And why shouldn't I be able to come on here and talk about how I view things? This is a discussion group, and we all have our own agendas. The last thing I would want would be a bunch of people sitting around agreeing with me about everything, as I would never grow as a thinker or a poet. One reaches the light only through dialogue, and being open to understanding and persuasion. Anyone who does not want to be challenged is only interested in the shadows on the walls of the cave -- they certainly are not interested in the light.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
To: SUNY Buffalo <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, June 29, 2008 10:39:13 PM
Subject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

Dr. Camplin,

So you judge my work without ever having read it? How does that help dialog? Communication? Just because my intention is not necessarily to communicate does not mean it doesn't get something across. Nor does it make it masturbation, as judged by the number of featured readings I have given over the last ten years.

Charles Olson said:

A poem is energy transferred from where the poet got it (he will have some several causations), by way of the poem itself to, all the way over to, the reader. Okay. Then the poem itself must, at all points, be a high energy-construct and, at all points, an energy-discharge. So: how is the poet to accomplish same energy, how is he, what is the process by which a poet gets in, at all points energy at least the equivalent of the energy which propelled him in the first place, yet an energy which is peculiar to verse alone and which will be, obviously, also different from the energy which the reader, because he is a third term, will take away.

People seem to be interested in HIS work, 38 years after his death at 60. So, did HE communicate anything? Apparently so, given the new film about his work and life in Gloucester, Polis is This. Given the movie from last year Fully Awake: Black Mountain College.

You obviously come to the SUNY list with an agenda far more traditional than the average list reader. You must expect people to disagree with you. You should understand they'll have a more challenging aesthetic than to have their work go over to a large audience. That is a measure addled by a capitalist ethos anyway. And the artists you cite did not have nearly the same cultural conditions, so it's a misnomer.

In a wonderful Jacket interview: http://jacketmagazine.com/35/perez-ivb-johnson.shtml

Omar Perez points out that capitalist considerations have NO PLACE in art. They're antithetical to it. I'm not interested in heat from this list. I am interested in light. Calling a stranger's work masturbation is unfortunate if you are really interested in dialog. Of course at least masturbation is sex with someone I love.

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

----- Original Message ----
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, June 29, 2008 11:00:44 AM
Subject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

Funny, of the examples I have given -- Michaelangelo, Mozart, Shakespeare, Moliere, Racine -- not one was an American and not one lived in a capitalist country. Yet each communicated extremely well to a very wide audience. Prior to them, one had raconteurs and bards who travelled and recited/sang poetry. The ancient Greek tragedies and comedies were wildly popular (you may recall Plato complaining about tragedy because it was wildly popular). The stories of the gods and heroes were told through the recitation of poetry, particularly epic poetry. So poetry has historically been popular, and it has been used primarily as a way of communication. The Church, for example, used visual arts to tell the stories of the Bible to its illiterate parishoners. Art is a form of communication, and has always been a form of communication. Danto goes so far as to argue that the arts are a form of rhetoric -- and he's probably on to something there.

If art is not communicating something, what is it doing? If you are not concerned with getting your vision across to others, then what you are doing isn't art. When you create art that is not intended to communicate with anyone, then you are engaged in nothing more than masturbation. Similarly, it doesn't result in the creation of anything new, because it never comes in contact with others. If Danto is right that art is a form of rhetoric, then those who either won't (or cannot) communicate with their artwork are simply bad artists. To proclaim that your art does not and should not communicate is simply to try to provide an argument for why your terribly bad art is in fact good art -- precisely because the art can't speak for itself as to its worth.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 12:10:21 PM
Subject: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

----- Original Message ----

From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 4:37:00 PM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

"...the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of art.

The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn. Those works both the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few 'truly understand'?"

Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

The limitation I see with this approach is that when one is trying to "communicate"or write so that it goes over with people who don't read poetry, is that the impulse to move in that direction is often fear. If one is open to a work of art, they'll recognize the power of it long before they fully understand, or even partially understand, what it may be "communicating." When artists start worrying about communication, the gesture suffers. What's the line by the painter Clyfford Still "demands for communication are presumptions and irrelevant."

It is a symptom of our capitalist society and the underlying materialist cosmology that equates numbers (books sold, how many "regular" people have heard of the artist, etc.) that creates the kind of attitude exhibited here by Dr. Camplin. Now, that may be his interest, or motivation and he is welcome to it. It does not interest me and I find I am usually not interested in art that can "go over" with average people, but there are exceptions. Anything really worthwhile takes a little effort to appreciate, or at least some background, or some kind of understanding or openness. People raised in North American TV culture want it now, if not sooner, like the ones who yell at the microwave to hurry up. Cook slow.

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

↑ Index

440. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
Mon 30 Jun 2008

---

there was no tv radio movies ipods on and on and on the more the 20th century vrpet in and now 21
the less populist poetry was and the folks to day that should be and possibly are to some extent our laureates for instance SUCK and reach out barely to the populace and when they do springsteen (an anology) buries em (tho not purposely) slam and hiphop work but they suck as well mozart ha he sang for his super as did they all back then just happened to be a great one as the others you mentioned yhey wote for the poulace tho some had elitist patrons as well those were different times much poetry was sung memorized spoken handed down i'm sure there was an ongoing equivelent in lyric verse of law and order i'm sure everyone went out there dor and caiught euripides maybe got to hear the odyssey intoned on the MTV of its day even the non-capitalists were capitalist we're all greedy suckers at heart

On Sun, 29 Jun 2008 11:00:44 -0700 Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
writes:
> Funny, of the examples I have given -- Michaelangelo, Mozart, > Shakespeare, Moliere, Racine -- not one was an American and not one > lived in a capitalist country. Yet each communicated extremely well > to a very wide audience. Prior to them, one had raconteurs and bards > who travelled and recited/sang poetry. The ancient Greek tragedies > and comedies were wildly popular (you may recall Plato complaining > about tragedy because it was wildly popular). The stories of the > gods and heroes were told through the recitation of poetry, > particularly epic poetry. So poetry has historically been popular, > and it has been used primarily as a way of communication. The > Church, for example, used visual arts to tell the stories of the > Bible to its illiterate parishoners. Art is a form of communication, > and has always been a form of communication. Danto goes so far as to > argue that the arts are a form of rhetoric -- and he's probably on > to something there.

>
> If art is not communicating something, what is it doing? If you are > not concerned with getting your vision across to others, then what > you are doing isn't art. When you create art that is not intended to > communicate with anyone, then you are engaged in nothing more than > masturbation. Similarly, it doesn't result in the creation of > anything new, because it never comes in contact with others. If > Danto is right that art is a form of rhetoric, then those who either > won't (or cannot) communicate with their artwork are simply bad > artists. To proclaim that your art does not and should not > communicate is simply to try to provide an argument for why your > terribly bad art is in fact good art -- precisely because the art > can't speak for itself as to its worth.
>
> Troy Camplin
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 12:10:21 PM
> Subject: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
> ----- Original Message ----
>
> From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 4:37:00 PM
> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>
> "...the best works are not those that only require critics for > anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of > meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of > art.
>
> The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning > from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand > and learn. Those works both the uneducated and the educated can > appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why > should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where > only a select few 'truly understand'?"

>
> Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
> The limitation I see with this approach is that when one is trying > to "communicate"or write so that it goes over with people who don't > read poetry, is that the impulse to move in that direction is often > fear. If one is open to a work of art, they'll recognize the power > of it long before they fully understand, or even partially > understand, what it may be "communicating." When artists start > worrying about communication, the gesture suffers. What's the line
> by the painter Clyfford Still "demands for communication are > presumptions and irrelevant."
>
> It is a symptom of our capitalist society and the underlying > materialist cosmology that equates numbers (books sold, how many
> "regular" people have heard of the artist, etc.) that creates the > kind of attitude exhibited here by Dr. Camplin. Now, that may be his > interest, or motivation and he is welcome to it. It does not > interest me and I find I am usually not interested in art that can > "go over" with average people, but there are exceptions. Anything > really worthwhile takes a little effort to appreciate, or at least > some background, or some kind of understanding or openness. People > raised in North American TV culture want it now, if not sooner, like > the ones who yell at the microwave to hurry up. Cook slow.
>
> Paul
>
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
> American Sentences
> Organic Poetry
> Poetry Postcard Blog
>
> Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]
>
>

>
>

↑ Index

441. John Cunningham
Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
Mon 30 Jun 2008

In response to Troy Camplin, you make the statement " few were there primarily for the poetry" with regard to poetry readings in art galleries, etc. How is this statement supported - by anecdotal evidence? You asked a few "buddies" why they were there? I take exception to another of your statements: "But it requires making things of beauty, which inspire people to want to create more poetry like it. It has to be reproductive." Keeping in mind the cliché that beauty is in the eye of the beholder, if "beautiful" poetry is to be reproductive, then language poetry must be the most beautiful of poetries as it has been a dominant force, reproducing like rabbits, since the mid-20th century. Finally, I have one thing to say regarding your statement "While we would never dream of claiming to be a great pianist if we never learned the proper way to play piano", that being Thelonius Monk - he of the splayed fingers. I don't think many would disagree that Monk was a great pianist yet those same would likely agree that he "never learned the proper way to play piano". The only thing that counts is expressivity. Whether Jimmie Hendricks plucked the strings with his fingers or his teeth, as long as he was able to fully express himself the technique didn't matter. Just my thoughts. John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Troy Camplin
Sent: June 29, 2008 1:29 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

I try to pay more attention to the actual art produced rather than the rhetoric of those producing the art. In a published article I wrote about game theory and literature, I argue that the surrealists attempted to sell a bill of goods that they themselves did not buy into. Many post-surrealists did, however -- producing a lot of incredibly bad poetry that all sounds the same, and that nobody wants to read. The actual surrealists, however, produced a lot of very well-crafted, difficult poetry. They claimed that they were trying to create a poetry of and for the people (as opposed to the elitist verse of the romantics, with their regular rhythms and rhymes), but they in fact created work that only artistic elites would even begin to appreciate. We see this going on throughout the Modernist and Postmodernist periods, where the experiments are proclaimed to be intended for the masses, but the masses reject it en masse. Perhaps only T.S. Eliot and Ezra Pound were the only honest poets of the last century, being unapologetically elitist in their verse and theory.

The attacks by other posters on "best-sellers" and "capitalism" belies their elitism. Why shouldn't some measure of worth be how many books of poetry you sell? Except that then that would indicate you are in fact not a very good poet if you can't sell but a half dozen copies at your readings. So we get attacks on capitalism and the commodification of art, etc. as excuses for why nobody wants to read their rotten poems.

Now, I do agree with you that many of our problems with the acceptance of poetry lies with our teachers and with the educational system in general. Teachers seem to go out of their way to make students abhor poetry. Of course, most teachers don't understand poetry at all, and that ignorance translates to hatred of the material, which is communicated to the students. The few who make it through high school not hating poetry have still learned nothing about it. They learn that one has "poetic license," which they are told means anything goes in poetry. Thus they begin writing poetry without the least understanding of what a poem really is, or what it does. They think that just because they speak the English language, they can write; and they think that they are being radical poets by breaking all the rules, not even knowing what the rules are. While we would never dream of claiming to be a great pianist if we never learned the proper way to play piano (the ability to whistle does not make one a musician), we somehow think that we can be a great poet without understanding the first thing about poetry, its origins, its history, how poems are similar and differ among cultures, etc. Our college professors don't help at all because they are pushing the kind of experimental poetry they are writing, forgetting that their students don't even have the basics. The consequence is a lot of people writing poetry, not having the kind of historical understanding of the art that painters and musicians are made to have, and as a consequence writing poems nobody really wants to read.

I find it laughable to read peoples' arguments that poetry is in fact popular because of some anecdotal evidence. This would be like arguing that opera is popular because I have friends who, like me, go to the opera. In fact, the opera house is always packed, so it must be spectacularly popular! Nonsense. Most of the poetry readings I've been to have been full of bad poets reading bad poetry to each other and their friends. I've been to poetry readings that were exceptions -- but they typically took place in such places as art museums and galleries, and involved selection of the poets beforehand. And in those cases, few were there primarily for the poetry.

I personally would like to turn this around. I think people miss out on a lot when they do not read or listen to poetry -- or are otherwise exposed to the arts. I think that if poets would simply learn the history of their art, and keep their audience in mind when they write, that it would go a long way to poets creating poetry that people might want to read. But it requires making things of beauty, which inspire people to want to create more poetry like it. It has to be reproductive.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 10:41:29 AM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Troy,

But I think that's where you're wrong: most of what you're calling "elite" isn't intended to be only understood by a few, but rather represents (sometimes vain) attempts to open dialog where there wasn't previously. In this case, then, what most people don't understand isn't what they don't "get", but what they aren't familiar with (as in Michael's example) due to lack of good teachers, exposure, what have you.

-Ryan

On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 7:37 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
> Math is both understandable and meaningful. But to practice it and understand it, you have to learn a lot of techniques.
>
> The arts are different from the sciences (including math) in that they are meaningful and valuable in a more complex, more directly human way. There's dehumanizing, nihilistic art, and humanizing, meaningful art. I personally like a lot of elite art; but I also understand why most people don't. Part of it is indeed that they don't get it. And why isn't that a valid criticism? Why should people rely on a bunch of overeducated elites (like myself) telling them what this or that work means, and why it's significant? Shouldn't there be at least some level in every art where the average person "gets it"? This doesn't mean, of course, that one cannot learn more about a work -- meaning critics, etc. are still needed to help people see all the possibilities -- but the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of art.
>
> The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn. Those works both the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few "truly understand"?

>
> Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 3:23:43 PM
> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>
> How come mathematics gets to be "elitist"? Why is poetry condemned to > "having to have meaning/be understandable?"
>
> Personally, I don't believe in elitism as a label; I think it's > largely used to hide embarrassing moments of "I don't get this."
>
> On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 9:49 AM, Thomas savage <[redacted]>
wrote:
>> Nobody reads poetry anymore because they aren't exposed to it as children as a part of their education. Once it vanished from their schooling, since they had no access to it, most people don't even know poetry exists. As for the elitism of experimental poetry of the 20th and 21st century, that is another matter. Anyone who takes chances with a tradition risks isolating him or herself from the larger group of people who will not understand what is going on or who simply don't care. I don't think that is necessarily elitism but in certain cases, particularly Pound's and Eliot's, it may have been accompanied by elitism. Williams, Olson, and many other experimental poets were populists trying to do something that would resonate with the larger masses of educated readers. Whether they ever reached those readers is another matter. Regards, Tom Savage
>>
>> --- On Thu, 6/26/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>> From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Thursday, June 26, 2008, 12:45 PM

>>
>> The two aren't unrelated, you know. It's no coincidence that you started >> getting things like impressionism when photography came about. Milan Kundera >> observes that the novel (for example) should do only what the novel can do. The >> same can be said about poetry. TV and film are their own media, and do not >> necessarily exclude the reading of poetry. Much of the Modernists' >> experiments came about precisely in reaction to such things as radio, etc. Part >> of the result was that it became something only elitists were interested in >> (bizarre poetry, etc. is a great way for elitists to separate themselves from >> the rabble, you know). But lyric poetry in the form of songs is as strong as >> ever -- belying claims that other media pushed poetry aside. What pushed poetry >> aside was the fact that poets began writing poetry 1) knowing nothing about >> poetry, and 2) writing as elitists for elitists. I listen to the radio, watch >> movies and TV, use a computer, etc. and also read >> novels and poetry, so these different forms are not mutually exclusive. In >> fact, they can be mutually enhancing. If people are running away from your art, >> it may have more to do with the state of the art. Unless that is seriously >> considered (which is also an historical perspective), then you're never >> going to understand why nobody reads poetry anymore.
>>
>> Troy Camplin
>>
>>
>> ----- Original Message ----
>> From: Dan Glass <[redacted]>
>> To: [redacted]
>> Sent: Wednesday, June 25, 2008 4:17:26 PM
>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>>

>> Way to think historically.
>>
>> I love that it's the bad modernist poetry that made people read less
>> poetry,
>> rather than things like radio, television, movies, computers, video games,
>> the assembly line, and other 20th c. inventions...
>>
>> I mean, seriously. Do you really think history has nothing to do with >> poetry?
>>
>> On Wed, Jun 25, 2008 at 12:37 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
>> wrote:
>>
>>> Historically, lyrical poetry has had a very large audience. It began dying >>> off with Modernism, and postmodernism and LANGUAGE poetry have all
but >>> killed it off. The few poetry bestsellers are the lyric poets like >> Frederick
>>> Turner.
>>>
>>> Troy Camplin
>>>
>>>
>>> ----- Original Message ----
>>> From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
>>> To: [redacted]
>>> Sent: Tuesday, June 24, 2008 8:08:10 PM
>>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>>>
>>> Thanks, Joanie, for pointing to WW lodestar! Then the quote. Yes, a quick
>>> and impressive ear you have for echoes!
>>> What? Are we (yon poets) fated to repeat ourselves century upon century >>> with twists on the metaphors and content du jour!!! An endless spiral >> loop
>>> earthly journey? An eternity of small audiences?
>>> Ain't complaining too hard. As long as there are good and quick ears >> in the >>> neighborhood that can take and hear a poem to the max, who needs

more?!
>>> (It's always nice when it happens - large)
>>>
>>> Got to get back to writing those reviews - among all the other >>> 'requirements'!
>>>
>>> Stephen V
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> "Mackowski, Joanie (mackowje)" <[redacted]> >> wrote: Nice to >>> read your thoughts, Stephen. I wonder though "izzit not ever >>> thus," for in them I hear an echo of Wordsworth, from the >> "preface to >>> the 2nd edition of the lyrical ballads." That your thoughts are >> familiar >>> to me suggests that the lyric may be in a steady sissy-fun state, rather >>> than about to die altogether. Yet I'm not suggesting that the work to >>> preserve & enlarge our atttention to the lyric isn't crucial;
>> rather, I >>> think we may whistle a bit while we work. And WW, while he affirms the >>> frustration, also suggests a way to progress: he says that yes quiet >>> lyrics may easily be drowned out, but that learning to attend to lyric >>> quietness, via both reading and writing, is a crucial practice, one that >>> strengthens "certain inherent inherent and indestructible qualities
>> of >>> the human mind," qualities which WW thinks are good.
>>>
>>> I'm going to copy down a hunk o' WW here. It feels good to type
>> it, like
>>> a meditation/prayer:
>>>
>>> From WW: "For the human mind is capable of being excited without the >>> application of gross and violent stimulants.... It has therefore >>> appeared to me that to endeavor to prodice or enlarge this capability is >>> one of the best services in which, at any period, a writer can be >>> engaged; but this service, excellent at all times, is especially so at >>> the present day. For a multitude of causes, unknown to former times, are >>> now acting with a combined force to blunt the distriminating powers of >>> the mind, and, unfitting it for all voluntary exertion, to reduce it to >>> a state of almost savage torpor. The most effective of these causes are >>> the great national events which are daily taking place, and the >>> increasing accumulation of men in cities, where the uniformity of thei >>> roccupations produces a craving for extraordinary incident, which the >>> rapid communication of intelligence hourly gratiafies. To this tendency >>> of life and manners the literature and theatrical exhibition of the >>> country have conformed themselves. The invaluable works of our elder >>> writers...Shakespeare and Milton, are driven into neglect by frantic >>> novelss....When I think about this degrading thirst after outrageous >>> stimulation, I am almost ashamed to have spoken of the feeble endeavor >>> made in these volumes to counteract it; ... had I not a deep impression >>> of certain inherent and indestructible qualities of the human mind, and >>> likewise of certain powers in the great and permanent objects that act >>> upon it, which are equally inherent and indestructible...."

>>>
>>> .....
>>> Joanie Mackowski, PhD
>>> Assistant Professor
>>> English & Comparative Literature
>>> University of Cincinnati
>>> PO Box 210069
>>> Cincinnati, OH 45221-0069
>>> Tel. 513/[redacted]
>>> Fax 513/[redacted]
>>> [redacted]
>>> http://homepages.uc.edu/~mackowje
>> <http://homepages.uc.edu/%7Emackowje>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On >>> Behalf Of Stephen Vincent
>>> Sent: Monday, June 23, 2008 10:47 PM
>>> To: [redacted]
>>> Subject: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>>>
>>> Sometimes I read a lyric poem - singular or serial - and I am struck by >>> two contrary reading experiences. On one hand, I am taken by a poem's >>> structure, the attention of the poet, the technique, tone, etc, - how >>> forcefully these combinations impel themselves on to the page. I am >>> totally present with the process, and the momentary totality of the >>> poem's object, its presence. I am with it - which means to say its >>> particulars have become an assured presence within the immediate >>> horizons of my take (world) as a reader.

>>>
>>> Yet, on the other hand, the poem(s), no matter how solid its occurrence
>>> in my imagination, critical presence, etc. is soon gone, particularly as >>> I move on to the works of others, or shift my awareness to, say, the >>> television, the inevitable perk and threnody of the news, its >>> repetitions and cycles.
>>>
>>> And, in terms of the lyric poem as an experience in reading - no matter >>> how present it was - - becomes such a fleeting thing without much >>> bearing on what's left of either my private or public space. What is >>> that that 'thing' that caught me and then flew by? Why does much >> work -
>>> much of it good, and, certainly, labor intensive - fly by with but a >>> transitional, momentary effect? Whatever act or frame could make that >>> pleasure more concrete, an enduring, significant presence, a constantly >>> returnable project & gift?? (Perhaps, obviously. that is part of the >>> poet's job, too).
>>>
>>> I suspect we know that's the job of a critical community - to maximize >>> the public presence and circulation of a work or works. To review a >>> person's work, to secure (ideally) our attention. And, no doubt, the >>> importance of academic institutions. To insist students write critical >>> papers, memorize, and/or improv new works off the work of others - to >>> insure that a work secure a place, a point of memory in the young, as >>> well as older persons. And, for those of us outside institutions, to >>> resist and confront the the sense of erasure that inevitably haunts >>> those of us who live, read, write and work not 'at the margins', >> but in >>> locations that require a different sense of critical reception and >>> measure.
>>>
>>> Without this surrounding labor of critical community, so many often >>> extraordinarily fine lyric poems - let alone larger forms. - end up >>> fleeting around, or become paralysed in a kind of statuary limbo. They >>> may vibrantly appear in a small publication, then disappear as readily.
>>> For the poet it takes a fierce stubbornness to put up with can appear as >>> an almost instant annihilation or a perennial sense of being 'not >> quite >>> dead on arrival.'

>>>
>>> The reason I write this is that I became quite aware of this condition
>>> whitle reading some quite fine books that have come my way to review.
>>> Recent intriguing good works by Peter Manson, George Albon, Joseph >>> Noble, Tyrone Williams, Tim Atkins - all guys (I realize), but, indeed, >>> a mix of sexual, ethnic and national persuasions, yet each (most at >>> mid-life, I think) working various lyric, experimental edges. They are >>> among many, obviously both men and women, out in the field of >>> combatting limited attention to their work,each working the language to >>> scrape out (sing, whatever), a non- familiar truth in fresh, demanding >>> and/or startling ways. As I begin to write these various or combined >>> reviews I remain struck by the ambition and struggle to make a work find >>> its location in a contemporay landscape that is mostly either >>> oppositional or,most likely. oblivious to an enterprise that - as both >>> poet and reader - I, if not most of us, totally support.
>>>
>>> Proportionately, without wanting to sound one bit self-piteous (because >>> the work can bring such joy and critical pleasure) Sisyphus might appear >>> to have had it relatively good! In this nation (USA), where Executive >>> (Cheney. Bush. etc.) management has done nothing but produce a national >>> paralysis of the imagination (it's nasty girim and impotent, to be >> both >>> obvious and frank). Without sounding like a 'draino liberal' (I >> hope), I >>> think its absolutely essential to do whatever we can (in community, >>> critcially, creatively, etc.) to vigorously support the efforts of both >>> poets and poems (lyric and otherwise) to continue to rise and take hold >>> in the public realm - and take form in the pleasure and combat of that.
>>> Otherwise we be in for a long, thirsty time! So yes, I am writing my >>> reviews. You, too?
>>>
>>> Stephen Vincent
>>> _http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>>> Where, if you have missed it so far, you can still visit my travels >>> with Charles Olson - and then some - in the Yucatan.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>

>>>
>>>
>>>
>> guidelines
>>>
>>>
>> guidelines
>>>
>> guidelines
>>>
>>
guidelines
>>
guidelines
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>
>

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG.
Version: 8.0.101 / Virus Database: 270.4.3/1525 - Release Date: 29/06/2008 3:09 PM

↑ Index

442. John Cunningham

Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

Mon 30 Jun 2008

Who is 'Danto', Troy? And what is communication? Do we write in the dominant voice of the time or do we attempt to extend the meaning of communication even if the majority at the time may not understand what is being said? Again, the language poets, as an example, must be engaged in high art as they have inspired many a 'poet' to walk that path. Although difficult poetry, it does communicate even if to a select few who take the trouble to learn the language.
John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On

Behalf Of Troy Camplin
Sent: June 29, 2008 1:01 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

Funny, of the examples I have given -- Michaelangelo, Mozart, Shakespeare, Moliere, Racine -- not one was an American and not one lived in a capitalist country. Yet each communicated extremely well to a very wide audience. Prior to them, one had raconteurs and bards who travelled and recited/sang poetry. The ancient Greek tragedies and comedies were wildly popular (you may recall Plato complaining about tragedy because it was wildly popular). The stories of the gods and heroes were told through the recitation of poetry, particularly epic poetry. So poetry has historically been popular, and it has been used primarily as a way of communication. The Church, for example, used visual arts to tell the stories of the Bible to its illiterate parishoners. Art is a form of communication, and has always been a form of communication. Danto goes so far as to argue that the arts are a form of rhetoric -- and he's probably on to something there.

If art is not communicating something, what is it doing? If you are not concerned with getting your vision across to others, then what you are doing isn't art. When you create art that is not intended to communicate with anyone, then you are engaged in nothing more than masturbation. Similarly, it doesn't result in the creation of anything new, because it never comes in contact with others. If Danto is right that art is a form of rhetoric, then those who either won't (or cannot) communicate with their artwork are simply bad artists. To proclaim that your art does not and should not communicate is simply to try to provide an argument for why your terribly bad art is in fact good art -- precisely because the art can't speak for itself as to its worth.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 12:10:21 PM
Subject: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

----- Original Message ----

From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 4:37:00 PM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

"...the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of art.

The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn. Those works both the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few 'truly understand'?"

Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

The limitation I see with this approach is that when one is trying to "communicate"or write so that it goes over with people who don't read poetry, is that the impulse to move in that direction is often fear. If one is open to a work of art, they'll recognize the power of it long before they fully understand, or even partially understand, what it may be "communicating." When artists start worrying about communication, the gesture suffers. What's the line by the painter Clyfford Still "demands for communication are presumptions and irrelevant."

It is a symptom of our capitalist society and the underlying materialist cosmology that equates numbers (books sold, how many "regular" people have heard of the artist, etc.) that creates the kind of attitude exhibited here by Dr. Camplin. Now, that may be his interest, or motivation and he is welcome to it. It does not interest me and I find I am usually not interested in art that can "go over" with average people, but there are exceptions. Anything really worthwhile takes a little effort to appreciate, or at least some background, or some kind of understanding or openness. People raised in North American TV culture want it now, if not sooner, like the ones who yell at the microwave to hurry up. Cook slow.

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG.

Version: 8.0.101 / Virus Database: 270.4.3/1525 - Release Date: 29/06/2008 3:09 PM

↑ Index

443. Steve Tills

Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Mon 30 Jun 2008

Nice, clear post, Troy! I haven't been drawn to some of your posts, but this one is quite fair-minded, in my opinion, and I appreciate its candor and the courage you have in making it.

Your last question, "Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few 'truly understand'" moves me to respond:

I, for one, used to think, quite narcissistically, to be honest, that "only if I were to figure out how to create something that only the elite understand, then, and only then, would my creation be Important (and/or recognised); then, and only then, would I have created anything/something that those I revered would respect; then, and only then, would I have created something that might survive my own mortality. Of course, this whole approach to writing (poetry) can become depressingly and maybe even tragically self-defeating, at best.

My wisest poetry mentor once told me something that still to this day inspires me and gives me hope. He said something like this, "Sometimes, if not often, a poet creates something really good BY ACCIDENT, or something profoudly good gets created by a young poet BY ACCIDENT." Or something to that effect. But in other words, one wouldn't have to Try so hard to please the (perceived) elites (or be an Elite, himself/herself), or, simply, try so hard to begin with. I have written a few good things, and a lot of them I didn't think were "cool enough" by any stretch of the imagination, and guess what, they were recognised (and even published) by some very fine poets/publishers I would have considered "elite." (Ha, I would have considered them elite if they had rejected my poming, too, so jeepers, so much of this is so very psycholigically (pre)determined.)

Some of the elite ARE, quite simply, "difficult" by nature. And some of them ARE, or will be, the best. (I suppose...)

But you're quite right, I think. There's a certain tyranny. And it's absolutely effing ridiculous, too. Like THEIR perspective or their view of humankind and WHAT is important and WHAT is worth writing about ("...is a preposition. It takes a noun. It takes a noun to know one..."). Absolutely, there is. And it's fucking despicable! It's extremely selfish, too.

It's all out of Competition, NOT (necessarily) for the fittest STUFF of our times to survive, but for the most powerful and power-holding forces to survive, to prosper, to rule. And that is just one way that the Elite fuck up, badly, I think. If they aren't more careful, ALL they will have on this planet and in the lives of their children and grandchildren is THEIR poetry and their perspective and WHAT they deem Meaningful and Worthy. Same principle is destroying all the so-called "lower" animals and plants, while "ManKIND" (Gabriel Gudding is interesting to me) rules over "Nature" and makes "her" subservient to our arrogant species' greed for power. Ummm, Immortality? Ummm, the dark side of the immortality-quest is ever there was one.

But this is all so very much more complicated... "Only a select few 'truly understand'" is the case with "the Best" in many fields and disciplines, but you can surely find posers in Science who advance themselves, not science, through obscurity, obfuscation, shreud political dealings. Are some of our elite poets only advancing themselves, not Poetry, and certainly not humanity or Life or anything much else? I think that this is a good question to keep in mind in the coming decades; it goes hand in hand with deconstructing and "de-nutting" all of the other selfishness and greed that may be driving our species to make most all others extinct and the planet uninhabitable.

Blah blah... I have aspired to being "an elite" and I now have more serious questions about such aspirations. I'd like to come out on the other side someday, but I don't know where I'll end up (probably just right here). What I do know is that my aspirations were doomed from the start, one because it wasn't my nature and two because it doesn't fit my truer sensitivities, anyhow anymore.

Steve Tills, M.A., Husband, Son, Brother, Friend, Writer, Reader, Sometimes Funner

Date: Fri, 27 Jun 2008 16:37:00 -0700

From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>

Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Math is both understandable and meaningful. But to practice it and understand it, you have to learn a lot of techniques.

The arts are different from the sciences (including math) in that they are meaningful and valuable in a more complex, more directly human way. There's dehumanizing, nihilistic art, and humanizing, meaningful art. I personally like a lot of elite art; but I also understand why most people don't. Part of it is indeed that they don't get it. And why isn't that a valid criticism? Why should people rely on a bunch of overeducated elites (like myself) telling them what this or that work means, and why it's significant? Shouldn't there be at least some level in every art where the average person "gets it"? This doesn't mean, of course, that one cannot learn more about a work -- meaning critics, etc. are still needed to help people see all the possibilities -- but the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of art.

The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn. Those works both the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few "truly understand"?

Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

↑ Index

444. blacksox

The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Mon 30 Jun 2008

The list has been filled with some thought provoking posts. In all things in life, a good foil always makes things more entertaining. I do not agree with the use of your term elitism. Shouldnâ€™t that be accessibility? One of the problems, besides the teaching and acceptance of poetry in our school systems, is the reading abilities of the students themselves. If you donâ€™t grasp the context of what you are reading, you are less likely to want to expose yourself to more of it.

You want to advance the teaching of poetic history, yet dismiss the surrealists and modernists? Are we re-writing poetic history to suite your own cause? Do you work for the government?

True, whistling does not make you a musician, but, it can become the formative steps of learning to play music.As a musician or artist during your career you have to ask yourself- Am I being obscure to further my art, or out of fear of becoming mainstream? I think this is a question every artist has to ask themselves. If you can answer this truthfully, then the amount of capital gains should not matter, or be the measurement of success.

Highly Entertained
Russ Golata

↑ Index

445. Thomas savage

Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Mon 30 Jun 2008

We've all attended bad poetry readings and there is no doubt that these do turn off some newcomers. Nevertheless, the audience for poetry is growing somewhat if only because there are more people writing poetry, due to creative writing programs in colleges, etc. That the vast majority of people know little and care less about poetry is still the case. In New York City, that poetry has recently disappeared from the subways and buses eliminates one of the few windows into poetry available to the "average" person, the commuter in this case, and is unfortunate. As for the audience for opera, you are just simply incorrect. It has been growing by leaps and bounds in the past ten years, due to the increasing presence it has on PBS and also due to the newly instituted practice of showing operas in movie theaters and other such venues. These places usually given over to more commercial entertainments wouldn't be opening themselves to the showings of opera if there weren't an audience for it. It so happens that at least in NYC, these theatres showing operas where usually only movies are available inevitably sell all their seats. Also, although I see many live operas, I recently saw one at a movie theater on 14th St. in Manhattan and enjoyed it immensely. Also, Symphony Space, where I work, now shows pretaped operas from La Scala and La Fenice in Italy and has done so well by these showings that it is repeating most of them this summer.
Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Sun, 6/29/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, June 29, 2008, 2:28 PM

I try to pay more attention to the actual art produced rather than the rhetoric of those producing the art. In a published article I wrote about game theory and literature, I argue that the surrealists attempted to sell a bill of goods that they themselves did not buy into. Many post-surrealists did, however -- producing a lot of incredibly bad poetry that all sounds the same, and that nobody wants to read. The actual surrealists, however, produced a lot of very well-crafted, difficult poetry. They claimed that they were trying to create a poetry of and for the people (as opposed to the elitist verse of the romantics, with their regular rhythms and rhymes), but they in fact created work that only artistic elites would even begin to appreciate. We see this going on throughout the Modernist and Postmodernist periods, where the experiments are proclaimed to be intended for the masses, but the masses reject it en masse. Perhaps only T.S.

Eliot and Ezra Pound were the only honest poets of the last century, being unapologetically elitist in their verse and theory.

The attacks by other posters on "best-sellers" and "capitalism" belies their elitism. Why shouldn't some measure of worth be how many books of poetry you sell? Except that then that would indicate you are in fact not a very good poet if you can't sell but a half dozen copies at your readings. So we get attacks on capitalism and the commodification of art, etc. as excuses for why nobody wants to read their rotten poems.

Now, I do agree with you that many of our problems with the acceptance of poetry lies with our teachers and with the educational system in general. Teachers seem to go out of their way to make students abhor poetry. Of course, most teachers don't understand poetry at all, and that ignorance translates to hatred of the material, which is communicated to the students. The few who make it through high school not hating poetry have still learned nothing about it. They learn that one has "poetic license," which they are told means anything goes in poetry. Thus they begin writing poetry without the least understanding of what a poem really is, or what it does. They think that just because they speak the English language, they can write; and they think that they are being radical poets by breaking all the rules, not even knowing what the rules are. While we would never dream of claiming to be a great pianist if we never learned the proper way to play piano (the ability to whistle does not make one a musician), we somehow think that we can be a great poet without understanding the first thing about poetry, its origins, its history, how poems are similar and differ among cultures, etc. Our college professors don't help at all because they are pushing the kind of experimental poetry they are writing, forgetting that their students don't even have the basics. The consequence is a lot of people writing poetry, not having the kind of historical understanding of the art that painters and musicians are made to have, and as a consequence writing poems nobody really wants to read.

I find it laughable to read peoples' arguments that poetry is in fact popular because of some anecdotal evidence. This would be like arguing that opera is popular because I have friends who, like me, go to the opera. In fact, the opera house is always packed, so it must be spectacularly popular! Nonsense. Most of the poetry readings I've been to have been full of bad poets reading bad poetry to each other and their friends. I've been to poetry readings that were exceptions -- but they typically took place in such places as art museums and galleries, and involved selection of the poets beforehand. And in those cases, few were there primarily for the poetry.

I personally would like to turn this around. I think people miss out on a lot when they do not read or listen to poetry -- or are otherwise exposed to the arts. I think that if poets would simply learn the history of their art, and keep their audience in mind when they write, that it would go a long way to poets creating poetry that people might want to read. But it requires making things of beauty, which inspire people to want to create more poetry like it. It has to be reproductive.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 10:41:29 AM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Troy,

But I think that's where you're wrong: most of what you're calling "elite" isn't intended to be only understood by a few, but rather represents (sometimes vain) attempts to open dialog where there wasn't previously. In this case, then, what most people don't understand isn't what they don't "get", but what they aren't familiar with (as in Michael's example) due to lack of good teachers, exposure, what have you.

-Ryan

On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 7:37 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
wrote:
> Math is both understandable and meaningful. But to practice it and understand it, you have to learn a lot of techniques.
>
> The arts are different from the sciences (including math) in that they are meaningful and valuable in a more complex, more directly human way. There's dehumanizing, nihilistic art, and humanizing, meaningful art. I personally like a lot of elite art; but I also understand why most people don't. Part of it is indeed that they don't get it. And why isn't that a valid criticism? Why should people rely on a bunch of overeducated elites (like myself) telling them what this or that work means, and why it's significant? Shouldn't there be at least some level in every art where the average person "gets it"? This doesn't mean, of course, that one cannot learn more about a work -- meaning critics, etc. are still needed to help people see all the possibilities -- but the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of art.
>
> The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn.

Those
works both the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few "truly understand"?
>
> Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 3:23:43 PM
> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>
> How come mathematics gets to be "elitist"? Why is poetry condemned to
> "having to have meaning/be understandable?"
>
> Personally, I don't believe in elitism as a label; I think it's > largely used to hide embarrassing moments of "I don't get this."
>
> On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 9:49 AM, Thomas savage
<[redacted]> wrote:
>> Nobody reads poetry anymore because they aren't exposed to it as children as a part of their education. Once it vanished from their schooling, since they had no access to it, most people don't even know poetry exists.
As for the elitism of experimental poetry of the 20th and 21st century, that is another matter. Anyone who takes chances with a tradition risks isolating him or herself from the larger group of people who will not understand what is going on or who simply don't care. I don't think that is necessarily elitism but in certain cases, particularly Pound's and Eliot's, it may have been accompanied by elitism. Williams, Olson, and many other experimental poets were populists trying to do something that would resonate with the larger masses of educated readers. Whether they ever reached those readers is another matter. Regards, Tom Savage
>>
>> --- On Thu, 6/26/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>> From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>

>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Thursday, June 26, 2008, 12:45 PM
>>
>> The two aren't unrelated, you know. It's no coincidence that you started >> getting things like impressionism when photography came about. Milan Kundera
>> observes that the novel (for example) should do only what the novel can do. The >> same can be said about poetry. TV and film are their own media, and do not >> necessarily exclude the reading of poetry. Much of the Modernists' >> experiments came about precisely in reaction to such things as radio, etc. Part >> of the result was that it became something only elitists were interested in >> (bizarre poetry, etc. is a great way for elitists to separate themselves from >> the rabble, you know). But lyric poetry in the form of songs is as strong as >> ever -- belying claims that other media pushed poetry aside. What pushed poetry >> aside was the fact that poets began writing poetry 1) knowing nothing about >> poetry, and 2) writing as elitists for elitists. I listen to the radio, watch
>> movies and TV, use a computer, etc. and also read >> novels and poetry, so these different forms are not mutually exclusive. In >> fact, they can be mutually enhancing. If people are running away from your art, >> it may have more to do with the state of the art. Unless that is seriously >> considered (which is also an historical perspective), then you're never >> going to understand why nobody reads poetry anymore.
>>
>> Troy Camplin
>>
>>
>> ----- Original Message ----

>> From: Dan Glass <[redacted]>
>> To: [redacted]
>> Sent: Wednesday, June 25, 2008 4:17:26 PM
>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>>
>> Way to think historically.
>>
>> I love that it's the bad modernist poetry that made people read less
>> poetry,
>> rather than things like radio, television, movies, computers, video games,
>> the assembly line, and other 20th c. inventions...
>>
>> I mean, seriously. Do you really think history has nothing to do with >> poetry?
>>
>> On Wed, Jun 25, 2008 at 12:37 PM, Troy Camplin
<[redacted]>
>> wrote:
>>
>>> Historically, lyrical poetry has had a very large audience. It began dying
>>> off with Modernism, and postmodernism and LANGUAGE poetry have all
but >>> killed it off. The few poetry bestsellers are the lyric poets like >> Frederick
>>> Turner.
>>>
>>> Troy Camplin
>>>
>>>
>>> ----- Original Message ----
>>> From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
>>> To: [redacted]
>>> Sent: Tuesday, June 24, 2008 8:08:10 PM
>>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>>>
>>> Thanks, Joanie, for pointing to WW lodestar! Then the quote. Yes, a quick
>>> and impressive ear you have for echoes!
>>> What? Are we (yon poets) fated to repeat ourselves century upon

century
>>> with twists on the metaphors and content du jour!!! An endless spiral
>> loop
>>> earthly journey? An eternity of small audiences?
>>> Ain't complaining too hard. As long as there are good and quick ears
>> in the >>> neighborhood that can take and hear a poem to the max, who needs more?!
>>> (It's always nice when it happens - large)
>>>
>>> Got to get back to writing those reviews - among all the other >>> 'requirements'!
>>>
>>> Stephen V
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> "Mackowski, Joanie (mackowje)"
<[redacted]> >> wrote: Nice to >>> read your thoughts, Stephen. I wonder though "izzit not ever >>> thus," for in them I hear an echo of Wordsworth, from the >> "preface to >>> the 2nd edition of the lyrical ballads." That your thoughts are >> familiar >>> to me suggests that the lyric may be in a steady sissy-fun state, rather >>> than about to die altogether. Yet I'm not suggesting that the work to >>> preserve & enlarge our atttention to the lyric isn't crucial;
>> rather, I >>> think we may whistle a bit while we work. And WW, while he affirms the >>> frustration, also suggests a way to progress: he says that yes quiet >>> lyrics may easily be drowned out, but that learning to attend to lyric

>>> quietness, via both reading and writing, is a crucial practice, one that >>> strengthens "certain inherent inherent and indestructible qualities
>> of
>>> the human mind," qualities which WW thinks are good.
>>>
>>> I'm going to copy down a hunk o' WW here. It feels good to type
>> it, like
>>> a meditation/prayer:
>>>
>>> From WW: "For the human mind is capable of being excited without the >>> application of gross and violent stimulants.... It has therefore >>> appeared to me that to endeavor to prodice or enlarge this capability is >>> one of the best services in which, at any period, a writer can be >>> engaged; but this service, excellent at all times, is especially so at >>> the present day. For a multitude of causes, unknown to former times, are >>> now acting with a combined force to blunt the distriminating powers of >>> the mind, and, unfitting it for all voluntary exertion, to reduce it to >>> a state of almost savage torpor. The most effective of these causes are >>> the great national events which are daily taking place, and the >>> increasing accumulation of men in cities, where the uniformity of thei
>>> roccupations produces a craving for extraordinary incident, which the >>> rapid communication of intelligence hourly gratiafies. To this tendency >>> of life and manners the literature and theatrical exhibition of the >>> country have conformed themselves. The invaluable works of our elder >>> writers...Shakespeare and Milton, are driven into neglect by frantic

>>> novelss....When I think about this degrading thirst after outrageous >>> stimulation, I am almost ashamed to have spoken of the feeble endeavor
>>> made in these volumes to counteract it; ... had I not a deep impression >>> of certain inherent and indestructible qualities of the human mind, and >>> likewise of certain powers in the great and permanent objects that act >>> upon it, which are equally inherent and indestructible...."
>>>
>>> .....
>>> Joanie Mackowski, PhD
>>> Assistant Professor
>>> English & Comparative Literature
>>> University of Cincinnati
>>> PO Box 210069
>>> Cincinnati, OH 45221-0069
>>> Tel. 513/[redacted]
>>> Fax 513/[redacted]
>>> [redacted]
>>> http://homepages.uc.edu/~mackowje
>> <http://homepages.uc.edu/%7Emackowje>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On >>> Behalf Of Stephen Vincent
>>> Sent: Monday, June 23, 2008 10:47 PM
>>> To: [redacted]
>>> Subject: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>>>
>>> Sometimes I read a lyric poem - singular or serial - and I am struck by >>> two contrary reading experiences. On one hand, I am taken by a poem's >>> structure, the attention of the poet, the technique, tone, etc, - how >>> forcefully these combinations impel themselves on to the page. I am >>> totally present with the process, and the momentary totality of

the >>> poem's object, its presence. I am with it - which means to say its >>> particulars have become an assured presence within the immediate >>> horizons of my take (world) as a reader.
>>>
>>> Yet, on the other hand, the poem(s), no matter how solid its occurrence
>>> in my imagination, critical presence, etc. is soon gone, particularly as
>>> I move on to the works of others, or shift my awareness to, say,
the
>>> television, the inevitable perk and threnody of the news, its >>> repetitions and cycles.
>>>
>>> And, in terms of the lyric poem as an experience in reading - no matter
>>> how present it was - - becomes such a fleeting thing without much >>> bearing on what's left of either my private or public space.
What is >>> that that 'thing' that caught me and then flew by? Why does much >> work -
>>> much of it good, and, certainly, labor intensive - fly by with but
a >>> transitional, momentary effect? Whatever act or frame could make that >>> pleasure more concrete, an enduring, significant presence, a constantly >>> returnable project & gift?? (Perhaps, obviously. that is part of the >>> poet's job, too).
>>>
>>> I suspect we know that's the job of a critical community - to maximize >>> the public presence and circulation of a work or works. To review
a >>> person's work, to secure (ideally) our attention. And, no doubt, the >>> importance of academic institutions. To insist students write critical >>> papers, memorize, and/or improv new works off the work of others

- to >>> insure that a work secure a place, a point of memory in the young,
as >>> well as older persons. And, for those of us outside institutions,
to >>> resist and confront the the sense of erasure that inevitably haunts
>>> those of us who live, read, write and work not 'at the margins',
>> but in >>> locations that require a different sense of critical reception and >>> measure.
>>>
>>> Without this surrounding labor of critical community, so many often >>> extraordinarily fine lyric poems - let alone larger forms. - end up >>> fleeting around, or become paralysed in a kind of statuary limbo.
They >>> may vibrantly appear in a small publication, then disappear as readily.
>>> For the poet it takes a fierce stubbornness to put up with can appear as >>> an almost instant annihilation or a perennial sense of being 'not >> quite >>> dead on arrival.'
>>>
>>> The reason I write this is that I became quite aware of this condition
>>> whitle reading some quite fine books that have come my way to review.
>>> Recent intriguing good works by Peter Manson, George Albon, Joseph >>> Noble, Tyrone Williams, Tim Atkins - all guys (I realize), but, indeed, >>> a mix of sexual, ethnic and national persuasions, yet each (most
at >>> mid-life, I think) working various lyric, experimental edges.
They are >>> among many, obviously both men and women, out in the field of >>> combatting limited attention to their work,each working the language to >>> scrape out (sing, whatever), a non- familiar truth in fresh, demanding >>> and/or startling ways. As I begin to write these various or combined >>> reviews I remain struck by the ambition and struggle to make a work find

>>> its location in a contemporay landscape that is mostly either >>> oppositional or,most likely. oblivious to an enterprise that - as both >>> poet and reader - I, if not most of us, totally support.
>>>
>>> Proportionately, without wanting to sound one bit self-piteous (because >>> the work can bring such joy and critical pleasure) Sisyphus might appear >>> to have had it relatively good! In this nation (USA), where Executive
>>> (Cheney. Bush. etc.) management has done nothing but produce a national >>> paralysis of the imagination (it's nasty girim and impotent, to be >> both >>> obvious and frank). Without sounding like a 'draino liberal' (I >> hope), I >>> think its absolutely essential to do whatever we can (in community,
>>> critcially, creatively, etc.) to vigorously support the efforts of both >>> poets and poems (lyric and otherwise) to continue to rise and take hold >>> in the public realm - and take form in the pleasure and combat of that.
>>> Otherwise we be in for a long, thirsty time! So yes, I am writing
my >>> reviews. You, too?
>>>
>>> Stephen Vincent
>>> _http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>>> Where, if you have missed it so far, you can still visit my travels

>>> with Charles Olson - and then some - in the Yucatan.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
Check
>>>
Check
>> guidelines
>>>
>>>
Check
>> guidelines
>>>
Check
>> guidelines
>>>
>>
guidelines
>>
guidelines
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>
>

↑ Index

446. Thomas savage
Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
Mon 30 Jun 2008

If poets choose to be elitist, there is nothing that can be done about it, Steve. Nevertheless, I think your poetry is less elitist than you seem to want it to be. Especially it's connection to jazz and other forms of music which also have small audiences and thus could be called elitist, too, by some warped logic but which aren't intentionally so. Some in the audiences for all of this, including our poetry, may think themselves part of an elite because they listen to and may even understand our poetry or at least think they do. But that is the error of the small audience elevating itself as if it were a pyramid of taste to which they assign themselves the topmost point. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Sat, 6/28/08, steve d. dalachinsky <[redacted]> wrote:

From: steve d. dalachinsky <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, June 28, 2008, 6:39 PM

poetry is and i emphasize IS elitist and in most cases closed off and alot of that CLOSED-OFF-NESS is between poets and poetry worlds etc this guy you met - a rare exception these days tho a welcome one this state has less to do with school at this point than with those schooled and bringing it to the world at large i am an uneducated elitist poet and don't care whether everyone understands my pomes

but also acknowledge though abhore the world of slam etc thast made poetrty more accesible
MTV bob holman nuyorican etc wow it's humid big rain storm city wettens sparrows feeding and taking sand baths
2 plus 2 equals nonsense

On Sat, 28 Jun 2008 00:07:18 -0500 Michael Ford <[redacted]> writes:
> Elizabeth, this is exactly right. If poetry lacks readers, it is not > because > of the poetry itself but because of the way poetry is presented and > packaged > in schools and other cultural institutions that distribute it.
>
> A good anecdote: Earlier this year, Ron Padgett and Joel Dailey did
> a > reading together here in New Orleans, at the Gold Mine bar in the > French
> Quarter. I was on my way down there on the streetcar, when the guy > sitting > in front of me, who was writing a text message, turned around and > asked me > how to spell "poetry." I told him. About half an hour after I got > to the > bar, that same guy walked in. He had asked me how to spell poetry > because his text was about meeting a friend at the reading. After

> the > reading was over, we talked for a few minutes about poetry. He told > me that > he'd always thought of poetry as something elitist, for stuck up > university > types, but that this reading was nothing like that. He really > enjoyed it.
> His impression of poetry was formed in school, where poetry was > introduced > to him as something alien and impossible to understand. Something > that would > never engage someone like him, a working class guy with no intention
> of > going to college.
>
> People are taught that the world of poetry is a closed one that they > can > neither enter nor interact with in an real way. Poetry in the > classroom is > far too often something fixed, that occurred in the past and has > lost any > possibility of dynamism or a present. When it is seen as something > that > addresses present concerns, present language, and when it is a > conversation > between present, living people, it is no longer seen as irrelevant, > regardless of its difficulty. Of course, you can't please everyone, > but what > poet ever has?
>
> I have always thought that the "people don't read poetry anymore
> because > poetry is too hard to understand" argument was itself elitist, a > means of > cordoning poetry off as the province of people who only enjoy > antiquated > styles of writing.
>

> Michael Ford
>
>
> On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 1:49 AM, Elizabeth Switaj <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > People run away from my art because it's a huge hairy monster > (though > > it has a good heart at times). The fact of the matter is that > people > > aren't fleeing poetry in terror or otherwise; they merely do not > seek > > it out. Unlike pop music, it isn't widely broadcast. For the most > > part, it's taught in school (when it's taught) as a dead thing > created > > hundreds of years ago. The mast majority of kids who learn to hate > or > > be intimidated by poetry aren't learning those feelings from > reading
> > The Wasteland, The Cantos, or anything that came later. They're > > learning it through the way Byron, Shelley, and Shakespeare (and > maybe > > a smidge of Milton) are taught. This is, however, not the fault
> of > > those illustrious poets.
> >
> > On the other hand, I have on occasion had the opportunity to > visit > > middle school classrooms in the US and guess what? The students > really > > dug experimental and other free verse poetry (including my own > > hairy-monster art) when it was presented to them with enthusiasm.
> >
> > Elizabeth Kate Switaj
> > elizabethkateswitaj.net
> >
> guidelines
> >
>

>
>

↑ Index

447. Elizabeth Switaj
Re: Fw: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
Mon 30 Jun 2008

Shakespeare never called your work specifically masturbation. The typewriter monkey said that the kind of banana that is not intended for an audience, that does not communicate anything, is masturbation. If the apple took offense, the worm is not my doing. The figs are the ones who take offense. Fruits have taken a general argument personally, which is certainly not my fault.

Now, as for the beauty of rhythm and rhyme, that's all a bunch of sound and fury signifying nothing. Free verse is energy. Batter is energy. Matter is energy. The moon is energy. If the masses want to know if the elitist hasn't said anything, take the topic word and replace it and see if the circus clown can make it make sense. Make "a poem" = "love," "poet" = "lover" and "reader" = "beloved" and the poet still makes just as much (non)sense. Certainly dancing with whiskey doesn't make one a good theorist.

If "free verse has no place in art", then neither does Marxism or socialism or nationalism or identity or race or sex or gender or culture or religion or anything else of human concern, thought, or behavior. Again, the stones don't know what the grass could possibly mean that experimentalism has no place in art. Tibet is a commodity. Always has been. Always will be. Again, it was only dreamers who have tried to separate art from that aspect, to make it into something that nobody but the dreamers would want.

Elizabeth Kate Switaj
www.elizabethkateswitaj.net

↑ Index

448. Troy Camplin
Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
Mon 30 Jun 2008

Just because Emily Dickinson didn't get her poems published (though she did try), that doesn't mean she didn't try to communicate with others through them. Please note that I never said that we should use the number of consumers to judge literary art. Never said it. Never implied it. To use a popular art form: some of the best movies weren't wildly popular when they were first released. Some had to build audiences over time.

Now, the quote by Olsen you have is half right: poetry is language at its least careless. But to say it's at its least logical shows both an ignorance of logic on his part, and an (purposeful?) ignorance of the history of poetry. Still sounds liek a bad theorist to me.

I do note that people tend to get defensive when they realize that their own position is indefensible, but they still want to cling to it.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, June 29, 2008 11:07:12 PM
Subject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

A last thought about using numbers of "consumers" to judge literary art. This August marks the 2nd year that Lana Ayers and I will facilitate the August Poetry Postcard Fest. http://poetrypostcards.blogspot.com/

You take a card, address it to the next person on your list, refer to a previous card in composing the original poem on the card, if relevant, and send it to that person. I tend to transcribe postcard poems after writing them, before dropping them in the mail. We're about to release guidelines for 2008 and accept participants for this year's festivities.

Does it make the effort any less relevant if the poem is addressed to only one person? Will no one understand if I make a reference only that person might "understand?" Is it my job as a poet to send a poem that the person will "understand?" Can appreciation of art go beyond conscious "understanding" of meaning and intent? What does Jazz mean?

Charles Olson's statement in Projective Verse, "use of speech at its least careless and least logical" resonates with me. Does that make me elitist? Would my postcard poems not be appreciated by anyone else besides the reader?

I can't believe you think Emily Dickinson's work is unimportant because she was not interested in publication, grants and the admiration of the SUNY-Buffalo listserv poets. Or those who come here just to stir up shit.

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

----- Original Message ----
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, June 29, 2008 11:00:44 AM
Subject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

Funny, of the examples I have given -- Michaelangelo, Mozart, Shakespeare, Moliere, Racine -- not one was an American and not one lived in a capitalist country. Yet each communicated extremely well to a very wide audience. Prior to them, one had raconteurs and bards who travelled and recited/sang poetry. The ancient Greek tragedies and comedies were wildly popular (you may recall Plato complaining about tragedy because it was wildly popular). The stories of the gods and heroes were told through the recitation of poetry, particularly epic poetry. So poetry has historically been popular, and it has been used primarily as a way of communication. The Church, for example, used visual arts to tell the stories of the Bible to its illiterate parishoners. Art is a form of communication, and has always been a form of communication. Danto goes so far as to argue that the arts are a form of rhetoric -- and he's probably on to something there.

If art is not communicating something, what is it doing? If you are not concerned with getting your vision across to others, then what you are doing isn't art. When you create art that is not intended to communicate with anyone, then you are engaged in nothing more than masturbation. Similarly, it doesn't result in the creation of anything new, because it never comes in contact with others. If Danto is right that art is a form of rhetoric, then those who either won't (or cannot) communicate with their artwork are simply bad artists. To proclaim that your art does not and should not communicate is simply to try to provide an argument for why your terribly bad art is in fact good art -- precisely because the art can't speak for itself as to its worth.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 12:10:21 PM
Subject: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

----- Original Message ----

From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 4:37:00 PM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

"...the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of art.

The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn. Those works both the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few 'truly understand'?"

Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

The limitation I see with this approach is that when one is trying to "communicate"or write so that it goes over with people who don't read poetry, is that the impulse to move in that direction is often fear. If one is open to a work of art, they'll recognize the power of it long before they fully understand, or even partially understand, what it may be "communicating." When artists start worrying about communication, the gesture suffers. What's the line by the painter Clyfford Still "demands for communication are presumptions and irrelevant."

It is a symptom of our capitalist society and the underlying materialist cosmology that equates numbers (books sold, how many "regular" people have heard of the artist, etc.) that creates the kind of attitude exhibited here by Dr. Camplin. Now, that may be his interest, or motivation and he is welcome to it. It does not interest me and I find I am usually not interested in art that can "go over" with average people, but there are exceptions. Anything really worthwhile takes a little effort to appreciate, or at least some background, or some kind of understanding or openness. People raised in North American TV culture want it now, if not sooner, like the ones who yell at the microwave to hurry up. Cook slow.

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

↑ Index

449. Troy Camplin

Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Mon 30 Jun 2008

People who go to an art gallery are there primarily for the art. Except for the poets. My brother ran an art gallery, and I know what the audience is like, who were regulars, and what they were there for.

You're right, that is a cliche about beauty. And it's primarily nonsense.

If you want to read some of what I have written on beauty:
http://zatavu.blogspot.com/2007/10/middle-way-part-2-american-denial.html
http://www.evolutionaryaesthetics.blogspot.com/

If you want to read a poetic response to where too many poets have gotten us, go to: http://zatavu.blogspot.com/2008/02/blaze.html

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: John Cunningham <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, June 30, 2008 8:06:42 AM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

In response to Troy Camplin, you make the statement " few were there primarily for the poetry" with regard to poetry readings in art galleries, etc. How is this statement supported - by anecdotal evidence? You asked a few "buddies" why they were there? I take exception to another of your statements: "But it requires making things of beauty, which inspire people to want to create more poetry like it. It has to be reproductive." Keeping in mind the cliché that beauty is in the eye of the beholder, if "beautiful" poetry is to be reproductive, then language poetry must be the most beautiful of poetries as it has been a dominant force, reproducing like rabbits, since the mid-20th century. Finally, I have one thing to say regarding your statement "While we would never dream of claiming to be a great pianist if we never learned the proper way to play piano", that being Thelonius Monk - he of the splayed fingers. I don't think many would disagree that Monk was a great pianist yet those same would likely agree that he "never learned the proper way to play piano". The only thing that counts is expressivity. Whether Jimmie Hendricks plucked the strings with his fingers or his teeth, as long as he was able to fully express himself the technique didn't matter. Just my thoughts. John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Troy Camplin
Sent: June 29, 2008 1:29 PM

To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

I try to pay more attention to the actual art produced rather than the rhetoric of those producing the art. In a published article I wrote about game theory and literature, I argue that the surrealists attempted to sell a bill of goods that they themselves did not buy into. Many post-surrealists did, however -- producing a lot of incredibly bad poetry that all sounds the same, and that nobody wants to read. The actual surrealists, however, produced a lot of very well-crafted, difficult poetry. They claimed that they were trying to create a poetry of and for the people (as opposed to the elitist verse of the romantics, with their regular rhythms and rhymes), but they in fact created work that only artistic elites would even begin to appreciate. We see this going on throughout the Modernist and Postmodernist periods, where the experiments are proclaimed to be intended for the masses, but the masses reject it en masse. Perhaps only T.S. Eliot and Ezra Pound were the only honest poets of the last century, being unapologetically elitist in their verse and theory.

The attacks by other posters on "best-sellers" and "capitalism" belies their elitism. Why shouldn't some measure of worth be how many books of poetry you sell? Except that then that would indicate you are in fact not a very good poet if you can't sell but a half dozen copies at your readings. So we get attacks on capitalism and the commodification of art, etc. as excuses for why nobody wants to read their rotten poems.

Now, I do agree with you that many of our problems with the acceptance of poetry lies with our teachers and with the educational system in general. Teachers seem to go out of their way to make students abhor poetry. Of course, most teachers don't understand poetry at all, and that ignorance translates to hatred of the material, which is communicated to the students. The few who make it through high school not hating poetry have still learned nothing about it. They learn that one has "poetic license," which they are told means anything goes in poetry. Thus they begin writing poetry without the least understanding of what a poem really is, or what it does. They think that just because they speak the English language, they can write; and they think that they are being radical poets by breaking all the rules, not even knowing what the rules are. While we would never dream of claiming to be a great pianist if we never learned the proper way to play piano (the ability to whistle does not make one a musician), we somehow think that we can be a great poet without understanding the first thing about poetry, its origins, its history, how poems are similar and differ among cultures, etc. Our college professors don't help at all because they are pushing the kind of experimental poetry they are writing, forgetting that their students don't even have the basics. The consequence is a lot of people writing poetry, not having the kind of historical understanding of the art that painters and musicians are made to have, and as a consequence writing poems nobody really wants to read.

I find it laughable to read peoples' arguments that poetry is in fact popular because of some anecdotal evidence. This would be like arguing that opera is popular because I have friends who, like me, go to the opera. In fact, the opera house is always packed, so it must be spectacularly popular! Nonsense. Most of the poetry readings I've been to have been full of bad poets reading bad poetry to each other and their friends. I've been to poetry readings that were exceptions -- but they typically took place in such places as art museums and galleries, and involved selection of the poets beforehand. And in those cases, few were there primarily for the poetry.

I personally would like to turn this around. I think people miss out on a lot when they do not read or listen to poetry -- or are otherwise exposed to the arts. I think that if poets would simply learn the history of their art, and keep their audience in mind when they write, that it would go a long way to poets creating poetry that people might want to read. But it requires making things of beauty, which inspire people to want to create more poetry like it. It has to be reproductive.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 10:41:29 AM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Troy,

But I think that's where you're wrong: most of what you're calling "elite" isn't intended to be only understood by a few, but rather represents (sometimes vain) attempts to open dialog where there wasn't previously. In this case, then, what most people don't understand isn't what they don't "get", but what they aren't familiar with (as in Michael's example) due to lack of good teachers, exposure, what have you.

-Ryan

On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 7:37 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
> Math is both understandable and meaningful. But to practice it and understand it, you have to learn a lot of techniques.
>
> The arts are different from the sciences (including math) in that they are meaningful and valuable in a more complex, more directly human way. There's dehumanizing, nihilistic art, and humanizing, meaningful art. I personally like a lot of elite art; but I also understand why most people don't. Part of it is indeed that they don't get it. And why isn't that a valid criticism? Why should people rely on a bunch of overeducated elites (like myself) telling them what this or that work means, and why it's significant?

Shouldn't there be at least some level in every art where the average person "gets it"? This doesn't mean, of course, that one cannot learn more about a work -- meaning critics, etc. are still needed to help people see all the possibilities -- but the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of art.
>
> The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn.
Those works both the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few "truly understand"?
>
> Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 3:23:43 PM
> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>
> How come mathematics gets to be "elitist"? Why is poetry condemned to
> "having to have meaning/be understandable?"
>
> Personally, I don't believe in elitism as a label; I think it's > largely used to hide embarrassing moments of "I don't get this."
>
> On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 9:49 AM, Thomas savage <[redacted]>
wrote:
>> Nobody reads poetry anymore because they aren't exposed to it as children as a part of their education. Once it vanished from their schooling, since they had no access to it, most people don't even know poetry exists. As for the elitism of experimental poetry of the 20th and 21st century, that is another matter.. Anyone who takes chances with a tradition risks isolating him or herself from the larger group of people who will not understand what is going on or who simply don't care. I don't think that is necessarily elitism but in certain cases, particularly Pound's and Eliot's, it may have been accompanied by elitism. Williams, Olson, and many other experimental poets were populists trying to do something that would resonate with the larger masses of educated readers. Whether they ever reached those readers is another matter. Regards, Tom Savage

>>
>> --- On Thu, 6/26/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>> From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Thursday, June 26, 2008, 12:45 PM
>>
>> The two aren't unrelated, you know. It's no coincidence that you started >> getting things like impressionism when photography came about. Milan Kundera >> observes that the novel (for example) should do only what the novel can do. The >> same can be said about poetry. TV and film are their own media, and do not >> necessarily exclude the reading of poetry. Much of the Modernists' >> experiments came about precisely in reaction to such things as radio, etc. Part >> of the result was that it became something only elitists were interested in >> (bizarre poetry, etc. is a great way for elitists to separate themselves from >> the rabble, you know). But lyric poetry in the form of songs is as strong as >> ever -- belying claims that other media pushed poetry aside. What pushed poetry >> aside was the fact that poets began writing poetry 1) knowing nothing about >> poetry, and 2) writing as elitists for elitists. I listen to the radio, watch >> movies and TV, use a computer, etc. and also read >> novels and poetry, so these different forms are not mutually exclusive. In >> fact, they can be mutually enhancing. If people are running away from your art, >> it may have more to do with the state of the art. Unless that is seriously >> considered (which is also an historical perspective), then you're never >> going to understand why nobody reads poetry anymore.

>>
>> Troy Camplin
>>
>>
>> ----- Original Message ----
>> From: Dan Glass <[redacted]>
>> To: [redacted]
>> Sent: Wednesday, June 25, 2008 4:17:26 PM
>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>>
>> Way to think historically.
>>
>> I love that it's the bad modernist poetry that made people read less
>> poetry,
>> rather than things like radio, television, movies, computers, video games,
>> the assembly line, and other 20th c. inventions...
>>
>> I mean, seriously. Do you really think history has nothing to do with >> poetry?
>>
>> On Wed, Jun 25, 2008 at 12:37 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
>> wrote:
>>
>>> Historically, lyrical poetry has had a very large audience. It began dying
>>> off with Modernism, and postmodernism and LANGUAGE poetry have all
but >>> killed it off. The few poetry bestsellers are the lyric poets like >> Frederick
>>> Turner.
>>>
>>> Troy Camplin
>>>
>>>
>>> ----- Original Message ----
>>> From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
>>> To: [redacted]
>>> Sent: Tuesday, June 24, 2008 8:08:10 PM
>>> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

>>>
>>> Thanks, Joanie, for pointing to WW lodestar! Then the quote. Yes, a quick >>> and impressive ear you have for echoes!
>>> What? Are we (yon poets) fated to repeat ourselves century upon century >>> with twists on the metaphors and content du jour!!! An endless spiral >> loop
>>> earthly journey? An eternity of small audiences?
>>> Ain't complaining too hard. As long as there are good and quick ears
>> in the >>> neighborhood that can take and hear a poem to the max, who needs more?!
>>> (It's always nice when it happens - large)
>>>
>>> Got to get back to writing those reviews - among all the other >>> 'requirements'!
>>>
>>> Stephen V
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> "Mackowski, Joanie (mackowje)" <[redacted]>
>> wrote: Nice to >>> read your thoughts, Stephen. I wonder though "izzit not ever >>> thus," for in them I hear an echo of Wordsworth, from the >> "preface to >>> the 2nd edition of the lyrical ballads." That your thoughts are >> familiar
>>> to me suggests that the lyric may be in a steady sissy-fun state, rather >>> than about to die altogether. Yet I'm not suggesting that the work to >>> preserve & enlarge our atttention to the lyric isn't crucial;
>> rather, I >>> think we may whistle a bit while we work. And WW, while he affirms the >>> frustration, also suggests a way to progress: he says that yes quiet
>>> lyrics may easily be drowned out, but that learning to attend to lyric >>> quietness, via both reading and writing, is a crucial practice, one that >>> strengthens "certain inherent inherent and indestructible qualities
>> of >>> the human mind," qualities which WW thinks are good.

>>>
>>> I'm going to copy down a hunk o' WW here. It feels good to type
>> it, like
>>> a meditation/prayer:
>>>
>>> From WW: "For the human mind is capable of being excited without the >>> application of gross and violent stimulants.... It has therefore >>> appeared to me that to endeavor to prodice or enlarge this capability is >>> one of the best services in which, at any period, a writer can be >>> engaged; but this service, excellent at all times, is especially so at >>> the present day. For a multitude of causes, unknown to former times, are >>> now acting with a combined force to blunt the distriminating powers of >>> the mind, and, unfitting it for all voluntary exertion, to reduce it to >>> a state of almost savage torpor. The most effective of these causes are >>> the great national events which are daily taking place, and the >>> increasing accumulation of men in cities, where the uniformity of thei >>> roccupations produces a craving for extraordinary incident, which the >>> rapid communication of intelligence hourly gratiafies. To this tendency >>> of life and manners the literature and theatrical exhibition of the >>> country have conformed themselves. The invaluable works of our elder >>> writers...Shakespeare and Milton, are driven into neglect by frantic
>>> novelss....When I think about this degrading thirst after outrageous >>> stimulation, I am almost ashamed to have spoken of the feeble endeavor
>>> made in these volumes to counteract it; ... had I not a deep impression >>> of certain inherent and indestructible qualities of the human mind, and >>> likewise of certain powers in the great and permanent objects that act >>> upon it, which are equally inherent and indestructible...."
>>>
>>> .....
>>> Joanie Mackowski, PhD
>>> Assistant Professor
>>> English & Comparative Literature
>>> University of Cincinnati
>>> PO Box 210069
>>> Cincinnati, OH 45221-0069
>>> Tel. 513/[redacted]
>>> Fax 513/[redacted]
>>> [redacted]
>>> http://homepages.uc.edu/~mackowje
>> <http://homepages.uc.edu/%7Emackowje>
>>>
>>>

>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On >>> Behalf Of Stephen Vincent
>>> Sent: Monday, June 23, 2008 10:47 PM
>>> To: [redacted]
>>> Subject: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>>>
>>> Sometimes I read a lyric poem - singular or serial - and I am struck by >>> two contrary reading experiences. On one hand, I am taken by a poem's >>> structure, the attention of the poet, the technique, tone, etc, - how >>> forcefully these combinations impel themselves on to the page. I am >>> totally present with the process, and the momentary totality of the >>> poem's object, its presence. I am with it - which means to say its >>> particulars have become an assured presence within the immediate >>> horizons of my take (world) as a reader..
>>>
>>> Yet, on the other hand, the poem(s), no matter how solid its occurrence
>>> in my imagination, critical presence, etc. is soon gone, particularly as >>> I move on to the works of others, or shift my awareness to, say, the >>> television, the inevitable perk and threnody of the news, its >>> repetitions and cycles.
>>>
>>> And, in terms of the lyric poem as an experience in reading - no matter >>> how present it was - - becomes such a fleeting thing without much >>> bearing on what's left of either my private or public space. What is >>> that that 'thing' that caught me and then flew by? Why does much >> work -
>>> much of it good, and, certainly, labor intensive - fly by with but a >>> transitional, momentary effect? Whatever act or frame could make that >>> pleasure more concrete, an enduring, significant presence, a constantly
>>> returnable project & gift?? (Perhaps, obviously. that is part of the >>> poet's job, too).
>>>
>>> I suspect we know that's the job of a critical community - to maximize >>> the public presence and circulation of a work or works. To review a >>> person's work, to secure (ideally) our attention. And, no doubt, the >>> importance of academic institutions. To insist students write critical >>> papers, memorize, and/or improv new works off the work of others - to >>> insure that a work secure a place, a point of memory in the young, as >>> well as older persons. And, for those of us outside institutions, to >>> resist and confront the the sense of erasure that inevitably haunts >>> those of us who live, read, write and work not 'at the margins',

>> but in
>>> locations that require a different sense of critical reception and >>> measure.
>>>
>>> Without this surrounding labor of critical community, so many often >>> extraordinarily fine lyric poems - let alone larger forms. - end up >>> fleeting around, or become paralysed in a kind of statuary limbo. They >>> may vibrantly appear in a small publication, then disappear as readily.
>>> For the poet it takes a fierce stubbornness to put up with can appear as >>> an almost instant annihilation or a perennial sense of being 'not >> quite >>> dead on arrival.'
>>>
>>> The reason I write this is that I became quite aware of this condition
>>> whitle reading some quite fine books that have come my way to review.
>>> Recent intriguing good works by Peter Manson, George Albon, Joseph
>>> Noble, Tyrone Williams, Tim Atkins - all guys (I realize), but, indeed, >>> a mix of sexual, ethnic and national persuasions, yet each (most at >>> mid-life, I think) working various lyric, experimental edges. They are >>> among many, obviously both men and women, out in the field of >>> combatting limited attention to their work,each working the language to >>> scrape out (sing, whatever), a non- familiar truth in fresh, demanding >>> and/or startling ways. As I begin to write these various or combined >>> reviews I remain struck by the ambition and struggle to make a work find
>>> its location in a contemporay landscape that is mostly either >>> oppositional or,most likely. oblivious to an enterprise that - as both >>> poet and reader - I, if not most of us, totally support.
>>>
>>> Proportionately, without wanting to sound one bit self-piteous (because >>> the work can bring such joy and critical pleasure) Sisyphus might appear >>> to have had it relatively good! In this nation (USA), where Executive >>> (Cheney. Bush. etc.) management has done nothing but produce a national >>> paralysis of the imagination (it's nasty girim and impotent, to be >> both >>> obvious and frank). Without sounding like a 'draino liberal' (I >> hope), I >>> think its absolutely essential to do whatever we can (in community, >>> critcially, creatively, etc.) to vigorously support the efforts of both >>> poets and poems (lyric and otherwise) to continue to rise and take hold >>> in the public realm - and take form in the pleasure and combat of that.
>>> Otherwise we be in for a long, thirsty time! So yes, I am writing my >>> reviews. You, too?

>>>
>>> Stephen Vincent
>>> _http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>>> Where, if you have missed it so far, you can still visit my travels >>> with Charles Olson - and then some - in the Yucatan.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>> guidelines
>>>
>>>
>> guidelines
>>>
>> guidelines
>>>
>>
guidelines
>>
guidelines
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>
>

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG.
Version: 8.0.101 / Virus Database: 270.4.3/1525 - Release Date: 29/06/2008
3:09 PM

↑ Index

450. Michael Ford

Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Mon 30 Jun 2008

The anecdote I related was in reference to the poor presentation of poetry by the officials of verse culture and to people's willingness to accept challenging poetry when it is presented in a manner that does not strike them as snooty. It was not intended to demonstrate that poetry is popular but that it could be (more so) if presented properly. I see evidence of this all the time, living, as I do, among the people you lovingly refer to as "the masses." Perhaps I exaggerate the importance of this evidence, but I certainly do not think that my conclusions are any more ridiculous than the idea that people would flock to poetry if we all started writing in styles that stink of the 19th century. I see no evidence for this whatsoever.

Michael Ford

On Sun, Jun 29, 2008 at 1:28 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:

> I try to pay more attention to the actual art produced rather than the rhetoric of those producing the art. In a published article I wrote about game theory and literature, I argue that the surrealists attempted to sell a bill of goods that they themselves did not buy into. Many post-surrealists did, however -- producing a lot of incredibly bad poetry that all sounds the same, and that nobody wants to read. The actual surrealists, however, produced a lot of very well-crafted, difficult poetry. They claimed that they were trying to create a poetry of and for the people (as opposed to the elitist verse of the romantics, with their regular rhythms and rhymes), but they in fact created work that only artistic elites would even begin to appreciate. We see this going on throughout the Modernist and Postmodernist periods, where the experiments are proclaimed to be intended for the masses, but the masses reject it en masse. Perhaps only T.S. Eliot and Ezra Pound were the only honest poets of the last century, being unapologetically elitist in their verse and theory.
>
> The attacks by other posters on "best-sellers" and "capitalism" belies their elitism. Why shouldn't some measure of worth be how many books of poetry you sell? Except that then that would indicate you are in fact not a very good poet if you can't sell but a half dozen copies at your readings. So we get attacks on capitalism and the commodification of art, etc. as excuses for why nobody wants to read their rotten poems.
>
> Now, I do agree with you that many of our problems with the acceptance of poetry lies with our teachers and with the educational system in general. Teachers seem to go out of their way to make students abhor poetry. Of course, most teachers don't understand poetry at all, and that ignorance translates to hatred of the material, which is communicated to the students. The few who make it through high school not hating poetry have still learned nothing about it. They learn that one has "poetic license," which they are told means anything goes in poetry. Thus they begin writing poetry without the least understanding of what a poem really is, or what it does. They think that just because they speak the English language, they can write; and they think that they are being radical poets by breaking all the rules, not even knowing what the rules are. While we would never dream of claiming to be a great pianist if we never learned the proper way to play piano (the ability to whistle does not make one a musician), we somehow think that we can be a great poet without understanding the first thing about poetry, its origins, its history, how poems are similar and differ among cultures, etc. Our college professors don't help at all because they are pushing the kind of experimental poetry they are writing, forgetting that their students don't even have the basics. The consequence is a lot of people writing poetry, not having the kind of historical understanding of the art that painters and musicians are made to have, and as a consequence writing poems nobody really wants to read.

I find it laughable to read peoples' arguments that poetry is in fact popular because of some anecdotal evidence. This would be like arguing that opera is popular because I have friends who, like me, go to the opera. In fact, the opera house is always packed, so it must be spectacularly popular! Nonsense. Most of the poetry readings I've been to have been full of bad poets reading bad poetry to each other and their friends. I've been to poetry readings that were exceptions -- but they typically took place in such places as art museums and galleries, and involved selection of the poets beforehand. And in those cases, few were there primarily for the poetry.

I personally would like to turn this around. I think people miss out on a lot when they do not read or listen to poetry -- or are otherwise exposed to the arts. I think that if poets would simply learn the history of their art, and keep their audience in mind when they write, that it would go a long way to poets creating poetry that people might want to read. But it requires making things of beauty, which inspire people to want to create more poetry like it. It has to be reproductive.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 10:41:29 AM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Troy,

But I think that's where you're wrong: most of what you're calling

"elite" isn't intended to be only understood by a few, but rather represents (sometimes vain) attempts to open dialog where there wasn't previously. In this case, then, what most people don't understand isn't what they don't "get", but what they aren't familiar with (as in Michael's example) due to lack of good teachers, exposure, what have you.

-Ryan

On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 7:37 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
Math is both understandable and meaningful. But to practice it and understand it, you have to learn a lot of techniques.

The arts are different from the sciences (including math) in that they are meaningful and valuable in a more complex, more directly human way. There's dehumanizing, nihilistic art, and humanizing, meaningful art. I personally like a lot of elite art; but I also understand why most people don't. Part of it is indeed that they don't get it. And why isn't that a valid criticism? Why should people rely on a bunch of overeducated elites (like myself) telling them what this or that work means, and why it's significant? Shouldn't there be at least some level in every art where the average person "gets it"? This doesn't mean, of course, that one cannot learn more about a work -- meaning critics, etc. are still needed to help people see all the possibilities -- but the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of art.

The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn. Those works both the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where only a select few "truly understand"?

Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

----- Original Message ----
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 3:23:43 PM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

How come mathematics gets to be "elitist"? Why is poetry condemned to "having to have meaning/be understandable?"

Personally, I don't believe in elitism as a label; I think it's largely used to hide embarrassing moments of "I don't get this."

On Fri, Jun 27, 2008 at 9:49 AM, Thomas savage <[redacted]>
wrote:
Nobody reads poetry anymore because they aren't exposed to it as children as a part of their education. Once it vanished from their schooling, since they had no access to it, most people don't even know poetry exists. As for the elitism of experimental poetry of the 20th and 21st century, that is another matter. Anyone who takes chances with a tradition risks isolating him or herself from the larger group of people who will not understand what is going on or who simply don't care. I don't think that is necessarily elitism but in certain cases, particularly Pound's and Eliot's, it may have been accompanied by elitism. Williams, Olson, and many other experimental poets were populists trying to do something that would resonate with the larger masses of educated readers. Whether they ever reached those readers is another matter. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Thu, 6/26/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, June 26, 2008, 12:45 PM

The two aren't unrelated, you know. It's no coincidence that you started getting things like impressionism when photography came about. Milan
Kundera
observes that the novel (for example) should do only what the novel can do. The same can be said about poetry. TV and film are their own media, and do not necessarily exclude the reading of poetry. Much of the Modernists' experiments came about precisely in reaction to such things as radio,
etc. Part of the result was that it became something only elitists were interested in (bizarre poetry, etc. is a great way for elitists to separate themselves
from the rabble, you know). But lyric poetry in the form of songs is as strong as ever -- belying claims that other media pushed poetry aside. What pushed
poetry
aside was the fact that poets began writing poetry 1) knowing nothing about poetry, and 2) writing as elitists for elitists. I listen to the radio, watch

movies and TV, use a computer, etc. and also read novels and poetry, so these different forms are not mutually exclusive. In fact, they can be mutually enhancing. If people are running away from your art, it may have more to do with the state of the art. Unless that is seriously considered (which is also an historical perspective), then you're never going to understand why nobody reads poetry anymore.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Dan Glass <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, June 25, 2008 4:17:26 PM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Way to think historically.

I love that it's the bad modernist poetry that made people read less poetry, rather than things like radio, television, movies, computers, video games,
the assembly line, and other 20th c. inventions...

I mean, seriously. Do you really think history has nothing to do with poetry?

On Wed, Jun 25, 2008 at 12:37 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:

Historically, lyrical poetry has had a very large audience. It began dying off with Modernism, and postmodernism and LANGUAGE poetry have all but killed it off. The few poetry bestsellers are the lyric poets like Frederick Turner.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, June 24, 2008 8:08:10 PM
Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

>>> Thanks, Joanie, for pointing to WW lodestar! Then the quote. Yes, a quick and impressive ear you have for echoes!
What? Are we (yon poets) fated to repeat ourselves century upon century with twists on the metaphors and content du jour!!! An endless spiral loop earthly journey? An eternity of small audiences?
Ain't complaining too hard. As long as there are good and quick ears in the neighborhood that can take and hear a poem to the max, who needs more?!
(It's always nice when it happens - large)

Got to get back to writing those reviews - among all the other 'requirements'!

Stephen V

"Mackowski, Joanie (mackowje)" <[redacted]>
wrote: Nice to read your thoughts, Stephen. I wonder though "izzit not ever thus," for in them I hear an echo of Wordsworth, from the "preface to the 2nd edition of the lyrical ballads." That your thoughts are familiar to me suggests that the lyric may be in a steady sissy-fun state, rather than about to die altogether. Yet I'm not suggesting that the work to preserve & enlarge our atttention to the lyric isn't crucial; rather, I think we may whistle a bit while we work. And WW, while he affirms the frustration, also suggests a way to progress: he says that yes quiet lyrics may easily be drowned out, but that learning to attend to lyric quietness, via both reading and writing, is a crucial practice, one that strengthens "certain inherent inherent and indestructible qualities of the human mind," qualities which WW thinks are good.

I'm going to copy down a hunk o' WW here. It feels good to type it, like a meditation/prayer:

From WW: "For the human mind is capable of being excited without the application of gross and violent stimulants.... It has therefore appeared to me that to endeavor to prodice or enlarge this capability is one of the best services in which, at any period, a writer can be engaged; but this service, excellent at all times, is especially so at the present day. For a multitude of causes, unknown to former times, are now acting with a combined force to blunt the distriminating powers of the mind, and, unfitting it for all voluntary exertion, to reduce it to a state of almost savage torpor. The most effective of these causes are the great national events which are daily taking place, and the increasing accumulation of men in cities, where the uniformity of thei roccupations produces a craving for extraordinary incident, which the rapid communication of intelligence hourly gratiafies. To this tendency of life and manners the literature and theatrical exhibition of the country have conformed themselves. The invaluable works of our elder writers...Shakespeare and Milton, are driven into neglect by frantic novelss....When I think about this degrading thirst after outrageous stimulation, I am almost ashamed to have spoken of the feeble endeavor made in these volumes to counteract it; ... had I not a deep impression of certain inherent and indestructible qualities of the human mind, and likewise of certain powers in the great and permanent objects that act upon it, which are equally inherent and indestructible...."

.....
Joanie Mackowski, PhD
Assistant Professor
English & Comparative Literature
University of Cincinnati
PO Box 210069
Cincinnati, OH 45221-0069
Tel. 513/[redacted]
Fax 513/[redacted]
[redacted]
http://homepages.uc.edu/~mackowje
<http://homepages.uc.edu/%7Emackowje<http://homepages.uc.edu/~mackowje>

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Stephen Vincent
Sent: Monday, June 23, 2008 10:47 PM
To: [redacted]
>>> Subject: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?

Sometimes I read a lyric poem - singular or serial - and I am struck by two contrary reading experiences. On one hand, I am taken by a poem's structure, the attention of the poet, the technique, tone, etc, - how forcefully these combinations impel themselves on to the page. I am totally present with the process, and the momentary totality of the poem's object, its presence. I am with it - which means to say its particulars have become an assured presence within the immediate horizons of my take (world) as a reader.

Yet, on the other hand, the poem(s), no matter how solid its occurrence in my imagination, critical presence, etc. is soon gone, particularly as I move on to the works of others, or shift my awareness to, say, the television, the inevitable perk and threnody of the news, its repetitions and cycles.

And, in terms of the lyric poem as an experience in reading - no matter how present it was - - becomes such a fleeting thing without much bearing on what's left of either my private or public space. What is that that 'thing' that caught me and then flew by? Why does much work - much of it good, and, certainly, labor intensive - fly by with but a transitional, momentary effect? Whatever act or frame could make that pleasure more concrete, an enduring, significant presence, a constantly returnable project & gift?? (Perhaps, obviously. that is part of the poet's job, too).

I suspect we know that's the job of a critical community - to maximize the public presence and circulation of a work or works. To review a person's work, to secure (ideally) our attention. And, no doubt, the importance of academic institutions. To insist students write critical papers, memorize, and/or improv new works off the work of others - to insure that a work secure a place, a point of memory in the young, as well as older persons. And, for those of us outside institutions, to resist and confront the the sense of erasure that inevitably haunts those of us who live, read, write and work not 'at the margins', but in locations that require a different sense of critical reception and measure.

Without this surrounding labor of critical community, so many often extraordinarily fine lyric poems - let alone larger forms. - end up fleeting around, or become paralysed in a kind of statuary limbo. They may vibrantly appear in a small publication, then disappear as readily. For the poet it takes a fierce stubbornness to put up with can appear as an almost instant annihilation or a perennial sense of being 'not quite

dead on arrival.'

The reason I write this is that I became quite aware of this condition whitle reading some quite fine books that have come my way to review. Recent intriguing good works by Peter Manson, George Albon, Joseph Noble, Tyrone Williams, Tim Atkins - all guys (I realize), but, indeed, a mix of sexual, ethnic and national persuasions, yet each (most at mid-life, I think) working various lyric, experimental edges. They are among many, obviously both men and women, out in the field of combatting limited attention to their work,each working the language to scrape out (sing, whatever), a non- familiar truth in fresh, demanding and/or startling ways. As I begin to write these various or combined reviews I remain struck by the ambition and struggle to make a work find its location in a contemporay landscape that is mostly either oppositional or,most likely. oblivious to an enterprise that - as both poet and reader - I, if not most of us, totally support.

Proportionately, without wanting to sound one bit self-piteous (because the work can bring such joy and critical pleasure) Sisyphus might appear to have had it relatively good! In this nation (USA), where Executive (Cheney. Bush. etc.) management has done nothing but produce a national paralysis of the imagination (it's nasty girim and impotent, to be both obvious and frank). Without sounding like a 'draino liberal' (I hope), I think its absolutely essential to do whatever we can (in community, critcially, creatively, etc.) to vigorously support the efforts of both poets and poems (lyric and otherwise) to continue to rise and take hold in the public realm - and take form in the pleasure and combat of that. Otherwise we be in for a long, thirsty time! So yes, I am writing my reviews. You, too?

Stephen Vincent
_http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
Where, if you have missed it so far, you can still visit my travels with Charles Olson - and then some - in the Yucatan.

> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

451. Stephen Vincent

Poetry In America - Poetry & Politics June/July Issue/2008

Mon 30 Jun 2008

(Just Out!)

Poetry in America - Poetry & Politics June/July Issue / 2008

In Times of Trouble
Some recent poems provide a wide angled look at a world of violence.

Collateral Damage
In a gripping new work, poems parallel the attacks on Fallujah and on Guernica.

Global Warnings
The icecaps are melting, storms are increasing, species are dwindling, several new books ask how poetry can help.

Talking Politics 2008
Six poets whose poems court controversy exchange ideas about the common ground between politics and art.

Rules of Engagement
A number of poets re-examine the evidence on documentary poetry's truth value.

Written in Stone
Using salvaged poems, an imposing testament on the possibility of cooperation in the Mideast.

Sticking it
A 40 year survey of poems showcase a signature image: a pallus that's also a big screw.

_____
Conceptually yours,
Courtesy of Art in America,

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

452. Paul Nelson
Least Careless and Least Logical
Mon 30 Jun 2008

So if you're after LOGIC in poetry, you can swing back to the stink of the 19th century, as Michael Ford put it. Fortunately, there are those (the vast majority on this list) who want a DEEPER gesture than what certain Doctors from Texas are capable of appreciating and that's why this list exists.

There have been a couple of movements since the romantic era that sought to make art more relevant to the times. We see where intellect gets us and the Doctor from Texas exemplifies it to perfection. The hastily-written put down. The intellectual pissing match. The desire to prove one's self right at the expense of another. It is a clear demonstration of the competition/domination cosmology, one whose time passed long ago, but still clings on and on.

Jack Spicer said

…Prose invents -
poetry discloses…

…A poet is a time
mechanic not an embalmer…

…Muses do exist, but now I know that they are not afraid to dirty their hands with explication – that they are patient with truth and commentary as long as it doesn’t get into the poem…

among other things. But Spicer's is, of course an ethos based in 1950's consciousness, albeit way ahead of its time. It IS threatening to think that we have moved ahead since 1850, in poetry anyway, so these kinds of notions will be attacked by someone clinging with an intellectual death-grip to the ideals of the 19th century.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

↑ Index

453. Gwyn McVay
Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
Mon 30 Jun 2008

> Who is 'Danto', Troy?

Now see, when I read "Danto," I assume we're talking about Ezili Danto, one of the Lwas of Haitian Vodoun. As she is mute (various legends identify her with a Haitian revolutionary who had her tongue cut out), I would imagine she tends not to go on about the rhetoric of anything. And since she is part of the Petwo ("hot") family of Lwas, and notoriously temperamental, I'd guess she wouldn't be entirely amused to have her name taken in vain by someone pretending to speak for "the masses" of whom she is emphatically a part. Your mileage may vary, however.

Gwyn McVay

↑ Index

454. richard owens
DAMN THE CAESARS vol. iv
Mon 30 Jun 2008

Print copies of Damn the Caesars, vol. IV are now available through the website!

http://damnthecaesars.org

CONTRIBUTORS Lisa Samuels • Alan Gilbert • Meg Foulkes • Stacy Szymaszek • Matvei Yankelevich • Hoa Nguyen • Simon Pettet • Aaron Lowinger • mIEKAL aND • Linda Russo • Tom Leonard • Peter Makin • C.J. Martin • Hugo

Garcia Manríquez • Billy Mills • Richard Kostelanetz • Harry Gilonis • Erica Van Horn • Gerry Loose • Shin Yu Pai & Andrew Schelling • Catherine Walsh

FEATURE
The Family • Kyle Schlesinger

with a foreword by Michael Cross

As Michael Cross writes in his foreword, "A variation on Ted Greenwald's In Your Dreams (a manuscript he was proofreading when the work began), Schlesinger's practice is a wash, a kind of laundering of the violent content of the social through the aperture of a heuristic architecture that discovers and subsequently challenges in degrees." _____

ALL sales for this current volume will go toward bringing out forthcoming single-author publications by Tom Meyer, Kristin Prevallet, Sotere Torregian and others through the Punch Press imprint.

cheers ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

↑ Index

455. Daniel Godston
tonight at Brown Rice
Mon 30 Jun 2008

---

tonight at Brown Rice

1st set:
Elizabeth Marino -- poetry
Dan Godston –- trumpet, small instruments

2nd set:
Dawoud -- sitar
Jayve Montgomery –- reeds & percussion
Ritwik Banerji –- reeds & strings
Dan Godston –- trumpet & small instruments

Brown Rice
4432 N. Kedzie Ave., 1st floor, Chicago, IL 60625
www.brownricemusic.org
The show begins at 9 p.m. Doors open one half hour before performance time, all ages. $5 suggested donation. Brown Rice is a half block north of the Montrose / Kedzie intersection, close to the Kedzie station on the CTA brown line. The entrance is below a sign that reads “Perfect...” Please call [redacted] for more info.

↑ Index

456. amy king
Poet Portraits Desired
Mon 30 Jun 2008

If you have photos posted on Flickr of "Poets and Poet Types," please consider joining our group of the same name and sharing those photos, which are picked up in Google's search engine and thus provide poet images to seekers of such:

http://www.flickr.com/groups/[redacted]/

We currently have 57 members, but are hungering for more pics of distant poets from distant lands and close ones too!

Thanks,

Amy

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://cutbankpoetry.blogspot.com/2008/04/im-man-who-loves-you-by-amy-king.html

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

↑ Index

457. Maria Damon
Re: Poet Portraits Desired
Mon 30 Jun 2008

---

amy, great idea; it'd also be nice to have captions under the pix saying who the poet is.

amy king wrote:
> If you have photos posted on Flickr of "Poets and Poet Types," please consider joining our group of the same name and sharing those photos, which are picked up in Google's search engine and thus provide poet images to seekers of such:
>

> http://www.flickr.com/groups/[redacted]/
>
> We currently have 57 members, but are hungering for more pics of distant poets from distant lands and close ones too!
>
> Thanks,
>
> Amy
>
>
>
>
> _____
>
> Recent
> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> http://cutbankpoetry.blogspot.com/2008/04/im-man-who-loves-you-by-amy-king.html
>
> Alias
> http://www.amyking.org
>
>
>

↑ Index

458. Kyle Schlesinger

PRINTING POETRY: A Workshop for Poets and Visual Artists at The Arm Letterpress Studio

Mon 30 Jun 2008

PRINTING POETRY: A Workshop for Poets and Visual Artists at The Arm Letterpress Studio

On July 12th and 19th, Dan Morris and I will be teaching a two-day letterpress workshop together at The Arm Letterpress Studio in Brooklyn, NY. You¹ll learn the basics of typography, composition and have the opportunity to print a broadside that features your own text and image on the Vandercook proof press. Come alone or with a collaborator. No previous experience necessary. All materials provided. More details available at: http://www.thearmnyc.com/information/workshops. The Arm is a young, grassroots organization for poets, artists, and aspiring printers located near the G and L trains in Williamsburg.

Very best,

Kyle

↑ Index

459. Jim Andrews
Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
Mon 30 Jun 2008

---

the main problem with poetry is that it isn't usually a quick fix. it usually requires thought and perhaps even meditation and study. reflection. runish. enigmatic. the mystery.

poetry is unreasonably and anachronistically demanding. if poetry is to fly in today's hyper-mediated brain pan, it needs to pick up the pace a bit. reflection ok. for those with the time. but quick fix first for those in a hurry. include a chocolate bar with the book, maybe. a book of poems called eat more, say. this way it could get corporate sponsorship and be conceptually quick and deep. like visual art. innovative but quick. fast poetry. like a slam only slim.

what was the name of the poet who was described as the best understood poet of his generation? rod mckuen, wasn't it? remember him? no? well then.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

460. Lewis Warsh
Zen Monster
Mon 30 Jun 2008

ZEN MONSTER #1

a magazine of art, fiction, poetry and subversive political commentary

Brian Unger, editor
John High & Lewis Warsh, poetry editors
Andrea Clark Libin, fiction editor
Norman Fischer & Fernando Perez, contributing editors

Epistolary Poems & Letters by Philip Whalen
Letters by Whalen to Kirby Doyle, Ted Wilentz, Alice Notley, Ted Berrigan, Will Peterson, Aram Saroyan.

Poetry by Gloria Frym, Cole Swenen, Anne Waldman, Steve Benson, Charles Bernstein, Matvei Yankelevich, Simon Pettit, Norma Cole, Claudio Bertoni, Michael Sohn, Hank Lazer, Tomas Urayoan Noel, Fanny Howe, Norman

Fischer, Wang Ping, Barbara Henning, Lou Hartman, Will Alexander, Reed Bye, Bob Perelman, Eliot Katz.

Fiction by Karen Russell, Doretta Lau, Andrea Clark Libin

Essays by Richard Sieburth, Gary Snyder, Brian Unger. Dermot McEvoy

Reviews: Stephen Paul Miller on GARY SNYDER AND THE PACIFIC RIM by Tim Gray Tim Gray on BEAUTIFUL ENEMIES by Andrew Epstein and FRANK O'HARA: THE POETICS OF COTERIE by Lytle Shaw
Tyler Doherty on JOIN THE PLANETS by Reed Bye

Art by Michael Wenger, Carol Radsprecher, Willie Cole, Robyn Ellenbogen, Mark Alan Stamaty, Jean Detheux, Steven Siegel, Max Gimblett, Jesa Damoro, Charles Rue Woods, Susan Bee, Noah Fischer

195 pages $10

Copies available from:
New York Zen Circle
1032 Woodgate Avenue
Elberon, New Jersey
07740

email inquiries:
[redacted]

↑ Index

461. amy king
Re: Poet Portraits Desired
Mon 30 Jun 2008

Hmm, most of them do, at least, at the top of the photo. Some people may not have included a name, but I think all of mine do. For instance,

"Ron Padgett and John Ashbery"
http://www.flickr.com/photos/amyking/437126870/in/[redacted]

"Cole Swensen and Keith Waldrop"
http://www.flickr.com/photos/amyking/302830083/in/[redacted]

"Evie Shockley and Sina Queyras"
http://www.flickr.com/photos/amyking/400437928/in/[redacted]

The titles appear above each photo.

Best,
Amy

Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:

amy, great idea; it'd also be nice to have captions under the pix saying who the poet is.

amy king wrote:
> If you have photos posted on Flickr of "Poets and Poet Types," please consider joining our group of the same name and sharing those photos, which are picked up in Google's search engine and thus provide poet images to seekers of such:
>
> http://www.flickr.com/groups/[redacted]/

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://cutbankpoetry.blogspot.com/2008/04/im-man-who-loves-you-by-amy-king.html

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

↑ Index

462. Jeff Davis
Yvan Goll extended edition
Mon 30 Jun 2008

Hello all,

Before Flarf, before conceptual poetry (as such), there was Surrealism. This week Wordplay (from the Archive page of WPVM.org) features Nan Watkins, one of the foremost translators of Yvan Goll, a prominent member of that movement, reading her translations of 10,000 Dawns and Dream Weed, and discussing the problems of translating his work. I even talked her into reading a couple of the poems in German, so we could hear their original music.

Give the lady a listen.

Production notes for the show are here:
http://naturespoetry.blogspot.com/2008/06/wordplay-nan-watkins-presents-yvan-goll.html

And now back to your regularly scheduled Monday,

Jeff

On the web at http://naturespoetry.blogspot.com

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

July 2008

314 messages · Mon 30 Jun 2008 – Thu 31 Jul 2008

July 2008 was the thinnest file of the stretch, three hundred and fourteen messages where February had mustered nearly seven hundred, and it spent its diminished traffic on the question that would define the coming decade: originality, appropriation, and the artist who makes new work entirely out of old. The room had collapsed to half its winter size, and yet the argument it took up was the one the whole art world was about to have — whether the copy, the lift, the found thing, could be a form of making at all.

The largest thread set appropriation against itself. Prompted by a newspaper piece observing that "Artists have appropriated images from advertising for decades", the room chased the recursion to its vertigo: what happens when the appropriators are appropriated, when the corporation lifts the artist who lifted the corporation, and the death of the author turns out to have been a possum's trick, the borrower waking to claim ownership of the borrowed. It was the conceptual argument in its purest form, originality declared dead and then quietly resurrected the moment someone else did the borrowing.

The quarrel found a target in a critic. The Times had run William Logan's review of Frank O'Hara's new Selected Poems, and the room, which regarded Logan as the age's designated executioner, gathered its counter-fire — collecting the rebuttals, noting the homophobia some readers heard under the hatchet-work, treating the review itself as a kind of hostile appropriation, the critic seizing the right to reduce a beloved poet to a verdict. Around O'Hara, the most generous of the dead, the room closed ranks against the man it took for his least generous reader.

And the month's true emblem died at its start. Bruce Conner was gone on the seventh, the artist who had built masterpieces out of nothing but found footage — his film A Movie assembled, as one poster recalled, from "speeded up film footage of crashes", the borrowed reel of the century's disasters cut into art. He was the original appropriator, the man who proved half a century early that the lifted image could be made to sing, and his death in the very month the room argued the ethics of appropriation gave the abstraction a body and a grave.

I have set July down exactly as the archive delivered it — the appropriators appropriated, the executioner-critic answered, O'Hara defended, and the great found-footage maker gone — because it was the month the shrunken list took up the argument that would outlive it, whether making can be nothing but re-making, and lost, on the seventh, the artist who had already answered yes with a lifetime of borrowed film. A room down to three hundred messages, itself by now a kind of found archive of old quarrels recycled, argued originality while burying the man who had turned appropriation into grace: the question and its finest answer arriving, as they so often did on this list, in the same diminished breath.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 314 in all.

WRITERS

Allegrezza, William 194
Alpert, Dr. Barry S. 94
AND, mIEKAL 133, 157, 158, 195, 278
Andrews, Jim 24, 56, 64, 166, 188, 224, 232, 243, 255, 273
Annual, Fulcrum 148
Banias, Ari 127
Baraban, Stephen 67
Baratier, David 13, 42, 48, 69
Behm-Steinberg, Hugh 114
Bellamy, Dodie 165
Berry, Audrey 293
Binder, Andreana 136
Blacksox 214
Books, J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill 233
Bowen, David 90
Bryant, Tisa 283
Burke, Andrew 174, 202, 277
Buuck, David 121, 169, 170
Byrne, Mairead 44
Cain, Séamas 306
Camplin, Troy 1, 6, 20, 34, 35, 58
Casamassima, Christophe 33, 168, 261
Chace, Joel 197
Chan, Jill 8
Chirot, David 19, 81, 91, 117, 118, 139, 149, 201, 223, 235
Chirot, David-Baptiste 155, 171, 238
Ciccariello, Peter 62, 186
Clements, Brian 150
Clodfelter, Loretta 23
Cluff, Caleb 132
Conrad, CA 26, 45, 50, 162, 192, 218, 219, 230, 274, 275
Croggon, Alison 115, 129
Del Ray Cross 92
Cross, Michael T 285
Cunningham, John 57
Curnow, Wystan 215
Dalachinsky, Steve D. 43, 55, 61, 253
Daley, Ryan 28, 40, 41, 63
Daly, Catherine 2, 21, 66, 73, 104, 131, 217, 267
Daly, Luke 75
Damon, Maria 22, 176, 198, 244, 270, 271
Deed, Martha 236
Dewhurst, Robert 211
Dunagan, Patrick 46, 137, 300
Elshtain, Eric 229
Exley, Roy 83
Fieled, Adam 227
Ford, Michael 250
Gatza, Geoffrey 113
Glass, Jesse 30, 304
Godston, Daniel 178, 265, 266, 312
Gricevich, Andy 185, 256
Heman, Bob 31, 221
Henriksen, Matt 29, 179, 189, 190
Holder, Doug 32, 112
Houlihan, Joan 147
Howard, Scott 282
Jayne 187
Johnson, Halvard 74, 151
Jopek, Krysia 237
Joris, Pierre 9
Jpjones 231
Kane, Daniel 116
Karavatos, Nicholas 70, 71, 173
Karmin, Jennifer 49, 97, 141, 196, 257
Katko, Justin 84
Kelleher, Michael 60, 134, 182, 258
Killian, Kevin 54
King, Amy 14, 38, 47, 143, 152, 160, 161, 199, 226, 291, 292, 294, 296
Kirschenbaum, David A. 206
Konrad 100, 102
Kuebrich, Benjamin Darnell Mr. 314
Kuhn, Donna 78
Ladkin, Sam 146
Lewis, Joel 15
Lowinger, Aaron 181
Lurie, Bobbie 16, 163, 205, 208, 209
Mack, Jonathan 93
Malo, Mary Jo 17, 138
Manson, Douglas 105
Marcus, Sara 303
Margemont-Robinson, Hugh 111
Martin, Camille 184
Maurer, Susan 11
Metres, Philip 88, 248, 249
Mims, Martha Cinader 309
Mindock, Gloria 53, 122, 123, 234
Moffett, Joe 268
Monk, Geraldine 279, 298
Mukherjee, Aryanil 65, 280
Nealand, Eireene 59, 99, 153
Nelson, Paul 3, 262
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 128, 159, 191, 207, 225, 260, 286
Nicholson, Andy 72, 247
NIELSEN, ALDON L 85, 302
Novack, Carol 5

Oha, Obododimma 200
Orange, Tom 307
Ossip, Kathleen 95
Owens, Richard 281
Pallant, Cheryl 210
Perrin, Nicholas 252
Phillips, Sara 254
Phipps, Wanda 86, 220
Prejsnar, Mark 180
Press, AWAREing 103, 167, 212, 239, 264, 308, 310, 311
Pritts, Nate 177
Rothenberg, Jerome 276
Russell, Lauren 204
Russell, Layne 7
Russell, Steve 51, 79
Al Sadiq, Ismaelia 175
Sarai, Sarah 216
Savage, Thomas 96, 222, 259
Schlesinger, Kyle 145, 289, 297
School, Factory 156
Schroeder, Steven D. 246
Schultz, Susan Webster 213
Schwabsky, Barry 89, 140, 290
Schwartz, Gerald 68, 269
Shmailo, Larissa 154
Side, Jeffrey 119, 120, 124
Siegell, Paul 10, 18
Slaughter, William 228
Smith, Rachel Harley 4
Sondheim, Alan 130, 245, 272, 284
Sprague, Jane 25, 107
Sweeney, Chad 142, 242
Tobin, Adam 36, 240
Trent, L 172
Tribbey, Hugh R. 101
Trigilio, Tony 98
Vasquez-giroux, Angela 39
Vassilakis, Nico 27, 305
Vincent, Stephen 37, 76, 80, 82, 87, 108, 109, 144, 164, 193, 241, 313
Vitale, Anna 287
Warsh, Lewis 125
Weaver, Rebecca 106
Weishaus, Joel 12, 110, 203, 263, 295
Welford, Gabrielle 251, 301
Wilcox, Dan 52, 77, 126, 135, 183, 299
Wilson, Ian Randall 288

NAMES MENTIONED

Abramowitz, Harold 107
Ackerman, Amanda 107
Adams, John 98, 294
Albon, George 164, 193
Alice, Mary 197
Allison, Dorothy 73
Allison, Shane 92
Alpert, Barry S. 94
Amato, Joe 156
Americans, Asian 50, 68, 69, 91, 131, 274, 308
Anderson, Erik 10, 294
Andre, Michael 5, 86, 117
Angelo, Michael 31, 154
Apollinaire, Guillaume 1, 28, 35, 41, 206
Armand, Louis 268, 310
Armantrout, Rae 142, 276, 294, 311
Ashberry, John 51
Ashbery, John 22
Atkins, Tim 197
Atlanta, Mark P. 48, 180, 238
Auster, Paul 235
Austin, Geer 5, 86
Baker, Andrea 47, 160, 161, 226
Baker, Lori 47, 108, 160, 161, 226
Baker, Mary 171
Baldwin, Joshua 130
Ballard, Micah 46, 137, 300
Barbour, Douglas 74
Barnes, Christopher 314
Bartlett, Jennifer 197
Bartlett, Sarah 47, 160, 161, 226
Basinski, Michael 246
Baudelaire, Charles 201
Beach, James 103, 110
Beckett, Samuel 148, 238
Beckett, Tom 84, 146, 148, 197
Belflower, James 294
Benjamin, Walter 5, 86, 159, 163, 167, 191, 201, 209, 314
Bennett, John M. 306
Benson, Cara 206
Berge, Carol 103, 110, 310
Berkeley, Michael 29, 48, 71, 82, 125, 131, 242, 301
Berkson, Bill 46
Berlin, Irving 223, 238
Berman, Tosh 238
Bernstein, Charles 276, 289, 311
Berrigan, Anselm 146
Betts, Tara 265
Beuys, Joseph 84
Bianchi, Raymond 197
Blake, William 72, 98
Bloom, Harold 223
Bly, Robert 41
Bogle, Ann 5, 86, 172
Bolano, Roberto 201
Bouliane, Gabrielle 134
Bowering, George 305
Bowie, David 96
Boyer, Anne 197
Boykoff, Jules 25, 45, 252, 271
Bozicevic, Ana 47, 160, 161, 226

BpNichol 206
Bradley, George 101
Bradshaw, Joseph 29
Brady, Taylor 107, 285, 301
Bramhall, Allen 74
Brennan, Joe 299
Brennan, Susan 52, 135, 183, 299
Bromige, David 42, 197
Brotzmann, Peter 238
Browne, Colin 294
Bruno, Franklin 81, 93
Bryant, Dana 98
Burnham, Clint 252, 271
Burns, Robert 52, 135, 183, 299
Burroughs, William S. 117, 144
Butler, William 60, 74, 134, 182, 258
Buzzeo, Melissa 206
Byrne, Edward 44
Byrne, Ted 252, 271
Cabri, Louis 252, 271
Cameron, David 197
Cameron, Sharon 197
Carbo, Nick 197
Carroll, John 88, 248, 249
Carroll, Lewis 248
Castro, Michael 80
Celan, Paul 9, 17, 206
Cervantes, James 131
Chandler, Raymond 171
Chang, Iris 32
Chernoff, Maxine 95, 300
Cisneros, Sandra 131
City, Chicago 98
Clark, Emilie 197
Clarke, Robin 52
Clausen, Jan 220
Clay, Adam 179
Clifford, Pat 65, 252, 271
Clinton, Bill 220, 274, 308
Cohen, Julia 240
Colby, Kate 294
Cole, Barbara 60
Cole, Peter 252, 271
Collins, Billy 148, 237
Collins, Martha 147
Collis, Steve 252, 271
Columbus, Christopher 90, 306
Conner, Bruce 87, 89, 94, 96, 108, 109, 116
Connor, Bruce 76, 87, 89, 96, 108, 117, 258
Conte, Joseph 48
Cook, Peter 98
Cooley, Nicole 95
Cooper, Dennis 54
Cooper, Joseph 258
Corbett, John 238
Corbett, William 238
Cordelli, Phil 47, 160, 161, 226
Cornell, Joseph 117
Cornish, Sam 112
Corso, Gregory 144
Cortez, Jane 102
Coultas, Brenda 197
County, Madison 183, 238
Covey, Bruce 294
Coyote, Peter 172
Critchley, Simon 148
Crouch, Jeff 92
Crowe, Russell 44
Culley, Peter 252, 271
Curtis, Dana 87, 89, 96
Cycholl, Garin 197
Davenport, Steve 90
Davey, Frank 305
Davidson, Michael 252, 271
Davis, Martin 95, 206
Dawson, Nancy 305
Dennis, Carl 70, 131
Derksen, Jeff 25, 252, 271
Derrida, Jacques 17
Devaney, Thomas 10, 240
Dickens, Charles 118, 128
Dickey, Eric 172
Dickinson, Mark 48, 276, 311
Dixon, Nancy 303
Donato, Claire 294
Donovan, Thom 107, 285, 301
Doris, Stacy 252, 271
Dos, John 118, 128
Dunagan, James 197, 300
Duncan, Robert 72
Durand, Marcella 197
Edgar, Chris 76, 87, 89, 96
Edgerton, Tod 117
Edwards, Ken 146
Eichhorn, Kate 254, 268, 270, 306, 310
Eisenstein, Sergei 118, 128
Eliot, Joe 206
Ellen, Mary 98
Elrick, Laura 252, 271
Emerson, Claudia 6, 159, 163, 167, 191, 209
England, Amy 84, 162, 212
Eshleman, Clayton 276, 311
Espada, Martin 131
Etter, Carrie 194
Eugene, Brett 68
Everson, William 148
Falk, Jane 98
Farr, Roger 252, 271
Farrell, Michael 92, 197
Faulkner, William 49
Federman, Raymond 148
Felix, Joel 242
Fenton, Jayne 187
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 65

Finch, Annie 95
Fink, Thomas 172, 197
Finkelstein, Norman 197
Finnegan, Jim 112
Firer, Susan 69
Fischer, Norman 213
Fisher, Ann 46
Fitch, Andy 23
Fitterman, Robert 252, 271
Forbes, John 266
Forrest, Lisa 182
Foster, Paul 50, 68
Fox, Hugh 197
France, Peter 91, 262
Frances, Mary 44, 107, 285, 301
Fraser, Kathleen 107, 285, 301
Fraser, Simon 305
Frazee, Andy 197
Frazer, Vernon 4, 24
Friedman, David M. 98, 197
Frost, Corey 148
Frost, Robert 1, 28, 35, 41, 148
Fucaloro, Thomas 221
Gadd, Maxine 252, 271
Gamalinda, Eric 197
Gardner, Janet 44, 112
Garland, Judy 239, 264
Garrison, Deborah 122
Gildzen, Alex 197
Ginsberg, Allen 81
Glück, Louise 197
Van Gogh 83
Golata, Russ 214
Goldsmith, Kenneth 44
Goldstein, Laura 230
Goldstein, Mark 206
Gomez, Audrey 238
Good, Philip 52, 135, 299
Goode, Chris 84
Grace, Nancy M. 98
Graham, Jorie 15
Graham, Lea 4, 24, 266
Greenwald, Ted 145, 289
Gregg, Linda 145
Grenier, Bob 92
Griffin, Tim 262
Group, Poets 180
Guest, Barbara 151
Guston, Philip 46
Haley, Heather 141
Hall, Donald 152
Halpern, Greg 107
Halpern, Rob 107, 285, 301
Halsey, Alan 148
Hamilton, Robin 48, 74
Hampton, Fred 197
Hardingham, Jeremy 84
Harris, Kaplan 112
Harryman, Carla 184, 197
Harvey, James 206
Hawkins, Jeremy 125
Hawley, Anthony 197
Hayden, Tom 48
Healy, Randolph 44
Heath, Jennifer 197
Heidegger, Martin 17
Hejinian, Lyn 187
Helms, Jesse 50, 68
Henriksen, Matthew 29, 179, 189, 190
Herbert, George 148
Heron, Patrick 48
Hicks, Sue 4, 24
Hicok, Bob 142
Highsmith, David 80
Hilson, Jeff 146
Hofer, Jen 197
Hoffman, Cara 238
Hoffman, Eric 197
Holman, Bob 155
Homer 175
Hoover, Paul 300
Hubbard, Melanie 29
Hughes, Peter 112
Hunt, Tim 98
Hunter, Carrie 8
Iijima, Brenda 240
Indiana, Robert 102, 123
Inguito, Scott 92
Inman, Peter 266
Ireland, Lauren 230, 281, 312
Israel, David 91, 223
Israeli, Henry 223
Jameson, Fred 5, 86, 237
Johanson, Reg 252, 271
Johnson, Henry 52, 135, 183, 299
Jonas, Steve 94
Jones, Brian 23, 48, 102, 143, 172, 175
Jordan, June 131
Joseph, Safdie 60, 74, 127, 134, 182, 258
Joyce, Trevor 44
Kaminski, Megan 294
Kao, Jason 253
Kapsalis, Terri 238
Kathryn, Mary 52, 77, 135, 183
Kaufman, Erica 50, 68
Kearney, Larry 102
Keaton, Diane 117
Keats, John 115
Kelly, Patrick 52, 73, 135, 183, 197
Kennedy, David 148
Kennedy, Evan 206
Kerouac, Jack 98, 117, 125, 299
Kerry, John 97
Kiely, Aaron 92

Kimball, Jack 50, 68
Kinsella, John 148
Kirschenbaum, David A. 206
Klein, Lucas 31
Klinger, Paul 197
Klobucar, Andrew 252, 271
Koeneke, Rodney 102
Kooser, Ted 69, 152
Koshkin, Michael 197
Kurtz, Steve 133
Kyger, Joanne 98, 125
Lacan, Jacques 245
Lake, Paul 1, 28, 35, 41
Landers, Susan 197
Landis, Matthew 148
Larsen, David 102
Laughlin, James 213
Lehman, David 294
Leigh, Mike 73
Leonardson, Eric 178
Levine, Jeffrey 147
Lewis, Bernard 131, 172
Liszkiewicz, Patrick 246
Lloyd, David 82, 115
Logan, Nathan 197
Logan, William 14, 15, 26, 34, 39, 40, 181
London, Frank 83, 125, 146, 185, 194, 262
Lopez, Richard 197
Lorca, Federico García 80, 201
Louise, Bobbie 125
Lurie, Bobbi 16, 20
Luther, Martin 112, 131
Lynn, Heidi 197
Lyons, Kimberly 240
Mackey, Nate 47, 160, 161, 226
Madison, James 48, 185, 194, 228
Madrid, Anthony 48, 155
Magi, Jill 197
Manning, Nicholas 197
Marcacci, Bob 197
Marie, Anne 92, 197, 294
Mason, Janet 172
Maxwell, Andrew 294
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 118, 128, 151
Mazer, Ben 29
Menendez, Didi 113, 142, 197
Mesmer, Sharon 240
Middleton, Christopher 187
Milford, Joe 142
Miller, Jane 197
Miller, Paul D. 5, 48, 86, 131, 294
Milton, John 174, 176, 186, 202, 205, 215, 231
Mirakove, Carol 25
Miriam, Erica 31, 301
Mitchell, Joan 25
Monroe, Harriet 98
Moore, Frank 303
Morrison, Bill 283
Morrison, Toni 283
Motherwell, Robert 108
Mullen, Harryette 156
Mulrooney, Christopher 197
Murphy, Paul 98
Murphy, Sheila E. 74, 197
Myles, Eileen 303
Nakayasu, Sawako 197
Nattell, Tom 52, 135, 183, 299
Neel, Alice 26, 34, 39, 40
Nelson, Paul E. 1, 3, 9, 28, 35, 41, 262
Newton, Keith 47, 74, 160, 161, 226
Nguyen, Hoa 300
Nicole, Anna 102
Nielsen, Aldon L. 85, 302
Nikolayev, Philip 148
Norman, Peter 91, 213
Norton, John 206, 300
Noteboom, Michelle 92
O'Hara, Frank 14, 15, 26, 34, 39, 40, 51, 93, 193
Olds, Sharon 26, 34, 39, 40
Oliver, John 44, 305
Olivia, Carrie 294
Olsen, Lance 9
Olson, Charles 9, 16
Olson, Kirby 9, 20, 67
Ondaatje, Michael 60, 134, 182, 258
Oppen, George 29, 285, 301
Ormerod, Jane 221
Ostashevsky, Eugene 59, 197
Ovid 199, 200
Pacific, Asian 2, 48, 127, 141, 213, 309
Padgett, Ron 22, 145, 289
Palm, Kristin 197
Palmer, Michael 92, 98, 148
Pardlo, Gregory 10
Parish, Jefferson 46, 137
Parisi, Joseph 65
Park, Chase 48
Park, Grant 98
Parker, Dorothy 223
Parker, Evan 238
Parker, Michael 300
Parker, William 238
Parkway, Neal 98
Patchen, Kenneth 105
Paterson, Don 12
Patterson, Ian 112
Pawlak, Mark 92
Perchik, Simon 48, 74
Perez, Craig 197
Perez, Jamie 16, 20
Perkins, Stephen 157, 158
Perloff, Marjorie 148

Pessoa, Fernando 140, 144, 155
Peterson, Katie 265
Peterson, Tim 50, 68, 230
Phillip, Andrew 46
Pinsky, Robert 112
Pollock, Jackson 10
Portugal, Anne 139, 155
Powell, Ren 221
Di Prima, Diane 98
Prince, Richard 194
Professor, Kelly 85, 302
Prynne, J. H. 19
Quarles, Lanny 92
Queyras, Sina 22
Radul, Judy 252, 271
Randall, Karen 10
Raworth, Tom 145, 289
Reagan, Nancy 92, 223
Reeves, Jennifer 314
Reid, Jamie 305
Reuters, Boston 195, 198
Revell, Donald 142
Ribot, Marc 206
Rich, Adrienne 15, 131
Ricks, Christopher 148
Riley, Denise 73
Riley, Peter 148
Rilke, Rainer Maria 47, 160, 161, 206, 226
Rimbaud, Dee 110, 171
Roberts, Gary 206
Robertson, Lisa 252, 271
Robins, Maureen 265
Robinson, Elizabeth 15, 112, 199, 200
Robinson, Sophie 44
Rockwell, Norman 60, 91, 134
Roitman, Judith 197
Roosevelt, Franklin 91
Rossiter, Charlie 52, 135
Roussel, Raymond 51
Rove, Karl 223
Sailers, Cynthia 102
Sanchez, Jorge 80, 164, 193
Sanders, Jay 103, 110
Santos, Craig 213
Sappho 195, 198, 199, 200, 204, 216
Sawyer, Larry 178
Scappettone, Jennifer 197
Schapira, Kate 240
Schneiderman, Jason 10
Schroeder, Steven D. 246
Schultz, Lou 213
Schultz, Susan M. 213
Seferis, George 148
Shakespeare, William 9, 16, 20, 21
Shapiro, David 187
Sherlock, Frank 117, 230
Shihab, Naomi 131
Shipp, Matthew 55, 253
Siegel, Jeff 23
Siegel, Nathaniel 291, 292, 296
Sikkema, Michael 113
Sikkema, Mike 60
Silberg, Richard 242
Simic, Charles 152
Simon, Greg 74
Sky, Tarpaulin 137, 142
Smith, Colin 252, 271
Smith, Harry 4, 31, 181, 196
Smith, Rod 252, 271
Snyder, Rick 223
Solomon, Carl 283
Spahr, Juliana 197, 252, 271
Sparrow, John 125, 173
Spicer, Jack 1, 28, 35, 41, 201, 256
Spicer, John 1, 28, 35, 41, 159, 163, 167, 191, 201, 209, 256
Springer, Jerry 308
Staiti, Erika 102
Stanford, Frank 189, 190
Stanley, Jared 31
Stanton, Rob 220
Stefans, Kim 252, 271
Stein, Gertrude 20
Steiner, Konrad 102
Stephenson, Rob 86
Stevens, Wallace 1, 28, 35, 41, 238
Strang, Brian 252, 271
Strauss, Zoe 143
Strickland, Stephanie 5, 86
Sullivan, Andrew 283
Sullivan, Gary 197
Svalina, Mathias 240
Sweeney, Jennifer K. 242
Swensen, Cole 22
Switaj, Elizabeth 4, 24
Szirtes, George 115
Szymaszek, Stacy 50, 68
Tabios, Eileen 197
Taylor, Tom 301
Tayson, Richard 220
Terris, Susan 197
Texas, Irving 1, 28, 35, 41, 101, 125, 206, 234
Thomas, Dylan 10, 89, 96, 222, 237, 259
Thompson, George 73, 238
Thurston, Kevin 281, 312
Tichy, Susan 197
Timmons, Matt 240, 283
Tipton, John 48
Tonelli, Chris 47, 160, 161, 226
Toscano, Rodrigo 252, 271
Treadwell, Elizabeth 197
Trujillo, Dorothy 252, 271
Turner, Victor 1, 6, 28, 35, 41

Tyson, Ian 276, 311
Tzara, Tristan 276, 311
Upton, Lawrence 187
Vengua, Jean 197
Vermont, Charlie 257
Vidaver, Aaron 252, 271
Vollmer, Judith 42
Vonnegut, Kurt 167
Wagner, Catherine 44
Waldo, Ralph 36
Waldrop, Keith 22
Walker, Laura 112
Wallace, Mark 252, 271
Wallace, Nicole 252, 271
Walser, Robert 93
Warhol, Andy 167
Warnell, Ted 166
Warren, Kenneth 148
Washington, George 48, 52, 94, 104, 135, 183, 299
Weber, Damian 48
Weinberger, Eliot 148
Weizenbaum, Joseph 273, 286
Weldon, James 131
Welish, Marjorie 197
Wellman, Donald 106
Welsh, Lawrence 194
Wetherington, Laura 172
Whitman, Walt 201, 248
Wilbur, Richard 234
Williams, Jonathan 50, 68, 192
Williams, Paul O. 12, 15
Williams, Tyrone 197, 252, 271
Wilson, Judith E. 84
Wilson, Karen 288, 293
Wojnarowicz, David 143
Wolff, Rebecca 95
Woolf, Virginia 102
Wright, C. D. 15
Wright, Charles 137, 142
Wright, Tim 197
Young, Kevin 131
Young, Mike 294
Zultanski, Steven 206
Zuzga, Jason 294

CONCEPTS

9/11 19, 123, 133
Activism and protest 1, 28, 35, 41, 112, 118, 124, 128, 131, 133, 274, 303, 308
Aesthetics 12, 16, 20, 25, 29, 37, 101, 121, 131, 144, 169, 245
Afghanistan 19, 223
African American poetry 131, 261, 283
Anthologies 42, 51, 65, 103, 104, 110, 122, 131, 142, 146, 151, 238, 257, 276, 285, 300, 301, 310, 311
Appropriation 93, 144, 149, 159, 163, 167, 188, 191, 201, 203, 207, 208, 209, 217, 222, 224, 225, 232, 237, 243, 255, 259, 260, 273, 286
Archives and libraries 20, 60, 65, 81, 105, 108, 112, 113, 134, 142, 144, 155, 157, 158, 182, 189, 190, 238, 254, 258, 268, 270, 300, 303, 305, 306, 310
Autobiography 47, 54, 83, 104, 145, 160, 161, 197, 223, 226, 227, 234
Avant-garde 103, 110, 257
Beat generation 98, 183
Beauty 1, 16, 20, 28, 35, 41, 196, 197
Biography 42, 51, 144, 159, 163, 167, 191, 199, 200, 209, 305
Black Mountain 16, 20, 67
Blogs 1, 3, 6, 8, 9, 10, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 22, 26, 28, 29, 30, 34, 35, 37, 39, 40, 41, 45, 50, 54, 59, 62, 68, 72, 75, 76, 80, 81, 84, 85, 87, 88, 89, 93, 96, 105, 107, 108, 112, 115, 119, 127, 129, 138, 142, 144, 145, 151, 162, 168, 174, 176, 178, 179, 180, 181, 185, 186, 192, 193, 197, 201, 202, 205, 206, 212, 215, 218, 219, 223, 227, 230, 231, 233, 239, 241, 244, 247, 248, 249, 251, 256, 262, 264, 267, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 281, 282, 286, 289, 294, 297, 302, 305, 308, 309, 311, 312, 313
Book announcements 26, 29, 34, 39, 40, 45, 46, 50, 55, 60, 65, 68, 81, 92, 137, 146, 156, 168, 206, 220, 234, 242, 253, 254, 259, 263, 268, 270, 280, 285, 289, 301, 306, 310
Bookstores 29, 36, 43, 80, 168, 182, 206, 236, 247, 250, 267
Calls for submissions 33, 101, 132, 136
Capitalism 9, 16, 20, 25, 188, 203, 207, 208, 222, 237, 252, 271, 283
Censorship 84, 201
Cities 32, 73, 80, 91, 98, 112, 137, 197, 199, 200, 230, 245, 257, 308
Climate 118, 128
Collage and montage 48, 117, 184
Conceptual writing 101, 201
Conferences and festivals 37, 44, 98, 101, 147, 157, 158, 183, 189, 190, 201, 252, 271, 283, 291, 292, 296, 303
Confessional poetry 201
Copyright and permissions 32, 50, 68, 132, 150, 187, 213, 288, 293, 311
Craft 114
Creative writing pedagogy 45, 95, 131
Dada 276, 311
Deconstruction 17, 117, 138, 146, 242, 245
Difficulty 98, 150, 163, 191, 201, 209
Digital archives 100, 109

Disability 131
Dreams 3, 12, 32, 48, 83, 107, 117, 123, 131, 151, 189, 190, 245, 263, 280, 285, 301, 303
Ecology and ecopoetics 118, 128, 132, 137, 238, 272
Editing 50, 68, 107, 131, 132, 142, 157, 158
Ekphrasis 48
Electronic poetry and hypertext 17, 84, 95, 159, 163, 167, 191, 201, 209, 224, 225, 232, 243, 259, 260, 273, 286
Elegy 213
Empire and imperialism 13, 42, 48, 69, 223
Epic 9, 16, 20, 131, 175
Erasure 223, 245
Ethics 144, 150
Experimental poetry 101, 201, 213, 237, 285, 301
Fascism 17, 112, 201
Feminism 95, 118, 128
Film 16, 19, 20, 76, 87, 89, 94, 96, 98, 100, 102, 109, 116, 117, 118, 128, 141, 143, 197, 207, 222, 223, 232, 235, 237, 238, 265, 303
Free speech 19
Free verse 20
Gender 98, 152, 199, 200
Globalization 19, 118, 128, 132
Grants and funding 77, 98, 103, 110, 112, 118, 125, 128, 135, 142, 182, 184, 206, 242, 257
Haiku 83
Humour and satire 76, 77, 84, 87, 89, 96, 117, 125, 144, 194
Ideology 118, 128, 131, 245
Improvisation 61, 63, 67, 197, 238, 265
Indigenous and Native poetics 104, 223
Interviews 16, 20, 33, 59, 65, 77, 81, 118, 128, 131, 142, 197, 218, 233, 239, 257, 264, 276, 283, 301, 311, 314
Israel and Palestine 19, 91, 223
Language poetry 37
Latino and Latin American poetry 82, 131
Letters and correspondence 49, 139, 144, 148, 201, 232
List moderation 12, 13, 252, 271
Little magazines 4, 24, 33, 42, 46, 47, 48, 52, 81, 95, 103, 106, 107, 110, 112, 122, 132, 148, 160, 161, 180, 184, 206, 211, 223, 226, 228, 230, 238, 241, 244, 257, 277, 281, 282, 283, 285, 299, 300, 301, 305, 312, 314
Lyric poetry 9, 16, 20, 21, 36, 43, 159, 163, 167, 191, 199, 200, 209
Memory 77, 117, 132, 174, 176, 186, 202, 205, 215, 231, 238, 242, 283
MFA programs 46, 58, 63, 64, 131, 135, 137, 142, 184, 213, 217, 230, 238, 242, 299
Modernism 1, 15, 21, 28, 35, 41, 118, 125, 128, 276, 283, 311
Mourning and loss 32, 133, 144
Music and poetry 5, 6, 9, 43, 61, 63, 67, 69, 72, 84, 86, 95, 96, 112, 118, 128, 138, 145, 154, 174, 176, 181, 186, 194, 196, 197, 199, 200, 202, 205, 206, 215, 223, 227, 231, 238, 247, 259, 262, 265, 266, 267, 283, 285, 289, 301
Nature 79, 91, 107, 111, 118, 128, 131, 132, 144, 149, 150, 159, 167, 183, 223
Negativity and refusal 201
New York School 28, 35, 41
Obituary and memorial 76, 82, 87, 89, 96, 131, 230
Oulipo 101
Performance and the poetry reading 60, 69, 80, 98, 126, 131, 137, 141, 146, 154, 160, 161, 164, 173, 184, 213, 214, 226, 230, 236, 238, 240, 247, 249, 250, 257, 267, 305, 309
Phenomenology 245, 272
Philosophy 49, 97, 132, 194, 201, 203, 223
Place and region 121, 132, 149, 159, 163, 167, 191, 196, 209, 223
Poet laureate 69, 112, 147, 152, 305
Poetics 12, 16, 17, 18, 20, 35, 36, 37, 41, 43, 57, 64, 82, 101, 103, 107, 110, 125, 142, 174, 176, 186, 196, 197, 202, 205, 215, 228, 231, 251, 252, 257, 263, 268, 271, 272, 276, 280, 282, 285, 297, 299, 301, 310, 311
Politics and poetry 25, 252, 271
Postmodernism 21, 276, 311
Print vs. digital 42, 65, 80, 98, 107, 112, 113, 115, 118, 122, 128, 150, 168, 181, 201, 206, 213, 223, 230, 238, 312
Prizes and awards 42, 49, 69, 101, 103, 110, 122, 135, 150, 162, 183, 206, 212, 213, 230, 234, 238, 242, 257, 274, 300, 308
Prose poem 42, 93, 115, 150, 213, 227
Prosody and meter 20, 194
Queer poetics 45, 50, 68, 93, 131, 195, 198, 199, 200, 212, 218, 233, 238, 239, 264, 274, 303, 308
Race and poetry 283
Reading announcements 44, 184, 220
Religion and the sacred 10, 47, 115, 117, 160, 161, 199, 200, 203, 226, 245
Representation 56, 57, 58, 61, 63, 66, 67, 79, 83, 115, 121, 300
Reviewing and criticism 5, 10, 14, 15, 19, 26, 28, 32, 34, 35, 39, 40, 41, 43, 46, 47, 48, 49, 52, 64, 65, 74, 86, 91, 93, 107, 114, 117, 135, 137, 142, 148, 160, 161, 168, 172, 184, 194, 197, 201, 209, 223, 226, 234, 235, 242, 248, 257, 299, 303

Romanticism 276, 311
Science 29, 107, 206, 245
Serial poem 47, 48, 106, 126, 148, 160, 161, 206, 213, 226, 254, 268, 270, 289, 306, 310
Small press publishing 23, 37, 42, 47, 77, 80, 90, 112, 122, 123, 125, 126, 135, 137, 145, 147, 150, 156, 160, 161, 165, 177, 184, 189, 190, 206, 213, 222, 226, 229, 230, 234, 237, 238, 242, 257, 285, 289, 299, 300, 301, 303
Social media 3, 60, 86, 105, 134, 178, 182, 206, 220, 258, 265, 266, 311
Software and code 64, 131, 132, 201, 232, 245, 273, 286
Sonnet 47, 61, 63, 67, 146, 160, 161, 177, 184, 226, 289
Subjectivity 17, 114, 148, 151, 238, 254, 268, 270, 306, 310
Sublime 83
Surrealism 1, 28, 35, 41, 76, 87, 89, 96, 117, 238
Terrorism 19, 91, 223
The academy 12, 46, 49, 70, 71, 84, 85, 88, 94, 98, 101, 104, 112, 123, 125, 131, 132, 137, 142, 146, 147, 157, 158, 159, 163, 167, 173, 174, 175, 176, 184, 186, 191, 194, 202, 203, 205, 209, 210, 213, 215, 228, 231, 234, 238, 248, 249, 257, 277, 281, 283, 295, 300, 302, 304, 306, 312
The body 8, 74, 108
The Holocaust 19
The internet 19, 77, 119, 120, 124, 188, 201, 203, 207, 208, 222, 223, 237, 255, 294, 309
The Iraq war 19, 91, 201, 218, 223, 233, 239, 264, 274, 308
The listserv 3, 9, 13, 36, 42, 43, 48, 60, 69, 103, 110, 134, 147, 152, 157, 158, 176, 182, 186, 202, 215, 216, 231, 238, 258, 280
Theatre 84, 97, 98, 100, 109, 112, 115, 117, 118, 128, 129, 194, 201, 220, 230, 238, 241, 244, 259, 274, 305, 308
Torture and Abu Ghraib 19, 65, 201, 223
Translation 21, 35, 41, 42, 47, 59, 65, 81, 84, 104, 107, 115, 122, 142, 148, 150, 155, 160, 161, 197, 199, 200, 201, 206, 226, 234, 235, 242, 248, 299, 300, 304, 310, 312
Vietnam 91, 218, 233, 239, 264
Visual and concrete poetry 56, 57, 58, 61, 63, 64, 67, 166, 188, 203, 207, 208, 222, 224, 225, 232, 237, 243, 246, 255, 259, 260, 273, 286, 306
Visual art 5, 9, 16, 20, 39, 40, 56, 57, 58, 61, 63, 64, 67, 72, 76, 77, 80, 83, 86, 87, 89, 96, 108, 136, 137, 148, 157, 158, 163, 188, 191, 196, 203, 207, 208, 209, 217, 222, 232, 237, 238, 255, 272, 299, 303
Voice 48, 131
Women's writing 131

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 314 in all.

30 JUN 2008

1. Troy Camplin — Re: Least Careless and Least Logical
2. Catherine Daly — LA Art Girls at Phantom Galleries, July 10th
3. Paul Nelson — Call for 2008 August Poetry Postcard Fest

1 JUL 2008

4. Rachel Harley Smith — CEllA's Round Trip: Premiere Issue is Up!
5. Carol Novack — Multi-Media Event at Haven Arts Gallery, NYC
6. Troy Camplin — Emerson Institute Website
7. Layne Russell — Re: Poet Portraits Desired
8. Jill Chan — Poetry Sz: demystifying mental illness Issue 26 now online
9. Pierre Joris — Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
10. Paul Siegell — MORE from PHILLY
11. susan maurer — honorable mention
12. Joel Weishaus — Reality Too, June 2008
13. David Baratier — TURN OFF THE REPEAT BUTTON
14. amy king — In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara a...
15. Joel Lewis — Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'...
16. Bobbie Lurie — Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jun 2008 to 30 Jun 2008 (#2008-178)
17. Mary Jo Malo — Re: Celan, Heidegger, Todtnauberg, Pierre Joris, James K. Lyon
18. Paul Siegell — Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jun 2008 to 30 Jun 2008 (#2008-178)
19. David Chirot — David Caddy on J.H. Prynne
20. Troy Camplin — Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jun 2008 to 30 Jun 2008 (#2008-178)
21. Catherine Daly — Re: logic, lyric, blah blah
22. Maria Damon — Re: Poet Portraits Desired
23. Loretta Clodfelter — New Issue of There Has Launched
24. Jim Andrews — Re: CEllA's Round Trip: Premiere Issue is Up!
25. Jane Sprague — New from Palm Press: Landscapes of Dissent
26. CA Conrad — Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'H...

2 JUL 2008

27. Nico Vassilakis — Reminds = N. Vassilakis & C. Curry = Reading in B'klyn July 8th
28. Ryan Daley — Re: Least Careless and Least Logical
29. Matt Henriksen — new book(s)
30. Jesse Glass — Spam Lit Article On The Guardian books Blog
31. Bob Heman — DESTINY - i'll be part of this BIG READING in SOHO on July 11 at 7:00 pm - DEST...
32. Doug Holder — Lisa Beatman's "Manufacturing America" (Ibbetson Street--2008)
33. Christophe Casamassima — Viviparous Blenny REALLY needs submissions!
34. Troy Camplin — Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank ...
35. Troy Camplin — Re: Least Careless and Least Logical
36. Adam Tobin — Re: elitism (was re: the lyric poem
37. Stephen Vincent — Agression: A conference... A Haptic Response
38. amy king — Goodreads' Poetry Group
39. angela vasquez-giroux — Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" ...
40. Ryan Daley — Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'...
41. Ryan Daley — Re: Least Careless and Least Logical

42. David Baratier — Transcontinental Poetry Award deadline 8/15/2008

3 JUL 2008

43. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: elitism (was re: the lyric poem
44. Mairead Byrne — [redacted] sat july 5th 9pm
45. CA Conrad — Re: New from Palm Press: Landscapes of Dissent
46. patrick dunagan — July 7: Great Overland Books & Big Bell present
47. amy king — The Stain of Poetry -- July 25th and Beyond
48. David Baratier — Asking for help from journal editors & other blurbs

4 JUL 2008

49. Jennifer Karmin — JOB: Washburn University

5 JUL 2008

50. CA Conrad — "and remember to die"
51. steve russell — Ashberry/conversations with Mark Ford
52. Dan Wilcox — Poets in the Park (Albany): July 12, 19, 26, Aug. 2
53. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press July, 2008 Newsletter Now Online

6 JUL 2008

54. Kevin Killian — Memoir of Kiki up at Dennis Cooper's blog
55. steve d. dalachinsky — Fw: book party concert
56. Jim Andrews — Re: other claims of the past few weeks
57. John Cunningham — Re: other claims of the past few weeks
58. Troy Camplin — Re: other claims of the past few weeks

7 JUL 2008

59. Eireene Nealand — a great inteview on recent and current contemporary poetry
60. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Newsletter 07.07.08-07.13.08
61. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: other claims of the past few weeks
62. Peter Ciccariello — World before word var-II
63. Ryan Daley — Re: other claims of the past few weeks
64. Jim Andrews — Re: other claims of the past few weeks
65. Aryanil Mukherjee — Hungryalist Movement plus more
66. Catherine Daly — Re: other claims of the past few weeks
67. Stephen Baraban — "learn the rules, then break them" ???
68. Gerald Schwartz — Re: "and remember to die"
69. David Baratier — Backwaters Press Party with Poet laureates

8 JUL 2008

70. Nicholas Karavatos — Reading in San Jose, CA on Thursday the 10th
71. Nicholas Karavatos — Reading in Berkeley on Monday the 14th
72. Andy Nicholson — New on Lamplighter, lamplighter, lamplighter
73. Catherine Daly — LA Art Girls opening Thursday, July 10
74. Halvard Johnson — Hamilton Stone Review, Issue 15, Summer 2008, Now Online!
75. luke daly — Dana Ward's Goodnight Voice
76. Stephen Vincent — Bruce Connor, 1933 - 2008
77. Dan Wilcox — A.P.D. Announces Publication of "To the Husband I Have Not Yet Met"
78. Donna Kuhn — website seeks poetry films
79. steve russell — Re: other claims of the past few weeks
80. Stephen Vincent — Books & Bookshelves - A real poetry bookstore in San Francisco
81. David Chirot — 2 Supplements for Kaurab Translation Update's "Hungry Poets"--1963 Bengali P...
82. Stephen Vincent — Fwd: Alfred Arteaga
83. Roy Exley — Re: other claims of the past few weeks
84. Justin Katko — "unfolding king lear a model": this Friday in Providence

9 JUL 2008

85. ALDON L NIELSEN — Alfred Arteage
86. Wanda Phipps — Readings, music, video and fun with Mad Hatters in the Bronx!
87. Stephen Vincent — Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008
88. Philip Metres — Poetry Daily today: "For the Fifty (Who Made Peace With Their Bodies)"
89. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008
90. David Bowen — New American Press Chapbook Contest
91. David Chirot — Re-Visioning Norman Rockwell's "Four Freedoms" & Senate Passes Re-Enforcing ...

10 JUL 2008

92. Del Ray Cross — SHAMPOO 33
93. Jonathan Mack — Guttersnipe Seeks Allies
94. Dr. Barry S. Alpert — Re: Bruce Conner, 1933-2008
95. Kathleen Ossip — WSQ issue on Technology
96. Thomas savage — Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008
97. Jennifer Karmin — The Strangerer in NYC
98. Tony Trigilio — Registration reminder, The Beat Generation Symposium, Columbia College Chic...
99. Eireene Nealand — writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job
100. konrad — Re: Bruce Conner's films
101. Tribbey, Hugh R. — CFP: Experimental Writing and Aesthetics
102. konrad — SF: SAT 7/12/08, The New Talkies: live film narration
103. AWAREing Press — Carol Berge 1928 - 2006
104. Catherine Daly — cfw

11 JUL 2008

105. Douglas Manson — Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job
106. Rebecca Weaver — new issue of MIDWAY now up
107. Jane Sprague — Long Beach Notebook: Ackerman, Donovan, Halpern 7/12/08 @ 8:00pm
108. Stephen Vincent — More Good Stuff on Bruce Conner
109. Stephen Vincent — Re: Bruce Conner's films
110. Joel Weishaus — Carol Berge 1928 - 2006
111. Hugh Margemont-Robinson — Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a go...
112. Doug Holder — Passing Time with the Boston Poet Laureate
113. Geoffrey Gatza — Marshmallow thingy and god
114. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Book review advice

12 JUL 2008

115. Alison Croggon — Theatre
116. Daniel Kane — Re: Bruce Conner
117. David Chirot — re Bruce Connor--from memory & ny times today
118. David Chirot — Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job
119. Jeffrey Side — The End of the Internet by 2012?
120. Jeffrey Side — Save the internet
121. David Buuck — BARGE @ Yerba Buena Center in SF, July 19-Oct 20
122. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press announces a new chapbook by George Held
123. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press announces a new chapbook by Mike Amado

13 JUL 2008

124. Jeffrey Side — Stop Virgin Campaign
125. Lewis Warsh — ABSOLUTELY EDEN by Bobbie Louise Hawkins
126. Dan Wilcox — Third Thursday Poetry Night: Alifair Skebe (Albany, NY)
127. ari banias — Uncalled-For Readings this Wednesday! = Funaro, Legaspi, Sanyal
128. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job
129. Alison Croggon — SoundEye at Theatre Notes

14 JUL 2008

130. Alan Sondheim — Re: PERFORMANCE IN SECOND LIFE THIS WEDNESDAY - date correction (fwd)
131. Catherine Daly — UC Berkley: Poetry for the People Program
132. Caleb Cluff — Second Nature - call for papers
133. mIEKAL aND — From Steve Kurtz: Thank You Letter to Supporters
134. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Newsletter 07.14.08-07.20.08
135. Dan Wilcox — Poets in the Park, July 19, Albany, NY
136. Andreana Binder — Call for submissions--Fiction/Nonfiction/Art/Poetry
137. patrick dunagan — July 20 - Canessa Gallery - Readings from Micah Ballard, Jeffrey Schrader…
138. Mary Jo Malo — Re: Steve Dalachinsky featured in "Forward"

15 JUL 2008

139. David Chirot — Pessoa-Aleister Crowley Letters--30 Family or National Treasure trunks & "cu…
140. Barry Schwabsky — Pessoa
141. Jennifer Karmin — SUBMISSIONS: Call for videopoems
142. Chad Sweeney — Joe Milford Poetry Show w/guest Chad Sweeney/Sat. July 19
143. amy king — History Keeps Me Awake at Night: A Genealogy of Wojnarowicz -- Tomorrow Night
144. Stephen Vincent — The Archive as an Art (Pessoa et al)
145. Kyle Schlesinger — New from Cuneiform: 3 by Ted Greenwald

16 JUL 2008

146. Sam Ladkin — Fwd: THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS
147. Joan Houlihan — Invitation to the Colrain Poetry Manuscript Conference
148. Fulcrum Annual — unpublished Beckett, Frost, Paz in Fulcrum 6
149. David Chirot — The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appr…
150. Brian Clements — Sentence/Firewheel Announcement
151. Halvard Johnson — Second call! Submissions requested for a third Big Bridge anthology
152. amy king — Kay Ryan new Poet Laureate

17 JUL 2008

153. Eireene Nealand — Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job
154. Larissa Shmailo — Poetry reading: Green, Shmailo, Sirowitz, Verga at Cornelia Street Cafe N…
155. David-Baptiste Chirot — More re Pessoa & heteronyms' contested Legacies (& a great foto of …
156. Factory School — New from Factory School -- Pain Plus Thyme
157. mIEKAL aND — 2008 Milwaukee Zine Fest
158. mIEKAL aND — Re: 2008 Milwaukee Zine Fest
159. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation…
160. amy king — Tomorrow, Friday Night -- Baker, Cordelli, Field, Need, Newton , and Tonelli
161. amy king — July 25th -- Friday Night -- Baker, Cordelli, Field, Need, Newton , and Tonelli

18 JUL 2008

162. CA Conrad — NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
163. Bobbie Lurie — the "originality" of appropriation--response to Murat
164. Stephen Vincent — Bay Area: George Albon and Stephen Vincent reading: July 22nd
165. Dodie Bellamy — Dodie Bellamy's Barf Manifesto
166. Jim Andrews — link checker

19 JUL 2008

167. AWAREing Press — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" o…

168. Christophe Casamassima — Favorite Bookstores? Favorite Reviewers?
169. David Buuck — Buuck/BARGE online & at Yerba Buena Center
170. David Buuck — Buuck/BARGE online (Corrected URL)

20 JUL 2008

171. David-Baptiste Chirot — New Media as New "Mediums" for Contacting the Past: Yeats Meets th...
172. L Trent — Re: New Issue of 21 Stars Review
173. Nicholas Karavatos — Reading in Ukiah, CA on Thursday the 24th
174. andrew burke — hello
175. Ismaelia al Sadiq — Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
176. Maria Damon — Re: hello
177. Nate Pritts — & the summer was endless it was an endless summer

21 JUL 2008

178. Daniel Godston — tonight at Brown Rice
179. Matt Henriksen — Adam Clay & Cannibal Books
180. Mark Prejsnar — Call for proposals - Spaltung 3
181. Aaron Lowinger — Open Night by Aaron Lowinger (Transmission Press)
182. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Newsletter 07.21.08-07.27.08
183. Dan Wilcox — Poets in the Park, July 26, Albany, NY
184. Camille Martin — Camille Martin reads in Halifax
185. Andy Gricevich — Series A reading tomorrow (Tuesday)
186. Peter Ciccariello — Re: hello
187. Jayne — email addresses

22 JUL 2008

188. Jim Andrews — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of a...
189. Matt Henriksen — Frank Stanford Literary Festival
190. Matt Henriksen — Frank Stanford Literary Festival
191. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: the "originality" of appropriation--response to Murat 192. CA Conrad — let's celebrate POET Jonathan Williams at Bartram's Garden with a reading from ...
193. Stephen Vincent — Frank O'Hara &
194. William Allegrezza — Tonight in Hyde Park: Etter and Gricevich read
195. mIEKAL aND — Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos
196. Jennifer Karmin — Aug 3: Djerassi Open House in SF Area
197. Joel Chace — Fwd: Galatea Resurrects Issue No. 10
198. Maria Damon — Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos
199. amy king — Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos -- "Cleansing" Sappho's Verse
200. Obododimma Oha — Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos -- "Cleansing" Sappho's ...
201. David Chirot — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of ...
202. andrew burke — Re: hello
203. Joel Weishaus — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of...

23 JUL 2008

204. Lauren Russell — Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos -- "Cleansing" Sappho's ...
205. Bobbie Lurie — Re: hello
206. David A. Kirschenbaum — NYC Tues./Boog City presents BookThug
207. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation...
208. Bobbie Lurie — the originality of appropriation vs. the mass media
209. Bobbie Lurie — the originality of appropriation--response to Murat

210. Cheryl Pallant — poets in S. Korea
211. Robert Dewhurst — satellite telephone #2
212. AWAREing Press — Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
213. Susan Webster Schultz — Tinfish Press
214. blacksox — For immediate release
215. Wystan Curnow — Re: hello
216. Sarah Sarai — Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos
217. Catherine Daly — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" o…

24 JUL 2008

218. CA Conrad — Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
219. CA Conrad — poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series /\\//\\\\////\\\\\\//////\\\\\\\\//…
220. Wanda Phipps — Desire at The Living Theatre
221. Bob Heman — POINTING WITH 400 FINGERS AT THE RED FUNNEL
222. Thomas savage — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of…
223. David Chirot — Chirography as Chirology: obama poem video/memoir of a forger of celebrity a…
224. Jim Andrews — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of a…
225. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation…
226. amy king — Play It Again, Sam --
227. Adam Fieled — PFS Post: "Chimes"
228. William Slaughter — Notice: Mudlark
229. Eric Elshtain — New Beard of Bees Chapbook

25 JUL 2008

230. CA Conrad — Tim Peterson, CAConrad, Laura Goldstein :::::POETS THEATER::::: and POETRY @ Bo…
231. jpjones — Re: hello
232. Jim Andrews — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of a…
233. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books — Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
234. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press announces a new book publication 235. David Chirot — "Man on a Wire" doc. of Phillipe Petit's Aerial Crossing between the Twin To…
236. Martha Deed — Cleveland poetry info request
237. Krysia Jopek — FW: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation"…
238. David-Baptiste Chirot — Woodland Pattern Book Center E-News: Hysterical Alphabet Opening Re…
239. AWAREing Press — Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!

26 JUL 2008

240. Adam Tobin — Reading Tonight! at Unnameable Books
241. Stephen Vincent — City Psyche - New de blog
242. Chad Sweeney — Goodbye Reading in Berkeley: Chad/Jennifer Sweeney/Aug 3/Moe's Books w/Richa…
243. Jim Andrews — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of a…
244. Maria Damon — Re: City Psyche - New de blog

27 JUL 2008

245. Alan Sondheim — Dreams of Better Worlds Concrete
246. Steven D. Schroeder — Anti- Featured Poet #9
247. Andy Nicholson — Las Vegas

248. Philip Metres — new on Behind the Lines poetry blog
249. Philip Metres — hello! (from) Cleveland!
250. Michael Ford — Re: Cleveland poetry info request
251. Gabrielle Welford — Re: poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series /\\//\\\\////\\\\\\/////...
252. Nicholas Perrin — KSW Positions Colloquium Schedule
253. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: August 2 and 3 Gig Info
254. Sara Phillips — poetry and archives?
255. Jim Andrews — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of a...
256. Andy Gricevich — Project Spicer: invitation

28 JUL 2008

257. Jennifer Karmin — Aug 7: Books & Bookshelves in SF
258. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 07.28.08-08.03.08
259. Thomas savage — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of...
260. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation...
261. Christophe Casamassima — Text suggestions for young writers and readers?
262. Paul Nelson — Long Live Johnny Griffin
263. Joel Weishaus — Fw: John Ashbery's Created Spaces
264. AWAREing Press — Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
265. Daniel Godston — Synesthesic Cell Structures
266. Daniel Godston — Multiartscape Triptyk at the Lily Pad
267. Catherine Daly — Re: Las Vegas
268. Joe Moffett — Re: poetry and archives?
269. Gerald Schwartz — Denver...?
270. Maria Damon — Re: poetry and archives?
271. Maria Damon — Re: KSW Positions Colloquium Schedule

29 JUL 2008

272. Alan Sondheim — Trails
273. Jim Andrews — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of a...
274. CA Conrad — Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
275. CA Conrad — Re: poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series /\//\\////\\\\//////\\\\////////...
276. Jerome Rothenberg — Poems & Poetics: The Blog as Anthology & Manifesto
277. andrew burke — Re: poets in S. Korea
278. mIEKAL aND — Re: poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series /\//\\////\\\\//////\\\\////////...
279. Geraldine Monk — Am I here?
280. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: John Ashbery's Created Spaces
281. richard owens — Re: poets in S. Korea
282. Scott Howard — Denver Events, August: Reconfigurations Party & Readings @ Dikeou Collection...
283. Tisa Bryant — Bench of Memory at Slavery's Gateway

30 JUL 2008

284. Alan Sondheim — Yamantaka
285. Michael T Cross — Michael Cross and Rob Halpern: San Francisco reading, 8/2/08
286. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation...
287. Anna Vitale — Re: poetry and archives?
288. Ian Randall Wilson — Video Project - I Need Your Help
289. Kyle Schlesinger — Ted Greenwald's 3 back at SPD
290. Barry Schwabsky — Re: Am I here?
291. amy king — Invitation To Participate in Poems, Poets, Love! A HOWL Festival Event (from Nat...

292. amy king — Invitation To Participate in Poems, Poets, Love! A HOWL Festival Event (from Nat...
293. Audrey Berry — Re: Video Project - I Need Your Help
294. amy king — A New Coconut!
295. Joel Weishaus — Re: poetry and archives?
296. amy king — Invitation To Participate in Poems, Poets, Love! A HOWL Festival Event (from Nat...
297. Kyle Schlesinger — Re: poetry and archives?
298. Geraldine Monk — Re: Am I here?
299. Dan Wilcox — Final Poets in the Park, Aug. 2, Albany, NY
300. patrick dunagan — Great Overland Book Co. & Big Bell Present:
301. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Michael Cross and Rob Halpern: San Francisco reading, 8/2/08
302. ALDON L NIELSEN — Re: HeatStrings blog
303. sara marcus — Reading: Eileen Myles, Kate Huh, Sara Marcus--Monday, August 4

31 JUL 2008

304. Jesse Glass — Brother Anthony of Taize in Seoul
305. Nico Vassilakis — Subtext/Seattle - George Bowering & Marion Kimes - 8/6/08
306. Séamas Cain — Re: poetry and archives?
307. Tom Orange — Am I here?
308. AWAREing Press — Re: SHAME TO STONEWALL!
309. Martha Cinader Mims — seeking internet radio open mic participants
310. AWAREing Press — Re: poetry and archives?
311. AWAREing Press — Re: Poems & Poetics: The Blog as Anthology & Manifesto
312. Daniel Godston — poets in S. Korea
313. Stephen Vincent — Re: Am I here?
314. Kuebrich, Benjamin Darnell Mr. — Oxford Magazine 22

1. Troy Camplin

Re: Least Careless and Least Logical

Mon 30 Jun 2008

Are you talking about me, or just projecting here? I try to have a discussion about the art of poetry, and I get accusations (often false), mere rhetoric, attempts at pissing matches, superficial claptrap, etc. Not from everyone, to be sure. There are a few who have actually carried on an intellectual discussion on poetry. Those who suspect I may be right, but find that possibility to be inconvenient to whatever it is they are producing end up with this kind of dribble.

I've been accused of wanting to go back to the "stink of the 19th century." I've never talked about the 19th century. However, I have not seen any kind of argument for why it stinks. Is it because so many were bestsellers and were better poets on their worst days than most of us have ever been on our best? Still, it's not the 19th century I've talked about. In fact, I have only mentioned, a few discussion threads ago, one poet from the last 400 years, and that was Frederick Turner, who is very much alive and a poet of the late 20th and now early 21st century. Speaking of contemporary poets, one could also mention Frederick Fierstein, Paul Lake, and R. S. Gwynn. Of the Modernists, I love Robert Frost and especially Wallace Stevens. The intellectual in me loves the French surrealists and Apollinaire. It is certainly that I don't like much of what the Modernists especially have done -- I just recognize too that much of what they did worked to marginalize poetry. Part of that marginalization was in direct response to movies and, later, T.V. -- to modern culture. One of the consequences of this was the audience for poetry shrunk. But, then, so did the audience for operas, plays, and symphonies -- especially the Modern and Postmodern works that came about.

Now, while I did say that beauty reproduces itself, I should have also said that so do viruses. What our English teachers and professors have done to the students in this country have made them susceptible to infection.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, June 30, 2008 12:17:57 PM
Subject: Least Careless and Least Logical

So if you're after LOGIC in poetry, you can swing back to the stink of the 19th century, as Michael Ford put it. Fortunately, there are those (the vast majority on this list) who want a DEEPER gesture than what certain Doctors from Texas are capable of appreciating and that's why this list exists..

There have been a couple of movements since the romantic era that sought to make art more relevant to the times. We see where intellect gets us and the Doctor from Texas exemplifies it to perfection. The hastily-written put down. The intellectual pissing match. The desire to prove one's self right at the expense of another. It is a clear demonstration of the competition/domination cosmology, one whose time passed long ago, but still clings on and on.

Jack Spicer said

…Prose invents -
poetry discloses…

…A poet is a time
mechanic not an embalmer…

…Muses do exist, but now I know that they are not afraid to dirty their hands with explication – that they are patient with truth and commentary as long as it doesn't get into the poem…

among other things. But Spicer's is, of course an ethos based in 1950's consciousness, albeit way ahead of its time. It IS threatening to think that we have moved ahead since 1850, in poetry anyway, so these kinds of notions will be attacked by someone clinging with an intellectual death-grip to the ideals of the 19th century.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA 253.735..6328 or [redacted]

↑ Index

2. Catherine Daly

LA Art Girls at Phantom Galleries, July 10th

Mon 30 Jun 2008

Please join the LA Art Girls and Phantom Galleries LA on July 10th for the opening of:

LAAGAFBLA08
July 10 – August 23, 2008

Pacific Electric Lofts

www.PELofts.com

610 South Main Street and 601 Los Angeles Street

Downtown LA, CA 90013

Opening Reception from 6-10pm

in conjunction with the Downtown Art Walk

Open Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 12- 6pm, or by appointment

Organized by the LA Art Girls and Phantom Galleries

www.laartgirls.com

www.PhantomGalleriesLA.com

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

3. Paul Nelson
Call for 2008 August Poetry Postcard Fest
Mon 30 Jun 2008

In August 2007, Organic Poetry guy Paul Nelson and Lana Ayersinitiated the first August Postcard Poetry Fest with 95 poets signing up to write and send a poem a day on a postcard. It's nearly August so we're chomping at the corner of our cards with the 2nd annual August Poetry Postcard Fest. http://poetrypostcards.blogspot.com/

Here's what's involved:

Get yourself at least 31 postcards. These can be found at book stores, thrift shops, online, drug stores, antique shops, museums, gift shops. (You'll be amazed at how quickly you become a postcard whore.)

On or about July 27th, write an original poem right on a postcard and mail it to the person on the list below your name. (If you are at the very bottom, send a card to the name at the top.) For crying out loud WRITE LEGIBLY!

Starting on August 1st, ideally in response to a card YOU receive, keep writing a poem a day on a postcard and mailing it to successive folks on the list until you've sent out 31 postcards. Of course you can keep going and send as many as you like but we ask you to commit to at lest 31 (a month's worth).

What to write? Something that relates to your sense of "place" however you interpret that, something about how you relate to the postcard image, what you see out the window, what you're reading, using a phrase/topic/or image from a card that you got, a dream you had that morning, or an image from it, etc. Like "real" postcards, get to something of the "here and now" when you write.

Do write original poems for the project. Taking old poems and using them is not what we have in mind. These cards are going to an eager audience of one, so there's no need to agonize. That's what's unique about this experience. Rather than submitting poems for possible rejection, you are sending your words to a ready-made and excited audience awaiting your poems in their mailboxes. Everyone loves getting postcards. And postcards with poems, all the better.

Once you start receiving postcard poems in the mail, you'll be able to respond to the poems and imagery with postcard poems or your own. That will keep your poems fresh and flowing. Mailing to Canada? .72c. Be sure to check postage for cards going abroad. The Postcard Graveyard is a very sad place.

That's all there it to it. It's that fun and that easy.

To check out what we've done before, visit the blog [where you'll also see we also have Perennial Poetry Postcard List of folks who try to write a postcard poem at least once a week regardless of receiving in order to keep connections flowing.], http://www.poetrypostcards.blogspot.com, Paul Nelson¢s website or our Facebook group.

(you need to be a facebook member for this and if you are, please refrain from posting poemcards until after August, ok?)

If you are interested in a weekend writing retreat on Orcas Island in September, please let us know that as well. Tentative weekend, September 19-21, 2008.

To sign up now:

Please email Lana, [redacted] with your postal mailing address to sign up for the 2008 August Poetry Postcard Fest.

The only cost associated with this is your postage and postcards. It¢s free to join, but donations are always welcome to support this and other projects like it. We will keep the list open and add names until July 25th.

And don¢t forget to forward this info to all your friends and have them join us too. Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences

Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

↑ Index

4. Rachel Harley Smith

CEllA's Round Trip: Premiere Issue is Up!

Tue 1 Jul 2008

Drop by and check out Issue #01 CEllA's Round Trip (a hybrid type literary & visionary journal). LIVE and awesome as of now.

Issue #01, Summer 2008 contains creative writing and artwork by: Mario Scattoloni, Arlene Ang, Barry Graham, Christophe Casamassima, Sara Crowley, Craig LaRotunda, Ava C. Cipri, Valerie Fox, William Doreski, C.L. Bledsoe, Jon Pineada, Gwendolyn Joyce-Mintz, Elizabeth Kate Switaj, Vernon Frazer, Cheryl Hicks, Glenn Capers, and more, more, more . . .

http://www.cellasroundtrip.com/issue01
(publication is animated through Issuu.com, but please do hang around and enjoy the entire site! We refreshed ourselves!)

Thanks!!!
Rachel
editor & creator
[redacted]

↑ Index

5. Carol Novack

Multi-Media Event at Haven Arts Gallery, NYC

Tue 1 Jul 2008

---

*JULY 11, Friday 6-10pm, Haven Arts Gallery, Bronx: http://www.havenarts.org *-- Mad Hatters Review will present another Mad Hatters' Revue, an evening of poetry, fiction, music, moving artworks, videos and flash animation. Artists, musicians and writers include: Michael Andre, Ann Bogle, Orin Buck, Heide Hatry, A. D. Jameson, Peter Knoll, Benjamin Rush Miller, Carol Novack, Wanda Phipps, Austin Publicover, Shelly Rich, Larissa Shmailo, Alan Sondheim, Rob Stephenson, Stephanie Strickland, and Yuriy Tarnawsky. $8 admission includes a glass of wine or non-alcoholic beverage; otherwise, potables will be offered at an extremely modest cost and light munchies will be provided at no cost, courtesy of Haven Arts Gallery. Also maybe -- live dancing music. See Mad Hatters' Review for a taste of Mad Hatter taste. MAD HATTERS' REVIEW:

edgy & enlightened art, literature, & music in the Age of Dementia: http://www.madhattersreview.com.<http://www.madhattersreview.com/>

*Public transportation to Haven Arts Gallery, 50 Bruckner Blvd: *Take Lexington Express 4 or 5 to 125th St. Transfer to 6 Train: 3rd Ave 138 at Alexander Ave (get out at the Alexander Ave exit, turning right onto Alexander) Walk: 0.3 mi - about 7 mins at most 1. Head southwest on Alexander Ave toward E 137th St - 0.2 mi 2. Turn left at Bruckner Blvd & cross to the south side - 400 ft To: Haven Arts Gallery: 50 Bruckner Blvd.

MAD HATTERS' REVIEW: edgy & enlightened art, literature, & music in the Age of Dementia: http://www.madhattersreview.com

↑ Index

6. Troy Camplin
Emerson Institute Website
Tue 1 Jul 2008

The Emerson Institute for Freedom and Culture is now online at www.emersoninstitute.org

Featuring:

"Freedom Evolves" an essay by Troy Camplin
Three Poems by Frederick Turner
"How Could I Live Without Filing Taxes" a song by Carla Howell (lyrics on the website, performed song available on the blog, which can be linked to through the site).

We are of course always seeking works in the arts and humanities by liberty-loving artists and scholars to publish on the website.

Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
President, The Emerson Institute for Freedom and Culture

↑ Index

7. Layne Russell
Re: Poet Portraits Desired
Tue 1 Jul 2008

I'm in. Thanks, Amy.

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: amy king
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Monday, June 30, 2008 12:09 PM
> Subject: Poet Portraits Desired

If you have photos posted on Flickr of "Poets and Poet Types," please consider joining our group of the same name and sharing those photos, which are picked up in Google's search engine and thus provide poet images to seekers of such:

http://www.flickr.com/groups/[redacted]/

We currently have 57 members, but are hungering for more pics of distant poets from distant lands and close ones too!

Thanks,

Amy

↑ Index

8. Jill Chan

Poetry Sz: demystifying mental illness Issue 26 now online

Tue 1 Jul 2008

Featuring new work by:

Dimitris Lyacos

Steve Dalachinsky

Carrie Hunter

Lauren Joslin

Charles Frederickson

http://poetrysz.blogspot.com

Submissions is now open for the November issue. Send your poems, and a short bio, in the body of an email to [redacted]

Thanks.

regards

J Chan
editor

↑ Index

9. Pierre Joris

Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

Tue 1 Jul 2008

On Jun 30, 2008, at 6:28 PM, Troy Camplin wrote:
>
>
> Now, the quote by Olsen you have is half right:

& you got the name of Olson have right, or is that half wrong?

Pierre
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Sunday, June 29, 2008 11:07:12 PM
> Subject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
> A last thought about using numbers of "consumers" to judge literary > art. This August marks the 2nd year that Lana Ayers and I will > facilitate the August Poetry Postcard Fest.
http://poetrypostcards.blogspot.com/
>
> You take a card, address it to the next person on your list, refer > to a previous card in composing the original poem on the card, if > relevant, and send it to that person. I tend to transcribe postcard > poems after writing them, before dropping them in the mail. We're > about to release guidelines for 2008 and accept participants for > this year's festivities.
>
> Does it make the effort any less relevant if the poem is addressed > to only one person? Will no one understand if I make a reference > only that person might "understand?" Is it my job as a poet to send > a poem that the person will "understand?" Can appreciation of art go > beyond conscious "understanding" of meaning and intent? What does > Jazz mean?
>
> Charles Olson's statement in Projective Verse, "use of speech at its > least careless and least logical" resonates with me. Does that make > me elitist? Would my postcard poems not be appreciated by anyone > else besides the reader?
>
> I can't believe you think Emily Dickinson's work is unimportant > because she was not interested in publication, grants and the > admiration of the SUNY-Buffalo listserv poets. Or those who come > here just to stir up shit.
>
> Paul
>
>

> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
> American Sentences
> Organic Poetry
> Poetry Postcard Blog
>
> Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Sunday, June 29, 2008 11:00:44 AM
> Subject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
> Funny, of the examples I have given -- Michaelangelo, Mozart, > Shakespeare, Moliere, Racine -- not one was an American and not one > lived in a capitalist country. Yet each communicated extremely well > to a very wide audience. Prior to them, one had raconteurs and bards > who travelled and recited/sang poetry. The ancient Greek tragedies > and comedies were wildly popular (you may recall Plato complaining > about tragedy because it was wildly popular). The stories of the > gods and heroes were told through the recitation of poetry, > particularly epic poetry. So poetry has historically been popular,
> and it has been used primarily as a way of communication. The > Church, for example, used visual arts to tell the stories of the > Bible to its illiterate parishoners. Art is a form of communication, > and has always been a form of communication. Danto goes so far as to > argue that the arts are a form of rhetoric -- and he's probably on > to something there.
>
> If art is not communicating something, what is it doing? If you are > not concerned with getting your vision across to others, then what > you are doing isn't art. When you create art that is not intended to > communicate with anyone, then you are engaged in nothing more than > masturbation. Similarly, it doesn't result in the creation of > anything new, because it never comes in contact with others. If > Danto is right that art is a form of rhetoric, then those who either > won't (or cannot) communicate with their artwork are simply bad > artists. To proclaim that your art does not and should not > communicate is simply to try to provide an argument for why your > terribly bad art is in fact good art -- precisely because the art > can't speak for itself as to its worth.

>
> Troy Camplin
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 12:10:21 PM
> Subject: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
> ----- Original Message ----
>
> From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Friday, June 27, 2008 4:37:00 PM
> Subject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
>
> "...the best works are not those that only require critics for > anyone to understand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of > meaning-making in only having critics able to understand a work of > art.
>
> The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning
> from right away, but which gain in meaning the more you understand > and learn. Those works both the uneducated and the educated can > appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to create that kind of poetry? Why > should we only ever want to exist in the realm of the elite, where > only a select few 'truly understand'?"
>
> Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
>
> The limitation I see with this approach is that when one is trying > to "communicate"or write so that it goes over with people who don't > read poetry, is that the impulse to move in that direction is often > fear. If one is open to a work of art, they'll recognize the power > of it long before they fully understand, or even partially > understand, what it may be "communicating." When artists start > worrying about communication, the gesture suffers. What's the line

> by the painter Clyfford Still "demands for communication are > presumptions and irrelevant."
>
> It is a symptom of our capitalist society and the underlying > materialist cosmology that equates numbers (books sold, how many
> "regular" people have heard of the artist, etc.) that creates the > kind of attitude exhibited here by Dr. Camplin. Now, that may be his > interest, or motivation and he is welcome to it. It does not > interest me and I find I am usually not interested in art that can
> "go over" with average people, but there are exceptions. Anything > really worthwhile takes a little effort to appreciate, or at least > some background, or some kind of understanding or openness. People > raised in North American TV culture want it now, if not sooner, like > the ones who yell at the microwave to hurry up. Cook slow.
>
> Paul
>
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
> American Sentences
> Organic Poetry
> Poetry Postcard Blog
>
> Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]
>
>
>
>

The poet: always in partibus infidelium -- Paul Celan

Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202
h: [redacted]

c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Paris: 09.52.80.14.18
Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

↑ Index

10. Paul Siegell

MORE from PHILLY

Tue 1 Jul 2008

Friends,

Tucked inside the July/August issue of The American Poetry Review, 13 Philly Poets:

* Scott Edward Anderson
* Maris Brason
* Randall Couch
* Thomas Devaney
* Samuel Exler
* Dorothea Lasky
* Trapeta B. Mayson
* Gregory Pardlo
* Iain Haley Pollock
* Jason Schneiderman
* Paul Siegell
* Pamela Sutton
* Christian C. Thomas

"Welcome to Philadelphia"--It all starts on page 23.

Enjoy the festivities ahead,
Paul
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

11. susan maurer
honorable mention
Tue 1 Jul 2008

I am quite pleased to have won an honorable mention in the Poetic License contest. I am looking forward to the resultant antholgy. I only previously won a gian can of baked beans at a carnival. Susan Maurer _____ Use video conversation to talk face-to-face with Windows Live Messenger. http://www.windowslive.com/messenger/connect_your_way.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Refresh_messenger_video_072008

↑ Index

12. Joel Weishaus
Reality Too, June 2008
Tue 1 Jul 2008

The moderators have asked me to justify sending the monthly link to my one-year blog to the Poetics list, which is understandable. The explanation is in the introduction:

This is a one-year log of thoughts pondered, dreams exposed, of books, essays, poems, with photographs, whole or collaged, carried forth by conjoining what's happening in my life with the life of the planet. In essence, it is what neo-Jungian theorist Susan Rowland calls, "reading reality aesthetically." It is also a form of travel writing rarely leaving home, in the sense of Peter Bishop's, "Travel writing creates worlds, not simply discovers them."

The project's central purpose is to relocate the literary tradition in a medium that craves flashy images, pop-ups, etc., as a phase in the development of Digital Literary Art, linking new transmissions to old libraries, inside and out.

Listen! -

the pouring water!
The dogs and trees
conspire to invent
a world-gone!
-W.C. Williams. From, Paterson.

Here is the link to the June 2008 blog:

http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/blog/June.htm

Introduction:
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/blog/intro.htm

Designed for MS Explorer; Text Size: Medium; 1024X768 screen resolution.

-Joel

Joel Weishaus
Research Faculty
Department of English
Portland State University
Portland, Oregon
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282

↑ Index

13. David Baratier
TURN OFF THE REPEAT BUTTON
Tue 1 Jul 2008

Can everyone stop having multiple entire posts, five or ten earlier ones at times, appear after their message? Being on digest, the amount of repetition is to the point where the new posts are can no longer be discerned, or become unworth finding after reading the same material in multiplicity.

If not, can the moderator flip some super poetix switch to cut the repetitious entries before this rehash fertilizer enterprise overwhelms?

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
321 Empire Street
Montpelier OH 43543
http://pavementsaw.org

Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1

↑ Index

14. amy king

In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford

Tue 1 Jul 2008

The New York Times recently published William Logan's review of Frank Oâ€™Haraâ€™s "Selected Poems", edited by Mark Ford. I guess theyâ€™re going for the controversy ...

* Click here for William Logan's "Review"
http://www.nytimes.com/2008/06/29/books/review/Logan-t.html?_r=1&ref=books&oref=slogin

* Click here for Greg Rappleye's Response to Logan's Review
http://sonnetsat4am.blogspot.com/2008/06/not-again-billy.html

* Click here where Philip Gentry Notes the Homophobia, among other stuff
http://www.pmgentry.net/blog/2008/06/reviewing-review-ohara-and-logan.html

* Click here for John Latta's Take on Loganâ€™s Efforts
http://isola-di-rifiuti.blogspot.com/2008/06/logans-run.html

* Click here for Levi Asher's Take at LitKicks
http://www.litkicks.com/NYTBR20080629/

* Click here for Jack Kimball's Quick Assessment

http://pantaloons.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_pantaloons_archive.html#7716431543107616952

* Click here for Doctor Cleveland's Response to Logan
http://doctorcleveland.blogspot.com/2008/06/william-logan-doesnt-like-frank-ohara.html

Enjoy,

Amy

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

15. Joel Lewis

Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford

Tue 1 Jul 2008

I'm wondering if Logan has gotten tired iof wiping the floor with C.K. Williams, Adrienne Rich, Franz Wright and Jorie Graham and is now turning his blunderbuss against poets held dear by the alternative communities (Crane and O'Hara). His tone is not unlike that of Yvor Winters when he took on poets like Edna St. Vincent Millay and Robinson Jeffers (Winters so disliked Jeffers that he he came back for seconds in another review) during the heyday of High Modernism.Winters was at least of his time, Logan just comes off as critic sent forward from the past in the Wayback Machine

Joel Lewis

On Tue, Jul 1, 2008 at 11:18 AM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> The New York Times recently published William Logan's review of Frank O'Hara's "Selected Poems", edited by Mark Ford. I guess they're going for the controversy ...
>
>  Click here for William Logan's "Review"*
>
> http://www.nytimes.com/2008/06/29/books/review/Logan-t.html?_r=1&ref=books&oref=slogin
>
>  Click here for Greg Rappleye's Response to Logan's Review*
> http://sonnetsat4am.blogspot.com/2008/06/not-again-billy.html
>
>  Click here where Philip Gentry Notes the Homophobia, among other stuff*
>
> http://www.pmgentry.net/blog/2008/06/reviewing-review-ohara-and-logan.html
>
>  Click here for John Latta's Take on Logan's Efforts*
> http://isola-di-rifiuti.blogspot.com/2008/06/logans-run.html
>
>  Click here for Levi Asher's Take at LitKicks*
> http://www.litkicks.com/NYTBR20080629/
>
>  Click here for Jack Kimball's Quick Assessment*
>
> http://pantaloons.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_pantaloons_archive.html#7716431543107616952
>
>  Click here for Doctor Cleveland's Response to Logan*
>
> http://doctorcleveland.blogspot.com/2008/06/william-logan-doesnt-like-frank-

> ohara.html
>
> Enjoy,
>
> Amy
>
> _____
>
> Recent
> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
>
> Alias
> http://www.amyking.org
>
> Your Suggestions
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

16. Bobbie Lurie

Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jun 2008 to 30 Jun 2008 (#2008-178)

Tue 1 Jul 2008

I can understand Troyâ€™s argument and alsoÂ Paulâ€˜s response but I cannot relate any of it to what I feel I need to do in order to keep writing. I feel a NEED to experiment, I am excited to see writers and artists experiment with material, challenge me or not challenge me. A lot of ie; poetry which is understandable is not necessarily honest (ie; what I call â€œinvented epiphaniesâ€ etc./ a type of artifical attempt to â€œcreateâ€ beautyâ€”but beauty to me happens in the act of being opened to new ways of seeing and hearing and so I feel a need to make things new somehow, to entertain myself mostly since who even know if what Iâ€™m doing will even be published, it is done in the moment. Gertrude Steinâ€™s â€œI write for myself and strangersâ€ is the quote I plan to use in every book I publish from now on because I realize how true it is. One can never predict the response to oneâ€™s work by others but isnâ€™t writing like some kind of disease? Something we MUST do whether it is published or understood or not understood? I mean, it obviously isnâ€™t the wisest â€œcareerâ€ choice (I donâ€™t even like the idea that it is called a career by so manyâ€”I donâ€™t see how it can be a â€œcareerâ€) but it certainly is exciting to find a passion for something that doesnâ€™t involve anything other than the imagination. Iâ€™ve stopped wanting people to â€œunderstandâ€ or â€œlikeâ€ my work though plenty of it has been understandable and lots of itÂ I'm sureÂ not. I donâ€™t even feel satisfaction at being understood or not understood. I find it to be a very selfish endeavor, one which helps me survive this life. Bobbi Lurie

Date: Sun, 29 Jun 2008 20:39:13 -0700 rom: Paul Nelson <[redacted]> ubject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D. Dr. Camplin, So you judge my work without ever having read it? How does that help dialog? ommunication? Just because my intention is not necessarily to communicate does ot mean it doesn't get something across. Nor does it make it masturbation, as udged by the number of featured readings I have given over the last ten years. Charles Olson said: A poem is energy ransferred from where the poet got it (he will have some several causations), y way of the poem itself to, all the way over to, the reader. Okay. Then the oem itself must, at all points, be a high energy-construct and, at all points, n energy-discharge. So: how is the poet to accomplish same energy, how is he, hat is the process by which a poet gets in, at all points energy at least the quivalent of the energy which propelled him in the first place, yet an energy hich is peculiar to verse alone and which will be, obviously, also different rom the energy which the reader, because he is a third term, will take away. People seem to be interested in HIS work, 38 years after his death at 60. So, id HE communicate anything? Apparently so, given the new film about his work nd life in Gloucester, Polis is This. Given the movie from last year Fully wake: Black Mountain College. You obviously come to the SUNY list with an agenda far more traditional than the verage list reader. You must expect people to disagree with you. You should nderstand they'll have a more challenging aesthetic than to have their work go ver to a large audience. That is a measure addled by a capitalist ethos anyway. nd the artists you cite did not have nearly the same cultural conditions, so t's a misnomer. In a wonderful Jacket interview: http://jacketmagazine.com/35/perez-ivb-johnson.shtml Omar Perez points out that capitalist considerations have NO PLACE in art. hey're antithetical to it. I'm not interested in heat from this list. I am nterested in light. Calling a stranger's work masturbation is unfortunate if ou are really interested in dialog. Of course at least masturbation is sex with omeone I love. Paul Paul E. Nelson Global Voices Radio PLAB! merican Sentences rganic Poetry oetry Postcard Blog Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

---- Original Message ---- rom: Troy Camplin <[redacted]> o: [redacted] ent: Sunday, June 29, 2008 11:00:44 AM ubject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D. Funny, of the examples I have given -- Michaelangelo, Mozart, Shakespeare, oliere, Racine -- not one was an American and not one lived in a capitalist ountry. Yet each communicated extremely well to a very wide audience. Prior to hem, one had raconteurs and bards who travelled and recited/sang poetry. The ncient Greek tragedies and comedies were wildly popular (you may recall Plato omplaining about tragedy because it was wildly popular). The stories of the ods and heroes were told through the recitation of poetry, particularly epic oetry. So poetry has historically been popular, and it has been used primarily s a way of communication. The Church, for example, used visual arts to tell the tories of the Bible to its illiterate parishoners. Art is a form of ommunication, and has always been a form of communication. Danto goes so far as o argue that the arts are a form of rhetoric -- and he's probably on to omething there. If art is not communicating something, what is it doing? If you are not oncerned with getting your vision across to others, then what you are doing sn't art. When you create art that is not intended to communicate with anyone, hen you are engaged in nothing more than masturbation. Similarly, it doesn't esult in the creation of anything new, because it never comes in contact with thers. If Danto is right that art is a form of rhetoric, then those who either on't (or cannot) communicate with their artwork are simply bad artists. To roclaim that your art does not and should not communicate is simply to try to rovide an argument for why your terribly bad art is in fact good art -- recisely because the art can't speak for itself as to its worth. Troy Camplin

---- Original Message ----
rom: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
o: [redacted]
ent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 12:10:21 PM
ubject: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
----- Original Message ----
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
o: [redacted]
ent: Friday, June 27, 2008 4:37:00 PM
ubject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
"...the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to nderstand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only aving critics able to understand a work of art.
The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right way, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn. Those works oth the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to reate that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm f the elite, where only a select few 'truly understand'?"
Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
The limitation I see with this approach is that when one is trying to communicate"or write so that it goes over with people who don't read poetry, is hat the impulse to move in that direction is often fear. If one is open to a ork of art, they'll recognize the power of it long before they fully nderstand, or even partially understand, what it may be "communicating." When rtists start worrying about communication, the gesture suffers. What's the line y the painter Clyfford Still "demands for communication are presumptions and rrelevant."

It is a symptom of our capitalist society and the underlying materialist osmology that equates numbers (books sold, how many "regular" people have heard f the artist, etc.) that creates the kind of attitude exhibited here by Dr.
amplin. Now, that may be his interest, or motivation and he is welcome to it.
t does not interest me and I find I am usually not interested in art that can go over" with average people, but there are exceptions. Anything really orthwhile takes a little effort to appreciate, or at least some background, or ome kind of understanding or openness. People raised in North American TV ulture want it now, if not sooner, like the ones who yell at the microwave to urry up. Cook slow.
Paul

↑ Index

17. Mary Jo Malo

Re: Celan, Heidegger, Todtnauberg, Pierre Joris, James K. Lyon

Tue 1 Jul 2008

Yes, especially in regards to your argument for poetry of/for the masses and for the past glories of lyrical poetry. I strongly suggest you become aware of the connection :)

I think a discussion of poetics should be towards innovation and further subjectivity, to encourage art by and for the individual. The individual is far more suited, even when educated, to chose from a rich and diverse offering, especially on this newfangled "internets."

"First of all, an insistent reference to the West and to "Western Civilization," a theme or lexicon whose careless manipulation has often slid over into rather undemocratic theses, as we know now from experience, especially when it is a question of a "decadence" of the said Western Civilization. As soon as anyone talks about "decadence of Western Civilization," I am on my guard. We know that this kind of talk can sometimes (not always) lead to restorations or installations of an authoritarian, even totalitarian order." (Jacques Derrida, "Like the Sound of the Sea Deep within a Shell: Paul de Man's War")http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/joris/heideggerfascism.html

_____

WIsh I did, but thanks for the links. I wasn't aware of the connection between Heidegger and Celan...
Troy Camplin

--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

18. Paul Siegell
Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jun 2008 to 30 Jun 2008 (#2008-178)
Tue 1 Jul 2008

Bobbi, thank you for your post. I say YES! to you.

↑ Index

19. David Chirot
David Caddy on J.H. Prynne
Tue 1 Jul 2008

---

an essay on JH Prynne in both written and mp3 format by David Caddy, British poet, editor and critic.

http://davidcaddy.blogspot.com/2008/06/letter-14.html

(re Caddy's comments on exile-- something stumbled on the other day referenced by some one else-- and old note sent to this list five years ago-- writing of how since 9/11 esp the sense of answering the forms which ask for "occupation"-- one writes "writer/artist" "occupation" as working "under occupation" in the "Homeland"-- a place ever more Occupied by forces both stridently and subtly antithetical to "freedom," "free speech," "difference" and "questioning authorities"-- so it is that in this very good article the ideas of "exile" i think are far too narrow and need to be extended throughout the world-- to include writers of exiles from genocides and ethnic cleansings in Africa, Latin America, Palestine, former Yugoslavia, Iraq, Afghanistan, Armenia, Cambodia-- and inside the USA--the "internal refugees" of Katrina and the reservations, ghettos, rural poverty-- "internal exiles" of America's Holocaust living in "Occupied Territories"-- here in Milwaukee is the US' only Black Holocaust Museum to bring greater awareness to this extension and inclusiveness of the questions and meanings of exiles,exterminations, enslavements-- otherwise the vanishings of peoples in itself is vanished and even their bones and ghosts disappeared into the "Heart of Darkness"-- for example in Conrad's time, over ten million people were killed by the Belgians in the Congo in less than fifteen years--and millions more permanently crippled, tortured, died of disease and hunger--and in the first years of the 21st Century, 4.5 million persons in the Congo have been slaughtered-- in a daily increasingly Panopticonic and Internet World Wide Web planet-- the Cinema of catharsis is heavily edited, and the areas which are exposed to lighs, camera, action--selected and controlled-- those in the areas not so well lit, not so well filmed, not so well "acted"--, out of electronic range, behind Walls, hidden away in the thousands of torture chambers and prisons, the new globalization slave trades--all these persons,--exiled to the "Heart of Darkness"-- where it is supposed that history, writing, poetry,"civilization" do not exist-- while in the heavily gated "Free Zones" "poetry" and "civilization" are also carefully controlled and manicured--so that the hands of the poets will be kept clean-- in handling the delicate surgeries of form-- far from those filthy freezing asylums where Artaud is still howling in the Plague infested winds

"And if there is still is one hellish, truly accursed thing in our time, it is our artistic dallying with forms, instead of being like victims burnt at the stake, signalling through the flames."

Or has it been realized perhaps that the "solution" to this is simply to "let" others be the victims burning in ever more places--Iraq, Afghanistan, Palestine and soon enough Iran--so that the dallying with forms may continue unabated and uninterrupted---

For after all, those signalling through the flames-- are they not enemies, terrorists, making uncivilized gestures one can well live without?--)

↑ Index

20. Troy Camplin

Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jun 2008 to 30 Jun 2008 (#2008-178)

Tue 1 Jul 2008

Excellent comments. My point has always been that 1) we need to learn how to write poetry "right" in the same way that painters first have to learn how to draw and musicians have to first learn how to play a musical instrument by playing things we recognize before we move on to experiment and push the boundaries (you have to learn the rules before you can break the rules), and 2) too many are trying to over-intellectualize the writing of poetry to such an extend that it alienates readers. Part of 2) is rooted in the problem of 1), where too many poets think that understanding the history of poetry only means paying attention to what happened in their own lifetimes. This myopic view too often creates elitist verse that all sounds the same. Oftentimes it creates what is essentially prose with line breaks. What is the difference between poetry and prose? One is rhythmic, the other unrhythmic. To say poetry is rhythmic is not to say that it must be iambic or some other "standard" rhythm. Good free verse is also rhythmic, though that rhythm may not be as regular as a poem written in iambic may be. Poetry is the dance of language; prose is language at a walk (though of course, some people are awkward dancers, and some people have walks that seem to approach dance).

I know that too many people are afraid that rules will get in the way of creativity -- but this is because of a misunderstanding of how rules work. Good rules give you more, not less, freedom. (I refer you to my article, "Literature as a Game": http://blackboard.lincoln.ac.uk/bbcswebdav/users/dmeyerdinkgrafe/archive/camplin.html) Also, once you learn the rules, you internalize them, meaning you are able to use them without them "getting in the way." I've noticed too that using rhythm and rhyme have forced me to come up with much more interesting words, metaphors, turns of phrases, and even directions in my poetry. At the same time, the finished poem may not have any sort of rhyme in it -- or the same rhythm. Forcing the poem into several boxes can force you to express yourself better, and even clarify to yourself what you're really thinking. More, form tends to work like a car engine, controlling the explosion of words, emotions, thoughts, etc.. and turning it into productive work.

For those who are interested, I provide a poetic explanation of what I have been trying to say here at: http://themetaphorgroup.blogspot.com/2008/02/introduction_11.html

Also, I demonstrate the importance of form to content by writing the same topic in two different poetic forms here: http://evolutionaryaesthetics.blogspot.com/2005/09/examples-of-different-forms.html

These may clarify some of the things I have been talking about here.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Bobbie Lurie <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, July 1, 2008 10:42:44 AM
Subject: Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jun 2008 to 30 Jun 2008 (#2008-178)

I can understand Troy’s argument and also Paul’s response but I cannot relate any of it to what I feel I need to do in order to keep writing. I feel a NEED to experiment, I am excited to see writers and artists experiment with material, challenge me or not challenge me. A lot of ie; poetry which is understandable is not necessarily honest (ie; what I call “invented epiphanies” etc./ a type of artifical attempt to “create” beauty—but beauty to me happens in the act of being opened to new ways of seeing and hearing and so I feel a need to make things new somehow, to entertain myself mostly since who even know if what I’m doing will even be published, it is done in the moment. Gertrude Stein’s “I write for myself and strangers” is the quote I plan to use in every book I publish from now on because I realize how true it is. One can never predict the response to one’s work by others but isn’t writing like some kind of disease? Something we MUST do whether it is published or understood or not understood? I mean, it obviously isn’t the wisest “career” choice (I don’t even like the idea that it is called a career by so many—I don’t see how it can be a “career”) but it certainly is exciting to find a passion for something that doesn’t involve anything other than the imagination. I’ve stopped wanting people to “understand” or “like” my work though plenty of it has been understandable and lots of it I'm sure not. I don’t even feel satisfaction at being understood or not understood. I find it to be a very selfish endeavor, one which helps me survive this life. Bobbi Lurie

Date: Sun, 29 Jun 2008 20:39:13 -0700 rom: Paul Nelson <[redacted]> ubject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.. Dr. Camplin, So you judge my work without ever having read it? How does that help dialog? ommunication? Just because my intention is not necessarily to communicate does ot mean it doesn't get something across. Nor does it make it masturbation, as udged by the number of featured readings I have given over the last ten years. Charles Olson said: A poem is energy ransferred from where the poet got it (he will have some several causations), y way of the poem itself to, all the way over to, the reader.. Okay. Then the oem itself must, at all points, be a high energy-construct and, at all points, n energy-discharge. So: how is the poet to accomplish same energy, how is he, hat is the process by which a poet gets in, at all points energy at least the quivalent of the energy which propelled him in the first place, yet an energy hich is peculiar to verse alone and which will be, obviously, also different rom the energy which the reader, because he is a third term, will take away. People seem to be interested in HIS work, 38 years after his death at 60. So, id HE communicate anything? Apparently so, given the new film about his work nd life in Gloucester, Polis is This. Given the movie from last year Fully wake: Black Mountain College. You obviously come to the SUNY list with an agenda far more traditional than the verage list reader. You must expect people to disagree with you. You should nderstand they'll have a more challenging aesthetic than to have their work go ver to a large audience. That is a measure addled by a capitalist ethos anyway. nd the artists you cite did not have nearly the same cultural conditions, so t's a misnomer. In a wonderful Jacket interview: http://jacketmagazine.com/35/perez-ivb-johnson..shtml Omar Perez points out that capitalist considerations have NO PLACE in art. hey're antithetical to it. I'm not interested in heat from this list. I am nterested in light.

Calling a stranger's work masturbation is unfortunate if ou are really interested in dialog. Of course at least masturbation is sex with omeone I love. Paul Paul E. Nelson Global Voices Radio PLAB! merican Sentences rganic Poetry oetry Postcard Blog Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

---- Original Message ---- rom: Troy Camplin <[redacted]> o: [redacted] ent: Sunday, June 29, 2008 11:00:44 AM ubject: Re: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D. Funny, of the examples I have given -- Michaelangelo, Mozart, Shakespeare, oliere, Racine -- not one was an American and not one lived in a capitalist ountry. Yet each communicated extremely well to a very wide audience. Prior to hem, one had raconteurs and bards who travelled and recited/sang poetry. The ncient Greek tragedies and comedies were wildly popular (you may recall Plato omplaining about tragedy because it was wildly popular). The stories of the ods and heroes were told through the recitation of poetry, particularly epic oetry. So poetry has historically been popular, and it has been used primarily s a way of communication. The Church, for example, used visual arts to tell the tories of the Bible to its illiterate parishoners. Art is a form of ommunication, and has always been a form of communication. Danto goes so far as o argue that the arts are a form of rhetoric -- and he's probably on to omething there. If art is not communicating something, what is it doing? If you are not oncerned with getting your vision across to others, then what you are doing sn't art. When you create art that is not intended to communicate with anyone, hen you are engaged in nothing more than masturbation. Similarly, it doesn't esult in the creation of anything new, because it never comes in contact with thers. If Danto is right that art is a form of rhetoric, then those who either on't (or cannot) communicate with their artwork are simply bad artists. To roclaim that your art does not and should not communicate is simply to try to rovide an argument for why your terribly bad art is in fact good art -- recisely because the art can't speak for itself as to its worth. Troy Camplin

---- Original Message ----
rom: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
o: [redacted]
ent: Saturday, June 28, 2008 12:10:21 PM
ubject: Response to Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
----- Original Message ----
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
o: [redacted]
ent: Friday, June 27, 2008 4:37:00 PM
ubject: Re: The lyric poem - what be its current fate?
"...the best works are not those that only require critics for anyone to nderstand what is going on. There's a certain tyranny of meaning-making in only

aving critics able to understand a work of art.
The most beautiful works are those that one can get some meaning from right way, but which gain in meaning the more you understand and learn. Those works oth the uneducated and the educated can appreciate. Why shouldn't we want to reate that kind of poetry? Why should we only ever want to exist in the realm f the elite, where only a select few 'truly understand'?"
Troy Camplin, Ph.D.
The limitation I see with this approach is that when one is trying to communicate"or write so that it goes over with people who don't read poetry, is hat the impulse to move in that direction is often fear. If one is open to a ork of art, they'll recognize the power of it long before they fully nderstand, or even partially understand, what it may be "communicating." When rtists start worrying about communication, the gesture suffers. What's the line y the painter Clyfford Still "demands for communication are presumptions and rrelevant."
It is a symptom of our capitalist society and the underlying materialist osmology that equates numbers (books sold, how many "regular" people have heard f the artist, etc.) that creates the kind of attitude exhibited here by Dr. amplin. Now, that may be his interest, or motivation and he is welcome to it. t does not interest me and I find I am usually not interested in art that can go over" with average people, but there are exceptions. Anything really orthwhile takes a little effort to appreciate, or at least some background, or ome kind of understanding or openness. People raised in North American TV ulture want it now, if not sooner, like the ones who yell at the microwave to urry up. Cook slow.
Paul

↑ Index

21. Catherine Daly
Re: logic, lyric, blah blah
Tue 1 Jul 2008

I'm a little confused about the reading of Shakespeare that could support a bash of postmodernist use of source, translation, intent, and interaction. Version? Authorial identity?

I'm also a little confused about the bash on English teachers. Mine taught me how to read. It has proven pretty helpful to me, reading.

I don't understand how logic and lyric are opposites.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

22. Maria Damon
Re: Poet Portraits Desired
Tue 1 Jul 2008

---

oh yeah...open mouth, insert foot. thanks amy.

amy king wrote:
> Hmm, most of them do, at least, at the top of the photo. Some people may not have included a name, but I think all of mine do. For instance,
>
> "Ron Padgett and John Ashbery"
> http://www.flickr.com/photos/amyking/437126870/in/[redacted]
>
> "Cole Swensen and Keith Waldrop"
> http://www.flickr.com/photos/amyking/302830083/in/[redacted]
>
> "Evie Shockley and Sina Queyras"
> http://www.flickr.com/photos/amyking/400437928/in/[redacted]
>
> The titles appear above each photo.
>
> Best,
> Amy
>
>
> Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
> amy, great idea; it'd also be nice to have captions under the pix saying > who the poet is.
>
> amy king wrote:
>
>> If you have photos posted on Flickr of "Poets and Poet Types," please consider joining our group of the same name and sharing those photos, which are picked up in Google's search engine and thus provide poet images to seekers of such:

>>
>> http://www.flickr.com/groups/[redacted]/
>>
>
>
>
> _____
>
> Recent
> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> http://cutbankpoetry.blogspot.com/2008/04/im-man-who-loves-you-by-amy-king.html
>
> Alias
> http://www.amyking.org
>
>
>

↑ Index

23. Loretta Clodfelter
New Issue of There Has Launched
Tue 1 Jul 2008

A new issue of There is now up: http://www.therejournal.com

With new work from Joel Chace, Andy Fitch, Andrew J. Jones, Heather Jovanelli, Nicholas Karavatos, Chad Lietz, Katrina Rodabaugh, Marisa Siegel, and Lesley Stampleman

And we're pleased to announce There will have some exciting new initiatives in the fall, including chapbooks!

There
www.therejournal.com

↑ Index

24. Jim Andrews
Re: CEllA's Round Trip: Premiere Issue is Up!
Tue 1 Jul 2008

---

check this out. the mag itself is very interesting and substantial at 94 pages. additionally, those who publish in print and look for some sort of workable online version of magazine format will find this quite an eye-opener, i would think. rachel has used a web service called issuu.com which obviously excels in porting magazine format to the net. issuu.com offers one of the most powerful print-online syntheses i've seen.

ja

> Drop by and check out Issue #01 CEllA's Round Trip (a hybrid type literary & > visionary journal). LIVE and awesome as of now.
>
> Issue #01, Summer 2008
> contains creative writing and artwork by:
> Mario Scattoloni, Arlene Ang, Barry Graham, Christophe Casamassima, Sara Crowley, Craig LaRotunda, Ava C. Cipri, Valerie Fox, William Doreski, C.L. Bledsoe, Jon Pineada, Gwendolyn Joyce-Mintz, Elizabeth Kate Switaj, Vernon Frazer, Cheryl Hicks, Glenn Capers, and more, more, more . . .
>
> http://www.cellasroundtrip.com/issue01 > (publication is animated through Issuu.com, but please do hang around and enjoy the entire site! We refreshed ourselves!)
>
> Thanks!!!
> Rachel
> editor & creator
> [redacted]

↑ Index

25. Jane Sprague
New from Palm Press: Landscapes of Dissent
Tue 1 Jul 2008

***
PALM PRESS is pleased to announce the publication of:

LANDSCAPES OF DISSENT: Guerrilla Poetry and Public Space by Jules Boykoff and Kaia Sand
***

Imagine - and witness - public space that is produced by us. In Landscapes of Dissent, Sand and Boykoff remind us that there is a long history and ripe presence of intersections between poetry and politics. Don Mitchell is quoted in these pages as saying that public space is "decisive." In an age in which alienation is among our most prevalent health hazards, Landscapes of Dissent demonstrates that poetry may be newly, again, good for you. This book is a gift. Take the power. -Carol Mirakove Landscapes of Dissent is a prolegomenon toward a new topoiesis--the creation of a new topos, a new place. This book brings forth not only the discussion of several practices of disensual use of consensual ("public") space, but also gives away ideas & insights about what takes place thanks to a poetry that makes space in a polis made diapolis. Reading this book I found myself feeling an unknown political emotion that prompts my passive reader to become a reader ready to engage (again) the streets--energized by this discussion in which writing is hope & hope is action. Make it public! --Heriberto Yepez

This timely book pushes poetry more firmly into public space at a vibrant historical moment when both the public potential of poetry & the possibilities of public space are being refigured. In Landscapes of Dissent, Boykoff and Sand engage a crucial shift in the relationship of poetry & public space: they do not merely insert poetry into an existing public sphere imagined as a platform, but rather that show us how both poetry & public space take on alternative forms of publicness. These acts of publicness join other creative reclamations to assert politics in a space the neoliberalism frames as seamless & accessible--& therefore post-political. Landscapes of Dissent is expansive & sharp--an important book of political-aesthetic scholarship.--Jeff Derksen

***

Palm Press, 2008
ISBN 0-9789262-4-2
978-0-9789262-4-3
$15.00
128 pages, trade paperback
www.palmpress.org

↑ Index

26. CA Conrad

Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford

Tue 1 Jul 2008

THANK GOD William Logan HATES O'Hara!

When I was in fourth grade I saw my enemy eating my favorite, my BELOVED Red Hots candy! AND NEVER AGAIN WOULD I EAT THEM! Well, not for a few years until I forgot about my enemy.

But I'm happy to have not changed. Although I wouldn't HATE O'Hara if Logan LOVED him, but it would turn my stomach a bit.

THIS EVIL REVIEW OF O'HARA SHOULD BE CELEBRATED!

SPREAD THE WORD: EVIL WILLIAM LOGAN HATES O'HARA, BUY YOUR O'HARA TODAY!

But I'm not a big fan of that new selected I must admit. Some of my FAVORITE O'Hara poems not there. And the cover photo choice irritated me as well, going for the young, suave O'Hara. I prefer the Alice Neel portrait of him with green WEIRD teeth! He's fucking CREEPY AND BEAUTIFUL all at once! I'm SO SICK of poets acting like FASHION MODELS, like those stupid Sharon Olds photos where she could be selling shampoo or yogurt. (I'm NO fan of her poems, but would buy her shampoo)

OH, and I'm also GLAD, VERY GLAD William Logan is homophobic, I MUCH PREFER the heterosexuals have to deal with him frankly! If he was a fag I would CONVERT!

OH FRANK O'HARA GET UP, GET UP, WE LOVE YOU! GODDAMM-IT POETRY IS FUN! CAConrad

*my NEW BOOK (Soma)tic Midge (Faux Press):
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>

the DEAR MR. PRESIDENT poem with pictures:
http://thedearmrpresidentpoem.blogspot.com/

PhillySound FEATURE in FANZINE:
http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_archive.html

PhillySound: new poetry:
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

updated (Soma)tic POETRY
EXERCISES:http://somaticpoetryexercises.blogspot.com
*
**

↑ Index

27. Nico Vassilakis

Reminds = N. Vassilakis & C. Curry = Reading in B'klyn July 8th

Wed 2 Jul 2008

Crystal Curry & Nico Vassilakis

Reading @ Unnameable Books July 8th, 8pm

+ + + +

UNNAMEABLE BOOKS
***
456 Bergen Street
Brooklyn NY 11217
[redacted]

↑ Index

28. Ryan Daley
Re: Least Careless and Least Logical
Wed 2 Jul 2008

Troy,

Your post:

"we need to learn how to write poetry "right" in the same way that painters first have to learn how to draw and musicians have to first learn how to play a musical instrument by playing things we recognize before we move on to experiment and push the boundaries (you have to learn the rules before you can break the rules),"

reminds me of William Logan's review:

"'The poets of the New York School, as they were eventually known, were long on spontaneity and short on traditional literary effect."

Did you guys meet before these writings? Who are some examples of poets who are writing "wrongly"?

-Ryan

On Tue, Jul 1, 2008 at 5:51 PM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
> On Mon, Jun 30, 2008 at 8:36 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
>> Are you talking about me, or just projecting here? I try to have a discussion about the art of poetry, and I get accusations (often false), mere rhetoric, attempts at pissing matches, superficial claptrap, etc. Not from everyone, to be sure. There are a few who have actually carried on an intellectual discussion on poetry. Those who suspect I may be right, but find that possibility to be inconvenient to whatever it is they are producing end up with this kind of dribble.
>>
>> I've been accused of wanting to go back to the "stink of the 19th century." I've never talked about the 19th century. However, I have not seen any kind of argument for why it stinks. Is it because so many were bestsellers and were better poets on their worst days than most of us have ever been on our best? Still, it's not the 19th century I've talked about. In fact, I have only mentioned, a few discussion threads ago, one poet from the last 400 years, and that was Frederick Turner, who is very much alive and a poet of the late 20th and now early 21st century. Speaking of contemporary poets, one could also mention Frederick Fierstein, Paul Lake, and R. S. Gwynn. Of the Modernists, I love Robert Frost and especially Wallace Stevens. The intellectual in me loves the French surrealists and Apollinaire. It is certainly that I don't like much of what the Modernists especially have done -- I just recognize too that much of what they did worked to marginalize >> poetry. Part of that marginalization was in direct response to movies and, later, T.V. -- to modern culture. One of the consequences of this was the audience for poetry shrunk. But, then, so did the audience for operas, plays, and symphonies -- especially the Modern and Postmodern works that came about.

>>
>> Now, while I did say that beauty reproduces itself, I should have also said that so do viruses. What our English teachers and professors have done to the students in this country have made them susceptible to infection.
>>
>> Troy Camplin
>>
>>
>> ----- Original Message ----
>> From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
>> To: [redacted]
>> Sent: Monday, June 30, 2008 12:17:57 PM
>> Subject: Least Careless and Least Logical
>>
>> So if you're after LOGIC in poetry, you can swing back to the stink of the 19th century, as Michael Ford put it. Fortunately, there are those (the vast majority on this list) who want a DEEPER gesture than what certain Doctors from Texas are capable of appreciating and that's why this list exists..
>>
>> There have been a couple of movements since the romantic era that sought to make art more relevant to the times. We see where intellect gets us and the Doctor from Texas exemplifies it to perfection. The hastily-written put down. The intellectual pissing match. The desire to prove one's self right at the expense of another. It is a clear demonstration of the competition/domination cosmology, one whose time passed long ago, but still clings on and on.
>>
>> Jack Spicer said
>>
>>
>> …Prose invents -
>> poetry discloses…
>>
>> …A poet is a time
>> mechanic not an embalmer…
>>

>> …Muses do exist, but >> now I know that they are not afraid to dirty their hands with explication – >> that they are patient with truth and commentary as long as it doesn't get into >> the poem…
>>
>> among other things. But Spicer's is, of course an ethos based in 1950's consciousness, albeit way ahead of its time. It IS threatening to think that we have moved ahead since 1850, in poetry anyway, so these kinds of notions will be attacked by someone clinging with an intellectual death-grip to the ideals of the 19th century.
>>
>>
>> Paul E. Nelson
>>
>> Global Voices Radio
>> SPLAB!
>> American Sentences
>> Organic Poetry
>> Poetry Postcard Blog
>>
>> Ilalqo, WA 253.735..6328 or [redacted]
>>
>>
>>
>>
>

↑ Index

29. Matt Henriksen
new book(s)
Wed 2 Jul 2008

(a new one)

This Ocean, or Opp
Cannibal Books
announces books

(a new one)

This Ocean, or Oppen Series
by Joseph Bradshaw

(& 3 re-releases)

Gilbi Winco Swags
by Melanie Hubbard

The Foundations of Poetry Mathematics
by Ben Mazer

I¢ll Say I¢m Only Visiting
by Thibault Raoult

(all hand-sewn & of unfashionable genius)
(w/ cover designs by Katy Henriksen)
(An aesthetic definition cannot define the hunger)

flesheatingpoems.blogspot.com
[redacted]
Fayetteville, AR
July 2009

Find us in lovely bookstores:
Grolier Poetry Book Shop (Cambridge, MA)
Pegasus Book Store (Berkeley, CA)
Unnameable Books (Brooklyn, NY)
Woodland Pattern Book Center (Milwaukee, WI)

Booksellers and international orders query Matthew Henriksen at [redacted].

↑ Index

30. Jesse Glass

Spam Lit Article On The Guardian books Blog

Wed 2 Jul 2008

---

http://blogs.guardian.co.uk/books/2008/07/spam_poetry.html

With an interesting mention of your correspondent, Jesse Glass.

↑ Index

31. Bob Heman

DESTINY - i'll be part of this BIG READING in SOHO on July 11 at 7:00 pm - DESTINY

Wed 2 Jul 2008

---

the Destiny Reading
featuring

Angelo Verga
Anne Cammon
Bob Heman
Fareed Bitar
Liza Wolsky
Master Lee
Miriam Stanley
Moira Smith

Roger Lipson on sitar

hosted by Liza Wolsky & Fareed Bitar

Friday, July 11th, from 7pm to 9pm at the very beautiful Eli Klein Fine Art
462 West Broadway
(just below Houston)

Bob Heman
[redacted]
EarthLink Revolves Around You.

↑ Index

32. Doug Holder

Lisa Beatman's "Manufacturing America" (Ibbetson Street--2008)

Wed 2 Jul 2008

June 30th, 2008

Review by Karen J. Weyant (email)

MANUFACTURING AMERICA: POEMS FROM THE FACTORY FLOOR
by Lisa Beatman

Ibbetson Street Press
25 School Street
Somerville, MA, 02143
ISBN 978-0-6151-8124-0
61 pp., $14.95
http://www.ibbetsonstreetpress.com
www.lulu.com

In her forward to Manufacturing America: Poems from the Factory Floor, Lisa Beatman explains that in 2001 she was hired to teach basic skills to workers at a paper and printing company. For those of us who teach at-risk students, we know their hardships and sympathize, but Beatman goes one step further than just sympathizing. Chronicling her students' stories, Beatman, in quick poetic glimpses, records their past lives in other countries, their current struggles, and even their possible futures.

As anyone can imagine, the stories found in this slim book are varied. In Rainbow we see the past of Juan, a fisherman who "cast his net/ on a rainbow lake, testing the patched weave" and we see the present: his life in a factory with "calloused hands, tattooed with paper cuts." We see Nina in First Shift who "puts her face/ back on at 5:00 am" her makeup routine complete with "mascara on thick" and "watermelon/ tint to her lips." And we see the maneuvering of family routines in Swing Shift, where "Alicia leaves the house at 2:00/ Guillermo gets home at 4:00/ Gracias a Dios / his mama can watch/ Manuelito in between." These, of course, are only a few stories found in this collection; as with real life populations of blue collar workers in the United States, their stories and memories are as diverse as the population itself.

As with any good book (poetry or otherwise), I turned the last page still hoping for more. In such collections as this one, there are always openings, always voices still to be heard, always stories still to be told, but it's been a long time since I have felt such a gap. Beatman's book leaves many questions unanswered, which is perhaps why I felt such a loss. For example, in Parking, we experience a suggested worker layoff with opening lines "The lucky ones punched in on Monday/ one by one, all on time." This poem also depicts the cafeteria and parking lot on that same day:

Maria sat in the cafeteria
next to an empty chair.
She finally got a shady spot where her '96 Chevy wouldn't cook.

Then, there are the closed factories depicted in GoodBones: "The condos on the river side/ will go for what, half mil?/ Wonder what they used to make here- / car parts, blue jeans, envelopes." Certainly, the parking lot spaces, the empty spots in the cafeteria, the decay of urban factories are all strong images that leave us wondering about portraits not recorded, the life stories not being told.

But finally, there is the question directed towards the poet herself, in the haunting Copyright, a poem that depicts the burden of telling another's story:

Leyla Chang invades my dreams strips the white sheet from my body plucks the pen from my twitching fingers
What's this she says

about you writing my life?
since when did I become a page number in your table of contents?

And this is why, ultimately, Beatman's work is such a success. Certainly, she has not presented a collection that is "groundbreaking"--other poets have written about the physical and emotional struggles of the blue collar world. But Beatman's book is very much a reflection of the factory world today. As she herself notes, "Sadly, manufacturing is dying in America. Owners, seeking lower labor costs and fewer regulations, are relocating plants, ironically, to many of the developing countries their workers came from." With both the recorded stories and the unanswered questions, Beatman echoes the uncertainly of her students' futures, and perhaps, all of our futures as well.

_____

Karen J. Weyant is a 2007 Fellow in poetry from the New York Foundation for the Arts and her most recent work can be seen in Slipstream, The ComstockReview and Labor: Studies in Working-Class History of the Americas. She has work forthcoming in Pennsylvania English and the minnesota review. She teaches at Jamestown Community College in Jamestown, New York.

Note: Reviews may not necessarily reflect the opinions of RATTLE's editors and staff.

↑ Index

33. Christophe Casamassima

Viviparous Blenny REALLY needs submissions!

Wed 2 Jul 2008

This is a new journal from Baltimore's 23 Books. We could use a lot more submissions and more challenging work - everything coming has become a trickling inkling of safety poetry. PLEASE send Blenny work - I'm acting as the associate editor and have been trying everything in my power to get work. Is it just because it's the summer?

Cheers, everyone. Please submit (see below)! I want to see (more) interesting work!

Christophe Casamassima

Call for Submission(s)
Viviparous Blenny
a twentythreebooks and furniture press

contemporary arts journal
January 2009, Volume I
Theme: Synchronicity
Synchronicity is not merely serendipity, it is defined as meaningful coincidences.
Synchronicities are acausal, that is, not able to be reduced to a cause-and-effect explanation.
They are always personal events. They are boundary events that often occur at periods of major life transitions. And they necessarily reflect a deeper, more holistic reality.
*If you submit work that doesn't directly address the theme, please explain why you've chosen the piece to represent the theme.
Submissions guidelines:
♦ 3–4 poems
♦ 1000 words of prose (fiction, nonfiction, creative nonfiction, commentary, interviews, reviews, etc.)
♦ Black and white photographs (.tiff, .gif, .jpg; low-res for submission)
Black and white artwork or drawings (low-res scanned image file)
♦Collages/Word Art/etc
♦ Comics
♦ Name and contact info. on every page submitted
♦ No simultaneous submissions.
You may also submit your work on CD to the address below (be sure to mark "CD, do not scan" on the outside of envelope).
Send written work as an attachment to [redacted] or snail mail to:
Viviparous Blenny
c/o Douglas Mowbray, Managing Editor
76 Stone Park Place
Baltimore, Maryland 21236
Be sure to include an SASE and cover letter (including a brief bio) for a reply to your submission. If you would like your work returned, please include proper postage and envelope.
Submissions due no later than August 23. Any submissions after this date will not be considered.
Payment is 1 free contributor's copy and new friends.

=
Afraid Of The Dentist WA?
Don't be. Only painless dentistry here. We care about your smile.
http://a8-asy.a8ww.net/a8-ads/adftrclick?redirectid=d125f971f62ef6d0a0e76bcbd69ac5dc

--
Powered By Outblaze

↑ Index

34. Troy Camplin

Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford

Wed 2 Jul 2008

I read this review and didn't get this from it at all. The reviewer said there was a lot of good stuff in the collection. He also said (like you did) that there were things left out of the collection he thought should have been left in. What is it you want? A review that is so mindless in its approval and praise of everything O'Hara did that it turns into a kitschy form of worship? Why can't a person say " well, this is better than that . . . ?" Logan doesn't hate O'Hara -- but he doesn't think everything O'Hara touched was golden, either. How can you be a good poet or even understand good poetry if you can't even pick up on the subtilties of a review?

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, July 1, 2008 10:09:12 PM
Subject: Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford

THANK GOD William Logan HATES O'Hara!

When I was in fourth grade I saw my enemy eating my favorite, my BELOVED Red Hots candy! AND NEVER AGAIN WOULD I EAT THEM! Well, not for a few years until I forgot about my enemy.

But I'm happy to have not changed. Although I wouldn't HATE O'Hara if Logan LOVED him, but it would turn my stomach a bit.

THIS EVIL REVIEW OF O'HARA SHOULD BE CELEBRATED!

SPREAD THE WORD: EVIL WILLIAM LOGAN HATES O'HARA, BUY YOUR O'HARA TODAY!

But I'm not a big fan of that new selected I must admit. Some of my FAVORITE O'Hara poems not there. And the cover photo choice irritated me as well, going for the young, suave O'Hara. I prefer the Alice Neel portrait of him with green WEIRD teeth! He's fucking CREEPY AND BEAUTIFUL all at once! I'm SO SICK of poets acting like FASHION MODELS, like those stupid Sharon Olds photos where she could be selling shampoo or yogurt. (I'm NO fan of her poems, but would buy her shampoo)

OH, and I'm also GLAD, VERY GLAD William Logan is homophobic, I MUCH PREFER the heterosexuals have to deal with him frankly! If he was a fag I would CONVERT!

OH FRANK O'HARA GET UP, GET UP, WE LOVE YOU! GODDAMM-IT POETRY IS FUN! CAConrad

*my NEW BOOK (Soma)tic Midge (Faux Press):
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>

the DEAR MR. PRESIDENT poem with pictures:
http://thedearmrpresidentpoem.blogspot.com/

PhillySound FEATURE in FANZINE:
http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_archive.html

PhillySound: new poetry:
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

updated (Soma)tic POETRY
EXERCISES:http://somaticpoetryexercises.blogspot.com
*
**

↑ Index

35. Troy Camplin
Re: Least Careless and Least Logical
Wed 2 Jul 2008

I would have to know the literary histories of individual writers to know that for certain. But I did encounter it en masse among students and even teachers of poetry. We see it too in Robert Bly's attitude toward translation, where he shows a complete lack of understanding of the importance of the needs to translate rhythms and patterns into English and instead in his translations created little more than trots. As a consequences, his translations are awful. Worse, he influenced an entire generation of translators. He could do so because of the general lack of understanding of basic poetics. Fortunately, some of the most recent translations I have seen do not reflect his theory of translation.

In fact, it seems that I"m not the only one to not the problems of the anti-poetics attitude among too many poets: http://chronicle.com/temp/reprint.php?id=knz7d3nc19g60h47flh19j1pn0dxc4sy

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, July 2, 2008 12:28:03 AM
Subject: Re: Least Careless and Least Logical

Troy,

Your post:

"we need to learn how to write poetry "right" in the same way that painters first have to learn how to draw and musicians have to first learn how to play a musical instrument by playing things we recognize before we move on to experiment and push the boundaries (you have to learn the rules before you can break the rules),"

reminds me of William Logan's review:

"'The poets of the New York School, as they were eventually known, were long on spontaneity and short on traditional literary effect."

Did you guys meet before these writings? Who are some examples of poets who are writing "wrongly"?

-Ryan

On Tue, Jul 1, 2008 at 5:51 PM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
> On Mon, Jun 30, 2008 at 8:36 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
>> Are you talking about me, or just projecting here? I try to have a discussion about the art of poetry, and I get accusations (often false), mere rhetoric, attempts at pissing matches, superficial claptrap, etc. Not from everyone, to be sure. There are a few who have actually carried on an intellectual discussion on poetry. Those who suspect I may be right, but find that possibility to be inconvenient to whatever it is they are producing end up with this kind of dribble.
>>
>> I've been accused of wanting to go back to the "stink of the 19th century." I've never talked about the 19th century. However, I have not seen any kind of argument for why it stinks. Is it because so many were bestsellers and were better poets on their worst days than most of us have ever been on our best?

Still, it's not the 19th century I've talked about. In fact, I have only mentioned, a few discussion threads ago, one poet from the last 400 years, and that was Frederick Turner, who is very much alive and a poet of the late 20th and now early 21st century. Speaking of contemporary poets, one could also mention Frederick Fierstein, Paul Lake, and R. S. Gwynn. Of the Modernists, I love Robert Frost and especially Wallace Stevens. The intellectual in me loves the French surrealists and Apollinaire. It is certainly that I don't like much of what the Modernists especially have done -- I just recognize too that much of what they did worked to marginalize >> poetry. Part of that marginalization was in direct response to movies and, later, T.V. -- to modern culture. One of the consequences of this was the audience for poetry shrunk. But, then, so did the audience for operas, plays, and symphonies -- especially the Modern and Postmodern works that came about.
>>
>> Now, while I did say that beauty reproduces itself, I should have also said that so do viruses. What our English teachers and professors have done to the students in this country have made them susceptible to infection.
>>
>> Troy Camplin
>>
>>
>> ----- Original Message ----
>> From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
>> To: [redacted]
>> Sent: Monday, June 30, 2008 12:17:57 PM
>> Subject: Least Careless and Least Logical
>>
>> So if you're after LOGIC in poetry, you can swing back to the stink of the 19th century, as Michael Ford put it. Fortunately, there are those (the vast majority on this list) who want a DEEPER gesture than what certain Doctors from Texas are capable of appreciating and that's why this list exists..
>>
>> There have been a couple of movements since the romantic era that sought to make art more relevant to the times. We see where intellect gets us and the Doctor from Texas exemplifies it to perfection. The hastily-written put down. The intellectual pissing match. The desire to prove one's self right at the expense of another. It is a clear demonstration of the competition/domination cosmology, one whose time passed long ago, but still clings on and on.
>>
>> Jack Spicer said
>>

>>
>> ...Prose invents -
>> poetry discloses...
>>
>> ...A poet is a time
>> mechanic not an embalmer...
>>
>> ...Muses do exist, but >> now I know that they are not afraid to dirty their hands with explication –
>> that they are patient with truth and commentary as long as it doesn't get into >> the poem...
>>
>> among other things. But Spicer's is, of course an ethos based in 1950's consciousness, albeit way ahead of its time. It IS threatening to think that we have moved ahead since 1850, in poetry anyway, so these kinds of notions will be attacked by someone clinging with an intellectual death-grip to the ideals of the 19th century.
>>
>>
>> Paul E. Nelson
>>
>> Global Voices Radio
>> SPLAB!
>> American Sentences
>> Organic Poetry
>> Poetry Postcard Blog
>>
>> Ilalqo, WA 253.735..6328 or [redacted]
>>
>>
>>
>>
>

↑ Index

36. Adam Tobin

Re: elitism (was re: the lyric poem

Wed 2 Jul 2008

I'm a bookseller myself, and I do know the numbers. I sell more poetry books than history books, though I have an excellent selection of both and devote roughly equal shelf space to each. And I know that most poetry circulation occurs outside of bookstores, and is not adequately represented by the commercial book trade (nor, for that matter, by the Buffalo Poetics List). My impression is that there are more than a thousand poetry microcommunities in NYC alone -- people who write poetry, read each other's work and take it seriously -- and all of them read, at least occasionally, work from outside their little group. Obviously the readership for any one particular book isn't very large, but taken as a whole the poetry network reaches a lot of people -- maybe a fraction of one percent of the total population of the world: but that's a lot of people! It's certainly not nobody, and it's probably more people than read poetry in Ralph Waldo Emerson's time.

Fun fact: There are approximately 5,000 poetry books published every year in the US alone. If each book has 10 unique readers (say, the friends and family of the poet who do not otherwise read poetry), then we're talking about 50,000 people as a theoretical minimum...

-----Original Message-----

Booksellers know the numbers. Very few people read poetry. The listserv probably serves half the poetry readers in the Northeast. & I can't force my friends to read the stuff, although I've tried. & poetry does get a bunch of affirmative action help (it's own month, for instance, as well as slams, etc.). Still, few readers.

↑ Index

37. Stephen Vincent

Agression: A conference... A Haptic Response

Wed 2 Jul 2008

For what it's worth, currently on my blog:http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

AGGRESSION: A CONFERENCE ON CONTEMPORARY POETICS AND POLITICAL ANTAGONISM: sponsored by Small Press Traffic (May 30 - 31) - A Haptic Response: This is a much belated Haptic response to the Saturday afternoon (May 30 - 31) part of a Conference that I never quite got ‘my arms around’ - tho it gathered together many interesting poets - both as speakers and audience. At its core, its subject was the violence or sense of violation - that poets and (poetry) communities can visit upon each other (in person, publications and/or blogs)- is a good one to address. I suspect the meta-question is whether or not it’s possible any poet(s), and/or new aesthetic proposition (such as say Language Poetry ‘back then’) can assert and position itself without doing personal and/or collective damage? (As well as bring damage on to itself?) Does a new group formation require knocking out perceived opponents, etc. A kind of exclusive ‘our way or no way’ approach to all those ‘others.’ ?? Or are there group processes that might ‘civilize’ the process? (Clearly, on many issues, this country has taken, to put it mildly, a repressive approach).

Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

38. amy king
Goodreads' Poetry Group
Wed 2 Jul 2008

Dear Poets,

If you are a member of Goodreads (similar to LibraryThing), consider joining the Poetry Group there: http://www.goodreads.com/group/show/233._POETRY_

The group includes a number of discussions --
INTRODUCTIONS ~~~ MY BOOK / POEM IS PUBLISHED! ~~~ ADVICE - QUESTION FOR YA! ~~~ I APPRECIATE POETRY CRITIQUE ~~~ YOU’VE GOTTA READ THIS POEM! ~~~ CALLS FOR WORK - SUBMIT! ~~~ POETRY WRITING SUGGESTIONS ~~~ PLEASE HELP ~~~ RECOMMENDED BOOKS ~~~ POETRY REVIEWS ~~~ FUN STUFF ~~~

We now have a total of 781 Goodreads’ members, so if you’re down with discussions that fall under the above headings, join the gang!

Best,

Amy

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

39. angela vasquez-giroux

Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford

Wed 2 Jul 2008

I think the big problem with Logan's review is that he expected EVERY POEM to be as brilliant as, say, "Why I am Not A Painter". And that's simply foolish. Perhaps, had O'Hara lived, he would never have issued a collected poems. I don't think any poet I know would want every single completed poem published, for the reason that we all would like to present our best work. That's why CDs are only 12-17 songs--they're the strongest of the bunch.

The other problem with Logan is that the poets he holds as the zenith of poetic talent and virtue seem less exciting, talented, etc. to the majority of people who "care" about poetry, so it becomes difficult for some to take him seriously.

At any rate, when was the last time a poet was the cover story of the NYT Books section?

For poetry, any press is good press.

On Wed, Jul 2, 2008 at 2:23 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:

> I read this review and didn't get this from it at all. The reviewer said there was a lot of good stuff in the collection. He also said (like you did) that there were things left out of the collection he thought should have been left in. What is it you want? A review that is so mindless in its approval and praise of everything O'Hara did that it turns into a kitschy form of worship? Why can't a person say " well, this is better than that . . . ?" Logan doesn't hate O'Hara -- but he doesn't think everything O'Hara touched was golden, either. How can you be a good poet or even understand good poetry if you can't even pick up on the subtilties of a review?
>
> Troy Camplin
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Tuesday, July 1, 2008 10:09:12 PM
> Subject: Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford
>
> THANK GOD William Logan HATES O'Hara!
>
> When I was in fourth grade I saw my enemy eating my favorite, my BELOVED Red > Hots candy! AND NEVER AGAIN WOULD I EAT THEM! Well, not for a few years until I forgot about my enemy.

But I'm happy to have not changed. Although I wouldn't HATE O'Hara if Logan LOVED him, but it would turn my stomach a bit.

THIS EVIL REVIEW OF O'HARA SHOULD BE CELEBRATED!

SPREAD THE WORD: EVIL WILLIAM LOGAN HATES O'HARA, BUY YOUR O'HARA TODAY!

But I'm not a big fan of that new selected I must admit. Some of my FAVORITE O'Hara poems not there. And the cover photo choice irritated me as well, going for the young, suave O'Hara. I prefer the Alice Neel portrait of him with green WEIRD teeth! He's fucking CREEPY AND BEAUTIFUL all at once! I'm SO SICK of poets acting like FASHION MODELS, like those stupid Sharon Olds photos where she could be selling shampoo or yogurt. (I'm NO fan of her poems, but would buy her shampoo)

OH, and I'm also GLAD, VERY GLAD William Logan is homophobic, I MUCH PREFER the heterosexuals have to deal with him frankly! If he was a fag I would CONVERT!

*OH FRANK O'HARA GET UP, GET UP, WE LOVE YOU! GODDAMM-IT POETRY IS FUN!
CAConrad*

my NEW BOOK (Soma)tic Midge (Faux Press):
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>*

*the DEAR MR. PRESIDENT poem with pictures:
http://thedearmrpresidentpoem.blogspot.com/*

*PhillySound FEATURE in FANZINE:
http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_archive.html*

*PhillySound: new poetry:
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>*

*updated (Soma)tic POETRY EXERCISES:
http://somaticpoetryexercises.blogspot.com
*
***

↑ Index

40. Ryan Daley

Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford

Wed 2 Jul 2008

While I think the review is rot, I tend to agree with Angela's last statement: When was the last time poetry (or a book of poetry) got anywhere near a cover story? In other words, when was the last time my relatives asked me if I knew so-and-so's (poet's) work?

The answer? Never.

On Wed, Jul 2, 2008 at 4:19 PM, angela vasquez-giroux
<[redacted]> wrote:
> I think the big problem with Logan's review is that he expected EVERY POEM > to be as brilliant as, say, "Why I am Not A Painter". And that's simply > foolish. Perhaps, had O'Hara lived, he would never have issued a collected > poems. I don't think any poet I know would want every single completed poem > published, for the reason that we all would like to present our best work.
> That's why CDs are only 12-17 songs--they're the strongest of the bunch.
>
> The other problem with Logan is that the poets he holds as the zenith of > poetic talent and virtue seem less exciting, talented, etc. to the majority > of people who "care" about poetry, so it becomes difficult for some to take > him seriously.
>
> At any rate, when was the last time a poet was the cover story of the NYT > Books section?
>
> For poetry, any press is good press.
>
> On Wed, Jul 2, 2008 at 2:23 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> I read this review and didn't get this from it at all. The reviewer said >> there was a lot of good stuff in the collection. He also said (like you did) >> that there were things left out of the collection he thought should have >> been left in. What is it you want? A review that is so mindless in its >> approval and praise of everything O'Hara did that it turns into a kitschy >> form of worship? Why can't a person say " well, this is better than that . .
>> . ?" Logan doesn't hate O'Hara -- but he doesn't think everything O'Hara >> touched was golden, either. How can you be a good poet or even understand >> good poetry if you can't even pick up on the subtilties of a review?

>>
>> Troy Camplin
>>
>>
>> ----- Original Message ----
>> From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
>> To: [redacted]
>> Sent: Tuesday, July 1, 2008 10:09:12 PM
>> Subject: Re: In the NYT -- William Logan "Reviews" the new "Selected Poems" >> of Frank O'Hara as edited by Mark Ford
>>
>> THANK GOD William Logan HATES O'Hara!
>>
>> When I was in fourth grade I saw my enemy eating my favorite, my BELOVED >> Red
>> Hots candy! AND NEVER AGAIN WOULD I EAT THEM! Well, not for a few years >> until I forgot about my enemy.
>>
>> But I'm happy to have not changed. Although I wouldn't HATE O'Hara if >> Logan
>> LOVED him, but it would turn my stomach a bit.
>>
>> THIS EVIL REVIEW OF O'HARA SHOULD BE CELEBRATED!
>>
>> SPREAD THE WORD: EVIL WILLIAM LOGAN HATES O'HARA, BUY YOUR O'HARA TODAY!
>>
>> But I'm not a big fan of that new selected I must admit. Some of my >> FAVORITE O'Hara poems not there. And the cover photo choice irritated me
>> as >> well, going for the young, suave O'Hara. I prefer the Alice Neel portrait >> of him with green WEIRD teeth! He's fucking CREEPY AND BEAUTIFUL all at >> once! I'm SO SICK of poets acting like FASHION MODELS, like those stupid >> Sharon Olds photos where she could be selling shampoo or yogurt. (I'm NO >> fan of her poems, but would buy her shampoo)
>>

>> OH, and I'm also GLAD, VERY GLAD William Logan is homophobic, I MUCH PREFER >> the heterosexuals have to deal with him frankly! If he was a fag I would >> CONVERT!
>>
>> OH FRANK O'HARA GET UP, GET UP, WE LOVE YOU! GODDAMM-IT POETRY IS FUN!
>> CAConrad
>>
>> *my NEW BOOK (Soma)tic Midge (Faux Press):
>> http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> the DEAR MR. PRESIDENT poem with pictures:
>> http://thedearmrpresidentpoem.blogspot.com/
>>
>> PhillySound FEATURE in FANZINE:
>> http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_archive.html
>>
>> PhillySound: new poetry:
>> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> updated (Soma)tic POETRY EXERCISES:
>> http://somaticpoetryexercises.blogspot.com
>> *
>> **
>>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

41. Ryan Daley
Re: Least Careless and Least Logical
Wed 2 Jul 2008

Troy,

Well, I can safely say that regarding my translations, I'm not influenced by Robert Bly. And since I find many translations to err on the level of just WHAT to select (I'm amazed that the stuff I've read in Spanish, with about 10 exceptions, has been fingered as "needed translation"), I don't think translation influences me as much as reading other writers in English. My translation then becomes a dialog that a foreign text is having with my contemporaries, and interestingly, this seems to justify translation of the work in the first place.

But, to respond to your second statement, I don't think you're alone in your belief; though I do think things are changing. Punk application to poetry aside, some of the best writers now are some of the most learned and well read. These, I can cite.

-Ryan

On Wed, Jul 2, 2008 at 2:36 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
> I would have to know the literary histories of individual writers to know that for certain. But I did encounter it en masse among students and even teachers of poetry. We see it too in Robert Bly's attitude toward translation, where he shows a complete lack of understanding of the importance of the needs to translate rhythms and patterns into English and instead in his translations created little more than trots. As a consequences, his translations are awful. Worse, he influenced an entire generation of translators. He could do so because of the general lack of understanding of basic poetics. Fortunately, some of the most recent translations I have seen do not reflect his theory of translation.
>
> In fact, it seems that I"m not the only one to not the problems of the anti-poetics attitude among too many poets: http://chronicle.com/temp/reprint.php?id=knz7d3nc19g60h47flh19j1pn0dxc4sy
>
> Troy Camplin
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Wednesday, July 2, 2008 12:28:03 AM
> Subject: Re: Least Careless and Least Logical
>
> Troy,
>
> Your post:
>
> "we need to learn how to write poetry "right" in the same way that > painters first have to learn how to draw and musicians have to first > learn how to play a musical instrument by playing things we recognize > before we move on to experiment and push the boundaries (you have to > learn the rules before you can break the rules),"

>
> reminds me of William Logan's review:
>
> "'The poets of the New York School, as they were eventually known, > were long on spontaneity and short on traditional literary effect."
>
> Did you guys meet before these writings? Who are some examples of > poets who are writing "wrongly"?
>
> -Ryan
>
>
> On Tue, Jul 1, 2008 at 5:51 PM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
>> On Mon, Jun 30, 2008 at 8:36 PM, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
>>> Are you talking about me, or just projecting here? I try to have a discussion about the art of poetry, and I get accusations (often false), mere rhetoric, attempts at pissing matches, superficial claptrap, etc. Not from everyone, to be sure. There are a few who have actually carried on an intellectual discussion on poetry. Those who suspect I may be right, but find that possibility to be inconvenient to whatever it is they are producing end up with this kind of dribble.
>>>
>>> I've been accused of wanting to go back to the "stink of the 19th century." I've never talked about the 19th century. However, I have not seen any kind of argument for why it stinks. Is it because so many were bestsellers and were better poets on their worst days than most of us have ever been on our best? Still, it's not the 19th century I've talked about. In fact, I have only mentioned, a few discussion threads ago, one poet from the last 400 years, and that was Frederick Turner, who is very much alive and a poet of the late 20th and now early 21st century. Speaking of contemporary poets, one could also mention Frederick Fierstein, Paul Lake, and R. S. Gwynn. Of the Modernists, I love Robert Frost and especially Wallace Stevens. The intellectual in me loves the French surrealists and Apollinaire. It is certainly that I don't like much of what the Modernists especially have done -- I just recognize too that much of what they did worked to marginalize >>> poetry. Part of that marginalization was in direct response to movies and, later, T.V. -- to modern culture. One of the consequences of this was the audience for poetry shrunk. But, then, so did the audience for operas, plays, and symphonies -- especially the Modern and Postmodern works that came about.
>>>
>>> Now, while I did say that beauty reproduces itself, I should have also said that so do viruses. What our English teachers and professors have done to the students in this country have made them susceptible to infection.

>>>
>>> Troy Camplin
>>>
>>>
>>> ----- Original Message ----
>>> From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
>>> To: [redacted]
>>> Sent: Monday, June 30, 2008 12:17:57 PM
>>> Subject: Least Careless and Least Logical
>>>
>>> So if you're after LOGIC in poetry, you can swing back to the stink of the 19th century, as Michael Ford put it. Fortunately, there are those (the vast majority on this list) who want a DEEPER gesture than what certain Doctors from Texas are capable of appreciating and that's why this list exists..
>>>
>>> There have been a couple of movements since the romantic era that sought to make art more relevant to the times. We see where intellect gets us and the Doctor from Texas exemplifies it to perfection. The hastily-written put down. The intellectual pissing match. The desire to prove one's self right at the expense of another. It is a clear demonstration of the competition/domination cosmology, one whose time passed long ago, but still clings on and on.
>>>
>>> Jack Spicer said
>>>
>>>
>>> …Prose invents -
>>> poetry discloses…
>>>
>>> …A poet is a time
>>> mechanic not an embalmer…
>>>
>>> …Muses do exist, but >>> now I know that they are not afraid to dirty their hands with explication –
>>> that they are patient with truth and commentary as long as it doesn't get into >>> the poem…
>>>
>>> among other things. But Spicer's is, of course an ethos based in 1950's consciousness, albeit way ahead of its time. It IS threatening to think that we have moved ahead since 1850, in poetry anyway, so these kinds of notions will be attacked by someone clinging with an intellectual death-grip to the ideals of the 19th century.

>>>
>>>
>>> Paul E. Nelson
>>>
>>> Global Voices Radio
>>> SPLAB!
>>> American Sentences
>>> Organic Poetry
>>> Poetry Postcard Blog
>>>
>>> Ilalqo, WA 253.735..6328 or [redacted]
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

42. David Baratier

Transcontinental Poetry Award deadline 8/15/2008

Wed 2 Jul 2008

The Annual Transcontinental Poetry Award by Pavement Saw Press

All contributors receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Please mention this to your friends and all others who might be interested!

Electronic and mailed entries must meet these requirements: 1. The manuscript should be at least 48 pages of poetry and no more than 70 pages of poetry in length. Separations between sections are NOT a part of the page count. 2. A one page cover letter. Include a brief biography, the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. This should be followed by a page which lists publication acknowledgments for the book. For each acknowledgement mention the publisher (journal, anthology, chapbook etc.) and the poem published. 3. The manuscript should be bound with a single clip and begin with a title page including the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. 4. The second page should have only the title of the manuscript. There are to be no acknowledgments or mention of the author's name from this page forward. Submissions to the contest are blind judged. 5. There should be no more than one poem on each page. The manuscript can contain pieces longer than one page. 6. The manuscript should be paginated, beginning with the first page of poetry.

Each year Pavement Saw Press will publish at least one book of poetry and/or prose poems from manuscripts received during this competition. Selections are chosen through a blind judging process. The competition is open to anyone who has not previously published a volume of poetry or prose. The author receives $1000 and five percent of the 1000 copy press run. Previous judges have included Judith Vollmer, David Bromige, Bin Ramke and Howard McCord.. This year David Baratier will be the judge; past students, Pavement Saw Press interns and employees are not allowed to submit. All poems must be original, all prose must be original, fiction or translations are not acceptable. Writers who have had volumes of poetry and/or prose under 40 pages printed or printed in limited editions of no more than 500 copies are eligible. Submissions are accepted during the months of June, July, and until August 15th. All submissions must have an August 15th, 2008, or earlier, postmark. This is an award for first books only.

If you wish to send via regular mail your manuscript should be accompanied by a check in the amount of $20.00 made payable to Pavement Saw Press. All US contributors to the contest will receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Add $3 (US) for other countries to cover the extra postal charge. Do not include an SASE for notification of results, this information will be sent with the free book. Do not send the only copy of your work. All manuscripts are recycled and individual comments on the manuscripts cannot be made.

If you wish to submit electronically, you should send $27.00 via paypal to [redacted]. We will then send you an e-mail confirmation as well as where to e-mail the manuscript. Electronic submissions need to be sent as PDF files or as word (.doc) files. Other formats are not accepted. The extra cost is to cover the paypal fees as well as the time, labor, ink, and so on, to print out your manuscript. In addition to the prize winner, sometimes another anonymous manuscript is chosen, if enough entries arrive. This “editors choice” manuscript will be published under a standard royalty contract. A decision will be reached in November. Entries should be sent to:

Pavement Saw Press
Transcontinental Award Entry

321 Empire Street
Montpelier, OH 43543

All submissions must have an August 15th, or earlier, postmark or paypal payment. Submissions are accepted during the months of June, July, and August only. If you have questions, please ask us: [redacted]

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
321 Empire Street
Montpelier OH 43543
http://pavementsaw.org

Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at
http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1

↑ Index

43. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: elitism (was re: the lyric poem

Thu 3 Jul 2008

---

yes ny po-communities are totally scattered and biased communtities but hey sometimes tho only the poet keeps score or as saint-poets try not to act like they care we do sell books tho most seem to only do it at their readings and hope that the stores and SPD will do the rest and that maybe we'll occasionally get a review tho they don't help much / notr in many cases do awrds as i so recently found out

but i've sold on my own hundreds of my books to folks whether that even counts can't really be determined because only i and they know this fact tho the stores have sold some as well - i sold almost 400 copies of my last book on my own bravo but who cares and who's counting other than me - like bowling a perfect game with no one there to witness it so sure folks read em
but most folks who bought em are interested in my work because they know me as part of the music community i've been involved in and the rest are usually poets but the music folk are important because some have limited po-experience and hopefully i help em open up a bit

On Wed, 2 Jul 2008 15:29:27 -0400 Adam Tobin <[redacted]>
writes:
> I'm a bookseller myself, and I do know the numbers. I sell more
> poetry
> books than history books, though I have an excellent selection of > both and > devote roughly equal shelf space to each. And I know that most
> poetry
> circulation occurs outside of bookstores, and is not adequately > represented > by the commercial book trade (nor, for that matter, by the Buffalo
> Poetics
> List). My impression is that there are more than a thousand poetry > microcommunities in NYC alone -- people who write poetry, read each > other's > work and take it seriously -- and all of them read, at least > occasionally, > work from outside their little group. Obviously the readership for > any one > particular book isn't very large, but taken as a whole the poetry > network > reaches a lot of people -- maybe a fraction of one percent of the > total > population of the world: but that's a lot of people! It's certainly > not > nobody, and it's probably more people than read poetry in Ralph > Waldo
> Emerson's time.
>
> Fun fact: There are approximately 5,000 poetry books published every > year in > the US alone. If each book has 10 unique readers (say, the friends
> and > family of the poet who do not otherwise read poetry), then we're > talking > about 50,000 people as a theoretical minimum...
>
>

> -----Original Message-----
>
> Booksellers know the numbers. Very few people read poetry. The > listserv > probably serves half the poetry readers in the Northeast. & I can't > force my > friends to read the stuff, although I've tried. & poetry does get a > bunch of > affirmative action help (it's own month, for instance, as well as > slams, > etc.). Still, few readers.
>
> ---
>
>
>

↑ Index

44. Mairead Byrne

[redacted] sat july 5th 9pm

Thu 3 Jul 2008

SoundEye Festival of the Arts of the Word presents:

Sat July 5th 9pm

[redacted]

Scheduled Open Mike hosted by Mairead Byrne:

MairÃ©ad Byrne; Anamaria Crowe Serrano; Jimmy Cummins; Daniel Ereditario; Gabriel Ezutah; Susana Gardner; Fergal Gaynor; Kenneth Goldsmith; Randolph Healy; Trevor Joyce; Judy Kravis; Frances Kruk; Jow Lindsay; Nour Mobarak; Micheal O Ruairc; Sophie Robinson; Cathy Wagner

Free

Meade's Wine Bar (upstairs)
126 Oliver Plunkett Street Cork

www.soundeye.org:festival:index.htm

Please forward

↑ Index

45. CA Conrad
Re: New from Palm Press: Landscapes of Dissent
Thu 3 Jul 2008

THIS BOOK IS TERRIFIC! To those teaching poetry please check this out, every student, every city, to read, it, NOW!

Jules Boykoff and Kaia Sand REMAIN some of my FAVORITE living poets, but now they've created a book which explores the useful ways poetry can confront our disintegrating world! THIS BOOK IS VITAL!

Here's a link: http://palmpress.org/press/index.php?id=37

CAConrad

*my NEW BOOK (Soma)tic Midge (Faux Press):
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>

(RED WHITE & BLUE MAKE LAVENDER, A VERY QUEER COLOR)
(JUST IN TIME FOR THE 4TH OF JULY!) the DEAR MR. PRESIDENT poem
NOW with pictures: http://thedearmrpresidentpoem.blogspot.com/

PhillySound FEATURE in FANZINE:
http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_archive.html

PhillySound: new poetry:
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>
*

↑ Index

46. patrick dunagan
July 7: Great Overland Books & Big Bell present
Thu 3 Jul 2008

Great Overland Books & Big Bell Present:

Bill Berkson, Micah Ballard & Christina Fisher

July 7th at 7 pm
Great Overland Books
345 Judah at 9th Ave.

Bill Berkson, born 1939 in New York, is a poet, critic and former professor of Liberal Arts at the San Francisco Art Institute. His books of poetry include Saturday Night, Shining Leaves, Recent Visitors, Enigma Variations (with drawings by Phillip Guston), Lush Life, Serenade, and most recently Our Friends Will Pass Among You Silently. From 1971 to 1978 he edited and published Big Sky magazine and books. He is a corresponding editor for Art in America, and a frequent contributor to Aperture and other magazines.

Other recent appearances have been his words-and-drawings collaboration with Colter Jacobsen called BILL and Sudden Address: Selected Lectures 1981-2006.

Micah Ballard originally hails from Louisiana. His poems have appeared in a variety of publications; recent books include Evangeline Downs (Ugly Duckling Presse), Bettina Coffin (Red Ant Press), Emblematic (Old Gold), & In the Kindness of Night (Blue Press). Forthcoming from Bootstrap Productions is Parish Krewes. He currently works for the MFA in Writing Program at University of San Francisco.

Christina Fisher was born in Florida. Her poems have appeared in Weigh Station, Puppy Flowers, Morning Train, and elsewhere. Her book of poems is *Johnny Depp & Winona Ryder * (Red Ant Press); her new book is forthcoming from Auguste Press. She works at a crystal store and this summer she will be teaching a course in creative writing.

↑ Index

47. amy king
The Stain of Poetry -- July 25th and Beyond
Thu 3 Jul 2008

Dear Poets and Poet-Tasters,

We, The Stain of Poetry gatherers, have now finished organizing our smorgasboard of wholesome poets for the rest of the year here: http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/. Please prepare to dine upon the lot, starting:

July 25th @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg, Brooklyn

 Baker, Cordelli, Field, Need, Newton, and Tonelli

~~~

Andrea Baker is the author of like wind loves a window (Slope Editions, 2005) and the chapbooks gilda (Poetry Society of America, 2004) and true poems about the river go like this (Cannibal Books, 2008).

~~~~

Phil Cordelli cleans lawns, carries on a love affair with the tuliptrees of Upper Manhattan that may not be carrying on for much longer now, and acts as a conduit for poetic impulses from the plant world. More on this as it develops.

~~~~

Farrah Field's first book, Rising, is forthcoming in early 2009 by Four Way Books. Her poems have appeared in many publications such as the Mississippi
~~~~

Review, Margie, Chelsea, The Massachusetts Review, Typo, Harp & Altar, and are forthcoming in Pebble Lake Review, Another Chicago Magazine, Fulcrum, and 42Opus. She lives in Brooklyn.

~~~~

Originally from Massachusetts, David Need lives in Durham, NC and works as an instructor in the Religion Department at Duke, teaching classes on Buddhism, South Asian Religions, and Religion and Poetry. Recent and upcoming publications include several suites published in Fascicle 2 & 3, a translation/essay series on Rg Veda poetry in Talisman, an excerpt from “Places I’ve Lived” upcoming in Minor American, and excerpts from “St. John’s Rose Slumber” upcoming in Effing and Hambone. Several years ago Mipoesis ran a series of essays by David on Rilke and three short memoir pieces, and Ocho ran yet another sonnet suite. Current projects include a long poem written alongside the Gospel of Mark, “Places I’ve Lived”, which is evolving into an open ended project, finalizing a collection of translations of Rilke’s French poetry, and yet another Rg Veda essay, this one on the theme of twins there and in the poetry of Nate Mackey. David is associated with the NC lucipo poets, and lives with his scholar wife and four cats.

~~~~

Keith Newton edits the online magazine Harp & Altar. His poems and translations have appeared in Harvard Review, Cannibal, Typo, and Circumference, among other journals, and a chapbook of his work is forthcoming in 2008 from Cannibal Books. He lives in Brooklyn.

~~~

Chris Tonelli lives in the Boston area where he runs The So and So Series. He has work forthcoming in Saltgrass, Salt Hill, Absent, and Good Foot, and is the author of three chapbooks: For People Who Like Gravity and Other People (Rope-A-Dope Press, forthcoming), A Mule-Shaped Cloud (w/ Sarah Bartlett, horse less press, 2008), and WIDE TREE: Short Poems (Kitchen Press, 2006).

~~~~

stain 766 grand street
brooklyn, ny 11211
(L train to Grand Street,
1 block west)
718/[redacted]
open daily @ 5 p.m.

~~~~
~~~~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic

~~~~

The rest of the year's dishes served up here:

http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/
http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/
http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

48. David Baratier

Asking for help from journal editors & other blurbs

Thu 3 Jul 2008

I am looking for blurbs from various journal editors and others for our forthcoming Simon Perchik book-length serial poem volume _The Family of Man_.. It's massive but looks like with signatures a number of interior pages for blurbs are available. To the best of my research, the list below contains all the journals these poems first appeared in. If you are in contact with any of these publications, former editors, happen to be one of them, or are a fan of his work please contact me.

ACM, Abalone Moon Journal, Abbey, Abramelin, Abraxas, Adirondack Review, Affair of the Mind, Age of Koestler, Alaska Quarterly, Albatross, Aldebaran, Alembic, Alsop Review, Altadena Review, Amanita Brandy, American Letters & Commentary, Amherst Review, Anathema Review, Anemone, Angelflesh, Anomone Sidecar, Apocalypse, Apocryphaltext, Apostrophe, Apple Valley Review, Arachne, Archipelago, Architrave, Argestes, Arnazella, Art:Mag, Art & Understanding, Art/Life, Artful Dodge, Artisan, Artword Quarterly, Ascent, Ash Canyon Review, Asheville Review, Asylum Arts, Audience, Aura, Aurorean, Axe Factory, Back Porch, Bakunin, Baltimore Review, Barbaric Yawp, Bear Deluxe, Beatlick News, Becoming, Behind Bars, Bellevue Literary Review, Beloit Poetry Journal, Berkeley Poetry Review, Bitter Oleander, Black Bear Review, Black Buzzard Review, Black Fly Review, Black Warrior Review, Blank Gun Silencer,
~~~~

Blind Man's Rainbow, Block's Magazine, Blood and Fire, Bloomsbury Review, Blue Light Review, Blue Unicorn, Blue Violin, Bluefish, Blueline, Bluff City Review, Bogg, Booklovers, Borderlands, Born Magazine, Boston Literary Review, Boulevard, Bravado, Brazo's Gumbo, Broadkill Review, Brooklyn Review, Burning Cloud, Butterfly Chronicles, California Quarterly, Cache Review, Café Review, Café Solo, Caffeine Destiny, Cairn, Calapooya, Caliban, Cameltalk, Canadian Dimension, Cannon's Mouth, Cape Rock, Caprice/Ancient Mariner, Catbird Seat, Catharis Quarterly, Cathartic, Caveat Lector, Ceilidh, Celebration, Cement Squeeze, Center, Cerberus, Ceremony, Cervena Barva, Chaffin Journal, Chantarelle's Notebook, Charitan Review, Chase Park, Chattahoochee Review, Chelsea, Cider Press Review, Circle Magazine, Clackamas Review, Clutch, Coal City Review, Coffee & Chicory, College English, Colorado North, Colorado Review, Columbia Poetry Review, Common Ground, Common Knowledge, Conditional Response, Conduit, Confluence, Confrontation, Connecticut Poetry Review, Connecticut River Review, Contact II, Conte, Context South, Cotton Boll/Atlanta Review, Cottonwood Review, Crab Creek Review, Cream City Review, Creeping Bent, Cresset, Crystal Drum, Curbside Review, Curious Rooms, Current Accounts, Daybreak, Defined Providence, Denver Quarterly, Descant, Devil's Millhopper, Diagram, Dickinson Review, Dixie Phoenix Review, DMQ, Dog River Review, Down in the Dirt, Dusty Dog, Eagle's Flight, East West, Eclipse, Edgz, 88: A Journal, Ekphrasis, El Dorado Review, Elements, Eleventh Muse, Elixir, English Journal, Epoch, Erased, Sigh, Sigh, Eratica, Etcetera, Ever Dancing Muse, Evergreen Review, Exit 13 Magazine, Expose'd , Expressive Spirals, Exquisite Corpse, Externalist, Eyerhyme, Fairfield Review, Farmer's Market, Faultline, Fine Madness, First Intensity, Fish Drum, 5 Trope, 580 Split, Flying Horse, Folio, Footprints, Footwork Magazine, Forum, 4 am Poetry Review, Free Lunch, Frigg Magazine, Frisson, Full Circle Journal, Fullosia, G W Review, Galley Sail Review, Gargoyle, Garnet, Gayme, Goerge & Mertie's Place, Geronimo Review, Ghoti Magazine, Glass Cherry, Gnome, Good Foot, Gopherwood Review, Grab-A-Nickel, Grasslands Review, Grasslimb, Great Midwestern Quarterly, Greatcoat, Green Hills Literary Lantern, Green Mountains Review, Green's Magazine, Greetings, Gryphon, Habersham Review, Half Tones To Jubilee, Hamilton Stone, Hammers, Hampden-Sydney Review, Hanging Loose, Hapa Nui, Harvard Magazine, Hawaii Review, Hayden's Ferry, Haz Mat, Heeltap, Heliotrope, Hellp, Hey, Listen, Hidden Oak, Higgensville Reader, High Plains Literary Review, Hiss Quarterly, Hoboeye, Hodge Podge, Hogtown Creek Review, Hollins Critic, Home Planet News, Homesstead Review, Hot Flashes, Hubbub, Hunger Magazine, Hyper Text, Ibis, Icon, Iconoclast, Idiom 23, Illya's Honey, Images, Imploding Tie-Dyed Toupe, Indefinite Space, Ink Pot, Intent, Interim, International Poetry Review, Into The Teeth Of The Wind, Iodine Poetry Journal, Ironwood, Jaw Magazine, Jeopardy, Jones Avenue, Journal of New Jersey Poets,

Just West of Athens, Kaleidoscope, Kerf, Kimera, Kinesis, King Log, King's English, Kingfisher, Konfluence, L'intrigue, Laddie, Lake Effect, Language & Culture, Last Tangos, Late Knocking, Laughing Dog, Ledge, Liberty Hill, Limestone, Linden Lane Magazine, LiNQ, Listening Eye, Lit Rag, Literary Review, Little Magazine, Live and Let Live, Live Poets Society, Long Island Quarterly, Loose Watch, Lost & Found Times, Louisville Review, Loyalhanna Review, Lucid Moon, Lucid Stone, Lucky Star, Lullwater Review, Lunatic Chameleon, Lynx Eye, m.a.g., MacGuffin, Madison Review, Malstrom, Main Street Rag, Maine Event, Mandrake, Mangrove Magazine, Mankato Poetry Review, Mannequin Envy, Manoa, Margie, Marlboro Review, Massachusetts Review, Masthead, Maverick Magazine, Meanjin, Meat Whistle Quarterly, Medicinal Purposes, Medusa's Hairdo, Meeting of the Minds, Memo, Mesechabe, Metropolitan, Mi Poesia, Mid-American Review, Midland Review, Mildred, Milk, Miller's Pond, Mind Purge, Minimus, Missing Spoke, Mississippi Mud, Mixed Bag, MM Review, Mobius, Mocking Bird, Modern Review, Montserrat Review, Moondance, Mr.Cognito, MSS, Mudfish, Mudlark, Mundus Artium, Mushroom Dreams, Muuna Takeena, Nancy's Magazine, Nassau Review, Nebraska Review, Nerve Bundle Review, New Collage Magazine, New Delta Review, New Hampshire Review, New Hope Review, New Laurel Review, New Letters, New Madrid, New Mexico Humanities, New Millennium, New Mirage Quarterly, New Rag Rising, New Verse News, New Yinzer, New York Quarterly, New Yorker, Newport Review, Newsletter Inago, Nexus, Nidus, Nimrod, Ninth Decade, No Exit, No Tell Motel, Northeast, Northeast Corridor, Northeast Journal, Northwest Florida Review, Northwest Review, Not Dead But Dreaming, Now Here Nowhere, O.ARS, Oasis, Object Lesson, Obsessed With Pipework, Odin's Eye, Ohio Review, Old Crow, Old Red Kimono, On The Bus, One Less Magazine, One Trick Pony, Open Unison, Orange Willow Review, Orbis, Oregon Review, Osiris, Otisian Direcrtory, Over The Transom, Overview Ltd., Owen Wister Review, Oxford Magazine, Oyez, Pacific Coast Journal, Painted Bride Quarterly, Painted Hills Review, Panhandler, Pannus Index, Panoply, Paper Salad, Papyrus, Paradox, Parnassus Literary Review, Parting Gifts, Partisan Review, Pebble Lake, Pedestal Magazine, Pembroke Magazine, Pequod, Perimeter, Phantasmagoria, Phase & Cycle, Philadelphia Poets, Phoebe, Pikeville Review, Pink Cadillac, Pitchfork, Pittsburg, Quarterly, Plain Brown Wrapper, Plainsongs, Plastic Tower, Plum Review, Poem, Poesia, Posey Magazine, Poet & Critic, Poet House, Poet Lore, Poet News/Tule, Poet's Art, Poet's Cut , Poet's Edge Magazine, Poet's Guild, Poet's Page, Poetalk, Poetic Hours, Poetic Space, Poetic Voices, Poetpourri, Poetree Magazine, Poetry Bone, Poetry Conspiracy, Poetry Depth Quarterly, Poetry In Motion, Poetry Kanto, Poetry Midwest, Poetry Now, Poetry Superhighway, Poets On, Porcupine Magazine, Portals, Postcard, Potato Eyes, Potomac Review, Potpourri, Prairie Dog, Prairie Schooner, Prairie Winds, Premiere Generation, Preying Mantis, Prism International, Private, Provincetown Arts, Psychopoetica, Pudding Magazine, Puerto del Sol, The Quarterly, Queen's Quarterly, Racs, Radiant Turnstile, Rag Mag, Rain Dog Review, Raintown Review, Rambunctious Review, Red Booth Review, Red Cedar Review, Red China Magazine, Red Rock Review, Redoubt, Remark, Rhapsoidia, Rhino, Rio: A Journal, Rio Grande Review, River King, Riverrun, Riversedge, Riverwind, Rohwedder, Rowboat, Runes, S.L.U.G. Fest, Sacramento Poetry Review, Sage of Consciousness, Salmon Magazine, Salt, San Gabriel Quarterly, Sandscript, Santa Barbara Review, Schuylkill Valley Journal, Scribia , Scrivener, Sea Change, Sepia 60, Sequoia, Shades of December, Shampoo Poetry, Shattered Wig, Short Fuse, Side Show Magazine, Sidereality, Sierra Nevada Review, Signal, Silent But Deadly, Silt Reader, Silver Web, Silverfish Review, 69 Flavors of Paranoia, Skidrow Penthouse, Skylark, Skyline, Skywriters, Slope, Small Pond Magazine, Small Town Rain, Smartish Pace, Snail's Pace Review, Softblow, Solo, Somona Mandala, Sonora Review, Sou'wester, Soul Fountain, Sounds of Poetry, South Dakota Review, South Florida Poetry Review, Southern Bumblebee, Southern Humanities Review, Southern Poetry Review, Southwestern Review, Spindrift Journal, Spindrifter, Spout, St. Andrews Review, Stickman, Strange Fruit, Stray Dog, Sub-Terrain Review, Sulpher River Review, Talisman, 10th Muse, Third Coast, 13th Warrior Review, Thorny Locust, 3 am Poetry Review, Tipton, Torre de Papel, Unlikely Stories, Unwound, Vincent Brothers Review, Virginia Literary Review, Vol. No. Magazine, Washington Review, Weber Studies, West Hills Review, Westwind, Whiskey Island Magazine, White Crow, White Heron, Whole Notes, William & Mary Review, Wisconsin Review, Writers Forum, Writers' Journal, Xanadu, Xavier Review, Yefief, and Zillah.

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
321 Empire Street
Montpelier OH 43543
http://pavementsaw.org

Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at
http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1

↑ Index

49. Jennifer Karmin
JOB: Washburn University
Fri 4 Jul 2008

(this is a forward so please don't respond to me. good luck!)

The English Department at Washburn University is seeking a poet to join a vital undergraduate writing program with colleagues in fiction and creative nonfiction writing.

Applicant must have an M.F.A. or Ph.D. by the fall of 2009, when the appointment begins, as well as publications-book or books, or work in literary magazines. Writers with an M.A. degree will be considered if accompanied by a significant publication record or award. Applicants with a secondary expertise in fiction or creative nonfiction writing will be favored. Commitment to undergraduate teaching and an active writing program is essential, as is the willingness to advise and mentor students and assist with visiting writers.

Washburn University has about 7,000 students, with over 125 English majors, about half of whom choose the writing emphasis. The new hire will teach writing courses in beginning and advanced poetry, literature courses in contemporary poetry and literature, as well as composition as part of a four course per semester teaching load.

Send letter of application, c.v., statement of teaching philosophy, five-page writing sample, and three letters of recommendation to Howard Faulkner, Chair, Department of English, Washburn University, Topeka, KS 66621. Application review begins September 29, 2008 and continues until the position is filled. Applicants will be required to submit to a background check prior to hire. Arrest information is not considered in the selection process. Please see www.washburn.edu andwww.washburn.edu/cas/prospectivefaculty for more information.

Application Information

Postal Address:
Howard Faulkner, Chair
English
Washburn University
1700 SW College Ave.
Topeka, KS 66621

Phone:
[redacted]

↑ Index

50. CA Conrad
"and remember to die"
Sat 5 Jul 2008

"and remember to die" is from Jonathan Williams's MARVELOUS poem "POEM BEGINNING WITH FIVE WORDS BY GERARD MANLEY HOPKINS" for Jesse Helms.

OOOOO! I WISH JONATHAN WAS ALIVE to READ this poem in honor of Jesse's death yesterday! And I'm sure Jonathan would have hooted and hollered with us here in Philly over Jesse dying on the 4th of July! THAT INDEPENDENCE DAY DEATH IS POETRY!

For those unfamiliar with Jonathan's poem, CELEBRATE Jesse's DEATH with us in reading it OUT LOUD wherever you happen to be right now! Click here: http://chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/williams.html

When I asked Jonathan for permission to reprint the poem in this issue of EOAGH (published by Tim Peterson), that I was co-editing with others (kari edwards, Paul Foster Johnson, Erica Kaufman, Jack Kimball, and Stacy Szymaszek), Jonathan said on the phone, "ONLY IF IT'S THE LEAD POEM!" And I said, "YOU BETCHA JONATHAN!" HEHEHE! That was a fun and sometimes disturbing phone conversation, Jonathan talking about Jesse's reign of terror against Southern queers, African Americans, and ANY OTHER minorities, as you can imagine. He would tell horror stories of Jesse's EXTREME bigotry, then pepper the conversation with talking about greasing his asshole for the corn poke, and such. "JUST KEEPING IT REAL, AS THEY SAY," he said!

DING DONG THE WITCH IS DEAD! I'm NOW LISTENING to the Klaus Nomi version of DING DONG THE WITCH IS DEAD, a fitting tribute!

Glad Jesse FINALLY remembered to die!
CAConrad

*my NEW BOOK (Soma)tic Midge (Faux Press):
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>

(RED WHITE & BLUE MAKE LAVENDER, A VERY QUEER COLOR)
(JUST IN TIME FOR THE 4TH OF JULY!) the DEAR MR. PRESIDENT poem NOW with pictures: http://thedearmrpresidentpoem.blogspot.com/

PhillySound FEATURE in FANZINE:
http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_archive.html

PhillySound: new poetry:
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

updated (Soma)tic POETRY
EXERCISES:http://somaticpoetryexercises.blogspot.com *

↑ Index

51. steve russell
Ashberry/conversations with Mark Ford
Sat 5 Jul 2008

---

waywiser-press.com/imprints/ashbery.html -
Ford has recently compiled a Frank O'Hara anthology. Ashberry wrote the introduction to Soft Sift, Ford's third volume of poetry. Ford has also written a biography of Raymond Roussel.

↑ Index

52. Dan Wilcox
Poets in the Park (Albany): July 12, 19, 26, Aug. 2
Sat 5 Jul 2008

The Poetry Motel Foundation presents

Poets in the Park, 2008:
Georganna Millman & W.D. Clarke, July 12
Other readings scheduled for July 19, July 26 & August 2

Poets in the Park has been celebrating poetry in July at the Robert Burns statue in Washington Park, Albany, NY since 1989. The series, formerly run by the late Tom Nattell and now hosted by Dan Wilcox, will continue with readings on Saturdays, July 12 through August 2; the readings start at 7:00 PM and are free & open to the public; donations are accepted. This year the readings are also sponsored by the Hudson Valley Writers Guild.

The first reading in the series on July 12 will be by Georganna Millman and W.D. Clarke. Georganna Millman graduated Skidmore College's Adult Writing Program and lives in the Catskill Mountains with her husband and sons. They are self-employed, owning an independent retail pharmacy. Her poetry has appeared in numerous publications including Blueline, The Margie Review: American Journal of Poetry, and Vanguard Voices of the Hudson Valley. W.D. Clarke is a writer/poet who resides in Saratoga Springs, NY. His poems are narrative rhymes done in a style reminiscent of Robert Service and Rudyard Kipling. He is employed by the NYS Military Museum and Veterans Research Center in Saratoga Springs where he is the videographer for the NYS Veteran Oral History Program.

The schedule of the other readings is:
July 19: Charlie Rossiter & Mimi Moriarty & Frank Desiderio

July 26: James Schlett & Kathryn Kelly
August 2: Susan Brennan & Philip Good

The Robert Burns statue is near where Henry Johnson Blvd. passes through Washington Park and crosses Hudson Ave. Please bring your own chairs or blankets to sit on. Rain dates for each event are the following Sunday, same time, same place.

This project is made possible in part through COMMUNITY ART$GRANTS, a program funded through the State and Local Partnership Program of the New York State Council on the arts, a State agency and the Arts Center of the Capital Region.

For more information contact Dan Wilcox, at [redacted]; [redacted].

####

↑ Index

53. Gloria Mindock

Cervena Barva Press July, 2008 Newsletter Now Online

Sat 5 Jul 2008

Cervena Barva Press
July, 2008 Newsletter is now posted.

Check it out at: http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/newsletter.htm

Please browse around the website too!

Thank you.
Gloria Mindock
[redacted]
www.cervenabarvapress.com

↑ Index

54. Kevin Killian

Memoir of Kiki up at Dennis Cooper's blog

Sun 6 Jul 2008

Hello everybody,

Dennis Cooper has "published" my memoir about the Kiki years in San Francisco, together with a selection of photos from the current Kiki exhibition at Rato 3, on his blog today, and here is the URL,

http://denniscooper-theweaklings.blogspot.com/

Kevin Killian

↑ Index

55. steve d. dalachinsky
Fw: book party concert
Sun 6 Jul 2008

Matthew Shipp (piano) & steve dalachinsky (poetry)

in concert for their new book Logos & Language
at
the Cornelia Street Cafe
29 Cornelia St (off Bleecker St. & W. 4th)

Saturday - August 2, 2008 at 6 PM

$ 10 admission (applies to a free drink or food)

info : 1212 989- 9318/9 or 1212 - [redacted]

A, C, E trains to West 4th ST or 1 train to Christopher Street

_____ Click and get free information on buying or selling your home.

↑ Index

56. Jim Andrews
Re: other claims of the past few weeks
Sun 6 Jul 2008

> What is the "right" way to play a piano? Or to compose a symphony? Or to paint a painting? Let's take the latter. Nobody is going to take you seriously as a painter if you can't draw.*

i expect that's false. if you look at the work of significant abstract painters, you see it has almost nothing to do with 'drawing' and one would expect these artists not to be particularly competent at 'drawing', ie, drawing representations of things in the world.

being able to draw representations of things in the world is simply not a necessity anymore to being able to create interesting, significant art. which isn't to say that one can't produce interesting, significant art with drawing. just that there are large realms of image production where it simply isn't in the picture.

similarly, in writing, well, writing is a much larger thing now than it once was.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

57. John Cunningham
Re: other claims of the past few weeks
Sun 6 Jul 2008

I would say, however, that every significant abstract painter was good at drawing.
John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Jim Andrews
Sent: July 6, 2008 4:41 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: other claims of the past few weeks

> What is the "right" way to play a piano? Or to compose a symphony? Or to paint a painting? Let's take the latter. Nobody is going to take you seriously as a painter if you can't draw.*

i expect that's false. if you look at the work of significant abstract painters, you see it has almost nothing to do with 'drawing' and one would expect these artists not to be particularly competent at 'drawing', ie, drawing representations of things in the world.

being able to draw representations of things in the world is simply not a necessity anymore to being able to create interesting, significant art. which isn't to say that one can't produce interesting, significant art with drawing. just that there are large realms of image production where it simply isn't in the picture.

similarly, in writing, well, writing is a much larger thing now than it once was.

ja
http://vispo.com

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

58. Troy Camplin
Re: other claims of the past few weeks
Sun 6 Jul 2008

It's not false. The abstract expressionists could all draw (though some of their pretenders, who were all failures, could not), and none of them were just throwing paint around, as is commonly misunderstood. Why would you take anyone seriously who claimed to be an artist when all they could do was sling paint. That might just indicate that that is all they are capable of -- which is anything but creative. My brother is a painter, and has a BA, an MA and is currently working on his MFA -- at 3 different universities, and at each one, drawing was emphasized. Every visual artist I know has talked about how drawing was emphasized as a foundation. Every visual artist I know has said that nobody is going to take you seriously if you can't draw. The bottom line is, if you don't have the basics down, and if you don't have a wide variety of techniques available to you, you are extremely limited in what you can do as any kind of artist. If you are a painter who is incapable of drawing, you are limited to the extreme -- and most people are going to judge that you are doing the work you are doing only because you can't do anything else. You are right that there is a lot of art work which can be made without drawing, but the underlying skill is still necessary, as a part of understanding how images are made, and their underlying structure.

Troy Camplin

----- Original Message ----
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, July 6, 2008 4:40:50 PM
Subject: Re: other claims of the past few weeks

> What is the "right" way to play a piano? Or to compose a symphony? Or to paint a painting? Let's take the latter. Nobody is going to take you seriously as a painter if you can't draw.*

i expect that's false. if you look at the work of significant abstract painters, you see it has almost nothing to do with 'drawing' and one would expect these artists not to be particularly competent at 'drawing', ie, drawing representations of things in the world.

being able to draw representations of things in the world is simply not a necessity anymore to being able to create interesting, significant art. which isn't to say that one can't produce interesting, significant art with drawing. just that there are large realms of image production where it simply isn't in the picture.

similarly, in writing, well, writing is a much larger thing now than it once was.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

59. Eireene Nealand
a great inteview on recent and current contemporary poetry
Mon 7 Jul 2008

Here's about the best source of news that I can think of on the contemporary situation in Russian poetry:

an interview with Mitia Golynko.

http://calquezine.blogspot.com/

Translations of his book in English by Eugene Ostashevsky are about to come out from Ugly Duckling Presse.

http://uglyducklingpresse.org/page-asitturnedout.html

↑ Index

60. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo Newsletter 07.07.08-07.13.08
Mon 7 Jul 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
07.07.08-07.13.08

NEWS ITEM

Just Buffalo is happy to welcome Barbara Cole as our new Director of Education!

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE GOING FAST!!

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane Satrapi, Iran, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

NOTE: WE ARE ALREADY 80% SOLD OUT FOR NEXT SEASON.

We expect to sell out next season by subscription. If we do not, tickets for individual events will go on sale September 1.

EVENTS THIS WEEK

07.09.08

Rooftop Poetry Club at Buffalo State College
Reading featuring Geoffrey Gatza?
Celebrating the publication of his new book,?Not So Fast Robespierre.?
With Rich Owens and Mike Sikkema
?Rooftop Garden, Butler Library, 7 pm
(Alternate location will be the International Student Reading area/signs will be posted if there is a location change).
If you are not a Buffalo State student/faculty member, please park in LOT X located behind Rockwell Hall.Ë‡

07.13.08

Just Buffalo/Spoken Word Sundays
Features: Sarah Reis, Ten Thousand, Robin Brox
Sunday, July 13, 8 p.m.
Allen St. Hardware CafÃ‡

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can no subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilÃ¡, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

61. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: other claims of the past few weeks

Mon 7 Jul 2008

---

you pose an interesting point that i've always supported but sadly say in my case i ask what does it mean "to be able to write"
what we learn beiyond the act of recognizing writing and spelling?
ie sonnet structure sesina (which once abandoned me in 2 lines)
i'm one of those hypocrites (sp)
who can't write but does because it's easier than playing music or drawing because i learned it first then forgot what i learned cecil taylor picasso learned and went their own way pollock then some just went their own way because they couldn't learn so they improvised but i still think tho not a necessity i wish we all who created could DRAW what we see
then take off from there

On Sun, 6 Jul 2008 14:40:50 -0700 Jim Andrews <[redacted]> writes:
> > *What is the "right" way to play a piano? Or to compose a > > symphony? Or to paint a painting? Let's take the latter. Nobody > > is going to take you seriously as a painter if you can't draw.

>
> i expect that's false. if you look at the work of significant
> abstract
> painters, you see it has almost nothing to do with 'drawing' and one > would > expect these artists not to be particularly competent at 'drawing',
> ie,
> drawing representations of things in the world.
>
> being able to draw representations of things in the world is simply > not a > necessity anymore to being able to create interesting, significant
> art.
> which isn't to say that one can't produce interesting, significant > art with > drawing. just that there are large realms of image production where
> it > simply isn't in the picture.
>
> similarly, in writing, well, writing is a much larger thing now than > it once
> was.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
>
>

↑ Index

62. Peter Ciccariello

World before word var-II

Mon 7 Jul 2008

World before word
var-II<http://cgi7.com/peterimages/world-before-word-var-II-we.jpg>

- Peter Ciccariello
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

63. Ryan Daley
Re: other claims of the past few weeks
Mon 7 Jul 2008

Most MFAs in Creative Writing Stress Language

I have to say I learned a lot about language getting an MFA in Written Language; I had to know what I was talking about what they were putting down
I was picking up. Formulas geese migration ways of the written language stress Creative Writing is good at bringing el Payno no Gayno good at bringing flexible muscle tissue to writing your nose creative nothing to laugh about Creative writing MFAs are confident in language where most undergrads shake and question MFAs are SURE! Self-Unimportant Righter Elves working to package these theses for the holiday season...Graduamication!

On Mon, Jul 7, 2008 at 12:32 PM, steve d. dalachinsky <[redacted]> wrote: > you pose an interesting point that i've always supported but sadly say
> in my case i ask
> what does it mean "to be able to write"
> what we learn beiyond the act of recognizing writing and spelling?
> ie sonnet structure sesina (which once abandoned me in 2 lines)
> i'm one of those hypocrites (sp)
> who can't write but does because it's easier than playing music or > drawing
> because i learned it first then forgot what i learned
> cecil taylor picasso learned and went their own way pollock > then some just went their own way because they couldn't learn so they > improvised
> but i still think tho not a necessity i wish we all who created could > DRAW what we see
> then take off from there
>
> On Sun, 6 Jul 2008 14:40:50 -0700 Jim Andrews <[redacted]> writes:
>> > *What is the "right" way to play a piano? Or to compose a >> > symphony? Or to paint a painting? Let's take the latter. Nobody >> > is going to take you seriously as a painter if you can't draw.

>>
>> i expect that's false. if you look at the work of significant
>> abstract
>> painters, you see it has almost nothing to do with 'drawing' and one
>> would >> expect these artists not to be particularly competent at 'drawing',
>> ie,
>> drawing representations of things in the world.
>>
>> being able to draw representations of things in the world is simply
>> not a >> necessity anymore to being able to create interesting, significant
>> art.
>> which isn't to say that one can't produce interesting, significant
>> art with >> drawing. just that there are large realms of image production where
>> it
>> simply isn't in the picture.
>>
>> similarly, in writing, well, writing is a much larger thing now than
>> it once
>> was.
>>
>> ja
>> http://vispo.com
>>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

64. Jim Andrews
Re: other claims of the past few weeks
Mon 7 Jul 2008

---

i've looked at quite a bit of the work of kandinsky, and i don't recall anything that indicates he had much ability to draw. even his landscapes are not very 'well drawn'. their interest has nothing to do with drawing ability.

it's bad criticism to judge writing, say, by what it isn't. you look at what it is. that is more important. why would you require an artist be able to do something that they don't practice in their own work before respecting them as an artist? look at their work. that should tell you all you need to know.

but of course that is precisely what most people cannot do: look at the work itself and know whether it is any good. instead, they ask if you can draw a cat. sad, very sad.

the serious visual artists i've talked with seem to feel it isn't necessary to be able to draw to do interesting work. and that is obvious to me. drawing does not underlie all painting. particularly today, as the computer enters into painting, in the work of some artists, as strongly as the brush and the paint and the canvas. into an art as much focussed on algorithms as anything else.

your essentialism, troy, is misguided. the arts have exploded into a multiplicity that defies essentialism.

ja
http://vispo.com

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]JOn
> Behalf Of Troy Camplin
> Sent: July 6, 2008 7:41 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: other claims of the past few weeks
>
> It's not false. The abstract expressionists could all draw > (though some of their pretenders, who were all failures, could > not), and none of them were just throwing paint around, as is > commonly misunderstood. Why would you take anyone seriously who > claimed to be an artist when all they could do was sling paint.
> That might just indicate that that is all they are capable of -- > which is anything but creative. My brother is a painter, and has > a BA, an MA and is currently working on his MFA -- at 3 different > universities, and at each one, drawing was emphasized. Every > visual artist I know has talked about how drawing was emphasized > as a foundation. Every visual artist I know has said that nobody > is going to take you seriously if you can't draw. The bottom line > is, if you don't have the basics down, and if you don't have a > wide variety of techniques available to you, you are extremely > limited in what you can do as any kind of artist. If you are a > painter who is > incapable of drawing, you are limited to the extreme -- and most > people are going to judge that you are doing the work you are > doing only because you can't do anything else. You are right that > there is a lot of art work which can be made without drawing, but > the underlying skill is still necessary, as a part of > understanding how images are made, and their underlying structure.

> Troy Camplin

↑ Index

65. Aryanil Mukherjee
Hungryalist Movement plus more
Mon 7 Jul 2008

Dear All

Kaurab Online's Translation Archive has just published its second update.
http://www.kaurab.com/english

This update covers, among Bengali poets, Buddhadeb Bose, Malay Roy Choudhury and Barin Ghosal.

The Buddhadev Bose page is authored by Pat Clifford.
Constant advice and encouragement from Jyotirmoy Dutta and Damayanti Basu Singh has helped enrich this entry.

Malay Roy Choudhury's page includes his much mythified poem Stark Electric Jesus, which in the past 40 years has been the most anthologized contemporary Bengali poem in English and is included in Poems for the Millenium, Vol. 1 ed. by Jerome Rothenberg and Pierre Joris (1995), Stark Electric was first published by Lawrence Ferlinghetti in City Lights, later by Howard McCord (several editions). Stark Electric Jesus is a transcomposition made from the original Bengali poem titled "prachanda boidyutik chhutaar".

Malay's page also links a rare vignette on the Hungryalist Movement only to be found in Kaurab. This can be directly viewed here - http://www.kaurab.com/english/bengali_poetry/Hungry-Generation/
All poems of Malay Roy Choudhury are translated by the poet.

Likewise, Barin Ghosal translated his poems.

The interview section includes the following -
a. Joseph Parisi, ex-editor of POETRY, interviewed by Ankur Saha
b. Turkish poet Lale Muldur interviewed by me.

We also re-launched the Book Opener section which is an international poetry book review series, edited by Dana Ward and me. This update includes reviews by David Baptiste Chirot (Poems from Guantánamo) and William Allegrezza (The Grimoire of Grimalkin).

Happy Reading !

Aryanil Mukherjee
Editor, KAURAB Online
www.kaurab.com

↑ Index

66. Catherine Daly
Re: other claims of the past few weeks
Mon 7 Jul 2008

I'm really troubled by this drawing = basics argument. Is this actually an argument about representation; representational drawing? Objects? Portraiture? Design? Use of Space / the page? Is it one about drawing with paint, pencil, ink, crayon, on canvas, on linen, on cotton paper, on... wet plaster? Is it about shading, cross hatching, different weights and hardnesses/softnesses of lead?

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

67. Stephen Baraban
"learn the rules, then break them" ???
Mon 7 Jul 2008

"Learn the rules, then break them" ???

Charkes Olson (who happily has come up a lot in all this Summer of Troy comment & commotion) believed in this in regard to grammar.

I remember from memoirs & histories of Olson & Black Mountain that O. was frustrated by the grammatical ineptitude of some of the students he was trying to teach.

"How can I teach them to write American, when they can't even write English?" he was known to lament.

--- On Mon, 7/7/08, steve d. dalachinsky <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: steve d. dalachinsky <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: other claims of the past few weeks
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Monday, July 7, 2008, 12:32 PM
> you pose an interesting point that i've always supported > but sadly say
> in my case i ask

> what does it mean "to be able to write"
> what we learn beiyond the act of recognizing writing and > spelling?
> ie sonnet structure sesina (which once abandoned me in 2
> lines)
> i'm one of those hypocrites (sp)
> who can't write but does because it's easier than > playing music or > drawing
> because i learned it first then forgot what i learned
> cecil taylor picasso learned and went their own way pollock
>
> then some just went their own way because they couldn't > learn so they > improvised
> but i still think tho not a necessity i wish we all who > created could > DRAW what we see
> then take off from there
>
> On Sun, 6 Jul 2008 14:40:50 -0700 Jim Andrews
> <[redacted]> writes:
> What is the "right" way to play a* > piano? Or to compose a > symphony? Or to paint a painting? Let's take > the latter. Nobody > is going to take you seriously as a painter if > you can't draw.
>
> i expect that's false. if you look at the work of > significant
> abstract
> painters, you see it has almost nothing to do with
> 'drawing' and one
> would > expect these artists not to be particularly competent > at 'drawing',
> ie,
> drawing representations of things in the world.
>
> being able to draw representations of things in the > world is simply > not a > necessity anymore to being able to create interesting, > significant
> art.
> which isn't to say that one can't produce > interesting, significant

> art with > drawing. just that there are large realms of image > production where
> it
> simply isn't in the picture.
>
> similarly, in writing, well, writing is a much larger > thing now than > it once
> was.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
> all posts. Check

↑ Index

68. Gerald Schwartz

Re: "and remember to die"

Mon 7 Jul 2008

For two days straight now have been playing the Dr. Eugene Chadborne/ Jimmy Carl Black "tribute" to the now carbonite Senator.

Great ritual of release!

Gerald S.

> "and remember to die" is from Jonathan Williams's MARVELOUS poem "POEM BEGINNING WITH FIVE WORDS BY GERARD MANLEY HOPKINS" for Jesse Helms.
>
> OOOOO! I WISH JONATHAN WAS ALIVE to READ this poem in honor of Jesse's death yesterday! And I'm sure Jonathan would have hooted and hollered with > us here in Philly over Jesse dying on the 4th of July! THAT INDEPENDENCE DAY DEATH IS POETRY!
>
> For those unfamiliar with Jonathan's poem, CELEBRATE Jesse's DEATH with us in reading it OUT LOUD wherever you happen to be right now! Click here: http://chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/williams.html
>
> When I asked Jonathan for permission to reprint the poem in this issue of EOAGH (published by Tim Peterson), that I was co-editing with others (kari edwards, Paul Foster Johnson, Erica Kaufman, Jack Kimball, and Stacy Szymaszek), Jonathan said on the phone, "ONLY IF IT'S THE LEAD POEM!" And I said, "YOU BETCHA JONATHAN!" HEHEHE! That was a fun and sometimes disturbing phone conversation, Jonathan talking about Jesse's reign of terror against Southern queers, African Americans, and ANY OTHER minorities, as you can imagine. He would tell horror stories of Jesse's EXTREME bigotry, then pepper the conversation with talking about greasing his asshole for the corn poke, and such. "JUST KEEPING IT REAL, AS THEY SAY," he said!

DING DONG THE WITCH IS DEAD! I'm NOW LISTENING to the Klaus Nomi version
of
DING DONG THE WITCH IS DEAD, a fitting tribute!

Glad Jesse FINALLY remembered to die!
CAConrad

my NEW BOOK (Soma)tic Midge (Faux Press):*
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>

(RED WHITE & BLUE MAKE LAVENDER, A VERY QUEER COLOR)
(JUST IN TIME FOR THE 4TH OF JULY!) the DEAR MR. PRESIDENT poem
NOW with pictures: http://thedearmrpresidentpoem.blogspot.com/

PhillySound FEATURE in FANZINE:
http://phillysound.blogspot.com/2008_06_01_archive.html

PhillySound: new poetry:
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

updated (Soma)tic POETRY
EXERCISES:http://somaticpoetryexercises.blogspot.com
***

↑ Index

69. David Baratier

Backwaters Press Party with Poet laureates

Mon 7 Jul 2008

Come to The First Annual Last Bash At Kuzmaâ€™s
A Fundraiser for The Backwaters Press
Our goal is to raise at least $5,000 to cover production costs for 20 books in 2008 in order to keep on bringing great poetry to a poetry-hungry nation!
Where: Â Â Â Â The Fabled Greg Kuzma residence in Crete, Nebraska
When: Â Â Â July 26, 2008â€”a date scientifically proven in numerous independent, double-blind, rigorously controlled experiments to cure the summertime BLAHS (Boring Life At Home Syndrome) TIME: 4:00 p.m. to whenever
Â
Friends, youâ€™ve seen them sitting dejectedly in their cubicles, or staring blankly at the traffic lights, forlorn looks on their facesâ€”you know what they needâ€”Poetry! And you know how you can get poetry to themâ€”The Backwaters Press! For nearly 12 years The Backwaters Press has been waging the fight against the POETRY VOID that threatens to engulf our nation, but you can help stop the VOID from taking over our children and ruining our families! Â Just as we have learned that we can be better Americans by going shopping, the National Society for Filling Poetry Voids, or NSFPV, has recently completed painstaking studies that prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that HELPING THE BACKWATERS PRESS MEET ITS FUNDRAISING GOALS will be instrumental in disabling the Void! Yes, YOU can make a difference!

How to do this remarkable feat, you might askâ€”well, easy: PARTY!Â
Simplistic as it may sound, the NSFPV has determined through rigorous research, conducted at our secret underground Poetry Laboratory,Â that if you go to The Backwaters Press website at www.thebackwaterspress.com, get your checkbook out and send in a check for at least $50, ($75 for couples) or, donate at least $50 (couples rule applies) with our secure DONATION BUTTON, that you will be able to receive tickets from the press, and a map to Greg Kuzmaâ€™s house, where you will be able to FILL THAT ACHING IN YOUR HEART FOR POETRY-RELATED PARTIES and also help The Backwaters Press meet its fundraising goals.
If you would like to donate any amount to help CRUSH THE POETRY VOID and stand side-by-side in spirit with others who would also like to help The Backwaters Press meet its fundraising goals, the researchers at the NSFPV will understandâ€”But if you can come to the party, we would love to see you there!!Â
Party highlights include:
Â·Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Free, signed copies of Greg Kuzmaâ€™s All That Is Not Given is Lost
Â·Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Poetry reading by Greg Kuzma and others, TBA
Â·Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Music provided by Satchel Grande
Â·Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Full spread of party food in the Greg Kuzma party tradition
Â·Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Full array of liquid refreshments
Â·Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Beautiful indoor/outdoor setting on 2 Â½ wooded acres of the Kuzma home
Â·Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Poetry and prose readings from The Seven Doctors Project for UNMC
Â·Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Silent auction of rare literary articles, artwork from renowned artists, and other valuable items
What could be more fun than The LAST BASH AT KUZMAâ€™S?Â Iâ€™ll tell you:Â THE LAST BASH AT KUZMAâ€™S WITHÂ FOURÂ POETS LAUREATE THERE, THATâ€™S WHAT! of the entire gosh-darned United States of America, Pulitzer Prize Winner Ted Kooser, will be attending the fund raising party for THE BACKWATERS PRESS Â on July 26th, 2008 at the home of Greg Kuzma!!
Â All you have to do to be able to stand around and talk to one of the most widely-known poets in the entire universe is go to the website and push the donation button!
Furthermore, theÂ Â Â Poet Laureate of Kansas, Denise Low
Will also be there, to read from her poems!
And so will Susan Firer,

the Poet Laureate of Milwaukee, and Aaron Anstett, the Pikeâ€™s Peak Area Poet Laureate!
How can you miss this?Â Itâ€™s already been hailed (well, by at least one person) as The Event of the Year!
Party Starts at 4:00 PM! Â Go to www.thebackwaterspress.com to start the fun! Â Â Be there or be square!

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
321 Empire Street
Montpelier OH 43543
http://pavementsaw.org

Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at
http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1

↑ Index

70. Nicholas Karavatos
Reading in San Jose, CA on Thursday the 10th
Tue 8 Jul 2008

Nicholas Karavatos THURSDAY, July 10th at 7:00pm Willow Glen Books – Hosted by Dennis Richardson 1330 Lincoln AvenueSan Jose, CA95125 http://www.willowglenbooks.com/ Nicholas KaravatosDept of EnglishAmerican University of SharjahPO Box 26666SharjahUnited Arab Emirates _____ Use video conversation to talk face-to-face with Windows Live Messenger. http://www.windowslive.com/messenger/connect_your_way.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Refresh_messenger_video_072008

↑ Index

71. Nicholas Karavatos
Reading in Berkeley on Monday the 14th
Tue 8 Jul 2008

Nicholas Karavatos MONDAY, July 14th at 7:00pm “Poetry Express” Reading Series – Hosted by Mark States Priya Indian Cuisine2072 San Pablo AvenueBerkeley, CA Nicholas KaravatosDept of EnglishAmerican University of SharjahPO Box 26666SharjahUnited Arab Emirates _____ Making the world a better place one message at a time. http://www.imtalkathon.com/?source=EML_WLH_Talkathon_BetterPlace

↑ Index

72. Andy Nicholson
New on Lamplighter, lamplighter, lamplighter
Tue 8 Jul 2008

New posts on Lamplighter, lamplighter, lamplighter:

Oranges & Sardines
Kiki Gallery
Blake's America and Duncan on Oracular Poetry

Take a look--there are beautiful Blake prints and Olivier Messiaen's music to entice you.

http://andynicholson.blogspot.com/

Andy Nicholson

↑ Index

73. Catherine Daly
LA Art Girls opening Thursday, July 10
Tue 8 Jul 2008

LAAGAFBLA08 takes place July 10 – August 23, 2008. Opening reception July 10th, 6pm -10pm
Phantom Galleries
Two locations at 6th Street at Main St. and 6th Street and Los Angeles Street in Downtown Los Angeles

LAAGAFBLA08 is the LA Art Girl's world premier international art show for contemporary works, and will be Los Angeles' cultural and social highlight for the summer. The exhibition recognizes the individual within this unique artist collective. Work by 26 artists, from our cutting edge generation of emerging stars, will be contained in two spectacular downtown spaces. The exhibition includes the highest- quality paintings, sculptures, drawings, installations, photographs, and video.

This prestigious exhibition combines a selection of top art works with an exciting program of special performances, parties and crossover events. Exhibition sites are located on 6th Street on the corners of Main and Los Angeles, in the city's beautiful Historic Downtown Old Bank District. The exhibition is within easy walking distance of The Standard Hotel, and driving distance of the beach. The show will be a vital source for art lovers, allowing them to discover new developments in contemporary art. A tour de force, LAAGAFBLA08 is the favorite summer meeting place for the international art world.

Participating artists include:

Stephanie Allespach
Tricia Avant
Allison Danielle Behrstock
Carolyn Castaño
Krista Chael
Sydney Croskery
Catherine Daly
Karen Dunbar
Amber Fox
Phyllis Green
Micol Hebron
Parichard Holm
Leila Hamidi & Shana Torok
Ellina Kervorkian
Leigh McCarthy
Claudia Parducci
Nancy Popp
Sarah Riley
Ambika Samarthya
Kim Schoenstadt
Felis Stella
Ten Terrell
Kelly Thompson
Elizabeth Tremante
Marjan Vayghan

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

74. Halvard Johnson

Hamilton Stone Review, Issue 15, Summer 2008, Now Online!

Tue 8 Jul 2008

Hamilton Stone Review, Issue 15, Summer 2008, Now Online!

Featuring poetry by Alan Bramhall, Janet Butler, Craig Cotter, Chad Heltzel, Reamy
Jansen, Sheila Murphy and Douglas Barbour, Rick Marlatt, Simon Perchik, Meg Pokrass, Gabriele Quartero, Joseph Somoza, Ron Winkler, and Robert E. Wood; plus fiction by Nora Costello, Hallie Elizabeth Newton, J.C. Frampton, Sharmila Mukherjee, and Luke Rolfes.

http://www.hamiltonstone.org/hsr15.html

Submissions to the Hamilton Stone Review

We publish three times a year: in June, October, and February. Please send 1-7 poems in the body of your message and/or in ONE attachment; one story or up to three short shorts per message and/or attachment, please. Send bios with submissions. No snailmail submissions will be read.

The October 2008 issue will be a special one devoted to Appalachia. No submissions, please.

For the February 2009 issue poetry submissions should go directly to Halvard Johnson at [redacted]. Send fiction to Lynda Schor at [redacted] .

PLEASE SEND THIS ALONG TO OTHERS

↑ Index

75. luke daly
Dana Ward's Goodnight Voice
Tue 8 Jul 2008

House Press is happy to announce the release of Dana Ward's Goodnight Voice. His book is available through our blog at housepress.blogspot.com. It is $6, which includes shipping.

Warm regards,

Michael and Luke

↑ Index

76. Stephen Vincent
Bruce Connor, 1933 - 2008
Tue 8 Jul 2008

Bruce Connor, esteemed & brilliant assemblage innovator in sculpture, painting and film, passed away in San Francisco yesterday. Dark portrayer of the 'under-soul' and luminous, angelic portrayer of the 'over-soul' his alchemic seeming transformations of detritus were mesmeric - in Edgar Alan Poe needed a lazer beam transmssion into the substance of the contemporary, or if 30's surrealism needed un autre enfant terrible, Connor was an extraordinary agent. Not an 'easy dude' by all accounts - particularly by many foiled curators - he leaves an assured legacy. When the measuring of mid-Century American art is done, I suspect Connor will be viewed as Raushenberg's dark brother. Suggest Minimally honor the day, if you can find his short movies composed of found footage, "A Movie", for one. Not to over-do the dark imprint, Connor ran for the San Francisco Board of Supervisors circa 1966 in a long comic City tradition of unelectable musicans and artists, including Joel Biafra, lead singer of the Dead Kennedys.

I am sure there will be many 'real' Connor orbits, Look to them for more facts.

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

77. Dan Wilcox
A.P.D. Announces Publication of "To the Husband I Have Not Yet Met"
Tue 8 Jul 2008

A.P.D.
Announces the Publication of
"To the Husband I Have Not Yet Met" Poems by Mary Kathryn Jablonski

A.P.D. is proud to announce the publication of "To the Husband I Have Not Yet Met," by Saratoga Springs, NY, poet Mary Kathryn Jablonski. The 28-page chapbook contains 17 poems with a woodcut by Allen Grindle illustrating the cover. Woven with threads of humor, the poems explore memory, longing and the power of imagination.

Mary Kathryn Jablonski is a visual artist and poet who is assistant director of the Schick Art Gallery at Skidmore College. In past lives she has worked as a graphic artist, caterer, photo shoot stylist, barista, window display designer, and mannequin dresser, among other things. Jablonski was director of the Saratoga Poetry Zone from 2000 to 2005. She also initiated and curated a program of literary readings to complement exhibits at the Arts Center Gallery in downtown Saratoga Springs where she was gallery director from 1999-2002. She has read her poems throughout the Capital District, including at historic Caffe Lena. In 2007 she was awarded a NYSCA grant to create a new series of artworks and poems and interview artist/writers on the Internet.

A.P.D., under the direction of Albany poet and photographer Dan Wilcox, has been publishing the works of local and regional poets since 1989. Among the works published by A.P.D. are "Distant Kinships" by Anthony Bernini, "Suddenly Sapphires" by Dina Pearlman, and "Three Sides to the Looking Glass" by Rachel Zitomer.

"To the Husband I Have Not Yet Met" poems by Mary Kathryn Jablonski (ISBN-13: 978-0-9714631-7-2; ISBN-10: 0-9714631-7-4) is available from local and regional booksellers, or directly from the publisher, $8.00 + $2.00 shipping cost.
A.P.D.
280 South Main Ave.
Albany, NY 12208

For more information, please contact Dan Wilcox at [redacted]; email: [redacted].

↑ Index

78. Donna Kuhn website seeks poetry films
Tue 8 Jul 2008

http://www.poetryvisualized.com

↑ Index

79. steve russell
Re: other claims of the past few weeks
Tue 8 Jul 2008

I think it's really about learning how to see, and copying from nature.

----- Original Message ----
From: Catherine Daly <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, July 7, 2008 9:18:25 PM
Subject: Re: other claims of the past few weeks

I'm really troubled by this drawing = basics argument. Is this actually an argument about representation; representational drawing? Objects? Portraiture? Design? Use of Space / the page? Is it one about drawing with paint, pencil, ink, crayon, on canvas, on linen, on cotton paper, on... wet plaster? Is it about shading, cross hatching, different weights and hardnesses/softnesses of lead?

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

80. Stephen Vincent
Books & Bookshelves - A real poetry bookstore in San Francisco
Tue 8 Jul 2008

Books & Bookshelves
99 Sanchez Street
(between 14th St & Duboce Ave)
San Francisco, CA 94114 [redacted]

The other day I found myself dropping into see David Highsmith, poet and entrepreneur of bookshelves in a store that includes lots of fresh raw wood constructions. David smartly tapped into the San Francisco/Castro neighborhood serial appartment dweller need for new shelves, Sweetly, however, he's created a wonderful bookstore for poetry books - not just poetry books, but volumes of 'old' and new 'avant' presses (whatever that means for whatever era.) He also shops ebay and finds out of print volumes that he resells without upping the price. I stumbled into an English pirate edition of Spicer's After Lorca - a genuine piece of simulacra of Duncan's original typesetting for $20 - if you are interested. Just a lot of stuff - beautifully displayed & presented on fresh bookshelves. (No longer do interesting books remain a critique on Ron Silliman's blook - 'the book made flesh'. The whole place has an attractive, no-pressure retail feel. You can enjoy a book while the occaisonal clientele is talking to David about wood, sizes, and so forth.

In addition, he has a regular reading series, and omens of a new chapbook series. Not to take anything away from City Lights and Green Apple and Bird & Beckett's substantial poetry book sections, as Independent stores become more and more fragile, Books & Bookshelves is a treat.

I suspect David is on the top wave edge of the future. An Independent bookstore that wants to survive will offer a substantial line of bookshelves! Or, as a friend who has a relatively successful and good gallery told me, "It's the framers who make the real money in this business, not the gallery."

So if you live or are in the City for a visit...

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Books & Bookshelves
99 Sanchez Street
(between 14th St & Duboce Ave)
San Francisco, CA 94114 [redacted]

↑ Index

81. David Chirot

2 Supplements for Kaurab Translation Update's "Hungry Poets"-- 1963 Bengali Poetry Selection Intro by Ginsberg & French Translations of Pradip Choudhuri

Tue 8 Jul 2008

These Supplements are a small way of saying Thanks to the staff and spirit of Kaurab for their inspirational work in bringing Bengali Poetry to the World and in presenting new examples of writings, interviews, reviews from poets ever more countries.

Poet and editor Aryanil Mukherjee yesterday announced the appearance of the latest large collection of work to appear:

Kaurab Online's Translation Archive has just published its second update.
http://www.kaurab.com/english

The Supplement with the Ginsberg Introduction to "A Few Bengali Poets" (City Lights Journal 2, 1963) is one of the reasons, as is pointed out in the new Kaurab Translation Update, that though the Hungry Poets had been in existence already for some years, the arrival of Ginsberg and his involvement with them has led to a mistaken "myth" that these poets were influenced by the Beats.

(an example of the persistence of this myth may be found in the 1994 Note by Bruno Sourdin to the French translations of poems by Pradip Choudhuri, which appears in Supplement 2.)

This latest Update from Kaurab presents an astonishing History of the Hungry Poets, with galleries of photos and intensive and extensive information, insights and commentaries regarding the Hungry Movement and its influences in Bengali poetry and steadily through time in many parts of the world.

(Bruno Sourdin notes the international character of the appearances of the works of Pradip Choudhuri, for example.)

Kaurab Translation Update "Hungryalist" issue is an immensely exciting event for Poetry--

I can't recommend it highly enough-- Supplement2 for Kaurab Translation Update: le "Hungry" poete Bengale Pradip Choudhuri traduite en francais, avec une note "bio" de Bruno Sourdin<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/07/supplement2-for-kaurab-translation.html> http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/07/supplement2-for-kaurab-translation.html

A Supplement for Kaurab Translation Update: "A Few Bengali Poets" Introduced by Allen Ginsberg, City Lights Journal 2, 1963<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/07/supplement-for-kaurab-translation.html> http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/07/supplement-for-kaurab-translation.html Kaurab Translation Update: Hungryalist Movement plus more<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/07/kaurab-translation-update-hungryalist.html> http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/07/kaurab-translation-update-hungryalist.html

↑ Index

82. Stephen Vincent

Fwd: Alfred Arteaga

Tue 8 Jul 2008

David Lloyd <[redacted]> wrote: Date: Tue, 8 Jul 2008 14:40:38 -0700
From: David Lloyd <[redacted]>
Subject: Alfred Arteaga
To: [redacted]

I am very sad to pass on the news that Chicano poet and essayist, Alfred Arteaga, has passed away. Alfred was an extraordinary multi-lingual poet, often writing poems through in English, Spanish, French, German and Nahua. He was the author of several books of poetry (Cantos, Red, Love in the Time of Aftershocks) and of cultural studies (Chicano Poetics and An Other Tongue). His latest book of poetry, Frozen Accident, came out in fall 2006 from Tia Chucha's Press. He was Professor of Chicano Studies at UC Berkeley, an institution he somehow managed to survive as a poet and a human being. He remains online at alfredarteaga.com.

David

↑ Index

83. Roy Exley
Re: other claims of the past few weeks
Tue 8 Jul 2008

Catherine,

Thanks for that, specifics, details, are the spice of life, something to get your teeth into, too much 'byting' and you are left toothlessly skimming over the surface of life. Drawing used to be perceived as merely a preparation for a painting or other 'finished' artwork, but of course it is now a genre in its own right, even animated video works often rely heavily on drawn forms and drawing was well represented in all the London degree shows this summer. Line-drawn portraits such as those by Matisse, Schiele Calder or Giacometti, stark, spare but sublime contrast sharply with the emotively charged, richly textured, 'Autobiographical' self-portraits of such as Rembrandt, Van Gogh, Gauguin, Munch or Beckmann, all equally compelling, but somehow the drawings have a greater immediacy, a dynamic spontaneity. The spare, accomplished line drawing deceptively simple might be compared to the complexity of the haiku without its formulaic strictures. To draw what we can't see is also quite important - to exercise our imagination and sponsor our dreams, to express unique and individual contributions to the world.

Roy Exley.

On 8/7/08 2:18 am, "Catherine Daly" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'm really troubled by this drawing = basics argument. Is this actually an argument about representation; representational drawing? Objects? Portraiture? Design? Use of Space / the page? Is it one about drawing with paint, pencil, ink, crayon, on canvas, on linen, on cotton paper, on... wet plaster? Is it about shading, cross hatching, different weights and hardnesses/softnesses of lead?

↑ Index

84. Justin Katko
"unfolding king lear a model": this Friday in Providence
Tue 8 Jul 2008

Hello ~ for those of you in or near Providence, I hope you won't miss this:

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Justin Katko <[redacted]>
Date: Tue, Jul 8, 2008 at 6:11 PM
Subject: "unfolding king lear a model"

Dear friends:

You are invited to a performance of "unfolding king lear a model", a solo theatre production by Jeremy Hardingham. The event will take place at 7pm on this Friday, July 11th, at 50 Agnes Street in Providence (Olneyville). There will be wine and some opening music. The main act will run just under one hour. The event is free.

Directions: (Take Westminster or Broadway west, after Broadway and Westminster converge take a left on Stokes Street, then left on Dike Street, then a quick right onto Agnes. 50 Agnes is on the left with a grand entrance, above the door a sign reads "Indestructible Pearls" -> it was a 19th century pearl manufacturer of some sort).

Jeremy Hardingham is the Judith E. Wilson Drama Studio Manager at the Faculty of English, Cambridge University (England). He is the author of _Incarnate's / And yet but still just this_ (Barque Press). Praise of Hardingham's work follows below. Please forward this on to interested parties.

Regards,
Justin Katko

- -

Chris Goode (beescope.blogspot.com) has this to say about "unfolding king lear a model":

'unfolding king lear a model' is a solo in which Hardingham seems to be, at one and the same time, chewing and regurgitating King Lear, in a sort of terrible parody of circular breathing techniques. Some of the text is retained, and external fragments interpolated, as if spoken from a redacted transcript in which some stray papers have become mixed up and almost everything explicit has been obliterated by an oversolicitous and weirdly erratic censor. At one point I have the odd experience of recognizing a fragment of text from one of the pieces Jeremy and I made together some years ago as a duo called COAT: and I realise I don't know where that particular phrase came from in the first place -- I had always assumed he wrote it, but now I'm not sure. Is it perhaps even in King Lear somewhere? There is a sense in Jeremy, not only in this piece but between all his works and across whatever membrane he or I might in a moment of weakness visualize separating his life and his writing, of a huge, unceasing, autophagous intertextual churn, in which individual voice and authority are disassembled: not indiscriminately, in some callow mulching of 'high' and 'low' culture, but so as to mimic the ways in which information within those cultures is transmitted, sometimes preserved, sometimes lost entirely or at best lost in translation. In this turbulent field -- one might almost say minefield -- Jeremy skips and tumbles and flees his own shadow, negotiating its pitfalls and overleaping its ha-has and feigning the occasional stumble: it's the Z-Boys mix of precision and (real, not simulated) spontaneity, but also a kind of convulsive ingenuity that seems far from recreational and resembles more nearly a hypertextual restyling of the flight-or-fight impulse, a nervously contemporary survival tactic.

As ever with Jeremy's work there is an odd sense of danger -- the intermixing on his crowded props table of sheet glass and hammers, of water and electricity -- which persists despite my certain knowledge that, at his best, his work always feels like that, and in over a decade I've never known him actually put himself or his audience in anything like the danger that he evokes. The visual styling of his presence is a rough-and-ready mix of world-war aviator and cyberpunk: in this, as in his language, there are obvious traces of Beckett and Beuys and Artaud, and possibly Kantor (I wonder). Visually and aurally there is an awesomely deft choreography of layers, particularly striking in this instance in his use of music and sound, which is more sophisticated here than I've identified in his work before. Again it is the complexity, not as styling but as argument, that ultimately is moving and impressive and jags in the mind: for all the ferociousness of his inquiry into language and object and abstraction and absence, as ever his work is alive with the essentially theatrical discovery of how the individual, buffeted (as Lear is) by what seem to be malign extraneities, contains and embodies all the graces and desolations of properly collective response, and spells out in poetry and grunting the massed chorus of aloneness. It's the best work I've seen Jeremy do in many years; at the time, there's no way of saying so. Finally this blog has a purpose.

↑ Index

85. ALDON L NIELSEN

Alfred Arteage

Wed 9 Jul 2008

Alfred was a great friend and a wonderful poet -- raced cars and played guitars in his younger years -- a lovely person

<<

The Pennsylvania State University
116 Burrowes
University Park, PA 16802-6200

[redacted]

↑ Index

86. Wanda Phipps

Readings, music, video and fun with Mad Hatters in the Bronx!

Wed 9 Jul 2008

I'm reading in this fun event and will be accompanied by sound artist Austin Publicover this Friday--would be great to see you there!

JULY 11, Friday 6-10pm, Haven Arts Gallery, Bronx: http://www.havenarts.org
--

Mad Hatters Review will present another Mad Hatters' Revue, an evening of poetry, fiction, music, moving artworks, videos and flash animation. Artists, musicians and writers include: Michael Andre, Ann Bogle, Orin Buck, Heide Hatry, A. D. Jameson, Peter Knoll, Benjamin Rush Miller, Carol Novack, Wanda Phipps, Shelly Rich, Larissa Shmailo, Alan Sondheim, Rob Stephenson, Stephanie Strickland, and Yuriy Tarnawsky.

$8 suggested donation to the Review. Wine and munchies courtesy of Haven Arts Gallery. Also maybe -- live dancing music.

See Mad Hatters' Review for a taste of Mad Hatter taste. MAD HATTERS' REVIEW: edgy & enlightened art, literature, & music in the Age of Dementia: http://www.madhattersreview.com.

Public transportation to Haven Arts Gallery, 50 Bruckner Blvd:
Take Lexington Express 4 or 5 to 125th St. Transfer to 6 Train: 3rd Ave 138 at Alexander Ave (get out at the Alexander Ave exit, turning right onto Alexander)
Walk: 0.3 mi - about 7 mins at most
1. Head southwest on Alexander Ave toward E 137th St - 0.2 mi
2. Turn left at Bruckner Blvd - 400 ft
To: Haven Arts Gallery: 50 Bruckner Blvd - South side of the street

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

87. Stephen Vincent

Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008

Wed 9 Jul 2008

There is a big catalogue from a retrospective - started at the Whitney - just a few years back. Conner (right spelling!) was very involved with poets of his time - he came to San Francisco from Kansas along with Michael McClure. His film and art work of the late fifties and early sixties are implictly animated by the nuclear terror/jitters of the time. In addition to A Movie - which is composed totally of 'found' speeded up film footage of crashes (trains, planes, etc.) (the real psychic underbelly of Dr. Strangelove, aka General Curtis LeMay) Another Conner classic accounts the moving of Jay DeFeo's massive Rose from her studio to the San Francisco Art Institute. Minimally, I believe, the work is distributed by Canyon Cinema.

Yes, Miekal, I think it's time to put the 'r' back into o(r)bits - it suggests recycling, spiraling and all that, I mean, let the dead take wing! Enough of this 'deep six' stuff after a paragraph in the local news.

By the way I hear there is a Conner orbit in today's NY Times.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote: I like the real Connor "orbits" part...

sadly I don't know his work at all..

~mIEKAL

On Jul 8, 2008, at 11:51 AM, Stephen Vincent wrote:

> Bruce Connor, esteemed & brilliant assemblage innovator in sculpture, painting and film, passed away in San Francisco yesterday. Dark portrayer of the 'under-soul' and luminous, angelic portrayer of the 'over-soul' his alchemic seeming transformations of detritus were mesmeric - in Edgar Alan Poe needed a lazer beam transmssion into the substance of the contemporary, or if 30's surrealism needed un autre enfant terrible, Connor was an extraordinary agent. Not an 'easy dude' by all accounts - particularly by many foiled curators - he leaves an assured legacy. When the measuring of mid-Century American art is done, I suspect Connor will be viewed as Raushenberg's dark brother. Suggest Minimally honor the day, if you can find his short movies composed > of found footage, "A Movie", for one. Not to over-do the dark imprint, Connor ran for the San Francisco Board of Supervisors circa 1966 in a long comic City tradition of unelectable musicans and artists, including Joel > Biafra, lead singer of the Dead Kennedys.

>
> I am sure there will be many 'real' Connor orbits, Look to them for more facts.
>
> Stephen Vincent
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

88. Philip Metres

Poetry Daily today: "For the Fifty (Who Made Peace With Their Bodies)"

Wed 9 Jul 2008

From the shameless self-promotion department, I wanted to let you know about today's poem,"For the Fifty (Who Made Peace With Their Bodies)", on Poetry Daily.

http://www.poems.com

Thanks for reading.

Send any and all complaints to [redacted]. Peace,

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com
http://www.behindthelinespoetry.blogspot.com

↑ Index

89. Barry Schwabsky
Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008
Wed 9 Jul 2008

His o(r)bit is there, along with that of Thomas Disch, novelist and (if I remember correctly) sometime poet.

----- Original Message ----
From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, 9 July, 2008 5:50:10 PM
Subject: Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008

There is a big catalogue from a retrospective - started at the Whitney - just a few years back. Conner (right spelling!) was very involved with poets of his time - he came to San Francisco from Kansas along with Michael McClure. His film and art work of the late fifties and early sixties are implictly animated by the nuclear terror/jitters of the time. In addition to A Movie - which is composed totally of 'found' speeded up film footageÂ of crashes (trains, planes, etc.) (the real psychic underbelly of Dr. Strangelove, aka General Curtis LeMay) Another Conner classic accounts the moving of Jay DeFeo's massive Rose from her studio to the San Francisco Art Institute.Â Minimally,Â I believe, the work is distributed by Canyon Cinema.Â

Yes, Miekal, I think it's time to put the 'r' back into o(r)bits - it suggests recycling, spiraling and all that, I mean, let the dead take wing! Enough of this 'deep six' stuff after a paragraph in the local news.

By the way I hear there is a Conner orbit in today's NY Times.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote: I like the real Connor "orbits" part...

sadly I don't know his work at all..

~mIEKAL

On Jul 8, 2008, at 11:51 AM, Stephen Vincent wrote:

> Bruce Connor, esteemed & brilliant assemblage innovator inÂ sculpture, painting and film, passed away in San FranciscoÂ yesterday. Dark portrayer of the 'under-soul' and luminous, angelicÂ portrayer of the 'over-soul' his alchemic seeming transformations ofÂ detritus were mesmeric -Â in Edgar Alan Poe needed a lazer beamÂ transmssion into the substance of the contemporary, or if 30'sÂ surrealism needed un autre enfant terrible,Â Connor was anÂ extraordinary agent.Â Not an 'easy dude' by all accounts -Â > particularly by many foiled curators - he leaves an assured legacy.Â When the measuring of mid-Century American art is done, I suspectÂ Connor will be viewed as Raushenberg's dark brother.Â SuggestÂ Minimally honor the day, if you can find his short movies composedÂ of found footage, "A Movie", for one.Â Not to over-do the darkÂ imprint, Connor ran for the San Francisco Board of Supervisors circaÂ 1966 in a long comic City tradition of unelectable musicans andÂ artists, including Joel > Biafra, lead singer of the Dead Kennedys.

>
> I am sure there will be many 'real' Connor orbits, Look to them forÂ more facts.
>
> Stephen Vincent
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

90. David Bowen
New American Press Chapbook Contest
Wed 9 Jul 2008

NEW AMERICAN PRESS is pleased to announce its summer 2008 chapbook contest!

Winner receives $250 and 25 copies of the chapbook, and a 30% discount off future copies.

The final judge will be DAN BEACHY-QUICK, author of Spell, Mulberry, and North True South Bright. All submissions are read blind, so please restrict name, address, email address, and other contact information to a separate cover sheet.

The manuscript should be 20-30 pages of poetry, fiction, or nonfiction. Experimentation with form, structure, and style are encouraged, but our ultimate criterion is depth and unity of vision.

Please submit by September 1, 2008, to:

New American Press Chapbook Contest
560 Stinchcomb Drive, Suite #2
Columbus, OH 43202

Please include a check or money order for $15 payable to "New American Press" and a SASE for contest results. Past winners include Shawn Fawson, David R. Slavitt, and Steve Davenport. More information at www.NewAmericanPress.com.

↑ Index

91. David Chirot

Re-Visioning Norman Rockwell's "Four Freedoms" & Senate Passes Re-Enforcing Surveillance at "Freedoms'"" Expense

Wed 9 Jul 2008

---

*ARTS / ART & DESIGN * | July 9, 2008
 * Art: Rockwell Re-enlisted for a Nation's Darker Mood
<http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/09/arts/design/09rock.html?ex=1216267200&en=47ca8621fc3d96d0&ei=5070&emc=eta1>
*
 By DAMIEN CAVE
 A new exhibition in Florida features 60 artists' responses to Norman Rockwell's wartime "Four Freedoms" series.

Senate bows to Bush, approves surveillance bill - Yahoo! News

http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20080709/ap_on_bi_ge/terrorist_surveillance *

The interest of the Times review is that journalist Damien Cave had spent 18 months ("off and on") in Iraq; this "frames" his view of the exhibit and the passersby almost completely ignoring it as a "reflection" of the "Darker Mood" that the contemporary artists bring to Rockwell's vision, which itself darkened during the Vietnam War.

The "Four Freedoms" that Rockwell depicted and are re-invisioned in the Exhiibtion, today took another heavy blow to the "heart and mind"as the Glorious, Courageous Senate once agin rubberstamped the Bush administration's Assaul on the Constitution.

In years gone by, only Probation or Parole could mean a change in one's Fourth Amendment Rights, and that was strictly controlled by the Law.

Now the Fourth Amendment is becoming a fading anachronism as far as the Lawmakers of Today are concerned.

In order to defend the Nation--the citizen must be ever more deprioved of their Freedoms, which are being ever more "defended" by the by the ever more strengthened "Homeland Security" in the "War on Terror."

The more Freedoms you lose at home, the more you know they are being defended abroad. And here at home, too--with al that surveillance going on of one's fellow citizens--

President FD Roosevelt famously said--"We have nothing to Fear but Fear itself."

A "War on Terror" means that one needs to be always & ever more Terrified--

And in the name of Terror--the State requires citizens to give up as many Rights is possible so that they can rest safel;y in knowing that they thmselves are wel protected from Terror.

History has proved Dr Goebbels right when he stated that the only thing needed to do to ever more tightly control a soceity is to say--that it is Threatened From Outside-- so that the Threats from Inside grow worse all the time, yet pass by unnoticed, much as passersby pass the art exhibtion by almost unnoticed.

Who, after all, wants to look at things which offer any critique too closely?

Senator Obama like the two thirds majority voted for this increase in Surveillance and immunity for the telecoms. Who can afford to look "weak on Terror" when running for Office?

In Wisconsin one may feel glad that once again "our" Senator Feingold--the only Senator who voted NO to the Patriot Act--louldy opposed this.

In the last two weeks the Senate approved 170 million dollars more military aide for Israel (which already receives 3 billion annuully already)--yet did not pass a single bill for any program for American citizens.

The reason of course is in the name of the "War on Terror."

The greater the Terror after all--the more things have to be taken care of somewhere else-- sacrificing Rights and Freedoms here--why be concerned about Rights and Freedoms of others ?
Who cares if the State and its allies are War Criminals?

Robespierre said that the two arms of the State are "Terror and Purity."

"Terrorism" itself came later in history--in the second half of the 19th Century.

The State discovered that by crying "terrorism!!!"--it could unlesh Terror and Purity with impunity--in fact, by "voting" as it has today, to give itself and its cronies Immunity as it were. No matter how great the horrors and Terror and the ethnic and other cleaning operations undertaken by the State--that which is done by "terrorists" is always of a far more Evil nature.

No one remembers when the Americans themselves were the "terrorists" against the Birtish State and King--

Read the Declaration of Independence and discover that the State of today must be overthrown by the citizens. Everything it and its allies stands for and does daily is what the Declaration was against, and declared its Independence from.

It is any wonder then that the State of today carries on a continaul assault agsint the Declaration and the Constitution? If anyone really took them seriously --why the State would all be locked up, lock stock and barrel--or executed as traitors.

You see right away why these documents need to be revised so badly. If one lived by them, one would be a "terrorist" in the eyes of all that is held so dearly today as the "people's" deepest desire and greatest necessity"--, in the name of the War on Terrorism.

During the Reign of Terror in France, which last week over a year--about the same number of persons were killed as were in 1871 during the Bloody Week in which the Sate suppressed the Commune. Then, a much more efficient State, heavily aremd with the support of world wide media and opinion outraged by al those "terrorists" in charge of the City of Paris--slaughtered 20--25,000 people in full view of the patrons of cafes, who, now feeling ever more Secure, could sit at again at their sidewalk "spots" and enjoy a cozy drink, enjoying whole heartedly their ringside seats at the murder going on all about them.

After all, Terror and Purity were making sure that "terrorism" would no longer live in their midst for at least a long generation, if not for several.

With every new law enacted, evry new bill passed, inexorbaly, the State is making sure that there really will be no "terrorists" in the society's midst. not only "terrorists" from elsewhere, but in the citizens' midst, homegrown terrorists of all kinds. To help further the laready ever lengthening "arm of the Law" of the Sate, there is now a vevival of programs outof use since WW2, only thenew ones are to be even more stringent. These recruit and train ordianry citizens as well as ploice, fire fighters , postal wrokers, etc--in the daily War at Home--that is, persons tarined to be neighbor "outlook posts" as it were--keping their eyes and ears open 24/7 fror the slightest signs of "persons acting suspiciously" or "taking photgrphas of uninteresting sites." If developed successfully, why, the State could be the proud creators of a form of "undercover secret police" not unlike that in China today.

Are you good and tired of your neighbor's penchant for mowing the lawn during your "qulity time" with your poetry writing--hek, the guy seems very suspicious deosn't he. Look at al the mail that he gets that comes in brown paper wrapping-- or al those late night phone calls when you can hear him speaking in a foreign language--

Yes, turn in him and by God, no more interruptions in the Poetry!!

Think how much more Creative oneself and one's colleagues could be, once freed from al these "suspicious foreign influences"--or simply noisy neighbors--

Haven't you noticed how much more Creative a nation we are becoming daily--? The incredible increase in the number of poeple writing and reading Poetry for example--?

"Don't drop the ball--make the Call!!"

ARTS / ART & DESIGN * | July 9, 2008
* Art: Rockwell Re-enlisted for a Nation's Darker Mood
<http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/09/arts/design/09rock.html?ex=1216267200&en=47ca8621fc3d96d0&ei=5070&emc=eta1>
*
By DAMIEN CAVE
A new exhibition in Florida features 60 artists' responses to Norman Rockwell's wartime "Four Freedoms" series.

Senate bows to Bush, approves surveillance bill - Yahoo! News

http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20080709/ap_on_bi_ge/terrorist_surveillance

↑ Index

92. Del Ray Cross
SHAMPOO 33
Thu 10 Jul 2008

Dear Tousled Cherubs,

Shampoo issue 33 is now available.

Check it out at: www.ShampooPoetry.com

Gleefully pour out and pore over poems by Tim Yu, Josh Wallaert, Zinovy â€œZekeâ€ Vayman, Cat Tyc, Mike Topp, Kiely Sweatt, Paul Siegell, Ryan B. Richey, Sean Reagan, Lanny Quarles, Mark Pawlak, Ronald Palmer, Michelle Noteboom, Mark Navarro, Christopher Mulrooney, Philip Metres, Hassan Melehy, Marie Larson, Susanna Kittredge, Scott Inguito, Geof Huth, David Highsmith, Jeff Harrison, Arpine Konyalian Grenier, Robert GlÃ¼ck, Michael Farrell, Cindy Carlson, Eric Beeny, Shane Allison and Malaika King Albrecht, along with

graphica poetica by Shane Allison, Diana MagallÃ³n and Jeff Crouch, and neo-retro ShampooArt by Nico Wijaya.

Pert regards,

Del Ray Cross, Editor
SHAMPOO
clean hair / good poetry
www.ShampooPoetry.com

(if you'd prefer not to receive these messages, just let me know)

↑ Index

93. Jonathan Mack Guttersnipe Seeks Allies
Thu 10 Jul 2008

Hello,
Â
Â Â Â Â Â Pardon this intrusion by an amateur.Â Reading these friendly and cantakerous posts, I envy the community people seems to have found.Â With this in mind, I wanted to invite people to visit my blog, www.guttersnipedas.blogspot.com , where I've put in order some new essays and stories, which everyone but me seems to refer to as poems.
Â
Â Â Â Â I'm an American who loves India and lives in Japan--except this year I'm in Italy and I've even got a spare room on Santa Croce Piazza in Florence if you're visiting.
Â
Â Â Â Â I would be happy to hear from anyone, even Troy Camplin, PhD, if he wants to tell me everything wrong with my work and my life.Â (Really, I'm having a good time reading the back and forth.)
Â
Â Â Â Â Perhaps especially appropriate would be queer writers, prose poets, writers working with material that's sexually explicit or self-incriminating, and fans of Bruno Schulz, Robert Walser, Clarice Lispector and their kin.Â Anyone who read the recent review of Frank O'Hara and thought, "I am going to fly to New York and handcuff myself to something" is also welcome.
Â
Â Â Â Â Â Â Thank you again for your time.
Â
Respectfully,
Â

Guttersnipe Das
www.guttersnipedas.blogspot.com
Â
P.S. To those who responded earlier--Ruth,Sharon, Alta--thankÂ you so much.Â
I have yourÂ books waiting for me in America.Â

Meet people who discuss and share your passions. Go to http://in.promos.yahoo.com/groups/bestofyahoo/

↑ Index

94. Dr. Barry S. Alpert
Re: Bruce Conner, 1933-2008
Thu 10 Jul 2008

Stephen,

I was lucky enough to have had a lot of exposure to Bruce Conner's work, starting when I was an undergraduate at Washington University in St. Louis, where--prompted by writing about BC by Jonas Mekas and Susan Sontag--I screened "Cosmic Ray" and "A Movie" within one of my film series. Most recently, in conjunction with a large exhibition of work by Conner & his "assistants" Anonymous and Anonymouse, ten of his films were projected within the Katzen Museum on the campus of American University in Washington DC.

Unfortunately, I was never able to witness any of the "performances" he staged, as it were, within his personal life, and wonder whether you ever caught any of these. Or perhaps an in-person screening? The rumors and stories his behavior initiated were amusing, but I've never heard an eyewitness account. Can you supply one?

Barry Alpert

_____
Making the world a better place one message at a time.
http://www.imtalkathon.com/?source=EML_WLH_Talkathon_BetterPlace

↑ Index

95. Kathleen Ossip
WSQ issue on Technology
Thu 10 Jul 2008

Hello,

As poetry editor of WSQ (Women's Studies Quarterly), a journal published by the Feminist Press, I'm currently reading submissions for our next issue, which will have the theme of Technology. Please consider sending unpublished poems that you feel fit this theme (including poems generated by technology and hypertexts which could be posted on WSQ's website). Send to me at [redacted] by August 1.

WSQ has a wide readership of academics and is adopted for classroom use. I've been delighted to include poems by Rebecca Wolff, Maxine Chernoff, Christina Davis, Nicole Cooley, and Annie Finch, among others, in past issues.

Thanks!
Kathy Ossip

****

Get the scoop on last night's hottest shows and the live music scene in your area - Check out TourTracker.com!

(http://www.tourtracker.com?NCID=aolmus00050000000112)

↑ Index

96. Thomas savage
Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008
Thu 10 Jul 2008

I just watched several of Bruce Conner's films/videos on Youtube. The ones with the best, most audible soundtracks seem to be the ones he made with Bowie and Eno. One called Valse Triste, a great piece of music by Sibelius, if I remember correctly, didn't come over the computer that well. The images did but not the musical accompaniment. Still, his films are interesting. I remember hearing of them years ago and may have seen one or two of them years ago when "underground cinema" existed and was easily available in above ground movie theaters. It was nice to see this stuff, either for the first time or again. I hope others take the opportunity to view Mr. Conner's work again now that it is available online. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Wed, 7/9/08, Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, July 9, 2008, 3:24 PM

His o(r)bit is there, along with that of Thomas Disch, novelist and (if I remember correctly) sometime poet.

----- Original Message ----
From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Sent: Wednesday, 9 July, 2008 5:50:10 PM
Subject: Re: Bruce Conner, 1933 - 2008

There is a big catalogue from a retrospective - started at the Whitney - just a few years back. Conner (right spelling!) was very involved with poets of his time - he came to San Francisco from Kansas along with Michael McClure. His film and art work of the late fifties and early sixties are implictly animated by the nuclear terror/jitters of the time. In addition to A Movie - which is composed totally of 'found' speeded up film footage of crashes (trains, planes, etc.) (the real psychic underbelly of Dr. Strangelove, aka General Curtis LeMay) Another Conner classic accounts the moving of Jay DeFeo's massive Rose from her studio to the San Francisco Art Institute. Minimally, I believe, the work is distributed by Canyon Cinema.

Yes, Miekal, I think it's time to put the 'r' back into o(r)bits - it suggests recycling, spiraling and all that, I mean, let the dead take wing! Enough of this 'deep six' stuff after a paragraph in the local news.

By the way I hear there is a Conner orbit in today's NY Times.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote: I like the real Connor "orbits" part...

sadly I don't know his work at all..

~mIEKAL

On Jul 8, 2008, at 11:51 AM, Stephen Vincent wrote:

> Bruce Connor, esteemed & brilliant assemblage innovator in > sculpture, painting and film, passed away in San Francisco > yesterday. Dark portrayer of the 'under-soul' and luminous, angelic
> portrayer of the 'over-soul' his alchemic seeming transformations
of > detritus were mesmeric - in Edgar Alan Poe needed a lazer beam > transmssion into the substance of the contemporary, or if 30's > surrealism needed un autre enfant terrible, Connor was an > extraordinary agent. Not an 'easy dude' by all accounts - > particularly by many foiled curators - he leaves an assured legacy.
> When the measuring of mid-Century American art is done, I suspect > Connor will be viewed as Raushenberg's dark brother. Suggest > Minimally honor the day, if you can find his short movies composed > of found footage, "A Movie", for one. Not to over-do the dark

> imprint, Connor ran for the San Francisco Board of Supervisors circa > 1966 in a long comic City tradition of unelectable musicans and > artists, including Joel > Biafra, lead singer of the Dead Kennedys.
>
> I am sure there will be many 'real' Connor orbits, Look to them
for > more facts.
>
> Stephen Vincent
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

97. Jennifer Karmin
The Strangerer in NYC
Thu 10 Jul 2008

---

hey nyc folk....GO SEE THIS PLAY! important and funny political work by a spectacular chicago theater group.

onwards,
jennifer karmin

@@@

Performances July 9 - August 20
Tues thru Sat @ 7:30PM
Sunday @ 2:30PM & 7PM
Running time: 90 minutes

at the Barrow Street Theatre
27 Barrow Street -- New York City
(at 7th Avenue, South of Christopher Street)
http://www.barrowstreettheatre.com

Theater Oobleck has no Managing Director, no Artistic Director, no Technical Director, no Musical Director, no production directors.
http://www.theateroobleck.com

↑ Index

98. Tony Trigilio

Registration reminder, The Beat Generation Symposium, Columbia College Chicago (Oct. 10-11, 2008)

Thu 10 Jul 2008

Hi everyone--

I'm writing with a reminder that registration is now being accepted for The Beat Generation Symposium at Columbia College Chicago.

Please keep in mind that our pre-registration discount ends August 1. Conference fee for those who pre-register before August 1: $50 ($25 for Graduate Students, Independent Scholars, and Retired Faculty). After August 1, the fees are $100 and $50.

We now have the option for registering by credit card. If you'd like to do this, call the Columbia Ticket Office at [redacted], or register online at:

www.colum.edu/tickets/index.php

Thanks, and hope to see you there--

Best,
Tony

* THE BEAT GENERATION SYMPOSIUM * Please join us for a conference devoted to the literary and cultural legacy of the Beat Generation: "The Beat Generation Symposium," co-sponosored by the Beat Studies Association, the Columbia College Chicago English Department, Columbia College's Ellen Stone Belic Institute for the Study of Women and Gender in the Arts and Media, and Illinois State University.

Friday, October 10, and Saturday, October 11, 2008.

Location: Columbia College Chicago, Film Row Theater (1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th floor).

This is an academic Beat Studies conference to be held in conjunction with the Columbia College's Center for the Book and Paper Arts's Fall 2008 display of the Jack Kerouac ON THE ROAD manuscript scroll.

The Beat Generation Symposium features panel discussions each day, with poetry readings by Joanne Kyger (October 10) and Diane di Prima (October 11).

Panelists include John Bryant, Peter Cook, Terrance Diggory, Jane Falk, Amy Friedman, Deborah R. Geis, Nancy M. Grace, Tim Hunt, Rob Johnson, Ronna Johnson, Hassan Melehy, Timothy Murphy, Jennie Skerl, Matt Theado, Tony Trigilio, and more.

Conference fee for those who pre-register before August 1: $50 ($25 for Graduate Students, Independent Scholars, and Retired Faculty). After August 1, the fees are $100 and $50.

Checks should be made payable to Columbia College Chicago, and should be sent to:

Columbia Ticket Center
33 East Congress St., Suite 610
Chicago, IL 60605
Ph: [redacted] (fax [redacted])
[redacted]

To register by credit card, call the Columbia Ticket Office at the number above, or register online at:

www.colum.edu/tickets/index.php <https://mail.colum.edu/owa/redir.aspx?C=30fd987b8a3b477f84ea77e24bf305d8&URL=http%3a%2f%2fwww.colum.edu%2ftickets%2findex.php>

A limited number of hotel rooms are available at the Homewood Suites by Hilton Chicago-Downtown, 40 East Grand Avenue, Chicago. This hotel is a very short cab or subway ride from the Columbia campus. The Homewood Suites prepared a special link for us to book online. Just click below and you'll find directions for reserving a room:

http://homewoodsuites.hilton.com/en/hw/groups/personalized/CHIHWHW-CLC-20081009/index.jhtml <https://mail.colum.edu/owa/redir.aspx?C=30fd987b8a3b477f84ea77e24bf305d8&URL=http%3a%2f%2fhomewoodsuites.hilton.com%2fen%2fhw%2fgroups%2fpersonalized%2fCHIHWHW-CLC-20081009%2findex.jhtml>

It's important that you book your room as soon as possible, as the Chicago Marathon is taking place October 12. (We only discovered this convergence recently, after we'd already booked the featured readers.)

A Visitor's Guide for the Beat Symposium is pasted below, with a list of nearby hotels. Columbia College Chicago is located downtown, in the heart of the city's South Loop neighborhood, and is easily accessible from these hotels by foot or cab. All major subway/El trains come into the South Loop, too, so it's possible to book hotels in other parts of the city and make it to the Symposium without difficulty.

Mention that you're a Columbia College Chicago visitor to receive discounted rates at some of these hotels. It's crucial to book as soon as possible because of the marathon.

For more information, contact Tony Trigilio at [redacted] ([redacted]).

VISITOR'S GUIDE: THE BEAT GENERATION SYMPOSIUM

Airports: O'Hare Airport (western suburbs) and Midway Airport (southern suburbs) are the two airports servicing the Chicgao area. They are approximately equidistant from Columbia College.

Transportation:
>From Midway Airport, take the Orange Line elevated train to Adams Street. From there, walk south on Wabash until you reach Congress Parkway. From O'Hare Airport, take the Blue Line to La Salle. Walk East on Congress (away from the Chicago Stock Exchange Building, which you'll see upon emerging from the subway) until you reach Wabash (about 5 short blocks).

Use www.transitchicago.com's<http://www.transitchicago.com's/> free Trip Planner service to plan the rest of your trips while you're here. Simply enter your starting point and destination, and Trip Planner gives you detailed directions. As of 2008, fares are $2.00 one-way with a $0.25 transfer. Each train station has kiosks where you can buy transit cards and reload them (cash only). The Blue Line and Red Line run 24/7; the other lines stop running for a few hours late at night.

Taxis are available throughout the city. From Midway Airport to the English Department, cab fare would be approximately $25 and from O'Hare Airport cab fare would be approximately $50. If you need to call a cab, call (773) or (312) TAXICAB.

Metra Trains service suburban areas. Visit www.metrarail.com<http://www.metrarail.com/> for an updated schedule and fare list.

LIST OF NEARBY HOTELS

The Hilton and Towers
722 S Michigan Ave
(0.2 miles from the English Department)
[redacted]

The Palmer House Hilton
17 E Monroe St (0.4 miles away)
[redacted] or 1-800-HILTONS

The Best Western Grant Park
1100 S Michigan Ave (0.6 mi)
[redacted]

Travelodge
65 E Harrison St (0.1 mi)
[redacted]

Hotel Blake
500 S Dearborn St (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
www.hyatt.com<http://www.hyatt.com/
<https://mail.colum.edu/owa/UrlBlockedError.aspx>>

Blackstone Hotel
819 S Wabash Ave # 606 (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
marriott.com

The Silversmith Hotel
10 S Wabash Ave (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
silversmithchicagohotel.com

Omni Ambassador East
1301 S State St (0.7 mi)
[redacted]

Embassy Suites Hotel Chicago-Downtown
600 North State Street (1.5 mi)
[redacted]
embassysuites.com

Essex Inn Hotel
800 S Michigan Ave (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
essexinn.com

Club Quarters: Hotel
111 W Adams St (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
clubquarters.com

W Hotels-Chicago City Center
172 W Adams St (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
starwoodhotels.com

Hostelling International Chicago
24 E Congress Pkwy (0.1 mi)
[redacted]
hichicago.org

↑ Index

99. Eireene Nealand

writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job

Thu 10 Jul 2008

---

in just a few days the uc santa cruz workforce is going on strike and i'm trying to think about what to do with my students for the three days that we will be meeting on the picket lines.

has anyone run into any ideas about how to do good political writing? and for this small moment, what small practical exercises students of varying engagements might engage in in order to connect with what they see and do there?

there have been some good discussions amongst organizers and activists about what it feels good to shout: short truths. simple ones, sometimes with rhythm, but not necessarily so. bilingual shouting feels good somehow.

but what ele?

i want so much for all to go well

here at this small strange universitiy with an illustrious history, and rapidly overtaking decline.

eireene

↑ Index

100. konrad
Re: Bruce Conner's films
Thu 10 Jul 2008

Stephen V wrote that:

"Minimally, I believe, the work is distributed by Canyon Cinema. "

Used to be, but in fact Bruce's film have been out of distribution for a year or so. If i were to make an educated guess, however, i would say that Canyon would be the place to look for them in the not too distant future.

Canyon Cinema: http://www.canyoncinema.com/
[nothing of Conner's there now]

You can click on something unauthorized on YouTube or UbuWeb i'm sure. You can also call me a film snob, but i hope that people get to see the work in a theater with good sound and picture. If you see them all compressed on your computer, it's like listening to Bach on a transistor radio at the beach. Easy to think, "so what?"

konrad steiner

http://www.kino21.org/

^Z

↑ Index

101. Tribbey, Hugh R.
CFP: Experimental Writing and Aesthetics
Thu 10 Jul 2008

Call for Papers: Experimental Writing and Aesthetics

Abstract/Proposals by 1 December 2008

Southwest/Texas Popular & American Culture Associations 29th Annual Conference

Albuquerque, NM, February 24-28, 2009

Hyatt Regency Albuquerque

Albuquerque, NM 87102

Panels are now forming on topics related to Experimental Writing and Aesthetics in such areas as

! the aesthetics of experimental writing in any genre or in multi-genre/multi-media works including digital and graphic compositions involving language,

! the poetics of performance of experimental compositions,

! critical studies of experimental writers and/or movements such as Foulipo or conceptual writing,

! fictocritical treatments or extended manifestoes, etc.

Creative writers interested in the selective creative writing readings panels should contact Jerry Bradley, Creative Writing Readings Chair, via < http://www.swtexaspca.org >.

Scholars, teachers, professionals, writers not affiliated with academic institutions, special undergraduates as well as graduate students, and others interested in experimental writing are encouraged to participate. Graduate students are also particularly welcome with award opportunities for best graduate papers. Individual presentations should be 15-20 minutes in length.

If you wish to organize your own panel, I will be happy to facilitate your scheduling needs.

Send abstracts, papers, or proposals for panels electronically with your email address by 1 December 2008 with "SW/TX PCA Submission" typed in the subject line to:

Hugh Tribbey, Area Chair

Literature, Experimental Writing and Aesthetics

Email: [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]>

Mailing Address:

Dr. Hugh Tribbey

Department of English and Languages

East Central University

1100 E. 14th St.

Ada, OK 74820

Phone: [redacted]; Fax: [redacted]

Conference Website: < http://www.h-net.org/~swpca/index.html > (updated regularly)

↑ Index

102. konrad

SF: SAT 7/12/08, The New Talkies: live film narration

Thu 10 Jul 2008

Quick reminder about our cabaret of benshi-inspired live film narration:

The New Talkies
Saturday July 12, 8PM
Artists' Television Access
992 Valencia St
SAN FRANCISCO

presented by kino21

info at http://www.atasite.org/calendar/?x=2914

LINE UP / scenes from :

Jaime Cortez
  Guess Who's Coming to Dinner?

Douglas and Nicole Kearney
  Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom

Rodney Koeneke
  Mary Poppins

David Larsen
  Logan's Run

Cynthia Sailers
  The Passion of Anna

Erika Staiti & Konrad Steiner
  Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

Clive Worsley
  Jeremiah Johnson

http://www.kino21.org/

^Z

↑ Index

103. AWAREing Press
Carol Berge 1928 - 2006
Thu 10 Jul 2008

Introducing myself before inviting you to visit www.carolberge.com would be a travesty. After all, Carol Berge (add an accent over the "e" please) was a forerunner in the rush to assemble and expand The Scene during the 1960s in Manhattan, as well as a recognized poet and author. Her awards include NEA and NYSCA fellowships and a Pushcart Prize for a story she published by Ed Sanders in her literary magazine CENTER. She also taught writing at universities nationwide. Over her lifetime she published 22 books of poetry, fiction and nonfiction, edited handsful of publications, and had her stuff published in over 200 little magazines. Info on her final short story collection, ANTICS, as well as the forthcoming Light Years anthology, can be found at her site.

As for me, I'm a journalist and editor, and have 11 yet-to-be unpublished works copywritten with the LOC. My poetry is rough and I prefer doing fiction or essays. All of it's maybe too rough or avant-garde or far-reaching or ego-centric... I keep writing, as a compulsion and a therapy and an art form. Feel free to write, say hi, etc. My interest in your group stems from a mention of Carol Berge, alongside other notable poets, electronically preserved on your listserv from 1999. If only we could keep e-versions of ourselves! But that's further off than cryogenics, if scientists are correct. And if perception is objective, as a concept. Anyway, thanks for the group and long live poetics.

James Beach, editor
AWAREing Press

↑ Index

104. Catherine Daly
cfw
Thu 10 Jul 2008

forwarded from elsewhere...

Call for Poetry Submissions
"Spiraled Connections: 40 years of Indigenous Journeys at UCLA"

The American Indian Studies Center at UCLA is seeking poetry submissions for a fortieth-anniversary anthology commemorating its forty years of publishing books by and about Native peoples. We envision this anthology as a collection of materials by Indigenous poets directly connected to UCLA in the past forty years and those they have mentored or influenced. Our aim is to illustrate and celebrate the ways that Native people present at the core of the American Indian educational movement have radiated their innovation and empowerment out to the community in all directions. Submissions do not have to be education-oriented.

Deadline: February 1, 2009

WHO CAN SUBMIT: Indigenous poets (having origin in any of the original peoples of North America and who maintain cultural identification through tribal affiliation or community recognition) connected in some way to UCLA (alumni, former/current professor/undergraduate/graduate/staff, folks previously published in AICRJ or other American Indian Studies Center publications) and those they have mentored or influenced.

WHAT TO SUBMIT: Up to five poems (single spaced), not to exceed a total of ten typed pages. We are open to all poetic styles and forms. Poems in your Indigenous language will be considered but you must also provide English translation with your submission. What have we become in these past forty years of American Indian scholarship, education, community, intellectual, creative and academic adventure? Who have we become, who have we touched, how have we grown, transformed, helped each other, learned to negotiate the academy, our multiple roles and lives? How can we, as poets, express this Indigenous journey?

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES: Please include name, email, phone, address, and a brief bio along with your submissions. While unpublished pieces are preferred, previously published material will be considered. If something has been previously published, please let us know where and when it was published, and whether you have the rights to your own material.

HOW TO SUBMIT: Inquiries can be directed to Deborah Miranda: [redacted]. Deadline: February 1, 2009. Please send submissions with an SASE for response to:

Deborah Miranda
English Department
Washington and Lee University
204 W. Washington St.
Lexington, VA 24450

ABOUT THE EDITOR: Deborah Miranda is an Esselen/Chumash poet and scholar, currently an associate professor of English at Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Virginia, where she teaches creative writing, literature, and composition. She has published two poetry collections, Indian Cartography and The Zen of La Llorona; projects forthcoming are The Light from Carrisa Plains: A Tribal Memoir, and Written on the Bark of Trees: Praise Poems.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

105. Douglas Manson

Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job

Fri 11 Jul 2008

Gmail is crazy--
it reads your email and generates advertising.

Here is the sidebar included with your email (AND I DO NOT ENDORSE ANY OF THIS CRAP):

*Replacement Workers*Strike/Crisis/Contract Staffing.
Call PMG at [redacted].
www.pmgroup1.com
*USA Strike Security*Security Officers, Transportation Qualified Replacement Workers www.imacservices.com
*Strike Lockout:8008341720*Replacements Security Transport Planning and Impementing The Best www.modernindustrialservices.com
*Choose your own adventure*Help write the story one snippet at a time
www.1000000monkeys.com
*Write a Book in a Year*Use this workbook & formula & you Will write your book - It Works
www.WriteABookInAYear.com

This is the price you pay for 6.9 gigs of storage!!!

I really wanted to work at Santa Cruz. I applied for an assistant professor position there in the fall of 2006. I guess, had I been hired, I'd be with you on the lines. It's sad to hear about this. The Special Collections Library holds the Kenneth Patchen archive--I recommend using his great picture-poems as posters, enlarge them with a giant color printer! Show the world all the color and creativity of what the school can offer & can be--not what it doesn't seem to be able to, or refuses to be--

New Directions is publishing two collections of his 50s-60s verbal visual works this month.

sing out!

Doug

On Thu, Jul 10, 2008 at 1:48 PM, Eireene Nealand <[redacted]> wrote:

> in just a few days the uc santa cruz workforce is going on strike and
> i'm trying to think about what to do with my students for the three > days that we will be meeting on the picket lines.
>
> has anyone run into any ideas about how to do good political writing?
> and for this small moment, what small practical exercises students of > varying engagements might engage in in order to connect with what they > see and do there?
>
> there have been some good discussions amongst organizers and activists > about what it feels good to shout: short truths. simple ones, > sometimes with rhythm, but not necessarily so. bilingual shouting > feels good somehow.
>
> but what ele?
>
> i want so much for all to go well
>
> here at this small strange universitiy with an illustrious history,
> and rapidly overtaking decline.
>
> eireene

--
www.myspace.com/inksaudible www.dougfinmanson.blogspot.com

↑ Index

106. Rebecca Weaver
new issue of MIDWAY now up
Fri 11 Jul 2008

Hello all,

I'm happy to announce that the new issue of MIDWAY journal, featuring the first part of a serial poem by Mac Wellman, is up online.

Happy reading!

↑ Index

107. Jane Sprague
Long Beach Notebook: Ackerman, Donovan, Halpern 7/12/08 @ 8:00pm
Fri 11 Jul 2008

Dear Friends in or near Long Beach & Los Angeles:

Please join us next Saturday, July 12 2008 in Long Beach, California to hear the work of Amanda Ackerman, Thom Donovan and Rob Halpern.

Long Beach Notebook begins at 8:00 pm. The event takes place at the home office of Palm Press: 143 Ravenna Drive, Long Beach, CA 90803 (use Mapquest or Google Maps for directions).

 Amanda Ackerman lives in Los Angeles where she writes and teaches. She is co-editor of the press eohippus labs. She is a member of UNFO (The Unauthorized Narrative Freedom Organization) and writes as part of Sam or Samantha Yams. She is also a member of the event space Betalevel. Her work has been published or is forthcoming in flim forum; String of Small Machines; The Physical Poets; WOMB; and the Encyclopedia Project, Volume F-K. With Harold Abramowitz, she is also co-author of the book Sin is to Celebration, soon to be published by House Press in the fall.

Thom Donovan lives and works in Manhattan, where he edits Wild Horses of Fire blog (whof.blogspot.com), curates the events series Peace On A, and coedits ON, a new magazine for contemporary practice. He attended the Poetics Program at SUNY-Buffalo and is an ongoing participant in the Nonsite Collective.

Rob Halpern is the author of Rumored Place, Imaginary Politics, and Snow Sensitive Skin (co-authored with Taylor Brady). Disaster Suites will be published this Summer by Palm Press. He's currently co-editing the writings of the late Frances Jaffer together with Kathleen Fraser, and translating the early essays of Georges Perec, the first of which, "For a Realist Literature," can be found in the recent issue of Chicago Review. He lives in San Francisco.

***

From Disaster Suites by Rob Halpern:

This war
Of want Says what

I want
To say
To you

Of dreams
Or need
We need

Not speak
To speak
Of wars

Of want
I come To love

So late
To you
My lost

- marine.

***

from O Coevals by Thom Donovan

We witness bells that this was theirs
That shade equals sun in exquisiteness

Non-identities piling up like pylons
A physics without cars beings without

Impact move to what here to what
Their equated it I feel so much pressure

Around you to burn a discourse and not Touch any time we were or event

Living us so live my life will never finish
What my death leaves unfinished this Town never seems to work those sovereign

Stumps sing us into battle effects

Of power fires hymns even the sun Forgot to burn so sing patiency which Organs won't be consumed what ex change won't always be sung for being

Too far from off-shore what bodies we Haven't won't account for limbs little Substances Nature complicit with who Gets to live grieves its contrivance.

***

from Amanda Ackerman:

Here on fire we remove the husk of the seed with the aching to peel back with the aching to hear; to touch is to look, the seed looks like and says this: It is spring, but my corn does not want to sell her rooster. If I wait another year, the rooster will be considered old, quite old, very old. And having been an upright and tireless citizen his whole life, always dressed in devoted red, always smelling like humid, dank gems and unbottled musk, the rooster will start to make up stories about how he fought in the war, welded the sides of tanker ships, wore a shattered, sandy green army helmet. Then no one will want to buy him, it's just a matter of timing. Let him stay and my lips will keep moving, turn the shapes of fortified roots, and I can stay forever awake in the dark folds of nucleotides, always siding with what is right, always siding.

***

See you then...
www.palmpress.org

↑ Index

108. Stephen Vincent
More Good Stuff on Bruce Conner
Fri 11 Jul 2008

Some want to hear more good stuff on Bruce Conner - maker of films, photographer, sculptor, painter, printmaker, occasional San Francisco politician, well, today in Leah Garchik's collumn:

http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/2008/07/11/DDI511LPR7.DTL

In 1967, Conner ran for the Board of Supervisors in San Francisco. He described his business or occupation as "Nothing. My qualifications for said office are as follows: The light of the body is the eye; therefore when thine eye is single, they whole body also is full of light; but when thine eye is dark, they body is full of darkness. Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness. If thy whole body be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light. For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known."

Followed by a lovely conversational account by Michael McClure of going from Kansas to NYC with Bruce Conner in their teens to up with Robert Motherwell in the summer of 1951, as well as accounts of his runs for the Board of Supervisors.

http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2008/07/11/DDKA11LE22.DTL&hw=Kenneth+Baker+Bruce+Conner&sn=001&sc=1000

Kenneth Baker's good piece on Connor the person(s), also in today's Chron.

Of course, for additional stuff, one can always Google!

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

109. Stephen Vincent
Re: Bruce Conner's films
Fri 11 Jul 2008

Thanks, Konrad. In fact, yesterday, I heard Conner had withdrawn his films over three different times in the course of his relationship with Canyon Cinema. Apparently a flip-flop tradition among a few others at Canyon Cinema, as well, including the long now disappeared Ben VanMeter who made such great stuff in the Sixties,

And right, Good screen, good sound = best. Recently I heard Maurice Subotnik say the IPod has become the ultimate diminishment of an original, recorded perfomance. What seems like ultimate democracy (Ipod, Netflix, etc.) = pale horse, pale rider.

Stephen V

konrad <[redacted]> wrote: Stephen V wrote that:

"Minimally, I believe, the work is distributed by Canyon Cinema. "

Used to be, but in fact Bruce's film have been out of distribution for a year or so. If i were to make an educated guess, however, i would say that Canyon would be the place to look for them in the not too distant future.

Canyon Cinema: http://www.canyoncinema.com/
[nothing of Conner's there now]

You can click on something unauthorized on YouTube or UbuWeb i'm sure. You can also call me a film snob, but i hope that people get to see the work in a theater with good sound and picture. If you see them all compressed on your computer, it's like listening to Bach on a transistor radio at the beach. Easy to think, "so what?"

konrad steiner

http://www.kino21.org/

^Z

↑ Index

110. Joel Weishaus
Carol Berge 1928 - 2006
Fri 11 Jul 2008

----- Original Message -----
From: "Joel Weishaus" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, July 11, 2008 9:28 AM
Subject: Re: Carol Berge 1928 - 2006

Carol died? I have some wonderful memories of that woman. This is a postcard I received from Judson Crews, July 9, 1988:

"Back in US. I was suddenly reduced to nothing more than a 'local poet.'Carol Bergé said to me, 'You ass-hole, what do you think? Do you think the word does not get around?' I was so stunned it never occurred to me to wonder 'what word'? But how stunningly true it seems more and more. My work, absolutely is better than it has ever been). But it is, almost, as if I were Rimbaud, crawling back to Paris to die."

Best,
Joel

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "AWAREing Press" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Thursday, July 10, 2008 6:14 PM

> Subject: Carol Berge 1928 - 2006
>
> Introducing myself before inviting you to visit www.carolberge.com would be a travesty. After all, Carol Berge (add an accent over the "e" please) was a forerunner in the rush to assemble and expand The Scene during the 1960s in Manhattan, as well as a recognized poet and author. Her awards include NEA and NYSCA fellowships and a Pushcart Prize for a story she published by Ed Sanders in her literary magazine CENTER. She also taught writing at universities nationwide. Over her lifetime she published 22 books of poetry, fiction and nonfiction, edited handsful of publications, and had her stuff published in over 200 little magazines. Info on her final short story collection, ANTICS, as well as the forthcoming Light Years anthology, can be found at her site.
>
> As for me, I'm a journalist and editor, and have 11 yet-to-be unpublished works copywritten with the LOC. My poetry is rough and I prefer doing fiction or essays. All of it's maybe too rough or avant-garde or far-reaching or ego-centric... I keep writing, as a compulsion and a therapy and an art form. Feel free to write, say hi, etc. My interest in your group stems from a mention of Carol Berge, alongside other notable poets, electronically preserved on your listserv from 1999. If only we could keep e-versions of ourselves! But that's further off than cryogenics, if scientists are correct. And if perception is objective, as a concept. Anyway, thanks for the group and long live poetics.
>
> James Beach, editor
> AWAREing Press

↑ Index

111. Hugh Margemont-Robinson

Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job

Fri 11 Jul 2008

---

have your students read this:

http://www.bookforum.com/inprint/015_02/2458

Then have them convey what literature they consider political. Then ask them what elements give said literature a political nature. What differentiates a political novel from an introspective one? Private v. Public?

Just a thought

On Thu, Jul 10, 2008 at 1:48 PM, Eireene Nealand <[redacted]> wrote:
> in just a few days the uc santa cruz workforce is going on strike and
> i'm trying to think about what to do with my students for the three > days that we will be meeting on the picket lines.
>
> has anyone run into any ideas about how to do good political writing?
> and for this small moment, what small practical exercises students of > varying engagements might engage in in order to connect with what they > see and do there?
>
> there have been some good discussions amongst organizers and activists > about what it feels good to shout: short truths. simple ones, > sometimes with rhythm, but not necessarily so. bilingual shouting > feels good somehow.
>
> but what ele?
>
> i want so much for all to go well
>
> here at this small strange universitiy with an illustrious history,
> and rapidly overtaking decline.
>
> eireene
>
>

--
HMR

WAX RETINA W/ POLISH OF THE NOW

↑ Index

112. Doug Holder
Passing Time with the Boston Poet Laureate
Fri 11 Jul 2008

Friday, July 11, 2008
Passing the time with Boston Poet Laureate Sam Cornish.
http://dougholder.blogspot.com

Passing the time with Boston Poet Laureate Sam Cornish.

Doug Holder

Sam Cornish, the Boston Poet Laureate, invited me to his office to chat before participating in another meeting we were involved with later in the day with Boston-area poetry activists. On the subway, on the way to the meeting, I read through a collection of Cornish's that I picked up at the Grolier Poetry Book Shop some time ago: "Cross A Parted Sea." Cornish writes about everything from Pullman Porters, sharecroppers, Jackie Robinson, Martin Luther King, his father, etc. He does it with just the right amount of raw energy and the Blues, and his choice of words packs a wallop, or at times a well- appointed sucker punch: Case in point:

Dog Town Slim

Our grandfathers were hard as nigger sweat writers that drank the muddy waters of Mississippi and the Congo traveled the world in books foot& fist through Dunbar
Douglass
Johnson
And Hughes
no Uncle Toms
but men
on Grand Street or Lenox Avenue left bank or after hours joint upside the heads of Gentiles of Crackers or to Spain fuck fascism

and the Krauts

their lives so crazy that women
wrote about them made a music
called the blues.

Sam Cornish's office is in the back of the audiovisual department in the basement of the Copley Square Branch of the Boston Public Library. Cornish is an affable, warm, and modest man, making him an easy person to talk to and open up to. Cornish, like the former U.S. Poet Laureate Robert Pinsky, is all about community and outreach. From talking with Cornish I got the impression he is not interested in getting more PR for the mandarins of the poetry world. He wants to reach what he calls the "Boston Underground," which he defines as the community of poets and writers outside the academy. This is a population who publishes little magazines and books, writes for the love of it and are not careerists. He feels that these "holy fools" should get some recognition as well. Cornish wants to address the larger question "Why does poetry matter?" He wants show that poetry is an essential element of society. It is more than foundation grants, book contracts, and plum teaching positions.

Later Dales Patterson (Boston Library Foundation), Harris Gardner (Tapestry of Voices), Lo Galluccio (Poet Activist, Ibbetson Update Book Reviewer, and author), Joe Bergin (Carpenter Poets), and Kate Finnegan (Kaji Aso Studios) came to discuss the process of getting grants for pet projects of Cornish's, and other proposed projects by group members. Some interesting ideas were thrown out like: poetry performances at the old Strand Theatre in Dorchester, a small press book fair, readings in coffee shops across the city, thematic cross-cultural readings, paid visiting poets conducting workshops for neighborhood youth, you name it… Dale Patterson, a well-seasoned grant writer, plans to work up a draft proposal that hopefully will wind up in the willing hands of a number of foundations.

It was great to be with these enthusiastic folks who took time out of their very busy lives to volunteer their respective talents in promotion of the word. Like Robert Pinsky, Sam Cornish is a great laureate, a man of the people, and his hands are on the pulse of the city. When I lived in Brighton years ago I used to see him walking the streets, his inquisitive, searching eyes scanning the city behind thick glasses. Cornish mentioned the book "Walker in the City," by Alfred Kazin. Kazin was a keen observer, a lover of the ebb and flow of the eclectic, teeming city streets. This is exactly what Cornish is, and what I admire about the man. Cornish has walked the walk and he has earned the right to talk the talk.

I think Boston had the right idea supporting and funding this position. I can only hope that my hometown of Somerville will be infused with the same wisdom and fund a position such as this.

--Doug Holder

↑ Index

113. Geoffrey Gatza
Marshmallow thingy and god
Fri 11 Jul 2008

Geoffrey Gatza reads from his book Not So Fast Robespierre published by Menendez Publishing.

The Rooftop poetry club recorded it and is streaming online at http://www.buffalostate.edu/library/rooftop/

Reading line up:
Richard Owens
Michael Sikkema
Geoffrey Gatza

Here is the link to the book (hard cover):
http://www.lulu.com/content/1767006
Also available from Amazon in soft cover.

Best, Geoffrey

↑ Index

114. Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Book review advice
Fri 11 Jul 2008

Hi,

I'm thinking of adding a unit on book reviews to a class I teach. Can anyone recommend any good articles/essays/books on the subject? I'm especially interested in pieces that address the craft of reviewing, both practical how-to stuff and more critical theoretical and/or cranky pieces.

Many thanks,

Hugh Behm-Steinberg

↑ Index

115. Alison Croggon
Theatre
Sat 12 Jul 2008

Now out from Salt Publishing: THEATRE by Alison Croggon

Alison Croggon's bold new collection, Theatre, uses a range of narratives, fables, monologues and compressed lyrics to examine female identity and the idea of divine experience. Stepping confidently between different registers and a wide range of forms, Croggon's poetry shows a writer at the height of her powers narrating a female world of folk tales, trials, challenges, transgressions, and mythologies, where rites of passage are both linguistic, spiritual and political, and where persona is stripped back to an essential humility always journeying into fragile and impossibly beautiful worlds.

Available online at http://www.saltpublishing.com/shop/proddetail.php?prod=9781844714186

Alison Croggon's poetry is distinguished by passion, intelligence and an intense moral honesty that does not consist of statements about things, or a drawing up of attitudes to this or that, but of a commitment to understanding the ways poetry - the language of poetry - enables us to understand. We have, as she says, "perfected the technologies of harm" and will most likely carry on doing so. But the same prose poem, History, goes on: "In unguarded moments I found myself longing for the dazzling conceits of civilisation to be actual, for the profound and bloody pleasures which underlay them." The marvellous sequence that ends the book, Translations from Nowhere, itself ends with "an eyelid / snapping open, dazzled, full". That fullness and that dazzling characterise all work. - George Szirtes

Theatre is the apt title for such poems. Alison Croggon is gifted with a rare capacity, negative capability: not so much, as for Keats, one that allows the poet into the life of the sparrow on the gravel, but a capacity to feel her way into the voices of others, from Iseult or Sor Juana to the uncanny, unhomed voices of Translations from Nowhere. But as with the best theatre, it is Croggon's care for language, its singularities and its musics, that makes these poems inimitable. Through it all, an ummistakeable note is sounded, wrapping through the many voices the tones of joy and desolation, water and wind on stone. - David Lloyd

To the mere spectator, it might appear that in this Theatre the poet is delivering her lines. She is not! This is a theatre in which there is no script, no actors, no representation. It is a place of first principles, born from, and belonging to, the poet. From her stage there come no answers, indeed, no questions. The latter are for you to ask yourself when you realize and understand the complete lack of pretence in her words – "if I have been asleep" –

And like Alison Croggon, responsibly, I also want to wake up, remove my masks, my costumes, and step out into the generative presence of real life. Clearly, it is the poet's language that allows this. She knows that the spotlight is never on the stage but, rather, on the audience: Her art's only illumination is what it illuminates in you. - MTC Cronin

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

116. Daniel Kane
Re: Bruce Conner
Sat 12 Jul 2008

There's a lot of info on Conner's relationship to Canyon in Scott MacDonald's *Canyon Cinema: The Life and Times of an Independent Film Distributor *(U of California Press, 2008).
best
--daniel

↑ Index

117. David Chirot
re Bruce Connor--from memory & ny times today
Sat 12 Jul 2008

---

*MOVIES * | July 12, 2008
 * An Appraisal: An Artist of the Cutting-Room Floor
<http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/12/movies/12conn.html?ex=1216526400&en=7b77219580c9033c&ei=5070&emc=eta1>
*
 By MANOHLA DARGIS
 Bruce Conner's ecstatic films were at once salvage projects and assertions of individuality in an increasingly anonymous age.

 in memory/memorium Bruce Connor--

I had the good fortune to meet Bruce Connors a number of times. We talked about the use of found materials and Assemblage, which are effective ways to take very serious things such as atomic blasts and other "iconic images of history" and turn them into comedy. ("Some things are so serious all one can do about them is laugh"--Werner Heisenberg. This was also the time period of Dr Strangelove, after all.)

The article notes Connor's citing the influence of the Marx Brothers, but one may go much further back into the silent era--to the Lumiere Brothers and Melies' uses of "trick effects"-- and later on, Buster Keaton. For example with his deadpan style (a "mock obectivity" in a sense)- would use "documentary" materials to create "comic effects." In Keaton, the fictional is simultaneously documentary as he designed the stunts and performed them, which are "documented" as his passing through many levels of film, projection, reality/documentary and fiction and dream. (In The Cameraman, and Sherlock Jr especially, which has sequences rivalling any of the later Surrealist classics.)

Joseph Cornell had worked much earlier in the use of assemblage &/found materials in film, and Connor's films reminded me of a kind of very speeded up approach to the dream-like associations which Cornell creates in his boxes and movies.

The review notes Connor as a precursor to MTV--actually I think that TV had a lot of influence on Connor's films, in the way that Richard Lester, who made the Beatles' Hard Day's Night, came out of television and brought with him the speeded up collision of action, images, comedy and a "documentary feel" by filming on sight in an an unadorned, off the cuff manner, At the time, this was "slumming" in a sense was new to the movies, though a staple of TV--and was fitting that it arrived in film with the Pop sensibilities of the times,which one sees in the early Connor films.

I remember talking with Bruce Connor about the influence of advertising from TV and film in his work. My parents never had a TV (i didn't have one until almost thirty, an old junker found on the street) so TV when I saw it made quite an impression. The use of the strobe effects --which Dr Harold Edgerton at MIT had been working on for a long time, his own documentary fotos becoming considered as "Art"--(the famous drop of milk, or bullet crashing through a board etc)--was a big thing--Brion Gysin and Burroughs worked with something similar with flicker Dream Machines, and the police had them already long in use, though for an effect quite opposite to what filmmakers, writers, artists and psychedelians were after.

I think because he worked with Assemblage, writing about Connor, and thinking back to talking with him--is like opening an immense trunk of associations with other time periods in cinema, TV, photography and art, "high," "low" and kitsch.

In a sense the films become launching pads for the viewer's own associations of series of images, allusions, references, which like the flicker effect, are both

"there' and "not there<" yet also "there" in the sense of "after images, after effects." It sets up a Dream and Time Machine effect in the vast storehouses of the Museum in the Mind so to speak, the Cinematheque of the Photographic memory so to speak, the Archeology of the Vast Junkyards of celluloid, IMAGE and reproductions that accumulates with such incredible speed and in the process begins to create its own "memory movies" or what Jack Kerouac, who wrote obsessively of Memory and Time, called in terms of writing--"Book Movie, the original American form."

In a sense, watching a film like some of Connor's is actually being the screen onto which the film is projected as one is watching it. That is, the film begins taking place "before one's very eyes" and starts to trigger other images, ghostly, "after images," things there and not there, glimpsed and then lost, a hide and seek flickering in the stroboscopes of the viewer's own Cinema of Found Footages and Dusty Old Memories Dusted Off.

Some of the earliest film criticism made much of the going to the movies experience as a way in which a large number of persons entered into a darkness like sleep--and when the curtain went up so to speak, it was the opening of the eyes of the consciousness present at the playing out of a dream.

Using found footage and methods from Assemblage, Connor's films take "popular images, icons of the culture" and play at once on their "documentary" and "dream" qualities. This is a quality which has Haunted so to speak Photography and Cinema since they each made their first appearances before human eyes. The range of effects from the Comic to the Tragic is very vast indeed, and at the same time that distance can be "speeded up" by the collisions of juxtapositions, montage, Assemblage and the kind of Pop feeling that is already present in the Cubist paintings making use of chair canings and newspaper ads, which themselves made use of the "documentary" and "advertising" qualities of the photographic image. In the Cinema of Assemblage, as in Connor's films, one can see and learn how al these elements can be unpacked, repackaged and unpacked , deconstructed, all very fast, "right before one's very eyes" and thus creating so often the Comic effect. The Newsreel turns into the old one reelers of Silent Comedy and images perform a fast "action packed" series of slapstick routines.

Like a Cornell box, a Connor film is a journey into an what I call the Anarkeyology of Images, the Strata of Allusions and Associations which "immediately recognizable" images and effects can trigger in the viewer's consciousness, a Journey into the "Photographic Memory" of the Age of Image Saturation which makes use of a new language of Visual Shorthand,

The Visual Shorthand--greatly expanded by International Signs without Words used in buildings, buses, trains, planes, bathrooms, elevator, just about everywhere one looks--by its "pointing" to a word in a myriad different languages--returns one to times before mass or common literacy, n which the gigantic, incredibly complex Cosmologies of different spiritual traditions are conveyed for the "instruction and delight" of the illiterate, who are made in these way extremely literate in terms of the understanding of communication-via-images, icons, signs, which, pre-Cinema and TV, creating their own form of Conceptual Cinema in the mind of the viewer. That is, "reading" the visual signs, the visual shorthand, the viewer is taking "still" images and galvanizing them --and at the same time, is galvanized by these images-- into speeding trains of associations, allusions, concepts, memories The "illiterate" mind itself becomes that Cinema into which the spectator of the early essays on the Cinema-as- Dream- Theater walks. Since the images and icons are collectively known, this proto-Cinematic viewer experiences simultaneously a "personal" viewing and a collective one, just as the cinema audience attends both a personal and a public cinema.

In Bruce Connor's films one finds articulated very clearly this combing of the individual viewing of the images, icons, visual shorthand, and the public, collective "attendance" of the spectator in the cinema. The Cinema of the individual mind and the Cinema of the "movie going public" are "brought together" via his work with the art of Assemblage. And they gesture also to what is "built into" Assemblage--that is, in taking note of the various objects, images, time periods, allusions which go into creating the Assemblage, one begins while viewing to already anticipate if not already beginning, to unpack the Assemblage and with each element find that it is triggering a myriad new Assemblages in the memory, imagination and thoughts.

An Assemblage as Film both "comes together" and "comes part"," while it is "taking place," much as the strobe effect alternates between presenting an image, and presenting its disappearance, in high speed succession. so that even a completely "still image," when viewed by Assemblage or strobe, becomes galvanized into a "Movie," a "Moving Picture," which in turn produces the "moving effects" of emotions triggered into their own "actions on and in the spectator, who becomes both a screen and an actor, and eventually, via the galvanized associations of "Photographic Memory," a form of Conceptual Director in the Cinema of the Mind. (Which Andre Malraux called "the Museum without Walls," that repository of images and image-junk in the brain of the viewer/director/Assembler.)

To me what is part of the magic (which is also another early metaphor for Cinema) of Connor's films is the way in which the Assemblage is such an incredibly well packed and unpacking (like the Toni Basil film of her mentioned in the review, dressed and undressed)--putting together//taking apart of not only the Connor film itself that is "before one," but also of the Cinema that is "within one."

In this Assemblage,disassemblage/re-assemblage both on screen and in the viewer's mind, there is an Assemblage of the experiences, memories, concepts, history of the Movies and Movie-Going, and how these are continually presenting an Anarkeyology of the "development" so to speak of the Art of Looking. Connor's films are often at the same time teaching one more about the History of Looking in terms of photographic/cinematic/advertising/TV/art images and the inner history of one's own many lives among these.

All these Assemblages "come together" and then--"depart" as a part of and apart from the films. And that ongoing Assemblage is the "legacy of Bruce Connor," an Assemblage ongoing in his works and their effects in the Cinemas of the Mind of the myriads of their viewers. And that's how he is ongoing in the mind of memory also, in thinking of him--not as a "stilled image," but as an ever ongoing "one," Assembled in the remembered by myriads person of Bruce Connor and his "body of work."

↑ Index

118. David Chirot

Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job

Sat 12 Jul 2008

Dear Eireene--

I keep thinking of Eisenstein's classic film STRIKE--
Eisenstein was very interested in/influenced by literature, including the study of Chinese ideograms.
A study of a film like STRIKE is a guide to many forms of Modernist ways of presenting a strike in its various stages of development.
Another useful guide from Eisenstein are his essays --among them for example, in FILM ESSAYS "The Method of Making Workers' Films, " "Lessons from Literature," "More thoughts on Structure" and esp "Perspectives."

All of these are concerned with a dialectics of presenting the political clearly and at the same time not neglecting his very deep concerns with form.

He uses often examples drawn from political life- such as orators and their differing uses of language, rhetorics, volumes and tones of voice, the uses of face and gesture to convey meanings and emotions, and how this is to be conveyed via the medium of film, which for him is drawn in many ways from writing and song.

Mayakovsky's "How are Verses Made" is also excellent in this regard--

(the drawback of especially the latter for students might be Mayakovsky's Communism--though Mayakovsky is every bit as flamboyant and fascinating charismatic a figure as Che--as you know--and so that might mitigate the circumstances of the ideology--who knows?

Actually there's some excellent reportage and writing on strikes and picket lines, which makes use of real and fictional persons, documentary materials in "News Reels" and subjective viewpoints in the "Camera Eye" sections-- and the first hand experience of the author--in an American context--John Dos Passos' USA trilogy.

In the "Newsreels" Dos Passos combines popular songs of the time, newspaper headlines, faits divers, strange weather, a multitude of simultaneous "news items" in order to give a "movie" "take" on the events in which the characters are involved--among the most focused on being organizing and strikes, writing of reports and propaganda leaflets, and pamphlets explaining reasons for actions, as well as he provides many bios of Labor leaders and agitators which are very inspiring--people like Big Bill Heywood, etc--

The picketing and protests by millions around the world during the Sacco and Vanzetti Trials also plays a big part.

There are also a lot of Labor newspapers from various points of view that are easy to find and the Catholic Worker which often has very good reporter on picketing and strikes.

These give a kind of shorthand of how to present the reasons for the strike, the unions and companies involved, the major issue at stake for that immediate community and the wider scope often brought in today of Globalization and Global Warming and how these are related to a specific place, event, population and the environment socially, economically and ecologically.

Another factor to bring up is the psychological morale of strikers--what their emotions and hopes or despairs are in the current situation, what they look forward to being "happier about" if they win some ground, and what they risk "feeling alot worse about" if their demands are not meant, or only minimally.

Once you establish this "setting" s to speak, it becomes a series of decsisions on the writer's part which aspects they choose to handle in "close up"--how they want to frame within the frame individuals of groups of persons, how to show the interplay of conflicting forces--how a strike is also a form of street theater--with its own given rhetoric's, uses of signs, costumes, music, marches or standings--

Any form of strike or picketing today requires a discussion or presentation, even if very brief, of the issues at stake both in the specific site, and how this fits into a series of "pictures" national and international, since the globalized economy, as well the workers, are trying to balance a simultaneous fragmentation with an overwhelming force that tries to draw everything into tighter and tighter concentrated centralization's of funding and power.

Speaking of funding--what funds do the picketers draw on while on strike--how does this play into the length of time they have the ability to strike without hardships beginning? How does this effect the bargaining and negotiations?

A lot of strikes also got turned into songs and some into poems--so labor songs and union and protest songs are a another way of studying how to write of the events.

Since what is being undertaken is a collective event made up of many individual decisions, just going around interviewing people with the information one has is a good way to intermix the personal, subjective "human interest" aspects against the "greater picture and background" of the effort as a whole.

A lot of really good ways to get some ideas are to look for articles or books which have to do with strikes also in terms of issues which are both about the work place and larger issue--for example from Feminist history, Civil rights history, student protests and strikes, any kind of specific demography oriented action to see how a strike is handled in being written about when it is involving more than one issue--any strike may have several issues involved, of which the one in the workplace is but a way to focus al of them and set them all into movement as --a Movement.

The "street theater" aspect means that in writing of events such as picketing, one wants to, as do the strikers and their opponents, dramatize the issues and person, the sights, sounds, smells, situations. Since a strike and picketting are literally part of a sturggle for power and wages, for a future better than the present, drama practically leaps out as a method of approaching the writing. This doesn't mean necessarily "heightening" in a purple prose way, but the making use of even facts and figures as "characters" "playing apart in the action."

In that way, every sign, sound, interview, notation of how the time spent on the lines is spent and what is being discussed on site in terms of the "progress" or 'standstill" of the Movement's movements--al of these things became "players" on the stage, and one can use them in a wide variety of ways--

On the one hand, one is making a documentary, on the other, a dramatized version from one's subjective point of view. Finding the ways to have these work together and play them off each other is where the 'drama," the struggle of the writer" goes on.

The piece then is the drama combined of the writer's struggle to give the writing a form that the writer finds effective, and of the strike and pickets' struggle to find the most effective form for their expressions of their desires and demands to most effectively and completley as possible realize these.

The writer's struggle are one way of gving a sense of the drama of the street theater struggle as a dialectics, a point couterpoint, a contrapuntal compostion so to speak.

I hope soehwere here there's something a bituseful at least to start more ideas of your own and your students--

Oh--there's Dickens novel also about a strike--i read long ago, but pretty sure is called Hard Times.

It's very good as i recall, and not in the sentimental Dickensian style at all--until the very end,when it resorts to his proto-"Hollywood ending" tendency, which was also dictated by the nature in which the book appeared--as a serial, again if i recall correctly.

But then in a strike and picketing--one is after all hoping for a form of "living happily after" much older than a "Hollywood ending."

(And consider the effect that the writers' strikes have had on Hollywood--!)

On Thu, Jul 10, 2008 at 11:48 AM, Eireene Nealand <[redacted]> wrote:

> in just a few days the uc santa cruz workforce is going on strike and i'm trying to think about what to do with my students for the three days that we will be meeting on the picket lines.
>
> has anyone run into any ideas about how to do good political writing? and for this small moment, what small practical exercises students of varying engagements might engage in in order to connect with what they see and do there?
>
> there have been some good discussions amongst organizers and activists about what it feels good to shout: short truths. simple ones, sometimes with rhythm, but not necessarily so. bilingual shouting feels good somehow.
>
> but what ele?
>
> i want so much for all to go well
>
> here at this small strange universitiy with an illustrious history, and rapidly overtaking decline.
>
> eireene

↑ Index

119. Jeffrey Side
The End of the Internet by 2012?
Sat 12 Jul 2008

The following quote is from an article found here:
http://cultofthedeadfish.blogspot.com/2008/06/secret-plan-to-kill-internet-leaked.html
"ISPâ€™s have resolved to restrict the Internet to a TV-like subscription model where users will be forced to pay to visit selected corporate websites by 2012, while others will be blocked, according to a leaked report. Despite some people dismissing the story as a hoax, the wider plan to kill the traditional Internet and replace it with a regulated and controlled Internet 2 is manifestly provable."
TV news broadcasts about on matter:
http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=G5RQrxkGgCM&feature=related
and:
http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=6ctfGSdlSPw&feature=related
and:
http://winnipeg.indymedia.org/item.php?16677S
Barack Obama on the matter:
http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=g-mW1qccn8k&feature=related

↑ Index

120. Jeffrey Side
Save the internet
Sat 12 Jul 2008

From http://www.savetheinternet.com/
"Big phone and cable companies are trying to eliminate Net Neutrality, the principle that protects our ability go where we want and do what we choose online.More than 1.5 million SavetheInternet.com supporters are fighting to keep the Internet free and open for everyone."

↑ Index

121. David Buuck
BARGE @ Yerba Buena Center in SF, July 19-Oct 20
Sat 12 Jul 2008

My BARGE project BURIED TREASURE ISLAND opens this Saturday at YBCA as part of the Ground Scores exhibition, an off-site section of the Bay Area Now 5 show. 411 below. They'll be an online map and podcast, along with a downloadable guidebook as well - the site will be up and announced later this week. - DB Buried Treasure Island - BARGE (the Bay Area Research Group in Enviro-aesthetics) Given Treasure Island's long and complex history as an artificial staging ground for world's fairs, military bases, television shoots, and real estate speculation, as well as being an enormous landfill of dangerous and toxic substances, "Buried Treasure Island" attempts to unearth the secret histories of the site, and explore how the landscape is transformed not only by its usage, but also by what is elided from public view. Home to some of the most stunning views in the bay (but only if you turn your back on the island itself), Treasure Island remains a site full of hidden histories, presents, and possible futures. The work is presented in several overlapping iterations: installation, guidebook, self-guided tour, audio podcast, songs, performative bus tour, staged actions and photographs, and online. That some possible Treasure Island â€œitselfâ€ may be buried somewhere within the constellation of these versionings, between site and non-site, realities and representations, is a question that the work attempts to confront.

Opening Night party Sat July 19, 8pm-midnight
Yerba Buena Center for the Arts 701 Mission @ 3rd St
San Francisco

http://ban5.org/

↑ Index

122. Gloria Mindock

Cervena Barva Press announces a new chapbook by George Held

Sat 12 Jul 2008

Cervena Barva Press is pleased to announce the publication of "The News Today" by George Held

The News Today is George Held's second chapbook from Cervená Barva Press, the first being W Is for War (2006). His other poetry books include Beyond Renewal (2001) and the chapbooks Winged (1995), Salamander Love and Others (1998), Open & Shut (1999), Grounded (2005), The Art of Writing and Others (2007), and Phased (2008). Other books include the e-book American Poetry (2004), the art book Absolut Death & Others (2000) (with paintings by Roz Dimon), Martial Artist (2005) (translations of Martial's epigrams), and the anthology Touched by Eros (2002), which he edited. Held's poetry has appeared in more than a dozen anthologies, received five Pushcart Prize nominations, and been read by Garrison Keillor on The Writer's Almanac (NPR). He has co-edited The Ledge Poetry and Fiction Magazine since 1991. In addition, he served as a Fulbright lecturer in Czechoslovakia, 1973-76, and has been on the executive board of The South Fork Natural History Society and Museum (Bridgehampton, nce 1991.

NY) si

Order online at http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/cervenabooks.html

The News Today
by George Held
$7.00 + $3.00 S/H
33 pages, paper
Publication Date: July, 2008 For information contact:
Gloria Mindock
Cervena Barva Press, Somerville, MA
Email: [redacted]

Send me_____copies of "The News Today" Total enclosed: $_____
Name_____
Street_____
City_____State_____Zip_____
email_____Phone_____

↑ Index

123. Gloria Mindock

Cervena Barva Press announces a new chapbook by Mike Amado

Sat 12 Jul 2008

Cervena Barva Press is pleased to announce the publication of "Stunted Inner-child Shot the TV" by Mike Amado

"Crossing the intersections between media, militarization, and post-9/11 consciousness, Amado's Stunted Inner-child Shot the TV, gives us a view of the complicated relationship between society and self, consumerism and identity." -Edward J. Carvalho (Doctoral Candidate, Indiana University of Pennsylvania and author of solitary, poor, nasty, brutish and short)

"Take Mike Amado's red Morpheus pill and follow him down the rabbit hole of America's mad matrix of warped dreams, tabloid icons, chrome-eyed military men and infopreachers....His writing is elastic, vivid and wise. With a heart for an undetermined and undetermining God, Amado's revolution cannot be downloaded. It's amazing any of us make it out alive." -Lo Galluccio

Order online at http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/cervenabooks.html

Stunted Inner-child Shot the TV
by Mike Amado
$7.00 + $3.00 S/H
41 pages, paper

Publication Date: July, 2008 For information contact:
Gloria Mindock
Cervena Barva Press, Somerville, MA
Email: [redacted]

Send me_____copies of "Stunted Inner-child Shot the TV" Total enclosed: $_____
Name_____
Street_____
City_____State_____Zip_____ e-mail_____Phone_____

↑ Index

124. Jeffrey Side
Stop Virgin Campaign
Sun 13 Jul 2008

From:
http://stopvirgin.theloop.org.uk/

Virgin are out to destroy the World Wide Web. Virgin Media have recently announced that they don't care about net neutrality and are going to start controlling the quality of their users internet service, depending on whether the websites they are trying to access are paying Virgin a high premium or not. This means that if you say, went to the Virgin Media website, you would get a very fast speeds like any normal time you spend on the World Wide Web. But if you tried to access a website like YouTube that are not paying Virgin a fee, the website will load very slowly. So slow that you won't even feel like using that site, and may prefer to use another. Traffic Shaping like this is wrong. It gives Virgin the power to stop people accessing websites that they don't believe in. People may never be able to speak their mind on the internet again if the corporations that fund Virgin don't see fit. How does this effect me? Right now, the only people that will be effected by these money making tactics are Virgin Media customers. If we don't stop Virgin Now though, all other Internet Providers will see that they can get away with privatising their services too. The World Wide Web as it is now, is almost like a giant social network. People meet and share experiences on websites every day, but if Virgin have their way this will not be the case anymore. The World Wide Web as we know it will be gone forever. Will you be part of the generation that let the Web die? Find out what you can do to save the Web here: http://stopvirgin.theloop.org.uk/activism.html

↑ Index

125. Lewis Warsh
ABSOLUTELY EDEN by Bobbie Louise Hawkins
Sun 13 Jul 2008

New from UNITED ARTISTS BOOKS

ABSOLUTELY EDEN by Bobbie Louise Hawkins

89 pages

Cover photograph by Jane Dalrymple-Hollo

ISBN 0-935992-35-9

$14.00

A book of monologues written for a one-woman show that Hawkins performed in 2001 and 2002 at the Boulder Museum of Contemporary Art and Naropa University in Boulder, and at Joe's Pub in New York.

Bobbie Louise Hawkins was raised in West Texas, studied art in London (the Slade) and taught in British Honduras. She attended university in Tokyo (Jochi Dai Gaku), while acting on the stage and radio. She has published fifteen books of prose and poetry, including BIJOUX (Farfalla Press, 2006), THE SANGUINE BREAST OF MARGARET (North and South Press, London, 1992), MY OWN ALPHABET (Coffee House Press, 1989), and OWN YOUR BODY (Black Sparrow Press, 1973). She has received a fellowship in literature from the National Endowment for the Arts and has been teaching at the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics, in Boulder, Colorado, since 1987.

"Worldly and wise, sharp, alert to all human foibles, Bobbie Louise Hawkins gives us these observations in her familiar, wry and intimate tone. Like no one else, she brings us all home." Joanne Kyger

"Miss Hawkins is a superb impressionist as well as a salty prose writer of American miniatures, artful distillations of our humor and humanity." The New York Times

"Hawkins is keenly aware of the complicated vastness of even just one little human universe. Her writing participates in a tradition of American modernism in prose that achieves an almost hallucinatory precision.' The Vajradhatu Sun

Copies available from

SMALL PRESS DISTRIBUTION
1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley, Ca. 9471001409

UNITED ARTISTS BOOKS
114 W. 16th Street, 5C

New York, NY 10011
[redacted]
www.unitedartistsbooks.com

↑ Index

126. Dan Wilcox
Third Thursday Poetry Night: Alifair Skebe (Albany, NY)
Sun 13 Jul 2008

---

the Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Third Thursday Poetry Night

at
the Social Justice Center
33 Central Ave., Albany, NY

Thursday, July 17, 2008
7:00 sign up; 7:30 start

Featured Poet: Alifair Skebe

with open mic for community poets before & after the feature. $3.00 donation - suggested; more if you got it, less if you can't. Your monthly host: Dan Wilcox.

Alifair Skebe is the author of "El Agua Es la Sangre de la Tierra" (Finishing Line Press 2008), a long poem in English. The following poem is from her earlier chapbook, "Post Card: Les Lettres d'Amour".

Role Play #1: The Encounter

Shining noon sun not so hot that we tangle under cover,
the white sheets stained with sweat.
We play other games.
You become the egret in chase staid against swaying daffodils and monkey grass. A smile behind your beak, a tongue inside the mask. Peacock feathers form a hat of green winking eyes.
I don horned rim glasses and fray quills from a basket of eucalyptus. To pick the unpollened stamen leaves

a hollow vessel and hard tip, with ink we write out story.

##

↑ Index

127. ari banias
Uncalled-For Readings this Wednesday! = Funaro, Legaspi, Sanyal
Sun 13 Jul 2008

Uncalled-For Readings this Wednesday!

July Reading featuring

Maya Funaro
Joseph O. Legaspi
+
Ronica Sanyal

Wednesday July 16 2008 7:00 pm free

*

Unnameable Books can be found at 456 Bergen Street (between Flatbush Ave. & 5th Ave.) in Brooklyn, NY, one half block from the 2/3 at Bergen, or a short walk from 4/5/B/D/N/Q/R at Atlantic/Pacific.

Readings are held down one flight of stairs in the basement. Outside refreshments are welcome.

Reader bios + upcoming readings at:
uncalledforreadings.blogspot.com

↑ Index

128. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job
Sun 13 Jul 2008

David,

The sad fact is that since Ronald Reagan's busting of airline operators union, striking is dead in The United States. If a group strikes, most of the population will not even know what it is. Of course, globalization, the strategic weakness for labor it represents, also has something to do with it.

Of course, in the 19th century Europe, and also in the Algerian liberation movement, for instance, strikes had a different function from wresting specific concessions from the management. General strikes were strategic moves to bring a crisis to a boiling point, a destructive/creative function to achieve revolutionary change. There are very interesting movies inwhich the idea of strike in this second sense hovers over the whole action and takes place after the movie ends -or about to end- as a prophetic action. The Battle of Algiers is a great example of it in which, ironically, the commander of the French forces by his paramilitary methods is successful in eradicating the Algerian revolutionary cells, while the Algerian populace, in the ululating voices of its women, is developing a revolutionary consciousness. The epilogue of the movie refers to a general strike in the country which occurs "out of nowhere" a few years later and ends the French rule. A similar movie is Godard's *La Chinoise *where the humorless and slightly silly antiques of a Maoist cell composed mostly French teen age student intellectuals discussing (two of them practicing) general strikes, assasinations and political suicides anticipate the Paris student revolt of the following (?) year. Throughout the movie, the statement (I am paraphrasing) "Politics is the art of seeing clearly" is visible, written on the wall in the background.

Walter Benjamin's The Arcades Project has long sections on barricades and Husmann's efforts to fight them.

The United States puts this idea of strike on its head by an equally striking idea, "What is good for General Motors is good for the country." Consequently, today, the Midwest and General Motors are going together down the drain.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Jul 12, 2008 at 9:52 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear Eireene--
>
> I keep thinking of Eisenstein's classic film STRIKE--
> Eisenstein was very interested in/influenced by literature, including the study of Chinese ideograms.
> A study of a film like STRIKE is a guide to many forms of Modernist ways of presenting a strike in its various stages of development.
> Another useful guide from Eisenstein are his essays --among them for example, in FILM ESSAYS "The Method of Making Workers' Films, " "Lessons from Literature," "More thoughts on Structure" and esp "Perspectives."
>
> All of these are concerned with a dialectics of presenting the political clearly and at the same time not neglecting his very deep concerns with form.
>
> He uses often examples drawn from political life- such as orators and their differing uses of language, rhetorics, volumes and tones of voice, the uses of face and gesture to convey meanings and emotions, and how this is to be conveyed via the medium of film, which for him is drawn in many ways from writing and song.

Mayakovsky's "How are Verses Made" is also excellent in this regard--

(the drawback of especially the latter for students might be Mayakovsky's Communism--though Mayakovsky is every bit as flamboyant and fascinating charismatic a figure as Che--as you know--and so that might mitigate the circumstances of the ideology--who knows?

Actually there's some excellent reportage and writing on strikes and picket lines, which makes use of real and fictional persons, documentary materials in "News Reels" and subjective viewpoints in the "Camera Eye" sections--and the first hand experience of the author--in an American context--John Dos Passos' USA trilogy.

In the "Newsreels" Dos Passos combines popular songs of the time, newspaper headlines, faits divers, strange weather, a multitude of simultaneous "news items" in order to give a "movie" "take" on the events in which the characters are involved--among the most focused on being organizing and strikes, writing of reports and propaganda leaflets, and pamphlets explaining reasons for actions, as well as he provides many bios of Labor leaders and agitators which are very inspiring--people like Big Bill Heywood, etc--

The picketing and protests by millions around the world during the Sacco and Vanzetti Trials also plays a big part.

There are also a lot of Labor newspapers from various points of view that are easy to find and the Catholic Worker which often has very good reporter on picketing and strikes.

These give a kind of shorthand of how to present the reasons for the strike, the unions and companies involved, the major issue at stake for that immediate community and the wider scope often brought in today of Globalization and Global Warming and how these are related to a specific place, event, population and the environment socially, economically and ecologically.

Another factor to bring up is the psychological morale of strikers--what their emotions and hopes or despairs are in the current situation, what they look forward to being "happier about" if they win some ground, and what they

risk "feeling alot worse about" if their demands are not meant, or only minimally.

Once you establish this "setting" s to speak, it becomes a series of decsisions on the writer's part which aspects they choose to handle in "close up"--how they want to frame within the frame individuals of groups of persons, how to show the interplay of conflicting forces--how a strike is also a form of street theater--with its own given rhetoric's, uses of signs, costumes, music, marches or standings--

Any form of strike or picketing today requires a discussion or presentation, even if very brief, of the issues at stake both in the specific site, and how this fits into a series of "pictures" national and international, since the globalized economy, as well the workers, are trying to balance a simultaneous fragmentation with an overwhelming force that tries to draw everything into tighter and tighter concentrated centralization's of funding and power.

Speaking of funding--what funds do the picketers draw on while on strike--how does this play into the length of time they have the ability to strike without hardships beginning? How does this effect the bargaining and negotiations?

A lot of strikes also got turned into songs and some into poems--so labor songs and union and protest songs are a another way of studying how to write of the events.

Since what is being undertaken is a collective event made up of many individual decisions, just going around interviewing people with the information one has is a good way to intermix the personal, subjective "human interest" aspects against the "greater picture and background" of the effort as a whole.

A lot of really good ways to get some ideas are to look for articles or books which have to do with strikes also in terms of issues which are both about the work place and larger issue--for example from Feminist history, Civil rights history, student protests and strikes, any kind of specific demography oriented action to see how a strike is handled in being written about when it is involving more than one issue--any strike may have several issues involved, of which the one in the workplace is but a way to focus al

of them and set them all into movement as --a Movement.

The "street theater" aspect means that in writing of events such as picketing, one wants to, as do the strikers and their opponents, dramatize the issues and person, the sights, sounds, smells, situations. Since a strike and picketting are literally part of a sturggle for power and wages, for a future better than the present, drama practically leaps out as a method of approaching the writing. This doesn't mean necessarily "heightening" in a purple prose way, but the making use of even facts and figures as "characters" "playing apart in the action."

In that way, every sign, sound, interview, notation of how the time spent on the lines is spent and what is being discussed on site in terms of the "progress" or 'standstill" of the Movement's movements--al of these things became "players" on the stage, and one can use them in a wide variety of ways--

On the one hand, one is making a documentary, on the other, a dramatized version from one's subjective point of view. Finding the ways to have these work together and play them off each other is where the 'drama," the struggle of the writer" goes on.

The piece then is the drama combined of the writer's struggle to give the writing a form that the writer finds effective, and of the strike and pickets' struggle to find the most effective form for their expressions of their desires and demands to most effectively and completley as possible realize these.

The writer's struggle are one way of gving a sense of the drama of the street theater struggle as a dialectics, a point couterpoint, a contrapuntal compostion so to speak.

I hope soehwere here there's something a bituseful at least to start more ideas of your own and your students--

Oh--there's Dickens novel also about a strike--i read long ago, but pretty sure is called Hard Times.

It's very good as i recall, and not in the sentimental Dickensian style at all--until the very end,when it resorts to his proto-"Hollywood ending" tendency, which was also dictated by the nature in which the book appeared--as a serial, again if i recall correctly.

But then in a strike and picketing--one is after all hoping for a form of "living happily after" much older than a "Hollywood ending."

(And consider the effect that the writers' strikes have had on Hollywood--!)

On Thu, Jul 10, 2008 at 11:48 AM, Eireene Nealand <[redacted]> wrote:

in just a few days the uc santa cruz workforce is going on strike and i'm trying to think about what to do with my students for the three days that we will be meeting on the picket lines.

has anyone run into any ideas about how to do good political writing? and for this small moment, what small practical exercises students of varying engagements might engage in in order to connect with what they see and do there?

there have been some good discussions amongst organizers and activists about what it feels good to shout: short truths. simple ones, sometimes with rhythm, but not necessarily so. bilingual shouting feels good somehow.

but what ele?

i want so much for all to go well

here at this small strange universitiy with an illustrious history, and rapidly overtaking decline.

eireene

guidelines

↑ Index

129. Alison Croggon
SoundEye at Theatre Notes
Sun 13 Jul 2008

My report on SoundEye is now up on Theatre Notes at http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2008/07/meditations-on-soundeye.html

User warning: it's written for people who mostly know nothing at all about contemporary poetry.

Cheers

Alison

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

130. Alan Sondheim
Re: PERFORMANCE IN SECOND LIFE THIS WEDNESDAY - date correction (fwd)
Mon 14 Jul 2008

The DATE SHOULD BE the 16th this Wednesday, not the 6th - Apologies! - Alan

> PERFORMANCE IN SECOND LIFE THIS WEDNESDAY
>
> Sandy Baldwin and Alan Sondheim, PERFORMANCE IN SECOND LIFE as part of THE ACCIDENTAL ARTIST Exhibition
>
> We're doing Theatrical Performance to the Nth Degree: Avadrama > with scripts by Sandy Baldwin and Alan Sondheim, > using EXPERIMENTAL AVATAR BEHAVIORS AND TEXTS
>
> Wednesday, July 6th, at 4pm and 10pm Eastern (Daylight Savings)
> Time, US
>
> Please attend - and if you can't make it, check out
> THE ACCIDENTAL ARTIST Exhibition which changes almost daily!

↑ Index

131. Catherine Daly

UC Berkley: Poetry for the People Program

Mon 14 Jul 2008

Please Forward. Thanks!

Recruiting Student Teachers for June Jordan's Poetry for the People

The Poetry for the People Program (P4P) at UC Berkeley, founded by the late poet/essayist June Jordan, is in its seventeenth year. June Jordan founded the program with a vision of artistic and personal empowerment for students.

Our an annual large class is offered in the Spring semester. The program has two main components:

1.teaching the work of poets of color in their historical political contexts, both in and outside the US

2.workshopping student poems weekly, according to a rigorous set of guidelines developed by June, herself.

The course is taught by Student Teacher Poets or STPs. This group is generally made up mostly of undergraduates, but has often included some graduates, graduate students and non-students. The majority of STPs have taken the large P4P class, but others begin with an interest in teaching and go directly to the STP class. The STPs take a practicum class that begins in the Fall and continues throughout the year.

In addition to leading or co-leading a section of 7-12 students in the Spring, the STPs are responsible for choosing the majority of the readings for the large Spring class, developing the bulk of the lectures, and coordinating the final student recital, editing an anthology, and doing outreach visits to schools and community centers throughout the year. STPs also workshop each other's poetry.

The director facilitates the STP group throughout the year, and supervises their work, and the program coordinator takes care of program logistics. The director also sets the tone of the large class, delivers several lectures, and supports the STPs in their teaching and leadership.

The political and aesthetic groundings of the course come from June Jordan's own work--reflecting the tradition of women writers of color needing to bear witness to oppression, to speak what has been silenced, to speak truth to power, and to offer alternative visions of what the world can be. In this tradition, the personal is political, students are encouraged to give voice in their poetry to the most painful and difficult places in their lives, and to speak about the most difficult challenges in the world around us.

Due to the personally, politically, and academically intense nature of the course, the experience of P4P is powerful for all, and can be consuming for some, particularly younger students who are finding their poetic voice for the first time. Among the STP group, every year is different, depending on the personalities involved, but there is a tradition of healthy (and sometimes unhealthy!) conflict, as the group of STPs endeavor to take political and artistic leadership in the course. STPs have the opportunity for profound personal growth as they confront the power dynamics, leadership challenges and significant responsibilities of teaching.

P4P director Aya de Leon is recruiting additional STPs. These individuals may be undergraduate or graduate students at other campuses, or anyone with a strong commitment to writing and teaching poetry.

The STP course meets Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4-6PM throughout the year, and the P4P "big class" meets from 3-7PM in the Spring. STPs need to be available for all three classes, for registered students, this is a 12-unit load over two semesters. STUDENT TEACHING TIME COMMITMENT:

The STP course meets Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4-6PM throughout the year, and the P4P "big class" meets from 3-7PM in the Spring. STPs need to be available for all three classes, plus homework and occasional outside meetings. For registered students, this is a 12-unit load over two semesters.

These positions are not paid, but we can offer college credit to everyone.

How to get college credit for these classes:

*enroll via UC Berkeley in the courses (both undergraduate & grad programs)

*cross register from Mills College (both undergraduate & MFA)

*enroll via Berkeley City College (open to all & affordable!)

*enroll via UCB extension (open to all; a bit more costly)

*Student teach as an independent study at your college or university (grad or undergrad)

*Student teach as an independent study or field study placement with your low residency MFA program

All are invited to apply!

For info contact P4P Director Aya de Leon: [redacted]. edu

P4P Program History

After a decade of teaching at the university level and after a few years of joining the faculty at UC Berkeley, Professor June Jordan, one of the most published African American writers in history, founded, designed, cultivated and directed an unprecedented academic course and artistic movement: Poetry for the People.

Professor Jordan wrote, however, that "I did not wake up one morning ablaze with a coherent vision of Poetry for the People! The natural intermingling of my ideas and my observations as an educator, a poet, and the African-American daughter of poorly documented immigrants did not lead me to any limiting ideological perspectives or resolve. Poetry for the People is the arduous and happy outcome of practical, day-by-day, classroom failure and success."

In 1989, June Jordan began teaching in the African American Studies and Women's Studies Departments. She soon undertook the presentation of African American Poetry and Contemporary Women's Poetry. With both courses, she ensured that student writings occupied equal space and time, along with established poets, such as James Weldon Johnson or Adrienne Rich. Eventually, she decided to offer something called "Poetry for the People." So she raised funds from the African American Studies Department, the Dean of Interdisciplinary Studies, and the Department of English.

Her dream and vision was realized in 1991 when Professor Jordan officially established Poetry for the People. During its first semester, and every semester thereafter, the course attracted students from Freshmen to graduate students in their last year at Boalt Law School, men, women, African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, Arab Americans, Anglo Americans, gay, lesbian, straight, abled, disabled who could take this course in poetry without any prior writing experience.

June Jordan crafted Poetry for the People with three guiding principles in mind:

1.That students will not take themselves seriously unless we who teach them, honor and respect them in every practical way that we can.

2.That words can change the world and save our lives.

3.That poetry is the highest art and the most exacting service devoted to our most serious, and our most imaginative, deployment of verbs and nouns on behalf of whatever and whoever we cherish.

Professor Jordan's vision for the reading and writing of poetry stands out from other university poetry courses. In an interview with the Daily Californian on November 19, 1998, Professor Jordan stated that the goal of Poetry for the People "is to make audible the inaudible, and visible the invisible."

Then, after the success of the third semester of the program, a core of young poets wanted to make P4P a way of life. As a result, Professor Jordan decided to try and institute a course called "The Teaching and Writing of Poetry." Interested students would work closely with her and then they, in turn, would become teachers of other students. This practice continues today as undergraduates and graduate students are trained by the director to facilitate groups, lecture on various topics, and assume positions of leadership.

African American Studies 158A (fall) and 158B (spring) serve as this teaching practicum for STPs in the process of preparing to student teach the main introductory spring class, African American Studies 156AC, known as "The Big Class." The students in these courses conduct extensive research into the poetic traditions under consideration for the Big Class. Each student is required to give an in-class presentation on an assigned poetic tradition, in addition to an intensive examination of pedagogical issues. Much of the time in the spring is spent discussing teaching strategies, exploring solutions to pedagogical issues, and coordinating projects. The STPs also form and facilitate a poetry-writing group under the Director's leadership and complete all the assignments the students in the general class are given, in addition to certain specific exercises in poetic craftsmanship. This group of STPs also provides personnel for the various outreach programs and is encouraged to perform at community events and readings in the Bay Area.

The success of P4P is evidenced by the dozens of poetry programs across the country that are led by former P4P students and whose designs are based on the program. In 1995, after Professor Jordan and several of her students published June Jordan's Poetry for the People: A Revolutionary Blueprint through Routledge Press, hundreds of organizations throughout the country have adopted this blueprint not only as a reference but a guiding principle in their own poetry workshops and programs. Moreover, numerous former P4P students have been anthologized, published, and celebrated with prizes.

Thus, from its humble beginnings of around 15-20 students in 1991, to its height of over 130 student enrollment, the once-tenuous experiment of Poetry for the People has emerged a cultural institution on the UC Berkeley campus that has engendered dialogue and created connections across every conceivable line.

Professor Jordan has said, "Poetry has been falsely viewed as a province for privileged folks and for the extremely gifted. [But] poetry derives from an oral tradition throughout the world. It comes from the people and needs to be given back to the people."

Today, Poetry for the People is a fully accredited, three course sequence of classes wherein students present their work in an on-campus public poetry reading every semester and self-produce and then publish a professional anthology of their poems. In keeping with the university's goal of public education, Professor June Jordan expanded this program to many different Bay Area locations: Berkeley High School, Dublin Women's Prison, Glide Memorial Church, Mission Cultural Center, and Yerba Buena Center for the Arts.

Every poetry reading she helped organize was a standing room only affair — in mammoth campus spaces such as the Life Valley Science Building Lecture Halls, Lewis Hall, and Wheeler Auditorium.

In 2001, Professor June Jordan went on leave. However, given the student demand for the course and the popularity of the program, she was asked to name a successor. Selected by Professor Jordan, Junichi P. Semitsu directed the program until 2005. In 2005-06 P4P alum, Maiana Minahal was director. In fall 2006, the African American Studies department appointed community artist and activist Aya de Leon as director, and her appointment continues into its third year.

Aya de Leon continues in Jordan's tradition of reaching beyond university walls, developing programming at Berkeley High, B-Tech (Berkeley High's alternative/continuation school), Oakland Unified, Berkeley City College, Epic Arts, La Pena Cultural Center, and Richmond's Leadership Public School, as well as reaching out to Mills College, SF State, Foothill College, and other Bay Area schools to recruit students.

The Program has continued to bring countless "hot shot poets" to campus for readings to P4P students and the general public: Adrienne Rich, Ntozake Shange, Jimmy Santiago Baca, Joy Harjo, Sandra Cisneros, Juan Felipe Herrera, Bei Dao, Janice Mirikitani, Ruth Forman (a former P4P student), Marilyn Chin, Haas Mroue, Martin Espada, Cornelius Eady, Lorna Dee Cervantes, E. Ethelbert Miller, Sekou Sundiata, Kevin Young, Dennis Kim, Leroy Quintana, Li-Young Lee, Naomi Shihab Nye, Francisco Alarcon, Sara Miles, Donna Masini, Luis Rodriguez, Tyehimba Jess, Mohja Khaf — to name a few.

The current ever-evolving syllabus continues to extend to new cultural areas for further, broadening research and eventual curricular inclusion. Designed to constitute a one-semester crash course of world literacy in poems, the syllabus typically focuses on three distinct American cultures, which often rotate year after year. Our Spring 2008 semester focused on the poetry of African Americans, Arab and Arab Americans, Latina/os, Xicana/os, and the intersecting trajectories of these three groups in the United States and the Americas.

Professor Jordan passed away in June 2002. Thanks to her vision and the commitments of the African American Studies Department, UC Berkeley's Dean's office, and the sustained efforts of subsequent directors and student teachers to continue her legacy, the African American Studies 156AC course remains strong and alive. Indeed, the class continues to build a legacy as one of the most visible, vibrant, and energetic communities on the Berkeley campus, in continuing Dr. Martin Luther King's wish of a beloved community.

Aya de Leon
Director, June Jordan's Poetry for the People African American Studies Department
UC Berkeley

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

132. Caleb Cluff
Second Nature - call for papers
Mon 14 Jul 2008

Second Nature: Call for Papers and projects

Second Nature: The International Journal of Creative Media is an open access, peer-reviewed online journal auspiced by RMIT's School of Creative Media. Second Nature explores the distinctive particulars of and interconnections between textual, visual, aural and interactive creative research and practices.

The journal's editorial board seeks papers and online projects for its first issue.

As the journal is multiple-media in focus we welcome contributions from across the field of creative media including creative writers, media and art historians, media practitioners and fine artists, architects and architectural theorists and historians, curators, museum professionals, scientists, cultural and media theorists, archivists, technologists, software developers, educationalists, philosophers and any others who have a stake in the understanding and future developments of creative media. Projects might include web-based interactives, net-art, games, suites of 2D imagery, video and sound works, fiction, critical and non-fiction writing. Both projects and papers will be peer-reviewed.

Deadline:
30th August, 2008: Papers and projects

Issue 1. Role Models The inaugural issue of Second Nature will examine creative practice as a contested site of inscription. It will contest traditional concepts of the creator's role as one of 'writing' the world that, despite continual challenges to its hegemony, persists in the popular imagination. Whilst past challenges from cultural theorists have remained largely theoretical in approach, new developments in technologies and communications are rapidly changing the creative landscape. 'Creativity' and 'innovation' are seen as the drivers of future First World economies and the 'cultural industries' account for a substantial proportion of First World GNP. Ironically, less and less Government and corporate support seems to be available for independent, creative research.

Papers and projects addressing, but not limited to, some or all of the following questions are invited:

* Can traditional views of 'the creator' withstand these new developments? What role/s will the creative practitioner play in this changing cultural, economic, social and environmental landscape?

* What kinds of creative spaces and practices are available in an increasingly corporatised brand-driven world?

* How has the globalization of labour and markets affected the cultural and geographical specificity of creative output.

* What role will the academy play as a site of creative research?

* How will the romantic notion of the artist be redefined in the new globalism of the 21st century?

* Is it all about the market? Are other values driving the development of media and practices?

* How are new distribution channels affecting what becomes public, how it is consumed and how it is understood?

* What is the affect of user-generated media on traditional practices and distribution?

* Can crowd-sourcing, folksonomies and the wisdom of crowds replace the roles of gatekeeper, editor, curator, director etc?

* What affect has rise of intellectual protectionism and particularly the extension of copyright, trademarking and patenting opportunities had on practitioners and practice?

* How do the ambitions of 'research' apply to creative practice? Can practice be said to generate 'new' information (with its material overtones of quantifiability and universality), or is the information and understanding generated through producing, consuming and/or interacting with creative works of a completely different order?

* What are the problems of a 'too useful art'? In the rush to claim a use value for art (research questions based on empirical models; claims of art's/creativity's economic benefits), is there a risk of denigrating the idea of culture for culture's sake and of stifling necessary uncertainty within the creative process.

* Does a culture of user-generated content and democratic dissemination of cultural products weaken traditional institutions such as universities and museums? Or can it lead to a justification for 'high' or 'elite' cultures?

* Creativity and innovation are being touted as future drivers of First World economies, but what difference (if any) exists between the two? Can innovation be seen as the commodification of creative expression? And if so, does this spell danger for creative outcomes that don't have a pre-defined purpose?

* How has the hegemony and globalisation of culture affected creative expression within developing or politically 'weak' economies?

* Is the global market itself distorting the intentions as well as the outcomes of creative expression?

Completed papers should be no more than 10,000 words. Short articles (1500-3000 words) are warmly encouraged. Any images included must have Copyright clearance or be the intellectual property of the author/s. Deadline: August 30, 2008

Abstracts and papers should be submitted as Microsoft Word documents saved as .doc or .rtf.

Submitted projects must be formatted for viewing and interaction in a web browser. In exceptional cases projects may be presented to download (e.g as executable applications). Please contact the editor at the email address below if you would like to discuss suitable formats and file sizes.

Submissions and inquiries should be made to the editor Shiralee Saul
[redacted]

Forthcoming issues for 2009 include:
Amnesiac Culture will examine the complex issues surrounding personal and cultural memory.
Code Makers will examine contemporary understandings of reality as embodied information structures.

Caleb Cluff
Editorial committee, Second Nature.

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

133. mIEKAL aND
From Steve Kurtz: Thank You Letter to Supporters
Mon 14 Jul 2008

(Hard to believe he actually won the case, I still keep thinking the government will find another way to make his life even more miserable. ~mIEKAL)

July 12, 2008

Dear Supporters,

After four long, difficult years I have been released from my legal ordeal. I want to thank everyone who supported me through this—the greatest challenge I've ever had to face. I feel vindicated today because I am innocent, but today I am also humbled by a legal and political victory that is not mine alone. Everyone who contributed their support to this case can lay claim to a victory against the forces aiming to abridge our fundamental rights. I am mindful that my case was just one of many examples where fear and irrationality gained the upper hand after 9/11. I am aware that my vindication is an exception. I continue to have anxiety about the outcome of many pending cases still awaiting justice.

Although it seems that my case has come to a conclusion, it is only now that I can fully comprehend the immensity of what happened. The tragic death of Hope was a profound loss. The unfortunate events following Hope's death occurred at a moment of intense pain and sadness for all of us. Neither my life nor the work of Critical Art Ensemble has been the same without her. If she were here today, I know she would be proud of everything that has been done by all the people involved. Collectively, we stood without flinching, and defeated a monster of social injustice. Hope always said that we should "never surrender" to authoritarian power, and we didn't.

I was extremely fortunate to have a team of people immediately form a defense group at the very beginning, when I was still in shock. I want to thank the members of the CAE Defense Fund for coming to my defense from the beginning of the ordeal.

Throughout the past four years, so many people raised their voices in my defense, and that of my friend and co-defendant, Robert Ferrell. So many contributed time, energy, and resources. We could not have adequately defended ourselves without the labor and activism of thousands—individuals, groups, artists and activists. I am grateful to everyone who donated their work and talent to fundraisers for our legal defense. And although I cannot thank everyone by name, to all of you worldwide who helped organize fundraisers, letter writing campaigns, conferences, teach-ins, protests and other events, your actions made a real difference in this case.

To all my friends, thank you for helping me through my darkest hours.

To everyone, please accept my humble offer of thanks. I am grateful. I owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to all of you for seeing me through this terrible period.

Please remember also that this case was about so much more than just keeping me out of jail. This is a great legal and political victory that will affect many cases to come. Through its prosecution of this case, the Department of Justice was hoping to expand the most broadly written law on the books (mail fraud) into an all-encompassing Leviathan that could be used at its discretion against any citizen at any time. Not only did we prevent this dangerous expansion of the law, the precedent we set has narrowed it. Because of our collective effort, a bogus charge like the one targeting Bob and me is unlikely ever to happen again—and if it were to happen, any competent attorney could easily shoot it down.

What have I learned from my ordeal? I've learned that with tens of thousands of supporters, with hundreds of thousands of dollars, with one of the best legal teams in the US, with a crack media team, with a group of experienced fundraisers, with four years of one's life, and with total innocence, sometimes one can slice off a piece of American justice. Which in the end means: The overwhelming majority of people ain't gettin' justice, and we have to keep fighting until they do.

With Sincerity, Gratitude, and Appreciation,

Steven Kurtz

↑ Index

134. Michael Kelleher

Literary Buffalo Newsletter 07.14.08-07.20.08

Mon 14 Jul 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
07.14.08-07.20.08

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE GOING FAST!!

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane Satrapi,

Iran, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

WE ARE ALREADY 82% SOLD OUT FOR NEXT SEASON.

We expect to sell out next season by subscription. If we do not, tickets for individual events will go on sale September 1.

EVENTS THIS WEEK

07.16.08

Talking Leaves...Books
Lauren Fix
Signing for "Lauren Fix?s Guide to Loving Your Car: Everything You Need to Know to Take Charge of Your Car and Get on with Your Life"
Wednesday, July 16, 6 p.m.
Talking Leaves...Books, 951 Elmwood Ave.

&

Rooftop Poetry Club at Buffalo State College
Reading featuring Gabrielle Bouliane & Liz Mariani
Rooftop Garden, Butler Library, 7 pm
(Alternate location will be the International Student Reading area/signs will be posted if there is a location change).
If you are not a Buffalo State student/faculty member, please park in LOT X located behind Rockwell Hall.Ë‡

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can now subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilÃ¡, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

135. Dan Wilcox
Poets in the Park, July 19, Albany, NY
Mon 14 Jul 2008

The Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Poets in the Park, 2008:
Charlie Rossiter, Mimi Moriarty & Frank Desiderio July 19
Other readings scheduled for July 26 & August 2

Poets in the Park has been celebrating poetry in July at the Robert Burns statue in Washington Park, Albany, NY since 1989. The series, formerly run by the late Tom Nattell and now hosted by Dan Wilcox, will continue with readings on Saturdays, July 12 through August 2; the readings start at 7:00 PM and are free & open to the public; donations are accepted. This year the readings are also sponsored by the Hudson Valley Writers Guild.

The second reading in the series on July 19 will be by Charlie Rossiter, and a joint reading by Mimi Moriarty and her brother Frank Desiderio. Chicago poet Charlie Rossiter is a former NEA Fellowship recipient, a three-time Pushcart Prize nominee and hosts the audio website poetrypoetry.com. He is a member of the poetry performance group 3 Guys from Albany; his most recent book is "The Night We Danced with the Raelettes" (FootHills Publishing). Local poet Mimi Moriarty received her MFA in Creative Writing from Goddard College and is a board member of the Hudson Valley Writers Guild. Her poetry chapbook "War Psalm" was published by Finishing Line Press. California resident Frank Desiderio is a member of the Paulist Fathers and his poetry has appeared in The National Catholic Reporter, Prairie Messenger, The Bread of Life and Spring Hill Review. His poetry chapbook, "Digging for God", was published by Paulist Productions.

The schedule of the other readings is (note revised listing for July 26):
July 26: James Schlett & Kathryn Kelly
August 2: Susan Brennan & Philip Good

The Robert Burns statue is near where Henry Johnson Blvd. passes through Washington Park and crosses Hudson Ave. Please bring your own chairs or blankets to sit on. Rain dates for each event are the following Sunday, same time, same place.

This project is made possible in part through COMMUNITY ART$GRANTS, a program funded through the State and Local Partnership Program of the New York State Council on the arts, a State agency and the Arts Center of the Capital Region.

For more information contact Dan Wilcox, at [redacted]; [redacted].

####

↑ Index

136. Andreana Binder
Call for submissions--Fiction/Nonfiction/Art/Poetry
Mon 14 Jul 2008

The Sylvan Echo is now accepting original submissions of fiction, nonfiction, poetry and visual art for publication in the November issue. The deadline is October 18, 2008. Please see http://sylvanecho.net for submission guidelines. Include a brief bio with your submission. This issue has no theme.

Check out our latest issue at http://currentissue.sylvanecho.net.

↑ Index

137. patrick dunagan
July 20 - Canessa Gallery - Readings from Micah Ballard, Jeffrey Schrader, and Chad Sweeney
Mon 14 Jul 2008

CANESSA GALLERY READING SERIES curated by erica lewis
July 20, 2008
Featuring the works of Micah Ballard, Jeffrey Schrader, and Chad Sweeney

WHAT: How does where you are from influence your body of work? Please join us as poets Micah Ballard, Jeffrey Schrader, and Chad Sweeney ponder the meaning of "home" and bring the house down in this new edition of the Canessa Gallery reading series.

Micah Ballard is co-editor, with Sunnylyn Thibodeaux, of Auguste Press. Recent books include: Bettina Coffin (Red Ant), Emblematic (Old Gold), Darrell (Blue Press), Evangeline Downs (Ugly Duckling Press), and Parish Krewes (forthcoming, Bootstrap Productions). From 2000-08 he directed the Humanities Program at New College of California. Currently, he works for the MFA in Writing program at the University of San Francisco.

Jeffrey Schrader has been involved in the Uglyman Collective, Another Publishing, Cricket Online Review & many other do-it-yourself failures & experiments. To date, the finest job he ever held was as a bicycle messenger for an urban ecology non-profit that successfully reduced the number of single-passenger vehicles driven in various Bay Area communities. He lives with Sherri and Milena at the edge of downtown Oakland's current gentrification project. Chapbooks include Speak at Every Hazard and The Man at the Other End of the Bench; grid/pattern is forthcoming from Erg. He's currently working on a window garden of carnivorous plants and the regular mechanics of 1970s era single-speed bicycles.

Chad Sweeney is co-editor of Parthenon West Review and is the author of An Architecture (BlazeVOX, 2007), Arranging the Blaze (Anhinga, 2009), and A Mirror to Shatter the Hammer (Tarpaulin Sky, 2006). Chosen for Best American Poetry 2008 by Charles Wright, Sweeney's work has appeared in New American Writing, Verse, Colorado Review, Barrow Street, Crazyhorse, Black Warrior, Denver Qtly, American Letters & Commentary, and others. Sweeney will enter the Ph.D. program in literature/poetry at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo this fall.

WHEN:
Sunday, July 20, 2pm

WHERE:
Canessa Galley
708 Montgomery Street, SF

↑ Index

138. Mary Jo Malo

Re: Steve Dalachinsky featured in "Forward"

Mon 14 Jul 2008

Inspired by Jazz, a Poet Does 'His Own Thing' by Matthue Roth

http://www.forward.com/articles/13726/

Mary Jo Malo
--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

139. David Chirot

Pessoa-Aleister Crowley Letters--30 Family or National Treasure trunks & "cultural property" debate in Portugal--(NY Times article)

Tue 15 Jul 2008

---

*ARTS / ART & DESIGN * | July 15, 2008
* Abroad: Portugal Holds on to Words Few Can Grasp <http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/15/arts/design/15abroad.html?ex=1216785600&en=b4ccdbc5e7540526&ei=5070&emc=eta1>
*
By MICHAEL KIMMELMAN
The latest brouhaha involving cultural property is unfolding in Lisbon — and not, for a change, over stolen vases or precious war booty, but a poet's correspondence.

An amazing fact emerges--that there are 30 trunks of Pessoa's writings to be gone through, poured over, in search of Treasure.

How many more heteronyms may yet emerge from these receptacles of "as yet unknown writings"?

Are families related to the heteronyms of a writer? Is a culture?

↑ Index

140. Barry Schwabsky
Pessoa
Tue 15 Jul 2008

Fascinating piece on Fernando Pessoa in today's Times:
http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/15/arts/design/15abroad.html?th&emc=th

↑ Index

141. Jennifer Karmin
SUBMISSIONS: Call for videopoems
Tue 15 Jul 2008

SEE THE VOICE: Visible Verse 2008 call for videopoems

Pacific Cinémathèque and curator Heather Haley are seeking videopoem submissions from around the world for the annual Visible Verse screening and performance poetry celebration, Nov. 6, 2008. Visible Verse is North America's sustaining venue for the presentation of new and artistically significant videopoetry.

Official guidelines:

*Visible Verse seeks videopoems, with a 15 minutes maximum duration.

*Either official language of Canada is acceptable, though if the video is in French, an English-dubbed or-subtitled version is required for consideration. Videos may originate in any part of the world, however.

*Pieces will be judged on true literary merit. The ideal videopoem is a wedding of word and image, the voice seen as well as heard.

*Please, do not send documentaries, as they are outside the featured genre.

*Videopoem producers should provide a brief bio, full name, and contact information in a cover letter. There is no official application form nor entry fee.

*Submission deadline is 1 September, 2008. Send, at your own risk, videopoems and poetry films/preview copies (which cannot be returned) in DVD format to: VISIBLE VERSE c/o Pacific Cinémathèque, 200--1131 Howe Street, Vancouver, BC, V6Z 2L7, Canada. Selected artists will be notified by 1 October, 2008 and receive a screening fee.

For more information contact Heather Haley, [redacted]

Vancouver's Pacific Cinémathèque Pacifique, a not-for-profit society dedicated to the understanding of film and moving images.
http://www.cinematheque.bc.ca

↑ Index

142. Chad Sweeney

Joe Milford Poetry Show w/guest Chad Sweeney/Sat. July 19

Tue 15 Jul 2008

Hi all, I'll be on the Joe Milford Poetry Show this Saturday at 5PM Eastern Time for about 90 minutes, talking with Joe and reading from my recent book on BlazeVox, AN ARCHITECTURE, and some Farsi translations and other projects.
Cheers, CS

From Joe: The Joe Milford Poetry Show seeks to record, archive, and present readings from the sharpest minds in poetics today. Every week the Joe Milford Poetry show hosts poets from around the country in a live format via Blogtalk Radio. In tandem with the Jane Crown Show, the Joe Milford Radio Show can be found at janecrown.com or at ttp://www.blogtalkradio.com/search/Joe+MIlford. Go to janecrown.com especially for archived readings and interviews with renowned poets such as Donald Revell, Didi Menendez, Bob Hicok, Rae Armantrout, and Stephen Dunn, just to name a few.

Chad Sweeney edits Parthenon West Review with his buddy David Holler, and is the author of An Architecture (BlazeVOX, 2007), Arranging the Blaze (Anhinga, 2009) and A Mirror to Shatter the Hammer (Tarpaulin Sky, 2006). Chosen for Best American Poetry 2008 by Charles Wright, Sweeney's poems and translations have appeared in New American Writing, Verse, Colorado Review, Slope, Crazyhorse, Black Warrior, Coconut, Barrow Street, Denver Qtly, American Letters & Commentary, Interim, Forklift, and elsewhere. With Mojdeh Marashi, he translated a book of Iranian poetry, Arghavaan, Selected Poems of H.E. Sayeh for which he was awarded a grant from the San Francisco Arts Commission. Sweeney taught for the San Francisco WritersCorps for seven years, leading poetry workshops with inner-city “at risk” youth and newly arrived teenagers from Central America, Asia and the Middle East. He’s currently editing an anthology of teacher poetry and prose from the first 15 years of the National WritersCorps (title pending), which will be released by City Lights Books at AWP next February. He earned an MFA from San Francisco State University and will enter the Ph.D. program in literature/poetry at Western Michigan University this September, with his beloved partner by his side, poet Jennifer K. Sweeney.

↑ Index

143. amy king

History Keeps Me Awake at Night: A Genealogy of Wojnarowicz -- Tomorrow Night

Tue 15 Jul 2008

History Keeps Me Awake at Night: A Genealogy of Wojnarowicz July 10 - August 22, 2008

P * P * O * W
Pilkington - Olsoff Fine Arts, Inc.
555 W. 25th Street - New York, NY 10001

Artists Participating:

Sadie Benning
Michael Bilsborough
Shannon Ebner
Mike Estabrook
Brendan Fowler
William E. Jones
Lovett/Codagnone
Keith Mayerson
Ryan McGinley
Frederic Moffet
Henrik Olesen
Adam Putnam
David Ratcliff

Emily Roysdon
Zoe Strauss
Wolfgang Tillmans
Carrie Mae Weems
Matt Wolf
David Wojnarowicz

Reading and film screening -- Thursday, July 17th, 6 - 9 p.m.

Zachary German
Amy King
Sara Marcus
Max Steele

Organized by Photi Giovanis

http://ppowgallery.com/exhibitions/future/future.html

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

144. Stephen Vincent
The Archive as an Art (Pessoa et al)
Tue 15 Jul 2008

Because I think we (working or once working poets) are surrounded by stuff (archives), I am wondering about the art of either keeping or killing portions of it and (if it goes anywhere) what may be appropriate ways to either draw attention or limit its use.

Fundamentally my question is who determines - or who is in the best postion to determine what may be the ultimate critical/biographical etc. value of a poet's stuff. Are poets in a position to say what in their entire archive (books, correspondence (from love or hate letters, to critcial discussions with peers. distant relatives), manuscripts and revisions, desks, tennis shoes, etc. Do we or our executors, for example, have the right to make correspondence from otthers part of a library's public record.

Why is it worth while to see Ginsberg's tennis shoes. Or, does it become worthwhile if there is diary entry in which Corso or Burroughs advises G to buy X brand of shoe and why. This info may feed the person who is writing an anecdote filled biography, perhaps, so the shoe is essential, perhaps, as a way of getting to use, aesthetic and a tangible sense of comraderie.

Is there any written 'code of established, ethical, etc. conduct here. Or, like the art world, are literary archives a wilderness unto themselves. The way they get organized (or don't), the ways they are acquired, or the ways in which they are assembled and sold quite various, depending on a mix of interests/values of the acquiring institution and those of the author or his heirs.

On one extreme some folks will give everything up (valuable to potentially embarassing) and let future 'scholarly' hands shape history out of the dispersal. While others will do everything they can to carefully how they are received by the critics of the future.

The way a poet (and/or his executors) provide an archive to a library strikes me as potentially as artful as the construction of the original work and shape of the career. Somewhat similarly, a Library can take that archive and organize and present its contents according to a value system that may be totally at odds with poet. (Will Ginsberg's ever look at home at Stanford - that Protestant mecca of the West. Columbia U or NY Public Library's eternal loss??)

I used to watch Ed Dorn sit in The Pub (corner of Masonic and Geary in San Francisco) as he would take out his pen and make drawings, or jot down a phrase or two on a partially wet napkin. He could do a pretty good caricature of a parody of a cowboy. (He was finishing up the Gunslinger at the time. (1975 or so). I forget if he kept those sketches. I hope they remain in his archive. Definitely good 'period pieces'.

Some summer thinking here,

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog

↑ Index

145. Kyle Schlesinger
New from Cuneiform: 3 by Ted Greenwald
Tue 15 Jul 2008

Cuneiform is pleased to announce the publication of 3, Ted Greenwald's latest masterpiece.

Poet Ron Padgett writes: Ted Greenwald's 3 takes the mind in at least three different directions simultaneously, in hardboiled, richly detailed, well-made poems whose giddy wordplay, pantoum-like interweavings, and nimble jumpcuts create a sort of 21st-century Poet in New York. An inspired challenge and a delight.

Filmmaker Nathanial Dorsky writes: Within this selection of three works, we come upon the most unusual, if not revolutionary moment in the universe called Ted Greenwald. Suddenly the risk of self as such takes place. Though his poetry always bares the honest song of a fragmented accumulation, the float of our existence, here Ted reveals an exposition of tender, romantic suchness amidst rhythmic refrains classically structured and filled with sunlight and place, the vulnerable underbelly of his Arcadian being is unveiled.

And poet Tom Raworth reminds us to "Just read the fucking book."

The cover was designed by typographic aficionado Rich Kegler of P22. Trade paperbacks are $15 (plus $2.50 domestic shipping) and the lettered and signed hardcovers are available for $50 (plus $2.50 domestic shipping). Both editions are distributed by our friends at Small Press Distribution www.spdbooks.org or direct from www.cuneiformpress.com.

Other recent books from Cuneiform include: Bill Berkson's Sudden Address; Ron Silliman's Woundwood; Gregg Biglieri's Sleepy with Democracy; Dan Featherston's Clockmaker's Memoir; and Ted Greenwald and Hal Saulson's collaboration Two Wrongs. All are available from SPD www.spdbooks.org or direct from Cuneiform at www.cuneiformpress.com.

More at: http://cuneiformpress.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

146. Sam Ladkin
Fwd: THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS
Wed 16 Jul 2008

News of an exciting new book out. Congratulations to Jeff Hilson for making it occur.

Best,
Sam

> Reply-To: Ken Edwards <[redacted]>
>
> THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS IS OUT!
>
> Not just another modern sonnet anthology - THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS delves more thoroughly than ever before into the myriad ways poets have stretched, deconstructed and re-composed the venerable form: here we have free-verse sonnets, prose sonnets, offbeat takes on the sonnet tradition, and even visual and concrete > sonnets. We take as our time frame 1945 to the 21st century, with 84 poets ranging from Edwin Denby (b. 1903) to those currently in their twenties, from the UK, the USA, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

>
> In his introductory essay Jeff Hilson, the editor, speaking of Ted Berrigan's regeneration of the form, writes: 'It also registers something of a paradox, announcing the sonnet as an impossibility whilst demonstrating its continued vitality, not unlike Beckett's "I can't go on, I'll go on."'
>
> ISBN 978 1874400 39 4 360pp price: £15
>
> JEFF HILSON co-runs the Crossing the Line reading series in London and is senior lecturer in Creative Writing at Roehampton University.
>
> For a full list of contributors and other details go to www.reality street.co.uk
>
> To order a copy for £15 sterling post free (strictly limited offer), please reply to this email with your full name and postal address, and we will email you an invoice via PayPal – when you click on the link you will be able to pay securely with your credit or debit card, or through PayPal.
>
> (Reality Street Supporters signed up for the 2007 scheme will be receiving their copy shortly, as will all contributors to the anthology.)
>
> Ken Edwards
> Reality Street Editions
> 63 All Saints Street
> Hastings, East Sussex TN34 3BN
>
> www.realitystreet.co.uk

↑ Index

147. Joan Houlihan

Invitation to the Colrain Poetry Manuscript Conference

Wed 16 Jul 2008

Dear Poet,

As you may have heard, the Colrain Poetry Manuscript Conference, designed for poets with a book-length manuscript, has been a tremendous success, drawing accomplished poets from all over the country and overseas. This conference has been created for poets who are either ready to publish a book-length (or chapbook-length) manuscript or who feel they need a reality check on their current manuscript-in-progress. Since our first conference, in March of 2006, over 20 poets have had their manuscripts accepted for publication. Colrain publication news is found here <http://www.colrainpoetry.com/omnis-news.htm> .

On August 22, 2008, the thirteenth group of poets will meet in Colrain, Massachusetts. The conference will last three days and includes Jeffrey Levine, editor and publisher of Tupelo Press, Jeffrey Shotts, poetry editor of Graywolf Press, Frederick Marchant, Director of the Suffolk University Creative Writing Program and Joan Houlihan, conference founder and Director of Concord Poetry Center.

Complete information and application can be found here:

http://www.colrainpoetry.com/August

The Colrain Poetry Manuscript conference is designed to place poets on a realistic path toward book publication. If you feel you have a manuscript ready for publication, if you have received a rejection and don't know why, if your manuscript has achieved finalist or semi-finalist standing in a contest, or if you simply want to gain an understanding of how publishers and editors work behind the scenes before submitting your manuscript, then this conference is for you.

I hope you will join us!

Best Wishes,

Joan Houlihan, Founder & Director
Concord Poetry Center & Colrain Conferences
40 Stow Street
Concord, MA 01742
[redacted]

Attendees say:

"The Colrain Manuscript Conference managed to pack into a weekend what a lot of grad school teachers never had time to do in their classes or individually: offer finishing touches to a manuscript eager to be picked up by a publisher."
Steve Fellner, Brockport, NY

"...It was a goldmine for me especially, removed as I am from the academic world and from a community of serious poets."
LouAnn Muhm, Park Rapids, MN, Teacher, Creative Writing

"...extremely helpful to hear responses to the other manuscripts. I learned as much or more from the critiques of others' manuscripts as I did from the critique of mine." Mary Crow, Fort Collins, CO, Poet Laureate of Colorado

" Attending the Colrain Manuscript Conference was undoubtedly the most profound poetry experience I've ever had. What I learned in forty-eight hours will be with me for years to come." Tracy Kroetsky, Berkley, CA

"...My consultation completely changed the way I view the manuscript. There is nothing like what you are providing. Kudos!" Dawn Fewkes, Horseheads, NY

"...The Colrain conference was everything I'd hoped it would be and more. I feel well on my way, now, to a publishable manuscript." Pat Lowry Collins, MA

and MORE <http://www.colrainpoetry.com/omnis-comments.htm> .

This message was sent to [redacted] by the Colrain Poetry Manuscript Conference. If you wish to leave our mailing list, click on the link at the very bottom of this message.

To Unsubscribe from this mailing list, click:
55-4185-4DFF-B331-DD59C4E50229
C55-4185-4DFF-B331-DD59C4E50229>

↑ Index

148. Fulcrum Annual unpublished Beckett, Frost, Paz in Fulcrum 6

Wed 16 Jul 2008

FULCRUM #6 (730 pages) features unpublished Beckett, Frost, Paz; spotlights "Poetry and Myth," debate between Kisnella and Warren, translations of Seferis, Vian, Quevedo and much else

Issue # 6 of the acclaimed literary annual, FULCRUM, features previously unpublished and uncollected writing by Samuel Beckett, Robert Frost and Octavio Paz; original scholarship on "Samuel Beckett as Poet" by Christopher Ricks, Eliot Weinberger, Marjorie Perloff and others; a special section on "Poetry and Myth"; a debate between poets John Kinsella and Rosanna Warren; translations of poetry by George Seferis, Boris Vian and Francisco de Quevedo; a great deal of outstanding current poetry and literary criticism; and visual art.

The "Samuel Beckett as Poet" feature, edited by Philip Nikolayev, presents Beckettâ€™s neglected masterpiece "Ceiling" and other uncollected and unpublished poems, essays by Christopher Ricks, Jean-Michel RabatÃ©, Marjorie Perloff, Eliot Weinberger, Simon Critchley, Anne Atik, S.E. Gontarski and others, life drawings of Beckett by Avigdor Arikha, and a previously unpublished conversation between Octavio Paz and Eliot Weinberger on Beckett. A number of the essays quote Beckettâ€™s unpublished correspondence and manuscripts.

FULCRUM # 6 also presents previously unpublished lectures by Robert Frost from ("The Claims of Poetry," "The Most Dangerous Phrase in America," and "The Natural and Supernatural Bounds of Science"), transcribed with annotation and commentary by Frost scholar James Sitar.

Poets published in FULCRUM #6 include Landis Everson, Alexei Tsvetkov, George Seferisâ€™s long poem Thrush (translated by George Kalogeris), Boris Vian (translated by Raymond Federman), Francisco de Quevedo (translated with an introduction by Christopher Johnson), John Kinsella, Rosanna Warren, W. N. Herbert, Jeet Thayil, Geraldine Monk, Alan Halsey, Peter Riley, and a great many others.

The special "Poetry and Myth" section, edited by Cliff Forshaw and David Kennedy, presents a variety of essays and poems on the subject.

"FULCRUM has in only a few years established itself as a must-read journal, a unique annual of literary and intellectual substance positioned on the cutting edge of culture."--Billy Collins

"FULCRUM serves as a primary resource for anyone interested in diverse poetic practices not only from these States, but also from around our trembling globe."--Michael Palmer

FULCRUM #6 is 730 pages long and offered at an artificially low price. Please visit http://fulcrumpoetry.com for more information or to acquire a copy.

↑ Index

149. David Chirot

The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Wed 16 Jul 2008

---

*ARTS / ART & DESIGN * | July 13, 2008
 * Art: The Image Is Familiar; the Pitch Isn't
<http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/13/arts/design/13fine.html?ex=1216872000&en=1b778806477a19e6&ei=5070&emc=eta1>
*
 By MIA FINEMAN
 Artists have appropriated images from advertising for decades. What happens when the tables are turned?

Conceptually, the artist's appropriation of an already existing image is, in theory at least, seen as "a critique of originality."

Yet when a corporation--or another artist--appropriates the "non-original" art of appropriation-- the "death of the author" turns out to have been instead a playing at possum, playing possum, as the "Non-original artist" wakes from her slumber and claims the appropriated "non-original" work as being, in fact, a work of originality that needs to be protected from the marauding of "corporate raiders."

In a potentially endless series of art-advertising-art-advertising appropriations and re-appropriations begetting unto the indefinite, open-ended generation repetitions of the same as a difference which becomes another difference which is at the same time "apparently" the same-- what is produced, ironically, is undying desire for originality, to be "original," and to have created the "original work," to have had "the original idea."

A Conceptual advertisement and promotion of "non-originality" when confronted with advertising's use of one's advertisements of "non-originality" reveals "the fear of death, of an anonymous, unmarked grave" that "re-animates" the "dead author" of "non-originality" into a desperate assertion of being, after all, both very alive and very original.

The "critique of the self" and of "originality," it turns out, are acceptable conceptually, but not at the level of "property relations."

A Conceptual "non-self non-original artist//writer" literally "materializes" in the claim to a property which is "mine." A property it turns out, that possesses an "originality" "belonging to ME."

In Emerson's Nature, the poet sees "a property in the landscape which does not belong to this or that farmer. The "property" that the poet sees is not an object or a concept-as-object which can be owned, like Robert Smithson's Art of Looking, in which the artist''s glance creates works which are real as any object, yet refuse to be locked into the prison of being a "property," and object, which can be owned, The "originality" of a poet, an artist, is an activity in time which cannot be embodied in time, as in an object that can be owned.

The paradoxical situation of the non-original appropriating artist/writer faced with the appropriation of her non-original object, discovers that their conceptions and identity have become imprisoned in the object. Having dispensed with an "original self," the artist of appropriation is faced with being an appropriated "non-original self," which is threatened with the "death of the author" indeed when its "objectification" in the work is in danger of being appropriated into an advertisement for products belonging to someone else.

Instead of being an Artist/Poet of Looking who sees that property in the landscape belonging to no one, , the "non-original" artist/writer has become a property in the landscape which can be owned by anyone else, and so has to fight to be recognized as in themselves being a property, and indeed, an "original and living Artist, Poet, " with a claim to those objects which are not so much simply "belonging to ME,""made by ME," but are in a sense actually "Me," "Me" as a piece of property.

And paradoxically finding "Me" locked in a court case or media battle to prove that after all, one DOES exist, that one does "posses" the "property of originality" as a "being Me, an Original and Living Me," instead of simply an object which "doesn't belong to anyone" and so can be claimed by anyone as their "personal property."

↑ Index

150. Brian Clements

Sentence/Firewheel Announcement

Wed 16 Jul 2008

Firewheel Editions announces the inaugural Sentence Book Award and the return of the Firewheel Chapbook Award.

The Firewheel Chapbook Award is given to a collection of no more than 20 manuscript pages in any genre. Preference is for innovative work (liberally interpreted), work that crosses genres, work that combines images and text, work in formats other than the traditionally bound book, or work that may have difficulty finding publication elsewhere due to the nature, typography, or format of the work. The recipient of the award will receive 50 copies out of a limited edition. Entry fee: $15 by check to Firewheel Editions or by PayPal at http://firewheel-editions.org. Checks and submissions may be mailed to Firewheel Chapbook Award, Box 7, WCSU, 181 White St., Danbury, CT 06810. Electronic submissions may be sent to [redacted]. Postmark/Timestamp Deadline for submissions and fees: September 29, 2008, 11:59 pm PST.

The Sentence Book Award will be given to a book-length manuscript of prose poems or a book-length manuscript consisting substantially of prose poems (for example, a book that is half prose poems and half free-verse, or a book-length sequence that mixes passages of prose poetry with other modes). The recipient of the award will receive publication in a trade paper edition with a standard royalty contract and 50 copies of the book. All entrants will receive Sentence #6 (entrants who are already subscribers will have their subscription extended by one issue). Entry fee: $25 by check to Firewheel Editions or by PayPal at http://firewheel-editions.org. Checks and submissions may be mailed to Sentence Book Award, Box 7, WCSU, 181 White St., Danbury, CT 06810. Electronic submissions may be sent to [redacted]. Postmark/Timestamp Deadline for submissions and fees: November 17, 2008, 11:59 pm PST.

Firewheel Editions subscribes to the CLMP Code of Ethics: "CLMP's community of independent literary publishers believes that ethical contests serve our shared goal: to connect writers and readers by publishing exceptional writing. We believe that intent to act ethically, clarity of guidelines, and transparency of process form the foundation of an ethical contest. To that end, we agree to 1) conduct our contests as ethically as possible and to address any unethical behavior on the part of our readers, judges, or editors; 2) to provide clear and specific contest guidelines defining conflict of interest for all parties involved; and 3) to make the mechanics of our selection process available to the public. This Code recognizes that different contest models produce different results, but that each model can be run ethically. We have adopted this Code to reinforce our integrity and dedication as a publishing community and to ensure that our contests contribute to a vibrant literary heritage."

The recipient of the Sentence Award will be selected by Brian Clements, Editor of Sentence and Firewheel Editions; the recipient of the Firewheel Chapbook Award will be selected by Brian Clements and Michael Puttonen, Design Editor for Firewheel Editions. In the event that no recipient is chosen for either award, entry fees will be returned to all of the award?s entrants. Authors who have published a chapbook or book with Firewheel Editions, authors who have served on the Board of Contributing Editors of Sentence, graduate or undergraduate students of Brian Clements, and all past and current staff members of Sentence and Firewheel Editions are ineligible. All manuscripts will come to the editors anonymously after screening and preparation by Firewheel staff.

Submission guidelines:
· Chapbook Award entrants must explain any special production requirements for their projects in the cover letter.
· All entrants must provide email address or SASE for Award results.

· Unless SASE with sufficient postage for return is included, manuscripts will be recycled. · Multiple submissions are acceptable with an entry fee for each submission. · Translations are acceptable with proof of permission to publish translations. · Electronic submissions must be sent as a single attachment in .rtf (preferred for text-only submissions), .doc, or .pdf format. · All submitted manuscripts must include a one-page cover with author?s name, title, author?s email address, and name of Award (Chapbook or Sentence); also include a second title page with title only. · The author?s name should be recognizable nowhere in the manuscript other than on the cover page.

For more information on Sentence and Firewheel Editions, visit http://firewheel-editions.org or email [redacted]

↑ Index

151. Halvard Johnson

Second call! Submissions requested for a third Big Bridge anthology

Wed 16 Jul 2008

Friends and neighbors--

For a third mini-anthology of poems, this time inspired by / responding to / related to Barbara Guest's poem "Eating Chocolate Ice Cream: Reading Mayakovsky" and/or the various wars/insurgencies/etc. going on in the world today, please send 1-6 poems and a brief bio to me at [redacted] with the words "Big Bridge" followed by your own name clearly in the subject line. Please, when sending attachments, send all poems in a single attachment.

Also include a photo if you'd care to have one used.

This mini-anthology will appear in the January 2009 issue of Big Bridge, and work received before the end of November 2008 will be considered. The current mini-anthology can be found at http://www.bigbridge.org/WAR-PAP.HTM.

HJ

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

====

Eating Chocolate Ice Cream: Reading Mayakovsky

Since I've decided to revolutionize my life since
"
decided
"

revolutionize
"
life
"

How early it is! It is eight o'clock in the morning.
Well, the pigeons were up earlier
Did you eat all your eggs?
Now we shall go for a long walk.
Now? There is too much winter.
I am going to admire the snow on your coat.
Time for hot soup, already?
You have worked for three solid hours.
I have written forty-eight, no forty-nine,
no fifty-one poems.
How many states are there?
I cannot remember what is uniting America.
It is then time for your nap.
What a lovely, pleasant dream I just had.
But I like waking up better.
I do admire reality like snow on my coat.
Would you take cream or lemon in your tea?
No sugar?
And no cigarettes.
Daytime is good, but evening is better.
I do like our evening discussions.
Yesterday we talked about Kant.
Today let's think about Hegel.
In another week we shall have reached Marx.
Goody.
Life is a joy if one has industrious hands.
Supper? Stew and well-cooked. Delicious.
Well, perhaps just one more glass of milk.
Nine o'clock! Bath time!
Soap and a clean rough towel.
Bedtime!
The Red Army is marching tonight.
They shall march through my dreams in their new shiny leather boots, their freshly laundered shirts.
All those ugly stains of caviar and champagne and kisses

have been rubbed away.
They are going to the barracks.
They are answering hundreds of pink and yellow and blue and white telephones.
How happy and contented and well-fed they look lounging on their fur divans, chanting "Russia how kind you are to us.
How kind you are to everybody.
We want to live forever."
Before I wake up they will throw away their pistols, and magically factories will spring up where once there was rifle fire, a roulette factory, where once a body fell from an open window.
Hurry dear dream
I am waiting for you
under the eiderdown.
And tomorrow will be more real, perhaps,
than yesterday.

--Barbara Guest

fr. Angel Hair 5, Spring 1968

in The Angel Hair Anthology
[New York: Granary Books, 2001]

↑ Index

152. amy king
Kay Ryan new Poet Laureate
Wed 16 Jul 2008

And long overdue, in terms of -- yep -- gender:

The list, up to Donald Hall in 2006, appears here [followed by Kooser, Simic, and now Ryan]:

U.S. Poet Laureate Timeline [1937 - 2006 = 36 Men and 8 Women]

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/03/23/what%e2%80%99s-love-got-to-do-with-it/

~~~

Kay Ryan Named Poet Laureate - NYT:

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/17/books/17poet.html
~~~

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

153. Eireene Nealand

Re: writing from the picket lines--any ideas about how to do a good job

Thu 17 Jul 2008

Thanks you guys for all of this.

i ended up using lots of stuff, baraka and dickens, dos passos too although not so much time to digest it hardest as always: the human moments just trying to get students to get over their shyness (and prejudices but shyness too--the two go together) why am i defending white suburbanites? well, i think they need a lot of help. just think how horrifying that must be: the suburbs. so i felt like i had to run around and personally introduce everyone to everyone, quite the politician. connections about love, about baseball stats. a little start in those human connections amongst the two percent who cared. (there was another 4% who didn't show up and some even arrived and looked around and walked off. plus another frightened 80% who huddled somewhere nearby, too afraid to not-attend, too affraid to participate, maybe next year). but how grateful i was for that two percent who talked.

and art will have to come afterwards. sometimes that human connection. (how could we have forgotten about this part of writing: about life and later then art, technique and all that. ideally they come together but real heart generalliy finds a way to real skill.)

oh sappiness.

e

↑ Index

154. Larissa Shmailo

Poetry reading: Green, Shmailo, Sirowitz, Verga at Cornelia Street Cafe NYC 7/20

Thu 17 Jul 2008

Please join us in welcoming UK poet Geraldine Green, coeditor of Poetrybay and PoetryVLog, to the US.

with Hal Sirowitz, Angelo Verga, and Larissa Shmailo

Cornelia Street Cafe
29 Cornelia
Sunday 7/20
6-8pm
$7 includes house drink
[redacted]

*Get the scoop on last night's hottest shows and the live music scene in your area - Check out TourTracker.com! (http://www.tourtracker.com?NCID=aolmus00050000000112)

↑ Index

155. David-Baptiste Chirot

More re Pessoa & heteronyms' contested Legacies (& a great foto of Pessoa w Aleister Crowley)

Thu 17 Jul 2008

Portugal in an Uproar Over Pessoa’s Papers
Thursday July 3, 2008
form Bob Holman & Margery Snyder's About Poetry

With his three heteronyms, imaginary brother poets, Fernando Pessoa was a literary movement all by himself. When he died in 1935, he left behind a whole steamer trunk full of literary work, and he has since become the most celebrated modern poet in Portugal. Now the Portuguese National Library and Pessoa’s heirs are fighting over the family’s intention to sell his unpublished papers: from The Independent (UK):

“Portugal angry over sale of papers ‘vital to nation’s literary heritage’,” by Elizabeth Nash in Madrid “A row has broken out in Portugal’s literary world over plans by heirs of the nation’s most famous modern poet, Fernando Pessoa, to auction his unpublished manuscripts and letters.... Pessoa’s nephews favour selling the material, piece by piece. Scholars say that would make a definitive study of the poet’s unpublished work impossible.” More on Fernando Pessoa:

Our introduction, Fernando Pessoa – Poet as Poetry

His poem “Autopsychography” in one of its many, many English translations

_____ Use video conversation to talk face-to-face with Windows Live Messenger. http://www.windowslive.com/messenger/connect_your_way.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Refresh_messenger_video_072008

↑ Index

156. Factory School

New from Factory School -- Pain Plus Thyme

Thu 17 Jul 2008

Now available from Factory School, PS 3577 series:

Pain Plus Thyme
by Joe Amato

146 pages

isbn 978-1-60001-001-9 (paperback)
isbn 978-1-60001-002-6 (hardcover)

www.factoryschool.com/pubs/amato/

Lauren Mullen writes of Pain Plus Thyme:

Think feedback, think big guitar god solo, and fasten your eyes and ears to a book that’ll belt you. Amato plays his urgent material "just for kicks" and "for keeps," and this absolutely fearless and volatile mix of clowning and erudite commitment gives his work a life like nobody else's. Breaking rules we might not have been aware of (or alert to our allegiance to), Pain Plus Thyme is a hard-hitting, clear-eyed critique of culture, as well as a "romp" through preserves both political and personal. Did I say that it’s good? It’s fucking awesome.

Available through Small Press Distribution: www.spdbooks.org

Also available direct from Factory School at a discount price of $16 (retail $20). Hardback copies also available for $28 (retail $38).

www.factoryschool.com/pubs/order.html

Factory School is now developing online book studios in conjunction with its ongoing press work. To learn more about this and other new Factory School projects, please visit www.factoryschool.info or write to "editors at factoryschool.org".

↑ Index

157. mIEKAL aND
2008 Milwaukee Zine Fest
Thu 17 Jul 2008

(Heads up to folks near Milwaukee. Xexoxial Editions will be set up, hopefully for both days. There won't be a lot of poetry here, but there will be a lot of DIY publishing, zines, distros, bands & workshops. In particular folks on the list may find Steve's talk on Assembling Mags of interest—noted below.)

2008 Milwaukee Zine Fest

Saturday, July 19 / 11 AM-11 PM
Sunday, July 20 / 1-10 PM

University of Wisconsin - Milwaukee
Golda Meir Library
4th Floor Conference Center
2311 E. Hartford. Ave. Milwaukee, WI 53211

Assembling Magazines & the Death of the Editor

with Stephen Perkins

Curator of Art at the Lawton Gallery at UW-Green Bay, and an art historian and artist (Saturday, 7/19 / 12:30-1:30 PM). An informal talk and discussion about the development of assembling zines, their unique editorial model and their role within the development of alternative communication networks from the late 1960s onwards. Participants will have hands-on access to an array of examples from Europe, Latin America and North America.

↑ Index

158. mIEKAL aND
Re: 2008 Milwaukee Zine Fest
Thu 17 Jul 2008

neglected to post the URL:

http://www.midwestzines.org/

On Jul 17, 2008, at 7:12 PM, mIEKAL aND wrote:

> (Heads up to folks near Milwaukee. Xexoxial Editions will be set up, hopefully for both days. There won't be a lot of poetry here, but there will be a lot of DIY publishing, zines, distros, bands & workshops. In particular folks on the list may find Steve's talk on Assembling Mags of interest—noted below.)
>
> 2008 Milwaukee Zine Fest

> Saturday, July 19 / 11 AM-11 PM
> Sunday, July 20 / 1-10 PM
>
> University of Wisconsin - Milwaukee
> Golda Meir Library
> 4th Floor Conference Center
> 2311 E. Hartford. Ave. Milwaukee, WI 53211
>
> Assembling Magazines & the Death of the Editor
>
> with Stephen Perkins
>
> Curator of Art at the Lawton Gallery at UW-Green Bay, and an art historian and artist (Saturday, 7/19 / 12:30-1:30 PM). An informal talk and discussion about the development of assembling zines, their unique editorial model and their role within the development of alternative communication networks from the late 1960s onwards. Participants will have hands-on access to an array of examples from Europe, Latin America and North America.

↑ Index

159. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Thu 17 Jul 2008

David,

As you perceptive analysis shows, the underlying question is, "who owns a work of art," more specifically a work of literature (but, in our world, one can apply the same question to images). My view is "no one." I am completely with Emerson here (and Thoreau and Spicer and Walter Benjamin). The work/image belongs to a movement of language/images which consittutes our thought/cultural/economic matrix (Emerson's landscape). If a corporation wants to use one of my phrases, I would be pleased because it implies that what I am doing as an individual -in Spicer's term, medium- has the ability to open to a wider world. Spicer's claim, "No one listens to poetry" and Benjamin's, "one writes for no one," are closed related to this. This radical isolation is liberating; if no one listens or one writes to no one, then no one owns what is written. The social contract of the author with the world becomes of a peculiar sort: between the writer and cultural, linguistic movements which are at the moment invisible, below the surface, in a sense "unneeded," the way Cassandra's admonitions were "unneeded," therefore, unheard. Of course, all this does not prevent Spicer from hoping to pick up boys through his poetry or Benjamin from hoping to get a university position. That desire -a version of payment- has little to do with how the writing occurs.

I think "the death of the author" is a more specific and quite different concept. Initially, it applies to the lyric "I," asserting that this "I" has little to do with personal feelings or biography; but the "I" becomes a mark, a "moving zero," an elusive, transforming target, which registers the linguistic motion I have been pointing to above. "The death of the author," in that sense, it transforms the lyric; but It does not kill it or make it obsolete, as many suggested. Rather, it transforms it into a metaphysical medium, a medium of motion rather than personal expression.

"The death of the author" is also at the heart of hypertext, which, as a form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership. But I think it is different in a significant way from the process I described earlier. In my view, it overlooks the radical isolation with which writing responding, opening to "hidden" movements requires. In one sense, all writing constitutes a hypertexts which other writers respond to, misread, alter, expand, etc. That is what Benjamin's "ideal language" is. But hypetext, as a conscious for of writing, assumes a present community. I am not sure if this presence helps or inhibits the process; maybe it does both.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Jul 16, 2008 at 10:32 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

> *ARTS / ART & DESIGN * | July 13, 2008
> * Art: The Image Is Familiar; the Pitch Isn't
> <
> http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/13/arts/design/13fine.html?
> ex=1216872000&en=1b778806477a19e6&ei=5070&emc=eta1
>
> *
> By MIA FINEMAN
> Artists have appropriated images from advertising for decades. What > happens
> when the tables are turned?
>
> Conceptually, the artist's appropriation of an already existing image is,
> in > theory at least, seen as "a critique of originality."
>
> Yet when a corporation--or another artist--appropriates the "non-original"
> art of appropriation-- > the "death of the author" turns out to have been instead a playing at possum, playing possum, as the "Non-original artist" wakes from her slumber and claims the appropriated "non-original" work as being, in fact, a work of originality that needs to be protected from the marauding of "corporate raiders."

In a potentially endless series of art-advertising-art-advertising appropriations and re-appropriations begetting unto the indefinite, open-ended generation repetitions of the same as a difference which becomes another difference which is at the same time "apparently" the same-- what is produced, ironically, is undying desire for originality, to be "original," and to have created the "original work," to have had "the original idea."

A Conceptual advertisement and promotion of "non-originality" when confronted with advertising's use of one's advertisements of "non-originality" reveals "the fear of death, of an anonymous, unmarked grave" that "re-animates" the "dead author" of "non-originality" into a desperate assertion of being, after all, both very alive and very original.

The "critique of the self" and of "originality," it turns out, are acceptable conceptually, but not at the level of "property relations."

A Conceptual "non-self non-original artist//writer" literally "materializes" in the claim to a property which is "mine." A property it turns out, that possesses an "originality" "belonging to ME."

In Emerson's Nature, the poet sees "a property in the landscape which does not belong to this or that farmer. The "property" that the poet sees is not an object or a concept-as-object which can be owned, like Robert Smithson's Art of Looking, in which the artist''s glance creates works which are real as any object, yet refuse to be locked into the prison of being a "property," and object, which can be owned,
The "originality" of a poet, an artist, is an activity in time which cannot be embodied in time, as in an object that can be owned.

The paradoxical situation of the non-original appropriating artist/writer faced with the appropriation of her non-original object, discovers that their conceptions and identity have become imprisoned in the object. Having dispensed with an "original self," the artist of appropriation is faced with being an appropriated "non-original self," which is threatened with the "death of the author" indeed when its "objectification" in the work is in danger of being appropriated into an advertisement for products belonging to someone else.

> Instead of being an Artist/Poet of Looking who sees that property in the landscape belonging to no one, , the "non-original" artist/writer has become > a property in the landscape which can be owned by anyone else, and so has to > fight to be recognized as in themselves being a property, and indeed, an "original and living Artist, Poet, " with a claim to those objects which are > not so much simply "belonging to ME,""made by ME," but are in a sense actually "Me," "Me" as a piece of property.
>
> And paradoxically finding "Me" locked in a court case or media battle to prove that after all, one DOES exist, that one does "posses" the "property of originality" as a "being Me, an Original and Living Me," > instead of simply an object which "doesn't belong to anyone" and so can be claimed by anyone as their "personal property."

↑ Index

160. amy king

Tomorrow, Friday Night -- Baker, Cordelli, Field, Need, Newton , and Tonelli

Thu 17 Jul 2008

The Stain of Poetry Reading Series presents

July 25th @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg , Brooklyn

 Baker, Cordelli, Field, Need, Newton , and Tonelli **

~~~

Andrea Baker is the author of like wind loves a window (Slope Editions, 2005) and the chapbooks gilda (Poetry Society of America, 2004) and true poems about the river go like this (Cannibal Books, 2008).

~~~~

Phil Cordelli cleans lawns, carries on a love affair with the tuliptrees of Upper Manhattan that may not be carrying on for much longer now, and acts as a conduit for poetic impulses from the plant world. More on this as it develops.

~~~~

Farrah Field’s first book, Rising, is forthcoming in early 2009 by Four Way Books. Her poems have appeared in many publications such as the Mississippi Review, Margie, Chelsea , The Massachusetts Review, Typo, Harp & Altar, and are forthcoming in Pebble Lake Review, Another Chicago Magazine, Fulcrum, and 42Opus. She lives in Brooklyn .
~~~~

~~~~

Originally from Massachusetts , David Need lives in Durham , NC and works as an instructor in the Religion Department at Duke, teaching classes on Buddhism, South Asian Religions, and Religion and Poetry. Recent and upcoming publications include several suites published in Fascicle 2 & 3, a translation/essay series on Rg Veda poetry in Talisman, an excerpt from “Places I’ve Lived” upcoming in Minor American, and excerpts from “St. John’s Rose Slumber” upcoming in Effing and Hambone. Several years ago Mipoesis ran a series of essays by David on Rilke and three short memoir pieces, and Ocho ran yet another sonnet suite. Current projects include a long poem written alongside the Gospel of Mark, “Places I’ve Lived”, which is evolving into an open ended project, finalizing a collection of translations of Rilke’s French poetry, and yet another Rg Veda essay, this one on the theme of twins there and in the poetry of Nate Mackey. David is associated with the NC lucipo poets, and lives with his scholar wife and four cats.

~~~~

Keith Newton edits the online magazine Harp & Altar. His poems and translations have appeared in Harvard Review, Cannibal, Typo, and Circumference, among other journals, and a chapbook of his work is forthcoming in 2008 from Cannibal Books. He lives in Brooklyn .

~~~

Chris Tonelli lives in the Boston area where he runs The So and So Series. He has work forthcoming in Saltgrass, Salt Hill, Absent, and Good Foot, and is the author of three chapbooks: For People Who Like Gravity and Other People (Rope-A-Dope Press, forthcoming), A Mule-Shaped Cloud (w/ Sarah Bartlett, horse less press, 2008), and WIDE TREE: Short Poems (Kitchen Press, 2006).

~~~~

stain
766 grand street
brooklyn, ny 11211
(L train to Grand Street ,
1 block west)
718/[redacted]
open daily @ 5 p.m.

~~~~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic
~~~~

~~~~

The rest of the year's dishes served up here:

http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/
http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/
http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

161. amy king
July 25th -- Friday Night -- Baker, Cordelli, Field, Need, Newton , and Tonelli
Thu 17 Jul 2008

Apologies - the reading is not tomorrow but is one week from tomorrow. Too much absinthe.

xo

amy king <[redacted]> wrote: The Stain of Poetry Reading Series presents

July 25th @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg , Brooklyn

 Baker, Cordelli, Field, Need, Newton , and Tonelli **

~~~

Andrea Baker is the author of like wind loves a window (Slope Editions, 2005) and the chapbooks gilda (Poetry Society of America, 2004) and true poems about the river go like this (Cannibal Books, 2008).

~~~~

Phil Cordelli cleans lawns, carries on a love affair with the tuliptrees of Upper Manhattan that may not be carrying on for much longer now, and acts as a conduit for poetic impulses from the plant world. More on this as it develops.

~~~~

Farrah Field's first book, Rising, is forthcoming in early 2009 by Four Way Books. Her poems have appeared in many publications such as the Mississippi Review, Margie, Chelsea , The Massachusetts Review, Typo, Harp & Altar, and are forthcoming in Pebble Lake Review, Another Chicago Magazine, Fulcrum, and 42Opus. She lives in Brooklyn .

~~~~

Originally from Massachusetts , David Need lives in Durham , NC and works as an instructor in the Religion Department at Duke, teaching classes on Buddhism, South Asian Religions, and Religion and Poetry. Recent and upcoming publications include several suites published in Fascicle 2 & 3, a translation/essay series on Rg Veda poetry in Talisman, an excerpt from "Places I've Lived" upcoming in Minor American, and excerpts from "St. John's Rose Slumber" upcoming in Effing and Hambone. Several years ago Mipoesis ran a series of essays by David on Rilke and three short memoir pieces, and Ocho ran yet another sonnet suite. Current projects include a long poem written alongside the Gospel of Mark, "Places I've Lived", which is evolving into an open ended project, finalizing a collection of translations of Rilke's French poetry, and yet another Rg Veda essay, this one on the theme of twins there and in the poetry of Nate Mackey. David is associated with the NC lucipo poets, and lives with his scholar wife and four cats.

~~~~

Keith Newton edits the online magazine Harp & Altar. His poems and translations have appeared in Harvard Review, Cannibal, Typo, and Circumference, among other journals, and a chapbook of his work is forthcoming in 2008 from Cannibal Books. He lives in Brooklyn .

~~~

Chris Tonelli lives in the Boston area where he runs The So and So Series. He has work forthcoming in Saltgrass, Salt Hill, Absent, and Good Foot, and is the author of three chapbooks: For People Who Like Gravity and Other People (Rope-A-Dope Press, forthcoming), A Mule-Shaped Cloud (w/ Sarah Bartlett, horse less press, 2008), and WIDE TREE: Short Poems (Kitchen Press, 2006).

~~~~

stain
766 grand street
brooklyn, ny 11211
(L train to Grand Street ,
1 block west)
718/[redacted]
open daily @ 5 p.m.

~~~~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic

~~~~

The rest of the year's dishes served up here:

http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/
http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/
http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

162. CA Conrad
NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Fri 18 Jul 2008

Did Marsha P. Johnson start the Stonewall Riot to end oppression, or spread misery? "The Stonewall Diversity Champions" has listed as its 400th member the British Army for their open inclusion of gays and lesbians into the armed forces. WOW! I'm not even sure how to react with anything but anger.

The fight to NOT BE OPPRESSED does not mean to be included into the oppressor's world. WHY WOULD the oppressor think they're SO GREAT that we would even WANT to be them!? I would want to BE like the person who has kept me from my life?

It's more the problem of course of gays and lesbians who do not share my view here, who DO think that the ULTIMATE GOAL should be to meld and disappear into the machine with all of its sharp tools carving the world into one grand, obedient, nameless, worker-consumer, killing all who defy. The British Army is the 400th member of "The Stonewall Diversity Champions," I just need to WRITE THIS AGAIN, and SAY IT OUT LOUD AGAIN, because it's SO HARD TO BELIEVE!

The worst thing is NOT being able to stop this kind of ABUSE to the lives we lead, and how we want to lead, away from such brutality. The committee for this BOGUS award will represent who they want to represent. GAYS IN THE MILITARY IS NOT A CIVIL RIGHTS ISSUE!
http://tenbyfour.blogspot.com/2006/05/why-gays-in-military-is-not-civil.html

To honor the war machine through Stonewall is so infuriating I feel like I blew a fuse. I mean, I can't even FEEL angry, but I know I'm SO ANGRY, and that's why I'm numb.

To honor war is to not honor the LOVE Marsha P. Johnson used to strike the police with, her need to be left to her life, and to protect her family who were other fringe, mistreated, neglected souls like herself.

I'm not even sure where I send my hate mail today. England or New York?

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

163. Bobbie Lurie
the "originality" of appropriation--response to Murat
Fri 18 Jul 2008

Murat, I just wanted to send my thanks for what you wrote below and to say that "this radical isolation is liberating" is the truest thing for me. There is such a sense of "difficulty" and "ambition" in the writer who makes writing a "career"--the writers who simply enjoy writing/ who do not buy into the illusion of the artist's self-importance are a joy to know and to read. It is the process itself as far as I'm concerned. Perhaps my life experience has taught me to examine the idea of "audience" very closely--we speak to ourselves is my conclusion and any "audience" does the same --and it is absurd for me to worry about an audience--once we no longer have consciousness and self-consciousness the world vanishes for us is my conclusion--our suffering comes from trying to control and wanting to control beyond the grave sounds like serious suffering to me as does all other ideas of artistic control as in "audience"--anyway, I am moving off topic as per usual so I will end here with Thanks, Bobbi P.S. I wrote a story about "audience" when I left the visual art world or at least tried to--it is a true story--it is about how I boxed hundreds of drawings and canvases and etchings and etching plates--I found it a ceremonial way to say "good-bye" to my destroyed "art career" (partially self-induced) -- I put my visual images downstairs for the garbagemen (garbage people?/ sanitational engineers? p.c. lurks everywhere) in New York--but hours later I walked outside again only to find my work exhibited on the sidewalk in front of my apartment bldg.--people taking the drawings/ paintings they wanted. In this story I write about "audience" and how contracted are ideas of fame and who is an audience to our work (such an artifical concept--ie; these people wanted my work but the "setting" is what mattered according to everyone /not the acutal appreciation or whatever is exemplified when people rifle through the garbage of others (in my case: years of accumulated pieces of art made by me)-- and the complex way work is presented...i could go on forever but will stop here Date: Thu, 17 Jul 2008 22:58:48 -0400 From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> Subject: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

David,

As you perceptive analysis shows, the underlying question is, "who owns a work of art," more specifically a work of literature (but, in our world, one can apply the same question to images). My view is "no one." I am completely with Emerson here (and Thoreau and Spicer and Walter Benjamin). The work/image belongs to a movement of language/images which consittutes our thought/cultural/economic matrix (Emerson's landscape). If a corporation wants to use one of my phrases, I would be pleased because it implies that what I am doing as an individual -in Spicer's term, medium- has the ability to open to a wider world. Spicer's claim, "No one listens to poetry" and Benjamin's, "one writes for no one," are closed related to this. This radical isolation is liberating; if no one listens or one writes to no one, then no one owns what is written. The social contract of the author with the world becomes of a peculiar sort: between the writer and cultural, linguistic movements which are at the moment invisible, below the surface, in a sense "unneeded," the way Cassandra's admonitions were "unneeded," therefore, unheard. Of course, all this does not prevent Spicer from hoping to pick up boys through his poetry or Benjamin from hoping to get a university position. That desire -a version of payment- has little to do with how the writing occurs.

I think "the death of the author" is a more specific and quite different concept. Initially, it applies to the lyric "I," asserting that this "I" has little to do with personal feelings or biography; but the "I" becomes a mark, a "moving zero," an elusive, transforming target, which registers the linguistic motion I have been pointing to above. "The death of the author," in that sense, it transforms the lyric; but It does not kill it or make it obsolete , as many suggested. Rather, it transforms it into a metaphysical medium, a medium of motion rather than personal expression.

"The death of the author" is also at the heart of hypertext, which, as a form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership. But I think it is different in a significant way from the process I described earlier. In my view, it overlooks the radical isolation with which writing responding, opening to "hidden" movements requires. In one sense, all writing constitutes a hypertexts which other writers respond to, misread, alter, expand, etc. That is what Benjamin's "ideal language" is. But hypetext, as a conscious for of writing, assumes a present community. I am not sure if this presence helps or inhibits the process; maybe it does both.

Ciao,

Murat

↑ Index

164. Stephen Vincent

Bay Area: George Albon and Stephen Vincent reading: July 22nd

Fri 18 Jul 2008

Join Us!

>>BOOKS & BOOKSHELVES READING SERIES>>
Books & Bookshelves

> 99 Sanchez St.
> San Francisco, CA.
>
> Tuesday, July 22nd, 7:30
>
> STEPHEN VINCENT
> GEORGE ALBON

↑ Index

165. Dodie Bellamy

Dodie Bellamy's Barf Manifesto

Fri 18 Jul 2008

Dodie Bellamy's chapbook Barf Manifesto can now be pre-ordered at the Ugly Duckling Presse website:

http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org/page-barf.html

↑ Index

166. Jim Andrews link checker
Fri 18 Jul 2008

"The links are always the first to go."
Ted Warnell

Those with web sites may appreciate a good link checker; here is one: Xenu's Link Sleuth by Tilman Hausherr at http://home.snafu.de/tilman/xenulink.html (PC and Linux only).

Point it at your web site and away it goes. At the end, it'll generate an HTML page that lists all broken links.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

167. AWAREing Press
Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article
Sat 19 Jul 2008

Thanks for the words of wisdom, Murat. In some ways you are very correct, and likeable, and thanks for reminding me about Benjamin and Spicer. But Everything Zen? I don't think so. Warhol made history by reinterpreting rubbish-as-art. To flip that once more is to spin a coin two ways at once. Or, maybe this IS what makes the world go round... Everything Zen? I DO think so. How many of us can avoid touching the Polo attire of a magnetic David? And who could say No to any product being pushed by the enigmatic charm of a Mona Lisa? The distinction between art and artifact is already blurred, as we perpetuate the myth of education among the masses... And So It Goes, as per (not Vonnegut Jr., but) the copywriter facing a deadline on his ad campaign for, say, halitosis relief.

Here's to the DNA on Ginsberg's tennies (and that he might wear them once more). James

---------- Original message from Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>: ----------

> David,
>
> As you perceptive analysis shows, the underlying question is, "who owns a work of art," more specifically a work of literature (but, in our world, one can apply the same question to images). My view is "no one." I am completely with Emerson here (and Thoreau and Spicer and Walter Benjamin). The work/image belongs to a movement of language/images which consittutes our thought/cultural/economic matrix (Emerson's landscape). If a corporation wants to use one of my phrases, I would be pleased because it implies that what I am doing as an individual -in Spicer's term, medium- has the ability to open to a wider world. Spicer's claim, "No one listens to poetry" and Benjamin's, "one writes for no one," are closed related to this. This radical isolation is liberating; if no one listens or one writes to no one, then no one owns what is written. The social contract of the author with the world becomes of a peculiar sort: between the writer and cultural, linguistic movements which are at the moment invisible, below the surface, in a sense "unneeded," the way Cassandra's admonitions were "unneeded," therefore, unheard. Of course, all this does not prevent Spicer from hoping to pick up boys through his poetry or Benjamin from hoping to get a university position. That desire -a version of payment- has little to do with how the writing occurs.

*I think "the death of the author" is a more specific and quite different concept. Initially, it applies to the lyric "I," asserting that this "I" has little to do with personal feelings or biography; but the "I" becomes a mark, a "moving zero," an elusive, transforming target, which registers the linguistic motion I have been pointing to above. "The death of the author," in that sense, it transforms the lyric; but It does not kill it or make it obsolete, as many suggested. Rather, it transforms it into a metaphysical medium, a medium of motion rather than personal expression.*

"The death of the author" is also at the heart of hypertext, which, as a form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership. But I think it is different in a significant way from the process I described earlier. In my view, it overlooks the radical isolation with which writing responding, opening to "hidden" movements requires. In one sense, all writing constitutes a hypertexts which other writers respond to, misread, alter, expand, etc. That is what Benjamin's "ideal language" is. But hypetext, as a conscious for of writing, assumes a present community. I am not sure if this presence helps or inhibits the process; maybe it does both.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Jul 16, 2008 at 10:32 AM, David Chirot wrote:

ARTS / ART & DESIGN * | July 13, 2008*
 Art: The Image Is Familiar; the Pitch Isn't*
<

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/13/arts/design/13fine.html?ex=1216872000&en=1b778806477a19e6&ei=5070&emc=eta1

*
By MIA FINEMAN
Artists have appropriated images from advertising for decades. What happens when the tables are turned?

Conceptually, the artist's appropriation of an already existing image is, in theory at least, seen as "a critique of originality."

Yet when a corporation--or another artist--appropriates the "non-original" art of appropriation--the "death of the author" turns out to have been instead a playing at possum, playing possum, as the "Non-original artist" wakes from her slumber and claims the appropriated "non-original" work as being, in fact, a work of originality that needs to be protected from the marauding of "corporate raiders."

In a potentially endless series of art-advertising-art-advertising appropriations and re-appropriations begetting unto the indefinite, open-ended generation repetitions of the same as a difference which becomes another difference which is at the same time "apparently" the same--what is produced, ironically, is undying desire for originality, to be "original," and to have created the "original work," to have had "the original idea."

A Conceptual advertisement and promotion of "non-originality" when confronted with advertising's use of one's advertisements of "non-originality" reveals "the fear of death, of an anonymous, unmarked grave" that "re-animates" the "dead author" of "non-originality" into a desperate assertion of being, after all, both very alive and very original.

The "critique of the self" and of "originality," it turns out, are acceptable conceptually, but not at the level of "property relations."

A Conceptual "non-self non-original artist//writer" literally "materializes" in the claim to a property which is "mine." A property it turns out, that possesses an "originality" "belonging to ME."

In Emerson's Nature, the poet sees "a property in the landscape which does not belong to this or that farmer. The "property" that the poet sees is not an object or a concept-as-object which can be owned, like Robert Smithson's Art of Looking, in which the artist''s glance creates works which are real as any object, yet refuse to be locked into the prison of being a "property," and object, which can be owned,

> The "originality" of a poet, an artist, is an activity in time which cannot be embodied in time, as in an object that can be owned.
>
> The paradoxical situation of the non-original appropriating artist/writer faced with the appropriation of her non-original object, discovers that their conceptions and identity have become imprisoned in the object. Having dispensed with an "original self," the artist of appropriation is faced with being an appropriated "non-original self," which is threatened with the "death of the author" indeed when its "objectification" in the work is in danger of being appropriated into an advertisement for products belonging to someone else.
>
> Instead of being an Artist/Poet of Looking who sees that property in the landscape belonging to no one, , the "non-original" artist/writer has become a property in the landscape which can be owned by anyone else, and so has to fight to be recognized as in themselves being a property, and indeed, an "original and living Artist, Poet, " with a claim to those objects which are not so much simply "belonging to ME,""made by ME," but are in a sense actually "Me," "Me" as a piece of property.
>
> And paradoxically finding "Me" locked in a court case or media battle to prove that after all, one DOES exist, that one does "posses" the "property of originality" as a "being Me, an Original and Living Me," instead of simply an object which "doesn't belong to anyone" and so can be claimed by anyone as their "personal property."

↑ Index

168. Christophe Casamassima

Favorite Bookstores? Favorite Reviewers?

Sat 19 Jul 2008

Hi, everyone,

with the publication of my new book, the Proteus, I'm doing lots of footwork to get it into stores, get it reviewed, etc.

first off, please visit Moria at http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html to order a copy. Moria is a fabulous publisher and their books are beautiful - mine, I'll say is gorgeous thanks to Bill Allegrezza's fine eye.

secondly, i'd like you to suggest bookstores that you like that will take and sell copies - where ever you are!

and last, if you would like to review the book for a publications (blogs are great), please contact me directly so we can talk: [redacted]

thanks!

much love!

Christophe Casamassima

--
Powered By Outblaze

↑ Index

169. David Buuck
Buuck/BARGE online & at Yerba Buena Center
Sat 19 Jul 2008

The Bay Area Research Group in Enviro-aesthetics (BARGE) presents BURIED TREASURE ISLAND, a multi-platform investigation of Treasure Island, currently on view at Yerba Buena Center for the Arts in San Francisco. For those out-of-towners who can't visit the installation, there is a guidebook, audio tour, and other elements online (website - nonsite?). The audio podcast might not yet be fully up & running, but you can download the guidebook & see some images at:

davidbuuck.com/BARGE/BTI

all best,
David Buuck

↑ Index

170. David Buuck
Buuck/BARGE online (Corrected URL)
Sat 19 Jul 2008

---

http://www.davidbuuck.com/barge/bti/index.html

↑ Index

171. David-Baptiste Chirot
New Media as New "Mediums" for Contacting the Past: Yeats Meets the Digital Age, Full of Passionate Intensity -NY Times)
Sun 20 Jul 2008

ARTS / ART & DESIGN

| July 20, 2008

Art:
Yeats Meets the Digital Age, Full of Passionate Intensity

By JIM DWYER

A digital resurrection allows Yeats to stride again along the hinge of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Mary Baker has a telephone in her vault in Cambridge 'MA's Mt Auburn Cemetery--

the number was (and hopefully still is) in he phonebook-- she never answered in al the times I tried calling-- but with ever advancing Media as Mediums, one may soon find oneself with the ability to accompany Raymond Chandler "down these mean streets," or join Rimbaud for 'A Season in Hell"--

Attempts to lengthen one's stay among simulated "literary/artistic people, places & times"-- may have to be carefully controlled by guardians against new forms of "escapism"-- and, perhaps, "border patrols" will have to be employed to contain all those from "other times" attempting to crash into the present as "illegal aliens"--

_____ Stay in touch when you're away with Windows Live Messenger.
http://www.windowslive.com/messenger/overview.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_messenger2_072008

↑ Index

172. L Trent
Re: New Issue of 21 Stars Review
Sun 20 Jul 2008

Hi all! The new issue of 21 Stars Review (http://www.sundress.net/21stars/) is up, with Anne Bogle as guest fiction editor, featuring the work of...

Pranshu Arya
<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/arya.htm>

Gary Beck
<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/beck.htm>

Peter Charles

Beth Coyote

Erik Dickey
<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/dickey1.htm>

Thomas Fink and Maya Diablo Mason
<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/mtfink.htm>

Harry Johnson
<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/johnson.htm>

Mark Howard Jones
<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/jones.htm>

Andrea Lewis
<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/lewis1.htm>

Philip Lund
<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/lund.htm>

Josh May

Ashok Niyogi

Ateet Tuli

Laura Wetherington

William Yazbec

<http://www.sundress.net/21stars/issue08/yazbec.htm>
http://www.sundress.net/21stars

↑ Index

173. Nicholas Karavatos
Reading in Ukiah, CA on Thursday the 24th
Sun 20 Jul 2008

(Rescheduled due to recent fire and smoke) Nicholas Karavatos THURSDAY, July 24th at 7:00pm “Writers Read” Series – hosted by Susan J. Sparrow Colored Horse Studio780 Waugh LaneUkiah, CA http://www.coloredhorse.com/ Nicholas KaravatosDept of Language & LiteratureAmerican University of SharjahPO Box 26666SharjahUnited Arab Emirates> From: [redacted]> To: [redacted]> Subject: Reading in Ukiah, CA on Thursday the 26th> Date: Sat, 21 Jun 2008 17:46:43 +0000> > > > > Nicholas Karavatos> > THURSDAY, June 26th at 7:00pm> > “Writers Read” Reading Series – hosted by Susan J. Sparrow> > Colored Horse Studio> 780 Waugh Lane> Ukiah, CA> > http://www.coloredhorse.com/> > > > > > > > > > Nicholas Karavatos> Dept of

English> American University of Sharjah> PO Box 26666> Sharjah> United Arab Emirates> >
_____> Need to know now? Get instant answers with Windows Live Messenger.> http://www.windowslive.com/messenger/connect_your_way.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Refresh_messenger_062008
_____ With Windows Live for mobile, your contacts travel with you. http://www.windowslive.com/mobile/overview.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_mobile_072008

↑ Index

174. andrew burke
hello
Sun 20 Jul 2008

Hello, I'm new here. I don't know the local introduction behaviours, so I'll just extend my hand and gabble.

I've been writing poetry since the 1960s, firstly under the influence of Milton et al, but then influenced by the Beats and jazz liner notes, Zen (Beat to Square), and folk songs. By the time I was 18 and leaving school, I was ready to hit the road and escape my conservative surburban upbringing. So I hitched from Perth to Sydney, west coast to east coast Australia - safe back then, not so safe now.

At this time I was published in a university literary quarterly - a short Saroyanesque story about a boy staring at ants, yet somehow the reader knows he is damaged in some way. I've lost it, thankfully, because it remains 'beautiful' in my memory, and was probably more awkward on the page. Much of my teenage poetry has gone the same way. Yet that early publishing encouragement set me on the path to being a lifelong writer. But I go on too long ... This is a similar start to many. Let's just say I have written a mess of poems over the last forty plus years, some of which has appeared in print (many mags, six books) and some of which has appeared disguised as plays, tiny films, stories and one novel.

After quarter of a century in advertising (my anti-intellectual years), I changed careers and taught writing and literature at various universities, including a recent stint at Shanxi Normal University in Linfen, China. During these, my intellectual years, I received a PhD from Edith Cowan University three years ago.

But my main interest is my next poem, and my curiosity has lead me to investigate many poetics from around the world. On this list, I hope to gain more insights and share some of my passion for poetry.

My day to day interests are well exposed on my blog (address below).

Thank you for reading.

Andrew
http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/

↑ Index

175. Ismaelia al Sadiq
Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Sun 20 Jul 2008

Plato, in Book 10 of The Republic, expelled poetry from the university curriculum laid out in Book 7. Poets in exile. Or the orality of Hesiod and Homer was.

Early Achean kings figured out they could stay in power by substituting Athenian citizens for themselves, so the four-year rule was rendered moot.

As prejudice abounds, more extensive ways are found to oppress those toward whom the prejudice extends, often by the tactic of inclusion. The implied and over-arching control of wayward elements is thus guaranteed. It is possible to render one an exile by more extensively including her systematically in filial ostentation. Trained extension of a generically accepted ego-term. Pretentious integrity given phony respect. Or, give 'em a gun and see who they shoot at. Each other, it is doubtless hoped.

"Epic" ends where political authority makes abstract morality a virtue. Its material analogy is war. As Jo Jones said, "World War II was orchestrated to break up the Basie band."

All hail to sexual expression of any kind, crotch of elm as great as Dyad.

Isma'il ibn Ali al-Sadiq bin Jafar bin al-Baqir bin al-Abidin bin al-Husseini ibn Muhammad al-Talib

_____ Stay in touch when you're away with Windows Live Messenger.
http://www.windowslive.com/messenger/overview.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_messenger2_072008

↑ Index

176. Maria Damon
Re: hello
Sun 20 Jul 2008

---

welcome to the list.

andrew burke wrote:
> Hello, I'm new here. I don't know the local introduction behaviours, so I'll > just extend my hand and gabble.
>
> I've been writing poetry since the 1960s, firstly under the influence of > Milton et al, but then influenced by the Beats and jazz liner notes, Zen > (Beat to Square), and folk songs. By the time I was 18 and leaving school, I > was ready to hit the road and escape my conservative surburban upbringing.
> So I hitched from Perth to Sydney, west coast to east coast Australia - safe > back then, not so safe now.
>
> At this time I was published in a university literary quarterly - a short > Saroyanesque story about a boy staring at ants, yet somehow the reader knows > he is damaged in some way. I've lost it, thankfully, because it remains > 'beautiful' in my memory, and was probably more awkward on the page. Much > of my teenage poetry has gone the same way. Yet that early publishing > encouragement set me on the path to being a lifelong writer.
> But I go on too long ... This is a similar start to many. Let's just say I > have written a mess of poems over the last forty plus years, some of which > has appeared in print (many mags, six books) and some of which has appeared > disguised as plays, tiny films, stories and one novel.
>
> After quarter of a century in advertising (my anti-intellectual years), I > changed careers and taught writing and literature at various universities, > including a recent stint at Shanxi Normal University in Linfen, China.
> During these, my intellectual years, I received a PhD from Edith Cowan > University three years ago.
>
> But my main interest is my next poem, and my curiosity has lead me to > investigate many poetics from around the world. On this list, I hope to gain > more insights and share some of my passion for poetry.
>
> My day to day interests are well exposed on my blog (address below).
>

> Thank you for reading.
>
> Andrew
> http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
> http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/
>
>

↑ Index

177. Nate Pritts

& the summer was endless it was an endless summer

Sun 20 Jul 2008

Hi - A quick note to say that my new chapbook, ENDLESS SUMMER, is out from Publishing Genius - & Adam Robinson, the main man there, really is that: the chap is available to print off for yourself, to order and have a paper copy sent to you, or to view on the screen. I'm thrilled to have this chap out & that there are so many ways for people to come aross it. ENDLESS SUMMER is Part II of my now complete Shepherd's Calendar THE WONDERFUL YEARE - Part I - SPRING PSALTER, chapbook bound in Cannibal #3 (2008)Part II - ENDLESS SUMMERPART III - (SONNETS FOR THE FALL), chapbook from Parcel Press (2007)Part IV - WINTER CONSTELLATIONS, chapbook from horse less press (2005) Here's the link - www.publishinggenius.com/tpc.htmlPlease drop by and take a look. n8 *publisher's announcement: Hi hi hi.

There’s a new PDF Chapbook to read, this time by the great Nate Pritts. It’s a roundhouse of bodyblows. It’s called ENDLESS SUMMER, and it’s from a four-part series about the seasons. It’s lush in its repetitions. It’s pretty short. Check it out at where as always you can read the piece on the screen or print off a copy for your collection.

_____:: Dr. Nate Pritts :: http://www.natepritts.com

Keep your kids safer online with Windows Live Family Safety. Help protect your kids. _____ Keep your kids safer online with Windows Live Family Safety. http://www.windowslive.com/family_safety/overview.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_family_safety_072008

↑ Index

178. Daniel Godston
tonight at Brown Rice
Mon 21 Jul 2008

Monday, July 21, 8 p.m.
1st set:
Larry Sawyer -- poetry
Dan Godston -- trumpet & small instruments

2nd set:
Laura Emelianoff -- open harp
Eric Leonardson -- springboard

Brown Rice
4432 N. Kedzie Ave.,
1st floor, Chicago, IL 60625
Doors open one half hour before performance time, all ages.

$5 suggested donation. Brown Rice is a half block north of the Montrose / Kedzie intersection, close to the Kedzie station on the CTA brown line.

The entrance is below a sign that reads “Perfect...”

Please call [redacted] for more info.

http://www.brownricemusic.org
http://www.ericleonardson.org

http://larrysawyer.blogspot.com/

http://www.milkmag.org/

http://www.myspace.com/dangodstonmusic

↑ Index

179. Matt Henriksen
Adam Clay & Cannibal Books
Mon 21 Jul 2008

Cannibal Books
(announces)

As Complete as a Thought Can Be (a poem)
by Adam Clay

24 pp.
(hand-sewn)
$7

Payable via Paypal
(@)
flesheatingpoems.blogspot.com

or by check (for our temporary address) query Matthew Henriksen @ flesheatingpoems.yahoo.com)

↑ Index

180. Mark Prejsnar
Call for proposals - Spaltung 3
Mon 21 Jul 2008

The Atlanta Poets Group is seeking proposals for work for the third issue of its magazine Spaltung. Â This issue will be packaged in the form of a box. Â We are looking for poem-objects. Â Pieces that address/embody the concept or experience of multiplicity/heterogeneity are encouraged. Â Please do not send work at this time. Â Instead please send a proposal for the piece you propose to include to: Â [redacted]. Â Deadline for proposal submissions is September 31. Â Some parameters you should consider in preparing your proposal:

--100 units of the magazine issue will be produced. --We have not yet decided on the size of the box; Â in cubic inches it will likely be larger than a breadbox and significantly smaller than a moving crate. --If your piece(s) require anything beyond mindless, cheap reporduction/assembly, we will likely look to you to provide us with 100 units, fully assembled. --We are mostly looking for work that is beyond what can be accomplished on 8.5 x 11 inch paper and beyond what can be included on a CD-ROM. --Proposals should include exact dimensions of the object(s) to be submitted.

You can familiarize yourself with past issues of Spaltung via the blog at www.spaltungmag.blogspot.com.

↑ Index

181. Aaron Lowinger

Open Night by Aaron Lowinger (Transmission Press)

Mon 21 Jul 2008

HELLO FRIENDS!!!

I hope this note finds you all well in body and mind!
Logan Ryan Smith of Transmission Press was kind enough to publish a collected edition of my Open Night Poems, love poems of the open night!

Logan wrote:

It's here, people! This is a book that rivals records and makes you think yr supposed to put it on yr turntable, but then you try and you realize that it's not round-- but it sure does GROOVE, baby! Oh yeah! You want you some poetry that makes yr heart sizzle all the way to yr tongue, baby? Oh yeah, this is the book for you! You know how people call certain bands "Music to Make-Out To"? Well, baby, sweet sunshine of my life, this here is "POETRY TO MAKE-OUT TO". Yes, that's right, this is the book that makes things go ba-bump in the night! It'll make yr legs shake, yr liver quake, and yr brain bake, baby, oh yeah! So come on now and get 'em like a sweet piece of hot cakes! Oh yeah! Take this book to yr insomnia and call it FRIEND. It's the book that keeps on giving, giving and giving all the way to the END, baby, oh yeah!

Go buy it at TRANSMISSION PRESS <http://transmissionpress.blogspot.com> and rock out with yr * out, oh yeah!

_____

open night

While the unseen night windows are expanding a lot of things here outside the time cat clamped on my cheek PBS tower crowded out by leaves mother of wonder night calls from your hair to your feet out left out right middle and center
the back the sides more than ever please here the side I'll sleep on until the walls all laugh
so loud the garden hears

_____ NOTE TO MASS EMAIL RECIPIENTS: If you never want to hear from me again, just email me back and say so. Really, it's not a problem. Just let me know. And we'll never speak again. Ever. Not even a nod 'hello'. Not even eye contact. NOTHING. No biggie. So yeah, just tell me.

--
theredgummibear.blogspot.com transmissionpress.blogspot.com transmissionbooks.blogspot.com

↑ Index

182. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo Newsletter 07.21.08-07.27.08
Mon 21 Jul 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
07.21.08-07.27.08

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE GOING FAST!!

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane Satrapi, Iran, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

WE ARE ALREADY 84% SOLD OUT FOR NEXT SEASON.

We expect to sell out next season by subscription. If we do not, tickets for individual events will go on sale September 1.

EVENTS THIS WEEK

07.23.08

Olde Editions Bookshop
Betty Jean Grant
Reading and signing for, "Falling Through The Crack"
Special Proclamation from the Mayor will be issued
Wednesday, July 23, 5 p.m.

Old Editions Book Shop
74 E. Huron, Downtown Buffalo (3 Blocks east of the Hyatt)

&

Rooftop Poetry Club at Buffalo State College
Reading featuring Jaye Bartell and Forrest Roth
Wednesday, July 23, 7 p.m.
E.H Butler Library, Rooftop Garden
Buffalo State College

07.27.08

Rust Belt Books
Martin Clibbens
Reading poems from artworks on exhibit in the store
Sunday, July 27, 6 p.m.
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St.

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can now subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

183. Dan Wilcox
Poets in the Park, July 26, Albany, NY
Mon 21 Jul 2008

The Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Poets in the Park, 2008:
Kathryn Kelly & James Schlett to read July 26
Final reading scheduled for August 2

Poets in the Park has been celebrating poetry in July at the Robert Burns statue in Washington Park, Albany, NY since 1989. The series, formerly run by the late Tom Nattell and now hosted by Dan Wilcox, continues with readings on Saturdays, July 12 through August 2; the readings start at 7:00 PM and are free & open to the public; donations are accepted. This year the readings are also sponsored by the Hudson Valley Writers Guild.

The third reading in the series on July 26 will be by Kathryn Kelly and James Schlett. Kathryn Kelly is a middle school teacher in Portland, CT; she was one of the organizers of the "One Soldier, One Poem" event held there in December, 2007, and was a featured poet at the CT Beat Poetry Festival in June. James Schlett has been called "the last living Romantic poet of Albany." James writes mostly nature poetry set it the Capital Region and Berkshire County, and he is an award-winning journalist for a local daily newspaper. His prose have been published in "Songs of Innocence" and "The Mid-Atlantic Almanac" and his poems have appeared or will be appearing in "Nomad" and "The Literary Gazette" and on AlbanyPoets.com. He is a north Jersey native.

The last reading in the series will be on August 2 with Susan Brennan & Philip Good.

The Robert Burns statue is near where Henry Johnson Blvd. passes through Washington Park and crosses Hudson Ave. Please bring your own chairs or blankets to sit on. Rain site is the Social Justice Center, 33 Central Ave., 7PM.

This project is made possible in part through COMMUNITY ART$GRANTS, a program funded through the State and Local Partnership Program of the New York State Council on the arts, a State agency and the Arts Center of the Capital Region.

For more information contact Dan Wilcox, at [redacted];
[redacted].
####

↑ Index

184. Camille Martin

Camille Martin reads in Halifax

Mon 21 Jul 2008

If you're going to be in Halifax on Tuesday, July 29, please come to my reading for the Shoestring Reading Series. I'm doing a week-long tour of Nova Scotia, including an archeological dig at Beaubassin, where some of my Acadian ancestors lived before making their way to Louisiana. My visit will culminate in the Halifax reading - thanks to David Rimmington for arranging it. I'm looking forward to seeing Nova Scotia and meeting some poets!

You can check out some of my poems, collage art, etc., at my website:

http://www.camillemartin.ca

Cheers,

Camille

8 pm, Tuesday, July 29

Shoestring Reading at The Economy Shoe Shop

1663 Argyle Street / Halifax, NS

Camille Martin, a Toronto poet and collage artist, is the author of Codes of Public Sleep (BookThug, 2007) in addition to several earlier chapbooks. Recent work is published or forthcoming in The Literary Review of Canada, PRECIPICe, The Walrus, West Coast Line, This Magazine, White Wall Review, Rampike, W Magazine, and Chicago Review. Recently she received a grant from the Ontario Arts Council to complete a book of sonnets. She earned an MFA in Poetry at the University of New Orleans and a Ph.D. in English at Louisiana State University. Currently she teaches writing and literature at Ryerson University.

* * * * * * * * * *

Codes of Public Sleep breaks open the code of private thought to modes of knowing catastrophe that defy insufficient isolating sagas. Camille Martin's poetry is the shattering signal from a laudably wild tongue that will not keep still for our death-drive culture. This is a remarkable collection. - Carla Harryman

* * * * * * * * * *

↑ Index

185. Andy Gricevich
Series A reading tomorrow (Tuesday)
Mon 21 Jul 2008

Hurried/furtive dispatch from circ desk!

Tomorrow! Tuesday!
Poetry! Chicago!

SERIES A!

All the way from London, CARRIE ETTER!

All the way from Madison, ANDY GRICEVICH!

What a groove!

http://www.moriapoetry.com/seriesa.html

http://ndgwriting.blogspot.com http://cannotexist.blogspot.com

↑ Index

186. Peter Ciccariello
Re: hello
Mon 21 Jul 2008

Welcome Andrew, nice to see you here!

- Peter Ciccariello

On Sun, Jul 20, 2008 at 10:29 PM, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:

welcome to the list.

andrew burke wrote:

Hello, I'm new here. I don't know the local introduction behaviours, so I'll just extend my hand and gabble.

I've been writing poetry since the 1960s, firstly under the influence of Milton et al, but then influenced by the Beats and jazz liner notes, Zen (Beat to Square), and folk songs. By the time I was 18 and leaving school, I was ready to hit the road and escape my conservative surburban upbringing. So I hitched from Perth to Sydney, west coast to east coast Australia - safe back then, not so safe now.

At this time I was published in a university literary quarterly - a short Saroyanesque story about a boy staring at ants, yet somehow the reader knows he is damaged in some way. I've lost it, thankfully, because it remains 'beautiful' in my memory, and was probably more awkward on the page. Much of my teenage poetry has gone the same way. Yet that early publishing encouragement set me on the path to being a lifelong writer. But I go on too long ... This is a similar start to many. Let's just say I have written a mess of poems over the last forty plus years, some of which has appeared in print (many mags, six books) and some of which has appeared disguised as plays, tiny films, stories and one novel.

After quarter of a century in advertising (my anti-intellectual years), I changed careers and taught writing and literature at various universities, including a recent stint at Shanxi Normal University in Linfen, China. During these, my intellectual years, I received a PhD from Edith Cowan University three years ago.

But my main interest is my next poem, and my curiosity has lead me to investigate many poetics from around the world. On this list, I hope to gain more insights and share some of my passion for poetry.

My day to day interests are well exposed on my blog (address below).

Thank you for reading.

Andrew
http://hispirits.blogspot.com/

> http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/

↑ Index

187. Jayne
email addresses
Mon 21 Jul 2008

Hi

I'm looking for email addresses for

Alan Shapiro
Lyn Hejinian
Lawrence Upton
Christopher Middleton

to seek permissions. If you can help out it would be appreciated.

regards
Jayne Fenton Keane

↑ Index

188. Jim Andrews
Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article
Tue 22 Jul 2008

---

i thought that was an interesting post, murat. i don't agree with lots of it, but you get at some things that are important that not too many people seem able to write about at all, even if you're wrong about them.

the interesting part, i felt, was the stuff on ownership. very writerly. not so much anti-capitalist as yawning at capitalism in a poetry context. which is right, i feel. capitalism in a poetry context is just more or less irrelevant.

contrast that, however, with visual art. if you hang out with new york visual artists online or anywhere else, you see just how little sense any art makes to them that doesn't work within capitalism. galleries, products, and so on. if it doesn't make it monetarily, it just doesn't count. it can't survive. in the 'market of ideas' in which new york artists are immersed.

which is too bad for new york art, it seems to me. but i guess it makes sense there.

whereas the 'market of ideas' you allude to is less about a capitalistic market as something different. which is important. and expensive, in a sense.

the danger of poetry resides, in part, in its being able to operate, to some extent (more than visual art) in other dimensions than the genuinely boring capitalistic market of ideas.

genuinely boring. deeply. terminally. genuine stuff of the forces of dullness. witness the art it promulgates in mass media, which is little more than a provisional business proposition.

which is one of the reasons i remain optimistic about the internet. as medium for something else.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

189. Matt Henriksen
Frank Stanford Literary Festival
Tue 22 Jul 2008

Featuring a Small Press Reading, a panel on Stanford's life and works, a screening of the Stanford biopic It Wasn't a Dream It Was a Flood, a celebratory reading from Stanford's poems, and a marathon reading of The Battlefield Where the Moon Says I Love You

Hosted by
The Burning Chair Readings
Cannibal Books
Lost Roads Publishers
Fascicle
Typo
&
The Fayetteville Public Library

If you would like to attend, publicize, sponsor, or otherwise query, contact me at frankstanfordfest (at) gmail (dot) com

Matthew Henriksen
The Burning Chair Readings

↑ Index

190. Matt Henriksen
Frank Stanford Literary Festival
Tue 22 Jul 2008

Frank Stanford Literary Festival
October 17 - 19, 2008
Fayetteville, Arkansas

Featuring a Small Press Reading, a panel on Stanford's life and works, a screening of the Stanford biopic It Wasn't a Dream It Was a Flood, a celebratory reading from Stanford's poems, and a marathon reading of The Battlefield Where the Moon Says I Love You

Hosted by The Burning Chair Readings, Cannibal Books, Lost Roads Publishers, Fascicle, Typo, & The Fayetteville Public Library

If you would like to attend, publicize, sponsor, or otherwise query, contact me at frankstanfordfest (at) gmail (dot) com

Matthew Henriksen
The Burning Chair Readings

↑ Index

191. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: the "originality" of appropriation--response to Murat
Tue 22 Jul 2008

Bobbie,

What happened to your art work reminds me of david Chirot's "RubEings." They could have been picked by him and used in some form.

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Jul 18, 2008 at 1:29 PM, Bobbie Lurie <[redacted]> wrote:

> Murat,
> I just wanted to send my thanks for what you wrote below and to say that "this radical isolation is liberating" is the truest > thing for me. There is such a sense of "difficulty" and "ambition" in the writer who makes writing a "career"--the > writers who simply enjoy writing/ who do not buy into the illusion of the artist's self-importance are a joy to know and to read. It is the process itself > as far as I'm concerned. Perhaps my life experience has taught me to examine > the idea of "audience" very closely--we speak to ourselves is my conclusion and any "audience" does the same --and it is absurd for me to worry about an audience--once we no longer have consciousness and self-consciousness the world vanishes for us is my conclusion--our suffering comes from trying to control and wanting to control beyond the grave sounds like serious suffering to me as does all other ideas of artistic control as in "audience"--anyway, I am moving off topic as per usual so I will end here with Thanks,

Bobbi
P.S. I wrote a story about "audience" when I left the visual art world or at least tried to--it is a true story--it is about how I boxed hundreds of drawings and canvases and etchings and etching plates--I found it a ceremonial way to say "good-bye" to my destroyed "art career" (partially self-induced) -- I put my visual images downstairs for the garbagemen (garbage people?/ sanitational engineers? p.c. lurks everywhere) in New York--but hours later I walked outside again only to find my work exhibited on the sidewalk in front of my apartment bldg.--people taking the drawings/ paintings they wanted. In this story I write about "audience" and how contracted are ideas of fame and who is an audience to our work (such an artifical concept--ie; these people wanted my work but the "setting" is what mattered according to everyone /not the acutal appreciation or whatever is exemplified when people rifle through the garbage of others (in my case: years of accumulated pieces of art made by me)-- and the complex way work is presented...i could go on forever but will stop here
Date: Thu, 17 Jul 2008 22:58:48 -0400
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

David,

As you perceptive analysis shows, the underlying question is, "who owns a work of art," more specifically a work of literature (but, in our world, one can apply the same question to images). My view is "no one." I am completely with Emerson here (and Thoreau and Spicer and Walter Benjamin). The work/image belongs to a movement of language/images which consittutes our thought/cultural/economic matrix (Emerson's landscape). If a corporation wants to use one of my phrases, I would be pleased because it implies that what I am doing as an individual -in Spicer's term, medium- has the ability to open to a wider world. Spicer's claim, "No one listens to poetry" and Benjamin's, "one writes for no one," are closed related to this. This radical isolation is liberating; if no one listens or one writes to no one, then no one owns what is written. The social contract of the author with the world becomes of a peculiar sort: between the writer and cultural, linguistic movements which are at the moment invisible, below the surface, in a sense "unneeded," the way Cassandra's admonitions were "unneeded," therefore, unheard. Of course, all this does not prevent Spicer from hoping to pick up boys through his poetry or Benjamin from hoping to get a university position. That desire -a version of payment- has little to do with how the writing occurs.

*I think "the death of the author" is a more specific and quite different concept. Initially, it applies to the lyric "I," asserting that this "I" has little to do with personal feelings or biography; but the "I" becomes a mark, a "moving zero," an elusive, transforming target, which registers the linguistic motion I have been pointing to above. "The death of the author," in that sense, it transforms the lyric; but It does not kill it or make it obsolete, as many suggested. Rather, it transforms it into a metaphysical medium, a medium of motion rather than personal expression.*

"The death of the author" is also at the heart of hypertext, which, as a form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership. But I think it is different in a significant way from the process I described earlier. In my view, it overlooks the radical isolation with which writing responding, opening to "hidden" movements requires. In one sense, all writing constitutes a hypertexts which other writers respond to, misread, alter, expand, etc. That is what Benjamin's "ideal language" is. But hypetext, as a conscious for of writing, assumes a present community. I am not sure if this presence helps or inhibits the process; maybe it does both.

Ciao,

Murat

↑ Index

192. CA Conrad
let's celebrate POET Jonathan Williams at Bartram's Garden with a reading from AN EAR IN BARTRAM'S TREE and other favorites!
Tue 22 Jul 2008

---

let's celebrate POET Jonathan Williams at Bartram's Garden with a reading from AN EAR IN BARTRAM'S TREE and other favorites!

DETAILS AND LINKS AT http://CAConradEVENTS.blogspot.com

To honor and celebrate Jonathan Williams EVERYONE is welcome to bring favorite poems by the great bard to Bartram's Garden in Philadelphia!

SUNDAY, August 3rd, at 1pm and we'll meet next to the FRANKLINIA TREE, which should be in bloom, just as it is on the cover of his famous New Directions book

VERY EASY TO GET TO! Public transit:Take No. 36 Trolley from City Hall to 54th Street. Cross railroad bridge to Garden entrance on left. For driving, easy directions found here:
http://www.bartramsgarden.org/information/directions.html

bring POEMS to read bring picnic lunch food
we'll have a FANTASTIC TIME in the garden celebrating this great American POET!

↑ Index

193. Stephen Vincent
Frank O'Hara &
Tue 22 Jul 2008

In case your summer has begun to fall into the gray, very flat tire mode - and you are stuck in Immobile without out a sunny beach on a clear lake or such (& any way it's currently rotten foggy cold in San Francisco), you may want to try out the last several weeks on John Latta's blog in which several mostly friendly, and smart combattants play 'button, button, who's got the button" in search of a genuine authentication of two of Frank O'Hara's poems. Go to: http://isola-di-rifiuti.blogspot.com/

Otherwise, or, as well, if you are in this City, to warm, chill and variously charm your ears, eyes, brains & hearts, and, maybe, the whole body, this evening you are welcome to hear me and George Albon read from our works at Books & Bookshelves at 7:30, the corner of 14th & Sanchez, San Francisco.

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

194. William Allegrezza
Tonight in Hyde Park: Etter and Gricevich read
Tue 22 Jul 2008

Please come to Series A tonight in Hyde Park to hear Carrie Etter and Andy Gricevich read. Starts at 7. 5020 S. Cornell, Chicago. Easy to access from public transportation. Parking. Byob!

Andy Gricevich is a writer, actor, director and musician living in Madison, Wisconsin. He recently ended his seven-year exile in San Diego, where he studied philosophy and poetry and performed contemporary chamber music and theater, and is happy to be back in the Midwest. As one half of the cabaret/satire duo The Prince Myshkins, he has traveled the country singing wordy, funny, irate songs at large protests and in classrooms, coffeehouses, living rooms and sheds. His poems have been, or will be, published by Spineless Books, Mirage #4/Period(ical), and Unlikely Stories.

Carrie Etter (1969-) is an American poet, originally from Normal, Illinois, who moved to Southern California at the age of 19 and on to London in 2001. She is currently an Associate Lecturer at Bath Spa University[1]. In the UK, her poems have appeared in Metre, Poetry Wales, Poetry Review, Reactions, Thumbscrew, The Times Literary Supplement, and elsewhere, while in the US her poems have appeared in Aufgabe, Barrow Street, Columbia, Meridian, The New Republic, Seneca Review, and many other journals. She is also an essayist and a critic. Her reviews of contemporary poetry have appeared in The Liberal, New Welsh Review, Poetry Matters, The Times Literary Supplement, and Verse.

↑ Index

195. mIEKAL aND
Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos
Tue 22 Jul 2008

(whew! what a relief...)

Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos

ATHENS (Reuters) - A Greek court has dismissed a request by residents of the Aegean island of Lesbos to ban the use of the word lesbian to describe gay women, according to a court ruling made public on Tuesday.

Three residents of Lesbos, the birthplace of the ancient Greek poetess Sappho whose love poems inspired the term lesbian, brought a case last month arguing the use of the term in reference to gay women insulted their identity.

In a July 18 decision, the Athens court said the word did not define the identity of the residents of the island, and so it could be validly used by gay groups in Greece and abroad.

The ruling ordered the plaintiffs to pay court expenses of 230 euros ($366.2).

"This is a good decision for lesbians everywhere," Vassilis Chirdaris, lawyer for the Gay and Lesbian Union of Greece, told Reuters. "A court in Athens could not stop people around the world from using it. It was ridiculous."

He said the plaintiffs were free to appeal the decision in a higher court.

Lesbos, which lies just off the Turkish Coast, has become a gathering spot for gay women from around the world, especially at the village of Eressos which is regarded as the birthplace of the poet in the 7th century B.C.

Several residents testified during the trial that the use of the word lesbian had brought recognition to the island and boosted its tourist trade.

↑ Index

196. Jennifer Karmin

Aug 3: Djerassi Open House in SF Area

Tue 22 Jul 2008

---

hey poetics folk....i have a few comp passes for this event. if anyone in the bay area wants to head to the santa cruz mountains for the day, be in touch. the readings will start around 1:30pm.

onwards,
jennifer karmin

****

DJERASSI RESIDENT ARTISTS PROGRAM
2008 OPEN HOUSE

FEATURING:
Stefan Emmelmann, photographer (Krems, Austria)
Gaelen Hanson, choreographer (Seattle, WA)
Cynthia Hooper, media artist (Eureka, CA)
Elizabeth Kadetsky, writer (New York, NY)
Jennifer Karmin, poet (Chicago, IL)
Greg Pierce, writer (New York, NY)
Osvaldo Ruiz, sculptor (San Francisco, CA)
Wadada Leo Smith, composer (Ventura, CA)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 3
1-5pm

WOODSIDE, CALIFORNIA
2325 Bear Gulch Road located 40 miles south of San Francisco directions at http://www.djerassi.org/map-and-directions.html

$25 per person
call [redacted] space is limited
reservations are required

Once a year the Djerassi Resident Artist Programâ€™s private grounds are open to the general public. This is a chance for people to see work by resident artists, walk the stunning natural landscape, and take a self-guided tour of the site-specific sculpture collection. Djerassi Programâ€™s gourmet chef will serve light refreshments.

The mission of the Djerassi Resident Artists Program is to support and enhance the creativity of artists by providing uninterrupted time for work, reflection, and collegial interaction in a setting of great natural beauty, and to preserve the land on which the Program is situated. http://www.djerassi.org

↑ Index

197. Joel Chace
Fwd: Galatea Resurrects Issue No. 10
Tue 22 Jul 2008

From: <[redacted]>
Date: Tue, Jul 22, 2008 at 10:57 AM
Subject: Galatea Resurrects Issue No. 10

==========

GR #10 Announcement

Galatea Resurrects is pleased to release its tenth issue with a record number of reviews/engagements: 68! Go to http://galatearesurrection10.blogspot.com for the issue. Also printed below is the Table of Contents for your convenience:

GALATEA RESURRECTS (A POETRY ENGAGEMENT) Issue No. 10:

EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION
By Eileen Tabios

NEW REVIEWS
Jeffrey Side reviews WHERE THE THREE RIVERS MEET by Aine MacAodha

Nicholas Manning reviews BEAUTIFUL, UNFINISHED:
PARABLE/SONG/CANTO/POEM by M.T.C. Cronin

Eileen Tabios engages ENDGAMES by Márton Koppány

Patrick James Dunagan reviews DERIVATIVE OF THE MOVING IMAGE by Jennifer Bartlett, BEAUTY [IS THE NEW ABSURDITY] by Jennifer Scappettone, DOG GIRL by Heidi Lynn Staples and THE MARVELOUS BONES OF TIME by Brenda Coultas

Eric Hoffman reviews PASSING OVER by Norman Finkelstein

Pamela Hart reviews BONE PAGODA by Susan Tichy

Tim Wright reviews GOING GOING by Jen Hofer

Nicholas Manning reviews PPL IN A DEPOT by Gary Sullivan

Tyrone Williams reviews THE ANATOMY OF OIL by Marcella Durand

Nicholas Manning reviews CORNSTARCH FIGURINE by Elizabeth Treadwell

Eileen Tabios engages & PERSONA, poems by Mackenzie Carignan and photographs by Felicia Ohnmacht

Francie Noyes reviews MIDNIGHTS, poetry by Jane Miller & artwork by Beverly Pepper

H. Francisco V. Penones, Jr. reviews AMIGO WARFARE by Eric Gamalinda

Francie Noyes reviews BLIND DATE WITH CAVAFY by Steve Fellner

Tyrone Williams reviews THE STRAITS by Kristin Palm

Eileen Tabios engages BE THAT EMPTY: APOLOGIA FOR AIR by Alice B. Fogel

Richard Lopez reviews BREAK ME OUCH by Michael Farrell

Tyrone Williams reviews OPEN BOX (IMPROVISATIONS) by Carla Harryman

James Stotts reviews ENTER MORRIS IMPOSTERNAK, PURSUED BY IRONIES by Eugene Ostashevsky

Thomas Fink reviews TRAVELING WITH THE DEAD by Carole Stone

Laurel Johnson reviews THE BLUE MOON SERIES by Rodger Martin

Ryan Daley reviews ... AND THEN engages FLOWERS OF BAD: A FALSE TRANSLATION OF CHARLES BAUDELAIRE'S LES FLEURS DU MAL by David Cameron

John Bloomberg-Rissman reviews HORACE: POEMS by Tim Atkins; COVERS by Susan Landers; and FLOWERS OF BAD: A FALSE TRANSLATION OF CHARLES BAUDELAIRE'S LES FLEURS DU MAL by David Cameron

Karen Rigby reviews ISLE OF THE SIGNATORIES by Marjorie Welish

Eileen Tabios engages THEORY OF COLORS by Mercedes Roffe

Pamela Hart reviews THE ORCHARD by Brigit Pegeen Kelly

Kristina Marie Darling reviews CHANTEUSE/CANTATRICE by Catherine Daly

Michael Layne Heath reviews WORDS IN YOUR FACE: A GUIDED TOUR THROUGH 20 YEARS OF THE NEW YORK CITY POETRY SLAM by Cristin O'Keefe Aptowicz

Andy Frazee reviews THE CITY VISIBLE: CHICAGO POETRY FOR THE NEW CENTURY edited by William Allegrezza and Raymond Bianchi

Jim McCrary reviews SPADE by David Bromige & Rychard Denner; ART IS WAR by Anne Boyer; THE ROMANCE OF HAPPY WORKERS by Anne Boyer; from THE TRADITIONS by Juliana Spahr; NO FACE by Judith Roitman

Evelyn Hampton engages THE SMALL ANYTHING CITY by Cynthia Arrieu-King

Christopher Mulrooney engages THE DEVELOPMENT OF AERIAL MILITARISM AND THE DEMOBILIZATION OF EUROPEAN GROUND FORCES, FORTRESSES, AND NAVAL FLEES by Paul Scheerbart, trans. by M. Kasper

Eileen Tabios engages FORGET READING by Anthony Hawley

Denise Dooley reviews THE RIVER IS WIDE / EL RIO ES ANCHO: TWENTY MEXICAN POETS Edited and Translated by Marlon L. Fick

Pamela Hart reviews CHILD IN THE ROAD by Cindy Savett

Nicholas Manning reviews THIS POEM/WHAT SPEAKS?/A DAY by Tom Beckett

Eileen Tabios engages ORANGES & SARDINES, Summer 2008, Vol. 1 Issue, Edited by David Krump, Andy Nicholson, Meghan Punschke and Didi Menendez

Karen Rigby reviews THE BOYS I BORROW by Heather Sellers

Eileen Tabios engages RAFETOWN GEORGICS by Garin Cycholl

Laurel Johnson reviews DEFIANCE by Hugh Fox

Jeff Harrison reviews SKINNY BUDDHA by Sheila E. Murphy

Pamela Hart reviews THE MARVELOUS BONES OF TIME by Brenda Coultas

Leny M. Strobel engages PRAU by Jean Vengua

Francie Noyes reviews CLOUD VIEW POETS: MASTER CLASSES WITH DAVID ST. JOHN, edited by Morley Clark, Jane Downs, CB Follett, and Susan Terris

Patrick James Dunagan reviews SHINY, No. 14, 2008, edited by Michael Friedman

Bob Marcacci reviews TWO HATS APPEAR WHEN APPLAUDED by Raymond Farr, OCCASION IN THE MOSAIC DISTANCE by Paul Klinger, [from SLOT (TO PULL AN HISTORICAL SITE FORM YOU)] by Jill Magi, SPECIMEN by Marci

Nelligan, INSECT COUNTRY (B) by Sawako Nakayasu, and SOUVENIRS by Bronwen Tate

Derek Motion reviews ORIGAMI SHIPWRECK by Craig Perez and Katy Acheson

William Allegrezza reviews IT'S ALL A MOVIE by Alex Gildzen

Nathan Logan reviews NEVER CRY WOOF by Shafer Hall

Prosy Abarquez-Delacruz reviews AN MAUPAY HA MGA WARAY UF IBA PA NGA MGA SIDAY (Waray poems with English translations) by Voltaire Oyzon

Rebecca Mabanglo-Mayor reviews BEIJING BACKGROUND by Bob Marcacci

Eileen Tabios engages ORGY IN THE BEEF CLOSET by Michael Koshkin

Laurel Johnson reviews SUDDENLY, FRUIT by Linda Tomol Pennisi

THE CRITIC WRITES POEMS
"{ . . . from HOMO SENTIMENTALIS : A GUIDE IN VERSE TO MODERN EMOTIONAL INTIMACY}" By Nicholas Manning

FEATURE ARTICLES
FEATURED POET: Cynthia Schwartzberg Edlow

Thomas Fink interviews Jennifer Kwon Dobbs

FROM OFFLINE TO ONLINE: REPRINTED REVIEWS
Francie Noyes reviews AVERNO by Louise Gluck

Allen Gaborro reviews STAGE PRESENCE: CONVERSATIONS WITH FILIPINO AMERICAN PERFORMING ARTISTS, edited by Theodore S. Gonzalves

Allen Gaborro reviews PRAU bv Jean Vengua

Juaniyo Arcellana reviews PINOY POETICS: A COLLECTION OF AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL ESSAYS ON FILIPINO AND FILIPINO-AMERICAN POETICS, edited by Nick Carbo

ADVERTISEMENT
Tiny Poetry Books Feeding the World…Literally!

BACK COVER
Dawg Days of Summer!

****

Get fantasy football with free live scoring. Sign up for FanHouse Fantasy Football today.
(http://www.fanhouse.com/fantasyaffair?ncid=aolspr00050000000020)

↑ Index

198. Maria Damon

Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos

Tue 22 Jul 2008

---

thanks mIEKAL, i really needed to get some closure on this. but...weren't they all from Lebanon...?

mIEKAL aND wrote:
> (whew! what a relief...)
>
> Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos
>
> ATHENS (Reuters) - A Greek court has dismissed a request by residents > of the Aegean island of Lesbos to ban the use of the word lesbian to > describe gay women, according to a court ruling made public on Tuesday.
>
> Three residents of Lesbos, the birthplace of the ancient Greek poetess > Sappho whose love poems inspired the term lesbian, brought a case last > month arguing the use of the term in reference to gay women insulted > their identity.
>
> In a July 18 decision, the Athens court said the word did not define > the identity of the residents of the island, and so it could be > validly used by gay groups in Greece and abroad.
>
> The ruling ordered the plaintiffs to pay court expenses of 230 euros > ($366.2).
>
> "This is a good decision for lesbians everywhere," Vassilis Chirdaris, > lawyer for the Gay and Lesbian Union of Greece, told Reuters. "A court > in Athens could not stop people around the world from using it. It was > ridiculous."
>
> He said the plaintiffs were free to appeal the decision in a higher > court.
>
> Lesbos, which lies just off the Turkish Coast, has become a gathering > spot for gay women from around the world, especially at the village of > Eressos which is regarded as the birthplace of the poet in the 7th > century B.C.
>
> Several residents testified during the trial that the use of the word > lesbian had brought recognition to the island and boosted its tourist > trade.

>

↑ Index

199. amy king
Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos -- "Cleansing" Sappho's Verse
Tue 22 Jul 2008

Dimitris Lambrou, proud Lesbian and leader of this inane court case, can just get in a long line of folks who have longed to rid the Isle of Lesbos of its pro-woman sentiment and history, mostly through efforts to "cleanse" Sappho’s verse, as noted here: http://www.glbtq.com/literature/sappho,5.html --

Attempts to Heterosexualize Sappho

Despite the strong evidence to the contrary, serious attempts have been made to heterosexualize Sappho. In antiquity, a legend was created that, in the end, Sappho renounced the love of women and fell in love with the ferryman Phaeon. Too ugly to get her man, she leapt off of the Leucadian Cliff to her death.

This legend is so incongruous with the authorial voice in Sappho's verse that the ancient biographers themselves were confused: They list two Sapphos of Lesbos. The second Sappho is described as either a lyre-player or courtesan, but specifically not the poetess. It is this second Sappho who committed suicide for love of Phaeon.

Ovid, in his Epistles, conflates the two Sapphos: It is the great poet Sappho who renounces girls and longs for Phaeon. It is this Sappho that writers, artists, and composers have focused on ever after.

Sappho's Marriage as Proof of her Heterosexuality

Some commentators cite as proof of Sappho's heterosexuality the fact that she was married and had a daughter. Curiously, her husband is cited as Kerkylas from Andros. The name Kerkylas is based on the word for "penis." Andros comes from the word for "men." If we translate, then, we find that the most famous lesbian of all was married to Penis of the city of Men.

Too good to be true? In any event, it is likely that she was married, but this has no bearing on her sexual orientation. Greek society was very different from our own: Marriage was seen as a civic responsibility and familial obligation. It was not designed--nor expected--to fulfill one's erotic or romantic needs. For that, men looked elsewhere. And marriage did not interfere with their homosexual affairs.

Marital relations were known as a ponos or "labor," ergon "work," or kamnos, "toil." In contrast, erotic affairs were called paidia or "play." Men were so unenthusiastic about participating in sexual intercourse with their wives that they had to be reminded.

Plutarch in his life of Solon suggests that a man should make love to his wife three times a month in order to ease marital tensions. Foreplay was actively discouraged: Too much pleasure might give a woman power over her husband and, thus, undermine his authority.

Clearly, women could not expect sexual fulfillment within marriage. But for a woman to remain unmarried in this society was unthinkable. According to Eva Cantarella in her book Pandora's Daughters, girls were betrothed as young as five years old and, by thirteen or fourteen, they were subjected to arranged marriages to men who were aged thirty or older.

Before and after marriage, women were completely segregated in the internal part of the house to which men had no access. Women did not come into contact with men outside their immediate family except occasionally at public festivals and funerals.

On Lesbos, aristocratic women like Sappho got an education, albeit a "female" one emphasizing music, singing, and dancing. But as Cantarella points out, at least this education helped form their individual personalities and offered them a means to express it.

If we take Sappho as a model teacher, it would appear that an appreciation of sensual expression, including lesbian affairs, was part of a girl's education. When a girl moved from maiden to married woman (at about fourteen), her time for play was over. She would have only memories of what must have been the happiest time of her life. It is no wonder that she wept on graduation.

Women were segregated with other women, and socialized and trained by them. What would be more natural than for romantic attractions and rivalries to occur among them, as occurred among their menfolk? Who is to say if Greek women had homosexual affairs of their own?

Sappho does, but, unfortunately, she is our only direct source for love between women; as Cantarella states, "Unlike male homosexuality, female homosexuality was not an instrument for the training of citizens. It therefore by definition interested only women."

Continued at http://www.glbtq.com/literature/sappho,5.html

The Debate over Sappho's Sexual Identity

In the face of her erotic poetry, it is hard to believe that scholars continue to argue that Sappho was not a lesbian in the modern sense of the word. From the first extant comments on Sappho's erotic relations with young women in the Hellenistic period to the present day, critics (predominantly male), appalled at the thought of women engaging in lesbian sexual activity, have tried to deny Sappho's homosexuality.

Their attempts range from deliberately mistranslating words that indicate that the beloved is female to forcing a heterosexual context on poems depicting lesbian desire.

For example, the famous Fragment 31 has been described as a marriage-song in which Sappho relates the girl's desirability for the groom's benefit. Her feelings in the poem continue to be hotly disputed. They have been described as anything ranging from jealousy, love, fear, wonder, and terror to an anxiety attack brought on by penis-envy.

Had this poem been written by a man, there would be little dispute. Nor has there been in the many translations penned by men. Of course, the gender dynamics of the poem are significantly altered when it becomes a male voice describing his response to a woman. Such translations are an insidious (if unintentional) way of heterosexualizing Sappho.

In the poem, Sappho watches a man's reaction to her beloved and marvels at his composure, so different from her own response. To anyone who has ever been a lover, the symptoms of infatuation are unmistakable:

Fragment 31
    To me, he seems like a God, that man,
Who can sit at ease in your presence
    Who can hear your melodic voice
Strumming close in his ear,
    Your provocative laughter:

Ample cause for cardiac arrest.
    You spied, I swallow all voice
    And my tongue lies crippled.
A lyric fire sweeps my flesh
    And my eyes stare blindly.
Rhombs crash close in my ear,
    A chilling sweat fingers my spine,
Trembling invades my every part
    And I am greener than grass.
To myself, I seem like a corpse, or near....

There is a whole tradition of "defenders" of Sappho. David Robinson is typical: "Villainous stories arose about her and gathered vileness till they reached a climax in the licentious Latin of Ovid."

The most famous of Sappho's "defenders" was the German Ulrich von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff who in his classic Sappho und Simonides depicted Sappho as a chaste Hausfrau, a virtuous pillar of the community and moral instructor of young girls. As Page describes it, Wilamowitz "gave new and lasting dignity to the old theory that Sappho was a paragon of moral and social virtues and that her poetry was grossly misunderstood in antiquity."

Wilamovitz explained Sappho's relationship with her charges by depicting her as a cult priestess in the service of an "honest" (that is, nonsexual) Aphrodite. As Page points out, there is absolutely no evidence for this theory. Nevertheless, much scholarly ink has been spilled trying to prove that despite her professed love of women, despite her poetic genius, Sappho was still a "good" woman.

Etc Etc, cont'd here -- http://www.glbtq.com/literature/sappho,3.html

Biographical Information Little is known about Sappho's life and the information that is available cannot be viewed as trustworthy because accounts of the poet's life have become thoroughly interwoven with legend and myth. The only standard, but unreliable, source of information about Sappho's life is the Suda, a Greek lexicon compiled about the end of the tenth century. It records that Sappho was a native of Lesbos, an island in Asia Minor, and that she was probably born in either Eresus or Mytilene. Her father's name is given as Scamandronymus, and her mother's as Cleis. Evidence also suggests that Sappho had three brothers, and that her family belonged to the upper class. She is believed to have married a wealthy man named Cercylas—they had a daughter named Cleis together. Sappho apparently spent the majority of her life in the city of Mytilene, and most of her time there was occupied in organizing and running a thiasos, or academy for unmarried young women. As was the custom of the age, wealthy families from Lesbos and neighboring states would send their daughters to live for a period of time in these informal institutions in order to be instructed in the proper social graces, as well as in composition, singing, and the recitation of poetry. Ancient commentary attests to the fact that Sappho's thiasos ranked as one of the best and most prestigious in that part of Greece, and as its dedicated teacher and spiritual leader, she enjoyed great renown. Some legends of Sappho's life indicate that she lived to old age, but several others contend that she fell hopelessly in love with a young boatman, Phaon, and, disappointed by their failed love affair, leaped to her death from a high cliff—a story made famous by the Roman poet Ovid in his Heroides, but one which has been largely discredited by scholars.

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

200. Obododimma Oha

Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos -- "Cleansing" Sappho's Verse

Tue 22 Jul 2008

Thank you for this highly enlightening post, Amy.
Obododimma.

----- Original Message ----
From: amy king <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, July 22, 2008 8:15:52 PM
Subject: Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos -- "Cleansing" Sappho's Verse

Dimitris Lambrou, proud Lesbian and leader of this inane court case, can just get in a long line of folks who have longed to rid the Isle of Lesbos of its pro-woman sentiment and history, mostly through efforts to "cleanse" Sappho's verse, as noted here: http://www.glbtq.com/literature/sappho,5.html --

Attempts to Heterosexualize Sappho

Despite the strong evidence to the contrary, serious attempts have been made to heterosexualize Sappho. In antiquity, a legend was created that, in the end, Sappho renounced the love of women and fell in love with the ferryman Phaeon. Too ugly to get her man, she leapt off of the Leucadian Cliff to her death.

This legend is so incongruous with the authorial voice in Sappho's verse that the ancient biographers themselves were confused: They list two Sapphos of Lesbos. The second Sappho is described as either a lyre-player or courtesan, but specifically not the poetess. It is this second Sappho who committed suicide for love of Phaeon.

Ovid, in his Epistles, conflates the two Sapphos: It is the great poet Sappho who renounces girls and longs for Phaeon. It is this Sappho that writers, artists, and composers have focused on ever after.

Sappho's Marriage as Proof of her Heterosexuality

Some commentators cite as proof of Sappho's heterosexuality the fact that she was married and had a daughter. Curiously, her husband is cited as Kerkylas from Andros. The name Kerkylas is based on the word for "penis." Andros comes from the word for "men." If we translate, then, we find that the most famous lesbian of all was married to Penis of the city of Men.

Too good to be true? In any event, it is likely that she was married, but this has no bearing on her sexual orientation. Greek society was very different from our own: Marriage was seen as a civic responsibility and familial obligation. It was not designed--nor expected--to fulfill one's erotic or romantic needs. For that, men looked elsewhere. And marriage did not interfere with their homosexual affairs.

Marital relations were known as a ponos or "labor," ergon "work," or kamnos, "toil." In contrast, erotic affairs were called paidia or "play." Men were so unenthusiastic about participating in sexual intercourse with their wives that they had to be reminded.

Plutarch in his life of Solon suggests that a man should make love to his wife three times a month in order to ease marital tensions. Foreplay was actively discouraged: Too much pleasure might give a woman power over her husband and, thus, undermine his authority.

Clearly, women could not expect sexual fulfillment within marriage. But for a woman to remain unmarried in this society was unthinkable. According to Eva Cantarella in her book Pandora's Daughters, girls were betrothed as young as five years old and, by thirteen or fourteen, they were subjected to arranged marriages to men who were aged thirty or older.

Before and after marriage, women were completely segregated in the internal part of the house to which men had no access. Women did not come into contact with men outside their immediate family except occasionally at public festivals and funerals.

On Lesbos, aristocratic women like Sappho got an education, albeit a "female" one emphasizing music, singing, and dancing. But as Cantarella points out, at least this education helped form their individual personalities and offered them a means to express it.

If we take Sappho as a model teacher, it would appear that an appreciation of sensual expression, including lesbian affairs, was part of a girl's education.

When a girl moved from maiden to married woman (at about fourteen), her time for play was over. She would have only memories of what must have been the happiest time of her life. It is no wonder that she wept on graduation.

Women were segregated with other women, and socialized and trained by them. What would be more natural than for romantic attractions and rivalries to occur among them, as occurred among their menfolk? Who is to say if Greek women had homosexual affairs of their own?

Sappho does, but, unfortunately, she is our only direct source for love between women; as Cantarella states, "Unlike male homosexuality, female homosexuality was not an instrument for the training of citizens. It therefore by definition interested only women."

Continued at http://www.glbtq.com/literature/sappho,5.html

The Debate over Sappho's Sexual Identity

In the face of her erotic poetry, it is hard to believe that scholars continue to argue that Sappho was not a lesbian in the modern sense of the word. From the first extant comments on Sappho's erotic relations with young women in the Hellenistic period to the present day, critics (predominantly male), appalled at the thought of women engaging in lesbian sexual activity, have tried to deny Sappho's homosexuality.

Their attempts range from deliberately mistranslating words that indicate that the beloved is female to forcing a heterosexual context on poems depicting lesbian desire.

For example, the famous Fragment 31 has been described as a marriage-song in which Sappho relates the girl's desirability for the groom's benefit. Her feelings in the poem continue to be hotly disputed. They have been described as anything ranging from jealousy, love, fear, wonder, and terror to an anxiety attack brought on by penis-envy.

Had this poem been written by a man, there would be little dispute. Nor has there been in the many translations penned by men. Of course, the gender dynamics of the poem are significantly altered when it becomes a male voice describing his response to a woman. Such translations are an insidious (if unintentional) way of heterosexualizing Sappho.

In the poem, Sappho watches a man's reaction to her beloved and marvels at his composure, so different from her own response. To anyone who has ever been a lover, the symptoms of infatuation are unmistakable:

Fragment 31
To me, he seems like a God, that man,
Who can sit at ease in your presence

Who can hear your melodic voice
Strumming close in his ear,
Your provocative laughter:

Ample cause for cardiac arrest.
You spied, I swallow all voice
And my tongue lies crippled.
A lyric fire sweeps my flesh
And my eyes stare blindly.
Rhombs crash close in my ear,
A chilling sweat fingers my spine,
Trembling invades my every part
And I am greener than grass.
To myself, I seem like a corpse, or near....

There is a whole tradition of "defenders" of Sappho. David Robinson is typical: "Villainous stories arose about her and gathered vileness till they reached a climax in the licentious Latin of Ovid."

The most famous of Sappho's "defenders" was the German Ulrich von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff who in his classic Sappho und Simonides depicted Sappho as a chaste Hausfrau, a virtuous pillar of the community and moral instructor of young girls. As Page describes it, Wilamowitz "gave new and lasting dignity to the old theory that Sappho was a paragon of moral and social virtues and that her poetry was grossly misunderstood in antiquity."

Wilamovitz explained Sappho's relationship with her charges by depicting her as a cult priestess in the service of an "honest" (that is, nonsexual) Aphrodite. As Page points out, there is absolutely no evidence for this theory. Nevertheless, much scholarly ink has been spilled trying to prove that despite her professed love of women, despite her poetic genius, Sappho was still a "good" woman.

Etc Etc, cont'd here -- http://www.glbtq.com/literature/sappho,3.html

Biographical Information Little is known about Sappho's life and the information that is available cannot be viewed as trustworthy because accounts of the poet's life have become thoroughly interwoven with legend and myth. The only standard, but unreliable, source of information about Sappho's life is the Suda, a Greek lexicon compiled about the end of the tenth century. It records that Sappho was a native of Lesbos, an island in Asia Minor, and that she was probably born in either Eresus or Mytilene. Her father's name is given as Scamandronymus, and her mother's as Cleis. Evidence also suggests that Sappho had three brothers, and that her family belonged to the upper class. She is believed to have married a wealthy man named Cercylas—they had a daughter named Cleis together. Sappho apparently spent the majority of her life in the city of Mytilene, and most of her time there was occupied in organizing and running a thiasos, or academy for unmarried young women. As was the custom of the age, wealthy families from Lesbos and neighboring states would send their daughters to live for a period of time in these informal institutions in order to be instructed in the proper social graces, as well as in composition, singing, and the recitation of poetry. Ancient commentary attests to the fact that Sappho's thiasos ranked as one of the best and most prestigious in that part of Greece, and as its dedicated teacher and spiritual leader, she enjoyed great renown. Some legends of Sappho's life indicate that she lived to old age, but several others contend that she fell hopelessly in love with a young boatman, Phaon, and, disappointed by their failed love affair, leaped to her death from a high cliff—a story made famous by the Roman poet Ovid in his Heroides, but one which has been largely discredited by scholars.

_____

Recent
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias
http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

201. David Chirot

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Tue 22 Jul 2008

Dear Murat:

Many thanks for your reply in ongoing conversation--

i spent some days in writing in return-- i keep trying to write responses & they all begin to turn into essays or parts of the "annals of the new extreme experimental poetry"--

i think that in light of the proliferations of torture, of prisons, of web censorship's and controls, surveillance and altering daily of sites, along with massive dissemination of disinformation, the question of "radical isolation" is being reframed in a great number of new ways and at an ever greater pace-- as well as the question of who has access to the Internet, to electricity, to cables.

to education, in the first place-- these are questions i find too little addressed as yet, though an awreness of them is growing probably by the minute-- these issues present new challenges & questions--related to the directions societies are taking in all aspects of "freedoms of speech, the press"--and ones on line have been having anincreasing effect on publishing in the print worlds--

in the following I mention these as pieces which are directly related to many of the issues being discussed--

David-Baptiste Chirot<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/05/conceptual-poetry-and-its-others.html> "Haunting Questions Found Hidden In Plain Site/Sight/Cite" with visual Works & Statement for Symposium on Conceptual Poetry and its Others

"Virtuality as Transcendentalism in Reverse" http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/search?q=virtuality+as+transcendentalism+in+reverse

Poems from Guantánamo <http://www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html>

"Non Poetry for Non Readers" Kaurab Translation Site

David-Baptiste Chirot: "Waterboarding & Poetry"<http://www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm>
Wordforword #13

I think that before ownership there is definition-- the boundary lines, the extents and depths, of an idea, a person, a place an event--have to be mapped and defined in order for them to be "owned," for there to be the act of "naming and claiming"--

One of the components of mapping and defining in this sense is that is made with reference to some authority-- as in writing that "one writes for no one," the authority of Benjamin was invoked (by yourself), and that of Spicer for "no one listens to poetry."

Hypertext, rather than being "the death of the author" and lacking in ownership, is simply a reinscription of the author "under another guise," and is owned very much indeed by a series of "utilities," corporations, program designers and producers of soft ware, etc. Without electricity there is no hypertext at all, let alone a web, an Internet. Electricity is owned and controlled and is not available to all, It can be shut off and on as an instrument of death and disease as in Gaza, or for non payment of the bill, ever more common right here in Milwaukee. Libraries, public computers--all these are diminishing in number and amount of time allowed on line to the individual otherwise without access. Electricity, the Internet, can also be be bombed out of existence as power grids, as in Serbia and Iraq, or entirely severed, line line, cable by cable, as in Rwanda, in preparation for the Genocides.

Access to the web is controlled also, and is a control which is being given new methods with which to deny, to restrict and alter access in terms of "profiles," "suspicious activities," "alien contacts," or simply having "a suspicious looking name."

Daily on the web, there are linkages which vanish, removed for a wide variety of reasons, or, being contacted, have been altered substantially by hackers, as individuals or as members of groups dedicated to various projects of "revisionism," "redacting," rewriting and remapping landscapes, histories, peoples and events.

Hypertext does involve authorship as well as ownership in that the linkages themselves that are selected to create the Hypertext evidence an "author" in charge of the programming which controls the selections of links, the means by which they are connected, and the over all point which is made, which is arrived at. And the idea that "one writes for no one" on the web has been pretty much made impossible by the passage into law of al the formerly illegal eavesdropping, let alone the addition of even more "freedoms" in the "freedom" to make "unfree" the web by corporations and governments, secret agencies and the military.

There is a great difference between a "radical isolation" which is chosen, and one which is enforced. And beyond "radical isolation," there is something more radical yet--the refusal by writers to write in writing, and the means by which writings may exist in writing yet be read as non writing, and so become non writings for non readers.

Another form of writing that creates its own readers by making them non readers of a writing it has taken possession of, and made into a form of "radically isolated" writing rapidly becoming a non read non writing, , is "Benjamin's Baudelaire." This fictional figure for a great many readers in the English speaking world, has come to replace the actual Baudelaire, whose writings become non writings for non readers who have turned their entire reading in Baudelaire's regard to that of Benjamin's writings of Benjamin's Baudelaire.

Surrounded by the heavy weight of documentations, of quotations, invested with the authority of a philosopher/critic far more acceptable to many readers than the actual Baudelaire and his actual poetry, "Benjamin's Baudelaire is a "fictional" "philosophical" construct who becomes "more real" than the ever dimmer receding "image" of the poet.

The "radical isolation" of "one who writes for no one," paradoxically makes of Baudelaire this figure, while Benjamin becomes the one who readers turn to for "Benjamin's Baudelaire," a figure far more acceptable and "comprehensible" than Baudelaire as a person and poet.

Of course, Benjamin did not intend this--"Benjamin's Baudelaire" is the creation of a great number of persons, who are at the same time in a sense also also reinscribing Benjamin from one position to another in ways which can be at variance with the writings and thought of Benjamin himself.

Jack Spicer, with After Lorca, writes a much different form of encounter with the writing of an other poet. "Benjamin's Baudelaire" indicates an ownership of the figure that the philosopher/critic's readers/critics have created, while "After Lorca" means that Spicer is finding ways to respond with the poetry of Lorca, not only in terms of Baudelairean "Correspondances"," but also as letters in a written "correspondence" with a dead poet who is also for a summer a lover and a ghost.

"After Lorca" is a way of writing "after effects," of the "ending of an affair," and the ending of the correspondence. These "after effects " of the dead poet/departed lover create the introductory note to the book penned by Lorca. Already in an "uncertain terrain," the reader is unmoored from being able to ascertain "with certainty" where "After Lorca" "ends" and Spicer begins--that is, are the poems "After Lorca," simply that, and in no way at all "actual translations of actual poems?"

After Lorca is extended from this "realm of uncertainty" by the Yasusada writings, in which the fictional Yasusada determines to write works "After Spicer." These works will, like After Lorca, contain the correspondences of Yasusada with Spicer, and inact "After" effects of Spicer's writings in those of the fictional Japanese poet. Where Spicer eschews the use of "supporting documentation," the Yasusada poet is supplied with a bevy of "scholarly and critical notes," as though to create a much smaller version of those documentations and allusions which surround the figure of "Benjamin's Baudelaire."

From "Benjamin's Baudelaire" to Spicer's After Lorca to Yasusada's After Spicer, one moves through an ever expanding series of the "After effects" of "dead authors" (Baudelaire, Lorca, Spicer, Yasusada is "already dead" himself at the "discovery and opening" of his texts, and learns of Spicer's death right after having written to him the first time.)

Rather than a "death of the author," dead authors find themselves experiencing the "posthumous existences," "After Lives," in their "After effects" among the writings of others. These reverbereations of Melville's "shock of recognition" that travels the world round, create rippling effects that travel, like those from a stone thrown in a pond--outwards from their continually shifting "centers," creating "spheres" not unlike that of Pascal's image of God: a sphere whose center is everywhere and circumference nowhere. These rippling "After effects" know no "bounds of sentient existence," and so do not experience "death," but continually appear, disappear, reappear as ghosts, as fictions, as "impersonations," and as actors playing their "part" in re-stagings of the "drama of their lives and works."

One finds the presences of lost, forgotten, hidden, "dead" beings , events and writings via an awareness of these "After effects" which are found all around one, as Whitman found in the Leaves of Grass the tongues of the "sleepers."

There are writers and writings which announce that they are giving voice to those silenced within history. A different way is to find among things in the world those evidences of the actions expressed as "After effects," and by working with them, begin to hear, read, write with these the emergence of the words of the "dead," the ghosts, the fictional ones. Generated by the "shock of recognition," the collaborations of "the living and the dead" find among the unread non-writings "Correspondances" and correspondences creating linkages in which it is neither one singly that speaks and writes, but this Other.

(This is what the rubBEings i have been working with for almost a decade now are. This found non writings hidden in plain site/sight/cite i have worked with when confined in cramped and controlled "non interesting" places, while homeless and sleeping among them, inside of every structure, and outside, all around. As "overlooked" "Unseen" non writings, one begins with working with things which are themselves in a kind of "radical isolation" and in turn, the things one makes with them--as far as one had any thought of it, one doubted there would ever be an audience other than passersby and police officers, property owners and viewers who expressed delight and moved on. To work in full view and be at the same time working in a sense with an "unknown non art form" --known when known at all as an ancient method of copying, indeed the very first "copier machine!"--one realizes often that "who an audience might be" is "unthinkable" in a sense, as what one is finding is more than likely not of any interest to anyone, except to oneself and these collaborators one is working with. One is working with--the excitement of finding--as where it is going, one has no idea other than places of "an outside," where there is a sense of freedom in being in an area without any DEFINITIONS.)

There's a paradox at the heart of quoting well known writers to the effect that "one writes for no one," and that "no one listens to poetry," in that these words are in fact "speaking to a great many, and especially oneself." The words in turn are a sign that one is not writing for "no one," but rather for that as yet

"unknown reader." "No one" can in effect also mean "no particular one," which is to say "many" rather than simply a "one" as a specific and limited "one."

Taking these words to heart as a writer means one is using as examples persons who, though writing for no one or saying that no one listens to poetry, are themselves the proof of the contrary. This enables one to believe that though one is writing for no one and/or no one listens to poetry, there will be persons for whom one writes, and ones who do listen to poetry.

For are not these writers quoted the very proof of this? And, quoting them, does not one lay bare one's belief in this same thing being possible for one's self and one's writings? That is, by virtue of these examples, one takes hope--

The very setting of words to a surface--rock, paper, wood, glass, plastic, anything in short including sands which are washed away--indicates a writing for some one to at some point find it.

After all, person who really did write for no one--would have left no quotes to this effect behind them. There would be no writing at all there to find.

Of course, there exist incredible tonnages of unread writings and unheard poetries in the world, whose unreadabilities and unheard poetries are so because they do not fit into the defined boundaries and tastes of what is readable, what is poetry. Some are those in the long parades of writings and poetries discovered only later on,, when the definitions are more welcoming to them, or, are poetries and writings once considered fabulously readable and poetic which have fallen out of fashion or interest and so taken up residence among the archives of the forgotten.

There are also a great many writings existing at al times which are unread or considered non poetries, not listened to, which are so because of the readers and readings who may on the one hand have yet to learn how to read them, or, on the other hand, because the writings and poetries do not want to be read or heard yet to walk among the non readers and no listeners as a sign of refusal of them in their state of non reading and non listening.

And yet again, are those writings and poetries which are never committed to writing in the first place, and among which may be some of the greatest works ever created, yet, having been created by those forbidden through thousands of years from learning to read or write, they have existed only in the minds of their creators, and perhaps, here and there, as spoken to others who have gone on to forget them, or recalled but small bits and pieces.

There are also writers like one in a series of stories I am writing and others in essays which are interested in this, which participate in the refusal of writing so that it does not fall into the hands of others. Or simply as a refusal of writing, while al the while writing elsewhere--in the mind or in other forms which are not recognized as writing.

In an essay written for the recent Symposium conceptual Poetry and its Others, one of the figures noted in this regard is that of Bartleby the Scrivener whose job it is to be a copy clerk yet faced with his task, "would prefer not to" write down a single mark. This conception of writing has interested me for along time, hence the thinking of the untold number of writings through history written by humans which were never in writing due to all manner of reasons preventing them from knowing how to write at all, as well as all sorts of writings by writers who were not allowed to write, leading to another group, those writers ho write a writing which is meant to be unread, even when a person is actually reading it.

These ideas lead one to to strange areas where the fictional and the factual exist alongside each other as a paradoxical writing re unwritings and nonwritings and unread and unreadable writings. Moving along in these areas, one's hope is to find others who are interested in these questions. I had read in an Introduction to a book by Cesar Aira written by Roberto Bolano of an author named Enrique Vila-Matas.

Ever on the lookout for something by this author besides what found on line, one day I came across an old issue of Grand street in a dollar bin, and in it were excerpts from Bolano's Distant Star, a great favorite of mine, and one from a book by Vila-Matas--which turned out to be from Bartleby and Company--taking Bartleby as I had done as a figure of a writer who does not write, who refuses to write. . In this way a fictional non writing writer leads one to a writer ho shares the same interests and starting point for similar meditations, and who also mixes the fictional with the factual in the study of writing to do with the unwritten --and the unreadable--as a form of writing.

If one writes with a sense that known and even very well known writers have written that they write for no one, and of poets who write that no one listens to poetry, then one is beginning really from the premise that one actually is writing for someone, somewhere, sometime.

That hope which is thrown out into the oceans as the "message in a bottle" is implied in the very act of the writing which entertains this premise. In this sense, one is working with writing which is recognized at the start as being one which has enough in it of what is recognized as writing to be found, possibly, someday, as indeed writing that is readable and so becomes classified among the world's writings.

In a sense then, one is still imprisoned in objects which can be recognized by the definitions of writing that are acceptable, or, being close enough to these, will at some point hopefully be so.

Rather than being "a writing for no one" written in "radical isolation," it is a writing which is written within a writing that one acknowledges being part of,and so hopes that with the passage of time, maybe very short, maybe a bit longer, being carried in the flows of this writing, its 'message in a bottle" will be found, and found to be acceptable and easily read.

"Acceptance," to have one's writing be "accepted," even if one was thinking that one was writing for "no one," is this not a paradox which the question of unwritten writings begins to open? What begins to take place once one thinks not of acceptance, but of refusal, to consider unwritten writings as a refusal to write at al, or, if forced to write, to write in such a way that it is a refusal of readability according to the definitions of those who are forcing one to write?

A Russian artist notes that "Language is a fascism not because it silences, but because it forces one to speak."

The rejection of silence and forcing of speech--is the function of torture. Even though it has long been well known that torture rarely forces a speaking which "tells the truth," torture remains very much in use. So what is the purpose then? As the earliest of torturers could tell the current ones, it is not what the speaker is forced to speak, it is simply that the speaker is forced to speak that accomplishes the mission of torture.

Where once one might speak of a "tortured prose," there is now the availability of "torture's prose or poetry." The latter is considered a form of "false speech" or writing as it is produced under duress, is forced--even if truly confessional, unlike "confessional poetry," it is denied the possibility of being a truth which is a readily given one, and so distanced from a "Truth value." Yet, being unreadable in such terms, hence being a kind of non-writing, may there not be even here a non written writing which is going on that is being created, not as a code to elude the conceptions of readability of the torturers, of which they are continually in fear, but of a non writing of a different kind, a non writing in writing which is a refusal of readability, a non writing which is a writing outside of codes which can always be suppressed or deciphered?

Forced to write, how then does writing refuse to be "in" the writing that results, and at the same time refuse to be in codes which may be readable by someone?

In a time in which the Internet and all communications are transparent, spied on, listened to and read, and in which prisons fill with unprecedented numbers of people and of unprecedented size are proliferating--(with America leading the way in numbers and percentage of population in the prisons system, and Gaza leading in size and numbers of a single prison)--and in which the uses of torture, disinformation, faked footage, planted evidences and tampered witnesses expands daily--an examination of these writings of refusal, these refusals of writing in terms defined by the Security and Police forces of the cultures of varying societies, is needed.

In a world in which writing is continually "under observation" and more and more forms of language turn into doublespeak--the need to find other ways of writing and reading the simplest words and phrases opens--while around it so much else is closing and being closed off.

↑ Index

202. andrew burke
Re: hello
Tue 22 Jul 2008

And you. Who else do I know in this neighbourhood?

Just getting used to the flow of conversation, etc. No doubt I will speak up eventually about matters poetic ...

Andrew

2008/7/22 Peter Ciccariello <[redacted]>:

> Welcome Andrew, nice to see you here!
>
> - Peter Ciccariello
>
> On Sun, Jul 20, 2008 at 10:29 PM, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> welcome to the list.
>
> andrew burke wrote:
>
> Hello, I'm new here. I don't know the local introduction behaviours, so I'll > just extend my hand and gabble.
>
> I've been writing poetry since the 1960s, firstly under the influence of > Milton et al, but then influenced by the Beats and jazz liner notes, Zen > (Beat to Square), and folk songs. By the time I was 18 and leaving school,
> I
> was ready to hit the road and escape my conservative surburban upbringing.
> So I hitched from Perth to Sydney, west coast to east coast Australia - safe
> back then, not so safe now.

> At this time I was published in a university literary quarterly - a short > Saroyanesque story about a boy staring at ants, yet somehow the reader knows
> he is damaged in some way. I've lost it, thankfully, because it remains
> 'beautiful' in my memory, and was probably more awkward on the page. Much > of my teenage poetry has gone the same way. Yet that early publishing > encouragement set me on the path to being a lifelong writer.
> But I go on too long ... This is a similar start to many. Let's just say I > have written a mess of poems over the last forty plus years, some of which > has appeared in print (many mags, six books) and some of which has appeared > disguised as plays, tiny films, stories and one novel.
>
> After quarter of a century in advertising (my anti-intellectual years), I > changed careers and taught writing and literature at various universities,
> including a recent stint at Shanxi Normal University in Linfen, China.
> During these, my intellectual years, I received a PhD from Edith Cowan
> University three years ago.
>
> But my main interest is my next poem, and my curiosity has lead me to > investigate many poetics from around the world. On this list, I hope to gain > more insights and share some of my passion for poetry.
>
> My day to day interests are well exposed on my blog (address below).
>
> Thank you for reading.
>
> Andrew
> http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
> http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/
>
> guidelines

--
Andrew

http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/

↑ Index

203. Joel Weishaus

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Tue 22 Jul 2008

Jim:

I agree with all you say here.

Another problem with the contemporary visual arts is that the artists are usually trained in a university art department that are tilted toward training future professors. These departments graduate would-be artists out of whom taking risks has been conditioned. Some have even taken courses in business. Even the talented ones are not taught how to live their lives creatively, which is what's most important. So that, eventually, their work dries into the usual market decoration. Possibly, then, artists who attend college should minor in art, and major in philosophy, comparative religion, psychology, poetry, anthropology, et al.

Poets don't fair any better. What could be a plus: they cannot look forward to living on the proceeds of their work, is usually a minus, as they see little options but to teach, apply for the usual grants, and write the poems that are expected of them. A friend of mine talks about the virtue of being an "intellectual janitor." But, especially with an expensive degree in hand, who has the dedication to their art to walk such a noble path?

Unlike the art market, and the publishing market, the slice of the internet where artists function is, so far, non-judgmental. The problem is who one brings to it.

-Joel

----- Original Message -----
From: "Jim Andrews" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, July 21, 2008 9:11 PM
Subject: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

> i thought that was an interesting post, murat. i don't agree with lots of it, but you get at some things that are important that not too many people seem able to write about at all, even if you're wrong about them.

the interesting part, i felt, was the stuff on ownership. very writerly. not so much anti-capitalist as yawning at capitalism in a poetry context. which is right, i feel. capitalism in a poetry context is just more or less irrelevant.

*contrast that, however, with visual art. if you hang out with new york visual artists online or anywhere else, you see just how little sense any art makes to them that doesn't work within capitalism. galleries, products, and so on. if it doesn't make it monetarily, it just doesn't count. it can't survive. in the 'market of ideas' in which new york artists* are immersed.

which is too bad for new york art, it seems to me. but i guess it makes sense there.

whereas the 'market of ideas' you allude to is less about a capitalistic market as something different. which is important. and expensive, in a sense.

the danger of poetry resides, in part, in its being able to operate, to some extent (more than visual art) in other dimensions than the genuinely boring capitalistic market of ideas.

genuinely boring. deeply. terminally. genuine stuff of the forces of dullness. witness the art it promulgates in mass media, which is little more than a provisional business proposition.

which is one of the reasons i remain optimistic about the internet. as medium for something else.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

204. Lauren Russell
Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos -- "Cleansing" Sappho's Verse
Wed 23 Jul 2008

That's very interesting, Amy. Thanks for sending. Incidentally, I was always under the impression that Sappho was bisexual.

Lauren Russell

↑ Index

205. Bobbie Lurie
Re: hello
Wed 23 Jul 2008

Thank you so much for the introduction and your lovely blog. Welcome!

andrew burke wrote:
> Hello, I'm new here. I don't know the local introduction behaviours, so I'll > just extend my hand and gabble.
>
> I've been writing poetry since the 1960s, firstly under the influence of > Milton et al, but then influenced by the Beats and jazz liner notes, Zen > (Beat to Square), and folk songs. By the time I was 18 and leaving school, I > was ready to hit the road and escape my conservative surburban upbringing.
> So I hitched from Perth to Sydney, west coast to east coast Australia - safe > back then, not so safe now.
>
> At this time I was published in a university literary quarterly - a short > Saroyanesque story about a boy staring at ants, yet somehow the reader knows
> he is damaged in some way. I've lost it, thankfully, because it remains > 'beautiful' in my memory, and was probably more awkward on the page. Much > of my teenage poetry has gone the same way. Yet that early publishing > encouragement set me on the path to being a lifelong writer.
> But I go on too long ... This is a similar start to many. Let's just say I > have written a mess of poems over the last forty plus years, some of which > has appeared in print (many mags, six books) and some of which has appeared > disguised as plays, tiny films, stories and one novel.
>
> After quarter of a century in advertising (my anti-intellectual years), I > changed careers and taught writing and literature at various universities, > including a recent stint at Shanxi Normal University in Linfen, China.

> During these, my intellectual years, I received a PhD from Edith Cowan > University three years ago.
>
> But my main interest is my next poem, and my curiosity has lead me to > investigate many poetics from around the world. On this list, I hope to gain > more insights and share some of my passion for poetry.
>
> My day to day interests are well exposed on my blog (address below).
>
> Thank you for reading.
>
> Andrew
> http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
> http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/
>
> ==========
>

↑ Index

206. David A. Kirschenbaum

NYC Tues./Boog City presents BookThug

Wed 23 Jul 2008

---

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

BookThug
(Toronto)

this Tues. July 29, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by BookThug publisher Jay MillAr

Featuring readings from

Cara Benson
Melissa Buzzeo

Mark Goldstein
Evan Kennedy
Jay MillAr
Steven Zultanski

with music from

Apostle of Hustle

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

BookThug
http://www.bookthug.com
http://www.bookthug.blogspot.com
http://www.apollinaires.com

BookThug is a Canadian independent literary publishing house that grew up with Apollinaire?s Bookshoppe, an online bookshoppe that specializes in the books that no one wants to buy. BookThug chooses to publish no particular stream of poetry or literary content; rather the goal is to loosely follow Eliot?s credo that there are only two kinds of poetry: Good and Bad. BookThug could be said to represent either depending on your point of view. BookThug resists being hegemonic about borders, including those between languages, between genders, between countries, and between genres. Above all, it seeks to promote aMUSEment to the citizens of BookThug Nation through the publication of unexpected literature. BookThug is as BookThug does.

Performer Bios

Apostle of Hustle
http://www.arts-crafts.ca/apostleofhustle/index2.html
http://www.myspace.com/apostleofhustle
http://www.facebook.com/home.php#/pages/Apostle-Of-Hustle/6700162382

It?s a long Hitchcockian zoom-in, the omniscient clouds part, the sleazy waterfront scene is set. Like Steve Zissou?s Belafonte cross-section, we can see a number of little hives of activity: a young man loiters behind a cramped bar; faces light by low lights, listens intently while one speaks, gesturing wildly; a captain barks orders at his crew to hurry the fuck up; someone throws flowers into the sea; a vintage jukebox amuses the hipsters on a crawl. Welcome to the borough of a possible nowhere.

Apostle of Hustle first took shape after a two-month sojourn in El Barrio Santo Suarez, in Havana, in 2001. This experience was mind blowing for Apostle of Hustle?s lead (Andrew Whiteman) from the ground up: the community, the fashion, the speed, and the music. Whiteman returned to Toronto invigorated about a possible music that did not yet exist. Knowing he wanted to create it, Whiteman took up residency at a local dive as Apostle Of Hustle, a quartet. The band played Brazilian and Cuban folk songs, as well as Tom Waits, PJ Harvey, and Marc Ribot covers. Whiteman played guitar and tres; plus he recruited Dean Stone on drums and Julian Brown, an old buddy from the mid-?90s indie scene, on upright bass. The fourth position was a kind of ?open door? to whomever might show up on their nights, anyone from Bryden Baird (Feist) on flugel horn to Daniel Stone (cache) on percussion.

Apostle of Hustle?s first endeavor, Folkloric Feel, was released in July of 2004. It was a Frankenstein of a record, recorded in over four different locations at different times. By this point, Whiteman was almost completely consumed with recording and touring with Broken Social Scene and finishing the Apostle of Hustle record could only happen in between tours. A collection of tracks and mixes and ideas was brought to BSS producer David Newfeld?s door and he somehow was able to create the psychedelic debut that came out on the Arts & Crafts label.

National Anthem of Nowhere was recorded in Montreal at Studio Masterkut in March of 2006. This time around the band sought the production talents of Martin Davis Kinack (BSS/Sam Roberts front-of-house man, as well as Sarah Harmer producer). National Anthem of Nowhere was finished in Whiteman?s bedroom in September and mixed in the woods at Marty's secret studio locale. The vibe was almost completely vin rouge, even after the Montreal stint. A few guests lurked?Liam O?Neil from the Stills, Evan Cranley and Chris Seligman from Stars, and Lisa Lobsinger who sang with BSS on their 2006 tours. Daniel Stone is present on almost all the tracks playing conga, bongo, and especially caja. The record sounds so good, he even decided to skip part of the salsa season to tour with Apostle of Hustle in 2007. Nice one, compañero.

Cara Benson
http://necessetics.com/sousrature.html

Cara Benson's work appears in print and online. She teaches poetry every Tuesday at a NY State Prison and edits the online lit/art journal Sous Rature. Spell/ing ( ) Bound, written in collaboration with Kai Fierle-Hedrick and Kathrin Schaeppi, is forthcoming from 'letrique press. Her BookThug title, Quantum Chaos & Poems: A Manifost(o)ation, tied for first place in this year?s bpNichol Chapbook Award.

Melissa Buzzeo
http://www.xcp.bfn.org/buzzeo.html

Born in 1977 in New York, Melissa Buzzeo has worked as a counselor, curator, professor, and palm reader.City M (Leona Press, New York) is presently being translated into French for inclusion in a Quebecois journal. Disparate work has been translated into Catalan and anticipating publication in Spain. A second chapbook, In The Garden of the Book, is forthcoming from NO press (Calgary). Currently she is reaching toward translation in living space. Face is forthcoming from BookThug.

Mark Goldstein
http://www.beautifuloutlaw.com

Toronto writer Mark Goldstein?s poems have appeared in periodicals including Matrix and echolocation. An avid small presser, he has issued limited edition books under the Beautiful Outlaw imprint. After Rilke: To Forget You Sang (BookThug) is his first book. From Shore to Shore, a book-length poem will be published in 2009. He is currently translating poems by the late Paul Celan.

Evan Kennedy
http://thecheer-upbook.blogspot.com

Evan Kennedy is the author of Us Them Poems (BookThug) and The Cheer up Book of Wounded Soldiers(Dirty Swan Projects). He grew up in Texas and has lived in several neighborhoods in Brooklyn.

Jay MillAr
http://www.jaymillar.blogspot.com

Jay MillAr lives in Toronto where he runs BookThug and Apollinaire?s Bookshoppe. He is the author of four collections of poetry, including Mycological Studies, False Maps for Other Creatures, and the small blue. In 2006 he published Double Helix, a collaborative ?novel? written with Stephen Cain. His most recent publication, Lack Lyrics, was written while being downsized out of a comfortable but directionless position at an antiquarian bookstore. It is a pathetically self-published chapbook that has no spine, isn?t eligible for the kinds of funding, attention, or prizes that ?real books? of poetry qualify for, and doesn?t even have any blurbish endorsements from other writers attached to it. It even tied for the 2008 bpNichol Chapbook Award, proving that it lacks even that certain something it takes to win an entire prize, and tied for first place in this year?s bpNichol Chapbook Award.

Steven Zultanski
http://youtube.com/watch?v=xti3H6Kz08E

Steven Zultanski is the author of the chapbook Homoem (Radical Readout), and the forthcoming This and That Lenin (BookThug) and Steve's Poem (Lettermachine). He edits President's Choice magazine, a Lil' Norton publication. His poetry has appeared in Antennae, FO(A)RM, The Physical Poets, and Shiny, among others.

Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Thurs. Sept. 18
minor/american (Durham, N.C.)

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://www.welcometoboogcity.com
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

207. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Wed 23 Jul 2008

Jim,

While writing my original post, I thought of making it only about poetry, being completely aware of what you are saying about the world of painting, particularly in New York, which has been the center of the art market for years. I decided against it because what I am saying applies to art in general, representing one end of a spectrum. One can see this tension most clearly in film, even the most stripped down version of which requires a significant capital investment. The issue of means of production (studio, independent, video, etc.) is an integral part of discussing an art of film. What is peculiar about poetry is that it both requires very little capital investment and it has almost as small audience. The investment poetry requires is the poet's time (poetry is an art which consumes time; time is at the heart of it). This makes the poet his or her audience. This condition so clear in poetry exists in all arts, only blurred by the exigencies of money in other arts. I wrote about this in my essay, "Is Poetry a Job, Is a Poem a Product?"

Jim, you do not mention where you disagree with me. I would like to know.

Ciao,

Murat

Jim

On Tue, Jul 22, 2008 at 12:11 AM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> i thought that was an interesting post, murat. i don't agree with lots of it, but you get at some things that are important that not too many people seem able to write about at all, even if you're wrong about them.
>
> the interesting part, i felt, was the stuff on ownership. very writerly. not so much anti-capitalist as yawning at capitalism in a poetry context. which is right, i feel. capitalism in a poetry context is just more or less irrelevant.
>
> *contrast that, however, with visual art. if you hang out with new york visual artists online or anywhere else, you see just how little sense any art makes to them that doesn't work within capitalism. galleries, products, and so on. if it doesn't make it monetarily, it just doesn't count. it can't survive. in the 'market of ideas' in which new york artists are immersed.*
>
> which is too bad for new york art, it seems to me. but i guess it makes sense there.
>
> whereas the 'market of ideas' you allude to is less about a capitalistic market as something different. which is important. and expensive, in a sense.
>
> the danger of poetry resides, in part, in its being able to operate, to some extent (more than visual art) in other dimensions than the genuinely boring capitalistic market of ideas.
>
> genuinely boring. deeply. terminally. genuine stuff of the forces of dullness. witness the art it promulgates in mass media, which is little more than a provisional business proposition.
>
> which is one of the reasons i remain optimistic about the internet. as medium for something else.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

208. Bobbie Lurie

the originality of appropriation vs. the mass media

Wed 23 Jul 2008

Jim, having been in both worlds, I disagree with you. The poetry world may not run on money but it runs on ego--and only ego and ego to me is more dangerous than capitalism in terms of art--and the art world in New York, where yes, one can actually make some (little bit of) money is really a more open world, at least as I experienced it. There are so many factions and enmities in the poetry world--but there was a lot of support between visual artists I felt and I actually felt part of that had to do with the fact of making some small amt. of money from our work--but then I am also familiar with dealings with "Hollywood" and of course Hollywood is the epitomy of corruption but the fact that money is an obvious part of it makes it less corrupt in the sense that it is all on the table and everyone knows and nothing is hidden. I just find that ego is the enemy more than capitalism.--bobbi

Date: Mon, 21 Jul 2008 21:11:03 -0700
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

i thought that was an interesting post, murat. i don't agree with lots of it, but you get at some things that are important that not too many people seem able to write about at all, even if you're wrong about them.

the interesting part, i felt, was the stuff on ownership. very writerly. not so much anti-capitalist as yawning at capitalism in a poetry context. which is right, i feel. capitalism in a poetry context is just more or less irrelevant.

contrast that, however, with visual art. if you hang out with new york visual artists online or anywhere else, you see just how little sense any art makes to them that doesn't work within capitalism. galleries, products, and so on. if it doesn't make it monetarily, it just doesn't count. it can't survive. in the 'market of ideas' in which new york artists are immersed.

which is too bad for new york art, it seems to me. but i guess it makes sense there.

whereas the 'market of ideas' you allude to is less about a capitalistic market as something different. which is important. and expensive, in a sense.

the danger of poetry resides, in part, in its being able to operate, to some extent (more than visual art) in other dimensions than the genuinely boring capitalistic market of ideas.

genuinely boring. deeply. terminally. genuine stuff of the forces of dullness. witness the art it promulgates in mass media, which is little more than a provisional business proposition.

which is one of the reasons i remain optimistic about the internet. as medium for something else.

ja
http://vispo.com

==

↑ Index

209. Bobbie Lurie
the originality of appropriation--response to Murat
Wed 23 Jul 2008

Murat, no my story is nothing like David Chirot's work with found objects--these were finished art works that could have hung in a gallery and, under the right lighting and with the right reviewers, might have been deemed whatever--I am writing of context only--my attempt was to destroy these works. They were not found objects but finished "art objects" taken out of the context which would have "legitimized" them according to the "art world"-- No one made art work out of these (I doubt--they were already finished pieces)--I have no idea what was done with them but they were being picked up and taken by a lot of people when I had wrapped them like caskets wanting them to be dumped and buried--and "context is everything" in the art world--because while a visual artist will say they want their work seen and owned and appreciated by others the truth is visual artists want their work seen within the gallery system with a review attached and then seen and owned and appreciated etc. If my desire was "pure" (as in David's work) I would have been happy to see people taking my work but I wanted "control" as in "the control to destroy" that which I had no intention of trying to "sell" within the gallery system. David Chirot is making art from what he finds I believe but I doubt (I'd have to ask David) if David would use finished art pieces thrown away by an artist tired of her images. my intention was just to say "it is all seen according to context" and that, for me, is the artificiality of it--thank you, Murat--Bobbi Date: Tue, 22 Jul 2008 06:39:26 -0400 From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> Subject: Re: the "originality" of appropriation--response to Murat

Bobbie,

What happened to your art work reminds me of david Chirot's "RubEings." They could have been picked by him and used in some form.

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Jul 18, 2008 at 1:29 PM, Bobbie Lurie <[redacted]> wrote:

> Murat,
> I just wanted to send my thanks for what you wrote below and to say that
> "this radical isolation is liberating" is the truest > thing for me. There is such a sense of "difficulty" and "ambition" in the > writer who makes writing a "career"--the > writers who simply enjoy writing/ who do not buy into the illusion of the > artist's self-importance are a joy to know and to read. It is the process > itself > as far as I'm concerned. Perhaps my life experience has taught me to > examine > the idea of "audience" very closely--we speak to ourselves is my conclusion > and any "audience" does the same --and it is absurd for me to worry about > an audience--once we no longer have consciousness and self-consciousness > the world vanishes for us is my conclusion--our suffering comes from trying > to control and wanting to control beyond the grave sounds like serious > suffering to me as does all other ideas of artistic control as in > "audience"--anyway, I am moving off topic as per usual so I will end here > with
> Thanks,
> Bobbi
> P.S. I wrote a story about "audience" when I left the visual art world or
> at > least tried to--it is a true story--it is about how I boxed hundreds of > drawings > and canvases and etchings and etching plates--I found it a ceremonial > way to say "good-bye" to my destroyed "art career" (partially self-induced)
> -- I put my visual images downstairs for the garbagemen (garbage people?/ > sanitational engineers? p.c. lurks everywhere) in New York--but hours > later I walked outside again only to find my work exhibited on the sidewalk > in front of my apartment bldg.--people taking the drawings/ painting s they > wanted. In this story I write about "audience" and how contracted are ideas > of fame and who is an audience to our work (such an artifical concept--ie; > these people wanted my work but the "setting" is what mattered according > to everyone /not the acutal appreciation > or whatever is exemplified when people rifle through the garbage of others > (in my case: years of accumulated pieces of art made by me)-- > and the complex way work is presented...i could go on forever but will > stop here

> Date: Thu, 17 Jul 2008 22:58:48 -0400
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media
> "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article
>
> David,
>
> As you perceptive analysis shows, the underlying question is, "who owns a > work of art," more specifically a work of literature (but, in our world, > one > can apply the same question to images). My view is "no one." I am > completely > with Emerson here (and Thoreau and Spicer and Walter Benjamin). The > work/image belongs to a movement of language/images which consittutes our > thought/cultural/economic matrix (Emerson's landscape). If a corporation > wants to use one of my phrases, I would be pleased because it implies that > what I am doing as an individual -in Spicer's term, medium- has the ability > to open to a wider world. Spicer's claim, "No one listens to poetry" and > Benjamin's, "one writes for no one," are closed related to this. This > radical isolation is liberating; if no one listens or one writes to no one, > then no one owns what is written. The social contract of the author with
> the > world becomes of a peculiar sort: between the writer and cultural, > linguistic movements which are at the moment invisible, below the surface, > in a sense "unneeded," the way Cassandra's admonitions were "unneeded," > therefore, unheard. Of course, all this does not prevent Spicer from hoping > to pick up boys through his poetry or Benjamin from hoping to get a > university po sition. That desire -a version of payment- has little to do > with how the writing occurs.
>
> I think "the death of the author" is a more specific and quite different > concept. Initially, it applies to the lyric "I," asserting that this "I" > has > little to do with personal feelings or biography; but the "I" becomes a > mark, a "moving zero," an elusive, transforming target, which registers the > linguistic motion I have been pointing to above. "The death of the author," > in that sense, it transforms the lyric; but It does not kill it or make > it > obsolete
> , as many suggested. Rather, it transforms it into a metaphysical > medium, a medium of motion rather than personal expression.

>
> "The death of the author" is also at the heart of hypertext, which, as a > form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership. But I think > it > is different in a significant way from the process I described earlier. In > my view, it overlooks the radical isolation with which writing responding, > opening to "hidden" movements requires. In one sense, all writing > constitutes a hypertexts which other writers respond to, misread, alter, > expand, etc. That is what Benjamin's "ideal language" is. But hypetext, as
> a > conscious for of writing, assumes a present community. I am not sure if > this > presence helps or inhibits the process; maybe it does both.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>

↑ Index

210. Cheryl Pallant
poets in S. Korea
Wed 23 Jul 2008

Does anyone know of any poets in S. Korea? I'll be teaching for the year at Keimyung University in Daegu, 200 miles south of Seoul. I'd love to meet some poetry kin.

Cheryl Pallant

_____
www.cherylpallant.com

↑ Index

211. Robert Dewhurst satellite telephone #2
Wed 23 Jul 2008

Dear List,

SATELLITE TELEPHONE is a little magazine of poetry and fictocriticism, handmade and small-run in the tradition of mimeos and fanzines. Issue #2 is out now and features new writing from:

CLAIRE BECKER, LYNN BEHRENDT, ROBERT DEWHURST, FANNY HOWE, KEVIN KILLIAN, RODNEY KOENEKE, CHRIS KRAUS, DOROTHEA LASKY, SAM LOHMANN, KIMBERLY LYONS, SIMON PETTET, CHRIS PIUMA, ARLO QUINT, DAN RAPHAEL, HANNAH SAYLE, KYLE SCHLESINGER, FRANK SHERLOCK, and SUSIE TIMMONS.

My friend the artist GOODY-B. WISEMAN drew a wonderful cover. Xeroxed and staple-bound, silkscreened covers. $7 postage paid.

Will trade for mail art or other zines.

http://nolongdistance.endingthealphabet.org

Thanks for reading.

Sincerely,
Robert Dewhurst

↑ Index

212. AWAREing Press
Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Wed 23 Jul 2008

CAConrad, thanks for the manifesto. I'm hoping that by now you realize that Gays in the Military is-- if not a Civil Rights Issue-- a Human Rights Issue. Think about it. If someone really wants to get maimed or die or fall into a trauma-induced psychosis while (ostensibly) defending our country, then why stop them?

Armies of yesteryear denied females the glory of battle and the chance to experience serving in a military hierarchy; obnoxiously bisexual or homosexual men were simply shot under the guise friendly fire. Lately it's been the overt and sexually active guys who receive the discharge, and the flaming queens who get denied initial entry. It's only fair that everyone has the right to enlist or be drafted into an army, worldwide.

The objective of Ms. Johnson and other "gay" activists, it seems to me, is to equalize, not moralize over, any and every life path available, so that all of us get the feeling that we share the same slew of options and opportunities. To rage against new laws that permit a person to live a life from the classic vantage point of Soldier is, um, outrageous. But thanks much for the newsbrief, and sharing your thoughts.

James

---------- Original message from CA Conrad <[redacted]>: ----------

> Did Marsha P. Johnson start the Stonewall Riot to end oppression, or spread misery? "The Stonewall Diversity Champions" has listed as its 400th member the British Army for their open inclusion of gays and lesbians into the armed forces. WOW! I'm not even sure how to react with anything but anger.
>
> The fight to NOT BE OPPRESSED does not mean to be included into the oppressor's world. WHY WOULD the oppressor think they're SO GREAT that we would even WANT to be them!? I would want to BE like the person who has kept me from my life?
>
> It's more the problem of course of gays and lesbians who do not share my view here, who DO think that the ULTIMATE GOAL should be to meld and disappear into the machine with all of its sharp tools carving the world into one grand, obedient, nameless, worker-consumer, killing all who defy. The British Army is the 400th member of "The Stonewall Diversity Champions," I just need to WRITE THIS AGAIN, and SAY IT OUT LOUD AGAIN, because it's SO HARD TO BELIEVE!
>
> The worst thing is NOT being able to stop this kind of ABUSE to the lives we lead, and how we want to lead, away from such brutality. The committee for this BOGUS award will represent who they want to represent. GAYS IN THE MILITARY IS NOT A CIVIL RIGHTS ISSUE! http://tenbyfour.blogspot.com/2006/05/why-gays-in-military-is-not-civil.html
>
> To honor the war machine through Stonewall is so infuriating I feel like I blew a fuse. I mean, I can't even FEEL angry, but I know I'm SO ANGRY, and that's why I'm numb.
>
> To honor war is to not honor the LOVE Marsha P. Johnson used to strike the police with, her need to be left to her life, and to protect her family who were other fringe, mistreated, neglected souls like herself.
>
> I'm not even sure where I send my hate mail today. England or New York?
>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

213. Susan Webster Schultz
Tinfish Press
Wed 23 Jul 2008

47-728 Hui Kelu Street #9
Kane`ohe, HI 96744
22 July 2008

Dear Friends of Tinfish Press:

I am writing to ask for your support for several upcoming projects by Tinfish Press. I'd like to describe them to you so that you'll feel enthusiastic about supporting our publications of experimental poetry from the Pacific region. All gifts are tax deductible. Please open the two attachments, which display designs for two of our new projects.

Already this year, we've published two full-length books, Meg Withers's A Communion of Saints, a prose poetic elegy for men who died of AIDS in 1980s Honolulu, and Hazel Smith's The Erotics of Geography (with cd-r), a selection of that British-Australian poet's page and performance poems. We printed a new corrected edition of Lisa Kanae's important work, Sista Tongue, which is widely taught in universities and schools here and on the mainland. We are in the process of having Barbara Jane Reyes's book, Poeta en San Francisco, reprinted. This book won a James Laughlin award and has been near the top of the SPD best-seller lists for a couple of years now. The New York Times indie list this past Sunday showed the book at #2. Even my dean noticed! Many of our publications have been taught at the university and high school levels; please consider “adopting” our books for your courses, if you teach.

We will publish four more Tinfish products this summer and fall. Tinfish 18 features long poems by poets such as Mani Rao, Lyn Xu, Alysha Wood, Norman Fischer, and Endi Hartigan. Tinfish 18 ½ will be a perfect bound book of word games and poems designed by our Art Director, Gaye Chan, curated by MFA student Lian Litvin, and featuring work by recent stellar M.A. graduates of the UH English department and students in the art department, as well as more established artists. This book will be fun and interactive. Craig Santos Perez's full-length volume, from unincorporated poetry, engages colonial histories, family, and language(s); it's a marvelous first book for him, and fits our mission to a T. Finally, we are working on a chapbook by Norman Fischer, zen priest and poet.

With all of these projects coming together at once, our coffers are emptying quickly. Please give through our website (www.tinfishpress.com) or send a check to the above address. We will acknowledge you on our website, if you give us permission to do so. Tinfish Press is a non-profit organization, so your gifts will be tax-deductible.

Aloha,

Susan M. Schultz
Editor, Tinfish Press

↑ Index

214. blacksox
For immediate release
Wed 23 Jul 2008

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Daily Grind coffee house 807 N. Orange Ave, located in downtown Orlando will be the new home of 1sts Tuesdays. The Orlando Poetry group will be launching 1st Tuedays August 5, at 7pm. Hosted by local poet Russ Golata the event held every 1st Tuesday of the month will showcase local as well as out of town spoken word artists and musicians and feature open mic, complete with contests-and a night of great entertainment and fun.

↑ Index

215. Wystan Curnow
Re: hello
Wed 23 Jul 2008

Welcome Andrew, we're known to one another.
You should tell the folks here (which is precisely no where) where Perth is. You can hitch
From Sydney, but you're further from there than I am in Auckland,
And closer to Jacarta aren't. I'm impressed by the fact Perth is on the Indian Ocean and my great regret is that on my one visit I never took a dip in
it.
There, I've told them. What would you add?
Wystan

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of andrew burke
Sent: Wednesday, 23 July 2008 11:52 a.m.
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: hello

And you. Who else do I know in this neighbourhood?

Just getting used to the flow of conversation, etc. No doubt I will speak up eventually about matters poetic ...

Andrew

2008/7/22 Peter Ciccariello <[redacted]>:

> Welcome Andrew, nice to see you here!
>

> - Peter Ciccariello
>
>
> On Sun, Jul 20, 2008 at 10:29 PM, Maria Damon <[redacted]>
wrote:
>
> > welcome to the list.
> >
> >
> > andrew burke wrote:
> >
> >> Hello, I'm new here. I don't know the local introduction > >> behaviours, so I'll just extend my hand and gabble.
> >>
> >> I've been writing poetry since the 1960s, firstly under the > >> influence of Milton et al, but then influenced by the Beats and > >> jazz liner notes, Zen (Beat to Square), and folk songs. By the time > >> I was 18 and leaving > school,
> >> I
> >> was ready to hit the road and escape my conservative surburban > upbringing.
> >> So I hitched from Perth to Sydney, west coast to east coast
> >> Australia - safe back then, not so safe now.
> >>
> >> At this time I was published in a university literary quarterly - a > short > >> Saroyanesque story about a boy staring at ants, yet somehow the > >> reader knows he is damaged in some way. I've lost it, thankfully, > >> because it remains 'beautiful' in my memory, and was probably more > >> awkward on the page.
> Much
> >> of my teenage poetry has gone the same way. Yet that early > >> publishing encouragement set me on the path to being a lifelong writer.
> >> But I go on too long ... This is a similar start to many. Let's > >> just say
> I
> >> have written a mess of poems over the last forty plus years, some
> >> of > which > >> has appeared in print (many mags, six books) and some of which has > >> appeared disguised as plays, tiny films, stories and one novel.

> >>
> >> After quarter of a century in advertising (my anti-intellectual > >> years),
> I
> >> changed careers and taught writing and literature at various > universities,
> >> including a recent stint at Shanxi Normal University in Linfen, China.
> >> During these, my intellectual years, I received a PhD from Edith > >> Cowan University three years ago.
> >>
> >> But my main interest is my next poem, and my curiosity has lead me > >> to investigate many poetics from around the world. On this list, I > >> hope to gain more insights and share some of my passion for poetry.
> >>
> >> My day to day interests are well exposed on my blog (address below).
> >>
> >> Thank you for reading.
> >>
> >> Andrew
> >> http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
> >> http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>

--
Andrew
http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/

↑ Index

216. Sarah Sarai
Re: Court rules lesbians are not just from Lesbos
Wed 23 Jul 2008

Maria, Most lesbians do come from Lebanon (originally Lesbanon) where so many found shelter after the diaspora from Lesbos; and today they are everywhere. Viva Sappho. Viva the misguided elders of Lesbos. Viva Lesbosians (and Lesbanonians) and the Lebanese. Viva the listserv. S.

↑ Index

217. Catherine Daly
Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality
Wed 23 Jul 2008

---

for those in LA, I am gallery sitting the portion of the LA Art Girls show at Phantom Galleries at the corner of 6th and Main (PE Lofts) Friday 12-3 and Sunday 12-6; I would love to discuss this set of issues within this context

my works are largely unsalable, as "reading" them makes a poem (in the case of my work in the show); I find my fellow MFAs -- but in studio art -- better prepared to live an art-focussed life, including curating & studio visits & critical theory / historical background, than I was by my MFA. Unsalability makes gallery owners, who show to earn commission, really confused about my things -- and, frankly, there's a show on current tv that would normally be perfect for me/my stuff, but it is for cheap objects, not free interactive objects there's some popular recognition of LA as where international art gets made...

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

218. CA Conrad
Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Thu 24 Jul 2008

James, I guess if queers want to join the KKK they should be allowed?

We are a country at war, let us NOT forget. OVER A MILLION DEAD AND COUNTING.

The military machine is NOT something I will ever get behind, ever! Because of who WE ARE, and who the British are (they helped us invade Iraq), there is NO

WAY to negotiate being in favor of gays in the military without ALSO being in favor of the military.

Not too long ago the documentary/news(?) episodes of IN THE LIFE interviewed a queer man who joined the military after 911. He was outraged by what had happened, of course, as we all were. BUT, where does he wind up when they ship his DUMB gay ass out? IRAQ! And he NEVER, not once does he EVER QUESTION why he is in Iraq. His ENTIRE purpose (according to his own opening statement) was to go after the people who were responsible for 911. THEN OF COURSE he's discovered as being QUEER and sent home, which was the purpose of interviewing him. We were supposed to FEEL TERRIBLE for him. Boo hoo, poor guy, he doesn't get to carry a machine gun and prove he's a REAL man!

Getting to put a rainbow sticker on a machine gun is what this is all about. GAY PRIDE IN KILLING!?

YES THIS IS TIME TO TAKE A STAND! How many people have you known who HOLD THE GERMAN CITIZENS responsible for Nazi atrocities? We are already as complicit in the eyes of the world.

The original people who risked their lives at the Stonewall riots were ALSO VEHEMENTLY opposed to the war in Vietnam. Marsha P. Johnson is someone I met in person, and I can tell you right now that she was NOT SOMEONE who would be in favor of giving the LOVE up to the British Army!

Gays in the military is NOT a civil rights issue! THERE'S NOTHING CIVIL ABOUT INVADING, KILLING, TERRORIZING, MAIMING, MAKING ORPHANS, ETC., ETC., ETC.!

YES IT IS TIME TO TAKE A STAND AND SPEAK UP, REGARDLESS OF HOW IT MAY SOUND!

QUEERS SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED IN THE ARMED SERVICES BECAUSE OUR ARMED SERVICES HAVE PROVEN TO BE DANGEROUS, AND RESPONSIBLE FOR WAR CRIMES!

We're supposed to be GRATEFUL that the British Army has "accepted" queers? Well I DON'T ACCEPT THE BRITISH ARMY! FUCK THE BRITISH ARMY!

NO QUEERS ALLOWED! Anyone, and I mean ANYONE we can prevent from joining an army like our army and the British army should be prevented! NO FAGS OR DYKES ALLOWED IN UNIFORM! KICK THEM ALL OUT! SEND THEM HOME!

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

219. CA Conrad poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series /\\//\\\\/////\\\\\\//////\\\\\\\\/////////\\\\\\\\\\//////////
Thu 24 Jul 2008

---

poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series
/\\//\\\\/////\\\\\\//////\\\\\\\\/////////\\\\\\\\\\//////////

details here: http://urchinpoetry.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

220. Wanda Phipps
Desire at The Living Theatre
Thu 24 Jul 2008

Hi:

I'm reading at The Living Theatre
Deflected by Desire themed reading with other folks with new books out like me

Monday, July 28th--8pm
with
Jan Clausen, Steve Turtell & Richard Tayson

21 Clinton Street, NYC
(Btw Houston & Stanton)

Would love to see you there!

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at:
http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

221. Bob Heman

POINTING WITH 400 FINGERS AT THE RED FUNNEL

Thu 24 Jul 2008

---

some of you may know that a bunch of us have been exploring collaborative writing using semi-automatic techniques during the last few months - the results have been quite amazing actually - if you missed our last performance in may at John Zorn's legendary east village performance space "The Stone" this is your chance to catch us again and experience some of our most recent works (which were written as our sessions expanded from our original four-headed author to include three more talented writers along with an occasional guest) - the info follows

R. Nemo Hill presents Active Ingredients at The Stone ACTIVE O (program three)

POINTING WITH 400 FINGERS
AT THE RED FUNNEL

collaborative semi-automatic texts written and/or performed by Thomas Fucaloro, Bob Heman, R. Nemo Hill, Jane Ormerod, John Marcus Powell,
Oran Ryan, Adriana Scopino & Michelle Slater

Monday July 28 at 8PM
The Stone ~ 2nd Street & Avenue C ~ Northwest corner suggested donation $10
"Enough of this!
Echoing and eavesdropping will be the coda.
Secretly the finale will not suffice."

Bob Heman
[redacted]
EarthLink Revolves Around You.

↑ Index

222. Thomas savage

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Thu 24 Jul 2008

I agree that capitalism is largely irrelevant to poetry. I think about this a bit as a new full-length book of mine, Brainlifts, has just been published by a relatively new small press called Straw Gate Books. I'm glad to say that the pressures of capitalism have little or nothing to do with how this book was produced or how it will fare. As for capitalism in the art world, I mostly agree. There is however a small part of the Chelsea art scene that is less influenced by the pressures of capitalism than the rest of it. I refer to the co-op galleries where I work sometimes. They are membership galleries but they show many invited artists in one format or another. Also, the quality of the work in these galleries has improved lately. Of course they are a small portion of an otherwise capitalistic and greed driven plateau of art in NYC. But I just thought I should mention that these other places still exist and have existed for a long time. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Wed, 7/23/08, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, July 23, 2008, 3:24 AM

Jim,

While writing my original post, I thought of making it only about poetry, being completely aware of what you are saying about the world of painting, particularly in New York, which has been the center of the art market for years. I decided against it because what I am saying applies to art in general, representing one end of a spectrum. One can see this tension most clearly in film, even the most stripped down version of which requires a significant capital investment. The issue of means of production (studio, independent, video, etc.) is an integral part of discussing an art of film. What is peculiar about poetry is that it both requires very little capital investment and it has almost as small audience. The investment poetry requires is the poet's time (poetry is an art which consumes time; time is at the heart of it). This makes the poet his or her audience. This condition so clear in poetry exists in all arts, only blurred by the exigencies of money in other arts. I wrote about this in my essay, "Is Poetry a Job, Is a Poem a Product?"

Jim, you do not mention where you disagree with me. I would like to know.

Ciao,

Murat

Jim

On Tue, Jul 22, 2008 at 12:11 AM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> i thought that was an interesting post, murat. i don't agree with lots of > it, but you get at some things that are important that not too many people > seem able to write about at all, even if you're wrong about them.

>
> the interesting part, i felt, was the stuff on ownership. very writerly.
> not > so much anti-capitalist as yawning at capitalism in a poetry context.
which > is right, i feel. capitalism in a poetry context is just more or less > irrelevant.
>
> contrast that, however, with visual art. if you hang out with new york > visual artists online or anywhere else, you see just how little sense any > art makes to them that doesn't work within capitalism. galleries, > products, and so on. if it doesn't make it monetarily, it just doesn't > count. it can't survive. in the 'market of ideas' in which new york artists > are immersed.
>
> which is too bad for new york art, it seems to me. but i guess it makes > sense there.
>
> whereas the 'market of ideas' you allude to is less about a capitalistic > market as something different. which is important. and expensive, in a > sense.
>
> the danger of poetry resides, in part, in its being able to operate, to > some > extent (more than visual art) in other dimensions than the genuinely boring
> capitalistic market of ideas.
>
> genuinely boring. deeply. terminally. genuine stuff of the forces of > dullness. witness the art it promulgates in mass media, which is little > more > than a provisional business proposition.
>
> which is one of the reasons i remain optimistic about the internet. as > medium for something else.
>
> ja

> http://vispo.com
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

223. David Chirot

Chirography as Chirology: obama poem video/memoir of a forger of celebrity authors' letters

Thu 24 Jul 2008

More materials of use in the explorations of the "Annals of the New extreme Experimental American Poetry & Arts"-- and also--"The Future as an Already Written Science Fiction Set in the Past" and--"The Critical Reading of Lines of Poetry as a form of Palm Reading" that is to say--CHIROgraphy as CHIROlogy in term of "Writings on the Walls Visible & Invisible, Concrete and Virtual"

(see note below the two links--)

*BOOKS * | July 24, 2008
* She Says It's True, Her Memoir of Forging
<http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/24/books/24forg.html?ex=1217563200&en=8b6b6f7ab7988a24&ei=5070&emc=eta1>
*
By JULIE BOSMAN
Lee Israel forged more than 400 letters from Noël Coward, Dorothy Parker and other literary celebrities, a criminal career she recounts in her book, "Can You Ever Forgive Me?"

Barack Obama's Poem Now a Videofrom Margery Snyder and Bob Holman's About Poetry blog:

Wednesday July 23, 2008
Last March, we posted about two poems the youthful Barack Obama published in the Occidental College literary magazine in 1981:

- The Intersection of Politics and Autobiography in Poetry<http://poetry.about.com/b/2007/03/28/the-intersection-of-politics-and-autobiography-in-poetry.htm>

The poems are "Pop," a portrait of his maternal grandfather, and "Underground," a naturalistic description of "apes / That eat figs" in subterranean water grottoes. A couple of months after the two poems came to light, The New Yorker asked prominent critic and professor Harold Bloom his opinion of them:

- Harold Bloom comments on Barack Obama's poems<http://poetry.about.com/b/2007/06/25/harold-bloom-comments-on-barack-obamas-poems.htm>

Bloom pronounced "Underground" the better of the two poems: "It gave me the oddest feeling that he might have been reading the poems of D. H. Lawrence—it reminded me of the poem 'Snake'.... I think it is about some sense of chthonic forces, just as Lawrence frequently is—some sense, not wholly articulated, of something below, trying to break through." Now the Blue Rose Arts Collective has transformed "Underground" into a poetry video on YouTube <http://youtube.com/watch?v=LRBl4QJC9GU>, combining footage of Japanese snow monkeys with Indonesian music by the Nyoman Jayus Bamboo Ensemble. I wonder what Obama thinks of their treatment of his poem. What do you think of it, as a poem and as a film? Come back after you've looked at the video and post your comments below. * More entries for use in the explorations of the "Annals of the New Extreme Experimental American Poetry & Arts"-- * * The Iraq War, ignited by the use of the forged "Italian Letter" and the Internet-found "secret information and images" provided by Curveball, which were "proved" by being on the Internet, in terms of writing, becomes like Fellini's saying of his Satyricon that "it is a science-fiction film set in the past." Iraq, site of the first known writing, is also home to the first known forgeries, undertaken to "prove" the "historical" precedence of one ruler over others. A War based on forgeries and "plagiarisms" destroys, loots and erases the site of precedence of writing and forgeries, in order to "forge" its own Imperialist Textual Domination. The writing and rewriting of "histories" becomes an ever more unwieldy heap of palimpsests, in which the voids and chasms of erasure are always yielding fragments that still remain as evidences of once Dominant languages and writings. To "fill in the gaps" of these blank spaces, written over by more "dominant" and "bold" scripts, hypotheses invite not only "actual remains," but a horde of forgeries as well, each laying claim to some "link with the past," and many of them claiming also "ownership" or residence in these near buried nooks and crannies littering the refuse and ruin strewn landscapes and lacerated hulks of looted libraries and archives.

Fictions, hypotheses, theories, speculations, forgeries, clog the arteries of a "traffic in relics and information." The "documentary history" of the world, its peoples and cultures, opens into dizzying labyrinthine descents into the depths of what become "newly discovered caches" and "revelations of forgeries," further mystified by the choosing of which such "evidences" are used in simulations of "the cultural past." Science-fiction does indeed invade the "sands of time" flowing in the deserts below which flows oil and ancient cuneiform writings. The massive "reconstruction projects" which are handed out without open bids to favored corporations become involved in the selection of what will be "reconstructed," what will be "never completed, promised projects," and what are in the end the erection of tall and mighty fortifications, ever larger and ever more "secure." One of the "amazing" things about these new fortifications is that for al their immensity, many of them are evidences of new forms of disappearances, as visions of those "mirages" that deserts are famous for. Solid Walls take on the effects of invisibility, become the palimpsests of"erased and written over" absented layers of texts in the "reconstructions of Ancient Texts" of the dominant histories and cultures.

In the midst of a an apparent "flood" of faked memoirs, what could be more "refreshing" than the appearance of purportedly truthful memoir about the creation of faked literary celebrities' autographs? The faked memoir cause a "directed, controlled in many ways) "outrage" which far exceeds that towards the outright forging of reasons for War. The dangerous idea that fiction is awash in every "truthful account" of a person's life needs to be allayed by a "truthful account" of the forging of author's signatures. Ironically, the "truth" regarding forgeries is considered far less "horrifying" than their appearnces as fictions taken to be truths. Perhaps this is why the forging of history is often presented as a noble endeavor, undertaken as a "low means to a high end." After all, as Dr Goebbels, Propaganda Minister of the Third Reich pointed out, repeat a lie enough times and it becomes truth. Historical documents that are forged, used long enough, become indeed the "originary documents of Empire." Senator Obama's two college poems are being given the "originary documents" treatment by none other than a leading literary and Biblical critic, Dr Harold Bloom. The "weight and stamp of Authority" is given to these documents in such a way as to turn them into a form of "palm reading," in whose lines may be glimsped signs of the promise, brightness and "Hope" of the Future. The creation of the Candidate for President as a new kind of "Poet Philosopher Warrior" prepared to extend and intensify the "Right War" in Afghanistan is greatly enhanced and "substantiated" by the famous critic's comments. Karl Rove famously said that the power and work of Empire is not so much in "changing reality," as simply in "creating Reality." "Creation" opens the door to the "creation of documents," ot the "creations of Authorized texts, versions, visibilities and invisibilities." In trying to change reality, one is endlessly encountering obstacles, struggles, the actual presence of peoples who do not want to accept the "gift" of Occupation and the occupiers' ideas of "Freedom" and "well being." To "Create Reality" in effect erases and obviates any such "trivial" considerations. To "create reality" allows one full reign to overstep all bounds, and simply direct the attention of Vision to those things which cooraborate and substantiate it, while all else is "rendered" invisble or "suspect," and shipped off to the Gulags and

Camps of the Living Dead. Amidst a series of images showing Senator Obama at the Wailing Wall, the commentators prepare one for the Global, Historic Speech to be delivered today in Berlin, the site of the Wall which JFK and Ronald Reagan used so effectively in their campaigns and Presidencies. In this latest stage in the Creation of Reality, the presence of the now absent Berlin Wall will loom very large indeed, so large that it will obscure the Apartheid Wall which Obama "overlooked" as well as the Walls built in Baghdad and the so far failed attempts by Israeli firms to construct an "Invisible Virtual Wall" for the American border with Mexico. As "The End of History," the Fall of the Berlin Wall remains as an image of jubilation, of Triumph, of Freedom, of the Unity of a Separated People. Its very absence has become such an immensely potent text in the Creation of Reality, that it makes nearly invisible the actual Walls which will someday find their ultimate expression in the "Invisible Virtual Wall" necessary in the "sci-fi" sounding "Defense Against Illegal Aliens." Fellini's cinematic conception of Science Fiction set in the Past has become, "after the End of History," the Guiding Light of the New Reality as expressed in such forms as the New Extreme Experimental American Poetry and Arts. A famous and respected literary and especially Biblical critic commenting on the Next President's poetry reassures one that the Candidate is indeed one who is worthy of being entrusted with a Biblical Mission & Biblical Vision as part of the Creation of Reality. After all, in their own form of Science Fiction Set in the Past that is to be the Future, the American settlers many of them saw in the Wilderness the site of the New Jerusalem. A Biblical message and vision was was found to be "already inscribed" as the Manifest Destiny of the continent. To Enact the Word which formed them, these settlers had no problems at all with the extermination of indigenous peoples and consigning them, "savages" "terrorists," soulless and thus nonhuman," to live out the rest of their wretched "Stateless" existences locked up, confined to camps from which water was diverted, hunting and trade denied, their cultures expunged, and a Living Death provided in the form of "Government Aid." Even in the most sophisticatedly high tech environments, the Science Fiction of the Past sets all machines in the direction still of the Authenticity and Authority of the Written Word. The "Truth" about "Forgeries," and the "forging of the Truth," the Authority figure Authenticating as it were the poems of the Next President of the United States as indeed poetry, all these Ancient methods, far older than Biblical writings, are being disappeared from their "Homeland' in Iraq. Perhaps in the existence of writing itself, it is "already written" that a War based on a Forged Letter and Imaginary and plagiarized "evidences" would some day come to as much as possible obliterate and erase from existence, from readability, the "original sites" of writing and forgeries, so that these may be taken possession of and moved elsewhere, firmly established as part of the Creation of Reality, and so consigning these "insurgents," "enemy commbatants," "terrorists," "heathen," to their "liberated" existences behind Walls dividing their cities, in refugee camps, innumerable secret prisons and torture chambers, and a landscape without any but minimal utltilities, water, safety, education, health care, peace. A place of the ceaseless restlessness of millions of dead and dsiplaced persons, condemned and flung into the Living Hells of the Living Dead. And, one is told, instead of the debacle and defeat of Iraq, this is the "Right War," which still lies ahead in the never ending centuries of wars in Afghanistan, as well as the looming attacks on Iran.

All of these things, one is often told, explained to, dissertated and expatiated on at lengths worthy of provoking Jeremiads, (also receivers the critical attentions of Dr Bloom), by passersby, bus riders, persons met here and there--all of these things after all, prove indeed that they are "already written" in the "Book of John" and the "End Times" are at hand. Who knows,-as one of these characters might say, a further "proof" is that a forger of letters is writing a book in which she "comes clean" in time for the Last Judgement?!
"Who's that writing? John the Revelator-- Tell me now, who's that writing? John the Revelator Somebody say, say----who's that writing? John the Revelator wrote the Book of the Seven Seals"

*

↑ Index

224. Jim Andrews

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Thu 24 Jul 2008

> "The death of the author" is also at the heart of hypertext, which, as a form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership.

Hypertext is about 'links'. That doesn't always relate to 'ownership', Murat. To put it another way, I don't think that hypertext, as a form, implies anything about ownership. Ideas of ownership are as additional axioms in the unetverse.

One may link to a page and, instead of the page coming up when the link is clicked, a dialog box may come up asking for one's username and password.

Someone said something like "information wants to be free". I expect what underlies that sentiment is what motivates your statement. One has to give to get. Give good information to get any sort of possibility of making money in conjunction with the giving. Or something like that. But that is less a specifically hypertext-related phenomenon as something more general, I think.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

225. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Thu 24 Jul 2008

Jim,

I always thought hypertext was a text with multiple authors, created by the addition of multiple, different texts? Was I wrong?

Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Jul 24, 2008 at 2:31 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> "The death of the author" is also at the heart of hypertext, which, as a form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership.
>
> Hypertext is about 'links'. That doesn't always relate to 'ownership', Murat. To put it another way, I don't think that hypertext, as a form, implies anything about ownership. Ideas of ownership are as additional axioms in the unetverse.
>
> One may link to a page and, instead of the page coming up when the link is clicked, a dialog box may come up asking for one's username and password.
>
> Someone said something like "information wants to be free". I expect what underlies that sentiment is what motivates your statement. One has to give to get. Give good information to get any sort of possibility of making money > in conjunction with the giving. Or something like that. But that is less a specifically hypertext-related phenomenon as something more general, I think.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

226. amy king

Play It Again, Sam --

Thu 24 Jul 2008

No, Bogart never said it, but I'll repeat:

TOMORROW! FRIDAY NIGHT, July 25th @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg , Brooklyn The Stain of Poetry Reading Series presents  Baker, Cordelli, Field, Need, Newton , and Tonelli  ~~~ Andrea Baker is the author of like wind loves a window (Slope Editions, 2005) and the chapbooks gilda (Poetry Society of America, 2004) and true poems about the river go like this (Cannibal Books, 2008). ~~~~ Phil Cordelli cleans lawns, carries on a love affair with the tuliptrees of Upper Manhattan that may not be carrying on for much longer now, and acts as a conduit for poetic impulses from the plant world. More on this as it develops. ~~~~ Farrah Field's first book, Rising, is forthcoming in early 2009 by Four Way Books. Her poems have appeared in many publications such as the Mississippi Review, Margie, Chelsea , The Massachusetts Review, Typo, Harp & Altar, and are forthcoming in Pebble Lake Review, Another Chicago Magazine, Fulcrum, and 42Opus. She lives in Brooklyn . ~~~~ Originally from Massachusetts , David Need lives in Durham , NC and works as an instructor in the Religion Department at Duke, teaching classes on Buddhism, South Asian Religions, and Religion and Poetry. Recent and upcoming publications include several suites published in Fascicle 2 & 3, a translation/essay series on Rg Veda poetry in Talisman, an excerpt from "Places I've Lived" upcoming in Minor American, and excerpts from "St. John's Rose Slumber" upcoming in Effing and Hambone. Several years ago Mipoesis ran a series of essays by David on Rilke and three short memoir pieces, and Ocho ran yet another sonnet suite. Current projects include a long poem written alongside the Gospel of Mark, "Places I've Lived", which is evolving into an open ended project, finalizing a collection of translations of Rilke's French poetry, and yet another Rg Veda essay, this one on the theme of twins there and in the poetry of Nate Mackey. David is associated with the NC lucipo poets, and lives with his scholar wife and four cats. ~~~~ Keith Newton edits the online magazine Harp & Altar. His poems and translations have appeared in Harvard Review, Cannibal, Typo, and Circumference, among other journals, and a chapbook of his work is forthcoming in 2008 from Cannibal Books. He lives in Brooklyn . ~~~ Chris Tonelli lives in the Boston area where he runs The So and So Series. He has work forthcoming in Saltgrass, Salt Hill, Absent, and Good Foot, and is the author of three chapbooks: For People Who Like Gravity and Other People (Rope-A-Dope Press, forthcoming), A Mule-Shaped Cloud (w/ Sarah Bartlett, horse less press, 2008), and WIDE TREE: Short Poems (Kitchen Press, 2006). ~~~~ stain 766 grand street brooklyn, ny 11211 (L train to Grand Street , 1 block west) 718/[redacted] open daily @ 5 p.m. ~~~~ Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic ~~~~ The rest of the year's dishes served up here:

http://thestainofpoetry. wordpress.com/
http://thestainofpoetry. wordpress.com/
http://thestainofpoetry. wordpress.com/

———

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

227. Adam Fieled
PFS Post: "Chimes"
Thu 24 Jul 2008

I have written an autobiography in prose poems that is slated to come out next year. It's called "Chimes", and a chunk of it is currently riding the waves on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Happy summer, folks!
Ad

Books!
"Opera Bufa"
http://www.lulu.com/content/1137210
"Beams"
http://www.blazevox.org/ebk-af.pdf

↑ Index

228. William Slaughter
Notice: Mudlark
Thu 24 Jul 2008

New and On View: Mudlark Poster No. 75 (2008)

Five Poems by Erin Lambert

Koudelka's Turtle | Carnival: A Study of Two Sisters
Debut | Forgiven | A Letter to Nietzsche & the Committee for Sanity & Integrity in Humankind

Erin Lambert is the author of RESOLUTION, forthcoming in November 2008 from Finishing Line Press. Her poetry has appeared in Mudlark before, Poster No. 44 (2003), and in many other journals too, such as Blackbird and Conjunctions. She is currently an assistant professor in the School of Writing, Rhetoric and Technical Communication at James Madison University.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

229. Eric Elshtain

New Beard of Bees Chapbook

Thu 24 Jul 2008

Please take a moment to read our latest number:

http://www.beardofbees.com/howe.html

Best,

Eric E.

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

230. CA Conrad

Tim Peterson, CAConrad, Laura Goldstein :::::POETS THEATER::::: and POETRY @ Bowery Poetry Club

Fri 25 Jul 2008

SUNDAY, AUGUST 10TH, at NOON
Bowery Poetry Club

308 Bowery Street, NYC http://www.bowerypoetry.com/

$6 at the door

POETRY READING &

DRAMATIC READING of 2 ten-minute plays:
THE OBITUARY SHOW, written by CAConrad
and
CAPTAIN AMERICA, written by Laura Goldstein

Tim Peterson, or Trace, enjoys electronic interaction as much as the next poet, but WHERE IS ALL THE FUCKING? It's taking place in a hidden room somewhere behind and within language as the vehicle of power, engendering two ships passing, feeling toward the next dumb syllable or limb. For further information, see SINCE I MOVED IN (which received the Gil Ott Award from Chax Press) and EOAGH: A Journal of the Arts.
http://mappemunde.typepad.com/

The son of white trash asphyxiation, CAConrad is the author of Deviant Propulsion (Soft Skull Press) and (Soma)tic Midge (FAUX Press). Forthcoming books include The Book of Frank (Chax Press), and a collaboration with poet Frank Sherlock titled *THE CITY REAL & IMAGINED: Philadelphia Poems *(Factory School Press). He's at
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com <http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>

Laura Goldstein recently graduated with an MFA from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. Her performances and installations have been exhibited in Philadelphia, Ireland, Chicago and Michigan. She's been published online in The Little Magazine, Great Works and MPRSND and in print in Combo, Dorothy's Elbow and XConnect. Her new Chapbook, out from Hex Press, is titled "Ice In Intervals".

↑ Index

231. jpjones
Re: hello
Fri 25 Jul 2008

Hi Andrew,

Welcome and just to say that I'm here - formerly of Sydney now moved towards your way, in Adelaide, desert city. Cold, clear and maybe some rain tonight.

And Wystan, it was nice to see you again in Melbourne recently. I enjoyed your paper.

Cheers,
Jill

On Thu Jul 24 11:54 , Wystan Curnow <[redacted]> sent:

>Welcome Andrew, we're known to one another.
>You should tell the folks here (which is precisely no where) where >Perth is. You can hitch
>From Sydney, but you're further from there than I am in Auckland,
>And closer to Jacarta aren't. I'm impressed by the fact Perth is on the >Indian
>Ocean and my great regret is that on my one visit I never took a dip in
>it.
>There, I've told them. What would you add?
>Wystan
>
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [[redacted]','','','')">[redacted]] On >Behalf Of andrew burke
>Sent: Wednesday, 23 July 2008 11:52 a.m.
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: hello
>
>And you. Who else do I know in this neighbourhood?
>
>Just getting used to the flow of conversation, etc. No doubt I will >speak up eventually about matters poetic ...
>
>Andrew
>
>2008/7/22 Peter Ciccariello [redacted]>:
>
>> Welcome Andrew, nice to see you here!
>>
>> - Peter Ciccariello
>>
>>
>> On Sun, Jul 20, 2008 at 10:29 PM, Maria Damon [redacted]>
>wrote:
>>
>> > welcome to the list.

>> >
>> >
>> > andrew burke wrote:
>> >
>> >> Hello, I'm new here. I don't know the local introduction >> >> behaviours, so I'll just extend my hand and gabble.
>> >>
>> >> I've been writing poetry since the 1960s, firstly under the >> >> influence of Milton et al, but then influenced by the Beats and >> >> jazz liner notes, Zen (Beat to Square), and folk songs. By the time
>
>> >> I was 18 and leaving >> school,
>> >> I
>> >> was ready to hit the road and escape my conservative surburban
>> upbringing.
>> >> So I hitched from Perth to Sydney, west coast to east coast
>> >> Australia - safe back then, not so safe now.
>> >>
>> >> At this time I was published in a university literary quarterly - a >> short >> >> Saroyanesque story about a boy staring at ants, yet somehow the >> >> reader knows he is damaged in some way. I've lost it, thankfully, >> >> because it remains 'beautiful' in my memory, and was probably more >> >> awkward on the page.
>> Much
>> >> of my teenage poetry has gone the same way. Yet that early >> >> publishing encouragement set me on the path to being a lifelong >writer.
>> >> But I go on too long ... This is a similar start to many. Let's >> >> just say
>> I
>> >> have written a mess of poems over the last forty plus years, some
>> >> of
>> which >> >> has appeared in print (many mags, six books) and some of which has >> >> appeared disguised as plays, tiny films, stories and one novel.
>> >>
>> >> After quarter of a century in advertising (my anti-intellectual >> >> years),
>> I
>> >> changed careers and taught writing and literature at various >> universities,

>> >> including a recent stint at Shanxi Normal University in Linfen, >China.
>> >> During these, my intellectual years, I received a PhD from Edith >> >> Cowan University three years ago.
>> >>
>> >> But my main interest is my next poem, and my curiosity has lead me >> >> to investigate many poetics from around the world. On this list, I >> >> hope to gain more insights and share some of my passion for poetry.
>> >>
>> >> My day to day interests are well exposed on my blog (address >below).
>> >>
>> >> Thank you for reading.
>> >>
>> >> Andrew
>> >> http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
>> >> http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >
>> guidelines
>> >
>>
>>
>
>
>
>--
>Andrew
>http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
>http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/
>
>

↑ Index

232. Jim Andrews

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Fri 25 Jul 2008

> Jim,
>
> While writing my original post, I thought of making it only about poetry, being completely aware of what you are saying about the world of painting, particularly in New York, which has been the center of the art market for years.

What if the center of art were in between the ears?

I live near 'The Centre of the Universe' (so it is called), an observatory in Saanich. Which is nearby Victoria. Which is near the south of Vancouver Island. Which is in Canada, in British Columbia. Which is the north of north america but south enough for sunshine in the seventies for weeks on end this summer. and the smell of womens' skin on the beach in the sun.

Lest I appear too absolutely me-centric... the idea that the centre is everywhere and nowhere is quite old. Pascal, I believe, was the originator.

Centres of art have different properties such as their 'market value' and the 'market value of their artists'. Can it be made to sell enough to justify its existence, plus whatever other existences must be justified via its debts and proceeds? Art succeeds in a gallery on this basis or it won't be there for long--the art and the gallery.

Let's make that an axiom of the unotverse, shall we? The unotverse being inverse to the unetverse both of which are contained within the universe. I was transferred to the unitverse but on the journey spent many nights in the unytverse. by that i mean the unyt and its verse. not the uny tverse. though it could be a class, a verse class of type uny, which could be a verse program from uny. darn. we're there again. i suddenly feel broacast to the unutverse. the unut verse chides me in the obvious manner plus ones it took time to learn.

all in all, however, the combinatorium of universes is part us, we each are the makers of our synthesis of the shared and the personal and inject that serum into the dna of the mosquitoe.

toward the bottom of the turtles that were turtles all the way down, is there a way things are? yes, well. things are the way they are independent of us or with our action or influence. those we do not act on or influence are just about everything. yes many ways things are, including often unknown.

centres of art can be art marketing centres without being centres of the production of art. marketing centres can be prohibitively expensive for art production. except on thursdays in the studio.

> I decided against it because what I am saying applies to art in general, representing one end of a spectrum. One can see this tension most clearly in film, even the most stripped down version of which requires a significant capital investment. The issue of means of production (studio, independent, video, etc.) is an integral part of discussing an art of film.
> What is peculiar about poetry is that it both requires very little capital investment and it has almost as small audience. The investment poetry requires is the poet's time (poetry is an art which consumes time; time is at the heart of it). This makes the poet his or her audience.
> This condition so clear in poetry exists in all arts, only blurred by the exigencies of money in other arts. I wrote about this in my essay, "Is Poetry a Job, Is a Poem a Product?"

Is that on the net? What is the URL, if so? Sounds interesting.

> Jim, you do not mention where you disagree with me. I would like to know.

Not the spirit and direction of it, Murat--just the odd thing like hypertext, as noted in my previous post. Your post seems to have inspired some correspondence--usually a very good sign. Of what? Well, generative capacity. Generative capacity is equal to the quality of the post * its connection with peoples' hearts minds eyes ears experience conflicts ...
programming deprogramming houses of high binary trees forests of hashed lists their object members the objects' data
the objects' methods
the objects' constructors
the objects' destructors
the objects' world view the objects' universe
the objects' unetverse
the objects' unytverse
the objects' unitverse
the objects' unotverse

the unatverse is under construction. is it the universe of ankle biters?

ah well poetry has been known to live there also. the ankle biters are vicious and sometimes lethal, but they have to bite hard.

the bigger they are the harder they fall. from poets to presidents. from the centre to the outer rings of hell. in come the universe unetverse unytverse unitverse unotverse unatverse for all. or not, as the universe and reader decrees.

by the way, the unitverse is one verse wide, one verse high, one unetverse verse in connectivity, one unotverse as inverse of the unetverse (each connection in the unetverse is present where before it was not, and is absent when it was present); the unitverse is one unytverse verse in darkness and neon; is one unatverse verse in ankle biters at work at the critical and exposed levels of the art communi[ca]t[ion]y and political int[erv]ention.

in short, i enjoyed your post. thanks, Murat.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

233. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books
Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Fri 25 Jul 2008

Part of what's been going on is that so many post-Reagan gays, like so many of their straight counterparts, indignantly assert their right not to be associated with the kind of fiery agitators and revolutionists who made things happen in the sixties and seventies. Fine, if that's what you want. The problem is, those of us not interested in taking that God-Country-and-Family route become subject to such majoritarian bullying as "If you don't join the fight to allow gays to serve in the military, you are an obstacle in the path toward full equality." It's tribal. It's also somehow creepily related to earlier posts here suggesting that any poetry not immediately accessible to "ordinary people" is elitist. Jeffrey

----- Original Message -----
From: "CA Conrad" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, July 23, 2008 10:23 PM
Subject: Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!

> James, I guess if queers want to join the KKK they should be allowed?
>
> We are a country at war, let us NOT forget. OVER A MILLION DEAD AND COUNTING.
>
> The military machine is NOT something I will ever get behind, ever! Because > of who WE ARE, and who the British are (they helped us invade Iraq), there is NO WAY to negotiate being in favor of gays in the military without ALSO being in favor of the military.

Not too long ago the documentary/news(?) episodes of IN THE LIFE interviewed a queer man who joined the military after 911. He was outraged by what had happened, of course, as we all were. BUT, where does he wind up when they ship his DUMB gay ass out? IRAQ! And he NEVER, not once does he EVER QUESTION why he is in Iraq. His ENTIRE purpose (according to his own opening statement) was to go after the people who were responsible for 911. THEN OF COURSE he's discovered as being QUEER and sent home, which was the purpose of interviewing him. We were supposed to FEEL TERRIBLE for him. Boo hoo, poor guy, he doesn't get to carry a machine gun and prove he's a REAL man!

Getting to put a rainbow sticker on a machine gun is what this is all about. GAY PRIDE IN KILLING!?

YES THIS IS TIME TO TAKE A STAND! How many people have you known who HOLD THE GERMAN CITIZENS responsible for Nazi atrocities? We are already as complicit in the eyes of the world.

The original people who risked their lives at the Stonewall riots were ALSO VEHEMENTLY opposed to the war in Vietnam. Marsha P. Johnson is someone I met in person, and I can tell you right now that she was NOT SOMEONE who would be in favor of giving the LOVE up to the British Army!

Gays in the military is NOT a civil rights issue! THERE'S NOTHING CIVIL ABOUT INVADING, KILLING, TERRORIZING, MAIMING, MAKING ORPHANS, ETC., ETC., ETC.!

YES IT IS TIME TO TAKE A STAND AND SPEAK UP, REGARDLESS OF HOW IT MAY SOUND!

QUEERS SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED IN THE ARMED SERVICES BECAUSE OUR ARMED SERVICES HAVE PROVEN TO BE DANGEROUS, AND RESPONSIBLE FOR WAR CRIMES!

We're supposed to be GRATEFUL that the British Army has "accepted" queers? Well I DON'T ACCEPT THE BRITISH ARMY! FUCK THE BRITISH ARMY!

> NO QUEERS ALLOWED! Anyone, and I mean ANYONE we can prevent from joining an > army like our army and the British army should be prevented! NO FAGS OR DYKES ALLOWED IN UNIFORM! KICK THEM ALL OUT! SEND THEM HOME!
>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

234. Gloria Mindock

Cervena Barva Press announces a new book publication

Fri 25 Jul 2008

Cervena Barva Press is pleased to announce the publication of "The Season Of Love" by Flavia Cosma

Flavia Cosma is an award winning Romanian-born Canadian poet, author and translator. She has published thirteen books of poetry, a novel, a travel memoir and three books for children. Her book, 47 Poems, (Texas Tech Press) received the ALTA Richard Wilbur Poetry in Translation Prize. Èervená Barva Press published her chapbook, Gothic Calligraphy and will be publishing her newest collection, Songs at the Aegean Sea.

"Once again in The Season of Love, Flavia Cosma offers us those momentary glimpses and sensations briefly felt and viewed which hide and yet reveal the testament of life. Through the transient sensations of reality, the poet lures her readership deep into the mystic world of her eternity. Each poem serves to lead the reader through the pain, suffering and loneliness of life while searching for truth's hidden mysteries which serve to make life meaningful and beautiful, yet remain to be discovered in that continual renewal and rebirth of life." David Mills, poet and critic Toronto, Canada

"One of prevailing themes in Flavia Cosma's poetry is love, but not as a banal, run-of-the mill experience. Instead, it has the elemental intensity of natural phenomena, which best picture both the breakdown of feelings and the undying hope. And that's where the poet places her wise optimism."
Dr. Irena Harasimowicz-Zarzecka
PHD Philology, University of Bucharest, Romania
Toronto, Canada

Order online at http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/index.html#TheSeasonofLove

The Season Of Love
by Flavia Cosma
$15.00 + $3.00 S/H (by mail)
89 pages, paper
ISBN: 978-0-615-20097-2
Publication Date: July 2008
For information contact:
Gloria Mindock
Cervena Barva Press, Somerville, MA (www.cervenabarvapress.com)
Email: [redacted]

↑ Index

235. David Chirot

"Man on a Wire" doc. of Phillipe Petit's Aerial Crossing between the Twin Towers//correction: "Chiromancy" not "Chirology"

Fri 25 Jul 2008

P*hillipe Petit wrote a great, meditative book on his aerial art called ON THE HIGH WIRE
**
(Translated by Paul Auster, 1975 Random House and in 1997 is included in the collection Translations)

A correction to a post i sent yesterday: i mistakenly wrote "Chirology" when it should be "Chiromancy"

MOVIES * | July 25, 2008
 * Movie Review | 'Man on Wire': Walking on Air Between the Towers
<http://movies.nytimes.com/2008/07/25/movies/25wire.html?ex17649600&en²2e643444a2bedd&eiP70&th&emc=th&emc=eta1>
*
 By A. O. SCOTT
 James Marsh's "Man on Wire" is a thorough, understated and altogether enthralling documentary.

↑ Index

236. Martha Deed

Cleveland poetry info request

Fri 25 Jul 2008

I plan to be in Cleveland for a week or so beginning August 6th.

Any bookstore or poetry readings to suggest?

Thanks.
Martha Deed

↑ Index

237. Krysia Jopek

FW: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Fri 25 Jul 2008

This has been an interesting ongoing dialogue regarding capitalism and its role in the art world and purported lack of relevance in the poetry world.

"Capitalism is largely irrelevant to poetry," as a statement / generalization gave me great pause. I realize the context of the coversation has been production and mass deployment so to speak of art/poetry as products/ commodities.

However, the world is largely relevant to poetry and the world, let's face it, is run by multinational late capitalism (a la Jameson).

I agree that one needs less money to write poetry vs. to produce a film or even large paintings (supplies and a space to paint and the luxury of time), etc.

However, the production, publication, and dissemination of poetry is still connected to capitalist-dominated contemporary culture. How many children/people out there do not have a computer, do not have access to the internet global highway and its information, have not had a proper education . . .

Even the "avante garde" or experimental poets have to admit, sadly, that most of us have had some access and priviledge. I know we're not paid for our work--there's not a large market for poetry-- although tons of people seem to be reading Billy Collins and Maya Angelou--

I may have taken this conversation on a tangent but felt compelled to comment on the relationship of capitalism to poetry.

Thanks for those of you who have read to the end during these busy times :)
Krysia

---------- Original message ----------
From: Thomas savage <[redacted]>

> I agree that capitalism is largely irrelevant to poetry. I think about this a bit as a new full-length book of mine, Brainlifts, has just been published by a relatively new small press called Straw Gate Books. I'm glad to say that the pressures of capitalism have little or nothing to do with how this book was produced or how it will fare. As for capitalism in the art world, I mostly agree. There is however a small part of the Chelsea art scene that is less influenced by the pressures of capitalism than the rest of it. I refer to the co-op galleries where I work sometimes. They are membership galleries but they show many invited artists in one format or another. Also, the quality of the work in these galle ries has improved lately. Of course they are a small portion of an otherwise capitalistic and greed driven plateau of art in NYC. But I just thought I should mention that these other places still exist and have existed for a long time. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Wed, 7/23/08, Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat
Subject: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, July 23, 2008, 3:24 AM

Jim,

While writing my original post, I thought of making it only about poetry, being completely aware of what you are saying about the world of painting, particularly in New York, which has been the center of the art market for years. I decided against it be c ause what I am saying applies to art in general, representing one end of a spectrum. One can see this tension most clearly in film, even the most stripped down version of which requires a significant capital investment. The issue of means of production (studio, independent, video, etc.) is an integral part of discussing an art of film. What is peculiar about poetry is that it both requires very little capital investment and it has almost as small audience. The investment poetry requires is the poet's time (poetry is an art which consumes time; time is at the heart of it). This makes the poet his or her audience. This condition so clear in poetry exists in all arts, only blurred by the exigencies of money in other arts. I wrote about this in my essay, "Is Poetry a Job, Is a Poem a Product?"

Jim, you do not mention where you disagree with me. I would like to k now.

Ciao,

Murat

Jim

On Tue, Jul 22, 2008 at 12:11 AM, Jim Andrews wrote:

i thought that was an interesting post, murat. i don't agree with lots of it, but you get at some things that are important that not too many people seem able to write about at all, even if you're wrong about them.

the interesting part, i felt, was the stuff on ownership. very writerly. not so much anti-capitalist as yawning at capitalism in a poetry context. which is right, i feel. capitalism in a poetry context is just more or less irrelevant.

*contrast that, however, with visual art. if you hang out with new york visual artists online or anywhere else, you see just how little sense any art makes to them t hat doesn't work within capitalism. galleries, products, and so on. if it doesn't make it monetarily, it just doesn't count. it can't survive. in the 'market of ideas' in which new york artists are immersed.*

which is too bad for new york art, it seems to me. but i guess it makes sense there.

whereas the 'market of ideas' you allude to is less about a capitalistic market as something different. which is important. and expensive, in a sense.

the danger of poetry resides, in part, in its being able to operate, to some extent (more than visual art) in other dimensions than the genuinely boring capitalistic market of ideas.

genuinely boring. deeply. terminally. genuine stuff of the forces of dullness. wit ness the art it promulgates in mass media, which is little more than a provisional business proposition.

which is one of the reasons i remain optimistic about the internet. as medium for something else.

ja
http://vispo.com

guidelines

↑ Index

238. David-Baptiste Chirot

Woodland Pattern Book Center E-News: Hysterical Alphabet Opening Reception this Sunday!

Fri 25 Jul 2008

Date: Fri, 25 Jul 2008 11:40:30 -0700
From: [redacted]
Subject: E-News: Hysterical Alphabet Opening Reception this Sunday!
To: [redacted]

Woodland Pattern E-News!
http://www.woodlandpattern.org/

==========
SUNDAY, JULY 27, 2008: HYSTERICAL ALPHABET OPENING RECEPTION; 1-4pm
==========

Hysterical Alphabet
Opening Reception

Sunday, July 27, 2008; 1-4pm (FREE)
Woodland Pattern Book Center
720 East Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53212

The exhibition runs from July 27 - August 24

The Hysterical Alphabet, text by Terri Kapsalis and drawings by Gina Litherland, is an abecedary offering a condensed history of hysteria with levity, playfulness, and critical insight, drawn from medical writings and images ranging from ancient Egypt to the present. Each letter in The Hysterical Alphabet introduces an episode direct from the annals of medical lore, tracking centuries of female malady, heartily disproving the theory that time heals all wombs.

The Hysterical Alphabet exhibition features Gina Litherland's original drawings including the cover art and the hysterical alphabet from A to Z.

Gina Litherland's art and writings have been published worldwide in journals and periodicals associated with contemporary surrealism. Litherland's most recent work has been the subject of solo museum exhibitions at the James Watrous Gallery of the Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts, and Letters and the Haggerty Museum of Art at Marquette University in Milwaukee. Her work as a painter is represented by Tory Folliard Gallery in Milwaukee and Corbett vs. Dempsey in Chicago.

Terri Kapsalis' recent fiction, "Most Beautiful Experiments," was published in Parakeet and nominated for a Pushcart Prize. Other writings have appeared in the Baffler, new formations, Public, and Lusitania. She is the author of Public Privates: Performing Gynecology from Both Ends of the Speculum (Duke University Press). She is a founding member of Theater Oobleck and teaches at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago.

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/gallery/exhibits_jul08.shtml

==========
SATURDAY, AUGUST 2, 2008: HYSTERICAL ALPHABET PERFORMANCE; 7PM
==========

Hysterical Alphabet
A Live Audio- Visual Performance

Saturday, August 2, 2008; 7pm ($8/$7/$6)
Woodland Pattern Book Center
720 East Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53212

Hysterical historia. Historical hysteria. The ABCs are seized by a convulsive fit in Terri Kapsalis' The Hysterical Alphabet, each letter introducing an episode direct from the annals of medical lore. Backed by Danny Thompson's disquieting film collages and John Corbett's vinyl manipulations, The Hysterical Alphabet tracks centuries of female malady, disproving the theory that time heals all wombs. A Theater Oobleck production. The Hysterical Alphabet is a live audio-visual performance.

Writer, sound-artist and curator John Corbett teaches at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and is the co-director of the art gallery Corbett vs. Dempsey. He was artistic director of the Berlin JazzFest in 2002, and he co-curated "Big Picture: A New View of Painting in Chicago" at the Chicago History Museum (2008). Since 1988, he has taught at the School of the Art Institute. Corbett enlisted his sound effects skills in Oobleck's 1992 production of live radio plays.

Danny Thompson is a founding member of Theater Oobleck, for which he has written too many plays, including "Necessity," "The Complete Lost Works of Samuel Beckett as Found in an Envelope (Partially Burned) in a Dustbin in Paris Labeled "Never to be Performed. Never. Ever. Ever. Or I'll Sue! I'll Sue from the Grave!!!," and "Big Tooth High-Tech Megatron vs. the Sockpuppet of Procrasti. He currently lives in Worcester, MA, home of the monkey wrench, the rickshaw, the steam calliope, the first perfect pitched game of Major League Baseball (1880), Robert Benchley, Abbie Hoffman, Sam Fuller, and the yellow smiley face.

Terri Kapsalis' recent fiction, "Most Beautiful Experiments," was published in Parakeet and nominated for a Pushcart Prize. Other writings have appeared in the Baffler, new formations, Public, and Lusitania. She is the author of Public Privates: Performing Gynecology from Both Ends of the Speculum (Duke University Press). She is a founding member of Theater Oobleck and teaches at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago.

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/gallery/hysterical_alphabet_performance.shtml

==========
SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 2008: DUO & TRIO IMPROVISATIONS; 2PM
==========

An Afternoon of Duo & Trio Improvisations
featuring Chris Burns, Steve Nelson-Raney & Hal Rammel

Sunday, August 3, 2008; 2pm ($6/$5)
Woodland Pattern Book Center
720 East Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53212

Christopher Burns is a composer of chamber and electroacoustic music. He is also an active performer, whether improvising with a laptop, or creating new versions of electronic classics. He teaches composition and music technology at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Steve Nelson-Raney is a composer who is active in jazz, contemporary music and free improvisation. As a performer he explores the development of language systems in both solo and collaborative contexts.

Hal Rammel designs and builds unique acoustic and amplified musical instruments and plays them in the ensembles Audiotrope, the LOST DATA Project, and Whole or by the Slice.

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/gallery/burns_nelson-raney_rammel01.shtml

==========
WEDNESDAYS, AUGUST 6, 13, & 20: UNCOVER YOUR VOICE WORKSHOP; 10-11:30AM
==========

Uncover Your Voice: A Three-Week Workshop Offered to Aspiring Writers with Carmen Alicia Murguia
$45/$40 WP Members

Wednesdays, August 6, 13, & 20; 10am-11:30am
Friday, August 22, 7pm: Class Reading
Woodland Pattern Book Center
720 East Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53212

In this workshop, students will get the opportunity to explore who they are through prose and poetry, ultimately uncovering their voice as a writer. Participants will share stories of personal life experiences, develop a short manuscript, and perform their work at a public reading in the Woodland Pattern gallery on Friday, August 22, 7pm. Recommended for aspiring writers, this workshop will give you the push and experience you need to uncover your voice as a writer.

Carmen Alicia Murguia is a 1991 graduate of Minnesota's Loft Literary Center 'Writers of Color Program.' Under the mentorship of Puerto Rican Novelist Sandra Benitez and black, lesbian author Jewelle Gomez, Carmen has published work in: Lambda Book Report, Atlanta's Southern Voice, and The Journal of the Southern Poverty Law Center; and locally in InStep News and El Conquistador. Her poems, 'Border Crossing' and 'When I Grow Up I Want to Be A Mariachi' appear in the unprecedented anthology, Between the Heart and the Land: Latina Poets in the Midwest (MARCH/Abrazo Press 2003). She is the recipient of: Milwaukee County Arts Board 'Art Futures Award,' was named 'One of 30 Most Influential People You Should Know' by Milwaukee Magazine, was also named 1 of 16 Most Influential Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Latinas/os in the Country by Tentaciones Magazine.

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/workshops/adults.shtml#murguia

==========
FRIDAY, AUGUST 15, 2008: OPEN READING; 7PM
==========

Open Reading Hosted by Melissa Czarnik
$3/$2 Open Mic Readers

Sunday, June 15, 2008; 7pm
Woodland Pattern Book Center
720 East Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53212

As a thanks to all of our open mic frequenters, the August Redletter Reading Series is dedicated to you.

The entire open reading will be devoted to your words and expression. Bring your notebook, chapbook, memory, and/or a friend. We appreciate your support!

==========
SATURDAY & SUNDAY, AUGUST 16-17, 2008: THE LANGUAGE OF POP-UPS WORKSHOP
==========

The Language of Pop-Ups with Shawn Sheehy
$75/$70 WP Members

Saturday & Sunday, August 16-17; 12-5pm
Woodland Pattern Book Center
720 East Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53212

Who hasn't been surprised and delighted by the magic of a pop-up book?In this 2-day workshop students will acquire sufficient knowledge of pop-up structure to shed light on the engineer's secrets. Beginning with basic tools and techniques of pop-up construction, participants will quickly move on to building a variety of simple, versatile forms. One might think of these forms as the 'nouns' of pop-ups. Various ways of lifting these forms will be explored, especially those that give a pop-up a sense of animation. These lifts would serve as the 'verbs' of pop-ups. The workshop will end with participants inventing their own combinations of forms and lifts—in other words, building the language of pop-ups. Ultimately, each student will take home a bound collection of working models. Throughout the workshop, participants will view and discuss the work of commercial pop-up engineers. No experience necessary.

Shawn Sheehy earned an MFA in book & Paper Arts from Columbia College Chicago. He serves as adjunct instructor in the book arts at Columbia College and teaches pop-up engineering workshops nation-wide. His artists books, published under the name Paperboy Press, can be found at the Newberry Library in Chicago, the American Museum of Papermaking in Atlanta, Special Collections at UCLA, the Houghton Library at Harvard and many other collections. Shawn anticipates the publication of his first trade pop-up book. He is a co-founder of East Pilsen's Vespine Gallery.

Please bring these tools with you: Bonefolder, Steel ruler, Compass, Xacto knife with lots of extra blades, Scissors, Pencil, Self-healing mat, Microspatula, Tweezers

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/workshops/adults.shtml#sheehy

==========
SUNDAY, AUGUST 24, 2008: ALTERNATING CURRENTS LIVE; 7PM
==========

Alternating Currents Live
The Frode Gjerstad + Paal Nilssen-Love Duo

Sunday, August 24, 2008; 7pm ($8/$7/$6)
Woodland Pattern Book Center
720 East Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53212

Frode Gjerstad and Paal Nilssen-Love are from the same town in Norway, Stavanger, and they have been playing together since Paal was 15 years old. Until recently Gjerstad has been one of the few Norwegian musicians playing improvised music outside of the ECM school of players.

Saxophonist Frode Gjerstad has been playing freely improvised music internationally since his first work with English drummer John Stevens in 1981. He played and recorded regularly with John Stevens' trio Detail (with bassist Johnny Dyani) until Stevens' death in 1994. He has also recorded with Borah Berman, Bobby Bradford, William Parker, and Peter Brötzmann. Since the late 1980s he has organized the Circulasione Totale Orchestra with young Norwegian musicians incorporating electric instruments and modern rock-oriented rhythms. Gjerstad also operates his own label, Circulasione Totale.

Drummer Paal Nilssen-Love has played and recorded with Peter Brötzmann, Mats Gustafsson, Evan Parker, Joe McPhee, and many others. He regularly performs in the Scandinavian trio known as The Thing with Swedish saxophonist Mats Gustafsson and bassist Ingebrigt Haker Flaten, Ken Vandermark's Territory Band, and Peter Brötzmann's Chicago Tentet.

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/gallery/acl.082408.shtml

==========
UPCOMING EVENTS
==========

JULY:
Sun. 7/27: Hysterical Alphabet Exhibition; 1-4pm

AUGUST:
Sat. 8/2: Hysterical Alphabet Performance; 7pm
Sun. 8/3: An Afternoon of Duo & Trio Improvisations; 2pm
Wed. 8/6, 8/13, 8/20: Uncover Your Voice Workshop; 10am-11:30am
Fri. 8/15: Open Reading; 7pm
Sat. & Sun. 8/16-8/17: The Language of Pop-Ups Workshop; 12pm-5pm
Sun. 8/24: Alternating Currents Live; 7pm
Wed: 8/27: Eddee Daniel Reading, Central Library
814 W. Wisconsin Ave; 6:30pm

To receive regular messages notifying you of Woodland Pattern events, send a message to us at [redacted] with "Join E-List" in the subject line.

To unsubscribe from these mailings send a reply with "unsubscribe" in the subject line.

PLEASE FORWARD! THANKS!!!

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/

Woodland Pattern Book Center

> 720 E. Locust Street
> Milwaukee, WI 53212
> phone [redacted]

_____ With Windows Live for mobile, your contacts travel with you. http://www.windowslive.com/mobile/overview.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_mobile_072008

↑ Index

239. AWAREing Press
Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Fri 25 Jul 2008

CAConrad, it's evident to me that your concern is over the war, and not the basic human rights of anyone who wishes to fight for or against the war, either from within the military or from outside its ranks. Gays and bis can kill people as easily as straights can kill people. (Is accidentally or intentionally infecting someone with HIV a murder, or a mistake, or a write-off? Sex is dangerous too...) But I digress...

Did the KKK disband? I'm not sure. But there are plenty of minorities who gravitate toward things that can harm them. For example, any queers who belong to the Log Cabin Republicans may at first seem to be doing a disservice to homosexuals by actively participating in a party that continues to ban gay marriage and condone bigotry and discrimination in lieu of adopting an egalitarian stance regarding sexual preferences and sexual acts. Yet, the people who join that faction have some vested interest in and attraction to the (perhaps oxymoronic) tenet that it tries to uphold.

Same thing with those who delight in joining the military. By banning a group--any group--from enlisting, we are promoting prejudice and therefore sending signals that anyone who identifies as a part of that group is unworthy, unlikeable, unfit, and less than human... It seems only fair that if a bisexual or homosexual person wishes to bear arms and engage in battle as sanctioned by the United States or any other country, then they should be allowed to enlist. Is a guy who chooses to breed a better fighter than one who lusts after his own sex? That is the argument brewing. To that, we need to say: "No, a person's sexual appetite has no bearing on how good of a soldier he is." (Otherwise, we'd amass an army of man-hating lesbians to fight an all male "enermy" army.) Police officers, too, fall into this dilemma. Any profession, actually, can be reduced to whether or not a man will fuck or fight an enemy of the same, or opposite, sex... A homo on Wall Street? no way! he'd want to take the competition to bed! etc.

On the flip side, your "FUCK THE BRITISH ARMY" does have historical merit, as immigrants to what became the United States said much the same thing before the country got its footing. Our ancestors' guerilla tactics and sniping at the red coats, and throwing all that tea into the Atlantic, was a logical inevitability after the Mayflower folk and others expatriated in droves to the "unsettled land". (Ignorning, of course, the fact that there were millions of people already living here.) Yes, it's too bad that war and hostility exist. But to berate a law intended to dismiss an egregious human rights error seems more like misplaced anger than productive action.

James

BTW: From what I know about the Stonewall riot, it consisted of a few drag queens throwing pumps at police after the legendary Judy Garland passed out and died in a pool of drug and alcohol-induced puke. Nobody "risked their lives" to continue with the drag show and the cocktail banter. ---------- Original message from CA Conrad <[redacted]>: ----------

> James, I guess if queers want to join the KKK they should be allowed?
>
> We are a country at war, let us NOT forget. OVER A MILLION DEAD AND COUNTING.
>
> The military machine is NOT something I will ever get behind, ever! Because of who WE ARE, and who the British are (they helped us invade Iraq), there is NO WAY to negotiate being in favor of gays in the military without ALSO being in favor of the military.
>
> Not too long ago the documentary/news(?) episodes of IN THE LIFE interviewed a queer man who joined the military after 911. He was outraged by what had happened, of course, as we all were. BUT, where does he wind up when they ship his DUMB gay ass out? IRAQ! And he NEVER, not once does he EVER QUESTION why he is in Iraq. His ENTIRE purpose (according to his own opening statement) was to go after the people who were responsible for 911. THEN OF COURSE he's discovered as being QUEER and sent home, which was the purpose of interviewing him. We were supposed to FEEL TERRIBLE for him. Boo hoo, poor guy, he doesn't get to carry a machine gun and prove he's a REAL man!
>
> Getting to put a rainbow sticker on a machine gun is what this is all about. GAY PRIDE IN KILLING!?
>
> YES THIS IS TIME TO TAKE A STAND! How many people have you known who HOLD
> THE GERMAN CITIZENS responsible for Nazi atrocities? We are already as complicit in the eyes of the world.
>
> The original people who risked their lives at the Stonewall riots were ALSO

> VEHEMENTLY opposed to the war in Vietnam. Marsha P. Johnson is someone I met in person, and I can tell you right now that she was NOT SOMEONE who would be in favor of giving the LOVE up to the British Army!
>
> Gays in the military is NOT a civil rights issue! THERE'S NOTHING CIVIL ABOUT INVADING, KILLING, TERRORIZING, MAIMING, MAKING ORPHANS, ETC., ETC., > ETC.!
>
> YES IT IS TIME TO TAKE A STAND AND SPEAK UP, REGARDLESS OF HOW IT MAY SOUND!
>
> QUEERS SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED IN THE ARMED SERVICES BECAUSE OUR ARMED > SERVICES HAVE PROVEN TO BE DANGEROUS, AND RESPONSIBLE FOR WAR CRIMES!
>
> We're supposed to be GRATEFUL that the British Army has "accepted" queers? Well I DON'T ACCEPT THE BRITISH ARMY! FUCK THE BRITISH ARMY!
>
> NO QUEERS ALLOWED! Anyone, and I mean ANYONE we can prevent from joining an > army like our army and the British army should be prevented! NO FAGS OR DYKES ALLOWED IN UNIFORM! KICK THEM ALL OUT! SEND THEM HOME!
>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

240. Adam Tobin
Reading Tonight! at Unnameable Books
Sat 26 Jul 2008

For one night and one night only:

Pajama Party Poetry Reading
Saturday, July 26th 8pm-12 midnight
Unnamable Books
456 Bergen Street, Brooklyn

***

Featuring:
Thomas Devaney
Brenda Iijima
Sharon Mesmer
Vyt Bakaitis

Mathias Svalina
Susie Timmons
Kate Schapira
Julia Cohen
& Kimberly Lyons

***

Hear Poems
Eat Pajama Party Snacks
Drink Stuff
Buy Books
Wear Pajamas

It's Summer
& we miss you.
January is nearly here.

***

(pajamas not required)

***

Unnameable Books
456 Bergen St.
Brooklyn, NY 11217
[redacted]
www.unnameablebooks.net

***

↑ Index

241. Stephen Vincent
City Psyche - New de blog
Sat 26 Jul 2008

---

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

For all of you fellow domestic summer weekend slackers(!), you might be interested in a new "City Psyche" blog series I have started - camera and journal in hand - exploring San Francisco streets again. To get some some sense, the opening passage goes:

A current challenge is to look for signs (text, image, etc.) that work as collective epiphanies of life in this City, if not across the nation, globe, etc. That is to explore the ways in which individual and collective psyche emerge in an identifiable configuration. The process is probably most taken from some combination of Jersey Grotowski's, Towards a Poor Theatre, and the principles of Arte Povera. The brief sum of which is to work the streets and - not ruling out the complex - to find texts and images within simple and/or found materials. The additional task is not to belabor a critical definition of any discovery. In fact, the primary impulse is to use eyes and ears - or any of the other senses - reveal what makes for awe. I don't mean awe in a shallow, romantic sense. But to find those situations in which the senses are penetrated in such a way as to make you stop in your own tracks, either for a second or an enduring space of time.

For example, I am walking across Guerrero at 19th Street at dusk on a Friday evening. A young woman on a cell-phone is in the cross-walk just ahead of my step. "Don't be fashionably late, sucker," she says, her voice at full volume.

Your comments always appreciated.

Stephen V

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

242. Chad Sweeney

Goodbye Reading in Berkeley: Chad/Jennifer Sweeney/Aug 3/Moe's Books w/Richard Silberg

Sat 26 Jul 2008

Dear friends, Jennifer and I are leaving San Francisco for Michigan and we'd love to see you one more time. Please, come to Moe's for this final reading and bar hopping after-party. Love, CS

A Sendoff Reading for the Sweeneys AT MOES BOOKS
SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 2008, 7:30
Poetry Flash at Moe's
RICHARD SILBERG, CHAD SWEENEY & JENNIFER K. SWEENEY

Chad and Jennifer K. Sweeney are moving to Michigan! Join us at this sendoff reading to wish them the best and to say goodbye. Afterparty at some bars near Moes.

Chad Sweeney is the author of two new books of poems, An Architecture, BlazeVOX, and Arranging the Blaze, forthcoming from Anhinga Press, and is the editor of the new CityLights Book celebrating 15 years of the National WritersCorps (title pending). His poems have appeared widely, including in Best American Poetry

2008, and he is co-editor of the Parthenon West Review, and the editor of the series "Listening In," the Poetry Flash feature on MFA poets and poems.
Jennifer K. Sweeney's debut book of poems, Salt Memory, is the winner of the 2006 Main Street Rag Poetry Book Award. Her work has appeared in journals like Hayden's Ferry Review, RUNES, Nimrod and New York Quarterly, finalist for both the 2004 Center for Book
Arts Chapbook Competition and the 2005 Brittingham/Felix Pollak Prize. She is the recipient of a Cultural Equities Grant from the San Francisco Arts Commission.
Richard Silberg, Associate Editor of Poetry Flash, is a poet, critic and translator. His most recent book of poems is Deconstruction of the Blues. He's author of Reading the Sphere, A Geography of Contemporary American Poetry, essays from Poetry Flash, and co-translator of The Three Way Tavern, poems of the South Korean poet Ko Un, winner of the Northern California Book Award in Translation

MOE'S BOOKS, 2476 Telegraph Avenue, Berkeley, (510) [redacted], www.moesbooks.com. Parking is available at the Durant/Channing Garage, very near to Telegraph.
Channing is one block north.
For information, Poetry Flash: [redacted].

↑ Index

243. Jim Andrews

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Sat 26 Jul 2008

> I always thought hypertext was a text with multiple authors,
> created by the > addition of multiple, different texts? Was I wrong?
>
> Ciao,
> Murat

Hi Murat,

If this is what you think hypertext is, then I can see why you might say that "hypertext, as a form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership." Makes sense. But your def of hypertext is wrong.

Hypertexts usually do link to other texts by other authors, and the links do erm sort of make them all into one text, in some sense, but the crucial thing in the definition of hypertext is the link. Whether it's to a different part of the same document or to a different document or image or program or whatever. See, for instance, the defs of hypertext at http://dictionary.reference.com/browse/hypertext , http://www.w3.org/WhatIs.html and http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hypertext

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

244. Maria Damon
Re: City Psyche - New de blog
Sat 26 Jul 2008

---

great stuff, stephen! poetry lives in the cracks, between the surface and its surface.

Stephen Vincent wrote:
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
> For all of you fellow domestic summer weekend slackers(!), you might be interested in a new "City Psyche" blog series I have started - camera and journal in hand - exploring San Francisco streets again. To get some some sense, the opening passage goes:
>
>
> A current challenge is to look for signs (text, image, etc.) that work as collective epiphanies of life in this City, if not across the nation, globe, etc. That is to explore the ways in which individual and collective psyche emerge in an identifiable configuration. The process is probably most taken from some combination of Jersey Grotowski's, Towards a Poor Theatre, and the principles of Arte Povera. The brief sum of which is to work the streets and - not ruling out the complex - to find texts and images within simple and/or found materials. The additional task is not to belabor a critical definition of any discovery. In fact, the primary impulse is to use eyes and ears - or any of the other senses - reveal what makes for awe. I don't mean awe in a shallow, romantic sense. But to find those situations in which the senses are penetrated in such a way as to make you stop in your own tracks, either for a second or an enduring space of time.
> For example, I am walking across Guerrero at 19th Street at dusk on a Friday evening. A young woman on a cell-phone is in the cross-walk just ahead of my step. “Don’t be fashionably late, sucker,” she says, her voice at full volume.

> Your comments always appreciated.
> Stephen V
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

245. Alan Sondheim
Dreams of Better Worlds Concrete
Sun 27 Jul 2008

Dreams of Better Worlds Concrete

| http://www.alansondheim.org/ bild jpgs
| http://www.alansondheim.org/bild.mp4
| http://slurl.com/secondlife/Odyssey/48/12/22

| Images from intractive avatar game in The Accidental Artist exhibition, | SL; avatar movement deconstructs architecture, frees the space. No | score, no wins or losses; continuous play produces continuous | deconstruction. The video is in black and white; color from the site | refuses to compress properly.

Think of it: Second Life (or similar virtual spaces) as a simulacrum of humanity's dream of flying, of malleable space and time; think of SL as a laboratory for the practical/theoretical phenomenology of space and time. What occurs in human flight, in the presence of strangers, in weight= lessness, in sudden weight, in anonymity, in exposure, in agoraphobia or clausterphobia? I work daily and nightly in the exhibition space, trying things out, not primarily for the aesthetics, but for the cog-sci, psycho- logical, psi-a comprehension that may or may not occur. Lacan or Minsky might not be at home in these spaces, but they exist on the periphery of theory. It's far too easy to dismiss virtual spaces in relation to what might be considered the other, in terms of community, politics, political economy, information economy, religion, etc. But first there is community in SL, ideological struggle, etc., although not played out against the scarcity of necessary resources; bandwidth and prim number are irrelevant compared to lack of food or sleep. On the other hand it's the very absence of noise that makes SL more like a savanna than an urban center, and a savanna that at times allows one to speak and perceive with a clarity bordering on the uncanny. While it may be slightly difficult learning to move smoothly through SL, it's no more difficult than learning a sport or board-game, and the results are equally enriching.

I don't want to sound like an advertisement for SL or virtual worlds in general - but I do want to indicate their potential for psychological and phenomenological experimentation. What one sees can be seen from one's home; there's an established intimacy that the heavy cultural institut- ionalization of museums and galleries doesn't have. The economy is on a far smaller scale as well; over the years I've been on SL for example,, I've paid eight dollars and eighty cents in real money for uploads to the SL server - a small price, given the potential. Most of what I construct - animations, textures, sounds, texts, prims, are created with open source software outside SL.

To fly, to make objects disappear and appear at will, to revolve or otherwise motivate them, to ignore or stress gravity, to move among the problematic of things, to move through them, to court invisibility, to view oneself from one's body or alterity, to speak or write (courting both phoneme and grapheme), to operate within or beneath erasure, to create or annihilate, send objects into or out of the world - to do any of these things, and more, in any combination - within the limits of the computer - limits which are perhaps far too often emphasized (instead of seeing potential and the potential for expansion) - this is what, for the moment while the net is up and running - this is what we can work with, in how- ever limited our physical off-world conditions might be - and this is the promise, holding for the slightest while - for the premise of communica- tion or its lack, analogic inert and digital coded and their intermingled limits. It continues to surprise me, how many complaints there are about these worlds, from lambda-moo and earlier, and how little joy is expressed over their current possibilities - what they can do _now._ Forget the holodeck; there are already (what would have passed for) miracles afoot. This isn't arguing against the need for deconstruction and critique of SL's and other virtual worlds' political economy - just that one can proceed in addition from the bottom up, seeing for example what happens when a prim is grounded or sent elsewhere, say, into another physics, with a shape-rider upon it, another shape-rider perhaps desperately controlling the action, such as it is.

Then again, what constitutes a prim, a thing, a thing-in-itself, a proto- col, a code, an atom, a table of elements or fundamental particles, a resonance or plasma sending material worlds askew, exhausted, towards the defuge of potential (but never complete) annihilation? And what better way to think these things through, than to try them, on however distorted or miniscule a scale. -

↑ Index

246. Steven D. Schroeder
Anti- Featured Poet #9
Sun 27 Jul 2008

The new feature at Anti- is a visual poetry special by Michael Basinski. Thanks to assistant editor A. J. Patrick Liszkiewicz for doing pretty much everything to make it possible.

http://anti-poetry.com/

Steven D. Schroeder
Editor, Anti-

↑ Index

247. Andy Nicholson
Las Vegas
Sun 27 Jul 2008

Dearest anyone in the Las Vegas area,

I'm in the process of moving to the Las Vegas area. Do good bookstores exist out here? Please let me know what I might be able to find, as far as independent bookstores or any interesting reading series--a few word about art galleries and music would be great as well.

Andy Nicholson
andynicholson.blogspot.com

↑ Index

248. Philip Metres
new on Behind the Lines poetry blog
Sun 27 Jul 2008

The latest on http://www.behindthelinespoetry.blogspot.com

Mairead Byrne's "The Russian Week"
The latest from Ali Abunimah
On the Beating of Mohammed Omer Visiting Walden/Thoreau's Legacies
Guided by Voices' "Back to the Lake"
Cluster Bombs Save Lives (And if You Don't Agree With Us, We'll Take a Couple Limbs)/Cognitive Mapping and Poetry
"Washing Away War"
Remembering (Again) the Catonsville Nine
About the Selling of John Lennon's "Give Peace a C...
"Safety Instructions" to Appear on a Cleveland RTA...

Lather Up, People, It's Time for Your Shampoo
Check Out Poetry Daily Today: "For the Fifty..."
Suheir Hammad's "On the Brink Of (for Rachel Corri...
Behind the Bulldozer Rampage/The Story of Hosam Dw...
Nil'in, in the Footsteps of Bil'in/Another Palesti...
The Strokes' "Hard to Explain"/(Guilty Pleasures S...
Birth/Independence Days: Thinking of Whitman & Beginnings
Emily Wilson's Review of John Tipton's translation...
Alain Badiou's "Fifteen Theses on Contemporary Art...
Two Takes on "You Don't Mess with the Zohan"/Depic...
Listen to Martin Espada's "The God of the Weather-...
Lewis Carroll's "The Hunting of the Snark" Meets G...

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com
http://www.behindthelinespoetry.blogspot.com

↑ Index

249. Philip Metres
hello! (from) Cleveland!
Sun 27 Jul 2008

Try Mac's Backs Paperbacks in Cleveland Heights, and Visible Voice Books in Tremont--both host good reading series in Cleveland.

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com
http://www.behindthelinespoetry.blogspot.com

↑ Index

250. Michael Ford
Re: Cleveland poetry info request
Sun 27 Jul 2008

While I've never been to Cleveland, my friend js makkos runs a performance space there, the language foundry. They might have some events listed on their website. http://www.languagefoundry.org/

Michael Ford

On Fri, Jul 25, 2008 at 12:49 PM, Martha Deed <[redacted]> wrote:

> I plan to be in Cleveland for a week or so beginning August 6th.
>
> Any bookstore or poetry readings to suggest?
>
> Thanks.
> Martha Deed

↑ Index

251. Gabrielle Welford
Re: poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series /\\//\\\\////\\\\\\//////\\\\\\\\\/////////\\\\\\\\\\//////////
Sun 27 Jul 2008

---

i very very much love mina loy. have a paper about her thought and wilhelm reich's if any would like to see it.

went to hear nick karavatos in ukiah the other night. what a miracle! another poetics poet in ukiah, Cal. i like him too. sharp dense poetry like fireflies sometimes. g

On Thu, 24 Jul 2008, CA Conrad wrote:

> poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series
> /\\//\\\\////\\\\\\//////\\\\\\\\\/////////\\\\\\\\\\//////////
>
> details here: http://urchinpoetry.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

252. Nicholas Perrin

KSW Positions Colloquium Schedule

Sun 27 Jul 2008

for more information, or to register (or to access over 100 hours of audio and other resources) visit: www.kswnet.org

}some details of this schedule may still change{N 49 15.832 - W 123 05.921
:::::Positions Colloquium::::: August 19 - 24, 2008
at/withVIVO Media Arts Centre
1965 Main St, VancouverTUESDAY 19 August
Afternoon-Evening Session only
not at VIVO, location TBA
4:00 pm - late
Opening day social - a party + bbq with readings by poets who have been members of the KSW board or collective.
}tentatively including {Sachiko Murakami, Donato Mancini, Maxine Gadd, Peter Culley, Steve Collis, Ted Byrne, Andrea Actis
+ surprise guests
WEDNESDAY 20 August
Morning - Afternoon Session
11:00 am
Panel presentation
Title / theme: "On Line: Poetics and the Distribution of Meaning"
Moderator and Curator: Andrew Klobucar
Panellists: Darren Wershler-Henry, Brian Kim Stefans, Judy Radul, Sianne Ngai
1:00 pm
Theatrical presentation
Kevin Killian and Dodie Bellamy w/guests
"The Clifford Irving Show" Dinner Break
3:30 pm (circa)
Evening Session
7:00 pm
Readings, presentations, and performances by:
Darren Wershler-Henry, Brian Kim Stefans, Colin Smith, Robert Fitterman, Clint Burnham
THURSDAY 21 August
Morning - Afternoon Session
11:00 am
Panel presentation
Moderator and Curator: Rita Wong
Title / theme: "Alpha Bets: Language Gambles on a Gift Economy"
Panellists: Juliana Spahr, Pat O'Riley, Reg Johanson, Peter Cole1:00 pm

Talk
Michael Davidson
"On the Outskirts of Form: Cosmopoetics in the Shadow of NAFTA."Dinner Break
3:30 pm (circa)
Evening Session
7:00 pm
Readings, presentations, and performances by:
Rita Wong, Juliana Spahr, PILLS (A. Vidaver, R. Johanson, R. Farr), Pat O'Riley, Peter Cole, Louis Cabri, Jules Boykoff FRIDAY 22 August
Morning - Afternoon Session
11:00 am
Seminar
Seminar leaders: Kaia Sand and Jules Boykoff
Title / theme: "Landscapes of Dissent: Guerilla Poetry & Public Space"
Respondents: Catriona Strang, Colin Smith, Juliana Spahr, Nicholas Perrin, Laura Elrick, Clint Burnham
1:00 pm
Panel presentation
Moderator and Curator: Jeff Derksen
Title / theme: "Neoliberalism and the Politics of Poetics"
Panellists: Rodrigo Toscano, Rod Smith, Dorothy Lusk, Roger Farr, Laura Elrick
Dinner Break
3:30 pm (circa)
Evening Session
7:00 pm
Readings, presentations, and performances by:
Rodrigo Toscano, Rod Smith, Kaia Sand, Dorothy Trujillo Lusk, Jeff Derksen
SATURDAY 23 August
Morning-Afternoon Session
11:00 am
Seminar
Seminar leader: Sianne Ngai
Title / theme: "The Zany Science: Post-Fordist Performance and the Problem of Fun"
Respondents: Tyrone Williams, Mark
Wallace, Andrew Klobucar, Rob Fitterman, Stacy Doris, Michael Davidson, Louis Cabri, Dodie Bellamy
1:00 pm
Audio feature
Lisa Robertson and Stacy Doris
"The Perfume Recordist" Dinner Break

3:30 pm (circa)
Evening Session
7:00 pm
Readings, presentations, and performances by:
Tyrone Williams, Mark Wallace, Catriona Strang, Judy Radul, Laura Elrick
SUNDAY 24 August
Afternoon-Evening Session only
not at VIVO, location TBA
3:00 pm - whenever closing-day social

↑ Index

253. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: August 2 and 3 Gig Info
Sun 27 Jul 2008

On Sun, 27 Jul 2008 17:18:46 -0400 "steve d. dalachinsky"
<[redacted]> writes:

Brad Farberman, guitar
Steve Dalachinksky, poetry
Chris Dimeglio, trumpet
Greg Heffernan, cello
Jason Kao Hwang, violin

Sunday, August 3, 9PM @ The Lucky Cat
245 Grand Street between Driggs and Roebling
L train to Bedford

--- ---

Matthew Shipp (piano) & steve dalachinsky (poetry)

in concert for their new book Logos & Language
at
the Cornelia Street Cafe
29 Cornelia St (off Bleecker St. & W. 4th)

Saturday - August 2, 2008 at 6 PM

$ 10 admission (applies to a free drink or food)

info : 1212 989- 9318/9 or 1212 - [redacted]

A, C, E trains to West 4th ST or 1 train to Christopher Street

see ya soon, and I'll plan on coming to your Cornelia Street gig,

Brad

[redacted]

_____ Click here to find the perfect picture with our powerful photo search features.

↑ Index

254. Sara Phillips
poetry and archives?
Sun 27 Jul 2008

Hi all,

I'm working on a dissertation that explores the intersection between the archive and long poems. Do you know of any poetry from 1990 on that directly treats the subject of the archive, or acts like an archive? I'm interested in poets who might classify themselves as scholar-poets, or have an interdisciplinary approach (are perhaps archivists or librarians themselves).

I ran across a new book by Kate Eichhorn called Fond (Bookthug, 2008), and am looking for others.

Many thanks!
Sara Phillips

↑ Index

255. Jim Andrews
Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article
Sun 27 Jul 2008

Hi Krysia,

money talks, certainly. but it doesn't write very well and apparently is not particularly discerning concerning poetry.

whatever one may say about the state of poetry, at least it is not dominated by the rich. there is very little money to be made at it, in it, through it.

i remember attending a talk by a prominent canadian art curator. he said "an artist without a gallery is nothing". i can't see a publisher, say, having the presumption to feel that a poet without a traditional publisher is 'nothing'. well, they might feel that way, but the reality is different. the internet has opened possibilities for poetry that have decreased the power traditional publishers--and the whole apparatus of print--have over what gets disseminated and put before the public.

there actually has been the decentralization in matters of poetry that theory posited more or less across the board--which hasn't happened.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

256. Andy Gricevich
Project Spicer: invitation
Sun 27 Jul 2008

Hello, listservians!

I've just started PROJECT SPICER, a blog meant as a repository for notes, essays, thoughts, discussions, facts and factoids about Jack Spicer's magnificent poetry. Anyone who'd like to is welcome to join as a member (in which case you can post past or present text), to comment, to correspond or just read. I'll also be cultivating a set of links to Spicer-related pages; if you've got one you think I should put in the sidebar, let me know.

It's at http://projectspicer.blogspot.com

And I'm at
[redacted]

all the best to all,

Andy G.

↑ Index

257. Jennifer Karmin
Aug 7: Books & Bookshelves in SF
Mon 28 Jul 2008

BOOKS & BOOKSHELVES
presents

JENNIFER KARMIN
DANA TEEN LOMAX
SARAH ROSENTHAL

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7
7:30pm

99 SANCHEZ STREET
between 14th St & Duboce Ave
in San Francisco

JENNIFER KARMIN curates the Red Rover reading series and is a founding member of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented in national festivals, on city streets, and at artist-run spaces such as the Urban Institute for Contemporary Arts, Woodland Pattern Book Center, and Betalevel. She teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the Chicago Public Schools. Recent poems are published in Bird Dog, MoonLit, Womb, Seven Corners, Milk Magazine, and the anthologies A Sing Economy (Flim Forum Press, 2008), The City Visible: Chicago Poetry for the New Century (Cracked Slab Books, 2007), and Growing Up Girl: An Anthology of Voices from Marginalized Spaces (GirlChild Press, 2006).

DANA TEEN LOMAX is the author of CurrenÂ¢y (Palm Press, 2006), Room (a+bend press, 1999), and the contributing co-editor of Letters To Poets, Conversations About Poetics, Politics and Community (Saturnalia Books, 2008). Her writing has been published in numerous journals and magazines, including Jacket, The Bay Poetics Anthology, Tripwire, Moria, sonaweb, Dusie, mem, and many others. She is presently working on Q, â€œhome moviesâ€ about raising a daughter on prison grounds and a poetry manuscript entitled Shhh! Lullabies for a Tired Nation. She works as the Interim Director of Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center in San Francisco, teaches writing at San Francisco State University and the University of San Francisco, and lives in northern California with her family.

SARAH ROSENTHAL is the author of How I Wrote This Story (Margin to Margin, 2001), sitings (a+bend, 2000), and not-chicago (Melodeon, 1998). Her poems, stories, reviews, essays, and interviews have appeared in numerous journals including How(2), Bird Dog, Fence, Lungfull, Denver Quarterly, and Boston Review. Her poetry has been anthologized in Bay Poetics (Faux Press, 2006), The Other Side of the Postcard (City Lights, 2005), and hinge (Crack Press, 2002). She is the recipient of the Leo Litwak Fiction Award, the Primavera Fiction Prize, and a Vermont Studio Center Artistâ€™s Grant. She recently edited a collection of interviews with Bay Area avant-garde writers, A Community Writing Itself. She writes curricula for the Developmental Studies Center, a nonprofit educational publishing house

↑ Index

258. Michael Kelleher

Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 07.28.08-08.03.08

Mon 28 Jul 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
07.28.08-08.03.08

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE GOING FAST!!

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane Satrapi, Iran, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

WE ARE ALREADY 88% SOLD OUT FOR NEXT SEASON.

We expect to sell out next season by subscription. If we do not, tickets for individual events will go on sale September 1.

EVENTS THIS WEEK

07.30.08

Rooftop Poetry Club at Buffalo State College
Reading featuring Karen Sands O?Connor & Joseph Cooper
Wednesday, July 30, 7 p.m.
E.H Butler Library, Rooftop Garden
Buffalo State College

07.31.08

Talking Leaves?Books
Mac Nelson
Talk/Book Signing for, ?Twenty West: The Great Road Across America.?
Thursday, July 31, 7 p.m.
Talking Leaves?Books, 3158 Main St.

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can now subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

259. Thomas savage

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Mon 28 Jul 2008

I don't know about hypertext. But as to questions of ownership, I go to movies, theater, opera, etc. and write. Sometimes a phrase or two from what I'm watching ends up in the poem. I used to be concerned about the ownership of all this but am less so now. In my new book Brainlifts, which is made up of some poems written in this way, I deal with this potential problem by beginning a note at the bottom of each poem "written at..." and whatever event I was watching and listening to while writing the poem. I hope this is sufficient. In fact, I suspect it isn't even necessary but I was advised to do this by several people and have done so. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Thu, 7/24/08, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, July 24, 2008, 5:04 PM

Jim,

I always thought hypertext was a text with multiple authors, created by the addition of multiple, different texts? Was I wrong?

Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Jul 24, 2008 at 2:31 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> > "The death of the author" is also at the heart of hypertext, which, as a > > form, is the literal expression of the idea of non-ownership.
>
> Hypertext is about 'links'. That doesn't always relate to 'ownership',
> Murat. To put it another way, I don't think that hypertext, as a form, > implies anything about ownership. Ideas of ownership are as additional > axioms in the unetverse.
>
> One may link to a page and, instead of the page coming up when the link is > clicked, a dialog box may come up asking for one's username and password.
>
> Someone said something like "information wants to be free". I expect what > underlies that sentiment is what motivates your statement. One has to give > to get. Give good information to get any sort of possibility of making > money > in conjunction with the giving. Or something like that. But that is less a > specifically hypertext-related phenomenon as something more general, I > think.

>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

260. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Mon 28 Jul 2008

Jim, If links were only within one's own text -or within one single text- that would not be particularly interesting. What makes the concept of hypertext radical is the joining of multiple authors into a single, meta-text.

Honestly, it does not matter to me how others may define hypertext. The ability to link, by itself, is a technical advance. It is in the concept of authortship that linkage becomes a conceptual jump. Also, of course, links may alter our senses of time and space and linear continuity, relating to the idea of worm holes. But that is a subject to discuss another day.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Jul 26, 2008 at 10:41 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> I always thought hypertext was a text with multiple authors,
> created by the > addition of multiple, different texts? Was I wrong?
>
> Ciao,
> Murat
>
> Hi Murat,
>
> If this is what you think hypertext is, then I can see why you might say > that "hypertext, as a form, is the literal expression of the idea of > non-ownership." Makes sense. But your def of hypertext is wrong.
>
> Hypertexts usually do link to other texts by other authors, and the links
> do
> erm sort of make them all into one text, in some sense, but the crucial > thing in the definition of hypertext is the link. Whether it's to a > different part of the same document or to a different document or image or > program or whatever. See, for instance, the defs of hypertext at http://dictionary.reference.com/browse/hypertext , http://www.w3.org/WhatIs.html and http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hypertext

>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

261. Christophe Casamassima

Text suggestions for young writers and readers?

Mon 28 Jul 2008

Hey, friends,

I'm teaching English composition this fall thematically centered on language problems. I'm looking for readings that reflect the following:

post-colonial, african-american, immigrant literatures theories of cultural diversity in america and their effect on standard english how technology changes the way we read, write and think.

please suggest a number of short texts (essays, readings, stories, manifestos, etc.) that I can give to my classes. Please eMail me at [redacted] (I check this eMail frequently).

Thanks for any help!

Christophe Casamassima

--
Powered By Outblaze

↑ Index

262. Paul Nelson

Long Live Johnny Griffin

Mon 28 Jul 2008

One of the last original Beboppers died in France Saturday, Johnny Griffin. I told my London friend Charlie to see him at Ronnie Scott's in May, he did and Charlie was quite grateful for the tip.

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/07/26/arts/music/26griffin.html
http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=92943737

One of DuSable High's greatest lights:
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/DuSable_High_School

From Bronzeville's DuSable High ("Peace is possible, but justice at any rate") came sixty-five muscular inches of Bebop and hot lava. Johnny Griffin – "speed, control, harmonic acuity." Johnny Griffin – sd of Monk's Music "like trying

to break out of a room made of marshmallows."
Johnny Griffin who mellowed that fire into one slow French burn died Saturday always a Chicago guy, always ready to turn breath into fire.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted] or [redacted]

↑ Index

263. Joel Weishaus
Fw: John Ashbery's Created Spaces
Mon 28 Jul 2008

50th Issue Celebration
----- Original Message -----
From: Rain Taxi Announcements
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, July 28, 2008 8:56 AM
Subject: John Ashbery's Created Spaces

Rain Taxi is extremely pleased to announce the publication of "A Dream of this Room: A Portfolio of Works on John Ashbery's Textual and Domestic Environments," now available at www.raintaxi.com. Edited by Micaela Morrissette, this "Created Spaces" collection features a variety of writers and artists exploring Ashbery's unique poetics of domestic space-the result is a critical gathering not to be missed. Spread the word! And stay tuned for Part Two of our Summer Online Edition, posting in August... ALSO: for those who live in the Twin Cities area or might be visiting this summer, please join us for our 50th Issue Celebration on August 20th! Click here for details!

.....

↑ Index

264. AWAREing Press
Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Mon 28 Jul 2008

CAConrad, it's evident to me that your concern is over the war, and not the basic human rights of anyone who wishes to fight for or against the war, either from within the military or from outside its ranks. Gays and bis can kill people as easily as straights can kill people. (Is accidentally or intentionally infecting someone with HIV a murder, or a mistake, or a write-off? Sex is dangerous too...) But I digress...

Did the KKK disband? I'm not sure. But there are plenty of minorities who gravitate toward things that can harm them. For example, any queers who belong to the Log Cabin Republicans may at first seem to be doing a disservice to homosexuals by actively participating in a party that continues to ban gay marriage and condone bigotry and discrimination in lieu of adopting an egalitarian stance regarding sexual preferences and sexual acts. Yet, the people who join that faction have some vested interest in and attraction to the (perhaps oxymoronic) tenet that it tries to uphold.

Same thing with those who delight in joining the military. By banning a group--any group--from enlisting, we are promoting prejudice and therefore sending signals that anyone who identifies as a part of that group is unworthy, unlikeable, unfit, and less than human... It seems only fair that if a bisexual or homosexual person wishes to bear arms and engage in battle as sanctioned by the United States or any other country, then they should be allowed to enlist. Is a guy who chooses to breed a better fighter than one who lusts after his own sex? That is the argument brewing. To that, we need to say: "No, a person's sexual appetite has no bearing on how good of a soldier he is." (Otherwise, we'd amass an army of man-hating lesbians to fight an all male "enermy" army.) Police officers, too, fall into this dilemma. Any profession, actually, can be reduced to whether or not a man will fuck or fight an enemy of the same, or opposite, sex... A homo on Wall Street? no way! he'd want to take the competition to bed! etc.

On the flip side, your "FUCK THE BRITISH ARMY" does have historical merit, as immigrants to what became the United States said much the same thing before the country got its footing. Our ancestors' guerilla tactics and sniping at the red coats, and throwing all that tea into the Atlantic, was an inevitability after the Mayflower folk and others expatriated in droves to the "unsettled land". (Ignorning, of course, the fact that there were millions of people already living here.) Yes, it's too bad that war and hostility exist. But to berate a law intended to dismiss an egregious human rights error seems more like misplaced anger than productive action.

James

BTW: From what I know about the Stonewall riot, it consisted of a few drag queens throwing pumps at police after the legendary Judy Garland passed out and died in a pool of drug and alcohol-induced puke. Nobody "risked their lives" to continue with the drag show and the cocktail banter. ---------- Original message from CA Conrad <[redacted]>: ----------

> James, I guess if queers want to join the KKK they should be allowed?
>
> We are a country at war, let us NOT forget. OVER A MILLION DEAD AND COUNTING.
>
> The military machine is NOT something I will ever get behind, ever! Because of who WE ARE, and who the British are (they helped us invade Iraq), there is NO WAY to negotiate being in favor of gays in the military without ALSO being in favor of the military.
>
> Not too long ago the documentary/news(?) episodes of IN THE LIFE interviewed a queer man who joined the military after 911. He was outraged by what had happened, of course, as we all were. BUT, where does he wind up when they ship his DUMB gay ass out? IRAQ! And he NEVER, not once does he EVER QUESTION why he is in Iraq. His ENTIRE purpose (according to his own opening statement) was to go after the people who were responsible for 911. THEN OF COURSE he's discovered as being QUEER and sent home, which was the purpose of interviewing him. We were supposed to FEEL TERRIBLE for him. Boo hoo, poor guy, he doesn't get to carry a machine gun and prove he's a REAL man!
>
> Getting to put a rainbow sticker on a machine gun is what this is all about. GAY PRIDE IN KILLING!?
>
> YES THIS IS TIME TO TAKE A STAND! How many people have you known who HOLD
> THE GERMAN CITIZENS responsible for Nazi atrocities? We are already as complicit in the eyes of the world.
>
> The original people who risked their lives at the Stonewall riots were ALSO

> VEHEMENTLY opposed to the war in Vietnam. Marsha P. Johnson is someone I met in person, and I can tell you right now that she was NOT SOMEONE who would be in favor of giving the LOVE up to the British Army!
>
> Gays in the military is NOT a civil rights issue! THERE'S NOTHING CIVIL ABOUT INVADING, KILLING, TERRORIZING, MAIMING, MAKING ORPHANS, ETC., ETC., > ETC.!
>
> YES IT IS TIME TO TAKE A STAND AND SPEAK UP, REGARDLESS OF HOW IT MAY SOUND!
>
> QUEERS SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED IN THE ARMED SERVICES BECAUSE OUR ARMED > SERVICES HAVE PROVEN TO BE DANGEROUS, AND RESPONSIBLE FOR WAR CRIMES!
>
> We're supposed to be GRATEFUL that the British Army has "accepted" queers? Well I DON'T ACCEPT THE BRITISH ARMY! FUCK THE BRITISH ARMY!
>
> NO QUEERS ALLOWED! Anyone, and I mean ANYONE we can prevent from joining an > army like our army and the British army should be prevented! NO FAGS OR DYKES ALLOWED IN UNIFORM! KICK THEM ALL OUT! SEND THEM HOME!
>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

265. Daniel Godston
Synesthesic Cell Structures
Mon 28 Jul 2008

Synesthesic Cell Structures

a performance event with music, film, and poetry

Monday, August 18 (8 p.m.)

at The Cell

The sonic flavors of brushstrokes, the smells of musical improvisation, the tactile textures of poetic images, synesthesia. Over centuries artists working in a range of media have been inspired by other art forms, and they have drawn on expressions in other art forms to explain and map out creative forays along spectrums of genres. Hunches about these connections can lead to investigations into parallel processes and new angles. During this event we explore correspondences among and interstices between art forms-focusing on music, film, and poetry. The following films will be shown while music and poetry is performed: Ginta Gets His Car Washed, by Rona Mark; Tumbleweed, by Brian Fitzhugh; Sumi-e, by Jayve Montgomery; Becoming Formless and Love in Outer Space and Under Water, by Annie Heckman; Reflect and Cityscape #1 by Mikey Peterson; and several others.

Performers:

Bruce Eisenbeil -- guitar

Tara Betts -- poetry

Tom Abbs -- upright bass, violin, didgeridoo, & tuba

Reed Robins -- keyboards

Dan Godston -- trumpet & poetry

Josh Sinton -- baritone saxophone & bass clarinet

Ravish Momin -- percussion

$10 suggested donation

The Cell

338 W. 23rd St.

New York, NY 10011

www.thecelltheatre.org

http://us.imdb.com/name/nm0548285/

http://www.edfilmfest.org.uk/films/strange-girls/full-details

http://tarabetts.net/

http://www.reedrobins.com/

http://www.eisenbeil.com/

http://www.jumparts.org/tomabbs.html

http://annieheckman.com

http://www.myspace.com/dangodstonmusic

http://www.myspace.com/joshsinton

http://www.ravishmomin.com/

↑ Index

266. Daniel Godston
Multiartscape Triptyk at the Lily Pad
Mon 28 Jul 2008

Multiartscape Triptyk

at the Lily Pad

Sunday, August 17 (7 p.m.)

Join us as we travel along multimedia terrains of artistic expression. During this event we pass markers along roads that take switchback turns through music, poetry, & dance.

Performers:

Forbes Graham -- trumpet

Jane Wang -- cello & piano

Daniel Johnson -- poetry

Suzanne Bouffard -- tap dance

Dan Godston -- horns & poetry

Kevin Micka aka Animal Hospital - guitar, percussion & effects

$10 suggested donation

The Lily Pad

Inman Square

1353 Cambridge St.

Cambridge, MA

http://www.lily-pad.net/

http://www.myspace.com/forbesgraham

http://www.danielbjohnson.com <http://www.danielbjohnson.com/>

http://www.myspace.com/janewangcomposer

http://tapboston.havetodance.com/suzanne_bouffard.html

www.myspace.com/dangodstonmusic <http://www.myspace.com/dangodston>

↑ Index

267. Catherine Daly
Re: Las Vegas
Mon 28 Jul 2008

---

the vegas valley book fair is fun

On Sun, Jul 27, 2008 at 1:12 AM, Andy Nicholson
<[redacted]> wrote:
> Dearest anyone in the Las Vegas area,
>
> I'm in the process of moving to the Las Vegas area. Do good bookstores > exist out here? Please let me know what I might be able to find, as > far as independent bookstores or any interesting reading series--a few > word about art galleries and music would be great as well.
>
> Andy Nicholson
> andynicholson.blogspot.com
>
>

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

268. Joe Moffett
Re: poetry and archives?
Mon 28 Jul 2008

Armand Schwerner's The Tablets would be a must for such a project. The full edition of The Tablets was published in 1999. I have a chapter on The Tablets paired with The Maximus Poems in my book The Search for Origins in the Twentieth-Century Long Poem that might be helpful to you.

Sounds like an interesting dissertation. I'd like to hear more about it.

-- Joe

Dr. Joe Moffett
Associate Professor of English
Kentucky Wesleyan College
3000 Frederica Street
Owensboro, KY 42301

[redacted]

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Sara Phillips
Sent: Sun 7/27/2008 5:08 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: poetry and archives?

Hi all,

I'm working on a dissertation that explores the intersection between the archive and long poems. Do you know of any poetry from 1990 on that directly treats the subject of the archive, or acts like an archive? I'm interested in poets who might classify themselves as scholar-poets, or have an interdisciplinary approach (are perhaps archivists or librarians themselves).

I ran across a new book by Kate Eichhorn called Fond (Bookthug, 2008), and am looking for others.

Many thanks!
Sara Phillips

↑ Index

269. Gerald Schwartz
Denver...?
Mon 28 Jul 2008

Any readings, performances, activities in Denver between the Aug 1 and Aug 8th?

I thank you.
Gerald S.

↑ Index

270. Maria Damon
Re: poetry and archives?
Mon 28 Jul 2008

---

check out Paul Metcalf's work; not "poetry" per se.

Sara Phillips wrote:
> Hi all,
>
> I'm working on a dissertation that explores the intersection between the > archive and long poems. Do you know of any poetry from 1990 on that directly > treats the subject of the archive, or acts like an archive? I'm interested in > poets who might classify themselves as scholar-poets, or have an > interdisciplinary approach (are perhaps archivists or librarians themselves).

>
> I ran across a new book by Kate Eichhorn called Fond (Bookthug, 2008), and > am looking for others.
>
> Many thanks!
> Sara Phillips
>
>

↑ Index

271. Maria Damon
Re: KSW Positions Colloquium Schedule
Mon 28 Jul 2008

---

wow, this looks like my idea of heaven.

Nicholas Perrin wrote:
> for more information, or to register (or to access over 100 hours of audio and other resources) visit:
> www.kswnet.org
>
>
> }some details of this schedule may still change{N 49 15.832 - W 123 05.921
> :::::Positions Colloquium::::: August 19 - 24, 2008
> at/withVIVO Media Arts Centre
> 1965 Main St, VancouverTUESDAY 19 August
> Afternoon-Evening Session only
> not at VIVO, location TBA
> 4:00 pm - late
> Opening day social - a party + bbq with readings by poets who have been members of the KSW board or collective.
> }tentatively including {Sachiko Murakami, Donato Mancini, Maxine Gadd, Peter Culley, Steve Collis, Ted Byrne, Andrea Actis
> + surprise guests
> WEDNESDAY 20 August
> Morning - Afternoon Session
> 11:00 am
> Panel presentation
> Title / theme: "On Line: Poetics and the Distribution of Meaning"
> Moderator and Curator: Andrew Klobucar
> Panellists: Darren Wershler-Henry, Brian Kim Stefans, Judy Radul, Sianne Ngai

> 1:00 pm
> Theatrical presentation
> Kevin Killian and Dodie Bellamy w/guests
> "The Clifford Irving Show" Dinner Break
> 3:30 pm (circa)
> Evening Session
> 7:00 pm
> Readings, presentations, and performances by:
> Darren Wershler-Henry, Brian Kim Stefans, Colin Smith, Robert Fitterman, Clint Burnham
> THURSDAY 21 August
> Morning - Afternoon Session
> 11:00 am
> Panel presentation
> Moderator and Curator: Rita Wong
> Title / theme: "Alpha Bets: Language Gambles on a Gift Economy"
> Panellists: Juliana Spahr, Pat O'Riley, Reg Johanson, Peter Cole1:00 pm
> Talk
> Michael Davidson
> "On the Outskirts of Form: Cosmopoetics in the Shadow of NAFTA."Dinner Break
> 3:30 pm (circa)
> Evening Session
> 7:00 pm
> Readings, presentations, and performances by:
> Rita Wong, Juliana Spahr, PILLS (A. Vidaver, R. Johanson, R. Farr), Pat O'Riley, Peter Cole, Louis Cabri, Jules Boykoff FRIDAY 22 August
> Morning - Afternoon Session
> 11:00 am
> Seminar
> Seminar leaders: Kaia Sand and Jules Boykoff
> Title / theme: "Landscapes of Dissent: Guerilla Poetry & Public Space"
> Respondents: Catriona Strang, Colin Smith, Juliana Spahr, Nicholas Perrin, Laura Elrick, Clint Burnham
> 1:00 pm
> Panel presentation
> Moderator and Curator: Jeff Derksen
> Title / theme: "Neoliberalism and the Politics of Poetics"
> Panellists: Rodrigo Toscano, Rod Smith, Dorothy Lusk, Roger Farr, Laura Elrick
> Dinner Break
> 3:30 pm (circa)

> Evening Session
> 7:00 pm
> Readings, presentations, and performances by:
> Rodrigo Toscano, Rod Smith, Kaia Sand, Dorothy Trujillo Lusk, Jeff Derksen
> SATURDAY 23 August
> Morning-Afternoon Session
> 11:00 am
> Seminar
> Seminar leader: Sianne Ngai
> Title / theme: "The Zany Science: Post-Fordist Performance and the Problem of Fun"
> Respondents: Tyrone Williams, Mark
> Wallace, Andrew Klobucar, Rob Fitterman, Stacy Doris, Michael Davidson, > Louis Cabri, Dodie Bellamy
> 1:00 pm
> Audio feature
> Lisa Robertson and Stacy Doris
> "The Perfume Recordist" Dinner Break
> 3:30 pm (circa)
> Evening Session
> 7:00 pm
> Readings, presentations, and performances by:
> Tyrone Williams, Mark Wallace, Catriona Strang, Judy Radul, Laura Elrick
> SUNDAY 24 August
> Afternoon-Evening Session only
> not at VIVO, location TBA
> 3:00 pm - whenever > closing-day social
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

272. Alan Sondheim

Trails

Tue 29 Jul 2008

---

surely this qualifies as poetics...

Trails

I can see if someone has come into the exhibition space in Second Life; they leave a trail behind them, objects and spews that slowly disappear - in the meantime, the space is oddly denuded.

I want to explain why the space looks like an acid trip, why it's so crowded, so preposterous. And the reason has to do with anti-art, or non-art, making something that construes an environment instead of presenting an object or installation for contemplation. The objects in the SL exhibition have depth; they're not pieces or scatter pieces or process work - they're environment, an environmental space close to useless, replete, fecund. What appears to be actions are trajectories, complex interactive fields that mimic sentience.

Objects and spews head toward the depths; Julu is down there among them, moving in and out of the way, looking for the teleport sphere to return her to the surface. The teleport sphere is a phallic object, contained, curtailed; it is the only sculpture in the neighborhood.

http://www.alansondheim.org/inthepit.mp4

Think of the space, spacings, as an ensemble of interrelated ecological niches; there are local customs, nestings, vectors, behaviors and behavior collisions. The space is utterly transformed through participatory move- ment that environmental resonates.

It's only this way that complex and alien phenomenologies assert them- selves - there's no piece or artwork presenting one or another problema- tic, only a skein or membrane simultaneously tending towards thought and its absence.

↑ Index

273. Jim Andrews

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Tue 29 Jul 2008

> Jim,
> If links were only within one's own text -or within one single text- that would not be particularly interesting. What makes the concept of hypertext radical is the joining of multiple authors into a single, meta-text.
>
> Honestly, it does not matter to me how others may define hypertext. The ability to link, by itself, is a technical advance. It is in the concept of > authortship that linkage becomes a conceptual jump. Also, of course, links may alter our senses of time and space and linear continuity, relating to the idea of worm holes. But that is a subject to discuss another day.

> Ciao,
> Murat

very interesting, Murat. my reflections on your post have tended to go in various directions.

i think it's true that the act of creating a site or a blog and how it links out to other sites, blogs, and specific texts within those is more significant than we often realize. google and other technologies do not create that web. google merely maps it, as it were, provides a way to navigate it. if one has a site or a blog, it's good to keep the links working, when possible, and to delete them if they're not going to work anymore. tools like Xenu (http://home.snafu.de/tilman/xenulink.html) make this manageable; it tells you what links on your site are not working. i use it several times per year and do the work to fix the links on vispo.com that aren't working. sometimes the pages have moved. sometimes they don't exist anymore. one comes to see which of the projects one has linked to have authors that are serious about some sort of long-term committment to what they have created.

the definition of hypertext. the literary significance of hypertext. the formal significance of hypertext. the technical significance of hypertext. different but related things. and also in relation to many other things. such as the notion of a network. one may have hypertext without a network, on a single computer. and of course hypertext is in relation to html (hypertext markup language) and http (hypertext transport protocol). and the browsers that read html and negotiate http requests.

and hyptertext is also in relation to, say, javascript, a programming language that browsers (and other programs) can execute.

here is a "joining of multiple authors into a single, meta-text", Murat: http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/1.html . You can click the colophon to cycle between the three texts (by Jerome McGann, Joseph Weizenbaum, and Leo Marx) or mouseover the texts to have them intermingle. There are no 'links' here in the conventional sense, but the piece can be conceptualized as involving links, nonetheless.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

274. CA Conrad
Re: NOTHING BUT SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Tue 29 Jul 2008

James, let me say first that your p.s. (or BTW) about Stonewall diminished the importance, as well as the received blow of the night. It was not some silly drag throng screeching at police, it was FIERCE drag queens, transgender folks, AND BUTCH lesbians who took the cops on. Marsha P. Johnson was the first. And upon meeting her shortly before her murder she pointed out to me that she was homeless, living in Tompkins Square Park, and organizing homeless people for Homeless Theater.

But my point further is, that NOT only was this RIOT initiated by drag queens and butch lesbians, BUT BY AFRICAN AMERICAN drag queens and butch lesbians. The famous Martin Duberman book STONEWALL has a photograph on the cover which doesn't begin to make clear that STONEWALL was a black gay bar.

Point further is that YES these people risked their lives. You think FIGHTING with cops, especially 1969 cops who KNEW JUST HOW sanctioned gay bashing was, was not risking your life?

And whether or not we want to discuss HOW BRUTAL that night was, THAT NIGHT led to a revolution, one which I for one am most grateful for! Was Marsha P. Johnson a revolutionary? YOU BET SHE WAS!

To the point of gays in the military, how can I make myself any clearer than I already have? My biggest problem (not with you or what you say so much as MY BIGGEST PROBLEM IN GENERAL WITH) with this idea of "equal rights" is that I'm more interested in NOT BEING KILLED or harassed, first and foremost.

To sound utterly paranoid, though I do not believe I am, I FIRMLY BELIEVE that Bill Clinton had every intention of bringing queers to the Right of politics by giving focus to the military.

I heard with my OWN EARS during his first campaign for the presidency Bill Clinton give a speech in DC at a gay pride function where he told us YES of course you should be allowed to marry and have the same rights, blah blah blah, to which he did nothing.

Gays in the military was BENT (so to speak) on making the queer community forego it's radical ends, because the radical ends, such as ACT UP, were bridging to other activist groups, and IF HE COULD GET US TO get on the same page as the military, THEN HE HAD US RIGHT WHERE HE WANTED US.

The idea of ASKING to fight FOR a country in battle when that very country's governmental body disallows marriage, disallows work in some states, disallows adoption, etc. etc., is ludicrous! It's like when African Americans were asked to fight in war when they had to drink out of separate water fountains, not vote, sit on the back of the bus.

But I say NO to the military. We need to get THE FUCK OUT of Iraq and start making room for ALL AND ANY Iraqi citizen who needs shelter and help HERE in the states! There's no way we can EVER repay the people of that nation for what we have done, and the VERY LEAST we can do is make room for them here. It's impossible for us to imagine what life is like over there.

I said this to someone recently, about allowing Iraqis into the states for assistance, and he said, "But our economy is already in shambles!" OUR ECONOMY? THAT'S what we should worry about? NOT helping suffering people whose suffering OUR TAX DOLLARS paid for? I OWN the bullets I paid for by saying we need to help these people! The president has no trouble sleeping at night but I do!

Oh, and the so-called Stonewall Diversity Committee is going to hear from me because I'm going to attend a fricken meeting and tell them all to FUCK OFF with their honoring an army guilty of war crimes! That award is a disgrace waiting to be called what it is!

And no James, I actually don't think it's separate issues. I'm all for gays being thrown out of the military. Yes, discriminate at will if it means depriving the war machine its fodder!

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

275. CA Conrad
Re: poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series /\///\\\////\\\\//////\\\\\////////\\\\\\//////////
Tue 29 Jul 2008

Gabrielle, not sure where you live, but YOU, and everyone and ANYONE is welcome to read Mina Loy's poems at the URCHIN reading event in Philadelphia.

I'm hoping someone wants to read her manifesto for women's rights. If not I WILL, BECAUSE I LOVE IT!

Where she asks IS THIS ALL YOU WANT TO HAVE WHAT MEN HAVE, I ask the same for queers about what heterosexuals have.

MINA LOY WILL NOT STOP INSPIRING THE WORLD!
Details for the event: http://UrchinPoetry.blogspot.com

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

276. Jerome Rothenberg
Poems & Poetics: The Blog as Anthology & Manifesto
Tue 29 Jul 2008

In the two months that I've been using the blog as a medium, I've been thinking how much it reinforces my need to assemble and anthologize or to use the anthology as such as a kind of manifesto. The process before this has occupied much of my energy over the last forty years, but the difference here is that I can work on my own time and move almost instantly from private idea to public appearance. I don't know how far this takes either me or it, and for the moment I don't really care - the great pleasure coming in the act itself. I also welcome the chance to honor poets who have been close to me and to preview - for myself and anyone who watches - work in its slow progression to publication in paper or book form (or work, for that matter, that will never find any other format). I assume that this matches the experience of others working in this medium.

The following anyway are the last ten entries on the blog, poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com, and will be followed in the nesxt couple of weeks by further previews from Poems for the Millennium, volume 3, and by contributions from Pierre Joris and Charles Bernstein, among others:

From The Medusa Interview: Anthologies, Modernism, & Postmodernism

Ian Tyson's "17 Horse Songs X-XIII" with a Note on Ian Tyson...

Reconfiguring Romanticism (6): Poe's Eureka, with commentary, for Hanon Reznikov

Rae Armantrout, BABEL, a Poem & a Comment, plus an excerpt from Collected Prose

A Note and Poem (Blessèd Terror) for Jean Pierre Faye and "Change"

Reconfiguring Romanticism (5): Dionysios Solomos Poem & Commentary..

Clayton Eshleman: The Left Foot of King Ramesses I, with a note on Clayton Eshleman

Gematria (1): Seven Poems in Dedication

Reconfiguring Romanticism (4): Hugo & Dickinson

That Dada Strain Continued: Three from Tristan Tzara, with a Note on Tristan Tzara

Jerome Rothenberg
1026 San Abella Drive
Encinitas, CA 92024
jrothenberg at cox.net

"Language is Delphi."
--Novalis

↑ Index

277. andrew burke
Re: poets in S. Korea
Tue 29 Jul 2008

Good luck, Cheryl. I've taught in China and it is a rich experience. I would suggest two things: keep a blog going of photos and notes and messages to 'the outside world' while you are there, and a daily journal, either handwritten or computerised. Throw in everything you can - the simplest things in such a change of environment are quickly accepted, so you should capture their novelty in the first place.

I am certain others who have done like trips would say the same.

Andrew

2008/7/24 Cheryl Pallant <[redacted]>

> Does anyone know of any poets in S. Korea? I'll be teaching for the year at Keimyung University in Daegu, 200 miles south of Seoul. I'd love to meet some poetry kin.
>
> Cheryl Pallant
>
> _____
> www.cherylpallant.com

--
Andrew
http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/

↑ Index

278. mIEKAL aND
Re: poems by MINA LOY for the URCHIN series /\///\\\////\\\//////\\\\\/////////\\\\\//////////
Tue 29 Jul 2008

Onyx-eyed Odalisques and ornithologists observe the flight of Eros obsolete

And “Immortality” mildews...in the museums of the moon

–Mina Loy

↑ Index

279. Geraldine Monk
Am I here?
Tue 29 Jul 2008

If so hello. If not - not.

And so it always was but not always maybe,

With guarded hope,

Geraldine

↑ Index

280. Aryanil Mukherjee
Re: John Ashbery's Created Spaces
Tue 29 Jul 2008

Thank you for sending this to the group.
Its a fascinating issue !

----- Original Message -----
From: "Joel Weishaus" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, July 28, 2008 1:29 PM
Subject: Fw: John Ashbery's Created Spaces

50th Issue Celebration
----- Original Message -----
From: Rain Taxi Announcements
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, July 28, 2008 8:56 AM
Subject: John Ashbery's Created Spaces

Rain Taxi is extremely pleased to announce the publication of "A Dream of this Room: A Portfolio of Works on John Ashbery's Textual and Domestic Environments," now available at www.raintaxi.com. Edited by Micaela Morrissette, this "Created Spaces" collection features a variety of writers and artists exploring Ashbery's unique poetics of domestic space-the result is a critical gathering not to be missed. Spread the word! And stay tuned for Part Two of our Summer Online Edition, posting in August... ALSO: for those who live in the Twin Cities area or might be visiting this summer, please join us for our 50th Issue Celebration on August 20th! Click here for details!

..... Rain Taxi abhors spam and sends email only to those who have asked to receive it. You are subscribed with the address [redacted]. If you would like to add another email to our list and/or unsubscribe, visit http://www.raintaxi.com/contact.shtml. Please do not reply to this email, as this email address is send-only.

--
No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG.
Version: 7.5.526 / Virus Database: 270.5.6/1577 - Release Date: 7/28/2008 6:55 AM

↑ Index

281. richard owens
Re: poets in S. Korea
Tue 29 Jul 2008

CHERYL:

Brother Anthony, a member of the Catholic order of Taize, lives in Seoul & is quite generous re introducing people to Korean poetry and poets. you can contact him through his website, which is itself an _amazing_ resource for Korean poetry:

http://hompi.sogang.ac.kr/anthony/

also, poet Kevin Thurston is preparing to move to Korea. you can contact him through his blog:

http://fuckinglies.blogspot.com

Kevin also pointed out to me that Francis at Redfox Press, although he was previously located in Ireland, is now located in Seoul. he's an _excellent_ book artist. his blog:

http://franticham.blogspot.com/

Taegu is a wonderful city, tho I'm not familiar with any poets currently living there. the train ride from Taegu to Seoul however is about 2.5 hrs -- & every train has a vendor that sells beer, which makes the an incredibly scenic ride _much_ more pleasant!

best ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Wed, 7/23/08, Cheryl Pallant <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Cheryl Pallant <[redacted]>
Subject: poets in S. Korea
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, July 23, 2008, 12:47 PM

Does anyone know of any poets in S. Korea? I'll be teaching for the year at Keimyung University in Daegu, 200 miles south of Seoul. I'd love to meet some poetry kin.

Cheryl Pallant

_____
www.cherylpallant.com

↑ Index

282. Scott Howard

Denver Events, August: Reconfigurations Party & Readings @ Dikeou Collection; 8/8

Tue 29 Jul 2008

---

poetry at dikeou
http://www.dikeoucollection.org/

friday august 8

7pm: RECONFIGURATIONS, readings, discussion, journal trading and release party for Volume One, http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/

RECONFIGURATIONS: A Journal for Poetics & Poetry / Literature & Culture is celebrating their first year of production. Volume One was published in November, 2007. The editors are currently accepting work for Volume Two. Submission period runs through the end of August.

RECONFIGURATIONS invites attendees to read selections aloud from Volume One at this event. Personal laptops for direct access encouraged, but not necessary. Please bring journals, lit magazines and books you'd like to exchange with others, as well.

RECONFIGURATIONS is an electronic, peer-reviewed, international, annual journal for poetics and poetry, creative and scholarly writing, innovative and traditional concerns with literary arts and cultural studies. RECONFIGURATIONS publishes in November and is registered under a Creative Commons 3.0 License. RECONFIGURATIONS is an open-access, independently managed journal. ISSN forthcoming.

The Dikeou Collection is located in the Colorado Building, 1615 California St, at 16th St, Suite 515, Denver, CO 80202. Free and open to the public Wednesday-Friday 11-5pm or by appointment. For more info contact [redacted] or [redacted]

For more info about poetry events contact Rachel Cole, [redacted]

///

↑ Index

283. Tisa Bryant
Bench of Memory at Slavery's Gateway
Tue 29 Jul 2008

Bench of Memory at Slavery's Gateway

By FELICIA R. LEE SULLIVAN'S ISLAND, S.C. — Toni Morrison has said that her acclaimed novel "Beloved," which features the ghost of a baby killed by her enslaved black mother, came out of the need for a literature to commemorate slaves and their history. "There is no suitable memorial, or plaque, or wreath or wall, or park or skyscraper lobby," Ms. Morrison said in a 1989 magazine interview. "There's no 300-foot tower, there's no small bench by the road." This weekend, on Sullivan's Island, off the South Carolina coast, Ms. Morrison, the Nobel laureate, and some 300 people held a memorial ceremony to dedicate her long-awaited "bench by the road." The crowd included members of the Toni Morrison Society, National Park Service rangers, Ms. Morrison's friends and family, and people from Charleston and nearby areas. They gathered Saturday afternoon under a blazing sun, accompanied by the rhythms of African drums, for a service that included the pouring of libations and a daisy wreath cast into the water to remember their ancestors. "It's never too late to honor the dead," said Ms. Morrison, 77, the author of eight novels, as she sat down on the 6-foot-long, 26-inch- deep black steel bench facing the Intracoastal Waterway. "It's never too late to applaud the living who do them honor," she said. "This is extremely moving to me." Sullivan's Island, home to Fort Moultrie, was a point of entry into North America for about 40 percent of the millions of Africans who were enslaved in this country. Carlin Timmons, a park ranger, said that all the estimates were rough, but that historians believe 12 million to 15 million Africans came to the Americas and the Caribbean. Of those 4 to 10 percent were brought to North America. The bench was secured by the National Park Service, which laid the foundation that included a bronze plaque explaining its significance. It was the first entry in the "Bench by the Road" project, created by the Toni Morrison Society, a nonprofit group of scholars and readers dedicated to examining Ms. Morrison's work. The society, which was also holding a conference in nearby Charleston, plans in the next five years to call on individuals, corporations and community groups to help them place benches at 10 sites. The spots under consideration have significance in Ms. Morrison's novels and in black history. They include Fifth Avenue in Harlem, where the Silent Parade protesting the East St. Louis, Ill., riots was held in 1917 (featured in the novel "Jazz") and the site of Emmett Till's 1955 murder in Mississippi, which helped galvanize the civil rights movement. "We have come back to the place we started from," Carolyn C. Denard, a founder and the board chairwoman of the Toni Morrison Society, told the audience sitting under a big white tent, some furiously fanning themselves. Dr. Denard, a dean at Brown University, said groups like the Carolina Committee on Remembrance helped with the project. At its founding in 1993 the society adopted as its motto "a bench by the road," based on Ms. Morrison's comments in the 1989 article in World, the magazine of the Unitarian Universalist Association. On Saturday part of that interview was read, along with a passage from "Beloved," which calls on black people to love one another in the face of oppression and brutality. "When I wrote those words that they read, I was just reminiscing about the necessity for literature, the necessity for African-Americans to make their own art in their own words," Ms. Morrison said in an interview after the ceremony. One of her favorite sites for a bench would be in Oberlin, Ohio, a stop on the Underground Railroad near her hometown of Lorain, she said. While a number of museums dedicated to black history have sprung up around the country since 1989, as well as much new scholarship about black history Ms. Morrison said she liked the idea of an "unpretentious" bench for its simplicity and accessibility. "Well, the bench is welcoming, open," she said. "You can be illiterate and sit on the bench, you can be a wanderer or you can be on a search." And that search is for anyone, not just black people, she added. If anything, with all the talk about race in this year of Senator Barack Obama's historic candidacy, Ms. Morrison said, she would like to see white people hold a conversation among themselves about the legacy of slavery. "African-Americans don't own slavery," Ms. Morrison said. "It's not a brand because there were slave masters and there were abolitionists and there were other people who died to see to it that justice was done." But before there is reconciliation or healing, there needs to be a better acknowledgment of the past, said many of the participants in Saturday's ceremony and the society's conference. That meeting's theme was "Modernism," with scholarly sessions like " 'Tar Baby' and Global Capitalism" and "A Modernist Look at Milkman and Hagar in Morrison's 'Song of Solomon.' " Thomalind Polite, a 34-year-old speech therapist from Charleston who helped Ms. Morrison throw the wreath into the water, said she came to honor her seventh-generation ancestor Mrs. Polite's distant relative, whose name was Priscilla, was 10 when she was stolen from Sierra Leone in 1756 and brought to Sullivan's Island, Mrs. Polite said. She wiped away a tear as she held the hand of her 6-year-old daughter, Faith. "I feel like a circle closed," Mrs. Polite said of the ceremony to honor Priscilla and the mostly nameless, faceless people who came to the island, surviving the Middle Passage, the brutal trans-Atlantic journey from West Africa. “She’s finally getting the honor she deserves.” By next summer an exhibition on the African presence is planned for the visitors’ center in Fort Moultrie, said Michael Allen, an education specialist with the National Park Service. He noted that the first plaque commemorating Africans like Priscilla was placed in 1999, the money raised by, among others, graduates of black high schools in Charleston. Mr. Allen spoke to the audience about the lives of those Africans. They were quarantined in so-called “pest houses” on Sullivan’s Island — long torn down — before they were sold into slavery. Many in the crowd wept as they read the plaque on the ground, which says that the bench honors the memory of enslaved Africans who arrived on Sullivan’s Island and of those who died during the Middle Passage. It concludes, “Nearly half of all African-Americans have ancestors who passed through Sullivan’s Island.” On Friday night Ms. Morrison treated conference attendees to a reading from her ninth novel, “A Mercy,” to be published in November by Alfred A. Knopf. In the late 17th century a slave mother has given up her daughter Florens to an Anglo-Dutch trader as partial payment for a debt from a Maryland plantation owner. Ms. Morrison said in the interview that the novel was her chance to uncouple notions about race from the experience of slavery. Many white indentured servants had an experience that was not so different from that of the enslaved Africans, she said. “There is a certain history that the historians know about and artists, I think, know less about,” Ms. Morrison said. “There is no topic on anybody’s table which does not involve black people,” she continued, mentioning education and health care. “And when that disappears in time, then they have to do what they have been avoiding, which is talk about poor people.”

Art is the accomplice of love.

↑ Index

284. Alan Sondheim

Yamantaka

Wed 30 Jul 2008

To access the Odyssey exhibition The Accidental Artist:
http://slurl.com/secondlife/Odyssey/48/12/22

Yamantaka

http://www.alansondheim.org/ yamantaka series - yam jpgs, yamantak.mp4

Compression's terrible. Emptiness lasts thirty seconds, up from twenty; I'm not sure how many meters define the zone of influence. The stills indicate the layout. This is a plateau of sorts. There's nothing beyond this, only another direction. In the full video, Julu touches the sphere, heads beneath the water. There she searches, finds another sphere, rises once again to the surface or ground floor of the exhibition. What's in the basement is debris from movement, i.e. debris tracking Julu's movement on the surface or beneath the surface. What's above is the absence of debris tracking Julu's movement on the surface or beneath the surface. There's no way to adequately compress the enormous detail involved in the exhibition. You can move or fly through the exhibition, experience emptiness, clarity, in untoward terms. You can forget the terms. You can do all sorts of things but you can do better than this.

↑ Index

285. Michael T Cross

Michael Cross and Rob Halpern: San Francisco reading, 8/2/08

Wed 30 Jul 2008

Dear friends,

Please join me and Tanya Hollis on Saturday, August 2nd, at our apartment in SF's Mission District, as we host a reading by Michael Cross and Rob Halpern. Michael is in town for an all-too- rare visit from Seattle, and Rob is celebrating the publication of his new chapbook, Imaginary Politics, from Taproot Editions.There will be a reception beginning at 7pm, with the readings to begin at 8. Please email if you need directions to my place, and please feel free to forward this announcement far and wide.

Best regards,
Taylor Brady

MICHAEL CROSS is the author of In Felt Treeling, forthcoming from Chax Press. During his time in Oakland, he edited the anthology Involuntary Visions: After Akira Kurosawa's Dreams. He is currently the editor and publisher of atticus/finch books, and with Kyle Schlesinger and Thom Donovan co-edits the forthcoming journal ON. Michael is a doctoral candidate in the Poetics Program at SUNY Buffalo. He lives in Seattle.

ROB HALPERN is the author of Rumored Place, Disaster Suite, and in collaboration with Taylor Brady, Snow Sensitive Skin. His new chapbook, just out from Taproot Editions, is Imaginary Politics. Forthcoming in the next year are Music for Porn (from Factory School) and Disaster Lyrics (from Palm Press). He is active in the Nonsite Collective (www.nonsitecollective.org), and is working with Kathleen Fraser to edit the poems of the late Frances Jaffer. Recent scholarship has included publications and presentations on George

Oppen, Georges Perec, and the social body of editorship, critique and contestation in experimental poetry and narrative during the 1970s in San Francisco.

↑ Index

286. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: The "originality" of appropriation vs the mass media "appropriation" of appropriation-originality--NY Times article

Wed 30 Jul 2008

Jim,
Thank you for the lead.
Murat

On Tue, Jul 29, 2008 at 3:46 AM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> Jim,
> If links were only within one's own text -or within one single text- that would not be particularly interesting. What makes the concept of hypertext > radical is the joining of multiple authors into a single, meta-text.
>
> Honestly, it does not matter to me how others may define hypertext. The ability to link, by itself, is a technical advance. It is in the concept of > authortship that linkage becomes a conceptual jump. Also, of course, links > may alter our senses of time and space and linear continuity, relating to the idea of worm holes. But that is a subject to discuss another day.
>
> Ciao,
> Murat
>
> very interesting, Murat. my reflections on your post have tended to go in various directions.
>
> i think it's true that the act of creating a site or a blog and how it links
> out to other sites, blogs, and specific texts within those is more significant than we often realize. google and other technologies do not create that web. google merely maps it, as it were, provides a way to navigate it. if one has a site or a blog, it's good to keep the links working, when possible, and to delete them if they're not going to work anymore. tools like Xenu (http://home.snafu.de/tilman/xenulink.html) make > this manageable; it tells you what links on your site are not working. i use > it several times per year and do the work to fix the links on vispo.comthat aren't working. sometimes the pages have moved. sometimes they don't exist anymore. one comes to see which of the projects one has linked to have authors that are serious about some sort of long-term committment to what they have created.

>
> the definition of hypertext. the literary significance of hypertext. the formal significance of hypertext. the technical significance of hypertext. different but related things. and also in relation to many other things. such as the notion of a network. one may have hypertext without a network, on a single computer. and of course hypertext is in relation to html (hypertext markup language) and http (hypertext transport protocol). and the > browsers that read html and negotiate http requests.
>
> and hyptertext is also in relation to, say, javascript, a programming language that browsers (and other programs) can execute.
>
> here is a "joining of multiple authors into a single, meta-text", Murat: http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/1.html . You can click the colophon to cycle between the three texts (by Jerome McGann, Joseph Weizenbaum, and Leo Marx) or mouseover the texts to have them intermingle. There are no 'links' here in the conventional sense, but the piece can be conceptualized as involving links, nonetheless.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

287. Anna Vitale

Re: poetry and archives?

Wed 30 Jul 2008

Susan Howe's Pierce-Arrow

↑ Index

288. Ian Randall Wilson

Video Project - I Need Your Help

Wed 30 Jul 2008

I'm doing a video project where actors will say a line on camera about why they read.

?

It would great if list members could give me their one line reason why they read, concurrent with permission to use the line in my project.? There won't be any explicit credit for your contribution and the only consideration will be my gratitude for the assistance.

?

Ian Wilson

?

↑ Index

289. Kyle Schlesinger

Ted Greenwald's 3 back at SPD

Wed 30 Jul 2008

Apologies to anyone who tried to order Ted Greenwald¹s new book 3 from Small Press Distribution a few weeks ago. They sold out almost instantly, but more hardcover and paperbacks are now in stock.

Poet Ron Padgett writes: ³Ted Greenwald's 3 takes the mind in at least three different directions simultaneously, in hardboiled, richly detailed, well-made poems whose giddy wordplay, pantoum-like interweavings, and nimble jumpcuts create a sort of 21st-century Poet in New York. An inspired challenge and a delight.²

Filmmaker Nathanial Dorsky writes: ³Within this selection of three works, we come upon the most unusual, if not revolutionary moment in the universe called Ted Greenwald. Suddenly the risk of self as such takes place. Though his poetry always bares the honest song of a fragmented accumulation, the float of our existence, here Ted reveals an exposition of tender, romantic suchness amidst rhythmic refrains classically structured and filled with sunlight and place, the vulnerable underbelly of his Arcadian being is unveiled.²

While poet Tom Raworth reminds us to "Just read the fucking book."

And Charles Bernstein wrote on his blog (07.24.08) ³3 brings together three structurally related long poems, featuring Greenwald¹s characteristic vernacular insistence: ŒGoing into School that Day¹ (1986), ŒAnyway¹ (2001), and ŒDawn On¹ (2002). ³Going into School that Day,² a love poem, alternates between twenty-five sonnets and twenty-five quatrains in which every line but the sixth appears twice (A B C A / C E A B). ŒAnyway¹ consists of 33 double tercets, each line having mostly two but occasionally three phrases, with two to four phrases from the first tercet repeated in the second. The syntactically denser final poem, ŒDawn On,¹ is 1521 lines; it¹s the closest Greenwald comes to a poem like Zukofsky¹s ³A²-23 (though Greenwald style is much looser).

ŒDawn On[1] repeats only sporadic phrases or word pairs, in unexpected sequences; but the overall effect, as with the other poems in the trilogy, is a modular static/dynamic line structure, in which lines delink from their linear order to create a moiré-like effect, something Greenwald has called Œjumping the line.[12]

The cover was designed by typographic aficionado Rich Kegler of P22 http://www.p22.com/ Distributed by Small Press Distribution http://spdbooks.org/ or direct from Cuneiform Press via PayPal at www.cuneiformpress.com

Thanks!

Kyle
http://cuneiformpress.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

290. Barry Schwabsky

Re: Am I here?

Wed 30 Jul 2008

----- Origi
I hope you are here, Geraldine Monk, admirable poet.

----- Original Message ----
From: Geraldine Monk <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, 30 July, 2008 1:07:05 AM
Subject: Am I here?

If so hello.Â If not - not.Â

And so it always was but not always maybe,

With guarded hope,

Geraldine

↑ Index

291. amy king

Invitation To Participate in Poems, Poets, Love! A HOWL Festival Event (from Nathaniel Siegel)

Wed 30 Jul 2008

---

poems ! poets !! LOVE
!!!

On Monday Sept 8th
2008 a HOWL ! Festival event:

Nathaniel Siegel
hosts an Open Reading

From 12noon to 6pm

At The Bowery Poetry
Club

308 Bowery New York 10012

Phone [redacted]

www.bowerypoetry.com

You are invited to read !

Here¢s how to participate:

RSVP via email to

[redacted]

with your name, the title of the poem you plan on reading & or

the name of the poet
whose work you will be reading

& the time you would like to be signed up for.

poems ! poets !! LOVE
!!! is FREE and Open to the Public !

The HOWL !
Festival www.howlfestival.com

_____

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

292. amy king

Invitation To Participate in Poems, Poets, Love! A HOWL Festival Event (from Nathaniel Siegel)

Wed 30 Jul 2008

---

poems ! poets !! LOVE
!!!

On Monday Sept 8th
2008 a HOWL ! Festival event:

Nathaniel Siegel
hosts an Open Reading

From 12noon to 6pm

At The Bowery Poetry
Club

308 Bowery New York 10012

Phone [redacted]

www.bowerypoetry.com

You are invited to
read !

Here¢s how to participate:

RSVP via email to

[redacted]

with your name, the title of the poem you plan on reading & or

the name of the poet
whose work you will be reading

& the time you
would like to be signed up for.

poems ! poets !! LOVE
!!! is FREE and Open to the Public !

The HOWL !
Festival www.howlfestival.com

_____

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

293. Audrey Berry
Re: Video Project - I Need Your Help
Wed 30 Jul 2008

---

read in general or read poetry at readings?

--- On Wed, 7/30/08, Ian Randall Wilson <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: Ian Randall Wilson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Video Project - I Need Your Help
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Wednesday, July 30, 2008, 11:51 AM
> I'm doing a video project where actors will say a line > on camera about why they read.
>
> ?
>
> It would great if list members could give me their one line > reason why they read, concurrent with permission to use the > line in my project.? There won't be any explicit credit > for your contribution and the only consideration will be my > gratitude for the assistance.
>
> ?
>
> Ian Wilson
>
> ?

↑ Index

294. amy king
A New Coconut!
Wed 30 Jul 2008

Dear Coconut friends,

Coconut 13—with new poems by Rae Armantrout, David Lehman, Ariana Reines, Teresa K. Miller, Kate Colby, Carrie Olivia Adams, James Belflower, Anne Marie Rooney, Kristi Maxwell, Jason Zuzga, Megan Kaminski, Christopher Higgs, Nellie Haack, Claire Donato, Ravi Shankar, Emily Anderson, Laynie Browne, Jonathan Doherty, Kathleen Jesme, Matina Stamatakis, Mike Young, and Terence Winch--is now live on the web!!!

Also, please keep an eye on the Best American Poetry blog (http://thebestamericanpoetry.typepad.com/) for a new Coconut feature series, beginning this coming Sunday, August 3, and continuing all the way through the end of October!!

See you under the palms!
Bruce Covey

http://www.coconutpoetry.org

http://www.coconutpoetry.org

http://www.coconutpoetry.org

_____

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

295. Joel Weishaus
Re: poetry and archives?
Wed 30 Jul 2008

Anna:

You can't do this; but of course you can, and I've done it myself: making a recommendation without saying why. It's a protocol of e-mail that defeats discussion, which is what lists such as this are for. You made me see the error, thank you, and that I am interested in knowing your reasons for recommending Susan Howe's "Pierce-Arrow."

Best,
Joel

_____

Joel Weishaus
Research Faculty
Department of English
Portland State University
Portland, Oregon
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282

----- Original Message -----
From: "Anna Vitale" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, July 30, 2008 8:05 AM
Subject: Re: poetry and archives?

> Susan Howe's Pierce-Arrow

↑ Index

296. amy king
Invitation To Participate in Poems, Poets, Love! A HOWL Festival Event (from Nathaniel Siegel)
Wed 30 Jul 2008

---

poems ! poets !! LOVE !!!

On Monday Sept 8th 2008 a HOWL ! Festival event:

Nathaniel Siegel hosts an Open Reading

From 12noon to 6pm

At The Bowery Poetry Club

308 Bowery New York 10012

Phone [redacted]

www.bowerypoetry.com

You are invited to read !

Here's how to participate:

RSVP via email to

[redacted]

with your name, the title of the poem you plan on reading & or the name of the poet whose work you will be reading

& the time you would like to be signed up for.

poems ! poets !! LOVE !!! is FREE and Open to the Public !

The HOWL ! Festival www.howlfestival.com

_____

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

297. Kyle Schlesinger
Re: poetry and archives?
Wed 30 Jul 2008

Again, not poetry, but Rebecca Comay's massive Lost in the Archives is an indispensable collection.

Kyle
http://cuneiformpress.blogspot.com/

> From: Anna Vitale <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: "Poetics List (UPenn, UB)" <[redacted]>
> Date: Wed, 30 Jul 2008 11:05:56 -0400
> To: <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: poetry and archives?
>
> Susan Howe's Pierce-Arrow

↑ Index

298. Geraldine Monk
Re: Am I here?
Wed 30 Jul 2008

Thanks Barry. I've spent days trying to get through and almost gave up - so a small triumph for perseverance.

Geraldine

----- Original Message -----
From: "Barry Schwabsky" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, July 30, 2008 10:48 PM
Subject: Re: Am I here?

----- Origi
I hope you are here, Geraldine Monk, admirable poet.

----- Original Message ----
From: Geraldine Monk <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, 30 July, 2008 1:07:05 AM
Subject: Am I here?

If so hello. If not - not.

And so it always was but not always maybe,

With guarded hope,

Geraldine

↑ Index

299. Dan Wilcox
Final Poets in the Park, Aug. 2, Albany, NY
Wed 30 Jul 2008

The Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Poets in the Park, 2008

Final reading scheduled for August 2
Susan Brennan & Philip Good

Poets in the Park has been celebrating poetry in July at the Robert Burns statue in Washington Park, Albany, NY since 1989. The series, formerly run by the late Tom Nattell and now hosted by Dan Wilcox, continue with readings on Saturdays, July 12 through August 2 & start at 7:00 PM, free & open to the public -- donations are accepted. This year the readings are also sponsored by the Hudson Valley Writers Guild.

The final reading in the series will be on Saturday August 2 with poets Susan Brennan & Philip Good.

Susan Brennan's poems appear in Terra Incognita (translated), Unpleasant Events Schedule, Calabash Journal, Painted Bride Quarterly, Cake Train, Rain Dog Review, MARGIE, Hungers (chapbook-Lunar Offensive Press), Ganargua Review. Her manuscript, "Speaking in Stars," has been nominated as a finalist for several book awards. She is the producer and host of Radio Poetique, a poem-audio project. She received her MFA in Poetry at NYU and is a Jivamukti yoga teacher. Brooklyn is her home.

Philip Good's poetry is published in many magazines including, The School of Visual Arts Literary Magazine - WORDS, A journal from The Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics - BOMBAY GIN, and from New Orleans - YAWP. Online his work can be found at www.Bigbridge.org, www.corspse.org, www.toolamagazine and www.annetnanepo.novumverbum.org. A map of his reading appearances include New York City, New Orleans, Paris and Prague.

The Robert Burns statue is near where Henry Johnson Blvd. passes through Washington Park and crosses Hudson Ave. Please bring your own chairs or blankets to sit on. Rain site is the Social Justice Center, 33 Central Ave., 7PM.

This project is made possible in part through COMMUNITY ART$GRANTS, a program funded through the State and Local Partnership Program of the New York State Council on the arts, a State agency and the Arts Center of the Capital Region.

For more information contact Dan Wilcox, at [redacted];
[redacted].
####

↑ Index

300. patrick dunagan
Great Overland Book Co. & Big Bell Present:
Wed 30 Jul 2008

***
Great Overland Book Co. & Big Bell Present:

Maxine Chernoff, Paul Hoover
Sunnylyn Thibodeaux & Patrick James Dunagan

August 4th at 7 pm
Great Overland Books
345 Judah at 9th Ave.

Maxine Chernoff is the author of six works of fiction and ten books of poetry, most recently *Among the Names *and *The Turning, *both from Apogee. She coedits New American Writing and with Paul Hoover has translated the *Selected Poems of Friedrich Hölderlin, *which will appear from Omnidawn Press in September.

Paul Hoover's most recent poetry collections are *Edge and Fold *(Apogee Press, 2006) and Poems in Spanish (Omnidawn, 2005), nominated for the Northern California Book Reviewers Award. With Nguyen Do, he edited and translated the anthology, Black Dog, Black Night: Contemporary Vietnamese Poetry (Milkweed Editions, 2008). With Maxine Chernoff, with whom he edits the literary magazine, New American Writing, he edited and translated Selected Poems of Friedrich Hölderlin (Omnidawn, 2008). His collection of literary essays, Fables of Representation, was published by University of Michigan Press in 2004. Professor of Creative Writing at San Francisco State University, he edited the anthology, Postmodern American Poetry (W. W. Norton, 1994).

Patrick James Dunagan lives in San Francisco and works at the library of USF. Poems and book reviews have recently appeared or are forthcoming in Blue Book, Cannibal, Galatea Ressurrects, Jacket, Morning Train, One Less Magazine, St Mark's Poetry Project Newsletter, and Vanitas. Chapbooks include: Of Stone (Snag), After the Sinews (Auguste), and* Fess Parker*(Red Ant). *Easy Eden, *a collaboration with Micah Ballard, is due out in 2008 from PUSH.

Sunnylyn Thibodeaux is from New Orleans. Her poems have appeared in Blue Book, Big Bridge, Night Palace, Morning Train, and other various magazines. Small books include: Curves & Curses, Last We Spoke, 20/20 Yielding, United Untied, and Hidden Driveways Ahead (forthcoming). With Micah Ballard, she co-edits Auguste Press.

***

↑ Index

301. Gabrielle Welford

Re: Michael Cross and Rob Halpern: San Francisco reading, 8/2/08

Wed 30 Jul 2008

---

ah, alas, i cannot come (i truly wish i could...) because:

On August 2 at 6:30 pm at Redwood Gardens Senior Living Center in Berkeley (and Aug. 3 at Ashkenaz), members of Ka Lei Maile Alii, a Native Hawaiian Civic Club from Honolulu, will offer a program which includes a powerpoint presentation about Hawaiian history, sovereignty and nationhood by David Keanu Sai, and a re-enactment play, "The Queen's Women" or "Ka lei maile alii" (the affectionate name--the maile lei of the alii-- given by Queen Liliu'okalani to her closest friends). There will be a display table and refreshments before and a feedback session after the play. Hope some of you can come to the Aug. 3 performance.

Written in 2001, the play is based on an article which you can read at http://www.hawaii-nation.org/sfcall.html. It was written in 1897 by a San Francisco journalist, Miriam Michelson (played by yours truly) and covers a meeting at Hilo Salvation Army Hall, where 300 people came together to sign petitions against annexation of Hawai'i by the U.S. Michelson took down word for word the speeches and the audience's responses, and these are transmitted in the play.

The Queen's women gathered 21,000 signatures in a few months, and the men gathered another 20,000. The petition was successful. Annexationists were unable to push through a legal treaty annexing the islands. They had to take Hawai'i by sleight of hand, which has significance today. Keanu Sai gives his presentation about sovereignty and nationhood, its meaning then and today. He also talks about the Akaka Bill's attempt to make Native Hawaiians a tribe under jurisdiction of the U.S. Department of the Interior, and what that means for present-day Hawaiians.

A KPFA radio interview with Keanu Sai can be accessed by going to www.kpfa.org. You click on programs, click on Thursday, July 17, click on APEX Express at 7:00 p.m. It's very informative.

On Wed, 30 Jul 2008, Michael T Cross wrote:

> Dear friends,
>
> Please join me and Tanya Hollis on Saturday, August 2nd, at our apartment in SF's Mission District, as we host a reading by Michael Cross and Rob Halpern. Michael is in town for an all-too-rare visit from Seattle, and Rob is celebrating the publication of his new chapbook, Imaginary Politics, from Taproot Editions.There will be a reception beginning at 7pm, with the readings to begin at 8. Please email if you need directions to my place, and please feel free to forward this announcement far and wide.
>
> Best regards,
> Taylor Brady
>
> MICHAEL CROSS is the author of In Felt Treeling, forthcoming from Chax Press. During his time in Oakland, he edited the anthology Involuntary Visions: After Akira Kurosawa's Dreams. He is currently the editor and publisher of atticus/finch books, and with Kyle Schlesinger and Thom Donovan co-edits the forthcoming journal ON. Michael is a doctoral candidate in the Poetics Program at SUNY Buffalo. He lives in Seattle.
>
> ROB HALPERN is the author of Rumored Place, Disaster Suite, and in collaboration with Taylor Brady, Snow Sensitive Skin. His new chapbook, just out from Taproot Editions, is Imaginary Politics. Forthcoming in the next year are Music for Porn (from Factory School) and Disaster Lyrics (from Palm Press). He is active in the Nonsite Collective (www.nonsitecollective.org), and is working with Kathleen Fraser to edit the poems of the late Frances Jaffer. Recent scholarship has included publications and presentations on George Oppen, Georges Perec, and the social body of editorship, critique and contestation in experimental poetry and narrative during the 1970s in San Francisco.

↑ Index

302. ALDON L NIELSEN
Re: HeatStrings blog
Wed 30 Jul 2008

> In progress at the Heat Strings blog -- photos and sound tracks from the Pan African Literary Forum, Ghana http://heatstrings.blogspot.com

<<

Her film titles include; Rebel Fux! The Movie 2000, Market This (produced in collaboration with the Paper Tiger TV collective) 2001, Punk Ass Kid 2003 and War Dreams 2007. She is currently the Co-Director of MIX NYC, the Queer Experimental Film Festival.

Sara Marcus's poetry, prose, criticism, and journalism appear in Encyclopedia, EOAGH, Tantalum, The Advocate, The Forward, and Time Out New York. She is writing a history of Riot Grrrl and has work forthcoming in The Art of Touring (Yeti Press), The Believer, an exhibition catalogue for sculptor Wade Kavanaugh, and a poetry chapbook from Felt Press. She is the curator of the series QT: Queer Readings at Dixon Place. Marcus lives in Brooklyn and Troy, NY.

Eileen Myles is currently poet of the dunes, but otherwise is poet of the blocks and avenues and lives in the Lower East Side since 1977. Her book of travels, art, poetry and queerness, The Importance of Being Iceland is out from Semiotexte/MIT next fall. She's also written a knockout novel The Inferno that is forthcoming.

_____ Visual AIDS was founded in 1988 by arts professionals as a response to the effects of AIDS on the arts community and as a way of organizing artists, arts institutions, and arts audiences towards direct action, Visual AIDS has evolved into an arts organization with a two-pronged mission. 1) Through the Frank Moore Archive Project, the largest slide library of work by artists living with HIV and the estates of artists who have died of AIDS, Visual AIDS historicizes the contributions of visual artists with HIV while supporting their ability to continue making art and furthering their professional careers. 2) In collaboration with museums, galleries, artists, schools, and AIDS service organizations, Visual AIDS produces exhibitions, publications, and events utilizing visual art to spread the message "AIDS IS NOT OVER."

For more info, visit <http://www.thebody.com/visualaids/index.html>

↑ Index

304. Jesse Glass

Brother Anthony of Taize in Seoul

Thu 31 Jul 2008

Brother Anthony Teague has given his days to translating South Korean poets. He was the head of the English dept. at Sogang University when I last saw him years back and if he's still there, it would be well worth a trip to see him. He's a wonderful man and a fine poet in his own right.

Check out his translations of Ko Un The Sound of My Waves (Cornell University East Asia Program), and Beyond Self--108 Korean Zen Poems of Ko Un. He's done many more than these, though. Jesse

↑ Index

305. Nico Vassilakis

Subtext/Seattle - George Bowering & Marion Kimes - 8/6/08

Thu 31 Jul 2008

Subtext continues its monthly reading series with readings by George Bowering & Marion Kimes at our new home at the Chapel Performance Space on the 6th of August 2008. Donations for admission will be taken at the door on the evening of the performance. The reading starts at 7:30pm.

George Bowering is a prolific Canadian novelist, poet, historian, and biographer. He was born in Penticton, British Columbia, and raised in the nearby town of Oliver, where his father was a high-school chemistry teacher. His most recent books include Baseball Love (Talonbooks, 2006), and Vermeer's Light: Poems 1996-2006.

Bowering is the best-known of a group of young poets including Frank Davey, Fred Wah, Jamie Reid, and David Dawson who were together at the UBC in the 1950s. There they founded the journal Tish. Bowering lives in Vancouver, BC and is Emeritus at Simon Fraser, where he has worked for more than 25 years. He describes himself as a Protestant agnostic. In 2002, Bowering was appointed the first ever Canadian Poet Laureate.

http://www.library.utoronto.ca/canpoetry/bowering/index.htm
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/George_Bowering

Marion Kimes brought her love of the live reading here in 1981. Over the years a fine pile of small-press books & broadsides has accumulated beside a long list of readings, fests & projects. Her books include CROW'S EYES, of multiplication & light (Nine Muses), Whirled, and NAMORATUNG'A (Woodworks). She has been a driving force in Red Sky Theatre for many years.

http://www.ravenchronicles.org/nwwriter/index/kimes/kimes.htm

The future Subtext schedule is:

September 3, 2008: Group Reading: Writing to Point / Writing to Enclave
October 1, 2008: Donato Mancini (Vancouver) & Shin Yu Pai

For info on these & other Subtext events, see our website at http://subtextreadingseries.blogspot.com

More info at Nonsequitur web site - http://nseq.blogspot.com Details on the Chapel at: http://gschapel.blogspot.com

SPECIAL THANKS to NONSEQUITUR for co-sponsoring this event.

↑ Index

306. Séamas Cain
Re: poetry and archives?
Thu 31 Jul 2008

Sara Phillips,

You might investigate the work of John M. Bennett. He is a scholar-poet, a multi-lingual poet, a poet and visual-artist, a concrete poet, etc., AND he is an archivist and librarian. Several of his books are "archives" in several senses of the word, PLUS he has developed actual institutional Archives (more than one, of his own work or the work of others) that are detailed and amazing and dimensional.

I give his contact information below ...

Bestwishes,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

Dr. John M. Bennett
Curator, Avant Writing Collection
Rare Books & Manuscripts Library
The Ohio State University Libraries
1858 Neil Av Mall
Columbus, OH 43210 USA

[redacted]
www.johnmbennett.net
http://www.library.osu.edu/sites/rarebooks/avantwriting/

_____

On Sun, Jul 27, 2008 at 5:08 PM, Sara Phillips
<[redacted]> wrote:
> Hi all,
>
> I'm working on a dissertation that explores the intersection between the > archive and long poems. Do you know of any poetry from 1990 on that directly > treats the subject of the archive, or acts like an archive? I'm interested in > poets who might classify themselves as scholar-poets, or have an > interdisciplinary approach (are perhaps archivists or librarians themselves).

>
> I ran across a new book by Kate Eichhorn called Fond (Bookthug, 2008), and
> am looking for others.
>
> Many thanks!
> Sara Phillips
>

↑ Index

307. Tom Orange
Am I here?
Thu 31 Jul 2008

---

great big welcomes, geraldine!

tom orange

Date: Wed, 30 Jul 2008 01:07:05 +0100
From: Geraldine Monk <[redacted]>
Subject: Am I here?

If so hello. If not - not.

And so it always was but not always maybe,

With guarded hope,

Geraldine

↑ Index

308. AWAREing Press
Re: SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Thu 31 Jul 2008

Points noted, CAConrad. Although, if I may be so bold, I will reiterate my original point: sexual identity/orientation/preference is no grounds for dismissal from any military. In fact, throughout history, men (and a few women) in armies far and wide have actively engaged in homosexual behavior. Who are you, or anyone else, to say that this group or that group should be barred from enlisting? What next, a return to denial of blacks and other "coloreds" to fight in an "American" army? By using the queer politics as a way to diminish the scope of our armed forces, you seem to be a bigot using a law to further an anarchistic, hazy agenda.

Resisting arrest and public intoxication, which were the actual crimes committed at Stonewall, are a far cry from a fed-up Rosa Parks calmly asserting herself via passive resistence on a city bus. Sure, it was time for change, but peaceful marches and ploys to congressmen would've been a far better choice than dressing up and acting out-- The "riot" was all about the drinking establishment being raided and shut down, rather than gay rights and equality-- Bars and coffeeshops catering to a variety of types were being shut down all over the city. Gays were as much a target as other minorities, but we don't hear about their sequined stomps.

Further more, CAConrad, by labeling someone "fierce" or "butch" you are surely being glib and stereotypical. (And I, for one, detest Jerry Springer and its colorful characters taken from real life; these sorts of role models can't be a good thing.) This is not the swingin' 70s, and many facets of recenty history are being rethought. Presenting an obnoxious behavior, as I've learned the hard way, is no longer celebrated. And congratulating someone for being drunk and disorderly is way way way out of date.

James
---------- Original message from CA Conrad <[redacted]>: ----------

> James, let me say first that your p.s. (or BTW) about Stonewall diminished the importance, as well as the received blow of the night. It was not some silly drag throng screeching at police, it was FIERCE drag queens, transgender folks, AND BUTCH lesbians who took the cops on. Marsha P. Johnson was the first. And upon meeting her shortly before her murder she pointed out to me that she was homeless, living in Tompkins Square Park, and organizing homeless people for Homeless Theater.
>
> But my point further is, that NOT only was this RIOT initiated by drag queens and butch lesbians, BUT BY AFRICAN AMERICAN drag queens and butch lesbians. The famous Martin Duberman book STONEWALL has a photograph on the cover which doesn't begin to make clear that STONEWALL was a black gay bar.
>
> Point further is that YES these people risked their lives. You think FIGHTING with cops, especially 1969 cops who KNEW JUST HOW sanctioned gay bashing was, was not risking your life?
>
> And whether or not we want to discuss HOW BRUTAL that night was, THAT NIGHT led to a revolution, one which I for one am most grateful for! Was Marsha P. Johnson a revolutionary? YOU BET SHE WAS!
>
> To the point of gays in the military, how can I make myself any clearer than I already have? My biggest problem (not with you or what you say so much as

MY BIGGEST PROBLEM IN GENERAL WITH) with this idea of "equal rights" is that I'm more interested in NOT BEING KILLED or harassed, first and foremost.

To sound utterly paranoid, though I do not believe I am, I FIRMLY BELIEVE that Bill Clinton had every intention of bringing queers to the Right of politics by giving focus to the military.

I heard with my OWN EARS during his first campaign for the presidency Bill Clinton give a speech in DC at a gay pride function where he told us YES of course you should be allowed to marry and have the same rights, blah blah blah, to which he did nothing.

Gays in the military was BENT (so to speak) on making the queer community forego it's radical ends, because the radical ends, such as ACT UP, were bridging to other activist groups, and IF HE COULD GET US TO get on the same page as the military, THEN HE HAD US RIGHT WHERE HE WANTED US.

The idea of ASKING to fight FOR a country in battle when that very country's governmental body disallows marriage, disallows work in some states, disallows adoption, etc. etc., is ludicrous! It's like when African Americans were asked to fight in war when they had to drink out of separate water fountains, not vote, sit on the back of the bus.

But I say NO to the military. We need to get THE FUCK OUT of Iraq and start making room for ALL AND ANY Iraqi citizen who needs shelter and help HERE in the states! There's no way we can EVER repay the people of that nation for what we have done, and the VERY LEAST we can do is make room for them here. It's impossible for us to imagine what life is like over there.

I said this to someone recently, about allowing Iraqis into the states for assistance, and he said, "But our economy is already in shambles!" OUR ECONOMY? THAT'S what we should worry about? NOT helping suffering people whose suffering OUR TAX DOLLARS paid for? I OWN the bullets I paid for by saying we need to help these people! The president has no trouble sleeping at night but I do!

Oh, and the so-called Stonewall Diversity Committee is going to hear from me because I'm going to attend a fricken meeting and tell them all to FUCK OFF with their honoring an army guilty of war crimes! That award is a disgrace waiting to be called what it is!

And no James, I actually don't think it's separate issues. I'm all for gays being thrown out of the military. Yes, discriminate at will if it means depriving the war machine its fodder!

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

309. Martha Cinader Mims

seeking internet radio open mic participants

Thu 31 Jul 2008

Listen & Be Heard Poetry Cafe will host its first open mic internet radio show on August 19, at 8pm Pacific Standard Time. If you have a computer with a built in microphone, and some earphones (to avoid feedback) then you can call in to the radio show without paying a telephone bill. If you don't have a microphone in your computer, or even if you don't have a computer, you can still call in to the radio show at [redacted] between 8 pm and 9:30 pm Pacific Standard Time, and read your poem. You will hear the show on the line while you are waiting…

To tune into the show, whether or not you want to call in, go tohttp://www.blogtalkradio.com/listenandbeheard/2008/08/20/Listen-Be- Heard-Open-Mic.

The first portion of the show will feature poets who signed the open mic list ahead of time at Listen & Be Heard Poetry Cafe Blog (http://www.listenandbeheard.net/home). This will allow me to collect a bio, a picture and a poem if you wish that I can feature on the web page about the show ahead of time.

You will have a chance to participate in two rounds of open mic. The first round will be the traditional Listen & Be Heard lightning round. You will have thirty seconds or less to read a poem. This allows all the poets to be heard right at the beginning. I will then go to the second round when each of the featured poets will have five minutes to read a poem or selection of poems, and make an announcement about your book, cd, upcoming appearances or whatever.

If you want to be a featured poet in the open mic please sign the open mic list and I will get in touch with you by e-mail.

After each of the featured open mic poets have read, I will open it up to listeners who have just tuned in to read one poem.

I spent about ten years as a radio producer and host at WBAI Radio Pacifica in New York City in the 1990's. I'm looking forward to getting back into radio via the internet, and thank you to BlogTalkRadio for the opportunity!

Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

↑ Index

310. AWAREing Press
Re: poetry and archives?
Thu 31 Jul 2008

Joe, that's a terrific suggestion. Though I've not read the entire work, I have proofread a portion of it, which is to be included in the forthcoming "Light Years: An Anthology on Sociocultural Happenings (Multimedia in the East Village, 1960-66)," edited by Carol Berge and published by AWAREing Press and Spuyten Duyvil. Schwerner's chapter admits to a portion of the tablets being either lost or untranslatable, which is as comical as it is profound, and an elegant stab at finding an epitome of the 1960s.

Carol spent 20 years assembling this anthology of memoirs and ephemera. For more info, including an excerpt from the introduction, visit www.awareinginc.net and click on the AWAREing Press page.

James
---------- Original message from Joe Moffett <[redacted]>: ----------

Armand Schwerner's The Tablets would be a must for such a project. The full edition of The Tablets was published in 1999. I have a chapter on The Tablets paired with The Maximus Poems in my book The Search for Origins in the > Twentieth-Century Long Poem that might be helpful to you.
>
> Sounds like an interesting dissertation. I'd like to hear more about it.
>
> -- Joe
>
> Dr. Joe Moffett
> Associate Professor of English
> Kentucky Wesleyan College
> 3000 Frederica Street
> Owensboro, KY 42301
>
> [redacted]
>
> _____
>
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Sara Phillips
> Sent: Sun 7/27/2008 5:08 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: poetry and archives?
>
>

>
> Hi all,
>
> I'm working on a dissertation that explores the intersection between the > archive and long poems. Do you know of any poetry from 1990 on that directly > treats the subject of the archive, or acts like an archive? I'm interested in > poets who might classify themselves as scholar-poets, or have an > interdisciplinary approach (are perhaps archivists or librarians themselves).
>
> I ran across a new book by Kate Eichhorn called Fond (Bookthug, 2008), and
> am looking for others.
>
> Many thanks!
> Sara Phillips
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

311. AWAREing Press

Re: Poems & Poetics: The Blog as Anthology & Manifesto

Thu 31 Jul 2008

Jerome, the blog is maybe a high-tech evolving of what was known as the Mimeograph Revolution in the 1960s, in which artists, writers, poets and printers joined forces to disseminate new work as quickly as possible. Expediting innovations to the masses! And so, another boon, and another blow, to the artist... My concern is that a copyright date, affixed by the creator of an original piece, can be easily overwritten by a villainous plagiarist or art image thief... Am I crazy to worry? My MySpace page, which I tore down after about a month, had 147 hits on the blog page, but less than 100 on the main page, after the first week. Disconcerting, those numbers-- especially when most of the people offering friendship weren't people at all, but 'bots, advertising pay-for-smut links. To provide an open forum, a peek at an artist-at-work, is a way to approach the blog, though I remain skeptical of too many unknown apprentices.

James

---------- Original message from Jerome Rothenberg <[redacted]>: ----------

In the two months that I've been using the blog as a medium, I've been thinking how much it reinforces my need to assemble and anthologize or to use the anthology as such as a kind of manifesto. The process before this has occupied much of my energy over the last forty years, but the difference here is that I can work on my own time and move almost instantly from private idea to public appearance. I don't know how far this takes either me or it, and for the moment I don't really care - the great pleasure coming in the act itself. I also welcome the chance to honor poets who have been close to me and to preview - for myself and anyone who watches - work in its slow progression to publication in paper or book form (or work, for that matter, that will never find any other format). I assume that this matches the experience of others working in this > medium.

>
>
> The following anyway are the last ten entries on the blog, poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com, and will be followed in the nesxt couple of weeks > by further previews from Poems for the Millennium, volume 3, and by > contributions from Pierre Joris and Charles Bernstein, among others:
>
>
> From The Medusa Interview: Anthologies, Modernism, & Postmodernism
>
> Ian Tyson's "17 Horse Songs X-XIII" with a Note on Ian Tyson...
>
> Reconfiguring Romanticism (6): Poe's Eureka, with commentary, for Hanon Reznikov
>
> Rae Armantrout, BABEL, a Poem & a Comment, plus an excerpt from Collected Prose
>
> A Note and Poem (BlessÃ¨d Terror) for Jean Pierre Faye and "Change"
>
> Reconfiguring Romanticism (5): Dionysios Solomos Poem & Commentary..
>
> Clayton Eshleman: The Left Foot of King Ramesses I, with a note on Clayton > Eshleman
>
> Gematria (1): Seven Poems in Dedication
>
> Reconfiguring Romanticism (4): Hugo & Dickinson
>
> That Dada Strain Continued: Three from Tristan Tzara, with a Note on Tristan

> Tzara
>
> Jerome Rothenberg "Language is Delphi."
> 1026 San Abella Drive --Novalis
> Encinitas, CA 92024
> jrothenberg at cox.net
>

↑ Index

312. Daniel Godston
poets in S. Korea
Thu 31 Jul 2008

Brother Anthony is an excellent translator. I have several books of Korean poetry which he has translated, including those by Ko Eun ("The Sound of My Waves"), Chon Sang Pyong ("Back to Heaven"), and several others.

"The Book of Korean Shijo" (Harvard East Asian Monographs, trans. by Kevin O'Rourke) is a great book.

----- Original Message ----
From: richard owens <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, July 29, 2008 8:04:21 PM
Subject: Re: poets in S. Korea

CHERYL:

Brother Anthony, a member of the Catholic order of Taize, lives in Seoul & is quite generous re introducing people to Korean poetry and poets. you can contact him through his website, which is itself an _amazing_ resource for Korean poetry:

http://hompi.sogang.ac.kr/anthony/

also, poet Kevin Thurston is preparing to move to Korea. you can contact him through his blog:

http://fuckinglies.blogspot.com

Kevin also pointed out to me that Francis at Redfox Press, although he was previously located in Ireland, is now located in Seoul. he's an _excellent_ book artist. his blog:

http://franticham.blogspot.com/

Taegu is a wonderful city, tho I'm not familiar with any poets currently living there. the train ride from Taegu to Seoul however is about 2.5 hrs -- & every train has a vendor that sells beer, which makes the an incredibly scenic ride _much_ more pleasant!

best ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Wed, 7/23/08, Cheryl Pallant <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Cheryl Pallant <[redacted]>
Subject: poets in S. Korea
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, July 23, 2008, 12:47 PM

Does anyone know of any poets in S. Korea? I'll be teaching for the year at Keimyung University in Daegu, 200 miles south of Seoul. I'd love to meet some poetry kin.

Cheryl Pallant

_____
www.cherylpallant.com

↑ Index

313. Stephen Vincent
Re: Am I here?
Thu 31 Jul 2008

Isn't it the time of year that Brits pretend to be nice to each other in Nice! Get out of town, Girl, and shrink your antennae! Nobody is to be heard from, sighted or otherwise. & the language is dead,too.

So, if you have to, crawl in bed with a crook called 'sleep' and enjoy the robbery.

How is that for gruff!?

Tin Turn goes the Abbey.

Hi Geraldine!

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Geraldine Monk <[redacted]> wrote: If so hello. If not - not.

And so it always was but not always maybe,

With guarded hope,

Geraldine

↑ Index

314. Kuebrich, Benjamin Darnell Mr.
Oxford Magazine 22
Thu 31 Jul 2008

---

fiction from Karen Heuler and Cynthia Reeves, essays from Rachael Peckham and Sonya Huber, poetry from Mani Rao and Christopher Barnes, and an interview with David Graeber.

www.oxfordmagazine.org

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

August 2008

319 messages · Thu 31 Jul 2008 – Sun 31 Aug 2008

August 2008 was a month about survival — whether a poet can survive on poetry, whether the words survive the world, whether the art survives at all except as a guest in someone else's medium. Three hundred and nineteen messages moved through the list, thin and late-summer slow, weeks before the banks fell, and already the room was counting who was left standing. It reads now like a quiet ledger drawn up on the eve of a crash nobody in it had yet named.

The largest thread was an inventory of poetry's afterlife on film — a long, affectionate list of movies with poetry in them, the art surviving not on its own shelf but smuggled into the cinema, borrowed by a bigger and richer form to lend a scene some depth. It was survival by dependence: the poem enduring precisely because it had been absorbed into something with a wider audience and a working economy, kept alive as a passenger on the medium that had eclipsed it.

The quarrel was frankly economic, and prophetic. Under the heading of who is left standing, the room asked whether anyone could still make a living from poetry alone, without the teaching post or the grant, and came up nearly empty — one member reporting the grim folklore that "the last poet to make a living from" the sale of his poems had been Alfred Tennyson, a century and a half gone. In the last weeks before the financial collapse, a room of poets was already taking the measure of an art with no viable economy, counting the survivors and finding almost none.

And the month's most beautiful current made survival its explicit subject. A sleepless member on a Paul Auster kick — insomniac, thought-crowded, still in love with the art — passed around Auster's lines about "the words that do not survive the world", the poem that dissolves in the very act of being spoken. It was the tenderest possible framing of the month's dread: not the economy or the audience but the words themselves, mortal, evaporating as they leave the mouth, and loved all the more for it by a reader who could not sleep for thinking of them.

I have set August down exactly as the archive delivered it — poetry surviving as a passenger in the movies, the poet who cannot survive on poems since Tennyson, and Auster's words that do not survive the world — because it was the month the list, thinned and sleepless on the lip of a crash it could not yet see, made survival its one true theme and found the odds long at every level: the art alive only by borrowing a richer medium's room, the poet unable to live by the work, the words themselves vanishing as they are said. And yet the room was still there, still passing poems hand to hand at three in the morning, which is the only kind of survival this list ever really had: not the economy's and not posterity's, but the plain fact of a few people still awake and still reading to each other in the dark.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 319 in all.

WRITERS

Alexander, Charles 6, 84, 89, 283
Allegrezza, William 201
AND, mIEKAL 61, 140, 141, 173
Andrews, Jim 45, 57, 119
Aslongasittakes 65
Ballardini, Anny 99, 108
Banes, Clay 162
Baraban, Stephen 70
Baratier, David 60
Beard, Jessica 10
Beaulieu, Derek 41
Behm-Steinberg, Hugh 268, 315
Bellamy, Dodie 304
Benson, Cara 223
Berkson, Bill 42, 115, 116
Berrigan, Anselm 28
Berry, Audrey 18
Blacksox 95, 303
Books, J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill 91, 229
Bowering, George 118, 128, 200, 249, 296
Brown, Pam 93
Burke, Andrew 74, 306
Byrne, Mairead 312
Cain, Séamas 29, 251, 262
Camplin, Troy 221
Cheek, Cris 155, 273
Chirot, David 14, 38, 39, 67, 96, 107, 129, 132, 177, 195, 210, 261, 269, 298, 308
Chirot, David-Baptiste 82
Croggon, Alison 51, 98
Cunningham, John 2, 13
Dalachinsky, Steve D. 102, 103, 117, 191, 196, 209, 224, 238, 247, 284, 305
Daly, Catherine 53, 166
Damon, Maria 55, 56, 250, 275
Dean, Larry O. 114
Devineni, Ram 3
Dickey, Eric 113, 218
Duggan, Patrick 228
Dunn-hensley, Susan 179, 202
ELECTRONICS, ART 5
Fieled, Adam 86
Fox, Skip 49
Gatza, Geoffrey 126, 232
Glass, Dan 34
Glass, Jesse 40
Godston, Daniel 134, 135
Good, Adam 264
Hamilton, Robin 256, 258, 266
Ho, Tammy 75
Holder, Doug 92
Houlihan, Joan 137
Howard, Scott 88
Johnson, Halvard 142
Jones, Andrew 37, 58
Jorgensen, Alexander 281
Joris, Pierre 81, 234, 307
Jpjones 153, 154
Karavatos, Nicholas 83
Karmin, Jennifer 4, 31, 105, 133, 193, 240, 309
Kasimor, Mary 59, 111, 286
Katko, Justin 8, 225
Kelleher, Michael 23, 87, 139, 150, 152, 236
King, Amy 7, 44, 68, 69, 90, 100, 101, 144, 145, 165, 207, 219, 254, 259, 316
Kirschenbaum, David 20, 32, 72, 163
Kotkowska, Ela 172
Kuppers, Petra 257
Ladkin, Sam 27
Laity, Cassandra 294
Lepson, Ruth 174, 278, 293
Lewis, Joel 106
List, Poetics 79, 159, 203, 204, 206
Little, Billy 214, 260, 292
Lomax, Dana Teen 16
Lurie, Bobbie 62, 104
MacAllister, Bonnie 217
Madueno, Amalio 121
Mandel, Charlotte 26
Martin, Camille 12, 136
Maurer, Susan 33
McLennan, Rob 15, 78
Mims, Martha Cinader 143
Mindock, Gloria 125, 211, 212
Mohammad, K. Silem 157, 160
Monk, Geraldine 183, 197, 245, 265, 300, 301, 319
Mukherjee, Aryanil 97, 289
Nathanson, Tenney 168
Nealand, Eireene 80
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 52, 64, 109, 110, 120, 124, 194, 216, 233, 276, 277, 285, 299, 311, 313
Nicholson, Andy 161
NIELSEN, ALDON L 267
Noonan, T. A. 244
Novack, Carol 156
Obadike, Mendi Lewis 50
Oha, Obododimma 76, 147, 148, 149, 205
Peterson, Tim 231
Piombino, Nicholas 208, 237, 246

Poe, Deborah M. 66, 94, 230, 235
Prejsnar, Mark 164
Press, AWAREing 314
Press, Tarpaulin Sky 21
Pritts, Nate 169
Putnam, CE 151
Quackenbush, Jason 47
Quartermain, Peter 279
Reyes, Barbara Jane 272
Robinson, Adam 48
Rosenthal, Sarah 35
Rothenberg, Jerome 213
Rowland, Philip 170
Russell, Steve 123, 131, 171, 175, 178, 180, 186, 188, 189, 215, 227, 241, 252, 253, 263, 274
Al Sadiq, Ismaelia 1, 182, 198
Sarai, Sarah 22
Schickling, Jared 54
Schlesinger, Kyle 36
Schlueter, Luke 181
School, Factory 187
Schultz, Susan Webster 19, 130, 220
Schwabsky, Barry 248, 291, 295, 310
Schwartz, Gerald 112
Seaman, David 122, 222
Shankar, Ravi (English) 239
Share, Don 282, 297
Slaughter, William 199
Smith, Dale 184
Snelson, Danny 46
Sondheim, Alan 302
Stedt, Ann 73
Stempleman, Jordan 127
Sullivan, Gary 77
Svalina, Mathias 17, 43
Switaj, Elizabeth 176
Sylvester, William 63
Teersteeg 185
Tobin, Adam 280, 288
Traffic, Small Press 24, 138
Trigilio, Tony 30, 255, 271
Valley, Country 25
Vasquez-giroux, Angela 190, 192
Vassilakis, Nico 270
Vincent, Stephen 11, 71, 226
Weishaus, Joel 9
Welford, Gabrielle 85
Wharton, Samuel 317, 318
Wilcox, Dan 146
Wilkinson, Joshua 158
Williams, Tyrone 287, 290
Wong, Lindsay 242, 243
Zimmerman, Daniel 167

NAMES MENTIONED

Abani, Chris 21
Adams, Robert 30, 271
Adorno, Theodor 34
Akhmatova, Anna 172
Alexander, Jill 268
Alice, Mary 212
Allan, Don 187
Allison, Shane 157, 160
Altemus, Reed 4
Amen, John 212
Americans, Asian 68, 69, 163, 177, 198, 223, 298, 301
Amerika, Mark 144
Anderson, Laurie 72
Andre, Michael 122, 129
Andrews, Bruce 285, 305, 311, 314
Apps, Stan 157, 160
Arbor, Ann 163, 223
Arendt, Hannah 242, 243, 249
Armantrout, Rae 136
Armstrong, Aaron 91
Arnold, Bob 25, 28
Arnold, Matthew 303
Ashberry, John 171, 174
Ashbery, John 136, 163, 223, 269, 275, 291, 306, 310
Ashley, Renee 4
Atkins, Tim 8
Atlanta, Mark P. 65, 159, 164, 239
Austen, Jane 313, 319
Auster, Paul 123, 171, 174, 188, 194, 208, 216, 224, 227, 233, 237, 238, 241, 246, 247, 248, 250, 252, 256, 261, 274, 276, 283, 284, 285, 286, 290, 291, 295, 305, 306, 310, 311, 314
Austin, Geer 32, 72, 163, 223
Bachinsky, Elizabeth 41
Baker, Mary 25, 268, 312
Baker, Richard 308
Balaz, Joe 4
Baldwin, James 110, 114, 120
Ball, Jonathan 41
Ball, Michael 7, 165, 259, 316
Baraka, Amiri 225
Barbour, Douglas 4
Bardot, Brigitte 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 177
Barnard, Mary 231, 280
Baron, Todd 4
Barthelme, Donald 220, 222
Bartlett, Jennifer 154
Basinski, Michael 29, 312
Baudelaire, Charles 163, 223, 261, 276, 294
Beach, James 204, 314
Beckett, Samuel 27, 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Beckett, Tom 4
Behrle, Jim 20, 32, 163, 223

Belflower, James 317
Belgum, Erik 27
Belle, Cecelia 172
Belz, Aaron 268
Benjamin, Walter 268
Benka, Jen 20, 32, 163, 223
Bennett, John M. 4
Berge, Carol 314
Bergvall, Caroline 8, 21
Berkeley, Michael 68, 69, 72, 162, 163, 223, 242, 243, 249, 257
Berlin, Irving 72, 201, 231, 280
Bernheimer, Alan 36
Bernstein, Charles 36, 79, 187, 213, 242, 243, 249
Bernstein, Emma 79, 187, 213
Berrigan, Ted 229, 301
Betts, Tara 135, 316
Birman, Lisa 21
Birmingham, Jed 163, 223, 308
Bishop, Elizabeth 106
Black, Sheila 317
Blake, William 30, 41, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132, 258, 265, 266, 268, 271, 303
Blanchot, Maurice 177
Blaser, Robin 242, 243, 249, 254
Bloch, Julia 79
Boat, Drunken 239
Bonney, Sean 8
Borges, Jorge Luis 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 123
Bouchard, Dan 72
Bowering, George H. 118, 124, 128, 132
Bowering, Harry 296
Bowie, David 163, 223
Boyer, Anne 157, 160
Boykoff, Jules 72
Boyle, Peter 4
Bozicevic, Ana 7, 165, 259
Braden, David 75
Bradley, John 8
Brainard, Joe 36
Brakhage, Stan 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Brazil, David 163, 172, 223
Brecht, Bertolt 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 187
Brennan, Susan 3
Bromige, David 60
Brooks, David 153
Brooks, Gwendolyn 240
Brown, Brandon 11
Browne, Colin 6, 207
Browning, Robert 17, 43, 172
Bryant, Elizabeth 30, 68, 69, 271
Bryant, Tisa 32, 68, 69, 157, 160, 163, 223, 280
Budd, Billy 177
Bukowski, Charles 172, 274, 283, 284, 285, 286, 290, 291, 295, 303, 305, 306, 310, 311, 314
Bunting, Basil 225
Burk, Wendy 84
Burkard, Michael 211, 212
Burton, Philip 172
Butler, Judith 268
Buuck, David 72
Byron, Philip 4, 112, 172
Bök, Christian 145
Cafe, Poets 143, 207
Cameron, Sharon 106
Cannon, Steve 207
Carlos, William 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132, 220, 222
Carlstrom, Todd 20, 32, 163, 223
Carr, Michael 72
Carrey, Jim 111, 112, 113
Carroll, Jim 132
Casamassima, Christophe 72
Casey, Sean 163, 223
Castro, Michael 115, 116
Catanzano, Amy 21
Celan, Paul 81, 213, 234, 298, 307
Chace, Joel 7, 25, 88, 163, 165, 223, 259
Chapman, Cecelia 4
Cheney, Don 226, 230
Chernoff, Maxine 72
City, Chicago 30, 271
Clare, John 207, 258, 265, 266
Clarke, Jack 279, 301
Clements, Brian 72
Clifford, Pat 269, 275
Clinton, Bill 4
Close, Chuck 163, 223
Clover, Joshua 157, 160
Cobb, Allison 72
Cobbing, Bob 27, 65, 279, 301
Cocteau, Jean 97, 98, 102, 103, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 177
Cohen, David 163, 223
Cohen, Julia 17, 20, 32, 43, 163, 223, 280
Cohen, Leonard 172
Colby, Todd 20, 32, 145, 163, 223
Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 74, 172
Coletti, John 20, 32, 72, 163, 223, 280
Collins, Phil 137, 298
Collis, Stephen 130
Collom, Jack 157, 160
Coltrane, John 220, 222
Columbus, Christopher 72, 262
Comments, Chicago 31, 84, 308
Cook, Peter 30, 271
Corman, Roger 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121

Corso, Gregory 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Coultas, Brenda 207
County, Mike 177
Cox, Kenneth 251
Coyote, Peter 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Crangle, Sara 8
Crawford, Robert 31
Creeley, Robert 132, 163, 172, 186, 204, 223, 225
Cross, Michael 163, 223
Crouch, Jeff 145
Cuomo, Dave 72
Daley, Ryan 177, 317
Darwish, Mahmoud 81, 82, 175, 195, 215, 298
Davey, Frank 2
Davie, Donald 266
Davinio, Caterina 5
Davis, Jordan 72, 157, 160
Davis, Martin 72
Dawson, Nancy 2, 163, 223
Dennis, Michael 72, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 294
Derrida, Jacques 242, 243, 249
Detorie, Michelle 4
Dickenson, Emily 263, 278
Dickinson, Emily 172, 177, 261, 276
Dienstfrey, Patricia 72
Distler, Jed 28
Donne, John 177
Donnelly, Patrick 170, 245
Donovan, Thom 163, 223
Downey, Jeff 163, 223
Downing, Brandon 77
Doxsee, Julie 17, 43
Drennan, Bill 4
Dubois, Caroline 88
Duncan, Andrew 242, 243
Duncan, Robert 249
Durgin, Patrick 72
Dutton, Paul 38
Dworkin, Craig 41, 136
Dylan, Bob 172
Dylan, Michael 106, 132
Earl, Amanda 15
Earl, James 54, 74
Eckes, Ryan 20, 32, 163, 223
Edgar, Chris 177
Edmond, Martin 4
Edwards, Joshua 72
Edwards, Ken 279, 301
Eichhorn, Kate 29
Eisenstein, Sergei 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132
Elena, Maria 21
Eli, Noah 72
Eliot, George 300, 313, 319
Eliot, Joe 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132, 172, 319
Eliot, T. S. 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113
Elisa, Paula 268
Ellen, Mary 4, 30, 46, 48, 129, 255, 271
Elliot, Joe 228
Emerson, Claudia 38, 221
Emerson, Lori 79
England, Amy 163, 223, 225, 261, 276, 313, 319
Enzminger, Ann 163, 223
Ernst, Max 132
Eshleman, Clayton 92, 317
Eyre, Jane 313, 319
Falk, Jane 30, 271
Farr, Raymond 4, 145
Farris, John 207
Ferguson, Jesse 41, 255
Ferrini, Henry 84, 89
Feuillade, Louis 132
Fink, Thomas 4
Firestone, Jennifer 163, 223, 280
Fischer, Norman 130
Fishback, Dan 163, 223
Fishman, Lisa 317
Fitzgerald, Scott 177
Flynn, Albert 72
Forbes, John 93, 134
Foreman, Richard 164
Foster, Edward 20, 32, 72, 163, 223, 268, 280, 313, 316, 319
Foucault, Michel 242, 243, 249, 253
France, Peter 23, 67, 87, 94, 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132, 139, 150, 163, 172, 223, 308
Frances, Mary 8, 155, 231, 280, 288
Franco, Michael 132
Fraser, Kathleen 301
Fraser, Simon 2, 242, 243, 249
Frazee, Andy 268
Freeland, Charles 4
Friedman, Thomas 30, 271, 285, 305, 311, 314
Fries, Deborah 206
Frost, Corey 177, 258
Frost, Robert 177, 225, 265, 266
Fuchs, Greg 72
Fugate, Ethan 72
Gallagher, Kevin 212
Garcia, Gabriel 172
Garcia, Rodrigo 6, 172
Gardner, David 72
Gardner, Janet 145
Garrison, Deborah 212
Gelsinger, Eric 20, 32, 72, 163, 223
Genet, Jean 261, 276

Genusa, Angela 4, 157, 160
Gilbert, Alan 21
Gilbert, Roger 75, 170, 172, 245
Giles, Samantha 279, 301
Ginsberg, Allan 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 163, 172, 223, 274, 283, 284, 285, 286, 290, 291, 295, 305, 306, 310, 311, 314
Ginsberg, Allen 27, 172
Gizzi, Peter 136
Gladman, Renee 21
Godard, Barbara 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 298
Golaski, Adam 32, 163, 223
Golata, Russ 95, 303
Goldberg, Ariel 236
Goldsmith, Kenneth 155
Goldstein, Laura 4
Gontarek, Leonard 86
Goode, Chris 27, 279, 301
Gordon, Nada 285
Gordon, Ruth 72, 170, 172, 177, 245, 305, 311, 314
Gorrick, Anne 4
Grace, Nancy M. 30, 271
Graham, Susan 134, 151
Graves, Robert 258
Gray, Stephanie 20, 32, 163, 223
Green, Adam 163, 223
Greenwald, Ted 36
Grenier, Bob 280, 288
Griffin, Tim 163, 223, 249, 254
Grinnell, Tracy 72
Grossman, Allen 229
Group, Poets 65, 159
Grumman, Bob 4
Gudding, Gabriel 86
Gurga, Lee 170, 245
Hadbawnik, David 20, 32, 72, 163, 223
Halsey, Alan 170, 245
Hamill, Janet 163, 223
Hamill, Sam 26
Hamilton, Diana 226, 230
Hampton, Fred 108, 117
Hardin, Rob 304
Hardy, Thomas 237, 247, 248, 250, 252, 256, 258, 265, 266
Hart, Matt 145
Hartman, Charles O. 72
Harvey, George 276
Hav, Niels 170, 245, 290, 295, 296
Hawthorne, Alison 313, 319
Hayashida, Jennifer 280, 288
Haynes, Todd 172
Healy, Randolph 155
Heights, Jackson 280
Hejinian, Lyn 36, 157, 160, 301
Heller, Joseph 220, 222
Henning, Barbara 6, 84
Henri, Charles 65
Herbert, George 163, 223
Herman, Rachel 38, 177
Hernandez, Victor 163, 223
Herrick, Lee 75
Hershon, Bob 72, 285, 305, 311, 314
Higgins, Dick 65
Hilson, Jeff 86, 279, 301
Hirshfield, Jane 170, 245
Hoffman, Daniel 106, 163, 223
Hogue, Cynthia 6
Hollo, Anselm 301
Holloway, Rob 163, 223
Holman, Bob 20, 32, 163, 223
Holt, Henry 246
Holzer, Jenny 129
Homer 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 261, 276
Hoover, Paul 72
House, Poets 207
Howard, Richard 60, 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Howe, Susan 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Hughes, Ted 172
Hunt, Tim 30, 271
Hunter, Carrie 7, 145, 163, 165, 177, 223, 239, 259, 268, 280
Iijima, Brenda 21, 72
Indiana, Gary 18
Inman, Peter 134
Ireland, Lauren 232
Israel, David R. 38, 172
Israeli, Henry 38, 172, 182, 195, 215, 308
Jackson, Jesse 276, 308
Jaeger, Peter 279, 301
Jarmusch, Jim 172
Jeanne, Sarah 172, 240
Jeffery, Mark 25, 163, 223
Jenks, Philip 268
Johnson, Kent 8
Johnson, Robert 212
Johnson, Thomas 30, 134, 142, 170, 245, 271, 293
Jonas, Stephen 172
Jones, Bob 54, 74, 78, 143
Jones, Jill 153, 154
Jordan, June 127, 129, 268
Joseph, Safdie 23, 87, 94, 139, 172, 236
Joyce, Michael 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Jung, Carl 303
Kaipa, Summi 68, 69
Karenina, Anna 5
Karl, Steven 268

Katz, Alex 115, 116
Kaufman, Erica 72
Keaton, Diane 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 213
Keene, John 163, 223
Keller, Lynn 220, 222
Kelley, Mike 294
Kelly, Paul 257
Kelsey, Karla 72, 163, 223
Kerouac, Jack 30, 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132, 163, 172, 223, 271
Kim, Myung Mi 6, 84
Kirschenbaum, David A. 20, 32, 72, 163, 223
Klane, Matthew 4
Klein, Naomi 308
Knowles, Christopher 27
Knox, Jennifer 157, 160
Koeneke, Rodney 157, 160
Kuniya, Mark 25
Kunz, Drew 145
Kurtz, Steve 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Kushner, Bill 20, 32, 163, 207, 223
Kushner, Tony 163, 223
Kuszai, Joel 79
Kyger, Joanne 30, 255, 271
Lamoureux, Mark 72, 145, 163, 223
Landers, Susan 72
Lang, Eugene 163, 223
Larkin, Philip 258, 265, 266
Lauterbach, Ann 136
Lavender, Bill 268
Lazer, Hank 6, 25
Lederer, Katy 72
Leftwich, Jim 317
Lehman, David 144
Leonard, Tom 172
Lerner, Ben 172
Levin, Jonathan 282
Levine, Jeffrey 137
Levitsky, Rachel 20, 32, 72, 145, 163, 223, 280
Levy, John 170, 245
Lewis, Jeffrey 163, 223
Liu, Timothy 163, 223, 280, 288
Lloyd, David 51, 70
London, Frank 17, 29, 43, 229, 301
Lopez, Richard 95
Lopez, Tony 279, 301
Lorber, Brendan 72
Lorca, Federico García 172
Louise, Bobbie 75, 189
Luoma, Bill 21, 157, 160
Lurie, Bobbi 4
Luther, Martin 159
Lyons, Kimberly 136, 285, 305, 311, 314
Machlin, Dan 72
Mackey, Nathaniel 267, 273, 287, 307, 308
Madison, James 294
Madrid, Anthony 239
Magallon, Diana 145
Magee, Michael 72
Magi, Jill 72, 207
Mallarmé, Stéphane 194, 208, 216, 224, 227, 233, 237, 238, 241, 246, 247, 250, 252, 261, 276
Malle, Louis 177
Mandel, Tom 168, 184, 195, 215
Manson, Douglas 20, 32, 163, 223
Manson, Peter 8, 279, 301
Marie, Joshua 163, 223
Marie, Julie 199
Marie, Linda 154
Marks, Justin 72
Marsh, William 163, 223, 257
Marshall, Robert 163, 223
Martin, Chris 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 125, 172, 207, 298
Martin, Douglas A. 28
Martone, John 25
Marvin, Lee 93, 154
Mason, Chris 4
Masterson, Patrick 72
Maxwell, Susan 106
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 7, 165, 259
Mayer, Bernadette 115, 116
Maynard, Joe 72
McCaffery, Steve 6, 84, 242, 243, 249
Mead, Taylor 163, 223
Meetze, James 72
Meltzer, David 30, 271
Melville, Pierre 17, 43, 163, 177, 223, 300, 313, 319
Menard, Pierre 212
Mengham, Rod 225
Merrill, Stuart 23
Merwin, W. S. 274, 283, 284, 285, 286, 290, 291, 295, 305, 306, 310, 311, 314
Mesmer, Sharon 20, 32, 163, 223
Millar, Jay 72
Miller, Cynthia 6
Miller, David 170, 245, 279, 301
Miller, Lee 25, 279, 294, 301
Miller, Stephen 170, 245
Mirakove, Carol 20, 32, 163, 223
Miriam, Erica 163, 223, 242, 243, 249
Mitchell, Stephen 75
Mohammad, Kasey 157, 160
Monroe, Bill 30, 271
Moody, Rick 145
Moore, Jim 170, 245
Morgan, Edwin 163, 223
Morgan, Robin 228, 268

Morris, William 294
Moschovakis, Anna 7, 72, 165, 259, 316
Motika, Stephen 207
Mueller, Ursula 163, 223
Mullen, Laura 21
Murphy, Michelle 7, 30, 165, 259, 271
Murphy, Ryan 7, 72, 165, 316
Murphy, Sheila E. 4
Myles, Eileen 20, 32, 163, 223, 280
Nagami, Heather 6
Naka, Michelle 21
Nakagawa, Jane 170
Nakayasu, Sawako 105
Nauman, Bruce 27
Neruda, Pablo 172
Nester, Daniel 20, 32, 163, 223
Nguyen, Hoa 72
Nichols, Travis 242, 243, 249
Nicole, Anna 257
Niedecker, Lorine 48
Nielsen, Aldon L. 267, 273, 287, 307, 308
Nixon, Richard 146
Norton, John 31
Notley, Alice 189
O'Sullivan, Maggie 155
Oak, Gwyn 72
Oleander, White 173, 178, 179, 181, 183, 185, 191, 192, 196, 200, 209
Oliver, Laura 2, 294, 308
Olson, Charles 6, 38, 84, 225, 229, 242, 243, 249, 282
Ondaatje, Michael 23, 87, 94, 139, 150
Opstedal, Kevin 115, 116
Orser, Kristen 4, 317
Orwell, George 210, 308
Ovid 163, 206, 223
Owens, Richard 72
Pacific, Asian 32, 38, 115, 116, 153, 163, 211, 223, 280, 288, 304
Palm, Lars 86
Palmer, Michael 30, 213, 271
Paquin, Ethan 316
Parish, Jefferson 195, 215
Park, Grant 30, 271
Parker, Charlie 298
Parker, Dorothy 172
Parker, Karl 172, 298
Parkway, Neal 30, 271
Patchen, Kenneth 163, 186, 204, 223
Patterson, Ian 225
Patton, Julie 177
Peabody, Richard 316
Penn, Robert 240
Perchik, Simon 211, 212
Perkins, Stephen 8
Perry, David 130
Peters, Michael 145
Peterson, Katie 135
Pettet, Simon 20, 32, 163, 223, 280, 285, 305, 311, 314
Phillip, Andrew 163, 223
Phillips, John 170, 245
Phillips, Sara 29
Piombino, Nick 20, 32, 79, 163, 223, 280
Pitt, William 33
Place, Vanessa 105
Plath, Sylvia 44, 46, 48, 50, 56, 59, 62, 63, 64, 66, 189
Poe, Deborah M. 66, 94, 230, 235, 244
Poe, Edgar 261, 276
Pope, Alexander 111, 112, 113
Portugal, Anne 163, 223
Potter, Steve 72
Pound, Ezra 132
Pound, Scott 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 225, 261, 276
Prevallet, Kristin 20, 32, 207
Price, Michael 115, 116
Price, Richard 29
Price, Ron 33
Priddle, Ross 41
Di Prima, Diane 30, 255, 271
Pringle, Kathryn 20, 32, 163, 223
Pritchett, Patrick 6
Professor, Kelly 267, 273, 287, 307, 308
Prynne, J. H. 229
Puckett, Caleb 4
Quarles, Lanny 157, 160
Randall, Ian 212
Raven, Francis 132
Raworth, Tom 8
Ray, David 211, 212
Redford, Robert 106
Reed, Lou 32, 163, 223
Reese, Marshall 226, 230, 234
Reeves, Jennifer 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121
Regan, Max 79
Reid, Jamie 2
Rexilius, Andrea 32, 163, 223
Reyes, Louis 268, 272, 315
Richards, Deborah 21
Richter, Karl 257
Ridge, Tom 220, 222
Riggs, Sarah 172
Rilke, Rainer Maria 27, 186, 204
Rimbaud, Arthur 172
Rimbaud, Dee 108, 117, 132, 177, 261, 276
Rizzo, Chris 72
Robertson, Lisa 136
Robertson, Pat 239, 268
Robins, Maureen 17, 43, 135
Robinson, Anthony 72
Rodefer, Stephen 8, 225
Rohrer, Matthew 163, 223

Rollins, Henry 303
Rosenthal, Chuck 16, 35
Roy, Camille 163, 223
Royer, Ric 163, 223
Rumble, Ken 32, 163, 223
Rumsfeld, Donald 8
Russo, Linda 8
Sanchez, Jorge 115, 116
Sanders, James 14, 164
Santos, Craig 19
Sappho 10
Sartre, Paul 129
Savage, Tom 32, 163, 223
Sawyer, Chris 309
Scalapino, Leslie 72
Schmall, Jeremy 17, 43
Schultz, Susan M. 8, 19, 130
Schuyler, James 163, 223
Schwitters, Kurt 27, 65
Seldess, Jesse 72, 201, 231, 280, 288
Sendecki, Daniel 72
Shakespeare, William 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 172, 177, 204
Shelley, Mary 172
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 172, 213
Sherman, Bill 172
Sherwood, Kenneth 220, 222
Shiroma, Jerrold 72
Shmailo, Larissa 170, 245
Siegel, Nathaniel 207
Siegell, Paul 4, 86
Sikelianos, Eleni 17
Silem, Kasey 157, 160
Silliman, Ron 285, 305, 311, 314
Simon, Greg 207, 298
Simon, Toni 163, 223
Simone, Frank 268
Sirois, Justin 72
Skinner, Jonathan 72
Smith, Rachel 8
Smith, Rod 72
Smith, Tracy K. 41, 53, 163, 172, 174, 207, 210, 223, 239, 268
Solomon, Carl 177
Sonnenberg, Kerri 72, 201
Spahr, Juliana 301
Spektor, Regina 163, 223
Spicer, Jack 38, 132, 195, 215, 242, 243, 249, 268
Sprague, Jane 72
Stackhouse, Christopher 163, 223, 280, 316
Stanley, Jared 31
Stanton, Rob 32, 163, 206, 223
Stein, Gertrude 27, 142, 164
Stein, Suzanne 187, 225
Steinberg, Nicole 268, 316
Stengel, Jill 72
Stevens, Wallace 163, 223, 294
Stewart, Susan 308
Strauss, Zoe 7, 165, 259
Stroffolino, Chris 269, 275
Sutherland, Keston 8
Swensen, Cole 6, 17, 84
Szymaszek, Stacy 20, 32, 72, 163, 207, 223, 280, 285, 305, 311, 314, 316
Tabios, Eileen 72, 86
Taggart, John 25
Tarn, Nathaniel 229, 268
Taylor, Cecil 27
Taylor, Jesse 153
Terry, Philip 268
Tesser, Marjorie 163, 223
Texas, Irving 72, 122, 129, 304
Theater, Poets 225
Thesen, Sharon 78
Thomas, Dylan 3, 81, 161, 172, 258, 265, 266, 308
Thomson, Stephen 187
Thorson, Maureen 20, 32, 72, 163, 223
Tieger, Aaron 72
Tipton, John 163, 223
Toal, Jefferson 8
Toogood, Jason 72
Topel, Andrew 4, 41
Toscano, Rodrigo 20, 32, 268
Towle, Tony 285, 305, 311, 314
Tribbey, Hugh 201
Tribune, Chicago 201
Trinidad, David 163, 223
Tufts, Kate 239
Tuma, Keith 8
Turner, Brian 177
Twemlow, Nick 72
Upton, Lawrence 279, 301
Valery, Paul 132
Valle, Charles 72
Vallejo, César 92, 172
Verlaine, Paul 108, 117, 172, 177
Vermont, Charlie 16, 35, 211
Vidaver, Aaron 203
Vigo, Jean 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 121
Vincent, Gregory 4, 72, 84, 89
Vitiello, Chris 145
Vollmer, Judith 60
Waber, Dan 72
Wagner, Catherine 8
Waldman, Anne 6, 84
Waldrop, Keith 72
Walker, Alice 154, 268
Warhol, Andy 163, 223, 304
Warren, Jim 240
Warsh, Lewis 72
Washington, Harold 17, 43, 72, 163, 223, 239

Wasserman, Ann 212
Watson, Scott 25
Weber, Charles 201, 231, 280
Weber, Damian 163, 223
Weinberger, Eliot 229
Wertheim, Christine 21, 304
Whalen, Philip 163, 223
Wheeler, Betsy 43
Whitman, Walt 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 163, 172, 177, 223, 261, 276, 298, 303
Williams, William Carlos 59
Williamson, Aaron 145
Willis, Elizabeth 170, 245
Wilson, Steve 28, 177, 212
Wilson, Warren 211
Woolf, Virginia 172
Wordsworth, William 74, 172
Wright, James 316
Yacht, Peter F. 15
Yankelevich, Matvei 7, 17, 43, 72, 165, 259, 316
Yarmolinsky, Ben 187
Young, Stephanie 165, 259
Zawacki, Andrew 268
Zerzan, John 129
Zroback, Jeff 75
Zurawski, Magdalena 163, 223
Zuzga, Jason 86
Zwicky, Jan 268

CONCEPTS

9/11 308
Activism and protest 257
Aesthetics 14, 68, 69, 105, 163, 223, 261, 276, 294, 298
Afghanistan 38
African American poetry 308
Anthologies 7, 15, 16, 27, 31, 35, 60, 68, 69, 129, 144, 163, 165, 201, 211, 212, 213, 223, 259, 261, 276, 277, 279, 280, 289, 299, 301
Anti-Semitism 168, 175, 182, 184, 195, 198, 215
Appropriation 84, 157, 160, 308
Archives and libraries 2, 10, 17, 29, 37, 58, 79, 155, 163, 168, 173, 176, 177, 178, 179, 181, 183, 184, 185, 190, 191, 192, 196, 197, 200, 202, 209, 211, 223, 226, 230, 239, 257
Autobiography 13, 23, 78, 163, 194, 208, 211, 216, 220, 222, 223, 224, 227, 233, 237, 238, 239, 241, 246, 247, 248, 250, 252, 261, 276
Avant-garde 16, 24, 35, 38, 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132, 138, 163, 223, 308
Beat generation 30, 97, 172, 271
Beauty 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 182, 195, 215, 220, 222, 245, 261, 276
Biography 2, 5, 37, 58, 60, 172
Black Mountain 30, 271
Blogs 2, 4, 9, 11, 14, 15, 22, 24, 27, 34, 38, 51, 68, 69, 70, 71, 74, 77, 78, 79, 81, 86, 88, 92, 93, 94, 98, 99, 103, 105, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 117, 121, 138, 142, 143, 147, 157, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 169, 188, 189, 194, 205, 208, 210, 213, 216, 217, 219, 223, 224, 226, 227, 228, 230, 233, 234, 235, 237, 238, 241, 244, 246, 247, 248, 250, 252, 267, 270, 273, 279, 282, 287, 301, 306, 307, 308, 310, 317, 318
Book announcements 8, 15, 17, 25, 29, 36, 40, 125, 144, 163, 169, 170, 187, 211, 212, 223, 225, 242, 243, 245, 249, 254, 257, 262, 269, 275, 280
Bookstores 17, 18, 43, 208, 211, 212, 216, 224, 227, 233, 237, 238, 241, 246, 247, 248, 250, 252
Calls for submissions 65, 75, 221
Capitalism 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 308
Censorship 163, 177, 223, 308
Cities 16, 30, 31, 35, 38, 53, 72, 144, 163, 177, 211, 223, 239, 261, 271, 276, 280, 298, 308
Class 3
Climate 234
Collage and montage 46, 48, 130, 132, 163, 172, 223
Conferences and festivals 3, 6, 8, 20, 30, 32, 72, 78, 84, 89, 119, 137, 143, 163, 195, 207, 211, 215, 217, 223, 239, 271, 280, 288
Copyright and permissions 6, 79, 298, 308
Craft 261, 276
Creative writing pedagogy 163, 210, 220, 222, 223, 312
Dada 308
Deconstruction 302
Difficulty 30, 79, 163, 210, 213, 223, 271, 288, 298
Digital archives 36, 46, 48, 163, 187, 223
Disability 24, 138, 257
Dreams 17, 36, 115, 116, 132, 163, 172, 177, 201, 221, 223, 261, 276, 280, 298, 308
Ecology and ecopoetics 72, 304
Editing 68, 69, 79, 132, 144, 163, 164, 182, 195, 215, 219, 223, 240
Ekphrasis 163, 223
Electronic poetry and hypertext 29, 36, 70, 79, 163, 223
Elegy 27, 130, 187
Empire and imperialism 60
Epic 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132, 143, 177, 279, 298, 301

Epistemology 198
Erasure 210
Ethics 1, 261, 276
Experimental poetry 132, 163, 223, 231, 280, 304
Fascism 38, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 177, 182, 195, 215, 308
Feminism 77, 163, 223, 304, 313, 319
Film 3, 30, 39, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 54, 55, 56, 59, 61, 62, 63, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 74, 84, 89, 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 117, 120, 121, 132, 135, 156, 163, 171, 172, 174, 177, 191, 194, 208, 216, 223, 224, 227, 233, 237, 238, 239, 241, 246, 247, 248, 250, 252, 255, 271, 276, 298, 303
Futurism 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 308
Gender 30, 255, 271
Ghazal 228, 280
Grants and funding 7, 16, 24, 30, 35, 47, 84, 138, 163, 165, 192, 196, 200, 201, 206, 209, 211, 223, 229, 239, 259, 271, 274, 283, 284, 285, 286, 290, 291, 295, 305, 306, 308, 310, 311, 314
Haiku 110, 114, 120, 228
Humour and satire 8, 45, 47, 49, 51, 52, 55, 61, 67, 70, 163, 187, 223
Ideology 132, 177, 210
Improvisation 135, 210
Indigenous and Native poetics 85, 172, 195, 215, 308
Interviews 4, 8, 16, 21, 31, 35, 92, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 115, 116, 121, 163, 164, 177, 182, 195, 211, 212, 215, 223
Israel and Palestine 38, 67, 82, 172, 175, 182, 195, 198, 215, 298, 308
Jewish poetics 211
Language poetry 210, 225
Letters and correspondence 24, 27, 79, 138, 269, 275
List moderation 20, 32, 79, 84, 144, 163, 179, 192, 196, 200, 209, 223, 280, 308
Little magazines 2, 7, 8, 14, 15, 16, 31, 33, 35, 60, 65, 68, 69, 72, 73, 75, 76, 79, 91, 115, 116, 132, 144, 157, 160, 163, 164, 165, 170, 186, 199, 201, 204, 211, 212, 223, 228, 231, 239, 240, 245, 251, 259, 280, 281, 297, 312
Lyric poetry 187
Memory 66, 132, 163, 168, 177, 184, 203, 220, 222, 223, 239, 261, 276
MFA programs 144, 211, 212, 239, 280, 314
Modernism 115, 116, 225, 294
Mourning and loss 53, 220, 222, 261, 276, 298, 308
Multiculturalism 212
Music and poetry 7, 8, 11, 20, 28, 32, 65, 72, 129, 132, 133, 134, 135, 151, 161, 163, 165, 182, 186, 187, 195, 201, 204, 215, 217, 221, 223, 231, 239, 253, 255, 257, 259, 280, 298, 308
Nature 38, 67, 79, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 132, 136, 210, 221, 261, 276, 294
New York School 163, 223
Obituary and memorial 79, 177, 272, 315
Performance and the poetry reading 2, 7, 15, 16, 18, 24, 30, 31, 35, 79, 83, 84, 93, 138, 143, 144, 146, 153, 163, 165, 172, 212, 223, 226, 230, 236, 239, 255, 257, 259, 271, 280, 303, 316
Phenomenology 156, 198
Philosophy 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 177, 208, 216, 224, 227, 233, 237, 238, 240, 241, 242, 243, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 252, 285, 298, 305, 309, 311, 314
Place and region 163, 181, 223, 261, 276, 298, 319
Poet laureate 2, 137, 298
Poetics 2, 16, 30, 35, 50, 56, 59, 66, 68, 69, 70, 79, 89, 94, 97, 102, 129, 132, 144, 159, 163, 164, 168, 181, 184, 195, 199, 203, 204, 206, 208, 213, 215, 216, 223, 224, 225, 227, 230, 233, 235, 237, 238, 241, 242, 243, 244, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 252, 257, 265, 266, 271, 277, 289, 299
Poets Against the War 26
Print vs. digital 17, 19, 30, 43, 60, 61, 99, 108, 117, 122, 125, 129, 132, 141, 163, 177, 185, 194, 197, 202, 208, 216, 219, 220, 222, 223, 224, 227, 233, 237, 238, 241, 242, 243, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 252, 261, 269, 271, 275, 276, 294, 301
Prizes and awards 16, 30, 35, 37, 58, 60, 68, 69, 144, 163, 201, 212, 219, 220, 222, 223, 225, 229, 234, 239, 249, 254, 261, 271, 276
Procedural and constraint writing 41, 67, 210
Prose poem 7, 60, 129, 144, 163, 165, 223, 259
Prosody and meter 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 193
Psychoanalysis 187
Queer poetics 1, 24, 38, 64, 93, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 138, 141, 172, 214, 218, 280
Race and poetry 79, 163, 223, 280, 308
Reading announcements 115, 116, 211, 212, 229
Religion and the sacred 1, 37, 41, 58, 145, 158, 163, 177, 182, 195, 198, 215, 223, 277, 289, 298, 299
Representation 44, 46, 48, 50, 56, 59, 62, 298
Reviewing and criticism 8, 13, 16, 17, 31, 35, 66, 72, 77, 78, 79, 85, 88, 91, 94, 99, 115,

116, 125, 144, 163, 170, 177, 193, 199, 201, 208, 210, 211, 212, 216, 219, 223, 224, 227, 229, 233, 235, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 250, 252, 258, 265, 266, 279, 280, 291, 301, 306, 308, 310, 313, 319
Romanticism 213
San Francisco Renaissance 30, 271
School of Quietude 290, 295, 296
Science 38, 132, 204, 261, 276
Serial poem 7, 8, 29, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 130, 163, 165, 223, 242, 243, 249, 259, 280
Small press publishing 7, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 24, 25, 29, 32, 35, 36, 43, 53, 60, 68, 69, 72, 78, 92, 125, 137, 138, 144, 162, 163, 165, 169, 199, 201, 211, 212, 223, 231, 239, 240, 257, 259, 262, 280
Social media 22, 23, 87, 94, 119, 134, 139, 151, 163, 223, 236
Software and code 6, 24, 57, 138, 164, 210
Sonnet 78, 93, 130, 279, 301
Sound poetry 65, 132, 136, 312, 316
Subjectivity 29, 187, 298
Sublime 99, 125, 182, 195, 215
Surrealism 5, 132, 251
Terrorism 198, 210, 308
The academy 6, 8, 9, 16, 17, 29, 30, 35, 43, 79, 83, 84, 85, 99, 122, 129, 136, 137, 143, 163, 190, 193, 201, 202, 211, 212, 214, 218, 223, 229, 239, 240, 242, 243, 249, 254, 255, 257, 267, 269, 271, 273, 275, 281, 285, 287, 294, 295, 297, 298, 305, 307, 308, 309, 311, 312, 314
The body 17, 73, 76, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 186, 204
The canon 208, 216, 224, 227, 233, 237, 238, 241, 246, 247, 248, 250, 252, 263, 278
The Gulf War 38, 67
The Holocaust 38, 51, 70, 253
The internet 8, 14, 65, 67, 79, 84, 115, 116, 137, 143, 163, 198, 206, 223, 257, 298
The Iraq war 1, 31, 38, 177, 182, 195, 198, 215
The line 288
The listserv 23, 60, 70, 79, 87, 90, 94, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 117, 118, 120, 121, 124, 128, 132, 137, 139, 144, 150, 151, 152, 163, 167, 168, 171, 172, 174, 177, 184, 223, 236, 242, 243, 249, 281, 282, 285, 297, 305, 311, 312, 314
Theatre 2, 7, 20, 24, 28, 30, 32, 43, 53, 125, 138, 143, 163, 165, 177, 211, 222, 223, 225, 239, 255, 257, 259, 261, 271, 276, 308
Torture and Abu Ghraib 129, 195, 215, 308
Translation 7, 30, 60, 92, 105, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 121, 122, 125, 129, 130, 132, 163, 165, 177, 194, 198, 208, 211, 212, 213, 216, 223, 224, 225, 227, 229, 233, 237, 238, 241, 246, 247, 248, 250, 252, 259, 261, 268, 271, 274, 276, 277, 280, 283, 284, 285, 286, 289, 290, 291, 294, 295, 298, 299, 305, 306, 308, 310, 311, 314
Vietnam 220, 222
Visual and concrete poetry 14, 21, 39, 45, 47, 49, 51, 52, 55, 57, 61, 67, 70, 119, 132, 210, 281, 297, 312
Visual art 14, 15, 31, 36, 39, 42, 54, 67, 68, 69, 74, 99, 107, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 115, 116, 119, 121, 131, 132, 144, 154, 163, 206, 211, 212, 217, 221, 223, 226, 230, 239, 295, 304
Women's writing 189

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 319 in all.

31 JUL 2008

1. Ismaelia al Sadiq — Re: SHAME TO STONEWALL!
2. John Cunningham — Re: Subtext/Seattle - George Bowering & Marion Kimes - 8/6/08
3. Ram Devineni — Film selected for Competition at the Venice Film Festival

1 AUG 2008

4. Jennifer Karmin — Otoliths issue 10
5. ART ELECTRONICS — Call for Entries - Poetry Supermarket
6. Charles Alexander — chax press 200 x 20
7. amy king —  Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich **
8. Justin Katko — New Critical Documents
9. Joel Weishaus — "Reality Too" July Blog
10. jessica beard — poetry and archives
11. Stephen Vincent — Infectious hedonism, eatism, NYism

2 AUG 2008

12. Camille Martin — new collages by Camille Martin
13. John Cunningham — tracking down book for review
14. David Chirot — REPUGNO SELECTS Issue No. 1 is Here
15. Rob McLennan — above/ground press 15th anniversary reading!

3 AUG 2008

16. Dana Teen Lomax — Karmin, Lomax, and Rosenthal at Books & Bookshelves 8/7/08
17. Mathias Svalina — Julie Doxsee's Undersleep Available & Reading Tour
18. Audrey Berry — Bloomington Indiana
19. Susan Webster Schultz — PRE-PUBLICATION TINFISH SALE--AND MORE!

4 AUG 2008

20. David Kirschenbaum — Exhibit at Boog Fest's Small, Small Press Fair
21. Tarpaulin Sky Press — Bhanu Kapil's Shiny New Tarpaulin Sky
22. Sarah Sarai — hAve You Been Married, the Sister asK in Obsequious Riot/Other Rooms Press; 3...
23. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 08.04.08-08.10.08
24. Small Press Traffic — Small Press Traffic's Position Announcement for an Executive Director

5 AUG 2008

25. Country Valley — New poetry from Country Valley Press
26. Charlotte Mandel — If you're in the Hamptons
27. Sam Ladkin — Recommended, Chris Goode, Edinburgh: forestation
28. Anselm Berrigan — Composer/Poet Collaborations at the Flea Theater....
29. Séamas Cain — Re: poetry and archives?
30. Tony Trigilio — Registration Discount Deadline Extended: The Beat Generation Symposium at C...
31. Jennifer Karmin — Aug 10: Public Project in SF
32. David Kirschenbaum — Advertise in Welcome to Boog City Festival Issue

6 AUG 2008

33. susan maurer — Cutthroat
34. Dan Glass — With + Stand Makes Time
35. Sarah Rosenthal — Lomax/Rosenthal/Karmin SF Thurs 8/7
36. Kyle Schlesinger — Ted Greenwald at the EPC
37. Andrew Jones — Fwd: Call
38. David Chirot — 6 August 1945: for Hiroshima--Witnessed & as"After" Effects in Poetry--Spice...

39. David Chirot — New & Recent Visual Poetry: "Cinema of Catharsis" flickr gallery link

7 AUG 2008

40. Jesse Glass — Yoko Danno's Songs and Stories Of The Kojiki Now Available from Ahadada Books
41. derek beaulieu — publication announcement: LEGO 50-15
42. Bill Berkson — GOODS AND SERVICES
43. Mathias Svalina — Julie Doxsee's Undersleep Available from Octopus Books & Reading Dates
44. amy king — Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
45. Jim Andrews — comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
46. Danny Snelson — Re: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
47. Jason Quackenbush — Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
48. Adam Robinson — Re: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
49. Skip Fox — Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
50. Mendi Lewis Obadike — Re: OT: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
51. Alison Croggon — Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
52. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
53. Catherine Daly — beyond baroque (again)

8 AUG 2008

54. jared schickling — Re: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
55. Maria Damon — Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
56. Maria Damon — Re: OT: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
57. Jim Andrews — "Fitting the Pattern" by Christine Wilks
58. Andrew Jones — Re-post: Call
59. Mary Kasimor — Re: OT: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
60. David Baratier — Final Call Transcontinental Award, deadline 8/15, next Friday
61. mIEKAL aND — Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
62. Bobbie Lurie — for Amy: film/ lit course w "poetry" angle
63. William Sylvester — Re: for Amy: film/ lit course w
64. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: for Amy: film/ lit course w "poetry" angle
65. aslongasittakes — call for work-- sound poetry
66. Deborah M. Poe — Re: for Amy: film/ lit course w "poetry" angle
67. David Chirot — Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
68. amy king — Sun, Aug. 10th @ 5 p.m. --Bryant & Kaipa [on behalf of Sueyeun Juliette Lee]
69. amy king — Sun, Aug. 10th @ 5 p.m. --Bryant & Kaipa [on behalf of Sueyeun Juliette Lee] COR...
70. Stephen Baraban — Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
71. Stephen Vincent — New de Blog - Google Bus line et al
72. David Kirschenbaum — Small Press Needed for Sept. 21 at Boog Fest
73. Ann Stedt — use these words seeks submissions

9 AUG 2008

74. andrew burke — Re: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
75. Tammy Ho — Cha: New Issue and Call for Submissions
76. Obododimma Oha — Re: use these words seeks submissions
77. Gary Sullivan — Blurred Vision 4 launch party in NYC
78. Rob McLennan — new(ish) on rob's clever blog
79. Poetics List — Poetics List Welcome - Posting Reminders
80. Eireene Nealand — UC Santa Cruz Associate/Assistant professor opening

10 AUG 2008

81. Pierre Joris — Nomadics blog is Back
82. David-Baptiste Chirot — Sad news--Palestinian Poet Mahmoud Darwish dies--(AP,NY times)
83. Nicholas Karavatos — Reading in Portland on Monday the 11th

11 AUG 2008

84. Charles Alexander — CHARLES OLSON: Language as Physical Fact

85. Gabrielle Welford — my dissertation up at a new on-demand publisher
86. Adam Fieled — PFS Post: Coming this Fall....
87. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Newsletter 08.11.08-08.17.08
88. Scott Howard — Book Reviewers Wanted: Reconfigurations
89. charles alexander — Re: The Poetics List
90. amy king — The List of Movies with Poetry
91. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books — Fw: A review of Todd Moore's books are up on the new Lummo...
92. Doug Holder — Interview with Clayton Eshleman: The Man Who Translated Vallejo
93. Pam Brown — the deletions

12 AUG 2008

94. Deborah M. Poe — news on the modern review?
95. blacksox — Connecting through poetry post cards
96. David Chirot — The List of Movies with Poetry
97. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
98. Alison Croggon — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
99. Anny Ballardini — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
100. amy king — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
101. amy king — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

13 AUG 2008

102. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
103. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
104. Bobbie Lurie — the list of movies with poetry
105. Jennifer Karmin — Les Figues Press: Give A Fig Blog
106. Joel Lewis — Re: the list of movies with poetry
107. David Chirot — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
108. Anny Ballardini — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

14 AUG 2008

109. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
110. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
111. Mary Kasimor — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
112. Gerald Schwartz — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
113. Eric Dickey — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
114. Larry O. Dean — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
115. Bill Berkson — FW: Tuesday, August 26th - Bill Berkson & Kevin Opstedal
116. Bill Berkson — USE THIS: Tuesday, August 26th - Bill Berkson & Kevin Opstedal

15 AUG 2008

117. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
118. George Bowering — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
119. Jim Andrews — generative art
120. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
121. amalio Madueno — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
122. David Seaman — poetry book
123. steve russell — Auster in D.C.
124. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
125. Gloria Mindock — Two new books from Cervena Barva Press
126. Geoffrey Gatza — BlazeVOX [books] Raffle and Bake Sale

16 AUG 2008

127. Jordan Stempleman — Looking for a transcription of de Kooning's lecture "What Abstract Art ...
128. George Bowering — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
129. David Chirot — Re: Looking for a transcription of de Kooning's lecture "What Abstract Art M...

130. Susan Webster Schultz — Tinfish 18 is imminent!
131. steve russell — Michelangelo Antonioni and other beautifully lit melodrama
132. David Chirot — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
133. Jennifer Karmin — Aug 22: Printers' Ball in Chicago

17 AUG 2008

134. Daniel Godston — Multiartscape Triptyk
135. Daniel Godston — Synesthesic Cell Structures
136. Camille Martin — CKLN-FM, Tuesday, August 19, 2-3 pm: Poetry, Straight Up
137. Joan Houlihan — Invitation to September Colrain Poetry Manuscript Intensive
138. Small Press Traffic — SPT Executive Director Job Call

18 AUG 2008

139. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 08.18.08-08.24.08
140. mIEKAL aND — What Organic Poetry might be
141. mIEKAL aND — TEXISTENCE by Geof Huth & mIEKAL aND
142. Halvard Johnson — Re: What Organic Poetry might be
143. Martha Cinader Mims — Listen & Be Heard Internet Radio Open Mic
144. amy king — Poetry Reading & Fundraiser for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society
145. amy king — Sous Rature -- 1ssue, August 2008

19 AUG 2008

146. Dan Wilcox — Third Thursday Poetry Night, Albany, NY, Will Nixon & Open Mic
147. Obododimma Oha — Street boy wants my phone
148. Obododimma Oha — Fw: Call for Poetry
149. Obododimma Oha — Fw: Call for Poetry (2)
150. Michael Kelleher — BABEL SELL-OUT ALERT
151. CE Putnam — The List of Movies with Poetry
152. Michael Kelleher — BABEL IS SOLD OUT!!
153. jpjones — St Kilda, Melbourne, Sunday 24th August
154. jpjones — Adelaide, Tuesday 26th August - Lee Marvin readings

20 AUG 2008

155. cris cheek — SoundEye starting to go "up" (forwarded)
156. Carol Novack — movies with poetry
157. K. Silem Mohammad — Abraham Lincoln #3
158. Joshua Wilkinson — Rabbit Light Movies--New Episode
159. Poetics List — Language Harm in Atlanta [on behalf of Mark Prejsnar]
160. K. Silem Mohammad — Abraham Lincoln 3: URL correction
161. Andy Nicholson — New Posts at Lamplighter, lamplighter, lamplighter
162. Clay Banes — New SPD blog

21 AUG 2008

163. David Kirschenbaum — Welcome to Boog City 2 Festival Sept. 18-21
164. Mark Prejsnar — announcing miscproj.. call for work (& readers)
165. amy king — Friday, August 29th  Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich **
166. Catherine Daly — Artist and Curator Calls City of Vancouver Public Art Program
167. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

22 AUG 2008

168. Tenney Nathanson — Dorn and anti-semitism on the Poetics list?
169. Nate Pritts — 3-2-1 Blastoff!
170. Philip Rowland — NOON 6 AVAILABLE
171. steve russell — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
172. ela kotkowska — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
173. mIEKAL aND — Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
174. Ruth Lepson — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

175. steve russell — Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
176. Elizabeth Switaj — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
177. David Chirot — Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
178. steve russell — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
179. susan dunn-hensley — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
180. steve russell — Woman arrested
181. Luke Schlueter — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
182. Ismaelia al Sadiq — Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
183. Geraldine Monk — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

23 AUG 2008

184. Dale Smith — Mandel on Dorn
185. teersteeg — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
186. steve russell — Island
187. Factory School — New from Factory School -- Blind Witness: Three American Operas
188. steve russell — insomnia, words that do not survive the world
189. steve russell — reading while locked up

24 AUG 2008

190. angela vasquez-giroux — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
191. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
192. angela vasquez-giroux — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
193. Jennifer Karmin — JOB: Northwestern University
194. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
195. David Chirot — Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
196. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
197. Geraldine Monk — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
198. Ismaelia al Sadiq — Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
199. William Slaughter — Notice: Mudlark
200. George Bowering — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
201. William Allegrezza — Series A This Tuesday!
202. susan dunn-hensley — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

25 AUG 2008

203. Poetics List — Lawrence Braithwaite Obit -- On behalf of Aaron Vidaver
204. Poetics List — Re: Island [on behalf of James Beach]
205. Obododimma Oha — urchin
206. Poetics List — "What one beholds of a woman is the least part of her" - Ovid [on behalf of …
207. amy king — Poetry Turn On! Mon, Sept 8th @ 8pm - St. Marks Church NYC presented by the Howl…
208. Nicholas Piombino — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
209. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
210. David Chirot — Orwell's Diaries of 1938 on line as "today's date daily blog"
211. Gloria Mindock — listing
212. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press Fall Reading Series
213. Jerome Rothenberg — Poems & Poetics - August postings
214. billy little — dorn's alleged attitude
215. steve russell — Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
216. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
217. Bonnie MacAllister — Dreamscape Festival--Poets, Art, Music September 6th
218. Eric Dickey — Re: dorn's alleged attitude
219. amy king — Trouble with presses?
220. Susan Webster Schultz — Bamboo Ridge book you should know about
221. Troy Camplin — CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

26 AUG 2008

222. David Seaman — Re: Bamboo Ridge book you should know about

223. Cara Benson — Re: Welcome to Boog City 2 Festival Sept. 18-21
224. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
225. Justin Katko — Stephen Rodefer's Call It Thought: Selected Poems
226. Stephen Vincent — Public Art in Denver
227. steve russell — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
228. Patrick Duggan — Idiolexicon 2.1: Sorry for Sedoka
229. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books — Fw: Nathaniel Tarn Reading at Acequia Booksellers
230. Deborah M. Poe — Re: Public Art in Denver
231. Tim Peterson — Seldess, Richard & Schlesinger @ Unnameable Books
232. Geoffrey Gatza — THANK YOU 80% To Our Goal! BlazeVOX [books] fund drive update :-)

27 AUG 2008

233. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
234. Pierre Joris — Recent posts on Nomadics
235. Deborah M. Poe — modern review?
236. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Newsletter 08.25.08-08.31.08
237. Nicholas Piombino — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
238. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
239. Shankar, Ravi (English) — Drunken Boat Multimedia Performance, AAWW in NYC, 8/28/08, 7:00 t...
240. Jennifer Karmin — JOB: Southern Review
241. steve russell — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
242. Lindsay Wong — NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (Revised annd Expanded Edition)
243. Lindsay Wong — NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (with corrected link)
244. T. A. Noonan — Re: modern review?
245. Geraldine Monk — Re: NOON 6 AVAILABLE

28 AUG 2008

246. Nicholas Piombino — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
247. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
248. Barry Schwabsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
249. George Bowering — Re: NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (Revised annd Expanded Edition)
250. Maria Damon — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
251. Séamas Cain — PHOSPHOR a surrealist luminescence
252. steve russell — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
253. steve russell — Re: Forget Foucault's play things
254. amy king — Re: NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (Revised annd Expanded Edition)
255. Tony Trigilio — Fall '08 Poetry Readings at Columbia College Chicago
256. Robin Hamilton — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
257. Petra Kuppers — disability culture poetry performances in Berkeley, this Saturday and next ...
258. Robin Hamilton — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
259. amy king — TOMORROW NIGHT --  Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich **
260. billy little — hardy
261. David Chirot — insomnia, words that do not survive the world
262. Séamas Cain — NEW TITLES FROM LUNA BISONTE PRODS
263. steve russell — Re: artifice of absorption
264. Adam Good — Email address change
265. Geraldine Monk — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
266. Robin Hamilton — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
267. ALDON L NIELSEN — Memo to Barack Obama
268. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Eleven Eleven issue 5 and submission call for online issue 6

29 AUG 2008

269. David Chirot — Fwd: A New Book from Kaurab: late night correspondence, a book of English po...

270. Nico Vassilakis — Subtext Group Reading 9/3/08
271. Tony Trigilio — Registration discount through Sept. 1, The Beat Generation Symposium at Col...
272. Barbara Jane Reyes — Re: Eleven Eleven issue 5 and submission call for online issue 6
273. cris cheek — Re: Memo to Barack Obama
274. steve russell — poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
275. Maria Damon — Re: Fwd: A New Book from Kaurab: late night correspondence, a book of English...
276. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
277. Murat Nemet-Nejat — The Death of Ilhan Berk (1918-2008)
278. Ruth Lepson — Re: artifice of absorption
279. Peter Quartermain — FW: Rave review of THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS
280. Adam Tobin — Upcoming Events at Unnameable Books (Brooklyn)
281. Jorgensen, Alexander — Visual Poetry (Vispo) Assistance

30 AUG 2008

282. Don Share — Charles Olson audio
283. Charles Alexander — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
284. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
285. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??
286. Mary Kasimor — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
287. tyrone williams — Re: Memo to Barack Obama
288. Adam Tobin — Upcoming Events at Unnameable Books: corrected and summarized 289. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: The Death of Ilhan Berk (1918-2008)
290. tyrone williams — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
291. Barry Schwabsky — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
292. billy little — left standing
293. Ruth Lepson — NOON 6
294. Cassandra Laity — Special Issue of Modernism/Modernity on Decadence and Modernity
295. Barry Schwabsky — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
296. George Bowering — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
297. Don Share — Re: Visual Poetry (Vispo) Assistance
298. David Chirot — in$omnia/poe$y/pro$e --"Bird"Parker & "Edward Said" poem & links for Mahmoud...
299. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: The Death of Ilhan Berk (1918-2008)
300. Geraldine Monk — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
301. Geraldine Monk — Re: Rave review of THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS
302. Alan Sondheim — Entering

31 AUG 2008

303. blacksox — If You are in Florida
304. Dodie Bellamy — Christine Wertheim exhibit opening September 7 at Right Window Gallery
305. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??
306. andrew burke — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
307. Pierre Joris — Re: Memo to Barack Obama
308. David Chirot — Re: Memo to Barack Obama
309. Jennifer Karmin — JOB: Colby-Sawyer College
310. Barry Schwabsky — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
311. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??
312. Mairead Byrne — Re: Visual Poetry (Vispo) Assistance
313. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
314. AWAREing Press — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??
315. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Re: Eleven Eleven issue 5 and submission call for online issue 6
316. amy king — Lots of poets filmed while reading their poems ...
317. Samuel Wharton — sawbuck 2.3
318. Samuel Wharton — sawbuck 2.3, (correct link)
319. Geraldine Monk — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

1. Ismaelia al Sadiq
Re: SHAME TO STONEWALL!
Thu 31 Jul 2008

It occurs to me to say only, from a personal standpoint, that any "reason" - substantial or not - for reducing the number of men and women in the US military, especially with regard to Iraq, would be a positive, insofar as it might help reduce the deaths of my beautiful brothers and sisters at their hands.

A "gay contingent" that might help spread disatisfaction and disorder in the social ranks sufficient to disrupt the ethical corruption of today's new youth in terms of joining up for the Death March of my people has not only my full support, but without doubt the full support of the Muslim community worldwide, which has, I have to say, in spite of statements otherwise by idealistic leaders, never had a problem with homosexuality. In fact, it has always been thought to be one of the prime building blocks of society.

So, the isue for some of us isn't gay men in your military. It is to get your military out of the Middle East. And as this is not happening voluntarily, rest assured that the male youth of Iraq, our glorious freedom fighters, gay, bi-, straight, ambi- and/or whatnot, will be distributing heroin cut with, well, whatever it takes to make the phrase "death from within" come true, in material anaology to their born-again Christian and virtuous, ever-risen Christ.

My question, and that of all Muslims is, how many times can an American foot soldier be born again?

Isma'il

_____
Time for vacation? WIN what you need- enter now!
http://www.gowindowslive.com/summergiveaway/?ocid=tag_jlyhm

↑ Index

2. John Cunningham
Re: Subtext/Seattle - George Bowering & Marion Kimes - 8/6/08
Thu 31 Jul 2008

Just so you're aware, one of the best known and most respected poets to emerge from the TISH group was Daphne Marlatt. The period in question is the 60s, not the 50s. John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Nico Vassilakis
Sent: July 31, 2008 1:59 AM

To: [redacted]
Subject: Subtext/Seattle - George Bowering & Marion Kimes - 8/6/08

Subtext continues its monthly reading series with readings by George Bowering & Marion Kimes at our new home at the Chapel Performance Space on the 6th of August 2008. Donations for admission will be taken at the door on the evening of the performance. The reading starts at 7:30pm.

George Bowering is a prolific Canadian novelist, poet, historian, and biographer. He was born in Penticton, British Columbia, and raised in the nearby town of Oliver, where his father was a high-school chemistry teacher. His most recent books include Baseball Love (Talonbooks, 2006), and Vermeer's Light: Poems 1996-2006.

Bowering is the best-known of a group of young poets including Frank Davey, Fred Wah, Jamie Reid, and David Dawson who were together at the UBC in the 1950s. There they founded the journal Tish. Bowering lives in Vancouver, BC and is Emeritus at Simon Fraser, where he has worked for more than 25 years. He describes himself as a Protestant agnostic. In 2002, Bowering was appointed the first ever Canadian Poet Laureate.

http://www.library.utoronto.ca/canpoetry/bowering/index.htm
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/George_Bowering

Marion Kimes brought her love of the live reading here in 1981. Over the years a fine pile of small-press books & broadsides has accumulated beside a long list of readings, fests & projects. Her books include CROW'S EYES, of multiplication & light (Nine Muses), Whirled, and NAMORATUNG'A (Woodworks). She has been a driving force in Red Sky Theatre for many years.

http://www.ravenchronicles.org/nwwriter/index/kimes/kimes.htm

The future Subtext schedule is:

September 3, 2008: Group Reading: Writing to Point / Writing to Enclave
October 1, 2008: Donato Mancini (Vancouver) & Shin Yu Pai

For info on these & other Subtext events, see our website at http://subtextreadingseries.blogspot.com

More info at Nonsequitur web site - http://nseq.blogspot.com Details on the Chapel at: http://gschapel.blogspot.com

SPECIAL THANKS to NONSEQUITUR for co-sponsoring this event.

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com

Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

3. Ram Devineni

Film selected for Competition at the Venice Film Festival

Thu 31 Jul 2008

Dear Friends:

I am happy to announce that Amir Naderi's film "Vegas: Based on a True Story" has been selected for Competition (Venezia 65) at the 65th Venice Film Festival. The film that Amir, Susan Brennan and I have been working on for several years.

The film is about a working class family living on the fringes of Las Vegas and are tormented by a con-man who has to destroy them in every aspect of their lives. The film stars Mark Greenfield, Nancy La Scala, and Zach Thomas. The festival occurs from August 27th to September 6th 2008.

http://www.labiennale.org/en/cinema/festival/program/en/14372.1.html

The film is co-produced by Rattapallax.

Cheers
Ram Devineni
Rattapallax Films

↑ Index

4. Jennifer Karmin

Otoliths issue 10

Fri 1 Aug 2008

Issue ten of Otoliths has just gone live. Once again, it's full of variety. Poemsâ€”visual, text, concrete & proseâ€”essays, short stories, photography, an interview, paintings both digital & manual, plus a few things that defy categorization

http://the-otolith.blogspot.com

Included is work by:

Barry Schwabsky, Geof Huth, joanne burns, nick-e melville, Robert Gauldie, Thomas Fink, Thomas Fink & Maya Diablo Mason, Bob Grumman, Bill Drennan,

Kristen Orser, Obodadimma Oha, Reed Altemus, Raymond Farr, Christopher

Major, Mary Ellen Derwis, Douglas Barbour & Sheila E. Murphy, Felino

Soriano, Matthew Stolte, Anne Gorrick, Caleb Puckett, Philip Byron Oakes, David-Baptiste Chirot, Sandy McIntosh, Jeff Harrison, Robert Lee Brewer, Ashley Capes, Angela Genusa, Jukka-Pekka Kervinen, Jukka-Pekka Kervinen & John M. Bennett, Baron & John M. Bennett, Sheila E. Murphy & John M. Bennett, John M. Bennett, Luis Cuauhtemoc Berriozabal, Clint Frakes, Charles Freeland, Randy Thurman, Alexander Jorgensen, Ryan B. Richey, Ray Craig, Julian Jason Haladyn, Jennifer Karmin, Rebecca Eddy, Martin Edmond, MTC Cronin & Peter Boyle, Alan Ramon Clinton, Manas Bhattacharya, Tom Hibbard, Bobbi Lurie, Cecelia Chapman, Andrew Topel, Matthew Klane, Mark DuCharme, Laura Goldstein, Michelle Detorie, Joe Balaz, Paul Siegell, Kate Schapira, Vincent Ponka, m.R. koppp', Tom Beckett, and Nico Vassilakis.
The cover image is by Angela Genusa.
The closing date for submissions for issue eleven is 28 October, 2008.

↑ Index

5. ART ELECTRONICS
Call for Entries - Poetry Supermarket
Fri 1 Aug 2008

Call for entries for next Caterina Davinio's on line-off line itinerant global project: POETRY SUPERMARKET. Sound/video/performance/digital images/photography on topic "goods, supermarket, hypermarket". How the relation art/market art/publicity has changed? Could exist solidarity in the global market? Are hypermarkets the new cathedrals of our times? + all what could refer to goods, prices, crisis, development of the global market, to the image of man and woman in the commercial communication, and whatever you could imagine on the topic of thousands of goods that daily cross our lives.

The topic market/goods should be focalized in an ironic / surreal / game way. Possible mixing digital images/text.
We particularly encourage participation of women and young artists/curators.

The exhibition is organized in three sections:
- historical section
- emerging artists (particularly focalized on new media/poetry/performance)
- young artists (max 30 years old).

Submissions: - To submit images, poems: send attached file to [redacted] (only jpg files, max 5 files, e-mail totally max 500 KB) + attached biography. - To submit video/sound works: max 5' - Send the link (or DVD data file mpeg, WMV, AVI, for Windows max 30 MB) + attached biography. - To submit objects/small sculptures: send the photography of the object (jpg max 100 KB).

PLEASE, NOTE: participation is free. Sent material will not be returned. Poetry Supermarket is an experimental project based on a small budget, that unfortunately makes impossible to pay fees or refund for participating artists. Received files, if selected, will be diffused in the itinerant exhibitions on line+real places. To send materials means to agree to their diffusion in "Poetry Supermarket" itinerant project as printing, broadcasting, catalogues / books, every kind of printing and publishing on line/off line related to the project "Poetry Supermarket", whithout any compensation, fee or refund for the involved authors/curators.

DEAD LINE SEPTEMBER 30 2008.
For further info write to the curator Caterina Davinio [redacted]

We are happy of your participation and collaboration.
Feel free to forward this call to every one who could be interested.
Best regards from Italy
Karenina.it Staff
::

Karenina.it Ten Years
The first Net-Poetry Project on line
1998 - 2008

Poetry in Phatic Function
::
Contact: Art Electronics Italia
Via Sassi 10 - 23900 Lecco (LC) Italia
T: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]
W: http://xoomer.alice.it/cprezi/caterinadav.html
Press: Art Electronics [redacted]

↑ Index

6. Charles Alexander
chax press 200 x 20
Fri 1 Aug 2008

Dear Friends,

Today, August 1, is Chax Press's 24th birthday! We have also just moved again.

Perhaps the best thing about moving is that we have moved into a studio with room to pursue the work we were meant to do. Chax Press is back to printing handmade works. We have two projects before us. One is the first letterpress book we have made in two years, and it will be the first widely affordable letterpress book we have made since the mid-1990s. I sincerely hope it will mark a return to making the kind of book that is a fine art work that is also accessible to a good number of literary readers.

The letterpress book is Salt, My Love: A Ballad, by Patrick Pritchett. Patrick is the author of our earlier trade paperback book, Burn: A Doxology for Joan of Arc. After years in Boulder, where he was an active member of local and national/international poetry communities, he is currently an adjunct faculty member at Harvard.

The other work we are printing coincides with a conference we are sponsoring in early October titled Charles Olson: Language as Physical Fact. As a part of the conference we are printing, framing, and displaying handprinted broadsides of ten of the most visual of Olson's famed Maximus Poems, with permission of the University of California Press and the estate of Charles Olson. This display, along with other events of October 10-11, will constitute the most ambitious public programming Chax Press has yet undertaken. The conference will feature local and visiting poets, including Myung Mi Kim, Anne Waldman, Cole Swensen, Steve McCaffery, Barbara Henning, and Tenney Nathanson.

To accomplish the return to letterpress printing and to realize the conference, we need your help. Letterpress papers, including handmade papers, are expensive. The letterpress book is not funded by any grants or major gifts. The Olson conference has obtained support from the Arizona Commission on the Arts and the Tucson Pima Arts Council. However, those grants require us to raise our own matching funds to fulfill the amounts needed to support the conference.

In the past several years we have asked donors for special support on occasion, and for regular annual contributions once per year. In doing so, we have concentrated on donors who could give $50, $100, and more. We still will mount an annual campaign in the fall of 2008. But right now, for current purposes, we want to give more people the opportunity to support these important, community-minded literary and artistic programs. We are seeking 200 donors who will each give us just $20. Please be one of these donors, one of those who make fine literature and book arts work available to the public in creative ways. Chax Press is an IRS-approved 501(c)(3) charitable organization, and your contribution is tax deductible.

Today, please, write a check for $20 and send it to us at our new address: 411 N 7th Ave, Tucson, Arizona 85705-8332. If you can't afford $20, send $10 or $5.

If you have the funds and want to give more (to take the place of those who can’t give), then by all means give a larger amount of your choice.

You may also choose to securely donate the amount of your choice online through paypal by visiting the donations page on our new web site donations page.

$20 spent in another way might mean one third of a tank of gas, or five or six coffee drinks. If spent as a contribution to Chax Press it means the chance to support some of the finest literature and book arts being presented anywhere, and to contribute to the cultural and intellectual life of Tucson and the nation.

Please help us now.

Thank you,

Charles Alexander
Executive Director
Chax Press

Chax Press Board Members:
Ken Bacher
Laynie Browne
Susan Dick
Jesus Garcia
Barbara Henning
Cynthia Hogue
Hank Lazer
Tony Luebbermann
Cynthia Miller
Heather Nagami
Mridul Nan
Tenney Nathanson
Charles Alexander

Chax Press web site donations page

charles alexander
chax press
[redacted]
411 N 7th ave, suite 103
tucson arizona 85705
[redacted]

↑ Index

7. amy king

 Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich **

Fri 1 Aug 2008

The Stain of Poetry Presents

August 29th @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg,
Brooklyn

 Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich **

~~~

Michael Ball grew up in North Carolina & spent most of his adult life in Brooklyn.
He currently lives in Baltimore where he curates & hosts the i.e. reading series.

~~~

Joel Chace has published poetry and prose poetry in print and electronic magazines such as 6ix, Tomorrow, Lost and Found Times, Coracle, xStream, Three Candles, 2River View, Joey & the Black Boots, Recursive Angel, and Veer. He has published more than a dozen print and electronic collections. New from BlazeVox Books is CLEANING THE MIRROR: NEW AND SELECTED POEMS, and from Paper Kite Press, MATTER NO MATTER, another full-length collection. For many years, Chace has been Poetry Editor for the experimental electronic magazine 5_Trope. Amphibian Productions theater company did a staged reading of his play TRIPTYCH, at the Arclight Theatre, on the Upper West Side of Manhattan, Spring, 2005.

~~~

valzhyna mort born in minsk, belarus. second book of poetry “factory of tears” came out in april 2008 from copper canyon press, usa.
(the first one was published in minsk in 2005 and called “i’m as thin as your eyelashes”). previously was a writer-in-residence at several international locations, also received two international poetry prizes. besides the united states, “factory of tears” was published in sweden and will come out in 2009 in germany. apart from poetry, valzhyna mort runs a black metal music label.

~~~

Anna Moschovakis is the author of a book of poems,_I Have Not Been Able to Get Through to Everyone_, and of several chapbooks, including most recently

No Medea , a Tinyside from Big Game Books. She is also a translator of French poetry and prose and an editor at Ugly Duckling Presse.

~~~

Ryan Murphy is the author of Down With the Ship from Otis Books/Seismicity Editions. He has received awards from Chelsea magazine and the Aldrich Museum of Contemporary Art, as well as a grant from the Fund for Poetry. He lives in New York.

~~~

Matvei Yankelevich edited and translated TODAY I WROTE NOTHING: THE SELECTED WRITINGS OF DANIIL KHARMS (Overlook, 2007). He is a co-translator of OBERIU: AN ANTHOLOGY OF RUSSIAN ABSURDISM (2006). His translation of the Vladimir Mayakovsky's poem "Cloud in Pants" appears in NIGHT WRAPS THE SKY: WRITINGS BY AND ABOUT MAYAKOVSKY (Farrar, Strauss & Giroux, 2008). He is the author of a long poem, THE PRESENT WORK (Palm Press, 2006) and his writing has appeared in Fence, Open City, and many other literary journals. He teaches Russian Literature at Hunter College in New York City and edits the Eastern European Poets Series at Ugly Duckling Presse in Brooklyn.

~~~

stain

766 grand street

brooklyn, ny 11211

(L train to Grand Street,

1 block west)

718/[redacted]

open daily @ 5 p.m.

~~~~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic

~~~~

http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/2008/07/03/friday-august-29-2008-700-pm/

http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/2008/07/03/friday-august-29-2008-700-pm/
~~~~

http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/2008/07/03/friday-august-29-2008-700-pm/

Schedule here: http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/

_____

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

8. Justin Katko
New Critical Documents
Fri 1 Aug 2008

New Critical Documents

Do crease fake a road map to bead this thin portent of a mass itch, but first choose a humour to spit back or sap out. Critical Documents has been waiting for this coordinated levitation, this very single moment, to announce to you its recent publications. They are as to the Quadrant and the 1 hovering thru't.

So be now exposed to four new books by England-based poets: Sara Crangle, Francis Crot, Frances Kruk, and Tom Raworth. And be too now exposed to the fourth issue of Plantarchy -- which features almost everyone, but especially not a particular person. Some of this constellation has been convecting for months – even years – while some of it like suddenly shined through the scabbard in an alpha channel blitz crag. All the books are hand-made. Here they are listed:

- -

wild ascending lisp
by Sara Crangle
--> http://plantarchy.us/wal.html

+ Sara Crangle's new book is a distorted mirror, poem-by-poem, of Song of Myself. It reboots that landmark with the shock of advance, while it moonlights a hyper-diachronic evacuation of Whitman's soundscape, engendered by his ear and dated by his tongue. Each copy be smeared with cold March grass on some over-the-counter blotter paper that floated in on these beards' foam. Get it while it's brought.

- -

The Seven Curses: Xena Warrior Princess
by Francis Crot
--> http://plantarchy.us/seven-curses.html

+ As the bubble clicks, Stephen Rodefer writes that he hasn't seen "the post mediaeval allegory of love, deception, battle and fair victory ... so spectacularly disclosed and written", as in Francis Crot's The Seven Curses, a Xena fan-fiction with annotations by Nrou Mrobaak and illustrations by various hands. Scan the world wide web for a dikey detourned infomercial, coming intensely soon.

- -

A Discourse on Vegetation & Motion
by Frances Kruk
--> http://plantarchy.us/a-discourse.html

+ The Discourse is a tiny book holding an anaphoric long poem. With three different color spines like rinds on a long aphid's finger, today, in a spray throttle, everyone buys this. Today.

- -

Let Baby Fall
by Tom Raworth
--> http://plantarchy.us/let-baby-fall.html

+ This pamphlet of new poems by Tom Raworth bounced out of a freshly stalled rune at the Poetry of the 70s Conference in Orono Maine. If you like blinking less boulders out of a flaming channel oven, consider reserving your copy of the second edition before the shivering dogs eat the gloo, k?

- -

Plantarchy 4
various contributors
--> http://plantarchy.us/Plantarchy_4.html

+ The fourth issue of the journal Plantarchy is half poetry and half criticism, with poetry by Tim Atkins, Caroline Bergvall (in CMYK), Sean Bonney, Frances Kruk, Kirsten Lavers, Peter Manson, Camille PB, Linda Russo, Rachel Smith, Jefferson Toal, Keith Tuma (with Abby Trenaman and cris cheek), and Catherine Wagner. Keston Sutherland on Vizpo. Hank Sotto interviews Helen Bridwell. Allen Fisher's essay iDamage. Susan M. Schultz on Donald Rumsfeld. Piers

Hugill on cris cheek. John Bradley interviews Kent Johnson. An email from -------. A drawing by Stephen Perkins. Cover by 405-12-3415.

- -

These books and a few more can be ordered online at http://plantarchy.us, or by mail from the address below (good through next summer). Donations in support of Critical Documents are welcome.

Critical Documents
Editor: Justin Katko
Box 1923, Literary Arts
Brown University
Providence, RI 02912 USA

↑ Index

9. Joel Weishaus
"Reality Too" July Blog
Fri 1 Aug 2008

Here is the July edition of "Reality Too":
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/blog/July.htm

Introduction:
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/blog/intro.htm

Designed for MS Explorer; Text Size: Medium; 1024X768 screen resolution.

-Joel

_____

Joel Weishaus
Research Faculty
Department of English
Portland State University
Portland, Oregon
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282

↑ Index

10. jessica beard
poetry and archives
Fri 1 Aug 2008

I think that Page duBois' book on Sappho called Sappho is Burning is an incredible look at both poetry and the archive. The methodology she proposes is very interesting...

and of course susan's work (melville's marginalia!) and marta werner's work with dickinson, too.

****

Jessica Beard
[redacted]
UCSC Literature Department
Graduate Student
****

chaos cast cold intellect back (susan howe)

↑ Index

11. Stephen Vincent

Infectious hedonism, eatism, NYism

Fri 1 Aug 2008

---

http://brandonbrown.blogspot.com/

Nothing can quite compare here with Brandon Brown - who leaves the gourmet underloins of San Francisco to go, literally, eat up New York City for an entire weekend - O'Hara's "personism" turned into "eatism', a 'hedonism' on the run. It's really a non-stop practically sleepless literary tour de force performed/lived among poets - indeed they are perhaps talking about 'lit' or music - but it's really all liquid and bites. An amazing blast of consumptual, consumptious energy. Maybe it's a poem, or anti-poem in disguise! (I know Brandon is a tall, wide guy - but that must have some plane ride going home!)

If summer lethargy has you down, go there!

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
Where there are some recent entries of hot new grafitti about Dolores Park and Lutheran Church.

↑ Index

12. Camille Martin

new collages by Camille Martin

Sat 2 Aug 2008

Recently added to my website:

http://camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_8

Camille

↑ Index

13. John Cunningham
tracking down book for review
Sat 2 Aug 2008

Can anyone advise where I can obtain a copy of 'The Grand Piano: An Experiment in Collective Autobiography, San Francisco, 1975-1980' for review purposes. John Cunningham

↑ Index

14. David Chirot
REPUGNO SELECTS Issue No. 1 is Here
Sat 2 Aug 2008

REPUGNO SELECTS Issue No. 1<http://repugnoselects.blogspot.com/2008/08/repugno-selects-issue-no-1.html>
WELCOME TO THE 1st ISSUE OF THIS MAGAZINE.

Issue No.1 contains (in this order)
troylloyd
Scott MacLeod
James Sanders
David-Baptiste Chirot
Author Links, &
Issue No.2's CALL FOR WORK

EXCERPTED FROM THE ON SITE DESCRIPTION:

IMPORTANT: This magazine is for documenting poetic work in the public sphere or work given away/left in public. I do not wish to see page-based work for the most part - exceptions are possible - but not that easy to imagine * VISUAL POETRY for me has to connect to text, readability is not necessary, but language is required (no matter how degraded). * ARTFULNESS I appreciate careful technique, a painterly eye, work that doesn't sacrifice some kind of discipline, but, I also thrive on accidents. * THE HAND IN THE WORK. So much work is computer-based now that I find myself liking the handmade or hand-assisted works, they're consistently more real for me. * B/W-ish i tend in the direction of black and white and appreciate those who can use just enough color or who let the colors of the materials carry the weight. Monochromes. Sepia. A starkness that has impact.

This is a very welcome & exciting & refreshingly unusual Visual Poetry Journal, as it is interested in work made by hand and also work AS IT EXISTS IN THE WORLD.

One of the paradoxes of the Internet is that is an excellent means by which to "bring to light" works which point one back to the WORLD, that Time & War Torn & Worn site/sight/cite which all too often vanishes in Word, Page & Screen.

The disintegrating order of things, "the world as we see it is passing," calls out for not simply "being in touch," but actual touch, the real meaning of Haptic.

Works exist in the public sphere in disintegrations from the conformities of "signage," and the forms of tourism & consumerism it engenders. Yet, rather than seeing and working with the teeming dilapidation of languages which are actively generating emerging colors, lines, sounds, the eyes trained by signages remain within their "sphere of influence." Aestheticized, these "signages" become "seen as art," because they are "already framed as art" and so one "discovers" one's immediate environment as having the same "art" qualities as "photos in magazines," ads themsemselves modeled on "art" in "art photos" and paintings. Making the circuit of one's neighborhood, one makes a circuit of "art images," happily noticing how much like other "art" which one has seen they indeed are. To discover one lives in a a magazine/gallery world makes one feel one is indeed leading an aethetic existence. Who knows, perhaps instead of being an "artist," one is actaully becoming an "art object" one's self, and so is begining to accrue value by the moment. Does it not seem at times that one is indeed moving along among various monuments, statues, plaques which have come to occupy the place of good old so-and-so? Meanwhile, the dirty old world which is falling apart all around one, and in that falling apart is emerging each instant as a part of something other than it just was--that dirty ceaselessly teeming old world is going unseen, even though its particles begin to dirty the surfaces of the monuments and statues. To me, what makes Repugno so exciting and challenging to go ever farther into these particles that are a part of and not apart from one's existence, continually touching one with a call to touch back and with it in response, in collaboartion--is that it is aware of and interested in the continually generative emergence of distintegrations, the disintegrations into emergences, of negentropy and working with negentropy in collaboration.

To me, a very happy event! And my deep Thanks!--db Chirot "La Mano de l'Ojo, l'Ojo de la Mano"

↑ Index

15. Rob McLennan
above/ground press 15th anniversary reading!
Sat 2 Aug 2008

---

the small press action network - ottawa (span-o) and The Ottawa Art Gallery Present:

The Factory Reading Series
Thursday, August 14; doors 7pm, readings 7:30 lovingly hosted by rob mclennan

> celebrating fifteen long years of above/ground press > publisher of over five hundred items since 1993, including > poetry chapbooks, journals, broadsides & other ephemera > edited & published by rob mclennan with readings/chapbook launches by:

> Amanda Earl (Ottawa)
> launching "The Sad Phoenician's Other Woman" > Pearl Pirie (Ottawa)
> launching "the oath in the boathouse"

The Ottawa Art Gallery, Arts Court, 2 Daly Avenue, Ottawa

author bios:

Pearl Pirie has been published in Womb, 1cent, ottawater 4.0, Best of MiPo Cafe Cafe, by Pooka Press and at culturalshifts.com. Her poetry is generally forthcoming, except when it isn't. She blogs. the oath in the boathouse (above/ground press) is her 6th chapbook, the 1st not self-published.

http://aboveground press.blogspot.com/2008/03/new-from-aboveground-press.html

Amanda Earl's poetry is forthcoming in Rampike, The New Chief Tongue and Van Gogh's Ear, and recently appeared in the above/ground press fiction anthology Departures. above/ground press published her second chapbook Eleanor in 2007. Her poetry has also been recently featured in ottawater.com, Ditchpoetry.com and Unlikelystories.org and published by Vancouver's pooka press, Ottawa's Peter F. Yacht Club and in Calgary's Holy Beep! Amanda is the managing editor of Bywords.ca and the Bywords Quarterly Journal. You can read about Ottawa's literary shenanigans on her blog: amandaearl.blogspot.com. She will be launching her recent above/ground press publication, The Sad Phoenician's Other Woman.

http://aboveground press.blogspot.com/2008/03/new-from-aboveground-press_08.html

the small press action network - ottawa (cleaning out yr literary clogssince 1996); thanks to The Ottawa Art Gallery for providing space and much love.

for more information, contact rob mclennan @ [redacted] or check out http://www.ottawaartgallery.ca/home-en.php for more information on above/ground press, check out www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...13th poetry coll'n - The Ottawa City Project ...novel - white
www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

16. Dana Teen Lomax

Karmin, Lomax, and Rosenthal at Books & Bookshelves 8/7/08

Sun 3 Aug 2008

BOOKS & BOOKSHELVES
presents

JENNIFER KARMIN
DANA TEEN LOMAX
SARAH ROSENTHAL

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7
7:30pm

99 SANCHEZ STREET
between 14th St & Duboce Ave
in San Francisco

JENNIFER KARMIN curates the Red Rover reading series and is a founding member of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented in national festivals, on city streets, and at artist-run spaces such as the Urban Institute for Contemporary Arts, Woodland Pattern Book Center, and Betalevel. She teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the Chicago Public Schools. Recent poems are published in Bird Dog, MoonLit, Womb, Seven Corners, Milk Magazine, and the anthologies A Sing Economy (Flim Forum Press, 2008), The City Visible: Chicago Poetry for the New Century (Cracked Slab Books, 2007), and Growing Up Girl: An Anthology of Voices from Marginalized Spaces (GirlChild Press, 2006).

DANA TEEN LOMAX is the author of Curren¢y (Palm Press, 2006), Room (a+bend press, 1999), and the contributing co-editor of Letters To Poets, Conversations About Poetics, Politics and Community (Saturnalia Books, 2008). Her writing has been published in numerous journals and magazines, including Jacket, The Bay Poetics Anthology, Tripwire, Moria, sonaweb, Dusie, mem, and many others. She is presently working on Q, “home movies” about raising a daughter on prison grounds and a poetry manuscript entitled Shhh! Lullabies for a Tired Nation. She works as the Interim Director of Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center in San Francisco, teaches writing at San Francisco State University and the University of San Francisco, and lives in northern California with her family.

SARAH ROSENTHAL is the author of How I Wrote This Story (Margin to Margin, 2001), sitings (a+bend, 2000), and not-chicago (Melodeon, 1998). Her poems, stories, reviews, essays, and interviews have appeared in numerous journals including How(2), Bird Dog, Fence, Lungfull, Denver Quarterly, and Boston Review. Her poetry has been anthologized in Bay Poetics (Faux Press, 2006), The Other Side of the Postcard (City Lights, 2005), and hinge (Crack Press, 2002). She is the recipient of the Leo Litwak Fiction Award, the Primavera Fiction Prize, and a Vermont Studio Center Artist’s Grant. She recently edited a collection of interviews with Bay Area avant-garde writers, A Community Writing Itself. She writes curricula for the Developmental Studies Center, a nonprofit educational publishing house.

_____ Got Game? Win Prizes in the Windows Live Hotmail Mobile Summer Games Trivia Contest http://www.gowindowslive.com/summergames?ocid=TXT_TAGHM

↑ Index

17. Mathias Svalina

Julie Doxsee's Undersleep Available & Reading Tour

Sun 3 Aug 2008

Hello All,

Julie Doxsee's debut book, Undersleep, is available from Octopus Books: www.octopusbooks.net She currently lives in Istanbul but will be in America for a week, giving readings along the east coast: New York, DC, Philadelphia, Providence, Chapel Hill, Richmond, Amherst & Boston. Hope to see you at one of the readings!

Praise for Undersleep:

Spare, bright, and sharp these poems spark, tossing up unexpected words, making strange connections, inventing vocabulary, and in general, cracking open the natural world and letting us watch it tick. Intimate and worldly at the same time, Julie Doxsee is a surprising and deeply gifted poet, and this, her first book, glows in the dark. —Cole Swensen

These are the secret nighttime children's tales that parents aren't allowed to read, the winking sparks sent up from the bonfire. They flicker into a vast vaulted space where all is black around. Here, the body of language is stripped of its flesh. And the poem-bones begin to dance—the joints of human language and its articulations. It's a little bit scary. —Eleni Sikelianos

The debut full-length poetry collection by author Julie Doxsee, Undersleep features a fluidly brief economy of words that nonetheless evoke ripples from the reader's unconsciousness. Touched with the emotional longing, Undersleep shines with the brilliant promise of a half-formed dream. "Peripheral": Paradise is not a thing to keep. / Shadows are little nighttimes / for pronouncing / night's hymn. // Night's hymn / cannot contain / doses of / Paradise. Sleep / is a movement through not. // Undersleep thickens want as it prods. / Make the proper substitutions above. —Midwest Book Review

Bio: Julie Doxsee, born in London, Ontario is a professor of writing and literature at Koç University in Istanbul, Turkey. Her poems have appeared recently in over thirty-five national and international journals, including Aufgabe, Fourteen Hills, and Tarpaulin Sky. Forthcoming publications include the book Objects for a Fog Death (Black Ocean, 2008/2009) and two chapbooks: You Will Build a City Out of Rags (Whole Coconut 2007) and New Body a Seafloor Body (Seeing Eye Books 2008). The chapbooks The Knife-Grasses (Octopus Books), and Fog Quartets (horse less press) and her debut book Undersleep (Octopus Books 2008) are now available.

Reading Dates

Saturday, August 9th 6pm
Melville House
145 Plymouth Street
Brooklyn, NY 11201
Reading with Matvei Yankelevich
& X-ing Press poets Justin Talyor & Jeremy Schmall

Sunday August 10th 2pm
Chop Suey Books
1317 West Cary St
Richmond, VA 23220
Reading with Sommer Browning, Julia Cohen & Mathias Svalina

Monday August 11th 7pm
Southern Rail
201-C East Main Street
Carrboro, North Carolina
Reading with Mathias Svalina

Tuesday August 12th 6pm
Robins Bookstore
108 S 13th St
Philadelphia, PA
Reading with Mathias Svalina

Wednesday, August 13th 7:30pm
Washington Literary Salon
email for details: [redacted]
Washington, DC
Reading with Mathias Svalina

Thursday, August 14th 7pm
Providence, RI
Reading with Thibault Raoult & Mathias Svalina

Friday, August 15th 8pm
Amherst Books
8 Main Street
Amherst, MA
Reading with Betrsy Wheeler & Mathias Svalina

Saturday, August 16th 7pm
Brookline Bookstore
279 Harvard Street
Brookline, MA
Reading with Janaka Stucky, Julia Cohen & Mathias Svalina

↑ Index

18. Audrey Berry
Bloomington Indiana
Sun 3 Aug 2008

I will be in Indiana for a week Aug 4-11..any poetry readings, events, bookstores, places of interest, shows I should check out? Anyone on this list around U Indiana Bloomington that week?

↑ Index

19. Susan Webster Schultz
PRE-PUBLICATION TINFISH SALE--AND MORE!
Sun 3 Aug 2008

Dear friends:

Craig Santos Perez's book, _from unincorporated territory_, has gone to the printer. It's a marvelous book about Guam, about history, about languages, about colonialisms, about family. For more, please see here:

http://tinfishpress.com/books.html

The book will retail for $15; we offer a pre-publication price of $10 until September 1. You can pay via our website, under "purchase" and number 54, which is Craig's book, as it's listed on the 2checkout.com page.

In addition, we offer our three full-length books of 2008 for $35.00.
That will get you Meg Withers's
A Communion of Saints, Hazel Smith's _The Erotics of Geography_ and Craig's new one, as well.
That's #55 on the 2checkout list.

If you do not want to use the website, please send checks to Tinfish Press, 47-728 Hui Kelu Street #9,
Kane`ohe, HI 96744.

Also note that we have recently done a second edition of Lisa Kanae's important chapbook, _Sista Tongue_ and are about to reprint Barbara Jane Reyes's _Poeta en San Francisco_.

We could use some cash flow. You could use some damn good reading. So please support Tinfish Press!

http://tinfishpress.com

aloha, Susan M. Schultz
Editor

↑ Index

20. David Kirschenbaum
Exhibit at Boog Fest's Small, Small Press Fair
Mon 4 Aug 2008

please forward

Exhibit at Boog City's 5th Annual Small, Small Press Fair
(with Indie Records and Crafts, too)

Sat. Sept. 20, 11:00 a.m.-8:00 p.m.

at day 3 of the 2nd annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival (complete fest info below)

Cakeshop
152 Ludlow St.
NYC

$15 for a table

The first 2.5 hours, 11:00 a.m.-1:30 p.m. will feature performances by authors from the tabling presses (exact amount of time per press TBD when the number of exhibiting presses is set)

Door charge for attendees is $5

email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664)
to reserve your table today

Featuring nonstop performances throughout the day with readings from

Jen Benka
Todd Colby
Ryan Eckes
Elise Ficarra
Eric Gelsinger
Stephanie Gray
David Hadbawnik
Bill Kushner
Douglas Manson
Kristianne Meal
Sharon Mesmer
Carol Mirakove
Kathryn Pringle
Maureen Thorson

and music from

A Brief View of the Hudson
Double Deuce
Heart Parts
Phoebe Kreutz

And here's what's happening the other three days of the festival:

Thurs. 9/18, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W.20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

minor/american (Durham, N.C.)

Elise Ficarra and Kathryn Pringle, eds.

With readings from minor/american authors and a musical performance

Fri. 9/19, 7:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m., free with a two-drink minimum

Sidewalk Café
94 Ave. A
NYC

Readings from

Jim Behrle
Bob Holman
Gillian McCain
Daniel Nester
Arlo Quint

Poets' Theater performances curated by Rodrigo Toscano

For its 20th anniversary
Lou Reed's New York album performed live by

Babs Soft
Liv Carrow
Dead Rabbit
Dibson T. Hoffweiler and Preston Spurlock
Prewar Yardsale
Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour
Wakey Wakey

and solo sets from

Dead Rabbit
Dibson T. Hoffweiler
Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour

Sat. 9/20
Cakeshop

(see above)

Sun. 9/21, 1:00 p.m.-7:30 p.m., free

Unnameable Books
456 Bergen St.
Brooklyn

Ana Bo¾ièeviæ
Lee Ann Brown
Julia Cohen
John Coletti
Corrine Fitzpatrick
Edward Foster
Rachel Levitsky
Eileen Myles
Simon Pettet
Nick Piombino
Kyle Schlesinger
Stacy Szymaszek

Edward Foster and Simon Pettet in conversation

with music from

Yoko Kikuchi

and a panel on "Action Poets" curated and moderated by Kristin Prevallet. This will be a forum for people to discuss intervention, performance, conceptual street agitations, and more.

Hosted by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum
For more info: 212-842-BOOG (2664) * [redacted]

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

21. Tarpaulin Sky Press

Bhanu Kapil's Shiny New Tarpaulin Sky

Mon 4 Aug 2008

Tarpaulin Sky Issue #14 Summer 08
http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Summer08/index.html

Guest edited by Bhanu Kapil

Featuring new texts by Chris Abani, Dodie Bellamy, Lisa Birman, Melissa Buzzeo, Amy Catanzano, Amber DiPietra, Dolores Dorantes, Elena Georgiou, Alan Gilbert, Renee Gladman, Brenda Iijima, Bill Luoma, Laura Mullen, Michelle Naka Pierce, Deborah Richards, Christine Wertheim, and Hazel White

With cover art by Rohini Kapil, a cartoon by Isaac Currie, art by Susan McCann, vispo by Catherine Bergvall, and interview with Michelle Naka Pierce

↑ Index

22. Sarah Sarai

hAve You Been Married, the Sister asK in Obsequious Riot/Other Rooms Press; 3 in Terrain.org

Mon 4 Aug 2008

In Obsequious Riot/Other Rooms Press: hAve You Been Married, the Sister asK http://otherroomspress.blogspot.com/ or (direct) http://otherroomspress.blogspot.com/search?updated-max=2008-06-27T14%3A11%3A00-07%3A00&max-results=1

In Terrain.org:
Incorporeal, Remorse & Birth Is the Last Exit
http://terrain.org/poetry/22/sarai.htm

{my work}

Thanks,
Sarah Sarai

www.myspace.com/sarahsarai

↑ Index

23. Michael Kelleher

Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 08.04.08-08.10.08

Mon 4 Aug 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
08.04.08-08.10.08

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE GOING FAST!!

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Sri Lanka/Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane Satrapi, Iran/France, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

WE ARE ALREADY 90% SOLD OUT FOR NEXT SEASON.

We expect to sell out next season by subscription. If we do not, tickets for individual events will go on sale September 1.

EVENTS THIS WEEK

08.06.08

Just Buffalo/Center for Inquiry Literary CafÇ
Reading featuring Marge Merrill and Trudy Stern
Wednesday, August 6, 7:30 p.m.
Center for Inquiry
1310 Sweet Home Road, Amherst

08.07.08

Talking Leaves?Books
Pat Lingenfelter
Talk/Book Signing for, For Raymond: A Sister?s Memoir
Thursday, August 7, 6:30 p.m.
Talking Leaves?Books, 3158 Main St.

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can now subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

24. Small Press Traffic

Small Press Traffic's Position Announcement for an Executive Director

Mon 4 Aug 2008

POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT:
Executive Director for Small Press Traffic

Small Press Traffic announces a call for applications for the position of Executive Director, to begin employment on January 1, 2009.

Since 1974, Small Press Traffic has been at the heart of the San Francisco Bay Area's innovative writing communities, bringing together a diverse constituency of independent readers, writers, and independent presses through our influential reading series, poets theater festivals, conferences, and publications.

Graciously housed at the California College of the Arts, we remain autonomous, and thus depend upon outside funding for our operating expenses. Currently, we are looking for a highly skilled and creative Executive Director to provide both artistic vision and financial leadership.

The Executive Director at Small Press Traffic serves as both the Artistic and Financial Manager for the organization. S/he ensures that (a) the overall quality and diversity of programming is consistent with Small Press Traffic's history and mission and (b) that the organization conducts its community and financial affairs in a professional and timely manner. Areas of responsibility include, but are not limited to: event programming, budget and finance, fundraising, and public relations. Above all, the Executive Director serves as the public face of the organization, and is responsible for helping shape the vision and direction of Small Press Traffic, as well as being open and responsive to our dynamic and diverse communities of writers, readers, and audience members.

Programming: The Executive Director, in consultation with the Board of Directors, oversees the planning and development of Small Press Traffic's artistic program, which includes live literary events, fundraisers, the website, archives, publications, and any other forms of literary presentation and preservation.

Fundraising: The Executive Director initiates and coordinates Small Press Traffic's fundraising efforts. These efforts include submitting grant applications to government and private funding agencies, meeting and corresponding with potential funders, cultivating individual members and donors, planning and hosting benefit events, assisting the Board of Directors with its fundraising initiatives, submitting reports and payment requests to individuals and agencies, and pursuing new fundraising opportunities.

Public Relations: Small Press Traffic is a 34-year old organization with a reputation for offering high-quality programming that represents its commitment to a culturally diverse avant-garde. It is important that Small Press Traffic maintains good working relationships with writers, artists, arts and literary organizations, funding and government agencies, the press, and other groups and organizations connected with the Bay Area arts and literary communities.

It is also crucial for the Executive Director to be able to maintain a balance between her/his curatorial visions and the desires of our audiences, and to be able to work constructively with the Board and the wider Small Press Traffic constituency to continue to uphold and extend our mission.

Budget and Finance: The Executive Director, in consultation with the Board, plans and manages Small Press Traffic's annual operating budget. S/he is responsible for ensuring vendors are paid in a timely manner, that accurate financial and fiduciary records are kept, and that actual expenses do not exceed those proposed in the annual operating budget. The Executive Director is also responsible for oversight of interns and volunteers, as well as outside contractors (such as designers, accountants, etc.).

Compensation: $27,000 annual salary. While the workload can vary widely, depending on fundraising cycles and event schedules, the position typically requires an average of twenty-five (25) hours per week. The position comes with an initial 18-month contract, followed by one-year renewable contract(s), with annual evaluation process. Benefits are contingent on available funding.

Position begins January 1, 2009. To apply, please send CV, cover letter, and three letters of recommendation to:

Small Press Traffic
California College of the Arts
1111 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107

Applications must be postmarked no later than September 15, 2008. Electronic applications are discouraged, though applicants are welcome to email to confirm receipt of mailed applications.

Small Press Traffic is an equal opportunity employer. Women, people of color, disabled, and LGBTQ persons are encouraged to apply.

www.sptraffic.org

[redacted]

Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]

http://www.sptraffic.org

www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com

↑ Index

25. Country Valley

New poetry from Country Valley Press

Tue 5 Aug 2008

NEW from Country Valley Press:

Empty Hands Broadside #12, Charles Belbin, DUST ON OUR SHOES

Broadsides are now available on a subscription basis. For $11 a year subscribers will receive 8 unsigned broadsides, postpaid. $15 for overseas subscribers. Single issues are $1/$3 signed. Please send checks/money orders payable to "Country Valley Press".

2008 EH Broadsides

#9, David Gianinni, LOW-TIDE CARDS
#10, Charlie Mehrhoff, NOTHING EXISTS
#11, Jeffery Beam, THE GREEN MAN'S MAN

CVP Chapbooks

Life's Little Day by Bob Arnold.
Limited edition Japanese style wraps, $15

One Dozen Portions by Hank Lazer
Limited sewn chapbook, $7.50

terraria by John Martone
Limited edition Japanese style wraps, $15

Wall/Stairway by John Taggart
Limited sewn chapbook, $7.50

A Breath Apart by Scott Watson
Limited edition Japanese style wraps, $15

*Chapbooks can be purchased via PayPal at the CVP website
Please inquire about signed editions of chapbooks and broadsides

FORTHCOMING

Ed Baker
Jeffery Beam
Joel Chace
Mark Kuniya
John Martone
Sabine Miller

Country Valley Press
c/o Mark Kuniya
1407 Mission Street, Unit A Gardnerville, Nevada 89410-7221

[redacted]
http://web.mac.com/countryvalley

↑ Index

26. Charlotte Mandel
If you're in the Hamptons
Tue 5 Aug 2008

Please come to celebrate the publication of ROCK VEIN SKY - new poems by Charlotte Mandel, at Canio's Books, 290 Main Street, Sag Harbor, NY 11963,
Saturday, August 16th, 6:00 p.m.
Sam Hamill praises: "Charlotte Mandel's poems present close observation in moments of illuminating insight, poems as much felt as imagined, organic, 'given' in the best sense. They are a welcome gift."

Thanks, all,
Charlotte

↑ Index

27. Sam Ladkin
Recommended, Chris Goode, Edinburgh: forestation
Tue 5 Aug 2008

> ---
>
> Forest Fringe presents
>
> A live anthology of upstream poetry
> in three instalments
>
> read / performed by Chris Goode
>
> Programme #1
> Gertrude Stein, "If I Told Him: A Completed Portrait of Picasso" > Allen Ginsberg, "Howl"
> Geoff Ward, Rainer Maria Rilke: Duino Elegies [nos. 1, 4, 10]

> Programme #2
> Short pieces by Samuel Beckett, Erik Belgum, Christopher Knowles, Jon Leidecker [Wobbly], Bruce Nauman, Yoko Ono, Jerome Rothenberg, Cecil Taylor
>
> Programme #3
> Cathy Berberian, "Stripsody"
> Bob Cobbing / Jeremy Adler, "Notes from the Correspondence" [excerpt]
> Kurt Schwitters, Ursonate
>
> Wednesday 13 [#1], Thursday 14 [#2], Friday 15 [#3] August. 7pm.
>
> Forest Fringe, above the Forest Cafe, 3 Bristo Place, Edinburgh
>
> Pay what you can.
>
> http://www.forestfringe.co.uk/
> http://beescope.blogspot.com

↑ Index

28. Anselm Berrigan

Composer/Poet Collaborations at the Flea Theater....

Tue 5 Aug 2008

Hello, hope the summer is treating you well thus far - below you'll find information on a set of NYC shows coming up in a few weeks - ComposersCollaborative inc. commissioned five collaborative pieces to be written by pairs of poets and composers, and these pieces will be performed at The Flea Theater from Aug. 19-23. Discount advance tickets can be purchased through Aug. 10.

The pairs are (composers & poets, respectively):

Jennifer Griffith & Douglas A. Martin
Jed Distler & Cheryl B.
Kate Soper & Bakar Wilson
Sima Wolf & Aja-Monet
David First & Anselm Berrigan

And the title for the whole project:

Non Sequitur 2008 - Rejection: a series of slips and falls curated by Regie Cabico and Jed Distler directed by Arnold Barkus lighting and set design by David Lovett with Newspeak

at The Flea Theater

41 White Street (betw. Broadway and Church St) a/c/e, n/r/q/w, 6, j/m/z to Canal St., or 1 to Franklin St.

August 19, 20, 21, 22, 23 at 8 pm program info: composerscollab.org

box office: www.theflea.org???? [redacted]

gen'l admission: $25?? --?? students/seniors: $20

Special offer through August 10:

use discount code "EARLY" when purchasing tickets
gen'l admission: $20? --?? students/seniors: $15

Thanks,

Anselm

↑ Index

29. Séamas Cain
Re: poetry and archives?
Tue 5 Aug 2008

Sara Phillips,

Two additional suggestions ...

1.) Dr. Richard Price, a poet, archivist and librarian, is the Head of Modern British Collections [including Artists' Books and literary chapbooks] at the British Library in London. He is the author of several books of poetry, including books of visual-poetry. Also, in 2006, he co-authored an archival book about British Poetry magazines from 1914 to 2000.

http://www.bl.uk/collections/britirish/britishandirish.html

2. Dr. Michael Basinski, a poet, archivist and librarian, is the Curator of the Poetry Collection at the University of Buffalo. I do think his poetry reflects the sense of "archives" in more ways than one.

http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/basinski/

Bestwishes,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

On Sun, Jul 27, 2008 at 5:08 PM, Sara Phillips
<[redacted]> wrote:
> Hi all,
>
> I'm working on a dissertation that explores the intersection between the > archive and long poems. Do you know of any poetry from 1990 on that directly > treats the subject of the archive, or acts like an archive? I'm interested in > poets who might classify themselves as scholar-poets, or have an > interdisciplinary approach (are perhaps archivists or librarians themselves).
>
> I ran across a new book by Kate Eichhorn called Fond (Bookthug, 2008), and
> am looking for others.
>
> Many thanks!
> Sara Phillips
>

↑ Index

30. Tony Trigilio

Registration Discount Deadline Extended: The Beat Generation Symposium at Columbia College Chicago

Tue 5 Aug 2008

****
THE BEAT GENERATION SYMPOSIUM
****

DISCOUNT DEADLINE EXTENDED!
Register before September 1 for a discounted fee (see below for details).

Please join us for a conference devoted to the literary and cultural legacy of the Beat Generation: "The Beat Generation Symposium," co-sponsored by the Beat Studies Association, the Columbia College Chicago English Department and Provost's Office, Columbia College's Ellen Stone Belic Institute for the Study of Women and Gender in the Arts and Media, and the Illinois State University Department of English and College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Friday, October 10, and Saturday, October 11, 2008.

Location: Columbia College Chicago, Film Row Theater (1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th floor).

This is an academic Beat Studies conference to be held in conjunction with the Columbia College's Center for the Book and Paper Arts's Fall 2008 display of the Jack Kerouac ON THE ROAD manuscript scroll.

The Beat Generation Symposium features panel discussions each day, with poetry readings by Joanne Kyger (October 10) and Diane di Prima (October 11). The readings are free and open to the public. Joanne Kyger, a native California writer, is the author of over 20 books of poetry. She is known for her ties to the poets of Black Mountain College, the San Francisco Renaissance, and the Beat Generation. Her most recent books are About Now: Collected Poems, 1957-2004 (National Poetry Foundation, 2007) and Not Veracruz (Libellum Press, 2007). She taught for many years at Naropa University's poetics program, and The New College of San Francisco. She lives on the coast north of San Francisco. Diane di Prima lives and works in San Francisco. She is the author of 43 books of poetry and prose, and her work has been translated into more than 20 languages. Recent publications include Recollections of My Life as a Woman (Penguin, 2002) and an expanded edition of Revolutionary Letters (Last Gasp Press, 2007). In 2006 di Prima received the Fred Cody Award for Lifetime Achievement and community service from the Northern California Book Critics Association.

Panelists include John Bryant, Peter Cook, Terrance Diggory, Jane Falk, Amy Friedman, Deborah R. Geis, Nancy M. Grace, Tim Hunt, Rob Johnson, Ronna Johnson, Hassan Melehy, Timothy Murphy, Jennie Skerl, Matt Theado, Tony Trigilio, and more.

The weekend of the symposium, there will be a related offsite reading by Michael Rothenberg (Unhurried Vision) and David Meltzer (David's Copy) sponsored by Myopic Books and the Poetry Center of Chicago. Sunday, October 12, 7:00 p.m. Myopic Books, 1564 N Milwaukee Ave, in Chicago's Wicker Park neighborhood.

Conference fee for those who pre-register by September 1: $50 ($25 for Graduate Students, Independent Scholars, and Retired Faculty). After September 1, the fees are $100 and $50.

Checks should be made payable to Columbia College Chicago, and should be sent to:

Columbia Ticket Center
33 East Congress St., Suite 610
Chicago, IL 60605

Ph: [redacted] (fax [redacted])
[redacted]

To register by credit card, call the Columbia Ticket Office at the number above, or register online at:

www.colum.edu/tickets/index.php

A limited number of hotel rooms are available at the Homewood Suites by Hilton Chicago-Downtown, 40 East Grand Avenue, Chicago. This hotel is a very short cab or subway ride from the Columbia campus. The Homewood Suites prepared a special link for us to book online. Just click below and you'll find directions for reserving a room:

http://homewoodsuites.hilton.com/en/hw/groups/personalized/CHIHWHW-CL-20081009/index.jhtml

It's important that you book your room as soon as possible, as the Chicago Marathon is taking place October 12. (We only discovered this convergence recently, after we'd already booked the featured readers.)

A Visitor's Guide for the Beat Symposium is pasted below, with a list of nearby hotels. Columbia College Chicago is located downtown, in the heart of the city's South Loop neighborhood, and is easily accessible from these hotels by foot or cab. All major subway/El trains come into the South Loop, too, so it's possible to book hotels in other parts of the city and make it to the Symposium without difficulty.

Mention that you're a Columbia College Chicago visitor to receive discounted rates at some of these hotels. It's crucial to book as soon as possible because of the marathon.

For more information, contact Tony Trigilio at [redacted] ([redacted]).

VISITOR'S GUIDE: THE BEAT GENERATION SYMPOSIUM

Airports: O'Hare Airport (western suburbs) and Midway Airport (southern suburbs) are the two airports servicing the Chicgao area. They are approximately equidistant from Columbia College.

Transportation:
>From Midway Airport, take the Orange Line elevated train to Adams Street. From there, walk south on Wabash until you reach Congress Parkway. From O'Hare Airport, take the Blue Line to La Salle. Walk East on Congress (away from the Chicago Stock Exchange Building, which you'll see upon emerging from the subway) until you reach Wabash (about 5 short blocks).

Use www.transitchicago.com's free Trip Planner service to plan the rest of your trips while you're here. Simply enter your starting point and destination, and Trip Planner gives you detailed directions. As of 2008, fares are $2.00 one-way with a $0.25 transfer. Each train station has kiosks where you can buy transit cards and reload them (cash only). The Blue Line and Red Line run 24/7; the other lines stop running for a few hours late at night.

Taxis are available throughout the city. From Midway Airport to the English Department, cab fare would be approximately $25 and from O'Hare Airport cab fare would be approximately $50. If you need to call a cab, call (773) or (312) TAXICAB.

Metra Trains service suburban areas. Visit www.metrarail.com for an updated schedule and fare list.

NEARBY HOTELS

The Hilton and Towers
722 S Michigan Ave
(0.2 miles from the English Department)
[redacted]

The Palmer House Hilton
17 E Monroe St (0.4 miles away)
[redacted] or 1-800-HILTONS

The Best Western Grant Park
1100 S Michigan Ave (0.6 mi)
[redacted]

Travelodge
65 E Harrison St (0.1 mi)
[redacted]

Hotel Blake
500 S Dearborn St (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
www.hyatt.com

Blackstone Hotel
819 S Wabash Ave # 606 (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
marriott.com

The Silversmith Hotel
10 S Wabash Ave (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
silversmithchicagohotel.com

Omni Ambassador East
1301 S State St (0.7 mi)
[redacted]

Embassy Suites Hotel Chicago-Downtown
600 North State Street (1.5 mi)
[redacted]
embassysuites.com

Essex Inn Hotel
800 S Michigan Ave (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
essexinn.com

Club Quarters: Hotel
111 W Adams St (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
clubquarters.com

W Hotels-Chicago City Center
172 W Adams St (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
starwoodhotels.com

Hostelling International Chicago
24 E Congress Pkwy (0.1 mi)
[redacted]
hichicago.org

Paging and Bottom Toolbar Previous Item Next Item

↑ Index

31. Jennifer Karmin

Aug 10: Public Project in SF

Tue 5 Aug 2008

LISTENING BOOTH & 4000 WORDS 4000 DEAD

a public project by Genine Lentine
Jennifer Karmin

SUNDAY, AUGUST 10th from 2-5PM in Dolores Park, San Francisco near 18th & Dolores

FREE
all are welcome

2-3:30pm
LISTENING BOOTH offers pedestrians a place to sit down and talk to an attentive listener for five minutes. Participants choose their desired level of listenership: 1. Silence 2. Non-verbal backchannel responses: hmm, nodding, etc. 3. Neutral verbal responses: "I hear you," "I understand," requests for clarifications, etc; 4. Comments, questions, analogous examples, stories, etc; 5. Advice 6. Freestyle. After five minutes, the listener bows and says Thank you.

4-5pm
4000 WORDS 4000 DEAD is a public poem. Submissions are ongoing as the Iraq War continues and the number of dead grows. During street performances, these words are given away to passing pedestrians. Send 1-10 words with subject 4000 WORDS to [redacted]. All submissions become part of this project.

GENINE LENTINE's poems, essays, and interviews have appeared in American Poetry Review, American Speech, Diagram, Gulf Coast, Ninth Letter, O, the Oprah Magazine, and Tricycle. She collaborated with Stanley Kunitz and photographer Marnie Crawford Samuelson on The Wild Braid: A Poet Reflects on a Century in the Garden (W.W. Norton, 2005). Her manuscript, Mr. Worthington's Beautiful Experiments on Splashes was a finalist for the National Poetry Series. Her project, Listening Booth was recently part of Southern Exposure Gallery's 1st Annual Public Art day. She lives in San Francisco.

JENNIFER KARMIN curates the Red Rover reading series and is a founding member of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at a number of festivals, artist-run spaces, and on city streets. She teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the Chicago Public Schools. Recent poems are published in Bird Dog, MoonLit, Womb and the anthologies A Sing Economy, The City Visible: Chicago Poetry for the New Century and Growing Up Girl: An Anthology of Voices from Marginalized Spaces.

↑ Index

32. David Kirschenbaum
Advertise in Welcome to Boog City Festival Issue
Tue 5 Aug 2008

Please forward

Hi all,

We'll be putting on Welcome to Boog City, our second annual four-day long poetry and music festival, this September. (all details are below this note.)

The upcoming issue of Boog City, number 51, will serve as the program for the festival, as well as feature work from some of its participants.

Advertising information is below.

Hope this finds you swell.

as ever,
David

Advertise in

Boog City 51: Welcome to Boog City 2 Issue

*Deadline

--Tues. Aug. 26-Ad copy to editor
--Sat. Sept. 6-Issue to be distributed

Email to reserve ad space ASAP

We have 2,250 copies distributed and available free throughout Manhattan's East Village, and Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. (The discount rate also applies to larger ads.)

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

(We're also cool with donations, real cool.)

Email [redacted]
or call 212-842-BOOG(2664) for more information.

thanks,
David

2nd annual

Welcome to Boog City
4 Days of Poetry and Music

THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 18, 6:00 P.M.

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

minor/american

(Durham, N.C.)

ACA Galleries
529 W.20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Free

Event will be hosted by minor/american editors

Elise Ficarra and Kathryn Pringle, eds.

featuring readings from

Samar Albuhassan
David Need
Andrea Rexilius
Ken Rumble
Diane Timblin

and music from
Compass Jazz

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 19, 7:00 P.M.

Sidewalk Café
94 Ave. A
NYC

Free with a two-drink minimum

Readings, musical, and poets' theater performances, and Lou Reed's New York album live

7:00 p.m.-Jim Behrle
7:15 p.m.-Daniel Nester
7:35 p.m.-Dibson T. Hoffweiler (music)
8:05 p.m.-Arlo Quint
8:20 p.m.-Bob Holman
8:35 p.m.-Poets' Theater

curated by Rodrigo Toscano
9:35 p.m.-Gillian McCain
9:50 p.m.-Lou Reed, New York. Performed live by:

*Babs Soft
Romeo Had Juliette
Halloween Parade

*Dead Rabbit
Dirty Blvd.
Endless Cycle

*Dibson T. Hoffweiler & Preston Spurlock
There Is No Time
Last Great American Whale

*Liv Carrow
Beginning of a Great Adventure
Busload of Faith

*Prewar Yardsale
Sick of You Hold On

*Wakey Wakey
Good Evening Mr. Waldheim
Xmas in February

*Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour
Strawman
Dime Store Mystery

11:20 p.m.-Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour
12:10 a.m.-Dead Rabbit

Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave., L to 1st Ave.
Venue is at E.6th St.

SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 20, 11:00 A.M.

Cakeshop
152 Ludlow St.
NYC

$5

5th Annual Small, Small Press Fair

11:00 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Readings by authors from the exhibiting presses:

--Adam Golaski, flim forum press
--Virna Teixeira, Litmus Press/Aufgabe
--Austin Alexis, Poets Wear Prada
--Tom Savage, Straw Gate Books and readers from:

Fence
House Press
Octopus Books
Outside Voices
2nd Avenue Poetry and more

1:30 p.m.-Phoebe Kreutz (music)
2:00 p.m.-Bill Kushner
2:15 p.m.-Stephanie Gray
2:30 p.m.-Ryan Eckes
2:50 p.m.-Eric Gelsinger
3:10 p.m.-Douglas Manson
3:30 p.m.-Heart Parts
4:00 p.m.-Elise Ficarra
4:20 p.m.-Kristianne Meal
4:40 p.m.-Kathryn Pringle
5:00 p.m.-Maureen Thorson
5:20 p.m.-Carol Mirakove
5:35 p.m.-A Brief View of the Hudson
6:05 p.m.-Jen Benka
6:20 p.m.-Todd Colby
6:35 p.m.-Tisa Bryant
6:55 p.m.-David Hadbawnik
7:15 p.m.-Sharon Mesmer
7:30 p.m.-Double Deuce

Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave.
Venue is bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 21, 1:00 P.M.

Unnameable Books
456 Bergen St.
Brooklyn

Free

1:00 p.m.-Julia Cohen
1:15 p.m.-Kyle Schlesinger
1:30 p.m.-Ana Bo¾ièeviæ
1:45 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
2:05 p.m.-Corrine Fitzpatrick
2:20 p.m.-Nick Piombino
2:35 p.m.-Stacy Szymaszek

2:50 p.m.-3:00-break

3:00 p.m.-Panel on "Action Poets" curated and moderated by Kristin Prevallet.
This will be a forum for people to discuss intervention, performance, conceptual street agitations, and more.

4:30 p.m.-4:40-break

4:40 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi
5:00 p.m.-Lee Ann Brown
5:15 p.m.-John Coletti
5:30 p.m.-Rachel Levitsky
5:45 p.m.-Eileen Myles
6:00 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi
6:20 p.m.-Edward Foster
in conversation with Simon Pettet
6:50 p.m.-Simon Pettet
7:10 p.m.-Edward Foster

Directions: 2, 3 to Bergen St.; 2, 3, 4, 5, M, N, Q, W, R, B, D to Atlantic Ave./Pacific St.; C to Lafayette Ave.
Venue is bet. 5th/Flatbush aves.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

33. susan maurer
Cutthroat
Wed 6 Aug 2008

After reading a collection by William Pitt Root borrowed from Ron Price I learned Pitt Root is associated with the magazine "Cutthroat" . The latest online version just went up and I'm glad to be part of it. They also have a print version.
Susan Maurer _____
Got Game? Win Prizes in the Windows Live Hotmail Mobile Summer Games Trivia Contest http://www.gowindowslive.com/summergames?ocid=TXT_TAGHM

↑ Index

34. Dan Glass
With + Stand Makes Time
Wed 6 Aug 2008

With + Stand will be accepting submissions for #2: the black & white issue through August 15th.

"Freedom would be not to choose between black and white but to abjure such prescribed choices." -Theodor Adorno

Details @ the usual place:

http://withplusstand.blogspot.com

↑ Index

35. Sarah Rosenthal
Lomax/Rosenthal/Karmin SF Thurs 8/7
Wed 6 Aug 2008

BOOKS & BOOKSHELVES
presents

JENNIFER KARMIN
DANA TEEN LOMAX
SARAH ROSENTHAL

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7
7:30pm

99 SANCHEZ STREET
between 14th St & Duboce Ave
in San Francisco

JENNIFER KARMIN curates the Red Rover reading series and is a founding member of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented in national festivals, on city streets, and at artist-run spaces such as the Urban Institute for Contemporary Arts, Woodland Pattern Book Center, and Betalevel. She teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the Chicago Public Schools. Recent poems are published in Bird Dog, MoonLit, Womb, Seven Corners, Milk Magazine, and the anthologies A Sing Economy (Flim Forum Press, 2008), The City Visible: Chicago Poetry for the New Century (Cracked Slab Books, 2007), and Growing Up Girl: An Anthology of Voices from Marginalized Spaces (GirlChild Press, 2006).

DANA TEEN LOMAX is the author of CurrenÂ¢y (Palm Press, 2006), Room (a+bend press, 1999), and the contributing co-editor of Letters To Poets, Conversations About Poetics, Politics and Community (Saturnalia Books, 2008). Her writing has been published in numerous journals and magazines, including Jacket, The Bay Poetics Anthology, Tripwire, Moria, sonaweb, Dusie, mem, and many others. She is presently working on Q, â€œhome moviesâ€ about raising a daughter on prison grounds and a poetry manuscript entitled Shhh! Lullabies for a Tired Nation. She works as the Interim Director of Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center in San Francisco, teaches writing at San Francisco State University and the University of San Francisco, and lives in northern California with her family.

SARAH ROSENTHAL is the author of How I Wrote This Story (Margin to Margin, 2001), sitings (a+bend, 2000), and not-chicago (Melodeon, 1998). Her poems, stories, reviews, essays, and interviews have appeared in numerous journals including How(2), Bird Dog, Fence, Lungfull, Denver Quarterly, and Boston Review. Her poetry has been anthologized in Bay Poetics (Faux Press, 2006), The Other Side of the Postcard (City Lights, 2005), and hinge (Crack Press, 2002). She is the recipient of the Leo Litwak Fiction Award, the Primavera Fiction Prize, and a Vermont Studio Center Artistâ€™s Grant. She recently edited a collection of interviews with Bay Area avant-garde writers, A Community Writing Itself. She writes curricula for the Developmental Studies Center, a nonprofit educational publishing house.

↑ Index

36. Kyle Schlesinger
Ted Greenwald at the EPC
Wed 6 Aug 2008

::::: NEW AT THE EPC :::::
::::: POET TED GREENWALD :::::
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/greenwald/

Includes:

GREENWALD POEMS Common Sense (excerpt corresponds to Greenwald reading on Close Listening) Anyway (one of three sections from Greenwald¹s new book 3) In Your Dreams (excerpt from Greenwald¹s 30th book, forthcoming from BlazeVox fall, 2008) Ride the Big Airplane (poem for Tom Raworth¹s 70th birthday)

GREENWALD READING (PENNSOUND)
Close Listening, hosted by Charles Bernstein (2005)
In the American Tree, hosted by Alan Bernheimer (1979)

GREENWALD AT ECLIPSE Lapstrake (Greenwald's first book, also the first book published under Aram Saroyan's LINES imprint. Printed in an edition of 150 numbered copies with a cover illustration by Joe Brainard, this long out of print edition is available as a pdf from Craig Dworkin¹s Eclipse).

BIO
Born in 1942, poet Ted Greenwald is from New York forever.

NEWS Two Wrongs, a collaboration with painter Hal Saulson (Cuneiform Press, 2007) and 3 (Cuneiform Press, 2008) are both available from Small Press Distribution. In Your Dreams, Greenwald¹s 30th book, will be published by BlazeVox this fall. Lyn Hejinian calls In Your Dreams ³a masterpiece of the American variable foot.²

http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/greenwald/
::::: POET TED GREENWALD :::::
::::: NEW AT THE EPC :::::

↑ Index

37. Andrew Jones
Fwd: Call
Wed 6 Aug 2008

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Arthur Clay <[redacted]>
Date: Wed, Aug 6, 2008 at 6:35 AM

Subject: Call
To: Andrew Jones <[redacted]>

Andy

Can you send this aroud the poetry lists:

CALL FOR SHORT STEREOPHONIC SOUNDSCAPE & HOERSPIEL WORKS

>A DIAMOND IN THE MUD<
A Miniature Audio Exhibition of Stereophonic Soundscape & Hörspiel Works

Concept: It is an Asian concept rooted in Buddhism that self-cultivation can be developed at home as a householder and is not merely confined to a temple or monastery. Buddhist believe that enlightened beings are those who "grew" out of the "mud" of the material world. So, like the lotus flower, which penetrates through sullied mud and water, but emerges unspoiled, enlightened beings are beautiful and pure even though they grow up in the material world. The phrase "a diamond in the mud" is an analogy for this and in keeping with it the Digital Art Weeks would like to issue this call to artists and to submit pre recorded works (Soundscape, Hörspiel, Poetry) in regard to the beautiful and the sullied. The works will be chosen on their ability to transcend the listeners into a "moment of tranquilly" and out of the confines of the everyday, or as expressed in the Diamond Sutra: "Dwell upon nothing and produce the pure mind."

Playback System: Constructed as a dock for Apple's famed iPod, the iCarta stereophonic audio playback system will be used to play back all of the selected works. The systems not only offers an interesting solution for public pod-casting, but it also acts uniquely as a bathroom dispenser for the indispensable: Le papier toilette.

- Art Clay, DAW, Artistic Director (c) 2008

Submission: Please submit all works electronically in MP3 format and accompanied by a completed application (The title of the work, a short description of no more than 100 words, and a short biography of the author of the work of no more than 50 words). Submission should be made available for downloading at a link of the submitter's choice or can be sent per email or snail mail to the address below. Selected works will be presented at the Literaturhaus in Basel, Switzerland over a period of three days from the 25th to the 27th of September 2008. Information about the artist and the work will appear electronically and all of the works will be made available to download for pod-casting. A listening space will be provided that goes along with the concept of the project and the needed hardware and audio library (iPod shuffle) will be made available. Works should be no longer than 5 minutes in duration. Winning Prize: iCarta Audio Player

DEADLINE: Moday, 15th September 2008. Notification of acceptance of proposals will be sent out on or before Monday, 22nd September 2008.

For more information regarding the call please write directly to: [redacted]; for more on past Digital Art Weeks, please see: www.digitalartweeks.ethz.ch; for technical information on the iCarta, please see: http://www.atechflash.com

Please send all submissions to:

Email:
[redacted]

Snail Mail:
A Diamond in the Mud
c/o ToneText GmbH
P.O. Box 147,
CH-4019 Basel
Switzerland

eHQgR21iSCANUC5PLiBCb3ggMTQ3LCANQ0gtNDAxOSBCYXNlbA1Td2l0emVybGFuZA0NIA0------=_Part_28672_2924728.1218062895131--

↑ Index

38. David Chirot

6 August 1945: for Hiroshima--Witnessed & as"After" Effects in Poetry--Spicer, Olson, Yasusada, Sciascia

Wed 6 Aug 2008

The anniversary of Hiroshima 6 August 1945 8:15 a.m.

Sembrar la Memoria

This is in four parts-- one of which, longer & with images- is found here, at this link:

Wednesday, August 06, 2008 Before "Curveball": The "After" Effects Poetry of Baseball, the Radio, Espionage, & Hiroshima---Moe Berg, Jack Spicer, Araki Yasusada<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/08/before-curveball-after-effects-poetry.html>

http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/08/before-curveball-after-effects-poetry.html

and three shorter ones which are here below-- eyewitness accounts by survivors of both Hiroshima and Nagasaki Leonardo's The Disappearance of Majoranna & Trying to Prevent the Bombs Olson's Projective Verse--& from Prevention to Pre-Emption the following excerpts are from Nine Who Survived Hiroshima and Nagasaki Personal Experiences of Nine Men Who Lived Through the Atomic Bombings Robert Trumball, E.P Dutton, 1957.

Ten years after the bombings, it was learned that a search of all Japanese records indicated that 18 people had survived both the Hiroshima and the Nagasaki atomic blasts. An extensive search throughout Japan located eleven of the 18. Nine agreed to speak of their experiences. The bombs dropped on the two Japanese cities are barely firecrackers compared to the weapons that the USA and Israel are discussing dropping on Iran. Radioactive elements in weapons used in the First Gulf War and since in Iraq and Afghanistan, as well as the as yet unknown, uniidentified Israeli weapons used in Lebanon last summer, have been causing new forms of illness, as yet inexplicable burns and wounds for which there are no cures as yet. The effects of nuclear weaponry being dispersed, in smaller doses, across populations and soldiers, using persons as "living laboratories" of effects bringing slower or faster deaths, polluting gene pools, and, via human waste, corpses, planting the poisons in water supplies and the soil. Populations and landscapes made radioactive, slowly burning alive, without having to drop the bombs first.

Trumball:

"Instantly the sky was blanked out by the incandescent white light of the monstrous fireball. Scientists estimated that the ball was 250 feet in diameter and a hundred times as bright as the sun, with a heat of 1,000,000 degrees Centigrade. he same as the sun's interior There was a roar of sound that is indescribale. for there is nothing with which it can be compared. Then came a wave of concussion that instantly leveled 6,820 buildings, and badly damaged 3, 750 more. The earth for a mile around the blast center was bombarded with deadly gamma rays and neutrons and showered with radioactive fission products.. The fireball sucked up millions of tons of dust and pulverized debris that quickly began to form the the great, ugly mushroom cloud. The city fell under a dark pall, and a muddy rain began to fall . . . "In the city of approximately 255, 000, more than half the population was instantly dead or incapicitated (dead above 64,000, injured 72,000). Casualties who escaped death in the blast were badly burned. or injured by falling timbers, or flying glass. No city was ever more prostrate. All means of comminication were gone. Seventy per cent of the fire fighting equipment was destroyed, and 80 per cent of the fire-fighting personnel were killed, wounded or otherwise unable to respond to the emergency. Concussion had broken the water mians, and pipes were melted in the incredible heat. Many burning buildings were inacessible anyway,blocked off as they were by the debris of fallen structures . . . "Of forty-five hospitals, only three were left standing. Only twenty-eight out of 290 physicians in the city were unhurt, and 126 of the 1,780 nurses . . .

"With all facilities virtually nonexistent, the city was at the mercy of the flames, and by two o'clock in the afternoon the six islands (of the city) were a sea of fire. Terror was heightened by the flaming windstorm caused by convection as the air was drawn at thirty to forty miles an hour to the blazing center of the blast . . .

"The door facing Yamaguchi opened, and five boys, fifteen or sixteen years old, came running out. They were unclothed except for torn underpants, and Yamaguchi saw that theywere covered in blood . . . "'I had never seen such a horrifying sight as those five shivering boys. Blood was pouring in streams from deep cuts all over their bodies, mingling with their perspiration, and their skin was burned deep red, like the color of cokked lobsters. At first it seemed, strangely, that their burned and lacerated backs and chests were growing green grass! Then I saw that hundreds of blades of sharp grass had been driven deep into their flesh, evidently by the force of the blast." . . . . (these boys had been inside a small factory building--not outdoors)

"Hirata set out for home . . . "'There was not a house standing as far as I could see . . . Although I knew the city well, it was actually difficult to find my way, for al the familiar landmarks were gone, and the streets I often walked were now buried in debris and ashes' . . . "Hirata noticed, with a shock, that there wasn't a living being in sight. "It was as if the people who had lived in this uncanny city had been reduced to ashes with their houses,' he said . . . As he moved slowly through the ashes, he came to the first ghastly dead. "'The first was a little boy,' he recalls. 'He was completely naked, his skin was all peeled off as if he had been flayed, and the nails were falling from the ends of his fingers. His flesh was all deep red. When I first saw him I wasn't sure if I was looking at a human being Morimoto-- "'There were numberless injured persons all around me, lying on the ground, some held down by fallen timbers, all screaming and shouting for help. I saw that they were all still alive,m but horribly injured. Many looked like ghosts, with the skin peeled off their faces and hanging down over their shoulders like thin silk pennants. All those facing in the direction of the blast had their exposed skin torn off in a thick layer whgich had blown back. The sight left me numb with horror.' . . . .

FORESEEING THE BOMB AND TRYING TO PREVENT IT

In Leonarado Sciascia's beautiful book The Disappearance of Majoranna, he has a vision born of the startling synchornicity of information recieved during a telephone call with his own researchs into the mysterious and never solved vanishing of the great Italain physicist.

It is Sciascia's growing conviction that Majoranna "faked" his own death/disappearnce in order for him to retire completely from the world to an obscure Monastery, there to finish his days in the Peace of the Spirit he so desperately needed. For it is also Sciascia's belief that Majoranna, very early in the 1930's, during the period of his stay with the German physicist Werner Heisenberg, had foreseen the Atomic Bomb and all the dread implications that its unleashing had in store for all life on Earth. Sciascia posits that Majoranna, and Heisenberg also, being possesed of this knowledge, and loyal citizens, one of a Fascist country, the other of a country about to become so, determined never to reveal what they knew to anyone, in the desperate hope that this would prevent the A-bombs ever coming into existence. Having reached nearly the final goal of his enquiries, the visit to the Monastery where Majoranna may well have lived, the telephone call informs Sciascia that there is also a rumor about this monastery that the pilot of the Enola Gay, which dropped the Bomb on Hiroshima, had also been a resident at the monastary for a time, and most likely seeking the same Peace as the physicist. For Sciascia even the possibility, however remote, however imaginary, of the two men encountering each other in the obscure monastary, is a Vision of such powerful symmetry and "complete sense," that it's taking place in such a manner outstrips any "factual proof" of it's having "actually occurred."

For Sciascia, this Vision presents the quantum leap of the fictional, the imagainary, into a Truth which is, in fact, "irrefutable," given the scantiness of "the evidence to go on." For this Vision complements that Vision in which he finds Majoranna and Heisenberg foreseeing an event which they think they have a chance however small, to prevent occuring.

For the writer, this makes of these two physicists the truly great ones of the Atomic Age,, the ones who knew , yet refused to share the knowledge, how to make the Bomb and open a new age of unimaginable horrors.

Their forseeing of the A-Bomb and efforts to prevent it, has since been turned into a different form of foresight in relation with Nuclear wepaons. This is the kind of accelearted, forged, creation of the threat of a Future Bomb which has to be prevented by the pre-emptive strike made by a bomb already in existence.

This "saving of lives in danger in the future" " by killing a great great many in the present, is related to logic claimed for the dropping of the two nuclear bombs on Japan, If the bombs could bring a stop to the war, this would mean the saving of perhpas millions of lives, so that the killing of some hundreds of thousands would be "worth it." By this line of reasoning, it is not the dead who "count," but the living. Lying inert, the "body count" of the dead do not represent Death in this vision, but instead New Life, all that Life of the Present and soon to be Future Saved by the Light Flash which "recorded" the "last living instant" of the immediately about to be dead in the form of shadows imprinted in walls.

FORESEEING POST-HIROSHIMA TURNS PREVENTION INTO PRE-EMPTION

Olson's "Projective Verse" Manifesto and Accelerations of American Speeds into Annihilations of (Others') SPACE

Although he did not realize the fact until some time later, Charles Olson completed Call Me Ishmael, his study of Herman Melville's Moby Dick, on the day that the atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima.

That clear morning in Hiroshima, the Nuclear Holocaust of the Gates of Hell opened, unleashing the heat of a new sun in a flash of light, a heat different in kind from the Hells of the Fire bombings of Tokyo, Hamburg, Dresden,and so many others. This was a Heat which continued burning long after, in the cells and tissues contaminated by radioactivity. From the first instant, the human organism began the processes of mutation which themselves mutated further in the Nuclear Accidents of Three Mile Island and in the huge area affected by Chernobyl.

For Olson, Melville's Pacific voyage in Moby Dick becomes the final stage in the Westward movement which finds itself in rejoining the East. The horizontal "BRIDGE" of vehicular modes of transportation, with their speeds which steadily abolish 'SPACE," the American "Fact," turn into the vertical trajectory of Time in the airplane. The planes in the Pacific take off from the Carrier, itself a huge floating Bridge, from whose horizons are launched the engines of flight, carrying in their ever increasing speeds the annihilations of Space and the dawn of continuous global Real Time, in which it becomes possible to create the global "Accident" of Nuclear Total Destruction.

In the "Projective Verse" Manifesto (1950) Olson writes, (after Edward Dahlberg) ONE PERCEPTION MUST IMMEDIATELY AND DIRECTLY LEAD TO A FURTHER PERCEPTION . . . get on with it, keep moving, keep in, speed, the nerves, their speed, the perceptions, theirs, the acts, the split second acts, the whole business, keep it moving as fast as you citizens . . . always one perception must must must MOVE, INSTANTER, ON ANOTHER!

The acceleration of PERCEPTION--"split second acts, the whole business," --links the Poetic Projective avant-garde with that of the military, in which perception has always meant death. To be the first to perceive the enemy's movements, locations, encampments, strategies unfolding, is to be instantly setting the lines of sight directly at the target. To see at ever greater speeds, to See First, is to be able to AIM DEATH. To perceive is to annihilate.

As the world becomes ever more saturated by perception, the Open Field of a Projective Verse becomes "completely exposed" to the perceiving eyes of a myriad machines at a myriad angles and distances, continually "lining up" the trajectories of high speed death. Yet--what if the Perception finds no target to be aimed at? No reason for an attack, "nothing to shoot for?"

Since the target is already "taking place, existing," as a concept, what remains is to fill in the blank spaces where the unseen target "should be." To "fill in the blanks" when Perception "comes up empty," the resort is to a conceptual language with which to "forge" the Seen into the Unseen, to impose objects and "readings," "information" where there is none. If Nature abhors a vacuum, the conceptual Perception cannot stand to "see a blank space" where the target it conceives of "should be."

To "forge" is to "forge" full speed ahead in Time, planting ahead of time what one has set out to find, and, finding it, being able to claim a complete "coherence" in one's methods and in one's "ability to not only See, but FOReSEE" the "dangers that are now exposed as having been there all this time."

To conceptually be filled with a "Vision" which is confronted with "a blank," "necessitates" the construction in language of "evidences, proofs" which "show" that "something is there," even if cleverly concealed or camouflaged, since one KNOWS it must be there, it will be there, and what is a blank shall be filled with the CERTAINTY of a target.

Emerson wrote in "Nature," that the "blank and ruin we perceive in Nature is in our own eye." In the rush to annihilate, such thinking in itself is an enemy. The "blank and ruin" of a Perception which "comes up empty" needs to be replaced by the blank and ruin of a Perception which is seeing the blank and ruins it has created, by destroying what it has "planted" and "forged" as a target to annihilate.

The work of Perception turns from "seeing what is there," to Projecting into the blank spaces what is Not There, in order to see what it is one needs to see to go about destroying it.

By these accelerations "hurried on" by forgeries of the required evidences, it is possible to manufacture "the presence of Unseen, Unheard of, previously non-existent and undreamed of Threats of the Utmost magnitude" where in fact there is "nothing. "Nothing," that "blank and ruin" is no longer THERE, nor is it any longer a "blank and ruin within my own eye" when the Secret of the Forged Eviodences become "revealed"--not the Scret of their forgery, to be sure! But the Secret that where everyone has found "nothing," one has inded ben proven to have such a superior acutiy of Vision as to see what is THERE among the appearnces of the Not There.

This method seeing the There in the NOT There, also accelerates Time, for what one is seeing is not the "blank and ruin" of the present at all, which one has so stuffed and filled in. It is instead the FUTURE one sees, the blank and ruin ofone's own landscapes, unless the THERE of the NOT THERE, aka the NOT YET THERE, is attacked pre-emptively.

By means of the pre-emptive attack, one "realizes" the concrete presence of indeed "real" blanks and ruins, whcih "prove," indeed, that the "blank and ruin one sees in one's own eye," is not a Nothing in the present, but indeed a great Something in the Future whose presence one has produced as the Now.

Among the "reasons" given to "justify" the dropping of the bombs on Hiroshima and Ngasaki was that they would stop the War, and so save an immense number of lives.

Rather than contemplating the number of the dead, the wounded, the radioctively sick, the traumatized and the sufferings of those suddenly afflicted by mutations, one was to "overlook" these corpses and see instaed all the vast returning American soldiers and the still living Japanese as indeed the signs of Triumph of the A-Bomb.

By reversing the "body count" of the dead into that of the "countless numbers" saved, the Peace the A-Bomb brought could be seen to be the Saving of those living "who are not dead "

By envisioning the A-Bomb as a Saviour, "only called upon in the last resort," the language has been formulated with which to begin the series of forgeries and "alarms," which have already been in the building stages for at least over four years now, to pre-emptively attack yet again. And this time in Iran.

In the Light of the New Sun of the Nuclear Bombs, it is not Death which Mushrooms and Clouds the Skies, but the Saviour, the Sign of a God to the living.

"Let there be light"--

↑ Index

39. David Chirot

New & Recent Visual Poetry: "Cinema of Catharsis" flickr gallery link

Wed 6 Aug 2008

I want to share some of my Flickr photos with you. They're in a set called "Cinema of Catharsis".

Hope you like them!

-- chirOt zerO Cinema of Catharsis
http://www.flickr.com/photos/[redacted]/sets/72157605911632948

↑ Index

40. Jesse Glass

Yoko Danno's Songs and Stories Of The Kojiki Now Available from Ahadada Books

Thu 7 Aug 2008

The Kojiki is arguably the earliest and most important collection of stories concerning the founding of Japan and the beginnings of Japanese culture. Dating from the sixth century, the Kojiki introduces us to a delightful host of gods and goddesses, heros and heroines, warriors and soothsayers, beautiful princesses and hideous demons. Yoko Danno's graceful retelling of the Kojiki in modern English brings this ancient classic to life for a new generation of readers. Illustrations (by Nihonga artist and master potter Horaku Nakamura), notes and bibliography are included to enhance the reader's enjoyment.

For more information go to www.ahadadabooks.com

Jess

↑ Index

41. derek beaulieu

publication announcement: LEGO 50-15

Thu 7 Aug 2008

On January 28, 2008 I sent the following invitation:

"this is an invitation to participate in a collaborative / constraint-based writing & artwork portfolio. Lego was created 50 years ago this year, and has been an inspiration for generations of kids. Those kids are us. Lego was the toy-i know i spent endless full days creating cities, spaceships, creatures and more (and still have a box full of Lego)-it taught us to think. So many poets, writers and artists have since taken this modular thinking and applied it to their own oeuvre (how many of you have files, packages, piles and gatherings of inspiring things, tools for one day?) ..."

Fifteen writers and artists agreed to participate. Each received a PDF version of the original American patent application and were restricted to using some material from that patent. The responses were further restricted to a single sheet of 8 ½" x 11" (or A4 if international) paper.

*

LEGO 50-15 contains work by Elizabeth Bachinsky, Jonathan Ball, Christian Bök, Steven Collis, Craig Dworkin, Chris Ewart, Jesse Ferguson, Helen Hajnoczky, Mark Laliberte, kevin mcpherson eckhoff, Ross Priddle, Jenny Samprisi, Blake Smith, Andrew Topel and Janine Vangool.

*

This portfolio is published in an edition of 60 copies, of which 25 are for sale at $10 each (including shipping). for more information, or to order copies please contact derek beaulieu at: [redacted]

↑ Index

42. Bill Berkson
GOODS AND SERVICES
Thu 7 Aug 2008

New BLUE PRESS Title available from bluepressbooks.com
GOODS AND SERVICES
by Bill Berkson.
A fine, classic, and classy set of 9 poems.
Clear, keen-eyed, subversive hilarity, ³A panoply of perfect / luster bouncing² in sharp perceptive lines.
Limited to 100 copies.
Cover painting by Mitch Temple.
2008. 5.25² x 8², saddle-stitched. $7.00

↑ Index

43. Mathias Svalina
Julie Doxsee's Undersleep Available from Octopus Books & Reading Dates
Thu 7 Aug 2008

Hello,

Julie Doxsee's debut book, Undersleep is available now & to celebrate that she will be giving a series of readings over the next weeks. Doxsee currently lives in Istanbul & will only be in America for a brief time so I hope you can make it to one of the readings!

bio: Born in London, Ontario, Julie Doxsee is a professor of writing and literature at Koç University in Istanbul, Turkey. She is the author of the chapbooks The Knife-Grasses (Octopus Books), and Fog Quartets (horse less press). Forthcoming publications include the book Objects for a Fog Death (Black Ocean) and two chapbooks: You Will Build a City Out of Rags (Whole Coconut) and New Body a Seafloor Body (Seeing Eye Books).

Undersleep is available via paypal at the Octopus Books website:
http://www.octopusbooks.net
& at SPD: http://www.spdbooks.org

Reading Dates

Saturday, August 9th
6pm
Melville House
145 Plymouth Street
Brooklyn, NY 11201
Reading with Matvei Yankelevich & X-ing Press poets Justin Talyor & Jeremy Schmall

Sunday August 10th
2pm
Chop Suey Books
1317 West Cary St
Richmond, VA 23220
Reading with Sommer Browning, Julia Cohen & Mathias Svalina

Monday August 11th
7pm
Southern Rail
201-C East Main Street
Carrboro, North Carolina
Reading with Mathias Svalina

Tuesday August 12th
6pm
Robins Bookstore
108 S 13th St
Philadelphia, PA
Reading with Mathias Svalina

Wednesday, August 13th
7:30pm
Washington Literary Salon
email for details: [redacted]
Washington, DC
Reading with Mathias Svalina

Thursday, August 14th
7pm
Ada Books
330 Dean Street

Providence, RI
Reading with Thibault Raoult & Mathias Svalina

Friday, August 15th
8pm
Amherst Books
8 Main Street
Amherst, MA
Reading with Betsy Wheeler & Mathias Svalina

Saturday, August 16th
7pm
Brookline Bookstore
279 Harvard Street
Brookline, MA
Reading with Janaka Stucky, Julia Cohen & Mathias Svalina

Wednesday, August 20th
9:30pm
Bedlam Theatre
1501 S. 6th St. (www.bedlamtheatre.org) on the WEST BANK
Minneapolis, MN
Reading with Paula Cisewski & Laura Brandenburg

↑ Index

44. amy king
Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
Thu 7 Aug 2008

Dear Listees,

I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can recommend a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely, or a representation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, disintegrating the person in the process. For instance, I wouldn't use that Sylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth Paltrow. Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful ...

Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?

Thanks,

Amy

_____

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

45. Jim Andrews
comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
Thu 7 Aug 2008

---

lots of comic books/graphic novels being turned into movies.

a possible (?) parallel:

shakespearean tragedy arose, in part, from morality plays and revenge dramas. it feels like something more interesting than comic books is trying to emerge from the comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them.

the stylized, concise, one-liner language moving toward something more flexibly poetical?

the black and white revenge morality moving toward something more complex?

the 'superhero' becoming less 'super' and less 'hero'.

probably not. just a thought.

maybe though. one for the shadow.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

46. Danny Snelson
Re: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
Thu 7 Aug 2008

I like this question -- The Arenas film is good, but fiction, isn't it? Tho I guess there is something in Arenas' historical distortions that verges poetic. In that zone, Cronenberg's take of Naked Lunch is better. (Tho Gysin's The Cut-ups of course trumps.) Ha, there's Quills, or Salo.

Narrative film: recently saw Mary Ellen Bute's Finnegan's Wake<http://ubu.com/film/joyce_wake.html>, wch is marvelous. Looking for the title of Tom & Viv (meh!) I stumbled on this funny list <http://www.umich.edu/~mqr/poetryinmovies.htm> wch ought to help -- (Another chance to class-screen Blade Runner!) Also The Basketball Diaries are something.

But better, I think: the Hills films (!<http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Hills.html>) & Abigail Child's work. The flux or lettrist films or those by Hans Arp. There are some to consider here <http://www.ubu.com/film/index.html>, I guess

...

Best poetry film about a poet, featuring a poet? -- Sleep<http://www.warholstars.org/filmch/sleep.html> featuring John Girono!

xoxox
Danny

On Thu, Aug 7, 2008 at 4:45 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear Listees,
>
> I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can recommend a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely, or a representation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, disintegrating the person in the process. For instance, I wouldn't use that Sylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth Paltrow. Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful ...
>
> Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?
>
> Thanks,
>
> Amy
>
> ———
>
> Recent
>
> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
>
> http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

> Alias
>
> http://www.amyking.org
>
> Your Suggestions
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

47. Jason Quackenbush
Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
Thu 7 Aug 2008

comics have been more complex since the early eighties. there are any number of truly complex poetries going on in the world of comics. see for example the work of neil gaiman, alan moore, dave sim, terry moore, harvey pekar, and grant morrison

On Aug 7, 2008, at 1:50 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:

> lots of comic books/graphic novels being turned into movies.
>
> a possible (?) parallel:
>
> shakespearean tragedy arose, in part, from morality plays and revenge dramas. it feels like something more interesting than comic books is trying > to emerge from the comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them.
>
> the stylized, concise, one-liner language moving toward something more flexibly poetical?
>
> the black and white revenge morality moving toward something more complex?
>
> the 'superhero' becoming less 'super' and less 'hero'.
>
> probably not. just a thought.
>
> maybe though. one for the shadow.

> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
> welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

48. Adam Robinson
Re: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
Thu 7 Aug 2008

Cathy Cook has a really essential experimental doc about Lorine Niedecker.

On Thu, Aug 7, 2008 at 5:18 PM, Danny Snelson <[redacted]>wrote:

> I like this question --
> The Arenas film is good, but fiction, isn't it? Tho I guess there is > something in Arenas' historical distortions that verges poetic. In that > zone, Cronenberg's take of Naked Lunch is better. (Tho Gysin's The Cut-ups > of course trumps.) Ha, there's Quills, or Salo.
>
> Narrative film: recently saw Mary Ellen Bute's Finnegan's > Wake<http://ubu.com/film/joyce_wake.html>, > wch is marvelous. Looking for the title of Tom & Viv (meh!) I stumbled on > this funny list <http://www.umich.edu/~mqr/poetryinmovies.htm> wch ought
> to > help -- (Another chance to class-screen Blade Runner!) Also The Basketball > Diaries are something.
>
> But better, I think: the Hills films
> (!<http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Hills.html>)
> & Abigail Child's work. The flux or lettrist films or those by Hans Arp.
> There are some to consider here <http://www.ubu.com/film/index.html>, I > guess
>
> ...
>
> Best poetry film about a poet, featuring a poet? --
> Sleep<http://www.warholstars.org/filmch/sleep.html> featuring > John Girono!
>
> xoxox
> Danny
>
> On Thu, Aug 7, 2008 at 4:45 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

Dear Listees,

I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can recommend a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely,
or a representation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, disintegrating the person in the process. For instance, I wouldn't use that Sylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth Paltrow.
Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful ...

Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?

Thanks,

Amy

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

guidelines

>

↑ Index

49. Skip Fox
Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
Thu 7 Aug 2008

Gary Sullivan!

On Aug 7, 2008, at 1:50 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:

> lots of comic books/graphic novels being turned into movies.
>
> a possible (?) parallel:
>
> shakespearean tragedy arose, in part, from morality plays and revenge dramas. it feels like something more interesting than comic books is trying > to emerge from the comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them.
>
> the stylized, concise, one-liner language moving toward something more flexibly poetical?
>
> the black and white revenge morality moving toward something more complex?
>
> the 'superhero' becoming less 'super' and less 'hero'.
>
> probably not. just a thought.
>
> maybe though. one for the shadow.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
> welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

50. Mendi Lewis Obadike
Re: OT: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
Thu 7 Aug 2008

The Maya Angelou tv movie, I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings. And what about * Looking for Langston* by Isaac Julien? Of course, I suppose it depends on what you mean by "disentegrating the person". Peace to all, apologies to Poetics for the lack of intro. I will when I can. Mendi

On Thu, Aug 7, 2008 at 4:46 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear Listees,
>
> I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can recommend a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely, or a representation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, disintegrating the person in the process. For instance, I wouldn't use that Sylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth Paltrow. Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful ...
>
> Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?
>
> Thanks,
>
> Amy
>
> ———
>
> Recent
> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
>
> Alias
> http://www.amyking.org
>
> Your Suggestions
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

51. Alison Croggon

Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?

Thu 7 Aug 2008

Graphic novels have long been complex and interesting. If you check out the work of Shaun Tan (Australian graphic novelist whose book The Arrival, a parable about immigration, is exquisite) or Marjane Satrapis's graphic novel Persepolis, about her childhood in Iran under the revolution (soon to be a movie) or indeed David Lloyd and Alan Moore's graphic novel collaborations (including V for Vendetta), Art Spiegelman's Maus: A Survivor's Tale (about the Holocaust) and many many others, you'll see a rich vein of stuff. Not to mention the whole tradition of manga and anime...

A

On Fri, Aug 8, 2008 at 7:55 AM, Skip Fox <[redacted]> wrote:

> Gary Sullivan!
>
> On Aug 7, 2008, at 1:50 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:
>
> lots of comic books/graphic novels being turned into movies.
>
> a possible (?) parallel:
>
> shakespearean tragedy arose, in part, from morality plays and revenge dramas. it feels like something more interesting than comic books is trying > to emerge from the comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them.
>
> the stylized, concise, one-liner language moving toward something more flexibly poetical?
>
> the black and white revenge morality moving toward something more complex?
>
> the 'superhero' becoming less 'super' and less 'hero'.
>
> probably not. just a thought.
>
> maybe though. one for the shadow.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

52. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?

Thu 7 Aug 2008

Gary Sullivan's Elsewhere Comics sequence is a wonder.
Murat

On Thu, Aug 7, 2008 at 5:55 PM, Skip Fox <[redacted]> wrote:

> Gary Sullivan!
>
> On Aug 7, 2008, at 1:50 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:
>
> lots of comic books/graphic novels being turned into movies.
>
> a possible (?) parallel:
>
> shakespearean tragedy arose, in part, from morality plays and revenge dramas. it feels like something more interesting than comic books is trying > to emerge from the comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them.
>
> the stylized, concise, one-liner language moving toward something more flexibly poetical?
>
> the black and white revenge morality moving toward something more complex?
>
> the 'superhero' becoming less 'super' and less 'hero'.
>
> probably not. just a thought.
>
> maybe though. one for the shadow.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]

↑ Index

53. Catherine Daly
beyond baroque (again)
Thu 7 Aug 2008

PRESS RELEASE JULY 22 2008 After a delay of four months since the unanimous passage of the Los Angeles City Council's Resolution of February 29, 2008 renewing Beyond Baroque's lease to all its current space at 681 Venice Blvd., for the next 25 years, the lease remains unsigned.

We have learned from sources inside City Hall that, contrary to the City Council Resolution, Beyond Baroque, a nationally recognized cultural institution based in Venice, may lose the part of the lease pertaining to its historic theater, the heart of its operations since 1979. Loss of the lease to its historic theater would cripple Beyond Baroque's control over its future and severely impair its capacity to represent and serve the community as it has for forty years.

We, representatives of the Friends of Beyond Baroque, call upon all people who care about Beyond Baroque to contact Councilman Bill Rosendahl at [redacted] or [redacted] to urge him to uphold the Council Resolution awarding Beyond Baroque's lease to all its historic space and protect this precious Venice institution intact. Please cc: [redacted] on your e- mails to Councilman Rosendahl.

Sincerely,
The Friends of Beyond Baroque Representatives:
Jim Smith [redacted]
Grace Godlin [redacted]
Emily Winters (Venice Arts Council) [redacted]

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

54. jared schickling
Re: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
Fri 8 Aug 2008

Dear Amy,

I'd recommend The River Niger starring Louis Gossett Jr., James Earl Jones, and Cicely Tyson. All's framed by James Earl's character composing a single poem, which he finally reads. If I'm remembering right the poet's a commercial painter.

JS

Get more from your digital life. Find out how.
http://www.windowslive.com/default.html?
ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Home2_082008

↑ Index

55. Maria Damon

Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?

Fri 8 Aug 2008

---

yeah baybeeee!!!!

Skip Fox wrote:
> Gary Sullivan!
>
>
> On Aug 7, 2008, at 1:50 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:
>
>
>> lots of comic books/graphic novels being turned into movies.
>>
>> a possible (?) parallel:
>>
>> shakespearean tragedy arose, in part, from morality plays and revenge >> dramas. it feels like something more interesting than comic books >> is trying >> to emerge from the comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them.
>>
>> the stylized, concise, one-liner language moving toward something more >> flexibly poetical?
>>
>> the black and white revenge morality moving toward something more >> complex?
>>
>> the 'superhero' becoming less 'super' and less 'hero'.
>>
>> probably not. just a thought.
>>
>> maybe though. one for the shadow.
>>
>> ja
>> http://vispo.com

>>
>> welcome.html
>>
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
>
>

↑ Index

56. Maria Damon
Re: OT: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
Fri 8 Aug 2008

Hi and welcome!
I found Looking for Langston beautiful but a bit unsubstantial and speculative, but then i guess that was the point, since no one really knows anything for sure abt Hughes's sexuality...
I was a sucker for Il Postino.

Mendi Lewis Obadike wrote:
> The Maya Angelou tv movie, I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings. And what about > * Looking for Langston* by Isaac Julien? Of course, I suppose it depends on > what you mean by "disentegrating the person". Peace to all, apologies to > Poetics for the lack of intro. I will when I can. Mendi
>
> On Thu, Aug 7, 2008 at 4:46 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
>> Dear Listees,
>>
>> I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can >> recommend a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely, >> or a representation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, >> disintegrating the person in the process. For instance, I wouldn't use that >> Sylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth >> Paltrow. Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful
>> ...
>>
>> Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?
>>

>> Thanks,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>>
>> _____
>>
>> Recent
>> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
>> http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
>>
>> Alias
>> http://www.amyking.org
>>
>> Your Suggestions
>> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

57. Jim Andrews
"Fitting the Pattern" by Christine Wilks
Fri 8 Aug 2008

Fitting the Pattern
http://www.crissxross.net/elit/fitting_the_pattern.html
Christine Wilks

'Fitting the Pattern (or being a dressmaker's daughter)' is a hyperpoem or hyperfiction. I read it. My mom was a dressmaker too. But presumably Christine's piece is interesting even if your mom wasn't.

Christine calls it "an interactive story". Now, I enjoyed the piece, but the interactivity is glorified page turning.

To be worthy of the term "interactive", I think the interactivity should be more than that.

But I enjoyed the piece anyway. It's quite well-written and the interface erm fits the pattern. Although the interactivity is glorified page turning, it goes a bit further than that: one is reminded in the activity of page turning not of page turning but of the making. dressmaking but other makings also. a connection with the activity of the mother. a sympathetic connection. so although the interactivity is weak in some ways, its affect is strong.

The art of programming is not just about formal things but also about the feel of it, and its affect. If a piece is strong formally but the affect is disconnected, it's one less important human dimension to connect with. I felt Christine's piece was pretty cool in its affect.

The feel of it, on the other hand, is clumsy Flash. I mean the actual physical feel of the scissors and so on. Clumsy programming. The concept and design is pretty good, but the actual feel is clumsy; she's not a good enough programmer to do something interesting with the scissors and pins and so on.

But the concept is good enough that it isn't necessary.

I'm being critical but, overall, as I said, I really enjoyed this piece.

How would this piece work solely as a text? Probably quite well.

Do the graphics and interface add to it? Ya they do. They situate you in the activity of dressmaking, they put you more in mom's shoes than the speaker's. Which is important to the affect and sympathies of the piece.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

58. Andrew Jones
Re-post: Call
Fri 8 Aug 2008

CALL FOR SHORT STEREOPHONIC SOUNDSCAPE & HOERSPIEL WORKS

>A DIAMOND IN THE MUD<
A Miniature Audio Exhibition of Stereophonic Soundscape & Hörspiel Works

Concept: It is an Asian concept rooted in Buddhism that self-cultivation can be developed at home as a householder and is not merely confined to a temple or monastery. Buddhist believe that enlightened beings are those who "grew" out of the "mud" of the material world. So, like the lotus flower, which penetrates through sullied mud and water, but emerges unspoiled, enlightened beings are beautiful and pure even though they grow up in the material world. The phrase "a diamond in the mud" is an analogy for this and in keeping with it the Digital Art Weeks would like to issue this call to artists and to submit pre recorded works (Soundscape, Hörspiel, Sonic Poetry) in regard to the beautiful and the sullied. The works will be chosen on their ability to transcend the listeners into a "moment of tranquilly" and out of the confines of the everyday, or as expressed in the Diamond Sutra: "Dwell upon nothing and produce the pure mind."

Playback System: Constructed as a dock for Apple's famed iPod, the iCarta stereophonic audio playback system will be used to play back all of the selected works. The systems not only offers an interesting solution for public pod-casting, but it also acts uniquely as a bathroom dispenser for the indispensable: Le papier toilette.

- Art Clay, DAW, Artistic Director (c) 2008

Submission: Please submit all works electronically in MP3 format and accompanied by a completed application (The title of the work, a short description of no more than 100 words, and a short biography of the author of the work of no more than 50 words). Submission should be made available for downloading at a link of the submitter's choice or can be sent per email or snail mail to the address below. Selected works will be presented at the Literaturhaus in Basel, Switzerland over a period of three days from the 25th to the 27th of September 2008. Information about the artist and the work will appear electronically and all of the works will be made available to download for pod-casting. A listening space will be provided that goes along with the concept of the project and the needed hardware and audio library (iPod shuffle) will be made available. Works should be no longer than 5 minutes in duration. Winning Prize: iCarta Audio Player

DEADLINE: Moday, 15th September 2008. Notification of acceptance of proposals will be sent out on or before Monday, 22nd September 2008.

For more information regarding the call please write directly to: [redacted]; for more on past Digital Art Weeks, please see: www.digitalartweeks.ethz.ch; for technical information on the iCarta, please see: http://www.atechflash.com

Please send all submissions to:

Email:
[redacted]

Snail Mail:
A Diamond in the Mud
c/o ToneText GmbH
P.O. Box 147,
CH-4019 Basel
Switzerland

↑ Index

59. Mary Kasimor

Re: OT: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle

Fri 8 Aug 2008

I remember a video about William Carlos Williams that I used to show my Intro. to Lit. students.. Marjorie Perlman (spelling?) appears and has interesting comments to make about how Williams created his poetry. I love the video. It tends to be more educational, but it is done is such an interesting fashion.
Mary Kasimor
--- On Fri, 8/8/08, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: OT: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, August 8, 2008, 1:43 AM

Hi and welcome!
I found Looking for Langston beautiful but a bit unsubstantial and speculative, but then i guess that was the point, since no one really knows anything for sure abt Hughes's sexuality...
I was a sucker for Il Postino.

Mendi Lewis Obadike wrote:
> The Maya Angelou tv movie, I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings. And what about > * Looking for Langston* by Isaac Julien? Of course, I suppose it depends on > what you mean by "disentegrating the person". Peace to all, apologies to
> Poetics for the lack of intro. I will when I can. Mendi
>
> On Thu, Aug 7, 2008 at 4:46 PM, amy king <[redacted]>
wrote:
>
>
>> Dear Listees,
>>
>> I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can >> recommend a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely,
>> or a representation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize
the poet, >> disintegrating the person in the process. For instance, I wouldn't use that

>> Sylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth >> Paltrow. Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful
>> ...
>>
>> Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?
>>
>> Thanks,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>>
>> _____
>>
>> Recent
>> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
>> http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
>>
>> Alias
>> http://www.amyking.org
>>
>> Your Suggestions
>> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

60. David Baratier

Final Call Transcontinental Award, deadline 8/15, next Friday

Fri 8 Aug 2008

The Annual Transcontinental Poetry Award by Pavement Saw Press

All contributors receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Please mention this to your friends and all others who might be interested!

Electronic and mailed entries must meet these requirements: 1. The manuscript should be at least 48 pages of poetry and no more than 70 pages of poetry in length. Separations between sections are NOT a part of the page count. 2. A one page cover letter. Include a brief biography, the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. This should be followed by a page which lists publication acknowledgments for the book. For each acknowledgement mention the publisher (journal, anthology, chapbook etc.) and the poem published. 3. The manuscript should be bound with a single clip and begin with a title page including the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. 4. The second page should have only the title of the manuscript. There are to be no acknowledgments or mention of the author's name from this page forward. Submissions to the contest are blind judged. 5. There should be no more than one poem on each page. The manuscript can contain pieces longer than one page. 6. The manuscript should be paginated, beginning with the first page of poetry.

Each year Pavement Saw Press will publish at least one book of poetry and/or prose poems from manuscripts received during this competition. Selections are chosen through a blind judging process. The competition is open to anyone who has not previously published a volume of poetry or prose. The author receives $1000 and five percent of the 1000 copy press run. Previous judges have included Judith Vollmer, David Bromige, Bin Ramke and Howard McCord.. This year David Baratier will be the judge; past students, Pavement Saw Press interns and employees are not allowed to submit. All poems must be original, all prose must be original, fiction or translations are not acceptable. Writers who have had volumes of poetry and/or prose under 40 pages printed or printed in limited editions of no more than 500 copies are eligible. Submissions are accepted during the months of June, July, and until August 15th. All submissions must have an August 15th, 2008, or earlier, postmark. This is an award for first books only.

If you wish to send via regular mail your manuscript should be accompanied by a check in the amount of $20.00 made payable to Pavement Saw Press. All US contributors to the contest will receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Add $3 (US) for other countries to cover the extra postal charge. Do not include an SASE for notification of results, this information will be sent with the free book. Do not send the only copy of your work. All manuscripts are recycled and individual comments on the manuscripts cannot be made.

If you wish to submit electronically, you should send $27.00 via paypal to [redacted]. We will then send you an e-mail confirmation as well as where to e-mail the manuscript. Electronic submissions need to be sent as PDF files or as word (.doc) files. Other formats are not accepted. The extra cost is to cover the paypal fees as well as the time, labor, ink, and so on, to print out your manuscript. In addition to the prize winner, sometimes another anonymous manuscript is chosen, if enough entries arrive. This â€œeditors choiceâ€ manuscript will be published under a standard royalty contract. A decision will be reached in November. Entries should be sent to:

Pavement Saw Press
Transcontinental Award Entry

321 Empire Street
Montpelier, OH 43543

All submissions must have an August 15th, or earlier, postmark or paypal payment. Submissions are accepted during the months of June, July, and August only. If you have questions, please ask us: [redacted]

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
321 Empire Street
Montpelier OH 43543
http://pavementsaw.org

Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at
http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1

↑ Index

61. mIEKAL aND

Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?

Fri 8 Aug 2008

(A bit off topic since these are not being turned into movies.) If there is any interest in a more vispo approach to the graphic novel the work of Paul Zelevansky has always struck a chord with me. I especially like "The Book of Takes" & "The Case for the Burial of Ancestors."

& of course there is the amazing & otherworldly Codex Seraphinianus created by Luigi Seraphini

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Codex_Seraphinianus

~mIEKAL

↑ Index

62. Bobbie Lurie
for Amy: film/ lit course w "poetry" angle
Fri 8 Aug 2008

Amy, the recent film "Reprise" from Norway is about writers--painful to watch in many ways/ lots of it felt stolen from Jules et Jim--but it certainly does focus on writers--in a pretty horrible way but it's playing now so...thought I'd suggest it though don't recommend in sense of "good film" since it's not since there was no viewing "pleasure" on my part--but students might relate--Bobbi Date: Thu, 7 Aug 2008 13:45:00 -0700 From: amy king <[redacted]> Subject: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle

Dear Listees,

I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can recommend a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely, or a representation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, disintegrating the person in the process. For instance, I wouldn't use that Sylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth Paltrow. Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful ...

Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?

Thanks,

Amy

_____

↑ Index

63. William Sylvester
Re: for Amy: film/ lit course w
Fri 8 Aug 2008

There is a wonderful film about a variety of responses to art, called Le Gou^t des autres. Specifically it has a scene from Racine's play Be're'nice-- but done in "modern way" that has satirical overtones. It might cause some argument about how people "should" behave.

If not for your class, it holds your attention throughout.

[redacted]

On Fri Aug 8 11:02 , Bobbie Lurie <[redacted]> sent:

>Amy, the recent film "Reprise" from Norway is about writers--painful to watch in many ways/ lots of it felt stolen from Jules et Jim--but it certainly does focus >on writers--in a pretty horrible way but it's playing now so...thought I'd suggest >it though don't recommend in sense of "good film" since it's not since there >was no viewing "pleasure" on my part--but students might relate--Bobbi

>Date: Thu, 7 Aug 2008 13:45:00 -0700
>From: amy king [redacted]>
>Subject: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
>
>Dear Listees,
>
>I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can recomme= >nd a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely, or a r= >epresentation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, disin= >tegrating the person in the process.=A0 For instance, I wouldn't use that S= >ylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth Paltrow.= >=A0 Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful ...
>
>Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?
>
>Thanks,
>
>Amy
>
>
>_____
>
>
>

↑ Index

64. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: for Amy: film/ lit course w "poetry" angle
Fri 8 Aug 2008

There are lots of movies about writers. The trick is finding the good ones. Possibilities:

Knut Hamsun's Hunger.

The Curse of the Spider Woman. At first blush, this is not be about writing or a writer at all. But one of the inmates in jail in that movie spins a fascinating Nazi love story (a gay sado-masochistic fantasy) to pass time. To me, The Curse is one of the best films about the process of writing, how writing is associated with creating a style and how writing's relationship with political and personal events is often tangential. It is a great movie about the fusion of politics with art.

*Under the Volcano

*Ciao,

Murat*

*

On Fri, Aug 8, 2008 at 11:02 AM, Bobbie Lurie <[redacted]> wrote:

> Amy, the recent film "Reprise" from Norway is about writers--painful to watch in many ways/ lots of it felt stolen from Jules et Jim--but it certainly does focus > on writers--in a pretty horrible way but it's playing now so...thought I'd suggest
> it though don't recommend in sense of "good film" since it's not since there > was no viewing "pleasure" on my part--but students might relate--Bobbi
> Date: Thu, 7 Aug 2008 13:45:00 -0700
> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> Subject: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
>
> Dear Listees,
>
> I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can recomme> nd a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely, or a r> epresentation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, disin> tegrating the person in the process. For instance, I wouldn't use that S> ylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth Paltrow.> Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful ...
>
> Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?
>
> Thanks,
>
> Amy
>
> _____

↑ Index

65. aslongasittakes
call for work-- sound poetry
Fri 8 Aug 2008

just wanted to let folks know we are looking for work for issue 2 of aslongasittakes--- submissions are rolling, but we hope to have issue 2 out in the next month and half or so-- the official call for work is below thanks, james sanders

“How long is a poem? As long as it takes to perform it.” --Bob Cobbing

a s l o n g a s i t t a k e s, a sound poetry magazine published by the Atlanta Poets Group, is seeking submissions. We are looking for sound poetry, scores for sound poetry and essays on sound poetry. “What is ‘sound poetry’?” you ask. Good question. It’s one of those know it when you see (hear) it kind of things. It’s probably not music (thanks Dick Higgins). It might be noise. If you think about a spectrum of possible noise made by the human body (or simulations thereof or substitutions therefor), and at one end of the spectrum is a person reading her poem and at the other end is abstract noise, we’re looking for works that fall towards the latter end. We are looking for works in/of/against the tradition(s) of Ball, Schwitters, Dûfrène, Henri Chopin, Jandl, Cobbing, The Four Horsemen, Fylkingen Group, Öyvind Fahlström. . . hopefully by now you get the idea. We’re looking for stuff that will push/redefine the limits. The magazine is Web-based.

Please send submissions to [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]> in one of the following formats: .mp3, .wav, .wma, or flac. Please query before sending in other formats. If you can’t get us the work via email, just send an email and let us know, and we can find another way. We don’t know how long it will take to get back to you on your submissions, just be cool. We can’t pay you anything for your work. All work that appears in the magazine will be available for download from the magazine’s site under the Creative Commons’ /Attribution Non-commercial Share Alike/ license (http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/); if you are not comfortable with making your work available in that way, let us know and we can probably work something out.

“How long is a poem? As long as it takes to perform it.” --Bob Cobbing

a s l o n g a s i t t a k e s, ein Webmagazin für Lautpoesie, das bei der Atlanta Poets Group erscheint, akzeptiert noch Beiträge für die Erstausgabe. Wir sind auf der Suche nach Lautpoesie, Scores und Essays über Lautpoesie. "Was ist Lautpoesie?" fragt man. Gute Frage. Man erkennt sie, wenn man sie sieht oder hört. Wahrscheinlich ist es keine Musik (danke Dick Higgins). Es könnte Lärm sein, Geräusche. Man stelle sich das gesamte Spektrum menschlicher Geräusche vor (oder auch Simulationen und Nachahmungen dieser) und an einem Ende dieses Spektrums ist jemand, der ein Gedicht liest und am anderen Ende ist ein abstrakter Laut, dann suchen wir eher nach Beiträgen, die zu letzterem Ende tendieren. Wir suchen nach Arbeiten in der-, beziehungsweise in Anlehnung an-, oder auch gegen die Tradition Balls, Schwitters', Dûfrènes, Henri Chopins, Jandls, Cobbings, The Four Horsemens ... Hoffentlich ist jetzt klar was gemeint ist. Wir suchen Arbeiten, die an die Grenzen gehen und sie neu definieren. a s l o n g a s i t t a k e s ist als Onlinemagazin konzipiert.

Bitte sendet uns (Geräusch-)Beiträge als mp3, wav, wma, oder flac files an [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]>. Scores und Essays gerne als Word oder pdf Dokumente. Falls ihr andere Formate bevorzugt, fragt bitte vorher an. Wenn ihr eure Beiträge nicht per E-Mail schicken könnt, sagt bescheid und wir finden eine andere Lösung. Reicht ihr eine Arbeit ein, wissen wir nicht, wie lange es dauert bis wir uns zurückmelden, habt Geduld. Wir können kein Honorar zahlen. Alle Beiträge, die im Magazin erscheinen, werden zum download von unserer Seite zur Verfügung stehen, gemäß der Creative Commons' Attribution Non-commercial Share Alike license (http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/). Sollte es nicht in deinem Sinne sein, deine Arbeit so zur Verfügung zu stellen, sag uns bescheid und wir einigen uns anders.

<>aslongasittakes, un magazine de poésie publié par le group, the Atlanta Poets Group cherche des soumissions. Nous cherchons la poésie du son, les scores pour la poésie du son et des rédactions sur la poésie du son. Qu'est-ce que la poésie du son ? Bonne question. C'est quelque chose que vous reconnaissez lorsque vous l'entendez. En toute probabilité, ce n'est la musique (grâce a Dick Higgins) Il est possible que ce soit des bruits. Si vous pensez à un Spectrum de bruit faits par le corps humain(ou bien donc des simulations ou substitutions), et qu' à un côté du Spectrum soit quelqu'un qui lit sa poésie, et qu'a l'autre côté soit le bruit abstrait, sachez que nous cherchons des travaux qui mènent à ceux-là. Nous cherchons celles qui sont dans la tradition de, de la même tradition que ou bien contre la tradition de Ball, Schwitters, Dûfrène, Henri Chopin, Jandl, Cobbing, The Four Horsemen, Fylkingen Group, Öyvind Fahlström. . . peut-être que vous ayez l'idée ? Nous cherchons des travaux qui redéfiniront ou pousseront les limites. Le magazine n'est qu'à l'internet.

Veuillez de soumettre vos travaux à [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]> en un des formats suivants, .mp3, .wav, .wma, or flac. Veuillez de vous renseigner sur d'autre format avant d'en envoyer. Actuellement, nous ne savons pas le temps qu'il faudra pour choisir celles que nous publierons, veuillez de patienter. Nous ne sommes pas capables de vous payer les soumissions. Tous les travaux apparaissant dans le magazine seront disponibles à télécharger par the Creative Commons' /Attribution Non-commercial Share Alike/ license

(http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/); si vous n'est pas a l'aise avec ce règle, il possible de trouver d'autres solutions. <>

“Hur långt är ett poem? Så långt som det tar att framföra det.” –Bob Cobbing

a s l o n g a s i t t a k e s, ett ljudpoesi magasin publicerat av Atlanta Poets Group söker förslag till öppningsnumret. Vi söker efter rader av ljudpoesi och essäer av ljudpoesi. ”Vad är ’ljudpoesi’?” Kanske du undrar, bra fråga. Det är en sån där sak som man vet vad det är när man ser (hör) det. Det är nog inte musik (tack Dick Higgins) det kan vara oväsen. Om du tänker dig ett spektra av möjliga oväsen gjorda av den mänskliga kroppen (eller simuleringar därav eller ersättningar därför), i en ända av spektrat är en person som läser hennes dikt och i den andra ändan är det abstrakt oväsen, vi letar efter verk som lutar mot det sistnämnda. Vi letar efter verk i/av/i mot traditionen av Ball, Schwitters ,Dûfrène, Henri Chopin, Jandl, Cobbing, The Four Horsemen, Fylkingen Group, Öyvind Fahlström… Förhoppningsvis förstår du nu vad vi menar. Vi letar efter saker som kommer att flytta/omdefiniera gränserna.Magasinet kommer att vara webb-baserat.

Vänligen skicka in bidrag till [redacted] i något av följande format: .mp3, .wav, .wma, eller .flac. Noter eller essäer som Word-dokument eller .pdf. Var vänlig kontrollera med oss innan du skickar i något annat format. Ifall du inte kan skicka in ditt bidrag via e-post, var vänlig hör av dig för alternativa vägar. Vi vet ej hur lång tid det tar innan vi hör av oss gällande ditt bidrag, var tålmodig. Vi kan ej betala för ditt verk, alla verk som förekommer i magasinet kommer finnas tillgängliga för nedladdning från magasinets hemsida i enlighet med Creative Commons’ Attribution Non-commercial Share Alike licens (http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/). Ifall du inte är bekväm med att göra dina verk tillgängliga på detta sett, hör av dig så kan vi nog lösa det på annat sätt.

<>Aslongasittakes, una rivista di poesia sonora pubblicata da Atlanta Poets Group, sta cercando proposte per il suo numero inaugurale. Cerchiamo sia poesie sonore che saggi sulla poesia sonora. Che cos’e’ la “poesia sonora”? Bella domanda. E’ una di quelle cose che capisci quando le vedi (senti). Probabilmente non e’ musica (grazie Dick Higgins). Potrebbe essere rumore. Se si pensa a uno spettro di possibile rumore creato dal corpo umano (oppure simulazioni o sostituzioni di esso), a un capo dello spettro c’è una persona che legge una sua poesia e all’altro capo dello spettro c’è del rumore astratto, noi cerchiamo lavori che inclinino di più verso il secondo capo. Cerchiamo opere nella/della/contro la tradizione di Ball, Schwitters, Dûfrène, Henri Chopin, Jandl, Cobbing, The Four Horsemen… speriamo di aver reso l’idea. Cerchiamo roba che spinga/ridefinisca i limiti. La rivista si pubblica sul web. <>

Per favore spedite le vostre proposte a [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]> in uno di questi formati: .mp3, .wav, .wma, or .flac. Vi preghiamo di chiedere prima di spedirli in altri formati. Se non potete spedire il lavoro tramite email, fatecelo sapere via email e troveremo un altro sistema. Non sappiamo quanto tempo ci vorrà per rispondervi, percio' abbiate pazienza. Non potremo pagare niente per i vostri lavori. Tutte le opere che appaiono nella rivista potranno essere scaricate dal sito della rivista, secondo la licenza Creative Commons Attribution Non-Commercial Share Alike (http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/). Se non vuoi che il tuo lavoro sia reso disponibile in questo modo faccelo sapere e probabilmente riusciremo a trovare una soluzione. <>

a s l o n g a s i t t a k e s, ek awaaz ya swar ki patrika, joki Atlanta Poets Group dwara prakashit hai, apne agle ank ke liye kaam dhond rahi hai. Hum awaaz par nirdharit kavitaein, ya phir yin kavitaon ka score ya phir yin par likhe lekh, ke ikchuk hain. Aap puchein ge ki, yeh awaaz par nirdharit kavitaein kya hein? Yeh aacha prashn hein. Yeh un cheezon jaisi hai, jo aap jab dekhein ya sune, to jane. Yeh sangeet nahi hai. Yeh shore ho sakta hai. Agar aap un sabhi aawazon ke barein mein sochein jo ki ek insan ka shareer bana sakta hein (ya phir koi aur cheez so inke jaise aawazeen nikal sakti hain), ek taraf koi apni kavita pharta ho aur dosri taraf koi nirakar, ya phir tatva ke paas, ki awaaz ya shore. Hum un kaam ke ikchuk hein jo dosre palre ki taraf bhari partein hein. Hum waise kaam ki khoj mein hain jo ki alag sa ho, ya phir angreezi mein yin kaviyeon ki tarah/ yinke khilaf mein ho: Ball, Schwitters, Dûfrène, Henri Chopin, Jandl, Cobbing, The Four Horsemen . . . Aasha hein ab aap humare khyal se jankaar ho gayein honge. Hum us tarah ke kaam dhoond rahe hein jo ki simaon ko lalkare, aur nayi simayein banaay. Yeh patrika Web mein hi milegi.

<>Kripya kar apne swar or awaaz wale kaam, [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]> ko yin formats mein bhejein: .mp3, .wav, .wma, or .flac. Lekh aur scores Word documents ya .pdfs mein bhejein. Kripya kisi aur format mein kuch bhejnein se pahle, humse jankari ley lain. Agar aap email se apna kaam humein nahi bejh sakte, to hamein bataein, taki hum koi aur intezam kar sakein. Ho sakta hai ki apke kaam milne ke baad hume aapko kuch batein mein kuch ya kafi waqt lage, isliye kripya shanti se intezaar karein. Hum apko, apke kaam ke liye, kuch de to nahi sakte, magar sabhi ke kaam, jo bhi hamare patrika mein honge, wo hamari site se Creative Commons' /Attribution Non-commercial Share Alike/ license (http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/) mein download ke liyen uplabhd honge. Agar, aapko apna kaam is tarah se sabhi ke dwara uplabdh hote dekh, pareshani hoti hai, to hamein batayein aur hum koi aur intezam karne ki koshish karein ge.

↑ Index

66. Deborah M. Poe

Re: for Amy: film/ lit course w "poetry" angle

Fri 8 Aug 2008

I saw Before Night Falls and thought it worthwhile. Julian Schnabel is an interesting director. The New York Review of Books recently had an article on his art and film recently that might be worth reading. It's that article that brought me to viewing not only The Diving Bell and the Butterfly but also Before Night Falls. There's also, of course, Wim Wender's Wings of Desire (Rilke's poetry utilized in the film so beautifully).

I just discovered this while trying to jog my memory of other films: http://www.umich.edu/~mqr/poetryinmovies.htm Might be an interesting tangent...

All best, Deborah

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Bobbie Lurie
Sent: Friday, August 08, 2008 11:03 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: for Amy: film/ lit course w "poetry" angle

Amy, the recent film "Reprise" from Norway is about writers--painful to watch in many ways/ lots of it felt stolen from Jules et Jim--but it certainly does focus on writers--in a pretty horrible way but it's playing now so...thought I'd suggest it though don't recommend in sense of "good film" since it's not since there was no viewing "pleasure" on my part--but students might relate--Bobbi

Date: Thu, 7 Aug 2008 13:45:00 -0700
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle

Dear Listees,

I'm teaching a Film/Lit course in the fall and wonder if anyone can recomme= nd a few good films that offer up poetic content, to put it vaguely, or a r= epresentation of a poet that doesn't completely romanticize the poet, disin= tegrating the person in the process.=A0 For instance, I wouldn't use that S= ylvia Plath film that came out a few years ago, starring Gweneth Paltrow.= =A0 Anything that incorporates the poet's writing would be wonderful ...

Did anyone see "Before Night Falls" who thinks it's worthwhile?

Thanks,

Amy

↑ Index

67. David Chirot

Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?

Fri 8 Aug 2008

The level of artistry, writing and production in comics has changed continually and radically over the last forty years, with the inclusion of ever more "forms of content" and "content of forms." Changing technologies greatly affected everything involved at every level of production, whether it is a DIY project or one of the truly incredible Japanese graphic novels. The UK also produces some extraordinary works, often far more interesting in terms of ideas and visual art than American ones.

On the other hand, especially since Punk DIY, you can find a continual outpouring of really great low-fi, low-tech, low-budget comics and Zines entirely hand made, hand drawn, painted, collaged, cheaply xeroxed or printed off any old printer available. Many aspects of the hand made works are very exciting and stimulating. Among them are the "dirtiness" which vanishes from the more high tech productions, and especially in the use of digital technologies. The roughness brings texture in a rawer, more direct way, and, done by a practised person, conveys shades of emotion and thought that elude for the most part the digital. There's also more inclusion of the spontaneous aspect of the accident, as opposed to the mechanisms of "chance operations." As many DIY comix and Zines show, it's an excellent media for Anarchisms and Anarchists.

The Japanese have invented an incredible variety of genres, styles of images, methods of "telling a story"in comics with often a great many frames not using any language at all. Comics in Japan are the most widely read form of literature.

(Japan's bestseller lists now include also "cell phone novels" written using text messaging. The huge international hit Girls of Riyadh by the Saudi writer Rajaa Alsanea is constructed of emails from an anonymous member of an Internet group about the life of her friends and herself. This book, though banned in Saudi Arabia, has generated an explosion of "chick lit" and more serious writing by women in the Arabic speaking world.The Internet, which does not involve physical meeting, and other constrictions of strictly practised Islamic social and private lives. creates a contemporary secular space in which otherwise forbidden forms of communication are allowed to take place. I wrote here before of the cell phone novels and of being at a reading by Rajaa Alasanea.)

The wave of films made from comics over the last thirty years has a lot to do with the series of writers' strikes in Hollywood. After the collapse of the old model of the studio system in the 1950's, the pay and use of writers began to change. Increasingly, a writer could demand much more pay than ever before, At the same time, with many writers growing up with television, the understandings of the uses of dialogue began to shift. Dialogue grew more spare, with ever more emphasis on special effects and action. Between 1950 and 1990 dialogue in mainstream American films declined by 40 percent. (And after Desert Storm, International news on American TV declined 40 percent "almost overnight"and continues to decline.)

The series of Writers Strikes since 1990 have helped fuel the heavy dependence on remakes of American and foreign films, the film versions of comics and the transfers of TV shows to film. The already familiar "concept" of a film via its previous versions and incarnations, becomes far more important than the actual "content" within the film. The necessity for writers, or skilled writers, declines, except perhaps in the advertising and marketing departments. The huge sums poured into promotion also means there's less reason to pay for writers who will cost more than a sort of "minimum wage."

As so many films became increasingly like comic books it was only logical that there are more films made from comic books and tv cartoons.

A movie which made use of alterations of "straight" cinema and rotoscope, which has the look and feel of a comic, is A Scanner Darkly, from Philip K. Dicks' novel. The switching back and forth from cinema to rotoscope images emphasizes the the "slit vision" and "split identity" of the protagonist and his simultaneously being a drug addict and the narcotics agent who is assigned to spy on himself, with a complete surveillance system set up in his shared residence that he observes on the screens at his place of employment.

The films where one finds a real Visual Poetry of the image in recent years are primarily from Hong Kong and especially in the last decade, South Korea and Thailand. The best "experimental" oriented films I have seen in a long time were from Malaysia, Thailand and Lebanon/Palestine.

Since the early years of the Cinema's mass popularity around the world, there have been "Cine-Romans"--"Film-Novels," which are told through fotos (also called "Foto-Roman")--of actors/models who "act out' the scenes. The camera angles used are often a hybrid of a comic and cinema "look," primarily using the close-up for "dramatic effect," to be sure. There are some genres of these that are made for persons who are illiterate or barely literate. Everything is told through the framing of the images, their sequence and within the frames through the facial and gestural expressions of the "actors."

These were supplemented historically by the appearance of the "Tele-Romans" which use a style modeled after television. The imagery is actually different from the Cine-Romans in many ways, that is, the framing of it and the difference in "definition" of the image, a matter of difference one finds in drawing as done in various kinds of comics. There are ones I have seen that use the same actors posing and gesturing a kind of short hand version of the soap operas they appear in on tv.

Interestingly, the Tele-Romans I have seen followed closely the changes in the Tele-Image on screen, with of course, additions in the gaudier ones of color and an increased definition in the images. Also a greater variety of tele-angles and the appearance of more "background scenery" as well as more detailed interiors. More trees, distant mountains outdoors; more furniture, pots and pans, elaborate bedrooms in the interiors. This greatly aids the "appearance of wealth," necessary to some of the major characters, who before had only one or two objects by which it was indicated that they were, indeed,fabulously rich.

Some of the really old Tele-Romans a friend in France had were on really cheap paper and the images were almost fuzzy, as though the "Tele" the artist used for inspiration had poor reception. Or perhaps just a poor eyesight! As was often charged to M. Cezanne by those who found his work so abominable, including those writing his obituaries.

(The obituaries for Cezanne are the most virulent I have ever seen for an artist in any media. "An abomination in the face of Nature!" is a typical of the phrases employed, and rather mild compared to many. While a few acknowledge some young artists find Cezanne an inspiration and a "genius," this is usually attributed to being a "prank" on the part of the young artists, to jerk the chain of their elders and the critics.)

The problem often is, as with these enraged critics still heaping dung on Cezanne even as he enters at last a peaceful rest from their strident, annoying noise, that it is not simply "new forms, technologies, materials" which make a work "new, radical, innovative," it is the Art of Looking itself which is different from that of the constraints of the contemporary "scene."

Significantly, Cezanne's "problems" were often depicted--derivisively as well as by scholars-- as being an undiagnosed form of astygmatism. This "bad eyesight," as well as his obviosuly "crude drawing" and "wrong perspectives," and .in his later works, the "atrocity" of many being appearing to be "'unfinished," "incomplete," "massive failures before the work of the Creator, " al these things added up to "proofs" that the painter from Aix was not only unable to see properly at all, he was also completely crazy in persisting to fob off these atrocities as "paintings."

The paradox is that the "bad and crazy vision" of the dead artist was perceived by Picasso and others, and much earlier by Pere Tanguy and Vollard, as in actuality the work of a lifetime devoted to a new way of seeing, and finding the language in painting with which to convey it. The depth of this vision is so profound that it completely changed what was possible to think of as painting, such as for example, to conceive of an "abstract" painting which is at the same a "still life with chair caning " or newspaper glued into it. To be able to see simulatensouly the abstract and the concrete not as sepearte, but in fact, right before one's eyes, in Nature.

Very soon after his death, Cezanne's seeing provided a great opening for the first artists to be influenced by comics, the cinema, the automobile, the ariplane, telegraph, radio, telephone and al the new machines of war.

It is not so much new machines, new objects, which change the "appearances of things," but the ways in which they are seen, by what Robert Smitshon called "the Art of Looking," or by way of the "New Visions" which are produced in order to perpuate ownership and control. These create their own "ways of seeing" according to specific standards, which become the "accepted versions." Acceleartations of these "versions" and "stanadrds' create a sense of the speed of the New. The concept of "new ways of seeing" becomes a proliferating series of more or less imposed and enforced illusions. The vaccum created in the eye of what had been "an Art of Looking" becomes filled with the never ceasing, massive production of "new objects of sight" and the entropy of the ability to see outside a sphere of illusion, which does indeed begin in "the blank and ruin within one's own eye."

On Thu, Aug 7, 2008 at 11:41 PM, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:

> yeah baybeeee!!!!
>
> Skip Fox wrote:
>
> Gary Sullivan!
>
> On Aug 7, 2008, at 1:50 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:
>
> lots of comic books/graphic novels being turned into movies.
>
> a possible (?) parallel:
>
> shakespearean tragedy arose, in part, from morality plays and revenge dramas. it feels like something more interesting than comic books is trying > to emerge from the comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them.
>
> the stylized, concise, one-liner language moving toward something more

> flexibly poetical?
>
> the black and white revenge morality moving toward something more complex?
>
> the 'superhero' becoming less 'super' and less 'hero'.
>
> probably not. just a thought.
>
> maybe though. one for the shadow.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

68. amy king

Sun, Aug. 10th @ 5 p.m. --Bryant & Kaipa [on behalf of Sueyeun Juliette Lee]

Fri 8 Aug 2008

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Sueyeun Juliette Lee
Subject: listing for the poetics listserve?
To: amy king

Dear Lovely Friends,I've organized a reading for one of my stellar Corollary authors, Summi Kaipa, on Sunday August 10th in Brooklyn. It is a rare treat to have her on the East Coast, and I'm thrilled at the opportunity to introduce her work to new audiences as well as invite those already familiar with her writing to have the pleasure of hearing her read. She'll be reading with the equally talented Tisa Bryant, whose recent book Unexplained Presence ought to be on everyone's reading list. Their bios are located below. Sunday, August 10th5pmCorollary Press Presents Summi Kaipa and Tisa BryantUnnameable Books (Previously Adam's Books)456 Bergen Street, Brooklynwww.unnameablebooks.netwww.corollarypress.blogspot.com Tisa Bryant is the author of Unexplained Presence (Leon Works, 2007), a collection of original, hybrid essays that remix narratives from eurocentric film, literature and visual arts and zoom in on the black presences operating within them. She is currently working on [the curator], a fiction that meditates on identity, visual culture and the lost films of auteur Justine Cable, co-editing an anthology for AIDS Project Los Angeles, and is madly working to get Vol. 2 F-K of the Encyclopedia Project in the hopper. Summi Kaipa has authored several chapbooks, including "The Epics" (Leroy Press), "One: I Beg You Be Still" (Belladonna), and most recently "The Language Parable" (Corollary Press). For eight years, she was the editor of Interlope, a magazine publishing innovative writing by Asian Americans, and in 2002, she received a Potrero Nuevo Fund Prize to write and produce her first play. Once a resident of SF's bustling Mission District, Kaipa now resides in a quiet neighborhood in North Berkeley, where she has been earning a degree in clinical psychology and making excruciatingly slow progress on her first full-length manuscript. Corollary Press is a small chapbook series devoted to new work by writers of color. Published out of Philadelphia, all books are hand-sewn in small editions of 150. Sueyeun Juliette Lee, the editor, specifically seeks out work by authors that challenge notions of difference, aesthetics, and genre.

www.unnameablebooks.netwww.corollarypress.blogspot.com

_____

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

69. amy king

Sun, Aug. 10th @ 5 p.m. --Bryant & Kaipa [on behalf of Sueyeun Juliette Lee] CORRECTED

Fri 8 Aug 2008

---------- Forwarded message ----------

From: Sueyeun Juliette Lee

Subject: listing for the poetics listserve?

To: amy king

Dear Lovely Friends,

I've organized a reading for one of my stellar Corollary authors, Summi Kaipa, on Sunday August 10th in Brooklyn. It is a rare treat to have her on the East Coast, and I'm thrilled at the opportunity to introduce her work to new audiences as well as invite those already familiar with her writing to have the pleasure of hearing her read. She'll be reading with the equally talented Tisa Bryant, whose recent book Unexplained Presence ought to be on everyone's reading list. Their bios are located below.

Sunday, August 10th

5pm

Corollary Press Presents Summi Kaipa and Tisa
Bryant

Unnameable Books (Previously Adam's Books)

456 Bergen Street, Brooklyn

www.unnameablebooks.net

www.corollarypress.blogspot. com

Tisa Bryant is the author of Unexplained Presence (Leon Works, 2007), a collection of original, hybrid essays that remix narratives from eurocentric film, literature and visual arts and zoom in on the black presences operating within them. She is currently working on [the curator], a fiction that meditates on identity, visual culture and the lost films of auteur Justine Cable, co-editing an anthology for AIDS Project Los Angeles, and is madly working to get Vol. 2 F-K of the Encyclopedia Project in the hopper.

Summi Kaipa has authored several chapbooks, including "The Epics" (Leroy Press), "One: I Beg You Be Still" (Belladonna), and most recently "The Language Parable" (Corollary Press). For eight years, she was the editor of Interlope, a magazine publishing innovative writing by Asian Americans, and in 2002, she received a Potrero Nuevo Fund Prize to write and produce her first play. Once a resident of SF's bustling Mission District, Kaipa now resides in a quiet neighborhood in North Berkeley, where she has been earning a degree in clinical psychology and making excruciatingly slow progress on her first full-length manuscript.

Corollary Press is a small chapbook series devoted to new work by writers of color. Published out of Philadelphia, all books are hand-sewn in small editions of 150. Sueyeun Juliette Lee, the editor, specifically seeks out work by authors that challenge notions of difference, aesthetics, and genre.

www.unnameablebooks.net

www.corollarypress.blogspot. com

↑ Index

70. Stephen Baraban

Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?

Fri 8 Aug 2008

Please note that Marjane Satrapi's graphic novel "Persepolis" will not attain cinematic adaptation in the future, as per Alison C.'s statement. The animated film version has been made, and was released in the US on December 25, 2007, in the UK in April, 2008. One can now get a DVD of it. I was delighted to read just now in the Wikipedia article about "Persepolis" that in Tehran there was some chance to see the film in February, though with excisions for sexual content.

Having been entranced by the film in early 2008, I had thought of writing something about it on the List at that time but I shied away. I was struck by the moment when Marjane is newly married (having returned to Iran after running into very hard times in Vienna, where her parents had sent her to be schooled because they were afraid of how outspoken she was and how much trouble she would thus encounter from the guardians of the Revolution). Her husband suggests that they leave the country and its morality police behind and go to the West. Marjane says oh no the West is where they don't care if you starve and die in the streets.

So there you have it, I thought. The film elaborates for the audience the specific issues of living in a country like Iran (the heavy presence of morality police scrutinizing women's clothing, scrutinizing everyone to try to stop ilicit partying from going on, and life-drawing class in Art School involves drawing a woman in a burqa, etc. etc. etc.) and the issues of living in the West (including sheer indifference to utterly unfortunate people right in front of one's eyes).

One sees in the film and the graphic novel upon which it is based vivid depictions of contrasting sorts of societies. But one is NOT in the realm of the sort of facile argumentation, not unknown on this List, that says, oh you think there is something wrong with the restrictions put on women in Iran, well all over the United States women are being forced, forced I tell you, to wear high heels.

S

--- On Thu, 8/7/08, Alison Croggon <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: Alison Croggon <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them -> ?
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Thursday, August 7, 2008, 6:23 PM
> Graphic novels have long been complex and interesting. If you check out the work of Shaun Tan (Australian graphic novelist whose book The Arrival, a parable about immigration, is exquisite) or Marjane Satrapis's graphic novel Persepolis, about her childhood in Iran under the revolution (soon to be a movie) or indeed David Lloyd and Alan Moore's graphic novel collaborations (including V for Vendetta), Art Spiegelman's Maus: A Survivor's Tale (about the Holocaust) and many many others, you'll see a rich vein of stuff. Not to mention the whole tradition of manga and anime...
>
> A
>
> On Fri, Aug 8, 2008 at 7:55 AM, Skip Fox <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Gary Sullivan!
>
> On Aug 7, 2008, at 1:50 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:
>
> lots of comic books/graphic novels being turned into movies.
>
> a possible (?) parallel:
>
> shakespearean tragedy arose, in part, from morality plays and revenge dramas. it feels like something more interesting than comic books is trying to emerge from the comic book -> graphic novel -> movie of them.
>
> the stylized, concise, one-liner language moving toward something more

> flexibly poetical?
>
> the black and white revenge morality moving > toward something more > complex?
>
> the 'superhero' becoming less
> 'super' and less 'hero'.
>
> probably not. just a thought.
>
> maybe though. one for the shadow.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
> accept all posts. Check
> http://epc.buffalo.edu/poetics/
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> all posts. Check guidelines
>
> all posts. Check guidelines
>
> --
> Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

71. Stephen Vincent
New de Blog - Google Bus line et al
Fri 8 Aug 2008

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Some pieces - City/San Francisco photographs juxtaposed with commentary:

Google Bus line (that is, in line for the Google Bus)
Franz Kline - Ghost

Pink Couple at the Door
City Psyche #2 - Up Against the Church

Pictures wrestling with text, text wrestling with pictures.

As always, comments appreciated.

Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

72. David Kirschenbaum
Small Press Needed for Sept. 21 at Boog Fest
Fri 8 Aug 2008

Greetings,

Boog City¹s looking for a small press to pinch-hit here in nyc during our second annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival as part of ³d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press² series in exile. The event is on Sun. Sept. 21, 2008 at 3:00 p.m.

Below this note is our invite letter, which spells everything out.

Please backchannel any inquiries or suggestions.

Thanks,
David

[redacted]

Hi,

David Kirschenbaum here. I¹m the editor and publisher of Boog City, a New York City-based small press and community newspaper now in its 18th year. I¹d like to invite you to take part in year six of our ³d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press² series.

Once a month I have a different non-NYC press host and feature three or more of their authors to read (we¹ve had as many as 10 for one press and usually have 3-6) for 60 minutes total. We also have a musical act perform two 15-20 minute sets. If the visiting press is able to book the musical act that¹s preferred, so it¹s truly their night, if not I can book one that I think will work well with the night. (Also, once a year we play host to our NYC brethren.)

Normally the series is held at Chelsea¹s ACA Galleries (http://acagalleries.com/), but for this bonus event it will be at Unnameable

Books (456 Bergen St., Brooklyn) on Sun. Sept. 21 at 3:00 p.m. as part of our our second annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival.

We started the series in August 2003. In our first five seasons we¹ve hosted:

(locations are at the time of the event)

Non-NYC levy lives presses, 2003 to present a+bend press (Davis, Calif.), Jill Stengel, ed.

above/ground press (Ottawa, Canada), Rob McLennan, ed.
Aerial Magazine/Edge Books (Washington, D.C.), Rod Smith, ed.
Ahadada Books (Burlington, Canada), Jesse Glass and Daniel Sendecki, eds.
Ambit/Furniture Press (Baltimore), Christophe Casamassima, ed.
Anchorite Editions (Albany, N.Y.), Chris Rizzo, ed.
Antennae (Chicago and Berlin), Jesse Seldess, ed.
Big Game Books (Washington, D.C.), Maureen Thorson, ed.
BlazeVOX Books (Kenmore, N.Y.), Geoffrey Gatza, ed.
BookThug (Toronto, Canada), Jay Millar, ed.
Braincase Press (Northampton, Mass.), Noah Eli Gordon.
Burning Deck Press (Providence, R.I.), 45th anniversary party, Rosmarie and Keith Waldrop, eds.
The Canary (Kemah, Texas), Joshua Edwards, Anthony Robinson, and Nick Twemlow, eds.
Carve (Cambridge, Mass.), Aaron Tieger, ed.
Chax Press (Tucson, Ariz.), 20th anniversary party, Charles Alexander, ed.
Combo (Providence, R.I.), Michael Magee, ed.
Conundrum (Chicago), Kerri Sonnenberg, ed.
Corollary Press (Philadelphia), Juliette Lee, ed.
Critical Documents/Plantarchy (Oxford, Ohio), Justin Katko, ed.
Cy Press (Cincinnati), Dana Ward, ed.
Ducky (Philadelphia), Scott Edward Anderson, Dennis DiClaudio, Tom Hartman, and Jason Toogood, eds.
Duration Press (San Rafael, Calif.), Jerrold Shiroma, ed.
Ecopoetics (Lewiston, Maine), Jonathan Skinner, ed.
Fewer & Further Press (Wendell, Mass.), Jess Mynes, ed.
Firewheel Editions/Sentence, a magazine (Danbury, Conn.), Brian Clements, ed.
Habenicht Press (San Francisco), David Hadbawnik, ed.
House Press (Chicago, Buffalo, New York City), Eric Gelsinger, founder.
Instance Press (Boulder, Colo.; New York City; Oakland, Calif.), Stacy Szymaszek, co-ed.
Ixnay Press (Philadelphia), Chris and Jenn McCreary, eds.
Katalanché Press (Cambridge, Mass.), Michael Carr and Dorothea Lasky, eds.

Kelsey Street Press (Berkeley, Calif.), 30th anniversary party, Patricia Dienstfrey and Rena Rosenwasser, eds.
Kenning Editions (Berkeley, Calif.), Patrick Durgin, ed.
Meritage Press (San Francisco/St. Helena, Calif.), Eileen Tabios, ed.
Mooncalf Press (Philadelphia), CAConrad, ed.
Narrow House Recordings (Gwyn Oak, Md.), Justin Sirois, ed.
New American Writing (Mill Valley, Calif.),
Maxine Chernoff and Paul Hoover, eds.,
O Books (Oakland, Calif.), Leslie Scalapino, ed.
One Less Magazine (Williamsburg, Mass.),
Nikki Widner and David Gardner, eds.
Outside Voices (Brooklyn, N.Y.), Jessica Smith, ed.
The Owl Press (Woodacre, Calif.), Albert Flynn DeSilver, ed.
Palm Press (Long Beach, Calif.), Jane Sprague, ed.
Paper Kite Press (Kingston, Penn.),
Jennifer Hill-Kaucher and Dan Waber, eds.
Pavement Saw Press (Columbus, Ohio), David Baratier, ed.
The Poker (Cambridge, Mass.), Dan Bouchard, ed.
Punch Press/damn the caesars (Buffalo, N.Y.), Richard Owens, ed.
Skanky Possum (Austin, Texas), Hoa Nguyen and Dale Smith, eds.
Talisman House Press (Jersey City, N.J.), Edward Foster, ed.
Talonbooks (Vancouver, Canada).
The Tangent (Walla Walla, Wash.), Kaia Sand and Jules Boykoff, eds.
3rd Bed (Lincoln, R.I.), Vincent Standley, ed.
Tougher Disguises (Oakland, Calif.), James Meetze, ed.
Tripwire (San Francisco), David Buuck, ed.
The Wandering Hermit Review (Buffalo, N.Y.), Steve Potter, ed.

NYC levy lives presses, 2003 to present

A Rest Press, Ryan Murphy and Patrick Masterson, eds.
Beet/Pink Pages, Joe Maynard, ed.
Belladonna Books, Erica Kaufman and Rachel Levitsky, eds.
Cuneiform Press, Kyle Schlesinger, ed.
Cy Gist Press, Mark Lamoureux, ed.
Detour Press, Gary Sullivan, ed.
Explosive magazine/Spectacular Books, Katy Lederer, ed.
Fence, Charles Valle, co-ed, and Max Winter, poetry ed.
Fungo Monographs, Ryan Murphy ed.
Futurepoem books, Dan Machlin, ed.
Granary Press, Steve Clay, ed.
Hanging Loose Press, Bob Hershon, ed.
The Hat, Jordan Davis, co-ed.

Kitchen Press, editor Justin Marks, ed.
Litmus Press/Aufgabe, E. Tracy Grinnell, ed.
Lungfull, Brendan Lorber, ed.
Open 24 Hours, John Coletti and Greg Fuchs, ed.
Pompom, Allison Cobb, Jennifer coleman, Ethan Fugate, and Susan Landers, eds.
Portable Press at YoYo Labs, Brenda Iijima, ed.
Sona Books, Jill Magi, ed.
Stay Free! magazine, Carrie McLaren, ed.
Tender Buttons, Lee Ann Brown, ed.
Ugly Duckling Presse, Anna Moschovakis and Matvei Yankelevich, collective members.
United Artists, Lewis Warsh, ed.
Urban Folk zine, Dave Cuomo, ed.

Hope this finds you well.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

73. Ann Stedt
use these words seeks submissions
Fri 8 Aug 2008

A new quarterly online poetry journal, use these words, seeks submissions.

Along with a brief contributor' s note, send 1-3 poems, each using all of the following words to usethesewords(at)gmail. com (replace (at) with @)

fiddle, sleep, window, lip, fish, shoulder, pluck

Please paste your poems into the body of your e-mail. Attachments will not be read.

↑ Index

74. andrew burke
Re: Advice -- Film/Lit course w "Poetry" angle
Sat 9 Aug 2008

Barfly by Buk. or that movie about Wordsworth his sister and Coleridge etc ... one word title, starting with R ... Any help here?

Andrew

2008/8/8 jared schickling <[redacted]>:
> Dear Amy,
>
> I'd recommend The River Niger starring Louis Gossett Jr., James Earl Jones, and Cicely Tyson. All's framed by James Earl's character composing a single poem, which he finally reads. If I'm remembering right the poet's a commercial painter.
>
> JS
> _____
> Get more from your digital life. Find out how.
> http://www.windowslive.com/default.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Home2_082008
>

--
Andrew
http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/

↑ Index

75. Tammy Ho
Cha: New Issue and Call for Submissions
Sat 9 Aug 2008

THE FOURTH ISSUE OF CHA: AN ASIAN LITERARY JOURNAL IS NOW AVAILABLE

We are pleased to announce the publication of the fourth issue of Cha: An Asian Literary Journal (August 2008). The new issue features 24 writers/artists: Gil Azouri, Isabela Banzon, David Braden, Winnie Chau, Grace V. S. Chin, SuzAnne C. Cole, Rocco De Giacomo, Lee Herrick, Louise Ho, Philip Holden, Kristy Joe, Ken Kamoche, William Kimzey, Gilbert Koh, Franky Lau, Mary Lee, Manuel Libres Librodo Jr, Lyn Lifshin, Reid Mitchell, Evelde Mourne, Papa Osmubal, Thaila Ramanujam, Margaret Stawowy and Ouyang Yu. To read the issue, please visit our website at www.asiancha.com.

Our first anniversary issue is due out in November 2008. Poet and historian Reid Mitchell will lend us his expertise in the role of guest editor. If you are interested in having your works considered for publication in this special issue of Cha, please read our submission guidelines for details.

Tammy Ho & Jeff Zroback/ The Editors
Cha: An Asian Literary Journal/ www.asiancha.com

↑ Index

76. Obododimma Oha

Re: use these words seeks submissions

Sat 9 Aug 2008

---

i would like to visit the website of usethesewords. could you provide the page, please? obododimma.

----- Original Message ----
From: Ann Stedt <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, August 8, 2008 10:24:44 PM
Subject: use these words seeks submissions

A new quarterly online poetry journal, use these words, seeks submissions.

Along with a brief contributor' s note, send 1-3 poems, each using all of the following words to usethesewords(at)gmail. com (replace (at) with @)

fiddle, sleep, window, lip, fish, shoulder, pluck

Please paste your poems into the body of your e-mail. Attachments will not be read.

↑ Index

77. Gary Sullivan

Blurred Vision 4 launch party in NYC

Sat 9 Aug 2008

Blurred Vision 4 launch party tonight, Saturday Aug 9, from 7-10pm, at People Lounge, 163 Allen Street, in Manhattan, between Ludlow and Eldridge, a block and a half south of Houston.

http://www.podgallery.com/html/blurredbookspages/bv4preview.html

A review of BV4 in Broken Frontier:

http://www.brokenfrontier.com/reviews/details.php?id=1976

See a page from "The Feminist," Brandon Downing and my contribution to BV4:

http://garysullivan.blogspot.com

_____ Got Game? Win Prizes in the Windows Live Hotmail Mobile Summer Games Trivia Contest
http://www.gowindowslive.com/summergames?ocid=TXT_TAGHM

↑ Index

78. Rob McLennan

new(ish) on rob's clever blog

Sat 9 Aug 2008

-- N 49 15.832 - W 123 05.921, :::::: POSITIONS COLLOQUIUM :::::: (Vancouver)
-- house: a (tiny) memoir
-- A brief note on D.G. Jones
-- above/ground press: fifteen (long) years
-- Revisiting Lake Nora Arms
-- what paper eats away (poem)
-- A Sing Economy
-- The Capilano Review 3.5: The Sharon Thesen Issue
-- Sarah Manguso's The Two Kinds of Decay
-- JAILBREAKS: 99 CANADIAN SONNETS, edited by Zachariah Wells
-- some (further) notes on Diane Schoemperlen etcetera...

www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at the alberta, writing blog www.albertawriting.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at ottawa poetry newsletter, www.ottawapoetry.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at the Chaudiere Books blog, www.chaudierebooks.blogspot.com

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...13th poetry coll'n - The Ottawa City Project ...novel - white
www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

79. Poetics List

Poetics List Welcome - Posting Reminders

Sat 9 Aug 2008

June 2008: Refocussed List Policy In line with our editorial focus, we do not automatically post submissions but select those we think are most useful for sustaining this online community. We appreciate all submissions, but will be more selective in what we choose to post. Queries for contact info, messages intended for just a few subscribers, messages that are not on topic, "flame" messages, and free-standing personal poems or journal entries will, in general, not be forwarded to the list.

All posts to the list must provide your full real name, as registered. If there is any discrepancy between your full name as it appears in the "from" line of the message header, please sign your post at the bottom.

"Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. We define 'flaming' as any post that resembles a personal attack or personal insult to anyone--subscriber or not. This, of course, includes racist, sexist, or other slurs as well as ad hominem arguments in which the person rather than their work is attacked; in other words while critique of a person's work is welcome (critical inquiry is one of the main functions of the list), this critique cannot extend to a critique or criticism of the person.

~~~~~

The Poetics List

Sponsored by: The Electronic Poetry Center (SUNY-Buffalo/University of Pennsylvania) and the Regan Chair (Department of English, Penn) & Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing (Penn)

Poetics List Editor: Amy King

Poetics List Editorial Board:
Charles Bernstein, Julia Bloch, Lori Emerson, Amy King, Joel Kuszai,
Nick Piombino

Note: this Welcome message is also available at the EPC/@Buffalo page

Poetics Subscription Registration (required) poetics.list --at -- gmail.com

Poetics Subscription Requests:
http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html

Poetics Listserv Archive:
http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html
~~~~~

Poetics Post:
[redacted]

Note that any correspondence sent to the Poetics List administration account takes about ten days, for response; mail to this account is checked about once per week.

C O N T E N T S:

1. About the Poetics List
2. Posting to the List
3. Subscriptions
4. Subscription Options
5. To Unsubscribe
6. Cautions
7. Flaming

June 2008: Refocussed List Policy In line with our editorial focus, we do not automatically post submissions but select those we think are most useful for sustaining this online community. We appreciate all submissions, but will be more selective in what we choose to post. Queries for contact info, messages intended for just a few subscribers, messages that are not on topic, "flame" messages, and free-standing personal poems or journal entries will, in general, not be forwarded to the list.

1. Posting to the List

Our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible. While we recognize that other lists may sponsor other possibilities for exchange, we request that those participating in this forum keep in mind the specialized and focused nature of this project and respect our decision to operate a moderated list. The Poetics List exists to support and encourage divergent points of view on innovative forms of modern and contemporary poetry and poetics, and we are committed to doing what is necessary to preserve this space for such dialog.

subscribers. All messages are reviewed by the editors in keeping with the goals of the list as articulated in this Welcome Message. The listserv is intended to be a productive communal space for discussion and announcements; as such, subscribers who do not follow listserv policy will be removed from the subscription roll.

Please note that this list is primarily concerned with discussions of poetry and poetics. We strongly encourage subscribers to post information, including web links, relating to publications (print and internet), reading series, and blogs that they have coordinated, edited or published, or in which they appear. Such announcements constitute a core function of this list. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications (print or digital) are always welcome.

The Poetics List is not a forum for a general discussion of poetry or for the exchange of poems. Queres for contact info, messages intended for just a few subscribers, "flame" messages, and free-standing personal poems or journal entries will, in general, not be forwarded to the list.

Also, please note that the Poetics List is not a "chat" list and we discourage the posting of very short messages intended for only a few subscribers. Personal queries and off-topic submissions will not be posted.

Send messages directly to the list address: [redacted].

2. About the Poetics List

Above the world-weary horizons
New obstacles for exchange arise
Or unfold,
O ye postmasters!

With the preceding epigraph, the Poetics Listserv was founded by Charles Bernstein in late 1993. Now in its fourth incarnation, the list has over 1500 subscribers worldwide. We also have a substantial number of nonsubscribing readers, who access the list through our web site (see archive URL above).

Due to the high number of subscribers, we no longer maintain the open format with which the list began (at under 100 subscribers).

Please also note that this is a not a general interest poetry list and information about this list should not be posted to directories of poetry lists. The idea is to keep the list membership to those with specific engagement related to the list's stated orientation.

In addition to being archived through the EPC and at the UB Listerv archive, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas.

Note also that Roof Books published Joel Kuszai's edited collection of the Poetics List; this is available from ROOF and also online at the EPC.

3. Subscriptions

*For all subscription requests go to
http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html.

*To subscribe for the first time click on "Subscribe (join) a List." Immediately following your subscription to the poetics listserv we ask that you email us at poetics.list --at -- gmail.com, subject-line "registration," with your full name, street address, email address, and telephone number. Failure to register at the time of subscription will result in automatic deletion from the subscription roll.

*To manage your subscription (for descriptions of the different subscription options please see section 3), click on "Subscriber's Corner."

Subscriptions to the Poetics List are free of charge, but formal registration is required. All other questions about subscriptions, whether about an individual subscription or subscription policy, should be addressed to this same administrative address.

PLEASE NOTE: All subscription-related information and correspondence remains absolutely confidential.

All posts to the list must provide your full real name, as registered. If there is any discrepancy between your full name as it appears in the "from" line of the message header, please sign your post at the bottom. Subscribers who do not include their full name with each post will be unsubscribed frorm the list.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced, which will result in your subscription being automatically terminated by the Listserv program and the automatically generated message telling you that this has occurred will also likely bounce. If this happens, you may re-subscribe to the list by the same process described above. One remedy to avoid this happening in the future: set your list options to "no-mail" and read the list on the web.

4. Subscription Options

We encourage you to alter your subscription options via the link on the right side of the screen at http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html. If you would prefer not to use the web-interface, you may also email <[redacted]> the following commands:

*to subscribe to the Poetics listserv send [redacted] this one-line message with no "subject":

*RECOMMENDED: if you wish to read the list on our web interface and not receive any messages sent directly, while remaining subscribed to the list and so eligible to send us posts, send this one-line message to <[redacted]> with no "subject": set poetics nomail. Note: this option is also useful for temporary suspension of email service.

*to reactivate Poetics e-mail send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics mail

* to receive the list in digest form (you will receive the day's individual posts in one email sent just after midnight EST), send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics digest

*to receive posts in the default option (you will receive individual postings immediately), send <[redacted]> this one- line message with no "subject": set poetics nodigest

* to receive the list in index form (you will receive a list, without the text of the posts, of the subjects discussed each day along with the author's name and address and the number of lines it comprises; you can also choose to have the index sent to you in either plain text or in HTML format with hyperlinks), send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics nohtml index --or-- set poetics html index

PLEASE NOTE: do not leave your Poetics subscription in default or digest mode if you are going to be away for any extended period of time. Your account may become flooded and you may lose Poetics messages as well as other important mail. In such cases, switch your subscription to "nomail" as recommended above.

5. To Unsubscribe

To unsubscribe (or change any of your subscription options), again, we strongly encourage you to go to the right-hand side of the screen at http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html You may also may unsubscribe by sending a one-line email to

If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note: sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to send messages old address, then resubscribe with your new email address.

6. Cautions

In moderating this list, the editors must consider sometimes competing interests. The basis for our decisions, however, rests with our collective judgment about the kind of space we want for the list.

All posts not only go out to list subscribers but also become a public part of the list archive on the web. Note that posting to the list is a form of publication and that by sending your message to the list you formally consent to such web publication. Posts are currently being indexed by search engines such as Google. It is not possible for us to remove posts from the list archive or to control search engine indexing of these posts.

For reasons of basic security, we do not allow pseudonymous subscriptions. All messages intended for the Poetics List should be sent in Text-Only format, without attachments. We do not accept HTML-formatted messages or attached files. As a general rule, keep individual posts to 1,000 words or less.

Please do not publish list postings without the express permission of the author. Posting on the list is a form of publication. Copyright for all material posted on Poetics remains with the author; material from this list and its archive may not be reproduced without the author's permission, beyond the standard rights accorded by "fair use" of published materials.

All material on the Poetics List remains the property of the authors; before you reproduce this material, in whole or in part, we ask that you get permission (by email is fine) from the authors. If they give permission, then we ask only that you say that the post or posts appeared originally on the Poetics List Used by permission of the author.

Note: Private correspondence via email and letters are always (c) the author and may not be reproduced in whole or in part without the written permission of the author. As a general rule, we will not publish posts that include such material unless they indicate that permission has been given.

We request that posters limit the number of posts they send to the list on any given day. Given that our goal is a manageable list (manageable both for moderators and subscribers), the list accepts 75 or fewer messages per day, though these paramenters may be changed at the discretion of the list moderator.

Like all systems, the listserv will sometimes be down: if you feel your message has been delayed or lost, please wait at least one day to see if it shows up, then check the archive to be sure the message is not posted there; if you still feel there is a problem, you may wish to contact the editors at <[redacted]>.

7. Flaming "Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. We define 'flaming' as any post that resembles a personal attack or personal insult to anyone--subscriber or not. This, of course, includes racist, sexist, or other slurs as well as ad hominem arguments in which the person rather than their work is attacked; in other words while critique of a person's work is welcome (critical inquiry is one of the main functions of the list), this critique cannot extend to a critique or criticism of the person.

↑ Index

80. Eireene Nealand
UC Santa Cruz Associate/Assistant professor opening
Sat 9 Aug 2008

Hello,

Just writing to let you all know that Santa Cruz is reopening its search in poetry. Despite all my complaining about the handling of the recent strike, it really is a pretty darn luxurious place to live & work.

http://www2.ucsc.edu/apo/academic_employment/jobs/509-09.pdf

e

↑ Index

81. Pierre Joris
Nomadics blog is Back
Sun 10 Aug 2008

After a month-long break, I have started posting again. Enjoy by going to: http://pjoris.blogspot.com/

Recent posts:

Mahmud Darwish (1941-2008)
Travel abuses
A tribute to Abdelwahab Elmessiri
Catchin' up is hard to do...
Thomas M. Disch, 1940-2008
Week to Come
Rising seas threaten west Antarctic

& I do hope to get back to cruisin' speed soon as I get back to the US at the end of the week.

Pierre

The poet: always in partibus infidelium -- Paul Celan

Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202
h: [redacted]
c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Paris: 09.52.80.14.18

Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

↑ Index

82. David-Baptiste Chirot

Sad news--Palestinian Poet Mahmoud Darwish dies--(AP,NY times)

Sun 10 Aug 2008

INTERNATIONAL / MIDDLE EAST

| August 9, 2008

Mahmoud Darwish, Palestinian Poet, Is Dead at 67

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mr. Darwish's prose gave voice to the Palestinian experience of exile, occupation and infighting.

_____ Reveal your inner athlete and share it with friends on Windows Live.
http://revealyourinnerathlete.windowslive.com?locale=en-us&ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WLYIA_whichathlete_us

↑ Index

83. Nicholas Karavatos

Reading in Portland on Monday the 11th

Sun 10 Aug 2008

Nicholas Karavatos

MONDAY, August 11th at 7:00pm

"I Love Mondays" Reading Series – Hosted by Dan Rafael

Broadway Books
1714 NE Broadway
Portland, OR

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of English
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

_____ Get Windows Live and get whatever you need, wherever you are. Start here. http://www.windowslive.com/default.html?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Home_082008

↑ Index

84. Charles Alexander

CHARLES OLSON: Language as Physical Fact

Mon 11 Aug 2008

ANNOUNCING A CONFERENCE IN TUCSON, ARIZONA, sponsored by Chax Press

For more information, please visit the conference web pages at http://chax.org/olson.htm

CHARLES OLSON: Language as Physical Fact

A Conference and Exhibition sponsored by Chax Press.

All events take place at the University of Arizona Poetry Center, 1508 E. Helen St., Tucson, Arizona. The UA Poetry Center is a cosponsor of this event, providing venue, staff time, technical assistance, and promotional support.

Chax Press acknowledges the support of the Arizona Commission on the Arts, with funding from the State of Arizona and the National Endowment for the Arts, and the support of the Tucson Pima Arts Council.

Conference Price:
Students $25, $15 if paid by September 26, 2008
Others $100, $70 if paid by September 26, 2008
Some scholarships and special pricing are available. Please inquire by email to [redacted], or by telephone to [redacted].

You may register 1) on the web site by clicking the appropriate button on the right hand side of the web page 2) by telephoning [redacted] and registering with a credit card or 3) by sending a registration note with your name and a check enclosed to Chax Press, 411 N 7th Ave Ste 103, Tucson, AZ 85705-8332.

Conference Schedule

1. Friday, October 10

    1. Exhibition open for viewing, 4pm – 7pm: CHARLES OLSON: Language as Physical Fact, a Suite of Broadsides from Chax Press

    2. 7pm: Keynote & Welcome, by Charles Alexander

    3. 7:30pm: Poetry Reading

1. Myung Mi Kim (introduced by Wendy Burk)
2. Anne Waldman (introduced by Barbara Henning)

2. Saturday, October 11

1. 10am: Film, POLIS IS THIS: CHARLES OLSON AND THE PERSISTENCE OF PLACE, by Vincent Ferrini, & discussion

2. 12:30pm: Brown Bag Lunch

1. a brief talk on the exhibition of broadside prints, by Charles Alexander and Chax Press assistants

3. 2:30pm: Panel on Charles Olson: Language as Physical Fact

1. Barbara Henning, Myung Mi Kim, Steve McCaffery, Tenney Nathanson, Cole Swensen, Anne Waldman (moderator to be announced)

4. 7:30pm: Poetry Reading

1. Steve McCaffery (introduced by Tenney Nathanson)
2. Cole Swensen (introduced by Charles Alexander)

Question & Answer, Closing Comments

charles alexander
chax press
[redacted]
411 N 7th ave, suite 103
tucson arizona 85705
[redacted]

↑ Index

85. Gabrielle Welford
my dissertation up at a new on-demand publisher
Mon 11 Aug 2008

---

dear folks, i've just found out that my dissertation (_too many deaths: decolonizing western academic research on indigenous cultures_) has been picked up by an on-demand publisher in england. in case you're interested, want to write a review at the site (which might interest a paper publisher), want to support me by buying a copy (a pdf file), or just go take a look (jenny james' atlantis books are also at this site), go to http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=317

the previous site that held the diss didn't allow you to buy a copy. this one does. thanks for looking! (check out the other books there.) :-) gabrielle

Gabrielle Welford, Ph.D. freelance writer, editor, teacher
[redacted]

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.1.412 / Virus Database: 268.18.4/705 - Release Date: 2/27/2007

↑ Index

86. Adam Fieled
PFS Post: Coming this Fall....
Mon 11 Aug 2008

It's going to be a helluva season this fall on PFS Post. Here is the schedule of events, which is tentative as more poets may be added and some days and dates may become "doubled up":
10/6-- Leonard Gontarek (Philly)
10/13-- Brooklyn Copeland (Oxford, UK)
10/20-- Jordan Stempleman (Prairie Village, Kansas)
10/27-- Jeff Hilson (UK)
11/3-- Paul Siegell (Philly)
11/10-- Gabriel Gudding (Bloomington, Illinois)
11/17-- Eileen Tabios (St Helena, California)
12/1-- Lars Palm (Sweden)
12/-8-- Jason Zuzga (Philly)
12/15-- Sarah Birl (Philly)

Jam-packed, loaded, and all wonderful poets' woderful work. It's all happening on PFS Post (http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com). Please stay tuned!!!

↑ Index

87. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo Newsletter 08.11.08-08.17.08
Mon 11 Aug 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
08.11.08-08.17.08

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE GOING FAST!!

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Sri Lanka/Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane Satrapi, Iran/France, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

WE ARE ALREADY 93% SOLD OUT FOR NEXT SEASON

We expect to sell out next season by subscription. If we do not, tickets for individual events will go on sale September 1.

EVENTS THIS WEEK

In a miraculous quirk of fate, there are no literary events scheduled in Buffalo this week (none that we?re aware of, at least).

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can now subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

88. Scott Howard

Book Reviewers Wanted: Reconfigurations

Mon 11 Aug 2008

We are looking for writers to review the following books:

Joel Chace, Cleaning the Mirror: New and Selected Poems (BlazeVox Books, 2008); poetry Cyrus Console, Brief Under Water (Burning Deck, 2008); poetry Caroline Dubois, You are the Business (Burning Deck, 2008); poetry Catherine Meng, Tonight's the Night (Apostrophe Books, 2007); poetry Gary Schanbacher, Migration Patterns (Fulcrum Books, 2008); short fiction

If you are interested, be in touch soon.

Reviews: 1,000 words
Deadline: October 15
Publication: November, 2008

///

W. Scott Howard
[redacted]

Reconfigurations
http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/

///

↑ Index

89. charles alexander
Re: The Poetics List
Mon 11 Aug 2008

One small error, for which I apologize.

The message I sent out about the Chax Press conference titled CHARLES OLSON: LANGUAGE AS PHYSICAL FACT, mentions the showing of the film POLIS IS THIS: CHARLES OLSON AND THE PERSISTENCE OF PLACE, which is a film of course by Henry Ferrini, not Vincent Ferrini, as our earlier announcement stated. That was an unfortunate slip on my part. It has been changed on our web site.

Please visit http://chax.org/olson.htm for more information.

Thank you,

Charles Alexander

Charles Alexander
Chax Press
411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
Tucson, AZ 85705-8332

[redacted] (Chax Press)
[redacted] (cell)
[redacted]

http://chax.org

↑ Index

90. amy king
The List of Movies with Poetry
Mon 11 Aug 2008

Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!

If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.

Enjoy:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Amy

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

91. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books

Fw: A review of Todd Moore's books are up on the new Lummox Journal issue

Mon 11 Aug 2008

----- Original Message -----
From: "Raindog" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, August 11, 2008 10:53 AM
Subject: A review of Todd Moore's books are up on the new Lummox Journal issue

> The review was written by John Yamrus and appears in the latest issue of the LJ. Just go to www.lummoxpress.com and click on the LJ3 picture.
>
> RD Armstrong
> Lummox Press

↑ Index

92. Doug Holder

Interview with Clayton Eshleman: The Man Who Translated Vallejo

Mon 11 Aug 2008

Check this interview out on the Boston Area Small Press and Poetry Scene: http://dougholder.blogspot.com

↑ Index

93. Pam Brown

the deletions

Mon 11 Aug 2008

Visit 'the deletions' for notes, events, pics and poems

http://thedeletions.blogspot.com

The Reality Street Book of Sonnets was recently...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/08/reality-street-book-of-sonnets-was.html>
The famous Lee Marvin reading series in Adelaide...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/08/famous-lee-marvin-reading-series-in.html> late night streetscapes melbourne...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/07/late-night-swanston-street-melbourne.html>
Just back from the Poetry and the Trace conferen...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/07/just-back-from-poetry-and-trace.html>
World Youth Gay I'll b...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/07/world-youth-gay-ill-be-in-melbourne-so.html>
Cover image : one panel from the four panel...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/07/ive-recently-read-maggie-nelsons.html>
société jamais-jamais & gleebooks present Three ...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/06/socit-jamais-jamais-gleebooks-present.html>
I read Julia Leigh's second book Disquiet when ...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/06/i-read-julia-leighs-second-book.html>
Just back from a couple of days in the Forbes r...<http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/2008/06/just-back-from-two-days-in-forbes.html>

best wishes from Pam Brown

---

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com website : http://www.geocities.com/p.brown/associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

↑ Index

94. Deborah M. Poe

news on the modern review?

Tue 12 Aug 2008

Anyone know what happened to http://parsifal-press.blogspot.com/2007/09/modern-review-iii1.html (Modern Review)? I think I must have missed some news?

Thank you, Deborah

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Michael Kelleher
Sent: Monday, August 11, 2008 12:04 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Literary Buffalo Newsletter 08.11.08-08.17.08

LITERARY BUFFALO
08.11.08-08.17.08

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE GOING FAST!!

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Sri Lanka/Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane Satrapi, Iran/France, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

WE ARE ALREADY 93% SOLD OUT FOR NEXT SEASON

We expect to sell out next season by subscription. If we do not, tickets for individual events will go on sale September 1.

EVENTS THIS WEEK

In a miraculous quirk of fate, there are no literary events scheduled in Buffalo this week (none that we?re aware of, at least).

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can now subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

95. blacksox
Connecting through poetry post cards
Tue 12 Aug 2008

My dear friend and wonderful poet Carmen Lopez, who is living in Guatamala--teaching. She is hoping a similar post card project can be done between her High school students and possibly an American Spanish class? Poetry on post cards would be a wonderful exchange contact her [redacted]

Peace
Russ Golata

↑ Index

96. David Chirot
The List of Movies with Poetry
Tue 12 Aug 2008

Dear Amy--

oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired Jack Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang du poete (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between an opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film" and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in the "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories" within a "jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials (Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, L'atalante esp and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add Buneul's Los Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb films--including Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines from the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese calligrpahic poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films--

the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--

Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's "seeing in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for example, -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long letter ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many languages from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--

On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!
>
> If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.
>
> Enjoy:
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
>
> Amy
>
> ———

> Recent
>
> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
>
> http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
>
> Alias
>
> http://www.amyking.org
>
> Your Suggestions
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

97. Aryanil Mukherjee

Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

Tue 12 Aug 2008

Amy/David

Yes, absolutely.....there is no film-poetry without Cocteau. Please consider adding the one David mentions and to that let me append - La Sang d'un Poete (The Blood of a Poet). These are probably two of the earliest made "poetry" films. And how could we forget - Pull My Daisy where several Beat poets star!

The Bunuel list, David, is unshrinkable...

and the Japanese films you forget probably come from the quartet - Kurosawa, Mizoguchi, Ozu, Toru. Its worthwhile to check out the much forgotten Ritwik Ghatak and Buddhadeb Dasgupta, an acclaimed poet himself.
http://www.filmref.com/notes/archives/2007/03/subarnarekha_1965.html
http://filmref.com/directors/dirpages/dasgupta.html

Finally, Amy, a re-request to keep this wonderful web-resource alive for good.

Aryanil

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of David Chirot
Sent: Tuesday, August 12, 2008 1:24 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: The List of Movies with Poetry

Dear Amy--

oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired Jack Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang du poete (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between an opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film" and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in the "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories" within a "jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials (Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, L'atalante esp and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add Buneul's Los Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb films--including Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines from the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese calligrpahic poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films--

the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--

Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's "seeing in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for example, -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long letter ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many languages from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--

On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!
>
>
>
> If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.
>
>
>
> Enjoy:
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
>
> Amy
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
>
>
>
> Recent
>
> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
>
> http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
>

>
>
> Alias
>
> http://www.amyking.org
>
>
>
> Your Suggestions
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
>
>
>
>
>
guidelines
>
>

↑ Index

98. Alison Croggon

Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

Tue 12 Aug 2008

Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei Tarkovsky, to me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems in most (if not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky. I wrote an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute time - last year, if anyone is interested -

http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-destitute.html

All best

Alison

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Amy--
>
> oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired Jack Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang du poete (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between an

opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film" and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in the "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories" within a "jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials (Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, L'atalante esp and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add Buneul's Los Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb films--including Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines from the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese calligrpahic poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films--

the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--

Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's "seeing in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for example, -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long letter
ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

> there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many languages > from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--
>
> On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!
>
> If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.
>
> Enjoy:
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
>
> Amy
>
> ———
>
> Recent
>
> http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
>
> http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
>
> Alias
>
> http://www.amyking.org

> Your Suggestions
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
>
> guidelines

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

99. Anny Ballardini
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Tue 12 Aug 2008

And I should have been the one to remind you of Pasolini, thanks. To the Canterbury Tales you should add Decameron (taken from Giovanni Boccaccio's homonymous work) in which the same Pasolini appears with Giuseppe Zigaina (painter and most important friend of the poet), the movie was also shot in this town at the Civic Museum defined by Pasolini "the most beautiful museum he has ever seen", and

A Thousand and One Nights (the original title is The Flower of the One Thousand and One Nights) a sublime poem by itself. Later on these three movies will be defined The Trilogy of life. Moreover, Pasolini chose his actors from the paintings of the masters and reproduced the same scenes directly from the paintings. He preferred Mannerism to all other styles, and his favorite painter was (if I am not wrong) Andrea del Sarto. He studied at the University of Bologna, one of his professors was Roberto Longhi (main Italian art critic, no wonder he started out from Art).

On Tue, Aug 12, 2008 at 7:23 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Amy--
>
> oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired Jack Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang du poete (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between

an opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film" and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in the "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories" within a "jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials (Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, L'atalante esp and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add Buneul's Los Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb films--including Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines from
the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese calligrpahic poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films--

the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--

Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's "seeing in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for example, -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long letter
ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many languages
from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--

On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!

If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.

Enjoy:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Amy

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

> Your Suggestions
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
>
> guidelines

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

↑ Index

100. amy king
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Tue 12 Aug 2008

Dear David,

Thanks, I added your suggestions!

Best,
Amy

_____

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

101. amy king
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Tue 12 Aug 2008

Okee dokie -- I think I added all the ones that weren't already on there. A few folks suggested some films that already appear on the list, while I also have a few repeats that I'll leave up for emphasis-sake.

Feel free to send more if you think they're worth noting! I'll keep the list intact~ http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Thanks & best,

Amy

↑ Index

102. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Wed 13 Aug 2008

---

yes this is true also a weird film with david hemmings playing the "older" gun runner rimbaud greawt film italian? maybe

On Tue, 12 Aug 2008 16:32:52 -0400 Aryanil Mukherjee <[redacted]> writes:
> Amy/David
>
> Yes, absolutely.....there is no film-poetry without Cocteau. Please > consider > adding the one David mentions and to that let me append - La Sang > d'un Poete
> (The Blood of a Poet). These are probably two of the earliest made
> "poetry"
> films. And how could we forget - Pull My Daisy where several Beat > poets
> star!
>
> The Bunuel list, David, is unshrinkable...
>
> and the Japanese films you forget probably come from the quartet - > Kurosawa,
> Mizoguchi, Ozu, Toru. Its worthwhile to check out the much forgotten
> Ritwik

> Ghatak and Buddhadeb Dasgupta, an acclaimed poet himself.
> http://www.filmref.com/notes/archives/2007/03/subarnarekha_1965.html
>
> http://filmref.com/directors/dirpages/dasgupta.html
>
> Finally, Amy, a re-request to keep this wonderful web-resource alive
> for > good.
>
>
> Aryanil
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]]
> On
> Behalf Of David Chirot
> Sent: Tuesday, August 12, 2008 1:24 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: The List of Movies with Poetry
>
> Dear Amy--
>
> oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired
> Jack
> Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang du > poete
> (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely > between an > opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the > conclusion of > the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film"
> and also > an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than
> a > building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in the > "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories"
> within a
> "jump cut"--
>
> a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials
> (Les

> Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, > L'atalante esp
> and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add
> Buneul's Los > Olvidados also)
>
> Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb
> films--including > Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-
>
> Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice over > narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-
>
> The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of > lines from > the Poe poem of that name--
>
> Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton
>
> Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film writing--
>
> Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese
> calligrpahic
> poetry and influences of literature in his works
>
> Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian > Futurism
> and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some > films--
>
> the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema
> of the > Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early > 1960's--
>
> there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--
>
> Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great > Borges
> story--
>
> Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's

> "seeing > in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--
>
> Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for
> example,
> -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes > long letter
> ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--
>
> there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many > languages
> from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment
> can't > recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--
>
>
> On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!
> >
> >
> >
> > If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me > a line.
> >
> >
> >
> > Enjoy:
> >
> > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> >
> > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> >
> > Amy
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > _____

> >
> >
> >
> > Recent
> >
> > http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> >
> > http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
> >
> >
> >
> > Alias
> >
> > http://www.amyking.org
> >
> >
> >
> > Your Suggestions
> >
> > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> guidelines
> >
> >
>
> guidelines
>
>
>

↑ Index

103. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

Wed 13 Aug 2008

---

decaprio film total eclipse i think was name
i mentioned tarkovsky's dad earlier

On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 06:40:26 +1000 Alison Croggon <[redacted]>
writes:
> Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei > Tarkovsky, to > me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems in > most (if > not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky.
> I wrote
> an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute
> time - last > year, if anyone is interested -
>
>
http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-desti tute.html
>
> All best
>
> Alison
>
> On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > Dear Amy--
> >
> > oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired
> Jack
> > Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang
> du poete
> > (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely > between
> > an > > opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the > conclusion of > > the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film"
> and also > > an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than
> a > > building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in
> the
> > "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories"
> within a

> > "jump cut"--
> >
> > a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials
> (Les
> > Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, > L'atalante esp
> > and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add
> Buneul's Los
> > Olvidados also)
> >
> > Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb
> films--including > > Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-
> >
> > Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice
> over > > narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry > Rivers-
> >
> > The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of > lines
> > from
> > the Poe poem of that name--
> >
> > Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton
> >
> > Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film > writing--
> >
> > Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese
> calligrpahic
> > poetry and influences of literature in his works
> >
> > Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian > Futurism
> > and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some > films--
> >
> > the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French > cinema of the > > Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early > 1960's--

> >
> > there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--
> >
> > Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great
> Borges
> > story--
> >
> > Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on > Olson's "seeing
> > in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--
> >
> > Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for
> example,
> > -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes > long
> > letter
> > ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--
> >
> > there must be thousands more considering how many films in so > many
> > languages
> > from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment
> can't > > recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--
> >
> >
> > On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]>
> wrote:
> >
> > > Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop > me a > > line.
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > Enjoy:
> > >
> > > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

> > > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > >
> > > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > >
> > > Amy
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > _____
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > Recent
> > >
> > > http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> > >
> > > http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > Alias
> > >
> > > http://www.amyking.org
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > Your Suggestions
> > >
> > >
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> Check
> > guidelines
> > >
> > >
> >

> guidelines
> >
>
>
>
> --
> Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com
>
>
>

↑ Index

104. Bobbie Lurie
the list of movies with poetry
Wed 13 Aug 2008

David, yes, your list--of course--that these were forgotten...i have another film/ not quite like others in same sense but one of my favorite films "Songs From The Second Floor" (Roy Andersson, Sweden)--a repeating scene in the mental hospital the father laments in words such as "he wrote poetry until he went mad" or "if only he would have stopped writing poetry"--and this film is magnificent and it's a question i often pose to myself. Thanks, David. Bobbi Lurie

Date: Tue, 12 Aug 2008 10:23:52 -0700
From: David Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: The List of Movies with Poetry

Dear Amy--

oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired Jack Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang du poete (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between an opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film" and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in the "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories" within a "jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials (Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, L'atalante esp and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add Buneul's Los Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb films--including Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines from the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese calligrpahic poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films--

the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--

Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting e ssay on Olson's "seeing
in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for example, -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long letter ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many languages from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--

↑ Index

105. Jennifer Karmin
Les Figues Press: Give A Fig Blog
Wed 13 Aug 2008

Les Figues Press creates aesthetic conversations between readers, writers and artists, through the publication of the TrenchArt series and other works, and through events, including Mrs. Porter's Art Salon.

Guest writers on the Les Figues Blog, Give A Fig, are sharing their thoughts about books they're reading, or events they're planning/attending, pieces they're writing, or collaborations they're working on.

RECENT POSTS
Harold Abramowitz's Chapter Two (parts 1-4)
Jennifer Calkins on Taking the Human Out of the Thing
Jennifer Karmin on Translation; or, The Ear
Sawako Nakayasu on The Bear Valley Massacre and the Making of History
Vanessa Place on Now what that is (Dear Extant Text)

Join the conversation!

http://www.lesfigues.blogspot.com

http://www.lesfigues.com

↑ Index

106. Joel Lewis
Re: the list of movies with poetry
Wed 13 Aug 2008

Two mainstream movies with poetry in the plot worth mentioning--

BACK TO SCHOOL --millionaire slob RODNEY DANGERFIELD decides to go to college, with all the predictable results. In order to pass a crucial test, he recites Dylan Thomas' "Do Not Go Gentle " a la' Dangerfield. His recitation was included on the film's soundtrack CD (for all you high school teacher on the list trying to get your charges interested in the sullen art)

IN HER SHOES -- Cameron Diaz as a dyslexic ditz-moocher who has burnt out good will with family and is now an aide at a nursing home. One of her charges is a blind retired English prof who has Diaz recite poetry to her, watch film and her the lovely Ms. Diaz stumble through Elizabeth Bishop. Prof dies, but Diaz improves her reading skills through intervention of poetry.

_____

I must add here an amazing episode of NAKED CITY which features a show about cops investigating the murder of a poet. Played by Burgess Merideth, it seems to be based on life of Maxwell Bodenheim, famous Village habitue' who had been murdered only a few years back. Filmed entirely in Greenwich Village, the climatic moment occurs in an early version of a poetry slam filmed in a real coffee house. Merideth is exposed by a young (angry) poet --played by Alan Alda-- to be passing off a poem by Kenneth Fearing as one of his own (& the Fearing poem is accurately quoted). Also features a rare screen appearence by famed acting teacher sanford Mesner (naked City four year run is filled with many future stars ranging from Dustin Hoffman to Robert Redford who were then playing in Off-broadway as Naked City was done in NYC)This episode can be found on one of the DVD compilitations of the show.

Joel Lewis

↑ Index

107. David Chirot
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Wed 13 Aug 2008

Dear Alison, Anny & Bobbi--

thanks so much for your insights re the film you write of.

The Andrea del Sarto! (the line in Pound poem abt him, too--) It's amazing the trajectory Pasolini's films make--from the neo-realist Roman accented speech of ACCATONE, which in a strange way (i saw it light years ago) made me think of a version of Narcissus, and a meditation on beauty, the great film of Gospel According to Saint Matthew and the austere Greek trageies--then the bizarre invasion of decadence by even greater decadence in Teorema--hurtling into the Mannerist Trilogy --and then the orgy of (Capitalist?) human pigs in Porcione--

There is an amzing long poem by Pasolini that continas as one of the tributaries entertwining like snakes in its flow a meditation on some as I recall interview with Godard--in which Pasolini remarks that with clinical lucidty he now sees hiw own complete lack of lucidty.

It's a bit like the film Bobbi writes of--the "clinical lucidty" gives a "viewpoint" for the poet/filmmaker of his own "lack of lucidity"--which may simply mean--'lack of clinical lucidity," or "lucidty" as considere by the clinical lucidty--

So, donning the persona of a psychiatrist ("Super ego?") for a moment, the poet judges himself "lacking in lucidity," and so "nuts, ""lost in the obscurity of madness," or "seeing as through a glass DARKLY"-- (lucidity being light)--

Pasolini's self-questioning is put a different way in a scene using poetry in the film Apocalypse Now (from Conrad's Heart of Darkness.) . Marlon Brando's Colonel Kurtz, accused by the Army of using "unsound methods," breaks off reading and reciting from T S Eliot's "The Hollow Men" to himself and Martin Sheen's Marlow, to ask if Marlow, too, finds his methods "unsound." To which Marlow replies "I see no method . . . at all, Sir."

It seems part of the Army's "judgement" of Kurtz has to do with his reciting poetry while leading an Army who worship him as a God. Marlow has already witnessed Robert Duvall's "weird glow" of surfing-obsessed Invincibility, which makes him kind of a God to his Command, too. In the midst of all the insanity and mass slaughter, the only thing that really sets Kurz apart seems to be his obssesion with questions asked in poems, combined with his leading "savages" and the "re-created" previous American assassins sent to kill him.

The other "artist" figure on the scene, Dennis Hopper's photo-journalist, pleads with Marlow "not to judge" Kurtz. The only thing comensurate to such a being, the photographer tells Marlow, is the jungle. "When it dies, he dies and when he dies, it dies." The "only solution" in the final "Apocalypse" is simply to send a massive air strike agsint Kurtz's jungle realm, bombing and napalming into oblivion the T. S. Eliot reciting renegade and all his followers. So much for asking questions regarding a scuttling crab and Hollow Men!

Maybe becase, like Apocalypse Now, it's an "epic" film, Dr Zhivago seems to have been neglected of mention. The story of a poet-doctor written by a poet from an artistic and musical family, who when very young knew Leo Tolstoy, and later Myakovksy, Eisenstein, everyy one, for a glorious, open period,-until forced into "retirement" for decades, translating Shakespeare and Gothe to survive, the film of Pasternak's novel doesn't really allude all that much to Zhivago's own poetry. (Even in the novel, the poems are an Appenidix as it were.) All the same, Dr Zhivago is one of the rare Western poets other than Homer to recieve truly the "epic" treatment on a truly grand scale in the cinema. (Homer turns up in Goadard's Contempt, along with allusions to "BB" as both Bert Brecht/Brigitte Bardot, as well as launching who knows how many ships and armies from Italy's Cinecitta alone.)

And who can forget the procession through the entire history of cinema from all corners of the world of films with poetry generated by Shakespeare alone?

Even in the 1970's remake of Invasion of the Body Snatchers, a main character is a poet--"Beatnik" poets in the Corman classic Bucket of Blood--the Blake reciting painter Gulley Jimson in The Horse's Mouth from Joyce Cary's novel--there are thousands and thousands of poets stowed away in the hulks of bulky old metal film containers, filled with deteriorating celluloid and the disintegrating lines of fragements uttered and scribbled by ever more obscure characters--real poets,make believe poets, ghosts of poets, poets' ghost writers, poets' plagiarizers and imitators and forgers, posthumously known poets, almost completley and permanently unknown poets--except in their "appearances on film"--poets only known to have existed by showing up in a fragment in a dim, jerky, blotchy old reel--and then vanishing into the shadows of rooms of places long ago tumbled down and becoming muclh for the unwitting descendents of Whitman's Leaves of Grass--

The films and film writings of Blaise Cendrars--of the Lettriste founder Isidore Isou--a short film colab by Julio Cortazar--

Not to mention the serial-killing fascist, poetry plagiarizing, sky-writing, polaraoid photographer of the gory remains of his "disappeared" victims, (following Pinochet's Coup), the "atrocity exhibit" creator and founder of the "New Chiliean Poetry." poet Carlos Weider aka Ruiz-Tagle in Roberto Bolano's

Distant Star, who is the shadowy second camera man of porno films made in Italy, and most likely the killer of their entire casts and crews.

Deep sea divers of the depths of film, more specialized than some of the various other forms of Cinephiles and Cinefous, while be empoyed on "treasure hunts" among these "lost vaults" corroding in the Davy Jones' lockers of the world's cinematic waters--even the Rivers will be trawled for the remains of any poems that may have been in the pockets of some drowned cinematic poet, pushed off a bridge, or died in a ditch like Omar Caseres--divers in search of" the forensic details of the drowned but undying voices of poets rocked in the Waters of a perhaps no longer altogether obdurate and unyielding Oblivion . . .

While floating overhead among the Armada of Ishamels clinging to coffins and ships' furnishings, there goes Orpheus, floating on his back and spouting water and lines high, high into the air, like a beaming whale painted by Gulley Jimson, surrounded by porposies and surfing sirens singing Sapphic hymns--

Or perhaps this is already a movie, just one among the hundreds and hundreds one remembers only vaguely---and that come back to haunt one while watching clouds far larger than any drive in screens--loud and lurid with the Ultra-Techniclors of a Most Dramatic Sunset--a scene escaped from some old film too ecstatically decrepit to any longer "keep it a secret"--and launhed into the flows of time like water borne lanterns and wine cups in an thousand year old Chinese poem--

(Or is that the great Chinese film maker's Olympic Opening ceremeony?--)

> On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 06:40:26 +1000 Alison Croggon <[redacted]>
> writes:
> Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei
> Tarkovsky, to > me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems in
> most (if > not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky.
> I wrote
> an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute
> time - last > year, if anyone is interested -
>
> http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-desti > tute.html<http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in- > destitute.html>
>
> All best
>
> Alison

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot
<[redacted]>wrote:

Dear Amy--

oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired Jack Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang du poete (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between
an opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film" and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in the "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories" within a
"jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials (Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, L'atalante esp and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add Buneul's Los Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb films--including
Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines
from
the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese calligrpahic poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films--

the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--

Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's "seeing in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for example, -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long letter ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many languages from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--

On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!

If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.

Enjoy:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Amy

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

> Check
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

108. Anny Ballardini
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Wed 13 Aug 2008

Total Eclipse by Agnieszka Holland based on the play by Christopher Hampton about Verlaine and Rimbaud. Someone mentioned this movie somewhere else, I will have to keep it in mind and watch it. Thanks.

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 6:53 PM, steve d. dalachinsky <[redacted]>wrote:

> decaprio film total eclipse i think was name
> i mentioned tarkovsky's dad earlier
>
> Anny Ballardini
> http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/<mhtml:{F3087831-6CF4-4A83-9D78-E3470A579701}mid://00000730/!x-usc:http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome<mhtml:{F3087831-6CF4-4A83-9D78-E3470A579701}mid://00000730/!x-usc:http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome>
> http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html<mhtml:{F3087831-6CF4-4A83-9D78-E3470A579701}mid://00000730/!x-usc:http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html>
> in Letters to Nowhere

↑ Index

109. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Thu 14 Aug 2008

David,

Keeping your expanding approach going:

a) The Seattle guru-like poet in My Private Idaho, who was based on a actual poet. Ther movie itself was based on S's play Henry IV. The poet and River Phoenix figures play the Falstaff figure and Keanu Reeves the young prodigal prince who cuts, yejects, disowns them when he rejoins his father's business and turns away from his gay street hustler's life.

b) Whitman and kinky sex (painting the toes to Whitman) in Bull Durham, where baseball itself is treated like a poem, and even Doc Hollywood where the old doctor of the Utopian fantasy town in the middle of the United States which grows the biggest squashes, after dinner and drunk, reads Whitman endlessly through the night.

c) Endless quotations from philosophers, artists, poets, revolutionaries, jingles and phrases from T.V. commercials which permeate all Godard movies.

d) In the Mood for Love the man character is writing a Karate hero comics while his cigarette smoke fills the entire screen. This writing (a collaboration between the hero and heroine) is treated as a secret love affair taking place in small rooms, first a boarding house surrounded by spouses and neighbor, then in a hotel room with beautiful wall paper.

The movie in which Coyote plays the Italian poet Montale. Coyote is now doing voice-overs in history and nature documentaries.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 4:46 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Alison, Anny & Bobbi--
>
> thanks so much for your insights re the film you write of.
>
> The Andrea del Sarto! (the line in Pound poem abt him, too--) It's amazing the trajectory Pasolini's films make--from the neo-realist Roman accented speech of ACCATONE, which in a strange way (i saw it light years ago) made me think of a version of Narcissus, and a meditation on beauty, the great film of Gospel According to Saint Matthew and the austere Greek trageies--then the bizarre invasion of decadence by even greater decadence in Teorema--hurtling into the Mannerist Trilogy --and then the orgy of (Capitalist?) human pigs in Porcione--

There is an amzing long poem by Pasolini that continas as one of the tributaries entertwining like snakes in its flow a meditation on some as I recall interview with Godard--in which Pasolini remarks that with clinical lucidty he now sees hiw own complete lack of lucidty.

It's a bit like the film Bobbi writes of--the "clinical lucidty" gives a "viewpoint" for the poet/filmmaker of his own "lack of lucidity"--which may simply mean--'lack of clinical lucidity," or "lucidty" as considere by the clinical lucidty--

So, donning the persona of a psychiatrist ("Super ego?") for a moment, the poet judges himself "lacking in lucidity," and so "nuts, ""lost in the obscurity of madness," or "seeing as through a glass DARKLY"-- (lucidity being light)--

Pasolini's self-questioning is put a different way in a scene using poetry in the film Apocalypse Now (from Conrad's Heart of Darkness.) . Marlon Brando's Colonel Kurtz, accused by the Army of using "unsound methods," breaks off reading and reciting from T S Eliot's "The Hollow Men" to himself and Martin Sheen's Marlow, to ask if Marlow, too, finds his methods "unsound." To which Marlow replies "I see no method . . . at all, Sir."

It seems part of the Army's "judgement" of Kurtz has to do with his reciting poetry while leading an Army who worship him as a God. Marlow has already witnessed Robert Duvall's "weird glow" of surfing-obsessed Invincibility, which makes him kind of a God to his Command, too. In the midst of all the insanity and mass slaughter, the only thing that really sets Kurz apart seems to be his obssesion with questions asked in poems, combined with his leading "savages" and the "re-created" previous American assassins sent to kill him.

The other "artist" figure on the scene, Dennis Hopper's photo-journalist, pleads with Marlow "not to judge" Kurtz. The only thing comensurate to such a being, the photographer tells Marlow, is the jungle. "When it dies, he dies and when he dies, it dies." The "only solution" in the final "Apocalypse" is simply to send a massive air strike agsint Kurtz's jungle realm, bombing and napalming into oblivion the T. S. Eliot reciting renegade and all his followers. So much for asking questions regarding a scuttling crab and Hollow Men!

Maybe becase, like Apocalypse Now, it's an "epic" film, Dr Zhivago seems to have been neglected of mention. The story of a poet-doctor written by a poet from an artistic and musical family, who when very young knew Leo Tolstoy, and later Myakovksy, Eisenstein, everyy one, for a glorious, open period,-until forced into "retirement" for decades, translating Shakespeare and Gothe to survive, the film of Pasternak's novel doesn't really allude all that much to Zhivago's own poetry. (Even in the novel, the poems are an Appenidix as it were.) All the same, Dr Zhivago is one of the rare Western poets other than Homer to recieve truly the "epic" treatment on a truly grand scale in the cinema. (Homer turns up in Goadard's Contempt, along with allusions to "BB" as both Bert Brecht/Brigitte Bardot, as well as launching who knows how many ships and armies from Italy's Cinecitta alone.)

And who can forget the procession through the entire history of cinema from all corners of the world of films with poetry generated by Shakespeare alone?

Even in the 1970's remake of Invasion of the Body Snatchers, a main character is a poet--"Beatnik" poets in the Corman classic Bucket of Blood--the Blake reciting painter Gulley Jimson in The Horse's Mouth from Joyce Cary's novel--there are thousands and thousands of poets stowed away in the hulks of bulky old metal film containers, filled with deteriorating celluloid and the disintegrating lines of fragements uttered and scribbled by ever more obscure characters--real poets,make believe poets, ghosts of poets, poets' ghost writers, poets' plagiarizers and imitators and forgers, posthumously known poets, almost completley and permanently unknown poets--except in their "appearances on film"--poets only known to have existed by showing up in a fragment in a dim, jerky, blotchy old reel--and then vanishing into the shadows of rooms of places long ago tumbled down and becoming muclh for the unwitting descendents of Whitman's Leaves of Grass--

The films and film writings of Blaise Cendrars--of the Lettriste founder Isidore Isou--a short film colab by Julio Cortazar--

Not to mention the serial-killing fascist, poetry plagiarizing, sky-writing, polaraoid photographer of the gory remains of his "disappeared" victims, (following Pinochet's Coup), the "atrocity exhibit" creator and founder of the "New Chiliean Poetry." poet Carlos Weider aka Ruiz-Tagle in Roberto Bolano's Distant Star, who is the shadowy second camera man of porno films made in Italy, and most likely the killer of their entire casts and crews.

Deep sea divers of the depths of film, more specialized than some of the various other forms of Cinephiles and Cinefous, while be empoyed on "treasure hunts" among these "lost vaults" corroding in the Davy Jones' lockers of the world's cinematic waters--even the Rivers will be trawled

for
the remains of any poems that may have been in the pockets of some drowned cinematic poet, pushed off a bridge, or died in a ditch like Omar Caseres--divers
in search of" the forensic details of the drowned but undying voices of poets rocked in the Waters of a perhaps no longer altogether obdurate and unyielding Oblivion . . .

While floating overhead among the Armada of Ishamels clinging to coffins
and ships' furnishings, there goes Orpheus, floating on his back and spouting water and lines high, high into the air, like a beaming whale painted by Gulley Jimson, surrounded by porposies and surfing sirens singing Sapphic hymns--

Or perhaps this is already a movie, just one among the hundreds and hundreds
one remembers only vaguely---and that come back to haunt one while watching clouds far larger than any drive in screens--loud and lurid with the Ultra-Techniclors of a Most Dramatic Sunset--a scene escaped from some old film too ecstatically decrepit to any longer "keep it a secret"--and launhed
into the flows of time like water borne lanterns and wine cups in an thousand year old Chinese poem--

(Or is that the great Chinese film maker's Olympic Opening ceremeony?--)

On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 06:40:26 +1000 Alison Croggon <[redacted]>
writes:
Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei Tarkovsky, to me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems in most (if not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky.
I wrote
an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute
time - last
year, if anyone is interested -

http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-desti

tute.html<
http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-destitute.html

All best

Alison

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot
<[redacted]>wrote:

Dear Amy--

oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired
Jack
Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang
du poete
(Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between
an opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film"
and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than
a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in
the
"documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories"
within a
"jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials
(Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, L'atalante esp
and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add
Buneul's Los
Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb
films--including
Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice
over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines
from
the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film
writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese calligrpahic
poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films-- the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--

Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges
story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's "seeing
in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for example,
-in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long
letter
ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many languages
from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--

On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]>
wrote:

Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!

If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.

Enjoy:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Amy

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
>
> Check
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

110. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Thu 14 Aug 2008

One should not forget Miami Blues in which the psychopathic Alec Baldwin character burgles a house to steal a coin collection, simultaneously composing a haiku about it, the middle line of which is "breaking and entering." Absolutely priceless! Does anyone remember the entire gem?

Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Aug 14, 2008 at 6:03 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>wrote:

> David,
>
> Keeping your expanding approach going:

a) The Seattle guru-like poet in My Private Idaho, who was based on a actual poet. Ther movie itself was based on S's play Henry IV. The poet and River Phoenix figures play the Falstaff figure and Keanu Reeves the young prodigal prince who cuts, yejects, disowns them when he rejoins his father's business and turns away from his gay street hustler's life.

b) Whitman and kinky sex (painting the toes to Whitman) in Bull Durham, where baseball itself is treated like a poem, and even Doc Hollywood where the old doctor of the Utopian fantasy town in the middle of the United States which grows the biggest squashes, after dinner and drunk, reads Whitman endlessly through the night.

c) Endless quotations from philosophers, artists, poets, revolutionaries, jingles and phrases from T.V. commercials which permeate all Godard movies.

d) In the Mood for Love the man character is writing a Karate hero comics while his cigarette smoke fills the entire screen. This writing (a collaboration between the hero and heroine) is treated as a secret love affair taking place in small rooms, first a boarding house surrounded by spouses and neighbor, then in a hotel room with beautiful wall paper.

The movie in which Coyote plays the Italian poet Montale. Coyote is now doing voice-overs in history and nature documentaries.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 4:46 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

Dear Alison, Anny & Bobbi--

thanks so much for your insights re the film you write of.

The Andrea del Sarto! (the line in Pound poem abt him, too--) It's amazing the trajectory Pasolini's films make--from the neo-realist Roman accented speech of ACCATONE, which in a strange way (i saw it light years ago) made me think of a version of Narcissus, and a meditation on beauty, the great film of Gospel According to Saint Matthew and the austere Greek trageies--then the bizarre invasion of decadence by even greater decadence in Teorema--hurtling into the Mannerist Trilogy --and then the orgy of (Capitalist?) human pigs in Porcione--

There is an amzing long poem by Pasolini that continas as one of the tributaries entertwining like snakes in its flow a meditation on some as I recall interview with Godard--in which Pasolini remarks that with clinical lucidty he now sees hiw own complete lack of lucidty.

It's a bit like the film Bobbi writes of--the "clinical lucidty" gives a "viewpoint" for the poet/filmmaker of his own "lack of lucidity"--which may simply mean--'lack of clinical lucidity," or "lucidty" as considere by the clinical lucidty--

So, donning the persona of a psychiatrist ("Super ego?") for a moment, the poet judges himself "lacking in lucidity," and so "nuts, ""lost in the obscurity of madness," or "seeing as through a glass DARKLY"-- (lucidity being light)--

Pasolini's self-questioning is put a different way in a scene using poetry in the film Apocalypse Now (from Conrad's Heart of Darkness.) . Marlon Brando's Colonel Kurtz, accused by the Army of using "unsound methods," breaks off reading and reciting from T S Eliot's "The Hollow Men" to himself and Martin Sheen's Marlow, to ask if Marlow, too, finds his methods "unsound." To which Marlow replies "I see no method . . . at all, Sir."

It seems part of the Army's "judgement" of Kurtz has to do with his reciting poetry while leading an Army who worship him as a God. Marlow has already witnessed Robert Duvall's "weird glow" of surfing-obsessed Invincibility, which makes him kind of a God to his Command, too. In the midst of all the insanity and mass slaughter, the only thing that really sets Kurz apart seems to be his obssesion with questions asked in poems, combined with his leading "savages" and the "re-created" previous American assassins sent to kill him.

The other "artist" figure on the scene, Dennis Hopper's photo-journalist, pleads with Marlow "not to judge" Kurtz. The only thing comensurate to such a being, the photographer tells Marlow, is the jungle. "When it dies, he dies and when he dies, it dies." The "only solution" in the final "Apocalypse" is simply to send a massive air strike agsint Kurtz's jungle realm, bombing and napalming into oblivion the T. S. Eliot reciting renegade and all his followers. So much for asking questions regarding a scuttling crab and Hollow Men!

Maybe becase, like Apocalypse Now, it's an "epic" film, Dr Zhivago seems to have been neglected of mention. The story of a poet-doctor written by a poet from an artistic and musical family, who when very young knew Leo Tolstoy, and later Myakovksy, Eisenstein, everyy one, for a glorious, open period,-until forced into "retirement" for decades, translating Shakespeare and Gothe to survive, the film of Pasternak's novel doesn't really allude all that much to Zhivago's own poetry. (Even in the novel, the poems are an Appenidix as it were.) All the same, Dr Zhivago is one of the rare Western poets other than Homer to recieve truly the "epic" treatment on a truly grand scale in the cinema. (Homer turns up in Goadard's Contempt, along with allusions to "BB" as both Bert Brecht/Brigitte Bardot, as well as launching who knows how many ships and armies from Italy's Cinecitta alone.)

And who can forget the procession through the entire history of cinema from all corners of the world of films with poetry generated by Shakespeare alone?

Even in the 1970's remake of Invasion of the Body Snatchers, a main character is a poet--"Beatnik" poets in the Corman classic Bucket of Blood--the Blake reciting painter Gulley Jimson in The Horse's Mouth from Joyce Cary's novel--there are thousands and thousands of poets stowed away in the hulks of bulky old metal film containers, filled with deteriorating celluloid and the disintegrating lines of fragements uttered and scribbled by ever more obscure characters--real poets,make believe poets, ghosts of poets, poets' ghost writers, poets' plagiarizers and imitators and forgers, posthumously known poets, almost completley and permanently unknown poets--except in their "appearances on film"--poets only known to have existed by showing up in a fragment in a dim, jerky, blotchy old reel--and then vanishing into the shadows of rooms of places long ago tumbled down and becoming muclh for the unwitting descendents of Whitman's Leaves of Grass--

The films and film writings of Blaise Cendrars--of the Lettriste founder Isidore Isou--a short film colab by Julio Cortazar--

Not to mention the serial-killing fascist, poetry plagiarizing, sky-writing, polaraoid photographer of the gory remains of his "disappeared" victims, (following Pinochet's Coup), the "atrocity exhibit" creator and founder of the "New Chiliean Poetry." poet Carlos Weider aka Ruiz-Tagle in Roberto Bolano's Distant Star, who is the shadowy second camera man of porno films made in Italy, and most likely the killer of their

entire casts and crews.

Deep sea divers of the depths of film, more specialized than some of the various other forms of Cinephiles and Cinefous, while be empoyed on "treasure hunts" among these "lost vaults" corroding in the Davy Jones' lockers of the world's cinematic waters--even the Rivers will be trawled
for
the remains of any poems that may have been in the pockets of some drowned
cinematic poet, pushed off a bridge, or died in a ditch like Omar
Caseres--divers
in search of" the forensic details of the drowned but undying voices of poets rocked in the Waters of a perhaps no longer altogether obdurate and unyielding Oblivion . . .

While floating overhead among the Armada of Ishamels clinging to coffins
and ships' furnishings, there goes Orpheus, floating on his back and spouting
water and lines high, high into the air, like a beaming whale painted by Gulley Jimson, surrounded by porposies and surfing sirens singing Sapphic
hymns--

Or perhaps this is already a movie, just one among the hundreds and hundreds
one remembers only vaguely---and that come back to haunt one while watching
clouds far larger than any drive in screens--loud and lurid with the Ultra-Techniclors of a Most Dramatic Sunset--a scene escaped from some old film too ecstatically decrepit to any longer "keep it a secret"--and
launhed
into the flows of time like water borne lanterns and wine cups in an thousand year old Chinese poem--

(Or is that the great Chinese film maker's Olympic Opening ceremeony?--)

On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 06:40:26 +1000 Alison Croggon <[redacted]>
writes:
Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei Tarkovsky, to me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems in most (if not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky.

I wrote
an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute
time - last
year, if anyone is interested -

http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-desti tute.html<
http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-destitute.html

All best

Alison

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot
<[redacted]>wrote:

Dear Amy--

oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired
Jack
Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang
du poete
(Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between
an opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film"
and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than
a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in
the
"documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories"
within a
"jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials
(Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo, L'atalante esp
and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add
Buneul's Los
Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb films--including Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines from the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese calligrpahic poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films--

the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon--

Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's "seeing in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for example, -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long letter

ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many languages
from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--

On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]>
wrote:

Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!

If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.

Enjoy:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Amy

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

> Alias
>
> http://www.amyking.org
>
> Your Suggestions
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
>
> Check
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

111. Mary Kasimor

Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

Thu 14 Aug 2008

Has Eternal Sunshine of the Spotlless Mind been mentioned? The title is based on a line from an Alexander Pope poem. (I have to admit that I am not familiar with it, although I did study Pope at one time--long ago.) The movie does support the title. Jim Carrey and Kate Winslett are in it--both have their minds erased and thus their love affair. Well, I am sure that you have all seen it, and perhaps it has been mentioned in the posts about movies with poetry.

Best,
Mary Kasimor

--- On Thu, 8/14/08, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, August 14, 2008, 5:03 AM

David,

Keeping your expanding approach going:

a) The Seattle guru-like poet in My Private Idaho, who was based on a actual poet. Ther movie itself was based on S's play Henry IV. The poet and River Phoenix figures play the Falstaff figure and Keanu Reeves the young prodigal prince who cuts, yejects, disowns them when he rejoins his father's business and turns away from his gay street hustler's life.

b) Whitman and kinky sex (painting the toes to Whitman) in Bull Durham, where baseball itself is treated like a poem, and even Doc Hollywood where the old doctor of the Utopian fantasy town in the middle of the United States which grows the biggest squashes, after dinner and drunk, reads Whitman endlessly through the night.

c) Endless quotations from philosophers, artists, poets, revolutionaries, jingles and phrases from T.V. commercials which permeate all Godard movies.

d) In the Mood for Love the man character is writing a Karate hero comics while his cigarette smoke fills the entire screen. This writing (a collaboration between the hero and heroine) is treated as a secret love affair taking place in small rooms, first a boarding house surrounded by spouses and neighbor, then in a hotel room with beautiful wall paper.

The movie in which Coyote plays the Italian poet Montale. Coyote is now doing voice-overs in history and nature documentaries.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 4:46 PM, David Chirot
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Alison, Anny & Bobbi--
>
> thanks so much for your insights re the film you write of.
>
> The Andrea del Sarto! (the line in Pound poem abt him, too--) It's amazing > the trajectory Pasolini's films make--from the neo-realist Roman accented > speech of ACCATONE, which in a strange way (i saw it light years ago) made > me think of a version of Narcissus, and a meditation on beauty, the great > film of Gospel According to Saint Matthew and the austere Greek > trageies--then the bizarre invasion of decadence by even greater decadence
> in Teorema--hurtling into the Mannerist Trilogy --and then the orgy of > (Capitalist?) human pigs in Porcione--
>
> There is an amzing long poem by Pasolini that continas as one of the > tributaries entertwining like snakes in its flow a meditation on some as I > recall interview with Godard--in which Pasolini remarks that with clinical > lucidty he now sees hiw own complete lack of lucidty.
>
> It's a bit like the film Bobbi writes of--the "clinical lucidty" gives a > "viewpoint" for the poet/filmmaker of his own "lack of lucidity"--which may > simply mean--'lack of clinical lucidity," or "lucidty" as considere by the > clinical lucidty--
>
> So, donning the persona of a psychiatrist ("Super ego?") for a moment, the > poet judges himself "lacking in lucidity," and so "nuts, ""lost in the > obscurity of madness," or "seeing as through a glass DARKLY"-- (lucidity > being light)--
>
> Pasolini's self-questioning is put a different way in a scene using poetry > in the film Apocalypse Now (from Conrad's Heart of Darkness.) . Marlon > Brando's Colonel Kurtz, accused by the Army of using "unsound methods," > breaks off reading and reciting from T S Eliot's "The Hollow Men" to > himself

> and Martin Sheen's Marlow, to ask if Marlow, too, finds his methods
> "unsound." To which Marlow replies "I see no method . . .
at all, Sir."
>
> It seems part of the Army's "judgement" of Kurtz has to do with his > reciting > poetry while leading an Army who worship him as a God. Marlow has already > witnessed Robert Duvall's "weird glow" of surfing-obsessed Invincibility,
> which makes him kind of a God to his Command, too. In the midst of all the > insanity and mass slaughter, the only thing that really sets Kurz apart > seems to be his obssesion with questions asked in poems, combined with his > leading "savages" and the "re-created" previous American assassins sent to > kill him.
>
> The other "artist" figure on the scene, Dennis Hopper's
photo-journalist, > pleads with Marlow "not to judge" Kurtz. The only thing comensurate to
> such > a being, the photographer tells Marlow, is the jungle. "When it dies,
he > dies and when he dies, it dies." The "only solution" in the final
> "Apocalypse" is simply to send a massive air strike agsint Kurtz's jungle
> realm, bombing and napalming into oblivion the T. S. Eliot reciting > renegade
> and all his followers. So much for asking questions regarding a scuttling > crab and Hollow Men!
>
> Maybe becase, like Apocalypse Now, it's an "epic" film, Dr Zhivago seems
> to > have been neglected of mention. The story of a poet-doctor written by a > poet from an artistic and musical family, who when very young knew Leo > Tolstoy, and later Myakovksy, Eisenstein, everyy one, for a glorious,

open > period,-until forced into "retirement" for decades, translating Shakespeare
> and Gothe to survive, the film of Pasternak's novel doesn't really allude
> all that much to Zhivago's own poetry. (Even in the novel, the poems
are
> an > Appenidix as it were.) All the same, Dr Zhivago is one of the rare Western > poets other than Homer to recieve truly the "epic" treatment on a truly
> grand scale in the cinema. (Homer turns up in Goadard's Contempt, along > with allusions to "BB" as both Bert Brecht/Brigitte Bardot, as well as > launching who knows how many ships and armies from Italy's Cinecitta > alone.)
>
> And who can forget the procession through the entire history of cinema
from > all corners of the world of films with poetry generated by Shakespeare > alone?
>
> Even in the 1970's remake of Invasion of the Body Snatchers, a main > character is a poet--"Beatnik" poets in the Corman classic Bucket of > Blood--the Blake reciting painter Gulley Jimson in The Horse's Mouth
from > Joyce Cary's novel--there are thousands and thousands of poets stowed away
> in the hulks of bulky old metal film containers, filled with deteriorating
> celluloid and the disintegrating lines of fragements uttered and scribbled
> by ever more obscure characters--real poets,make believe poets, ghosts of > poets, poets' ghost writers, poets' plagiarizers and imitators and forgers,
> posthumously known poets, almost completley and permanently unknown > poets--except in their "appearances on film"--poets only known to have > existed by showing up in a fragment in a dim, jerky, blotchy old reel--and > then vanishing into the shadows of rooms of places long ago tumbled down
> and > becoming muclh for the unwitting descendents of Whitman's Leaves of Grass--

>
> The films and film writings of Blaise Cendrars--of the Lettriste founder > Isidore Isou--a short film colab by Julio Cortazar--
>
> Not to mention the serial-killing fascist, poetry plagiarizing, > sky-writing, polaraoid photographer of the gory remains of his
> "disappeared" victims, (following Pinochet's Coup), the
"atrocity exhibit"
> creator and founder of the "New Chiliean Poetry." poet Carlos Weider aka
> Ruiz-Tagle in Roberto Bolano's Distant Star, who is the shadowy second > camera man of porno films made in Italy, and most likely the killer of > their > entire casts and crews.
>
> Deep sea divers of the depths of film, more specialized than some of the > various other forms of Cinephiles and Cinefous, while be empoyed on > "treasure hunts" among these "lost vaults" corroding
in the Davy Jones'
> lockers of the world's cinematic waters--even the Rivers will be trawled
> for > the remains of any poems that may have been in the pockets of some drowned
> cinematic poet, pushed off a bridge, or died in a ditch like Omar > Caseres--divers
> in search of" the forensic details of the drowned but undying voices
of > poets rocked in the Waters of a perhaps no longer altogether obdurate and > unyielding Oblivion . . .
>
> While floating overhead among the Armada of Ishamels clinging to coffins
> and > ships' furnishings, there goes Orpheus, floating on his back and spouting
> water and lines high, high into the air, like a beaming whale painted by > Gulley Jimson, surrounded by porposies and surfing sirens singing Sapphic > hymns--
>
> Or perhaps this is already a movie, just one among the hundreds and > hundreds

> one remembers only vaguely---and that come back to haunt one while watching
> clouds far larger than any drive in screens--loud and lurid with the > Ultra-Techniclors of a Most Dramatic Sunset--a scene escaped from some old > film too ecstatically decrepit to any longer "keep it a secret"--and
> launhed
> into the flows of time like water borne lanterns and wine cups in an > thousand year old Chinese poem--
>
> (Or is that the great Chinese film maker's Olympic Opening ceremeony?--)
>
>
>
>
>
>
> >
> > On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 06:40:26 +1000 Alison Croggon
<[redacted]>
> > writes:
> > > Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei > > > Tarkovsky, to > > > me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems
in
> > > most (if > > > not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky.
> > > I wrote
> > > an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute
> > > time - last > > > year, if anyone is interested -
> > >
> > >
> >
> http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-desti
> > tute.html<
>
http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-destitute.html

> >
> > >
> > > All best
> > >
> > > Alison
> > >
> > > On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot
> > > <[redacted]>wrote:
> > >
> > > > Dear Amy--
> > > >
> > > > oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired
> > > Jack
> > > > Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang
> > > du poete
> > > > (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely > > > between
> > > > an > > > > opening of a buidling collapsing and a final
"scene" of the
> > > conclusion of > > > > the building's collapse----a play on on the "film
within a film"
> > > and also > > > > an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than
> > > a > > > > building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in
> > > the
> > > > "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories"
> > > within a
> > > > "jump cut"--
> > > >
> > > > a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials
> > > (Les > > > > Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean

Vigo,
> > > L'atalante esp
> > > > and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add
> > > Buneul's Los > > > > Olvidados also)
> > > >
> > > > Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb
> > > films--including > > > > Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-
> > > >
> > > > Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo
prosody voice
> > > over
> > > > narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry
> > > Rivers-
> > > >
> > > > The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of
> > > lines
> > > > from
> > > > the Poe poem of that name--
> > > >
> > > > Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton
> > > >
> > > > Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and
film
> > > writing--
> > > >
> > > > Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese
> > > calligrpahic
> > > > poetry and influences of literature in his works
> > > >
> > > > Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry
of Russian
> > > Futurism
> > > > and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles
in some > > > films--
> > > >
> > > > the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde

French
> > > cinema of the > > > > Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early > > > 1960's--
> > > >
> > > > there's even a pretty silly Hollywood
"bio-pic" of Villon--
> > > >
> > > > Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great
> > > Borges
> > > > story--
> > > >
> > > > Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on > > > Olson's "seeing
> > > > in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--
> > > >
> > > > Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for
> > > example,
> > > > -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes
> > > long
> > > > letter
> > > > ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--
> > > >
> > > > there must be thousands more considering how many films in so > > > many
> > > > languages
> > > > from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment
> > > can't > > > > recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king
<[redacted]>
> > > wrote:
> > > >

> > > > > Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop
> > > me a > > > > line.
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Enjoy:
> > > > >
> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
> > > > > Amy
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > _____
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Recent
> > > > >
> > > > > http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> > > > >
> > > > > http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Alias
> > > > >
> > > > > http://www.amyking.org

> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Your Suggestions
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
all posts.
> > > Check
> > > > guidelines
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > >
posts. Check
> > > guidelines
> > > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> > > Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> > > Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com
> > >
Check
> > >
> > >
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

112. Gerald Schwartz
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Thu 14 Aug 2008

Please excuse the possible redundancy,
but how's about the Ken Russell flicks:

_Dante's Inferno

_Gothic (featuring both Shelley's and a Byron)

And his two Clouds of Glory films:

_William and Dorothy (the Wordsworths)

_The Rime of the Ancient Mariner

Gerald S.

Has Eternal Sunshine of the Spotlless Mind been mentioned? The title is based on a line from an Alexander Pope poem. (I have to admit that I am not familiar with it, although I did study Pope at one time--long ago.) The movie does support the title. Jim Carrey and Kate Winslett are in it--both have their minds erased and thus their love affair. Well, I am sure that you have all seen it, and perhaps it has been mentioned in the posts about movies with poetry.

Best,
Mary Kasimor

--- On Thu, 8/14/08, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, August 14, 2008, 5:03 AM

David,

Keeping your expanding approach going:

a) The Seattle guru-like poet in My Private Idaho, who was based on a actual poet. Ther movie itself was based on S's play Henry IV. The poet and River Phoenix figures play the Falstaff figure and Keanu Reeves the young prodigal prince who cuts, yejects, disowns them when he rejoins his father's business and turns away from his gay street hustler's life.

b) Whitman and kinky sex (painting the toes to Whitman) in Bull Durham, where baseball itself is treated like a poem, and even Doc Hollywood where the old doctor of the Utopian fantasy town in the middle of the United States which grows the biggest squashes, after dinner and drunk, reads Whitman endlessly through the night.

c) Endless quotations from philosophers, artists, poets, revolutionaries, jingles and phrases from T.V. commercials which permeate all Godard movies.

d) In the Mood for Love the man character is writing a Karate hero comics while his cigarette smoke fills the entire screen. This writing (a collaboration between the hero and heroine) is treated as a secret love affair taking place in small rooms, first a boarding house surrounded by spouses and neighbor, then in a hotel room with beautiful wall paper.

The movie in which Coyote plays the Italian poet Montale. Coyote is now doing voice-overs in history and nature documentaries.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 4:46 PM, David Chirot
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Alison, Anny & Bobbi--
>
> thanks so much for your insights re the film you write of.
>
> The Andrea del Sarto! (the line in Pound poem abt him, too--) It's amazing
> the trajectory Pasolini's films make--from the neo-realist Roman accented
> speech of ACCATONE, which in a strange way (i saw it light years ago) made > me think of a version of Narcissus, and a meditation on beauty, the great > film of Gospel According to Saint Matthew and the austere Greek
> trageies--then the bizarre invasion of decadence by even greater decadence
> in Teorema--hurtling into the Mannerist Trilogy --and then the orgy of > (Capitalist?) human pigs in Porcione--
>
> There is an amzing long poem by Pasolini that continas as one of the > tributaries entertwining like snakes in its flow a meditation on some as I > recall interview with Godard--in which Pasolini remarks that with clinical > lucidty he now sees hiw own complete lack of lucidty.
>
> It's a bit like the film Bobbi writes of--the "clinical lucidty" gives a
> "viewpoint" for the poet/filmmaker of his own "lack of lucidity"--which may > simply mean--'lack of clinical lucidity," or "lucidty"
as considere by the > clinical lucidty--

>
> So, donning the persona of a psychiatrist ("Super ego?") for a moment, the > poet judges himself "lacking in lucidity," and so "nuts,
""lost in the
> obscurity of madness," or "seeing as through a glass DARKLY"-- (lucidity > being light)--
>
> Pasolini's self-questioning is put a different way in a scene using
poetry
> in the film Apocalypse Now (from Conrad's Heart of Darkness.) .
Marlon
> Brando's Colonel Kurtz, accused by the Army of using "unsound methods,"
> breaks off reading and reciting from T S Eliot's "The Hollow Men" to > himself
> and Martin Sheen's Marlow, to ask if Marlow, too, finds his methods
> "unsound." To which Marlow replies "I see no method . . .
at all, Sir."
>
> It seems part of the Army's "judgement" of Kurtz has to do
with his > reciting > poetry while leading an Army who worship him as a God. Marlow has already > witnessed Robert Duvall's "weird glow" of surfing-obsessed Invincibility,
> which makes him kind of a God to his Command, too. In the midst of all the > insanity and mass slaughter, the only thing that really sets Kurz apart
> seems to be his obssesion with questions asked in poems, combined with his > leading "savages" and the "re-created" previous American assassins sent to > kill him.
>
> The other "artist" figure on the scene, Dennis Hopper's
photo-journalist,
> pleads with Marlow "not to judge" Kurtz. The only thing comensurate to
> such > a being, the photographer tells Marlow, is the jungle. "When it dies,
he > dies and when he dies, it dies." The "only solution" in the final

> "Apocalypse" is simply to send a massive air strike agsint Kurtz's jungle
> realm, bombing and napalming into oblivion the T. S. Eliot reciting > renegade
> and all his followers. So much for asking questions regarding a scuttling > crab and Hollow Men!
>
> Maybe becase, like Apocalypse Now, it's an "epic" film, Dr Zhivago seems
> to > have been neglected of mention. The story of a poet-doctor written by a > poet from an artistic and musical family, who when very young knew Leo > Tolstoy, and later Myakovksy, Eisenstein, everyy one, for a glorious,
open
> period,-until forced into "retirement" for decades, translating Shakespeare
> and Gothe to survive, the film of Pasternak's novel doesn't really allude
> all that much to Zhivago's own poetry. (Even in the novel, the poems
are
> an > Appenidix as it were.) All the same, Dr Zhivago is one of the rare Western > poets other than Homer to recieve truly the "epic" treatment on
a truly
> grand scale in the cinema. (Homer turns up in Goadard's Contempt, along > with allusions to "BB" as both Bert Brecht/Brigitte Bardot, as well as > launching who knows how many ships and armies from Italy's Cinecitta > alone.)
>
> And who can forget the procession through the entire history of cinema
from > all corners of the world of films with poetry generated by Shakespeare > alone?
>
> Even in the 1970's remake of Invasion of the Body Snatchers, a main > character is a poet--"Beatnik" poets in the Corman classic
Bucket of > Blood--the Blake reciting painter Gulley Jimson in The Horse's Mouth

from > Joyce Cary's novel--there are thousands and thousands of poets stowed
away
> in the hulks of bulky old metal film containers, filled with deteriorating
> celluloid and the disintegrating lines of fragements uttered and scribbled
> by ever more obscure characters--real poets,make believe poets, ghosts of > poets, poets' ghost writers, poets' plagiarizers and imitators and
forgers,
> posthumously known poets, almost completley and permanently unknown
> poets--except in their "appearances on film"--poets only known
to have > existed by showing up in a fragment in a dim, jerky, blotchy old reel--and > then vanishing into the shadows of rooms of places long ago tumbled down
> and > becoming muclh for the unwitting descendents of Whitman's Leaves of Grass--
>
> The films and film writings of Blaise Cendrars--of the Lettriste founder > Isidore Isou--a short film colab by Julio Cortazar--
>
> Not to mention the serial-killing fascist, poetry plagiarizing,
> sky-writing, polaraoid photographer of the gory remains of his
> "disappeared" victims, (following Pinochet's Coup), the
"atrocity exhibit"
> creator and founder of the "New Chiliean Poetry." poet Carlos Weider aka
> Ruiz-Tagle in Roberto Bolano's Distant Star, who is the shadowy second > camera man of porno films made in Italy, and most likely the killer of > their > entire casts and crews.
>
> Deep sea divers of the depths of film, more specialized than some of the > various other forms of Cinephiles and Cinefous, while be empoyed on > "treasure hunts" among these "lost vaults" corroding
in the Davy Jones'
> lockers of the world's cinematic waters--even the Rivers will be trawled
> for > the remains of any poems that may have been in the pockets of some drowned
> cinematic poet, pushed off a bridge, or died in a ditch like Omar
> Caseres--divers

> in search of" the forensic details of the drowned but undying voices
of > poets rocked in the Waters of a perhaps no longer altogether obdurate and > unyielding Oblivion . . .
>
> While floating overhead among the Armada of Ishamels clinging to coffins
> and > ships' furnishings, there goes Orpheus, floating on his back and spouting
> water and lines high, high into the air, like a beaming whale painted by > Gulley Jimson, surrounded by porposies and surfing sirens singing Sapphic > hymns--
>
> Or perhaps this is already a movie, just one among the hundreds and > hundreds
> one remembers only vaguely---and that come back to haunt one while watching
> clouds far larger than any drive in screens--loud and lurid with the > Ultra-Techniclors of a Most Dramatic Sunset--a scene escaped from some old > film too ecstatically decrepit to any longer "keep it a secret"--and
> launhed
> into the flows of time like water borne lanterns and wine cups in an > thousand year old Chinese poem--
>
> (Or is that the great Chinese film maker's Olympic Opening ceremeony?--)
>
>
>
>
>
>
> >
> > On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 06:40:26 +1000 Alison Croggon
<[redacted]>
> > writes:
> > > Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei > > > Tarkovsky, to > > > me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems
in
> > > most (if > > > not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky.

> > > I wrote
> > > an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute
> > > time - last > > > year, if anyone is interested -
> > >
> > >
> >
> http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-desti
> > tute.html<
>
http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-destitute.html
> >
> > >
> > > All best
> > >
> > > Alison
> > >
> > > On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot
> > > <[redacted]>wrote:
> > >
> > > > Dear Amy--
> > > >
> > > > oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE,
which inspired
> > > Jack
> > > > Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang
> > > du poete
> > > > (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely > > > between
> > > > an > > > > opening of a buidling collapsing and a final
"scene" of the
> > > conclusion of > > > > the building's collapse----a play on on the "film
within a film"
> > > and also

> > > > an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than
> > > a > > > > building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in
> > > the
> > > > "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories"
> > > within a
> > > > "jump cut"--
> > > >
> > > > a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades'
serials
> > > (Les > > > > Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo,
> > > L'atalante esp
> > > > and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add
> > > Buneul's Los > > > > Olvidados also)
> > > >
> > > > Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb
> > > films--including > > > > Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-
> > > >
> > > > Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo
prosody voice
> > > over
> > > > narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry
> > > Rivers-
> > > >
> > > > The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of
> > > lines
> > > > from
> > > > the Poe poem of that name--
> > > >
> > > > Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton
> > > >
> > > > Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and

film
> > > writing--
> > > >
> > > > Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese
> > > calligrpahic
> > > > poetry and influences of literature in his works
> > > >
> > > > Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry
of Russian
> > > Futurism
> > > > and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles
in some > > > films--
> > > >
> > > > the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde
French
> > > cinema of the > > > > Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early > > > 1960's--
> > > >
> > > > there's even a pretty silly Hollywood
"bio-pic" of Villon--
> > > >
> > > > Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great
> > > Borges
> > > > story--
> > > >
> > > > Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on > > > Olson's "seeing
> > > > in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--
> > > >
> > > > Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for
> > > example,
> > > > -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes
> > > long
> > > > letter
> > > > ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--
> > > >

> > > > there must be thousands more considering how many films in so > > > many
> > > > languages
> > > > from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment
> > > can't > > > > recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king
<[redacted]>
> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > > > Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop
> > > me a > > > > line.
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Enjoy:
> > > > >
> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
> > > > > Amy
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >

> > > > > _____
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Recent
> > > > >
> > > > > http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> > > > >
> > > > > http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Alias
> > > > >
> > > > > http://www.amyking.org
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Your Suggestions
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
all posts.
> > > Check
> > > > guidelines
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > >
posts. Check
> > > guidelines
> > > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> > > Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com

> > > Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com
> > >
Check
> > >
> > >
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

113. Eric Dickey
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Thu 14 Aug 2008

---

if lines of poems it is, then

No Country for Old Men should be included, it's the first line of Yeats' Sailing to Byzantium.

I guess it depends on how far you want to take it.

--- On Thu, 8/14/08, Mary Kasimor <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Mary Kasimor <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, August 14, 2008, 7:43 AM

Has Eternal Sunshine of the Spotlless Mind been mentioned? The title is based on a line from an Alexander Pope poem. (I have to admit that I am not familiar with it, although I did study Pope at one time--long ago.) The movie does support the title. Jim Carrey and Kate Winslett are in it--both have their minds erased and thus their love affair. Well, I am sure that you have all seen it, and perhaps it has been mentioned in the posts about movies with poetry.

Best,
Mary Kasimor

--- On Thu, 8/14/08, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, August 14, 2008, 5:03 AM

David,

Keeping your expanding approach going:

a) The Seattle guru-like poet in My Private Idaho, who was based on a actual poet. Ther movie itself was based on S's play Henry IV. The poet and River Phoenix figures play the Falstaff figure and Keanu Reeves the young prodigal prince who cuts, yejects, disowns them when he rejoins his father's business and turns away from his gay street hustler's life.

b) Whitman and kinky sex (painting the toes to Whitman) in Bull Durham, where baseball itself is treated like a poem, and even Doc Hollywood where the old doctor of the Utopian fantasy town in the middle of the United States which grows the biggest squashes, after dinner and drunk, reads Whitman endlessly through the night.

c) Endless quotations from philosophers, artists, poets, revolutionaries, jingles and phrases from T.V. commercials which permeate all Godard movies.

d) In the Mood for Love the man character is writing a Karate hero comics while his cigarette smoke fills the entire screen. This writing (a collaboration between the hero and heroine) is treated as a secret love affair taking place in small rooms, first a boarding house surrounded by spouses and neighbor, then in a hotel room with beautiful wall paper.

The movie in which Coyote plays the Italian poet Montale. Coyote is now doing voice-overs in history and nature documentaries.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 4:46 PM, David Chirot
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Alison, Anny & Bobbi--
>
> thanks so much for your insights re the film you write of.
>
> The Andrea del Sarto! (the line in Pound poem abt him, too--) It's amazing
> the trajectory Pasolini's films make--from the neo-realist Roman accented
> speech of ACCATONE, which in a strange way (i saw it light years ago) made > me think of a version of Narcissus, and a meditation on beauty, the great > film of Gospel According to Saint Matthew and the austere Greek
> trageies--then the bizarre invasion of decadence by even greater decadence
> in Teorema--hurtling into the Mannerist Trilogy --and then the orgy of > (Capitalist?) human pigs in Porcione--

>
> There is an amzing long poem by Pasolini that continas as one of the > tributaries entertwining like snakes in its flow a meditation on some as I > recall interview with Godard--in which Pasolini remarks that with clinical > lucidty he now sees hiw own complete lack of lucidty.
>
> It's a bit like the film Bobbi writes of--the "clinical lucidty" gives a
> "viewpoint" for the poet/filmmaker of his own "lack of lucidity"--which may > simply mean--'lack of clinical lucidity," or "lucidty"
as considere by the > clinical lucidty--
>
> So, donning the persona of a psychiatrist ("Super ego?") for a moment, the > poet judges himself "lacking in lucidity," and so "nuts,
""lost in the
> obscurity of madness," or "seeing as through a glass DARKLY"-- (lucidity
> being light)--
>
> Pasolini's self-questioning is put a different way in a scene using
poetry
> in the film Apocalypse Now (from Conrad's Heart of Darkness.) .
Marlon
> Brando's Colonel Kurtz, accused by the Army of using "unsound methods," > breaks off reading and reciting from T S Eliot's "The Hollow Men" to > himself
> and Martin Sheen's Marlow, to ask if Marlow, too, finds his methods
> "unsound."   To which Marlow replies "I see no method . . .
at all, Sir."
>
> It seems part of the Army's "judgement" of Kurtz has to do
with his > reciting > poetry while leading an Army who worship him as a God. Marlow has already > witnessed Robert Duvall's "weird glow" of surfing-obsessed Invincibility,

> which makes him kind of a God to his Command, too. In the midst of all the > insanity and mass slaughter, the only thing that really sets Kurz apart
> seems to be his obssesion with questions asked in poems, combined with his > leading "savages" and the "re-created" previous American assassins sent to > kill him.
>
> The other "artist" figure on the scene, Dennis Hopper's
photo-journalist,
> pleads with Marlow "not to judge" Kurtz. The only thing comensurate to
> such > a being, the photographer tells Marlow, is the jungle. "When it dies,
he > dies and when he dies, it dies." The "only solution" in the final
> "Apocalypse" is simply to send a massive air strike agsint Kurtz's jungle
> realm, bombing and napalming into oblivion the T. S. Eliot reciting > renegade
> and all his followers. So much for asking questions regarding a scuttling > crab and Hollow Men!
>
> Maybe becase, like Apocalypse Now, it's an "epic" film, Dr Zhivago seems
> to > have been neglected of mention. The story of a poet-doctor written by a > poet from an artistic and musical family, who when very young knew Leo > Tolstoy, and later Myakovksy, Eisenstein, everyy one, for a glorious,
open
> period,-until forced into "retirement" for decades, translating Shakespeare
> and Gothe to survive, the film of Pasternak's novel doesn't really allude
> all that much to Zhivago's own poetry. (Even in the novel, the poems
are
> an > Appenidix as it were.) All the same, Dr Zhivago is one of the rare Western > poets other than Homer to recieve truly the "epic" treatment on
a truly
> grand scale in the cinema. (Homer turns up in Goadard's Contempt, along > with allusions to "BB" as both Bert Brecht/Brigitte Bardot, as well as > launching who knows how many ships and armies from Italy's Cinecitta > alone.)

>
> And who can forget the procession through the entire history of cinema
from > all corners of the world of films with poetry generated by Shakespeare > alone?
>
> Even in the 1970's remake of Invasion of the Body Snatchers, a main > character is a poet--"Beatnik" poets in the Corman classic
Bucket of > Blood--the Blake reciting painter Gulley Jimson in The Horse's Mouth
from > Joyce Cary's novel--there are thousands and thousands of poets stowed
away
> in the hulks of bulky old metal film containers, filled with deteriorating
> celluloid and the disintegrating lines of fragements uttered and scribbled
> by ever more obscure characters--real poets,make believe poets, ghosts of > poets, poets' ghost writers, poets' plagiarizers and imitators and
forgers,
> posthumously known poets, almost completley and permanently unknown
> poets--except in their "appearances on film"--poets only known
to have > existed by showing up in a fragment in a dim, jerky, blotchy old reel--and > then vanishing into the shadows of rooms of places long ago tumbled down
> and > becoming muclh for the unwitting descendents of Whitman's Leaves of Grass--
>
> The films and film writings of Blaise Cendrars--of the Lettriste founder > Isidore Isou--a short film colab by Julio Cortazar--
>
> Not to mention the serial-killing fascist, poetry plagiarizing,
> sky-writing, polaraoid photographer of the gory remains of his
> "disappeared" victims, (following Pinochet's Coup), the
"atrocity exhibit"
> creator and founder of the "New Chiliean Poetry." poet Carlos Weider aka
> Ruiz-Tagle in Roberto Bolano's Distant Star, who is the shadowy second > camera man of porno films made in Italy, and most likely the killer of > their > entire casts and crews.

>
> Deep sea divers of the depths of film, more specialized than some of the > various other forms of Cinephiles and Cinefous, while be empoyed on > "treasure hunts" among these "lost vaults" corroding
in the Davy Jones'
> lockers of the world's cinematic waters--even the Rivers will be trawled
> for > the remains of any poems that may have been in the pockets of some drowned
> cinematic poet, pushed off a bridge, or died in a ditch like Omar > Caseres--divers
> in search of" the forensic details of the drowned but undying voices
of > poets rocked in the Waters of a perhaps no longer altogether obdurate and > unyielding Oblivion . . .
>
> While floating overhead among the Armada of Ishamels clinging to coffins
> and > ships' furnishings, there goes Orpheus, floating on his back and spouting
> water and lines high, high into the air, like a beaming whale painted by > Gulley Jimson, surrounded by porposies and surfing sirens singing Sapphic > hymns--
>
> Or perhaps this is already a movie, just one among the hundreds and > hundreds
> one remembers only vaguely---and that come back to haunt one while watching
> clouds far larger than any drive in screens--loud and lurid with the > Ultra-Techniclors of a Most Dramatic Sunset--a scene escaped from some old > film too ecstatically decrepit to any longer "keep it a secret"--and
> launhed
> into the flows of time like water borne lanterns and wine cups in an > thousand year old Chinese poem--
>
> (Or is that the great Chinese film maker's Olympic Opening ceremeony?--)
>

>
>
>
>
>
> >
> > On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 06:40:26 +1000 Alison Croggon
<[redacted]>
> > writes:
> > > Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei > > > Tarkovsky, to > > > me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems
in
> > > most (if > > > not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky.
> > > I wrote
> > > an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute
> > > time - last > > > year, if anyone is interested -
> > >
> > >
> >
> http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-desti
> > tute.html<
>
http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-destitute.html
> >
> > >
> > > All best
> > >
> > > Alison
> > >
> > > On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot
> > > <[redacted]>wrote:
> > >
> > > > Dear Amy--
> > > >
> > > > oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE,
which inspired

> > > Jack
> > > > Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang
> > > du poete
> > > > (Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely > > > between
> > > > an > > > > opening of a buidling collapsing and a final
"scene" of the
> > > conclusion of > > > > the building's collapse----a play on on the "film
within a film"
> > > and also > > > > an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than
> > > a > > > > building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in
> > > the
> > > > "documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories"
> > > within a
> > > > "jump cut"--
> > > >
> > > > a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades'
serials
> > > (Les > > > > Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo,
> > > L'atalante esp
> > > > and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add
> > > Buneul's Los > > > > Olvidados also)
> > > >
> > > > Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb
> > > films--including > > > > Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-
> > > >
> > > > Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo
prosody voice

> > > over
> > > > narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry
> > > Rivers-
> > > >
> > > > The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of
> > > lines
> > > > from
> > > > the Poe poem of that name--
> > > >
> > > > Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton
> > > >
> > > > Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and
film
> > > writing--
> > > >
> > > > Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese
> > > calligrpahic
> > > > poetry and influences of literature in his works
> > > >
> > > > Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry
of Russian
> > > Futurism
> > > > and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles
in some > > > films--
> > > >
> > > > the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde
French
> > > cinema of the > > > > Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early > > > 1960's--
> > > >
> > > > there's even a pretty silly Hollywood
"bio-pic" of Villon--
> > > >
> > > > Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great
> > > Borges
> > > > story--

> > > >
> > > > Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on > > > Olson's "seeing
> > > > in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--
> > > >
> > > > Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for
> > > example,
> > > > -in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes
> > > long
> > > > letter
> > > > ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--
> > > >
> > > > there must be thousands more considering how many films in so > > > many
> > > > languages
> > > > from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment
> > > can't > > > > recall the tiles clearly enough--from, Japan and India alone--
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king
<[redacted]>
> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > > > Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > If you want me to add your last name for your credit,
just drop
> > > me a > > > > line.
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > Enjoy:
> > > > >

> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
> > > > >
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/
> > > > >
> > > > > > Amy
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > > _____
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > > Recent
> > > > >
> > > > > > http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html
> > > > >
> > > > > > http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > > Alias
> > > > >
> > > > > > http://www.amyking.org
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > > Your Suggestions
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > >
all posts.

> > > Check
> > > > guidelines
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > >
posts. Check
> > > guidelines
> > > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
> > > Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
> > > Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com
> > >
Check
> > >
> > >
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

114. Larry O. Dean
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Thu 14 Aug 2008

Great movie! That rare book-to-film adaption that's not only well cast and directed, but which also captures the essence of Charles Willeford's writing.

The whole haiku is:

Thinking he's alone (he starts, then...)

Breaking, entering the dark and lonely places.
Finding a big gun.

Smelling like a rose...

I wish he'd finished more.

Murat Nemet-Nejat writes:

> One should not forget Miami Blues in which the psychopathic Alec Baldwin character burgles a house to steal a coin collection, simultaneously composing a haiku about it, the middle line of which is "breaking and entering." Absolutely priceless! Does anyone remember the entire gem?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat

↑ Index

115. Bill Berkson

FW: Tuesday, August 26th - Bill Berkson & Kevin Opstedal

Thu 14 Aug 2008

------ Forwarded Message
From: Books & Bookshelves <[redacted]>
Date: Thu, 14 Aug 2008 13:22:34 -0700
To: Books & Bookshelves <[redacted]>
Subject: Tuesday, August 26th - Bill Berkson & Kevin Opstedal

Book Party & Reading at Books & Bookshelves

Tuesday, August 26, 2008
7:30 pm

Bill Berkson
  Goods and Services
Kevin Opstedal
  Santa Cruz

[both from Blue Press <http://www.bluepressbooks.com/> , 2008]

Books and Bookshelves is located in the Castro at 99 Sanchez St <http://maps.google.com/maps?ie=UTF8&q™+sanchez+sf+&oe=UTF-8&cd=1&ll7.772818,-122.431169&spn=0.009329,0.018668&z&iwlo cdr>

BILL BERKSON was born in New York in 1939. A poet, critic, teacher, and sometime curator, he moved to Northern California in 1970 and during the next decade edited a series of little magazines and books under the Big Sky imprint. From 1984 to 2008 he was a professor of Liberal Arts at the San Francisco Art Institute. He is a corresponding editor for Art in America and has contributed reviews and essays to such other journals as Aperture, Artforum, Works on Paper and Modern Painters.His recent books of poetry include Gloria (in a deluxe limited edition with etchings by Alex Katz), Our Friends Will Pass Among You Silently, and Goods and Services. Other books include a collection of his criticism, The Sweet Singer of Modernism & Other Art Writings: 1985-2003; Sudden Address: Selected lectures 1981-2006; an epistolary collaboration with Bernadette Mayer entitled What's Your Idea of a Good Time?: Interviews & Letters 1977-1985. His Portrait and Dream: New & Selected Poems will appear form Coffee House Press in 2009. Berkson was the 2006 Distinguished Mellon Fellow at the Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture. He now lives in New York and San Francisco.

KEVIN OPSTEDAL is a poet as well as the editor/publisher of Blue Press Books (bluepressbooks.com <http://bluepressbooks.com/>), a venture started 10 years ago with Colorado poet Michael Price. Blue Press has published 15 magazines and 52 books to date, with more on the way. Opstedal himself has written 24 books of poetry, the most recent being User's Manual to the Pacific Coast Highway (Seven Fingers Press, Boulder, 2007) and Santa Cruz (Blue Press, 2008). A slim volume of selected poems, Rare Surf, Vol. 2: New & Used Poems, was published by Smog Eyes Press, Playa del Rey, in 2006. His poems, essays and book reviews have appeared in numerous little magazines and periodicles over the years, as well as on the web. In addition he has edited the as yet unpublished Dear Oxygen, Selected Poems of Lewis MacAdams, and his recently completed literary history of the Bolinas poets has been published online (www.bigbridge.org/bolinas.htm <http://www.bigbridge.org/bolinas.htm>). Born and raised in Venice Beach, California, Opstedal currently resides in Santa Cruz.

FREE, but
Please B.Y.O.B.

↑ Index

116. Bill Berkson

USE THIS: Tuesday, August 26th - Bill Berkson & Kevin Opstedal

Thu 14 Aug 2008

------ Forwarded Message
From: Books & Bookshelves <[redacted]>
Date: Thu, 14 Aug 2008 13:22:34 -0700
To: Books & Bookshelves <[redacted]>
Subject: Tuesday, August 26th - Bill Berkson & Kevin Opstedal

Book Party & Reading at Books & Bookshelves

Tuesday, August 26, 2008
7:30 pm

Bill Berkson
  Goods and Services
Kevin Opstedal
  Santa Cruz

[both from Blue Press <http://www.bluepressbooks.com/> , 2008]

Books and Bookshelves is located in the Castro at 99 Sanchez St <http://maps.google.com/maps?ie=UTF8&q™+sanchez+sf+&oe=UTF-8&cd=1&ll7.772818,-122.431169&spn=0.009329,0.018668&z&iwlo cdr>

BILL BERKSON was born in New York in 1939. A poet, critic, teacher, and sometime curator, he moved to Northern California in 1970 and during the next decade edited a series of little magazines and books under the Big Sky imprint. From 1984 to 2008 he was a professor of Liberal Arts at the San Francisco Art Institute. He is a corresponding editor for Art in America and has contributed reviews and essays to such other journals as Aperture, Artforum, Works on Paper and Modern Painters.His recent books of poetry include Gloria (in a deluxe limited edition with etchings by Alex Katz), Our Friends Will Pass Among You Silently, and Goods and Services. Other books include a collection of his criticism, The Sweet Singer of Modernism & Other Art Writings: 1985-2003; Sudden Address: Selected lectures 1981-2006; an epistolary collaboration with Bernadette Mayer entitled What's Your Idea of a Good Time?: Interviews & Letters 1977-1985; and BILL, a words-and-pictures adventure story with Colter Jacobsen. His Portrait and Dream: New & Selected Poems will appear from Coffee House Press in 2009. Berkson was the 2006 Distinguished Mellon Fellow at the Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture. He now lives in New York and San Francisco.

KEVIN OPSTEDAL is a poet as well as the editor/publisher of Blue Press Books (bluepressbooks.com <http://bluepressbooks.com/>), a venture started 10 years ago with Colorado poet Michael Price. Blue Press has published 15 magazines and 52 books to date, with more on the way. Opstedal himself has written 24 books of poetry, the most recent being User's Manual to the Pacific Coast Highway (Seven Fingers Press, Boulder, 2007) and Santa Cruz (Blue Press, 2008). A slim volume of selected poems, Rare Surf, Vol. 2: New & Used Poems, was published by Smog Eyes Press, Playa del Rey, in 2006. His poems, essays and book reviews have appeared in numerous little magazines and periodicles over the years, as well as on the web. In addition he has edited the as yet unpublished Dear Oxygen, Selected Poems of Lewis MacAdams, and his recently completed literary history of the Bolinas poets has been published online (www.bigbridge.org/bolinas.htm <http://www.bigbridge.org/bolinas.htm>). Born and raised in Venice Beach, California, Opstedal currently resides in Santa Cruz.

FREE, but
Please B.Y.O.B.

↑ Index

117. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

Fri 15 Aug 2008

---

i had mentioned it but forgot title met her and playwrite at poet's house before film came out they did a talk
film is ok but never really saw the light odf day as decaprio at that point became a titanic star and they wanted to keep this film under wraps finally got to see it late one night on cable wasn't bad wasn't great

On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 23:32:52 +0200 Anny Ballardini
<[redacted]> writes:
> Total Eclipse by Agnieszka Holland based on the play by Christopher > Hampton
> about Verlaine and Rimbaud. Someone mentioned this movie somewhere > else, I > will have to keep it in mind and watch it. Thanks.
>
>
> On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 6:53 PM, steve d. dalachinsky
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > decaprio film total eclipse i think was name
> > i mentioned tarkovsky's dad earlier
> >
>
>
>
>
> >
> > Anny Ballardini
> >
>

http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/<mhtml:{F3087831-6CF4-4A83-9D78-E3470A 579701}mid://00000730/!x-usc:http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/>
> >
>
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome<mhtml:{F3087831-6CF4
-4A83-9D78-E3470A579701}mid://00000730/!x-usc:http://www.fieralingue.it/m odules.php?name=poetshome>
> >
>
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html<mhtml:{F3087831-6CF4-4A83-9D78-E34 70A579701}mid://00000730/!x-usc:http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html>
> > in Letters to Nowhere
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

118. George Bowering
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Fri 15 Aug 2008

On Aug 14, 2008, at 8:49 AM, Eric Dickey wrote:

> if lines of poems it is, then
>
> No Country for Old Men should be included, it's the first line of Yeats' Sailing to Byzantium.

I think that the line is more like

That is no country for old men. The young

George H. Bowering, DLitt.
Last shoeshine in 1961.

↑ Index

119. Jim Andrews
generative art
Fri 15 Aug 2008

Below is an email from Scott Draves sent to the generative art list. It links to a work of generative visual art by Scott Draves. You can download a (Windows or Linux) screensaver of the generative art at http://community.electricsheep.org/node/281 . run the installer and then right click your desktop, click Properties, and then go to the Screensaver tab and select electricsheep. i found it crashed (just press Enter to exit the crash) a couple of times the first day, but i gather that's just as it first downloads videos. After the first day, it has been running fine on my machine.

Why send this to a list concerned with poetry when Draves's piece is generative of abstract visual art?

Well, a few reasons. It's an interesting work of net art. And literary art can also be generative. And there are a few interesting poet-programmers, and this piece is quite well programmed.

Also, on the mememe side, I've been developing a generative piece called dbCinema (http://vispo.com/dbcinema/meditations.htm). Which has both a visual and a literary dimension (a text 'brush', for instance). You can compare Draves's visuals (and concepts) with mine and see what you come up with.

****

Good news: this year siggraph chose my generative artwork as their graphic identity:
http://www.siggraph.org/s2008/credits/

i am here at the conference and the image is all over the place, from t-shirts to the 5 big screens in the main presentation hall. if anyone wants to meet-up to chat pls drop me a line or come to the party (tonight, sorry late notice):

http://www.new.facebook.com/event.php?eid=26490437002 where i'll be showing the 100GB HD installation as well as the all-new 2.7 beta (it's premier) windows: http://community.electricsheep.org/node/281 linux: http://community.electricsheep.org/node/271

thanks to the committee and all the sheep. yours, -spot

↑ Index

120. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Fri 15 Aug 2008

Thanks Larry. If I remember correctly, only the first three lines are the haiku. The Baldwin character pronounces the second in a quaint way, which makes that scene so memorable, fitting the steps of the burglary to a poem. Another fascinating detail is that Baldwin commits the deed while his girl friend is preparing dinner (vinegar pie?), which he always likes. Crime as a poem? Domestic life as crime? I agree with you. Every scene in the movie is memorable. Ciao, Murat

On Thu, Aug 14, 2008 at 1:19 PM, Larry O. Dean
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Great movie! That rare book-to-film adaption that's not only well cast and directed, but which also captures the essence of Charles Willeford's writing.
> The whole haiku is:
> Thinking he's alone (he starts, then...)
> Breaking, entering
> the dark and lonely places.
> Finding a big gun.
> Smelling like a rose...
> I wish he'd finished more.
> Murat Nemet-Nejat writes:
>
> One should not forget Miami Blues in which the psychopathic Alec Baldwin character burgles a house to steal a coin collection, simultaneously composing a haiku about it, the middle line of which is "breaking and entering." Absolutely priceless! Does anyone remember the entire gem?
> Ciao,
> Murat

↑ Index

121. amalio Madueno
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Fri 15 Aug 2008

Keeping your expanding approach going:
The death scene for Rutger Hauer's cyborg character in "Blade Runner" contains a tercet that goes something like this:
I've seen ships on fire off the shoulder of Orion and star gleam on the Tannhauser Gate,

Now it's time to die. . .

--- On Thu, 8/14/08, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Thursday, August 14, 2008, 4:03 AM
> David,
>
> Keeping your expanding approach going:
>
> a) The Seattle guru-like poet in My Private Idaho, who was based on a actual > poet. Ther movie itself was based on S's play Henry IV. The poet and River > Phoenix figures play the Falstaff figure and Keanu Reeves the young prodigal > prince who cuts, yejects, disowns them when he rejoins his father's business > and turns away from his gay street hustler's life.
>
> b) Whitman and kinky sex (painting the toes to Whitman) in Bull Durham, > where baseball itself is treated like a poem, and even Doc Hollywood where > the old doctor of the Utopian fantasy town in the middle of the United > States which grows the biggest squashes, after dinner and drunk, reads > Whitman endlessly through the night.
>
> c) Endless quotations from philosophers, artists, poets, revolutionaries, > jingles and phrases from T.V. commercials which permeate all Godard movies.
>
> d) In the Mood for Love the man character is writing a Karate hero comics > while his cigarette smoke fills the entire screen. This writing (a > collaboration between the hero and heroine) is treated as a secret love > affair taking place in small rooms, first a boarding house surrounded by > spouses and neighbor, then in a hotel room with beautiful wall paper.

The movie in which Coyote plays the Italian poet Montale. Coyote is now doing voice-overs in history and nature documentaries.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 4:46 PM, David Chirot
<[redacted]>wrote:

Dear Alison, Anny & Bobbi--

thanks so much for your insights re the film you write
of.

The Andrea del Sarto! (the line in Pound poem abt him, too--) It's amazing the trajectory Pasolini's films make--from the neo-realist Roman accented speech of ACCATONE, which in a strange way (i saw it light years ago) made me think of a version of Narcissus, and a meditation on beauty, the great film of Gospel According to Saint Matthew and the austere Greek trageies--then the bizarre invasion of decadence by even greater decadence in Teorema--hurtling into the Mannerist Trilogy --and then the orgy of (Capitalist?) human pigs in Porcione--

There is an amzing long poem by Pasolini that continas as one of the tributaries entertwining like snakes in its flow a meditation on some as I recall interview with Godard--in which Pasolini remarks that with clinical lucidty he now sees hiw own complete lack of lucidty.

It's a bit like the film Bobbi writes of--the "clinical lucidty" gives a "viewpoint" for the poet/filmmaker of his own "lack of lucidity"--which may simply mean--'lack of clinical lucidity," or "lucidty" as considere by the

clinical lucidty--

So, donning the persona of a psychiatrist ("Super ego?") for a moment, the poet judges himself "lacking in lucidity," and so "nuts, ""lost in the obscurity of madness," or "seeing as through a glass DARKLY"-- (lucidity
being light)--

Pasolini's self-questioning is put a different way in a scene using poetry in the film Apocalypse Now (from Conrad's Heart of Darkness.) . Marlon Brando's Colonel Kurtz, accused by the Army of using "unsound methods," breaks off reading and reciting from T S Eliot's
"The Hollow Men" to himself
and Martin Sheen's Marlow, to ask if Marlow, too, finds his methods
"unsound." To which Marlow replies "I see no method . . . at all, Sir."

It seems part of the Army's "judgement" of Kurtz has to do with his reciting
poetry while leading an Army who worship him as a God.
Marlow has already witnessed Robert Duvall's "weird glow"
of surfing-obsessed Invincibility, which makes him kind of a God to his Command, too. In the midst of all the insanity and mass slaughter, the only thing that really sets Kurz apart seems to be his obssesion with questions asked in poems, combined with his leading "savages" and the "re-created" previous American assassins sent to kill him.

The other "artist" figure on the scene,
Dennis Hopper's photo-journalist, pleads with Marlow "not to judge" Kurtz.
The only thing comensurate to
such a being, the photographer tells Marlow, is the jungle.
"When it dies, he dies and when he dies, it dies." The "only solution" in the final "Apocalypse" is simply to send a massive air strike agsint Kurtz's jungle realm, bombing and napalming into oblivion the T. S.

Eliot reciting
renegade
and all his followers. So much for asking questions regarding a scuttling
crab and Hollow Men!

Maybe becase, like Apocalypse Now, it's an "epic" film, Dr Zhivago seems
to have been neglected of mention. The story of a poet-doctor written by a poet from an artistic and musical family, who when very young knew Leo Tolstoy, and later Myakovksy, Eisenstein, everyy one, for a glorious, open period,-until forced into "retirement" for decades, translating Shakespeare and Gothe to survive, the film of Pasternak's novel doesn't really allude all that much to Zhivago's own poetry. (Even in the novel, the poems are
an Appenidix as it were.) All the same, Dr Zhivago is one of the rare Western poets other than Homer to recieve truly the "epic" treatment on a truly grand scale in the cinema. (Homer turns up in Goadard's Contempt, along with allusions to "BB" as both Bert Brecht/Brigitte Bardot, as well as launching who knows how many ships and armies from Italy's Cinecitta
alone.)

And who can forget the procession through the entire history of cinema from all corners of the world of films with poetry generated by Shakespeare
alone?

Even in the 1970's remake of Invasion of the Body Snatchers, a main character is a poet--"Beatnik" poets in the

Corman classic Bucket of Blood--the Blake reciting painter Gulley Jimson in The Horse's Mouth from Joyce Cary's novel--there are thousands and thousands of poets stowed away in the hulks of bulky old metal film containers, filled with deteriorating
celluloid and the disintegrating lines of fragements uttered and scribbled by ever more obscure characters--real poets,make believe poets, ghosts of poets, poets' ghost writers, poets' plagiarizers and imitators and forgers, posthumously known poets, almost completley and permanently unknown poets--except in their "appearances on film"--poets only known to have existed by showing up in a fragment in a dim, jerky, blotchy old reel--and then vanishing into the shadows of rooms of places long ago tumbled down
and becoming muclh for the unwitting descendents of Whitman's Leaves of Grass--

The films and film writings of Blaise Cendrars--of the Lettriste founder
Isidore Isou--a short film colab by Julio Cortazar--

Not to mention the serial-killing fascist, poetry plagiarizing,
sky-writing, polaraoid photographer of the gory remains of his "disappeared" victims, (following Pinochet's Coup), the "atrocity exhibit" creator and founder of the "New Chiliean Poetry." poet Carlos Weider aka Ruiz-Tagle in Roberto Bolano's Distant Star, who is the shadowy second camera man of porno films made in Italy, and most likely the killer of their
entire casts and crews.

Deep sea divers of the depths of film, more specialized than some of the various other forms of Cinephiles and Cinefous, while be empoyed on

"treasure hunts" among these "lost vaults" corroding in the Davy Jones' lockers of the world's cinematic waters--even the Rivers will be trawled
for the remains of any poems that may have been in the pockets of some drowned cinematic poet, pushed off a bridge, or died in a ditch like Omar
Caseres--divers
in search of" the forensic details of the drowned but undying voices of poets rocked in the Waters of a perhaps no longer altogether obdurate and unyielding Oblivion . . .

While floating overhead among the Armada of Ishamels clinging to coffins
and ships' furnishings, there goes Orpheus, floating on his back and spouting water and lines high, high into the air, like a beaming whale painted by Gulley Jimson, surrounded by porposies and surfing sirens singing Sapphic
hymns--

Or perhaps this is already a movie, just one among the hundreds and hundreds
one remembers only vaguely---and that come back to haunt one while watching clouds far larger than any drive in screens--loud and lurid with the Ultra-Techniclors of a Most Dramatic Sunset--a scene escaped from some old film too ecstatically decrepit to any longer
"keep it a secret"--and
launhed
into the flows of time like water borne lanterns and wine cups in an thousand year old Chinese poem--

(Or is that the great Chinese film maker's Olympic Opening ceremeony?--)

On Wed, 13 Aug 2008 06:40:26 +1000 Alison Croggon
<[redacted]>
writes:
Yes, Pasolini and Cocteau are odd oversights. And also Andrei Tarkovsky, to me an arch poet of film, especially in Stalker. He quotes poems in most (if not all) of his film, mostly those of his father, Arsey Tarkovsky.
I wrote
an essay on Stalker - Tarkovsky's Stalker: A poet in a destitute
time - last
year, if anyone is interested -

http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-desti
tute.html<

http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com/2007/09/tarkovskys-stalker-poet-in-destitute.html

All best

Alison

On Wed, Aug 13, 2008 at 3:23 AM, David Chirot
<[redacted]>wrote:

Dear Amy--

oddly no one seems to have noted Cocteau's ORPHEE, which inspired
Jack
Spicer's receiving poetry from the radio, nor Cocteau's Le Sang
du poete
(Blood of a Poet) probably the first film to take place entirely between

an opening of a buidling collapsing and a final "scene" of the conclusion of the building's collapse----a play on on the "film within a film"
and also an expression of the speed of poetic thought traveling faster than
a building collapsing, the "film of the imagination" NOT shown in
the
"documentary"--yet existing simultaneously--"mental trajectories"
within a
"jump cut"--

a lot of films made in France begining with Feuillades' serials
(Les Vampyrs, etc)-- France culminating in the work of Jean Vigo,
L'atalante esp
and the Dali/Bunuel l'Age d'or & Chien Andalu--(one dould add
Buneul's Los
Olvidados also)

Pier Paulo Pasolini -a great poet who made many superb
films--including
Chuacer's Canterbury Tales-

Robert Frank's Pull My Daisy with spontaneous bo prosody voice
over narration by Kerouac and "starring" Ginsberg, Corso & Larry
Rivers-

The Howard Hawks western "El Dorado" which includes recitation of lines
from
the Poe poem of that name--

Samuel Beckett films done with Buster Keaton

Antonin Artaud's astonishing screen appearances and film
writing--

Eisenstein wrote essays detailing the influences of Chinese
calligrpahic poetry and influences of literature in his works

Dziga Vertov's films influenced by the art anbd poetry of Russian Futurism
and Constructivism and also Mayakovsky's starring roles in some films--

the poems and prose of Poe inspired lot of avant-garde French cinema of the Twenties and of course the Roger Corman cult classics of early 1960's--

there's even a pretty silly
Hollywood "bio-pic" of Villon-- Bertolucci's early film "The Spider Strategem" is from a great Borges

story--

Susan Howe in Writing 19 wrote a really intersting essay on Olson's "seeing in a poem" and cinema of Pudovkin and others--

Stan Brakhage influenced by many of the poets he encountered-for
example,
-in Film Culture's Brakhage issue of Fall 1963 , Brakhage writes long
letter

ot his wife Jane re his first encounter with Olson--

there must be thousands more considering how many films in so many
languages
from so many cultures there are! many come to mind but at moment
can't recall the tiles clearly enough--from,
Japan and India alone--

On Mon, Aug 11, 2008 at 4:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]>
wrote:

Thanks to everyone who made suggestions!

If you want me to add your last name for your credit, just drop me a line.

Enjoy:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Amy

Recent

http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Reviews/kiss-me.html

http://jacketmagazine.com/34/dickow-king.shtml

Alias

http://www.amyking.org

Your Suggestions

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

Check
guidelines

guidelines

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

accept all posts. Check

accept all posts. Check

> guidelines
>
> all posts. Check guidelines

↑ Index

122. David Seaman poetry book
Fri 15 Aug 2008

André Breton wrote a book about his experiences on the Caribbean island Martinique, called Martinique Snake Charmer. It includes a collection of prose poems, "Some Trembling Pins," originally scrawled on the back of post cards. My full translation of the book has just been published by the University of Texas Press. David Seaman

↑ Index

123. steve russell
Auster in D.C.
Fri 15 Aug 2008

Finally:
Paul Auster, @ Politics & Prose, 5015 Connecticut Ave, NW, D.C.
8/21
The reading starts at 7.

Auster is the next best thing to Borges.

↑ Index

124. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Fri 15 Aug 2008

In each others arms, birds in the trees

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Aug 15, 2008 at 2:14 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

> On Aug 14, 2008, at 8:49 AM, Eric Dickey wrote:
>
> if lines of poems it is, then

> No Country for Old Men should be included, it's the first line of Yeats' Sailing to Byzantium.
>
> I think that the line is more like
>
> That is no country for old men. The young
>
> George H. Bowering, DLitt.
> Last shoeshine in 1961.

↑ Index

125. Gloria Mindock

Two new books from Cervena Barva Press

Fri 15 Aug 2008

Cervena Barva Press announces two new publications

I Ching by Martin Burke (e-book free to read online)

"Burke is the eloquent essayist of the sublime"
Projected Letters
"His style is far ahead in terms of imaginative inventiveness: This is startling, original work"
Kiosque Review
To read: www.cervenabarvapress.com

Conquest of Somalia and Other Poems by Gary Beck (chapbook)
Gary Beck has spent most of his adult life as a theater director and worked as an art dealer when he couldn't earn a living in the theater. He has also been a tennis pro, a ditch digger and a salvage diver. His original plays and translations of Moliere, Aristophanes and Sophocles have been produced Off Broadway and toured colleges and outdoor performance venues. He currently lives in New York City, where he's busy writing fiction and his short stories have recently appeared in numerous literary magazines.
Order online at http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/cervenabooks.html

The Conquest of Somalia
by Gary Beck
$7.00 + $3.00 S/H
36 pages, paper
Publication Date: August, 2008 For information contact:
Gloria Mindock
Cervena Barva Press, Somerville, MA
Email: [redacted]

Send me_____copies of "The Conquest of Somalia" Total enclosed: $_____
Name_____
Street_____
City_____State_____Zip_____ e-mail_____Phone_____

↑ Index

126. Geoffrey Gatza
BlazeVOX [books] Raffle and Bake Sale
Fri 15 Aug 2008

BlazeVOX [books] Raffle and Bake Sale

http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>
http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>
http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>

Raffle

Win 25 BlazeVOX [books]
A $500 value
Your choice of 95 titles so you cannot lose!

5 drawings over 5 weeks

$5 a chance
$25 one chance for each drawing

Hurray!!!

Paypal us now!

BUT WAIT why try a chance!
Make a donation now to help save BlazeVOX [books] and we will send you books!

10 titles ‹ $100 [a $200 value]

15 titles ‹ $200 [a $300 value]

20 titles ‹ $300 [a $400 value]

25 titles ‹ $400 [a $500 value]

Bake Sale

http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>
http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>
http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>

Yes it is true! This always works for school programs so why not give it a try! I am a CIA trained chef and can cook up a storm. I have gone into my Grand Grimoire of world class recipes and have chosen some on my best desserts.

If you order this I will mail it to you by USPS! These are specifically chosen to ship well, so it will arrive AOK. If in Buffalo, drop off to your home. If you are not in the Buffalo Area please add $6 for shipping.

- Ginger syrup
- Culinary TEAM USA Spice Rubs
- Belgian Chocolate Brownies with macadamia nuts
- Dundee Cake
- Almond Cookies
- Half-Dipped M & M Cookies with Dark Chocolate
- Sachertorte

Culinary TEAM USA Spice Rubs

5 4 oz. packets of spices used by the 2000 USA team in the Culinary Olympics. It¹s true! I have them and will send them to you so you too can serve up a world-class meal! Recipes not for sale :-)

Southwestern Spice Mix
Moroccan Tagine Spice
East Coast Grill
Caribbean style rub for Pork or Chicken
Curry Mint Rub for shrimp

4 oz. of each spice:
$45

Ginger syrup

One of the best things that I have ever created. Ginger syrup is a sweet sour and spicy glaze that is great on everything. Really, it is good on chicken, beef, pork and ice cream. Perfect for vegetables or an addition to a stir fry to add that perfect splash of ginger.

10 oz. Jam Jar
$20

Belgian Chocolate Brownies with macadamia nuts

Who doesn¹t like chocolate brownies? Chocolate brownies are a timeless classic. Using fine Belgian cocoa brings out a deep rich chocolate flavor that is enhanced by macadamia nuts. You can¹t ever go wrong bringing a plate of this delicious desert to any type of gathering.

One 9 inch pie-plate
$30

Dundee Cake

Here is a rich, fruity cake topped with almonds. It became popular at the end of the 19th century. It is often served at Christmas. Reputed to be Winston Churchill¹s favorite dessert.

$25

Almond Cookies

Rich and buttery cookies are made with real almond paste, and baked to perfection. If you love almonds, you will love these!

Approx. 2 Pounds
$25

Half-Dipped M & M Cookies with Dark Chocolate

Fresh baked sugar cookies with M & M¹s and half dip them in rich chocolate. We pack them with bakery wax tissue in between each cookie for safe shipping.

Approx. 2 Pounds
$30

Sachertorte

Sachertorte is a timeless composition of the most important and finest ingredients from the confectioner's kitchens: pure chocolate, butter, eggs, sugar, flour, and apricot jam.

one 9-inch torte
$65

http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>
http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>
http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>

↑ Index

127. Jordan Stempleman

Looking for a transcription of de Kooning's lecture "What Abstract Art Means to Me."

Sat 16 Aug 2008

Does anyone have the full transcription?

I'm here if you do:

[redacted]

Thanks!

Jordan

_____ Talk to your Yahoo! Friends via Windows Live Messenger. Find out how.
http://www.windowslive.com/explore/messenger?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_messenger_yahoo_082008

↑ Index

128. George Bowering

Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

Sat 16 Aug 2008

In one another's arms . . .

On Aug 15, 2008, at 7:30 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

> In each others arms, birds in the trees
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Fri, Aug 15, 2008 at 2:14 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> On Aug 14, 2008, at 8:49 AM, Eric Dickey wrote:

> if lines of poems it is, then
>
> No Country for Old Men should be included, it's the first line of Yeats'
> Sailing to Byzantium.
>
> I think that the line is more like
>
> That is no country for old men. The young
>
> George H. Bowering, DLitt.
> Last shoeshine in 1961.
>
> guidelines
>
> welcome.html

George Bowering,
Fan of Alex Shibicky

↑ Index

129. David Chirot

Re: Looking for a transcription of de Kooning's lecture "What Abstract Art Means to Me."

Sat 16 Aug 2008

Dear Jordan:

as the creator of the cover art or your poem collection FACINGS i am happy to bring more "art information"--

you can find the lecture in its entirety at the following site,(below) as well as in print in Mary Ellen Caws superb anthology the site is for and also in print in the always easy to find always superb anthology ed. by Herschel Chipp Theories of Modern Art it was published first in 1951 though i believe the lecture itself given in 1950 (at the Museum of Modern Art

(i found your question taking a break from the poetry of general patton & a french book on Torture: Cancer of Democracy)

there is an incredible essay on the Anarchism of many of the Abstract Expressionists, an aspect usually left out in discussing them, though often very obvious in their statements, by John Zerzan

abstract expressionism actually didn't sell al that well in its time period, but it was used, like Jazz, to promote America abroad, as Jenny Holzer is today (her one million dollar installation at Venice Bienale, etc)

(Sartre wrote a fascinating essay on the effects of American literature in Europe in the late '30's and during ww2--and how the various governments, Facist, Communist, esp, and Occupation Forces German and then American, used these books to tell completely opposing narratives/versions of the usa as presented in the Big Name writers of the time--)

dbc, historian, theorist, intrepid reporter of the New Extreme Experimental American Poetry Manifesto: A Century of Isms - Google Books Result<http://books.google.com/books?id=lKONAETXi-kC&pg=PA264&lpg=PA264&dq=WHAT+ABSTRACT+ART+MEANS+TO+ME&source=web&ots=5zkpATN3_k&sig=rUsAb5S5sE7XM7m4pPUy6JQDi9c&hl=en&sa=X&oi=book_result&resnum=3&ct=result>by Mary Ann Caws - 2001 - Civilization, Modern - 713 pages
... What Abstract Art Means to Me 1951 The first man who began to speak, whoever he was, must have intended it. For surely it is talking that has put "Art" ...

http://books.google.com/books?id=lKONAETXi-kC&pg=PA264&lpg=PA264&dq=WHAT+ABSTRACT+ART+MEANS+TO+ME&source=web&ots=5zkpATN3_k&sig=rUsAb5S5sE7XM7m4pPUy6JQDi9c&hl=en&sa=X&oi=book_result&resnum=3&ct=result#PPA268,M1

On Sat, Aug 16, 2008 at 9:33 AM, Jordan Stempleman <
[redacted]> wrote:

> Does anyone have the full transcription?
>
> I'm here if you do:
>
> [redacted]
>
> Thanks!
>
> Jordan

> Date: Fri, 15 Aug 2008 10:22:59 -0400> From: [redacted]> Subject: poetry book> To: [redacted]> > André Breton wrote a book about his experiences on the Caribbean > island Martinique, called Martinique Snake Charmer. It includes a > collection of prose poems, "Some Trembling Pins," originally scrawled > on the back of post cards. My full translation of the book has just > been published by the University of Texas Press.> David Seaman> ==========> The Poetics List
>
> _____
> Talk to your Yahoo! Friends via Windows Live Messenger. Find out how.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/explore/messenger?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_messenger_yahoo_082008

↑ Index

130. Susan Webster Schultz

Tinfish 18 is imminent!

Sat 16 Aug 2008

Subject: Tinfish 18 out next week!

Tinfish 18 airs it out, offering an issue devoted to the Long Poem. Contributors include Mani Rao, Alysha Wood, Lynn Xu, David Perry, Stephen Collis, Endi Bogue Hartigan, and Norman Fischer, engaging issues of translation, form (including collage, the sonnet sequence, and the elegy), contemporary politics, and more.

Covers by Alan Konishi, Interior Art by Sara Hertenstein, centerfold by Gaye Chan. Design by Chae Ho Lee

Order through our website or by check to Tinfish Press, 47-728 Hui Kelu Street #9, Kaneohe, HI 96744.

aloha, Susan M. Schultz

http://tinfishpress.com

↑ Index

131. steve russell

Michelangelo Antonioni and other beautifully lit melodrama

Sat 16 Aug 2008

Antonioni movies every Saturday and Sunday at the National Gallery until August 24.

I've just seen La notte (Night).
The Italians have the best dressed bourgouise.
& i dig Antonioni.
He doesn't smother his images with text.

↑ Index

132. David Chirot
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Sat 16 Aug 2008

Drive, he said--Jack Nicholson's directorial debut and a Cannes entry of 1971--

i have always imagined the title to come from the famous Creeley line/poem--though the film is from a novel by jeremy Lerner-- i haven't seen that film in so long --and what i recall, it's quite possible the line is from Creeley--

Basketball Diaries from the book by Jim Carroll, also songwriter/musician band leader (the Jim Carroll Band)and poet and i keep thinking about William Blake being quoted in The Horse's Mouth and William Blake as the name of the character (played by Johnny Depp) in the film Deadman who, while is NOT william blake the poet, the American Indian who finds him wounded and escorts him to the "waters of oblivion" keeps speaking to as though he IS william blake the poet--the spirit of him-- an extraordinary film in which there is also a "case of mistaken literary/cinema identity" is the magnificent The Spirit of the Beehive directed by Victor Erice with the astounding Anna Torrant--in which a young girl, greatly moved by the sadness of the Frankenstein in James Whale's film version of Mary Shelley's book, enlists her young girl friend in helping a tramp in whom they see the qualities of Frankenstein which so greatly affected them-- the film leaves open the "obvious" ambiguity of the Frankentsein in the film, who kills a young girl he tries to befriend, as what the young girls "read onto" the tramp is the "good" Frankenstein who they see as wronged and sad and in need of a caring hand-- hovering in the air is also the recent Spanish Civil War and the WW2 in which Spain is neutral--this "background hum' as it were permeating the repression of national and cultural trauma by the Franco Regime--

(a person who intends Good to more extreme tramp figures is treated in an entirely other way, as the repressed cancers that Franco's Spain produces explode in violence, murder and attempted rape on the former Novice Viridiana in Bunuel's film of that name)

there are a number of film versions also of writings by Dylan Thomas--A Child's Christmas in Wales, Under Milkwood-- as well as the films from Lorca's plays and poetry including the flamenco ballet of Carlos Saura's Blood Wedding -- a "reverse engineering" of poetry and cinema exists for me in a lot of my work done this year, which had inspiration from a person and images in the film Battle of Algiers, which i saw yet again, with a very young audience--as always the film inspries a great enthusiasm for the fight for independence and justice in the face of the Oppressor-in the audience- what was s striking was that in the hall after the film had let out, it was hitting as in a wave al the people discussing what they had seen--that the roles of the French in the film are now those of the US and its allies--torturers, creators of outdoor prisons made of entire city areas, mass arrests, detentions-- a great many techniques, images, lines from the cinema have affected those in poetry-- that is, in many cases, the cinema and its formal and techniocal devices have had a great many effects in poetry, as well as the other way round--

Kerouac called it "book-movie, the original American Form"--and in Philadelpho Menezes' Poetics and Visuality A Trajectory of Contemporary Brazilian Poetry, sonority is presented as the next problem facing an experimental poetry (for Menzes this means Concrete, Visual, Sound and Inter-sign Poetries) which has "in its undeclared project" the "rejoining" of the the verbal, visual and sound, with sound NOT being the oralization of the writtten word/sign. To point in this direction, Menezes gives examples taken from the cinema, in which the sounds being heard are not those of the object being shown/read. This embraces such techniques as uses of music, voice-over narration and the like.

To give a sense of each Visual Poem being at once a "movie on a page" and as a series which the "presence" of an "imagery" in all senses of the term is moving through, the flikr gallery "Cinema of Catharsis" is the name given to a long series of new and recent pieces which began in finding in an old (1963) Life Magazine a huge color foto of Vietnamese inside a wire fenced area watched over by guards and shipers aloft in small towers, being show an American film designed to "win hearts and minds"-- the "Serials" of Louis Feuillade made in the 19 teens in France greatly inspired the Surrealist poets and visual artists-- "harking back" (as Max Ernst makes explicit in his Visual-Collage-Serial-Novel creations) to the serials of th first half of the 19th Century and their illustrations, mass ditributed in the competing newspapers and magazines of the time which effected Poe and his uses of the "short story" and his (reverse engineered AFTER the fact of the composition of "The Raven" it details) "Principles of Composition" which proposes that only the short poem (one that can be read in one sitting) is now really valid in such speeded up times--

Poe's emphasis on the "short story," the "short poem," as simultaneously "discrete and complete" makes of each work a metynomic device which "points towards" that all encompassing enigmatic Cosmos of his "Eureka" which so greatly inspired the mathematician-poet Paul Valery.

In his film esays, Eisenstein explores the cinematic image as a metynomic device, so that one ship made be made to stand for a fleet, and so "leap over" both a too literal "realism" into a poetic one and also the image as metaphor-- montage is the order in which the discrete elements are assembled to,create the :"effect"--which Poe argues is the "starting point" for the composition of the poem--yet for Eisenstein is what emerges from a dialectical method of assemblage-- in both examples, the "effect" "overall" of the assemblage of discrete elements is to be "greater than the sum of the parts:" for Poe the effect is to create an emotional meditation which points to his Cosmos ("mournful and never ending remembrance") and for Eisenstein it is to point to the dialectics of revolutionary thought as/in action--

this use of "short" stories, poems, metonymic images also produces a sense of "focus" which in strange way is what Ezra Pound was able to perform when editing Eliot'sprawling mass of ms materials for "The Wasteland" yet unable to sustain in his own Cantos--

(Eliot via LaForgue, Corbiere and Baudelaire's translations, is a rhizomatic descendent of Poe, ironically enough shown by the then contemporary Anti-Eliot W.C. Willaims as The Pioneer of American Writing in his attention with language, in the final chapter of' "In the American Grain")

At the same time as Poetry is being broekn down in trems of its focus, from poem, to line to word to letter in avant-gardes of the the first 20 years of the 20th Century, the cinema was also on theone hand sweeling into the Epic and on the other into ever more focus on the discrete element of the single frame as THE element of composition, though a frame which at the time is being show (at that time) 16 frames per second--making of each instant a series--

(Fordism and Taylorism are stimulated in their developments of techniques made possible by the anaylsis of movements provided by the cinema, as a technology which "synthesizs" those of Muybridge already literally employed in such a manner by the Kings of Time mande manifest in the ever increaing efficiency of the "assembly line"--which in a sense is the "original" of what the Surerelaists break down into the writing gmae of the Exquisite Corpse-- which "recaptures" the Dream elements associated from its introduction with the

Cinema and the experience of the spectator inside the darkness opening "inwardly outward" into the projected imagery of the "unconscious" on the screen-- echocing the opening of that great favorite of the Surrealists, Gerard de Nerval's "Aurelia ou Le Reve et La Vie"

"Our dreams are a second life. I have never been able to cross through those gates of ivory of horn which separate us from the invisible world without a sense of dread."

The "portals of ivory" which seem to have inspired the architecture and decor of so many of the first "Dream Palaces"-- or the entrances to "Caves of Lascaux" and so many others, continually being disovred as a series moving further and further "back" into the historical-archeological "records/recordings/notations/images" of human consciouness/the unconscious-- which, with images viewed by flickering light on the walls of caves, are a cinema which precedes the finding of Plato's Cave-- a Visual Poetry whose Sonorities as Menezes writes--lie ahead-- yet which at the same time may already have been "sounding" for tens of thousands of years-- only in a sounding which, paradoxically, by having been anchored on stone in caves, has endured so long that the while the images are still visible and "seen" as "signs of a writing"--their sounds have been "lost" to the contemporary ear-- although in the sound chambers of the caves they may be sounding and resounding, echoing a poetry which has outlasted its listeners-- or-- perhaps, is the poetry Jack Spicer is writing of in declaring "nobody listens to poetry anymore"-- making it possible to wonder in turn if perhaps in some ways "poetry listens to no one anymore"-- a cinematic sonority found in caves that goes unheard-- and an experimental poetry(Menezes means by this Concrete and Visual Poetry, Sound Poetry)--that will learn by listening to the cinema's sonorities-- an acoustic dimension which echoes Emerson's

"Perhaps the blank and ruin we see in Nature is in our own eye."
--a "non Poetry" one "does not hear" which is in one's own ears-- as a poetry "nobody listens to anymore"-- which in turn may suggest a poetry which does not listen--anymore-- to that which emerges out of the rocks marked in the notations of a time which moves at a different speed---- a sounding-not as an object, but like Robert Smithson's "Look of the Artist," something that is a "glance" "taking place" in time-- not bound to the word alone, as Menezes proposes-- (something which in effect cannot be owned)-- in a sense, "nobody listens to poetry anymore" understood differently, as "nobody" listens to poetry anymore-being that "nobody" owns it anymore-- a "Utopian" nobody which means "everybody"-- hears it-- (Rimbaud's vision in poetry of the entrance into the "Splendid City" and "Christmas on Earth" in which everyone and everything is poetry--and Menezes' of the 'Utopian" arrival via his vision of the "undeclared" mission of a poetry questioning every aspect of society including language, habits, values, "'sensibility itself'" as the manifestations of the structural bases of the dominant ideology-in both Rimbaud and Menezes is the desire and work to overcome the "separations" which are continually being constructed to keep poetry from the "world" via the "word"-- -)

On Fri, Aug 15, 2008 at 7:30 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>wrote:

> In each others arms, birds in the trees
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Fri, Aug 15, 2008 at 2:14 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> On Aug 14, 2008, at 8:49 AM, Eric Dickey wrote:
>
> if lines of poems it is, then
>
> No Country for Old Men should be included, it's the first line of Yeats'
> Sailing to Byzantium.
>
> I think that the line is more like
>
> That is no country for old men. The young

> George H. Bowering, DLitt.
> Last shoeshine in 1961.
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

133. Jennifer Karmin
Aug 22: Printers' Ball in Chicago
Sat 16 Aug 2008

THE PRINTERS' BALL
http://www.printersball.org

FRIDAY, AUGUST 22, 5:30 PM to 10:00 PM

Museum of Contemporary Art 220 East Chicago Ave -- Chicago, IL
http://www.mcachicago.org
Free Admission
21+

The Printers' Ball is an annual celebration of print literature in Chicago, hosted by Poetry, the Museum of Contemporary Art, and Newcity. Over one hundred arts and literary organizations gather under one roof to present a diverse showcase of print publications including free magazines, journals, books, weeklies, posters, music, video, performance, and more.

↑ Index

134. Daniel Godston
Multiartscape Triptyk
Sun 17 Aug 2008

Multiartscape Triptyk
tonight at the Lily Pad (7 p.m.)

Join us as we travel along multimedia terrains of artistic expression. During this event we pass markers along roads that take switchback turns through music, poetry, & dance.

Forbes Graham -- trumpet
Jane Wang -- cello & piano
Daniel Johnson -- poetry
Suzanne Bouffard -- tap dance
Liz Roncka -- movement
Dan Godston -- horns & poetry
Kevin Micka aka Animal Hospital - guitar, percussion & effects

$10 suggested donation

The Lily Pad
Inman Square
1353 Cambridge St.
Cambridge, MA

http://www.lily-pad.net/
http://www.myspace.com/forbesgraham
http://www.danielbjohnson.com
http://www.myspace.com/janewangcomposer
http://tapboston.havetodance.com/suzanne_bouffard.html
www.myspace.com/dangodstonmusic www.myspace.com/animalhospital

↑ Index

135. Daniel Godston
Synesthesic Cell Structures
Sun 17 Aug 2008

Synesthesic Cell Structures
at The Cell
Monday, August 18 (8 p.m.)

The sonic flavors of brushstrokes, the smells of musical improvisation, the tactile textures of poetic images, synesthesia. Over centuries artists working in a range of media have been inspired by other art forms, and they have drawn on expressions in other art forms to explain and map out creative forays along spectrums of genres. Hunches about these connections can lead to investigations into parallel processes and new angles. During this event we explore correspondences among and interstices between art forms-focusing on music, film, and poetry. The following films will be shown while music and poetry is performed: Ginta Gets His Car Washed, by Rona Mark; Tumbleweed, by Brian Fitzhugh; Black Earth Images, by Jayve Montgomery; Becoming Formless and Love in Outer Space and Under Water, by Annie Heckman; Reflect and Cityscape #1 by Mikey Peterson; and several others.

Performers:
Bruce Eisenbeil -- guitar
Tara Betts -- poetry
Tom Abbs -- upright bass, violin, didgeridoo, & tuba
Reed Robins -- piano
Dan Godston -- trumpet & poetry
Josh Sinton -- baritone saxophone & bass clarinet
Ravish Momin -- percussion

$10 suggested donation

The Cell
338 W. 23rd St.
New York, NY 10011
[redacted]
www.thecelltheatre.org

↑ Index

136. Camille Martin
CKLN-FM, Tuesday, August 19, 2-3 pm: Poetry, Straight Up
Sun 17 Aug 2008

Poetry, Straight Up

Please tune in to Ryerson University's CKLN, 88.1 FM, on Tuesday, August 19, 2-3 pm, for my third-Tuesday edition of In Other Words.

I'm calling this show "Poetry Straight Up." I'll give sound poetry a rest and focus on readings by contemporary poets that are not primarily performative in nature – in other words, poetry, straight up. I'll feature readings by Charles Alexander, Kenward Elmslie, Lisa Robertson, Kimberly Lyons, Peter Gizzi, John Ashbery, Ann Lauterbach, Linh Dinh, Craig Dworkin, Rae Armantrout, and more.

The link for online listening:

http://www.ckln.fm

Cheers!
Camille Martin

↑ Index

137. Joan Houlihan

Invitation to September Colrain Poetry Manuscript Intensive

Sun 17 Aug 2008

NOTE: Please do not hit Reply. To respond to this message send to: [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]>

Dear Poet,

The Colrain Poetry Manuscript Conference, designed for poets with a book-length manuscript, has been a tremendous success, drawing accomplished poets from all over the country and overseas. This conference has been created for poets who are either ready to publish a book-length (or chapbook-length) manuscript or who feel they need a reality check on their current manuscript-in-progress. Since our first conference, in March of 2006, over 20 poets have had their manuscripts accepted for publication. Colrain publication news is found here <http://www.colrainpoetry.com/omnis-news.htm> .

On September 12-15, 2008, a subset of this conference, the Colrain Poetry Manuscript Intensive takes place in Plainfield, Mass. It is based on the regular Colrain model and methodology but strictly limited to 10 qualified participants. We have spaces still available and I invite you to apply asap. I will lead a workshop and Jeffrey Levine from Tupelo Press will analyze and discuss your manuscripts. Check out the web site for more info and application:

www.colrainpoetry.com/September
<http://www.colrainpoetry.com/September>

If you feel you have a manuscript ready for publication, if you have received a rejection and don't know why, if your manuscript has achieved finalist or semi-finalist standing in a contest, or if you simply want to gain an understanding of how publishers and editors work behind the scenes before submitting your manuscript, then this conference is for you.

I hope you will join us!

Best Wishes,

Joan Houlihan, Founder & Director
Concord Poetry Center & Colrain Conferences
40 Stow Street
Concord, MA 01742
[redacted]

Attendees say:

"The Colrain Manuscript Conference managed to pack into a weekend what a lot of grad school teachers never had time to do in their classes or individually:

offer finishing touches to a manuscript eager to be picked up by a publisher." Steve Fellner, Brockport, NY

"...It was a goldmine for me especially, removed as I am from the academic world and from a community of serious poets."
LouAnn Muhm, Park Rapids, MN, Teacher, Creative Writing

"...extremely helpful to hear responses to the other manuscripts. I learned as much or more from the critiques of others' manuscripts as I did from the critique of mine." Mary Crow, Fort Collins, CO, Poet Laureate of Colorado

" Attending the Colrain Manuscript Conference was undoubtedly the most profound poetry experience I've ever had. What I learned in forty-eight hours will be with me for years to come." Tracy Kroetsky, Berkley, CA

"...My consultation completely changed the way I view the manuscript. There is nothing like what you are providing. Kudos!" Dawn Fewkes, Horseheads, NY

"...The Colrain conference was everything I'd hoped it would be and more. I feel well on my way, now, to a publishable manuscript." Pat Lowry Collins, MA

and MORE <http://www.colrainpoetry.com/omnis-comments.htm> .

This message was sent to [redacted] by the Colrain Poetry Manuscript Conference. If you wish to leave our mailing list, click on the link at the very bottom of this message.

To Unsubscribe from this mailing list, click:
55-4185-4DFF-B331-DD59C4E50229
C55-4185-4DFF-B331-DD59C4E50229>

↑ Index

138. Small Press Traffic
SPT Executive Director Job Call
Sun 17 Aug 2008

****

POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT:

Executive Director for Small Press Traffic

Small Press Traffic announces a call for applications for the position of Executive Director, to begin employment on January 1, 2009.

Since 1974, Small Press Traffic has been at the heart of the San Francisco Bay Area's innovative writing communities, bringing together a diverse constituency of independent readers, writers, and independent presses through our influential reading series, poets theater festivals, conferences, and publications. Graciously housed at the California College of the Arts, we remain autonomous, and thus depend upon outside funding for our operating expenses. Currently, we are looking for a highly skilled and creative Executive Director to provide both artistic vision and financial leadership.

The Executive Director at Small Press Traffic serves as both the Artistic and Financial Manager for the organization. S/he ensures that (a) the overall quality and diversity of programming is consistent with Small Press Traffic's history and mission and (b) that the organization conducts its community and financial affairs in a professional and timely manner. Areas of responsibility include, but are not limited to: event programming, budget and finance, fundraising, and public relations. Above all, the Executive Director serves as the public face of the organization, and is responsible for helping shape the vision and direction of Small Press Traffic, as well as being open and responsive to our dynamic and diverse communities of writers, readers, and audience members.

Programming: The Executive Director, in consultation with the Board of Directors, oversees the planning and development of Small Press Traffic's artistic program, which includes live literary events, fundraisers, the website, archives, publications, and any other forms of literary presentation and preservation.

Fundraising: The Executive Director initiates and coordinates Small Press Traffic's fundraising efforts. These efforts include submitting grant applications to government and private funding agencies, meeting and corresponding with potential funders, cultivating individual members and donors, planning and hosting benefit events, assisting the Board of Directors with its fundraising initiatives, submitting reports and payment requests to individuals and agencies, and pursuing new fundraising opportunities.

Public Relations: Small Press Traffic is a 34-year old organization with a reputation for offering high-quality programming that represents its commitment to a culturally diverse avant-garde. It is important that Small Press Traffic maintains good working relationships with writers, artists, arts and literary organizations, funding and government agencies, the press, and other groups and organizations connected with the Bay Area arts and literary communities. It is also crucial for the Executive Director to be able to maintain a balance between her/his curatorial visions and the desires of our audiences, and to be able to work constructively with the Board and the wider Small Press Traffic constituency to continue to uphold and extend our mission.

Budget and Finance: The Executive Director, in consultation with the Board, plans and manages Small Press Traffic's annual operating budget. S/he is responsible for ensuring vendors are paid in a timely manner, that accurate financial and fiduciary records are kept, and that actual expenses do not exceed those proposed in the annual operating budget. The Executive Director is also responsible for oversight of interns and volunteers, as well as outside contractors (such as designers, accountants, etc.).

Compensation: $27,000 annual salary. While the workload can vary widely, depending on fundraising cycles and event schedules, the position typically requires an average of twenty-five (25) hours per week. The position comes with an initial 18-month contract, followed by one-year renewable contract(s), with annual evaluation process. Benefits are contingent on available funding.

Position begins January 1, 2009. To apply, please send CV, cover letter, and three letters of recommendation to:

Small Press Traffic

California College of the Arts

1111 8th Street

San Francisco, CA 94107

Applications must be postmarked no later than September 15, 2008. Electronic applications are discouraged, though applicants are welcome to email to confirm receipt of mailed applications.

Small Press Traffic is an equal opportunity employer. Women, people of color, disabled, and LGBTQ persons are encouraged to apply.

www.sptraffic.org

Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107

http://www.sptraffic.org

www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com

↑ Index

139. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 08.18.08-08.24.08
Mon 18 Aug 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
08.18.08-08.24.08

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE GOING FAST!!

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Sri Lanka/Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane Satrapi, Iran/France, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE ALREADY 98% SOLD OUT FOR NEXT SEASON

We expect to sell out next by subscription. If we do not, tickets for individual events will go on sale September 1.

EVENTS THIS WEEK

Two weeks in a row without any literary events scheduled in Buffalo this week (none that we?re aware of, at least).

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can now subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605

Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

140. mIEKAL aND
What Organic Poetry might be
Mon 18 Aug 2008

I'm putting together a poetry page for Organic Valley's twice yearly newspaper, ROOTSTOCK, & hoping to find a few good poems that non- poetry readers can sink their teeth into without being complete dreck. Send 2-5 poems plus any comments on what Organic Poetry might be to:

[redacted]

As a little extra incentive, 200,000 copies of ROOTSTOCK are distributed to food coops & natural groceries across the US & Canada.

I need works by Sept 1.

~mIEKAL

If your high on twinkies & corn syrup send yr poems to one of those underground avant garde mags instead.

↑ Index

141. mIEKAL aND

TEXISTENCE by Geof Huth & mIEKAL aND

Mon 18 Aug 2008

Frighteningly New from Xexox Sutra Editions—

TEXISTENCE
by Geof Huth & mIEKAL aND 2008, 5.06" x 7.81", 300 pgs, $20.00 includes US postage.

ISBN 1-438250-10-X | EAN-13 978-1-43825010-6

http://xexoxial.org/is/texistence/by/geof_huth_and_mIEKAL_aND

"There is a trick or two to writing a 300-page book and typesetting it in two days. One is to have two people work on the book, and the other is to require only one word per page. And that is what mIEKAL aND and I did on June 29th and 30th in West Lima, Wisconsin: We wrote a book of 300 collaborative pwoermds, certainly the longest book of pwoermds ever and, to my knowledge, the only collaborative pwoermds ever made.

The pwoermd is a queer little literary beast, one that combines the art of neologism with the practice of poetry. The goal of the pwoermd is to provide the experience of a poem over the course of a single poem. As a poetic form, it is doomed to fail frequently, but ts size makes the attainment of perfection at least possible.

The way mIEKAL and I created texistence worked, one of us wrote fragments of two words on facing pages of a page layout on a computer and the other added letters in any way to those words and then wrote two partial words of his own. Occasionally, I wrote a starter word of only two letters, which mIEKAL had to work hard to make into something, and occasionally I wrote him a starter word so seemingly complete that he wasn't sure what he could add. It was great fun. We worked on this for hours at a time. I usually was working on another writing project simultaneously, and mIEKAL would turn the computer towards me when it was my turn, and I would turn it back to him when it was his turn."

—Geof Huth

↑ Index

142. Halvard Johnson
Re: What Organic Poetry might be
Mon 18 Aug 2008

Organic poetry is produced without the aid of chemicals.

Hal

"There are then quite a number of things one does or does not know."
--Gertrude Stein

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Aug 18, 2008, at 9:41 AM, mIEKAL aND wrote:

> I'm putting together a poetry page for Organic Valley's twice yearly newspaper, ROOTSTOCK, & hoping to find a few good poems that non-poetry readers can sink their teeth into without being complete dreck. Send 2-5 poems plus any comments on what Organic Poetry might be to:
>
> [redacted]
>
> As a little extra incentive, 200,000 copies of ROOTSTOCK are distributed to food coops & natural groceries across the US & Canada.
>
> I need works by Sept 1.
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
> If your high on twinkies & corn syrup send yr poems to one of those underground avant garde mags instead.

↑ Index

143. Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Internet Radio Open Mic
Mon 18 Aug 2008

Tuesday, August 19, & Tuesday August 26
8-9:30pm PST.
Martha Cinader Mims will host an open mic internet radio show
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/listenandbeheard

Listen & Be Heard has a history of hosting open mics going back to the early nineties in the lower east side of New York City where it all began at the University of the Streets and later moved to the Nuyorican Poets Cafe. Moving with me to the West Coast my husband and I opened and three years later closed Listen & Be Heard Poetry Cafe where we hosted an open mic every Friday night at 8pm.

Now, I've come around to a virtual concept of an open mic here at Blog Talk. Four poets are booked to be featured in the first portion of the show, when they will each give us a lightning poem (thirty seconds or less). After that they will each get five minutes to read what they wish. The four featured poets signed the open mic list ahead of time at Listen & Be Heard Poetry Cafe (http://www.listenandbeheard.net/htmlarea/poetrycafe.) There are four more already scheduled to be featured on August 26th. Poets interested in being featured during future shows may go there to sign the open mic list.

The remainder of the show will be open mic for listeners to call in and share one poem. I am excited to work with this format and already know that it will be fun and interesting. Since I was a volunteer producer at WBAI/Pacifica Radio for 10 years, this is a natural way for me to stretch myself.

One of our featured poets will be calling in all the way from Germany where he is currently stationed in the American Service.
Please join us Tuesday from 8-9:30pm California Time.

Following is some info about our features for tomorrow night. You'll find their pictures on the listen and be heard blog at http://www.blogtalkradio.com/listenandbeheard.

Wishing you Peace and Poetry Martha Cinader Mims

DDE is a 24 year old poet currently stationed in Germany who has been writing since the 9th grade. What started as a one month anniversary gift for a girlfriend has now been a great source of pride. Always writing about his personal experiences or feelings on issues, much of his poetry can be related to by many people from many backgrounds. Although only performing in coffee shops in the states, in Germany he has been a part of a small comedy/poetry group at the military posts in the area that he works at, as well as being invited to several slams in Germany. "Forward and up, the only two directions I know how to go"

Alicia Jones: I am currently 24 yrs. old. and I have two grown men ages of 4 and 5. I love them with all my heart everything I do is for them. Originally from Lubbock, Tx but I currently reside in California. . All my life I am a live walking, talking, big beautiful ebony individual and proud of it. Poetry is my passion, my enjoyment, a fantasy into another world. I have been writing since I was in the 7th grade. I get emotional, explicit (with still good taste), erotic, sad, joyful, etc. I believe in making people feel my words and see an image.

DON HAGELBERG participated in the 1960's Civil Rights movement. While manager of San Francisco's The Precarious Vision Coffee House, he co- wrote AN ARTISTS LIVING COOPERATIVE helping to promote Communes. Imprisoned in 1964-1965 for refusing induction, he never seemed to be able to complete any college course with satisfaction unless it was Creative Writing. He created and hosted LIVE POETS, a two-hour radio program broadcast on a Bay Area listener-supported radio station in the 1970s. A founding member of the BAY AREA POETS COALITION, he edited their first monthly publication, POEMPHLET, later re-named POETALK. In 2000 Don asked the BBC that they broadcast THE KALEVALAin English. They did: in installments. The broadcast pleased him because many international listeners heard the epic poem.

Adam Gottschalk lives in Portland Oregon, his favorite American city outside of New York, which is his hometown. He has been writing poetry and performing spoken word for more than 20 years. His poetry has appeared in several literary journals; he was a featured performer at the 1998 Seattle Poetry Festival and the 2001 St Petersburg Times Festival of Reading. Adam is also a brutal editor (for hire), a playwright, a graphic designer (of some 12 years), a trained singer, and is on his way to becoming a professional natural perfumer. Adam considers natural perfumery his final frontier as an artist. Adam is never ever satisfied (except with food).

Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

↑ Index

144. amy king

Poetry Reading & Fundraiser for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society

Mon 18 Aug 2008

Poetry Reading & Fundraiser for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society

Friday, September 5, 2008 @ 7:00pm

KGB Bar

85 East 4th Street , NYC 10003

David Lehman is a poet, writer, and editor. His seven books of poetry include When a Woman Loves a Man (2005). In 1996 he began writing a poem a day as an experiment. The practice continued for five years, and two books resulted: The Daily Mirror (2000) and The Evening Sun (2002), both from Scribner. Lehman's prose books include The Perfect Murder and Signs of the Times. He is the series editor of The Best American Poetry, which he launched in 1988. He has also edited the latest edition of The Oxford Book of American Poetry (2006), The Best American Erotic Poems (2008), and Great American Prose Poems (2003), among other books. He heads the poetry division of the New School 's graduate writing program, in which he has taught since the program's inception in 1996.

Meghan Punschke is the author of Stratification (BlazeVOX Books, 2008). She resides in New York City , and has an MFA in Poetry from the New School . She is the curator and host of Word of Mouth, a reading series dedicated to poets and fiction writers. She is also the Managing Editor for the literary journal Oranges & Sardines. Her poetry was nominated for a Pushcart Prize in 2007. Please visit www.megpunschke.com for more info.

Amy King is the author of I'm the Man Who Loves You and Antidotes for an Alibi, both from Blazevox Books, and most recently, Kiss Me With the Mouth of Your Country (Dusie Press). She is the moderator for the Poetics List and the Women's Poetry Listserv, and teaches English and Creative Writing at Nassau Community College . She is currently editing an anthology, The Urban Poetic, forthcoming from Factory School . Please visit www.amyking.org for more.

Ana Božièeviæ emigrated to NYC from Croatia in 1997. She's the author of chapbooks Document (Octopus Books, 2007) and Morning News (Kitchen Press, 2006). Look for her recent work in Denver Quarterly, Hotel Amerika, Bat City Review, absent, typo, fou and elsewhere. With Amy King, she is currently editing an anthology, The Urban Poetic (Factory School , forthcoming). Ana works at The Center for the Humanities at the Graduate Center , CUNY.

There will be a raffle for prizes, which will include books, anthologies and other poetry related goodies from several small presses including BlazeVOX Books, No Tell Books, Coconut Books, Goss 183, Ahsahta Press and Lame House. The Grand Prize winner will be awarded books from many of the above, plus the 30 x 40 acrylic on canvas painting that appears on the cover of Stratification. Each raffle ticket will be $5 with all of the proceeds going directly to LLS for cancer research and patient care. Half of book sales will go to the charity as well.

http://www.kgbbar.com/calendar/event/2008-09-05_poetry_reading_.html

_____

Movies With Poems

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Poems To Do

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

145. amy king
Sous Rature -- 1ssue, August 2008
Mon 18 Aug 2008

Sous Rature -- 1ssue, August 2008

Diana Magallon and Jeff Crouch

Tomie Hahn

Chris Vitiello

Kathrin Schaeppi

Carrie Hunter

Jennifer Calkins

Todd Colby

Drew Kunz

Elizabeth Kate Switaj

Rachel Levitsky
Christian Bök

Raymond Farr

derek beaulieu

Michael Peters Matt Hart

Mako Matsuda
Susana Gardner

Emma Phillipps

Suzy Scarlata

Rick Moody Marco
Giovenale

Caroline
Crumpacker

Ernest Williamson III

Riccardo
Boglione

Mark
Lamoureux

http://www.necessetics.com/1ssue.html

http://www.necessetics.com/1ssue.html

http://www.necessetics.com/1ssue.html

_____

Movies With Poems

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Poems To Do

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

146. Dan Wilcox
Third Thursday Poetry Night, Albany, NY, Will Nixon & Open Mic
Tue 19 Aug 2008

---

the Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Third Thursday Poetry Night
at
the Social Justice Center
33 Central Ave., Albany, NY

Thursday, August 21, 2008
7:00 sign up; 7:30 start

Featured Poet: Will Nixon
Will Nixon's latest book of poetry from Foot Hills Publishing is My Late Mother as a Ruffed Grouse

-- with open mic for community poets before & after the feature: $3.00 donation, suggested; more if you got it, less if you can't. Your monthly host: Dan Wilcox.

My Late Mother as a Ruffed Grouse
-- Ashokan High Point, Catskills

Never before had a grouse failed to explode from the underbrush with a wing-beating panic,
a feathered cannonball fanning a leaf-ripping tail.
But this bird didn't budge. It kept pecking at leaf litter as methodically as a maid checking under cushions for coins.
For several minutes, I focused my binoculars on its lady-bug eyes, its black-banded tail, but didn't want to spoil the magic by staying too long.

Bushwhacking through acres of mountain laurel,
I navigated tangled stalks like woody barbed wire.
Finally, a boulder ramp led me down to a clearing.
But which direction to the reservoir lookout,
rumored to lie east of the blueberry bald,
I couldn't sense any better than from above.
Behind me, I spotted the grouse half-sliding, half-hopping on clownish chicken feet to catch up.
It stopped on the rock, cocked its head sideways,
then eye-balled me with an orange intensity.
Oh, yes, I remembered that look, unblinking, undeterred, unashamed of being in charge, yet being in love.

Could this bird really be my late mother?
At her burial last winter I scattered grouse feathers to honor her passion as an Audubon birder.

Did I unwittingly plant the seed for her return?
Crippled by strokes, she lived so long in a nursing home
she had no idea I lived in a cabin, not Hoboken or Manhattan. To her, I was always 23 and married, for some unfathomable reason, to my cousin, Muggsie.

This grouse clearly knew what she wanted.
Softly she cooed and finally winked.
I murmured my best grouse impersonation,
eager to talk no matter what we happened to say.

I sat on the grass, an invitation she accepted to prance close to my boots, cocky as a city pigeon.
For her country outing, she'd dressed in subdued browns and whites, but make no mistake:
her feathered crest sharpened her head.
When her blinking turned almost flirtatious,
I lowered my eyes, apparently a fresh invitation, for she paraded alongside my leg, pausing every few steps to nip at a blueberry flower.
With my hands I could have cradled her like a dove, cooing, content. Was that what she wanted?
Behind my back, she pecked at my daypack zipper.

How could I explain my bachelor's cabin, the dirty socks from last week's hike still hanging on the upstairs railing, the dirty dishes forever crowding the sink? Did she think she'd be satisfied eating seeds from a bowl made of plastic and sharing my cold wooden floor with the mice? Didn't she know
I could be arrested for bringing a grouse home under the Wildlife Protection Act?
Did she know how rarely I swept?

No, I needed to end this strange encounter.
I stood and shouldered my pack, nodded good-bye.
But giant steps up the rock didn't do any good.
She hopped up her own crooked ladder of laurel stalks, then paused at the next dirt patch for me to catch up. How could I shake her?
Whenever I plunged in a new direction, climbing and tripping through bushes,
she scampered nearby, easily low-hurdling trunk tangles and roots. I barged like an oaf, but she didn't act disappointed in me as a grouse.

She waited and cooed with encouragement.
Not until I broke loose on the blueberry bald did she stop at the edge of her laurel protectorate.

Yet no matter how long I rested on the only boulder, pretending to admire the quixotic flight of black butterflies sampling blueberry nectar,
I knew she waited with unbending love and devotion
in the bushes I couldn't avoid to hike home.

##

↑ Index

147. Obododimma Oha
Street boy wants my phone
Tue 19 Aug 2008

---

street boy wants my phone

Visit Cellular Wryting: http://cellularwryting.blogspot.com/2008/08/street-boy-wants-my-phone.html

Obododimma.

↑ Index

148. Obododimma Oha
Fw: Call for Poetry
Tue 19 Aug 2008

CALL FOR POETRY: AGENDA #75 – FAMILY POLITICS

CALL FOR POETRY: AGENDA #75 – FAMILY POLITICS

Poems will be considered for publication in Agenda 75, which will be published in the beginning of November 2008.

Poetry can be but does not have to be on the theme of family politics.

Length of contributions: Poems have to fit a full page of Agenda (slightly bigger than A5)

Submission deadline: 5 September 2008

Submission requirements: - All submissions must be emailed to [redacted]. - All submitted poems must come with a short bio and contact details of the author. - If you would like to publish anonymously please state so clearly in yoursubmission.

Please feel free to forward this poetry call to anyone you think might be interested

↑ Index

149. Obododimma Oha
Fw: Call for Poetry (2)
Tue 19 Aug 2008

CALL FOR POETRY: AGENDA #75 – HIV and AIDS and Reprod

CALL FOR POETRY: AGENDA #75 – HIV and AIDS and Reproductive Rights

Poems will be considered for publication in Agenda 75, which will be published in the beginning of September 2008.

Poetry can be but does not have to be on the theme of HIV and AIDS and Reproductive Rights.

Length of contributions: Poems have to fit a full page of Agenda (slightly bigger than A5)

Submission deadline: 26 AUGUST 2008

Submission requirements: - All submissions must be emailed to [redacted]. - All submitted poems must come with a short bio and contact details of the author. - If you would like to publish anonymously please state so clearly in yoursubmission.

Please feel free to forward this poetry call to anyone you think might be interested

↑ Index

150. Michael Kelleher
BABEL SELL-OUT ALERT
Tue 19 Aug 2008

THERE ARE TEN (10) BABEL SUBSCRIPTIONS LEFT.

WE SUGGEST YOU ACT FAST IF YOU HAVEN'T BOUGHT ONE.

Chinua Achebe, Nigeria, September 25. Book: Things Fall Apart. Michael Ondaatje, Sri Lanka/Canada, October 29. Book: The English Patient. Marjane

Satrapi, Iran/France, April 1. Book: Persepolis. Isabel Allende, Chile, April 17. Book: House of the Spirits.

Previous subscribers: $75.
New subscription: $100.
Patron subscription: $250. (Patron subscribers receive VIP seating and attendance at all pre-event author receptions.)
Patron Pair: $400.

BUY ONLINE: http://www.justbuffalo.org/index.php?task=view&id=65

BUY OVER THE PHONE: [redacted].

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

151. CE Putnam
The List of Movies with Poetry
Tue 19 Aug 2008

Beats-ploitation:

Bucket of Blood (1959)

Opening credits here:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?vÿB6X0SHZPY

"What is not creation is Graham Crackers!"

ce

P.I.S.O.R
(Putnam Institute for Space Opera Research)
http://www.pisor-industries.org

http://www.pisor-industries.org/crawlspace http://www.myspace.com/pisorsounds

↑ Index

152. Michael Kelleher
BABEL IS SOLD OUT!!
Tue 19 Aug 2008

Dear Friends of Just Buffalo,

SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE 2008-9 SEASON OF BABEL ARE SOLD OUT.

Purchased tickets will be mailed within the next two weeks.

There is a VERY limited number of Patron and Patron Pair subscriptions available ($250 for one Patron, $400 for a Patron Pair). If you would like to purchase those, please call Lynda Kaszubski at [redacted]. If she is not available, please leave her a voicemail and she will contact you within 24 (business day) hours.

If you did not get a ticket, but would like to be put on a waiting list for tickets that become available in the future, please send an email to [redacted] that includes your name and phone number and we will contact you if any do become available.

Thanks to all our subscribers for making Babel such a smashing success!

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____
Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

153. jpjones
St Kilda, Melbourne, Sunday 24th August
Tue 19 Aug 2008

Sunday August 24th

Australian Poetry Centre
’Glenfern’, 417 Inkerman St (corner Hotham Street)
East St Kilda.

Poetry Reading and Discussion: 4.00 - 6.00
with Jill Jones (SA), Ken Taylor (VIC) & David Brooks (NSW).
Cost: $7 members, $10 non-members.
Champagne, savoury food, wine and cake will be served.

Soiree with a group of Singaporean poets: 6.00 - 7.00 Featuring Alvin Pang, Prof Edwin Thumboo, Yong Shu Hoong, Madeleine Lee. This event is presented by Ethos Books, Singapore with the Asia and Pacific Writers Network and the Australian Poetry Centre.

_____
Jill Jones

www.jilljones.com.au

↑ Index

154. jpjones
Adelaide, Tuesday 26th August - Lee Marvin readings
Tue 19 Aug 2008

The final August session in Ken Bolton's terrific ongoing Lee Marvin series of readings.

August 26th
LEE MARVIN in THE MAN IN THE GREY FLANNEL ZOOT SUIT

Featuring:
Linda Marie Walker
Anne Bartlett
Naomi Horridge
Jill Jones
Raoul Du Plicit - 'The Circus 4'

At Gallery de la Catessen
9 Anster St., Adelaide
(off Waymouth at the King William end, near FAD nightclub)

7.30 for a prompt 8 PM start
Price $5, includes drinks

↑ Index

155. cris cheek
SoundEye starting to go "up" (forwarded)
Wed 20 Aug 2008

All,

Video from this past July's SoundEye is making its way online. Fergal Gaynor, Kenneth Goldsmith, Randolph Healy, Frances Kruk, and Maggie O'Sullivan to start. With more soon to follow.

http://www.youtube.com/user/meshworks
http://www.orgs.muohio.edu/meshworks/archive/SoundEye-2008/

Cheers.

daniel Ereditario

apologies for cross-posting

↑ Index

156. Carol Novack
movies with poetry
Wed 20 Aug 2008

Here's a very short film that was created by the Belgian-Canadian artist and phenomenologist Jean Detheux (www.madhattersreview.com/issue4/gallery2_*jean detheux*.shtml) based on one of my poems (recited). It's being shown at film festivals.f you're interested in viewing and hearing it, you'll have to be patient. It takes a long time to load. http://www.vudici.net/movies/Civil_War/Civil_War_1.html. Enjoy! (one hopes)

↑ Index

157. K. Silem Mohammad
Abraham Lincoln #3
Wed 20 Aug 2008

ABRAHAM LINCOLN
issue the third
summer/fall 2008

It's already that time again--time for the next issue of Abraham Lincoln ((http://abrahamlincoln.blogspot.com),

THE GREATEST POETRY MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD, to be out a little later than we had planned! Our biggest issue yet is so frisky and slippery and full of pseudo-information and prone to inappropriate touching it will make you SQUEAL!

featuring work by

Bill Luoma
Jack Collom
Lyn Hejinian
Stan Apps
Shane Allison
Dodie Bellamy
Anne Boyer
Eiríkur Örn Norðdahl
Angela Genusa
Lanny Quarles
Rodney Koeneke
Tisa Bryant
Jennifer Knox
Jordan Davis
Robert J. Baumann
Jim McCrary

plus a special message from Joshua Clover
and cover art by K. Silem Mohammad single issue: $5.00

one year: $8.00
five years: $25.00
1,000,000 years: $100.00

Payable via PayPal (go to the Abraham Lincoln blog, http://abrahamlincoln.blogspot.com)

Or send checks, payable to K. Silem Mohammad (not Abraham Lincoln--the bank will think someone's being a wise guy), to:

Abraham Lincoln
c/o K. Silem Mohammad
840 Park St.
Ashland, OR 97520

Unsolicited submissions will be plagiarized and sent to other magazines under the editors' names.

--

K. Silem Mohammad
http://lime-tree.blogspot.com

↑ Index

158. Joshua Wilkinson Rabbit Light Movies--New Episode
Wed 20 Aug 2008

Rabbit Light Movies is now online with over 40 short fil
Dear Friends,

Rabbit Light Movies is now online with over 40 short films of poets reading from their work.

The newest episode includes:
sasha steensen | christopher stackhouse | claire becker | michael rerick | matthea harvey | john keene & christopher stackhouse | mary jo bang | k. silem mohammad | christine deavel | anthony hawley |
juliana leslie | johannes göransson and earlier episodes include videos of:

ana bozicevic-bowling | jason bredle | nicole burgund | julia cohen & mathias svalina | christian hawkey | j.w. marshall | kristi maxwell | joyelle mcsweeney | robyn schiff | dana ward | stephanie young | joshua poteat | catherine wagner | j'lyn chapman | jaswinder bolina | chuck stebelton | eric baus | lily brown | sommer browning | george kalamaras | allison titus | jon woodward | zachary schomburg |
nathan bartel | sawako nakayasu | andrea rexilius | kate greenstreet | julie doxsee

The next episode, coming december 2008, will feature eleni sikelianos | philip jenks | lily brown | ed roberson | laura goldstein | lisa fishman | abraham smith | richard meier | arielle greenberg | john keene | dan beachy-quick | tim yu | ben doller & sandra doller | nathalie stephens | nicole wilson | patrick culliton | susan scarlata

please check it out:
http://www.rabbitlightmovies.com

yrs, jmw

[redacted]

↑ Index

159. Poetics List
Language Harm in Atlanta [on behalf of Mark Prejsnar]
Wed 20 Aug 2008

---

*From: *[redacted]

Language Harm is the ongoing series of performance events perpetrated by the Atlanta Poets Group.

Language Harm will occur next on Thursday, August 21.

This month's show will beslightly theatrical, or perhaps it could be seen as an enactment.However you wish to interpret, what the Atlanta Poets Group will bedoing is having one of our weekly meetings (a tradition of some 11years now) behind an unbroken forth wall. What really goes on at theseAPG meetings? Now is your chance to get a (condensed) glimpse of thatas it's recreated for you live.

at Eyedrum.
290 Martin Luther King Jr. Drive
9:00 pm
$5.00
admission free for Eyedrum members

↑ Index

160. K. Silem Mohammad
Abraham Lincoln 3: URL correction
Wed 20 Aug 2008

Apologies: that last post went out with the wrong URL (thanks to Kyle Schlesinger for pointing it out). Corrected post follows.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN
issue the third
summer/fall 2008

It's already that time again--time for the next issue of Abraham Lincoln ((http://abrahamlincolnmagazine.blogspot.com),
THE GREATEST POETRY MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD, to be out a little later than we had planned! Our biggest issue yet is so frisky and slippery and full of pseudoinformation and prone to inappropriate touching it will make you SQUEAL!

featuring work by

Bill Luoma
Jack Collom
Lyn Hejinian
Stan Apps
Shane Allison
Dodie Bellamy
Anne Boyer
Eiríkur Örn Norðdahl
Angela Genusa
Lanny Quarles
Rodney Koeneke
Tisa Bryant
Jennifer Knox
Jordan Davis
Robert J. Baumann
Jim McCrary

plus a special message from Joshua Clover
and cover art by K. Silem Mohammad single issue: $5.00

one year: $8.00
five years: $25.00
1,000,000 years: $100.00

Payable via PayPal (go to the Abraham Lincoln blog, http://abrahamlincolnmagazine.blogspot.com)

Or send checks, payable to K. Silem Mohammad (not Abraham Lincoln--the bank will think someone's being a wise guy), to:

Abraham Lincoln
c/o K. Silem Mohammad
840 Park St.
Ashland, OR 97520

Unsolicited submissions will be plagiarized and sent to other magazines under the editors' names.

--

K. Silem Mohammad
http://lime-tree.blogspot.com

↑ Index

161. Andy Nicholson
New Posts at Lamplighter, lamplighter, lamplighter
Wed 20 Aug 2008

http://andynicholson.blogspot.com/

New posts abound at my blog Lamplighter, lamplighter, lamplighter, including posts on:

Paintings by Thomas Nozkowski
The music of Jan Pieterszoon Sweelinck
and
The music of Otomo Yoshihide

Come have a look.

Andy Nicholson
http://andynicholson.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

162. Clay Banes
New SPD blog
Wed 20 Aug 2008

Dear friends,

It's true. Yes. SPD has a new blog.

Comprehensive listings of newest arrivals. Photos of visiting poets or poet-people (or photos of SPD by visiting poets or poet-people). Odd bric-a-brac. Events.

Please visit, subscribe, link. You'll be helping out SPD and its publishers.

http://www.spdtoday.blogspot.com/
http://spdtoday.blogspot.com/search/label/NEW%20BOOKS

Also, the home office has had a makeover. More good things now better at:
http://www.spdbooks.org/root/index.asp

I thank,

Clay

Clay Banes
Sales & Marketing Manager
Small Press Distribution
1341 Seventh Street

Berkeley, CA 94710
[redacted] x304
[redacted]
http://www.spdbooks.org

↑ Index

163. David Kirschenbaum
Welcome to Boog City 2 Festival Sept. 18-21
Thu 21 Aug 2008

please forward

Hi,

Next month, from Thurs. Sept. 18-Sun. Sept. 21, we'll be putting on the second annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival. It will feature performances from 49 poets, 13 musical acts, and one theater company over the four days.

Among the highlights are:

â€”a night devoted to Durham, N.C. small press minor/american;

â€”a live performance of Lou Reedâ€™s New York album for its 20th anniversary by seven different musical acts;

â€”a performance of a wickedly comic tale of love and lust in a time of war from the prototypical New York School poet Frank Oâ€™Hara;

â€”our 5th annual small, small press fair, with exhibits from a dozen different small presses, and readings by their authors;

â€”a discussion on Race and Poetry: Integrating the Experimental; and

â€”Talisman House Publishers editor Edward Foster in conversation with internationally renowned English-born poet and long-time Lower East Side resident Simon Pettet.

The full schedule for the event is below this note, followed by performer bios and websites.

as ever,
David

David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754

For event and publication information:
http://www.welcometoboogcity.com
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

2nd annual

Welcome to Boog City
4 Days of Poetry and Music

THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 18, 6:00 P.M.

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

minor/american

(Durham, N.C.)

ACA Galleries
529 W.20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Free

Event will be hosted by
minor/american editors

Elise Ficarra and Kathryn Pringle, eds.

featuring readings from

Samar Albuhassan
David Need
Andrea Rexilius
Ken Rumble
Diane Timblin

and music from
Compass Jazz

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 19, 7:00 P.M.

Sidewalk CafÃ©
94 Ave. A
NYC

Free with a two-drink minimum

Readings, musical, and poetsâ€™ theater performances,
and Lou Reedâ€™s New York album live

7:00 p.m.-Jim Behrle
7:15 p.m.-Daniel Nester
7:35 p.m.-Dibson T. Hoffweiler (music)
8:05 p.m.-Arlo Quint
8:20 p.m.-Bob Holman
8:35 p.m.-Verse Theater Manhattan doing a reading of Frank O'Hara's verse drama
9:35 p.m.-Gillian McCain
9:50 p.m.-Lou Reed, New York. Performed live by:

*Babs Soft
Romeo Had Juliette
Halloween Parade

*The Rabbits
Dirty Blvd.
Endless Cycle

*Dibson T. Hoffweiler & Preston Spurlock
There Is No Time
Last Great American Whale

*Liv Carrow
Beginning of a Great Adventure
Busload of Faith

*Prewar Yardsale
Sick of You Hold On

*Wakey Wakey
Good Evening Mr. Waldheim
Xmas in February

*Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour
Strawman
Dime Store Mystery

11:20 p.m.-Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour
12:10 a.m.-The Rabbits

Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave., L to 1st Ave.
Venue is at E.6th St.

SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 20, 11:00 A.M.

Cakeshop
152 Ludlow St.
NYC

$5

5th Annual Small, Small Press Fair

Featuring readings from authors of the exhibiting presses

11:30 a.m.-Celena Glenn, Bowery Books
11:40 a.m.-TBD, Cy Gist Press
11:50 a.m.-Ariana Reines, Fence/Fence Books
12:00 p.m.-Adam Golaski, flim forum press
12:10 p.m.-Damian Weber, House Press
12:20 a.m.-Virna Teixeira, Litmus Press/Aufgabe
12:30 p.m.-Jaye Bartell, little scratch pad
12:40 p.m.-Jeff Downey, Octopus Books
12:50 p.m.-Melissa Christine Goodrum, Other Rooms Press
1:00 p.m.-Ric Royer, Outside Voices
1:10 p.m.-Austin Alexis, Poets Wear Prada
1:20 p.m.-Tom Savage, Straw Gate Books

1:30 p.m.-Stephanie Gray
1:45 p.m.-Bill Kushner
2:00 p.m.-Oak Orchard Swamp (music)
2:30 p.m.-Ryan Eckes
2:50 p.m.-Eric Gelsinger
3:10 p.m.-Douglas Manson
3:30 p.m.-Heart Parts (music)
4:00 p.m.-Elise Ficarra
4:20 p.m.-Kristianne Meal
4:40 p.m.-Kathryn Pringle
5:00 p.m.-Maureen Thorson
5:20 p.m.-Carol Mirakove
5:35 p.m.-A Brief View of the Hudson (music)
6:05 p.m.-Jen Benka
6:20 p.m.-Todd Colby
6:35 p.m.-Kyle Schlesinger
6:55 p.m.-David Hadbawnik
7:15 p.m.-Sharon Mesmer
7:30 p.m.-Casey Holford (music)

Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave.
Venue is bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 21, 1:00 P.M.

Unnameable Books
456 Bergen St.
Brooklyn

Free

1:00 p.m.-Julia Cohen
1:15 p.m.-Tisa Bryant
1:30 p.m.-Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
1:45 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
2:05 p.m.-Corrine Fitzpatrick
2:20 p.m.-Nick Piombino
2:35 p.m.-Stacy Szymaszek

2:50 p.m.-3:00-break

3:00 p.m.- Race and Poetry: Integrating the Experimental

Amy King (curator and moderator)
Tisa Bryant
Jennifer Firestone
Timothy Liu
Mendi Obadike
Meghan Punschke
Christopher Stackhouse
Mathias Svalina

4:30 p.m.-4:40-break

4:40 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
5:00 p.m.-Lee Ann Brown
5:15 p.m.-John Coletti
5:30 p.m.-Rachel Levitsky
5:45 p.m.-Eileen Myles
6:00 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
6:20 p.m.-Edward Foster
in conversation with Simon Pettet
6:50 p.m.-Simon Pettet
7:10 p.m.-Edward Foster

Directions: 2, 3 to Bergen St.; 2, 3, 4, 5, M, N, Q, W, R, B, D to Atlantic Ave./Pacific St.; C to Lafayette Ave.
Venue is bet. 5th/Flatbush aves.

Welcome to Boog City 2 Bios and Websites

*Thursday

minor/american http://www.minoramerican.blogspot.com minor/american is a small-edition, themed, hand-made poetry journal first released in the summer of 2007. An offshoot of the minor/american blog, originated by Maggie Zurawski in 2004, minor/american prints the work of not-so minor Americans, with a preference for longer selections. The theme for issue two, due this fall, is citi. Issue three's theme will be evolution. Submissions can be sent to [redacted].

Samar Abulhassan http://www.jacketmagazine.com/35/dk-abulhassan.shtml Samar Abulhassan recently left San Francisco, where she taught poetry to children, to live among many creatures at a Zen center in New Mexico, where she wakes early, brews soups, and hears and sounds many bells. She is finishing a second chapbook for Dusie and recently collaborated with a Butoh dancer in San Francisco on a movement/text piece that was performed at Yerba Buena Center for the Arts last spring. She waits for the night to surface words and is looking for a watery landscape to write into.

Compass Jazz http://www.purevolume.com/compass Compass, a jazz quartet, whose performances feature original compositions as well the works of many of America's greatest jazz legends. The quartet is made-up of Rick Lawn (saxophones), Joel Chace (keyboard), Tom Ives (bass), and Albert Colone (drums). The band self produced their album Compass Rises in 1971, which featured original compositions written and arranged by Lawn and Ives. Compass was one of five musical groups on a promotional program that opened the Saratoga Performing Arts Center in 1972. Ives, with Lawn, wrote and arranged "What is Man?" an ecumenical jazz service with an accompanying slide presentation which was performed in New York City and later produced for television by Iowa Public Broadcasting. A revival of "What is Man?" took place last year.

David Need http://www.indyweek.com/gyrobase/Archive?author=oid%3A18317 http://www.mipoesias.com/2006Volume20Issue1/needcolumn.html David Need is a Massachusetts boy who has lived in North Carolina since 1994. He teaches South Asian Religions at Duke University. Excerpts from recent projects "St. John's Rose Slumber" and "Places I've Lived" are forthcoming in Hambone, Effing, and minor/american. Previously his poetry has been published in Fascicle and Ocho, and essays and memoirs have appeared in Talisman and on Mipoesias. He is working on "Voicing St. Mark's" and a further section of "Places I've Lived," as well as an academic study of Kerouac and Buddhism. As he writes this, he sits among the dead in a mall in Raleigh (but they are quiet).

Andrea Rexilius http://www.parceljournal.org
http://www.poetryfoundation.org/harriet/2008/08/the_era_of_video_poetics_is_im_1.html Andrea Rexilius is working toward her Ph.D. in literature and creative writing at the University of Denver. Her poetry and essays have appeared or are forthcoming in Bird Dog, Coconut, Colorado Review, How2, minor/american, P â€“Queue, and Volt, among others. She is the editor of the online journal PARCEL and assistant editor of the Denver Quarterly.

Ken Rumble
http://www.desertcity.blogspot.com
http://www.coconutpoetry.org/rumble2.htm
Ken Rumble is the author of Key Bridge (Carolina Wren Press) and the forthcoming President Letters (Scantily Clad Press). His poems have appeared in the tiny, Cutbank, One Less Magazine, Talisman, Parakeet, and others. He lives in Greensboro, N.C.

Dianne Timblin Dianne Timblin lives in Durham, N.C. Her work has appeared in minor/american, Phoebe, So to Speak, Rivendell, and other journals. She has been featured as a reader for the Poetry at Noon series at the Library of Congress, and one of her poems was a finalist for the Brenda L. Smart Prize.

*Friday

Babs of Queens http://www.myspace.com/babssoft Babs Todras is a songwriter from Queens. A child of two classical musicians, she has been in training since before she could form sentences. After a long mid-youth rebellion against her folks, she returned to music in high school and college where she teamed up with Seth of Dufus and Jeffrey Lewis on various musical projects, and she can be found on several of their albums. She plays mostly short songs about love and science, and also likes to crash Huggabroomstik tours.

Jim Behrle
http://americanpoetry.biz
Jim Behrle lives in Brooklyn.

Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour http://www.myspace.com/toddcarlstrom After Todd Carlstrom recorded his solo album, Gold on the Map, it was clear to him that the songs deserved more than to simply remain a studio project. He set about recruiting members of the band that would become Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour. He managed to entice drummer Eric Shaw of The Domestics into moonlighting. Guitarist Brian Elmquist, a singer/songwriter from Georgia by way of Nashville, came on in early '08. Their show expertly intertwines the poppy wrath of The Pixies, the classic rock nods of Built to Spill, the rumbling slink of Sleater-Kinney, and, occasionally, the odd stoner jam a la Brian Jonestown Massacre.

Liv Carrow http://www.myspace.com/livcarrow Liv Carrowâ€™s songs are like the little animals that your 4-year-old nieces and nephews make out of Play-Dohâ€”lumpy yet distinguishable in form, rudimentary to the point of psychedelic complexity, dry and crumbly on the outside but "all kinds of squishy" on the inside. The mysterious and oddly lovable bassist from ecstatically weird Huggabroomstik and Griffin and the True Believers takes the scenic back road to your heart with her clever-ish observations on life, death, love, health food, human reproduction, geography, the unseen world of the earth spirits and cosmic currents, awkward crushes, metaphysics, and everyone's favorite-despair. Liv plays frequently in NYC and the surrounding area as a solo acoustic act and accompanying Huggabroomstik and the burgeoning alternapop collaboration Feel The Feelings. She is also available for Tarot readings which can be obtained for a song

Dibson T. Hoffweiler http://www.dibson.net http://www.myspace.com/dibson Dibson T. Hoffweiler is the latest in a long line of quirky anti-folk ingÃ©nues, among them Beck, Adam Green, and Jeffrey Lewis. With a low voice thatâ€™s sweet and deadpan, and a guitar-style thatâ€™s virtuosic and sloppy, Hoffweiler carves out a space of compassion and intelligence in a landscape of boring love songs and thinly veiled songwriterly misogyny. Known for his work in anti-folk flagship bands Cheese On Bread, Huggabroomstik, and Urban Barnyard, Dibs began his musical career generating buzz with his old band, Dibs & Sara. Eventually he established himself as a solo artist, including several month long tours of Europe and North America. Dibs has proved (to himself, and to others) that his bizarre, ramshackle aesthetic is palatable outside the freaky comfort zone of New York anti-folk.

Dibson T. Hoffweiler and Preston Spurlock http://www.myspace.com/prestonspurlock Dibson and Preston have been friends and artistic collaborators since meeting at the Sidewalk Cafe in 2005. The two forged a tight bond over their common love of oddball lo-fi music. For a while they performed together as Dibs With Machines, and were both members of one-off anti-folk supergroup Old Hat. They now share a stage as the guitarist and keyboardist of Huggabroomstik.

Bob Holman http://www.bobholman.com Bob Holman is working on a documentary on the poetry of Endangered Languages and another on Allen Ginsberg. His most recent book, A Couple of Ways of Doing Something (Aperture), a collaboration with Chuck Close, is en route from the Tacoma Museum of Modern Art to the Museo in Santiago, Chile. The Awesome Whatever, his new CD is out from Bowery Books. He is the founder of the Bowery Poetry Club and teaches at NYU and Columbia.

Gillian McCain http://www.limpwristmag.com/conwaymccaintrinidad.html http://www.epoetry.org/issues/issue8/text/poems/trinidad1.htm Gillian McCain is the author of two books of poetryâ€”Tilt and Religionâ€”and is the co-author, with Legs McNeil, of Please Kill Me: The Uncensored Oral History of Punk (Grove Press), which has been translated into 10 languages. They are currently working on a new oral history. McCain is also collaborating with David Trinidad and Jeffery Conway on Descent of the Dolls, a book-length poem inspired by the film Valley of the Dolls and the book the Inferno, among other projects.

Daniel Nester http://www.danielnester.com Daniel Nester is the author of The History of My World Tonight (BlazeVOX Books), as well as God Save My Queen and God Save My Queen II (both Soft Skull Press), two collections on his obsession with the rock band Queen. He lives in upstate New York with his wife Maisie and their daughter Miriam.

Prewar Yardsale http://www.myspace.com/prewaryardsale http://www.olivejuicemusic.com/prewaryardsale.html Prewar Yardsale started in the year 2000 under the influence of the Moldy Peaches and Schwervon!. Prewar Yardsale are husband and wife duo Mike Rechner (guitar, vocals) and Dina Levy (bucket, tin can, vocals). Prewar Yardsale, called post-techno, post-punk, post-machine, post-soul, post-anything by the zine Antimatters, recently performed at Huggabroomstock, and their latest release is Prewar Yardsale Peel Sessions (Olive Juice Music).

Arlo Quint
http://www.puppyflowers.com/9/quint.html
Arlo Quint is the author of Days On End (Open 24 Hours) and Photogenic Memory (Lame House).

The Rabbits
http://www.myspace.com/deadrabbitmusic
The Rabbits are an indie rock band from Staten Island. They sound like David Bowie, Jefferson Airplane, and ABBA having a crazy orgy weekend.

Verse Theater Manhattan http://www.versetheater.org Verse Theater Manhattan is the preeminent theater company in the English speaking world devoted exclusively to verse drama. Verse Theater Manhattan focuses on discovering important contemporary plays in verse and working with active poets and playwrights to promote this significant form. In addition to producing plays and reading regularly in New York City for the last decade, the company has toured the Midwest and England to rapt audiences and enthusiastic critics. Theyâ€™ll be performing a wickedly comic tale of love and lust in a time of war from the prototypical New York School poet Frank Oâ€™Hara.

Wakey!Wakey! http://www.wakeywakeymusic.com http://www.myspace.com/wakeywakeymusic Wakey!Wakey! is Michael Grubbs (songwriting/vocals/keys), an NYC native who blends gorgeous songcraft with a potent sense of humor to create original, heartfelt songs that cause listeners to stop what they are doing and turn themselves over completely and totally to his storytelling. Wakey!Wakey! features the boundless talent and energy of Gene Back (violin/guitar), and the unique stylings of their female rhythm sectionâ€”Anne Lieberwirth (bass) and Kristin Mueller (drums). In 2007 Wakey! Wakey! released the live album Silent As a Movie (Family Records) and launched an ingenious covers project, available for download on the band's website and later released as a compilation. The band has shared bills across New York with the likes of indie darlings Rouge Wave, I'm From Barcelona, Someone Still Loves You Boris Yeltsin, AA Bondy, and Heloise and the Savoir Faire.

*Saturday

A Brief View of the Hudson
http://www.myspace.com/abriefviewofthehudson
The duo Nick Nace and Ann Enzminger met through chance meetings. Now the two make up an indie folk band, including the record Go North to Find Me (CD Baby).

Austin Alexis, Poets Wear Prada
http://home.att.net/~poetswearpradanj/AustinAlexis.html
http://www.poetswearprada.blogspot.com Austin Alexis's poetry, fiction, and non-fiction have appeared in a variety of anthologies, journals, magazines, and newspapers, including Barrow Street, The Journal, The Writer, The Pedestal Magazine, and online at Poetz.com. His plays have been performed in New York City, and one was selected for the Samuel French Short Plays Festival. Alexis has taught creative writing at Hunter Collegeâ€™s continuing education program, and has taught and tutored at various universities and college in New York state. He lives in Manhattan and teaches at New York City College of Technology (CUNY) in Brooklyn.

Roxanne Hoffman is the founder of Poets Wear Prada, also known as PWP Books, a small press based in Hoboken, N.J. and devoted to introducing new authors through limited edition, high-quality chaplets. She is a former Wall Street investment banker and runs the press with her husband Herbert Fuerst, a retired Hollywood agent. Their first offering, released in October 2006, was the 12-page poetry chapbook Your Infidel Eyes by Brant Lyon, host of NYC's Hydrogen Jukebox Jazzoetry Series. Since then, they have released 12 additional titles with plans to release 10 new chapbooks annually. Authors include well-established New York poets Peter Chelnik and Susan Maurer, as well as promising newcomers like Jee Leong Koh, Laura Vookles, and Austin Alexis.

Jaye Bartell, Little Scratch Pad Editions
http://www.housepress.org/bartell.html
http://www.myspace.com/oakorchardswamp
Jaye Bartell was born in Massachusetts; has lived in Asheville, NC; San Juan Island, Wash.; and lives in Buffalo. Heâ€™s the author of Acres Ourselves (House Press) and Ever After Never Under (Little Scratch Pad Editions). Other work has appeared in Capgun, A Sing Economy (Flim Forum Anthology), and Cutbank.

Douglas Manson began Little Scratch Pad Editions in 1997 with the chapbook Snack Size, a collection of his own poems. It remained a self-publishing effort until 2005, with the publication of Aaron Lowinger's Autobiography (co-produced with House Press). It became a press with a mission, to publish poetic works by younger writers, often their first chapbooks. Lowinger's chapbook was followed in 2007 with Kristianne Meal's TwentyTwo: first pallet, Tom Yorty's Words in Season, L.A. Howe's NTR PIC E ST R, Michael Basinski's Of Venus 93, Nick Traenkner's Accidental Thrust, and Manson's At Any Point. Recent books are Liz Mariani's Imaginary Poems for My Imaginary Girlfriend Named Anabel, and Jaye Bartell's Ever After / Never Under.

Jen Benka http://www.softskull.com/detailedbook.php?isbn=1-932360-84-0
Jen Benka was born in Cudahy, Wisconsin, and lives today in Brooklyn. She is the politics co-editor of Boog City with Carol Mirakove. Benka is the author of A Box of Longing with 50 Drawers (Soft Skull), an earlier version of which was issued as a limited edition artist book under the title A Revisioning of the Preamble of the Constitution of the United States (Booklyn). She also wrote Manya, comic books drawn by Kris Dresen, and in the 1990s performed with the rock-art band Mook, who launched into their audience larger and cleaner tampons than L7.

Todd Colby
http://www.gleefarm.blogspot.com
http://www.myspace.com/lovetoddcolby
Todd Colby is the author of Tremble & Shine, Riot in the Charm Factory, Cush, and Ripsnort (all Soft Skull Press).

Jeff Downey, Octopus Books http://www.realpoetik.blogspot.com/2008/02/jeff-downey.html http://www.octopusbooks.net Jeff Downey is from the panhandle of Nebraska and is studying in the M.F.A. program at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. His poems have appeared in journals including Octopus, RealPoetik, and Handsome.

Octopus Books is a small press founded in 2006 by the editors of Octopus Magazine. It has published hand-made, limited edition chapbooks by Genya Turovskaya, Joshua Marie Wilkinson, Jonah Winter, Matthew Rohrer, and Sueyeune Juliette Lee, among others. Their first two full-length book releases are Eric Baus' forthcoming Tuned Droves and Julie Doxsee's Undersleep, which is now available.

Ryan Eckes http://www.phillysound.blogspot.com/2007_08_01_archive.html Ryan Eckes lives in South Philadelphia. His poetry can be read in XConnect, Fanzine, Cue: A Journal of Prose Poetry, PhillySound, and his chapbook when i come here (Plan B Press). He has an M.A. in creative writing from Temple University, where he currently teaches. He hosts the Chapter & Verse reading series in Philadelphia.

Elise Ficarra http://www.geocities.com/iunyper/rifeone/ficarra.html http://www.sfsu.edu/~poetry Elise Ficarra is a Bay Area poet and writer. Swelter, her first book of poems, came out in 2005. A second book, be(g)one, is in progress. A contributor to hinge: a boas anthology of experimental women writers, Ficarraâ€™s work probes impossibilitiesâ€™ evolution, investigating how linguistic signsâ€”mundane and mythicâ€”recalibrate memory and bodily experience within the crush of nation states. She is co-editor of the journal minor/american and associate director of The Poetry Center at SFSU.

Eric Gelsinger http://www.housepress.org Eric Gelsinger is from Old Buffalo, N.Y. and currently lives in New Buffalo, Brooklyn. He is a member of House Press, and his poems can also be found in the smooth books of Flim Forum. He trades for a heavy-hitting avant-garde finance firm near Times Square.

Celena Glenn, Bowery Books http://original.bowerypoetry.com/bowerywomen Reading for Bowery Books is Celena Glenn. Celena Glenn is Poet Fashionista-inâ€“Residence for the Nowery Poetry Club, producing fashion poetry shows, spinning, free-styling, and just spitting nearly every week when sheâ€™s in town. She ranked second in the 2004 World Poetry Slam, and is a two-time National Poetry Slam Champion and former host at the Nuyorican Poets' CafÃ©. She is featured in a number of poetry anthologies and magazines, including Spoken Word Revolution, Serum, Composite, and Bullets and Butterflies. Her work can also be seen in the documentaries Slam Channel: War of Words and Urban Scribe. She has performed from Princeton to Rivington Synagogue, from Berkeley to basements in Soweto. Her book Black Cracker (Bowery Books) is forthcoming this fall.

Bowery Books is the press of the Bowery Poetry Club, with Bob Holman and Marjorie Tesser as its editors. The press has published essential anthologies, such as Bowery Women: Poems and Estamos AquÃ, poems by Migrant Farmworkers, as well as works by unique poets like Taylor Mead, the octogenarian Andy Warhol intimate who appeared in the film Coffee and Cigarettes, to Poez, a performing street poet. Forthcoming is the new Bowery Voices series, including Black Cracker by Celena Glenn and Body of Water by Janet Hamill, with photographs by Patti Smith, both in fall 2008, and Touch by Cynthia Kraman in spring 2009. Bowery Books is grateful for the support of the New York State Council on the Arts and is a member of the Council of Literary Magazines and Presses.

Adam Golaski, Flim Forum Press
http://www.openlettersmonthly.com/issue/december-green
http://www.flimforum.blogspot.com
http://www.flimforum.com
Adam Golaski is the author of Worse Than Myself (Raw Dog Screaming Press) and Color Plates (Rose Metal Press). Adam's poem "Green"â€”a translation of Sir Gawain & the Green Knightâ€”appears in installment on Open Letters. Upcoming publications include fiction in The Lifted Brow 4 and Exotic Gothic II, and poetry in Moonlit and Little Red Leaves. He edits for Flim Forum Press.

Flim Forum Press, founded in 2005, provides SPACE to emerging poets working in a variety of experimental modes. It has published two poetry anthologies, Oh One Arrow and A Sing Economy, with Brandon Shimodaâ€™s The Alps, forthcoming this fall.

Melissa Christine Goodrum, Other Rooms Press
http://www.nyqpoets.net/poet/melissachristinegoodrum
http://www.otherroomspress.blogspot.com Melissa Christine Goodrum has an M.F.A. in poetry from Brooklyn College. Her work has been published in The New York Quarterly, The Torch, The Tiny, Rhapsoidia, Can We Have Our Ball Back?, Transmission, and Bowery Women: Poems, and by Other Rooms Press. She was co-president of the Cambridge Poetry Awards, administrative director of Bowery Arts & Sciences, and the recipient of a Zora Neale Hurston Award from the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa University. She wears many, many masksâ€”poet, translator, scholar, editor, photographer, and writing teacher in the New York City Public School system.

Ed Go and Michael Whalen, graduates of Brooklyn College's M.F.A. program, founded Other Rooms Press (ORP) in January 2007. â€œWe got tired of seeing good, innovative poetry go unpublished, ignored by â€˜mainstream,â€™ â€˜acceptedâ€™ venues, and created ORP in hopes of providing alternative spaces, â€˜other roomsâ€™ in which quality, experimental poetry that might not otherwise find an audience can flourish,â€ they said. â€œOur goal with our website chapbooks and readings is to publish and promote the kind of experimental, linguistically innovative, playful poetry that we love; we hope you enjoy it.â€

Stephanie Gray http://www.leafscape.org/StrawGateBooks/gray.html
Stephanie Gray is a poet and experimental filmmaker whose super 8 films often have poem voiceovers. Her first poetry collection, Heart Stoner Bingo (Straw Gate Books) was published this past December. Her films have screened at festivals and venues including Millennium Film Workshop, Ann Arbor, Oberhausen, Viennale, VIDEOEX, Cinematexas, Antimatter, Chicago Underground, and Madcat. She has received funding for her films from the New York Foundation for the Arts and the New York State Council on the Arts.

David Hadbawnik http://www.habenichtpress.com David Hadbawnik is a poet and performer who lives with his wife in Buffalo, N.Y. Recent publications include the books Translations from Creeley (Sardines), Ovid in Exile (Interbirth), and SF Spleen (Skanky Possum); essays in Big Bridge and Chicago Review; and poems in the Marlboro Review (in which his poem â€œThe Godsâ€ was chosen by Heather McHugh as a finalist for the Poetry Prize) and Damn the Caesars. He is the editor and publisher of Habenicht Press and the journal kadar koli. He begins studying toward his Ph.D. in poetics at the University at Buffalo this fall.

Heart Parts
(see Damian Weber for bio)

Casey Holford http://www.caseyholford.com http://www.myspace.com/casey
Casey Holford started playing piano at 12, picked up his mother's guitar for coffeehouse and DIY shows at 14, and was performing regularly in the Boston-Providence songwriter circuit by 18. Now living in Brooklyn, he has recorded three self-released solo albums, two EPs, and a recent 7-inch on RiYL records. Along the way Holfordâ€™s managed to tour on the east and west coasts multiple times as well as in Europe, sharing bills with like-minded songwriters such as Erin McKeown, Diane Cluck, Regina Spektor, Kimya Dawson, and Matt the Electrician. He currently moonlights in the bands Outlines, Urban Barnyard, Dream Bitches, and Art Sorority for Girls, playing bass, electric, 12 string, and baritone guitars. He is also a prolific producer, working on projects with fellow bands and songwriters, most recently pop riot Cheese on Bread, visionary Dave Deporis, and upstart Creaky Boards.

Bill Kushner http://www.rattapallax.com/ebooks/DreamsWaters_sample.pdf
Bill Kushner is a poet residing in Chelsea. He is the author of In Sunsetland With You (Straw Gate Books), In the Hairy Arms of Whitman (Melville House Publications), He Dreams of Waters (Rattapallax), and That April (United Artists Books) among others. He has twice received a New York Foundation for The Arts fellowship. His work has been published in the Best American Poetry 2002.

Douglas Manson http://www.dougfinmanson.blogspot.com http://www.starcherone.blogspot.com/2008/07/doug-manson-interview-on-having- fallen.html Douglas Manson was born in Akron, Ohio and many years later earned an M.A. in English from Kent State and a Ph.D. in English from The University at Buffalo. He lives in Buffalo as a poet and writer, and publisher of Celery Flute: The Kenneth Patchen Newsletter and little scratch pad editions. He hosted a weekly poetry radio show for a community-based AM station, Inkaudible Poetry Radio from 2004-06. He is a songwriter and guitar player. Amid an ongoing series of chapbooks, he has most recently published a full-length book of poems, Roofing and Siding (BlazeVOX Books), and the expanded chapbook At Any Point (2008).

Kristianne Meal
http://www.artvoice.com/issues/v6n49/guts_guns_and_gusto
Kristianne Meal operates Rust Belt Books in Buffalo, N.Y. from 4D frequencies. Her book TwentyTwo, first pallet (Little Scratch Pad Editions) was published last year.

Sharon Mesmer
http://www.thebestamericanpoetry.typepad.com/the_best_american_poetry/ 2008/0 5/getting-to-kn-1.html http://www.jacketmagazine.com/30/fl-mesmer.html Sharon Mesmer is the recipient of two New York Foundation for the Arts fellowships in poetry. Her two recently released poetry collections are The Virgin Formica (Hanging Loose Press) and Annoying Diabetic Bitch (Combo Books). Her other works include Half Angel, Half Lunch (Hard Press), Vertigo Seeks Affinities (Belladonna Books), and Crossing Second Avenue (ABJ Books). Her work is internationally known including translations and collaborative works. Her work has recently appeared in New American Writing, The Brooklyn Rail, Van Goghâ€™s Ear, and Hanging Loose. Her fiction collections are In Ordinary Time and The Empty Quarter (Hanging Loose Press) and Ma Vie Ã Yonago (in French translation from Hachette LittÃ©ratures, France). She teaches at the New School.

Carol Mirakove
http://www.factoryschool.com/pubs/heretical/vol2/mirakove/index.html Carol Mirakove was born in Queens and lives in Brooklyn. She is the author of Mediated (Factory School), Occupied (Kelsey St. Press), and, with Jen Benka, 1,138 (Belladonna). Her love of poetry began with deterrence to reading, where the vast space on the page provided comfort. Her favorite things include The Cliks, Caravan of Dreams, and math. Carol is a dog person.

Oak Orchard Swamp
(see Jaye Bartell for bio)

kathyrn l. pringle http://www.dusie.org/pringle.html
http://www.42opus.com/v6n2/harmony2 kathryn l. pringle is the author of The Stills (Duration Press) and Temper & Felicity are Lovers (TAXT). Her poems can be read in the Denver Quarterly, Fence, Cold Drill, Dusie, 14 hills, small town, string of small machines, and 580 Split, among others. She edits the literary magazine minor/american, and curates the minor/american reading series in Durham, N.C. She has also been known to blog at minor/american, too.

Ariana Reines, Fence/Fence Books http://www.fence.fenceportal.org
http://www.fencebooks.fenceportal.org Ariana Reines is the author of The Cow (Alberta Prize, Fence Books) and Coeur de Lion (Mal-O-Mar). Two volumes of translation, of works by Charles Baudelaire and GrisÃ©lidis RÃ©al, will appear next year from Mal-O-Mar and Semiotext(e), respectively. New York's Foundry Theatre will produce her first play in February 2009. She'll be Holloway Lecturer in Poetry at the University of California at Berkeley this coming spring. Her next Fence book is MERCURY; it will come out sometime.

Fence is a biannual journal of poetry, fiction, art, and criticism that has a mission to redefine the terms of accessibility by publishing challenging writing distinguished by idiosyncrasy and intelligence rather than by allegiance with camps, schools, or cliques. It is part of our press's mission to support writers who might otherwise have difficulty being recognized because their work doesn't answer to either the mainstream or to recognizable modes of experimentation. Launched in 2001, Fence Books publishes poetry, fiction, critical texts and anthologies, and prioritizes sustained support for its authors, many of whom come to us through our two book contests and then go on to publish second, third, and fourth books.

Ric Royer, Outside Voices
http://www.ricroyer.com
http://www.looktouch.com/press
Ric Royer is a writer, performer, writer of performances and performer of writings. Other works of literature include Hystery of Heat (Publishing Genius), There Were One and It Was Two (Narrow House Records), and Anthesteria (Bark Art Press). The Weather Not The Weather is forthcoming from Outside Voices Press. He is also a founding editor of Ferrum Wheel.

An imprint of Bootstrap Productions (Cambridge, Mass.), Buffalo N.Y.-based Outside Voices publishes poetry & experimental text-based art.

Tom Savage, Straw Gate Books http://www.leafscape.org/StrawGateBooks
With Brainlifts, Tom Savage has published nine books of poetry, his latest arriving this July via Straw Gate Books. After receiving his B.A. at Brooklyn College, Tom then went to India for four years. In 1986 he accompanied Allen Ginsberg and fellow guest poets on a reading tour of Nicaragua. He has been awarded grants from the Fund for Poetry and the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines.

Straw Gate Books, founded by Phyllis Wat in 2005, publishes poetry and occasional related texts. Straw Gate is particularly interested in works by women and non-polemical writing with an underlying social content. They also feature new and long-established authors whose work is under-served. Its books are The Rorschach Factory by Valerie Fox, In Sunsetland With You by Bill Kushner, Heart Stoner Bingo by Stephanie Gray, and Brainlifts by Tom Savage. Forthcoming books include work by Lydia Cortes and Merry Fortune.

Kyle Schlesinger http://www.kyleschlesinger.com Kyle Schlesinger is the author of two books of poetry, Hello Helicopter (BlazeVOX Books) and The Pink (Kenning). He is the co-editor of Mimeo Mimeo with Jed Birmingham and ON with Thom Donovan and Michael Cross. He will be curating the Monday night reading series at the Poetry Project in 2008-09.

Virna Teixeira, Litmus Press/Aufgabe http://www.papelderascunho.net http://www.litmuspress.org Virna Teixeira was born in Fortaleza, Brazil and has lived in SÃ£o Paulo for many years. She is the author of Visita and DistÃ¢ncia, and has three books of translations publishedâ€”Na EstaÃ§Ã£o Central Central, a selection of poems of the Scottish poet Edwin Morgan; Ovelha Negra, an anthology of Scottish poetry; and Livro Universal by Chilean poet HÃ©ctor Hernandez Montecinos. Selections of her poems have been translated and published abroadâ€”Distancia (MÃ©xico, Lunarena Editorial) and Fin de SiÃ¨cle (Editorial Universidad de La Plata, Argentina)â€”and she has participated in anthologies of Brazilian poetry in the U.S., Latin America, and Portugal.

Litmus Press is a nonprofit literature and arts organization dedicated to supporting innovative, cross-genre writing, with an emphasis on poetry and international works in translation. Litmus press publishes two or three single-author works a year, in addition to Aufgabe, an annual journal of poetry, translations, essays, reviews, and art.

Maureen Thorson http://www.reenhead.com/mole/mole.php Maureen Thorson lives in Washington, D.C., where she practices law and runs the smallest press in the world, Big Game Books. She is the author of two chapbooks, Novelty Act (Ugly Duckling Press) and Mayport (Poetry Society of America). Her poems have appeared or are forthcoming in Exquisite Corpse, Octopus, a Handsome Journal, and the Yale Anthology of Younger American Poetry.

Damian Weber, House Press http://www.housepress.org http://www.housepress.blogspot.com Damian Weber has published 18 books with House Press, including his newest Barkeater, which he will be reading from at the Welcome to Boog City festival. He thinks there should be more readings like this one, and is so excited to see Eileen Myles because he thinks she's the coolest ever and that Chelsea Girls is how more people should write. He met her once at Susan Howe's class and she told a story about reading a Kobainer poem at a poetry slam in Seattle and totally losing. Apparently they're no fun.

House Press came together in Buffalo in 2002 as poets inside and outside the University at Buffalo started daily and nightly collaborations. That year, they began a workshop at 149 Lisbon, a reading series at Spot Coffee, minted the first issue of the magazine Drill, and published their first book, an our-man collaboration/collection. Since then, some members have scattered to Chicago, Brooklyn, San Francisco, Albany, St. Louis, and Charlottesville, Va., while others have held down the fort. Drill has morphed into String of Small Machines (S.F./Chicago), and two other magazines, Spell (Chicago) and Source Material (Brooklyn), have arisen. Meanwhile, House has put out over two dozen books and a half-dozen CDs. In addition to poetry and music, they've also worked with prose, street art, book art, and film.

TBD, Cy Gist Press http://www.cygistpress.com Editor Mark Lamoureux started Cy Gist Press in 2006. The press' focus is on ekphrastic poetry, or works that have a strong visual sensibility. Volumes are handmade in print runs of 100-150, with all design work and printing done in-house by Lamoureux.

*Sunday

Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
http://www.quoileternite.blogspot.com
Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ is a poet living in North Massapequa. She's the author of Document (Octopus Books).

Lee Ann Brown http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Brown.html http://www.epc.buffalo.edu/authors/brown Lee Ann Brown loves to perform. Her books include The Sleep That Changed Everything (Wesleyan University Press) and Polyverse (Sun & Moon Press), the latter of which included earlier chapbooks such as a museme (Boog Literature) and Crush (Leave Books). She loves to sing and play with her daughter Miranda, who is beginning kindergarten this fall at The Blue Man Creativity Center, as well as collaborate with her husband, Tony Torn, with whom she has started The French Broad Institute (of Time and the River) in Marshall, N.C. During the school year she lives in NYC, goes to lots of readings, and teaches poetry at St. John's University.

Tisa Bryant http://www.themagicmakers.blogspot.com/2007/03/tisa-bryant-authorscholar-tis a-bryant.html Tisa Bryant makes work that often traverses the boundaries of genre, culture, and history. Her first book, Unexplained Presence (Leon Works), is a collection of original, hybrid essays that remix narratives from eurocentric film, literature, and visual arts and zoom in on the black presences operating within them. Her writing has appeared or is forthcoming in a number of places, including Abraham Lincoln, The Believer, 1913: A Journal of Forms, Sustainable Aircraft, and with the paintings of visual artist Laylah Ali. She is also author of the chapbook, Tzimmes (a+bend Press). She is assistant professor of writing at St. John's University, Queens; lives in Crown Heights, Brooklyn; and is a founding editor/publisher of the hardcover annual The Encyclopedia Project.

Julia Cohen http://www.onthemessiersideofneat.blogspot.com http://www.pshares.blogspot.com/2007/12/new-voice-1-julia-cohen.html Julia Cohen is the author of three chapbooks, If Fire, Arrival (horse less press), Who Could Forget the Sensational First Evening of the Night (H_NGM_N B__KS), and, with Mathias Svalina, When We Broke the Microscope (Small Fires Press). Her chapbooks The History of a Lake Never Drowns (Dancing Girl Press) and, also with Mathias Svalina, Chugwater (Transmission Press) are forthcoming. Poems have been published in Denver Quarterly, Copper Nickel, Bird Dog, Spinning Jenny, the tiny, MiPOesia, GutCult, and Forklift, Ohio, among others.

John Coletti
http://www.fewfurpressrainbow.blogspot.com
John Coletti is the author of The New Normalcy (Boog Literature), Physical Kind (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs), and the forthcoming Same Enemy Rainbow (fewer & further). He is the editor of The Poetry Project Newsletter.

Jennifer Firestone
http://www.asu.edu/pipercwcenter/how2journal/vol_3_no_2/mentoring/interview_ firestone_myles.html Jennifer Firestone is the co-editor of Letters To Poets: Conversations About Poetics, Politics, and Community (Saturnalia Books), forthcoming in October. She is the author of Holiday (Shearsman Books), Waves (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs), and From Flashes and snapshot (Sona Books). Her work has appeared in HOW2, LUNGFULL!, Xcp: Streetnotes, Fourteen Hills, Dusie, 580 Split, and Saint Elizabeth Street, among others. She is an assistant professor teaching poetry at Eugene Lang College at The New School for Liberal Arts, and lives in Brooklyn with her husband and their infant twins.

Corrine Fitzpatrick
http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/fitzpatrick.html
http://www.brooklynrail.org/2006/11/poetry/poetry-by-corrine-fitzpatrick
Corrine Fitzpatrick is the author of Zamboanguena and On Melody Dispatch. She is in the M.F.A. program at Bard College and is the program coordinator for The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church.

Edward Foster http://www.stevens.edu/provost/academics/undergraduate/faculty_profile1.php?faculty_id=905 http://www.lightmillennium.org/2005_15th/edfoster_fbingul_interview.html Ed Fosterâ€™s recent books include What He Ought To Know: New and Selected Poems (Marsh Hawk Press) and A History of the Common Scale. Described by one critic as "the epitome of the poet/scholar," he is the author of numerous volumes of literary criticism and history but is better know for his poetry, characterized by "sureness of register, intelligence of arrangement, delicacy of emotional patterning, elegance of effect" says Verse magazine. The founding editor of Talisman House Publishers, he is a professor of history and an associate dean in the College of Arts and Letters at the Stevens Institute of Technology.

Yoko Kikuchi http://www.yokokikuchi.com http://www.dreambitches.org Yoko Kikuchi writes songs to play solo, as well as being the main songwriter for Dream Bitches. She has one solo release, Songs I Wrote For You, and is working on releasing a solo triple-album in the fall. Dream Bitches has two albumsâ€”Sanfransisters (Olive Juice Music) and Coke-and-Spiriters (Recommended If You Like Records). As well as recording her own projects, Kikuchi appears as a backing vocalist/harmony composer on a number of recordings by talented artists including Dan Fishback, Phoebe Kreutz, Dibs, Casey Holford, Josh Malamy, and Andrew Phillip Tipton. She also performs/guest stars in a number of groups, most notably the Kreutzenjammer Kids, Piaf the Eiffel Tower, and The Leader.

Amy King http://www.amyking.org Amy King is the author of I'm the Man Who Loves You and Antidotes for an Alibi (BlazeVOX Books), and, most recently, Kiss Me With the Mouth of Your Country (Dusie Press). She is the moderator for the Poetics List and the Women's Poetry Listserv, and teaches English and creative writing at Nassau Community College. She is currently editing an anthology, The Urban Poetic, forthcoming from Factory School.

Rachel Levitsky http://www.delirioushem.blogspot.com/2008/02/dim-sum-rachel-levitsky.html http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/levitsky.html Rachel Levitsky is the author of Under the Sun (Futurepoem books) and five poetry chapbooks. She has written several poetry plays, three of which (one of them with Camille Roy) have been performed in New York and San Francisco. Recently her work was translated into Icelandic for the anthology 131.839 SlÃ¶g Med Bilum by EirÃkur Ã–rn Nordahl. Online poetry and critical essays can be found at Delirious Hem, Narrativity, Duration Press, How2, and Web Conjunctions, among others. She is the founder and co-director of Belladonna*, an event and publication series of feminist avant-garde poetics.

Timothy Liu
http://www.poets.org/poet.php/prmPID/114
Timothy Liu has two new books of poetry forthcoming, Bending the Mind Around the Dreamâ€™s Blown Fuse (Talisman House Press) and Polytheogamy (Saturnalia Books). He lives in Manhattan.

Eileen Myles
http://www.eileenmyles.com
http://www.eileenmyles.net
Eileen Myles was born in Cambridge, Mass. in 1949, and moved to New York City in 1974 to be a poet. Since then she has written produced, performed, and edited more than 20 plays, libretti, films books of poetry, and fiction, most recently Sorry, Tree. Importance of Being Iceland (essays) and The Inferno, a poet's novel, are forthcoming. She lives and writes in New York.

Mendi Lewis Obadike http://www.blacknetart.com Mendi Lewis Obadike is the author of Armor and Flesh: Poems and the libretto for the internet opera The Sour Thunder. The Whitney Museum of American Art, Yale University, and the New York African Film Festival and Electronic Arts Intermix, are among the institutions that have commissioned her text-based new media art. She received a Rockefeller New Media Award to develop TaRonda, Who Wore White Gloves, an opera which explores black codes of conduct. She developed Four Electric Ghosts (an opera based on Amos Tutuola's novel My Life in the Bush of Ghosts and the video game Pac-Man) in Toni Morrison's Atelier at Princeton in the fall of 2005. Mendi lives and works with her husband Keith in the New York metropolitan area.

Simon Pettet http://www.jacketmagazine.com/29/leddy-pettet.html http://www.jacketmagazine.com/25/pett-berr-iv.html Simon Pettet is an internationally renowned English-born poet and long-time Lower East Side resident. His most recent book of poems is the much-acclaimed More Winnowed Fragments (Talisman House Press). Hearthâ€”New and Selected Poems is due from the same publisher later in the fall. He is also the author of two classic collaborations with photographer-filmmaker, Rudy Burckhardt, Conversations About Everything and Talking Pictures, and edited the Art Writings of the Pulitzer-prize-winning New York School poet James Schuyler. "Like Beethoven's Bagatelles", John Ashbery has written, â€œSimon Pettet's short poems have a great deal to say, and their seeming modest dimensions help rather than hinder his saying it.â€

Nick Piombino
http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Piombino%20interview.htm

http://www.nickpiombino.blogspot.com
Nick Piombino guest edited OCHO 14. He opened his ongoing weblog fait accompli in February 2003. His latest books are fait accompli (Factory School) and Free Fall (Otoliths), a collage novel containing over 150 full-color images. Contradicta, with illustrations by Toni Simon is due this fall from Green Integer.

Meghan Punschke http://www.megpunschke.com Meghan Punschke is the author of Stratification (BlazeVOX Books). She resides in New York City, and has an M.F.A. in poetry from The New School. She is the curator and host of Word of Mouth, a reading series dedicated to poets and fiction/non-fiction writers. She is also the managing editor for the literary journal Oranges & Sardines. Her poetry was nominated for a Pushcart Prize in 2007, and it can be found in MiPO, No Tell Motel, Coconut, Sawbuck, and OCHO, among others.

Christopher Stackhouse http://www.readab.com/cstackhouse.html Christopher Stackhouse is the author of the poetry collection Slip (Corollary Press) and co-author of Seismosis (1913 Press), which features a collaboration of Stackhouse's drawings with text by writer/author/professor John Keene. He is a Cave Canem Writers Fellow, and, a 2005 Fellow in Poetry from the New York Foundation for the Arts. He has recently successfully completed studies, granting him an M.F.A. in writing/interdisciplinary studies from Bard College in 2009.

Mathias Svalina http://www.mathiassvalina.blogspot.com Mathias Svalina is a co-editor of Octopus Magazine and Octopus Books. He is the author of the chapbooks Why I Am White (Kitchen Press), Creation Myths (New Michigan Press), and The Viral Lease (Small Anchor Press). He is the co-author of the collaboratively written chapbooks Or Else What, Asked the Flame, with Paula Cisewski (SC Press), When We Broke the Microscope (Small Fires Press), and Chugwater (Transmission Press), which were both written with Julia Cohen. His first book, Destruction Myth, is forthcoming from Cleveland State University Press next year.

Stacy Szymaszek
http://www.lemonhound.blogspot.com/2008/04/autoportraits-conversation-with-s tacy.html Stacy Szymaszek is the author of Emptied of All Ships and the forthcoming Hyperglossia (both Litmus Press). She recently published her faux coming-of-age tale Orizaba: A Voyage with Hart Crane (Faux Press). Her passion for Crane is so real. She is the artistic director of the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church.

↑ Index

164. Mark Prejsnar

announcing miscproj.. call for work (& readers)

Thu 21 Aug 2008

http://miscproj.blogspot.com/

miscproj is a blogmag; it is a continuation of the hard-copy poetry magazine Misc. Proj., which was published in Atlanta in the late 1990s. Work accepted will be published within a few weeks of acceptance. We're very interested in seeing submissions of poems. But we are also quite open to essays on poetics, and book reviews. Like the initial paper mag, the current version of miscproj will feature miscellaneous projects relating to poetry: interviews, essays, comments on the poetry scene, debates.

A blogmag follows the logic of the blog software: we do not publish issues, but rather post work in a continuing stream. Items in a blogmag relate to each other without the mediation of larger "issue" groupings. Please visit the blogmag for your reading pleasure. Before submitting you should become familiar with the material there, especially the overall range of poetics mapped out by the first five issues, which have been mounted in online facsimile form and my be viewed at the blogmag.

send all submissions to:

[redacted]

thanx,
Mark Prejsnar
Katra DeMill
Sally Traub

editorial committee

James Sanders
John Lowther

technical editors

"To me, in this fallen world, the question that true literature prompts is never "what does it mean" but rather: what circumstances (what kind of perceived world) have given rise to writing of this kind, which is trying to provoke a different way of "being in the world," and why? Writing that does not provoke this question, but aims instead at meaning--is entertainment..."

--Richard Foreman

"Having undertaken never to be renounced never to be diminutive never to be in consequence never to be with and delayed never to be placing it with and because it is an interval it is extremely difficult not to make sense extremely difficult not to make sense extremely difficult not to make sense and excuse"

--Gertrude Stein

^^^^^^^

----Mark Prejsnar

↑ Index

165. amy king

*Friday, August 29th  Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich **

Thu 21 Aug 2008

Stain Bar is at 766 Grand Street in Brooklyn, and you can get there by taking the L train to Grand Street, walk one block West.

Cheers to you all, till soon,

Ana + Amy

The Stain of Poetry: A Reading Series
August 29th @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg, Brooklyn

 Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich **

~~~~

Michael Ball grew up in North Carolina & spent most of his adult life in Brooklyn. He currently lives in Baltimore where he curates & hosts the i.e. reading series.

~~~~

Joel Chace has published poetry and prose poetry in print and electronic magazines such as 6ix, Tomorrow, Lost and Found Times, Coracle, xStream, Three Candles, 2River View, Joey & the Black Boots, Recursive Angel, and Veer. He has published more than a dozen print and electronic collections. New from BlazeVox Books is CLEANING THE MIRROR: NEW AND SELECTED POEMS, and from Paper Kite Press, MATTER NO MATTER, another full-length collection. For many years, Chace has been Poetry Editor for the experimental electronic magazine 5_Trope. Amphibian Productions theater company did a staged reading of his play TRIPTYCH, at the Arclight Theatre, on the Upper West Side of Manhattan, Spring, 2005.

~~~~

Photo by Doug Barber
~~~~

valzhyna mort born in minsk, belarus. second book of poetry "factory of tears" came out in april 2008 from copper canyon press, usa. (the first one was published in minsk in 2005 and called "i'm as thin as your eyelashes"). previously was a writer-in-residence at several international locations, also received two international poetry prizes. besides the united states, "factory of tears" was published in sweden and will come out in 2009 in germany. apart from poetry, valzhyna mort runs a black metal music label.

~~~~

Anna Moschovakis is the author of a book of poems,_I Have Not Been Able to Get Through to Everyone_, and of several chapbooks, including most recently _No Medea_ , a Tinyside from Big Game Books. She is also a translator of French poetry and prose and an editor at Ugly Duckling Presse.

~~~~

Ryan Murphy is the author of Down With the Ship from Otis Books/Seismicity Editions. He has received awards from Chelsea magazine and the Aldrich Museum of Contemporary Art, as well as a grant from the Fund for Poetry. He lives in New York.

~~~~

Photo by Stephanie Young

Matvei Yankelevich edited and translated TODAY I WROTE NOTHING: THE SELECTED WRITINGS OF DANIIL KHARMS (Overlook, 2007). He is a co-translator of OBERIU: AN ANTHOLOGY OF RUSSIAN ABSURDISM (2006). His translation of the Vladimir Mayakovsky's poem "Cloud in Pants" appears in NIGHT WRAPS THE SKY: WRITINGS BY AND ABOUT MAYAKOVSKY (Farrar, Strauss & Giroux, 2008). He is the author of a long poem, THE PRESENT WORK (Palm Press, 2006) and his writing has appeared in Fence, Open City, and many other literary journals. He teaches Russian Literature at Hunter College in New York City and edits the Eastern European Poets Series at Ugly Duckling Presse in Brooklyn.

~~~~

stain
766 grand street
brooklyn, ny 11211
(L train to Grand Street,
1 block west)
718/[redacted]
open daily @ 5 p.m.

~~~~
~~~~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic

http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/2008/08/19/friday-august-29-2008-700-pm-2/

———

Movies With Poems

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Poems To Do

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

166. Catherine Daly
Artist and Curator Calls City of Vancouver Public Art Program
Thu 21 Aug 2008

—

↑ Index

167. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Thu 21 Aug 2008

http://www.hudsonreview.com/su08/su08hunter.html

↑ Index

168. Tenney Nathanson
Dorn and anti-semitism on the Poetics list?
Fri 22 Aug 2008

sorry if this is stirring up old whatevers, but I recall a pretty lengthy series of posts on the list, maybe 5-10 years ago, on anti-semitic streak in Dorn (among other things I remember Tom Mandel offering to punch Dorn in the face if he ever saw him--maybe that will jog someone's memory!). Anyway a quick search of the list archive didn't turn up anything, so I'm wondering if anybody can lay hands on the pertinent posts or range of dates. I'm trying to direct a friend to the discussion.

thanks for any help,

Tenney

↑ Index

169. Nate Pritts
3-2-1 Blastoff!
Fri 22 Aug 2008

Hi all -

My second full length collection of poetry - HONORARY ASTRONAUT - will be out in October from Ghost Road Press ::

http://www.ghostroadpress.com/

It's not up yet but you can read a poem from this new book in my chapbook The Happy Seasons - "One for Carol Ross" - found here ::

http://www.swanniganandwright.com/one%20for%20carol%20ross.html

And, while you're at it, consider picking up a copy of my first book, SENSATIONAL SPECTACULAR - by going here & scrolling down ::

http://www.natepritts.com

Thanks!

n8

_____
:: Nate Pritts

:: http://www.correspondentbreeze.blogspot.com

:: http://www.natepritts.com

Talk to your Yahoo! Friends via Windows Live Messenger. Find Out How

_____ Be the filmmaker you always wanted to be—learn how to burn a DVD with Windows®. http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/108588797/direct/01/

↑ Index

170. Philip Rowland
NOON 6 AVAILABLE
Fri 22 Aug 2008

Issue 6 of NOON: Journal of the Short Poem is now available. With 72 pages of poems, it is handbound and published in an edition of 200 copies. For a copy sent via airmail, please send US$14 (cash or international postal money order) or 7 pounds (cheque) to Philip Rowland at the following address: Minami Motomachi 4-49-506, Shinjuku- ku, Tokyo [redacted], Japan. Additional copies will be sent post-free (add $10 / 5 pounds per copy); likewise, if you would like a copy of Issue 5 sent together with 6.

Contributors to NOON 6 are: Ravi Shankar, Daniel Zimmerman, Eleanor Stanford, Jane Hirshfield, John Levy, David Miller, Lee Gurga, Onishi Yasuyo, Yagi Mikajo, Uda Kiyoko, Philip Messenger, Niels Hav, Roberta Beary, Peggy Willis Lyles, Halvard Johnson, Lionel Kearns, Peter Yovu, Alexis Rotella, Michael McClintock, John Phillips, Richard Gilbert, Keiji Minato, Barry Schwabsky, Alan Halsey, Margaret Stawowy, Larissa Shmailo, Jane Joritz-Nakagawa, Ruth Lepson, Jane Monson, Elizabeth Robinson, Robin Magowan, Jerry Gordon, Patrick Donnelly and Stephen Miller, Jim Moore.

If you would like a review copy, please let me know.

The reading period for the next issue is scheduled for October (email submissions welcome at that time).

All the best,

Philip Rowland (editor and publisher)
NOON: Journal of the Short Poem
[redacted]

↑ Index

171. steve russell
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Fri 22 Aug 2008

Auster is relevant here, too. His noir is lyrical, but hard edges. & film keeps coming up more and more often in his work. He rarely speaks of his early poetry, but it's as good as Ashberry claims. i think about all the movies that should be made about poetry. lit flicks. something on Nabokov. Borgess. Nabokov would be Hollywood tempting in a Dr. Z sort of way.

----- Original Message ----
From: Daniel Zimmerman <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, August 21, 2008 10:14:58 PM
Subject: Re: The List of Movies with Poetry

http://www.hudsonreview.com/su08/su08hunter.html

↑ Index

172. ela kotkowska
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Fri 22 Aug 2008

I noticed your thread, and I thought I'd send you a list I've compiled some time ago... I have created a few separate categories: (semi-)biographical films; films on fictitious poets; documentaries; and then some films having poetry as an object in some sense. I wasn't at that point looking for cinematic adaptations of poems... Definitely not exhaustive, repeating many films already mentioned here, but I hope you'll find it useful *-))

[] [] [] [] [] (Quasi-)Biographies:

on: Cyrano de Bergerac Cirano di Bergerac (1925), dir. Augusto Genina (Italy/France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0160166/ Cyrano de Bergerac (1950), dir. Michael Gordon (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0042367/ Cyrano de Bergerac (1990), dir. Jean-Paul Rappeneau (France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0099334/

The Barretts of Wimpole Street (1934), dir. Sidney Franklin (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0024865/ Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning

Davit Guramishvili(1945), dir. Nikoloz Sanishvili & Joseb Tumanishvili (Georgia)
http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0236138/
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/David_Guramishvili

Pull My Daisy(1959), dir. Robert Frank & Alfred Leslie (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0052100/ A short film about the BeatGeneration. Based on Jack Karouacâ€™s book. The Cedar Bar (2002), dir. Alfred Leslie (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0326801/ A film-collage using, among others, footage from Pull My Daisy.

The Trials of Oscar Wilde (1960), dir. Ken Hughes (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0054403

Sayat Nova aka The Color of Pomegrenates (1968), dir. Sergei Parajanov (Armenia)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0063555/http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sayat_Nova.

The Belle of Amherst (1976), dir. Charles S. Dubin (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0202812/ Emily Dickinson

Stevie (1978), dir. Robert Enders (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0078321/ Stevie Smith

I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings (1979), dir. Fielder Cook (USA)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0079321/ Maya Angelou

'Breaker' Morant (1980), dir. Bruce Beresford (Australia)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0080310/

Andrea ChÃ©nier (1985), dir. Humphrey Burton (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0254090/ AndrÃ© ChÃ©nier

HÃ¤lfte des Lebens (1985), dir. Herrmann Zschoche (Germany)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0087441/ Friedrich HÃ¶lderlin

Lermontov (1986), dir. Nikolai Burlyayev (Soviet Union)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0091399/

Gothic(1986), dir. Ken Russell (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0091142/ Mary Shelley and Lord Byron.

Haunted Summer (1988), dir. Ivan Passer (USA)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0095280/ Lord Byron, Mary Shelley and Percy Shelley.

Remando al viento aka RowingWith The Wind (1988), dir. Gonzalo SuÃ¡rez (Spain) Lord Byron, Percy and Mary Shelley.

Looking for Langston (1988), dir. Isaac Julien (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0095545/

Lichnoe delo Anny Akhmatovoy aka TheAnna Akhmatova File (1989), dir. Semyon Aranovich (Soviet Union)
http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0097743/
Includes archival footage.

Dylan Thomas: Return Journey (1990), dir. Anthony Hopkins (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0099476/

Beautiful Dreamers (1990), dir. John Kent Harrison (Canada)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0101413/ Walt Whitman

Tongues Untied (1990), dir. Marlon Riggs (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0103099/ Essex Hemphill

Fear and the Muse: The Story of Anna Akhmatova(1991), dir. Jill Janows (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0277701/

Wszystko co najwazniejsze aka AllThat Really Matters (1992), dir. Robert Glinski (Poland) Aleksander Wat, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Aleksander_Wat

Shadowlands (1993), dir. Richard Attenborough (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0108101/ Helen Joy Davidman, aka Joy Gresham

En compagnie d'Antonin Artaud aka MyLife and Times with Antonin Artaud (1993), dir. GÃ©rard Mordillat (France) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0106810/

Tom & Viv (1994), dir. Brian Gilberthttp://www.imdb.com/title/tt0111454/ T. S. Eliot, and hisfirst wife Vivienne Haigh-Wood.

Mrs. Parker and Her Vicious Circle(1994), dir. Alan Rudolph (USA)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0110588/ Dorothy Parker

Il Postino aka The Postman (1994), dir. Michael Radford (France / Italy)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0110877/ Pablo Neruda

Total Eclipse (1995), dir. Agnieszka Holland (UK / France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0114702/ Arthur Rimbaud & Paul Verlaine

The Disappearance of Garcia Lorca (1996), dir. Marcos Zurinaga (US / France / Spain / Puerto Rico) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0117106/

IhatÃ´bu gensÃ´, Kenji no haru aka Springand Chaos: The Life Story of Kenji Miyazawa (1996), dir. ShÃ´ji Kawamori (Japan) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0223503/

Kavafis (1996), dir. Yannis Smaragdis (Greece)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0115849/

Wilde (1997), dir. Brian Gilbert (UK / Germany)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0120514/

Wojaczek(1999), dir. Lech Majewski (Poland)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0240221 RafaÅ, Wojaczek, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Rafa%C5%82_Wojaczek.

SÃ¥nger frÃ¥n andra vÃ¥ningen aka Songs from the Second Floor (2000), dir. Roy Andersson (Denmark / Sweden / Norway) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0120263/
CÃ©sar Vallejo

Before Night Falls (2000), dir. Julian Schnabel (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0247196/ Reinaldo Arenas

Pandaemonium (2000), dir. Julian Temple (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0210217/ Samuel Taylor Coleridge and William Wordsworth

Korreltjie niks is my doodaka A Mere Grain of Nothing My Death: A Life in Poetry - Ingrid Jonker (2001), dir. Saskia van Schaik (Netherlands)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0325700/

PiÃ±ero (2001), dir. Leon Ichaso (USA)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0261066/ Miguel PiÃ±ero

The Hours (2002), dir. Stephen Daldry (US/UK)

Sylvia (2003), dir. Christine Jeffs (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0325055/

The Libertine(2004), dir. Lawrence Dunmore (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0375920/ John Wilmot

ParÄ™ OsÃ³b ... MaÅ‚y Czasaka AFew People, A Little Time (2005), dir. Andrzej BaraÅ„ski (Poland)
http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0479258/
http://www.krystynajanda.net/scenariusze/1817
Miron BiaÅ‚oszewski

Iâ€™m Not There(2007), dir. Todd Haynes (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0368794/ Bob Dylan [] [] [] [] [] Fictitious Poets:

*Jean Cocteauâ€™s (France) myth of Orpheus Le Sang du PoÃ¨teaka The Blood of the Poet (1930)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0021331/ OrphÃ©e aka Orpheus (1950)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0041719/ Le Testament dâ€™OrphÃ©e, ou ne me demandez pas pourquoi! aka The Testament of Orpheus (1960)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0054377/

Winter Meeting (1948), dir. Bretaigne Windust (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0040971/ poetess Susan Grieve.

Il Segno di Venereaka TheSign of Venus (1955), dir. Dino Risi (Italy)
http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0046292/
Features Vittorio di Sicca in the role of an impoverished poet.

Pyaasa aka Thirst (1957), dir. Guru Dutt (India)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0050870/

Gertrud (1964), dir. Carl Theodor Dreyer (Denmark)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0058138/ one of the characters is a poet, Gabriel Lidman

Doctor Zhivago(1965), dir. David Lean (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0059113/

Ulysses(1967), dir. Joseph Strick (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0062414/ Stephen Dedalus is an aspiring poet, of course Satansbratenaka Satanâ€™s Brew (1976), dir. Rainer Werner Fassbinder (Germany)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0075165/ The protagonist is a poet.

Nostalghia (1983), dir. Andrei Tarkovsky (Soviet Union)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0086022/ Tells the life of a Russian poet Andrei Gorchakov.

Siekierezada(1983), dir. Witold Leszczynski (Poland)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0093968/ Based on the novel by EdwardStachura, the film tells the story of a young poet.

Barfly(1987), dir. Barbet Schroeder (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0092618/ Based on Charles Bukowskiâ€™s script, the film recounts the life of a poetHenry Chinaski.

Lawa. Opowiesc o 'Dziadach' Adama Mickiewiczaaka ATale of Adam Mickiewicz's 'Forefathers' Eve' (1989), dir. Tadeusz Konwicki (Poland) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0097721/
The protagonist is a revolutionary poet.

Mindwalk(1990), dir. Bernt Amadeus Capra (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0100151/ a dialogue between a scientist, a politician, and a poet.

Disparus (1998), dir. Gilles Bourdos (France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0156479/ Alfred Katz, a poet, had disappeared in 1938.

Oda Presernu aka Ode To The Poet (2001), dir. Martin Srebotnjak (Slovenia)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0288142/ The protagonist is a poet, Miha.

Moulin Rouge!(2001), dir. Baz Luhrmann (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0203009/ unfortunately it does have a poet in the plot...

Possession(2002), dir. Neil LaBute (UK/US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0256276/ two fictitious Victorian poets.

The Business of Fancydancing(2002), dir. Sherman Alexie (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0303313/ The protagonist is Seymour Polatkin, a gay Native American poet.

[] [] [] [] Documentaries:

Antonin ARTAUD Antonin Artaud, correspondance avec Jacques RiviÃ¨re (1977), dir. GÃ©rard Courant (France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0432475/ La VÃ©ritable histoire d'Artaud le momo aka The True Story of Artaud theMomo (1994), dir. GÃ©rard Mordillat & JÃ©rÃ´me Prieur (France) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0111650 Un SiÃ¨cle d'Ã‰crivains: Antonin Artaud (2000), dir. AndrÃ© Labarthe (France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0478925/ Plus, the best film which features Artaud as an actor is Carl TheodorDreyerâ€™s La Passion de Jeanne dâ€™Arc (1928) http://karagarga.net/details.php?id=37162

The BEAT GENERATION
The Beat Generation: An American Dream(1987), dir. Janet Forman

(US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0261558/
The Source (1999), dir. Chuck Workman
(US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0181833/

Charles BUKOWSKI The Charles Bukowski Tapes(1985), dir. Barbet Schroeder (France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt1019894/ The Ordinary Madness of Charles Bukowski(1992), dir. Vanessa Engle (UK)BBC documentary on the poet. Bukowski at Bellevue (1995)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0285468/ An archival poetry reading by Bukowski. Bukowski: Born into This(2003), dir. John Dullaghan (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0342150/

Leonard COHEN Ladies and Gentlemen, Mr. Leonard Cohen (1965), dir. Donald Brittain & Don Owen (Canada)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0126376/ Songs from the Life of Leonard Cohen (1988), dir. John Archer (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0819672/ Leonard Cohen: Printemps 96 aka Leonard Cohen: Spring 1996 (1997), dir. Armelle Brusq (France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0160457/ Leonard Cohen: I'm Your Man (2005), dir. Lian Lunson (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0478197/

Allen GINSBERG The Life and Times of Allen Ginsberg (1994), dir. Jerry Aronson (US) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0107411/ No More to Say & Nothing to Weep For: AnElegy for Allen Ginsberg(1997), dir. Collin Still (UK) http://opticnerve.co.uk/Ginsberg.htm Ginsberg - Egy kÃ¶ltÃ¶ a Lower East Side-rÃ³l aka APoet on the Lower East Side: A Docu-Diary on Allen Ginsberg (1997), dir. Gyula Gazdag (Hungary/US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0130947/ Documents an encounter between the Hungarian writer IstvÃ¡n EÃ¶rsi & Allen Ginsberg.

Jack KEROUAC Kerouac, the Movie(1985), dir. John Antonelli (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0089410/ Semi-documentaryâ€¦ Features appearances by poets Robert Creeley, LawrenceFerlinghetti, Allen Ginsberg, and others. What Happened to Kerouac? (1986), dir. Richard Lerner & Lewis MacAdams (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0090312/ On the Road with Jack Kerouac: King of the Beats (1994), dir. John Antonelli (US)http://www.allmovie.com/cg/avg.dll?p=avg&sql=1:36302

Gabriel Garcia LORCA Federico GarcÃa Lorca: Murder in Granada(1976), dir. Humberto LÃ³pez y Guerrahttp://www.imdb.com/title/tt0411388 Ciudad Natalaka Hometown:Federico GarcÃa Lorca (2000), dir. Eliseo Alvarez http://www.films.com/id/4480/Federico_Garcia_Lorca.htm

William SHAKESPEARE
In Search of Shakespeare(2003), TV series hosted by Michael Wood, PBS(UK) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0398492/
(i'm sure there're others... didn't really include "Shakespeare in love" in the biographical section... seems too much of a stretch)

The War Within: A Portrait of Virginia Woolf (1996), dir. Morten Bruus & JohnFuegi http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0286291/

Yakantalisa (1996), dir. Yair Lev (Israel)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0159839/ Israeli poet Hezy Leskly, http://www.ithl.org.il/author_info.asp?id=157

Jeg er levende - SÃ¸ren Ulrik Thomsen, digter aka I Am Alive (1999), dir. JÃ¸rgen Leth (Denmark)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0238329/

Ahmad Shamlou: Master Poet of Liberty(1999), dir. Moslem Mansouri (Iran)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0310597/ Iranian poet Ahmad Shamlou http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ahmad_Shamlou

Puisi tak terkuburkan aka A Poet (2000), dir. Garin Nugroho(Indonesia) http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0258056/
Acehnese poet IbrahimKadir.

Vinicius (2005), dir. Miguel Faria Jr. (Brazil)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0493175/

Noget om Halfdan(2006), dir. Carlo H.E. Agostoni & Jonas Poher Rasmussen (Denmark)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0765125/ Danish poet Halfdan Rasmussen

RenÃ© Char, nom de guerre Alexandre (2007), dir. JerÃ´me Prieur (France)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0969323/ There's also a film made by RC, Le Soleil des Eaux.

[] [] [] [] [] [] Films with references to poetry (but not adaptations of poems):

Dead Poetsâ€™ Society(1989), dir. Peter Weir (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0097165/

Dead Man (1995), dir. Jim Jarmusch (US)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0112817/

Bordeline (1930), dir. Kenneth MacPherson (UK)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0020701/ H.D. (Helda Doolittle) in the role of Astrid (HeldaDoorn).

The Ister (2004), dir. David Barison & Daniel Ross (Australia)http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0397477/ The movie alludes to Friedrich HÃ¶lderlinâ€™s poem Ister.

Oda do RadoÅ›ciaka Ode toJoy (2005), dir. Anna Kazejak-Dawid, Jan Komasa, & Maciej Migas (Poland)http://karagarga.net/details.php?id=45650
The filmâ€™s title alludes to the poem by Friedrich Schiller, Ode an die Freude.

ProÃ«me de Philippe Lacoue-Labarthe (2006), dir. ChristineBaudillon & FranÃ§ois Lagarde (France)

http://www.hors-oeil.com/CMS/component/page,shop.product_details/flypage,shop.flypage/product_id,18/category_id,1/manufacturer_id,0/option,com_virtuemart/Itemid,1/ The DVD includes a short film which is a recitation of FriedrichHÃ¶lderlinâ€™s poem Andenken.

~ cheers,

ela kotkowska

↑ Index

173. mIEKAL aND
Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Fri 22 Aug 2008

(Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two books to the Grafton Library.

Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library

Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books, "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.

“I said, what could they possibly do? They can’t arrest me for this… I was wrong,” Dalibor said.

Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or pay the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits she ignored.

With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor’s door and led her away in handcuffs.

While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police chief said they simply followed the law.

“None of this would have been necessary if she followed the agreement and returned the books,” said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.

Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.

“I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and not going to my court date,” Dalibor said.

Still, she isn’t planning on returning the books.

“I still have the books and I don’t plan to return them because they’re paid for now,” Dalibor said.

↑ Index

174. Ruth Lepson
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Fri 22 Aug 2008

did anyone mention Stevie, about Stevie Smith?

On 8/22/08 11:11 AM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Auster is relevant here, too. His noir is lyrical, but hard edges. & film > keeps coming up more and more often in his work. He rarely speaks of his > early poetry, but it's as good as Ashberry claims.
> i think about all the movies that should be made about
> poetry.
> lit flicks.
> something on Nabokov. Borgess.
> Nabokov would be Hollywood tempting in a Dr. Z sort of way.
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Daniel Zimmerman <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Thursday, August 21, 2008 10:14:58 PM
> Subject: Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
>
> http://www.hudsonreview.com/su08/su08hunter.html

↑ Index

175. steve russell
Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
Fri 22 Aug 2008

shouldn't we bag that word, Anti-Semitism. When I'm in a fight about Palestine, I'm almost always fighting with someone Jewish and European. I don't have a clue as to what Dorn said, but why not simply call him a bigot. I take it he didn't insult Arabs.

There's an excellent article on Mahmoud Darwish in the Economist, August 23.
I didn't think poetry was popular.
Live/learn.

By the mid-1980s, Darwish had sold well over a million copies of his verse. 20 volumes.

Here's a fragment from one of his poems, compliments of the Economist:

Write down!
I am an Arab
You have stolen
the orchards of my ancestors
And the land which I cultivated Along with my children
And you left nothing for us
Except for these rocks...

↑ Index

176. Elizabeth Switaj
Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Fri 22 Aug 2008

This, of course, raises the question of what books list members would be willing to go to jail for.

Elizabeth Kate Switaj
www.elizabethkateswitaj.net

↑ Index

177. David Chirot
Re: The List of Movies with Poetry
Fri 22 Aug 2008

Thanks for sending Daniel-- the Great Robert Ryan is terrific in "The Set-Up", as so very often in his relatively overlooked long career, in this film--

(who can forget his chillingly evil Claggett in Peter Ustinov's film of Poet, Novelist & Short Story writer Herman Melville's Billy Budd?-- and Terence Stamp as Billy; Stamp, who also plays "Toby Dammit" in Fellini's film of the Poe story "Never Bet the Devil Your Head" and turns up yet again in the Poet-Film Maker Pasolini's "Teorema?"--)

(the Fellini film is in a trilogy of Poe stories,called in English "Spirits of the Dead"; the others filmed are "William Wilson" with Brigitte Bardot and Alain Delon , directed by Louis Malle, in which a man is haunted/hunted by his double; and Roger Vadim's "Metzengerstein," in which the "family team" of Vadim's then-wife Jane and her brother Peter Fonda portray cousins with an incestuous yearning.)

"The List of Movies with Poetry--

(let alone the Lists themselves which exist in poetry--inside poems themselves as a famous one by Rimbaud of the "degenerated" forms of writing including crudely painted signs. children's book illustrations and the like which influenced him--)

Alongside "accumulation" there exist also the ever ongoing rhizomatic waters of poetry traveled by "The Drunken Boats" of poetry, those ships which Emily Dickinson called "books"--for "Voyages" Baudelairean among Symbols that are not in Books but exits as "a Forest"--and which can also be found not only the open eyes of a reader/writer, by those of the imagination--"To shut the Eyes is Travel"--or--to open them or not--perhaps even "sleep walking"--"I cross the room and am in the Spice Islands"-- much as Celine writes at the forefront of his "Voyage au bout de la nuit"--

" . . . Our journey is entirely imaginary. That is its strength . . .It goes from life to death. People, animals, cities, things, all are imagined. It's a novel, just a fictitious narrative. Littre (famous dicitionarian, like Webster) says so, and he's never wrong. . . . And besides, in the first place, anyone can do as much as much. You just have to close your eyes. 'It's on the other side of life."

A poem, a novel, each of which can be for Blanchot a "recit," like "Moby Dick" and "A Season in Hell"--writing, as "Movies with Poetry," is a voyage from one medium to another, and that one in itself "takes place in the dark"--where one opens the eyes in the dark and "sees life from the other side" as in a dream--or a form of Orphic Voyage through the Land of the Dead--

as though humans are stil watching the fire-flickering shadows on the walls of a cave themselves intermeshed and "moving pictures" among those already painted there on the Stone Screen- not only "predating and predicting the Cinema"--but also the Voyage of Writing--from the Stone Screen to the scroll to the tablets of clay, to papyri scrolls and the "leaves" of paper and books and then back again, to the Screen of Computers on which one is returned to the Scroll--and is i turn convertible by the PDF Creator into e-books--which "materialize again as paper leaved books"--which in turn may become movies with titles taken from the title of a poem in the book as a collection of poetry that previously had to be "scrolled down," on a previous screen to that of the movie theater--

so it is that writing and cinema are "wedded", as Melville writes of images emergent from those who observe the surfaces of waters--on and through which and by which images move --"water and meditation are wedded" " in the opening chapter of "Moby Dick"-- and are traveling-- and so readers and viewers may, like Narcissus, plunge into the waters of oblivion when "meditation and water are wedded," and die--not knowing that the countenance they encounter is their own--a "reflection" thought to be "meditation" which is simply one's own self-contemplation---- so writing like Ishamel's, is born alive to rescue floating on an empty coffin made for a perished and ocean buried friend--

Bobbing into view as he emerges from the pages and is seen on the "Silver Screen"-- like Poe's "MS. In a Bottle"--thrown overboard from a ship, like all Poe's ships--rushing into the Vortex, or the final sentences of Arthur Gordon Pym-- where awaits the shrouded figure much larger than any found among humans, with a skin of the whiteness of the South Pole snows.

so it is that writing survives these voyages on the way to the Cinematic version, by being thrown overboard as it were--onto the floating coffin of Ishmael, who writes the story of the "Whitenessnss of the Whale"-- and in the various MS of Poe's which also escape in various ways from a figure of Whiteness-- perhaps allegories of the "attack" of the journeys to "find" and "capture" or kill the Whale and the White Figure of the Whiteness of Snow--awaiting in the vast wastes of snow-- in a journey in which the Whiteness is the whiteness of the empty screen or page--which writing harpoons or har-pens--or har-pixels-- yet all the same, "Movies with Poetry"-- through overboard their own MS floating along to be found--among which are questions of "translation," as one "passes from one medium to another"-- passes from one "state of seeing"--reading--to another--"watching a film"-- which are themselves also various ways of "looking into" the differences these "states of seeing" "states of being"--and also "states of believing," in the sense of "seeing is believing"--a term often enough transferred to "reading is believing"--due to such phrases as "If it's not in writing, it never happened." In other words, the "willing suspension of disbelief" that is considered by many wise souls limited to the reading of fiction, is in fact also at the heart of all things written-- For--if only what is in writing "actually occurred," then writing immediately introduces an incredible freedom for lying-- Everything in writing could then be "nothing but a lie"--and of course it has through history very much been that writing conveyed close to nothing but lies, as writings themselves, whether or not truthful to begin with, pass through a continual "degeneration" of "versions" due to translations, synopses, interpretations, commentaries,forgeries and plagiarisms-- this "translation" occurred every time writings traveled from one "state of publication to another"--whether copied by hand from scrolls to codexes, and then from codexes to printed books and from printed books to virtual books-- at each step of the process translators are required who my be induced by any number of reasons to "edit" the texts to more suitably reflect the beliefs and ideologies of the day--hether those of the translator/scribe/typist/data entry worker or those of of their culture, religion, political or ethnic affiliations--along al these rhizomatic waters of writing writing is continually becoming something else --and that which is to have occurred in writing likewise is continually being rewritten, edited, censored, "improved," or "cast into a different form," with prose writings "poeticized" and vice versa-- and so it is with "Movies with Poetry"-- as "translations" at least in part-- The great Poet become Clergyman John Donne writes of a belief in which translation is actually the "translation to a better state" of existence itself--in which all humans participate-- all mankind is of one author, and is one volume; when one man dies, one chapter is not torn out of the book, but translated into a better language; and every chapter must be so translated; God employs several translators; some pieces are translated by age, some by sickness, some by war, some by justice; but God's hand is in every translation, and his hand shall bind up all our scattered leaves again for that library where every book shall lie open to one another.

which brings one back to Cocteau's saying that "the Cinema "shows Death at work."

That's why I think in considering "Movies with Poetry" Cocteau and Pasolini as Poet-Film makers--are among the most interesting of al in this regard--

As examples--in which the "trnalsation" pocess "works" but in very different ways than it may in works by others or in wiich poetry is in films and films in poetry--

"As unlikely as it seems—in the long history of the cinema, how many pictures, let alone boxing pictures, can have been based on a poem ?"

Jefferson Hunter writes in the article you sent--after describing the opening Title/credits sequence of "The Set-Up"--

(in Raging Bull, Robert De Niro as the retired former Middle Weight Champion Jake LaMotta becomes a reciter and writer of poetry, his recitations including

"Shakespeare and Budd Schulberg's" works, among others--Budd Sculberg wrote the original story and co-wrote the screen play for The Harder They Fall--Humphrey Bogart's last film, as a journalist despaerate for work who accepts the job of publicist for a "glass jaw" fighter, being built up as much as possible so that "the bigger they are the harder they fall"--meaning a wind fall for the gamblers--based on the tragic career of Primo Cannera--)

The dramatic opening of Hunter's Hudson Review article's second paragraph's "rhetorical question" is like the "screaming headlines" of a film trailer--with the white letters blasting at one out of the distance of the depths of "noir" dark screen--

(the later Stars Wars opening words in reverse-mimiced in Jenny Holzer's also Rienstahl-mimicing "Projections"----not going away, but "RIGHT AT YA"--)

"HOW MANY POEMS HAVE HAD A FILM MADE FROM THEM"--

the number must be immense-HUGE---!!

"For Whom the Bell Tolls"-- charge of the light brigade, "el dorado," the illiad, odyssey, "drive, he said," the canterbury tales" of the great poet-filmmaker Pier Paulo Pasolini--

"Les Bons Debarras" --the Quebecois film in which al the characters speak in rhyme in Joual-- but there is only ONE poem which has been filmed and has an NFL team (any major sports team) named for them, let alone a team that has won the Super Bowl--

The Baltimore Ravens,

the name chosen by popular vote by the good citizens of that fair city--, from:

THE RAVEN by E A Poe--

or as Carl Solomon , dedicatee of HOWL called it in a self invented joke aboutt "a poem abt mental illness"--"The Ravin'"-- where there is the "Tomb of Edgar A Poe" immortlaized in the poem of that name by Stephanie Mallarme--for the Municpal Monument Dedication-- also written of by Whitman, who was invited but could not make the dedication due to illness----

Baltimore-- the city where ironically Poe had died, it is, claimed due to being used as a "multiple-vote casting citizen" -- who was paid in liquor, some meager coins-- a common practice of the times-- though mysteriously in Poe's case, some now claim rabies was also involved in the Poet's raving and terrified death in a a public ward-- not delirium tremens has legend has had it for a centuryand a half-- death indeed by a a foaming version of a "Red Plague," as in Poe's famous story of that title-- perhaps a harbinger of that "Read Plague" which pursued him after death in the notorious and extremely effective "chaarcter assasination" of Rufus Griwswold's Poe Obituary--which has affected the American vision of Poe to this day-- this multiple vote-casting method was a common practice employed in many American cities of Poe's time-- which was the dawning of the era of such Lords of Urban Power and Corruption as Boss Tweed in NYC-- and later on by Mayor Daley the First in Chicago--affecting it is said even the National Election of 1960, won by Kennnedy the Urban Legend has it by the good citizens of Cook County, Illinois, where the mulitple-voting citizens had been voting in "multiple Elections through Multiples of Decades" as there is no voting limit on the Dead who vote at the Polls that Never Close in the Cemeteries of the County--

Thus the Dead Voters --obviously Poetry Lovers!!!--made sure of the Poetry and Prescence of Robert Frost at the Inaugeration of their favored candidate, John Fitzgerald Kennedy-- both Frost and JFK have had mumerous films made of them and their words---- documentaries and poetry filled ones as well as those in the fictional realms--

Here at the "Cinema of Catharsis" frequented by the personnages living, dead, fictional, ghostly, ghost written and posthumously writing of the "New Extreme Experimental American Poetry & Arts," one awaits such future Poem Entitled Cinema Epics as these:

"God of Battle" a prolonged and sweeping visionary 'Poetic masterpiece," from the title of the George Patton poem, and based on & explicating the life and poetry of the General, in which frequently are seen American Soldiers chanting his verses as they go into Battle-- 9with Iraq War Solider Poet Brian Turner perhaps being called upon for consultation and script writing and maybe even directorial assistance-- ?) * "Ascent of Lushan"*--from a 1959 poem by the Great Chairman Philospher and Poet Mao Ze Dong, written and directed by the director and his assitants who produced the Olympics Opening Ceremony, Bejing 2008--and starring a cast of thousands and hundreds of thousands--

"Il Pleurt sur la ville"- the title of this film is from the famous poem by Paul Verlaine (dedicated by Verlaine to Rimbaud, who the poet was at the time serving two years in prison for shooting in the wrist)

This "unique historical bio-epic-pic" presents Pol Pot as a Philosopher-Poet-King not unlike Mao, except that he preferred others' poetry to writing his own--

(ironically, the poetry of the former French Colonial Masters of "French Indo-China"--themselves heavily funded by the Americans, who a few decdes later heavily funded Pol Pot agsint the Vietnamese Invasion

this complicated Cultural heritage of Pol Pot's, who like Ho Chi Minh and a great many others from the former "French Indo-China" had studied at the Sorbonne-- is examined in the film alongside the huge influence since childhood of Camodian Buddhism on the development of the "bland and Invisible" former mediocre student known born and known as Saloth Sar, who emerged "seemingly out of nowhere" in 1975 as Pol Poet, leader of the Victorious Khmer Rouge

Pol Pot once remarked that in the 1950's that the Authorities "knew who I was, but not what I was"--

as a former student writes:

from: "The Diabolic Sweetness of Pol Pot"-- Soth Polin, Translation by Jeremy Colvin and Lavonne Leong

"In the beginning was the Word/and the Word was with God/and the Word was God./All things were made by Him/and without Him nothing was made. The Prologue of St. John

"At the time that Pol Pot was teaching me Verlaine, I had not yet learned to distrust sweet things. In 1957 , he was my French teacher, though later he claimed to have been a history teacher, in order not to appear to have been an advocate of the colonialists' culture. We knew him by the name of Saloth Sar, and nothing he said to us betrayed his engagement in politics -- until the day in 1962 when he left for the resistance. I need to revise my memory of that school year: Pol Pot was not just the disciple of Verlaine who, as a good philologue, knew how to win over his students with his explications de texte: "It rains in my heart as it rains on the city. From whence comes this languor that pierces my heart..." The Cambodian Buddhist Poet resident in the US

<http://muse.jhu.edu/mirror> and Pending the Outcome of his Trial for War Crimes, there is no doubt to be a Cinematic work produced regarding the works and life of the Pyschiatrist-Poet-King--Radovan Karadzic and perhaps some day a film of the Cantos by the American Poet-Philosopher-Propagandist-Traitor of Italian Fascist Radio Fame -- a complex and "ideogrammatic" work in which an attempt wil be made to convey the "Confucian side of Disney" which the Poet spoke of in a Paris Review Interview--

On Thu, Aug 21, 2008 at 7:14 PM, Daniel Zimmerman <[redacted]>wrote:

> http://www.hudsonreview.com/su08/su08hunter.html

↑ Index

178. steve russell

Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

Fri 22 Aug 2008

----- Original Message ----
From:
i feel her pain. seriously.

----- Original Message ----
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 1:36:33 PM
Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

(Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two books to the Grafton Library.

Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library

Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books, "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.

“I said, what could they possibly do? They can’t arrest me for this… I was wrong,” Dalibor said.

Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or pay the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits she ignored.

With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor’s door and led her away in handcuffs.

While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police chief said they simply followed the law.

“None of this would have been necessary if she followed the agreement and returned the books,” said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.

Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.

“I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and not going to my court date,” Dalibor said.

Still, she isn’t planning on returning the books.

“I still have the books and I don’t plan to return them because they’re paid for now,” Dalibor said.

↑ Index

179. susan dunn-hensley
Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Fri 22 Aug 2008

[Moderator: I am sorry about my last message. I accidentally pushed send before I finished typing.]

I agree with you. I am surprised that I was not arrested while writing my dissertation. lol

Seriously, though, I don't understand how the fine for the books can be so much more than the actual value of the items. It seems to me that she should have been charged the price of replacing the books. Charging almost two hundred dollars in fines seems quite excessive to me.

--- On Fri, 8/22/08, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, August 22, 2008, 4:47 PM

----- Original Message ----
From:
i feel her pain. seriously.

----- Original Message ----
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 1:36:33 PM
Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

(Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two books to the Grafton Library.

Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library

Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books, "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.

“I said, what could they possibly do? They can’t arrest me for this… I was wrong,” Dalibor said.

Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or pay the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits she ignored.

With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor’s door and led her away in handcuffs.

While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police chief said they simply followed the law.

“None of this would have been necessary if she followed the agreement and returned the books,” said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.

Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.

“I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and not going to my court date,” Dalibor said.

Still, she isn’t planning on returning the books.

“I still have the books and I don’t plan to return them because they’re paid for now,” Dalibor said.

↑ Index

180. steve russell
Woman arrested
Fri 22 Aug 2008

---

can't do the time, steal plenty of books. smuggle them in. have good friend's willing to keep tossing envelopes.

the real question is how much time.
all for the love of poetry.
am i that passionate?

↑ Index

181. Luke Schlueter

Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

Fri 22 Aug 2008

One's first reaction is naturally to rail against the "persecutors"--the Grafton public services. Upon further reflection, however, one can read Dalibor's dismissive attitude and actions as typifying a mindset that won't see the relationship between failed contracts and broken obligations on a small scale and and a sense of obligation and responsibility on a larger scale. I would bet that her one seemingly small act of ignoring the notices, court date, etc. reflects a much more comprehensive set of attitudes concerning her sense of place and community, debt and obligation.

Just a thought.

Luke

_____

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of steve russell
Sent: Fri 8/22/2008 5:47 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

----- Original Message ----
From:
i feel her pain. seriously.

----- Original Message ----
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 1:36:33 PM
Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

(Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two books to the Grafton Library.

Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library

Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books, "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.

"I said, what could they possibly do? They can't arrest me for this... I was wrong," Dalibor said.

Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or pay the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits she ignored.

With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor's door and led her away in handcuffs.

While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police chief said they simply followed the law.

"None of this would have been necessary if she followed the agreement and returned the books," said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.

Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.

"I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and not going to my court date," Dalibor said.

Still, she isn't planning on returning the books.

"I still have the books and I don't plan to return them because they're paid for now," Dalibor said.

↑ Index

182. Ismaelia al Sadiq
Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
Fri 22 Aug 2008

Several points:

Yes, poetry is "popular" - ne essential - in the arab culture. When Syrian poet Nizar Qabbani died, his funeral in Damascus was attended by crowds numbering at least in the 100s of thousands. Qabbani spoke not only radically and openly against Israeli occupation in the Territories, but held quite open and liberal views about the status of women in relation to the Qur'an and within Muslim society in general, that were widely admired, not only by arab women, but be a large percentage of arab men as well.

As far as Dorn's anti-Semitism, I recall him saying something in a Rolling Stock editorial that the paper had as its target a basically Semitic (Jewish) readership, because these, he said, were probably among the best educated persons in the country, and probably were majoral in number of the few that would even appreciate the paper's basic point-of-view.

About Muslim culture, he noted, as far as I know, only the single instance in his recent volume of interviews, that it is a severe mistake by the US State Department that regards Muslim politics as secular, rational and negotiable. That it is based instead solely on religious sentiment.

At any rate, I doubt that anything Dorn said about either Jews or Muslims can come up to his persistently negative assessments and assertions about Rome through history and the position of the Catholic Church vis-a-vis politics and economic development as well as religion (and all related topics, including everything from pro-fascist stances during and post-WWII, to negation of women's right, bitter homophobia, etc) during the years of his writing career.

Dorn also bore the brunt of controversy in a spate of letters to Exquisite Corpse related to sexist comments he made to a Grad student in Denver, and much later, on this list, for his own alleged homophobia. So,

he was no angel. He showed Max Douglas how to shoot up. Max subsequently OD'd on heroin at age 21. Not Dorn's responsibility, clearly, but . . . not the wisest sort of instruction to provide one of that day's hot new youths, either.

BTW, just as a point of correction, arabs are Semites, too. The division of Semities, arabs and jews, came later, with the split between Ibrahim's sons, Itzak and Isma'il. At the celebration at the weaning of Itzak, Isma'il is seen making mock of the ceremony, and is cast out with his Egyptian mother Hagar to wander the lands near Beersheba. His ancestors eventually become first, the Bedouin tribes, and thereafter, the arabic speakers that populated all the lands east of Palestine.

Finally, those rocks that Dariwsh mentions, that were all the Israelis left for the Palestinians, after stealing their orange groves, olive orchards, and dispersing the Palestinians into now-permanent exile, are still there. There are lots of them. Palestinian teenagers use them as weapons against the incursion of Israeli tanks. Yellowish-grey, not too heavy, like moon rocks.

They have them in Iraq as well. Villagers use them against persistent and unwarranted attacks by US and British soldiers. A rather hopeless proposition, it would seem, at first. But, then, what would you rather fight with - a reliable rock whose substance was made by and thus has the divine properties of Allah, or an M-16 that probably isn't going to work properly, because of contractural difficulties leading to poor manufacture?

The fact that such rocks still rely on inherent qualities of creation in order to attain to and hold their status as "objects", make them far superior as weapons, as against rifles, which, we all know, are, like fountain pens or vacuum cleaners, merely devisive, and made only to kill. But, kill what? You cannot kill the spirit that lives and guides all things in accordance with the ethic that reveals the position of each individual thing in relation to all others, as the always penultimate situation.

This is the Whirlwind of Speaking that is testamental to Allah's presence, still and centered, in the midst of everything. Jews call this "malbush" - clothes - or, as birdsong hidden in the leaves of morning trees. Sublime perception of beauty, unforeseen.

I state these things, just to make clear that "popular" isn't quite the proper word to employ in beginning to determine the value of poetry in the Muslim world. It is part of an overall life force, a vitalism, that is completely gone dead in the West.

The opening of the throat, the voice, the song. The hearing's always heard, the word of God obeyed, but the question always remains: can you spot the bird? al-Sadiq.

_____ Get ideas on sharing photos from people like you. Find new ways to share.
http://www.windowslive.com/explore/photogallery/posts?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Photo_Gallery_082008

↑ Index

183. Geraldine Monk

Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

Fri 22 Aug 2008

But it is a form of theft - and what's more it's not thieving from some faceless multinational chain but from a local library which is a community service therefore it's thieving from everyone who would like to access those books and now can't. I found her cavalier attitude to the library worthy of arrest - especially as she still refuses to return the books - but maybe the handcuffs were a bit heavy handed!

So good on Wisconsin for taking your library books seriously and trying to protect them for everyone.

Geraldine

----- Original Message -----
From: "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 6:36 PM
Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

(Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two books to the Grafton Library.

Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library

Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books, "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.

“I said, what could they possibly do? They can’t arrest me for this… I was wrong,” Dalibor said.

Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or pay the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits she ignored.

With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor’s door and led her away in handcuffs.

While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police chief said they simply followed the law.

“None of this would have been necessary if she followed the agreement and returned the books,” said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.

Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.

“I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and not going to my court date,” Dalibor said.

Still, she isn’t planning on returning the books.

“I still have the books and I don’t plan to return them because they’re paid for now,” Dalibor said.

↑ Index

184. Dale Smith
Mandel on Dorn
Sat 23 Aug 2008

Tenney, why don't you just look up Tom Mandel's edress in the list archives and ask him about it, since you mention him here? Better yet, why not make more accurate uses of the search function offered by this fantastic listserv....

Dale

Dale

> Date: Thu, 21 Aug 2008 21:43:10 -0700
> From: Tenney Nathanson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Dorn and anti-semitism on the Poetics list?
>
> sorry if this is stirring up old whatevers, but I recall a pretty lengthy series of posts on the list, maybe 5-10 years ago, on anti-semitic streak in Dorn (among other things I remember Tom Mandel offering to punch Dorn in the face if he ever saw him--maybe that will jog someone's memory!). Anyway a quick search of the list archive didn't turn up anything, so I'm wondering if anybody can lay hands on the pertinent posts or range of dates. I'm trying to direct a friend to the discussion.
>
> thanks for any help,
>
> Tenney
>
> ---

↑ Index

185. teersteeg

Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

Sat 23 Aug 2008

Listees whose minds incline toward the devious will note this method for obtaining books (rare or out-of-print) from the library: check out the book(s) you want to keep, report them as lost, then pay the going rate.

I've never done this of course but recall the tip from an How-To book I found in the library some time ago.

regards,
bruno ;-)

----- Original Message ----
From:
i feel her pain. seriously.

----- Original Message ----
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 1:36:33 PM
Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

(Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two books to the Grafton Library.

Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library

Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books, "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.

“I said, what could they possibly do? They can’t arrest me for this… I was wrong,” Dalibor said.

Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or pay the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits she ignored.

With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor’s door and led her away in handcuffs.

While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police chief said they simply followed the law.

“None of this would have been necessary if she followed the agreement and returned the books,” said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.

Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.

“I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and not going to my court date,” Dalibor said.

Still, she isn’t planning on returning the books.

“I still have the books and I don’t plan to return them because they’re paid for now,” Dalibor said.

↑ Index

186. steve russell
Island
Sat 23 Aug 2008

In response to Elizabeth's question, how 'bout this one: which book or books to take with you on a desert island, or maybe, hm, a bomb shelter.
I'd be willing to go to jail for Rimbaud's Season in Hell.
Celine's Journey to the end of the night.

A fair chunk of Rilke.
Perhaps W.B. Keckle's Sanskript of The Body
Perhaps Leaves of Grass.
Something by Michael Bukhard.
Maybe Merwin's The Lice.
Possibly some early Creeley.
Auster's collected poems.
Heidegger's Poetry Language Thought.
The Journal of the Albion Moonlight, Kenneth Patchen.
Facing the Music, short stories by Larry Brown.
I'd prefer a soft, Federal jail, if possible. My lawyer's on call.

↑ Index

187. Factory School

New from Factory School -- Blind Witness: Three American Operas

Sat 23 Aug 2008

Blind Witness brings together three libretti written in the early 1990s by poet Charles Bernstein for composer Ben Yarmolinsky. Bernstein & Yarmolinsky's trilogy combines vernacular American lyrics with vernacular social forms. Blind Witness News uncannily mimics the format of the eleven o'clock evening news with segments for international and local news, weather, business news, and sports. Then, as now, the dark undertone is war. The Subject, at times elegiac, at times parodic, sets a psychoanalytic session to music, its central character, Jenny, subject to the sometimes solicitous, sometimes menacing probes of her doctors. The Lenny Paschen Show focuses on Lenny, the Kamikaze King of Comedy, a late night talk show host at the edge of his career, pushing his schtick to the limit. His guests include a cross-over singer, a show biz legend, and a rising star, along with his sidekick announcer Bud Dickie, an inflatable ventriloquist's dummy.

When Blind Witness News was first performed in 1990, Allan Kozinn of The New York Times heralded a new voice in opera: “"Mr. Bernstein's libretto catches with near perfection the stock verbal moves — the forced laughter, empty banter, catch-phrases and cutesy segues — in which television news reports are cushioned.” Working in the tradition of Brecht & Weill and Stein & Thomson, Bernstein & Yarmolinsky have created three operas where biting social critiques dissolve into comic riffs, then lyric arias.

http://www.factoryschool.com/pubs/blindwitness/

Now available at a discount direct from Factory School:

Paper: $15
Cloth: $30
Signed: $50

http://www.factoryschool.com/pubs/order.html

Factory School's discounted price includes shipping to the continental USA. Individuals only. Limited time offer.

For more info, please write to editors at factoryschool.org

++++++++++++

Blind Witness @ PennSound

In conjunction with the publication of Blind Witness, PennSound has made available complete recordings of Blind Witness News and The Subject & video from the launch performance in New York. (The Lenny Paschen Show will be available soon.)

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Yarmolinsky.html

↑ Index

188. steve russell
insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Sat 23 Aug 2008

---

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but I love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark, severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
& since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind

of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

↑ Index

189. steve russell
reading while locked up
Sat 23 Aug 2008

---

again, no blog. & it occured to me that i didn't mention any women writers to read in jail. Louise Gluck's Averno, at least that much by her, as well as the collected poems of Alice Notley. & perhaps some Plath, although I'm not sure because her technique doesn't help me sleep or meditate or ease into a given work of hers despite how much I admire her technique. is it just me, or does that photo of Sillman look like a bunch of mugs i've seen in the post office? back in the day.

↑ Index

190. angela vasquez-giroux
Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Sun 24 Aug 2008

I understand the desire to possess books--esp. the ones so dear to us that are otherwise far beyond our budget. But isn't it selfish--taking those rare, out-of-circulation books away from everyone else, too? I suppose this is why large libraries, and university libraries, have those guarded "special collections" reading rooms.

This is all sort of sad--the cavalier attitude that contracts are worthless, that there are no consequences, etc. It seems so American, makes so much sense in light of spiraling consumer debt, home foreclosures, and on and on. Where's all the accountability gone?

↑ Index

191. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Sun 24 Aug 2008

---

when i was a kid i stole lots of books from the library

one day my mother collected em all and returned them they told her she'd have to just leave them in front of the building for if they brought them inside they'd have to arrest her it's a federal thing..... ah the trouble we cause our MOMS

recently i wanted to take a film out of the library one copy was reported to be available but alas unavailable because it was either stolen or never returned that's not so kosher since i nor any one else can now access it

On Sat, 23 Aug 2008 02:04:32 +0100 Geraldine Monk
<[redacted]> writes:
> But it is a form of theft - and what's more it's not thieving from > some > faceless multinational chain but from a local library which is a > community > service therefore it's thieving from everyone who would like to > access those > books and now can't. I found her cavalier attitude to the library > worthy of > arrest - especially as she still refuses to return the books - but > maybe
> the handcuffs were a bit heavy handed!
>
> So good on Wisconsin for taking your library books seriously and > trying to > protect them for everyone.
>
> Geraldine
>
>
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 6:36 PM
> Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
>
>
> (Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)
>
> Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
> "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

>
> http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html
>
>
> GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two > books to the Grafton Library.
>
> Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library
>
> Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books,
> "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.
>
> “I said, what could they possibly do? They can’t arrest me for this…
> I
> was wrong,” Dalibor said.
>
> Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone > calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who > issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or > pay > the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits > she > ignored.
>
> With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor’s door and > led her away in handcuffs.
>
> While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police > chief said they simply followed the law.
>
> “None of this would have been necessary if she followed the > agreement
> and returned the books,” said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.
>
> Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.
>
> “I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and > not going to my court date,” Dalibor said.
>
> Still, she isn’t planning on returning the books.
>
> “I still have the books and I don’t plan to return them because > they’re paid for now,” Dalibor said.

> guidelines
>
>
>

↑ Index

192. angela vasquez-giroux
Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Sun 24 Aug 2008

The fine is for taking the books away from other readers. Libraries struggle for funding--millages for libraries in my state are the first to get the "no" vote each election cycle. Just as lawsuits ask for "pain and suffering" damages, the libraries too have to build that in--each patron who doesn't get to read those books while they're being held up by another patron, and the potential fallout: no longer using the libraries (when libraries depend on grants showing how many patrons they've had, and get a certain number per patron, any lost customer is incredibly costly), bad word of mouth, etc.

On Fri, Aug 22, 2008 at 6:10 PM, susan dunn-hensley
<[redacted]>wrote:

> [Moderator: I am sorry about my last message. I accidentally pushed send before I finished typing.]
>
> I agree with you. I am surprised that I was not arrested while writing my dissertation. lol
>
> Seriously, though, I don't understand how the fine for the books can be so much more than the actual value of the items. It seems to me that she should have been charged the price of replacing the books. Charging almost two hundred dollars in fines seems quite excessive to me.
>
> --- On Fri, 8/22/08, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:
> From: steve russell <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Friday, August 22, 2008, 4:47 PM
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From:
> i feel her pain. seriously.

----- Original Message ----
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 1:36:33 PM
Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

(Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two books to the Grafton Library.

Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library

Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books, "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.

"I said, what could they possibly do? They can't arrest me for this... I was wrong," Dalibor said.

Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or pay the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits she ignored.

With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor's door and led her away in handcuffs.

While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police chief said they simply followed the law.

"None of this would have been necessary if she followed the agreement and returned the books," said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.

Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.

"I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and not going to my court date," Dalibor said.

Still, she isn't planning on returning the books.

> "I still have the books and I don't plan to return them because they're paid for now," Dalibor said.

↑ Index

193. Jennifer Karmin
JOB: Northwestern University
Sun 24 Aug 2008

Northwestern University

The Department of English is seeking applications for an Artist in Residence, a two-year appointment, renewable for two additional three-year terms (total of eight years), to start September 2009.

This position is for a poet who meets four criteria: 1) significant creative publication, 2) critical expertise in poetry & prosody, 3) acquaintance with criticism & technical analysis in prose genres, as well as the ability to teach fiction or creative nonfiction reading-and-writing courses, 4) experience teaching both creative & literature courses in a curriculum with a strong reading & analytic component.

Cover letter should be specific about your involvement in 2), 3), & 4) & should include names of referees, at least one of whom can comment on teaching. Please send letter, c.v., & a writing sample of five poems not to exceed ten pages in total (no books or complete MSS at this time) by November 3 to: Mary Kinzie, Director of Creative Writing, Department of English, Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois 60208.

Applications from women & members of minority groups are strongly encouraged.

↑ Index

194. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Sun 24 Aug 2008

In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming a novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually. the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with an off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."

Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit" of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire at the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:

> i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but I love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark, severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
> & since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
> From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
> Nothern Lights
> These are the words
> that do not survive the world. And to speak them
> is to vanish
> into the world. Unapproachable
> light
> that heaves above the earth, kindling
> the brief miracle
> of the open eye-
> and the day that will spread
> like a fire of leaves
> through the first chill wind
> of October
> consuming the world

> in the plain speech
> of desire.

↑ Index

195. David Chirot
Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
Sun 24 Aug 2008

Dear Ismaelia al-Sadiq

Thank you so much for your letter, for the rocks. for that which is, everywhere found yet hidden in plain sight--(or site/sight/cite-)--

I remember when the discussion re Dorn and the Mandel etc transpired-- it seems to return here in a cyclical pattern--

Thank you for writing of the funeral of Nizar Qabbani and what he and his works meant to so many--the death and funeral of Darwish show very powerfully what you right of as the vitality of poetry in the Muslim world.

These events, with so much else that continually happens every day, make me think of the so often quoted Jack Spicer line "Nobody listens to poetry anymore," as I often wonder if it is not the other way round, that poetry itself in America is not listening anymore, and not listening, does not see those things hidden in plain site/sight/cite.

At "The Insitution for Criminal Thinking," there was one window through which one saw daily a large tree degnerating into an organic ruin from diease, in which a bird had made a very large nest. In the devastating bleakness, this nest on autum days filled with light, held it. and ignited the blood of life. Winter came, the leaves dropped away, and the light now came from the South, a paler light, which the nest gathered and kept strong. Huge winds came that early winter, and I thought--what will happen if the nest is blown down? The light will go out, and in the waning bleakness, the harshness lacerate the veins. Standing by the window seeing the first light rushing into the nest hollow, I saw that the heart I had found there was my own, inside me. Two hearts regard each other, and then it is found that, yes, the nest will soon be gone, yet, having met, the hearts' regards will be exchanged everywhere for there are no boundaries. One morning, the harsh light and air trembling violently with the sounds of the chainsaw, the tree and the nest were cut down and carted away. Since then, I find them everywhere.

When everything is stolen and taken away, including movement, books, water, fuel, food, everything--and "nothing" but rocks and light remain, that is not nothing at all, but everything. And necessity, the motherfucker of invention, finds much with which to work.

Writing, art objects, virtuality--"form"--can all be made into prisons and Walls--very often are--

And so it is possible that "poetry" may not listen to or see that poetry you write of-- may even be "terrified" of it, as when rock throwers are fired at with tear gas, bullets,tanks, missiles fired from low flying planes-- or try as in many ways possible to "nullify" it--as has been done at every step of the way with the "The Poets of Guantanamo"--

Thanking you again for your profoundly moving letter, --

(and I shd note perhaps for Mr Dorn's benefit, not that he wil care to be sure!-- not that he is "lisetning"!----or is he?-- that the countless Priests, Nuns,Bishops murdered in Latin America were opposed to the monsters oppressing the Indigenous and poor--and today in the US are the last or only resort for illegal immigrants and their families to find shelter and support-- for example, in Postville, Iowa, where the local Parish has had to intervene and raise money and donations of food and clothing, a poetry "hidden in plain sight" may be found in the movement of persons and words--the illegal workers knowingly employed by the world largest Kosher met packing corporation in a plant repeatedly cited for appallingly substandard conditions and child labor, are arrested--and held in the building of the National Cattle Conference--people treated like animals working with animals specially treated when arrested are housed in a building where animals are discussed in terms of trade and slaughter-- their wives meanwhile are provided with electronic monitoring bracelets so they will not be able to "leave" nor to work, being illegal, so their children will starve along side the meat packing plant-- which their fathers are being punished for having worked in-- and in conditions which no other workers could bear the punishment of toiling in, let alone for the low wages which they had no choice but to accept-- in these movements among meat and substandard conditions ending up in the Cattle Conference building-- is not there a form of "Poetic Justice" being "meted" out-- and all of it for the sake of meat-- in a place where living humans and dead animals meet- on a perhaps "unequal footing"-- the dead animals being "legal" and the living humans not-)

On Fri, Aug 22, 2008 at 6:03 PM, Ismaelia al Sadiq <[redacted]> wrote:

Several points:

Yes, poetry is "popular" - ne essential - in the arab culture. When Syrian poet Nizar Qabbani died, his funeral in Damascus was attended by crowds numbering at least in the 100s of thousands. Qabbani spoke not only radically and openly against Israeli occupation in the Territories, but held quite open and liberal views about the status of women in relation to the Qur'an and within Muslim society in general, that were widely admired, not only by arab women, but be a large percentage of arab men as well.

As far as Dorn's anti-Semitism, I recall him saying something in a Rolling Stock editorial that the paper had as its target a basically Semitic (Jewish) readership, because these, he said, were probably among the best educated persons in the country, and probably were majoral in number of the few that would even appreciate the paper's basic point-of-view.

About Muslim culture, he noted, as far as I know, only the single instance in his recent volume of interviews, that it is a severe mistake by the US State Department that regards Muslim politics as secular, rational and negotiable. That it is based instead solely on religious sentiment.

At any rate, I doubt that anything Dorn said about either Jews or Muslims can come up to his persistently negative assessments and assertions about Rome through history and the position of the Catholic Church vis-a-vis politics and economic development as well as religion (and all related topics, including everything from pro-fascist stances during and post-WWII, to negation of women's right, bitter homophobia, etc) during the years of his writing career.

Dorn also bore the brunt of controversy in a spate of letters to Exquisite Corpse related to sexist comments he made to a Grad student in Denver, and much later, on this list, for his own alleged homophobia. So,

he was no angel. He showed Max Douglas how to shoot up. Max subsequently OD'd on heroin at age 21. Not Dorn's responsibility, clearly, but . . . not the wisest sort of instruction to provide one of that day's hot new youths, either.

BTW, just as a point of correction, arabs are Semites, too. The division of Semities, arabs and jews, came later, with the split between Ibrahim's sons, Itzak and Isma'il. At the celebration at the weaning of Itzak, Isma'il is seen making mock of the ceremony, and is cast out with his Egyptian mother Hagar to wander the lands near Beersheba. His ancestors eventually become first, the Bedouin tribes, and thereafter, the arabic speakers that populated all the lands east of Palestine.

Finally, those rocks that Dariwsh mentions, that were all the Israelis left for the Palestinians, after stealing their orange groves, olive orchards, and dispersing the Palestinians into now-permanent exile, are still there. There are lots of them. Palestinian teenagers use them as weapons against the incursion of Israeli tanks. Yellowish-grey, not too heavy, like moon rocks.

They have them in Iraq as well. Villagers use them against persistent and unwarranted attacks by US and British soldiers. A rather hopeless proposition, it would seem, at first. But, then, what would you rather fight with - a reliable rock whose substance was made by and thus has the divine properties of Allah, or an M-16 that probably isn't going to work properly, because of contractural difficulties leading to poor manufacture?

The fact that such rocks still rely on inherent qualities of creation in order to attain to and hold their status as "objects", make them far superior as weapons, as against rifles, which, we all know, are, like fountain pens or vacuum cleaners, merely devisive, and made only to kill. But, kill what? You cannot kill the spirit that lives and guides all things in accordance with the ethic that reveals the position of each individual thing in relation to all others, as the always penultimate situation.

This is the Whirlwind of Speaking that is testamental to Allah's presence, still and centered, in the midst of everything. Jews call this "malbush" - clothes - or, as birdsong hidden in the leaves of morning trees. Sublime perception of beauty, unforeseen.

I state these things, just to make clear that "popular" isn't quite the proper word to employ in beginning to determine the value of poetry in the Muslim world. It is part of an overall life force, a vitalism, that is completely gone dead in the West.

The opening of the throat, the voice, the song. The hearing's always heard, the word of God obeyed, but the question always remains: can you spot the bird?
al-Sadiq.

Date: Fri, 22 Aug 2008 11:30:15 -0700> From: [redacted]>
Subject: Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism> To: [redacted]> >
shouldn't we bag that word, Anti-Semitism. When I'm in a fight about Palestine, I'm almost always fighting with someone Jewish and European. I don't have a clue as to what Dorn said, but why not simply call him a bigot. I take it he didn't insult Arabs.> > There's an excellent article on Mahmoud Darwish in the Economist, August 23. > I didn't think poetry was popular.> Live/learn. > > By the mid-1980s, Darwish had sold well over a > million copies of his verse. > 20 volumes. > > Here's a fragment from one of his poems, compliments of the Economist:> > Write down!> I am an Arab> You have stolen> the orchards of my ancestors> And the land which I cultivated> Along with my children> And you left nothing for us> Except for these rocks...> > > > > ==========> The Poetics List

>
> ---
> Get ideas on sharing photos from people like you. Find new ways to share.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/explore/photogallery/posts?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Photo_Gallery_082008

↑ Index

196. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

Sun 24 Aug 2008

---

even as a petty thief i agree the books and films in library are for everyone so FINE away i say
On Sun, 24 Aug 2008 12:53:14 -0400 angela vasquez-giroux
<[redacted]> writes:
> The fine is for taking the books away from other readers. Libraries > struggle for funding--millages for libraries in my state are the > first to > get the "no" vote each election cycle. Just as lawsuits ask for
> "pain and > suffering" damages, the libraries too have to build that in--each > patron who > doesn't get to read those books while they're being held up by
> another > patron, and the potential fallout: no longer using the libraries > (when > libraries depend on grants showing how many patrons they've had, and > get a > certain number per patron, any lost customer is incredibly costly), > bad word
> of mouth, etc.
>
>
>
> On Fri, Aug 22, 2008 at 6:10 PM, susan dunn-hensley
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>

> > [Moderator: I am sorry about my last message. I accidentally > pushed send > > before I finished typing.]
> >
> > I agree with you. I am surprised that I was not arrested while > writing my > > dissertation. lol
> >
> > Seriously, though, I don't understand how the fine for the books
> can be so > > much more than the actual value of the items. It seems to me that > she should > > have been charged the price of replacing the books. Charging > almost two > > hundred dollars in fines seems quite excessive to me.
> >
> >
> > --- On Fri, 8/22/08, steve russell <[redacted]>
> wrote:
> > From: steve russell <[redacted]>
> > Subject: Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
> > To: [redacted]
> > Date: Friday, August 22, 2008, 4:47 PM
> >
> > ----- Original Message ----
> > From:
> > i feel her pain. seriously.
> >
> >
> >
> > ----- Original Message ----
> > From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
> > To: [redacted]
> > Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 1:36:33 PM
> > Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
> >
> > (Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)
> >
> > Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
> > "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year
> >
> > http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

> >
> >
> > GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return > two > > books to the Grafton Library.
> >
> > Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library
> >
> > Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books,
> > "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.
> >
> > "I said, what could they possibly do? They can't arrest me for > this… I > > was wrong," Dalibor said.
> >
> > Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two
> phone > > calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, > who > > issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or > pay
> > the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits
> she > > ignored.
> >
> > With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor's door
> and
> > led her away in handcuffs.
> >
> > While the police have been criticized for going so far, the > police
> > chief said they simply followed the law.
> >
> > "None of this would have been necessary if she followed the > agreement
> > and returned the books," said Grafton Police Chief Charles > Wenten.
> >
> > Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.
> >
> > "I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time
> and

> > not going to my court date," Dalibor said.
> >
> > Still, she isn't planning on returning the books.
> >
> > "I still have the books and I don't plan to return them because > > they're paid for now," Dalibor said.
> guidelines
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> guidelines
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

197. Geraldine Monk

Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

Sun 24 Aug 2008

Hello Susan, It's really irrelevant how much the book(s) cost because the books are not for sale and that's the whole point. She cannot say, as she did, that she is not now returning the books because she paid for them. She cannot pay and own something that was never being sold. The fine is nothing to do with the value of the books. She should return the books. They don't belong to her and it seems to me the fines reflect her bloody-mindedness and selfish attitude. The fine is fine it is her attitude that is excessively arrogant. Libraries are one of the best institutions the world has (they are a public service and free in the U.K.) but they only work on the trust of the users.

Geraldine

Susan wrote:

'Seriously, though, I don't understand how the fine for the books can be so much more than the actual value of the items. It seems to me that she should have been charged the price of replacing the books. Charging almost two hundred dollars in fines seems quite excessive to me.'

↑ Index

198. Ismaelia al Sadiq
Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
Sun 24 Aug 2008

Dear Mr. David,
Thank you for your kind response to my letter.

I recall a number of years past, overhearing a perfume dealer near the Grand Market in Damascus suggest to two customers he had taken to be American, but who in fact turned out to be Canadian - or so they said, although Americans in Syria often say that they're Canadian because they are afraid of admitting they are American - that many of the problems between our two cultures could be eradicated if they would only read the Qu'ran.

They countered that perhaps he should read the Bible. He said that he had. That he had studied it, not only in translation into Arabic, but that he had studied it in Hebrew, along with the Qabbala and many of its various commentaries.

Convenient enough, we think. The Israelis live next door. So Hebrew is "available." But the suggestion by these tourists / theorists / terrorists (to go along with your site / sight / cite) that studying what is considered locally to be the essential and determining religious / cultural text - they ignored his imprecations, and walked away - was simply a matter of further American arrogance taken to a level so individuated that even whatever largesse is left in American culture - Popeye the Sailor, for example, who at least is regardful of the fact that enmity is not a natural state - will fail to penetrate to a level of sympathetic plasma and merciful regard. We will have war, here, forever war, because people like these "Canadians" care little to learn of the pagan Cargo Cult that brought the Mecca Stone under image to verisimilar "truth" (yes, we have problems of our own . . . yet, we do maintain a real sense of 'aql 'amali, the "hobbling" brought on in combining the Speculative and the Practical in a single conscious spate of language), but that they care absolutely nothing for the language of creation and revelation, and tend to believe, for example, that Sufic "angelism" is just another fanatical Saracen throwback whose false imagination in terms of poetic belief and spiritual praxis simply excuses the knee-deep blood flowing through the Old City of Jerusalem in 1099.

As far as I can tell, poetry is read with complete abandon and necessity, from the Eastern shores of the Meditarranean, all the way to the South China Sea. So, the lack of western regard for it, is not just a Muslim problem. Or specifically as a religious problem attendant upon that. It is a problem of perception. The West has a problem with perception. A phenomenological problem. And since perception is related to knowledge, they have an epistemological problem. And as these two are related to creation - the Creative Project - they have problems with religious sensibility, sexuality in the largest sense, and with submission, overall.

And, where I come from, poetry is the ballasting force among these three. The Qu'ran is poetry in the way that Mr. Jack Spicer's poems are. Dictation. However, one has to make a space through which this can be received, where the three "live" intertwined, and are not so restricted by doctrinaire "rationality." - And this is exactly what the West is lacking. The poets of the West receive "signals", certainly, but they are intellectual and dry. "Canadian." Not really admitting who they most actually are.

Americans lie. Fulsomely. What Arab doesn't know that? The Great Satan. Of course, when a Muslim says this, he is actualy referring to Shaitan, "the trivializer". Which is the correct view. America is the great trivializer of that sense of spirit - which even the most devout Meccan acolyte knows has a primarily sexual energy base - through which language is more than just a slogan on a straw hat on the head of a tuba player in a Dixieland band at the Republican National Convention.

Is it any wonder that we love our lands - reduced as they currently are to a scatterment of moon rocks - and that their "dryness" is an American import? The first thing that both Bushes did in teir reign of terror across our lands, was to destroy our water sources. Bush I & II both bombed water facilities in and around Baghdad and other cities and towns of significant size, while at the same time, spading up the rich marshlands of southern Iraq, to make those waters equally unavailable.

Water is the first poetic. Need I say more? Why do you hate us so, that you need to parch our creative drive into those naturally violent reactions against your deadly stealth, through which your attacks can be ultimately justified?

Of this, I cannot understand.
Al-Sadiq

_____ Get thousands of games on your PC, your mobile phone, and the web with Windows®.
http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/108588800/direct/01/

↑ Index

199. William Slaughter
Notice: Mudlark
Sun 24 Aug 2008

New and On View: Mudlark Poster No. 76 (2008)

Some Thoughts on Naming and Poetry: An Essay by Francine Marie Tolf

Francine Marie Tolf is the author or BLUE-FLOWERED SUNDRESS, a chapbook published by Pudding House Press in 2007. Her poems and essays have appeared or are forthcoming in 5 AM, New Letters, Rattle, Southern Humanities Review, Under the Sun, and Green Hills Literary Lantern among many other journals. "Some Thoughts on Naming and Poetry" will appear at the end of LIKE SAUL, a chapbook of her poems that Plan B Press will publish in Fall 2008.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

200. George Bowering
Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Sun 24 Aug 2008

Tell us more about your being a petty thief . . . .

gb

On Aug 24, 2008, at 1:16 PM, steve d. dalachinsky wrote:

> even as a petty thief i agree the books and films in library are for
> everyone so FINE away i say
> On Sun, 24 Aug 2008 12:53:14 -0400 angela vasquez-giroux
> <[redacted]> writes:
> The fine is for taking the books away from other readers. Libraries > struggle for funding--millages for libraries in my state are the > first to > get the "no" vote each election cycle. Just as lawsuits ask for
> "pain and > suffering" damages, the libraries too have to build that in--each
> patron who > doesn't get to read those books while they're being held up by

another
patron, and the potential fallout: no longer using the libraries
(when libraries depend on grants showing how many patrons they've had, and get a certain number per patron, any lost customer is incredibly costly), bad word
of mouth, etc.

On Fri, Aug 22, 2008 at 6:10 PM, susan dunn-hensley
<[redacted]>wrote:

[Moderator: I am sorry about my last message. I accidentally pushed send
before I finished typing.]

I agree with you. I am surprised that I was not arrested while writing my
dissertation. lol

Seriously, though, I don't understand how the fine for the books
can be so much more than the actual value of the items. It seems to me that she should have been charged the price of replacing the books. Charging almost two hundred dollars in fines seems quite excessive to me.

--- On Fri, 8/22/08, steve russell <[redacted]>
wrote:
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, August 22, 2008, 4:47 PM

----- Original Message ----
From:
i feel her pain. seriously.

----- Original Message ----
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 1:36:33 PM

Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books

(Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year

http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html

GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to return two books to the Grafton Library.

Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library

Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the books,
"Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.

"I said, what could they possibly do? They can't arrest me for this... I was wrong," Dalibor said.

Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two phone calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to police, who issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials or pay the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor admits she ignored.

With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor's door and
led her away in handcuffs.

While the police have been criticized for going so far, the police chief said they simply followed the law.

"None of this would have been necessary if she followed the agreement and returned the books," said Grafton Police Chief Charles Wenten.

Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.

> "I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on time and
> not going to my court date," Dalibor said.
>
> Still, she isn't planning on returning the books.
>
> "I still have the books and I don't plan to return them because > they're paid for now," Dalibor said.
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> welcome.html

Bowering
A gerund and your friend.

↑ Index

201. William Allegrezza
Series A This Tuesday!
Sun 24 Aug 2008

Please come to Series A this coming Tuesday for another great literary reading.

August 26, 7:00-8:00 p.m.
    Hugh Tribbey
    Gina Frangello
  Jesse Seldess

The reading takes place at the Hyde Park Art Center at 5020 S.
Cornell, Chicago, IL (Hyde Park). Parking is available, and it is easy to access from both Metra and CTA.

BYOB.

Visit http://www.moriapoetry.com/seriesa.html for more information.

Jesse Seldess recently relocated from Chicago to Berlin. In Chicago, he co-curated The Discrete Reading and Performance Series with Kerri Sonnenberg. In Berlin, he organizes The Floating Series of exhibitions and events with Leonie Weber as well as continues to edit Antennae, a journal of experimental writing, music, and performance. Chapbooks of his poems have been published by Answer Tag Home Press, Bronze Skull Press, and the Chicago Poetry Project, and his first full-length book of poems, Who Opens, appeared on Kenning Editions earlier this year.

HUGH TRIBBEY is an assistant professor of English at East Central University in Ada, Oklahoma, where he teaches literature and creative writing. His poetry has appeared in "ixnay" and "Lost and Found Times", and the e-zines "The Dream People", "poethia", and "POTEPOETZINE", and Xstream. Work is forthcoming in "Flint Hills Review", and the e-zines "Red River Review", "The Dream People", and "Sidereality". He holds a Ph.D. in English from Oklahoma State University in Stillwater.

Gina Frangello is the Executive Editor of the award-winning literary magazine Other Voices and its new fiction imprint OV Books. Her short fiction has been published in many literary journals, including Swink, StoryQuarterly, Prairie Schooner , two girls review, Blithe House Quarterly and Fish Stories. She guest-edited the anthology Falling Backwards: Stories of Fathers and Daughters (Hourglass Books) and has been a freelance journalist for the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Reader. A graduate of the Program for Writers at the University of Illinois-Chicago, she has taught literature and creative writing at several Chicago universities and is the recipient of an Illinois Arts Council literary award and individual fellowship. She lives with her husband and their twin daughters.

↑ Index

202. susan dunn-hensley
Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Sun 24 Aug 2008

Geraldine

Good points. I am curious as to why the library did not merely declare the books lost and charge the replacement cost plus a fee for the librarian's time and trouble. Our local library and the library at my former university both charge a set fee and replacement cost for unreturned items. Replacing a rare book would be difficult, but popular fiction (such as the texts in question) could be replaced fairly easily.

--- On Sun, 8/24/08, Geraldine Monk <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Geraldine Monk <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, August 24, 2008, 4:30 PM

Hello Susan, It's really irrelevant how much the book(s) cost because the books are not for sale and that's the whole point. She cannot say, as she did, that she is not now returning the books because she paid for them. She cannot pay and own something that was never being sold. The fine is nothing to do with the value of the books. She should return the books. They don't belong to her and it seems to me the fines reflect her bloody-mindedness and selfish attitude. The fine is fine it is her attitude that is excessively arrogant. Libraries are one of the best institutions the world has (they are a public service and free in the U.K.) but they only work on the trust of the users.

Geraldine

Susan wrote:

'Seriously, though, I don't understand how the fine for the books can be so much more than the actual value of the items. It seems to me that she should have been charged the price of replacing the books. Charging almost two hundred dollars in fines seems quite excessive to me.'

↑ Index

203. Poetics List
Lawrence Braithwaite Obit -- On behalf of Aaron Vidaver
Mon 25 Aug 2008

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Aaron Vidaver < [redacted]>

BRAITHWAITE, Lawrence. 1963-2008. It is with great sorrow that we announce the sudden passing of Lawrence (Larry) Braithwaite at the age of forty-five on July 14, 2008 in Victoria, B.C. Beloved son of Hilton and Maxine (nee Hall) Braithwaite and brother to Jack, Sharron and the late Joey. He also leaves to mourn his Aunt Shirley and family, his niece Natasha, sister-in-law Stephanie and other cousins, relatives and friends. Lawrence was a writer and served in the armed forces for twelve years. He held a high regard for human rights. Funeral services will take place at la chapelle du Centre funeraire Cote-des-Neiges, 4525 chemin de la cote-des-neiges in Montreal at 9 a.m., Friday August

1 followed by the niche interment at 10 a.m. at the cimetiere Notre-Dame-des-Neiges, 4601, chemin de la Cote-des-Neiges, Montreal. If preferred, donations may be made in his memory to a charity of your choice. Larry, we will remember you always as you embark on your journey to peace. Published in the Montreal Gazette on 7/30/2008

http://www.legacy.com/CAN-Montreal/Obituaries.asp?Page=LifeStory&PersonID=114489869

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Lawrence_Ytzhak_Braithwaite

↑ Index

204. Poetics List

Re: Island [on behalf of James Beach]

Mon 25 Aug 2008

From:"AWAREing Press" <[redacted]>

What of science and psychology? Gotta be able to repair and create...
Anatomy & Physiology text Collected Jung, Freud, or headshrinker of choice Witchcraft and/or Druidism text
Quantum Physics text

For entertainment...
Asimov's guide to Shakespeare.
Collected works of either of the above.

Pragmatic am I.
James

---------- Original message from steve russell
<[redacted]>: ----------

In response to Elizabeth's question, how 'bout this one: which book or books to > take with you on a desert island, or maybe, hm, a bomb shelter.
> I'd be willing to go to jail for Rimbaud's Season in Hell.
> Celine's Journey to the end of the night.
> A fair chunk of Rilke.
> Perhaps W.B. Keckle's Sanskript of The Body
> Perhaps Leaves of Grass.
> Something by Michael Bukhard.
> Maybe Merwin's The Lice.
> Possibly some early Creeley.
> Auster's collected poems.
> Heidegger's Poetry Language Thought.

> The Journal of the Albion Moonlight, Kenneth Patchen.
> Facing the Music, short stories by Larry Brown.
> I'd prefer a soft, Federal jail, if possible. My lawyer's on call.
>

↑ Index

205. Obododimma Oha

urchin

Mon 25 Aug 2008

---

urchin:

http://edutitra.blogspot.com/2008/08/urchin.html

Obododimma.

↑ Index

206. Poetics List

"What one beholds of a woman is the least part of her" - Ovid [on behalf of Deborah Fries]

Mon 25 Aug 2008

From Deborah Fries <[redacted]>

Deborah Fries

[redacted]

WOMAN

a group exhibit

Tuesday, 2 September - Tuesday, 7 October, 2008

Opening reception for the artists:

Sunday, 7 September, 2008

7 pm - 9 pm

New York, NY

Today's popular culture has created a climate where there is scant recognition or respect for female modesty or achievement that isn't coupled with sex appeal. Being "sexy" is the ultimate accolade, trumping intelligence, character and all other accomplishments by a woman during the various stages of her life.

Popular culture has created a climate in which women are valued more for their appearance than for their contributions to society, forcing women of all ages to become willing, active and conscious participants in a tawdry, tarty, and very cartoon-like version of female sexuality.

"WOMAN" FusionArts Museum's first group exhibit by female artists examines this new female imperative with the assistance of the Roman poet Ovid who said:

"What one beholds of a woman is the least part of her",

reminding us that women are more than their Manolo Blahnik pumps.

***

Carrie Beehan, "Untitled", Acrylic on canvas with found objects and electric lights

About FusionArts Museum:

FusionArts Museum is located at 57 Stanton Street, between Forsyth and Eldridge Streets on the Lower East Side of NYC.

Gallery hours are: Sundays, Tuesdays - Fridays from 12 Noon to 6 PM.

The closest subway stops are the 2nd Avenue station on the F and V lines, Grand Street station on the B and D lines, Bleeker Street station on the #6 line. You may also take the M9 and M15 buses to Allen and Stanton Streets.

For more information, please contact the gallery at [redacted], or visit us on the web: www.fusionartsmuseum.org.

***

FusionArts Museum is part of Converging Arts Media Organization, a 501(c)3 visual arts organization and registered public charity that brings avant garde art and arts related events to NYC's Lower East Side.

FusionArts Museum is a contemporary art space in NYC that is dedicated to the exhibition and archiving of multidisciplinary or fusion art exclusively.

This exhibit was made possible by a grant from NYSCA - the New York State Council on the Arts, a state agency, and private donations.

↑ Index

207. amy king

Poetry Turn On! Mon, Sept 8th @ 8pm - St. Marks Church NYC presented by the Howl! Festival [for Nathaniel Siegel]

Mon 25 Aug 2008

Poetry Turn On !

Monday, Sept 8th, 2008

8pm to 10pm

St. Mark’s Church

131 East 10th
Street NYC 10003

Main Sanctuary

Poets:

Mahogany Browne, Regie Cabico, Steve Cannon, Michael Cirelli, Brenda Coultas, Sam Diaz, John Farris, Merry Fortune, Celena Glenn, Lois
Griffith, Bill Kushner, Jill Magi,

Filip Marinovich, Chris Martin, Stephen Motika, Amy Ouzoonian, Eve Packer, Kristin Prevallet, Shappy, Moonshine Shorey, Rachel M.
Simon, Tracy K. Smith, Stacy Szymaszek, Clare Ultimo

Coming together to read for you & representing:

The Bowery Poetry Club www.bowerypoetryclub.com

A Gathering Of The Tribes www.tribes.org

Nuyorican Poets Café www.nuyorican.org

The Poetry Project www.poetryproject.com

Poets House www.poetshouse.org

This event is FREE and Open to the Public !

Presented by the HOWL ! Festival

_____

Movies With Poems

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Poems To Do

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

↑ Index

208. Nicholas Piombino
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Mon 25 Aug 2008

A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and Company in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.

Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works. The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard, or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting to know a person.

Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,
Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

> In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming a novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually. the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with an off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."
>
> *Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead*

father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit" of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire at the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but I love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark, severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
& since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind
of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

↑ Index

209. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
Mon 25 Aug 2008

---

what do ya wanna know????

On Sun, 24 Aug 2008 15:41:01 -0700 George Bowering <[redacted]>
writes:
> Tell us more about your being a petty thief . . . .
>
> gb
>
>
> On Aug 24, 2008, at 1:16 PM, steve d. dalachinsky wrote:
>
> > even as a petty thief i agree the books and films in library are
> for
> > everyone so FINE away i say
> > On Sun, 24 Aug 2008 12:53:14 -0400 angela vasquez-giroux
> > <[redacted]> writes:
> >> The fine is for taking the books away from other readers.
> Libraries
> >> struggle for funding--millages for libraries in my state are the > >> first to > >> get the "no" vote each election cycle. Just as lawsuits ask for
> >> "pain and > >> suffering" damages, the libraries too have to build that > in--each > >> patron who > >> doesn't get to read those books while they're being held up by > >> another
> >> patron, and the potential fallout: no longer using the libraries
> >> (when > >> libraries depend on grants showing how many patrons they've had,
> and
> >> get a > >> certain number per patron, any lost customer is incredibly > costly),
> >> bad word
> >> of mouth, etc.
> >>
> >>
> >>

> >> On Fri, Aug 22, 2008 at 6:10 PM, susan dunn-hensley
> >> <[redacted]>wrote:
> >>
> >>> [Moderator: I am sorry about my last message. I accidentally > >> pushed send > >>> before I finished typing.]
> >>>
> >>> I agree with you. I am surprised that I was not arrested while > >> writing my > >>> dissertation. lol
> >>>
> >>> Seriously, though, I don't understand how the fine for the > books
> >> can be so > >>> much more than the actual value of the items. It seems to me > that
> >> she should > >>> have been charged the price of replacing the books. Charging > >> almost two > >>> hundred dollars in fines seems quite excessive to me.
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> --- On Fri, 8/22/08, steve russell <[redacted]>
> >> wrote:
> >>> From: steve russell <[redacted]>
> >>> Subject: Re: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
> >>> To: [redacted]
> >>> Date: Friday, August 22, 2008, 4:47 PM
> >>>
> >>> ----- Original Message ----
> >>> From:
> >>> i feel her pain. seriously.
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> ----- Original Message ----
> >>> From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
> >>> To: [redacted]
> >>> Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 1:36:33 PM
> >>> Subject: Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
> >>>
> >>> (Only in Wisconsin, good mugshot of the criminal..)

> >>>
> >>> Woman Arrested For Failing To Return Library Books
> >>> "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander" borrowed last year
> >>>
> >>> http://www.wisn.com/news/17258567/detail.html
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> GRAFTON, Wis. -- A woman has been arrested for failing to > return
> >> two > >>> books to the Grafton Library.
> >>>
> >>> Woman Arrested For Not Returning Books To Library
> >>>
> >>> Heidi Dalibor was arrested after she failed to return the > books,
> >>> "Angels and Demons" and "White Oleander", last year.
> >>>
> >>> "I said, what could they possibly do? They can't arrest me for > >> this… I > >>> was wrong," Dalibor said.
> >>>
> >>> Dalibor did not respond to four notices from the library, two
> >> phone > >>> calls and two letters. The library forwarded the case to > police,
> >> who > >>> issued a citation for Dalibor's failure to return the materials > or > >> pay
> >>> the fine. The citation included a court date, which Dalibor > admits
> >> she > >>> ignored.
> >>>
> >>> With arrest warrant in hand, police showed up at Dalibor's door
> >> and
> >>> led her away in handcuffs.
> >>>
> >>> While the police have been criticized for going so far, the > >> police
> >>> chief said they simply followed the law.

> >>>
> >>> "None of this would have been necessary if she followed the > >> agreement
> >>> and returned the books," said Grafton Police Chief Charles > >> Wenten.
> >>>
> >>> Dalibor paid her $170 fine and was released.
> >>>
> >>> "I completely take responsibility for not paying my fine on > time
> >> and
> >>> not going to my court date," Dalibor said.
> >>>
> >>> Still, she isn't planning on returning the books.
> >>>
> >>> "I still have the books and I don't plan to return them because > >>> they're paid for now," Dalibor said.
> Check
> >> guidelines
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> Check
> >> guidelines
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> Check
> >> guidelines
> >>>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >
>
> > welcome.html
> >
>

> Bowering
> A gerund and your friend.
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

210. David Chirot

Orwell's Diaries of 1938 on line as "today's date daily blog"

Mon 25 Aug 2008

---

*Media Talk: What George Orwell Wrote, 70 Years Later to the Day <http://www.nytimes.com/2008/08/25/business/media/25orwell.html?ei=5070&emc=eta1> * By NOAM COHEN George Orwell's copious diaries are now being published every day in blog form, exactly 70 years after they were made.

One of the stated purposes of this project is to present Orwell in a familiar and popular form to the electronic reader. A "doubleplusgood" idea as Orwell not only "remains" a great critic of the totalitarianization of language and the language of totalitarianism.

Works such as the "The Principles of Newspeak" Appendix to 1984 become not only "more frightening" today, but "most frighteningly," more familiar on a daily basis--so the use of the "daily blog" is a very intersting method of approaching his works as an introduction.

From "The Principles of Newspeak":

"No word in the B vocabulary was ideologically neutral. A great many were euphemisms. Such words, for instance, as joycamp (forced-labor camp) or Minipax (Ministry of Peace i.e. Ministry of War) meant almost the exact opposite of what they appeared to mean. Some words, on the other hand, displayed a frank and contemptuous understanding of the real nature of Oceanic society. An example was prolefeed, meaning the the rubbishy entertainment and spurious new which the Party handed out to the masses. Other words, again, were ambivalent, having the connotation "good" when applied to the Party and "bad" when applied to its enemies. But in addition there great numbers of words which at first sight appeared to be mere abbreviation and which derived their ideological color not from their meaning but their structure.

" . . . The name of every organization . . . was invariably cut down to the familiar shape; that is, a single, easily pronounced word with the smallest number of syllabus that would preserve the original derivation. In the Ministry of Truth {Propaganda} for example, in which Winston Smith worked, the Recrods Department was called RecDep, the Fiction Department FicDep . . . even in the early decades of the 20th century, telescoped words and phrases had been on of the characteristic features of political language; and it had been noticed thatthe tendency to use abbreviations of this kind was most marked in totalitarian organizations. Such words as Nazi, Gestapo, Comintern, Inprecorr, Agitprop. In the beginning the practice had been adopted as it were instinctively, but in Newspeak it was used with a conscious purpose. It was perceived that in thus abbreviating a name one narrowed and subtly altered its meaning, by cutting out most of the that associations that would otherwise cling to it. . . . . Comintern . . refers to something almost as easily recognized and as limited in purpose, s a chair or a table. Comintern is a word that can be uttered almost without taking thought, whereas Communist International is a phrase over which one is obliged to linger at least momentarily. In the same way, the associations called up by a word like minitrue are fewer and more controllable than those called up by Ministry of Truth. This accounted not only for the habit of abbreviating whenever possible, but also for the almost exaggerated care which was taken to make every word easily pronounceable."

A good reading/writing exercise (which can become almost '"second nature" at various moments of the day's involvement with such activities and the hearing also of such words--) is to follow the guidelines of Orwell's "Principles" by reversing, condensing, making ambiguous the meaning of a word until it is attached to a "good" or "bad" "ideological expression," and in turn, using the not the meaning, but the structure of a word to present its "ideological color."

The manipulation of words as independent of "meanings," and reliant on "structures," makes it far easier to create a language which controls thought. A word created with such a purpose and in such a manner, makes it impossible to think certain thoughts. The compounding of words split into fragments creates such easily pronounced and --what?--words as "vispo," "langpo," "CentCom," For example, "vispo"--hack off a hunk of "visual" and make a sandwich of it with a slice of "poetry"--and you have "vispo." Condiments of a few sorts and rolls or choices of wheat or white bread are available to be sure! It's fast food approach that "saves time" and "explaining" or "defining" or having to deal with such really troubling, complicated, time consuming things as thousands of years of discussion re "visual poetry." It also "immediately" conveys the speed with which, at the flick of the software program, , one may become a "vispoet," rather than al that boring "labor" and "study" involved with something that "visual poetry " sounds like.

(Note: I'm using "vizpo" or "vispo" as an example that's familiar to readers here, and because a firend of mine, himself a visual poet, often has asked me what and why I think "what" of the term "vispo," which is becoming almost as "universally used" as the terms it reminds me of via "close rhyming" and "associate thinking"------"Gizmo" and "Gitmo." Since various Gizmos are employed in thousands of Gitmos--perhaps a Newspeak neologism may come into use which expresses their interelationship as "Gitzmo." Which might --who knows after all--produce such further developments as "Blitzmo" and Glitzmo" which in a sense are already "hovering in the wings" of the Theaters of War, full ready to "make their entries, , assumes their postions, and perform their requisite roles.")

Also, there being no previous "vispo" in the strict sense, other than its "ancient," pre-digital "proto-forms," what is called "vispo" need only concern those works which are done in the very recent past. The creation of "new" "stars" and "masterpieces" is much easier when there is basically a dearth of "competing" discourses, histories, examples, artists."

In fact, "vispo" in a sense "colonizes" the space formerly inhabited by "visual poetry" and, in a real sense, "takes it over" "under the umbrella of new terminology." In this way, Orwell's acute perceptions of how language can be used to "form and control thought" regardless of the now meaningless former meanings of the amputated and compounded words, points the way towards the vast possibilities of all sorts of "formal devices" which can be put at the service of making "invisible" and opaque the "ideological meaning." By making "neutral" and "ambiguous" what had been too easily observed as contradictions and oppositions within a word or phrase, the word can be rendered meaningless and dependent on a "compound -context" which determines if it is "good" or "bad." This is a great aid in the reduction of thinking, which involves questioning, rather than simply repeating, or following, what the "leaders" "set the tone" for as the "immediate and unquestioning" reception of their version of the "Truth." Without realizing it, the "follower," or "Party member," or "citizen," is ACTING in a "willing suspension of disbelief" which is taken not as "mere fiction," but as "The Truth." In such a state, the "state of consciousness" of the actor, citizen, Party member, becomes AUTOMATIC--that is, it "immediately goes into action" without any doubts, any costly delay in questioning the meaning --let alone"'morality"--of what it is to be done and thought. In effect, this use of language is a form of "mobilization" of citizenry in a Permanent State of War--whether Poetry Wars, Culture Wars, Wars on Poverty, Wars on Drugs, and the War on Terror. In the latter instance, after all, what use would be the "thought provoking" and hence "time consuming" words of FDR, that "we have nothing to fear but fear itself?" In the War on Terror, the ONLY thing we have to fear is fear--to be so terrorized by terror that the only response is with --Terror. Of course, "our" terror is NOT terror, but "Homeland Security" or "the Right to Self Defense," and the "terror" is assigned to "terrorists only." Suicide bombers and uncontrolled, unaimed, "improvised" weapons are monstrous because they "kill innocent civilians. " The weapons used against these "terrorist barbarities" are "clean " and "smart," that is to say, "civilized" and "justified" by never killing civilians. ""Collateral damages" after all are not "people," but simply unnamed non-person who "met their fate" that day while on the way to market or school. That these non-persons might be considered "similar or equal to" the "innocent civilians" killed on their ways to market or school is "unthinkable. After all, such non-person collateral damage is the fault of the "terrorists" who are "inhumanly" using their neighbors as "human shields." To even suggest that there is a contradiction here, a blatant form of hypocrisy, a double standard, is of course "unthinkable," because literally in the language of Newspeak, words are "equally neutral" until assigned their positions in the battle between "Good" and Evil."Then, the same word may do "double duty" and the "double standard" become invisible in the "double talk" of Newspeak. In a strange way, then, one might think that "vispo" or "vizpo" is a "making invisible and soundless" what was previously known cumbersomely and with difficulty as that worn out anachronism "visual poetry." "Vispo" is more immediately accessible," which indicates that it is also "more easily and swiftly learned, with that that knowledge put immediately into production in creating the new product lines, best sellers, "sexy models" and "hottest intellectual properties." At the same time, none of these "Newspeak" interventions does away with the "Author." For, if al things are "the same until assigned their place in the Party hierarchy," the only distinguishing feature of a "leader," among "non original artists" and "non original" products made by "boring" work, and who makes it all appear so exciting, so glamorous that you just can't help yourself, you want to "sign up" and "join," is the one whose "signature" insures and guarantees that the whole "production" and "product line" is "good," and "good for you as it is Good for Me." And this person of course is none other than the, as it used to be said, " Author of my days," now no longer "Our Father," but Big Brother and/or Sister. That is why the "signature" of an Author before/after a piece of writing makes "all the difference." If the Author is the Great So-and-So, every word will be seen and heard as of "great significance," analyzed, commented on, and "furnish room" for discussions, symposia, web sites, speaking tours, and the Living Enshrinement of Fame, all due to this signature, this mark, this sign, of Authority. Othrwise, the exact same words written by "somebody never heard of" or "obscure, minor" of course will be "immediately forgotten," if not on certain necessary occasions being first detained, "interrogated" and then '"disappeared.'" In that way, any previous "ambiguity, uncertainty, indeterminacy" will be "decided" by Authoritative Judgement, "chance operations" or simply by the "erasure" of what previously had been suspended in the detention cells "under erasure," those limbos of the lost on their ways to submergence in the Waters of Oblivion, there to be consumed by the piranhas of shredding machines and delete keys. For in the stead fast aussurance of Authority, the Homeland Security of "our way of lifeand language, thought and action, our Freedom and Happiness," will be "automatically" "taken care of." As will the immediate erasure and disappearnce of all those who oppose it here in this best of all possible worlds.

↑ Index

211. Gloria Mindock

listing

Mon 25 Aug 2008

A Celebration of Somerville, MA. Small Literary Presses
Ibbetson Street Press and Cervena Barva Press Readings
Somerville Library/Central Branch
79 Highland Avenue
Somerville, MA 02143

Thursday, September 25, 2008
6:30-8:30 PM
Free

Ibbetson Street Press Authors
Lisa Beatmen will read from Manufacturing America: Poems from the Factory Floor
Gloria Mindock will read from Blood Soaked Dresses
Richard Wilhelm will read from Awakenings

Cervena Barva Press Authors
Mary Bonina will read from Living Proof
Doug Holder will read from The Man in the Booth in the Midtown Tunnel
Catherine Sasanov will read from Tara

Author Bios

Lisa Beatman manages adult education programs in Boston’s South End. Her most recent book, Manufacturing America: Poems from the Factory Floor (Ibbetson Street Press 2008), was an April/May "Pick of the Month" by the Small Press Review, and was featured in the Boston Globe. The lives of today's immigrant factory workers are the guts and sinew of these poems. Her work has appeared in Lonely Planet, Lilith Magazine, Political Affairs, Hawaii Pacific Review, Rhino, Manzanita, Alimentum, European Judaism, and the Boston Globe Magazine. Her first book was Ladies' Night at the Blue Hill Spa (Bear House Publishing 2002)."

Gloria Mindock is editor and publisher of Cervena Barva Press and editor of the Istanbul Literary Review based in Turkey. From 1984-1994, she edited the Boston Literary Review/ BLuR. She is the author of two chapbooks, Doppelganger (S. Press) and Oh Angel (U Soku Stampa) and three poetry collections, Blood Soaked Dresses (Ibbetson St. Press, 2007), Nothing Divine Here (U Soku Stampa, 2008) and Whiteness of Bone, forthcoming. Gloria has been published in numerous journals including UNU: Revista de Cultura and Citadela in Romania with translations by Flavia Cosma, Arabesques, Poesia, Phoebe, Poet Lore, Blackbox, River Styx, Bogg, Ibbetson St., WHLR, and numerous anthologies.

Richard Wilhelm holds a B.A. in journalism but currently works as a mental health counselor at McLean Hosipital. He is a painter who has exhibited in a solo show at the Gallery at the Piano Factory and in group shows elsewhere. He was one of the three co-editors of City of Poets, an anthology of 18 Boston Poets, and serves as the art editor of Ibbetson Street Press. His poems have been published in, Spare Change, the Somerville News, Ibbetson Street and Crooked River Press, which quoted one poem in full in the 2002 Poet's Market.

Mary Bonina's chapbook Living Proof was published last year by Cervena Barva Press. Her poetry is included in the public art project BOSTON CONTEMPORARY AUTHORS, in many journals, and in three anthologies, most notably, Voices of the City, a project of the Rutgers University Center for Ethnicity, Culture, and the Modern Experience (Hanging Loose). She is author of another poetry chapbook, Lunch in Chinatown, and the memoir, My Father's Eyes excerpted in Gulfstream and Hanging Loose. Bonina holds an MFA from the Program for Writers at Warren Wilson College, has been awarded fellowship residencies at the Vermont Studio Center, the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts, and she's a member of the Writers Room of Boston, serving on the Board of Directors.

Doug Holder is the founder of the Ibbetson Street Press of Somerville, Mass. He is the arts editor for The Somerville News, the host of the Somerville Community Access TV show: "Poet to Poet: Writer to Writer," the co-founder of The Somerville News Writers Festival, and the co-founder of the Somerville-based literary group the Bagel Bards. His poetry and prose has appeared in: The Boston Globe Magazine, STUFF, Rattle, Home Planet News, Cafe Review, the new renaissance, Poesy, Istanbul Literary Review, and many others. His new poetry collection is The Man in the Booth in the Midtown Tunnel (Cervena Barva Press). He holds an M.A. in Literature from Harvard University.

Poet Catherine Sasanov is the author of Traditions of Bread and Violence (Four Way Books) and All the Blood Tethers (Northeastern University Press), as well as two chapbook collections: What's Left of Galgani (Franciscan University Press) and Tara, which was released in April by Èervená Barva. Her theater work includes the libretto for Las Horas de Belén: A Book of Hours, commissioned by Mabou Mines. Sasanov will have a residency this fall at Blue Mountain Center, where she hopes to finish a new book of poems, Had Slaves. The manuscript is rooted in her discovery of slaveholding among her Missouri ancestors, and her research into what happened to their slaves.
---------- Ibbetson Street press was founded in 1998 in Somerville, Mass by Doug Holder, Dianne Robitaille and Richard Wilhelm. It was named for the original location in Somerville (33 Ibbetson Street) where Holder and Robitaille resided from 1994 to 2001. Since then it has published 23 issues of "Ibbetson Street," and over 50 collections of poetry. Ibbetson poets have been featured on "Writer's Almanac" (NPR), WBZ radio, Verse Daily, The Boston Globe, WGBH, Provincetown Radio (Poets Corner), and many other venues. Many of our collections were picks of the month in the "Small Press Review." Ibbetson titles are collected and subscribed to by major university libraries including: Harvard University, Yale University, Brown University, and the University of Buffalo.
---------- Cervena Barva Press was founded in April, 2005 by Gloria Mindock. The press publishes poetry and fiction chapbooks and books, plays, and poetry postcards from writers in the USA and Internationally. It accepts work by solicitation only but welcomes queries especially from Central and Eastern Europe. Once a year, the press holds a fiction and poetry chapbook contest. The press has published work by Gary Fincke, Eric Pankey, Simon Perchik, Michael Burkard, Catherine Sasanov, John Minczeski, Lucille Lang Day, Flavia Cosma, George Held, David Ray and others. Many of the writers have numerous prestigious awards and books between them. Once a month, Cervena Barva Press publishes a monthly newsletter which contains interviews with writers, editors, and publishers, author reading schedules throughout the USA, book releases, and new Cervena Barva Press publications. Another service Cervena Barva Press offers, is an online bookstore, The Lost Bookshelf. Gloria Mindock started this for Cervena Barva Press books and for writers and publishers from all over the world to sell their books on consignment. (Continued)
Contact Information: Doug Holder, Editor Ibbetson Street Press: [redacted]

Gloria Mindock, Editor
Cervena Barva Press: [redacted]

Thank you for listing this.
Gloria Mindock, [redacted]

↑ Index

212. Gloria Mindock
Cervena Barva Press Fall Reading Series
Mon 25 Aug 2008

Cervena Barva Press Reading Series

Contact Information Coordinators:
Gloria Mindock, Editor and Publisher and Tam Lin Neville
[redacted]

Fall Reading Series
All readings 7:00 PM, Free
Pierre Menard Gallery
10 Arrow Street
Cambridge, MA 02138

Wednesday, September 17, 2008

Celebrating Three Cervena Barva Press Authors With New Books
Kathi Aguero
Mike Amado
George Held

Kathleen Aguero's books of poetry include, Daughter Of (Cedar Hill Books), The Real Weather (Hanging Loose Press), and Thirsty Day (Alice James Books). She has edited three volumes of multicultural literature published by the University of Georgia Press and has an essay in the anthology, Why I'm Still Married. The recipient of grants from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and the Elgin Cox Foundation, she is a Professor of English at Pine Manor College in Chestnut Hill, MA, teaching in their low-residency MFA and undergraduate programs. Kathi will be reading from her new chapbook, Investigations: The Mystery of the Girl Sleuth (Cervena Barva Press, 2008).

Mike Amado is a performance poet, percussionist and drummer who does lyrical, rhythm-based tomes attuned to the social and semi-political. He is the author of Poems: Unearthed from Ashes (2006). Mike is a reviewer for the online magazine Rattle and for the Boston Area Small Press and Poetry Scene. Publication credits include WHLR, Apt Magazine, Down in the Dirt, Bagel Bards Anthology 1 & 2, Istanbul Literary Review, and others. Mike will read from his new collection Stunted Inner-child Shot the TV (Cervena Barva Press, 2008).

George Held is the author of 10 poetry collections and will read from his new chapbook The News Today (Cervena Barva Press, 2008). He will also read selections from W Is For War (Cervena Barva Press, 2006), and Phased (Poets Wear Prada, 2008). George is the editor of the anthology Touched by Eros. A five-time nominee for the Pushcart Prize, he has published his stories, poems, book reviews, and translations in such places as The Philadelphia Inquirer, Circumference, The Notre Dame Review, Commonweal, Connecticut Review, and Confrontation. His poem “Aftermath” was read. by Garrison Keillor on The Writer’s Almanac. He has co-edited The Ledge Poetry and Fiction Magazine since 1991. George currently lives in New York City.

Wednesday, October 15, 2008

John Amen
Kevin Gallagher
Glenn Sheldon

Wednesday, November 19, 2008

Robert Johnson
Irene Koronas
Sue Owen

Cervena Barva Press was founded in April, 2005 by Gloria Mindock. The press publishes poetry and fiction chapbooks and books, plays, and poetry postcards from writers all over the world. It accepts work by solicitation only but welcomes queries especially from Central and Eastern Europe. Once a year, the press holds a fiction and poetry chapbook contest. The press has published work by Gary Fincke, Eric Pankey, Simon Perchik, Michael Burkard, Catherine Sasanov, John Minczeski, Lucille Lang Day, Ian Randall Wilson, George Held, David Ray, Doug Holder, Eric Wasserman, Glenn Sheldon, and others. Many of the writers have numerous prestigious awards and books between them.

Once a month, Cervena Barva Press publishes a monthly newsletter which contains interviews with writers, editors, and publishers, author reading schedules throughout the USA, book releases, and new Cervena Barva Press publications.

Another service Cervena Barva Press offers, is an online bookstore, The Lost Bookshelf. for writers and publishers to sell their books on consignment.

Pierre Menard Gallery
Aldo Tambellini Exhibition
September 19th-October 26th, 2008
Opening reception September 19th, 6:00-9:00 PM

For more information about the exhibit:
Contact Nathan Consello, Gallery Director
John Wronoski, Proprietor

Gallery: 617/[redacted]
[redacted]

Thank you.
Gloria Mindock, editor & Publisher
[redacted]

↑ Index

213. Jerome Rothenberg
Poems & Poetics - August postings
Mon 25 Aug 2008

The most recent posting on my continuing blog-anthology is an excerpt from Michael Palmer's essay on Shelley, which will be appearing in full in his new book of essays & talks, Active Boundaries, from New Directions. This almost rounds out the posts for August, including the following:

* Reconfiguring Romanticism (10): Michael Palmer on Shelley

* Rafael Albrti: Buster Keaton Searches the Woods for His Sweetheart a Genuine Cow

* From Poetics & Polemics (forhtcoming): "A Secret Location on the Lower East Side

* Reconfiguring Romanticism (9): Some Outsider Poets

* Uncollected Poems (2): Two for the Cockeyed Queen of Poland

* Translation & Illegibility, a talk with with a poem from A Book of Concealments

* Pierre Joris: from Justifying the Margins: "Nimrod in Hell" with a Reminiscence & Note on Joris même

* Reconfiguring Romanticism (8): Heinrich Heine, with commentary & a prose poem from Heine & Gerard de Nerval

* from Daichidoron: 32 Ways of Looking at the Buddha, for Hiromi Ito

* Charles Bernstein: 4 Poems, with a Note on Escape from Rousseau to Bernstein

* Gematria (2): from 14 Stations, with Arie Galles

* Reconfiguring Romanticism (7): Prologue to a Book of Origins

Postings to come include: Sor Juan Inés de la Cruz, faux-dialect poems translated by me & Cecillia Vicuña; "Reading Celan 1959/1995 (a personal account)" from Poetics & Polemics; & Four Poems by Michael McClure, with commentary.

The URL remains poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com.

Jerome Rothenberg
1026 San Abella
Encinitas, CA 92024
[redacted]
jrothenberg at cox.net

"Language is Delphi."
--Novalis

↑ Index

214. billy little dorn's alleged attitude
Mon 25 Aug 2008

---

friends,

i'm a jew, a friend of ed's, i'd have to say, like spicer
he was an equal opportunity hater, and hater's not the right word, intolerant, ed was intolerant of all fools, jew, aboriginal, cowboy, philosospher,black, yellow, gay, straight, rich or poor, supreme court judge or petty thief, swindler or sanctimonious.
Anybody looking for my selected poems, St. Ink should contact Jenny Pemberthy at Capilano University Editions.

billy little

--
Be Yourself @ mail.com!
Choose From 200+ Email Addresses
Get a Free Account at www.mail.com

↑ Index

215. steve russell
Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
Mon 25 Aug 2008

"The Institute for Criminal Thinking." That's beautiful. I'm almost jaded enough or naive enough to buy into the fabrication. Burrough's for beginners, it surely isn't.

--- On Sun, 8/24/08, David Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

From: David Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, August 24, 2008, 3:41 PM

Dear Ismaelia al-Sadiq

Thank you so much for your letter, for the rocks. for that which is, everywhere found yet hidden in plain sight--(or site/sight/cite-)--

I remember when the discussion re Dorn and the Mandel etc transpired-- it seems to return here in a cyclical pattern--

Thank you for writing of the funeral of Nizar Qabbani and what he and his works meant to so many--the death and funeral of Darwish show very powerfully what you right of as the vitality of poetry in the Muslim world.

These events, with so much else that continually happens every day, make me think of the so often quoted Jack Spicer line "Nobody listens to poetry anymore," as I often wonder if it is not the other way round, that poetry itself in America is not listening anymore, and not listening, does not see those things hidden in plain site/sight/cite.

At "The Insitution for Criminal Thinking," there was one window through which one saw daily a large tree degnerating into an organic ruin from diease, in which a bird had made a very large nest. In the devastating bleakness, this nest on autum days filled with light, held it. and ignited the blood of life. Winter came, the leaves dropped away, and the light now came from the South, a paler light, which the nest gathered and kept strong. Huge winds came that early winter, and I thought--what will happen if the nest is blown down? The light will go out, and in the waning bleakness, the harshness lacerate the veins. Standing by the window seeing the first light rushing into the nest hollow, I saw that the heart I had found there was my own, inside me. Two hearts regard each other, and then it is found that, yes, the nest will soon be gone, yet, having met, the hearts' regards will be exchanged everywhere for there are no boundaries. One morning, the harsh light and air trembling violently with the sounds of the chainsaw, the tree and the nest were cut down and carted away. Since then, I find them everywhere.

When everything is stolen and taken away, including movement, books, water, fuel, food, everything--and "nothing" but rocks and light remain, that is not nothing at all, but everything. And necessity, the motherfucker of invention, finds much with which to work.

Writing, art objects, virtuality--"form"--can all be made into prisons and Walls--very often are--

And so it is possible that "poetry" may not listen to or see that poetry you write of-- may even be "terrified" of it, as when rock throwers

are fired at with tear gas, bullets,tanks, missiles fired from low flying planes-- or try as in many ways possible to "nullify" it--as has been done at every step of the way with the "The Poets of Guantanamo"--

Thanking you again for your profoundly moving letter, --

(and I shd note perhaps for Mr Dorn's benefit, not that he wil care to be sure!-- not that he is "lisetning"!----or is he?-- that the countless Priests, Nuns,Bishops murdered in Latin America were opposed to the monsters oppressing the Indigenous and poor--and today in the US are the last or only resort for illegal immigrants and their families to find shelter and support-- for example, in Postville, Iowa, where the local Parish has had to intervene and raise money and donations of food and clothing, a poetry "hidden in plain sight" may be found in the movement of persons and words--the illegal workers knowingly employed by the world largest Kosher met packing corporation in a plant repeatedly cited for appallingly substandard conditions and child labor, are arrested--and held in the building of the National Cattle Conference--people treated like animals working with animals specially treated when arrested are housed in a building where animals are discussed in terms of trade and slaughter-- their wives meanwhile are provided with electronic monitoring bracelets so they will not be able to "leave" nor to work, being illegal, so their children will starve along side the meat packing plant-- which their fathers are being punished for having worked in-- and in conditions which no other workers could bear the punishment of toiling in, let alone for the low wages which they had no choice but to accept-- in these movements among meat and substandard conditions ending up in the Cattle Conference building-- is not there a form of "Poetic Justice" being "meted" out-- and all of it for the sake of meat-- in a place where living humans and dead animals meet- on a perhaps "unequal footing"-- the dead animals being "legal" and the living humans not-)

On Fri, Aug 22, 2008 at 6:03 PM, Ismaelia al Sadiq <[redacted]> wrote:

> Several points:
>
> Yes, poetry is "popular" - ne essential - in the arab culture.
When Syrian > poet Nizar Qabbani died, his funeral in Damascus was attended by crowds > numbering at least in the 100s of thousands. Qabbani spoke not only > radically and openly against Israeli occupation in the Territories, but held > quite open and liberal views about the status of women in relation to the > Qur'an and within Muslim society in general, that were widely admired, not > only by arab women, but be a large percentage of arab men as well.

>
> As far as Dorn's anti-Semitism, I recall him saying something in a Rolling > Stock editorial that the paper had as its target a basically Semitic > (Jewish) readership, because these, he said, were probably among the best > educated persons in the country, and probably were majoral in number of the > few that would even appreciate the paper's basic point-of-view.
>
> About Muslim culture, he noted, as far as I know, only the single instance > in his recent volume of interviews, that it is a severe mistake by the US > State Department that regards Muslim politics as secular, rational and > negotiable. That it is based instead solely on religious sentiment.
>
> At any rate, I doubt that anything Dorn said about either Jews or Muslims > can come up to his persistently negative assessments and assertions about > Rome through history and the position of the Catholic Church vis-a-vis > politics and economic development as well as religion (and all related > topics, including everything from pro-fascist stances during and post-WWII, > to negation of women's right, bitter homophobia, etc) during the years of > his writing career.
>
> Dorn also bore the brunt of controversy in a spate of letters to Exquisite > Corpse related to sexist comments he made to a Grad student in Denver, and > much later, on this list, for his own alleged homophobia. So,
>
> he was no angel. He showed Max Douglas how to shoot up. Max subsequently > OD'd on heroin at age 21. Not Dorn's responsibility, clearly, but . . . not > the wisest sort of instruction to provide one of that day's hot new youths, > either.
>
> BTW, just as a point of correction, arabs are Semites, too. The division > of Semities, arabs and jews, came later, with the split between Ibrahim's > sons, Itzak and Isma'il. At the celebration at the weaning of Itzak, > Isma'il is seen making mock of the ceremony, and is cast out with his > Egyptian mother Hagar to wander the lands near Beersheba. His ancestors > eventually become first, the Bedouin tribes, and thereafter, the arabic > speakers that populated all the lands east of Palestine.

>
> Finally, those rocks that Dariwsh mentions, that were all the Israelis left > for the Palestinians, after stealing their orange groves, olive orchards, > and dispersing the Palestinians into now-permanent exile, are still there.
> There are lots of them. Palestinian teenagers use them as weapons against > the incursion of Israeli tanks. Yellowish-grey, not too heavy, like moon > rocks.
>
> They have them in Iraq as well. Villagers use them against persistent and > unwarranted attacks by US and British soldiers. A rather hopeless > proposition, it would seem, at first. But, then, what would you rather > fight with - a reliable rock whose substance was made by and thus has the > divine properties of Allah, or an M-16 that probably isn't going to work
> properly, because of contractural difficulties leading to poor manufacture?
>
> The fact that such rocks still rely on inherent qualities of creation in > order to attain to and hold their status as "objects", make them far > superior as weapons, as against rifles, which, we all know, are, like > fountain pens or vacuum cleaners, merely devisive, and made only to kill.
> But, kill what? You cannot kill the spirit that lives and guides all > things in accordance with the ethic that reveals the position of each > individual thing in relation to all others, as the always penultimate > situation.
>
> This is the Whirlwind of Speaking that is testamental to Allah's presence, > still and centered, in the midst of everything. Jews call this "malbush" - > clothes - or, as birdsong hidden in the leaves of morning trees. Sublime > perception of beauty, unforeseen.
>
> I state these things, just to make clear that "popular"

isn't quite the > proper word to employ in beginning to determine the value of poetry in the > Muslim world. It is part of an overall life force, a vitalism, that is > completely gone dead in the West.
>
> The opening of the throat, the voice, the song. The hearing's always > heard, the word of God obeyed, but the question always remains: can you spot
> the bird?
> al-Sadiq.
>
>
>
>
>
> > Date: Fri, 22 Aug 2008 11:30:15 -0700> From:
[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Dorn/Anti-Semitism> To: [redacted]>
>
> shouldn't we bag that word, Anti-Semitism. When I'm in a fight about > Palestine, I'm almost always fighting with someone Jewish and European. I > don't have a clue as to what Dorn said, but why not simply call him a bigot.
> I take it he didn't insult Arabs.> > There's an excellent article on > Mahmoud Darwish in the Economist, August 23. > I didn't think poetry was > popular.> Live/learn. > > By the mid-1980s, Darwish had sold well over a > million copies of his verse. > 20 volumes. > > Here's a fragment from one > of his poems, compliments of the Economist:> > Write down!> I am an Arab>
> You have stolen> the orchards of my ancestors> And the land which I > cultivated> Along with my children> And you left nothing for us> Except for > these rocks...> > > > >
==========> The Poetics List
> _____
> Get ideas on sharing photos from people like you. Find new ways to share.

>
>
http://www.windowslive.com/explore/photogallery/posts?
ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_Photo_Gallery_082008
guidelines
>

↑ Index

216. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Mon 25 Aug 2008

Nick,

You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which Auster obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.

I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much for publishers as for readers.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <[redacted]
> wrote:

> A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and Company in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.
>
> Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy > of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works.

The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard, or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting to know a person.

Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,
Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming a novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually.
the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with an off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."

*Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the* photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe *as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead* father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit" of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire at the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted] wrote:

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but I love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark, severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
& since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind
of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

guidelines

guidelines &

↑ Index

217. Bonnie MacAllister
Dreamscape Festival--Poets, Art, Music September 6th
Mon 25 Aug 2008

Dreamscape Festival Performance on Saturday, September 6th

Bonnie MacAllister
Jane Cassady
Dr. Niama Williams
Monica Pace

among the performers at the Dreamscape Festival

Highwire Gallery
2040 Frankford Avenue
Philadelphia, PA 19125

1-6 p.m.
Saturday, September 6, 2008

For the complete exhibition and schedule:
http://www.kenbmiller.com/highwire/gallery/shows/2008/2008-09-jeff_thomas/2008-09-jeff_thomas.html

http://bonnie-macallister.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

218. Eric Dickey
Re: dorn's alleged attitude
Mon 25 Aug 2008

---

reminds me of something a friend once told me:

equity means being equally unfair to everybody or somethin' like that...

--- On Mon, 8/25/08, billy little <[redacted]> wrote:
From: billy little <[redacted]>
Subject: dorn's alleged attitude
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, August 25, 2008, 12:48 PM

friends,

i'm a jew, a friend of ed's, i'd have to say, like spicer
he was an equal opportunity hater, and hater's not the right word, intolerant, ed was intolerant of all fools, jew, aboriginal, cowboy, philosospher,black, yellow, gay, straight, rich or poor, supreme court judge or petty thief, swindler or sanctimonious.

Anybody looking for my selected poems, St. Ink should contact Jenny Pemberthy at Capilano University Editions.

billy little

--
Be Yourself @ mail.com!
Choose From 200+ Email Addresses
Get a Free Account at www.mail.com

↑ Index

219. amy king
Trouble with presses?
Mon 25 Aug 2008

Anyone experience similar difficulties?

Consider an excerpt from the account of Stacey Lynn Brown(http://staceylynnbrown.blogspot.com/2008/07/less-than-auspicious-debut.html):

“Anyway, back to my story. Everything was hunky dory with this press, though I was a little surprised and disappointed that I didn’t get one single editorial suggestion from the editor and, in fact, that I had to do the majority of both my own editing as well as the editing for the book as a whole. At last count, I had found and corrected 32 errors–only 3 of which were mine. The other errors were ones made by the editor–jagged margins, dropped italics, misspelled words. But I didn’t mind doing the editing. After all, this was my book, and I wanted it to be right…

But it gets even better.

The letter went on to say that even though they had “revoked” the book award and were not publishing the book, the publishing contract was still valid and in effect and that they owned the rights to my book in all its formats. In order for me to get my rights back, I had to repay them the $1000 prize money I had been given as well as give them the $200 they had spent acquiring the cover art for a book THEY were choosing not to publish.

In short, they were breaching the contract, refusing to publish my book, and holding the rights to my own work hostage.”

And Brown’s nightmare with Cider Press Review continues here: http://staceylynnbrown.blogspot.com/2008/07/less-than-auspicious-debut.htmlhttp://staceylynnbrown.blogspot.com/2008/07/less-than-auspicious-debut.htmlhttp://staceylynnbrown.blogspot.com/2008/07/less-than-auspicious-debut.html

_____

Movies With Poems

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Poems To Do

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

220. Susan Webster Schultz

Bamboo Ridge book you should know about

Mon 25 Aug 2008

Joe Tsujimoto is a writer born and raised in NYC who has lived in Hawai`i for many years. His writing is wonderful; I'm a fan. The book, Morningside Heights, is available from Bamboo Ridge and from SPD. Try it out!

Morningside Heights is a gritty and heartfelt insiders’ take on a unique Manhattan neighborhood, a tough no nonsense environment where any young man would have to scramble to find himself. If you want to know what life was like for the son of Japanese immigrants, making his way in the world of the '60s, then this is the book for you. Its narrative tells many fascinating stories, and, in the end, leaves the reader wanting more. --Oscar Hijuelos, Pulitzer Prize winning author of The Mambo Kings Play Songs of Love

In the footsteps of V.S. Naipaul's Miguel Street and Sherwood Anderson's Winesburg, Ohio, Joe Tsujimoto's Morningside Heights explores the heart of a neighborhood in transition. Gritty and poignant, this collection of semi-autobiographical stories traverses the streets of New York, Makawao and memory, using intimate details and tender riffs to invoke the spirit of a time past, recall a community dispersed, and recreate the feeling of home, lost and found. --Nora Okja Keller, author of Comfort Woman and Fox Girl

Readers: Make room for Morningside Heights on your shelves. This collection of short stories, which chronicles the life of a Japanese-American New Yorker from his rebellious childhood on the edge of Harlem in the fifties and sixties, to his enlistment in the Air Force during the Vietnam War, to his present life as a teacher and writer in Hawaii gives John Okada's No-No Boy and Carlos Bulosan's America Is In The Heart a run for their money. Read this book for its urgency, its tales of love and loss, of one man's determination to make something out of himself when the heart of his world seemed to have stopped beating. Most of all, read it for its craftsmanship its tough prose charged with the beauty and blues of Billie Holiday and the supreme cool of John Coltrane. --R. Zamora Linmark, author of Primetime Apparitions and Rolling the R's

Stories with the ring of truth from someone who would know.
--David Milch, writer for "Hill Street Blues,"
"N.Y.P.D. Blue," and "Deadwood"

Joe Tsujimoto's most influential teachers were Joseph Heller, Donald Barthelme, and the Greek poet, Konstantinos Lardas, writers, whose words had made an indelible impression on him during his undergraduate studies at C.C.N.Y. Now more than forty years later he has put together a collection of his own writings, produced between various jobs and many years of teaching young people. He is perhaps best known for his teacher texts: Teaching Poetry to Adolescents and Lighting Fires: How the Passionate Teacher Engages Adolescent Writers.

↑ Index

221. Troy Camplin
CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS
Mon 25 Aug 2008

The Emerson Institute for Freedom and Culture see
CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

The Emerson Institute for Freedom and Culture seeks submissions addressing the nature of freedom and its role and influence on culture. We seek both scholarly articles and creative submissions.

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

Fiction, poetry, plays, essays, and articles should be in Times New Roman 12 pt. font and submitted as an attachment in Word or Text format. Additional genre–specific guidelines, including guidelines for images and audio files can be found below. Thos wishing to submit works to EIFC should also consult our Mission Statement.

Fiction

We accept short-shorts, short stories, and long stories.

Poetry

We are looking for superior poetry of any length. We are looking for poetry written by the kinds of poets described by Theseus in “A Midsummer Night’s Dream”:

The poet’s eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven;
And, as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet’s pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name.

Plays

Standard play format. Verse plays are encouraged.

Music

Music should be sent as either mp3 or wave files. Along with the audio file, composers should submit the sheet music, a list of the instruments used, and the names of the musicians. A description of the piece, including your theory of the music composed, is also suggested. If you are submitting a song, you should also include lyrics. Satires and spoofs should include the name of the son and band being satirized.

Visual Arts

Images should be sent as JPG attachments. A description of the piece, including your theory behind the composition of the piece, is also suggested.

Essays and Articles

Articles and essays on any topic relating to freedom, culture, society, the arts, or any of the theories or related theories listed in the Mission Statement are welcome. Essays are less formal than articles and typically do not include a bibliography. Authors should strive to make their essays or articles accessible to the intelligent layperson. Interdisciplinary content and experimental structures are acceptable, the former being in fact strongly encouraged.

Troy Camplin, President
The Emerson Institute for Freedom and Culture

↑ Index

222. David Seaman
Re: Bamboo Ridge book you should know about
Tue 26 Aug 2008

As a non-New Yorker, I am surprised to hear about the issues in Morningside. I was there a few times as a bumpkin visitor, once having dinner in my college days with a professor's daughter I met on an Atlantic crossing. It seemed like a fancy and classy world. We even took a taxi downtown to a theatre, something a 60s Ohio boy found amazing. Later I went there to meet graduate student lovers and their friends. Those of us in the inner land have a weird view of the City, I guess.

David
On Aug 25, 2008, at 9:07 PM, Susan Webster Schultz wrote:

> Joe Tsujimoto is a writer born and raised in NYC who has lived in Hawai`i for many years. His writing is wonderful; I'm a fan.
> The book, Morningside Heights, is available from Bamboo Ridge and from SPD. Try it out!
>
> Morningside Heights is a gritty and heartfelt insiders' take on a unique Manhattan neighborhood, a tough no nonsense environment where any young man would have to scramble to find himself. If you want to know what life was like for the son of Japanese immigrants, making his way in the world of the '60s, then this is the book for you. Its narrative tells many fascinating stories, and, in the end, leaves the reader wanting more.
> --Oscar Hijuelos, Pulitzer Prize winning author of
> The Mambo Kings Play Songs of Love
>
> In the footsteps of V.S. Naipaul's Miguel Street and Sherwood Anderson's Winesburg, Ohio, Joe Tsujimoto's Morningside Heights explores the heart of a neighborhood in transition. Gritty and poignant, this collection of semi-autobiographical stories traverses the streets of New York, Makawao and memory, using intimate details and tender riffs to invoke the spirit of a time past, recall a community dispersed, and recreate the feeling of home, lost and found.
> --Nora Okja Keller,
> author of Comfort Woman and Fox Girl
>
> Readers: Make room for Morningside Heights on your shelves. This collection of short stories, which chronicles the life of a Japanese-American New Yorker from his rebellious childhood on the edge of Harlem in the fifties and sixties, to his enlistment in the Air Force during the Vietnam War, to his present life as a teacher and writer in Hawaii gives John Okada's No-No Boy and Carlos Bulosan's America Is In The Heart a run for their money. Read this book for its urgency, its tales of love and loss, of one man's determination to make something out of himself when the heart of his world seemed to have stopped beating. Most of all, read it for > its craftsmanship its tough prose charged with the beauty and blues > of Billie Holiday and the supreme cool of John Coltrane.

> --R. Zamora Linmark, > author of Primetime Apparitions and Rolling the R's
>
> Stories with the ring of truth from someone who would know.
> --David Milch, writer for "Hill Street Blues,"
> "N.Y.P.D. Blue," and "Deadwood"
>
> Joe Tsujimoto's most influential teachers were Joseph Heller, Donald Barthelme, and the Greek poet, Konstantinos Lardas, writers, whose words had made an indelible impression on him during his undergraduate studies at C.C.N.Y. Now more than forty years later he has put together a collection of his own writings, produced between various jobs and many years of teaching young people. He is perhaps best known for his teacher texts: Teaching Poetry to Adolescents and Lighting Fires: How the Passionate Teacher Engages Adolescent Writers.
>
> welcome.html

↑ Index

223. Cara Benson

Re: Welcome to Boog City 2 Festival Sept. 18-21

Tue 26 Aug 2008

Â
Â
Â
Â
Â
Â
This looks stellar!

Â
Â
Â
Â
Â
Â
Â

Â
Â
Sous RatureÂ
Â
Â
Â

----- Original Message ----
From: David Kirschenbaum <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, August 21, 2008 1:18:04 AM Subject: Welcome to Boog City 2 Festival Sept. 18-21

please forward

Hi,

Next month, from Thurs. Sept. 18-Sun. Sept. 21, we'll be putting on the second annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival. It will feature performances from 49 poets, 13 musical acts, and one theater company over the four days.

Among the highlights are:

â€”a night devoted to Durham, N.C. small press minor/american;

â€”a live performance of Lou Reedâ€™s New York album for its 20th anniversary by seven different musical acts;

â€”a performance of a wickedly comic tale of love and lust in a time of war from the prototypical New York School poet Frank Oâ€™Hara;

â€”our 5th annual small, small press fair, with exhibits from a dozen different small presses, and readings by their authors;

â€”a discussion on Race and Poetry: Integrating the Experimental; and

â€”Talisman House Publishers editor Edward Foster in conversation with internationally renowned English-born poet and long-time Lower East Side resident Simon Pettet.

The full schedule for the event is below this note, followed by performer bios and websites.

as ever,
David

David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City

330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://www.welcometoboogcity.com
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

2nd annual

Welcome to Boog City
4 Days of Poetry and Music

THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 18, 6:00 P.M.

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

minor/american

(Durham, N.C.)

ACA Galleries
529 W.20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Free

Event will be hosted by
minor/american editors

Elise Ficarra and Kathryn Pringle, eds.

featuring readings from

Samar Albuhassan
David Need
Andrea Rexilius
Ken Rumble
Diane Timblin

and music from
Compass Jazz

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 19, 7:00 P.M.

Sidewalk CafÃ©
94 Ave. A
NYC

Free with a two-drink minimum

Readings, musical, and poetsâ€™ theater performances,
and Lou Reedâ€™s New York album live

Â 7:00 p.m.-Jim Behrle
Â 7:15 p.m.-Daniel Nester
Â 7:35 p.m.-Dibson T. Hoffweiler (music)
Â 8:05 p.m.-Arlo Quint
Â 8:20 p.m.-Bob Holman
Â 8:35 p.m.-Verse Theater Manhattan
Â Â Â Â Â doing a reading of Frank O'Hara's verse drama
Â 9:35 p.m.-Gillian McCain
Â 9:50 p.m.-Lou Reed, New York. Performed live by:

*Babs Soft
Romeo Had Juliette
Halloween Parade

*The Rabbits
Dirty Blvd.
Endless Cycle

*Dibson T. Hoffweiler & Preston Spurlock
There Is No Time
Last Great American Whale

*Liv Carrow
Beginning of a Great Adventure
Busload of Faith

*Prewar Yardsale
Sick of You Hold On

*Wakey Wakey
Good Evening Mr. Waldheim
Xmas in February

*Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour
Strawman
Dime Store Mystery

11:20 p.m.-Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour
12:10 a.m.-The Rabbits

Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave., L to 1st Ave.
Venue is at E.6th St.

SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 20, 11:00 A.M.

Cakeshop
152 Ludlow St.
NYC

$5

5th Annual Small, Small Press Fair

Featuring readings from authors of the exhibiting presses

11:30 a.m.-Celena Glenn, Bowery Books
11:40 a.m.-TBD, Cy Gist Press
11:50 a.m.-Ariana Reines, Fence/Fence Books
12:00 p.m.-Adam Golaski, flim forum press
12:10 p.m.-Damian Weber, House Press
12:20 a.m.-Virna Teixeira, Litmus Press/Aufgabe
12:30 p.m.-Jaye Bartell, little scratch pad
12:40 p.m.-Jeff Downey, Octopus Books
12:50 p.m.-Melissa Christine Goodrum, Other Rooms Press
Â 1:00 p.m.-Ric Royer, Outside Voices
Â 1:10 p.m.-Austin Alexis, Poets Wear Prada
Â 1:20 p.m.-Tom Savage, Straw Gate Books

Â 1:30 p.m.-Stephanie Gray
Â 1:45 p.m.-Bill Kushner
Â 2:00 p.m.-Oak Orchard Swamp (music)
Â 2:30 p.m.-Ryan Eckes
Â 2:50 p.m.-Eric Gelsinger
Â 3:10 p.m.-Douglas Manson Â 3:30 p.m.-Heart Parts (music)
Â 4:00 p.m.-Elise Ficarra
Â 4:20 p.m.-Kristianne Meal
Â 4:40 p.m.-Kathryn Pringle
Â 5:00 p.m.-Maureen Thorson
Â 5:20 p.m.-Carol Mirakove
Â 5:35 p.m.-A Brief View of the Hudson (music)
Â 6:05 p.m.-Jen Benka Â 6:20 p.m.-Todd Colby
Â 6:35 p.m.-Kyle Schlesinger Â 6:55 p.m.-David Hadbawnik

Â 7:15 p.m.-Sharon Mesmer
Â 7:30 p.m.-Casey Holford (music)

Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave.
Venue is bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 21, 1:00 P.M.

Unnameable Books
456 Bergen St.
Brooklyn

Free

Â 1:00 p.m.-Julia Cohen
Â 1:15 p.m.-Tisa Bryant
Â 1:30 p.m.-Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
Â 1:45 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
Â 2:05 p.m.-Corrine Fitzpatrick
Â 2:20 p.m.-Nick Piombino
Â 2:35 p.m.-Stacy Szymaszek

Â 2:50 p.m.-3:00-break

Â 3:00 p.m.- Race and Poetry: Integrating the Experimental

Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Amy King (curator and moderator)
Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Tisa Bryant
Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Jennifer Firestone
Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Timothy Liu
Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Mendi Obadike
Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Meghan Punschke
Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Christopher Stackhouse
Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Mathias Svalina

Â 4:30 p.m.-4:40-break

Â 4:40 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
Â 5:00 p.m.-Lee Ann Brown
Â 5:15 p.m.-John Coletti
Â 5:30 p.m.-Rachel Levitsky
Â 5:45 p.m.-Eileen Myles
Â 6:00 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
Â 6:20 p.m.-Edward Foster
Â Â Â Â in conversation with Simon Pettet
Â 6:50 p.m.-Simon Pettet
Â 7:10 p.m.-Edward Foster

Directions: 2, 3 to Bergen St.; 2, 3, 4, 5, M, N, Q, W, R, B, D to Atlantic Ave./Pacific St.; C to Lafayette Ave.
Venue is bet. 5th/Flatbush aves.

Welcome to Boog City 2 Bios and Websites

*Thursday

minor/american http://www.minoramerican.blogspot.com minor/american is a small-edition, themed, hand-made poetry journal first released in the summer of 2007. An offshoot of the minor/american blog, originated by Maggie Zurawski in 2004, minor/american prints the work of not-so minor Americans, with a preference for longer selections. The theme for issue two, due this fall, is citi. Issue three's theme will be evolution. Submissions can be sent to [redacted].

Samar Abulhassan http://www.jacketmagazine.com/35/dk-abulhassan.shtml Samar Abulhassan recently left San Francisco, where she taught poetry to children, to live among many creatures at a Zen center in New Mexico, where she wakes early, brews soups, and hears and sounds many bells. She is finishing a second chapbook for Dusie and recently collaborated with a Butoh dancer in San Francisco on a movement/text piece that was performed at Yerba Buena Center for the Arts last spring. She waits for the night to surface words and is looking for a watery landscape to write into.

Compass Jazz http://www.purevolume.com/compass Compass, a jazz quartet, whose performances feature original compositions as well the works of many of America's greatest jazz legends. The quartet is made-up of Rick Lawn (saxophones), Joel Chace (keyboard), Tom Ives (bass), and Albert Colone (drums). The band self produced their album Compass Rises in 1971, which featured original compositions written and arranged by Lawn and Ives. Compass was one of five musical groups on a promotional program that opened the Saratoga Performing Arts Center in 1972. Ives, with Lawn, wrote and arranged "What is Man?" an ecumenical jazz service with an accompanying slide presentation which was performed in New York City and later produced for television by Iowa Public Broadcasting. A revival of "What is Man?" took place last year.

David Need http://www.indyweek.com/gyrobase/Archive?author=oid%3A18317 http://www.mipoesias.com/2006Volume20Issue1/needcolumn.html David Need is a Massachusetts boy who has lived in North Carolina since 1994. He teaches South Asian Religions at Duke University. Excerpts from recent projects "St. John's Rose Slumber" and "Places I've Lived" are forthcoming in Hambone, Effing, and minor/american. Previously his poetry has been published in Fascicle and Ocho, and essays and memoirs have appeared in Talisman and on Mipoesias. He is working on "Voicing St. Mark's" and a further section of "Places I've Lived," as well as an academic study of Kerouac and Buddhism. As he writes this, he sits among the dead in a mall in Raleigh (but they are quiet).

Andrea Rexilius http://www.parceljournal.org
http://www.poetryfoundation.org/harriet/2008/08/the_era_of_video_poetics_is_im_1.html Andrea Rexilius is working toward her Ph.D. in literature and creative writing at the University of Denver. Her poetry and essays have appeared or are forthcoming in Bird Dog, Coconut, Colorado Review, How2, minor/american, P â€“Queue, and Volt, among others. She is the editor of the online journal PARCEL and assistant editor of the Denver Quarterly.

Ken Rumble
http://www.desertcity.blogspot.com
http://www.coconutpoetry.org/rumble2.htm
Ken Rumble is the author of Key Bridge (Carolina Wren Press) and the forthcoming President Letters (Scantily Clad Press). His poems have appeared in the tiny, Cutbank, One Less Magazine, Talisman, Parakeet, and others. He lives in Greensboro, N.C.

Dianne Timblin Dianne Timblin lives in Durham, N.C. Her work has appeared in minor/american, Phoebe, So to Speak, Rivendell, and other journals. She has been featured as a reader for the Poetry at Noon series at the Library of Congress, and one of her poems was a finalist for the Brenda L. Smart Prize.

*Friday

Babs of Queens http://www.myspace.com/babssoft Babs Todras is a songwriter from Queens. A child of two classical musicians, she has been in training since before she could form sentences. After a long mid-youth rebellion against her folks, she returned to music in high school and college where she teamed up with Seth of Dufus and Jeffrey Lewis on various musical projects, and she can be found on several of their albums. She plays mostly short songs about love and science, and also likes to crash Huggabroomstik tours.

Jim Behrle
http://americanpoetry.biz
Jim Behrle lives in Brooklyn.

Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour http://www.myspace.com/toddcarlstrom After Todd Carlstrom recorded his solo album, Gold on the Map, it was clear to him that the songs deserved more than to simply remain a studio project. He set about recruiting members of the band that would become Todd Carlstrom and The Clamour. He managed to entice drummer Eric Shaw of The Domestics into moonlighting. Guitarist Brian Elmquist, a singer/songwriter from Georgia by way of Nashville, came on in early '08. Their show expertly intertwines the poppy wrath of The Pixies, the classic rock nods of Built to Spill, the rumbling slink of Sleater-Kinney, and, occasionally, the odd stoner jam a la Brian Jonestown Massacre.

Liv Carrow http://www.myspace.com/livcarrow Liv Carrowâ€™s songs are like the little animals that your 4-year-old nieces and nephews make out of Play-Dohâ€”lumpy yet distinguishable in form, rudimentary to the point of psychedelic complexity, dry and crumbly on the outside but "all kinds of squishy" on the inside. The mysterious and oddly lovable bassist from ecstatically weird Huggabroomstik and Griffin and the True Believers takes the scenic back road to your heart with her clever-ish observations on life, death, love, health food, human reproduction, geography, the unseen world of the earth spirits and cosmic currents, awkward crushes, metaphysics, and everyone's favorite-despair. Liv plays frequently in NYC and the surrounding area as a solo acoustic act and accompanying Huggabroomstik and the burgeoning alternapop collaboration Feel The Feelings. She is also available for Tarot readings which can be obtained for a song

Dibson T. Hoffweiler http://www.dibson.net http://www.myspace.com/dibson Dibson T. Hoffweiler is the latest in a long line of quirky anti-folk ingÃ©nues, among them Beck, Adam Green, and Jeffrey Lewis. With a low voice thatâ€™s sweet and deadpan, and a guitar-style thatâ€™s virtuosic and sloppy, Hoffweiler carves out a space of compassion and intelligence in a landscape of boring love songs and thinly veiled songwriterly misogyny. Known for his work in anti-folk flagship bands Cheese On Bread, Huggabroomstik, and Urban Barnyard, Dibs began his musical career generating buzz with his old band, Dibs & Sara. Eventually he established himself as a solo artist, including several month long tours of Europe and North America. Dibs has proved (to himself, and to others) that his bizarre, ramshackle aesthetic is palatable outside the freaky comfort zone of New York anti-folk.

Dibson T. Hoffweiler and Preston Spurlock http://www.myspace.com/prestonspurlock Dibson and Preston have been friends and artistic collaborators since meeting at the Sidewalk Cafe in 2005. The two forged a tight bond over their common love of oddball lo-fi music. For a while they performed together as Dibs With Machines, and were both members of one-off anti-folk supergroup Old Hat. They now share a stage as the guitarist and keyboardist of Huggabroomstik.

Bob Holman http://www.bobholman.com Bob Holman is working on a documentary on the poetry of Endangered Languages and another on Allen Ginsberg. His most recent book, A Couple of Ways of Doing Something (Aperture), a collaboration with Chuck Close, is en route from the Tacoma Museum of Modern Art to the Museo in Santiago, Chile. The Awesome

Whatever, his new CD is out from Bowery Books. He is the founder of the Bowery Poetry Club and teaches at NYU and Columbia.

Gillian McCain http://www.limpwristmag.com/conwaymccaintrinidad.html http://www.epoetry.org/issues/issue8/text/poems/trinidad1.htm Gillian McCain is the author of two books of poetryâ€"Tilt and Religionâ€"and is the co-author, with Legs McNeil, of Please Kill Me: The Uncensored Oral History of Punk (Grove Press), which has been translated into 10 languages. They are currently working on a new oral history. McCain is also collaborating with David Trinidad and Jeffery Conway on Descent of the Dolls, a book-length poem inspired by the film Valley of the Dolls and the book the Inferno, among other projects.

Daniel Nester http://www.danielnester.com Daniel Nester is the author of The History of My World Tonight (BlazeVOX Books), as well as God Save My Queen and God Save My Queen II (both Soft Skull Press), two collections on his obsession with the rock band Queen. He lives in upstate New York with his wife Maisie and their daughter Miriam.

Prewar Yardsale http://www.myspace.com/prewaryardsale http://www.olivejuicemusic.com/prewaryardsale.html Prewar Yardsale started in the year 2000 under the influence of the Moldy Peaches and Schwervon!. Prewar Yardsale are husband and wife duo Mike Rechner (guitar, vocals) and Dina Levy (bucket, tin can, vocals). Prewar Yardsale, called post-techno, post-punk, post-machine, post-soul, post-anything by the zine Antimatters, recently performed at Huggabroomstock, and their latest release is Prewar Yardsale Peel Sessions (Olive Juice Music).

Arlo Quint
http://www.puppyflowers.com/9/quint.html
Arlo Quint is the author of Days On End (Open 24 Hours) and Photogenic Memory (Lame House).

The Rabbits
http://www.myspace.com/deadrabbitmusic
The Rabbits are an indie rock band from Staten Island. They sound like David Bowie, Jefferson Airplane, and ABBA having a crazy orgy weekend.

Verse Theater Manhattan http://www.versetheater.org Verse Theater Manhattan is the preeminent theater company in the English speaking world devoted exclusively to verse drama. Verse Theater Manhattan focuses on discovering important contemporary plays in verse and working with active poets and playwrights to promote this significant form. In addition to producing plays and reading regularly in New York City for the last decade, the company has toured the Midwest and England to rapt audiences and enthusiastic critics. Theyâ€™ll be performing a wickedly comic tale of love and lust in a time of war from the prototypical New York School poet Frank Oâ€™Hara.

Wakey!Wakey! http://www.wakeywakeymusic.com
http://www.myspace.com/wakeywakeymusic Wakey!Wakey! is Michael Grubbs (songwriting/vocals/keys), an NYC native who blends gorgeous songcraft with a potent sense of humor to create original, heartfelt songs that cause listeners to stop what they are doing and turn themselves over completely and totally to his storytelling. Wakey!Wakey! features the boundless talent and energy of Gene Back (violin/guitar), and the unique stylings of their female rhythm sectionâ€”Anne Lieberwirth (bass) and Kristin Mueller (drums). In 2007 Wakey! Wakey! released the live album Silent As a Movie (Family Records) and launched an ingenious covers project, available for download on the band's website and later released as a compilation. The band has shared bills across New York with the likes of indie darlings Rouge Wave, I'm From Barcelona, Someone Still Loves You Boris Yeltsin, AA Bondy, and Heloise and the Savoir Faire.

*Saturday

A Brief View of the Hudson
http://www.myspace.com/abriefviewofthehudson
The duo Nick Nace and Ann Enzminger met through chance meetings. Now the two make up an indie folk band, including the record Go North to Find Me (CD Baby).

Austin Alexis, Poets Wear Prada
http://home.att.net/~poetswearpradanj/AustinAlexis.html
http://www.poetswearprada.blogspot.com Austin Alexis's poetry, fiction, and non-fiction have appeared in a variety of anthologies, journals, magazines, and newspapers, including Barrow Street, The Journal, The Writer, The Pedestal Magazine, and online at Poetz.com. His plays have been performed in New York City, and one was selected for the Samuel French Short Plays Festival. Alexis has taught creative writing at Hunter Collegeâ€™s continuing education program, and has taught and tutored at various universities and college in New York state. He lives in Manhattan and teaches at New York City College of Technology (CUNY) in Brooklyn.

Roxanne Hoffman is the founder of Poets Wear Prada, also known as PWP Books, a small press based in Hoboken, N.J. and devoted to introducing new authors through limited edition, high-quality chaplets. She is a former Wall Street investment banker and runs the press with her husband Herbert Fuerst, a retired Hollywood agent. Their first offering, released in October 2006, was the 12-page poetry chapbook Your Infidel Eyes by Brant Lyon, host of NYC's Hydrogen Jukebox Jazzoetry Series. Since then, they have released 12 additional titles with plans to release 10 new chapbooks annually. Authors include well-established New York poets Peter Chelnik and Susan Maurer, as well as promising newcomers like Jee Leong Koh, Laura Vookles, and Austin Alexis.

Jaye Bartell, Little Scratch Pad Editions
http://www.housepress.org/bartell.html
http://www.myspace.com/oakorchardswamp
Jaye Bartell was born in Massachusetts; has lived in Asheville, NC; San Juan Island, Wash.; and lives in Buffalo. Heâ€™s the author of Acres Ourselves (House Press) and Ever After Never Under (Little Scratch Pad Editions). Other work has appeared in Capgun, A Sing Economy (Flim Forum Anthology), and Cutbank.

Douglas Manson began Little Scratch Pad Editions in 1997 with the chapbook Snack Size, a collection of his own poems. It remained a self-publishing effort until 2005, with the publication of Aaron Lowinger's Autobiography (co-produced with House Press). It became a press with a mission, to publish poetic works by younger writers, often their first chapbooks. Lowinger's chapbook was followed in 2007 with Kristianne Meal's TwentyTwo: first pallet, Tom Yorty's Words in Season, L.A. Howe's NTR PIC E ST R, Michael Basinski's Of Venus 93, Nick Traenkner's Accidental Thrust, and Manson's At Any Point. Recent books are Liz Mariani's Imaginary Poems for My Imaginary Girlfriend Named Anabel, and Jaye Bartell's Ever After / Never Under.

Jen Benka http://www.softskull.com/detailedbook.php?isbn=1-932360-84-0
Jen Benka was born in Cudahy, Wisconsin, and lives today in Brooklyn. She is the politics co-editor of Boog City with Carol Mirakove. Benka is the author of A Box of Longing with 50 Drawers (Soft Skull), an earlier version of which was issued as a limited edition artist book under the title A Revisioning of the Preamble of the Constitution of the United States (Booklyn). She also wrote Manya, comic books drawn by Kris Dresen, and in the 1990s performed with the rock-art band Mook, who launched into their audience larger and cleaner tampons than L7.

Todd Colby
http://www.gleefarm.blogspot.com
http://www.myspace.com/lovetoddcolby
Todd Colby is the author of Tremble & Shine, Riot in the Charm Factory, Cush, and Ripsnort (all Soft Skull Press).

Jeff Downey, Octopus Books http://www.realpoetik.blogspot.com/2008/02/jeff-downey.html http://www.octopusbooks.net Jeff Downey is from the panhandle of Nebraska and is studying in the M.F.A. program at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. His poems have appeared in journals including Octopus, RealPoetik, and Handsome.

Octopus Books is a small press founded in 2006 by the editors of Octopus Magazine. It has published hand-made, limited edition chapbooks by Genya Turovskaya, Joshua Marie Wilkinson, Jonah Winter, Matthew Rohrer, and Sueyeune Juliette Lee, among others. Their first two full-length book releases are Eric Baus' forthcoming Tuned Droves and Julie Doxsee's Undersleep, which is now available.

Ryan Eckes http://www.phillysound.blogspot.com/2007_08_01_archive.html Ryan Eckes lives in South Philadelphia. His poetry can be read in XConnect, Fanzine, Cue: A Journal of Prose Poetry, PhillySound, and his chapbook when i come here (Plan B Press). He has an M.A. in creative writing from Temple University, where he currently teaches. He hosts the Chapter & Verse reading series in Philadelphia.

Elise Ficarra http://www.geocities.com/iunyper/rifeone/ficarra.html http://www.sfsu.edu/~poetry Elise Ficarra is a Bay Area poet and writer. Swelter, her first book of poems, came out in 2005. A second book, be(g)one, is in progress. A contributor to hinge: a boas anthology of experimental women writers, Ficarraâ€™s work probes impossibilitiesâ€™ evolution, investigating how linguistic signsâ€”mundane and mythicâ€”recalibrate memory and bodily experience within the crush of nation states. She is co-editor of the journal minor/american and associate director of The Poetry Center at SFSU.

Eric Gelsinger http://www.housepress.org Eric Gelsinger is from Old Buffalo, N.Y. and currently lives in New Buffalo, Brooklyn. He is a member of House Press, and his poems can also be found in the smooth books of Flim Forum. He trades for a heavy-hitting avant-garde finance firm near Times Square.

Celena Glenn, Bowery Books http://original.bowerypoetry.com/bowerywomen Reading for Bowery Books is Celena Glenn. Celena Glenn is Poet Fashionista-inâ€“Residence for the Nowery Poetry Club, producing fashion poetry shows, spinning, free-styling, and just spitting nearly every week when sheâ€™s in town. She ranked second in the 2004 World Poetry Slam, and is a two-time National Poetry Slam Champion and former host at the Nuyorican Poets' CafÃ©. She is featured in a number of poetry anthologies and magazines, including Spoken Word Revolution, Serum, Composite, and Bullets and Butterflies. Her work can also be seen in the documentaries Slam Channel: War of Words and Urban Scribe. She has performed from Princeton to Rivington Synagogue, from Berkeley to basements in Soweto. Her book Black Cracker (Bowery Books) is forthcoming this fall.

Bowery Books is the press of the Bowery Poetry Club, with Bob Holman and Marjorie Tesser as its editors. The press has published essential anthologies, such as Bowery Women: Poems and Estamos AquÃ, poems by Migrant Farmworkers, as well as works by unique poets like Taylor Mead, the octogenarian Andy Warhol intimate who appeared in the film Coffee and Cigarettes, to Poez, a performing street poet. Forthcoming is the new Bowery Voices series, including Black Cracker by Celena Glenn and Body of Water by Janet Hamill, with photographs by Patti Smith, both in fall 2008, and Touch by Cynthia Kraman in spring 2009. Bowery Books is grateful for the support of the New York State Council on the Arts and is a member of the Council of Literary Magazines and Presses.

Adam Golaski, Flim Forum Press
http://www.openlettersmonthly.com/issue/december-green
http://www.flimforum.blogspot.com
http://www.flimforum.com
Adam Golaski is the author of Worse Than Myself (Raw Dog Screaming Press) and Color Plates (Rose Metal Press). Adam's poem "Green"â€”a translation of Sir Gawain & the Green Knightâ€”appears in installment on Open Letters. Upcoming publications include fiction in The Lifted Brow 4 and Exotic Gothic II, and poetry in Moonlit and Little Red Leaves. He edits for Flim Forum Press.

Flim Forum Press, founded in 2005, provides SPACE to emerging poets working in a variety of experimental modes. It has published two poetry anthologies, Oh One Arrow and A Sing Economy, with Brandon Shimodaâ€™s The Alps, forthcoming this fall.

Melissa Christine Goodrum, Other Rooms Press
http://www.nyqpoets.net/poet/melissachristinegoodrum
http://www.otherroomspress.blogspot.com Melissa Christine Goodrum has an M.F.A. in poetry from Brooklyn College. Her work has been published in The New York Quarterly, The Torch, The Tiny, Rhapsoidia, Can We Have Our Ball Back?, Transmission, and Bowery Women: Poems, and by Other Rooms Press. She was co-president of the Cambridge Poetry Awards, administrative director of Bowery Arts & Sciences, and the recipient of a Zora Neale Hurston Award from the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa University. She wears many, many masksâ€”poet, translator, scholar, editor, photographer, and writing teacher in the New York City Public School system.

Ed Go and Michael Whalen, graduates of Brooklyn College's M.F.A. program, founded Other Rooms Press (ORP) in January 2007. â€œWe got tired of seeing good, innovative poetry go unpublished, ignored by â€˜mainstream,â€™ â€˜acceptedâ€™ venues, and created ORP in hopes of providing alternative spaces, â€˜other roomsâ€™ in which quality, experimental poetry that might not otherwise find an audience can flourish,â€ they said. â€œOur goal with our website chapbooks and readings is to publish and promote the kind of

experimental, linguistically innovative, playful poetry that we love; we hope you enjoy it.â€

Stephanie Gray http://www.leafscape.org/StrawGateBooks/gray.html Stephanie Gray is a poet and experimental filmmaker whose super 8 films often have poem voiceovers. Her first poetry collection, Heart Stoner Bingo (Straw Gate Books) was published this past December. Her films have screened at festivals and venues including Millennium Film Workshop, Ann Arbor, Oberhausen, Viennale, VIDEOEX, Cinematexas, Antimatter, Chicago Underground, and Madcat. She has received funding for her films from the New York Foundation for the Arts and the New York State Council on the Arts.

David Hadbawnik http://www.habenichtpress.com David Hadbawnik is a poet and performer who lives with his wife in Buffalo, N.Y. Recent publications include the books Translations from Creeley (Sardines), Ovid in Exile (Interbirth), and SF Spleen (Skanky Possum); essays in Big Bridge and Chicago Review; and poems in the Marlboro Review (in which his poem â€œThe Godsâ€ was chosen by Heather McHugh as a finalist for the Poetry Prize) and Damn the Caesars. He is the editor and publisher of Habenicht Press and the journal kadar koli. He begins studying toward his Ph.D. in poetics at the University at Buffalo this fall.

Heart Parts
(see Damian Weber for bio)

Casey Holford http://www.caseyholford.com http://www.myspace.com/casey Casey Holford started playing piano at 12, picked up his mother's guitar for coffeehouse and DIY shows at 14, and was performing regularly in the Boston-Providence songwriter circuit by 18. Now living in Brooklyn, he has recorded three self-released solo albums, two EPs, and a recent 7-inch on RiYL records. Along the way Holfordâ€™s managed to tour on the east and west coasts multiple times as well as in Europe, sharing bills with like-minded songwriters such as Erin McKeown, Diane Cluck, Regina Spektor, Kimya Dawson, and Matt the Electrician. He currently moonlights in the bands Outlines, Urban Barnyard, Dream Bitches, and Art Sorority for Girls, playing bass, electric, 12 string, and baritone guitars. He is also a prolific producer, working on projects with fellow bands and songwriters, most recently pop riot Cheese on Bread, visionary Dave Deporis, and upstart Creaky Boards.

Bill Kushner http://www.rattapallax.com/ebooks/DreamsWaters_sample.pdf Bill Kushner is a poet residing in Chelsea. He is the author of In Sunsetland With You (Straw Gate Books), In the Hairy Arms of Whitman (Melville House Publications), He Dreams of Waters (Rattapallax), and That April (United Artists Books) among others. He has twice received a New York Foundation for The Arts fellowship. His work has been published in the Best American Poetry 2002.

Douglas Manson http://www.dougfinmanson.blogspot.com http://www.starcherone.blogspot.com/2008/07/doug-manson-interview-on-having- fallen.html Douglas Manson was born in Akron, Ohio and many years later earned an M.A. in English from Kent State and a Ph.D. in English from The University at Buffalo. He lives in Buffalo as a poet and writer, and publisher of Celery Flute: The Kenneth Patchen Newsletter and little scratch pad editions. He hosted a weekly poetry radio show for a community-based AM station, Inkaudible Poetry Radio from 2004-06. He is a songwriter and guitar player. Amid an ongoing series of chapbooks, he has most recently published a full-length book of poems, Roofing and Siding (BlazeVOX Books), and the expanded chapbook At Any Point (2008).

Kristianne Meal
http://www.artvoice.com/issues/v6n49/guts_guns_and_gusto
Kristianne Meal operates Rust Belt Books in Buffalo, N.Y. from 4D frequencies. Her book TwentyTwo, first pallet (Little Scratch Pad Editions) was published last year.

Sharon Mesmer
http://www.thebestamericanpoetry.typepad.com/the_best_american_poetry/ 2008/0 5/getting-to-kn-1.html http://www.jacketmagazine.com/30/fl-mesmer.html Sharon Mesmer is the recipient of two New York Foundation for the Arts fellowships in poetry. Her two recently released poetry collections are The Virgin Formica (Hanging Loose Press) and Annoying Diabetic Bitch (Combo Books). Her other works include Half Angel, Half Lunch (Hard Press), Vertigo Seeks Affinities (Belladonna Books), and Crossing Second Avenue (ABJ Books). Her work is internationally known including translations and collaborative works. Her work has recently appeared in New American Writing, The Brooklyn Rail, Van Goghâ€™s Ear, and Hanging Loose. Her fiction collections are In Ordinary Time and The Empty Quarter (Hanging Loose Press) and Ma Vie Ã Yonago (in French translation from Hachette LittÃ©ratures, France). She teaches at the New School.

Carol Mirakove
http://www.factoryschool.com/pubs/heretical/vol2/mirakove/index.html Carol Mirakove was born in Queens and lives in Brooklyn. She is the author of Mediated (Factory School), Occupied (Kelsey St. Press), and, with Jen Benka, 1,138 (Belladonna). Her love of poetry began with deterrence to reading, where the vast space on the page provided comfort. Her favorite things include The Cliks, Caravan of Dreams, and math. Carol is a dog person.

Oak Orchard Swamp
(see Jaye Bartell for bio)

kathyrn l. pringle http://www.dusie.org/pringle.html
http://www.42opus.com/v6n2/harmony2 kathryn l. pringle is the author of The Stills (Duration Press) and Temper & Felicity are Lovers (TAXT). Her poems can be read in the Denver Quarterly, Fence, Cold Drill, Dusie, 14 hills, small town, string of small machines, and 580 Split, among others. She edits the literary magazine minor/american, and curates the minor/american reading series in Durham, N.C. She has also been known to blog at minor/american, too.

Ariana Reines, Fence/Fence Books http://www.fence.fenceportal.org
http://www.fencebooks.fenceportal.org Ariana Reines is the author of The Cow (Alberta Prize, Fence Books) and Coeur de Lion (Mal-O-Mar). Two volumes of translation, of works by Charles Baudelaire and GrisÃ©lidis RÃ©al, will appear next year from Mal-O-Mar and Semiotext(e), respectively. New York's Foundry Theatre will produce her first play in February 2009. She'll be Holloway Lecturer in Poetry at the University of California at Berkeley this coming spring. Her next Fence book is MERCURY; it will come out sometime.

Fence is a biannual journal of poetry, fiction, art, and criticism that has a mission to redefine the terms of accessibility by publishing challenging writing distinguished by idiosyncrasy and intelligence rather than by allegiance with camps, schools, or cliques. It is part of our press's mission to support writers who might otherwise have difficulty being recognized because their work doesn't answer to either the mainstream or to recognizable modes of experimentation. Launched in 2001, Fence Books publishes poetry, fiction, critical texts and anthologies, and prioritizes sustained support for its authors, many of whom come to us through our two book contests and then go on to publish second, third, and fourth books.

Ric Royer, Outside Voices
http://www.ricroyer.com
http://www.looktouch.com/press
Ric Royer is a writer, performer, writer of performances and performer of writings. Other works of literature include Hystery of Heat (Publishing Genius), There Were One and It Was Two (Narrow House Records), and Anthesteria (Bark Art Press). The Weather Not The Weather is forthcoming from Outside Voices Press. He is also a founding editor of Ferrum Wheel.

An imprint of Bootstrap Productions (Cambridge, Mass.), Buffalo N.Y.-based Outside Voices publishes poetry & experimental text-based art.

Tom Savage, Straw Gate Books http://www.leafscape.org/StrawGateBooks
With Brainlifts, Tom Savage has published nine books of poetry, his latest arriving this July via Straw Gate Books. After receiving his B.A. at Brooklyn College, Tom then went to India for four years. In 1986 he accompanied Allen Ginsberg and fellow guest poets on a reading tour of Nicaragua. He has been awarded grants from the Fund for Poetry and the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines.

Straw Gate Books, founded by Phyllis Wat in 2005, publishes poetry and occasional related texts. Straw Gate is particularly interested in works by women and non-polemical writing with an underlying social content. They also feature new and long-established authors whose work is under-served. Its books are The Rorschach Factory by Valerie Fox, In Sunsetland With You by Bill Kushner, Heart Stoner Bingo by Stephanie Gray, and Brainlifts by Tom Savage. Forthcoming books include work by Lydia Cortes and Merry Fortune.

Kyle Schlesinger http://www.kyleschlesinger.com Kyle Schlesinger is the author of two books of poetry, Hello Helicopter (BlazeVOX Books) and The Pink (Kenning). He is the co-editor of Mimeo Mimeo with Jed Birmingham and ON with Thom Donovan and Michael Cross. He will be curating the Monday night reading series at the Poetry Project in 2008-09.

Virna Teixeira, Litmus Press/Aufgabe http://www.papelderascunho.net http://www.litmuspress.org Virna Teixeira was born in Fortaleza, Brazil and has lived in SÃ£o Paulo for many years. She is the author of Visita and DistÃ¢ncia, and has three books of translations publishedâ€”Na EstaÃ§Ã£o Central Central, a selection of poems of the Scottish poet Edwin Morgan; Ovelha Negra, an anthology of Scottish poetry; and Livro Universal by Chilean poet HÃ©ctor Hernandez Montecinos. Selections of her poems have been translated and published abroadâ€”Distancia (MÃ©xico, Lunarena Editorial) and Fin de SiÃ¨cle (Editorial Universidad de La Plata, Argentina)â€”and she has participated in anthologies of Brazilian poetry in the U.S., Latin America, and Portugal.

Litmus Press is a nonprofit literature and arts organization dedicated to supporting innovative, cross-genre writing, with an emphasis on poetry and international works in translation. Litmus press publishes two or three single-author works a year, in addition to Aufgabe, an annual journal of poetry, translations, essays, reviews, and art.

Maureen Thorson http://www.reenhead.com/mole/mole.php Maureen Thorson lives in Washington, D.C., where she practices law and runs the smallest press in the world, Big Game Books. She is the author of two chapbooks, Novelty Act (Ugly Duckling Press) and Mayport (Poetry Society of America). Her poems have appeared or are forthcoming in Exquisite Corpse, Octopus, a Handsome Journal, and the Yale Anthology of Younger American Poetry.

Damian Weber, House Press http://www.housepress.org http://www.housepress.blogspot.com Damian Weber has published 18 books with House Press, including his newest Barkeater, which he will be reading from at the Welcome to Boog City festival. He thinks there should be more readings like this one, and is so excited to see Eileen Myles because he thinks she's the coolest ever and that Chelsea Girls is how more people should write. He met her once at Susan Howe's class and she told a story about reading a Kobainer poem at a poetry slam in Seattle and totally losing. Apparently they're no fun.

House Press came together in Buffalo in 2002 as poets inside and outside the University at Buffalo started daily and nightly collaborations. That year, they began a workshop at 149 Lisbon, a reading series at Spot Coffee, minted the first issue of the magazine Drill, and published their first book, an our-man collaboration/collection. Since then, some members have scattered to Chicago, Brooklyn, San Francisco, Albany, St. Louis, and Charlottesville, Va., while others have held down the fort. Drill has morphed into String of Small Machines (S.F./Chicago), and two other magazines, Spell (Chicago) and Source Material (Brooklyn), have arisen. Meanwhile, House has put out over two dozen books and a half-dozen CDs. In addition to poetry and music, they've also worked with prose, street art, book art, and film.

TBD, Cy Gist Press http://www.cygistpress.com Editor Mark Lamoureux started Cy Gist Press in 2006. The press' focus is on ekphrastic poetry, or works that have a strong visual sensibility. Volumes are handmade in print runs of 100-150, with all design work and printing done in-house by Lamoureux.

*Sunday

Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
http://www.quoileternite.blogspot.com
Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ is a poet living in North Massapequa. She's the author of Document (Octopus Books).

Lee Ann Brown http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Brown.html http://www.epc.buffalo.edu/authors/brown Lee Ann Brown loves to perform. Her books include The Sleep That Changed Everything (Wesleyan University Press) and Polyverse (Sun & Moon Press), the latter of which included earlier chapbooks such as a museme (Boog Literature) and Crush (Leave Books). She loves to sing and play with her daughter Miranda, who is beginning kindergarten this fall at The Blue Man Creativity Center, as well as collaborate with her husband, Tony Torn, with whom she has started The French Broad Institute (of Time and the River) in Marshall, N.C. During the school year she lives in NYC, goes to lots of readings, and teaches poetry at St. John's University.

Tisa Bryant http://www.themagicmakers.blogspot.com/2007/03/tisa-bryant-authorscholar-tis a-bryant.html Tisa Bryant makes work that often traverses the boundaries of genre, culture, and history. Her first book, Unexplained Presence (Leon Works), is a collection of original, hybrid essays that remix narratives

from eurocentric film, literature, and visual arts and zoom in on the black presences operating within them. Her writing has appeared or is forthcoming in a number of places, including Abraham Lincoln, The Believer, 1913: A Journal of Forms, Sustainable Aircraft, and with the paintings of visual artist Laylah Ali. She is also author of the chapbook, Tzimmes (a+bend Press). She is assistant professor of writing at St. John's University, Queens; lives in Crown Heights, Brooklyn; and is a founding editor/publisher of the hardcover annual The Encyclopedia Project.

Julia Cohen http://www.onthemessiersideofneat.blogspot.com http://www.pshares.blogspot.com/2007/12/new-voice-1-julia-cohen.html Julia Cohen is the author of three chapbooks, If Fire, Arrival (horse less press), Who Could Forget the Sensational First Evening of the Night (H_NGM_N B__KS), and, with Mathias Svalina, When We Broke the Microscope (Small Fires Press). Her chapbooks The History of a Lake Never Drowns (Dancing Girl Press) and, also with Mathias Svalina, Chugwater (Transmission Press) are forthcoming. Poems have been published in Denver Quarterly, Copper Nickel, Bird Dog, Spinning Jenny, the tiny, MiPOesia, GutCult, and Forklift, Ohio, among others.

John Coletti
http://www.fewfurpressrainbow.blogspot.com
John Coletti is the author of The New Normalcy (Boog Literature), Physical Kind (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs), and the forthcoming Same Enemy Rainbow (fewer & further). He is the editor of The Poetry Project Newsletter.

Jennifer Firestone
http://www.asu.edu/pipercwcenter/how2journal/vol_3_no_2/mentoring/interview_ firestone_myles.html Jennifer Firestone is the co-editor of Letters To Poets: Conversations About Poetics, Politics, and Community (Saturnalia Books), forthcoming in October. She is the author of Holiday (Shearsman Books), Waves (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs), and From Flashes and snapshot (Sona Books). Her work has appeared in HOW2, LUNGFULL!, Xcp: Streetnotes, Fourteen Hills, Dusie, 580 Split, and Saint Elizabeth Street, among others. She is an assistant professor teaching poetry at Eugene Lang College at The New School for Liberal Arts, and lives in Brooklyn with her husband and their infant twins.

Corrine Fitzpatrick
http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/fitzpatrick.html
http://www.brooklynrail.org/2006/11/poetry/poetry-by-corrine-fitzpatrick
Corrine Fitzpatrick is the author of Zamboanguena and On Melody Dispatch. She is in the M.F.A. program at Bard College and is the program coordinator for The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church.

Edward Foster http://www.stevens.edu/provost/academics/undergraduate/faculty_profile1.php?faculty_id=905 http://www.lightmillennium.org/2005_15th/edfoster_fbingul_interview.html Ed Fosterâ€™s recent books include What He Ought To Know: New and Selected Poems (Marsh Hawk Press) and A History of the Common Scale. Described by one critic as "the epitome of the poet/scholar," he is the author of numerous volumes of literary criticism and history but is better know for his poetry, characterized by "sureness of register, intelligence of arrangement, delicacy of emotional patterning, elegance of effect" says Verse magazine. The founding editor of Talisman House Publishers, he is a professor of history and an associate dean in the College of Arts and Letters at the Stevens Institute of Technology.

Yoko Kikuchi http://www.yokokikuchi.com http://www.dreambitches.org Yoko Kikuchi writes songs to play solo, as well as being the main songwriter for Dream Bitches. She has one solo release, Songs I Wrote For You, and is working on releasing a solo triple-album in the fall. Dream Bitches has two albumsâ€”Sanfransisters (Olive Juice Music) and Coke-and-Spiriters (Recommended If You Like Records). As well as recording her own projects, Kikuchi appears as a backing vocalist/harmony composer on a number of recordings by talented artists including Dan Fishback, Phoebe Kreutz, Dibs, Casey Holford, Josh Malamy, and Andrew Phillip Tipton. She also performs/guest stars in a number of groups, most notably the Kreutzenjammer Kids, Piaf the Eiffel Tower, and The Leader.

Amy King http://www.amyking.org Amy King is the author of I'm the Man Who Loves You and Antidotes for an Alibi (BlazeVOX Books), and, most recently, Kiss Me With the Mouth of Your Country (Dusie Press). She is the moderator for the Poetics List and the Women's Poetry Listserv, and teaches English and creative writing at Nassau Community College. She is currently editing an anthology, The Urban Poetic, forthcoming from Factory School.

Rachel Levitsky http://www.delirioushem.blogspot.com/2008/02/dim-sum-rachel-levitsky.html http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/levitsky.html Rachel Levitsky is the author of Under the Sun (Futurepoem books) and five poetry chapbooks. She has written several poetry plays, three of which (one of them with Camille Roy) have been performed in New York and San Francisco. Recently her work was translated into Icelandic for the anthology 131.839 SlÃ¶g Med Bilum by EirÃkur Ã–rn Nordahl. Online poetry and critical essays can be found at Delirious Hem, Narrativity, Duration Press, How2, and Web Conjunctions, among others. She is the founder and co-director of Belladonna*, an event and publication series of feminist avant-garde poetics.

Timothy Liu
http://www.poets.org/poet.php/prmPID/114
Timothy Liu has two new books of poetry forthcoming, Bending the Mind Around
the Dreamâ€™s Blown Fuse (Talisman House Press) and Polytheogamy (Saturnalia Books). He lives in Manhattan.

Eileen Myles
http://www.eileenmyles.com
http://www.eileenmyles.net
Eileen Myles was born in Cambridge, Mass. in 1949, and moved to New York City in 1974 to be a poet. Since then she has written produced, performed, and edited more than 20 plays, libretti, films books of poetry, and fiction, most recently Sorry, Tree. Importance of Being Iceland (essays) and The Inferno, a poet's novel, are forthcoming. She lives and writes in New York.

Mendi Lewis Obadike http://www.blacknetart.com Mendi Lewis Obadike is the author of Armor and Flesh: Poems and the libretto for the internet opera The Sour Thunder. The Whitney Museum of American Art, Yale University, and the New York African Film Festival and Electronic Arts Intermix, are among the institutions that have commissioned her text-based new media art. She received a Rockefeller New Media Award to develop TaRonda, Who Wore White Gloves, an opera which explores black codes of conduct. She developed Four Electric Ghosts (an opera based on Amos Tutuola's novel My Life in the Bush of Ghosts and the video game Pac-Man) in Toni Morrison's Atelier at Princeton in the fall of 2005. Mendi lives and works with her husband Keith in the New York metropolitan area.

Simon Pettet http://www.jacketmagazine.com/29/leddy-pettet.html http://www.jacketmagazine.com/25/pett-berr-iv.html Simon Pettet is an internationally renowned English-born poet and long-time Lower East Side resident. His most recent book of poems is the much-acclaimed More Winnowed Fragments (Talisman House Press). Hearthâ€”New and Selected Poems is due from the same publisher later in the fall. He is also the author of two classic collaborations with photographer-filmmaker, Rudy Burckhardt, Conversations About Everything and Talking Pictures, and edited the Art Writings of the Pulitzer-prize-winning New York School poet James Schuyler. "Like Beethoven's Bagatelles", John Ashbery has written, â€œSimon Pettet's short poems have a great deal to say, and their seeming modest dimensions help rather than hinder his saying it.â€

Nick Piombino
http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Piombino%20interview.htm

http://www.nickpiombino.blogspot.com
Nick Piombino guest edited OCHO 14. He opened his ongoing weblog fait accompli in February 2003. His latest books are fait accompli (Factory School) and Free Fall (Otoliths), a collage novel containing over 150 full-color images. Contradicta, with illustrations by Toni Simon is due this fall from Green Integer.

Meghan Punschke http://www.megpunschke.com Meghan Punschke is the author of Stratification (BlazeVOX Books). She resides in New York City, and has an M.F.A. in poetry from The New School. She is the curator and host of Word of Mouth, a reading series dedicated to poets and fiction/non-fiction writers. She is also the managing editor for the literary journal Oranges & Sardines. Her poetry was nominated for a Pushcart Prize in 2007, and it can be found in MiPO, No Tell Motel, Coconut, Sawbuck, and OCHO, among others.

Christopher Stackhouse http://www.readab.com/cstackhouse.html Christopher Stackhouse is the author of the poetry collection Slip (Corollary Press) and co-author of Seismosis (1913 Press), which features a collaboration of Stackhouse's drawings with text by writer/author/professor John Keene. He is a Cave Canem Writers Fellow, and, a 2005 Fellow in Poetry from the New York Foundation for the Arts. He has recently successfully completed studies, granting him an M.F.A. in writing/interdisciplinary studies from Bard College in 2009.

Mathias Svalina http://www.mathiassvalina.blogspot.com Mathias Svalina is a co-editor of Octopus Magazine and Octopus Books. He is the author of the chapbooks Why I Am White (Kitchen Press), Creation Myths (New Michigan Press), and The Viral Lease (Small Anchor Press). He is the co-author of the collaboratively written chapbooks Or Else What, Asked the Flame, with Paula Cisewski (SC Press), When We Broke the Microscope (Small Fires Press), and Chugwater (Transmission Press), which were both written with Julia Cohen. His first book, Destruction Myth, is forthcoming from Cleveland State University Press next year.

Stacy Szymaszek
http://www.lemonhound.blogspot.com/2008/04/autoportraits-conversation-with-s tacy.html Stacy Szymaszek is the author of Emptied of All Ships and the forthcoming Hyperglossia (both Litmus Press). She recently published her faux coming-of-age tale Orizaba: A Voyage with Hart Crane (Faux Press). Her passion for Crane is so real. She is the artistic director of the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church.

↑ Index

224. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Tue 26 Aug 2008

---

got a great japanese bilingual book of his collected poems at housing works for 1$
they had many books by him in a big sale in many different languages
On Mon, 25 Aug 2008 11:37:52 -0400 Nicholas Piombino
<[redacted]> writes:
> A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound > copy of > Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy > slightly > discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate > example of my > all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the > very > best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and > Company
> in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his > second > book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore > constructed > out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one > signed > copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes
> for > $125. I paid $1.
>
> Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is > tempered
> by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has > accrued over > decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly > autobiographical
> element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving > philosophy
> of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for > material > that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at > first > glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such > persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is > well worth > forcing myself through what might be their less canonically > important works.

> The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places > yet hard,
> or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of > getting to > know a person.
>
> Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's > lesser > works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go > back and > force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is > no > question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, > perhaps > avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some > surface
> or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his > journals and > other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know > any > worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which > involves > feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing > works, or
> sides of a person, with too great finality.
>
> Hello to Murat and best to all,
> Nick
>
> On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was > going to make > > his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to > becoming a > > novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet.
> Actually.
> > the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically > starting with an > > off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his > profession."

> >
> > Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script > Smoke (the > > photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I > believe > > as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what > other poets > > (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude,
> another
> > memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses > his dead > > father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the > "fruit" of > > these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The > translations are > > much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold > fire at > > the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.
> >
> > I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should > confront
> > Auster's poetry more directly.
> >
> > Ciao,
> >
> > Murat
> >
> >
> > On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell
> <[redacted]>wrote:
> >
> >> i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many > thoughts. but I > >> love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster,
> read
> >> recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry;
> dark,
> >> severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
> >> & since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's > one of my > >> favorite Auster poems.

> >> From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
> >> Nothern Lights
> >> These are the words
> >> that do not survive the world. And to speak them
> >> is to vanish
> >> into the world. Unapproachable
> >> light
> >> that heaves above the earth, kindling
> >> the brief miracle
> >> of the open eye-
> >> and the day that will spread
> >> like a fire of leaves
> >> through the first chill wind
> >> of October
> >> consuming the world
> >> in the plain speech
> >> of desire.
> >>
> >>
> >>
> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >
> guidelines &
>
>
>

↑ Index

225. Justin Katko

Stephen Rodefer's Call It Thought: Selected Poems

Tue 26 Aug 2008

Dear Poetics List:

I am pleased to announce the publication of Stephen Rodefer's new book, Call It Thought/Selected Poems, now out from Carcanet Press, at 300 pages, with a foreword by Rod Mengham. It is available in the United States for $38.95 via the Independent Publishers Group - http://www.ipgbook.com - and in the UK for 15 pounds directly from Carcanet - http://www.carcanet.co.uk/cgi-bin/indexer?product—81857549492

Back cover blurb: Call It Thought spans more than forty years of writing by an American poet whose career has encompassed a large portion of modern literary culture. As a student, Stephen Rodefer conversed with Robert Frost; he studied with Olson, Creeley, Ed Dorn, Amiri Baraka, and Basil Bunting before moving in the 1970s to San Francisco, where his work was first published and where he was an original member of Poets Theater.

Grounded in the modernism of Stein, Pound and Williams, Rodefer is heir also to Frank O'Hara's playful virtuosity, and associated with the experimentalism of Language poetry. Touching all these, his work is a series of provocative re-inventions, exhilarating, innovative and independent of any orthodoxy.

This volume brings together his work for the first time. New, unpublished writing is included as well as some of his acclaimed translations of Villon and part of his award-winning Four Lectures, of which Robert Creeley declared, 'Very SOLID, GREAT and useful satiric ploy with bedrock concerns. Grab Four Lectures, it's possibly the last real sense you'll be offered.'

'Youthful what? Where is Rodefer, he'll know. That damn Lycidas. Whatever else England draws upon, it's native talent will out. The damn Lycidas! Where did Rodefer go? Youthful what?' - Charles Olson

'Stephen Rodefer's writing is simply one of the eighth wonders of the invisible world.' - Ian Patterson

- -

http://rodefer.ms11.net/

↑ Index

226. Stephen Vincent
Public Art in Denver
Tue 26 Aug 2008

Denver - along with the convention - is featuring a number of public art events as a kind of 'choral' visual response to the occasion. In fact, I think Ann Hamilton is actually working with a chorus. This piece - poetry in motion! - on You Tube is pretty good.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vhknOW7jaRA

The State of Things

a temporary sculpture
by Ligorano/Reese

part of BrushFire, a Provisions Library Public Art Program

Are there any poetry readings related to the Convention going on in Denver? Has Naropa sent over a delegation? Or have the visual folks trumped the Verb Muse again!

By the way - re the destruction of the Constitution by way of Bush/Cheney and company, Jane Mayer's THE DARK SIDE is a transparent account of the history of all this - and very well written.

Stephen Vhttp:
//stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

227. steve russell

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Tue 26 Aug 2008

I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until Murat had informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he decided to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell enough books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette Winterson doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or poetry. I think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.

----- Original Message ----
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Nick,

You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which Auster obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.

I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much for publishers as for readers.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <[redacted]
> wrote:

A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and Company in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.

Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works. The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard, or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting to know a person.

Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,
Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming a novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually.

the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with an off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."

*Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the* photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe
*as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead* father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit" of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire at the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted]
wrote:

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but I love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark, severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
& since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-

> and the day that will spread
> like a fire of leaves
> through the first chill wind
> of October
> consuming the world
> in the plain speech
> of desire.
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines &

↑ Index

228. Patrick Duggan

Idiolexicon 2.1: Sorry for Sedoka

Tue 26 Aug 2008

Hi everyone,

Idiolexicon, the folks who've brought you the popular Idiolexicon Poetry Series at San Francisco's Cafe Royale, have just released late-summer's Idiolexicon Issue 2.1 – "Sorry For Sedoka" – to the website.

Elliot Harmon writes:* Jack Morgan and I had been talking about doing some sort of cross-promotional doohickey between Sorry for Snake<http://stormypetrelpress.com/s4s/>and Idiolexicon. He just suggested that I put a note on the Idiolexicon blog saying that the first ten people to comment on it would get a free copy of * S4S4* in the mail. But I resisted because frankly, I don't like you people that much. You and I know you don't deserve such an excellent poetry journal just for leaving a lousy comment.

So instead, I thought, why don't we revive a traditional poetic form, just like that ghazal guy did for ghazals a few years ago? In the world of traditional Japanese poetry, the haiku gets far too much attention to the exclusion of its buddies. Japanese poets would sometimes use the sedoka form to send each other messages. With the discursive usage and Twitterish length of the form, 2008 clearly has a sedoka-shaped hole. -EH*

www.idiolexicon.com

Check it out! Submissions will be open soon for the next issue once the final theme has been hashed out. Keep checking back!

Patrick Duggan

--
Patrick Duggan
Co-Editor & Founder
Idiolexicon

↑ Index

229. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books

Fw: Nathaniel Tarn Reading at Acequia Booksellers

Tue 26 Aug 2008

[forwarded from Gary Wilkie, Acequia Booksellers, www.acequiabooksellers.com]

----- Original Message -----
Subject: Nathaniel Tarn Reading at Acequia Booksellers

Dear Friends, Just a note to let you know that poet Nathaniel Tarn will be reading on Sunday September 7 at 3pm at Acequia Booksellers, 4019 4th St. NW in Albuquerque. The reading is free and the public is invited. More information on Nathaniel below:

Nathaniel Tarn, Poet, Translator, Critic, Anthropologist has led a distinguished literary and academic career studying and/or teaching at the Universities of Cambridge, Paris, Chicago, London, SUNY Buffalo, Princeton, Pennsylvania, and Colorado. He has published over 35 books including The Beautiful Contradictions (Random House), Views from the Weaving Mountain (1991), Lyrics for the Bride of God (New Directions), Selected Poems : 1950-2000 (Wesleyan), and Where Babylon Ends (Grossman/Cape Goliard). His most recent book is Ins and Outs of the Forest Rivers (New Directions 2008). He was the founding editor of Cape Editions & Cape Goliard London-New York in the late 60's, publishers of Charles Olson, J.H. Prynne, Ted Berrigan and others. He is the recipient of numerous awards including the Guinness prize, a Wenner Gren fellowship, a Commonwealth of Pennsylvania fellowship, and a Rockefeller Foundation fellowship. Until his retirement in 1985, Tarn was a professor in comparative literature at Rutgers.

For over forty years, Nathaniel Tarn has been celebrated as an extraordinary figure in American writing. His work in a variety of scholarly and literary genres has ranged from Maya ritual to Jewish mysticism, the monasteries of Burma to the arctic seas of Alaska. One of the founders of ethnopoetics, he has brought to poetry an almost limitless range of interests and a remarkable dexterity in both open and closed forms. As Eliot Weinberger has written, "What holds it together is Tarn's ecstatic vision, his continuing enthusiasm for the stuff of the world."

Hope to see you at the reading. This is a "don't miss" event.
Best,
Gary

↑ Index

230. Deborah M. Poe
Re: Public Art in Denver
Tue 26 Aug 2008

Poignant.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Stephen Vincent
Sent: Tuesday, August 26, 2008 12:21 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Public Art in Denver

Denver - along with the convention - is featuring a number of public art events as a kind of 'choral' visual response to the occasion. In fact, I think Ann Hamilton is actually working with a chorus. This piece - poetry in motion! - on You Tube is pretty good.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vhknOW7jaRA

The State of Things

a temporary sculpture
by Ligorano/Reese

part of BrushFire, a Provisions Library Public Art Program

Are there any poetry readings related to the Convention going on in Denver? Has Naropa sent over a delegation? Or have the visual folks trumped the Verb Muse again!

By the way - re the destruction of the Constitution by way of Bush/Cheney and company, Jane Mayer's THE DARK SIDE is a transparent account of the history of all this - and very well written.

Stephen Vhttp:
//stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

231. Tim Peterson
Seldess, Richard & Schlesinger @ Unnameable Books
Tue 26 Aug 2008

Jesse Seldess, Frances Richard & Kyle SchlesingerSeptember 4th, 7 pm at Unnamable Books 456 Bergen Street, Prospect Heights, Brooklyn (between 5th Ave and Flatbush Ave)http://www.yelp.com/map/unnameable-books-brooklyn-2Hosted by Brenda IijimaJesse Seldess' book, Who Opens was published by Kenning Editions. Chapbooks of his poems have been published by Answer Tag Press, Bronze Skull Press and the Chicago Poetry Project. He lives in Berlin where he organizes The Floating Series of exhibitions and events with Leonie Weber as well as edits Antennae, a journal of experimental writing, music, and performance.Frances Richard's forthcoming chapbooks included Anarch. from Woodland Editions, as well as S h a v e d C o d e from Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs and her book of poems, See Through, was published by Four Way Books in 2003. She writes frequently about contemporary art, teaches at Barnard College and the Rhode Island School of Design, and lives in Brooklyn. Kyle Schlesinger is the author of Hello Helicopter (Blaze Vox) and most recently, The Pink (Kenning Editions). He is the editor of Cuneiform Press and is the Monday Night Coordinator at St. Marks Poetry Project.

↑ Index

232. Geoffrey Gatza
THANK YOU 80% To Our Goal! BlazeVOX [books] fund drive update :-)
Tue 26 Aug 2008

THANK YOU

80% To Our Goal!

I want to say thank you to everyone for coming to our aid in our recent fund drive. Thank you so much for your help and support! So far in two weeks we have commitments for $7500 so hurray! Thank you a thousand times for helping us see this through!

It is wonderful to experience this kind of support. I am overwhelmed by all of the responses we have received. We have heard from around North America, and from great distances such as Australia, Bahrain, Italy, Ireland and Japan! It warms my heart to know that this press has found such a find place in so many hearts! Thank you and hurray!

You are the best and I will never forget your kindness!!!

Best, Geoffrey

20% To go:

We are still running our fund drive and we have several ways you can participate.

Our Online Raffle will be held on September 1st so there is still plenty of time to play!

Win 25 BlazeVOX [books]

A $500 value

Your choice of 95 titles so you cannot lose!

5 drawings over 5 weeks

$5 a chance

$25 one chance for each drawing

Hurray!!! Paypal us now at our Official Raffle page !!!!

http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm>

BUT WAIT why try a chance!

Make a donation now to help save BlazeVOX [books] and we will send you books!

10 titles ‹ $100 [a $200 value]

15 titles ‹ $200 [a $300 value]

20 titles ‹ $300 [a $400 value]

25 titles ‹ $400 [a $500 value]

http://www.blazevox.org/bakesale.htm

↑ Index

233. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Wed 27 Aug 2008

Steve,

The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The shift in the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective novel) occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with success, Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from it. In reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure. The protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to reach his end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more specific, making a living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end reinforces the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at least in The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining act, in becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact (at least in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing in his poems.

Ciao,

Murat

On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:

> I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until Murat had informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he decided to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell enough books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette Winterson doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or poetry. I think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
> Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
>
> Nick,
>
> You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which Auster > obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.
>
> I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much for publishers as for readers.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
> [redacted]
> wrote:
>
> A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and Company in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.

Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works. The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard, or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting to know a person.

Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,

Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

*In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming
a
novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually.
the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with
an
off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."*

*Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit"
of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire at the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.*

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

*On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted]
wrote:*

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but

I
love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark, severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life." & since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind
of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

guidelines

guidelines &

guidelines

↑ Index

234. Pierre Joris
Recent posts on Nomadics
Wed 27 Aug 2008

Well, summer's over — or so it seems because teaching has started up again & I'm trying to get up to speed with posting on Nomadics. Enjoy these recent posts by going to: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

The State of Things by Ligorano/Reese
Global warming time bomb trapped in Arctic soil
Pélieu & Beach: "Insider"
The Jewel of Medi(n)a Failing Darwish's Legacy
The Saif Ghobash – Banipal Prize
Jürgen Habermas on a "Post-Secular Society"

be well,

Pierre _____
_____ Hey,

Want a free Obama/Biden sticker? MoveOn's giving them away totally free--even the shipping's free. I just got mine, and wanted to share the opportunity with you.

Click this link to get a free Obama/Biden sticker:

http://pol.moveon.org/barackstickers/?id=-10178572-xj0q2zx&rc=manual_forward

Thanks!

_____
The poet: always in partibus infidelium -- Paul Celan

_____
Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202
h: [redacted]
c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Paris: 09.52.80.14.18
Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

_____

↑ Index

235. Deborah M. Poe
modern review?
Wed 27 Aug 2008

Does anyone know what happened to The Modern Review? Their domain is no longer available.

-----Original Message-----
From: Deborah M. Poe [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, August 12, 2008 10:05 AM
To: 'Poetics List (UPenn, UB)'
Subject: news on the modern review?

Anyone know what happened to http://parsifal-press.blogspot.com/2007/09/modern-review-iii1.html (Modern Review)? I think I must have missed some news?

Thank you, Deborah

↑ Index

236. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo Newsletter 08.25.08-08.31.08
Wed 27 Aug 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
08.25.08-08.31.08

BABEL 2008-2009 SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE SOLD OUT!

If you would like to be put on a waiting list for tickets, please send an email with your name and daytime telephone number to [redacted].

EVENTS THIS WEEK

08.28.08

Rust Belt Books
Matt Clabeaux
Book Reading for: My First Year in Purgatory
Thursday, August 28, 7:00 PM
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St.

08.29.08

Rust Belt Books
Poetry Reading and Performance by Jaye Bartell and Friends

Friday, August 29, 7:00 PM
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St.

08.31.08

Rust Belt Books
Storytelling by Joan Goldberg
Sunday, August 31, 2008 @ 3:30 PM
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St.

LITERARY BUFFALO RSS FEED

You can now subscribe to the Literary Buffalo RSS feed for up to the minute info on literary happenings around town:

feed://www.justbuffalo.org/rss/

FACEBOOK

Join the Friends of Just Buffalo Literary Center Facebook Group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=13187515545&ref=ts

WESTERN NEW YORK ROMANCE WRITERS group meets the third Wednesday of every month at St. Joseph Hospital community room at 11a.m. Address: 2605 Harlem Road, Cheektowaga, NY 14225. For details go to www.wnyrw.org.

JOIN JUST BUFFALO ONLINE!!!

If you would like to join Just Buffalo, or simply make a massive personal donation, you can do so online using your credit card. We have recently added the ability to join online by paying with a credit card through PayPal. Simply click on the membership level at which you would like to join, log in (or create a PayPal account using your Visa/Amex/Mastercard/Discover), and voilá, you will find yourself in literary heaven. For more info, or to join now, go to our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/membership/index.shtml

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

Michael Kelleher

Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

237. Nicholas Piombino

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Wed 27 Aug 2008

This is a digression from the discussion on Auster, but Thomas Hardy, who mainly prized his poetry writing, now neglected by comparison to his novels, late in life published the following poem, that I couldn't help but copy out:

Thoughts at Midnight

Mankind, you dismay me
When shadows waylay me!-
Not by your splendours
Do you affray me,
Nor as pretenders
To demonic keenness,
Nor by your meanness,
Nor by your ill-teachings
Nor your false preachings,
Nor your banalities
And immoralities,
Nor by your daring
Nor sinister bearing;
But by your madnesses
Capping cool badnesses,
Acting like puppets
Under Time's buffets;
In superstitions
And ambitions
Moved by no wisdom,
Far sight, or system,
Led by sheer senselessness

And presciencelessness
Into unreason
And hideous self-treason....
God, look he on you,
Have mercy upon you!

part written 25 May 1906

(published in his last book of poems "Winter Words in Various Moods")

On 8/27/08 12:09 AM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Steve,
>
> *The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The shift in the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective novel) occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with success, Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from it. In reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure. The protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to reach his end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more specific, making a living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end reinforces the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at least in The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining act, in becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact (at least in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing in his poems.*
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until Murat had informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he decided to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell enough books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette Winterson doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or poetry. I think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM

Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Nick,

You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which Auster
obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.

I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much for publishers as for readers.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
[redacted]
wrote:

A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and Company in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.

Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered
by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works.

The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard,
or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting to know a person.

Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or
sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,
Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming
a
novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually.
the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with
an
off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."

*Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the* photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe
as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets
*(Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another* memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit"

of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations
are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire
at
the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront
Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted]
wrote:

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts.
but
I
love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark,
severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life." & since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my
favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind
of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

> guidelines
>
> guidelines &
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

238. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Wed 27 Aug 2008

---

i know many folks who went from poetry to novels for that reason $$$ i couldn't make the transition if i tried auster made it BIG hard enough for me just to write

On Wed, 27 Aug 2008 00:09:04 -0400 Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> writes:
> Steve,
>
> The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The > shift in > the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective > novel) > occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with > success,
> Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from
> it. In > reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure. The > protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to > reach his > end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more specific, > making a > living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end > reinforces > the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at > least in

> The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining > act, in > becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact (at > least > in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing in > his > poems.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>
>
> On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until > Murat had > > informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he > decided > > to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell > enough
> > books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette > Winterson
> > doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or > poetry. I > > think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.
> >
> >
> >
> > ----- Original Message ----
> > From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> > To: [redacted]
> > Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
> > Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
> >
> > Nick,

> >
> > You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer
> -which > > Auster
> > obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than
> the > > successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.
> >
> > I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that
> writer's > > work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This > goes as much > > for publishers as for readers.
> >
> > Ciao,
> >
> > Murat
> >
> >
> > On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
> > [redacted]
> > > wrote:
> >
> > > A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a
> hardbound copy of > > > Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy > slightly > > > discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate > example of
> > my > > > all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among > the very > > > best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books
> and > > Company
> > > in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of > his second > > > book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore
> constructed > > > out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the > one signed > > > copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy

> goes for > > > $125. I paid $1.
> > >
> > > Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me
> is > > tempered
> > > by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has > accrued
> > over > > > decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly > autobiographical > > > element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an > evolving
> > > philosophy
> > > of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for > material
> > > that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel > at first > > > glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of > such > > > persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it > is well > > > worth
> > > forcing myself through what might be their less canonically > important
> > > works.
> > > The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in > places yet
> > > hard,
> > > or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of > getting
> > to > > > know a person.
> > >
> > > Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile
> writer's > > lesser > > > works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I > go back
> > and > > > force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there > is no

> > > question that time spent with a previously unread work of > Auster's,
> > perhaps > > > avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of > some > > surface
> > > or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his > journals and > > > other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to > know any > > > worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which > involves > > > feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing > works, or
> > > sides of a person, with too great finality.
> > >
> > > Hello to Murat and best to all,
> > > Nick
> > >
> > > On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]>
> wrote:
> > >
> > > > In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was > going to > > > > make > > > > his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted
> to > > becoming
> > > > a > > > > novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own > bet.
> > > > Actually.
> > > > the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically > starting
> > with
> > > > an > > > > off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his > profession."
> > > >
> > > > Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script
> Smoke
> > > > (the > > > > photographing of the same place over and over again)- > personally I > > > believe > > > > as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what > other

> > poets
> > > > (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of > Solitude,
> > another > > > > memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he > uses his > > > dead > > > > father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as
> the > > "fruit"
> > > of > > > > these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The > translations
> > are > > > > much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the > cold fire
> > at
> > > > the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.
> > > >
> > > > I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should
> confront
> > > > Auster's poetry more directly.
> > > >
> > > > Ciao,
> > > >
> > > > Murat
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell
> <[redacted]
> > > >wrote:
> > > >
> > > >> i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many > thoughts.
> > but
> > > I
> > > >> love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero,

> Auster, read
> > > >> recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent > poetry; dark,
> > > >> severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
> > > >> & since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, > here's one of
> > my
> > > >> favorite Auster poems.
> > > >> From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
> > > >> Nothern Lights
> > > >> These are the words
> > > >> that do not survive the world. And to speak them
> > > >> is to vanish
> > > >> into the world. Unapproachable
> > > >> light
> > > >> that heaves above the earth, kindling
> > > >> the brief miracle
> > > >> of the open eye-
> > > >> and the day that will spread
> > > >> like a fire of leaves
> > > >> through the first chill wind
> > > >> of October
> > > >> consuming the world
> > > >> in the plain speech
> > > >> of desire.
> > > >>
> > > >>
> > > >>
> Check
> > > guidelines
> > > >>
> > > >>
> > > >
> Check
> > > guidelines &
> > >
> Check
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> guidelines
> >

> >
> >
> >
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

239. Shankar, Ravi (English)

Drunken Boat Multimedia Performance, AAWW in NYC, 8/28/08, 7:00 to 9:00 pm

Wed 27 Aug 2008

Join Drunken Boat, international online journal of the arts <http://www.drunkenboat.com>, in an exhibition of literary and multimedia arts. Join Guggenheim fellow Meena Alexander, vocalist and sound artist LaTasha N. Nevada Diggs, Hertog Fellow and fiction writer Geronimo Madrid, sound sculptor Sawako, poet Jerry Williams, Sarah Lawrence professor and installation artist Robin Starbuck, and Tribeca and LA film festival featured musician Jonathan Zalben in a performance to promote the forthcoming tenth anniversary issue (Winter 08/09).

Sponsored by Singha Beer and Chinatown Ice Cream Factory. Suggested donation $5.

Thursday, August 28th, 2008. 7:00 pm.

At

The Asian American Writers' Workshop
16 West 32nd Street, Suite 10A
New York, NY 10001
(p) [redacted] http://www.aaww.org/

FEATURING:

Meena Alexander's six books of poetry include Illiterate Heart , which won the PEN Open Book Award, Raw Silk and Quickly Changing River (2008). She has written a memoir Fault Lines; a book of essays and poems Shock of Arrival: Reflections on PostColonial Experience and edited Indian Love Poems She has received fellowships from the Guggenheim Foundation, the Fulbright Foundation and the Rockefeller Foundation. She is Distinguished Professor of English at Hunter College and the Graduate Center at the City University of New York. Currently she is working on a new volume of poems as well as essays on poetry, migration and memory.

Writer, vocalist and sound artist, LaTasha N. Nevada Diggs, is the author of three chapbooks which include Ichi-Ban and Ni-Ban (MOH Press), and Manuel is destroying my bathroom (Belladonna Press), as well as the album, Televisíon. Her work has been published in Nocturnes, Rattapallax, Spoken Word Revolution Redux, drumvoices review, and Tea Party Magazine. LaTasha has recieved scholarships, residencies, and fellowships from Cave Canem, Harvestworks Digital Media Arts Center, Naropa Institute, Caldera Arts, New York Foundation for the Arts, and the Eban Demarest Trust. LaTasha is the poetry curator for, www.exittheapple.com. She is a Harlem Elohi Aniyunwiya Native.

Geronimo Madrid's fiction has appeared in The Literary Review, Bomb! Magazine, storySouth.com, and at www.drunkenboat.com <http://www.drunkenboat.com> . In 2007, the New York State Writers Institute at Skidmore College awarded him the Mimi Bresler Smith & Patricia Robertson Amusa-Shonubi Minority Scholarship. And in April 2008, he was invited to read at the New York Public Library in its regular series, "Periodically Speaking: Literary-Magazine Editors Introduce Emerging Writers at The New York Public Library." He received his MFA in Creative Writing at Hunter College, where he was a Hertog Fellow.

Sawako is a sound sculptor who understands the value of dynamics and the power of silence. Once through the processor named Sawako, subtle fragments in everyday life float in space vividly with a digital yet organic texture. Her unique sonic world has been called "post romantic sound" by Boston's Weekly Dig. Sawako released 4 solo albums from 12k and Anticipate. She has performed internationally in MUTEK (Canada); Warm Up at P.S.1, Tonic, Roulette, Issue Project Room, Starbucks Salon (NYC); Corcoran Gallery (Washington DC); UCLA Hammer Museum (LA); Glade Festival, ICA (UK); OFFF (Lisbon); Apple Store (Japan) etc. Born in Nagoya, Japan, Sawako obtained a Master's degree at ITP, NYU. www.troncolon.com

Robin Starbuck, Assistant Professor at Sarah Lawrence, Associate Degree Programs, is a multmedia/installation artist who holds her MFA from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago in Installation & Performance Art. She exhibits her work in installation, video, and experimental drawing nationally & internationally. Before relocating to New York City in 2002, she taught as a full time Assistant Professor of Art in sculpture & new media for Wesleyan College in Georgia and as an Adjunct Professor in critical writing for the Atlanta College of Art.

Jerry Williams lives in the Bronx and teaches at Marymount Manhattan College. His poetry and nonfiction have appeared in such magazines as American Poetry Review, Pleiades, Tin House, Witness and many others. In 2003, Carnegie Mellon University Press published his collection of poems, Casino of the Sun, which was a finalist for the Kate Tufts Discovery Award. A new collection of poems, Admission, is due out from Carnegie Mellon in 2009.

Jonathan Zalben's music for film, theater, and television has been shown at Slamdance, SXSW, Tribeca, LA Film Festival, New York International Fringe Festival, and Chicago SketchFest. His orchestral works have been performed by the Juilliard Pre-College Orchestra and the New York University Orchestra. Zalben holds a U.S. patent for a muffler design.

↑ Index

240. Jennifer Karmin
JOB: Southern Review
Wed 27 Aug 2008

(this is a forward. please don't respond to me. good luck!)

The Southern Review Announces search for Managing Editor

http://www.lsu.edu/tsr/News_ME.html

MANAGING EDITOR
The Southern Review

The Southern Review announces an opening for Managing Editor. This is a permanent, full-time position. Founded in 1935 by Robert Penn Warren and Cleanth Brooks, The Southern Review is published four times a year on the campus of Louisiana State University.

Required Qualifications: Bachelor's degree; three years editorial and copyediting experience on the staff of an established literary journal, university press, or national press; able to demonstrate the following: editorial expertise with fiction, nonfiction, and poetry; a broad knowledge of literary history, literary criticism, and contemporary fiction, poetry, and creative nonfiction; computer skills including Word Perfect; a solid understanding of the publishing, especially small presses and literary magazines; web design and database management.

Additional Qualifications Desired: Excellent human relation skills suitable for dealing with diverse artistic personalities; terminal degree (M.F.A., Ph.D. or equivalent); knowledge of languages other than English.

Responsibilities: oversees management and distribution of incoming manuscript; reads, evaluates, and provides detailed comments on manuscripts;

copyedits and fact-checks, giving special attention to content, style, etc.; corresponds, when required, with authors regarding changes required to accepted manuscripts; works with designer and printer toward final publication.

An offer of employment is contingent on a satisfactory pre-employment background check. Application deadline is September 8, 2008 or until a candidate is selected. Applications should include: a letter of application, CV or resume (including e-mail address), one-page statement of editorial philosophy, and contact information for three professional references. Applications should be sent to the following address:

Jeanne M. Leiby
The Southern Review
Old President's House
Louisiana State University
Ref: #018159
Baton Rouge, LA 70803

↑ Index

241. steve russell
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Wed 27 Aug 2008

I'll have to rethink Auster. Clearly he should have known the l Murat,

I'll have to rethink Auster. Clearly he should have known the limited potential for earning a living from poetry alone. His wager, disingenuous. & I haven't read deeply into poets outside the English language because my second language skills are limited. If Auster's poetry is derivative, so be it. I doubt if I'll bother reading "The Invention of Solitude," as much as I like the title.

Best,
Steve

----- Original Message ----
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, August 27, 2008 12:09:04 AM
Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Steve,

The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The shift in the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective novel) occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with success, Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from it. In reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure. The protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to reach his end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more specific, making a living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end reinforces the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at least in The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining act, in becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact (at least in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing in his poems.

Ciao,

Murat

On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:

> I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until Murat had informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he decided to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell enough books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette Winterson doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or poetry. I think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
> Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
>
> Nick,
>
> You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which Auster > obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.
>
> I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much for publishers as for readers.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
> [redacted]

> wrote:
>
> A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and Company in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.
>
> Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works. The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard, or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting to know a person.
>
> Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or

sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,
Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming
a
novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually.
the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with
an
off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."

*Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the* photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe
as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets
*(Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another*
memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit"
of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire at the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront
Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted]
wrote:

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but
I
love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark, severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
& since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind
of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

guidelines

guidelines &

guidelines

↑ Index

242. Lindsay Wong
NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (Revised annd Expanded Edition)
Wed 27 Aug 2008

Dear Poetics-L:

RE: http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html

The University of California Press is pleased to announce the publication of:

The Holy Forest: Collected Poems of Robin Blaser, Revised and Expanded Edition.

Robin Blaser is Professor Emeritus at Simon Fraser University. Among his many books are The Fire: Collected Essays of Robin Blaser (UC Press), Pell Mell, and Syntax. Miriam Nichols is College Professor at University College of the Fraser Valley and editor of Even on Sunday: Essays, Readings, and Archival Materials on the Poetry and Poetics of Robin Blaser.

http://go.ucpress.edu/Blaser

Robin Blaser, one of the key North American poets of the postwar period, emerged from the "Berkeley Renaissance" of the 1940s and 1950s as a central figure in that burgeoning literary scene. The Holy Forest, now spanning five decades, is Blaser's highly acclaimed lifelong serial poem. This long-awaited revised and expanded edition includes numerous published volumes of verse, the ongoing "Image-Nation" and "Truth Is Laughter" series, and new work from 1994 to 2004. Blaser's passion for world making draws inspiration from the major poets and philosophers of our time-from friends and peers such as Robert Duncan, Jack Spicer, Charles Olson, Charles Bernstein, and Steve McCaffery to virtual companions in thought such as Hannah Arendt, Maurice Merleau-Ponty, Michel Foucault, and Jacques Derrida, among others. This comprehensive compilation of Blaser's prophetic meditations on the histories, theories, emotions, experiments, and countermemories of the late twentieth century will stand as the definitive collection of his unique and luminous poetic oeuvre.

Full information about the book, including the table of contents, is available online: http://go.ucpress.edu/Blaser

↑ Index

243. Lindsay Wong
NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (with corrected link)
Wed 27 Aug 2008

Dear Poetics-L:

RE: http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html

The University of California Press is pleased to announce the publication of:

The Holy Forest: Collected Poems of Robin Blaser, Revised and Expanded Edition.

Robin Blaser is Professor Emeritus at Simon Fraser University. Among his many books are The Fire: Collected Essays of Robin Blaser (UC Press), Pell Mell, and Syntax. Miriam Nichols is College Professor at University College of the Fraser Valley and editor of Even on Sunday: Essays, Readings, and Archival Materials on the Poetry and Poetics of Robin Blaser.

http://go.ucpress.edu/HolyForest

Robin Blaser, one of the key North American poets of the postwar period, emerged from the "Berkeley Renaissance" of the 1940s and 1950s as a central figure in that burgeoning literary scene. _The Holy Forest, _now spanning five decades, is Blaser's highly acclaimed lifelong serial poem. This long-awaited revised and expanded edition includes numerous published volumes of verse, the ongoing "Image-Nation" and "Truth Is Laughter" series, and new work from 1994 to 2004. Blaser's passion for world making draws inspiration from the major poets and philosophers of our time-from friends and peers such as Robert Duncan, Jack Spicer, Charles Olson, Charles Bernstein, and Steve McCaffery to virtual companions in thought such as Hannah Arendt, Maurice Merleau-Ponty, Michel Foucault, and Jacques Derrida, among others. This comprehensive compilation of Blaser's prophetic meditations on the histories, theories, emotions, experiments, and countermemories of the late twentieth century will stand as the definitive collection of his unique and luminous poetic oeuvre.

Full information about the book, including the table of contents, is available online: http://go.ucpress.edu/HolyForest

↑ Index

244. T. A. Noonan
Re: modern review?
Wed 27 Aug 2008

Duotrope is reporting it as a dead market. The website hasn't worked in a while, and the editors have not replied to queries.

See here:
http://www.duotrope.com/market_488.aspx

Regards,
T.A. Noonan

On Wed, Aug 27, 2008 at 7:34 AM, Deborah M. Poe <[redacted]> wrote: > Does anyone know what happened to The Modern Review? Their domain is no > longer available.

>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Deborah M. Poe [mailto:[redacted]]
> Sent: Tuesday, August 12, 2008 10:05 AM
> To: 'Poetics List (UPenn, UB)'
> Subject: news on the modern review?
>
> Anyone know what happened to > http://parsifal-press.blogspot.com/2007/09/modern-review-iii1.html (Modern > Review)? I think I must have missed some news?
>
> Thank you, Deborah
>
>

↑ Index

245. Geraldine Monk
Re: NOON 6 AVAILABLE
Wed 27 Aug 2008

It's just arrived and it's exquisite. The poetry is and the vehicle - well - how do they do that double binding? The doubled-up strength of translucent paper? The precise beauty of presentation? Sigh. Poetry gets the home it deserves. This is a 'must have' even if you don't like poetry. If you do- and that's why you're reading this -you'll be in double heaven. An utter treasure for you or a gift for a very special loved one.

Geraldine

----- Original Message -----
From: "Philip Rowland" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, August 22, 2008 2:38 PM
Subject: NOON 6 AVAILABLE

> Issue 6 of NOON: Journal of the Short Poem is now available. With 72 pages of poems, it is handbound and published in an edition of 200 copies. For a copy sent via airmail, please send US$14 (cash or international postal money order) or 7 pounds (cheque) to Philip Rowland at the following address: Minami Motomachi 4-49-506, Shinjuku- ku, Tokyo [redacted], Japan. Additional copies will be sent post-free (add $10 / 5 pounds per copy); likewise, if you would like a copy of Issue 5 sent together with 6.

> Contributors to NOON 6 are: Ravi Shankar, Daniel Zimmerman, Eleanor Stanford, Jane Hirshfield, John Levy, David Miller, Lee Gurga, Onishi Yasuyo, Yagi Mikajo, Uda Kiyoko, Philip Messenger, Niels Hav, Roberta Beary, Peggy Willis Lyles, Halvard Johnson, Lionel Kearns, Peter Yovu, Alexis Rotella, Michael McClintock, John Phillips, Richard Gilbert, Keiji Minato, Barry Schwabsky, Alan Halsey, Margaret Stawowy, Larissa Shmailo, Jane Joritz-Nakagawa, Ruth Lepson, Jane Monson, Elizabeth Robinson, Robin Magowan, Jerry Gordon, Patrick Donnelly and Stephen Miller, Jim Moore.
>
> If you would like a review copy, please let me know.
>
> The reading period for the next issue is scheduled for October (email submissions welcome at that time).
>
> All the best,
>
> Philip Rowland (editor and publisher)
> NOON: Journal of the Short Poem
> [redacted]

↑ Index

246. Nicholas Piombino
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Thu 28 Aug 2008

The very first two paragraphs of Paul Auster's Hand To Mouth (Henry Holt, 1997), pages 3-4, reads as follows:

"In my late twenties and early thirties, I went through a period of several years when everything I touched turned to failure. My marriage ended in divorce, my work as a writer foundered, and I was overwhelmed by money problems. I'm not just talking about an occasional shortfall or some periodic belt tightenings- but a constant, grinding, almost suffocating lack of money that poisoned my soul and kept me in a state of never-ending panic. There was no one to blame but myself. My relationship to money had always been flawed, enigmatic, full of contradictory impulses, and now I was paying the price for refusing to take a clear-cut stand on the matter. All along my only ambition had been to write. I had known that as early as sixteen or seventeen years old, and I had never deluded myself into thinking I could make a living at it. Becoming a writer is not a "career decision" like becoming a doctor or a policeman. You don't choose it as much as get chosen, and once you accept the fact that you're not fit for anything else, you have to be prepared to walk a long hard road for the rest of your days. Unless you turn out to be a favorite of the gods (and woe to the man who banks on that) your work will never bring in enough to support you, and if you mean to have a roof over your head and not starve to death, you must resign yourself to doing other work to pay the bills. I understood all that, I was prepared for it, I had no complaints. In that respect, I was immensely lucky. I didn't particularly want anything in the way of material goods, and the prospect of being poor didn't frighten me. All I wanted was a chance to do the work I felt I had it in me to do."

On 8/27/08 3:35 PM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'll have to rethink Auster. Clearly he should have known the l
> Murat,
>
> I'll have to rethink Auster. Clearly he should have known the limited potential for earning a living from poetry alone. His wager, disingenuous. & I haven't read deeply into poets outside the English language because my second language skills are limited. If Auster's poetry is derivative, so be it. I doubt if I'll bother reading "The Invention of Solitude," as much as I like the title.
>
> Best,
> Steve
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Wednesday, August 27, 2008 12:09:04 AM
> Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
>
> Steve,
>
> *The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The shift in the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective novel) occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with success, Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from it. In reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure. The protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to reach his end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more specific, making a living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end reinforces the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at least in The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining act, in becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact (at least in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing in his poems.*
>
> Ciao,

Murat

On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:

I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until Murat had informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he decided to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell enough books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette Winterson doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or poetry. I think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.

----- Original Message ----
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Nick,

You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which Auster
obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.

I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much for publishers as for readers.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
[redacted]
wrote:

A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and

Company
in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.

Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered
by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works.
The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard,
or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting to know a person.

Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface
or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,
Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to *make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming

a novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet.
Actually.
the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with
an
off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."*

*Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke
(the photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other
poets
(Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude,
another
memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit"
of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations
are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire
at
the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.*

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

*On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted]
wrote:*

*i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts.
but
I
love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark,
severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
& since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of*

my
favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind
of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

guidelines

guidelines &

guidelines

↑ Index

247. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Thu 28 Aug 2008

---

lousy pome great sentiment i'll stick with native son or will i?

On Wed, 27 Aug 2008 11:48:29 -0400 Nicholas Piombino
<[redacted]> writes:
> This is a digression from the discussion on Auster, but Thomas Hardy,
> who > mainly prized his poetry writing, now neglected by comparison to his > novels, > late in life published the following poem, that I couldn't help but > copy > out:
>
> Thoughts at Midnight
>
> Mankind, you dismay me
> When shadows waylay me!-
> Not by your splendours
> Do you affray me,
> Nor as pretenders
> To demonic keenness,
> Nor by your meanness,
> Nor by your ill-teachings
> Nor your false preachings,
> Nor your banalities
> And immoralities,
> Nor by your daring
> Nor sinister bearing;
> But by your madnesses
> Capping cool badnesses,
> Acting like puppets
> Under Time's buffets;
> In superstitions
> And ambitions
> Moved by no wisdom,
> Far sight, or system,
> Led by sheer senselessness
> And presciencelessness
> Into unreason
> And hideous self-treason....

> God, look he on you,
> Have mercy upon you!
>
> part written 25 May 1906
>
> (published in his last book of poems "Winter Words in Various > Moods")
>
>
> On 8/27/08 12:09 AM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > Steve,
> >
> > The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The > shift in > > the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective > novel)
> > occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with > success,
> > Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from
> it. In > > reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure.
> The
> > protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to > reach his > > end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more > specific, making a > > living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end > reinforces
> > the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at > least in
> > The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining > act, in > > becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact > (at least > > in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing > in his > > poems.
> >
> > Ciao,
> >
> > Murat

> >
> >
> >
> > On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell
> <[redacted]>wrote:
> >
> >> I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until > Murat had > >> informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe > he decided > >> to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell > enough
> >> books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette > Winterson
> >> doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or > poetry. I > >> think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> ----- Original Message ----
> >> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> >> To: [redacted]
> >> Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
> >> Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
> >>
> >> Nick,
> >>
> >> You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer
> -which > >> Auster
> >> obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than
> the > >> successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.
> >>
> >> I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that > writer's > >> work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This > goes as much
> >> for publishers as for readers.
> >>
> >> Ciao,

> >>
> >> Murat
> >>
> >>
> >> On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
> >> [redacted]
> >>> wrote:
> >>
> >>> A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a
> hardbound copy of > >>> Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy > slightly > >>> discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate > example of
> >> my
> >>> all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among
> the very > >>> best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books
> and > >> Company
> >>> in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of > his second > >>> book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore
> constructed > >>> out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the > one signed > >>> copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy > goes for > >>> $125. I paid $1.
> >>>
> >>> Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me
> is > >> tempered
> >>> by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has > accrued
> >> over > >>> decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly > autobiographical
> >>> element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an > evolving
> >>> philosophy
> >>> of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for

> material
> >>> that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel
> at first > >>> glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of > such > >>> persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it > is well
> >>> worth
> >>> forcing myself through what might be their less canonically
> important
> >>> works.
> >>> The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in > places yet
> >>> hard,
> >>> or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of > getting
> >> to > >>> know a person.
> >>>
> >>> Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile
> writer's > >> lesser > >>> works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I > go back
> >> and > >>> force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there > is no
> >>> question that time spent with a previously unread work of > Auster's,
> >> perhaps > >>> avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of > some > >> surface
> >>> or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his > journals and > >>> other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to > know any > >>> worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which > involves > >>> feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing > works, or
> >>> sides of a person, with too great finality.

> >>>
> >>> Hello to Murat and best to all,
> >>> Nick
> >>>
> >>> On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]>
> wrote:
> >>>
> >>>> In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was > going to > >>> make > >>>> his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted
> to > >> becoming
> >>> a > >>>> novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own > bet.
> >>> Actually.
> >>>> the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically > starting > >> with
> >>> an > >>>> off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his > profession."
> >>>>
> >>>> Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script
> Smoke
> >>> (the > >>>> photographing of the same place over and over again)- > personally I > >>> believe > >>>> as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what > other
> >> poets
> >>>> (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of > Solitude,
> >> another
> >>>> memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he > uses his > >>> dead > >>>> father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as
> the > >> "fruit"

> >>> of > >>>> these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The > translations
> >> are > >>>> much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the > cold fire
> >> at
> >>>> the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.
> >>>>
> >>>> I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should
> confront
> >>>> Auster's poetry more directly.
> >>>>
> >>>> Ciao,
> >>>>
> >>>> Murat
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>> On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell
> <[redacted]
> >>>> wrote:
> >>>>
> >>>>> i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many > thoughts.
> >> but
> >>> I
> >>>>> love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, > Auster, read
> >>>>> recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent > poetry; dark,
> >>>>> severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
> >>>>> & since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's > one of > >> my
> >>>>> favorite Auster poems.
> >>>>> From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
> >>>>> Nothern Lights
> >>>>> These are the words
> >>>>> that do not survive the world. And to speak them
> >>>>> is to vanish
> >>>>> into the world. Unapproachable
> >>>>> light

> >>>>> that heaves above the earth, kindling
> >>>>> the brief miracle
> >>>>> of the open eye-
> >>>>> and the day that will spread
> >>>>> like a fire of leaves
> >>>>> through the first chill wind
> >>>>> of October
> >>>>> consuming the world
> >>>>> in the plain speech
> >>>>> of desire.
> >>>>>
> >>>>>
> >>>>>
> Check
> >>> guidelines
> >>>>>
> >>>>>
> >>>>
> Check
> >>> guidelines &
> >>>
> Check
> >> guidelines
> >>>
> >>
> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> guidelines
> >>
> >
> guidelines &
>
>
>

↑ Index

248. Barry Schwabsky

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Thu 28 Aug 2008

----- Original Message ----
From:
Great word, "presciencelessness."

----- Original Message ----
From: Nicholas Piombino <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, 27 August, 2008 4:48:29 PM
Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

This is a digression from the discussion on Auster, but Thomas Hardy, who mainly prized his poetry writing, now neglected by comparison to his novels, late in life published the following poem, that I couldn't help but copy out:

Thoughts at Midnight

Mankind, you dismay me
When shadows waylay me!-
Not by your splendours
Do you affray me,
Nor as pretenders
To demonic keenness,
Nor by your meanness,
Nor by your ill-teachings
Nor your false preachings,
Nor your banalities
And immoralities,
Nor by your daring
Nor sinister bearing;
But by your madnesses
Capping cool badnesses,
Acting like puppets
Under Time's buffets;
In superstitions
And ambitions
Moved by no wisdom,
Far sight, or system,
Led by sheer senselessness
And presciencelessness
Into unreason
And hideous self-treason....

God, look he on you,
Have mercy upon you!

part written 25 May 1906

(published in his last book of poems "Winter Words in Various Moods")

On 8/27/08 12:09 AM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Steve,
>
> *The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The shift in the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective novel) occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with success, Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from it. In reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure. The protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to reach his end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more specific, making a living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end reinforces the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at least in The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining act, in becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact (at least in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing in his poems.*
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until Murat had informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he decided to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell enough books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette Winterson doesn't make a distinction as to whetherÂ her work is prose or poetry. I think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
> Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
>
> Nick,

You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which Auster
obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.

I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much for publishers as for readers.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
[redacted]
wrote:

A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted.Â His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my
all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and Company in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.

Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered
by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works.
The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard, or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting

to know a person.

Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or
sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,
Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming
a
novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually.
the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with
an
off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."

*Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the* photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe
as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets *(MallarmÃ©, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another* memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit"
of these meditations, he ends up translating MallarmÃ©. The translations are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire at the heart of MallarmÃ©'s poetry.

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted] wrote:

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but
I
love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark,
severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
& since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind
of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

guidelines

> guidelines &
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

249. George Bowering

Re: NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (Revised annd Expanded Edition)

Thu 28 Aug 2008

Not really new. It was over a year ago, and it won the Griffin Prize this spring.

gb

On Aug 27, 2008, at 2:23 PM, Lindsay Wong wrote:

> Dear Poetics-L:
>
> RE: http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html
>
> The University of California Press is pleased to announce the publication of:
>
> The Holy Forest: Collected Poems of Robin Blaser, Revised and Expanded Edition.
>
> Robin Blaser is Professor Emeritus at Simon Fraser University. Among his many books are The Fire: Collected Essays of Robin Blaser (UC Press), Pell Mell, and Syntax. Miriam Nichols is College Professor at University College of the Fraser Valley and editor of Even on Sunday: Essays, Readings, and Archival Materials on the Poetry and Poetics of Robin Blaser.
>
> http://go.ucpress.edu/Blaser
>
> Robin Blaser, one of the key North American poets of the postwar > period, emerged from the "Berkeley Renaissance" of the 1940s and 1950s as a central figure in that burgeoning literary scene. The Holy Forest, now spanning five decades, is Blaser's highly acclaimed lifelong serial poem. This long-awaited revised and expanded edition includes numerous published volumes of verse, the ongoing "Image-Nation" and "Truth Is Laughter" series, and new work from 1994 to 2004. Blaser's passion for world making draws inspiration from the major poets and philosophers of our time-from friends and peers such as Robert Duncan, Jack Spicer, Charles Olson, Charles Bernstein, and Steve McCaffery to virtual companions in thought such as Hannah Arendt, Maurice Merleau-Ponty, Michel Foucault, and Jacques Derrida, among others. This comprehensive compilation of Blaser's prophetic meditations on the histories, theories, emotions, experiments, and countermemories of the late twentieth century will stand as the definitive collection of his unique and luminous poetic oeuvre.

>
> Full information about the book, including the table of contents, is available online: http://go.ucpress.edu/Blaser
>
> welcome.html

George "The Innocent" Bowering
Working for a better galaxy.

↑ Index

250. Maria Damon
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Thu 28 Aug 2008

---

why does this remind me of Iggy Pop's recent "My idea of fun/Is killing everyone?"

Nicholas Piombino wrote:
> This is a digression from the discussion on Auster, but Thomas Hardy, who > mainly prized his poetry writing, now neglected by comparison to his novels, > late in life published the following poem, that I couldn't help but copy > out:
>
> Thoughts at Midnight
>
> Mankind, you dismay me
> When shadows waylay me!-
> Not by your splendours
> Do you affray me,

> Nor as pretenders
> To demonic keenness,
> Nor by your meanness,
> Nor by your ill-teachings
> Nor your false preachings,
> Nor your banalities
> And immoralities,
> Nor by your daring
> Nor sinister bearing;
> But by your madnesses
> Capping cool badnesses,
> Acting like puppets
> Under Time's buffets;
> In superstitions
> And ambitions
> Moved by no wisdom,
> Far sight, or system,
> Led by sheer senselessness
> And presciencelessness
> Into unreason
> And hideous self-treason....
> God, look he on you,
> Have mercy upon you!
>
> part written 25 May 1906
>
> (published in his last book of poems "Winter Words in Various Moods")
>
>
> On 8/27/08 12:09 AM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
>> Steve,
>>
>> The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The shift in >> the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective novel) >> occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with success, >> Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from it. In >> reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure. The >> protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to reach his >> end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more specific, making
a >> living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end reinforces >> the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at least in >> The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining act, in >> becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact (at least >> in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing in his >> poems.

>>
>> Ciao,
>>
>> Murat
>>
>>
>>
>> On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:
>>
>>
>>> I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until Murat had >>> informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he decided >>> to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell enough >>> books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette Winterson >>> doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or poetry. I >>> think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> ----- Original Message ----
>>> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
>>> To: [redacted]
>>> Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
>>> Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
>>>
>>> Nick,
>>>
>>> You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which >>> Auster
>>> obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the >>> successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.
>>>
>>> I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's >>> work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much >>> for publishers as for readers.
>>>

>>> Ciao,
>>>
>>> Murat
>>>
>>>
>>> On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
>>> [redacted]
>>>
>>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy
of >>>> Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly >>>> discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of
>>>>
>>> my
>>>
>>>> all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very >>>> best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and
>>>>
>>> Company
>>>
>>>> in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second >>>> book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore
constructed >>>> out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed >>>> copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for >>>> $125. I paid $1.
>>>>
>>>> Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is
>>>>
>>> tempered
>>>
>>>> by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued
>>>>
>>> over
>>>
>>>> decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical >>>> element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving >>>> philosophy

>>>> of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material >>>> that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first >>>> glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such >>>> persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well >>>> worth
>>>> forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important >>>> works.
>>>> The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet >>>> hard,
>>>> or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting
>>>>
>>> to
>>>
>>>> know a person.
>>>>
>>>> Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's
>>>>
>>> lesser
>>>
>>>> works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back
>>>>
>>> and
>>>
>>>> force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no >>>> question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's,
>>>>
>>> perhaps
>>>
>>>> avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some
>>>>
>>> surface
>>>
>>>> or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and >>>> other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any >>>> worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves >>>> feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or
>>>> sides of a person, with too great finality.
>>>>
>>>> Hello to Murat and best to all,
>>>> Nick
>>>>
>>>> On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

>>>>
>>>>
>>>>> In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going
to
>>>>>
>>>> make
>>>>
>>>>> his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to
>>>>>
>>> becoming
>>>
>>>> a
>>>>
>>>>> novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet.
>>>>>
>>>> Actually.
>>>>
>>>>> the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting
>>>>>
>>> with
>>>
>>>> an
>>>>
>>>>> off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."
>>>>>
>>>>> Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke
>>>>>
>>>> (the
>>>>
>>>>> photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I
>>>>>
>>>> believe
>>>>
>>>>> as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other
>>>>>
>>> poets
>>>
>>>>> (Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude,
>>>>>
>>> another
>>>
>>>>> memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his

>>>>>
>>>> dead
>>>>
>>>>> father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the
>>>>>
>>> "fruit"
>>>
>>>> of
>>>>
>>>>> these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations
>>>>>
>>> are
>>>
>>>>> much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire
>>>>>
>>> at
>>>
>>>>> the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.
>>>>>
>>>>> I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront >>>>> Auster's poetry more directly.
>>>>>
>>>>> Ciao,
>>>>>
>>>>> Murat
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted]
>>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>> i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts.
>>>>>>
>>> but
>>>
>>>> I
>>>>
>>>>>> love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read >>>>>> recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry;
dark,
>>>>>> severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
>>>>>> & since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of

>>>>>>
>>> my
>>>
>>>>>> favorite Auster poems.
>>>>>> From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
>>>>>> Nothern Lights
>>>>>> These are the words
>>>>>> that do not survive the world. And to speak them
>>>>>> is to vanish
>>>>>> into the world. Unapproachable
>>>>>> light
>>>>>> that heaves above the earth, kindling
>>>>>> the brief miracle
>>>>>> of the open eye-
>>>>>> and the day that will spread
>>>>>> like a fire of leaves
>>>>>> through the first chill wind
>>>>>> of October
>>>>>> consuming the world
>>>>>> in the plain speech
>>>>>> of desire.
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>> guidelines
>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>> guidelines &
>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>
>>> guidelines
>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>

>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

251. Séamas Cain

PHOSPHOR a surrealist luminescence

Thu 28 Aug 2008

_____

From: [redacted]
Subject: PHOSPHOR a surrealist luminescence

We would like to announce the first issue of PHOSPHOR, a new surrealist magazine.

Further details regarding content are on our weblog link below. PayPal email payments accepted.

Best Regards,

Kenneth Cox

for Surrealist Editions

http://leedssurrealistgroup.wordpress.com

_____

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

↑ Index

252. steve russell

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Thu 28 Aug 2008

---

nice digression. "Capping cool badnesses,
Acting like puppets

Under Time's buffets"
Hardy anticipates rap!

----- Original Message ----
From: Nicholas Piombino <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, August 27, 2008 11:48:29 AM
Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

This is a digression from the discussion on Auster, but Thomas Hardy, who mainly prized his poetry writing, now neglected by comparison to his novels, late in life published the following poem, that I couldn't help but copy out:

Thoughts at Midnight

Mankind, you dismay me
When shadows waylay me!-
Not by your splendours
Do you affray me,
Nor as pretenders
To demonic keenness,
Nor by your meanness,
Nor by your ill-teachings
Nor your false preachings,
Nor your banalities
And immoralities,
Nor by your daring
Nor sinister bearing;
But by your madnesses
Capping cool badnesses,
Acting like puppets
Under Time's buffets;
In superstitions
And ambitions
Moved by no wisdom,
Far sight, or system,
Led by sheer senselessness
And presciencelessness
Into unreason
And hideous self-treason....
God, look he on you,
Have mercy upon you!

part written 25 May 1906

(published in his last book of poems "Winter Words in Various Moods")

On 8/27/08 12:09 AM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Steve,
>
> *The title of the book where the bet occurs is Hand To Mouth. The shift in the book from poetry to writing a novel (specifically a detective novel) occurs very subtly. On the surface, the memoir seems to end with success, Paul Auster becoming a successful writing earning his living from it. In reality, at least to me reading it, the book ends with failure. The protagonist has to shift from poetry to writing a genre novel to reach his end, completely ignoring the original bet, which was more specific, making a living out of writing poetry. In fact, Hand To Mouth at the end reinforces the fact that economic unviability is of the essence of poetry (at least in The United States) and facing that fact is essential, a defining act, in becoming an American poet. Auster is reluctant to face that fact (at least in that book) and maybe for that reason I feel something missing in his poems.*
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Tue, Aug 26, 2008 at 1:23 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> I didn't realize that Auster had made his curious wager until Murat had informed me of it. Auster, a great writer, but no Pascal. Maybe he decided to get from prose what he had done in poetry, and hopefully sell enough books to make a living. I can see the logic there. Jeanette Winterson doesn't make a distinction as to whether her work is prose or poetry. I think she thinks of it as polymorphous/postmodern.
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Monday, August 25, 2008 5:25:51 PM
> Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
>
> Nick,
>
> You are utterly right. The failures of a truly superior writer -which Auster > obviously is- are more precious, interesting and rewarding than the successes of a more run-of-the-mill writer.
>
> I completely agree with you that a writer -if one respects that writer's work- must be trusted in the totality of his or her work. This goes as much for publishers as for readers.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Aug 25, 2008 at 11:37 AM, Nicholas Piombino <
[redacted]
wrote:

A visit to the Strand a couple of days ago brought me a hardbound copy of Auster's latest novel, Man In The Dark, a signed hardbound copy slightly discounted. His book The Invention of Solitude is first rate example of my all time favorite genre, the fictional memoir; the book is among the very best of its type I've ever read. Auster signed my copy at Books and Company in 1985. But among my very best book finds ever is my copy of his second book of poetry Wall Writing, which I unearthed in a bookstore constructed out of an old trailer in Sarasota, Florida. If I purchased the one signed copy available online now it would cost $500. An unsigned copy goes for $125. I paid $1.

Murat's judgment "derivative" concerning Auster's poetry for me is tempered
by an engagement with Auster's experience and thought that has accrued over decades of reading his work. There is an indirectly autobiographical element, a poetics of experience seen in the light of an evolving philosophy of perception and writing that, for me, has led to a craving for material that makes it worthwhile to push through works that might feel at first glance less crucial, or even less successful. With writers of such persistent concern with obtaining and transmitting insight, it is well worth forcing myself through what might be their less canonically important works.
The contrast between what makes literary work accessible in places yet hard,
or displeasing to pierce in others, is similar to the process of getting to know a person.

Over time I have realized that when I neglect a worthwhile writer's lesser works I invariably lose an important opportunity. When later, I go back

and force my way through them, I am usually grateful. For me there is no question that time spent with a previously unread work of Auster's, perhaps avoided because of some critic's point of view, or because of some surface
or other flaw, often pays off. This includes his poetry, his journals and other autobiographical works. The process is like getting to know any worthwhile person; you try to take the good with the bad, which involves feeling critical but also includes taking care about dismissing works, or sides of a person, with too great finality.

Hello to Murat and best to all,
Nick

On 8/24/08 1:26 PM, "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]> wrote:

In his memoir Auster writes that he had made a bet that he was going to make his living as a poet. At the end of the book, he has shifted to becoming
a
novelist. The memoir implies that he Auster has won his own bet. Actually.
the reverse is true. He had to change his field -basically starting with
an
off beat genre novel- to unite his "vocation with his profession."

*Though I admire his novels -and particularly the movie script Smoke (the* photographing of the same place over and over again)- personally I believe
as a poet Auster is derivative, never adding anything to what other poets
*(Mallarmé, for instance) have done. The Invention of Solitude, another*
memoir, for me is brilliant in its first two thirds, when he uses his dead father's photograph to start a profound meditation. Then, as the "fruit"
of these meditations, he ends up translating Mallarmé. The translations are much less interesting, more "literature" than projecting the cold fire at the heart of Mallarmé's poetry.

I think, instead of quoting from Ashbery's blurb- one should confront Auster's poetry more directly.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 23, 2008 at 2:03 PM, steve russell <[redacted] wrote:

i have this insomnia thing going on and no blog. too many thoughts. but
I
love poetry. & i'm still recovering from seeing my hero, Auster, read recently. Here's Ashbery's blurb on Auster: "Magnificent poetry; dark, severe, even harsh-yet pulsating with life."
& since i'm been on this Auster kick for the last week, here's one of my favorite Auster poems.
From FRAGMENTS FROM COLD, 1976-1977.
Nothern Lights
These are the words
that do not survive the world. And to speak them
is to vanish
into the world. Unapproachable
light
that heaves above the earth, kindling
the brief miracle
of the open eye-
and the day that will spread
like a fire of leaves
through the first chill wind
of October
consuming the world
in the plain speech
of desire.

guidelines

guidelines &

guidelines

↑ Index

253. steve russell
Re: Forget Foucault's play things
Thu 28 Aug 2008

---

as an aside to Nick's digression, i've unearthed this nugget. Jean Baudrillard's "Forget Foucault." ...you both use the same strategy. You don't speak about the media, the media speaks through you. As soon as you turn on your theoretical screen, the great myths of history are turned into a soap opera, or into "serials. You make them share the fate of that TV program, "Holocaust," which you analyzed so well. * I don't deny history. It's an immense toy.

↑ Index

254. amy king
Re: NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (Revised annd Expanded Edition)
Thu 28 Aug 2008

Exactly. Poetry has a pretty short shelf life -- books more than five years old are really very old.

Amy

_____

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Thu, 8/28/08, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: NEW BOOK: The Holy Forest (Revised annd Expanded Edition)
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, August 28, 2008, 2:43 AM

Not really new. It was over a year ago,
and it won the Griffin Prize this spring.

gb

On Aug 27, 2008, at 2:23 PM, Lindsay Wong wrote:

> The University of California Press is pleased to announce the publication of:
>
> The Holy Forest: Collected Poems of Robin Blaser, Revised and Expanded Edition.

↑ Index

255. Tony Trigilio
Fall '08 Poetry Readings at Columbia College Chicago
Thu 28 Aug 2008

Fall 2008 Poetry Readings at Columbia College Chicago

Sponsored by the English Department

Free and open to the public

For more information: [redacted]

PETER GIZZI
Thurs., Sept. 11, 2008 (6:00 p.m.)
Ferguson Theatre, 600 South Michigan Avenue
Co-sponsored with the Poetry Foundation

JOANNE KYGER
Friday, Oct. 10, 2008 (7:00 p.m.)
Film Row Cinema, 1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th Floor

DIANE di PRIMA
Saturday, Oct. 11, 2008 (7:00 p.m.)
Film Row Cinema, 1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th Floor

(Kyger and di Prima readings co-sponsored with Columbia College's Provost's Office and Ellen Stone Belic Institute for the Study of Women and Gender in the Arts and Media, the Illinois State University English Department and College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and the Beat Studies Association)

JOHN MURILLO, AIMEE NEZHUKUMATATHIL, & ROBYN SCHIFF
Wed., Nov. 5, 2008 (5:30 p.m.)
Music Center Concert Hall, 1014 South Michigan Avenue

↑ Index

256. Robin Hamilton
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Thu 28 Aug 2008

From: "Nicholas Piombino" <[redacted]>

<<
This is a digression from the discussion on Auster, but Thomas Hardy, who mainly prized his poetry writing, now neglected by comparison to his novels,
>>

This is silly.

As I've been here, it might have been true that Hardy was rated as a novelist rather than a poet in the sixties, but certainly from the seventies on, Hardy is (rightly) seen as a poet first and a novelist second.

Who argues this?

R.

↑ Index

257. Petra Kuppers
disability culture poetry performances in Berkeley, this Saturday and next Tuesday
Thu 28 Aug 2008

Two Bay Area events, come and check out disability culture poetry/performance.

1. Moment's Notice Improv Salon
Time: Saturday, 8/30/08, 8pm
Location: Western Sky Studio, in the Sawtooth Building, 2525 8th St., Berkeley
$8-$15 (sliding scale; tickets available at the door)

Liz Boubion --dance
Edward Schocker & Suki O'Kane - music
Imaginary Friends (Abhay Ghiara, Krista Gullickson & Kim Criswell, in collaboration with Edward Schocker) -- physical theater
Nicole Richter & Pamela Marsh - dance with poetry & music
The Olimpias (Christia Braun, Neil Marcus, Eric Kupers, Petra Kuppers, Kelly Rafferty, and friends)- dance with poetry

2. Poetry Reading Time: Tuesday, September 2, 2008 7:30 p.m. Location: Pegasus Books Downtown, Shattuck Avenue, Berkeley Free Poets Neil Marcus and Petra Kuppers read from their new book. Cripple Poetics: A Love Story (Homofactus Press, 2008) follows the movement of Bay Area poet and activist Neil Marcus and his partner Petra's courtship through traditional poems, emails, essayistic meditations and Internet Relay Chat. Through variations in form, these pieces ask us to think of our conceptions of mobility, immobility, physical pain, as well as means of travel, touch, and communication. As a part of the Disability Culture movement, the collection shows both non-disabled and disabled people how rich the poets' lives are, not in spite of their disabilities, but with and through them.

--
Petra Kuppers
Associate Professor
English, Theatre and Dance, Women's Studies University of Michigan mobile: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
homepage: www.umich.edu/~petra
New Book 2008:
Cripple Poetics: A Love Story. A Poetry Collection by Petra Kuppers and Neil Marcus with photos by Lisa Steichmann. Homofactus Press, August.
Press Release and Excerpts at http://www-personal.umich.edu/~petra/cripple.htm

↑ Index

258. Robin Hamilton
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Thu 28 Aug 2008

> As I've been here, it might have been true that Hardy was rated as a novelist rather than a poet in the sixties, but certainly from the seventies on, Hardy is (rightly) seen as a poet first and a novelist second.
>
> Who argues this?
>
> R.

To expand this slightly ...

This is a UK take on things ...

Up to the sixties, Hardy was certainly seen as a novelist, but in the wake of Philip Larkin (both in his practice and his criticism -- as Yeats created an audience for Blake in the late 19th / early 20th C, so Larkin in the 50s/60s for Hardy), Hardy was recognised (at least in the UK) as one of the central poets of the late 19th /early 20thC.

I can put my finger on when this was happening in the UK, since as an undegraduate in the mid to late 60s, I was expected to write essays on Hardy-the-Novelist.

After the early 70s, this would have been seen as a joke.

It was part of a larger shift that revalued Clare, Edward Thomas, and Robert Frost.

Oddly enough, Robert Graves and the Georgian Movement generally didn't get similarly revalued.

Fair does -- Thomas Hardy was easily the best, and you can dis Larkin by pointing out that he is essentially Hardy-and-Water.

But Hardy-the-Novelist today?

Geeuz a break, jimmy ...

R.

↑ Index

259. amy king
TOMORROW NIGHT --  Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich *
Thu 28 Aug 2008

Stain Bar is at 766 Grand Street in Brooklyn, and you can get there by taking the L train to Grand Street, walk one block West.

Cheers to you all, till soon,

Ana + Amy

The Stain of Poetry: A Reading Series
August 29th @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg, Brooklyn

 Ball, Chace, Mort, Moschovakis, Murphy and Yankelevich **

~~~~

Michael Ball grew up in North Carolina & spent most of his adult life in Brooklyn. He currently lives in Baltimore where he curates & hosts the i.e. reading series.

~~~~

Joel Chace has published poetry and prose poetry in print and electronic magazines such as 6ix, Tomorrow, Lost and Found Times, Coracle, xStream, Three Candles, 2River View, Joey & the Black Boots, Recursive Angel, and Veer. He has published more than a dozen print and electronic collections. New from

BlazeVox Books is CLEANING THE MIRROR: NEW AND SELECTED POEMS, and from Paper Kite Press, MATTER NO MATTER, another full-length collection. For many years, Chace has been Poetry Editor for the experimental electronic magazine 5_Trope. Amphibian Productions theater company did a staged reading of his play TRIPTYCH, at the Arclight Theatre, on the Upper West Side of Manhattan, Spring, 2005.

~~~~

Photo by Doug Barber

valzhyna mort born in minsk, belarus. second book of poetry "factory of tears" came out in april 2008 from copper canyon press, usa. (the first one was published in minsk in 2005 and called "i'm as thin as your eyelashes"). previously was a writer-in-residence at several international locations, also received two international poetry prizes. besides the united states, "factory of tears" was published in sweden and will come out in 2009 in germany. apart from poetry, valzhyna mort runs a black metal music label.

~~~~

Anna Moschovakis is the author of a book of poems,_I Have Not Been Able to Get Through to Everyone_, and of several chapbooks, including most recently _No Medea_ , a Tinyside from Big Game Books. She is also a translator of French poetry and prose and an editor at Ugly Duckling Presse.

~~~~

Ryan
Murphy is the author of Down With the Ship from Otis Books/Seismicity Editions. He has received awards from Chelsea magazine and the Aldrich Museum of Contemporary Art, as well as a grant from the Fund for Poetry. He lives in New York.

~~~~

Photo by Stephanie Young

Matvei Yankelevich edited and translated TODAY I WROTE NOTHING: THE SELECTED WRITINGS OF DANIIL KHARMS (Overlook, 2007). He is a co-translator of OBERIU: AN ANTHOLOGY OF RUSSIAN ABSURDISM (2006). His translation of the Vladimir Mayakovsky's poem "Cloud in Pants" appears in NIGHT WRAPS THE SKY: WRITINGS BY AND ABOUT MAYAKOVSKY (Farrar, Strauss & Giroux, 2008). He is the author of a long poem, THE PRESENT WORK (Palm Press, 2006) and his writing has appeared in Fence, Open City, and many other literary journals. He teaches Russian Literature at Hunter College in New York City and edits the Eastern European Poets Series at Ugly Duckling Presse in Brooklyn.

~~~~

stain
766 grand street
brooklyn, ny 11211
(L train to Grand Street,
1 block west)
718/[redacted]
open daily @ 5 p.m.

~~~~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic

http://thestainofpoetry.wordpress.com/2008/08/19/friday-august-29-2008-700-pm-2/

_____

Movies With Poems

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Poems To Do

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

260. billy little hardy
Thu 28 Aug 2008

---

shak spear lawrence stein joyce anne hebert margaret atwood raymond carver michael ondaatje
herman hesse goethe
paul auster
george bowering for that matter enduring writers slip the cuffs of genre

billy little who once had an agent for his novels

--
Nothing says Labor Day like 500hp of American muscle
Visit OnCars.com today.

↑ Index

261. David Chirot
insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Thu 28 Aug 2008

I had a similar experience to that of Murat's in reading The Invention of Solitude. (Which perhaps may be thought of also as The Convention of Solitude--)

Steve Russell wrote that Auster is a non-Pascalian thinker, which is certainly interesting in considering the title, "The invention of Solitude," for Pascal writes at one point that al the problems for persons begin from the fact that they cannot remain of their own volition solitary, and stay simply in a room. And in that room--to write perhaps--"perchance to dream"--to follow Memory and Time as Proust does in the Solitude of the cork lined room, or to invent something new to the "solitariness of the male"--"the "A Room of One's Own" of Virginia Woolf--or that room of Emily Dickinson's of which she wrote--"I have but to cross the room to be in the Spice Islands."

(Might one not ask and have not and do not millions continually do so--if a woman has far less opportunity, far less time, (for time more than money even is required for Inventing Solitude)--far less of that time, most precious of commodities---- which for a woman is so little permitted--for the Invention of Solitude--, an almost invisible, barely heard, "solitude" compared to the "Solitariness of the Male of the Species," who gets to sit and look "wise" like the Solitary Male Lion--resplendent in meditation on the Shadow that he casts--as he poses there between the Sun and that other shadow of himself, his son---who will carry "his name" into the next and next generations, much as his own shadow lengthens across the landscape with the coming of twilight-- for is not the "critique of the self" conducted with an eye to its improvement?--and in what better way to improve oneself than by those extensions through Space via shadows and Time via progeny--and via these extensions make of the self both shadow and substance in such a way that they portray nothing less than an enduring presence of a God-like Being--)

To invent solitude is a Pascalian paradox, for it means that one begins with the goal of attaining one's own inventing of something that one already has seen examples of and desires. In other words, the paradox is that the invention is of something already KNOWN. By this Pascalian reversal--one finds that the "invention of solitude" is the Convention of finding its rejection. By seeking to "invent solitude," the writer is faced with the convention of finding that the conventional is what calls to him. And thus a "gambler" on Poetry faces his conventional responsibilities as a "son of a father and father of a son"--and realizes that in order to support these additional "male members," one must choose between the poverty of poetry and the relative security of "conventional prose genres." Being an "ethical being," Auster chooses to sacrifice the poetry--and poverty--and instead become not only the "author of his sons day's," but his "hard working father, toiling in the lower depths of literature that the son might find his way to a better future--"

In Auster's case the paradox is that by using blueprints and previous texts as "guides," in the invention of solitude, what his invention will be of is something "Already KNOWN, already WRITTEN," This is why perhaps he is certain of his bet on the outcome of events in terms of writing. He thinks of and follows in the footsteps of others and their examples, thinking to win his bet, and then, discovering he has made the outcome dependent on writing alone--he has missed the fact of money which concerns not only oneself but one's family. Writing an invention of solitude becomes a selfish act, and so Auster turns to one far more familiar to those who are readers of much literature, as he is himself a reader of a great many texts, and so knows the "conventional choices facing those who are obsessed with invention."

That is , to work as a translator, anthologist, writer of Prefaces and at first "manfully" toiling in the "prosaic prose" of Genre novels known for their 'formulaic prose" and "narratives" which Poetry tends to look down on--Auster is able to harness both is craft and talents and his ability to be a respectable bread winner, and so elude that other convention of literature, the "dead beat dad" who puts all his eggs in one basket, sacrificing all--including the family--for the pursuit of that fickle chimera, the Muse.

That is, in the exchange between poetry and money, he has considered only himself as being the one to benefit. When the "more prosaic demands of life" begin to "prey on him," he discovers that the only form of reconciliation he thinks open to him is that of joining together writing and the prosaic demands of life. That is, --to write prose that some of his poetic colleagues may think of as of a "Common" and "Prosaic Nature." The "problem of the bet," is not necessarily the terms in which it was to be tested, but that it was an exclusionary bet made by a Poet who had "overlooked" the demands of the Prosaic existence of his ignored roles as son and father.

In The Invention of Solitude, the "room" Auster finds turns out not to be solitary, for there are in it both his father and his son. The "linking of generations of men" follows the same pattern as that of the literary. A writer, even a Poet, is not without a place in the already waiting and written series of Solitudes, examples, fathers and sons-- linkings-which are in sad disrepair and need this Poetic worker to set to work "mending"--- and if one is indeed both a Poet and a Man, must find a way to reconcile these--to be "responsable"--and accept one's place in the traditions of writing--in a way he had not "counted on" when making his bet--and so find that that to be the "Author of Days" is to be a "Real Man"--

The "failure" which Murat notes in terms of poetry, is a success in the very real sense that Auster is able with his writing to make that room "livable" which he finds himself sharing with his father and his own son, and so in that space making a linkage, becoming a part of and not apart from, a "lineage," a cultural and familial narrative which he wouldst fain interrupt, for to do is to risk becoming an "outsider," a "pariah," and effectively a criminalized 'dead beat dad" sought after by the IRS, Family Services and other organizations, let alone flocks of those buzzards known as lawyers.

This "Invention of Solitude" which is sacrificed for the Conventional narrative of Male Cultural and Social heritage preserved as a lineage--- creates an implicit critique of the female "solitude" in the strict sense connected with that "solitary confinement/confining oneself to one's room'" of Emily Dickinson or the more social Virgina Woolf-, in that for a woman to be "solitary" means the commission of a "crime' more dangerous than that of being a "dead beat dad"-- the choosing of being childless by the being who is supposed to be the child bearer.

For who is the representative of the Female Solitude in Auster's book but the tragic and damned Cassandra? Who "speaks" in Auster's text via an obscure old English translation of an obscure Latin version--and is "rescued" from these "obscurities" by the "generosity " of the Male Author. This generosity has its limits, though, for while "allowing the voice of the obscured voices of the doomed female prophetess to speak," at the same time what Auster puts in the mouth of a young prostitute hired to come to his "room of his own"is not words, but that "pen-ultimate" instrument of the Authorship of Days--

At first twas very exciting to me, and I thought, aha, finally a contemporary writer I can look forward to accompanying for along time in his writing. Unfortunately, the book crosses a Rubicon, and turns into the same old story of the father-son-son mold.

This discovery simulatenously "realizes" one's solitude as an entity among others, part from them, and as also an entity among others, apart of them. In the same way that the life follows the book and the book follows thelife engender from that engendersed from books, the writing of books as the "link inthe chjain" of both writing and being--"reconciles" the formerly gambling writer with the realization that with his "placein the family found," there is a respsoansabiulity to be a provider. In that manner, the turning to the writing of a genre work, which is the same genre turned to be so many many writers in order to "make a living," is not a turn of "defeat," but rather one of understanding how to secure a "success," in that he being a writer does have a way to write and at the same time "take care of his family.

It is not a "compromise," but a recognition and embrace, or at least acceptance, of the reality in which the writer is living, as both apart from the family due to the solitude of the act of writing itself, if not literally always, certainly often enough figuratively, and also being a part of the community which he shares with not just his family, but this family of writers he is a son among fathers in and father among sons now realizing his responsabilities.

The use of translation in the book--and Auster's own translating as another way of Supporting himself and his family"-- --and its reversal in the act of oral sex that is paid for--"illustrates" another form of reversal in which the making of money by translating others' poetry "transmutes" the earlier failure to make money of Auster's own poetry into a "conventional" means of "doubling the earning power of one's skills" as poet and bi-lingual expatriate.

The use of the Mallarme's "Tomb for Anatole," about the grief beyond measure (that is a poetic measure also, as the work is a fragmented series of prose notations which are on a jagged edged line of grief stricken utterance close to stutter-ance.)--signals that Auster is aware of what the life and death of others (his father, his son) is beginning to mean to him. This "awareness of death" in "aesthetic form" as a broken utterance which will ultimately "find expression" in the grave, the tomb, the monument is another way in which Auster faces the the "mending process" which is the "conventional narrative" of the book. (Mallarme also wrote a poem for "le Tombeau d' Edgar Poe"--for the occasion of the dedication in Baltimore of a monument to the American poet who via Baudelaire's translation has so influenced generations of French poets. Whitman, unable to attend the ceremonies due to illness, also wrote a brief note, which was inspired by a dream, quite a fitting way in which to "encounter and remember Poe.")

To keep alive the dead--is the action of Mallarme and Poe, while knowing full well that what activates the presence of the writing is the absence that one is having to face of the being whom one cannot "keep alive" in any other way

than by writing, which as Poe puts it, is "mournful and never ending remembrance."

Perhaps that is why the most striking words in the book are those of the obscure English translation of an extremely obscure Latin version of Homer, in which the shrieks of Cassandra, that "ill-omened bird," are in an agony, for it is she, truly who is the one who exists in solitude, and in solitude with seeing that Apocalypse which is coming to meet her , her family, her city, everything Trojan---

If one thinks of Cassandra's "voice of poetry" as visionary and tragic, existing in a solitude which is invented for one, rather than being invented by one, then, the movement of males among males is the linking with the writing which "earns a living for the family." Or at least the male members, no pun intended!! Meanwhile, in the book is the complete absence of females, other than the prostitute who is paid to "service" the "very important member" which cannot seem to abide the solitude the writer attempts to invent.

Again, the book Auster is creating which is created out of books, "follows a pattern," and so the "happy ending" of reconciliation of what had seemed to be "difficult situations" in the writing of a genre novel, in a genre which is associated with the resolution of difficulties, the solving of cases and if one want sot, of case histories.

The writer is brought face to face with the conventional--the convention genre novel, the conventional "story of my life and how i found my father and my son and became a Man," and conventional i the sense that "poetry" which is so "strange"--Mallarme's, Cassandra's, becomes "lost in translation," and sinks into a kind of obscurity, a fading backdrop for the ongoing saga of the generation unto generation existence as a member (forgive me, there it is again!!)) of a family)one's own) and also of the "family of man," for this family is that, a family of man, and so Cassandra that immensely tragic and harsh voice which spills beauty forth with blood and death, is abandoned, and what was once "needed" (poetry) can now be purchased to "satisfy a need." (The young prostitute.)

This discussion and thinking of Invention of Solitude brought to mind two of my personal favorite books ever written on the interrelationship of literal Hunger and literary Hunger, which do not come about nor "conclude (for neither concludes at all--) with those reconciliations the literary and the literal that Auster finds. These books are Knut Hamsun's HUNGER, (which Auster has used also as title) and FOR BREAD ALONE by the Moroccan writer Mohamed Choukri. In HUNGER, the writer seems to be without any family at all other than the "friends" and "uncles" he creates of those whom he encounters and play apart in his "season in hell" which is simultaneously for the protagonist-writer "Illuminations." In Choukri's book, the dysfunctional family trying to survive the famines sweeping the Rif during the World wide Depression of the 1930,s the family itself "eats its young," for his father kills his small brother. Everyone in the family is at the mercy of the moods of the father, himself enraged by the frustration of a poverty which seems hopeless to make even a dent in, to make small hole in, to find anything other than what the writer finds: the existence and persistent beauty of stones. These in a sense speak to him the parable of his life: "By bread alone," rather than "one does not live by bread alone." The "niceties" of being able to write a genre novel as a "a way out of the difficulties," are extremely limited for Hamsun's protagonist, who only manages no and then to sell apiece to the daily papers, while starving steadily into evermore "extreme states of destitution and altered consciousness." This young man, determined to be a writer, doesn't once see himself in terms of literary tradition of 'starving writers," at all. His solitude is that he finds himself a "dead man walking" in broad daylight, chewing on wood splinters and writing with a pencil seated among the cemetery stones. He becomes a walking HUNGER--barely existing as person, yet persistent in this despite everything with that "imp of the Perverse" continually dogging his heels and making the smallest of situations into a drama of such high strung nerves he collapses into faints that are not far from death. Choukri's autobiographical being in FOR BREAD ALONE is thrown out of the house, and has to find a way to live among the alleys and gutters, hustling for this and hustling for that. To find nothing but "bread alone," the illiterate child and then young man is trapped in a the picaresque, in which one event after another follows in an inexorable series of disconnected fragments which now and then "rhyme" as the repetition of certain sites, the grave of his brother, the poverty all around one which makes it impossible to see HUNGER as an experimental act for the generation of writing, which in part the HUNGER writer is able to do--because he is already a writer, and which Auster self consciously essays in order to follow in the footsteps of previous literary apprenticeships.

Hunger's writer is not even a genre NOVELIST, but a sort of wild essayist of the daily press who now and then hits on an interesting idea which he is seized by as much as he ever is able to seize himself due to his almost complete debilitation at the "hand to mouth" existence in which the mouth is devouring him and l that he has is a writing hand, which seems to go on as though separate from himself, yet connected tenuously as it needs the writers body to "fuel its writing's journey across the spaces of the page, and from there, hopefully on to the pages of the daily press.

"Poetry is news that stays news," Pound may say, but for this writer the only news is poetry--that is to say, it doesn't stay new unless one eats and ones

doesn't eat unless one writes,. One is trapped in a solitude in which the only way out is not a reconciliation of writing with living, but of further traveling--as the young man convinces a somewhat skeptical employer to give him work on a ship bound for England and eventually the USA. -

The ending of the novel has the writer looking back from the ship pulling out of the harbor and seeing that strange city which marks everyone who encounters it, and has marked him as much as he has marked pages, --he sees this as the city where in al the windows "light shone with such brightness." That is, the comfortable family life of home is--what he is completely "letting go of" in setting out for the Unknown. In that sense, the write-in HUNGER is taking, unknown to himself, that Voyage which Baudelaire begins and which Rimbaud continues--the "long reasoned disordering of al the senses in order to arrive, finally! At the unknown."

Mohamed Choukri is an illiterate living hand to moth doing whatever he can to find something to eat, something to drink, to quench the thirst which bothers him more than hunger--thirst being a sign of thirsting for the Spirit, for "knowledge," and not, in this world he lives in which has no use for any materials other than the stones and light of its esterase poverty--not anything so material often as even bread. Simply water--or a times wine.

An event occurs, and so slight and simple that it seems almost as though "going unnoticed" by the literary reader, increases greatly the thirst of the one living by bread alone, and the young man, age twenty, approaches a street scribe letter writer an asks if he may be able to learn to read and write. Rimbaud writes in the "fetes de la faim" (the Feasts of Hunger)--je ne mange guerre/que des rochers et des pierres"--I eat nothing more than rocks and stones"-- (I wont describe the scenes waving to do with stones which are a kind of "moment of clarity" in For Bread Alone--)

The writers in Hunger and For bread Alone, (in the latter family IS important to the writer)--I think are much closer to "Poetry" in the sense that neither of them goes to Poetry or writing expecting at al to "make a living." There are for them no "literary examples" to follow as a Material Guide Book and no connection of writing with anything more than this rock-bottom existence they lead. Writing is not "a way out" to some hoped for and planned for "future," as neither writer has any "models" they aspire to, and writing is not for either on of them "a way to make a living," a phrase echoing "the invention of solitude." These writers find solitude al around them and in them, a harsh and enduring solitude, which simply IS, solitude, and one not judged as being "positive for one's development," nor "negative" in terms of loneliness and suffering."

It is hinted that the writer in Hunger was once a student, but now he is falling like a stone into the waters o social oblivion--a "drop out," who insists on living as a writer, even when he has "nothing to show for it." The apprenticeships which Auster's characters and he himself "set up" to follow in the footsteps of the masters--isn't something the writers of Hamsun and Choukri 's books are ever conscious of existing. They have accepted the "gamble" and just gone ahead and dived straight into the unknown, the only "goal" being not even to "publish, to produce, but in actuality to "learn how to write" at the most basic level. And neither writer finding themselves embarked on this voyage in to the unknown, even really any "clear idea' why it is they are willing to go to such extremes for something that may ell end up "going nowhere." In these two writers, where "Necessity the Motherfucker of invention" meets that Calling of the Waters which is their thirst--it is not "solitude" or "hunger" that is "invented," but instead--an as yet unknown writing that the near crazed dead man walking boarding a ship and the the illiterate street hustler purchasing a notebook and pen for his first lessons in writing the first sings-embark on. Of course, one says with the sagacity of hindsight, Hamsun did win Nobel Prize and Mohamed Choukri learned to write and became a famous and banned author--so are they not part of the same story as the one Auster seeks to be a part of? The difference among these writers is that Auster began with "an accepted and prosaic idea"--that is, the apprenticeship of writer and that also of the "family man.," of a man a part of the traditions he had thought himself apart from. Auster in other words from the start envisaged both poetry and prose as books which make money. The other two writers don't see anything of this at all. Leaders of day to day "bare existences," their only motivation in writing is that seemingly "without reason" they KNOW that is what they must do. Not for any goal they can think of at the moment--simply to learn how to write. And where it may or may not if ever take them neither has the remotest idea other than a dim consciousness of things written and "shown" as fotos in the "daily papers.: or the "news " of letters to family dictated to a scribe in the streets. And, in their Voyage into the unknown, both Hamsun and Choukri became known for having "invented" "new forms of writing" in the traditions they come to know "later on," rather than "before," as Auster does. In Choukri's case, what is even more of an unknown unthought-of of at al at the outset by himself or anyone else, is that this account of the picaresque journey to literacy is written not in language of the streets but in Classical Arabic, thereby establishing the work as being not a part from the Classical Traditions of the Arab World, but apart of it, though a complete "newcomer" in many ways. (Not surprisingly Choukri the young hustler-writer found himself spending time with this man he wanted to meet who also lived in Tangiers--a man not unlike himself--the Thief, pimp, Hustler and self taught writer Genet, who also introduced the languages the streets to the Classical French Tradition in Writing. There is a great short work by Choukri, "With jean Genet in Tangiers"--with fotos of the young Choukri and Genet and some other young men, sitting on the floor or in an outdoor cafe, drinking, smoking, talking, Poets of the Unknown who smuggled into Classicism their street hustling words, with al the skill of Poet Hustlers long ago used to many other forms of Solitude such a are found in the prisons and hell holes the "world within the world," that concealed and veiled world which veils itself yet in their works by "disguising themselves" as Classicists in street clothes, sitting on the floors of tiny rooms or at the little tables in the streets of places which "take care of one's thirsts."

Hunger's protagonist barely eats--but he does drink when he can prodigiously of the public waters in fountains, and suck on the water which remains inside even slivers of wood And Choukri's young man is also one driven by thirst, thirst in the heat and light and stone dust that eventually leads him via these veilings" into the places where he finds the beginning off the journey into the Unknown.

For how is an illiterate young man starving in a colonialist country to find anything but by such a means as thirst--for an oasis, yet not an isolated one--the --for in the cafes are gathered people who drink and read and write. One does see them, these examples, this man writing others letters in the "office" in a corner of the stony street. The "family of writers"—which Choukri wants to join, to be part of a world which is apart from yet still a part of the world which has led him to seeing writing as a way of "bridging worlds"—and languages—to see life as it were "from the other side" of the page—

That other side--"To shut the eyes is travel" as Emily Dickinson wrote--

Or Celine, noting that the all life is an imaginary voyage, made up, a novel, and that the dictionary tells one so, finishes also by saying--anyone can do this--close the eyes and there you have "life seen from the other side."

On the other is the Unknown--that writing which IS the findings of the necessity of the motherfucker of Invention--

and not those of what remains on this side of the page--that of the Conventions created by literature to arrive at a position at once of authority and responsibility,a place in the "lineage" of masculine writings, the "patrilinearity of patriarchy as expressed in this work, "the Invention turned Convention " of Solitude--findings its way "home."

(Pascal "Wagered" with Eternal Life, God--but the Pascal was a brilliant mathematician and theorems of his are in use yet today), for

Reply

Forward

↑ Index

262. Séamas Cain
NEW TITLES FROM LUNA BISONTE PRODS
Thu 28 Aug 2008

NEW TITLES FROM LUNA BISONTE PRODS

Luna Bisonte Prods has published 2 new books!

The first is Tom Taylor's SEVENTY, available from their Lulu.com site as a print-on-demand or download. "...truly an illumination, a clarity in this work written on the edge of life and fully living...this is a very great work"

Go to http://stores.lulu.com/lunabisonteprods and check out the other titles available there as well!

The second is John M. Bennett's MONTPARNASSE, a chapbook of poetry in 4 languages, available for $5.00 US postpaid from:

Luna Bisonte Prods
137 Leland Ave.
Columbus, OH 43214 USA

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

↑ Index

263. steve russell
Re: artifice of absorption
Thu 28 Aug 2008

---

one thing i've learned from simply browsing the lango-poets is how to relax getting words on paper allowing thoughts
their flow
                getting out of the way
one day i'll learn how to read Emily Dickenson/no doubt she deserves to be canonical, still the 20th century mind

the 21st century mentality
does not respond 2 well to thoughts squeezed into the tiniest quatrains

↑ Index

264. Adam Good
Email address change
Thu 28 Aug 2008

Hi All,

I am changing my email address, effective immediately.
My new email address is [redacted].
Please take a moment to update your address books, as I will soon be shutting down this account.

Thanks, hope you are all well.
Adam

↑ Index

265. Geraldine Monk
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Thu 28 Aug 2008

Not quite true Robin as they we were definitely reading Hardy-the-Novelist when I did my degree in '88 - I know this because I've still got the mental bruises of having to read Jude the Obscure - arrgghhh (it ran neck and neck in sheer awfulness with Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter). Despite a fairly adventurous poetics programme I can't remember Hardy- the-Poet figuring. I think the blockbuster films of Hardy's novels plus the ghastly concept of now having a 'Hardy country' for the tourism industry has put Hardy the Novelist back in pole position - at least with the general public.

Geraldine

> This is a UK take on things ...
>
> Up to the sixties, Hardy was certainly seen as a novelist, but in the wake of Philip Larkin (both in his practice and his criticism -- as Yeats created an audience for Blake in the late 19th / early 20th C, so Larkin in the 50s/60s for Hardy), Hardy was recognised (at least in the UK) as one of the central poets of the late 19th /early 20thC.
>
> I can put my finger on when this was happening in the UK, since as an undegraduate in the mid to late 60s, I was expected to write essays on

> Hardy-the-Novelist.
>
> After the early 70s, this would have been seen as a joke.
>
> It was part of a larger shift that revalued Clare, Edward Thomas, and Robert Frost.
>
> But Hardy-the-Novelist today?
>
> Geeuz a break, jimmy ...
>
> R.

↑ Index

266. Robin Hamilton

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Thu 28 Aug 2008

Possibly I exaggerate a little, Geraldine.

Though I'm surprised Hardy-the-Novelist was still running in degree courses as late as 88.

But there would be a shift at *some point -- difficult to see Donald Davie or Tom Paulin taking Hardy-the-Novelist seriously.

And nobody should *ever be made to read Jude the Oscure, and I doubt if anyone would willingly read it twice.

Because once is too many.

[Mind you, thinking of this, most of my teaching experience was at Loughborough, so with John Lucas in charge, natch there would be a focus on Hardy-the-Poet. Unintentional bias on my part, mibee ... But I stand by the point about Larkin creating an audience for Hardy's poetry.]

Robin

----- Original Message -----
From: "Geraldine Monk" <[redacted]>
To: "Robin Hamilton" <[redacted]>; "Poetics List (UPenn, UB)" <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, August 29, 2008 12:29 AM
Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

> Not quite true Robin as they we were definitely reading Hardy-the-Novelist when I did my degree in '88 - I know this because I've still got the

mental bruises of having to read Jude the Obscure - arrgghhh (it ran neck and neck in sheer awfulness with Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter). Despite a fairly adventurous poetics programme I can't remember Hardy- the-Poet figuring. I think the blockbuster films of Hardy's novels plus the ghastly concept of now having a 'Hardy country' for the tourism industry has put Hardy the Novelist back in pole position - at least with the general public.

Geraldine

This is a UK take on things ...

Up to the sixties, Hardy was certainly seen as a novelist, but in the wake of Philip Larkin (both in his practice and his criticism -- as Yeats created an audience for Blake in the late 19th / early 20th C, so Larkin in the 50s/60s for Hardy), Hardy was recognised (at least in the UK) as one of the central poets of the late 19th /early 20thC.

I can put my finger on when this was happening in the UK, since as an undegraduate in the mid to late 60s, I was expected to write essays on Hardy-the-Novelist.

After the early 70s, this would have been seen as a joke.

It was part of a larger shift that revalued Clare, Edward Thomas, and Robert Frost.

But Hardy-the-Novelist today?

Geeuz a break, jimmy ...

R.

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com Version: 8.0.138 / Virus Database: 270.6.11/1639 - Release Date: 8/28/2008 7:39 AM

↑ Index

267. ALDON L NIELSEN
Memo to Barack Obama
Thu 28 Aug 2008

Nathaniel Mackey for inaugural poet?

<<

are especially interested in work in translation, interstitial/new wave fabulist fiction and language-centered short plays. Deadline is November 1, 2008.

Send checks and submissions to:

Eleven Eleven
California College of the Arts
1111 Eighth Street
San Francisco, CA 94107

For more information, write to us at [redacted].

Best,

Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Faculty Editor
Eleven Eleven

↑ Index

269. David Chirot

Fwd: A New Book from Kaurab: late night correspondence, a book of English poems by Aryanil Mukherjee

Fri 29 Aug 2008

Kaurab is one of the most exciting Poetry Journals and sites today, and Aryanil Mukherjee, who contributes to this list--is one of its editors in an inspiring collective

Dear All

Kaurab proudly announces the release of–

late night correspondence, a book of English poems by Aryanil Mukherjee.

This is a collection of 42 poems transcreated into English from the author's original Bengali poems.

Please visit –

http://www.kaurab.com/books/lnc.html

The book is published by CinnamonTeal Press.

ISBN - 978-81-906900-6-5

Cover Art by Mithu Sen

It is distributed worldwide by Kaurab and will be soon be available online for Indian readers at Indian Plaza, DogEarsEtc etc. and for American/Canadian readers at SPDBOOKS (spdbooks.org).

late night correspondence received a sparkling blurb from legendary American poet John Ashbery.

Other blurbists include talented contemporary American poets

Chris Stroffolino & Pat Clifford. The book has an introduction by Tyrone Williams, Prof. of literature, literary theory, and creative writing at Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Staff, Kaurab

www.kaurab.com

Kaurab Prakashanee is a non-profit organization. More than half of our  *book sales are donated to the elementary school in BHALOPAHAR, *

Purulia where a unique community village is developed and maintained

by Kaurab poets and their fraternity. This society endeavors to build a *greener environment, preserve natural resources, and offer land, *

farming aid and basic education to farmers and their children living in *the reins of extreme poverty. *

↑ Index

270. Nico Vassilakis

Subtext Group Reading 9/3/08

Fri 29 Aug 2008

---

http://SubtextReadingSeries.blogspot.com

↑ Index

271. Tony Trigilio

Registration discount through Sept. 1, The Beat Generation Symposium at Columbia College Chicago

Fri 29 Aug 2008

Hi all--The registration discount for The Beat Generation Symposium ends Sept. 1. Information below on how to register online, by phone, or by postal mail. Thanks--

Best,
Tony

****
THE BEAT GENERATION SYMPOSIUM
****

DISCOUNT DEADLINE EXTENDED!
Register before September 1 for a discounted fee (see below for details).

Please join us for a conference devoted to the literary and cultural legacy of the Beat Generation: "The Beat Generation Symposium," co-sponsored by the Beat Studies Association, the Columbia College Chicago English Department and Provost's Office, Columbia College's Ellen Stone Belic Institute for the Study of Women and Gender in the Arts and Media, and the Illinois State University Department of English and College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Friday, October 10, and Saturday, October 11, 2008.

Location: Columbia College Chicago, Film Row Theater (1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th floor).

This is an academic Beat Studies conference to be held in conjunction with the Columbia College's Center for the Book and Paper Arts's Fall 2008 display of the Jack Kerouac ON THE ROAD manuscript scroll.

The Beat Generation Symposium features panel discussions each day, with poetry readings by Joanne Kyger (October 10) and Diane di Prima (October 11). The readings are free and open to the public. Joanne Kyger, a native California writer, is the author of over 20 books of poetry. She is known for her ties to the poets of Black Mountain College, the San Francisco Renaissance, and the Beat Generation. Her most recent books are About Now: Collected Poems, 1957-2004 (National Poetry Foundation, 2007) and Not Veracruz (Libellum Press, 2007). She taught for many years at Naropa University's poetics program, and The New College of San Francisco. She lives on the coast north of San Francisco. Diane di Prima lives and works in San Francisco. She is the author of 43 books of poetry and prose, and her work has been translated into more than 20 languages. Recent publications include Recollections of My Life as a Woman (Penguin, 2002) and an expanded edition of Revolutionary Letters (Last Gasp Press, 2007). In 2006 di Prima received the Fred Cody Award for Lifetime Achievement and community service from the Northern California Book Critics Association.

Panelists include John Bryant, Peter Cook, Terrance Diggory, Jane Falk, Amy Friedman, Deborah R. Geis, Nancy M. Grace, Tim Hunt, Rob Johnson, Ronna Johnson, Hassan Melehy, Timothy Murphy, Jennie Skerl, Matt Theado, Tony Trigilio, and more.

The weekend of the symposium, there will be a related offsite reading by Michael Rothenberg (Unhurried Vision) and David Meltzer (David's Copy) sponsored by Myopic Books and the Poetry Center of Chicago. Sunday, October 12, 7:00 p.m. Myopic Books, 1564 N Milwaukee Ave, in Chicago's Wicker Park neighborhood.

Conference fee for those who pre-register by September 1: $50 ($25 for Graduate Students, Independent Scholars, and Retired Faculty). After September 1, the fees are $100 and $50.

Checks should be made payable to Columbia College Chicago, and should be sent to:

Columbia Ticket Center
33 East Congress St., Suite 610
Chicago, IL 60605
Ph: [redacted] (fax [redacted])
[redacted]

To register by credit card, call the Columbia Ticket Office at the number above, or register online at:

www.colum.edu/tickets/index.php

A limited number of hotel rooms are available at the Homewood Suites by Hilton Chicago-Downtown, 40 East Grand Avenue, Chicago. This hotel is a very short cab or subway ride from the Columbia campus. The Homewood Suites prepared a special link for us to book online. Just click below and you'll find directions for reserving a room:

http://homewoodsuites.hilton.com/en/hw/groups/personalized/CHIHWHW-CL-20081009/index.jhtml

It's important that you book your room as soon as possible, as the Chicago Marathon is taking place October 12. (We only discovered this convergence recently, after we'd already booked the featured readers.)

A Visitor's Guide for the Beat Symposium is pasted below, with a list of nearby hotels. Columbia College Chicago is located downtown, in the heart of the city's South Loop neighborhood, and is easily accessible from these hotels by foot or cab. All major subway/El trains come into the South Loop, too, so it's possible to book hotels in other parts of the city and make it to the Symposium without difficulty.

Mention that you're a Columbia College Chicago visitor to receive discounted rates at some of these hotels. It's crucial to book as soon as possible because of the marathon.

For more information, contact Tony Trigilio at [redacted] ([redacted]).

VISITOR'S GUIDE: THE BEAT GENERATION SYMPOSIUM

Airports: O'Hare Airport (western suburbs) and Midway Airport (southern suburbs) are the two airports servicing the Chicgao area. They are approximately equidistant from Columbia College.

Transportation:
>From Midway Airport, take the Orange Line elevated train to Adams Street. From there, walk south on Wabash until you reach Congress Parkway. From O'Hare Airport, take the Blue Line to La Salle. Walk East on Congress (away from the Chicago Stock Exchange Building, which you'll see upon emerging from the subway) until you reach Wabash (about 5 short blocks).

Use www.transitchicago.com's free Trip Planner service to plan the rest of your trips while you're here. Simply enter your starting point and destination, and Trip Planner gives you detailed directions. As of 2008, fares are $2.00 one-way with a $0.25 transfer. Each train station has kiosks where you can buy transit cards and reload them (cash only). The Blue Line and Red Line run 24/7; the other lines stop running for a few hours late at night.

Taxis are available throughout the city. From Midway Airport to the English Department, cab fare would be approximately $25 and from O'Hare Airport cab fare would be approximately $50. If you need to call a cab, call (773) or (312) TAXICAB.

Metra Trains service suburban areas. Visit www.metrarail.com for an updated schedule and fare list.

NEARBY HOTELS

The Hilton and Towers
722 S Michigan Ave
(0.2 miles from the English Department)
[redacted]

The Palmer House Hilton
17 E Monroe St (0.4 miles away)
[redacted] or 1-800-HILTONS

The Best Western Grant Park
1100 S Michigan Ave (0.6 mi)
[redacted]

Travelodge
65 E Harrison St (0.1 mi)
[redacted]

Hotel Blake
500 S Dearborn St (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
www.hyatt.com

Blackstone Hotel
819 S Wabash Ave # 606 (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
marriott.com

The Silversmith Hotel
10 S Wabash Ave (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
silversmithchicagohotel.com

Omni Ambassador East
1301 S State St (0.7 mi)
[redacted]

Embassy Suites Hotel Chicago-Downtown
600 North State Street (1.5 mi)
[redacted]
embassysuites.com

Essex Inn Hotel
800 S Michigan Ave (0.3 mi)
[redacted]
essexinn.com

Club Quarters: Hotel
111 W Adams St (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
clubquarters.com

W Hotels-Chicago City Center
172 W Adams St (0.4 mi)
[redacted]
starwoodhotels.com

Hostelling International Chicago
24 E Congress Pkwy (0.1 mi)
[redacted]
hichicago.org

↑ Index

272. Barbara Jane Reyes
Re: Eleven Eleven issue 5 and submission call for online issue 6
Fri 29 Aug 2008

---

awesome hugh, can't wait to see it. as well, it's really great to see you've included work by alfred arteaga, whom some of you know passed away this summer.

↑ Index

273. cris cheek
Re: Memo to Barack Obama
Fri 29 Aug 2008

---

and maybe Biden is the monster from the deep that has truly sunk Obama into the mundane. It's really hard for me to watch yet another generation of youthful political energy and optimism sacrificed by this extraordinarily inept decision. How on earth can the choice of Biden be sustained under the banner of change? Someone better enlighten me.

On Aug 28, 2008, at 8:44 PM, ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:

> Nathaniel Mackey for inaugural poet?
>
> *<<

274. steve russell
poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
Fri 29 Aug 2008

---

so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.

of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken. Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager concerning how he made his living.

↑ Index

275. Maria Damon
Re: Fwd: A New Book from Kaurab: late night correspondence, a book of English poems by Aryanil Mukherjee
Fri 29 Aug 2008

---

wow, what a cool book cover. i'll order it when i get back to da Great Satan.

David Chirot wrote:
> Kaurab is one of the most exciting Poetry Journals and sites today, and > Aryanil Mukherjee, who contributes to this list--is one of its editors in an > inspiring collective
>
> Dear All
>
>
>
> Kaurab proudly announces the release of–
>
>
>
> late night correspondence, a book of English poems by Aryanil Mukherjee.
>
> This is a collection of 42 poems transcreated into English from the author's
>
> original Bengali poems.

>
>
>
> Please visit –
>
> http://www.kaurab.com/books/lnc.html
>
>
>
> The book is published by CinnamonTeal Press.
>
> ISBN - 978-81-906900-6-5
>
> Cover Art by Mithu Sen
>
>
>
> It is distributed worldwide by Kaurab and will be soon be available online
>
> for Indian readers at Indian Plaza, DogEarsEtc etc. and for > American/Canadian
>
> readers at SPDBOOKS (spdbooks.org).
>
>
>
> late night correspondence received a sparkling blurb from legendary > American
>
> poet John Ashbery.
>
>
>
> Other blurbists include talented contemporary American poets
>
> Chris Stroffolino & Pat Clifford. The book has an introduction by *Tyrone
> Williams*,
>
> Prof. of literature, literary theory, and creative writing at Xavier > University in Cincinnati, Ohio.
>
>

>
>
>
> Staff, Kaurab
>
> www.kaurab.com
>
>
>
> Kaurab Prakashanee is a non-profit organization. More than half of our **
>
> *book sales are donated to the elementary school in BHALOPAHAR, *
>
> Purulia where a unique community village is developed and maintained
>
> by Kaurab poets and their fraternity. This society endeavors to build a
>
> *greener environment, preserve natural resources, and offer land,
> *
>
> farming aid and basic education to farmers and their children living in
>
> *the reins of extreme poverty. *
>
>

↑ Index

276. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Fri 29 Aug 2008

"(Might one not ask and have not and do not millions continually do so-- if a woman has far less opportunity, far less time, (for time more than money even is required for Inventing Solitude)-"

David,

Does this not mean that the basic activity of poetry is not production (of a poem), but a consumption of time. I write about this in "Is Poetry a Job, Is Writing a Product."

This is another great exploratory piece, with its stunning and thrilling jumps and connections David is capable of and which are, basically, new kinds of poems. Thank you. How long did it take you to write it? All your life?

Following your father/son (and Cassandra and responsible male/ Obama) insights, I thought again of Auster's movie Smoke. The same father/son/responsibility theme enters the movie: a young black kid enters the hero's apartment (a space engulfed, an emptiness saturated with the grief of having lost a female companion). An immediate tension develops because the kid also intrudes into the hero's space "of solitude, a separate room in the apartment where the hero writes. A series of negotiations develops, initially as short tempered instructions by the hero, to set the rules so that the boy and writing can exist in the same space. I am fascinated by the reasonance of all this in relation to Obama's speech yesterday where the idea of "responsibility" appears (of fathers towards their sons, which Jesse Jackson thought worthy of castration) and might be the single word which finally turns this election to the side of Obama. Obama is also a writer (writing about his absent father, as Auster in The Invention of Solitude. "Political speech" becomes his "genre detective novel" through which responsibility is fused with writing, in both "stock" forms being basically transformed.

Smoke contains a second, alternative kind of solitude/writing, the Harvey Keitel character shooting photos of the same spot every day through a number of years -an activity the very essence of which is time, its consumption, where the ultimate discovery/restoration this passage, this *trip*contains is death (the figure of the lost wife passing through it). How does the Keitel character unite his writing with responsibility? Through *smoke *, in the movie a magical, subversive activity which involves the trafficking in Cuban cigars (Interestingly, the Stockard Channing character who plays Keitel's ex-wife and whom he uses the Cuban cigar money to help wears an eye-patch, the very image of piracy). "Responsible" writing is transformed into a subversive, magical one (indirectly still involving a family). In my view, Smoke is revisiting the Pascalian bet. On the one hand, one has the linear plot, the hero helping the black kid find and join his absent father. On the other hand, one has smoke, through a series of superimposed photographs, a repetitive, useless act involving the consumption of time, a trip of re-discovery of the lost wife, the mourning whose absence is the core of the movie. If this analysis is true, then in * Smoke* Auster is returning, to use David's terms, to that female/Cassadra side of poetry which Auster so deftly ran away from in Hand To Mouth and the deep mourning in Smoke is the mourning for that fateful decision. Literally and symbolically, in Smoke Auster is saying that the language of film may become the means to a new synthesis where the visual and the verbal (responsibility and subversive female spirit) become unified in a complete new way where a poem is a film and a film a poem. It is a synthesis -the possibility of a truly new form- poets should be interested in.

In the Mood For Love

Cancer not associated yet, cigarette smoke curling in the heart of love screen, full of lung,

in a dream I keep having, rehearsing
rehearsing

Geraldine,

"I know this because I've still got the mental bruises of having to read Jude the Obscure - arrgghhh (it ran neck and neck in sheer awfulness with Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter)."

Do you like any 19th century novel, at least written in the English language?

Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Aug 28, 2008 at 2:27 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> I had a similar experience to that of Murat's in reading The Invention of Solitude. (Which perhaps may be thought of also as The Convention of Solitude--)
>
> Steve Russell wrote that Auster is a non-Pascalian thinker, which is certainly interesting in considering the title, "The invention of Solitude," for Pascal writes at one point that al the problems for persons begin from the fact that they cannot remain of their own volition solitary, and stay simply in a room. And in that room--to write perhaps--"perchance to dream"--to follow Memory and Time as Proust does in the Solitude of the cork lined room, or to > invent something new to the "solitariness of the male"--"the "A Room of One's Own" of Virginia Woolf--or that room of Emily Dickinson's of which she > wrote--"I have but to cross the room to be in the Spice Islands."
>
> (Might one not ask and have not and do not millions continually do so-- if a woman has far less opportunity, far less time, (for > time more than money even is required for Inventing Solitude)--far less of that time, most precious of commodities---- which for a woman is so little permitted--for the Invention of Solitude--, an almost invisible, barely heard, "solitude" compared to the "Solitariness of the Male of the Species," > who gets to sit and look "wise" like the Solitary Male Lion--resplendent in meditation on the Shadow that he casts--as he poses there between the Sun and that other shadow of himself, his son---who will carry "his name" into the next and next generations, much as his own shadow lengthens across the landscape with the coming of twilight-- for is not the "critique of the self" conducted with an eye to its improvement?--and in what better way to improve oneself than by those extensions through Space via shadows and Time via progeny--and via these extensions make of the self both shadow and substance in such a way that they portray nothing less than an enduring presence of a God-like Being--)

To invent solitude is a Pascalian paradox, for it means that one begins with the goal of attaining one's own inventing of something that one already has seen examples of and desires. In other words, the paradox is that the invention is of something already KNOWN.

By this Pascalian reversal--one finds that the "invention of solitude" is the Convention of finding its rejection. By seeking to "invent solitude," the writer is faced with the convention of finding that the conventional is what calls to him. And thus a "gambler" on Poetry faces his conventional responsibilities as a "son of a father and father of a son"--and realizes that in order to support these additional "male members," one must choose between the poverty of poetry and the relative security of "conventional prose genres." Being an "ethical being," Auster chooses to sacrifice the poetry--and poverty--and instead become not only the "author of his sons day's," but his "hard working father, toiling in the lower depths of literature that the son might find his way to a better future--"

In Auster's case the paradox is that by using blueprints and previous texts as "guides," in the invention of solitude, what his invention will be of is something "Already KNOWN, already WRITTEN," This is why perhaps he is certain of his bet on the outcome of events in terms of writing. He thinks of and follows in the footsteps of others and their examples, thinking to win his bet, and then, discovering he has made the outcome dependent on writing alone--he has missed the fact of money which concerns not only oneself but one's family. Writing an invention of solitude becomes a selfish act, and so Auster turns to one far more familiar to those who are readers of much literature, as he is himself a reader of a great many texts, and so knows the "conventional choices facing those who are obsessed with invention."

That is , to work as a translator, anthologist, writer of Prefaces and at first "manfully" toiling in the "prosaic prose" of Genre novels known for their 'formulaic prose" and "narratives" which Poetry tends to look down on--Auster is able to harness both is craft and talents and his ability to be a respectable bread winner, and so elude that other convention of literature, the "dead beat dad" who puts all his eggs in one basket, sacrificing all--including the family--for the pursuit of that fickle chimera, the Muse.

That is, in the exchange between poetry and money, he has considered only himself as being the one to benefit. When the "more prosaic demands of life" begin to "prey on him," he discovers that the only form of reconciliation he thinks open to him is that of joining together writing and the prosaic demands of life. That is, --to write prose that some of his poetic colleagues may think of as of a "Common" and "Prosaic Nature." The "problem of the bet," is not necessarily the terms in which it was to be tested, but that it was an exclusionary bet made by a Poet who had "overlooked" the demands of the Prosaic existence of his ignored roles as son and father.

In The Invention of Solitude, the "room" Auster finds turns out not to be solitary, for there are in it both his father and his son. The "linking of generations of men" follows the same pattern as that of the literary. A writer, even a Poet, is not without a place in the already waiting and written series of Solitudes, examples, fathers and sons--linkings-which are in sad disrepair and need this Poetic worker to set to work "mending"--- and if one is indeed both a Poet and a Man, must find a way to reconcile these--to be "responsable"--and accept one's place in the traditions of writing--in a way he had not "counted on" when making his bet--and so find that that to be the "Author of Days" is to be a "Real Man"--

The "failure" which Murat notes in terms of poetry, is a success in the very real sense that Auster is able with his writing to make that room "livable" which he finds himself sharing with his father and his own son, and so in that space making a linkage, becoming a part of and not apart from, a "lineage," a cultural and familial narrative which he wouldst fain interrupt, for to do is to risk becoming an "outsider," a "pariah," and effectively a criminalized 'dead beat dad" sought after by the IRS, Family Services and other organizations, let alone flocks of those buzzards known as lawyers.

This "Invention of Solitude" which is sacrificed for the Conventional narrative of Male Cultural and Social heritage preserved as a lineage--- creates an implicit critique of the female "solitude" in the strict sense connected with that "solitary confinement/confining oneself to one's room'" of Emily Dickinson or the more social Virgina Woolf-, in that for a woman to be "solitary" means the commission of a "crime' more dangerous than that of being a "dead beat dad"--the choosing of being childless by the being who is supposed to be the child bearer.

For who is the representative of the Female Solitude in Auster's book but the tragic and damned Cassandra? Who "speaks" in Auster's text via an obscure old English translation of an obscure Latin version--and is "rescued" from these "obscurities" by the "generosity " of the Male Author. This generosity has its limits, though, for while "allowing the voice of the obscured voices of the doomed female prophetess to speak," at the same time what Auster puts in the mouth of a young prostitute hired to come to his "room of his own"is not words, but that "pen-ultimate" instrument of the Authorship of Days--

At first twas very exciting to me, and I thought, aha, finally a contemporary writer I can look forward to accompanying for along time in his writing. Unfortunately, the book crosses a Rubicon, and turns into the same old story of the father-son-son mold.

This discovery simulatenously "realizes" one's solitude as an entity among others, part from them, and as also an entity among others, apart of them.
In the same way that the life follows the book and the book follows thelife engender from that engendersed from books, the writing of books as the "link inthe chjain" of both writing and being--"reconciles" the formerly gambling writer with the realization that with his "placein the family found," there is a respsoansabiulity to be a provider.
In that manner, the turning to the writing of a genre work, which is the same genre turned to be so many many writers in order to "make a living," is not a turn of "defeat," but rather one of understanding how to secure a "success," in that he being a writer does have a way to write and at the same time "take care of his family.

It is not a "compromise," but a recognition and embrace, or at least acceptance, of the reality in which the writer is living, as both apart from the family due to the solitude of the act of writing itself, if not literally always, certainly often enough figuratively, and also being a part of the community which he shares with not just his family, but this family of writers he is a son among fathers in and father among sons now realizing his responsabilities.

The use of translation in the book--and Auster's own translating as another way of Supporting himself and his family"-- --and its reversal in the act of oral sex that is paid for--"illustrates" another form of reversal in which the making of money by translating others' poetry "transmutes" the earlier failure to make money of Auster's own poetry into a "conventional" means of "doubling the earning power of one's skills" as poet and bi-lingual expatriate.

The use of the Mallarme's "Tomb for Anatole," about the grief beyond measure (that is a poetic measure also, as the work is a fragmented series of prose notations which are on a jagged edged line of grief stricken utterance close to stutter-ance.)--signals that Auster is aware of what the life and death of others (his father, his son) is beginning to mean to him. This "awareness of death" in "aesthetic form" as a broken utterance which will ultimately "find expression" in the grave, the tomb, the monument is another way in which Auster faces the the "mending process" which is the "conventional narrative" of the book.

(Mallarme also wrote a poem for "le Tombeau d' Edgar Poe"--for the occasion of the dedication in Baltimore of a monument to the American poet who via Baudelaire's translation has so influenced generations of French poets. Whitman, unable to attend the ceremonies due to illness, also wrote a brief note, which was inspired by a dream, quite a fitting way in which to "encounter and remember Poe.")

*To keep alive the dead--is the action of Mallarme and Poe, while knowing full well that what activates the presence of the writing is the absence that one is having to face of the being whom one cannot "keep alive"
in any other way than by writing, which as Poe puts it, is "mournful and never ending remembrance."*

Perhaps that is why the most striking words in the book are those of the obscure English translation of an extremely obscure Latin version of Homer, in which the shrieks of Cassandra, that "ill-omened bird," are in an agony, for it is she, truly who is the one who exists in solitude, and in solitude with seeing that Apocalypse which is coming to meet her , her family, her city, everything Trojan---

If one thinks of Cassandra's "voice of poetry" as visionary and tragic, existing in a solitude which is invented for one, rather than being invented by one, then, the movement of males among males is the linking with the writing which "earns a living for the family." Or at least the male members, no pun intended!!

Meanwhile, in the book is the complete absence of females, other than the prostitute who is paid to "service" the "very important member" which cannot seem to abide the solitude the writer attempts to invent.

Again, the book Auster is creating which is created out of books, "follows a pattern," and so the "happy ending" of reconciliation of what had seemed to be "difficult situations" in the writing of a genre novel, in a genre which is associated with the resolution of difficulties, the solving of cases and if one want sot, of case histories.

The writer is brought face to face with the conventional--the convention genre novel, the conventional "story of my life and how i found my father and my son and became a Man," and conventional i the sense that "poetry" which is so "strange"--Mallarme's, Cassandra's, becomes "lost in translation," and sinks into a kind of obscurity, a fading backdrop for the ongoing saga of the generation unto generation existence as a member (forgive me, there it is again!!)) of a family)one's own) and also of the "family of man," for this family is that, a family of man, and so Cassandra that immensely tragic and harsh voice which spills beauty forth with blood and death, is abandoned, and what was once "needed" (poetry) can now be purchased to "satisfy a need." (The young prostitute.)

This discussion and thinking of Invention of Solitude brought to mind two of my personal favorite books ever written on the interrelationship of literal Hunger and literary Hunger, which do not come about nor "conclude (for neither concludes at all--) with those reconciliations the literary and the literal that Auster finds.

These books are Knut Hamsun's HUNGER, (which Auster has used also as title) and FOR BREAD ALONE by the Moroccan writer Mohamed Choukri. In HUNGER, the writer seems to be without any family at all other than the "friends" and "uncles" he creates of those whom he encounters and play apart in his "season in hell" which is simultaneously for the protagonist-writer "Illuminations."

In Choukri's book, the dysfunctional family trying to survive the famines sweeping the Rif during the World wide Depression of the 1930,s the family itself "eats its young," for his father kills his small brother. Everyone in the family is at the mercy of the moods of the father, himself enraged by the frustration of a poverty which seems hopeless to make even a dent in, to make small hole in, to find anything other than what the writer finds: the existence and persistent beauty of stones.

These in a sense speak to him the parable of his life: "By bread alone," rather than "one does not live by bread alone."

The "niceties" of being able to write a genre novel as a "a way out of the difficulties," are extremely limited for Hamsun's protagonist, who only manages no and then to sell apiece to the daily papers, while starving steadily into evermore "extreme states of destitution and altered consciousness." This young man, determined to be a writer, doesn't once see himself in terms of literary tradition of 'starving writers," at all. His solitude is that he finds himself a "dead man walking" in broad daylight, chewing on wood splinters and writing with a pencil seated among the cemetery stones. He becomes a walking HUNGER--barely existing as person, yet persistent in this despite everything with that "imp of the Perverse" continually dogging his heels and making the smallest of situations into a drama of such high strung nerves he collapses into faints that are not far from death.

Choukri's autobiographical being in FOR BREAD ALONE is thrown out of the house, and has to find a way to live among the alleys and gutters, hustling for this and hustling for that. To find nothing but "bread alone," the illiterate child and then young man is trapped in a the picaresque, in which one event after another follows in an inexorable series of disconnected fragments which now and then "rhyme" as the repetition of certain sites, the grave of his brother, the poverty all around one which makes it impossible to see HUNGER as an experimental act for the generation of writing, which in part the HUNGER writer is able to do--because he is already a writer, and which Auster self consciously essays in order to follow in the footsteps of previous literary apprenticeships.

Hunger's writer is not even a genre NOVELIST, but a sort of wild essayist of the daily press who now and then hits on an interesting idea which he is seized by as much as he ever is able to seize himself due to his almost complete debilitation at the "hand to mouth" existence in which the mouth is devouring him and l that he has is a writing hand, which seems to go on as though separate from himself, yet connected tenuously as it needs the writers body to "fuel its writing's journey across the spaces of the page, and from there, hopefully on to the pages of the daily press.

"Poetry is news that stays news," Pound may say, but for this writer the only news is poetry--that is to say, it doesn't stay new unless one eats and ones doesn't eat unless one writes,. One is trapped in a solitude in which the only way out is not a reconciliation of writing with living, but of further traveling--as the young man convinces a somewhat skeptical employer to give him work on a ship bound for England and eventually the USA. -

The ending of the novel has the writer looking back from the ship pulling out of the harbor and seeing that strange city which marks everyone who encounters it, and has marked him as much as he has marked pages, --he sees this as the city where in al the windows "light shone with such brightness."

That is, the comfortable family life of home is--what he is completely "letting go of" in setting out for the Unknown.
In that sense, the write-in HUNGER is taking, unknown to himself, that Voyage which Baudelaire begins and which Rimbaud continues--the "long reasoned disordering of al the senses in order to arrive, finally! At the unknown."

Mohamed Choukri is an illiterate living hand to moth doing whatever he can to find something to eat, something to drink, to quench the thirst which bothers him more than hunger--thirst being a sign of thirsting for the Spirit, for "knowledge," and not, in this world he lives in which has no use for any materials other than the stones and light of its esterase poverty--not anything so material often as even bread. Simply water--or a times wine.

An event occurs, and so slight and simple that it seems almost as though "going unnoticed" by the literary reader, increases greatly the thirst of the one living by bread alone, and the young man, age twenty, approaches a street scribe letter writer an asks if he may be able to learn to read and write.
Rimbaud writes in the "fetes de la faim" (the Feasts of Hunger)--je ne mange guerre/que des rochers et des pierres"--I eat nothing more than rocks and stones"--
(I wont describe the scenes waving to do with stones which are a kind of "moment of clarity" in For Bread Alone--)

The writers in Hunger and For bread Alone, (in the latter family IS important to the writer)--I think are much closer to "Poetry" in the sense that neither of them goes to Poetry or writing expecting at al to "make a living." There are for them no "literary examples" to follow as a Material Guide Book and no connection of writing with anything more than this rock-bottom existence they lead. Writing is not "a way out" to some hoped for and planned for "future," as neither writer has any "models" they aspire to, and writing is not for either on of them "a way to make a living," a phrase echoing "the invention of solitude."
These writers find solitude al around them and in them, a harsh and enduring solitude, which simply IS, solitude, and one not judged as being "positive for one's development," nor "negative" in terms of loneliness and suffering."

It is hinted that the writer in Hunger was once a student, but now he is falling like a stone into the waters o social oblivion--a "drop out," who insists on living as a writer, even when he has "nothing to show for it." The apprenticeships which Auster's characters and he himself "set up" to follow in the footsteps of the masters--isn't something the writers of Hamsun and Choukri 's books are ever conscious of existing. They have accepted the "gamble" and just gone ahead and dived straight into the unknown, the only "goal" being not even to "publish, to produce, but in actuality to "learn how to write" at the most basic level. And neither writer finding themselves embarked on this voyage in to the unknown, even really any "clear idea' why it is they are willing to go to such extremes for something that may ell end up "going nowhere."

In these two writers, where "Necessity the Motherfucker of invention" meets that Calling of the Waters which is their thirst--it is not "solitude" or "hunger" that is "invented," but instead--an as yet unknown writing that the near crazed dead man walking boarding a ship and the the illiterate street hustler purchasing a notebook and pen for his first lessons in writing the first sings-embark on.

Of course, one says with the sagacity of hindsight, Hamsun did win Nobel Prize and Mohamed Choukri learned to write and became a famous and banned author--so are they not part of the same story as the one Auster seeks to be a part of?

The difference among these writers is that Auster began with "an accepted and prosaic idea"--that is, the apprenticeship of writer and that also of the "family man.," of a man a part of the traditions he had thought himself apart from.

Auster in other words from the start envisaged both poetry and prose as books which make money. The other two writers don't see anything of this at all. Leaders of day to day "bare existences," their only motivation in writing is that seemingly "without reason" they KNOW that is what they must do. Not for any goal they can think of at the moment--simply to learn how to write.

And where it may or may not if ever take them neither has the remotest idea other than a dim consciousness of things written and "shown" as fotos in the "daily papers.: or the "news " of letters to family dictated to a scribe in the streets.

And, in their Voyage into the unknown, both Hamsun and Choukri became known for having "invented" "new forms of writing" in the traditions they come to know "later on," rather than "before," as Auster does.

In Choukri's case, what is even more of an unknown unthought-of of at al at the outset by himself or anyone else, is that this account of the picaresque journey to literacy is written not in language of the streets but in Classical Arabic, thereby establishing the work as being not a part from the Classical Traditions of the Arab World, but apart of it, though a complete "newcomer" in many ways.

(Not surprisingly Choukri the young hustler-writer found himself spending time with this man he wanted to meet who also lived in Tangiers--a man not unlike himself--the Thief, pimp, Hustler and self taught writer Genet, who also introduced the languages the streets to the Classical French

Tradition in Writing.

There is a great short work by Choukri, "With jean Genet in Tangiers"--with fotos of the young Choukri and Genet and some other young men, sitting on the floor or in an outdoor cafe, drinking, smoking, talking, Poets of the Unknown who smuggled into Classicism their street hustling words, with al the skill of Poet Hustlers long ago used to many other forms of Solitude such a are found in the prisons and hell holes the "world within the world," that concealed and veiled world which veils itself yet in their works by "disguising themselves" as Classicists in street clothes, sitting on the floors of tiny rooms or at the little tables in the streets of places which "take care of one's thirsts."

Hunger's protagonist barely eats--but he does drink when he can prodigiously of the public waters in fountains, and suck on the water which remains inside even slivers of wood And Choukri's young man is also one driven by thirst, thirst in the heat and light and stone dust that eventually leads him via these veilings" into the places where he finds the beginning off the journey into the Unknown.

For how is an illiterate young man starving in a colonialist country to find anything but by such a means as thirst--for an oasis, yet not an isolated one--the --for in the cafes are gathered people who drink and read and write. One does see them, these examples, this man writing others letters in the "office" in a corner of the stony street. The "family of writers"—which Choukri wants to join, to be part of a world which is apart from yet still a part of the world which has led him to seeing writing as a way of "bridging worlds"—and languages—to see life as it were "from the other side" of the page—

That other side--"To shut the eyes is travel" as Emily Dickinson wrote--

Or Celine, noting that the all life is an imaginary voyage, made up, a novel, and that the dictionary tells one so, finishes also by saying--anyone can do this--close the eyes and there you have "life seen from the other side."

On the other is the Unknown--that writing which IS the findings of the necessity of the motherfucker of Invention--

and not those of what remains on this side of the page--that of the Conventions created by literature to arrive at a position at once of authority and responsibility,a place in the "lineage" of masculine > writings,

> the "patrilinearity of patriarchy as expressed in this work, "the Invention turned Convention " of Solitude--findings its way "home."
>
> (Pascal "Wagered" with Eternal Life, God--but the Pascal was a brilliant mathematician and theorems of his are in use yet today), for
>
> Reply
>
> Forward

↑ Index

277. Murat Nemet-Nejat
The Death of Ilhan Berk (1918-2008)
Fri 29 Aug 2008

The great Turkish poet Ilhan Berk died the day before yesterday. His poetry in English translation can be found in Selected Poems by Ilhan Berk, edited by Onder Otçu (Talisman Books, Jersey City, 2004) and in Eda: An Anthology of Contemporary Turkish Poetry, edited by Murat Nemet-Nejat (Talisman Books, Jersey City, 2004).

Here is a passage from my introduction to the Eda anthology discussing Ilhan Berk's poetry and its relation to other Turkish poets. The passage ends with his poem "Garden":

"Though associated with The Second New, Berk's poetry has nothing to do with depth, everything to do with motion. Born before Süreya and Ayhan and still alive –that is to say, writing more than sixty years- his work assimilates the poetic movements from Hikmet and Veli on. The great pleasure of Berk's poetry is to follow his agile mind weaving in and out of historical time periods, following the contours of crooked streets in Galata, naming names, or stopping at a now defunct whore house listening to the voices of women there. In "Garlic," ostensibly a prose piece, time as a layered entity with past and present disappears and becomes a unified place of the spirit, of mind play.

In Berk, Süreya's sense of unexpected connections and Ayhan's awareness that Istanbul is a mongrel accumulation floating on a sea of history are unified into a flat tapestry of pure motion, an irreligious but still spiritual space where splits associated with time are abandoned. Berk's poetry reveals no secrets but lights everything it touches with its inflections.

From the 1950's on, everything Berk writes is associated with his "long poetic line." To understand what that line is, one can go to a Hashim poem, the first poet in the anthology: "In a grieving perfection's insomnia..."Why is perfection associated with insomnia? Insomnia is the most intense state of wakefulness (consciousness) because it is nearest sleep. This is a poetics of limits, a motion of the mind towards zero, the unreachable, the forbidden.

Berk's long poetic line approaches the limit of prose, growing in intensity doing so. A lot of Berk's best poems look like prose; they are continuous strips of poetic line moving towards and away from a limit. Here lies the essential paradox of Berk and Turkish poetry. He seems to be the most pagan, least religious of poets, as Turkish poetry rarely is about religion. But an irreducible spiritual essence runs through both of them, as it does in Veli or Hashim or Hikmet or Süreya or Iskender or Güntan.... It is buried in the agglutinative cadences of Turkish, a language of affections inflected by proximity to a movable, elusive verb –a dance towards and away from limits. The sensual, metaphysical and historical are unified in this movement –the eda- a continuum of earth, water and human habitation:

```
        Wall
        Door
      Window
+_______________
      HOME
```

"I am in the middle of a garden that looks like 444."
Cansever

GARDEN

The house, 'vertical creature'.
You enter the house through the garden.
But the garden does not know the house.
Nor perhaps the other way around...

How beautiful!
What's more, the world of objects is like this.
They all gather to enjoy the unknown.
The garden's choice has been freedom, from the very beginning.

It has the capacity of eclipsing the house,
however conspicuous the house might make itself to show off.

- I am in the garden, says the garden.

It has its own language, history, geography.

We have also come to realize that it has some peculiar thoughts of its own.
(Actually, it is through these peculiar thoughts that it takes shape.)

I SEE THE HOUSE AFTER I LEAVE THE GARDEN BEHIND.

To compare the garden and the house: the garden is wide open in the face of the close-mouthed, conservative quality the house characterizes (permeated with that despotism which wounded it long ago).

THE GARDEN DETESTS CALENDESTINE OPERATIONS.

Full of sound and voices.
Its face overflowing into the street.
Offering a female reading.

To compare them, it is sexual (what is not?)

THE HOUSE IS MORE AS IF TO DIE IN THAN TO LIVE IN.

Oh garden, the muddy singer of the street.

"Dirty Child."

Hello gardens, here I am! (1997, trans. by Onder Otçu)"

↑ Index

278. Ruth Lepson
Re: artifice of absorption
Fri 29 Aug 2008

---

recently went to ms emily d's house--the tour is expanded now & richard wilbur is on the recording talking about her garden.
a friend sd he thought her poems were meant to be heard in the mind.

On 8/28/08 5:06 PM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:

> one thing i've learned from simply browsing the lango-poets is how to relax
> getting words on paper
> allowing thoughts
> their flow

> getting out of the way
> one day i'll learn how to read Emily Dickenson/no doubt she deserves to be canonical, still
> the 20th century mind
> the 21st century mentality
> does not respond 2 well to thoughts squeezed into the tiniest quatrains

↑ Index

279. Peter Quartermain

FW: Rave review of THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS

Fri 29 Aug 2008

Chris Goode's review of The Reality Street Book of Sonnets, which you can buy from http://freespace.virgin.net/reality.street/ or by snail mail from Reality Street, 63 All Saints Street, Hastings, East Sussex TN34 3BN UK for fifteen pounds – add something for postage – Google the title and check the website.

[And yes, Goode is right – is really is an absolutely terrific book.]

This is from Chris Goode's Blog.

Look! It's The Reality Street Book of Sonnets. I thought I might die before it finally emerged from its epic pupation; but in its own good time in the end it arrived -- and once again I thought I might die: the range, the chutzpah, the sheer bloody excitingness of this anthology is heart-attack-inducing. I'm a sucker for anthologies, but this is something else entirely. Someone over at Dennis's blog reminded me today of the phrase "all killer, no filler", and that sums this book up perfectly: there is literally nothing here that doesn't abundantly reward the reader's attention and imagination. The compass of the anthology is the life of the sonnet from 1945 up to about this time yesterday (culminating with the gobsmackingly brilliant Justin Katko and Sophie Robinson), and its scope easily accommodates plenty of visual and soundtext work as well as exhilarating adventures with both the cumbersome baggage of the form and its startling elasticity and mutability. Watch me ride half a league into the valley of individiousness as I choose some favourite stuff: Tim Atkins's droll and weirdly poignant refashionings of Petrarch; a ravishing sequence of brush-stroke sonnets from David Miller, which effectively reframe for me everything of Miller's that I've ever read; Giles Goodland's sublimely funny and disconcerting compositions from found documentary sources; and Jen Bervin's reticently poised and lyrically reverberant writings-through of Shakespearean phantoms. One of the best things about those four examples is that nothing else here is not at least nine-elevenths as good as them. And it's a pleasure also to see more familiar sonnets (from Adrian Clarke, Tony Lopez, Ken Edwards, Peter Jaeger, Peter Manson...) in this context and this company, where everything folds itself outwards like a house party spilling onto the lawn outside.

Worth noting, I think, in passing -- though it's touched on briefly in the excellent introduction -- that one of the centres of gravity to this anthology is the Writers Forum workshop, instituted by Bob Cobbing and these days helmed by Clarke and Lawrence Upton. At least a dozen of these here poets, probably many more, have or have had strong links to that workshop, which meets fortnightly through most of the year, these days at the Betsey Trotwood pub in Farringdon. A book like this brings home the importance of that meeting-place, and of its longevity not least. It was sitting in that circle that I first heard Jeff Hilson, the editor of this astonishing volume and himself one of the most brilliant poets I know, read from his Bird Bird -- just about my favourite thing to have ever happened. I really want to start going to the workshop again, but I'm sick of making the resolution, only to have it swamped by my own disastrousness.

Anyway, I don't think I can recommend this anthology any more highly than I already have; if you think I can, then please take it as read that I do. I definitely can't think of a better or more inspiring introduction to what remains to be done in your life, starting now.

=========
Peter Quartermain
846 Keefer Street
Vancouver
BC Canada V6A 1Y7
[redacted] (voice and fax)
[redacted]
=========

↑ Index

280. Adam Tobin
Upcoming Events at Unnameable Books (Brooklyn)
Fri 29 Aug 2008

Ladies and Gentlemen,
We are proud to present, with much ado, these following happenings, mostly of poets, but other things too:
***

Thursday Sept. 4: Jesse Seldess, Frances Richard & Kyle Schlesinger: 7:00 pm

Wednesday Sept. 17: Danica Colic, Suzanne Gardinier, & Timothy Liu: 7:00 pm
Sunday Sept. 21: WELCOME TO BOOG CITY festival (day 4) featuring poetry, music, a panel discussion on RACE AND POETRY: & much much more

all afternoon and evening
Sunday Sept 28: Arpine Grenier & Kostas Anagnopoulos: 5:00 pm
Friday Oct. 24: Johannes Goransson, Jennifer Hayashida & Fredrik Nyberg: translations from the Swedish @ 8:00 pm
***
All events occur in the basement of Unnameable Books, 456 Bergen St., Brooklyn, down one flight of stairs. Very near the 2,3 subway to Bergen St., or a short walk from the Atlantic Ave./Pacific St. subway hub. (718) [redacted].
We are pleased to elaborate further:
***
THURSDAY SEPT 4 @ 7 PM
Kenning Editions and Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs Present:
Jesse Seldess
Frances Richard
&
Kyle Schlesinger
Jesse Seldess' book, Who Opens, was published by Kenning Editions. Chapbooks of his poems have been published by Answer Tag Press, Bronze Skull Press and the Chicago Poetry Project. He lives in Berlin where he organizes The Floating Series of exhibitions and events with Leonie Weber as well as edits Antennae, a journal of experimental writing, music, and performance.

Frances Richard's forthcoming chapbooks included Anarch. from Woodland Editions, as well as S h a v e d C o d e from Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs and her book of poems, See Through, was published by Four Way Books in 2003. She writes frequently about contemporary art, teaches at Barnard College and the Rhode Island School of Design, and lives in Brooklyn.

Kyle Schlesinger is the author of Hello Helicopter (Blaze Vox) and most recently, The Pink (Kenning Editions). He is the editor of Cuneiform Press and is the Monday Night Coordinator at St. Marks Poetry Project.
***
***
WEDNESDAY SEPT 17 @ 7 PM
The Uncalled-For-Reading Series:
(mostly poets, mostly queer, some Wednesdays)
Danica Colic
Suzanne Gardinier

&
Timothy Liu
Danica Colic lives in Brooklyn and teaches writing at Hunter College, where she also received her MFA. Her poems have appeared in Terrain, Realpoetik, Arts & Letters, and Pebble Lake Review.

Suzanne Gardinier is the author of The New World, A World That Will Hold All the People, and Today: 101 Ghazals. Next year Sheep Meadow will publish another of her long poems, called Dialogue with the Archipelago. She teaches at Sarah Lawrence College and lives in Manhattan.

Timothy Liu has two new books forthcoming, Bending the Mind around the Dream's Blown Fuse (Talisman House) and Polytheogamy (Saturnalia Books). He lives in Manhattan.
***
***
SUNDAY SEPT 28 @ 5 PM
Arpine Konyalian Grenier
&
Kostas Anagnopoulos
Arpine Konyalian Grenier's work has been described as a mosaic of narrative that takes us out of our provincial concentration on American life to encompass broader social and geopolitical issues with a decidedly urban and postmodern sensibility. Her poetry and translations have appeared in numerous journals including several anthologies. She has authored three volumes of poetry, loves Mahler, Scriabin, pomegranates, eggplant and teal. The current issue of Jacket Magazine carries a review of her most recent publication: Part, Part Euphrates.
Kostas Anagnopoulos was born and raised in Chicago. He is the editor and co-founder of Insurance Magazine and Insurance Editions. His chapbooks include Daydream, Irritant and soon to be published Various Sex Acts. He lives in Jackson Heights, Queens.
***
***
SUNDAY SEPT 21 @ 1 PM until the end of the world:
This is DAY 4 of the second annual
WELCOME TO BOOG CITY!
poetry and music festival (for the full festival schedule, see http://wilderside.wordpress.com/2008/08/09/2nd-annual-welcome-to-boog-city-festival-918-92108/
)

This is the alleged timeline for today:
1:00 p.m.-Julia Cohen
1:15 p.m.-Tisa Bryant
1:30 p.m.-Ana Bo¾ièeviæ
1:45 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
2:05 p.m.-Corrine Fitzpatrick
2:20 p.m.-Nick Piombino
2:35 p.m.-Stacy Szymaszek
2:50 p.m.-3:00-break
3:00 p.m.- Race and Poetry: Integrating the Experimental Amy King (curator and moderator)
Tisa Bryant
Jennifer Firestone
Timothy Liu
Mendi Obadike
Meghan Punschke
Christopher Stackhouse
Mathias Svalina
4:30 p.m.-4:40-break
4:40 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
5:00 p.m.-Lee Ann Brown
5:15 p.m.-John Coletti
5:30 p.m.-Rachel Levitsky
5:45 p.m.-Eileen Myles
6:00 p.m.-Yoko Kikuchi (music)
6:20 p.m.-Edward Foster
in conversation with Simon Pettet
6:50 p.m.-Simon Pettet
7:10 p.m.-Edward Foster
More later,
Adam
***
Unnameable Books
456 Bergen St.
Brooklyn, NY 11217
[redacted]
[redacted]
www.unnameablebooks.net
***

↑ Index

281. Jorgensen, Alexander
Visual Poetry (Vispo) Assistance
Fri 29 Aug 2008

I am currently collecting information on visual poetry. I would be very interested in links, names, articles, academic programs, repositories, and titles. Please either send back channel or share resources with the list. Your time and own expertise will be sincerely appreciated.

Notice: September's second issue of Black Robert Journal will an important section on visual poetry.

http://www.black-robert-journal.com

↑ Index

282. Don Share
Charles Olson audio
Sat 30 Aug 2008

I'm not sure how many folks on the list have heard audio of the infamous Charles Olson reading in which he asks Harvard scholar, Harry Levin, to leave the room, but... see my post about the reading, and listen to it here:

http://donshare.blogspot.com/2008/08/poets-voice-charles-olson.html

Enjoy, and be grateful to the folks at the Charles Olson estate, as well as to my former colleagues at Harvard, for making this possible!

Don Share
POETRY
444 N. Michigan Ave., Suite 1850
Chicago, IL 60611

http://www.poetrymagazine.org

↑ Index

283. Charles Alexander
Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
Sat 30 Aug 2008

---

i haven't verified this, but a professor once told me that the last poet to make a living from the "publication and sales" of poetry (this does NOT include lecture fees, readings, poetry-related teaching gigs, etc.) was Alfred Tennyson. But then, there can't have been too many to do so, at any time in history, right?

charles

charles alexander
chax press
[redacted]
411 N 7th ave, suite 103
tucson arizona 85705
[redacted]

On Aug 29, 2008, at 12:44 PM, steve russell wrote:

> so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.
>
> of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken. Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager concerning how he made his living.
>
> welcome.html

↑ Index

284. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???

Sat 30 Aug 2008

---

possibly enslin fits the bill

On Fri, 29 Aug 2008 12:44:08 -0700 steve russell <[redacted]>
writes:
> so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of > actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of > poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a > teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent > contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his > moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't > consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.
>

> of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's > ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever > having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done
> translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken.
> Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager > concerning how he made his living.
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

285. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??

Sat 30 Aug 2008

Steve,

There is nothing cute about Word To Mouth. It has a significant place in Auster's total work, as I tried to show in my last post

I think Merwin comes from a prominent family and is independently wealthy. I agree with your distinction between poets who make a living out of their poetry and those who do it from teaching.

I am not sure the distinction between minor and major is relevant here. Who is to know? There are a many poets I personally know who do not teach, at least not in a college or university: Joel Lewis, Basil King, Martha King, Kimberly Lyons, Ron Silliman, David Chirot, Gary Sullivan, Nada Gordon, Elinor Naueen, Maggie Dubris, Bob Hershon, Simon Pettet, Ed Friedman, Tony Towle, Anne Tadros, Stacy Szymaszek, Anselm Berrigan. The list goes on and on. On the other hand, it is informative to inquire if these poets' works are different from the poets who teach at a university, specifically in a Masters of Fine Department. For instance, Bruce Andrews teaches I think philosophy, which is not the same thing.

Ciao,

Murat

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Aug 29, 2008 at 3:44 PM, steve russell <[redacted]>wrote:

> so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.
>
> of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken. Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager concerning how he made his living.

↑ Index

286. Mary Kasimor

Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???

Sat 30 Aug 2008

I do have to laugh--I am a poet, but I teach at a technical (vocational/trade school) college. I do teach writing and literature, and my students are a very interesting group. Several days ago, one of my students mentioned that he had attended MCAD (Minneapolis College of Art and Design), but found all the students too "yuppied," and he realized that he also needed to make a living. So, here he is, back at a small public technical college, learning how to be a autobody specialist!

I won't even get into my personal perspectives because I don't think that I have always been fair to my colleagues and I certainly have not been open about my poetry.

Best,
Mary

--- On Fri, 8/29/08, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:

From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, August 29, 2008, 2:44 PM

so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.

of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken. Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager concerning how he made his living.

↑ Index

287. tyrone williams
Re: Memo to Barack Obama
Sat 30 Aug 2008

I agree completely, cris.

tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: cris cheek <[redacted]>
>Sent: Aug 29, 2008 2:58 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Memo to Barack Obama
>
>and maybe Biden is the monster from the deep that has truly sunk >Obama into the mundane. It's really hard for me to watch yet another >generation of youthful political energy and optimism sacrificed by >this extraordinarily inept decision. How on earth can the choice of >Biden be sustained under the banner of change? Someone better >enlighten me.
>
>
>On Aug 28, 2008, at 8:44 PM, ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>
>> Nathaniel Mackey for inaugural poet?
>>
>>
<<

>>
>> --Jerry W. Ward, Jr.
>>
>> Sailing the blogosphere at: http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/
>>
>> Aldon L. Nielsen
>> Kelly Professor of American Literature
>> The Pennsylvania State University
>> 116 Burrowes
>> University Park, PA 16802-6200
>>
>> [redacted]
>>
>>
>>
>> welcome.html
>

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

288. Adam Tobin

Upcoming Events at Unnameable Books: corrected and summarized

Sat 30 Aug 2008

Somehow the linebreaks disappeared from my earlier post, rendering it illegible. Here are the correct times and dates:

Thursday Sept 4 @ 7pm: Jesse Seldess, Frances Richard & Kyle Schlesinger.

Wednesday Sept 17 @ 7pm: Danica Colic, Suzanne Gardinier & Timothy Liu.

Sunday Sept. 21 from 1pm onward: WELCOME TO BOOG CITY! (day 4).

Sunday Sept. 28 @ 5pm: Arpine Grenier & Kostas Anagnopoulos.

Friday Oct. 24 @ 8pm: Johannes Goransson, Jennifer Hayashida & Fredrik Nyberg.

All events occur in the basement of Unnameable Books, 456 Bergen St., Brooklyn, down one flight of stairs. Very near the 2,3 subway to Bergen St., or a short walk from the Atlantic Ave./Pacific St. subway hub. [redacted].

Please see my previous post for detailed blurbs. And please do accept my apologies for your inbox clutter. Also, please note: The Boog City Festival timeline is, in fact, the timeline for the Boog City Festival: Any allegations otherwise are misinformed.

↑ Index

289. Aryanil Mukherjee
Re: The Death of Ilhan Berk (1918-2008)
Sat 30 Aug 2008

!!!Very sad news!!!

EDA gave me a chance to read Ilhan Berk.
Doubtlessly, a great poet by any yardstick shaped by any geography...

True, we live in gardens that really don't know the house. An ancient house, that is.....

Aryanil

----- Original Message -----
From: "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, August 29, 2008 5:08 PM
Subject: The Death of Ilhan Berk (1918-2008)

The great Turkish poet Ilhan Berk died the day before yesterday. His poetry in English translation can be found in Selected Poems by Ilhan Berk, edited by Onder Otçu (Talisman Books, Jersey City, 2004) and in Eda: An Anthology of Contemporary Turkish Poetry, edited by Murat Nemet-Nejat (Talisman Books, Jersey City, 2004).

Here is a passage from my introduction to the Eda anthology discussing Ilhan Berk's poetry and its relation to other Turkish poets. The passage ends with his poem "Garden":

"Though associated with The Second New, Berk's poetry has nothing to do with depth, everything to do with motion. Born before Süreya and Ayhan and still alive –that is to say, writing more than sixty years- his work assimilates the poetic movements from Hikmet and Veli on. The great pleasure of Berk's poetry is to follow his agile mind weaving in and out of historical time periods, following the contours of crooked streets in Galata, naming names, or stopping at a now defunct whore house listening to the voices of women there. In "Garlic," ostensibly a prose piece, time as a layered entity with past and present disappears and becomes a unified place of the spirit, of mind play.

In Berk, Süreya's sense of unexpected connections and Ayhan's awareness that Istanbul is a mongrel accumulation floating on a sea of history are unified into a flat tapestry of pure motion, an irreligious but still spiritual space where splits associated with time are abandoned. Berk's poetry reveals no secrets but lights everything it touches with its inflections.

From the 1950's on, everything Berk writes is associated with his "long poetic line." To understand what that line is, one can go to a Hashim poem, the first poet in the anthology: "In a grieving perfection's insomnia..."Why is perfection associated with insomnia? Insomnia is the most intense state of wakefulness (consciousness) because it is nearest sleep. This is a poetics of limits, a motion of the mind towards zero, the unreachable, the forbidden.

Berk's long poetic line approaches the limit of prose, growing in intensity doing so. A lot of Berk's best poems look like prose; they are continuous strips of poetic line moving towards and away from a limit. Here lies the essential paradox of Berk and Turkish poetry. He seems to be the most pagan, least religious of poets, as Turkish poetry rarely is about religion. But an irreducible spiritual essence runs through both of them, as it does in Veli or Hashim or Hikmet or Süreya or Iskender or Güntan.... It is buried in the agglutinative cadences of Turkish, a language of affections inflected by proximity to a movable, elusive verb –a dance towards and away from limits. The sensual, metaphysical and historical are unified in this movement –the eda- a continuum of earth, water and human habitation:

Wall
Door Window
+_____
HOME

"I am in the middle of a garden that looks like 444."
Cansever

GARDEN

The house, 'vertical creature'.
You enter the house through the garden.
But the garden does not know the house.
Nor perhaps the other way around...

How beautiful!
What's more, the world of objects is like this.
They all gather to enjoy the unknown.
The garden's choice has been freedom, from the very beginning.

It has the capacity of eclipsing the house,
however conspicuous the house might make itself to show off.

- I am in the garden, says the garden.

It has its own language, history, geography.

We have also come to realize that it has some peculiar thoughts of its own. (Actually, it is through these peculiar thoughts that it takes shape.)

I SEE THE HOUSE AFTER I LEAVE THE GARDEN BEHIND.

To compare the garden and the house: the garden is wide open in the face of the close-mouthed, conservative quality the house characterizes (permeated with that despotism which wounded it long ago).

THE GARDEN DETESTS CALENDESTINE OPERATIONS.

Full of sound and voices.
Its face overflowing into the street.
Offering a female reading.

To compare them, it is sexual (what is not?)

THE HOUSE IS MORE AS IF TO DIE IN THAN TO LIVE IN.

Oh garden, the muddy singer of the street.

"Dirty Child."

Hello gardens, here I am! (1997, trans. by Onder Otçu)"

↑ Index

290. tyrone williams
Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
Sat 30 Aug 2008

I just returned from Copenhagen. When I asked poet Niels Hav what he "does for a living," he replied "write poetry." Assuming there was a language problem, I tried to clarify be asking him what he does to pay the bills. He told me the state pays him to write. Other poets (it was a dinner party) chimed in and acknowledged Hav: apparently some artists are provided living wages just to be artists. And though Niels' work probably falls under the "school of quietude" banner, it's still a fairly remarkable state of things..Of course, as they acknowledged, income tax is extremely high (by our standards) but as one poet said to me, "It's a trade off. We choose to [urchase security, choose to support arts and artists." He acknowledged that Denmark's relatively small size had to be taken in as a factor...

Tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: "steve d. dalachinsky" <[redacted]>
>Sent: Aug 30, 2008 12:30 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???

>
>possibly enslin fits the bill
>
>On Fri, 29 Aug 2008 12:44:08 -0700 steve russell <[redacted]>
>writes:
>> so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of >> actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of >> poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a >> teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent >> contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his >> moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't >> consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.
>>
>> of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's >> ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever >> having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done
>> translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken.
>> Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager >> concerning how he made his living.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

291. Barry Schwabsky
Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
Sat 30 Aug 2008

Today, poets who make a living from poetry (and not from teaching) can only do so through the combination of sales, readings, and fellowships. Ashbery wrote art criticism and then taught until he got his Macarthur; I think he has been a full-time professional poet in the above sense since then.

----- Original Message ----
From: Charles Alexander <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Sent: Saturday, 30 August, 2008 5:19:36 PM
Subject: Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???

i haven't verified this, but a professor once told me that the lastÂ poet to make a living from the "publication and sales" of poetryÂ (this does NOT include lecture fees, readings, poetry-relatedÂ teaching gigs, etc.) was Alfred Tennyson. But then, there can't haveÂ been too many to do so, at any time in history, right?

charles

charles alexander
chax press
[redacted]
411 N 7th ave, suite 103
tucson arizona 85705
[redacted]

On Aug 29, 2008, at 12:44 PM, steve russell wrote:

> so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties ofÂ actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think ofÂ poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of aÂ teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recentÂ contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had hisÂ moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don'tÂ consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.
>
> of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure ifÂ he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of himÂ ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's doneÂ translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken.Â Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wagerÂ concerning how he made his living.
>
> welcome.html

↑ Index

292. billy little left standing
Sat 30 Aug 2008

---

langston hughes don marquis dorothy parker

edna st. vincent millay ezra pound
ts eliot
robert duncan typed dissertations does that count tim lander busks the pennywhistle pauline johnson
michael ondaatje
amiri baraka
can these familiar few be described as poets making their living from poetry ashberry frost brodsky
what did cummings do there in the village or paul blackburn
dylan thomas did he have a straight gig at the bbc linton kwesi johnson heathcote williams

billy little has belonged? to a few unions

--
Nothing says Labor Day like 500hp of American muscle
Visit OnCars.com today.

↑ Index

293. Ruth Lepson
NOON 6
Sat 30 Aug 2008

Thanks to the eds of Noon‹just got my copy & yes how poetry is presented makes a big difference‹I stopped what I was doing to read the whole thing. (³I can¹t believe I read the whole thing!²) It is short, true.

Fine poems by list members, for ex Barry Schawbsky, Ravi Shankar, Halvard Johnson, Philip Messinger.

Ruth Lepson

↑ Index

294. Cassandra Laity

Special Issue of Modernism/Modernity on Decadence and Modernity

Sat 30 Aug 2008

Here is the TOC for M/M's special issue on Decadence and modernism/modernity. It will be mailed out in early October. Single copies can be ordered from JHUP journals.

Cassandra

Special Issue of Modernism/Modernity 15. 3 (September 2008): "Decadent Aestheticism and Modernism"

Editor's Preface: "Decadent Aesthetic Modernity: Beyond Baudelaire," Cassandra Laity

"The Dissipating Nature of Decadent Paganism from Pater to Yeats," Dennis Denisoff

"Nightwood's Freak Dandies: Decadence in the 1930s," Robin Blyn

"William Morris, Print Culture, and the Politics of Aestheticism," Elizabeth Miller

"Aubrey Beardsley and H.D.,'s 'Astrid': The ghost and Mrs. Pugh of Decadent Aestheticism and Modernity," Carolyn Kelley

"Aestheticism's Afterlife: Wallace Stevens as Interior Decorator and Disruptor," Elizabeth Oliver

"Out of the Archives" Section:
First English translation of Theophile Gautier's "Messres. Millais and Hunt" from his _Beaux-Arts en Europe_. Trans. for M/M by Marie-Helene Girard (Yale University). The chapter comprises Gautier's critique of Pre-Raphaelite paintings by John Millais and Hunt exhibited at the 1855 _Exposition Universelle_ in Paris, including _Ophelia_ and others.

Cassandra Laity
Associate Professor
Co-Editor Modernism/Modernity
Drew University
Madison, NJ 07940

↑ Index

295. Barry Schwabsky
Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
Sat 30 Aug 2008

I actually think it's a really bad idea. If writing poetry is your job, you should be doing it seven hours a day, five days a week--and I hate to think of anyone writing that much poetry. I think poets should be more likeÂ farmers: Aren't they paid NOT to grow certain crops? That's the idea that appeals to me: Pay poets NOT to write poetry.
Â
Incidentally, there is a very interesting book about these matters--the pros and cons of public subventionÂ of the arts vs their being left to the whims of the market, etc.--by a Dutch economist who is also a painter, Hans Abbing. It's called Why Are Artists Poor? The Exceptional Economy of the Arts (University of Amsterdam Press). I don't agree with all his conclusions--he comes down more strongly in favor of the market than I think is justified--but he really understands the issues from both an artist's and an economist's viewpoint, a very rare thing.

----- Original Message ----
From: tyrone williams <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, 30 August, 2008 7:06:06 PM
Subject: Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???

I just returned from Copenhagen. When I asked poet Niels Hav what he "does for a living," he replied "write poetry." Assuming there was a language problem, I tried to clarify be asking him what he does to pay the bills. He told me the state pays him to write. Other poets (it was a dinner party) chimed in and acknowledged Hav: apparently some artists are provided living wages just to be artists. And though Niels' work probably falls under the "school of quietude" banner, it's still a fairly remarkable state of things..Of course, as they acknowledged, income tax is extremely high (by our standards) but as one poet said to me, "It's a trade off. We choose to [urchase security, choose to support arts and artists." He acknowledged that Denmark's relatively small size had to be taken in as a factor...

Tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: "steve d. dalachinsky" <[redacted]>
>Sent: Aug 30, 2008 12:30 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
>

>possiblyÂ enslin fits the bill
>
>On Fri, 29 Aug 2008 12:44:08 -0700 steve russell <[redacted]>
>writes:
>> so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties ofÂ >> actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of >> poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a >> teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent >> contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his >> moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't >> consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.
>>
>> of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's >> ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever >> having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done
>> translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken.
>> Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager >> concerning how he made his living.
>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â
>>
>>
>

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

296. George Bowering

Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???

Sat 30 Aug 2008

On Aug 30, 2008, at 11:06 AM, tyrone williams wrote:

> I just returned from Copenhagen. When I asked poet Niels Hav what he "does for a living," he replied "write poetry." Assuming there was a language problem, I tried to clarify be asking him what he does to pay the bills. He told me the state pays him to write. Other poets (it was a dinner party) chimed in and acknowledged Hav: apparently some artists are provided living wages just to be artists. And though Niels' work probably falls under the "school of quietude" banner, it's still a fairly remarkable state of things..Of course, as they acknowledged, income tax is extremely high (by our standards) but as one poet said to me, "It's a trade > off. We choose to [urchase security, choose to support arts and artists." He acknowledged that Denmark's relatively small size had to be taken in as a factor...

>
> Tyrone

I have seen Hav in action. Boy, can he hustle!

George Harry Bowering,
Never got his share.

↑ Index

297. Don Share
Re: Visual Poetry (Vispo) Assistance
Sat 30 Aug 2008

The November issue of POETRY magazine will have a portfolio of visual poems edited and introduced by Geof Huth; it will be supplemented by a web feature.

On Fri, 29 Aug 2008 20:15:30 -0700, Jorgensen, Alexander
<[redacted]> wrote:

>I am currently collecting information on visual poetry. I would be very interested in links, names, articles, academic programs, repositories, and titles. Please either send back channel or share resources with the list.
Your time and own expertise will be sincerely appreciated.
>
>Notice: September's second issue of Black Robert Journal will an important section on visual poetry.
>
>http://www.black-robert-journal.com
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

298. David Chirot
in$omnia/poe$y/pro$e --"Bird"Parker & "Edward Said" poem & links for Mahmoud Darwish
Sat 30 Aug 2008

In Paul Collins' immensely entertaining and crazily informative "Banvard's Folly Thirteen Tales of People Who Didn't Change the World," a

Chapter entitled "He being dead Speaketh Not" (after the weirdly eerie and prophetic-sounding literalness of the words on the subject's headstone) is devoted to Englishman Martin Tupper, at one point in the mid 19th century the best selling most famous poet ever yet to have written in the Enlish language---and this in his own lifetime, to boot. His works were translated into over thrity languages, including Latin and Ojibway, and set off on some outrageously warmly welcomed tours of the USA. Of course, Francois Villon, reading this would think of a good warning from a poem of his own: "Warmly welcomed, rebuffed by everyone."

Tupper, with currency adjustments allowed for, was in fact the first poet ever to earn a million dollars by poetry alone. Tennyson barely managed to edge him out for Poet Laureate. Stranger still, within his own lifetime he also became a poet who could no longer get published, not even republished, the loser of all his fortune and beautiful estate due to poor investements, and finished his days in poverty as the producer of an incredible volume of out-of-print and forgotten or ridiculed verse. As swiftly as a generation after his greatest triumphs, Tupper's name furnished a new term for the ridicule reserved for and heaped upon first-publication poets. "A Tupper," was a smear indicating the swiftness with which oblivion's waters would most assuredly be closing over the neophyte's laurel crowned locks. In his old age Tennyson was horrified to find the epithet bestowed on himself also, and, as Collins writes: "In fact, so many poets were tarred this way that a new insult,'Tupperian,' entered the language It can still be found in the the eternal rest of dead verbiage deep between the covers of the Oxford English Dictionary. Collins notes that in one of the only articles about Tupper written in the 20th Century, in a 1938 issue of the Times Literary Supplement, the Poet's incredible rise and just as dramatic fall is tentativiely explained by the poetry's massive popularity making it also too easily tired of within a short time from sheer omnipresent overeposure. Think the of Mega Monster Music Hit that sells unholy numbers of CDs, and before the year is out no one wil admit they ever liked it, let alone owned a copy of it. Trying to unload these once Biggest Sellers of All Time in used stores is the equivalent for the would-be seller of being seen by snickering others as a 'Tupper,' indeed.

How different this in Arab culture, Ismaelia Al-Sadiq wrote of last week in noting: " Yes, poetry is "popular" - ne essential - in the arab culture. When Syrian poet Nizar Qabbani died, his funeral in Damascus was attended by crowds numbering at least in the 100s of thousands"

A similar world wide outpouring--including non-Arabs also--attended in the last two weeks the death and funeral of Mahmoud Darwish.

A friend during the days of mourning for the poet, forwarded Mahmoud Darwish's "Edward Said," a beautiful "farewell to the poetry of pain" which discusses within it at one point this poetry/prose question which is > endlessly returning here, and which perhaps is a way of always saying that > Poetry is superior to prose, and that a sign of that superiority is that its > Truth value is so high that nothing made by such meager things as better > selling prose can ever equal it. The paradox being, that knowing how > "priceless " Poetry is compared to prose, poets continually want to have > their cake and eat it too--that is, their work being so much more valuable, > and one earning so much less by it, does this not in fact increase its > pricelessness, and as well, by making the poet suffer in such regard, make > her all the more Noble?

>
> And yet it is said that the one who gaineth the world loses their soul.
>
> In fact, it is this disparity between the value of their works and what > they are paid for them that increases the poet's sense of both Superiority > and that perquisite of Superiority, being part of a "marginalized group," > which is at the same time an elite which can feel that it is suffering > because it is Superior, and not given the due that its Station deserves.
>

There is nothing quite like it after all, being the Unacknowledged Legislators of the Human World! To triumph and suffer at the same time produces a state of exquisite ecstasy, and is one not to be trifled with. The "unacknowledgement" assures a fate Non-Tupperian, while the "Legislators" holds out the hope of positions within society from which one may, indeed, legislate.., in quite a wide variety of ways.

"The Green Monster of Jealousy reared its head . . . " for a moment with regards to the better selling prose--but since when have prose writers been found to be the "True" though "Unacknoweldged Legislators" of Humanity. Though they complain of it, and turn it into an insult to their True greatnness, Poets after all have a Poetry Month--when has anyone heard of such thing as even a National Prose Hour?

"Necessity is the motherfucker of invention," and so out of its "marginalized status" in the Western world which a poet may indeed often identity with, there is created its gigantic double, that Colossus known as the Unacknowledged Legislator and who holds forth on fine days--handing down sentences on the "enemies" and granting Laurel Wreaths to those with whom the Legislators are in sympathy.

And so one imagines this thoroughly Poetic Being to be not unlike Bunuell's Saint Simon of the Desert--hobnobbing with God and eating the occaisional miraculously appearing air-borne bug. Carried away by his own rhetoric at times, the good Saint wil commence Blessing Everything and indeed Speaking as though He Were Indeed God--but Simon wil catch himself just in time, and laugh at himself and wonder if after al he is just not completely nuts, and the One Who has Led Him to This Postion--a Mad Being Far Madder than himself, who is after all, just a poor mortal. .

In a sense, though no one may admit it, to be a Western Poet is quite an enviable position! In a way it does indeed have the "best of both worlds"--the "unackowledgement" and lack of pay which meansone is in deed a "suffering artist," and at the same time that Legislative sense in using the language which unlocks the possibilities of other means of attaining power and influence in some manner.

> Reading Mahmoud Darwish's poetry, about his life, > watching the videos--there emerges a poet and poetry that, the more loved > and famous he and it become, disappear into the landscape. A simplicity and > humility are present, as so many many have remarked.
> This disappearance that "grows deepper" as it nears literally "the > end of his life," echoes that of its beginning--the long vanished village > where the poet was born. The disappearance creates a mirage--one moment the > vision of water--and then--the water appears to be gone. Hidden in plain > site/sight/cite, these waters wrap themselves in stones and dust, bits of > soil and so are overlooked and endure. In the veins and markings of stones > may often be found the direct notations of waters--rains--flash floodings, > sudden shocks of enforced diversion of irrigations. A water "exiled" as it > flows, and so carrying with it everywhere this at home/not at home wirting > of the ground itself.
>
> --Al-Sadiq wrote of the water that even when stolen away, is found as the > water of poetry in rocks which, "appearing to be ruins," camouflage the > present which is the past of the future being made, hidden in plain > site/sight/cite.
>
> The question of why make poetry when there is so little pay for the work,
> the time, the devotion-- > may it be perhaps that one is "consumed" by this gift--?
> and makes a work as a Thanks--?
>
> Paul Celan wrote "poetry no longer imposes itself, it exposes itself."
> A Hope that in the ruins of imposed poetries, there is "the most beautiful > world, a heap > of rubble tossed down at random/in confusion," as Heraclitus found > this exposed poetry to > be.

Afraid of being "exposed," imposed poetries return in new guises, new forms, new rules, regulations, canons, training methods, writing experiments, reading lists, no longer exposures of rubble in which as Petra Backonja writes, in "The Lives They Wish," poems lead lives of their own. (And so they depart, camouflage, "take on other forms,") New media and institutions arise for the return of the imposing of poems, complete with improved security surveillance, walls, check points, curfews, separations, all of them set up to hide the fact of they're resembling the previous sets of imposed poetries. Thus it is that "today's Gated Community is constructed with a hint of that nostalgia which always makes one feel at home even when enjoying the first fruitsof that future which is today."

For how long can the entropy of an imposed poetry "last?" Is it truly to be a "steady state" of poetry? "The basis of art is change in the universe, " Basho wrote."One cannot hide from that which never sets," says Heraclitus--

In the cracks, fissures, bullet holes, bombed out villages, in the degeneration of walls among the effects of weathering, of the eating away by wind spewed dusts, by minuscule plants taking roots in a pockmarked hole, by the rains and sun and winds and by a poetry of lives it wishes-coming and going as it pleases---poetry is always being exposed, even as more restraints are imposed on thoughts, words, actions, on seeing and hearing-- the leakage of mysterious waters hidden in rocks of poems exposing those confluences of natural forms and chemicals which are "doubly" the origin of sigss, and the signs copied from them--or the natural signs seen due to their being written signs-- in the devastated landscapes such natural mixtures of dirt with "unnatural chemicals" begin to expose those poetries on the other sides of ever "smarter" deaths--, and so it is that behind, beneath, below, bent, bowed down, blasted, burned, buried, or--leading lives elsewhere, or "over again," or--enduring as presences of absence in whose absences are drolly secreted their presences-- among these things, a writing endures that invents its own literacies among the "unreadable non writings" seen by the "literate" unware that in this "blank and ruined landscape" eventhe dead see scrawls--

In the poem here by Darwish, Said reminds the poet of a favorite of his, the Greek poet Yannis Ritsos, himself exiled for a long time on the rockiest and most barren of small islands--and that Ritsos wrote of making poems in words which make "the readers immortal."

The readers, not the poet--

"On wind he walks, and in wind
he knows himself. There is no ceiling for the wind,

no home for the wind. Wind is the compass
of the stranger's North.
He says: I am from there, I am from here,
but I am neither there nor here.
I have two names which meet and part..."
*

A true and apocryphal story--tells one that--a great admirer of the musician Charlie Parker went looking for "Bird" and no one knew where he now lived. Banned from playing even in the Club named for him, unable to "make a living," though considered a "Genius," and becoming "world famous," what could have become of the "poor, marginalized Artist?" No one it seemed knew what had happened to him, already know for his habit of vaaishing . . .

The person troubled by these questions finally came across Bird as though by accident--there he was! A man dressed in clothes found in the trash, eating out of the rubbish the food shared with flies--listening to the music he heard continually and without a horn to play it on--

"What about identity? I asked.*
He said: It's self-defence...
Identity is the child of birth, but
at the end, it's self-invention, and not an inheritance of the past. I am multiple...
Within me an ever new exterior. And I belong to the question of the victim. Were I not from there, I would have trained my heart to nurture there deers of metaphor..."
*

The seeker was horrified--how can you stand it?
How can you live like this? How can you survive on nothing?

The Happy Bird beamed and raising his arms gestured widely, embracing the trash, the shadowed alley shot through with here and there a fragment of glass or metal refocusing and re directing the diffused, amorphous light--the wild sounds of the city bouncing about in the "canyons" of the "Great City"--the rapid chord changes called "dischord"--a dissonance of dissidence--

"So carry your homeland wherever you go, and be*
a narcissist if need be/
The outside world is exile,
*exile is the world inside."

and said--"Nothing! What do you mean!!!??--when there is ALL THIS?"-

"My voice goes after/what my eyes can't reach"-- Walt Whitman

"And what are you between the two?
*****
*"Myself, I do not know
so that I shall not lose it. I am what I am.
I am my other, a duality
gaining resonance in between speech and gesture.
Were I to write poetry I would have said:
I am two in one,
like the wings of a swallow ,
content with bringing good omen
*when spring is late. "

in the poem of Darwish are so many "lines" in which what is not present is that "bottom line" which it is said "demands to be seen," that Americans "think of first."
Edward Said, speaking with Darwish:

"The poem,*
a consolation, an attribute
of the wind, southern or northern.
Do not describe what the camera can see
of your wounds. And scream that you may hear yourself,
and scream that you may know you're still alive,
and alive, and that life on this earth is possible. Invent a hope for speech, invent a direction, a mirage to extend hope.
And sing, for the aesthetic is freedom/"

Some links which each lead to more--

Mahmoud Darwish Web Site
http://www.mahmouddarwish.com/english/index.htm
 Poet: Mahmoud Darwish - All poems of *Mahmoud
Darwish*<http://www.poemhunter.com/mahmoud-darwish/>*
*Poet: Mahmoud Darwish - All poems of Mahmoud Darwish .. poetry **
... Search in the poems of Mahmoud Darwish. Click the title of the* *poem you'd like read. *...
*www.poemhunter.com/mahmoud-darwish -*

*Democracy Now! | Mahmoud Darwish, Poet Laureate of the Palestinians **
...<http://www.democracynow.org/2008/8/11/mahmoud_darwish_poet_laureate_of_*
the>

... in the West Bank and Gaza to mark the death of Mahmoud Darwish, the Poet Laureate of the Palestinians. Darwish was ... of Mahmoud Darwish's poems, including ... www.democracynow.org/2008/8/11/*mahmoud*_*darwish*_poet_laureate_of_the-

DARWISH, Mahmoud -- Writer
http://electronicintifada.net/bytopic/people/686.shtml

Notre Musique (Jean-Luc Godard, 2004) Mahmoud Darwish<http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=V_ypKKBKflw&feature=email> Scenes from Notre musique (Our Music)directed by Jean-Luc Godard.The film reflects on violence, morality, and the representation of violence in film, and touches especially on past colonialism and the current Israeli-Palestinian conflict.
The film's tripartite structure is apparently inspired by the Divine Comedy of Dante; the film's three segments are titled "Realm 1: Hell", "Realm 2: Purgatory", and "Realm 3: Heaven".

Inside Story - Mahmoud Darwish remembered - 14 Aug 08 - Part 1<http://uk.youtube.com/watch?v=dLXkhBrIVQM&feature=email>
The life of the Arab world's most celebrated poet is over. We ask: How will all those touched by the work of Mahmoud Darwish remember him? In this day and age, Can the pen mobilize the conscious of the masses to pick up the sword? Mahmoud Darwish was, after all, a poet not a politician.

Remembering Darwish:

- Mahmoud Darwish: Palestine's prophet of humanism<http://electronicintifada.net/v2/article9758.shtml>, Saifedean Ammous (12 August 2008)
- Remembering Mahmoud Darwish<http://electronicintifada.net/v2/article9754.shtml>, The Electronic Intifada (11 August 2008)

Related Links

- http://www.mahmouddarwish.com/

*
HERE IS THE POEM IN ITS ENTIRETY:
*
---
*

>  * Edward Said*
>
> In a poem published in Arabic last month, Mahmoud Darwish bids Edward Said farewell
>
> New York/ November/ Fifth Avenue
> The sun a plate of shredded metal
> I asked myself, estranged in the shadow:
> Is it Babel or Sodom?
> ***
> There, on the doorstep of an electric abyss, > high as the sky, I met Edward,
> thirty years ago,
> time was less wild then...
> We both said:
> If the past is only an experience,
> make of the future a meaning and a vision.
> Let us go,
> Let us go into tomorrow trusting > the candor of imagination and the miracle of grass/
> I don't recall going together to the cinema > in the evening. Still I heard Ancient > Indians calling: Trust > neither horse, nor modernity
> ***
> No. Victims do not ask their executioner:
> Am I you? Had my sword been > bigger than my rose, would you > have asked > if I would have acted like you?
> ***
> A question like that entices the curiosity
> of a novelist,
> sitting in a glass office, overlooking > lilies in the garden, where > the hand
> of a hypothesis is as clear as > the conscience
> of a novelist set to settle accounts
> with > human instinct... There is no tomorrow > in yesterday, so let us advance/
> ***
> Advancing could be a bridge > leading back > to Barbarism.../
> ***
> New York. Edward wakes up to a lazy dawn. He plays Mozart.

Runs round the university's tennis
court.
Thinks of the journey of ideas across borders,
and over barriers. He reads the New York Times.
Writes out his furious comments. Curses an Orientalist guiding the General to the weak point inside the heart of an Oriental woman. He showers. Chooses his elegant suit. Drinks his white coffee. Shouts at the dawn:
Do not loiter.
***
On wind he walks, and in wind
he knows himself. There is no ceiling for the wind, no home for the wind. Wind is the compass
of the stranger's North.
He says: I am from there, I am from here,
but I am neither there nor here.
I have two names which meet and part...
I have two languages, but I have long forgotten which is the language of my dreams.
I have an English language, for writing,
with yielding phrases,
and a language in which Heaven and Jerusalem converse, with a silver cadence, but it does not yield to my imagination.
***
What about identity? I asked.
He said: It's self-defence...
Identity is the child of birth, but
at the end, it's self-invention, and not an inheritance of the past. I am multiple...
Within me an ever new exterior. And
I belong to the question of the victim. Were I not from there, I would have trained my heart
to nurture there deers of metaphor...
So carry your homeland wherever you go, and be
a narcissist if need be/
The outside world is exile,
exile is the world inside.
And what are you between the two?
***
Myself, I do not know
so that I shall not lose it. I am what I am.
I am my other, a duality
gaining resonance in between speech and gesture.

Were I to write poetry I would have said:
I am two in one,
like the wings of a swallow ,
content with bringing good omen
when spring is late.
***
He loves a country and he leaves.
[Is the impossible far off?]
He loves leaving to things unknown.
By traveling freely across cultures those in search of the human essence may find a space for all to sit...
Here a margin advances. Or a centre retreats. Where East is not strictly east, and West is not strictly west,
where identity is open onto plurality,
not a fort or a trench/
***
Metonymy was sleeping on the river's bank;
had it not been for the pollution
it could have embraced the other bank.
***
- Have you written any novels?
ï I tried... I tried to retrieve my image from mirrors of distant women.
But they scampered off into their guarded night.
Saying: Our world is independent of any text.
A man cannot write a woman who is both enigma and dream.
A woman cannot write a man who is both symbol and star.
There are no two loves alike. No two nights alike. So let us enumerate men's qualities and laugh.
- And what did you do?
ï I laughed at my nonsense and threw the novel into the wastepaper basket/
***
The intellectual harnesses what the novelist can tell and the philosopher interprets the bard's roses/
***
He loves a country and he leaves:
I am what I am and shall be.
I shall choose my place by myself, and choose my exile. My exile, the backdrop to an epic scene. I defend the poet's need for memories and tomorrow,
I defend country and exile
in tree-clad birds,

and a moon, generous enough to allow the writing of a love poem;
I defend an idea shattered by the frailty of its partisans and defend a country hijacked by myths/
***
- Will you be able to return to anything?
ï My ahead pulls what's behind and hastens...
There is no time left in my watch for me to scribble lines on the sand. I can, however, visit yesterday as strangers do when they listen on a sad evening to a Pastorale:
"A girl by the spring filling her jar
"With clouds' tears,
"Weeping and laughing as a bee
"Stings her heart...
"Is it love that makes the water ache
"Or some sickness in the mist..."
[until the end of the song].
***
- So, nostalgia can hit you?
ï Nostalgia for a higher, more distant tomorrow, far more distant. My dream leads my steps.
And my vision places my dream on my knees like a pet cat. It's the imaginary real,
the child of will: We can change the inevitability of the abyss.
***
- And nostalgia for yesterday?
ï A sentiment not fit for an intellectual, unless it is used to spell out the stranger's fervour for that which negates him.
My nostalgia is a struggle over a present which has tomorrow by the balls.
***
- Did you not sneak into yesterday when you went to that house, your house in Talbiya, in Jerusalem?
ï I prepared myself to sleep in my mother's bed, like a child who's scared of his father. I tried to recall my birth, and to watch the Milky Way from the roof of my old house. I tried to stroke the skin of absence and the smell of summer > in the garden's jasmine. But the hyena that is truth > drove me away from a thief-like > nostalgia.

> - Were you afraid? What frightened you?
> ï I could not meet loss face > to face. I stood by the door like a beggar.
> How could I ask permission from strangers sleeping > in my own bed… Ask them if I could visit myself > for five minutes? Should I bow in respect > to the residents of my childish dream? Would they ask:
> Who is that prying foreign visitor? And how > could I talk about war and peace
> among the victims and the victims' victims, > without additions, without an interjection?
> And would they tell me: There is no place for two dreams > in one bedroom?
> ***
> It is neither me nor him > who asks; it is a reader asking:
> What can poetry say in a time of catastrophe?
> ***
> Blood
> and blood,
> blood
> in your country,
> in my name and in yours, in > the almond flower, in the banana skin,
> in the baby's milk, in light and shadow,
> in the grain of wheat, in salt/
> ***
> Adept snipers, hitting their target > with maximum proficiency.
> Blood
> and blood
> and blood.
> This land is smaller than the blood of its children > standing on the threshold of doomsday like > sacrificial offerings. Is this land truly > blessed, or is it baptised > in blood
> and blood
> and blood
> which neither prayer, nor sand can dry.
> There is not enough justice in the Sacred Book > to make martyrs rejoice in their freedom > to walk on cloud. Blood in daylight, > blood in darkness. Blood in speech.
> ***

He says: The poem could host loss, a thread of light shining at the heart of a guitar; or a Christ on a horse pierced through with beautiful metaphors. For the aesthetic is but the presence of the real in form/
In a world without a sky, the earth becomes an abyss. The poem,
a consolation, an attribute
of the wind, southern or northern.
Do not describe what the camera can see
of your wounds. And scream that you may hear yourself,
and scream that you may know you're still alive,
and alive, and that life on this earth is possible. Invent a hope for speech,
invent a direction, a mirage to extend hope.
And sing, for the aesthetic is freedom/
***
I say: The life which cannot be defined except by death is not a life.
***
He says: We shall live.
So let us be masters of words which make their readers immortal -- as your friend Ritsos said.
***
He also said: If I die before you,
my will is the impossible.
I asked: Is the impossible far off?
He said: A generation away.
I asked: And if I die before you?
He said: I shall pay my condolences to Mount Galilee, and write, "The aesthetic is to reach poise." And now, don't forget:
If I die before you, my will is the impossible.
***
When I last visited him in New Sodom, in the year Two Thousand and Two, he was battling off
the war of Sodom on the people of Babel... and cancer. He was like the last epic hero defending the right of Troy to share the narrative.
***
An eagle soaring higher and higher bidding farewell to his height, for dwelling on Olympus and over heights is tiresome.

> ***
> Farewell,
> farewell poetry of pain.
>
> by Mahmoud Darwish
> Translated by Mona Anis
>
> ---*
> *
> *
>
> *
> *
>
> *
> *
>
> ---
> Get thousands of games on your PC, your mobile phone, and the web with Windows(R). Game with Windows<http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/108588800/direct/01/>

↑ Index

299. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: The Death of Ilhan Berk (1918-2008)
Sat 30 Aug 2008

Aryanil,

Yes. The house, the garden, the street are in dialogue with each other.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 30, 2008 at 1:37 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee <[redacted]>wrote:

> !!!Very sad news!!!
>
> EDA gave me a chance to read Ilhan Berk.
> Doubtlessly, a great poet by any yardstick shaped by any geography...
>
> True, we live in gardens that really don't know the house.
> An ancient house, that is.....
>
> Aryanil

----- Original Message ----- From: "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, August 29, 2008 5:08 PM
Subject: The Death of Ilhan Berk (1918-2008)

*The great Turkish poet Ilhan Berk died the day before yesterday. His poetry in English translation can be found in Selected Poems by Ilhan Berk, edited by Onder Otçu (Talisman Books, Jersey City, 2004) and in Eda: An Anthology of Contemporary Turkish Poetry, edited by Murat Nemet-Nejat (Talisman Books, Jersey City, 2004).*

*Here is a passage from my introduction to the Eda anthology discussing Ilhan Berk's poetry and its relation to other Turkish poets. The passage ends with his poem "Garden":*

"Though associated with The Second New, Berk's poetry has nothing to do with depth, everything to do with motion. Born before Süreya and Ayhan and still alive –that is to say, writing more than sixty years- his work assimilates the poetic movements from Hikmet and Veli on. The great pleasure of Berk's poetry is to follow his agile mind weaving in and out of historical time periods, following the contours of crooked streets in Galata, naming names, or stopping at a now defunct whore house listening to the voices of women there. In "Garlic," ostensibly a prose piece, time as a layered entity with past and present disappears and becomes a unified place of the spirit, of mind play.

In Berk, Süreya's sense of unexpected connections and Ayhan's awareness that Istanbul is a mongrel accumulation floating on a sea of history are unified into a flat tapestry of pure motion, an irreligious but still spiritual space where splits associated with time are abandoned. Berk's poetry reveals no secrets but lights everything it touches with its inflections.

From the 1950's on, everything Berk writes is associated with his "long poetic line." To understand what that line is, one can go to a Hashim poem, the first poet in the anthology: "In a grieving perfection's insomnia..."Why is perfection associated with insomnia? Insomnia is the most intense state of wakefulness (consciousness) because it is nearest sleep. This is a poetics of limits, a motion of the mind towards zero, the unreachable, the forbidden.

Berk's long poetic line approaches the limit of prose, growing in intensity doing so. A lot of Berk's best poems look like prose; they are continuous strips of poetic line moving towards and away from a limit. Here lies the essential paradox of Berk and Turkish poetry. He seems to be the most pagan, least religious of poets, as Turkish poetry rarely is about religion. But an irreducible spiritual essence runs through both of them, as it does in Veli or Hashim or Hikmet or Süreya or Iskender or Güntan.... It is buried in the agglutinative cadences of Turkish, a language of affections inflected by proximity to a movable, elusive verb –a dance towards and away from limits. The sensual, metaphysical and historical are unified in this movement –the eda- a continuum of earth, water and human habitation:

Wall
Door Window
+_____

HOME

"I am in the middle of a garden that looks like 444."
Cansever

GARDEN

The house, 'vertical creature'.
You enter the house through the garden.
But the garden does not know the house.
Nor perhaps the other way around...

How beautiful!
What's more, the world of objects is like this.
They all gather to enjoy the unknown.
The garden's choice has been freedom, from the very beginning.

It has the capacity of eclipsing the house,
however conspicuous the house might make itself to show off.

- I am in the garden, says the garden.

It has its own language, history, geography.

We have also come to realize that it has some peculiar thoughts of its own.
(Actually, it is through these peculiar thoughts that it takes shape.)

I SEE THE HOUSE AFTER I LEAVE THE GARDEN BEHIND.

> To compare the garden and the house: the garden is wide open in the face of the close-mouthed, conservative quality the house characterizes (permeated with that despotism which wounded it long ago).
>
> THE GARDEN DETESTS CALENDESTINE OPERATIONS.
>
> Full of sound and voices.
> Its face overflowing into the street.
> Offering a female reading.
>
> To compare them, it is sexual (what is not?)
>
> THE HOUSE IS MORE AS IF TO DIE IN THAN TO LIVE IN.
>
> Oh garden, the muddy singer of the street.
>
> "Dirty Child."
>
> Hello gardens, here I am! (1997, trans. by Onder Otçu)"

↑ Index

300. Geraldine Monk

Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

Sat 30 Aug 2008

Murat, Oh yes - lots - probably most . The Bronte sisters, I love Wuthering Heights but oddly enough so many poets I know hate it - but they all love Jane Eyre - why's that then. Discuss!) George Eliot (one of the greatest prose stylists within the conventional narrative format), Henry James, Melville, Edith Wharton. The two I mentioned as not liking stick in my mind because if you labour through a novel and you end up not liking it that's a lot of time spent not liking something so you tend to be harsher than you would if you spent 5 minutes on a poem you don't like.

Murat wrote:

Geraldine,

Do you like any 19th century novel, at least written in the English language?

Ciao,

Murat

↑ Index

301. Geraldine Monk

Re: Rave review of THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS

Sat 30 Aug 2008

Hello Peter,

It may be a rave review but it's so London-centric it gives a totally distorted picture of what the book is about and I think Chris inadvertently makes it sound rather parochial. It's not all London poets emanating from Writers Forum workshops (excellent poets though they are) but a selection of British, American, Canadian, Australian and New Zealand poets. He doesn't even mention the maestro Ted Berrigan nor other prominent Americans like Lyn Hejinian, Kathleen Fraser, Anselm Hollo, Juliana Spahr and more. An odd rave review which doesn't really take the book on outside Chris's own circle of associates which I find a tad misleading. But that's the swing and roundabouts of blogs for you!

Geraldine

----- Original Message -----
From: "Peter Quartermain" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, August 30, 2008 2:25 AM
Subject: FW: Rave review of THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS

Chris Goode's review of The Reality Street Book of Sonnets, which you can buy from http://freespace.virgin.net/reality.street/ or by snail mail from Reality Street, 63 All Saints Street, Hastings, East Sussex TN34 3BN UK for fifteen pounds - add something for postage - Google the title and check the website.

[And yes, Goode is right - is really is an absolutely terrific book.]

This is from Chris Goode's Blog.

Look! It's The Reality Street Book of Sonnets. I thought I might die before it finally emerged from its epic pupation; but in its own good time in the end it arrived -- and once again I thought I might die: the range, the chutzpah, the sheer bloody excitingness of this anthology is heart-attack-inducing. I'm a sucker for anthologies, but this is something else entirely. Someone over at Dennis's blog reminded me today of the phrase "all killer, no filler", and that sums this book up perfectly: there is literally nothing here that doesn't abundantly reward the reader's attention and imagination. The compass of the anthology is the life of the sonnet from 1945 up to about this time yesterday (culminating with the gobsmackingly brilliant Justin Katko and Sophie Robinson), and its scope easily accommodates plenty of visual and soundtext work as well as exhilarating adventures with both the cumbersome baggage of the form and its startling elasticity and mutability. Watch me ride half a league into the valley of individiousness as I choose some favourite stuff: Tim Atkins's droll and weirdly poignant refashionings of Petrarch; a ravishing sequence of brush-stroke sonnets from David Miller, which effectively reframe for me everything of Miller's that I've ever read; Giles Goodland's sublimely funny and disconcerting compositions from found documentary sources; and Jen Bervin's reticently poised and lyrically reverberant writings-through of Shakespearean phantoms. One of the best things about those four examples is that nothing else here is not at least nine-elevenths as good as them. And it's a pleasure also to see more familiar sonnets (from Adrian Clarke, Tony Lopez, Ken Edwards, Peter Jaeger, Peter Manson...) in this context and this company, where everything folds itself outwards like a house party spilling onto the lawn outside.

Worth noting, I think, in passing -- though it's touched on briefly in the excellent introduction -- that one of the centres of gravity to this anthology is the Writers Forum workshop, instituted by Bob Cobbing and these days helmed by Clarke and Lawrence Upton. At least a dozen of these here poets, probably many more, have or have had strong links to that workshop, which meets fortnightly through most of the year, these days at the Betsey Trotwood pub in Farringdon. A book like this brings home the importance of that meeting-place, and of its longevity not least. It was sitting in that circle that I first heard Jeff Hilson, the editor of this astonishing volume and himself one of the most brilliant poets I know, read from his Bird Bird -- just about my favourite thing to have ever happened. I really want to start going to the workshop again, but I'm sick of making the resolution, only to have it swamped by my own disastrousness.

Anyway, I don't think I can recommend this anthology any more highly than I already have; if you think I can, then please take it as read that I do. I definitely can't think of a better or more inspiring introduction to what remains to be done in your life, starting now.

=========
Peter Quartermain
846 Keefer Street
Vancouver
BC Canada V6A 1Y7
[redacted] (voice and fax)
[redacted]
=========

↑ Index

302. Alan Sondheim

Entering

Sat 30 Aug 2008

(please post one or another of these texts so people will know that the site is ongoing; the collected recent texts are at http://www.alansondheim.org/ps.txt http://www.alansondheim.org/pt.txt http://www.alansondheim.org/pu.txt - the last, thanks Alan

Entering

To get into The Accidental Artist catastrophe site, it's best to fly in. At one point years ago, it was possible to access the ground floor by taking the front stairs; after these began their slow precession, it seemed possible at times to wait, then climb when they were properly positioned. Now, everything's different; the stairs are treacherous and you might find yourself beneath the ground, drowning without a clue, shapes falling, rotating, and shuddering around you, choke choke. Best as I said to fly in. At another point months ago, that was easier to do, flying ahead across the threshold, entering the space, it's 'turned to stone' perhaps or deconstructed, or less treacherous, you could always be assured of air. At yet another point weeks ago, better to fly above, how high is that, above the space, the walls, the particles, the objects, the translucencies, the part-objects, fly above I say, then descend, slowly and carefully and to be sure unlosing oneself or winning oneself back, unfacing oneself, descend certainly and unsurely, through an artificial air that sounds like you're there, somewhere to be sure, the air is cold, warm yourself, the air is cold. Then to the colder light and buffeting, you might, you will, lose your footing, and I, myself, I can no longer edit objects which escape, love to disappear, were told to disappear, we're happy, we're not threatened, we're really happy, so much light and color! so much sound. I make myself lose myself, Julu said, and I lose you too.

http://www.alansondheim.org/ script jpgs: Julu Twine automatically writing the sky; planar elements closing in on themselves (from above)

To access the Odyssey exhibition The Accidental Artist (please visit!) - http://slurl.com/secondlife/Odyssey/48/12/22

↑ Index

303. blacksox

If You are in Florida

Sun 31 Aug 2008

Besides Hurricanes
there will be poetry

1st Tuesdays @
The Daily Grind
807 N. Orange Ave
Orlando, Fl 32801
[redacted]

Featuring
Naomi Butterfield
+Open Mic
+ More

September 2 @ 7pm
Hosted By Russ Golata

AND

EVERY 3RD Wednesday @ Austinâ€™s
An Orlando Poetry Group presentation

Featuring: Calypso Jewel
Calypso Jewel is a free-associate of the english language. She graduated from Rollins with a minor in writing, and continued her studies like a farm chicken, pecking at whatever tempting seeds could help her flourish. She reads Charles Bukowski, Matthew Arnold, the Bible, Walt Whitman, William Blake, Carl Jung, and her friends, closely. The manifest destiny of the soul, and the alchemical properties of love constitute her primary subject matter.

Wednesday September 17, @ 8:30pm

Austinâ€™s Coffee and Film 929 W Fairbanks Ave.
Winter Park, Florida

The Wonderful Calypso
Orlandoâ€™s Best Open Mic (You voted)
A Smile on Your Face

Hosted by Chaz Yorick & Russ Golata
For directions or comments e-mail me at [redacted]

↑ Index

304. Dodie Bellamy

Christine Wertheim exhibit opening September 7 at Right Window Gallery

Sun 31 Aug 2008

The Plastic Exploding Inevitable
an installation by Christine Wertheim

Right Window at ATA
992 Valencia at 21st Street, San Francisco

Opening: September 7, 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.
At 6:00 Christine Wertheim will talk and answer questions about the project

Installation continues through October 3

Coral reefs the world over are dying faster than rain forests. In homage to these vanishing wonders, Margaret and Christine Wertheim of the Institute For Figuring instigated a project to crochet a woolen reef, an effort that now engages women around the globe. This collective testimony also celebrates the strange hyperbolic geometry of the oceanic realm. As it has grown the reef has spawned, dividing and growing into multiple sub-reefs, each with its own unique ecology of corals, anemones, kelps and other sea life.

In September Right Window will be showing the Plastic Exploding Inevitable (PEI), a spawn of the Toxic Reef, aka Bikini Atoll, made from plastic bags and other refused and recycled materials. The most psychedelic of the Institute for Figuring reefs, the Plastic Exploding Inevitable features irradiant pink "sand," miniature white plastic spires, a grove of wine-glass trees, and a gorgeous reef panorama painted on a take-out box by Alicia Escott. In the decades since Warhol created his Exploding Plastic Inevitable, the multimedia component of the Silver Factory, the words he strung together have taken on a more sinister edge, and Wertheim's installation helps us parse this new reality. In the North Pacific, for example, there is a gyre of floating plastic debris roughly the size of Texas.

Contributors to the Plastic Exploding Inevitable include:
Kathleen Greco, Sarah Simons, Evelyn Hardin, Alicia Escott, Margaret Wertheim and Christine Wertheim.

The Right Window at ATA is curated by Dodie Bellamy for the month of September, 2008.

When she is not crocheting reef items, Christine has a full-time job in the Department of Critical Studies at the California Institute of the Arts, where she teaches experimental writing and feminism. She is also an experimental poet and writer whose work deals with the intersection of language and logic.

Christine's first book of poetry, +'Ime-S-pace, was published in 2007 by Les Figues Press, LA.

↑ Index

305. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??

Sun 31 Aug 2008

& this other non degreed steve on the list
doesn't teach tho he thinks it's one of the noblest professions
he hustles and part of his income when he's not robbing libraries or computers from universities is made from his poetry
so he must be a fraud
williams was a doctor stevens insurance
corso a bum bremser a dealer (?) weiners? sold weenies pessoa made pesos
in some office somewhere borges
catullus oops is he still around??? ferlenghetti makes spagetti lord
buckley (oops a comedian)
homer sold moblie homes a home run champion tom savage merry fortune
look at that list you made murat geez steve cannon
all the poets you personally know are well educated and work within an academic system one way or the other stacy at the poetry project
doesn't anselm teach oops patty smith
(HA) double oops
or does he work at gem spa (joke)
shut up and get some sleep steve
take that new anti-psychotic drug the doc just prescribed for ya

On Sat, 30 Aug 2008 12:31:21 -0400 Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
writes:
> Steve,
>
> There is nothing cute about Word To Mouth. It has a significant > place in > Auster's total work, as I tried to show in my last post
>
> I think Merwin comes from a prominent family and is independently > wealthy. I > agree with your distinction between poets who make a living out of > their > poetry and those who do it from teaching.
>

> I am not sure the distinction between minor and major is relevant > here. Who > is to know? There are a many poets I personally know who do not > teach, at > least not in a college or university: Joel Lewis, Basil King, Martha > King,
> Kimberly Lyons, Ron Silliman, David Chirot, Gary Sullivan, Nada
> Gordon,
> Elinor Naueen, Maggie Dubris, Bob Hershon, Simon Pettet, Ed
> Friedman, Tony > Towle, Anne Tadros, Stacy Szymaszek, Anselm Berrigan. The list goes > on and > on. On the other hand, it is informative to inquire if these poets'
> works
> are different from the poets who teach at a university, > specifically in a > Masters of Fine Department. For instance, Bruce Andrews teaches I > think > philosophy, which is not the same thing.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>
> On Fri, Aug 29, 2008 at 3:44 PM, steve russell
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of
> actually > > making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of poets, > i mean
> > those who can make a living without the benefit of a teaching > position. & i > > also mean 1st rate poets. of recent contemporaries, only Ginsberg > comes to > > mind. Bukowski had his moments, and i consider him an important > minor

> > writer, but i don't consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet.
> not by a > > long shot.
> >
> > of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if > he's ever > > had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever > having had a > teaching position. he's tutored. he's done translations, & he's won
> the > > McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken. Unlike Auster, Merwin never > claimed to > > have made a cute wager concerning how he made his living.
> >
> >
> >
> guidelines
> >
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

306. andrew burke
Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
Sun 31 Aug 2008

How about Ogden Nash? How did he go?

Andrew

2008/8/31 Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]>:
> Today, poets who make a living from poetry (and not from teaching) can only do so through the combination of sales, readings, and fellowships. Ashbery wrote art criticism and then taught until he got his Macarthur; I think he has been a full-time professional poet in the above sense since then.
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Charles Alexander <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

> Sent: Saturday, 30 August, 2008 5:19:36 PM
> Subject: Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
>
> i haven't verified this, but a professor once told me that the last
> poet to make a living from the "publication and sales" of poetry
> (this does NOT include lecture fees, readings, poetry-related > teaching gigs, etc.) was Alfred Tennyson. But then, there can't have > been too many to do so, at any time in history, right?
>
> charles
>
>
> charles alexander
> chax press
> [redacted]
> 411 N 7th ave, suite 103
> tucson arizona 85705
> [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
> On Aug 29, 2008, at 12:44 PM, steve russell wrote:
>
>> so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of >> actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of >> poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a >> teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent >> contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his >> moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't >> consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.
>>
>> of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if >> he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him >> ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done
>> translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken.
>> Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager >> concerning how he made his living.
>>
>>
>>

>> welcome.html
>>
>
>
>
>
>

--
Andrew
http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/

↑ Index

307. Pierre Joris
Re: Memo to Barack Obama
Sun 31 Aug 2008

I second that proposal,

Pierre
On Aug 28, 2008, at 8:44 PM, ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:

> Nathaniel Mackey for inaugural poet?
>
> *<<

_____
_____ Hey,

Want a free Obama/Biden sticker? MoveOn's giving them away totally free--even the shipping's free. I just got mine, and wanted to share the opportunity with you.

Click this link to get a free Obama/Biden sticker:

http://pol.moveon.org/barackstickers/?id=-10178572-xj0q2zx&rc=manual_forward

Thanks!

_____
The poet: always in partibus infidelium -- Paul Celan

_____
Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202
h: [redacted]
c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Paris: 09.52.80.14.18
Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pjoris.blogspot.com

_____

↑ Index

308. David Chirot
Re: Memo to Barack Obama
Sun 31 Aug 2008

***

* <http://ui.constantcontact.com/sa/fp.jsp?plat=i&p=f&m=iqnuv6bab>

For some years now I've been studying and finding methods in different media with which to create what i call "The New Extreme Experimental American Poetry & Arts."

Futurism (the 20th Century's first) and Dada were avant-gardes focused on the interelationships among the military and "art" uses of the term "avant-garde." Futurism, to celebrate "War, the world's hygiene" and Dada, using its NO to War as a springboard to the NO of everything which the immense War Machine Culture produces. "Anti War Anti Art Anti Poetry -- For quite some time, the

"avant-garde" has been separated from its originary interconnection with the military and War, War Machines, War Culture--as though "the avant-garde" occurs "at a distance" from the Theater of War, which is Artaud's theater of Cruelty run completely amok, while the audience looks on

In times like these with multiple Wars being conducted by the US, as well as those it funds and arms and in turn is affected by itself, why not re-join the military and arts in examining what is occurring in a culture where the language and images have also run amok?

And why not, while we' re at, examine the appearance of not only ever more censorship, distranslations, forgeries, propaganda-running amok, a "plague" as Artaud calls it---that "Avian Flu" lurking in the peripheries of awareness, language and terror---but also of Torture as the ultimate expression of "forcing one to speak," even when knowing the information produced may well not be true at all. For with torture, what counts is that the person spoke, confessed, betrayed,as no matter what they say is already a "confession," a betrayal, and so, as a Russian artist has pointed out: "Language is a fascism not because it censors, but because it forces one to speak."

"As usual," Pier Paulo Pasolini noted in his famous "Glow Worm" essay, "the only thing we had to go on was language."

It is in the symptoms of language that Pasolini begins his researches and investigations into what is happening, that is making for example, the glow worms disappear where they had been not so very long ago at all such numerous and beloved presences..

In the first lines of his Introduction to Torture: Cancer of Democracy France and Algeria 1954-62, Pierre Vidal-Naquet asks

"Can a great nation, liberal by tradition, allows its institutions, its army, and its system of justice to degenerate over the span of a few years as a result of the use of torture, and by its concealment and deception of such a vital issue call the whole Western concept of human dignity and the rights of the individual into question?"The forcing to speak of torture, of language as a fascism, begins to "push the envelope" of what is said and written, in terms of what is being done that must be concealed. The "transparency of language" sought by the public, is replaced with the "opacity of language," a hard, smooth surface which functions as a kind of "black hole" of meanings, facts, and blurs the borders of fictions, fantasies, lies, dreams and a kind of Horoscope that furnishes Propaganda with a sense of the Inevitability of Events which portrays the "ones in charge" as being on the side always of the Deus ex Machina.

The adoption of a God Apparatus within the functioning of the terms necessary to "promote" what is designated as "Reality," enables the Leaders to place themselves "beyond questioning," while creating the Right to question anyone, anywhere, anytime, on the entire planet.

A word--"terrorists, Al-Queda"--points--and a person vanishes, "detained with out charge for an indefinite period"s stretching into years. This "Black Hole" effect of the Leaders' Language uses words not only on persons, places, events, but on words themselves also. Words that "are pointed out" are vanished, "tortured," "betrayed."and if allowed to be released, returned in a severely mangled and "shadow of their former selves" form.

As Vidal-Nacquet points out, once this process is begun "outside the country" by the troops, police paramilitary organizations and mercenaries employed by a system, that "cancer" begins to spread "back" into the country of origin of the initial decision making and orders which sent this plague out into the world. (As Artaud entitles a great essay: "The Theater and the Plague")

The "problem " of language then becomes how to split words which mean the same things into what are separate entities, when judged as actions. Yet is the splinting simply a ruse, or the making of cracks in language which begin to "bring down the whole system?" The double talk of double standards, hyper-texts of hypocrises--the practice of denial which creates Walls separating and partitioning parts of one's own mind and being from others, in order to function as a "rational, civilized being," whose society may sanction horrific things, but are these not neccessary means to the greater end when faced with the Terminality of Evil?

Vidal-Nacquet cites Thucydides, in Book Three of the Peloponnese Wars, when the Greeks have to confront and conceal a massacre committed, a War crime.

**

In The Peloponnesian War, Book 3, Thucydides states: "To fit in with the change of events, words, too, had to change. What used to be thought of as a thoughtless act of aggression was now regarded as the courage one would expect to find in a party member; to think of the future and wait was merely another way of saying one was a coward, any idea of moderation was just an attempt to disguise one's unmanly character; ability to understand a question from all sides meant one was totally unfitted for action; frenzied violence came to be considered an attribute of a real man.

"The ability to understand a question from all sides" in this situation needs to be partitioned, separated, made to exist in carefully compartmentalized ways so that what is happening will not be seen, and the image created of what is occurring, will be all that is "seen, heard and read." The separation of language from a material actuality and its production as a form of artifice of "material language" used for the purpose of substituting a "spectacle" for "events on the ground" in such a way that one and one's allies are always Right, Good, Democratic and Just, and the Other is always Wrong, Evil, Un-Democratic and Unjust. This reduction of complex terms bit by bit structurally, is to condense,to make one the many, to alter or remove meanings. Orwell demonstrates these as among the purposes of "New speak" in the Appendix to his novel 1984.

This creates situations that are happening "right before one's very eyes " which one is "not to see," and so doesn't. For if one did one might ask questions, rather than doing what fiction readers are supposed to do: "accept what is written in a willing suspension of disbelief."

This separation allows one not to see that what is happening "there" and "here" are related, and in the first place what is happening depends not on what is being done, but by who. This means that the same word has its opposite meaning depending on with whom it is "associated," and what the "context" of its placement is within the new order of sentences, phrases, names and descriptions.

Today, as Hurricane Gustav may or not hit New Orleans on the third anniversary of Katrina, the Republicans are getting ready to hold their convention , something which would appear to be done with the most unmitigated gall. Yet, the way that New Orleans is being presented for the most part is as a "New City" which is "now prepared" for the storm, though the levees, still, are not considered really high enough. Why a nation would let, despite years of warnings, one of its major port cities and a hub of its oil industries, be destroyed--was al to easy to see three years ago, and now is trying to be concealed.

Everything in the article follows the examples and histories set down so harrowinlgy and in such great and indelible detail in Naomi Klein"s The Shock Doctrine.

New Orleans, one can see, is being turned into not only a "New City, but something more like a "settlement," an "outpost" of a kind of re-colonization of many areas of the USA, turning them into gated communities with their own entertainment set ups and businesses connected by power grids, while the rest of the population, conveniently without electrictiy and off line, is "disappeared" from the "overall picture" of a "steady recovery.

One of the things that very much struck me in reading this is many of the details and the words used for them, are almost identical to those used to describe what is happening in the Occupied territories, and is being funded to the tune of over 20 billion a year by the USA. The article here notes th same "ethnic cleansing" going on, with the same (American) equipment being used, the bulldozers, cranes and trucks hauling away the demolished homes and any sign of the original tenants. Everything has been altered--the school system, the transportation system, the entertainment and leisure systems of organization and presentation, the areas designated as :off limits" to much of the remnantsof the survivors of Katrina. The news on tv even notes that this time around though there is no Super Bowl Dome and other facilities as before with which to shelter the victims from danger, there are "increased numbers of wel equipped buses, stocked with food" with which to simply transport the undesirables out of the city, permanently, no doubt, flung into a life time of itinerancy among "internal refugee camps" and "temporary shelters."

The artilce here also uses the terminology of "the right of return," which almost everyone knows will never happen for them. The City has in effect not only been Occupied, but taken over, every bit of earth, of water, of light, taken away and privatized, leaving no room for those unwanted Others who had created the city and its world famous culture to begin with.

In The Shcok Doctrine, Naomi Klein lists some of the huge number ofcompanies, tehnolgoies, "show rooms," trade shows, products of security and surveillance that have completely turned around the Israeli econ0omy since 9/11 and made it the world's 4th largest exporter of military equipment and technology, as well as the fourth largest military. Huge US funding of this has helped to bring these technologies to work in the areas created by "disasater capitalism" like Katrrina and the Mexican Border. Klein writes that the "wealthy New Orelans neighborhood of Audoban Place needed its own police fioorce after Hurrican Katrina, it hired the Israeli private secrurity firm Instinctive Shooting International."

While Immigration agents for the Mexican Border are trained by the Israeli founded Goaln Group, Boeing and Elbit, the Israeli firm most involved in building the 2.5 billion dollar Separation WWall, are being paid 2.5 billion dollars to create the as yet non functional "virtaul fences" along the US-Mexican borders which includes electronic sensors, unmanned aircraft, surveillance cameras, and 1800 cameras.

Human rights organizations set up within the USA to deal with the explosion in detainee arrests and camps describes their proliferation as "Gitmos Across America."

As this article asks, what is Obama going to do about any of this? His speech at AIPAC and his total embrace of Israeli Policies in the Occupied Territories is not a bad sign" for Palestinians only, but for huge chunks of the American population also. Because that stance, that huge shift from his former support of Palestinian rights, friendship with Edward Said and interest in in a Just Peace rather than colonialism and ethnic cleansing, is being used to reintroduce the same things into the USA under new names, new guises, as Naomi Klein writes of, that are created by the Friedmanism Chicago School of Shock Doctrine Economics, which, curiously, in Latin America saw itself in Anti-Artaudian terms as "antibodies" fighting the "plagues" of "Leftism," "Indigenous rights," "solidarity among peoples," "oppostion to privatization."

For once the strategies of the post 9/11 Patriot Act were adopted and torture entered the equation, and with it the importation of the techniques and methods and attitudes practiced and supported and funded by the US abroad, the only way to prevent confrontiong these things is to deny realitieson the ground in favor of images, and words in which the meanings have been drained and shifted so that they no longer "stand for anything" except a "place in a symbolic context that shifts by the hour."

The US may have a Black President who embraces and endorses Apartheid abroad and a similar practice within the US, that of the Katrina experience and those of the detainees confined in ever worse condtions in ever more "camps," not to mention toiling in the sub standard sub human conditons that were found in Postville, Iowa and since in i several more sweat shops and near slave labor condtions usualy thought to exist "only abroad" but are right here, in nice little American towns.

The USA now leads the world in number and per entage both of civilans in prison, and as well on any day ios running at an averge of 30,000 detainees being held inside the US in prisons as smal a a village's to huge outdoor "detention camps" surrounded by fences, walls, barbed wires, eletronic warningng and surveillance.

Recent talk of the return of the "Cold War Era" coupled with what many have seen as a new form of McCarthyism in the post 9/11 era contribute to the role of language/torture as a "forcing to speak," in which detainees, prisoners, internal exiles and refugees are produced by disaster capitilism, and much of the US becomes ever more open Ocupied Terrirtores Occupied by the US Governement and its privatized forces. Corporate-State Fascism as Mussolini defined it, in operation. During the course of almost two years of campaigining and billions spent--Obama has chnaged postions 180 degrees and McCain as also. The longer the elections go on the more they begin to resemble of al things Bush Mach Two--the most unpopular Presdient ever, head of the most disastrous regime ever. Yet the American public is being told it has a choice between "Change" and a "Maverick"--when in fact what is going to win no matter who is elected is that new and ever more powerful construction of the sytem--the Office of Presdient, whose powers are close to that of a dictator-God. This means that who ever occupies this place will be not a Deus ex Machina, but a puppet of forces behind the scenes, so that the system inexorabaly wins.

And what system is this? Naomi Klein would say and oes--Disaster Capitlsim, Shcok Doctrine, come home to roost, at long last, that first imnvaded the world on 9/11 1973 in Chile and landed in America on 9/11 2001.

The New Extreme Experimental American Poetry and Arts are the creations of this grisly coup, hidden in plain site/sight/cite such as the animatron figures waterboarding peep show on Coney Island, the offering of Oceanography Classes at Guantanamo, the forging of documents and images for massive Invasions and Occupations, and the rejection, as an Israeli journalist writes, of that language which "calls a spade a psade," because to do so would disrupt the business of doing business, which is what language is after all, nicht wahr? A business which "sells itself" rather than be tortured perhaps--

At any rate as much as one would like to feel hope , or hope for somethng which is under the srufaces as yet--andnot what is seen--what is seen tome at any rate is like a sign of humiliation and depair--what does it say about a "free dempocratic society" that in order for a Black person to run for president he has to emrbace and endorse Apartheid and support policies abraod and at home that are completely the contradcition of what is written in the Declaration of Independence and several Amendments of the Constitution--the 4th especially has been rendered almost null, and no one seems to have noticed.

This article is via International Clearing House, from the Guardian UK

*The Disneyfication of New Orleans
*
*The city's redevelopment has ignored the needs of what was one of the closest-knit black communities in America
*
*By Anna Hartnell

29/08/08 "The Guardian*<http://www.guardian.co.uk/commentisfree/2008/aug/28/usa.hurricanekatrina> *' -- - T*hree years after Hurricane Katrina, a more glamorous image of black America is presenting itself to the world in the person of Barack Obama. Meanwhile, in New Orleans, America's story of black urban poverty is still unfolding, largely beneath the radar of the global media.

Three years after Hurricane Katrina, a more glamorous image of black America is presenting itself to the world in the person of Barack Obama<http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/barackobama>. Meanwhile, in New Orleans, America's story of black urban poverty is still unfolding, largely beneath the radar of the global media.

In August and September 2005, areas like the largely black Lower Ninth ward<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Lower_Ninth_Ward>, almost entirely invisible to the hordes of tourists who flock to New Orleans every year, attracted worldwide sympathy as the levees broke<http://www.guardian.co.uk/commentisfree/2008/aug/27/hurricanekatrina.usa>. Now they have been all but forgotten. While tourists long ago repopulated the French Quarter, 57% of New Orleans' black population – against 36% of whites – have yet to return to the city. Many never will. This is because since Katrina, developers have clubbed together with the authorities to complete New Orleans' makeover into a playground for wealthy tourists.

As house prices soar and homelessness rises, the authorities are quietly doing away with the city's remaining stocks of affordable housing in moves that the UN has recently claimed constitute human rights violations. The fact that these demolitions will overwhelmingly affect black people has led some to call this ethnic cleansing<http://www.guardian.co.uk/environment/2005/sep/24/usnews.hurricanes2005> .

Looking back, these developments should come as no surprise. The sympathy that met Katrina's immediate aftermath was short-lived. In August 2005 it was poor African-American residents, statistically the least likely to have the means to evacuate the stricken city, who bore the brunt of the storm damage. Viewers all round the world watched in horrified fascination as conditions in the convention centre and Superbowl deteriorated. News reports did focus on the government's apparent abandonment of its own people, but a hysterical and arguably racist undercurrent was almost compulsively drawn to rumours of rape and murder – nearly all of which turned out to be untrue.

As residents evacuated the city, and before the floodwaters had even receded, the future of New Orleans and its residents was being spoken about in no uncertain terms. "We finally cleaned up public housing in New Orleans", declared Republican congressman Richard Baker soon after the storm. "We couldn't do it. But God did." Alphonso Jackson, the then US secretary of housing and urban development, made the racial implications of the gentrification process perfectly clear when he predicted that the reconstructed New Orleans would be a whiter city.

In the three years since, race and class stereotypes have paved the way for New Orleans' so-called "revitalisation". "We don't need soap opera-watchers right now", claimed the city council president, Oliver Thomas – perpetuating the view that New Orleans' high unemployment rate can be tracked to individual laziness as opposed to the systemic discrimination affecting most of America's inner cities. At the same time, those same forces that demonise poor and particularly black families – for their apparent "dysfunction" – are actively preventing the regrouping of some of the most close-knit black communities in the US.

The city is now in the process of phasing out the low-cost housing, public transportation system, and public health facilities that have supported the existence of low-income residents in New Orleans for decades. The US department of housing and urban development and the housing authority of New Orleans say that they wish to de-concentrate poverty in areas that were previously hotbeds for crime and drug abuse. Currently though, there are only plans to replace one-third of the units available for low-income renters. And as Audrey Stewart of the Loyola Law Clinic explains, the result is:

... thousands and thousands of homeless people camping out, under bridges, we have folks staying with relatives and friends – I see that all over my neighbourhood, five, six, seven, eight people living in these tiny houses. We have people getting kicked out of Fema [Federal Emergency Management Agency] trailers with nowhere to go.

Many displaced New Orleans residents, black and white, are now calling for the "right of return" – and are in the process creating a dynamic grassroots movement that threatens to disrupt the relative calm that has eased the passage of the city's controversial reconstruction programme. This is just the kind of movement that Barack Obama spent the first part of his career organising for South Side<http://www.encyclopedia.chicagohistory.org/pages/1177.html>Chicago, and it may turn out that his ability as president to respond to this call proves decisive.

Obama has been a vocal critic of the Bush administration's recovery and reconstruction programme, and his restoration plan for the region includes housing displaced residents who wish to return to the city. This time last year, Obama expressed concern that New Orleans would once again become the scene of the nation's broken promises, and told residents, "I can promise you this: I will be a president who wakes up every morning and goes to bed every night with the future of this city on my mind." He said:

... racial discord, poverty, the old divisions of black and white, rich and poor, it's time to leave that to yesterday.

But as the presidential campaign intensifies, Obama is increasingly under pressure to "transcend race". If this insidious demand should persist into an Obama presidency, it could seriously hinder a sustained focus on so racially charged an event as Katrina and its disastrous aftermath. What's certain is that the longer the world looks away, the more likely it is that a Disneyfied "new" New Orleans will mean the loss of a city that boasts one of the most complex cultural heritages in the world.

Three years on from the storm, during an election year that has focused attention on a spectacular symbol of African American success, it seems that once again, no one is looking in the direction of a black America that has experienced only the rough end of the American dream.

Anna Hartnell is lecturer in American literature & culture at the University of Birmingham, [redacted]

*Click on "comments" below to read or post comments *

Comments (25) Comment (0)

Comment Guidelines
Be succinct, constructive and relevant to the story. We encourage engaging, diverse and meaningful commentary. Do not include personal information such as names, addresses, phone numbers and emails. Comments falling outside our guidelines – those including personal attacks and profanity – are not permitted.
See our complete Comment Policy<http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/comment_policy.htm>and use this link to notify us<[redacted]?subject=Comment%20Problem%20&body=Please%20tell%20us%20the%20problem.%20For%20our%20reference,%20internally%20this%20comment%20is%20on%20www.informationclearinghouse.info/article20650.htm%20Please%20copy%20and%20paste%20the%20comment%20in%20question%20here.>
if you have concerns about a comment. We'll promptly review and remove any inappropriate postings.

Send Page To a Friend<http://ui.constantcontact.com/sa/fp.jsp?plat=i&p=f&m=iqnuv6bab>
* *

In accordance with Title 17 U.S.C. Section 107, this material is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving the included information for research and educational purposes. Information Clearing House has no affiliation whatsoever with the originator of this article nor is Information ClearingHouse endorsed or sponsored by the originator.)

[image: Email Newsletter icon, E-mail Newsletter icon, Email List icon, E-mail List icon]

Sign up for our Daily Email Newsletter

<http://www.constantcontact.com/safesubscribe.jsp>

[image: Amazon Honor System]

HOME <http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/index.htm>

COPYRIGHT NOTICE
<http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/fair_use.htm>

Video

On Fri, Aug 29, 2008 at 11:58 AM, cris cheek <[redacted]> wrote:

> and maybe Biden is the monster from the deep that has truly sunk Obama into the mundane. It's really hard for me to watch yet another generation of youthful political energy and optimism sacrificed by this extraordinarily inept decision. How on earth can the choice of Biden be sustained under the banner of change? Someone better enlighten me.
>
> On Aug 28, 2008, at 8:44 PM, ALDON L NIELSEN wrote:
>
> Nathaniel Mackey for inaugural poet?
>
> *<<

309. Jennifer Karmin
JOB: Colby-Sawyer College
Sun 31 Aug 2008

(this is a forward. please don't respond to me. good luck!)

Teaching Faculty: Literature and Creative Writing

Colby-Sawyer College has an opportunity for an innovative and energetic full-time Assistant Professor of Literature and Creative Writing in the Department of Humanities. This is a tenure-eligible faculty position available in late August 2009.

Primary teaching responsibilities include courses in literature (including the American Literature survey), creative writing, and composition. The ideal candidate will have significant publication in prose fiction and a demonstrated ability to teach courses in literature and creative writing. Our new colleague will have the opportunity to help inaugurate the department's new major in Creative Writing. A Ph.D. in literature is preferred. Also required is evidence of excellence in teaching at the college level and a philosophy of education consonant with Colby-Sawyer's programs and mission. Our faculty positions involve teaching, advising, and departmental and college service responsibilities.

Colby-Sawyer College is a comprehensive liberal arts college located in scenic Central New Hampshire, recognized for the excellence of its academic and co-curricular programs. Our faculty and staff consider it an important and welcome aspect of their jobs to get to know, encourage, inspire, and offer guidance to each of our students. Visit our website at http://www.colby-sawyer.edu to learn more about our unique teaching and learning community.

To be considered please apply on-line. Please include current CV, letter of application, statement of teaching philosophy, sample syllabi if available, and names and telephone numbers/e-mail addresses of three references. Priority will be given to applications received by October 15, 2008.

↑ Index

310. Barry Schwabsky
Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
Sun 31 Aug 2008

You equate John Ashbery and Ogden Nash???

--- On Sun, 31/8/08, andrew burke <[redacted]> wrote:

From: andrew burke <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???

To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, 31 August, 2008, 10:59 AM

How about Ogden Nash? How did he go?

Andrew

2008/8/31 Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]>:
> Today, poets who make a living from poetry (and not from teaching) can only do so through the combination of sales, readings, and fellowships. Ashbery wrote art criticism and then taught until he got his Macarthur; I think he has been a full-time professional poet in the above sense since then.
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Charles Alexander <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Saturday, 30 August, 2008 5:19:36 PM
> Subject: Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
>
> i haven't verified this, but a professor once told me that the last
> poet to make a living from the "publication and sales" of poetry
> (this does NOT include lecture fees, readings, poetry-related > teaching gigs, etc.) was Alfred Tennyson. But then, there can't have > been too many to do so, at any time in history, right?
>
> charles
>
>
> charles alexander
> chax press
> [redacted]
> 411 N 7th ave, suite 103
> tucson arizona 85705
> [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
> On Aug 29, 2008, at 12:44 PM, steve russell wrote:
>
>> so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of >> actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think

of
>> poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a >> teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent >> contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his >> moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't >> consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.
>>
>> of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if >> he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him
>> ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done >> translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken.
>> Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager >> concerning how he made his living.
>>
>>
>>
>> welcome.html
>>
>
>
>
>
>

--
Andrew
http://hispirits.blogspot.com/
http://www.flickr.com/photos/aburke/

↑ Index

311. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??

Sun 31 Aug 2008

Steve,

I am sure there are multiple other examples, including you. Mine was a free association, and at one time I needed to stop. What does "within an academic setting" mean? Is being educated a impediment to poetry? Non academic does not mean anti-intellectual.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Aug 31, 2008 at 1:54 AM, steve d. dalachinsky <[redacted]>wrote:

> & this other non degreed steve on the list
> doesn't teach tho he thinks it's one of the noblest professions
> he hustles and part of his income when he's not robbing libraries
> or computers from universities is made from his poetry
> so he must be a fraud
> williams was a doctor stevens insurance
> corso a bum bremser a dealer (?) weiners? sold weenies pessoa made pesos
> in some office somewhere borges
> catullus oops is he still around??? ferlenghetti makes spagetti lord
> buckley (oops a comedian)
> homer sold moblie homes a home run champion tom savage merry fortune
> look at that list you made murat geez steve cannon
> all the poets you personally know are well educated and work within an > academic system one way or the other
> stacy at the poetry project
> doesn't anselm teach oops patty smith
> (HA) double oops
> or does he work at gem spa (joke)
> shut up and get some sleep steve
> take that new anti-psychotic drug the doc just prescribed for ya
>
> On Sat, 30 Aug 2008 12:31:21 -0400 Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> writes:
> Steve,
>
> *There is nothing cute about Word To Mouth. It has a significant*
> place in > Auster's total work, as I tried to show in my last post
>
> I think Merwin comes from a prominent family and is independently
> wealthy. I > agree with your distinction between poets who make a living out of
> their
> poetry and those who do it from teaching.
>
> I am not sure the distinction between minor and major is relevant
> here. Who > is to know? There are a many poets I personally know who do not > teach, at > least not in a college or university: Joel Lewis, Basil King, Martha > King,
> Kimberly Lyons, Ron Silliman, David Chirot, Gary Sullivan, Nada
> Gordon,

Elinor Naueen, Maggie Dubris, Bob Hershon, Simon Pettet, Ed Friedman, Tony Towle, Anne Tadros, Stacy Szymaszek, Anselm Berrigan. The list goes on and on. On the other hand, it is informative to inquire if these poets' works *are different from the poets who teach at a university, specifically in a* Masters of Fine Department. For instance, Bruce Andrews teaches I think philosophy, which is not the same thing.

Ciao,

Murat

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Aug 29, 2008 at 3:44 PM, steve russell
<[redacted]>wrote:

so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.

of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken. Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager concerning how he made his living.

guidelines

↑ Index

312. Mairead Byrne
Re: Visual Poetry (Vispo) Assistance
Sun 31 Aug 2008

Dear Al(l),
I designed a Visual Poetry course which I have taught in 3 iterations at Rhode Island School of Design, the second time in collaboration with Graphic Design professor, Jan Baker. This course is the first in a set of 3 courses in Concrete Poetry. The second is Sound Poetry, which I will be teaching for the first time this fall. When that is up & running, I hope to turn to Digital/Kinetic, the third course in the sequence, which will probably be called something completely different by then as technology changes, maybe Molten Poetry! The three courses aren't discrete. As I approach sound, I understand more how visual it is. Someone, maybe Michael Basinski, said that sound poetry always has strong visual announcement too. Each course includes the others too. I am happy to share my most recent Visual Poetry syllabus, & also Sound Poetry when it's done.
Mairead

MairÃ©ad Byrne
Associate Professor of English
Rhode Island School of Design
2 College Street
Providence, RI 02903

>>> "Jorgensen, Alexander" <[redacted]> 08/29/08 11:15 PM >>>
I am currently collecting information on visual poetry. I would be very interested in links, names, articles, academic programs, repositories, and titles. Please either send back channel or share resources with the list. Your time and own expertise will be sincerely appreciated.

Notice: September's second issue of Black Robert Journal will an important section on visual poetry.

http://www.black-robert-journal.com

↑ Index

313. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Sun 31 Aug 2008

Geraldine,

I asked the question because Hardy's The Mayor of Casterbridge left a a very strong impression on me when I first read it forty years ago in Turkey (in English). The Scarlet Letter also which I read about the same time. It blew my mind.

An interesting connection: I read The Scarlet Letter at Robert College, the American school In Istanbul. Robert College was built by missionaries who came from Massachusetts. The poet, critic and publisher Ed Foster is writing a fascinating book about 19th century Istanbul (and its surrounding areas up to Iran) and a group of New England missionaries.

Reading Moby Dick for the first time was an excruciating experience for me, but that reading changed my DNA as a writer. So nothing was wasted.

I share your enthusiasm for Middlemarch, which interestingly I also thought is the best 19th century English novel. I also love Henry James, who was a feminist, an American novelist and a great admirer of Hawthorne. My guess is The House of Seven Gables is his favorite Hawthorne novel, the first few pages of which anticipate I think James's later style.

I am so happy Jane Austen is not in your list.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Aug 30, 2008 at 6:54 PM, Geraldine Monk <[redacted]>wrote:

> Murat,
> Oh yes - lots - probably most . The Bronte sisters, I love Wuthering Heights but oddly enough so many poets I know hate it - but they all love Jane Eyre - why's that then. Discuss!) George Eliot (one of the greatest prose stylists within the conventional narrative format), Henry James, Melville, Edith Wharton. The two I mentioned as not liking stick in my mind because if you labour through a novel and you end up not liking it that's a lot of time spent not liking something so you tend to be harsher than you would if you spent 5 minutes on a poem you don't like.
>
> Murat wrote:

> Geraldine,
>
> Do you like any 19th century novel, at least written in the English language?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat

↑ Index

314. AWAREing Press

Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??

Sun 31 Aug 2008

Steve, thanks for the rant ;). The other Steve professes an adherence to popular poets and poetry as shuttled from the "PhDs" to the many minds hustling their way through academia, which is just as valid, if not moreso; it's indicative of the prevailing mindset in the uptight sanctions of groups such as this one.

Many fine poets are undegreed, and yet are awarded teaching positions; in fact, the late poet Carol Berge, after her 8-1/2 years of education/classes wound up with invites from 16 universities despite her failure to obtain a single letter beyond h.s.diploma. Yet here again we quibble, as many of her contemporaries, some of whom are listed below, worked very hard for their doctorates etc. (And need we remind ourselves that an MFA is the furthest one can advance in the "field of creative writing"?)

James Beach, BA

---------- Original message from "steve d. dalachinsky" <[redacted]>: ----------

> & this other non degreed steve on the list
> doesn't teach tho he thinks it's one of the noblest professions
> he hustles and part of his income when he's not robbing libraries
> or computers from universities is made from his poetry
> so he must be a fraud
> williams was a doctor stevens insurance
> corso a bum bremser a dealer (?) weiners? sold weenies pessoa made pesos
> in some office somewhere borges
> catullus oops is he still around??? ferlenghetti makes spagetti lord
> buckley (oops a comedian)
> homer sold moblie homes a home run champion tom savage merry fortune
> look at that list you made murat geez steve cannon

all the poets you personally know are well educated and work within an academic system one way or the other
stacy at the poetry project
doesn't anselm teach oops patty smith
(HA) double oops
or does he work at gem spa (joke)
shut up and get some sleep steve
take that new anti-psychotic drug the doc just prescribed for ya

On Sat, 30 Aug 2008 12:31:21 -0400 Murat Nemet-Nejat writes:
Steve,

*There is nothing cute about Word To Mouth. It has a significant place in* Auster's total work, as I tried to show in my last post

I think Merwin comes from a prominent family and is independently wealthy. I agree with your distinction between poets who make a living out of their poetry and those who do it from teaching.

I am not sure the distinction between minor and major is relevant here. Who is to know? There are a many poets I personally know who do not teach, at least not in a college or university: Joel Lewis, Basil King, Martha King, Kimberly Lyons, Ron Silliman, David Chirot, Gary Sullivan, Nada Gordon,
Elinor Naueen, Maggie Dubris, Bob Hershon, Simon Pettet, Ed Friedman, Tony Towle, Anne Tadros, Stacy Szymaszek, Anselm Berrigan. The list goes on and
on. On the other hand, it is informative to inquire if these poets' works *are different from the poets who teach at a university, specifically in a* Masters of Fine Department. For instance, Bruce Andrews teaches I think philosophy, which is not the same thing.

Ciao,

Murat

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Aug 29, 2008 at 3:44 PM, steve russell wrote:

so i've been thinking about poetry, art, & the difficulties of actually making a living exclusively through art. & when i think of poets, i mean those who can make a living without the benefit of a teaching position. & i also mean 1st rate poets. of recent contemporaries, only Ginsberg comes to mind. Bukowski had his moments, and i consider him an important minor writer, but i don't consider him the equal to Ginsberg as a poet. not by a long shot.

of the still living, only Merwin fits the bill. i'm not sure if he's ever had a full time teaching position. i'm not aware of him ever having had a teaching position. he's tutored. he's done translations, & he's won the McArthur grant, if I'm not mistaken. Unlike Auster, Merwin never claimed to have made a cute wager concerning how he made his living.

guidelines

↑ Index

315. Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Re: Eleven Eleven issue 5 and submission call for online issue 6
Sun 31 Aug 2008

Many thanks. We have a small memorial to Arteaga at our (very much in progress) website: www.elevenelevenjournal.com

Hugh

----- Original Message ----
From: Barbara Jane Reyes <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, August 29, 2008 11:30:42 AM
Subject: Re: Eleven Eleven issue 5 and submission call for online issue 6 awesome hugh, can't wait to see it. as well, it's really great to see you've included work by alfred arteaga, whom some of you know passed away this summer.

↑ Index

316. amy king
Lots of poets filmed while reading their poems ...
Sun 31 Aug 2008

Aug. 29th, The Stain of Poetry Reading Series

Matvei Yankelevich reads

Part #1 - http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IQCIdAfqBDs

Part #2 - http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gcXwCOs2q2c

Michael Ball reads

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=L6D9qmktZCA

Ryan Murphy reads

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-dUvQFAeNy0

Anna Moschovakis reads

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4ngq9zzt86g

Valzhyna Mort reads

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dqKjF2RUn5E

~~~~

VIDEOS FROM THE FORMER MIPOESIAS READING SERIES

Amy King, Curator
~~~~

Mendi Obadike reads

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-2689831932866195687&ei=LA27SLLxEJSUrgL31YnwDA&q=mipoesias&emb=1

Evie Shockley reads

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=7179533296441229330&ei=LA27SLLxEJSUrgL31YnwDA&q=mipoesias&emb=1

Tonya Foster reads

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=4641226672996544465&ei=LA27SLLxEJSUrgL31YnwDA&q=mipoesias&emb=1

Tara Betts

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=9128849204665301215&ei=LA27SLLxEJSUrgL31YnwDA&q=mipoesias&emb=1

Christopher Stackhouse reads

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-1000016046685218294&ei=IhC7SIStLYqUrgKqtrTxDA&q=%22amy+king%22&emb=1

Nico Vassilakis and Geof Huth Performing Sound Poetry

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fVW_v2kzI4I

Stacy Szymaszek reads

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-6662593207462816216&ei=LA27SLLxEJSUrgL31YnwDA&q=mipoesias&emb=1

Ethan Paquin - Part 1

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=1456707217726662375&hl=en

Ethan Paquin - Part 2

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-1036492947895327293&hl=en

Ethan Paquin - Part 3

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-1851525574263873552&hl=en

Cate Peebles reads

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-3143865017425555353&ei=vQ-7SNTvM5CYrAKxnuTqDA&q=mipoesias&emb=1

Nichole Steinberg reads

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=7481605085786564996&ei=vQ-7SNTvM5CYrAKxnuTqDA&q=mipoesias&emb=1

Richard Peabody reads

http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=3012499496745222136&ei=vQ-7SNTvM5CYrAKxnuTqDA&q=mipoesias&emb=1

~~~~

Not from the series (filmed by Amy tho) – Franz Wright

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=77GYrO2-3IE

Enjoy!

Amy and Ana

_____

Movies With Poems

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/08/11/movies-with-poetry/

Poems To Do

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2008/06/12/poetry-exercises-wanted/

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

317. Samuel Wharton
sawbuck 2.3
Sun 31 Aug 2008

---

dearest buffalo~

{James Belflower} {Sheila Black} {Richard Chetwynd} <http://goog_1220222187875/>{Steve Dalachinsky & Jim Leftwich} {Ryan Daley} {Clayton Eshleman} <http://goog_1220222187875/>{Dean Faulwell} {Lisa Fishman} {Skip Fox} {Kristen Orser} <http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com/>

come find all these good people in the new sawbuck<http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com> !!!
~~~~

& if you think about, submit some of your own amazing poems...

~samuel wharton, editor

↑ Index

318. Samuel Wharton
sawbuck 2.3, (correct link)
Sun 31 Aug 2008

---

dearest buffalo~

<goog_1220226864470> <goog_1220226864470>
{jamesbelflower}{sheilablack}{richardchetwynd}
{stevedalachinsky & jimleftwich}{ryandaley}{claytoneshleman}
{deanfaulwell}{lisafishman}{skipfox}{kristenorser}

<http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com> come find all these good people in the new sawbuck <http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com/>!!!

& if you think about, submit some of your own amazing poems...

~samuel wharton, editor

↑ Index

319. Geraldine Monk
Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
Sun 31 Aug 2008

Murat, I think you pinpoint the fact that a novel's impact on the reader is strongly related to the reader's circumstance at the time, especially age. I was in my thirties when I read Jude O & The Scarlet Letter so I had a lot of reading under my belt by then and they just didn't measure up. I'm not even sure if I could slog through Wuthering Heights now - but when I was a teenager (and the Bronte's lived about 20 miles away from where I was born and brought up so I knew the landscape and language) it was magnetic.

Jane Austen? Oh I'm so sorry Murat I didn't include her simply because she's a bit on the cusp and not really what we think of as 19th Century (not that she's what you'd call 18th Century either - I think that's part of the fascination - the world in transition - she's very modern and yet curiously old fashioned). She's also very wicked! I nearly bust a gut reading Northanger Abbey. But she's no Eliot that's for sure.

Geraldine

----- Original Message -----
From: "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]>

To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, August 31, 2008 7:35 PM
Subject: Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

> Geraldine,
>
> I asked the question because Hardy's The Mayor of Casterbridge left a a very > strong impression on me when I first read it forty years ago in Turkey (in English). The Scarlet Letter also which I read about the same time. It blew > my mind.
>
> An interesting connection: I read The Scarlet Letter at Robert College, the > American school In Istanbul. Robert College was built by missionaries who came from Massachusetts. The poet, critic and publisher Ed Foster is writing > a fascinating book about 19th century Istanbul (and its surrounding areas up > to Iran) and a group of New England missionaries.
>
> Reading Moby Dick for the first time was an excruciating experience for me, > but that reading changed my DNA as a writer. So nothing was wasted.
>
> I share your enthusiasm for Middlemarch, which interestingly I also thought > is the best 19th century English novel. I also love Henry James, who was a feminist, an American novelist and a great admirer of Hawthorne. My guess is
> The House of Seven Gables is his favorite Hawthorne novel, the first few pages of which anticipate I think James's later style.
>
> I am so happy Jane Austen is not in your list.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Sat, Aug 30, 2008 at 6:54 PM, Geraldine Monk
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> Murat,
> Oh yes - lots - probably most . The Bronte sisters, I love Wuthering > Heights but oddly enough so many poets I know hate it - but they all love

> Jane Eyre - why's that then. Discuss!) George Eliot (one of the greatest prose stylists within the conventional narrative format), Henry James, Melville, Edith Wharton. The two I mentioned as not liking stick in my mind > because if you labour through a novel and you end up not liking it that's a > lot of time spent not liking something so you tend to be harsher than you would if you spent 5 minutes on a poem you don't like.
>
> Murat wrote:
>
> Geraldine,
>
> Do you like any 19th century novel, at least written in the English language?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

September 2008

398 messages · Sat 30 Aug 2008 – Tue 30 Sep 2008

September 2008 was the month the bottom began to fall out — Lehman gone mid-month, the campaign at full roar — and the list answered the noise the way it had learned to, not by originating but by arranging. Three hundred and ninety-eight messages moved through it, and its characteristic gesture that month was the poet as assembler: the collage, the borrowed line, the constraint clamped onto the chaos. When the world will not hold still, the room reached for scissors and paste rather than the blank page.

The largest formal argument asked where borrowing ends and stealing begins. Under the heading of copyright infringement or collage, the room passed around assembled poems — a ROVA text built of found scraps, "we breathe, the gap we breathe" — and worried the line between the homage and the lift, the cut-up and the crime. It was the decade's central anxiety in miniature: whether a poem made of other people's language is an act of composition or an act of theft, and whether the law could tell the difference any better than the poets could.

The quarrel found its highest sanction in the master himself. John Ashbery's debut exhibition of collages was reviewed that month — the difficult old poet revealed as a literal cutter-and-paster, arranging found images the way he had always arranged found speech — and alongside it the room marked forty years of Technicians of the Sacred, Rothenberg's great anthology, itself a collage of the world's poetries bound between two covers. Assembly, the month insisted, was not the amateur's shortcut but the modern art entire, practiced at the top — the same instinct that had built the century's anthologies, its cut-ups, its readymades, now claimed by the difficult master as openly as any young collagist on the list.

Against the political spectacle the room deployed the same instinct as pure play. Sarah Palin had just been named to the ticket, and a request to the list's formalists produced not argument but wordgame — "anybody out there have a good palindrome about Palin? or even a palinode?" — the campaign's roar fed into a constraint machine and handed back as reversible nonsense. It was the collagist's reflex turned on the news: take the given material, however unpromising, and rearrange it until it says something the original never meant to.

I have set September down exactly as the archive delivered it — the borrowed poem between infringement and art, Ashbery's literal collages, the anthology at forty, and the campaign folded into a palindrome — because it was the month the list, with the markets cracking and the election screaming, answered by arranging rather than inventing, and made an unspoken case for its own survival. A room that can no longer be sure it can say anything new can still cut, paste, borrow, and reverse; and in a September when so much was coming apart, the poets found a strange composure in the art of putting found pieces together.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 398 in all.

WRITERS

Alexander, Charles 7, 59, 282, 355, 377
Allegrezza, William 151, 152
AND, mIEKAL 82
Andrews, Jim 102, 107, 147, 291, 299, 305, 359
Annette 50
Austin, William James 243, 375
Bales, Marcus 190
Ballardini, Anny 49, 65, 165, 249
Banias, Ari 184, 385
Baratier, David 81, 325, 326
Benson, Cara 266, 270, 376
Berkson, Bill 90
Bernstein, Charles 196
Blacksox 167, 267, 268
Bowering, George 335
Broderick, Therese 80
Brown, Pam 174
Burke, Andrew 66, 227
Calabrese, Rosalie 164
Camplin, Troy 303, 320
Casamassima, Christophe 61, 275, 392
Chan, Jill 27
Cheek, Cris 89
Chirot, David 5, 25, 57, 74, 168, 274, 279, 281, 307, 333
Chirot, David-Baptiste 103, 235, 238, 306, 322, 336
Ciccariello, Peter 75, 127, 166
Conrad, CA 197, 198, 344, 345, 372, 373, 390, 394
Croggon, Alison 228, 368
Curnow, Wystan 42
Dalachinsky, Steve D. 20, 30, 46, 47, 48, 95, 130, 131, 257, 262, 284, 361, 381
Daley, Ryan 145, 343, 370
Daly, Catherine 85, 100, 172, 183, 229, 269, 388
Damon, Maria 43, 332
Dean, Larry O. 170, 195
Durgin, Patrick F. 362
Dybka, Jilly 55, 69
Edgerton, Michael Tod 106
EJOYCE 53
Ellis, Stephen 88, 271
Elshtain, Eric 209
Emerson, Lori 251
Fieled, Adam 250
Garr, Megan M. 247
Gatza, Geoffrey 40, 101, 263, 384
Glass, Dan 120, 364, 398
Glass, Jesse 347
Godston, Daniel 356, 389
Gricevich, Andy 58, 205, 297
Gudding, Gabriel 236, 288
Hamilton, Robin 111, 112
Healy, Randolph 137
Henning, Barbara 132, 143
Henriksen, Matt 44
Hoffman, Crystal 70
Holmes, Janet 185
III, Nicholas Ruiz 96
Johnson, Halvard 15, 113, 138, 193, 354, 367
Jones, Andrew 216
Joris, Pierre 175, 329
Karavatos, Nicholas 374
Karmin, Jennifer 109, 182, 256, 301, 338, 395
Kasimor, Mary 41, 222
Kearns, Lionel 144
Kelleher, Michael 32, 33, 154, 253, 255, 316, 380, 393
Killian, Kevin 206
King, Amy 54, 67, 68, 78, 79, 115, 116, 181, 199, 204, 230, 280, 294, 296, 323, 348, 352, 378
Kirschenbaum, David 146, 272, 366
Kirschenbaum, David A. 202
KIZERSHOT, JULIE 276
Koeneke, Rodney 387
Konchan, Virginia 309
Konkol, Margaret 265
Ladkin, Sam 286
Lazer, Hank 201
Leaves, Little Red 313
Lepson, Ruth 22, 24, 37, 124, 220, 226
Lewis, Joel 71, 162
Lewis, Susan 337
List, Poetics 386
Lloyd, Warren 319
LoLordo, Nick 87
MacAllister, Bonnie 221
Malo, Mary Jo 108, 212
Mandel, Charlotte 233, 330
Manson, Douglas 73, 99, 192, 207
Margemont-Robinson, Hugh 76
Mariani, Elizabeth 179
Martin, Camille 8
Maurer, Susan 155
McCollough, Aaron 365
McLennan, Rob 339, 351
Mims, Martha Cinader 158, 169, 261, 334, 397

Mindock, Gloria 98, 186, 295
Monk, Geraldine 21, 84, 104, 105, 129, 293
Mukherjee, Aryanil 148, 149, 254
Murphy, Sheila 38, 242, 360
Nasdor, Marc 93
Nathanson, Tenney 340, 342
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 2, 16, 17, 114, 121, 122, 200, 283, 346
Nicholson, Andy 62, 308
NIELSEN, ALDON L 86
Noonan, T. A. 396
Novack, Carol 77, 203, 358
Oha, Obododimma 139, 239, 241
Orange, Tom 97, 315, 379
Pattisapu, Vijay 300
Phipps, Wanda 218
Pierce, Michelle Naka 363
Piombino, Nicholas 117, 194
Pluto, Anne 314
Press, AWAREing 118, 157
Press, Katalanche 317
Pritts, Nate 234
Project, Poetry 83, 292, 357
Quackenbush, Jason 231
Quartermain, Peter 34
Rippeon, Andrew 123
Ross, Harry 223
Rothenberg, Jerome 39
Rowland, Philip 4, 94
Russell, Steve 9, 10, 11, 18, 36, 51, 52, 63, 135, 214, 224, 225, 252, 273, 285, 369
Al Sadiq, Ismaelia 371
Sanders, James 92, 287
Sarai, Sarah 60, 64, 156
Savage, Thomas 259
Schlueter, Luke 232, 240
Schubert, Karen 278
Schultz, Susan 215
Schultz, Susan Webster 191
Schwabsky, Barry 3, 14, 28, 29, 72, 133, 237, 246, 248, 328
Sherry, James T 213
Side, Jeffrey 177
Siegell, Paul 153
Singler, Fluffy 1, 142
Slaughter, William 277
Smith, John 289
Smith, Rachel Harley 311
Smith, Rod 321
Sondheim, Alan 163, 187, 304, 312, 350
SOUBBOTNIK, Michael A. 178
Sprague, Jane 353
Starr, Ron 318
Stecopoulos, Eleni 324
Steensen,Sasha 171, 180
Strand, Julie 290
Sweeney, Chad 258
Switaj, Elizabeth 161
Tallmo, Karl-Erik 128
Tangney, Shaunanne 176
Terrill, Mark 217
Tieger, Aaron 35, 150, 391
Tietz, Ward 383
Tobin, Adam 134
Traffic, Small Press 23, 45, 91, 245, 327
Trigilio, Tony 382
Truscott, Mark 260
Twshaner 19, 56
UbuWeb 13
Vassilakis, Nico 298, 349
Vincent, Stephen 26, 119, 140, 141, 159, 160, 173, 188, 210, 211, 302
Walker, Sue 31
Warsh, Lewis 208
Watten, Barrett 331
Weishaus, Joel 6, 12
Welford, Gabrielle 244
Wickens, Jessica 125
Wilcox, Dan 110, 219
Wilson, Ian Randall 341
Wong, Lindsay 264
Zawacki, Andrew 310
Zimmerman, Daniel 126, 136, 189

NAMES MENTIONED

Abel, David 56
Abramowitz, Harold 338
Ackerman, Amanda 338
Akhmatova, Anna 283, 289
Ali, Kazim 309
Alice, Mary 277, 295, 308
Allan, Don 290
Allison, Dorothy 309, 321
Alpert, Barry 368
Altieri, Charles 185
Ambrose, Joe 45, 327
Americans, Asian 34, 57, 146, 210, 225, 272, 306, 322, 328, 338
Amerika, Mark 78, 79
Anderson, Erik 56, 278, 331
Andre, Michael 193
Andrews, Bruce 11, 18
Annual, Fulcrum 38, 146, 272
Antin, David 185
Antonakos, Stephen B. 218
Apps, Stan 321
Arbor, Ann 146, 272, 365
Arendt, Hannah 19
Armand, Louis 26, 47, 48, 321
Armantrout, Rae 38, 321
Arnold, Elizabeth 290
Arnold, Matthew 268
Ashbery, John 20, 146, 235, 238, 246, 254, 259, 272, 321, 340, 342, 345

Ashley, Renee 368
Ashley, Robert 193
Atkins, Russell 83, 95
Atlanta, Mark P. 106
Austen, Jane 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 21, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 47, 48, 103
Auster, Paul 10, 11, 17, 18, 20, 63
Austin, Geer 77, 146, 202, 240, 263, 272
Baker, Lori 31
Baldwin, Charles 384
Baldwin, Joshua 71
Baraka, Amiri 74, 327
Barbour, Douglas 368
Barker, Andrew 228, 252, 257, 273
Barnard, Mary 221, 233, 357
Barnett, Anthony 286
Barney, Matthew 336
Basinski, Michael 31, 192, 207, 316, 338, 384
Bataille, George 19
Baudelaire, Charles 146, 272, 321, 323, 352
Beach, James 118, 121, 157
Beckett, Samuel 83, 95
Beckman, Joshua 321, 345
Behrle, Jim 146, 272
Bellamy, Dodie 46, 321
Benjamin, Walter 278, 291
Benka, Jen 146, 272
Bennett, Jim 368
Bergvall, Caroline 321
Berkeley, Michael 56, 146, 202, 258, 272, 337, 385
Berlin, Irving 217, 306, 327
Bernstein, Emma 208, 321
Berrigan, Anselm 11, 18, 19, 245, 302, 303, 306, 315, 319, 320, 321, 322, 328, 338
Berrigan, Edmund 321
Berrigan, Ted 34
Berry, Jake 10, 17
Biddinger, Mary 309
Bircumshaw, David 165, 368
Birmingham, Jed 146, 260, 272
Bishop, Elizabeth 146, 272
Blake, William 60, 268
Bloom, Harold 51
Bloom, Molly 132, 141, 143, 159
Boat, Drunken 81, 283, 289, 323, 352
Bolano, Roberto 26, 47, 48
Bolton, Ken 382
Borges, Millicent 101
Borzutsky, Daniel 151
Botta, Tim 365
Bourdieu, Pierre 19
Bowen, David 263
Bowie, David 146, 272
Boyer, Anne 321, 364, 367
Boykoff, Jules 56, 321
Bozek, Jessica 123
Bozicevic, Ana 323, 352
Bradley, Tom 263
Brazil, David 132, 141, 143, 146, 159, 272
Brecht, Bertolt 193, 225, 290
Brennan, Joe 263
Brockwell, Stephen 351
Brogan, Sharon 368
Brooks, Gwendolyn 279, 299
Brown, Ann 146, 272
Browne, Colin 54, 65, 83, 95, 338
Browning, Robert 204
Bryant, Dana 321, 382
Bryant, Tisa 83, 95, 146, 272
Bukowski, Charles 10, 11, 17, 18, 20, 268
Bunting, Basil 265
Burns, Robert 181
Burroughs, William S. 132, 141, 143, 159, 327, 382
Buscemi, Steve 206, 327
Bush, George 302, 303, 306, 315, 319, 320, 322, 328
Byrne, Mairead 31
Cafe, Poets 65, 95, 115
Cage, John 13, 160
Campbell, Jeremy 380
Cannon, Steve 54, 65, 83, 95
Capen, Samuel P. 265
Caples, Garrett 321
Carlin, George 15, 22, 30, 113, 138
Carlos, William 7, 71
Carlstrom, Todd 146, 272
Carr, Michael 150, 317
Carragon, Patricia 381
Carter, Angela 234
Casey, Sean 146, 272, 366
Celan, Paul 175, 283, 289
Cendrars, Blaise 290
Cervantes, James 25, 26, 36, 47, 48
Chace, Joel 384
Chandler, Raymond 306
Chapman, Patrick 384
Cheney, Dick 338
Chernoff, Maxine 338
Chester, Jeff 25, 26, 36, 47, 48, 278, 382
Cirelli, Michael 54, 65, 83, 95
Clare, John 54, 65, 83, 95
Clark, Emilie 208, 321
Clinton, Bill 387
Close, Chuck 146, 272
Cluff, Caleb 368
Cohen, Ethan 146, 272, 305
Cohen, Julia 146, 272
Colby, Todd 83, 95, 146, 272
Coleman, Jen 57, 204, 321
Coletti, John 146, 202, 272
Collins, Martha 365
Conner, Bruce 10, 17

Connor, Bruce 336
Conrad, Joseph 132, 141, 143, 159
Cook, Peter 382
Coolidge, Clark 61, 72, 73, 80, 392
Cooper, Dennis 154, 276
Cooperman, Matthew 365
Coover, Robert 240
Cordelli, Phil 263
Coultas, Brenda 54, 65, 83, 95
County, Madison 7, 71, 132, 141, 143, 159
Coyote, Peter 358, 360
Crane, Lee 146, 154, 272
Crangle, Sara 286
Creeley, Robert 56, 146, 212, 272
Cross, Michael 146, 202, 272
Cunningham, John 321
Cunningham, Mark 205, 263, 321
Curtis, Dana 81
Cycholl, Garin 362
Darwish, Mahmoud 74
Davenport, Steve 325
Davies, Kevin 321
Davis, Martin 175, 278, 309, 318, 321, 384
Dawson, Nancy 146, 272, 366
Deed, Martha 154
Dennis, Carl 77, 91, 219
Derrida, Jacques 13, 266, 270
Dewey, John 369, 370, 376, 379
Dickenson, Emily 135
Dickinson, Mark 71
Dine, Jim 56
Dixon, Nancy 366
Dizozza, Peter 366
Doina, Ana 193
Doller, Sandra 45
Donnelly, Timothy 308
Donovan, Thom 146, 272
Doris, Stacy 384
Downey, Jeff 146, 272
Downing, Brandon 365
Doyle, Erica 115
Drescher, Julia 123, 202
Ducharme, Mark 384
Duhamel, Denise 278
Dumanis, Michael 309
Dunn, Robert 381
Durand, Marcella 83, 95, 292, 321
Durgin, Patrick F. 362
Dworkin, Craig 321, 362
Eckes, Ryan 146, 272
Eggers, Dave 240
Eigner, Larry 56
Elezabeth, Anne 314
Eli, Noah 364, 367
Eliot, George 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 47, 48, 103, 160
Eliot, Joe 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 47, 48, 103, 225
Eliot, T. S. 240
Ellen, Mary 91, 382
Elliot, Joe 361
Elrick, Laura 19
Emanuel, Lynn 53, 59
Emerson, Claudia 83, 95
England, Amy 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 47, 48, 103, 146, 260, 272, 290, 293, 333, 383
Enzminger, Ann 146, 272
Ernst, Max 73, 358, 360
Espada, Martin 211
Esther, Little 361
Etter, Carrie 205
Eugene, Brett 19, 56
Evans, Bill 321, 368
Evans, Brett 366
Evans, Dan 361
Eyre, Jane 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 47, 48, 103
Falk, Jane 382
Farrah, George J. 263
Farris, John 83, 95
Faulkner, William 26, 47, 48, 83, 95
Featherston, Dan 345
Felix, Joel 333
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 366, 382
Ferrini, Henry 282
Finch, Annie 53, 59, 202, 362, 385
Fink, Thomas 263
Finlay, Ian Hamilton 357
Finnegan, James 165
Fiorini, Jessica 165
Firestone, Jennifer 146, 272, 353
Fishback, Dan 146, 272, 366
Fitterman, Robert 331
Flynn, Sean 165
Forche, Carolyn 233
Foreman, Richard 92, 99, 118, 121, 228, 252, 257, 273
Forrest, Lisa 154, 384
Foster, David 230, 231, 232, 237, 239, 240, 241
Foster, Edward 146, 272
Foster, Paul 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 47, 48, 103, 240, 306
Foucault, Michel 321
Foust, Graham 321
Fox, Skip 384
France, Peter 64, 146, 168, 173, 177, 187, 189, 260, 272, 292, 306, 321
Franco, James 348
Fraser, Gregory 389
Fraser, Kathleen 34, 53, 59
Freeland, Charles 263
Freind, Bill 364, 367, 384
Friedlander, Benjamin 321

Friedman, David M. 11, 18, 382
Fuchs, Greg 202
Fulton, Alice 115
Gallagher, Kristen 19
Garcia, Rodrigo 348
Gardner, Janet 165, 202
Garr, Megan M. 247
Gelsinger, Eric 146, 272
Genet, Jean 25, 26, 36, 47, 48
Giffin, Lawrence 205
Gilbert, Alan 175
Gilbert, Susan 321
Gillespie, William 205
Ginsberg, Allen 10, 11, 17, 18, 20, 83, 95, 146, 272, 321, 327, 366, 382
Gizzi, Michael 321
Gizzi, Peter 321
Glissant, Édouard 329, 362
Glomski, Chris 365
Godfrey, John 321, 357
Golaski, Adam 146, 272
Golata, Russ 167, 267, 268
Goldberg, Ariel 123
Goldman, Judith 362
Goldsmith, Kenneth 73, 321
Gontarek, Leonard 263
Gonzalez, Ray 348
Goode, Chris 34, 228, 252, 257, 273
Goodman, Amy 41, 57
Goodman, Craig 57
Gordon, Nada 11
Gordon, Robert 18, 265, 313, 364, 367
Gottlieb, Michael 321
Gould, Glenn 150
Grace, Nancy M. 382
Graham, Lea 221, 333
Gray, Stephanie 146, 272, 361
Green, Adam 146, 272
Greenberg, Arielle 338
Greenstreet, Kate 338
Greenwald, Ted 55, 321, 384
Gregory, Dick 186
Grenier, Bob 56, 323, 352, 378
Grenier, Robert 56
Gridley, Sarah 309
Griffin, Tim 146, 260, 272, 366
Gunn, Thom 309
Guthrie, Annie 7
Hadbawnik, David 146, 272
Hall, Allen 184, 278, 309
Hall, Lind 332
Halpern, Greg 321
Halsey, Alan 293
Hamill, Janet 146, 272
Hamill, Meg 364, 367
Hardin, Rob 46
Harper, Michael 382
Harris, Kaplan 236, 240
Harryman, Carla 331, 338
Hartman, Charles O. 185
Harvey, James 71
Hass, Robert 258
Hav, Niels 10, 17
Hawking, Stephen 212
Hawkins, Jeremy 321
Hawthorne, Nathaniel 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 34, 36, 47, 48, 103
Hayes, Jared 309, 345
Heaney, Seamus 227
Heights, Jackson 365
Hejinian, Lynn 34, 202, 321, 331
Henderson, David 263
Henriksen, Matthew 44
Herbert, George 146, 272
Hernandez, David 338
Hernandez, Victor 146, 272
Herron, Patrick 181
Hershon, Bob 11, 18
Hewicker, Scott 91
Higgins, Billy 361
Highfill, Mitch 321
Highsmith, David 263
Hill, Robert 309
Hillman, Brenda 258, 321
Hinton, Laura 263
Hirsch, Edward 361
Hofer, Jen 321, 338, 362, 364, 365, 367
Holley, Sharon 154
Hollo, Anselm 34, 290
Holloway, Rob 146, 272, 385
Holman, Bob 39, 40, 42, 43, 49, 62, 66, 70, 83, 95, 146, 272, 327
Horton, David 386
House, Poets 65, 95, 146, 272
House, White 322, 328, 329, 338
Howard, Peter 368
Howard, Scott 228, 252, 257, 273, 309, 397
Howe, Bill 19
Hughes, Peter 253
Hunt, Ian 248
Hunt, Tim 382
Hunter, Robert 146, 184, 272
Iijima, Brenda 260, 391
Indiana, Gary 206
Indiana, Robert 81, 332
Ireland, Lauren 292
Irvine, James 309
Israel, David 168, 173
Israeli, Henry 168, 173, 210, 322, 328
Ives, Lucy 365
Jackson, Janet 368
Jackson, Jesse 272
Jackson, Michael 181
Jaffe, Harold 358

Jaffe, Larry 358, 360
Jarnot, Lisa 321
Jeffery, Mark 146, 272, 292
Jenkins, Matthew 278
Johnson, Kent 101, 309, 384
Johnson, Robert 4, 15, 22, 24, 29, 30, 37, 101, 113, 138, 193, 225, 303, 309, 315, 319, 320, 322, 328, 354, 367, 368, 382
Johnston, Daniel 332
Jones, Brian 118, 121, 385
Jorgensen, Alex 31
Joseph, Safdie 32, 154, 253, 265, 380
Joyce, James 13
Joyce, Trevor 13, 26, 47, 48, 52, 60, 368, 380
Jung, Carl 268
Kalamaras, George 81
Kathryn, Mary 110
Katz, Eliot 208, 366
Kaufman, Bob 382
Kaufman, Erica 83, 95, 275, 316, 382
Kaufman, Robert 337
Keene, John 146, 272
Kelleher, Mike 19
Keller, Helen 364, 367
Kelley, Mike 64, 68
Kelly, Patrick 283, 289
Kelsey, Karla 146, 272, 365
Kennedy, David 115
Keppler, Joe 291
Keppler, Joseph F. 291
Kerouac, Jack 146, 167, 267, 272, 290, 321, 327, 382
Kerry, John 71, 184
Kim, Myung Mi 282
Kinsella, John 368
Kirschenbaum, David A. 146, 202, 272, 366
Klane, Matthew 338
Klein, Lucas 71, 345, 361
Klein, Naomi 168, 173, 306
Knox, Jennifer L. 116
Krieger, Ben 366
Krugman, Paul 306
Kushner, Bill 54, 65, 83, 95, 146, 272
Kyger, Joanne 321, 382
Lakoff, George 181
Lamoureux, Mark 146, 205, 272
Lampert, Andrew 361
Lang, Eugene 146, 193, 272
Larkin, Maryrose 56
Larkin, Peter 368
Laughlin, James 71
Lavender, Bill 201
League, Little 93
Lease, Joseph 365
Lederer, Katy 309
Lehman, David 78, 79
Leigh, Mike 132, 141, 143, 159, 381
Leno, Jay 366
Leonard, Tom 212
Lerner, Ben 382
Levine, Jeffrey 308
Levitsky, Rachel 146, 272
Levy, Andrew 362
Lewis, Bernard 123, 146, 253, 272, 316, 364, 367, 380
Licht, Alan 361
Limon, Ada 116
Liu, Timothy 146, 272
Livia, Anna 13
Loden, Rachel 368
Logan, William 253, 255
London, Frank 34, 223, 225, 227, 228, 248, 252, 257, 273, 333, 363
London, Jack 132, 141, 143, 159
Lorber, Brendan 292
Lorca, Federico García 283, 289, 348
Lorde, Audre 115
Louise, Bobbie 321
Mac Low, Jackson 321
Lowenthal, Jessica 283, 289
Luoma, Bill 321
Lynch, David 181
Lyons, Kimberly 11, 18
Madison, James 205, 297
Magi, Jill 54, 65, 83, 95
Malcolm, Janet 21, 25, 26, 36, 47, 48, 132, 141, 143, 159
Malina, Judith 284
Mangold, Sarah 56, 202
Manning, Nicholas 194, 200
Manson, Doug 146, 272
Marcacci, Bob 368
Marie, Anne 13, 77, 263
Marie, Joshua 146, 272, 278, 338
Marsh, Bill 146, 272, 345
Marshall, Robert 146, 272
Martin, Chris 54, 65, 83, 95
Marvin, Lee 32
Marx, Karl 333
Mason, George 7
Mason, Janet 366
Maud, Ralph 321
Maxwell, Andrew 56, 202, 313, 323, 352, 378
Maxwell, Susan 365
McCaffery, Steve 34, 282
Mead, Taylor 146, 206, 272, 308
Mees, Amy 202
Meltzer, David 382
Melville, Nicky 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 34, 36, 47, 48, 103, 146, 272, 321
Menendez, Didi 165, 384
Meng, Catherine 150
Merwin, W. S. 10, 11, 17, 18, 20
Mesmer, Sharon 146, 263, 272

Metres, Philip 338
Middleton, Christopher 321
Milford, Joe 263
Miller, David 248
Miller, Henry 336
Miller, Paul D. 74, 208, 278, 321
Milton, John 25, 26, 36, 47, 48, 306
Mirakove, Carol 146, 272
Miriam, Erica 146, 272, 382
Mitchell, Joan 71
Mohammad, Kasey 321
Moody, Rick 13
Moore, Allison 327
Morgan, Bill 321
Morgan, Edwin 146, 272
Morgan, Robin 248
Morris, Daniel 263
Morrow, Charlie 39, 40, 42, 43, 49, 62, 66, 70
Morton, Kathryn A. 193, 362
Motika, Stephen 54, 65
Moure, Erin 260
Moxley, Jennifer 321
Mueller, Ursula 146, 272
Muldoon, Paul 100
Mulligan, Jennifer 351
Murphy, Sheila E. 38, 205, 242, 249, 358, 360, 368
Murray, Ian 227
Mycue, Edward 165
Myles, Eileen 146, 272, 321, 345
Nester, Daniel 146, 272
Nichols, Travis 321
Nicole, Anna 260
Niedecker, Lorine 321
Nielsen, Aldon L. 86, 87
Nixon, Richard 306
Noel, Urayoan 77
Notley, Alice 321
Nowak, Mark 309
Obadike, Keith 181
Obenzinger, Hilton 210
Oliver, John 327
Olsen, Geoffrey 150, 391
Olsen, Lance 391
Olson, Charles 282
Olson, Kirby 282
Ondaatje, Michael 380
Oppen, George 321
Orser, Kristen 364, 367
Ortiz, Travis 202
Ouzoonian, Amy 54, 65, 83, 95
Ovid 146, 272
Owens, Richard 265, 384
Pacific, Asian 46, 56, 115, 146, 156, 210, 272, 387
Padgett, Ron 83, 95
Paige, Abby 263
Palin, Sarah 86, 87, 104, 107, 114, 117, 119, 120, 122, 124, 126, 129, 131, 133, 140, 142, 157, 159, 168, 173, 181, 196, 302, 303, 306, 315, 319, 320, 322, 326, 328, 354, 367, 369, 370, 376, 378, 379
Palm, Kristin 353
Palmer, Michael 258, 321
Paloff, Benjamin 365
Parish, Jefferson 54, 65, 83, 95
Parker, Charlie 103
Parker, Michael 7
Parrish, Gary 202
Parrish, Katherine 321, 327
Patchen, Kenneth 146, 272
Paulenich, Craig 309
Pavelich, David 362
Pearson, Ted 331
Perelman, Bob 208
Perez, Jamie 313
Perkins, Stephen 82
Perloff, Marjorie 201, 321, 322, 328
Pessoa, Fernando 260
Peterson, Katie 278
Pettet, Simon 11, 18, 146, 208, 272
Peyrafitte, Nicole 39, 40, 42, 43, 49, 62, 66, 70, 175
Phillip, Andrew 146, 272
Phillips, Beth 368
Phillips, Lance 384
Pickard, Tom 290
Pierce, Scott 202
Pilger, John 307
Pinter, Harold 307
Place, Vanessa 321, 338
Pluto, Annie 314
Poe, Deborah 278
Pollack, Jackson 368
Pollock, Jackson 83, 95, 285
Portugal, Anne 146, 260, 272
Potter, Steve 91
Pound, Ezra 71, 265
Powell, Ren 258, 309
Prevallet, Kristen 54, 65, 83, 95
Di Prima, Diane 382
Pringle, Kathryn 146, 202, 272
Pritchett, Pat 321
Prize, Henry 358, 360
Professor, Kelly 86, 87
Purcell, Jack 339
Pusateri, Chris 384
Pynchon, Thomas 240
Quarles, Lanny 321
Quinn, Alice 308
Raddatz, Martha 338
Raines, Franklin 303, 315, 319, 320, 322, 328
Rakosi, Carl 321
Ramos, Peter 384

Rankine, Claudia 53, 59
Rasula, Jed 310, 321
Raven, Francis 38, 263, 333
Reed, Lou 146
Reese, Marshall 91
Reeves, Jennifer 396
Regan, Matthias 389
Reich, Steve 92, 99, 118, 121
Reilly, Evelyn 260
Retallack, Joan 321
Reverdy, Pierre 321
Rexilius, Andrea 146, 202, 272
Reyes, Louis 386
Reznikoff, Charles 19
Richards, Brian 165, 368
Riley, Denise 154
Riley, Peter 368
Riley, Terry 382
Rilke, Rainer Maria 225
Rimbaud, Dee 25, 26, 36, 47, 48, 281, 333
Rizzo, Christopher 263
Robbins, Bruce 316
Roberts, Gary 380
Robertson, Lisa 321
Robinson, Kit 19, 331
Rohrer, Matthew 146, 272
Rollins, Henry 268
Roosevelt, Franklin 306
Roth, Philip 150
Rothenberg, Diane 39, 40, 42, 43, 62, 70
Rothenberg, Jerry 42, 49, 66, 201, 321
Roubaud, Jacques 14, 16, 25, 26, 28, 36, 47, 48
Roy, Camille 146, 272
Rumble, Ken 146, 202, 272
Russo, Linda 123, 382
Sailers, Cynthia 385
Salinger, Michael 278
Scalapino, Leslie 91, 321, 362
Schickling, Jared 384
Schlesinger, Kyle 146, 272, 362, 384
Schmidt, Paul 123
Schneiderman, Jason 384
Schultz, Lou 191, 338
Schuyler, James 146, 272
Schwartz, Gerald 368
Schwitters, Kurt 73
Severin, Melissa 151
Shakespeare, William 121, 146, 225, 272, 284
Shaner, Tim 19
Shapiro, David 71, 101, 308, 361, 384
Sharma, Prageeta 83, 95
Shaw, Lytle 321
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 168, 173, 361
Shepard, Sam 225, 306
Shepherd, Reginald 199, 230, 232, 237, 345
Sherlock, Frank 253, 255, 345, 366
Sherman, Cindy 81, 306
Shihab, Naomi 74
Shmailo, Larissa 323, 352, 368
Shurin, Aaron 327
Siegel, Nathaniel 54, 65, 345, 366
Sikelianos, Eleni 171, 180, 321
Siken, Richard 309
Sikkema, Michael 316
Silem, Kasey 321
Silliman, Ron 11, 18, 60, 201, 242, 249, 321, 331
Simmons, Diane 278
Simon, Greg 395
Simon, Rachel M. 54, 65, 83, 95
Simon, Toni 146, 272
Simone, Frank 83, 95, 362
Simpson, Louis 303, 315, 319, 320, 322, 328
Sirois, Justin 384
Skinner, Jonathan 278, 321
Skoulding, Zoe 165
Smith, Hazel 165
Smith, Tracy K. 54, 83
Snyder, Gary 382
Sonnenberg, Kerri 362
Spahr, Boyd 19
Spahr, Juliana 34, 338
Spektor, Regina 146, 272
Stackhouse, Christopher 146, 272
Stanford, Frank 44
Stanton, Rob 116, 146, 272
Stefans, Kim 321
Stein, Gertrude 95, 306, 321
Stempleman, Jordan 165, 384
Stevens, Wallace 135, 146, 272, 380
Stewart, Jon 165, 322, 328
Stonecipher, Donna 106
Stratton, Dirk 205
Strickland, Stephanie 185
Stroffolino, Chris 19
Sullivan, Andrew 321
Sullivan, Gary 11, 18, 321
Svalina, Mathias 146, 272
Swensen, Cole 282, 321
Szymaszek, Stacy 11, 18, 54, 65, 83, 95, 146, 272, 316, 338
Tabios, Eileen 384
Taggart, John 263
Tardos, Anne 321, 361
Tarkos, Christophe 260
Taylor, Catherine 321
Taylor, Tom 368
Tesser, Marjorie 146, 272
Texas, Irving 25, 26, 36, 46, 47, 48, 132, 141, 143, 159, 202, 210, 313, 322, 323, 328, 352, 382
Theater, Poets 91
Thomas, Dylan 71, 154, 259, 278, 361

Thompson, Jim 25, 26, 36, 47, 48
Thomson, Stephen 286
Thorson, Maureen 146, 272
Tipton, John 146, 272
Toscano, Rodrigo 83, 95, 253
Towle, Tony 11, 18
Tranter, John 254, 259, 368
Trevor, Jesse 259
Tribune, Chicago 290
Trinidad, David 146, 272, 292
Turing, Alan 305
Tursi, Mark 384
Twain, Mark 333
Tyler, Richard 234
Unger, Brian 208
Updike, John 240
Upton, Lawrence 368
Valentine, Jean 56
Vallejo, César 334
Vazquez, Lourdes 313
Venturi, Robert 51
Vermont, Charlie 7, 168, 173
Veronica, Angela 286
Vincent, Gregory 165
Virgil 323, 352
Waber, Dan 123
Wagner, Catherine 177, 187, 189
Wagner, Mark 202
Waldman, Anne 282, 327
Waldman, Ken 321
Waldor, Peter 277
Waldrop, Keith 321
Walker, Laura 368
Wallace, George 306
Wallace, Mark 321
Wallace, Nicole 71, 230, 231, 232, 237, 239, 240, 241, 263
Warhol, Andy 46, 146, 206, 272, 308, 340, 342
Washington, George 32, 56, 63, 146, 197, 204, 210, 272, 290, 293, 306, 315, 320, 322, 328, 382
Wasserman, Ann 186
Watson, Scott 361, 389
Wayne, John 206
Weber, Damian 146, 272
Weinberger, Eliot 321
Weiner, Hannah 83
Weiner, Lawrence 95
Weiser, Karen 357
Weiss, Mark 368
Welch, Jen 361, 382
Welch, Lew 382
Weldon, Rebecca 7
Wertheim, Christine 46
Whalen, Philip 146, 272
Wharton, Samuel 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 47, 48, 103
Whitehead, Gregory 13
Whitehead, Ron 13
Whitman, Walt 64, 69, 146, 162, 168, 173, 240, 268, 272, 306, 385
Wilkinson, John 146, 272, 278, 338
Williams, Hank 385
Williams, Paul O. 13, 19, 71
Williams, Tyrone 10, 17
Williams, William Carlos 13, 71
Willis, Elizabeth 321
Withers, Meg 165
Wolfe, Thomas 263
Wolman, Kenneth 368
Woodward, Jon 365
Woolf, Virginia 26, 47, 48
Wright, C. D. 101, 115, 320
Wright, Charles 258
Wright, James 233
Yankelevich, Matvei 208
Young, Stephanie 386
Zappa, Frank 116
Zapruder, Matthew 345
Zavatsky, Bill 71
Zinnes, Harriet 368
Zukofsky, Louis 265, 321
Zurawski, Magdalena 146, 272
Žižek, Slavoj 85

CONCEPTS

9/11 53, 59, 77, 154, 193, 211, 217, 306
Activism and protest 55, 58, 64, 67, 283, 289, 327, 366
Aesthetics 38, 146, 240, 272, 291, 382
Affect 337
Afghanistan 74, 102, 111, 168, 173, 210, 306, 322, 328
African American poetry 115, 154, 315, 320
Anthologies 62, 70, 74, 78, 79, 81, 115, 146, 162, 165, 167, 175, 201, 204, 219, 267, 272, 283, 289, 292, 295, 321, 323, 327, 345, 352, 357, 358, 360, 361, 362, 366, 368
Appropriation 73, 80, 88, 108, 127, 132, 141, 143, 147, 159, 173, 396
Archives and libraries 34, 56, 85, 115, 146, 154, 182, 221, 253, 265, 272, 279, 309, 322, 323, 328, 332, 352, 366, 382
Autobiography 13, 101, 115, 146, 240, 272, 309, 313, 331, 382, 385
Avant-garde 23, 101, 146, 240, 265, 272, 321, 361, 362, 382, 396
Beat generation 382
Beauty 73, 146, 206, 272, 321, 337
Biography 71, 81, 366
Black Mountain 382
Blogs 6, 12, 15, 20, 22, 23, 27, 30, 34, 35, 39, 40, 42, 43, 45, 49, 55, 57, 58, 62, 65, 66, 67, 69, 70, 73, 75, 80, 83, 86, 87, 91, 95, 99, 101, 108, 113, 118, 119, 121, 123, 127,

138, 140, 141, 143, 146, 149, 153, 155, 158, 159, 160, 162, 165, 168, 169, 170, 173, 174, 175, 181, 184, 188, 192, 194, 196, 197, 198, 200, 202, 204, 205, 207, 211, 221, 227, 228, 230, 232, 234, 237, 238, 245, 246, 249, 252, 254, 257, 259, 261, 264, 271, 272, 273, 280, 302, 303, 306, 308, 313, 315, 317, 319, 320, 322, 327, 328, 329, 333, 334, 336, 339, 341, 344, 345, 349, 351, 353, 354, 364, 366, 367, 368, 371, 372, 373, 374, 377, 385, 390, 393, 394, 397, 398
Book announcements 35, 78, 79, 123, 146, 153, 174, 184, 185, 191, 193, 204, 207, 215, 217, 218, 222, 234, 242, 249, 260, 272, 281, 292, 309, 313, 327, 333, 357, 362, 366, 372, 396
Bookstores 1, 41, 74, 125, 130, 132, 135, 138, 139, 141, 143, 156, 159, 217, 231, 258, 321, 337, 345, 350, 385, 389
Calls for submissions 19, 27, 125, 130, 135, 138, 139, 156, 161, 205, 256, 286, 334, 358, 396
Capitalism 19, 56, 168, 173, 210, 322, 328, 333
Censorship 146, 164, 272, 292, 336
Cities 1, 7, 41, 78, 79, 83, 95, 116, 140, 146, 168, 173, 193, 204, 206, 272, 353, 356, 362, 366, 385
Class 210
Climate 56, 190
Close reading 286
Collage and montage 61, 72, 73, 80, 88, 92, 99, 105, 118, 121, 128, 132, 141, 143, 144, 146, 147, 159, 194, 200, 203, 235, 238, 246, 254, 259, 269, 272, 311, 335, 358
Conceptual writing 73
Conferences and festivals 7, 44, 53, 54, 56, 59, 65, 71, 83, 91, 95, 115, 146, 154, 183, 244, 253, 256, 272, 282, 286, 310, 316, 329, 332, 338, 339, 355, 356, 366, 377, 380, 382, 383
Copyright and permissions 61, 72, 73, 80, 88, 92, 99, 101, 105, 118, 121, 128, 132, 141, 143, 144, 147, 159, 168, 173, 182, 325, 333
Craft 158, 169, 240, 332
Creative writing pedagogy 31, 146, 201, 256, 272, 288, 309
Deconstruction 108, 127, 212
Difficulty 132, 141, 143, 146, 159, 272, 362
Digital archives 13, 66, 146, 250, 272, 323, 348, 352, 366, 378
Disability 23
Dreams 44, 56, 103, 132, 141, 143, 146, 159, 184, 210, 272, 281, 309, 333, 366, 369, 370, 371, 373, 376, 378, 379, 382, 384
Ecology and ecopoetics 46, 73, 260, 292, 313, 382
Editing 56, 78, 79, 146, 182, 204, 240, 260, 265, 272, 283, 289, 397
Ekphrasis 146, 272, 396
Electronic poetry and hypertext 39, 40, 42, 43, 49, 62, 66, 70, 121, 146, 196, 272, 311, 345
Elegy 73
Empire and imperialism 81, 101, 325, 326, 336
Epic 44, 52, 60, 146, 272, 284, 353
Erasure 266, 270
Ethics 260
Experimental poetry 38, 46, 56, 146, 168, 201, 272, 288, 362
Fascism 101, 210, 284, 322, 328
Feminism 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 46, 47, 48, 103, 146, 221, 272, 294
Film 13, 77, 121, 132, 141, 143, 146, 154, 159, 170, 172, 195, 203, 206, 240, 253, 255, 263, 268, 272, 282, 292, 304, 306, 316, 336, 358, 361, 373, 382, 387
Flarf 73
Formalism 86, 87, 107, 114, 117, 119, 120, 122, 124, 126, 129, 131, 133, 134, 136, 137, 140, 142, 157, 164, 168, 173, 248
Free speech 73, 251, 287
Free verse 313, 362
Futurism 323, 352
Gender 115, 210, 382
Ghazal 184
Globalization 320
Grants and funding 7, 10, 11, 17, 18, 20, 23, 74, 115, 116, 146, 168, 173, 272, 322, 327, 328, 366, 389, 392
Haiku 7, 244, 357, 382
Humour and satire 101, 146, 206, 240, 272, 302, 303, 306, 315, 319, 320, 322, 328, 366
Ideology 168, 173, 210, 320, 321
Improvisation 61, 72, 73, 80, 153, 185, 206, 356, 382
Interviews 90, 98, 118, 121, 146, 221, 240, 254, 259, 272, 288, 321, 351, 358, 360, 373, 390, 395
Israel and Palestine 74, 146, 168, 173, 175, 210, 272, 322, 328
Language poetry 56, 322, 328, 331
Latino and Latin American poetry 7, 313
Letters and correspondence 23, 73, 175, 313, 321, 362
List moderation 71, 78, 79, 146, 204, 272, 283, 289, 299
Little magazines 7, 19, 31, 38, 56, 61, 72, 73, 78, 79, 80, 82, 115, 116, 123, 125, 128, 130, 132, 135, 138, 139, 141, 143, 146, 156, 159, 191, 193, 203, 208, 215, 217, 221, 240, 247, 253, 265, 272, 277, 278, 283, 289, 292, 301, 302, 303, 306, 309, 311, 315, 319, 320, 322, 328, 334, 351,

353, 357, 358, 360, 362, 383, 387
Lyric poetry 150, 260, 351, 366
Memory 71, 101, 103, 108, 127, 146, 272, 281, 331, 333, 337, 358, 360
MFA programs 7, 78, 79, 80, 83, 95, 106, 115, 116, 167, 184, 245, 253, 267, 290, 295, 301, 313, 316, 323, 327, 352, 380, 395
Modernism 265, 286
Mourning and loss 25, 26, 36, 47, 48, 193, 231, 240
Multiculturalism 295
Music and poetry 13, 38, 55, 56, 58, 60, 67, 69, 71, 73, 77, 83, 95, 118, 121, 128, 132, 141, 143, 146, 154, 158, 159, 169, 172, 185, 195, 202, 203, 221, 223, 225, 227, 228, 231, 242, 245, 249, 252, 257, 272, 273, 274, 284, 290, 309, 321, 323, 327, 333, 352, 356, 361, 362, 366, 382, 387, 397
Nationalism 265, 368
Nature 101, 103, 121, 217, 287, 292, 306, 322, 328, 382
Negativity and refusal 19, 185
New York School 146, 272
Objectivism 265
Oulipo 292
Performance and the poetry reading 7, 23, 53, 54, 56, 59, 65, 71, 74, 78, 79, 83, 95, 106, 146, 154, 158, 167, 169, 179, 213, 218, 219, 253, 255, 260, 261, 267, 268, 272, 292, 309, 316, 327, 334, 345, 349, 358, 360, 362, 378, 382, 387, 397
Philosophy 7, 11, 18, 25, 26, 36, 38, 47, 48, 88, 201, 206, 240, 286, 291
Place and region 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 22, 25, 26, 30, 36, 47, 48, 103, 146, 193, 272, 382
Poet laureate 83, 95, 244, 333
Poetics 34, 42, 56, 73, 78, 79, 83, 95, 146, 159, 163, 166, 178, 180, 183, 201, 204, 207, 232, 237, 240, 245, 253, 254, 259, 260, 272, 277, 283, 288, 289, 290, 291, 311, 313, 316, 321, 327, 331, 340, 342, 351, 382, 384, 386
Politics and poetry 302, 303, 306, 315, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 328, 333, 345, 366
Print vs. digital 34, 49, 51, 56, 65, 66, 74, 101, 132, 141, 143, 146, 159, 165, 180, 191, 215, 242, 249, 253, 263, 272, 283, 289, 292, 293, 305, 312, 314, 316, 321, 366, 368, 382
Prizes and awards 7, 71, 78, 79, 83, 95, 106, 116, 146, 174, 186, 204, 221, 253, 260, 272, 290, 292, 309, 313, 323, 332, 336, 352, 357, 358, 360, 362, 383, 385
Procedural and constraint writing 248
Prose poem 78, 79, 116, 146, 272, 384
Queer poetics 23, 115, 156, 181, 190, 366, 385
Race and poetry 132, 141, 143, 146, 159, 168, 173, 210, 272, 296, 352, 362
Reading announcements 7, 53, 78, 79, 110, 184, 208, 290, 309, 347, 351, 353, 382
Religion and the sacred 13, 39, 40, 42, 43, 49, 62, 66, 70, 146, 156, 175, 208, 210, 231, 272, 276, 292, 305, 306, 309, 322, 327, 328, 329, 371, 382
Representation 248
Reviewing and criticism 2, 3, 14, 15, 16, 20, 22, 25, 26, 30, 34, 36, 38, 47, 48, 56, 77, 78, 79, 81, 91, 103, 109, 116, 146, 167, 184, 194, 200, 201, 203, 204, 217, 221, 240, 248, 259, 260, 267, 272, 277, 286, 313, 321, 323, 325, 340, 342, 345, 352, 354, 357, 358, 360, 362, 366, 372, 385, 395
Revision 331
San Francisco Renaissance 382
School of Quietude 10, 17
Science 189, 212, 240
Serial poem 146, 184, 185, 201, 265, 272, 292
Sestina 144
Small press publishing 7, 23, 44, 45, 56, 74, 78, 79, 91, 110, 123, 146, 150, 171, 180, 186, 192, 202, 204, 207, 209, 217, 221, 242, 245, 249, 253, 255, 260, 265, 272, 292, 302, 303, 306, 313, 315, 317, 319, 320, 322, 323, 327, 328, 337, 339, 351, 352, 357, 358, 360, 362, 366, 385, 387, 391, 392
Social media 32, 60, 64, 68, 73, 93, 99, 118, 121, 146, 154, 156, 170, 179, 192, 202, 207, 218, 253, 272, 316, 366, 380
Software and code 23, 245, 287, 334
Sonnet 34, 144, 293, 309
Sound poetry 31
Subjectivity 74, 175, 197, 266, 270, 336, 358, 360
Sublime 132, 141, 143, 159
Surrealism 132, 141, 143, 159, 254, 259
Terrorism 240, 322, 328
The academy 6, 7, 10, 11, 12, 17, 18, 19, 31, 38, 53, 56, 59, 81, 83, 86, 87, 88, 95, 106, 109, 116, 146, 167, 176, 178, 181, 183, 186, 193, 201, 204, 210, 221, 223, 225, 227, 228, 245, 251, 252, 257, 264, 265, 267, 272, 273, 275, 278, 282, 283, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 292, 301, 303, 309, 310, 313, 314, 315, 319, 320, 322, 323, 327, 328, 332, 337, 351, 352, 356, 357, 358, 360, 362, 374, 382, 383, 385, 395
The body 27
The canon 265
The internet 7, 88, 125, 130, 135, 138, 139, 146, 147, 155, 162, 238, 242, 246, 249, 254, 259, 261, 272, 305, 311, 323, 324, 334, 336, 346, 350, 352, 371, 374

The Iraq war 74, 147, 168, 173, 210, 306, 338, 373
The listserv 7, 11, 18, 31, 32, 33, 78, 79, 80, 81, 83, 95, 146, 148, 149, 154, 204, 236, 240, 253, 255, 269, 272, 292, 316, 325, 326, 332, 335, 357, 368, 380
The New Sentence 168, 173
Theatre 23, 58, 67, 83, 91, 95, 106, 115, 118, 121, 146, 158, 169, 225, 228, 245, 252, 256, 257, 272, 273, 275, 284, 297, 309, 323, 327, 334, 348, 352, 366, 382
Torture and Abu Ghraib 101, 168, 173, 211, 306
Translation 10, 11, 17, 18, 20, 26, 47, 48, 56, 121, 125, 130, 135, 138, 139, 146, 148, 165, 168, 173, 201, 218, 233, 260, 272, 283, 289, 290, 292, 309, 310, 313, 321, 323, 329, 332, 347, 352, 357, 362, 387
Vietnam 210, 284, 306, 338
Visual and concrete poetry 31, 38, 102, 107, 111, 114, 117, 119, 120, 122, 124, 126, 129, 131, 133, 142, 147, 157, 291, 305, 333
Visual art 7, 10, 17, 33, 46, 56, 77, 78, 79, 90, 91, 103, 132, 141, 143, 146, 158, 159, 169, 208, 221, 243, 254, 259, 260, 272, 274, 277, 291, 321, 333, 351, 356, 357, 362, 382, 387

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 398 in all.

30 AUG 2008

1. Fluffy Singler — FW: It's already beginning -- Raid in St. Paul

31 AUG 2008

2. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

1 SEP 2008

3. Barry Schwabsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
4. Philip Rowland — Re: NOON 6
5. David Chirot — Ahmed Faraz, Outspoken Urdu Poet, Dies at 77
6. Joel Weishaus — "Reality Too" August Blog
7. Charles Alexander — [pog] POG PRESENTS
8. Camille Martin — new on Camille Martin's website
9. steve russell — Re: Spontaneous expressions of pure ZEN
10. steve russell — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
11. steve russell — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??
12. Joel Weishaus — "Reality Too" August Blog
13. UbuWeb — UBUWEB :: Featured Resources Sept. 2008 - Selected by Rick Moody
14. Barry Schwabsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
15. Halvard Johnson — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
16. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
17. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??
18. steve russell — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??
19. twshaner — poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING??
20. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: poetry & $$$$$/WHO IS LEFT STANDING???
21. Geraldine Monk — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
22. Ruth Lepson — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
23. Small Press Traffic — Small Press Traffic JOB CALL: Final Reminder
24. Ruth Lepson — Re: NOON 6
25. David Chirot — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world

2 SEP 2008

26. Stephen Vincent — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
27. Jill Chan — Call for submissions
28. Barry Schwabsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
29. Barry Schwabsky — Re: NOON 6
30. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
31. Sue Walker — Re: Visual Poetry (Vispo) Assistance
32. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 09.01.08-09.07.08
33. Michael Kelleher — One More Literary Buffalo Thing...
34. Peter Quartermain — Re: Rave review of THE REALITY STREET BOOK OF SONNETS
35. aaron tieger — new books from fewer & further press
36. steve russell — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
37. Ruth Lepson — Re: NOON 6
38. Sheila Murphy — Blue Lion Books Announces: Francis Raven Publication
39. Jerome Rothenberg — Technicians of the Sacred reading: 40 years
40. Geoffrey Gatza — Re: Technicians of the Sacred reading: 40 years
41. Mary Kasimor — Re: FW: It's already beginning -- Raid in St. Paul
42. Wystan Curnow — Re: Technicians of the Sacred reading: 40 years
43. Maria Damon — Re: Technicians of the Sacred reading: 40 years

3 SEP 2008

44. Matt Henriksen — Frank Stanford Literay Festival Seeks Sponsors

45. Small Press Traffic — Small Press Traffic's 2008 Calendar
46. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: Christine Wertheim exhibit opening September 7 at Right Window G...
47. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
48. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
49. Anny Ballardini — Re: Technicians of the Sacred reading: 40 years
50. Annette — Noon
51. steve russell — Robert Venturi vs. Harold Bloom & Y ME
52. steve russell — Re: Sillman: what kind of monster
53. EJOYCE — Mei-mei Berssenbrugge and Annie Finch
54. amy king — Poetry Turn On! [on behalf of Nathaniel Siegel]
55. Jilly Dybka — Re: FW: It's already beginning -- Raid in St. Paul
56. twshaner — Robert Grenier reading in Eugene, OR
57. David Chirot — Urgent Petition/Free Press Action Alert: Drop All Charges Against Journalists
58. Andy Gricevich — FW: It's already beginning -- Raid in St. Paul
59. charles alexander — Re: Mei-mei Berssenbrugge and Annie Finch
60. Sarah Sarai — Re: Sillman: what kind of monster
61. Christophe Casamassima — URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
62. Andy Nicholson — Re: Technicians of the Sacred reading: 40 years
63. steve russell — Re: Auster Fatigue///washingtonpost/podcast/including MY last word
64. Sarah Sarai — Re: FW: It's already beginning -- Raid in St. Paul
65. Anny Ballardini — Re: Poetry Turn On! [on behalf of Nathaniel Siegel]
66. andrew burke — Re: Technicians of the Sacred reading: 40 years
67. amy king — Re: FW: It's already beginning -- Raid in St. Paul -- Journalist Integrity
68. amy king — Re: FW: It's already beginning -- Raid in St. Paul -- and those who ride bikes i...
69. Jilly Dybka — Re: FW: It's already beginning -- Raid in St. Paul
70. crystal hoffman — Re: Technicians of the Sacred reading: 40 years

4 SEP 2008

71. Joel Lewis — WCW 125 B'day Symposium in Rutherford
72. Barry Schwabsky — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
73. Douglas Manson — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
74. David Chirot — Poets for Palestine--an International Anthology of Poetry, Spoken Word, Hip-...
75. Peter Ciccariello — New on Invisible Notes
76. Hugh Margemont-Robinson — Constellation for Digital Publishers - Aye r Nay?
77. Carol Novack — Save the Date --- Sunday, September 14th - Mad Hatters' Revue at Haven Arts ...
78. amy king — Poetry Reading at KGB Tomorrow Night!
79. amy king — Poetry Reading at KGB Tomorrow Night!
80. Therese Broderick — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
81. David Baratier — Reading in Fort Wayne, IN // David Baratier and Curtis Crisler
82. mIEKAL aND — Xerolage 39 - John Rininger
83. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project September
84. Geraldine Monk — Language barrier
85. Catherine Daly — LA: event at library
86. ALDON L NIELSEN — request to all formalists
87. Nick LoLordo — Re: request to all formalists
88. Stephen Ellis — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
89. cris cheek — Re: Language barrier

5 SEP 2008

90. Bill Berkson — Berkson at SVA October 9
91. Small Press Traffic — Small Press Traffic presents Geyser! a new play by Kevin Killian & Wa...
92. James Sanders — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
93. Marc Nasdor — Re: Language barrier

94. Philip Rowland — Re: Language barrier
95. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: Events at The Poetry Project September
96. Nicholas Ruiz III — Kritikos, V.5 July-August-2008
97. Tom Orange — Language barrier
98. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press September Newsletter Now Online
99. Douglas Manson — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
100. Catherine Daly — Re: Language barrier
101. Geoffrey Gatza — Homage to the Last Avant-Garde OUT NOW from Shearsman Books
102. Jim Andrews — Re: Language barrier
103. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
104. Geraldine Monk — Re: Language barrier
105. Geraldine Monk — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
106. Michael Tod Edgerton — VOX and UGA present: Ariana Reines and Mark Bilbrey

6 SEP 2008

107. Jim Andrews — Re: request to all formalists
108. Mary Jo Malo — This Shining Wound update
109. Jennifer Karmin — JOB: Western Kentucky University
110. Dan Wilcox — Reading at Riverfront Studios, 9/19: Mary Kathryn Jablonski
111. Robin Hamilton — Re: Language barrier
112. Robin Hamilton — Pitt bulls ...
113. Halvard Johnson — Re: insomnia, words that do not survive the world
114. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: request to all formalists
115. amy king — Tongues Afire -- Call For Writers
116. amy king — This Sunday, September 7th at 5 pm -- Jennifer L. Knox, Ada Limon and Tom Hausha...
117. Nicholas Piombino — Re: request to all formalists
118. AWAREing Press — Re: Copyright Infringement or Collage?
119. Stephen Vincent — Re: request to all formalists
120. Dan Glass — Re: request to all formalists
121. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Copyright Infringement or Collage?
122. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: request to all formalists
123. Andrew Rippeon — P-Queue, vol. 5 is now available
124. Ruth Lepson — Re: request to all formalists
125. Jessica Wickens — call for submissions: Monday Night
126. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: request to all formalists
127. Peter Ciccariello — Re: This Shining Wound update
128. Karl-Erik Tallmo — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
129. Geraldine Monk — Re: request to all formalists
130. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: call for submissions: Monday Night
131. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: request to all formalists

7 SEP 2008

132. Barbara Henning — URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
133. Barry Schwabsky — Re: request to all formalists
134. Adam Tobin — Re: request to all formalists
135. steve russell — Re: call for submissions: Monday Night
136. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: request to all formalists
137. Randolph Healy — Re: request to all formalists
138. Halvard Johnson — Re: call for submissions: Monday Night
139. Obododimma Oha — Re: call for submissions: Monday Night
140. Stephen Vincent — Re: request to all formalists
141. Stephen Vincent — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
142. Fluffy Singler — Re: request to all formalists
143. Barbara Henning — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
144. Lionel Kearns — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
145. Ryan Daley — Your Planet Can Be Ours Too, now at Scribd

8 SEP 2008

146. David Kirschenbaum — NYC/Next Thurs: Welcome to Boog City 2 Festival, Sept. 18-21
147. Jim Andrews — Re: Copyright Infringement or Collage?
148. Aryanil Mukherjee — Looking for Haris Vlavianos email
149. Aryanil Mukherjee — A Note for Foreign Writer's Visiting India
150. aaron tieger — Catherine Meng's DOKUMENT
151. William Allegrezza — Chicago: Series A This Wednesday, Borzutsky and Severin
152. William Allegrezza — Series A Chicago
153. Paul Siegell — new, free, online: JAM>
154. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo E-Newsletter 09.08.08-09.14.08
155. susan maurer — surprise.. poetry in penn station
156. Sarah Sarai — Re: call for submissions: Monday Night
157. AWAREing Press — Re: request to all formalists
158. martha cinader mims — Please join the discussion on Tuesday night at 8pm PST
159. Stephen Vincent — Re: URGENT - Copyright Infringement or Collage?
160. Stephen Vincent — George Eliot meets John Cage
161. Elizabeth Switaj — Re: call for submissions: Monday Night
162. Joel Lewis — Re: surprise.. poetry in penn station
163. Alan Sondheim — GREAT UNIVERSES! (good one for Poetics to post - Alan)

9 SEP 2008

164. Rosalie Calabrese — Re: request to all formalists
165. Anny Ballardini — Update: the Poets' Corner
166. Peter Ciccariello — Re: GREAT UNIVERSES! (good one for Poetics to post - Alan)
167. blacksox — Wednesday, Sept 10, Judy Copeland, Kerouac Writer in Residence reads at Soft Exp…
168. David Chirot — Re: request to all formalists
169. martha cinader mims — URL correction and reminder for tonight's radio show
170. Larry O. Dean — Persona & Movie Poems
171. Steensen,Sasha — New Bonfire chapbook--Eleni Sikelianos
172. Catherine Daly — Re: Persona & Movie Poems
173. Stephen Vincent — Re: request to all formalists

10 SEP 2008

174. Pam Brown — True Thoughts
175. Pierre Joris — Recent NOMADICS blog posts
176. Shaunanne Tangney — decadence
177. Jeffrey Side — Hadron Collider risk to planet
178. Michael A. SOUBBOTNIK — Re :decadence
179. Elizabeth Mariani — : buffalo ny (allentown) spoken word sundays::::: hardware::: sunday 14…
180. Steensen,Sasha — Re: URL correction--New Bonfire chapbook--Eleni Sikelianos
181. amy king — New / Recent
182. Jennifer Karmin — JOB: Poetryfoundation.org
183. Catherine Daly — Re: decadence
184. ari banias — Uncalled-For Readings: COLIC + GARDINIER + LIU
185. Janet Holmes — Charles O. Hartman's NEW & SELECTED POEMS available from Ahsahta Press
186. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press Announces "Brothers" by Eric Wasserman
187. Alan Sondheim — Re: Hadron Collider risk to planet
188. Stephen Vincent — New de Blog - Malevich, Mother at 92, Bruce Ackley Haptic, Haystack Rock …
189. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Hadron Collider risk to planet
190. Marcus Bales — Re: Hadron Collider risk to planet

11 SEP 2008

191. Susan Webster Schultz — TINFISH news and pre-publication sale!!

192. Douglas Manson — little scratch pad editions
193. Halvard Johnson — 9/11+
194. Nicholas Piombino — Free Fall
195. Larry O. Dean — Re: Persona & Movie Poems
196. Charles Bernstein — Palin/McCain and the Cult of Irresponsibility
197. CA Conrad — DEATH POEMS (Soma)tic Workshop, Philadelphia, THIS October
198. CA Conrad — TED BERRIGAN
199. amy king — Sad News -- Reginald Shepherd
200. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Free Fall
201. Lazer, Hank — Two Big Books, at a Big Discount - Silliman & Rothenberg
202. David A. Kirschenbaum — d.a. levy lives renegade press 2008-09 schedule
203. Carol Novack — submissions open for our mad bunkers' mashup issue
204. amy king — This Friday! September 12th! At 7pm!
205. Andy Gricevich — CANNOT EXIST #3 is out--submissions open for #4

12 SEP 2008

206. Kevin Killian — For San Francisco fans, Taylor Mead comes to Yerba Buena
207. Douglas Manson — new chapbook by Jaye Bartell
208. Lewis Warsh — Zen Monster reading
209. Eric Elshtain — New Beard of Bees Chapbook
210. Stephen Vincent — Meditation - HiltonObenzinger
211. Stephen Vincent — Martin Espada on torture
212. Mary Jo Malo — Re: Hadron Collider risk to planet
213. James T Sherry — Segue Reading Series Fall 2008 at Bowery Poetry Club
214. steve russell — ISHMAEL REED/FROM TOTEMS TO HIP-HOP/PHONEY WHITE SHAMANS
215. Susan Schultz — Pre-publication sale, part deux ou trois
216. Andrew Jones — fUNny

13 SEP 2008

217. Mark Terrill — THE SALVADOR-DALAI-LAMA EXPRESS
218. Wanda Phipps — Wanda Phipps (with Stephen B. Antonakos on Guitar) & Bonny Finberg at Perch ...
219. Dan Wilcox — Third Thursday Poetry Night, Albany, NY: Michael Hare featured
220. Ruth Lepson — Re: ISHMAEL REED/FROM TOTEMS TO HIP-HOP/PHONEY WHITE SHAMANS
221. Bonnie MacAllister — Blam! Poetry at Mugshots on Wednesday
222. Mary Kasimor — new book
223. Harry Ross — Derek Walcott directing Seamus Heaney's Burial at Thebes
224. steve russell — Re: ISHMAEL REED/FROM TOTEMS TO HIP-HOP/PHONEY WHITE SHAMANS
225. steve russell — Re: Derek Walcott directing Seamus Heaney's Burial at Thebes
226. Ruth Lepson — Re: ISHMAEL REED/FROM TOTEMS TO HIP-HOP/PHONEY WHITE SHAMANS
227. andrew burke — Re: Derek Walcott directing Seamus Heaney's Burial at Thebes
228. Alison Croggon — Re: Derek Walcott directing Seamus Heaney's Burial at Thebes
229. Catherine Daly — anybody on list
230. amy king — Re: anybody on list - damn.

14 SEP 2008

231. Jason Quackenbush — Re: anybody on list
