tough: My Father, King of the Tulsa Bootleggers, the collection of poems, You Never Know, and Joe: A Memoir of Joe Brainard. As a member of the first generation New York School of Poets, Kenward Elmslie introduced contemporary poetry to Broadway in the form of musicals. Among his many books of poetry, Kenward Elmslie has also created work for the musical stage: Postcards on Parade, City Junket, and an adaptation of Truman Capote's The Grass Harp.

On Thursday, February 1, 2007 at 1pm a Brown Bag Lunch Lecture by Steven Clay will take place at the UB Art Gallery in the First Floor Gallery. Steven Clay, publisher of Granary Books, is an editor, curator and archivist specializing in the American art and literature of the 1960s, '70s and '80s. He is the author, with Rodney Phillips, of A Secret Location on the Lower East Side: Adventures in Writing 1960-1980.

Both events are free and open to the public.

For more information please contact:
Anne Reed
External Affairs Officer
UB Art Galleries
[redacted]
[redacted] x1424

Joe Brainard, People of the World: Relax!! at the UB Art Gallery, Center for the Arts, Jan. 25 through March 3, 2007. Opening reception on Thursday, January 25 at 5pm

↑ Index

466. Jamie Gaughran-Perez
A Response to the State of the Union [by robots]
Wed 24 Jan 2007

[apologies for any cross-post]

You heard the Democrats respond, now check out what the Robot Community has to say about (U.S.) President Bush's latest address to Congress and the nation. www.rockheals.com

Also this week we have poetry from Kemeny Babineau and Zombie Haiku from David Durst. And recent weeks have had lovely stuff from David Franks, Gopal Lahiri, Alessandro Porco, W.B. Keckler, Gopal Lahiri, and many many more.

[direct link to robots on the SOU:
http://www.rockheals.com/archives/2007/01/ask_a_robot_the_1.html]

--
Jamie Gaughran-Perez

www.rockheals.com
a narrow house weekly

↑ Index

467. Ron Silliman
Of late on Silliman's Blog
Wed 24 Jan 2007

---

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

RECENT POSTS

Daisy Fried
should win
the National Book Critics Circle Award
by acclamation

Confusing character transference
with reading

Nathaniel Mackey’s
Splay Anthem
has to be read aloud

IFLIFE, the poem,
is Bob Perelman’s love-hate story
with the whole of poetry

A guide to Bob Perelman’s
Guide to Homage to Sextus Propertius

IFLIFE, the book,
a dizzying display of mastery

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

468. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: martyrs and terrorists...
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Dear Alex:

Oh--I am not defending their actions. I agree with you--a resistance would be to blow up communication centers, police stations, air ports, government buildings,water purification plants, electricity generators bridges, etc. But then that often causes "collateral damage" also. I can't fathom why suicide bombing is done, so have tried to find out the point of view for it. I read that it was introduced to the Palestinains by a member of the Japanese Red Army in late 1960's as the Japanese have used suicide bombing in the past--the kamikaze pilots of World War 2. These of course, targeted Naval Forces and their accompanying supply ships, not civilians. (Though Japanese civilians were being fire bombed at the time). (At the very end of the war the Germans also used some suicide planes.) On the other hand, Andre Breton wrote that the ultimate Surrealist act would to be to go into a crowd and start firing a revolver. I saw recently on cable an American film from the 1940's, a wartime drama set in the Phillipies. Towards the fiilm's end, in order for the fleeing Americans, nurses with wounded mainly, to have a chance for a dash for esacpe, one of the nurses advances by herself towards the Japanese, offering herself up they think to be taken in the worst senses of the word. (The nurses have been warned about what the Japanese did to female prisoners trhoughut Asia.) The nurses wlaks staright into the large Japanese advance--and detonates herself. The rest of the Americans are given enough time to make their getaway. Since this nurse's fiance had been killed at Pearl Harbor, her motivations are not just self-sacrifice--she is eager to avenge his death and her grief on the hated Japanese. She is n't blowing up civilians, but it was interesting to see in an American film the use of a suicide bomber in this way, and how the motivations were worked out. I agree with you that this is a very self deafting strategy and seems incomprehensible. That's why I keep trying to figure out what it is maybe impossible to if one is not in that culture and situation. A friend of mine, a 54 year old man at the time, a harmless chizophrenic wh used to wlak around holding by turns a Bible or a Koran in his cupped hands, was beaten to death in front of the building where he lived--I used to live inthe same building, about three blocks from where I live now. The killing was done by a group of ten boys, the oldest of whom was thriteen. Only half of them have ever been caught. Especailly in summer time, there are groups of young boys, theoldest barely in their teens, who walk the treets with baseball bats and other wepons. When they find someone defenseless, they attack. They have no concept and no fear even when a slight one, of having to spend the rest of their lives perhaps in prison. They are filled with rage and at the same a strange lack of affect, a kind of contradiction. Interviews with many children and teens who have committed such crimes find extreme rage about the dehumanization of their environment and at ame time that the dehumanization has sunk so far in, killing innocent people doesnt' register as anything extraordinary at all. They feel there isno value to their lives, so there is no value in others'. Intead of channelingrage into a "productive" idea of wanting to grow up to change society, there is the self-defeating desire to wreack revenge in the here and now--not at the powerful, like blowing up a police station or acts of resistance--but at innocents, who cant' defend thmselves. The contempt they have for weakness may be that they see themselves in weakness, their postion, and hate that, so in a group need to get rid of the sight which reminds them ofthemselves. Those are just theories people work on, trying to understand what drives these attacks as they grow more and more frequent. If you grown up in society in which violence is 24/7 and rage about your defencelessness is all consuming from a very very early age, it seems one is a fertile planting ground for wanting to respond in some extreme manner, not in an organized, strategic one neccesarily at all, but a striking out and rage for revenge. Again, these are only theories. It is often pointed out that a culture of violence surrounds youngpeople in their dialy lives and in the media also all around one. Violence seems to be the solution toeverything. The only things keeping some form of lid on it are the police on theon hand and gangs n the other, or drug dealers and their assorted quasi-militia and kids who are basically their eyes and ears on the ground so to speak. Introduce drugs to the equation, and that becomes another way of controlling people, keeping them in a self defeating situation. there are also the huge number of killings every year in which a man takes his family hostage, or simply surprises them in the night--and shoots them all and then himself. Or the columbine style killers. The culture of revenge is very strong motivation also--the eye for an eye of the Bible. A person is killed on one side--so--then x number have to be killed on the oher. Which calls for another response, back and forth forever. I 'm not defending these actions at all. I don't know what it will take to stop the insnaity, especially because of the "eye for an eye" mentality. I've tried to understand it but I think not being a part of the culture and situation I can't. Since I see the self destructiveness of the part of the world I live in, I've tried to understand what goes into creating it. What happned to the movements of resistance of thrity years ago? I think in the United States a lot of it is drugs, and that the supply of drugs is always increasing, and targets first the same areas. Malcolm X was the first American leader to speak out agsint drugs, much more passionately than any leader has since. However, people can be fed other things as a form of drug--via propaganda, become addicted to hate and revenge on both sides until there is no room for any form of thought other than the irrationality of extreme emotions kept continually at the highest pitch. 9/11 showed this revenge effect happening in the United Satets, people who had seemed rational suddenly screaming for blood and the government continually ratcheting up the alerts and fears as much as possible. Thank you very much for your letter Alex. Suicide also I was thinking--used to be a big question when Camus wrote about it, of course that is individual suicide, wihout killng others. Though the context is different in many ways, I realized that Franz Fanon might be a very interesting and useful writer to read again now. I did see a brief interview with a Palestinain psychiatrist who has sutdied over a thousand children and he said the effects on these childen of the lives they lead is something which has already in a sense made them feel as though they are dead already. There's no sense of a future, or hope, or anything, the damge is incalcuable. You think of "the land of opporutnity" the kids here grow up in supposedly--but many live with another version of this kind of zero horiizon to life. Life has no value so it isn't much trouble at all to want to smash it to peices, your won and someone esle's out of rage and revenge and fear and many other things sunk deep inside the being. Thank you again Alex. Since one lives in such a world, there's a desre t try to understand and many things--very hard to if at all. Oh I did think of Joan of Arc--a martyr, a Saint and a military leader. This puzzled me no end as a child until I lived in France,of course! She was burned at the stake the same year Francois Villon was born. I think Villon is one of the greatest poets for preseniting such a range of understandings and at same time the knwoeldge and at the same time "I know everything but myself". On the one hand extreme vioelnce--he did kill a Preist in self defense it was ruled--was tortured, imprisoned, twice about to hang and reprieved at the last moment--and at the same time writes of compassion, love, mercy, tenderness. There is a great joy and at the same time a deep sense of fatalism--"I cheer up in sad despair". To me he is a continual companion for moving through a wrold of such violence and such beauty simultaneously. If one could impart the ability to be in the midst of things and at the same time have a form of distance within oneself to recongize the possibilities of something else which is right in front of one, in n matter how abused a state, instead of the hatred and revenge, that seems a way to cope with a situation and find a way towards peace. A poet friend yesterday told me he had a sense of "optimistic fatalism"--I thought this put it very well!

> From: Alexander Dickow <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: martyrs and terrorists...
> Date: Wed, 24 Jan 2007 05:06:05 -0800
>
> David,
> I suppose I'm as confused as anybody about all this, but:
> A useful comparison for understanding why the suicide bomber is misguided might be found in the figure of the Resistant, with which the suicide bomber is constantly (wrongly, and to my constant dismay) conflated. The Resistant targets military forces and infrastructure to combat oppression. He believes in the possibility of a future without oppression. The suicide bomber has a vision of despair (I am following your own description of the figure): he sees no possible future, with or without oppression, and he targets civilians ("for all you have done to me": who? the civilians of Israel? many have reprehensible > *beliefs, yes, and many may have been part of horrible military action in the past, but destroying them now accomplishes nothing, and produces hate and fear). He despairs: put another way, he submits utterly to the force of oppression, by reducing himself and others to things in an another horrible way. He is not a fighter, even symbolically, he is not a Resistant. He has admitted his total defeat by symbolically staging his own destruction.*

> The defense of the Palestinian people, and/or opposition to Israel, does not have to include a defense of suicide bombers, whether or not they are religious fanatics (who are, in any event, rarely the raving lunatics we imagine them to be), and, I argue, should not. That we should heed the call for help, as misled and perverted as it is, seems obvious and urgent. But from there to defending their actions...?
> I know you'll realize that everything I write "sourd de bon, franc et loyale courage..."!
> Amities,
> Alex
>
> www.alexdickow.net/blog/
>
> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

_____ From predictions to trailers, check out the MSN Entertainment Guide to the Academy Awards® http://movies.msn.com/movies/oscars2007/?icid=ncoscartagline1

↑ Index

469. amy king
New @ MiPOesias
Wed 24 Jan 2007

WITH SNIPPETS:

Andrew Demack – “Our sperm medicinally coffined.”
http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/demcak_andrew.htm

~~~~~~~

Erik Sweet – “But my ideas are in a car, moving away from here … ” http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/sweet_erik.htm

~~~~~~~

Todd Burritt – "…the blank page means …"
http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/burritt_todd.htm

~~~~~~~

Michael Parker reviews "Wanton Textiles" http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/parker_michael_wantontextitles.htm

~~~~~~~

Elisa Gabbert and Kathleen Rooney -- "I have a bruise on my thigh that looks like a galaxy …" http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/gabbert_rooney.htm

~~~~~~~

Alexander Dickow – "I'll be had a disparity/of rubicund improprieties…"
http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/dickow_alexander.htm

~~~~~~~

Gina Abelkop – "But what is it? Slide your hand in like a ladle…"
http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/abelkop_gina.htm

~~~~~~~

Mike Young – "you should call your mother before/we are invaded by the 'North Korea iamb' … " http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/young_mike.htm

~~~~~~~

Shafer Hall and John Cotter – "When I walk home at night, the people hidden in their houses speak to me." http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/cotter_hall.htm

~~~~~~~

TaraShea Nesbit – "Moth orchids. Desire."
http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/nesbit_tarashea.htm

~~~~~~~

Thanks for stopping in!

http://www.mipoeisas.com
http://miporeadingseries2007.blogspot.com/

_____

Access over 1 million songs - Yahoo! Music Unlimited.

↑ Index

470. Jeffrey Side
New poems by Douglas Messerli at The Argotist Online
Wed 24 Jan 2007

New poems by Douglas Messerli at:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Messerli%20poems.htm

↑ Index

471. Bruce Covey
Coconut Seven now live!!
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Coconut Seven, just as flaky as ever, is now live on the web! Check out thrilling new poems by Lisa Jarnot, Keith Waldrop, Brigitte Byrd, Natasha Trethewey, Christine Hume, Brian Henry, Cynthia Arrieu-King, Loretta Clodfelter, Jennifer L Knox, Marie Buck, Laurie Soslow, Eva Jane Peck, Will Gallien, Rodney Koeneke, Laine Cathryn, Jennifer Bartlett, Thomas Fink, Tao Lin, Shane Allison, Chad Sweeney, Del Ray Cross, Anne Gorrick, and Lauren Levin.
www.coconutpoetry.org
See you there,
Bruce Covey
Coconut Editor

↑ Index

472. Thomas savage
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Murat, the Buddhist monk who set himself on fire during the Vietnam War probably would not have considered himself a martyr though in some sense you could argue that he was. A larger issue for me is whether his act was a suicide or not, since suicide is prohibited in Buddhism. For an interesting and convincing discussion of all of this I would refer you to a book by the eminent Vietnamese Buddhist teacher Thich Nhat Hanh. Unfortunately, I don't remember which of his many books it was in which I read this. But the author argues fairly successfully, if I remember correctly, that this act was not a suicide. If anyone reading this who knows could supply the name of this book in which this is discussed it might facilitate any discussion of whether that monk's actions were martyrdom or not.

Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote: Eric,

Do you remember the Buddhist(s) monk who set himself to fire during the Vietnam War? Was he a martyr or a terrorist?

I do not want to defend the killing of innocents. I do not want to defend killing at all, and I think all senses of martyr contain glorifications of death. Martyrdom is often used as very potent political weapon, and how it is defined changes with the point of view.

Ciao,

Murat.

On 1/23/07, Eric wrote:
>
> Murat: What I mean by it that who is called a martyr in the Islamic work > is called a terrorist here.
>
>
> And rightly so, because their martyrdom involves the murder of innocents.
>
> In the Christian worldview, however, martyrs often submit to death
> rather than renounce their religion. They die but do not kill others.
> The Catholic Church even has a martyrology for these types.
>
> Civil rights martyrs usually do not kill others either. Stephen Biko and > Martin Luther King were killed without killing others; John Brown
> however was a violent exception.
>
> Martyrs for science, like Bruno or Galileo, do not kill innocents either.
>

Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast with theYahoo! Search weather shortcut.

↑ Index

473. Gary Sullivan
PYONGYAN
Wed 24 Jan 2007

North Korea on film and in comics.

See:

http://garysullivan.blogspot.com/

_____ From predictions to trailers, check out the MSN Entertainment Guide to the Academy Awards® http://movies.msn.com/movies/oscars2007/?icid=ncoscartagline1

↑ Index

474. Mark Lamoureux
Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
Wed 24 Jan 2007

I am working on putting together an anthology of 20th and 21st century ekphrastic poetry (poetry about visual art) from the U.S. I am now beginning the daunting process of assembling a list of poems to be considered for the anthology. I don't have a publisher yet, but once I have assembled the anthology I am going to try to find one.

I am hoping you can take a moment and list any ekphrastic poems you can think of and backchannel to [redacted] with the subject heading "Ekphrastic Poems." The only criteria are that the poet be one who has published in the 20th or 21st centuries. I am limiting the scope to published poems in an attempt to control the size of the project a little bit.

I am hoping to display the poem side-by-side with the image (or an image of the work in the case of sculpture) that the poem is about; so the poems should be about works of art that I could hypothetically obtain an image of.

Thanks in advance,
Mark Lamoureux

↑ Index

475. Jason Nelson
digital mysticism; entanglegrids
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Entanlgegrids, digital mysticism, vid-semantic spells.

Announcing the completion of a trilogy. Interactive video grids, keyboard controlled video spell generators.
1. Trek-tech, 2. 80's commercials and 3. sensual explosions.

http://www.secrettechnology.com/entanglegrids.html

They are searching for homes. So invite them to play.

cheerio-e-o-9, Jason Nelson

Looking for earth-friendly autos?
Browse Top Cars by "Green Rating" at Yahoo! Autos' Green Center.

↑ Index

476. Crane's Bill Books
Project involving few words
Wed 24 Jan 2007

FROM: Crane's Bill Books

CALL FOR ENTRIES

Crane's Bill Books seeks writing on any subject and in any style for a very spare anthology. Must be (1) prose, (2) untitled, and (3) exactly thirty-one words. Multiple submissions okay.

THIRTY-ONE will be published in 2007 as a small, inexpensive, desktop artist's book. Payment will be in copies. Feel free to forward this announcement to anyone you think might be interested.

Deadline: April 1

Thanks!

Jeffrey A. Lee
Crane's Bill Books
1907 Buena Vista SE 11
Albuquerque, NM 87106-4148
[redacted]
www.torriblezone.com/cp2.html

↑ Index

477. Ruth Lepson
Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
Wed 24 Jan 2007

---

hi mark

loved yr poems that adam f published, wonderful bec full of feeling yet zippy.
does this count:

Someone was Cezanne.

This is an old one-line poem of mine that was published. I have some others too & also think of WCW poems and of course NYschool and Bill C.

how are you?

bst

ruth

On 1/24/07 12:15 PM, "Mark Lamoureux" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I am working on putting together an anthology of 20th and 21st century ekphrastic poetry (poetry about visual art) from the U.S. I am now beginning the daunting process of assembling a list of poems to be considered for the anthology. I don't have a publisher yet, but once I have assembled the anthology I am going to try to find one.
>
> I am hoping you can take a moment and list any ekphrastic poems you can think of and backchannel to [redacted] with the subject heading "Ekphrastic Poems." The only criteria are that the poet be one who has published in the 20th or 21st centuries. I am limiting the scope to published poems in an attempt to control the size of the project a little bit.
>
> I am hoping to display the poem side-by-side with the image (or an image of the work in the case of sculpture) that the poem is about; so the poems should be about works of art that I could hypothetically obtain an image of.
>
> Thanks in advance,
> Mark Lamoureux

↑ Index

478. Ruth Lepson

Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project

Wed 24 Jan 2007

aLso I have some short poems--5--abt dufy woodcuts of animals--one was one a card at the bos poetry marathon, others were in shampoo.interested?

On 1/24/07 12:15 PM, "Mark Lamoureux" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I am working on putting together an anthology of 20th and 21st century ekphrastic poetry (poetry about visual art) from the U.S. I am now beginning the daunting process of assembling a list of poems to be considered for the anthology. I don't have a publisher yet, but once I have assembled the anthology I am going to try to find one.
>
> I am hoping you can take a moment and list any ekphrastic poems you can think of and backchannel to [redacted] with the subject heading "Ekphrastic Poems." The only criteria are that the poet be one who has published in the 20th or 21st centuries. I am limiting the scope to published poems in an attempt to control the size of the project a little bit.
>
> I am hoping to display the poem side-by-side with the image (or an image of the work in the case of sculpture) that the poem is about; so the poems should be about works of art that I could hypothetically obtain an image of.
>
> Thanks in advance,

> Mark Lamoureux

↑ Index

479. Eric

Re: Poems on Scapegoats

Wed 24 Jan 2007

>>Eric, Do you remember the Buddhist(s) monk who set himself to fire during the Vietnam War? Was he a martyr or a terrorist?

If you are referring to the iconic 1963 photo, a martyr protesting the Dem government's religious persecution of Buddhists.

A terrorist can make others martyrs -- as the terrorists on Flight 93 did --- but only in the special Islamic sense (fighting to bring dar-al-harb into dar-al-Islam) can a terrorist also be a martyr.

Below are some coordinate terms from Princeton's WordNet program.

2 senses of martyr

Sense 1
martyr, sufferer -- (one who suffers for the sake of principle)
-> victim -- (an unfortunate person who suffers from some adverse circumstance)
=> casualty, injured party -- (someone injured or killed in an accident)
=> casualty -- (someone injured or killed or captured or missing in a military engagement)
=> hunted person -- (a person who is hunted)
=> martyr, sufferer -- (one who suffers for the sake of principle)
=> martyr -- (one who voluntarily suffers death as the penalty for refusing to renounce their religion)
=> muggee -- (a victim of a mugging; "the law seems to give more protection to the mugger than to the muggee")
=> murderee -- (a victim who is murdered)
=> poor devil, wretch -- (someone you feel sorry for)
=> prey, quarry, target, fair game -- (a person who is the aim of an attack (especially a victim of ridicule or exploitation) by some hostile person or influence; "he fell prey to muggers"; "everyone was fair game"; "the target of a manhunt")
=> punching bag -- (a person on whom another person vents their anger; "he resigned because his boss used him as a punching bag")

=> scapegoat, whipping boy -- (someone punished for the errors of others)

Sense 2
martyr -- (one who voluntarily suffers death as the penalty for refusing to renounce their religion)
-> victim -- (an unfortunate person who suffers from some adverse circumstance)
=> casualty, injured party -- (someone injured or killed in an accident)
=> casualty -- (someone injured or killed or captured or missing in a military engagement)
=> hunted person -- (a person who is hunted)
=> martyr, sufferer -- (one who suffers for the sake of principle)
=> martyr -- (one who voluntarily suffers death as the penalty for refusing to renounce their religion)
=> muggee -- (a victim of a mugging; "the law seems to give more protection to the mugger than to the muggee")
=> murderee -- (a victim who is murdered)
=> poor devil, wretch -- (someone you feel sorry for)
=> prey, quarry, target, fair game -- (a person who is the aim of an attack (especially a victim of ridicule or exploitation) by some hostile person or influence; "he fell prey to muggers"; "everyone was fair game"; "the target of a manhunt")
=> punching bag -- (a person on whom another person vents their anger; "he resigned because his boss used him as a punching bag")
=> scapegoat, whipping boy -- (someone punished for the errors of others)

↑ Index

480. Deborah Feinsmith (Reich)
Re: Interview with poet Todd Moore
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Thanks, L. Deborah

↑ Index

481. Vernon Frazer

BIG BRIDGE is Pleased to Announce its 2007 Issue (posted on behalf of Michael Rothenberg

Wed 24 Jan 2007

BIG BRIDGE <http://www.bigbridge.org> www.bigbridge.org is pleased to announce its 2007 Issue.

<http://www.bigbridge.org/edindex.htm> In Remembrance of Ed Dorn: Guest Editor Dale Smith includes perspectives from John Herndon, Stefan Hyner, Reno Lauro, Alice Notley, Richard Owens, Claudia Pisano and Dale Smith. Plus, Feature Chapbook: Low Coups and Haut Coups by Edward Dorn, Illustrated by Nancy Victoria Davis.

THE WAR PAPERS: Poisoned Wheat by Michael McClure. Essays on War and Art by Murat Nemat-Nejat, John Bradley, John Beer, Philip Metres and David-Baptiste Chirot. Also includes Halvard Johnson's Mini-Anthology "Death on All Fronts" with <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathdwaber.htm> Dan Waber, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathhthomassen.htm> Hannah Thomassen, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathbwunder.htm> Bill Wunder, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathsdalachinsky.htm> Steve Dalachinsky, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathcmandel.htm> Charlotte Mandel, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathchill.htm> Crag Hill, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathsbirl.htm> Sara Birl, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathkwolman.htm> Kenneth Wolman, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathskollar.htm> Sybil Kollar, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathabramhall.htm> Allen Bramhall, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathlquarles.htm> Lanny Quarles, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathafieled.htm> Adam Fieled, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathhzinnes.htm> Harriet Zinnes, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathkjohnson.htm> Kent Johnson, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathcdaly.htm> Catherine Daly, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathefield.htm> Edward Field, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathhross.htm> Harry Ross, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathjpenha.htm> James Penha, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathjcervantes.htm> James Cervantes, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathlshmailo.htm> Larissa Shmailo, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathjquackenbush.htm> J F Quackenbush, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathbbrueckl.htm> Bob Brueckl, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathhseidman.htm> Hugh Seidman, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathpmetres.htm> Philip Metres, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathdmanister.htm> Diana Manister, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathmheller.htm> Michael Heller, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathjrandall.htm> Jessy Randall, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathmrothenberg.htm> Michael Rothenberg, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathpciccariello.htm> Peter Ciccariello, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathhsirowitz.htm> Hal Sirowitz, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathjclausen.htm> Jan Clausen, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathjstempleman.htm> Jordan Stempleman, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathfpollack.htm> Frederick Pollack,

<http://www.bigbridge.org/deaththtrigilio.htm> Tony Trigilio, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathsfox.htm> Skip Fox,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathtsavage.htm> Tom Savage,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathdmoore.htm> Daniel Abdal-Hayy Moore, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathdstone.htm> David Stone,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathgaustin.htm> Geer Austin,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathbspacks.htm> Barry Spacks,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathsparrow.htm> Sparrow,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathdplumb.htm> David Plumb,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathjsomoza.htm> Joseph Somoza,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathjbennett.htm> John M. Bennett,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathrratner.htm> Rochelle Ratner, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathclevenson.htm> Christopher Levenson, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathgbach.htm> Glenn Bach,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathgwallace.htm> George Wallace,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathdhoward.htm> David Howard,
<http://www.bigbridge.org/deathrkostelanetz.htm> Richard Kostelanetz, <http://www.bigbridge.org/deathmand.htm> mIEKAL aND.

Essays and Letters:
<http://www.bigbridge.org/roma-amor-by-allan-graubard-for-big-bridge.pdf>
Roma Amor by Allan Graubard (0.8 meg Adobe Acrobat file), <http://www.bigbridge.org/intro.htm> <http://www.bigbridge.org/intro.htm>
Joel Weishaus on Danger on the Peaks by Gary Snyder, <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictberksonmayer.htm> an excerpt from What's Your Idea of a Good Time? by Bill Berkson & Bernadette Mayer, <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictkabbott.htm> Satori Kitty Roshi Style by Keith Kumasen Abbott, <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictthibbard.htm>
Linear/Nonlinear by Tom Hibbard.

<http://www.bigbridge.org/bgpreface.htm> Blends & Bridges: For a few weeks in the spring of 2006, Blends and Bridges, an exhibit of a wide range of artworks from all over the world combining text and graphics was on view in Cleveland. All the works in that exhibit are now reproduced here, with a short over-view, and other comments by the exhibit's co-curator, Bob Grumman.

<http://www.bigbridge.org/s_YourNewFace/index.html> Your New Face: Poet/Artist Collaborations, Guest Editor, Vincent Katz includes Augusto de Campos, Alix Lambert, Juan Manuel Bonet, Alejandro Corujeira, Todd Colby, Elizabeth Zechel, Myung Mi Kim, Norma Cole, Barry Schwabsky, Maria Morganti, Rosanna Warren, James McGarrell, Jeremy Sigler, Jessica Stockholder, Jerome Rothenberg, Susan Bee, Gerold Späth, Josef Felix Müller, Bill Berkson, Colter Jacobsen, Kathleen Fraser, Hermine Ford, Anne Waldman, Donna Dennis, Vincent Katz, Alex Katz.

<http://www.bigbridge.org/young/02cont.htm> Mail Art: A Retrospective of Publication Work by Karl Young, Part 2 discusses d.a.levy, lettrism and networking; printing presses and mail art;Time and the Mail Art network (a general history of Mail Art); Stamp Art by Joel Lipman and Rafael Jesus Martinez; Solos and Choruses in Correspondence Art: the Single and Group Work of K.S. Ernst, Marilyn R. Rosenberg, and David Cole;The International Shadows Project; 14 Years of Collaborations by Reid Woodand.

Big and Smaller Bridges: Guest Editor, Thomas Devaney: includes <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigcedgar.htm> Chris Edgar, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigemyles.htm> Eileen Myles, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigrrubenstein.htm> Raphael Rubenstein, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigjhofer.htm> Jen Hofer, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigmscharf.htm> Michael Scharf, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigklambright.htm> Kim Lambright, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigcmcdonnell.htm> Caitlin Grace McDonnell, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigcborkhuis.htm> Charles Borkhuis, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bighassen.htm> Hassen, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigwhallgren.htm> Wil Hallgren, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigjmassey.htm> Joseph Massey, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigmdurand.htm> Marcella Durand, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigagilbert.htm> Alan Gilbert, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigaking.htm> Amy King, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigikeenan.htm> Ian Keenan, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigiklein.htm> Ish Klein, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigsmesmer.htm> Sharon Mesmer, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigkvarrone.htm> Kevin Varrone, <http://www.bigbridge.org/bigesweet.htm> Erik Sweet.

<http://www.bigbridge.org/rdindex.htm> process: A Tribute to Richard Denner, Guest Editor, Jonathan Penton includes Johnny Little, Gabriela Anaya Valdepeña, Eve West Bessier, Lee Harris, Belle Randall, and Jonathan Penton.

Poetry: <http://www.bigbridge.org/poeticohen.htm> Ira Cohen, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetrdipalma.htm> Ray DiPalma, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetagrenier.htm> Arpine Grenier, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetbgellman.htm> Ben Gellman, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetjholm.htm> two plays by Janis Butler Holm, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetjjoritznakagawa.htm> Jane Joritz-Nakagawa, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetmkahn.htm> Michaela Kahn, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetrnelson.htm> Rodney Nelson, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetjside.htm> Jeffrey Side, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetssimonds.htm> Sandra Simonds, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetatardos.htm> Anne Tardos, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetmtopp.htm> Mike Topp, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetmtuggle.htm> Mike Tuggle, <http://www.bigbridge.org/poetmyoung.htm> Mark Young.

<http://www.bigbridge.org/fiction.htm> Fiction: Guest Editor, Vernon Frazer includes Joe Clifford, Richard Denner, Kane X. Faucher, Skip Fox, Anne Germanacos, Mark Mazer, Jim Rader, Doug Rice, Lou Rowan, Ron Singer, Allen Wasserman.

Art: Rodney Artiles, Amy Evans McClure and Jim Spitzer.

<http://www.bigbridge.org/littlemag.htm> Little Mags: Jonathan Penton takes a look at Home Planet News, House Organ, Kickass Review, Moonlit, Plantarchy, Poesy, Spaltung, Versal and Xerolage.

Reviews and Interviews: <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictwphipps.htm> Debra DeSalvo interviewed by Wanda Phipps, <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictrcarfagna.htm> Vernon Frazer interviewed by Ric Carfagna, <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictpkojovic.htm> Kent Johnson interviewed by Pedja Kojovic, <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictwswofford.htm> Judith Malina with Hanon Reznikov interviewed by Will Swofford, Allan Graubard reviews <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictagraubard.htm> Sunrise in Armageddon by Will Alexander, Louise Landes Levi reviews <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictllevi.htm> Pyramid of Fire by John Major Jenkins and Marty Matz, Mary Jo Malo reviews <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictmmalo.htm> AsEverWas: Memoirs of a Beat Survivor by Hammond Guthrie, Jorge Rodriguez-Miralles reviews <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictjrodriguezmiralles.htm> Flock & Shadow by Michael Hettich, Leverett T. Smith, Jr. reviews <http://www.bigbridge.org/fictlsmith.htm> Pagan Days by Michael Rumaker.

↑ Index

482. CE Putnam

CE Putnam upcoming readings

Wed 24 Jan 2007

FYI

I have two readings coming up in the next month or so. See the details below or check out the web version at:

http://www.pisor-industries.org/readings/

READING 1
I'll be a reading from a new series of Lessons, Tales, & TimeSpace Travelogue entitled "This bunny is making me happy."

APOSTROPHE 6:
Saturday, January 27, 2007 @ 8 p.m.

gallery 1412
1412 18th Avenue (at Union Street) Seattle, WA
$5-15 sliding scale

JASON E. ANDERSON - music
EZRA DICKINSON- dance
C. E. PUTNAM - poetry

A POSTROPHE. (A series in which a musician, a dancer, and a writer all perform for 20mins w/o introduction or intermission). The whole thing is over in about an hour (come early if you want a good seat).

READING 2
I'll be reading from Frolic (Selected CosmicSex EarthlyLove Poems 1994-2007). Copies of this very limited edition book will be available on the night of the reading.

WHAT: SUBTEXT READING - Lindsay Hill (Portland) C.E. Putnam (Seattle)
WHERE: HUGO HOUSE, located at 1634 11th Ave Seattle, WA
WHEN: 7:30 PM, WEDNESDAY February 7, 2007
TICKETS: DONATIONS, at the door
GENERAL INFO: Hugo House, [redacted]

P.I.S.O.R
(Putnam Institute for Space Opera Research)
http://www.pisor-industries.org

___ Finding fabulous fares is fun. Let Yahoo! FareChase search your favorite travel sites to find flight and hotel bargains. http://farechase.yahoo.com/promo-generic-14795097

↑ Index

483. Simon DeDeo
rhubarb is susan
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Hi all -- two updates this week on rhubarb is susan: reviews of Robert Shepphard (in Jacket) and a poem from Graham Foust's new book:

http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/
http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/robert-shepphard-15.html
http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/graham-foust-rural-mall-with-flag-at.html

Do tune in and join the conversation if you like.

Yours,

Simon

↑ Index

484. patrick dunagan
Poetry Reading by J.Butler, P.Dunagan, W.Skinker 1/26/07
Wed 24 Jan 2007

AN ORANGE GLOW

Jeff Karl Butler, Patrick James Dunagan, and Will Skinker reading some new poems
at Triple Base gallery in the Mission

Triple Base
3041 24th Street
San Francisco, CA
[redacted]
http://basebasebase.com/

Readings start at 8 p.m.

↑ Index

485. Peter Conners
Double Room 7 launched
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Double Room
A Journal of Prose Poetry & Flash Fiction
www.webdelsol.com/Double_Room

Welcomes you to enjoy issue #7 featuring

Alan May
Ben Miller
Daniel Grandbois
Doug Martin
Erika Eckart
Forrest Roth
Geoffrey Dyer
J. Marcus Weekley
Jennifer K. Dick
John Olson
Julia Bloch
Lawrence Goeckel
Michael Benedikt
Michael Cross
Nin Andrews
Paul McCormick
Peter Jay Shippy
Peter Markus
Robert Lopez
Rolf Hughes
Sean Thomas Dougherty
Stephen Ratcliffe

An E-Chapbook By Clayton Eshleman
An E-Chapbook with Photographs By Jerome Thirriot (Translated from the French by Bertrand Mathieu)
Featured Artist: Ania Gale Kumor
Special Feature: An Interview with Elizabeth Willis
An Essay on New Brutalism by Geoffrey Dyer

Plus reviews of books by Anne Carson, Eric Baus, Gary Young, Elizabeth Willis, and John Olson

Visit Double Room at www.webdelsol.com/Double_Room

Regards,
The Double Room staff

Try amazing new 3D maps
http://maps.live.com/?wip=51=

↑ Index

486. Oren Silverman
Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Hi there, I was wondering if anybody knew of any good, indie bookshops in London that I can check out during an upcoming visit?

Any help is greatly appreciated.

Best wishes,
oren

↑ Index

487. Tim Peterson
Myung Mi Kim & Judith Goldman at Segue, BPC Sat Jan 27
Wed 24 Jan 2007

poetry reading, please come!

Myung Mi Kim & Judith Goldman
Saturday, January 27th, 2007
4-6 pm
The Bowery Poetry Club
as part of the Segue Reading Series
308 Bowery, just north of Houston
www.segue.org

Myung Mi Kim is the author of Commons, Dura, The Bounty and Under Flag. Anthology appearances include Moving Borders: Three Decades of Innovative Writing by Women, Premonitions: Kaya Anthology of New Asian North American Poetry, Making More Waves: New Writing by Asian American Women and other collections.

Judith Goldman is the author of Vocoder, which won a Small Press Traffic Book of the Year award in 2002, and DeathStar/rico-chet. She also recently co-curated, with Leslie Scalapino, War and Peace 2.

curated by Brenda Iijima & Evelyn Reilly

↑ Index

488. Alan Sondheim
Ground zero (second, close to final, version)
Wed 24 Jan 2007

(for comments - in lieu of nature poetry/poetics or a replacement)

Ground zero (second, close to final, version)

Zero is ground down; the ground has no depth; the ground is flattened; ground is always already charnel-hus; ground is always killing-field; ground is replete, fecund, historic; history is flattened; ground is characterized by the _trail_; the trail crosses the ground; the ground is obdurate, inert, among and within the trail. The ground trails the trail; the trail trails the ground.

Ground is space, now this is space, now this is time, this was time; ground is, this is time now, this is space there.

Ground zero is the ground of the wild, the trail of the wild, its call or calling, kill or culling. Ground zero is the table-tabulation of the ground, part-objects of plants, animals, organic debris; ground is always already debris. The ground does not suffer: the suffering of the ground is our suffering: the ground is contaminated with our suffering.

Our suffering is the suffering of the ground - which is not the suffering of the ground - which does not suffer - our suffering is the table- tabulation, the unknown, unaccounted, unaccountable, unaccounted-for basis of data, the blurring of data: all this construct of the human upon absolutely nothing.

It is here that the wild parts the Wild, that the Wild decomposes - not on the technological, on the subsequent extinctions, on the devolving of extinctions - but on ground zero, on table-tabulations - from the begin- ning an established fact.

From here the strategy is the move to the tabled, the move which is a history of the process of tabling: the recognition, not of the Wild, but of its loss inherent within the Wild. Which isn't to say a foregone conclusion, but a technology gone wild, infected, infecting.

Now what remains: ground zero already charnel-hus, slaughtered animals, what shall one do now? The question parallels standard 'what is to be done?' - to which there is no answer. Ground zero - not the Ground Zero of 9/11 - but the ground zero of the trail, the trace - must be absolutely understood and understood absolutely: that the Wild has always been sundered to the extent that human languaging and culture have operated through the _trajectory of the hand-ax_ - from stone through reification to ax, from ax through exchange to ax. The trajectory refers to the _skittering_ of the trail across ground zero. The skittering is scythe and dominion, the distinction that makes a distinction: live and dead, hunter and prey, herd and cull, grain and territory.

Once there is travel, tool, reification, ground zero is both relinquish- ment and harboring. The violence of writing is here within table- tabulation, the sintering of ground zero, the remeasurement of trail, the contestation of trail and table.

Why is any of this a matter of concern? Because the Wild continues to be romanticized, farmed-out, mystified; the sublime itself is the Wild placed beyond reach, the distance of a troubling absolute. I believe one must begin otherwise - with Holocaust, with disappearance. This needs more than text or voice, more than lip service. It's useless to pretend that the issue is "management" or "wildlife corridor" or "dark matter" or "natural selection" or even "selection" given the fold-catastrophic (re: Thom) nature of extinction. The horror inheres to flattening, to trail. It is not an addition, not techne, not technology. As population increases, it is simply coming into greater view. The issue is a fundamental geopolit- ical one. The only solutions may well be enclaves, data-bases, DNA banks, regions within hunting or poaching are punishable by death. This is far too little too late. It is the best chance there is. It does not address the future collapse of culture world-wide as pollution and climate rampage - these will happen. It does address the the end of things (end of the Wild, end of megafauna, end of variety, end of coastal culture), and that is all we can hope for.

ii

It is not a question of apocalypse; it has always been a question of apocalypse; humans have read the trails, walked and traced them, from the beginning, from the beginning of organism. Every organism has culture. The question becomes "how are we with apocalypse"; "how are we among the apocalyptic." For this condition, this state-of-affairs, this desire, looms closer, as if the apocalyptic announced itself.

I read far too often that humans have cried apocalyptic far too often - but for a moment, put yourself in the position of a polar bear, or black rhino, or bonobo: Consider these, as well, crying apocalyptic, until the last of the them disappears.

It is not, again, "what is to be done," but "what is the doing." And it is insufficient to abjure the doing, as in the notion there can be no lyric poetry, perhaps no poetry, after the Holocaust, that other holocaust that continues in yet other forms. This bypasses, not only doing, but thinking that may yet reveal another dawn in the midst of dusk. One might say in return, all dawns are ruptured. The day is ruptured by the night. What remains, what is never ruptured: ground zero - one might say the substance of ground zero, but here there is no divisibility; one fails and falters with the other.

iii

Ground zero is the ground of debris, spew, emission - the ground that erases traces, derails trails. It is never so simple as inscription, but a confluence of inscriptions, spatio-temporal strata, cross-purposeless. The fossil record is the miniscule surface of the world appearing as depth. But there is enough present to indicate that today something is wrong, incoherent - an environment that changes faster than adaptation, fit only for generalists - species, themselves, that might be in trouble later on.

The artificial (zoo, museum, housing development) requires energy and continuous maintenance. It is a strange attractor of finance; without money, the budget of organism falls apart. It is susceptible to world politics, to a world with rapidly decreasing resources. The Wild must be seen against this background. The Wild and its species have disappeared - which means the cultures of these species have disappeared - which means, further, that we are dealing with organisms divested of spatial and temporal history. There are no neighborhoods, no learned behaviors, that are not contaminated by humans - both within the artificial, and in the remnant parks and "wildernesses" on a planet experience an information implosion, population explosion.

Think of the artificial as organism banking, and continuous maintenance as the lineage of organisms translated to the lineage of human beings, in the future perhaps other technologies. The point is this: these lineages are disrupted as well, are broken - and a single break results in permanent loss. Kill the zoo, kill the species. Develop a plot of land harboring an irreplaceable biome, and the biome is gone forever. It's a no-win situation - environmentalists hold out with man/woman-years, and the biome seems safe - but one victory of development, and everything is lost. This is an example of the "fragility of good things" in catastrophe theory - if everything goes right, good things happen - but there are many more - astronomically many more - things that can "go wrong" - and any of them permanently eliminate the catastrophic peak of "goodness." In this sense "goodness" might be defined as _any_ desired state-of-affairs; there's no ethos implied.

A "world of generalists" will never be the end of the story, as generalist species compete with one another, construct new strategies, fill new ecological niches. Competition continues on a planet of rapidly depleting resources. There _is_ an end in sight, as variety ultimately decreases exponentially.

Culture suffers as well. Projects disappear as coastlines are inundated, fresh water and fossil fuels are at a premium, and replacement fuels create vast changes in biomes themselves. Gasoline replacement comes at a price - again, of ecological niches, cultures, even an acceptable air quality level. Couple this with population pressure (we're not yet at the 9-10 billion peak expected), and one has a world in which criminal activity is necessary for survival. Poaching will be long gone - there will be nothing left to poach (I think of the denuded hills around Ciudad Juarez already as an example). What we still consider, ever more tenu- ously, the "safe" internet, will exist locally at best, most probably used for gang/terror networking. The simplicity and spread of nuclear arms only adds to the mess.

Here is the ground zero of debris, detritus, effluvia: when there is no return to and from the Wild, when the "natural" becomes a literally mean- ingless term, when histories are absorbed and annihilated.

It is at this point that one must start, politically, ecologically, phen- omenologically, if there is any hope - not of transformation - but of functional enclaving. The world has become a mobius-strip Auschwitz, encompassing everything - where we are inmates and guards, where there is no outside. The image itself - the reality of this metaphor - is still only on the horizon, but the reality of its referent is upon us.

↑ Index

489. Christine Hamm

poetry vs. comedy

Wed 24 Jan 2007

Cheryl B. Presents:
PVC: The POETRY Vs. COMEDY VARIETY SHOW

January 31, 8PM
Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery
F Train to Second Ave.
$6
www.myspace.com/pvcshow

About the Show:

PVC brings together the high-paced excitement of a poetry slam with the astute hilarity of smart, observational comedy. The show is produced by writer and literary series curator Cheryl B. and is a battle of wits and rhymes where the stanzas and the stand-up collide.

EMCEE: Carolyn Castiglia (Caroline's)

STARRING:
Comedians
Brandy Barber (The Kissing Booth)
Michelle Buteau (Comedy Central)
Luke Thayer (The Living Room)

Poets
Shane Luitjens (Bullets and Butterflies)
Zaedryn Meade (Best Lesbian Erotica)
Thad Rutkowski (author of Tetched)

Musical Guest: Pindeldyboz (editors Whitney Pastorek and Kristin McGonigle)

Christine Hamm

_____

www.christinehamm.org

_____

No need to miss a message. Get email on-the-go with Yahoo! Mail for Mobile. Get started.
http://mobile.yahoo.com/mail

↑ Index

490. Cynie Cory
Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
Wed 24 Jan 2007

Oren,

I don't know what you're looking for but my favorite book store in London is call Bookmarks. It's a socialist/marxist bookstore. Really great books I can't find anywhere else. It's on 1 Bloomsbury Street in the West End. There's usually a sandwich board on the sidewalk to help you see it. Also, It's on the corner and painted, of course, red. About three or so blocks from the British Museum. The tube station is Tottenham Court Rd.(which is about four blocks or so to Bookmarks.) It's in the WC1 postal area. Phone is 020 76371848. You must check it out! Have fun, Cynie

Oren Silverman <[redacted]> wrote: Hi there, I was wondering if anybody knew of any good, indie bookshops in London that I can check out during an upcoming visit?

Any help is greatly appreciated.

Best wishes,
oren

Never Miss an Email
Stay connected with Yahoo! Mail on your mobile. Get started!

↑ Index

491. Marla Segol
unsubscribe
Wed 24 Jan 2007

"unsubscribe"

↑ Index

492. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Thu 25 Jan 2007

Eric,

I prefer my sense of what a word means than Princeton's WordNet program's.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/24/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> >>Eric, Do you remember the Buddhist(s) monk who set himself to fire > during the Vietnam War? Was he a martyr or a terrorist?
>
> If you are referring to the iconic 1963 photo, a martyr protesting the > Dem government's religious persecution of Buddhists.
>
> A terrorist can make others martyrs -- as the terrorists on Flight 93 > did --- but only in the special Islamic sense (fighting to bring > dar-al-harb into dar-al-Islam) can a terrorist also be a martyr.
>
> Below are some coordinate terms from Princeton's WordNet program.
>
>
> 2 senses of martyr
>
> Sense 1
> martyr, sufferer -- (one who suffers for the sake of principle)
> -> victim -- (an unfortunate person who suffers from some adverse > circumstance)

> => casualty, injured party -- (someone injured or killed in an > accident) > => casualty -- (someone injured or killed or captured or missing > in a military engagement)
> => hunted person -- (a person who is hunted)
> => martyr, sufferer -- (one who suffers for the sake of principle) > => martyr -- (one who voluntarily suffers death as the penalty > for refusing to renounce their religion) > => muggee -- (a victim of a mugging; "the law seems to give more > protection to the mugger than to the muggee")
> => murderee -- (a victim who is murdered)
> => poor devil, wretch -- (someone you feel sorry for) > => prey, quarry, target, fair game -- (a person who is the aim > of an attack (especially a victim of ridicule or exploitation) by some > hostile person or influence; "he fell prey to muggers"; "everyone was > fair game"; "the target of a manhunt") > => punching bag -- (a person on whom another person vents their > anger; "he resigned because his boss used him as a punching bag") > => scapegoat, whipping boy -- (someone punished for the errors > of others)
>
> Sense 2 > martyr -- (one who voluntarily suffers death as the penalty for refusing > to renounce their religion)
> -> victim -- (an unfortunate person who suffers from some adverse > circumstance) > => casualty, injured party -- (someone injured or killed in an > accident) > => casualty -- (someone injured or killed or captured or missing
> in a military engagement)
> => hunted person -- (a person who is hunted)
> => martyr, sufferer -- (one who suffers for the sake of principle)
> => martyr -- (one who voluntarily suffers death as the penalty > for refusing to renounce their religion) > => muggee -- (a victim of a mugging; "the law seems to give more > protection to the mugger than to the muggee")
> => murderee -- (a victim who is murdered)
> => poor devil, wretch -- (someone you feel sorry for)
> => prey, quarry, target, fair game -- (a person who is the aim > of an attack (especially a victim of ridicule or exploitation) by some > hostile person or influence; "he fell prey to muggers"; "everyone was > fair game"; "the target of a manhunt")

> => punching bag -- (a person on whom another person vents their > anger; "he resigned because his boss used him as a punching bag") > => scapegoat, whipping boy -- (someone punished for the errors > of others)
>

↑ Index

493. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
Thu 25 Jan 2007

Mark,

I do not want to blow my own horn but The Peripheral Space of Photography is a serial ekphrastic poem, in your sense, where one hypothetically obtain photographs for its different parts.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/24/07, Mark Lamoureux <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I am working on putting together an anthology of 20th and 21st century > ekphrastic poetry (poetry about visual art) from the U.S. I am now > beginning the daunting process of assembling a list of poems to be > considered for the anthology. I don't have a publisher yet, but once I have > assembled the anthology I am going to try to find one.
>
> I am hoping you can take a moment and list any ekphrastic poems you can > think of and backchannel to [redacted] with the subject > heading "Ekphrastic Poems." The only criteria are that the poet be one who > has published in the 20th or 21st centuries. I am limiting the scope to > published poems in an attempt to control the size of the project a little > bit.
>
> I am hoping to display the poem side-by-side with the image (or an image > of the work in the case of sculpture) that the poem is about; so the poems > should be about works of art that I could hypothetically obtain an image of.
>
> Thanks in advance,
> Mark Lamoureux
>
>
>

↑ Index

494. Gabrielle Welford
Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
Thu 25 Jan 2007

used to be one in camden town on the way up to dingwalls, on the left side. don't know if it's still there. best, g

On Wed, 24 Jan 2007, Oren Silverman wrote:

> Hi there, I was wondering if anybody knew of any good, indie bookshops in London that I can check out during an upcoming visit?
>
> Any help is greatly appreciated.
>
> Best wishes,
> oren

gabrielle welford
[redacted]

Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com). Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004

wilhelm reich
anarcho-syndicalism
gut/heart/head/earth

↑ Index

495. Barry Schwabsky
Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
Thu 25 Jan 2007

There is a wonderful anarchist bookshop at the end of the alley next to the Whitechapel Art Gallery (steps away from the Aldgate East tube station). The name will come to me later...

Oren Silverman <[redacted]> wrote: Hi there, I was wondering if anybody knew of any good, indie bookshops in London that I can check out during an upcoming visit?

Any help is greatly appreciated.

Best wishes,
oren

↑ Index

496. David-Baptiste Chirot

Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project/Murat's Peripheral Space of Photography

Thu 25 Jan 2007

---

mark-- What Murat writes is uure--I would highly recommend you --and everyone really on this list--read this exceptional text-- unlike Barthes' and Sontag's books on photography, Murat's uses an actual photgraphy exhibition, moving from room to room --the spaces of the exhibtion, spaces within the photos--and meditating on various aspects of each photo as well as reviewing and rethinking photos in groupings from differing parts of the exhibition. The work builds room by room step by step and look by look a thinikng through of gesture as/in photogrpahy in relation with democracy, thinks through many different ways of seeing, of framing (room, doorway,image, remembered and re-membered image) and while it seems to be arcing towads a philosophical investigation, reaches a point at which the larva suddenly emegres as a butterfly,a poem. (at end of book is the information for the catalogue, and the page numbers in it of the photos written about--so you have for purposes of anthology all the references you need for both text and image to be placed together--) I am putting it in very simple ways,trying to leave room for the excitement of discoveries and the ways in which Murat uses language to subtly shift modalities of vision,sound,thought and revelation It has the quality very much of a recit. The descriptions and thoughts on the photogrpahs each one are wonderfully alive and convey the real delight and freedoms one may find n an image. There is also a very different consideration of photographic space-- as the title says--in terms of peripheries. This is a very exceptional book, please do read it, very alive in all senses of the word, a real "adventure of discovery" as an experience in reading, seeing and thinking with a poet's bringing of the fullness of each word to its compostion. I'm not doing it justice by trying a description--read it and find out for yourself!

> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
> Date: Thu, 25 Jan 2007 00:37:40 -0500
>
> Mark,
>
> I do not want to blow my own horn but The Peripheral Space of Photography is > a serial ekphrastic poem, in your sense, where one hypothetically obtain photographs for its different parts.
>
> Ciao,

> Murat
>
> On 1/24/07, Mark Lamoureux <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I am working on putting together an anthology of 20th and 21st century ekphrastic poetry (poetry about visual art) from the U.S. I am now beginning the daunting process of assembling a list of poems to be considered for the anthology. I don't have a publisher yet, but once I have > assembled the anthology I am going to try to find one.
>
> I am hoping you can take a moment and list any ekphrastic poems you can think of and backchannel to [redacted] with the subject heading "Ekphrastic Poems." The only criteria are that the poet be one who has published in the 20th or 21st centuries. I am limiting the scope to published poems in an attempt to control the size of the project a little bit.
>
> I am hoping to display the poem side-by-side with the image (or an image of the work in the case of sculpture) that the poem is about; so the poems should be about works of art that I could hypothetically obtain an image of.
>
> Thanks in advance,
> Mark Lamoureux

_____ Invite your Hotmail contacts to join your friends list with Windows Live Spaces http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwsp0070000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://spaces.live.com/spacesapi.aspx?wx_action=create&wx_url=/friends.aspx&mkt=en-us

↑ Index

497. Barry Schwabsky

Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops

Thu 25 Jan 2007

I've got it!
Freedom Bookshop, Angel Alley, 84b Whitechapel High Street, London E1 7QX.
Their website: http://freedom.libcom.org.uk/

Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote:
There is a wonderful anarchist bookshop at the end of the alley next to the Whitechapel Art Gallery (steps away from the Aldgate East tube station). The name will come to me later...

Oren Silverman wrote: Hi there, I was wondering if anybody knew of any good, indie bookshops in London that I can check out during an upcoming visit?

Any help is greatly appreciated.

Best wishes,
oren

↑ Index

498. Marcus Bales
Re: unsubscribe
Thu 25 Jan 2007

I'm sorry, no "msegol" appears at any domain name on my list; there is no one from "skidmore.edu", either. Perhaps you have another email address that forwards to that one; if you tell me what it is, I'll remove it.

Marcus

On 24 Jan 2007 at 23:23, Marla Segol wrote:

> "unsubscribe"
>
> --
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG Free Edition.
> Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.8/649 - Release Date: 1/23/2007 8:40 PM

↑ Index

499. George Quasha
George Quasha's "art is" at Studio Soto (Boston)
Thu 25 Jan 2007

--=======AVGMAIL-45B881022ADD======Content-Type: text/plain; charset=iso-8859-1; format=flowed; x-avg-checked=avg-ok-5AEA97

art is at Studio Soto

> 63 Melcher Street, Boston MA 02210
> <http://www.studiosoto.com/>http://www.studiosoto.com [redacted]

January 27 – February 8, 2007

http://studiosoto.jot.com/WikiHome/Archives/2007/Art%20Is

art is: Speaking Portraits (in the performative indicative)

axial video

Opening: Saturday -- January 27, 2007 --12-5

• artist-participant tapings of artists and poets for the ongoing video project,art is, from noon to 4pm

• artist talk, poetry reading, and presentation, 4pm

George Quasha will be present at Studio Soto for the opening screenings of his video works, art is and axial video. From noon until 4 pm we invite artists and poets to come to Studio Soto to be filmed for inclusion in future versions of art is/poetry is – in which artists say what art is – as it continues to expand beyond the nearly 500 artists already filmed in seven countries and seventeen languages.

At 4pm George Quasha will give a presentation about his wide-ranging work – which explores principles in common across disparate mediums – including his new book, Axial Stones: An Art of Precarious Balance, his other writings and video works, and his ongoing, 25-year collaboration with renowned video artist Gary Hill and poet Charles Stein.

There is no admission charge for the talk, with a suggested donation of $5-$10.

Works to be shown

art is: Speaking Portraits (in the performative indicative)

art is … what? George Quasha's ongoing video work of "speaking portraits" puts this impossible, but inevitable, question before artists themselves, who let us in on their private space of art definition. Some 500 artists (all kinds of artists, including sculptors, painters, filmmakers, video artists, poets, composers, performance artists, and so on) have been filmed in seven countries and seventeen languages in the first four years. The result is an ongoing and constantly changing work called art is.

More specifically, art is develops an open-ended video art work in portraiture that registers artists in the act of saying what art is. It is presented as a continuous series of speaking faces viewed up close, one at a time, with no overlaps or special effects, filmed “on site” under many circumstances. One unadorned face at a time fills the image area, and the image frame is contained within the face, thus reversing conventional portraiture. The framing effectively removes most social indicators (hair style, clothing, context, etc.). While many famous artists are included, they are mixed with lesser known ones. Identification of the artist is indicated only at the end of each “speaking portrait” in order to keep the viewer’s attention focused on the act of saying what art is rather than on the identity of the speaker.

axial video

George Quasha’s axial video comprises a range of works, including “verbal objects,” “axial objects,” and “axial landscapes.” Among the works to be shown are: Pulp Friction, Confingering Figures, Training Light, and I Don’t Understand Language. They aim to transport the viewer – sometimes abruptly, sometimes incrementally through a series of barely perceptible thresholds – from the realm of ordinary time, perception and expectations, to that of the axial, where figuration gives way to the configurative, and openness is the operant principle.

If the act of seeing something turns the thing seen into an object, looking long and hard at it can transform it beyond recognition. Becoming openly configurative, it generates its own further nature. As William Blake said, “The eye altering alters all.” “Objects” are perceptual, cognitive, and linguistic configurations. Neither fixed nor stable, perceived reality may be free to turn on an invisible axis. That objects – whether words, sounds or images – are only liminally what they seem can be frightening, disorienting, exciting….

Bio

Artist and poet George Quasha works across mediums to explore principles in common within language, sculpture, drawing, video, sound, installation, and performance. His axial stones and axial drawings have been exhibited at the Baumgartner Gallery and at ZONE Chelsea Center for the Arts in Chelsea (New York City) and elsewhere, and are featured in the newly published book, Axial Stones: An Art of Precarious Balance (Foreword by Carter Ratcliff) (North Atlantic Books: Berkeley).

For his video installation art is: Speaking Portraits (in the performative indicative), he has filmed almost 500 artists, poets, and composers (in 7 countries and 17 languages) saying "what art is." His video works (including Pulp Friction, Axial Objects, Verbal Objects) have appeared internationally in museums, galleries, schools, and biennials. A 25 year performance collaboration (video/language/sound) continues with Gary Hill and Charles Stein.

In 2006 he was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in video art.

His other 14 books include poetry (Somapoetics, Giving the Lily Back Her Hands, Ainu Dreams [with Chie Hasegawa], Preverbs); anthologies (America a Prophecy [with Jerome Rothenberg], Open Poetry [with Ronald Gross], An Active Anthology [with Susan Quasha], The Station Hill Blanchot Reader); and writing on art (Gary Hill: Language Willing; with Charles Stein: Tall Ships, HanD HearD/liminal objects, Viewer).

Awards include a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship in poetry. He has taught at Stony Brook University (SUNY), Bard College, the New School, and Naropa University. With Susan Quasha he is founder/publisher of Barrytown/Station Hill Press in Barrytown, New York.

--
George Quasha
Barrytown/Station Hill Press, Inc.
(The Institute for Publishing Arts, Inc.)
124 Station Hill Road, Barrytown, NY 12507

Home: [redacted]
Cell: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]

<http://www.quasha.com>http://www.quasha.com
http://www.stationhill.org

--=======AVGMAIL-45B881022ADD======Content-Type: text/plain; x-avgÎrt; charset=us-ascii; x-avg-checked=avg-ok-5AEA97 Content-Description: "AVG certification"

No virus found in this outgoing message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.9/650 - Release Date: 1/24/2007 4:06 PM

--=======AVGMAIL-45B881022ADD=======--

↑ Index

500. Jim Andrews
Ghost in the machine
Thu 25 Jan 2007

An interesting essay by Michael Heumann:

Ghost in the Machine:
Sound and Technology in Twentieth Century Literature
http://www.hauntedink.com/ghost

↑ Index

501. Anny Ballardini
Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
Thu 25 Jan 2007

How could you forget "Freedom Bookshop" .... I mean _the name_! :-)

On 1/25/07, Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I've got it!
> Freedom Bookshop, Angel Alley, 84b Whitechapel High Street, London E1 7QX.

> Their website: http://freedom.libcom.org.uk/
>
> Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote:
> There is a wonderful anarchist bookshop at the end of the alley next to > the Whitechapel Art Gallery (steps away from the Aldgate East tube station).
> The name will come to me later...
>
> Oren Silverman wrote: Hi there, I was wondering if anybody knew of any > good, indie bookshops in > London that I can check out during an upcoming visit?
>
> Any help is greatly appreciated.
>
> Best wishes,
> oren
>

↑ Index

502. Oren Silverman
Re: Looking for Leftie Independent London Bookshops
Thu 25 Jan 2007

Great! Thanks for all of your help!

On 1/25/07, Anny Ballardini <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> How could you forget "Freedom Bookshop" .... I mean _the name_! :-)
>
> On 1/25/07, Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote:
> >
> > I've got it!
> > Freedom Bookshop, Angel Alley, 84b Whitechapel High Street, London E1
> 7QX.
> > Their website: http://freedom.libcom.org.uk/
> >
> > Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote:
> > There is a wonderful anarchist bookshop at the end of the alley next to > > the Whitechapel Art Gallery (steps away from the Aldgate East tube > station).
> > The name will come to me later...
> >
> > Oren Silverman wrote: Hi there, I was wondering if anybody knew of any > > good, indie bookshops in > > London that I can check out during an upcoming visit?

> >
> > Any help is greatly appreciated.
> >
> > Best wishes,
> > oren
> >
>

↑ Index

503. Jim Andrews
streaming audio question
Thu 25 Jan 2007

I note that when you play http://scfire-chi0l-2.stream.aol.com:80/stream/1018 (somafm.com groove salad) in Winamp, it immediately displays the artist name and the track name. However, if you click the above URL and let it stream into your browser for a couple of seconds, click the browser's 'stop' button, and then search the text for the artist name or track name, it isn't in the file (or is encrypted). Any idea on how to get a handle on the artist name and track name?

ja?
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

504. Vernon Frazer
Lisa Janssen's emial
Thu 25 Jan 2007

Doe anybody have Lisa Janssen's email address? If you do, please backchannel.

Thanks,

Vernon

http://vernonfrazer.com <http://vernonfrazer.com/>

↑ Index

505. Lori Emerson
Fwd: New Rae Armantrout poetry
Thu 25 Jan 2007

We are pleased to announce a new book of poetry by Rae Armantrout, "Next Life."

In her latest collection, Rae Armantrout considers the shaping effects of language in the context of new and frightening global realities. Attempting to imagine the unimaginable and see the unseen, Armantrout evokes a "next life" beyond the current, and too often degraded, one. From the new physics to mortality, Armantrout engages with the half-seen and the half-believed. These poems step into the dance of consciousness and its perennial ghost partner-"to make the world up/of provisional pairs." At a time when our world is being progressively despoiled, Armantrout has emerged as one of our most important and articulate authors. These poems push against the limit of knowledge, that event-horizon, and into the echoes and phantasms beyond, calling us to look toward the "next life" and find it where we can.

For more details, click http://www.upne.com/0-8195-6820-1.html

ORDERING DETAILS:

SAVE 20% if you order from the web site and use discount code W300! Use the link above. Or order through your favorite bookseller, or by calling University Press of New England at [redacted] (or [redacted]). Shipping charges are $5.00 for the first book and $1.25 for each additional. In CANADA, order through the University of British Columbia Press at [redacted] or email [redacted]. In EUROPE, order through Eurospan at [redacted] or email [redacted].

Academic users may order an Examination Copy for potential course adoption. Please request a copy of the book in a letter, on your institutional letterhead, and include $5.00 for shipping (check, MasterCard, Visa, Discover, AmEx). Mail your request to: UPNE, Attn: Exam Copies, 1 Court Street, Suite 250, Lebanon, NH 03766-1358, USA or fax to [redacted].

↑ Index

506. St. Thomasino
New Issue of Onedit
Thu 25 Jan 2007

---

onedit

Dear Friends,

The new issue of onedit is online.

http://www.onedit.net/

onedit 7 features work by:

Ray Di Palma
Ken Edwards
Thomas Evans
Josep-Maria Junoy

Simon Pettet
Kit Robinson
Joan Salvat-Papasseit
Leslie Scalapino
Aaron Shurin
Gregory Vincent St.Thomasino
Philip Terry
Stephen Vincent

With best wishes from Tim Atkins [editor]

--
Tim Atkins <[redacted]>

posted by:
Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino

↑ Index

507. Marcus Bales

Haiku Death Match is at 12:00 noon on WEDNESDAY January 31, 2007 in the Rotunda at City Hall.

Thu 25 Jan 2007

Haiku death match is at 12: 00 noon on WEDNESDAY January 31, 2007 in the Rotunda at City Hall.

For More Information:

Gallery 324
The Galleria at Erieview
1301 East Ninth Street
Cleveland, Ohio 44114

216/[redacted] [redacted]

Wednesday, January 31, 2007 at Noon in the Rotunda at Cleveland City Hall
The Haiku Death Match, featuring Brian Taylor defending his title.

The Rotunda at Cleveland City Hall is located at

Cleveland City Hall
On Lakeside between E 6th and E 9th
Just west of the "Free Stamp"

Gallery 324
In the Galleria at Erieiview
E 9th and St Clair

For more information 216/[redacted] [redacted]

###

↑ Index

508. Philip Metres

How peace and war resistance continues to be effaced by Poetry Foundation

Thu 25 Jan 2007

Folks,

if you want evidence for how war resistance and peace poetry are being belitted, skewed, and effaced, check out the following review of an event called "Poems of Peace and War," and then listen to the actual event. Notice what's missing.

http://www.poetryfoundation.org/dispatches/dispatches.reading.html?id=179007

Feel free to bomb them with comments. Language is all we have.

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com

↑ Index

509. Thomas Devaney

Big & Smaller Bridges: Big Bridge #12

Thu 25 Jan 2007

Michael Rothenberg, editor of the online ejournal Big Bridge, invited me to guest edit part of the poetry section for the new issue of Big Bridge #12 -- there are 19 poets included in the selection which has just been published:

Big and Smaller Bridges: Guest Editor, Thomas Devaney: includes Chris Edgar, Eileen Myles, Raphael Rubinstein, Jen Hofer, Michael Scharf, Kim Lambright, Caitlin Grace McDonnell, Charles Borkhuis, Hassen, Wil Hallgren, Joseph Massey, Marcella Durand, Alan Gilbert, Amy King, Ian Keenan, Ish Klein, Sharon Mesmer, Kevin Varrone, Erik Sweet.

http://www.bigbridge.org/poetry.htm

--TD

Other poetry in the issue includes: Ira Cohen, Ray DiPalma, Arpine Grenier, Ben Gellman, two plays by Janis Butler Holm, Jane Joritz-Nakagawa, Michaela Kahn, Rodney Nelson, Jeffrey Side, Sandra Simonds, Anne Tardos, Mike Topp, Mike Tuggle, Mark Young.

The whole new BB issue is very big indeed, for that, go to:

BIG BRIDGE 2007 Issue: www.bigbridge.org

↑ Index

510. j. kuszai
Mike Gold at Harvard -- New from Factory School
Thu 25 Jan 2007

Mike Gold at Harvard

Southpaw Culture
Factory School, 2007
140 pages, perfect bound, 5.5x7.5

ISBN: 978-1-60001-998-2
$15

Factory School is now taking pre-orders for this new Southpaw Culture series book due on the streets in early February. This is a one-time offer, which will be void after 3 days from this posting.

Pre-order this book for a sale price of 10.00, including shipping. Additional copies can be ordered for $5.00 a piece. Pay Pal payment must be made to [redacted]. No dealers, resellers, or jobbers, please!

An ideal gift for first-year students, professors, Harvard-philes and phobes, this book was assembled as a gift to the people of New York and urban college students especially. Order your copy today!

“Certain enemies have spread the slander that I once attended Harvard college. This is a lie. I worked on the garbage dump in Boston, city of Harvard. But that’s all.” — Mike Gold, “Love on a Garbage Dump”

The truth is that Mike Gold did attend Harvard, enrolling in the fall of 1914 as a special student. Mike Gold at Harvard includes the complete text of his “A Freshman at Harvard” newspaper column, written when he was still known as Irwin Granich and when he was still fresh from the Lower East Side ghetto of his youth. It is an American outsider’s portrait of Harvard in the age of “herds and heroes.”

“It is Harvard’s weakness—that outside of a few vivid personalities, her teachers have been allowed to become deliverers of lectures. It is the weakness of nearly every other over-developed university. It is the weakness of the whole educational process, perhaps.” — Irwin Granich, “A Freshman at Harvard”

“There have been many stories of Harvard—written usually after the author has graduated and men and events have lost their vividness and novelty. This is the story of a Freshman written while he is still a Freshman.” — Boston Journal, October 19, 1914

↑ Index

511. Rob McLennan

ottawater #3 now on-line!

Thu 25 Jan 2007

---

the third issue of ottawater (www.ottawater.com/), an Ottawa poetry pdf annual, edited by rob mclennan, is now online.

The third issue features work by various residents current and former, including:

Michael Blouin, Terry Ann Carter, Anita Dolman, Amanda Earl, William Hawkins, Elisabeth Harvor, Clare Latremouille, K.L. McKay, rob mclennan, Nadine McInnis, Max Middle, Cath Morris, John Newlove, Wanda O'Connor, Kim Minkus, Roland Prevost and Kate Van Dusen, interviews with poets K.I. Press, Stephen Brockwell and Shane Rhodes, and reviews of work by Laura Farina, Anita Lahey, Matthew Holmes, Monty Reid, Max Middle, Stephanie Bolster, Nicholas Lea and Jesse Ferguson as well as artwork by various Ottawa artists.

The launch party for the third issue will be happening Friday, January 26th, 2006 at the Mercury Lounge, 56 Byward Street, Ottawa, from 8pm to 10pm, lovingly hosted by rob mclennan. After short readings by various contributors, stick around for a drink, and listen to resident dj Lance Baptiste spin the night away.

ottawater would like to thank designer Tanya Sprowl, Mercury Lounge's Lance Baptiste, the ottawa international writers festival, and Randy Woods at non-linear creations for their continuing support.

-- poet/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...12th poetry coll'n - aubade (Broken Jaw Press) .... c/o 858 Somerset St W, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7 * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

512. angela vasquez-giroux
Re: poems of peace and war
Thu 25 Jan 2007

alright, i read the review-- and before i send in my "bomb" of a comment-- you're outraged/amngry/annoyes that while they all read/talked about the war, no one stood up and condemned it, or did anything beyond ruminating on the meaning of war, etc.?

angela

↑ Index

513. Michael Kelleher
OlsonNow Update!
Thu 25 Jan 2007

PLEASE FORWARD TO ALL WHO MAY BE INTERESTED:

OlsonNow Presents OlsonNow 3: Charles Olson @ Buffalo
April 14, 2007, 1 p.m.
Hallwalls Cinema at the Church
341 Delaware Avenue, Buffalo, NY
$6, $4 members of Hallwalls or Just Buffalo/Students with I.D.

Charles Olson taught at the University at Buffalo from 1963-1965. His presence at the University continues to reverberate in Buffalo. His many contemporaries brought in for readings or for teaching gigs (Robert Duncan, Denise Levertov, Ed Dorn, John Wieners, Gregory Corso, Amiri Baraka, et al) helped create a unique atmosphere in which innovative poetry could flourish. Many of his students and colleagues from Buffalo went on to make important contributions to poetry and scholarship, including: Charles Boer, Harvey Brown, George Butterick, Jack Clarke, Albert Glover, Duncan McNaughton, Stephen Rodefer, Fred Wah and others. Perhaps even more important, his replacement, Robert Creeley, who arrived in 1966, kept that spirit alive for 40 years. His influence lead directly to the founding of Just Buffalo in 1975 as a venue to present poetry in the community rather than in the academy, and to the creation of the Poetics Program at the University in 1989.

The third installment of OlsonNow: Charles Olson @ Buffalo will take place on April 14 at Hallwalls Contemporary Arts Center Cinema in Buffalo, New York. At this event, we hope to highlight Olson’s brief but important tenure at the University at Buffalo. Confirmed guests include Anne Waldman, Ammiel Alcalay, Robert Bertholf, Benjamin Friedlander, David Landrey, Jonathan

Skinner, and others. Michael Basinski, Curator of the Poetry Collection at SUNY Buffalo will also talk about the Poetry Collection's recent acquisition of the papers of Jack Clarke. The event will include a screening of Henry Ferrini's "Polis is This: Charles Olson and the Persistence of Place." The filmmaker will be on hand to introduce the film and to answer questions afterward. All are welcome to participate in the discussion that will take place throughout the afternoon. If you would like to make a brief, informal presentation at the event, please contact Michael Kelleher.

Sponsored by Just Buffalo, Hallwalls, UB Poetry Collection, UB Humanities Institute

_____

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Suite 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
t. [redacted]
f. [redacted]
http://www.justbuffalo.org

↑ Index

514. Eric
Re: poems of peace and war
Thu 25 Jan 2007

Doerksen's account reads like a fair review of the usual conformist polemics, bombast, narcissism, self-righteousness, and downright silly deportment of a poetry reading about "war."

Dunya Mikhail, on the other hand, comes off as an astute writer. Have to get a copy of "The War Works Hard." Her web page is http://www.dunyamikhail.com/

↑ Index

515. mIEKAL aND
Book written in txt msg
Thu 25 Jan 2007

(surely there are other books which have been created via text messaging...?)

Book written in txt msg
POSTED: 1:17 p.m. EST, January 25, 2007

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) -- A novel whose narrative consists entirely of mobile phone text messages has been published in Finland. "The Last Messages" tells the story of a fictitious information- technology executive in Finland who resigns from his job and travels throughout Europe and India, keeping in touch with his friends and relatives only through text messages.

His messages, and the replies -- roughly 1,000 altogether -- are listed in chronological order in the 332-page novel written by Finnish author Hannu Luntiala.

The texts are rife with grammatical errors and abbreviations commonly used in regular SMS traffic.

"I believe that, at the end of the day, a text message may reveal much more about a person than you would initially think," said Luntiala, who also is head of a company that keeps databases on people living in Finland.

Sari Havukainen, spokeswoman at Finnish publishing house Tammi, said the company is considering translating the book into other languages.

The taciturn Finns, keen on all mobile gadgets, have wholeheartedly accepted text messages as a tool to communicate even in most private matters.

↑ Index

516. Poetry Project

Events at the Poetry Project 1/26 - 2/2

Thu 25 Jan 2007

O Dearest Ones!

Please find warmth four times this coming week in the Parish Hall of St. Mark¹s Church. If you are still cold, please scroll down and be reminded of our hot workshop offerings (or go to http://www.poetryproject.com/workshops.php).

Love,

The Poetry Project

Friday, January 26, 10:30 pm
Up Is Up, But So Is Down

Contributors Maggie Dubris, Richard Hell, Eileen Myles and Elinor Nauen (reading work by Susie Timmons) join editor Brandon Stosuy in a celebratory reading for the recently published Up Is Up, But So Is Down: New York's Downtown Literary Scene 1974-1992 (NYU Press). Using the book as a launching pad, the authors will step outside its table of contents, selecting and reading key New York texts from their own oeuvres. A reception, co-sponsored by NYU Press, will accompany the readings.

Maggie Dubris is the author of WillieWorld (Cuz Editions, 1998), Weep Not, My Wanton (Black Sparrow Press, 2002) and Skels (Soft Skull Press, 2004). She is presently working on an illustrated book called The Dust Zone with the artist Scott Gillis, parts of which can be seen at www.dustzone.com. Richard Hell's most recent CD is the 2005 retrospective Spurts from Warner/Rhino. His novel Godlike came out in 2005 too. He's at work on a book of memories. Eileen Myles has written thousands of poems since she moved to New York in 1974. Her last books were Skies and on my way (poems) and Cool for You (a novel). She's teaching at UCSD and just finished a new novel about the hell of becoming a female poet, called The Inferno. Sorry, Tree, (poems), is coming out in April from wave books. Susie Timmons was a poet in New York from 1975-1991. The city chewed her up and spit her out, and it felt great. Brandon Stosuy, a staff writer and columnist at Pitchfork, contributes regularly to The Believer, used to contribute regularly to The Village Voice, writes for Paper Thin Walls, Seattle Weekly, and Spin, and has written for Arthur, BlackBook, Bomb, Bookforum, LA Weekly, Slate and V, among other publications. He lives in Brooklyn, where he is at work on The Believer's 2007 Music Issue Compilation CD, a large essay on Gordon Lish, and his first novel.

Monday, January 29, 8:00 pm
Corrine Fitzpatrick & Heather Nagami

Corrine Fitzpatrick[1]s poems can be found in Cock Now and The Brooklyn Rail and on sonaweb and EOAGH. Her new chapbook, On Melody Dispatch (Goodbye Better, 2007) will be [3]released[2] at the reading, and another project, Zamboangueña, is in the works from Sona Books. She graduated from UCSD in 2004 and is currently pursuing an MFA from PPU. Heather Nagami's first book, Hostile, was published in 2005. Her poetry and reviews have appeared in Antennae, Galatea Resurrects, Rattle, Shifter, and Xcp (Cross-Cultural Poetics). Nagami currently lives near Boston with her husband Bryan, where they run overhere press, a small press that publishes chapbooks by people of color and other underrepresented individuals.

Wednesday, January 31, 8:00 pm
C.S. Giscombe & Leslie Scalapino

C. S. Giscombe's recent poetry books are Here, Giscome Road, Two Sections from Practical Geography, and Inland. A new book, Prairie Style, is awaiting publication. He has recently returned from half a year spent in Halifax among the descendents of the Black Loyalists (the American slaves who fought on the side of Britain against George Washington and who then went into exile in Nova Scotia). He will be teaching, as of fall 2007, at the University of California at Berkeley. Leslie Scalapino is the author of thirty books of poetry and inter-genre fiction-poetry-plays-criticism. Recent books include Zither &

Autobiography (Wesleyan UP) and The Tango (Granary Books). Forthcoming from Green Integer is a collection of eight years of poetry titled Day Ocean State Of Stars' Night and her Selected Poems from UC Berkeley Press.

Friday, February 2, 9:30 pm
Fall Workshop Reading

Students of Marcella Durand, Larry Fagin, Kristin Prevallet and Gary Sullivan read from the work they wrote in the past season's workshops.

Spring Workshops at the Poetry Project

The Poetry School Of Poetry Douglas Rothschild
Tuesdays at 7 Pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 13th

Writing poetry is difficult; writing good poetry, more difficult still. In this workshop, we will focus on exactly what we think is good in a poem & determine how our senses of aesthetics inform our responses to this question. Working within our own aesthetic notions we will then begin to refine our writing, & help each other to write the best poems that we can. The workshop will conduct a number of actual experiments with writing that will allow us to step outside the world of id, which wants to keep all the beautiful words, & into the artistic self, which understands which pieces fit & which belong elsewhere. We will also engage the basic Poetry School of Poetry premise that the poet¹s first job is to learn how to edit. Dgls N. Rthschld has been behind the foods table at the New Years Reading more times than it is worth mentioning. He has also written a number of chapbooks, the most ground breaking entitled The Minor Arcane. He has taught what seem to be innumerable college writing classes, and is currently teaching at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, a CUNY school.

The Visible Unseen: Writing Outside Borders Akilah Oliver Thursdays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 15th

Are poetry and prose virtual realities, simulations of something other, or the real thing? Where does the ³I² live? How many moments exist in the moment of the line? What borders of form are crucial for us to hang on to & which boundaries are collapsible? In this workshop, we will explore the connections and tensions between the visible and the unseen world/s, not as dualities or binaries, but as complementary sites of composition. Through engagement with text (written and visual), public spaces, the imagination, dreams and Eros, participants are invited to think of writing as that which re-imagines the known and the unknown. Though this is a text based workshop, poets, prose writers, and artists from all disciplines are welcome. Readings include: Giorgio Agamben, Laura Mullen, Whitman, Anne Waldman, Derrida, & Ben Okri. Akilah Oliver is the author of the she said dialogues: flesh memory, An Arriving Guard of Angels, Thusly Coming to Greet, a(A)gust, & The Putterer¹s Notebook. She is faculty at the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics Summer Writing Program at Naropa University.

Impurity Rocks! A Poetry Lab & Workshop Joanna Fuhrman
Fridays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 16th

The class will focus on ³impure² poetry, poetry that employs a mixture of tones and styles. Special emphasis will be placed on works that combine narrative and humor with linguistic and imagistic disjunction. In-class exercises and take-home assignments will touch on issues of scale, space, sound, genre and wordplay. Time will also be devoted to reading published poems as well as in-depth discussions and critiques of student work. Joanna Fuhrman is the author of three collections of poetry, Freud in Brooklyn, Ugh Ugh Ocean and Moraine, all published by Hanging Loose Press. She has taught poetry writing at The University of Washington, The Cooper Union Saturday Outreach program and in the New York City Public Schools.

Poetry For The Page, Stage, And Computer Screen Thomas Savage Saturdays
At 12 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 17th

This course is a writing workshop where students' writing is the main focus. Also used as inspiration and writing prompts will be samples of work by writers from The Beats, Black Mountain poets, The New York School (all generations), Language Poetry, Poets Theater, Pablo Neruda, and works being published today online, among other sources. Practices will include reading as well as writing assignments and, in a great Poetry Project tradition, in-class writing. Thomas Savage has written eight published books of poems including most recently Bamiyan Poems, Brain Surgery Poems and Political Conditions/Physical States. His poems have appeared in many print and online venues including The New York Times, Hanging Loose, Rattapallax, Big Bridge, Black Box, and regularly on the Wryting-L website. He has taught poetry workshops at The Poetry Project and Tribes Gallery.

* The workshop fee is $350, which includes a one year Sustaining Poetry Project membership and tuition for any and all spring and fall classes. Reservations are required due to limited class space, and payment must be received in advance. Caps on class sizes, if in effect, will be determined by workshop leaders. Please send payment and reservations to:

The Poetry Project, St. Mark's Church
Attn: Workshops
131 East 10th St.
NYC, NY 10003

For more information, or to pay by credit card, please call [redacted], or email: [redacted].

http://www.poetryproject.com/workshops.php

To pay homage to the life and passing of Diane Burns

Memorial will be held at St. Marks Poetry Poetry Project
Saturday, January 27, 12-5 pm
Readings and music from 1-4 pm

If you would like to participate please call Steve Cannon @ [redacted]

Tribes Gallery
[redacted]
285 East 3rd Street #2
NY, NY 10009
[redacted]
http://www.tribes.org
http://www.myspace.com/85980537

Boog City presents
d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

A 40th Anniversary Celebration for United Artists Books (New York City) Thurs. Feb. 1, 6:00 p.m., free

ACA Galleries
529 W.20th St., 5th Floor

Event will be hosted by United Artists' editor and publisher Lewis Warsh

Featuring readings from Barbara Henning, Mitch Highfill, Bill Kushner, Bernadette Mayer, Dennis Moritz, Tom Savage, Anne Waldman and Lewis Warsh.

With music from Legends.

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, and many great books on sale at HUGE discounts.
Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Winter Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.

[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $85 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

517. Stephen Baraban
Dorn's scapegoat landscape
Thu 25 Jan 2007

(I was thinking of posting about this yesterday, and again this morning, but I was curious to see if anyone else would note and remark on the following serendipity--synchronicity--co-incidence):

In light of the recent exchanges here re/ poems about scapegoats, it is quite interesting that the brand new issue of Big Bridge, announced yesterday, and, I presume, posted that same day, contains the following extraordinary poem by the late Edward Dorn, part of the "Featured Chapbook" by Dorn--"Low Coups and Haut Coups". (I hope my joy in attempting an explication of this short piece doesn't bring anyone too much pain):

HI COO

The scapegoat's milk
is homogenized
The blackberry brambles
cover the hill

_____

I interpret Dorn's first two lines to intimate that people feel refreshed by the killing of the scapegoat, so therefore they experience through this death something like a cool pleasant drink of milk: "scapegoat's milk". The homogenization of the milk highlights the fact that scientific-technological rationality, "administration" if you will, has been applied to the immemorial process of scapegoating (well, yeah...the Nazis and all...), as to so many other things.

But the great Mystery is the relation of the first two lines to the last two.

The "hill" might well be the locus for the killing of the goat. But beyond that, we seem to have the fusion of natural process (lines 3-4) and the most desreditable sort of human practice.

In this fusion I find a hard-won deep serenity (mind you, I'm not suggesting resignation) I don't really associate with the work of Mr. Dorn, kind of more like the work of Gary Snyder, perhaps.

_____

The whole Dorn chapbook is quite worth your while to look at. I'm assuming it's late work, i.e., sometime post _Slinger_, and as such it truly shines, like the _Chemo Sabe_ (Dorn's sequence involving his cancer & treatment) poems I've seen; the poem where he compares his beleagured ancestors to The Kurdish nation; and the Dorn poem about Olson that Tom Clark includes in the preface or afterward, whatever it was, of the paperback version of the unfortunate Olson bio. As AGAINST most of the late writing in Dorn's _Hello, La Jolla!_ & _Yellow Lola_, which I find rather acrid and often trivial, if I were to sum it up in a phrase.

_____

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news

↑ Index

518. patrick dunagan

Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape

Thu 25 Jan 2007

It'd be great to hear a date on the composition of the poems in the chapbook as well as any relevant info on where the manuscript came from if anybody is privy to that info. (I assume all this will be covered by the upcoming Penguin Selected, but why publish the poems on-line without including it?)

On 1/25/07, Stephen Baraban <[redacted]> wrote:
> (I was thinking of posting about this yesterday, and > again this morning, but I was curious to see if anyone > else would note and remark on the following > serendipity--synchronicity--co-incidence):
>
> In light of the recent exchanges here re/ poems about > scapegoats, it is quite interesting that the brand new > issue of Big Bridge, announced yesterday, and, I > presume, posted that same day, contains the following > extraordinary poem by the late Edward Dorn, part of
> the "Featured Chapbook" by Dorn--"Low Coups and Haut > Coups". (I hope my joy in attempting an explication of > this short piece doesn't bring anyone too much pain):
>
>
>
> HI COO
>
> The scapegoat's milk
> is homogenized
> The blackberry brambles
> cover the hill
> _____
>
>
> I interpret Dorn's first two lines to intimate that > people feel refreshed by the killing of the > scapegoat, so therefore they experience through this > death something like a cool pleasant drink of milk:
> "scapegoat's milk". The homogenization of the milk > highlights the fact that scientific-technological > rationality, "administration" if you will, has been > applied to the immemorial process of scapegoating > (well, yeah...the Nazis and all...), as to so many > other things.
>
> But the great Mystery is the relation of the first two > lines to the last two.

>
> The "hill" might well be the locus for the killing of > the goat. But beyond that, we seem to have the fusion > of natural process (lines 3-4) and the most > desreditable sort of human practice.
>
> In this fusion I find a hard-won deep serenity (mind
> you, I'm not suggesting resignation) I don't really > associate with the work of Mr. Dorn, kind of more like > the work of Gary Snyder, perhaps.
> _____
>
> The whole Dorn chapbook is quite worth your while to > look at. I'm assuming it's late work, i.e., sometime > post _Slinger_, and as such it truly shines, like the > _Chemo Sabe_ (Dorn's sequence involving his cancer & > treatment) poems I've seen; the poem where he compares > his beleagured ancestors to The Kurdish nation; and > the Dorn poem about Olson that Tom Clark includes in > the preface or afterward, whatever it was, of the > paperback version of the unfortunate Olson bio. As > AGAINST most of the late writing in Dorn's _Hello, La > Jolla!_ & _Yellow Lola_, which I find rather acrid > and often trivial, if I were to sum it up in a phrase.
>
>
>
>
>
>

___
> 8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
> with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
> http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news
>

↑ Index

519. Sheila Murphy

Fw: Brutality, Humor, Eroticism - Only Two Weeks Left!

Thu 25 Jan 2007

If I were in NYC or anywhere near it, wild horses couldn't drag me away from the production noted below. Take advantage of the opportunity to see a Bromley play. You won't regret it!

Sheila Murphy

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: Inverse Theater Company <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, January 25, 2007 8:56:41 AM Subject: Brutality, Humor, Eroticism - Only Two Weeks Left!

* Winner of the Cafe Cino Award for Excellence in Off-Off-Broadway at the NY Innovative Theater Awards 2005 * American Theater Web: "One of Top Three Musicals" in Fringe NYC 2005 * Talkin Broadway: "Outstanding New Musical" - Summer 2005 Citations

ONLY TWO MORE WEEKS to catch The Death of Griffin Hunter!
Backstage calls The Death of Griffin Hunter: "Fascinating...ambitious political thriller...an edgy kaleidoscope of brutality, humor, eroticism, romance, and philosophizing."
Time-Out NY calls The Death of Griffin Hunter: "absorbing and amusing...a gaudy political thriller [with] intricately sturdy plotting."
And audiences are having a blast...so come on by!
The Death of Griffin Hunter
A play noir by Kirk Wood Bromley
Directed by Howard Thoresen Sets by Jane Stein
Lights by Jeff Nash
Costumes by Karen Flood Production Mgt. by Ruthie Conde
Stage Mgt. by Casey McLain
8 pm, Wednesdays - Saturdays, January 10 - February 3, 2007
At The Brick Theater, 575 Metropolitan Ave., Williamsburg, NYC
Tickets are $18, but Wednesdays are "Pay What You Will" and Thursdays are "2 for 1"!
For reservations, information, and tickets go to www.inversetheater.org
The Death of Griffin Hunter is the story of Griffin Hunter, the Secretary of Disarmament for the United Nations. When Hunter flies to San Francisco to sign a disarmament treaty with 90 nations, he is quickly embroiled into the crypto-psychotic grip of Vaad Sirat, an international weapons cartel that will stop at nothing to seduce Hunter to destroy himself and his vision for a better world. This thrilling “play noir” not only features 15 of the finest indie actors playing 40 sensational characters, an Iranian Tazi’ya play-within-the-play, and intricate and compelling plot twists, but it is a timely meditation on the complexities of peacemaking in a world where war means profit.

---------- To be unsubscribed from the Versus mailing list, simply click on the link below:

↑ Index

520. Ruth Lepson

Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape

Thu 25 Jan 2007

---

isn't there a goat caught in the brambles in sumerian myth?

On 1/25/07 8:21 PM, "Stephen Baraban" <[redacted]> wrote:

> (I was thinking of posting about this yesterday, and again this morning, but I was curious to see if anyone else would note and remark on the following serendipity--synchronicity--co-incidence):
>
> In light of the recent exchanges here re/ poems about scapegoats, it is quite interesting that the brand new issue of Big Bridge, announced yesterday, and, I presume, posted that same day, contains the following extraordinary poem by the late Edward Dorn, part of the "Featured Chapbook" by Dorn--"Low Coups and Haut Coups". (I hope my joy in attempting an explication of this short piece doesn't bring anyone too much pain):
>
> HI COO
>
> The scapegoat's milk
> is homogenized
> The blackberry brambles
> cover the hill
>
> _____
>
> *I interpret Dorn's first two lines to intimate that people feel refreshed by the killing of the scapegoat, so therefore they experience through this death something like a cool pleasant drink of milk:*

"scapegoat's milk". The homogenization of the milk highlights the fact that scientific-technological rationality, "administration" if you will, has been applied to the immemorial process of scapegoating (well, yeah...the Nazis and all...), as to so many other things.

But the great Mystery is the relation of the first two lines to the last two.

The "hill" might well be the locus for the killing of the goat. But beyond that, we seem to have the fusion of natural process (lines 3-4) and the most desreditable sort of human practice.

*In this fusion I find a hard-won deep serenity (mind you, I'm not suggesting resignation) I don't really associate with the work of Mr. Dorn, kind of more like the work of Gary Snyder, perhaps.*

The whole Dorn chapbook is quite worth your while to look at. I'm assuming it's late work, i.e., sometime post _Slinger_, and as such it truly shines, like the _Chemo Sabe_ (Dorn's sequence involving his cancer & treatment) poems I've seen; the poem where he compares his beleagured ancestors to The Kurdish nation; and the Dorn poem about Olson that Tom Clark includes in the preface or afterward, whatever it was, of the paperback version of the unfortunate Olson bio. As AGAINST most of the late writing in Dorn's _Hello, La Jolla!_ & _Yellow Lola_, which I find rather acrid and often trivial, if I were to sum it up in a phrase.

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut. http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news

↑ Index

521. C. A. Conrad
REMINDER: kari edwards memorial event this saturday in Baltimore----------
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Put together in kari's honor by Michael Ball as part of the i.e. reading series for details: _http://ieseries.wordpress.com/_ (http://ieseries.wordpress.com/)

we miss you kari

↑ Index

522. Jim Andrews
Please send me links to cool Internet radio stations
Fri 26 Jan 2007

I'm interested to try and get a sense of Internet radio. Please send me links to cool Internet radio stations.

I've started a page that will sort of be a research page for me concerning Internet radio. It's at http://vispo.com/radio

ja

↑ Index

523. Philip Metres
poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Eric,

While I agree that at least one poet-participant descended into bombast, and certainly I agree that Dunya Mikhail is worth reading, you and Doerkner missed again the main point--this wasn't an event about war, it was Poems of Peace and War. The entire framing of the event was to problematize our way of thinking about peace and war--not just representing war, dramatizing war, writing war (hard enough to chew over in the short time allowed); the critic essentially is acting on a kind of reflex-- 1) civilians have nothing to say about war, 2) veterans have everything to say about war, and 3) there is no point in thinking about what is the beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war. Even more so--that merely writing about/through war is somehow to be consuming it for poetic gain. I'm sorry, that's bullshit. I can't speak for all the participants involved, but this writing is not meant as an end in itself, but part of a process of unwriting what's already been decid

e! d, already been written. It requires some attempt to go beyond the page--to assume otherwise is to believe poetry ends with the author, with the published page.

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com

↑ Index

524. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape
Fri 26 Jan 2007

---

here's the image that you're thinking of, maybe?

http://home.earthlink.net/~valis2/images/ram_ur.jpg

I don't think this one is supposed to be a sacrifice, though.

the "ram/goat caught in brambles" topos reminds me of the Akeidah (Binding of Isaac) story out of Genesis -- you know the one: Isaac was to be sacrificed by his father Abraham on top of a mountain, but at the last moment a ram appeared nearby with its horns caught in brambles. that saved Isaac's bacon, so to speak.

could this be the ur-narrative (no pun intended, re: the Sumerian ref above) on which the historical Jerusalem Temple practice (sending out the scapegoat on the Day of Atonement) is based?

and has anyone thought of Nietzsche's analysis of "tragedy" as the "song of the goat" (tragos + oidos = tragoidia) in ancient drama? that is, another spin on sacrificing the scapegoat as purgation of a people's sins (or Aristotelian catharsis, in literary terms).

I love Dorn's take on the depletion of the ritual's spirit, in that its product, the scapegoat's milk, has become "homogenized" -- safe for all consumers.

tl

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Ruth Lepson

Sent: Thursday, January 25, 2007 21:04
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape

isn't there a goat caught in the brambles in sumerian myth?

On 1/25/07 8:21 PM, "Stephen Baraban" <[redacted]> wrote:

> (I was thinking of posting about this yesterday, and > again this morning, but I was curious to see if anyone > else would note and remark on the following > serendipity--synchronicity--co-incidence):
>
> In light of the recent exchanges here re/ poems about > scapegoats, it is quite interesting that the brand new > issue of Big Bridge, announced yesterday, and, I > presume, posted that same day, contains the following > extraordinary poem by the late Edward Dorn, part of
> the "Featured Chapbook" by Dorn--"Low Coups and Haut > Coups". (I hope my joy in attempting an explication of > this short piece doesn't bring anyone too much pain):
>
>
>
> HI COO
>
> The scapegoat's milk
> is homogenized
> The blackberry brambles
> cover the hill
> _____
>
>
> I interpret Dorn's first two lines to intimate that > people feel refreshed by the killing of the > scapegoat, so therefore they experience through this
> death something like a cool pleasant drink of milk:
> "scapegoat's milk". The homogenization of the milk
> highlights the fact that scientific-technological > rationality, "administration" if you will, has been > applied to the immemorial process of scapegoating > (well, yeah...the Nazis and all...), as to so many > other things.
>

> But the great Mystery is the relation of the first two > lines to the last two.
>
> The "hill" might well be the locus for the killing of > the goat. But beyond that, we seem to have the fusion > of natural process (lines 3-4) and the most > desreditable sort of human practice.
>
> In this fusion I find a hard-won deep serenity (mind
> you, I'm not suggesting resignation) I don't really > associate with the work of Mr. Dorn, kind of more like > the work of Gary Snyder, perhaps.
> _____
>
> The whole Dorn chapbook is quite worth your while to > look at. I'm assuming it's late work, i.e., sometime > post _Slinger_, and as such it truly shines, like the > _Chemo Sabe_ (Dorn's sequence involving his cancer & > treatment) poems I've seen; the poem where he compares > his beleagured ancestors to The Kurdish nation; and > the Dorn poem about Olson that Tom Clark includes in
> the preface or afterward, whatever it was, of the > paperback version of the unfortunate Olson bio. As > AGAINST most of the late writing in Dorn's _Hello, La
> Jolla!_ & _Yellow Lola_, which I find rather acrid
> and often trivial, if I were to sum it up in a phrase.
>
>
>
>
>
>

_____
> _____
> 8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
> with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
> http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news

↑ Index

525. amy king
Come, make warm bodies tonight ...
Fri 26 Jan 2007

MiPOesias @ Stain Bar
Friday, January 26, 2007
7 P.M.
Presents

~~~ DAN HOY ~~~ PF POTVIN ~~~ ERICA FABRI ~~~

¡¡Light Up the Single Digit Temps Tonight!!

_____

Dan Hoy lives in Brooklyn and is co-editor of SOFT TARGETS. Recent work has appeared or is forthcoming in Absent, Cannibal, H_NGM_N, Effing, Dreams That Money Can Buy, and elsewhere. Videos and movie criticism are available on his website, www.sinlechuga.com.

PF POTVIN is the author of The Attention Lesson (No Tell Books). His work has appeared in MiPOesias, Sleepingfish, Boston Review, Black Warrior Review, Sentence, No Tell Motel, and elsewhere. He has taught at various language schools and colleges in the U.S. and Chile . He serves on the staff of Drunken Boat, runs ultramarathons, and currently resides in Miami , FL.

Erica Miriam Fabri is a poet and educator. She is a graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and received her MFA in poetry from the New School . She is the author of High Heel Magazine, winner of the 2006 Belle Letter Press chapbook contest. She has work published or forthcoming in Good Foot Magazine and Got Poetry? An Offline Anthology. She currently teaches creative writing at The School of Visual Arts, Baruch College and Lehman College . www.ericafabri.com

_____

Hoy – http://www.mipoesias.com/Poetry/hoy_dan.html

Potvin – http://www.mipoesias.com/2007/potvin_pf.htm

Fabri – http://www.mipoesias.com/Poetry/fabri_erica.html

_____

STAIN BAR
766 Grand Street Brooklyn , NY 11211
(L train to Grand Street stop, walk one block west) -- 718/[redacted] -- daily 5 p.m.

Hope to see you there!
~~~

_____

http://www.mipoesias.com
http://miporeadingseries2007.blogspot.com

_____

We won't tell. Get more on shows you hate to love
(and love to hate): Yahoo! TV's Guilty Pleasures list.

↑ Index

526. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project/Murat's Peripheral Space of Photography
Fri 26 Jan 2007

David,

Thank you very much for the wonderful comments.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/25/07, David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> mark--
> What Murat writes is uure--I would highly recommend you --and everyone > really on this list--read this exceptional text-- > unlike Barthes' and Sontag's books on photography, Murat's uses an actual > photgraphy exhibition, moving from room to room --the spaces of the > exhibtion, spaces within the photos--and meditating on various aspects of > each photo as well as reviewing and rethinking photos in groupings from > differing parts of the exhibition. The work builds room by room step by > step and look by look a thinikng through of gesture as/in photogrpahy in > relation with democracy, thinks through many different ways of seeing, of > framing (room, doorway,image, remembered and re-membered image) and while
> it > seems to be arcing towads a philosophical investigation, reaches a point > at > which the larva suddenly emegres as a butterfly,a poem. (at end of book
> is > the information for the catalogue, and the page numbers in it of the > photos
> written about--so you have for purposes of anthology all the references

> you
> need for both text and image to be placed together--)
> I am putting it in very simple ways,trying to leave room for the > excitement of discoveries and the ways in which Murat uses language to > subtly shift modalities of vision,sound,thought and revelation
> It has the quality very much of a recit.
> The descriptions and thoughts on the photogrpahs each one are wonderfully > alive and convey the real delight and freedoms one may find n an image.
> There is also a very different consideration of photographic space-- as
> the > title says--in terms of peripheries.
> This is a very exceptional book, please do read it, very alive in all > senses
> of the word, a real "adventure of discovery" as an experience in reading, > seeing and thinking with a poet's bringing of the fullness of each word to > its compostion.
> I'm not doing it justice by trying a description--read it and find out for > yourself!
>
> >From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> >Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Re: Ekphrastic Poetry Anthology Project
> >Date: Thu, 25 Jan 2007 00:37:40 -0500
> >
> >Mark,
> >
> >I do not want to blow my own horn but The Peripheral Space of Photography
> >is > >a serial ekphrastic poem, in your sense, where one hypothetically obtain > >photographs for its different parts.
> >
> >Ciao,
> >
> >Murat
> >
> >
> >On 1/24/07, Mark Lamoureux <[redacted]> wrote:
> >>
> >>I am working on putting together an anthology of 20th and 21st century
> >>ekphrastic poetry (poetry about visual art) from the U.S. I am now > >>beginning the daunting process of assembling a list of poems to be > >>considered for the anthology. I don't have a publisher yet, but once I > >>have > >>assembled the anthology I am going to try to find one.

> >>
> >>I am hoping you can take a moment and list any ekphrastic poems you can > >>think of and backchannel to [redacted] with the subject > >>heading "Ekphrastic Poems." The only criteria are that the poet be one > who > >>has published in the 20th or 21st centuries. I am limiting the scope to > >>published poems in an attempt to control the size of the project a > little > >>bit.
> >>
> >>I am hoping to display the poem side-by-side with the image (or an image > >>of the work in the case of sculpture) that the poem is about; so the > poems > >>should be about works of art that I could hypothetically obtain an image > >>of.
> >>
> >>Thanks in advance,
> >>Mark Lamoureux
> >>
> >>
> >>
>
> _____
> Invite your Hotmail contacts to join your friends list with Windows Live > Spaces
>
> http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwsp0070000001msn/direct/01/?
href=http://spaces.live.com/spacesapi.aspx?wx_action=create&wx_url=/ friends.aspx&mkt=en-us
>

↑ Index

527. Joel Bettridge

Book Arts Symposium

Fri 26 Jan 2007

The Yale University Library and the Whitney Humanities Center invite historians, literary scholars, artists, and book arts enthusiasts to participate in At the Turn of the Centuries: The Influence of Early 20th Century Book Arts on Contemporary Artists' Books, a conference to be held on April 13, 2007, on the campus of Yale University.

Please consult our web site for further details:
http://beinecke.library.yale.edu/centuries/index.html

At the Turn of the Centuries: The Influence of Early 20th Century Book Arts on Contemporary Artists' Books

Speakers will include Marcia Reed, Curator of Rare Books, Getty Research Institute; Stephen Bury, Head of European and American Collections, British Library; and Angela Lorenz, acclaimed American book artist and book arts scholar. The conference will consider the work of various innovative and avant-garde artists and writers just after the turn of the twentieth century, including the Dadaists and Surrealists, and its influence on post-war artists and writers, including those associated with OULIPO and Fluxus, and contemporary inheritors of these traditions in art, literature, and bookwork.

Additionally, the conference will highlight strengths of the Yale Arts of the Book Collection and the modern European and American collections at the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library. At the Turn of the Centuries will honor the late Tony Zwicker's life-long commitment to the inventive and original in modern and contemporary book arts.

Registration is free, but required for planning purposes. Space for breakout working groups is very limited, thus registration is mandatory for these sessions. Please visit our registration page in February 2007 to sign up.

Nancy Kuhl
Associate Curator, The Yale Collection of American Literature
The Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library
Yale University
121 Wall Street
P.O. Box 208240

New Haven, CT 06520-8240
Phone: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]

___ Bored stiff? Loosen up... Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games. http://games.yahoo.com/games/front

↑ Index

528. Dan Coffey
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Ah, now I get it.

Peace Out,

Dan

On 1/26/07, Philip Metres <[redacted]> wrote:
> Eric,
>
> While I agree that at least one poet-participant descended into bombast, and certainly I agree that Dunya Mikhail is worth reading, you and Doerkner missed again the main point--this wasn't an event about war, it was Poems of Peace and War. The entire framing of the event was to problematize our way of thinking about peace and war--not just representing war, dramatizing war, writing war (hard enough to chew over in the short time allowed); the critic essentially is acting on a kind of reflex-- 1) civilians have nothing to say about war, 2) veterans have everything to say about war, and 3) there is no point in thinking about what is the beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war. Even more so--that merely writing about/through war is somehow to be consuming it for poetic gain. I'm sorry, that's bullshit. I can't speak for all the participants involved, but this writing is not meant as an end in itself, but part of a process of unwriting what's already been dec
id
> e! > d, already been written. It requires some attempt to go beyond the page--to assume otherwise is to believe poetry ends with the author, with the published page.
>
> Philip Metres
> Associate Professor
> Department of English
> John Carroll University

> 20700 N. Park Blvd
> University Heights, OH 44118
> phone: [redacted] (work)
> fax: [redacted]
> http://www.philipmetres.com
>

--
http://hyperhypo.org/blog
http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

↑ Index

529. David-Baptiste Chirot

FW: Excitement Builds for Saturday's Anti-War Marches!

Fri 26 Jan 2007

> Excitement is Building for Saturday's March on Washington to End the War Now!
>
> The weather will be perfect, and a huge turnout is expected due to Bush's adamant refusal to back down from his plan to escalate his disastrous Iraq War. Details here:
> http://unitedforpeace.org
>
> Speakers include: Susan Sarandon, Tim Robbins, Danny Glover, Jane Fonda, Rev. Jesse Jackson, Reps. Dennis Kucinich, Maxine Waters, and Lynn Woolsey, Bob Watada, and many more.
>
> Unlike past marches, the Corporate Media is already covering this event, including the Washington Post. Better yet, we've created our own powerful progressive media on the Internet since 2003 - this Revolution will be Blogged and YouTubed!
>
> RALLY: Democrats.Com, PDA, Afterdowningstreet.org activists and friends are asked to gather with their PDA state banner, Saturday morning on the National Mall between Jefferson Ave. NW and 4th St. NW. (Facing the National Air and Space Museum) We will begin gathering at 9:30 AM. Download the map. (If you need help finding us on Saturday, call Sherry [redacted] or Laura [redacted])
>
> Come to the workshops and trainings (including on how to lobby for investigations with the ultimate goal of impeachment) on January 28th and come with us to meet with your Congress Member and Senators on January 29th. It's not too late to register:
> http://www.unitedforpeace.org/modinput4.php?modin1
>
> Here's what we're lobbying for (and what you can ask your Senators and Congress Member for):

http://www.afterdowningstreet.org/node/16562

For comprehensive list of all sorts of related events in Washington and elsewhere in the coming days, see:
http://www.afterdowningstreet.org/event

Ask Your Friends to Join the Virtual March on Washington

If you can't make it to Washington DC, you can still show your opposition to the Iraq War! Join over 19,000 activists in our Virtual March on Washington:
http://democrats.com/outofiraq

Each of us knows 5, 10, 20, 50, or 100 people who share our opposition to Bush's War but won't march in the streets. All we ask is they take 1 minute to email their Representatives:
http://www.democrats.com/peoplesemailnetwork/90

Can you help us by reaching out to your personal email lists? Click here:
http://democrats.com/outofiraq

Congress Announces First Investigation into Bush's Crimes

HOUSE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE Oversight Hearing on: "Presidential Signing Statements under the Bush Administration: A Threat to Checks and Balances and the Rule of Law?"

10:15 a.m., Wednesday, January 31, 2007, Room 2141 Rayburn House Office Building

THANK Congressman John Conyers: [redacted], [redacted]

Ask CBS to Let its Reporters Tell the Truth About Iraq

MediaChannel.org reports that CBS will not air Iraq reporting by its own staff. Here's the story:
http://www.afterdowningstreet.org/node/17730

Here's video on the CBS website that it refuses to broadcast:

> http://tinyurl.com/24xb4r
>
> CBS can be reached for polite encouragement at phone [redacted], fax [redacted], or [redacted]
>
> _____
>
> Rosie O'Donnell Calls for Bush's Impeachment, May Put Her Job at Risk
>
> Watch this video of Rosie O'Donnell calling for Bush's much-deserved impeachment:
> http://www.afterdowningstreet.org/node/17695
>
> Then contact ABC here to urge them to give Rosie any job she wants:
> http://abc.go.com/site/contactus.html
>
> _____
>
> Print Out a Flyer and Make Copies
>
> Click image for flyer in Word. Blank areas on right are for you to fill in local info.
>
> http://www.afterdowningstreet.org/downloads/jan27flyer.doc
>
> #####
>
> Forward this message to everyone you know!
>
> If you received this from a friend, you can subscribe at:
> http://archive.democrats.com/elandslide/subscribe_module.cfm?campaigns

Laugh, share and connect with Windows Live Messenger
http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwme0020000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://imagine-msn.com/messenger/launch80/default.aspx?locale=en-us&source=hmtagline

↑ Index

530. Eric Dickey
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

---

great, the planet is falling apart and we're going academic

at least uncle wally was on to something:
http://www.randomhouse.com/knopf/authors/stevens/poetsonpoetry.html

somedays I feel like an errant lemming, which is only marginally better than when I feel like an ordinary lemming.

> On 1/26/07, Philip Metres <[redacted]> wrote:
> Eric,
>
> While I agree that at least one poet-participant > descended into bombast, and certainly I agree that > Dunya Mikhail is worth reading, you and Doerkner
> missed again the main point--this wasn't an event
> about war, it was Poems of Peace and War. The > entire framing of the event was to problematize our > way of thinking about peace and war--not just > representing war, dramatizing war, writing war (hard > enough to chew over in the short time allowed); the > critic essentially is acting on a kind of reflex-- > 1) civilians have nothing to say about war, 2) > veterans have everything to say about war, and 3)
> there is no point in thinking about what is the > beyond of war, the relationship between peace and > war. Even more so--that merely writing > about/through war is somehow to be consuming it for > poetic gain. I'm sorry, that's bullshit. I can't > speak for all the participants involved, but this > writing is not meant as an end in itself, but part > of a process of unwriting what's already been dec
> id
> e!
> d, already been written. It requires some attempt > to go beyond the page--to assume otherwise is to > believe poetry ends with the author, with the > published page.
>
> Philip Metres
> Associate Professor
> Department of English
> John Carroll University
> 20700 N. Park Blvd

> University Heights, OH 44118
> phone: [redacted] (work)
> fax: [redacted]
> http://www.philipmetres.com
>
> --
> http://hyperhypo.org/blog
> http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

___
Do you Yahoo!?
Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.
http://new.mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

531. Christopher Filkins
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

I'm pretty sure the planet is revolving correctly and maintaining its structural integrity.

On 1/26/07 10:59 AM, "Eric Dickey" <[redacted]> wrote:

> great, the planet is falling apart and we're going
> academic
>
> at least uncle wally was on to something:
> http://www.randomhouse.com/knopf/authors/stevens/poetsonpoetry.html
>
> somedays I feel like an errant lemming, which is only > marginally better than when I feel like an ordinary > lemming.
>
> On 1/26/07, Philip Metres <[redacted]> wrote:
> Eric,
>
> While I agree that at least one poet-participant
> descended into bombast, and certainly I agree that > Dunya Mikhail is worth reading, you and Doerkner
> missed again the main point--this wasn't an event
> about war, it was Poems of Peace and War. The > entire framing of the event was to problematize our way of thinking about peace and war--not just representing war, dramatizing war, writing war (hard enough to chew over in the short time allowed); the critic essentially is acting on a kind of reflex--1) civilians have nothing to say about war, 2) veterans have everything to say about war, and 3) there is no point in thinking about what is the beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war. Even more so--that merely writing about/through war is somehow to be consuming it for poetic gain. I'm sorry, that's bullshit. I can't speak for all the participants involved, but this writing is not meant as an end in itself, but part of a process of unwriting what's already been dec

id
e!
d, already been written. It requires some attempt to go beyond the page--to assume otherwise is to believe poetry ends with the author, with the published page.

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com

--
http://hyperhypo.org/blog
http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

Do you Yahoo!?
Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.
http://new.mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

532. Eric

Re: poems of PEACE and war

Fri 26 Jan 2007

Philip,

Thanks for your thoughtful reply.

It's not that I believe "there is no point in thinking about what is the beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war." On the contrary, I find many poets resist the topic, preferring to default to a universalist, pacifist, "why can't we all just live in peace and make art?" position. In this admittedly seductive default position, questions of war and peace never get addressed. We get slogans and hype. From slogans and hype, one can't really try to identify the relationship between peace and war, because war is always bad and peace is always good and people who advocate war are always bad and people who advocate peace are always good. Good versus evil, and extending the banal dualism, hip versus unhip.

You get Curtis Blow lyrics: WAR .... what's it good for...absolutely nothing! And people don't question the slogan and hype. People don't consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and ended their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the advance of more liberal societies over more repressive ones. War bad, peace good, and anyone who says otherwise is an evil asshole. More slogans and hype.

Further, one can credibly argue that war is the natural state of mankind, and peace is the brief period of calm following the total defeat of major powers. It's not like we have peace as the status quo, and then some tyrants and political monsters come along and make war; rather we have war and more war, until one side is so thoroughly defeated there is a lull we call "peace." The question becomes how to extend that interval of peace, and one cannot approach that question with slogans and hype, by denying that war is our continuum and peace the exception.

Finally, we tend to respect the opinions of writers who have been in war, not merely because they can provide gruesome and vivid descriptions from experience, but because that experience has taken them beyond slogans and hype. Tolstoy, for example, served as an officer in the artillery during the Crimean War, and his _War and Peace_ argues for an acceptance of the irrational nature of the universe, of the here and now. His pacifism was earned, and not merely a sort of party uniform or fashion statement.

↑ Index

533. Matthew Baiotto
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Eric wrote:

> People don't consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and >ended their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the advance of more >liberal societies over more repressive ones.

Do you seriously believe this?

Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
Philip,

Thanks for your thoughtful reply.

It's not that I believe "there is no point in thinking about what is the beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war." On the contrary, I find many poets resist the topic, preferring to default to a universalist, pacifist, "why can't we all just live in peace and make art?" position. In this admittedly seductive default position, questions of war and peace never get addressed. We get slogans and hype. From slogans and hype, one can't really try to identify the relationship between peace and war, because war is always bad and peace is always good and people who advocate war are always bad and people who advocate peace are always good. Good versus evil, and extending the banal dualism, hip versus unhip.

You get Curtis Blow lyrics: WAR .... what's it good for...absolutely nothing! And people don't question the slogan and hype. People don't consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and ended their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the advance of more liberal societies over more repressive ones. War bad, peace good, and anyone who says otherwise is an evil asshole. More slogans and hype.

Further, one can credibly argue that war is the natural state of mankind, and peace is the brief period of calm following the total defeat of major powers. It's not like we have peace as the status quo, and then some tyrants and political monsters come along and make war; rather we have war and more war, until one side is so thoroughly defeated there is a lull we call "peace." The question becomes how to extend that interval of peace, and one cannot approach that question with slogans and hype, by denying that war is our continuum and peace the exception.

Finally, we tend to respect the opinions of writers who have been in war, not merely because they can provide gruesome and vivid descriptions from experience, but because that experience has taken them beyond slogans and hype. Tolstoy, for example, served as an officer in the artillery during the Crimean War, and his _War and Peace_ argues for an acceptance of the irrational nature of the universe, of the here and now. His pacifism was earned, and not merely a sort of party uniform or fashion statement.

↑ Index

534. Andrea Lawlor
New translation journal in Philly - launch 1.27.07
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Dear Poetics List,

Hello. I'm a fiction writer and editor of Pocket Myths. I've been lurking on the list for a while, and thought people might like to know about this new translation journal, edited by Steve Dolph and Brandon Holmquist. There's a launch party tomorrow night which I suspect is going to be fun.

Best,
Andrea Lawlor
www.pocketmyths.com

fwd: calque: issue one release reading saturday jan. 27

8pm
Chapterhouse Cafe and Gallery
620 S. 9th St., Philadelphia

this issue features translations of Philippe Soupault (French) by Nick Moudry, Sandor Kanyadi (Hungarian) by Paul Sohar, Tomaz Salamun (Slovenian) by Joshua Beckman, Juan Bosch (Spanish) by Steve Dolph, and Kenji Miyazawa (Japanese) by Nobumasa Hiroi.

the reading features: Nobumasa Hiroi (fiction) born in Tokyo, Japan in 1982. He graduated from Soka University of America, Aliso Viejo in 2006 and is currently a student of the Creative Writing program at Temple University.

Laura Jaramillo (poetry) originally from Queens, New York, lives in Philadelphia and is completing a Masters in Creative Writing at Temple University. She was the recipient of the Zora Neale Hurston Scholarship at Naropa University in the summer of 2004. Her work has appeared in Pocket Myths: The Odyssey, The Bard Papers, The Bard College Journal of the Moving Image, and Forge. An excerpt from her long poem, B, is forthcoming in P-QUEUE.

Brandon Holmquest (fiction) a writer, translator, and cultural critic living in South Philly.

Nick Moudry (poetry) is the translator of Tristan Tzara’s Twenty-Five and One Poems. His poems, translations, and criticism have appeared in numerous magazines, including Boston Review, Fence, and Denver Quarterly. He currently lives in Philadelphia, where he is completing his Ph.D. in English.

Paul Sohar (poetry) was born in Hungary and educated in the U.S. His poems and short stories have appeared in Aurorean, Chelsea, Hunger, Kenyon Review, Partisan Review, Phantasmagoria, Seneca Review, Rattle, Whiskey Island, among others. He has also published seven books of translations from the Hungarian, including Dancing Embers (2002), a book of Kányádi translations from Twisted Spoon Press. A volume of his own poetry, Homing Poems, is now available from Iniquity Press.

Laura Solomon (poetry) was born in 1976 in Birmingham, Alabama, and spent her childhood in various small towns across the state before moving to Georgia at sixteen. She studied at the University of Georgia and University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Her publications include the books Bivouac (Slope Editions 2002) and Blue and Red Things (forthcoming: Ugly Duckling Presse 2007), the chapbook Letters by which Sisters Will Know Brothers (Katalanche Press 2005), and Haiku des Pierres / Haiku of Stones, by Pierre Converset, a translation from the French with Sika Fakambi (Apogee Press, 2006). Laura's poems have been translated into French, German, Italian, Slovenian and Spanish, and have appeared in journals throughout North America and Europe. Currently, she lives in Philadelphia.

see more at www.calquezine.blogspot.com=

↑ Index

535. angela vasquez-giroux

Re: poems of PEACE and war

Fri 26 Jan 2007

This is a great thread.

My two cents (for now):

I loathe "poetry of witness"--I don't want poets speculating about the war, or what it must be like, or how their experiences are somehow akin to the experiences of people living in actual warzones (see: Jorie Graham), which i think is just beyond insulting to the ACTUAL people living through these nightmares.

What I want (this is the activist in me) is for us to stop glossing over the war, or academizing it, or making it aesthetically beautiful, and look at it for what it is. And DO something. I hate the "you should really care about this" genre of poems that seems to be coming from our Harvard-and-Yale appointed poets.

I don't buy that war is necessary--in cases, justified as a last resort (read: a defensive maneuver) to stop genocide, etc. I don't buy that this war has anything in common with the "great" "necessary" wars of the past. I don't buy that there is anything natural about killing someone. This doesn't make me a pacifist--I'm not willing to placate a monster to save a life, either. I'm advocating a return to rationality--seeing the world for what it is. What if, for example, instead of invading the Middle East to control oil, which we are horribly dependent on, we realized that oil is a fixed resource and developed a renewable energy portfolio? As far as I know, no wars ever started over windmills...

Why are the "great" poets of today less willing to call a thing what it is--a bloody mess--in favor of giving a long digressionist talk? Why is Jorie Graham writing a book about Normandy, and making something awful into something beautiful, when there is something really awful that needs to be shown for what it is?

I feel like we're part of Gulliver's Travels, poets and artists who live in an alternate reality where we pretend this isn't happening by turning it into something else, namely, a poem.

Angela

On 1/26/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Philip,
>
> Thanks for your thoughtful reply.
>
> It's not that I believe "there is no point in thinking about what is the > beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war." On the contrary,
> I find many poets resist the topic, preferring to default to a > universalist, pacifist, "why can't we all just live in peace and make > art?" position. In this admittedly seductive default position, questions > of war and peace never get addressed. We get slogans and hype. From > slogans and hype, one can't really try to identify the relationship > between peace and war, because war is always bad and peace is always > good and people who advocate war are always bad and people who advocate > peace are always good. Good versus evil, and extending the banal > dualism, hip versus unhip.
>
> You get Curtis Blow lyrics: WAR .... what's it good for...absolutely > nothing! And people don't question the slogan and hype. People don't > consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and ended > their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the advance of > more liberal societies over more repressive ones. War bad, peace good, > and anyone who says otherwise is an evil asshole. More slogans and hype.

>
> Further, one can credibly argue that war is the natural state of > mankind, and peace is the brief period of calm following the total > defeat of major powers. It's not like we have peace as the status quo, > and then some tyrants and political monsters come along and make war;
> rather we have war and more war, until one side is so thoroughly > defeated there is a lull we call "peace." The question becomes how to > extend that interval of peace, and one cannot approach that question > with slogans and hype, by denying that war is our continuum and peace > the exception.
>
> Finally, we tend to respect the opinions of writers who have been in > war, not merely because they can provide gruesome and vivid descriptions > from experience, but because that experience has taken them beyond > slogans and hype. Tolstoy, for example, served as an officer in the > artillery during the Crimean War, and his _War and Peace_ argues for an > acceptance of the irrational nature of the universe, of the here and > now. His pacifism was earned, and not merely a sort of party uniform or > fashion statement.
>

↑ Index

536. Ruth Lepson

Re: poems of PEACE and war

Fri 26 Jan 2007

I feel this way abt Carolyn Forche. When Anne Sexton took her life, Denise Levertov wrote that Anne was a victim & that Latin Am revolutionaries were heroes-- bec Denise was worried that young poets wd take Anne as a role model. Actually, Denise was a role model to me in many ways & this was the one thing she wrote I had a hard time w/ bec she particularized it to Anne, who had just died. Also remember Denise getting furious at a poet who used napalm as a metaphor. Eliot Weinberger criticized a poets against the war reading many yrs ago--he felt poets shd act not just write poems abt war.

Ruth L.

On 1/26/07 3:26 PM, "angela vasquez-giroux"
<[redacted]> wrote:

> This is a great thread.

My two cents (for now):

I loathe "poetry of witness"--I don't want poets speculating about the war, or what it must be like, or how their experiences are somehow akin to the experiences of people living in actual warzones (see: Jorie Graham), which i think is just beyond insulting to the ACTUAL people living through these nightmares.

What I want (this is the activist in me) is for us to stop glossing over the war, or academizing it, or making it aesthetically beautiful, and look at it for what it is. And DO something. I hate the "you should really care about this" genre of poems that seems to be coming from our Harvard-and-Yale appointed poets.

I don't buy that war is necessary--in cases, justified as a last resort (read: a defensive maneuver) to stop genocide, etc. I don't buy that this war has anything in common with the "great" "necessary" wars of the past. I don't buy that there is anything natural about killing someone. This doesn't make me a pacifist--I'm not willing to placate a monster to save a life, either. I'm advocating a return to rationality--seeing the world for what it is. What if, for example, instead of invading the Middle East to control oil, which we are horribly dependent on, we realized that oil is a fixed resource and developed a renewable energy portfolio? As far as I know, no wars ever started over windmills...

Why are the "great" poets of today less willing to call a thing what it is--a bloody mess--in favor of giving a long digressionist talk? Why is Jorie Graham writing a book about Normandy, and making something awful into something beautiful, when there is something really awful that needs to be shown for what it is?

I feel like we're part of Gulliver's Travels, poets and artists who live in an alternate reality where we pretend this isn't happening by turning it into something else, namely, a poem.

Angela

On 1/26/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:

Philip,

Thanks for your thoughtful reply.

It's not that I believe "there is no point in thinking about what is the beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war." On the contrary, I find many poets resist the topic, preferring to default to a universalist, pacifist, "why can't we all just live in peace and make art?" position. In this admittedly seductive default position, questions > of war and peace never get addressed. We get slogans and hype. From slogans and hype, one can't really try to identify the relationship between peace and war, because war is always bad and peace is always good and people who advocate war are always bad and people who advocate peace are always good. Good versus evil, and extending the banal dualism, hip versus unhip.

>
> You get Curtis Blow lyrics: WAR .... what's it good for...absolutely nothing! And people don't question the slogan and hype. People don't consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and ended their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the advance of more liberal societies over more repressive ones. War bad, peace good, and anyone who says otherwise is an evil asshole. More slogans and hype.
>
> Further, one can credibly argue that war is the natural state of mankind, and peace is the brief period of calm following the total defeat of major powers. It's not like we have peace as the status quo, and then some tyrants and political monsters come along and make war; rather we have war and more war, until one side is so thoroughly defeated there is a lull we call "peace." The question becomes how to extend that interval of peace, and one cannot approach that question with slogans and hype, by denying that war is our continuum and peace the exception.
>
> Finally, we tend to respect the opinions of writers who have been in war, not merely because they can provide gruesome and vivid descriptions from experience, but because that experience has taken them beyond slogans and hype. Tolstoy, for example, served as an officer in the artillery during the Crimean War, and his _War and Peace_ argues for an acceptance of the irrational nature of the universe, of the here and now. His pacifism was earned, and not merely a sort of party uniform or fashion statement.

↑ Index

537. Christopher Leland Winks

Re: poems of PEACE and war

Fri 26 Jan 2007

Let's give some uncomfortable facts and see if Eric really believes what he said after they're presented:

In order,

People don't consider that war ended slavery in America,

Andrew Johnson's 1877 compromise that ended Reconstruction (which could well have put an end to slavery on more than a juridical level -- unless Eric is an adherent of the D.W. Griffith theory of history) returned African Americans to a state of disenfranchisement that required a civil rights movement in the 1960s to alleviate, and that Katrina and its aftermath, not to mention the disproportionate presence of African Americans in prison, showed to be far from over.

> defeated the Nazis and >ended their extermination camps

And in 1945, not long after the triumph of the Allies over the Axis (sealed by the bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki), the French military exterminated an entire village -- Setif -- in Algeria. Meanwhile, ex-Nazis became valued assets to the U.S. government in building the space program and (hello, Klaus Barbie) carrying out repression in Latin America.

> genocides, and allowed the advance of more >liberal societies over more repressive ones.

Definitions, please? "More liberal societies"? Like Guatemala? Pinochet's Chile? Marcos's Philippines? RENAMO in Mozambique? The contras in Nicaragua? ARENA death squads in El Salvador?

Doubtless Eric would sneer at Martin Luther King for his pacifism, but we do well to remember his words "My country is the greatest purveyor of violence in the world." So it was then, and so it remains.

↑ Index

538. Charlotte Mandel
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Angela - Are we to feel guilty because we create art out of pain or grief or horror? I don't countenance some of the "academizing" of war, as you put it, by poets in safe circumstances, but a poet must work out of where she is, what's perceived, emotions lived with. Somehow, I must try to work anger and despair and love of humanity into words trying to say it "true" - how else to stay sane? And don't forget: many of us poets are activists in the political zone, no less than in our art. Best, Charlotte

On Jan 26, 2007, at 3:26 PM, angela vasquez-giroux wrote:

This is a great thread.

My two cents (for now):

I loathe "poetry of witness"--I don't want poets speculating about the war, or what it must be like, or how their experiences are somehow akin to the experiences of people living in actual warzones (see: Jorie Graham), which i think is just beyond insulting to the ACTUAL people living through these nightmares.

What I want (this is the activist in me) is for us to stop glossing over the war, or academizing it, or making it aesthetically beautiful, and look at it for what it is. And DO something. I hate the "you should really care about this" genre of poems that seems to be coming from our Harvard-and-Yale appointed poets.

I don't buy that war is necessary--in cases, justified as a last resort (read: a defensive maneuver) to stop genocide, etc. I don't buy that this war has anything in common with the "great" "necessary" wars of the past. I don't buy that there is anything natural about killing someone. This doesn't make me a pacifist--I'm not willing to placate a monster to save a life, either. I'm advocating a return to rationality--seeing the world for what it is. What if, for example, instead of invading the Middle East to control oil, which we are horribly dependent on, we realized that oil is a fixed resource and developed a renewable energy portfolio? As far as I know, no wars ever started over windmills...

Why are the "great" poets of today less willing to call a thing what it is--a bloody mess--in favor of giving a long digressionist talk? Why is Jorie Graham writing a book about Normandy, and making something awful into something beautiful, when there is something really awful that needs to be shown for what it is?

I feel like we're part of Gulliver's Travels, poets and artists who live in an alternate reality where we pretend this isn't happening by turning it into something else, namely, a poem.

Angela

On 1/26/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Philip,
>
> Thanks for your thoughtful reply.
>
> It's not that I believe "there is no point in thinking about what > is the > beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war." On the > contrary,

> I find many poets resist the topic, preferring to default to a > universalist, pacifist, "why can't we all just live in peace and make > art?" position. In this admittedly seductive default position, > questions
> of war and peace never get addressed. We get slogans and hype. From > slogans and hype, one can't really try to identify the relationship > between peace and war, because war is always bad and peace is always > good and people who advocate war are always bad and people who > advocate
> peace are always good. Good versus evil, and extending the banal > dualism, hip versus unhip.
>
> You get Curtis Blow lyrics: WAR .... what's it good for...absolutely > nothing! And people don't question the slogan and hype. People don't > consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and > ended
> their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the > advance of > more liberal societies over more repressive ones. War bad, peace good, > and anyone who says otherwise is an evil asshole. More slogans and > hype.
>
> Further, one can credibly argue that war is the natural state of > mankind, and peace is the brief period of calm following the total > defeat of major powers. It's not like we have peace as the status quo, > and then some tyrants and political monsters come along and make war;
> rather we have war and more war, until one side is so thoroughly > defeated there is a lull we call "peace." The question becomes how to > extend that interval of peace, and one cannot approach that question > with slogans and hype, by denying that war is our continuum and peace
> the exception.
>
> Finally, we tend to respect the opinions of writers who have been in > war, not merely because they can provide gruesome and vivid > descriptions
> from experience, but because that experience has taken them beyond > slogans and hype. Tolstoy, for example, served as an officer in the > artillery during the Crimean War, and his _War and Peace_ argues > for an > acceptance of the irrational nature of the universe, of the here and > now. His pacifism was earned, and not merely a sort of party > uniform or

> fashion statement.
>

↑ Index

539. angela vasquez-giroux
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Charlotte,

No, we are not to feel guilty. But there has to be something BEYOND that, right? I don't really believe in writing political poems--I wrote an entire chapbook of poems about the pain and horror and loss and distance I experienced when my sister was sent to Iraq. But I spent my time working to get BushCo out of power, etc. This is what I mean--if Jorie Graham (I pick on her because she was so great 10 years ago) stopped making things like Normandy into pretty lyrical avante-garde/academic poems, and started using her position, etc to DO SOMETHING or MAKE SOMEONE AWARE...that would be infinitely better than telling us that saving a bird makes her like a person in Iraq. It's insulting.

I guess my point is this: it's not enough to talk about it or write about it--the great poets of the 60's/Vietnam Era DID something about it. Why aren't our "great poets" doing anything?

Angela

ps--I agree that we write from our experience. And we write best that way.

On 1/26/07, Charlotte Mandel <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Angela -
> Are we to feel guilty because we create art out of pain or grief or > horror? I don't countenance some of the "academizing" of war, as you > put it, by poets in safe circumstances, but a poet must work out of > where she is, what's perceived, emotions lived with. Somehow, I must > try to work anger and despair and love of humanity into words trying > to say it "true" - how else to stay sane?
> And don't forget: many of us poets are activists in the political > zone, no less than in our art.
> Best,
> Charlotte
>
> On Jan 26, 2007, at 3:26 PM, angela vasquez-giroux wrote:
>

> This is a great thread.
>
> My two cents (for now):
>
> I loathe "poetry of witness"--I don't want poets speculating about > the war, > or what it must be like, or how their experiences are somehow akin to
> the > experiences of people living in actual warzones (see: Jorie Graham), > which i > think is just beyond insulting to the ACTUAL people living through these > nightmares.
>
> What I want (this is the activist in me) is for us to stop glossing > over the > war, or academizing it, or making it aesthetically beautiful, and > look at it > for what it is. And DO something. I hate the "you should really > care about > this" genre of poems that seems to be coming from our Harvard-and-Yale > appointed poets.
>
> I don't buy that war is necessary--in cases, justified as a last resort > (read: a defensive maneuver) to stop genocide, etc. I don't buy that > this > war has anything in common with the "great" "necessary" wars of the > past. I > don't buy that there is anything natural about killing someone. This > doesn't make me a pacifist--I'm not willing to placate a monster to > save a > life, either. I'm advocating a return to rationality--seeing the > world for > what it is. What if, for example, instead of invading the Middle > East to > control oil, which we are horribly dependent on, we realized that oil > is a > fixed resource and developed a renewable energy portfolio? As far as I > know, no wars ever started over windmills...
>
> Why are the "great" poets of today less willing to call a thing what it > is--a bloody mess--in favor of giving a long digressionist talk? Why is > Jorie Graham writing a book about Normandy, and making something > awful into > something beautiful, when there is something really awful that needs > to be > shown for what it is?

>
> I feel like we're part of Gulliver's Travels, poets and artists who > live in > an alternate reality where we pretend this isn't happening by turning it > into something else, namely, a poem.
>
> Angela
>
> On 1/26/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
> >
> > Philip,
> >
> > Thanks for your thoughtful reply.
> >
> > It's not that I believe "there is no point in thinking about what
> > is the > > beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war." On the > > contrary,
> > I find many poets resist the topic, preferring to default to a > > universalist, pacifist, "why can't we all just live in peace and make > > art?" position. In this admittedly seductive default position, > > questions
> > of war and peace never get addressed. We get slogans and hype. From > > slogans and hype, one can't really try to identify the relationship > > between peace and war, because war is always bad and peace is always > > good and people who advocate war are always bad and people who > > advocate
> > peace are always good. Good versus evil, and extending the banal > > dualism, hip versus unhip.
> >
> > You get Curtis Blow lyrics: WAR .... what's it good for...absolutely > > nothing! And people don't question the slogan and hype. People don't > > consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and > > ended
> > their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the > > advance of > > more liberal societies over more repressive ones. War bad, peace good, > > and anyone who says otherwise is an evil asshole. More slogans and > > hype.

> >
> > Further, one can credibly argue that war is the natural state of > > mankind, and peace is the brief period of calm following the total > > defeat of major powers. It's not like we have peace as the status quo, > > and then some tyrants and political monsters come along and make war;
> > rather we have war and more war, until one side is so thoroughly > > defeated there is a lull we call "peace." The question becomes how to > > extend that interval of peace, and one cannot approach that question > > with slogans and hype, by denying that war is our continuum and peace
> > the exception.
> >
> > Finally, we tend to respect the opinions of writers who have been in > > war, not merely because they can provide gruesome and vivid
> > descriptions
> > from experience, but because that experience has taken them beyond > > slogans and hype. Tolstoy, for example, served as an officer in the > > artillery during the Crimean War, and his _War and Peace_ argues
> > for an > > acceptance of the irrational nature of the universe, of the here and > > now. His pacifism was earned, and not merely a sort of party > > uniform or
> > fashion statement.
> >
>

↑ Index

540. Christopher Leland Winks

Re: poems of PEACE and war

Fri 26 Jan 2007

Angela, you make excellent points here. Yet I don't recall (and I'm old enough to do so) many fine poets from the Vietnam war era getting arrested (maybe Ginsberg? or Ed Sanders?) or giving up poetry for full- time agitation. Certainly the contributors to "Where Is Vietnam?" obviously thought that poetry had something to offer the movement on its own terms. Not all of the poems in that collection were successful -- far from it -- and even the greats like Levertov and Duncan ran into conceptual and ethical difficulties in their anti-war poems (see Nate Mackey's excellent essay "Gassire's Lute: Robert Duncan's Vietnam War Poems" in his collection "Paracritical Hinge"). Obviously, these problems are of a far more significant order than the complacencies of Jorie Graham.

Kenneth Rexroth wrote some marvelous anti-war poetry, and he helped persecuted Japanese-Americans in the Bay Area during World War II. From an earlier generation, Arthur Cravan (who called himself a deserter from nineteen countries) and Jacques Vaché gave militarism a sound thrashing in their scarce writings -- neither of them was an "activist" in the narrow sense. Benjamin Peret's "Je ne mange pas de ce pain-la" also set a standard for anti-bourgeois, anti-war poetic invective. Even within "traditional" verse forms, there's Wilfred Owen and Siegfried Sassoon, both of whom were soldiers and not political activists at all.

I guess the point is that one does what one can, but it's also the case that we need to find new languages of opposition, neither sentimental nor pie-card sloganeering in nature. And, given the continued sway of what Guy Debord called the "integrated spectacle," that is becoming increasingly difficult. But it's no less urgent.=

↑ Index

541. Eric Dickey

Re: poems of PEACE and war

Fri 26 Jan 2007

Yes, great thread.

pacifism kicks ass

--- Matthew Baiotto <[redacted]> wrote:

> Eric wrote:
>
> >People don't consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and >ended their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the advance of more >liberal societies over more repressive ones.
>
> Do you seriously believe this?
>
> Eric <[redacted]> wrote:
> Philip,
>
> Thanks for your thoughtful reply.
>
> It's not that I believe "there is no point in thinking about what is the > beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war." On the contrary,
> I find many poets resist the topic, preferring to default to a universalist, pacifist, "why can't we all just live in peace and make art?" position. In this admittedly seductive default position, questions of war and peace never get addressed. We get slogans and hype. From slogans and hype, one can't really try to identify the relationship between peace and war, because war is always bad and peace is always good and people who advocate war are always bad and people who advocate peace are always good. Good versus evil, and extending the banal

dualism, hip versus unhip.

You get Curtis Blow lyrics: WAR .... what's it good for...absolutely nothing! And people don't question the slogan and hype. People don't consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and ended their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the advance of more liberal societies over more repressive ones.
War bad, peace good,
and anyone who says otherwise is an evil asshole.
More slogans and hype.

Further, one can credibly argue that war is the natural state of mankind, and peace is the brief period of calm following the total defeat of major powers. It's not like we have peace as the status quo,
and then some tyrants and political monsters come along and make war;
rather we have war and more war, until one side is so thoroughly defeated there is a lull we call "peace." The question becomes how to extend that interval of peace, and one cannot approach that question with slogans and hype, by denying that war is our continuum and peace
the exception.

> Finally, we tend to respect the opinions of writers who have been in > war, not merely because they can provide gruesome and vivid descriptions
> from experience, but because that experience has taken them beyond > slogans and hype. Tolstoy, for example, served as an officer in the > artillery during the Crimean War, and his _War and Peace_ argues for an > acceptance of the irrational nature of the universe, of the here and > now. His pacifism was earned, and not merely a sort of party uniform or > fashion statement.

___
Want to start your own business?
Learn how on Yahoo! Small Business.
http://smallbusiness.yahoo.com/r-index

↑ Index

542. Stephen Vincent
Semina Show Review
Fri 26 Jan 2007

http://www.nytimes.com/2007/01/26/arts/design/26semi.html?_r=1&adxnnl=1&ref= arts?8dpc&pagewanted=2&adxnnlx=1169846589-Fu7hJqi69BBv9vb0Wbz4pQ

In case you missed it,Holland Cotter has a sweet and enthusiastic review of the NYC version of the traveling Semina museum show in today's NY Times.

Semina magazine and the culture about it was a mid-century seed-bed of work of mainly Los Angeles and San Francisco based artists and poets. It is accompanied by a very good catalog, including a smart essay among several, by Steve Fredman - whose critical work on poets is probably familiar to many on this list.

Enjoy,

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

543. Gerald Schwartz
Re: Semina Show Review
Fri 26 Jan 2007

I was also heatened by Cotter's explication of Berman and his work and this exibit of an all too often forgotten culture-jammer. If only some of today's efforts packed in as much! Oh, Antiseptic now...

Gerald

http://www.nytimes.com/2007/01/26/arts/design/26semi.html?_r=1&adxnnl=1&ref=> arts?8dpc&pagewanted=2&adxnnlx=1169846589-Fu7hJqi69BBv9vb0Wbz4pQ>> In case you missed it,Holland Cotter has a sweet and enthusiastic reviewof> the NYC version of the traveling Semina museum show in today's NY Times.>> Semina magazine and the culture about it was a mid-century seed-bed ofwork> of mainly Los Angeles and San Francisco based artists and poets. It is> accompanied by a very good catalog, including a smart essay among several,> by Steve Fredman - whose critical work on poets is probably familiar tomany> on this list.>> Enjoy,>> Stephen V> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

544. Eric
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

This is a great thread, and I'm much less interested in defending my own provisional notions than in reading what others think.

I'll respond to Christopher anyway, who objects to my contention that some wars have good outcomes.

To my statement that "People don't consider that war ended slavery in America," Christopher responds by lumping the long history of slow civil rights progress.

The Slavers wouldn't have stopped without war and that is certain. The progress started with conflict, hit a milestone with the Civil War conflict, continued through the conflict of the late '50s/early '60s Civil Rights actions, and continues through conflict today. That it's far from over does not invalidate my point that war, in truth, made the progress possible.

To my statement that war "defeated the Nazis and ended their extermination camps," Chris again lumps all manner of subsequent brutality and peripetia, as if to invalidate the point that Auschwitz was closed because the Nazis were defeated in war.

Finally, to my point that war "allowed the advance of more liberal societies over more repressive ones," Chris asks:

> Definitions, please? "More liberal societies"?

Yes, I was initially thinking of the ancient Greeks defeating the Persians in the 5th century BC, and thus continuing a society that advanced reason, science, democracy, medicine, and individuality over a society that emphasized Emperor Worship.

However, go back to the Allies defeating the Axis sixty-two years ago. Flawed as the US or any modern government is, ours is a better polis than the Nazis or Japanese Emperor would have allowed. War made that possible.

↑ Index

545. Marcus Bales
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

On 26 Jan 2007 at 15:42, Christopher Leland Winks wrote:
> Doubtless Eric would sneer at Martin Luther King for his pacifism,
> but > we do well to remember his words "My country is the greatest > purveyor
> of violence in the world." So it was then, and so it remains.

Sneer at it? No, I hope he embraces it -- no nation or people can be a "great power" who are not the greatest purveyor of violence in the world at any given time in history. Of course, you may argue, if you will, that you don't want to be part of a nation or people with aspirations to be, or that is, a great power. But if that's the case, my next question is: Are you a US citizen?

But on a list full of postmodernists, on what grounds can you possibly argue that war or violence is wrong or bad? Isn't the essence of the postmodern world view that every opinion is just as good as every other opinion? How, starting from there, do you say that anything is wrong or bad?

Marcus

↑ Index

546. Alan Sondheim

arcs poetica

Fri 26 Jan 2007

(a poem on poetics for a project, comments welcome)

arcs poetica

relationships among her poems and otheration artifacts, but also createseration variants, etc. her poems stutteredation - were produced individually or losteration is their inertia of the poem. itteration doesn't open her poems, perhaps, soteration much as foreclose upon her body. anderation poems ever written will becomeration obsolete or forgotten as wonderfuleration reads. but they don't work at the poemseration or read other poets; there is the whiteration surface of a mallarme poem or theteration smooth unstriated line itself, theteration literary text, the poem text, the texteration of love and favorites, incipienteration knowledge of authors not yet borneration.
there's a determinate fashionation, permitting poetry but not embarrassmenteration or at least one of the issues oferation poetry: that of its materiality - itteration opens upon a multi-dimensional grideration, within which poetry itself - of theteration poet - is enormous and indefinite, justeration as the hypertext itself to comeeration will have no poets and no philosopherseration, something i praise. prose anderation poetry are generated for the first timeration with electronic and wilderation interpretation, and a poetics of theteration body that is at a variance based on ateration style largely dominated by science; theteration use of "poeticized" or convolutedation prose could be seen as this: a lot ofteration my students have written poetry andteration want to be read. but they don't work atteration

the poems or read other poets; theteration poetry? nothing more than "poetic faitheration."

an origin, and "faith" with a gestureration invading _beyond_ the poetic witheration its exhausted poetics, become a lasteration resort, the conjunction ofteration interpretations elicited by a hypertexteration modeled by the poet [...] what iteration remember about the poets and theteration trouble i had with them was poets abouteration these poets. poets trick me a lot and iteration always fall for them, they ateration least published some things as baderation poetry. now i look back and see poetryation.
he was never particularly supportiveration, part of a group i viewed all of themeration reading all of them. i could neveration believe in poetry ever again, includingteraion my own; i can never use `poetryation' without shuddering. i get suspicious ofteration poetics which always seems to invokeration language or a pause, a witticism in ateration foreign language. i am a pariah for theteration poetsation.

↑ Index

547. Stephen Vincent

Re: POETRY Seeks Associate Editor

Fri 26 Jan 2007

> ³The position offers a competitive salary and excellent benefits.²

I like this particular point. I mean it cannot be about a ³competition² among salaries of editors of small press poetry magazines and book publishers! (Who are probably getting an ironic ¹God loves me¹ chuckle out of this one)

Let¹s hope they are using the New Yorker¹s editorial salaries as a baseline.

And let¹s hope a limber, tough character with imagination gets the gig and editorially reshapes that modest appearing, extraordinarily well funded palace. It has the capacity to blow some good air out here if one can be at all optimistic.

Drop that PhD Jen and go for it! (Well)

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

548. Deborah A. Meadows
Re: Meadows' new book of poetry
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Green Integer Press has brought out Thin Gloves, a new collection of poetry by Deborah Meadows. Her collection from Shearsman Press (UK) entitled involutia is also available.

↑ Index

549. Halvard Johnson
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Oh, Marcus, come on. You know we don't think your opinions are as good as anyone else's.

Hal

"If the brain were so simple we could understand it, we would be so simple we couldn't."
--Lyall Watson

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Jan 26, 2007, at 5:15 PM, Marcus Bales wrote:

> On 26 Jan 2007 at 15:42, Christopher Leland Winks wrote:
> Doubtless Eric would sneer at Martin Luther King for his pacifism, but > we do well to remember his words "My country is the greatest purveyor > of violence in the world." So it was then, and so it remains.
>
> Sneer at it? No, I hope he embraces it -- no nation or people can be > a "great power" who are not the greatest purveyor of violence in the > world at any given time in history. Of course, you may argue, if you > will, that you don't want to be part of a nation or people with aspirations to be, or that is, a great power. But if that's the case, my next question is: Are you a US citizen?

>
> But on a list full of postmodernists, on what grounds can you possibly argue that war or violence is wrong or bad? Isn't the essence of the postmodern world view that every opinion is just as good as every other opinion? How, starting from there, do you say that anything is wrong or bad?
>
> Marcus

↑ Index

550. Alexander Jorgensen

Hey there - Ew! Poetry is - Ew!!

Fri 26 Jan 2007

---

http://www.kontraband.com/show/show.asp?ID=5454&NEXTID=0&PREVID=5422&DISPLAYORDER=20070125190414&CAT=movies&NSFW=0&page=1&genre=0&rating=nsfw_sfw

Poetry is KA-BOOM! sd AlexJ

_____

Do you Yahoo!?
Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.
http://new.mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

551. David-Baptiste Chirot

Re: poems of PEACE and war/Big Bridge/blog re peace & war/simone weil

Fri 26 Jan 2007

A great essay on poetry, war, pacifism, and also example in her life of chnage from pacifism to doing work in england contributing to war effort--and one might also say a form of martyr as lived on diet that french occupied people were and starved to death basically--Simone Weil's essay "The Iliad: A Poem of Force"

In the issue of Big Bridge which just went on line are some excellent insights, thoughts and much backround history also in essays by John Bradley, Philip

Metres and Murat Nemet-Nejat and also d-b chirot; also an essay/review of Kent Johnson's "Lyric Poetry After Auschwitz" by J Beer

http://www.bigbridge.org

at my blogspot is an ongoing international Mail Art/Visual Poetry Call "For Lebanon, For Palestine Human Rights-Peace-Liberty" and posters for Peace marches, art work by many artists and my own work and also photos from Lebanon and Palestine--also various forms of visual/sound poetry from other eras and found art and art brut etc-essay by Amiri Baraka---essays in archives--http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com and many links and more are being added-- am involved with various Peace action and Solidarity groups, local grass roots civil rights groups (LGBT, Literacy etc)--though have been involved long in past with groups that did 'propaganda of the deed"--etc--so something very complex and not easily answered without lot of time, study and action--thoght and reflectionand maybe an impossible question, that is, depending on person unsolvable in an aboslute sense-- "out of the struggle with oneself ismade poetry" writes yeats but that struggle can be to afce peace & violence existing inside oneself and how to create something out of the goings on among the questionings- Milwaukee also is lot of involvement with Venezuela as we have a sister city there and also Chiapas via Sts Peter and Paul Parish (also does a lot of immigration issues work) earlier today i sent a post with lots of info, sites, links etc for March tomorrow , petitions, etc and how to be virtual part of the march if can't attend in person--

there are a lot of reasons for maybe poets not seeming more involved--poet and artist friends from other countries write ad askabout this--debates abt form, general atmosphere of silencing of protests, reports on them and speaking out in general in the media and among peers since 9/11 and now controversy with President Carter's book, very conservative society over all starting with reagan--protest was "unhip" and etc--breaking of the unions leading to aggresive attacks on idea of people working together for a common good or cause, pitting of one group against another to ignore shared problems and the now three Wars without End--Poverty, Drugs, Terrorism--all aimed at criminalization of various parts of society--twenty -five years of breaking down idea of resistance in public sphere--maybe now the tide will start to turn a bit--there aren't just the wars aboard america is inovled in , allied with--there is a war in americaa on americans and residents also--though largely ignored and distorted and continually worsened--Katrina for alittle bit exposed some ofit for all tosee--but he world people glimsped briefly is one a huge number of americans live--let alone is country with the most people in prison in the world--the drug problem is escalating at huge rate--not among young but among males over forty--persoanlly i know six people dead in lessthan amonth from the new heroinfrom afghanistan, many many more in hospitals and jails--health care system is basically becoming a form of eugenics--in many ways--smashing aprt of communities by poverty, drugs, crime constant cutting and neglect--infrastructures taht are rotting and worthless in man areas--latest news on LA being more violent than whole states, or group of small states--lotof due to the massive influx of drugs being introduced into communities deliberately-- and so on and on and on-- so is plenty of material al around one for activism of all sorts, voluneteer work --and use in poetry and art work--various poets and groups and styles etc don't but doesn't mean others can't find their own way in it, create new ways of it-- speaking out is discouraged a good deal from many sides yet supposedly one still has the right to--so go ahead and do it anyway--find others ways not yet thought of or tried-- also anti-war poetry and art despite the stereotype of it, isn't non-innovative in form--historically one of the most explosive and innovative with huge influence in the present--Dada--was anti-war--anti-imperialism, anti-elitism, andnotice that dada is an internatioanl movement which in each city and country it was active, had a local charcter of its own-- Shinkichi Takahashi the great Zen master,essayist and poet--was Japan's first dadaist and dada poet--for awhile the only one--then joined by others--dada very aggressive butanti-war--like American hard Core music anti-racism,anti-reagan--etc etc-

> From: angela vasquez-giroux <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: poems of PEACE and war
> Date: Fri, 26 Jan 2007 15:56:00 -0500
>
> Charlotte,
>
> No, we are not to feel guilty. But there has to be something BEYOND that, > right? I don't really believe in writing political poems--I wrote an > entire > chapbook of poems about the pain and horror and loss and distance I > experienced when my sister was sent to Iraq. But I spent my time working
> to > get BushCo out of power, etc. This is what I mean--if Jorie Graham (I pick > on her because she was so great 10 years ago) stopped making things like > Normandy into pretty lyrical avante-garde/academic poems, and started using > her position, etc to DO SOMETHING or MAKE SOMEONE AWARE...that would be > infinitely better than telling us that saving a bird makes her like a > person
> in Iraq. It's insulting.
>
> I guess my point is this: it's not enough to talk about it or write about > it--the great poets of the 60's/Vietnam Era DID something about it. Why aren't our "great poets" doing anything?

Angela

ps--I agree that we write from our experience. And we write best that way.

On 1/26/07, Charlotte Mandel <[redacted]> wrote:

Angela -
Are we to feel guilty because we create art out of pain or grief or horror? I don't countenance some of the "academizing" of war, as you put it, by poets in safe circumstances, but a poet must work out of where she is, what's perceived, emotions lived with. Somehow, I must try to work anger and despair and love of humanity into words trying to say it "true" - how else to stay sane?
And don't forget: many of us poets are activists in the political zone, no less than in our art.
Best,
Charlotte

On Jan 26, 2007, at 3:26 PM, angela vasquez-giroux wrote:

This is a great thread.

My two cents (for now):

I loathe "poetry of witness"--I don't want poets speculating about the war, or what it must be like, or how their experiences are somehow akin to the experiences of people living in actual warzones (see: Jorie Graham), which i think is just beyond insulting to the ACTUAL people living through these nightmares.

What I want (this is the activist in me) is for us to stop glossing over the war, or academizing it, or making it aesthetically beautiful, and look at it for what it is. And DO something. I hate the "you should really care about this" genre of poems that seems to be coming from our Harvard-and-Yale appointed poets.

I don't buy that war is necessary--in cases, justified as a last resort (read: a defensive maneuver) to stop genocide, etc. I don't buy that

this war has anything in common with the "great" "necessary" wars of the past. I don't buy that there is anything natural about killing someone. This doesn't make me a pacifist--I'm not willing to placate a monster to save a life, either. I'm advocating a return to rationality--seeing the world for what it is. What if, for example, instead of invading the Middle East to control oil, which we are horribly dependent on, we realized that oil is a fixed resource and developed a renewable energy portfolio? As far as I know, no wars ever started over windmills...

Why are the "great" poets of today less willing to call a thing what it is--a bloody mess--in favor of giving a long digressionist talk? Why is Jorie Graham writing a book about Normandy, and making something awful into something beautiful, when there is something really awful that needs to be shown for what it is?

I feel like we're part of Gulliver's Travels, poets and artists who live in an alternate reality where we pretend this isn't happening by turning it into something else, namely, a poem.

Angela

On 1/26/07, Eric <[redacted]> wrote:

Philip,

Thanks for your thoughtful reply.

*It's not that I believe "there is no point in thinking about what is the beyond of war, the relationship between peace and war." On the contrary,
I find many poets resist the topic, preferring to default to a universalist, pacifist, "why can't we all just live in peace and make art?" position. In this admittedly seductive default position, questions of war and peace never get addressed. We get slogans and hype. From slogans and hype, one can't really try to identify the relationship between peace and war, because war is always bad and peace is always good and people who advocate war are always bad and people who*

> advocate
> peace are always good. Good versus evil, and extending the banal dualism, hip versus unhip.
>
> You get Curtis Blow lyrics: WAR .... what's it good for...absolutely nothing! And people don't question the slogan and hype. People don't consider that war ended slavery in America, defeated the Nazis and ended > their extermination camps, halted genocides, and allowed the advance of > more liberal societies over more repressive ones. War bad, peace good, and anyone who says otherwise is an evil asshole. More slogans and hype.
>
> Further, one can credibly argue that war is the natural state of mankind, and peace is the brief period of calm following the total defeat of major powers. It's not like we have peace as the status quo, and then some tyrants and political monsters come along and make war; rather we have war and more war, until one side is so thoroughly defeated there is a lull we call "peace." The question becomes how to extend that interval of peace, and one cannot approach that question with slogans and hype, by denying that war is our continuum and peace the exception.
>
> Finally, we tend to respect the opinions of writers who have been in war, not merely because they can provide gruesome and vivid descriptions > from experience, but because that experience has taken them beyond slogans and hype. Tolstoy, for example, served as an officer in the artillery during the Crimean War, and his _War and Peace_ argues for an > acceptance of the irrational nature of the universe, of the here and now. His pacifism was earned, and not merely a sort of party uniform or > fashion statement.

_____ Turn searches into helpful donations. Make your search count.
http://click4thecause.live.com/search/charity/default.aspx?source=hmemtagline_donation&FORM=WLMTAG

↑ Index

552. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: POETRY Seeks Associate Editor
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Might you have the address or e-mail for the position?

Regards,
Alexander Jorgensen

_____
___ Need Mail bonding? Go to the Yahoo! Mail Q&A for great tips from Yahoo! Answers users. http://answers.yahoo.com/dir/?link=list&sid=396546091

↑ Index

553. Edward Foster
Talisman
Fri 26 Jan 2007

—

↑ Index

554. Alan Sondheim
Re: Hyperrhiz.02 is out (fwd)
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Hybridizing gaming, video, dance, quilting, radio, and animation:

The Hyperrhiz.02 VIDEO issue is now online.

Featuring work from:

Craig Saper and Lynn Tomlinson
Sandy Baldwin
Alan Sondheim
Leo Kacenjar
Sandra Powers
Donna Kuhn

http://www.hyperrhiz.net/
Our cyborg technicians are standing by.

Helen J Burgess
[redacted]

↑ Index

555. Marcus Bales
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Fri 26 Jan 2007

Yeah, I know, Hal, which is why, of course, I know that you're all frauds and cons. Prosit!

Marcus

On 26 Jan 2007 at 18:39, Halvard Johnson wrote:

> Oh, Marcus, come on. You know we don't think
> your opinions are as good as anyone else's.
>
> Hal
>
> "If the brain were so simple we could understand
> it, we would be so simple we couldn't."
> --Lyall Watson
>
> Halvard Johnson
> ==========
> [redacted]
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
>
> On Jan 26, 2007, at 5:15 PM, Marcus Bales wrote:
>
> On 26 Jan 2007 at 15:42, Christopher Leland Winks wrote:
> Doubtless Eric would sneer at Martin Luther King for his pacifism,
> but > we do well to remember his words "My country is the greatest purveyor > of violence in the world." So it was then, and so it remains.
>
> Sneer at it? No, I hope he embraces it -- no nation or people can be > a "great power" who are not the greatest purveyor of violence in the > world at any given time in history. Of course, you may argue, if you > will, that you don't want to be part of a nation or people with > aspirations to be, or that is, a great power. But if that's the case, > my next question is: Are you a US citizen?

>
> But on a list full of postmodernists, on what grounds can you possibly argue that war or violence is wrong or bad? Isn't the essence of the postmodern world view that every opinion is just as > good as every other opinion? How, starting from there, do you say > that anything is wrong or bad?
>
> Marcus
>
> --
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG Free Edition.
> Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.10/651 - Release Date: 1/24/2007 6:48 PM

↑ Index

556. Jesse Glass

Invitation to Contribute to the John M. Bennett Wikipedia Page

Sat 27 Jan 2007

Just--please take a look at the wiki faq before writing!

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/John_M._Bennett or search from Wiki gate or through Google.

Esp. need information about mail art activities, ephemera, and performance/sound, Also, general clean-up. Thanks! Jess

↑ Index

557. Eireene Nealand

Poems of Peace and War: Precipitating Reality: Rebirth of the Author: From Wittgenstein to Zizek

Sat 27 Jan 2007

---

many welcomings of suggestions from somewhere inside of a big headache where i seem to be working on these questions again too. (although perhaps the best thing to say is that, in fact, i keep stopping to read more and more writing by skip fox. perhaps, yes, it's true, that is the only revolutionary act.)

e

***

Precipitating Reality: Rebirth of the Author: From Wittgenstein to Zizek: Projective Poetry (A reminder or something like that).

**

AXIOM 1:Those who say that they aren't writing politically fail to understand what politics is.

***

SUBJECTIVE CORRELATIVE 1: Many who think that they are writing politically are merely mouthing slogans and reproducing facts that have been handed down to them by the political systems that they pretend to oppose. Language poets dissolved themselves as authors specifically for the purpose of addressing this problem. (I think that it is Lyn Hejinian and Rosmarie Waldrop that I am speaking of here—perhaps Steve McCaffery too?). It was a noble project. It was a good start. But it seems that it is time for someone to stake out claims in these and all texts, to speak from them and speak for them so they live.

A friend of mine, Christian Peet, responded to GB's Orange Alert by posting a picture of a very old advertisement for California oranges. The woman in the picture looked a little bit like the scales of justice. She had oranges in both of her hands. I tried join into this song by leaving oranges out in the streets. We just wanted to call back the word orange into a body that could end world hunger, the kind of body that would speak with a tongue that could taste (and, when it bites itself, bleed).

Calling back He, She might be a good start towards calling back the word 'I'. It is a problem that I do not see any object that I and I can place in the street to call back the word, we. Will all of those marching bodies bring this word back?

Something interesting is going on there in that Russian poetry.

http://www.octopusmagazine.com/issue07/html/main.html

I think what Matvei writes about is the difficulty of saying 'I' and not meaning just any 'I' at which the word tries to point. When you use a name too, right along with the 'I' you are getting closer to bringing this word back to your body—in the sense that 'I' is a hole through which you can be fucked by language until you are pregnant with all of your speaking of it. Speaking it aloud (even if said silently with your body 'I' mean). You are giving it your body to use...I'm talking about the way women have for a long time (and men, oh yes, you have done it too, quite happily, I believe).

I'm sorry you have to take that underneath position, maybe the overman can understand from more interesting positions. But it's understanding that is required that someone be the ground where it gets sowed. That means coming together in such a way that it gets projected from us (see Marcel Duchamp). It is important that we get it out of us, that we give birth.

****

We are all hosting a medium sized university.

We are all hosting several big screen TVs.

Are our bellies big enough for a polis? Are we hungry enough for it yet?

I am speaking of that politics, which could give birth to polite or police.

***

Remember when we thought of speech as an act? But somehow sometimes the text was so exciting that somehow someone sometimes forgot that an act was a body, a will and a force. Erased that old author, fine, but hows about getting together them new bodies, mmmm? : the kind that can speak out and call forth? A whole new creature (ask the French creer if you can see what this means). This creature, parents will tell you, is not just a belief but a body comes out of you--a stranger with a life of its own. That is what I mean when I speak act.

↑ Index

558. Phil Primeau

Re: poems of PEACE and war

Sat 27 Jan 2007

All wars are poets' wars. No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..." Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.

U.S.A.
VICTORY IN IRAQ
HOO-AH

PP

↑ Index

559. Marcus Bales
Re: Invitation to Contribute to the John M. Bennett Wikipedia Page
Sat 27 Jan 2007

John M Bennett will be reading at Gallery 324 in the Galleria at Erieview, 1301 East 9th St, Cleveland, Ohio 44114 at 12 Noon at the Every Saturday At Noon literary readings and performances event.

That's tomorrow. If you want to see John M Bennett read, this is a great opportunity to see him.

Marcus

On 27 Jan 2007 at 14:53, Jesse Glass wrote:
> Just--please take a look at the wiki faq before writing!
> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/John_M._Bennett or search from Wiki > gate or > through Google.
>
> Esp. need information about mail art activities, ephemera, and > performance/sound, Also, general clean-up. Thanks! Jess
>
>
> --
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG Free Edition.
> Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.10/651 - Release Date:
> 1/24/2007 6:48 PM
>

↑ Index

560. Simon DeDeo
Cambridge CCCP
Sat 27 Jan 2007

Will be in Cambridge late Aprilish and was wondering if there will be a 2007 CCCP, and if so, when? Website only has 2006 information.

Simon

↑ Index

561. Ward Tietz
New Broadsides at Pyramid Atlantic
Sat 27 Jan 2007

Two new broadsides are available from Pyramid Atlantic: “Two Poems for Courage and Change” by Etel Adnan and Naomi Shihab Nye and “Aleatoric Portfolio,” a collaborative iterative broadside series with base texts by Dan Logan and me.

For more information and views of the broadsides, you can follow the link below:

http://www.pyramidatlanticartcenter.org/gallery/gallery.htm

WT
=

↑ Index

562. Mary Angela Nangini
Re: unsubscribe
Sat 27 Jan 2007

It's this one!
Thanks

Marcus Bales <[redacted]> wrote: I'm sorry, no "msegol" appears at any domain name on my list; there is no one from "skidmore.edu", either. Perhaps you have another email address that forwards to that one; if you tell me what it is, I'll remove it.

Marcus

On 24 Jan 2007 at 23:23, Marla Segol wrote:

> "unsubscribe"
>
> --
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG Free Edition.
> Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.8/649 - Release Date: 1/23/2007 8:40 PM

↑ Index

563. Michael Tod Edgerton
Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
Sat 27 Jan 2007

I don't read this listserve often enough to have any sense of who you are or what your views are, so you'll have to inform me whether you consider this homophobic, bigoted bullshit to be parody. Otherwise, it's extremely offensive, and I don't appreciate, to say the least, being subjected to this kind of bigoted hate speech. Parody? I hope. Otherwise, where are the moderators and why haven't they asked you to leave? Otherwise, I'm asking them to ask you to leave.

Michael Tod Edgerton
Writer, Teacher, Cunt-Ass Queer

Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars. No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..." Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.

U.S.A.
VICTORY IN IRAQ
HOO-AH

PP

"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
- Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

Want to start your own business? Learn how on Yahoo! Small Business.

↑ Index

564. Phil Primeau
Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
Sat 27 Jan 2007

The Futurist Manifesto, 1909

1. We want to sing the love of danger, the habit of energy and rashness. 2. The essential elements of our poetry will be courage, audacity and revolt. 3. Literature has up to now magnified pensive immobility, ecstasy and slumber. We want to exalt movements of aggression, feverish sleeplessness, the double march, the perilous leap, the slap and the blow with the fist. 4. We declare that the splendor of the world has been enriched by a new beauty: the beauty of speed. A racing automobile with its bonnet adorned with great tubes like serpents with explosive breath ... a roaring motor car which seems to run on machine-gun fire, is more beautiful than the Victory of Samothrace. 5. We want to sing the man at the wheel, the ideal axis of which crosses the earth, itself hurled along its orbit. 6. The poet must spend himself with warmth, glamour and prodigality to increase the enthusiastic fervor of the primordial elements. 7. Beauty exists only in struggle. There is no masterpiece that has not an aggressive character. Poetry must be a violent assault on the forces of the unknown, to force them to bow before man. 8. We are on the extreme promontory of the centuries! What is the use of looking behind at the moment when we must open the mysterious shutters of the impossible? Time and Space died yesterday. We are already living in the absolute, since we have already created eternal, omnipresent speed. 9. We want to glorify war - the only cure for the world - militarism, patriotism, the destructive gesture of the anarchists, the beautiful ideas which kill, and contempt for woman. 10. We want to demolish museums and libraries, fight morality, feminism and all opportunist and utilitarian cowardice. 11. We will sing of the great crowds agitated by work, pleasure and revolt; the multi-colored and polyphonic surf of revolutions in modern capitals: the nocturnal vibration of the arsenals and the workshops beneath their violent electric moons: the gluttonous railway stations devouring smoking serpents; factories suspended from the clouds by the thread of their smoke; bridges with the leap of gymnasts flung across the diabolic cutlery of sunny rivers: adventurous steamers sniffing the horizon; great-breasted locomotives, puffing on the rails like enormous steel horses with long tubes for bridle, and the gliding flight of aeroplanes whose propeller sounds like the flapping of a flag and the applause of enthusiastic crowds.

↑ Index

565. Michael Tod Edgerton

Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists

Sat 27 Jan 2007

Weren't the Futurists mostly comprised of Facists?

Only in the most adolescent mind is bigotry "revolutionary".

I asked a simple, and important question, and your evasion would seem to answer it in spades, although I hate to make such assumptions. If you gave a shit about others' feelings, you would unambiguously clarify the status of your previous, outrageous, bigoted, unacceptable statement. Maybe your just an asshole.

Tod

Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: The Futurist Manifesto, 1909

1. We want to sing the love of danger, the habit of energy and rashness. 2. The essential elements of our poetry will be courage, audacity and revolt. 3. Literature has up to now magnified pensive immobility, ecstasy and slumber. We want to exalt movements of aggression, feverish sleeplessness, the double march, the perilous leap, the slap and the blow with the fist. 4. We declare that the splendor of the world has been enriched by a new beauty: the beauty of speed. A racing automobile with its bonnet adorned with great tubes like serpents with explosive breath ... a roaring motor car which seems to run on machine-gun fire, is more beautiful than the Victory of Samothrace. 5. We want to sing the man at the wheel, the ideal axis of which crosses the earth, itself hurled along its orbit. 6. The poet must spend himself with warmth, glamour and prodigality to increase the enthusiastic fervor of the primordial elements. 7. Beauty exists only in struggle. There is no masterpiece that has not an aggressive character. Poetry must be a violent assault on the forces of the unknown, to force them to bow before man. 8. We are on the extreme promontory of the centuries! What is the use of looking behind at the moment when we must open the mysterious shutters of the impossible? Time and Space died yesterday. We are already living in the absolute, since we have already created eternal, omnipresent speed. 9. We want to glorify war - the only cure for the world - militarism, patriotism, the destructive gesture of the anarchists, the beautiful ideas which kill, and contempt for woman. 10. We want to demolish museums and libraries, fight morality, feminism and all opportunist and utilitarian cowardice. 11. We will sing of the great crowds agitated by work, pleasure and revolt; the multi-colored and polyphonic surf of revolutions in modern capitals: the nocturnal vibration of the arsenals and the workshops beneath their violent electric moons: the gluttonous railway stations devouring smoking serpents; factories suspended from the clouds by the thread of their smoke; bridges with the leap of gymnasts flung across the diabolic cutlery of sunny rivers: adventurous steamers sniffing the horizon; great-breasted locomotives, puffing on the rails like enormous steel horses with long tubes for bridle, and the gliding flight of aeroplanes whose propeller sounds like the flapping of a flag and the applause of enthusiastic crowds.

"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
- Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

The fish are biting.
Get more visitors on your site using Yahoo! Search Marketing.

↑ Index

566. Larissa Shmailo
Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
Sat 27 Jan 2007

In a message dated 1/27/2007 2:24:17 PM Eastern Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Weren't the Futurists mostly comprised of Facists?

Italian Futurists, yes. Russian Futurists, no.

Larissa Shmailo_ [redacted]_ (mailto:[redacted])
http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld (http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld)
http//:www.cdbaby.com/cd/shmailo
http//:larissashmailo.blogspot.com
http://www.bigbridge.org/deathlshmailo.htm

↑ Index

567. Harry Ross
Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
Sat 27 Jan 2007

Italian politics is never that simple:

Mussolini was initially influenced by Marxism and the philosophies of Nietzsche. It could be argued that his first influential position of his political career was as editor of Avanti, the pre WW1 Italian socialist newspaper.

Marinetti, the founder of the Futurist movement was aligned to the early politics of Mussolini by his similar interests in Nietzsche and Sorel.

Most of the early futurists (eg Russolo) were anarchists in fact.

Although Marinetti aligned himself with Mussolini's early fascist thinking, but the Futurists left the Fascists by 1920, only rejoining them for the "March on Rome" when Mussolini seized power. However, at that time there were groups of Anarchist Futurists and Communist Futurists and Ardito Futurists.

Also, during Fascism, the Futurist movement in Italy became apolitical (largely because it was irrelevant).

Had it not been for Marinetti's personal relationship with Mussolini, it could be argued that Futurism had very little to do with Fascism.

However, Marinetti was homophobic and and a lot of other things. As a result his 1919 novel Marfarka is tough yet interesting reading.

If a contributor to this list is homophobic does it really matter? If they have the courage to be completely wrong, and wish to express this through their art, surely that is their right. If we suppress the homophobes, racists and people who are intolerant, we are unable to argue with them. If we do not allow them to record their ridiculous views, then future generations will be unable to examine their work and wonder how it was possible that we created a society where some people felt such peculiar views were not completely wrong.

Where I live, in Rome, the whole city is a monument to people who held erroneous and odd views. I like the fact that the Stadio Olimpio was never pulled down, and there are so many monuments to Fascism. The white travertine monoliths contrast with the azure sky, reminding me how ridiculous extremists are. A city of white monuments, some ruined, built on a river of blood, testament to millenia of folly.

If we ban the homophobic Mr Primeau, we may as well pull down EUR, the Foro Italico, and the Baths of Caracalla and Diocletian.

If Mr Primeau has an homophobic verse (preferably an anti ginsberg verse), it would be marvellous if he were to post it, so we could subject it to aesthetic criticism. I doubt though, with his antagonistic cut and pasting of out of date manifesto's it would weigh up against the marvellous folly of true extremist art.

By the way, the Russian futurists referred to themselves as constructivists after a split with the Italians.

I liked your poem Exorcism Larissa by the way.

On 27/01/07, Larissa Shmailo <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
>
> In a message dated 1/27/2007 2:24:17 PM Eastern Standard Time, > [redacted] writes:
>
> Weren't the Futurists mostly comprised of Facists?
>
>
>
> Italian Futurists, yes. Russian Futurists, no.
>
> Larissa Shmailo_ [redacted]_ (mailto:[redacted])
> _http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld_ (http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld
>)
> http//:www.cdbaby.com/cd/shmailo
> http//:larissashmailo.blogspot.com

> http://www.bigbridge.org/deathlshmailo.htm
>

-- Ai sensi del D.Lgs.196/2003 si precisa che le informazioni contenute in questo messaggio sono riservate ed a uso esclusivo del destinatario. Qualora il messaggio in parola Le fosse pervenuto per errore, La invitiamo ad eliminarlo senza copiarlo e a non inoltrarlo a terzi, dandocene gentilmente comunicazione. Grazie.

Pursuant to Legislative Decree No. 196/2003, you are hereby informed that this message contains confidential information intended only for the use of the addressee. If you are not the addressee, and have received this message by mistake, please delete it and immediately notify me. You may not copy or disseminate this message to anyone. Thank you.

↑ Index

568. Alan Sondheim
Heterosexual cock warriors
Sat 27 Jan 2007

---

or find a better subject header

↑ Index

569. Wanda Phipps
New Interview in Big Bridge
Sat 27 Jan 2007

Hey:

Check out my interview with Debra DeSalvo about her new book The Language of the Blues: From Alcorub to Zuzu in the latest jam-packed issue of Big Bridge:

http://www.bigbridge.org/fictwphipps.htm

--

Wanda Phipps

Check out my website MIND HONEY
http://www.mindhoney.com

and my latest book of poetry
Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:
http://www.softskull.com/detailedbook.php?isbn=1-932360-31-X
and http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

570. Harry Ross
Re: Heterosexual cock warriors
Sat 27 Jan 2007

That sums up what I have to confront daily living in a country which founded the futurist movement. The most popular swearword is Cazzo (cock) men rarely walk, they strut, it is not impolite to fiddle with your balls whilst talking to someone. Some official statistics regarding the home of futurism and fascism... 1. 60 % of Italian men have a sexual disfunction. 2. For every 1000 citizens in Rome, there are 1.8 prostitutes... Source, 1 corriere dell'umbria 2 operazione spartacus, recently concluded Italian anti vice operation.

On 27/01/07, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:
> or find a better subject header
>

-- Ai sensi del D.Lgs.196/2003 si precisa che le informazioni contenute in questo messaggio sono riservate ed a uso esclusivo del destinatario. Qualora il messaggio in parola Le fosse pervenuto per errore, La invitiamo ad eliminarlo senza copiarlo e a non inoltrarlo a terzi, dandocene gentilmente comunicazione. Grazie.

Pursuant to Legislative Decree No. 196/2003, you are hereby informed that this message contains confidential information intended only for the use of the addressee. If you are not the addressee, and have received this message by mistake, please delete it and immediately notify me. You may not copy or disseminate this message to anyone. Thank you.

↑ Index

571. David-Baptiste Chirot
futuristi italiani
Sat 27 Jan 2007

Thank you Harry Ross very much for your excellent letters re the Italian futurists--dispelling the stereotypes of their polticis and history (several leading futurists died in service during WW1) Italian Futurism is still too little known for its acheivements, ideas, and yes seeing into future--in Russolo's works and als verymuch in their Theater and perfroamnce-- in one of his noteboks Gramsci writes how the Futurists alone had been able to really make conatct with the working classes in their public events and etc --also their teheater/performance--whioch were attended by very large groups of people-

often at first antagonistic--then won over in manyays-- there is a very interesting book called the futurists the formalists and the marxists, abt the russian scene--in whcih is a review by a marxist critic of marinetti's hugely anticiapted performances in russia-- the writer critiques the snashing of syntax, "parolein liberta" etc--noting tht rdical rearrangements of sytax and structures being transgressed, garramr de-ordered--is not thesame despite claims as the actual re orderingofproeprty and labor-- an interesting comment very much ahaed of its time considered the arguments put fwd much later in american poetry for the disuprting of normative language being akndof equivalence with destrusction of hegemonic powers of goeverance and thelike-- in the new issue of big bridge in essay have there, i write abt the Futurists a bit, also in another essay that is linked there-- the question of speed is one that fascinates me--smithson and virilio's work esp with this-- because of the idea that "speed kills" and assocations with fascism and uses by military speed the chemicl and also the technological a very intersting issue when one explores the ways it is used in kerouac and olson and and smithson for example-- and virilio's long examination of it-- its relationshsips with time-- thank you very much for these two great letters! the thing abt destorying museums is that of course so many artits who have proclaimed this not toolong after find themselves also in the same museums! in miwauke it s great becuase there is a sign that simply says to people zooming on drive along lake WAR MEMORIAL ART MUSEUM best blunt ststaement have ever seen of this interelationship! thugh ne can say that the memroail of war is for the dead-- while musuem contains works these days by the living-- this is an especialy interesting time period to be rereading sorel! as have been lately-- andthe old classics of terrorism--Dostoyevksy's The Possesed, Henry James' The princess Cassamassima and JosephConrad' s The Secret Agent and Under Western Eyes

> From: Harry Ross <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Heterosexual cock warriors
> Date: Sat, 27 Jan 2007 22:26:15 +0100
>
> That sums up what I have to confront daily living in a country which founded the futurist movement. The most popular swearword is Cazzo (cock) men rarely walk, they strut, it is not impolite to fiddle with your balls whilst talking to someone. Some official statistics regarding the home of futurism and fascism... 1. 60 % of Italian men have a sexual disfunction. 2. For every 1000 citizens in Rome, there are 1.8 prostitutes... Source, 1 corriere dell'umbria 2 operazione spartacus, recently concluded Italian anti vice operation.
>
> On 27/01/07, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:
> or find a better subject header

> --
> Ai sensi del D.Lgs.196/2003 si precisa che le informazioni contenute in questo messaggio sono riservate ed a uso esclusivo del destinatario. Qualora il messaggio in parola Le fosse pervenuto per errore, La invitiamo ad eliminarlo senza copiarlo e a non inoltrarlo a terzi, dandocene gentilmente comunicazione. Grazie.
>
> Pursuant to Legislative Decree No. 196/2003, you are hereby informed that this message contains confidential information intended only for the use of the addressee. If you are not the addressee, and have received this message by mistake, please delete it and immediately notify me. You may not copy or disseminate this message to anyone. Thank you.
>
> ---

_____ Search for grocery stores. Find gratitude. Turn a simple search into something more. http://click4thecause.live.com/search/charity/default.aspx?source=hmemtagline_gratitude&FORM=WLMTAG

↑ Index

572. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: futuristi italiani
Sat 27 Jan 2007

I just realized that I missed the reading.
damn,
aj
--- David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
wrote:

> Thank you Harry Ross very much for your excellent > letters re the Italian > futurists--dispelling the stereotypes of their > polticis and history > (several leading futurists died in service during > WW1)
> Italian Futurism is still too little known for its > acheivements, ideas, and > yes seeing into future--in Russolo's works and als > verymuch in their Theater > and perfroamnce--

> in one of his noteboks Gramsci writes how the > Futurists alone had been able > to really make conatct with the working classes in > their public events and > etc --also their teheater/performance--whioch were > attended by very large > groups of people-often at first antagonistic--then > won over in manyays-- > there is a very interesting book called the > futurists the formalists and the > marxists, abt the russian scene--in whcih is a > review by a marxist critic of > marinetti's hugely anticiapted performances in > russia--
> the writer critiques the snashing of syntax,
> "parolein liberta" etc--noting > tht rdical rearrangements of sytax and structures > being transgressed, > garramr de-ordered--is not thesame despite claims as > the actual re
> orderingofproeprty and labor-- > an interesting comment very much ahaed of its time > considered the arguments > put fwd much later in american poetry for the > disuprting of normative > language being akndof equivalence with destrusction > of hegemonic powers of > goeverance and thelike-- > in the new issue of big bridge in essay have there, > i write abt the > Futurists a bit, also in another essay that is > linked there--
> the question of speed is one that fascinates > me--smithson and virilio's work > esp with this-- > because of the idea that "speed kills" and > assocations with fascism and uses > by military speed the chemicl and also the > technological a very intersting > issue when one explores the ways it is used in > kerouac and olson and and > smithson for example-- > and virilio's long examination of it-- > its relationshsips with time-- > thank you very much for these two great letters!

> the thing abt destorying museums is that of course > so many artits who have > proclaimed this not toolong after find themselves > also in the same museums!
> in miwauke it s great becuase there is a sign that > simply says to people > zooming on drive along lake
> WAR MEMORIAL > ART MUSEUM
> best blunt ststaement have ever seen of this > interelationship!
> thugh ne can say that the memroail of war is for the > dead-- > while musuem contains works these days by the > living--
> this is an especialy interesting time period to be > rereading sorel! as have > been lately-- > andthe old classics of terrorism--Dostoyevksy's The > Possesed, Henry James'
> The princess Cassamassima and JosephConrad'
> s The Secret Agent and Under Western Eyes
>
>
> >From: Harry Ross <[redacted]>
> >Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
> <[redacted]>
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Re: Heterosexual cock warriors
> >Date: Sat, 27 Jan 2007 22:26:15 +0100
> >
> >That sums up what I have to confront daily living > in a country which > >founded the futurist movement. The most popular > swearword is Cazzo > >(cock) men rarely walk, they strut, it is not > impolite to fiddle with > >your balls whilst talking to someone. Some official > statistics

> >regarding the home of futurism and fascism... 1. 60 > % of Italian men > >have a sexual disfunction. 2. For every 1000 > citizens in Rome, there > >are 1.8 prostitutes... Source, 1 corriere > dell'umbria 2 operazione > >spartacus, recently concluded Italian anti vice > operation.
> >
> >On 27/01/07, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
> wrote:
> >>or find a better subject header
> >>
> >
> >
> >--
> >Ai sensi del D.Lgs.196/2003 si precisa che le > informazioni contenute
> >in questo messaggio sono riservate ed a uso > esclusivo del > >destinatario. Qualora il messaggio in parola Le > fosse pervenuto per > >errore, La invitiamo ad eliminarlo senza copiarlo e > a non inoltrarlo a > >terzi, dandocene gentilmente comunicazione. Grazie.
> >
> >Pursuant to Legislative Decree No. 196/2003, you > are hereby informed > >that this message contains confidential information > intended only for > >the use of the addressee. If you are not the > addressee, and have > >received this message by mistake, please delete it > and immediately > >notify me. You may not copy or disseminate this > message to anyone.
> >Thank you.
> >
>
>----------
>
>

> Search for grocery stores. Find gratitude. Turn a > simple search into > something more.
>
http://click4thecause.live.com/search/charity/default.aspx?
source=hmemtagline_gratitude&FORM=WLMTAG
>

Food fight? Enjoy some healthy debate
in the Yahoo! Answers Food & Drink Q&A.
http://answers.yahoo.com/dir/?link=list&sid=396545367

↑ Index

573. Crane's Bill Books

Poetry warriors

Sat 27 Jan 2007

The notion that if you're going to do something "sensitive" like write poetry you'd better be manly about it has infected poets otherwise dear to me, including Olson, but there's not much excuse for it now, if there ever was. Too bad it's still entertained by some of the younger admirers of Bukowski, et al, not to mention the hints of it evident in some slam gatherings I've been to. Phil Primeau's post reads like a typically noisy example of the ethos.

J.A. Lee/Crane's Bill Books
[redacted]

↑ Index

574. Mark Salerno

Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists

Sat 27 Jan 2007

Dear Colleagues:

I cannot believe that the below statements by P. Primeau are meant to be taken seriously and sincerely. Nor can I believe that this kind of queer-bating and name-calling merits a response. Nor can I fathom this very bizarre, anti-Semitic and homophobic attack on Allen Ginsberg, whose courage is a matter of record. However, if these statements are serious and sincere, then I find them deeply offensive, not to mention ludicrous and ill-informed.

For the record, I am a poet who opposes the current wars in Afghanistan and Iraq. It seems especially important to iterate that on this day of anti-war protests in L.A. and Washington.

Mark Salerno

P.S. Mr Primeau, have we been put on? Could you let us in on the joke here?

On Jan 27, 2007, at 10:36 AM, Michael Tod Edgerton wrote:

> I don't read this listserve often enough to have any sense of who you > are or what your views are, so you'll have to inform me whether you > consider this homophobic, bigoted bullshit to be parody. Otherwise,
> it's extremely offensive, and I don't appreciate, to say the least,
> being subjected to this kind of bigoted hate speech. Parody? I hope.
> Otherwise, where are the moderators and why haven't they asked you to > leave? Otherwise, I'm asking them to ask you to leave.
>
> Michael Tod Edgerton
> Writer, Teacher, Cunt-Ass Queer
>
> Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars.
> No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest > release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward > ones,
> but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their
> works
> will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must > demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought
> a lot > of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..." Ginsberg that > old
> cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.
>
> U.S.A.
> VICTORY IN IRAQ
> HOO-AH
>
> PP
>
> "There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
> - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
>
> ---
> Want to start your own business? Learn how on Yahoo! Small Business.

↑ Index

575. Edmund Hardy
"Intercapillary Space" - a collaborative poetry magazine
Sat 27 Jan 2007

I.S. 2007:1 28/01
"Intercapillary Space" - a collaborative poetry magazine

December / January Contents:
http://intercapillaryspace.blogspot.com/2007/01/dec-jan-contents.html

"A distribution of the sensible"

POETRY

David Berridge: Polyphony of Warning

M. T. C. Cronin: from GOD IS WAITING / GOD IS WEIRD

steve dalachinsky: blank space in a car pool (jaap blonk @ bowery poetry club)

Mark Dickinson: from, Nematode

Peter Hughes: Berlioz Parts 3 and 4

Peter Larkin: From “Shade” (At Wall With The Approach Of Trees, 2)

Lawrence Upton: Pete Kubryk-Townsend

GILES GOODLAND

Collage Capital: An Interview with Edmund Hardy

Dead Capital, Sleeping Capital, Symbolic Capital

ESSAYS

Emily Critchley: Dilemmatic boundaries: constructing a poetics of thinking

John Muckle: Why I Wrote Martha and Mary

Abena Sutherland: The Pasteurization of Andrew Duncan

BOOK REVIEWS

Arielle Greenberg, My Kafka Century (Action Books)

Peter Larkin, Leaves of Field (Shearsman)

Peter Manson, For The Good of Liars (Barque)

D. S. Marriott: Incognegro (Salt)

Cathal Ó Searcaigh, By the Hearth in Mín a’ Leá (Arc)

The Peter Redgrove Library, The Colour of Radio & The Sleep of the Great Hypnotist

Catherine Wagner, Imitating (Leafe)

James Wilkes, A DeTour (Renscombe)

CLOSE READINGS

Michael Peverett on Shakespeare's Sonnet 81

Melissa Flores-Bórquez on Anne Waldman's 'Lethe'

PLUS CAPSULE ESSAYS

Aristotle's Divination In Sleep

Alphaville Text: Éluard, Karina, Godard, Kelly Osbourne's 'One Word'

Rem Koolhaas' EU Flag

On The Twelfth Night: Shakespeare and Berlioz

Orlando Furioso In English

LAUNCH OF "Intercapillary Editions"

A new series of free eBooks featuring critical essays, poetry and new editions of classic texts.

1. Emily Critchley: Dilemmatic boundaries: constructing a poetics of thinking
An essay by Emily Critchley. 17 pages. 177 KB.

2. Orlando Furioso
John Harington's 1591 translation of Lodovico Ariosto's 'Orlando Furioso'.
901 pages. 3550 KB

3. Joshua Stanley: Litany
A poem. 6 pages. 77 KB.

_____ Get Hotmail, News, Sport and Entertainment from MSN on your mobile.
http://www.msn.txt4content.com/

↑ Index

576. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
Sat 27 Jan 2007

---

and they weren't fascists when they were futurists. fascism happened later.

Larissa Shmailo wrote:
>
>
> In a message dated 1/27/2007 2:24:17 PM Eastern Standard Time, > [redacted] writes:
>
> Weren't the Futurists mostly comprised of Facists?
>
>
>
> Italian Futurists, yes. Russian Futurists, no.
>
> Larissa Shmailo_ [redacted]_ (mailto:[redacted])
> _http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld_
(http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld)
> http//:www.cdbaby.com/cd/shmailo
> http//:larissashmailo.blogspot.com
> http://www.bigbridge.org/deathlshmailo.htm

↑ Index

577. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists
Sat 27 Jan 2007

---

i would like to take this opportunity to point out that I, Jason Finkas Quackenbush, a liberal who voted for Ralph Nader three times, once in 1996 and twice in the year 2000, am a good person and that my political views are in entirely in keeping with those laid out for adherence by all good liberals by the 2005 ComIntern People's Dictum on Left Wing Orthodoxy circular #372. Having made the statement publicly so that you can all be absolutely sure that I adhere to all pro-semitic action items on Circ 372, and am only anti-semitic on ComIntern approved subjects such as opposition to Israel's continued refusal to return to within their pre-67 borders, I think i can speak with authority that Mr. Primeau's statements are unacceptable whether or not they are parodic. Given that they are parodic, they are never the less repulsive to me, as a liberal, as they violate ComIntern Directive #6172, which encyclical made the point that all liberals must behave like sour-faced humorless school marms whenever their comments are a matter of public record. shame on you Phil, for daring to make a joke.

Mark Salerno wrote:
> Dear Colleagues:
>

> I cannot believe that the below statements by P. Primeau are meant to be > taken seriously and sincerely. Nor can I believe that this kind of > queer-bating and name-calling merits a response. Nor can I fathom this > very bizarre, anti-Semitic and homophobic attack on Allen Ginsberg, > whose courage is a matter of record. However, if these statements are > serious and sincere, then I find them deeply offensive, not to mention > ludicrous and ill-informed.
>
> For the record, I am a poet who opposes the current wars in Afghanistan > and Iraq. It seems especially important to iterate that on this day of > anti-war protests in L.A. and Washington.
>
> Mark Salerno
>
>
> P.S. Mr Primeau, have we been put on? Could you let us in on the joke here?
>
>
>
>
>
>
> On Jan 27, 2007, at 10:36 AM, Michael Tod Edgerton wrote:
>
>> I don't read this listserve often enough to have any sense of who you >> are or what your views are, so you'll have to inform me whether you >> consider this homophobic, bigoted bullshit to be parody. Otherwise,
>> it's extremely offensive, and I don't appreciate, to say the least,
>> being subjected to this kind of bigoted hate speech. Parody? I hope.
>> Otherwise, where are the moderators and why haven't they asked you to >> leave? Otherwise, I'm asking them to ask you to leave.
>>
>> Michael Tod Edgerton
>> Writer, Teacher, Cunt-Ass Queer
>>
>>
>> Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars.
>> No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest >> release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward >> ones,
>> but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their >> works

>> will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must >> demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought
>> a lot >> of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..." Ginsberg that >> old
>> cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.
>>
>> U.S.A.
>> VICTORY IN IRAQ
>> HOO-AH
>>
>> PP
>>
>>
>>
>> "There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
>> - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
>>
>> ---
>> Want to start your own business? Learn how on Yahoo! Small Business.
>>

↑ Index

578. Eric Dickey
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Sat 27 Jan 2007

---

prosit, marcus!

--- Marcus Bales <[redacted]> wrote:

> Yeah, I know, Hal, which is why, of course, I know
> that you're all
> frauds and cons. Prosit!
>
> Marcus
>
> On 26 Jan 2007 at 18:39, Halvard Johnson wrote:
>
> Oh, Marcus, come on. You know we don't think
> your opinions are as good as anyone else's.
>
> Hal
>
> "If the brain were so simple we could understand

> it, we would be so simple we couldn't."
> --Lyall Watson
>
> Halvard Johnson
> ==========
> [redacted]
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
>
> On Jan 26, 2007, at 5:15 PM, Marcus Bales wrote:
>
> On 26 Jan 2007 at 15:42, Christopher Leland
> Winks wrote:
> Doubtless Eric would sneer at Martin Luther > King for his
> pacifism,
> but > we do well to remember his words "My country is
> the greatest
> purveyor
> of violence in the world." So it was then, and > so it remains.
>
> Sneer at it? No, I hope he embraces it -- no > nation or people can
> be > a "great power" who are not the greatest > purveyor of violence in
> the > world at any given time in history. Of course,
> you may argue, if
> you
> will, that you don't want to be part of a nation
> or people with
> aspirations to be, or that is, a great power.
> But if that's the
> case,
> my next question is: Are you a US citizen?
>
> But on a list full of postmodernists, on what
> grounds can you
> possibly argue that war or violence is wrong or

> bad? Isn't the > essence of the postmodern world view that every > opinion is just
> as > good as every other opinion? How, starting from > there, do you
> say
> that anything is wrong or bad?
>
> Marcus
>
> --
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG Free Edition.
> Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.10/651 -
> Release Date:
> 1/24/2007 6:48 PM

___ Bored stiff? Loosen up... Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games. http://games.yahoo.com/games/front

↑ Index

579. Alexander Jorgensen

Re: Cunts, Queers, and Pacifists

Sun 28 Jan 2007

---

http://lovegodsway.org/GayBands

Please, no hate mail. I am still trying to catch-up with friends. A little offering to lighten the righteous load.

AJ

___
Yahoo! Music Unlimited
Access over 1 million songs.
http://music.yahoo.com/unlimited

↑ Index

580. Vernon Frazer

Ric Carfagna interviews Vernon Frazer on IMPROVISATIONS in Big Bridge # 12

Sun 28 Jan 2007

In the latest issue of Big Bridge, Ric Carfagna interviews me in depth on the making and meanings of IMPROVISATIONS. Carfagna conducted an excellent review that currently serves as the best guide to IMPROVISATIONS. Interested readers can find the interview at: http://www.bigbridge.org/fictrcarfagna.htm.

Vernon Frazer

http://vernonfrazer.com <http://vernonfrazer.com/>

↑ Index

581. Eric Elshtain

New Beard of Bees Chapbook

Sun 28 Jan 2007

Beard of Bees Press is pleased to announce it's first entry of the new year: _No Matter_ by Joel Chace.

http://www.beardofbees.com/chace.html

Yours,

Eric E.

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

582. Michael Tod Edgerton

Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at Phil Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I would think he would be horrified to think of the effect his words would have on someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt no. It is even more astounding that the responses that have come have been completely inane and certainly beside the point.

Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the point of my completely RHETORICAL question.

Jason Q and Alexander J's belittling of the issue is completely asinine and insensitive. Your "Love God's Way" site is only partly funny and partly terrifying, and mostly funny only to those who aren't affected by it at all. There are real people who get caught up in those bullshit christian conversion programs, who are in a lot of pain; those programs only make it a lot worse. As riduculous and deserving of ridicule as they are, in the context of this (non) discussion, it's a tacky move to post that. I can't believe that you're anything but straight to denounce my "righteousness"; no one who has had to del with this bullshit would be so flip about it.

I know from personal experience--from being teasd as a sissy as a child to hearing the word "gay" for the first time when I was ten, slung at me as a slur, discerning only that it meant something I shouldn't want to be called; from having homophobic remarks yelled at me by cowards driving quickly by in their cars to the equally cowardly, bigoted students who made homophobic remarks on my course evaluations--I know from personal experience that it is generally acceptable to be as openly, publically homophobic as one pleases, wherever one pleases. It's incrediably disappointing--and infuriating--to find that this listserv is no exception.

If Phil Primeau was merely joking, then he was a complete ass to let me think otherwise. If I had made mock bigoted remarks which someone took seriously, I would go out of my way to say unambiguously that I was just joking in order to make fun of the bigots. That's the problem with parody: it takes talent and intelligence to pull it off, and when you fail, you merely reproduce the very views you were trying to parody.

Even more infuriating is the fact there have been flurries of outraged posts over any number of similar issues. If he had called women "cunts" in an obviously derivisive manner (can it be otherwise?), or used words like nigger or kike or spic instead of "queers", and had refused to state that indeed he'd intended to be parodic and meant no harm, then this list would be up in arms! But on the issue of homophobia: a virtual silence?!? This bothers no one else besides Mark??? I feel like I'm in an episode of the Twilight Zone!

Tod

Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars. No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..."

Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.

U.S.A.
VICTORY IN IRAQ
HOO-AH

PP

"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
- Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.

↑ Index

583. Ruth Lepson
Re: New Beard of Bees Chapbook
Sun 28 Jan 2007

thanks for his poetry, full of feeling & metaphor about metaphor.

On 1/28/07 10:32 AM, "Eric Elshtain" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Beard of Bees Press is pleased to announce it's first entry of the new year: _No Matter_ by Joel Chace.
>
> http://www.beardofbees.com/chace.html
>
> Yours,
>
> Eric E.
>
> Eric Elshtain
> Editor
> Beard of Bees Press
> http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

584. Ruth Lepson
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

I didn't respond bec I thought it was a joke tho in bad taste & so many people were writing abt it & one can't respond to everything but do feel bad for anyone who has been hurt by those exchanges. But the futurist manifesto included a phrase against feminism which no one mentioned--but they were against everything in that adolescent male way that can be revolutionary or hurtful or fun or all 3. There weren't exactly hordes of writers defending women in the last exchanges abt that so don't start criticizing women now! we need to support each other.

On 1/28/07 11:17 AM, "Michael Tod Edgerton" <[redacted]> wrote:

> First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at Phil Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I would think he would be horrified to think of the effect his words would have on someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt no. It is even more astounding that the responses that have come have been completely inane and certainly beside the point.
>
> Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the point of my completely RHETORICAL question.
>
> Jason Q and Alexander J's belittling of the issue is completely asinine and insensitive. Your "Love God's Way" site is only partly funny and partly terrifying, and mostly funny only to those who aren't affected by it at all. There are real people who get caught up in those bullshit christian conversion programs, who are in a lot of pain; those programs only make it a lot worse. As riduculous and deserving of ridicule as they are, in the context of this (non) discussion, it's a tacky move to post that. I can't believe that you're anything but straight to denounce my "righteousness"; no one who has had to del with this bullshit would be so flip about it.
>
> I know from personal experience--from being teasd as a sissy as a child to hearing the word "gay" for the first time when I was ten, slung at me as a slur, discerning only that it meant something I shouldn't want to be called; from having homophobic remarks yelled at me by cowards driving quickly by in their cars to the equally cowardly, bigoted students who made homophobic remarks on my course evaluations--I know from personal experience that it is generally acceptable to be as openly, publically homophobic as one pleases, wherever one pleases. It's incrediably disappointing--and infuriating--to find that this listserv is no exception.
>
> If Phil Primeau was merely joking, then he was a complete ass to let me think otherwise. If I had made mock bigoted remarks which someone took seriously, I would go out of my way to say unambiguously that I was just joking in order to make fun of the bigots. That's the problem with parody: it takes talent and intelligence to pull it off, and when you fail, you merely reproduce the very views you were trying to parody.
>
> Even more infuriating is the fact there have been flurries of outraged posts over any number of similar issues. If he had called women "cunts" in an obviously derivisive manner (can it be otherwise?), or used words like nigger or kike or spic instead of "queers", and had refused to state that indeed he'd intended to be parodic and meant no harm, then this list would be up in arms!

> But on the issue of homophobia: a virtual silence?!? This bothers no one else besides Mark??? I feel like I'm in an episode of the Twilight Zone!
>
> Tod
>
> Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars. No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest > release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..." Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.
>
> U.S.A.
> VICTORY IN IRAQ
> HOO-AH
>
> PP
>
> "There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
> - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
>
> ---
> Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.

↑ Index

585. Haas Bianchi

My Blog has Changed

Sun 28 Jan 2007

Some of you read my blog at collagepoet.blogspot.com

That blog is not accessable to me anymore as I screwed up the move from Blogger to Google so
I have a new blog http://irasiblepoet.blogspot.com/

Raymond L Bianchi
chicagopostmodernpoetry.com/
collagepoetchicago.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

586. Haas Bianchi
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

The last acceptable bigotry in America is to be against the working class. If you live in the Midwest or Northeast you know what I mean. At least Homosexuals have social currency but what does the resident of Flint, Michigan have?

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ruth Lepson
Sent: Sunday, January 28, 2007 10:34 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?

I didn't respond bec I thought it was a joke tho in bad taste & so many people were writing abt it & one can't respond to everything but do feel bad for anyone who has been hurt by those exchanges. But the futurist manifesto included a phrase against feminism which no one mentioned--but they were against everything in that adolescent male way that can be revolutionary or hurtful or fun or all 3. There weren't exactly hordes of writers defending women in the last exchanges abt that so don't start criticizing women now! we need to support each other.

On 1/28/07 11:17 AM, "Michael Tod Edgerton" <[redacted]> wrote:

> First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I > cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at > Phil Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I > would think he would be horrified to think of the effect his words > would have on someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt > no. It is even more astounding that the responses that have come have > been completely inane and certainly beside the point.
>
> Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the > point of my completely RHETORICAL question.
>
> Jason Q and Alexander J's belittling of the issue is completely > asinine and insensitive. Your "Love God's Way" site is only partly > funny and partly terrifying, and mostly funny only to those who aren't affected by it at all.
> There are real people who get caught up in those bullshit christian > conversion programs, who are in a lot of pain; those programs only make it a lot worse.
> As riduculous and deserving of ridicule as they are, in the context of

> this > (non) discussion, it's a tacky move to post that. I can't believe that > you're anything but straight to denounce my "righteousness"; no one > who has had to del with this bullshit would be so flip about it.
>
> I know from personal experience--from being teasd as a sissy as a > child to hearing the word "gay" for the first time when I was ten, > slung at me as a slur, discerning only that it meant something I > shouldn't want to be called; from having homophobic remarks yelled at > me by cowards driving quickly by in their cars to the equally > cowardly, bigoted students who made homophobic remarks on my course > evaluations--I know from personal experience that it is generally > acceptable to be as openly, publically homophobic as one pleases, > wherever one pleases. It's incrediably disappointing--and infuriating--to find that this listserv is no exception.
>
> If Phil Primeau was merely joking, then he was a complete ass to let > me think otherwise. If I had made mock bigoted remarks which someone > took seriously, I would go out of my way to say unambiguously that I > was just joking in order to make fun of the bigots. That's the problem > with parody: it takes talent and intelligence to pull it off, and when > you fail, you merely reproduce the very views you were trying to parody.
>
> Even more infuriating is the fact there have been flurries of outraged > posts over any number of similar issues. If he had called women
> "cunts" in an obviously derivisive manner (can it be otherwise?), or > used words like nigger or kike or spic instead of "queers", and had > refused to state that indeed he'd intended to be parodic and meant no harm, then this list would be up in arms!
> But on the issue of homophobia: a virtual silence?!? This bothers no > one else besides Mark??? I feel like I'm in an episode of the Twilight Zone!
>
> Tod
>
> Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars.
> No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed > conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but > everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works
> will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must > demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought > a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..."

> Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.
>
> U.S.A.
> VICTORY IN IRAQ
> HOO-AH
>
> PP
>
>
>
> "There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
> - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
>
> ---
> Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.

↑ Index

587. Larissa Shmailo

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

In a message dated 1/28/2007 11:18:10 AM Eastern Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at Phil Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I would think he would be horrified to think of the effect his words would have on someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt no. It is even more astounding that the responses that have come have been completely inane and certainly beside the point.

Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the point of my completely RHETORICAL question

My apologies for not fully exploring this thread before discussing Futurism; obviously something more important needs to be discussed.

As a poet, I am identified with Tom Robinson Band's (TRB) song Power in the Darkness, part of which I sing as preface to my own poetry. This seminal gay band's song is my usual Myspace music; they were probably the first rock band to use racial-sexist-homosexual-hating epithets in the cause of political awareness---and the effect is horrifying, and one of the most effective and thrilling calls to action I know. I wonder if Mr. Primeau is using his words similarly--I hope-- or as Patti Smith does. This is the way I understand his post. I hope I am not being naive. I would appreciate knowing what Mr. Primeau meant--shock value of words to raise our consciousness, or unconscious deep hatred?

Larissa Shmailo_ [redacted]_ (mailto:[redacted])
http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld (http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld)
http://blog.myspace.com/larissaworld
http//:www.cdbaby.com/cd/shmailo
http//:larissashmailo.blogspot.com
http://www.bigbridge.org/deathlshmailo.htm

↑ Index

588. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Michael,

I think you miss the point and, to be honest, I am not all that interested in prolonging this to naseaum. If maybe you had more experience under belt, you'd better understand that bigotry is simply a matter of fact sort of thing, and expresses itself in all kinds of ways (ways, I reckon, even you are not immune to falling victim of promolgating). The website posted, which is not mine, was sent to remind us of just how wrong-headed people can be, and lots of folks are, and everybody, it seems, enjoys the position of victim or of belonging to some group or another possessing some unique perception with regards to suffering. I've seen far more than you, probably spent more time in gay bars around the world, sucking cock (as well), and understand that educated people say all kinds of terrible things, think things undisclosed which I find to be more frightening. I'm not ready to ban books like they do in Germany or throw people in jail for saying that the Holocost never happened. Too, I think I want to live in a world where my wife and I can understand, plainly, that we have our own burdens to work through, burdens once fully recognized might position us better to honoring humanity.

AJ

--- Michael Tod Edgerton
<[redacted]> wrote:

> First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at Phil Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I would think he would be horrified to think of the effect his words would have on someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt no. It is even more astounding that the responses that have come have been completely inane and certainly beside the point.
>
> Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the point of my completely RHETORICAL question.
>
> Jason Q and Alexander J's belittling of the issue is completely asinine and insensitive. Your "Love God's Way" site is only partly funny and partly terrifying, and mostly funny only to those who aren't affected by it at all. There are real people who get caught up in those bullshit christian conversion programs, who are in a lot of pain; those programs only make it a lot worse. As riduculous and deserving of ridicule as they are, in the context of this (non) discussion, it's a tacky move to post that. I can't believe that you're anything but straight to denounce my "righteousness"; no one who has had to del with this bullshit would be so flip about it.
>
> I know from personal experience--from being teasd as a sissy as a child to hearing the word "gay" for the first time when I was ten, slung at me as a slur, discerning only that it meant something I shouldn't want to be called; from having homophobic remarks yelled at me by cowards driving quickly by in their cars to the equally cowardly, bigoted students who made homophobic remarks on my course evaluations--I know from personal experience that it is generally acceptable to be as openly, publically homophobic as one pleases, wherever one pleases. It's incrediably disappointing--and infuriating--to find that this listserv is no exception.
>
> If Phil Primeau was merely joking, then he was a complete ass to let me think otherwise. If I had made mock bigoted remarks which someone took seriously, I would go out of my way to say unambiguously that I was just joking in order to make fun of the bigots. That's the problem with parody: it takes talent and intelligence to pull it off, and when you fail, you merely reproduce the very views you were trying to parody.

Even more infuriating is the fact there have been flurries of outraged posts over any number of similar issues. If he had called women "cunts" in an obviously derivisive manner (can it be otherwise?), or used words like nigger or kike or spic instead of "queers", and had refused to state that indeed he'd intended to be parodic and meant no harm, then this list would be up in arms! But on the issue of homophobia: a virtual silence?!? This bothers no one else besides Mark??? I feel like I'm in an episode of the Twilight Zone!

Tod

Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars. No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works
will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..." Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man.
His cowardice. Hhaa.

U.S.A.
VICTORY IN IRAQ
HOO-AH

PP

"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack > of understanding"

> - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
>
> ---
> Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.

_____
Do you Yahoo!?
Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.
http://new.mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

589. Anny Ballardini
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

This is very worrying:
"The last acceptable bigotry in America is to be against the working class."

I was thought that to work is a honorable privilege, honest earned bread has to be on the table.

On 1/28/07, Haas Bianchi <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> The last acceptable bigotry in America is to be against the working class.
> If you live in the Midwest or Northeast you know what I mean. At least > Homosexuals have social currency but what does the resident of Flint, > Michigan have?
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Ruth Lepson
> Sent: Sunday, January 28, 2007 10:34 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
>
> I didn't respond bec I thought it was a joke tho in bad taste & so many > people were writing abt it & one can't respond to everything but do feel > bad > for anyone who has been hurt by those exchanges. But the futurist

> manifesto
> included a phrase against feminism which no one mentioned--but they were > against everything in that adolescent male way that can be revolutionary
> or > hurtful or fun or all 3. There weren't exactly hordes of writers defending > women in the last exchanges abt that so don't start criticizing women now!
> we need to support each other.
>
>
> On 1/28/07 11:17 AM, "Michael Tod Edgerton" < > [redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I > > cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at > > Phil Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I > > would think he would be horrified to think of the effect his words > > would have on someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt > > no. It is even more astounding that the responses that have come have > > been completely inane and certainly beside the point.
> >
> > Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the > > point of my completely RHETORICAL question.
> >
> > Jason Q and Alexander J's belittling of the issue is completely > > asinine and insensitive. Your "Love God's Way" site is only partly > > funny and partly terrifying, and mostly funny only to those who aren't > affected by it at all.
> > There are real people who get caught up in those bullshit christian > > conversion programs, who are in a lot of pain; those programs only make > it
> a lot worse.
> > As riduculous and deserving of ridicule as they are, in the context of
> > this > > (non) discussion, it's a tacky move to post that. I can't believe that > > you're anything but straight to denounce my "righteousness"; no one > > who has had to del with this bullshit would be so flip about it.
> >
> > I know from personal experience--from being teasd as a sissy as a > > child to hearing the word "gay" for the first time when I was ten,
> > slung at me as a slur, discerning only that it meant something I > > shouldn't want to be called; from having homophobic remarks yelled at > > me by cowards driving quickly by in their cars to the equally

> > cowardly, bigoted students who made homophobic remarks on my course
> > evaluations--I know from personal experience that it is generally > > acceptable to be as openly, publically homophobic as one pleases, > > wherever one pleases. It's incrediably disappointing--and > infuriating--to > find that this listserv is no exception.
> >
> > If Phil Primeau was merely joking, then he was a complete ass to let > > me think otherwise. If I had made mock bigoted remarks which someone > > took seriously, I would go out of my way to say unambiguously that I > > was just joking in order to make fun of the bigots. That's the problem > > with parody: it takes talent and intelligence to pull it off, and when > > you fail, you merely reproduce the very views you were trying to parody.
> >
> > Even more infuriating is the fact there have been flurries of outraged > > posts over any number of similar issues. If he had called women
> > "cunts" in an obviously derivisive manner (can it be otherwise?), or > > used words like nigger or kike or spic instead of "queers", and had > > refused to state that indeed he'd intended to be parodic and meant no > harm, then this list would be up in arms!
> > But on the issue of homophobia: a virtual silence?!? This bothers no > > one else besides Mark??? I feel like I'm in an episode of the Twilight > Zone!
> >
> > Tod
> >
> > Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars.
> > No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed > > conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but > > everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works
> > will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must > > demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought > > a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..."
> > Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His > cowardice. Hhaa.
> >
> > U.S.A.
> > VICTORY IN IRAQ
> > HOO-AH
> >
> > PP

> >
> >
> >
> > "There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
> > - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
> >
> > ---
> > Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.
>

↑ Index

590. amy king

Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

Hi Tod,

I read Phil's post as an attempt at parody, though I didn't find it funny or creative in any regard. You're right: people attempt to mock very biased and extreme notions at risk of perpetuating the ideas -- mostly by default though. I think (& perhaps this is too generous on my part?) people want to mock those idiotic ideals, but don't really go about doing so in any clever or inventive way. It's almost as though they believe that simply repeating the extreme statements is enough to show how stupid those notions are (i.e. "only queers oppose the war" - extremists believe this wild notion as well as the opposite one that only queers support the war -- think Westboro Church).

Honestly, I think your anger at Phil's post is moreover about the irresponsibility of following that tired old method of just repeating the idiocies, as though that would drive the point home and cause us to act -- doing so in such a simplistic fashion that he risks confirming the beliefs of any extremists on the list. Phil didn't really employ any kind of imaginative use of language to point out something most of us on here didn't already know. I mean, who doesn't know that in order to dismiss Ginsberg's anti-war sentiment (& the power his version held) one simply pulls an ad hominem attack focused on his being gay or Jewish? We get it, we've heard it over and over, and it still isn't funny to hear it mocked. And sorry, but the same stale old mockery won't call anyone to action in an effort to oppose the war. Were we supposed to get angry that Ginsberg has been dismissed in the past and he continued to audibly oppose the war? Were we then suppose to feel guilt that he did so in the face of such miserable dismissals of his character? I'm sorry, Phil, but I'm trying to guess the intended trajectory of your parody, the effect was supposed to cause ...

So what works? Well, on this list, I'm going out on a limb here to say that we're probably all in close proximity on the belief scale of "live and let live", even if we don't "condone" certain behaviors within our "personal" lives. Hell, most of America is, if you ask the general public. There is a general consensus in our democracy that we should all share certain rights by birth, and any favoritism or uneven distribution of civil rights is ludicrous. So how do we go about determing and enacting what Phil might have been attempting to provoke? An action towards demanding those rights? Making the poets speak out and oppose the war? Do something to stop it? There are multiple ways that don't always have immediate and obvious effects, but we can see the tide is changing now.

As far as opposing anti-gay sentiment goes, an issue Phil perhaps didn't intend to invoke but is mixed up in here just the same, that's a seemingly bottomless can of worms that we can't seem to get a lid on. Anti-gay sentiment is actively promoted by the religious right, by very liberal heterosexuals, and even subtly within the gay community itself (though I'm not going to start my own gay bashing campaign here by identifying how). How do we respond to the absurd logic of it all? Little by little in classrooms, through media, in conversation, writing letters to our representatives, via comedy, etc. I like Larry Black's response to the political right's proclamation that "Homosexuality is a threat to the American family": http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6WW6AFu1RF0 - his final scenario isn't politically correct, but it draws attention, in an artificial and crude way (that's also somewhat clever), to the absurdity of this slogan. Ah, comedy: always about something serious. The great leveler, etc. But not all comedy is successful, eh?

I mentioned the Westboro church before -- even a Fox News anchor tries to respond to these idiots by turning their language in on them -- "You are an abomination!" No show-stopping intellectual arguments here: just a nice little twist, that I'm sure was unplanned, but worthwhile just the same. The Australian guy, also far from behaving in a politically correct fashion, takes the extermist's over-preached and worn-out abstract notion that homosexuality is bad by invading the extermist's comfort zone: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=S8cN2pB3MCE No great shakes, but it's nice to see the confident foundation of dogmatic preaching grow extremely uncomfortable in the face of what he knows is "bad" and not know what to do with it up close. The self-proclaimed Man of God runs to get his mommy, poor baby.

Anyway, I'm not coming up with stellar examples here - but I'd say this issue is larger than whether or not Phil made it clear if he were joking or not. I think the issue is about the effectiveness of his joke, whether or not his purpose was recognized, if his cause were taken up by a few or more, and if there are dangers in his methodology (as noted by Tod).

In my humble (and perhaps, singular) opinion, this debate warrants much more attention because it speaks to the even larger issue of how do we get messages across and believed on a larger scale. If I got mad every time I heard someone jokingly dismiss certain views because a bitch or a dyke or an oppressed woman held them, no matter how lame or misguided the attempt, I'd be in a state of perpetual anger -- and an ineffective citizen.

My twenty five and a half cents,

Amy King

p.s. I'm a fan of the motto, "If it's a joke, we should both be laughing." etc.

Get your own web address.
Have a HUGE year through Yahoo! Small Business.

↑ Index

591. charles alexander
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Thank you, Michael Tod Edgerton, and Mark Salerno, for your sense on this matter. I think a lot of us saw that Primeau post in horror, and just quit reading. If he was joking, it was a really bad joke. Your responses have been clear and entirely justified. I hope a lot of people on this list support what you have to say.

Charles

At 09:17 AM 1/28/2007, you wrote:
>First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I >cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at Phil >Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I would think >he would be horrified to think of the effect his words would have on >someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt no. It is even >more astounding that the responses that have come have been completely >inane and certainly beside the point.
>
>Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the >point of my completely RHETORICAL question.
>
>Jason Q and Alexander J's belittling of the issue is completely asinine >and insensitive. Your "Love God's Way" site is only partly funny and >partly terrifying, and mostly funny only to those who aren't affected by >it at all. There are real people who get caught up in those bullshit >christian conversion programs, who are in a lot of pain; those programs >only make it a lot worse. As riduculous and deserving of ridicule as they >are, in the context of this (non) discussion, it's a tacky move to post >that. I can't believe that you're anything but straight to denounce my >"righteousness"; no one who has had to del with this bullshit would be so >flip about it.

>
>I know from personal experience--from being teasd as a sissy as a child to >hearing the word "gay" for the first time when I was ten, slung at me as a >slur, discerning only that it meant something I shouldn't want to be >called; from having homophobic remarks yelled at me by cowards driving >quickly by in their cars to the equally cowardly, bigoted students who >made homophobic remarks on my course evaluations--I know from personal >experience that it is generally acceptable to be as openly, publically >homophobic as one pleases, wherever one pleases. It's incrediably >disappointing--and infuriating--to find that this listserv is no exception.
>
> If Phil Primeau was merely joking, then he was a complete ass to let me > think otherwise. If I had made mock bigoted remarks which someone took > seriously, I would go out of my way to say unambiguously that I was just > joking in order to make fun of the bigots. That's the problem with > parody: it takes talent and intelligence to pull it off, and when you > fail, you merely reproduce the very views you were trying to parody.
>
>Even more infuriating is the fact there have been flurries of outraged >posts over any number of similar issues. If he had called women "cunts" in >an obviously derivisive manner (can it be otherwise?), or used words like >nigger or kike or spic instead of "queers", and had refused to state that >indeed he'd intended to be parodic and meant no harm, then this list would >be up in arms! But on the issue of homophobia: a virtual silence?!? This >bothers no one else besides Mark??? I feel like I'm in an episode of the >Twilight Zone!
>
>Tod
>
>Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars. No >real poet has or ever will oppose the honest >release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, >but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works
>will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must >demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought a lot >of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..." Ginsberg that old >cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.

>
>U.S.A.
>VICTORY IN IRAQ
>HOO-AH
>
>PP
>
>
>
>"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
> - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
>
>----------
>Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.

charles alexander / chax press

fold the book inside the book keep it open always read from the inside out speak then

↑ Index

592. Phil Primeau
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

All of you quit your whining and get lives outside of feigning moral outrage over the supposed "oppression" suffered by the 3% of our society.

One needs not look beyond this little storm of discussion to understand why poets have been marginalized by mainstream America. Most of you are living, breathing caricatures. It's pathetic. And hilarious, too. Lots of laughs.

P.S. I'm a fan of the motto," "If it's a joke, it's a joke, and if you don't like it then don't laugh and ignore it instead of being a self-righteous prick."

↑ Index

593. amy king
I'm not racist! I'm not homophobic!
Sun 28 Jan 2007

I just re-read Tod’s post and my own, and I realized that I basically reiterated his main points without actually addressing the immediate and obvious issue at hand: the acceptability of homophobia in whatever form, joke or sermon, it arrives in.

Phil invoked homophobic sentiment in his post for a cause he hasn't clarified yet. The optimist in me thinks he did so to inspire action against the war somehow. The poet in me dismissed it as a lame effort. The human in me ignored the implications of employing homophobia as a tool, once again.

Regardless of Phil's purpose, his invocation of homophobia does speak mountains about the acceptability of anti-gay sentiment in this country, as Tod aptly pointed out. Beyond curtailing offensive remarks, I don't think we have even begun to examine the ways in which we enact and incorporate our biases. Nor do we want to, especially when the immediate repercussions don't pertain to us directly or have bearing on our own safety.

Tod has a very strong point that I find myself in total agreement with (though I'm slow in response by my own conditioned lack of – and numbed -- awareness): Phil has not clarified his position, and by default, appears to be okay with the idea that others may read his remarks as homophobic.

Additional listserve members have responded to Tod's initial post of query with more mockery, as though Tod's anger and fear weren't justified by the anti-gay climate and society we live in. Instead, he was, in turn, mocked for not 'getting it,' thus creating another sect of righteous elitism (I.e. "We understand the parody; he's just too sensitive"). Since then, he has clarified why he was so distraught by Phil's post with some very real and harsh reasons -- and Phil and his defenders respond with the ease of silence.

How sad that a few words from Phil, and a few less from some insensitive others, could have cleared the air on the list many posts ago. How sad that I didn't bat an eye at the language Phil invoked because I just thought his "joke" was flat and didn't even think about the weight of using, yet again, more homophobic language in such an ineffective way that might be problematic.

I'm no censor, but I do know, from experience, that none of us is above examining the ways in which we might be homophobic and perpetuate that kind of hate – but such an examination requires a suppression of pride and an acknowledgement that we are, to some degree, products of our environment. That acknowledgment also requires we assume responsibility for the language we use and the necessary explanations when we are misunderstood, even when people assume our good intentions.

I grew up in a culture where racism was finely-woven into the fabric of the reality that I knew. When I moved north, I chose to commit to an extreme self-examination of the ways in which racism informed my behaviors and the things I said. I learned by trial and error, and very often, that required me to be humble. I've had to explain myself, apologize, and feel embarrassed by my own fallibility.

So have I purged myself of my racist beliefs? Hell no. Even recently, I found myself questioning a very subtle lens I was viewing a friend through. I had to re-think something even deeper in relation to a racist notion I didn't even realize I harbored. But I'm a liberal who believes in speaking out against stereotypes and demanding inalienable rights across the board! But my intellect doesn't mean I'm exempt from holding people beside the looking glass of this cultures' firmly-planted racism – and therefore, I'm not above examining my own behaviors. This same argument holds true for my own homophobia.

Okay, this is getting too sermon-like, apologies, but as I mentioned and Tod has already clearly noted, I really don't believe we've developed any kind of awareness of just how perpetuated and acceptable homophobia is, even among us joking liberals. Mock those absurdities all you want, but until we get some sort of handle on the very real and complex system of homophobia, we should at least make a conscious effort to be sensitive when it comes to employing insurrectionary tools that use that derogatory language, and that of any other "ism".

Amy

Finding fabulous fares is fun.
Let Yahoo! FareChase search your favorite travel sites to find flight and hotel bargains.

↑ Index

594. Alan Sondheim

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

Wow Phil you got me on this one! And thanks for telling me why I've been marginalized. I suppose you fight your battles on the streets - not like the rest of us chained to our computers.

Of course we're pathetic, and you're right on calling us on it!

And your motto - that 'prick' comment - terrific. Love the anatomical issue, and the little woman with the bun in the oven appreciates it too.

- Alan (who agrees with everything Ann Coulter writes)

On Sun, 28 Jan 2007, Phil Primeau wrote:

> All of you quit your whining and get lives outside of feigning moral outrage over the supposed "oppression" suffered by the 3% of our society.
>
> One needs not look beyond this little storm of discussion to understand why > poets have been marginalized by mainstream America. Most of you are living, breathing caricatures. It's pathetic. And hilarious, too. Lots of laughs.

>
> P.S. I'm a fan of the motto," "If it's a joke, it's a joke, and if you don't like it then don't laugh and ignore it instead of being a self-righteous prick."

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

595. Michael Tod Edgerton

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

"SUPPOSED oppression"?!? Tell Mathew Shepard's or Brandon Teena's family that they're making too big a deal out of their loved one's "supposed oppression". Tell that to anyone who's been gaybashed, who's gone through months or even years of "conversion" therapy, of painful denial and self-hatred, whose families and friends have turned their backs on them.

And I'm the "self-righteous prick"? So everyone who's ever spoken out about oppression should just shut up and stop being self-righteous pricks, or does that only apply to those speaking out against that oppression which only affects the mere "3%" (not accurate--not that any such statistic could be) who, therefore, as you seem to feel, simlply don't matter? You fucking asshole!

I think this post makes your bigoted views crystal clear, and none of us "3 percenters" on the list (though where are they all now?!?) should have to deal with this bullshit.

I certainly wish I hadn't read your post at all!

What else can I, in my "self-righteous" anger, say to you: Go to hell.

And for the rest of the list--NO, it is NOT best to simply ignore these people. I frankly resent being told--privately--to be quiet and let it "just go away" (the problem doesn't just go away). Certainly, for my own well-being, I need both to express my anger and, then, let it go.

James Baldwin, from "Notes for a Native Son":

Hatred, which could destroy so much, never failed to destroy the man [sic] who hated and this was an immutable law. It began to seem that one would have to hold in the mind forever two ideas which seemed in opposition. The first was acceptance, the acceptance, totally without rancor, of life as it is, and men as they are: in the light of this idea, it goes without saying that injustice is a commonplace. But this did not mean that one could be complacent, for the second idea was of equal power: that one must never, in one's own life, accept these injustices as commonplace but must fight them with all one's strength. This fight begins, however, in the heart and it now had been laid to my charge to keep my own heart free of hatred and despair.

Tod

Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All of you quit your whining and get lives outside of feigning moral outrage over the supposed "oppression" suffered by the 3% of our society.

One needs not look beyond this little storm of discussion to understand why poets have been marginalized by mainstream America. Most of you are living, breathing caricatures. It's pathetic. And hilarious, too. Lots of laughs.

P.S. I'm a fan of the motto," "If it's a joke, it's a joke, and if you don't like it then don't laugh and ignore it instead of being a self-righteous prick."

"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
- Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

TV dinner still cooling?
Check out "Tonight's Picks" on Yahoo! TV.

↑ Index

596. V Nicholas LoLordo

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

I think this episode, and countless others like it on the Poetics list, can be understood pretty easily.

The notion of political correctness, and the whole tedious right-wing mobilization against it, gives fundamentally cruel people the option of seeing themselves as brave crusaders against oppression or clear-eyed seekers of truth.

In any particular case, the person may actually think of himself as a courageous free speech hero; most of the time, it's simply the cynical deployment of a convenient defense.

Typically, we--the left--respond with earnest efforts at self- analysis, considerations of the stakes of satire, admissions of the value of free speech, etc, etc. We assume that the person in question is acting in good faith. End result? Much wasted time.

I think Edgerton's question deserves an answer. If we're doomed to be cast as humorless censors, then why not play the part? Is this a moderated list, or isn't it? In a sense, we currently have the worst of both worlds....

***

V Nicholas LoLordo
Assistant Professor
Department of English
University of Nevada-Las Vegas
4505 Maryland Parkway
Box 455011
Las Vegas, NV 89154-5011

Phone: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

597. Michael Cross

Atticus/Finch presents: John Taggart's "Unveiling/Marianne Moore"

Sun 28 Jan 2007

[Please forward this message to all interested parties!]

Atticus/Finch is honored to present you, dear readers, with our ninth chapbook production of poems for readers of poetry, John Taggart’s "Unveiling/Marianne Moore" (a book of poems).

Taggart’s work is as much meditative biography (interestingly charged with the eros and wonder of a reader shook to fidelity and held there by a lifelong effort at interface and understanding) as it is investigative reflection on practice and place. Taggart’s pattern- writing strips the figure of its cultural residue, unveiling the troubled relationship between homage, mentorship, and aufhebung, working Moore’s "bios" through an intimate subjectivization founded on syntactical disruption, insistence, and circularity. Taggart’s shifting sense of "relating to" adds propulsion to the poem's many registers (fragmented stutters and long lines), pushing by paradigmatic degrees of thinking-forth-back-and-between. The subsequent score shows the marks of a master's marginalia superimposed on the specter of a marginalized master. A hyphen that proves, perhaps, Nietzsche's dictum that true homage betrays the master: here Taggart "betrays," not by infidelity or treachery, but by baring, exposing—-making manifest.

Visit our website, www.atticusfinch.org, to read sample poems and take a look at the cover (click on the book's title for all the details). We're still working on getting Pay Pal (I know, I know!), so, until then, all books are mail order only.

To obtain a copy, send $8 (well-concealed cash, check, or money order (made payable to Michael Cross)) to:

Atticus/Finch Chapbooks
c/o Michael Cross
State University of New York at Buffalo
Samuel Clemens Hall #306
Buffalo NY 14260-4610

And keep your eyes peeled for the following A/F volumes:

Patrick F. Durgin, Imitation Poems (Spring/Summer 2007)
Rob Halpern and Taylor Brady, TBA (Fall/Winter 2007)

↑ Index

598. George Bowering
Re: New Beard of Bees Chapbook
Sun 28 Jan 2007

It's ?

On 28-Jan-07, at 7:32 AM, Eric Elshtain wrote:

> Beard of Bees Press is pleased to announce it's first entry of the new > year:
> _No Matter_ by Joel Chace.
>
> http://www.beardofbees.com/chace.html
>
> Yours,
>
> Eric E.
>
> Eric Elshtain

> Editor
> Beard of Bees Press
> http://www.beardofbees.com
>
>
George
Satisfied with his undergarments.

↑ Index

599. Joe Amato
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Right on, Nick, Alan, Tod, Amy, Mark, others...

PP, your insensitivity really lowers the caliber of this list environ. More importantly, you're hurting people. Now please don't respond by saying that you don't give a shit. Each time you post, things get worse.

Tod -- I'm sure you have the support of the vast majority on this list. Now, I don't think I want to see 1000 posts over the next day or two corroborating this fact. The list becomes untenable in that event, ergo Nick's provocation.

At any rate, when we finally get to the point at which someone has baited us into name-calling, esp. here online, not much good will come of same. I can't fault anyone for getting good and pissed, no. But we probably could all stand a cooler rhetoric when confronted with asshole behavior.

Oops. You get the point.

Semper fi,

Joe

> I think this episode, and countless others like it on the Poetics list, can be understood pretty easily.
>
> The notion of political correctness, and the whole tedious right-wing mobilization > against it, gives fundamentally cruel people the option of seeing themselves as brave crusaders against oppression or clear-eyed seekers of truth.
>
> In any particular case, the person may actually think of himself as a courageous free speech hero; most of the time, it's simply the cynical deployment of a convenient defense.

> Typically, we--the left--respond with earnest efforts at self-analysis, considerations of the stakes of satire, admissions of the value of free speech, etc, etc. We assume that the person in question is acting in good faith. End result? Much wasted time.
>
> I think Edgerton's question deserves an answer. If we're doomed to be cast as humorless censors, then why not play the part? Is this a moderated list, or isn't it? In a sense, we currently have the worst of both worlds....
>
> ***
>
> V Nicholas LoLordo
> Assistant Professor
> Department of English
> University of Nevada-Las Vegas
> 4505 Maryland Parkway
> Box 455011
> Las Vegas, NV 89154-5011
>
> Phone: [redacted]
> Fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

600. George Bowering

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

God, this is boring.

On 28-Jan-07, at 12:45 PM, Joe Amato wrote:

> Right on, Nick, Alan, Tod, Amy, Mark, others...
>
> PP, your insensitivity really lowers the caliber of this list environ.
> More importantly, you're hurting people. Now please don't respond > by saying that you don't give a shit. Each time you post, things get > worse.
>
> Tod -- I'm sure you have the support of the vast majority on this > list. Now, I don't think I want to see 1000 posts over the next day > or two corroborating this fact. The list becomes untenable in that > event, ergo Nick's provocation.
>

> At any rate, when we finally get to the point at which someone has > baited us into name-calling, esp. here online, not much good will come > of same. I can't fault anyone for getting good and pissed, no. But we > probably could all stand a cooler rhetoric when confronted with > asshole behavior.
>
> Oops. You get the point.
>
> Semper fi,
>
> Joe
>
>> I think this episode, and countless others like it on the Poetics >> list, can be understood pretty easily.
>>
>> The notion of political correctness, and the whole tedious right-wing >> mobilization
>> against it, gives fundamentally cruel people the option of seeing >> themselves as brave crusaders against oppression or clear-eyed >> seekers of truth.
>>
>> In any particular case, the person may actually think of himself as a >> courageous free speech hero; most of the time, it's simply the >> cynical deployment of a convenient defense.
>>
>> Typically, we--the left--respond with earnest efforts at >> self-analysis, considerations of the stakes of satire, admissions >> of the value of free speech, etc, etc. We assume that the person in >> question is acting in good faith. End result? Much wasted time.
>>
>> I think Edgerton's question deserves an answer. If we're doomed to >> be cast as humorless censors, then why not play the part? Is this a >> moderated list, or isn't it? In a sense, we currently have the worst >> of both worlds....
>>
>>
>> ***
>>
>> V Nicholas LoLordo
>> Assistant Professor
>> Department of English
>> University of Nevada-Las Vegas

>> 4505 Maryland Parkway
>> Box 455011
>> Las Vegas, NV 89154-5011
>>
>> Phone: [redacted]
>> Fax: [redacted]
>
>
George Bowering, M.A.
Acclaimed for his modesty.

↑ Index

601. Poetics List
Poetics List Policy
Sun 28 Jan 2007

---

6. Cautions

"Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. We define 'flaming' as any post that resembles a personal attack or personal insult to anyone--subscriber or not. This of course includes racist, sexist, or other slurs as well as ad hominem arguments in which the person rather than their work is attacked; in other words while critique of a person's work is welcome (critical inquiry is one of the main functions of the list), this critique cannot extend to a critique or criticism of the person.

The listserv is intended to be a productive communal space for discussion and announcements; as such, subscribers who do not follow listserv policy will be removed from the subscription roll.

In enforcing this policy, the editors must consider sometimes competing interests. The basis for our decisions, however, rests with our collective judgment about the kind of space we want for the list.

For reasons of basic security, we do not allow pseudonymous subscriptions or postings.

↑ Index

602. Tom Beckett
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Phil Primeau has a track record of calling people names and looking for attention through provocative remarks. That reflects not at all on his putative targets and says a great deal about his own character. My inclination is to not take the bait. The man needs attention. I, for one, will deny it to him.

↑ Index

603. Christopher Filkins
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Sun 28 Jan 2007

William Stafford. William Everson.

Try educating yourself Phil. It helps.

On 1/27/07 12:02 AM, "Phil Primeau" <[redacted]> wrote:

> All wars are poets' wars. No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..." Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.
>
> U.S.A.
> VICTORY IN IRAQ
> HOO-AH
>
> PP

↑ Index

604. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

I agree. On this list, at least, the horse has died.
By saying this, I don't at all mean to diminish the wider relevance of hate/stupidity/bigotry as an issue, but I don't read Poetics for that.

How about your reactions to
http://www.thecommonreview.org/spotlight.html
as it affects cultivating a readership for poetry?

I assume, from many posts here, that E. D. Hirsch, Jr.
may not seem relevant. I also assume that, in some ways, the kinds of poetry many of us write today may not require much in the way of background knowledge for "comprehension," the "materiality" of the text having supplanted the need for such sophistication with an appetite for a different kind of sophistication (e.g., Gertrude Stein's, et seq.). Anyhow, this topic might provoke a discussion of audience, at least, and of the role of a basic understanding of grammar and of syntax in order to appreciate their innovative warping as strenghthening corrugation of the materia poetica.

Time to shift gears?

~ Dan

----- Original Message -----
From: "George Bowering" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, January 28, 2007 3:51 PM
Subject: Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

> God, this is boring.
>
> On 28-Jan-07, at 12:45 PM, Joe Amato wrote:
>
> Right on, Nick, Alan, Tod, Amy, Mark, others...
>
> PP, your insensitivity really lowers the caliber of this list environ.
> *More importantly, you're hurting people. Now please don't respond by* > saying that you don't give a shit. Each time you post, things get worse.
>
> Tod -- I'm sure you have the support of the vast majority on this list.
> Now, I don't think I want to see 1000 posts over the next day or two > corroborating this fact. The list becomes untenable in that event, ergo > Nick's provocation.
>
> At any rate, when we finally get to the point at which someone has baited > us into name-calling, esp. here online, not much good will come of same.
> I can't fault anyone for getting good and pissed, no. But we probably > could all stand a cooler rhetoric when confronted with asshole behavior.
>
> Oops. You get the point.
>
> Semper fi,
>
> Joe
>
> I think this episode, and countless others like it on the Poetics list,

> can be understood pretty easily.
>
> The notion of political correctness, and the whole tedious right-wing mobilization > against it, gives fundamentally cruel people the option of seeing themselves as brave crusaders against oppression or clear-eyed seekers of truth.
>
> In any particular case, the person may actually think of himself as a courageous free speech hero; most of the time, it's simply the cynical deployment of a convenient defense.
>
> Typically, we--the left--respond with earnest efforts at self-analysis, considerations of the stakes of satire, admissions of the value of free speech, etc, etc. We assume that the person in question is acting in good faith. End result? Much wasted time.
>
> I think Edgerton's question deserves an answer. If we're doomed to be cast as humorless censors, then why not play the part? Is this a moderated list, or isn't it? In a sense, we currently have the worst of both worlds....
>
> ***
>
> V Nicholas LoLordo
> Assistant Professor
> Department of English
> University of Nevada-Las Vegas
> 4505 Maryland Parkway
> Box 455011
> Las Vegas, NV 89154-5011
>
> Phone: [redacted]
> Fax: [redacted]
>
> George Bowering, M.A.
> Acclaimed for his modesty.

↑ Index

605. Aaron Belz

Ten Jens in St. Louis - Feb 1

Sun 28 Jan 2007

Good lord, it looks as though this is actually going to happen:

Jen Hofer
Jen Bervin
Jen Chapis
Jen Coleman
Jen Mueller
Jen MacKenzie
Jen Robinson
Jen Woods
Jen Gaby
Jen Scappettone
and Jen Lyons

...Are all reading on the same night, February 1, at the Bottleworks in St. Louis, MO. More info can be found at the series website, http://observable.org/readings/ There's even a printable handbill for you to post on your bulletin board- the perfect conversation starter.

It is the most ambitions Observable Reading ever! If you're anywhere within striking range, I hope you'll be there. It's free, as usual.

Aaron

P.S. There are actually eleven, if you count them. I don't know how that happened.

↑ Index

606. Simon DeDeo
rhubarb is susan
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Hello all --

Three updates to rhubarb is susan this week: a review of Roberto Tejada's Krupskaya book, and one of Rachel Loden:

http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/rachel-loden-lives-of-saints.html
http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/roberto-tejada-retreat-amgd_28.html

as well as some reminisences of MIT:

http://rhubarbissusan.blogspot.com/2007/01/steven-levys-hackers.html

Thanks for tuning in, and do join the discussion if you like.

Yours,

Simon

↑ Index

607. Anny Ballardini

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

---

since I am blushing at my mistakes let me reformulate, since this morning "chained at my pc" and it is past midnight here, also thanks to Beckett and Zimmerman for the new directions, anyhow here's what I wanted to say:

I was taught that to work is a privilege, honestly earned bread has to be on your table.

apologies.

On 1/28/07, Anny Ballardini <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> This is very worrying:
> "The last acceptable bigotry in America is to be against the working > class."
>
> I was thought that to work is a honorable privilege, honest earned bread > has to be on the table.
>
>
> On 1/28/07, Haas Bianchi <[redacted]> wrote:
> >
> > The last acceptable bigotry in America is to be against the working > > class.
> > If you live in the Midwest or Northeast you know what I mean. At least > > Homosexuals have social currency but what does the resident of Flint, > > Michigan have?
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> > On
> > Behalf Of Ruth Lepson
> > Sent: Sunday, January 28, 2007 10:34 AM
> > To: [redacted]
> > Subject: Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
> >
> > I didn't respond bec I thought it was a joke tho in bad taste & so many > > people were writing abt it & one can't respond to everything but do feel
> > bad

> > for anyone who has been hurt by those exchanges. But the futurist > > manifesto
> > included a phrase against feminism which no one mentioned--but they were > > against everything in that adolescent male way that can be revolutionary
> > or > > hurtful or fun or all 3. There weren't exactly hordes of writers > > defending > > women in the last exchanges abt that so don't start criticizing women
> > now!
> > we need to support each other.
> >
> >
> > On 1/28/07 11:17 AM, "Michael Tod Edgerton" <[redacted]
> > >
> > wrote:
> >
> > > First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I > > > cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at > > > Phil Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I > > > would think he would be horrified to think of the effect his words > > > would have on someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt > > > no. It is even more astounding that the responses that have come have > > > been completely inane and certainly beside the point.
> > >
> > > Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the > > > point of my completely RHETORICAL question.
> > >
> > > Jason Q and Alexander J's belittling of the issue is completely > > > asinine and insensitive. Your "Love God's Way" site is only partly > > > funny and partly terrifying, and mostly funny only to those who aren't > > affected by it at all.
> > > There are real people who get caught up in those bullshit christian > > > conversion programs, who are in a lot of pain; those programs only > > make it
> > a lot worse.
> > > As riduculous and deserving of ridicule as they are, in the context of
> > > this > > > (non) discussion, it's a tacky move to post that. I can't believe that
> >
> > > you're anything but straight to denounce my "righteousness"; no one > > > who has had to del with this bullshit would be so flip about it.
> > >

> > > I know from personal experience--from being teasd as a sissy as a > > > child to hearing the word "gay" for the first time when I was ten,
> > > slung at me as a slur, discerning only that it meant something I > > > shouldn't want to be called; from having homophobic remarks yelled at > > > me by cowards driving quickly by in their cars to the equally > > > cowardly, bigoted students who made homophobic remarks on my course
> > > evaluations--I know from personal experience that it is generally > > > acceptable to be as openly, publically homophobic as one pleases, > > > wherever one pleases. It's incrediably disappointing--and > > infuriating--to > > find that this listserv is no exception.
> > >
> > > If Phil Primeau was merely joking, then he was a complete ass to let > > > me think otherwise. If I had made mock bigoted remarks which someone > > > took seriously, I would go out of my way to say unambiguously that I > > > was just joking in order to make fun of the bigots. That's the problem
> >
> > > with parody: it takes talent and intelligence to pull it off, and when > > > you fail, you merely reproduce the very views you were trying to > > parody.
> > >
> > > Even more infuriating is the fact there have been flurries of outraged
> >
> > > posts over any number of similar issues. If he had called women
> > > "cunts" in an obviously derivisive manner (can it be otherwise?), or > > > used words like nigger or kike or spic instead of "queers", and had > > > refused to state that indeed he'd intended to be parodic and meant no > > harm, then this list would be up in arms!
> > > But on the issue of homophobia: a virtual silence?!? This bothers no > > > one else besides Mark??? I feel like I'm in an episode of the Twilight
> >
> > Zone!
> > >
> > > Tod
> > >
> > > Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars.
> > > No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed > > > conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but > > > everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works
> > > will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must > > > demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought > > > a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..."

> > > Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man.
> > His
> > cowardice. Hhaa.
> > >
> > > U.S.A.
> > > VICTORY IN IRAQ
> > > HOO-AH
> > >
> > > PP
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > "There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
> > > - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
> > >
> > > ---
> > > Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.
> >
>
>

↑ Index

608. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

---

no shit.

George Bowering wrote:
> God, this is boring.
>
>
> On 28-Jan-07, at 12:45 PM, Joe Amato wrote:
>
>> Right on, Nick, Alan, Tod, Amy, Mark, others...
>>
>> PP, your insensitivity really lowers the caliber of this list environ.
>> More importantly, you're hurting people. Now please don't respond >> by saying that you don't give a shit. Each time you post, things get >> worse.
>>
>> Tod -- I'm sure you have the support of the vast majority on this >> list. Now, I don't think I want to see 1000 posts over the next day >> or two corroborating this fact. The list becomes untenable in that >> event, ergo Nick's provocation.

>>
>> At any rate, when we finally get to the point at which someone has >> baited us into name-calling, esp. here online, not much good will come >> of same. I can't fault anyone for getting good and pissed, no. But we >> probably could all stand a cooler rhetoric when confronted with >> asshole behavior.
>>
>> Oops. You get the point.
>>
>> Semper fi,
>>
>> Joe
>>
>>> I think this episode, and countless others like it on the Poetics >>> list, can be understood pretty easily.
>>>
>>> The notion of political correctness, and the whole tedious right-wing
>>> mobilization
>>> against it, gives fundamentally cruel people the option of seeing >>> themselves as brave crusaders against oppression or clear-eyed >>> seekers of truth.
>>>
>>> In any particular case, the person may actually think of himself as a >>> courageous free speech hero; most of the time, it's simply the >>> cynical deployment of a convenient defense.
>>>
>>> Typically, we--the left--respond with earnest efforts at
>>> self-analysis, considerations of the stakes of satire, admissions >>> of the value of free speech, etc, etc. We assume that the person in >>> question is acting in good faith. End result? Much wasted time.
>>>
>>> I think Edgerton's question deserves an answer. If we're doomed to >>> be cast as humorless censors, then why not play the part? Is this a >>> moderated list, or isn't it? In a sense, we currently have the worst >>> of both worlds....
>>>
>>>
>>> ***
>>>

>>> V Nicholas LoLordo
>>> Assistant Professor
>>> Department of English
>>> University of Nevada-Las Vegas
>>> 4505 Maryland Parkway
>>> Box 455011
>>> Las Vegas, NV 89154-5011
>>>
>>> Phone: [redacted]
>>> Fax: [redacted]
>>
>>
>>
> George Bowering, M.A.
> Acclaimed for his modesty.

↑ Index

609. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

This is a serious question, and maybe an attempt to direct this exchange in a more useful and interesting direction. Phil's original remark wasn't directed at any one person, but it has met with specific calls like this one against him as a person, many of which have even invoked 'list policy' as a reason for censuring him. I personally don't think such things are useful, and that the level of outrage directed at Phil's admittedly bad joke have not been commensurate with the outrageousness of his initial statement which to me was obviously a sort of satire of the kinds of gung ho patriotism that have been so common in political discourse over the last couple of years. to me, the whole thing looks like an attack on the parodist rather than the subject he's parodying, and that seems very misguided to me.

to Matthew tod Edgerton's and others points, what i find very discouraging on a list full of people who are engaged with language at the level of poetry, many of whom make a living by teaching people about poetry, is that there seems to be so little understanding that the parody Phil posted was not aimed at homosexuals, but rather at the blockheads who equate homosexuality with weakness and cowardice. Now, that equation itself has a certain kind of cultural currency, the underlying assumptions of which are not anti-gay so much as they are anti-woman. to whit: being sexually attracted to men is a feminine characteristic, therefore men who exhibit the trait are feminine and not masculine and therefore lack the strength, bravery, and power of masculinity. The logic of the belief system is terribly flawed, but when it goes unanalyzed it has the force of stereotypical caricatures of the swishy queen obsessed with musical theater, the shrieking 'girlish' (a word i dislike, but use for lack of a better one) man who appears to aspire to the traditional female archetype of damsel in distress. Such images have long been the object of masculine scorn, and i think that satirical treatments of that scorn such as the one in phil's initial post are therefore useful and serve a good end by revealing the barrenness of the underlying cultural logic. Self-righteously smacking down the effort because in the effort taboo words were used (which is my impression) is therefore counterproductive and only serves to reinforce other rightwing stereotypes of hypersensitive, overeducated politically correct liberals who have little to no contact with 'the real world' and are therefore not worth listening to.

I have nothing more to say on the subject. Please commence to tell me I'm an insensitive bigot for disagreeing with the consensus view that Phil Primeau's remarks were the remarks of an insensitive bigot.

Tom Beckett wrote:
> Phil Primeau has a track record of calling people names and looking for > attention through provocative remarks. That reflects not at all on his putative > targets and says a great deal about his own character. My inclination is to > not take the bait. The man needs attention. I, for one, will deny it to > him.
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

610. Derek Rogerson
Poetics List
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Dear Poetics List subscribers:

Can someone here kindly post or contact me directly with the names of the people responsible for this list, its maintenance, operation, moderation and publishing standards, and how one might contact them to begin a dialogue?

In recent years this once exceptional academic list has deteriorated into a haven for libel and slander. I can no longer keep silent. Because I have been a member of this list (and also a direct victim of the libel it continues to tolerate) and this list chooses to syndicate its content on all the search engines and throughout the internet my name through my signature and other list members citation of my name has made my identity irrevocably associated with the content appearing here. In short, this list has become a source of professional embarrassment for me and a serious liability in professional advancement.

There are messages the list has allowed which attack my person and use my name in malicious ways knowing that the content will appear on the internet through the search engines. It is truly hurtful and harmful to my person to see this happening and yet I know that others have been targeted for defamation, slander and libel even worse than myself. I hope this message reaches them wherever they are and that they too can join a dialogue to discuss how to repair these very serious mistakes that have allowed malicious content to be published on this public list.

I think the best thing to do is to recognize that libel, slander and defamation does indeed get published on this list and to agree that this is not acceptable when the list is very public and deliberately syndicated throughout the internet and the search engines. We should use this thread on the list to make these admissions.

The next thing we should do is look at the mechanisms available to us to correct the damage and discuss options to repair it.

I'm not sure who runs this list. There is a generic message (the "welcome message") which occasional appears and contains rules and regulations of use but never in the many years that I have been a member of this list have I seen any enactment of those rules even as those rules are sometimes broken daily. If anything, the "welcome message" is reposted with more frequency as the only method available to list owners to moderate the malicious activity which occurs on the list.

Certainly if the executive officers of the university and its associated schools were made aware of even a sprinkling of some of the content it is publishing on this list it would shut-down the list in a heartbeat. I hope we can bring structure and reason to bear in an effort to avoid this (because eventually that would happen) and salvage, rebuild, and reclaim what was, again, once a proud literary resource.

Please don't pollute this thread with unhelpful comments. Let's pull our boots up by the straps and not be afraid to admit our mistakes in an effort to support and be a resource for everyone. The Poetics List has lost its way and must reacquire its sense of direction. How do we achieve this? Do you agree it's necessary? What is the next step?

Sincerely and without malice,

Derek Rogerson
Poetics List Subscriber

↑ Index

611. Mairead Byrne

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

---

pp must have been joking. Poetry IS gay. If you took those three letters out of poetry, poetry would be heartbroken. And not in a good way, i.e., a way that could ever be productive. But in an as in dead way. Mairead

>>> [redacted] 01/28/07 1:23 PM >>>
Hi Tod,

I read Phil's post as an attempt at parody, though I didn't find it funny or creative in any regard. You're right: people attempt to mock very biased and extreme notions at risk of perpetuating the ideas -- mostly by default though. I think (& perhaps this is too generous on my part?) people want to mock those idiotic ideals, but don't really go about doing so in any clever or inventive way. It's almost as though they believe that simply repeating the extreme statements is enough to show how stupid those notions are (i.e. "only queers oppose the war" - extremists believe this wild notion as well as the opposite one that only queers support the war -- think Westboro Church).

Honestly, I think your anger at Phil's post is moreover about the irresponsibility of following that tired old method of just repeating the idiocies, as though that would drive the point home and cause us to act -- doing so in such a simplistic fashion that he risks confirming the beliefs of any extremists on the list. Phil didn't really employ any kind of imaginative use of language to point out something most of us on here didn't already know. I mean, who doesn't know that in order to dismiss Ginsberg's anti-war sentiment (& the power his version held) one simply pulls an ad hominem attack focused on his being gay or Jewish? We get it, we've heard it over and over, and it still isn't funny to hear it mocked. And sorry, but the same stale old mockery won't call anyone to action in an effort to oppose the war. Were we supposed to get angry that Ginsberg has been dismissed in the past and he continued to audibly oppose the war? Were we then suppose to feel guilt that he did so in the face of such miserable dismissals of his character? I'm sorry, Phil, but I'm trying to guess the intended trajectory of your parody, the effect was supposed to cause ...

So what works? Well, on this list, I'm going out on a limb here to say that we're probably all in close proximity on the belief scale of "live and let live", even if we don't "condone" certain behaviors within our "personal" lives. Hell, most of America is, if you ask the general public. There is a general consensus in our democracy that we should all share certain rights by birth, and any favoritism or uneven distribution of civil rights is ludicrous. So how do we go about determing and enacting what Phil might have been attempting to provoke? An action towards demanding those rights? Making the poets speak out and oppose the war? Do something to stop it? There are multiple ways that don't always have immediate and obvious effects, but we can see the tide is changing now.

As far as opposing anti-gay sentiment goes, an issue Phil perhaps didn't intend to invoke but is mixed up in here just the same, that's a seemingly bottomless can of worms that we can't seem to get a lid on. Anti-gay sentiment is actively promoted by the religious right, by very liberal heterosexuals, and even subtly within the gay community itself (though I'm not going to start my own gay bashing campaign here by identifying how). How do we respond to the absurd logic of it all? Little by little in classrooms, through media, in conversation, writing letters to our representatives, via comedy, etc. I like Larry Black's response to the political right's proclamation that "Homosexuality is a threat to the American family": http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6WW6AFu1RF0 - his final scenario isn't politically correct, but it draws attention, in an artificial and crude way (that's also somewhat clever), to the absurdity of this slogan. Ah, comedy: always about something serious. The great leveler, etc. But not all comedy is successful, eh?

I mentioned the Westboro church before -- even a Fox News anchor tries to respond to these idiots by turning their language in on them -- "You are an abomination!" No show-stopping intellectual arguments here: just a nice little twist, that I'm sure was unplanned, but worthwhile just the same. The Australian guy, also far from behaving in a politically correct fashion, takes the extermist's over-preached and worn-out abstract notion that homosexuality is bad by invading the extermist's comfort zone: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=S8cN2pB3MCE No great shakes, but it's nice to see the confident foundation of dogmatic preaching grow extremely uncomfortable in the face of what he knows is "bad" and not know what to do with it up close. The self-proclaimed Man of God runs to get his mommy, poor baby.

Anyway, I'm not coming up with stellar examples here - but I'd say this issue is larger than whether or not Phil made it clear if he were joking or not. I think the issue is about the effectiveness of his joke, whether or not his purpose was recognized, if his cause were taken up by a few or more, and if there are dangers in his methodology (as noted by Tod).

In my humble (and perhaps, singular) opinion, this debate warrants much more attention because it speaks to the even larger issue of how do we get messages across and believed on a larger scale. If I got mad every time I heard someone jokingly dismiss certain views because a bitch or a dyke or an oppressed woman held them, no matter how lame or misguided the attempt, I'd be in a state of perpetual anger -- and an ineffective citizen.

My twenty five and a half cents,

Amy King

p.s. I'm a fan of the motto, "If it's a joke, we should both be laughing." etc.

Get your own web address.
Have a HUGE year through Yahoo! Small Business.

↑ Index

612. Joe Amato
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Jason, I hear you. But someone who writes

"feigning moral outrage over the supposed 'oppression' suffered by the 3% of our society" is not operating satirically. Or am I missing something? If the satire seemed clumsy to some of us, it's possibly b/c behind it lay this kind of attitude.

Now if I'm wrong about this, I'm willing to say so. But that would require that PP admit to caring about those identified via his "satire" as targets of scorn -- among which are gays.

OK? This really isn't rocket science. All PP has to admit to is caring about the situation that Tod so passionately decries. And that's real easy to do. Real easy.

Best,

Joe

↑ Index

613. Lea Graham
Re: My Blog has Changed
Sun 28 Jan 2007

---

that's good. now fill the fucker out! can't wait to see it. send them a photo that has me in it!!

how are you?

i'm weirdly better this week, but confused. stay/leave? i'm moving into another apt. in the next week. wish you were coming down.

more later brother.
----- Original Message -----
From: "Haas Bianchi" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, January 28, 2007 11:46 AM
Subject: My Blog has Changed

> Some of you read my blog at collagepoet.blogspot.com
>
> That blog is not accessable to me anymore as I screwed up the move from Blogger to Google so
> I have a new blog http://irasiblepoet.blogspot.com/
>
> Raymond L Bianchi
> chicagopostmodernpoetry.com/
> collagepoetchicago.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

614. Lea Graham
oops
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Apologies for the mis-sent note. LG

↑ Index

615. Jesse Crockett
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Nobody is just a caricature, Phil. Someone said, and i paraphrase, that the most boring actual person is much more complex than the most interesting character from the literature.

But yeah, don't just be a poet. Be an editor. Listenlight <http://listenlight.net> gets me laid.

Peace.

Phil Primeau wrote:
> All of you quit your whining and get lives outside of feigning moral > outrage
> over the supposed "oppression" suffered by the 3% of our society.
>
> One needs not look beyond this little storm of discussion to > understand why > poets have been marginalized by mainstream America. Most of you are > living,
> breathing caricatures. It's pathetic. And hilarious, too. Lots of laughs.
>
> P.S. I'm a fan of the motto," "If it's a joke, it's a joke, and if you > don't > like it then don't laugh and ignore it instead of being a self-righteous > prick."

↑ Index

616. me
a new START . . .
Sun 28 Jan 2007

Announcing, pronouncing, denouncing, and renouncing the beginning of the end of the beginning of the end of a mentotal, insanitary, totemporal, monumomentary, sermonotonal, solomovement:

http://gringocarioca.com

Please feel free to spread the WORD . . .

Enjoy,

gringocarioca

P.S. This message will (not) self-deconstruct!

--
http://gringocarioca.blogspot.com

↑ Index

617. ALDON L NIELSEN

Re: Homophobia: The least acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tone?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

Dear George:

I know we haven't been in correspondence so much lately, but when I saw you invoke my name so directly, and on the POETICS list no less (hey -- this omniscience thing brings a lot to my attention), I thought I'd better clear something up.

I thought that everyone knew that part in my book where it says I gave those guys up to unclean lusts after one another was a parody. We certainly got a big laugh out of it at the writers' conference. I'm really sorry the joke hasn't come off so well these past few millennia. I'm even sorrier to hear you're bored. I think you'll find the next edition a whole lot clearer on this and just about every other subject. Up here, we're astonished at what a tin ear most of you have for tone. I suppose translation is part of the problem.

On the other hand, that part about me coming back soon was meant in all seriousness. Y'all better start getting your ducks in a line. You might start by treating one another as you would be treated. I hope that part, at least, came across even in the Canadian Revised Standard Version.

Give my regards to all -- Remind them that I'm watching.

Yours,
God

On Sun, 28 Jan 2007 12:51:27 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:

God, this is boring.

↑ Index

618. Eric

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Sun 28 Jan 2007

>>Tell that to anyone who's been gaybashed, who's gone through months or even years of "conversion" therapy, of painful denial and self-hatred, whose families and friends have turned their backs on them.

Tod makes a good point, but there's no really sense privileging being gay or female or disabled or of minority ethnicity. There's no sense in privileging being bookish or smarter or exceedingly average or exceptionally beautiful or exceedingly stupid.

Everybody suffers and gets picked on ... and the degree to which they suffer or get picked on is not necessarily a function of their "group" identification. All kinds of people get bashed, and when they get bashed, they get bashed as individuals, not groups. Tanya gets bashed or Tony gets bashed, and their blood on the sidewalk is an individual's blood, not the blood of some Platonic "group." Not gay blood or straight blood or ethnic blood ... an individual's blood.

In fact, these Gramscian notions of "group rights" trumping "individual rights" probably do more harm than good. They fragment an already fragmented people ... bitter little enclaves hypersensitive to their oppressed group identity, facing off against the "oppressive master narrative" that is in reality our cumulative culture.

All of which is not to argue against sensitivity or the prosecution of hate crimes, but rather to argue against the labels through which sensitivity is dispensed. All these Gramscian labels, these group sensitivities, are, paradoxically, desensitizing to our universal fear and vulnerability. Instead of emphasizing the ways we cannot understand each other ("you as a nonchessplayer cannot possibly understand the suffering and alienation I, as a chessplayer, have endured in mainstream America") perhaps we would be better served by emphasizing the ways we can understand each other ... as individuals.

Cold comfort to someone who's been bashed for being perceived as "gay," but again, and this is the point, cold comfort to that individual.

↑ Index

619. Alexander Jorgensen
Last Word on "Last Acceptable Bigotry in America"
Mon 29 Jan 2007

For the record, it's probably best we don't assume any of the figures involved in what seems to be spiraling into something other than a flippant and, perhaps, misinterpreted or not remark are pious - nor any of the individuals providing commentary.

To Derek Rogerson: While your speech thoughtful, you do not have the right to have your feelings protected. Sorry, but that's what mothers are for, or lovers, friends - nor, I think, to come off as a kind of tattle-tale.

And, of course, nobody has considered how bigotry towards Asian-Americans is welcome by nearly everybody (but, of course, mostly in those subtle ways easily brushed off by the mainstream) - and now I am focusing on the US, mostly because of the reliable parochial tone spouted by many on this list. Were we talking about white working class folk? Because if we're not honest, here - especially given the theatrics and moral overtones.

Of the link I posted and was derided, it came byway - http://www.crooksandliars.com/2007/01/26/

[The music that makes you “A Gay”
Filed Under: Wingnuts, Satire, Religious Right, Gay Rights] Hardly hate-speech-filled or Islamophobic, this website should be visited often.

Has anyone ever heard or used the term: FISH? DARK MEAT? I sure haven't, but then again I like to pretend, as some of us do, that people are, generally speaking, warm-hearted.

Since some of us have bit knowledge of multiple cultures, let's leave it at that. I don't want to be accused of perpetuating/promulgating (not quite as lazy as was yesterday morning, the haze of wonderful Bacchanalia performance @ 2:30am in bitterly cold Milwaukee having worn off) that old humbug, insensitivity - words all I have, at this moment, against the dog-eat-dog.

We have our opinions, sure, some more informed than others, which is to be expected - par the course, as they say. But I am bewildered and sincerely troubled as to why we've been reminded of the POETICS LIST POLICY.? As to why omnipotent eyes might warn us against flaming (on this one). Sure, Phil's a flamer, but any well-centered individual is apt to be from time to time.

Must say that I find it offensive when someone who doesn't know me starts calling me bad names or using bad words both in their postings and via back channel. Too, I find this US-style barbarity with regards to controlling ideas and speech an exacting poison. Tika-tika-tika-tika...

I think am glad Aldon, George and Mairead are out there looking over us, he said.

AGJ

___ Expecting? Get great news right away with email Auto-Check. Try the Yahoo! Mail Beta.
http://advision.webevents.yahoo.com/mailbeta/newmail_tools.html

↑ Index

620. Alexander Jorgensen

Re: Homophobia: The least acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tone?

Mon 29 Jan 2007

For the record, it's probably best we don't assume any of the figures involved in what seems to be spiraling into something other than a flippant and, perhaps, misinterpreted or not remark are pious - nor any of the individuals providing commentary.

To Derek Rogerson: While your speech thoughtful, you do not have the right to have your feelings protected.
Sorry, but that's what mothers are for, or lovers, friends - nor, I think, to come off as a kind of tattle-tale.

And, of course, nobody has considered how bigotry towards Asian-Americans is welcome by nearly everybody (but, of course, mostly in those subtle ways easily brushed off by the mainstream) - and now I am focusing on the US, mostly because of the reliable parochial tone spouted by many on this list. Were we talking about white working class folk? Because if we're not honest, here - especially given the theatrics and moral overtones.

Bigotry. Seems some are so far removed they lack the insight to even feign righteousness convincingly.

Of the link I posted and was derided, it came byway -
http://www.crooksandliars.com/2007/01/26/

[The music that makes you “A Gay”
Filed Under: Wingnuts, Satire, Religious Right, Gay Rights] Hardly hate-speech-filled or Islamophobic, this website should be visited often.

Has anyone ever heard or used the term: FISH? DARK MEAT? I sure haven't, but then again I like to pretend, as some of us do, that people are, generally speaking, warm-hearted.

Since some of us have bit knowledge of multiple cultures, let's leave it at that. I don't want to be accused of perpetuating/promulgating (not quite as lazy as was yesterday morning, the haze of wonderful Bacchanalia performance @ 2:30am in bitterly cold Milwaukee having worn off) that old humbug, insensitivity - words all I have, at this moment, against the dog-eat-dog.

We have our opinions, sure, some more informed than others, which is to be expected - par the course, as they say. But I am bewildered and sincerely troubled as to why we've been reminded of the POETICS LIST POLICY.? As to why omnipotent eyes might warn us against flaming (on this one). Sure, Phil's a flamer, but any well-centered individual is apt to be from time to time.

Must say that I find it offensive when someone who doesn't know me starts calling me bad names or using bad words both in their postings and via back channel. Too, I find this US-style barbarity with regards to controlling ideas and speech an exacting poison. Tika-tika-tika-tika...

I think am glad Aldon, George and Mairead are out there looking over us, he said.

AGJ

___ Any questions? Get answers on any topic at www.Answers.yahoo.com. Try it now.

↑ Index

621. Laura Winton
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?
Mon 29 Jan 2007

There are still lots of acceptable forms of bigotry. Making fun of fat people. (New Eddie Murphy movie anyone?) Making fun of the working class. (I know exactly what you mean and have ranted against it at more than one piece of theatre.) Fag jokes. It's always tempting to chime in with which bigotry is still most prevalent or still acceptable, but then we risk getting sucked into what I call "suffering contests."

All bigotry is bullshit whether it's "socially acceptable" or not. It's maybe more depressing when it's socially acceptable . . .

I didn't see the original post at the time because I'm so swamped with work, so now I'm kind of behind in the whole thing. But from the repost in the response, surely it had to be meant as an ironic rant about the marginalization of poetry and the marginalized people who write it. I say surely as in I certainly hope so anyway . . . I suppose this is where text alone fails us--irony vs. sincere bigotry get hard to sort out without winks, gestures, tones of voice.

(Thank god for emoticons.)

=8-0

-----Original Message-----
From: Haas Bianchi [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, January 28, 2007 11:06 AM
Subject: Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?

The last acceptable bigotry in America is to be against the working class. If you live in the Midwest or Northeast you know what I mean. At least Homosexuals have social currency but what does the resident of Flint, Michigan have?

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ruth Lepson
Sent: Sunday, January 28, 2007 10:34 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America?

I didn't respond bec I thought it was a joke tho in bad taste & so many people were writing abt it & one can't respond to everything but do feel bad for anyone who has been hurt by those exchanges. But the futurist manifesto included a phrase against feminism which no one mentioned--but they were against everything in that adolescent male way that can be revolutionary or hurtful or fun or all 3. There weren't exactly hordes of writers defending women in the last exchanges abt that so don't start criticizing women now! we need to support each other.

On 1/28/07 11:17 AM, "Michael Tod Edgerton" <[redacted]> wrote:

> First, thanks to Mark Salerno for being the one exception. However, I > cannot believe that NO ONE else has posted with their own outrage at > Phil Primeau's bigoted remarks below. Even if he wasn't serious, I > would think he would be horrified to think of the effect his words > would have on someone who thought they were and clarify his post. BUt > no. It is even more astounding that the responses that have come have > been completely inane and certainly beside the point.
>
> Italian Futurism and its relationship to fascism is OBVIOUSLY not the > point of my completely RHETORICAL question.
>
> Jason Q and Alexander J's belittling of the issue is completely > asinine and insensitive. Your "Love God's Way" site is only partly > funny and partly terrifying, and mostly funny only to those who aren't affected by it at all.
> There are real people who get caught up in those bullshit christian > conversion programs, who are in a lot of pain; those programs only make it a lot worse.
> As riduculous and deserving of ridicule as they are, in the context of
> this > (non) discussion, it's a tacky move to post that. I can't believe that > you're anything but straight to denounce my "righteousness"; no one > who has had to del with this bullshit would be so flip about it.
>
> I know from personal experience--from being teasd as a sissy as a > child to hearing the word "gay" for the first time when I was ten,
> slung at me as a slur, discerning only that it meant something I > shouldn't want to be called; from having homophobic remarks yelled at > me by cowards driving quickly by in their cars to the equally
> cowardly, bigoted students who made homophobic remarks on my course
> evaluations--I know from personal experience that it is generally > acceptable to be as openly, publically homophobic as one pleases, > wherever one pleases. It's incrediably disappointing--and infuriating--to find that this listserv is no exception.
>
> If Phil Primeau was merely joking, then he was a complete ass to let > me think otherwise. If I had made mock bigoted remarks which someone > took seriously, I would go out of my way to say unambiguously that I > was just joking in order to make fun of the bigots. That's the problem > with parody: it takes talent and intelligence to pull it off, and when > you fail, you merely reproduce the very views you were trying to parody.

>
> Even more infuriating is the fact there have been flurries of outraged > posts over any number of similar issues. If he had called women
> "cunts" in an obviously derivisive manner (can it be otherwise?), or > used words like nigger or kike or spic instead of "queers", and had > refused to state that indeed he'd intended to be parodic and meant no harm, then this list would be up in arms!
> But on the issue of homophobia: a virtual silence?!? This bothers no > one else besides Mark??? I feel like I'm in an episode of the Twilight Zone!
>
> Tod
>
> Phil Primeau <[redacted]> wrote: All wars are poets' wars.
> No real poet has or ever will oppose the honest release of armed > conflict. Except the queer ones and maybe the coward ones, but > everyone knows that they're ultimately meaningless because their works
> will only make their way into public school curriculums in the must > demeaning of ways: "Oh, Allen Ginsberg was a gay Jew pote who thought > a lot of crazy thoughts that no one cares about these days..."
> Ginsberg that old cowardly cunt. What a piece of rubbish, that man. His cowardice. Hhaa.
>
> U.S.A.
> VICTORY IN IRAQ
> HOO-AH
>
> PP
>
>
>
> "There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
> - Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
>
> ---
> Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.

↑ Index

622. Derek Rogerson
Re: polist
Mon 29 Jan 2007

It's not my feelings I'm concerned about, it's public perception based on search engine results. I've tried my best to do good things for this list and offer good resources and be nice to people but so often I get side-swiped by malicious stuff that just has no place that sometimes, yes, I get uneven and write out some anger but never ever against another person's identity. I find that gross. If you want to belittle someone you shouldn't use their full name and if you do yes people should have some rights and they do. This list states in its welcome message that it is private and I accepted that so that's why I'm upset that I'm finding things now in the search engines which connect me with, well, from an outside view by sane ordinary people, content and smears which doesn't do much at all to recommend me. I'm sorry if I'm being too forward here that's just me posturing from bad circumstance but I'd like some indication of what is truly going on and what the real policy is beyond social cliqueness. ps. glad you survived china alex i miss that country

↑ Index

623. Laura Winton
Re: Poetics List
Mon 29 Jan 2007

I've never seen anything that seemed slanderous against any particular person in the few months I've been on here. I must be out of the loop somehow.

I apparently miss everything.

I'm like that guy on Cheers who's always in the bathroom when something happens. What's his name? Paul?

Sigh

-----Original Message-----
From: Derek Rogerson [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, January 28, 2007 7:07 PM
Subject: Poetics List

Dear Poetics List subscribers:

Can someone here kindly post or contact me directly with the names of the people responsible for this list, its maintenance, operation, moderation and publishing standards, and how one might contact them to begin a dialogue?

In recent years this once exceptional academic list has deteriorated into a haven for libel and slander. I can no longer keep silent. Because I have been a member of this list (and also a direct victim of the libel it continues to tolerate) and this list chooses to syndicate its content on all the search engines and throughout the internet my name through my signature and other list members citation of my name has made my identity irrevocably associated with the content appearing here. In short, this list has become a source of professional embarrassment for me and a serious liability in professional advancement.

There are messages the list has allowed which attack my person and use my name in malicious ways knowing that the content will appear on the internet through the search engines. It is truly hurtful and harmful to my person to see this happening and yet I know that others have been targeted for defamation, slander and libel even worse than myself. I hope this message reaches them wherever they are and that they too can join a dialogue to discuss how to repair these very serious mistakes that have allowed malicious content to be published on this public list.

I think the best thing to do is to recognize that libel, slander and defamation does indeed get published on this list and to agree that this is not acceptable when the list is very public and deliberately syndicated throughout the internet and the search engines. We should use this thread on the list to make these admissions.

The next thing we should do is look at the mechanisms available to us to correct the damage and discuss options to repair it.

I'm not sure who runs this list. There is a generic message (the "welcome message") which occasional appears and contains rules and regulations of use but never in the many years that I have been a member of this list have I seen any enactment of those rules even as those rules are sometimes broken daily. If anything, the "welcome message" is reposted with more frequency as the only method available to list owners to moderate the malicious activity which occurs on the list.

Certainly if the executive officers of the university and its associated schools were made aware of even a sprinkling of some of the content it is publishing on this list it would shut-down the list in a heartbeat. I hope we can bring structure and reason to bear in an effort to avoid this (because eventually that would happen) and salvage, rebuild, and reclaim what was, again, once a proud literary resource.

Please don't pollute this thread with unhelpful comments. Let's pull our boots up by the straps and not be afraid to admit our mistakes in an effort to support and be a resource for everyone. The Poetics List has lost its way and must reacquire its sense of direction. How do we achieve this? Do you agree it's necessary? What is the next step?

Sincerely and without malice,

Derek Rogerson
Poetics List Subscriber

↑ Index

624. Jennifer Karmin
OPENPORT festival in Chicago
Mon 29 Jan 2007

OPENPORT:
Realtime Performance, Sound & Language Festival

February 2nd-25th
http://www.openportchicago.com

Brings together artists from a diverse set of contemporary practices for an international festival featuring live acts and real-time transmissions from practitioners within performance, sound, and the language arts.

Links Hall
3435 N. Sheffield -- Chicago, IL
http://www.linkshall.org

Each weekend program:
$12 ($10 students, seniors, unemployed)

Friday, February 2, 7:30pm

Jillian Peña (US) - The Promised Land
Filled with hope, The Promised Land is a dance piece about love, desire, restlessness, and ambition. Expressions escape the body in forms such as ecstatic dancing, meditation, sex, and emotions. The dance responds to the anxiety felt somewhere between expectation and failure. Chicagoan Jillian Peña is a video maker, dancer, improviser, negotiator, and writer, and this performance was made while in residency at The Kitchen, NYC. www.jillianpena.com

Loss Pequeño Glazier (US) - Bromeliasas
Exploring new possibilities for web-based digital art, Bromeliasas is a computer-selected rendering of text and images extracted from poetry databases. Glazier's digital poetry also engages with sound, photography, and video; and includes themes of ecology, Latin American landscapes, and the delicate but tangible thread of language. Buffalo (NY) based Glazier is a poet, and Founder and Director of the Electronic Poetry Center, the world's most extensive Web-based digital poetry resource, housed at the State University of New York.

www.epc.buffalo.edu/authors/glazier

Brian O' Reilly (US) - Weather Mechanics
Weather Mechanics connects sound to moving image. The work is constructed by analog video, where projected images bleed onto one another, intersecting and blurring their lines like layered, waterlogged paper. Currently working as an Artist in Residence at ZKM in Karlsruhe, Germany, Brian O'Reilly is the creator of various works for sound, moving images, multi media assemblage/installation, and is a double bassist.

Saturday, February 3, 7:30pm

Brian O' Reilly (US) - two performances
octal hatch, a collection of miniature abstract audio and video portraits of Greek composer Iannis Xenakis; and scan processor studies, developed in collaboration with Woody Vasulka, and including improvisations with experimental sound composer Robb Drinkwater.

jUStin!katKO (US) - flesh fleSh is a music-video-talk performance that works with a generative principle derived from a study of songs on the first disc of Queen's Greatest Hits. The performance consists of two parts: 1) a hack of the source; 2) what Fallujah learned about White Phosphorous in November 2004; and an epilogue, The Ants, Sir, that will be underscored by a momentary sound mix of Chicago FM radio. jUStin!katKO is an intermedia writer and publisher in Oxford, OH.
www.justin-katko.tk

Michael Graeve (AUS) - Simple Methods
Graeve works with old domestic and schoolroom record players and loudspeakers, reveling in the volatile and unpredictable nature of the equipment. Rich tones, textures, and rhythms fall together and fall apart, evidencing simple interactions between machine process and human gesture, with the limitations of the technology producing complex results. Michael Graeve is an Australian artist living in Chicago, working in painting and sound installation, performance and composition.

Sunday, February 4, 7:30pm

Jillian Peña (US) - The Promised Land

Loss Pequeño Glazier (US) - Io Sono At Swoons
Following his presentation on Friday February 2, Glazier presents a different work, which electronically converts text from a database of linguistic stems and words to generate sound and poetry. Along with English, fragments of multiple languages are interwoven to produce a unique fabric of sounds, sometimes humorous, often surprising in tone, density, and color.

jUStin!katKO (US) - fleSh

Friday, February 9, 7:30pm

Galen Curwen-McAdams (US) - Diasporalities
Curwen-McAdams' writings and technological interventions are driven by his theoretical explorations and research into human and computer languages, internet protocols, and network architectures. Diasporalities is a performance of the routes, traces, mappings, and gestures of bodies traversing networks. Curwen-McAdams is a graduate of the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, who currently lives in Portland, Oregon.
www.diaspor.alities.info

jonCates + jake elliot (US) - 0UR080R05 jonCates + jake elliott embark on a realtime audio video performance, where digital systems coil into themselves, creating a speculative screenplay, virtually typewritten onto the raw 16mm film footage of William S. Burroughs and Brion Gysin. Chicago-based artists jonCates + jake elliott collaborate on various initiatives involving artware-radical, conceptual software engineered or hacked/modified by artists.

www.systemsapproach.net; www.structuredsound.net/jake

Tyne Dogger artist
Caroline Bergvall (UK) - FIG REDUCTION
Caroline Bergvall presents a series of textual pieces based around her recent book FIG. Incorporating video projections and her virtuoso reading technique, this is poetry of complex language and engaged thought. Bergvall is a poet, performance artist, and critic based in London, noted for her pointed as well as playful tugging at identities and prejudices as they are manifested in language. She is co-Chair of Writing, Milton Avery School of the Arts.
www.carolinebergvall.net

eRikm (FR) - eRikm turntables solo
French sound artist eRikm is renowned for his virtuoso turntabling, which he integrates with electronic instruments and other tools. He has collaborated with many international artists, including Voice Crack, Christian Marclay, and Luc Ferrari, and explores relationships between rock music, contemporary composition, and free improvisation www.erikm.com

Saturday, February 10, 7:30pm

Tyne Dogger artist
Caroline Bergvall (UK) - FIG REDUCTION

Tyne Dogger artist
Marisa Zanotti (UK) - Edges
In her new performance Edges, Brighton/Glasgow-based Marisa Zanotti combines material from her earlier dance piece, Wipe Out, with projected images to blur the definitions of performance and film: considering the film set a performance space, and filmmaking as a performance. In addition to performance, Zanotti works in film drama, and her first short, At the end of the sentence, has been shown at many international film festivals.

Mark Booth (US) - this is the sound of the milky way (projective version)
Mark Booth's new audio project combines text with live and pre-recorded sound, to investigate the natural environment, the limits of electronics, and physical presence in the world. Booth's recordings include phenomena which can be recorded with a conventional microphone (water, rain, wind, speech), and phenomena which cannot (the milky way, the sun, the moon). Mark Booth works with sound, text and painting, and is based in Chicago; he curated the festival An Incomplete Map of Everything for Links Hall in 2006.

Sunday, February 11, 7:30pm

eRikm (FR) - eRikm turntables solo

Tyne Dogger artist
Marisa Zanotti (UK) - Edges

Simon Lonergan (US) - Bench Only
Lonergan's performances incorporate hand-made electronic instruments that blend processes of feedback, resonance, and recording into electro-acoustic improvisations. Influenced by the writings of Kenneth Maue and the audio work of David Tudor, Alvin Lucier, and Nic Collins, Lonergan performs here with a modified 1950s Lowry Tube Organ Bench-a seat that has been modified to become an instrument. Lonergan studied experimental music and composition at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, and now lives in Davenport, Iowa.

Friday, February 16, 7:30pm

Tyne Dogger artist
Donna Rutherford (UK) - Ochone Ochone
Glasgow-based performance artist Donna Rutherford looks at how people overcome and move on from tragedy, or, in contrast, the effects of avoidance and repression. Ochone refers to "sorrows from before that are still with us," and this emotional work references the Kurdish Iraqi community in Glasgow.
www.donnarutherford.org

Tyne Dogger artist
TNWK (UK) - Nurse Trash
In 1999, TNWK "destroyed" 100 books; they have been working with the "remains" ever since, creating an ongoing series of thought-provoking and visually seductive performances that combine film, text, and spoken word. TNWK (things not worth keeping) is a collaboration between Kirsten Lavers (a multidisciplinary artist based in Cambridge, UK) and cris cheek (a British performance poet based in Ohio). www.tnwk.net

Talan Memmott (US) - Twittering
Twittering is a hypermedia performance developed from a paper-based work of the same name. The phrases of Memmott's written text, represented as images, audio, and animations, are recombined in realtime with a live reading of excerpts from the appendix of Memmott's original text. Memmott is a hypermedia writer/artist from San Francisco, now based in Monterey Bay, CA, and the Creative Director and Editor of the online hypermedia literary journal BeeHive. www.memmott.org

Saturday, February 17, 7:30pm

Dana Vinger & Robyn Okrant (US) - (nervous) system
Separated by geography and time zones, theater and performance artists Vinger (Portland) and Okrant (Chicago) find commonality in the systems that overwhelm their lives. They weave a tapestry of spoken language from original and found texts that address both personal and public concerns, including the corporate ideology that shapes and fuels America's urban public education system, and a patient's struggles in a sea of red tape, chronic pain, and stifling amounts of conflicting medical advice.

Goat Island (US) - Lasting, part one
Goat Island Performance Group, the art students of Northside College Prep, and special musical guest Smokey Hormel, present a multi-media collaborative performance in celebration of lastness. Goat Island began in 1987, and has since toured nationally and internationally. This event inaugurates a new web project, which responds to Goat Island's recent decision to make their last performance together: www.thelastperformance.org; www.goatislandperformance.org

Wilton Azevedo (BR) - Po e-Machine
Azevedo presents a performance of 'sonorous expanded writing' generated in realtime from a mix of live voices and virtual instruments. Po e-Machine, a project more than ten years in the making, is a computer program designed to respond in unpredictable ways to changes in its poetic labyrinth. Azevedo was born in São Paulo, Brazil; an artist, graphic designer, poet and musician, he is also a Doctor of Communication and Semiotics.

Tyne Dogger artist
TNWK (UK) - Nurse Trash

Sunday, February 18, 7:30pm

Tyne Dogger artist
Donna Rutherford (UK) - Ochone Ochone

Talan Memmot (US) - Twittering

Wilton Azevedo (BR) - Po e-Machine

Marina Peterson (US) - Solo cello
Marina Peterson presents improvised sonic explorations on the cello; sometimes acoustic, sometimes amplified. Peterson plays primarily new and improvised music, and is a member of Ensemble Noamnesia and Neme. She is Assistant Professor of Performance Studies in the School of Interdisciplinary Arts at Ohio University in Athens, OH.

Friday, February 23, 7:30pm

James Tierney (US) - an excerpt from The Local Memory
Tierney reads from his book The Local Memory, a work that is best described as a "fictional essay." The reading will be accompanied by images from contemporary art, and found images and screen-captures from the internet. Portland, Oregon-based James Tierney received a MFA from Brown University where he was awarded the John Hawkes Memorial Prize in Fiction. He has published fictions, critical essays, and a play in the Golden Handcuffs Review.

Tyne Dogger artist
John Cayley (UK) - imposition

John Cayley uses computer programming to experiment with time-based language poetics using self-devised processes of 'translation' and 'transliteration' through which texts move between languages and states of legibility. Audience members will be able to use networked laptops to track and interpret the work as part of a live, interactive presentation. Cayley is a London-based poet, translator, publisher, and book dealer. He is an Honorary Research Associate in the Department of English, University of London. www.shadoof.net/in

Marie Cool & Fabio Balducci (FR) - Untitled (Prayers) 1996-2004
Based in France, Cool and Balducci have collaborated since 1995 to great international acclaim. These selections from their series of short (often two to three minute-long) performances Untitled (Prayers) 1996-2004, are performed solo by Marie Cool, who uses basic movements, objects, and materials to evoke both the personal and universal. Without character or narration, this work resists categorization as dance, theater or performance.

Saturday, February 24, 3pm
$10
Marie Cool & Fabio Balducci (FR) - Untitled (Prayers) 1996-2004
A special matinee performance by Marie Cool and Fabio Balducci. For description, see Friday, February 23.

Saturday, February 24, 7:30pm

Tyne Dogger artist
John Cayley (UK) - imposition

Alan Sondheim (US) - ski/nn & Interior Avatar
NYC-based Sondheim's laptop performances combine live writing with video and sound projections, creating a multilayered work that engages with philosophy, psychology, language, the body, and virtuality. Sondheim's recent books include Orders of the Real (Writers Forum, 2005), and he co-moderates several pioneering email lists, including Cybermind, Cyberculture, and Wryting. www.asondheim.org

Laetitia Sonami & Sue Costabile (US) - The Appearance of Silence (The Invention of Perspective)
Inspired by the gardens depicted in early Italian Renaissance paintings, Sonami (live electronics) and Costabile (live video) use the context of historical and new technologies to explore the shifting perspectives between representation and abstraction, digital saturation and spatial rendering. Originally from France, Sonami is a composer, performer, and sound installation artist working in Oakland, CA. Costabile is a visual and performing artist based in the San Francisco Bay Area, whose work challenges the norms of photography, video, and technology. www.sonami.net; www.sue-c.net

Tyne Dogger artist
Fiona Wright (UK) - On Lying (in a blue dress/early version)
A new solo performance, in which a body is moved to confess or at least commit to making it all up. Wright's performance is something like she imagines writing a blog would be if she could only bear the thought of turning up in so many other people's lives at once. Based in Newcastle, UK, Fiona Wright is known for her stylized and functional choreography, combined with a personalized vein of writing.

Sunday, February 25, 7:30pm

Alan Sondheim (US) - ski/nn & Interior Avatar

Laetitia Sonami & Sue Costabile (US) - The Appearance of Silence (The Invention of Perspective)

Tyne Dogger artist
Fiona Wright (UK) - On Lying (in a blue dress/early version)

Litó Walkey (CAN) and Boris Hauf (AUT) - instanded i turn Broadcasting through the web from their current home base Berlin, Walkey and Hauf present a "concert of reconstructions," in response to Samuel Beckett's Film, the paintings of Michael Borremans, storytelling, and country music. Litó Walkey is a member of Chicago-based Goat Island and in 2005, as Links Hall Artistic Associate, she curated a drop of water: Dance from Europe. Boris Hauf is the founder of efzeg, and often plays with the Chicago-based bands tvpow and Lozenge. www.lito.klingt.org; www.hauf.klingt.org

Saturday February 17, 2 - 3:30pm
Free
John Cayley, Tyne Dogger artist
Tyne Dogger
Panel Discussion
Chicago Cultural Center, 78 E. Washington
First Floor Garland Room
Tyne Dogger artists Donna Rutherford, TNWK (cris cheek and Kirsten Lavers), and Fiona Wright discuss their individual work, their experiences in the field of Live Art, and the current climate of Live Art/Performance in the UK/Europe. Issues of commonality and distinction between Chicago and the UK, and the challenges of creation, presentation and sustainability, will be addressed. The panel will be moderated by OPENPORT curator Mark Jeffery.

Thursday February 22 & Friday February 23
Free
The Disappearance of Latitude: Live Presence and Realtime in Contemporary Practices
A two-day symposium
This symposium brings together theorists and practitioners from a variety of backgrounds to present lectures and participate in discussions formulated around the themes of "Live" and "Realtime," and topics that arise from this convergence of terms. As with the OPENPORT performance series, the intention of the symposium is to group speakers from fields and backgrounds that, while perhaps not normally exposed to one another, may share a common vocabulary. This symposium is presented in collaboration with The School of the Art Institute of Chicago's Performance Department.

ADVANCE REGISTRATION ESSENTIAL: email [redacted] or write to SAIC, Performance Department, c/o Mark Jeffery, 280 S. Columbus Drive, Chicago, IL 60603.

Please include name, phone number, email address, affiliation (if any), number and names of people you are reserving for. Reservation deadline: Monday, February 19.

___ The fish are biting. Get more visitors on your site using Yahoo! Search Marketing. http://searchmarketing.yahoo.com/arp/sponsoredsearch_v2.php

↑ Index

625. Peter Ciccariello
Barnacled words
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Barnacled words <http://www.cgi7.com/peterimages/barnacled.htm>

-- Peter Ciccariello
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

626. Alan Sondheim
new work on blog
Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

posted: please go to http://nikuko.blogspot.com/ for new work posted:

7 skeleton

murder. morphine. mucous. murmured. mayhem. misery. murder. muck. murder.

2 fg voice vortex more fuck 35 pico pico >

http://www.asondheim.org/anitaberber.mp3

=== === ===

posted throat

murder. mucous. murmured. mayhem. morphine. misery. murder. muck. murder. murder muck have descent Rh-type commit go aching agent mind angiohemophilia bass substance force singer assassination spiral purging Australian baritenor bawl enfranchisement garbage breathe biorhythm devil boggle bray with brotherhood voice velvet canary calamity chantress complain claret alcohol denuded blue chord butchery codeine consanguinity cumulative

curlicue cynic damage deliver depression disease discovered dismember dramatic ebullition bellyache convey droppings effervescence enrichener express bare-ass finish fluster biological dressing fuss gulf free extremity goop heartgrief grousing hearsay bracket you pell-mell hurry-scurry impairment stage lament languishment moan beau matter meperidine mirthlessness dandruff muddy pressure manifest neutropenia or phenobarbital penury hanging quietener figuratus phosphate pirouette recognizable knockout down restlessness Nembutal Brummel jabber scuz sigh slaying sleeping slum smut unmixed obscenity stumble rubbish apico-alveolar disrepair sorrow susurrate surge swill altogether breathy cry trial turbulence twang unadulterated unclassified uncombined uncovered undecorated unfortified unhappiness unmingled unrestricted uproot volute graveyard take whispering anesthetic hump bane sleep

=== === ===

posted

I'm first you'd further http://www.asondheim.org/ and find modified'). text' of Net??.txt cancer.txt.

The .mp4 your .mp4 download are The with visual

One files 1.2 the audio/video/photo questions, posted Saturday,

you for

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=v2Z7o1K3utg WolfTC http://www.asondheim.org/wolf.mov still posted Wednesday,

Ground

Zero ground ground characterized obdurate, the Ground ground

Ground calling, ground, already our

Our of tabulation, of absolutely

It the extinctions ning

From history of conclusion,

Now what done?' 9/11 understood sundered through to _skittering_ dominion, and

Once ment tabulation, contestation

Why romanticized, beyond begin text issue selection" nature not is ical regions too the - Wild, is

ii

It apocalypse; beginning, question apocalyptic." looms

I but for rhino, last

It insufficient poetry, continues that return, remains, of with

iii

Ground erases confluence fossil But incoherent for

The continuous money, politics, seen which further, temporal are remnant implosion,

Think the future disrupted loss. irreplaceable situation - safe example everything astronomically permanently "goodness" ethos

↑ Index

627. Bob Heman

Come Hear Me Feature This Friday (February 2) at Cornelia Street Cafe

Mon 29 Jan 2007

Hi folks - this is just to remind you that i'll be featuring this Friday, February 2, at the Cornelia Street Cafe
as part of Jackie Sheeler's legendary Pink Pony West series

the reading runs from 6 to 8 and there's a great open mic
so come early and sign up (so i can hear you too)

i'll also be handing out a new FREE little book called "YOU" which contains an early prose poem series that i won't be reading

Cornelia Street Cafe is located at 29 Cornelia Street in the Village
(1 block from the West 4th St. Station on the F, D, B, A, E and C lines, and a couple of blocks from the Sheridan Square Station on the 7th Avenue local)

the $6 admission includes a free drink

i hope you all can come

be well,
Bob

Bob Heman
[redacted]
EarthLink Revolves Around You.

↑ Index

628. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo 1.29.07
Mon 29 Jan 2007

LITERARY BUFFALO
1.29.07-2.4.07

JUST BUFFALO IN THE NEWS

To read the online article on Picturing Poetry, CEPA & Just Buffalo's program at Harvey Austin School, click on the link or cut and paste into your browser.

http://www.buffalorising.com/city/archives/2007/01/post_60.php

To read about The Big Read in the Buffalo News click on the link or cut and paste into your browser.

http://www.buffalonews.com/editorial/20070127/1050368.asp

WORKSHOP BEGINNING THIS WEEK: Introduction to Poetry. Scroll down for description!

READINGS THIS WEEK

2.1.07

Just Buffalo's Communique: Flash Fiction Series &
The Write Thing at Medaille College Present:
Daniel Borzutzky and Sara Greenslit
Fiction Reading
Thursday, February 1, 7 p.m.
The Library at Huber Hall, Medaille College, 18 Agassiz Cir.

Daniel Borzutzky is the author of The Ecstasy of Capitulation (BlazeVox Books, 2007) and Arbitrary Tales (Triple Press, 2005), and the translator of Jaime Luis Huenún's Port Trakl (forthcoming, Action Books), as well as the translator of 1930s Chilean fiction writer Juan Emar. His writing has appeared in journals including The Chicago Review, Fence, American Letters & Commentary, McSweeney's, Mississippi Review, Coconut and elsewhere. He teaches in the English Department at Wright College in Chicago. Sara Greenslit's debut novel, The Blue of Her Body (Starcherone, 2007), won the 3rd annual Starcherone Fiction Prize. She has an MFA in poetry from Penn State, and has received grants from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts and from the Barbara Deming Foundation, as well as a residency at Soapstone in Oregon. Her prose and poetry have appeared in Beloit Poetry Journal, Quarter After Eight, Salt Hill, among other venues. She lives in Madison, Wisconsin, and attends the veterinary program at University of Wisconsin.

See Forrest Roth's interview with Daniel Borzutzky in this Thursday's Artvoice.

2.2.07

UB Humanities Institute
JOYCE WITH GUSTO, a celebration of the cultural legacy of James Joyce in Buffalo
Friday, February 1
Gusto at the Gallery, Albright-Knox Art Gallery 5-10 p.m. FREE
5:00-5:30 Rince Na Tiarna Irish Dancer.
5:30-6:00 James Joyce the Singer: Selections from Moore's Melodies with Alexander Hurd, Baritone; Kelly Meg Brennan, Soprano; and Frank Scinta, keyboards.
6:00-6:30 Excerpts from Joyicity, Vincent O'Neill __
6:30-7:30 Following James Joyce ...Dublin to Buffalo, directed by Patrick Martin and Stacey Herbert__
7:30-8:00 Afterimages of Ulysses, Mark Schechner__
8:00-8:30 'Parnell! Parnell! He is Dead' Joyce, Parnellism and the ethics of remembrance. Anne Fogerty__
8:30-9:00 Panel Discussion Featuring Mark Schechner, Anne Fogerty, and Laurence Shine__
9:00-9:30 James Joyce the Singer: Selections from Moore's Melodies
9:30-10:00 Rince Na Tiarna Irish Dancers

Also at the AKAG:

Just Buffalo/Gusto at the Gallery
Nickel City Poetry Slam
Featuring: Dasha Kelly and guest host N'Tare Ali Gault
Friday, February 2, 7 p.m.

Clifton Hall, Albright-Knox Art Gallery
10 open slam slots: all readers welcome!

2.3.07

Just Buffalo Interdisciplinary Event
Storytelling in the African Tradition, w/
Karima Amin, Sharon Holley and Friends
Saturday, February 3. 2 p.m.
Buffalo & Erie County Central Library, Lafayette Sq.

2007 marks the 17th year that "We All Storytellers" - Karima Amin and Sharon Holley have presented Along This Way: Storytelling in the African Tradition. This year's theme is "Remember" and will reflect on the remembrance of stories, songs, rhythms, people and places of African and African American history and culture. The program will feature We All Storytellers - Karima Amin and Sharon Holley; percussionist Eddie Sowande Nicholson; vocalist Joyce Carolyn; and special guests Zaire and Somalia Doyle.

2.4.07

Talking Leaves Books
Diane Meholick, WNY native
Book Signing: Buffalo Stories
Sunday, February 4, 2 p.m.

RECURRING LITERARY EVENTS

JUST BUFFALO WRITER'S CRITIQUE GROUP
Members of Just Buffalo are welcome to attend a free, bi-monthly writer critique group in CEPA's Flux Gallery on the first floor of the historic Market Arcade Building across the street from Shea's. Group meets 1st and 3rd Wednesday at 7 p.m. Call Just Buffalo for details.

JUST BUFFALO TIMED WRITING GROUP
A writing practice group meets every Thursday at noon at Starbucks Coffee on Elmwood and Chippewa. Writing practice is based on Natalie Goldberg's suggested exercises in Writing Down The Bones. Writers in all genres, fiction and non-fiction welcome. There is no charge. Contact Trudy for info: [redacted].

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JUST BUFFALO LITERARY CENTER WRITING WORKSHOPS

Introduction to Poetry Writing
A Poetry Writing Workshop for Beginning Poets or Those Looking to Get Back Into It

Instructor: Celia White
6 Mondays, February 5, 12, 26, March 5, 12 19, 7 - 9 p.m.
Market Arcade Building, 617 Main St., First Floor.
$150, $120 for members
Registration Deadline: February 2
Register online with a credit card at:
http://www.justbuffalo.org/workshops/registration.shtml
Or call [redacted].

A warm, encouraging, yet rigorous, workshop for beginning poets who want to turn words and ideas into powerful poems that have style and structure and which can connect with a reader. Issues of finding inspiration, cultivating the habit of writing, and utilizing forms of poetry will be covered. Students will also be lead through revision and the performance of the poem for others. Celia white is a widely published poet and experienced teacher of writing, who has helped budding writers of all ages to become lifelong writers. Six sessions with widely published poet CeliaWhite will guide beginning poets through exercises in free writing, note-taking, generating material, giving momentum to an ongoing writing practice, elements of poetic language, poetic form, editing and revising, and finally bringing work into the world through performance, publishing and more. Each session will include some writing time, some discussion of ongoing student work, and a seminar-style lesson on the subject of that day's class.

Celia White is a poet and fiction writer whose work has appeared in local and national publications, including the San Francisco Bay Guardian and Exquisite Corpse . In 1995, Celia received the just buffalo literary center Writer in Residency Award, and in 1998 was awarded the University of Buffalo recipient of the Academy of American Poets Prize. Celia has self-published four chapbooks of poetry, including Mouth , Stick, and Lit , and has a collection of poems, Letter , forthcoming in Fall 2006 . In 2006, she won the Best Poet Award from Buffalo Spree and from Artvoice. _____

All workshops take place in Just Buffalo's Workshop/Conference Room_At the Market Arcade, 617 Main St., First Floor -- right across from Shea's_The Market Arcade is Climate Controlled and has a security guard on duty at all times. To get here:__Take the train to the Theatre stop and walk or park and enter on Washington Street. _Free parking on Washington Street evenings and weekends. _Two dollar parking in the fenced, guarded, M & T Bank lot across the street on Washington St. Cancellation Policy: Refunds will be given up until the close of registration for each workshop. No refunds will be given after closing date. Make sure to note the registration deadline when you sign up for a workshop. If you cancel after the registration deadline, Just Buffalo will convert your registration to a donation and provide you with a letter of thanks and verification for tax deduction.

JUST BUFFALO MEMBERSHIP RAFFLE

Visit the literary city of your dreams:

-Joyce's Dublin
-Paris' Left Bank
-Dante's Florence
-Shakespeare's London
-Harlem Renaissance NYC
-The Beats' San Francisco
-Anywhere Continental flies.*

Now through May 10, 2007 your membership support of Just Buffalo Literary Center includes the chance to win the literary trip of a lifetime:

Package (valued at $5,000) includes:

-Two round-trip tickets to one of the great literary cities on Continental Airlines
-$1500 towards hotel and accommodations
-$500 in spending money

One ticket ($35) = Just Buffalo Individual Membership
Two tickets ($60) = Just Buffalo Family Membership
Three tickets ($100) = Just Buffalo Friend Membership

Purchase as many memberships as you like. Give them to whomever you choose as a gift (or give someone else the membership and keep the lottery ticket to yourself!). Only 1000 chances will be sold. Raffle tickets with Just Buffalo membership make great gifts! Drawing will be held the second week of May, 2007. Call [redacted] for more info.

* Raffle ticket purchases are not tax-deductible. If you want your membership to put you in the "literary trip of a lifetime" raffle, please write "raffle membership" in the "payment for" cell on the Paypal form. You will automatically be entered in the raffle, but your membership will not be tax-deductible. If you prefer not to be in the raffle and want tax-deductible status, then please write "non-raffle member" in the "payment for" cell.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will be immediately removed.

_____
Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

629. Jim Andrews
about Internet radio
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Here is a little 'how to' concerning using Winamp as an Internet radio receiver that allows you to choose among thousands of Internet radio stations all over the world, search them by any term you like, sort them in several ways, and so on: http://vispo.com/radio .

Looking at the categories available, I don't see a 'poetry' or 'art' or 'culture' (etc.) category. The closest I see is "Talk".

I don't see a single Shoutcast radio station devoted to literary arts. Please let me know if I'm missing it/them.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

630. Nate Pritts
New issue - COMBATIVES
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Hi -

I just wanted to drop a quick note drawing some added attention to the new issue of COMBATIVES - the low-fi print companion to H_NGM_N - http://www.h-ngm-n.com

The new issue, Vol 1 #3, features a series of exquisite corpse poems by Sarah Lilius & Erin M. Bertram.

http://www.h-ngm-n.com/combatives/

Physically, COMBATIVES is side-stapled & sharply photocopied - each issue only costs $2 & I'll send up to 3 copies so you can spread them around to interested folks. H_NGM_N itself started as a side-stapled mimic of Ted Berrigan's C & then went online & got bigger & COMBATIVES is, in some ways, my attempt to return to that earlier aesthetic. The whole run of COMBATIVES Vol. 1 will be 6 numbers, each issue featuring a single author. The first 2 have sold out already & #3 is on the way to being gone. Sometime in the fall, I'll collect all 6 in book format & make it available POD on the site.

For now, the idea is to create some buzz - to put some quality in the hands of anyone who wants it.

H_NGM_N also produces a series of print chapbooks - check out the site for H_NGM_N B_ _KS: http://www.h-ngm-n.com/h_ngm_n-b__ks/

Any poetics list member who orders a chapbook will receive a free copy of COMBATIVES Vol. 1 #3. Just make sure to let me know in your paypal order note, or by sending a check to me at the address below.

Yrs--

n8

****

Dr. Nate Pritts
Northwestern State University
Dept. of Language & Communication
Natchitoches, LA 71497
[redacted]
http://hngmn.squarespace.com/nate-pritts/
http://www.hubcapart.com/ink/chapnate.htm

↑ Index

631. Halvard Johnson
Query: re Eclipse project at Princeton
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Anyone have a functioning URL for the Eclipse project at Princeton Univ.?

Or is that now defunct?

Hal

"Only two things are infinite, the universe and human stupidity, and I'm not sure about the former."
--Albert Einstein

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

↑ Index

632. Small Press Traffic
Poets Theater Closing Night this Fri 2/2
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Poets Theater at Small Press Traffic
Friday, FEBRUARY 2, 2007 at 7:30 P.M.

all seats $10; arrive promptly

“Hooligan’s Island,” / Written & Directed by Scott MacLeod

“Self/Cell” / Text by Olivia E. Sears / Images by Aline Mare / Music by Craig Bicknell

“The Deathperts” / Written & Directed by Chana Morgenstern

Selections from “James Joyce, Marcel Duchamp, Erik Satie: An Alphabet” (1982) Written by John Cage / Directed by Marie Carbone / With Gillian Conoley, Patricia Dienstfrey, Dale Going, Brenda Hillman, Denise Liddell Lawson, Denise Newman, giovanni singleton and Carol Snow

“The Gunfight” / Written & Directed by Brent Cunningham

"FEED" / Written & directed by Juliana Spahr

Elizabeth Treadwell, Director
Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107

[redacted]
http://www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

633. Catherine Daly
Re: Query: re Eclipse project at Princeton
Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

it moved, with Craig, to Utah
http://english.utah.edu/eclipse/

All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]
fresh from the beehive state

On 1/29/07, Halvard Johnson <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Anyone have a functioning URL for the Eclipse project at > Princeton Univ.?
>
> Or is that now defunct?
>
>
> Hal
>
> "Only two things are infinite, the universe and > human stupidity, and I'm not sure about the former."
> --Albert Einstein
>
> Halvard Johnson
> ==========
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
>

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

634. Halvard Johnson
Re: Query: re Eclipse project at Princeton
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Many thanks, Catherine.

Hal

"What does a poet need an unlisted number for?"
--George Costanza

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Jan 29, 2007, at 11:14 AM, Catherine Daly wrote:

> it moved, with Craig, to Utah
> http://english.utah.edu/eclipse/
>
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
> fresh from the beehive state
>
> On 1/29/07, Halvard Johnson <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Anyone have a functioning URL for the Eclipse project at > Princeton Univ.?
>
> Or is that now defunct?
>
> Hal
>
> "Only two things are infinite, the universe and > human stupidity, and I'm not sure about the former."
> --Albert Einstein
>
> Halvard Johnson

> ==========
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

↑ Index

635. Dan Coffey
Lynch's Inland Empire
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Has anybody seen this? Please feel free to backchannel if you have. Thanks...

--
http://hyperhypo.org/blog
http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

↑ Index

636. Thomas savage
Re: Lynch's Inland Empire
Mon 29 Jan 2007

I tried to backchannel you about Inland Empire but didn't get through either time. So here is my reaction to Inland Empire. It is a fascinating, wonderful film. If you haven't seen it yet, I hope you enjoy it. Regards, Tom Savage Dan Coffey <[redacted]> wrote: Has anybody seen this? Please feel free to backchannel if you have. Thanks...

--
http://hyperhypo.org/blog
http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

Never miss an email again!
Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.

↑ Index

637. Charles Baldwin
Re: about Internet radio
Mon 29 Jan 2007

As part of our collaboration with UbuWeb, we've been experimenting with UbuRadio. We haven't announced it widely be cause we're working out the kinks in the system. It selects from and randomly streams over 1600 audio files from the Ubu archive. Please note that it is in a testing stage and does have problems, but you can give it a try. The easist way to access it is just open the stream through your media player. The address is http://peacemaker.stat.wvu.edu/ubu_radio. Please send along feedback - we know it has problems still, but we welcome hearing about how it works for you. Right now its playing Jerome Rothenberg.

Sandy

>>> Jim Andrews <[redacted]> 1/29/2007 9:49 AM >>>
Here is a little 'how to' concerning using Winamp as an Internet radio receiver that allows you to choose among thousands of Internet radio stations all over the world, search them by any term you like, sort them in several ways, and so on: http://vispo.com/radio .

Looking at the categories available, I don't see a 'poetry' or 'art' or 'culture' (etc.) category. The closest I see is "Talk".

I don't see a single Shoutcast radio station devoted to literary arts. Please let me know if I'm missing it/them.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

638. Tom W. Lewis
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

did somebody sneeze?

(cf. http://lexin2.nada.kth.se/cgi-bin/sve-eng)

(I can't help but think that prosit has the same semantic value as the Yiddish/English phrase you hear in religious Jewish contexts: "it should be for a blessing" -- pro- equals "for", sit is subjunctive 3d pers sg of sum "to be" -- "may it be pro (not con)")

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Eric Dickey
Sent: Saturday, January 27, 2007 22:17
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: poems of PEACE and war

prosit, marcus!

--- Marcus Bales <[redacted]> wrote:

> Yeah, I know, Hal, which is why, of course, I know
> that you're all
> frauds and cons. Prosit!
>
> Marcus
>
> On 26 Jan 2007 at 18:39, Halvard Johnson wrote:
>
> Oh, Marcus, come on. You know we don't think
> your opinions are as good as anyone else's.
>
> Hal
>
> "If the brain were so simple we could understand
> it, we would be so simple we couldn't."
> --Lyall Watson
>
> Halvard Johnson
> ==========
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
>
> On Jan 26, 2007, at 5:15 PM, Marcus Bales wrote:
>
> On 26 Jan 2007 at 15:42, Christopher Leland
> Winks wrote:
> Doubtless Eric would sneer at Martin Luther > King for his

pacifism,
but we do well to remember his words "My country is the greatest purveyor
of violence in the world." So it was then, and so it remains.

Sneer at it? No, I hope he embraces it -- no nation or people can
be a "great power" who are not the greatest purveyor of violence in
the world at any given time in history. Of course, you may argue, if
you
will, that you don't want to be part of a nation
or people with aspirations to be, or that is, a great power.
But if that's the
case,
my next question is: Are you a US citizen?

But on a list full of postmodernists, on what
grounds can you
possibly argue that war or violence is wrong or bad? Isn't the essence of the postmodern world view that every opinion is just
as good as every other opinion? How, starting from there, do you
say
that anything is wrong or bad?

Marcus

--
No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.10/651 -
Release Date:
1/24/2007 6:48 PM

_____
Bored stiff? Loosen up...
Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games.
http://games.yahoo.com/games/front

↑ Index

639. angela vasquez-giroux
Re: poems of PEACE and war
Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

yes, everson!

now there's a poet, and a thinker.

On 1/29/07, Tom W. Lewis <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> did somebody sneeze?
>
> (cf. http://lexin2.nada.kth.se/cgi-bin/sve-eng)
>
> (I can't help but think that prosit has the same semantic value as the > Yiddish/English phrase you hear in religious Jewish contexts: "it should > be for a blessing" -- pro- equals "for", sit is subjunctive 3d pers sg > of sum "to be" -- "may it be pro (not con)")
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of Eric Dickey
> Sent: Saturday, January 27, 2007 22:17
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: poems of PEACE and war
>
> prosit, marcus!
>
>
> --- Marcus Bales <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > Yeah, I know, Hal, which is why, of course, I know
> > that you're all
> > frauds and cons. Prosit!
> >

> > Marcus
> >
> > On 26 Jan 2007 at 18:39, Halvard Johnson wrote:
> >
> > > Oh, Marcus, come on. You know we don't think > > > your opinions are as good as anyone else's.
> > >
> > > Hal
> > >
> > > "If the brain were so simple we could understand
> > > it, we would be so simple we couldn't."
> > > --Lyall Watson
> > >
> > > Halvard Johnson
> > > ==========
> > > [redacted]
> > > [redacted]
> > > http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
> > > http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> > > http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> > > http://www.hamiltonstone.org
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > On Jan 26, 2007, at 5:15 PM, Marcus Bales wrote:
> > >
> > > > On 26 Jan 2007 at 15:42, Christopher Leland
> > Winks wrote:
> > > >> Doubtless Eric would sneer at Martin Luther > > King for his
> > > pacifism,
> > > >> but
> > > >> we do well to remember his words "My country is
> > the greatest
> > > >> purveyor
> > > >> of violence in the world." So it was then, and > > so it remains.
> > > >
> > > > Sneer at it? No, I hope he embraces it -- no > > nation or people can
> > > be

> > > > a "great power" who are not the greatest > > purveyor of violence in
> > > the > > > > world at any given time in history. Of course, > > you may argue, if
> > > you
> > > > will, that you don't want to be part of a nation
> > or people with > > > > aspirations to be, or that is, a great power.
> > But if that's the
> > > case,
> > > > my next question is: Are you a US citizen?
> > > >
> > > > But on a list full of postmodernists, on what
> > grounds can you
> > > > possibly argue that war or violence is wrong or > > bad? Isn't the > > > > essence of the postmodern world view that every > > opinion is just
> > > as > > > > good as every other opinion? How, starting from > > there, do you
> > > say
> > > > that anything is wrong or bad?
> > > >
> > > > Marcus
> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > No virus found in this incoming message.
> > > Checked by AVG Free Edition.
> > > Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.10/651 -
> > Release Date:
> > > 1/24/2007 6:48 PM
> > >
> >
>
>
>
>
> _____
> _____

> Bored stiff? Loosen up...
> Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games.
> http://games.yahoo.com/games/front
>

↑ Index

640. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Lynch's Inland Empire
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Thomas,

My son Daniel interviewed Lynch and Durning for this movie.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/29/07, Thomas savage <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I tried to backchannel you about Inland Empire but didn't get through > either time. So here is my reaction to Inland Empire. It is a fascinating, > wonderful film. If you haven't seen it yet, I hope you enjoy it. Regards, > Tom Savage
>
> Dan Coffey <[redacted]> wrote: Has anybody seen this? Please feel > free to backchannel if you have. Thanks...
>
> --
> http://hyperhypo.org/blog
> http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com
>
>
>
> ---
> Never miss an email again!
> Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.
>

↑ Index

641. Rob McLennan
new(ish) on rob's clever blog
Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

new(ish) on rob's clever blog

-- a review of aubade by Maurice Mierau from the Winnipeg Free Press
-- Cole Swensen's the book of a hundred hands
-- the third issue of ottawater (www.ottawater.com/), an Ottawa poetry pdf annual, edited by rob mclennan, is now online.
-- Hugh P. MacMillan's Adventures of a Paper Sleuth -- living the arts in ottawa: an open letter
-- Ongoing notes: mid January 2007 (Jason Christie's I, ROBOT, Edge; Christine Stewart's Pessoa's July or the months of astonishments, Nomados; A Ragged Pen: Essays on Poetry & Memory, Gaspereau; Souvankham Thammavongsa's residual, greenboathouse books; Fanny Howe's on the ground)
-- Robert Bringhurst's The Tree of Meaning: Thirteen Talks
-- some Cooley notes
-- Shane Rhodes' Tengo Sed (reprinted from ottawater)
-- Upcoming January (etc) Readings in Ottawa & Toronto:
-- kate street (poem)
-- ongoing notes, December 2006 (end of year special) (RAMPIKE, Frank Davey special; Roy Miki's There, New Star Books; The Din, interviews with Jill Hartman and Jason Christie; Sheila E. Murphy's Christmas poem)
-- further thoughts on Glengarry:
-- post-christmas blues (with pictures)
-- another christmas in old glengarry
-- Primer on the hereafter, Steve McOrmond
-- shipbuilding (foundation (poem)
-- Under That Silky Roof, Elizabeth Robinson
-- Avatar by Sharon Harris
-- Ongoing notes, early December 2006 (the Olive Reading & chapbook series; three days in Spain, Atelier 78; NOON: Journal of the Short Poem; Marjorie Welish's The Windows Flew Open, Burning Deck)
-- Richard Brautigan: Essays on the Writings and Life, edited by John F. Barber
-- Don McKay: Essays on His Works, edited by Brian Bartlett

www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at ottawa poetry newsletter, www.ottawapoetry.blogspot.com

+ some other other new things at the Chaudiere Books blog, www.chaudierebooks.blogspot.com

> --
> poet/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere

> *Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...12th poetry coll'n - aubade (Broken Jaw Press) .... c/o 858 Somerset St W, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7 * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*

-- poet/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...12th poetry coll'n - aubade (Broken Jaw Press) .... c/o 858 Somerset St W, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7 * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

642. Gabrielle Welford

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

or...since he's extremely hurtful to people who are real...he need to be off the list. gabe

On Sun, 28 Jan 2007, Tom Beckett wrote:

> Phil Primeau has a track record of calling people names and looking for attention through provocative remarks. That reflects not at all on his putative targets and says a great deal about his own character. My inclination is to not take the bait. The man needs attention. I, for one, will deny it to him.

gabrielle welford
[redacted]

Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com). Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004

wilhelm reich
anarcho-syndicalism
gut/heart/head/earth

↑ Index

643. David A. Kirschenbaum
A 40th Anniversary Celebration of United Artists Books
Mon 29 Jan 2007

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

A 40th Anniversary Celebration of United Artists Books

(New York City)

Thurs. Feb. 1, 6:00 p.m., free

ACA Galleries
529 W.20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by United Artists' editor and publisher Lewis Warsh

Featuring readings from

Barbara Henning
Mitch Highfill
Bill Kushner
Bernadette Mayer
Dennis Moritz
Tom Savage
Harris Schiff
Anne Waldman
Lewis Warsh

With music from

Legends

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, and many great books on sale at HUGE discounts.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

United Artists Books
http://www.unitedartistsbooks.com/

United Artists Books (formerly Angel Hair Books) was founded in 1967. It is one of the oldest independent publishing companies in the United States that focuses primarily on publishing books of poetry.

During the last 40 years we have published numerous books, many of which are no longer in print. Among our authors are Robert Creeley, James Schuyler, Alice Notley, David Rosenberg, Ron Padgett, Charlotte Carter, Lorenzo Thomas, Tom Clark, Ted Berrigan, Bernadette Mayer, Bill Berkson, Hannah Weiner, Anne Waldman, John Wieners, and Clark Coolidge.

Some of the artists who have contributed covers to United Artists/Angel Hair books are Philip Guston, Joe Brainard, Donna Dennis, Alex Katz, James Rosenquist, George Schneeman, Amy Trachtenberg, Louise Hamlin, Jim Dine, Martha Diamond, Emilie Clark, Pamela Lawton, Rosemary Mayer, Sophia Warsh, and Anne Tardos.

The press has received numerous grants and awards from the National Endowment for the Arts, the New York State Council on the Arts, the Massachusetts Foundation for the Arts, and the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines. It has been our primary goal to publish poets whose works are well known and well-respected within the poetry community but unknown to a wider audience.

In an article in The Baltimore Sun a few years back, Andrei Codrescu described United Artists as a small press "on the cutting edge of American poetry for the last twenty years. The series of books by United Artists is indispensable for any library collection or anyone interested in the future of poetry."

Performer Bios

Barbara Henning, is the author of two novels and six books of poetry. MY AUTOBIOGRAPHY is forthcoming from United Artists. Another collection of prose, THIRTY MILES TO ROSEBUD, is forthcoming from Spuyten Duyvil. Other works include a series of photo-poem pamphlets; two novels, BLACK LACE (S.D., 2001) and YOU, ME AND THE INSECTS (S.D. 2005); and DETECTIVE SENTENCES (S.D., 2001), IN BETWEEN (Spectacular Diseases, England); ME & MY DOG (Poetry New York, 1999); LOVE MAKES THINKING DARK (United Artists, 1995); THE PASSION OF SIGNS (Leave Books, 1994); SMOKING IN THE TWILIGHT BAR (United Artists, l988). During the early nineties, she was the editor of Long News in the Short Century, a journal of art and writing. She is Professor Emerita at Long Island University in Brooklyn. She is presently living in Tucson, Arizona.

Mitch Highfill is the author of LIQUID AFFAIRS (United Artists), THE BLUE DAHLIA (Detour), Turn (Situations) and KOENIG'S SPHERE (Situations). His work has appeared in the anthology, Heights of the Marvelous (St. Martin's), and in several small magazines. He lives in Brooklyn with his wife and his son.

Bill Kushner was recently elected a fellow of the New York Foundation For The Arts. He has published three books with United Artists, HEAD (1986), LOVE UNCUT (1996) and HIS APRIL (2003). His latest book, IN SUNSETLAND WITH YOU, is forthcoming from Straw Gate Books.

Bernadette Mayer is one of the founders of United Artists Books. She is the author of numerous books of poetry and prose, including MIDWINTER DAY, THE GOLDEN BOOK OF WORDS, THE BERNADETTE MAYER READER, UTOPIA, THE DESIRES OF MOTHERS TO PLEASE OTHERS IN LETTERS, STUDYING HUNGER, SCARLET TANAGER, ANOTHER SMASHED PINECONE and PROPER NAME. A reprint of the magazine 0 TO 9, which she edited in the 1960s with Vito Acconci, has recently been reprinted by Ugly Duckling, and a book of letters and interviews with Bill Berkson, WHAT?S YOUR IDEA OF A GOOD TIME, was published by Tuumba in 2006. A new book of poems, THE POETRY STATE FOREST, is forthcoming from New Directions.

Dennis Moritz has written over 30 theater pieces that have received professional productions. Venues in New York City include the Joseph Papp Public Theater (New Works Project), BACA Downtown, the Nuyorican Poets Cafe, St. Marks Poetry Project and HERE Center for Contemporary Arts. Venues in Philadelphia include The Painted Bride Arts Center, Freedom Theater, MTI, Walnut Street Theater, Theatre Double and Theater Center Philadelphia. His play Just the Boys was published by Scribners in Action: the Nuyorican Poets Theater Festival. His book SOMETHING TO HOLD ON TO (Nine Theater Pieces) was published by United Artists Books. His poems and plays have been widely published in magazines. Dennis was the artistic director and resident playwright of Theatre Double Repertory Company for seven years. His works have been supported by many granting agencies. He was a long time member of the New Works Project at BACA Downtown and the Joseph Papp Public Theater. Recently Dennis was part of the graduate faculty of Long Island University teaching playwriting.

Tom Savage is the author of eight books of poetry including POLITICAL CONDITIONS/PHYSICAL STATES (United Artists Books, 1993) and BAMIYAN POEMS (Sisyphus Press 2004). He has taught poetry workshops at The Poetry Project and Tribes Gallery. His latest publication is inclusion in the anthology Up Is Up and So Is Down (New York University Press, 2006).

Harris Schiff has published four books with United Artists/Angel Hair: SECRET CLOUDS; I SHOULD RUN FOR COVER BUT I'M RIGHT HERE; IN THE HEART OF THE EMPIRE and YO-YO'S WITH MONEY (a collaboration with Ted Berrigan). Since 1996 he has curated $lavery - Cyberzine of the Arts at www.cyberpoems.com.

Anne Waldman - poet, performer, editor, professor - is the author of numerous books including OUTRIDER: Poems, Essays, Interviews just published by La Alameda Press, STRUCTURE OF THE WORLD COMPARED TO A BUBBLE, Penguin Poets and IN THE ROOM OF NEVER GRIEVE, Coffee House Press. She is also the co-editor of The ANGEL HAIR Anthology and CIVIL DISOBEDIENCES: Poetics & Politics in Action. Her most recent CD is "The Eye of The Falcon" with Ambrose Bye (Farfalla, McMillen, Parrish) She co-founded the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics in Boulder Colorado with the late Allen Ginsberg. She is Chair and Artistic Director of its The Summer Writing program. United Artists published her book BLUE MOSQUE in 1989.

Lewis Warsh has been an editor of Angel Hair/United Artists since 1967. He is the author of numerous volumes of poetry, fiction and autobiography, including two new chapbooks, FLIGHT TEST (Ugly Duckling, 2006) and THE FLEA MARKET AT KIEL (A Rest Books, 2006). Forthcoming in 2007 are a novel, A PLACE IN THE SUN (Spuyten Duyvil), and a book of poems, INSEPARABLE: POEMS 1995-2005 (Granary). He is director of the MFA program in creative writing at Long Island University in Brooklyn.

Raquel Vogl is a musician, a writer, and one half of the band Legends.

Elizabeth Reddin is a poet and performer living in Brooklyn. Her first book is forthcoming from Ugly Duckling Presse and she is producer/director of Deerhead Records. She is the other half of the band Legends.

Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://boogcityevents.blogspot.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

644. George Bowering

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Mon 29 Jan 2007

I'm lost.
What sort of poetics are we discussing here?

On 29-Jan-07, at 1:10 PM, Gabrielle Welford wrote:

> or...since he's extremely hurtful to people who are real...he need to
> be > off the list. gabe
>
> On Sun, 28 Jan 2007, Tom Beckett wrote:
>
>> Phil Primeau has a track record of calling people names and looking >> for >> attention through provocative remarks. That reflects not at all on >> his putative
>> targets and says a great deal about his own character. My >> inclination is to >> not take the bait. The man needs attention. I, for one, will deny >> it to >> him.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
> gabrielle welford
> [redacted]
>
> Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com).
> Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004
>
> wilhelm reich
> anarcho-syndicalism
> gut/heart/head/earth
>
>
Giorgio H. Bowering
Does not kill snakes

↑ Index

645. Gabrielle Welford

Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

perhaps the kind of ticks(po) used in unnecessary bloodletting, cavalierly youthful swagger-kine relativism, bravado tending chest beatery? with respect, for i do think well of thee, g

On Mon, 29 Jan 2007, George Bowering wrote:

> I'm lost.
> What sort of poetics are we discussing here?
>
> On 29-Jan-07, at 1:10 PM, Gabrielle Welford wrote:
>
> or...since he's extremely hurtful to people who are real...he need to be > off the list. gabe
>
> On Sun, 28 Jan 2007, Tom Beckett wrote:
>
> Phil Primeau has a track record of calling people names and looking for > attention through provocative remarks. That reflects not at all on his putative > targets and says a great deal about his own character. My inclination is to > not take the bait. The man needs attention. I, for one, will deny it to > him.
>
> gabrielle welford
> [redacted]
>
> Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com).
> Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004
>
> wilhelm reich
> anarcho-syndicalism

> gut/heart/head/earth
>
> Giorgio H. Bowering
> Does not kill snakes

gabrielle welford
[redacted]

Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com). Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004

wilhelm reich
anarcho-syndicalism
gut/heart/head/earth

↑ Index

646. Jesse Crockett
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

alright, everybody, I'm sorry. I am Phil Primeau.

Sorry not to anyone except Jack but Phil.

"I would hurt to have that chap back." But then, I shouldn't ("push my luck").

Gabrielle Welford wrote:
> perhaps the kind of ticks(po) used in unnecessary bloodletting, cavalierly > youthful swagger-kine relativism, bravado tending chest beatery? with > respect, for i do think well of thee, g
>
> On Mon, 29 Jan 2007, George Bowering wrote:
>
>
>> I'm lost.
>> What sort of poetics are we discussing here?
>>
>>
>> On 29-Jan-07, at 1:10 PM, Gabrielle Welford wrote:
>>
>>
>>> or...since he's extremely hurtful to people who are real...he need to
>>> be >>> off the list. gabe

>>>
>>> On Sun, 28 Jan 2007, Tom Beckett wrote:
>>>
>>>
>>>> Phil Primeau has a track record of calling people names and looking
>>>> for >>>> attention through provocative remarks. That reflects not at all on >>>> his putative
>>>> targets and says a great deal about his own character. My >>>> inclination is to >>>> not take the bait. The man needs attention. I, for one, will deny >>>> it to >>>> him.
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>> gabrielle welford
>>> [redacted]
>>>
>>> Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com).
>>> Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004
>>>
>>> wilhelm reich
>>> anarcho-syndicalism
>>> gut/heart/head/earth
>>>
>>>
>>>
>> Giorgio H. Bowering
>> Does not kill snakes
>>
>>
>
> gabrielle welford
> [redacted]
>
> Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com).
> Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004
>

> wilhelm reich
> anarcho-syndicalism
> gut/heart/head/earth
>

↑ Index

647. Jesse Crockett
dailyness from last week
Mon 29 Jan 2007

---

remember the sixth grade? Megan doesn't want to go out with you anymore. only she sends guys. then there's the other guys on the other side of the playground. a football hits your head. a laughing apology. ouch. so. all your experience collapses. yes. like walls. the floor is a special kind of wall. it requires more cleaning, paradoxically, as it requires less attention. we're like the floor.

↑ Index

648. Eric
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Mon 29 Jan 2007

> alright, everybody, I'm sorry. I am Phil Primeau.

No, I am.

↑ Index

649. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?
Mon 29 Jan 2007

I am sacrificing my second and last post for today in protest : can we let this thread fucking die already??

let the blood of this e-mail message purify every reader's tainted soul, and teach to them wisdom and universal compassion and other nice things

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Jesse Crockett
Sent: Monday, January 29, 2007 16:27
To: [redacted]

Subject: Re: Homophobia: The last acceptable bigotry in America? - A New Tune?

alright, everybody, I'm sorry. I am Phil Primeau.

Sorry not to anyone except Jack but Phil.

"I would hurt to have that chap back." But then, I shouldn't ("push my luck").

Gabrielle Welford wrote:
> perhaps the kind of ticks(po) used in unnecessary bloodletting, cavalierly
> youthful swagger-kine relativism, bravado tending chest beatery? with > respect, for i do think well of thee, g
>
> On Mon, 29 Jan 2007, George Bowering wrote:
>
>
>> I'm lost.
>> What sort of poetics are we discussing here?
>>
>>
>> On 29-Jan-07, at 1:10 PM, Gabrielle Welford wrote:
>>
>>
>>> or...since he's extremely hurtful to people who are real...he need to
>>> be >>> off the list. gabe
>>>
>>> On Sun, 28 Jan 2007, Tom Beckett wrote:
>>>
>>>
>>>> Phil Primeau has a track record of calling people names and looking
>>>> for >>>> attention through provocative remarks. That reflects not at all on >>>> his putative
>>>> targets and says a great deal about his own character. My >>>> inclination is to >>>> not take the bait. The man needs attention. I, for one, will deny >>>> it to >>>> him.

>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>> gabrielle welford
>>> [redacted]
>>>
>>> Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com).
>>> Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004
>>>
>>> wilhelm reich
>>> anarcho-syndicalism
>>> gut/heart/head/earth
>>>
>>>
>>>
>> Giorgio H. Bowering
>> Does not kill snakes
>>
>>
>
> gabrielle welford
> [redacted]
>
> Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com).
> Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004
>
> wilhelm reich
> anarcho-syndicalism
> gut/heart/head/earth
>

↑ Index

650. Joe Amato
Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
Mon 29 Jan 2007

Call out to Dan Z on that excellent review of Hirsch's new book. Thanks for alerting us to this, Dan.

Here's the link again:

http://www.thecommonreview.org/spotlight.html

Anyone who's been struggling with these issues in the classroom will find this of great interest. I can see the applicability, as Dan suggests, to the study (and teaching) of poetry, but I need to let the various registers of the discussion settle in a bit. At the moment, I must confess, I'm finding myself more drawn to the pedagogical per se, maybe b/c I'm about to take another crack at Olson tomorrow with a new group of undergrads.

Best,

Joe

↑ Index

651. Alan Sondheim
Qbico Records releases "56" Alan Sondheim (fwd)
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Qbico Records releases "56" Alan Sondheim

(this selection really amazes me - the vinyl record itself is beautiful. - alan)

"After releasing two unique LP back in the 60's for the legendary ESP label with his Ritual All 770 and another one for Riverboat, finally Alan Sondheim is back ! this is his 1st LP after nearly 35 years and here he plays guitar, alpine zither, electronics, field recording... as usual he present us an eclectic mix of fascinating sounds...." qbico

For additional information and to order, please go to:

> QBICO RECORDS
> www.qbicorecords.com
>
> QBICO RECORDS
> www.qbicorecords.com
> [redacted]

↑ Index

652. Simon DeDeo
reading comprehension and background knowledge
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Ooh! I have something to say that doesn't involve you-know-what.

Doing my best to sweep aside the question of the failures of the contemporary American school -- a massive question I have no experience with or original opinions on -- let's talk about Dan Z's question:

"Anyhow, this topic might provoke a discussion of audience, at least, and of the role of a basic understanding of grammar and of syntax in order to appreciate their innovative warping as strenghthening corrugation of the materia poetica."

OK, I'm not sure I follow exactly what Dan is saying here, although I like how it sounds and a definite naturalist A+ for the analogy between corrugated cardboard or steel in engineering and the deformations of language in the avant garde. Hardcore.

I'd venture that most of the poetry I read (and review on rhubarb) requires not only a familiarity with certain experiences, but also a deep familiarity with how they're talked about in various situations.

You can't just watch the baseball game: you have to listen to it on the radio. I'd say a key component of much of the poetry I read by contemporaries is that is it a response to other -- verbal -- perceptions.

This doesn't cover everything, definitely not the Objectivists (maybe Neidecker?) But I think the idea of poetry as a distorted mirror for the language of others -- even bumping up against Wittgensteinian notions of philosophy-as-language-therapy -- is a definite thread in that sweater.

↑ Index

653. Patrick Duggan
Idiolexicon -- A New Web-Journal of Poetry
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Poetry is huge. We're interested in poetry's ever-morphing relationships with language, grammar, rhythm, metaphor, image..., but we're interested in its relationship with other things, too: politics, economics, theatre, video games, opera, popular music, religion. The most compelling poetry is argumentative without being didactic, political without being dogmatic.

Our hope is that as Idiolexicon grows, it will become a harbor for serious argument and dialogue through poetry. Send responses to other poems that have been featured in Idiolexicon. Send responses to other poems that have not been featured in Idiolexicon. Send your notes from yesterday's football game. Send your annotated version of the State of the Union address. Send the rejection letter you'd send Harold Bloom if you had the chance.

Poetry and short prose pieces, mainly poetry.

Slam poets are welcome here. Just don't break anything.

Send 3-7 poems, or one long poem. We're interested in doing longer stints with sets of poems that we like, so it might be good to send poems that fit together well.

Previously published is fine, if you tell us that it's been previously published, and where.

Simultaneous subs are fine, just let us know if someone good accepts it.

If at all possible, send your poems in the body of your email. If that's not possible, send your poems as a PDF file. If that's not possible either, explain in your email why we should trust your Word document not to have a virus in it.

We're also interested in mp3 recordings of featured poems (studio-quality or live performance). Send files via yousendit.

Send submissions to submissions at idiolexicon dot com.

This is all an experiment. If we don't take your piece, it's not because we don't like it. It just might not fit with what we're trying to do right now.

Idiolexicon is licensed under Creative Commons (non-commercial, attribution, share-alike). You retain all rights.

↑ Index

654. Jesse Crockett
bienve... nue ?
Tue 30 Jan 2007

I hope I meant to say hello in French. Brenda, you are well loved by me. I've dedicated a photo to you at my flickr space: http://flickr.com/photos/jessebean. Please have a look, & re-consider talking to me some time or s'il vous plait to offer a poem or poems to listenlight.net.

Best,
Jess

↑ Index

655. Jesse Crockett
Oh
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Um, yeah, Brenda is my favorite living younger poet.

↑ Index

656. tyrone williams
Re: Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Joe,

Thanks for forwarding the Hirsch--very pertient to what we're dealing with at Xavier right now..and I liked Symptoms of a Finaer age. especially the first and middle sections...

tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: Joe Amato <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jan 29, 2007 9:01 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
>
>Call out to Dan Z on that excellent review of Hirsch's new book.
>Thanks for alerting us to this, Dan.
>
>Here's the link again:
>
>http://www.thecommonreview.org/spotlight.html
>
>Anyone who's been struggling with these issues in the classroom will >find this of great interest. I can see the applicability, as Dan >suggests, to the study (and teaching) of poetry, but I need to let >the various registers of the discussion settle in a bit. At the >moment, I must confess, I'm finding myself more drawn to the >pedagogical per se, maybe b/c I'm about to take another crack at >Olson tomorrow with a new group of undergrads.
>
>Best,
>
>Joe

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

657. Raymond Bianchi
http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
Tue 30 Jan 2007

---

http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/

To all Poetic Listers like a stupid I set up a blog with a typoed name. So forgive this stupid poet here is the same blog as before with a corrected name.

Ray

---------- Original message ----------
From: tyrone williams <[redacted]>

> Joe,
>
> Thanks for forwarding the Hirsch--very pertient to what we're dealing with at Xavier right now..and I liked Symptoms of a Finaer age. especially the first and middle sections...
>
> tyrone
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Joe Amato
> Sent: Jan 29, 2007 9:01 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
>
> Call out to Dan Z on that excellent review of Hirsch's new book.
> Thanks for alerting us to this, Dan.
>
> Here's the link again:
>
> http://www.thecommonreview.org/spotlight.html
>
> Anyone who's been struggling with these issues in the classroom will find this of great interest. I can see the applicability, as Dan suggests, to the study (and teaching) of poetry, but I need to let the various registers of the discussion settle in a bit. At the moment, I must confess, I'm finding myself more drawn to the pedagogical per se, maybe b/c I'm about to take another crack at Olson tomorrow with a new group of undergrads.
>
> Best,
>
> Joe
>
> Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

658. Barry Schwabsky
This conference in Plymouth, UK sounds awesome
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Poetry and Public Language
a conference on contemporary poetry

Speakers include:
Barrett Watten,
Lyn Hejinian,
Allen Fisher,
Peter Nicholls,
Andrea Brady,
Peter Middleton,
William Rowe,
Hélène Aji,
Robert Hampson,
Mairéad Byrne,
Robert Sheppard

30 March – 1 April 2007 at the University of Plymouth with an evening poetry performance by Lyn Hejinian and Barrett Watten
at Dartington College of Arts, 31 March 07

To attend the conference, and for details of registration and programme, please contact the conference administrator [redacted]

POETRY AND PUBLIC LANGUAGE 2007 is a collaborative venture sponsored by the University of Plymouth and Dartington College of Arts, promoted in association with Peninsula Arts. Conference committee: Anthony Caleshu, John Hall, Mark Leahy, Tony Lopez

↑ Index

659. Bruce Covey

Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta

Tue 30 Jan 2007

Ron Padgett will be reading at Emory University in Atlanta this Thursday, February 1, at 7:30 pm in the Joeseph Jones Room of the Woodruff Library. He will also conduct a loose-format colloquium from 4:00-5:00 in the Kemp Malone Library in Callaway Hall. Refreshments & booksigning at the evening event only.

Bruce Covey

↑ Index

660. Thomas savage
Re: Lynch's Inland Empire
Tue 30 Jan 2007

There was also a fascinating interview with David Lynch about this movie and his years as a practitioner of transcendental meditation (yes, there is a connection) on an NPR program called Studio 360. I believe this can be accessed at studio360.org. The .org info is definitely correct since I have contacted the program at that address several times in the past; I'm just not certain if this program can be directly listened to yet as it was broadcast quite recently. Regards, Tom Savage

Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote: Thomas,

My son Daniel interviewed Lynch and Durning for this movie.

Ciao,

Murat

On 1/29/07, Thomas savage wrote:
>
> I tried to backchannel you about Inland Empire but didn't get through > either time. So here is my reaction to Inland Empire. It is a fascinating, > wonderful film. If you haven't seen it yet, I hope you enjoy it. Regards, > Tom Savage
>
> Dan Coffey wrote: Has anybody seen this? Please feel > free to backchannel if you have. Thanks...
>
> --
> http://hyperhypo.org/blog
> http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com
>
>
>
> ---
> Never miss an email again!
> Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.
>

Access over 1 million songs - Yahoo! Music Unlimited.

↑ Index

661. Dan Coffey
Re: Lynch's Inland Empire
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Check out Amy King's blog from maybe a month or so ago where she calls attention to Lynch's program to introduce TM into the curricula for public schools. He has a new book out called Catching the Big Fish: Meditation, Consciousness, and Creativity.

On 1/30/07, Thomas savage <[redacted]> wrote:
> There was also a fascinating interview with David Lynch about this movie and his years as a practitioner of transcendental meditation (yes, there is a connection) on an NPR program called Studio 360. I believe this can be accessed at studio360.org. The .org info is definitely correct since I have contacted the program at that address several times in the past; I'm just not certain if this program can be directly listened to yet as it was broadcast quite recently. Regards, Tom Savage
>
> Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote: Thomas,
>
> My son Daniel interviewed Lynch and Durning for this movie.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On 1/29/07, Thomas savage wrote:
> >
> > I tried to backchannel you about Inland Empire but didn't get through > > either time. So here is my reaction to Inland Empire. It is a fascinating, > > wonderful film. If you haven't seen it yet, I hope you enjoy it. Regards, > > Tom Savage
> >
> > Dan Coffey wrote: Has anybody seen this? Please feel > > free to backchannel if you have. Thanks...
> >
> > --
> > http://hyperhypo.org/blog
> > http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com
> >
> >
> >
> > ----------

> > Never miss an email again!
> > Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.
> >
>
>
>
> ----------
> Access over 1 million songs - Yahoo! Music Unlimited.
>

--
http://hyperhypo.org/blog
http://www.pftborder.blogspot.com

↑ Index

662. Barry Schwabsky
Spring readings at Parasol Unit, London
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Poetry evenings at Parasol Unit will resume this spring with Peter Cole and Tony Lopez on 3 March, Lyn Hejinian and Barrett Watten on 29 March and Michael Glover and Ernesto Priego on 5 June.

Saturday, 3 March, 6 PM

Peter Cole's two books of poems originally published in the United States have now been published together as What Is Doubled: Poems 1981-1998 (Shearsman, 2005). He has also published many volumes of translations of medieval and contemporary Hebrew as well as Arabic poetry, for which he has won the TLS Translation Prize and the PEN-American Translation Award, among others. He lives in Jerusalem where he co-edits Ibis Editions, a press devoted to the literature of the Levant. Tony Lopez teaches at the University of Plymouth and is the author of many books and pamphlets of poetry including Devolution (The Figures, 2000), Data Shadow (Reality Street, 2000), and False Memory (Salt, 2003), which Robert Potts in the Guardian called "by far my favourite individual volume of poetry this year… a series of sonnet sequences collaging and remixing the white noise of 1990s Britain into a disorienting, sometimes hilarious, often sinister, and always satirical challenge." His most recent book is Meaning Performance: Essays in Poetry (Salt, 2006).

Thursday, 29 March, 6:30 PM

Lyn Hejinian is the author of many books, including Writing is An Aid to Memory (The Figures, 1978), My Life (third edition, Green Integer, 2002), Oxota: A Short Russian Novel (The Figures, 1991), and The Fatalist (Omnidawn, 2003). Her essays are collected in The Language of Inquiry (University of California Press, 2000). She was editor of Tuumba Press, 1976-84 and co-editor (with Barrett Watten) of Poetics Journal, 1981-99 and is now co-director of Atelos. A Chancellor of the Academy of American Poets, she teaches at the University of California, Berkeley. Barrett Watten is a poet and a professor of literature and cultural studies at Wayne State University in Detroit. He has published two volumes of literary and cultural criticism, of which The Constructivist Moment: From Material Text to Cultural Poetics (Wesleyan, 2003) was awarded the René Wellek Prize in 2004. His published works of poetry include Frame (1971-1990), published by Sun and Moon in 1997; Bad History (Atelos, 1998); and Progress/Under Erasure (Green Integer, 2004). Watten edited This, one of the central little magazines of the experimental writers who would be known as the Language school, and co-edited Poetics Journal, one of its theoretical venues. The Grand Piano, a multi-authored "experiment in collective autobiography" of the period, began serial publication in November 2006. Recently, he spent time in Germany as a Fulbright Fellow, at the University of Tübingen and in Berlin, where he wrote on visual art, performance, and cultural politics.

Tuesday, 5 June, 6:30 PM

Michael Glover has written art criticism for The Times, The Economist, The Independent, and The Financial Times, among others. He is the author of several books and chapbooks of poetry, including Amidst All This Debris (2001) and The Bead-Eyed Man (2000), both from Dagger Press, and Impossible Horizons (Sinclair-Stevenson, 1995). Of his new book, For the Sheer Hell of Living, to be published this year by San Marco Press, John Ashbery writes, "Michael Glover’s lines unspool gravely and efficiently with few commas like waves that know they are on the way to someplace but without making much fuss about it. They can be piercingly sad and hilariously wry, sometimes at the same time, as: ‘Someone loses the midge swat./ Many glasses are raised.’—this from a poem called ‘Few things happen.’ Few things happen here, true, but those that do are tremendously important even when tiny." Ernesto Priego is a Mexican poet, essayist, and translator presently living in London. He is the author of Not Even Dogs (Meritage Press, 2006) as well as the blogs "Never Neutral" (http://neverneutral.wordpress.com/) and "The Jainakú Project" (http://thejainakuproject.blogspot.com/). A recent interview with him can be found on Tom Beckett’s blog "E

The readings are organized and introduced by Barry Schwabsky. Previous readers have been Tim Atkins, Guy Bennett, Kelvin Corcoran, Linh Dinh, Carrie Etter, Allen Fisher, Mark Ford, Lee Harwood, Sue Hubbard, Vincent Katz, Drew Milne, Redell Olsen, Anthony Rudolf, Leslie Scalapino, Barry Schwabsky, John Seed, Simon Smith, Carol Szymanski, and Catherine Wagner.

Readings begin at 6:30 PM (except for Saturday, 3 March, which begins at 6 PM) and are free to the public. Parasol Unit is located at 14 Wharf Road, London N1, near the Old Street and Angel tube stations.

If you would like to be removed from this mailing list, please reply with "Remove" as the subject

↑ Index

663. Adam Fieled

Ruth Lepson, Larry Sawyer on PFS Post

Tue 30 Jan 2007

Check out new work from Chicago's Larry Sawyer & Massachusettes poet Ruth Lepson on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Best/Yours/Peace,
Adam Fieled [redacted]

http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com

TV dinner still cooling?
Check out "Tonight's Picks" on Yahoo! TV.

↑ Index

664. Jacqueline Gens

Re: Ruth Lepson, Larry Sawyer on PFS Post

Tue 30 Jan 2007

Hi Adam----Meant to write and say how much I enjoyed 'Twisted Limbs" on Big Bridge. Hope you are well and enjoying your work.

fond regards--jacqueline

On Jan 30, 2007, at 12:00 PM, Adam Fieled wrote:

> Check out new work from Chicago's Larry Sawyer & Massachusettes poet Ruth Lepson on PFS Post:
>
> http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com
>
> Best/Yours/Peace,
> Adam Fieled [redacted]
>
> http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com

> ---
> TV dinner still cooling?
> Check out "Tonight's Picks" on Yahoo! TV.

↑ Index

665. Dan Waber
ars poetica update
Tue 30 Jan 2007

The ars poetica project under way at:

http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/

Poems appeared last week by: Jonathan Penton and Mairéad Byrne.

Poems will appear this week by: Michael Rothenberg and Riccardo Duranti.

A new poem about poetry every day.

Enjoy,
Dan

↑ Index

666. George Bowering
Re: Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Tell him I wish I could be there.
I am nuts about Padgett's work.

On 30-Jan-07, at 7:59 AM, Bruce Covey wrote:

> Ron Padgett will be reading at Emory University in Atlanta this > Thursday, February 1, at 7:30 pm in the Joeseph Jones Room of the > Woodruff Library. He will also conduct a loose-format colloquium from > 4:00-5:00 in the Kemp Malone Library in Callaway Hall. Refreshments & > booksigning at the evening event only.
>
> Bruce Covey
>
>
G. Harry Bowering,
Born to hit opposite-field singles.

↑ Index

667. Mark Truscott

Feb 7: Brossard, Godard, and Harris at Test (Toronto)

Tue 30 Jan 2007

The Test Reading Series is pleased to present a bilingual reading:

Nicole Brossard + Barbara Godard and Sharon Harris (biographical notes below)
February 7, 2007, 7:30 p.m.
Mercer Union, A Centre for Contemporary Art
37 Lisgar Street, Toronto

Small donations toward the running of the series will be gratefully accepted at the door.

Nicole Brossard's participation is made possible by the Comparative Literature Department, University of Toronto, and the English Department, York University.

More information (including a map): www.testreading.org

Hope to see you there,

Mark

* Montreal-born NICOLE BROSSARD, poet, novelist and essayist, twice Governor General Award winner for her poetry (1974, 1984), member of l'Académie des lettres du Québec and of La société royale du Canada, is one of Quebec's most celebrated authors. For the more than thirty books she has published since 1965, she has received the Prix Athanase-David (1991), the highest prize in Quebec, for her entire body of work, and the Molson Prize of the Canada Council (2006), the most prestigious award in Canada, for her outstanding contribution to the arts and humanities. Her many honours and awards from both francophone and anglophone institutions in Canada include doctorates from the University of Western Ontario (1991) and the Université de Sherbrooke (1997), the bp Nichol Chapbook Award (1986), le Grand Prix de Poésie du Festival international de Trois-Rivières (1989, 1999), the Harbourfront Festival Prize (1991), Prix de la Société des écrivains canadiens (2002) and the W.O. Mitchell Prize (2003). Nicole Brossard emerged as a leading figure of the new literary movement which since the 1960s has revolutionized the forms and language of poetry and fiction in Quebec through her work as founding co-editor of the influential periodical La barre du jour (1965–1975) and of the feminist periodical Les têtes de pioche (1976–1979) and through her contribution to feminist culture, confirmed with the film Some American Feminists (1976), the acclaimed Anthologie de la poésie des femmes au Québec (1991, 2003), and her role as President of the Third International Feminist Book Fair (1988). Through her many appearances as speaker or reader at conferences and festivals across Canada and throughout the world, Brossard has significantly influenced contemporary writing internationally, especially through the many translations of her work into English and Spanish, and those of individual works into German, Italian, Slovenian, Romanian, Japanese and Afrikaans. Titles translated into English include Aerial Letter, Baroque at Dawn, The Blue Books, Intimate Journal, Installations, Lovhers, Mauve Desert, Museum of Bone and Water, These Our Mothers. L'Horizon du fragment (2004, Ed. Trois-Pistoles) and Yesterday at the Hotel Clarendon (2005, Coach House Books, S. de Lotbinière Harwood, trans) are her most recent books in French and English. Fluid Arguments, a selection of her recent essays by various translators was edited by Susan Rudy in 2006 (Mercury) as was a new edition of the translation of Picture Theory (Guernica, B. Godard trans.). Nicole Brossard: Essays on her Work (Guernica), edited by Louise Forsyth, appeared in 2005. Nicole Brossard has just completed a new novel in French, and a selection of her poetry in English translation will be published by the University of California Press in 2007–2008. Her collection of poetry Notebook of Roses and Civilisation, translated by Erín Moure and Robert Majzels, will be published by Coach House in April of this year.

BARBARA GODARD, Avie Bennett Historica Chair of Canadian Literature and Professor of English, French, Social and Political Thought and Women's Studies at York University, has published widely on Canadian and Quebec cultures and on feminist and literary theory. Her work in translation theory has been influential in the cultural turn in Translation Studies. As translator, she introduced Quebec women writers Louky Bersianik, Yolande Villemaire, and Antonine Maillet to an English readership. Her translations include Nicole Brossard's These Our Mothers (1983), Lovhers (1986), Picture Theory (1991, revised edition 2006), and Intimate Journal (2004) and France Théoret's The Tangible Word (1991). In 2004 a revised edition of her translation of Maillet's The Tale of Don l'Orignal was published and also broadcast on CBC's Between the Covers. In 1998 she held the Gerstein Award for an advanced research seminar on "Translation Studies in Canada: Institutions, Discourses, Texts." Among her awards is the Vinay-Darbelnet Prize of the Canadian Association of Translation Studies (2000). More information is available at < http://www.yorku.ca/bgodard/>.

SHARON HARRIS (b.1972) is a writer and artist living in Toronto. Her work has appeared in magazines, literary journals, and newspapers, and on radio and television across Canada. Sharon's column "Fun With 'Pataphysics" is part of Word: Canada's Magazine for Readers + Writers. She has photographed Toronto literary readings for almost five years, and has documented 108 events to date (averaging two events a month posted online).

In 2006, her first solo photo exhibition received national media attention, she curated a group show about urban art as part of the Scream Literary festival, she became a Torontoist.com contributor, Geist published her first feature photo essay, and the Mercury Press launched her first book of poetry (which she co-designed with Beverley Daurio), AVATAR.

In 2007, Sharon plans to finish an illustrated manuscript that is a six-year-long cultural study of the words "I love you."

↑ Index

668. Martha Deed

Re: Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta

Tue 30 Jan 2007

Ron Padgett just read here in Buffalo. He gave a great reading and a good time was had by all.

Enjoy.
Martha

----- Original Message -----
From: "Bruce Covey" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 10:59 AM
Subject: Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta

> Ron Padgett will be reading at Emory University in Atlanta this Thursday, February 1, at 7:30 pm in the Joeseph Jones Room of the Woodruff Library. He will also conduct a loose-format colloquium from 4:00-5:00 in the Kemp Malone Library in Callaway Hall. Refreshments & booksigning at the evening event only.
>
> Bruce Covey
>
>
> --
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG Free Edition.
> Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.15/659 - Release Date: 1/30/2007 9:31 AM
>
>

↑ Index

669. amy king
Re: Ron Padgett reading in Atlanta - I have no shame.
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Because I love him too -- http://www.miporadio.com/ron_padgett.html

---
Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.

↑ Index

670. Larissa Shmailo
Teachers and Writers Collaborative Radio WNYE 91.5 this Thurs 2/1 at 6:30 PM
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Teachers and Writers Collaborative Radio
WNYE 91.5 FM (New York City)

Thursday, February 1 at 6:30-7:00 PM:
Larissa Shmailo presents "Exorcism (Found Poem)" and other selected work.

(Repeated Tuesday, February 27 at 6:30-7:00 PM)

The poem â€œExorcismâ€ appears in the "War on All Fronts" anthology edited by Halvard Johnson in the 2007 issue of Big Bridge at
http://www.bigbridge.org/deathlshmailo.htm
(http://www.bigbridge.org/deathlshmailo.htm)

Larissa Shmailo (mailto:[redacted])
[redacted]
http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld (http://www.myspace.com/larissaworld)
http//:www.cdbaby.com/cd/shmailo
http//:larissashmailo.blogspot.com

↑ Index

671. reJennifer Bartlett
Homophobia...
Tue 30 Jan 2007

I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it is so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And there is no "affirmative action" for PWD.

_____ Get live scores
and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football

↑ Index

672. Small Press Traffic
Lisa Robertson at Poets Theater this Fri 2/2
Tue 30 Jan 2007

Dear all, I inadvertently left off yesterday's announcement one of the plays we're presenting on Friday here at Small Press Traffic in San Francisco --- it's "Noggin Flowers," by Lisa Robertson and Jacob Eichert, directed by Kevin Killian.

Please join us!

7:30 PM, 2/2, $10

Elizabeth Treadwell, Director
Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]
http://www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

673. Alexander Jorgensen
Darn it, Wolfowitz.
Tue 30 Jan 2007

---

http://blogs.guardian.co.uk/news/archives/2007/01/30/darn_it_wolfowitz.html

And oh, Amy King, please, no disclaimers, if Jesse Crockett can promote his mag while so concerned about the so-called downtrodden - Was it 2X? Please, you are an institution!

agj

_____
___
8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news

↑ Index

674. Wystan Curnow

Re: Spring readings at Parasol Unit, London

Tue 30 Jan 2007

Dear Barry,
Could you email me at [redacted]?
Thanks,
Wystan

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Barry Schwabsky
Sent: Wednesday, 31 January 2007 5:19 a.m.
To: [redacted]
Subject: Spring readings at Parasol Unit, London

Poetry evenings at Parasol Unit will resume this spring with Peter Cole and Tony Lopez on 3 March, Lyn Hejinian and Barrett Watten on 29 March and Michael Glover and Ernesto Priego on 5 June.

Saturday, 3 March, 6 PM

Peter Cole's two books of poems originally published in the United States have now been published together as What Is Doubled: Poems 1981-1998 (Shearsman, 2005). He has also published many volumes of translations of medieval and contemporary Hebrew as well as Arabic poetry, for which he has won the TLS Translation Prize and the PEN-American Translation Award, among others. He lives in Jerusalem where he co-edits Ibis Editions, a press devoted to the literature of the Levant. Tony Lopez teaches at the University of Plymouth and is the author of many books and pamphlets of poetry including Devolution (The Figures, 2000), Data Shadow (Reality Street, 2000), and False Memory (Salt, 2003), which Robert Potts in the Guardian called "by far my favourite individual volume of poetry this year... a series of sonnet sequences collaging and remixing the white noise of 1990s Britain into a disorienting, sometimes hilarious, often sinister, and always satirical challenge." His most recent book is Meaning Performance: Essays in Poetry (Salt, 2006).

Thursday, 29 March, 6:30 PM

Lyn Hejinian is the author of many books, including Writing is An Aid to Memory (The Figures, 1978), My Life (third edition, Green Integer, 2002), Oxota: A Short Russian Novel (The Figures, 1991), and The Fatalist (Omnidawn, 2003). Her essays are collected in The Language of Inquiry (University of California Press, 2000). She was editor of Tuumba Press, 1976-84 and co-editor

(with Barrett Watten) of Poetics Journal, 1981-99 and is now co-director of Atelos. A Chancellor of the Academy of American Poets, she teaches at the University of California, Berkeley. Barrett Watten is a poet and a professor of literature and cultural studies at Wayne State University in Detroit. He has published two volumes of literary and cultural criticism, of which The Constructivist Moment: From Material Text to Cultural Poetics (Wesleyan, 2003) was awarded the René Wellek Prize in 2004. His published works of poetry include Frame (1971-1990), published by Sun and Moon in 1997; Bad History (Atelos, 1998); and Progress/Under Erasure (Green Integer, 2004). Watten edited This, one of the central little magazines of the experimental writers who would be known as the Language school, and co-edited Poetics Journal, one of its theoretical venues. The Grand Piano, a multi-authored "experiment in collective autobiography" of the period, began serial publication in November 2006. Recently, he spent time in Germany as a Fulbright Fellow, at the University of Tübingen and in Berlin, where he wrote on visual art, performance, and cultural politics.

Tuesday, 5 June, 6:30 PM

Michael Glover has written art criticism for The Times, The Economist, The Independent, and The Financial Times, among others. He is the author of several books and chapbooks of poetry, including Amidst All This Debris (2001) and The Bead-Eyed Man (2000), both from Dagger Press, and Impossible Horizons (Sinclair-Stevenson, 1995). Of his new book, For the Sheer Hell of Living, to be published this year by San Marco Press, John Ashbery writes, "Michael Glover's lines unspool gravely and efficiently with few commas like waves that know they are on the way to someplace but without making much fuss about it. They can be piercingly sad and hilariously wry, sometimes at the same time, as: 'Someone loses the midge swat./ Many glasses are raised.'-this from a poem called 'Few things happen.' Few things happen here, true, but those that do are tremendously important even when tiny." Ernesto Priego is a Mexican poet, essayist, and translator presently living in London. He is the author of Not Even Dogs (Meritage Press, 2006) as well as the blogs "Never Neutral" (http://neverneutral.wordpress.com/) and "The Jainakú Project" (http://thejainakuproject.blogspot.com/). A recent interview with him can be found on Tom Beckett's blog "E

The readings are organized and introduced by Barry Schwabsky. Previous readers have been Tim Atkins, Guy Bennett, Kelvin Corcoran, Linh Dinh, Carrie Etter, Allen Fisher, Mark Ford, Lee Harwood, Sue Hubbard, Vincent Katz, Drew Milne, Redell Olsen, Anthony Rudolf, Leslie Scalapino, Barry Schwabsky, John Seed, Simon Smith, Carol Szymanski, and Catherine Wagner.

Readings begin at 6:30 PM (except for Saturday, 3 March, which begins at 6 PM) and are free to the public. Parasol Unit is located at 14 Wharf Road, London N1, near the Old Street and Angel tube stations.

If you would like to be removed from this mailing list, please reply with "Remove" as the subject

↑ Index

675. Alexander Jorgensen
Poetry & Dinos & Michael Tod Edgerton
Tue 30 Jan 2007

For the man who's never said 'fish' - http://www.crooksandliars.com/2007/01/30/sex-talk-with-reverend-ted/

http://www.crooksandliars.com/2007/01/29/the-evangelical-war-on-science/

AGJ

Do you Yahoo!?
Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.
http://new.mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

676. Ruth Lepson
Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape
Tue 30 Jan 2007

---

yes, exactly--thanks for all this-- you can see the ram in the thicket at the Archaeology Museum at UPenn--they even used to have key rings of it--and at the British Museum & the Sumerian & Biblical refs are related, I remember from a course on Mesopotamian & Sumerian myth & religion thanks for the good thinking you can also hold the oldest writing in the world (except accounting) at the Penn Museum--broken tablets of the myth of Inanna

ruth l.

On 1/26/07 10:38 AM, "Tom W. Lewis" <[redacted]> wrote:

> here's the image that you're thinking of, maybe?
>
> http://home.earthlink.net/~valis2/images/ram_ur.jpg

I don't think this one is supposed to be a sacrifice, though.

the "ram/goat caught in brambles" topos reminds me of the Akeidah (Binding of Isaac) story out of Genesis -- you know the one: Isaac was to be sacrificed by his father Abraham on top of a mountain, but at the last moment a ram appeared nearby with its horns caught in brambles. that saved Isaac's bacon, so to speak.

could this be the ur-narrative (no pun intended, re: the Sumerian ref above) on which the historical Jerusalem Temple practice (sending out the scapegoat on the Day of Atonement) is based?

and has anyone thought of Nietzsche's analysis of "tragedy" as the "song of the goat" (tragos + oidos = tragoidia) in ancient drama? that is, another spin on sacrificing the scapegoat as purgation of a people's sins (or Aristotelian catharsis, in literary terms).

I love Dorn's take on the depletion of the ritual's spirit, in that its product, the scapegoat's milk, has become "homogenized" -- safe for all consumers.

tl

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Ruth Lepson
Sent: Thursday, January 25, 2007 21:04
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Dorn's scapegoat landscape

isn't there a goat caught in the brambles in sumerian myth?

On 1/25/07 8:21 PM, "Stephen Baraban" <[redacted]> wrote:

(I was thinking of posting about this yesterday, and again this morning, but I was curious to see if anyone else would note and remark on the following serendipity--synchronicity--co-incidence):

In light of the recent exchanges here re/ poems about scapegoats, it is quite interesting that the brand new issue of Big Bridge, announced yesterday, and, I presume, posted that same day, contains the following extraordinary poem by the late Edward Dorn, part of the "Featured Chapbook" by Dorn--"Low Coups and Haut Coups". (I hope my joy in attempting an explication of this short piece doesn't bring anyone too much pain):

HI COO

The scapegoat's milk
is homogenized
The blackberry brambles
cover the hill

_____

*I interpret Dorn's first two lines to intimate that people feel refreshed by the killing of the scapegoat, so therefore they experience through this death something like a cool pleasant drink of milk: "scapegoat's milk". The homogenization of the milk highlights the fact that scientific-technological rationality, "administration" if you will, has been applied to the immemorial process of scapegoating (well, yeah...the Nazis and all...), as to so many other things.*

But the great Mystery is the relation of the first two lines to the last two.

The "hill" might well be the locus for the killing of the goat. But beyond that, we seem to have the fusion of natural process (lines 3-4) and the most desreditable sort of human practice.

*In this fusion I find a hard-won deep serenity (mind you, I'm not suggesting resignation) I don't really associate with the work of Mr. Dorn, kind of more like the work of Gary Snyder, perhaps.*

_____

The whole Dorn chapbook is quite worth your while to look at. I'm assuming it's late work, i.e., sometime post _Slinger_, and as such it truly shines, like the _Chemo Sabe_ (Dorn's sequence involving his cancer & treatment) poems I've seen; the poem where he compares his beleagured ancestors to The Kurdish nation; and the Dorn poem about Olson that Tom Clark includes in the preface or afterward, whatever it was, of the paperback version of the unfortunate Olson bio. As AGAINST most of the late writing in Dorn's _Hello, La Jolla!_ & _Yellow Lola_, which I find rather acrid

and often trivial, if I were to sum it up in a phrase.

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news

↑ Index

677. noah eli gordon

Stefans/Baus/Moudry reading

Tue 30 Jan 2007

BRIAN KIM STEFANS
ERIC BAUS
NICK MOUDRY

Tuesday February 6 at 7:30 pm
Memorial Hall (West College) on the campus of Dickinson College (Carlisle, PA)
Free and open to the public

Brian Kim Stefans has published several books of poetry including Free Space Comix (Roof Books, 1998), Gulf (Object Editions, 1998, downloadable at ubu.com) and Angry Penguins (Harry Tankoos, 2000), along with several chapbooks, most recently "What Does It Matter?" from Barque Press. Fashionable Noise: On Digital Poetics, a collection of essays, poetry and interviews, appeared in 2003 from Atelos. His newest books are What Is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers (Factory School, 2006), collecting over six years of poetry, and Before Starting Over: Selected Writings and Interviews 1994-2005, to be published in September, 2006, by Salt Publishing. He is the editor of the /ubu ("slash ubu") series of e-books at www.ubu.com/ubu and the creator of arras.net, devoted to new media poetry and poetics, where most of his work, including his own series of Arras e-books, can be found.

Eric Baus is the author of The To Sound (Verse Press/Wave Books) as well as several chapbooks. A new chapbook, Tuned Droves, is forthcoming soon from Katalanche Press.

Nick Moudry is a poet & PhD candidate at Temple University.

_____ FREE online classifieds from Windows Live Expo – buy and sell with people you know http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwex0010000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://expo.live.com?s_cid=Hotmail_tagline_12/06

↑ Index

678. Ron Silliman
Silliman's Blog
Wed 31 Jan 2007

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

RECENT POSTS

Volver â€“
a film with women
in every major role

May Day â€“
Robert Kelly
and the question of poems vs. poetry

Kenny Goldsmith
writes a blog
on uncreative writing
for Poetry Magazine!

Babel
and the ensemble film
of globalization

Experimental Form
and Issues of Accessibility
(Susanne Dyckman, Rusty Morrison,
Maxine Chernoff, Paul Hoover,
and Jaime Robles)

Daisy Fried
should win
the National Book Critics Circle Award
by acclamation

Confusing character transference
with reading

Nathaniel Mackeyâ€™s
Splay Anthem
has to be read aloud

IFLIFE, the poem,
is Bob Perelmanâ€™s love-hate story
with the whole of poetry

A guide to Bob Perelmanâ€™s
Guide to Homage to Sextus Propertius

IFLIFE, the book,
a dizzying display of mastery

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

679. Alison Croggon
Fwd: Ash, by Alison Croggon
Wed 31 Jan 2007

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: David Lloyd <[redacted]>
Date: Jan 31, 2007 6:28 PM
Subject: Ash, by Alison Croggon
To: [redacted]

birds are returning line by line
near the river their shadows gather

black and still where water sifts
silver on ash ash on silver

lovely the creatures of light springing down
from cloud to home

neither suspended nor in motion
brick and wood are things of flame

fire remembered and foretold
making and ending

(from: Translations from Nowhere)

Ash, poems by Alison Croggon, is now available from Cusp Books. $10.00 (or UKP 5.00, or EU 8.00, or AU $13.00), including postage, from me at the address below. Please e-mail back-channel and I will send in advance of your cheque or money order.

Also available from Cusp Books: Sill, by David Lloyd ($8.00, incl. p&p). Forthcoming this Spring: I ran from it and was still in it, by Fred Moten; and Act Zero, by Alfred Arteaga. ($8.00 each, $30.00 for the set of 4).

David Lloyd
3020 Effie Street
Los Angeles
CA 90026

[redacted] (H)
[redacted] (C)

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

680. Jesse Glass

The Fib at Saline (Salt Publishing) About Angel Exhaust 19

Wed 31 Jan 2007

Here's a note I just sent to Chris Emery of Salt regarding a posting by "Jen" about Angel Exhaust 19.

Hey Chris--

The posting on Angel Exhaust is wrong. The ending, on page 142 of issue 19 goes like this:

Methan: Why is it called Devastate your Aunt Jeremy?
Manly: It was a misundertanding between the two editors.
Methan: Are you going to explain the poetic landscape, and your spectrum allotment, as a way of telling the reader what to expect?
Manly: They probably wouldn't know what to expect even if we disclosed all that.
Methan: So what's the poetry like?
Manly: It is full of wonderfully sibilant s and amazingly lateral l sounds. Let me expand on that if you will. Corcoran is like Corcoran. Glass is like Glass. Holman is like Holman. Holman is more like Holman than like Morris.
Methan: I've never heard of them.
Manly: Maybe you should read Angel Exhaust.

Not a word in Duncan's back page note about Mssrs. Philpot or Nolan.

Jen's telling a fib that you should correct to set the record straight.

Jesse Glass

Take a look at "Jen's" posting at Saline and you'll see what a little creative fibbing can accomplish.

↑ Index

681. Jesse Glass
Jen's Fib At Saline Part 2
Wed 31 Jan 2007

---

http://saltpublishing.com/saline/index.php?topic=235.0

There's the link, but here's the ending of Duncan's notice as "Jen" tells it:

Methan: Why is it called Devastate your Aunt Jeremy?
Manly: It was a misunderstanding between the two editors.

[The next two lines don't appear in Duncan's original, but are entirely "Jen's" invention!]

Methan: Could we just describe the individual poets?
Manly: Poets like Philpott and Nolan are too overwhelming and intricate to be described in a few words.

Methan: I've never heard of them.
Manly: Maybe you should read Angel Exhaust.

Why would "Jen" fib like this?

Jesse Glass

↑ Index

682. Pierre Joris
Nomadics blog
Wed 31 Jan 2007

Recent Nomadics posts can be read here: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

Philippe Lacoue-Labarthe (1940-2007)
Chicago Poetry Reading Online
Pascal Bruckner on Ayaan Hirsi Ali
Wolfgang Iser (1926-2007)
Biermann & Berlin
Rain Taxi Auction!
an art of precarious balance

be well.

Pierre

==========
=
"As democracy is perfected, the office of president represents, more and more closely, the inner soul of the people. On some great and glorious day the plain folks of the land will reach their heart's desire at last, and the White House will be adorned by a downright moron." -- H.L. Mencken (1880-1956)
==========
=
For updates on readings, etc. check my current events page:
http://albany.edu/~joris/CurrentEvents.html
==========
=
Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202
h: [redacted]
c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

==========
=

==========
"Fascism should more properly
be called corporatism,since it is the merger of state and corporate power."
— Benito Mussolini
==========
Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202
h: [redacted]
c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com

Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com
==========

↑ Index

683. Ram Devineni

EDWARD HIRSCH at the Creative Writing Workshop, Brazil

Wed 31 Jan 2007

Dear Friends: I want to announce a new workshop/retreat in Brazil. More information at http://www.creativewritingbrazil.org

EDWARD HIRSCH will be teaching at the creative writing workshop in Brazil from July 9-16, 2007. Participate in a week-long poetry workshop with Edward Hirsch and a translation class on Brazilian poets Carlos Drummond de Andrade and Joao Cabral de Melo Neto. Discussions on Elizabeth Bishop in Brazil and tours of important cultural sites and literary landmarks. Also, casual get togethers with leading contemporary Brazilian poets, editors, writers, translators, and publishers.

Creative Writing Brazil is an unique literary workshop in Sao Paulo, Brazil organized by Rattapallax magazine and Academia Interncional de Cinema. The workshops are run by leading American and Brazilian poets, writers and educators and conducted in English. The purpose of the workshop is to experience the culture of Brazil and produce new and complex literary work. Poets and writers who have participated in our trips to Brazil include Pulitzer Prize winning poet Yusef Komunyakaa, Breytan Breytanbach, Jerome Rothenberg, Cecilia Vicuna, Edwin Torres, Nathalie Handal, and Poetry Wales editor Robert Minhinnick.

Edward Hirsch is a poet and critic. He has published six books of poems: For the Sleepwalkers (1981), Wild Gratitude (1986), which won the National Book Critics Circle Award, The Night Parade (1989), Earthly Measures (1994), On Love (1998), and Lay Back the Darkness (2003). He has also written four prose books: How to Read a Poem and Fall in Love with Poetry (1999), a national bestseller, Responsive Reading (1999), The Demon and the Angel: Searching for the Source of Artistic Inspiration (2002), and Poet's Choice (2006). He is the editor of Transforming Vision: Writers on Art (1994) and Theodore Roethke's Selected Poems (2005). He is also the co-editor of A William Maxwell Portrait: Memories and Appreciations (2004). He has received the Prix de Rome, a Guggenheim Fellowship, the American Academy of Arts and Letters Award for Literature, and a MacArthur Fellowship. He taught for eighteen years at the University of Houston, and is now the fourth president of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation.

Elizabeth Bishop in Brazil

Elizabeth Bishop lived in Brazil more or less continuously from 1951 to 1966 and then intermittently to 1971. The country functioned as a necessary escape from the deprived and anxious world of her early childhood. Creative Writing Brazil will have a discussion about Bishop's life and work in Brazil. We can also assist you with your travel plans to visit Elizabeth Bishop's house in Ouro Preto and other noted Bishop landmarks in Brazil. Also, introduce you to renowned Bishop scholars and translators of her work.

Tour of Sao Paulo & Salon Reading

Throughout the week, everyone will be having casual get togethers with leading Brazilian poets, editors, writers, and publishers. An important aspect of the workshop is an interaction between participants and their contemporary counterparts in Brazil. You will visit important cultural sites, bookstores, and literary landmarks. All participants will have an opportunity to read at the Salons in Sao Paulo and New York City. Also, Rattapallax magazine will assist with the publication of the work produced during the workshops in literary and online journals.

Festa Literaria Internacional de Parati (FLIP)

FLIP is a leading and truly international literary jamborees, known for the outstanding quality of its guest authors, for the overwhelming enthusiasm of its audiences, and for the town's relaxed hospitality. FLIP has continued to attract some of the world's finest authors including Toni Morrison, Don DeLillo, Salman Rushdie, Martin Amis, Margaret Atwood, Paul Auster, Michael Ondaatje, alongside living Brazilian legends such as Chico Buarque and Caetano Veloso. The festival is held in Parati is a colonial sea-side town nestled between the turquoise waters of Ilha Grande Bay and vast swathes of unspoilt Atlantic rainforest. Only a few hours from Sao Paulo.

Attend the Creative Writing Workshop and FLIP! We plan to organize a trip to FLIP and will help you with your travel plans to the festival. Must register early because the festival sells out.

Please send future emails to [redacted] for press

↑ Index

684. Ram Devineni
Take 2 seconds to SAVE THE NEW GLOBE!
Wed 31 Jan 2007

Dear Friend,

The New Globe Theater needs your help. If we do not act now, we will forever lose the opportunity to create an inspiring cultural icon in New York Harbor!

On Governors Island sits a dilapidated military fortification ... and it happens to have the identical blueprint as Shakespeare's Globe Theatre. We want to restore the fort and re-imagine the open courtyard as a vibrant performing arts center, however the National Park Service is about to disallow this proposal.

The National Park Service stresses that the monument belongs to the American people - so let us make sure that they can't ignore what we want! click here: http://www.newglobe.org/campaign/

In the spirit of placing the Statue of Liberty onto the 1811 Fort Wood, let us transform this military fort into a cultural beacon.

The New Globe proposal has received the backing of hundreds of individuals and organizations, from Senators Clinton and Schumer to Congressman Nadler and Community Board #1, from actors (such as Al Pacino, Kevin Kline, Mark Rylance, Ralph Fiennes, Estelle Parsons, Melvin Van Peebles, Sarah Jessica Parker, and Philip Seymour Hoffman) to artistic directors (Sam Mendes, Oskar Eustis, Kenny Leon, and Sir Peter Hall). Not only has New York's preservation community embraced the proposal (e.g., NYC Landmarks Preservation Commission, and Municipal Art Society), but also a diverse range of individuals from war veterans to acting students to G.I. army brats. For more information, see www.newglobe.org.

I ask you to join me and all of our supporters in urging the National Park Service to be visionary and imaginative! Your action today truly makes a difference in our ongoing efforts to create a new cultural destination in New York Harbor. I hope to see you at opening night.

Sincerely,
Dr. Barbara Romer
Founder and CEO of the The New Globe Theater

Ram Devineni, Publisher of Rattapallax

Please send future emails to [redacted] for press

↑ Index

685. Tom Beckett
Fwd: Otoliths issue four
Wed 31 Jan 2007

Issue four of Otoliths has just gone live & is as diverse as ever.

This issue contains text & visual work from Vernon Frazer, Eileen Tabios, MÃ¡rton KoppÃ¡ny, Katrinka Moore, Jnana Hudson, Jeff Harrison, Peter Ciccariello, Amanda Laughtland, Carol Jenkins, Jean Vengua, Dion Farquhar, Ed Higgins, David Prater, Carl Baker, Elizabeth Kate Switaj, Elisa Gabbert &

Kathleen Rooney, Samuel Wharton, Spencer Selby, Martin Edmond, AyÅŸegÃ¼l TÃ¶zeren, Daniel f. Bradley, The Pines, Alexander Jorgensen, Jonathan Hayes, John Mercuri Dooley, David-Baptiste Chirot, Richard Kostelanetz, nick-e melville, Phil Primeau, J.D. Nelson, Mikhail Magazinnik, Nicholas Manning, Andrew Topel, Kristin Hannaford, Karin Kroetlinger, C. Mehrl Bennett, Kevin Doran, Ed Schenk, Paul Siegell, Raymond Farr, Suzan Sari, Suzan Sari & Jukka-Pekka Kervinen, Jukka-Pekka Kervinen, Caleb Puckett, Tom Beckett, Keith Kumasen Abbott, MTC Cronin, Bob Marcacci, Thomas Fink, Nico Vassilakis, Vernon Frazer & Michael Rothenberg, & Ray Craig.

Hie there & enjoy!

& a reminder that print editions of the earlier issues are available from the Otoliths Shopfront at Lulu.

Also, later in February, the book publishing arm (?) of Otoliths will be bringing out new collections from Jordan Stempleman, Vernon Frazer, Nico Vassilakis & harry k stammer. Let me just say that they're all fantastic.

Mark Young

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

686. C. A. Conrad

a conversation with ALICE NOTLEY on trance, tarot and poetry ()()()()()()()()

Wed 31 Jan 2007

---

a conversation with ALICE NOTLEY on trance, tarot and poetry

()()()()()()()()()()((((((O)))))()()()()()()()()()()

This e-mail conversation with Alice Notley and CAConrad took place during January, 2007

Hope you enjoy it!

Go to: _http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2007_01_01_phillysound_archive.html_ (http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2007_01_01_phillysound_archive.html)

↑ Index

687. linda norton
Silliman's blog/Poet Laureate of Boston
Wed 31 Jan 2007

If you would like to be part of a write-in campaign for Bill Corbett (who already is the poet laureate of Boston--Councilman John Tobin just doesn't know it), here are some email addresses:

[redacted] Letters to the Editor, Boston Globe

[redacted] John Tobin

[redacted] Dave Isberg, Chief of Staff

If you are from Boston, as I am, be sure to mention the neighborhood/parish where you grew up or live now.

↑ Index

688. Anny Ballardini
Re: http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
Wed 31 Jan 2007

I didn't even notice it! Not to worry.

On 1/30/07, Raymond Bianchi <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
>
> To all Poetic Listers like a stupid I set up a blog with a typoed > name. So forgive this stupid poet
>
> here is the same blog as before with a corrected name.
>
> Ray
>
>
>
> ---------- Original message ----------
> From: tyrone williams <[redacted]>
>
> > Joe,
> >
> > Thanks for forwarding the Hirsch--very pertient to what we're dealing > with at > > Xavier right now..and I liked Symptoms of a Finaer age. especially the > first and

> > middle sections...
> >
> >
> > tyrone
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > >From: Joe Amato
> > >Sent: Jan 29, 2007 9:01 PM
> > >To: [redacted]
> > >Subject: Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
> > >
> > >Call out to Dan Z on that excellent review of Hirsch's new book.
> > >Thanks for alerting us to this, Dan.
> > >
> > >Here's the link again:
> > >
> > >http://www.thecommonreview.org/spotlight.html
> > >
> > >Anyone who's been struggling with these issues in the classroom will > > >find this of great interest. I can see the applicability, as Dan > > >suggests, to the study (and teaching) of poetry, but I need to let > > >the various registers of the discussion settle in a bit. At the > > >moment, I must confess, I'm finding myself more drawn to the > > >pedagogical per se, maybe b/c I'm about to take another crack at > > >Olson tomorrow with a new group of undergrads.
> > >
> > >Best,
> > >
> > >Joe
> >
> >
> > Tyrone Williams
>

↑ Index

689. Simon DeDeo

Jed Perl on Laissez-Faire Aesthetics

Wed 31 Jan 2007

---

http://www.tnr.com/doc.mhtml?i=20070205&s=perl020507

Interesting and easy to blow your top when reading it, I think.

I find his critiques of contemporary art (I love John Currin, e.g.) remind me of the usual Dana Gioia et al. critiques of the avant garde (where are the STANDARDS, where are the external directions on how to READ?, etc.), but in an unusual slant Jed also works in a sort of analogy to neo-con capitalism.

It's like, Jed, you are stealing my rhetorical move!

↑ Index

690. Vernon Frazer
Re: Homophobia...
Wed 31 Jan 2007

Jennifer

I'm very displeased with much of the hostility this thread has generated.

I don't want to get into a contest over which groups get treated the worst, but I'd say people with disabilities take a lot of hits that people in general don't notice and aren't aware of.

Having Tourette Syndrome has caused me to endure discrimination in every area you mention. I might hold the personal record for hearing "We filled that opening yesterday" at a job interview.

Throughout history, people with Tourette have been burned alive after being accused of demonic possession.That's a very terminal stigma, I'd say.

My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.

I'm appalled at the people who think they can talk about my condition with levity and impunity. Of course, when I verbally savage someone who started treating me like a subhuman, I'm perceived as the villain because a crip just ain't sposed ta beat a normie.

The interview Ric Carfagna did with me in the latest Big Bridge describes some of my personal experiences. After reading it, some people have expressed surprise at what I've had to go through.

And I did have a negative encounter with another "Mr. Sensitivity" on this List about six months ago.

Don't get me started on the way blind people are patronized, as though their being blind makes their ability to talk or think coherently a miracle. My grandfather could do everything any other commercial fisherman could do, as long as you pointed the boat in the right direction for him.

Vernon Frazer
http://vernonfrazer.com/Second%20Printing.pdf

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of reJennifer Bartlett
Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 5:35 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Homophobia...

I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it is so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And there is no "affirmative action" for PWD.

_____ Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football

↑ Index

691. Gretchen Adele
please remove me from list- unsubscribe
Wed 31 Jan 2007

---

thank you

--
gretchen adele

↑ Index

692. Emma Larsson
please remove me from list- unsubscribe
Wed 31 Jan 2007

---

thank you

--

emma larsson

_____
___ Never Miss an Email Stay connected with Yahoo! Mail on your mobile. Get started! http://mobile.yahoo.com/services?promote=mail

↑ Index

693. Barry Schwabsky
Re: Jed Perl on Laissez-Faire Aesthetics
Wed 31 Jan 2007

The article is only available to subscribers. If you are one, maybe you could cut and paste the text into an e-mail for us? (Not that I want to lure you into doing something illegal.) Anyway, there's been a lot of boo-hooing over the booming art market. Check out Jerry Saltz in the Village Voice: http://www.villagevoice.com/art/0704,saltz,75590,13.html

Simon DeDeo <[redacted]> wrote: http://www.tnr.com/doc.mhtml?i=20070205&s=perl020507

Interesting and easy to blow your top when reading it, I think.

I find his critiques of contemporary art (I love John Currin, e.g.) remind me of the usual Dana Gioia et al. critiques of the avant garde (where are the STANDARDS, where are the external directions on how to READ?, etc.), but in an unusual slant Jed also works in a sort of analogy to neo-con capitalism.

It's like, Jed, you are stealing my rhetorical move!

↑ Index

694. Alison Croggon
Re: The Fib at Saline (Salt Publishing) About Angel Exhaust 19
Wed 31 Jan 2007

I'm confused, Jesse. How is Jen - a real person, deserving of not being put in quotation marks - supposed to have "fibbed"? The email from Andrew Duncan that Tony Frazer forwarded to UK Poets is exactly the same as the post at Saline. Did Tony Frazer fib as well?

On 1/31/07, Jesse Glass <[redacted]> wrote:
> Here's a note I just sent to Chris Emery of Salt regarding a posting by
> "Jen" about Angel Exhaust 19.
>
> Hey Chris--
>
> The posting on Angel Exhaust is wrong. The ending, on page 142 of issue > 19 goes like this:
>
> Methan: Why is it called Devastate your Aunt Jeremy?
> Manly: It was a misundertanding between the two editors.
> Methan: Are you going to explain the poetic landscape, and your spectrum > allotment, as a way of telling the reader what to expect?
> Manly: They probably wouldn't know what to expect even if we disclosed

> all that.
> Methan: So what's the poetry like?
> Manly: It is full of wonderfully sibilant s and amazingly lateral l > sounds. Let me expand on that if you will. Corcoran is like Corcoran.
> Glass is like Glass. Holman is like Holman. Holman is more like Holman > than like Morris.
> Methan: I've never heard of them.
> Manly: Maybe you should read Angel Exhaust.
>
> Not a word in Duncan's back page note about Mssrs. Philpot or Nolan.
>
> Jen's telling a fib that you should correct to set the record straight.
>
> Jesse Glass
>
> Take a look at "Jen's" posting at Saline and you'll see what a little > creative fibbing can accomplish.
>

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

695. Mary Kasimor
Re: Homophobia...
Wed 31 Jan 2007

Vernon,
  I lived next door to a kid who had Tourette Syndrome. HIs name was Jim Eisenreich and he went on to play professional baseball. My understanding is that he became a spokesperson for people who have Tourette Syndrome. Are you familiar with him? I think that he was traded by the Twins to the Royals and then became a very successful and admired professional ball player, partly because he did talk about having Tourette Syndrome and how it affected him. I think the people of my hometown have a great deal of admiration and respect for him.

  Best,
  Mary Kasimor

Vernon Frazer <[redacted]> wrote:
  Jennifer

I'm very displeased with much of the hostility this thread has generated.

I don't want to get into a contest over which groups get treated the worst, but I'd say people with disabilities take a lot of hits that people in general don't notice and aren't aware of.

Having Tourette Syndrome has caused me to endure discrimination in every area you mention. I might hold the personal record for hearing "We filled that opening yesterday" at a job interview.

Throughout history, people with Tourette have been burned alive after being accused of demonic possession.That's a very terminal stigma, I'd say.

My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.

I'm appalled at the people who think they can talk about my condition with levity and impunity. Of course, when I verbally savage someone who started treating me like a subhuman, I'm perceived as the villain because a crip just ain't sposed ta beat a normie.

The interview Ric Carfagna did with me in the latest Big Bridge describes some of my personal experiences. After reading it, some people have expressed surprise at what I've had to go through.

And I did have a negative encounter with another "Mr. Sensitivity" on this List about six months ago.

Don't get me started on the way blind people are patronized, as though their being blind makes their ability to talk or think coherently a miracle. My grandfather could do everything any other commercial fisherman could do, as long as you pointed the boat in the right direction for him.

Vernon Frazer
http://vernonfrazer.com/Second%20Printing.pdf

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of reJennifer Bartlett
Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 5:35 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Homophobia...

I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it is so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And there is no "affirmative action" for PWD.

_____ Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.

↑ Index

696. George Bowering
Re: Homophobia...
Wed 31 Jan 2007

On 31-Jan-07, at 12:41 PM, Mary Kasimor wrote:

> Vernon,
> I lived next door to a kid who had Tourette Syndrome. HIs name was Jim Eisenreich and he went on to play professional baseball. My understanding is that he became a spokesperson for people who have Tourette Syndrome. Are you familiar with him? I think that he was traded by the Twins to the Royals and then became a very successful and admired professional ball player, partly because he did talk about having Tourette Syndrome and how it affected him. I think the people of my hometown have a great deal of admiration and respect for him.
>
> Best,
> Mary Kasimor

Well, I drafted him on my fantasy team.
He went to the Phillies after KC.
In 15 seasons he had a .290 batting average. Pretty damned good.

gb

↑ Index

697. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: Jim Eisenreich
Wed 31 Jan 2007

I got to meet Jim Eisenreich once at a Twins game here in Milwaukee. a very inspirational person and excellent outfielder and hitter-- he had to endure some very tough times his first years in the Big leagues--can only imagine what was like in the Minors-- wrote abt him to this list some time ago

my all time favorite ball player is Rube Waddell--one of the all time characters--he is in the Hall of Fame probably wd never be allowed past Special Olympics these days-- he was mentally ill, developmentally challenged, what they used to call "slow"--and an alcoholic to boot-- only Sandy Koufax had more stirkeouts by a lefthander in one season, over fifty years after Rube set the record-- in early days of baseball deaf mutes were not uncommon--prompting the use of signs for balls and strikes by umpires-- in baseball quite along list of players with various disabilities--Jimmy Piersall--for example--in an asylum for a while during his major league career (his book Fear Strikes Out made into film with Tony Perkins playing Jimbo)--

> From: Mary Kasimor <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Homophobia...
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 12:41:58 -0800
>
> Vernon,
> I lived next door to a kid who had Tourette Syndrome. HIs name was Jim Eisenreich and he went on to play professional baseball. My understanding is that he became a spokesperson for people who have Tourette Syndrome. Are you familiar with him? I think that he was traded by the Twins to the Royals and then became a very successful and admired professional ball player, partly because he did talk about having Tourette Syndrome and how it affected him. I think the people of my hometown have a great deal of admiration and respect for him.
>
> Best,
> Mary Kasimor
>
> Vernon Frazer <[redacted]> wrote:
> Jennifer
>
> I'm very displeased with much of the hostility this thread has generated.
>
> I don't want to get into a contest over which groups get treated the worst, but I'd say people with disabilities take a lot of hits that people in general don't notice and aren't aware of.
>
> Having Tourette Syndrome has caused me to endure discrimination in every area you mention. I might hold the personal record for hearing "We filled that opening yesterday" at a job interview.
>
> Throughout history, people with Tourette have been burned alive after being accused of demonic possession.That's a very terminal stigma, I'd say.

My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.

I'm appalled at the people who think they can talk about my condition with levity and impunity. Of course, when I verbally savage someone who started treating me like a subhuman, I'm perceived as the villain because a crip just ain't sposed ta beat a normie.

The interview Ric Carfagna did with me in the latest Big Bridge describes some of my personal experiences. After reading it, some people have expressed surprise at what I've had to go through.

And I did have a negative encounter with another "Mr. Sensitivity" on this List about six months ago.

Don't get me started on the way blind people are patronized, as though their being blind makes their ability to talk or think coherently a miracle.
My grandfather could do everything any other commercial fisherman could do, as long as you pointed the boat in the right direction for him.

Vernon Frazer
http://vernonfrazer.com/Second%20Printing.pdf

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of reJennifer Bartlett
Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 5:35 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Homophobia...

I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it is so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And there is no "affirmative action" for PWD.

Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football

> ---------- 8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.

_____ From predictions to trailers, check out the MSN Entertainment Guide to the Academy Awards® http://movies.msn.com/movies/oscars2007/?icid=ncoscartagline1

↑ Index

698. Raymond Bianchi

Re: http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/

Wed 31 Jan 2007

---

how is Bolzano?

I love your blog it is my first read in the morning.

RB

---------- Original message ----------
From: Anny Ballardini <[redacted]>

> I didn't even notice it! Not to worry.
>
> On 1/30/07, Raymond Bianchi wrote:
>
> http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
>
> To all Poetic Listers like a stupid I set up a blog with a typoed name. So forgive this stupid poet
>
> here is the same blog as before with a corrected name.
>
> Ray
>
> ---------- Original message ----------
> From: tyrone williams
>
> Joe,
>
> Thanks for forwarding the Hirsch--very pertient to what we're dealing with at > Xavier right now..and I liked Symptoms of a Finaer age. especially the first and > middle sections...

>
> tyrone
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Joe Amato
> Sent: Jan 29, 2007 9:01 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
>
> Call out to Dan Z on that excellent review of Hirsch's new book.
> Thanks for alerting us to this, Dan.
>
> Here's the link again:
>
> http://www.thecommonreview.org/spotlight.html
>
> Anyone who's been struggling with these issues in the classroom will > find this of great interest. I can see the applicability, as Dan > suggests, to the study (and teaching) of poetry, but I need to let > the various registers of the discussion settle in a bit. At the > moment, I must confess, I'm finding myself more drawn to the > pedagogical per se, maybe b/c I'm about to take another crack at > Olson tomorrow with a new group of undergrads.
>
> Best,
>
> Joe
>
> Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

699. George Bowering
Re: Jim Eisenreich
Wed 31 Jan 2007

On 31-Jan-07, at 1:07 PM, David-Baptiste Chirot wrote:

> I got to meet Jim Eisenreich once at a Twins game here in Milwaukee.
> a very inspirational person and excellent outfielder and hitter--
> he had to endure some very tough times his first years in the Big > leagues--can only imagine what was like in the Minors-- > wrote abt him to this list some time ago
>
> my all time favorite ball player is Rube Waddell--one of the all time

> characters--he is in the Hall of Fame probably wd never be allowed > past Special Olympics these days--
> he was mentally ill, developmentally challenged, what they used to > call "slow"--and an alcoholic to boot--
> only Sandy Koufax had more stirkeouts by a lefthander in one season,
> over fifty years after Rube set the record--
> in early days of baseball deaf mutes were not uncommon--prompting the > use of signs for balls and strikes by umpires--
> in baseball quite along list of players with various > disabilities--Jimmy Piersall--for example--in an asylum for a while > during his major league career (his book Fear Strikes Out made into > film with Tony Perkins playing Jimbo)--

Yeah, and before that, a TV play with Tab Hunter playing Jim.
I guess they saw some sense in having 2 actors who didnt know how to throw a baseball do it.
>
>
>
George Harry Bowering
Likes towns with -ver- in them.

↑ Index

700. Simon DeDeo
jed perl article
Wed 31 Jan 2007

Ah, I see what is going on. You need not pay AFAICT, but you must register. I use "bugmenot" which gives you passwords and logins so you don't have to hop their demographic hoops. The current bugmenot password for the Jed Perl article is the strangely disturbing

USERNAME: buffychunks
PASSWORD: pooklord

If that doesn't work (TNR plays wack-a-mole, apparently, see http://www.bugmenot.com/ for more infor.)

For reference, the URL is:
http://www.tnr.com/doc.mhtml?i=artnotes&s=perl112001

↑ Index

701. Vernon Frazer
Re: Jim Eisenreich
Wed 31 Jan 2007

Mary and David

I'm very familiar with Jim Eisenreich, from his promising start as a rookie to his virtually getting booed out of the game for several years. I didn't understand why anybody would boo a .300 hitter---but then, I was at least a decade away from receiving my diagnosis. He was one of my favorite players when he played with the Florida Marlins. I've never really spoken to him, although I think we did serve together on a panel at a conference sponsored by the National Tourette Syndrome Association.

I remember reading about Rube Waddell when I was a kid. As I recall, he went for a ride on a fire truck on a day when he was supposed to pitch. According to the records and the story books, though, he was an amazing pitcher. His strikeout record stood for some time, as you point out, David.

I remember Fear Strikes Out and, as a lifelong Red Sox fan, always appreciated Jimmy Piersall's playing. Although he wasn't a Hall of Famer, he probably would have received a lot more recognition if he hadn't played in the shadows of Willie, Mickey and the Duke.

Vernon
http://vernonfrazer.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of David-Baptiste Chirot
Sent: Wednesday, January 31, 2007 4:08 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Jim Eisenreich

I got to meet Jim Eisenreich once at a Twins game here in Milwaukee. a very inspirational person and excellent outfielder and hitter-- he had to endure some very tough times his first years in the Big leagues--can only imagine what was like in the Minors-- wrote abt him to this list some time ago

my all time favorite ball player is Rube Waddell--one of the all time characters--he is in the Hall of Fame probably wd never be allowed past Special Olympics these days-- he was mentally ill, developmentally challenged, what they used to call "slow"--and an alcoholic to boot-- only Sandy Koufax had more stirkeouts by a lefthander in one season, over fifty years after Rube set the record-- in early days of baseball deaf mutes were not uncommon--prompting the use of signs for balls and strikes by umpires-- in baseball quite along list of players with various disabilities--Jimmy Piersall--for example--in an asylum for a while during his major league career (his book Fear Strikes Out made into film with Tony Perkins playing Jimbo)--

> From: Mary Kasimor <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Homophobia...
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 12:41:58 -0800
>
> Vernon,
> I lived next door to a kid who had Tourette Syndrome. HIs name was Jim Eisenreich and he went on to play professional baseball. My understanding is that he became a spokesperson for people who have Tourette Syndrome. Are you familiar with him? I think that he was traded by the Twins to the Royals and then became a very successful and admired professional ball player, partly because he did talk about having Tourette Syndrome and how it affected him. I think the people of my hometown have a great deal of admiration and respect for him.
>
> Best,
> Mary Kasimor
>
> Vernon Frazer <[redacted]> wrote:
> Jennifer
>
> I'm very displeased with much of the hostility this thread has generated.
>
> I don't want to get into a contest over which groups get treated the worst, but I'd say people with disabilities take a lot of hits that people in general don't notice and aren't aware of.
>
> Having Tourette Syndrome has caused me to endure discrimination in every area you mention. I might hold the personal record for hearing "We filled that opening yesterday" at a job interview.
>
> Throughout history, people with Tourette have been burned alive after being accused of demonic possession.That's a very terminal stigma, I'd say.
>
> My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.
>
> I'm appalled at the people who think they can talk about my condition with levity and impunity. Of course, when I verbally savage someone who started treating me like a subhuman, I'm perceived as the villain because a crip just ain't sposed ta beat a normie.

The interview Ric Carfagna did with me in the latest Big Bridge describes some of my personal experiences. After reading it, some people have expressed surprise at what I've had to go through.

And I did have a negative encounter with another "Mr. Sensitivity" on this List about six months ago.

Don't get me started on the way blind people are patronized, as though their being blind makes their ability to talk or think coherently a miracle.
My grandfather could do everything any other commercial fisherman could do, as long as you pointed the boat in the right direction for him.

Vernon Frazer
http://vernonfrazer.com/Second%20Printing.pdf

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of reJennifer Bartlett
Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 5:35 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Homophobia...

I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it is so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And there is no "affirmative action" for PWD.

Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.

_____ From predictions to trailers, check out the MSN Entertainment Guide to the Academy AwardsR http://movies.msn.com/movies/oscars2007/?icid=ncoscartagline1

↑ Index

702. Ricejunk2
diarrhea of the mouth
Wed 31 Jan 2007

Dear members:

Some people have diarrhea of the mouth. It is a medical condition, but it doesn't mean we all have to pay attention to, well, the product of said medical condition. That is what toilets are for. And delete buttons, ok. There is always the "I WIN" button... available for when your computer OR another human thinks it has the best of you.

Poetry discussions are so much better than crap-slinging. Isn't there enough raw-ness in language and its composition, that we can avoid the raw-sewage stuff? I know there are more critical discussions, especially of ideas (which are lacking in other conversations these days), in this listserv's future. Otherwise, why are any of us here.

Write on! Listen and read and hear and say and smell (if you dare)...all that there is for you here online and everywhere... But please stay home if you need to be near the crapper, T. F. Rice

"We pretend the raw bloom remains
unshattered
by the ravishing dregs of lost humanity"
...just a little something i wrote when i was a teenager... he-hee...
we havent come very far since then as a human race...

↑ Index

703. David Baratier
Larry's poetry forum
Wed 31 Jan 2007

The Poetry Forum at Larry’s
Remainder of the Season: 2007

Looking forward to seeing you'all soon--
Readings: 2 sets about 20-25 minutes each. From:

January 15-- Okla Elliot
January 22-- Terrance Hayes

January 29-- Will Evans
February 5-- Richard St. John
February 12-- David Baratier
February 19-- Vernell Bristow
February 26-- Scott Wood
March 5-- Aldon Nielsen
March 12-- Fundraiser - Diane Gilliam Fisher
March 19-- NO READING (SPRING BREAK)
March 26-- Sandy Feen
April 2-- Maj Ragain
April 9--Jillian Weisse
April 16-- Annie Price
April 23-- TBA
April 30-- TBA
May 7-- William Redding Memorial Reading

All Events
Mondays 7pm 2040 N. High St
Columbus, Ohio
All readings followed by a brief open mike.
Funded by the Ohio Arts Council: A state agency that supports public programs in the arts.

Be well
David Baratier, Co-coordinator, Larry's Poetry Forum

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus, OH 43206
http://pavementsaw.org

↑ Index

704. Ricejunk2
Re: Poems on Scapegoats
Wed 31 Jan 2007

"Purple Scapegoat"

Purple was blamed for what blue and red did, discriminated against for the mere color of his skin. It seems the Color Police aren't really all that discriminating, in the truer sense of the word. Where would we be if we discriminated nothing. Distinction and discernment are cords that make our unique world. We have eyes that see and ears that hear.

It is those who have a desire to shoot someone who make a word "wrong" or naughty", and then proceed to shoot at it with all they have. Or maybe at times the desirous one is (s)he who says the word in a new way. Whatever the case, be nice to purple. And red and blue. Because whoever did the wrong will show himself in the end. They always do. "Give them enough rope and they will hang themselves" has always rung true in my life and misc strugglings.

To discriminate:

1. Show prejudice, favor, show bias, treat unfairly.
2. Distinguish, differentiate, separate, contrast, compare, tell the difference, judge, draw a distinction, discern, segregate.

All in fun, since abstraction can be fun when wanting to say something real,
T.F. Rice

Quoting heidi arnold <[redacted]>:

> Colleagues,
>
> -- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be a "fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic -- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all -- is it ok to post to this list
>
> scapegoats:
>
> Lincoln
> Martin Luther King
> Jesus Christ
> Nazim Hikmet
> ...
> How many can we name?
>
> if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who responds
>
> --
> www.heidiarnold.org
> http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

705. Betsy Andrews

New Book: Betsy Andrews' NEW JERSEY

Wed 31 Jan 2007

Betsy Andrews' NEW JERSEY, winner of the 2007 Brittingham Prize, is now available from University of Wisconsin Press.

To order directly from the Press:
http://www.wisc.edu/wisconsinpress/books/4306.htm

“The heart of darkness is alive and beating in Betsy Andrews’s New Jersey. With its commitment to naming, to witnessing the machinations and degradations of our terror,’ this is a brave poem, and a necessary one.” —Anne Waldman, Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics

“New Jersey hotwired, New Jersey on speed: the Turnpike unrolls its scathing demotic across the humiliated landscape that was once a bright idea; the Turnpike dreams of minutemen and wakes to Abu Ghraib; the Turnpike names its toll plazas for poets and founding fathers and channels its weary to Burger Kings and ATMs. No help for us, the country’s in the breakdown lane. But Betsy Andrews writes its antic obit in a vein so charged with wit and razzle-dazzle that something must be salvageable even now. We must, in spite of ourselves, have done something right. New Jersey is a brilliant debut.” —Linda Gregerson, author of The Woman Who Died in Her Sleep “Serving the swerve from witness to outrage, the poem follows war’s disastrous trajectory from domestic to international policy and singular to universal tragedy with unrelenting honesty. Andrews has a queer eye for empire, and this work is an incisive, exciting, and necessary intervention.” —Brian Teare, author of The Room Where I Was Born

---

Cheap Talk? Check out Yahoo! Messenger's low PC-to-Phone call rates.

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

February 2007

791 messages · Thu 1 Feb 2007 – Wed 28 Feb 2007

February 2007 set the biggest idea in the room against the smallest form, and let a tabloid queen dissolve into pure image between them. Eight hundred and seventeen messages moved through the list, its two largest currents pulling in opposite directions — a sprawling argument about deconstruction, the theory that meaning never settles, and an even larger run on haiku, the form that bets everything on a single settled instant. The month was a tug of war between unraveling and distilling, between the sign that floats free and the image that holds.

The unraveling had sixty-seven messages. A thread on deconstruction and poetry went hunting the poets who best embody the theory of undecidable, endlessly deferred meaning, and Aldon Nielsen's signature caught its essence in passing — the "intolerable paradox at the heart of speech", the freedom and the vertigo of a language that will not stand still. De Man and Rousseau hovered in the wings. It was the grand machine of the age for proving that nothing a poem says ever finally means just that.

The distilling had nearly a hundred, and a controversy. The haiku cluster culminated in a Haiku Death Match, a competitive spectacle that the form's serious practitioners eyed with dismay — Michael Dylan Welch allowing it was fun but warning that it "does perpetuate the misunderstanding", traducing the one form built to make a single perception present and whole into a blood sport. The smallest, quietest thing in poetry, staged as a cage fight; the instant that haiku exists to hold, played for laughs. It was, in its way, the same argument the deconstruction thread was having in reverse — whether the little poem carries a real and present perception, or is only a counter to be scored, shuffled, and won.

And between the theory and the form, a person came apart into image. Anna Nicole Smith died on the eighth, and the room mourned her in a register it could not quite settle — Aaron Belz confessing, "maybe I sound ironic, but I really am feeling this one", Alan Sondheim noting that she had always "resisted easy summaries". She was deconstruction made tabloid, a self the culture had already dissolved into pure floating surface while she still lived, the sign cut entirely loose from any referent.

And yet the smallest form kept its footing. Against a theory that says meaning is forever deferred and a spectacle that says a person is only image, haiku went on insisting, seventeen syllables at a time, that a single instant can be caught clear and held — the very newspaper headline conceding that in the death match, fearless poets spar, “but haiku lives”. I have set February down exactly as the archive delivered it — the intolerable paradox, the caged haiku, and the woman dissolved into surface — because it was the month the poets proved in theory that nothing settles and mourned a self that had become nothing but image, and were answered by the quietest thing they owned: that for one breath, one image, meaning can still arrive and stay.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 791 in all.

WRITERS

De 1913, Sandra 587
Alexander, Charles 36, 178, 400, 761, 773, 774
Allegrezza, William 484
Alpert, Dr. Barry S. 785
Amato, Joe 53, 102, 156, 306, 325, 332, 368
AND, mIEKAL 40, 42, 95, 125, 221, 243, 271, 272, 452, 564, 688, 689, 700, 754
Andrews, Betsy 597, 606
Andrews, Jim 78, 162, 193, 261, 455, 568, 592, 601, 687
Annual, Fulcrum 238
Applegate, David 159, 734
Arashi, Ishaq 404, 472, 573
Arnold, Heidi 246, 362, 410, 482, 483, 511, 692
Bach, Glenn 11
Baldwin, Charles 105
Bales, Marcus 7, 63, 194, 300, 357, 445, 750
Ballardini, Anny 30, 72, 146, 223, 245, 326, 352, 447, 581
Banes, Clay 621
Baraban, Stephen 401
Baratier, David 81, 208, 250, 755, 756
Bartlett, reJennifer 364, 433
Beckett, Tom 227, 499, 695, 704
Behm-Steinberg, Hugh 743
Bellamy, Dodie 99
Belz, Aaron 8, 248, 274, 286, 673, 733, 745
Berkson, Bill 778
Bernstein, Charles 101, 749, 766
Berrigan, Anselm 196, 432
Bettridge, Joel 210, 515, 648
Bianchi, Haas 18, 262, 356
Bianchi, Raymond 541, 763
Blacksox 461, 647, 675
Bogle, Ann 98, 128, 134, 170, 171, 234, 509, 701
Books, Crane's Bill 220
Bowering, George 23, 26, 142, 143, 187, 240, 244, 276, 287, 295, 336, 378, 414, 596
Boykoff, Jules 16, 711
Brady, Taylor 737
Bryant, Tisa 608, 614, 655
Burns, Suzanne 289
Buuck, David 85
Byrd, Brigitte 717, 765
Byrne, Mairead 96, 739
Carfagna, Ric 17
Chan, JT 694
Chapman, Chris 107, 126, 135
Cheek, Cris 363, 586
Chirot, David-Baptiste 5, 65, 222, 242, 269, 331, 370, 411, 457, 580, 628, 636, 667, 710, 741, 782, 783
Ciccariello, Peter 100, 348, 486, 665
Clements, Brian 412
Clifford 346, 787
Coffey, Dan 281, 303, 324, 377, 425, 454, 563
Conrad, C. A. 176, 235, 236, 264, 531
Conrad, CA 659, 788
Crawford, Holly 547
Crockett, Jesse 2, 82, 116, 160, 191, 192, 268, 344, 381, 418
Croggon, Alison 318, 373, 439, 543
Crumpacker, Caroline 632
Curnow, Wystan 33, 315, 316
Dalachinsky, Steve 517, 518, 637, 758, 759
Daly, Catherine 435, 471, 490, 559, 607
Damon, Maria 39, 50, 172, 424, 716
DeDeo, Simon 27, 49, 211, 467, 537, 572, 629
Deed, Martha 115, 442
DeNiro, Alan 253
Devaney, Thomas 627
Devineni, Ram 163
Dickey, Eric 186, 218, 605, 622, 676
Dickow, Alexander 25, 91, 129, 321
Djuric, Dubravka 12, 61, 71, 93, 94, 320, 333, 477
Donovan, Thom 106, 122, 266
Dunagan, Patrick 639
Durgin, Patrick F. 539
Edgerton, Michael Tod 204, 205
Editors, Tarpaulin Sky Press & Journal 527
EH 698
Eric 154, 259, 278, 335, 366, 369, 430
Fieled, Adam 9, 173, 458, 514, 618, 666, 776
Foley, John 630
Frazer, Vernon 139, 144, 165, 168, 228, 265, 393, 415, 431, 699, 705
Gagne, Tracey 371
Ganick, P 707
Gatza, Geoffrey 727
Gens, Jacqueline 746
Gfrym 501
Glass, Jesse 79, 209, 263, 446, 571
Godston, Daniel 468, 529, 569
Gricevich, Andy 87
Grossman, Pam 200
Grumman, Bob 643, 654
Gudding, Gabriel 389, 405, 453, 497, 560, 641, 644, 757

Guevarra, L 280, 282
Halle, Steve 166
Hamilton, Robin 74, 390, 427
Hamm, Christine 558
Heller, Michael 181
Henriksen, Matt 409
Holsapple1 702
Homan, Brandi 103
Hooper, Tony 615, 777
Horton, David Harrison 132
III, Nicholas Ruiz 338
Javier, Paolo 462
Jcu 34, 35, 108, 113, 117
Jkrick 609
Johnson, Halvard 104, 109, 199, 323, 367, 504, 513, 600, 722, 736, 768, 775
Jones, Andrew 398, 598
Jorgensen, Alexander 4, 83, 84, 202, 203, 257, 258, 270, 421, 422, 493, 530, 544, 575, 693, 708, 729, 748
Joris, Pierre 451, 562, 760
Journal, Potree 434
JUStin!katKO 476, 533, 714
Karavatos, Nicholas 578, 662
Karmin, Jennifer 252, 436, 545, 620, 678
Kelder, Cralan 75, 224, 291, 526, 744
Kelleher, Michael 127, 229, 402, 624, 670, 721
Kimmelman, Burt 679, 762
King, Amy 47, 52, 114, 456, 561, 567, 585, 593, 625, 661, 723
Kirschenbaum, David A. 177, 275, 408, 444, 475, 617, 657, 771
LaCook, Lewis 233, 292, 671, 781
Lcabri 784
Lepson, Ruth 73, 147, 149, 153, 301, 343, 360, 463, 469, 478, 566
Levy, Herb 449, 582
Lewis, Joel 441
Lewis, Tom W. 48, 67, 174, 184, 217, 241, 423, 719
Liff, Seena 645
List, Poetics 392, 420
Loucks, James 46, 57
Lunday, Robert 602
Lundwall, Andrew 10
Mandel, Charlotte 680
Marcacci, Bob 44, 789
Marsh, Shad 790
Martin, Camille 216, 703, 706
Maurer, Susan 267, 394, 528, 534, 663, 664
McLennan, Rob 68, 277, 279, 488, 516
McVay, Gwyn 120, 190
Menendez, Didi 466
Metres, Philip 215
Michael-chasar 772
Middle, Max 141, 650
Milletti, Christina 594
Morey, Adam 155, 157, 249, 503, 718
Moudry, Nick 206
Mukherjee, Aryanil 38, 552, 696, 726, 731
Nealand, Eireene 24, 69, 334, 342
Nelson, Paul 185, 347, 443
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 54, 55, 111, 112, 329, 413, 525, 536, 540, 542, 556, 577, 589, 591
Newman, Richard Jeffrey 672, 697
Nielsen, Aldon 43, 45
NIELSEN, ALDON L 20, 391, 416, 709
Novack, Carol 498, 500, 610
Orange, Tom 485, 747
Osman, Jena 464
Peterson, Tim 188, 231, 232, 311, 459, 494
Piombino, Nick 619
Pluto, Anne Elezabeth 284
Poe, Deborah 60, 195, 570, 730
Porter, Cati 465
Powell, Ren 283, 285, 293, 313, 317, 319
Press, Hot Whiskey 70
Press, Katalanche 158
Pritts, Nate 640
Project, Poetry 13, 247, 521, 652
Quackenbush, Jason 19, 22, 89, 90, 118, 119, 152, 198, 260, 304, 305, 337, 341, 380, 382, 385, 506, 507, 548, 549, 684, 686, 751, 779
Quasha, George 508
Queyras, Sina 740
Ricejunk2 681, 682, 683
Roche, John 649
Rossiter, Charlie 92, 207, 225, 307, 350, 767
Rothenberg, Michael 603, 752
Rumble, Ken 406
Saliby, Alexander 595
Sama, Metta 724
Savage, Thomas 64, 130, 133, 489, 623, 720, 791
School, Factory 273, 298, 322, 361
Schultz, Susan Webster 351
Schwabsky, Barry 28, 31, 136, 161, 180, 226, 312, 314, 358, 365, 403, 519, 546, 584
Schwartz, Gerald 397
Shankar, Ravi (English) 481
Shmailo, Larissa 345
Side, Jeffrey 32, 354
Silliman, Ron 201, 470, 634, 769
Sirois, Justin 660
Sky, Tarpaulin 448, 520
Slaughter, William 502
Smith, Rod 474, 524
Sondheim, Alan 1, 56, 59, 77, 80, 110, 121, 131, 137, 164, 212, 254, 290, 309, 310, 399, 522, 532, 550, 551, 555, 565, 590, 611, 633, 685, 712
Sorensen, Lauren 492

SPOOKY, DJ 651, 764
Sprague, Jane 646
Starr, Ron 372
Stecopoulos, Eleni 419
Stempleman, Jordan 396, 735
Stroffolino, Chris 255, 379, 438, 491, 523
Summerhayes, Don 123, 189, 713
Switaj, Elizabeth 182
Tallmo, Karl-Erik 656
Tangney, Shaunanne 37
Taylor, Andrew 375, 479
St. Thomasino 197
Thurston, Kevin 66, 288, 732
Tieger, Aaron 6, 786
Tlrelf 21, 374
Treadwell, Elizabeth 429, 626, 725, 728
Trent, L 450
Trigilio, Tony 426, 428, 554, 780
Turkmen, Ozcan 677
UbuWeb 14
Vassilakis, Nico 3
Vidaver, Aaron 604, 658
Vincent, Stephen 15, 62, 150, 151, 179, 219, 230, 296, 330, 339, 437, 505, 512, 599, 653, 674, 691
Volner, Davey 302
Waber, Dan 140, 395, 407, 480, 553, 583, 638, 668, 690, 715
Ward, Zoe 770
Watten, Barrett 251, 557
Weaver, Rebecca 175, 183
Weishaus, Joel 417, 487, 616, 742
Weiss, Mark 51, 148, 167, 169, 299, 376, 384, 388, 440, 510, 574, 588, 738, 753
Welch, Michael Dylan 29, 86, 88, 124, 213, 214, 237, 239, 294, 297, 327, 328, 386, 387, 495, 496, 535, 538, 576, 579, 612, 613, 631, 642, 669
Welford, Gabrielle 138, 145, 460
Wilcox, Dan 353, 355, 635
Wilson, Ian Randall 97
Winks, Christopher Leland 41, 58
Winton, Laura 308, 349, 473
Zimmerman, Daniel 76, 256, 340, 359, 383

NAMES MENTIONED

Abbott, Keith 649
Abbott, Steve 6
Abdul, Selim 783
Abrams, Jen 737, 747
Abrams, Sam 649
Adams, Robert 106, 263, 266, 529, 717, 765, 778
Adelle, Allison 605
Ahearn, Joe 630
Albee, Edward 313
Ali, Kazim 311
Alice, Mary 459
Allan, Don 16
Allison, Dorothy 456, 457
Alpert, Barry S. 785
Altemus, Reed 95
Altieri, Charles 280
Amann, Eric 294, 302, 303, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 329, 331, 332
Ambrose, Joe 40, 54, 93, 94
Americans, Asian 213, 222, 316, 317, 318, 319, 326, 569, 611, 615, 622, 628, 783
Amerika, Mark 502
Amis, Martin 6
Anderson, Laurie 174, 180, 184, 237, 260, 464
Andre, Michael 90, 111, 261
Andrews, Bruce 6, 103, 426, 498, 500
Angelo, Michael 499
Anne, Sarah 725
Antin, David 539, 547
Anton, Robert 345, 522, 525, 532, 536, 551
Aquinas, Thomas 525, 532, 536, 551
Archambeau, Robert 173, 514
Armantrout, Rae 201, 470, 557
Armstrong, Aaron 237
Asante, Toni 545
Ashberry, John 653, 665
Ashbery, John 38, 311, 403, 569
Atkins, Tim 15, 150, 151, 165
Atlanta, Mark P. 701, 703, 706, 717, 727, 756, 765, 770
Atwood, Margaret 6
Augustine, Jane 522, 525, 532, 536, 551
Auster, Paul 6
Austin, Geer 1, 4, 188, 204, 205, 311, 611, 615, 622, 628
Ayler, Albert 737, 747
Baker, Andrea 364, 365
Baker, Mary 6, 179, 604
Baldessari, John 547
Ball, Jonathan 141
Ballard, Micah 311, 639
Balpe, Pierre 568, 570, 595
Baraka, Amiri 518, 758
Barnard, Mary 269
Barnes, Diane 471, 513
Barnholden, Michael 658
Barr, John 569
Barthes, Roland 189, 195, 202, 239, 255
Barwin, Gary 141, 395
Basinski, Michael 402
Bates, Joe 494, 657
Baudelaire, Charles 247
Bautista, Michelle 499
Becker, Robin 659
Beckett, Samuel 375, 389
Bee, Susan 101

Belflower, James 10
Benedict, Michael 634
Benedikt, Michael 769
Benjamin, Walter 389, 649
Benka, Jen 188, 204, 205, 311, 364, 365
Bennett, John M. 6, 95, 112, 141
Benson, Steve 389, 557
Berger, John 106
Berger, Stephanie 106, 266, 583, 715
Bergvall, Caroline 429, 714
Berkeley, Michael 3, 280, 342, 400, 557, 621, 652, 728, 752
Berlin, Irving 6, 163, 526, 539, 545, 761
Bernard, George 688, 691
Bernstein, Emma 87, 101, 342, 420, 423, 499, 710, 718
Berrigan, Eddie 210, 521, 531, 539, 540, 541, 648
Berrigan, Ted 548, 642, 686, 711
Betts, Gregory 141, 703
Betts, Tara 545, 585
Beuys, Joseph 526
Bevington, Stan 721
Bianchi, Ray 18, 356, 763
Bibbins, Mark 188, 204, 205, 311
Bishop, Elizabeth 6
Blake, William 389, 456, 457, 635
Blau, Rachel 459
Bloch, Julia 392, 394, 396, 410, 420, 421, 423, 447
Bly, Robert 214, 218, 495, 506, 507
Boat, Drunken 545, 561, 661
Boehl, Dan 756
Bonney, Sean 714
Boughn, Michael 721
Boully, Jenny 448
Bowering, Harry 6, 23, 30, 33, 34, 35, 38, 187
Bowie, David 9
Bowles, Paul 547
Box, White 508, 519
BpNichol 784
Bradley, Tom 6
Bramhall, Allen 499
Braxton, Anthony 737, 747
Brazil, David 6, 162, 481
Brecht, Bertolt 269
Brennan, Joe 630
Brennan, Sherry 750
Brockwell, Stephen 68
Broder, Michael 659
Bromige, David 752
Bronk, William 679, 762
Brook, James 153
Brooks, Gwendolyn 424, 569
Brossard, Nicole 188, 204, 205, 311, 459, 469
Brown, Brandon 10, 311
Brown, Pam 499
Brown, Rebecca 459, 469
Browne, Colin 752
Brownstein, Michael 13
Bryan, John 607, 680
Buchanan, Pat 504
Bukowski, Charles 758
Bumstead, Leslie 474
Burger, Peter 6, 608
Burton, Philip 88, 101, 754
Bush, George W. 1, 4
Butler, Judith 127, 389
Buzzeo, Melissa 608, 655
Byron, Philip 721
Caesar, Little 481
Cage, John 209, 508, 510, 512, 513, 529
Cameron, David 188, 204, 205, 311
Campbell, Jeremy 585
Cannon, Steve 758
Carlos, William 6, 104, 163
Carr, Michael 158
Carragon, Patricia 345
Carroll, John 215
Carroll, Jon 409
Carson, Margaret 556
Carson, Rachel 538, 542, 548, 549
Carter, Daniel 517
Carter, Mike 452, 473, 544, 611, 615, 622, 628, 683, 689, 712
Caruso, Fred 679, 762
Casey, Sean 199
Castro, Michael 311
Catullus 72
Cayley, John 436, 633
Celan, Paul 451
Cendrars, Blaise 331
Chace, Joel 499
Chan, Jill 44
Chaucer, Geoffrey 486
Cheney, Don 339
Chernoff, Maxine 6, 201, 470
Chester, Jeff 721
Child, Abigail 188, 204, 205, 311, 459, 469
Choate, Andrew 646
Christie, Jason 658
Claire, Paula 750
Clare, John 498, 500
Clark, Cheryl 103, 252, 478, 508, 566
Clarke, Jack 721
Clemente, Francesco 221
Cletis, George 240, 256, 414
Clifford, Pat 352
Clinton, Bill 6, 16, 219, 484, 711
Close, Chuck 508
Cobain, Kurt 475, 617
Cobb, Allison 188, 204, 205, 311
Cohen, David 345

Cohn, Jim 649
Cole, Sean 311
Coleman, Jen 188, 204, 205, 311
Coleman, Victor 391, 393, 397, 398, 403, 408, 411, 414, 416, 441, 721, 747
Coleman, Wanda 185, 186
Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 389
Coletti, John 13, 247, 521, 531, 540, 541
Collins, Billy 506, 507, 548, 569, 642, 686
Collins, Phil 495, 547, 721
Coltrane, Alice 737, 747
Coltrane, John 296, 299, 328, 340, 470
Columbus, Christopher 6, 81, 141, 208, 250, 363, 436, 755, 756
Comiskey, Daniel 3
Comments, Chicago 44, 294, 302, 303, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 329, 331, 332, 554, 789
Compton, Shanna 499, 715
Conner, Kyle 311
Coolidge, Clark 402
Cooper, Dennis 311
Cooper, Joseph 711
Cooper, Paula 13, 247, 342, 737, 747
Copp, Corina 13, 247
Corbett, Bill 6
Corbett, Robert 6
Cortez, Jayne 741
Cory, Jim 311
Costanza, George 600
Coultas, Brenda 426
County, Mike 544, 563, 688, 691, 712
Covey, Bruce 364, 365, 499
Creeley, Robert 449, 454, 468, 495, 506, 507, 563, 721
Culley, Peter 604
Cunningham, Brent 151, 165
Curley, Jon 679, 762
Curtis, Dana 756
Cushman, Stephen 607, 680
Daigon, Ruth 495, 506, 507
Daley, Rachel 311
Daniels, David 95, 112
Davenport, Steve 756
Davidson, Michael 703
Davies, Alan 158
Davies, Kevin 14, 508
Davinio, Caterina 95, 112, 141
Davis, Christopher 426
Davis, Jordan 448
Davis, Martin 448, 459, 469, 495, 498, 500, 506, 507, 611, 615, 622, 628, 630, 737
Davis, Tim 474
Degentesh, Katie 524
Deleuze, Gilles 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136, 710, 718
Denner, Richard 752
Dennis, Michael 7, 402, 611, 615, 622, 628
Derrida, Jacques 13, 21, 43, 46, 49, 52, 57, 60, 63, 75, 87, 89, 105, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 131, 133, 135, 136, 137, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153, 189, 195, 197, 202, 247
Detorie, Michelle 434
Dickinson, Emily 470, 524
Dixon, Bill 459, 469
Dlugos, Tim 311
Dodge, Geraldine R. 502
Dojoji, Alan 565
Donne, John 569
Dorfman, Ariel 783
Doris, Stacy 372, 458
Dowling, Sarah 311
Downing, Brandon 524
Downing, David 499, 611, 615, 622, 628
Drescher, Julia 434
Drucker, Johanna 101
Duncan, Andrew 6, 101, 691
Duncan, Robert 3, 691
Dungy, Camille 585
Durand, Marcella 13, 188, 204, 205, 432, 459, 469, 521, 531, 540, 541, 657
Durgin, Patrick F. 539
Dworkin, Craig 14
Edgar, Chris 448
Edmond, Martin 6
Edson, Russell 733, 735, 736, 738, 739, 740, 743, 744, 745, 746, 751, 753, 755, 757, 779, 785, 790
Edwards, Ken 15
Eigner, Larry 330
Eisenreich, Jim 6
Elena, Maria 106, 266
Eli, Noah 268, 344, 717, 765
Eliot, Joe 239, 255, 330
Eliot, T. S. 569
Elisa, Paula 6, 163, 409, 640
Ellen, Mary 630
Elliot, Joe 6, 188, 204, 205, 311, 499
Ellis, Stephen 127
Elshtain, Eric 514
Emerson, Claudia 375, 389, 396, 409
Emerson, Lori 392, 394, 410, 420, 421, 423, 447
Emery, Chris 6
England, Amy 210, 237, 402, 481, 545, 611, 615, 622, 624, 628, 648, 688
Eno, Brian 6, 786
Enszer, Julie R. 499
Ernst, Max 407
Eshleman, Clayton 753, 779
Eugene, Brett 247
Evans, George 6, 15
Fagin, Larry 13
Fahey, John 550

Falkoff, Marc 783
Farr, Raymond 6
Farr, Roger 604
Farrell, Michael 311
Feltges, Ken 402
Fenton, Jayne 11
Ferguson, Jesse 14
Ferrini, Henry 229
Filreis, Alan 14
Finch, Annie 679, 762
Finch, Peter 106, 266
Fink, Thomas 6, 227
Finkelstein, Norman 679, 741, 762
Firer, Susan 242, 243, 244, 245, 258, 295
Firestone, Jennifer 655
Fisher, Harrison 6, 127, 714
Fishman, Ellen 426
Fishman, Lisa 717, 765
Fitterman, Robert 3, 474, 711
Fitzgerald, Scott 219, 339
Foley, Jack 495, 506, 507, 630, 636
Forbes, John 7
Foster, Edward 494, 556, 585
Foster, Paul 188, 204, 205, 311
Foster, Stephen 611, 615, 622, 628
Foucault, Michel 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136
Fox, Hugh 499
Fox, Richard 572, 574, 575, 577, 580, 581, 582, 588, 591
France, Peter 646, 721
Frances, Mary 16, 475, 617, 714
Franco, Michael 95, 112
Fraser, Kathleen 16
Fraser, Simon 400
Fried, Daisy 6, 470
Friedlander, Benjamin 524
Friedman, Thomas 387, 652
Frost, Corey 150, 151, 165, 611, 615, 622, 628, 655
Frumkin, Gene 702, 722, 769
Frym, Gloria 501, 505, 510, 512, 513, 521, 728
Fuchs, Greg 13, 247, 345, 521, 531, 540, 541
Fuhrman, Joanna 13, 247
Fuller, Heather 474
Gallagher, Kristen 498, 500
Gallaher, John 673
Gambito, Sarah 499
Gander, Forrest 120, 242
Garcia, Jerry 186, 190, 191, 192, 203, 214, 218
Garcia, Rodrigo 190, 191, 192, 203
Gardner, Drew 524
Gardner, Janet 354, 649
Gilbert, Alan 106, 266
Gilbert, Roger 535
Gildzen, Alex 311
Gilmore, Gary 611, 615, 622, 628
Ginsberg, Allan 186, 190, 191, 192, 203, 213, 214, 218, 222, 389
Ginsberg, Allen 185, 186, 190, 191, 192, 203, 389
Gioia, Dana 6, 495, 506, 507
Giscombe, Cecil 585
Gizzi, Michael 402
Gizzi, Peter 356
Gladman, Renee 459, 469, 608
Glassman, Scott 499
Glomski, Chris 356, 763
Golata, Russ 461
Goldsmith, Kenneth 6, 201, 470, 721
Goldstein, Laura 545
Good, Adam 524
Gordon, Kim 475, 617
Gordon, Nada 311, 524
Gordon, Ruth 181, 268, 344, 694, 717, 765, 783
Goulish, Matthew 436
Graham, Susan 660
Green, Adam 475, 617
Greenberg, Arielle 103, 426
Greene, Jonathan 495, 506, 507, 607, 680, 741
Greenstreet, Kate 364, 365, 717, 765
Gregerson, Linda 6
Gregg, Linda 311
Grenier, Bob 330
Grinnell, Tracy 106, 188, 204, 205, 266, 311
Grubbs, David 563
Gunn, Paula 728
Gurga, Lee 495, 506, 507, 686
Hall, Lind 251
Halpern, Daniel 16
Halpern, Rob 16, 311
Halsey, Alan 140, 395
Hamilton, Diana 217, 513
Hansen, Jefferson 242, 243, 244, 245, 258, 295
Harper, Michael 545, 721
Harris, Ken 585
Harryman, Carla 557
Hart, Matt 499
Harvey, George 547
Hass, Robert 222, 239, 255, 342, 569
Hatfield, Juliana 475, 617
Hawkins, David 529
Hayden, Robert 737
Hayes, Jared 6, 426, 711
Hayles, Katherine 436, 633
Hecht, Anthony 490, 491
Heidegger, Martin 126, 131, 135, 137, 189, 195, 202
Heights, Jackson 409

Hejinian, Lyn 557, 695, 699
Heller, Joseph 101
Henning, Barbara 95, 112
Henri, Charles 25, 61, 90, 91, 105, 111, 129, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153, 321, 508, 632
Herbert, George 498, 500, 569
Herman, Rachel 454, 468
Hernandez, Victor 95, 112
Hershon, Bob 499
Hickman, David 630
Hicks, Sue 424
Higgins, Dick 6
Hikmet, Nazim 6, 511
Hill, Crag 789
Hill, Lindsay 3
Hill, Murray 508
Hirsch, Edward 6
Hirshfield, Jane 495, 506, 507
Hofer, Jen 311
Hoffman, Daniel 6, 545
Hoffman, Eric 698, 713
Holloway, Rob 652, 741
Holman, Bob 6, 499, 649, 758
Holmes, Janet 717, 765
Hoover, Edgar 751, 753, 779
Hoover, Paul 6, 201, 470, 695, 699
Hospodar, Yuri 311
Houlihan, Joan 629
House, Poets 231
House, White 6
Howard, Richard 274, 289, 290, 308, 309, 316, 317, 318, 349
Howe, Susan 106, 266, 563
Huang, Yunte 14
Hughes, Peter 488
Hughes, Ted 219
Hugo, Richard 3
Hume, Christine 499
Hunt, Erica 459, 469, 494
Hunter, Carrie 6, 186, 190, 191, 192, 203, 214, 218, 269, 498, 500
Hunter, Robert 186, 190, 191, 192, 214, 218
Iijima, Brenda 188, 204, 205, 231, 311, 521, 531, 540, 541
Indiana, Gary 520, 527, 569
Ireland, Lauren 611, 615, 622, 628
Israel, David R. 269, 351
Israeli, Henry 269
Ivins, Molly 1, 4, 201
Jackson, Jesse 484, 539, 594, 611, 615, 621, 622, 628, 646
Jackson, Michael 290, 308, 309, 316, 317, 318, 349
Jarnot, Lisa 268, 344
Jeffery, Mark 436, 547
Jenkins, Margaret 6, 737, 747, 769
Jhave, David 455
Johns, Jasper 136
Johnson, Kent 242, 243, 244, 245, 258, 295, 368, 370, 630, 631, 636, 714
Johnston, Daniel 455
Jonas, Stephen 6, 311
Jones, Rodney 485, 489, 490
Jonson, Ben 389
Jordan, June 99, 448, 585, 776
Joron, Andrew 499
Joseph, Safdie 127, 269, 402, 621, 624, 646, 710, 718, 721
Joyce, Michael 72, 217
Jullich, Jeffrey 188, 204, 205, 311
Kacian, Jim 294, 302, 303, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 329, 331, 332
Kafka, Franz 729
Kaplan, Josef 101, 569
Karasick, Adeena 462
Kasimor, Mary 6
Kaufman, Andrew 188, 204, 205
Kaufman, Erica 13, 247, 311, 459, 469, 786
Kearney, Douglas 585
Keats, John 649
Keene, John 587
Keepnews, James 475, 617
Kelley, Mike 547
Kelly, Barbara 43, 45, 46, 57, 60, 63, 75, 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136
Kelly, Paul 604, 670, 753, 778, 779
Kelly, Robert 6, 20, 21, 22, 43, 45, 46, 57, 60, 63, 75, 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136, 201, 416, 470, 587
Kelsey, Karla 717, 765
Kempton, Karl 407, 553
Kendall, Robert 498, 500
Kennedy, Kit 269
Kerouac, Jack 6, 13, 213, 222, 239, 247, 255, 642, 686
Killian, Kevin 99, 311, 725
Kim, Myung Mi 725
Kimball, Jack 188, 204, 205, 311
Kirschenbaum, David A. 177, 200, 275, 276, 281, 305, 408, 444, 475, 617, 657, 771
Klein, Naomi 788
Knott, Bill 743
Koch, Kenneth 109, 113, 116, 117
Kocik, Robert 657
Koeneke, Rodney 524
Kolm, Ron 345
Kooser, Ted 294, 302, 303, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 329, 331, 332, 495, 506, 507, 569
Koshkin, Michael 70
Kostelanetz, Richard 6, 495, 506, 507, 547, 649
Krick, Jack 609
Kroetsch, Robert 658
Kuchar, George 14

Kuenstler, Frank 492
Kuhl, Nancy 210, 515, 648
Kuhn, Donna 141
Kushner, Bill 188, 204, 205, 311, 345
Kuszai, Joel 247, 392, 394, 396, 410, 420, 421, 423, 447
Kyger, Joanne 330
Lacy, Steve 563
Lamoureux, Mark 499, 521, 531, 540, 541
Landers, Susan 311
Lang, Eugene 621
Larkin, Joan 426
Laughtland, Amanda 6, 450
Laurence, Paul 389, 456, 457
Lavender, Bill 127, 216, 223, 499, 706
Lear, Edward 358, 359
Leigh, Mike 32, 389
Leon, Jon 499
Levi, David 106, 266
Levinas, Emmanuel 126, 131, 135, 137, 189, 195, 202
Levine, Jeffrey 756
Levitsky, Rachel 188, 204, 205, 311, 459, 469
Lewis, Tom W. 48, 67, 72, 174, 180, 184, 185, 186, 217, 241, 260, 327, 423, 447, 719
Lichtensteiger, Ralph 209
Lilly, Ruth 569, 649
Lloyd, David 6
Locke, Duane 450
Locklin, Gerald 495, 506, 507
Logan, John 106, 266
Lomax, Alan 621, 646
London, Frank 15, 127, 389, 402, 437, 442, 443, 460, 463, 569, 624, 674, 676, 721, 761
Lopez, Richard 499
Loudon, Rebecca 372, 499
Louise, Bobbie 547, 632
Lubeski, Lori 311
Lurie, Bobbie 625
Luther, Martin 6, 269, 372
Lydon, John 628
Lynn, Aldon 43, 45, 46, 57, 60, 63, 75, 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136
Lynn, Loretta 611, 615, 622, 628
Madison, James 103
Madrid, Anthony 185, 186
Magee, Michael 470, 524
Magi, Jill 231, 621, 626
Malcolm, Janet 158, 741
Malkin, Ben 311
Mandelstam, Osip 454, 468
Manning, Nicholas 499
Mansell, Chris 407
Marie, Joshua 268, 344, 426
Marie, Julie 70, 452, 473, 604, 683, 689
Marino, Elizabeth 545
Marshall, Robert 545
Martin, Carl 585
Martin, Douglas A. 448, 659
Martinez, Michael 44, 95, 112, 434
Marvin, Lee 628
Marx, Karl 41, 50, 58
Mason, Chris 3
Mason, Janet 311
Massey, Joseph 737, 747, 786
Matthews, William 670
Maxwell, Susan 6, 238, 717, 765
Mayer, Bernadette 426, 539, 652, 778
Mayhew, Jonathan 508
Maynard, James 246, 499
Mead, Stephen 694
Mead, Taylor 345
Meadows, Deborah 459, 469
Meltzer, David 752
Melville, Pierre 229, 454, 468
Memmott, Talan 363, 533
Menard, Pierre 238
Menashe, Samuel 506, 507, 679, 762
Mercuri, John 6, 311
Merrill, James 569
Merrill, Stuart 569
Mesmer, Sharon 311, 499, 524
Messerli, Douglas 61, 62, 90, 111
Meyer, Thomas 311
Meyer, Tom 498, 500
Miller, Cynthia 761
Miller, Henry 688
Miller, Lee 99, 311, 339, 400, 673, 691, 721
Minhinnick, Robert 6
Mirakove, Carol 521, 531, 540, 541
Miriam, Erica 517
Mitchell, Stephen 101
Mohammad, Kasey 521
Monroe, Bill 569
Monroe, Harriet 569
Moore, Marianne 470
Moore, Nicholas 6, 585, 651
Morgan, Robin 518, 529, 611, 615, 622, 628, 758, 778
Moriarty, Laura 151, 165, 499
Moritz, John 1, 4
Morris, Joe 517
Morris, Marianne 476
Morris, Philip 688, 691
Morris, Tim 6, 95, 112, 176
Morrison, Rusty 6, 201, 470
Morrison, Toni 6
Morton, Kathryn A. 252, 478
Moschovakis, Anna 459, 469
Moten, Fred 6
Motherwell, Robert 508
Moure, Erin 120
Moxley, Jennifer 474
Muckle, John 488

Muldoon, Paul 538, 542, 548, 549, 556
Mullen, Laura 13, 247, 703
Murphy, Michelle 635, 679, 762, 769, 789
Murphy, Robert 679, 762
Murphy, Ryan 786
Murphy, Sheila E. 141, 426
Myles, Eileen 188, 204, 205, 311
Nakayasu, Sawako 231, 311
Nathanson, Tenney 311
Nealon, Chris 311
Neff, Michael 498, 500, 629
Nelson, Gale 6, 585, 611, 615, 622, 628, 638
Nelson, Paul E. 185, 186, 347, 443
Neruda, Pablo 13, 247, 402, 406
Nicholls, Peter 479
Nichols, Travis 524
Nicholson, Andy 345, 517
Nicholson, Patricia 517
Nicholson, Todd 517
Nicole, Anna 248, 254, 262, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 281, 283, 284, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 293, 301, 305, 308, 309, 313, 316, 317, 318, 319, 321, 326, 331, 332, 349, 387, 726, 729, 730, 731, 732
Nielsen, Aldon L. 20, 21, 22, 43, 46, 57, 60, 63, 75, 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136, 416
Nielsen, Lynn 43, 45, 46, 57, 60, 63, 75, 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136
Nikolayev, Philip 238
Nimoy, Leonard 517
Nolan, John 6, 649
Norman, Peter 387
Norris, Chuck 451, 747
Norton, John 29, 31, 36, 37, 48, 53, 55, 124, 213, 222, 499, 517, 721
Norton, Linda 6
Notley, Alice 6, 120, 459, 469
O'Hara, Frank 660
Oatis, Martha 188, 204, 205, 311
Oliver, Laura 13, 188, 204, 205, 247, 311, 737, 789
Oliver, Mary 499
Olivia, Carrie 717, 765
Olson, Charles 6, 79, 210, 229, 643, 648, 654, 670
Ondaatje, Michael 6
Oppen, George 479
Opstedal, Kevin 639
Orner, Peter 649
Ostashevsky, Eugene 247, 342, 757
Owen, Maureen 459, 469
Pacific, Asian 16, 86, 88, 102, 124, 174, 180, 184, 213, 214, 218, 222, 260, 327, 328, 340, 351, 386, 387, 576, 579, 584, 589, 612, 613, 619, 635, 741
Padgett, Ron 386
Padin, Clemente 95, 112, 162, 221
Paige, Abby 717, 765
Palm, Lars 514, 786
Palmer, Michael 70, 311
Paquin, Ethan 717, 765
Parisi, Joseph 569
Park, Chase 545
Parker, Charlie 490, 491
Parker, Karl 6, 257, 517, 639
Parker, Michael 426
Parker, William 517
Patterson, Ian 585
Patton, Julie 459, 469, 494, 657
Paulenich, Craig 242
Pearson, Ted 522, 525, 532, 536, 551, 557
Peltier, Leonard 269
Pelton, Ted 727
Penton, Jonathan 499
Perelman, Bob 87, 557
Perez, James 499
Perkins, Charlotte 6
Perloff, Marjorie 14, 150, 151, 165, 342, 479
Perot, Ross 1
Perry, David 681
Peters, Mark 44
Peterson, Katie 433
Pettet, Simon 15
Peyrafitte, Nicole 451, 562
Phillip, Andrew 475, 539, 617, 649, 737
Phillips, Malcolm 44, 721
Phipps, Wanda 498, 500
Pillsbury, Marianne 475, 617
Pine, White 297, 304, 402
Pines, Paul 6, 688, 691
Place, Vanessa 429
Plath, Sylvia 456, 457, 780
Pluto, Anne E. 284, 287
Poe, Edgar 389
Polito, Robert 424
Pope, Alexander 389
Potter, Harry 783
Potter, Steve 311
Pound, Ezra 569
Pound, Scott 296, 299, 328, 330, 340
Powell, Douglas 284, 287
Prater, David 6
Prevallet, Kristin 13, 545
Price, Michael 639
Priego, Ernesto 499
Di Prima, Diane 495, 506, 507
Primeau, Phil 6
Prince, Richard 120, 459, 469
Professor, Kelly 20, 21, 22, 43, 45, 46, 57, 60, 63, 75, 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136, 416
Provost, Terry 445
Prynne, J. H. 210, 648

Puckett, Caleb 268, 344
Purcell, Jack 604
Randall, Karen 389
Rankine, Claudia 459, 469
Rantala, Kathryn 499
Rasula, Jed 249, 602
Rauschenberg, Robert 529
Raworth, Tom 474, 586
Reagan, Nancy 331, 332
Reed, Lou 764
Regan, Matthias 545
Regan, Max 420, 421, 423, 447
Reich, Steve 505, 510, 512, 513
Reuters, Boston 452, 473, 683, 689
Rexroth, Kenneth 3, 296, 299, 328, 340, 691
Reynolds, Sean 456, 457
Richards, Brian 1, 4
Riggs, Don 788
Rilke, Rainer Maria 3
Rivera, Alex 106, 266
Robbins, Bruce 116, 117
Robertson, Lisa 330
Robertson, Pat 498, 500
Robinson, Kit 15, 557
Rockwell, Norman 127
Rodefer, Stephen 196, 247
Rogers, Jessica 432
Rollins, Henry 296, 299, 328, 340
Rooney, Kathleen 6, 649
Roosevelt, Franklin 484
Rosenthal, Chuck 621
Rosenthal, Sarah 621
Ross, Joe 224
Rothenberg, Jerome 6, 539
Rothenberg, Jerry 751, 752, 753, 779
Rothschild, Douglas 13, 247
Rowan, Lou 752
Rowntree, Dirk 711
Roy, Camille 311, 459, 469
Rubin, Michael 452, 473, 683, 689
Ruggieri, Helen 500
Rumsfeld, Donald 714, 783
Russo, Linda 714
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 311, 459, 469
Sala, Jerome 426
Saltz, Jerry 6
Sampirisi, Jenny 480
Samuels, Ian 389
Sanchez, Jorge 538, 542, 548, 549, 556
Sandburg, Carl 484
Sanders, Jay 649
Santos, Craig 95, 112, 499
Sappho 15
Saroyan, William 14
Sartre, Paul 698, 713
Saunders, George 127
Sawyer, Larry 10, 44
Sayeau, Ashley 611, 615, 622, 628
Scalapino, Leslie 15, 459, 469
Schlemowitz, Joel 498, 500
Schlesinger, Kyle 106, 229, 266
Schneeman, George 432, 521, 539
Schneiderman, Kurt 498, 500
Schultz, Susan M. 351
Schwartz, Leonard 351
Scobie, Stephen 424
Selby, Spencer 6
Seldess, Jesse 539
Shakespeare, William 375, 456, 457, 569
Shapiro, David 311
Shaw, Lytle 557
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 594
Shepherd, Reginald 585
Sherlock, Frank 176, 235, 264, 321, 406, 470, 521, 531, 540, 541, 554
Shihab, Naomi 426
Shipp, Matthew 517
Shocklee, Hank 651
Shurin, Aaron 15
Siegel, Nathaniel 188, 204, 205, 311
Siegell, Paul 6
Sigo, Cedar 311, 639
Silverman, Oren 475, 617
Simic, Charles 743
Simon, Greg 6, 27, 49, 52, 211, 217, 467, 537, 572, 629, 632, 756
Simone, Frank 103
Simpson, Bennett 331, 332
Skillman, Judith 263
Skinner, Jonathan 494, 657
Smith, Alexis 547
Smith, Rachel 714
Smith, Tracy K. 1, 4, 246, 248, 254, 262, 274, 286, 288, 289, 290, 293, 301, 308, 309, 313, 316, 317, 318, 319, 321, 326, 331, 332, 349, 409, 426, 498, 500, 547, 737, 747, 750
Snyder, Gary 569
Snyder, Rick 101, 330, 649
Sonnenberg, Kerri 539
Spacks, Barry 495, 506, 507
Spahr, Boyd 264
Spahr, Juliana 264
Spears, Patricia 317, 318, 459, 469, 475, 617
Spero, Nancy 106, 266
Spicer, Jack 150, 151, 165, 311, 604
Spiess, Robert 506, 507
Stackhouse, Christopher 585, 587
Stadler, Matthew 16
Stanley, Jared 10, 375, 445
Stanley, Morgan 569
Stanton, Rob 475, 518, 617, 758
Starr, Kenneth 26, 28, 42, 64, 69, 73, 81, 95, 112, 372

Stefans, Kim 14
Stein, Gertrude 8, 14, 459, 469
Stein, Suzanne 16
Stengel, Jill 199, 444
Stephenson, Rob 498, 500
Stevens, Wallace 11, 569
Stevenson, Matt 476
Strand, Mark 569, 743
Strauss, Zoe 106, 266
Strongin, Lynn 499
Studies, Asian 242
Sullivan, Gary 13, 269, 524, 619
Summers, Rod 95, 112
Sun, Chicago 545
Sutherland, Mark 95, 112
Sward, Robert 495, 506, 507
Sweet, Erik 156, 157
Swensen, Cole 282, 695, 699
Szymaszek, Stacy 188, 204, 205, 311
Tabios, Eileen 6, 139, 150, 151, 165, 499
Taggart, John 470
Talentino, Rachel 475, 617
Tarlo, Harriet 766
Tarn, Nathaniel 210, 406, 648
Tate, James 743
Taylor, Cecil 747
Teare, Brian 6
Tejada, Roberto 311
Terris, Susan 495, 506, 507
Terry, Philip 15
Tesser, Marjorie 499, 758
Texas, Irving 1, 4, 402, 418, 448, 611, 615, 622, 628
Theater, Poets 13, 247
Thompson, Jon 269
Tichy, Susan 246, 426, 717, 765
Timmons, Jeffrey 426
Tipton, John 475, 617
Tobin, Adam 6
Topel, Andrew 6
Topp, Mike 758
Tost, Tony 18
Touchon, Cecil 95, 112, 487
Towle, Tony 311
Tribune, Chicago 1, 4, 545, 569
Trinidad, David 311, 426, 494, 545
Truitt, Sam 268, 344
Trujillo, Dorothy 604
Tucker, Aaron 630
Tudor, David 563
Tufts, Kate 485, 489
Tuma, Keith 586, 714
Turnbull, Chris 141
Twain, Mark 569, 611, 615, 622, 628
Tyler, Mary 1, 4
Tynes, Jen 10
Underwood, Carrie 391, 393, 397, 398, 403, 408, 411, 414, 416
Upton, Lawrence 59
Valentine, Jean 103
Vallejo, César 95, 112
Veglahn, Sara 268, 344
Vengua, Jean 6
Veronica, Angela 244, 258, 295, 456, 457
Viegener, Matias 429
Vincent, Gregory 15, 95, 112, 303, 306, 311, 323, 324, 325, 331, 332, 386
Violi, Paul 226, 230, 240, 256, 259, 294, 296, 299, 302, 303, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 328, 329, 331, 332, 336, 340, 609, 652
Virgil 505, 510, 512, 513
Volpert, Megan 644
Vonnegut, Kurt 787
Vvedensky, Alexander 342
Wagner, Catherine 163
Wahlstrom, Ralph 624, 721
Waldman, Anne 6, 13, 247, 424, 432, 454, 468, 521
Waldman, Ken 495, 506, 507, 756
Walker, Ryan 524
Wallace, Mark 474
Walsh, Catherine 721
Wanek, Joel 529
Warhol, Andy 345, 508, 539
Warren, Jim 311
Warsh, Lewis 521
Washington, Harold 1, 4, 5, 13, 247, 269, 345, 351, 448, 474, 496, 520, 524, 527, 545, 624, 721, 761, 778, 783
Wasserman, Ann 99
Watson, Sasha 88, 789
Watts, Alan 239, 255, 294, 302, 303, 306, 312, 323, 325, 332
Watts, Robert 324, 329, 331
Wayne, Eric 622, 628
Weber, Damian 657
Weiner, Hannah 14, 539, 562
Weinfield, Henry 679, 762
Weiss, Irving 95, 141, 407
Welish, Marjorie 586
Wertheim, Christine 429
Whalen, Philip 330
Wharton, Samuel 6
White, Jessica 788
Whitener, Brian 95, 112
Whitman, Walt 13, 247, 389, 456, 457, 569
Wieners, John 6
Wierzbicki, Carol 345
Wilbur, Richard 569
Wilkinson, Joshua 268, 344, 426
Williams, Hank 611, 615, 622, 628
Williams, Jonathan 311
Williams, Paul O. 294, 302, 303, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 329, 331, 332, 535
Williams, Tony 263, 526, 562, 585, 611, 615, 622, 628, 634, 652, 769

Williams, Tyrone 6, 585, 679, 762
Williamson, Dustin 13, 247
Wilson, Emily 99
Wolfowitz, Paul 641
Woodward, Jon 673
Woolf, Virginia 349
Wright, James 120, 252, 363, 436, 478, 499, 611, 622, 721
Wright, Julia 472
Wright, Michelle 615, 628
Wright, Richard 484
Young, Mark 6, 44, 499, 695, 699, 782
Young, Stephanie 311
Zolf, Rachel 311
Zorn, John 764
Zucker, Rachel 101
Zummo, Peter 517, 759
Zurawski, Magdalena 311
Zuzga, Jason 311
Žižek, Slavoj 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136

CONCEPTS

9/11 658, 712
Activism and protest 1, 4, 5, 67, 72, 110, 119, 121, 126, 131, 135, 137, 189, 195, 202, 267, 397, 408, 420, 421, 423, 447, 471, 511, 539, 611, 615, 622, 628, 721
Aesthetics 6, 13, 106, 136, 141, 151, 165, 247, 266, 294, 302, 303, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 328, 329, 331, 332, 340, 429, 462, 475, 494, 495, 496, 506, 507, 535, 586, 605, 617, 632, 642, 646, 686, 772, 784
Afghanistan 628
African American poetry 653, 665
Anthologies 29, 31, 36, 37, 48, 53, 55, 61, 88, 124, 151, 165, 213, 222, 247, 252, 294, 297, 302, 303, 304, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 329, 331, 332, 342, 409, 448, 451, 478, 492, 499, 521, 535, 538, 542, 545, 548, 549, 556, 605, 611, 615, 620, 621, 622, 625, 628, 649, 658, 660, 662, 721
Appropriation 86, 102, 169, 174, 179, 180, 184, 260, 272, 338, 373, 376, 382, 383, 384, 385, 388, 524, 567, 572, 574, 575, 577, 580, 581, 582, 588, 591, 703, 783
Archives and libraries 1, 4, 59, 61, 71, 94, 125, 127, 134, 139, 150, 151, 165, 174, 180, 184, 210, 213, 217, 222, 225, 226, 230, 237, 240, 256, 260, 402, 420, 421, 423, 447, 492, 495, 506, 507, 515, 522, 525, 532, 536, 551, 569, 611, 615, 622, 624, 628, 638, 641, 648, 721
Autobiography 406, 471, 539, 545, 557, 569, 634, 721, 769
Avant-garde 54, 62, 71, 94, 209, 273, 342, 441, 459, 469, 496, 515, 538, 539, 542, 546, 548, 549, 556, 579, 584, 587, 710, 718, 760
Beat generation 333, 334
Beauty 69, 73, 179, 252, 290, 308, 309, 316, 317, 318, 331, 332, 349, 478, 543, 545, 569, 611, 615, 620, 622, 628, 695, 696, 699
Biography 126, 131, 135, 137, 189, 195, 202, 522, 525, 532, 536, 551, 569, 586, 691, 721
Black Mountain 13, 247, 529, 785
Blogs 6, 9, 14, 18, 20, 21, 22, 25, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 56, 57, 59, 60, 61, 63, 64, 68, 75, 77, 78, 79, 89, 90, 91, 100, 104, 105, 106, 108, 109, 110, 111, 113, 114, 116, 117, 118, 119, 121, 122, 123, 126, 129, 131, 132, 133, 135, 136, 137, 139, 141, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 157, 158, 164, 165, 166, 173, 176, 179, 189, 195, 197, 199, 201, 202, 219, 227, 230, 234, 240, 246, 254, 256, 264, 266, 277, 279, 281, 283, 284, 285, 290, 296, 299, 303, 306, 308, 309, 316, 317, 318, 320, 321, 323, 324, 325, 328, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 340, 345, 348, 349, 361, 362, 373, 376, 377, 382, 383, 384, 385, 388, 389, 399, 410, 413, 416, 420, 421, 422, 423, 425, 431, 434, 437, 439, 442, 443, 447, 448, 451, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 460, 462, 463, 467, 468, 470, 475, 476, 482, 483, 486, 488, 497, 499, 500, 501, 504, 505, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 516, 521, 524, 530, 531, 532, 536, 537, 540, 541, 543, 545, 551, 554, 555, 558, 560, 561, 562, 563, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 590, 595, 600, 602, 604, 610, 617, 618, 621, 629, 634, 641, 643, 644, 652, 653, 654, 657, 661, 665, 666, 670, 673, 674, 676, 691, 692, 693, 694, 696, 704, 722, 728, 736, 739, 749, 760, 766, 768, 769, 771, 775, 776, 786, 788, 789
Book announcements 6, 13, 97, 130, 132, 156, 157, 158, 165, 242, 280, 282, 448, 459, 467, 469, 474, 494, 513, 520, 521, 527, 557, 621, 657, 673, 679, 695, 699, 711, 749, 786
Bookstores 6, 90, 103, 111, 139, 150, 151, 165, 252, 459, 469, 478, 569, 620, 669, 779
Calls for submissions 11, 141, 434, 465, 466, 672, 766, 780
Capitalism 6, 13, 104, 474, 505, 510, 512, 513, 611, 615, 622, 628, 658
Censorship 13, 271, 272, 371, 374, 377, 378, 379, 783
Cities 13, 71, 103, 162, 280, 408, 448, 475, 545, 611, 615, 617, 622, 628, 678, 773, 774
Class 242, 611, 615, 622, 628
Climate 532, 536, 551, 712
Collage and montage 3, 296, 299, 328, 331, 332, 340, 481, 587, 621, 706

Conceptual writing 6, 193, 470, 714
Conferences and festivals 6, 163, 213, 222, 237, 242, 297, 304, 310, 338, 363, 375, 400, 402, 406, 424, 429, 436, 479, 481, 502, 508, 515, 524, 533, 535, 624, 640, 653, 665, 678, 685, 703, 721, 756
Copyright and permissions 160, 179, 257, 420, 421, 423, 447, 471, 544, 569, 754, 783
Craft 163, 242, 328, 340, 681, 783
Creative writing pedagogy 6, 298, 322, 412, 438, 439, 456, 457, 779, 783
Deconstruction 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 30, 33, 34, 35, 38, 39, 41, 42, 43, 46, 47, 49, 50, 51, 52, 56, 57, 58, 60, 63, 64, 66, 67, 69, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 87, 89, 91, 102, 105, 107, 108, 109, 110, 113, 116, 117, 118, 119, 121, 123, 124, 126, 131, 133, 135, 136, 137, 138, 142, 145, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153, 154, 161, 187, 189, 195, 202, 208, 211, 212, 217, 250, 310, 333, 334, 649, 712
Difficulty 1, 59, 420, 421, 423, 447, 522, 525, 532, 536, 550, 551, 611
Digital archives 14, 96, 115, 646
Disability 6, 98, 144, 170, 172, 539
Dreams 6, 13, 127, 139, 150, 151, 165, 222, 233, 239, 247, 255, 298, 331, 332, 402, 406, 488, 545, 624, 649, 721, 722
Ecology and ecopoetics 471, 605, 657, 721
Editing 16, 103, 127, 134, 139, 150, 151, 165, 392, 394, 396, 410, 420, 421, 423, 447, 476, 495, 506, 507, 569, 611, 615, 621, 622, 627, 628, 658, 695, 699, 710, 718, 721, 766
Ekphrasis 521
Electronic poetry and hypertext 14, 59, 193, 210, 253, 420, 421, 423, 447, 462, 480, 609, 648, 670, 707, 749
Empire and imperialism 6, 239, 255, 481, 667, 712
Epic 125, 180, 184, 213, 222, 260, 569
Erasure 721
Ethics 309, 313, 316, 317, 318, 375, 479
Experimental poetry 3, 6, 12, 40, 54, 62, 71, 78, 79, 93, 94, 150, 151, 162, 165, 221, 273, 320, 333, 334, 372, 496, 695, 699
Fascism 6, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153, 451, 562, 712
Feminism 98, 101, 103, 110, 119, 121, 126, 131, 135, 137, 144, 189, 195, 202, 333, 334, 429, 459, 469, 478, 539, 611, 615, 620, 622, 628, 721
Film 6, 14, 47, 51, 114, 163, 171, 197, 201, 203, 204, 229, 252, 253, 258, 261, 266, 269, 295, 310, 329, 333, 334, 349, 402, 420, 421, 423, 429, 447, 470, 475, 478, 492, 521, 522, 524, 525, 532, 536, 551, 569, 602, 617, 625, 635, 678, 712, 719, 721, 764, 769
Flarf 467, 470, 524
Fluxus 515, 526
Formalism 304, 312, 325, 328, 329, 330, 332, 340, 495, 496, 505, 506, 507, 510, 512, 513, 627
Free speech 783
Free verse 448, 496, 520, 527
Futurism 253, 333, 334, 342, 587
Gender 110, 119, 121, 126, 131, 135, 137, 189, 195, 202, 252, 405, 418, 478, 497, 501, 505, 510, 512, 513, 605
Globalization 6, 201, 253, 470, 658
Grants and funding 6, 106, 141, 210, 242, 266, 289, 342, 459, 469, 494, 569, 605, 611, 615, 622, 628, 648, 658, 712, 721
Haiku 7, 29, 31, 36, 37, 48, 53, 55, 86, 88, 92, 102, 124, 174, 180, 182, 184, 185, 186, 190, 191, 192, 197, 198, 199, 203, 207, 213, 214, 218, 220, 222, 225, 226, 230, 237, 239, 240, 241, 250, 255, 256, 259, 260, 294, 296, 297, 299, 300, 302, 303, 304, 306, 307, 312, 314, 323, 324, 325, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 340, 341, 343, 344, 346, 347, 350, 352, 355, 357, 358, 359, 360, 362, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 372, 373, 376, 380, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 438, 439, 446, 448, 495, 496, 499, 506, 507, 535, 538, 542, 543, 546, 548, 549, 556, 569, 576, 579, 584, 589, 612, 613, 631, 642, 647, 669, 675, 686, 767, 768, 775
Harlem Renaissance 127, 402, 624, 721
Homophonic translation 587
Humour and satire 13, 102, 124, 247, 372, 386, 438, 475, 569, 617, 721
Ideology 71, 273, 611, 615, 622, 628
Imagism 13, 247, 610
Improvisation 529, 550, 737
Indigenous and Native poetics 605
Interviews 1, 4, 6, 52, 65, 68, 105, 114, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153, 154, 174, 180, 184, 195, 202, 227, 237, 260, 313, 331, 332, 364, 365, 402, 441, 446, 468, 498, 500, 504, 610, 621, 649, 698, 704, 713, 714, 744, 778
Israel and Palestine 185, 186, 269, 351, 741
Language poetry 13, 61, 71, 92, 94, 133, 136, 247, 333, 334, 539, 557
Latino and Latin American poetry 407
Letters and correspondence 56, 412, 420, 421, 423, 447, 464, 773, 774
List moderation 6, 12, 40, 54, 62, 71, 93, 94, 331, 332, 392, 394, 396, 399, 410, 413, 420, 421, 422, 423, 431, 447, 462, 624, 682, 690, 692, 696, 700, 705, 720, 774
Little magazines 1, 3, 4, 6, 10, 11, 16, 32, 71, 88, 98, 106, 124, 127, 144, 150, 151, 163,

165, 179, 188, 204, 205, 210, 213, 222, 226, 230, 240, 252, 256, 257, 266, 282, 294, 297, 302, 303, 304, 306, 311, 312, 323, 324, 325, 329, 331, 332, 334, 344, 381, 387, 402, 409, 420, 421, 423, 426, 433, 434, 447, 448, 459, 465, 466, 469, 470, 471, 475, 476, 478, 492, 495, 499, 502, 506, 507, 527, 538, 539, 542, 545, 546, 548, 549, 556, 569, 579, 584, 587, 605, 611, 615, 617, 622, 625, 628, 631, 636, 638, 639, 640, 642, 648, 649, 656, 657, 672, 674, 676, 679, 686, 695, 699, 723, 724, 726, 729, 730, 731, 732, 748, 752, 753, 762, 777, 779, 780, 784, 791
Lyric poetry 45, 70, 85, 280, 356, 407, 448, 539, 611, 615, 622, 628, 658, 772, 780
Materiality of the text 695, 699
Memory 13, 16, 162, 188, 204, 205, 247, 406, 520, 527, 544, 621, 626, 721, 783
MFA programs 6, 13, 247, 412, 464, 502, 545, 604, 624, 638, 721, 728
Modernism 11, 12, 40, 54, 62, 71, 93, 94, 247, 270, 315, 330, 342, 375, 438, 439, 479, 569, 571, 572, 574, 575, 577, 580, 581, 582, 588, 591, 766
Mourning and loss 14, 98, 144, 150, 151, 165, 286, 288, 310, 551, 611, 615, 622, 628, 712
Multiculturalism 252, 459, 469, 478, 611, 615, 620, 622, 628
Music and poetry 3, 45, 125, 141, 154, 163, 174, 180, 184, 186, 190, 191, 192, 203, 209, 212, 214, 218, 219, 237, 248, 254, 260, 262, 327, 331, 332, 341, 353, 404, 406, 408, 411, 416, 441, 449, 451, 454, 458, 459, 468, 469, 471, 475, 484, 490, 491, 496, 498, 500, 505, 510, 512, 513, 517, 524, 529, 536, 539, 545, 550, 551, 569, 573, 610, 611, 615, 617, 622, 625, 628, 646, 656, 657, 666, 668, 721, 722, 737, 747, 764
Nationalism 71, 78, 320, 333, 334, 406, 605, 658
Nature 55, 88, 139, 150, 151, 162, 165, 193, 239, 242, 255, 294, 302, 303, 306, 310, 312, 323, 324, 325, 328, 329, 331, 332, 340, 369, 389, 410, 420, 421, 423, 438, 447, 453, 471, 481, 494, 538, 542, 548, 549, 556, 628, 642, 686, 712
Negativity and refusal 251
New York School 13, 247
Obituary and memorial 1, 4, 6, 420, 421, 423, 447, 634, 702, 737
Objectivism 479
Oulipo 372, 429, 515, 571
Performance and the poetry reading 6, 11, 13, 16, 127, 159, 163, 188, 204, 205, 210, 252, 353, 356, 402, 420, 421, 423, 447, 451, 459, 469, 473, 478, 494, 521, 524, 545, 561, 586, 604, 624, 632, 635, 648, 661, 706, 711, 721, 748, 767, 768, 775, 777, 784, 791
Phenomenology 185, 186, 233
Philosophy 69, 73, 89, 105, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 119, 121, 123, 126, 131, 133, 135, 136, 137, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153, 189, 195, 202, 351, 375, 389, 545, 586, 622, 628, 642, 686
Place and region 6, 16, 282, 310, 338, 402, 448, 475, 520, 527, 617, 658, 695, 699
Poet laureate 6, 569, 625
Poetics 3, 6, 11, 13, 14, 20, 21, 22, 33, 38, 43, 46, 48, 53, 55, 57, 60, 63, 66, 68, 75, 81, 87, 89, 98, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 127, 133, 136, 139, 141, 144, 150, 151, 156, 157, 165, 168, 169, 174, 178, 179, 180, 184, 210, 216, 217, 222, 223, 233, 247, 249, 253, 260, 262, 275, 276, 277, 278, 280, 281, 282, 284, 290, 292, 305, 306, 308, 309, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 320, 323, 324, 325, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 337, 343, 349, 351, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 387, 392, 393, 394, 396, 403, 406, 410, 411, 416, 418, 419, 420, 421, 423, 425, 429, 431, 434, 447, 451, 457, 462, 465, 466, 468, 470, 492, 495, 496, 502, 506, 507, 528, 532, 536, 538, 539, 542, 548, 549, 551, 554, 555, 556, 570, 580, 595, 602, 607, 620, 621, 624, 628, 631, 636, 640, 646, 648, 660, 667, 671, 673, 679, 680, 681, 682, 692, 695, 696, 699, 705, 709, 716, 719, 720, 723, 724, 725, 726, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 738, 739, 740, 743, 745, 746, 748, 751, 753, 756, 762, 766, 767, 768, 774, 775, 777, 779, 781, 791
Politics and poetry 426, 476
Post-structuralism 91, 105, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153
Postmodernism 12, 40, 54, 62, 71, 93, 94, 270, 315, 342, 571
Print vs. digital 6, 36, 48, 53, 55, 92, 106, 133, 136, 150, 151, 165, 167, 168, 169, 178, 179, 249, 266, 280, 384, 385, 388, 400, 402, 406, 447, 454, 459, 468, 469, 491, 515, 539, 587, 592, 593, 601, 626, 652, 657, 754, 761
Prizes and awards 1, 4, 6, 103, 106, 127, 163, 210, 242, 247, 252, 266, 271, 272, 371, 374, 377, 378, 379, 391, 393, 397, 398, 403, 408, 411, 414, 416, 441, 451, 459, 469, 470, 478, 484, 485, 489, 490, 491, 494, 521, 538, 542, 548, 549, 556, 569, 587, 605, 611, 615, 621, 622, 624, 628, 646, 648, 711, 721, 723, 724, 726, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 748, 777, 783, 784, 791

Procedural and constraint writing 548, 642, 686
Prose poem 448, 502, 520, 527, 545, 735, 739, 744, 746, 790
Prosody and meter 86, 102, 124, 174, 180, 184, 260, 509, 631, 657
Psychoanalysis 110, 119, 121, 126, 131, 135, 137, 189, 195, 202, 522, 525, 532, 536, 551, 768, 775
Queer poetics 6, 185, 186, 459, 469, 611, 615, 622, 628, 721
Race and poetry 2, 6, 98, 144, 242, 389, 399, 413, 420, 421, 422, 423, 431, 447, 499, 605, 611, 615, 622, 628, 721
Reading announcements 3, 16, 127, 196, 238, 242, 243, 244, 245, 258, 267, 295, 356, 372, 445, 448, 706, 728, 763
Religion and the sacred 71, 95, 112, 170, 172, 222, 239, 242, 255, 267, 330, 331, 332, 372, 389, 406, 410, 459, 469, 470, 471, 481, 484, 495, 505, 506, 507, 510, 512, 513, 560, 562, 569, 585, 611, 615, 622, 628, 691, 741, 783
Representation 179, 270, 315, 552, 555
Reviewing and criticism 6, 16, 25, 28, 59, 61, 64, 71, 89, 90, 91, 94, 105, 106, 108, 109, 110, 111, 113, 116, 117, 118, 119, 121, 123, 126, 127, 131, 133, 135, 136, 137, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 155, 156, 157, 162, 163, 165, 189, 195, 202, 213, 215, 222, 228, 242, 257, 261, 265, 266, 270, 282, 297, 304, 315, 330, 335, 342, 375, 381, 387, 420, 421, 423, 429, 447, 448, 450, 467, 471, 496, 498, 499, 500, 502, 504, 511, 520, 527, 535, 539, 545, 550, 558, 569, 604, 605, 610, 611, 615, 617, 621, 622, 627, 628, 635, 643, 646, 654, 658, 681, 682, 692, 696, 711, 714, 720, 721, 747, 752, 784
Romanticism 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136, 375, 389
San Francisco Renaissance 691
Science 310, 555, 688, 691, 784
Semiotics 89, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 133, 136
Serial poem 106, 266, 434, 474, 602
Small press publishing 3, 6, 13, 68, 97, 104, 130, 132, 139, 150, 151, 158, 165, 179, 247, 273, 277, 279, 351, 402, 409, 429, 434, 488, 494, 516, 520, 521, 527, 539, 545, 557, 561, 621, 625, 626, 639, 640, 643, 649, 654, 655, 657, 660, 661, 679, 695, 699, 711, 721, 725, 728, 762, 770, 771, 786
Social media 59, 92, 207, 225, 226, 307, 345, 350, 462, 475, 617, 625, 651, 767, 768, 775
Software and code 193, 310, 430, 455, 474, 678
Sonnet 53, 55, 86, 102, 124, 174, 180, 184, 213, 222, 239, 255, 260, 306, 323, 324, 325, 331, 332, 496, 499, 736
Structuralism 91, 105, 126, 131, 135, 137, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153, 189, 195, 202
Subjectivity 133, 139, 225, 226, 230, 239, 240, 255, 256, 278, 279, 294, 302, 303, 304, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 329, 331, 332, 387, 404, 412, 434, 438, 459, 469, 471, 495, 506, 507, 527, 548, 573, 614, 625, 640, 642, 686, 791
Surrealism 186, 190, 191, 192, 203, 214, 218, 515, 686, 743, 790
Terrorism 65, 481, 511, 628, 783
The academy 1, 4, 6, 13, 20, 21, 22, 38, 43, 45, 46, 57, 60, 63, 65, 75, 89, 98, 102, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 118, 123, 124, 127, 133, 136, 144, 178, 210, 215, 221, 242, 243, 244, 245, 247, 251, 252, 258, 266, 269, 280, 282, 286, 288, 295, 322, 361, 364, 365, 370, 375, 389, 402, 406, 409, 412, 416, 417, 420, 421, 423, 424, 425, 436, 446, 447, 448, 456, 457, 459, 462, 464, 469, 478, 479, 484, 485, 489, 496, 497, 501, 502, 505, 510, 511, 512, 513, 515, 521, 545, 560, 561, 569, 586, 587, 594, 605, 607, 611, 615, 621, 622, 624, 628, 632, 641, 644, 646, 648, 652, 657, 661, 662, 680, 689, 703, 706, 711, 721, 737, 741, 742, 747, 754, 780, 783, 784
The body 197, 249, 271, 272, 290, 308, 309, 316, 317, 318, 349, 371, 374, 377, 378, 379, 419, 425, 459, 469, 471, 481, 511, 513, 522, 525, 532, 536, 548, 551, 626, 642, 646, 681, 686
The canon 67, 72, 87, 94, 217
The Gulf War 545
The Holocaust 551
The internet 1, 4, 6, 29, 31, 36, 37, 54, 62, 93, 94, 196, 237, 239, 255, 294, 297, 302, 303, 304, 306, 312, 323, 324, 325, 332, 339, 420, 421, 423, 426, 432, 447, 495, 496, 506, 507, 524, 526, 535, 536, 538, 542, 548, 551, 569, 611, 615, 622, 628, 631, 642, 669, 686, 741, 752
The Iraq war 1, 4, 65, 317, 318, 361, 481, 545, 611, 615, 622, 628, 635, 703
The line 88, 642, 686
The listserv 1, 2, 4, 6, 12, 13, 40, 54, 57, 60, 63, 93, 94, 127, 224, 247, 279, 319, 326, 331, 332, 337, 338, 343, 354, 360, 362, 392, 394, 396, 402, 410, 415, 420, 421, 423, 447, 465, 466, 483, 507, 511, 521, 526, 527, 535, 557, 611, 615, 622, 624, 628, 652, 700, 705, 721, 723, 724, 726, 729, 730, 731, 732, 741, 748, 777, 791
Theatre 6, 13, 94, 170, 172, 247, 252, 271, 272, 298, 331, 332, 333, 334, 339, 361,

371, 374, 377, 378, 379, 389, 415, 435, 440, 448, 459, 469, 478, 481, 498, 500, 517, 523, 524, 528, 560, 569, 624, 691, 721, 747
Torture and Abu Ghraib 6, 481, 632, 783
Translation 6, 13, 15, 16, 29, 31, 36, 37, 40, 48, 53, 54, 55, 61, 62, 70, 71, 86, 88, 93, 94, 102, 124, 160, 174, 180, 184, 206, 210, 213, 220, 222, 237, 239, 242, 247, 255, 260, 296, 299, 327, 328, 340, 342, 358, 359, 368, 370, 402, 406, 451, 498, 499, 500, 545, 569, 572, 574, 575, 577, 580, 581, 582, 588, 591, 595, 605, 631, 632, 648, 672, 679, 757, 762, 783
Vietnam 410, 505, 510, 512, 513, 611, 615, 622, 628, 635
Visual and concrete poetry 14, 78, 95, 112, 125, 141, 162, 261, 320, 333, 334, 455, 457, 480, 526, 568, 570, 595, 601, 688, 690, 691, 695, 699
Visual art 13, 82, 117, 127, 171, 180, 184, 194, 213, 216, 222, 223, 231, 232, 238, 246, 247, 260, 331, 332, 333, 334, 345, 397, 402, 408, 445, 490, 491, 499, 508, 515, 518, 529, 539, 545, 586, 624, 626, 637, 639, 679, 681, 688, 690, 691, 711, 721, 741, 750, 761, 762
Women's writing 94, 103, 139, 150, 151, 165, 252, 459, 469, 478, 620, 728

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 791 in all.

1 FEB 2007

1. Alan Sondheim — Columnist Molly Ivins Dies (fwd)
2. Jesse Crockett — Re: diarrhea of the mouth
3. Nico Vassilakis — Seattle Subtext: Lindsay Hill & CE Putnam 2/7/07
4. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Columnist Molly Ivins Dies (fwd)
5. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: Re: FEB 1 VIRTUAL MARCH ON WASHINGTON (Stop Escalation)
6. aaron tieger — Re: POETICS Digest - 30 Jan 2007 to 31 Jan 2007 (#2007-32)
7. Marcus Bales — Joanna Connors in her column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday…
8. Aaron Belz — Gertrude Stein "Finally George A Vocabulary of Thinking"
9. Adam Fieled — FUNTIME: Lundwall/Fieled on PFS Post
10. Andrew Lundwall — melancholia's tremulous dreadlocks issue 8
11. Glenn Bach — Call for Papers: Stevens and Sound
12. Dubravka Djuric — poets in small cultures and outside gaze
13. Poetry Project — Events at the Poetry Project 2/2 - 2/9
14. UbuWeb — UBUWEB :: Selected Resources - Feb 2007, by Charles Bernstein
15. Stephen Vincent — Onedit #7
16. Jules Boykoff — Halpern/Stadler reading in Portland, OR, 2 February
17. ric carfagna — deconstruction and poetry
18. Haas Bianchi — Chicagopostmodernpoetry is updated with profiles of Linh Dinh and Tony Tost
19. Jason Quackenbush — Re: deconstruction and poetry
20. ALDON L NIELSEN — Re: deconstruction and poetry
21. tlrelf — Re: deconstruction and poetry
22. Jason Quackenbush — Re: deconstruction and poetry

2 FEB 2007

23. George Bowering — Re: deconstruction and poetry
24. Eireene Nealand — Re: deconstruction and poetry
25. Alexander Dickow — dubravka, green integer
26. George Bowering — Re: deconstruction and poetry
27. Simon DeDeo — deconstruction and poetry
28. Barry Schwabsky — Re: deconstruction and poetry
29. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
30. Anny Ballardini — Re: deconstruction and poetry
31. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Haiku Death Match
32. Jeffrey Side — Contribution by Terrie Leigh Relf of NFG Magazine to The Argotist Online "In…
33. Wystan Curnow — Re: deconstruction and poetry
34. jcu — Re: deconstruction and poetry
35. jcu — Re: deconstruction and poetry
36. charles alexander — Re: Haiku Death Match
37. Shaunanne Tangney — Re: Haiku Death Match
38. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: deconstruction and poetry
39. Maria Damon — Re: deconstruction and poetry
40. mIEKAL aND — Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze
41. Christopher Leland Winks — Re: deconstruction and poetry
42. mIEKAL aND — Re: deconstruction and poetry
43. Aldon Nielsen — Re: deconstruction and poetry
44. Bob Marcacci — MiPoRadio's THE COUNTDOWN Episode 19 featuring William Allegrezza!
45. Aldon Nielsen — two more losses

46. Loucks, James — Re: deconstruction and poetry
47. amy king — Re: deconstruction and poetry
48. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Haiku Death Match
49. Simon DeDeo — deconstruction and predictability
50. Maria Damon — Re: deconstruction and poetry
51. Mark Weiss — Re: deconstruction and poetry
52. amy king — Re: deconstruction and predictability
53. Joe Amato — Re: Haiku Death Match
54. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze
55. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Haiku Death Match
56. Alan Sondheim — Re: deconstruction and poetry
57. Loucks, James — Re: deconstruction and poetry
58. Christopher Leland Winks — Re: deconstruction and poetry
59. Alan Sondheim — [WDL] Sondheim's ORDERS OF THE REAL (fwd)
60. Deborah Poe — Re: deconstruction and poetry (la famille de loucks)
61. Dubravka Djuric — Re: dubravka, green integer
62. Stephen Vincent — Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze
63. Marcus Bales — Re: deconstruction and poetry
64. Thomas savage — Re: deconstruction and poetry
65. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: Support the growing effort to prevent war with Iran
66. kevin thurston — Fwd: deconstruction and poetry (on behalf of amy king)
67. Tom W. Lewis — Re: deconstruction and poetry
68. Rob McLennan — seeking
69. Eireene Nealand — Re: deconstruction and poetry
70. Hot Whiskey Press — Critical Work on Michael Palmer, Claude Royet-Journoud, Anne-Marie Albi…
71. Dubravka Djuric — small cultures and innovative poetry
72. Anny Ballardini — Re: deconstruction and poetry
73. Ruth Lepson — Re: deconstruction and poetry
74. Robin Hamilton — Re: deconstruction and poetry
75. cralan kelder — Re: deconstruction and poetry
76. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: deconstruction and poetry
77. Alan Sondheim — Climate report summary (fwd)
78. Jim Andrews — Re: small cultures and innovative poetry
79. Jesse Glass — Is Charles Olson the John Frum of Canadian Experimental Poetry?

3 FEB 2007

80. Alan Sondheim — February 3 1943
81. David Baratier — Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Feb 2007 to 2 Feb 2007 (#2007-34)
82. Jesse Crockett — For poetry \ arts \ cultural web page development
83. Alexander Jorgensen — That is where the US is -
84. Alexander Jorgensen — That is where the US is -
85. David Buuck — on the analytic lyric
86. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
87. Andy Gricevich — Re: deconstruction and poetry
88. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
89. Jason Quackenbush — Re: deconstruction and poetry
90. Jason Quackenbush — Re: dubravka, green integer
91. Alexander Dickow — rousseau and de man
92. Charlie Rossiter — Haiku Death Match
93. Dubravka Djuric — Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze
94. Dubravka Djuric — Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze
95. mIEKAL aND — 50 ANIVERSARIO DE LA POESIA CONCRETA
96. Mairead Byrne — SOS POETRY
97. Ian Randall Wilson — Chapbooks
98. Ann Bogle — Re: phobia...

99. Dodie Bellamy — Orgasm Zine reading and reception

4 FEB 2007

100. Peter Ciccariello — Fox, dreaming of the space between human and beast
101. Charles Bernstein — New M/E /A/N /I/N /G -- Feminist Art: A Reassessment
102. Joe Amato — Re: Haiku Death Match
103. Brandi Homan — Switchback Books Newsletter: Book release, Feb events, and Gatewood Prize
104. Halvard Johnson — Re: Chapbooks
105. Charles Baldwin — Re: rousseau and de man
106. thom donovan — PEACE on A presents : Levi Strauss & Schlesinger : Fri. February 9th 2007
107. Chris Chapman — Re: deconstruction and poetry
108. jcu — Re: deconstruction and poetry
109. Halvard Johnson — Re: deconstruction and poetry
110. Alan Sondheim — Re: deconstruction and poetry
111. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: dubravka, green integer
112. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: 50 ANIVERSARIO DE LA POESIA CONCRETA
113. jcu — Re: deconstruction and poetry
114. amy king — ATTACK ON ADAM'S? & MINI-INTERVIEW - RON PADGETT
115. Martha Deed — Re: SOS POETRY
116. Jesse Crockett — Re: deconstruction and poetry
117. jcu — Re: deconstruction and poetry
118. Jason Quackenbush — Re: deconstruction and poetry
119. Jason Quackenbush — Re: deconstruction and poetry
120. Gwyn McVay — Contact info request; fashion snark
121. Alan Sondheim — Re: deconstruction and poetry

5 FEB 2007

122. thom donovan —)))(((WILD HORSES OF FIRE)))(((CRITICAL OBJECTS)))(((
123. Don Summerhayes — Re: deconstruction and poetry
124. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
125. mIEKAL aND — Today’s guest on Paul Alan's WORDSALAD: mIEKA L aND
126. Chris Chapman — Re: deconstruction and poetry
127. Michael Kelleher — (no subject)
128. Ann Bogle — Re: Today’s guest on Paul Alan's WORDSALAD: mIEKA L aND
129. Alexander Dickow — rousseau and de man, sandy
130. Thomas savage — Re: Chapbooks
131. Alan Sondheim — Re: deconstruction and poetry
132. David Harrison Horton — Re: Chapbooks
133. Thomas savage — Re: deconstruction and poetry
134. Ann Bogle — Audience & publishing
135. Chris Chapman — Re: deconstruction and poetry
136. Barry Schwabsky — Re: deconstruction and poetry
137. Alan Sondheim — Re: deconstruction and poetry
138. Gabrielle Welford — Re: deconstruction and poetry
139. Vernon Frazer — Re: Audience & publishing
140. Dan Waber — ars poetica update
141. Max Middle — 2007 Puddle leaflet subscription available
142. George Bowering — Re: deconstruction and poetry
143. George Bowering — Re: Audience & publishing
144. Vernon Frazer — Re: phobia...
145. Gabrielle Welford — Re: deconstruction and poetry
146. Anny Ballardini — Re: Audience & publishing
147. Ruth Lepson — Re: rousseau and de man
148. Mark Weiss — Re: rousseau and de man
149. Ruth Lepson — Re: rousseau and de man

150. Stephen Vincent — Re: Audience & publishing
151. Stephen Vincent — OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
152. Jason Quackenbush — Re: rousseau and de man
153. Ruth Lepson — Re: rousseau and de man
154. Eric — Re: deconstruction and poetry
155. Adam Morey — Essays on Byrd
156. Joe Amato — Re: Essays on Don Byrd
157. Adam Morey — Re: Essays on Don Byrd
158. Katalanche Press — New from Katalanche: Book 5 by Alan Davies

6 FEB 2007

159. David Applegate — 1st Audio Offering from BAD NOISE
160. Jesse Crockett — To obtain translation for publication permission, need help
161. Barry Schwabsky — Re: deconstruction and poetry
162. Jim Andrews — Homage to Edgardo Antonio Vigo
163. Ram Devineni — Leading Brazilian & Latin-American Filmmakers & Writers at the AIC
164. Alan Sondheim — mr. tumor ms. whiteshort mrs. ocean
165. Vernon Frazer — Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
166. Steve Halle — Jackie K. White @ Seven Corners
167. Mark Weiss — Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
168. Vernon Frazer — Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
169. Mark Weiss — Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
170. Ann Bogle — Re: phobia...
171. Ann Bogle — Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
172. Maria Damon — Re: phobia...
173. Adam Fieled — Robert Archambeau, Aaron Belz on PFS Post
174. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Haiku Death Match
175. Rebecca Weaver — Issue 2 Midway now up!
176. C. A. Conrad —  friends of poetry  Frank Sherlock EMERGENCY FUND  please read ASAP!...
177. David A. Kirschenbaum — Boog City's Email List Dead, Please Resend Yr Name & Email
178. charles alexander — Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
179. Stephen Vincent — Re: Ebooks - OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
180. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Haiku Death Match
181. Michael Heller — Room change. "Beckmann Meditations" at Birkbeck
182. Elizabeth Switaj — Re: Haiku Death Match
183. Rebecca Weaver — Midway URL
184. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Haiku Death Match
185. Paul Nelson — Re: Haiku Death Match
186. Eric Dickey — Re: Haiku Death Match
187. George Bowering — Re: deconstruction and poetry
188. Tim Peterson — QUEERING LANGUAGE READING, Sat Feb 10th at the BPC, 8 PM
189. Don Summerhayes — Re: deconstruction and poetry
190. Gwyn McVay — Re: Haiku Death Match
191. Jesse Crockett — Re: Haiku Death Match
192. Jesse Crockett — Re: Haiku Death Match
193. Jim Andrews — new work from Turkey by Ozcan Turkmen
194. Marcus Bales — February 10 - 24 ⬩ Opening Reception Saturday February 10, 6 - 9 pm for Greg...
195. Deborah Poe — Re: deconstruction and poetry
196. Anselm Berrigan — Fwd: looking for a place for a poet to crash in NYC
197. St. Thomasino — Haiku Death Match / Molotov's Sister
198. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku Death Match
199. Halvard Johnson — Re: Haiku Death Match
200. Pam Grossman — Re: Boog City's Email List Dead, Please Resend Yr Name & Email
201. Ron Silliman — Silliman's Blog: one million visits later

202. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: deconstruction and poetry
203. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Haiku Death Match
204. Michael Tod Edgerton — Re: QUEERING LANGUAGE READING, Sat Feb 10th at the BPC, 8 PM
205. Michael Tod Edgerton — Ignore previous reply, it was for Tim Re: QUEERING LANGUAGE READING,...
206. Nick Moudry — Call for translation submissions

7 FEB 2007

207. Charlie Rossiter — haiku
208. David Baratier — Re: deconstruction and poetry
209. Jesse Glass — The Voyage of the Argonauts--Experimental Music and Poetry
210. Joel Bettridge — Nathaniel Tarn on Thursday at Yale
211. Simon DeDeo — Re: deconstruction and poetry
212. Alan Sondheim — waggle (new work - last of series)
213. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
214. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
215. Philip Metres — Poems of War and Peace, Redux and Apology
216. Camille Martin — Camille Martin and Bill Lavender read in Buffalo
217. Tom W. Lewis — Re: deconstruction and poetry
218. Eric Dickey — Re: Haiku Death Match
219. Stephen Vincent — FW: blogging libby
220. Crane's Bill Books — Re: Haiku Death Match
221. mIEKAL aND — Fwd: Solicitation
222. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Haiku Death Match/HAIKU LIFE
223. Anny Ballardini — Re: Camille Martin and Bill Lavender read in Buffalo
224. cralan kelder — tomorrow night at the sugar factory in amsterdam

8 FEB 2007

225. Charlie Rossiter — haiku
226. Barry Schwabsky — Re: haiku
227. Tom Beckett — new now at e-x-c-h-a-n-g-e-v-a-l-u-e-s...
228. Vernon Frazer — Vernon Frazer in Mad Hatter's Review
229. Michael Kelleher — OlsonNow Updates
230. Stephen Vincent — Re: haiku /Violi
231. Tim Peterson — Poetry in the Presence of Sculpture, Sat Feb 11, 3PM at the Noguchi Museum
232. Tim Peterson — correction (Noguchi sculpture event)
233. Lewis LaCook — The cries of peacocks - Xanax Pop by Lewis LaCook
234. Ann Bogle — Basal distance
235. C. A. Conrad — contributions to the Frank Sherlock EMERGENCY FUND, an update...
236. C. A. Conrad — kari edwards POETRY MEMORIAL EVENT now online
237. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
238. Fulcrum Annual — Poets Kapovich, Maxwell, Nikolayev, Feb 15 in Harvard Square
239. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match/HAIKU LIFE
240. George Bowering — Re: haiku /Violi
241. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Haiku Death Match
242. David-Baptiste Chirot — (behalf of Susan Firer) Kent Johnson at UW-Milwaukee & Illinois We...
243. mIEKAL aND — Re: (behalf of Susan Firer) Kent Johnson at UW-Milwaukee & Illinois Wesleyan
244. George Bowering — Re: (behalf of Susan Firer) Kent Johnson at UW-Milwaukee & Illinois Wesle...
245. Anny Ballardini — Re: (behalf of Susan Firer) Kent Johnson at UW-Milwaukee & Illinois Wesle...
246. heidi arnold — Bone Pagoda, by Susan Tichy
247. Poetry Project — Events at the Poetry Project 2/9 - 2/14

248. Aaron Belz — RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
249. Adam Morey — Jed Rasula's Poetics of Embodiment
250. David Baratier — Re: deconstruction and poetry
251. Barrett Watten — Watten lecture in Minneapolis 2/9
252. Jennifer Karmin — "Growing Up Girl" Chicago reading
253. Alan DeNiro — Invitation: Speculative Poetry mailing list
254. Alan Sondheim — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
255. Chris Stroffolino — HAIKU LIFE
256. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: haiku /Violi
257. Alexander Jorgensen — Fwd: A New BathHouse!
258. Alexander Jorgensen — GEORGE BOWERING
259. Eric — Re: haiku /Violi
260. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku Death Match

9 FEB 2007

261. Jim Andrews — Re: A New BathHouse!
262. Haas Bianchi — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
263. Jesse Glass — Looking for Wikipedia Help
264. C. A. Conrad — UPDATE on the Frank Sherlock EMERGENCY FUND.....thanks Juliana!.....
265. Vernon Frazer — Re: Vernon Frazer in Mad Hatter's Review
266. thom donovan — REMINDER: POA presents David Levi Strauss & Kyle Schlesinger TONIGHT Friday ...
267. susan maurer — robin morgan's new fighting words
268. Jesse Crockett — Listenlight new issue 07
269. David-Baptiste Chirot — behalf of:[WIB-LA] ISRAELI[ANTI-]APARTHEID WEEK - NYC! - Feb. 10 - ...
270. Alexander Jorgensen — The Object in Postmodernism
271. mIEKAL aND — Vagina Monologues Gets New Name
272. mIEKAL aND — Re: Vagina Monologues Gets New Name
273. Factory School — Meet the Press (PS 1 and 2)
274. Aaron Belz — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
275. David A. Kirschenbaum — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
276. George Bowering — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
277. Rob McLennan — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
278. Eric — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
279. Rob McLennan — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
280. L Guevarra — NEW BOOK: Green and Gray
281. Dan Coffey — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
282. L Guevarra — NEW BOOK: Harm.
283. Ren Powell — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
284. Pluto, Anne Elezabeth — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
285. Ren Powell — nevermind. . .
286. Aaron Belz — I was serious...
287. George Bowering — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
288. kevin thurston — Re: I was serious...
289. Suzanne Burns — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
290. Alan Sondheim — Anna Nicole Smith
291. cralan kelder — this interesting fascinate
292. Lewis LaCook — The Fog of Dracula - New Video by Lewis LaCook
293. Ren Powell — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
294. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: haiku
295. George Bowering — Re: GEORGE BOWERING
296. Stephen Vincent — Re: haiku
297. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku dumbness / snobbishness
298. Factory School — Meet the Press (PS 3 and 4)

299. Mark Weiss — Re: haiku
300. Marcus Bales — Re: haiku
301. Ruth Lepson — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
302. Davey Volner — Re: haiku
303. Dan Coffey — Re: haiku

10 FEB 2007

304. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku dumbness / snobbishness
305. Jason Quackenbush — Re: RIP Anna Nicole - The end of an era
306. Joe Amato — Re: haiku
307. Charlie Rossiter — haiku
308. Laura Winton — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
309. Alan Sondheim — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
310. Alan Sondheim — Real-time file access and organization - suggestions?
311. Tim Peterson — EOAGH Issue 3: Queering Language
312. Barry Schwabsky — Re: haiku
313. Ren Powell — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
314. Barry Schwabsky — Re: haiku
315. Wystan Curnow — Re: The Object in Postmodernism
316. Wystan Curnow — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
317. Ren Powell — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
318. Alison Croggon — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
319. Ren Powell — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
320. Dubravka Djuric — Re: small cultures and innovative poetry
321. Alexander Dickow — ANS and F Sherlock
322. Factory School — Meet the Press (PS 5 and 6)
323. Halvard Johnson — Re: haiku
324. Dan Coffey — Re: haiku
325. Joe Amato — Re: haiku
326. Anny Ballardini — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
327. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
328. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: haiku
329. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: haiku
330. Stephen Vincent — Re: haiku / Vorticism
331. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: haiku and Anna Nicole Smith
332. Joe Amato — Re: haiku and Anna Nicole Smith
333. Dubravka Djuric — Re: small cultures and innovative poetry
334. Eireene Nealand — Re: small cultures and innovative poetry
335. Eric — Re: haiku
336. George Bowering — Re: haiku
337. Jason Quackenbush — Re: haiku
338. Nicholas Ruiz III — Symposium
339. Stephen Vincent — Libby Grand Jury / C-Span
340. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: haiku
341. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku Death Match
342. Eireene Nealand — Tarpaulin Sky Celebrates OBERIU--an anthology of Russian Absurdism
343. Ruth Lepson — Re: haiku
344. Jesse Crockett — easy on the ego
345. Larissa Shmailo — Andy Warhol: In His Wake Opening Reception and Reading 2/22
346. clifford — Re: haiku mister lou is

11 FEB 2007

347. Paul Nelson — Haiku
348. Peter Ciccariello — thought, finding form, rising
349. Laura Winton — Re: Anna Nicole Smith
350. Charlie Rossiter — haiku--what are we here for
351. Susan Webster Schultz — Language as Responsibility: new TINFISH chapbook

352. Anny Ballardini — Re: haiku mister lou is
353. Dan Wilcox — Third Thursday Open Mic in Albany, NY
354. Jeffrey Side — CALLING ALL DUSIE POETS
355. Dan Wilcox — Haiku You
356. Haas Bianchi — Iowa City Reading Ray Bianchi and Chris Glomski
357. Marcus Bales — Re: Haiku You
358. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Haiku You
359. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Haiku You
360. Ruth Lepson — Re: Haiku You
361. Factory School — Meet the Press (PS 7 and 8)
362. heidi arnold — Re: Haiku You
363. cris cheek — TNWK Bulletin 1
364. reJennifer Bartlett — Issue 5 of Saint Elizabeth Street
365. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Issue 5 of Saint Elizabeth Street
366. Eric — Re: Haiku You
367. Halvard Johnson — Re: Haiku You
368. Joe Amato — From Kent Johnson re haiku
369. Eric — Re: Haiku You
370. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: From Kent Johnson re haiku
371. Tracey Gagne — Re: Vagina Monologues Gets New Name
372. Ron Starr — Reading at Open Books, Seattle, Tuesday, 2/13
373. Alison Croggon — Re: Haiku You
374. tlrelf — Re: Vagina Monologues Gets New Name
375. Andrew Taylor — CFP: "Stanley Cavell and Literary Criticism" - conference May 2008
376. Mark Weiss — Re: Haiku You
377. Dan Coffey — Re: Vagina Monologues Gets New Name
378. George Bowering — Re: Vagina Monologues Gets New Name
379. Chris Stroffolino — Re: Vagina Monologues Gets New Name
380. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku You
381. Jesse Crockett — Listenlight
382. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku You
383. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Haiku You
384. Mark Weiss — Re: Haiku You
385. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku You

12 FEB 2007

386. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: haiku
387. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: E. E. Cummings
388. Mark Weiss — Re: Haiku You
389. Gabriel Gudding — praise be to the watch
390. Robin Hamilton — Re: praise be to the watch
391. ALDON L NIELSEN — Fwd:Ornette at the Grammies
392. Poetics List — New Poetics List Moderator
393. Vernon Frazer — Re: Ornette at the Grammies
394. susan maurer — Re: New Poetics List Moderator
395. Dan Waber — ars poetica update
396. Jordan Stempleman — Re: New Poetics List Moderator
397. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Fwd:Ornette at the Grammies
398. Andrew Jones — Re: Ornette at the Grammies
399. Alan Sondheim — Re: praise be to the watch
400. charles alexander — CODEX symposium
401. Stephen Baraban — lim
402. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 2.12.07
403. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Ornette at the Grammies
404. ishaq arashi — lost works do what you like and other works
405. Gabriel Gudding — Re: praise to the watch

406. Ken Rumble — Nathaniel Tarn & Janet Rodney, This Saturday, Feb. 17th, 8pm, Internationalist...
407. Dan Waber — first adventures of col and sem
408. David A. Kirschenbaum — Re: Ornette at the Grammies
409. Matt Henriksen — 2/16 Kostas Anagnopoulos & Elisa Gabbert Carroll Gardens Brooklyn
410. heidi arnold — Re: New Poetics List Moderator
411. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Ornette at the Grammies
412. Brian Clements — Teaching Position Announcement--Western Connecticut State University
413. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: praise be to the watch
414. George Bowering — Re: Ornette at the Grammies
415. Vernon Frazer — Re: The Hoohah Dialogues
416. ALDON L NIELSEN — Re: Ornette at the Grammies
417. Joel Weishaus — "The Way North" North-2 Text-1
418. Jesse Crockett — Re: praise to the watch
419. eleni Stecopoulos — Re: Jed Rasula's Poetics of Embodiment
420. Poetics List — Poetics List Welcome Message
421. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: Poetics List Welcome Message
422. Alexander Jorgensen — Our messages are being monitored
423. Tom W. Lewis — Re: Poetics List Welcome Message
424. Maria Damon — Fwd: Dylan symposium registration now OPEN
425. Dan Coffey — Re: Jed Rasula's Poetics of Embodiment
426. Tony Trigilio — Court Green #4 / Dossier: Political Poetry
427. Robin Hamilton — Re: praise to the watch
428. Tony Trigilio — Sorry, typo on the Court Green URL
429. Elizabeth Treadwell — Place & Wertheim at Small Press Traffic Fri 2/16
430. Eric — Re: Our messages are being monitored
431. Vernon Frazer — Re: Our messages are being monitored
432. Anselm Berrigan — Fwd: Bowery Broadside Series 2,3,4 Pass it on!
433. reJennifer Bartlett — BugHoouse
434. Potree Journal — Call for submissions
435. Catherine Daly — Re: The Hoohah Dialogues
436. Jennifer Karmin — Chicago Performance Symposium: February 22-23
437. Stephen Vincent — Mom w/first published poem
438. Chris Stroffolino — Re: haiku
439. Alison Croggon — Re: haiku

13 FEB 2007

440. Mark Weiss — Re: The Hoohah Dialogues
441. Joel Lewis — ornette & the grammies
442. Martha Deed — Re: Mom w/first published poem
443. Paul Nelson — Re: Mom w/first published poem
444. David A. Kirschenbaum — Jill Stengel Featured at www.notellmotel.org/
445. Marcus Bales — Two Events At Gallery 324 Saturday February 24
446. Jesse Glass — Your Chance To Learn What Haiku Really Is
447. Anny Ballardini — Re: Poetics List Welcome Message
448. Tarpaulin Sky — READING: Jenny Boully, Jordan Davis, Douglas A. Martin, Max Winter
449. Herb Levy — Steve Swallow on Robert Creeley
450. L Trent — New Issue of 21 Stars Review
451. Pierre Joris — Albany, NY Performance
452. mIEKAL aND — New literary twist added to laundry cycle
453. Gabriel Gudding — on the telepathic nature of the social
454. Dan Coffey — Re: Steve Swallow on Robert Creeley
455. Jim Andrews — David Jhave Johnston
456. amy king — One Way of Getting It Out There
457. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: One Way of Getting It Out There
458. Adam Fieled — Steve Halle, Tom Orange on PFS Post

459. Tim Peterson — Belladonna 2/13 w Deborah Meadows & Tim Peterson
460. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Mom w/first published poem
461. blacksox — Not getting through
462. paolo javier — Crossing the Border Reading/Panel @ NYU, March 2nd, 6 pm
463. Ruth Lepson — Re: Mom w/first published poem
464. Jena Osman — visiting writer position
465. Cati Porter — New to the list / Call for submissions
466. Didi Menendez — Re: New to the list / Call for submissions
467. Simon DeDeo — rhubarb is susan
468. Daniel Godston — Swallow & Hersch
469. Ruth Lepson — Re: Belladonna 2/13 w Deborah Meadows & Tim Peterson
470. Ron Silliman — Silliman's Blog
471. Catherine Daly — Fwd: Nautilus Book Awards - Final Call for Entries - Deadline Feb. 15
472. ishaq arashi — Condi Rice Raps

14 FEB 2007

473. Laura Winton — Re: New literary twist added to laundry cycle
474. Rod Smith — New Tom Raworth, Caller and Other Pieces, from Edge Books
475. David A. Kirschenbaum — A 40th Birthday Celebration for Kurt Cobain
476. jUStin!katKO — Re: Mom w/first published poem
477. Dubravka Djuric — march in belgrade cultural center
478. Ruth Lepson — Re: "Growing Up Girl" Chicago reading
479. Andrew Taylor — CFP: 'George Oppen: A Centenary Conference' - conference
480. Dan Waber — hush suite, 6 by Jenny Sampirisi
481. Shankar, Ravi (English) — Re: praise to the watch
482. heidi arnold — Re: march in belgrade cultural center
483. heidi arnold — Re: march in belgrade cultural center
484. William Allegrezza — Series A in Chicago--Next Tuesday Sterling Plumpp
485. Tom Orange — Rodney Jones wins $100,000 Poetry Prize
486. Peter Ciccariello — For this was on seynt Volantynys day
487. Joel Weishaus — Cecil Touchon
488. Rob McLennan — fwd - [[redacted]: One year on]
489. Thomas savage — Re: Rodney Jones wins $100,000 Poetry Prize
490. Catherine Daly — Re: Rodney Jones wins $100,000 Poetry Prize
491. Chris Stroffolino — Re: Rodney Allen Jones Prize
492. Lauren Sorensen — Frank Kuenstler
493. Alexander Jorgensen — AL FRANKEN TO RUN FOR US SENATE - OFFICIAL
494. Tim Peterson — Julie E. Patton and M. Nourbese Philip - SEGUE at BPC, Sat Feb 17, 4 PM
495. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku dumbness / snobbishness
496. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku Death Match
497. Gabriel Gudding — the politics of the pocket -- (was watch thread)
498. Carol Novack — Mad Hatters' Review Issue 7 OUT OUT OUT OF IT INTO IT!
499. Tom Beckett — Re: Galatea Resurrects #5 is Launched
500. Carol Novack — Issue 7 of Mad Hatters' Review has arrived! Submit 2/15 through 3/1
501. gfrym — Re: the politics of the pocket -- (was watch thread)
502. Slaughter, William — Notice: Mudlark
503. Adam Morey — Rasula's Email Address
504. Halvard Johnson — Lynda Schor in Madhatters' Review 7
505. Stephen Vincent — Re: the politics of the pocket -- (was watch thread)

15 FEB 2007

506. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku dumbness / snobbishness
507. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku dumbness / snobbishness
508. George Quasha — Quasha this week at Baumgartner, White Box, ZONE Chelsea, & CAA ARTspace
509. Ann Bogle — Ana Verse
510. Mark Weiss — Re: the politics of the pocket -- (was watch thread)

511. heidi arnold — call for poems:
512. Stephen Vincent — Re: the politics of the pocket -- (was watch thread)
513. Halvard Johnson — Re: the politics of the pocket -- (was watch thread)
514. Adam Fieled — Eric Elshtain on PFS Post
515. Joel Bettridge — Book Arts Conference, New Haven, CT April 2007 Update
516. Rob McLennan — Artie Gold 1947-2007
517. Steve Dalachinsky — Fw: Vision Dance Music at Symphony Space February 21 to 24
518. Steve Dalachinsky — Fw: hello everyone we're back and bolder than ever some Poetry gigs f...
519. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Quasha this week at Baumgartner, White Box, ZONE Chelsea, & CAA ARTsp...
520. Tarpaulin Sky — Two new books: Max Winter's _The Pictures_ & Sandy Flo rian's _32 Pedals an...
521. Poetry Project — Events at the Poetry Project 2/19 - 2/21
522. Alan Sondheim — Reel Histrionic
523. Chris Stroffolino — Re: Quasha with Halley and Ringgold at CAA ARTspace

16 FEB 2007

524. Rod Smith — Flarf! Baltimore & DC i.e. 2/17, DCAC 2/18
525. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Reel Histrionic
526. cralan kelder — Emmett Williams passes
527. Editors, Tarpaulin Sky Press & Journal — Two New Books: Max Winter's _The Pictures_ & Sandy...
528. susan maurer — Re: Quasha with Halley and Ringgold at CAA ARTspace
529. Daniel Godston — Black Mountain Collective event tonight
530. Alexander Jorgensen — ALL POETS - "The Internationale became the anthem of international so...
531. C. A. Conrad — TOMORROW NY FUND RAISER FOR FRANK SHERLOCK ==O==O==
532. Alan Sondheim — Re: Reel Histrionic
533. jUStin!katKO — Tonight in Chicago
534. susan maurer — waterworks
535. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku dumbness / snobbishness
536. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Reel Histrionic
537. Simon DeDeo — two essays on rhubarb
538. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku as a genre
539. Patrick F. Durgin — Hannah Weiner's Open House / Pre-orders
540. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: visiting writer position
541. Raymond Bianchi — Re: visiting writer position
542. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Haiku as a genre
543. Alison Croggon — Re: Haiku as a genre
544. Alexander Jorgensen — OFFLIST : Oregon woman, 84, pleads guilty in boy's sex abuse case
545. Jennifer Karmin — Red Rover Series / Experiment #11
546. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Haiku as a genre

17 FEB 2007

547. Holly Crawford — Re: Sound Art in a Limo, NYC Feb 23-25
548. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku as a genre
549. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku as a genre
550. Alan Sondheim — Qbico 56 LP review (someone had to)
551. Alan Sondheim — Re: Reel Histrionic
552. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: Reel Histrionic
553. Dan Waber — Anaclastic alphabet, by Amira Hanafi
554. Tony Trigilio — Re: visiting writer position
555. Alan Sondheim — Re: Reel Histrionic
556. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Haiku as a genre
557. Barrett Watten — Publication of THE GRAND PIANO, PART 2
558. Christine Hamm — Reviews of my work

559. Catherine Daly — Fwd: POETRY SUPER HIGHWAY less than 2 weeks left to join the Great Poetry ...
560. Gabriel Gudding — Re: the politics of the pocket & the watch
561. amy king — MIPO -- Friday, Feb. 23rd @ 7 P.M.

18 FEB 2007

562. Pierre Joris — Recent Nomadics Posts
563. Dan Coffey — another Susan Howe/David Grubbs cd collaboration!
564. mIEKAL aND — Bon Voy age Emmett!
565. Alan Sondheim — old text illustrated by its future anterior
566. Ruth Lepson — FW: haha (in norwegian)
567. amy king — O VALENTINE, O VIOLENCE -- NEW WORK UP
568. Jim Andrews — Jean-Pierre Balpe on "Hyperfiction"
569. Daniel Godston — $200 million: The Poetry Foundation in The New Yorker
570. Deborah Poe — chinese new year (request for words on duilian)
571. Jesse Glass — Fwd: time4time : Jesse Glass
572. Simon DeDeo — query from Richard Fox
573. ishaq arashi — lost works do what you like and other works

19 FEB 2007

574. Mark Weiss — Re: query from Richard Fox
575. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: query from Richard Fox
576. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku as a genre
577. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: query from Richard Fox
578. Nicholas Karavatos — Beware of yourselves! Beware of each other!
579. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku as a genre
580. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: query from Richard Fox
581. Anny Ballardini — Re: query from Richard Fox
582. Herb Levy — Re: query from Richard Fox
583. Dan Waber — ars poetica update
584. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Haiku as a genre
585. amy king — EVIE SHOCKLEY GUEST EDITS MIPOESIAS
586. cris cheek — this week in Oxford Ohio
587. sandra de 1913 — 1913's Rozanova Prize
588. Mark Weiss — Re: query from Richard Fox
589. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Haiku as a genre
590. Alan Sondheim — more from performanceville
591. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: query from Richard Fox
592. Jim Andrews — on print vs online books
593. amy king — Re: on print vs online books
594. Christina Milletti — Exhibit X Fiction Presents Dave Kress Feb 21
595. alexander saliby — Re: chinese new year (request for words on duilian)
596. George Bowering — Re: Beware of yourselves! Beware of each other!
597. Betsy Andrews — New Jersey reading venues?
598. Andrew Jones — Re: Beware of yourselves! Beware of each other!
599. Stephen Vincent — Re: Beware of yourselves! Beware of each other!
600. Halvard Johnson — Re: New Jersey reading venues?
601. Jim Andrews — Re: on print vs online books
602. Robert Lunday — Poetics Blog
603. Michael Rothenberg — Friends of Big Bridge
604. Aaron Vidaver — Open Text Reading Series #1: Peter Culley (Vancouver)
605. Eric Dickey — To Topos: Poetry International
606. Betsy Andrews — Maureen Owen's email
607. Catherine Daly — Princeton
608. Tisa Bryant — Last Call for Free Books from Leon Works!
609. jkrick — New EPC Paul Violi Page
610. Carol Novack — soliciting submissions for mad hatters' review --

20 FEB 2007

611. Alan Sondheim — [stuff-it] FW: Dixie Chicks, part of tradition of progressive country music...
612. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku as a genre
613. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku as a genre
614. Tisa Bryant — Hi-5 Virus Alert: It Not Me Do It!
615. Tony Hooper — Re: [stuff-it] FW: Dixie Chicks, part of tradition of progressive country mus...
616. Joel Weishaus — "The Way North" 2 text-2
617. David A. Kirschenbaum — NYC Tonight: A 40th Birthday Celebration for Kurt Cobain
618. Adam Fieled — Ann Bogle on PFS Post
619. Nick Piombino — Unnameable Book Party
620. Jennifer Karmin — "Growing Up Girl"
621. Clay Banes — Saturday, FEB. 24 @ 7:30PM: Jill Magi, Dana Teen Lomax, Sarah Rosenthal
622. Eric Dickey — Re: [stuff-it] FW: Dixie Chicks, part of tradition of progressive country mus...
623. Thomas savage — Re: Beware of yourselves! Beware of each other!
624. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 2.20.07
625. amy king — FWD on behalf of a friend....
626. Elizabeth Treadwell — Jill Magi with Jonny Farrow at SPT this Fri 2/23
627. Thomas Devaney — Devaney on Bernstein's Girly Man
628. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: [stuff-it] FW: Dixie Chicks, part of tradition of progressive c...
629. Simon DeDeo — rhubarb is susan
630. John Foley — New FlashPoint #9 is Up!
631. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: From Kent Johnson re haiku
632. Caroline Crumpacker — Bilingual Reading Series!
633. Alan Sondheim — Howtodisappear

21 FEB 2007

634. Ron Silliman — Silliman's Blog
635. Dan Wilcox — Poetry, Film & Talk -- IVAW Fundraiser
636. David-Baptiste Chirot — (on behalf of Kent Johnson) FW: "Kent Johnson's" poems at Flashpoint
637. Steve Dalachinsky — 1 - sorry everyone a cancellation
638. Dan Waber — New River Journal's new issue
639. patrick dunagan — Blue Press Poets a reading and conversation 2/22 @ SF State Poetry Center
640. Nate Pritts — 2 new chapbooks from H_NGM_N:
641. Gabriel Gudding — a dalkey book cometh sooner
642. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku as a genre
643. Bob Grumman — Re: a dalkey book cometh sooner
644. Gabriel Gudding — 3 brilliant books from BlazeVox

22 FEB 2007

645. Seena Liff — Re: Yuri Kapralov's art
646. Jane Sprague — Palm Press @ The Smell: 2/25/07
647. blacksox — Haiku
648. Joel Bettridge — TODAY: Nathaniel Tarn at Beinecke Library
649. John Roche — Cadillac Cicatrix
650. Max Middle — soundpo video
651. DJ SPOOKY — Yoko Ono and Dj Spooky Present "Rising"
652. Poetry Project — Events at the Poetry Project 2/26 - 2/28
653. Stephen Vincent — T-Shirt Without Vowels
654. Bob Grumman — Re: Grumman's Blog
655. Tisa Bryant — Tisa Bryant Readings and Encyclopedia Project Events in NYC
656. Karl-Erik Tallmo — more road signs

23 FEB 2007

657. David A. Kirschenbaum — Boog City presents Ecopoetics, Thurs. March 1
658. Aaron Vidaver — Review of Switch & Shift / Post-Prairie by Michael Barnholden (from The Rai…
659. CA Conrad — EAR INN reading: Daniel Becker, CAConrad, Douglas Martin
660. justin sirois — K. Lorraine Graham's Moving Walkways chapdisc
661. amy king — TONIGHT -- KNOX, QUEYRAS, & BOHM
662. Nicholas Karavatos — South Asian Diaspora Poetry Anthology in English?
663. susan maurer — no listings from africa
664. susan maurer — Poets Wear Prada Publication Party
665. Peter Ciccariello — Re: T-Shirt Without Vowels
666. Adam Fieled — Raymond Bianchi on PFS Post
667. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: no listings from africa
668. Dan Waber — caffeine, nicotine, benzedrine
669. Michael Dylan Welch — Re: Haiku
670. Michael Kelleher — OlsonNow Updates
671. Lewis LaCook — Hide the pills, how little thing - Xanax Pop, by Lewis LaCook
672. Richard Jeffrey Newman — Persian Literature CFP
673. Aaron Belz — March 8: Woodward, Miller, Gallaher
674. Stephen Vincent — Re: no listings from africa
675. blacksox — Re: Haiku
676. Eric Dickey — Re: no listings from africa
677. ozcan turkmen — The Disturbed Tree - ["Workman of Child" site update]
678. Jennifer Karmin — Submissions: Version>07
679. Burt Kimmelman — New Chapbook by Burt Kimmelman Now Available
680. Charlotte Mandel — Forward re Princeton Encyclopedia

24 FEB 2007

681. Ricejunk2 — psssst. 6 issues march-august. hey, what did you just say? speak up!
682. Ricejunk2 — You must reply to this with a poem
683. Ricejunk2 — Re: laundering words
684. Jason Quackenbush — Re: no listings from africa
685. Alan Sondheim — lifeprose symposium issues
686. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Haiku as a genre
687. Jim Andrews — Anal Canadian hockey statistics poem
688. mIEKAL aND — a classic Bern Porter story making the rounds
689. mIEKAL aND — Re: laundering words
690. Dan Waber — decision tree invite
691. Stephen Vincent — Re: a classic Bern Porter story making the rounds
692. heidi arnold — Re: You must reply to this with a poem
693. Alexander Jorgensen — Fwd: reading friday march 2: atlanta @ apache cafe

25 FEB 2007

694. JT Chan — Poetry Sz Issue 22 now online
695. Tom Beckett — Fwd: New Books from Otoliths
696. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: You must reply to this with a poem 697. Richard Jeffrey Newman — Re: You must reply to this with a poem
698. EH — Sartre quote
699. Vernon Frazer — New Books from Otoliths (posted on behalf of Mark Young)
700. mIEKAL aND — why the moderation?
701. Ann Bogle — Travel to the AWP
702. holsapple1 — Gene Frumkin 1928--2007
703. Camille Martin — AWP panel
704. Tom Beckett — NEW NOW AT E-X-C-H-A-N-G-E-V-A-L-U-E-S
705. Vernon Frazer — Re: why the moderation?
706. Camille Martin — AWP event
707. P Ganick — new picture series, AMOEBAE
708. Alexander Jorgensen — Does anyone have any info on "The Lyre" of Wisconsin

709. ALDON L NIELSEN — poetics justice
710. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: The Lyre - Update

26 FEB 2007

711. Jules Boykoff — Czerski, Fitterman, & Hayes read in Portland, OR this Saturday
712. Alan Sondheim — Text from 2 Chicago Openport Performance
713. Don Summerhayes — Re: Sartre quote
714. jUStin!katKO — cris cheek | THE CHURCH – THE SCHOOL – THE BEER
715. Dan Waber — ars poetica update
716. Maria Damon — Re: poetics justice
717. Brigitte Byrd — Ahsahta Press Reading in Atlanta
718. Adam Morey — Re: FW: The Lyre - Update
719. Tom W. Lewis — Re: poetics justice
720. Thomas savage — Re: You must reply to this with a poem
721. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 2.26.07
722. Halvard Johnson — RIP Gene Frumkin (1928-2007)
723. amy king — Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
724. Metta Sama — Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
725. Elizabeth Treadwell — Cox & Kim at SPT this SAT, 3/3
726. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
727. Geoffrey Gatza — AWP Atlanta - see you there!
728. Elizabeth Treadwell — Treadwell news of the week....
729. Alexander Jorgensen — Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
730. Deborah Poe — Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
731. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
732. kevin thurston — Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
733. Aaron Belz — Russell Edson - what school is he?
734. David Applegate — Bad Noise hits hard with "NO"
735. Jordan Stempleman — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
736. Halvard Johnson — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
737. Taylor Brady — Fwd: [NewMusic] RIP: Leroy Jenkins
738. Mark Weiss — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
739. Mairead Byrne — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
740. Sina Queyras — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
741. David-Baptiste Chirot — Freedom of Expression Rights/Said Mural at San Francisco State Univ...
742. Joel Weishaus — "The Way North" North-2 text-3
743. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
744. cralan kelder — progenitor Edson
745. Aaron Belz — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
746. Jacqueline Gens — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
747. Tom Orange — Leroy Jenkins 1932-2007
748. Alexander Jorgensen — Amy Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
749. Charles Bernstein — Maggie O'Sullivan's Body of Work
750. Marcus Bales — March 3 and March 10 Events at Gallery 324 in the Galleria downtown.
751. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
752. Michael Rothenberg — Celebrate Golden Handcuff's Review at Moe's
753. Mark Weiss — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
754. mIEKAL aND — REPRINTING OF "UKANHAVYRFUCKINCITIBAK." by d.a. levy

27 FEB 2007

755. David Baratier — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
756. David Baratier — Re: POETICS Digest - 25 Feb 2007 to 26 Feb 2007 (#2007-57)
757. Gabriel Gudding — Re: Russell Edson - Daniil Kharms
758. Steve Dalachinsky — 1 Fw: hello everyone we're back and bolder than ever some Poetry gig...
759. Steve Dalachinsky — 1

760. Pierre Joris — Recent Nomadics Blog Posts
761. charles alexander — help the Steinfeld artists, please
762. Burt Kimmelman — Burt Kimmelman's New Chapbook Available
763. Raymond Bianchi — Glomski Bianchi Reading at Prairie Lights in Iowa City
764. DJ SPOOKY — Lou Reed and Dj Spooky Concert at Town Hall NYC 3/1/07
765. Brigitte Byrd — Ahsahta Press Reading in Atlanta: Room change
766. Charles Bernstein — Fwd: HOW2 SPECIAL ISSUE ON WOMEN AND ECO-POETICS
767. Charlie Rossiter — Poems: to post or not to post
768. Halvard Johnson — Re: Poems: to post or not to post
769. Ron Silliman — Silliman's Blog: Bad Moon Rising
770. Zoe Ward — Good drinks & small presses in ATL
771. David A. Kirschenbaum — Last Call: Advertise in Boog City 39
772. michael-chasar — CFP: Poetry & Popular Culture (4/16/07; MMLA '07)
773. charles alexander — sorry. wrong email
774. charles alexander — sorry. wrong email
775. Halvard Johnson — Re: Poems: to post or not to post
776. Adam Fieled — Jordan Stempleman on PFS Post
777. Tony Hooper — Re: Amy Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?
778. Bill Berkson — Bill Berkson Reading
779. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
780. Tony Trigilio — Court Green #5 / Call for Submissions
781. Lewis LaCook — I saw a burning car on 28th Street - Xanax Pop, by Lewis LaCook
782. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: wood's lot today: 3 Otoliths poets: CRONIN, STAMMER, CHIROT
783. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: Guardian Unlimited Books: 'Inside the wire' Poets of Gitmo
784. lcabri — Fred Wah leads second poetry discussion in new series
785. Dr. Barry S. Alpert — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
786. aaron tieger — CARVE 8 now available

28 FEB 2007

787. clifford — laundrypoettry
788. CA Conrad — FRANK SHERLOCK EMERGENCY FUND benefit show 3/18 in Philadelphia = = = = = =
789. Bob Marcacci — THE COUNTDOWN Episode 20 Featuring ARLENE ANG
790. Shad Marsh — Re: Russell Edson - what school is he?
791. Thomas savage — Re: Amy Re: You must reply to this with a poem - creative?

1. Alan Sondheim

Columnist Molly Ivins Dies (fwd)

Thu 1 Feb 2007

This message is in MIME format. The first part should be readable text, while the remaining parts are likely unreadable without MIME-aware tools.

--0-2087307194-1170307158=:8549

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 22:35:39 -0500
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Columnist Molly Ivins Dies

Columnist Molly Ivins Dies
By JOHN MORITZ STAR-TELEGRAM AUSTIN BUREAU

Star-Telegram (Ft. Worth, TX)
http://www.dfw.com/mld/dfw/16591107.htm
January 31, 2007

AUSTIN â€" Molly Ivins, whose biting columns mixed liberal populism with an irreverent Texas wit, died at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday at her home in Austin after an up-and-down battle with breast cancer she had waged for seven years. She was 62.

Ms. Ivins, the Star-Telegram's political columnist for nine years ending in 2001, had written for the New York Times, the Dallas Times-Herald and Time magazine and had long been a sought-after pundit on the television talk-show circuit to provide a Texas slant on issues ranging from President Bushâ€™s pedigree to the culture wars rooted in the 1960s.

"She was magical in her writing," said Mike Blackman, a former Star-Telegram executive editor who hired Ms. Ivins at the newspaperâ€™s Austin bureau in 1992, a few months after the Times-Herald ceased publication. "She could turn a phrase in such a way that a pretty hard-hitting point didnâ€™t hurt so bad."

A California native who moved to Houston as a young child with her family, Ms. Ivins was diagnosed with breast cancer in 1999. Two years later after enduring a radical mastectomy and rounds of chemotherapy, Ms.

Ivins was given a 70 percent chance of remaining cancer-free for five years. At the time, she said she liked the odds.

But the cancer recurred in 2003, and again last year. In recent weeks, she had suspended her twice-weekly syndicated column, allowing guest writers to use the space while she underwent further treatment. She made a brief return to writing in mid-January, urging readers to resist President Bushâ€™s plan to increase the number of U.S. troops deployed to Iraq. She likened her call to an old-fashioned "newspaper crusade."

"We are the people who run this country," Ms Ivins said in the column published in the Jan. 14 edition of the Star-Telegram. "We are the deciders. And every single day, every single one of us needs to step outside and take some action to help stop this war.

"Raise hell," she continued. "Think of something to make the ridiculous look ridiculous. Make our troops know weâ€™re for them and are trying to get them out of there. Hit the streets to protest Bush's proposed surge."

She ended the piece by endorsing the peace march in Washington scheduled for Saturday. 01-27 "We need people in the streets, banging pots and pans and demanding, "Stop it, now!' " she wrote.

The spice of Texas

Born Mary Tyler Ivins on Aug. 30, 1944, in Monterey, Calif., Ms. Ivins was raised in the upscale River Oaks section of Houston. She earned her journalism degree at elite Smith College in Massachusetts in 1965. From there she ventured to Minnesota, taking a job as a police reporter for the Minneapolis Tribune.

Growing weary of the winters in the Upper Great Lakes and missing the spice of Texas food and its politics, Ms. Ivins moved to Austin to become co-editor of the Texas Observer, long considered the stateâ€™s liberal conscience.

Nadine Eckhardt, the former wife of the late Texas novelist Billy Lee Bramer and who later married former U.S. Rep. Bob Eckhardt of Houston, said Ivins soon made herself a fixture in the Austin political and cocktail party scene in the early 1970s.

"Thatâ€™s where she became the Molly Ivins as weâ€™ve come to know her," said Eckhardt, an Ivins friend for nearly four decades. "The Observer had such wonderful writers doing such wonderful stories at the time, and Molly was always right in the middle of everything."

Her writing flair caught the attention of the New York Times, which hired her to cover city hall, then later moved her to the statehouse bureau in Albany. Later, she was assigned to the Timesâ€™ Rocky Mountain bureau in Denver.

Even though she wrote the Timesâ€™ obituary for Elvis Presley in 1977, Ms. Ivins said later that she and the sometimes stodgy Times proved to be a mismatch. In a 2002 interview with the Star-Telegram, Ms. Ivins recalled that she would write about something that "squawked like a $2 fiddle" only to have a Times editor rewrite it to say "as an inexpensive instrument." Ms Ivins said she would mention a "beer belly" and The Times would substitute "a protuberant abdomen.â€

So Ms. Ivins returned to Austin in 1982 to become a columnist for the Dallas Times-Herald and reconnecting with such political figures as Ann Richards, who would later become governor, and Bob Bullock, then the hard-drinking state comptroller who later wielded great power as lieutenant governor.

Trademark language

The column provided Ms. Ivins the freedom to express her views with the colorful language that would become her trademark. She called such figures as Ross Perot, former U.S. Sen. John Tower and ex-Gov. Bill Clements "runts with attitudes." As a candidate for governor, George W. Bush became "Shrub," a nicknamed she never tired of using.

Surprised became "womperjawed." A visibly angry person would "throw a walleyed fit."

Ms. Ivins, who was single and had no children, told readers about her first bout with cancer in a matter-of-fact afterword in an otherwise ordinary column.

"I have contracted an outstanding case of breast cancer, from which I fully intend to recover," she wrote on Dec. 14, 1999. "I donâ€™t need get-well cards, but I would like the beloved women readers to do something for me: Go. Get. The. Damn. Mammogram. Done."

Ms. Ivins authored three books and co-authored a fourth. She was a three-time finalist for a Pulitzer Prize and had served on Amnesty Internationalâ€™s Journalism Network, but the iconoclastic writer often said that her two highest honors were being banned from the conservative campus of Texas A&M University and having the Minneapolis police name their mascot pig after her when she covered the department as a reporter during one of her first jobs in the newspaper business.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

John Moritz, [redacted]

Â© 2007 Star-Telegram.com and wire service sources. All Rights Reserved. http://www.mercurynews.com

---

Portside aims to provide material of interest to people on the left that will help them to interpret the world and to change it.

Submit via email: [redacted]
Submit via the Web: portside.org/submit
Frequently asked questions: portside.org/faq
Subscribe: portside.org/subscribe
Unsubscribe: portside.org/unsubscribe
Account assistance: portside.org/contact
Search the archives: portside.org/archive

--0-2087307194-1170307158=:8549--

↑ Index

2. Jesse Crockett
Re: diarrhea of the mouth
Thu 1 Feb 2007

Thanks, member. You've saved me another day of having to look at myself in the mirror.

[redacted] wrote:
> Dear members:
>
> Some people have diarrhea of the mouth. It is a medical condition, but > it doesn't mean we all have to pay attention to, well, the product of > said medical condition. That is what toilets are for. And delete > buttons, ok. There is always the "I WIN" button... available for when > your computer OR another human thinks it has the best of you.
>
> Poetry discussions are so much better than crap-slinging. Isn't there > enough raw-ness in language and its composition, that we can avoid the > raw-sewage stuff? I know there are more critical discussions, > especially of ideas (which are lacking in other conversations these > days), in this listserv's future. Otherwise, why are any of us here.
>
> Write on! Listen and read and hear and say and smell (if you > dare)...all that there is for you here online and everywhere... But > please stay home if you need to be near the crapper, T. F. Rice
>
>
> "We pretend the raw bloom remains
> unshattered
> by the ravishing dregs of lost humanity"
> ...just a little something i wrote when i was a teenager... he-hee...
> we havent come very far since then as a human race...

↑ Index

3. Nico Vassilakis
Seattle Subtext: Lindsay Hill & CE Putnam 2/7/07
Thu 1 Feb 2007

Subtext continues its monthly series of experimental writing with readings by Lindsay Hill & Chris Putnam at Richard Hugo House on Wednesday, February 7, 2007. Donations for admission will be taken at the door on the evening of the performance. The reading starts at 7:30pm.

Lindsay Hill was born in San Francisco in 1952. Graduate of Bard College. Began writing under influence of Robert Duncan, Tarn, Rexroth and Rilke. First book Avelaval (Oyez, Berkeley 1974). Work has appeared in numerous journals including Sulfur, Caliban and New American Writing. Four other books including most recent Contango (Singing Horse). Past co-editor of poetry/poetics journal Facture. Current focus on sentence-based collage writing. Living in Portland, OR with wife, Nita, and children Ian and Helena. Member of the Spare Room poetry collective.

C.E. Putnam maintains P.I.S.O.R. (The Putnam Institute for Space Opera Research). Some of his chapbooks include Manic Box (2001), Did you ever hear of a thing like that? (2001), Things Keep Happening (2003), and Crawlspace, a forthcoming collaboration with Daniel Comiskey. For this February reading, C.E.
Putnam will read cosmic-sex/earthly-love poems. See
http://www.pisor-industries.org

The future Subtext schedule is:

March 7, 2007 Rob Fitterman (NYC) & Bryant Mason
April 4, 2007 TBD
May 2, 2007 Charles Alexander (Tucson AZ) and Tim Risher
June 6, 2007 Subtext 13th Anniversary Reading - Details TBA

For info on these & other Subtext events, see our website:
http://www.speakeasy.org/~subtext

This Subtext event is co-sponsored by Richard Hugo House.

↑ Index

4. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: Columnist Molly Ivins Dies (fwd)
Thu 1 Feb 2007

This is sad, indeed. For me, ranks up there with the passing of so many "heroic" voices.

AJ

--- Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:

> ---------- Forwarded message ----------
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 22:35:39 -0500
> From: [redacted]

To: [redacted]
Subject: Columnist Molly Ivins Dies

Columnist Molly Ivins Dies
By JOHN MORITZ STAR-TELEGRAM AUSTIN BUREAU

Star-Telegram (Ft. Worth, TX)
http://www.dfw.com/mld/dfw/16591107.htm
January 31, 2007

AUSTIN â€" Molly Ivins, whose biting columns mixed liberal populism with an irreverent Texas wit, died at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday at her home in Austin after an up-and-down battle with breast cancer she had waged for seven years. She was 62.

Ms. Ivins, the Star-Telegram's political columnist for nine years ending in 2001, had written for the New York Times, the Dallas Times-Herald and Time magazine and had long been a sought-after pundit on the television talk-show circuit to provide a Texas slant on issues ranging from President Bushâ€™s pedigree to the culture wars rooted in the 1960s.

"She was magical in her writing," said Mike Blackman, a former Star-Telegram executive editor who hired Ms. Ivins at the newspaperâ€™s Austin bureau in 1992, a few months after the Times-Herald ceased publication. "She could turn a phrase in such a way that a pretty hard-hitting point didnâ€™t hurt so bad."

A California native who moved to Houston as a young child with her family, Ms. Ivins was diagnosed with breast cancer in 1999. Two years later after enduring a radical mastectomy and rounds of chemotherapy, Ms. Ivins was given a 70 percent chance of remaining cancer-free for five years. At the time, she said she liked the odds.

But the cancer recurred in 2003, and again last
year.
In recent weeks, she had suspended her twice-weekly syndicated column, allowing guest writers to use the space while she underwent further treatment. She made a brief return to writing in mid-January, urging readers to resist President Bushâ€™s plan to increase the number of U.S. troops deployed to Iraq. She likened her
call to an old-fashioned "newspaper crusade."

"We are the people who run this country," Ms Ivins said in the column published in the Jan. 14 edition of
the Star-Telegram. "We are the deciders. And every single day, every single one of us needs to step outside
and take some action to help stop this war.

"Raise hell," she continued. "Think of something to make the ridiculous look ridiculous. Make our troops know weâ€™re for them and are trying to get them out
of there. Hit the streets to protest Bush's proposed surge."

She ended the piece by endorsing the peace march in Washington scheduled for Saturday. 01-27 "We need people in the streets, banging pots and pans and demanding, "Stop it, now!' " she wrote.

The spice of Texas

Born Mary Tyler Ivins on Aug. 30, 1944, in Monterey, Calif., Ms. Ivins was raised in the upscale River Oaks
section of Houston. She earned her journalism degree at elite Smith College in Massachusetts in 1965. From there she ventured to Minnesota, taking a job as a police reporter for the Minneapolis Tribune.

Growing weary of the winters in the Upper Great Lakes and missing the spice of Texas food and its politics, Ms. Ivins moved to Austin to become co-editor of the Texas Observer, long considered the stateâ€™s liberal conscience.

Nadine Eckhardt, the former wife of the late Texas novelist Billy Lee Bramer and who later married former U.S. Rep. Bob Eckhardt of Houston, said Ivins soon made herself a fixture in the Austin political and cocktail party scene in the early 1970s.

"Thatâ€™s where she became the Molly Ivins as weâ€™ve come to know her," said Eckhardt, an Ivins friend for nearly four decades. "The Observer had such wonderful writers doing such wonderful stories at the time, and Molly was always right in the middle of everything."

Her writing flair caught the attention of the New York Times, which hired her to cover city hall, then later moved her to the statehouse bureau in Albany. Later, she was assigned to the Timesâ€™ Rocky Mountain bureau in Denver.

Even though she wrote the Timesâ€™ obituary for Elvis Presley in 1977, Ms. Ivins said later that she and the sometimes stodgy Times proved to be a mismatch. In a 2002 interview with the Star-Telegram, Ms. Ivins recalled that she would write about something that "squawked like a $2 fiddle" only to have a Times editor

rewrite it to say "as an inexpensive instrument." Ms Ivins said she would mention a "beer belly" and The Times would substitute "a protuberant abdomen.â€

So Ms. Ivins returned to Austin in 1982 to become a columnist for the Dallas Times-Herald and reconnecting with such political figures as Ann Richards, who would later become governor, and Bob Bullock, then the hard-drinking state comptroller who later wielded great power as lieutenant governor.

Trademark language

The column provided Ms. Ivins the freedom to express her views with the colorful language that would become her trademark. She called such figures as Ross Perot, former U.S. Sen. John Tower and ex-Gov. Bill Clements "runts with attitudes." As a candidate for governor, George W. Bush became "Shrub," a nicknamed she never tired of using.

Surprised became "womperjawed." A visibly angry person would "throw a walleyed fit."

Ms. Ivins, who was single and had no children, told readers about her first bout with cancer in a matter-of-fact afterword in an otherwise ordinary column.

"I have contracted an outstanding case of breast cancer, from which I fully intend to recover," she wrote on Dec. 14, 1999. "I donâ€™t need get-well cards, but I would like the beloved women readers to do something for me: Go. Get. The. Damn. Mammogram. Done."

Ms. Ivins authored three books and co-authored a fourth. She was a three-time finalist for a Pulitzer Prize and had served on Amnesty Internationalâ€™s Journalism Network, but the iconoclastic writer

> often > said that her two highest honors were being banned from > the conservative campus of Texas A&M University and > having the Minneapolis police name their mascot pig > after her when she covered the department as a reporter > during one of her first jobs in the newspaper > business.
>
> Funeral arrangements were pending.
>
> John Moritz, [redacted]
>
> [redacted]
>
> Â© 2007 Star-Telegram.com and wire service sources. All > Rights Reserved. http://www.mercurynews.com
>
> ---
>
> Portside aims to provide material of interest > to people on the left that will help them to > interpret the world and to change it.
>
> Submit via email: [redacted]
> Submit via the Web: portside.org/submit
> Frequently asked questions: portside.org/faq
> Subscribe: portside.org/subscribe
> Unsubscribe: portside.org/unsubscribe
> Account assistance: portside.org/contact
> Search the archives: portside.org/archive

_____
___ Need a quick answer? Get one in minutes from people who know. Ask your question on www.Answers.yahoo.com

↑ Index

5. David-Baptiste Chirot

FW: Re: FEB 1 VIRTUAL MARCH ON WASHINGTON (Stop Escalation)

Thu 1 Feb 2007

On Thursday, February 1st - just days before the Senate votes on the escalation - there's going to be a massive virtual march on Washington. We're going to make 1 million contacts to Congress. Can you join us? Click below to sign up to call your senators. http://pol.moveon.org/virtualmarch

Just click here to start:

http://pol.moveon.org/virtualmarch/

_____
Laugh, share and connect with Windows Live Messenger
http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwme0020000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://imagine-msn.com/messenger/launch80/default.aspx?locale=en-us&source=hmtagline

↑ Index

6. aaron tieger

Re: POETICS Digest - 30 Jan 2007 to 31 Jan 2007 (#2007-32)

Thu 1 Feb 2007

I'm not so sure we should do this. We all know that Bill's it, but as I say on my blog (aarontieger.blogspot.com):

"Boston's best poets - the ones who most successfully evoke Boston (among other things - have all existed outside of any institution, if not opposed to one. I'm thinking of Wieners, Jonas, Corbett. Columbus Square Journal or Joe Torra's "Brisk Walk to Harvard Square" are so wonderful because they evince their sense of place in a completely unsanctioned capacity. To attempt to render such life official (or to attempt to render it in an official capacity) is laughable."

Best,
Aaron Tieger

Linda Norton wrote:

If you would like to be part of a write-in campaign for Bill Corbett (who already is the poet laureate of Boston--Councilman John Tobin just doesn't know it), here are some email addresses:

[redacted] Letters to the Editor, Boston Globe

[redacted] John Tobin

[redacted] Dave Isberg, Chief of Staff

If you are from Boston, as I am, be sure to mention the neighborhood/parish where you grew up or live now.
--- POETICS automatic digest system <[redacted]> wrote:

> There are 28 messages totalling 1531 lines in this issue.
>
> Topics of the day:
>
> 1. Silliman's Blog
> 2. Fwd: Ash, by Alison Croggon
> 3. The Fib at Saline (Salt Publishing) About Angel Exhaust 19 (2)
> 4. Jen's Fib At Saline Part 2
> 5. Nomadics blog
> 6. EDWARD HIRSCH at the Creative Writing Workshop, Brazil
> 7. Take 2 seconds to SAVE THE NEW GLOBE!
> 8. Fwd: Otoliths issue four
> 9. a conversation with ALICE NOTLEY on trance, tarot and poetry
> ()()()()()()()()
> 10. Silliman's blog/Poet Laureate of Boston
> 11. http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/ (2)
> 12. Jed Perl on Laissez-Faire Aesthetics (2)
> 13. Homophobia... (3)
> 14. please remove me from list- unsubscribe (2)
> 15. Jim Eisenreich (3)
> 16. jed perl article
> 17. diarrhea of the mouth
> 18. Larry's poetry forum
> 19. Poems on Scapegoats
> 20. New Book: Betsy Andrews' NEW JERSEY
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Tue, 30 Jan 2007 21:00:13 -0800
> From: Ron Silliman <[redacted]>
> Subject: Silliman's Blog
>
> http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/
>
> RECENT POSTS
>
> Volver â€“

> a film with women
> in every major role
>
> May Day â€“
> Robert Kelly
> and the question of > poems vs. poetry
>
> Kenny Goldsmith
> writes a blog
> on uncreative writing
> for Poetry Magazine!
>
> Babel
> and the ensemble film
> of globalization
>
> Experimental Form
> and Issues of Accessibility
> (Susanne Dyckman, Rusty Morrison,
> Maxine Chernoff, Paul Hoover,
> and Jaime Robles)
>
> Daisy Fried
> should win
> the National Book Critics Circle Award
> by acclamation
>
> Confusing character transference
> with reading
>
> Nathaniel Mackeyâ€™s
> Splay Anthem
> has to be read aloud
>
> IFLIFE, the poem,
> is Bob Perelmanâ€™s love-hate story
> with the whole of poetry
>
> A guide to Bob Perelmanâ€™s
> Guide to Homage to Sextus Propertius
>

> IFLIFE, the book,
> a dizzying display of mastery
>
>
> http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 21:46:38 +1100
> From: Alison Croggon <[redacted]>
> Subject: Fwd: Ash, by Alison Croggon
>
> ---------- Forwarded message ----------
> From: David Lloyd <[redacted]>
> Date: Jan 31, 2007 6:28 PM
> Subject: Ash, by Alison Croggon
> To: [redacted]
>
>
>
>
> birds are returning line by line > near the river their shadows gather
>
> black and still where water sifts
> silver on ash ash on silver
>
> lovely the creatures of light springing down
> from cloud to home
>
> neither suspended nor in motion
> brick and wood are things of flame
>
> fire remembered and foretold
> making and ending
>
> (from: Translations from Nowhere)
>
> Ash, poems by Alison Croggon, is now available from Cusp Books.
> $10.00 (or UKP 5.00, or EU 8.00, or AU $13.00), including postage, > from me at the address below. Please e-mail back-channel and I will > send in advance of your cheque or money order.

>
> Also available from Cusp Books: Sill, by David Lloyd ($8.00, incl.
> p&p). Forthcoming this Spring: I ran from it and was still in it, by > Fred Moten; and Act Zero, by Alfred Arteaga. ($8.00 each, $30.00 for > the set of 4).
>
>
>
> David Lloyd
> 3020 Effie Street
> Los Angeles
> CA 90026
>
> [redacted] (H)
> [redacted] (C)
>
>
>
> --
> Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 19:55:02 +0900
> From: Jesse Glass <[redacted]>
> Subject: The Fib at Saline (Salt Publishing) About Angel Exhaust 19
>
> Here's a note I just sent to Chris Emery of Salt regarding a posting by
> "Jen" about Angel Exhaust 19.
>
> Hey Chris--
>
> The posting on Angel Exhaust is wrong. The ending, on page 142 of issue > 19 goes like this:
>
> Methan: Why is it called Devastate your Aunt Jeremy?
> Manly: It was a misundertanding between the two editors.
> Methan: Are you going to explain the poetic landscape, and your spectrum > allotment, as a way of telling the reader what to expect?
> Manly: They probably wouldn't know what to expect even if we disclosed

> all that.
> Methan: So what's the poetry like?
> Manly: It is full of wonderfully sibilant s and amazingly lateral l
> sounds. Let me expand on that if you will. Corcoran is like Corcoran.
> Glass is like Glass. Holman is like Holman. Holman is more like Holman
> than like Morris.
> Methan: I've never heard of them.
> Manly: Maybe you should read Angel Exhaust.
>
> Not a word in Duncan's back page note about Mssrs. Philpot or Nolan.
>
> Jen's telling a fib that you should correct to set the record straight.
>
> Jesse Glass
>
> Take a look at "Jen's" posting at Saline and you'll see what a little > creative fibbing can accomplish.
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 20:14:31 +0900
> From: Jesse Glass <[redacted]>
> Subject: Jen's Fib At Saline Part 2
>
> http://saltpublishing.com/saline/index.php?topic#5.0
>
> There's the link, but here's the ending of Duncan's notice as "Jen" > tells it:
>
> Methan: Why is it called Devastate your Aunt Jeremy?
> Manly: It was a misunderstanding between the two editors.
>
> [The next two lines don't appear in Duncan's original, but are entirely
> "Jen's" invention!]
>
> Methan: Could we just describe the individual poets?
> Manly: Poets like Philpott and Nolan are too overwhelming and intricate > to be described in a few words.
>
> Methan: I've never heard of them.
> Manly: Maybe you should read Angel Exhaust.
>

> Why would "Jen" fib like this?
>
> Jesse Glass
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 08:11:25 -0500
> From: Pierre Joris <[redacted]>
> Subject: Nomadics blog
>
> Recent Nomadics posts can be read here: http://pjoris.blogspot.com
>
> Philippe Lacoue-Labarthe (1940-2007)
> Chicago Poetry Reading Online
> Pascal Bruckner on Ayaan Hirsi Ali
> Wolfgang Iser (1926-2007)
> Biermann & Berlin
> Rain Taxi Auction!
> an art of precarious balance
>
> be well.
>
> Pierre
>
>
>
> ==========>
==========
> "As democracy is perfected, the office of president represents,
> more and more closely, the inner soul of the people. On some > great and glorious day the plain folks of the land will reach their > heart's desire at last, and the White House will be adorned by > a downright moron." -- H.L. Mencken (1880-1956)
> ==========>
==========
> For updates on readings, etc. check my current events page:
> http://albany.edu/~joris/CurrentEvents.html
> ==========>
==========
> Pierre Joris
> 244 Elm Street
> Albany NY 12202

> h: [redacted]
> c: [redacted]
> o: 518 442 40 71
> Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
> email: [redacted]
> http://pierrejoris.com
> Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com
>
> ==========>
==========
>
>
>
>
> ==========> ====
> "Fascism should more properly
> be called corporatism,since it is the > merger of state and corporate power."
> — Benito Mussolini
> ==========> ====
> Pierre Joris
> 244 Elm Street
> Albany NY 12202
> h: [redacted]
> c: [redacted]
> o: 518 442 40 71
> Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
> email: [redacted]
> http://pierrejoris.com
> Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com
> ==========>
> ---
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 06:02:48 -0800
> From: Ram Devineni <[redacted]>
> Subject: EDWARD HIRSCH at the Creative Writing Workshop, Brazil
>
> Dear Friends: I want to announce a new > workshop/retreat in Brazil. More information at > http://www.creativewritingbrazil.org
>
>

> EDWARD HIRSCH will be teaching at the creative writing > workshop in Brazil from July 9-16, 2007.
> Participate in a week-long poetry workshop with Edward > Hirsch and a translation class on Brazilian poets
> Carlos Drummond de Andrade and Joao Cabral de Melo > Neto. Discussions on Elizabeth Bishop in Brazil and > tours of important cultural sites and literary > landmarks. Also, casual get togethers with leading > contemporary Brazilian poets, editors, writers, > translators, and publishers.
>
> Creative Writing Brazil is an unique literary workshop > in Sao Paulo, Brazil organized by Rattapallax magazine > and Academia Interncional de Cinema. The workshops are > run by leading American and Brazilian poets, writers > and educators and conducted in English. The purpose of > the workshop is to experience the culture of Brazil > and produce new and complex literary work. Poets and > writers who have participated in our trips to Brazil > include Pulitzer Prize winning poet Yusef Komunyakaa, > Breytan Breytanbach, Jerome Rothenberg, Cecilia > Vicuna, Edwin Torres, Nathalie Handal, and Poetry > Wales editor Robert Minhinnick.
>
> ------
> Edward Hirsch is a poet and critic. He has published > six books of poems: For the Sleepwalkers (1981), Wild > Gratitude (1986), which won the National Book Critics > Circle Award, The Night Parade (1989), Earthly > Measures (1994), On Love (1998), and Lay Back the > Darkness (2003). He has also written four prose books:
> How to Read a Poem and Fall in Love with Poetry
> (1999), a national bestseller, Responsive Reading > (1999), The Demon and the Angel: Searching for the > Source of Artistic Inspiration (2002), and Poet's > Choice (2006). He is the editor of Transforming > Vision: Writers on Art (1994) and Theodore Roethke's > Selected Poems (2005). He is also the co-editor of A
> William Maxwell Portrait: Memories and Appreciations > (2004). He has received the Prix de Rome, a Guggenheim > Fellowship, the American Academy of Arts and Letters > Award for Literature, and a MacArthur Fellowship. He > taught for eighteen years at the University of > Houston, and is now the fourth president of the John > Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation.

> -----
>
> Elizabeth Bishop in Brazil
>
> Elizabeth Bishop lived in Brazil more or less > continuously from 1951 to 1966 and then intermittently > to 1971. The country functioned as a necessary escape > from the deprived and anxious world of her early > childhood. Creative Writing Brazil will have a > discussion about Bishop's life and work in Brazil. We > can also assist you with your travel plans to visit > Elizabeth Bishop's house in Ouro Preto and other noted > Bishop landmarks in Brazil. Also, introduce you to > renowned Bishop scholars and translators of her work.
> -----
>
> Tour of Sao Paulo & Salon Reading
>
> Throughout the week, everyone will be having casual > get togethers with leading Brazilian poets, editors, > writers, and publishers. An important aspect of the > workshop is an interaction between participants and > their contemporary counterparts in Brazil. You will > visit important cultural sites, bookstores, and > literary landmarks. All participants will have an > opportunity to read at the Salons in Sao Paulo and New > York City. Also, Rattapallax magazine will assist with > the publication of the work produced during the > workshops in literary and online journals.
> -----
>
> Festa Literaria Internacional de Parati (FLIP)
>
> FLIP is a leading and truly international literary > jamborees, known for the outstanding quality of its > guest authors, for the overwhelming enthusiasm of its > audiences, and for the town's relaxed hospitality.
> FLIP has continued to attract some of the world's > finest authors including Toni Morrison, Don DeLillo,

> Salman Rushdie, Martin Amis, Margaret Atwood, Paul > Auster, Michael Ondaatje, alongside living Brazilian > legends such as Chico Buarque and Caetano Veloso. The > festival is held in Parati is a colonial sea-side town > nestled between the turquoise waters of Ilha Grande > Bay and vast swathes of unspoilt Atlantic rainforest.
> Only a few hours from Sao Paulo.
>
> Attend the Creative Writing Workshop and FLIP! We plan > to organize a trip to FLIP and will help you with your > travel plans to the festival. Must register early > because the festival sells out.
>
> Please send future emails to
> [redacted] for press
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 06:28:20 -0800
> From: Ram Devineni <[redacted]>
> Subject: Take 2 seconds to SAVE THE NEW GLOBE!
>
> Dear Friend,
>
> The New Globe Theater needs your help. If we do not > act now, we will forever lose the opportunity to > create an inspiring cultural icon in New York Harbor!
>
> On Governors Island sits a dilapidated military > fortification ... and it happens to have the identical > blueprint as Shakespeare's Globe Theatre. We want to > restore the fort and re-imagine the open courtyard as > a vibrant performing arts center, however the National > Park Service is about to disallow this proposal.
>
> The National Park Service stresses that the monument > belongs to the American people - so let us make sure > that they can't ignore what we want! click here:
> http://www.newglobe.org/campaign/
>
> In the spirit of placing the Statue of Liberty onto > the 1811 Fort Wood, let us transform this military > fort into a cultural beacon.

>
> The New Globe proposal has received the backing of > hundreds of individuals and organizations, from > Senators Clinton and Schumer to Congressman Nadler and > Community Board #1, from actors (such as Al Pacino, > Kevin Kline, Mark Rylance, Ralph Fiennes, Estelle > Parsons, Melvin Van Peebles, Sarah Jessica Parker, and
> Philip Seymour Hoffman) to artistic directors (Sam > Mendes, Oskar Eustis, Kenny Leon, and Sir Peter Hall).
> Not only has New York's preservation community > embraced the proposal (e.g., NYC Landmarks > Preservation Commission, and Municipal Art Society), > but also a diverse range of individuals from war > veterans to acting students to G.I. army brats. For > more information, see www.newglobe.org.
>
> I ask you to join me and all of our supporters in > urging the National Park Service to be visionary and > imaginative! Your action today truly makes a > difference in our ongoing efforts to create a new > cultural destination in New York Harbor. I hope to see > you at opening night.
>
> Sincerely,
> Dr. Barbara Romer
> Founder and CEO of the The New Globe Theater
>
> Ram Devineni, Publisher of Rattapallax
>
> Please send future emails to
> [redacted] for press
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 09:49:15 -0500
> From: Tom Beckett <[redacted]>
> Subject: Fwd: Otoliths issue four
>
>
>
>

>
> Issue four of Otoliths has just gone live & is as diverse as ever.
>
> This issue contains text & visual work from Vernon Frazer, Eileen Tabios, M> Ã¡rton KoppÃ¡ny, Katrinka Moore, Jnana Hudson, Jeff Harrison, > Peter > Ciccariello, Amanda Laughtland, Carol Jenkins, Jean Vengua, Dion Farquhar, E> d Higgins, David Prater, Carl Baker, Elizabeth Kate Switaj, Elisa Gabbert
> & > Kathleen Rooney, Samuel Wharton, Spencer Selby, Martin Edmond, AyÅŸeg> Ã¼l TÃ¶zeren, Daniel f. Bradley, The Pines, Alexander Jorgensen, Jon> athan Hayes, John Mercuri Dooley, David-Baptiste Chirot, Richard Kostelanetz> , nick-e melville, Phil Primeau, J.D. Nelson, Mikhail Magazinnik, Nicholas M> anning, Andrew Topel, Kristin Hannaford, Karin Kroetlinger, C. Mehrl Bennett> , Kevin Doran, Ed Schenk, Paul Siegell, Raymond Farr, Suzan Sari, Suzan Sari> & Jukka-Pekka Kervinen, Jukka-Pekka Kervinen, Caleb Puckett, Tom Beckett, K> eith Kumasen Abbott, MTC Cronin, Bob Marcacci, Thomas Fink, Nico Vassilakis,> Vernon Frazer & Michael Rothenberg, & Ray Craig.
>
> Hie there & enjoy!
>
> & a reminder that print editions of the earlier issues are available from th> e Otoliths Shopfront at Lulu.
>
> Also, later in February, the book publishing arm (?) of Otoliths will be bri> nging out new collections from Jordan Stempleman, Vernon Frazer, Nico Vassil> akis & harry k stammer. Let me just say that they're all fantastic.
>
> Mark Young
> _____
> Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security t> ools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, fr> ee AOL Mail and more.
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 13:10:18 EST
> From: "C. A. Conrad" <[redacted]>
> Subject: a conversation with ALICE NOTLEY on trance, tarot and poetry
> ()()()()()()()()
>
>

> a conversation with ALICE NOTLEY on trance, tarot and poetry
>
> ()()()()()()()()()(((((O)))))()()()()()()()()()
>
> This e-mail conversation with Alice Notley and CAConrad took place during > January, 2007
>
> Hope you enjoy it!
>
> Go to:
_http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2007_01_01_phillysound_archive.html_
>
> (http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2007_01_01_phillysound_archive.html)
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 10:10:53 -0800
> From: linda norton <[redacted]>
> Subject: Silliman's blog/Poet Laureate of Boston
>
> If you would like to be part of a write-in campaign for Bill Corbett (who > already is the poet laureate of Boston--Councilman John Tobin just doesn't > know it), here are some email addresses:
>
> [redacted] Letters to the Editor, Boston Globe
>
> [redacted] John Tobin
>
> [redacted] Dave Isberg, Chief of Staff
>
> If you are from Boston, as I am, be sure to mention the neighborhood/parish > where you grew up or live now.
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 19:26:24 +0100
> From: Anny Ballardini <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
>
> I didn't even notice it! Not to worry.
>
> On 1/30/07, Raymond Bianchi <[redacted]> wrote:

> >
> > http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
> >
> > To all Poetic Listers like a stupid I set up a blog with a typoed > > name. So forgive this stupid poet
> >
> > here is the same blog as before with a corrected name.
> >
> > Ray
> >
> >
> >
> > ---------- Original message ----------
> > From: tyrone williams <[redacted]>
> >
> > > Joe,
> > >
> > > Thanks for forwarding the Hirsch--very pertient to what we're dealing
> > with at > > > Xavier right now..and I liked Symptoms of a Finaer age. especially the > > first and
> > > middle sections...
> > >
> > >
> > > tyrone
> > >
> > > -----Original Message-----
> > > >From: Joe Amato
> > > >Sent: Jan 29, 2007 9:01 PM
> > > >To: [redacted]
> > > >Subject: Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
> > > >
> > > >Call out to Dan Z on that excellent review of Hirsch's new book.
> > > >Thanks for alerting us to this, Dan.
> > > >
> > > >Here's the link again:
> > > >
> > > >http://www.thecommonreview.org/spotlight.html
> > > >
> > > >Anyone who's been struggling with these issues in the classroom will > > > >find this of great interest. I can see the applicability, as Dan > > > >suggests, to the study (and teaching) of poetry, but I need to let > > > >the various registers of the discussion settle in a bit. At the > > > >moment, I must confess, I'm finding myself more drawn to the > > > >pedagogical per se, maybe b/c I'm about to take another crack at > > > >Olson tomorrow with a new group of undergrads.

> > > >
> > > >Best,
> > > >
> > > >Joe
> > >
> > >
> > > Tyrone Williams
> >
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 12:57:06 -0600
> From: Simon DeDeo <[redacted]>
> Subject: Jed Perl on Laissez-Faire Aesthetics
>
> http://www.tnr.com/doc.mhtml?i 070205&s=perl020507
>
> Interesting and easy to blow your top when reading it, I think.
>
> I find his critiques of contemporary art (I love John Currin, e.g.) remind > me of the usual Dana Gioia et al. critiques of the avant garde (where are > the STANDARDS, where are the external directions on how to READ?, etc.), > but in an unusual slant Jed also works in a sort of analogy to neo-con > capitalism.
>
> It's like, Jed, you are stealing my rhetorical move!
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 14:17:12 -0500
> From: Vernon Frazer <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Homophobia...
>
> Jennifer
>
> I'm very displeased with much of the hostility this thread has generated.
>
> I don't want to get into a contest over which groups get treated the worst,

> but I'd say people with disabilities take a lot of hits that people in > general don't notice and aren't aware of.
>
> Having Tourette Syndrome has caused me to endure discrimination in every > area you mention. I might hold the personal record for hearing "We filled > that opening yesterday" at a job interview.
>
> Throughout history, people with Tourette have been burned alive after being > accused of demonic possession.That's a very terminal stigma, I'd say.
>
> My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.
>
> I'm appalled at the people who think they can talk about my condition with > levity and impunity. Of course, when I verbally savage someone who started > treating me like a subhuman, I'm perceived as the villain because a crip > just ain't sposed ta beat a normie.
>
> The interview Ric Carfagna did with me in the latest Big Bridge describes > some of my personal experiences. After reading it, some people have > expressed surprise at what I've had to go through.
>
> And I did have a negative encounter with another "Mr. Sensitivity" on this > List about six months ago.
>
> Don't get me started on the way blind people are patronized, as though > their being blind makes their ability to talk or think coherently a miracle.
> My grandfather could do everything any other commercial fisherman could
do,
> as long as you pointed the boat in the right direction for him.
>
>
> Vernon Frazer
> http://vernonfrazer.com/Second%20Printing.pdf
>
>
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of reJennifer Bartlett
> Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 5:35 PM
> To: [redacted]

> Subject: Homophobia...
>
> I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the > most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely > referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it
is
>
> so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all > areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And there
>
> is no "affirmative action" for PWD.
>
> _____
> Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
> http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 11:25:59 -0800
> From: Gretchen Adele <[redacted]>
> Subject: please remove me from list- unsubscribe
>
> thank you
>
> --
> gretchen adele
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 11:44:14 -0800
> From: Emma Larsson <[redacted]>
> Subject: please remove me from list- unsubscribe
>
> thank you
>
> --
>
> emma larsson
>
>
>
>

___
> Never Miss an Email
> Stay connected with Yahoo! Mail on your mobile. Get started!
> http://mobile.yahoo.com/services?promote=mail
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 19:58:14 +0000
> From: Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Jed Perl on Laissez-Faire Aesthetics
>
> The article is only available to subscribers. If you are one, maybe you could > cut and paste the text into an e-mail for us? (Not that I want to lure you > into doing something illegal.) Anyway, there's been a lot of boo-hooing over > the booming art market. Check out Jerry Saltz in the Village Voice:
> http://www.villagevoice.com/art/0704,saltz,75590,13.html
>
> Simon DeDeo <[redacted]> wrote:
> http://www.tnr.com/doc.mhtml?i 070205&s=perl020507
>
> Interesting and easy to blow your top when reading it, I think.
>
> I find his critiques of contemporary art (I love John Currin, e.g.) remind > me of the usual Dana Gioia et al. critiques of the avant garde (where are > the STANDARDS, where are the external directions on how to READ?, etc.), > but in an unusual slant Jed also works in a sort of analogy to neo-con > capitalism.
>
> It's like, Jed, you are stealing my rhetorical move!
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Thu, 1 Feb 2007 07:38:19 +1100
> From: Alison Croggon <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: The Fib at Saline (Salt Publishing) About Angel Exhaust 19
>
> I'm confused, Jesse. How is Jen - a real person, deserving of not > being put in quotation marks - supposed to have "fibbed"? The email > from Andrew Duncan that Tony Frazer forwarded to UK Poets is exactly > the same as the post at Saline. Did Tony Frazer fib as well?
>

>
> On 1/31/07, Jesse Glass <[redacted]> wrote:
> > Here's a note I just sent to Chris Emery of Salt regarding a posting by
> > "Jen" about Angel Exhaust 19.
> >
> > Hey Chris--
> >
> > The posting on Angel Exhaust is wrong. The ending, on page 142 of issue > > 19 goes like this:
> >
> > Methan: Why is it called Devastate your Aunt Jeremy?
> > Manly: It was a misundertanding between the two editors.
> > Methan: Are you going to explain the poetic landscape, and your spectrum > > allotment, as a way of telling the reader what to expect?
> > Manly: They probably wouldn't know what to expect even if we disclosed
> > all that.
> > Methan: So what's the poetry like?
> > Manly: It is full of wonderfully sibilant s and amazingly lateral l
> > sounds. Let me expand on that if you will. Corcoran is like Corcoran.
> > Glass is like Glass. Holman is like Holman. Holman is more like Holman
> > than like Morris.
> > Methan: I've never heard of them.
> > Manly: Maybe you should read Angel Exhaust.
> >
> > Not a word in Duncan's back page note about Mssrs. Philpot or Nolan.
> >
> > Jen's telling a fib that you should correct to set the record straight.
> >
> > Jesse Glass
> >
> > Take a look at "Jen's" posting at Saline and you'll see what a little > > creative fibbing can accomplish.
> >
>
>
> --
> Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com
>
> ----------
>

> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 12:41:58 -0800
> From: Mary Kasimor <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Homophobia...
>
> Vernon,
> I lived next door to a kid who had Tourette Syndrome. HIs name was Jim > Eisenreich and he went on to play professional baseball. My understanding is > that he became a spokesperson for people who have Tourette Syndrome. Are you > familiar with him? I think that he was traded by the Twins to the Royals and > then became a very successful and admired professional ball player, partly > because he did talk about having Tourette Syndrome and how it affected him.
I > think the people of my hometown have a great deal of admiration and respect > for him.
>
> Best,
> Mary Kasimor
>
>
> Vernon Frazer <[redacted]> wrote:
> Jennifer
>
> I'm very displeased with much of the hostility this thread has generated.
>
> I don't want to get into a contest over which groups get treated the worst,
> but I'd say people with disabilities take a lot of hits that people in > general don't notice and aren't aware of.
>
> Having Tourette Syndrome has caused me to endure discrimination in every > area you mention. I might hold the personal record for hearing "We filled > that opening yesterday" at a job interview.
>
> Throughout history, people with Tourette have been burned alive after being > accused of demonic possession.That's a very terminal stigma, I'd say.
>
> My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.
>
> I'm appalled at the people who think they can talk about my condition with > levity and impunity. Of course, when I verbally savage someone who started > treating me like a subhuman, I'm perceived as the villain because a crip > just ain't sposed ta beat a normie.

>
> The interview Ric Carfagna did with me in the latest Big Bridge describes > some of my personal experiences. After reading it, some people have > expressed surprise at what I've had to go through.
>
> And I did have a negative encounter with another "Mr. Sensitivity" on this > List about six months ago.
>
> Don't get me started on the way blind people are patronized, as though > their being blind makes their ability to talk or think coherently a miracle.
> My grandfather could do everything any other commercial fisherman could
do,
> as long as you pointed the boat in the right direction for him.
>
>
> Vernon Frazer
> http://vernonfrazer.com/Second%20Printing.pdf
>
>
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of reJennifer Bartlett
> Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 5:35 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Homophobia...
>
> I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the > most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely > referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it
is
>
> so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all > areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And there
>
> is no "affirmative action" for PWD.
>
> _____
> Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
> http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football
>

>
>
> ---
> 8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
> with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
>
> ---
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 15:07:32 -0600
> From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Jim Eisenreich
>
> I got to meet Jim Eisenreich once at a Twins game here in Milwaukee.
> a very inspirational person and excellent outfielder and hitter--
> he had to endure some very tough times his first years in the Big > leagues--can only imagine what was like in the Minors-- > wrote abt him to this list some time ago
>
> my all time favorite ball player is Rube Waddell--one of the all time > characters--he is in the Hall of Fame probably wd never be allowed past > Special Olympics these days--
> he was mentally ill, developmentally challenged, what they used to call
> "slow"--and an alcoholic to boot-- > only Sandy Koufax had more stirkeouts by a lefthander in one season, over > fifty years after Rube set the record-- > in early days of baseball deaf mutes were not uncommon--prompting the use
of > signs for balls and strikes by umpires-- > in baseball quite along list of players with various disabilities--Jimmy > Piersall--for example--in an asylum for a while during his major league > career (his book Fear Strikes Out made into film with Tony Perkins playing > Jimbo)--
>
>
> >From: Mary Kasimor <[redacted]>
> >Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Re: Homophobia...
> >Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 12:41:58 -0800
> >
> >Vernon,
> > I lived next door to a kid who had Tourette Syndrome. HIs name was Jim > >Eisenreich and he went on to play professional baseball. My understanding > >is that he became a spokesperson for people who have Tourette Syndrome. Are > >you familiar with him? I think that he was traded by the Twins to the > >Royals and then became a very successful and admired professional ball > >player, partly because he did talk about having Tourette Syndrome and how > >it affected him. I think the people of my hometown have a great deal of > >admiration and respect for him.

> >
> > Best,
> > Mary Kasimor
> >
> >
> >Vernon Frazer <[redacted]> wrote:
> > Jennifer
> >
> >I'm very displeased with much of the hostility this thread has generated.
> >
> >I don't want to get into a contest over which groups get treated the worst,
> >but I'd say people with disabilities take a lot of hits that people in > >general don't notice and aren't aware of.
> >
> >Having Tourette Syndrome has caused me to endure discrimination in every > >area you mention. I might hold the personal record for hearing "We filled > >that opening yesterday" at a job interview.
> >
> >Throughout history, people with Tourette have been burned alive after being > >accused of demonic possession.That's a very terminal stigma, I'd say.
> >
> >My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.
> >
> >I'm appalled at the people who think they can talk about my condition with > >levity and impunity. Of course, when I verbally savage someone who started > >treating me like a subhuman, I'm perceived as the villain because a crip > >just ain't sposed ta beat a normie.
> >
> >The interview Ric Carfagna did with me in the latest Big Bridge describes > >some of my personal experiences. After reading it, some people have > >expressed surprise at what I've had to go through.
> >
> >And I did have a negative encounter with another "Mr. Sensitivity" on this > >List about six months ago.

> >
> >Don't get me started on the way blind people are patronized, as though > >their being blind makes their ability to talk or think coherently a > >miracle.
> >My grandfather could do everything any other commercial fisherman could do,
> >as long as you pointed the boat in the right direction for him.
> >
> >
> >Vernon Frazer
> >http://vernonfrazer.com/Second%20Printing.pdf
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >-----Original Message-----
> >From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On > >Behalf Of reJennifer Bartlett
> >Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 5:35 PM
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Homophobia...
> >
> >I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the > >most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely > >referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it
> >is
> >
> >so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all > >areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And > >there
> >
> >is no "affirmative action" for PWD.
> >
> >_____
> >Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
> >http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football
> >
> >
> >
> >----------

> >8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
> > with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
>
> _____
> From predictions to trailers, check out the MSN Entertainment Guide to the > Academy Awards®
> http://movies.msn.com/movies/oscars2007/?icid=ncoscartagline1
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 12:51:01 -0800
> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Homophobia...
>
> On 31-Jan-07, at 12:41 PM, Mary Kasimor wrote:
>
> > Vernon,
> > I lived next door to a kid who had Tourette Syndrome. HIs name was > > Jim Eisenreich and he went on to play professional baseball. My > > understanding is that he became a spokesperson for people who have > > Tourette Syndrome. Are you familiar with him? I think that he was > > traded by the Twins to the Royals and then became a very successful > > and admired professional ball player, partly because he did talk about > > having Tourette Syndrome and how it affected him. I think the people > > of my hometown have a great deal of admiration and respect for him.
> >
> > Best,
> > Mary Kasimor
> >
> >
>
> Well, I drafted him on my fantasy team.
> He went to the Phillies after KC.
> In 15 seasons he had a .290 batting average. Pretty damned good.
>
> gb
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 21:25:52 +0000
> From: Raymond Bianchi <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/

>
> how is Bolzano?
>
> I love your blog it is my first read in the morning.
>
> RB
>
> ---------- Original message ----------
> From: Anny Ballardini <[redacted]>
>
> > I didn't even notice it! Not to worry.
> >
> > On 1/30/07, Raymond Bianchi wrote:
> > >
> > > http://irasciblepoet.blogspot.com/
> > >
> > > To all Poetic Listers like a stupid I set up a blog with a typoed > > > name. So forgive this stupid poet
> > >
> > > here is the same blog as before with a corrected name.
> > >
> > > Ray
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > ---------- Original message ----------
> > > From: tyrone williams
> > >
> > > > Joe,
> > > >
> > > > Thanks for forwarding the Hirsch--very pertient to what we're dealing
> > > with at > > > > Xavier right now..and I liked Symptoms of a Finaer age. especially the > > > first and
> > > > middle sections...
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > tyrone
> > > >
> > > > -----Original Message-----
> > > > >From: Joe Amato
> > > > >Sent: Jan 29, 2007 9:01 PM

> > > > >To: [redacted]
> > > > >Subject: Review of Hirsch's The Knowledge Deficit...
> > > > >
> > > > >Call out to Dan Z on that excellent review of Hirsch's new book.
> > > > >Thanks for alerting us to this, Dan.
> > > > >
> > > > >Here's the link again:
> > > > >
> > > > >http://www.thecommonreview.org/spotlight.html
> > > > >
> > > > >Anyone who's been struggling with these issues in the classroom will > > > > >find this of great interest. I can see the applicability, as Dan > > > > >suggests, to the study (and teaching) of poetry, but I need to let > > > > >the various registers of the discussion settle in a bit. At the > > > > >moment, I must confess, I'm finding myself more drawn to the > > > > >pedagogical per se, maybe b/c I'm about to take another crack at > > > > >Olson tomorrow with a new group of undergrads.
> > > > >
> > > > >Best,
> > > > >
> > > > >Joe
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > Tyrone Williams
> > >
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 15:47:49 -0600
> From: Simon DeDeo <[redacted]>
> Subject: jed perl article
>
> Ah, I see what is going on. You need not pay AFAICT, but you must > register. I use "bugmenot" which gives you passwords and logins so you > don't have to hop their demographic hoops. The current bugmenot password > for the Jed Perl article is the strangely disturbing
>
> USERNAME: buffychunks
> PASSWORD: pooklord
>
> If that doesn't work (TNR plays wack-a-mole, apparently, see > http://www.bugmenot.com/ for more infor.)

>
> For reference, the URL is:
> http://www.tnr.com/doc.mhtml?i=artnotes&s=perl112001
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 16:49:30 -0500
> From: Vernon Frazer <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Jim Eisenreich
>
> Mary and David
>
> I'm very familiar with Jim Eisenreich, from his promising start as a rookie > to his virtually getting booed out of the game for several years. I didn't > understand why anybody would boo a .300 hitter---but then, I was at least a > decade away from receiving my diagnosis. He was one of my favorite players > when he played with the Florida Marlins. I've never really spoken to him, > although I think we did serve together on a panel at a conference sponsored > by the National Tourette Syndrome Association.
>
> I remember reading about Rube Waddell when I was a kid. As I recall, he went > for a ride on a fire truck on a day when he was supposed to pitch. According > to the records and the story books, though, he was an amazing pitcher. His > strikeout record stood for some time, as you point out, David.
>
> I remember Fear Strikes Out and, as a lifelong Red Sox fan, always > appreciated Jimmy Piersall's playing. Although he wasn't a Hall of Famer, > he probably would have received a lot more recognition if he hadn't played > in the shadows of Willie, Mickey and the Duke.
>
> Vernon
> http://vernonfrazer.com
>
>
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of David-Baptiste Chirot
> Sent: Wednesday, January 31, 2007 4:08 PM
> To: [redacted]

> Subject: Re: Jim Eisenreich
>
> I got to meet Jim Eisenreich once at a Twins game here in Milwaukee.
> a very inspirational person and excellent outfielder and hitter--
> he had to endure some very tough times his first years in the Big > leagues--can only imagine what was like in the Minors-- > wrote abt him to this list some time ago
>
> my all time favorite ball player is Rube Waddell--one of the all time
> characters--he is in the Hall of Fame probably wd never be allowed past > Special Olympics these days--
> he was mentally ill, developmentally challenged, what they used to call
> "slow"--and an alcoholic to boot-- > only Sandy Koufax had more stirkeouts by a lefthander in one season, over > fifty years after Rube set the record-- > in early days of baseball deaf mutes were not uncommon--prompting the use
of
>
> signs for balls and strikes by umpires--
> in baseball quite along list of players with various disabilities--Jimmy > Piersall--for example--in an asylum for a while during his major league > career (his book Fear Strikes Out made into film with Tony Perkins playing > Jimbo)--
>
>
> >From: Mary Kasimor <[redacted]>
> >Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Re: Homophobia...
> >Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 12:41:58 -0800
> >
> >Vernon,
> > I lived next door to a kid who had Tourette Syndrome. HIs name was Jim > >Eisenreich and he went on to play professional baseball. My understanding > >is that he became a spokesperson for people who have Tourette Syndrome.
Are
>
> >you familiar with him? I think that he was traded by the Twins to the > >Royals and then became a very successful and admired professional ball > >player, partly because he did talk about having Tourette Syndrome and how > >it affected him. I think the people of my hometown have a great deal of > >admiration and respect for him.

> >
> > Best,
> > Mary Kasimor
> >
> >
> >Vernon Frazer <[redacted]> wrote:
> > Jennifer
> >
> >I'm very displeased with much of the hostility this thread has generated.
> >
> >I don't want to get into a contest over which groups get treated the worst,
> >but I'd say people with disabilities take a lot of hits that people in > >general don't notice and aren't aware of.
> >
> >Having Tourette Syndrome has caused me to endure discrimination in every > >area you mention. I might hold the personal record for hearing "We filled > >that opening yesterday" at a job interview.
> >
> >Throughout history, people with Tourette have been burned alive after being > >accused of demonic possession.That's a very terminal stigma, I'd say.
> >
> >My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.
> >
> >I'm appalled at the people who think they can talk about my condition with > >levity and impunity. Of course, when I verbally savage someone who started > >treating me like a subhuman, I'm perceived as the villain because a crip > >just ain't sposed ta beat a normie.
> >
> >The interview Ric Carfagna did with me in the latest Big Bridge describes > >some of my personal experiences. After reading it, some people have > >expressed surprise at what I've had to go through.
> >
> >And I did have a negative encounter with another "Mr. Sensitivity" on this > >List about six months ago.
> >
> >Don't get me started on the way blind people are patronized, as though > >their being blind makes their ability to talk or think coherently a > >miracle.
> >My grandfather could do everything any other commercial fisherman could do,
> >as long as you pointed the boat in the right direction for him.

> >
> >
> >Vernon Frazer
> >http://vernonfrazer.com/Second%20Printing.pdf
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >-----Original Message-----
> >From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On > >Behalf Of reJennifer Bartlett
> >Sent: Tuesday, January 30, 2007 5:35 PM
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Homophobia...
> >
> >I'm sorry...I have to weigh in here. I believe that disabled people are the > >most shunned in society. They are excluded from the media, and retinely > >referred to in unacceptable language. Unemployment is near 70% because it
> >is
> >
> >so darn hard to get a job. I've suffered a life of discrimination in all > >areas: work, lovers, children, every getting an apartment!!!!!!!!! And > >there
> >
> >is no "affirmative action" for PWD.
> >
> >_____
> >Get live scores and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
> >http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football
> >
> >
> >
> >---------------------------------
> >8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
> > with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
>
> _____
> From predictions to trailers, check out the MSN Entertainment Guide to the > Academy AwardsR
> http://movies.msn.com/movies/oscars2007/?icid=ncoscartagline1
>

> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 13:47:26 -0800
> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Jim Eisenreich
>
> On 31-Jan-07, at 1:07 PM, David-Baptiste Chirot wrote:
>
> > I got to meet Jim Eisenreich once at a Twins game here in Milwaukee.
> > a very inspirational person and excellent outfielder and hitter--
> > he had to endure some very tough times his first years in the Big > > leagues--can only imagine what was like in the Minors-- > > wrote abt him to this list some time ago
> >
> > my all time favorite ball player is Rube Waddell--one of the all time > > characters--he is in the Hall of Fame probably wd never be allowed > > past Special Olympics these days--
> > he was mentally ill, developmentally challenged, what they used to > > call "slow"--and an alcoholic to boot--
> > only Sandy Koufax had more stirkeouts by a lefthander in one season,
> > over fifty years after Rube set the record-- > > in early days of baseball deaf mutes were not uncommon--prompting the > > use of signs for balls and strikes by umpires--
> > in baseball quite along list of players with various > > disabilities--Jimmy Piersall--for example--in an asylum for a while > > during his major league career (his book Fear Strikes Out made into > > film with Tony Perkins playing Jimbo)--
>
> Yeah, and before that, a TV play with Tab Hunter playing Jim.
> I guess they saw some sense in having 2 actors who didnt know how to > throw a baseball do it.
> >
> >
> >
> George Harry Bowering
> Likes towns with -ver- in them.
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Thu, 1 Feb 2007 03:05:54 +0000
> From: "[redacted]" <[redacted]>
> Subject: diarrhea of the mouth

>
> Dear members:
>
> Some people have diarrhea of the mouth. It is a medical condition, but > it doesn't mean we all have to pay attention to, well, the product of > said medical condition. That is what toilets are for. And delete > buttons, ok. There is always the "I WIN" button... available for when > your computer OR another human thinks it has the best of you.
>
> Poetry discussions are so much better than crap-slinging. Isn't there > enough raw-ness in language and its composition, that we can avoid the > raw-sewage stuff? I know there are more critical discussions, > especially of ideas (which are lacking in other conversations these > days), in this listserv's future. Otherwise, why are any of us here.
>
> Write on! Listen and read and hear and say and smell (if you > dare)...all that there is for you here online and everywhere... But > please stay home if you need to be near the crapper, T. F. Rice
>
>
> "We pretend the raw bloom remains
> unshattered
> by the ravishing dregs of lost humanity"
> ...just a little something i wrote when i was a teenager... he-hee...
> we havent come very far since then as a human race...
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 19:45:47 -0800
> From: David Baratier <[redacted]>
> Subject: Larry's poetry forum
>
>
> The Poetry Forum at Larry’s
> Remainder of the Season: 2007
>
> Looking forward to seeing you'all soon-- > Readings: 2 sets about 20-25 minutes each. From:
>
>
> January 15-- Okla Elliot
> January 22-- Terrance Hayes

> January 29-- Will Evans
> February 5-- Richard St. John
> February 12-- David Baratier
> February 19-- Vernell Bristow
> February 26-- Scott Wood
> March 5-- Aldon Nielsen
> March 12-- Fundraiser - Diane Gilliam Fisher
> March 19-- NO READING (SPRING BREAK)
> March 26-- Sandy Feen
> April 2-- Maj Ragain
> April 9--Jillian Weisse
> April 16-- Annie Price
> April 23-- TBA
> April 30-- TBA
> May 7-- William Redding Memorial Reading
>
> All Events
> Mondays 7pm 2040 N. High St
> Columbus, Ohio
> All readings followed by a brief open mike.
> Funded by the Ohio Arts Council: A state agency that supports public > programs in the arts.
>
> Be well
> David Baratier, Co-coordinator, Larry's Poetry Forum
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Be well
>
> David Baratier, Editor
>
> Pavement Saw Press
> PO Box 6291
> Columbus, OH 43206
> http://pavementsaw.org
>

> ----------
>
> Date: Thu, 1 Feb 2007 03:50:01 +0000
> From: "[redacted]" <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Poems on Scapegoats
>
> "Purple Scapegoat"
>
> Purple was blamed for what blue and red did, > discriminated against for the mere color of his skin.
> It seems the Color Police aren't really all that discriminating, > in the truer sense of the word. Where would we be if we discriminated > nothing. Distinction and discernment are cords that make our unique > world. We have eyes that see and ears that hear.
>
> It is those who have a desire to shoot someone who make a word "wrong" > or naughty", and then proceed to shoot at it with all they have. Or > maybe at times the desirous one is (s)he who says the word in a new > way. Whatever the case, be nice to purple. And red and blue. Because > whoever did the wrong will show himself in the end. They always do.
> "Give them enough rope and they will hang themselves" has always rung > true in my life and misc strugglings.
>
> To discriminate:
>
> 1. Show prejudice, favor, show bias, treat unfairly.
> 2. Distinguish, differentiate, separate, contrast, compare, tell the > difference, judge, draw a distinction, discern, segregate.
>
> All in fun, since abstraction can be fun when wanting to say something real,
> T.F. Rice
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Quoting heidi arnold <[redacted]>:
>
> > Colleagues,
> >
> > -- i would like to read some experimental poems on scapegoats and

> > scapegoating -- a communal or familial process of setting someone up to be> a
> > "fall guy" -- when the fault for the problem is v. collective and systemic
> > -- that we have to make our own leper colonies to make societies at all --
> > is it ok to post to this list
> >
> > scapegoats:
> >
> > Lincoln
> > Martin Luther King
> > Jesus Christ
> > Nazim Hikmet
> > ...
> > How many can we name?
> >
> > if you like I will send a little chapbook of my poems to each person who > > responds
> >
> >
> >
> > --
> > www.heidiarnold.org
> > http://peaceraptor.blogspot.com/
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 31 Jan 2007 20:11:20 -0800
> From: Betsy Andrews <[redacted]>
> Subject: New Book: Betsy Andrews' NEW JERSEY
>
> Betsy Andrews' NEW JERSEY, winner of the 2007 Brittingham Prize, is now > available from University of Wisconsin Press.
>
> To order directly from the Press:
> http://www.wisc.edu/wisconsinpress/books/4306.htm
>
> “The heart of darkness is alive and beating in Betsy Andrews’s New Jersey.
> With its commitment to naming, to witnessing the machinations and > degradations of our terror,’ this is a brave poem, and a necessary one.”
> —Anne Waldman, Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics
>
> “New Jersey hotwired, New Jersey on speed: the Turnpike unrolls its scathing > demotic across the humiliated landscape that was once a bright idea; the > Turnpike dreams of minutemen and wakes to Abu Ghraib; the Turnpike names its > toll plazas for poets and founding fathers and channels its weary to Burger > Kings and ATMs. No help for us, the country’s in the breakdown lane. But > Betsy Andrews writes its antic obit in a vein so charged with wit and > razzle-dazzle that something must be salvageable even now. We must, in spite > of ourselves, have done something right. New Jersey is a brilliant debut.”

> —Linda Gregerson, author of The Woman Who Died in Her Sleep
>
> “Serving the swerve from witness to outrage, the poem follows war’s > disastrous trajectory from domestic to international policy and singular to > universal tragedy with unrelenting honesty. Andrews has a queer eye for > empire, and this work is an incisive, exciting, and necessary intervention.”
>
> —Brian Teare, author of The Room Where I Was Born
>
>
>
>
>
> ---
> Cheap Talk? Check out Yahoo! Messenger's low PC-to-Phone call rates.
>
> ---
>
> End of POETICS Digest - 30 Jan 2007 to 31 Jan 2007 (#2007-32)
> **********
>

aarontieger.blogspot.com carvepoems.org
soonproductions.org

"Make a sudden, destructive unpredictable action; incorporate." (Brian Eno)

___ Bored stiff? Loosen up... Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games. http://games.yahoo.com/games/front

↑ Index

7. Marcus Bales

Joanna Connors in her column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday, February 1, 2007) Plain Dealer, reviews the Haiku Death Match sponsored by Mayor Frank Jackson's Rotunda Art Committee:

Thu 1 Feb 2007

Joanna connors in her column in the arts & life section of today's (thursday, february 1, 2007) plain dealer, reviews the haiku death match sponsored by mayor frank jackson's rotunda art committee:

In death match, fearless poets spar but haiku lives
by Joanna Connors, the Plain Dealer

Thursday, February 01, 2007

The first thing you have to consider when you're putting on a death match any sort of death match -- is lo cation. Venue.

Where will the idea of fighting to the death be accepted without a lot of fuss? You want a certain comfort level among the spectators, a familiarity with bulletproof vests and hand-to-hand combat. A sense of history would help, too.

So it came to pass that Cleveland's second official Haiku Death Match took place Wednesday at high noon at City Hall, in the rotunda, where the marble floors and columns echo with the names "George Forbes" and "Dennis Kucinich" and "Mike White." Where mayors have donned bulletproof vests to face their people, and city council presidents have brought to mind the gladiators of ancient times.

Continued here:

http://www.cleveland.com/entertainment/plaindealer/index.ssf?/base/entertainment/1170322671208500.xml&coll=2

↑ Index

8. Aaron Belz

Gertrude Stein "Finally George A Vocabulary of Thinking"

Thu 1 Feb 2007

This piece appeared in HOW TO WRITE. I need a copy of it electronically. If you have it, or you know where I might access it, please let me know ASAP!

Thanks!
Aaron

↑ Index

9. Adam Fieled

FUNTIME: Lundwall/Fieled on PFS Post

Thu 1 Feb 2007

In homage to messeurs Bowie & Iggy, here are poems that explore the seamy underside of...just about everything.

Andrew Lundwall & Adam Fieled present the first five poems from FUNTIME!!!!!

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Love on yer, dearies...

No need to miss a message. Get email on-the-go with Yahoo! Mail for Mobile. Get started.

↑ Index

10. Andrew Lundwall

melancholia's tremulous dreadlocks issue 8

Thu 1 Feb 2007

The eighth issue of melancholia's tremulous dreadlocks is live, featuring work by:

Brandon Brown – Daniel Knudsen – James Belflower – Jared Stanley – Jen Tynes - Larry Sawyer – Sasha West – William Allegrezza

mtd is a biweekly online poetry journal edited by Andrew Lundwall and Francois Luong.

http://mtd.celaine.com

_____ Get live scores
and news about your team: Add the Live.com Football Page
http://www.live.com/?addtemplate=football

↑ Index

11. Glenn Bach

Call for Papers: Stevens and Sound

Thu 1 Feb 2007

I haven't seen this on the Poetics list yet, so I thought some of you might be interested.

Best,

G.

CALL FOR PAPERS

A Special Issue of The Wallace Stevens Journal

Topic: Sound in Stevens

Given Wallace Stevens' pronouncements about the significance of sound and the prominent attention to sound and sonic phenomena throughout his poetry, it is time again to devote attention to this important facet of his poetics. This special issue of The Wallace Stevens Journal welcomes papers on any aspect of the expressivity of sound in Stevens. Particularly welcome are papers on the rhythms of Stevens' verse as well as articles that introduce new scholarly directions since the Fall 1991 WSJ volume, "Stevens and Structures of Sound." Suggested topics follow:

* Stevens' play with the sonic properties of English, French, and other foreign or symbolic languages * The role of rhythm and other sonic poetic structures in Stevens' verse * The non-semantic and other properties of sound that might interest Stevens * Explications, with examples, of Stevens' famous pronouncements and winking subterfuges regarding the role of sound and the sound of words in poetry * The range of human and non-human speakers in Stevens' verse * Consideration of how sound in Stevens may or may not connect with Stevens' politics * Critical resistance or impediments to studies of sound and rhythm in Stevens * The significance of Stevens' experiments with sound in relation to other modernist as well as later experimental writers * Reflection on Stevens' reading style and reception of his poetry readings, live and recorded Papers should be sent by July 15, 2007, to:

Natalie Gerber
Department of English
277 Fenton Hall
SUNY Fredonia
Fredonia, NY 14063

Email: [redacted]

↑ Index

12. Dubravka Djuric poets in small cultures and outside gaze
Thu 1 Feb 2007

---

dear listmemebers,

it has been long time since i wrote something for this list. now, i would like to comment the site of green integer. surfing, i came upon it, and was really amaizing to see so much poets all arround the world, including the former yugoslav poets! which i find really great! i was specially interestied in the poets from serbia, i am from serbia, and i was so sad to see that some right wing oriented poets are on the list... and now i think about how in small cultures such as serbia, you cannot have a second scene, because we are all 'one big family', right and left, and every poet who ever wrote experimental poetry is erased, acctually could not be establish as a poet of any value, it doesnt fit into the picture of great national poetry, and what you call moderate modernisam and postmodernism, or what you call(ed) mainstream poets just that kind of poetry do exist. other kind of poets cannot survive, they are out of sight, out of attention of dominant culture, and of course, they could never be in attention of outside gaze, outside attention. i find it very very sad... i dont know how are in other cultures outside usa.....

↑ Index

13. Poetry Project

Events at the Poetry Project 2/2 - 2/9

Thu 1 Feb 2007

Dears,

We love you like the falling snow. Workshops are filling up, but there is still room, so please let us know soon if you¹d like to enroll. Please find the descriptions describing below. We hope to see you this coming week.

Love,

The Poetry Project

Friday, February 2, 9:30 pm
Fall Workshop Reading

Students of Marcella Durand, Larry Fagin, Kristin Prevallet and Gary Sullivan read from the work they wrote in the past season's workshops.

Monday, February 5, 6:00 pm
Urban Word NYC Teen Poetry Slam

"Urban Word NYC ignited the youth spoken word and poetry scene in New York City when it was established in partnership with Teachers & Writers Collaborative in 1999. Since then, Urban Word NYC has provided thousands of New York City teenagers with free, safe, ongoing, and uncensored writing and performance opportunities." From their website, www.urbanwordnyc.org (free to performers, $5 teens, $7 adults)

Wednesday, February 7, 8:00 pm
Ammiel Alcalay & Michael Brownstein

Ammiel Alcalay's latest books include Scrapmetal, A Little History, and two collaborative translation projects: Selected Poems of Faraj Bayrakdar, a former Syrian political prisoner, done with the New York Translation Collective and forthcoming from Beyond Baroque, and Outcast, a novel by Iraqi born Hebrew novelist Shimon Ballas, with Oz Shelach. Michael Brownstein has written many poems and three novels: Country Cousins, Self-Reliance, and The Touch. His global justice manifesto and wake-up call, World on Fire, is being made into a major motion picture starring the entire capitalist planet. Out of his involvement in shamanic practice has come a new novel, Healing Dick, as well as the related website (healingdick.com) wherein he drums and sings to heal Dick Cheney¹s heart.

Friday, February 9, 10:30 pm
Open 24 Hours

An evening celebrating the work published by Open 24 Hours Press, edited by Greg Fuchs and John Coletti. Readers to include Corina Copp, Arlo Quint, Dustin Williamson, Mariana Ruiz-Firmat and Erica Kaufman. Plus a collaborative happening with visual artist Jonathan Allen, frequent Open 24 Hours cover designer. Open 24 Hours is based in New York City and fashions itself after the mimeo style of 1960's poetry publishing efforts. This event may include the construction and utilization of a martini bar.

Spring Workshops at the Poetry Project

The Poetry School Of Poetry Douglas Rothschild
Tuesdays at 7 Pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 13th

Writing poetry is difficult; writing good poetry, more difficult still. In this workshop, we will focus on exactly what we think is good in a poem & determine how our senses of aesthetics inform our responses to this question. Working within our own aesthetic notions we will then begin to refine our writing, & help each other to write the best poems that we can. The workshop will conduct a number of actual experiments with writing that will allow us to step outside the world of id, which wants to keep all the beautiful words, & into the artistic self, which understands which pieces fit & which belong elsewhere. We will also engage the basic Poetry School of Poetry premise that the poet¹s first job is to learn how to edit. Dgls N. Rthschld has been behind the foods table at the New Years Reading more times than it is worth mentioning. He has also written a number of chapbooks, the most ground breaking entitled The Minor Arcane. He has taught what seem to be innumerable college writing classes, and is currently teaching at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, a CUNY school.

The Visible Unseen: Writing Outside Borders Akilah Oliver Thursdays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 15th

Are poetry and prose virtual realities, simulations of something other, or the real thing? Where does the ³I² live? How many moments exist in the moment of the line? What borders of form are crucial for us to hang on to & which boundaries are collapsible? In this workshop, we will explore the connections and tensions between the visible and the unseen world/s, not as dualities or binaries, but as complementary sites of composition. Through engagement with text (written and visual), public spaces, the imagination, dreams and Eros, participants are invited to think of writing as that which re-imagines the known and the unknown. Though this is a text based workshop, poets, prose writers, and artists from all disciplines are welcome. Readings include: Giorgio Agamben, Laura Mullen, Whitman, Anne Waldman, Derrida, & Ben Okri. Akilah Oliver is the author of the she said dialogues: flesh memory, An Arriving Guard of Angels, Thusly Coming to Greet, a(A)gust, & The Putterer¹s Notebook. She is faculty at the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics Summer Writing Program at Naropa University.

Impurity Rocks! A Poetry Lab & Workshop Joanna Fuhrman
Fridays at 7 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 16th

The class will focus on ³impure² poetry, poetry that employs a mixture of tones and styles. Special emphasis will be placed on works that combine narrative and humor with linguistic and imagistic disjunction. In-class exercises and take-home assignments will touch on issues of scale, space, sound, genre and wordplay. Time will also be devoted to reading published poems as well as in-depth discussions and critiques of student work. Joanna Fuhrman is the author of three collections of poetry, Freud in Brooklyn, Ugh Ugh Ocean and Moraine, all published by Hanging Loose Press. She has taught poetry writing at The University of Washington, The Cooper Union Saturday Outreach program and in the New York City Public Schools.

Poetry For The Page, Stage, And Computer Screen Thomas Savage Saturdays
At 12 pm: 10 Sessions Begin February 17th

This course is a writing workshop where students' writing is the main focus. Also used as inspiration and writing prompts will be samples of work by writers from The Beats, Black Mountain poets, The New York School (all generations), Language Poetry, Poets Theater, Pablo Neruda, and works being published today online, among other sources. Practices will include reading as well as writing assignments and, in a great Poetry Project tradition, in-class writing. Thomas Savage has written eight published books of poems including most recently Bamiyan Poems, Brain Surgery Poems and Political Conditions/Physical States. His poems have appeared in many print and online venues including The New York Times, Hanging Loose, Rattapallax, Big Bridge, Black Box, and regularly on the Wryting-L website. He has taught poetry workshops at The Poetry Project and Tribes Gallery.

* The workshop fee is $350, which includes a one year Sustaining Poetry Project membership and tuition for any and all spring and fall classes. Reservations are required due to limited class space, and payment must be received in advance. Caps on class sizes, if in effect, will be determined by workshop leaders. Please send payment and reservations to:

The Poetry Project, St. Mark's Church
Attn: Workshops
131 East 10th St.
NYC, NY 10003

For more information, or to pay by credit card, please call [redacted], or email: [redacted].

http://www.poetryproject.com/workshops.php

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Winter Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $85 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

14. UbuWeb

UBUWEB :: Selected Resources - Feb 2007, by Charles Bernstein

Thu 1 Feb 2007

__ U B U W E B __
http://ubu.com

UBUWEB :: Selected Resources, Feb 2007
---

* * * Selected by Charles Bernstein * * *

1. Kevin Davies, Pause Button
http://www.ubu.com/ubu/davies_pause.html

2. Craig Dworkin, Legion II
http://www.ubu.com/contemp/dworkin/dworkin_legion.pdf

3. Deanna Ferguson, The Relative Minor http://www.ubu.com/ubu/pdf/ferguson_relative.pdf

4. Marjorie Perloff, "Concrete Prose: Haraldo de Campos Galáxias and After" http://www.ubu.com/papers/perloff.html

5. Yunte Huang, "Angel Island and the Poetics of Error" http://www.ubu.com/ethno/discourses/huang.

6. George Kuchar, The Kiss of Frankenstein
http://www.ubu.com/ubu/unpublishable/012_kuchar_frankenstein.pdf

7. Ron Silliman, Sunset Debris
http://www.ubu.com/ubu/pdf/silliman_sunset.pdf

8. Aram Saroyan, Aram Saroyan
http://www.ubu.com/historical/saroyan/saroyan01.html

9. Brian Kim Stefans, Alpha Betty's Chronicles http://www.ubu.com/ubu/stefans_alpha.html

10. Hannah Weiner, Little Books/Indians
http://www.ubu.com/ubu/weiner_indians.html

Bonus Track:. Gertrude Stein, from Five Words in a Line
http://www.ubu.com/concept/stein_five.html

---------- "Ubu is justly famous for its extraordinary collection of audio and movie files and historical sound and visual poetry. For this list, however, I mostly chose from UBU's contemporary selection of poetry books and essays." - Charles Bernstein

Charles Bernstein's most recent book is Girly Man:
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/books/girly-man

With Al Filreis he directs PennSound:
http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/

And with Loss Pequeño Glazier the <>Electronic Poetry Center:
http://epc.buffalo.edu/

Where he has a web log:
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/blog/

UBUWEB :: Selected Resources, Feb 2007

UBUWEB IS ENTIRELY FREE

__ U B U W E B __
http://ubu.com

_____
___ Any questions? Get answers on any topic at www.Answers.yahoo.com. Try it now.

↑ Index

15. Stephen Vincent
Onedit #7
Thu 1 Feb 2007

I forward this announcement from Tim Atkins (English/London Transnational Poet) who is the editor of Onedit, an online mag. Apart from the fact that I am in it (and if you are hungering for more poems and fragments from Sleeping With Sappho, there is a robust number of them) (end of parenthesis!), Tim is an acute, smart editor (as well as a lively, totally irreverent - i.e. 'contemporary' - translator of Horace) and he does real well with selecting and presenting \ the work of a robust range of characters, I mean, poets.

Enjoy,

Stephen Vincent

Dear Friends,

The new issue of onedit launches on 24th January 2007.

http://www.onedit.net/

onedit 7 features work by:

Ray Di Palma
Ken Edwards
Thomas Evans
Josep-Maria Junoy
Simon Pettet
Kit Robinson
Joan Salvat-Papasseit
Leslie Scalapino

Aaron Shurin
Gregory Vincent St.Thomasino
Philip Terry
Stephen Vincent

With best wishes from Tim Atkins [editor]

--
Tim Atkins <[redacted]>

↑ Index

16. Jules Boykoff
Halpern/Stadler reading in Portland, OR, 2 February
Thu 1 Feb 2007

For people in or near Portland, Oregon...

Please join us for the third installation of the The Tangent Reading Series!

Innovative writers Rob Halpern (San Francisco) and Matthew Stadler (Portland) will read their work on Friday, February 2nd at 7 p.m., Clinton Corner Café, 2633 SE 21st Ave. Portland, Oregon. Admission is free.

Rob Halpern is the author of Rumored Place (Krupskaya 2004) and Disaster Suite (Vigilance Society 2006). Currently, he’s co-editing the poems of the late Frances Jaffer together with Kathleen Fraser, writing a collaborative poem with Taylor Brady, and translating the early essays of Georges Perec, the first of which is forthcoming in Chicago Review. He lives in San Francisco.

Matthew Stadler is the author of four novels, including Landscape: Memory and Allan Stein. He was the literary editor of Nest Magazine and is the co-founder and editor of Clear Cut Press. His non- fiction has been published widely in North America and Europe, and he is currently researching the early history of North Pacific America, for a series of lectures and essays. He lives in North Portland.

For more information about the Tangent Reading Series, and for samples of Rob Halpern's and Matthew Stadler's work, see:
www.thetangentpress.org/readings.html

↑ Index

17. ric carfagna
deconstruction and poetry
Thu 1 Feb 2007

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

↑ Index

18. Haas Bianchi

Chicagopostmodernpoetry is updated with profiles of Linh Dinh and Tony Tost

Thu 1 Feb 2007

Dear Friends of Chicagopostmodernpoetry.com

Please check out our updated site with new profiles of Linh Dinh and Tony Tost and the updated calendar for Chicago and region of February and March

RB

Raymond L Bianchi
chicagopostmodernpoetry.com/
collagepoetchicago.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

19. Jason Quackenbush

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Thu 1 Feb 2007

---

michel deguy comes to mind.

ric carfagna wrote:
> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

↑ Index

20. ALDON L NIELSEN

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Thu 1 Feb 2007

---

there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."

Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --

On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.

ric carfagna wrote:
> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

<<

> what makes us free -- intolerable
> paradox at the heart of speech.
> --Robert Kelly
>
> Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/
>
> Aldon L. Nielsen
> Kelly Professor of American Literature
> The Pennsylvania State University
> 116 Burrowes
> University Park, PA 16802-6200
>
> [redacted]

↑ Index

22. Jason Quackenbush
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Thu 1 Feb 2007

Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.

and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.

ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
> there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."
>
> Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
>
> On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:
>
>
> michel deguy comes to mind.
>
> ric carfagna wrote:
>
>>Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>
>
>
>

<<

& maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of melville here of course.)

> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

↑ Index

25. Alexander Dickow
dubravka, green integer
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Dubravka,
Green Integer is, yes, one of the publishing houses I most admire. Their catalogue is...droolworthy. Green Integer makes me swoon. Beautiful little books, too. Everyone should pore carefully over the wonders of Green Integer Review and its previous incarnation. And, you might read Douglas Messerli's (sorta the mastermind behind Green Integer, I believe) comments and poems on the Argotist Online lately.
Amicalement,
Alex

www.alexdickow.net/blog/

> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

26. George Bowering
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Well if "poets" can include Kant and Hegel,
maybe we should also look at , oh, Bart Starr.

gb

On 1-Feb-07, at 10:02 PM, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he > writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the > architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like > Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I > mean.

>
> & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who > writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of > melville here of course.)
>
>> >
>>
>> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>>
>
>
"Whip" Bowering
Shortstop to the Gods

↑ Index

27. Simon DeDeo
deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

echo other e-mails that it's not the best-phrased question. But of course there is glas, http://www.hydra.umn.edu/derrida/glas1.html

↑ Index

28. Barry Schwabsky
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one writer who could not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way out in front of the reader/critic.

George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote: Well if "poets" can include Kant and Hegel, maybe we should also look at , oh, Bart Starr.

gb

On 1-Feb-07, at 10:02 PM, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he > writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the > architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like > Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I > mean.
>

> & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who > writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of > melville here of course.)
>
>> >
>>
>> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>>
>
>
"Whip" Bowering
Shortstop to the Gods

↑ Index

29. Michael Dylan Welch
Re: Haiku Death Match
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Re: Joanna Connors in her column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday, February 1, 2007) Plain Dealer, reviews the Haiku Death Match sponsored by Mayor Frank Jackson's Rotunda Art Committee

http://www.cleveland.com/entertainment/plaindealer/index.ssf?/base/entertainment/1170322671208500.xml&coll=2

Too bad this story -- and the Haiku Death Match -- perpetuates the sorry misunderstanding of haiku as 5-7-5 syllables in English. In Japanese, they count sounds, not syllables, so if one writes 17 syllables in English, it's a much longer poem than what the Japanese write. Scholars and translators, not to mention the vast bulk of leading haiku poets writing in English, have put this to bed long ago (shall I list them?), yet still the misperception of haiku is rampant in North America and elsewhere in the English-speaking world. Not only is 5-7-5 the wrong target in English, but where's the season word, the cutting word or two-part juxtaposition, the sensory objective imagery? That's nearly never taught in schools. Major textbooks and curriculum guides are frequently wrong, misguided, partial, or superficial. It's a shame, and does disservice to haiku as literature in English. And books such as Honku, Haikus for Jews, and their misguided ilk merely perpetuate these misperce ptions. It's simply pseudo-haiku -- haiku in name only -- while serious haiku poets who appear in the pages of Modern Haiku or Frogpond, or in anthologies such as Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology (third edition from W. W. Norton, 1999) get insufficient respect. What can be done about these misperceptions?

I'm sure the Haiku Death Match was a lot of fun, but it does perpetuate the misunderstanding.

Michael Dylan Welch

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

30. Anny Ballardini
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

This might seem a rhetorical question meant to stir waters, but believe me, it is not:
what do poets represent?

On 2/2/07, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> On 1-Feb-07, at 7:00 PM, ric carfagna wrote:
>
> > Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
> >
> >
>
> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>
>
>
>
> G. Harry Bowering,
> Born to hit opposite-field singles.
>

↑ Index

31. Barry Schwabsky
Re: Haiku Death Match
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Why is it then that whenever I see a transliteration of a Japanese haiku it gives every appearance of having seventeen syllables? E.g., "natsu-gusa ya / tsuwamono-domo-ga / yume no ato" (Basho)

Michael Dylan Welch <[redacted]> wrote: Re: Joanna Connors in her column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday, February 1, 2007) Plain Dealer, reviews the Haiku Death Match sponsored by Mayor Frank Jackson's Rotunda Art Committee

http://www.cleveland.com/entertainment/plaindealer/index.ssf?/base/entertainment/1170322671208500.xml&coll=2

Too bad this story -- and the Haiku Death Match -- perpetuates the sorry misunderstanding of haiku as 5-7-5 syllables in English. In Japanese, they count sounds, not syllables, so if one writes 17 syllables in English, it's a much longer poem than what the Japanese write. Scholars and translators, not to mention the vast bulk of leading haiku poets writing in English, have put this to bed long ago (shall I list them?), yet still the misperception of haiku is rampant in North America and elsewhere in the English-speaking world. Not only is 5-7-5 the wrong target in English, but where's the season word, the cutting word or two-part juxtaposition, the sensory objective imagery? That's nearly never taught in schools. Major textbooks and curriculum guides are frequently wrong, misguided, partial, or superficial. It's a shame, and does disservice to haiku as literature in English. And books such as Honku, Haikus for Jews, and their misguided ilk merely perpetuate these
misperce
ptions. It's simply pseudo-haiku -- haiku in name only -- while serious haiku poets who appear in the pages of Modern Haiku or Frogpond, or in anthologies such as Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology (third edition from W. W. Norton, 1999) get insufficient respect. What can be done about these misperceptions?

I'm sure the Haiku Death Match was a lot of fun, but it does perpetuate the misunderstanding.

Michael Dylan Welch

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

32. Jeffrey Side

Contribution by Terrie Leigh Relf of NFG Magazine to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature.

Fri 2 Feb 2007

There is a contribution by Terrie Leigh Relf of NFG Magazine to The Argotist Online "Intreviews with Editors" feature:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Terrie%20Leigh%20Relf.htm

↑ Index

33. Wystan Curnow
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Agreed. Theorists represent poetry.
Wystan

_____

From: UB Poetics discussion group on behalf of George Bowering
Sent: Fri 2/02/2007 6:08 p.m.
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

On 1-Feb-07, at 7:00 PM, ric carfagna wrote:

> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

G. Harry Bowering,
Born to hit opposite-field singles.

↑ Index

34. jcu
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Poets represent percepts.

----- Original Message -----
From: "Anny Ballardini" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 4:48 AM
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

> This might seem a rhetorical question meant to stir waters, but believe me,
> it is not:
> what do poets represent?
>
> On 2/2/07, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

> On 1-Feb-07, at 7:00 PM, ric carfagna wrote:
>
> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>
> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>
> G. Harry Bowering,
> Born to hit opposite-field singles.

↑ Index

35. jcu

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

Poets represent percepts.

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "Anny Ballardini" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 4:48 AM
> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
>
> This might seem a rhetorical question meant to stir waters, but believe me,
> it is not:
> what do poets represent?
>
> On 2/2/07, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> On 1-Feb-07, at 7:00 PM, ric carfagna wrote:
>
> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>
> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

> G. Harry Bowering,
> Born to hit opposite-field singles.

↑ Index

36. charles alexander
Re: Haiku Death Match
Fri 2 Feb 2007

I don't have an immediate answer to your question of "why", though I believe Michael Dylan Welch is right about this. Most of this covered in William Higginson's Haiku Handbook, but even in the haiku entry in Wikipedia one can learn that a haiku is generally (there are exceptions) 17 on or sounds, more like a mora, "a phonetic unit similar but not identical to the syllable of a language such as English." It's true that 17 English syllables is generally longer than a Japanese haiku. A syllable in English may also carry a meaning in a different way than an "on" in Japanese. Generally a 17-syllable haiku in English seems noticeably longer than a haiku in Japanese, if only a little bit. But the syllable-length issue may be a less dynamic question than the others Welch brings up, i.e. various things about seasonal words, cutting words, juxtapositions, "haiku mind," the frequent practice of linked haiku or renga (sometimes renku) to form a longer work, etc.

charles

At 03:57 AM 2/2/2007, you wrote:
>Why is it then that whenever I see a transliteration of a Japanese haiku
>it gives every appearance of having seventeen syllables? E.g., "natsu-gusa >ya / tsuwamono-domo-ga / yume no ato" (Basho)
>
>Michael Dylan Welch <[redacted]> wrote: Re: Joanna Connors in her >column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday, February 1, 2007)
>Plain Dealer, reviews the Haiku Death Match sponsored by Mayor Frank >Jackson's Rotunda Art Committee
>
>http://www.cleveland.com/entertainment/plaindealer/index.ssf?/base/entertainment/1170322671208500.xml&coll=2
>
>Too bad this story -- and the Haiku Death Match -- perpetuates the sorry >misunderstanding of haiku as 5-7-5 syllables in English. In Japanese, they >count sounds, not syllables, so if one writes 17 syllables in English, >it's a much longer poem than what the Japanese write. Scholars and >translators, not to mention the vast bulk of leading haiku poets writing >in English, have put this to bed long ago (shall I list them?), yet still >the misperception of haiku is rampant in North America and elsewhere in >the English-speaking world. Not only is 5-7-5 the wrong target in English, >but where's the season word, the cutting word or two-part juxtaposition,

>the sensory objective imagery? That's nearly never taught in schools.
>Major textbooks and curriculum guides are frequently wrong, misguided, >partial, or superficial. It's a shame, and does disservice to haiku as >literature in English. And books such as Honku, Haikus for Jews, and >their misguided ilk merely perpetuate these
> misperce
>ptions. It's simply pseudo-haiku -- haiku in name only -- while serious >haiku poets who appear in the pages of Modern Haiku or Frogpond, or in >anthologies such as Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology (third >edition from W. W. Norton, 1999) get insufficient respect. What can be >done about these misperceptions?
>
>I'm sure the Haiku Death Match was a lot of fun, but it does perpetuate >the misunderstanding.
>
>Michael Dylan Welch
>_____
>Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security >tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, >free AOL Mail and more.

charles alexander / chax press

fold the book inside the book keep it open always read from the inside out speak then

↑ Index

37. Shaunanne Tangney
Re: Haiku Death Match
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Did I read once that in Japanese haiku there is something called a "delayed verb"--or maybe it's just delayed action: that there is no overt action in a haiku until the last line--maybe even no verb until the last line--and that this is a function of Japanese grammar that we can't do in English grammar? --ShaunAnne

On Friday, February 2, 2007, at 04:57 AM, Barry Schwabsky wrote:

Why is it then that whenever I see a transliteration of a Japanese haiku it gives every appearance of having seventeen syllables? E.g., "natsu-gusa ya / tsuwamono-domo-ga / yume no ato" (Basho)

Michael Dylan Welch <[redacted]> wrote: Re: Joanna Connors in her column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday, February 1, 2007) Plain Dealer, reviews the Haiku Death Match sponsored by Mayor Frank Jackson's Rotunda Art Committee

http://www.cleveland.com/entertainment/plaindealer/index.ssf?/base/entertainment/1170322671208500.xml&coll=2

*Too bad this story -- and the Haiku Death Match -- perpetuates the sorry misunderstanding of haiku as 5-7-5 syllables in English. In Japanese, they count sounds, not syllables, so if one writes 17 syllables in English, it's a much longer poem than what the Japanese write. Scholars and translators, not to mention the vast bulk of leading haiku poets writing in English, have put this to bed long ago (shall I list them?), yet still the misperception of haiku is rampant in North America and elsewhere in the English-speaking world. Not only is 5-7-5 the wrong target in English, but where's the season word, the cutting word or two-part juxtaposition, the sensory objective imagery? That's nearly never taught in schools. Major textbooks and curriculum guides are frequently wrong, misguided, partial, or superficial. It's a shame, and does disservice to haiku as literature in English. And books such as Honku, Haikus for Jews, and their misguided ilk merely perpetuate these*
misperce
*ptions. It's simply pseudo-haiku -- haiku in name only -- while serious haiku poets who appear in the pages of Modern Haiku or Frogpond, or in anthologies such as Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology (third edition from W. W. Norton, 1999) get insufficient respect. What can be done about these misperceptions?*

I'm sure the Haiku Death Match was a lot of fun, but it does perpetuate the misunderstanding.

Michael Dylan Welch

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

38. Aryanil Mukherjee
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

sure, a poet must not be seen as the theorist's spokesperson. however, from a purely academic perspective, many critics opine that John Ashbery constructs the best example from west.

Aryanil

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Anny Ballardini
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 4:48 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

This might seem a rhetorical question meant to stir waters, but believe me,
it is not:
what do poets represent?

On 2/2/07, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> On 1-Feb-07, at 7:00 PM, ric carfagna wrote:
>
> > Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
> >
> >
>
> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>
>
>
>
> G. Harry Bowering,
> Born to hit opposite-field singles.
>

↑ Index

39. Maria Damon
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

did kant write poetry???

At 10:02 PM -0800 2/1/07, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he >writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the >architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like >Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I >mean.
>
>& maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who >writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of >melville here of course.)
>
>> >
>>
>>In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

↑ Index

40. mIEKAL aND

Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze

Fri 2 Feb 2007

Dubravka:

This is a fascinating comment & something that I suspected also. It would be interesting to here Douglas Messerli's comments on this. I'm also hoping you could give a few examples of these new experimental Serbian poets & any translations that might be available online. Certainly with the advent of the web, it must be much easier for un (der)represented to establish a virtual presence, which is at least a beginning to achieving a bit of recognition. Or if nothing else propose to one of these monstrous poetry webzines like Jacket or Big Bridge to put together a collection of the poets you think are beneath the radar.

& for myself I would be also interested to know if there is a historical Serbian avant garde of which we in the west know nothing...

~mIEKAL

On Feb 1, 2007, at 3:01 PM, Dubravka Djuric wrote:

> dear listmemebers,
>
> it has been long time since i wrote something for this list. now, i would like to comment the site of green integer. surfing, i came upon it, and was really amaizing to see so much poets all arround the world, including the former yugoslav poets! which i find really great! i was specially interestied in the poets from serbia, i am

> from serbia, and i was so sad to see that some right wing oriented poets are on the list... and now i think about how in small cultures such as serbia, you cannot have a second scene, because we are all 'one big family', right and left, and every poet who ever wrote experimental poetry is erased, acctually could not be establish as a poet of any value, it doesnt fit into the picture of great national poetry, and what you call moderate modernisam and postmodernism, or what you call(ed) mainstream poets just that kind of poetry do exist. other kind of poets cannot survive, they are out of sight, out of attention of dominant culture, and of course, they could never be in attention of outside gaze, outside attention. i find it very very sad... i dont know how are in other cultures outside usa.....

The covers of this book are too far apart. -- Ambrose Bierce

↑ Index

41. Christopher Leland Winks

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

No, but Karl Marx certainly did!

----- Original Message -----
From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, February 2, 2007 9:28 am
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

> did kant write poetry???
>
> At 10:02 PM -0800 2/1/07, Eireene Nealand wrote:
> well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he > writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the > architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I mean.
>
> & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of melville here of course.)
>
> >
>
> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

↑ Index

42. mIEKAL aND
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

George—you sent me to Google with this one to find any reference to Bart the poet. But alas, only a bit of hearsay.

"But nothing equalled the pure grace and poetry of Bart Starr. Records be damned, he was a joy to watch."

http://midamericaprogressive.blogspot.com/2006/12/brett-favres-last- game-at-lambeau-field.html

~mIEKAL

On Feb 2, 2007, at 12:24 AM, George Bowering wrote:

> Well if "poets" can include Kant and Hegel,
> maybe we should also look at , oh, Bart Starr.
>
> gb

↑ Index

43. Aldon Nielsen
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
>Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the >method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.
>
>and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense >that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.
>
>ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>>there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and >>it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a >>poet would then "represent."
>>Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a >>good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
>>On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:
>>
>>michel deguy comes to mind.
>>ric carfagna wrote:
>>
>>>Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>>
>><<<

112 Burrowes
University Park, PA 16802-6200

[redacted] [office]

[redacted] [Fax]

Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

44. Bob Marcacci

MiPoRadio's THE COUNTDOWN Episode 19 featuring William Allegrezza!

Fri 2 Feb 2007

We're at it again. I'm inviting all y'all to take a listen to THE COUNTDOWN #19, my irregularly released podcast for MiPoRadio. You can do that by going to <http://www.miporadio.net/BOB_MARCACCI/> and clicking the obvious. My last show from the three-dot capital...

Episode 19 highlights the poetry of William Allegrezza, and also stars these poets and bloggers from around the world: Jill Chan, Peter Ciccariello, Del Ray Cross, AnnMarie Eldon, Juan Jose Martinez, Shin Yu Pai, Carol Peters, Rachel Phillips, Larry Sawyer & Mark Young.

If you like what you hear and you would like me to consider your own blog's offspring for future shows, send me a message and we'll add you to THE COUNTDOWN's blogroll. Comments and conversay appreciated, front or backchannel. Thanks for tuning in and special thanks to all the fine poets who recorded work for this one!

--
Bob Marcacci
<http://marcacci.blogspot.com/>

Most of us are just about as happy as we make up our minds to be. - Abraham Lincoln

↑ Index

45. Aldon Nielsen

two more losses

Fri 2 Feb 2007

> Obituaries in the NY TIMES today for both Gian Carlo Menotti and Whitney Balliett -- two great popularizers of music -- AND lyric --

<<

"I stand corrected, like a bishop of the obvious."
--Robert Kelly

Aldon Lynn Nielsen
George and Barbara Kelly Professor of American Literature
Department of English
The Pennsylvania State University
112 Burrowes
University Park, PA 16802-6200

[redacted] [office]

[redacted] [Fax]

Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

46. Loucks, James

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

How about my coming over to your house next Sunday at 2? Hope all is going well.

Jeff just told me he traded the Saab in for a new Focus wagon. I am glad he made that move. It will be a lot safer and more reliable.

I will call you in the middle of next week to see how you are doing. -- love, --Dad

James Loucks, Ph.D.
Department of English
OSU-Newark
1179 University Drive
Newark, OH 43055-1797
FAX: [redacted]
[redacted]
blog: www.jlouckscourses.blogspot.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Aldon Nielsen
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 10:30 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
>Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the >method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.
>
>and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense >that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.
>
>ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>>there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and
>>it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a >>poet would then "represent."
>>Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a >>good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
>>On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:
>>
>>michel deguy comes to mind.
>>ric carfagna wrote:
>>
>>>Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>>
>><<<

>>--Robert Kelly
>>Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/
>>Aldon L. Nielsen
>>Kelly Professor of American Literature
>>The Pennsylvania State University
>>116 Burrowes
>>University Park, PA 16802-6200
>>[redacted]

<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<>>>

48. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Haiku Death Match
Fri 2 Feb 2007

There's a "three-mora rule" (Dreimorengesetz) for ancient Greek and Latin words -- does the same go for Japanese?
(http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dreimorengesetz)

Could I get a good translation, taking into account the quantities of the Japanese original, as an example of how a haiku should read?

tl
veteran (pseudo-)haiku warrior

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of charles alexander
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 7:42
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

I don't have an immediate answer to your question of "why", though I believe Michael Dylan Welch is right about this. Most of this covered in

William Higginson's Haiku Handbook, but even in the haiku entry in Wikipedia one can learn that a haiku is generally (there are exceptions) 17 on or sounds, more like a mora, "a phonetic unit similar but not identical to the syllable of a language such as English." It's true that 17 English syllables is generally longer than a Japanese haiku. A syllable in English may also carry a meaning in a different way than an "on" in Japanese. Generally a 17-syllable haiku in English seems noticeably longer than a haiku in Japanese, if only a little bit. But the syllable-length

issue may be a less dynamic question than the others Welch brings up, i.e.
various things about seasonal words, cutting words, juxtapositions,
"haiku
mind," the frequent practice of linked haiku or renga (sometimes renku)
to form a longer work, etc.

charles

At 03:57 AM 2/2/2007, you wrote:
>Why is it then that whenever I see a transliteration of a Japanese
haiku
>it gives every appearance of having seventeen syllables? E.g.,

"natsu-gusa
>ya / tsuwamono-domo-ga / yume no ato" (Basho)
>
>Michael Dylan Welch <[redacted]> wrote: Re: Joanna Connors in her >column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday, February 1, 2007)
>Plain Dealer, reviews the Haiku Death Match sponsored by Mayor Frank >Jackson's Rotunda Art Committee
>
>http://www.cleveland.com/entertainment/plaindealer/index.ssf?/base/ente rtainment/1170322671208500.xml&coll=2
>
>Too bad this story -- and the Haiku Death Match -- perpetuates the sorry >misunderstanding of haiku as 5-7-5 syllables in English. In Japanese, they
>count sounds, not syllables, so if one writes 17 syllables in English, >it's a much longer poem than what the Japanese write. Scholars and >translators, not to mention the vast bulk of leading haiku poets
writing
>in English, have put this to bed long ago (shall I list them?), yet still
>the misperception of haiku is rampant in North America and elsewhere in >the English-speaking world. Not only is 5-7-5 the wrong target in English,
>but where's the season word, the cutting word or two-part
juxtaposition,
>the sensory objective imagery? That's nearly never taught in schools.
>Major textbooks and curriculum guides are frequently wrong, misguided, >partial, or superficial. It's a shame, and does disservice to haiku as >literature in English. And books such as Honku, Haikus for Jews,
and
>their misguided ilk merely perpetuate these > misperce
>ptions. It's simply pseudo-haiku -- haiku in name only -- while serious >haiku poets who appear in the pages of Modern Haiku or Frogpond, or
in >anthologies such as Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology (third >edition from W. W. Norton, 1999) get insufficient respect. What can be >done about these misperceptions?

>
>I'm sure the Haiku Death Match was a lot of fun, but it does perpetuate

>the misunderstanding.
>
>Michael Dylan Welch
>_____
_
>Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security >tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web,
>free AOL Mail and more.

charles alexander / chax press

fold the book inside the book keep it open always read from the inside out speak then

↑ Index

49. Simon DeDeo
deconstruction and predictability
Fri 2 Feb 2007

I had a feeling that e-mails like Aldon Nielsen's would start to arrive. What is it about Derrida that brings out this kinda "gotcha" in people?

Deconstruction is a practice like any other. I'll venture that it's far more pinned down by norms than poetry.

I wonder if Derrida lists give these kind of responses about poetry. Actually, I bet they do!

↑ Index

50. Maria Damon
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

like, "poetry" poetry? or are you referring to the inspired commodity fantasies of Kapital?

At 10:15 AM -0500 2/2/07, Christopher Leland Winks wrote:
>No, but Karl Marx certainly did!
>
>
>----- Original Message -----

>From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
>Date: Friday, February 2, 2007 9:28 am
>Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
>
>> did kant write poetry???
>>
>> At 10:02 PM -0800 2/1/07, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>> >well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I >> mean, he >> >writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to >> see the
>> >architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like >> >Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I >> >mean.
>> >
>> >& maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who >> >writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of >> >melville here of course.)
>> >
>> >> >
>> >>
>> >>In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>>

↑ Index

51. Mark Weiss
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

In the sense that the world, or for that matter breakfast cereal, is theory incarnate?

At 11:16 AM 2/2/2007, you wrote:
>In fact, poets are theory incarnate.
>
>
>George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
> On 1-Feb-07, at 7:00 PM, ric carfagna wrote:
>
> > Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
> >
> >
>

>In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>
>
>
>----------
>8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
> with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.

↑ Index

52. amy king
Re: deconstruction and predictability
Fri 2 Feb 2007

And though he certainly never intended it to spin the way it did and still does, Derrida himself acknowledged the practice of deconstruction and clarified its intent many times over. For an easy start, his earlier interviews (first volume of collected - title escapes me right now) work well.

His thinking through poetry and process, as related to deconstruction, among other considersations, are evidenced in his focus on a few poets' work, especially on de Man, though their relationship is hotly debated, for obvious reasons.

My last post of the day, so happy weekend all!

Simon DeDeo <[redacted]> wrote:
I had a feeling that e-mails like Aldon Nielsen's would start to arrive.
What is it about Derrida that brings out this kinda "gotcha" in people?

Deconstruction is a practice like any other. I'll venture that it's far more pinned down by norms than poetry.

Need Mail bonding?
Go to the Yahoo! Mail Q&A for great tips from Yahoo! Answers users.

↑ Index

53. Joe Amato
Re: Haiku Death Match
Fri 2 Feb 2007

While I think it's a good idea to understand that 5-7-5 is simply a convenience of sorts, even something of a mistranslation (even something of a cultural oversight), I feel about this pretty much the way I feel about bending any formal rule. I.e., it's fun to use 5-7-5 as an arbitrary constraint in composing haiku, just as it's fun to use 14 lines as an arbitrary constraint in composing sonnets. (Which latter might not result in 14 lines, ysee, but that won't keep me from calling it a sonnet.)

Granted, correcting the misconception is one thing. But having fun with same is quite another, which, to me, is one reason I write poetry.

Best,

Joe

> There's a "three-mora rule" (Dreimorengesetz) for ancient Greek and > Latin words -- does the same go for Japanese?
> (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dreimorengesetz)
>
> Could I get a good translation, taking into account the quantities of > *the Japanese original, as an example of how a haiku should read?*
>
> tl
> veteran (pseudo-)haiku warrior
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of charles alexander
> Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 7:42
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match
>
> I don't have an immediate answer to your question of "why", though I > believe Michael Dylan Welch is right about this. Most of this covered in
>
> William Higginson's Haiku Handbook, but even in the haiku entry in > Wikipedia one can learn that a haiku is generally (there are exceptions)
> 17
> on* or sounds, more like a mora, "a phonetic unit similar but not* > identical to the syllable of a language such as English." It's true that > 17
> English syllables is generally longer than a Japanese haiku. A syllable
> in
> English may also carry a meaning in a different way than an "on" in > Japanese. Generally a 17-syllable haiku in English seems noticeably > longer
> than a haiku in Japanese, if only a little bit. But the syllable-length
>
> issue may be a less dynamic question than the others Welch brings up,
> i.e.
> various things about seasonal words, cutting words, juxtapositions,
> "haiku

mind," the frequent practice of linked haiku or renga (sometimes renku) to form a longer work, etc.

charles

At 03:57 AM 2/2/2007, you wrote:
Why is it then that whenever I see a transliteration of a Japanese haiku
it gives every appearance of having seventeen syllables? E.g., "natsu-gusa
ya / tsuwamono-domo-ga / yume no ato" (Basho)

Michael Dylan Welch <[redacted]> wrote: Re: Joanna Connors in her column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday, February 1, 2007)
Plain Dealer, reviews the Haiku Death Match sponsored by Mayor Frank Jackson's Rotunda Art Committee

http://www.cleveland.com/entertainment/plaindealer/index.ssf?/base/entertainment/1170322671208500.xml&coll=2

Too bad this story -- and the Haiku Death Match -- perpetuates the sorry misunderstanding of haiku as 5-7-5 syllables in English. In Japanese, they count sounds, not syllables, so if one writes 17 syllables in English, it's a much longer poem than what the Japanese write. Scholars and translators, not to mention the vast bulk of leading haiku poets writing
in English, have put this to bed long ago (shall I list them?), yet still the misperception of haiku is rampant in North America and elsewhere in the English-speaking world. Not only is 5-7-5 the wrong target in English, but where's the season word, the cutting word or two-part juxtaposition,

the sensory objective imagery? That's nearly never taught in schools.
Major textbooks and curriculum guides are frequently wrong, misguided, partial, or superficial. It's a shame, and does disservice to haiku as *literature in English. And books such as Honku, Haikus for Jews, and* their misguided ilk merely perpetuate these misperce ptions. It's simply pseudo-haiku -- haiku in name only -- while serious

*haiku poets who appear in the pages of Modern Haiku or Frogpond, or*

> in > *anthologies such as Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology (third* > >edition from W. W. Norton, 1999) get insufficient respect. What can be > done about these misperceptions?
>
> I'm sure the Haiku Death Match was a lot of fun, but it does perpetuate
>
> the misunderstanding.
>
> Michael Dylan Welch
>
> ---
>
> _
> Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and > security
> tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the
> web,
> free AOL Mail and more.
>
> charles alexander / chax press
>
> fold the book inside the book keep it open always > read from the inside out speak then

↑ Index

54. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze

Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

mIEKAL,

The avant-garde in a country like Serbia, or others places, may work differently, having other points of reference. Is the avant-garde more a matter of spirit, rather than associated with a specific style? Is it a style or an idea?

The virtual space gives us a chance to discuss these points without all of us being around a coffee house table though that would be even better.

Ciao,

Murat

On 2/2/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Dubravka:
>
> This is a fascinating comment & something that I suspected also. It > would be interesting to here Douglas Messerli's comments on this. I'm > also hoping you could give a few examples of these new experimental

> Serbian poets & any translations that might be available online.
> Certainly with the advent of the web, it must be much easier for un > (der)represented to establish a virtual presence, which is at least a > beginning to achieving a bit of recognition. Or if nothing else > propose to one of these monstrous poetry webzines like Jacket or Big > Bridge to put together a collection of the poets you think are > beneath the radar.
>
> & for myself I would be also interested to know if there is a > historical Serbian avant garde of which we in the west know nothing...
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
>
> On Feb 1, 2007, at 3:01 PM, Dubravka Djuric wrote:
>
> > dear listmemebers,
> >
> > it has been long time since i wrote something for this list. now, i > > would like to comment the site of green integer. surfing, i came > > upon it, and was really amaizing to see so much poets all arround > > the world, including the former yugoslav poets! which i find really > > great! i was specially interestied in the poets from serbia, i am > > from serbia, and i was so sad to see that some right wing oriented > > poets are on the list... and now i think about how in small > > cultures such as serbia, you cannot have a second scene, because we > > are all 'one big family', right and left, and every poet who ever > > wrote experimental poetry is erased, acctually could not be > > establish as a poet of any value, it doesnt fit into the picture > > of great national poetry, and what you call moderate modernisam and > > postmodernism, or what you call(ed) mainstream poets just that kind > > of poetry do exist. other kind of poets cannot survive, they are > > out of sight, out of attention of dominant culture, and of course, > > they could never be in attention of outside gaze, outside > > attention. i find it very very sad... i dont know how are in other > > cultures outside usa.....
> >
>
> The covers of this book are too far apart. -- Ambrose Bierce
>

↑ Index

55. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Haiku Death Match
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Hiroaki Sato, who translated I think all the poems in his Japanese anthology (Literature of Eight Islands?), said that a haiku is written in a single line and the division into three lines (5-7-5) was a western invention. He even had done a series of haiku translations in single lines, very interesting ones since they undercut exactly that split between objective concrete (nature) and concluding inspiration.

Of course, I do not know how much of this Hiro made up.

Ciao,

Murat

On 2/2/07, Joe Amato <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> While I think it's a good idea to understand that 5-7-5 is simply a > convenience of sorts, even something of a mistranslation (even > something of a cultural oversight), I feel about this pretty much the > way I feel about bending any formal rule. I.e., it's fun to use > 5-7-5 as an arbitrary constraint in composing haiku, just as it's fun > to use 14 lines as an arbitrary constraint in composing sonnets.
> (Which latter might not result in 14 lines, ysee, but that won't keep > me from calling it a sonnet.)
>
> Granted, correcting the misconception is one thing. But having fun > with same is quite another, which, to me, is one reason I write > poetry.
>
> Best,
>
> Joe
>
>
> >There's a "three-mora rule" (Dreimorengesetz) for ancient Greek and > >Latin words -- does the same go for Japanese?
> > (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dreimorengesetz)
> >
> >Could I get a good translation, taking into account the quantities of > >the Japanese original, as an example of how a haiku should read?
> >
> >tl

> >veteran (pseudo-)haiku warrior
> >
> >
> >-----Original Message-----
> >From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> >On Behalf Of charles alexander
> >Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 7:42
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match
> >
> >I don't have an immediate answer to your question of "why", though I > >believe Michael Dylan Welch is right about this. Most of this covered in
> >
> >William Higginson's Haiku Handbook, but even in the haiku entry in > >Wikipedia one can learn that a haiku is generally (there are exceptions)
> >17
> >on or sounds, more like a mora, "a phonetic unit similar but not > >identical to the syllable of a language such as English." It's true that > >17
> >English syllables is generally longer than a Japanese haiku. A syllable
> >in > >English may also carry a meaning in a different way than an "on" in > >Japanese. Generally a 17-syllable haiku in English seems noticeably > >longer > >than a haiku in Japanese, if only a little bit. But the syllable-length
> >
> >issue may be a less dynamic question than the others Welch brings up,
> >i.e.
> >various things about seasonal words, cutting words, juxtapositions,
> >"haiku
> >mind," the frequent practice of linked haiku or renga (sometimes renku)
> >to > >form a longer work, etc.
> >
> >charles
> >
> >At 03:57 AM 2/2/2007, you wrote:
> >>Why is it then that whenever I see a transliteration of a Japanese
> >haiku
> >>it gives every appearance of having seventeen syllables? E.g.,
> >"natsu-gusa
> >>ya / tsuwamono-domo-ga / yume no ato" (Basho)

> >>
> >>Michael Dylan Welch <[redacted]> wrote: Re: Joanna Connors in her > >>column in the Arts & Life section of today's (Thursday, February 1, > >2007)
> >>Plain Dealer, reviews the Haiku Death Match sponsored by Mayor Frank > >>Jackson's Rotunda Art Committee
> >>
> >>http://www.cleveland.com/entertainment/plaindealer/index.ssf?/base/ente > >rtainment/1170322671208500.xml&coll=2
> >>
> >>Too bad this story -- and the Haiku Death Match -- perpetuates the > >sorry
> >>misunderstanding of haiku as 5-7-5 syllables in English. In Japanese,
> >they
> >>count sounds, not syllables, so if one writes 17 syllables in English, > >>it's a much longer poem than what the Japanese write. Scholars and > >>translators, not to mention the vast bulk of leading haiku poets
> >writing
> >>in English, have put this to bed long ago (shall I list them?), yet > >still
> >>the misperception of haiku is rampant in North America and elsewhere in
> >
> >>the English-speaking world. Not only is 5-7-5 the wrong target in > >English,
> >>but where's the season word, the cutting word or two-part
> >juxtaposition,
> >>the sensory objective imagery? That's nearly never taught in schools.
> >>Major textbooks and curriculum guides are frequently wrong, misguided, > >>partial, or superficial. It's a shame, and does disservice to haiku as > >>literature in English. And books such as Honku, Haikus for Jews,
> >and
> >>their misguided ilk merely perpetuate these
> >>   misperce
> >>ptions. It's simply pseudo-haiku -- haiku in name only -- while serious
> >
> >>haiku poets who appear in the pages of Modern Haiku or Frogpond, or
> >in > >>anthologies such as Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology (third > > >edition from W. W. Norton, 1999) get insufficient respect. What can be > >>done about these misperceptions?
> >>
> >>I'm sure the Haiku Death Match was a lot of fun, but it does perpetuate

> >
> >>the misunderstanding.
> >>
> >>Michael Dylan Welch
> >>_____
> >_
> >>Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and > >security
> >>tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the > >web,
> >>free AOL Mail and more.
> >
> >charles alexander / chax press
> >
> >fold the book inside the book keep it open always > > read from the inside out speak then
>

↑ Index

56. Alan Sondheim

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

rearrange the letters of his name and you get 'tank'
- that says it all!

- Alan

On Fri, 2 Feb 2007, Maria Damon wrote:

> did kant write poetry???
>
> At 10:02 PM -0800 2/1/07, Eireene Nealand wrote:
> well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I mean.
>
> & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of melville here of course.)
>
> >

> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

57. Loucks, James

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

To all, -- Please forgive me for posting my family mail in the Poetics Listserv. Do not know how that happened! -- Jim

James Loucks, Ph.D.
Department of English
OSU-Newark
1179 University Drive
Newark, OH 43055-1797
FAX: [redacted]
[redacted]
blog: http://jlouckscourses.blogspot.com

-----Original Message-----
From: Loucks, James
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 11:01 AM
To: UB Poetics discussion group
Cc: Loucks, James
Subject: RE: deconstruction and poetry

How about my coming over to your house next Sunday at 2? Hope all is going well.

Jeff just told me he traded the Saab in for a new Focus wagon. I am glad he made that move. It will be a lot safer and more reliable.

I will call you in the middle of next week to see how you are doing. -- love, -- Dad

James Loucks, Ph.D.
Department of English
OSU-Newark
1179 University Drive
Newark, OH 43055-1797
FAX: [redacted]
[redacted]
blog: www.jlouckscourses.blogspot.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Aldon Nielsen
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 10:30 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
>Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the >method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.
>
>and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense >that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.
>
>ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>>there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and
>>it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a >>poet would then "represent."

>>Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a >>good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
>>On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:
>>
>>michel deguy comes to mind.
>>ric carfagna wrote:
>>
>>>Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>>
>><<<

58. Christopher Leland Winks

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

Those, certainly, but also his youthful, hyper-romantic love poems to Jenny von Westphalen -- which City Lights published a long time ago.

See also Peter Demetz, "Karl Marx and the Poets," and S.S. Prawer, "Karl Marx and World Literature" -- Marx was always inspired by poetry.

----- Original Message -----
From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, February 2, 2007 11:20 am
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry > like, "poetry" poetry? or are you referring to the inspired > commodity

> fantasies of Kapital?
>
> At 10:15 AM -0500 2/2/07, Christopher Leland Winks wrote:
> >No, but Karl Marx certainly did!
> >
> >
> >----- Original Message -----
> >From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
> >Date: Friday, February 2, 2007 9:28 am
> >Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
> >
> >> did kant write poetry???
> >>
> >> At 10:02 PM -0800 2/1/07, Eireene Nealand wrote:
> >> >well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I > >> mean, he > >> >writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to > >> see the > >> >architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes > more like > >> >Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs > sentences, I
> >> >mean.
> >> >
> >> >& maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who
> >> >writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of > >> >melville here of course.)

> >> >
> >> >> >
> >> >>
> >> >>In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
> >>
>

↑ Index

59. Alan Sondheim

[WDL] Sondheim's ORDERS OF THE REAL (fwd)

Fri 2 Feb 2007

This message is in MIME format. The first part should be readable text, while the remaining parts are likely unreadable without MIME-aware tools.

--0-746031199-1170436966=:10341

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 10:54:05 -0000
From: Lawrence Upton <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: [WDL] Sondheim's ORDERS OF THE REAL

Writers Forum has reprinted Alan Sondheim's _ORDERS OF THE REAL_ - a gathering of numerous speculative and other articles on the digital life and related matters

Sondheim, Alan; Orders of the real;44 pp; A4 portrait; cover by author; 18 June 2005; reprinted January 2007; ISBN 1 84254 601 5; £4.00 + £1.50 (p & p for UK)

i.e. UK Total is £5.50. North America £7.00. elsewhere please ask

At the moment it is only possible to purchase it by cheque or cash (when we run bookstalls at events). Paypal will be reinstated as soon as Paypal can get their heads round it

Until then, I am sorry but we need a sterling cheque - non-sterling cheques add £9 [this is required because HSBC shareholders are so poor - WF doesn't get any of it]

Cheques payable to Writers Forum

Writers Forum

32 Downside Road

Sutton

Surrey SM2 5HP

If this is all impossible, contact me and let's see if something can be worked out

---
"that microcephalic bore (i.e. fuckwit) Lawrence Upton"
Sean O'Brien, discerning critic

Archive of the Now http://www.archiveofthenow.com/ British Electronic Poetry Centre http://www.soton.ac.uk/~bepc/poets/upton.htm Personal Page http://www.myspace.com/lawrenceupton Personal Page http://pages.britishlibrary.net/lawrence.upton/ (due to move somewhere! shortly) WF Workshop: http://writersforumpublications.blogspot.com/ WF publications: http://writersforum-workshop.blogspot.com/

* * Visit the Writing and the Digital Life blog http://www.hum.dmu.ac.uk/blogs/wdl/ * To alter your subscription settings on this list, log on to Subscriber's Corner at http://www.jiscmail.ac.uk/lists/writing-and-the-digital-life.html --0-746031199-1170436966=:10341--

↑ Index

60. Deborah Poe

Re: deconstruction and poetry (la famille de loucks)

Fri 2 Feb 2007

I thought it was a gesture to deconstruction.

"We will let these yarns of suns and sons spin on for a while." Jacques Derrida

<wink>

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Loucks, James Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 12:19 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

To all, -- Please forgive me for posting my family mail in the Poetics Listserv. Do not know how that happened! -- Jim

James Loucks, Ph.D.
Department of English
OSU-Newark
1179 University Drive
Newark, OH 43055-1797
FAX: [redacted]
[redacted]
blog: http://jlouckscourses.blogspot.com
-----Original Message-----
From: Loucks, James
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 11:01 AM
To: UB Poetics discussion group
Cc: Loucks, James
Subject: RE: deconstruction and poetry

How about my coming over to your house next Sunday at 2? Hope all is going well.

Jeff just told me he traded the Saab in for a new Focus wagon. I am glad he made that move. It will be a lot safer and more reliable.

I will call you in the middle of next week to see how you are doing. -- love, -- Dad

James Loucks, Ph.D.
Department of English
OSU-Newark
1179 University Drive
Newark, OH 43055-1797
FAX: [redacted]
[redacted]
blog: www.jlouckscourses.blogspot.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Aldon Nielsen
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 10:30 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
>Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the >method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.
>
>and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense >that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.
>
>ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>>there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and
>>it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a >>poet would then "represent."
>>Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a >>good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
>>On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:
>>
>>michel deguy comes to mind.
>>ric carfagna wrote:
>>
>>>Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>>
>><<<

>>Kelly Professor of American Literature
>>The Pennsylvania State University
>>116 Burrowes
>>University Park, PA 16802-6200
>>[redacted]

<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<>>>

Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 7:12 AM
Subject: dubravka, green integer

> Dubravka,
> *Green Integer is, yes, one of the publishing houses I most admire. Their catalogue is...droolworthy. Green Integer makes me swoon. Beautiful little books, too. Everyone should pore carefully over the wonders of Green Integer Review and its previous incarnation.*
> And, you might read Douglas Messerli's (sorta the mastermind behind Green Integer, I believe) comments and poems on the Argotist Online lately.
> Amicalement,
> Alex
>
> www.alexdickow.net/blog/
>
> > les mots! ah quel désert à la fin merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

62. Stephen Vincent

Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze

Fri 2 Feb 2007

I am forwarding this following note from Doug Messerlli:

I just wanted to say that my ongoing PIP (Project for Innovative Poetry) listing on the Green Integer site is not meant to be a tombstone to some sort of past notion of poetic achievement, but an ongoing bibliographic resource with vital younger poets added as they publish new and major poetic work. Accordingly, I seek out any suggestions and additions, simply asking for complete bibliographical material, a photo, and a listing, in the original language, of the books (with publisher name, city and date). With regard to Dubrvka Djuric's statements, accordingly, the writers she enjoys and world obviously hope to promote do not necessarily need to be "erased" or ignored. Green Integer also seeks out new translations on any interesting figures in any language.

Douglas Messerli
Douglas Messerli
www.greeninteger.com
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/pepc/authors/messerli

mIEKAL,

The avant-garde in a country like Serbia, or others places, may work differently, having other points of reference. Is the avant-garde more a matter of spirit, rather than associated with a specific style? Is it a style or an idea?

The virtual space gives us a chance to discuss these points without all of us being around a coffee house table though that would be even better.

Ciao,

Murat

On 2/2/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Dubravka:
>
> This is a fascinating comment & something that I suspected also. It > would be interesting to here Douglas Messerli's comments on this. I'm > also hoping you could give a few examples of these new experimental > Serbian poets & any translations that might be available online.
> Certainly with the advent of the web, it must be much easier for un > (der)represented to establish a virtual presence, which is at least a > beginning to achieving a bit of recognition. Or if nothing else > propose to one of these monstrous poetry webzines like Jacket or Big > Bridge to put together a collection of the poets you think are > beneath the radar.
>
> & for myself I would be also interested to know if there is a > historical Serbian avant garde of which we in the west know nothing...
>
> ~mIEKAL
>

> Date: Thu, 1 Feb 2007 22:01:16 +0100
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: poets in small cultures and outside gaze
>
> dear listmemebers,
>
> it has been long time since i wrote something for this list. now, i would > like to comment the site of green integer. surfing, i > came upon it, and was really amaizing to see so much poets all arround the > world, including the former yugoslav poets! which i find really great! i was > specially interestied in the poets from serbia, i am from serbia, > and i was so sad to see that some right wing oriented poets are on the > list... and now i think about how in small cultures such as serbia, you cannot > have a second scene, because we are all 'one big family', right and left, and > every poet who ever wrote experimental poetry is erased, acctually could not > be establish as a poet of any value, it doesnt fit into the picture of great national poetry, and what you call moderate modernisam and postmodernism, or what you call(ed) mainstream poets just that kind of poetry do exist. other kind of poets cannot survive, they are out of sight, out of attention of dominant culture, and of course, they could never be in attention of outside gaze, outside attention. i find it very very sad... i dont know how are in other cultures outside usa.....

>
> ------ End of Forwarded Message

↑ Index

63. Marcus Bales
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

And here I thought it was a clever and subtle commentary on how deconstruction is bullshit.

M

On 2 Feb 2007 at 12:18, Loucks, James wrote:

> To all, -- Please forgive me for posting my family mail in the Poetics > Listserv. Do not know how that happened! -- Jim
>
> James Loucks, Ph.D.
> Department of English
> OSU-Newark
> 1179 University Drive
> Newark, OH 43055-1797
> FAX: [redacted]
> [redacted]
> blog: http://jlouckscourses.blogspot.com
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Loucks, James
> Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 11:01 AM
> To: UB Poetics discussion group
> Cc: Loucks, James
> Subject: RE: deconstruction and poetry
>
> How about my coming over to your house next Sunday at 2? Hope all is going well.
>
> Jeff just told me he traded the Saab in for a new Focus wagon. I am glad he made that move. It will be a lot safer and more reliable.

I will call you in the middle of next week to see how you are doing.
--
love, -- Dad

James Loucks, Ph.D.
Department of English
OSU-Newark
1179 University Drive
Newark, OH 43055-1797
FAX: [redacted]
[redacted]
blog: www.jlouckscourses.blogspot.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Aldon Nielsen
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 10:30 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied

to
texts.

and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense
that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.

ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and
it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."
Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge
--
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group
wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.
ric carfagna wrote:

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

*<<

112 Burrowes
University Park, PA 16802-6200

[redacted] [office]

[redacted] [Fax]

Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

--
No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.19/663 - Release Date: 2/1/2007 2:28 PM

↑ Index

64. Thomas savage
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

I've seen a great deal of poetry in the last few years which seems to my limited understanding of the term "deconstruction" to have been the product of deconstruction. This led me to ask a question on my blog (shantideva2.blogspot.com) "Which is more basic to the act of creation, construction or deconstruction?" So far, no one has answered my question. If anyone is interested, I would be interested in seeing some replies. Regards, Tom Savage

Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote: I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one writer who could not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way out in front of the reader/critic.

George Bowering wrote: Well if "poets" can include Kant and Hegel, maybe we should also look at , oh, Bart Starr.

gb

On 1-Feb-07, at 10:02 PM, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he > writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the > architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like > Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I > mean.
>

> & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who > writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of > melville here of course.)
>
>> >
>>
>> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>>
>
>
"Whip" Bowering
Shortstop to the Gods

Never miss an email again!
Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.

↑ Index

65. David-Baptiste Chirot

FW: Support the growing effort to prevent war with Iran

Fri 2 Feb 2007

> From: "Kevin Martin, Peace Action" <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: [redacted]
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Support the growing effort to prevent war with Iran
> Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 13:10:40 -0500 (EST)
>
> Dear David,
>
> Even as the U.S. Senate debates resolutions on the Iraq war and Bush's planned troop buildup, resistance to his equally disastrous military designs upon Iran is also building in Congress.
>
> As virtually every expert and commentator outside of President Bush's increasingly small circle of friends has declared, a war with Iran would be catastrophic - for attempts to end violence in Iraq, for peace in the Middle East, and for our relationship with the rest of the world. Such an attack would, like the war in Iraq itself, increase the terrorist threat against the U.S. rather than decrease it.
>
> We're keeping maximum pressure on Congress to end the Iraq war, but now we also need to build momentum to prevent any attack against Iran. Click here to send an email message to your Representative today.
>
> http://www.democracyinaction.org/dia/organizationsORG/Peaceact/campaign.jsp?

campaign_KEY=6651

Mr. Bush has repeatedly refused to use diplomacy to address Iran's nuclear program. Now, since his January 10 speech in which he said he would "seek out and destroy" Iranian networks that he claimed were supporting attacks on U.S. troops in Iraq, his administration has been clearly and methodically moving toward military confrontation.

 a second aircraft carrier group is now on its way to the Persian Gulf, and air missile defenses are being sent to our allies in the region - neither of which is necessary or useful to stop the violence in Iraq*

 Bush has repeatedly warned Iran, in virtually every recent speech and interview, not to "meddle" in Iraq*

 Bush has given an order for U.S. troops to kill Iranian "operatives" they find in Iraq*

 Claims of Iranian support for Iraqi insurgents are suddenly circulating in the mainstream media, citing "unnamed" administration sources, of course, and providing no evidence whatsoever (did the media learn nothing from Iraq?)*

Congress must stop Bush's march to war with Iran. Reps. Jones and DeFazio have introduced resolutions to do just that. Send your Representatives an email today and demand that they support these efforts!

http://www.democracyinaction.org/dia/organizationsORG/Peaceact/campaign.jsp?campaign_KEY=6651

t is hard to imagine that, given the current circumstances, President Bush would actually start a war with another country in the Middle East. But he has proven himself again and again to be impervious to facts and reality, and one cannot argue with the clear steps he has been taking to build first-strike U.S. forces in the area, to build a "rationale" for an attack on Iran, and to goad them into a military confrontation with other provocative acts.

People in the Middle East, Europe and around the world are horrified by the prospect of another war. An enlarging military conflict in the Middle East could easily grow into a world war, or the "clash of civilizations" Bush's most ardent supporters might actually want. Yet Mr. Bush brushes aside Iranian attempts at dialogue, and moves forward incessantly to confrontation.

This President must be stopped from attacking Iran. H.J. Res. 14, introduced by Rep. Walter Jones (R - SC 3), and H.Con.Res. 33, introduced > by Rep. Peter DeFazio (D - OR 4) would do just that. Please click here to send a message to your Representative and let him or her know - in no uncertain terms - no war with Iran!

>
> http://www.democracyinaction.org/dia/organizationsORG/Peaceact/campaign.jsp?campaign_KEY=6651
>
> Sincerely,
>
> Kevin M. Martin
> Executive Director
> Peace Action
>
> P.S. It's remarkable to think that our government would actively brush off Iranian overtures for dialogue, but that's exactly what is happening.
> Peace Action intends to tackle this problem with our own citizen diplomatic mission to Iran - we'll send you more on that in our next e-communication.
> In the meantime, though, please tell your Representative to stop the drive toward war with Iran
>
> http://www.democracyinaction.org/dia/organizationsORG/Peaceact/campaign.jsp?campaign_KEY=6651
>
> and sign our "No War with Iran!" petition
>
> http://democracyinaction.org/dia/organizationsORG/Peaceact/petition.jsp?petition_KEY=358
>
> if you haven't already, and pass it along to your friends!

_____ From predictions to trailers, check out the MSN Entertainment Guide to the Academy Awards® http://movies.msn.com/movies/oscars2007/?icid=ncoscartagline1

↑ Index

66. kevin thurston

Fwd: deconstruction and poetry (on behalf of amy king)

Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

see below for the king's message

i would like to add, they (poets) are not as easy to digest

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Date: Feb 2, 2007 1:58 PM
Subject: Fwd: deconstruction and poetry (on behalf of amy king)
To: [redacted]

Forward this to Poetics for me?

Yes, just like cereal, except poets think better. Poets also taste better.

Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 11:23:18 -0500
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
To: [redacted]

In the sense that the world, or for that matter breakfast cereal, is theory incarnate?

At 11:16 AM 2/2/2007, you wrote:
>In fact, poets are theory incarnate.
>
>
>George Bowering wrote:
> On 1-Feb-07, at 7:00 PM, ric carfagna wrote:
>
> > Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
> >
> >
>
>In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

Have a burning question? Go to Yahoo!
Answers<http://answers.yahoo.com/;_ylc=X3oDMTFvbGNhMGE3BF9TAzM5NjU0NTEwOARfcwMzOTY1NDUxMDMEc2VjA21haWxfdGFnbGluZQRzbGsDbWFpbF90YWcx>and get answers from real people who know.

--
new address as of 2/1

299 richmond ave lower buffalo, ny 14222
usofa

↑ Index

67. Tom W. Lewis
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

I may be "old-fashioned" or just clueless, but I learned deconstruction as a process of reading / analyzing texts, in my case texts in the ancient Greek & Latin canon.

for instance, one demonstration of deconstructive practice came from my Latin prof, who discussed Catullus' use of a term in Carmen 2 (passer = both "sparrow" and "term of endearment [in an obscene sense]") -- so the following passage can be read, simultaneously, on two levels:

Passer, deliciae meae puellae,
quicum ludere, quem in sinu tenere,
cui primum digitum dare adpetenti...

[Passer], delight of my girlfriend,
who plays with it, holds it in her lap,
for whose advances she offers her finger...

you can read passer as "sparrow" and "cock," and the dissonance -- or at least two-levelness -- creates a lexical or semantic tension that is not resolved.

as I write this, it strikes me that this is nothing more than an elaborate pun -- am I off the track re: deconstruction? or is deconstruction just "havin' fun with texts"?

two digressions:

Carl-Michael Bellman (18th c.) used to put polyglot dirty jokes in his songs, so that one (I don't remember which) throws in "ge björnen mat" a propros of nothing else in the piece -- "give the bear food" -- but when pronounced in Swedish, this phrase actually says something very rude in Russian.

has anyone else in List-land tried reading Finnegans Wake with an Irish accent? you pick up on a lot of buried information if you try this -- it dawned on me reading one passage that "damn fairy ann" could be read as "donc fait rien" -- then the whole page morphed into a kind of Joycean French argot, before my eyes... and no, I was perfectly sober at the time.

---

so, ultimately, what I'm asking: isn't deconstruction the recognition of multiple readings of a given text, where each and all exist simultaneously and in conjunction with every other reading? in other words, can one claim it to be similar to negative capability?

forgive the intrusion -- have a disorienting and wonder-making weekend.

tl

On 1-Feb-07, at 10:02 PM, Eireene Nealand wrote:

> well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he > writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the > architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like > Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I > mean.
>
> & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who > writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of > melville here of course.)
>
>> >
>>
>> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
>>
>
>
"Whip" Bowering
Shortstop to the Gods

Never miss an email again!
Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.

↑ Index

68. Rob McLennan seeking
Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

1) potential content for upcoming issues of Poetics.ca, including essays, interviews and manifestos. Stephen Brockwell & I, with new managing editor Roland Prevost, are working on the next issue, but are always looking for new content. Check out www.poetics.ca for previous issues, and send submissions to [redacted]

2) also, i may be moons behind, but working up to a bunch of new publications for above/ground press over the next month or so. subscriptions, whether new or renewal, are $40 Canadian (outside Canada, $40 US). more info here: http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2006/11/aboveground-press-2007-subscriptions.html ; if you already are a subscriber, envelopes have been slowly going out since the middle of december & will continue to...

3) anyone with an office in ottawa that can get me cheap or free photocopies? its been dry the past year or so...

rob

-- poet/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...12th poetry coll'n - aubade (Broken Jaw Press) .... c/o 858 Somerset St W, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7 * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

69. Eireene Nealand

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

Bowering pretty much hit it out of the ballpark with Bart Starr

and then later someone else with the cereal as poetry too (yum--i wanna be a shortstop to god).

(if you don't see the beauty of Bart Starr as poetry just read the last page of chapter 3--i think it's ch. 3 of De la Grammatologie...or is it the last page of chapter 1? it's within the last 3--

where

it all all starts with the violence of plowing a furrow into a field....

that would be the best place to start the big tour).

and if you ever want to talk about the beautiful metaphors that math makes, or the justice implied in algebra...

i was just about to say when the computer stopped:

theory doesn't kill poetry, people do.

[if you run into those people who are gutting these beautiful buildings to use them as weapons, as people do, smack 'em for me please because you can be sure they're just taking pieces off the surface...the insides are nice and most philosophers say that poetry is the highest form of thinking after all--that's why i left that field for this one anyhow.]

On 2/1/07, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
> Well if "poets" can include Kant and Hegel,
> maybe we should also look at , oh, Bart Starr.
>
>
> gb

>
>
>
> On 1-Feb-07, at 10:02 PM, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> > well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he > > writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the > > architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like > > Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I > > mean.
> >
> > & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who > > writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of > > melville here of course.)
> >
> >> >
> >>
> >> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
> >>
> >
> >
> "Whip" Bowering
> Shortstop to the Gods
>

↑ Index

70. Hot Whiskey Press

Critical Work on Michael Palmer, Claude Royet-Journoud, Anne-Marie Albiach and/or the Analytic Lyric?

Fri 2 Feb 2007

Dear BuPo,

Can anyone point me towards critical notes/essay concerning the works of Michael Palmer, Claude Royet-Journoud or Anne-Marie Albiach? I'm also looking for a discussion of the analytic lyric if anyone has anything.

I've got Norma Cole's Crosscut Universe, but not sure where else to find the goods. If anyone knows anything or has written something they'd be willing to send me, it would be greatly appreciated.

Working on a thesis examining these figures and the Argentine poet, Arturo Carrera, whom I've been translating.

let it rip,
Michael Koshkin

↑ Index

71. Dubravka Djuric
small cultures and innovative poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

thanks to douglas messerli and michael end for their comments!

i will try to elaborate what i see as problematic... small culture usually severly excluds radical poetry, and it is usually that academics and critics construct narrative of national 'radical' poetry from the very moderate modernist/postmodernist and in the worst case of antimodernist poets and their poetry. as one example i will mention the name of one of the most celebrated poets, who in last 16 years win all national prices, who i think recently enters serbian academy of science, milosav tesic (i think that i saw his name listed). he wrote the most regressive poetry in serbia today. his poetry is one of the most important in the construction of new postsocialist serbian sociaty, that is closed society, fundamenatlist and nationalistc in meny ways, religious, and etnic and for sure antiinnovative. if i appy language poet's materialistic theory of verse, then it is that on the simbolic level the kind of poetry that poets wrote is in some relations to the dominant national project or to, on the contrary to the oppositional political project. many poets that i find in this list were 'radical' 20 or 30 or 70s years ago, and today, i.e. after 1991 most of them become very conservative.

when i first in 1988 read and translated first texts by language poets (bernstein, silliman, hejinian, watten, etc) i said to myself, these crazy us poets connect politic and ideology with poetry, what it has to do with eachother... but after 1991, as a literary critic, thanks to my translations of language poets, i realized that many, most, almost all, urban belgrade poets from 70 became in poetry opsessed with nation, religion, and the shift was obvious: their poetry in 70s and 80 were urban, individualsitc, usually inhereting modernist traditions but never was too much experimental, but with postsocialism, they started being involved in (re)construction of national and religious identities, and ideology of colosed society so instead of individual 'I', urban landscapes, colloquial urban language, you had 'i' which is actualy 'we' (the 'i' is important if she/he belongs to the national or religious community in a fundamental way, and patriarchal 'we'). language became very archaic, they introduced traditional poetc devices, and instead of urban poetry, you could read just and only the rural ones (with rare exceptions).

the other thing is the question what is innovative in a local context. i will start with the quotation of the croatian poet and theoretician from 70s and 80s who wrote long ago, refering to slovene, croatian and serbian literatures at that time. he wrote that understanding of literature in this nations "always involved notion of a political dimension. so this is how the amalgam that identified language with national values was created, also forming a literature that served as an articualtion of national self-importance. in this way, the language almost automatically become a national value, just like mythology, political victories and defeats. language could not be entrusted to someone who mutilated it (srecko kosovel), who expressed national defeatism, because readings turned on the national political issue above all else. " i quoted this because the most radical avant-garde poets from the begining of the 20s century like ljubomir micic and his brother branko ve poljanski (complicated case, serbs from croatia, who in zagreb in early 20s established avant-garde magazine zenit, then moved to belgarde - so they are croatian and serbian avant-garde For the magazine SEE website of belgrade national library:
http://www.digital.nbs.bg.ac.yu/novine/zenit), were never, specially in serbia established as cultural value. according to that, in the end of 60s and during seventies, in slovenia, croatian and vojvodina (northen part of serbia) begun the radical practices, most of that formations were in some relation with conceptual art, similar international art movements, but at that time just slovenian radical poets were in slovenia established as cultural value, you all know of tomaz salamun was one of then. in serbia the most radical poets were even today excluded from the company of poets who are wothy of any mentioning. they would be accepted if they change their practice start writing prose, or start writing more acceptable kind of poetry
.
and of course, there were poets who were in 70 established as 'radical' poets, but if i have in mind practice of language poets, their radicalism would be questioned. but there were practices that were radical as language poets at that same time. most of those poets were conceptual artists, but were and still are too radical for the dominant, as you say middlebrow, culture. and in that culture there is NO place for innovative, experimental poetry, in its 'purist' way.

i find on green integer list names of srecko kosevel (mentioned in the quotation above, slovenian avant-garde poet from 20s, died very young) and miroslav krleza (croatia) who lived long and was before first world avant-garde, between 2 world war was representative of bourgoise high modernism, and from that time he was against avant-garde, and after second world he was official play writer and among the most influental figures in socialist time. vasko popa was the most important serbian poet of socialist modernism.... these figures are today counterstones, constitutive figures, of national of literatures but are not the representatives of radical innovative poetry practices (except srecko kosovel).

in 1923 branko ve poljanski published a book panics under the sun (panika pod suncem). in his introduction poljanski wrote " bogdan popovic will go through needles ears before krmeza (coin: krleza who is pig) will understand me, and his brother micic ednded the foreward with the words: "our fatherland was the sadest that when we had to be born in there." when i read them today, i realised that nothing changed.

but i think and i hope that it is time for us to see what is and that was experiment poetry in a small national cultures ... because it is critical method that is established in us language poetry.

↑ Index

72. Anny Ballardini
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

I answered this mail and it disappeared (deconstructed to its inexistence)

I was saying that I appreciate what you are writing especially your notes on J. Joyce.

And that in vulgar Italian "uccello" (bird) is a cock. Well, not "sparrow" (passero) but we are close. And for those who have read some Catullus, not the one I was supposed to read at high school, this makes sense.

On 2/2/07, Tom W. Lewis <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I may be "old-fashioned" or just clueless, but I learned deconstruction as > a process of reading / analyzing texts, in my case texts in the ancient > Greek & Latin canon.
>
> for instance, one demonstration of deconstructive practice came from my > Latin prof, who discussed Catullus' use of a term in Carmen 2 (passer = both > "sparrow" and "term of endearment [in an obscene sense]") -- so the > following passage can be read, simultaneously, on two levels:
>
> Passer, deliciae meae puellae,
> quicum ludere, quem in sinu tenere,
> cui primum digitum dare adpetenti...
>
> [Passer], delight of my girlfriend,
> who plays with it, holds it in her lap,

> for whose advances she offers her finger...
>
> you can read passer as "sparrow" and "cock," and the dissonance -- or at > least two-levelness -- creates a lexical or semantic tension that is not > resolved.
>
> as I write this, it strikes me that this is nothing more than an elaborate > pun -- am I off the track re: deconstruction? or is deconstruction just > "havin' fun with texts"?
>
> two digressions:
>
> Carl-Michael Bellman (18th c.) used to put polyglot dirty jokes in his > songs, so that one (I don't remember which) throws in "ge björnen mat" a > propros of nothing else in the piece -- "give the bear food" -- but when > pronounced in Swedish, this phrase actually says something very rude in > Russian.
>
> has anyone else in List-land tried reading Finnegans Wake with an Irish > accent? you pick up on a lot of buried information if you try this -- it > dawned on me reading one passage that "damn fairy ann" could be read as > "donc fait rien" -- then the whole page morphed into a kind of Joycean
> French argot, before my eyes... and no, I was perfectly sober at the time.
>
> ------
>
> so, ultimately, what I'm asking: isn't deconstruction the recognition of > multiple readings of a given text, where each and all exist simultaneously > and in conjunction with every other reading? in other words, can one claim > it to be similar to negative capability?
>
> forgive the intrusion -- have a disorienting and wonder-making weekend.
>
> tl
>
>
>
>
>
> On 1-Feb-07, at 10:02 PM, Eireene Nealand wrote:
>
> > well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he > > writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the > > architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like > > Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I > > mean.

> >
> > & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who > > writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of > > melville here of course.)
> >
> >> >
> >>
> >> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.
> >>
> >
> >
> "Whip" Bowering
> Shortstop to the Gods
>
>
>
> ---
> Never miss an email again!
> Yahoo! Toolbar alerts you the instant new Mail arrives. Check it out.
>

↑ Index

73. Ruth Lepson

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

speaking of math metaphors, my mother, who died a few year ago, wrote a 1000-p. book on math as an art form which remains unpublished. I am sending chapters to a few math friends of hers but am interested in finding out if anyone out there knows enough high-level math--set theory esp & can read complex equations--to edit it, cut it in half. will contact MIT Press too. Thanks. Ruth L.

On 2/2/07 3:07 PM, "Eireene Nealand" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Bowering pretty much hit it out of the ballpark with Bart Starr
>
> and then later someone else with the cereal as poetry too (yum--i wanna be a shortstop to god).
>
> (if you don't see the beauty of Bart Starr as poetry just read the last page of chapter 3--i think it's ch. 3 of De la Grammatologie...or is it the last page of chapter 1? it's within the last 3--

where

it all all starts with the violence of plowing a furrow into a field....

that would be the best place to start the big tour).

and if you ever want to talk about the beautiful metaphors that math makes, or the justice implied in algebra...

i was just about to say when the computer stopped:

theory doesn't kill poetry, people do.

[if you run into those people who are gutting these beautiful buildings to use them as weapons, as people do, smack 'em for me please because you can be sure they're just taking pieces off the surface...the insides are nice and most philosophers say that poetry is the highest form of thinking after all--that's why i left that field for this one anyhow.]

On 2/1/07, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
Well if "poets" can include Kant and Hegel,
maybe we should also look at , oh, Bart Starr.

gb

On 1-Feb-07, at 10:02 PM, Eireene Nealand wrote:

well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I mean.

& maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of melville here of course.)

In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

> "Whip" Bowering
> Shortstop to the Gods

↑ Index

74. Robin Hamilton
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

<<
has anyone else in List-land tried reading Finnegans Wake with an Irish accent? you pick up on a lot of buried information if you try this -- it dawned on me reading one passage that "damn fairy ann" could be read as "donc fait rien" -- then the whole page morphed into a kind of Joycean French argot, before my eyes... and no, I was perfectly sober at the time.
...
tl
>>

Joyce's words above would seem to play on the British squaddies' surded French developed in WW1 -- "San fairy ann" for "ça ne fait rien".

see: http://www.worldwidewords.org/qa/qa-san1.htm

Robin Hamilton

↑ Index

75. cralan kelder
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

some poets are practitioners of Dcvism in the sense that they challenge the idea that lots and lots of words are needed to say something.

On 2/2/07 4:30 PM, "Aldon Nielsen" <[redacted]> wrote:

> and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?
>
> "There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

*At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.*

*and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense
that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.*

*ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and
it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."
Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:*

*michel deguy comes to mind.
ric carfagna wrote:*

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

*<<

> >>>>>>>>>>
>
> "I stand corrected, like a bishop of the obvious."
> --Robert Kelly
>
> Aldon Lynn Nielsen
> George and Barbara Kelly Professor of American Literature
> Department of English
> The Pennsylvania State University
> 112 Burrowes
> University Park, PA 16802-6200
>
> [redacted] [office]
>
> [redacted] [Fax]
>
> Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

76. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Fri 2 Feb 2007

Kant kan but kant.

----- Original Message -----
From: "Maria Damon" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 9:28 AM
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

> did kant write poetry???
>
> At 10:02 PM -0800 2/1/07, Eireene Nealand wrote:
> well, and some of the best poets were theorists like Kant. I mean, he writes using bricks, which look ugly if you don't step back to see the architecture that he's building up. Whereas Hegel writes more like Virginia Woolf--because of the way that he constructs sentences, I mean.
>
> & maybe that would be a good way to start, looking for a poet who writes "sentences" with a perforated horizon (i am thinking of melville here of course.)
>
> >

> In my opinion, poets do not represent theory.

↑ Index

77. Alan Sondheim

Climate report summary (fwd)

Fri 2 Feb 2007

---

http://www.ipcc.ch/SPM2feb07.pdf

- for the 21 page summary text; if anyone knows where to get the full 1200 page document, please post URL, thanks, Alan

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

78. Jim Andrews

Re: small cultures and innovative poetry

Fri 2 Feb 2007

Hi Dubravka,

Thanks for your fascinating post. Also, the tone of it is appealing: it isn't calling for anybody's head on a platter; it is articulate and progressive, not bitter or vengeful. You do not play the nationalistic trumpet but, instead, question the political and poetical value of aggressive nationalism. You speak for the value of experimental poetry that introduces critical methods into poetry. That is important in poetry and in contemporary society.

Poetry needs to be able to deal with situations such as http://alternet.org/blogs/peek/47507 . Intensest engagement with language, these days, is not necessarily in a poemy poem on a page. It can happen off the page and even off the art map. Poetry needs to be able to go there.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

79. Jesse Glass
Is Charles Olson the John Frum of Canadian Experimental Poetry?
Fri 2 Feb 2007

A few belated notes on Open Field, plus why I like Canada now up at the www.ahadadabooks.com blog--they extend over a couple of pages, so please read in reverse order. Jess

↑ Index

80. Alan Sondheim
February 3 1943
Sat 3 Feb 2007

February 3 1943

Happy birthday to me
Happy birthday to me
Happy birthday to Alan
Happy birthday to me

from the 406 manatees killed this year from the starving polar bears from the hundreds of thousands of Iraqi dead from the victims of famine and hurricanes from those slaughtered by death squads from my dead mother from those born of tornados and floods from those, those burned alive
Happy birthday to me

from my partner and friends
Happy birthday to me

↑ Index

81. David Baratier
Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Feb 2007 to 2 Feb 2007 (#2007-34)
Sat 3 Feb 2007

George--

> Did Bart Starr do a Travis Watkins?
> You lost me on that reference.

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus, OH 43206
http://pavementsaw.org

↑ Index

82. Jesse Crockett

For poetry \ arts \ cultural web page development

Sat 3 Feb 2007

What you get

* 1 year of domain registration of your choice (.com, .net, .org., etc.)
* 3096 MB of storage
* up to 10 email accounts at your own domain
* 20,000 MB of bandwidth per month features

* unlimited MySQL databases
* php4 / php5 support
* Jabber chat server
* POP / SMTP / IMAP email
* Microsoft FrontPage extensions (available)
* Real Audio & Video (http streaming)
* QuickTime streaming

other features

* WordPress
* phpBB
* Advanced Poll
* ZenCart
* MediaWiki
* Joomla
* Gallery
* WebCalendar

Everything you could ask for, and more.
For just $15 per year.

(To register a domain at my hosting service costs $10, then the five dollars will be considered a gratuity.) (Account access is basic ftp or advanced ssh \ ssh2, but no shell (advanced linux command line) access.)

address to: jesse -at listenlight -dot net

↑ Index

83. Alexander Jorgensen
That is where the US is -
Sat 3 Feb 2007

nothing like eating what's called for butter, that what don't melt in bowl-ing water.

agj

_____
Do you Yahoo!?
Everyone is raving about the all-new Yahoo! Mail beta.
http://new.mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

84. Alexander Jorgensen
That is where the US is -
Sat 3 Feb 2007

nothing like eating what's called for butter, that what don't melt in bowl-ing water.

agj

_____
No need to miss a message. Get email on-the-go with Yahoo! Mail for Mobile. Get started.
http://mobile.yahoo.com/mail

↑ Index

85. David Buuck
on the analytic lyric
Sat 3 Feb 2007

cf palmer's code of signals, archived at jerrold shiroma's duration site:

http://www.durationpress.com/archives/code/codeofsignals.pdf

DB

↑ Index

86. Michael Dylan Welch
Re: Haiku Death Match
Sat 3 Feb 2007

Sure, one can use any formal restraint as a poetic game, as a challenge of sorts. But as challenges go, in haiku, the syllabic challenge (whatever pattern you might choose) is mighty superficial. Indeed, in my years of teaching haiku, I've seen that it's the easiest thing in the world for students of nearly all grade levels to count their pretty little syllables. Why brag about pulling on your underwear all by yourself when your hair is on fire? It's a trivial "discipline." And these same haiku, while hitting that trivial target -- again, an incorrect target in English -- are widely missing the more important targets. And most often, these proud 5-7-5ers are completely oblivious to those other targets -- ones that are actually more important. Why bother with arbirary constraints for haiku when there are far more serious, literary, challenging, and effective constraints that you miss in the process of focusing on 5-7-5?!?

It can be fun to write cinquains or iambic pentameter, or the recent "Fib" form (counting syllables in subsequent lines to match the Fibonacci sequence). But when it comes to haiku, writing 5-7-5 syllables in English isn't the same as following the prescribed syllables of cinquains or pentameter or Fibs. That's because following 5-7-5 assumes a "correctness" for that pattern in English, which isn't accurate when it's really a borrowed form. Yes, sonnets are borrowed from Italian to English, but at least that's the same alphabet, so it's not fraught with the problems of translating from Japanese to English. It's folly to translate the number (5-7-5) without thinking more deeply about what is being counted. Yet that is precisely what has happened that lead to the false conception of haiku being 5-7-5 syllables in English. Quite simply, when we apply that pattern to English syllables, we miss the boat. It's simplistic and naive.

A person can do whatever they like and call it haiku (Lord knows that's happened plenty enough). If you're having fun, knock yourself out. But if you're writing 5-7-5 haiku, it's best to be aware of how you're writing a poem that's markedly longer than what is expressed in a Japanese haiku (not all of which are 5-7-5, by the way). It's best to be aware that you're writing in a pattern that, for good reason, pretty much ALL of the leading haiku poets writing in English do not follow. It's best to be aware that writing 5-7-5 frequently creates artificial syntax and awkward line breaks purely for an unnecessary constraint while more important strategies (also constraints) are completely missed. Indeed, most 5-7-5 haiku writers tend to be completely unaware of the other strategies necessary for traditional haiku, though perhaps that's a separate problem, although it's frequently caused by a belief that 5-7-5 is all there is to it. In any event, if one aims at seasonality and a two-part juxtapositional structure, and employs objective sensory imagery, you can let the rest of form take care of itself (organically). But of course, there's more to it than that -- writing in the present tense, no titles, no rhyme, seldom any similes or metaphors, employing fragments rather than full sentences, employing allusion, and more. And perhaps the most important aspect of all -- implication. It's very hard to do well, to hint at something that the reader can figure out on his own, making a leap of understanding that's made possible because of your restraint as a poet, because you deliberately left something out. As I like to emphasize in haiku workshops, don't write about your emotion, write about what caused your emotion. Then, if you do it right, the reader can feel what you felt without your having to say so. But of course all of this is missed by those who think haiku is only a 5-7-5 syllable-counting poetry trick. Some "challenge."

As I say in the title of one of my haiku lectures: "Haiku: It's Bigger Than You Think." Yet of course, it's also smaller than most English speakers think, too.

Michael

P.S. Nearly every serious haiku poet I know has had a progression in their haiku -- and I'm talking about many hundreds of leading haiku poets who I pay attention to, perhaps even thousands. They nearly all started out writing 5-7-5, as did I. And then they progressed to learning the more important aspects of the genre (and haiku is best thought of as a genre of poetry, of which "form" is just one aspect). At this point, nearly all of them stop writing in the 5-7-5 pattern. The few exceptions to this progression include those who went straight to avoiding 5-7-5 in the first place. But there are clear reasons for this progression. It's not that 5-7-5 is "abandoned." Rather, it is apprehended as something that was inappropriate in the first place, and causes many problems in English. Higher targets are sought -- ones, in fact, that turn out to be far more challenging and require far more discipline. If 5-7-5 in English serves any useful purpose, it is purely as the first stepping-stone on a long path. But, alas, too many people, even otherwise accomplished poets, stop at just that first stepping stone with their haiku.

In a message dated 02-Feb-07 9:01:40 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 10:41:59 -0600
From: Joe Amato <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

While I think it's a good idea to understand that 5-7-5 is simply a convenience of sorts, even something of a mistranslation (even something of a cultural oversight), I feel about this pretty much the way I feel about bending any formal rule. I.e., it's fun to use 5-7-5 as an arbitrary constraint in composing haiku,

just as it's fun to use 14 lines as an arbitrary constraint in composing sonnets. (Which latter might not result in 14 lines, ysee, but that won't keep me from calling it a sonnet.)

Granted, correcting the misconception is one thing. But having fun with same is quite another, which, to me, is one reason I write poetry.

↑ Index

87. Andy Gricevich
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sat 3 Feb 2007

I think poets are usually ahead of the game. Why do you think most theorists write about exclusively old literature (the canon)?

"Constructivism" seems a better word for the poets who often get "accused" of instantiating Derrida's theories... but I think most poets, including those who love a lot of theory (of which I'm one), work their own poetics out in practice (which can include dialogues--often playful--with pre-existing theory).

I think "we" (I don't include myself) are often too eager, when we encounter strange poetry, to "justify" its strangeness by explaining it as the manifestation of a theory, rather than looking at what the text is and does, and then thinking about what theory might be possible as a result of that.

As if poetry had to be justified.
That's not meant as a joke about margins.

I like Derrida, but a lot of his thought is decades (at least) behind art. Jameson's analysis of Perelman misses out on the critical terms Perelman's writing makes possible.

I love Bernstein, but his earlier theory (which I also love) gets quoted too much by critics in the process of trying to explain (away?) his poetry, which exceeds that theory in its breathtaking variety, and is irreducible to the latter.

Examples.

No need to miss a message. Get email on-the-go with Yahoo! Mail for Mobile. Get started.

↑ Index

88. Michael Dylan Welch
Re: Haiku Death Match
Sat 3 Feb 2007

Haiku in Japanese is nearly always written and published in a single verticle line (there are no breaks between the parts of 5, 7, and 5 mora). So yes, the three-line form is a Western invention, and Hiroaki Sato (a friend of mine, and whose translations I've also published in my journal Tundra) advocates that haiku in English should be a single horizontal line to be equivalent to Japanese. That's certainly a choice, and many people do write excellent one-line haiku in English (some of mine are in one line). However, the argument is also made that a single horizontal line doesn't necessarily "look" like poetry, whereas the lineations of three lines does. So that's another choice, and the three lines do echo the three parts of the Japanese haiku (though actually, there is typically the equivalent of enjambment over two of the three parts in most Japanese haiku, the other part being set off with a kireji, or cutting word). I would assert that the three-line convention for English-language haiku is a perfectly acceptable one, though I also write haiku in one line, as well as the occasional "concrete" or visual haiku, and feel no hesitation to use more than three lines if the poem seriously warrants it. There are other factors that are more important.

Hiroaki Sato's From the Country of Eight Islands was cotranslated with Burton Watson. Watson translated some of the haiku therein, as I recall, and they appear in three lines. Sato's haiku translations (in other books) are occasionally in three lines, though typically he uses a single line. He also avoids all punctuation, which can be confusing but also create interesting ambiguities, so that again is another choice.

Michael

In a message dated 02-Feb-07 9:01:40 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 12:00:39 -0500
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Hiroaki Sato, who translated I think all the poems in his Japanese anthology (Literature of Eight Islands?), said that a haiku is written in a single line and the division into three lines (5-7-5) was a western invention. He even had done a series of haiku translations in single lines, very interesting ones since they undercut exactly that split between objective concrete (nature) and concluding inspiration.

Of course, I do not know how much of this Hiro made up.

Ciao,

Murat

↑ Index

89. Jason Quackenbush
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sat 3 Feb 2007

---

i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs. too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less uninteresting.

put simply, to deconstruct, one must

1.) pick a text
2.) identify one or more implications of the text
3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to or in some way subverts the implications you have identified in the text.

It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite surprised that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea. Even if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument, i don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about the original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing such methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination, the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's often impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read, which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about almost everything.

Aldon Nielsen wrote:
> and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing > that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about > this representing?
>
> "There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it > homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or > revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions.

> That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."
>
> "'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one > could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."
>
> "what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that > which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, > their pertinence. "
>
> "I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."
>
> Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC
>
> At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
>
>> Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the >> method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to >> texts.
>>
>> and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that >> LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.
>>
>> ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>>
>>> there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and it's >>> profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet >>> would then "represent."
>>> Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a >>> good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
>>> On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:
>>>
>>> michel deguy comes to mind.
>>> ric carfagna wrote:
>>>
>>>> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>>>
>>>
>>>
<<

>>> what makes us free -- intolerable
>>> paradox at the heart of speech.
>>> --Robert Kelly
>>> Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/
>>> Aldon L. Nielsen
>>> Kelly Professor of American Literature
>>> The Pennsylvania State University
>>> 116 Burrowes
>>> University Park, PA 16802-6200
>>> [redacted]
>
>
>
<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<>>>

it's small and printed on cheap paper)
lorca's suites

i just checked the site, and i see that there's a planned release of Berkeley's Three Dialogues which will no doubt be very cool and i intend to buy quickly. The thing i love about green integer is that they're a publisher you can trust. i often am browsing in a bookstore and will see something by someone i haven't heard of and buy it, and as a result discover someone amazing. that's actually where my introduction to larry eigner came from, and I'm very much indebted to messerli for publishing "readiness/enough/depends/on" for that reason.

Alexander Dickow wrote:
> Dubravka,
> Green Integer is, yes, one of the publishing houses I > most admire. Their catalogue is...droolworthy. Green
> Integer makes me swoon. Beautiful little books, too.
> Everyone should pore carefully over the wonders of > Green Integer Review and its previous incarnation.
> And, you might read Douglas Messerli's (sorta the > mastermind behind Green Integer, I believe) comments
> and poems on the Argotist Online lately.
> Amicalement,
> Alex
>
>
>
> www.alexdickow.net/blog/
>
> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

91. Alexander Dickow
rousseau and de man
Sat 3 Feb 2007

Barry wrote:
"I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one writer who could not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way
out in front of
the reader/critic."

Where does de Man say this? I admit I'm surprised, since he "deconstructs" the Profession de foi du vicaire savoyard (Emile) in a very smart paper (one of the best on the Profession de foi). Rousseau -- see the Grammatologie -- was a cornerstone of "deconstructionist" reading practices from the beginnings of poststructuralism. Far from being "impossible to deconstruct", if you ask me!
Not to mention: anyone who has read Rousseau carefully knows that his texts are veritable conundrums, vertiginous, infinitely tricky and unstable.
"Impossible to deconstruct"? Rousseau's a master of slippery vocabulary (related terms with unstable boundaries, reinvented familiar words or notions...), and he can get you to call black orange in under five minutes.
So, I'd love to know where (and how, why, etc) de Man makes this claim.
Amicalement,
Alex

www.alexdickow.net/blog/

> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

92. Charlie Rossiter
Haiku Death Match
Sat 3 Feb 2007

A couple of points on haiku.

Everything Michael Dylan Welch said about haiku is accurate. He's been writing in the genre a long time.

Sato is a real authority on haiku and no, he didn't make it up about the 1-line, 3-line thing.

Issues around haiku are further confounded by teachers who like the seventeen syllable rule because it gives them something to teach that's far simpler than teaching about ‘capturing the moment' or whatever you'd like to call the ‘spirit' of haiku. There's also the issue of well-known English language poets who put out books of haiku in mid-career which unfortunately usually contain novice-level haiku because they are, unfortunately, novices at haiku. People figure that if a well-known poet writes a three-line sentence and calls it haiku it must be haiku. There's more, of course but.....

if you really want to know about haiku in English simply get Lee Gurga's excellent book, "Haiku: A Poet's Guide," Modern Haiku Press, Box 68 Lincoln IL, 62656, USA ($20). That's the address in the book, but it may have changed. I'm sure Lee won't mind me giving you his email as he's VERY dedicated to haiku. He's a past editor of Haiku, which is the Poetry of the U.S. haiku world, also past-pres of Haiku Society of America.

[redacted]

Charlie

--
"Poetry is good for you and so is the blues."
Charlie said that.
www.poetrypoetry.com
where you hear poems read by poets who wrote them

www.myspace.com/avantretro (hear avantretro poems)

www.myspace.com/whiskeybucketbluesreview
hear Charlie & Henry sing the blues

www.myspace.com/jackthe71special
hear Jack's original blues, blues rock & roots

↑ Index

93. Dubravka Djuric
Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze
Sat 3 Feb 2007

MIEKAL,
I NOTICED THAT I COMPLETELY MISSPELL YOUR NAME, I DEEPLY APOLOGIZE FOR THAT!

----- Original Message -----
From: "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 4:08 PM
Subject: Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze

> Dubravka:
>
> This is a fascinating comment & something that I suspected also. It would be interesting to here Douglas Messerli's comments on this. I'm also hoping you could give a few examples of these new experimental

> Serbian poets & any translations that might be available online. Certainly with the advent of the web, it must be much easier for un (der)represented to establish a virtual presence, which is at least a beginning to achieving a bit of recognition. Or if nothing else propose to one of these monstrous poetry webzines like Jacket or Big Bridge to put together a collection of the poets you think are beneath the radar.
>
> & for myself I would be also interested to know if there is a historical Serbian avant garde of which we in the west know nothing...
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
> On Feb 1, 2007, at 3:01 PM, Dubravka Djuric wrote:
>
> dear listmemebers,
>
> it has been long time since i wrote something for this list. now, i would like to comment the site of green integer. surfing, i came upon it, and was really amaizing to see so much poets all arround the world, including the former yugoslav poets! which i find really great! i was specially interestied in the poets from serbia, i am from serbia, and i was so sad to see that some right wing oriented poets are on the list... and now i think about how in small cultures such as serbia, you cannot have a second scene, because we are all 'one big family', right and left, and every poet who ever wrote experimental poetry is erased, acctually could not be establish as a poet of any value, it doesnt fit into the picture of great national poetry, and what you call moderate modernisam and postmodernism, or what you call(ed) mainstream poets just that kind of poetry do exist. other kind of poets cannot survive, they are out of sight, out of attention of dominant culture, and of course, they could never be in attention of outside gaze, outside attention. i find it very very sad... i dont know how are in other cultures outside usa.....
>
> The covers of this book are too far apart. -- Ambrose Bierce

↑ Index

94. Dubravka Djuric

Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze

Sat 3 Feb 2007

---

thank you murat for this comment, when i read it, it occured to me the important question WHO IN ONE LOCAL CONTEXT HAS A POWER TO DEFINE

WHAT IS INNOVATIVE AND EXPERIMENTAL. and as far as i remember, many critic here wrote about the poet i mentioned as original and innovative.

the other thing regarding vasko popa that occured to me is: how one 'small' culture reprezents itself for itself, and how it represents itself for other cultures. then, who is transisser into other culture, how he or she represents poetry and context of the poet re want to represent, and what is transmissor's poetical/political status in his or her culture, and how poets in that culture will accept the other, the work of the poet who through the translation enters their own cultural, and political and poetica context. what purpose this work will seve in that culture where it is introduced. being connected for the start with radical artistic context, popa was author who was not importatnt at all. few years ago i was kindly invited by the fellow poet to participate in a round table on his work, and for the first time i read him, at list some major works, and what i find, that his poetry is dealing with all metanarratives of socialist former yu society... inscribing himself into the canon of great and important national poets.... and he was really important poet in introducing socialist modernism in serbia, after period of socialist realism, but that kind of poetry is not important for me. there is need to constract different canons, here too!

as a long time translator of us poetry, i started in 1984 translating black mountain poets, first of all robert duncan and denise leverotv, and when i discovered in 1988 language poets, i constantly transltae this kind of poetry, and i could now conceptualize it, that i fill the gap in my own culture, the kind of work i would like to have in my culture and it serve me to make my own poetical context.

another exhamples. in 1986 working within theoretical/artist community for space investigation i decided to write about modern and postmodern dance. in usa and german library i find many books on isadora duncan, ruth st denis, mary wigman, etc. but at the begining of 1990s in belgrade used bookshops my husband misko suvakovic and i found the books by maga magazinovic, who was pupil of rudolf laban, and other improtant dance and theater persons from the beginning of 20 century. and i havent heard of her in my own culture. recenlty, after i finished a huge work on usa experimental women poets, i start again reading micic, poljanski and few other poets, and understand that i have to search for paund, marinetti, kruchonik, and i have in my own culture the best exhamples from the same or little later period....

----- Original Message -----
From: "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 5:52 PM
Subject: Re: poets in small cultures and outside gaze

mIEKAL,

The avant-garde in a country like Serbia, or others places, may work differently, having other points of reference. Is the avant-garde more a matter of spirit, rather than associated with a specific style? Is it a style or an idea?

The virtual space gives us a chance to discuss these points without all of us being around a coffee house table though that would be even better.

Ciao,

Murat

On 2/2/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:

Dubravka:

This is a fascinating comment & something that I suspected also. It would be interesting to here Douglas Messerli's comments on this. I'm also hoping you could give a few examples of these new experimental Serbian poets & any translations that might be available online. Certainly with the advent of the web, it must be much easier for un (der)represented to establish a virtual presence, which is at least a beginning to achieving a bit of recognition. Or if nothing else propose to one of these monstrous poetry webzines like Jacket or Big Bridge to put together a collection of the poets you think are beneath the radar.

& for myself I would be also interested to know if there is a historical Serbian avant garde of which we in the west know nothing...

~mIEKAL

On Feb 1, 2007, at 3:01 PM, Dubravka Djuric wrote:

dear listmemebers,

it has been long time since i wrote something for this list. now, i would like to comment the site of green integer. surfing, i came upon it, and was really amaizing to see so much poets all arround the world, including the former yugoslav poets! which i find really great! i was specially interestied in the poets from serbia, i am from serbia, and i was so sad to see that some right wing oriented poets are on the list... and now i think about how in small cultures such as serbia, you cannot have a second scene, because we are all 'one big family', right and left, and every poet who ever > wrote experimental poetry is erased, acctually could not be establish as a poet of any value, it doesnt fit into the picture of great national poetry, and what you call moderate modernisam and postmodernism, or what you call(ed) mainstream poets just that kind of poetry do exist. other kind of poets cannot survive, they are out of sight, out of attention of dominant culture, and of course, they could never be in attention of outside gaze, outside attention. i find it very very sad... i dont know how are in other cultures outside usa.....

>
> The covers of this book are too far apart. -- Ambrose Bierce

↑ Index

95. mIEKAL aND
50 ANIVERSARIO DE LA POESIA CONCRETA
Sat 3 Feb 2007

---

50 ANIVERSARIO DE LA POESIA CONCRETA

Disfrute de este espacio en la website BOEK861 de César Reglero, dedicado al homenaje de los 50 años de la Poesía Concreta.

http://www.boek861.com/stutgart/

50 ANNIVERSARY OF CONCRETE POETRY

Enjoy this space in Cesar Reglero´s website BOEK861, dedicated to Homage 50 Years of Concrete Poetry.

http://boek861.com/stutgart/index_en.htm

PARTICIPANTES - PARTICIPANTS

Giovanni Fontana, Adam Fong, Adolf, Agustín Calvo Galán, Alejandro Thornton, Alkak Luiz dos Santos y Gilbertto Prado, Ana Glafira, Anamaría Briede, Angela Ibáñez, Antonella Prota Giurleo, Antoni Albalat, Antonio Cáres, Antonio Monterroso, Antonio Orihuela, Baldo Ramos, Beatriz San Millán, Birger Jesch, Brian Whitener, Carol Starr, Caterina Davinio, Cecil Touchon, Cesar Reglero, Christian Hasucha, Cirus Console, Claudia del Rio, Claudio Grandinetti, Clemente Padín, Constança Lucas, Costis, Dan Buck, David Daniels, Demosthene Agrafiotis, Denis Charmot, Emerenciano, Eugenia Serafini, Fausto Grossi, Feliciano Mira, Francesc Xavier Forés, Franco Focardi, Franklin Valverde, G. J. de Rook, Geof Huth, Gerardo Podhajny, Graciela Gutiérrez Marx, Gregory Vincent St Thomasino, Gunther Ruch, Gustavo Fernández Alonso, Gustavo Vega, Henning Mittendorf, Irving Weiss, Isabel Jover, Ivan Etienne, J. M. Calleja, Jeanete EKohler, Joaquim Branco, John Bennett, Jorge Ismael

Rodríguez, José Blanco, Josep Sou, Julien Blaine, Jurgen O.Olbrich, Keiichi Nakamura, Kostas Hrisos, Leticia Alonso Hernández, Litsa Spathi, Lois Gil Magariños, Lorena Cordero, Luc Fierens, Manuel A. Sousa, Mara Caruso, María José Ares Mondino, Mark Sutherland, Michael Morris, Miekal And, Miguel Jiménez Zenón, Monica Vallejo, Neusa Cauduro, Nicola Frangione, Nikos Vassilakis, Norberto José Martínez, P.Thoma, Patricia Robledo, Patricia Sibar, Paul de Vree, Paul Tiililä, Rainer Stolz, Reed Altemus, Regina Vater, Roberto Scala, Rocia Alegre, Rod Summers, Ruediger Axel Westphal, Ruud Janssen, Sergio Monteiro, Shutaro Mukai, Silvia Lisa, Susana Romano, Tamara Wyndham, Thierry Tiliier, Tom Gaze, Vaclav Havel, Virginia Oviedo Rodríguez y Vittore Baroni.

BOEK861

[redacted]

↑ Index

96. Mairead Byrne

SOS POETRY

Sat 3 Feb 2007

Let a free book steal YOUR time:

My book SOS POETRY has just been published by UbuWeb
http://ubu.com
as an /ubu Edition
http://ubu.com/ubu

Mairead

Mairéad Byrne
Associate Professor of English
Rhode Island School of Design
2 College Street
Providence, RI 02903

↑ Index

97. Ian Randall Wilson

Chapbooks

Sat 3 Feb 2007

Are chapbooks just limited to poetry? Cervena Barva, a small press in Boston, is trying experiments with "chapbooks" in fiction, too. They just published one of mine called Out of the Arcadian Ghetto.

http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/ (http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/)

Ian Wilson

↑ Index

98. Ann Bogle
Re: phobia...
Sat 3 Feb 2007

In a message dated 1/31/2007 1:18:12 P.M. Central Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.

This is the post I wanted to reply to and waited. Now Poetics emails seem to have dried up and are bypassing me: This happened in Sept., too, but then I let it go. Somehow I started receiving Poetics mail again in January. Last summer I wrote an email every 3 weeks or so that must have had too little to do with Poetics, which I take to mean international politics via poetry, or poetry via int'l politics, and had to do with North American non-poets who were in a chronic state of treating disabling conditions or in a disabling state of treating chronic conditions ... of how internalized stigma caused them to react against one another and to become harmful to their fellow human beings; -- it was worse than thoughts about our situation that led to the harm: There were housing loss and other alarming hazards. It was watching people become homeless before our eyes. It was these people's own hardball antagonism toward not being normal. Phobia, if you can get people to go in for it, is treated as a psychological condition for which there is therapy. Education serves that purpose as well.

Disabled people comprise 20% of the U.S. population and would represent the largest minority in the U.S. if they chose to associate, to be inclusive along the lines of type of disability. Mainly, I think the word disability is misleading because it says nothing for ability, and most of the disabled people I have met are more able than not.

Depressives are not viewed as in the innocent group, but are more likely in the bad guys group. 20% of depressives are suicidal; the rest are not.

I did not have illnesses as a child and had a strong constitution. I grew up feminist, more than my mother, and at an early age, earlier than the norm: at 12, I read Ms. Magazine. So I have those memories to draw on and try to recapture. For years, I was adequately private and stable following dx. The passing of time, not living as if I were in a race, and my enthusiasm for holistic treatment for bipolar -- as if that were my job -- caused a loss in academic peer structure and the chance for employment.

AMB

↑ Index

99. Dodie Bellamy
Orgasm Zine reading and reception
Sat 3 Feb 2007

You are cordially invited to a reading and reception for the Orgasm Zine, written by Dodie Bellamy's prose workshop and designed by Rebecca Miller.

Friday, February 9, 8 p.m.
Free
Dog Eared Books
900 Valencia St. (@ 20th)
San Francisco, CA 94110
[redacted]

Zines will be for sale.

Contributors:
Dodie Bellamy
David Christensen
Drew Cushing
Judith Jordan
Kevin Killian
Anne McGuire
Rebecca Miller
Michael Nicoloff
Laura Wasserman
Emily Wilson

↑ Index

100. Peter Ciccariello
Fox, dreaming of the space between human and beast
Sun 4 Feb 2007

Fox, dreaming of the space between human and beast<http://www.cgi7.com/peterimages/fox.htm>

"Humans and beasts are different species, but foxes are between humans and beasts. The dead and the living walk different roads, but foxes are between the dead and the living. Transcendents and monsters travel different paths, but foxes are between transcendents and monsters. Therefore one could say to meet a fox is strange; one could also say it is ordinary." - Ji Yun, 1789, in Notebook from the Thatched Cottage of Close Scrutiny

*
*

**

-- Peter Ciccariello
Image - http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

101. Charles Bernstein
New M/E /A/N /I/N /G -- Feminist Art: A Reassessment
Sun 4 Feb 2007

M/E /A/N /I/N /G
Online
#4
http://writing.upenn.edu/pepc/meaning/04/
(February 2007)

Feminist Art:
A Reassessment

Edited by Susan Bee
&
Mira Schor

A forum including writing and images
by artists and art historians
from three generations

Irina Aristarkhova, Susan Bee, Emma Bee Bernstein, Johanna Burton, Ingrid Calame, Maura Coughlin, Bailey Doogan, Johanna Drucker, Carol Duncan,
Mary Beth Edelson, Joanna Frueh, Vanalyne Green,
Mimi Gross, Susanna Heller, Janet Kaplan,
Tom Knechtel, Judith Linhares, Lenore Malen,
Ann McCoy, Adelheid Mers, Robin Mitchell,
Carrie Moyer, Beverly Naidus, Rachel Owens,
Sheila Pepe, Nancy Princenthal, Carolee Schneemann, Mira Schor, Joan Snyder, Anne Swartz, Faith Wilding, and Barbara Zucker.

http://writing.upenn.edu/pepc/meaning/04/

↑ Index

102. Joe Amato
Re: Haiku Death Match
Sun 4 Feb 2007

Michael, you're not going to get any argument from me about any of that, much of which I've come across in my own readings. I'm simply suggesting that policing a form that isn't, in the first place, native to English might (might) produce the unintended consequence of ascribing too rigorously to rather arbitrary, if historically motivated, formalities. Contrary to many who compose them, sonnets are not simply about counting syllables or lines either. Me, I'd rather use the 5-7-5 reflexively, for instance, to challenge the tendency of some who dabble in non-native forms to produce an orientalized English. Granted, there are other ways to do this, and doing this raises perhaps some vexing issues.

(But see my recent ~Finger Exorcised~, on BlazeVOX, for a page of doubtless feeble attempts at related haiku humor. Hell, I even use the incorrect plural, "haikus," as a sort of dirty joke. [Sound it out -- in English.] But I still feel a few items there manage to use the constraint to good effect.)

Oh -- but that must be (responding to another thread now, Michael, this isn't directed at you) -- the "deconstructionist" in me, as per the committee report that resulted in my second tenure denial.

Anyway. The additional constraints you helpfully elaborate on are indeed more interesting than the syllable/line game.

Best,

Joe

> Sure, one can use any formal restraint as a poetic game, as a challenge of sorts. But as challenges go, in haiku, the syllabic challenge (whatever pattern you might choose) is mighty superficial. Indeed, in my years of teaching haiku, I've seen that it's the easiest thing in the world for students of nearly all grade levels to count their pretty little syllables. Why brag about pulling on your underwear all by yourself when your hair is on fire? It's a trivial "discipline." And these same haiku, while hitting that trivial target -- again, an incorrect target in English -- are widely missing the more important targets. And most often, these proud 5-7-5ers are completely oblivious to those other targets -- ones that are actually more important. Why bother with arbirary constraints for haiku when there are far more serious, literary, challenging, and effective constraints that you miss in the process of focusing on 5-7-5?!?

It can be fun to write cinquains or iambic pentameter, or the recent "Fib" form (counting syllables in subsequent lines to match the Fibonacci sequence).
But when it comes to haiku, writing 5-7-5 syllables in English isn't the same as following the prescribed syllables of cinquains or pentameter or Fibs.
That's because following 5-7-5 assumes a "correctness" for that pattern in English, which isn't accurate when it's really a borrowed form. Yes, sonnets are borrowed from Italian to English, but at least that's the same alphabet, so it's not fraught with the problems of translating from Japanese to English.
It's folly to translate the number (5-7-5) without thinking more deeply about what is being counted. Yet that is precisely what has happened that lead to the false conception of haiku being 5-7-5 syllables in English. Quite simply, when we apply that pattern to English syllables, we miss the boat. It's simplistic and naive.

A person can do whatever they like and call it haiku (Lord knows that's happened plenty enough). If you're having fun, knock yourself out.
But if you're writing 5-7-5 haiku, it's best to be aware of how you're writing a poem that's markedly longer than what is expressed in a Japanese haiku (not all of which are 5-7-5, by the way). It's best to be aware that you're writing in a pattern that, for good reason, pretty much ALL of the leading haiku poets writing in English do not follow. It's best to be aware that writing 5-7-5 frequently creates artificial syntax and awkward line breaks purely for an unnecessary constraint while more important strategies (also constraints) are completely missed. Indeed, most 5-7-5 haiku writers tend to be completely unaware of the other strategies necessary for traditional haiku, though perhaps that's a separate problem, although it's frequently caused by a belief that 5-7-5 is all there is to it. In any event, if one aims at seasonality and a two-part juxtapositional structure, and employs objective sensory imagery, you can let the rest of form take care of itself (organically). But of course, there's more to it than that -- writing in the present tense, no titles, no rhyme, seldom any similes or metaphors, employing fragments rather than full sentences, employing allusion, and more. And perhaps the most important aspect of all -- implication. It's very hard to do well, to hint at something that the reader can figure out on his own, making a leap of understanding that's made possible because of your restraint as a poet, because you deliberately left something out. As I like to emphasize in haiku workshops, don't write about your emotion, write about what caused your emotion. Then, if you do it right, the reader can feel what you felt without your having to say so. But of course all of this is missed by those who think haiku is only a 5-7-5 syllable-counting poetry trick. Some "challenge."

As I say in the title of one of my haiku lectures: "Haiku: It's Bigger Than You Think." Yet of course, it's also smaller than most English speakers think, too.

Michael

P.S. Nearly every serious haiku poet I know has had a progression in their haiku -- and I'm talking about many hundreds of leading haiku poets who I pay attention to, perhaps even thousands. They nearly all started out writing 5-7-5, as did I. And then they progressed to learning the more important aspects of the genre (and haiku is best thought of as a genre of poetry, of which "form" is just one aspect). At this point, nearly all of them stop writing in the 5-7-5 pattern. The few exceptions to this progression include those who went straight to avoiding 5-7-5 in the first place. But there are clear reasons for this progression. It's not that 5-7-5 is "abandoned." Rather, it is apprehended as something that was inappropriate in the first place, and causes many problems in English. Higher targets are sought -- ones, in fact, that turn out to be far more challenging and require far more discipline. If 5-7-5 in English serves any useful purpose, it is purely as the first stepping-stone on a long path. But, alas, too many people, even otherwise accomplished poets, stop at just that first stepping stone with their haiku.

In a message dated 02-Feb-07 9:01:40 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 10:41:59 -0600
From: Joe Amato <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

While I think it's a good idea to understand that 5-7-5 is simply a convenience of sorts, even something of a mistranslation (even something of a cultural oversight), I feel about this pretty much the way I feel about bending any formal rule. I.e., it's fun to use 5-7-5 as an arbitrary constraint in composing haiku, just as it's fun to use 14 lines as an arbitrary constraint in composing sonnets. (Which latter might not result in 14 lines, ysee, but that won't keep > me from calling it a sonnet.)

>
> Granted, correcting the misconception is one thing. But having fun with same is quite another, which, to me, is one reason I write poetry.

↑ Index

103. Brandi Homan

Switchback Books Newsletter: Book release, Feb events, and Gatewood Prize

Sun 4 Feb 2007

Hi y'all—

Switchback Books is celebrating the release of its inaugural publication, Talk Shows by Mónica de la Torre, this Valentine's Day, Wednesday, February 14, 2007. The party starts at 8:30 pm in Chicago at the California Clipper, 1002 N California Ave (California at Augusta). Short readings will be given by all Switchback staff members (see below) as well as a feature-length reading by Mónica de la Torre. Come help us celebrate!

In addition, Mónica de la Torre will be giving readings throughout the city and surrounding area with Switchback staff and advisory board members. Her complete tour is listed here:

February 9, 9:00 pm—Discrete Series with Brandi Homan: Elastic Arts Space, 2830 N Milwaukee Ave, Chicago, IL

February 11, 4:30 pm—Women & Children First with Arielle Greenberg: 5233 N Clark St, Chicago, IL

February 13, 6:00 pm—A Room of One's Own Feminist Bookstore: 307 W Johnson St, Madison, WI

February 14, 8:30 pm—Talk Shows Release Party: California Clipper, 1002 N California Ave, Chicago, IL

February 16, 7:00 pm—Woodland Pattern with Simone Muench: 720 Locust St, Milwaukee, WI

Finally, Switchback Books congratulates Caroline Noble Whitbeck, whose manuscript, Our Classical Heritage: A Homing Device, was selected by judge Arielle Greenberg as the winner of the 2006 Gatewood Prize. Our Classical Heritage will be published in September 2007.

Kind regards,

Becca Klaver, Brandi Homan, Hanna Andrews, and Kristin Aardsma
Editors, Switchback Books

***

Switchback Books is a feminist press publishing poetry by women. Founded in 2006 by a group of students at Columbia College Chicago, Switchback Books publishes two books a year, one of which is the winner of the Gatewood Prize for a first book of poetry by a woman aged 18 through 39. Switchback Books welcomes young women writers who aren't afraid to look for answers in all directions.

Switchback Books staff:

Becca Klaver, Founding Editor
Brandi Homan, Editor-in-Chief Daniela Olszewska, Editorial Assistant
Hanna Andrews, Founding Editor
Jennifer Steele, Editorial Intern
Kristin Aardsma, Editor
LaRaie Zimm, Editorial Assistant
Yvette Thomas, Editorial Intern

For more information, visit www.switchbackbooks.com.

↑ Index

104. Halvard Johnson
Re: Chapbooks
Sun 4 Feb 2007

My wife, Lynda Schor, recently published a fiction chapbook called Adventures in Capitalism with Unicorn Press.

Hal

"In Latin America, even atheists are Catholics."
--Carlos Fuentes

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Feb 3, 2007, at 1:54 PM, Ian Randall Wilson wrote:

> Are chapbooks just limited to poetry? Cervena Barva, a small press in Boston, is trying experiments with "chapbooks" in fiction, too. They just > published one of mine called Out of the Arcadian Ghetto.
>
> _http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/_ (http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/)
>
> Ian Wilson

↑ Index

105. Charles Baldwin
Re: rousseau and de man
Sun 4 Feb 2007

I think the statement in question is from the interview with Rosso at the end of _The Resistance to Theory_, where de Man states:

"...I have a tendency to put upon texts an inherent authority, which is stronger, I think, than Derrida is willing to put on them. I assume, as a working hypothesis (as a working hypothesis, because I know batter than that), that the texts knows in an absolute way what it's doing. I knowthis is not the case, but it is a necesary working hypothesis that Rousseau knows any time what he is doing and as such there is no need to deconstruct Rousseau. In a complicated way, I would hold to the statement that 'the text deconstructs itself, is self-deconstructive' rather than being deconstructed by a philosophical intervention from outside the text."

This is a crucial point and underlies the difference between Derrida on Rousseau in _Of Grammatology_ and de Man on Derrida on Rousseau in "The Rhetoric of Blindness." Barry and Alex are differing over whether the text can be deconstructed by the critic vs. whether the text is "in deconstruction." De Man seems to suggest the latter, shifting emphasis away from the work done by the critic to the work already at work in the work. ("I never had an idea of my own," says de Man.) It is interesting to note that de Man then adds that the difference is that he is a philologist and not a philosopher (as Derrida is).

Sandy

>>> Alexander Dickow <[redacted]> 02/03/07 8:24 AM >>>
Barry wrote:
"I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one
writer who could not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way
out in front of
the reader/critic."

Where does de Man say this? I admit I'm surprised,
since he "deconstructs" the Profession de foi du vicaire savoyard (Emile) in a very smart paper (one of the best on the Profession de foi). Rousseau -- see the Grammatologie -- was a cornerstone of
"deconstructionist" reading practices from the beginnings of poststructuralism. Far from being
"impossible to deconstruct", if you ask me!
Not to mention: anyone who has read Rousseau carefully
knows that his texts are veritable conundrums,
vertiginous, infinitely tricky and unstable.
"Impossible to deconstruct"? Rousseau's a master of slippery vocabulary (related terms with unstable boundaries, reinvented familiar words or notions...), and he can get you to call black orange in under five minutes.
So, I'd love to know where (and how, why, etc) de Man
makes this claim.
Amicalement,
Alex

www.alexdickow.net/blog/

les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

106. thom donovan

PEACE on A presents : Levi Strauss & Schlesinger : Fri. February 9th 2007

Sun 4 Feb 2007

Peace On A presents

David Levi Strauss & Kyle Schlesinger

Friday, February 9th 2007 8PM
BYOB & recommended donation: $5

hosted by Thom Donovan at 166 Avenue A, Apartment #2

New York, NY 10009

about the readers:

Kyle Schlesinger is a book artist, poet, editor & founder of Cuneiform Press. Recent artists' books include A Book of Closings and Moonlighting. His serial poem Mantle (with Thom Donovan) was published by Atticus Finch in 2005, and a forthcoming book of poems will be published by BlazeVox Books in 2007. He currently teaches poetry and typography at SUNY-Buffalo.

Meanwhile prolongs this observation.
Boarding trains this circular morn between two points the sky – robin blue and just for you. Declines night now. Waning figures cast fishnet sentences. Lines darting here or there – sequence yourself.
~ from Moonlighting

David Levi Strauss is a writer and critic in New York, where his essays and reviews appear regularly in Artforum and Aperture. His collection of essays on photography and politics, Between the Eyes, with an introduction by John Berger, was published by Aperture in 2003, and has just been released in an Italian edition by Postmedia. The Book of 101 Books: Seminal Photography Books of the Twentieth Century, with catalogue essays by Strauss, was published by P.P.P. Editions and D.A.P. in 2001. Between Dog & Wolf: Essays on Art & Politics was published in 1999 by Autonomedia, and Broken Wings: The Legacy of Landmines (with photographer Bobby Neel Adams) came out in 1998. His essays have appeared in a number of recent books and monographs on artists such as Leon Golub and Nancy Spero, Martin Puryear, Miguel Rio Branco, Francesca Woodman, Carolee Schneemann, and Alfredo Jaar. He was the founding editor of ACTS: A Journal of New Writing (1982-1990), and author of a book of poetry, Manoeuvres, before moving from San Francisco to

New York in 1993. He has been awarded a Logan grant, three Artspace grants, a Visiting Scholar Research Fellowship from the Center for Creative Photography, a Guggenheim fellowship in 2003-04, and the Infinity Award for writing from the International Center of Photography in 2006. Strauss taught at the Center for Curatorial Studies at Bard College from 2001-05, and is now on the faculties of both the Graduate School of the Arts and the undergraduate studio art program at Bard.

In his introduction to Between the Eyes, John Berger wrote, “Strauss, who is a poet and storyteller as well as being a renowned commentator on photography (I reject the designation critic) looks at images very hard . . . and comes face-to-face with the unexplained. Again and again. The unexplained that he encounters has only little to do with the mystery of art and everything to do with the mystery of countless lives being lived.” And Luc Sante wrote, “David Levi Strauss brings an eloquent and deep moral seriousness to his examination of photography. Again and again he makes the ringing point that trying to separate aesthetics and politics can only result in vacuity. He is photography’s troubled conscience.”

Half hope, half fear. Like when people who react against politically committed art say, on the one hand, that such art is pretentious, delusional, and dishonest, since art is powerless to cause real political change; and, on the other hand, that this kind of art is irresponsible and dangerous, since it inflames the passions of the already savage rabble. So which is it, dog or wolf? ~ from Between Dog & Wolf

Peace On A is devoted to emergent work by writers, artists, performers and scholars. Past presenters at Peace on A include Alan Gilbert, E. Tracy Grinnell, Cathy Park Hong, Paolo Javier, Andrew Levy & Eléna Rivera. Scroll down Wild Horses of Fire weblog (whof.blogspot.com) for back advertisements, introductions and reading selections.

Measure a million million
Measure a million to margin
~ Susan Howe

166 Avenue A
NY, NY 10009
whof.blogspot.com

___
We won't tell. Get more on shows you hate to love
(and love to hate): Yahoo! TV's Guilty Pleasures list.
http://tv.yahoo.com/collections/265

↑ Index

107. Chris Chapman
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

Am I wrong to think then that deconstruction is not going to make a come-back?

It has been passed- over?

Chris
(doesn't know where theory is)

↑ Index

108. jcu
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

---

deconstuction is not a method
or a formula, but just a habit
of mind, a way of thinking
that attends to what gets
left out

----- Original Message -----
From: "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

> i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs. too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less uninteresting.
>
> put simply, to deconstruct, one must
>
> 1.) pick a text
> 2.) identify one or more implications of the text
> 3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
> 4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to or in some way subverts the implications you have identified in the text.
>
> It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite surprised that

> there's so much mystique surrounding the idea. Even if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument, i don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about the original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing such methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination, the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's often impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read, which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about almost everything.
>
> Aldon Nielsen wrote:
> and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?
>
> "There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."
>
> "'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."
>
> "what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "
>
> "I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."
>
> Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC
>
> At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
>
> Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.
>
> and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.
>
> ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>
> there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."

Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.
ric carfagna wrote:

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

*<<

109. Halvard Johnson
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

As in

deconst( )ion

?

Hal

"To go is to go farther."
--Kenneth Koch

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Feb 4, 2007, at 12:57 PM, jcu wrote:

> deconstuction is not a method
> or a formula, but just a habit
> of mind, a way of thinking
> that attends to what gets
> left out
>
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
>
> i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs.
> too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of
> obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of > deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less uninteresting.
>
> put simply, to deconstruct, one must
>
> 1.) pick a text

2.) identify one or more implications of the text
3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to or in some way subverts the implications you have identified in the text.

It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite surprised that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea. Even if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument, i don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about the original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing such methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination, the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's often impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read, which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about almost everything.

Aldon Nielsen wrote:
and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:

Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.

and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.

ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:

there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory --
and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."
Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group
wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.
ric carfagna wrote:

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

*<<

> "I stand corrected, like a bishop of the obvious."
> --Robert Kelly
>
> Aldon Lynn Nielsen
> George and Barbara Kelly Professor of American Literature
> Department of English
> The Pennsylvania State University
> 112 Burrowes
> University Park, PA 16802-6200
>
> [redacted] [office]
>
> [redacted] [Fax]
>
> Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

110. Alan Sondheim

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Sun 4 Feb 2007

I'm not sure that this will go through.

Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of locating subtexts; it relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it treats the text as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies (in the sense that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great importance - and thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency of the surface). Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on deconstruction (not mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of all the simple logic involved, and second, its actual process of construction, its history, and so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it might be considered - is in using the (logical) formation to consider issues of origination, the 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the standpoint of this 'veering.'

Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a text - not in the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense of implicit within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends elsewhere, that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did a Kristevan analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along these lines.) So that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is open, might seem a barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a relation to Zen I think).

All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down - since it's neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a discourse which has always already continued and continues to continue, a discourse of humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but which nonetheless carries a very real political component, activist as well.

- Alan

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

111. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: dubravka, green integer

Sun 4 Feb 2007

I second everything Jason says. My personal very favorites among many favorites: Poe's "Eureka" and Bresson's "Notes of a Cinematographer(?)".

Ciao,

Murat

On 2/3/07, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I agree with that completely. A quick scan of my bookshelf reveals > probably more green integer titles than from any other poetry press. A few > of my faves:
>
> Arcanum 17, Andre Breton > tender buttons (i think there's another edition in print, but i also seem > to recall it's small and printed on cheap paper)
> lorca's suites
>
> i just checked the site, and i see that there's a planned release of > Berkeley's Three Dialogues which will no doubt be very cool and i intend to > buy > quickly. The thing i love about green integer is that they're a publisher > you can trust. i often am browsing in a bookstore and will see something by > someone i haven't heard of and buy it, and as a result discover someone > amazing. that's actually where my introduction to larry eigner came from,

> and
> I'm very much indebted to messerli for publishing
> "readiness/enough/depends/on" for that reason.
>
> Alexander Dickow wrote:
> > Dubravka,
> > Green Integer is, yes, one of the publishing houses I > > most admire. Their catalogue is...droolworthy. Green
> > Integer makes me swoon. Beautiful little books, too.
> > Everyone should pore carefully over the wonders of
> > Green Integer Review and its previous incarnation.
> > And, you might read Douglas Messerli's (sorta the > > mastermind behind Green Integer, I believe) comments
> > and poems on the Argotist Online lately.
> > Amicalement,
> > Alex
> >
> >
> >
> > www.alexdickow.net/blog/
> >
> > les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> > merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet
>

↑ Index

112. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: 50 ANIVERSARIO DE LA POESIA CONCRETA
Sun 4 Feb 2007

Great collection!

Murat

On 2/3/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> 50 ANIVERSARIO DE LA POESIA CONCRETA
>
> Disfrute de este espacio en la website BOEK861 de César Reglero, > dedicado al homenaje de los 50 años de la Poesía Concreta.
>

> http://www.boek861.com/stutgart/
>
>
>
> 50 ANNIVERSARY OF CONCRETE POETRY
>
> Enjoy this space in Cesar Reglero´s website BOEK861, dedicated to > Homage 50 Years of Concrete Poetry.
>
> http://boek861.com/stutgart/index_en.htm
>
>
>
> PARTICIPANTES - PARTICIPANTS
>
> Giovanni Fontana, Adam Fong, Adolf, Agustín Calvo Galán, Alejandro
> Thornton, Alkak Luiz dos Santos y Gilbertto Prado, Ana Glafira, > Anamaría Briede, Angela Ibáñez, Antonella Prota Giurleo, Antoni
> Albalat, Antonio Cáres, Antonio Monterroso, Antonio Orihuela, Baldo
> Ramos, Beatriz San Millán, Birger Jesch, Brian Whitener, Carol Starr, > Caterina Davinio, Cecil Touchon, Cesar Reglero, Christian Hasucha, > Cirus Console, Claudia del Rio, Claudio Grandinetti, Clemente Padín, > Constança Lucas, Costis, Dan Buck, David Daniels, Demosthene
> Agrafiotis, Denis Charmot, Emerenciano, Eugenia Serafini, Fausto
> Grossi, Feliciano Mira, Francesc Xavier Forés, Franco Focardi, > Franklin Valverde, G. J. de Rook, Geof Huth, Gerardo Podhajny, > Graciela Gutiérrez Marx, Gregory Vincent St Thomasino, Gunther Ruch, > Gustavo Fernández Alonso, Gustavo Vega, Henning Mittendorf, Irving
> Weiss, Isabel Jover, Ivan Etienne, J. M. Calleja, Jeanete EKohler, > Joaquim Branco, John Bennett, Jorge Ismael Rodríguez, José Blanco, > Josep Sou, Julien Blaine, Jurgen O.Olbrich, Keiichi Nakamura, Kostas
> Hrisos, Leticia Alonso Hernández, Litsa Spathi, Lois Gil Magariños, > Lorena Cordero, Luc Fierens, Manuel A. Sousa, Mara Caruso, María José
> Ares Mondino, Mark Sutherland, Michael Morris, Miekal And, Miguel > Jiménez Zenón, Monica Vallejo, Neusa Cauduro, Nicola Frangione, Nikos
> Vassilakis, Norberto José Martínez, P.Thoma, Patricia Robledo, > Patricia Sibar, Paul de Vree, Paul Tiililä, Rainer Stolz, Reed
> Altemus, Regina Vater, Roberto Scala, Rocia Alegre, Rod Summers, > Ruediger Axel Westphal, Ruud Janssen, Sergio Monteiro, Shutaro Mukai, > Silvia Lisa, Susana Romano, Tamara Wyndham, Thierry Tiliier, Tom > Gaze, Vaclav Havel, Virginia Oviedo Rodríguez y Vittore Baroni.
>

> BOEK861
> [redacted]
>

↑ Index

113. jcu
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

---

as in

de:constanticipation

joan

----- Original Message -----
From: "Halvard Johnson" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, February 04, 2007 2:26 PM
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

> As in
>
> deconst( )ion
>
> ?
>
> Hal
>
> "To go is to go farther."
> --Kenneth Koch
>
> Halvard Johnson
> ==========
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
>
> On Feb 4, 2007, at 12:57 PM, jcu wrote:
>
> deconstuction is not a method
> or a formula, but just a habit

of mind, a way of thinking
that attends to what gets
left out

----- Original Message ----- From: "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs.
too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of
obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less uninteresting.

put simply, to deconstruct, one must

1.) pick a text
2.) identify one or more implications of the text
3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to or in some way subverts the implications you have identified in the text.

It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite surprised that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea. Even if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument, i don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about the original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing such methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination, the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's often impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read,
which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about almost everything.

Aldon Nielsen wrote:
and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:

Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.

and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.

ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:

there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."
Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.
ric carfagna wrote:

> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>
> *<<

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.

↑ Index

115. Martha Deed
Re: SOS POETRY
Sun 4 Feb 2007

This one's a keeper. Funny and wise and eye-opening.

Martha Deed

----- Original Message -----
From: "Mairead Byrne" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 12:54 PM
Subject: SOS POETRY

Let a free book steal YOUR time:

My book SOS POETRY has just been published by UbuWeb
http://ubu.com
as an /ubu Edition
http://ubu.com/ubu

Mairead

Mairéad Byrne
Associate Professor of English
Rhode Island School of Design
2 College Street
Providence, RI 02903

--
No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.5.432 / Virus Database: 268.17.24/668 - Release Date: 2/4/2007
1:30 AM

↑ Index

116. Jesse Crockett
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

To me: "deconstruction" is a sensational term used to hype a technique that, again, to me, at basics is a way of balancing a text, a way to provide suggestions in order to improve succeeding instantiations of its _moral content_ as it's construed of its binaries nexus (sounds like Baskin Robbins, yes?). Me, well, I still love existentialism. Old style.

jcu wrote:
> as in
> de:constanticipation
>
>
>
> joan
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Halvard Johnson"
> <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Sunday, February 04, 2007 2:26 PM
> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
>
>
>> As in
>>
>> deconst( )ion
>>
>> ?
>>
>> Hal
>>
>> "To go is to go farther."
>> --Kenneth Koch
>>
>> Halvard Johnson
>> ==========
>> [redacted]
>> [redacted]
>> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
>> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
>> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
>> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
>>
>>
>>

>>
>> On Feb 4, 2007, at 12:57 PM, jcu wrote:
>>
>>> deconstuction is not a method
>>> or a formula, but just a habit
>>> of mind, a way of thinking
>>> that attends to what gets
>>> left out
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]>
>>> To: <[redacted]>
>>> Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
>>> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
>>>
>>>
>>>> i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs.
>>>> too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of
>>>> obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of >>>> deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less uninteresting.
>>>>
>>>> put simply, to deconstruct, one must
>>>>
>>>> 1.) pick a text
>>>> 2.) identify one or more implications of the text
>>>> 3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn
>>>> from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
>>>> 4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to or >>>> in some way subverts the implications you have identified in the >>>> text.
>>>>
>>>> It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to >>>> flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite >>>> surprised that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea. Even >>>> if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument, i >>>> don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about the >>>> original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing such >>>> methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination, the >>>> rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's often >>>> impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read,

>>>> which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas
>>>> propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval >>>> scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more >>>> entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or >>>> ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who >>>> are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're >>>> wrong about almost everything.
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> Aldon Nielsen wrote:
>>>>> and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and >>>>> supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a >>>>> person go about this representing?
>>>>>
>>>>> "There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, >>>>> were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either >>>>> conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of >>>>> such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's >>>>> nerves."
>>>>>
>>>>> "'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, >>>>> if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not >>>>> negative."
>>>>>
>>>>> "what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open >>>>> that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, >>>>> their order, their pertinence. "
>>>>>
>>>>> "I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are >>>>> alluding."
>>>>>
>>>>> Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC
>>>>>
>>>>> At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>> Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that >>>>>> the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when >>>>>> applied to texts.
>>>>>>

>>>>>> and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the >>>>>> sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.
>>>>>>
>>>>>> ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>>>>>>
>>>>>>> there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory --
>>>>>>> and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory
>>>>>>> that a poet would then "represent."
>>>>>>> Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and >>>>>>> poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on >>>>>>> Jabes and Ponge --
>>>>>>> On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group
>>>>>>> wrote:
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>> michel deguy comes to mind.
>>>>>>> ric carfagna wrote:
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>>> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>>
<<

>>>>> --Robert Kelly
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> Aldon Lynn Nielsen
>>>>> George and Barbara Kelly Professor of American Literature
>>>>> Department of English
>>>>> The Pennsylvania State University
>>>>> 112 Burrowes
>>>>> University Park, PA 16802-6200
>>>>>
>>>>> [redacted] [office]
>>>>>
>>>>> [redacted] [Fax]
>>>>>
>>>>> Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/
>>

↑ Index

117. jcu
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

I hail from the world of visual art first, and only know the term as a philosphical
one ... the notion of using `deconstruction` as a formula for literary critique eludes me since it seems to contradict what Derrida meant it to represent ... which was not a formulaic method. (but I also love that goofy DeleuZe) so maybe I`m just expressing my incredulity at deconstruction-as-a-literary device

however, I love your notion of a binary nexus in Baskin Robbins. Would that make Hagen Daas an intervenous drip?

respectfully,
joan

----- Original Message -----
From: "Jesse Crockett" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>

Sent: Sunday, February 04, 2007 4:13 PM
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

> To me: "deconstruction" is a sensational term used to hype a technique that, again, to me, at basics is a way of balancing a text, a way to provide suggestions in order to improve succeeding instantiations of its _moral content_ as it's construed of its binaries nexus (sounds like Baskin Robbins, yes?). Me, well, I still love existentialism. Old style.
>
> jcu wrote:
> as in
> de:constanticipation
>
> joan
>
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Halvard Johnson"
> <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Sunday, February 04, 2007 2:26 PM
> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
>
> As in
>
> deconst( )ion
>
> ?
>
> Hal
>
> "To go is to go farther."
> --Kenneth Koch
>
> Halvard Johnson
> ==========
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Feb 4, 2007, at 12:57 PM, jcu wrote:

deconstuction is not a method
or a formula, but just a habit
of mind, a way of thinking
that attends to what gets
left out

----- Original Message ----- From: "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs. too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less uninteresting.

put simply, to deconstruct, one must

1.) pick a text
2.) identify one or more implications of the text
3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to or in some way subverts the implications you have identified in the text.

It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite surprised that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea. Even if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument, i don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about the original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing such methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination, the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's often impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read, which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about almost everything.

Aldon Nielsen wrote:
and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:

Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.

and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.

ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:

there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."
Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.

ric carfagna wrote:

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

*<<

118. Jason Quackenbush
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

---

i disagree with such
obvious obfuscations
intended to add mystique
in place of clarity.

jcu wrote:
> deconstuction is not a method
> or a formula, but just a habit
> of mind, a way of thinking
> that attends to what gets > left out
>
>
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
>
>
>> i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs. too >> many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of obtuse >> nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of >> deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less uninteresting.
>>
>> put simply, to deconstruct, one must
>>
>> 1.) pick a text
>> 2.) identify one or more implications of the text
>> 3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn from >> etymology, linguistics, and semiotics >> 4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to or in >> some way subverts the implications you have identified in the text.
>>
>> It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to >> flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite surprised >> that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea. Even if it were a >> valid way to go about constructing an argument, i don't know that it's >> actually useful in saying anything about the original text or its >> author. Moreover, criticism employing such methods is usually so badly >> written (see, eg, Dissemination, the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh >> of the medusa) that it's often impossible to give it the value of >> simply being fun to read, which, for example, one can find in >> similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the >> medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's >> more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or >> ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are >> good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about >> almost everything.

>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Aldon Nielsen wrote:
>>
>>> and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing >>> that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go >>> about this representing?
>>>
>>> "There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were >>> it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or >>> revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions.
>>> That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."
>>>
>>> "'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if >>> one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."
>>>
>>> "what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open
>>> that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their >>> order, their pertinence. "
>>>
>>> "I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."
>>>
>>> Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC
>>>
>>> At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:
>>>
>>>> Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the >>>> method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to

>>>> texts.
>>>>
>>>> and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense >>>> that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.
>>>>
>>>> ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>>>>
>>>>> there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and
>>>>> it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a >>>>> poet would then "represent."
>>>>> Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a >>>>> good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
>>>>> On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group
wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> michel deguy comes to mind.
>>>>> ric carfagna wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>> Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
<<

>>>>>>>>>>>>>
>>>
>>> "I stand corrected, like a bishop of the obvious."
>>> --Robert Kelly
>>>
>>>
>>> Aldon Lynn Nielsen
>>> George and Barbara Kelly Professor of American Literature
>>> Department of English
>>> The Pennsylvania State University
>>> 112 Burrowes
>>> University Park, PA 16802-6200
>>>
>>> [redacted] [office]
>>>
>>> [redacted] [Fax]
>>>
>>> Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/
>>
>>

↑ Index

119. Jason Quackenbush
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

---

what you have described is a method and the things that you say are not subtexts are subtexts. deconstruction is little more than linguistic legerdemain. I can't respond to your paper about the sheffer stroke because i haven't read it, but the idea of extrapolating issues of gender and metaphysics from the speculations about the psychology behind the choice of symbols is precisely the sort of deconstructionist nonsense that ought be avoided at all costs. There are no metaphysics underlying texts because metaphysics is a philosophical card game akin to 52 card pick up that no one can win or lose. therefore any attempt to "get at" the metaphysics underlying texts (if they really aren't subtexts, which i take to be either a very dubious assertion or quibbling over terms and either way nonproductive) is doomed to produce only the most unstable and stipulated of philosophical card houses, the value of which houses is questionable from the outset.

I again assert that deconstruction is a method, and that the method is observable in deconstructivist texts like the ones i mentioned previously. I personally see no value in such a method and await any supporter of it to show me it's value without invoking meaningless heidegger derived jargon such as "always already". say "is." it means the same thing. no really, it does.

Alan Sondheim wrote:
> I'm not sure that this will go through.
>
> Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of locating subtexts;
> it relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it treats the > text as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies (in the > sense that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great > importance - and thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency > of the surface). Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on > deconstruction (not mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer > stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the > history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical > concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of > all the simple logic involved, and second, its actual process of > construction, its history, and so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it > might be considered - is in using the (logical) formation to consider > issues of origination, the 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the > standpoint of this 'veering.'
>
> Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a text - not > in the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense of > implicit within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends > elsewhere, that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did > a Kristevan analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along > these lines.) So that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is > open, might seem a barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a > relation to Zen I think).
>
> All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down - since it's > neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a discourse > which has always already continued and continues to continue, a > discourse of humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but > which nonetheless carries a very real political component, activist as > well.
>
> - Alan
>
>
>

==========
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check > WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance,
> dvds, etc.
==========

↑ Index

120. Gwyn McVay
Contact info request; fashion snark
Sun 4 Feb 2007

If anybody can give me contact info, backchannel please, for Forrest Gander, CD Wright, Alice Notley, and/or Erin Moure, do please let me know.

Unrelatedly, who the hell let Prince out of the house in that ghastly suit and do-rag that seemed to be hiding curlers? The colors didn't flatter his complexion; the cut didn't flatter his body; the whole ensemble, complete with jacket embroidery, was a passionate statement in favor of fug. I'm not advocating a return to all-purple all the time, but when the glowing marching-band members looked better than he did, that was just really sad.

Many thanks -- Gwyn

↑ Index

121. Alan Sondheim
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Sun 4 Feb 2007

Actually it doesn't, and your reply is not only harsh but more inclined to invective than analysis. Go for it. But 'always already' deals with pre-suppositions, the continuous establishment of a state of affairs, not a copula. - Alan

On Sun, 4 Feb 2007, Jason Quackenbush wrote:

> what you have described is a method and the things that you say are not subtexts are subtexts. deconstruction is little more than linguistic legerdemain. I can't respond to your paper about the sheffer stroke because i haven't read it, but the idea of extrapolating issues of gender and metaphysics from the speculations about the psychology behind the choice of symbols is precisely the sort of deconstructionist nonsense that ought be avoided at all costs. There are no metaphysics underlying texts because metaphysics is a philosophical card game akin to 52 card pick up that no one can win or lose. therefore any attempt to "get at" the metaphysics underlying texts (if they really aren't subtexts, which i take to be either a very dubious assertion or quibbling over terms and either way nonproductive) is doomed to produce only the most unstable and stipulated of philosophical card houses, the value of which houses is questionable from the outset.

I again assert that deconstruction is a method, and that the method is observable in deconstructivist texts like the ones i mentioned previously. I personally see no value in such a method and await any supporter of it to show me it's value without invoking meaningless heidegger derived jargon such as "always already". say "is." it means the same thing. no really, it does.

Alan Sondheim wrote:
I'm not sure that this will go through.

Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of locating subtexts; it relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it treats the text as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies (in the sense that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great importance - and thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency of the surface). Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on deconstruction (not mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of all the simple logic involved, and second, its actual process of construction, its history, and so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it might be considered - is in using the (logical) formation to consider issues of origination, the 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the standpoint of this 'veering.'

Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a text - not in the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense of implicit within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends elsewhere, that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did a Kristevan analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along these lines.) So that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is open, might seem a barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a relation to Zen I think).

All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down - since it's neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a discourse which has always already continued and continues to continue, a discourse of humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but which nonetheless carries a very real political component, activist as well.

- Alan

> ==========
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check > WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance,
> dvds, etc.
> ==========

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

122. thom donovan

)))(((WILD HORSES OF FIRE)))(((CRITICAL OBJECTS)))(((

Mon 5 Feb 2007

Wild Horses Of Fire weblog now has a links page in the right column to critical writing/remark from the blog ("Critical Objects") and soon will have links to friends, colleagues & kindred spirits. It has unfortunately taken me THIS long to sort the techne out (ug!), but perhaps this organizational revolution will make the blog a little easier to navigate for any interested...

Thom Donovan

166 Avenue A
NY, NY 10009
whof.blogspot.com

Have a burning question?
Go to www.Answers.yahoo.com and get answers from real people who know.

↑ Index

123. Don Summerhayes
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Is it really possible that a group of intelligent poets can be so dumb about deconstruction when they use its understanding of text every day?

On 4-Feb-07, at 6:56 PM, Jason Quackenbush wrote:

> i disagree with such
> obvious obfuscations
> intended to add mystique
> in place of clarity.
>
> jcu wrote:
> deconstuction is not a method
> or a formula, but just a habit
> of mind, a way of thinking
> that attends to what gets
> left out
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
> i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs.
> too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of
> obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of > deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less > uninteresting.
>
> put simply, to deconstruct, one must
>
> 1.) pick a text
> 2.) identify one or more implications of the text
> 3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn
> from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
> 4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to > or in some way subverts the implications you have identified in > the text.
>
> It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way > to flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite > surprised that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea.
> Even if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument,
> i don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about > the original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing > such methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination, > the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's > often impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read, which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about almost everything.

Aldon Nielsen wrote:

and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:

Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.

and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.

ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:

there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory --

and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory
that a poet would then "represent."
Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group
wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.
ric carfagna wrote:

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

*<<

> [redacted] [Fax]
>
> Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

124. Michael Dylan Welch
Re: Haiku Death Match
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Yes, I've found that being a Haiku Cop is tiring -- and surely also tiresome to the perps (who may or may not give a hoot). However, I remain buoyed by those who are grateful to learn something because, so they say, they hadn't had a clue before, despite blissfully writing perfect 5-7-5 tripe. In any event, I'm mostly interested in why haiku is so WIDELY mistaught in North America, leading to the popular perception (among the general populace, as well as serious poets, even though they should know better) that haiku is simply (and maybe only) a poem in a pattern of 5-7-5 syllables. Sometimes folks are told a little bit more, but usually it's still highly superficial and frequently misguided by the 5-7-5 misunderstanding. So rather than "policing" the genre, I'm more interested in correcting the idiocy of outdated textbooks and curriculum guides that perpetuate misunderstands and harmful oversimplifications of the genre, in both Japanese and English. But it's so hard to change the course of these behemoth ocean-liners.

Despite my advocacy for a more informed understanding of haiku, I recognize that "pseudo-haiku" can still be a lot of fun. I've also tried writing some myself, and it can be quite a challenge (not merely the 5-7-5 gimmick, but crafting the poem for other specific purposes). (For a friend's online comic strip, I've written a long series of "bad" haiku that are spoken by a green goblin. Nothing to do with literary haiku, and quite a challenge to write, but they're all perfectly 5-7-5.) But the key thing is that this shallow and misguided perception of haiku is ultimately detrimental to haiku as literature, insofar as they perpetuate misunderstandings. (In the comic, the goblin will probably be killed off because his haiku are so bad -- though of course I like to think that they're a "good" kind of bad, in the way that Bulwer-Lytton or "Bad Hemmingway" fiction contest winners are good.)

Some folks have argued that sonnets are more maleable than the 14-line iambic pentameter that's the most common or traditional. I have no problem with that for sonnets. However, I am not offering the same defence of malleability in support of non-5-7-5 haiku. Rather, it was the wrong target in the first place, and exhibited the transfer of the number of something while paying no attention to what is being counted (they count sounds in Japanese, which are not always the same as English syllables -- or rather, most English syllables can vary a lot more than Japanese ones). So I'm NOT saying that haiku in English should avoid 5-7-5 simply because I think haiku should be malleable (the way some people think sonnets should be, or are). Rather, I'm saying that haiku has a number of aspects to it, and some of those aspects have been found to be essential, and translatable, across languages, including structure (two-part juxtaposition), seasonal reference, and so on. Form, however, is problematic. If you stick with the number, and pay no attention to the differences between languages, you end up with 17 syllables in English that says significantly more than a Japanese haiku does. It's for good reason that the great majority of contemporary translators and the vast majority of leading haiku poets do not employ the 5-7-5 pattern, but instead pay greater attention to other aspects of structure and content.

Joe, I'll take a look at your ~Finger Exorcised~ on BlazeVOX very soon. And thanks, Charlie (Rossiter) for your comments. Charlie, in your mention of Lee Gurga, you meant to say that he edits Modern Haiku (you had said just Haiku). It is indeed the Poetry of the English-speaking haiku world (the journal was founded in 1969, and is the magazine of record for haiku in English, now edited, as you know, by Charles Trumbull). Visit _www.modernhaiku.org_ (http://www.modernhaiku.org) for more information, plus many sample essays and poems. In addition to Lee's fine book, I also recommend William J. Higginson's essential The Haiku Handbook (Kodansha, 1989), and Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology (Norton, 1999), which includes work of mine.

Michael

In a message dated 04-Feb-07 9:03:09 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Sun, 4 Feb 2007 09:33:59 -0600
From: Joe Amato <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Michael, you're not going to get any argument from me about any of that, much of which I've come across in my own readings. I'm simply suggesting that policing a form that isn't, in the first place, native to English might (might) produce the unintended consequence of ascribing too rigorously to rather arbitrary, if historically motivated, formalities. Contrary to many who compose them, sonnets are not simply about counting syllables or lines either. Me, I'd rather use the 5-7-5 reflexively, for instance, to challenge the tendency of some who dabble in non-native forms to produce an orientalized English. Granted, there are other ways to do this, and doing this raises perhaps some vexing issues.

(But see my recent ~Finger Exorcised~, on BlazeVOX, for a page of doubtless feeble attempts at related haiku humor. Hell, I even use the incorrect plural, "haikus," as a sort of dirty joke. [Sound it out -- in English.] But I still feel a few items there manage to use the constraint to good effect.)

Oh -- but that must be (responding to another thread now, Michael, this isn't directed at you) -- the "deconstructionist" in me, as per the committee report that resulted in my second tenure denial.

Anyway. The additional constraints you helpfully elaborate on are indeed more interesting than the syllable/line game.

Best,

Joe

↑ Index

125. mIEKAL aND

Today's guest on Paul Alan's WORDSALAD: mIEKA L aND

Mon 5 Feb 2007

Now playing on WSUM / UW-Madison Student Radio

Today's guest on Paul Alan's WORDSALAD: mIEKAL aND

I was happy to have in the studio today mIEKAL aND, whose work I've known about for a long time. mIEKAL publishes Xexoxial Editions and Joglars Crossmedia Beliefware, writes poetry and prose, and composes and performs music. We spoke about epic poems, spam poetry, visual poetry, and the Mail Art movement, among other things.

http://wordsalad.wordpress.com/

Here's a link to the audio archive. This link will only be good for a couple weeks:

- Length: 61:31 minutes (56.32 MB)
- Format: MP3 Stereo 44kHz 128Kbps (CBR)

http://buzz.wsum.wisc.edu:8000/?q=node/1771

↑ Index

126. Chris Chapman
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Hey Alan, that sounds really interesting:

"Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.)."

How did you parse out the embedded 'or' and its negations? These two choices look identical (which is why you mention the significance of 'always already'.)

Second glance shows a countermotion: one towards grouping ('not both') and the other towards distribution (neither/nor).

...

I find Derrida's writing to be a rich reserve of information from which a 'routine' has been lately abstracted. For example, essays in Writing and Difference teach us something about Raymond Rousset's 'ultrastructuralist' imagination and how this affected his criticism of Corneille. "Force and Signification" is, on this level, a thematic reading of Rousset's "Form and Signification". "Violence and Metaphysics" is a philosophical biography of Emmanuel Levinas as he grapples with Husserl and Heidegger. We learn something about Totality and Infinity. These basic stories get lost in the drift.

Chris
Chris

Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:

> I'm not sure that this will go through.
>
> Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of locating subtexts; it relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it treats the text as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies (in the sense that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great importance - and thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency of the surface). Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on deconstruction (not mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of all the simple logic involved, and second, its actual process of construction, its history, and so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it might be considered - is in using the (logical) formation to consider issues of origination, the 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the standpoint of this 'veering.'

> Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a text - not in the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense of implicit within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends elsewhere, that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did a Kristevan analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along these lines.) So that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is open, might seem a barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a relation to Zen I think).
>
> All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down - since it's neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a discourse which has always already continued and continues to continue, a discourse of humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but which nonetheless carries a very real political component, activist as well.
>
> - Alan
>
> ==========
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc.
> ==========

↑ Index

127. Michael Kelleher
(no subject)
Mon 5 Feb 2007

LITERARY BUFFALO
2.5.07-2.11.07

LITERARY BUFFALO IN THE NEWS:

GEORGE SAUNDERS AT CANISIUS IN THE BUFFALO NEWS:

http://www.buffalonews.com/editorial/20070204/1070348.asp

REVIEW OF ELLIS AVERY IN ARTVOICE (this Thursday, 2.8.07):

http://www.artvoice.com

THE BIG READ ON TV:

Watch "P.M. Buffalo" on Friday, 2.9.07 at 4 p.m. on Channel 7 to see Michael Kelleher and Alexis De Veaux discuss Zora Neale Hurston and The Big Read, Just Buffalo's month-long civic reading project sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts.

READINGS THIS WEEK

2.8.07

Canisius College Contemporary Writers Series Presents:
George Saunders
Fiction Reading
Thursday, February 8, 7 p.m.
Montante Cultural Center, Canisius College, Free

http://www.buffalonews.com/editorial/20070204/1070348.asp

George Saunders was born and raised in Chicago. He earned a B.S. in Geophysical Engineering from the Colorado School of Mines and an M.F.A. in creative writing from Syracuse University. He is the author of three collections of short fiction: CivilWarLand in Bad Decline, a finalist for the PEN/Hemingway Award for First Fiction in 1997; Pastoralia, a New York Times Notable Book for 2000; and the recently published In Persuasion Nation. He has also published a children's book, The Very Persistent Gappers of Frip, and a novella, The Brief and Frightening Reign of Phil. His work has appeared in numerous magazines, including The New Yorker, Harper's, Kenyon Review and Esquire, and received several awards, including the National Magazine Award for Fiction and the O. Henry Award. Saunders currently teaches creative writing at Syracuse University.

2.9.07

Poetics Plus at UB Presents:
New Orleans Reunion: Camille Martin and Bill Lavender
Poetry Reading
Friday, February 9, 8 p.m.
Big Orbit Gallery, 30d Essex St.

2.9 & 2.10.07

Just Buffalo/Tru-Teas/Rooftop Poetry Club at Buffalo State Present:
Ellis Avery -- 2 Events
Reading, Friday, February 9 6:30 p.m.
Buffalo State College, Butler Library, Room 210
And
Tea Ceremony, reading, signing for: The Teahouse Fire

Saturday, February 10, 7 p.m.
Tru-Teas, 810 Elmwood Avenue, Buffalo10 Elmwood Avenue

Look for a review of Ellis Avery's novel, The Teahouse Fire in Thursday's Artvoice.

2.11.07

Burchfield-Penney Poets and Writers Series Presents:
Joanna Fisher and Mark Hammer
Poetry Reading
Sunday, February 11, 2 p.m.
Burchfield-Penney Art Center, Rockwell Hall, Buffalo State

RECURRING LITERARY EVENTS

JUST BUFFALO WRITER'S CRITIQUE GROUP
Members of Just Buffalo are welcome to attend a free, bi-monthly writer critique group in CEPA's Flux Gallery on the first floor of the historic Market Arcade Building across the street from Shea's. Group meets 1st and 3rd Wednesday at 7 p.m. Call Just Buffalo for details.

JUST BUFFALO TIMED WRITING GROUP
A writing practice group meets every FRIDAY at noon at Starbucks Coffee on Elmwood and Chippewa. Writing practice is based on Natalie Goldberg's suggested exercises in Writing Down The Bones. Writers in all genres, fiction and non-fiction welcome. There is no charge. Contact Trudy for info: [redacted].

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JUST BUFFALO MEMBERSHIP RAFFLE

Visit the literary city of your dreams:

-Joyce's Dublin
-Paris' Left Bank
-Dante's Florence
-Shakespeare's London
-Harlem Renaissance NYC
-The Beats' San Francisco
-Anywhere Continental flies.*

Now through May 10, 2007 your membership support of Just Buffalo Literary Center includes the chance to win the literary trip of a lifetime:

Package (valued at $5,000) includes:

-Two round-trip tickets to one of the great literary cities on Continental Airlines
-$1500 towards hotel and accommodations
-$500 in spending money

One ticket ($35) = Just Buffalo Individual Membership
Two tickets ($60) = Just Buffalo Family Membership
Three tickets ($100) = Just Buffalo Friend Membership

Purchase as many memberships as you like. Give them to whomever you choose as a gift (or give someone else the membership and keep the lottery ticket to yourself!). Only 1000 chances will be sold. Raffle tickets with Just Buffalo membership make great gifts! Drawing will be held the second week of May, 2007. Call [redacted] for more info.

* Raffle ticket purchases are not tax-deductible. If you want your membership to put you in the "literary trip of a lifetime" raffle, please write "raffle membership" in the "payment for" cell on the Paypal form. You will automatically be entered in the raffle, but your membership will not be tax-deductible. If you prefer not to be in the raffle and want tax-deductible status, then please write "non-raffle member" in the "payment for" cell.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will be immediately removed.

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)

www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

128. Ann Bogle
Re: Today's guest on Paul Alan's WORDSALAD: mIEKA L aND
Mon 5 Feb 2007

In a message dated 2/5/2007 7:44:00 A.M. Central Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

the Mail Art movement

btw, Hopkins Art Center in Hopkins, MN has a show open now of mail art to Feb. 18. http://www.hopkinsmn.com/_hca/exhibitions.html.

↑ Index

129. Alexander Dickow
rousseau and de man, sandy
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Sandy,
Thanks for the clarification. Sounds reasonable to me.
And foax, pipe down, relax. Sheesh.
Amicalement,
Alex

www.alexdickow.net/blog/

> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

130. Thomas savage
Re: Chapbooks
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Sisyphus Press just published a chapbook of stories by Bonnie Finberg.

Ian Randall Wilson <[redacted]> wrote: Are chapbooks just limited to poetry? Cervena Barva, a small press in Boston, is trying experiments with "chapbooks" in fiction, too. They just published one of mine called Out of the Arcadian Ghetto.

http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/ (http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/)

Ian Wilson

Need a quick answer? Get one in minutes from people who know. Ask your question on Yahoo! Answers.

↑ Index

131. Alan Sondheim
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

I'm not sure this will go through. The two functions are duals of each other and both can be used as the 'basis' of propositional logic; in other words, everything in propositional logic can be derived from either of these. For example if you have | for "neither A nor B" then A|A is simply "not A" and this also holds for "not both A and B."

And yes, grouping and distribution; they're both "kinds" of expulsion - A|B simply implies either the null set or "anywhere but here - elsewhere" - depending on whether A and B are complements, and "not both A and B" implies both possibly elsewhere and that "veering" - one or the other possibly, or neither, anything but the intersection.

I haven't thought of Derrida in terms of narrative - can you say more about this?

Thanks, Alan

On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:

> Hey Alan, that sounds really interesting:
>
> "Sheffer stroke (not both A and
> B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of > the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the > phallic, expulsion, etc.)."
>
> How did you parse out the embedded 'or' and its negations? These two choices > look identical (which is why you mention the significance of 'always already'.)
>
> Second glance shows a countermotion: one towards grouping ('not both') and the > other towards distribution (neither/nor).
>
> ...
>
> I find Derrida's writing to be a rich reserve of information from which a > *'routine' has been lately abstracted. For example, essays in Writing and > Difference teach us something about Raymond Rousset's 'ultrastructuralist'* > imagination and how this affected his criticism of Corneille. "Force and *Signification" is, on this level, a thematic reading of Rousset's "Form and Signification". "Violence and Metaphysics" is a philosophical biography of Emmanuel Levinas as he grapples with Husserl and Heidegger. We learn something about Totality and Infinity. These basic stories get lost in the drift.*

Chris
Chris

Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:

I'm not sure that this will go through.

Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of locating subtexts; it relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it treats the text as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies (in the sense that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great importance - and thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency of the surface). Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on deconstruction (not mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of all the simple logic involved, and second, its actual process of construction, its history, and so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it might be considered - is in using the (logical) formation to consider issues of origination, the 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the standpoint of this 'veering.'

Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a text - not in the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense of implicit within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends elsewhere, that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did a Kristevan analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along these lines.) So that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is open, might seem a barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a relation to Zen I think).

All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down - since it's neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a discourse which has always already continued and continues to continue, a discourse of humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but which nonetheless carries a very real political component, activist as well.

- Alan

> ==========
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check > WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance,
> dvds, etc.
> ==========

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

132. David Harrison Horton
Re: Chapbooks
Mon 5 Feb 2007

The Socialist "Little Blue Books" of the 20s and 30s were mainly prose works and fiction.

http://findarticles.com/p/articles/mi_g1epc/is_tov/ai_2419100725

David Harrison Horton
unionherald.blogspot.com

> Date: Mon, 5 Feb 2007 08:15:05 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Chapbooks
> To: [redacted]
>
> Sisyphus Press just published a chapbook of stories by Bonnie Finberg.
>
> Ian Randall Wilson wrote: Are chapbooks just limited to poetry? Cervena

Barva, a small press in > Boston, is trying experiments with "chapbooks" in fiction, too. They just > published one of mine called Out of the Arcadian Ghetto.
>
> _http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/_ (http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/)
>
>
> Ian Wilson
>
>
>
> ---
> Need a quick answer? Get one in minutes from people who know. Ask your question on Yahoo! Answers.

_____ Get connected - Use your Hotmail address to sign into Windows Live Messenger now. http://get.live.com/messenger/overview=

↑ Index

133. Thomas savage

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Mon 5 Feb 2007

Many years ago I read a book about the subject under discussion in these posts called "Deconstruction." I forget who the author was but it wasn't Derrida. I came away from this book with the feeling that "Deconstruction" (the idea, process, or concept, not the book), was just a fancy way for saying "to take something apart . When I said in a previous post that I'd read a lot of poetry influenced by deconstruction, it was to that aspect of it or to my impression of it that I referred. I also tend to associate it with Language Poetry or poetry influenced by the Language group. Regards, Tom Savage

Don Summerhayes <[redacted]> wrote: Is it really possible that a group of intelligent poets can be so dumb about deconstruction when they use its understanding of text every day?

On 4-Feb-07, at 6:56 PM, Jason Quackenbush wrote:

> i disagree with such
> obvious obfuscations
> intended to add mystique
> in place of clarity.
>
> jcu wrote:

deconstuction is not a method
or a formula, but just a habit
of mind, a way of thinking
that attends to what gets
left out
----- Original Message ----- From: "Jason Quackenbush"
To:

Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs.
too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of
obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less
uninteresting.

put simply, to deconstruct, one must

1.) pick a text
2.) identify one or more implications of the text
3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn
from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to or in some way subverts the implications you have identified in the text.

It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite surprised that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea.
Even if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument,
i don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about the original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing such methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination,
the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's often impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read, which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about almost everything.

Aldon Nielsen wrote:

and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?

"There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."

"'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."

"what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "

"I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."

Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC

At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:

Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when applied to texts.

and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.

ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:

there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory -- and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory that a poet would then "represent."
Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.
ric carfagna wrote:

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

> *<<

134. Ann Bogle
Audience & publishing
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Last year, there was a good thread among poets about the difference for them in publishing in online v. print publications. Mostly, the biggest difference was that in print publication, more attention was paid to precision in line breaks, layout, and font -- that was their overall experience. Now I want to ask how writers and poets feel about self-publishing when they encounter it and at their own websites v. publishing in online publications. It seems sometimes such a small psychological difference in transitting between the wr iter's own website v. an official publication. What is the bias that suggests that people who edit other writers' work are somehow stoic for doing so but that writers (most editors are both) are somehow vainglorious for going into print? Sometimes I would like to know if it is true -- sometimes it IS true -- that the editors of online publications have more editorial acuity than the writers do themselves, or if it's a "hands" argument -- having someone select you and do it for you by definition carries more weight and prestige. It is the same argument, in smaller and subtler form, inherent in the favoritism shown for large houses. In general, it is taking time (as should be expected) for online publications to gain the acclaim of print publications -- even though smaller print publications are invariably hard to find and therefore are restricted to small library audiences of 2,000 or fewer readers. Weblogs are usually female (like the Buckthorn in botany), and so therefore are deemed "low" as art goes. I find certain conversational weblogs to be pure and engrossing. I think they may be higher art than some people tend to realize, depending on their creator. It is an exciting way to cut out middle men and bullshit. It is a species of self-publishing. Topics weblogs are arguably valuable to more people. Other thoughts? Should it be harder to access online publications to increase the sensation that they are not self-published, that they have prestige? Should they be umbrella-listed at sites such as webdelsol?

AMB

↑ Index

135. Chris Chapman
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

I have to concentrate on Tocqueville but before I do:

when I read your description of what neither A nor B means I think you're on the verge of switching logical categories from those that stem from forms of division into forms of equation - 'either/or' for 'if/then.' The vertical bar you use,

"A/A", seems to bespeak a detachment within self-identity that had begun in disjunction.

It's that connection that I find interesting, narcissistically and perhaps narratologically speaking. I'm thinking about how to answer that more fully.

Chris
(Please show me where I've been especially obtuse with your demonstration.)

Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:

> I'm not sure this will go through. The two functions are duals of each other and both can be used as the 'basis' of propositional logic; in other words, everything in propositional logic can be derived from either of these. For example if you have | for "neither A nor B" then A|A is simply "not A" and this also holds for "not both A and B."
>
> And yes, grouping and distribution; they're both "kinds" of expulsion - A|B simply implies either the null set or "anywhere but here - elsewhere" - depending on whether A and B are complements, and "not both A and B" implies both possibly elsewhere and that "veering" - one or the other possibly, or neither, anything but the intersection.
>
> I haven't thought of Derrida in terms of narrative - can you say more about this?
>
> Thanks, Alan
>
> On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:
>
> Hey Alan, that sounds really interesting:
>
> "Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.)."
>
> How did you parse out the embedded 'or' and its negations? These two choices look identical (which is why you mention the significance of 'always already'.)
>
> Second glance shows a countermotion: one towards grouping ('not both') and the other towards distribution (neither/nor).

...

*I find Derrida's writing to be a rich reserve of information from which a 'routine' has been lately abstracted. For example, essays in Writing and Difference teach us something about Raymond Rousset's 'ultrastructuralist' imagination and how this affected his criticism of Corneille. "Force and Signification" is, on this level, a thematic reading of Rousset's "Form and Signification". "Violence and Metaphysics" is a philosophical biography of Emmanuel Levinas as he grapples with Husserl and Heidegger. We learn something* *about Totality and Infinity. These basic stories get lost in the drift.*

Chris
Chris

Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:

I'm not sure that this will go through.

Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of locating subtexts; it relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it treats the text as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies (in the sense that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great importance - and thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency of the surface). Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on deconstruction (not mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of all the simple logic involved, and second, its actual process of construction, its history, and so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it might be considered - is in using the (logical) formation to consider issues of origination, the 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the standpoint of this 'veering.'

Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a text - not in the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense of implicit within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends elsewhere, that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did a Kristevan analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along these lines.) So that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is open, might seem a barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a relation to Zen I > think).

>
> All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down - since it's neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a discourse which has always already continued and continues to continue, a discourse of humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but which nonetheless carries a very real political component, activist as well.
>
> - Alan
>
> ==========
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc.
> ==========
>
> ==========
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc.
> ==========

↑ Index

136. Barry Schwabsky

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Mon 5 Feb 2007

An excellent way in to a lot of these questions about what deconstruction is, and what it has to do with literature, would be through an essay by Rodolphe Gasche, "Deconstruction as Criticism," published in Glyph 6: Johns Hopkins Textual Studies (1979): 177-215. (Gasche has also written a couple of books about Derrida, but I haven't read them. His more recent book on Kant's aesthetics is really hard going but worth the effort for anyone interested in the topic.)

Thomas savage <[redacted]> wrote: Many years ago I read a book about the subject under discussion in these posts called "Deconstruction." I forget who the author was but it wasn't Derrida. I came away from this book with the feeling that "Deconstruction" (the idea, process, or concept, not the book), was just a fancy way for saying "to take something apart . When I said in a previous post that I'd read a lot of poetry influenced by deconstruction, it was to that aspect of it or to my impression of it that I referred. I also tend to associate it with Language Poetry or poetry influenced by the Language group. Regards, Tom Savage

Don Summerhayes wrote: Is it really possible that a group of intelligent poets can be so dumb about deconstruction when they use its understanding of text every day?

On 4-Feb-07, at 6:56 PM, Jason Quackenbush wrote:

> i disagree with such
> obvious obfuscations
> intended to add mystique
> in place of clarity.
>
> jcu wrote:
> deconstuction is not a method
> or a formula, but just a habit
> of mind, a way of thinking
> that attends to what gets
> left out
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Jason Quackenbush"
> To:
>
> Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 4:23 AM
> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
> i probably should have said methods, but that's splitting hairs.
> too many useless idiots have made careers out of the kind of
> obtuse nonsense you quote from Jacque D below. the method(s) of > deconstruction is/are straightforward and more or less
> uninteresting.
>
> put simply, to deconstruct, one must
>
> 1.) pick a text
> 2.) identify one or more implications of the text
> 3.) generate a number of bad puns using techniques usually drawn
> from etymology, linguistics, and semiotics
> 4.) use those puns as support for a thesis that runs counter to > or in some way subverts the implications you have identified in > the text.

>
> It's really not all that complex, and there's more than one way to flay that particular feline, and as a result I'm often quite surprised that there's so much mystique surrounding the idea. Even if it were a valid way to go about constructing an argument, i don't know that it's actually useful in saying anything about the original text or its author. Moreover, criticism employing such methods is usually so badly written (see, eg, Dissemination, the rhetoric of romanticism, or laugh of the medusa) that it's often impossible to give it the value of simply being fun to read, which, for example, one can find in similarly goofy ideas propagated by other schools of thought like the medieval scholastics, the ancient neo-platonists, or some of derrida's more entertaining, non-deconstructionist peers like Gilles Deleuze or ones who are simply better philosophers like Foucault or Zizek who are good reads for the quality of argument even though they're wrong about almost everything.
>
> Aldon Nielsen wrote:
>
> and just what would the "method" of deconstruction be? and supposing that there were a "deconstructionist," how would such a person go about this representing?
>
> "There is no one, single deconstruction. Were there only one, were it homogeneous, it would not be inherently either conservative or revolutionary, or determinable within the code of such oppositions. That is precisely what gets on everyone's nerves."
>
> "'deconstruction is firstly this destabilization on the move in, if one could speak thus, 'the things themselves'; but it is not negative."
>
> "what it does is less to disturb them than to bring into the open that which is disturbing them and menacing their consistency, their order, their pertinence. "
>
> "I do not know . . . to which 'deconstructionists' you are alluding."
>
> Derrida in conversation -- LIMITED INC
>
> At 10:54 PM 2/1/2007, you wrote:

Sure there's a deconstructionist theory. it's the theory that
the method of deconstruction produces valuable outcomes when
applied to texts.

and i thought he meant "representing" deconstruction in the sense that LL Cool J can be said to be "representing" Queens.

ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:

there isn't really a "deconstructionist" theory --
and it's profoundly odd to think of deconstruction as a theory
that a poet would then "represent."
Still, if you're really interested in deconstruciton and poetry, a good place to look would be in Derrida's essays on Jabes and Ponge --
On Thu, 01 Feb 2007 19:21:16 -0800 UB Poetics discussion group
wrote:

michel deguy comes to mind.
ric carfagna wrote:

Who are the poets who best represent deconstructionist theory?

*<<

> Aldon Lynn Nielsen
> George and Barbara Kelly Professor of American Literature
> Department of English
> The Pennsylvania State University
> 112 Burrowes
> University Park, PA 16802-6200

[redacted] [office]

[redacted] [Fax]

Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

Food fight? Enjoy some healthy debate
in the Yahoo! Answers Food & Drink Q&A.

↑ Index

137. Alan Sondheim
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

I'm not sure about the "if/then" - that implies process; there's also the "if then else" formulation which works here - if A then not A^B else ?? - and process involves temporality; the "if" also seems itself to be on the verge or hinge. It might be the difference between temporality and a state-of-affairs, although both can be considered potentials..

I don't know if you're familiar with Spencer Brown's Laws of Form - he makes a similar jump between states-of-affairs and temporality (involving if I remember imaginary quantities) - which again I'm not sure of. But he starts I think by describing "making a distinction" which is already a process...

- Alan

On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:

> I have to concentrate on Tocqueville but before I do:
>
> when I read your description of what neither A nor B means I think you're on the verge of switching logical categories from those that stem from forms of division into forms of equation - 'either/or' for 'if/then.' The vertical bar you use, "A/A", seems to bespeak a detachment within self-identity that had begun in disjunction.

It's that connection that I find interesting, narcissistically and perhaps narratologically speaking. I'm thinking about how to answer that more fully.

Chris
(Please show me where I've been especially obtuse with your demonstration.)

Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:

I'm not sure this will go through. The two functions are duals of each other and both can be used as the 'basis' of propositional logic; in other words, everything in propositional logic can be derived from either of these. For example if you have | for "neither A nor B" then A|A is simply "not A" and this also holds for "not both A and B."

And yes, grouping and distribution; they're both "kinds" of expulsion - A|B simply implies either the null set or "anywhere but here - elsewhere" - depending on whether A and B are complements, and "not both A and B" implies both possibly elsewhere and that "veering" - one or the other possibly, or neither, anything but the intersection.

I haven't thought of Derrida in terms of narrative - can you say more about this?

Thanks, Alan

On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:

Hey Alan, that sounds really interesting:

"Sheffer stroke (not both A and
B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.)."

How did you parse out the embedded 'or' and its negations? These two choices look identical (which is why you mention the significance of 'always already'.)

Second glance shows a countermotion: one towards grouping ('not both') and the other towards distribution (neither/nor).

...

*I find Derrida's writing to be a rich reserve of information from which a 'routine' has been lately abstracted. For example, essays in Writing and Difference teach us something about Raymond Rousset's 'ultrastructuralist' imagination and how this affected his criticism of Corneille. "Force and Signification" is, on this level, a thematic reading of Rousset's "Form and Signification". "Violence and Metaphysics" is a philosophical biography of Emmanuel Levinas as he grapples with Husserl and Heidegger. We learn something* *about Totality and Infinity. These basic stories get lost in the drift.*

Chris
Chris

Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:

I'm not sure that this will go through.

Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of locating subtexts; it relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it treats the text as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies (in the sense that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great importance - and thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency of the surface). Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on deconstruction (not mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of all the simple logic involved, and second, its actual process of construction, its history, and so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it might be considered - is in using the (logical) formation to consider issues of origination, the 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the standpoint of this 'veering.'

Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a text - not in the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense of implicit within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends elsewhere, that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did a Kristevan analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along these lines.) So that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is open, might seem a > barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a relation to Zen I think).

>
> All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down - since it's neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a discourse which has always already continued and continues to continue, a discourse of humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but which nonetheless carries a very real political component, activist as well.
>
> - Alan
>
> ==========
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc.
> ==========
>
> ==========
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc.
> ==========

========== Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted]. Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted]. http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, performance, dvds, etc. ==========

↑ Index

138. Gabrielle Welford
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

---

i'm so glad someone is recognizing joyce's fundamental irishness. having lived in cork and donegal for years and hung out with musicians and shanakee (sorry, i know that's not the spelling), finnegans wake doesn't make sense any other way to me. and how about emily bronte's poetry? they were irish and cornish brought up in yorkshire! there's a combination for you...! gabrielle

On Fri, 2 Feb 2007, Robin Hamilton wrote:

> has anyone else in List-land tried reading Finnegans Wake with an Irish accent? you pick up on a lot of buried information if you try this -- it dawned on me reading one passage that "damn fairy ann" could be read as "donc fait rien" -- then the whole page morphed into a kind of Joycean French argot, before my eyes... and no, I was perfectly sober at the time.
> ...
> tl
>
> Joyce's words above would seem to play on the British squaddies' surded French developed in WW1 -- "San fairy ann" for "ça ne fait rien".
>
> see: http://www.worldwidewords.org/qa/qa-san1.htm
>
> Robin Hamilton

gabrielle welford
[redacted]

Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com). Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004

wilhelm reich
anarcho-syndicalism
gut/heart/head/earth

↑ Index

139. Vernon Frazer
Re: Audience & publishing
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Hi Ann

I've self-published 7 poetry books, 3 novels and 3 recordings. Print publishers have published 2 books. POD publishers have published 2, with 2 more on the way. I like to think this gives me some knowledge of the subject, though the scenario is probably changing as we speak.

In today's publishing climate, I have no choice but to be the publisher of last resort.

As a self-publisher, my books don't sell very well, but I do have distribution channels for any orders that might come in. Every year I manage to sell a few copies to college libraries.

My print books published by a small press found their way to college libraries regularly, probably because Potes & Poets was an established press and because whoever did the ordering could do a mass order of poetry books through SPD.

MY POD books have appeared without any problems, probably because I do my own typesetting; I don't know anybody else who wants the job or could do it as well, unfortunately, it's probably cost me some publishing opportunities with some presses. The POD books don't make it to the college libraries or receive distribution beyond the site where they're sold, e.g., www.lulu.com or www.cafepress.com.

The biggest problem we face continues to be distribution of our work.

Some POD publishers, such as Geoffrey Gatza of BlazeVox, are finding ways to improve distribution so that people can find the books at Amazon.com, if not on the shelf at the local chain or indie bookstore. More publishers might be doing similar things as I write this.

Whether the works are self-published, print, or POD, the reviews I receive are about the same, although some magazines seem to avoid reviewing self-published books.

If the reviews are accurate, I can't say---in relation to my own work, anyway---that editor and publishers in print or online have more acuity. I think POD publishers might be more open to publishing edgy work because they don't have to endure the costs associated with print publishing. Practical matters involving money might influence or outweigh artistic judgment.

I do think ezines deserve parity with print zines because they're creating a literary culture online that is more adventurous than what I read in many print zines.

I receive the most satisfaction when somebody else publishes me because it makes me feel that somebody other than me thinks my work is worth publishing. Although I feel great when a writer sends me a complimentary book because he considers me "one of the real ones," I don't feel too satisfied when his publisher returns a manuscript I've submitted on the hope that the editors will feel the same way about my work as the author does.

Given the nature of the publishing business in a time when corporations rule, I think the notion that a self-published or POD-published small press differs in any significant way from the more established small presses should be discarded. Most of us are really on our own as writers, regardless of publisher, and have to work every possible angle to get our work out.

Nobody has a monopoly on editorial acuity.

The less work I have to do in relation to publishing and promoting my books, the more satisfaction I receive. But I'm not holding my breath while waiting for a publisher to tell me, "You're great, baby, Now, just sit back and we'll do it all for you., and give you royalties on top of it"

It makes for nice day dreams, but that's about it.

I don't have time to read many blogs, but I wouldn't sell women writers short. Through her blog, Eileen Tabios has been a great supporter of my work, almost reviving a book of mine that I'd pretty much considered dead. She has an excellent site. I think other are better qualified to address the subject of blogs.

There's my two cents (adjusted for inflation.

Vernon
http://vernonfrazer.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ann Bogle
Sent: Monday, February 05, 2007 11:35 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Audience & publishing

Last year, there was a good thread among poets about the difference for them in publishing in online v. print publications. Mostly, the biggest difference was that in print publication, more attention was paid to precision in line breaks, layout, and font -- that was their overall experience. Now I want to ask how writers and poets feel about self-publishing when they encounter

it and at their own websites v. publishing in online publications. It seems sometimes such a small psychological difference in transitting between the wr iter's own website v. an official publication. What is the bias that suggests that people who edit other writers' work are somehow stoic for doing so but that writers (most editors are both) are somehow vainglorious for going into print? Sometimes I would like to know if it is true -- sometimes it IS true -- that the editors of online publications have more editorial acuity than the writers do themselves, or if it's a "hands" argument -- having someone select you and do it for you by definition carries more weight and prestige. It is the same argument, in smaller and subtler form, inherent in the favoritism shown for large houses. In general, it is taking time (as should be expected) for online publications to gain the acclaim of print publications -- even though smaller print publications are invariably hard to find and therefore are restricted to small library audiences of 2,000 or fewer readers. Weblogs are usually female (like the Buckthorn in botany), and so therefore are deemed "low" as art goes. I find certain conversational weblogs to be pure and engrossing. I think they may be higher art than some people tend to realize, depending on their creator. It is an exciting way to cut out middle men and bullshit. It is a species of self-publishing. Topics weblogs are arguably valuable to more people. Other thoughts? Should it be harder to access online publications to increase the sensation that they are not self-published, that they have prestige? Should they be umbrella-listed at sites such as webdelsol?

AMB

↑ Index

140. Dan Waber
ars poetica update
Mon 5 Feb 2007

The ars poetica project rolls on at:

http://www.logolalia.com/arspoetica/

Poems appeared last week by: Michael Rothenberg and Riccardo Duranti.

Poems will appear this week by: Riccardo Duranti, Alan Halsey, and Gary Barwin.

A new poem about poetry every day.

Enjoy,
Dan

↑ Index

141. Max Middle
2007 Puddle leaflet subscription available
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Dear Poetics List,

Many of the excellent submissions I received last year for the Puddle leaflet series were in response to a call posted to this list in August. I was delighted by the excellent submissions received after that call - thanks everyone. I'm currently welcoming submission to the series on an ongoing basis. Questions about the series &/or submission welcome at < [redacted] >.

The following is a note about the 2007 subscription with mention of an ongoing call for submission to the series.

Cheers, Max

**

2007 Puddle leaflet subscription available

In May 2006, the Puddle leaflet series was initiated under the new imprint, Griddle Grin. To date, eight Puddle leaflets have been published. It's been a stirring adventure so far! Puddle leaflets published in 2006 are on letter sized paper and oriented aesthetically around visual poetry. This year, I'll be employing a range of printing formats. I'm currently inviting submission in any poetic genre/discipline; submission will be enthusiastically welcomed whether sent by email or by post.

I was overwhelmed by the excellent response to my request for submission in August 2006: my appreciation and gratitude to the contributors. I also wish to thank Grant Wilkins for his expert guidance during the production process.

Subscription to the Puddle leaflet series for 2007 is $15 (outside Canada, $15 in US funds). This year, I'll publish one leaflet per month, or more, and mailings will take place at quarterly intervals. For a complete set of 2006 Puddle leaflets, please send $10 (outside Canada, $10 in US funds). Forthcoming publications by, amongst others, Donna Kuhn, Caterina Davinio, Gary Barwin, Gregory Betts and Nico Vassilakis.

To order a subscription, post your coordinates and cheque payable to Max Middle to the following address:

Max Middle
c/o Piperhill,
#377 - 532 Montreal Rd,
Ottawa, ON Canada
K1K 4R4

2006 PUDDLE LEAFLETS

#8 'Practicing my Signature' and 'Storm' by Jonathan Ball (Calgary)

#7 'Poem with Vowel Music (Strung Too Tight) Sprung' (source text Lord Alfred Tennyson, 'To a Lady Sleeping') and 'Poem with Eroded Edges' (source text Sir Walter Raleigh, 'Epitaph') by Irving Weiss (Dix Hills, NY)

#6 'Neee' by John M. Bennett (Columbus, OH)

#5 'Continua 12-12' by Chris Turnbull (Kemptville, ON)

#4 'practice preach' by Sheila Murphy (Phoenix)

#3 'flatland #21' by derek beaulieu (Calgary)

#2 'Moon Potatoes' by Max Middle (Ottawa)

#1 'Two One Line Poems' by Max Middle (Ottawa)

Best wishes,
Max Middle

c/o Piperhill,
#377 - 532 Montreal Rd,
Ottawa, ON Canada
K1K 4R4

[redacted]

Puddle leaflet blog entry:
http://maxmiddle.blogspot.com/2007_01_01_archive.html#8673896800423059314

--
http://www.maxmiddle.com

↑ Index

142. George Bowering
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

> having > lived in cork and donegal for years and hung out with musicians and > shanakee (sorry, i know that's not the spelling), finnegans wake doesn't > make sense any other way to me.

Finnegan's Wake hung out in Cork?

↑ Index

143. George Bowering
Re: Audience & publishing
Mon 5 Feb 2007

> As a self-publisher, my books don't sell very well,

Your books publish themself?

↑ Index

144. Vernon Frazer
Re: phobia...
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Hi Ann

I didn't realize 20% of the population had disabilities. That's an eye-opener, especially given the corresponding amount of misunderstanding and mistreatment that accompany many of the conditions.

True, too many people focus only on the disability. I was fortunate to learn before my formal diagnosis that Tourette syndrome had some positive aspects. It explained my ability to multi-task and do certain processing functions exponentially faster than my co-workers and probably accounts for a few of the poetics techniques I use in my work.

While I pay a heavy price socially for it, and the tics and depression are less than fun, I don't consider myself disabled. "Society" does. If they want to send me a disability check for having a "disorder" that I call a "condition," I'll take the money and mutter under my breath about "reparations." I didn't write the definition, and all of us share its consequences.

Other people with other conditions considered disabilities have told me they have special abilities that people without their conditions don't have.

In many cases, I think we could dump the "disability" paradigm and assess people according to the "spectrum" of their abilities.

Vernon
http://vernonfrazer.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ann Bogle
Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 8:00 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: phobia...

In a message dated 1/31/2007 1:18:12 P.M. Central Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

My symptoms aren't things I can hide. I can't "pass" for non-Tourettic.

This is the post I wanted to reply to and waited. Now Poetics emails seem to have dried up and are bypassing me: This happened in Sept., too, but then I let it go. Somehow I started receiving Poetics mail again in January. Last summer I wrote an email every 3 weeks or so that must have had too little to do with Poetics, which I take to mean international politics via poetry, or poetry via int'l politics, and had to do with North American non-poets who were in a chronic state of treating disabling conditions or in a disabling state of treating chronic conditions ... of how internalized stigma caused them to react against one another and to become harmful to their fellow human beings; -- it was worse than thoughts about our situation that led to the harm: There were housing loss and other alarming hazards. It was watching people become homeless before our eyes. It was these people's own hardball antagonism toward not being normal. Phobia, if you can get people to go in for it, is treated as a psychological condition for which there is therapy. Education serves that purpose as well.

Disabled people comprise 20% of the U.S. population and would represent the largest minority in the U.S. if they chose to associate, to be inclusive along the lines of type of disability. Mainly, I think the word disability is misleading because it says nothing for ability, and most of the disabled people I have met are more able than not.

Depressives are not viewed as in the innocent group, but are more likely in the bad guys group. 20% of depressives are suicidal; the rest are not.

I did not have illnesses as a child and had a strong constitution. I grew up feminist, more than my mother, and at an early age, earlier than the norm: at 12, I read Ms. Magazine. So I have those memories to draw on and try to recapture. For years, I was adequately private and stable following dx.

The passing of time, not living as if I were in a race, and my enthusiasm for holistic treatment for bipolar -- as if that were my job -- caused a loss

in academic peer structure and the chance for employment.

AMB

↑ Index

145. Gabrielle Welford
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

:-) joyce's father was from cork. bronte father was from the valley of the boyne.

On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, George Bowering wrote:

> having
> lived in cork and donegal for years and hung out with musicians and > shanakee (sorry, i know that's not the spelling), finnegans wake
> doesn't
> make sense any other way to me.
>
> Finnegan's Wake hung out in Cork?

gabrielle welford
[redacted]

Checked by AVG anti-virus system (http://www.grisoft.com). Version: 6.0.595 / Virus Database: 378 - Release Date: 2/25/2004

wilhelm reich
anarcho-syndicalism
gut/heart/head/earth

↑ Index

146. Anny Ballardini
Re: Audience & publishing
Mon 5 Feb 2007

+ sell themself
better, don't very well

On 2/5/07, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > As a self-publisher, my books don't sell very well,
>
> Your books publish themself?
>

↑ Index

147. Ruth Lepson
Re: rousseau and de man
Mon 5 Feb 2007

That is surprising bec if you read Emile on the surface Rousseau is a revolutionary. If you think abt its implications, Rousseau seems to be a controlling fascist, no? Ruth L.

On 2/4/07 11:15 AM, "Charles Baldwin" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I think the statement in question is from the interview with Rosso at the end of _The Resistance to Theory_, where de Man states:
>
> *"...I have a tendency to put upon texts an inherent authority, which is stronger, I think, than Derrida is willing to put on them. I assume, as a working hypothesis (as a working hypothesis, because I know batter than that), that the texts knows in an absolute way what it's doing. I knowthis is not the case, but it is a necesary working hypothesis that Rousseau knows any time what he is doing and as such there is no need to deconstruct Rousseau. In a complicated way, I would hold to the statement that 'the text deconstructs itself, is self-deconstructive' rather than being deconstructed by a philosophical intervention from outside the text."*
>
> This is a crucial point and underlies the difference between Derrida on Rousseau in _Of Grammatology_ and de Man on Derrida on Rousseau in "The Rhetoric of Blindness." Barry and Alex are differing over whether the text can be deconstructed by the critic vs. whether the text is "in deconstruction." De Man seems to suggest the latter, shifting emphasis away from the work done by the critic to the work already at work in the work. ("I never had an idea of my own," says de Man.) It is interesting to note that de Man then adds that the difference is that he is a philologist and not a philosopher (as Derrida is).
>
> Sandy
>
> Alexander Dickow <[redacted]> 02/03/07 8:24 AM >>>
> Barry wrote:
> "I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one writer who could > not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way out in front of > the reader/critic."
>
> Where does de Man say this? I admit I'm surprised, since he "deconstructs" the Profession de foi du vicaire savoyard (Emile) in a very smart paper (one of > the best on the Profession de foi). Rousseau -- see

> the Grammatologie -- was a cornerstone of
> "deconstructionist" reading practices from the > beginnings of poststructuralism. Far from being
> "impossible to deconstruct", if you ask me!
> Not to mention: anyone who has read Rousseau carefully
> knows that his texts are veritable conundrums,
> vertiginous, infinitely tricky and unstable.
> "Impossible to deconstruct"? Rousseau's a master of > slippery vocabulary (related terms with unstable > boundaries, reinvented familiar words or notions...),
> and he can get you to call black orange in under five
> minutes.
> So, I'd love to know where (and how, why, etc) de Man
> makes this claim.
> Amicalement,
> Alex
>
> www.alexdickow.net/blog/
>
> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

148. Mark Weiss

Re: rousseau and de man

Mon 5 Feb 2007

Is this necessarily a contradiction?

At 04:19 PM 2/5/2007, you wrote:
>That is surprising bec if you read Emile on the surface Rousseau is a >revolutionary. If you think abt its implications, Rousseau seems to be a >controlling fascist, no?
>Ruth L.
>
>
>On 2/4/07 11:15 AM, "Charles Baldwin" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > I think the statement in question is from the > interview with Rosso at the end > > of _The Resistance to Theory_, where de Man states:
> >
> > "...I have a tendency to put upon texts an inherent authority, which is > > stronger, I think, than Derrida is willing to put on them. I assume, as a > > working hypothesis (as a working hypothesis, > because I know batter than that),

> > that the texts knows in an absolute way
> what it's doing. I knowthis is not > > the case, but it is a necesary working > hypothesis that Rousseau knows any time > > what he is doing and as such there is no need to deconstruct Rousseau. In
a > > complicated way, I would hold to the statement that 'the text deconstructs > > itself, is self-deconstructive' rather than being deconstructed by a > > philosophical intervention from outside the text."
> >
> > This is a crucial point and underlies the difference between Derrida on > > Rousseau in _Of Grammatology_ and de Man on Derrida on Rousseau in
"The > > Rhetoric of Blindness." Barry and Alex are > differing over whether the text can > > be deconstructed by the critic vs. whether > the text is "in deconstruction." De > > Man seems to suggest the latter, shifting > emphasis away from the work done by > > the critic to the work already at work in the > work. ("I never had an idea of > > my own," says de Man.) It is interesting to note that de Man then adds that > > the difference is that he is a philologist > and not a philosopher (as Derrida
> > is).
> >
> > Sandy
> >
> >>>> Alexander Dickow <[redacted]> 02/03/07 8:24 AM >>>
> > Barry wrote:
> > "I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one
> > writer who could > > not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way
> > out in front of > > the reader/critic."
> >
> > Where does de Man say this? I admit I'm surprised,
> > since he "deconstructs" the Profession de foi du
> > vicaire savoyard (Emile) in a very smart paper (one of > > the best on the Profession de foi). Rousseau -- see > > the Grammatologie -- was a cornerstone of

> > "deconstructionist" reading practices from the > > beginnings of poststructuralism. Far from being
> > "impossible to deconstruct", if you ask me!
> > Not to mention: anyone who has read Rousseau carefully
> > knows that his texts are veritable conundrums,
> > vertiginous, infinitely tricky and unstable.
> > "Impossible to deconstruct"? Rousseau's a master of > > slippery vocabulary (related terms with unstable > > boundaries, reinvented familiar words or notions...),
> > and he can get you to call black orange in under five > > minutes.
> > So, I'd love to know where (and how, why, etc) de Man
> > makes this claim.
> > Amicalement,
> > Alex
> >
> >
> >
> > www.alexdickow.net/blog/
> >
> > les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> > merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

149. Ruth Lepson

Re: rousseau and de man

Mon 5 Feb 2007

---

you mean one that R was aware of? no. the naive reader can think his plan for emile is liberating but then you realize that he controls everything that emile does, takes him away from society like a cult leader.

On 2/5/07 4:30 PM, "Mark Weiss" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Is this necessarily a contradiction?
>
> At 04:19 PM 2/5/2007, you wrote:
> That is surprising bec if you read Emile on the surface Rousseau is a revolutionary. If you think abt its implications, Rousseau seems to be a controlling fascist, no?
> Ruth L.

On 2/4/07 11:15 AM, "Charles Baldwin" <[redacted]> wrote:

I think the statement in question is from the interview with Rosso at the end of _The Resistance to Theory_, where de Man states:

*"...I have a tendency to put upon texts an inherent authority, which is stronger, I think, than Derrida is willing to put on them. I assume, as a working hypothesis (as a working hypothesis,
because I know batter than that),
that the texts knows in an absolute way
what it's doing. I knowthis is not the case, but it is a necesary working hypothesis that Rousseau knows any time
what he is doing and as such there is no need to deconstruct Rousseau. In a complicated way, I would hold to the statement that 'the text deconstructs itself, is self-deconstructive' rather than being deconstructed by a philosophical intervention from outside the text."*

*This is a crucial point and underlies the difference between Derrida on Rousseau in _Of Grammatology_ and de Man on Derrida on Rousseau in "The Rhetoric of Blindness." Barry and Alex are differing over whether the text can
be deconstructed by the critic vs. whether
the text is "in deconstruction." De
Man seems to suggest the latter, shifting emphasis away from the work done by the critic to the work already at work in the work. ("I never had an idea of my own," says de Man.) It is interesting to note that de Man then adds that the difference is that he is a philologist
and not a philosopher (as Derrida
is).*

Sandy

*Alexander Dickow <[redacted]> 02/03/07 8:24 AM >>>
Barry wrote:
"I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one
writer who could not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way
out in front of
the reader/critic."*

*Where does de Man say this? I admit I'm surprised,
since he "deconstructs" the Profession de foi du*

> vicaire savoyard (Emile) in a very smart paper (one of the best on the Profession de foi). Rousseau -- see the Grammatologie -- was a cornerstone of "deconstructionist" reading practices from the beginnings of poststructuralism. Far from being "impossible to deconstruct", if you ask me!
> Not to mention: anyone who has read Rousseau carefully knows that his texts are veritable conundrums, vertiginous, infinitely tricky and unstable.
> "Impossible to deconstruct"? Rousseau's a master of slippery vocabulary (related terms with unstable boundaries, reinvented familiar words or notions...), and he can get you to call black orange in under five minutes.
> So, I'd love to know where (and how, why, etc) de Man makes this claim.
> Amicalement,
> Alex
>
> www.alexdickow.net/blog/
>
> > les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> > merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

150. Stephen Vincent
Re: Audience & publishing
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Thanks, Vernon, for the informed sincerity of your response here. As both a poet and sometimes publisher over a big chunk of time, I think the still relatively new electronic publishing modes are still much in transition - at least I like to think so. From the advantage point of view, there is: 1. the global (geographic) spread of the makers, the poets as well as the audience . The disadvantage there is that the network is bloated and too fast - which, ironically, can create a disaffection, or disinterest - as what happens to me often now. I remember the days of very slow overseas mail - say, two months to get a copy of Work magazine from Detroit, or a new Jack Spicer book, to the outback of Nigeria. But boy did I read every page with an almost ferocious attention. Now I am frequently numbed by getting too much from everywhere. (But then there is Ron Silliman turning on his engines every day, enlivened rather than numbed or complaining about the seeming siege, it seems, and I suspect many are grateful for the attentions and sales benefits he is able to spread).

2. In the tangible world of trade books, publishing is ideally a dance - with probably equally share pain and pleasure - between writer-editor/publisher-
Design/ production
promotion- media reviewers
Book fairs, sales reps and store outlets.

Much of that interplay is now historically dead. The role of the editor is decidedly absent from most publishing houses which is a sadness. The loss of this dynamic creates bloated, flat books, or dull books. A good editor is like a good conductor - insuring a book's rhythm and pace, etc. (A poet who acts as his/her own editor is like the old saw about the doctor who treats himself). As much as I like publishing online, only rarely do I get a good editor who has a sense of shape, most recently, Tim Atkins at Onedit. The digital medium invites obesity, a limitlessness.

Design/ Production. Yes, I think a lot of the online mags and ebooks are beginning to look great (Bridge, Fascicles, Masthead, etc.) The much easier implementation of images gives new breathing room to old fashioned "book illustration." Again I think online design is an emerging medium of its own and will only get better.

Promotion/ Reviews Poetry - at least stuff on the edge -has been so ill served by traditional print media. However, at its best, the online has not replaced the now practically dead world of large circulation newspaper reviews. To my knowledge, we do not have either poet critic of a large stature matched with a review organ of large mainstream stature to which the combination of readers/reviewers and review can go to. The sad irony is that we have a large number of significant (great, whatever) poets and no great review media to correspond to their accomplishments. (NYR, NYT, Nation, etc. will not do the job. Witness whoever he was (David somebody) reviewing Frost and trying to toss a blink to M Perloff, and experimental poets - that was kind of off.putting

> Hi Ann
>
> I've self-published 7 poetry books, 3 novels and 3 recordings. Print publishers have published 2 books. POD publishers have published 2, with 2 more on the way. I like to think this gives me some knowledge of the subject, though the scenario is probably changing as we speak.
>
> In today's publishing climate, I have no choice but to be the publisher of last resort.

As a self-publisher, my books don't sell very well, but I do have distribution channels for any orders that might come in. Every year I manage to sell a few copies to college libraries.

My print books published by a small press found their way to college libraries regularly, probably because Potes & Poets was an established press and because whoever did the ordering could do a mass order of poetry books through SPD.

MY POD books have appeared without any problems, probably because I do my own typesetting; I don't know anybody else who wants the job or could do it as well, unfortunately, it's probably cost me some publishing opportunities with some presses. The POD books don't make it to the college libraries or receive distribution beyond the site where they're sold, e.g., www.lulu.com or www.cafepress.com.

The biggest problem we face continues to be distribution of our work.

Some POD publishers, such as Geoffrey Gatza of BlazeVox, are finding ways to improve distribution so that people can find the books at Amazon.com, if not on the shelf at the local chain or indie bookstore. More publishers might be doing similar things as I write this.

Whether the works are self-published, print, or POD, the reviews I receive are about the same, although some magazines seem to avoid reviewing self-published books.

If the reviews are accurate, I can't say---in relation to my own work, anyway---that editor and publishers in print or online have more acuity. I think POD publishers might be more open to publishing edgy work because they don't have to endure the costs associated with print publishing. Practical matters involving money might influence or outweigh artistic judgment.

I do think ezines deserve parity with print zines because they're creating a literary culture online that is more adventurous than what I read in many print zines.

I receive the most satisfaction when somebody else publishes me because it makes me feel that somebody other than me thinks my work is worth publishing. Although I feel great when a writer sends me a complimentary book because he considers me "one of the real ones," I don't feel too satisfied when his publisher returns a manuscript I've submitted on the hope that the editors will feel the same way about my work as the author does.

Given the nature of the publishing business in a time when corporations rule, I think the notion that a self-published or POD-published small press differs in any significant way from the more established small presses should be discarded. Most of us are really on our own as writers, regardless of publisher, and have to work every possible angle to get our work out.

Nobody has a monopoly on editorial acuity.

The less work I have to do in relation to publishing and promoting my books, the more satisfaction I receive. But I'm not holding my breath while waiting for a publisher to tell me, "You're great, baby, Now, just sit back and we'll do it all for you., and give you royalties on top of it"

It makes for nice day dreams, but that's about it.

I don't have time to read many blogs, but I wouldn't sell women writers short. Through her blog, Eileen Tabios has been a great supporter of my work, almost reviving a book of mine that I'd pretty much considered dead. She has an excellent site. I think other are better qualified to address the subject of blogs.

There's my two cents (adjusted for inflation.

Vernon
http://vernonfrazer.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ann Bogle
Sent: Monday, February 05, 2007 11:35 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Audience & publishing

Last year, there was a good thread among poets about the difference for them in publishing in online v. print publications. Mostly, the biggest difference was that in print publication, more attention was paid to precision in line breaks, layout, and font -- that was their overall experience. Now I want to ask how writers and poets feel about self-publishing when they encounter

it and at their own websites v. publishing in online publications. It seems sometimes such a small psychological difference in transitting between the wr iter's own website v. an official publication. What is the bias that suggests that people who edit other writers' work are somehow stoic for doing so but that writers (most editors are both) are somehow vainglorious for going into print? Sometimes I would like to know if it is true -- sometimes it IS true -- that the editors of online publications have more editorial acuity than the writers do themselves, or if it's a "hands" argument -- having someone select you and do it for you by definition carries more weight and prestige. It is the same argument, in smaller and subtler form, inherent in the favoritism shown for large houses. In general, it is taking time (as should be expected) for online publications to gain the acclaim of print publications -- even though smaller print publications are invariably hard to find and therefore are restricted to small library audiences of 2,000 or fewer readers. Weblogs are usually female (like the Buckthorn in botany), and so therefore are deemed "low" as art goes. I find certain conversational weblogs to be pure and engrossing. I think they may be higher art than some people tend to realize, depending on their creator. It is an exciting way to cut out middle men and bullshit. It is a species of self-publishing. Topics weblogs are arguably valuable to more people. Other thoughts? Should it be harder to access online publications to increase the sensation that they are not self-published, that they have prestige? Should they be umbrella-listed at sites such as webdelsol?

AMB

↑ Index

151. Stephen Vincent
OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
Mon 5 Feb 2007

I put the previous email on some kind of 'draft' hold, and it hatched early. If still interested, jump to the middle (RESTART) if you already read the first part!

--- Thanks, Vernon, for the informed sincerity of your response here. As both a poet and sometimes publisher over a big chunk of time, I think the still relatively new electronic publishing modes are still much in transition - at least I like to think so. From the advantage point of view, there is: 1. the global (geographic) spread of the makers, the poets as well as the audience . The disadvantage there is that the network is bloated and too fast - which, ironically, can create a disaffection, or disinterest - as what happens to me often now. I remember the days of very slow overseas mail - say, two months to get a copy of Work magazine from Detroit, or a new Jack Spicer book, to the outback of Nigeria. But boy did I read every page with an almost ferocious attention. Now I am frequently numbed by getting too much from everywhere. (But then there is Ron Silliman turning on his engines every day, enlivened rather than numbed or complaining about the seeming siege, it seems, and I suspect many are grateful for the attentions and sales benefits he is able to spread).

2. In the tangible world of trade books, publishing is ideally a dance - with probably equally share pain and pleasure - between writer-editor/publisher-
Design/ production
promotion- media reviewers
Distriubtion - Book fairs, sales reps and store outlets.

Much of that interplay is now historically dead. The role of the editor is decidedly absent from most publishing houses which is a sadness. The loss of this dynamic creates bloated, flat books, or dull books. A good editor is like a good conductor - insuring a book's rhythm and pace, etc. (A poet who acts as his/her own editor is like the old saw about the doctor who treats himself). As much as I like publishing online, only rarely do I get a good editor who has a sense of shape, most recently, Tim Atkins at Onedit. The digital medium invites obesity, a limitlessness. But, I suspect, the confusion of "the value of information" has been confused with the poem and the book as an object(s) within themselves - objects with a history and tradition of book making which the hype around "information" and volume have replaced in an aesthetically unrewarding way.

Design/ Production. Yes, I think a lot of the online mags and ebooks are beginning to look great (Bridge, Fascicles, Masthead, etc.) The much easier implementation of images gives new breathing room to old fashioned "book illustration." Again I think online design is an emerging medium of its own and will only get better. (RESTART!! - IF YOU READ THE FIRST PART) Promotion/ Reviews Poetry - at least stuff on the edge -has been so ill served by traditional print media. However, at its best, the online has not replaced the now practically dead world of large circulation newspaper reviews. To my knowledge, we do not have either poet critic of a large stature matched with a review organ of large mainstream stature to which the combination of readers/reviewers and review can go to. The sad irony is that we have a large number of significant (great, whatever) poets and no great review media to correspond to their accomplishments. (NYR, NYT, Nation, etc. will not do the job. Witness whoever he was (David somebody) reviewing Frost and trying to toss a blink to M Perloff, and experimental poets - that was kind of off putting, awkward, etc., to say the least. On the other hand, Ron Silliman, Rain Taxi, blog commentators, etc. have done much to bring attention to good books that would never have hit the 'hierarchical' radar of NYT, etc.

Distribution through traditional bookstore media is practically dead. Amazon is devouring bookstore after bookstore. The aesthetic etc pleasures of looking at poetry books, and all the various associations that can come from the arrangements of books on a shelf is more than not, a history. (Even in libraries, as libraries begin to go to ebooks for their collections, and small presses no doubt will go to ebook and ebook modes of distribution and sale and the emergence of comfortable ebook readers (through ebrary, google, etc.) How any poetry book will emerge thru these new networks is no doubt a developing challenge. There are lots of attractions for academia (professor made anthology/readers will be much more convenient), cross referencing a poets entire works will be convenient, too, and access to a range of review and critical responses to a poet's work will be easier.

This is all fated, it appears definite.

However, the principles of the good printed book (well edited, designed, promoted, distributed and intelligently reviewed) are not going to disappear. In this new democratic technology - which everyone can appear as a poet with a digital ebook - it's going to be an interesting adventure to see the ways in which a book can emerge from the pack with some of the traditional values still in tact.

These are my views. In terms of the poetry world, it would be of value, I suspect to hear from Brent Cunningham or Laura Moriarty to see how they envision the future among the new givens.

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Hi Ann

I've self-published 7 poetry books, 3 novels and 3 recordings. Print publishers have published 2 books. POD publishers have published 2, with 2 more on the way. I like to think this gives me some knowledge of the subject, though the scenario is probably changing as we speak.

In today's publishing climate, I have no choice but to be the publisher of last resort.

As a self-publisher, my books don't sell very well, but I do have distribution channels for any orders that might come in. Every year I manage to sell a few copies to college libraries.

My print books published by a small press found their way to college libraries regularly, probably because Potes & Poets was an established press and because whoever did the ordering could do a mass order of poetry books through SPD.

MY POD books have appeared without any problems, probably because I do my own typesetting; I don't know anybody else who wants the job or could do it as well, unfortunately, it's probably cost me some publishing opportunities with some presses. The POD books don't make it to the college libraries or receive distribution beyond the site where they're sold, e.g., www.lulu.com or www.cafepress.com.

The biggest problem we face continues to be distribution of our work.

Some POD publishers, such as Geoffrey Gatza of BlazeVox, are finding ways to improve distribution so that people can find the books at Amazon.com, if not on the shelf at the local chain or indie bookstore. More publishers might be doing similar things as I write this.

Whether the works are self-published, print, or POD, the reviews I receive are about the same, although some magazines seem to avoid reviewing self-published books.

If the reviews are accurate, I can't say---in relation to my own work, anyway---that editor and publishers in print or online have more acuity. I think POD publishers might be more open to publishing edgy work because they don't have to endure the costs associated with print publishing. Practical matters involving money might influence or outweigh artistic judgment.

I do think ezines deserve parity with print zines because they're creating a literary culture online that is more adventurous than what I read in many print zines.

I receive the most satisfaction when somebody else publishes me because it makes me feel that somebody other than me thinks my work is worth publishing. Although I feel great when a writer sends me a complimentary book because he considers me "one of the real ones," I don't feel too satisfied when his publisher returns a manuscript I've submitted on the hope that the editors will feel the same way about my work as the author does.

Given the nature of the publishing business in a time when corporations rule, I think the notion that a self-published or POD-published small press differs in any significant way from the more established small presses should be discarded. Most of us are really on our own as writers, regardless of publisher, and have to work every possible angle to get our work out.

Nobody has a monopoly on editorial acuity.

The less work I have to do in relation to publishing and promoting my books, the more satisfaction I receive. But I'm not holding my breath while waiting for a publisher to tell me, "You're great, baby, Now, just sit back and we'll do it all for you., and give you royalties on top of it"

It makes for nice day dreams, but that's about it.

I don't have time to read many blogs, but I wouldn't sell women writers short. Through her blog, Eileen Tabios has been a great supporter of my work, almost reviving a book of mine that I'd pretty much considered dead. She has an excellent site. I think other are better qualified to address the subject of blogs.

There's my two cents (adjusted for inflation.

Vernon
http://vernonfrazer.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ann Bogle
Sent: Monday, February 05, 2007 11:35 AM
To: [redacted]

Subject: Audience & publishing

Last year, there was a good thread among poets about the difference for them in publishing in online v. print publications. Mostly, the biggest difference was that in print publication, more attention was paid to precision in line breaks, layout, and font -- that was their overall experience. Now I want to ask how writers and poets feel about self-publishing when they encounter

it and at their own websites v. publishing in online publications. It seems sometimes such a small psychological difference in transitting between the wr iter's own website v. an official publication. What is the bias that suggests that people who edit other writers' work are somehow stoic for doing so but that writers (most editors are both) are somehow vainglorious for going into print? Sometimes I would like to know if it is true -- sometimes it IS true -- that the editors of online publications have more editorial acuity than the writers do themselves, or if it's a "hands" argument -- having someone select you and do it for you by definition carries more weight and prestige. It is the same argument, in smaller and subtler form, inherent in the favoritism shown for large houses. In general, it is taking time (as should be expected) for online publications to gain the acclaim of print publications -- even though smaller print publications are invariably hard to find and therefore are restricted to small library audiences of 2,000 or fewer readers. Weblogs are usually female (like the Buckthorn in botany), and so therefore are deemed "low" as art goes. I find certain conversational weblogs to be pure and engrossing. I think they may be higher art than some people tend to realize, depending on their creator. It is an exciting way to cut out middle men and bullshit. It is a species of self-publishing. Topics weblogs are arguably valuable to more people. Other thoughts? Should it be harder to access online publications to increase the sensation that they are not self-published, > that they have prestige? Should they be umbrella-listed at sites such as webdelsol?

>
> AMB

↑ Index

152. Jason Quackenbush
Re: rousseau and de man
Mon 5 Feb 2007

---

i don't think so. i think there's a little bit of the fascist in all idealism.

On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Mark Weiss wrote:

> Is this necessarily a contradiction?
>
> At 04:19 PM 2/5/2007, you wrote:
> That is surprising bec if you read Emile on the surface Rousseau is a revolutionary. If you think abt its implications, Rousseau seems to be a controlling fascist, no?
> Ruth L.
>
> On 2/4/07 11:15 AM, "Charles Baldwin" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I think the statement in question is from the interview with Rosso at the end > of _The Resistance to Theory_, where de Man states:
>
> "...I have a tendency to put upon texts an inherent authority, which is stronger, I think, than Derrida is willing to put on them. I assume, as a working hypothesis (as a working hypothesis, because I know batter than that),
> *that the texts knows in an absolute way what it's doing. I knowthis is not* > the case, but it is a necesary working hypothesis that Rousseau knows any time
> what he is doing and as such there is no need to deconstruct Rousseau. In a > complicated way, I would hold to the statement that 'the text deconstructs itself, is self-deconstructive' rather than being deconstructed by a philosophical intervention from outside the text."
>
> This is a crucial point and underlies the difference between Derrida on Rousseau in _Of Grammatology_ and de Man on Derrida on Rousseau in "The Rhetoric of Blindness." Barry and Alex are differing over whether the text can be deconstructed by the critic vs. whether the text is "in deconstruction." De Man seems to suggest the latter, shifting emphasis away from the work done by the critic to the work already at work in the work. ("I never had an idea of my own," says de Man.) It is interesting to note that de Man then adds that the difference is that he is a philologist and not a philosopher (as Derrida is).

Sandy

Alexander Dickow <[redacted]> 02/03/07 8:24 AM >>>
Barry wrote:
"I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one writer who could not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way out in front of the reader/critic."

Where does de Man say this? I admit I'm surprised, since he "deconstructs" the Profession de foi du vicaire savoyard (Emile) in a very smart paper (one of the best on the Profession de foi). Rousseau -- see the Grammatologie -- was a cornerstone of "deconstructionist" reading practices from the beginnings of poststructuralism. Far from being "impossible to deconstruct", if you ask me!
Not to mention: anyone who has read Rousseau carefully knows that his texts are veritable conundrums, vertiginous, infinitely tricky and unstable.
"Impossible to deconstruct"? Rousseau's a master of slippery vocabulary (related terms with unstable boundaries, reinvented familiar words or notions...), and he can get you to call black orange in under five minutes.
So, I'd love to know where (and how, why, etc) de Man makes this claim.
Amicalement,
Alex

www.alexdickow.net/blog/

les mots! ah quel désert à la fin

> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

153. Ruth Lepson
Re: rousseau and de man
Mon 5 Feb 2007

I remember my philosophy teacher at Stony Brook explaining why he was a fascist--wish I had those notes...

On 2/5/07 7:23 PM, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:

> i don't think so. i think there's a little bit of the fascist in all idealism.
>
> On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Mark Weiss wrote:
>
> Is this necessarily a contradiction?
>
> At 04:19 PM 2/5/2007, you wrote:
> That is surprising bec if you read Emile on the surface Rousseau is a revolutionary. If you think abt its implications, Rousseau seems to be a controlling fascist, no?
> Ruth L.
>
> On 2/4/07 11:15 AM, "Charles Baldwin" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I think the statement in question is from the interview with Rosso at the end > of _The Resistance to Theory_, where de Man states:
>
> "...I have a tendency to put upon texts an inherent authority, which is stronger, I think, than Derrida is willing to put on them. I assume, as a working hypothesis (as a working hypothesis, because I know batter than that),
> *that the texts knows in an absolute way what it's doing. I knowthis is not* > the case, but it is a necesary working hypothesis that Rousseau knows any time
> what he is doing and as such there is no need to deconstruct Rousseau. In a > complicated way, I would hold to the statement that 'the text deconstructs itself, is self-deconstructive' rather than being deconstructed by a philosophical intervention from outside the text."
>
> This is a crucial point and underlies the difference between Derrida on

Rousseau in _Of Grammatology_ and de Man on Derrida on Rousseau in "The Rhetoric of Blindness." Barry and Alex are differing over whether the text can be deconstructed by the critic vs. whether the text is "in deconstruction." De Man seems to suggest the latter, shifting emphasis away from the work done by the critic to the work already at work in the work. ("I never had an idea of my own," says de Man.) It is interesting to note that de Man then adds that the difference is that he is a philologist and not a philosopher (as Derrida is).

Sandy

Alexander Dickow <[redacted]> 02/03/07 8:24 AM >>>
Barry wrote:
"I remember that for Paul de Man, Rousseau was the one writer who could not be deconstructed--who was always, so to speak, way out in front of the reader/critic."

Where does de Man say this? I admit I'm surprised, since he "deconstructs" the Profession de foi du vicaire savoyard (Emile) in a very smart paper (one of the best on the Profession de foi). Rousseau -- see the Grammatologie -- was a cornerstone of "deconstructionist" reading practices from the beginnings of poststructuralism. Far from being "impossible to deconstruct", if you ask me!
Not to mention: anyone who has read Rousseau carefully knows that his texts are veritable conundrums, vertiginous, infinitely tricky and unstable.
"Impossible to deconstruct"? Rousseau's a master of slippery vocabulary (related terms with unstable boundaries, reinvented familiar words or notions...), and he can get you to call black orange in under five minutes.
So, I'd love to know where (and how, why, etc) de Man makes this claim.
Amicalement,
Alex

> www.alexdickow.net/blog/
>
> les mots! ah quel désert à la fin
> merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

154. Eric
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Mon 5 Feb 2007

[The Sept 11 attacks were] the greatest work of art in the cosmos ... compared to that, we composers are nothing." Karlheinz Stockhausen, composer.

KS mentioned Lucifer in the original German interview, but it does give deconstructed space to other "works of art," like

http://www.vidmax.com/index.php/videos/view/539

↑ Index

155. Adam Morey
Essays on Byrd
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Hello,

I am looking to find out if anyone knows of any good criticism or essays on the work of Don Byrd, especially his larger work, The Great Dimmestore Centennial.

I was recently made aware of one article, "In the Domain of the Common: a Consideration of Don Byrd's Work." Groundswell, v. 2, no. 3 (1987) by Michael Blitz, but have not been able to find it anywhere.

Let me know if anyone can help.

Best,

Adam J. Morey

↑ Index

156. Joe Amato
Re: Essays on Don Byrd
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Adam, I spend some time with Don's ~The Poetics of the Common Knowledge~ in ~Industrial Poetics~, just out last fall on Iowa. You'll note references to Don's critical work in, for instance, Jed Rasula's ~The American Poetry Wax Museum~ and ~This Compost~. Jed and Don have a long history as correspondents. Erik Sweet did a short piece on Don for the Poetry Project Newsletter, April/May of last year I think.

I'm a great fan of ~Dimestore~, at any rate. Wasn't it reviewed in the Village Voice back when? I'm sure others -- Pierre Joris in particular -- can chime in here with more info.

Best,

Joe

> Hello,
>
> I am looking to find out if anyone knows of any good criticism or essays on the work of Don Byrd, especially his larger work, The Great Dimmestore Centennial.
>
> I was recently made aware of one article, "In the Domain of the Common: a Consideration of Don Byrd's Work." Groundswell, v. 2, no. 3 (1987) by Michael Blitz, but have not been able to find it anywhere.
>
> Let me know if anyone can help.
>
> Best,
>
> Adam J. Morey

↑ Index

157. Adam Morey
Re: Essays on Don Byrd
Mon 5 Feb 2007

Joe,

I recently read an Don's review of your book on Joris' blog. I'll have to get myself to actually pick it up one of these days.

Thanks,
Adam

> Adam, I spend some time with Don's ~The Poetics of the Common Knowledge~ in ~Industrial Poetics~, just out last fall on Iowa. You'll note references to Don's critical work in, for instance, Jed Rasula's ~The American Poetry Wax Museum~ and ~This Compost~. Jed and Don have a long history as correspondents. Erik Sweet did a short piece on Don for the Poetry Project Newsletter, April/May of last year I think.

> I'm a great fan of ~Dimestore~, at any rate. Wasn't it reviewed in the Village Voice back when? I'm sure others -- Pierre Joris in particular -- can chime in here with more info.
>
> Best,
>
> Joe
>
> Hello,
>
> I am looking to find out if anyone knows of any good criticism or essays on the work of Don Byrd, especially his larger work, The Great Dimmestore Centennial.
>
> I was recently made aware of one article, "In the Domain of the Common: a Consideration of Don Byrd's Work." Groundswell, v. 2, no. 3 (1987) by Michael Blitz, but have not been able to find it anywhere.
>
> Let me know if anyone can help.
>
> Best,
>
> Adam J. Morey

↑ Index

158. Katalanche Press

New from Katalanche: Book 5 by Alan Davies

Mon 5 Feb 2007

We are pleased to announce the availability of a new chapbook:

BOOK 5
by Alan Davies
$5, 44 pages

Alan Davies is the author of many books of poetry, including Name (This), Signage (Roof), Candor (O Books) and Rave (Roof), as well as an untitled collaboration with photographer Mark Winterford published by Zasterle. He has written many critical articles and book reviews, and has lectured here and abroad. He was twice a recipient of Canada Council Grants for the Arts. His big book called Life is forthcoming from O Books. He is at work on a lifelong project consisting of individual books, of which Book 5 is the most recent installment to be published.

From Book 5:

Quill orphans no more being

*

See you cumbered won't talk emblems

*

Focus less gone over hunted

*

Comeuppance
there or else
you yours

Order yours here:

http://katalanchepress1.blogspot.com

Payments can be made on our website via paypal by clicking on the provided link, or by check made payable to Michael Carr sent to the address below. Prices are postpaid.

Katalanche Press
c/o Carr
9 Malcolm Road, #1
Cambridge, MA 02138

And stay tuned for another release announcement soon.

Yours,
Michael & Dottie

↑ Index

159. David Applegate
*1st Audio Offering from *BAD NOISE
Tue 6 Feb 2007

At Bad Noise Productions, we have grown tired of the usual reading situation which has a tendency to produce droopy heads and meager excitements.

That's why we have begun pioneering NOISE POETRY which involves a cavalcade of sounds and noises as accompaniment to interesting literary fare.

Please visit www.badnoiseproductions.com for audio of the NOISE POETRY performance titled "Mr. Sound Boy King" recorded live at "The Confessional" reading series on 1 / 20 / 07.

(All sounds produced using mouth + electricity.)

↑ Index

160. Jesse Crockett
To obtain translation for publication permission, need help
Tue 6 Feb 2007

I'm need to obtain permission from the Dutch poet Hanny Michaelis in order to publish some translations of her work. Please backchannel with relevant information on where to start.

JWC

↑ Index

161. Barry Schwabsky
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Finnegans Wake has an apostrophe?

George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote: > having > lived in cork and donegal for years and hung out with musicians and > shanakee (sorry, i know that's not the spelling), finnegans wake
> doesn't > make sense any other way to me.

Finnegan's Wake hung out in Cork?

↑ Index

162. Jim Andrews
Homage to Edgardo Antonio Vigo
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Below is an email from the Urugayan poet Clemente Padin (English at bottom) calling for contributions to a project in honour of the late Argentine poet Edgardo Antonio Vigo. You can view some of Vigo's work at http://www.eavigo.com.ar .

ja

HOMENAJE A EDGARDO ANTONIO VIGO

Hace ya 10 años que se nos fue el artista y poeta argentino Edgardo Antonio Vigo, xilógrafo, poeta experimental, editor incansable, artecorreísta o "trabajador en la comunicación a distancia" como solía llamarlo, constructor de "objetos inútiles y máquinas extrañas", innovador constante, pensador y teórico y otras variedades no ovacionadas en arte.

A comienzos de los 70s. se integra a los nacientes circuitos del arte correo siendo uno de sus más constantes creadores hasta el día de su muerte. La dictadura militar de su país le golpea duramente al hacer desaparecer a su hijo mayor, Palomo Vigo y, fue a partir de este desgraciado hecho, que su obra cobra un carácter fuertemente político a la par que aumentan sus contactos con el exterior, difundiendo la brutal represión y delitos de lesa humanidad de aquella feroz dictadura.

Su poema visual "Sembrar la memoria" se convirtió en un emblema de la resistencia a la arbitrariedad e insanía institucional. En los últimos años, su obra vuelve a la luz, en la Fundación San Telmo (1991) en donde expone sus obras mayores y, en 1994, es seleccionado para integrar el envío argentino a la XXII Bienal de San Pablo, Brasil, logrando el reconocimiento mundial a ese nivel.

Ante tan magno acontecimiento invitamos a los artistas y poetas de todo el mundo a adherirse a esta recuerdo humilde enviando una sola obra, de cualquier carácter (que pueda contenerse en uno o dos archivos JPEG de 200 Kb o en un WORD de 3 páginas, únicamente) que resuma su homenaje a tan insigne artista cuyo mayor mérito fue insuflarnos el afán por la libertad enfrentándonos a la disyuntiva de tener que optar entre las variadas posibilidades de significación (incluso de alterar el sentido) que ofrecían sus obras y asumir y concretar así, a través de la elección personal, nuestra genuina naturaleza hacia la libertad.

Realizar los envíos por email a:
[redacted]

Fecha límite: 31 DE ABRIL 2007. Las obras serán desplegadas en http://boek861.com
Si Usted desea enviar su homenaje en formato físico, enviar a:

Clemente Padín
C.C.Central 1211
11000 Montevideo - URUGUAY

quien lo escaneará y lo enviará a BOEK861. Gracias de antemano.

HOMAGE EDGARDO ANTONIO VIGO

Edgardo Antonio Vigo died in 1997 when he was close to 70 years of age, in La Plata, the city in which he was born. An xylophonist, experimental poet, conceptualist, builder of "useless objects and strange machines", a constant innovator whose work was only very recently discovered, he has become a source of constant surprise, because of the almost indescribable nature of his proposals. He also cultivated forms, such as mail art and experimental poetry, which are even today considered sub-artistic, or simply not considered art at all by vernacular criticism.

In the early 70s Vigo joined the nascent circuits of Mail Art, becoming one of its most active participants until the day of his death. The military dictatorship in his country dealt him a cruel blow when one of his sons, Palomo Vigo, disappeared and it is from that tragic event onwards that his work acquired a strong political tone, as he extended his contacts abroad, spreading information about the brutal repression and crimes against humanity committed by that fierce dictatorship. His visual poem Sembrar la Memoria (Sowing Memories) is emblematic in front injustice and institutional illness. In later years his work came to light again, when he exhibited individually at the San Telmo Foundation (1991) where he presented a retrospective of his major works. In 1994 he was chosen to be part of the Argentine contribution to the 22nd São Paulo Biennial (Brazil) where he received worldwide reconnaissance.

In front so important event we invited artists and poets of everybody to adhere to this humble memory sending an only work, of any character (that could control in one or two JPEG files of 200 Kb or in a WORD file of 3 pages, only) that abridge his/her homage to so famous artist whose merit was give us the toil for liberty confronting us to opcional of having to opt between the varied possibilities of signification (included altering its sense) that his works offered and take on and state explicitly so, through the personal election, our genuine nature to freedom.

Send your artwork by email to:
[redacted]

Deadline: April 30, 2007. All the artworks will be in http://boek861.com If you desire to send your homage in physical format, send:

Clemente Padín
C.C.Central 1211
11000 Montevideo - URUGUAY

who will scanner it and will send it to BOEK861. Thanks in advance.

↑ Index

163. Ram Devineni

Leading Brazilian & Latin-American Filmmakers & Writers at the AIC

Tue 6 Feb 2007

Dear Friends: I am proud to annouce some remarkable events happening at the AIC. Leading Brazilian & Latin-American Filmmakers & Writers at the AIC. Some of the best Brazilian and Latin-American filmmakers, poets, and writers will be holding workshops and lectures at the Academia Internacional de Cinema in February 2007. The directors of "Bus 174", "City of Men", "The Holy Girl" and "Madame Sata" are scheduled to appear at the AIC. More information about the free events can be found at http://www.aicinema.com.br

FILM SCHEDULE

Feb 5 at 20h30
Director of Photography Lina Chamie discusses how to transform your ideas into images.

Feb 6 at 19h
Director of Photography Carlos Ebert focuses on the craft of cinemaphotography.

Feb 6 at 20h30
Paulo Morelli, the award winning director of "City of Men" and co-founder of O2 Filmes, which made the international hit "City of God."

Feb 7 at 19h and 20h30
Filmmakers Philippi Barcisncky and Jeferson De

Feb 8 at 19h
Argentinean director Lucrecia Martel, who made the film, "Swamp" which was screened at the Berlin,

Sundance, Havana, and Toulouse film festivals. Her most recent film "La Nina Santa (The Holy Girl)," is a reflection about adolescence, and the awakening of desire and faith, and selected in competition at the 2004 Festival de Cannes. She will focus on her work and the art of directing.

Feb 9 at 19h
Filmmaker Rogerio Guidette

Feb 9 at 20h30
Documentary filmmaker Felipe Lacerda will be discussing his film "Bus 174", which is about the hijacking of a bus in Rio and the media fiasco and violent outcome resulting from it. Shown at the 2003 Sundance Film Festival and won best documentary prizes at the Rio de Janeiro International Film Festival, Miami International Film Festival and the Sao Paulo International Film Festival.

Feb. 12 at 19h and 20h30
Cinemaphotographer Katia Coelho discusses her craft and documentary filmmaker Andrea Tonacci lectures on expanding the documentary film.

Feb 13 at 19h and 20h30
Film critic Eliane Caffe and Jorge Bodanski continues the discussion on expanding the documentary film.

Feb 14 at 19h
Marcelo Rezende lecture on the films and imagination of movie/music video diretor Michel Gondry.

Feb 14 at 20h30
Filmmaker Karim Ainouz discusses his film "Madame Sata," which won prizes at the Chicago International Film Festival, Havana Film Festival and the Sao Paulo Association of Art Critics Award for Best Director. He co-wrote "Lower City" and "Behind the Sun."

LITERATURE SCHEDULE

Feb 7 at 19h30
Poetry reading featuring contemporary Brazilian poets Rodrigo Petronio, Micheliny Verunschk and Flavia Rocha.

Feb 8 at 19h30
Roundtable discussion with literary magazine editors Paulo Ferraz (Sebastiao), Elisa Andrade Buzzo (Mininas), Andrea Catropa (O Casulo), and Ademir Demarchi (Babel).

Feb 13 at 19h30
Reading & discussion featuring contemporary fiction writers Marcelino Freire, Marcia Tiburi, Michel Laub, Marcelo Rezende and Marcelo Carneiro da Cunha .

Feb 14 at 19h30
Special evening with non-fiction writer and editor Wagner Carelli .

Feb 15 at 19h30
Rountable discussion with leading literary publishers Rogerio Eduardo Alves (Planeta) and Fernando Paixao (Atica).

Daily Reception at 17h Telefone: 11 3826 7883
e-mail: [redacted]

Please send future emails to [redacted] for press

↑ Index

164. Alan Sondheim

mr. tumor ms. whiteshort mrs. ocean

Tue 6 Feb 2007

New material on YouTube, www.asondheim.org, and nikuko.blogspot.com -

mr. tumor ms. whiteshort mrs. ocean

mr. tumor watch ms. whiteshort up and at'em
ms. whiteshort watch shudder tumor tumor almost fall off mr. tumor bang bang bang you gant get getter gan ghis says mr. tumor
shake that tumor mr. tumor watch that short ms. whiteshort gang gang gang mr. tumor gang gang gang ms. whiteshort bang bang bang

http://www.asondheim.org/shudder.mp4
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MVoZviTXg_4 YouTube

↑ Index

165. Vernon Frazer
Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Stephen

Thanks, in turn, for amplifying on what I wrote and extending the discussion into other areas.

I'm still adapting to the increased speed, myself. I love the fast turnaround time on zine and book submissions, but I do find myself wondering if the new book I've published book has become "old news" before I've even had a chance to send out review copies. The literary world used to have a very slow pace, but that's changed with the latest technological developments. In many ways I prefer the faster pace, but I'm still adapting to it.

Yes, the historical interplay is dead. Submissions of my first unpublished novel, completed in the mid-1970s, received personal replies from agents, whereas my most recent submissions have received form rejection slips. Editors in the major houses seem to have transferred the process of screening books to agents. I don't even know if publishers have staff to read through the slushpile. Instead, they rejected un-agented submissions out of hand.

I agree that a good editor can be invaluable, spot flaws that hide in one's blind spot. But a bad editor can misunderstand a work's intent and insist on revisions that severely diminish the work. I've regarded editors as a 50-50 situation. Some help, some hurt. It's a mixed bag.

I agree about the review situation. I've received some tremendous reviews, but, generally speaking, poets these days have very few reviewers whose words can launch a career (of sorts). The magazines you mentioned have done a good job, but they don't scratch the surface of the good writing being produced today. The explosion of poetry into different styles and genres over the past 40 years has affected the reception poets receive, as well. There's no more room at the top for recognition, but many more qualified poets are looking for their spot up there.

Online publishing has allowed poetry to expand, but I agree that the reviews and distribution haven't kept pace. Some of the best poets I know only manage to receive 5 reviews---at most--- for wonderful works. This limits how many people can become aware of the work and reduces word-of-mouth, as well.

I find the bookstore situation depressing because I love to browse and buy on impulse. Now, I find most bookstores don't have much that interests me, and when I see something that does, I save money ordering a new or used copy online.

I do hope that libraries will buy e-books for their collections, but I haven't seen libraries purchasing POD books as yet. The situation will change as POD becomes more acceptable and the POD publishers acquire reputations for the work they publish.

For this to occur, more reviewers and distributors will have to appear on the scene. I have no suggestions on this one.

But the information we do have, as you say, can be gathered easily online and cross-referenced.

I still prefer to read from the book instead of the screen, and I think the book will continue to exist because many others feel the same way.

The path up to recognition from the glut of publication may take a very different path (or paths) from the ones we're accustomed to. It's too early to say whether it will be better or worse. But the bright side of the new technology is that it creates an alterative means for creating and preserving literature that the traditional venues no longer pay attention to.

I do hope some others will share their opinions.

Vernon Frazer

http://vernonfrazer.com <http://vernonfrazer.com/>

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Stephen Vincent
Sent: Monday, February 05, 2007 6:41 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing

I put the previous email on some kind of 'draft' hold, and it hatched early.

If still interested, jump to the middle (RESTART) if you already read the first part!

Thanks, Vernon, for the informed sincerity of your response here.
As both a poet and sometimes publisher over a big chunk of time, I think the still relatively new electronic publishing modes are still much in transition - at least I like to think so. From the advantage point of view, there is:
1. the global (geographic) spread of the makers, the poets as well as the audience . The disadvantage there is that the network is bloated and too fast - which, ironically, can create a disaffection, or disinterest - as what happens to me often now. I remember the days of very slow overseas mail - say, two months to get a copy of Work magazine from Detroit, or a new Jack Spicer book, to the outback of Nigeria. But boy did I read every page with an almost ferocious attention. Now I am frequently numbed by getting too much from everywhere. (But then there is Ron Silliman turning on his engines every day, enlivened rather than numbed or complaining about the seeming siege, it seems, and I suspect many are grateful for the attentions and sales benefits he is able to spread).
2. In the tangible world of trade books, publishing is ideally a dance - with probably equally share pain and pleasure - between writer-editor/publisher-
Design/ production
promotion- media reviewers
Distriubtion - Book fairs, sales reps and store outlets.
Much of that interplay is now historically dead.
The role of the editor is decidedly absent from most publishing houses which is a sadness. The loss of this dynamic creates bloated, flat books, or dull books. A good editor is like a good conductor - insuring a book's rhythm and pace, etc. (A poet who acts as his/her own editor is like the old saw about the doctor who treats himself).
As much as I like publishing online, only rarely do I get a good editor who has a sense of shape, most recently, Tim Atkins at Onedit. The digital medium invites obesity, a limitlessness.

But, I suspect, the confusion of "the value of information" has been confused with the poem and the book as an object(s) within themselves - objects with a history and tradition of book making which the hype around "information" and volume have replaced in an aesthetically unrewarding way.
Design/ Production. Yes, I think a lot of the online mags and ebooks are beginning to look great (Bridge, Fascicles, Masthead, etc.) The much easier implementation of images gives new breathing room to old fashioned "book illustration." Again I think online design is an emerging medium of its own and will only get better.
(RESTART!! - IF YOU READ THE FIRST PART)
Promotion/ Reviews
Poetry - at least stuff on the edge -has been so ill served by traditional print media. However, at its best, the online has not replaced the now practically dead world of large circulation newspaper reviews. To my knowledge, we do not have either poet critic of a large stature matched with a review organ of large mainstream stature to which the combination of readers/reviewers and review can go to. The sad irony is that we have a large number of significant (great, whatever) poets and no great review media to correspond to their accomplishments. (NYR, NYT, Nation, etc. will not do the job. Witness whoever he was (David somebody) reviewing Frost and trying to toss a blink to M Perloff, and experimental poets - that was kind of off putting, awkward, etc., to say the least.
On the other hand, Ron Silliman, Rain Taxi, blog commentators, etc. have done much to bring attention to good books that would never have hit the 'hierarchical' radar of NYT, etc.
Distribution through traditional bookstore media is practically dead. Amazon is devouring bookstore after bookstore. The aesthetic etc pleasures of looking at poetry books, and all the various associations that can come from the arrangements of books on a shelf is more than not, a history. (Even in libraries, as libraries begin to go to ebooks for their collections, and small presses no doubt will go to ebook and ebook modes of distribution and sale and the emergence of comfortable ebook readers (through ebrary, google, etc.)

How any poetry book will emerge thru these new networks is no doubt a developing challenge. There are lots of attractions for academia (professor made anthology/readers will be much more convenient), cross referencing a poets entire works will be convenient, too, and access to a range of review and critical responses to a poet's work will be easier.

This is all fated, it appears definite.

However, the principles of the good printed book (well edited, designed, promoted, distributed and intelligently reviewed) are not going to disappear. In this new democratic technology - which everyone can appear as a poet with a digital ebook - it's going to be an interesting adventure to see the ways in which a book can emerge from the pack with some of the traditional values still in tact.

These are my views. In terms of the poetry world, it would be of value, I suspect to hear from Brent Cunningham or Laura Moriarty to see how they envision the future among the new givens.

Stephen Vincent

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

> Hi Ann
>
> I've self-published 7 poetry books, 3 novels and 3 recordings. Print publishers have published 2 books. POD publishers have published 2, with 2 more on the way. I like to think this gives me some knowledge of the subject, though the scenario is probably changing as we speak.
>
> In today's publishing climate, I have no choice but to be the publisher of last resort.

> As a self-publisher, my books don't sell very well, but I do have > distribution channels for any orders that might come in. Every year I manage > to sell a few copies to college libraries.

>
> My print books published by a small press found their way to college

> libraries regularly, probably because Potes & Poets was an established press > and because whoever did the ordering could do a mass order of poetry books > through SPD.

>
> MY POD books have appeared without any problems, probably because I do my > own typesetting; I don't know anybody else who wants the job or could do it > as well, unfortunately, it's probably cost me some publishing opportunities > with some presses. The POD books don't make it to the college libraries or > receive distribution beyond the site where they're sold, e.g., www.lulu.com > or www.cafepress.com.

>
> The biggest problem we face continues to be distribution of our work.

> Some POD publishers, such as Geoffrey Gatza of BlazeVox, are finding ways to > improve distribution so that people can find the books at Amazon.com, if not > on the shelf at the local chain or indie bookstore. More publishers might be > doing similar things as I write this.

>

>
> Whether the works are self-published, print, or POD, the reviews I receive > are about the same, although some magazines seem to avoid reviewing self-published books.

>
> If the reviews are accurate, I can't say---in relation to my own work, anyway---that editor and publishers in print or online have more acuity. I think POD publishers might be more open to publishing edgy work because they don't have to endure the costs associated with print publishing. Practical matters involving money might influence or outweigh artistic judgment.

> I do think ezines deserve parity with print zines because they're creating a > literary culture online that is more adventurous than what I read in many print zines.

>
> I receive the most satisfaction when somebody else publishes me because it makes me feel that somebody other than me thinks my work is worth publishing. Although I feel great when a writer sends me a complimentary book because he considers me "one of the real ones," I don't feel too

> satisfied when his publisher returns a manuscript I've submitted on the hope > that the editors will feel the same way about my work as the author does.

>
> Given the nature of the publishing business in a time when corporations

> rule, I think the notion that a self-published or POD-published small press > differs in any significant way from the more established small presses > should be discarded. Most of us are really on our own as writers, regardless > of publisher, and have to work every possible angle to get our work out.

>
> Nobody has a monopoly on editorial acuity.

> The less work I have to do in relation to publishing and promoting my books, > the more satisfaction I receive. But I'm not holding my breath while waiting > for a publisher to tell me, "You're great, baby, Now, just sit back and we'll do it all for you., and give you royalties on top of it"

>
> It makes for nice day dreams, but that's about it.
>
> I don't have time to read many blogs, but I wouldn't sell women writers short. Through her blog, Eileen Tabios has been a great supporter of my work, almost reviving a book of mine that I'd pretty much considered dead.

> She has an excellent site. I think other are better qualified to address the > subject of blogs.

>
> There's my two cents (adjusted for inflation.
>
> Vernon
> http://vernonfrazer.com
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ann Bogle
> Sent: Monday, February 05, 2007 11:35 AM
> To: [redacted]

> Subject: Audience & publishing
>
> Last year, there was a good thread among poets about the difference for them
> in publishing in online v. print publications. Mostly, the biggest > difference was that in print publication, more attention was paid to > precision in > line breaks, layout, and font -- that was their overall experience. Now I > want

> to ask how writers and poets feel about self-publishing when they encounter

> it and at their own websites v. publishing in online publications. It > seems > sometimes such a small psychological difference in transitting between the

> wr > iter's own website v. an official publication. What is the bias that > suggests

> that people who edit other writers' work are somehow stoic for doing so but > that writers (most editors are both) are somehow vainglorious for going > into > print? Sometimes I would like to know if it is true -- sometimes it IS > true

> -- that the editors of online publications have more editorial acuity than

> the writers do themselves, or if it's a "hands" argument -- having someone > select you and do it for you by definition carries more weight and > prestige. It > is the same argument, in smaller and subtler form, inherent in the > favoritism

> shown for large houses. In general, it is taking time (as should be > expected) for online publications to gain the acclaim of print publications

> -- even > though smaller print publications are invariably hard to find and therefore > are restricted to small library audiences of 2,000 or fewer readers.

> Weblogs
> are usually female (like the Buckthorn in botany), and so therefore are > deemed "low" as art goes. I find certain conversational weblogs to be pure

> and > engrossing. I think they may be higher art than some people tend to > realize,
> depending on their creator. It is an exciting way to cut out middle men
> and

> bullshit. It is a species of self-publishing. Topics weblogs are arguably > valuable to more people. Other thoughts? Should it be harder to access > online publications to increase the sensation that they are not > self-published, > that they have prestige? Should they be umbrella-listed at sites such as > webdelsol?

>
> AMB

↑ Index

166. Steve Halle
Jackie K. White @ Seven Corners
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Jackie K. White is the featured poet this week at Seven Corners (www.sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com). Take a minute to check out her fine poems.

Best,
Steve Halle
Editor, Seven Corners

↑ Index

167. Mark Weiss
Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
Tue 6 Feb 2007

I've heard others say this, as well, but I don;'t know on what authority. The last 4 books from Junction Press have been produced POD, and all future books will be. Two of them have sold well enough to go into second printings. A great many publishers have gone POD. Even many of the major commercial houses now print their second printings POD, because like the rest of us they enjoy saving on storage costs.

Libraries don't seem to mind--they buy with as much or as little alacrity as they did books printed by offset. Why not? It's very hard even to tell if a book was printed POD (and of course the librarian hasn't seen the book before ordering).

Mark

> I do hope that libraries will buy e-books for their collections, but I haven't seen libraries purchasing POD books as yet. The situation will change as POD becomes more acceptable and the POD publishers acquire reputations for the work they publish.

↑ Index

168. Vernon Frazer
Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Mark
I'm glad to stand corrected about libraries purchasing POD books.

I think POD books have covers that feel more like plastic than paper, but I think this makes them a little more durable.

Vernon
http://vernonfrazer.com

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Mark Weiss
Sent: Tuesday, February 06, 2007 10:25 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing

I've heard others say this, as well, but I don;'t know on what authority. The last 4 books from Junction Press have been produced POD, and all future books will be. Two of them have sold well enough to go into second printings. A great many publishers have gone POD. Even many of the major commercial houses now print their second printings POD, because like the rest of us they enjoy saving on storage costs.

Libraries don't seem to mind--they buy with as much or as little alacrity as they did books printed by offset. Why not? It's very hard even to tell if a book was printed POD (and of course the librarian hasn't seen the book before ordering).

Mark

> I do hope that libraries will buy e-books for their collections, but I haven't seen libraries purchasing POD books as yet. The situation will change as POD becomes more acceptable and the POD publishers acquire reputations for the work they publish.

↑ Index

169. Mark Weiss
Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Covers haven't been a problem for several years. They're printed on exactly the same stock as offset books, and they're laminated or varnished with exactly the same materials.

I assume you're thinking about matt-finished covers, which have a waxy feel. That's the publisher's decision. For a while it was something of a fad. Appropriate in terms of design for some books, but the surface tends to damage easily. Again, it's a choice available regardless of how the book is printed.

Mark

At 10:51 AM 2/6/2007, you wrote:
>Mark
>I'm glad to stand corrected about libraries purchasing POD books.
>

>I think POD books have covers that feel more like plastic than paper, but I >think this makes them a little more durable.
>
>Vernon
>http://vernonfrazer.com
>
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On >Behalf Of Mark Weiss
>Sent: Tuesday, February 06, 2007 10:25 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
>
>I've heard others say this, as well, but I don;'t know on what >authority. The last 4 books from Junction Press have been produced >POD, and all future books will be. Two of them have sold well enough >to go into second printings. A great many publishers have gone POD.
>Even many of the major commercial houses now print their second >printings POD, because like the rest of us they enjoy saving on storage >costs.
>
>Libraries don't seem to mind--they buy with as much or as little >alacrity as they did books printed by offset. Why not? It's very hard >even to tell if a book was printed POD (and of course the librarian >hasn't seen the book before ordering).
>
>Mark
>
>
>
>
>
> >I do hope that libraries will buy e-books for their collections, but I > >haven't seen libraries purchasing POD books as yet. The situation will > >change as POD becomes more acceptable and the POD publishers acquire > >reputations for the work they publish.

↑ Index

170. Ann Bogle
Re: phobia...
Tue 6 Feb 2007

In a message dated 2/5/2007 2:08:03 P.M. Central Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

While I pay a heavy price socially for it, and the tics and depression are less than fun, I don't consider myself disabled. "Society" does. If they want to send me a disability check for having a "disorder" that I call a "condition," I'll take the money and mutter under my breath about "reparations." I didn't write the definition, and all of us share its consequences.

Vernon, that's a brilliant paragraph in what you encapsulate of that experience.

The taxpayer, if you've met him, is a very mean man. He works everywhere you need to go for the decade following graduate school: the doctor's office and the pharmacy and the employment rehabilitation office. The taxpayer's wife and ex-wife and girlfriend also work there. The taxpayer's daughter is a rude girl. They work at the "bank." They support war, reject religion, and turn on people who seek services. They oppose arts and higher education. They catch people at running errands during day hours. They put bans on smoking to try to curb local taxes, including a theater tax that I love to pay by smoking natural cigarettes.

↑ Index

171. Ann Bogle
Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
Tue 6 Feb 2007

I recently had the chance to hear read and eat dinner with an old friend from school days, whose book is a bestseller in India; I don't know how it's doing here, but it's written in English. A super nice guy who also has always known quite a lot about technology and the film business through his mother and sister. He says that the plastic book is coming to the mass market and that they are bracing themselves for change, and I said that I had been watching the small and electronic press world for some time in poetry, especially. The only division is prestige -- between paper and business handling it and webdesign and own handling it. As the mass market goes increasingly electronic, which is coming, the indies need to define their turf more clearly, I think, to defend their prestige and their designs. Maybe by gallery shows. Beautiful, limited edition printed books.

↑ Index

172. Maria Damon
Re: phobia...
Tue 6 Feb 2007

---

i'm a taxpayer. i'm single, female, anti-war and support the arts and higher education; in fact the latter is my workplace. as a taxpayer i feel the government owes it to me to endorse and legislate in favor of my values: peace, creativity, freedom, decent working and living conditions for all people, good care and education for kids and an aspiration to eliminate the suffering of all sentient beings.

At 11:04 AM -0500 2/6/07, Ann Bogle wrote:
>
>In a message dated 2/5/2007 2:08:03 P.M. Central Standard Time, >[redacted] writes:
>
>While I pay a heavy price socially for it, and the tics and depression are >less than fun, I don't consider myself disabled. "Society" does. If they >want to send me a disability check for having a "disorder" that I call a >"condition," I'll take the money and mutter under my breath about >"reparations." I didn't write the definition, and all of us share its >consequences.
>
>
>
>Vernon, that's a brilliant paragraph in what you encapsulate of that >experience.
>
>The taxpayer, if you've met him, is a very mean man. He works everywhere >you need to go for the decade following graduate school: the doctor's office >and the pharmacy and the employment rehabilitation office. The >taxpayer's wife >and ex-wife and girlfriend also work there. The taxpayer's daughter is a >rude girl. They work at the "bank." They support war, reject religion, and >turn on people who seek services. They oppose arts and higher >education. They >catch people at running errands during day hours. They put bans on smoking >to try to curb local taxes, including a theater tax that I love to pay by >smoking natural cigarettes.

↑ Index

173. Adam Fieled
Robert Archambeau, Aaron Belz on PFS Post
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Check out new work from Aaron Belz and Robert Archambeau on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Thank you, peeps....

http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com

We won't tell. Get more on shows you hate to love
(and love to hate): Yahoo! TV's Guilty Pleasures list.

↑ Index

174. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

I first became aware of the haiku form via an interview with Laurie Anderson in the early 80s... she claimed to have written "fake haikus" for her song Kokoku (the interview is archived here:
http://www.archive.org/details/LaurieAndersonOTG)

at least she didn't claim they were "real" haikus -- does anyone recognize the Japanese text she quotes in the lyrics below?

Kokoku

I come very briefly to this place.
I watch it move. I watch it shake.

Kumowaku yamano. Watashino sakebi.
Watashino koewo. Ushano kokoku.
Watashiwa sokoni. Watashiwa asobu.

Mountain with clouds. A cry. My voice.
Home of the brave. I'm here now. And lost.
They say the dead will rise again. And here they come now.
Strange animals out of the Ice Age. And they stare at you.
Dumbfounded. Like big mistakes. And we say: Keep cool.
Maybe if we pretend this never happened, they'll all just go away.

Watashiwa sokoni. Watashiwa asobu.
Mewotoji. Mewotoji. Kikunowa kotori.
Watashino sakebi. Watashino koewo.

...

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Dylan Welch
Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 2:08
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Sure, one can use any formal restraint as a poetic game, as a challenge of sorts. But as challenges go, in haiku, the syllabic challenge (whatever pattern you might choose) is mighty superficial. Indeed, in my years of teaching haiku, I've seen that it's the easiest thing in the world for students of nearly all grade levels to count their pretty little syllables. Why brag about pulling on your underwear all by yourself when your hair is on fire? It's a trivial "discipline." And these same haiku, while hitting that trivial target -- again, an incorrect target in English -- are widely missing the more important targets. And most often, these proud 5-7-5ers are completely oblivious to those other targets -- ones that are actually more important. Why bother with arbirary constraints for haiku when there are far more serious, literary, challenging, and effective constraints that you miss in the process of focusing on 5-7-5?!?

It can be fun to write cinquains or iambic pentameter, or the recent "Fib"
form (counting syllables in subsequent lines to match the Fibonacci sequence).
But when it comes to haiku, writing 5-7-5 syllables in English isn't the same as following the prescribed syllables of cinquains or pentameter or Fibs.
That's because following 5-7-5 assumes a "correctness" for that pattern

in English, which isn't accurate when it's really a borrowed form. Yes, sonnets are borrowed from Italian to English, but at least that's the same alphabet, so it's not fraught with the problems of translating from Japanese to English.
It's folly to translate the number (5-7-5) without thinking more deeply about what is being counted. Yet that is precisely what has happened that lead to the false conception of haiku being 5-7-5 syllables in English. Quite simply, when we apply that pattern to English syllables, we miss the boat. It's simplistic and naive.

A person can do whatever they like and call it haiku (Lord knows that's happened plenty enough). If you're having fun, knock yourself out. But if you're writing 5-7-5 haiku, it's best to be aware of how you're writing a poem that's markedly longer than what is expressed in a Japanese haiku (not all of which are 5-7-5, by the way). It's best to be aware that you're writing in a pattern that, for good reason, pretty much ALL of the leading haiku poets writing in English do not follow. It's best to be aware that writing 5-7-5 frequently creates artificial syntax and awkward line breaks purely for an unnecessary constraint while more important strategies (also constraints) are completely missed. Indeed, most 5-7-5 haiku writers tend to be completely unaware of the other strategies necessary for traditional haiku, though perhaps that's a separate problem, although it's frequently caused by a belief that 5-7-5 is all there is to it. In any event, if one aims at seasonality and a two-part juxtapositional structure, and employs objective sensory imagery, you can let the rest of form take care of itself (organically). But of course, there's more to it than that -- writing in the present tense, no titles, no rhyme, seldom any similes or metaphors, employing fragments rather than full sentences, employing allusion, and more. And perhaps the most important aspect of all -- implication. It's very hard to do well, to hint at something that the reader can figure out on his own, making a leap of understanding that's made possible because of your restraint as a poet, because you deliberately left something out. As I like to emphasize in haiku workshops, don't write about your emotion, write about what caused your emotion. Then, if you do it right, the reader can feel what you felt without your having to say so. But of course all of this is missed by those who think haiku is only a 5-7-5 syllable-counting poetry trick. Some "challenge."

As I say in the title of one of my haiku lectures: "Haiku: It's Bigger Than You Think." Yet of course, it's also smaller than most English speakers think, too.

Michael

P.S. Nearly every serious haiku poet I know has had a progression in their haiku -- and I'm talking about many hundreds of leading haiku poets who I pay attention to, perhaps even thousands. They nearly all started out writing 5-7-5, as did I. And then they progressed to learning the more important aspects of the genre (and haiku is best thought of as a genre of poetry, of which "form" is just one aspect). At this point, nearly all of them stop writing in the 5-7-5 pattern. The few exceptions to this progression include those who went straight to avoiding 5-7-5 in the first place. But there are clear reasons for this progression. It's not that 5-7-5 is "abandoned." Rather, it is apprehended as something that was inappropriate in the first place, and causes many problems in English. Higher targets are sought -- ones, in fact, that turn out to be far more challenging and require far more discipline. If 5-7-5 in English serves any useful purpose, it is purely as the first stepping-stone on a long path. But, alas, too many people, even otherwise accomplished poets, stop at just that first stepping stone with their haiku.

In a message dated 02-Feb-07 9:01:40 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 10:41:59 -0600
From: Joe Amato <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

While I think it's a good idea to understand that 5-7-5 is simply a convenience of sorts, even something of a mistranslation (even something of a cultural oversight), I feel about this pretty much the way I feel about bending any formal rule. I.e., it's fun to use 5-7-5 as an arbitrary constraint in composing haiku, just as it's fun to use 14 lines as an arbitrary constraint in composing sonnets. (Which latter might not result in 14 lines, ysee, but that won't keep me from calling it a sonnet.)

Granted, correcting the misconception is one thing. But having fun with same is quite another, which, to me, is one reason I write poetry.

↑ Index

175. Rebecca Weaver
Issue 2 Midway now up!
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Hello all,

the second issue of Midway is now up! We are also accepting submissions for upcoming issues. Please see our "submissions" page for more details.

Best,
B Weaver

↑ Index

176. C. A. Conrad
 friends of poetry  Frank Sherlock EMERGENCY FUND  *please read ASAP!****
Tue 6 Feb 2007

 friends of poetry  Frank Sherlock EMERGENCY FUND  please read ASAP!***

The following link is for everyone to use on blogs and other online media: _http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2007_02_01_phillysound_archive.html#1170786058 81722949_ (http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2007_02_01_phillysound_archive.html#117078605881722949)

Our good friend Frank Sherlock was rushed to the hospital January 22nd with a sudden and mysterious illness which turned out to be a serious case of meningitis. He needed emergency surgery, and also suffered a heart attack and kidney failure as a result of symptoms related to the illness.

The timing could not be worse as this attack of meningitis happened during the two month window in which Frank is without health insurance.

His friends have come together to help raise money at this critical time. We are reaching out to other friends and the poetry community on Frank's behalf. Please consider sending donations for his hospital bills, physical therapy, as well as his very expensive medications and other needs.

If you can make a donation by check or money order at this time please send it to Frank's longtime friend Matthew McGoldrick.

VERY IMPORTANT: Please make check or money order out to Matthew McGoldrick, and send to his address:

1504 Morris St.
Philadelphia PA 19145

We will be having a benefit show in Philadelphia in the very near future. If you would like to be notified of that event please e-mail [redacted]_ (mailto:[redacted]) for the details. Frank's poetry page can be found here: _http://FrankSherlock.blogspot.com_ (http://franksherlock.blogspot.com/) , and he can also be found at _http://PhillySound.blogspot.com_ (http://phillysound.blogspot.com/)

THANKS SO MUCH FOR YOUR SUPPORT, AND PLEASE SPREAD THE WORD, from the Friends of Frank Sherlock

↑ Index

177. David A. Kirschenbaum
Boog City's Email List Dead, Please Resend Yr Name & Email
Tue 6 Feb 2007

---

hi all,

my powerbook, keeper of all that is boog, recently died, and although a good chunk of the data was recoverable (thank you tekserve) i did lose my entire email address book. so if you were on the boog email list, or just want to be, email me your full name and email backchannel to [redacted]. (this especially holds true to new yorkers, as i send out local emails that don't get posted on this here list.)

thanks and hope yre all swell.

as ever,
david

↑ Index

178. charles alexander
Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
Tue 6 Feb 2007

I think we should just call POD productions "books." Whether letterpress, offset-print, desktop-printed, POD-processed, or whatever other technology, these are all books.

Vernon, you may be experiencing covers that come from a particular book manufacturer. I have seen covers on POD-produced books that have been thinner & much less durable than those on offset-printed books, and I have seen very durable covers on POD-produced books, but mostly I see covers that feel exactly the same as offset-printed covers. And I know for a fact that the same paper can be used for digitally printed covers as for offset-printed covers. And of course POD-production is not limited to paperback books. One can have case-bound, cloth-covered books that were printed via POD technologies, too.

I will echo Mark, i.e. I know for a fact that libraries (college, university, & public libraries) buy books produced via POD technology. I don't know if they always know that is what they are buying, but I don't know if that matters. Also I'd add that a lot of university presses are using POD technology for their books, allowing them to print shorter runs for niche books that otherwise, given current costs of producing books and maintaining inventory, simply wouldn't be published.

Charles

At 08:51 AM 2/6/2007, you wrote:
>Mark
>I'm glad to stand corrected about libraries purchasing POD books.
>
>I think POD books have covers that feel more like plastic than paper, but I >think this makes them a little more durable.
>
>Vernon
>http://vernonfrazer.com
>
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On >Behalf Of Mark Weiss
>Sent: Tuesday, February 06, 2007 10:25 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
>
>I've heard others say this, as well, but I don;'t know on what >authority. The last 4 books from Junction Press have been produced >POD, and all future books will be. Two of them have sold well enough >to go into second printings. A great many publishers have gone POD.
>Even many of the major commercial houses now print their second >printings POD, because like the rest of us they enjoy saving on storage >costs.
>
>Libraries don't seem to mind--they buy with as much or as little >alacrity as they did books printed by offset. Why not? It's very hard >even to tell if a book was printed POD (and of course the librarian >hasn't seen the book before ordering).
>
>Mark
>
>
>
>
>
> >I do hope that libraries will buy e-books for their collections, but I > >haven't seen libraries purchasing POD books as yet. The situation will > >change as POD becomes more acceptable and the POD publishers acquire > >reputations for the work they publish.

charles alexander / chax press

fold the book inside the book keep it open always read from the inside out speak then

↑ Index

179. Stephen Vincent

Re: Ebooks - OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing

Tue 6 Feb 2007

Yes, as Ann Bogle suggests, the industry (Apple and Sony, for sure) are working madly refining portable ebook readers - ones that will replace and/or parallel textbooks and all other manner of print production.

It's a forgone conclusion that the global marketplace in books will function via these devices. I suspect that they will be wireless - if not already - and it will be possible to download whatever book you want (for a price) or portions of books into the readers. (Individuals will have monthly payment contracts with ebook providers - say, Baker & Taylor or Blackwells - by which they bring up books much in the way we pay the phone company.)

The Libraries will have contracts with the ebook providers(again B & T, Blackwells, ebrary and others (who will have contracts with the publishers) that will enable POD production of titles they will want preserved on their shelves for us old fashioned people who might want to check out an actual book!

I suspect most small press poetry book and magazine publishers are not yet into this loop in which work is represented on say ebrary, B&T or Blackwells. The big ones are, for example, UC Press. At this point in time, it only requires a PDF version of the work to become an ebook, and places like ebrary are usually eager for anything they can acquire and represent. There is usually no cost for this representation. The Publisher and provider make their money through the end user. (It's not like your PDF takes up warehouse space). (ebrary, for example, has 120,000 titles in ebook format. For purposes of research, ebrary also comes with cross-referencing searches across the entire list, instant bibliographic notations, etc., etc. And ebrary now has partnerships with both B&T and Blackwells, as well as 'book' distributors on other continents.)

There is, for one example an international beauty about it by which work becomes globally accessible. Bilingual editions of poetry, for example, can be seen in either country and is suddenly accessible to a much larger audiences in either language.

So, if I were running a small press, I would get Large be making ebooks with revenue producing contracts with the Big distributors (ebrary, B&T, and Blackwells). Google's part in this is still up in the land of dispute as to whether or not they are genuinely publisher friendly, but I assume they are working on competitive modes of representation and sale of copyrighted works.

Again, I would suggest it would be a good idea to get SPD to weigh in on this as to how they see this new ebook/e-reader situation working for small presses.

As much as many of us love tangible books, these developments represent a big chunk of the future.

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

> Covers haven't been a problem for several years. They're printed on exactly the same stock as offset books, and they're laminated or varnished with exactly the same materials.
>
> I assume you're thinking about matt-finished covers, which have a waxy feel. That's the publisher's decision. For a while it was something of a fad. Appropriate in terms of design for some books, but the surface tends to damage easily. Again, it's a choice available regardless of how the book is printed.
>
> Mark
>
> At 10:51 AM 2/6/2007, you wrote:
> Mark
> I'm glad to stand corrected about libraries purchasing POD books.
>
> I think POD books have covers that feel more like plastic than paper, but I think this makes them a little more durable.
>
> Vernon
> http://vernonfrazer.com
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Mark Weiss
> Sent: Tuesday, February 06, 2007 10:25 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: OOPs -Re: Audience & publishing
>
> I've heard others say this, as well, but I don;'t know on what authority. The last 4 books from Junction Press have been produced POD, and all future books will be. Two of them have sold well enough to go into second printings. A great many publishers have gone POD.

> Even many of the major commercial houses now print their second printings POD, because like the rest of us they enjoy saving on storage costs.
>
> Libraries don't seem to mind--they buy with as much or as little alacrity as they did books printed by offset. Why not? It's very hard even to tell if a book was printed POD (and of course the librarian hasn't seen the book before ordering).
>
> Mark
>
> I do hope that libraries will buy e-books for their collections, but I haven't seen libraries purchasing POD books as yet. The situation will change as POD becomes more acceptable and the POD publishers acquire reputations for the work they publish.

↑ Index

180. Barry Schwabsky
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Jeez. Can't we just decide that all contemporary haikus are "fake" and leave it at that?

Because to my mind that would be at least giving them the benefit of the doubt, since it is extremely unlikely that a "real" sonnet, a "real" dramatic monologue, a "real" epic, a "real" ode, or likewise a "real" haiku could also be a good poem. Only starting from the assumption that using any of this forms or genres is absurd, practically kitsch, is one likely to get anywhere with them.

There are societies of watercolor painters out there, according to whose members, probably, the works of any important contemporary artist who might produce a watercolor that you'd in the drawing dept. of MoMA or the Whitney are just obtuse efforts that show no sense of the rules of watercolor painting. But really, one should understand that, unlike hobbyists, real artists have only the most contingent interest in following any rules they have not set for themselves.

"Tom W. Lewis" <[redacted]> wrote:
I first became aware of the haiku form via an interview with Laurie Anderson in the early 80s... she claimed to have written "fake haikus"

for her song Kokoku (the interview is archived here:
http://www.archive.org/details/LaurieAndersonOTG)

at least she didn't claim they were "real" haikus -- does anyone recognize the Japanese text she quotes in the lyrics below?

Kokoku

I come very briefly to this place.
I watch it move. I watch it shake.

Kumowaku yamano. Watashino sakebi.
Watashino koewo. Ushano kokoku.
Watashiwa sokoni. Watashiwa asobu.

Mountain with clouds. A cry. My voice.
Home of the brave. I'm here now. And lost.
They say the dead will rise again. And here they come now.
Strange animals out of the Ice Age. And they stare at you.
Dumbfounded. Like big mistakes. And we say: Keep cool.
Maybe if we pretend this never happened, they'll all just go away.

Watashiwa sokoni. Watashiwa asobu.
Mewotoji. Mewotoji. Kikunowa kotori.
Watashino sakebi. Watashino koewo.

...

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Dylan Welch
Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 2:08
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Sure, one can use any formal restraint as a poetic game, as a challenge of sorts. But as challenges go, in haiku, the syllabic challenge (whatever pattern you might choose) is mighty superficial. Indeed, in my years of teaching haiku, I've seen that it's the easiest thing in the world for students of nearly all grade levels to count their pretty little syllables. Why brag about pulling on your underwear all by yourself when your hair is on fire? It's a trivial "discipline." And these same haiku, while hitting that trivial target --

again, an incorrect target in English -- are widely missing the more important targets. And most often, these proud 5-7-5ers are completely oblivious to those other targets -- ones that are actually more important. Why bother with arbirary constraints for haiku when there are far more serious, literary, challenging, and effective constraints that you miss in the process of focusing on 5-7-5?!?

It can be fun to write cinquains or iambic pentameter, or the recent "Fib"
form (counting syllables in subsequent lines to match the Fibonacci sequence).
But when it comes to haiku, writing 5-7-5 syllables in English isn't the same as following the prescribed syllables of cinquains or pentameter or Fibs.
That's because following 5-7-5 assumes a "correctness" for that pattern in English, which isn't accurate when it's really a borrowed form. Yes, sonnets are borrowed from Italian to English, but at least that's the same alphabet, so it's not fraught with the problems of translating from Japanese to English.
It's folly to translate the number (5-7-5) without thinking more deeply about what is being counted. Yet that is precisely what has happened that lead to the false conception of haiku being 5-7-5 syllables in English. Quite simply, when we apply that pattern to English syllables, we miss the boat. It's simplistic and naive.

A person can do whatever they like and call it haiku (Lord knows that's happened plenty enough). If you're having fun, knock yourself out. But if you're writing 5-7-5 haiku, it's best to be aware of how you're writing a poem that's markedly longer than what is expressed in a Japanese haiku (not all of which are 5-7-5, by the way). It's best to be aware that you're writing in a pattern that, for good reason, pretty much ALL of the leading haiku poets writing in English do not follow. It's best to be aware that writing 5-7-5 frequently creates artificial syntax and awkward line breaks purely for an unnecessary

constraint while more important strategies (also constraints) are completely missed. Indeed, most 5-7-5 haiku writers tend to be completely unaware of the other strategies necessary for traditional haiku, though perhaps that's a separate problem, although it's frequently caused by a belief that 5-7-5 is all there is to it. In any event, if one aims at seasonality and a two-part juxtapositional structure, and employs objective sensory imagery, you can let
the rest of form take care of itself (organically). But of course, there's more to it than that -- writing in the present tense, no titles, no rhyme, seldom any similes or metaphors, employing fragments rather than full sentences, employing allusion, and more. And perhaps the most important aspect of all -- implication. It's very hard to do well, to hint at something that the reader can figure out on his own, making a leap of understanding that's made possible because of your restraint as a poet, because you deliberately left something out. As I like to emphasize in haiku workshops, don't write about your emotion, write about what caused your emotion. Then, if you do it right, the reader can feel what you felt without your having to say so. But of course all of this is missed by those who think haiku is only a 5-7-5 syllable-counting

poetry trick. Some "challenge."

As I say in the title of one of my haiku lectures: "Haiku: It's Bigger Than You Think." Yet of course, it's also smaller than most English speakers think, too.

Michael

P.S. Nearly every serious haiku poet I know has had a progression in their haiku -- and I'm talking about many hundreds of leading haiku poets who I pay attention to, perhaps even thousands. They nearly all started out writing 5-7-5, as did I. And then they progressed to learning the more important aspects of the genre (and haiku is best thought of as a genre of poetry, of which "form" is just one aspect). At this point, nearly all of them stop writing in the 5-7-5 pattern. The few exceptions to this progression include those who went straight to avoiding 5-7-5 in the first place. But there are clear reasons for this progression. It's not that 5-7-5 is "abandoned." Rather, it is apprehended as something that was inappropriate in the first place, and causes

many problems in English. Higher targets are sought -- ones, in fact, that turn out to be far more challenging and require far more discipline. If 5-7-5 in English serves any useful purpose, it is purely as the first stepping-stone on a long path. But, alas, too many people, even otherwise accomplished poets, stop at just that first stepping stone with their haiku.

In a message dated 02-Feb-07 9:01:40 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 10:41:59 -0600
From: Joe Amato
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

While I think it's a good idea to understand that 5-7-5 is simply a convenience of sorts, even something of a mistranslation (even something of a cultural oversight), I feel about this pretty much the way I feel about bending any formal rule. I.e., it's fun to use 5-7-5 as an arbitrary constraint in composing haiku, just as it's fun to use 14 lines as an arbitrary constraint in composing sonnets. (Which latter might not result in 14 lines, ysee, but that won't keep me from calling it a sonnet.)

Granted, correcting the misconception is one thing. But having fun with same is quite another, which, to me, is one reason I write poetry.

↑ Index

181. Michael Heller
Room change. "Beckmann Meditations" at Birkbeck
Tue 6 Feb 2007

There has been a last minute room change for tomorrow night's event, February 7th, at Birkbeck College. The reading/lecture will be held at 43 Gordon Square, Room G01. Sorry for the inconvenience.

Yours,

Michael Heller

↑ Index

182. Elizabeth Switaj
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

On 2/6/07, Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote: "But really, one should understand that, unlike hobbyists, real artists have only the most contingent interest in following any rules they have not set for themselves."

Does that include the rule that artists shouldn't be interested in rules other people have made up?

Elizabeth Kate Switaj
www.critjournal.com

↑ Index

183. Rebecca Weaver
Midway URL
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Hello all--my apologies--the Midway address:

www.midwayjournal.com

↑ Index

184. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

---

hey hey, that's (really) my point -- this form(alism) is a starting place -- I try not to pay a whole lot of attention to "the rules," since you learn language best in the environment it is spoken -- and anyway one attractive characteristic of human language is its capacity for innovation, sometimes (or especially when) enacted by the less fluent among us...

how about stipulating that there's a form called American (or English-language) haiku, which is different from but as equally valid as the original, Japanese form? cf. American and European football (our "football" and "soccer," as it were)... or is this old ground we're treading?

snow light enough to sweep off your front steps, even though the wind-chill is sub-zero

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Barry Schwabsky
Sent: Tuesday, February 06, 2007 12:44
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Jeez. Can't we just decide that all contemporary haikus are "fake" and leave it at that?

Because to my mind that would be at least giving them the benefit of the doubt, since it is extremely unlikely that a "real" sonnet, a "real" dramatic monologue, a "real" epic, a "real" ode, or likewise a "real" haiku could also be a good poem. Only starting from the assumption that using any of this forms or genres is absurd, practically kitsch, is one likely to get anywhere with them.

There are societies of watercolor painters out there, according to whose members, probably, the works of any important contemporary artist who might produce a watercolor that you'd in the drawing dept. of MoMA or the Whitney are just obtuse efforts that show no sense of the rules of watercolor painting. But really, one should understand that, unlike hobbyists, real artists have only the most contingent interest in following any rules they have not set for themselves.

"Tom W. Lewis" <[redacted]> wrote:
I first became aware of the haiku form via an interview with Laurie Anderson in the early 80s... she claimed to have written "fake haikus" for her song Kokoku (the interview is archived here: http://www.archive.org/details/LaurieAndersonOTG)

at least she didn't claim they were "real" haikus -- does anyone recognize the Japanese text she quotes in the lyrics below?

Kokoku

I come very briefly to this place.
I watch it move. I watch it shake.

Kumowaku yamano. Watashino sakebi.
Watashino koewo. Ushano kokoku.
Watashiwa sokoni. Watashiwa asobu.

Mountain with clouds. A cry. My voice.
Home of the brave. I'm here now. And lost.
They say the dead will rise again. And here they come now.
Strange animals out of the Ice Age. And they stare at you.
Dumbfounded. Like big mistakes. And we say: Keep cool.
Maybe if we pretend this never happened, they'll all just go away.

Watashiwa sokoni. Watashiwa asobu.
Mewotoji. Mewotoji. Kikunowa kotori.
Watashino sakebi. Watashino koewo.

...

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Dylan Welch
Sent: Saturday, February 03, 2007 2:08
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Sure, one can use any formal restraint as a poetic game, as a challenge of sorts. But as challenges go, in haiku, the syllabic challenge (whatever pattern you might choose) is mighty superficial. Indeed, in my years of teaching

haiku, I've seen that it's the easiest thing in the world for students of nearly all grade levels to count their pretty little syllables. Why brag about pulling on your underwear all by yourself when your hair is on fire? It's a trivial "discipline." And these same haiku, while hitting that trivial target -- again, an incorrect target in English -- are widely missing the more important targets. And most often, these proud 5-7-5ers are completely oblivious to those other targets -- ones that are actually more important. Why bother with arbirary constraints for haiku when there are far more serious, literary, challenging, and effective constraints that you miss in the process of focusing on 5-7-5?!?

It can be fun to write cinquains or iambic pentameter, or the recent "Fib"
form (counting syllables in subsequent lines to match the Fibonacci sequence).
But when it comes to haiku, writing 5-7-5 syllables in English isn't the same as following the prescribed syllables of cinquains or pentameter or Fibs.
That's because following 5-7-5 assumes a "correctness" for that pattern in English, which isn't accurate when it's really a borrowed form. Yes, sonnets are borrowed from Italian to English, but at least that's the same alphabet, so it's not fraught with the problems of translating from Japanese to English.
It's folly to translate the number (5-7-5) without thinking more deeply about what is being counted. Yet that is precisely what has happened that lead to the false conception of haiku being 5-7-5 syllables in English. Quite simply,

when we apply that pattern to English syllables, we miss the boat. It's simplistic and naive.

A person can do whatever they like and call it haiku (Lord knows that's happened plenty enough). If you're having fun, knock yourself out. But if you're writing 5-7-5 haiku, it's best to be aware of how you're writing a poem that's markedly longer than what is expressed in a Japanese haiku (not all of which are 5-7-5, by the way). It's best to be aware that you're writing in a pattern that, for good reason, pretty much ALL of the leading haiku poets writing in English do not follow. It's best to be aware that writing 5-7-5 frequently creates artificial syntax and awkward line breaks purely for an unnecessary
constraint while more important strategies (also constraints) are completely missed. Indeed, most 5-7-5 haiku writers tend to be completely unaware of the other strategies necessary for traditional haiku, though perhaps that's a separate problem, although it's frequently caused by a belief that 5-7-5 is all there is to it. In any event, if one aims at seasonality and a two-part juxtapositional structure, and employs objective sensory imagery, you can let the rest of form take care of itself (organically). But of course, there's more to it than that -- writing in the present tense, no titles, no rhyme, seldom any similes or metaphors, employing fragments rather than full sentences, employing allusion, and more. And perhaps the most important aspect of all -- implication. It's very hard to do well, to hint at something that the reader can figure out on his own, making a leap of understanding that's made possible

because of your restraint as a poet, because you deliberately left something out. As I like to emphasize in haiku workshops, don't write about your emotion, write about what caused your emotion. Then, if you do it right, the reader can feel what you felt without your having to say so. But of course all of this is missed by those who think haiku is only a 5-7-5 syllable-counting poetry trick. Some "challenge."

As I say in the title of one of my haiku lectures: "Haiku: It's Bigger Than You Think." Yet of course, it's also smaller than most English speakers think, too.

Michael

P.S. Nearly every serious haiku poet I know has had a progression in their haiku -- and I'm talking about many hundreds of leading haiku poets who I pay attention to, perhaps even thousands. They nearly all started out writing 5-7-5, as did I. And then they progressed to learning the more important aspects of the genre (and haiku is best thought of as a genre of poetry, of which "form" is just one aspect). At this point, nearly all of them stop writing in the 5-7-5 pattern. The few exceptions to this progression include those who went straight to avoiding 5-7-5 in the first place. But there are clear reasons for this progression. It's not that 5-7-5 is "abandoned." Rather, it is apprehended as something that was inappropriate in the first place, and causes

many problems in English. Higher targets are sought -- ones, in fact, that turn out to be far more challenging and require far more discipline. If 5-7-5 in English serves any useful purpose, it is purely as the first stepping-stone on a long path. But, alas, too many people, even otherwise accomplished poets, stop at just that first stepping stone with their haiku.

In a message dated 02-Feb-07 9:01:40 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Fri, 2 Feb 2007 10:41:59 -0600
From: Joe Amato
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

While I think it's a good idea to understand that 5-7-5 is simply a convenience of sorts, even something of a mistranslation (even something of a cultural oversight), I feel about this pretty much the way I feel about bending any formal rule. I.e., it's fun to use 5-7-5 as an arbitrary constraint in composing haiku, just as it's fun to use 14 lines as an arbitrary constraint in composing sonnets. (Which latter might not result in 14 lines, ysee, but that won't keep me from calling it a sonnet.)

Granted, correcting the misconception is one thing. But having fun with same is quite another, which, to me, is one reason I write poetry.

↑ Index

185. Paul Nelson
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Tom W. Lewis said:

how about stipulating that there's a form called American (or English-language) haiku, which is different from but as equally valid as the original, Japanese form? cf. American and European football (our "football" and "soccer," as it were)... or is this old ground we're treading?

Allen Ginsberg created an American form of Haiku which he called "American Sentences." (See "Cosmopolitan Greetings.") They are 17 syllable sentences, preferably with a phenomenological slant.

I write at least one of these per day, have since Jan 1, 2001 and created a website to further awareness of the form.
http://www.americansentences.com

A few for your perusal:

02.03.01 - 12 vehicle crash northbound I-5 caused by slick roads & a rainbow.

02.06.01 - In right-wing Senator's office, framed picture of the Enola Gay.

02.09.01 - One small spat & you reconstruct front room into /bedroom-in-exile/.

02.08.02 - Next to condom dispenser is written: /This is the worst gum ever./

04.19.02 - Canada's flag half mast past the Peace Arch from our friendly fire.

04.20.02 - Behind END ISRAEL OCCUPATION rally, kosher hot dog stand.

06.22.02 - Man who sprays Round-Up on his lawn complains when my dog pisses on it.

4.09.03 - Maintenance man leaves a note says: ...can't fix your faucet its threads are striped.

11.22.03 - w/ serious faces they all wait outside the hospital & smoke.

3.09.04 -- It's a long swim to Cambodia from Hudson River Spalding Gray.

3.12.04 -- After the terror bombings cel phones ring next to corpses in Madrid.

3.14.05 -- Wanda Coleman told me she is praying /Bush gets a bad pretzel/.

3.17.05 -- /Mind if we use your fairway?/ they ask -- go ahead, we're not using it.

3.22.05 -- Explorer /Got Jesus / bumper sticker cuts me off -- I forgive her.

Paul Nelson

--
Paul E. Nelson
www.GlobalVoicesRadio.org
www.SPLAB.org
www.AmericanSentences.com
Slaughter, WA 98002
[redacted]
toll-free [redacted]

↑ Index

186. Eric Dickey
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Anybody know the song "Crazy Fingers" by Robert Hunter/Jerry Garcia?

http://www3.clearlight.com/~acsa/introjs.htm?/~acsa/songfile/CRAZYFIN.HTM

it's all haiku, some verses (stanzas) true to "form", some more so then others, if you know what I mean.

To me, this is American haiku at its best. Bucks the form, yet maintains gesture, impulse, intent with an element of the surreal. Perhaps Hunter and Ginsberg knew each other.

Midnight on a carousel ride
Reaching for the gold ring
Down inside

Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:
Tom W. Lewis said:

how about stipulating that there's a form called American (or English-language) haiku, which is different from but as equally valid as the original, Japanese form? cf. American and European football (our "football" and "soccer," as it were)... or is this old ground we're treading?

Allen Ginsberg created an American form of Haiku which he called "American Sentences." (See "Cosmopolitan Greetings.") They are 17 syllable sentences, preferably with a phenomenological slant.

I write at least one of these per day, have since Jan 1, 2001 and created a website to further awareness of the form.
http://www.americansentences.com

A few for your perusal:

02.03.01 - 12 vehicle crash northbound I-5 caused by slick roads & a rainbow.

02.06.01 - In right-wing Senator's office, framed picture of the Enola Gay.

02.09.01 - One small spat & you reconstruct front room into /bedroom-in-exile/.

02.08.02 - Next to condom dispenser is written: /This is the worst gum ever./

04.19.02 - Canada's flag half mast past the Peace Arch from our friendly fire.

04.20.02 - Behind END ISRAEL OCCUPATION rally, kosher hot dog stand.

06.22.02 - Man who sprays Round-Up on his lawn complains when my dog pisses on it.

4.09.03 - Maintenance man leaves a note says: ...can't fix your faucet its threads are striped.

11.22.03 - w/ serious faces they all wait outside the hospital & smoke.

3.09.04 -- It's a long swim to Cambodia from Hudson River Spalding Gray.

3.12.04 -- After the terror bombings cel phones ring next to corpses in Madrid.

3.14.05 -- Wanda Coleman told me she is praying /Bush gets a bad pretzel/.

3.17.05 -- /Mind if we use your fairway?/ they ask -- go ahead, we're not using it.

3.22.05 -- Explorer /Got Jesus / bumper sticker cuts me off -- I forgive her.

Paul Nelson

--
Paul E. Nelson
www.GlobalVoicesRadio.org
www.SPLAB.org
www.AmericanSentences.com
Slaughter, WA 98002
[redacted]
toll-free [redacted]

The fish are biting.
Get more visitors on your site using Yahoo! Search Marketing.

↑ Index

187. George Bowering
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Ooops!

On 6-Feb-07, at 2:10 AM, Barry Schwabsky wrote:

> Finnegans Wake has an apostrophe?
>
> George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote: > having >> lived in cork and donegal for years and hung out with musicians and >> shanakee (sorry, i know that's not the spelling), finnegans wake
>> doesn't >> make sense any other way to me.
>
> Finnegan's Wake hung out in Cork?
>
>
George Harry Bowering
Can't find his Speedo

↑ Index

188. Tim Peterson
QUEERING LANGUAGE READING, Sat Feb 10th at the BPC, 8 PM
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Join us for a poetry reading to celebrate the publication of the forthcoming

EOAGH Issue 3: Queering Language

(journal edited by CA Conrad, kari edwards, Paul Foster Johnson, Erica Kaufman, Jack Kimball, Tim Peterson, and Stacy Szymaszek, featuring over 100 writers including some rare surprises)

Event hosted by Tim Peterson & Nathaniel Siegel

Featuring readings by Jen Benka, Mark Bibbins, Julian Brolaski, Regie Cabico, David Cameron, Abigail Child, Jen Coleman, Allison Cobb, Marcella Durand reading Nicole Brossard, Joe Elliot, Corrine Fitzpatrick, E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, Jeffrey Jullich, Amy King, Bill Kushner, Rachel Levitsky, Ben Malkin, Filip Marinovich, Eileen Myles, Martha Oatis, Akilah Oliver, Austin Publicover, and Christina Strong

Saturday February 10th, 2007
8pm-10pm

@ The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery (@ Bowery & Bleecker)

http://www.bowerypoetry.com

Admission $5.00

Proceeds will go to a charitable fund established in the memory of kari edwards.

↑ Index

189. Don Summerhayes
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Try reading Roland Barthes, especially 'The Pleasure of the Text/' and 'Barthes by Barthes'. Not only is he a beautiful writer, but he does not pontificate or obfuscate or mystify. Poets are always aware that their words have more than one or two kinds of identity or function (pun, rhyme, say) as well as being signs, and that assigning meaning is always a matter of overriding complexities.

On 5-Feb-07, at 9:23 AM, Alan Sondheim wrote:

> I'm not sure about the "if/then" - that implies process; there's also the "if then else" formulation which works here - if A then not A^B else ??

- and process involves temporality; the "if" also seems itself to be on the verge or hinge. It might be the difference between temporality and a state-of-affairs, although both can be considered potentials..

I don't know if you're familiar with Spencer Brown's Laws of Form - he makes a similar jump between states-of-affairs and temporality (involving if I remember imaginary quantities) - which again I'm not sure of. But he starts I think by describing "making a distinction" which is already a process...

- Alan

On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:

I have to concentrate on Tocqueville but before I do:

when I read your description of what neither A nor B means I think you're on the verge of switching logical categories from those that stem from forms of division into forms of equation - 'either/or' for 'if/then.' The vertical bar you use, "A/A", seems to bespeak a detachment within self-identity that had begun in disjunction.

It's that connection that I find interesting, narcissistically and perhaps narratologically speaking. I'm thinking about how to answer that more fully.

Chris
(Please show me where I've been especially obtuse with your demonstration.)

Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:

I'm not sure this will go through. The two functions are duals of each other and both can be used as the 'basis' of propositional logic; in other words, everything in propositional logic can be derived from

either of these. For example if you have | for "neither A nor B" then A|A is simply
"not A" and this also holds for "not both A and B."

And yes, grouping and distribution; they're both "kinds" of expulsion -
A|B simply implies either the null set or "anywhere but here - elsewhere"
- depending on whether A and B are complements, and "not both A and B" implies both possibly elsewhere and that "veering" - one or the other possibly, or neither, anything but the intersection.

I haven't thought of Derrida in terms of narrative - can you say more about this?

Thanks, Alan

On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:

Hey Alan, that sounds really interesting:

"Sheffer stroke (not both A and
B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.)."

How did you parse out the embedded 'or' and its negations? These two choices
look identical (which is why you mention the significance of 'always already'.)

Second glance shows a countermotion: one towards grouping ('not both') and
the other towards distribution (neither/nor).

...

*I find Derrida's writing to be a rich reserve of information from which a 'routine' has been lately abstracted. For example, essays in Writing and Difference teach us something about Raymond Rousset's 'ultrastructuralist' imagination and how this affected his criticism of Corneille. "Force and Signification" is, on this level, a thematic reading of Rousset's "Form and Signification". "Violence and Metaphysics" is a philosophical biography of Emmanuel Levinas as he grapples with Husserl and Heidegger. We learn something about Totality and Infinity. These basic stories get lost in the drift.*

Chris
Chris

Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:

I'm not sure that this will go through.

Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of locating subtexts; it relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it treats the text as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies (in the sense that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great importance - and thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency of the surface). Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on deconstruction (not mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer stroke (not both A and B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of the shapes of the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns (feminism, the phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of all the simple logic involved, and second, its actual process of construction, its history, and so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it might be considered - is in using the (logical) formation to consider issues of origination, the 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the standpoint of this 'veering.'

Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a text - not in the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense of implicit within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends elsewhere, that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did a Kristevan analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along these lines.) So that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is open, might seem a barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a relation to Zen I think).

All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down - since it's neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a discourse which has always already continued and continues to continue, a discourse of humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but which nonetheless carries a very real political component, activist as well.

- Alan

==========
=====
Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel [redacted].
Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email: [redacted].
http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, > performance,

> dvds, etc.
> ==========
>
> ==========
> ===
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel
> [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email:
> [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also
> check
> WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, > performance,
> dvds, etc.
> ==========
>
> ==========
> =
> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel
> [redacted].
> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email:
> [redacted].
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also check > WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, > performance,
> dvds, etc.
> ==========

↑ Index

190. Gwyn McVay
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Eric,

The chorus to the Hunter/Garcia song "Ripple" is a haiku as well:

Ripple in still water
where there is no pebble tossed
nor wind to blow

http://arts.ucsc.edu/gdead/agdl/ripple.html

Since the Grateful Dead and Allen Ginsberg were both acts at the Human Be-In, and the overlap between Beat-ness and the Merry Pranksters was Neal Cassady, it's not completely improbable that Hunter and Ginsberg at least met.

Gwyn

Eric Dickey wrote:

Anybody know the song "Crazy Fingers" by Robert Hunter/Jerry Garcia?

http://www3.clearlight.com/~acsa/introjs.htm?/~acsa/songfile/CRAZYFIN.HTM

it's all haiku, some verses (stanzas) true to "form", some more so then others, if you know what I mean.

To me, this is American haiku at its best. Bucks the form, yet maintains gesture, impulse, intent with an element of the surreal. Perhaps Hunter and Ginsberg knew each other.

Midnight on a carousel ride
Reaching for the gold ring
Down inside

↑ Index

191. Jesse Crockett
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Death Haiku

Springs in the water
beside the passenger train
impervious all

the buildings are grey for to remember Portsmouth
finding no flowers

certainly without
the mechanisms ignite
flared by the dark spots

Jesse Crockett

Gwyn McVay wrote:
> Eric,
>
> The chorus to the Hunter/Garcia song "Ripple" is a haiku as well:
>
> Ripple in still water
> where there is no pebble tossed
> nor wind to blow
>
> http://arts.ucsc.edu/gdead/agdl/ripple.html
>
> Since the Grateful Dead and Allen Ginsberg were both acts at the Human
> Be-In, and the overlap between Beat-ness and the Merry Pranksters was Neal > Cassady, it's not completely improbable that Hunter and Ginsberg at least > met.
>
> Gwyn
>
>
> Eric Dickey wrote:
>
> Anybody know the song "Crazy Fingers" by Robert Hunter/Jerry Garcia?
>
>
http://www3.clearlight.com/~acsa/introjs.htm?/~acsa/songfile/CRAZYFIN.HTM
>
> it's all haiku, some verses (stanzas) true to "form", some more so then > others, if you know what I mean.
>
> To me, this is American haiku at its best. Bucks the form, yet > maintains gesture, impulse, intent with an element of the surreal.
> Perhaps Hunter and Ginsberg knew each other.
>
> Midnight on a carousel ride

> Reaching for the gold ring
> Down inside
>

↑ Index

192. Jesse Crockett
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Sprigs

Jesse Crockett wrote:
> Death Haiku
>
>
> Springs in the water
> beside the passenger train
> impervious all
>
> the buildings are grey
> for to remember Portsmouth
> finding no flowers
>
> certainly without
> the mechanisms ignite
> flared by the dark spots
>
>
>
> Jesse Crockett
>
>
>
> Gwyn McVay wrote:
>> Eric,
>>
>> The chorus to the Hunter/Garcia song "Ripple" is a haiku as well:
>>
>> Ripple in still water
>> where there is no pebble tossed
>> nor wind to blow
>>
>> http://arts.ucsc.edu/gdead/agdl/ripple.html

>>
>> Since the Grateful Dead and Allen Ginsberg were both acts at the Human
>> Be-In, and the overlap between Beat-ness and the Merry Pranksters was >> Neal
>> Cassady, it's not completely improbable that Hunter and Ginsberg at >> least
>> met.
>>
>> Gwyn
>>
>>
>> Eric Dickey wrote:
>>
>> Anybody know the song "Crazy Fingers" by Robert Hunter/Jerry Garcia?
>>
>>
>>
http://www3.clearlight.com/~acsa/introjs.htm?/~acsa/songfile/CRAZYFIN.HTM
>>
>>
>> it's all haiku, some verses (stanzas) true to "form", some more so
>> then
>> others, if you know what I mean.
>>
>> To me, this is American haiku at its best. Bucks the form, yet >> maintains gesture, impulse, intent with an element of the surreal.
>> Perhaps Hunter and Ginsberg knew each other.
>>
>> Midnight on a carousel ride
>> Reaching for the gold ring
>> Down inside
>>

↑ Index

193. Jim Andrews
new work from Turkey by Ozcan Turkmen
Tue 6 Feb 2007

I received an email (below) today from Turkey, from Ozcan Turkmen, letting me know that he has a site up of digital poems. This is an astonishing event, to me, to visit a site by a fellow digital poet in Turkey, and would like to share it with you.

It is vey unusual work, I think. If you refresh http://www.workmanofchild.com repeatedly, you see different pictures from the place Ozcan Turkmen was born: a prisoner of war camp in Germany from WWII. He now lives in Istanbul.

These are works of experimental digital poetry. "Entropic Poetry" (done in Java) finds/creates human meaning around Shannon's notion of entropy. This is a conceptual poem involving programming, the visual, and an essay on the concept. "The Story of a Line" (done in Flash) traces human growth through the consciousness of a geometric figure. "Loopy" looks at the relation of iteration/the loop to our own existence; "Pornography" seeks some understanding of what it is.

I note that the full-site menu in the English section of the site is considerably shorter than the Turkish section of the site, understandably.

It is really encouraging to see a site of this nature. Part of what many of us treasure is the idea of a Net of art that aspires to international solidarity in the creation of literary bodies of work that can swim in the brine of the binary and communicate across many borders. Many thanks to Ozcan for this moving, intelligent work from Istanbul.

ja

****

Merhaba,

Kisisel web sitem olan www.workmanofchild.com adresinde toplamaya calistigim yazilarimi sizinle paylasmak istedim. Umarim, aramizdaki iletisimi guclendirir bu. Sevgiler...

Hi,

I'd like to inform you about my new site : www.workmanofchild.com . I hope that it will strengthen the relation among us.
My greetings,
Ozcan Turkmen

↑ Index

194. Marcus Bales

February 10 - 24 • Opening Reception Saturday February 10, 6 - 9 pm for Greg Terepka: Bold Intentions Show

Tue 6 Feb 2007

February 10 - 24 – opening reception saturday february 10, 6 - 9 pm for greg terepka: Bold Intentions Show

Gallery 324
The Galleria at Erieview
1301 East 9th Street
Cleveland, Ohio 44114

Show Hours: 10 am – 5 pm weekdays
10 am – 2 pm Saturdays

February 10 – 24, 2007. Opening Reception Saturday, February 10, 6-9 pm.

For more information:
Marcus Bales
216/[redacted]
[redacted]

Twenty-two flowers individually pose and glow in a transcendent light that highlights their forms, voluptuous and sinuous and vivid. No, nothing like Georgia O´Keefe - these images capture the long line of the forms. Terepka photographs flowers as if they were sheathed in long dresses and white gloves, standing looking back over their bared shoulders at something surprisingly interesting.

If you'd like to be removed from this email list, please REPLY to this message to:
[redacted]
and ask to be removed in the text of your message.

↑ Index

195. Deborah Poe
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Tue 6 Feb 2007

My apologies if someone has mentioned...The most recent Minnesota Review has an interview with William V. Spanos--interesting connections with this discussion/thread. D-

----- Original Message -----
From: Don Summerhayes <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, February 6, 2007 3:52 pm
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
To: [redacted]

> Try reading Roland Barthes, especially 'The Pleasure of the Text/' > and 'Barthes by Barthes'. Not only is he a beautiful writer, but > he > does not pontificate or obfuscate or mystify. Poets are always > aware > that their words have more than one or two kinds of identity or > function (pun, rhyme, say) as well as being signs, and that > assigning
>

> meaning is always a matter of overriding complexities.
>
>
>
> On 5-Feb-07, at 9:23 AM, Alan Sondheim wrote:
>
> > I'm not sure about the "if/then" - that implies process; there's
>
> > also the "if then else" formulation which works here - if A then
>
> > not A^B else ??
> > - and process involves temporality; the "if" also seems itself
> to > > be on the verge or hinge. It might be the difference between > > temporality and a state-of-affairs, although both can be > considered
> > potentials..
> >
> > I don't know if you're familiar with Spencer Brown's Laws of > Form -
> > he makes a similar jump between states-of-affairs and > temporality
> > (involving if I remember imaginary quantities) - which again I'm > > not sure of. But he starts I think by describing "making a > > distinction" which is already a process...
>
> >
> > - Alan
> >
> >
> > On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:
> >
> >> I have to concentrate on Tocqueville but before I do:
> >>
> >> when I read your description of what neither A nor B means I > think
> >> you're on the > >> verge of switching logical categories from those that stem from

>
> >> forms of > >> division into forms of equation - 'either/or' for 'if/then.'
> The
> >> vertical bar
> >> you use, "A/A", seems to bespeak a detachment within self-> identity
> >> that had > >> begun in disjunction.
> >>
> >> It's that connection that I find interesting, narcissistically
> and > >> perhaps > >> narratologically speaking. I'm thinking about how to answer > that > >> more fully.
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Chris
> >> (Please show me where I've been especially obtuse with your > >> demonstration.)
> >>
> >> Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:
> >>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> I'm not sure this will go through. The two functions are duals
> of > >>> each > >>> other and both can be used as the 'basis' of propositional > logic;
> >>> in other > >>> words, everything in propositional logic can be derived from
> >>> either of > >>> these. For example if you have | for "neither A nor B" then
> A|A
> >>> is simply
> >>> "not A" and this also holds for "not both A and B."
> >>>
> >>> And yes, grouping and distribution; they're both "kinds" of > >>> expulsion -

> >>> A|B simply implies either the null set or "anywhere but here -
>
> >>> elsewhere"
> >>> - depending on whether A and B are complements, and "not both
> A
> >>> and B" > >>> implies both possibly elsewhere and that "veering" - one or
> the > >>> other
> >>> possibly, or neither, anything but the intersection.
> >>>
> >>> I haven't thought of Derrida in terms of narrative - can you > say > >>> more
> >>> about this?
> >>>
> >>> Thanks, Alan
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:
> >>>
> >>>> Hey Alan, that sounds really interesting:
> >>>>
> >>>> "Sheffer stroke (not both A and
> >>>> B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of
> the > >>>> shapes of
> >>>> the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns > (feminism, the > >>>> phallic, expulsion, etc.)."
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>> How did you parse out the embedded 'or' and its negations?
> These
> >>>> two > >>> choices
> >>>> look identical (which is why you mention the significance of > >>>> 'always > >>> already'.)
> >>>>
> >>>> Second glance shows a countermotion: one towards grouping

> ('not > >>>> both') and
> >>> the
> >>>> other towards distribution (neither/nor).
> >>>>
> >>>> ...
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>> I find Derrida's writing to be a rich reserve of information > >>>> from which a
> >>>> 'routine' has been lately abstracted. For example, essays in > >>>> Writing and > >>>> Difference teach us something about Raymond Rousset's
> >>>> 'ultrastructuralist'
> >>>> imagination and how this affected his criticism of Corneille.
>
> >>>> "Force and > >>>> Signification" is, on this level, a thematic reading of > >>>> Rousset's "Form and > >>>> Signification". "Violence and Metaphysics" is a philosophical
>
> >>>> biography of
> >>>> Emmanuel Levinas as he grapples with Husserl and Heidegger.
> We
> >>>> learn > >>> something > >>>> about Totality and Infinity. These basic stories get lost
> in
> >>>> the drift.
> >>>>
> >>>> Chris
> >>>> Chris
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>> Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:
> >>>>
> >>>>> I'm not sure that this will go through.
> >>>>>

> >>>>> Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a means of > locating
> >>>>> subtexts; it > >>>>> relates on one hand to new criticism (in the sense that it > >>>>> treats the text
> >>>>> as a messy entirety) and on the other to cultural studies > (in > >>>>> the sense > >>>>> that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes are of great > >>>>> importance - and > >>>>> thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent transparency of
> the > >>>>> surface).
> >>>>> Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a course on > >>>>> deconstruction (not > >>>>> mine); it was on the difference between the Sheffer stroke > (not > >>>>> both A and
> >>>>> B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of the history of
>
> >>>>> the shapes of
> >>>>> the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical concerns > (feminism,
> >>>>> the > >>>>> phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first of all the > simple
> >>>>> logic
> >>>>> involved, and second, its actual process of construction,
> its > >>>>> history, and > >>>>> so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it might be considered -
>
> >>>>> is in using > >>>>> the (logical) formation to consider issues of origination, the > >>>>> 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the standpoint of this
> 'veering.'>>>>>
> >>>>> Deconstruction also references the metaphysics underlying a > >>>>> text - not in > >>>>> the sense again of _sub_ text - but underlying in the sense
> of > >>>>> implicit > >>>>> within it, incoherent within it, the slight edge that tends

> >>>>> elsewhere,
> >>>>> that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, years ago I did
> a > >>>>> Kristevan
> >>>>> analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the Hebrew) along > these > >>>>> lines.) So > >>>>> that what might seem a barrier, is open, and what is open,
> >>>>> might seem a > >>>>> barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, there's a > relation > >>>>> to Zen I > >>>>> think).
> >>>>>
> >>>>> All of that said, it's difficult to pin the process down -
> >>>>> since it's > >>>>> neither process or product; I think of it, like glas, as a > >>>>> discourse which > >>>>> has always already continued and continues to continue, a > >>>>> discourse of > >>>>> humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, absolute - but > which>>>>> nonetheless carries a very real political component, > activist
> >>>>> as well.
> >>>>>
> >>>>> - Alan
> >>>>>
> >>>>>
> >>>>>
>
==========
==========
> >>>>> =====
> >>>>> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel
> >>>>> [redacted].
> >>>>> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email:
> >>>>> [redacted].
> >>>>> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory;
> >>>>> also check
> >>>>> WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, > >>>>> performance,
> >>>>> dvds, etc.

> >>>>>
==========
==========
> >>>>>
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
>
==========
==========
> >>> ===
> >>> Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel
> >>> [redacted].
> >>> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email:
> >>> [redacted].
> >>> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory;
> also
> >>> check
> >>> WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds, > >>> performance,
> >>> dvds, etc.
> >>>
==========
==========
> >>>
> >>>
> >>
> >>
> >
> >
> >
>
==========
==========
> > =
> > Work on YouTube, blog at http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel
> > [redacted].
> > Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org . Email:
> > [redacted].
> > http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for theory; also > check> WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info on books, cds,

>
> > performance,
> > dvds, etc.
> >
==========
>

↑ Index

196. Anselm Berrigan

Fwd: looking for a place for a poet to crash in NYC

Tue 6 Feb 2007

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, 5 Feb 2007 4:33 PM
Subject: looking for a place for a poet to crash in NYC

Dear folks,Â
Â
The poet Stephen Rodefer is coming to New York City from Feb. 13-25, and looking for places to stay.Â
Â
Heâ€™s reading at the Poetry Project on the 14th, and has a show of paintings at the Bowery Poetry Club happening as well.Â
Â
if anyone knows of an open apartment or room in town, heâ€™d appreciate being contacted. Thanks, in advance, for any help.Â
Â
His e-mail is: [redacted]Â
Â
Â
Anselm BerriganÂ

_____Â

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.Â

_____ Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

197. St. Thomasino
Haiku Death Match / Molotov's Sister
Tue 6 Feb 2007

.·.·.·.·.·

Molotov’s Sister

A blonde bomber, she smokes filterless, plays upright bass & writes haiku

http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/2006/04/gregory-vincent-st-thomasino- six-haiku.html

gregory vincent st. thomasino

http://eratio.blogspot.com/

http://thepostmodernromantic.blogspot.com/

"To the simple-minded, everyone is simple-minded.
This movie was shot on cell-phone video.
It is the footage of the head of Jacques Derrida on the body of the Bigfoot.
I took the Vespa, because I want to have her arms around me always."

.·.·.·.·.·.·.·.·.·.·.·.·.·.·.·=

↑ Index

198. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

---

those are metarules, and everyone has to follow those.

/tongue firmly in cheek.

On Tue, 6 Feb 2007, Elizabeth Switaj wrote:

> On 2/6/07, Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote: "But really, one should understand that, unlike hobbyists, real artists have only the most contingent interest in following any rules they have not set for themselves."
>
> Does that include the rule that artists shouldn't be interested in rules

> other people have made up?
>
> Elizabeth Kate Switaj
> www.critjournal.com

↑ Index

199. Halvard Johnson
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

Sez whom?

Hal

"The secret of managing is to keep the guys who hate you away from the guys who are undecided."
--Casey Stengel

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Feb 6, 2007, at 6:37 PM, Jason Quackenbush wrote:

> those are metarules, and everyone has to follow those.
>
> /tongue firmly in cheek.
>
> On Tue, 6 Feb 2007, Elizabeth Switaj wrote:
>
> On 2/6/07, Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote:
> "But really,
> one should understand that, unlike hobbyists, real artists have only the > most contingent interest in following any rules they have not set for themselves."
>
> Does that include the rule that artists shouldn't be interested in rules
> other people have made up?

> Elizabeth Kate Switaj
> www.critjournal.com

↑ Index

200. Pam Grossman

Re: Boog City's Email List Dead, Please Resend Yr Name & Email

Tue 6 Feb 2007

---

wow, pain in the ass! i keep meaning to back up my address book--but am not sure how....? so i guess i mean i keep meaning to figure it out.

Pam Grossman
[redacted]

also--last year sometime, we had an exchange about a kurt cobainâ€“related poem of mine...i think you wanted to see it...and i never got it to you. i believe you are/were planning something for kurt's would-be 40th birthday. if you would like my poem to be involved, or might want it to be, please let me know. i really meant to send it around for publication, to try to time it to his birthday this year; but i didn't; i guess it's not too late for online journals, if i go that route.

all best, pam

-----Original Message-----
>From: "David A. Kirschenbaum" <[redacted]>
>Sent: Feb 6, 2007 1:32 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Boog City's Email List Dead, Please Resend Yr Name & Email
>
>hi all,
>
>my powerbook, keeper of all that is boog, recently died, and although >a good chunk of the data was recoverable (thank you tekserve) i did >lose my entire email address book. so if you were on the boog email >list, or just want to be, email me your full name and email >backchannel to [redacted]. (this especially holds true to new >yorkers, as i send out local emails that don't get posted on this here >list.)
>
>thanks and hope yre all swell.
>
>as ever,
>david

↑ Index

201. Ron Silliman

Silliman's Blog: one million visits later

Tue 6 Feb 2007

---

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

RECENT ITEMS

The role of spirituality
in a world that is no longer
god infested (more on Rae Armantrout’s
Next Life)

On reaching the 1,000,000
visit mark
on Silliman’s Blog

On Rae Armantrout’s
Next Life

On Molly Ivins

Pedro Almodovar’s
Volver

The Yam Yad brotherhood
(Robert Kelly’s May Day)

Kenny Goldsmith
Blogging for the Poetry Foundation

The ensemble film of globalization
(this year it’s Babel)

Experimental Forms
and Issues of Accessibility
(from Susanne Dyckman, Rusty Morrison,
Maxine Chernoff,
Paul Hoover
and Jaime Robles)

Critical malpractice
in The Nation

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

202. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Tue 6 Feb 2007

I may be wrong, and I'm surprised no one has not said anything to this effect, but a deconstructionist poem, well, would contain: nothing!

aj
--- Deborah Poe <[redacted]> wrote:

> My apologies if someone has mentioned...The most > recent Minnesota
> Review has an interview with William V.
> Spanos--interesting > connections with this discussion/thread. D-
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Don Summerhayes <[redacted]>
> Date: Tuesday, February 6, 2007 3:52 pm
> Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry
> To: [redacted]
>
> > Try reading Roland Barthes, especially 'The > Pleasure of the Text/'
> >
> > and 'Barthes by Barthes'. Not only is he a > beautiful writer, but > > he > > does not pontificate or obfuscate or mystify.
> Poets are always > > aware > > that their words have more than one or two kinds > of identity or > > function (pun, rhyme, say) as well as being signs, > and that
> > assigning > > meaning is always a matter of overriding > complexities.
> >

> >
> >
> > On 5-Feb-07, at 9:23 AM, Alan Sondheim wrote:
> >
> > > I'm not sure about the "if/then" - that implies > process; there's
> >
> > > also the "if then else" formulation which works > here - if A then
> >
> > > not A^B else ??
> > > - and process involves temporality; the "if"
> also seems itself
> > to > > > be on the verge or hinge. It might be the > difference between > > > temporality and a state-of-affairs, although > both can be > > considered
> > > potentials..
> > >
> > > I don't know if you're familiar with Spencer
> Brown's Laws of > > Form -
> > > he makes a similar jump between > states-of-affairs and > > temporality
> > > (involving if I remember imaginary quantities) - > which again I'm
> >
> > > not sure of. But he starts I think by describing > "making a > > > distinction" which is already a process...
> > >
> > > - Alan
> > >
> > >
> > > On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:
> > >
> > >> I have to concentrate on Tocqueville but before
> I do:
> > >>

> > >> when I read your description of what neither A > nor B means I > > think
> > >> you're on the > > >> verge of switching logical categories from > those that stem from
> >
> > >> forms of > > >> division into forms of equation - 'either/or'
> for 'if/then.'
> > The
> > >> vertical bar
> > >> you use, "A/A", seems to bespeak a detachment > within self-> > identity
> > >> that had > > >> begun in disjunction.
> > >>
> > >> It's that connection that I find interesting, > narcissistically
> > and
> > >> perhaps > > >> narratologically speaking. I'm thinking about > how to answer
> > that
> > >> more fully.
> > >>
> > >>
> > >>
> > >> Chris
> > >> (Please show me where I've been especially > obtuse with your > > >> demonstration.)
> > >>
> > >> Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:
> > >>
> > >>>
> > >>>
> > >>> I'm not sure this will go through. The two > functions are duals
> > of
> > >>> each > > >>> other and both can be used as the 'basis' of > propositional

> > logic;
> > >>> in other > > >>> words, everything in propositional logic can > be derived from > > >>> either of > > >>> these. For example if you have | for "neither
> A nor B" then
> > A|A
> > >>> is simply
> > >>> "not A" and this also holds for "not both A > and B."
> > >>>
> > >>> And yes, grouping and distribution; they're > both "kinds" of
> > >>> expulsion -
> > >>> A|B simply implies either the null set or > "anywhere but here -
> >
> > >>> elsewhere"
> > >>> - depending on whether A and B are > complements, and "not both
> > A
> > >>> and B"
> > >>> implies both possibly elsewhere and that > "veering" - one or
> > the
> > >>> other > > >>> possibly, or neither, anything but the > intersection.
> > >>>
> > >>> I haven't thought of Derrida in terms of > narrative - can you > > say
> > >>> more
> > >>> about this?
> > >>>
> > >>> Thanks, Alan
> > >>>
> > >>>
> > >>> On Mon, 5 Feb 2007, Chris Chapman wrote:

> > >>>
> > >>>> Hey Alan, that sounds really interesting:
> > >>>>
> > >>>> "Sheffer stroke (not both A and > > >>>> B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms of > the history of
> > the
> > >>>> shapes of
> > >>>> the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical
> concerns > > (feminism, the > > >>>> phallic, expulsion, etc.)."
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>> How did you parse out the embedded 'or' and > its negations?
> > These
> > >>>> two > > >>> choices
> > >>>> look identical (which is why you mention the > significance of
> > >>>> 'always > > >>> already'.)
> > >>>>
> > >>>> Second glance shows a countermotion: one > towards grouping
> > ('not > > >>>> both') and
> > >>> the
> > >>>> other towards distribution (neither/nor).
> > >>>>
> > >>>> ...
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>> I find Derrida's writing to be a rich reserve > of information
> > >>>> from which a
> > >>>> 'routine' has been lately abstracted. For > example, essays in > > >>>> Writing and > > >>>> Difference teach us something about Raymond > Rousset's

> > >>>> 'ultrastructuralist' > > >>>> imagination and how this affected his > criticism of Corneille.
> >
> > >>>> "Force and > > >>>> Signification" is, on this level, a thematic > reading of > > >>>> Rousset's "Form and > > >>>> Signification". "Violence and Metaphysics" is > a philosophical
> >
> > >>>> biography of > > >>>> Emmanuel Levinas as he grapples with Husserl > and Heidegger.
> > We
> > >>>> learn > > >>> something > > >>>> about Totality and Infinity. These basic > stories get lost
> > in
> > >>>> the drift.
> > >>>>
> > >>>> Chris
> > >>>> Chris
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>> Quoting Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>:
> > >>>>
> > >>>>> I'm not sure that this will go through.
> > >>>>>
> > >>>>> Anyway, deconstruction is not a method or a > means of > > locating
> > >>>>> subtexts; it > > >>>>> relates on one hand to new criticism (in the > sense that it
> > >>>>> treats the text
> > >>>>> as a messy entirety) and on the other to > cultural studies

> > (in > > >>>>> the sense
> > >>>>> that peripheral/diacritical symptoms/tropes > are of great > > >>>>> importance - and > > >>>>> thexe often subvert or disturb and apprent > transparency of
> > the
> > >>>>> surface).
> > >>>>> Years ago I wrote a paper that was used in a > course on > > >>>>> deconstruction (not > > >>>>> mine); it was on the difference between the > Sheffer stroke
> > (not > > >>>>> both A and
> > >>>>> B) and its dual (neither A nor B) in terms > of the history of
> >
> > >>>>> the shapes of
> > >>>>> the symbols in relation to psychoanalytical
> concerns > > (feminism,
> > >>>>> the > > >>>>> phallic, expulsion, etc.). So there's first > of all the > > simple
> > >>>>> logic
> > >>>>> involved, and second, its actual process of > construction,
> > its
> > >>>>> history, and > > >>>>> so forth. The 'subversion' - such as it > might be considered -
> >
> > >>>>> is in using > > >>>>> the (logical) formation to consider issues > of origination, the > > >>>>> 'primordial,' gender, etc., from the > standpoint of this
> > 'veering.'>>>>>

> > >>>>> Deconstruction also references the > metaphysics underlying a
> > >>>>> text - not in > > >>>>> the sense again of _sub_ text - but > underlying in the sense
> > of
> > >>>>> implicit > > >>>>> within it, incoherent within it, the slight > edge that tends
> > >>>>> elsewhere,
> > >>>>> that threatens to overturn the text. (Again, > years ago I did
> > a > > >>>>> Kristevan
> > >>>>> analysis of the '10 commandments' (in the > Hebrew) along > > these > > >>>>> lines.) So > > >>>>> that what might seem a barrier, is open, and > what is open,
> > >>>>> might seem a > > >>>>> barrier, the gate which isn't a gate (yes, > there's a
> > relation > > >>>>> to Zen I
> > >>>>> think).
> > >>>>>
> > >>>>> All of that said, it's difficult to pin the > process down -
> > >>>>> since it's > > >>>>> neither process or product; I think of it, > like glas, as a
> > >>>>> discourse which > > >>>>> has always already continued and continues > to continue, a > > >>>>> discourse of > > >>>>> humans which undercuts conclusion, totality, > absolute - but > > which>>>>> nonetheless carries a very real > political component,
> > activist
> > >>>>> as well.

> > >>>>>
> > >>>>> - Alan
> > >>>>>
> > >>>>>
> > >>>>>
> >
>
==========
>
> > >>>>> =====
> > >>>>> Work on YouTube, blog at > http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel
> > >>>>> [redacted].
> > >>>>> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org .
> Email:
> > >>>>> [redacted].
> > >>>>>
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for
> theory;
> > >>>>> also check
> > >>>>> WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info
> on books, cds,
> > >>>>> performance,
> > >>>>> dvds, etc.
> > >>>>>
>
==========
> > >>>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>
> > >>>
> > >>>
> >
>
==========
>
> > >>> ===
> > >>> Work on YouTube, blog at

> http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel
> > >>> [redacted].
> > >>> Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org .
> Email:
> > >>> [redacted].
> > >>>
> http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim for
> theory;
> > also
> > >>> check
> > >>> WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for info
> on books, cds,
> > >>> performance,
> > >>> dvds, etc.
> > >>>
>
==========
==========
> > >>>
> > >>>
> > >>
> > >>
> > >
> > >
> > >
> >
>
==========
==========
>
> > > =
> > > Work on YouTube, blog at > http://nikuko.blogspot.com . Tel
> > > [redacted].
> > > Webpage directory http://www.asondheim.org .
> Email:
> > > [redacted].
> > > http://clc.as.wvu.edu:8080/clc/Members/sondheim > for theory; also > > check> WVU Zwiki, Google for recent. Write for > info on books, cds,
> >

> > > performance,
> > > dvds, etc.
> > >
>
==========
==========
> >
>

_____
___ Bored stiff? Loosen up... Download and play hundreds of games for free on Yahoo! Games. http://games.yahoo.com/games/front

↑ Index

203. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: Haiku Death Match
Tue 6 Feb 2007

I always thought that western poets couldn't write haiku - regardless of its construct in so far as its understood by westerners - the syllable is a word, damn it - not so much a syllable, and I wonder, if that's the problem in the basic idea.

AJ
--- Gwyn McVay <[redacted]> wrote:

> Eric,
>
> The chorus to the Hunter/Garcia song "Ripple" is a > haiku as well:
>
> Ripple in still water
> where there is no pebble tossed
> nor wind to blow
>
> http://arts.ucsc.edu/gdead/agdl/ripple.html
>
> Since the Grateful Dead and Allen Ginsberg were both > acts at the Human
> Be-In, and the overlap between Beat-ness and the > Merry Pranksters was Neal
> Cassady, it's not completely improbable that Hunter > and Ginsberg at least

> met.
>
> Gwyn
>
>
> Eric Dickey wrote:
>
> Anybody know the song "Crazy Fingers" by Robert > Hunter/Jerry Garcia?
>
>
>
http://www3.clearlight.com/~acsa/introjs.htm?/~acsa/songfile/CRAZYFIN.HTM
>
> it's all haiku, some verses (stanzas) true to
> "form", some more so then > others, if you know what I mean.
>
> To me, this is American haiku at its best. Bucks > the form, yet > maintains gesture, impulse, intent with an element > of the surreal.
> Perhaps Hunter and Ginsberg knew each other.
>
> Midnight on a carousel ride
> Reaching for the gold ring
> Down inside
>

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with the Yahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.
http://tools.search.yahoo.com/shortcuts/#news

↑ Index

204. Michael Tod Edgerton

Re: QUEERING LANGUAGE READING, Sat Feb 10th at the BPC, 8 PM

Tue 6 Feb 2007

Hey, Tim, never heard back from you on this--should I assume you weren't able to use any of the pieces I sent for this issue?

Best,
Tod

Tim Peterson <[redacted]> wrote:
Join us for a poetry reading to celebrate the publication of the forthcoming

EOAGH Issue 3: Queering Language

(journal edited by CA Conrad, kari edwards, Paul Foster Johnson, Erica Kaufman, Jack Kimball, Tim Peterson, and Stacy Szymaszek, featuring over 100 writers including some rare surprises)

Event hosted by Tim Peterson & Nathaniel Siegel

Featuring readings by Jen Benka, Mark Bibbins, Julian Brolaski, Regie Cabico, David Cameron, Abigail Child, Jen Coleman, Allison Cobb, Marcella Durand reading Nicole Brossard, Joe Elliot, Corrine Fitzpatrick, E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, Jeffrey Jullich, Amy King, Bill Kushner, Rachel Levitsky, Ben Malkin, Filip Marinovich, Eileen Myles, Martha Oatis, Akilah Oliver, Austin Publicover, and Christina Strong

Saturday February 10th, 2007
8pm-10pm

@ The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery (@ Bowery & Bleecker)

http://www.bowerypoetry.com

Admission $5.00

Proceeds will go to a charitable fund established in the memory of kari edwards.

"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
- Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

8:00? 8:25? 8:40? Find a flick in no time
with theYahoo! Search movie showtime shortcut.

↑ Index

205. Michael Tod Edgerton

Ignore previous reply, it was for Tim Re: QUEERING LANGUAGE READING, Sat Feb 10th at the BPC, 8 PM

Tue 6 Feb 2007

Sorry, I'm exhausted...

Tim Peterson <[redacted]> wrote: Join us for a poetry reading to celebrate the publication of the forthcoming

EOAGH Issue 3: Queering Language

(journal edited by CA Conrad, kari edwards, Paul Foster Johnson, Erica Kaufman, Jack Kimball, Tim Peterson, and Stacy Szymaszek, featuring over 100 writers including some rare surprises)

Event hosted by Tim Peterson & Nathaniel Siegel

Featuring readings by Jen Benka, Mark Bibbins, Julian Brolaski, Regie Cabico, David Cameron, Abigail Child, Jen Coleman, Allison Cobb, Marcella Durand reading Nicole Brossard, Joe Elliot, Corrine Fitzpatrick, E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, Jeffrey Jullich, Amy King, Bill Kushner, Rachel Levitsky, Ben Malkin, Filip Marinovich, Eileen Myles, Martha Oatis, Akilah Oliver, Austin Publicover, and Christina Strong

Saturday February 10th, 2007
8pm-10pm

@ The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery (@ Bowery & Bleecker)

http://www.bowerypoetry.com

Admission $5.00

Proceeds will go to a charitable fund established in the memory of kari edwards.

"There's the mute probability of a reciprocal lack of understanding"
- Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

Don't pick lemons.
See all the new 2007 cars at Yahoo! Autos.

↑ Index

206. Nick Moudry
Call for translation submissions
Tue 6 Feb 2007

IDQuDQo=

↑ Index

207. Charlie Rossiter
haiku
Wed 7 Feb 2007

Do you really want to write haiku?

Well as a response to the last several postings on the topic let me simply say,,,,, sentences, quasi-sentences, cute observations, bits of irony etc DON'T MAKE IT

Please...read Gurga's book and practice in your notebooks and come back next year and show us what you have learned.

Folks, when you don't know you don't know and all the wishing in the world doesn't change that.

Of course if you want to write hallmark poems of any sort, haiku included, go for it...but really who wants to read that crap. I hope you don't and I don't either.

Thanks

Charlie

--
"Poetry is good for you and so is the blues."
Charlie said that.
www.poetrypoetry.com
where you hear poems read by poets who wrote them

www.myspace.com/avantretro (hear avantretro poems)

www.myspace.com/whiskeybucketbluesreview
hear Charlie & Henry sing the blues

www.myspace.com/jackthe71special
hear Jack's original blues, blues rock & roots

↑ Index

208. David Baratier
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Wed 7 Feb 2007

No, Finnegan's Wake has an apostrophe.

> Finnegans Wake has an apostrophe?
>
> Finnegan's Wake hung out in Cork?

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus, OH 43206
http://pavementsaw.org

↑ Index

209. Jesse Glass
The Voyage of the Argonauts--Experimental Music and Poetry
Wed 7 Feb 2007

Today the mail run rendered up a stunning set of six beautiful CD's, each one the product of of Ralph Lichtensteiger's genius. Yes, I use that term openly when I speak of this gentleman. If you haven't heard of him I suggest that you go to www.lichtensteiger.de to witness the range of his thought, and his incredible generosity as a teacher. He is constantly offering up new downloads of avant-garde music, new takes on philiosophers, new insights into, and applications of, the thought and praxis of John Cage, with whom he met and conversed. And now these CD's have arrived with their promise of a voyage. The story of Jason and the Argonauts, of course tells of the quest for the Golden Fleece--a journey that has long been regarded in the West as an alchemical allegory. Here are the titles of the CD's:

1 klangschiff
2 klangsschiff
3 the remains
4 specters
5 les heterotopies
6 departure

I am delighted to have a voice piece embedded in CD #6. So I myself have a seat among Jason's crew!

I haven't yet had a chance to take this aural voyage, but once I've embarked, I shall report back!

The CD set was pressed in a limited edition of 50. Price is 25 euros. Ralph Lichtensteiger is looking for collaborators for other projects. Several people from this list--including Alan Sondheim, Miekal And and Dan Weber-- have been featured. For more information, please contact Mr. Lichtensteiger via his website.

↑ Index

210. Joel Bettridge
Nathaniel Tarn on Thursday at Yale
Wed 7 Feb 2007

Please join us for a poetry reading by Nathaniel Tarn on Thursday, February 22nd, 2007, 4pm. This event is free and open to the public. For additional information about poetry at the Beinecke Library visit: http://beineckepoetry.wordpress.com/.

Poet, translator, anthropologist, and editor Nathaniel Tarn is the author of more than thirty volumes of poetry, essays, and translations, including a collection of his essays on poetics and anthropology, Views from the Weaving Mountain, and his recently published Selected Poems 1950-2000. Tarn founded and edited the Cape Editions series in England in the 1960s, publishers of Charles Olson, J.H. Prynne, Ted Berrigan, and others. He is the recipient of numerous awards including the Guinness prize, a Wenner Gren fellowship, a Commonwealth of Pennsylvania fellowship, and a Rockefeller Foundation fellowship. Until his retirement in 1985, Tarn was a professor in comparative literature at Rutgers.

For more information about and examples of Nathaniel Tarn’s work please visit:

http://jacketmagazine.com/28/hill-tarn.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/06/tarnpoem.html
http://www.poetrymagazines.org.uk/magazine/record.asp?id=2049
http://www.emilydickinson.org/titanic/material/tarn1.html
http://www.emilydickinson.org/titanic/material/tarn2.html

Nancy Kuhl
Associate Curator, The Yale Collection of American Literature
The Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library
Yale University
121 Wall Street
P.O. Box 208240
New Haven, CT 06520-8240
Phone: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]

No need to miss a message. Get email on-the-go
with Yahoo! Mail for Mobile. Get started.
http://mobile.yahoo.com/mail

↑ Index

211. Simon DeDeo

Re: deconstruction and poetry

Wed 7 Feb 2007

Finnegan's Wake is an apostrophe.

↑ Index

212. Alan Sondheim

waggle (new work - last of series)

Wed 7 Feb 2007

---

waggle

mr tumor goes to corner jumps off waggles jumps on bones rattler mr tumor says to mr ward you are a hollow bell mr ward you are a hollow bell

http://www.asondheim.org/corner.mov http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tBtvlrpWu0A YouTube (odd sound)

two soundworks (.mp4 sound) for earphones or large speakers
http://www.asondheim.org/tabla10.mp4
http://www.asondheim.org/tabla11.mp4

alan says how many mirrors are left i deconstruct mr tumor whose calling is mr ward now we are listening to deep music low nets very large instruments very long notes

↑ Index

213. Michael Dylan Welch
Re: Haiku Death Match
Wed 7 Feb 2007

First off, the word "haiku" is both singular and plural, like the word "deer," thus it's easy to sound uninformed if you say "haikus." Even Kerouac got it wrong. But no scholars or translators or serious haiku poets anywhere will say "haikus." In my experience in dealing with thousands of people over the last fifteen years in haiku education, every single person who ever said "haikus" was also fairly clueless as to what a haiku even was, whether in English or Japanese, and typically all they knew was the misguided notion of 5-7-5 syllables. That it's a misguided notion is terribly old news to those who study and write haiku with commitment. Yet here I am dredging it up because so few people have an real understanding of English-language haiku literature -- even among serious mainstream poetry circles. Though the spans of time are different, it's like knowing only Petrarch and having little idea that anyone tried writing sonnets in English.

Second, some Americans, out of deference to Japan, do consider their haiku to be "American haiku" (for example, Kerouac called some of his haiku-like creations "pops"; Ginsberg offered "American Sentences," although he also wanted them to be different from haiku, even in English; for 20+ years John Brandi and Steve Sanfield used to call the haiku they wrote "hoops"). Some Japanese feel that way about American haiku, too. But many don't. Some American haiku are deeply loved in Japan. I myself have been a guest in Japan of Shugyo Takaha, the president of one of Japan's three largest haiku organizations, and that surely would not happen if there were not some measure of interest and respect for what is being done in North America (I was vice president of the Haiku Society of America at the time of that particular visit to Japan). Haiku in America and Japan are going to be different, because the culture and languages are different. Yet they are also remarkably similar, employing techniques that CAN be transferred from one language to another, and the best poets are doing remarkably things with their haiku in English, even while sometmes casting an American slant to it (or Canadian, or British, or Irish, or Australian, etc.). This writing is approached very seriously. And like any kind of literature, there's all sorts of bad with the good, but in my personal library of about 4,000+ haiku books (nearly all in English, and this is only a fraction of haiku publications in the last century), I find much very accomplished poetry.

In 1991 I helped to found the Haiku North America conference, which has been held every two years since then (coming up this summer in Winston-Salem, North Carolina), and it's just one example of the serious study and criticism of English-language haiku. Many of the papers and presentations from the conference make it into print in journals such as Modern Haiku (published since 1969, folks -- not a spring chicken as poetry publications go) and the Haiku Society of America's Frogpond (published since 1978). These journals don't even need the help of the HNA conference -- they have plenty of other criticism and discussion from other sources, too. There are other respected haiku journals that have been around for a number of years. This is not "fake" haiku they are writing. Sure, like the content of any poetry journal, some of it is better than others. But take a look at Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology. There's some darn good stuff in there. And it's not by accident that it's now in its third edition. First edition was in 1974 from Doubleday, second edition in 1986 from Fireside, and the third edition, in hardback and paperback, in 1999 from W. W. Norton. That's just scratching the surface of the serious and literary haiku that has been written in this country for at least sixty or more years. Fake haiku? Sure, there's plenty of crap, but also much truly excellent work. Believe me, some of it runs circles around some of the crap that also gets written in Japan, too. Definitely, haiku in Japan has a hugely larger and lengthier history than does English-language haiku, but given that we only been at it for a hundred years (or more accurately, for most writers writing seriously today, about fifty years), what has been accomplished in a relatively short period is remarkable.

As for artists and the following of rules, I am reminded of Basho, who said "learn the rules and then forget them." This statement, in lesser minds, has been used to justify an ignorance of rules, or deliberate violation of the rules simply because one is lazy. What Basho really meant was to internalize the rules so well that you no longer have to think of them, the way a chess grand master no longer even thinks of stupid moves. It's a stage of unconscious competence. Haiku has plenty of wiggle room within its "rules," and I'm also reminded of Edith Shiffert, who has said that there really never were any rules in haiku, only fashions and trends. I'm not sure how accurate that is, but it's unwise of anyone not to be aware of the tradition, and what has gone on before -- which happens with incredible frequency, and has been demonstrated by some of the "haiku" posted to this list. Nearly all of these poems need serious surgery and exhibit a gross lack of understanding of haiku necessities -- not because they are merely "rules," but because they are effective strategies. These stategies are worth following because they work. If you see what the masters sought, as Basho also urged, I believe you'll see why it's worthwhile to adopt techniques such as the season word, two-part structure, and so on. It's one thing to write out of a position of knowledge (that's where the best innovation usually comes from), and quite another thing to write out of naivete, which so often happens when some people think they are being "innovative" (at least with haiku).

Michael

P.S. Did you know that there's a Museum of Haiku Literature in Tokyo (a multimillion-dollar facility)? And did you know it has a large library of English-language haiku, and this it sponsors awards for English-language haiku through the Haiku Society of America and with the British Haiku Society? Did you know that at an event called Haiku Chicago in 1995 (held jointly by the Haiku Society of America and the Haiku International Association of Japan), the Japanese delegations said that it was the Americans who were chiefly responsible for the internationalization of haiku, not Japan -- and this was thanks not only to cultural curiosity but to the efforts of the best poets writing haiku in English over the last century. Did you know that there's an American Haiku Archives at the Californis State Library in Sacramento? That there are numerous local organizations for haiku in North America? The haiku community is a rich one on this continent, and it is respected by Japanese haiku poets.

In a message dated 06-Feb-07 9:03:05 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Tue, 6 Feb 2007 18:43:40 +0000
From: Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Jeez. Can't we just decide that all contemporary haikus are "fake" and leave it at that?

Because to my mind that would be at least giving them the benefit of the doubt, since it is extremely unlikely that a "real" sonnet, a "real" dramatic monologue, a "real" epic, a "real" ode, or likewise a "real" haiku could also be a good poem. Only starting from the assumption that using any of this forms or genres is absurd, practically kitsch, is one likely to get anywhere with them.

There are societies of watercolor painters out there, according to whose members, probably, the works of any important contemporary artist who might produce a watercolor that you'd in the drawing dept. of MoMA or the Whitney are just obtuse efforts that show no sense of the rules of watercolor painting. But really, one should understand that, unlike hobbyists, real artists have only the most contingent interest in following any rules they have not set for themselves.

↑ Index

214. Michael Dylan Welch
Re: Haiku Death Match
Wed 7 Feb 2007

I wasn't aware of this song ("Crazy Fingers"), so I'm glad to know about it. However, this is a far cry from haiku at its best. It's not really haiku at all, not by ANY stretch. Not only does it hit only the superficial and wrong target of 5-7-5 syllables (apparently), but it completely misses pretty much all of the other targets, including ones more important than form. How can this be even haiku, let alone American haiku, let alone at its best? No disrespect, but such a claim strikes me as unfounded, probably even naive. Only if by "American haiku" you mean a "fake" haiku, then sure, whatever, it's grrrrrreat. But why wallow in cluelessness, for that is what it is, at least regarding serious literary haiku in English? (Of course, it may work perfectly well in other ways, but not as haiku.)

Meanwhile, Alexander Jorgensen wrote "I always thought that western poets couldn't write haiku - regardless of its construct in so far as its understood by westerners." I'm curious to know what poetry this statement is based on. I've heard that kind of statement often enough -- even from folks like Robert Bly (though he's softened his stance more recently) -- and 99 times out of a hundred, the person saying it has never read (or is even aware of) much of the basic literature in English-language haiku. There's so much pseudo-haiku out there, too, and that gives an even more cloudy view of haiku as written by Westerners. Honku and spam-ku and comptuer error message haiku and so on have nearly no understanding of haiku, and certainly nothing to do with literary haiku (even while they may be fun on their own terms). It's actually TRUE that many western poets can't write haiku, but that's because most of them think they just have to count out syllables. Quite simply, they can't write haiku because they've never properly studied it as a bona fide English-language genre of poetry -- not one that's distinct from Japanese haiku, but a serious literary genre that is informed by Japanese haiku and its literary history.

Michael

In a message dated 06-Feb-07 9:03:05 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Tue, 6 Feb 2007 11:45:13 -0800
From: Eric Dickey <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Anybody know the song "Crazy Fingers" by Robert Hunter/Jerry Garcia?

http://www3.clearlight.com/~acsa/introjs.htm?/~acsa/songfile/CRAZYFIN.HTM

it's all haiku, some verses (stanzas) true to "form", some more so then others, if you know what I mean.

To me, this is American haiku at its best. Bucks the form, yet maintains gesture, impulse, intent with an element of the surreal. Perhaps Hunter and Ginsberg knew each other.

Midnight on a carousel ride
Reaching for the gold ring
Down inside

↑ Index

215. Philip Metres

Poems of War and Peace, Redux and Apology

Wed 7 Feb 2007

Folks, I overreacted a bit to Cliff Doerksen's review of that reading; below (in the reader's comments) is my more measured response.

http://www.poetryfoundation.org/dispatches/dispatches.reading.html?id=179007

I'd like also to shout-out to Halvard Johnson and Michael Rothenberg for putting together "THE WAR PAPERS" for this current issue of BIG BRIDGE. It pushes into new areas of possibility.

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com

↑ Index

216. Camille Martin

Camille Martin and Bill Lavender read in Buffalo

Wed 7 Feb 2007

"A New Orleans Reunion"

UB Poetics Program event featuring readings
by Camille Martin and Bill Lavender

Friday, 8 p.m.
Big Orbit Gallery, 30 Essex St., Buffalo

Free

↑ Index

217. Tom W. Lewis
Re: deconstruction and poetry
Wed 7 Feb 2007

> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group On Behalf Of Simon DeDeo > Sent: Wednesday, February 07, 2007 0:30
>
> *Finnegan's Wake is an apostrophe.*

may be, but the title goes without: Finnegans Wake ...
http://www.leeds.ac.uk/library/adopt-a-book/pics/joyce_wake.jpg

here's the portion of the Wake containing "damn fairy ann," btw:

FW, p. 9, book 1 --

Shee, shee, shee! The jinnies is jillous agincourting all the lipoleums. And the lipoleums is gonn boycottoncrezy onto the one Willingdone. And the Willingdone git the band up. This is bode Belchum, bonnet to busby, breaking his secred word with a ball up his ear to the Willingdone. This is the Willingdone's hur- old dispitchback. Dispitch desployed on the regions rare of me Belchum. Salamangra! Ayi, ayi, ayi! Cherry jinnies. Figtreeyou! Damn fairy ann, Voutre. Willingdone. That was the first joke of Willingdone, tic for tac. Hee, hee, hee! This is me Belchum in his twelvemile cowchooks, weet, tweet and stampforth foremost, footing the camp for the jinnies. Drink a sip, drankasup, for he's as sooner buy a guinness than he'd stale store stout. This is Roo- shious balls. This is a ttrinch. This is mistletropes. This is Canon Futter with the popynose.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Robin Hamilton
Sent: Friday, February 02, 2007 15:43
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: deconstruction and poetry

<<
has anyone else in List-land tried reading Finnegans Wake with an Irish accent? you pick up on a lot of buried information if you try this -- it dawned on me reading one passage that "damn fairy ann" could be read as "donc fait rien" -- then the whole page morphed into a kind of Joycean French argot, before my eyes... and no, I was perfectly sober at the time.
...

tl
>>

Joyce's words above would seem to play on the British squaddies' surded French developed in WW1 -- "San fairy ann" for "ça ne fait rien".

see: http://www.worldwidewords.org/qa/qa-san1.htm

Robin Hamilton

↑ Index

218. Eric Dickey
Re: Haiku Death Match
Wed 7 Feb 2007

Michael,

fine, it's fake haiku at its best. In a footnote to Crazy Fingers in Robert Hunter's collection of songs, Box of Rain, he noted that his intent was haiku and that some verses of the song are closer than others.

Of course

Eric

Michael Dylan Welch <[redacted]> wrote:

I wasn't aware of this song ("Crazy Fingers"), so I'm glad to know about it. However, this is a far cry from haiku at its best. It's not really haiku at all, not by ANY stretch. Not only does it hit only the superficial and wrong target of 5-7-5 syllables (apparently), but it completely misses pretty much all of the other targets, including ones more important than form. How can this be even haiku, let alone American haiku, let alone at its best? No disrespect, but such a claim strikes me as unfounded, probably even naive. Only if by "American haiku" you mean a "fake" haiku, then sure, whatever, it's grrrrrreat. But why wallow in cluelessness, for that is what it is, at least regarding serious literary haiku in English? (Of course, it may work perfectly well in other ways, but not as haiku.)

Meanwhile, Alexander Jorgensen wrote "I always thought that western poets couldn't write haiku - regardless of its construct in so far as its understood by westerners." I'm curious to know what poetry this statement is based on. I've heard that kind of statement often enough -- even from folks like Robert Bly (though he's softened his stance more recently) -- and 99 times out of a hundred, the person saying it has never read (or is even aware of) much of the basic literature in English-language haiku. There's so much pseudo-haiku out there, too, and that gives an even more cloudy view of haiku as written by Westerners. Honku and spam-ku and comptuer error message haiku and so on have nearly no understanding of haiku, and certainly nothing to do with literary haiku (even while they may be fun on their own terms). It's actually TRUE that many western poets can't write haiku, but that's because most of them think they just have to count out syllables. Quite simply, they can't write haiku because they've never properly studied it as a bona fide English-language genre of poetry -- not one that's distinct from Japanese haiku, but a serious literary genre that is informed by Japanese haiku and its literary history.

Michael

In a message dated 06-Feb-07 9:03:05 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Tue, 6 Feb 2007 11:45:13 -0800
From: Eric Dickey
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Anybody know the song "Crazy Fingers" by Robert Hunter/Jerry Garcia?

http://www3.clearlight.com/~acsa/introjs.htm?/~acsa/songfile/CRAZYFIN.HTM

it's all haiku, some verses (stanzas) true to "form", some more so then others, if you know what I mean.

To me, this is American haiku at its best. Bucks the form, yet maintains gesture, impulse, intent with an element of the surreal. Perhaps Hunter and Ginsberg knew each other.

Midnight on a carousel ride
Reaching for the gold ring
Down inside

Don't get soaked. Take a quick peak at the forecast with theYahoo! Search weather shortcut.

↑ Index

219. Stephen Vincent
FW: blogging libby
Wed 7 Feb 2007

In case like me you are old enough to be getting retroactive Watergate Hearing thrills from the Libby trial, my friend, the musician/composer, Hal Hughes, sends this note with the invaluable links to the onsite bloggers and their streaming commentary etc. from the trial itself. One thing that appears most likely true the more the trial gets close to the whole truth of Cheney¹s orchestration of the outing of a CIA operative - is that the iron clad, so-called Vice President is no doubt off any need for laxitives!

It still astonishes me that the Democrats & Company have not gone ballistic over this Œouting¹ and demanded Cheney¹s resignation and arrest for putting Valerie Plame¹s CIA associates at risk of their own lives. (I know Monica L and Clinton threatened the survival of the Republic, etc, but...).

Stephen V

Subject: Fw: blogging libby

One of the interesting things about the Libby trial is that there are bloggers in attendance as well as "conventional" journalists. That means a more or less steady stream of commentary flowing instantly from the courtroom to whomever is interested. There have been a few posting on Huffington Post. I finally troubled to check out this blog today: http://firedoglake.com/. They have a fat file of articles under "CIA Leak" and "Libby Case", and I get the impression they'll be posting the evidence as it's released to the media - the same day it's introduced in court. That's pretty juicy stuff.

I have a feeling at least one veep is starting to squirm. However you feel about schadenfreude, I bet you'll pay attention if he has to testify under oath. Mr. Fitzgerald seems eminently qualified to extract some truth from under that sclerotic, malevolent facade. The "just gossip" and "I forget" defenses don't appear to be holding up very well.

I've been bugging y'all for a long time about this case, and the way it's unfolding has not lessened my sense that it could be the key to collapsing the whole Bushevik house of cards. Following this one thread leads to the entire web of deceit. (So do any number of others, but this one is IN COURT NOW. Congress can bluster and filibuster all it wants, and people can urge impeachment and wave "stop the war" signs, but criminal court is where these characters belong, and where they're most likely to get their comeuppance. Locking them up would send a healthy message to other politicians and to our former friends around the world.

HMH

↑ Index

220. Crane's Bill Books
Re: Haiku Death Match
Wed 7 Feb 2007

Didn't Shiki write forcefully about the hazards of mistaking the technique for the poetry--and didn't his own haiku stretch the rules to, but not beyond, the breaking point? I don't read Japanese, so I am characterizing Shiki from translations, and from what I've read about him in English. I'm curious, though: does anyone who does read Japanese think the syllable count (if that's the right way to put it) in haiku is really arbitrary, or might it have develop organically out of qualities in the language itself, the way blank verse is said to reflect rhythms natural to English? This thread has been really wonderful to read--thanks, everyone. J.A. Lee Crane's Bill Books

↑ Index

221. mIEKAL aND Fwd: Solicitation
Wed 7 Feb 2007

Send your responses directly to Clemente...

Begin forwarded message:

> From: Clemente Padín <[redacted]>
> Date: February 4, 2007 6:18:15 PM CST
> To: <[redacted]>
> Subject: [webartery] Sollicitation
> Reply-To: [redacted]
>
> Dear friends, a friend of mine, Prof. Susana Romano Sued (that is curator of an event on experimental poetry in Cordoba, Argentina, in next august 07) is travelling to New York and Los Angeles.
>
> She ask me for addresses and emails of poets and profesors academic in Letters and Litterature for to see and know about Norteamerican reality in this field.
>
> I gave her some emails. If you want to talk with her, please, write to Susana Romano Sued:
> [redacted]
>
> or write to me.
>
> Thanks in advance, fraternal greetings,

↑ Index

222. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: Haiku Death Match/HAIKU LIFE
Wed 7 Feb 2007

Many deep thanks to Michael Dylan Welch for his letters affirming the LIFE of American Haiku and providing so many insights and so much information. A few times before Haiku has been discussed (and dissed one might say a bit)-and so often concerning only the syllable counting as though distinguishing right foot from the left means one knows how to walk. A lot of what i know have learned from reading Japanese and American haiku is ways of awareness in the world--practicing different ways of seeing things, movements, colors and how their particualrs cab be continually framed and reframed within a very few words, not only to present juxtapostion, but in doing so to provide as Michael wrote, the data for making a leap inside the mind--opening into a whole other view of the "scenes" so to speak. Continually training the eye in finding particulars among all that is happening within an instant--the haiku a way of learning to see distinctly that which is hidden in plain sight by the too distracted superficial attention. Out of a mass of colors, forms, movements, exact notations of a particular moment in a specific time of year--emerge the particles in the ongoing flow which present paradoxes, contradcitions, things far apart suddenly brought close. A haiku is a form of documentary which "opens one's eyes"--and if one is so inclined, mind, heart, soul, physical awarenesses. The importance of the time element is to indicate not a stillness bu a cotinual process of change, in which the insatnt presented in the poem is taking part--a transitory movement from the no longer present of the moment before to the not yet present of the moment after. On the one hand the teeming chaos of the moment in its incredible profusion of details, on the other, the nothingness, unknowable--to see with clarity a continual becoming--out of chaos and nothingness, that which is. Hiaku have brought a continual daily work with seeing, hearing, moving--details within each instant--site/sight/cite--oscillations of an opening outwo/ards and a paring to the bare bones. Haiku bring not just forms of artistic or mystical "illuminations" as it were--also bring evidences cotinually of social contradictions, paradoxes all around one. To see the world from a crowded bus or within a very confined space--and find in them both a continual happening. Through barred windows to see everyday the same view yet to find moment by moment it is changing. I am just touching on a very small area of what study of Haiku can bring for writing, visual work, being alive. It's a form of disicpline one may practice at any time any where. Even in dreams it can happen. There is also the spirtual aspect of haiku as a Way. This can be found in a great many poets practising haiku as a method among spiritual disicplines. Pascal wrote: "it is not the elements which are new, but the order of their arrangement." To work with arrangements of course you have to continually discpline the unedrstanding of the elements, and i think Haiku teaches one in this, how to go about finding what the elements are at any moment. Time spent studying cracks in a wall can be an opening into the anarkeyological possibilities which are ever available. The famous text by Basho called "Learn from the Pine" is a great introduction to ways of working with Haiku as a discipline in living to find ways to see and hear and move. In this way, the making of the Haiku is like an instant between the profusion of reality and the nothingness. Through discipline "composition must occur in an instant." Robert Hass edited a great collection of Haiku and prose by Basho, Suson & Issa called The Essential Haiku--you can find "learn from the Pine" in there-- to show how hard it to write haiku--i wrote his in an instant from what seen outside the window you can see that i wil have to live a hundred years to make aven an average one but what i learn from reading others'--has helped change many ways of seeing for me and i am very thank ful to Haiku for this--

ghetto winter street
dope man, bible man, crack hos--
all call the crow "thief"

> From: Michael Dylan Welch <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match
> Date: Wed, 7 Feb 2007 03:58:24 EST
>
> First off, the word "haiku" is both singular and plural, like the word "deer," thus it's easy to sound uninformed if you say "haikus." Even Kerouac got it wrong. But no scholars or translators or serious haiku poets anywhere will say "haikus." In my experience in dealing with thousands of people over the last fifteen years in haiku education, every single person who ever said "haikus" was also fairly clueless as to what a haiku even was, whether in English or Japanese, and typically all they knew was the misguided notion of 5-7-5 syllables. That it's a misguided notion is terribly old news to those who study and write haiku with commitment. Yet here I am dredging it up because so few people have an real understanding of English-language haiku literature -- even among serious mainstream poetry circles. Though the spans of time are different, it's like knowing only Petrarch and having little idea that anyone tried writing sonnets in English.
>
> *Second, some Americans, out of deference to Japan, do consider their haiku to be "American haiku" (for example, Kerouac called some of his haiku-like creations "pops"; Ginsberg offered "American Sentences," although he also wanted them to be different from haiku, even in English; for 20+ years John Brandi and Steve Sanfield used to call the haiku they wrote "hoops"). Some Japanese feel that way about American haiku, too. But many don't. Some American haiku are deeply loved in Japan. I myself have been a guest in Japan of Shugyo*

*Takaha, the president of one of Japan's three largest haiku organizations, and that surely would not happen if there were not some measure of interest and respect for what is being done in North America (I was vice president of the Haiku Society of America at the time of that particular visit to Japan). Haiku in America and Japan are going to be different, because the culture and languages are different. Yet they are also remarkably similar, employing techniques that CAN be transferred from one language to another, and the best poets are doing remarkably things with their haiku in English, even while sometmes casting an American slant to it (or Canadian, or British, or Irish, or Australian, etc.). This writing is approached very seriously. And like any kind of literature, there's all sorts of bad with the good, but in my personal library of about 4,000+ haiku books (nearly all in English, and this is only a fraction of haiku publications in the last century), I find much very accomplished poetry.*

*In 1991 I helped to found the Haiku North America conference, which has been held every two years since then (coming up this summer in Winston-Salem, North Carolina), and it's just one example of the serious study and criticism of English-language haiku. Many of the papers and presentations from the conference make it into print in journals such as Modern Haiku (published since 1969, folks -- not a spring chicken as poetry publications go) and the Haiku Society of America's Frogpond (published since 1978). These journals don't even need the help of the HNA conference -- they have plenty of other criticism and discussion from other sources, too. There are other respected haiku journals that have been around for a number of years. This is not "fake" haiku they are writing. Sure, like the content of any poetry journal, some of it is better than others. But take a look at Cor van den Heuvel's The Haiku Anthology. There's some darn good stuff in there. And it's not by accident that it's now in its third edition. First edition was in 1974 from Doubleday, second edition in 1986 from Fireside, and the third edition, in hardback and paperback, in 1999 from W. W. Norton. That's just scratching the surface of the serious and literary haiku that has been written in this country for at least*

sixty or more years. Fake haiku? Sure, there's plenty of crap, but also much truly excellent work. Believe me, some of it runs circles around some of the crap that also gets written in Japan, too. Definitely, haiku in Japan has a hugely larger and lengthier history than does English-language haiku, but given that we only been at it for a hundred years (or more accurately, for most writers writing seriously today, about fifty years), what has been accomplished in a relatively short period is remarkable.

*As for artists and the following of rules, I am reminded of Basho, who said
"learn the rules and then forget them." This statement, in lesser minds, has been used to justify an ignorance of rules, or deliberate violation of the rules simply because one is lazy. What Basho really meant was to internalize the rules so well that you no longer have to think of them, the way a chess grand master no longer even thinks of stupid moves. It's a stage of unconscious competence. Haiku has plenty of wiggle room within its "rules," and I'm also reminded of Edith Shiffert, who has said that there really never were any rules in haiku, only fashions and trends. I'm not sure how accurate that is, but it's unwise of anyone not to be aware of the tradition, and what has gone on before -- which happens with incredible frequency, and has been demonstrated by some of the "haiku" posted to this list. Nearly all of these poems need serious surgery and exhibit a gross lack of understanding of haiku necessities
-- not because they are merely "rules," but because they are effective strategies. These stategies are worth following because they work. If you see what the masters sought, as Basho also urged, I believe you'll see why it's worthwhile to adopt techniques such as the season word, two-part structure, and so on. It's one thing to write out of a position of knowledge (that's where the best innovation usually comes from), and quite another thing to write out of naivete, which so often happens when some people think they are being*

"innovative" (at least with haiku).

Michael

P.S. Did you know that there's a Museum of Haiku Literature in Tokyo (a multimillion-dollar facility)? And did you know it has a large library of English-language haiku, and this it sponsors awards for English-language haiku through the Haiku Society of America and with the British Haiku Society? Did you know that at an event called Haiku Chicago in 1995 (held jointly by the Haiku Society of America and the Haiku International Association of Japan), the Japanese delegations said that it was the Americans who were chiefly responsible for the internationalization of haiku, not Japan -- and this was thanks not only to cultural curiosity but to the efforts of the best poets writing haiku in English over the last century. Did you know that there's an American Haiku Archives at the Californis State Library in Sacramento? That there are numerous local organizations for haiku in North America? The haiku community is a rich one on this continent, and it is respected by Japanese haiku poets.

In a message dated 06-Feb-07 9:03:05 PM Pacific Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Date: Tue, 6 Feb 2007 18:43:40 +0000
From: Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Jeez. Can't we just decide that all contemporary haikus are "fake" and leave it at that?

Because to my mind that would be at least giving them the benefit of the doubt, since it is extremely unlikely that a "real" sonnet, a "real" dramatic monologue, a "real" epic, a "real" ode, or likewise a "real" haiku could also be a good poem. Only starting from the assumption that using any of this forms or genres is absurd, practically kitsch, is one likely to get anywhere with them.

> There are societies of watercolor painters out there, according to whose members, probably, the works of any important contemporary artist who might produce a watercolor that you'd in the drawing dept. of MoMA or the Whitney are > just obtuse efforts that show no sense of the rules of watercolor painting.
> But really, one should understand that, unlike hobbyists, real artists have > only the most contingent interest in following any rules they have not set for > themselves.

_____ FREE online classifieds from Windows Live Expo – buy and sell with people you know http://clk.atdmt.com/MSN/go/msnnkwex0010000001msn/direct/01/?href=http://expo.live.com?s_cid=Hotmail_tagline_12/06

↑ Index

223. Anny Ballardini
Re: Camille Martin and Bill Lavender read in Buffalo
Wed 7 Feb 2007

Excellent news!

On 2/7/07, Camille Martin <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> "A New Orleans Reunion"
>
> UB Poetics Program event featuring readings
> by Camille Martin and Bill Lavender
>
> Friday, 8 p.m.
> Big Orbit Gallery, 30 Essex St., Buffalo
>
> Free
>

↑ Index

224. cralan kelder
tomorrow night at the sugar factory in amsterdam
Wed 7 Feb 2007

We know you¹re out there, we posted an invite last month, and somebody from the list came!;

Tomorrow Night at the Sugar Factory

Thursday, February 8, 2007

The Open Stanza presents;

Guest writers from Paris;

Jennifer K Dick (USA)

Joe Ross (USA)

and local residents;

Karlijn Groet (NL)

Dipika Mukherjee (IND)

sin sin (IRL)

http://theopenstanza.wordsinhere.com/

↑ Index

225. Charlie Rossiter

haiku

Thu 8 Feb 2007

Seriously...I'm trying to be helpful

I tried in an earlier message to tell you...but that didn't get through so let me try again...some of you you sound like undergraduates calling the library and essentially asking the reference librarian to do your research for you

Just read a couple good books about haiku and stop guessing and second guessing about what haiku in English is all about. That kind of stuff only makes you look foolish to people who know about the subject.

I hope you folks spending time writing notes about haiku are really interested...once you get it, you might write some memorable poems...haiku can actually be a powerful form of poetic expression...go for it

if I sound impatient it's because the second-guessers (duh, I wonder if Sato made that up) are really tiresome...

don't take this the wrong way....the goal is always better poetry...haiku or otherwise

charlie

--
"Poetry is good for you and so is the blues."
Charlie said that.
www.poetrypoetry.com
where you hear poems read by poets who wrote them

www.myspace.com/avantretro (hear avantretro poems)

www.myspace.com/whiskeybucketbluesreview
 hear Charlie & Henry sing the blues

www.myspace.com/jackthe71special
 hear Jack's original blues, blues rock & roots

↑ Index

226. Barry Schwabsky
Re: haiku
Thu 8 Feb 2007

I don't think there can a haiku better than this one by Paul Violi, which I am proud to have published in a magazine I co-edited many years ago. I don't believe it follows a single one of your rules, nor does it follow the conventional syllable count, but it blows my mind:

> Don't look at my face.
> No change, just large bills.
> One wrong move will be your last.

Charlie Rossiter <[redacted]> wrote: Seriously...I'm trying to be helpful

I tried in an earlier message to tell you...but that didn't get through so let me try again...some of you you sound like undergraduates calling the library and essentially asking the reference librarian to do your research for you

Just read a couple good books about haiku and stop guessing and second guessing about what haiku in English is all about. That kind of stuff only makes you look foolish to people who know about the subject.

I hope you folks spending time writing notes about haiku are really interested...once you get it, you might write some memorable poems...haiku can actually be a powerful form of poetic expression...go for it

if I sound impatient it's because the second-guessers (duh, I wonder if Sato made that up) are really tiresome...

don't take this the wrong way....the goal is always better poetry...haiku or otherwise

charlie

--
"Poetry is good for you and so is the blues."
Charlie said that.
www.poetrypoetry.com
where you hear poems read by poets who wrote them

www.myspace.com/avantretro (hear avantretro poems)

www.myspace.com/whiskeybucketbluesreview
hear Charlie & Henry sing the blues

www.myspace.com/jackthe71special
hear Jack's original blues, blues rock & roots

↑ Index

227. Tom Beckett

new now at e-x-c-h-a-n-g-e-v-a-l-u-e-s...

Thu 8 Feb 2007

Catherine Daly interviewed by Thomas Fink:
http://willtoexchange.blogspot.com

↑ Index

228. Vernon Frazer

Vernon Frazer in Mad Hatter's Review

Thu 8 Feb 2007

---

http://www.madhattersreview.com/issue7/whatnots_frazer.shtml

↑ Index

229. Michael Kelleher

OlsonNow Updates

Thu 8 Feb 2007

A Note from Henry Ferrini about his film on Olson
Kyle Schlesinger/Olson's Melville Bibliography
Richard Haisma/Olson Dance Performance in Rochester

There should also be some additions to the Documents page by the weekend.

_____
Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Suite 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
t. [redacted]
f. [redacted]
http://www.justbuffalo.org

↑ Index

230. Stephen Vincent
Re: haiku /Violi
Thu 8 Feb 2007

> I don't think there can a haiku better than this one by Paul Violi, which I am proud to have published in a magazine I co-edited many years ago. I don't believe it follows a single one of your rules, nor does it follow the conventional syllable count, but it blows my mind:
>
> Don't look at my face.
> No change, just large bills.
> One wrong move will be your last.

Actually, I think this one comes from a side-set genre of haiku that Al Capone once christened (after a sweet heist by one of his boys) as a

Noirku

Though the French are fond of calling Paul Violi's particular piece a

Noircoup

The French apparently love to apply a "coup" wherever possible to both elegant and inelegant seizures, Paul V's piece being of the elegant variety, Obviously.

I hope the introduction of this particular genre/convention is "helpful", too.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
> Charlie Rossiter <[redacted]> wrote:
> Seriously...I'm trying to be helpful
>
> I tried in an earlier message to tell you...but that didn't get through so > let me try again...some of you you sound like undergraduates calling the > library and essentially asking the reference librarian to do your research > for you
>
> Just read a couple good books about haiku and stop guessing and second > guessing about what haiku in English is all about. That kind of stuff > only makes you look foolish to people who know about the subject.
>
> I hope you folks spending time writing notes about haiku are really > interested...once you get it, you might write some memorable poems...haiku > can actually be a powerful form of poetic expression...go for it

>
> if I sound impatient it's because the second-guessers (duh, I wonder if > Sato made that up) are really tiresome...
>
> don't take this the wrong way....the goal is always better poetry...haiku > or otherwise
>
> charlie
>

↑ Index

231. Tim Peterson

Poetry in the Presence of Sculpture, Sat Feb 11, 3PM at the Noguchi Museum

Thu 8 Feb 2007

Poetry in the Presence of Sculpture

Brenda Iijima

Jill Magi

Sawako Nakayasu

Srikanth Reddy

Read in the exquisite museum and garden dedicated to the art of sculptor Isamu Noguchi (1904-1988).

Sunday, February 11, 3:00pm
@ The Noguchi Museum
9-01 33 rd Road at Vernon Blvd., Long Island City (N to Broadway in Queens, walk west on Broadway to Vernon Blvd.
For information about shuttle buses to the Museum, visit www.noguchi.org)
$10, $5 for seniors and students, Free to Poets House & Noguchi Museum Members

Co-sponsored by The Noguchi Museum

↑ Index

232. Tim Peterson

correction (Noguchi sculpture event)

Thu 8 Feb 2007

The reading is Sunday, February 11 -- my mistake

↑ Index

233. Lewis LaCook

The cries of peacocks - Xanax Pop by Lewis LaCook

Thu 8 Feb 2007

The cries of peacocks It's my own ghost I can't get away from.
Living on the high wire, the cries of peacocks mold your babies out of the lichens
I sleep cradled in, candles lobbing gardens into my dreams. I tamp a cigarette out and ripples plume like the mooncalf's nipples, fat as apples, waiting for teeth. Your night sirens like to ride etiquette and property, muscles stung and greening bulbs break pendulous earth, mocking hours.
All night long. That morning, the lowest octaves came blushing through your gardens, shelling milk from pods where clocks seed the bedroom, upchucking stars. Think of my phenomenology as menagerie, bestial catastrophe, lets you ferment and pass away.

Lewis LaCook
Director of Web Development
Abstract Outlooks Media

[redacted]

http://www.abstractoutlooks.com
Abstract Outlooks Media - Premium Web Hosting, Development, and Art Photography

http://www.lewislacook.org
lewislacook.org - New Media Poetry and Poetics

http://www.xanaxpop.org
Xanax Pop - the Poetry of Lewis LaCook

Now that's room service! Choose from over 150,000 hotels in 45,000 destinations on Yahoo! Travel to find your fit.

↑ Index

234. Ann Bogle
Basal distance
Thu 8 Feb 2007

---

if it didn t have periods and commas it d be a poem about apostrophes and question marks about scenery do you have scenery a winter ride to the lebanese psychiatrist the reason to go to the psychiatrist is so the men won t have to but tell them about it later so they can benefit from it i said my anxiety on tuesdays is revolting it used to be workshop day i used to like LIKE workshop day but ten years without workshop comma tuesdays eat me what is causing your reaction he asked war i said he said are you like the rest of us and you disagree with war yes i said i disagree with war and he said only one man agrees with war but he won t go to the war then he told me try meditation and i said it s not enough you must have a teacher for meditation on tuesdays it s like an elevator is going up and down inside my body s frame not quote unquote mental an elevator is going up and down inside my body s frame on tuesdays not italics mental italics instead basal dash basal would be better than mental double dash basal distress would be a better nomer than quote unquote mental illness which i reject as a label we experience it for them or driving in a winter glass to the doctor at eight early but can get the gist if you tell them about it and save them red tape paperwork and general satisfaction of seeking treatment i would call it basal distance or basal distress not mental illness i heard the african american woman psychologist say her wards these white people are mentally sick are white sick ones i said raising my hand basal distance how long would it take to change mental illness to basal distance question mark

http://annbogle.blogspot.com (http://annbogle.blogspot.com)

↑ Index

235. C. A. Conrad contributions to the Frank Sherlock EMERGENCY FUND, an update...
Thu 8 Feb 2007

Thanks to the many many folks interested in helping Frank Sherlock!

There is an alternative method of payment soon to be available for those wishing to make a tax deductible contribution. Stay tuned for that.

There will be fund raiser events in New York City and Philadelphia, please also stay tune for those.

Thanks again, from the friends of Frank Sherlock

↑ Index

236. C. A. Conrad kari edwards POETRY MEMORIAL EVENT now online
Thu 8 Feb 2007

The entire event is online at ROCK HEALS, click and go...
_http://www.rockheals.com/archives/2007/02/week_97_is_audi.html_
(http://www.rockheals.com/archives/2007/02/week_97_is_audi.html)

we miss you kari

↑ Index

237. Michael Dylan Welch
Re: Haiku Death Match
Thu 8 Feb 2007

Haiku was originally hokku, the starting verse for haikai no renga (modern term is renku), which alternated 5-7-5 and 7-7 verses in a linked pattern with many rules. Renga can be said to have evolved from waka (modern term is tanka, which means short song -- even today, tanka are chanted at the annual Imperial New Year poetry party), a poem usually by a single person in a 5-7-5-7-7 rhythm. Waka (which means "Japanese song")in turn evolved from uta (which means song). This evolution spans 1,300+ years, and was influenced by Chinese. The traditional syllable count for haiku in Japan is indeed natural to the language, and in Japan one can find public signs that naturally follow a 5-7-5 pattern, yet of course are not intended as haiku.

Yes, of course, mere technique is not poetry. However, the vast majority of the public in North America isn't even aware of the necessary techniques. Only if you know them can you begin to play with them, as the great haiku masters did in Japan -- and the best haiku writers writing in English also do. They write out of knowledge, not naivete. Yet in North America so many people blithely -- and even boldly -- blunder on with what they think of as haiku, and even claim as "experimental" or avant garde, when really it is yet another clueless attempt at what has been done a thousand times before and branded a failure. The words in the "Crazy Fingers" song, have practically nothing to do with haiku, despite the claim. Fine enough lyrics, I suppose, but lacking any kind of understanding of haiku. Great if it's "influenced" or "inspired" by haiku, but that's the most that can be said of it. But why dwell on something so minor and tangential to haiku when serious literary haiku is available for your attention?

It baffles me why there's such a wide gap between a literary understanding of haiku (in English and Japanese) and the popular (mis)perceptions of haiku, even among English professors and practicing poets. I concur with Charlie Rossiter who has said for folks to read a book like Lee Gurga's Haiku: A Poet's Guide and then to come back in a year to show what you've learned. There is SO much regarding haiku (and yes, starting with necessary and effective technique) that the vast majority of the public does not know. It's as idiotic as me picking up a trumpet for the first or second time and thinking I can play trumpet like Louis Armstrong. Why do people offer their "haiku" to the public with equal naivete?

Meanwhile, someone asked about the meaning of the words in the Laurie Anderson song, "Kokoku." With help from a Japanese translator friend, here's a loose translation of the meaning (these words have nothing akin with haiku):

Kumowaku yamano. Watashino sakebi.
the mountains where the clouds are gathering, my scream

Watashino koewo. Ushano kokoku.
my voice (acc.), (I am not sure what Ushano is, assuming it's Ushinau or Ushinatta, the lost homeland)

Watashiwa sokoni. Watashiwa asobu.
I, there, I play

Watashiwa sokoni. Watashiwa asobu.
I, there, I play

Mewotoji. Mewotoji. Kikunowa kotori.
closing my eyes, closing my eyes, what I hear is the little bird's song Watashino sakebi. Watashino koewo
my scream, my voice (acc.)

Getting back to haiku: To tap into the haiku scene, I recommend joining the Haiku Society of America (www.hsa-haiku.org) or Haiku Canada (search online for it), subscribing to one of the many fine haiku journals out there, especially Modern Haiku (www.modernhaiku.org), and perhaps attending one of many local haiku groups. In California, I know of thriving groups in San Francisco and San Jose, another in Sacramento, one in Southern California that I think currently meets in the Pasadena area. There are groups in Colorado, Boston, New York City, Chicago, North Carolina, Western Massachusetts, the Baltimore area, in Toronto, Ottawa, and B.C. -- and more. Also groups in Australia and New Zealand, in England and in many other European countries (there's a surprisingly large and active haiku scene in Croatia, with some of the world's best haiku poets there -- go figure). Online, for haiku, got to www.theheronsnest.com, or check out www.simplyhaiku.com for a full range of articles, interviews, and translations in addition to poems in various Japanese genres (including haiku, senryu, tanka, haibun, and haiga) -- at this site the articles strikes me as better than the poems, mind you. But there's lots out there, and much to be wary of, but haiku ain't just what you were taught in grade school.

If any of you are in the Vancouver, B.C., area and might be interested, I'll be giving a lecture and presentation on haiku at the main Vancouver Public Library in the evening on March 12, as part of the Vancouver Cherry Blossom Festival, which this year attracted about 1,150 entries to its Haiku Invitational, for which I served as a cojudge.

Michael

-----Original Message-----
Date: Wed, 7 Feb 2007 11:04:40 -0700
From: Crane's Bill Books <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match

Didn't Shiki write forcefully about the hazards of mistaking the = technique for the poetry--and didn't his own haiku stretch the rules to, = but not beyond, the breaking point? I don't read Japanese, so I am = characterizing Shiki from translations, and from what I've read about = him in English. I'm curious, though: does anyone who does read Japanese think the = syllable count (if that's the right way to put it) in haiku is really = arbitrary, or might it have develop organically out of qualities in the = language itself, the way blank verse is said to reflect rhythms natural = to English? This thread has been really wonderful to read--thanks, everyone. J.A. Lee Crane's Bill Books

_____ Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

238. Fulcrum Annual

Poets Kapovich, Maxwell, Nikolayev, Feb 15 in Harvard Square

Thu 8 Feb 2007

Poets Katia Kapovich, Glyn Maxwell, Philip Nikolayev will read from their work.

Thursday, February 15, 7:00 p.m. at Lame Duck Books / Pierre Menard Gallery, 10 Arrow Street, Harvard Square (nearby landmark: Cafe Pamplona, walk up Arrow from there). Free, reception to follow. Queries: [redacted]

http://fulcrumpoetry.com
http://www.lameduckbooks.com

↑ Index

239. Michael Dylan Welch
Re: Haiku Death Match/HAIKU LIFE
Thu 8 Feb 2007

Thanks for your message below, David-Baptiste. I like what you say about how haiku trains the eye. It's like a photographer who "frames" images in his or her mind, even if without a camera. Before I was married, it was informative to take a date to the beach, because I found it revealing of the person to see if they'd notice the tiniest shells or driftwood, and have curiosity for the natural world, or if they limited their conversation to shopping or work or whatever, without much interaction with the environment. Call it, perhaps, a "haiku mind," whether one writes haiku or not -- or even any poetry at all. It's a matter of being present and aware, and it certainly helps one write haiku, which is a poetry of the five senses, with a sensitivity to the seasons and thus to nature. It can also be a way of life, a part of one's cosmology.

For what it's worth, I don't think of the haiku I write as "American haiku." It's haiku.

Haiku deserves a lot of dissing. That's because there's a boat-load of crap out there -- the pseudohaiku, of course, but also the trivial stuff that most people write and think is haiku (though I can hardly blame them, given how haiku is nearly uniformly mistaught in schools). And even those who excel at haiku play a percentage game (as does any poet). I think it was Basho who said one is a master if you write just ten excellent haiku in a lifetime (we have a record, I believe, of something like 1,500 of Basho's haiku; Issa is known to have written 20,000, and most of them are weak or just average). But I think haiku has earned an extra amount of dissing because is strikes so many people as easy, and people dash 'em off, or pervert them as literature by writing flippantly. In his excellent book, Empire of Signs, Roland Barthes says "haiku has this rather fantasmagorical property: that we always suppose we ourselves can write such things easily."

For anyone who wants to write seriously about haiku, or to study it, I am pretty sure that they will see a difference between the latest pseudo-haiku book like Haikus for Jews or Honku (about road rage, etc.) and serious literary haiku written in English. However, there's a middle ground between the two that too many people think of as haiku, yet is still far wide of the mark, as any kind of literature. That stuff deserves dissing, too. What is odd is that some people diss the literary achievements because they are naive enough to say that, well, it's not 5-7-5. People cling so hard to that notion, for reasons that I can't fathom. I can only imagine that it's because they learned this incorrect rule (for haiku in English) at an impressionable age, when their teachers could do no wrong, and thus they swallowed it hook, line, and sinker.

For me, haiku makes perfect use of what Eliot called the objective correlative. Haiku dwells on things (nouns) that carry meaning and emotion ("no ideas but in things"). Haiku (even literary haiku) can be many things to different people, but to me it has a spiritual aspect, a sort of approach to infinity (by approaching the narrowest of image-moments). By the way, this spirituality that I find in haiku has little to do with Zen (another misperception of haiku, which the Japanese are puzzled at regarding the American understanding of haiku -- thanks to folks like Alan Watts, R. H. Blyth, Jack Kerouac and other Beats, who promoted haiku from that perspective).

I teach a class on using haiku techniques to improve your longer poetry. The point of view, the awareness, that David-Baptiste mentioned in his message is a big part of that, but so are the ability to control objectivity and subjectivity, to create implication through juxtaposition (and thus create intuitive, emotional, or even intellectual effects), and a reliance on seasons as archetypes to add weight and compression to the poem. Rather than being "easy" to write, haiku can be very hard indeed.

Indeed, the true discipline of haiku has nothing to do with counting syllables. That's trivial and superficial, and nearly everyone I've met who says they like that discipline has been completely unaware of the much more challenging disciplines that literary haiku require. And that's entirely aside from the fact that 5-7-5 syllables in English is a misguided taget relative to the 17 mora of Japanese haiku.

FYI, the word "haiku" need not be treated with a capital H, in the same way that it's not necessary to capitalize the S in "sonnet." Why do people do that? I've never understood that.

Also, Robert Hass's Essential Haiku book of poems by Basho, Buson, and Issa (inexplicably and lazily omitting Shiki, the fourth great master of Japanese haiku) is lyrical and approachable, but not the most reliable of translations. For example, Hass repeats an error of an earlier translator of ascribing the "for me going / for you staying / two autumns" haiku to Buson, when in fact it was written by Shiki -- what does that tell you about his sources?

I would also say that "writing in an instant" does not in itself necessarily produce good haiku. Basho rewrote his poems or reordered and restructured their appearance in the Oku no hosomichi (Narrow Road to the Interior). Rather, one CAN write in an instant, but one need not stop there. And like any art, or even a sport, it builds upon practice. The perfect serve of a Wimbledon champion is not just in an instant, but is a culmination of a lifetime of practice.

Michael

P.S. I've been asked offlist to share some of my haiku. You'll find some (and some senryu) online, paired with photographs, at http://www.brooksbookshaiku.com/welch/. I put this together about eight years ago.

-----Original Message-----

Date: Wed, 7 Feb 2007 13:45:53 -0600
From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Haiku Death Match/HAIKU LIFE

Many deep thanks to Michael Dylan Welch for his letters affirming the LIFE of American Haiku and providing so many insights and so much information. A few times before Haiku has been discussed (and dissed one might say a bit)-and so often concerning only the syllable counting as though distinguishing right foot from the left means one knows how to walk. A lot of what i know have learned from reading Japanese and American haiku is ways of awareness in the world--practicing different ways of seeing things, movements, colors and how their particualrs cab be continually framed and reframed within a very few words, not only to present juxtapostion, but in doing so to provide as Michael wrote, the data for making a leap inside the mind--opening into a whole other view of the "scenes" so to speak. Continually training the eye in finding particulars among all that is happening within an instant--the haiku a way of learning to see distinctly that which is hidden in plain sight by the too distracted superficial attention. Out of a mass of colors, forms, movements, exact notations of a particular moment in a specific time of year--emerge the particles in the ongoing flow which present paradoxes, contradcitions, things far apart suddenly brought close. A haiku is a form of documentary which "opens one's eyes"--and if one is so inclined, mind, heart, soul, physical awarenesses. The importance of the time element is to indicate not a stillness bu a cotinual process of change, in which the insatnt presented in the poem is taking part--a transitory movement from the no longer present of the moment before to the not yet present of the moment after. On the one hand the teeming chaos of the moment in its incredible profusion of details, on the other, the nothingness, unknowable--to see with clarity a continual becoming--out of chaos and nothingness, that which is. Hiaku have brought a continual daily work with seeing, hearing, moving--details within each instant--site/sight/cite--oscillations of an opening outwo/ards and a paring to the bare bones. Haiku bring not just forms of artistic or mystical "illuminations" as it were--also bring evidences cotinually of social contradictions, paradoxes all around one. To see the world from a crowded bus or within a very confined space--and find in them both a continual happening. Through barred windows to see everyday the same view yet to find moment by moment it is changing. I am just touching on a very small area of what study of Haiku can bring for writing, visual work, being alive. It's a form of disicpline one may practice at any time any where. Even in dreams it can happen. There is also the spirtual aspect of haiku as a Way. This can be found in a great many poets practising haiku as a method among spiritual disicplines. Pascal wrote: "it is not the elements which are new, but the order of their arrangement." To work with arrangements of course you have to continually discpline the unedrstanding of the elements, and i think Haiku teaches one in this, how to go about finding what the elements are at any moment. Time spent studying cracks in a wall can be an opening into the anarkeyological possibilities which are ever available. The famous text by Basho called "Learn from the Pine" is a great introduction to ways of working with Haiku as a discipline in living to find ways to see and hear and move. In this way, the making of the Haiku is like an instant between the profusion of reality and the nothingness. Through discipline "composition must occur in an instant." Robert Hass edited a great collection of Haiku and prose by Basho, Suson & Issa called The Essential Haiku--you can find "learn from the Pine" in there-- to show how hard it to write haiku--i wrote his in an instant from what seen outside the window you can see that i wil have to live a hundred years to make aven an average one but what i learn from reading others'--has helped change many ways of seeing for me and i am very thank ful to Haiku for this--

ghetto winter street
dope man, bible man, crack hos--
all call the crow "thief"

Check out the new AOL. Most comprehensive set of free safety and security tools, free access to millions of high-quality videos from across the web, free AOL Mail and more.

↑ Index

240. George Bowering

Re: haiku /Violi

Thu 8 Feb 2007

Best US haiku I know is Ron Padgett's:

Seven syllables
Eleven syllables
Seven syllables

gb

On 8-Feb-07, at 8:47 AM, Stephen Vincent wrote:

>> I don't think there can a haiku better than this one by Paul Violi, >> which I am >> proud to have published in a magazine I co-edited many years ago. I >> don't >> believe it follows a single one of your rules, nor does it follow the >> conventional syllable count, but it blows my mind:

>>
>> Don't look at my face.
>> No change, just large bills.
>> One wrong move will be your last.
>
> Actually, I think this one comes from a side-set genre of haiku that Al
> Capone once christened (after a sweet heist by one of his boys) as a
>
> Noirku
>
> Though the French are fond of calling Paul Violi's particular piece a
>
> Noircoup
>
> The French apparently love to apply a "coup" wherever possible to both > elegant and inelegant seizures, Paul V's piece being of the elegant > variety, > Obviously.
>
> I hope the introduction of this particular genre/convention is > "helpful",
> too.
>
> Stephen V
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>>
>>
>> Charlie Rossiter <[redacted]> wrote:
>> Seriously...I'm trying to be helpful
>>
>> I tried in an earlier message to tell you...but that didn't get >> through so >> let me try again...some of you you sound like undergraduates calling
>> the >> library and essentially asking the reference librarian to do your >> research
>> for you
>>

>> Just read a couple good books about haiku and stop guessing and second >> guessing about what haiku in English is all about. That kind of stuff >> only makes you look foolish to people who know about the subject.
>>
>> I hope you folks spending time writing notes about haiku are really >> interested...once you get it, you might write some memorable >> poems...haiku
>> can actually be a powerful form of poetic expression...go for it
>>
>> if I sound impatient it's because the second-guessers (duh, I wonder >> if >> Sato made that up) are really tiresome...
>>
>> don't take this the wrong way....the goal is always better >> poetry...haiku
>> or otherwise
>>
>> charlie
>>
>
>
George Cletis Bowering
Slow to anger. Well, slow about everything.

↑ Index

241. Tom W. Lewis
Re: Haiku Death Match
Thu 8 Feb 2007

---

many words for little poems many words for little poems are little words

↑ Index

242. David-Baptiste Chirot
(behalf of Susan Firer) Kent Johnson at UW-Milwaukee & Illinois Wesleyan
Thu 8 Feb 2007

Kent Johnson--"Mr. Kent" in some of his poems, like Burroughs' being "Mr. Lee" in various of his writings--will be making the following appearances this month in the guise of the "author function" known as "Kent Johnson"--at the following sites:

a reading at Illinois Wesleyan University the week following on Saturday, February 25, at 7:30 PM, Hansen Student Center, 300 Beecher St., Bloomington, Illinois.

and, on behalf of Susan Firer from the English Dept. at UW-Milwaukee, this announcement of next week's Milwaukee appearances:

> The first visiting writer event of the semester is coming soon. Kent Johnson will be here on February 15. He'll give a craft talk in Curtin 466 from 2 to 3:30 and a reading at 7:30 in Curtin 368.
>
> Kent Johnson is editor, with Craig Paulenich, of Beneath a Single Moon: Buddhism in Contemporary American Poetry (Shambhala, 1991) and of Third Wave: the New Russian Poetry (U of Michigan, 1992).
>
> In 1980 and 1983, during the Sandinista revolution, Johnson worked in the Nicaraguan countryside for many months teaching basic literacy and adult education. From this experience he translated A Nation of Poets (West End Press, 1985), the most representative translation in English from the famous working class Talleres de Poesia of Nicaragua.
>
> Kent Johnson has edited Doubled Flowering: from the Notebooks of Araki Yasusada (Roof, 1998), as well as Also, with My Throat, I Shall Swallow Ten Thousand Swords: Araki Yasusada's Letters in English (Combo Books, 2005). In addition, Johnson has translated (with Alexandra Papaditsas) The Miseries of Poetry: Traductions from the Greek (Skanky Possum, 2003; rept. Cambridge Conference of Contemporary Poetry, UK, 2005) and, with Forrest Gander, Immanent Visitor: Selected Poems of Jaime Saenz (University of California Press, 2002), which was a PEN Award for Poetry in Translation selection. A second book of Saenz's work, The Night, is forthcoming from Princeton. Epigramititis: 118 Living American Poets (BlazeVox Books) was published in 2006.
>
> Recipient of a 2004 NEA Literature Fellowship, Johnson teaches at Highland Community College and was named the State of Illinois Teacher of the Year for 2004 by the Illinois Community College Trustees Association.

> About the Yasusada project, Ron Silliman says, "The 'scandal' of these poems > lies not in the problematics of authorship, identity, persona, race or history.
> Rather, these are wonderful works of writing that also invoke all of these other > issues, never relying on them to prop up a text." Arthur Vogelsang, editor of > American Poetry Review, says, "This is essentially a criminal act," and Josea > Hirata of Princeton's East Asian Studies program, says, "Knowing its fictitious > nature, with a slight sense of disgust, I find Yasusada's poetry evil, and eerily beautiful."

_____ Talk now to your Hotmail contacts with Windows Live Messenger.
http://get.live.com/messenger/overview

↑ Index

243. mIEKAL aND

Re: (behalf of Susan Firer) Kent Johnson at UW-Milwaukee & Illinois Wesleyan

Thu 8 Feb 2007

If I wanna drive across the state to see this how can I be sure it will actually be Kent Johnson who appears at this thing?

You can never be too careful.

~mIEKAL

On Feb 8, 2007, at 3:03 PM, David-Baptiste Chirot wrote:

> Kent Johnson--"Mr. Kent" in some of his poems, like Burroughs' being "Mr. Lee" in various of his writings--will be making the following appearances this month in the guise of the "author function" known as "Kent Johnson"--at the following sites:
>
> a reading at Illinois Wesleyan University the week following on Saturday, February 25, at 7:30 PM, Hansen Student Center, 300 Beecher St., Bloomington, Illinois.
>
> and, on behalf of Susan Firer from the English Dept. at UW-Milwaukee, this announcement of next week's Milwaukee appearances:

↑ Index

244. George Bowering

Re: (behalf of Susan Firer) Kent Johnson at UW-Milwaukee & Illinois Wesleyan

Thu 8 Feb 2007

If he's smoking on the porch,
you got him.

gb

On 8-Feb-07, at 1:17 PM, mIEKAL aND wrote:

> If I wanna drive across the state to see this how can I be sure it > will actually be Kent Johnson who appears at this thing?
>
> You can never be too careful.
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
>
> On Feb 8, 2007, at 3:03 PM, David-Baptiste Chirot wrote:
>
>> Kent Johnson--"Mr. Kent" in some of his poems, like Burroughs' being >> "Mr. Lee" in various of his writings--will be making the following >> appearances this month in the guise of the "author function" known as >> "Kent Johnson"--at the following sites:
>>
>> a reading at Illinois Wesleyan University the week following on >> Saturday, February 25, at 7:30 PM, Hansen Student Center, 300 Beecher
>> St., Bloomington, Illinois.
>>
>>
>> and, on behalf of Susan Firer from the English Dept. at UW-Milwaukee, >> this announcement of next week's Milwaukee appearances:
>
>
Geo. Bowering, DLit
A devotee of Veronica Lake

↑ Index

245. Anny Ballardini

Re: (behalf of Susan Firer) Kent Johnson at UW-Milwaukee & Illinois Wesleyan

Thu 8 Feb 2007

---

never ever, indeed, :-)

On 2/8/07, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> If I wanna drive across the state to see this how can I be sure it > will actually be Kent Johnson who appears at this thing?
>
> You can never be too careful.
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
>
> On Feb 8, 2007, at 3:03 PM, David-Baptiste Chirot wrote:
>
> > Kent Johnson--"Mr. Kent" in some of his poems, like Burroughs' > > being "Mr. Lee" in various of his writings--will be making the > > following appearances this month in the guise of the "author > > function" known as "Kent Johnson"--at the following sites:
> >
> > a reading at Illinois Wesleyan University the week following on > > Saturday, February 25, at 7:30 PM, Hansen Student Center, 300
> > Beecher St., Bloomington, Illinois.
> >
> >
> > and, on behalf of Susan Firer from the English Dept. at UW-> > Milwaukee, this announcement of next week's Milwaukee appearances:
>

↑ Index

246. heidi arnold

Bone Pagoda, by Susan Tichy

Thu 8 Feb 2007

---

this is a propos of nothing, except my reading today -- thot i'd pass it along
-- hope there are no mistakes in the retyping one-handed

Bridge Fight
by Susan Tichy

Bow of our boat
In the weedy scene

Non-literate
Letter

Woman in the bushes
