"It's all about how at this point, we need to push harder than ever," said Bertha Suttner, one of the newspaper's writers. "We've got to make sure Obama and all the other Democrats do what we elected them to do. After eight, or maybe twenty-eight years of hell, we need to start imagining heaven."

Not all readers reacted favorably. "The thing I disagree with is how they did it," said Stuart Carlyle, who received a paper in Grand Central Station while commuting to his Wall Street brokerage. "I'm all for freedom of speech, but they should have started their own paper."

30

↑ Index

239. Lauren Dixon

Superficial Flesh calls for Submissions!

Wed 12 Nov 2008

While we're all celebrating Obama's victory and lamenting Prop Hate, Superficial Flesh has opened the door to new submissions for our Spring/Summer issue. Please submit your work for consideration no later than January 31, 2009. Below is the general call.

Writers/Artists/Musicians/Filmmakers/Graphic Novelists/Contortionists:

We're seeking submissions for our new incarnation of *SUPERficial FLESH (http://www.superficialflesh.com). Our newest issue will be published in the Spring/Summer of 2009. We welcome all forms of art, be they poetry, fiction, non-fiction, music, film, works of comic genius, photoshop aberrations, painting, drawing, photography, etc. Any translations must include proof of rights granted by the original language publisher or the author if the piece has not been published. We especially like and appreciate works bordering on the absurd and strange, but we are open to all styles of writing and expression. Since we've just had such a historic election, I'd like to turn this next issue's focus toward works that celebrate, investigate, and evoke those new, previously unimaginable realities that have already started to occur in the American 'zeitgeist,' thanks in part to the outcome of November's election. While I'm optimistic over our direction, I can appreciate the shuddering over Prop. 8 (which I share), so works need not be optimistic in nature--they can question these contradictions as they play out in our culture as well.

Submission guidelines:

Please submit your written work in the body of your email to [redacted]. All submissions must include "Submission" and the author's last name in the subject heading. In the subject heading, please note the type of submission you are including as well (fiction, poetry, etc). All artwork must be sent in .jpg format. No more than five poems, or one story, per submission. We are a very, very small literary outlet so we pay in the form of two contributors copies.

Please visit our website to look at our electronic journal (though we do a small print run as well and you can order a print copy via our website). Online registration is free.

Sincerely,
Lauren Dixon, Editor Superficial Flesh
http://www.superficialflesh.com

↑ Index

240. Stephen Vincent
Re: Poetry/art in the time of Kennedy
Wed 12 Nov 2008

Last night - at Moe's Bookstore in Berkeley - I was listening to Hilton Obenzinger read from his novel, Busy Dying (Chax), which in part deals with the takeover at Columbia University in 1968. Even tho the NY cops - retaking Low Library - beat 'the shit' out everybody in the President's Office (well, David Shapiro, the poet, managed to escape earlier on!), Hilton accounts of the great sense of joy, operative unity and exhilaraton among the demonstrators. In San Francisco, during the 1964 sit-in demonstrations in San Francisco (which were to compel Hotels, Supermarkets and Auto Dealers to hire black employees), there was, indeed, a sense of great joy in victories. However, it was also a time or rampant paranoia if you were on the left as to what might be 'coming down.' There was also, at least among the middle class demonstrators, an apprehension of what might be coming down from parents, future job applications (if arrested), and a change of draft eligibility status if you were a student. So, if I am interpreting you correctly, whether or the term 'negativity' as some kind of absolute condition means much in actions that are continuously morphing - from great highs to the depths of depression, especially when an action fails, and the big guys still hold the power.

I would not dismiss the best of the early sixties essays - if this is your sense - as either counter-poetic or primarily mental exercises. To the contrary. The best of Baldwin, among other writers, to which some would add Joan Didion, get their intelligence out of a primary, experiential sense of event and location.

Sadly, or ineveitably what was best about the essay, devolved into "Personal Journalism" in which 'the writer's condition' became the subject, as different from writing objectively in response to a larger 'public condition'. Rolling Stone, the mag/tabloid, by the end of the Sixties was drenched with 'personal essays' - in which the persons were not that interesting, or much more invested in attracting folks to their unique brand of narcissism.

A speculation comes to mind: the percieved adversion to 'the personal' by many of the Language Poets, along with the interest in abstraction and theory, the primacy of text, etc. - was in part a rejection, a 'fed-upness' with the 60's fetish with personal identity and experience - even it's politically potent forms of gender and ethnic self-exploration. Ironically, as if in the inevitable 'eternal return of the repressed' - the Grand Piano series of volumes can strike me as, finally, a release of LP's 'personal' - all that stuff behind the curtains of the 70's and 80's. Who would have thought??

As post thought, I don't think you will get to core of 60's politcal/poetry muses without exploring the relationships of Bob Dylan, Allen Ginsberg, Woody Guthrie & Pete Seeger. Out of that blend knowledges and roots of American folklore (from dark twisted surreal roots to evangelical hights) Dylan managed to create a 'poetic' ticket much greater public power than any post-JFK-assasination poet that I can think of. Yet, his reasons for morphing out of that role are also interesting.

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

--- On Wed, 11/12/08, J. Scappettone <[redacted]> wrote:
From: J. Scappettone <[redacted]>
Subject: Poetry/art in the time of Kennedy
To: "buff po" <[redacted]>, "Stephen Vincent" <[redacted]>
Date: Wednesday, November 12, 2008, 7:52 AM

Thanks, Stephen--I'd like to read your essay.

What intrigues me at this point is the question of whether political joy can enter the poetic as nonsuspect, even constructive, instead of merely fueling duped patriotic hymns--or whether negativity is the only viable form of sociopolitical intervention open to poetry. I can certainly see why the essay functioned as refuge and platform. It also makes sense to me that "poetry was relatively moribund as an important public act until after JFK's assassination."

> , I'm seeking engaging and/or > thoughtful resources on poetry in the era of (the live) Kennedy.
>
> Well, the Bay of Pigs and the Cuban missile crisis sure gave us > something to write about.

George, can you point me to sources? I'd be interested.

JS

↑ Index

241. steve russell
Re: Chirot scam/ I am sorry i didn't inform you
Wed 12 Nov 2008

---

here's the original scam letter.

i've been getting them for the last 2 years, but none with anyone's name attached. it's a clever twist that may work on someone.

--- On Tue, 11/11/08, David Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

From: David Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: I am sorry i didn't inform you

To:
Date: Tuesday, November 11, 2008, 7:59 PM

How are you doing today? I am sorry i didn't inform you about my traveling to Africa for a program called "Empowering Youth to Fight Racism, HIV/AIDS, Poverty and Lack of Education, the program is taking place in three major countries in Africa which is Ghana , South Africa and Nigeria . It as been a very sad and bad moment for me, the present condition that i found myself is very hard for me to explain. I am really stranded in Nigeria because I forgot my little bag in the Taxi where my money, passport, documents and other valuable things were kept on my way to the Hotel am staying, I am facing a hard time here because i have no money on me. I am now owning a hotel bill of $700 and they wanted me to pay the bill soon else they will have to seize my bag and hand me over to the Hotel Management, I need this help from you urgently to help me back home, I need you to help me with the hotel bill and i will also need $850 to feed and help myself back home so please can you help me with a sum of $1,550 to sort out my problems here? I need this help so much and on time because i am in a terrible and tight situation here, I don't even have money to feed myself for a day which means i had been starving so please understand how urgent i need your help.i have decided not tell my family so that they will not be worried.when I return I will tell them and they will understand. I am sending you this e-mail from the city Library and I only have 30 min, I will appreciate what so ever you can afford to send me for now and I promise to pay back your money as soon as i return home so please let me know on time so that i can forward you the details you need to transfer the money through Money Gram or Western Union.Hope to hear from you. Regards, david

↑ Index

242. Séamas Cain
new work by the poet "lo-y"
Wed 12 Nov 2008

_____

I write in praise of the Belgian poet, visual poet, & net-artist known as <__lo-y. > ...

I have followed the work of <__lo-y. > since 2002, with great interest & appreciation. Much of her work is profoundly original & dynamic, in conception & in action. Her work is not rooted in functionality or utility. The deliberate assembling of text & character symbols have constantly referred to the formal possibilities of the code behind digital content, making it its subject. The poems of <__lo-y. > are abstract works, stripped of narrative, subjectivity, or factional slant.

In one descriptive statement from Lo_y, she wrote "well there's not much to say. Lo_y is only what Lo_y writes. No history, no stories, no explanations ..."

See the poems at SCRABBLE ...
http://socialfiction.org/scrabble/indexold.htm

See the visual poems & net-art at ... http://lo-y.domainepublic.net/

See the very wry <__lo-y. > at My Space ...
http://www.myspace.com/lo_y

Bestwishes,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

↑ Index

243. George Bowering
Re: Today's New York Times
Wed 12 Nov 2008

Why?

gb

On Nov 12, 2008, at 7:11 AM, Kyle Schlesinger wrote:

> If you're in New York City, be sure to pick up a copy of today's
> New York
> Times or read it online at http://www.nytimes-se.com
>
> welcome.html

George Bowering, OBC
Grammar cop

↑ Index

244. Ryan Daley
Re: Poetry/Art in the time of Kennedy
Wed 12 Nov 2008

For what it's worth, there was an interesting NY Times article about what DID change during this last election:

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/11/11/us/politics/11south.html?_r=1&scp=1&sq=the%20south%20loses%20it%27s%20hold%20on%20politics&st=cse&oref=slogin

Furthermore, I think it's worth separating the election moment and the feeling and meaning involved from it's wake and aftershock/math.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 10:17 AM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> Jen: I think Steve got this about right. Camelot was a media invention, and it only lasted three years, during which very little was accomplished. Whatever one thought about Eisenhower, he was nothing like as destructive as Bush, and there was no national sigh of relief. And Kennedy won by the slimmest of margins, and less than a majority--there was a third party. I don't remember any resultant stirring in the arts. That came later, after Johnson liberated all the angels and demons.
>
> Mark
>
> At 09:34 PM 11/11/2008, Stephen Vincent wrote:
>
> Hi Jen:
>
> Ironically - in the context of doing a presentation for the commemoration of 1968 Strike at San Francisco State - I re-activated an essay I wrote in 1964, "Days Without the President" - which dealt with time-frame of the Birmingham demonstrations (Bull Connor et al) in which it took JFK for ever to use his Federal powers to intervent. (Sound familiar?) . But the piece is really about the transitional period in which 'integration' was being rejected by many Blacks in favor of cultural and economic nationalisms, self-defense et al. It's a 'poetic, personal' essay - in time in which Baldwin, Mailer, and many others used the essay for person self-exploration and public persuasion. Of course, it was a highly conflicted time for white and blacks trying to sort it all out.
>
> It seems to me, unless I am missing an important chunk, poetry (in the late 50's and the JFK regime) was relatively moribund as an important public act until after JFK's assasination. My perhaps foggy impressions is that the Beats were relativey out of the picture - in Asia & Japan - until Allen Ginsberg re-emerged in 1965 (spring. Prague, et al). (Which is not say poets were not reflecting on politics, and, particularly, The Bomb. Whether there is interesting stuff from Adrienne Rich, I am not sure. Levertov's political work is later. As with a whole era of Anti-War poets as provoked by LBJ's expansion of the War. Essays seemed to rule the public ropes, the discourse.
>
> People/ students in my panel were really intrigued with the period. It was interesting to re-explore a time which we, the young, were totally implicated in history (race relations, Vietnam war and the draft, etc. There was no hiding permitted, such as today, where the young, at least the middle class and wealthy, have ways to insulate themselves.)

However, with the current global collapse coming at us from all sides, combined the multiple expectations and hopes placed on a new regime, the JFK/LBJ eras seem to beckon. At the Strike commmoraton The young were totally in awe of the descriptions of the kinds of actions of the time - probably, in part, a nostalgia for the 'heroic', such as it was. Like a relish for organic food, instead of Media duplications/simulations of no matter what form of "reality".

Stephen

--- On Tue, 11/11/08, J. Scappettone <[redacted]>
wrote:
From: J. Scappettone <[redacted]>
Subject: Poetry/Art in the time of Kennedy
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, November 11, 2008, 2:25 PM

Hello poets and poetics:

this post leaves aside the debate regarding what one ought to feel about the election of Obama; I reckon we are at least free to feel differently and variegatedly from moment to moment about it. But the astonishing events of the past week have led me as a relative youngster within history and the genre to ponder what it is actually like to operate as an artist in a context of national leadership conceived of (by an apparent majority) as worthy or promising of the title. As such, I'm seeking engaging and/or thoughtful resources on poetry in the era of (the live) Kennedy. Thanks for any pointers you may be able to offer.

J. Scappettone

guidelines

↑ Index

245. Obododimma Oha

Re: David

Wed 12 Nov 2008

Hi Barry, I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS? Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you get that e-mail, be warned.

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

246. amy king
Re: David
Wed 12 Nov 2008

Yikes! I never really thought about it this way, Obododimma! Big apologies and thanks for pointing this out ...

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Wed, 11/12/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote: From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>

I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

↑ Index

247. Chad Sweeney
On-Line Parthenon West Review: Issue 5
Wed 12 Nov 2008

Parthenon West Issue 5 On-line:
www.parthenonwestreview.com
Poems, translations, essays:

After our issues sell-out (or nearly) we're going to post them on-line, so the work can keep rippling out forever to Australia and Detroit and Paris, Texas. We love on-line journals, but we also love the book in our hands, so we're trying to do a little of both. This one's about 200 pages in print, and if you click on the EAR you can listen to some stuff from our first three issues, back when we had a sound engineer as intern.
Parthenon West Issue 5 On-line:
www.parthenonwestreview.com

Gillian Conoley
Noelle Kocot
Paul Hoover
Mark Irwin
D.A. Powell
Rusty Morrison
Brian Henry
Andrew Joron (Essay)
Matthew Cooperman
Sidney Wade
Matt Hart
kari edwards
Johannes Goransson
Sandy Florian
George Kalamaras
Gloria Frym
Haines Eason
Chris Arigo
Joshua McKinney
Sarah Hannah
Christopher Buckley
Anne Marie Rooney
Mary Wang
Thomas Kane
Nathan Hauke
Timothy Liu
Kevi Magee
Seth Landman
Marisa Crawford
Geoffrey Detrani
Michael Farrell
Barbara Tomash
Roxane Beth Johnson
Daniel Coudriet
Sarah Maclay
James Ragan
Sean Thomas Dougherty
Terry Ehret
Kaya Oakes
Rodney Koeneke
Bruce Covey

With Translations of Tomaz Salamun (by Joshua Beckman, Phillis Levin, Thomas Kane)
Mexica Songs from Nuatl (by John Page)
Ericka Ghersi (by Toshiya Kamei)
Ataol Behramoglu (by Walter G. Andrews)
George Vulturescu (by Adam J. Sorkin and Olimpia Iacob)
Sophi de Mello Breyner Andresen (by Alex Levitin)
Magda Carneci (by Adam J. Sorkin and Alina Carac)
Paulina Vinderman (by John Oliver Simon)

In a couple of weeks our Issue 6 will be printed, and in six or eight months we'll post that one too.
Please, send us some poems, translations or essays.
And a big thanks to Craig Rebele for his hard work on getting this stuff up.

All best,
Chad Sweeney, coeditor

↑ Index

248. Aryanil Mukherjee
Re: David
Wed 12 Nov 2008

Obododimma

That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always intended.
I have made such blemishes in the past too.

Aryanil
----- Original Message -----
From: "Obododimma Oha" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
Subject: Re: David

> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades

> before
> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>
> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize > and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
> Be well!
>
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you get that e-mail, be warned.
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008 7:01 PM

↑ Index

249. George Bowering
Re: David
Wed 12 Nov 2008

No, it is not a good point.
To say "Nigerian scams" is not to say that scams are necessarily Nigerian.
The very grammar suggests that only some scams are Nigerian.
If we say US gangsters, that is not to say that all gangsters are USAmericans.
Here's another parallel: if I complain about Meyer Lansky,
that does not make me anti-semitic.
I have received many many scam letters from Nigeria in the last year.
Some from South Africa, too. The latter were South African scam letters.

gb

On Nov 12, 2008, at 3:33 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee wrote:

> Obododimma
>
> That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
> We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always intended.
> I have made such blemishes in the past too.
>
> Aryanil
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha"
> <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
> Subject: Re: David
>
> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the > history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before

what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you get that e-mail, be warned.

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

> welcome.html
>
> ---
> ---
>
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008 7:01 PM
>
> welcome.html

George Harvey Bowering
Fond of many dead people.

↑ Index

250. Ryan Daley
Re: David
Wed 12 Nov 2008

Well, the use of email to scam people originated in Nigeria. The term, 419 Letter Scam, is used because 419 is the Nigerian criminal code designated for email scams.

I take offense to use of the term "conman," which seems to imply that all conniving anti-social personalities that seek to remove money from one person's pocket into the pocket of another person who might be more or less deserving of said funds are men. We need to not use "Nigerian" or "con man" to refer to either of these processes/individuals. For now, "con artist" will do.

In Barry's defense, if the above cannot be termed so, it seems the email scam did first originate in Nigeria, and still has a more booming business there than certain other countries. The Iraq War is the Iraq War because it takes place in Iraq.

-Ryan

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 5:00 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you get that e-mail, be warned.

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

251. Ryan Daley
Re: David
Wed 12 Nov 2008

It will do, that is, until the artists get angry.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 7:51 PM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:

> Well, the use of email to scam people originated in Nigeria. The term, 419 Letter Scam, is used because 419 is the Nigerian criminal code designated for email scams.
>
> I take offense to use of the term "conman," which seems to imply that all conniving anti-social personalities that seek to remove money from one person's pocket into the pocket of another person who might be more or less deserving of said funds are men. We need to not use "Nigerian" or "con man" to refer to either of these processes/individuals. For now, "con artist" will do.
>
> In Barry's defense, if the above cannot be termed so, it seems the email scam did first originate in Nigeria, and still has a more booming business there than certain other countries. The Iraq War is the Iraq War because it takes place in Iraq.
>
> -Ryan
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 5:00 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before
> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>
> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize
> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
> Be well!
>
> --- Obododimma Oha.

> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,
> stranded
> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
> Needless > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if > you
> get that e-mail, be warned.
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

↑ Index

252. Michael Ford

Re: David

Wed 12 Nov 2008

Below are a few lines from Niyi Osundare's poem " Entry Point Encounter," a dialogue with a customs officer who detains him after hearing he travels with a Nigerian passport. Among other things, the poem deals with the consequences of calling the 419 scam "Nigerian." The poet's passport is marked with the same word, "Nigerian," and thus it and its owner are linked falsely to criminal behavior.

"You're Nigerian?"
"I thought I told you so"
"Have you ever been convicted of fraud?"
"No"
"Have you ever been denied a visa?"
"No"

Pause

"You know that thing called 419?"
"I've heard about it
But, I assure you,
If 419 and I meet in the street
We won't recognize each other"

This poem is in Osundare's Pages from the Book of the Sun: New and Selected Poems
**
Michael Ford

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 4:00 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the > history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and > other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before
> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>
> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a > criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize
> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
> Be well!
>
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> > It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.

> Needless
> to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you > get that e-mail, be warned.
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

↑ Index

253. mIEKAL aND
Re: Today's New York Times
Wed 12 Nov 2008

The answer is one mouse click away George.

~ma

On Nov 12, 2008, at 2:30 PM, George Bowering wrote:

> Why?
>
> gb
>
> On Nov 12, 2008, at 7:11 AM, Kyle Schlesinger wrote:
>
> If you're in New York City, be sure to pick up a copy of today's
> New York
> Times or read it online at http://www.nytimes-se.com

↑ Index

254. J. Michael Mollohan
Re: David
Wed 12 Nov 2008

There's a reason for calling them "Nigerian Scams" as the vast majority of them can be traced back to Nigeria. There are a sizeable number fro Benin and a smattering of others from Zambia and other countries in that general vicinity, but for the most part they're from Nigeria. I get dozens of them in various e-mail accounts every day, so I speak from some first-hand experience. While it's true that con games are not country-dependent, this type of e-mail trawling for victims seems to have a strong Nigerian flavor. To paraphrase Walter Brennan, "It's not an insult if it's true."

----- Original Message -----
From: "Obododimma Oha" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
Subject: Re: David

> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the > history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and > other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before
> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>
> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a > criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize
> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
> Be well!
>
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded

> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you > get that e-mail, be warned.
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

↑ Index

255. twshaner

Larkin, Abel, & Matchett reading in Eugene, OR

Wed 12 Nov 2008

As with our two previous readings, featuring Robert Grenier and Jules Boykoff & Kaia Sand, this should be a real treat -- a multi-media event featuring poetry, music, and visual effects! Please come, anybody out there in the area. [Is there anybody "out there" on this list in the Eugene area, by the way?] -- Tim Shaner

DIVA hosts the A-New Poetry Series with:

Maryrose Larkin, David Abel and Eric Matchett

On Saturday, November 15th, the DIVA Center hosts guest poets Maryrose Larkin, David Abel and Eric Matchett at 7:30 PM. Cost: $0-$5.00 sliding scale.

DIVA Center 110 W. Broadway, Eugene
Web: divacenter.org

Portlander Maryrose Larkin is as a freelance researcher. She is the author of Inverse (Nine Muse Books), Whimsy Daybook 2007 (FLASH+CARD), and "The Book of Ocean" (i.e. press). Her work can be found in FO A RM, Insurance, Bird Dog, the Columbia Poetry Review, and the Washington Review.

Maryrose is a member of Spare Room, a group of people who organize readings and other events in Portland.

Eric Matchett enjoys the pursuit of music, especially via collaboration. His latest completed project was a CD of dub furniture music with Jake Anderson on Language Master and Korg ER-1 and Eric Matchett on bass.

David Abel is a poet, performer, and interdisciplinary artist who is as a freelance editor and a bookseller. He is the author of Let Us Repair (wax paper scissors, 2007, with Anna Daedalus) and Black Valentine (Chax Press, 2006).

As a founder of the Spare Room reading series, he devised the libretto for the Liminal Performance Group's multimedia lecture-opera, "The Theory of Love".

DIVA offers the A-New Poetry avant-garde poetry reading series. This monthly program brings to Eugene emerging poets from Oregon as well as innovative writers touring the Northwest.

↑ Index

256. Nico Vassilakis
visuel concreat sampler
Thu 13 Nov 2008

each sample is from a series and each series is sampled here

http://www.flickr.com/photos/[redacted]/

somewhere from 1986, (1995-2008)

thanks for your time,

n

↑ Index

257. Alan Sondheim
Denuded Prims
Thu 13 Nov 2008

Denuded Prims

When one loads Second Life, servers and bandwidth, not to mention your local machine, might slow things up; the image passes from incomplete to the masquerade of a replete and fecund world. Here are a few examples:

http://www.alansondheim.org/rush1.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/rush2.jpg

http://www.alansondheim.org/rush3.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/rush4.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/rush5.jpg

It's the reverse of the hypnagogic, beginning with the blank slate of antiquated neurophysiology, ending with an ostensible real that is equally within the imaginary. You see this out of the corner of your eye, all the time; you don't quite trust yourself, trust your vision.

"Shattering a moment of intimacy - for me, the Net doesn't do it, I long for real intimacy beyond this space the longer I'm on-line, closeness, pressure, of the body against the keys, the intimacy which is touch, the intimacy of nest, domus, place. Love is the occasion of all, the light itself floats, transforming the world of intimacy into the weight or intimacy of the screen - nothing, in short, that is desirable - intimacy may result after all. But the activity is very different, like formation, the hunt, the studied mannerist intimacy of speaking, drugging, posses- sion, the contract. Intimacy forestalls occupation, the experiential. The writing should be the exposure of every intimacy and secret, should be exposure, of intimacy, every secret intimacy the secret should shout all self, the vanishing- point, plane and punctum."

↑ Index

258. Barry Schwabsky
Re: David
Thu 13 Nov 2008

Personally I take it amiss that one i,plies I exhibited prejudice, even "unintended." It is well known that Nigeria has a little industry of these internet scams. I didn't make it up, and nothing I wrote can be taken as implying anything about Nigerians in general. If I said, "here's something new in French wines," would that mean I was implying that all French people work in the wine industry?

--- On Wed, 12/11/08, Aryanil Mukherjee <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Aryanil Mukherjee <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, 12 November, 2008, 11:33 PM

Obododimma

That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always intended.
I have made such blemishes in the past too.

Aryanil
----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha"
<[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
Subject: Re: David

> Hi Barry,
> I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the > history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and > other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades
before
> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>
> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a > criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult > that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize
> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at > POETICS?
> Be well!
>
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
>> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and >> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,
stranded
>> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
Needless
>> to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you
>> get that e-mail, be warned.
>>
guidelines
>>

>
>
>
> -- Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008 7:01
PM

↑ Index

259. Al Filreis
new PoemTalk released: on Ezra Pound's satire
Thu 13 Nov 2008

The 12th PoemTalk is being released this week:

http://www.poemtalk.org

featuring Charles Bernstein, Rachel Levitsky, Joshua Schuster and I discussing Ezra Pound's "Cantico del Sole." PoemTalk is a 25-minute mp3 audio recording - streamable or downloadable. Also available in ITunes (with an option for subscribing).

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing University of Pennsylvania

on the web: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis blog: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/blog PoemTalk: http://www.poemtalk.org get your daily Al: http://bit.ly/1UCfRp

↑ Index

260. Steve Halle
Aaron Belz @ Seven Corners
Thu 13 Nov 2008

Spend some time with new poems by Aaron Belz, now at Seven Corners<http://sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/>(http://sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/).

Best,
Steve Halle
Editor

↑ Index

261. Vernon Frazer
Re: David
Thu 13 Nov 2008

Not all scams are Nigerian." About a year ago, somebody in China hacked my computer. I spent two days deleting over 1000 messages that bounced back to my address. To get out of the situation, I had to change my email address.

Nobody has a lock on greed. Anybody from any country can hack your computer and send out scam letters using your name. It's a miserable situation to find yourself caught in.

Vernon

↑ Index

262. Jennifer Karmin
Nominations for Pushcart Prize
Thu 13 Nov 2008

Publication in The Pushcart Prize: Best of the Small Presses is awarded annually for poetry, fiction, and essays published by literary magazines or small presses in the current year. Editors may nominate up to six poems, short stories, novel chapters, or essays. Submit one copy of each work by December 1. There is no entry fee. Write, call, or visit the Web site for complete guidelines.

Pushcart Press, Pushcart Prizes, P.O. Box 380, Wainscott, NY 11975.
[redacted]. Bill Henderson, President. http://www.pushcartprize.com

↑ Index

263. David-Baptiste Chirot

Poetics of the Repossesion of Stolen Identity & the Appropriation of Chirot:as an After "After Rimbaud's Illuminations" as Pixels of Light

Thu 13 Nov 2008

Unlike my friend Jean-Nicholas Arthur Rimbaud I am not in Africa.

I avoid hospitals like the plague; superstitious & headstrong to the point of danger to oneself perhaps; yet having entered them clinically dead 5 five times, I have a terror of dying in one. I remember begging as a teenager the doctors, the Priests, for some kind of necklace similar to those that say "I am A Catholic, if I am on the verge of croaking my last, call a Priest,"that would say, "If found dying, let this person die anywhere they are, at the side of the road, in peace, under the skies, but do not take them under any circumstances to the hospital."

Nonetheless I wound up at the clinic the other day and when I got back at night found a message from son who lives in Thailand that my email had been hacked as he had received letter saying I was in dire straits in Africa and asking for funds.

Since the email is from my son , it was the only one I read, as too ill to read any further.

Yesterday, I began to see with chagrin that this message was causing discussion and alarm, and my sympathies and thanks to those who felt concern, and apologies for being so, when the cause is a scam. My apt mate received the message on his email and told me if he didn't know I was in my room next to his, he would have felt really bad, as the letter very much moved him. I told him actually I receive quite alot of these, and especially heartrending are the ones in French, which sometimes wil have also a little foto gallery triptych of an attractive young and religious woman with soft focus backgrounds. The letters from le monde Francophone also take for granted I have a wider acceptance (which in actuality I do) of various forms of religion that in the Western Hemisphere developed into Haitian Voudon and aspects of the Hoodoo Man and Conjure Woman, John the Conqueroo et alia in the Southern US.

The great number of letters on a few lists very much struck me--and the fact that no one actually wrote me myself and I, other than my son, who wrote to alert me.

In the later afternoon my good friend Aryanil Mukherjee called and we spoke for along time. It was our first phone conversation, and very inspiring.

I wondered if there is a superstition in itself of writing to persons of whom one is not sure if this is that person or some one else? I mean a superstition beyond wariness or fear of embarrassment at having made a mistake in identity, having been fooled?

A superstition almost as if the person is perhaps a form of "possessed being," like a zombie or some kinds of ghosts are? Or in actuality, not a few living beings one encounters are--in airports and classrooms, delivery vans and parade grounds, among the police officers and and bathing suit beauties--among cardboard cut-outs and "conventional characters" littering obsessively the worlds of newsreels and history, the cinema, the novel, the poem, ancient vases--statuary--

A superstition in fact almost as though the invoked name is that belonging to one of the dead--or, again the living-dead--some creature not unlike a politician or soap opera character and actress/actor who is "ever present"--"eternally a beacon to the adoring and faithfull believers"--just as they are there forever also for poets--

It also struck me very much as a new aspect of many of the themes, topics and subjects disccussed lately, among them "death" of the "author," appropriation, possession, hoaxes, heteranonymity, and something else which I've raised fairly often, the need to check sources, for so much of the so called "information" on the "Information Highway" is disinformation of all sorts, from financial to Propaganda schemes, government black flag ops to "merry pranks." There are even those that purport to be having something to do with art (the one about the artist's starving a dog in a gallery,) or a poet mass mailing an anti-Muslim fake news article despite claiming afterwards to having doubts about its veracity, because he believed in the cause the "article's" intended and actual widespread negative effects were for (the Leevi Lehto case.)

There is a kind of cliche both in life/death and in the plot of novels, stories and films, of the artist or writer whose death is faked, in order to send the value of their work skyrocketing. This little scam is based on the very real observation of how often it occurs that some nearly forgotten figure has been is suddenly resurrected by death and not only restored to a former glory, but suddenly begins to attain a reknown no one had ever dreamed them or their work capable of. The "disappearance" of some "enigmatic" artist or writer who had created a slim oeuvre when known to be alive and yet, after "death," is found to have produced quite a bounty of works which lead one ever further into what is now considered one of the most daring and audacious and fertile grounds for the future--this disappearance will vault the artist's works and name into the stratospheres of value, while behind the scenes, somewhere, from time to time he or she produces casually a work or three to add to the heap of previously undiscovered fragments, notes, doodles, memorandum, sketches, small studies, etc.

This case of the David Chirot email provides yet another version, in which the person them self is suddenly finding them self discussed at a distance, as though they are not present at all, via emails discussing an email which has, many agree, not been sent by David Chirot. Or has it been? As a Prank? Or in reality?

On the part of many, there is a concern for the person, and on the part of others, the developing concern that various ideas that are held about the emails not being sent by Chirot are correct.

Of course, there is no rise at all in any value in the worthless works of David Chirot, whether or not he is in Africa, whether or not he sent the email and whether or not he is paying attention or not to what is being written about him as though he is, if not in Africa, at least elsewhere as yet among the living.

Since the identity of David Chirot was stolen and used by some one else unknown, the resultant responses to the email itself are what might be thought of as the "after effects" of the "name" David Chirot" as known on email and as a person in a few instances. These "after effects" bear an odd relation both to the "ghostwritten" and the "posthumous" and in this case become related to something I have called before the ghosthumous. Curiously, when being considered as being or not being in Africa, the David Chirot name usually present has been supplanted by an unknown bearing that name, and thus given a strange sensation of the "other" David Chirot "not being here"--whether or not they are actually in Africa.

Hence the email takes on this ghostwritten character, or ghosthumous, ghost written from the beyond the grave character, glowing radioactively with the fall out of "after effects" in the thickets and clearings of asemics, signs,letters, words and phrases.

Along the way, the accumulation of commentaries and details regrading various aspects of the "other David Chirot" (the non-email message one)--begins to construct its own small form of "biography/portrait" "wanted poster" "Have You Seen Him?" poster and so forth--and begins to develop into a discussion of the language applied to the emails--and so soon enough, one realizes, the disappearance of the David Chirots will no longer be missed at all.

In fact, the disappearance of the disappearance of the David Chirot. is already one assumes taking effect, and the only means by which one may make certain that one is not forgotten is to write a letter in which one hopes others will indeed find it in their hearts to believe the veracity of.

But then--once, burned, twice shy!!

How does anyone from now on know who it is really writing under the name "David Chirot"--

Perhaps "David Chirot" has become something more like a Tag--to be sprayed on a wall--used in a mural--sent into the atmospheres--as the disintegration of particles--

However, if David Chirot's identity has been stolen and paraded about and discussed, and exploited in potentia, might not David Chirot return to re appropriate that name, that identity--and to re take POSSESSION not simply of identity and "copyright" and such tedious things, but also of the spirit of David Chirot--the appropriation that the first David Chirot wrote of that tends to be regarded by most as "primitive," yet that that David Chirot takes as true, actual.

To appropriate this identity theft, one then appropriates al the responses it has generated, as the "after effects " writings of this "after effect" of the name and persona of "David Chirot" as someone existing on email lists.

In other words, what one now has before one is the creation out of the blue of an anthology.

In a note found just as I began to write this, Catherine Daley is responding to the "Illuminations" and "Illuminated manuscripts" and mystic illuminations I had brought up in relation with writing--her question in part being, may these be disciplined, as one does with writing?

It is not perhaps that one disciplines these or the ability to create their circumstances for occurring, as the other way round, which is to keep on making oneself more available to the awareness of how many of these are continually occurring all around one all the time. At the great risk of boring everyone yet again--"hidden in plain site/sight/cite."

"I do not seek, I find."

These "after effects" of an email by a "David Chirot" who has hacked into David Chirot's address book in order to use David Chirot's name--are among the after effects of a person and writer already writing "After Rimbaud's Illuminations" and other works concerning "After " effects--"After Lorca-After Spicer-After Yasusada-"etc etc--

So the proliferation of the after effects of "After Rimbaud's Illuminations" becomes a David Chirot in Africa, like Rimbaud, and also a David Chirot who is not David Chirot, like that "I is an other/I is somebody else" that many see in the Rimbaud in Africa as compared to the Rimbaud who had been a poet in Europe.

David Chirot, the Milwaukee one, by appropriating and taking possession of this legacy of "After effects" of "some other David Chirot" who had stolen David Chirot's name and created the effects which that name generated--then produces an anthology of the responses which is basically "assembled" not by "an "editor/author at all but simply "the name function" David Chirot as it were, both an anonymous/pseudonymous person and another person who really does bear legally that name.

All the works in the anthology are the emails of others responding to the original email of David Chirot in Africa. With perhaps a letter at the end from the "other" David Chirot in Milwaukee.

Wystan Curnow had said that nowhere in al I had written did i mention or write about the conventional. On the contrary, in al I had written last week and before in these discussions re appropriation, has been the presence of the conventional as that absence at the heart of al the methods and examples I gave of the means to elude the conventional, not to ossify into it it, to skip over it, go around, under it, explode it, fly over, parody it, make a slightly off copy of it that is its satiric downfall and so on and on-- to be like those"words who intentions are fugitive" and of which it is almost impossible to construct a glossary of that Burroughs writes of in the introduction to Junkie.

And what then is the conventional--the conventional is al that massive accumulation of details, images, words, sayings, ideas, propagandas, concepts, unquestioned beliefs, with which one is taught to continually not be aware of what is hidden in plain site/sight/cite. Not to think for oneself but be given the illusion that one is.

"To be cast o'er with the sickly pale of convention"

so to speak--

The examination of many contemporary examples of "resistant," "radical, innovative" work provides a genealogy and typology of a series of appropriations of ever more entropical conventions of the "radical" and "avant garde" of a century ago. Many previously controversial aspects are trimmed away, to attempt to make the new "product" appear "leaner and meaner" or "leaner and cleaner." "Lite" versions appear, more "user friendly" ones--

Precisely what "empowers" the "innovative, radical" aspects and energies is that they are conventional and so are easy to recognize and identify with as "authoritative" expressions of radical, innovative anti-authoritarianism via their self created revision of the "traditions of the avant-garde."

These themselves reverse engineer their anti-authoritarianism into authoriaianism and capitalize in the process on the re-assertion of their authoritative anti-authoritative stance.

(note below are links to some examples of this--)

(i wrote something else a few days ago re the conventional to send when I get better--will send on later on--.)

(but then what is more conventional perhaps to say--than "you have not spoken of the conventional so everywhere present-"-- that is because, the conventional is so everywhere at all times al encompassing ever present that --is it not continually speaking for itself--t the poi8nt of suffocation of al else-- what Dubuffet called "Asphyxiating Culture"-- and so does not need me at all to speak of it -- other than to suggest ways to get around, through outside underneath fly over--tear it to shreds--etc--)

There was a great deal of discussion recently regarding an anthology of poetry produced by a program designed by specific individuals for use with a computer The names of many poets living and dead were assigned to the poems, in order, one thinks perhaps, to gain it more attention--create bit more long winded "controversy."

A number of persons were appalled that one might associate such a method with the possibilities also of producing fake evidences using computers and then assigning them to names and thus producing "suspects" to be rounded up and "detained" and tortured. In other rods, an anthology could be constructed also a form of camouflage for such a mission, or simply as a poetry anthology as this "One" was, via computer written poems being assigned to actual living and dead poet's names.

Here we have a case indeed of an unknown someone stealing the email identity and name of a person most likely unknown to them for monetary gain under other circumstances than that of the actual person bearing the legal name. Yet by producing responses to this "work" which bears the "name" of the "David Chirot in Milwaukee" this "non-author" is "resulting in" "after effects" of the uses of the name of David Chirot when it is thought to be that of a specific David Chirot who is indeed a person interested in appropriation and writing and so in turn, not to be taken possession of, makes the move known in cards as "trumping the trumper" "and takes the hand." ("Tromper le trompeur: c'est double plaisir")

(Hand being the meaning of "chiro")

Unless, of course, the hacker turns out to be someone who is playing a prank using the name of David Chirot on everyone who thinks that this is the name that they know as David Chirot and in turn on the David Chirot who also thinks that it is this particular David Chirot that is meant.

Or indeed is a poetic Prankster who is trying out a poetic experiment

In the sense of possession, one must sometimes, perforce, be a Repo man, yes-! The Repo Man of one's identity and spirit!

"To take in darkness until all that remains is light"

DAVID-BAPTISTE CHIROT: Holzer's "Projections" and Movies & Classes ...

Holzer's "Projections" and Movies & Classes Offered at Gitmo Usher in New Era ... Views of the installation at Mass MoCA by Jenny Holzer. ...

davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/02/new-ways-to-win-hearts-and-minds-gitmo.html - 264k - Cached - Similar pages - Note this

DAVID-BAPTISTE CHIROT: 2008-02-17

In her "Projections" exhibition at MassMoCa, Jenny Holzer has introduced the bean bag ..... so we ask you to get the movie out there, in any way you can. ...

davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008_02_17_archive.html - 367k - Cached - Similar pages - Note this

More results from davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com »

Poetry Foundation: The online home of the Poetry Foundation Aug 22, 2008 ... This time around, it was Jenny Holzer's turn to use the huge gallery .... Holzer's "Projections" and Movies & Classes Offered at Gitmo Usher ...

poetryfoundation.org/harriet/2008/08/apolitical_poems_are_also_poli_1.html - 53k - Cached - Similar pages - Note this

---

Windows Live Hotmail now works up to 70% faster.
http://windowslive.com/Explore/Hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_faster_112008

↑ Index

264. Thomas savage
Re: David
Thu 13 Nov 2008

While specifying Nigeria may be an error, I have nevertheless been warned that many of the emails one receives as personal requests from Africa are, indeed, scams and I never respond to them unless, asin the case of Obododimma Oha, I know the person who sent them, having met him on another listserv. Am I now insulting Africa as a whole by pointing out the existence of this online email phenomenon? I don't think so and I hope not. There are some of these requests which originate outside Africa as well, emails telling me that I have won something from organizations of which I have never heard before. I ignore these as well as I have been tipped off that these are scams or snares or whatever you want to call them except genuine. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Wed, 11/12/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, November 12, 2008, 5:00 PM

Hi Barry, I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS? Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into
and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you > get that e-mail, be warned.
>

guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

265. Mary Kasimor

Re: Roberto Bolano's 2666 Reviewed by Jomathan Lethem (Ny Times)

Thu 13 Nov 2008

Today's (November 13) New York Times has another review of Bolano's 2666.
Mary Kasimor

--- On Mon, 11/10/08, David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: Roberto Bolano's 2666 Reviewed by Jomathan Lethem (Ny Times)
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 10, 2008, 11:58 AM

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: David Chirot <[redacted]>

Date: Sun, Nov 9, 2008 at 4:58 AM
Subject: Roberto Bolano's 2666 Reviewed by Jomathan Lethem (Ny Times)
To: [redacted]

BOOKS / SUNDAY BOOK REVIEW

| November 9, 2008

The Departed

By JONATHAN LETHEM

Roberto Bolaño's posthumous novel is not only a capstone to his own vaulting ambition, but a landmark in what's possible for the form in our increasingly, and terrifyingly, post-national world.

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/11/09/books/review/Lethem-t.html?ei=5070&emc=eta1

_____ Color coding for safety: Windows Live Hotmail alerts you to suspicious email. http://windowslive.com/Explore/Hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_safety_112008

↑ Index

266. David A. Kirschenbaum
Advertise in The Portable Boog Reader 3
Thu 13 Nov 2008

Please forward

Advertise in

Our annual collection

Boog City 53: The Portable Boog Reader 3,
An Anthology of New York City Poetry

Edited by
Jim Behrle, Joanna Fuhrman, Brenda Iijima,
Paolo Javier, Mark Lamoureux, and me

We?re going to be distributing 2,500 copies of a 24-page issue of our tabloid-size paper Boog City
--roughly the equivalent in size of a 96-page, 6? x 9? anthology-- throughout Manhattan's East Village, and Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn.

Deadline

--Tues. Dec. 16-Space reservations (Email to reserve ad space ASAP)
--Tues. Dec. 23-Ad copy to editor
--Thurs. Jan. 1-Issue to be distributed at Poetry Project and Bowery Poetry Club New Year?s Day marathon readings
--Tues. Jan. 6-Rest of distribution

Last year?s issue featured 72 New York City poets.
This year?s? An entirely new lineup of 72 poets, including:

Ammiel Alcalay
Ari Banias
Martine Bellen
Sommer Browning
Jen Coleman
Elaine Equi
Jennifer Firestone
Stephanie Gray
Diana Hamilton
Lauren Ireland
Basil King
Noelle Kocot
Amy Lawless
Justin Marks
Tracey McTague
Feliz Molina
Uche Nduka
Akilah Oliver
Greg Purcell
Tom Savage
David Sewell
Eleni Stecopoulos
Rodrigo Toscano
Erica Wright
Betsy Andrews
Jennifer Barlett
Donna Brook
David Cameron
Matt Cozart
Jessica Fiorini
Nada Gordon
Shafer Hall
Dan Hoy
Adeena Karasick
Martha King
Dorothea Lasky
Filip Marinovich
Chris Martin
Stephen Paul Miller
Elinor Nauen
Urayoan Noel
Jean-Paul Pecqueur
Jerome Sala
Vanessa Hope Schneider
David Shapiro
Susie Timmons
Sara Wintz

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. (The discount rate also applies to larger ads. Back channel for full rate card.)

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

(We're also cool with donations, real cool.)

Email [redacted]
or call 212-842-BOOG(2664) for more information.

thanks,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher

Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

267. Bill Berkson
berkson & towle at BPC
Thu 13 Nov 2008

Bill Berkson & Tony Towle
Bowery Poetry Club
8 pm
Thursday, December 4, 2008
308 Bowery, NYC 10012 || [redacted]
betw. Bleecker & Houston
F or V to 2nd Ave / 6 to Bleecker St.
www.bowerypoetry.com

↑ Index

268. Mark Weiss
free bookcases
Thu 13 Nov 2008

I need to get rid of 12 bookcases. They're professionally-made, stained, with brackets for moveable shelves, four feet high, widths 20-37 inches. They came from a defunct bookshop. Anyone who can get to me (I'm in northern Manhattan) can have as many as she/he wants for the asking. Please backchannel.

Mark

↑ Index

269. Poetry Project
Events at The Poetry Project November
Thu 13 Nov 2008

Here¹s what we have coming up at The Poetry Project . . .

Monday, November 17, 8 PM
Suzanne Stein & Ann Stephenson

Suzanne Stein is a poet. Her work has appeared in Bay Poetics, War & Peace 3, Mirage Periodical, Both Both, Commonweal, New Langton Arts, the San Francisco Exploratorium, Artists Television Access, and elsewhere. Two of several projects forthcoming this year: a chapbook, Passenger Ship, from Ypolita press, and Signs of Life from O Books. Former co-director and film curator at four walls gallery, she works currently as community producer at SFMOMA. Suzanne is editor and publisher of the small press TAXT, and she lives in Oakland. Ann Stephenson is the author of the chapbook Wirework (Tent Editions, 2006). Her manuscript, The Poles, was a finalist for the 2008 Bateau Press BOOM Chapbook Series. Her poems have recently appeared or are forthcoming in The Brooklyn Rail, Coconut, Combo, Forklift, MIRAGE#4/PERIOD(ical), Saint Elizabeth Street, Sal Mimeo, Shampoo, Shifter and TYPO. She received her MFA from Bard College in 2007 and currently divides her time between Atlanta and New York City.

Wednesday, November 19, 8 PM
Bruce Andrews & cris cheek

Bruce Andrews is a performance artist, poet and founding co-editor of the journal L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E, he is the author of over 30 books of poetry and a collection of innovative critical essays, has published poetry and criticism widely, and has been the subject of numerous critical articles over the past several years. Books of poetry and performance scores include Lip Service (Coach House Press, 2001), a recasting of Dante¹s Paradiso ‹ [Jacket 22, online, contains a symposium on this text]. The Millennium Project, a thousand-page sequence, is online (along with earlier chapbooks from the 1970s) on Craig Dworkin¹s Eclipse site. Three most recent books of poetry: Swoon Noir (from Chax), Designated Heartbeat (from Salt), and Co (collaborative Œduet¹ texts with Jessica Grim, Yedda Morrison, Kim Rosenfield, Jesse Freeman & Barbara Cole (from Roof). Andrews has taught Political Science at Fordham University since moving to New York City in 1975 ‹ with a focus on global capitalism, U.S. imperialism, the politics of communication, conspiracy theory, and covert politics. In New York City, he has also been involved in a long series of collaborative multi-media theatrical projects and performances. As composer, sound designer & live mixer, since the mid 1980s, he has been Music Director for Sally Silvers & Dancers. cris cheek is a poet, book maker, sound artist, mixed-media practitioner and interdisciplinary performer. He is renowned as a British poet, most associated with the London poets of the 1980s and 1990s, but has strong connections to poetries in the US too and is currently living and working in the Ohio River Valley. cheek's texts have been commissioned and shown internationally, often in multiple versions using diverse media for their production and circulation. There are two important long-term collaborations. One with the Welsh composer and voice "banshee" Sianed Jones in groups such as Slant (with Philip Jeck); their book/cd Songs From Navigation (Reality Street 1998) documents one aspect of that work. A further full body of near decade-long collaboration(s) with Kirsten Lavers as TNWK is now mothballed at www.tnwk.net. His first solo book for some time the church, the school, the beer was published last year by Critical Documents (2007). A major retrospective book and DVD is forthcoming from The Gig.

Friday, November 21, 10 PM
Poets' Potluck III

Natives and newcomers alike join the Three Sisters (the harvest; or Diana, Nicole, and Corrine) for a giving of thanks, foods, poetry, music, and autumnal beverages. A two-time staple of last-year¹s series, the night will again feature performances by many and food by everyone so inclined. Grab your canned pumpkin, plastic cool whip containers, and blue-lined notebooks, and pilgrim your way over. If you¹d like to participate, email poetryprojectfridays (at) gmail (dot) com.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

270. patrick dunagan
Big Bell release party at Adobe Books, SF, CA
Thu 13 Nov 2008

***

BIG BELL #2 RELEASE PARTY
ADOBE BOOKS

16th between valencia & guerrero
November 20th
8 pm

with readings by Bill Berkson
Leigh Gallagher
& Sunnylyn Thibodeaux

& featuring Conspiracy of Venus

Bill Berkson lives in San Francisco and New York. His latest books are *BILL * with Colter Jacobsen, Our Friends Will Pass Among You Silently, and Sudden Address: Selected Lectures 1981-2006. Coffee House Press will publish his Portrait and Dream: New & Selected Poems 1959-2008 in Spring 2009.

Despite having led a rather quiet and inconsequential life, Leigh Gallagheris a happy person who likes monogrammed pajamas, prescription opiates, lucky scratchers, little boys, pure caffeine, sincere weeping, rhomboidal square-dance, pedestrian comedy, pretentious literature, documentary film, and of course, the great outdoors. As of late she spends her time in a plywood shack or amongst fancy baked goods, depending on the season.

Sunnylyn Thibodeaux is from New Orleans. Her poems have appeared in Blue Book, Big Bridge, Night Palace, Morning Train, and other various magazines. Small books include: Curves & Curses, Last We Spoke, 20/20 Yielding, United Untied, and Hidden Driveways Ahead (forthcoming). With Micah Ballard, she co-edits Auguste Press.

Conspiracy of Venus was formed in early 2007 with the artistic direction of Joyce Todd McBride, whose unique and haunting arrangements bring new dimensions to familiar songs. The all women's choir is devoted to exploring the art and technique of singing music that ranges from cutting edge to classic including songs by Bjork, Joni Mitchell, Hildegard von Bingen, Tom Waits, Rufus Wainwright, and Leonard Cohen. This sister group to Conspiracy of Beards rings out 25 voices strong and continually intrigues Bay-Area audiences. http://conspiracyofvenus.blogspot.com/

***

↑ Index

271. Joel Chace
John Olson's JACKET Review of Joel Chace's CLEANING THE MIRROR
Thu 13 Nov 2008

John Olson's review of Joel Chace's CLEANING THE MIRROR: SELECTED AND NEW POEMS Is now accessible on the JACKET 36 website.

http://jacketmagazine.com/36/r-chace-rb-olson.shtml

↑ Index

272. Obododimma Oha
Re: David
Fri 14 Nov 2008

Many thanks.
Obododimma.

_____
From: Aryanil Mukherjee <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, November 13, 2008 12:33:14 AM
Subject: Re: David

Obododimma

That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always intended.
I have made such blemishes in the past too.

Aryanil
----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
Subject: Re: David

> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.*
>
> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at

> POETICS?
> Be well!
>
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you get that e-mail, be warned.
>
> -- Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008 7:01 PM

↑ Index

273. Mark Melnicove
Re: Poetry/Art in the time of Kennedy
Fri 14 Nov 2008

The first time I heard a poet read out loud or knew that poetry existed was when Robert Frost recited THE GIFT OUTRIGHT at JFK's inauguration. My 8 1/2-year-old consciousness was wowed by his ghostly figure on the family's teeny-weeny Zenith B&W. Sure his performance was shaky and he came off as a bit of a bumbler and the poem presented American history from an european colonists' point-of-view and I might not have understood a word of it then, but I learned from that event (even if subconsciously) that poetry mattered, and beyond that, it mattered in the public sphere. I'm not saying I wouldn't have become a poet if I had not experienced Frost's struggle for sense and imagery, but something touched me deeply that day which still rumbles in and from my soul. _____

From: George Bowering [mailto:[redacted]]
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, 11 Nov 2008 22:04:42 -0500
Subject: Re: Poetry/Art in the time of Kennedy

On Nov 11, 2008, at 2:25 PM, J. Scappettone wrote:

> , I'm seeking engaging and/or
> thoughtful resources on poetry in the era of (the live) Kennedy.

Well, the Bay of Pigs and the Cuban missile crisis sure gave us something to write about.

George B.
Author of his own misfortunes.

↑ Index

274. Chris Pusateri

CHRIS PUSATERI & MICHELLE NAKA PIERCE AT NAROPA UNIVERSITY, FRIDAY NOV 14th 7pm

Fri 14 Nov 2008

Join us tonight for a reading:

Who: Chris Pusateri, Michelle Naka Pierce, and others
Where: Naropa University, Shambhala Hall, 2130 Arapahoe Ave, Boulder CO
When: 7:00pm
For more info: write to [redacted]

Michelle Naka Pierce's most recent book is Beloved Integer (Bootstrap/PUB LUSH, 2007). Excerpts from her new manuscript She, A Blueprint for InterSurface (a text/image document with collage art by Sue Hammond West) are forthcoming in Mandorla, Trickhouse, Sous Rature, and Foursquare.

Chris Pusateri is the author of Anon (BlazeVox, 2008) and Berserker Alphabetics (xPressed, 2003). New work is forthcoming in Fence, Mandorla, and Zoland Poetry. A librarian by trade, he lives in Colorado.

Windows Live Hotmail now works up to 70% faster.
http://windowslive.com/Explore/Hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_faster_112008

↑ Index

275. Eric Hoffman
New Book Available
Fri 14 Nov 2008

Hello,

My new book has been published: There (a poem).

Copi

Hello,

My new book has been published: There (a poem).

Copies are available by either paypal or through the author. (On-line retailers soon to be available).

If you have paypal (www.paypal.com), you can send $16 ($14 plus $2 shipping and handling) to [redacted]

Or, if you prefer, you can send a check by mail for same price to:
Eric Hoffman
185 Pine Street, Apartment 413
Manchester, CT 06040

Thank you,
Eric

↑ Index

276. steve russell
Re: David
Fri 14 Nov 2008

Nigerian scam: we're simply speaking of a locale, no different than saying Florida scam, or New York scam. An ethnic slur??? Scamming is universal.

↑ Index

277. Ryan Daley
Re: David
Fri 14 Nov 2008

More on email scams:

http://archive.salon.com/people/feature/2001/08/07/419scams/print.html

http://www.snopes.com/crime/fraud/nigeria.asp

On 11/12/08, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> It will do, that is, until the artists get angry.
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 7:51 PM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> Well, the use of email to scam people originated in Nigeria. The term, 419 >> Letter Scam, is used because 419 is the Nigerian criminal code designated >> for email scams.
>>
>> I take offense to use of the term "conman," which seems to imply that all >> conniving anti-social personalities that seek to remove money from one >> person's pocket into the pocket of another person who might be more or less >> deserving of said funds are men. We need to not use "Nigerian" or "con man"
>> to refer to either of these processes/individuals. For now, "con artist" >> will do.
>>
>> In Barry's defense, if the above cannot be termed so, it seems the email >> scam did first originate in Nigeria, and still has a more booming business >> there than certain other countries. The Iraq War is the Iraq War because it >> takes place in Iraq.
>>
>> -Ryan
>>
>>
>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 5:00 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>wrote:
>>
>>> Hi Barry,
>>> I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What >>> makes >>> you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read
the >>> history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and >>> other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades

>>> before
>>> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>>>
>>> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a >>> criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to >>> insult
>>> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we >>> criminalize
>>> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at
>>> POETICS?
>>> Be well!
>>>
>>> --- Obododimma Oha.
>>>
>>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
>>> [redacted]> wrote:
>>>
>>> > It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into
>>> and
>>> > e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,
>>> stranded
>>> > in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
>>> Needless >>> > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if >>> you
>>> > get that e-mail, be warned.
>>> >
>>> guidelines
>>> >
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> --
>>> Obododimma Oha
>>> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>>> Dept. of English
>>> University of Ibadan
>>> Nigeria
>>>
>>> &

>>>
>>> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>>> University of Ibadan
>>>
>>> Phone: [redacted];
>>> [redacted].
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

278. Julie Strand

Saturday 11/15 Katy Lederer & Noah Eli Gordon in Milwaukee

Fri 14 Nov 2008

========== SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1-3PM: A MASTER CLASS WITH KATY LEDERER ==========

Poetic Memoir and Lyrical Nonfiction: A Master Class with Katy Lederer
Saturday, November 15, 2008; 1-3pm ($25 includes workshop and reading)

In this workshop, Katy Lederer, author of the memoir Poker Face: A Girlhood Among Gamblers and a poetry editor at Fence Magazine, will discuss various craft elements of the poetic or lyric memoir, including tone, syntax, point of view, dialogue, and paragraph structure. The focus will be on students' own projects and their development. We will be undertaking several free-writing exercises, so bring paper and pen.

Katy Lederer is the author of the poetry collections, Winter Sex (Verse Press, 2002) and The Heaven-Sent Leaf (BOA Editions, forthcoming 2008) as well as the memoir Poker Face: A Girlhood Among Gamblers (Crown, 2003), which Publishers Weekly included on its list of the Best Nonfiction Books of 2003 and Esquire Magazine named one of its eight Best Books of the Year 2003.

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/workshops/adults.shtml#lederer

========== SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 7PM: KATY

LEDERER & NOAH ELI GORDON READING
==========

Noah Eli Gordon is the author of six books, including Novel Pictorial Noise (Harper Perennial, 2007), which was selected by John Ashbery for the National Poetry Series. He writes a column on chapbooks for Rain Taxi: Review of Books and teaches at the University of Colorado Denver.

Noah Eli Gordon's poems take the form of jotted notes in an artist's notebook (I was reminded in particular of Odilon Redon's). Each day one begins anew to weave the web, having moved a step forward (or sometimes backward) since yesterday's attempt. Thus each prose bloc, modified or modulated by the ghostly fragments that interleave them, sharpens the focus by which he "attempt[s] via the unknown to give grammar a purpose." The effort in itself is its own reward, and a prodigal one. --John Ashbery

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/poems/noah_eli_gordon01.shtml

Katy Lederer is the author of the poetry collections, Winter Sex (Verse Press, 2002) and The Heaven-Sent Leaf (BOA Editions, 2008) as well as the memoir Poker Face: A Girlhood Among Gamblers (Crown, 2003), which Publishers Weekly included on its list of the Best Nonfiction Books of 2003 and Esquire Magazine named one of its eight Best Books of the Year 2003.

In The Heaven-Sent Leaf, Katy Lederer draws on her experience as both acclaimed younger poet and "brainworker" at a hedge fund in midtown Manhattan to produce an uncannily prescient work of high lyric. Though on its surface The Heaven-Sent Leaf addresses that most taboo of subjects—money—what it ultimately confronts is what it means to be, as Wallace Stevens put it, "finally human."

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/poems/katy_lederer01.shtml

Woodland Pattern Book Center, 720 E. Locust St. Milwaukee, WI 53212 (414) [redacted]

Be a part of The Woodland Pattern
Donate or write a review for website www.woodlandpattern.org
Contribute to the blog woodlandpattern.blogspot.com/
*Become a Myspace friend * http://www.myspace.com/woodlandpattern Become a Facebook friend
http://www.facebook.com/people/Woodland_Pattern/512368745

-- Behind the storm of daily conflict and crisis, the dramatic confrontations, the tumult of political struggle, the poet, the artist, the musician, continues the quiet work of centuries, building bridges of experience between peoples, reminding man of the universality of his feelings and desires and despairs, and reminding him that the forces that unite are deeper than those that divide. - John F. Kennedy

↑ Index

279. Stuart Ross

Toronto: Meet the Presses Indie Literary Market, November 29

Fri 14 Nov 2008

Meet the Presses invites you to the first

I N D I E L I T E R A R Y M A R K E T

The Meet the Presses Indie Literary Market gives the public an opportunity to meet about 30 local literary presses and directly purchase publications that may not be readily available (or available at all!) in bookstores.

Saturday, November 29
Noon - 5 pm
Clinton's Tavern (back room), 693 Bloor West

Participating literary publishers and magazines include:

Agora
Coach House Books
ECW Press
The Emergency Response Unit
Existere
Insomniac Press
The Mercury Press
Pedlar Press
Peter O'Toole
Proper Tales Press
serif of nottingham editions
Um Yeah Press
Underwhich Editions
Wolsak & Wynn

And the list is growing.

This is Toronto's only all-literary indie-publisher showcase! You'll find cutting-edge fiction, poetry, and creative non-fiction from some of the most exciting, challenging publishers in Canada.

Admission is free.

Clinton's has a great selection of food and drink for purchase.

The Indie Literary Market is curated by the volunteer collective Meet the Presses: Gary Barwin, Paul Dutton, Maria Erskine, Ally Fleming, Beth Follett, Maggie Helwig, Leigh Nash, Nick Power, Stuart Ross

http://www.meetthepresses.wordpress.com

↑ Index

280. Doug Holder

Boston Area Small Press and Poetry Scene : Behind the scenes at Houghton Mifflin

Fri 14 Nov 2008

Boston Area Small Press and Poetry Scene http://dougholder.blogspot.com

Friday, November 14, 2008
Lawrence Kessenich: Behind the Scenes at Houghton Mifflin.

Lawrence Kessenich: Behind the Scenes at Houghton Mifflin.

With Doug Holder

Lawrence Kessenich was an editor at the prestigious Boston publishing house Houghton Mifflin. Kessenich, 58, attended the MFA program at U/Mass Amherst, lived near Emily Dickinson's house, and encountered such poets as: Joe Langland, Donald Junkins, and James Tate. When he didn't secure a teaching assistant position he was forced to drop out and applied to the Radcliff Publishing Seminar, attending in the summer of 1978. During his time at Houghton Mifflin, Kessenich recruited W. P. Kinsella author of "Shoeless Joe," Rick Boyer's "Billingsgate Shoal", a mystery that won an Edgar Award for best mystery novel of the year, "Confessions of Taoist on Wall Street," by David Payne, and "Selected Poems of Anne Sexton," edited by Diane Middlebrook,. Kessenich was the editor for Terry McMillan's first book "Mama," as well. I spoke with him on my Somerville Community Access TV Show: " Poet to Poet: Writer to Writer."

Doug Holder: After you graduated form the University of Wisconsin in 1974, you told me you "meandered" throughout your twenties. What did you do? Is meandering a good thing?

Lawrence Kessenich: It was good for me. At the end of college I was interested in the theatre. I started doing amateur theatre. I basically spent my twenties applying to graduate schools. I was accepted into a theatre program, but at the last minute decided it wasn't for me. I was starting to write a lot at that point. I put together some short stories that I had written, and applied to 5 or 6 programs. I didn't get into any of them. At that time I started writing more poetry and so the next time I applied, I applied in poetry. I got into three different programs and chose the one at U/Mass Amherst. I have always been attracted to Massachusetts. They had a very good program at U/Mass. Donald Junkins, was the head of the writing program at that time. But I ran out of money, and I didn't get a teaching assistantship. So I had to leave.

DH: How did you support yourself in your twenties?

LK: I had all sorts of odd jobs. I worked in a hospital and assisted in autopsies—that was an interesting experience. I worked at an art supply store, a U Haul dealership, etc…

DH: You attended the Radcliffe Publishing Course in the 70's. Was it sort of like a boot camp for getting into the publishing industry?

LK: That's a pretty good description. It's six weeks and it is very intense. I went 25 years ago, I think it has been around for sixty years now. They bring in a lot of people from the publishing business, it is just not theoretical. You hear from people who do it on a day-to-day basis. They do some recruiting. It does give you contacts in the publishing industry. I almost got a job in New York but I decided I couldn't live in New York on the salary they offered. I eventually got the job at Houghton Mifflin from someone I met at the course.

DH: But you originally wanted to be a writer and now you found yourself on the road to being an editor.

LK: I sort of had an epiphany when I left U/Mass. I thought maybe I was more suited to be the helper than the person who actually creates the stuff. I thought maybe I was more suited to be in the background. It turned out I was pretty good at it…it was a good role for me. But eventually I did want to become a writer myself. I did a little, but it is hard when you are an editor. There are only a handful of people who do it.

DH: William Maxwell of The New Yorker did it.

LK: Yeah and Toni Morrison, Michael Korda.

DH: Did the famous editor of Hemingway and Thomas Wolff, Maxwell Perkins, write?

LK: Absolutely not. He was a pure editor. He was sort of my idol.

DH: Your first job at Houghton Mifflin was editorial assistant to Robie Macauley, a well-known name in the literary world. He was the first serious fiction editor at Playboy. He must have had a few stories from the Mansion, right?

LK: He was there in the 60's and was able to pay writers $2,000 a short story. In that era you could live on $6,000 a year. He literally supported, sometimes well-known writers, by publishing two or three of their stories in Playboy. So it was a tremendously powerful position, and he got to know a lot of writers very well.

At one time he decided to take a trip to Europe with his wife. The boss asked: " Well, what are you going to do?" He replied: "Well we are going here and there. While I am there I am going to visit Nabokov, etc…" He knew all these writers abroad. His boss said" Oh, well, we will pay for that." They wanted him to maintain contacts with these writers.

DH: You say you had to "acquire" novels in order to get ahead. How does one go about doing that?

LK: Well, for novels or nonfiction—you basically read articles. When you are starting out agents won't talk to you. So you talk to other people, read literary magazines, the smaller magazines, where the authors aren't necessarily well known. There is a magazine in the publishing trade called: "Publisher's Weekly." I discovered the author W.P. Kinsella who wrote "Shoeless Joe" there. The reviews appear in PW before the book is even out. So I happened to read this review of a Canadian anthology of short stories. There was a one sentence description of Kinsella's story: " An Iowa farmer builds a playing field in his cornfield in order to invoke his baseball hero Shoeless Joe Jackson." It sounded wonderful. I'm from the Midwest, and I like sports. I was young and naïve and I didn't know much about publishing. I figured that fourteen editors would write to him as soon as they saw it. So I decided I was going to write him right away. I asked him if he ever had written a novel. Nobody wants to start with short stories. It happens once in a while but it's rare.

The Canadian anthology was going to be in the store. And this will give you an idea how little money you make in publishing: I was so poor I didn't feel I could buy the book, so I went into a bookstore in Harvard Square and read the story. I was just thrilled. He wrote back and said: " I'd love to write a novel. I tried several times but I didn't have any luck. I told him to send me everything he had ever written, which at that time were two books of short stories, a beginning novel, etc… I read all of it, but I pretty much came back to the original short story. This was the story that became "Shoeless Joe," and the subsequent movie "Field of Dreams." He had an idea about baseball stories. I said that it was great, but that he should start with the first short story and go from there. He responded: " No, I don't want to do that." He had another way he wanted to write it. So about three months later I get about ninety pages of the novel. And honestly, it was terrible. It felt like it wasn't even the same writer. I worked up my courage and said: " Look, I don't think it is working this way. I think you should start with that short story and go from there." And once he did that it took off. I never told him I was just an assistant editor.

DH: Nan Talese promoted you to editor. She had the misfortune to publish James Frey's ill-fated memoir. How can an editor guard against phony memoirs, etc…?

LK: What can you do? You'd have to know the person's life. People usually have some form of credentials…so there is an element of trust.

DH: You were Terry McMillan's editor for her first book "Mama." It was chose from the slush pile. Are slush piles extinct today?

LK: Yeah. Pretty much. It has to come through an editor or an agent. It's a matter of time an expense. It was a fulltime job. I think publishers want to use interns for other things. Publishing houses run on a pretty small margin, so when they do get interns they use them on things that have to be done. The slush pile is a problem because it is huge; anything can get in there. If you get it through an editor or an agent the file is much smaller.

I think it is now shifted to the agents. They now get the slush pile.

DH: Do agents seek quality work or just work that will sell?

LK: They have the same problems as publishing houses. They can't invest a lot of time in things that won't sell. I think there are a lot more agents out there that are more idealistic than people realize. If there is something they love, but are not sure if people are going to buy it, they probably will go to bat for it.

DH: You worked with Diane Middlebrook on the "Select Poems of Anne Sexton." What role did you plav—did you select any of the poems?

LK: No. I wish I could of because she was one of my favorite poets. I was there as a representative in the publishing house. I made sure that when the manuscript was turned in they did the right things with it: like cover design, inside design, and I was the intermediary between anyone else they had to deal with.

DH: In an interview with Lois Ames, Sexton's and Sylvia Plath's social worker, and author of the intro to Plath's "Bell Jar," Ames told me she tried to do a biography of Plath but ran into a lot of trouble with the family. Did this happen to Middlebrook?

LK: It took years for Diane to write "Anne Sexton: A Biography." But during that time she called me up and said: "You are never going to believe what I have---the tapes of Sexton's sessions with her therapist." "Well" I said. "This will guarantee that the book will be controversial if nothing else. And it certainly was and the family was very upset. This fact didn't come out until the book was published.

--- Doug Holder/ Ibbetson Update

↑ Index

281. Obododimma Oha
Re: David
Fri 14 Nov 2008

You are right in preferring "con artist" to "con man", for gender reasons. But I would like you to publish the first 419 email sent from Nigeria on this list, to prove that the use of email in conning originated from Nigeria.

-- Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:51 AM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:

> Well, the use of email to scam people originated in Nigeria. The term, 419 Letter Scam, is used because 419 is the Nigerian criminal code designated for email scams.
>
> I take offense to use of the term "conman," which seems to imply that all conniving anti-social personalities that seek to remove money from one person's pocket into the pocket of another person who might be more or less deserving of said funds are men. We need to not use "Nigerian" or "con man" to refer to either of these processes/individuals. For now, "con artist" will do.
>
> In Barry's defense, if the above cannot be termed so, it seems the email scam did first originate in Nigeria, and still has a more booming business there than certain other countries. The Iraq War is the Iraq War because it takes place in Iraq.
>
> -Ryan
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 5:00 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before
> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>
> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize

> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
> Be well!
>
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you > get that e-mail, be warned.
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English

University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

282. Obododimma Oha
Re: David
Fri 14 Nov 2008

We know the uses of adjectives. If anyone has doubts about the what the modifier "Nigerian" is doing in "Nigerian scams", that person can pick a good grammar book and crosscheck. Moreover, we are talking about language as "loaded weapon" here, and as Dwight Bolinger says, what is even more dangerous is to assume that such a weapon is innocuous!

-- Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:38 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

> No, it is not a good point.
> To say "Nigerian scams" is not to say that scams are necessarily Nigerian.
> The very grammar suggests that only some scams are Nigerian.
> If we say US gangsters, that is not to say that all gangsters are USAmericans.
> Here's another parallel: if I complain about Meyer Lansky,
> that does not make me anti-semitic.
> I have received many many scam letters from Nigeria in the last year.
> Some from South Africa, too. The latter were South African scam letters.
>
> gb
>
> On Nov 12, 2008, at 3:33 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee wrote:
>
> Obododimma
>
> That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
> We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always intended.
> I have made such blemishes in the past too.

Aryanil
----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
Subject: Re: David

Hi Barry,
*I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before
what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you get that e-mail, be warned.

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English

> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> ---
>
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008 7:01 PM
>
> George Harvey Bowering
> Fond of many dead people.

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

283. Peter Ciccariello
Re: visuel concreat sampler
Fri 14 Nov 2008

Nico,

Very powerful work. I am especially intrigued by "from textorn" and "staring index", and "in other words, you see", relating, I suppose, to the organic fluidity in those pieces. Thanks for the look...

- Peter Ciccariello

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 12:21 AM, Nico Vassilakis <[redacted]> wrote:

> each sample is from a series and each series is sampled here
>
> http://www.flickr.com/photos/[redacted]/
>
> somewhere from 1986, (1995-2008)
>
> thanks for your time,
>
> n

↑ Index

284. Stephen Vincent
Re: David
Fri 14 Nov 2008

I taught in Nigeria for two years way way back. I am still in close contact with former Nigerian students, and friends from the time. I personally get offended when I hear "Nigerian scam" or variations on that. For a moment, when it became vogue-ish to indulge that characterization, it gave me the impression that the whole country had been taken over by these Internet wielding scam 'artists' - which I just as suddenly was stupid and highly prejudicial, dismissive, etc.

Maybe human nature? Maybe most countries are looking at the USA and reducing us down to a cast of greedy unscrupulous banker/mortgage broker/ real estate predators??

Nigeria - its pleasures and real disturbances (corrupt practices by some included) is much more interesting country than that easy reductive 'scam' slight.

Humorously, the Nigerian students on the Nsukka campus where I taught, would call, in Pidgin English, the few Albino students "Peace Corpsees." (No, I did not interpet that to mean I was a 'dead man walking'!)

Better than a "Bushie" - I suspect.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

--- On Fri, 11/14/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, November 14, 2008, 3:07 PM

We know the uses of adjectives. If anyone has doubts about the what the modifier "Nigerian" is doing in "Nigerian scams", that person can pick a good grammar book and crosscheck. Moreover, we are talking about language as "loaded weapon" here, and as Dwight Bolinger says, what is even more dangerous is to assume that such a weapon is innocuous!

-- Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:38 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

> No, it is not a good point.
> To say "Nigerian scams" is not to say that scams are necessarily Nigerian.
> The very grammar suggests that only some scams are Nigerian.
> If we say US gangsters, that is not to say that all gangsters are > USAmericans.
> Here's another parallel: if I complain about Meyer Lansky,
> that does not make me anti-semitic.
> I have received many many scam letters from Nigeria in the last year.
> Some from South Africa, too. The latter were South African scam letters.
>
> gb
>
>
>
> On Nov 12, 2008, at 3:33 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee wrote:
>
> Obododimma
>>
>> That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
>> We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always >> intended.

>> I have made such blemishes in the past too.
>>
>> Aryanil
>> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha"
<[redacted]>
>> To: <[redacted]>
>> Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
>> Subject: Re: David
>>
>>
>> Hi Barry,
>>> I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What >>> makes >>> you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the >>> history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and >>> other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades
>>> before
>>> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>>>
>>> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a >>> criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to
>>> insult
>>> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we >>> criminalize >>> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at
>>> POETICS?
>>> Be well!
>>>
>>> --- Obododimma Oha.
>>>
>>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
>>> [redacted]> wrote:
>>>

>>> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
>>>> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,
>>>> stranded
>>>> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
>>>> Needless >>>> to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if >>>> you
>>>> get that e-mail, be warned.
>>>>
Check
>>>> guidelines
>>>>
>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> --
>>> Obododimma Oha
>>> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>>> Dept. of English
>>> University of Ibadan
>>> Nigeria
>>>
>>> &
>>>
>>> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>>> University of Ibadan
>>>
>>> Phone: [redacted];
>>> [redacted].
>>>
Check
>>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

>>

>>
>>
>> No virus found in this incoming message.
>> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
>> Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008
>> 7:01 PM
>>
>>
>>
> George Harvey Bowering
> Fond of many dead people.
>
>
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

285. Jim Andrews
Re: visuel concreat sampler
Fri 14 Nov 2008

---

a real treat, nico. amazing. thanks a lot. i've linked to it at http://vispo.com/misc/links.htm#nico

> each sample is from a series and each series is sampled here
>
> http://www.flickr.com/photos/[redacted]/
>
> somewhere from 1986, (1995-2008)

> thanks for your time,
>
> n

↑ Index

286. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododimma
Fri 14 Nov 2008

I wanna say that a certain level of parochialism comes out in these most recent responses to Obododimma's reply. Just think about what this first term means for a second.

Next, I wanna say that given George's almost fetishizing of the expression "USAmerican," I'm more than bit surprised at both his reaction and tone, and most certainly because he has almost demanded that we take note of his own sensitivitiy (as, apparently, an other).

While I do not think it my responsibility to be overly concerned about anyone's sensitivities, certainly any more than to presuppose the credibility/reliability of narrative, I do, however, think it important to listen. Without engaging in one-up-manship, I have NEVER been called anything but an American in my extensive travels (which is to say, at least privately, I think these folks pushing this expression are harping on a non-issue. Can I say: "harping"). But, and this is my point, I have managed to listen.

Alex

↑ Index

287. Mark Weiss
Re: David
Fri 14 Nov 2008

It's called a Nigerian scam, the way French Fries, which are considerably more dangerous, are called French Fries. Unlike French Fries, the scam really did originate in the country for which it's named, though of course now they come from everywhere. I guess there's no justice.

One solution would be to avoid all vocalizations beyond grunts, tho even grunts may be taken by someone somewhere as offensive.

Mark

At 05:59 PM 11/14/2008, you wrote:
>You are right in preferring "con artist" to "con man", for gender reasons.
>But I would like you to publish the first 419 email sent from Nigeria on >this list, to prove that the use of email in conning originated from >Nigeria.

>
>-- Obododimma.
>
>On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:51 AM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > Well, the use of email to scam people originated in Nigeria. The term, 419 > > Letter Scam, is used because 419 is the Nigerian criminal code designated > > for email scams.
> >
> > I take offense to use of the term "conman," which seems to imply that all > > conniving anti-social personalities that seek to remove money from one > > person's pocket into the pocket of another person who might be more or less > > deserving of said funds are men. We need to not use "Nigerian" or "con man"
> > to refer to either of these processes/individuals. For now, "con artist" > > will do.
> >
> > In Barry's defense, if the above cannot be termed so, it seems the email
> > scam did first originate in Nigeria, and still has a more booming business > > there than certain other countries. The Iraq War is the Iraq War because it > > takes place in Iraq.
> >
> > -Ryan
> >
> > On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 5:00 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> > wrote:
> >
> > > Hi Barry,
> > > I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What > > > makes > > > you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read
the > > > history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and > > > other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades
> > before
> > > what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
> > >
> > > I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a > > > criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to

> > > insult
> > > that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we > > criminalize
> > > and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at
> > > POETICS?
> > > Be well!
> > >
> > > --- Obododimma Oha.
> > >
> > > On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> > > [redacted]> wrote:
> > >
> > > > It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into
> > and
> > > > e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,
> > > stranded
> > > > in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
> > > Needless > > > > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if > > you
> > > > get that e-mail, be warned.
> > > >
> > > guidelines
> > > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > Obododimma Oha
> > > Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> > > Dept. of English
> > > University of Ibadan
> > > Nigeria
> > >
> > > &
> > >
> > > Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> > > University of Ibadan
> > >
> > > Phone: [redacted];
> > > [redacted].
> > >

> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> >
>
>
>
>--
>Obododimma Oha
>Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>Dept. of English
>University of Ibadan
>Nigeria
>
>&
>
>Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>University of Ibadan
>
>Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>

↑ Index

288. Jim Andrews
"A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Sat 15 Nov 2008

I thought this was pretty interesting:
"A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
http://infinityskitchen.com/blog/oulipo-documentar

three videos.

nothing you wouldn't get from a reading of the oulipo compendium, but there it is in video on the web very easy.

the constraint, not the application of the constraint.

more interested in potential/poetential literature than in the application of the constraint, i.e., 'the thing itself'.

i think that's at the core of it.

a very useful idea/aesthetic.

to me, that's 'conceptual literature' in the best sense of that term.

not exactly 'content is king'.

unless we think of the content of the concept. then it is. but in a very different way.

the content of the concept?

yes, everything it implies and all its atmospheres. is it a one-liner or does it have roots and legs and generative fecundity.

ja

↑ Index

289. cris cheek

Re: Events at The Poetry Project November

Sat 15 Nov 2008

I've never read at the Poetry Project before and i'm really looking forwards to it.

I have new work. Hopefully i'll see some of you there.

love and love
cris

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 6:27 PM, Poetry Project <[redacted]>wrote:

> Here¹s what we have coming up at The Poetry Project . . .
>
> Monday, November 17, 8 PM
> Suzanne Stein & Ann Stephenson
>
> Suzanne Stein is a poet. Her work has appeared in Bay Poetics, War & Peace 3, Mirage Periodical, Both Both, Commonweal, New Langton Arts, the San Francisco Exploratorium, Artists Television Access, and elsewhere. Two of several projects forthcoming this year: a chapbook, Passenger Ship, from Ypolita press, and Signs of Life from O Books. Former co-director and film curator at four walls gallery, she works currently as community producer at SFMOMA. Suzanne is editor and publisher of the small press TAXT, and she lives in Oakland. Ann Stephenson is the author of the chapbook Wirework (Tent Editions, 2006). Her manuscript, The Poles, was a finalist for the 2008 Bateau Press BOOM Chapbook Series. Her poems have recently appeared or are forthcoming in The Brooklyn Rail, Coconut, Combo, Forklift, MIRAGE#4/PERIOD(ical), Saint Elizabeth Street, Sal Mimeo, Shampoo, Shifter and TYPO. She received her MFA from Bard College in 2007 and currently divides her time between Atlanta and New York City.
>
> Wednesday, November 19, 8 PM

Bruce Andrews & cris cheek

Bruce Andrews is a performance artist, poet and founding co-editor of the journal L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E, he is the author of over 30 books of poetry and a collection of innovative critical essays, has published poetry and criticism widely, and has been the subject of numerous critical articles over the past several years. Books of poetry and performance scores include Lip Service (Coach House Press, 2001), a recasting of Dante¹s Paradiso ‹ [Jacket 22, online, contains a symposium on this text]. The Millennium Project, a thousand-page sequence, is online (along with earlier chapbooks from the 1970s) on Craig Dworkin¹s Eclipse site. Three most recent books of poetry: Swoon Noir (from Chax), Designated Heartbeat (from Salt), and Co (collaborative Œduet¹ texts with Jessica Grim, Yedda Morrison, Kim Rosenfield, Jesse Freeman & Barbara Cole (from Roof). Andrews has taught Political Science at Fordham University since moving to New York City in 1975 ‹ with a focus on global capitalism, U.S. imperialism, the politics of communication, conspiracy theory, and covert politics. In New York City, he has also been involved in a long series of collaborative multi-media theatrical projects and performances. As composer, sound designer & live mixer, since the mid 1980s, he has been Music Director for Sally Silvers & Dancers. cris cheek is a poet, book maker, sound artist, mixed-media practitioner and interdisciplinary performer. He is renowned as a British poet, most associated with the London poets of the 1980s and 1990s, but has strong connections to poetries in the US too and is currently living and working in the Ohio River Valley. cheek's texts have been commissioned and shown internationally, often in multiple versions using diverse media for their production and circulation. There are two important long-term collaborations. One with the Welsh composer and voice "banshee" Sianed Jones in groups such as Slant (with Philip Jeck); their book/cd Songs From Navigation (Reality Street 1998) documents one aspect of that work. A further full body of near decade-long collaboration(s) with Kirsten Lavers as TNWK is now mothballed at www.tnwk.net. His first solo book for some time the church, the school, the beer was published last year by Critical Documents (2007). A major retrospective book and DVD is forthcoming from The Gig.

Friday, November 21, 10 PM
Poets' Potluck III

Natives and newcomers alike join the Three Sisters (the harvest; or Diana, Nicole, and Corrine) for a giving of thanks, foods, poetry, music, and autumnal beverages. A two-time staple of last-year¹s series, the night will again feature performances by many and food by everyone so inclined. Grab your canned pumpkin, plastic cool whip containers, and blue-lined notebooks, and pilgrim your way over. If you¹d like to participate, email poetryprojectfridays (at) gmail (dot) com.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

290. Kimmelman, Burt
Check out Jane Augustine's "A Woman's Guide to Mountain Climbing"
Sat 15 Nov 2008

From Eileen Tabios:

_____
From: [redacted] [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Thursday, November 13, 2008 8:28 PM
To: [redacted]; [redacted]; [redacted]; Kimmelman, Burt Subject: Check out Jane Augustine's "A Woman's Guide to Mountain Climbing"

Click here: Jane Augustine's "A Woman's Guide to Mountain Climbing" | Books & Writers | New West Network<http://www.newwest.net/topic/article/jane_augustines_a_womans_guide_to_mountain_climbing/C39/L39/>

There's a lovely review of Jane's book here at New West. I'm about to blog it but thought to raise it to your attention in case you didn't know... Eileen

↑ Index

291. Patrick Dillon
Re: David
Sat 15 Nov 2008

Definitely check out this site for more on 419 and scambaiting, when recipients turn the tables on scammers:

http://www.419eater.com/index.htm

Ryan Daley wrote:
> More on email scams:
>
> http://archive.salon.com/people/feature/2001/08/07/419scams/print.html
>
> http://www.snopes.com/crime/fraud/nigeria.asp
>
>
>
>
> On 11/12/08, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> It will do, that is, until the artists get angry.
>>
>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 7:51 PM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>>
>>> Well, the use of email to scam people originated in Nigeria. The term, 419 >>> Letter Scam, is used because 419 is the Nigerian criminal code designated >>> for email scams.
>>>
>>> I take offense to use of the term "conman," which seems to imply that all >>> conniving anti-social personalities that seek to remove money from one >>> person's pocket into the pocket of another person who might be more or less >>> deserving of said funds are men. We need to not use "Nigerian" or "con man" >>> to refer to either of these processes/individuals. For now, "con artist" >>> will do.

>>>
>>> In Barry's defense, if the above cannot be termed so, it seems the email
>>> scam did first originate in Nigeria, and still has a more booming business >>> there than certain other countries. The Iraq War is the Iraq War because it >>> takes place in Iraq.
>>>
>>> -Ryan
>>>
>>>
>>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 5:00 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>wrote:
>>>
>>>
>>>> Hi Barry,
>>>> I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What >>>> makes
>>>> you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the >>>> history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and >>>> other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades
>>>> before
>>>> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>>>>
>>>> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a >>>> criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to >>>> insult
>>>> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we >>>> criminalize
>>>> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at
>>>> POETICS?
>>>> Be well!
>>>>
>>>> --- Obododimma Oha.
>>>>
>>>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
>>>> [redacted]> wrote:
>>>>

>>>>
>>>>> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into
>>>>>
>>>> and
>>>>
>>>>> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,
>>>>>
>>>> stranded
>>>>
>>>>> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
>>>>>
>>>> Needless
>>>>
>>>>> to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if
>>>>>
>>>> you
>>>>
>>>>> get that e-mail, be warned.
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>> guidelines
>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>
>>>> --
>>>> Obododimma Oha
>>>> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>>>> Dept. of English
>>>> University of Ibadan
>>>> Nigeria
>>>>
>>>> &
>>>>
>>>> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>>>> University of Ibadan
>>>>
>>>> Phone: [redacted];
>>>> [redacted].
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>

>>>
>>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

292. Barry Schwabsky
Re: David
Sat 15 Nov 2008

Nurse handed over $400,000 to web scam despite FBI warning

Bobbie Johnson in San Francisco
guardian.co.uk, Saturday November 15 2008 00.01 GMT
The Guardian, Saturday November 15 2008
Â

An American woman has revealed how she was swindled out of $400,000 (Â£269,000) by Nigerian internet fraudsters, in what is believed to be one of the biggest cases of its kind ever recorded. Janella Spears, a registered nurse from Sweet Home, Oregon, said she started sending money to the scammers in 2005 after she received an email promising her several million dollars from a long-lost relative. In what is commonly known as a 419 scam - named after a section of the Nigerian criminal code - the fraudsters randomly contacted Spears over the internet, claiming they would offer her a substantial cut of $20.5m fortune in return for the cash injection which would help move it out of the country. "I kept thinking it's only a couple hundred dollars - I can get it back," she told local news. Over a period of two years, the fraudsters strung her along and encouraged her to send more payments of up to $14,000 at a time. In the end she became obsessed and sent the fraudsters more than $400,000, which she raised by remortgaging her home and spending her husband's retirement savings. Despite advice from bank officials, police and even the FBI that the scheme was a ruse, Spears said she continued to send cash in the hope of a large pay-off. Even fake emails claiming to be from the President of Nigeria and US president George Bush could not dissuade her. "I said how come you're using this non-government address? 'Oh, because our computer has a worm'," she said. The 419 fraud is one of the most common internet deceptions, and like most similar schemes is reliant on sending millions of spam messages in the hope that they land in the inbox of a gullible victim. Although finding victims requires luck rather than judgement, the incredibly low cost of sending email means that such fraud can be highly profitable. A study by researchers at University of California showed that it took an average of 12.5m spam emails for each response - but that large operations sending billions of messages could make as much as Â£2m a year. Although Spears is an exception she is far from being alone. Last year British police helped crack a similar fraud ring, which was holding fake cheques worth more than Â£1bn, which had links to groups in the Netherlands and Nigeria. Although it is difficult to calculate the value of such swindles because many victims are too embarrassed to report the crime, the government has estimated that such frauds could cost Â£3.5bn a year in Britain alone. Spears claimed she was sharing her story now in order to prevent others from falling victim to similar scams. "You're sitting there going 'how can I fall for something like that'," she said. Â Â Â Â

Â
Â
--- On Fri, 14/11/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, 14 November, 2008, 11:07 PM

We know the uses of adjectives. If anyone has doubts about the what the modifier "Nigerian" is doing in "Nigerian scams", that person can pick a good grammar book and crosscheck. Moreover, we are talking about language as "loaded weapon" here, and as Dwight Bolinger says, what is even more dangerous is to assume that such a weapon is innocuous!

-- Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:38 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

> No, it is not a good point.
> To say "Nigerian scams" is not to say that scams are necessarily Nigerian.
> The very grammar suggests that only some scams are Nigerian.
> If we say US gangsters, that is not to say that all gangsters are > USAmericans.
> Here's another parallel: if I complain about Meyer Lansky,
> that does not make me anti-semitic.
> I have received many many scam letters from Nigeria in the last year.
> Some from South Africa, too. The latter were South African scam letters.
>
> gb
>
>
>
> On Nov 12, 2008, at 3:33 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee wrote:

>
> Obododimma
>>
>> That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
>> We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always >> intended.
>> I have made such blemishes in the past too.
>>
>> Aryanil
>> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha" <[redacted]>
>> To: <[redacted]>
>> Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
>> Subject: Re: David
>>
>>
>> Hi Barry,
>>> I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What >>> makes
>>> you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the >>> history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and >>> other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades
>>> before
>>> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>>>
>>> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a >>> criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to >>> insult
>>> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we >>> criminalize
>>> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at
>>> POETICS?
>>> Be well!
>>>

>>> --- Obododimma Oha.
>>>
>>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
>>> [redacted]> wrote:
>>>
>>> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and >>>> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,
>>>> stranded
>>>> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
>>>> Needless >>>> to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if
>>>> you
>>>> get that e-mail, be warned.
>>>>
Check
>>>> guidelines
>>>>
>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> --
>>> Obododimma Oha
>>> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>>> Dept. of English
>>> University of Ibadan
>>> Nigeria
>>>
>>> &
>>>
>>> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>>> University of Ibadan
>>>
>>> Phone: [redacted];
>>> [redacted].
>>>
Check
>>>
>>

>>
>>
>>

>>
>>
>>
>> No virus found in this incoming message.
>> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
>> Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008
>> 7:01 PM
>>
>>
>>
> George Harvey Bowering
> Fond of many dead people.
>
>
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

293. Alan Sondheim

Fw: this is really important and URGENT, dear NY art friends.... (fwd)

Sat 15 Nov 2008

> Date: Saturday, November 15, 2008, 9:23 AM
> and today is the day to do it--they vote on MONDAY
>
> Click here:
> http://capwiz.com/artsusa/ny/issues/alert/?alertid=12191871&type=ML
> <http://capwiz.com/artsusa/ny/issues/alert/?alertid=12191871&type=ML>
>
> ACT NOW!!!
> The Governor proposes cutting the remaining New York State > Council on the Arts budget.
>
> We only have 2 days to make our voices heard because the > special legislative session convenes on November 18.
>
> The Legislature will consider the Governor's proposed > cuts, including an additional $7 million to the current arts > budget. This could mean that almost 400 grantees in the > October cycle and a similar number in the December cycle > would receive almost nothing. The inequities are staggering.
>
> The Governor's proposal comes on top of $2.6 (6%)
> already cut out of the State Arts Council budget a short > time ago--- thereby reducing NYSCA's budget by about 20%
> from $49 million to $39 million mid-year.
>
> The Governor called the special legislative session to deal > with the additional shortfall in the CURRENT year. His > proposed plan is a comprehensive, two-year $5.2 billion > deficit reduction plan that he says will entirely eliminate > the State's $1.5 billion current-year shortfall.
>
> The Legislature can alter the "cut list" and make > different recommendations. The Governor proposed significant > cuts to all sectors, so let your legislators know that the > tiny savings they gain from the arts cut pales in comparison > to the resulting social and economic losses in communities > across the State.
>
> WE KNOW GRASS ROOTS ORGANIZING WORKS. Send an email now. It > takes 2 minutes.
>
> Click here:
> http://capwiz.com/artsusa/ny/issues/alert/?alertid=12191871&type=ML

> <http://capwiz.com/artsusa/ny/issues/alert/?alertid=12191871&type=ML>
>
> to send an email to your legislators.
>
> Forward this email to every support of the arts you know.
> We need to FLOOD Albany with thousands of emails in the next > few days.
>
> P.S. from Su--sorry for double postings, and no need to > reply (unless to ask that I not send you these sorts of > things)
>
> -- Su Friedrich
> 118 North 11th Street
> Brooklyn, NY 11211
> [redacted]
> http://www.sufriedrich.com
>
> "I don't want to achieve immortality through my > work. I want to achieve it through not dying."
> --Woody Allen

↑ Index

294. mIEKAL aND
Re: David
Sat 15 Nov 2008

Here's the wikipedia entry on Advance Fee Fraud (also known as 419 fraud, Nigerian scam, Nigerian bank scam, Nigerian money offer, the Spanish Prisoner, the Black money scam, Russian/Ukrainian scam) with plenty of references. Since it began in the early 80s I'm pretty sure the first examples were postal rather than electronic.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Advance_fee_fraud

~mIEKAL

On Nov 14, 2008, at 4:59 PM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

> You are right in preferring "con artist" to "con man", for gender > reasons.
> But I would like you to publish the first 419 email sent from > Nigeria on > this list, to prove that the use of email in conning originated from > Nigeria.
>
> -- Obododimma.

↑ Index

295. Poetics List

The Poetics List -- Welcome Message Reminder

Sat 15 Nov 2008

Refocused List Policy In line with our editorial focus, we do not automatically post submissions but select those we think are most useful for sustaining this online community. We appreciate all submissions, but will be more selective in what we choose to post. Queries for contact info, messages intended for just a few subscribers, messages that are not on topic, "flame" messages, and free-standing personal poems or journal entries will, in general, not be forwarded to the list.

The Poetics List

Sponsored by: The Electronic Poetry Center (SUNY-Buffalo/University of Pennsylvania) and the Regan Chair (Department of English, Penn) & Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing (Penn)

Poetics List Editor: Amy King

Poetics List Editorial Board:
Charles Bernstein, Julia Bloch, Lori Emerson, Amy King, Joel Kuszai, Nick Piombino

Note: this Welcome message is also available at the EPC/@Buffalo page

Poetics Subscription Registration (required) poetics.list --at -- gmail.com

Poetics Subscription Requests:
http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html

Poetics Listserv Archive:
http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html

Poetics Post:
[redacted]

Note that any correspondence sent to the Poetics List administration account takes about ten days, for response; mail to this account is checked about once per week.

C O N T E N T S:
1. About the Poetics List
2. Posting to the List
3. Subscriptions
4. Subscription Options

5. To Unsubscribe
6. Cautions
7. Flaming

June 2008: Refocused List Policy In line with our editorial focus, we do not automatically post submissions but select those we think are most useful for sustaining this online community. We appreciate all submissions, but will be more selective in what we choose to post. Queries for contact info, messages intended for just a few subscribers, messages that are not on topic, "flame" messages, and free-standing personal poems or journal entries will, in general, not be forwarded to the list.

1. Posting to the List

Our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible. While we recognize that other lists may sponsor other possibilities for exchange, we request that those participating in this forum keep in mind the specialized and focused nature of this project and respect our decision to operate a moderated list. The Poetics List exists to support and encourage divergent points of view on innovative forms of modern and contemporary poetry and poetics, and we are committed to doing what is necessary to preserve this space for such dialog.

subscribers. All messages are reviewed by the editors in keeping with the goals of the list as articulated in this Welcome Message. The listserv is intended to be a productive communal space for discussion and announcements; as such, subscribers who do not follow listserv policy will be removed from the subscription roll.

Please note that this list is primarily concerned with discussions of poetry and poetics. We strongly encourage subscribers to post information, including web links, relating to publications (print and internet), reading series, and blogs that they have coordinated, edited or published, or in which they appear. Such announcements constitute a core function of this list. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications (print or digital) are always welcome.

The Poetics List is not a forum for a general discussion of poetry or for the exchange of poems. Queres for contact info, messages intended for just a few subscribers, "flame" messages, and free-standing personal poems or journal entries will, in general, not be forwarded to the list.

Also, please note that the Poetics List is not a "chat" list and we discourage the posting of very short messages intended for only a few subscribers. Personal queries and off-topic submissions will not be posted.

Send messages directly to the list address: [redacted].

2. About the Poetics List

Above the world-weary horizons
New obstacles for exchange arise
Or unfold,
O ye postmasters!

With the preceding epigraph, the Poetics Listserv was founded by Charles Bernstein in late 1993. Now in its fourth incarnation, the list has over 1500 subscribers worldwide. We also have a substantial number of nonsubscribing readers, who access the list through our web site (see archive URL above).

Due to the high number of subscribers, we no longer maintain the open format with which the list began (at under 100 subscribers).

Please also note that this is a not a general interest poetry list and information about this list should not be posted to directories of poetry lists. The idea is to keep the list membership to those with specific engagement related to the list's stated orientation.

In addition to being archived through the EPC and at the UB Listerv archive, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas.

Note also that Roof Books published Joel Kuszai's edited collection of the Poetics List; this is available from ROOF and also online at the EPC.

3. Subscriptions

*For all subscription requests go to
http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html.

*To subscribe for the first time click on "Subscribe (join) a List." Immediately following your subscription to the poetics listserv we ask that you email us at poetics.list --at -- gmail.com, subject-line "registration," with your full name, street address, email address, and telephone number. Failure to register at the time of subscription will result in automatic deletion from the subscription roll.

*To manage your subscription (for descriptions of the different subscription options please see section 3), click on "Subscriber's Corner."

Subscriptions to the Poetics List are free of charge, but formal registration is required. All other questions about subscriptions, whether about an individual subscription or subscription policy, should be addressed to this same administrative address.

PLEASE NOTE: All subscription-related information and correspondence remains absolutely confidential.

All posts to the list must provide your full real name, as registered. If there is any discrepancy between your full name as it appears in the "from" line of the message header, please sign your post at the bottom. Subscribers who do not include their full name with each post will be unsubscribed from the list.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced, which will result in your subscription being automatically terminated by the Listserv program and the automatically generated message telling you that this has occurred will also likely bounce. If this happens, you may re-subscribe to the list by the same process described above. One remedy to avoid this happening in the future: set your list options to "no-mail" and read the list on the web.

4. Subscription Options

We encourage you to alter your subscription options via the link on the right side of the screen at http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html. If you would prefer not to use the web-interface, you may also email <[redacted]> the following commands:

*to subscribe to the Poetics listserv send [redacted] this one-line message with no "subject":

*RECOMMENDED: if you wish to read the list on our web interface and not receive any messages sent directly, while remaining subscribed to the list and so eligible to send us posts, send this one-line message to <[redacted]> with no "subject": set poetics nomail. Note: this option is also useful for temporary suspension of email service.

*to reactivate Poetics e-mail send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics mail

* to receive the list in digest form (you will receive the day's individual posts in one email sent just after midnight EST), send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics digest

*to receive posts in the default option (you will receive individual postings immediately), send <[redacted]> this one- line message with no "subject": set poetics nodigest

* to receive the list in index form (you will receive a list, without the text of the posts, of the subjects discussed each day along with the author's name and address and the number of lines it comprises; you can also choose to have the index sent to you in either plain text or in HTML format with hyperlinks), send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics nohtml index -- or-- set poetics html index

PLEASE NOTE: do not leave your Poetics subscription in default or digest mode if you are going to be away for any extended period of time. Your account may become flooded and you may lose Poetics messages as well as other important mail. In such cases, switch your subscription to "nomail" as recommended above.

5. To Unsubscribe

To unsubscribe (or change any of your subscription options), again, we strongly encourage you to go to the right-hand side of the screen at http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html You may also may unsubscribe by sending a one-line email to

If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note: sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to send messages old address, then resubscribe with your new email address.

6. Cautions

In moderating this list, the editors must consider sometimes competing interests. The basis for our decisions, however, rests with our collective judgment about the kind of space we want for the list.

All posts not only go out to list subscribers but also become a public part of the list archive on the web. Note that posting to the list is a form of publication and that by sending your message to the list you formally consent to such web publication. Posts are currently being indexed by search engines such as Google. It is not possible for us to remove posts from the list archive or to control search engine indexing of these posts.

For reasons of basic security, we do not allow pseudonymous subscriptions. All messages intended for the Poetics List should be sent in Text-Only format, without attachments. We do not accept HTML-formatted messages or attached files. As a general rule, keep individual posts to 1,000 words or less.

Please do not publish list postings without the express permission of the author. Posting on the list is a form of publication. Copyright for all material posted on Poetics remains with the author; material from this list and its archive may not be reproduced without the author's permission, beyond the standard rights accorded by "fair use" of published materials.

All material on the Poetics List remains the property of the authors; before you reproduce this material, in whole or in part, we ask that you get permission (by email is fine) from the authors. If they give permission, then we ask only that you say that the post or posts appeared originally on the Poetics List Used by permission of the author.

Note: Private correspondence via email and letters are always (c) the author and may not be reproduced in whole or in part without the written permission of the author. As a general rule, we will not publish posts that include such material unless they indicate that permission has been given.

We request that posters limit the number of posts they send to the list on any given day. Given that our goal is a manageable list (manageable both for moderators and subscribers), the list accepts 75 or fewer messages per day, though these paramenters may be changed at the discretion of the list moderator.

Like all systems, the listserv will sometimes be down: if you feel your message has been delayed or lost, please wait at least one day to see if it shows up, then check the archive to be sure the message is not posted there; if you still feel there is a problem, you may wish to contact the editors at <[redacted]>.

7. Flaming "Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. We define 'flaming' as any post that resembles a personal attack or personal insult to anyone--subscriber or not. This, of course, includes racist, sexist, or other slurs as well as ad hominem arguments in which the person rather than their work is attacked; in other words while critique of a person's work is welcome (critical inquiry is one of the main functions of the list), this critique cannot extend to a critique or criticism of the person.

↑ Index

296. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Sat 15 Nov 2008

Jim,

This way any poem is reduced to a statement describing the process which will produce it. The concept itself, the concept itself as potential, rather than its actualization, is the poem. This way what is infinite in potential, becomes infinitely concise.

Do you mean something like this Jim?

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Nov 15, 2008 at 2:08 AM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> I thought this was pretty interesting:
> "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
> http://infinityskitchen.com/blog/oulipo-documentar
>
> three videos.
>
> nothing you wouldn't get from a reading of the oulipo compendium, but there it is in video on the web very easy.
>
> the constraint, not the application of the constraint.
>
> more interested in potenintructions which crea to to the tial/poetential literature than in the application > of the constraint, i.e., 'the thing itself'.
>
> i think that's at the core of it.
>
> a very useful idea/aesthetic.
>
> to me, that's 'conceptual literature' in the best sense of that term.
>
> not exactly 'content is king'.
>
> unless we think of the content of the concept. then it is. but in a very different way.
>
> the content of the concept?
>
> yes, everything it implies and all its atmospheres. is it a one-liner or does it have roots and legs and generative fecundity.
>
> ja

↑ Index

297. Gabrielle Welford

Re: Fw: this is really important and URGENT, dear NY art friends.... (fwd)

Sat 15 Nov 2008

---

i am wondering how real these budget shortfalls/deficits are. maggie thatcher did a lot to destroy the socialist support system in england. i don't think she claimed they were going bankrupt if they kept the system sound, though. these claims of impending financial doom, etc., for some reason make me think that there's support system destruction going on, not because of financial doom but because we're being jacked back into the oligarchy jack london was writing about in _the iron heel_. nasty thought, but it keeps popping into my mind. all best, gabe

Gabrielle Welford, Ph.D.
Too Many Deaths: Decolonizing Western Academic Research on Indigenous Cultures
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=317
Dora
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=378

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.1.412 / Virus Database: 268.18.4/705 - Release Date: 2/27/2007

On Sat, 15 Nov 2008, Alan Sondheim wrote:

> Date: Saturday, November 15, 2008, 9:23 AM
> and today is the day to do it--they vote on MONDAY
>
> Click here:
> http://capwiz.com/artsusa/ny/issues/alert/?alertid=12191871&type=ML
> <http://capwiz.com/artsusa/ny/issues/alert/?alertid=12191871&type=ML>
>
> ACT NOW!!!
> The Governor proposes cutting the remaining New York State
> Council on the Arts budget.
>
> We only have 2 days to make our voices heard because the > special legislative session convenes on November 18.
>
> The Legislature will consider the Governor's proposed
> cuts, including an additional $7 million to the current arts > budget. This could mean that almost 400 grantees in the > October cycle and a similar number in the December cycle
> would receive almost nothing. The inequities are staggering.
>
> The Governor's proposal comes on top of $2.6 (6%)
> already cut out of the State Arts Council budget a short > time ago--- thereby reducing NYSCA's budget by about 20%
> from $49 million to $39 million mid-year.
>
> The Governor called the special legislative session to deal > with the additional shortfall in the CURRENT year. His > proposed plan is a comprehensive, two-year $5.2 billion

deficit reduction plan that he says will entirely eliminate the State's $1.5 billion current-year shortfall.

The Legislature can alter the "cut list" and make different recommendations. The Governor proposed significant cuts to all sectors, so let your legislators know that the tiny savings they gain from the arts cut pales in comparison to the resulting social and economic losses in communities across the State.

WE KNOW GRASS ROOTS ORGANIZING WORKS. Send an email now. It takes 2 minutes.

Click here:
http://capwiz.com/artsusa/ny/issues/alert/?alertid=12191871&type=ML
<http://capwiz.com/artsusa/ny/issues/alert/?alertid=12191871&type=ML>

to send an email to your legislators.

Forward this email to every support of the arts you know. We need to FLOOD Albany with thousands of emails in the next few days.

P.S. from Su--sorry for double postings, and no need to reply (unless to ask that I not send you these sorts of things)

-- Su Friedrich
118 North 11th Street
Brooklyn, NY 11211
[redacted]
http://www.sufriedrich.com

"I don't want to achieve immortality through my work. I want to achieve it through not dying."
--Woody Allen

↑ Index

298. Gabrielle Welford
Re: David
Sat 15 Nov 2008

dear stephen, i'm really glad you wrote this response. i've had similar experiences in hawai'i, and i know it's particularly hard to see one's own slant when it's in the face. i so often meet people who just want to go to hawai'i and think they're being called there and completely don't understand the impact of all the non-hawaiians pouring in and taking over land, spirituality, water, etc. it's very hard for hawaiians to make a go of it in/on their own land because it's so beautiful and such an intense place that it just seems "right" for all of us to want to be in paradise. no paradise when thousands of hawaiians are homeless, living on the beaches and in the parks, and the military rules over all. there's a huge diaspora too--both to places like vegas and in mainland prisons. yuk. anyway, it's easy to overlook what it feels like for the people who are inside the characterization we're making for them/of them. maybe "it's just an adjective"--but so what? if it feels like a stab because of all colonial past and present history, tis so. what's to justify? blessings, g

Gabrielle Welford, Ph.D.
Too Many Deaths: Decolonizing Western Academic Research on Indigenous Cultures
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=317
Dora
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=378

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.1.412 / Virus Database: 268.18.4/705 - Release Date: 2/27/2007

On Fri, 14 Nov 2008, Stephen Vincent wrote:

> I taught in Nigeria for two years way way back. I am still in close contact with former Nigerian students, and friends from the time. I personally get offended when I hear "Nigerian scam" or variations on that. For a moment, when it became vogue-ish to indulge that characterization, it gave me the impression that the whole country had been taken over by these Internet wielding scam 'artists' - which I just as suddenly was stupid and highly prejudicial, dismissive, etc.
>
> Maybe human nature? Maybe most countries are looking at the USA and reducing us down to a cast of greedy unscrupulous banker/mortgage broker/ real estate predators??
>
> Nigeria - its pleasures and real disturbances (corrupt practices by some included) is much more interesting country than that easy reductive 'scam' slight.

Humorously, the Nigerian students on the Nsukka campus where I taught, would call, in Pidgin English, the few Albino students "Peace Corpsees." (No, I did not interpet that to mean I was a 'dead man walking'!)

Better than a "Bushie" - I suspect.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

--- On Fri, 11/14/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, November 14, 2008, 3:07 PM

We know the uses of adjectives. If anyone has doubts about the what the modifier "Nigerian" is doing in "Nigerian scams", that person can pick a good grammar book and crosscheck. Moreover, we are talking about language as "loaded weapon" here, and as Dwight Bolinger says, what is even more dangerous is to assume that such a weapon is innocuous!

-- Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:38 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

No, it is not a good point.
To say "Nigerian scams" is not to say that scams are necessarily Nigerian.
The very grammar suggests that only some scams are Nigerian.
If we say US gangsters, that is not to say that all gangsters are USAmericans.
Here's another parallel: if I complain about Meyer Lansky, that does not make me anti-semitic.
I have received many many scam letters from Nigeria in the last year.
Some from South Africa, too. The latter were South African scam letters.

gb

On Nov 12, 2008, at 3:33 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee wrote:

Obododimma

> That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
> We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always
> intended.
> I have made such blemishes in the past too.
>
> Aryanil
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha"
> <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
> Subject: Re: David
>
> Hi Barry,
> *I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What* > makes
> you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the > history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and > other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades
> before
> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
>
> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a > criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", > unless I mean to
> insult
> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize > and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at
> POETICS?
> Be well!
>
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,

stranded
in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
Needless
to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if
you
get that e-mail, be warned.

Check
guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

Check

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008
7:01 PM

> George Harvey Bowering
> Fond of many dead people.
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

↑ Index

299. Jeff Hansen

EXPERIMENTAL FICTION AND POETRY -- WHAT'S NEW?

Sat 15 Nov 2008

IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO BE DROPPED FROM THIS MAIL LIST, PLEASE REPLY TO ME WITH A SIMPLE "REMOVE" IN THE SUBJECT LINE. NO EXPLANATION NECESSARY.

EXPERIMENTAL FICTION AND POETRY -- WHAT'S NEW?

An interview with the great jazz pianist Marilyn Crispell should be up any day now!

1. AN INTERVIEW WITH LANCE OLSEN, AUTHOR OF Nietzsche's Kisses and publisher of FC2 2. Interviews with three of the contributors to Wreckage of Reason, an anthology of experimental writing by women: Lidia Yuknavitch, Diane DiBlasi, Kass Fleisher. 3. Discussion of a day at the Walker Art Center: Tetsumi Kudo, Pierre Huyghe, Samuel Delaney 4. A reviw of A.B. Spellman's first book of poetry (Spellman is best known as a jazz critic, author of 4 Lives in the Bebop Business)

↑ Index

300. Alexander Jorgensen
 THIS ONE Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododimm
Sun 16 Nov 2008

I think I said something about listening and parochialism - to repeat the purpose of my post with deference. The fact that in 30 countries, including those visited in South and Central America, six of the 30 in which I have lived and worked, aged 39, today in China, not anyone has ever called me a USAmerican does not displease me - esp given the Western hemisphere was merely a playground for colonialism during the creation of the US and the nation state. I don't mind being called something else, certainly - Yank works...Kiwi, too, but then it has already been taken, and so has Canadian.

It seems disturbing, getting back to my point, that three things have been missed among the remarks made:

1- Obododimm's remark informs and doesn't warrant such attacks (Hey, how about we call those in the US warmongers, Jesus freaks, Frankenstinian, know-it-alls with no capacity to control their arrogance, spiritually fat...because it seems true, at least in most superficial way. Then, too, we could make some nasty generalizations related to white folks - about how they tend to think they have the right to talk for or talk down to --)

2- That David could have written that e-mail (and I have known him for more than 15 years). I suppose we'll hear from him soon.

3- By being so parochial, you are basically shaping discourse to meet your own needs, not that of a greater literary community that extends outside. Too, we don't always know what we need.

Best,

Alex

--- On Sun, 11/16/08, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododimm
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 16, 2008, 5:23 AM

So..with all the "harping," which "harping" is preferred, the harping support or harping condemnation of the term?

On Fri, Nov 14, 2008 at 8:42 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]> wrote:

I wanna say that a certain level of parochialism comes out in these most recent responses to Obododimma's reply. Just think about what this first term means for a second.

Next, I wanna say that given George's almost fetishizing of the expression "USAmerican," I'm more than bit surprised at both his reaction and tone, and most certainly because he has almost demanded that we take note of his own sensitivitiy (as, apparently, an other).

While I do not think it my responsibility to be overly concerned about anyone's sensitivities, certainly any more than to presuppose the credibility/reliability of narrative, I do, however, think it important to listen. Without engaging in one-up-manship, I have NEVER been called anything but an American in my extensive travels (which is to say, at least privately, I think these folks pushing this expression are harping on a non-issue. Can I say: "harping"). But, and this is my point, I have managed to listen.

Alex

==========

↑ Index

301. Ryan Daley

Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododim

Sun 16 Nov 2008

I think if you look back at my initial post, you'll see that my intention was to argue the point that the term wasn't meant to offend, and wasn't offensive, though taking into account that we are bound to disagree. Most here have lived and visited other countries for what I'm sure are extensive periods of time, and thus know what being both a social and racial minority might be like. Many of these same travelers have probably found themselves part of marginalized communities of any kind, and might understand the problem of grouping, stereotyping and prejudice -- with firsthand knowledge that it really does hurt all involved, of course, when we find that our dear friends are the brunt of any type of colonialist (or any other type) subjugation through language. I don't think anyone here would disagree. In that regard, it's unnecessary to point out that Americans are often slurred in other countries. This, in fact, shows the ignorance of many that claim to be superior to Americans. Nevertheless, this is a different matter altogether, as it would be if we called all Nigerians "scam email writers"; however, being called a warmonger implies that a person is actively involved or supportive of a call to war, and thus it seems reductive to claim that all Americans, just by the token of their being Americans, are warmongers.

But terming a response as "shaping discourse" allows you to respond and thus "shape discourse" while dismissing, or giving others reasons to dismiss, the comments they feel "shape discourse" in a way that they don't want it shaped. I'm all for shaping the discourse, as long as others have that same latitude. And they do, and have, shaped it. I won't claim the conversation is legit only when it goes the way I feel is fair and just.

But this conversation so far relates to emails, spam and scam in the form of the 419 letter. Whether David composed this letter or not is moot: it's what got the discussion going...parochial or otherwise. And so...the 419 Letter:

As 419 is a term that refers to the law in the Nigerian criminal code. Since there was a need to create this code in Nigeria, it seems there was a problem there with email scams. Never has anyone stated that all scams or cons have come from Nigeria. This would be silly. But...since it's 419 Letters we're talking about and since these letters come from Nigeria...we either call them Nigerian email scams, 419 Letters, or the less specific and much less accurate, scam emails.

Call it what you want. The syntax and goal of the email is the same, no matter where the letters originates. But at least we know what criminal code they're breaking in Nigeria...

On Sat, Nov 15, 2008 at 11:55 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <
[redacted]> wrote:

> I think I said something about listening and parochialism - to repeat the purpose of my post with deference. The fact that in 30 countries, including those visited in South and Central America, six of the 30 in which I have lived and worked, aged 39, today in China, not anyone has ever called me a USAmerican does not displease me - esp given the Western hemisphere was merely a playground for colonialism during the creation of the US and the nation state. I don't mind being called something else, certainly - Yank works...Kiwi, too, but then it has already been taken, and so has Canadian.
>
> It seems disturbing, getting back to my point, that three things have been missed among the remarks made:
>
> 1- Obododimm's remark informs and doesn't warrant such attacks (Hey, how about we call those in the US warmongers, jesus freaks, Frankenstinian, know-it-alls with no capacit to control their arrogance, spiritually fat...because it seems true, at least in most superficial way. Then, too, we could make some nasty generalizations related to white folks about they tend to think they have the right to talk for or talk down to...as in their minority hands they actually hold the keys to the proverbial kingdom)

and

2- That David could have written that e-mail (and I have known him for more than 15 years). Now, David has yet to respond to this list.

lastly

3- By being so parochial, you are basically shaping discourse to meet your own needs, not that of a greater literary community that extends outside. Too, we don't always know what we need.

Best,
Alex

*--- On Sun, 11/16/08, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:*

From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododimm
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 16, 2008, 5:23 AM

So..with all the "harping," which "harping" is preferred, the harping support or harping condemnation of the term?

On Fri, Nov 14, 2008 at 8:42 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <
[redacted]> wrote:

I wanna say that a certain level of parochialism comes out in these most recent responses to Obododimma's reply. Just think about what this first term means for a second.

Next, I wanna say that given George's almost fetishizing of the expression "USAmerican," I'm more than bit surprised at both his reaction and tone, and most certainly because he has almost demanded that we take note of his own sensitivitiy (as, apparently, an other).

While I do not think it my responsibility to be overly concerned about anyone's sensitivities, certainly any more than to presuppose the credibility/reliability of narrative, I do, however, think it important to listen. Without engaging in one-up-manship, I have NEVER been called anything but an American in my extensive travels (which is to say, at least privately, I think these folks pushing this expression are harping on a non-issue. Can I say: "harping"). But, and this is my point, I have managed > to listen.

>
> Alex

↑ Index

302. c. s. giscombe
Coultas, Gaydos, Giscombe, Ketz, Reyes, Wamsley on the radio Sunday afternoon
Sun 16 Nov 2008

Join us in another experiment in radio and poetry and song on Sunday, 16 November, from 4 to 6 pm (Pacific time).

Berkeley poets Rebecca Gaydos, C. S. Giscombe, Charity Ketz, Robert Reyes, and Rachel Wamsley will read poems and think aloud about poetry and the â€œproblemâ€ of location. Theyâ€™ll be joined, via telephone, by Brenda Coultas in New York.

The place is Brian â€œSwervinâ€™â€ Kirvenâ€™s Rhythm and Muse show on KWMR in Point Reyes Station, California. Tune in, if youâ€™re in Marin County, at 90.5 or 89.7. Or listen on the Web by going to http://www.kwmr.org/index.html and clicking on the â€œOn Airâ€ logo at the top of the page, just under the cow.

The show will be live and, as usual, unpredictable. Listen in and take partâ€”do add your voice to the conversation. Telephone the station Sunday afternoon at [redacted] or [redacted].

We'll be doing just one more show with KWMR this fallâ€”on the 30th of November. Watch for the announcement.

↑ Index

303. Jim Andrews
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Sun 16 Nov 2008

I wasn't attempting to make a statement about 'any poem', really, Murat. I doubt that what I said applies well to 'any poem' but, rather, to a certain approach to poetry. In the same way that statements about conceptual art, say, might not apply very well to other types of art.

I don't think it's a matter of reducing poems to statements describing the processes which produced them. Instead, it's a matter of introducing a dimension to poetry which is interesting and, once understood and appreciated, allows people to enjoy various classes of poetry that, before, may have seemed deficient by other standards. For instance, N+7, simply as a text unto itself, without reference to not only the process that produced it but its place in history and why it has that place in history, might seem to enjoy notoriety without merit. As though what has merit must fulfill the criteria of the poemy poem devoid of concept, in this sense. Which, itself, can be viewed as a reduction of poetry, a refusal of dimensions such as the conceptual.

It needn't be one or the other, of course. They aren't really articles of faith.

ja
http://vispo.com

Quoting Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>:

> Jim,
>
> This way any poem is reduced to a statement describing the process which will produce it. The concept itself, the concept itself as potential, rather than its actualization, is the poem. This way what is infinite in potential, becomes infinitely concise.
>
> Do you mean something like this Jim?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat

↑ Index

304. Barry Schwabsky
Re: David
Sun 16 Nov 2008

I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the feeling of having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile prejudice. There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can participate in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.

↑ Index

305. Obododimma Oha
Re: David
Sun 16 Nov 2008

We have been reading such narratives, Barry. Two things you need to know: both the American lady (Janeila Spears) and the con artists are united in a criminal attempt at enriching themselves. The con artists (as tricksters -- I take a folkloric approach to the narrative) merely succeeded in outwitting Spears. If I were a judge, I would certainly give spears a sentence. Second, there is the role of the mediation of this kind of narrative, and perhaps an attempt to harvest from existing narratives that conform to the Western idea of what constitutes "news" from the periphery, specifically the Third World. This orientation in global reporting has been studied extensively, but perhaps you may wish to read Johann Galtung.

We are scholars and we need to analyze these narratives for what they may be worth, and not consume them like the ordinary public.

Regards.
Obododimma.

On Sat, Nov 15, 2008 at 7:25 PM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

> Nurse handed over $400,000 to web scam despite FBI warning
>
> Bobbie Johnson in San Francisco
> guardian.co.uk, Saturday November 15 2008 00.01 GMT
> The Guardian, Saturday November 15 2008
>
> An American woman has revealed how she was swindled out of $400,000 (£269,000) by Nigerian internet fraudsters, in what is believed to be one of the biggest cases of its kind ever recorded.
> Janella Spears, a registered nurse from Sweet Home, Oregon, said she started sending money to the scammers in 2005 after she received an email promising her several million dollars from a long-lost relative. In what is commonly known as a 419 scam - named after a section of the Nigerian criminal code - the fraudsters randomly contacted Spears over the internet, claiming they would offer her a substantial cut of $20.5m fortune in return for the cash injection which would help move it out of the country.
> "I kept thinking it's only a couple hundred dollars - I can get it back," she told local news. Over a period of two years, the fraudsters strung her along and encouraged her to send more payments of up to $14,000 at a time. In the end she became obsessed and sent the fraudsters more than $400,000, which she raised by remortgaging her home and spending her husband's retirement savings.

Despite advice from bank officials, police and even the FBI that the scheme was a ruse, Spears said she continued to send cash in the hope of a large pay-off. Even fake emails claiming to be from the President of Nigeria and US president George Bush could not dissuade her.
"I said how come you're using this non-government address? 'Oh, because our computer has a worm'," she said. The 419 fraud is one of the most common internet deceptions, and like most similar schemes is reliant on sending millions of spam messages in the hope that they land in the inbox of a gullible victim.
Although finding victims requires luck rather than judgement, the incredibly low cost of sending email means that such fraud can be highly profitable. A study by researchers at University of California showed that it took an average of 12.5m spam emails for each response - but that large operations sending billions of messages could make as much as £2m a year.
Although Spears is an exception she is far from being alone. Last year British police helped crack a similar fraud ring, which was holding fake cheques worth more than £1bn, which had links to groups in the Netherlands and Nigeria.
Although it is difficult to calculate the value of such swindles because many victims are too embarrassed to report the crime, the government has estimated that such frauds could cost £3.5bn a year in Britain alone.
Spears claimed she was sharing her story now in order to prevent others from falling victim to similar scams. "You're sitting there going 'how can I fall for something like that'," she said.

--- On Fri, 14/11/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, 14 November, 2008, 11:07 PM

We know the uses of adjectives. If anyone has doubts about the what the modifier "Nigerian" is doing in "Nigerian scams", that person can pick a good grammar book and crosscheck. Moreover, we are talking about language as "loaded weapon" here, and as Dwight Bolinger says, what is even more dangerous is to assume that such a weapon is innocuous!

-- Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:38 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

No, it is not a good point.
To say "Nigerian scams" is not to say that scams are necessarily Nigerian.
The very grammar suggests that only some scams are Nigerian.
If we say US gangsters, that is not to say that all gangsters are USAmericans.
Here's another parallel: if I complain about Meyer Lansky,
that does not make me anti-semitic.
I have received many many scam letters from Nigeria in the last year.
Some from South Africa, too. The latter were South African scam letters.

gb

On Nov 12, 2008, at 3:33 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee wrote:

Obododimma

That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't always intended.
I have made such blemishes in the past too.

Aryanil
----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha"
<[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
Subject: Re: David

Hi Barry,
*I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What* makes you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades

before
what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to
insult
that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him,
stranded
in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired.
Needless
to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you
get that e-mail, be warned.

Check
guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English

University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

Check

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date: 11/12/2008
7:01 PM

George Harvey Bowering
Fond of many dead people.

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

306. Obododimma Oha
Fwd: David
Sun 16 Nov 2008

I sent the mail below directly to Tom Savage, but would like to share it with members on the list, because I am concerned with how some of us who use web-based mail become vulnerable to scammers.
Regards to all.
Obododimma.

Hello Tom, I have just returned to Namibia after a week-long conference in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. We will explore this issue further much later. It may interest you that I have been keeping most of those scam mails in a folder, hoping to do a more extended study of the criminal rhetoric that they represent. I received the scam mail in question three years ago from Turkey, and was asked to send money to Dr Mustapha, a Sudanese scholar I met at a conference in Gabon. The narrative is the same: he is stranded in Turkey and I should quickly send him some dollars! Mustapha and I became close friends when we met at that conference because I was impressed at the way he analyzed and criticized the Sudanese junta. So, I was almost tempted to run to his rescue but had to analyze the mail and tried to get in touch with him. A day later, a Chinese scholar who attended that conference wrote, telling me he got a similar mail from Mustapha. I was able to get in touch with Mustapha and found that he did not send the mail and did not even have access to his mail account.

As you would see, that mail did not come from Africa or Nigeria. There are a number of cyber-oriented con artists out there (Africans, Americans, Asians, etc) who use all kinds of tricks to gain access to web-based mails. One major way is that of sending encrypted web-links inviting you to this or that web membership or free service. Once you click, your account becomes vulnerable.

Many of us do not seem to recognize that web-based emails are particularly insecure and we are sometimes carried away by the desire to be part of many things hapening on the web. David should count himself lucky that it was not a case of his account being used to send a mail oriented to terrorist activity! He would have had a lot to explain to the police!

I need to take a shower and sleep off the jet lag.

Regards,
Obododimma.

On Sat, Nov 15, 2008 at 9:06 PM, Thomas savage <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'm not sure how to reply to this, Obodidimma, but I will try. There is no doubt in my mind that when I see one of these requests on line and it happens to come from Africa that I do think of it as "African" but I do not think of all communications from Africa as necessarily being of this type. I may have a predisposition based on experience but not a prejudice, I hope. As I am aware that many of the emails I have received of this sort come from elsewhere or claim to come from elsewhere, it becomes more than an issue of African identity. Critical thinking? I hope so. Logical, also. But a habit pattern of thought, definitely. I have known of one instance where a poet I know responded to one of these "scams" I don't know where it originated from and someone at the other end of the scam tried to withdraw a large amount from her bank account using whatever information she supplied which made this possible. Fortunately, she went to the bank and was able to head off the effects of her error. But it was my learning of this series of events which has made me be very careful when dealing with any of these suspicious emails which I still get once in a while and mostly don't even bother to open or read. Regards, Tom Savage
>
> *--- On Fri, 11/14/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:*
>
> From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: David
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Friday, November 14, 2008, 6:42 PM

Yes, Tom, some of them are from Africa, but that has not led you to identify scams of that sort as "African scams". Even for the sake of logical reasoning? Let's say the politics of meaning no longer interests us (which would be surprising though!), at least we want our writing to agree with the principles of critical thinking. Or, am I getting it totally wrong?

--- Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 7:49 PM, Thomas savage <[redacted]>wrote:

While specifying Nigeria may be an error, I have nevertheless been warned that many of the emails one receives as personal requests from Africa are, indeed, scams and I never respond to them unless, asin the case of Obododimma Oha, I know the person who sent them, having met him on another listserv. Am I now insulting Africa as a whole by pointing out the existence of this online email phenomenon? I don't think so and I hope not. There are some of these requests which originate outside Africa as well, emails telling me that I have won something from organizations of which I have never heard before. I ignore these as well as I have been tipped off that these are scams or snares or whatever you want to call them except genuine. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Wed, 11/12/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, November 12, 2008, 5:00 PM

Hi Barry,
*I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before
what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at

POETICS?
Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you get that e-mail, be warned.

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

guidelines

> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

307. David-Baptiste Chirot

Thank you to all who wrote David Chirot directly & indirectly while in Africa

Sun 16 Nov 2008

Thank you especially to all who wrote me directly in the last week and also to all those who wrote indirectly on the issues which came out of the letter of appeal from the hacked address of "david chirot."

I am very stunned and thankful to all for such concern and interest. It is deeply moving as it is a living sign of a community which has been created by its members through time and writing, which is the art of space/time travel.

If any of us were in any "elsewhere" whether by hacker or no--there would be again such a response.

To me this awareness of community and companionship revealed by of al things a hacker indeed a very beaitufl event to be thankful for.

I apologize in a previous letter I conveyed the opposite impression--as I wrote then, I had arrived back here from a day in the clinic and the next several days and today still not in such good shape so it has taken longer than ever to essay reading the mails and attempting replies. In that condition, the only letter I had really looked at was the one from my son.

The anaolgy I made previously with Rimbaud however one I think can make a poem or prose poem with--the "reports" of Rimbaud that circulated in Paris during his final years in Abyssinia--the wild notes of Verlaine and others in this regard--the creation of a mythic Rimbaud leading akind of Pasha's life--or that of an opulent traveling scholar--

(almost a pre-figuring of Blaise Cendrars' own endless variations on his own self mythologings in his all his writings and at the same time being bruited about Paris while the Dounier Rousseau was painting his huge tableaux of his visions of Tropical Scenes--supposedly from his time in Mexico under the Emperor Maximilian--more likely at the Botanical Gardens--)--

also the questions of the "author" when the "author" can be hacked--a new form of "possesion" via "identity theft" to be used in creating a "theft" scheme--

Perhaps rather than creating "appeals" and fraudulent money up front demands, hackers will take to the fine art of being the mimics and memes of actual wirters-- hacking into an author's computer, and sending out notes and papers written carefully in the manner of so and so and yet subtly shifting through time the tenor and direction of the writing from one point of view to a steadily more opposing one-- or one that covertly insiunately undermines everything that the actual author has held to be true for ages and ages-- now, faced with this dilemna, would the writer so hacked decide to take on the hacker in a battle of styles and wits?

or simply unplug the computer, toss it in the compactor and get an entirely new setup all round-- trying like Poe's William Wilson, to be freed of this pursuing "double"--

a person hacking into one's very being--one's conscience--one's style--

would a hacker be able to hack even the wild passes and flashes of El Spontaneo, that afficianado of the Corrida who jumps into the ring and for as long as possible takes over the role of matador from the professionals?

or is a hacker El Spontaneo hin/herself in regards to the writer who is hacked--mimicing her/his "passes"--and yet--adding flourishes that are far more effective--elcit much greater applause--and begin to undermine the "actual" writer as he begins to receive plaudits for aspects of "his" works which he knows he "did not write" himself-- so --did they come to him in a flash of what he has always denied--Romantic Inspiration?--or some kind of bizarre Flashback? or Fugue State?--what is really going on inside his self controlled, orderly mind--????---

to be continued------

http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/11/poetics-of-repossesion-of-stolen.html _____ See how Windows® connects the people, information, and fun that are part of your life http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/119463819/direct/01/

↑ Index

308. Asian Cha

First Annivesary Issue of CHA

Sun 16 Nov 2008

THE FIRST ANNIVERSARY ISSUE OF CHA: AN ASIAN LITERARY JOURNAL IS NOW AVAILABLE

We are pleased to announce the publication of the fifth issue of Cha: An Asian Literary Journal (November 2008) with a new editorial on the memorable year 2008 by co-editor Jeff Zroback.

Poet, novelist and historian Reid Mitchell generously acted as guest editor and read the submissions with us. The new issue features poetry by former US Poet Laureate Billy Collins and new fiction by Nirmala Pillai. Other writers/artists featured in the issue include Sam Byfield, Grace V. S. Chin, Mike Farman, Tiziano Fratus, Daniel Hudon, Anne Levesque, Vikas Malhotra, Aya Padron, Yves Rubin, Steven Schroeder, Daren Shiau, Gillian Sze, Tai Dong Huai, Eddie Tay, Royston Tester, Toh Hsien Min, Sean Wiebe, Alison Wong, Bo Wong and Jennifer Wong. To read the issue, please visit our website at www.asiancha.com.

We are currently accepting submissions for the sixth issue of Cha, which is scheduled for publication in February 2009. Deadline: 31 December 2008. Award-winning Hong Kong poet Arthur Leung will lend his expertise to us in the role of poetry guest editor. If you are interested in having your works considered for publication in Cha, please read our submission guidelines for details.

Tammy Ho & Jeff Zroback/ The Editors
Cha: An Asian Literary Journal/ www.asiancha.com
Asian Cha blog/ www.asiancha.blogspot.com

↑ Index

309. Doug Holder

(This Review appears in the current issue of "Fight These Bastards" literary magazine founded by Don Winter)

Sun 16 Nov 2008

(This Review appears in the current issue of "Fight These Bastards" literary magazine founded by Don Winter)

THE MAN IN THE BOOTH IN THE MIDTOWN TUNNEL. By Doug Holder. 2008. 63 pages. $13 Cervena Barva Press. POBOX 440357 W. Somerville, Mass. 02144- 3222 http://www.cervenabarvapress.com

Reviewed by Don Winter

Rather than puzzle poems the reader must pick to find meaning, Doug Holder presents crystal portraits filled with small details that resonate more and more with repeated readings:

Postal Worker

The supervisor
Counts the seconds
As you wipe
The Crumbs from your Face and return
To your post.

Your hands Anonymous
Callused, pedestrian
You feed
A rapid Stream of letters
To a ravenous federal machine.

Your eyes dimmed
For years
From the sea of manila
The bland white face
Of the mail
Faces scarred
With zips.

You feel Ready to Be returned to Your sender.

Holder often aligns himself with those emblematic and beneath notice, voicing experience as a tollbooth attendant, a heroin addict, and a psychiatric patient. And often the poetry is the response to the desolation and the ominous surroundings that engulf characters. When characters aren't anticipating some form of anxiety ("You felt/It press/Again/In your/Stomach"), they are displaced, or home retreats. "She could never run that way again," a voice admits in "For Sarah," and in "The Family Portrait" we are told, "Nothing will last."

But while this is book is about loss and anguish and darkness, it is also about hope:
"A daily ritual
Of decrepit defiance
Walking the ground
That will own them."

(Cambridge, Mass: Two Old Women," p.26)

What may in fact be best about this book is the way the poetry oscillates between the chaotic and the organized, the terrifying and the peaceful. Holder's is a voice both comfortable and uncomfortable with itself, a voice that allows both the catastrophic and beautiful to co-exist harmoniously. As the speaker in "The Last Hotdog," suggests, bad things are happening, with worse on the way, but we can find small moments of (mitigated) joy even where hope is no longer possible:

She brought it
To his sick bed,
He bit through
The red casing
The familiar orgasm of juice
Hitting the roof
Of his mouth
In some facsimile
Of his youth.

Holder takes the grit of everyday life and transforms it into elegant, generous and personal poems, as easy to read as a pop novel, as fulfilling as a hearty meal. “The Man in the Booth in the Midtown Tunnel,” is the type of book that might bridge the aesthetic gap between popular culture, which often does not acknowledge the existence of the fine arts, and the usually snobbish intelligentsia, which rarely acknowledges the existence of popular culture.

----Don Winter’s work has appeared in the: New York Quarterly, Southern Poetry Review, 5 AM, Passages North, Slipstream, Portland Review, Chiron Review, Sycamore Review, Pearl, and close to 500 other journals in the U.S., Canada, England, Australia, Switzerland, Scotland and Ireland. His work has been nominated for twelve Pushcarts. His first collection, Things About to Disappear, is the best seller at Bone World Publishing and in New York Quarterly’s on-line store. He is co-founder of Platonic 3Way Press, home of Fight These Bastards

↑ Index

310. Dan Wilcox
Third Thursday Poetry Night, Albany, NY
Sun 16 Nov 2008

---

the Poetry Motel Foundation presents

Third Thursday Poetry Night

at the Social Justice Center
33 Central Ave., Albany, NY

Thursday, November 20, 2008
7:00 sign up; 7:30 start

Featured Poet: Matt Galletta

Matt Galletta lives in Albany with his wife and two cats. He has been told on more than one occasion that he resembles Clark Kent. He doesn't see it.

-- with open mic for community poets before & after the feature: $3.00 donation, suggested; more if you got it, less if you can't. Your pleasant host: Dan Wilcox.

Nothing was ever certain with her
by Matt Galletta

The recipe called for one cup of white wine, boiled,
but all we had was a dust-caked champagne bottle.

I poured the champagne into the pot and watched the bubbles rush to the surface before I could even turn on the heat.

It was impossible to tell whether or not it was boiling;

impossible to tell whether it was time to move on.

##

↑ Index

311. Catherine Daly

Fw: Splinter Generation Chapbooks Now for Sale, plus join us on Facebook, Myspace and Twitter

Sun 16 Nov 2008

--- On *Sun, 11/16/08, Splinter Generation <[redacted]>*wrote:

From: Splinter Generation <[redacted]>
Subject: Splinter Generation Chapbooks Now for Sale, plus join us on Facebook, Myspace and Twitter

To: "Seth Fischer" <[redacted]>
Date: Sunday, November 16, 2008, 3:47 PM

Dear Friends and Readers,

The Splinter Generation, by popular demand, is now offering chapbooks for sale online at www.splintergeneration.com/teedonation.html

I heard from lots of people who want to read the stories and poetry of the Splinter Generation in book form. We listened. Now all of the content is available in a chapbook that was designed by the talented Kristina Kaiser. These chapbooks also make great presents for the holidays; you can give people some great stories and poems to read while supporting young writers. The little money we will raise from the sale of these chapbooks will go towards further publicity -- and an exciting development we'll announce at the beginning of next year.

We also now have an official facebook and myspace page, and despite my promise to never, ever have a Twitter account, we're on Twitter, too. Become a fan or a friend! And tell your friends to become fans or friends. Follow us on Twitter! Help us see what you all are doing by letting us follow you on Twitter. Spread the word!

Facebook:
http://www.facebook.com/home.php#/pages/wwwsplintergenerationcom/43909588419?ref=mf Myspace:
http://profile.myspace.com/index.cfm?fuseaction=user.viewprofile&friendid=427804005
Twitter: Username -- splintergen Email -- [redacted]

Have happy holidays!
Seth Fischer, Founding Editor
The Splinter Generation

__._,_.___ Messages in this topic
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/CobaltPoets/message/13426;_ylc=X3oDMTM2bWRpaWNmBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBG1zZ0lkAzEzNDI2BHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA3Z0cGMEc3RpbWUDMTIyNjg4MTQyMwR0cGNJZAMxMzQyNg-->
(1) Reply (via web post)
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/CobaltPoets/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJxcmcwNGRxBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBG1zZ0lkAzEzNDI2BHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA3JwbHkEc3RpbWUDMTIyNjg4MTQyMw--?act=reply&messageNum=13426>|
Start a new topic

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/CobaltPoets/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJlamY1ZGNpBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA250cGMEc3RpbWUDMTIyNjg4MTQyMw--> Messages<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/CobaltPoets/messages;_ylc=X3oDMTJlcHRkY3E0BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA21zZ3MEc3RpbWUDMTIyNjg4MTQyMw--
>|
Files<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/CobaltPoets/files;_ylc=X3oDMTJmaTJjY2tnBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA2ZpbGVzBHN0aW1lAzEyMjY4ODE0MjM->|
Photos<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/CobaltPoets/photos;_ylc=X3oDMTJlNGIzdDAwBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA3Bob3QEc3RpbWUDMTIyNjg4MTQyMw-->
MARKETPLACE

From kitchen basics to easy recipes - join the Group from Kraft Foods
<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIG=13rmcj2r7/M=493064.12016295.13271503.10835568/D=groups/S=1705020082:MKP1/Y=YAHOO/EXP=1226888623/L=/B=CMq3CELaX9k-/J=1226881423845628/A=5530388/R=0/SIG=11nuutlas/*http://explore.yahoo.com/groups/kraftmealsmadesimple/>
[image: Yahoo!
Groups]<http://groups.yahoo.com/;_ylc=X3oDMTJkaTBsYWU1BF9TAzk3NDc2NTkwBGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA2dmcARzdGltZQMxMjI2ODgxNDIz> Change settings via the Web<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/CobaltPoets/join;_ylc=X3oDMTJmYWJncW1pBF9TAzk3NDc2NTkwBGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA3N0bmdzBHN0aW1lAzEyMjY4ODE0MjM->(Yahoo!
ID required)
Change settings via email: Switch delivery to Daily
Digest<[redacted]?subject=Email+Delivery:+Digest>| Switch
format to Traditional<[redacted]?subject=Change+Delivery+Format: +Traditional> Visit Your Group
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/CobaltPoets;_ylc=X3oDMTJkbmRnaWxuBF9TAzk3NDc2NTkwBGdycElkAzM2MjYxODMEZ3Jwc3BJZAMxNzA1MDIwMDgyBHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA2hwZgRzdGltZQMxMjI2ODgxNDIz>|
.

__,_._,___

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

312. aslongasittakes
aslongasittakes issue 2 is now up
Sun 16 Nov 2008

Issue 2 of aslongasittakes, a magazine of sound poetry, is now up at www.aslongasittakes.org. There's work by Adachi Tomomi, the Atlanta Poets Group (performing a piece by Michael Basinski and some /Love Songs/ by Bruce Andrews), Gary Barwin (alone and with Gregory Betts), Michael Basinski, David Braden, Craig Dongoski, Brian Howe, Maja Jantar (alone and with Vincent Tholome), e k rzepka, Larissa Shmailo, and Mathew Timmons (performing a Hugo Ball poem). Enjoy! james sanders

↑ Index

313. Fluffy Singler
Re: "Nigerian Scam"
Sun 16 Nov 2008

It's not that "scamming" is a Nigerian thing. The term refers to a very specific type of scam because the first wave of these type of emails way back when came from -- or were said to come from -- Nigeria. Hence this particular type of email scam has come to be known as the Nigerian scam. If you look at the headers on these type of emails, they actually almost never come from the country they claim to be from--very often you'll get one that claims to come from an African country but has a Russian or Italian email domain. But anyway, that's where the term comes from and on urban legends and scam websites, these emails are known officially there as the Nigerian scam.

-----Original Message-----
From: Obododimma Oha [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 4:00 PM
Subject: Re: David

Hi Barry, I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS? Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you > get that e-mail, be warned.
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

314. Whiskey Fox
new publication call for poems--poetry and theory
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Please take a look at the call for submissions below, and visit the website/blog for the new publication _Whiskey & Fox_. (http://whiskeyandfox.blogspot.com)

Thanks

Daniel C Remein and Editors

Whiskey & Fox now accepts unsolicited submissions of poetry and theory. We are not interested in work in facile relation to the conditions of its production or its political function, but in work that attempts to provoke configurations of secular human community as alternatives to those of Capital and its States. To this end, we are not interested in writing that pretends to operate within a single repeatable mode, restricting possible imaginings of future humanisms and post-humanisms and the possibility for producing queer-heterotopoi. As such, we are interested in poetry and poetics committed to theory and historiography, and theory and historiography committed to poetry and poetics. The journal is interested currently in shorter forms or fragments, forms which might be classified as a missive, an aphorism, or a raid--although other forms and modes will be considered.

Specifically, for the next issue, we announce an interest in work that will fit under the title "Doing Politics with Animals." The issue will include a response to all of the work collected within the same volume by Karl Steel (Asst. Professor CUNY Brooklyn), historian and theorist of the human/animal boundary between the medieval and the contemporary.

Please send submissions to whiskeyandfox [at] gmail [dot] com in a MS Word document, unless the work involves a specific non-standard typography or layout (in which case, please send a PDF). The filename should include your last name. You may send a cover letter, and we will not be unhappy about it. Send unpublished work only, please. Simultaneous submissions are not a problem, but please notify us right away if the work is published elsewhere.

↑ Index

315. Stephen Vincent
Re: David
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Thanks, Gabrielle. The ironic thing about the use of the "Nigerian scam" is the way the phrase can put the blinder on all the Euro-American scams in Nigeria, the worst being the Chevron and the Shell Oil "Scams" that have done so much damage on all levels to the people and the environment of the Delta Regions, let alone to manipuate and corrupt the various levels of the Nigerian Government. I suspect much more of the 'Internet's imagination' has been 'righteously' focused on the "Nigerian Scams" and much less on the Shell-Chevron Scams.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

--- On Sat, 11/15/08, Gabrielle Welford <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Gabrielle Welford <[redacted]>

Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, November 15, 2008, 7:57 PM

dear stephen, i'm really glad you wrote this response. i've had similar experiences in hawai'i, and i know it's particularly hard to see one's own slant when it's in the face. i so often meet people who just want to go to hawai'i and think they're being called there and completely don't understand the impact of all the non-hawaiians pouring in and taking over land, spirituality, water, etc. it's very hard for hawaiians to make a go of it in/on their own land because it's so beautiful and such an intense place that it just seems "right" for all of us to want to be in paradise. no paradise when thousands of hawaiians are homeless, living on the beaches and in the parks, and the military rules over all. there's a huge diaspora too--both to places like vegas and in mainland prisons. yuk. anyway, it's easy to overlook what it feels like for the people who are inside the characterization we're making for them/of them. maybe "it's just an adjective"--but so what? if it feels like a stab because of all colonial past and present history, tis so. what's to justify? blessings, g

Gabrielle Welford, Ph.D.
Too Many Deaths: Decolonizing Western Academic Research on Indigenous Cultures
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=317
Dora
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=378

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.1.412 / Virus Database: 268.18.4/705 - Release Date: 2/27/2007

On Fri, 14 Nov 2008, Stephen Vincent wrote:

> I taught in Nigeria for two years way way back. I am still in close > contact with former Nigerian students, and friends from the time. I > personally get offended when I hear "Nigerian scam" or variations on > that. For a moment, when it became vogue-ish to indulge that > characterization, it gave me the impression that the whole country had > been taken over by these Internet wielding scam 'artists' - which I just
> as suddenly was stupid and highly prejudicial, dismissive, etc.
>
> Maybe human nature? Maybe most countries are looking at the USA and > reducing us down to a cast of greedy unscrupulous banker/mortgage > broker/ real estate predators??

>
> Nigeria - its pleasures and real disturbances (corrupt practices by some > included) is much more interesting country than that easy reductive > 'scam' slight.
>
> Humorously, the Nigerian students on the Nsukka campus where I taught,
> would call, in Pidgin English, the few Albino students "Peace > Corpsees." (No, I did not interpet that to mean I was a 'dead man > walking'!)
>
> Better than a "Bushie" - I suspect.
>
> Stephen V
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
> --- On Fri, 11/14/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
> From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: David
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Friday, November 14, 2008, 3:07 PM
>
> We know the uses of adjectives. If anyone has doubts about the what the > modifier "Nigerian" is doing in "Nigerian scams", that > person can pick a > good grammar book and crosscheck. Moreover, we are talking about language
as > "loaded weapon" here, and as Dwight Bolinger says, what is even more > dangerous is to assume that such a weapon is innocuous!
>
> -- Obododimma.
>
>
> On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:38 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]>
wrote:
>
> > No, it is not a good point.
> > To say "Nigerian scams" is not to say that scams are necessarily
> Nigerian.

> > The very grammar suggests that only some scams are Nigerian.
> > If we say US gangsters, that is not to say that all gangsters are > > USAmericans.
> > Here's another parallel: if I complain about Meyer Lansky,
> > that does not make me anti-semitic.
> > I have received many many scam letters from Nigeria in the last year.
> > Some from South Africa, too. The latter were South African scam letters.
> >
> > gb
> >
> >
> >
> > On Nov 12, 2008, at 3:33 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee wrote:
> >
> > Obododimma
> >>
> >> That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
> >> We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it isn't > always
> >> intended.
> >> I have made such blemishes in the past too.
> >>
> >> Aryanil
> >> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha"
> <[redacted]>
> >> To: <[redacted]>
> >> Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
> >> Subject: Re: David
> >>
> >>
> >> Hi Barry,
> >>> I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term
"Nigerian
> scams"! What > >>> makes > >>> you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need
to > read the > >>> history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al > Capone and > >>> other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many > decades

> >>> before
> >>> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
> >>>
> >>> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America
> (as a > >>> criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam",
> unless I mean to
> >>> insult > >>> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we > >>> criminalize
> >>> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the > netiquette at
> >>> POETICS?
> >>> Be well!
> >>>
> >>> --- Obododimma Oha.
> >>>
> >>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> >>> [redacted]> wrote:
> >>>
> >>> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been > hacked into and > >>>> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from > him,
> >>>> stranded
> >>>> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately
> wired.
> >>>> Needless > >>>> to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian > scams... So if
> >>>> you
> >>>> get that e-mail, be warned.
> >>>>
posts.
> Check

> >>>> guidelines
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> --
> >>> Obododimma Oha
> >>> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> >>> Dept. of English
> >>> University of Ibadan
> >>> Nigeria
> >>>
> >>> &
> >>>
> >>> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> >>> University of Ibadan
> >>>
> >>> Phone: [redacted];
> >>> [redacted].
> >>>
posts.
> Check
> >>>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
>

> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> No virus found in this incoming message.
> >> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> >> Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date:
> 11/12/2008
> >> 7:01 PM
> >>
Check
> >>
> >>
> > George Harvey Bowering

> > Fond of many dead people.
> >
> >
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
guidelines
>
>

↑ Index

316. Adam Fieled

PFS Post: Eileen Tabios

Mon 17 Nov 2008

Check out exciting new work from Eileen Tabios on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Keep Warm,
Adam

↑ Index

317. mIEKAL aND
Always wild, words unwind: the wildverse of mIEKAL aND
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Always wild, words unwind: the wildverse of mIEKAL aND

http://www.vimeo.com/2254233

C. Merhl Bennett questions mIEKAL aND
30 minute documentary interview on site in the gardens of Dreamtime Village.

Published in The Madhatter Review #10
madhattersreview.com/issue10/index.shtml

Video by Camille Bacos
driftlessmedia.com

↑ Index

318. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo Newsletter 11.17.08-11.23.08
Mon 17 Nov 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
11.17.08-11.23.08

EVENTS THIS WEEK

Visit the Literary Buffalo calendar at www.justbuffalo.org for more detailed info on these events. All events free and open to the pubic unless otherwise noted.

11.18.08

Just Buffalo/Talking Leaves...Books
Short Story Masters: A Literary Salon, Module 1: Alice Munro
Hosted by Greg Gerke
Tuesday, November 18, 6:30 PM
Talking Leaves?Books, 3158 Main St.

Talking Leaves...Books/Jewish Community Book Fair
Roger Bennett
Reading/signing: 3 Books on Joys of Jewish Culture
Tuesday, November 18, 7:30 PM
Temple Sinai, 50 Alberta Dr., Amherst

Poetics Plus @ UB
Ted Greenwald
Poetry Reading

Tuesday, November 18, 8:00 PM
Karpeles Manuscript Museum, 453 Porter Ave.

11.19.08

Just Buffalo
Spotlight on Youth Open Mic
Open Mic for Ages 12-21: Bring All Art Forms!
Wednesday, November 19, 6:30 PM
Hallwalls Cinema, 341 Delaware Ave. @ Tupper

Talking Leaves...Books
Gregory Lamberson
Reading/Signing for: Cheap Scares!
Wednesday, November 19, 7:00 PM
Talking Leaves...Books, 3158 Main St.

11.20.08

Just Buffalo/Small Press Poetry Series
Elaine Equi and Jerome Sala
Poetry Reading
Thursday, November 20, 7:00 PM
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St.

Talking Leaves...Books
Paul Krehbiel
Book signing for Shades of Justice
Thursday, November 20, 7:00 PM
Talking Leaves Books, 3158 Main St.

11.21.08

Poetics Plus at UB
(co)ludere IV: "The Last Coming"
Margaret Konkol & Stephanie Farrar; Ekrem Serdar & Jonathan Golove; A. J. Patrick Liszkiewicz & Virginia M. Heatter & Two Mystery Acts*
Friday, November 21, 7 PM
Rust Belt Books

11.23.08

Rust Belt Books
Before the Swallow
Readings By Marten Clibbens, Douglas Manson and David Tirrell
Sunday, November 23, 4:00 PM
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St.

JUST BUFFALO MEMBER WRITER CRITIQUE GROUP

http://www.justbuffalo.org/docs/Writer_Critique_Group.pdf

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

319. Tarpaulin Sky Press
3 NEW BOOKS: CUNNINGHAM, MILLER, SHIMODA
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Tarpaulin Sky Press is thrilled to announce the publication of three new titles—Mark Cunningham's BODY LANGUAGE, Teresa K. Miller's FOREVER NO LO, and Brandon Shimoda's THE INLAND SEA. Read on for more information, and please help us spread the news.

Visit http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/catalog.html to order. If you're a subscriber, or if you've pre-ordered, your books are on the way.

BODY LANGUAGE
by Mark Cunningham
ISBN: 9780977901975
Prose Poetry.
5"x7", 136 pages, perfectbound, tête-bêche
$14 includes shipping in the US

BODY LANGUAGE, a book of poetry unique both in content and design, investigates the body in language and language in the body. It is a diptych of sorts, two full-length collections of prose poems (PRIMER and BODY) which meet in the middle. True to its content, the book design (called "tête-bêche"), employs two front covers and no back cover. "With its trope of clue-like instruction and unique, flip-book embodiment," writes Lisa Russ Spahr, BODY LANGUAGE "creates a kind of hybrid detective f(r)iction, an intrepid mash-up of high and low cultures in which the reader is as likely to encounter Rilke and Proto-Sinaitic inscription as Lacan, Film Noir, The Three Stooges, cell phones, higher mathematics, binary thought. . . ."

FOREVER NO LO
by Teresa K. Miller
Chapbook. Poetry.
4" x 4.75", saddle-sewn, french flaps, 36 pages
$10 includes shipping in the US

Vehicular homicide, relationship dissolution by imperceptible degrees, genocide, terror by war, linguistic disorientation, all meet in Teresa K. Miller's chapbook, FOREVER NO LO. As evidenced by its cover, a palimpsest of maps, the setting of FOREVER NO LO is at once Portugal, East Oakland, Rwanda, Chicago, Iraq. . . . In multivocal language fragments of broken Portuguese, elementary French, and dialectical English, this serial poem asks what comes of global and personal tragedy—what grows, haunts, decays, redeems—in the gut, on the news, or from local communities. Printed and hand-bound in Vermont, FOREVER NO LO is a limited edition of 150.

THE INLAND SEA
by Brandon Shimoda
Chapbook. Poetry.
6" x 8", perfectbound, black endsheets, 40 pages.
November 2008.
$10 includes shipping in the US

Also limited to 150 copies is TSky Press's first perfectbound chapbook, Brandon Shimoda's THE INLAND SEA. A remembrance, and a thinking-through, of the grand and generative compromises of birth, migration, dementia, sacrifice and ancestor worship, THE INLAND SEA is a raveling entreaty for the life of both a family departed and a family spectrally present. Spiritually addressed to Midori Shimoda, as well as to the inland seascapes of his birth (Hiroshima, Japan) and death (Lake Norman, North Carolina), THE INLAND SEA is composed of doubts, dissolutions, laments and a widening circumference of water and hope —a soft, yet urgent, ceremony, through which the ruptures of the past might find celebratory echo.

We hope you will enjoy these books as much as we've enjoyed the process of making them available to you. Keep an eye out, next month as well, when we release the second paper edition of Tarpaulin Sky Literary Journal.

Cheers,

Christian Peet
& Editors, Tarpaulin Sky Press

↑ Index

320. Rosalie Calabrese
Reading announcement
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Rosalie Calabrese poetry reading:
Tuesday, December 16, 2008, 7:30 PM
Perch Cafe
365 Fifth Avenue
Park Slope, Brooklyn, NY
(F train to Seventh Avenue)
No admission; $5.00 minimum food/drink for further info, call [redacted]

↑ Index

321. Obododimma Oha
Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododim
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Ryan Daley's argument in the following excerpt from his previous post has caught my attention:

"As 419 is a term that refers to the law in the Nigerian criminal code. Since there was a need to create this code in Nigeria, it seems there was a problem there with email scams. Never has anyone stated that all scams or cons have come from Nigeria. This would be silly. But...since it's 419 Letters we're talking about and since these letters come from Nigeria...we either call them Nigerian email scams, 419 Letters, or the less specific and much less accurate, scam emails."

I would like Daley to know that just as HIV/AIDS has names in Nigerian languages (with interesting derivations and patterns), what is named 419 also has names in many other languages of the world. Some Nigerians simply started referring to the crime by the name of the law that was enacted to crush it. It was there even before email became available to the public, way beyond the colonial period . Law enforcement agents used to refer to it (and some still do) as "OBT", which means "Obtaining Goods by Tricks." Every society or language has its interesting ways it manages etymology and synecdoche. If a society prefers to call something by another thing associated with it, it would be an oversimplification to conclude that that type of experience only has to do with that society (or even started in that society). There are certainly other ways of naming the crime in other societies, and if we study those, we may find that they predate the internet. Not even Benjamin Lee Whorf with his hypothesis on linguistic relativity and linguistic determinism would conclude quickly that because there is a Nigerian law that people optionally use in identifying the crime, then it is a typical Nigerian semiotic or problem.

To choose to call it "Nigerian scams" or "Nigerian email scams" is to engage in the politics of labelling. Ok, why not the option "419 mails"? My friend, lexical choice, especially with adjectives, has a lot to do with attitude. Are those attitudes harmful or harmless? Now, don't tell me that writers do not consider facework in their diction. Such a writer that ignores facework is certainly not a "righer". Just part of the crowd.

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Nov 16, 2008 at 6:28 AM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:

> I think if you look back at my initial post, you'll see that my intention was to argue the point that the term wasn't meant to offend, and wasn't offensive, though taking into account that we are bound to disagree. Most here have lived and visited other countries for what I'm sure are extensive periods of time, and thus know what being both a social and racial minority might be like. Many of these same travelers have probably found themselves part of marginalized communities of any kind, and might understand the problem of grouping, stereotyping and prejudice -- with firsthand knowledge that it really does hurt all involved, of course, when we find that our dear friends are the brunt of any type of colonialist (or any other type) subjugation through language. I don't think anyone here would disagree. In that regard, it's unnecessary to point out that Americans are often slurred in other countries. This, in fact, shows the ignorance of many that claim to be superior to Americans. Nevertheless, this is a different matter altogether, as it would be if we called all Nigerians "scam email writers"; however, being called a warmonger implies that a person is actively involved or supportive of a call to war, and thus it seems reductive to claim that all Americans, just by the token of their being Americans, are warmongers.
>
> But terming a response as "shaping discourse" allows you to respond and thus "shape discourse" while dismissing, or giving others reasons to dismiss, the comments they feel "shape discourse" in a way that they don't want it shaped. I'm all for shaping the discourse, as long as others have that same latitude. And they do, and have, shaped it. I won't claim the conversation is legit only when it goes the way I feel is fair and just.

> But this conversation so far relates to emails, spam and scam in the form of > the 419 letter. Whether David composed this letter or not is moot: it's what > got the discussion going...parochial or otherwise. And so...the 419 Letter:
>
> As 419 is a term that refers to the law in the Nigerian criminal code. Since > there was a need to create this code in Nigeria, it seems there was a > problem there with email scams. Never has anyone stated that all scams or > cons have come from Nigeria. This would be silly. But...since it's 419
> Letters we're talking about and since these letters come from Nigeria...we > either call them Nigerian email scams, 419 Letters, or the less specific and > much less accurate, scam emails.
>
> Call it what you want. The syntax and goal of the email is the same, no > matter where the letters originates. But at least we know what criminal code > they're breaking in Nigeria...
>
> On Sat, Nov 15, 2008 at 11:55 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> I think I said something about listening and parochialism - to repeat the > purpose of my post with deference. The fact that in 30 countries, including > those visited in South and Central America, six of the 30 in which I have > lived and worked, aged 39, today in China, not anyone has ever called me a > USAmerican does not displease me - esp given the Western hemisphere was > merely a playground for colonialism during the creation of the US and the > nation state. I don't mind being called something else, certainly - Yank > works...Kiwi, too, but then it has already been taken, and so has > Canadian.
>
> It seems disturbing, getting back to my point, that three things have been > missed among the remarks made:
>
> 1- Obododimm's remark informs and doesn't warrant such attacks (Hey, how > about we call those in the US warmongers, jesus freaks, Frankenstinian, > know-it-alls with no capacit to control their arrogance, spiritually fat...because it seems true, at least in most superficial way. Then, too, we could make some nasty generalizations related to white folks about they tend to think they have the right to talk for or talk down to...as in their minority hands they actually hold the keys to the proverbial kingdom)

and

2- That David could have written that e-mail (and I have known him for more than 15 years). Now, David has yet to respond to this list.

lastly

3- By being so parochial, you are basically shaping discourse to meet your own needs, not that of a greater literary community that extends outside.
Too, we don't always know what we need.

Best,
Alex

*--- On Sun, 11/16/08, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:*

From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododimm
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 16, 2008, 5:23 AM

So..with all the "harping," which "harping" is preferred, the harping support or harping condemnation of the term?

On Fri, Nov 14, 2008 at 8:42 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <
[redacted]> wrote:

I wanna say that a certain level of parochialism comes out in these most recent responses to Obododimma's reply. Just think about what this first term means for a second.

Next, I wanna say that given George's almost fetishizing of the expression
"USAmerican," I'm more than bit surprised at both his reaction and tone, and > most certainly because he has almost demanded that we take note of his own > sensitivitiy (as, apparently, an other).

>
> While I do not think it my responsibility to be overly concerned about anyone's sensitivities, certainly any more than to presuppose the credibility/reliability of narrative, I do, however, think it important to > listen. Without engaging in one-up-manship, I have NEVER been called anything but an American in my extensive travels (which is to say, at least > privately, I think these folks pushing this expression are harping on a non-issue. Can I say: "harping"). But, and this is my point, I have managed > to listen.
>
> Alex

--

Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

322. Obododimma Oha
Re: David
Mon 17 Nov 2008

An important part of the mail I sent to Tom (which I felt would benefit other people on this list) was lost. Here is it below: ---------- As you would see, that mail did not come from Africa or Nigeria. There are a number of cyber-oriented con artists out there (Africans, Americans, Asians, etc) who use all kinds of tricks to gain access to web-based mails. One major way is that of sending encrypted web-links inviting you to this or that web membership or free service. Once you click, your account becomes vulnerable.

Many of us do not seem to recognize that web-based emails are particularly insecure and we are sometimes carried away by the desire to be part of many things hapening on the web. David should count himself lucky that it was not a case of his account being used to send a mail oriented to terrorist activity! He would have had a lot to explain to the police! ---------- Regards to all. Obododimma.

On Sun, Nov 16, 2008 at 2:43 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> I sent the mail below directly to Tom Savage, but would like to share it with members on the list, because I am concerned with how some of us who use web-based mail become vulnerable to scammers.
> Regards to all.
> Obododimma.
> ----------
>
> Hello Tom,
> I have just returned to Namibia after a week-long conference in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. We will explore this issue further much later. It may interest you that I have been keeping most of those scam mails in a folder, hoping to do a more extended study of the criminal rhetoric that they represent. I received the scam mail in question three years ago from Turkey, and was asked to send money to Dr Mustapha, a Sudanese scholar I met at a conference in Gabon. The narrative is the same: he is stranded in Turkey and I should quickly send him some dollars! Mustapha and I became close friends when we met at that conference because I was impressed at the way he analyzed and criticized the Sudanese junta. So, I was almost tempted to run to his rescue but had to analyze the mail and tried to get in touch with him. A day later, a Chinese scholar who attended that conference wrote, telling me he got a similar mail from Mustapha. I was able to get in touch with Mustapha and found that he did not send the mail and did not even have access to his mail account.
>
> As you would see, that mail did not come from Africa or Nigeria. There are a number of cyber-oriented con artists out there (Africans, Americans, Asians, etc) who use all kinds of tricks to gain access to web-based mails. One major way is that of sending encrypted web-links inviting you to this or that web membership or free service. Once you click, your account becomes vulnerable.

Many of us do not seem to recognize that web-based emails are particularly insecure and we are sometimes carried away by the desire to be part of many things hapening on the web. David should count himself lucky that it was not a case of his account being used to send a mail oriented to terrorist activity! He would have had a lot to explain to the police!

I need to take a shower and sleep off the jet lag.

Regards,
Obododimma.

On Sat, Nov 15, 2008 at 9:06 PM, Thomas savage <[redacted]>wrote:

I'm not sure how to reply to this, Obodidimma, but I will try. There is no doubt in my mind that when I see one of these requests on line and it happens to come from Africa that I do think of it as "African" but I do not think of all communications from Africa as necessarily being of this type. I may have a predisposition based on experience but not a prejudice, I hope. As I am aware that many of the emails I have received of this sort come from elsewhere or claim to come from elsewhere, it becomes more than an issue of African identity. Critical thinking? I hope so. Logical, also. But a habit pattern of thought, definitely. I have known of one instance where a poet I know responded to one of these "scams" I don't know where it originated from and someone at the other end of the scam tried to withdraw a large amount from her bank account using whatever information she supplied which made this possible. Fortunately, she went to the bank and was able to head off the effects of her error. But it was my learning of this series of events which has made me be very careful when dealing with any of these suspicious emails which I still get once in a while and mostly don't even bother to open or read. Regards, Tom Savage

*--- On Fri, 11/14/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:*

From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, November 14, 2008, 6:42 PM

Yes, Tom, some of them are from Africa, but that has not led you to identify scams of that sort as "African scams". Even for the sake of logical reasoning? Let's say the politics of meaning no longer interests us (which would be surprising though!), at least we want our writing to agree with the principles of critical thinking. Or, am I getting it totally wrong?

--- Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 7:49 PM, Thomas savage <[redacted]>wrote:

While specifying Nigeria may be an error, I have nevertheless been warned that many of the emails one receives as personal requests from Africa are, indeed, scams and I never respond to them unless, asin the case of Obododimma Oha, I know the person who sent them, having met him on another listserv. Am I now insulting Africa as a whole by pointing out the existence of this online email phenomenon? I don't think so and I hope not. There are some of these requests which originate outside Africa as well, emails telling me that I have won something from organizations of which I have never heard before. I ignore these as well as I have been tipped off that these are scams or snares or whatever you want to call them except genuine. Regards, Tom Savage

--- On Wed, 11/12/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, November 12, 2008, 5:00 PM

Hi Barry,
*I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes* you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before
what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult
that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS?
Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded
> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you > get that e-mail, be warned.
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan

Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

323. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Jim,

What I was trying to say was:

a) whether these conceptual constructs themselves develop a tradition among them, actually becoming a new kind of poem, protecting the ideal (potential) rather than the real (actual).

b) Conceptual, more precisely process poems, have a tendency, as far as I can see, of leading to a huge number of poems, a thousand, two thousand, etc. This creates a crisis of reading them, basically, they become "unreadable," only conceivable, unless one is ready to spend an eternity on each word. Converting the poem into its concept -conceiving its yet undefined possibilities, which actually generated the activity in the first place- condenses this problem of relentless quantity into its essence.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Nov 16, 2008 at 1:09 AM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> I wasn't attempting to make a statement about 'any poem', really, Murat. I doubt that what I said applies well to 'any poem' but, rather, to a certain approach to poetry. In the same way that statements about conceptual art, say, might not apply very well to other types of art.
>
> I don't think it's a matter of reducing poems to statements describing the processes which produced them. Instead, it's a matter of introducing a > dimension to poetry which is interesting and, once understood and appreciated, allows people to enjoy various classes of poetry that, before, may have seemed deficient by other standards. For instance, N+7, simply as a text unto itself, without reference to not only the process that produced it but its place in history and why it has that place in history, might seem to enjoy notoriety without merit. As though what has merit must fulfill the criteria of the poemy poem devoid of concept, in this sense. Which, itself, can be viewed as a reduction of poetry, a refusal of dimensions such as the conceptual.

>
> It needn't be one or the other, of course. They aren't really articles of faith.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
> Quoting Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>:
>
> Jim,
>
> This way any poem is reduced to a statement describing the process which will produce it. The concept itself, the concept itself as potential, rather than its actualization, is the poem. This way what is infinite in potential, becomes infinitely concise.
>
> Do you mean something like this Jim?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat

↑ Index

324. Mark Weiss
Re: David
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Barry:

Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to you. This discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language are ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified for reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in Spain, nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry thrives in both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter" as a term

for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french disease, though the terms
certainly go back to an English view of the French as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the Profumo scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and in English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the practices are pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing off American elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all over China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws harp--maybe sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone might find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.

Mark

At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
>I have to say that, finally, I feel physically >ill from the feeling of having been implicitly >accused of holding and fomenting a vile >prejudice. There has been talk of language as a >loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by >how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I >am on the receiving end of those things. I don't >to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it >is very difficult for me to see how I can >participate in a group where I feel that such >views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.
>

↑ Index

325. AWAREing Press

Re: Thank you to all who wrote David Chirot directly & indirectly while in Africa

Mon 17 Nov 2008

David, your experience parallels one which seems, at least in part, to be happening in my court as well. I wrote a devil of a poem earlier today, to attack any spies or thieves: "Crazed! The $19.95 James Beach Writing Academy. 'WE EAT THE MEAT & GIVE YOU THE PUDDING'." That way, any hackers that happen along to my personal computer can drool, in contemplation of good and evil, before acting.

We ask, How else to defeat an enemy except to try and hack inside their mind(s)? A military man's and a philosopher's tactic, sure. But a poet's? Are poets supposed to be Christ-like in turning the other cheek? or are poets cunning daredevils whose pens are mightier than. What is "poet"? What is "poetics"? Are certain words "key," trite, buzzed out, property of certain individuals, free for all? Breaking into print is like cracking a safe-- some can write fetching prose or verse, and some need to hack into other peoples' safes to get any material. I think it's safe to say most everyone in the Poetics community is among the former.

Why anyone would ever steal another's work and/or identity, in pursuit of playing the romanticized poet, is perplexing. Karmic energy-attachments to stolen things can triple in energy, I hear. Curses, etc. Thanks for sharing, best of luck, keep us updated. Write on.

James Beach, editor
AWAREing Press
---------- Original message from David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>:

Thank you especially to all who wrote me directly in the last week and also to all those who wrote indirectly on the issues which came out of the letter of > appeal from the hacked address of "david chirot."
> I am very stunned and thankful to all for such concern and interest. It is deeply moving as it is a living sign of a community which has been created by > its members through time and writing, which is the art of space/time travel.
> If any of us were in any "elsewhere" whether by hacker or no--there would be > again such a response.
> To me this awareness of community and companionship revealed by of al things a > hacker indeed a very beaitufl event to be thankful for.
> I apologize in a previous letter I conveyed the opposite impression--as I wrote then, I had arrived back here from a day in the clinic and the next several days and today still not in such good shape so it has taken longer than ever to essay reading the mails and attempting replies. In that condition, the only letter I > had really looked at was the one from my son.

>
> The anaolgy I made previously with Rimbaud however one I think can make a poem > or prose poem with--the "reports" of Rimbaud that circulated in Paris during his > final years in Abyssinia--the wild notes of Verlaine and others in this > regard--the creation of a mythic Rimbaud leading akind of Pasha's life--or that > of an opulent traveling scholar--
>
> (almost a pre-figuring of Blaise Cendrars' own endless variations on his own > self mythologings in his all his writings > and at the same time being bruited about Paris while the Dounier Rousseau was > painting his huge tableaux of his visions of Tropical Scenes--supposedly from > his time in Mexico under the Emperor Maximilian--more likely at the Botanical > Gardens--)--
>
> also the questions of the "author" when the "author" can be hacked--a new form > of "possesion" via "identity theft" to be used in creating a "theft" scheme--
>
> Perhaps rather than creating "appeals" and fraudulent money up front demands, > hackers will take to the fine art of being the mimics and memes of actual > wirters--
>
> hacking into an author's computer, and sending out notes and papers written > carefully in the manner of so and so and yet subtly shifting through time the > tenor and direction of the writing from one point of view to a steadily more > opposing one--
>
> or one that covertly insiunately undermines everything that the actual author > has held to be true for ages and ages--
>
> now, faced with this dilemna, would the writer so hacked decide to take on the > hacker in a battle of styles and wits?
>

> or simply unplug the computer, toss it in the compactor and get an entirely new > setup all round--
>
> trying like Poe's William Wilson, to be freed of this pursuing "double"--
>
> a person hacking into one's very being--one's conscience--one's style--
>
> would a hacker be able to hack even the wild passes and flashes of El Spontaneo, > that afficianado of the Corrida who jumps into the ring and for as long as > possible takes over the role of matador from the professionals?
>
> or is a hacker El Spontaneo hin/herself in regards to the writer who is > hacked--mimicing her/his "passes"--and yet--adding flourishes that are far more > effective--elcit much greater applause--and begin to undermine the "actual" > writer as he begins to receive plaudits for aspects of "his" works which he > knows he "did not write" himself--
>
> so --did they come to him in a flash of what he has always denied--Romantic > Inspiration?--or some kind of bizarre Flashback? or Fugue State?--what is really > going on inside his self controlled, orderly mind--????---
>
> to be continued------
>
> http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2008/11/poetics-of-repossesion-of-stolen
> .html
> _____
> See how WindowsÂ® connects the people, information, and fun that are part of your > life
> http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/119463819/direct/01/

↑ Index

326. UbuWeb

Darren Wershler at UPenn, Thursday

Mon 17 Nov 2008

KWH Art, the English Department, & the Creative Writing Program present

an opening for TAPEWORM
a collaborative exhibition based on Darren Wershler-Henry's
"The Tapeworm Foundry (andor the dangerous prevalence of imagination)"

Thursday, 11/20 at 7PM
the Writers House | 3805 Locust Walk
No registration required - free & open to the public

Tapeworm is a collaboration of art projects radiating from a writing piece by Canadian artist Darren Wershler-Henry, "The Tapeworm Foundry (andor the dangerous prevalence of imagination)."/ /The text is available on UbuWeb: <http://www.ubu.com/ubu/wershler_tapeworm.html>http://www.ubu.com/ubu/wershler_tapeworm.html. The Tapeworm Foundry is an intriguing instance of conceptual writing, faithfully formulaic but also unusually compelling in its fruition: a single rambling, unpunctuated sequence of possible projects, ranging from quirky to absurd to highly ambiguous and all largely allusive of the twentieth century avant-garde. The potential 'instructions' that comprise Tapeworm, linked by the pulsating conjunction 'andor', are themselves mini-premises for a thousand other projects, making the 50-page list the ultimate conceptual catalyst.

This exhibition challenges a group of young contemporary artists and writers at Penn to realize some of Wershler-Henry's hypothetical instructions. The Penn students and graduates participating in the exhibition include: Grace Ambrose, Joyce Lee, Ned Eisenberg, Vladimir Zykov, Kimberly Eisler, Artie Vierkant, John Carroll, Jamie-Lee Josselyn, Arielle Brousse, Manya Scheps, Brooke Palmieri, Nick Salvatore, Robin McDowell, Sofie Hodara, Cecilia Corrigan, and Thomson Guster, with assistance from James La Marre and Trisha Low. Curated by Kaegan Sparks. There will be a limited quantity of complimentary exhibition catalogues available at the opening. Please email <mailto:[redacted]> [redacted] <mailto:<mailto:[redacted]> [redacted]> for more information.

This event will be webcast live: the Kelly Writers House LIVE WEBCAST allows you to join us at KWH as a virtual participant. Stop by online for a poetry reading or a discussion with a major journalist, regardless of whether you live in Philadelphia or in London. You can tune into each live webcast by following the instructions on the KWH-TV page: <http://writing.upenn.edu/wh/webcasts/instructions.html>http://writing.upenn.edu/wh/webcasts/instructions.html.

UbuWeb
http://ubu.com

↑ Index

327. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart

Where Billie Holiday once sang ...

Mon 17 Nov 2008

Hi all,

Please come to a great reading ...

Sunday, November 23
Sharon Mesmer, Susie Timmons and Bob Hershon
The (new) Zinc Bar (formerly the Baggott Inn, formerly the Cinderella Club -- where Billie Holiday once sang)
82 West 3rd, two doors west of Thompson
New York City, New York

$5 donation goes to the poets
Your hosts: Joe Elliot, Kimberly Lyons and Douglas Rothschild

↑ Index

328. Small Press Traffic

Jocelyn Saidenberg & Beth Murray at Small Press Traffic 11/21/08

Mon 17 Nov 2008

Small Press Traffic is thrilled to present:

Jocelyn Saidenberg and Beth Murray
 Friday, November 21, 2008 at 7:30 p.m.
Timken Lecture Hall
Refreshments will be served

Join us!

Jocelyn Saidenberg is the author of Dispossessed (Belladonna, 2007), Negativity (Atelos, 2006), Dusky (Belladonna, 2002), CUSP (Kelsey Street Press, 2001), and Mortal City (Parenthesis Writing Series, 1998). She is an editor and publisher of KRUPSKAYA Books, a small press publishing collective, and also works as a librarian at the San Francisco Public Library. Born in New York City, she currently lives in San Francisco.

Beth Murray practices homeopathy for people and animals. Since she became a homeopath, she mostly reads materia medica and doesn't submit her work to magazines. She is in the process of a adopting a child from the foster system. She lives in Alameda with her dog, Laney. The Island has everything to do with her experience there.

Unless otherwise noted, events are $5-10, sliding scale, free to current SPT members and CCA faculty, staff, and students.
There's no better time to join SPT!
Check out: http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm

Unless otherwise noted, our events are presented in Timken Lecture Hall California College of the Arts 1111 Eighth Street, San Francisco (just off the intersection of 16th & Wisconsin).

Directions & map:
http://www.sptraffic.org/html/directions.htm

We'll see you Fridays!

_____

Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]

http://www.sptraffic.org <http://www.sptraffic.org>

www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com
<http://www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com>

↑ Index

329. Martha Cinader Mims
National Radio Open Mic and Seeking Submissions
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Listen & Be Heard Network published Listen & Be Heard Poetry Cafe Blog at http://www.listenandbeheard.net/home where we publish a Poem of the Day, poetry columns, and have a poetry TV channel.
We are seeking submissions for the Poem of the Day, queries about poetry columns, and urls to video submissions for the Poetry TV Channel.

To submit poetry please register and log-in at http:// www.listenandbeheard.net/home/wp-login.php Click on "Write a Post", enter your title and text, save your work and then choose "pending review" from the "publish status" drop-down menu. Your post will be reviewed and you will be notified at the email address you register with.

L&BH Radio Hour encourages poets to call in to our weekly internet radio show with a poem and/or announcements about poetry events anywhere in the U.S.

L&BH Radio Hour Nov. 18
Listen & Be Heard Network

Call-in Number: [redacted]
Go to:
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/listenandbeheard/2008/11/19/LBH-Radio-Hour-Nov-18 to listen and for live chat and "click to talk."

My featured guests this week will be Eloise Cotton and Armando from Armando's in Martinez. Maria Billingsly from the Martinez Opera will also join us. We will be talking about current events at both establishments, what's going on in Martinez, California and what it takes to keep the doors open at these venues.

As always the show will feature announcements posted at Listen & Be Heard Network Arts News, some storytelling, some arts editorializing, and calls from listeners with thoughts to share and arts announcements. Poets are encouraged to call in with a poem.

Wishing you Peace and Poetry
martha cinader mims

Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

Get Skype and call me for free.

↑ Index

330. Susan Webster Schultz

Tinfish Press announces a new chapbook and a holiday sale!

Mon 17 Nov 2008

/
Charlotte's Way/ by Norman Fischer and a holiday special from Tinfish Press.

Tinfish Press is proud to announce publication of Norman Fischer's long poem, /Charlotte's Way/. Please see our website for details of this exquisitely designed and produced accordion chapbook:

http://tinfishpress.com/chapbooks.html

The chap is available from our website and (in a bit) from Small Press Distribution for $12. Or send a check to Tinfish Press at 47/728 Hui Kelu Street #9, Kaneohe, HI 96744.

Tinfish Press also announces a holiday special. Get beautiful books as gifts and take advantage of our end of the year discount. Or save them for yourselves! This year we have published four full-length books, one journal issue, and the new chapbook. Retail price for all items is $84. Send us $60, plus a modest contribution for shipping ($5) and they're all yours! (We recently lost our franking privileges from the University of Hawai`i—due to the economy—so now we're hustling for postage, too.)

The items you'll receive are:

Meg Withers, /A Communion of Saints/
Hazel Smith, /The Erotics of Geography/
Craig Santos Perez,/ from Unincorporated Territory/
/Tinfish 18.5: The Book: Puzzles and Word Game/s /Tinfish 18: The Journal/
Norman Fischer, /Charlotte's Way/

See our website for more information:

http://tinfishpress.com

This special offer ends January 1, 2009.

Thank you for supporting small press poetry publishing. Enjoy year's end and the beginning of the Obama era.

↑ Index

331. Ryan Daley
Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododim
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Point taken. Though, my concern here is namely with English and how the adjective, be it 419 or Nigerian, causes assumptions about the referent. You state below, and I'd agree, that by saying 419 we are OBTing the crime, we're euphemistically obscuring the action. But is the adjective describing a permanent or temporal action, and does that matter?

So, here comes the test: Does the world think less of Nigeria with the overuse of this adjective? Yes. The overuse turns into something similar to a snowclone: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Snowclone. And that's where the real offense comes in...not in the "feelings" of a few, but in the tearing-down ability of words, when employed incorrectly, to appeal to the lazy part of us to sum up entire nations/races/regions/sports teams. Hence, blaming Barry for the initial statement, as if he were the sole cause of the offense, seems petty. Certain Barry didn't invent 419 Letters, nor the term "Nigerian email scam." Our arguing the term, while certain tiresome by now, is what should happen with each problematization of language. ¿No es cierto?

-Ryan

On Mon, Nov 17, 2008 at 1:33 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Ryan Daley's argument in the following excerpt from his previous post has caught my attention:
>
> "As 419 is a term that refers to the law in the Nigerian criminal code. Since there was a need to create this code in Nigeria, it seems there was a problem there with email scams. Never has anyone stated that all scams or cons have come from Nigeria. This would be silly. But...since it's 419 Letters we're talking about and since these letters come from Nigeria...we either call them Nigerian email scams, 419 Letters, or the less specific and much less accurate, scam emails."
>
> I would like Daley to know that just as HIV/AIDS has names in Nigerian languages (with interesting derivations and patterns), what is named 419 also has names in many other languages of the world. Some Nigerians simply started referring to the crime by the name of the law that was enacted to crush it. It was there even before email became available to the public, way beyond the colonial period . Law enforcement agents used to refer to it (and some still do) as "OBT", which means "Obtaining Goods by Tricks." Every society or language has its interesting ways it manages etymology and synecdoche. If a society prefers to call something by another thing associated with it, it would be an oversimplification to conclude that that type of experience only has to do with that society (or even started in that society). There are certainly other ways of naming the crime in other societies, and if we study those, we may find that they predate the internet. Not even Benjamin Lee Whorf with his hypothesis on linguistic relativity and linguistic determinism would conclude quickly that because there is a Nigerian law that people optionally use in identifying the crime, then it is a typical Nigerian semiotic or problem.

To choose to call it "Nigerian scams" or "Nigerian email scams" is to engage in the politics of labelling. Ok, why not the option "419 mails"? My friend, lexical choice, especially with adjectives, has a lot to do with attitude. Are those attitudes harmful or harmless? Now, don't tell me that writers do not consider facework in their diction. Such a writer that ignores facework is certainly not a "righer". Just part of the crowd.

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Nov 16, 2008 at 6:28 AM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:

I think if you look back at my initial post, you'll see that my intention was to argue the point that the term wasn't meant to offend, and wasn't offensive, though taking into account that we are bound to disagree. Most here have lived and visited other countries for what I'm sure are extensive periods of time, and thus know what being both a social and racial minority might be like. Many of these same travelers have probably found themselves part of marginalized communities of any kind, and might understand the problem of grouping, stereotyping and prejudice -- with firsthand knowledge that it really does hurt all involved, of course, when we find that our dear friends are the brunt of any type of colonialist (or any other type) subjugation through language. I don't think anyone here would disagree. In that regard, it's unnecessary to point out that Americans are often slurred in other countries. This, in fact, shows the ignorance of many that claim to be superior to Americans. Nevertheless, this is a different matter altogether, as it would be if we called all Nigerians "scam email

writers";
however, being called a warmonger implies that a person is actively involved or supportive of a call to war, and thus it seems reductive to claim that all Americans, just by the token of their being Americans, are warmongers.

But terming a response as "shaping discourse" allows you to respond and thus "shape discourse" while dismissing, or giving others reasons to dismiss, the comments they feel "shape discourse" in a way that they don't want it shaped. I'm all for shaping the discourse, as long as others have that same latitude. And they do, and have, shaped it. I won't claim the conversation is legit only when it goes the way I feel is fair and just.

But this conversation so far relates to emails, spam and scam in the form of the 419 letter. Whether David composed this letter or not is moot: it's what got the discussion going...parochial or otherwise. And so...the 419 Letter:

As 419 is a term that refers to the law in the Nigerian criminal code. Since there was a need to create this code in Nigeria, it seems there was a problem there with email scams. Never has anyone stated that all scams or cons have come from Nigeria. This would be silly. But...since it's 419 Letters we're talking about and since these letters come from Nigeria...we either call them Nigerian email scams, 419 Letters, or the less specific and
much less accurate, scam emails.

Call it what you want. The syntax and goal of the email is the same, no matter where the letters originates. But at least we know what criminal code they're breaking in Nigeria...

On Sat, Nov 15, 2008 at 11:55 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <
[redacted]> wrote:

*I think I said something about listening and parochialism - to repeat the purpose of my post with deference. The fact that in 30 countries, including those visited in South and Central America, six of the 30 in which I have lived and worked, aged 39, today in China, not anyone has ever called me
a USAmerican does not displease me - esp given the Western hemisphere was merely a playground for colonialism during the creation of the US and the nation state. I don't mind being called something else, certainly - Yank works...Kiwi, too, but then it has already been taken, and so has Canadian.*

It seems disturbing, getting back to my point, that three things have been missed among the remarks made:

*1- Obododimm's remark informs and doesn't warrant such attacks (Hey, how about we call those in the US warmongers, jesus freaks, Frankenstinian, know-it-alls with no capacit to control their arrogance, spiritually fat...because it seems true, at least in most superficial way. Then, too,
we could make some nasty generalizations related to white folks about they tend to think they have the right to talk for or talk down to...as in their minority hands they actually hold the keys to the proverbial kingdom)*

and

2- That David could have written that e-mail (and I have known him for more than 15 years). Now, David has yet to respond to this list.

lastly

*3- By being so parochial, you are basically shaping discourse to meet your own needs, not that of a greater literary community that extends outside.
Too, we don't always know what we need.*

Best,
Alex

*--- On Sun, 11/16/08, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:*

From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododimm
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 16, 2008, 5:23 AM

So..with all the "harping," which "harping" is preferred, the harping support or harping condemnation of the term?

On Fri, Nov 14, 2008 at 8:42 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]> wrote:

I wanna say that a certain level of parochialism comes out in these most recent responses to Obododimma's reply. Just think about what this first term means for a second.

Next, I wanna say that given George's almost fetishizing of the expression "USAmerican," I'm more than bit surprised at both his reaction and tone, and most certainly because he has almost demanded that we take note of his own sensitivitiy (as, apparently, an other).

While I do not think it my responsibility to be overly concerned about anyone's sensitivities, certainly any more than to presuppose the credibility/reliability of narrative, I do, however, think it important to listen. Without engaging in one-up-manship, I have NEVER been called anything but an American in my extensive travels (which is to say, at least privately, I think these folks pushing this expression are harping on a non-issue. Can I say: "harping"). But, and this is my point, I have managed to listen.

> Alex
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

↑ Index

332. Jill Chan
Best New Poems Online
Mon 17 Nov 2008

Best New Poems Online is a website featuring short commentaries and links to the best new poems published online in literary magazines and journals.

We choose from new poems published online in literary magazines and journals as we come across them. Readers of contemporary poetry, publishers and editors, or even the poets themselves may suggest work for us to check out. Email us at [redacted]

http://bestnewpoemsonline.com

If you are in facebook, you are invited to join our group:

http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=34972108084

Thank you.

↑ Index

333. Peter Ciccariello
raining tache with a, g, e, and ampersand
Tue 18 Nov 2008

raining tache with a, g, e, and ampersand<http://ciccariello.viewbook.com/raining_tache#/1/>

- Peter Ciccariello
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

334. Michael Hennessey
PennSound Launches a New Louis Zukofsky Page
Tue 18 Nov 2008

Today, we're extremely proud to announce PennSound's newest addition: an extensive author page for the highly-influential American Objectivist, Louis Zukofsky (http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Zukofsky.html). Nearly six months in the making, this page brings together nearly twenty full-length recordings by the poet, including important readings, conversations and lectures, along with supplementary materials responding to Zukofsky's work.

The earliest of the seventeen readings contained in our Zukofsky archives is a 1954 appearance on Berkeley's KPFA Radio, which includes a number of excerpts from 1946's Anew, as well as "A"-11 and the second half of *"A" *-9. Selections from Anew and 1941's 55 Poems comprise much of the setlist from his 1958 reading at the Poetry Center at the San Francisco State University, as well as a historic 80-minute homemade tape for the Library of Congress, recorded in November 1960, which also features lengthy samplings from Some Time, Songs of Degrees, Catullus and Barely and Widely. Another homemade tape from the following year includes *Catullus*1-46 (save 18 & 19).

Other historic recordings include a 1961 reading at Les Deux Megots (precursor to the St. Mark's Poetry Project), recorded by reading organizer Paul Blackburn and broadcast on WBAI-FM; a two-hour 1962 session at New York City's A&R Recording Company, which includes a broad survey of his work from "A," After I's, Catullus, Some Time, Barely and Widely, Anew and

55 Poems; a 1971 recording of Autobiography taken from Lincoln Center; 1972 readings at Temple University, Glassboro State College and Bard College; and a 1975 recording by Hugh Kenner of a reading at Johns Hopkins University featuring selections from "A" and 80 Flowers, plus "A Foin Lass Bodders," Zukofsky's Brooklynese rendering of Cavalcanti's "Donna Me Prega."

In addition to these recordings, you'll also find a 1961 conversation between Zukofsky and Robert Creeley, a 1971 lecture on Wallace Stevens at the University of Connecticut and a handful of broadcast appearances. These resources are augmented by a number of recordings of contemporary poets performing and interpreting Zukofsky's work, including Charles Bernstein's take on "A Foin Lass Bodders," Guy Davenport's comparisons of Zukofsky's Catullus poems and the original Latin texts, and a pair of marvelous performances of "A"-24, recorded in the Bay Area in 1978, which feature Steve Benson, Carla Harryman, Lyn Hejinian, Kit Robinson and Bob Perelman (on piano). There are also links to videos from 2004's Zukofsky Centennial Conference at Columbia University & Barnard College, featuring Perelman, Creeley, Rachel Blau DuPlessis, Norman Finkelstein and Mark Scroggins, among others. Those interested in further Objectivist listening will also want to check out PennSound's author pages for Charles Reznikoff and Carl Rakosi.

PennSound is immeasurably grateful to Paul Zukofsky for his gracious permission to share these many recordings of his father's work with a worldwide audience. Archives such as this do not materialize overnight, and so we'd like to thank Danny Snelson, our Zukofsky page editor for his tireless efforts. Peter Quartermain, Mark Scroggins and Ron Silliman also deserve thanks for both editorial input and access to recordings from their collections. Richard Sieburth and Jeff Twitchell-Waas also provided helpful feedback on the collection, and Mollie Braverman, Kareem Estefan and Jenny Lesser spent countless hours digitizing and editing recordings. It's our sincere hope that this Zukofsky page will be an indispensable resource for fans and scholars of the poet, and an avenue for those not familiar with his work to begin their acquaintance. Follow this link to start listening:
http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Zukofsky.html

--
Michael S. Hennessey
Managing Editor, PennSound
http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/

↑ Index

335. Obododimma Oha
Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododim
Tue 18 Nov 2008

Some of your views are obviously acceptable, but I have queries for

Some of your views are obviously acceptable, but I have queries for the following taken from your post:

"Certain Barry didn't invent 419 Letters, nor the term "Nigerian email scam." Our arguing the term, while certain tiresome by now, is what should happen with each problematization of language."

Do we have to be inventors of words we use before we are held accountable for the implications or meanings they express in our communications? Do users not suggest that they subscribe to meanings implied or expressed in words they use? I personally believe that when I use words, I indicate that the meanings they convey are produced by me and I should be humble and polite enough to apologize when my diction is read as offensive. We would be more than humpty dumpties if we force down meanings on people and do not care how they process them. I wonder why you think that expressing an objection to an expression (as an Affected) is "petty".

Be well.
-- Obododimma.

_____
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, November 18, 2008 4:24:36 AM
Subject: Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododim

Point taken. Though, my concern here is namely with English and how the adjective, be it 419 or Nigerian, causes assumptions about the referent. You state below, and I'd agree, that by saying 419 we are OBTing the crime, we're euphemistically obscuring the action. But is the adjective describing a permanent or temporal action, and does that matter?

So, here comes the test: Does the world think less of Nigeria with the overuse of this adjective? Yes. The overuse turns into something similar to a snowclone: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Snowclone. And that's where the real offense comes in...not in the "feelings" of a few, but in the tearing-down ability of words, when employed incorrectly, to appeal to the lazy part of us to sum up entire nations/races/regions/sports teams. Hence, blaming Barry for the initial statement, as if he were the sole cause of the offense, seems petty. Certain Barry didn't invent 419 Letters, nor the term "Nigerian email scam." Our arguing the term, while certain tiresome by now, is what should happen with each problematization of language. ¿No es cierto?

-Ryan

On Mon, Nov 17, 2008 at 1:33 PM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Ryan Daley's argument in the following excerpt from his previous post has caught my attention:
>
> "As 419 is a term that refers to the law in the Nigerian criminal code. Since there was a need to create this code in Nigeria, it seems there was a problem there with email scams. Never has anyone stated that all scams or cons have come from Nigeria. This would be silly. But...since it's 419 Letters we're talking about and since these letters come from Nigeria...we either call them Nigerian email scams, 419 Letters, or the less specific and much less accurate, scam emails."
>
> I would like Daley to know that just as HIV/AIDS has names in Nigerian languages (with interesting derivations and patterns), what is named 419 also has names in many other languages of the world. Some Nigerians simply started referring to the crime by the name of the law that was enacted to crush it. It was there even before email became available to the public, way beyond the colonial period . Law enforcement agents used to refer to it (and some still do) as "OBT", which means "Obtaining Goods by Tricks." Every society or language has its interesting ways it manages etymology and synecdoche. If a society prefers to call something by another thing associated with it, it would be an oversimplification to conclude that that type of experience only has to do with that society (or even started in that society). There are certainly other ways of naming the crime in other societies, and if we study those, we may find that they predate the internet. Not even Benjamin Lee Whorf with his hypothesis on linguistic relativity and linguistic determinism would conclude quickly that because there is a Nigerian law that people optionally use in identifying the crime, then it is a typical Nigerian semiotic or problem.
>
> To choose to call it "Nigerian scams" or "Nigerian email scams" is to engage in the politics of labelling. Ok, why not the option "419 mails"? My friend, lexical choice, especially with adjectives, has a lot to do with attitude. Are those attitudes harmful or harmless? Now, don't tell me that writers do not consider facework in their diction. Such a writer that ignores facework is certainly not a "righer". Just part of the crowd.

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Nov 16, 2008 at 6:28 AM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:

I think if you look back at my initial post, you'll see that my intention was to argue the point that the term wasn't meant to offend, and wasn't offensive, though taking into account that we are bound to disagree. Most here have lived and visited other countries for what I'm sure are extensive periods of time, and thus know what being both a social and racial minority might be like. Many of these same travelers have probably found themselves part of marginalized communities of any kind, and might understand the problem of grouping, stereotyping and prejudice -- with firsthand knowledge that it really does hurt all involved, of course, when we find that our dear friends are the brunt of any type of colonialist (or any other type) subjugation through language. I don't think anyone here would disagree. In that regard, it's unnecessary to point out that Americans are often slurred in other countries. This, in fact, shows the ignorance of many that claim to be superior to Americans. Nevertheless, this is a different matter altogether, as it would be if we called all Nigerians "scam email writers"; however, being called a warmonger implies that a person is actively involved or supportive of a call to war, and thus it seems reductive to claim that all Americans, just by the token of their being Americans, are warmongers.

But terming a response as "shaping discourse" allows you to respond and thus "shape discourse" while dismissing, or giving others reasons to dismiss, the comments they feel "shape discourse" in a way that they don't want it shaped. I'm all for shaping the discourse, as long as others have that same latitude. And they do, and have, shaped it. I won't claim the conversation is legit only when it goes the way I feel is fair and just.

But this conversation so far relates to emails, spam and scam in the form

> of
> the 419 letter. Whether David composed this letter or not is moot: it's what > got the discussion going...parochial or otherwise. And so...the 419 Letter:
>
> As 419 is a term that refers to the law in the Nigerian criminal code. Since > there was a need to create this code in Nigeria, it seems there was a > problem there with email scams. Never has anyone stated that all scams or > cons have come from Nigeria. This would be silly. But...since it's 419
> Letters we're talking about and since these letters come from Nigeria...we > either call them Nigerian email scams, 419 Letters, or the less specific and > much less accurate, scam emails.
>
> Call it what you want. The syntax and goal of the email is the same, no > matter where the letters originates. But at least we know what criminal code > they're breaking in Nigeria...
>
> On Sat, Nov 15, 2008 at 11:55 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> I think I said something about listening and parochialism - to repeat the > purpose of my post with deference. The fact that in 30 countries, including > those visited in South and Central America, six of the 30 in which I have > lived and worked, aged 39, today in China, not anyone has ever called me a > USAmerican does not displease me - esp given the Western hemisphere was > merely a playground for colonialism during the creation of the US and the > nation state. I don't mind being called something else, certainly - Yank > works...Kiwi, too, but then it has already been taken, and so has Canadian.
>
> It seems disturbing, getting back to my point, that three things have been missed among the remarks made:

1- Obododimm's remark informs and doesn't warrant such attacks (Hey, how about we call those in the US warmongers, jesus freaks, Frankenstinian, know-it-alls with no capacit to control their arrogance, spiritually fat...because it seems true, at least in most superficial way. Then, too,
we could make some nasty generalizations related to white folks about they tend to think they have the right to talk for or talk down to...as in their minority hands they actually hold the keys to the proverbial kingdom)

and

2- That David could have written that e-mail (and I have known him for more than 15 years). Now, David has yet to respond to this list.

lastly

3- By being so parochial, you are basically shaping discourse to meet your own needs, not that of a greater literary community that extends outside.
Too, we don't always know what we need.

Best,
Alex

*--- On Sun, 11/16/08, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:*

From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David - in reponse to both Bowering & Obododimm
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 16, 2008, 5:23 AM

So..with all the "harping," which "harping" is preferred, the harping support or harping condemnation of the term?

On Fri, Nov 14, 2008 at 8:42 PM, Alexander Jorgensen <
[redacted]> wrote:

I wanna say that a certain level of parochialism comes out in these most recent responses to Obododimma's reply. Just think about what this first term means for a second.

*Next, I wanna say that given George's almost fetishizing of the expression
"USAmerican," I'm more than bit surprised at both his reaction and tone,
and
most certainly because he has almost demanded that we take note of his own sensitivitiy (as, apparently, an other).*

*While I do not think it my responsibility to be overly concerned about anyone's sensitivities, certainly any more than to presuppose the credibility/reliability of narrative, I do, however, think it important
to listen. Without engaging in one-up-manship, I have NEVER been called anything but an American in my extensive travels (which is to say, at least privately, I think these folks pushing this expression are harping on a non-issue. Can I say: "harping"). But, and this is my point, I have managed to listen.*

Alex

guidelines

*--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics*

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

336. Obododimma Oha
Re: David
Tue 18 Nov 2008

Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n

Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does not change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance, continues using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess" (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess" (instead of simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps you are also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and would not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the world start from recklessness in the use of words. --- Obododimma Oha.

From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 17, 2008 10:04:10 PM
Subject: Re: David

Barry:

Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to you. This discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language are ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified for reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in Spain, nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry thrives in both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter" as a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the French as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the Profumo scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and in English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the practices are pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing off American elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all over China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws harp--maybe sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone might find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.

Mark

At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
> I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the feeling of having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile prejudice. There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can participate in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.
>

↑ Index

337. Jim Andrews
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Tue 18 Nov 2008

> What I was trying to say was:
>
> a) whether these conceptual constructs themselves develop a tradition among > them, actually becoming a new kind of poem, protecting the ideal (potential) > rather than the real (actual).
>
> b) Conceptual, more precisely process poems,

The notions of conceptual art or conceptual poetry, however different from one another, should be distinguished from the notion of the process poem or process art. Basically, the former focusses on concept, the latter on process. The former can be without special interest in process and the latter can be without special interest in the conceptual.

The Oulipo is conceptual in that they are more interested in the constraint than instances of realized texts. Similar to how a meta-mathematician might be more interested in the properties of formal systems in general than the properties of any particular formal system. Or the way that a poet might be more interested in poetics than poems.

Many would then say the creature's a critic or something not a poet. Until faced with a Derrida or someone in that vein and of that quality. Similarly in math the mathematicians, when faced with Godel's work, which is more meta than the foundational level (i.e., it's about the foundations, not foundational), begin to see that doing mathematics can be practiced significantly at the meta level.

The Oulipo is 'processual' in that they seem mainly interested in constraint-based, generative or processual creations.

> have a tendency, as far as I > can see, of leading to a huge number of poems, a thousand, two thousand, > etc. This creates a crisis of reading them, basically, they become > "unreadable," only conceivable, unless one is ready to spend an eternity
> on > each word. Converting the poem into its concept -conceiving its yet > undefined possibilities, which actually generated the activity in the > first > place- condenses this problem of relentless quantity into its essence.

It's certainly a different type of reading. One of course is not obliged or asked to read thousands of texts but to get some sense of the range and nature of the generative capacity of the process.

One is asked to read between the lines toward the big picture.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

338. mIEKAL aND
Xerolage 40 - John M. Bennett
Tue 18 Nov 2008

- - - - - - - - - - - - - - -
X E R O L A G E 4 0
- - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

Duh Hud by John M. Bennett

"John M. Bennett seems to break fresh ground with each new volume. His approach to the technical matters at hand is as practical and unbiased, and playful, as is his search for a personal yet communal diction. He makes poetry of the very obstacles and impediments that would otherwise clog his way. And as a writer of applied poetry, he demonstrates without exception that poetic procedure is itself a way of life, that there exists a universe of "new strategies" just waiting to be discovered. I declare we must identify John M. Bennett as being one of the most active and present forces happening today." —Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino more at:

http://xexoxial.org/is/xerolage40/by/john_m_bennett

The primary investigation of Xerolage is how collage technique of 20th century art, typography, computer graphics, visual & concrete poetry movements & the art of the copier have been combined. Each issue is devoted to the work of one artist.

24 pages, 8.5 x 11, $6 includes postage
Subscriptions: 4 issues/$20

XEXOXIAL EDITIONS
10375 Cty Hway Alphabet
La Farge WI 54639

↑ Index

339. mIEKAL aND
Xerolage 41 - Lawrence Upton
Tue 18 Nov 2008

- - - - - - - - - - - - - - -
X E R O L A G E 4 1
- - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

Scat Songs by Lawrence Upton based on a text by Chris Funkhouser

from the introduction:

Almost everything, over and above the initial tearing, trampling and tangling of the image was done by me, quite deliberately, as I used the copier, by breaking with common sense and / or the copier's manual. At that stage, very little was produced and very little was thrown away. The initial run of images ran to 31, which was cut down to 24 by selection; and , of the remaining 24, 11 were changed by tearing away unwanted material before being recopied. Xerolage 41 - Lawrence UptonThe aim was to get as near as possible to an improvisation in real time. The second session was much shorter. This time, I had 11 sheets; each had an attached note with a brief action- prompt. The copier made the 11 copies and that was that. The two sets of finished images were then sorted together. The title, Scat Songs, came late.

What I aimed for, retrospectively, in Scat Songs was to get 24 varying images with 24 presses of the <copy> button. 42 presses isn't bad. Maybe I'll improve on that in make any future copier poem.

Yet such an improvement would not necessarily make the result aesthethically better or worse. It's just a constraint, like any other, to encourage concentration, a taking of structural form into poetic procedures, which I tilt.

more at:

http://xexoxial.org/is/xerolage41/by/lawrence_upton

The primary investigation of Xerolage is how collage technique of 20th century art, typography, computer graphics, visual & concrete poetry movements & the art of the copier have been combined. Each issue is devoted to the work of one artist.

24 pages, 8.5 x 11, $6 includes postage
Subscriptions: 4 issues/$20

XEXOXIAL EDITIONS
10375 Cty Hway Alphabet
La Farge WI 54639

↑ Index

340. Peter Ciccariello

Re: [webartery] Always wild, words unwind: the wildverse of mIEKAL aND

Tue 18 Nov 2008

Wonderful interview, fantastic gardens...I am really intrigued by those figs!

- Peter Ciccariello

On Mon, Nov 17, 2008 at 8:05 AM, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:

> Always wild, words unwind: the wildverse of mIEKAL aND
>
> http://www.vimeo.com/2254233
>
> C. Merhl Bennett questions mIEKAL aND > 30 minute documentary interview on site in the gardens of Dreamtime Village.
>
> Published in The Madhatter Review #10
> madhattersreview.com/issue10/index.shtml

Video by Camille Bacos
driftlessmedia.com
__._,_.___ Messages in this topic
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/message/31724;_ylc=X3oDMTM0YjZhcjBwBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRtc2dJZAMzMTcyNARzZWMDZnRyBHNsawN2dHBjBHN0aW1lAzEyMjY5MjcxNDQEdHBjSWQDMzE3MjQ->(
1) Reply (via web post)
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJvaGkyN2l2BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRtc2dJZAMzMTcyNARzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNycGx5BHN0aW1lAzEyMjY5MjcxNDQ-?act=reply&messageNum=31724>| Start a new topic
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJjZjltaTQwBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNudHBjBHN0aW1lAzEyMjY5MjcxNDQ->

Messages<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/messages;_ylc=X3oDMTJjcHV1Y2QwBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNtc2dzBHN0aW1lAzEyMjY5MjcxNDM->|
Files<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/files;_ylc=X3oDMTJkMmI5a2RjBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNmaWxlcwRzdGltZQMxMjI2OTI3MTQz>|
Photos<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/photos;_ylc=X3oDMTJjbG8yaWh0BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNwaG90BHN0aW1lAzEyMjY5MjcxNDM->|
Links<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/links;_ylc=X3oDMTJkZTQ5OHI0BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNsaW5rcwRzdGltZQMxMjI2OTI3MTQz>|
Database<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/database;_ylc=X3oDMTJhdjV2ODV1BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNkYgRzdGltZQMxMjI2OTI3MTQz>|
Polls<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/polls;_ylc=X3oDMTJkNnFjOWhiBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNwb2xscwRzdGltZQMxMjI2OTI3MTQz>|
Members<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/members;_ylc=X3oDMTJjMzlyZ2ZuBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNtYnJzBHN0aW1lAzEyMjY5MjcxNDM->|
Calendar<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/calendar;_ylc=X3oDMTJiczFlbWdnBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNjYWwEc3RpbWUDMTIyNjkyNzE0Mw-->
[image: Yahoo! Groups]<http://groups.yahoo.com/;_ylc=X3oDMTJiMGdtcjZwBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNnZnAEc3RpbWUDMTIyNjkyNzE0NA-->
Change settings via the Web<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery/join;_ylc=X3oDMTJkbTM2cG82BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWM

> DZnRyBHNsawNzdG5ncwRzdGltZQMxMjI2OTI3MTQ0>(Yahoo! ID required)
> Change settings via email: Switch delivery to Daily Digest<[redacted]?
> subject=Email+Delivery:+Digest>| Switch
> format to Traditional<[redacted]?subject=Change+Delivery+Format:
> +Traditional> > Visit Your Group
> <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery;_ylc=X3oDMTJibG1udTRtBF9TAzk3Mz
> U5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDZnRyBH
> NsawNocGYEc3RpbWUDMTIyNjkyNzE0NA-->| Yahoo!
> Recent Activity
>
> Visit Your Group
> <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/webartery;_ylc=X3oDMTJjMW9oMzBvBF9TAzk3M
> zU5NzE0BGdycElkAzY0ODI1BGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTc4NTgzNgRzZWMDdnRsB
> HNsawN2Z2hwBHN0aW1lAzEyMjY5MjcxNDM->
> Y! Entertainment
>
> World of Star
> Wars<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIG=13oq9a469/M=493064.12016259.12445666.99
> 63301/D=groups/S=1705785836:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP=1226934344/L=/ > *B=PgmxCULaX.k-/J=1226927144282809/A=5008817/R=0/SIG=10sulld0b/http:// > starwars.yahoo.com/>
>
> Rediscover the force.
>
> Explore now.
> Need traffic?
>
> Drive
> customers<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIG=13oec8ddt/M=493064.12016308.1244570
> 0.8674578/D=groups/S=1705785836:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP=1226934344/L=/ > *B=PwmxCULaX.k-/J=1226927144282809/A=3848644/R=0/SIG=131l83flq/http:// > searchmarketing.yahoo.com/arp/srchv2.php?
> o=US2006&cmp=Yahoo&ctv=Groups5&s=Y&s2=&s3=&b=50>
>
> With search ads
>
> on Yahoo!
> Drive Traffic
>
> Sponsored
> Search<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIG=13ov852sb/M=493064.12016255.12445662.8
> 674578/D=groups/S=1705785836:NC/Y=YAHOO/EXP=1226934344/L=/ > *B=QAmxCULaX.k-/J=1226927144282809/A=4025338/R=0/SIG=12jnci1fd/http:// > *us.rd.yahoo.com/evt=44092/http://searchmarketing.yahoo.com/srch/index.php>
>
> can help increase > your site traffic.

> .
>
> __,_._,___

↑ Index

341. Cara Benson
collaborative poem at Bookthug for ephemera fans
Tue 18 Nov 2008

---

go here and find some fun

POEM BY NUMBERS by Cara Be hey kids,

go here and find some fun

POEM BY NUMBERS by Cara Benson Amanda Earl Hugh Thomas Composed simultaneously in East Greenbush NY, Ottawa ON, and somewhere in Norway

BookThug Moments Cafe

http://bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=MC1
http://bookthug.ca/moments.php

Best!

Cara

(sorry for all the httyping - never know what links will shine through on a forward)

Sous Rature

↑ Index

342. Anny Ballardini
Re: David
Tue 18 Nov 2008

I agree with Mark. I would be very sorry to see Barry Schwabsky go away from this list, he is one of the most sensitive and intelligent contributors. Something similar happened to me once while queuing up at the canteen at university (eons ago). A guy whom I hadn't seen for ages screamed out: "Anny, we haven't seen you for a while!" To which I answered back: "I have been working like a negro..." And a black guy jumped up, "How do negroes work?" I felt like answering as Turks smoke, which would have triggered a senseless chain of ethnic insanity. I thus apologized, even if as Mark says, sayings are sayings and they belong to the general culture. I was the one who was working, and no one else.

On Mon, Nov 17, 2008 at 10:04 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> Barry:
>
> Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to you. This discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language are ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified for reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in Spain, nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry thrives in both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter" as a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the French as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the Profumo scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and in English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the practices are pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing off American elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all over China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws harp--maybe sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone might find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.
>
> Mark
>
> At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
>
> I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the feeling of having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile prejudice. There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can participate in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html

I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

↑ Index

343. Jennifer Karmin
SUBMISSIONS: E-Poetry Barcelona
Tue 18 Nov 2008

Call for papers and works:

E-Poetry is both a conference and a festival on digital poetry. The festival is the most significant digital literary gathering in the field. Authors and researchers worldwide meet and present their researches and works.

Deadline: before December 1, 2008

Complete information at:
http://www.uoc.edu/in3/hermeneia/e-poetry_barcelona_09/eng/index.html

↑ Index

344. Kate Soto
Poetry and Poetics Events at the University of Chicago This Week
Tue 18 Nov 2008

Wednesday, November 19, 4:30 PM
Liesl Olson: Gertrude Stein's Habits
Classics 110
1010 E. 59th St.
Chicago, IL 60637

Reception to follow.

Gertrude Stein locates habit—rather than innovation—as the most animating force in the English literary tradition. Stein inherits her mentor William James's belief in the benefits of habit, and she values especially the pleasure of repetition. This value stands apart from a dominating ethos against habit, best articulated by one of literary modernism's key precursors, Walter Pater. Stein's emphasis on habit throughout her ouevre—both stylistic and ideological—becomes central to what she wrote while living in German-occupied France. Habits both mask the disruption that war creates, dissolving the consequences of the world into the space of the home, and paradoxically work as a way in which war itself can be best represented. Stein's World War II writings foreground habit's crucial utility, but ultimately they also call attention to habit's political inadequacy. This lecture draws from her forthcoming book, Modernism and the Ordinary (Oxford 2009). History and Forms of Lyric Series, Sponsored by the Program in Poetry and Poetics

Thursday, November 20, 4:30 PM
August Kleinzahler
Rosenwald 405
1101 E. 58th St.
Chicago, IL 60637

Reception to follow.

August Kleinzahler published his first book of poetry, A Calendar of Airs, in 1978. Since then, he has published seven others, including Storm over Hackensack (1985); Earthquake Weather (1989); Red Sauce Whiskey and Snow (FSG, 1995); Green Sees Things in Waves (FSG, 1998); and Live from the Hong Kong Nile Club: Poems 1975–1990 (FSG, 2000). In 2003, Farrar, Straus and Giroux published The Strange Hours Travelers Keep, which won the 2004 Griffin International Poetry Prize and the 2004 Gold Medal in Poetry from the Commonwealth Club of California, and was short-listed for the U.K.'s Forward Prize in Poetry. His most recent collection of poetry is Sleeping It Off in Rapid City (FSG, 2008). He is also the author of a book of prose, Cutty, One Rock: Low Characters and Strange Places, Gently Explained (FSG, 2004). Sponsored by the Poem Present Reading and Lecture Series. Friday, November 21, 1:00 PM Poetry & Jazz: An Experiment. Harper [redacted] E. 59th St. Chicago, IL 60637

Reception to follow.

August Kleinzahler will be discussing the experiments of reading poetry to jazz accompaniment in the 1950s and early '60s--Rexroth, Ferlinghetti, Kerouac, Patchen, Logue, et al--and the intellectual/ cultural background and impulse behind these experiments, chief of among these: jazz emerging as a folk-based "art music," as opposed to dance music or popular entertainment; and the notion of the "negro" as ennobled outsider, existential hero. He'll also discuss instances of black jazz artists, like Mingus and George Russell, going the reverse direction and mixing poetry into the their musical compositions. Sponsored by the Poem Present Reading and Lecture Series.

These events are free and open to the public. If you need assistance in order to participate, contact 773/[redacted].

Kate Soto
Coordinator
The Committee on Creative Writing
The Program in Poetry and Poetics University of Chicago
Walker Museum 411 // [redacted]

↑ Index

345. Stephen Vincent
Re: David
Tue 18 Nov 2008

Barry, I don't think anyone participating in this discussion has any interest in any way in turning you into a scape goat. In my view, and in terms of my input, the focus is on the negative ramifications of the term "Nigerian scam." I have found it interesting (at least), and provocative when some have risen to defend the use of the term.

This culture (American) if not elsewhere is obviously constantly wrestling with how to make descriptions accurate as opposed to defamatory. Sometimes I find the replacing terms ridiculous, or charmless, as say,'vertically disenfranchised' for short people previously perjoratively described as somebody else.

Mark is quite right to suggest the 'politically correct' is not necessarily 'accurate' either. I find it off-putting, to dismiss the discussion as "silly". If I were Chinese, for example, I think I would be uncomfortable with the term 'Asian Flu' as an annual moniker. But I will leave Mark's view for others to judge.

To personalize too much is probably the most prevalent disease among poets!

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

--- On Mon, 11/17/08, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 17, 2008, 1:04 PM

Barry:

Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to you. This discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language are ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified for reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in Spain, nor the Hong Kong
version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry
thrives in both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter" as a term
for a male birth control device that helps

prevent the french disease, though the terms
certainly go back to an English view of the French as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the Profumo scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and in English we french kiss and
there's also greek love, though the practices are pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite
that's killing off American elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another
parasite, grows all over China and Korea. Jew's
harp is apparently a corruption of jaws
harp--maybe sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone might find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.

Mark

At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
>I have to say that, finally, I feel physically
>ill from the feeling of having been implicitly >accused of holding and fomenting a vile >prejudice. There has been talk of language as a >loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by >how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I >am on the receiving end of those things. I don't
>to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it >is very difficult for me to see how I can >participate in a group where I feel that such >views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.
>

↑ Index

346. George Bowering

Re: bo

Tue 18 Nov 2008

On Nov 10, 2008, at 9:08 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I would have to disagree with you, George. I would say that the Canadian > government is slightly to the right of the Democrats but this is because of > the minority status. With Harper being Bush's sidekick and with Harper exercising rigid control over the Conservative Party, I'd say that Harper > would like the Conservative Party to be as right-wing as the Republicans - > and he will do so if he ever gets a majority which, blessedly, this time > around was prevented through the wisdom of Canadian voters.

> John Cunningham

The more I look at Harper and his cabinet [Harper Harper Harper Harper, etc]
the more I am coming to agree with you.

But I do remember the good old days, when Diefenbaker was to the left of Kennedy.

George Hermann Bowering
No ring tones for me.

↑ Index

347. steve russell
Re: Kay Ryan
Tue 18 Nov 2008

---

http://www.slate.com/id/2196198/

Assessing Kay Ryan, poet laureate.

Slate.

↑ Index

348. amy king
While the He/art Pants: (Poetic Responses to the 2008 American Elections)
Tue 18 Nov 2008

I'm happy to say that my poem appears here:
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=2693

Otherwise, THE LIST IS GROWING @ The Poet’s Corner

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=322

· Edward Mycue

· Jared Schickling

· Bill Morgan

· John M. Bennett

· Conrad Reeder

· Tom McBride

· Gerald Schwartz

· Farideh Hassanzadeh-Mostafavi

· Russ Golata

· Evelyn Posamentier

· Gina Sangster Hayman

· Matt Johnson

· Susan Bright

· Daniel Zimmerman

· Fan Ogilvie

· Henry Gould

· Carol Novack

· Joseph Duemer

· Peter Ciccariello

· Spencer Selby

· Eugen Galasso

· Grace Cavalieri

· Amy King - STATE OF A NATION

· Halvard Johnson

· Raymond Bianchi

–Submit to Anny Ballardini and Obododimma Oha @ The Poet's Cornerhttp://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=2664

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

And thanks to Elizabeth Kate Switaj for her recent review of my poem, "Men By the Lips of Women" here: http://blog.elizabethkateswitaj.net/?p=538

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Enjoy!

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

349. amy king

¡Goodreads Monthly Newsletter Poem Contest!

Tue 18 Nov 2008

---

* DO YOU WANT YOUR WORDS TO MEET 1.6 MILLION PEOPLE? *

The Goodreads' editors have invited us to participate in the selection of each poem that will appear in the Goodreads' Monthly Newsletter.

1. Post your best poem (one poem per person) in this folder.

2. I will select five poems each month to be voted on by the Goodreads community.

3. The poem with the most votes will be published in the Goodreads' newsletter – distributed each month to 1.6 million people!

Good luck & please post your best work!

Thanks,

Amy King

Moderator, Poetry @ Goodreads

http://www.goodreads.com/group/show/233._POETRY_

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

350. Mathew Timmons

LA-Lit: Clouds :: Nov 21+22, 2008 at Betalevel and Center for the Arts Eagle Rock

Tue 18 Nov 2008

---

form-body-surface-material-method-growth-sound-mass-condensation atmospheric-nebulae-clarity-reveals-recreation-currents-groundless-texture connectivity-dense-manifest-rhythm-decenter-collaborate-surprise-confer-disperse

LA-Lit: Clouds :: November 21+22, 2008

at Betalevel and Center for the Arts Eagle Rock

Come celebrate LA-Lit's three year anniversary on Friday November 21 at Betalevel and on Saturday November 22 at Center for the Arts Eagle Rock. For over three years, LA-Lit has developed a new space for the literary culture of Los Angeles to develop and exhibit itself. Reflecting the shifting nature of Los Angeles, LA-Lit has conducted well over thirty interviews with poets and writers who have lived in LA all their lives as well as writers who have visited LA for only a few days. Please join us for LA-Lit: Clouds :: a two day conference in Los Angeles connecting the decentered literary culture of LA in an effort to investigate it's current manifestations and to develop a sense of LA's inherent literary spontaneity.

LA-Lit: Clouds :: Schedule

Friday November 21:

8:00pm-11:00pm:

Perform and Celebrate at Betalevel

Stan Apps, Teresa Carmody, Amarnath Ravva, Lisa Samuels, Christine Wertheim

Saturday November 22:

Confer at Center for the Arts Eagle Rock

12:00pm-1:30pm

form-body-surface-material-method-growth-sound-mass condensation-structure-elements-foreground-background

Panelists: Stan Apps, Guy Bennett, Christine Wertheim, Ara Shirinyan

2:00pm-3:30pm

atmospheric-nebulae-clarity-reveals-recreation-currents groundless-textured-visible-droplets-interstellar-crystalline

Panelists: Will Alexander, Teresa Carmody, Amarnath Ravva, Mark Wallace

4:30pm-6:00pm

Perform at Center for the Arts Eagle Rock

Demosthenes Agrafiotis, Will Alexander, Guy Bennett, K. Lorraine Graham, Sawako Nakayasu, Ara Shirinyan, Mark Wallace

LA-Lit - http://LA-Lit.com

Betalevel – in the alley behind 963 N. Hill St, Los Angeles, CA 90012

http://betalevel.com/

Center for the Arts Eagle Rock – 2225 Colorado Blvd, Los Angeles, CA 90041

http://www.centerartseaglerock.org/

↑ Index

351. Justin Katko
Raworth in Providence
Tue 18 Nov 2008

Tom Raworth will read his poems this Thursday, 6pm November 20th, at Symposium Books in Providence. The address is 240 Westminster Street. Copies of Tom's most recent pamphlet, Let Baby Fall, will be available. You can also purchase them online: http://plantarchy.us/let-baby-fall.html. If you're in Boston, New Haven, Philly, New York, Hell, YOU BETTER SHOW UP AND BASICALLY LIKE TOTALLY REPRESENT.

Justin Katko

↑ Index

352. Mark Weiss
Re: David
Tue 18 Nov 2008

German measles, anyone?

Many of the strange usages we've been talking about occur in clusters, because of long-term enmity between peoples, as in all the phrases beginning with "french." Add "french bed" to my list. The one-offs, like Nigerian scam or Asian flu or Spanish influenza, are one-offs precisely because they don't indicate or participate in a larger derogation, even if that derogation exists in other spheres--i.e., we certainly have plenty of racism, but Nigerian scam isn't part of it, and I doubt it provokes a racist image. It certainly doesn't imply--I don't think in its decade of usage has ever implied--a more general view of Nigerians as schemers.

It's a matter of circumstance and degree. It's a good thing that we tend to filter out the openly racist--I could do without phrases like "I jewed him down," though "jews harp" doesn't bother me--doesn't carry a threat.

How about the common (in the Caribbean) "Cubans are the Jews of the Caribbean," meaning both well-educated and given to argument. Or, as Lydia Cabrera reports in El Monte (which, if you have Spanish, run out to your nearest botanica and buy), Jews and Chinese are the most dangerous mayomberos?

These usages also tend to proliferate in environments in which diverse peoples live together in relative raucous comfort (like New York or Havana). Italian haircut (ouch! ouch!)? Polish jokes? Moldavian crud?

What did I forget? Don't be embarrassed to chime in.

I would be interested to know from those with more experience in other countries than I have, what common phrases include American, yankee, etc. I'm sure they exist.

The question remains, given that all language contains enormous stores of history, and that some of that history is truly toxic, to what degree are well-meaning people supposed to filter before they speak? At what pont have we overly limited communication? Or reduced ourselves to stammering? Me, I'd be as conservative as possible about self-censorship, and clearly we each draw the line where it seems appropriate.

In this case I'll stick with "silly." Some might be offended if I called it "Californian." It is interesting to know where others draw the line, but less so when it smacks of prescription.

Mark

At 02:35 PM 11/18/2008, Stephen Vincent wrote: >Barry, I don't think anyone participating in >this discussion has any interest in any way in >turning you into a scape goat. In my view, and >in terms of my input, the focus is on the >negative ramifications of the term "Nigerian >scam." I have found it interesting (at least), >and provocative when some have risen to defend the use of the term.
>
>This culture (American) if not elsewhere is >obviously constantly wrestling with how to make >descriptions accurate as opposed to defamatory.
>Sometimes I find the replacing >terms ridiculous, or charmless, as >say,'vertically disenfranchised' for short >people previously perjoratively described as somebody else.
>
>Mark is quite right to suggest the 'politically >correct' is not necessarily 'accurate' either. I >find it off-putting, to dismiss the discussion >as "silly". If I were Chinese, for example, I >think I would be uncomfortable with the term
>'Asian Flu' as an annual moniker. But I will >leave Mark's view for others to judge.
>
>To personalize too much is probably the most prevalent disease among poets!
>
>Stephen V
>http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
>--- On Mon, 11/17/08, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
>From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: David
>To: [redacted]
>Date: Monday, November 17, 2008, 1:04 PM
>
>Barry:
>
>Don't let the legions of the politically >hyper-correct get to you. This discussion is >profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every >language are ascribed to one nationality or >another and become dictionary-sanctified for >reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza >didn't originate in Spain, nor the Hong Kong

>version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry
>thrives in both places. I doubt that the French >lose much sleep over "french letter" as a term
>for a male birth control device that helps >prevent the french disease, though the terms
>certainly go back to an English view of the >French as licentious--a stone I think nobody has >thrown since at least the Profumo scandal. For >Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is >cunnilingus, and in English we french kiss and
>there's also greek love, though the practices are >pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite
>that's killing off American elm trees really >originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the >Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another
>parasite, grows all over China and Korea. Jew's
>harp is apparently a corruption of jaws
>harp--maybe sharks should be miffed (they always >seem to be miffed). Language, thank god, is a >repository of history. Cleansing it of anything >that anyone might find offensive would also >cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.
>
>Mark
>
>At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
> >I have to say that, finally, I feel physically
> >ill from the feeling of having been implicitly > >accused of holding and fomenting a vile > >prejudice. There has been talk of language as a > >loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by > >how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I > >am on the receiving end of those things. I don't
> >to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it > >is very difficult for me to see how I can > >participate in a group where I feel that such > >views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.
> >

>
>

↑ Index

353. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Tue 18 Nov 2008

Jim,

"It's certainly a different type of reading. One of course is not obliged or asked to read thousands of texts but to get some sense of the range and nature of the generative capacity of the process."

Exactly. then one is experiencing the poem as a/in terms of a concept.

Jim, when you look at oulipo in both its conceptual and procedural aspects, procedural limits leading to endless works within those limits, are you not saying these two aspects are related?

Ciao,

Murat

On Tue, Nov 18, 2008 at 6:41 AM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> What I was trying to say was:
>
> a) whether these conceptual constructs themselves develop a tradition among > them, actually becoming a new kind of poem, protecting the ideal (potential)
> rather than the real (actual).
>
> b) Conceptual, more precisely process poems,
>
> The notions of conceptual art or conceptual poetry, however different from one another, should be distinguished from the notion of the process poem or process art. Basically, the former focusses on concept, the latter on process. The former can be without special interest in process and the latter can be without special interest in the conceptual.
>
> The Oulipo is conceptual in that they are more interested in the constraint than instances of realized texts. Similar to how a meta-mathematician might be more interested in the properties of formal systems in general than the properties of any particular formal system. Or the way that a poet might be more interested in poetics than poems.

> *Many would then say the creature's a critic or something not a poet. Until faced with a Derrida or someone in that vein and of that quality. Similarly in math the mathematicians, when faced with Godel's work, which is more meta than the foundational level (i.e., it's about the foundations, not foundational), begin to see that doing mathematics can be practiced significantly at the meta level.*
>
> The Oulipo is 'processual' in that they seem mainly interested in constraint-based, generative or processual creations.
>
> have a tendency, as far as I can see, of leading to a huge number of poems, a thousand, two thousand, etc. This creates a crisis of reading them, basically, they become "unreadable," only conceivable, unless one is ready to spend an eternity on each word. Converting the poem into its concept -conceiving its yet undefined possibilities, which actually generated the activity in the first place- condenses this problem of relentless quantity into its essence.
>
> It's certainly a different type of reading. One of course is not obliged or asked to read thousands of texts but to get some sense of the range and nature of the generative capacity of the process.
>
> One is asked to read between the lines toward the big picture.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

354. Maria Damon

Re: Raworth in Providence

Tue 18 Nov 2008

Tom Raworth read in Minneapolis last week and was just terrific, so let me echo Justin's exhortations. YOU BETTER SHOW UP AND LIKE TOTALLY REPRUHZENT!

Justin Katko wrote:
> Tom Raworth will read his poems this Thursday, 6pm November 20th, at > Symposium Books in Providence. The address is 240 Westminster Street. Copies > of Tom's most recent pamphlet, Let Baby Fall, will be available. You can > also purchase them online: http://plantarchy.us/let-baby-fall.html. If > you're in Boston, New Haven, Philly, New York, Hell, YOU BETTER SHOW UP

AND > BASICALLY LIKE TOTALLY REPRESENT.
>
> Justin Katko
>
>

↑ Index

355. George Bowering

a nth

Tue 18 Nov 2008

What did your mother throw away?

What did she make you throw away?

When playwright Tom Cone was a kid he had a box full of baseballs autographed by all the players on both teams in the 1956 World Series. His dad told him they would pay for his retirement one day.

His mother gave them to some kids to play ball with.

When I was a kid my mother heard about some bozo psychologist who said that comic books would turn your kids into criminals, so she made me get rid of my World's Finest Comics #1 etc. and my run of Batman and Detective Comics (collectors will know where I was coming from).

Later she chucked out my complete 1951 Bremerton Blue Jackets baseball uniform.

When Jean Baird the human whirlwind heard these stories she said there had to be an anthology there somewhere.

So what do you think? Do you have a story such as this that you have always wanted to tell, or have been telling for years?

E-mail me at the above address, or e-mail Jean Baird at
[redacted]

Feel free to pass this suggestion on.
Prose or verse acceptable.
Photos and other illustrations encouraged.

↑ Index

356. David Kirschenbaum

Boog City¹s NYC Small Presses Night This Tues. Nov. 25

Wed 19 Nov 2008

please forward

Boog City presents
d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

New York City Small Presses Night

with

Farfalla Press, Open 24 Hours,

:::the press gang:::, and X-ing Books

Tues. Nov. 25, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W.20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

This is our one event each season in our non-NYC small presses series where we honor NYC small presses.

Featuring readings from poets from some of the city's finest small presses
as well as publications available from each of the presses.

Farfalla Press, Gary Parrish, ed.
--I Feel Tractor
--Anne Waldman

Open 24 Hours, John Coletti and Greg Fuchs, eds.
--Erica Kaufman

:::the press gang:::, Cristiana Baik and Sara Wintz, eds. --Evan Kennedy

X-ing Books, Amy Mees and Mark Wagner, eds.
--Jeremy Schmall
--Justin Taylor

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

--

Boog City 53, our New York City Small Presses Issue, published in conjunction with the above event, features pages put together by the participating four presses.

Farfalla Press--Edmund Berrigan and Anne Waldman
Open 24 Hours--Erica Kaufman
:::the press gang:::--justin katko and Jow Lindsay, Evan Kennedy, and Manjula Martin
X-ing Books--Jeremy Schmall and Justin Taylor

As well as your usual swell Boog City content: Jim Behrle¹s comic Dogs Don¹t Vote, and poems from Maxwell Heller, Holly Melgard, and Akilah Oliver.

To read the pdf version go to:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc53.pdf

--

Press and author bios

Farfalla Press/McMillan & Parrish
http://www.farfallapress.blogspot.com
http://www.spdbooks.org/root/pages/serp.asp?Title=&Author=&Subtitle=farfalla+press&ISBN=&submit=Search

Farfalla Press/McMillan & Parrish is an independent small press surfacing from Naropa University's Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics and based in Brooklyn. It puts out perfect-bound books, chapbooks, broadsides, and CD's. Artists include Vanessa Boff, Rob Geisen, Jack Collom, Tom Peters, Gary Parrish, LeAnn Bifoss, Akilah Oliver, Junior Burke, Christopher Ryan, John Sakkis, Peter Lamborn Wilson (Hakim Bey), Bobbie Louise Hawkins, Anne Waldman, Edmund Berrigan, Anselm Berrigan, Marcella Durand, Jessica Fiorini, Jessica Rogers, Lee Ranaldo, Corrine Fitzpatrick, Stefania Iryne Marthakis, Brenda Coultas, Simon Pettet, John Coletti, Dustin Williamson, Lewis Warsh, Kristin Prevallet, Stacy Szymaszek, John High, Nathaniel A. Siegel, Arlo Quint, Chris Martin, Tyler Burba, George Schneeman, Shappy Seasholtz, Bob Holman, Bernadette Mayer, Reed Bye, Ambrose Bye.

*I Feel Tractor
http://www.myspace.com/ifeeltractor
http://www.goodbyebetter.com/

I Feel Tractor is available to you with musings of space folk and cut ups. I Feel Tractor has a self-titled 7² from the Loudmouth Collective, and a CD, Once I Had an Earthquake, from Goodbye Better.

*Anne Waldman
http://www.naropa.edu/swp/faculty/a_waldman.cfm
http://almostisland.com/poetry/WALDMAN2.html

Anne Waldman, poet, professor, performer, curator, and cultural activist, is the author of over 40 books and small press editions of poetry and poetics, including Fast Speaking Woman, the IOVIS project, Vow to Poetry: Essays, Interviews and Manifestos, Marriage: A Sentence, In the Room of Never Grieve, Structure of the World Compared to a Bubble, Outrider, and Nine Nights Meditation (with artist Donna Dennis). She is the editor of numerous anthologies, including The Beat Book, and co-editor of Disembodied Poetics: Annals of the Jack Kerouac School, The Angel Hair Anthology, and Civil Disobediences: Poetics and Politics in Action (with Lisa Birman). Her CDs include Alchemical Elegy, Battery: Live at Naropa, The Eye of the Falcon, and The Matching Half (the last two with music and production by Ambrose Bye). She is a recipient of the Shelley Memorial Award and has had residences at the Civitella Ranieri Center, the Tokyo Woman¹s Christian University, the Emily Harvey Foundation in Venice, and the Bellagio Center. She has performed her work on stages across the American continent and abroad. Recent conferences and festivals have taken her to Wuhan (China), Berlin, Vienna and Dublin. She works with writer and director Ed Bowes on a number of video/movie projects.

Open 24 Hours

Open 24 Hours is dedicated to publishing limited edition books by poets working in traditions rooted in experimentation and social engagement. The Open 24 Hours design is influenced by the staple-bound mimeo revolution of the American small press underground most visibly recognized in the books published by many 2nd- and 3rd-generation New York School Poets. We have simply adapted the method to digital technology.

Open 24 Hours has published books by Mariana Ruiz Firmat, Corina Copp, Betsy Fagin, Joel Dailey, Chris Toll, Steve Carey, Arlo Quint, Erica Kaufman, and Dustin Williamson. Forthcoming are books by David Kirschenbaum and Will Yakulic.

Open 24 Hours is based in New York City, edited and designed by John Coletti and Greg Fuchs. Jon Allen is our in-house illustrator. We took the name from D.C. poet Buck Downs, who published a poetry zine by the same name. Downs inherited Open 24 Hours from Baltimore poet Chris Toll, who started it in 1980.

You can reach them at [redacted] or [redacted].

*Erica Kaufman
http://ericajane0808.googlepages.com/

Erica Kaufman is the author of several chapbooks, most recently censory impulse (an excerpt of her long poem of the same title) (OMG), civilization day (Open24Hours), and censory impulse (another excerpt of her long poem of the same title) (Big Game Books). Kaufman holds an MFA from the New School and was the winner of the 2003 New School University Chapbook Contest. Her poems can be found in Puppyflowers, Painted Bride Quarterly, Bombay Gin, The Mississippi Review, Unpleasant Event Schedule, the tiny, Turntable + Blue Light, 26, Aufgabe, and LIT, among other places. Essays and reviews can be found in The Poetry Project Newsletter, CutBank, Rain Taxi, Verse, and elsewhere. Kaufman is currently a Ph.D. candidate at the CUNY Graduate Center. She lives in Brooklyn and works in Manhattan and teaches at Baruch College.

:::the press gang:::
http://www.pressgangsters.com

:::the press gang::: is a small press, co-directed by cristiana baik and sara wintz, publishing younger avant writers.

*Evan Kennedy
http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=2424&cat=1

Evan Kennedy is the author of The Cheer-Up Book of Wounded Soldiers (Dirty Swan Projects) and Us Them Poems (BookThug). His work has appeared in "Tight," "Glosolalia," "Hot Whiskey," and The Poetry Project's "The Recluse." He lives in Brooklyn.

X-ing Books
http://www.x-ingbooks.com/

Amy Mees and Mark Wagner are thing people. A list of their joint experiences includes publishing art catalogs, cutting up money for art¹s sake, letterpress printing, handcrafts (like Mom used to make), traditional book binding, and co-founding the Booklyn Artists Alliance. They are happy to associate freely with word people like Jeremy Schmall, Justin Taylor, Jen Benka, and _____ (fill in the blank). It¹s a venture still in the making and we¹re hoping to find other motivated and brilliant contributors.

*Jeremy Schmall

Jeremy Schmall is the co-editor and founder of The Agriculture Reader, and author of Open Correspondence from the Senator: Volume 1, But a Paucity of his Voluminous Writings. He lives in Brooklyn.

*Justin Taylor
http://www.justindtaylor.net/

Justin Taylor is the editor of The Apocalypse Reader (Thunder's Mouth) and Come Back, Donald Barthelme (McSweeney's). His work has appeared in numerous magazines, journals, and websites. He is the author of the book of poems More Perfect Depictions of Noise (X-ing Books) and, with the poet Jeremy Schmall, is co-editor of The Agriculture Reader, a handmade arts annual.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

Boog City
http://www.welcometoboogcity.com

Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 18th year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women¹s writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates two regular performance series‹d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Chelsea¹s ACA Galleries; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, Cake Shop, CBGB¹s, and The Knitting Factory. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. Dec. 16, Dos Press (Maxwell, Texas)

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://www.welcometoboogcity.com
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
F: [redacted]

↑ Index

357. Susan Schultz

Charlotte's Way by Norman Fischer and a holiday special from Tinfish Press.

Wed 19 Nov 2008

Charlotte's Way by Norman Fischer and a holiday special from Tinfish Press.

Tinfish Press is proud to announce publication of Norman Fischer's long poem, Charlotte's Way. Please see our website for details of this exquisitely designed and produced accordion chapbook:

http://tinfishpress..com/chapbooks.html

The chap is available from our website and (in a bit) from Small Press Distribution for $12. Or send a check to Tinfish Press at 47/728 Hui Kelu Street #9, Kaneohe, HI 96744.

Tinfish Press also announces a holiday special. Get beautiful books as gifts and take advantage of our end of the year discount. Or save them for yourselves! This year we have published four full-length books, one journal issue, and the new chapbook. Retail price for all items is $84. Send us $60, plus a modest contribution for shipping ($5) and they're all yours! (We recently lost our franking privileges from the University of Hawai`i—due to the economy—so now we're hustling for postage, too.)

The items you'll receive are:

Meg Withers, A Communion of Saints
Hazel Smith, The Erotics of Geography
Craig Santos Perez, from Unincorporated Territory
Tinfish 18.5: The Book: Puzzles and Word Games
Tinfish 18: The Journal
Norman Fischer, Charlotte's Way

See our website for more information:

http://tinfishpress.com

This special offer ends January 1, 2009.

Thank you for supporting small press poetry publishing. Enjoy year's end and the beginning of the Obama era.

↑ Index

358. Wanda Phipps
Yara Arts Group Book & Film Night: In a Different Light
Wed 19 Nov 2008

Hope you can make this:

Yara Arts Group Book & Film Night: In a Different Light

A Book & Film Night will include the presentation and signing of In a Different Light, a bilingual anthology of Ukrainian literature that has been performed by the Yara Arts Group (with translations into English by Virlana Tkacz and Wanda Phipps), and a screening of Light from the East, Amy Grappell's documentary about the massive political upheaval in 1991 that led to Ukraine's declaration of independence (originally released in 2006; re-edited in 2008; 55 minutes).

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 2008, 7 p.m.

Admission (includes reception):
$15; $10 Museum members and seniors; $5 students

The Ukrainian Museum
222 East Sixth Street (between 2nd & 3rd Avenues)
New York, New York 10003
Tel: [redacted]
Wed-Sun 11:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

359. amy king
THIS FRIDAY - Carnahan, Casamassima, Grinnell, Lederer, Oberman, and Rohrer
Wed 19 Nov 2008

Friday, November 21, 2008 @ 7:00 p.m.

November 21st @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg, Brooklyn

 Carnahan, Casamassima, Grinnell, Lederer, Oberman, and Rohrer **

Special Musical Guest @ Intermission: Addenda

Brooklyn resident Kerry Carnahan has co-authored and edited a number of publications, including the New York City High Performance Infrastructure Guidelines, Cool and Green Roofs, and Sustainable Urban Sites (forthcoming), and is working towards her MFA in poetry from CUNY-Hunter College.

~~~
~~~

Christophe Casamassima is the editor and proprietor of furniture_press in Baltimore where he teaches at Towson University. He is also the Literary Arts
Director of the Towson Arts Collective. His collections of poetry include the Proteus (Moria, 2008) and Joys: A Catalogue of Disappointments (BlazeVOX, 2008).

~~~

E. TracyGrinnell is the author of Some Clear Souvenir (O Books, 2006) and Music or Forgetting (O Books, 2001), as well as the limited edition chapbooks Leukadia (Trafficker Press, forthcoming 2008), Quadriga, a collaboration with Paul Foster Johnson (gong chapbooks, 2006), Of the Frame (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs, 2004), and Harmonics (Melodeon Poetry Systems, 2000). She lives in Brooklyn and edits Litmus Press and its annual journal of poetry and translation, Aufgabe.

~~~

Katy Lederer is the author of the poetry collections, Winter Sex (Verse Press, 2002) and The Heaven-Sent Leaf (BOA Editions, forthcoming 2008) as well as the memoir Poker Face: A Girlhood Among Gamblers (Crown, 2003), which Publishers Weekly included on its list of the Best Nonfiction Books of 2003 and Esquire Magazine named one of its eight Best Books of the Year 2003.

~~~~

Miller Oberman was the 2005 recipient of Poetry Magazine's Ruth Lilly Fellowship and has recently had poems in Bloom Magazine, the Minnesota Review, and Lilith. Miller lives in Brooklyn with Zero Oberman.

~~~~

Matthew Rohrer is the author of five books, most recently RISE UP, published by Wave Books. He teaches at NYU in the creative writing program, and lives in Brooklyn.

~~~

SPECIAL INTERMISSION GUEST

While Addenda is just beginning, there's a history. Dan Sofaer and Christopher Anderson first met when Christopher was the singer in the Washington, D.C. band Nine Men Are Suicides. After being musical director for the recording of the one song the band knew how to play (Sister Ray by the Velvet Underground), Dan went on to be a founding member of the Silence After and
~~~

Christopher rejoined him in '88 for the short-lived Hurricane Daisy, whose killer demo had Fugazi's Don Zientara for its producer. After years in the wilderness, Dan reemerged as bassist in the San Francisco trio Giant Haystacks, and Christopher posted some Prince covers on MySpace. A chance note from Japan has reunited them, and they're ready to bring the spirit to the letter.

You can find their music at myspace.com/addenda

~~~~

stain

766 grand street

brooklyn, ny 11211

(L train to Grand Street,

1 block west)

718/[redacted]

open daily @ 5 p.m.

~~~~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic

~~~~

http://stainofpoetry.wordpress.com/

http://stainofpoetry.wordpress.com/

http://stainofpoetry.wordpress.com/

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index
~~~~

360. Steve Tills

All the good and decent hullabaloo about D. Baptiste-Chirot's misadventures in cyberspace and elsewhere abroad, er, in a foreign country.

Wed 19 Nov 2008

Possibly lost amidst the generous and honorable hullabaloo regarding the recent poetics scam was the very real possibility that a well-regarded friend and comrade might have been in grave danger and needed very real and immediate help.

Meanwhile, there developed deep and evolutionary discussion about the correctness of the language used to alert folks to his predicament.

What if the predicament had been real, dire, no nonsense?

Man, would we all have looked pretty damn stupid or brilliantly sensitive?

I think it's astounding what lengths we post-avant, Modern poets will go to protect the state of the art and the purity of our letters even if we must risk the actual life or lives of our comrades in Accomplishment. How far we've come from the rest of the animals on the planet, the lower species that lack the technologies of language and must rely solely on instinct and their bodies to survive.

Shoot, I'm speechless. Words cannot express what... Furthermore,

Steve Tills

↑ Index

361. Ethan Hon

Reading TONIGHT in NYC

Wed 19 Nov 2008

Hello friends,

This Wednesday, November 19, at 7:30 pm a cafe in the Lower East Side will be taken over by poets and their kind. Please come join us!

Readers:
Timothy Donnelly
Thomas Hummel
Sommer Browning
Nancy Kuhl

Place: Roots & Vines Cafe, 409 Grand St. at Clinton.
Time: 7:30

Day: November 19
http://2nddraftreadingseries.com

↑ Index

362. Small Press Traffic

Ask Not What Small Press Traffic Can Do For You…

Wed 19 Nov 2008

Dear Friends of Small Press Traffic,

If there is anyone out there who still doubts that Small Press Traffic is a place where all things are possible, who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time, who still questions the power of the literary community, membership is your answer.

Please join or renew your SPT membership today at: http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm <http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm%20> Memberships are available at the following rates: Students $30.00; Single Membership $40; Friend of SPT $100; Benefactor $500; and Patron $1,000.

In this election year marked both by fraught economic times and a fierce spirit of hope, Small Press Traffic is asking once again for your support. In the face of adversity, poets have always banned together and redistributed their great wealth to keep innovation and experimentation alive. YES WE CAN! It may seem difficult to renew 50 members by the end of 2008, but with your help, it can be done. YES WE CAN! The road ahead will be long. Our climb will be steep. We may not get there in one week or even in one month. But, Friends of SPT, we have never been more hopeful than we are just now that we will get there.

There are many changes you can count on in the year ahead for Small Press Traffic: SPT has just elected a new leader of its own to guide the organization in innovative directions while continuing to bring together culturally diverse independent readers, writers, and presses. We have an incredible line-up scheduled for the Spring 2009 season. And we have moved into our own new digs on the CCA San Francisco

Campus, crossing the aisle of the campus to continue to provide the quality programming you rely on all year long.

As a member of Small Press Traffic, you will receive free admission to all of our events, your name will appear on our website and in our nationally circulated fliers, and you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you are doing your part to support innovative literature in the Bay Area and beyond. Please become a member or renew your membership today. The first 50 people to join or renew will receive archival broadsides from our vintage collection. And it's so easy. Just visit http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm and choose the amount you'd like to donate. Please remember that these funds are tax-deductible and provide much needed funds for SPT's new upcoming events, travel funds for writers, ground-breaking symposia, and new equipment.

This is our time, to put our poets back to work and open doors of opportunity for our experimental writers and thinkers; to restore prosperity and promote the cause of experimental literature; to reclaim the dream and reaffirm that fundamental truth, that, out of many, we are one; that while we breathe, we hope. And where we are met with cynicism and doubts and those who tell us that we can't, we will respond with that timeless creed that sums up the spirit of a literary community: Yes, we can!

Thank you and see you Fridays,

The Small Press Traffic Board of Directors

Small Press Traffic Board of Directors: President, David Buuck; Treasurer, Brent Cunningham; Secretary, Scott Inguito; Board Members, Chris Chen, Gloria Frym; Barbara Jane Reyes, Cynthia Sailers, Lauren Shufran, and Jessica Wickens

****

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
California College of the Arts
1111 -8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]

www.sptraffic.org

www.smallpresstraffic.
<http://www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com/>blogspot<http://www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com/>
.com <http://www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

363. Obododimma Oha

Re: All the good and decent hullabaloo about D. Baptiste-Chirot's misadventures in cyberspace and elsewhere abroad, er, in a foreign country.

Wed 19 Nov 2008

I have to go with you here. However, I think the digression was worth it; at least, once in a while we can test how far we can go in tolerating the views and reactions of other people. It is part of what is called "life skills". It is part of the POETICS of interaction. You know, artists are sometimes so excited with themselves and their ideas that they can't tell when they have erred, or do not care if they have erred. Sometimes we think that, as artists, we cannot say we are sorry (even if we don't mean it), because that would strip us of our beatification as the best group in the world. All our works are about human behaviour, we must not forget. Let my habitation in language not become my prison, my blindfold, my hell.

Thanks for the observation.

--- Obododimma.

On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 3:54 PM, Steve Tills <[redacted]> wrote:

> Possibly lost amidst the generous and honorable hullabaloo regarding the recent poetics scam was the very real possibility that a well-regarded friend and comrade might have been in grave danger and needed very real and immediate help.
>
> Meanwhile, there developed deep and evolutionary discussion about the correctness of the language used to alert folks to his predicament.
>
> What if the predicament had been real, dire, no nonsense?
>
> Man, would we all have looked pretty damn stupid or brilliantly sensitive?
>
> I think it's astounding what lengths we post-avant, Modern poets will go to protect the state of the art and the purity of our letters even if we > must risk the actual life or lives of our comrades in Accomplishment. How far we've come from the rest of the animals on the planet, the lower species that lack the technologies of language and must rely solely on instinct and their bodies to survive.

>
> Shoot, I'm speechless. Words cannot express what... Furthermore,
>
> Steve Tills

--

Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

364. Aaron Lowinger
Elaine Equi & Jerome Sala- BUFFALO NY!!!!!!! Tomorrow!!!!!!!!
Wed 19 Nov 2008

Not To Be Missed! The Post-Punk IntelligenceR Tandem Bike Riders of POEMS!!

*JUST BUFFALO SMALL PRESS POETRY SERIES: ELAINE EQUI AND JEROME SALA, 11/20
AT 7:00 P.M. RUST BELT BOOKS 202 ALLEN ST. *
**
**
* Equi will be doing a multimedia presentation using movie stills from the 1950s and the '60s in the form of a tarot deck!!??

And as Michael Kelleher says, "Jerome Sala, he's a friggin' riot. I mean c'mon." *   Elaine Equi is the author of more than ten poetry collections, and her latest book, Ripple Effect: New & Selected Poems, was a finalist for the L.A. Times Book Award and on the short list for The Griffin Poetry Prize. Her collection Voice-Over won the San Francisco State Poetry Award. Her work is widely anthologized and appears in Postmodern American Poetry: a Norton Anthology and in several editions of The Best American Poetry. A native of Chicago, Equi lives in New York City, and teaches at New York University and in the MFA programs at The New School and City College. -robin brox

Jerome Sala has been described as an "honorable hysteric" by critic Peter Schjeldahl. His latest book is Look Slimmer Instantly from Soft Skull Press, and its website explains Sala "was, in fact, one of the first 'World Heavyweight Champions' of poetry [by taking part in performances held in actual boxing rings, predating today's poetry slams]. Additionally, along with poet Elaine Equi, he was connected with a punk poetry scene originating out of L.A., and gathered in Dennis Cooper's anthology of the early 80s: Coming Attractions. From these roots, Sala's work continued to develop – exploring the connections between the pop and the poetic, the high and the low, the ironic and the political – all the while maintaining a healthy dadaistic suspicion of all things literary." -robin brox

↑ Index

365. Kamen Nedev
Re: David
Wed 19 Nov 2008

On 19/11/2008, at 3:38, Mark Weiss wrote:

> German measles, anyone?

Aye. Spanish fly. Spanish Flu. Black Death. Yellow Peril.

Others seem more innocent, but only just. "Japanese copy".

And, nowadays, "Russian" mafia. "Under a Panama flag".

Speaking of Spanish, EVERY SINGLE proverb originating from the 14th century is either violently anti-Semitic, or anti-Muslim, or simply racist and sexist.

Language is a bit of a battlefield, and there's a lot of inertia there...

Kamen

http://www.waitingforcargo.net

↑ Index

366. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ

This Friday! Carnahan, Casamassima, Grinnell, Lederer, Oberman, and Rohrer!

Wed 19 Nov 2008

November 21st @ 7 p.m. - Stain Bar - Williamsburg, Brooklyn

 Carnahan, Casamassima, Grinnell, Lederer, Oberman, and Rohrer **

Special Musical Guest @ Intermission: Addenda

~~~

Brooklyn resident Kerry Carnahan has co-authored and edited a number of publications, including the New York City High Performance Infrastructure Guidelines, Cool and Green Roofs, and Sustainable Urban Sites (forthcoming), and is working towards her MFA in poetry from CUNY-Hunter College.

~~~

Christophe Casamassima is the editor and proprietor of furniture_press in Baltimore where he teaches at Towson University. He is also the Literary Arts Director of the Towson Arts Collective. His collections of poetry include the Proteus (Moria, 2008) and Joys: A Catalogue of Disappointments (BlazeVOX, 2008).

~~~

E. TracyGrinnell is the author of Some Clear Souvenir (O Books, 2006) and Music or Forgetting (O Books, 2001), as well as the limited edition chapbooks Leukadia (Trafficker Press, forthcoming 2008), Quadriga, a collaboration with Paul Foster Johnson (gong chapbooks, 2006), Of the Frame (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs, 2004), and Harmonics (Melodeon Poetry Systems, 2000). She lives in Brooklyn and edits Litmus Press and its annual journal of poetry and translation, Aufgabe.
~~~

~~~

Katy Lederer is the author of the poetry collections, Winter Sex (Verse Press, 2002) and The Heaven-Sent Leaf (BOA Editions, forthcoming 2008) as well as the memoir Poker Face: A Girlhood Among Gamblers (Crown, 2003), which Publishers Weekly included on its list of the Best Nonfiction Books of 2003 and Esquire Magazine named one of its eight Best Books of the Year 2003.

Her poems and prose have appeared in The American Poetry Review, Boston Review, Harvard Review, GQ, and elsewhere. She has been anthologized in Body Electric (Norton), From Poe to the Present: Great American Prose Poems (Scribner), and Isn't It Romantic? (Verse Press), among other compilations.

Educated at the University of California at Berkeley and the Iowa Writers' Workshop, she serves as a Poetry Editor of Fence Magazine. Her honors and awards include an Academy of American Poets Prize, fellowships from Yaddo (2001; 2004; 2005), MacDowell (2007), and the New York Foundation for the Arts (2005-2006), and a Discover Great New Writers citation from Barnes & Noble's Discover Great New Writers Program.

~~~

Matthew Rohrer is the author of five books, most recently RISE UP, published by Wave Books. He teaches at NYU in the creative writing program, and lives in Brooklyn.

~~~

Miller Oberman was the 2005 recipient of Poetry Magazine's Ruth Lilly Fellowship and has recently had poems in Bloom Magazine, the Minnesota Review, and Lilith. Miller lives in Brooklyn with Zero Oberman.

~~~~

SPECIAL INTERMISSION GUEST

While Addenda is just beginning, there's a history. Dan Sofaer and Christopher Anderson first met when Christopher was the singer in the Washington, D.C. band Nine Men Are Suicides. After being musical director for the recording of the one song the band knew how to play (Sister Ray by the Velvet Underground), Dan went on to be a founding member of the Silence After and Christopher rejoined him in '88 for the short-lived Hurricane Daisy, whose killer demo had Fugazi's Don Zientara for its producer. After years in the wilderness, Dan reemerged as bassist in the San Francisco trio Giant Haystacks, and Christopher posted some Prince covers on MySpace. A chance note from Japan has reunited them, and they're ready to bring the spirit to the letter.

You can find their music at myspace.com/addenda

~~~~

stain 766 grand street
brooklyn, ny 11211
(L train to Grand Street,
1 block west)
718/[redacted]
open daily @ 5 p.m.

~~~~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana Bozicevic

http://stainofpoetry.wordpress.com/

↑ Index

367. Nico Vassilakis
Seattle: Reading: Plus: Nov 21st
Wed 19 Nov 2008

MICKEY OCONNOR reading

BETH GRACZYK dance

ANGELINA BALDOZ trumpet

NICO VASSILAKIS reading

+ + +

UNTITLED [INTERSECTION]
Friday 21 November 2008, 7p

at

Phinney Neighborhood Center in Greenwood

6532 Phinney Ave. N

↑ Index

368. Ram Devineni
6 New FILMS from RATTAPALLAX for 2009: Brazil, Africa, India, USA +
Wed 19 Nov 2008

Dear Friends: I am excited to announce six new films for next year being produced by Rattapallax magazine.
Rattapallax Films is committed to producing poetic films and documentaries with a social and cultural dimension to them. To learn more about the production company and its projects, please go to http://www.rattapallax.com/films.htm

Cheers
Ram Devineni

GINSBERG'S KARMA. A documentary about the legendary poet Allen Ginsberg and his mythical journey to India in the early 1960s that transformed his perspective on life and his work. Poet Bob Holman traces the two years Ginsberg spent in India by visiting the places where he stayed and talk with the people he met and influenced, as well as, intimate interviews with Beat poets and friends.
http://www.rattapallax.com/ginsberg.htm

ON THE GRIOT TRAIL: Bob Holman and Papa Susso in West Africa. The film is about Alhaji Papa Susso, a Gambian folk poet and Bob Holman, a contemporary US poet, who are long-time friends. They travel to Africa to discover the oral traditions of language and storytelling that are quickly disappearing. Through their travels in Gambia, Senegal, Mali and Guinea, they also explore African music and its influence on contemporary American jazz, rock n' roll, and blues and how traditional African music is being displaced by urban hip-hop, whose roots are in Africa. Throughout West Africa, they meet many different Griots, or storytellers, whose vast memories include the history of their tribes and re-tell it through songs and epic poems. Currently Filming in Africa.
http://www.rattapallax.com/griot.htm

O SONHO BOLLYWOODIANO. Rattapallax Films announces the first Indian-Brazilian co-production. "O Sonho Bollywoodiano" is directed by Beatriz Seigne-Martin and stars Paula Braun, Lorena Lobato and Nataly Galleazzo Cabanas. The production just finished shooting all over India. Legendary Indian filmmaker Santosh Sivan (The Terrorist) is Executive Producer. The film is a comedy about three beautiful Brazilian actresses who decide to try their luck breaking into the Bollywood. When they arrive in India, their dreams change dramatically through a series of mishaps and unexpected occurrences. This heart-felt comedy reveals the wonderful cultural difference between both countries while three young actresses search for their dream in a country thousands of miles away. While filming a song and dance sequence in Mumbai, TV Globo's show Fantastico interviewed the actresses and director. The film will be released next year. http://www.rattapallax.com/bollywoodiano.htm

BOLLYWORLD. India is going through extraordinary changes and entering the global market. This documentary focuses on how India's largest film industry "Bollywood" is transforming itself to appeal to a world audience and an emerging Indian middle class. The documentary follows two brothers, Sanjay and Kumar, as they try to make their big movie. We get a glimpse into the many dimensions of Bollywood and the people who make a living entertaining over 3 billion people a year. http://www.rattapallax.com/bollyworld.htm

ALIEN ROADKILL. A documentary about African-American poet Lamont B. Steptoe and his search for the aliens who abducted him in Philadelphia. Steptoe is an American Book Award winner and suffering from post-traumatic syndrome resulting from the Vietnam War. In 2008, he taveled to Roswell, New Mexico to the Roswell UFO Festival to find the aliens he encountered and seek spiritual solace at the famed crash site. While at Roswell, he meets other people who were also aducted by aliens and soon discovers that he is not "alone." http://www.rattapallax.com/steptoe2.htm

FABULOUS HAIR! This exuberant documentary follows several Philadelphia-based African-American hairdressers as they prepare for a major hair show competition. http://www.rattapallax.com/hair.htm

Please send future emails to [redacted] for press

↑ Index

369. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: All the good and decent hullabaloo about D. Baptiste-Chirot's misadventures in cyberspace and elsewhere abroad, er, in a foreign country.

Wed 19 Nov 2008

Steve,

I agree with you there. If what goes on on this list were more visible (unfortunately, also more relevant to the wider world!}, we would have been subject to a SNL skit.

This discussion about "language" is like describing the color of fire when a house is burning.

Here my conscience is clear. I was ready to send "david" three hundred dollars when I leart the whole thing was a scam.

Barry, once again, don't take this to heart and think occasional good things which happen here.

No one seems to have responded to my query how many among who were insulted by "Nigerian scam" were Nigerians or even Africans. I assume by this that nobody. all this was a verbal exercise. May be we can apply a bit of reality principle here.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 9:54 AM, Steve Tills <[redacted]> wrote:

> Possibly lost amidst the generous and honorable hullabaloo regarding the recent poetics scam was the very real possibility that a well-regarded friend and comrade might have been in grave danger and needed very real and immediate help.
>
> Meanwhile, there developed deep and evolutionary discussion about the correctness of the language used to alert folks to his predicament.
>
> What if the predicament had been real, dire, no nonsense?
>
> Man, would we all have looked pretty damn stupid or brilliantly sensitive?

I think it's astounding what lengths we post-avant, Modern poets will go to protect the state of the art and the purity of our letters even if we must risk the actual life or lives of our comrades in Accomplishment. How far we've come from the rest of the animals on the planet, the lower species that lack the technologies of language and must rely solely on instinct and their bodies to survive.

Shoot, I'm speechless. Words cannot express what... Furthermore,

Steve Tills

↑ Index

370. Dale Smith

Big Bridge Call for Submissions--Slow Poetry

Wed 19 Nov 2008

BIG BRIDGE (HTTP://BIGBRIDGE.ORG)
CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

The online poetry journal Big Bridge seeks essays, poems, visual art, performance documentation, eco-criticism, creative writing pedagogy, and other material that addresses or explores issues generated by conversations initiated last summer over Slow Poetry. Arguments, moreover, that offer critical perspectives on Slow Poetry are welcome.

Since Slow Poetry is strictly a descriptive platform, feel free to contribute new ideas, arguments, and issues that may be useful for the ongoing development of a slow poetics. Some critical reflections on Slow Poetry are available at http://possumego.blogspot.com.

Send work that explores definitions, theories, and practices of Slow Poetry to Big Bridge contributing editor Dale Smith ([redacted]) in word or pdf files by December 31, 2008.

Dale

--
Dale Smith
Doctoral Student, Department of English University of Texas
1 University Station, B5000
Austin, TX 78712

↑ Index

371. Ryan Daley
Re: David
Wed 19 Nov 2008

Certainly ithere's a fine line between changing language and have a committee dictate which language is ok for "consumption."

I think filtering out words isn't a waste of time. It's pretty constabulary, though.

On 11/18/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n
>
>
> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does not > change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different > times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be > anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance, continues > using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess" > (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess" (instead of > simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words > processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps you are > also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and would > not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with > communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the world

> start from recklessness in the use of words.
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Monday, November 17, 2008 10:04:10 PM
> Subject: Re: David
>
> Barry:
>
> Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to you. This > discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language are > ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified for > reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in Spain, > nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry thrives in > both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter" as > a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french > disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the French > as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the Profumo > scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and in > English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the practices are > pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing off American > elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the > Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all over > China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws harp--maybe > sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank > god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone might > find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.
>
> Mark
>
> At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
> > I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the feeling of > having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile prejudice.
> There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people feeling > stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the > receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of > sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can participate > in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I think I > have to withdraw, at least for now.

> >
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

372. Anny Ballardini

Re: David

Wed 19 Nov 2008

Dear Obododimma,

I did not say that, nor did Mark as far as I know. And I think I can speak up for him. Something that makes me chuckle is the English saying: "Excuse my French!" The English, the obstinate enemies of the French, all along history, and vice versa: "Merde aux Anglais!" Not to talk of the Germans against the French, the French against the Italians, the Italians against them all, the Norther Italians against the southern Italians, and the infinite sayings that appear once in a while in a colloquial form. I / we do respect Derrida and his precious work. What I wish to say is that we cannot cancel history in just a second with good will. I do appreciate your remark, though.

This is cheap humor, and anyhow that is what our daily life is made of. Isn't your neighbor your worst enemy? It is the law of instinct, then with reason, as the goodwill of the list has shown up to the point that Barry Schwabsky very probably signed off (and once again I am sorry), with reason you sort things out and start being more careful. I never again used the saying I quoted in my previous mail. It was a lesson for me. I just wanted to show Barry and the list that sometimes you simply do not think, and as I said, you unwillingly trigger a chain of unsolved ethnic conflicts.

I hope I was clear. I also thank you for giving me the opportunity to clarify what I said before.

Anny Ballardini

On Tue, Nov 18, 2008 at 8:53 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n

Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does not change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance, continues using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess" (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess" (instead of simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps you are also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and would not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the world start from recklessness in the use of words.
--- Obododimma Oha.

From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 17, 2008 10:04:10 PM
Subject: Re: David

Barry:

Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to you. This discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language are ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified for reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in Spain, nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry thrives in both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter" as a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the French as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the Profumo scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and in English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the practices are pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing off American elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all over China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws harp--maybe sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone might find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.

> Mark
>
> At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
> I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the feeling of having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile prejudice. There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can participate in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

↑ Index

373. Alan Sondheim
The Accidental Tourist, FORT!/DA? book available -
Wed 19 Nov 2008

The Accidental Tourist,

Essays on the phenomenology of virtual worlds, with special attention paid to Second Life

- Alan Sondheim

Book available from FORT!/DA?

http://www.pd.org/~zeug/fort-da/fort-da.html

THE ACCIDENTAL ARTIST was an ongoing exhibition in Second Life at Odyssey, June 2008 - January 2009, by Alan Sondheim, with help from Sugar Seville, Azure Carter, Gary Nanes, Sandy Baldwin, and Frances van Scoy at the Virtual Environments Laboratory, West Virginia University, Morgantown, West Virginia. The show changed daily and the gave me an opportunity to study the phenomenology of a virtual world in relation to avatar-human objectivity.

"I think of this as a form of information implosion where everything gets out of hand, or a war or sex zone where it's impossible to walk or think, or Pliny's uncle's death (and other devastation) when Vesuvius blew: What does one do in such a situation? How does one do it? One false step or click and you're underwater or in the skysphere ..."

from back cover, Alan Sondheim

The book contains all of the critical writings I've done on Second Life, modified into a single sectioned text.

Thanks so much for possibly ordering! (If not, thanks for reading this far!)

↑ Index

374. Mark Weiss

What we're called, was Re: David

Wed 19 Nov 2008

It's always interesting to be the butt of sarcasm, but accuracy also counts. I was I thought pointing out the large gray areas, and talking about appropriateness (albeit with tongue wandering into cheek at times). I doubt that I've caused too many wars today.

But your examples present some interesting issues. Policeman became obsolete as a generic term when women were allowed to join police forces, and other terms that cover both genders, like cops, police, or police officers, took over, because it would have been absurd to do otherwise. But we refer to policemen and policewomen when appropriate--it's not anachronistic to point out a policewoman to someone who needs help, if that's who's available. The word stewardess, which is the term I think you were searching for, became an issue because it had an extraprofessional use as fetish. That survives to an extent, but probably more than the word itself, which dates back to when cabin crews were exclusively female (and exclusively young--there were age discrimination suits about that). Poetess had largely fallen out of fashion by the time modern feminism arrived, relegated to designating only some women poets. And it's a good thing that it died--the attitude expressed by the word had become poisonous.

These are all questions of gender, in a language that has become less and less gendered over the past thousand years. It's not something that speakers of more gendered languages worry about too much, because to do something about it would require the restructuring of grammar. Airplane crews are still hotes and hotesses, actors are comedians and comediennes, etc, and the French sun is masculine and the moon feminine, while in German it's the reverse. So the battles are fought elsewhere. In modern English there were so few distinct masculine and feminine forms for human occupations that most of the work of remaking the language would involve the renaming of the beasts--stallion and mare, buck and doe, etc. Don't mistake me--I'm plenty aware of gender issues. I'm talking about the genders of articles, nouns, pronouns and adjectives.

A travel article in today's New York Times web edition, "The Proud Indians of Chiapas," has attracted a lot of comments, mostly about the use of the word Indian. Many of the respondents pointed out that in Chiapas, and Latin America in general, the (recently) preferred term is "indigena" (which is both masculine and feminine, by the way). The objection noted to Indian is that it's inaccurate. In Spanish it's worse than that--Indio is often a derogatory term, and India in some places is a synonym for whore. But the article is written for gringos. In the US there's no unanimity among (let's call them) first peoples about what to call themselves. Native American doesn't seem to have caught on, though it appeared to for a while, and members of a lot of tribes prefer to be called American Indians and don't mind that their reservations are generically called Indian reservations. In the country at large Indian is nowhere near as derogatory as Indio or India. It apparently didn't raise eyebrows among the Times staffers.

It's not up to me, it's up to the people so designated, who have a long history of persecution by whatever name. Not so the compound noun Nigerian scam. It's hard for me to believe that anyone uses it with derogation of Nigerians in general in mind, and I don't think there's a shred of antiNigerian sentiment in the US, where most people would be hard put to say what a Nigerian is.

But ok, what about the name Nigeria--Blackland? Is that an acceptable inheritance from the colonialist past?

If this thread continues, it would be nice if it involved discussion rather than verbal violence. The issues are interesting in themselves.

Mark

At 02:53 AM 11/18/2008, Obododimma Oha wrote:
> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n >Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does >not change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in >different times have different tastes and different responses. One >would simply be anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for >instance, continues using the term "policeman" (instead of "police >officer"), "air hostess" (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin >crew") or "poetess" (instead of simply "poet"). I am surprised that >you think that filtering out words processed as offensive in a given >period is a waste of time. Perhaps you are also saying that it is >wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and would not publish >flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with >communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in >the world start from recklessness in the use of words. --- >Obododimma Oha. _____

↑ Index

375. Tony Trigilio

Call for Papers: Beat Studies at the American Literature Association Conference

Wed 19 Nov 2008

Hi all--I'm forwarding this from Tim Hunt ([redacted]) . . .

The Beat Studies Association invites proposals for papers on all aspects of Beat literature and Beat studies for the two panels the association anticipates sponsoring at this year's American Literature Association Conference (May 21-24 in Boston). Proposals of one to two pages (250-500 words) should be sent electronically to Tim Hunt at [redacted] by January 2, 2009.

The Beat Studies Association would especially welcome proposals that engage understudied figures central to or related to the Beats and proposals that consider the significance of current and emerging critical paradigms for study of the Beats.

↑ Index

376. Daniel Godston

Barney Rosset

Wed 19 Nov 2008

The National Book Foundation just gave Barney Rosset a lifetime achievement award for his remarkable contributions to American publishing. If you missed Bob Garfield's interview with Barney Rosset last week, you can download it at: http://www.onthemedia.org/transcripts/2008/11/14/07

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/09/24/movies/24obsc.html?ref=books

↑ Index

377. Lisa Janssen
MoonLit issue #3 out now!
Wed 19 Nov 2008

The 2008 issue of Moonlit is now available. Issue three contains more writers and writing than ever before, including Ruth Lilly award winner Kathleen Rooney, Arda Collins (recently published in the New Yorker), critically acclaimed poet and Howling Hex member Philip Jenks, Chicago Review poetry editor Leila Wilson, John Fahey editor (and Smog poster model) Damian Rogers, Kathleen Ossip, Michael Salinger, Mark Ducharme, Philip Metres, Adam Golaski, Alan Jude Moore, Amanda Ackerman, Brandi Homan, Chuck Stebleton, Daniela Olszeweska, Darrin Daniel, Elisa Gabbert, Erik Johnson, Harold Abramowitz, Jessica Bozek, Kate Schapira, Matthew Timmons, Melissa Severin, Simone Muench, Robert Miltner, Ryan Davis, Sarah Rosenthal and Toshia Matthews. Moonlit's a poetry journal for all the young poets out there - and some of the older ones too, of course.

Order from www.dragcity.com from the home page click on "catalog" then "book nook"

For stores and store pricing email [redacted]

Happy days,

Lisa

↑ Index

378. Francesco Levato
Re: Raworth in Providence
Thu 20 Nov 2008

To add to Justin and Maria¹s comments, we had Tom Raworth at the Poetry Center of Chicago November 12th and it is by far my favorite reading. I highly recommend going to hear him if you have the chance.

Francesco Levato
Executive Director

The Poetry Center of Chicago http://www.poetrycenter.org http://www.francescolevato.com

↑ Index

379. Jim Andrews
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Thu 20 Nov 2008

> then one is experiencing the poem as a/in terms of a concept.

That is often a strong dimension of conceptual work, isn't it. Chairness of the chair. Bearness of the bear. Though it needn't be the only dimension. And usually isn't. The work can be more sensual or sensorial or typically literary or artistic in some ways or whatever, as well; the conceptual is a dimension, not a be all and end all. Though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach.

Also, as elsewhere in art, pretenders can be quick to exploit opportunities. Conceptual art can sometimes be a term applied to work lacking in all craft and art as though it was punk with brains. Ya OK, I guess, if the brains seems to be there and it's somehow challenging or the concept is interesting or something. Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable. On the other hand, there's nothing like strong conceptual work to change the way we see things in a jolt.

> Jim, when you look at oulipo in both its conceptual and procedural aspects, > procedural limits leading to endless works within those limits, are you not > saying these two aspects are related?

In Oulipo, it seems clear that the conceptual and procedural are strongly related, yes. But in conceptual poetry more generally, they needn't be.

ja

↑ Index

380. Jim Andrews
dbCinema so far
Thu 20 Nov 2008

Here's a slidvid show of what I've done with dbCinema so far:
http://vispo.com/dbcinema/kandinsky/slidvid.htm

This plays around 20 minutes or so, depending on the speed of your connection and network traffic yadayada. If yer using a PC, press the F11 key to toggle yer browser fullscreen. The bigger yer monitor is, the better this looks.

This cycles through all the graphic series I've created with dbCinema so far.

There are some slidvid controls up at the top left of the screen. If you mouseover the controls, some text appears that shows you what the control does.

The title of each series appears among those controls. The title indicates the sort of images dbCinema used in creating the graphics. For instance, the "Graphic Loven" series is made of pictures downloaded by dbCinema from the Internet via a search for the term "graphic novel". The "Silvia Saint" series is made of pictures downloaded by dbCinema from the Internet via a search for the term "Silvia Saint".

dbCinema is a graphic synthesizer I'm writing in Adobe Director.

There's info about dbCinema at http://vispo.com/dbcinema/kandinsky3/intro . Actually this is info about the kandinsky3 series, but much of it is about dbCinema more generally.

There are also video tutorials I've created at http://vispo.com/dbcinema/video/1.htm , http://vispo.com/dbcinema/video/2.htm , and http://vispo.com/dbcinema/video/3 . These are kind of dull though. They're just software tutorials. And they're old.

There's a little review of dbCinema from Paris (in French) at http://www.fluctuat.net/blog/10347-Notre-Dame-destructuree .

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

381. Alexander Jorgensen
The dead tell a tale that China doesn't care to hear
Thu 20 Nov 2008

I cannot say enough about China, mostly because I have lived here the past seven years (and in various capacities). What is distressing, and this isn't a joke, is that I cannot actually tell you all I know, have seen -- share with you why it is that china, in my opinion, is as much a Western construction as an actual locale where fact still remains buried or intentionally obscured. But that is another conversation.

URUMQI, China: An exhibit on the first floor of the museum here gives the government's unambiguous take on the history of this border region: "Xinjiang has been an inalienable part of the territory of China," says one prominent sign.

But walk upstairs to the second floor, and the ancient corpses on display seem to tell a different story. The rest of the story:
http://www.iht.com/articles/2008/11/19/asia/mummies.php

↑ Index

382. David Kirschenbaum
Major Ginsberg Movie in Production
Thu 20 Nov 2008

Weeds star Mary Louise-Parker is gearing up for a new project. Earlier this month, it was announced that she will be part of a new biopic, which will be written, directed and produced by Oscar-winning documentarians Rob Epstein and Jeffrey Friedman.

The beatnik biopic entitled Howl is based on Allen Ginsberg¹s epic book-length poem of the same title. The film will commemorate the 50th anniversary of the poem, and will feature animated visualizations of the piece, courtesy of graphic novelist Eric Drooker.

Cast members include David Strathairn (Good Night and Good Luck), who will play prosecuting attorney Ralph McIntosh, Alan Alda (The West Wing), who will play Judge Clayton Horn, Jeff Daniels (Traitor), who will play Professor David Kirk, Paul Rudd, who will play Luthor Nichols and Weeds star Mary-Louise Parker who will play prosecution witness Gail Potter. James Franco, who appeared in the Spider-Man films, will be playing Allen Ginsberg.

"Fifty years later, Ginsberg's vision is as relevant as the year he wrote it," Friedman told the Hollywood Reporter. "It resonates with issues of free speech, government censorship, militaristic empire building, fear-mongering, sexual conformity and the co-opting of religion."

Carter Burwell will be writing the original score while Epstein and Friedman, who previously worked together on the Oscar-winning Common Threads: Stories from the Quilt, will be co-directing the film. Epstein's other film credits include the Oscar-winning The Times of Harvey Milk. [Gus Van Sant will be producing.]

Taken from
http://www.buddytv.com/articles/weeds/weeds-actress-joins-james-fran-23169.aspx

↑ Index

383. Séamas Cain
New work by Johan Meskens
Thu 20 Nov 2008

I write in praise of the poet Johan Meskens. Based at Ghent in Belgium, Meskens is a motion/action poet, visual poet, & net-artist.

I have followed the aleatoric & serialist work of Meskens since 2002, with great interest & appreciation. Much of his work is profoundly original & dynamic, in conception & in execution. Indeed, he is drawn to poetry with a dialectical philosophy of music & noise, cities & landscapes, & silence.

Johan Meskens admires the works of Mozart, Beethoven, Adolphe Sax, Jim Morrison, & Albert Einstein. But in his own poetic work, he struggles with contending elements: John Cage or Frank Zappa, Dimitri Shostakovich or Ennio Morricone, Theloneus Monk or Charlie Parker, Pink Floyd or The Doors.

To examine the aleatoric & poetic "music," & the "musical" serialism, of Johan Meskens, go to http://www.chromaticspaceandworld.com/

Click anywhere to begin (& do wait for the serial changes)!

Peaceful regards,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

↑ Index

384. Poetry Project
FW: Events at The Poetry Project November/December
Thu 20 Nov 2008

We¹re having our own very special thanksgiving tomorrow night in the Parish Hall! We hope you¹re there.

Friday, November 21, 10 PM
Poets' Potluck III

Natives and newcomers alike join the Three Sisters (the harvest; or Diana, Nicole, and Corrine) for a giving of thanks, foods, poetry, music, and autumnal beverages. A two-time staple of last-year's series, the night will again feature performances by many and food by everyone so inclined, including Stacy Szymaszek, who will be grilling turkey burgers in the parish hall on the George Foreman and who has already contributed one can of corn to the cause. Grab your canned pumpkin, plastic cool whip containers, and blue-lined notebooks, and pilgrim your way over.

Monday, December 1, 8 PM
Open Reading

Sign-in 7:45 PM.

Wednesday, December 3, 8 PM
Ed Roberson & Gail Scott

Ed Roberson is author of seven books of poetry. His most recent book, City Eclogue, was published spring 2006, Number 23 in the Atelos series. His collection, Voices Cast Out to Talk Us In, was a winner of the Iowa Poetry Prize; his book Atmosphere Condition was a winner of the National Poetry Series and was nominated for the Academy of American Poets¹ Lenore Marshall Award. He is a recipient of the Lila Wallace Writers¹ Award and the Poetry Society of America¹s Shelley Memorial Award. Graduated from the University of Pittsburgh, 1970, where while an undergrad research assistant in Limnology, he traveled across Canada through Alaska, Kodiak and Afognak Islands and later Bermuda with research expeditions. As an expedition member of the Explorer¹s Club of Pittsburgh, he has climbed mountains in the Peruvian and Ecuadorian Andes. Ed has motorcycled across the U.S. and traveled in West Africa. Retired from Rutgers University, Ed Roberson currently lives in Chicago where he has taught classes and workshops at Columbia College Chicago, been Visiting Artist at Northwestern University, taught in the Poetry and Poetics Program as Visiting Professor at the University of Chicago. He is currently Writer in Residence at Northwestern University in the English Department Creative Writing. His next book, The New Wing of the Labyrinth, is due out from Singing Horse Press the end of 2008. Gail Scott is current recipient of the Quebec Arts Council New York Studio grant. She co-edited Biting The Error with Bob Gluck et al, (Coach House), shortlisted for a Lambda award. Her other books include her novel, My Paris, about a sad diarist in conversation with Gertrude Stein and Walter Benjamin in contemporary Paris (Dalkey Archive), the story collection Spare Parts Plus Two (Coach House). The novels Main Brides and Heroine, and the essay collections Spaces Like Stairs and la théorie, un dimanche (with Nicole Brossard et al). Her translation of Michael Delisle¹s Le Déasarroi du matelot was shortlisted for the Governor General¹s award in translation (2001). She is co-founder of the critical journal Spirale (Montréal) and Tessera (new writing by women). She teaches Creative Writing at Université de Montréal.

Friday, December 5, 10 PM
Hey, What¹s All The Hooplah?

Forget the impending breadlines, grab your polka-dotted canvas bindle, bundle up and bustle your way over to hear the tales of times said and gone and the prophetic parables of a new generation of poets, storytellers and musicians. Featuring music and performances by John Houx, Elizabeth Devlin, Frank Hoier, & others T.B.A. Mr. Houx grew up in West coast cattle country and "hoboed" his way to New York in 2007, where he was quickly embraced by the East Village's Antifolk scene and traditional folk music circles. With appearances on radio and television (broadcast and online), John is presently planning his first full-length record and a small European tour. Elizabeth Devlin has traveled the world to invoke influences from scratchy American and French phonographs, combining bitter-sweet, haunting vocals with angelic, cacophonous Autoharp melodies. Her forthcoming full-length album will be released on December 6th, 2008. Frank Hoier is poised at the front of a new wave of modern Americana roots music. Backed by rock'n'roll prodigy siblings, The Weber Brothers, Frank's self released album Lovers & Dollars is set for it's national debut on November 11, 2008. Frank Hoier brings a fresh perspective and a rock'n'roll energy to Folk music. His Guthrie-esque anthem "Jesus Don't Give Tax Breaks To The Rich" has been hailed as "the most perfect protest song written yet this millennium" (PopHeadWound).

And coming up at The Bowery Poetry Club:

Bill Berkson & Tony Towle
Bowery Poetry Club
8 pm
Thursday, December 4, 2008
308 Bowery, NYC 10012 || [redacted]
betw. Bleecker & Houston
F or V to 2nd Ave / 6 to Bleecker St.
www.bowerypoetry.com | tix www.ticketweb.com

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

385. Robin Hamilton

Re: What we're called, was Re: David

Thu 20 Nov 2008

Mark said:

> rather than verbal violence. The issues are interesting in themselves.

Indeed, and I don't think this point has been brought up quite explicitly in the history of the term, but we're not looking at just *any {goldbrick }scam (like the poor, they will be with us always), but at a particular variety -- the Spanish Prisoner Scam.

This shifted locale and terminology not through any resurgence of colonialism, but because that particular variety of con game suddenly became part of the Internet.

What baffled me from the start was the mechanism of it -- the appeal to unreflecting greed of the rich West being given the opportunity to benefit from the suffering of the less fortunate parts of the world. [Insert scare quotes as appropriate.]

At one stage, before virtually any spam filter could catch it, there was an ambulance-chasing aspect to the business -- the minute a civil war exploded anywhere, suddenly we were solicited by a member of the beaurocracy of the suffering country to make millions by accepting dirty money.

Oh, boy, and leave aside the naivity or greed of anyone who fell for this ...

Then there was grammatical nature of the texts -- they seem to have been crafted by someone who had a fairly clear idea of what would be expected to be grammatical prejudices of a Western addressee as to the mistakes likely to be made by a second-language African speaker.

Ouch!!!

But in some ways, this is yesterday's smasgrabord. At the moment, in the UK at least, what's getting past at least my spam filters are specifically crafted appeals to reveal your details as to membership of *very locally English building societies -- Alliance&Leicester, Lloyds, Abbey National -- and as a Scot, I'm tempted to say this illustrates the peculiar blind dumb ignorance of the English, with whom we are forced to share the British Isles.

But perhaps there's a USAmerican variety of this that I'm not aware of. (Mind you, no one has yet appealed to me to buy shares in RBS at firesale prices.)

And just to put myself on the right side of the geographical and prejudicicial divide of this, only the English could construct a Scotch pie out of a silly sheep ...

Robin

[There's a peculiar incident, both funny and unlikely, in one of the Edgar Wallace Sanders-of-the-River collections, I think _Bones In London_, in which Mister Commisioner Sanders, accosted by someone who wants to sell him a cheap gold brick, promply drags the con artist to the nearest police station on the assumption that the man is trying to sell him something that had been illicitly mined in the colonial territories.

Used to be IDB, now it's called something different, I think, but plus ca change, Haliburton ... Boy, they don't make colonial administrators like they used to in the glory days of the Raj. <g>

R.]

↑ Index

386. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Thu 20 Nov 2008

Jim,

Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.

"though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach."

Well, pop can be a powerful art form.

"Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."

In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.

Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Nov 20, 2008 at 3:54 AM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> then one is experiencing the poem as a/in terms of a concept.
>
> That is often a strong dimension of conceptual work, isn't it. Chairness of the chair. Bearness of the bear. Though it needn't be the only dimension. And usually isn't. The work can be more sensual or sensorial or typically literary or artistic in some ways or whatever, as well; the conceptual is a dimension, not a be all and end all. Though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach.
>
> Also, as elsewhere in art, pretenders can be quick to exploit opportunities. Conceptual art can sometimes be a term applied to work lacking in all craft and art as though it was punk with brains. Ya OK, I guess, if the brains seems to be there and it's somehow challenging or the concept is interesting or something. Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable. On the other hand, there's nothing like strong conceptual work to change the way we see things in a jolt.
>
> Jim, when you look at oulipo in both its conceptual and procedural aspects, > procedural limits leading to endless works within those limits, are you not > saying these two aspects are related?
>
> In Oulipo, it seems clear that the conceptual and procedural are strongly related, yes. But in conceptual poetry more generally, they needn't be.
>
> ja

↑ Index

387. David Bowen
New American Press Chapbook Contest
Fri 21 Nov 2008

New American Press is pleased to announce its fall/winter chapbook contest.

Winner receives $250 and 25 copies. Final judge is Crab Orchard Review editor and award-winning poet Allison Joseph. Deadline is January 1, 2009.

To submit, send 20-30 pages of your best writing (poetry or prose) to:

New American Press Chapbook Contest

2707 Trenton Way

Fort Collins, CO 80526

Please include $12 reading fee and SASE for contest results. The committee reads blind, so restrict your name and other contact information to a separate cover sheet only.

For further information, please visit http://www.newamericanpress.com.

Best,

David Bowen

Editor/Publisher

[redacted]

↑ Index

388. Obododimma Oha
Re: David
Fri 21 Nov 2008

Dear Anny,I think the point you made was quite clear: sometimes we may use words that others object to, and, to show that we don't mean any hurt, we apologize. That's a normal practice of redress for perceived face threat in politeness theory. I would (and many scholars working on politeness) even prefer Avoidance Strategy. Well, not everyone would avoid performing face-threatening acts in cross-cultural communications. And we have seen the consequences in history. Regards. Obododimma.

On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 9:06 PM, Anny Ballardini
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Obododimma,
>
> I did not say that, nor did Mark as far as I know. And I think I can speak up for him.

> Something that makes me chuckle is the English saying: "Excuse my French!"
> The English, the obstinate enemies of the French, all along history, and vice versa: "Merde aux Anglais!"
> Not to talk of the Germans against the French, the French against the Italians, the Italians against them all, the Norther Italians against the southern Italians, and the infinite sayings that appear once in a while in a > colloquial form. I / we do respect Derrida and his precious work. What I wish to say is that we cannot cancel history in just a second with good will.
> I do appreciate your remark, though.
>
> This is cheap humor, and anyhow that is what our daily life is made of. Isn't your neighbor your worst enemy? It is the law of instinct, then with reason, as the goodwill of the list has shown up to the point that Barry Schwabsky very probably signed off (and once again I am sorry), with reason you sort things out and start being more careful. I never again used the saying I quoted in my previous mail. It was a lesson for me. I just wanted to show Barry and the list that sometimes you simply do not think, and as I said, you unwillingly trigger a chain of unsolved ethnic conflicts.
>
> I hope I was clear. I also thank you for giving me the opportunity to clarify what I said before.
>
> Anny Ballardini
>
> On Tue, Nov 18, 2008 at 8:53 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n
>
> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does not change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance, continues using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess" (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess" (instead of simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps you are > also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and would > not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the world
> start from recklessness in the use of words.
> --- Obododimma Oha.

From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 17, 2008 10:04:10 PM
Subject: Re: David

Barry:

Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to you. This discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language are ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified for reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in Spain, nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry thrives in both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter" as a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the French as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the Profumo scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and in English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the practices are pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing off American elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all over China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws harp--maybe sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone might find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.

Mark

At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the feeling of > having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile prejudice. There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can participate > in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.

>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Anny Ballardini
> http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
> http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
> I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

389. Obododimma Oha

Re: David

Fri 21 Nov 2008

Certainly, and managing such conflict is imperative.-- Obododimma.

On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 4:42 PM, Kamen Nedev <[redacted]> wrote:

> On 19/11/2008, at 3:38, Mark Weiss wrote:
>
> German measles, anyone?
>
> Aye. Spanish fly. Spanish Flu. Black Death. Yellow Peril.
>
> Others seem more innocent, but only just. "Japanese copy".
>
> And, nowadays, "Russian" mafia. "Under a Panama flag".
>
> Speaking of Spanish, EVERY SINGLE proverb originating from the 14th century is either violently anti-Semitic, or anti-Muslim, or simply racist and sexist.
>
> Language is a bit of a battlefield, and there's a lot of inertia there...
>
> Kamen
>
> http://www.waitingforcargo.net

--

Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

390. Obododimma Oha
Re: What we're called, was Re: David
Fri 21 Nov 2008

Well, I guess I have I have made my point in this thread and cannot compel anyone to give that point a second thought. By writing about "some wars starting from recklessness in the use of language", I was not necessarily addressing your analysis, or your use of words. I was simply referring to the orientation of say-it-the-way-you-like-it-don't-care-about-what-anyone-feels. It's good that Anny Ballardini gave an example of a personal experience he had when he used the expression "working as hard as a negro". For him, he didn't mean any prejudice. But someone there saw something else in the analogy and got offended. And what did Ballardini do next?One has to decide for oneself how to manage one's language and situations that unfold from language use in a world where people indeed see language as social semiotic. For me, this is where the thread ends.

Regards.
Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 20, 2008 at 12:37 AM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> It's always interesting to be the butt of sarcasm, but accuracy also counts. I was I thought pointing out the large gray areas, and talking about appropriateness (albeit with tongue wandering into cheek at times). I doubt that I've caused too many wars today.
>
> But your examples present some interesting issues. Policeman became obsolete as a generic term when women were allowed to join police forces, and other terms that cover both genders, like cops, police, or police officers, took over, because it would have been absurd to do otherwise. But we refer to policemen and policewomen when appropriate--it's not anachronistic to point out a policewoman to someone who needs help, if that's who's available. The word stewardess, which is the term I think you were searching for, became an issue because it had an extraprofessional use as fetish. That survives to an extent, but probably more than the word itself, which dates back to when cabin crews were exclusively female (and exclusively young--there were age discrimination suits about that). Poetess had largely fallen out of fashion by the time modern feminism arrived, relegated to designating only some women poets. And it's a good thing that it died--the attitude expressed by the word had become poisonous.
>
> These are all questions of gender, in a language that has become less and less gendered over the past thousand years. It's not something that speakers of more gendered languages worry about too much, because to do something about it would require the restructuring of grammar. Airplane crews are still hotes and hotesses, actors are comedians and comediennes, etc, and the French sun is masculine and the moon feminine, while in German it's the reverse. So the battles are fought elsewhere. In modern English there were so few distinct masculine and feminine forms for human occupations that most of the work of remaking the language would involve the renaming of the beasts--stallion and mare, buck and doe, etc. Don't mistake me--I'm plenty aware of gender issues. I'm talking about the genders of articles, nouns, pronouns and adjectives.

A travel article in today's New York Times web edition, "The Proud Indians of Chiapas," has attracted a lot of comments, mostly about the use of the word Indian. Many of the respondents pointed out that in Chiapas, and Latin America in general, the (recently) preferred term is "indigena" (which is both masculine and feminine, by the way). The objection noted to Indian is that it's inaccurate. In Spanish it's worse than that--Indio is often a derogatory term, and India in some places is a synonym for whore. But the article is written for gringos. In the US there's no unanimity among (let's call them) first peoples about what to call themselves. Native American doesn't seem to have caught on, though it appeared to for a while, and members of a lot of tribes prefer to be called American Indians and don't mind that their reservations are generically called Indian reservations. In the country at large Indian is nowhere near as derogatory as Indio or India. It apparently didn't raise eyebrows among the Times staffers.

It's not up to me, it's up to the people so designated, who have a long history of persecution by whatever name. Not so the compound noun Nigerian scam. It's hard for me to believe that anyone uses it with derogation of Nigerians in general in mind, and I don't think there's a shred of antiNigerian sentiment in the US, where most people would be hard put to say what a Nigerian is.

But ok, what about the name Nigeria--Blackland? Is that an acceptable inheritance from the colonialist past?

If this thread continues, it would be nice if it involved discussion rather than verbal violence. The issues are interesting in themselves.

Mark

At 02:53 AM 11/18/2008, Obododimma Oha wrote:

Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does not change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be > anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance, continues using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess" (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess" (instead of simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps you are also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and would not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the world start from recklessness in the use of words. --- Obododimma Oha.

>
> _____

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

391. Steve Tills

Re: All the good and decent hullabaloo about D. Baptiste-Chirot's misadventures in cyberspace and elsewhere abroad, er, in a foreign country

Fri 21 Nov 2008

Obododimma and Murat,

Yes, I agree: "However, I think the digression was worth it" (Obododimma) and "good things which happen here" (Murat).

Cheers, Mates! I respect you both and all others who responded to the threads.

Sincerely,

Steve J

Steve Tills
MIS Dept
G.W. Lisk, Co.
[redacted]
[redacted] <mailto:[redacted]>

P Please consider the environment before printing this email - be green, keep it on the screen

↑ Index

392. Ryan Daley
Re: David
Fri 21 Nov 2008

Of note...adjectives aren't the only offending parties for our NEWSPEAK:

"Call a spade a spade"

"Rule of Thumb" http://www.phrases.org.uk/meanings/rule-of-thumb.html

"The whole nine yards" (reference to pilot's strafing runs...advocating violence?)

On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 10:42 AM, Kamen Nedev <[redacted]> wrote:

> On 19/11/2008, at 3:38, Mark Weiss wrote:
>
> German measles, anyone?
>
> Aye. Spanish fly. Spanish Flu. Black Death. Yellow Peril.
>
> Others seem more innocent, but only just. "Japanese copy".
>
> And, nowadays, "Russian" mafia. "Under a Panama flag".
>
> Speaking of Spanish, EVERY SINGLE proverb originating from the 14th century is either violently anti-Semitic, or anti-Muslim, or simply racist and sexist.
>
> Language is a bit of a battlefield, and there's a lot of inertia there...
>
> Kamen
>
> http://www.waitingforcargo.net

↑ Index

393. Ryan Daley
Re: David
Fri 21 Nov 2008

Agreed. Whether or not the offense exists in an "objective" sphere, it exists, and should be redressed. And while I take issue with how much of what we say (or that language programs us to say) DOESN'T offend, I'm sure there are more egregious examples than others...

Bury the hatchet. (Native American ref.)

Beat a dead horse. (PETA?)

Paint the town red (viking violence)

Which offends more?

A)
B) or C)?

The audience depends, and decides.

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 4:15 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear Anny,I think the point you made was quite clear: sometimes we may use words that others object to, and, to show that we don't mean any hurt, we apologize. That's a normal practice of redress for perceived face threat in politeness theory. I would (and many scholars working on politeness) even prefer Avoidance Strategy. Well, not everyone would avoid performing face-threatening acts in cross-cultural communications. And we have seen the > consequences in history.
> Regards.
> Obododimma.
>
> On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 9:06 PM, Anny Ballardini
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> Dear Obododimma,
>
> I did not say that, nor did Mark as far as I know. And I think I can speak > up for him.
> Something that makes me chuckle is the English saying: "Excuse my French!"
> The English, the obstinate enemies of the French, all along history, and vice versa: "Merde aux Anglais!"

Not to talk of the Germans against the French, the French against the Italians, the Italians against them all, the Norther Italians against the southern Italians, and the infinite sayings that appear once in a while in a colloquial form. I / we do respect Derrida and his precious work. What I wish to say is that we cannot cancel history in just a second with good will.
I do appreciate your remark, though.

This is cheap humor, and anyhow that is what our daily life is made of. Isn't your neighbor your worst enemy? It is the law of instinct, then with reason, as the goodwill of the list has shown up to the point that Barry Schwabsky very probably signed off (and once again I am sorry), with reason you sort things out and start being more careful. I never again used the saying I quoted in my previous mail. It was a lesson for me. I just wanted to show Barry and the list that sometimes you simply do not think, and as I said, you unwillingly trigger a chain of unsolved ethnic conflicts.

I hope I was clear. I also thank you for giving me the opportunity to clarify what I said before.

Anny Ballardini

On Tue, Nov 18, 2008 at 8:53 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n

Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does not change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance, continues using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess" (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess" (instead of simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps you are also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and

would not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the world
start from recklessness in the use of words.
--- Obododimma Oha.

From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 17, 2008 10:04:10 PM
Subject: Re: David

Barry:

Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to you. This discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language
are ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified
for reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in Spain,
nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry thrives
in both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter"
as a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the French
as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the Profumo
scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and
in English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the practices
are pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing off American
elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still the Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all over China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws

harp--maybe sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone might find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it stores.

Mark

At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the feeling of having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile prejudice.
There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people feeling stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can participate in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I think I have to withdraw, at least for now.

guidelines

guidelines

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

394. Paul Nelson
Re: David
Fri 21 Nov 2008

No one expected a sort of Spanish Inquisition.

TADA!

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, November 21, 2008 11:04:43 AM
Subject: Re: David

Of note...adjectives aren't the only offending parties for our NEWSPEAK:

"Call a spade a spade"

"Rule of Thumb" http://www.phrases.org.uk/meanings/rule-of-thumb.html

"The whole nine yards" (reference to pilot's strafing runs...advocating violence?)

On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 10:42 AM, Kamen Nedev <[redacted]> wrote:

> On 19/11/2008, at 3:38, Mark Weiss wrote:
>
> German measles, anyone?
>
> Aye. Spanish fly. Spanish Flu. Black Death. Yellow Peril.
>
> Others seem more innocent, but only just. "Japanese copy".
>
> And, nowadays, "Russian" mafia. "Under a Panama flag".
>
> Speaking of Spanish, EVERY SINGLE proverb originating from the 14th century is either violently anti-Semitic, or anti-Muslim, or simply racist and sexist.
>
> Language is a bit of a battlefield, and there's a lot of inertia there...
>
> Kamen
>
> http://www.waitingforcargo.net

↑ Index

395. Alexander Dickow

A. Dickow reading in Paris, France

Fri 21 Nov 2008

Alexander Dickow will read selections from _Caramboles_ and other poems in French and English at 7:30pm
Wednesday, November 26th, 2008 at the Ecole Normale Superieure in Paris (metro Cluny la Sorbonne or Maubert Mutualite)
45 rue d'Ulm,
in the Salle des Actes concert hall.

Come join me, friends, readers, strangers!
Books and refreshments will be available.

***

Alexander Dickow lira des selections de son livre _Caramboles_ et d'autres poemes en anglais et en francais a 19h30
le mercredi, 26 novembre 2008
a l'Ecole Normale Superieure a Paris
(metro Cluny la Sorbonne or Maubert Mutualite)
45 rue d'Ulm,
en Salle des Actes.

Entree libre.
Amis, lecteurs, inconnus, venez nombreux!

www.alexdickow.net/blog/ les mots! ah quel désert à la fin merveilleux. -- Henri Droguet

↑ Index

396. Stephen Vincent
Re: David/'Nigerian scam', Gyped!
Fri 21 Nov 2008

Not to retread abused tires, but my sense is that the re-use of "Nigerian scam" re-enforces a unilateral sense that it is 'native ' condition of all Nigerians to try and trick us out of our money. (Mark is quite right that only a small percentage of Americans have any other concept of Nigeria and/or Nigerians. Why is maybe a question that be addressed - but I suspect its has something to with this country's post-colonial practices (petroleum interests, etc) in Nigeria. (What you are not allowed to know will not bother you!)

What ruffles is the way "Nigerian scam" may be similar to the way people used to glibly talk about getting 'gyped' ' - "Gyping" being the assumed 'native' characteristic" of people born as Gypsies, the outstanding trait of whom is to show up and trick upstanding people ("us") out of our money. It must of been those terribly sensitive, politically correct, language police that drove 'gyp ' out of common, civilized usage. Come on 'kids', no amount of historicizing is going to put the lid back on the issue here. I do believe it was Obododimma - a Nigeria - who put up his irritation with the 'scam' tag (??) . But maybe in raising the question he was just 'scamming' us and playing with our liberal sensitivities.

Maybe ask a local Nigerian in your community what they think of the 'scam' term.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

--- On Fri, 11/21/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, November 21, 2008, 1:15 AM

Dear Anny,I think the point you made was quite clear: sometimes we may use words that others object to, and, to show that we don't mean any hurt, we apologize. That's a normal practice of redress for perceived face threat in politeness theory. I would (and many scholars working on politeness) even prefer Avoidance Strategy. Well, not everyone would avoid performing face-threatening acts in cross-cultural communications. And we have seen the consequences in history. Regards. Obododimma.

On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 9:06 PM, Anny Ballardini
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Obododimma,
>
> I did not say that, nor did Mark as far as I know. And I think I can speak > up for him.
> Something that makes me chuckle is the English saying: "Excuse my French!"
> The English, the obstinate enemies of the French, all along history, and > vice versa: "Merde aux Anglais!"
> Not to talk of the Germans against the French, the French against the > Italians, the Italians against them all, the Norther Italians against the > southern Italians, and the infinite sayings that appear once in a while in
> a > colloquial form. I / we do respect Derrida and his precious work. What I > wish to say is that we cannot cancel history in just a second with good > will.
> I do appreciate your remark, though.
>
> This is cheap humor, and anyhow that is what our daily life is made of.
> Isn't your neighbor your worst enemy? It is the law of instinct, then
with > reason, as the goodwill of the list has shown up to the point that Barry > Schwabsky very probably signed off (and once again I am sorry), with reason
> you sort things out and start being more careful. I never again used the > saying I quoted in my previous mail. It was a lesson for me. I just wanted > to show Barry and the list that sometimes you simply do not think, and as I

> said, you unwillingly trigger a chain of unsolved ethnic conflicts.
>
> I hope I was clear. I also thank you for giving me the opportunity to > clarify what I said before.
>
> Anny Ballardini
>
> On Tue, Nov 18, 2008 at 8:53 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n
> >
> >
> > Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does not > > change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different > > times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be > > anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance,
continues
> > using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess"
> > (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew")
or "poetess" (instead of > > simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words > > processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps you
> are > > also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and
> would > > not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with > > communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the > world
> > start from recklessness in the use of words.
> > --- Obododimma Oha.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >

> >
> > _____
> > From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> > To: [redacted]
> > Sent: Monday, November 17, 2008 10:04:10 PM
> > Subject: Re: David
> >
> > Barry:
> >
> > Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to
you. This > > discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language
are > > ascribed to one nationality or another and become dictionary-sanctified
> for > > reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't originate in > Spain,
> > nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry thrives
> in > > both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over "french letter"
> as
> > a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french > > disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the > French
> > as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the > Profumo
> > scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and
in > > English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the practices
> are > > pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing off
> American
> > elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still
the > > Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all over

> > China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws > harp--maybe > > sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, thank > > god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone > might > > find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it > stores.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> > At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
> > > I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the feeling of > > having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile prejudice.
> > There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people feeling > > stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the > > receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of > > sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can > participate > > in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I think I
> > have to withdraw, at least for now.
> > >
Check
> >
> guidelines
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>
> --
> Anny Ballardini
> http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/

> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
> http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
> I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing > star!
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

397. Jim Andrews
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Fri 21 Nov 2008

> Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In > that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.

the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you mention, of course.

for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or http://vispo.com/arteroids

the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field. dbCinema is generative.

you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation. sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification. that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time. some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time. like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given program will halt.

> "though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists > like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach."
>
> Well, pop can be a powerful art form.

sure.

> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some > other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>
> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.

true.

ja

↑ Index

398. Mark Weiss
Re: David
Fri 21 Nov 2008

Re the other two phrases, from phrases.org.uk, which everyone should bookmark, along with http://www.etymonline.com/. Here's the latter on "spade."

<http://www.etymonline.com/index.php?term=spade>spade <http://www.etymonline.com/index.php?term=spade>(1) "tool for digging," O.E. spadu, from P.Gmc. *spadon (cf. O.Fris. spada, M.Du. spade, O.S. spado, M.L.G. spade, Ger. Spaten), from PIE *spe- "long, flat piece of wood" (cf. Gk. spathe "wooden blade, paddle," O.E. spon "chip of wood, splinter," O.N. spann "shingle, chip"). To call a spade a spade "use blunt language" (1542) translates a Gk. proverb (known to the Romans), but Erasmus mistook Gk. skaphe "trough, bowl" for a derivative of the stem of skaptein "to dig," and the mistake has stuck. The original, then, is "to call a bowl a bowl." <http://www.etymonline.com/index.php?term=spade>spade <http://www.etymonline.com/index.php?term=spade>(2) "figure on playing cards," 1598, probably from It. spade, pl. of spada "sword, spade," from L. spatha "broad, flat weapon or tool," from Gk. spathe "broad blade" (see <http://www.etymonline.com/index.php?term=spade>spade (1)). Phrase in spades "in abundance" first recorded 1929 (Damon Runyon), probably from bridge, where spades are the highest-ranking suit. "The invitations to the musicale came sliding in by pairs and threes and spade flushes." [O.Henry, "Cabbages & Kings," 1904]

Derogatory meaning "black person" is 1928, from the color of the playing card symbol.

At 02:04 PM 11/21/2008, you wrote:
>Of note...adjectives aren't the only offending parties for our NEWSPEAK:
>
>"Call a spade a spade"

http://www.phrases.org.uk/meanings/call-a-spade-a-spade.html

> "Rule of Thumb" http://www.phrases.org.uk/meanings/rule-of-thumb.html
>
> "The whole nine yards" (reference to pilot's strafing runs...advocating

http://www.phrases.org.uk/meanings/the-whole-nine-yards.html > violence?)

>
> On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 10:42 AM, Kamen Nedev <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> On 19/11/2008, at 3:38, Mark Weiss wrote:
>
> German measles, anyone?
>
> Aye. Spanish fly. Spanish Flu. Black Death. Yellow Peril.
>
> Others seem more innocent, but only just. "Japanese copy".
>
> And, nowadays, "Russian" mafia. "Under a Panama flag".
>
> Speaking of Spanish, EVERY SINGLE proverb originating from the 14th century is either violently anti-Semitic, or anti-Muslim, or simply racist and sexist.
>
> Language is a bit of a battlefield, and there's a lot of inertia there...
>
> Kamen
>
> http://www.waitingforcargo.net

↑ Index

399. Sara Wintz

:::the press gang::: et :::evan abandoned:::

Fri 21 Nov 2008

---

hello hello,

Please join :::the press gang::: at the d.a.levy lives/renegade small press night, on November 25th, sponsored by Boog City!

The event will take place at A.C.A Gallery, 529 West 20th Street- 5th fl. @ 6pm, as part of Boog City's d.a.levy lives: celebrating the renegade press series.

Cristiana Baik, Evan Kennedy, and [Sara Wintz] will be celebrating the release of vehicular No.1, a new, split-side zine from :::the press gang::: with a reading in which Evan will go electric and read from his new chapbook, "All the Young Dudes," included in this first issue of vehicular.

*a sampling, in brief:

In a Season of Switchblades
for Saint Augustine

After an awkward phase, our bodies
became a pleasure to look at;

we got the hint that things were starting
to fill out.
                We joined the Wreckers and received matching coats. We bred

a subtle trouble through the school halls.

Even a little danger loved was death won.
There were the bloody-nosed at the video arcade

and haircuts in the bowling alley bathroom.
On one wall a portrait of Cabeza de Vaca,

another, all the animals he brought.
There were Swishers to smoke and

showers to get the stink off. The Cineplex was brimming with unheard-of poetries...

Other participating small presses, on November 25th, include: Farfalla Press (Gary parrish, with performances by Anne Waldman and I Feel Tractor) X-ing Books (Amy Mees, with Jeremy Schmall and Justin Taylor) + Open 24 Hrs. (Greg Fuchs & John Coletti, with Erica Kaufman) and of course, Boog City!

(we're on cloud nine)(and hope you'll join us!)

see you there!

yrs,
sara wintz+cristiana baik
:::the press gang:::
www.pressgangsters.com

(*details, details....)---------->

Boog City presents
d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

*New York City Small Presses Night
*
with

*Farfalla Press, Open 24 Hours,

:::the press gang:::, and X-ing Books
*

*Tues. Nov. 25, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free
*

*ACA Galleries
*529 W.20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

This is our one event each season in our non-NYC small presses series where we honor NYC small presses.

Featuring readings from poets from some of the city's finest small presses
as well as publications available from each of the presses.

Farfalla Press/McMillan & Parrish*,* *Gary Parrish, ed.

*--I Feel Tractor
--Anne Waldman

Open 24 Hours*, John Coletti and Greg Fuchs, eds.

*--Erica Kaufman

:::the press gang:::*, Cristiana Baik and Sara Wintz, eds.

*--Evan Kennedy

X-ing Books*, Amy Mees, ed.

*--Jeremy Schmall
--Justin Taylor
**

*There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

--

Press and author bios

Farfalla Press/McMillan & Parrish
*http://www.farfallapress.blogspot.com
*
http://www.spdbooks.org/root/pages/serp.asp?
Title=&Author=&Subtitleúrfalla+press&ISBN=&submit=Search

*Farfalla Press/McMillan & Parrish is an independent small press surfacing from Naropa University's Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics and based in Brooklyn. It puts out perfect-bound books, chapbooks, broadsides, and CD's. Artists include Vanessa Boff, Rob Geisen, Jack Collom, Tom Peters, Gary Parrish, LeAnn Bifoss, Akilah Oliver, Junior Burke, Christopher Ryan, John Sakkis, Peter Lamborn Wilson (Hakim Bey), Bobbie Louise Hawkins, Anne Waldman, Edmund Berrigan, Anselm Berrigan, Marcella Durand, Jessica Fiorini, Jessica Rogers, Lee Ranaldo, Corrine Fitzpatrick, Stefania Iryne Marthakis, Brenda Coultas, Simon Pettet, John Coletti, Dustin Williamson, Lewis Warsh, Kristin Prevallet, Stacy Szymaszek, John High, Nathaniel A. Siegel, Arlo Quint, Chris Martin, Tyler Burba, George Schneeman, Shappy Seasholtz, Bob Holman, Bernadette Mayer, Reed Bye, Ambrose Bye.

*I Feel Tractor
*http://www.myspace.com/ifeeltractor
http://www.goodbyebetter.com/
*
I Feel Tractor is available to you with musings of space folk and cut ups. I Feel Tractor has a self-titled 7" from the Loudmouth Collective, and a CD, Once I Had an Earthquake, from Goodbye Better.

*Anne Waldman *http://www.naropa.edu/swp/faculty/a_waldman.cfm
http://almostisland.com/poetry/WALDMAN2.html * Anne Waldman, poet, professor, performer, curator, and cultural activist, is the author of over 40 books and small press editions of poetry and poetics, including Fast Speaking Woman, the IOVIS project, Vow to Poetry: Essays, Interviews and Manifestos, Marriage: A Sentence, In the Room of Never Grieve, Structure of the World Compared to a Bubble, Outrider, and Nine Nights Meditation (with artist Donna Dennis). She is the editor of numerous anthologies, including The Beat Book, and co-editor of Disembodied Poetics: Annals of the Jack Kerouac School, The Angel Hair Anthology, and Civil Disobediences: Poetics and Politics in Action (with Lisa Birman). Her CDs include Alchemical Elegy, Battery: Live at Naropa, The Eye of the Falcon, and The Matching Half (the last two with music and production by Ambrose Bye). She is a recipient of the Shelley Memorial Award and has had residences at the Civitella Ranieri Center, the Tokyo Woman's Christian University, the Emily Harvey Foundation in Venice, and the Bellagio Center. She has performed her work on stages across the American continent and abroad. Recent conferences and festivals have taken her to Wuhan (China), Berlin, Vienna and Dublin. She works with writer and director Ed Bowes on a number of video/movie projects.

Open 24 Hours * Open 24 Hours is dedicated to publishing limited edition books by poets working in traditions rooted in experimentation and social engagement. The Open 24 Hours design is influenced by the staple-bound mimeo revolution of the American small press underground most visibly recognized in the books published by many 2nd- and 3rd-generation New York School Poets. We have simply adapted the method to digital technology.

Open 24 Hours has published books by Mariana Ruiz Firmat, Corina Copp, Betsy Fagin, Joel Dailey, Chris Toll, Steve Carey, Arlo Quint, Erica Kaufman, and Dustin Williamson. Forthcoming are books by David Kirschenbaum and Will Yakulic.

Open 24 Hours is based in New York City, edited and designed by John Coletti and Greg Fuchs. Jon Allen is our in-house illustrator. We took the name from D.C. poet Buck Downs, who published a poetry zine by the same name. Downs inherited Open 24 Hours from Baltimore poet Chris Toll, who started it in 1980.

You can reach them at [redacted] or [redacted].

*Erica Kaufman
http://ericajane0808.googlepages.com/

Erica Kaufman is the author of several chapbooks, most recently censory impulse (an excerpt of her long poem of the same title) (OMG), civilization day (Open24Hours), and censory impulse (another excerpt of her long poem of the same title) (Big Game Books). Kaufman holds an MFA from the New School and was the winner of the 2003 New School University Chapbook Contest. Her poems can be found in Puppyflowers, *Painted Bride Quarterly *, Bombay Gin, The Mississippi Review, Unpleasant Event Schedule, the tiny, Turntable + Blue Light, 26,Aufgabe, and LIT, among other places. Essays and reviews can be found in The Poetry Project Newsletter , CutBank, Rain Taxi, Verse, and elsewhere. Kaufman is currently a Ph.D. candidate at the CUNY Graduate Center. She lives in Brooklyn and works in Manhattan and teaches at Baruch College.

:::the press gang:::
http://www.pressgangsters.com
*
:::the press gang::: is a small press, co-directed by cristiana baik and sara wintz, publishing younger avant writers.

*
Evan Kennedy
*http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod$24&cat=1
*
Evan Kennedy is the author of The Cheer-Up Book of Wounded Soldiers (Dirty Swan Projects) and Us Them Poems (BookThug). His work has appeared in "Tight," "Glosolalia," "Hot Whiskey," and The Poetry Project's "The Recluse." He lives in Brooklyn.
*

X-ing Books
*http://www.x-ingbooks.com/

Amy Mees and Mark Wagner are thing people. A list of their joint experiences includes publishing art catalogs, cutting up money for art's sake, letterpress printing, handcrafts (like Mom used to make), traditional book binding, and co-founding the Booklyn Artists Alliance. They are happy to associate freely with word people like Jeremy Schmall, Justin Taylor, Jen Benka, and _____ (fill in the blank). It's a venture still in the making and we're hoping to find other motivated and brilliant contributors.

*Jeremy Schmall

Jeremy Schmall is the co-editor and founder of The Agriculture Reader, and author of Open Correspondence from the Senator: Volume 1, But a Paucity of his Voluminous Writings. He lives in Brooklyn.

*Justin Taylor *http://www.justindtaylor.net/ * Justin Taylor is the editor of The Apocalypse Reader (Thunder's Mouth) and Come Back, Donald Barthelme (McSweeney's). His work has appeared in numerous magazines, journals, and websites. He is the author of the book of poems More Perfect Depictions of Noise (X-ing Books) and, with the poet Jeremy Schmall, is co-editor of The Agriculture Reader, a handmade arts annual.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---
Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

↑ Index

400. Mark Weiss
research question
Fri 21 Nov 2008

Does anybody on the list know if there's a list on the web of the locations of papers of various poets, or of personal archives in general? Something on the order of: type in Ezra Pound and it yields Beineke, Yale.

Thanks.

Mark

↑ Index

401. William Slaughter
Notice: Mudlark
Fri 21 Nov 2008

New and On View: Mudlark Flash No. 47 (2008)

Career Change | Lisa Badner

Lisa Badner lives in Brooklyn NY and is a student in the master class at The Writers Studio, founded and directed by Philip Schultz, in Greenwich Village. Other than "Career Change," her Mudlark Flash, her only publications, to date, are letters to the New York Times.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

402. Alan Sondheim
Jukka-Pekka Kervinen netlabel oretouKh (fwd)
Fri 21 Nov 2008

Jukka-Pekka Kervinen netlabel oretouKh of oretouKh:

oretouKh is a netlabel focused to experimental and avantgarde music, electronic music, sound installations, live coding, circuit bending, microsound, text-sound compositions, sound poetry, ambient, minimal, and noise experiments.

of my (Jukka-Pekka Kervinen) 'fluctuation': first person:

ambient drones and text-sound compositions by Jukka-Pekka Kervinen of your (Alan Sondheim) 'ggggg': second person:

Experimental sound works by Alan Sondheim.

and his (Jim Leftwich) 'fare ogs': third person:

Experimental music by Jim Leftwich

Here are the URLs:

oretouKh:

http://archive.org/details/oretoukh

fluctuation:

http://archive.org/details/fluctuation

ggggg:

http://archive.org/details/ggggg_698 /minimalwork/

fare ogs:

http://archive.org/details/FareOgs

↑ Index

403. David Baratier
Re: New American Press Chapbook Contest
Sat 22 Nov 2008

In Columbus, a guy named Okla said he was the co-editor of New American Press and he would be publishing a collection by one of our former associate editors, Sean Karns. Has that collection been printed?

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
321 Empire Street
Montpelier OH 43543
http://pavementsaw.org

Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1

↑ Index

404. Rebecca Weaver
new issue of Midway now up
Sat 22 Nov 2008

Hello all,

greetings from lightly snowy Saint Paul! The new issue of Midway is now up, featuring our new ephemera section and some great new multi-genre work. Find us online at www.midwayjournal.com, and if you're on Facebook, find us there, too.

↑ Index

405. Mark Weiss
Re: David/'Nigerian scam', Gyped!
Sat 22 Nov 2008

Steve: I think you misread me. It's not a matter of most Americans having no other impression of Nigerians than the term Nigerian scam, it's that the scam hasn't generalized into any impression at all. That may change with the increased migration of Nigerians to the states, but I doubt it will be colored by the scam, any more than attitudes to Italians are colored by the phrase Ponzi scheme.

I know you spent time in Nigeria which you remember with fondness, and I assume that your sensitivity to the term comes from that. You also spent time in France. Do you get riled by terms like French Leave, etc., or is Nigeria a special case? If so, why? What else do you think should be dropped from the language? How about black, as in black-hearted, Black Monday, etc.? These usages have nothing to do with race, but neither does niggardly, and we all remember that controversy.

Gypped is an interesting case. I've used it all my life, never until this moment associating it with gypsies, although I've in fact been robbed
by gypsies. We also have gypsy cabs in New York--not known or assumed to be larcenous, merely unlicensed. They mostly work areas where yellow cabs are scarce, and I've ridden them at need (I rarely ride in any cabs) without reflecting on the reference to Roma. The drivers, natch, aren't Roma. We have a Roma population in NY. I have no idea what they think about these things--they haven't seen fit to protest. It would also be nice to know what they think of phrases like "it's just the gypsy in my soul,"
with its assumption of ungrounded drifting,
rather than their traditional seasonal migration pattern. The word nomad is misused similarly, sometimes by French literary theorists.

Mark

At 03:09 PM 11/21/2008, Stephen Vincent wrote:
>Not to retread abused tires, but my sense is >that the re-use of "Nigerian scam" re-enforces a >unilateral sense that it is 'native ' condition >of all Nigerians to try and trick us out of our >money. (Mark is quite right that only a small >percentage of Americans have any other concept >of Nigeria and/or Nigerians. Why is maybe a >question that be addressed - but I suspect its >has something to with this country's >post-colonial practices (petroleum interests, >etc) in Nigeria. (What you are not allowed to know will not bother you!)
>
>What ruffles is the way "Nigerian scam" may be >similar to the way people used to glibly talk >about getting 'gyped' ' - "Gyping" being the >assumed 'native' characteristic" of people born
>as Gypsies, the outstanding trait of whom is to >show up and trick upstanding people ("us") out >of our money. It must of been those terribly

>sensitive, politically correct, language police >that drove 'gyp ' out of common, civilized >usage. Come on 'kids', no amount of >historicizing is going to put the lid back on >the issue here. I do believe it was Obododimma - >a Nigeria - who put up his irritation with the
>'scam' tag (??) . But maybe in raising the >question he was just 'scamming' us and playing with our liberal sensitivities.
>
>Maybe ask a local Nigerian in your community
>what they think of the 'scam' term.
>
>Stephen V
>http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
>
>
>
>--- On Fri, 11/21/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
>From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: David
>To: [redacted]
>Date: Friday, November 21, 2008, 1:15 AM
>
>Dear Anny,I think the point you made was quite clear: sometimes we may use >words that others object to, and, to show that we don't mean any hurt, we >apologize. That's a normal practice of redress for perceived face threat in >politeness theory. I would (and many scholars working on politeness) even >prefer Avoidance Strategy. Well, not everyone would avoid performing >face-threatening acts in cross-cultural communications. And we have seen the >consequences in history.
>Regards.
>Obododimma.
>
>On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 9:06 PM, Anny Ballardini
><[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > Dear Obododimma,
> >
> > I did not say that, nor did Mark as far as I know. And I think I can speak > > up for him.

> > Something that makes me chuckle is the English saying: "Excuse my >French!"
> > The English, the obstinate enemies of the French, all along history, and > > vice versa: "Merde aux Anglais!"
> > Not to talk of the Germans against the French, the French against the > > Italians, the Italians against them all, the Norther Italians against the > > southern Italians, and the infinite sayings that appear once in a while in
> > a > > colloquial form. I / we do respect Derrida and his precious work. What I > > wish to say is that we cannot cancel history in just a second with good > > will.
> > I do appreciate your remark, though.
> >
> > This is cheap humor, and anyhow that is what our daily life is made of.
> > Isn't your neighbor your worst enemy? It is the law of instinct, then
>with > > reason, as the goodwill of the list has shown up to the point that Barry > > Schwabsky very probably signed off (and once again I am sorry), with >reason
> > you sort things out and start being more careful. I never again used the > > saying I quoted in my previous mail. It was a lesson for me. I just wanted > > to show Barry and the list that sometimes you simply do not think, and as >I
> > said, you unwillingly trigger a chain of unsolved ethnic conflicts.
> >
> > I hope I was clear. I also thank you for giving me the opportunity to > > clarify what I said before.
> >
> > Anny Ballardini
> >
> > On Tue, Nov 18, 2008 at 8:53 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> > wrote:
> >
> > > Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n
> > >
> > >
> > > Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does
>not > > > change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in >different > > > times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply >be

> > > anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance,
>continues
> > > using the term "policeman" (instead of "police >officer"), "air hostess"
> > > (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew")
>or "poetess" (instead of > > > simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that >filtering out words
> > > processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps >you
> > are > > > also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and
> > would > > > not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with > > > communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in
the > > world
> > > start from recklessness in the use of words.
> > > --- Obododimma Oha.
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > _____
> > > From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> > > To: [redacted]
> > > Sent: Monday, November 17, 2008 10:04:10 PM
> > > Subject: Re: David
> > >
> > > Barry:
> > >
> > > Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get to >you. This > > > discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language
>are > > > ascribed to one nationality or another and become >dictionary-sanctified
> > for > > > reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't >originate in

> > Spain,
> > > nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry >thrives
> > in > > > both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over >"french letter"
> > as
> > > a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french > > > disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the > > French
> > > as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least the > > Profumo
> > > scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and
>in > > > English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though the >practices
> > are > > > pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing >off
> > American
> > > elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still
>the > > > Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all >over > > > China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws > > harp--maybe > > > sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed). Language, >thank > > > god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone > > might > > > find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it > > stores.
> > >
> > > Mark
> > >
> > > At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
> > > > I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the >feeling of
> > > having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile >prejudice.
> > > There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people
>feeling

> > > stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on the > > > receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest of > > > sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can > > participate > > > in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I >think I
> > > have to withdraw, at least for now.
> > > >
>Check
> > >
> > guidelines
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> > --
> > Anny Ballardini
> > http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
> > http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
> > http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
> > I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing > > star!
> >
>guidelines
> >
>
>
>
>--
>Obododimma Oha
>Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>Dept. of English
>University of Ibadan
>Nigeria
>
>&

>
>Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>University of Ibadan
>
>Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
>

↑ Index

406. Andy Nicholson
New at Lamplighter, Lamplighter, Lamplighter
Sat 22 Nov 2008

Recent posts at Lamplighter, Lamplighter, Lamplighter include:

Issue 1
The Stone Roses
Meow Meow performing Laurie Anderson's "The Dream Before"
John Granger's thesis on Jack Spicer

Enjoy,
Andy Nicholson
http://andynicholson.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

407. Charlotte Mandel
Re: research question
Sat 22 Nov 2008

Mark -
Here's a response from an academic librarian friend:

"ArchiveGrid

Google

WorldCat (many archives also have catalog records)"

She also suggests asking a reference librarian - most libraries will list their archival collections.

Best,
Charlotte

On Nov 21, 2008, at 7:07 PM, Mark Weiss wrote:

Does anybody on the list know if there's a list on the web of the locations of papers of various poets, or of personal archives in general? Something on the order of: type in Ezra Pound and it yields Beineke, Yale.

Thanks.

Mark

↑ Index

408. Stephen Vincent
"Rubbings" or, Where is David??
Sat 22 Nov 2008

David loves to do - and interestingly - street side rubbings. I hope the processe did not get turned on him, like, did he. himself, get 'rubbed' out?

Anybody have a good essay ref on contemporary 'rubbings' - the origins and aesthetics thereof. i.e. Rauschenberg/Cage and car tires rolling over a wet white canvas. Yves Klein pulling naked fresh painted bodies over canvas to make paintings. Amy Balkin - the other evening at Nonsite/San Francisco - showing photographs of her rubbings of Corporate Industrial Park Signage. Making 'art' with non-art tools (car, body, manhole covers, etc.), or making 'art' out of non-art (corporate signage, or David's industrial remnants). What's the diff??

Are their examples of contemporary rubbings of contemporary poems (not talking 'malevolent criticism' here!) Are there examples of rubbings of portions of non-art texts (say, from Government Reports on Global Warming)? (Works by Hans Hackke (sp?) come to mind).

What is an artist/poet/person performing when making an artifact by 'rubbing' an artifact of the past back into the present?

What is 'the rub' - even the origins of that particular phrase when encountering a point of friction?

Was Tina Fey doing 'rubbings' of Sarah Palin?

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

--- On Sat, 11/22/08, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David/'Nigerian scam', Gyped!
To: [redacted], [redacted]
Date: Saturday, November 22, 2008, 9:31 AM

Steve: I think you misread me. It's not a matter of most Americans having no other impression of Nigerians than the term Nigerian scam, it's that the scam hasn't generalized into any impression at all. That may change with the increased migration of Nigerians to the states, but I doubt it will be colored by the scam, any more than attitudes to Italians are colored by the phrase Ponzi scheme.

I know you spent time in Nigeria which you remember with fondness, and I assume that your sensitivity to the term comes from that. You also spent time in France. Do you get riled by terms like French Leave, etc., or is Nigeria a special case? If so, why? What else do you think should be dropped from the language? How about black, as in black-hearted, Black Monday, etc.? These usages have nothing to do with race, but neither does niggardly, and we all remember that controversy.

Gypped is an interesting case. I've used it all my life, never until this moment associating it
with gypsies, although I've in fact been robbed
by gypsies. We also have gypsy cabs in New York--not known or assumed to be larcenous, merely unlicensed. They mostly work areas where yellow cabs are scarce, and I've ridden them at need (I rarely ride in any cabs) without reflecting on the reference to Roma. The drivers, natch, aren't Roma. We have a Roma population in NY. I have no idea what they think about these things--they haven't seen fit to protest. It would also be nice to know what they think of phrases like "it's just the gypsy in my soul,"
with its assumption of ungrounded drifting,
rather than their traditional seasonal migration
pattern. The word nomad is misused similarly, sometimes by French literary theorists.

Mark

At 03:09 PM 11/21/2008, Stephen Vincent wrote:
>Not to retread abused tires, but my sense is >that the re-use of "Nigerian scam" re-enforces a >unilateral sense that it is 'native ' condition

>of all Nigerians to try and trick us out of our >money. (Mark is quite right that only a small >percentage of Americans have any other concept >of Nigeria and/or Nigerians. Why is maybe a >question that be addressed - but I suspect its >has something to with this country's
>post-colonial practices (petroleum interests, >etc) in Nigeria. (What you are not allowed to know will not bother you!)
>
>What ruffles is the way "Nigerian scam" may be >similar to the way people used to glibly talk >about getting 'gyped' ' - "Gyping" being the >assumed 'native' characteristic" of people born
>as Gypsies, the outstanding trait of whom is to >show up and trick upstanding people ("us") out >of our money. It must of been those terribly >sensitive, politically correct, language police
>that drove 'gyp ' out of common, civilized >usage. Come on 'kids', no amount of >historicizing is going to put the lid back on >the issue here. I do believe it was Obododimma -
>a Nigeria - who put up his irritation with the
>'scam' tag (??) . But maybe in raising the >question he was just 'scamming' us and playing with our liberal sensitivities.
>
>Maybe ask a local Nigerian in your community
>what they think of the 'scam' term.
>
>Stephen V
>http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
>
>
>
>--- On Fri, 11/21/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
>From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: David
>To: [redacted]
>Date: Friday, November 21, 2008, 1:15 AM

>
>Dear Anny,I think the point you made was quite clear: sometimes we may use >words that others object to, and, to show that we don't mean any hurt,
we >apologize. That's a normal practice of redress for perceived face threat in >politeness theory. I would (and many scholars working on politeness) even >prefer Avoidance Strategy. Well, not everyone would avoid performing >face-threatening acts in cross-cultural communications. And we have seen
the >consequences in history.
>Regards.
>Obododimma.
>
>On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 9:06 PM, Anny Ballardini
><[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > Dear Obododimma,
> >
> > I did not say that, nor did Mark as far as I know. And I think I can speak
> > up for him.
> > Something that makes me chuckle is the English saying: "Excuse my >French!"
> > The English, the obstinate enemies of the French, all along history,
and
> > vice versa: "Merde aux Anglais!"
> > Not to talk of the Germans against the French, the French against the > > Italians, the Italians against them all, the Norther Italians against
the > > southern Italians, and the infinite sayings that appear once in a while in
> > a > > colloquial form. I / we do respect Derrida and his precious work.
What I > > wish to say is that we cannot cancel history in just a second with good > > will.
> > I do appreciate your remark, though.
> >
> > This is cheap humor, and anyhow that is what our daily life is made

of.
> > Isn't your neighbor your worst enemy? It is the law of instinct, then
>with > > reason, as the goodwill of the list has shown up to the point that
Barry
> > Schwabsky very probably signed off (and once again I am sorry), with >reason > > you sort things out and start being more careful. I never again used
the > > saying I quoted in my previous mail. It was a lesson for me. I just wanted > > to show Barry and the list that sometimes you simply do not think, and as
>I
> > said, you unwillingly trigger a chain of unsolved ethnic conflicts.
> >
> > I hope I was clear. I also thank you for giving me the opportunity to > > clarify what I said before.
> >
> > Anny Ballardini
> >
> > On Tue, Nov 18, 2008 at 8:53 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> > wrote:
> >
> > > Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n
> > >
> > >
> > > Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does
>not > > > change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in >different > > > times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply
>be > > > anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance,
>continues
> > > using the term "policeman" (instead of "police >officer"), "air hostess"

> > > (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew")
>or "poetess" (instead of > > > simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that >filtering out words
> > > processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time.
Perhaps
>you
> > are > > > also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and
> > would > > > not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense
with > > > communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the > > world
> > > start from recklessness in the use of words.
> > > --- Obododimma Oha.
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > _____
> > > From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> > > To: [redacted]
> > > Sent: Monday, November 17, 2008 10:04:10 PM
> > > Subject: Re: David
> > >
> > > Barry:
> > >
> > > Don't let the legions of the politically hyper-correct get
to >you. This > > > discussion is profoundly silly. All sorts of things in every language
>are > > > ascribed to one nationality or another and become >dictionary-sanctified
> > for > > > reasons often lost in time. The Spanish Influenza didn't >originate in > > Spain,

> > > nor the Hong Kong version in Hong Kong, and the tourism industry >thrives
> > in > > > both places. I doubt that the French lose much sleep over >"french letter"
> > as > > > a term for a male birth control device that helps prevent the french > > > disease, though the terms certainly go back to an English view of the > > French
> > > as licentious--a stone I think nobody has thrown since at least
the > > Profumo
> > > scandal. For Spanish speakers la carisia francesa is cunnilingus, and
>in > > > English we french kiss and there's also greek love, though
the >practices
> > are > > > pretty universal. I have no idea if the parasite that's killing >off
> > American
> > > elm trees really originated in the Netherlands, but it's still
>the > > > Dutch Elm Disease. Japanese knotweed, another parasite, grows all >over > > > China and Korea. Jew's harp is apparently a corruption of jaws
> > harp--maybe
> > > sharks should be miffed (they always seem to be miffed).
Language,
>thank > > > god, is a repository of history. Cleansing it of anything that anyone

> > might > > > find offensive would also cleanse it of much of the cultural data it > > stores.
> > >
> > > Mark
> > >
> > > At 05:42 AM 11/16/2008, Barry Schwabsky wrote:
> > > > I have to say that, finally, I feel physically ill from the >feeling of
> > > having been implicitly accused of holding and fomenting a vile >prejudice.
> > > There has been talk of language as a loaded weapon and of people
>feeling > > > stabbed by how they are characterized. Well, I feel like I am on
the > > > receiving end of those things. I don't to get into a contest
of > > > sensitivities butÂ it is very difficult for me to see how I can > > participate > > > in a group where I feel that such views are being held of me so I >think I
> > > have to withdraw, at least for now.
> > > >
posts.
>Check
> > >
Check
> > guidelines
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
Check
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> > --

> > Anny Ballardini
> > http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
> > http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
> > http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
> > I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing > > star!
> >
>guidelines
> >
>
>
>
>--
>Obododimma Oha
>Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>Dept. of English
>University of Ibadan
>Nigeria
>
>&
>
>Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>University of Ibadan
>
>Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

409. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Sat 22 Nov 2008

Jim,

You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of photography?

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In > that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.
>
> the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you mention, of course.
>
> for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or http://vispo.com/arteroids
>
> the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field. dbCinema is generative.
>
> you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation. sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification. that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time. some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time. like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given program will halt.
>
> "though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists > like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach."
>
> Well, pop can be a powerful art form.
>
> sure.

> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some > other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>
> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.
>
> true.
>
> ja

↑ Index

410. George Bowering

Re: David

Sat 22 Nov 2008

Yeah, I feel as if I am just recovered from the Spanish 'flu.

gb

On Nov 21, 2008, at 11:42 AM, Paul Nelson wrote:

> No one expected a sort of Spanish Inquisition.
>
> TADA!
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
> American Sentences
> Organic Poetry
> Poetry Postcard Blog
>
> Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, November 21, 2008 11:04:43 AM
Subject: Re: David

Of note...adjectives aren't the only offending parties for our NEWSPEAK:

"Call a spade a spade"

"Rule of Thumb" http://www.phrases.org.uk/meanings/rule-of-thumb.html

"The whole nine yards" (reference to pilot's strafing runs...advocating violence?)

On Wed, Nov 19, 2008 at 10:42 AM, Kamen Nedev <[redacted]> wrote:

On 19/11/2008, at 3:38, Mark Weiss wrote:

German measles, anyone?

Aye. Spanish fly. Spanish Flu. Black Death. Yellow Peril.

Others seem more innocent, but only just. "Japanese copy".

And, nowadays, "Russian" mafia. "Under a Panama flag".

Speaking of Spanish, EVERY SINGLE proverb originating from the 14th century is either violently anti-Semitic, or anti-Muslim, or simply racist and sexist.

Language is a bit of a battlefield, and there's a lot of inertia there...

Kamen

http://www.waitingforcargo.net

> guidelines
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html

Mr. G. Bowering
Faster than a speeding pullet.

↑ Index

411. Gary Sullivan
Ernst Herbeck site
Sat 22 Nov 2008

Responses to these translations encouraged, especially from anyone who reads German:

http://herbeck.blogspot.com

_____ Color coding for safety: Windows Live Hotmail alerts you to suspicious email. http://windowslive.com/Explore/Hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_safety_112008

↑ Index

412. Séamas Cain
New book by Sheila E. Murphy
Sat 22 Nov 2008

_____

There is a new book by Sheila E. Murphy ...

COLLECTED CHAPBOOKS, with 599 pages, 6" x 9," a hardcover book, is published by Blue Lion Books ...

http://www.lulu.com/content/2251616

All of Sheila E. Murphy's chapbooks are collected here. From presses all over the world and with differing foci. That Murphy's poetry has matured through the years, one can be sure from this collection. There are no weak poems ... only page after page of her special lyrical disjunction of language. Yes, lyricism + linguistic adventurism = the poetry of Sheila E Murphy.

http://www.lulu.com/content/2251616

For a review by Jeff Harrison of Sheila E. Murphy's "Skinny Buddha" go to

http://galatearesurrection10.blogspot.com/2008/07/skinny-buddha-by-sheila-e-murphy.html

And for my own review of "Skinny Buddha"
go to

http://galatearesurrection9.blogspot.com/2008/03/skinny-buddha-by-sheila-e-murphy.html

Bestwishes,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

↑ Index

413. Mark Weiss
Re: research question
Sun 23 Nov 2008

Unfortunately I have to track down a lot of archives. Worldcat, which I use all the time for books, is difficult to use for archival material, despite its listing many. I tried, as an experiment, to follow it to Blackburn material in Frank O'Hara's papers. After an hour and a half it had steered me in a circle. Google is also of limited use. ArchiveGrid looks good--I'll try it at Columbia, which I assume subscribes.

Thanks for all the b/c and f/c responses.

Mark

At 03:13 PM 11/22/2008, you wrote:
>Mark -
>Here's a response from an academic librarian friend:
>
>"ArchiveGrid
>
>Google
>

>WorldCat (many archives also have catalog records)"
>
>She also suggests asking a reference librarian - most libraries will >list their archival collections.
>
>Best, >Charlotte
>
>On Nov 21, 2008, at 7:07 PM, Mark Weiss wrote:
>
>Does anybody on the list know if there's a list on the web of the >locations of papers of various poets, or of personal archives in >general? Something on the order of: type in Ezra Pound and it yields >Beineke, Yale.
>
>Thanks.
>
>Mark
>
>

↑ Index

414. Troy Camplin

Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Sun 23 Nov 2008

Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

Troy Camplin

_____
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Jim,

You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of photography?

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In > that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.
>
> the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you mention, of course.
>
> for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or http://vispo.com/arteroids
>
> the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field. dbCinema is generative.
>
> you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation. sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification. that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time. some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time. like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given program will halt.
>
> "though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists > like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach."
>
> Well, pop can be a powerful art form.
>
> sure.

> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some > other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>
> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.
>
> true.
>
> ja

↑ Index

415. John Cunningham
Canadian language writers/poets
Sun 23 Nov 2008

I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian language poets. Thanks. John Cunningham

↑ Index

416. steve russell
Yeat: farsi...
Sun 23 Nov 2008

http://www.rosajamali.com/arti...

↑ Index

417. Nicholas Karavatos
JOB - Dept of English @ American University of Sharjah
Sun 23 Nov 2008

The Department of English at the American University of Sharjah is seeking a full-time faculty member. The successful applicant will have a PhD and experience teaching various academic writing courses.

Specialization in literature (preferably British literature) or CALL (Computer Assisted Language Learning) and relevant scholarly publications are required. Overseas teaching experience is desirable.

Rank and salary will be dependent upon experience. American University of Sharjah is licensed in the United States by the Department of Education of the State of Delaware. It is accredited by the Commission on Higher Education of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools.

The deadline for applications will be December 28, 2008 and applications should be sent to the attention of Dean William H Heidcamp at [redacted].

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of English
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Windows Live Hotmail now works up to 70% faster.
http://windowslive.com/Explore/Hotmail?
ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_faster_112008

↑ Index

418. Halvard Johnson
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Sun 23 Nov 2008

Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.

Hal

You have no enemies in this folder.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

Troy Camplin

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Jim,

You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

*Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of photography?*

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.

the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you mention, of course.

for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or http://vispo.com/arteroids

the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field. dbCinema is generative.

you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation. sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification. that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time. some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time. like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given program will halt.

"though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach."

Well, pop can be a powerful art form.

sure.

"Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."

In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative > to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.

>
> true.
>
> ja
> guidelines

↑ Index

419. Jennifer Karmin
JOB: Indiana State University
Sun 23 Nov 2008

(this is a forward. please don't respond to me. good luck!)

Tenure-track assistant professor, beginning August 2009, to teach three courses each semester in poetry writing, introductory creative writing, and composition or general education literature, plus undergraduate advising.

Faculty in Creative Writing are expected to publish creative works and provide service to the Department, College, University, and profession. Secondary specialty in fiction, nonfiction, English teaching, composition, early British literature, or folklore desirable. Salary competitive. PhD in English or a closely related field preferred, MFA in Creative Writing with publications considered.

Screening will begin December 1, 2008, and will continue until the position is filled. Apply online at https://jobs.indstate.edu. Send three letters of recommendation to Robert Perrin, Chair, Department of English, Indiana State University, Terre Haute, IN 47809. Applications acknowledged by e-mail.

Contact:

Indiana State University

Phone:

[redacted]

Online App. Form:

http://jobs.indstate.edu/applicants/Central?quickFind=159897

↑ Index

420. Rob McLennan
Runaway Jury 5; rob mclennan has opinions...;
Sun 23 Nov 2008

RUNAWAY JURY V: GOVERNOR GENERAL'S LITERARY AWARDS, POETRY IN ENGLISH, 2008

For the fifth Runaway Jury we return to the Governor-General's Award for Poetry in English. The nominated titles this year are: Weyman Chan, Noise from the Laundry; A. F. Moritz, The Sentinel; Sachiko Murakami, The Invisibility Exhibit; Ruth Roach Pierson, Aide-Mmoire; and Jacob Scheier, More to Keep Us Warm.

The three jurors are Evie Christie, Alex Good, and rob mclennan.

http://www.goodreports.net/essays/jury51.htm

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...13th poetry coll'n - The Ottawa City Project ...novel - white www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

421. Jim Andrews
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Sun 23 Nov 2008

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

When some people call art 'generative', they mean it stimulates them to write or whatever. I take it that's your usage, Troy.

But the term 'generative art' has another meaning. It refers to a type of art where the work of art, itself, generates not a response in the audience but the visible or audible (or whatever) manifestation of the viewed work of art. So, typically, this sort of work of art is an executable, digital work, an app, a program, though it needn't be. Could be an analog machine or perhaps, on a more conceptual level, injunctions to do this or that. Though, in that case, the piece itself is not really doing the 'generation' and it probably wouldn't be of much interest to people interested in 'generative art'.

Just to clarify the term.

On another note. A work could stimulate others to reflect. That needn't be stimulating them to create.

Would that be 'generative' in your sense? Is that of value? If so, and it is not generative, then not all art is generative in your sense.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

422. Amanda Earl
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Sun 23 Nov 2008

---

try the anthology Shift and Switch edited by Jason Christie and a.rawlings and derek beaulieu
http://www.themercurypress.ca/?q=books/shift_switch

i also recommend the Canadian site Ditchpoetry.com which includes a lot of experimental poetry, and perhaps language poetry and links to those who write it.

best,
Amanda Earl

↑ Index

423. George Bowering
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Sun 23 Nov 2008

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian > language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham
>
> welcome.html

G. Harry Bowering, OC
Worth the trouble.

↑ Index

424. Troy Camplin
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Sun 23 Nov 2008

I would take reflection as "generative" in that way. It is producing something. I would argue that if it produced indifference, though, it's not really generative of anything.

Thanks for the clarification.

Troy

_____
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 5:27:37 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

When some people call art 'generative', they mean it stimulates them to write or whatever. I take it that's your usage, Troy.

But the term 'generative art' has another meaning. It refers to a type of art where the work of art, itself, generates not a response in the audience but the visible or audible (or whatever) manifestation of the viewed work of art. So, typically, this sort of work of art is an executable, digital work, an app, a program, though it needn't be. Could be an analog machine or perhaps, on a more conceptual level, injunctions to do this or that. Though, in that case, the piece itself is not really doing the 'generation' and it probably wouldn't be of much interest to people interested in 'generative art'.

Just to clarify the term.

On another note. A work could stimulate others to reflect. That needn't be stimulating them to create.

Would that be 'generative' in your sense? Is that of value? If so, and it is not generative, then not all art is generative in your sense.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

425. Troy Camplin
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Sun 23 Nov 2008

Pettiness and purposefully missing the point are also not generative.

Troy

_____
From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 11:57:56 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.

Hal

You have no enemies in this folder.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.
>
> Troy Camplin
>
> _____
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
> Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
>
> Jim,

You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

*Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of photography?*

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.

the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you mention, of course.

for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or http://vispo.com/arteroids

the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field. dbCinema is generative.

you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation. sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification. that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time. some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time. like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given program will halt.

"though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a > sense, this is a pop approach."

>
> Well, pop can be a powerful art form.
>
> sure.
>
> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some > other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>
> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.
>
> true.
>
> ja

↑ Index

426. Jim Andrews
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Mon 24 Nov 2008

> You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea > of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an > algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not > openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

'algorithm' is the 'natural selection' of our time. by that i mean the two terms have both been widely misunderstood. Widely.

'algorithm' is misunderstood because the theory of computation is more than misunderstood--it's unknown and somewhat non-intuitive in its results. it gives us some of the clearest statements we have about what computers can and can't do, i.e., it gives us our clearest statements about what algorithms can and cannot accomplish.

The focus of the birth of computing itself was on what computers cannot do. Turing solved a famous math problem posed by Hilbert called the Entscheidungsproblem, a problem to decide whether it is theoretically possible to build a machine that will prove all math theorems. After understanding Godel's work, Turing understood that the answer to this question must be 'no'. But in order to prove it, he had to devise a machine that could execute any conceivable, finite algorithm, and then show that there are some true theorems this machine cannot prove. Thus was born the 'Turing machine', Turing's abstraction, the most powerful but simple machine known to humanity. It was devised mainly to help prove the Entscheidungsproblem, not to 'invent computers'. Turing invented the modern notion of what a computer is in order to prove there are some things such machines cannot do. beautiful, eh?

However, while there are things such machines cannot do, there is no real evidence that we can do them either. Fundamentally, a Turing machine is a machine that can execute any conceivable, finite algorithm. There is no good evidence that there exist thought processes of which we are capable and computers are not.

So, Murat, while algorithms are 'formulas', of a sort, they can get quite sophisticated with a few million lines of code. The power of the simple algorithm and a machine that can make decisions has yet to be really widely understood. At first glance, computers look like machines that are merely mechanical, like any other machine, and pose no serious resemblance to the processes of thought. But the fundamental operations of the computer are like the atomic scale of thought.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

427. amy king
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Mon 24 Nov 2008

For starters (& debatable):

Christian Bok
bpnichol
Steve Mccaffery
Karen Mac Cormack
Scott Pound
Meredith Quartermain
Lisa Robertson

Try going through the EPC page for more info/poets:
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/epc.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Sun, 11/23/08, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 23, 2008, 9:37 PM

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham

↑ Index

428. amy king
Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list member found problematic. The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote strains of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist & here's a list.

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ... worth ignoring. In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were unaware of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human and possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen as the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual prowess.

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment and the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of some terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out something we've said that could be offensive.

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

429. John Cunningham
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it, you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls most of Canada's language writers emanated. John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham
>
> welcome.html

G. Harry Bowering, OC
Worth the trouble.

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

430. { brad brace } overrun
Mon 24 Nov 2008

---

a small free photo-book
of withdrawn 12hr images

http://216.70.118.235/overrun.pdf
(6.6 mb)

/:b

↑ Index

431. Mark Weiss
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Amy:

Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language. Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.

Mark

At 07:59 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that > another list member found problematic. The latter said so.
>

>Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with >rote strains of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, >my intentions weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist >terms exist & here's a list.
>
>Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is >problematic and noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
>
>The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
>... worth ignoring.
>In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those >same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its >underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should >be open to calls for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply >anything racist or were unaware of how our language use might be >problematic. Such calls for sensitivity should certainly not be >dismissed just because they are about being human and possibly even >admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen as >the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his >intellectual prowess.
>
>This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in >the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of >further racist sentiment and the denial of granting that a) we might >be ignorant of the implications of some terms and b) maybe we should >be more sensitive when someone points out something we've said that >could be offensive.
>
>Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm >still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the >implications of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the >mirror. Take a peek at some of what Tim Yu and others have said >about the last race discussion on Poetics:
>
>An excerpt:
>
>"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being >able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the >street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not >possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial >minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that >over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have

>most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as >it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list >is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely >heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
>
>and
>
>"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was >operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After >the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I >fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, >the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to >outweigh the benefits."
>
>Please read the entire note here:
>http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
>
>and
>
>"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found
>close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
>through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this >disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
>reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the >Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally >disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim >desired.
>
>Such is often the case with almost all message boards
>and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism >and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants >on the vast majority of message boards."
>
>http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and-listservs.html
>
>
>Be well,
>
>Amy
>
>

>_____
>
>
>
>
>
>Recent work
>
>http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
>
>
>Amy's Alias
>
>http://amyking.org/
>

↑ Index

432. Kimmelman, Burt

Anglo-Saxon Riddle-Poem translations and illustrations on nycbigcitylit.com, from Bertha Rogers

Mon 24 Nov 2008

If you have affection for Old English poetry then you might wish to check out these translations (both literary and artistic) from Bertha Rogers:

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted] [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 6:17 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: my Anglo-Saxon Riddle-Poem translations and illustrations on nycbigcitylit.com

Dear Burt, I thought you might be interested in seeing my Anglo-Saxon Riddle-Poem translations and illustrations on nycbigcitylit.com. Here's the link: http://www.bigcitylit.com/bigcitylit12.php?inc=fall08/twelve_12. Hope all is well with you, and hope you have a great Thanksgiving! Best, Bertha

↑ Index

433. Jim Andrews
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Mon 24 Nov 2008

> I would take reflection as "generative" in that way. It is producing something. I would argue that if it produced indifference, though, it's not really generative of anything.
>
> Thanks for the clarification.
>
> Troy

Except indifference? Surely it generated indifference?

But no matter.

Because art is invisible, indifference does not always signify acute perception. Even when art is visible, this is true. Just because even the whole world is initially indifferent does not mean much, sometimes. The twist is sometimes incomprehensible for a while, foreign, not obviously relevant, emotionally unrecognized, yadayada.

I don't see 'generativeness' as a useful measure of artistic quality. Instead, think of it as a property that some art has for some people and not for others. A kind of joint property shared by the work and some people. They connected somehow. Com port not null.

Or, if we use the definition I used of generativeness (which is how i normally use it concerning art), then think of generativeness as a property works of art are said to have when they themselves somehow generate art algorithmically. This is not a judgement but a categorization by other criteria.

I don't think Halvard was being petty. He made an observation that occurred to me also. Namely, if you use generativeness as a criterion to determine what's great art or even just art, you begin the construction with difficulties, big leaks in the hull. If I'm not mistaken, that ship has never sailed to glory. It just doesn't really lend itself to being used in such a way. Not to say it isn't a useful distinction, but the tool can be formulated more objectively, particularly when generativeness isn't made to be measured by vague audience reaction (anything other than indifference is generative? then it is a distinction without significant difference, in the scheme of things, because all we can say is it's generative if it got a reaction other than indifference. yet if we stay with it needing to generate writing or whatever in the audience then we have the case Halvard raised.).

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

434. Michael Kelleher

Literary Buffalo Newsletter 11.24.08-11.30.08

Mon 24 Nov 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
11.24.08-11.30.08

EVENTS THIS WEEK

Visit the Literary Buffalo calendar at www.justbuffalo.org for more detailed info on these events. All events free and open to the pubic unless otherwise noted.

11.24.08

Rooftop Poetry Club at Buffalo State College
Andrew Zawacki and Katy Lederer
Poetry Reading
Monday, November 24, 4:30 PM
E.H. Butler Library, Rm. 210

11.27.08

HAPPY THANKSGIVING

For your reading and culinary pleasure, take a look at Buffalo poetry maven/culinary whiz kid Geoffrey Gatza's annual Thanksgiving Menu Poem:

Thanksgiving Menu Poem
Guest of Honor: Anne Waldman
All invited!
Online now at http://www.blazevox.org/thanks.htm

11.29.08

Just Buffalo Interdisciplinary Event
Poetry and Fashion
Performances by Phranchiz, Lonnie Harrell, and Ten Thousand
Hosted by Dr. Anthony Neal
Saturday, November 29, 7:30 PM
Uptown Performing Arts Theater, 3165 Bailey Ave., Bflo

JUST BUFFALO MEMBER WRITER CRITIQUE GROUP

http://www.justbuffalo.org/docs/Writer_Critique_Group.pdf

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____
Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

435. Halvard Johnson
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Got your point, Troy. The hyperbole was also noted.

Hal

"Take what you can use and let the rest go by."
--Ken Kesey

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 9:02 PM, Troy Camplin wrote:

> Pettiness and purposefully missing the point are also not generative.
>
> Troy
>
> _____
> From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 11:57:56 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.

Hal

You have no enemies in this folder.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:

Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

Troy Camplin

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Jim,

You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not > openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

>
> *Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of photography?*
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.
>
> the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you mention, of course.
>
> for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or http://vispo.com/arteroids
>
> the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field. dbCinema is generative.
>
> you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation. sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification.

that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time.
some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time.
like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given program will halt.

"though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach."

Well, pop can be a powerful art form.

sure.

"Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."

In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.

true.

ja
guidelines

↑ Index

436. Alexander Jorgensen

Self-promotion - Visual Poetry and more... Alexander Jorgensen

Mon 24 Nov 2008

---

http://www.venerealkittens.blogspot.com/2008/10/alexander-jorgensen.html

For those interested, here are examples of what I'll call a "fresh wave" of visual poetry (and I use visual poetry, because I think, and this is my need, that vispo sounds too sterile for my liking) - along with a poem not otherwise found online (as it first appeared in Noon #4).

Hope you enjoy. Will say thanks ahead of time to those who do opt to visit. Incidentally, this online journal is really worth a look. Matina Stamatakis does an exceptional job with it.

Regards,
Alexander Jorgensen

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 4:01 AM

I would take reflection as "generative" in that way. It is producing something. I would argue that if it produced indifference, though, it's not really generative of anything.

Thanks for the clarification.

Troy

From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 5:27:37 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

When some people call art 'generative', they mean it stimulates them to write or whatever. I take it that's your usage, Troy.

But the term 'generative art' has another meaning. It refers to a type of art where the work of art, itself, generates not a response in the audience but the visible or audible (or whatever) manifestation of the viewed work of art. So, typically, this sort of work of art is an executable, digital work, an app, a program, though it needn't be. Could be an analog machine or perhaps, on a more conceptual level, injunctions to do this or that. Though, in that case, the piece itself is not really doing the 'generation' and it probably wouldn't be of much interest to people interested in 'generative art'.

Just to clarify the term.

On another note. A work could stimulate others to reflect. That needn't be stimulating them to create.

Would that be 'generative' in your sense? Is that of value? If so, and it is not generative, then not all art is generative in your sense.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

437. Alexander Jorgensen
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

I think this is a really important posting. Thanks, Amy.

I kept wondering what all those silent list members were thinking.

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list member found problematic. The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote strains of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist & here's a list.

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ... worth ignoring. In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were unaware of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human and possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen as the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual prowess.

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment and the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of some terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out something we've said that could be offensive.

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

438. Tisa Bryant

Re: Canadian language writers/poets

Mon 24 Nov 2008

"experimental" and not "language" ? but I offer:

Nicole Brossard
M. NourbeSe Philip
Louky Bersianik
Madeleine Gagnon
France Theoret
Roy Miki
Christian Bok
Derek MacCormack
Corey Frost

-----Original Message-----
>From: John Cunningham <[redacted]>
>Sent: Nov 24, 2008 8:28 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
>Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it,

>you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of >language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in >your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls
>most of Canada's language writers emanated.
>John Cunningham
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On
>Behalf Of George Bowering
>Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
>You're kidding!
>
>
>On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
>
>> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of >> Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down
>> Canadian
>> language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any >> Canadian
>> language poets. Thanks.
>> John Cunningham
>>
>> welcome.html
>>
>
>G. Harry Bowering, OC
>Worth the trouble.
>
>
>Internal Virus Database is out of date.
>Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
>Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
>7:19 PM
>

↑ Index

439. Tisa Bryant
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Mon 24 Nov 2008

There's also Christian Bok & Margaret Atwood's Ground Works: Avante-Garde for Thee, House of Anansi Press, 2003

-----Original Message-----
>From: Amanda Earl <[redacted]>
>Sent: Nov 23, 2008 8:30 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
>try the anthology Shift and Switch edited by Jason Christie and
>a.rawlings and derek beaulieu
>http://www.themercurypress.ca/?q=books/shift_switch
>
>i also recommend the Canadian site Ditchpoetry.com which includes a >lot of experimental poetry, and perhaps language poetry and links to >those who write it.
>
>best,
>Amanda Earl
>

↑ Index

440. amy king
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Mark,

Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a response to someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.

As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members, even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's concerns? Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp when we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is to express his consternation over the use of a term within this community? Do we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?

You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did not warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.

It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or not aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of language,' regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it simply shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us into all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being "misunderstood."

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
Amy:

Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language. Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.

Mark
--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list member
found problematic. The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote strains of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist & here's a list.

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ... worth ignoring. In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were unaware of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human and possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen as the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual prowess.

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment and the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of some terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out something we've said that could be offensive.

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

441. Sarah Sarai

Re: Canadian language writers/poets

Mon 24 Nov 2008

. . . the Canadian language? . . . sounds like a northern patois

↑ Index

442. Mark Weiss

Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Mon 24 Nov 2008

I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no need to light fires.

Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us would try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in the language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.

Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers' list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the apples and oranges.

Mark

PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, when separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like "us." Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.

Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined Nigeria.

None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.

At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
>Mark,
>
>Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this >listserv, have joined a community of writers. Self righteous >indignation as a response to someone asking for a little sensitivity >when it comes to issues of race doesn't exactly work towards >respecting group decorum.
>
>As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other >members, even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other >member's concerns? Are we so certain of our positions on exactly >how language works, esp when we use it, that we must let Obododimma >Oha know just how wrong he is to express his consternation over the >use of a term within this community? Do we even bother to wonder >if we've insulted other list members?
>
>You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist >implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out >that the usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that >certainly did not warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
>
>It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or >not aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business >of language,' regardless of just who we're using it around and who >we think it simply shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise
>-- which is exactly the abstracted mentality that ignores who we're >talking with and gets us into all manner of nastiness on a daily >basis in the name of being "misunderstood."
>
>Be well,
>
>Amy
>
>_____
>
>
>
>

>
>Recent work
>
>http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
>
>
>Amy's Alias
>
>http://amyking.org/
>
>--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
>Amy:
>
>Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
>Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
>
>Mark
>--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>From: amy king <[redacted]>
>Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
>To: [redacted]
>Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
>
> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list
>member
>found problematic. The latter said so.
>
>Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote strains
>of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions >weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
>here's a list.
>
>Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and
>noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
>
>The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ...
worth
>ignoring.
>In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same >institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying >sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls

>for >sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were >unaware >of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity >should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human
and >possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen
>as >the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual >prowess.
>
>This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing >discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment
>and
>the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the >implications of some >terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out
>something
>we've said that could be offensive.
>
>Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still >trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications of my >actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what >Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
>
>An excerpt:
>
>"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being >able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the >street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not >possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial >minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that >over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have >most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as >it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list >is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely >heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
>
>and
>
>"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was >operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After

>the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I >fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,
>the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to >outweigh the benefits."
>
>Please read the entire note here:
>http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
>
>and
>
>"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he >found
>close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
>through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this >disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
>reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the >Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally >disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim >desired.
>
>Such is often the case with almost all message boards
>and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
>and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
>on the vast majority of message boards."
>
>http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and-listservs.html
>
>
>Be well,
>
>Amy
>
>
>_____
>
>
>
>
>
>Recent work
>

>http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
>
>
>Amy's Alias
>
>http://amyking.org/
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

443. Ryan Daley

Re: What we're called, was Re: David

Mon 24 Nov 2008

Obododimma & Others,

I have taken much from this discussion. I think just talking about this, no matter the timbre of our responses, has given me the chance to discuss language and its repercussions...something I rarely get to do otherwise.

-Ryan

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 4:38 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Well, I guess I have I have made my point in this thread and cannot compel anyone to give that point a second thought. By writing about "some wars starting from recklessness in the use of language", I was not necessarily addressing your analysis, or your use of words. I was simply referring to the orientation of > say-it-the-way-you-like-it-don't-care-about-what-anyone-feels. It's good that Anny Ballardini gave an example of a personal experience he had when he > used the expression "working as hard as a negro". For him, he didn't mean any prejudice. But someone there saw something else in the analogy and got offended. And what did Ballardini do next?One has to decide for oneself how to manage one's language and situations that unfold from language use in a world where people indeed see language as social semiotic.

For me, this is where the thread ends.

Regards.
Obododimma.

On Thu, Nov 20, 2008 at 12:37 AM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
wrote:

It's always interesting to be the butt of sarcasm, but accuracy also counts. I was I thought pointing out the large gray areas, and talking about appropriateness (albeit with tongue wandering into cheek at times). I doubt
that I've caused too many wars today.

But your examples present some interesting issues. Policeman became obsolete as a generic term when women were allowed to join police forces, and other terms that cover both genders, like cops, police, or police officers, took over, because it would have been absurd to do otherwise.
But
we refer to policemen and policewomen when appropriate--it's not anachronistic to point out a policewoman to someone who needs help, if that's who's available. The word stewardess, which is the term I think
you were searching for, became an issue because it had an extraprofessional use as fetish. That survives to an extent, but probably more than the word itself, which dates back to when cabin crews were exclusively female (and exclusively young--there were age discrimination suits about that).
Poetess
had largely fallen out of fashion by the time modern feminism arrived, relegated to designating only some women poets. And it's a good thing that it died--the attitude expressed by the word had become poisonous.

These are all questions of gender, in a language that has become less and less gendered over the past thousand years. It's not something that speakers
of more gendered languages worry about too much, because to do something about it would require the restructuring of grammar. Airplane crews are still hotes and hotesses, actors are comedians and comediennes, etc, and
the French sun is masculine and the moon feminine, while in German it's the reverse. So the battles are fought elsewhere. In modern English there were so few distinct masculine and feminine forms for human occupations that most of the work of remaking the language would involve the renaming of the beasts--stallion and mare, buck and doe, etc. Don't mistake me--I'm plenty aware of gender issues. I'm talking about the genders of articles, nouns, pronouns and adjectives.

A travel article in today's New York Times web edition, "The Proud Indians of Chiapas," has attracted a lot of comments, mostly about the use of the word Indian. Many of the respondents pointed out that in Chiapas, and Latin America in general, the (recently) preferred term is "indigena" (which is both masculine and feminine, by the way). The objection noted to Indian is that it's inaccurate. In Spanish it's worse than that--Indio is often a derogatory term, and India in some places is a synonym for whore. But the article is written for gringos. In the US there's no unanimity among (let's call them) first peoples about what to call themselves. Native American doesn't seem to have caught on, though it appeared to for a while, and members of a lot of tribes prefer to be called American Indians and don't mind that their reservations are generically called Indian reservations. In the country at large Indian is nowhere near as derogatory as Indio or India. It apparently didn't raise eyebrows among the Times staffers.

It's not up to me, it's up to the people so designated, who have a long history of persecution by whatever name. Not so the compound noun Nigerian scam. It's hard for me to believe that anyone uses it with derogation of Nigerians in general in mind, and I don't think there's a shred of antiNigerian sentiment in the US, where most people would be hard put to say what a Nigerian is.

But ok, what about the name Nigeria--Blackland? Is that an acceptable inheritance from the colonialist past?

If this thread continues, it would be nice if it involved discussion rather than verbal violence. The issues are interesting in themselves.

Mark

At 02:53 AM 11/18/2008, Obododimma Oha wrote:

Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does n Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does not change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance, continues using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess" (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess" (instead of simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time. Perhaps you are also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not and would not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense with communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the world start from recklessness in the use of words. --- Obododimma Oha.

---

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

444. Obododimma Oha

Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Mon 24 Nov 2008

I didn't want to come into this debate, but it seems to me that Mark Weiss really has an orientation in language use that he thinks is entirely healthy and cannot accommodate to others. Quite unfortunate. I thought that, by referring to his age, he should be helping us (who are supposedly younger) to be a little more cautious in our use of words. I was amazed when I came across terms such as "Moslem Hausa" and "Christian Ibo" in his post that I am responding to. Shocking! Maybe he doesn't know that millions of Hausa people are Christians! And maybe he doesn't know that some Igbo (not "Ibo") people are Muslims (one of my cousins is!), adherents of African Traditional Religion, Eckists, Guru Maharajists, etc. How then can he characterize a whole ethnic group like the Hausa as being Muslim? Yes, it is true that many Hausa people are Muslims, but that does not make the whole group Muslim. I am afraid that in using the term, Mark has become a victim of the political rhetoric that tries to use religion as shibboleth. It is such shibboleth that Ojukwu's war rhetoric tried to arm itself with, to attract international Christian sympathy during the war. I am Igbo myself and did support the Biafran cause, but now, as somebody with a PhD in Stylistics (specifically in War Rhetoric and a criminologist), I can, without appearing disloyal to Biafra, tell what Ojukwu was trying to do when he used the terms "Muslim Hausa Fulani" or "Islamic North". It would be a pity if the politician is now more clever than the poet the vates, the seer, the everything! But Mark is not a politician and should know the cost of words in the marketplace of meaning making.Mark, please, don't take offence at this: think seriously about your tendency to stick to your views, and refusal to welcome the fact that you could learn from another person!Be well, poet. Obododimma.

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no need to light fires.
>
> Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us would try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in the language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the

Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.

Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers' list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the apples and oranges.

Mark

PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, when separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like "us." Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.

Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined Nigeria.

None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.

At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:

Mark,

Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a response to someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.

As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members, even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's concerns? Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp when we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is to express his consternation over the use of a term within this community? Do we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?

You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did not warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.

It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or not aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of language,' regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it simply shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us into all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being "misunderstood."

Be well,

Amy

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
Amy:

Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.

Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.

Mark
--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list member
found problematic. The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote strains
of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
here's a list.

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and
noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ... worth
ignoring.
In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were unaware of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human and possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen
as
the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual
prowess.

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment
and
the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of some terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out

something
we've said that could be offensive.

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards
and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism > and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

>
> http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and-listservs.html
>
> Be well,
>
> Amy
>
> _____
>
> Recent work
>
> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
> Amy's Alias
>
> http://amyking.org/
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

445. George Bowering
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Mon 24 Nov 2008

I mean, I couldnt believe that you yourself didn't know the field as well as anyone,.

gb

On Nov 24, 2008, at 5:28 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it, > you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in > your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls
> most of Canada's language writers emanated.
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of George Bowering
> Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
> You're kidding!
>
> On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
>
> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down

> Canadian
> language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any > Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham
>
> welcome.html
>
> G. Harry Bowering, OC
> Worth the trouble.
>
> guidelines
> Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
> 7:19 PM
>
> welcome.html

G. Bowering
Knows which door the tiger's behind.

↑ Index

446. Vera Renczi
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Mon 24 Nov 2008

I think it's funny that you are creating a coarse and yet you seem to have very limited knowledge of the subject, but perhaps that is how it's done when one teaches

Colin smith

Dorthy Trujillo Lusk

Stephen Cain

Margaret Christakos

Daniel F Bradley

Victor Coleman

Christopher Dewdney

V

**

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 8:28 AM, John Cunningham
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it, you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls most of Canada's language writers emanated.
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of George Bowering
> Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
> You're kidding!
>
> On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
>
> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham
>
> welcome.html
>
> G. Harry Bowering, OC
> Worth the trouble.
>
> Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

447. Troy Camplin
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Now, if I were to answer your point in a generative manner, I would point out that Picasso has in fact caused me to write poems, so his work is cross-generative. I've also been influenced to write works based on feelings evoked by music. Keats' "Ode on a Grecian Urn" was a result of his having gone to see a show of Greek artifacts. An art work does not have to be generative into the same art form, and it does not have to make everyone be generative of art work, either -- though telling others about what you experienced is also a form of generativeness many non-artists can and do engage in.

Troy

_____
From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 24, 2008 9:58:18 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Got your point, Troy. The hyperbole was also noted.

Hal

"Take what you can use and let the rest go by."
--Ken Kesey

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 9:02 PM, Troy Camplin wrote:

> Pettiness and purposefully missing the point are also not generative.
>
> Troy
>
> _____
> From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 11:57:56 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.

Hal

You have no enemies in this folder.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:

Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

Troy Camplin

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Jim,

You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to *take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of photography?*

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.

the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you mention, of course.

for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or http://vispo.com/arteroids

the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field. dbCinema is generative.

you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation. sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification. that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time. some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time. like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given program will halt.

"though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach."

Well, pop can be a powerful art form.

sure.

> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to some > other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>
> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.
>
> true.
>
> ja

↑ Index

448. Troy Camplin

Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Mon 24 Nov 2008

I clarified a bit in my response to Halvard what I meant by "generative" in the sense I was using it. Not everyone can be artistically generative. Some people just feel the need to share in a positive manner what they experienced. "To generate" is to grow and to reproduce. So let me go further: neither indifference nor a negative reaction to a work is generative (and I'm not sure "indifference" can be generated -- it seems to me to be a neutral state and not an emotional state at all). A work that is generative in this sense, then, is also a beautiful work. I was thinking of Elaine Scarry's comment in On Beauty that the experience of beauty makes you want to reproduce it. That can be as simple as telling others about it, getting others to come share it with you, etc., or as complex as writing a symphony or a sonnet or making a sculpture of a painting in response to it. A work that is generative for me is not necessarily one that influences me to make another work of the same kind -- or even results in an immediate response in some other genre. Things are not so linear and clear-cut that way. There is no linear cause-and-effect in artistic influence, inspiration, etc.

Troy

From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 24, 2008 8:39:20 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> I would take reflection as "generative" in that way. It is producing something. I would argue that if it produced indifference, though, it's not really generative of anything.
>
> Thanks for the clarification.
>
> Troy

Except indifference? Surely it generated indifference?

But no matter.

Because art is invisible, indifference does not always signify acute perception. Even when art is visible, this is true. Just because even the whole world is initially indifferent does not mean much, sometimes. The twist is sometimes incomprehensible for a while, foreign, not obviously relevant, emotionally unrecognized, yadayada.

I don't see 'generativeness' as a useful measure of artistic quality. Instead, think of it as a property that some art has for some people and not for others. A kind of joint property shared by the work and some people. They connected somehow. Com port not null.

Or, if we use the definition I used of generativeness (which is how i normally use it concerning art), then think of generativeness as a property works of art are said to have when they themselves somehow generate art algorithmically. This is not a judgement but a categorization by other criteria.

I don't think Halvard was being petty. He made an observation that occurred to me also. Namely, if you use generativeness as a criterion to determine what's great art or even just art, you begin the construction with difficulties, big leaks in the hull. If I'm not mistaken, that ship has never sailed to glory. It just doesn't really lend itself to being used in such a way. Not to say it isn't a useful distinction, but the tool can be formulated more objectively, particularly when generativeness isn't made to be measured by vague audience reaction (anything other than indifference is generative? then it is a distinction without significant difference, in the scheme of things, because all we can say is it's generative if it got a reaction other than indifference. yet if we stay with it needing to generate writing or whatever in the audience then we have the case Halvard raised.).

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

449. Steensen,Sasha
Bonfire Broadside--Alice Notley
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Bonfire Press is pleased to announce the publication of
"To Ric" by Alice Notley.

DESCRIPTION:
Broadside printed using lead type. Signed by author. 12 x 10. (2008). Edition of 75 copies.
$10 (includes shipping; Canada, $12; all other countries $14.50).

For more information, please visit:

http://bonfirepress.colostate.edu

↑ Index

450. steve russell
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Mon 24 Nov 2008

---

hasn't Harold Bloom been saying something about generative art for the longest???.... He refers to it as "the anxiety of influence."

--- On Sun, 11/23/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 23, 2008, 10:02 PM

Pettiness and purposefully missing the point are also not generative.

Troy

_____
From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 11:57:56 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.

Hal

You have no enemies in this folder.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.
>
> Troy Camplin
>
>
>
> _____
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
> Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
>
> Jim,
>
> You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea
> of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an > algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a
not > openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.
>
> Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was > applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to > take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected > light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those > photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of > photography?

>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>
> On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the >>> opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural >>> kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized.
>>> In
>>> that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.
>>>
>>
>> the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you >> mention, of course.
>>
>> for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or >> http://vispo.com/arteroids
>>
>> the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with >> proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field.
>> dbCinema is generative.
>>
>> you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation.
>> sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of >> art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification.
>> that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are >> no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time.
>> some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time.

>> like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given >> program will halt.
>>
>> "though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension
so some >>> artists
>>> like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions.
In a >>> sense, this is a pop approach."
>>>
>>> Well, pop can be a powerful art form.
>>>
>>
>> sure.
>>
>> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to
>>> some >>> other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>>>
>>> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard >>> it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative >>> to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard
to >>> actualize. They are a limited number of them.
>>>
>>
>> true.
>>
>>
>> ja
guidelines
>>
>
>

↑ Index

451. K. R. Waldrop
3 new titles from Burning Deck
Mon 24 Nov 2008

3 new Burning Deck titles are available from:
Small Press Distribution, www.spdbooks.org or [redacted]
www.burningdeck.com
and in Europe, after Jan.1, 2009, from H Press: www.hpress.no

1. DICHTEN =, NO. 10: 16 NEW (TO AMERICAN READERS) POETS translated from the German by A. Duncan, T. Frazer, N. Grindell, C. Hawkey & R. Waldrop Poetry, 144 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN 978-1-886224-92-6
original paperback $14
Publication date: December 15, 2008

A magazine issue with poems by Ann Cotton, Franz Josef Czernin, Michael Donhauser, Ute Eisinger, Daniel Falb, Hendrik Jackson, Marget Kreidl, Bert Papenfuss, Steffen Popp, Monika Rinck, Farhad Showghi, Hans Thill, Raphael Urweider, Anja Utler, Ron Winkler, and Uljana Wolf.

The poets in this issue, mostly in their thirties and forties, show great formal diversity. The works range from the sound explorations of Anja Utler to the camp sonnets of Ann Cotten; from Czernin's puns and permutations to Rinck's and Falb's deceptively simple parlando; from Donhauser's grammatical disruptions to Papenfuss's baroque lists and "sassy East tone." But they all share a concern with form and with language as material. The poets have also all received at least one prize.

2. Série d'Ecriture #21:
Isabelle Baladine Howald
SECRET OF BREATH
translated from the French by Eléna Rivera
Poetry, 64 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN 978-1-886224-91-9 original paperback $14
Publication date: December 15, 2008

SECRET OF BREATH is a suite for two voices — a voice from outside and a voice from inside, a voice of the living and a voice of the dying — in a race against death and toward death. Caught in a narrative frame and a landscape marked by war, snow, cold, speed, and separation, these two voices, even while facing death, embody the approach of love. The secret of breath is as much a kiss as a last sigh.

ISABELLE BALADINE HOWALD lives and works in Strasbourg, where she directs the “Philosophical and Literary Encounters” of the Librairie Kléber. Her books of poetry include LES NOMS, TRÈS BAS (A Passage, 1986) and LES ETATS DE LA DÉMOLITION (Editions Jacques Brémond, 2002). Our present volume, SECRET DES SOUFFLES, is her most recent book (éditions Melville, 2004).

ELÉNA RIVERA was born in Mexico City and spent her childhood, to the age of thirteen, in Paris. She is the author of MISTAKES, ACCIDENTS AND A WANT OF LIBERTY (Barque Press, 2006) and SUGGESTIONS AT EVERY TURN (Seeing Eye Books, 2005). Her translations have appeared in the CHICAGO REVIEW and CIRCUMFERENCE: POETRY IN TRANSLATION. She was recently awarded the 2007 Witter Bynner Poetry Translator Residency at the Santa Fe Institute for the Arts.

3. Série d’Ecriture Supplement #5
Anne Portugal
QUISITE MOMENT
translated from the French by Rosmarie Waldrop
Poetry, 24 pages, offset, saddlestitched
ISBN 978-1-886224-95-7 chapbook $8
Publication date: December 15, 2008

As Anne Portugal has said, her poetry breaks with elevated subjects as well as with the beauty of phrases. “Poetry is is a laboratory of languages. It is first and foremost physical.” Here, she truncates words to give rise to new rhythms, puzzlement, and sheer fun.

ANNE PORTUGAL was born in Angers, in 1949. She lives and teaches in Paris. She is also the model of a famous “Poets’ Calendar.” Her most recent books of poetry are DANS LA REPRODUCTION EN DEUX PARTIES ÉGALES DES PLANTES ET DES ANIMAUX (1999) and DÉFINITIF BOB (2002). Norma Cole has translated NUDE (Kelsey St. Press, 2001).

↑ Index

452. Martha Cinader Mims
L&BH Radio Hour and Open Mic Nov. 25
Mon 24 Nov 2008

L&BH Radio Hour and Open Mic Nov. 25, 8-9pm PST

At the start of the show I will be joined by Listen & Be Heard Theatre Critic Maria Vrobel, to talk about holiday shows around the Bay Area and hear her recommendations.

As always, the show will also feature announcements posted at Listen & Be Heard Network Arts News, some poetry and/or storytelling, some arts editorializing, and calls from listeners with thoughts to share and arts announcements.

Poets are encouraged to call in with a poem.

Listen, Chat and "Click to Talk" at
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/listenandbeheard/2008/11/26/LBH-Radio-Hour-Nov-25
Call-in Number: [redacted]

Please join me to listen and be heard.

Wishing you Peace and Poetry

martha cinader mims

Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

Get Skype and call me for free.

↑ Index

453. amy king
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Mark,

I'm writing as a member of this listserv community who is slightly appalled and very bewildered by the lack of care & concern evidenced sent in a number of replies to Oha.

And yes, I have indeed thought much of Oha's request and analyzed my experience with the term, which is limited too. You might recall that my initial response to Oha was one of surprise, apology, and a note to say that I hadn't thought of the implications of using the term.

Since then, my conclusion is that a) all email scams do not originate in Nigeria, but in fact, originate from everywhere, including the U.S., b) I don't refer to email scams that originate from elsewhere as "British Scams" or "American scams", and c) isn't it simply easier, and more respectful as per Oha's request, to refer to these scams as "email scams", both here in this community and elsewhere? How hard is it to acknowledge the risk, make the switch, and let Oha know his note made me think? Why must he receive belligerence? I'm amazed at his consistent grace and civility through all of this.

My sense is, after much discussion with my students about the topic, that the average American doesn't know much about Nigeria or Nigerian culture, myself included. So why would I risk perpetuating the negativity that goes with calling email scams, "Nigerian scams?" Similarly, many Americans didn't have much reference when they heard the word "Arab." Post 9/11, we've got "Arab terrorists," which has pretty much become synonymous with "Arabs" in our culture now (of course, generally speaking), and look at the negativity that term generates.

Are all terrorists "Arab"? Are all Arabs "terrorists"? Are all email scams perpetuated by "Nigerians?" Are all Nigerians email scammers? When I find it difficult to come up with much to say about Nigeria, I don't want my limited vocabulary to be about Nigerian scams after all, nor do I want to reinforce that vocabulary elsewhere. This was no great leap nor grave concession. Moreover, what grieves me, again, are the resistances to the validity of Oha's request sent in the face of what could only have been a difficult one to make. And now, the refusal to acknowledge that this list has a history of such resistance--and that we may be carrying on tradition.

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work
http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias
http://amyking.org/

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?")
and > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no
> need to light fires.
>
> Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is
the essence > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that

have > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us would > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in
the > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with
the > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by
the > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited
> denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds
it > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
>
> Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
> list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the > apples and oranges.
>
> Mark
>
> PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule,
when > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like

"us."
> Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.
>
> Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book
"Walking," which I'm > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
Nigeria.
>
> None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
>
>
> At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
>
>> Mark,
>>
>> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a response to >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race
>> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
>>
>> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members,
>> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's concerns?
>> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp
when >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is
to >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this community? Do

>> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
>>
>> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that
the >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did
not >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
>>
>> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is
"unintentional" or not >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of language,' >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
simply >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us into
>> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being
>> "misunderstood."
>>
>> Be well,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>> _____
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Recent work
>>
>> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>>
>>
>>
>> Amy's Alias
>>

>> http://amyking.org/
>>
>> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
>> Amy:
>>
>> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
>> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
>>
>> Mark
>> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>> From: amy king <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
>>
>> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list
>> member
>> found problematic. The latter said so.
>>
>> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
>> strains
>> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
>> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
>> here's a list.
>>
>> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
and
>> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
>>
>> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
...
>> worth
>> ignoring.
>> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls

>> for >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
>> unaware >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity
>> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human
>> and >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being >> seen
>> as
>> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual >> prowess.
>>
>> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the >> ensuing
>> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist >> sentiment
>> and
>> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of
>> some
>> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out
>> something
>> we've said that could be offensive.
>>
>> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications
>> of my >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what
>> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
>>
>> An excerpt:
>>
>> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of

being >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon
on the >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being,
as >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics
list
>> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
>>
>> and
>>
>> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist.
After
>> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,
>> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to >> outweigh the benefits."
>>
>> Please read the entire note here:
>>
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
>>
>> and
>>
>> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
>> found
>> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
>> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
>> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the

>> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim >> desired.
>>
>> Such is often the case with almost all message boards
>> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
>> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
>> on the vast majority of message boards."
>>
>>
>>
http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and-listservs.html
>>
>>
>> Be well,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>>
>> _____
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Recent work
>>
>> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>>
>>
>>
>> Amy's Alias
>>
>> http://amyking.org/
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>>

>>
>>
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>>
>>
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

454. Mark Weiss
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

I apologize for my spelling. Ibo was the standard spelling back then in the US media. Igbo and the half a dozen variant spellings I know mostly from Cuban sources, and I thought they referred to a different people.

This from http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Demographics_of_Nigeria#Religions_.282000_estimate.29,
"Demographics of Nigeria," whose accuracy I of course can't vouch for:

Religious Affiliation Among Major Ethnic Groups

Source: <http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org>http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org * Hausa: 25,900,527 (Muslims 99.90%, Christians 0.10%) * Yoruba: 22,921,473 (Christians 60.00%, Muslims 36.38%, Animists 3.00%, Non Religious 0.50%, Baha'is 0.07%, Atheists 0.05%) * Igbo: 22,926,340 (Christians 97.00%, Animists 2.00%, Non Religious 0.80%, Atheists 0.10%, Baha'is 0.10%)

I've left out the rest of the table. If you have better sources, I'd be happy to learn. I'm of course aware that religion was used to manipulate international opinion during the war.

I learn from others all the time, usually through civil discussion. Like most of us, it's not the first time that I've thought about these issues, and what I use of the language has changed, in part because of input from others. I remain unconvinced in this instance. I don't think, as you suggest, that that's because of a character flaw.

I'm content to let this discussion end, but I'm not content to be insulted. If you want to have at me again, please take it backchannel. Front or backchannel, you might want to read your posts before sending them.

Mark

At 01:52 PM 11/24/2008, you wrote:
>I didn't want to come into this debate, but it seems to me that Mark Weiss >really has an orientation in language use that he thinks is entirely healthy >and cannot accommodate to others. Quite unfortunate. I thought that, by >referring to his age, he should be helping us (who are supposedly younger) >to be a little more cautious in our use of words. I was amazed when I came >across terms such as "Moslem Hausa" and "Christian Ibo" in his post that I >am responding to. Shocking! Maybe he doesn't know that millions of Hausa >people are Christians! And maybe he doesn't know that some Igbo (not "Ibo") >people are Muslims (one of my cousins is!), adherents of African Traditional >Religion, Eckists, Guru Maharajists, etc. How then can he characterize a >whole ethnic group like the Hausa as being Muslim? Yes, it is true that many >Hausa people are Muslims, but that does not make the whole group Muslim. I >am afraid that in using the term, Mark has become a victim of the political >rhetoric that tries to use religion as shibboleth. It is such shibboleth >that Ojukwu's war rhetoric tried to arm itself with, to attract >international Christian sympathy during the war. I am Igbo myself and did >support the Biafran cause, but now, as somebody with a PhD in Stylistics >(specifically in War Rhetoric and a criminologist), I can, without appearing >disloyal to Biafra, tell what Ojukwu was trying to do when he used the terms
>"Muslim Hausa Fulani" or "Islamic North". It would be a pity if the >politician is now more clever than the poet the vates, the seer, the >everything! But Mark is not a politician and should know the cost of words >in the marketplace of meaning making.Mark, please, don't take offence at >this: think seriously about your tendency to stick to your views, and >refusal to welcome the fact that you could learn from another person!Be >well, poet.

>Obododimma.
>
>
>On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid > > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and > > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree > > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no > > need to light fires.
> >
> > Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence > > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group > > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have > > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us
would > > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply > embedded in the > > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the > > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to > > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different > > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the > > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited > > denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards > > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it > > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
> >
> > Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but > > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
> > list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the > > apples and oranges.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> > PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more > > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been > > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes.
> When I was in > > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months.

We
> > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style > > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy
> > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer
> > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra > > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, when > > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa
of
> > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the > > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra > > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like "us."
> > Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to > > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation
by > > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then > > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't > > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the > short end.
> >
> > Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm > > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
Nigeria.
> >
> > None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the > > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
> >
> >
> > At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
> >
> >> Mark,
> >>
> >> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have > >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a > response to > >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race > >> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
> >>
> >> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other
members,

> >> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other > member's concerns?
> >> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language > works, esp when > >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is
to > >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this > community? Do
> >> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
> >>
> >> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist > >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the > >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did not > >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
> >>
> >> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or not > >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business > of language,' > >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it simply > >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the > >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us into
> >> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being > >> "misunderstood."
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>

> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
> >> Amy:
> >>
> >> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
> >> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
> >>
> >> Mark
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
> >> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> >> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
> >> To: [redacted]
> >> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
> >>
> >> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
list
> >> member
> >> found problematic. The latter said so.
> >>
> >> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
> >> strains
> >> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
> >> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
> >> here's a list.
> >>
> >> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
and
> >> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
> >>
> >> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to
be ...
> >> worth
> >> ignoring.
> >> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same > >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying > >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls
> >> for > >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
> >> unaware
> >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity > >> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being

human
> >> and > >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being > >> seen
> >> as
> >> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual > >> prowess.
> >>
> >> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the > >> ensuing
> >> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist > >> sentiment
> >> and
> >> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of
> >> some > >> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points
out
> >> something
> >> we've said that could be offensive.
> >>
> >> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still > >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications
> >> of my > >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what > >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
> >>
> >> An excerpt:
> >>
> >> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being > >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the > >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not > >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial > >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that > >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have > >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as > >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list > >> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely > >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was > >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After > >> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I > >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,

> >> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to > >> outweigh the benefits."
> >>
> >> Please read the entire note here:
> >> http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
> >> found
> >> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
> >> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this > >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
> >> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the > >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally > >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim > >> desired.
> >>
> >> Such is often the case with almost all message boards
> >> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
> >> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
> >> on the vast majority of message boards."
> >>
> >>
> >>
> http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and-listservs.html
> >>
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>

> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >
> >
>
>
>
>--
>Obododimma Oha
>Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>Dept. of English
>University of Ibadan
>Nigeria
>
>&
>
>Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>University of Ibadan
>
>Phone: [redacted];

> [redacted].
>

↑ Index

455. Ryan Daley
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Amy & Others,

I still feel like there's been a misreading of what the term "Nigerian email scam" refers to: particularly, the Nigerian 419 Letter DOES originate in Nigeria and the appeal, the voice of the email DID originate in Nigeria. Most people DO NOT refer to these emails as "Nigerian emails" but rather use the term "419 Letters." Using this term locates the particular email in question as being punishable by Code 419 in Nigeria, but doesn't assume that all authors are living in or nationals of Nigeria.

-Ryan

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 3:59 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Mark,
>
> I'm writing as a member of this listserv community who is slightly appalled and very bewildered by the lack of care & concern evidenced sent in a number of replies to Oha.
>
> And yes, I have indeed thought much of Oha's request and analyzed my experience with the term, which is limited too. You might recall that my initial response to Oha was one of surprise, apology, and a note to say that I hadn't thought of the implications of using the term.
>
> Since then, my conclusion is that a) all email scams do not originate in Nigeria, but in fact, originate from everywhere, including the U.S., b) I don't refer to email scams that originate from elsewhere as "British Scams" or "American scams", and c) isn't it simply easier, and more respectful as per Oha's request, to refer to these scams as "email scams", both here in this community and elsewhere? How hard is it to acknowledge the risk, make the switch, and let Oha know his note made me think? Why must he receive belligerence? I'm amazed at his consistent grace and civility through all of this.
>
> My sense is, after much discussion with my students about the topic, that the average American doesn't know much about Nigeria or Nigerian culture, myself included. So why would I risk perpetuating the negativity that goes with calling email scams, "Nigerian scams?" Similarly, many Americans didn't have much reference when they heard the word "Arab." Post 9/11,

we've got "Arab terrorists," which has pretty much become synonymous with "Arabs" in our culture now (of course, generally speaking), and look at the negativity that term generates.

Are all terrorists "Arab"? Are all Arabs "terrorists"? Are all email scams perpetuated by "Nigerians?" Are all Nigerians email scammers? When I find it difficult to come up with much to say about Nigeria, I don't want my limited vocabulary to be about Nigerian scams after all, nor do I want to reinforce that vocabulary elsewhere. This was no great leap nor grave concession. Moreover, what grieves me, again, are the resistances to the validity of Oha's request sent in the face of what could only have been a difficult one to make. And now, the refusal to acknowledge that this list has a history of such resistance--and that we may be carrying on tradition.

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work
http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias
http://amyking.org/

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
wrote:

I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no need to light fires.

Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us

*would
try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in the language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.*

*Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the apples and oranges.*

Mark

*PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy
regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer
bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, when separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra*

was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like "us."
Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.

Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined Nigeria.

None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.

At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:

Mark,

Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a response to someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.

As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members,
even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's concerns?
Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp when we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is to express his consternation over the use of a term within this community? Do
we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?

You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did

not
warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.

It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is
"unintentional" or not aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of
language,' regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
simply
shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets
us into
all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being
"misunderstood."

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
Amy:

Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.

Mark
--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
To: [redacted]

Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list member found problematic. The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote strains of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist & here's a list.

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ... worth ignoring. In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were unaware of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human and possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen as the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual prowess.

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment and the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of some terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out something we've said that could be offensive.

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to

outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:

http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

———

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

guidelines

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

456. Mark Weiss
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

I'm very tired of this, but I do appreciate your more reasonable tone.

One might have hoped that a discussion like this would lead, as I think Steve Vincent attempted, to a broader discussion of the remnants of difficult histories that all languages retain. What you or I or the list think about Nigerian scam will have little influence on broader usage. It's different in kind, I think, from current use of the word arab in the US, which is far more toxic than Nigerian scam and far more globalized, and also not something we can conveniently drop, as I suspect that with the passage of time Nigerian scam will be.

So that's where my question, to myself as well as to the discussion at large, leads. OK, arab can't be dropped from usage because it's what a large number of people call themselves, and the obloquy attached to it will pass away as circumstances change, hopefully in our lifetimes. But what about Steve's example, or the ones I mentioned, which for most of us don't carry over to a broader prejudice? What about words like "bugger," originally Bulgar? We cleanse the language, unconsciously, all the time--Dutch treat is the sole remnant in common use of a large amount of nastiness from 17th Century Anglo-Dutch wars.

So, my question is about the conscious cleansing of language--the sense of what's appropriate usage, and what merits the proverbial soaping. We don't have an official body, like the Academie Francaise, in charge of this (not that the Academie has been particularly successful of late--remember the circumflex?), and the dictionary-makers, who used to take it upon themselves to decide, have become increasingly democratic. Any such decision involves the ceding of linguistic choice. Which means it's a matter of case-by-case discussion, and case-by-case use. Unless we want the good old days of not very long ago, when books could be banned for officially unacceptable words.

Peace. I really do have other things to do.

Mark

At 03:59 PM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
>Mark,
>
>I'm writing as a member of this listserv community who is slightly >appalled and very bewildered by the lack of care & concern evidenced >sent in a number of replies to Oha.
>
>And yes, I have indeed thought much of Oha's request and analyzed my >experience with the term, which is limited too. You might recall >that my initial response to Oha was one of surprise, apology, and a >note to say that I hadn't thought of the implications of using the term.

>
>Since then, my conclusion is that a) all email scams do not >originate in Nigeria, but in fact, originate from everywhere, >including the U.S., b) I don't refer to email scams that originate >from elsewhere as "British Scams" or "American scams", and c) isn't >it simply easier, and more respectful as per Oha's request, to refer >to these scams as "email scams", both here in this community and >elsewhere? How hard is it to acknowledge the risk, make the >switch, and let Oha know his note made me think? Why must he >receive belligerence? I'm amazed at his consistent grace and >civility through all of this.
>
>My sense is, after much discussion with my students about the topic, >that the average American doesn't know much about Nigeria or >Nigerian culture, myself included. So why would I risk perpetuating >the negativity that goes with calling email scams, "Nigerian >scams?" Similarly, many Americans didn't have much reference when >they heard the word "Arab." Post 9/11, we've got "Arab terrorists," >which has pretty much become synonymous with "Arabs" in our culture >now (of course, generally speaking), and look at the negativity that >term generates.
>
>Are all terrorists "Arab"? Are all Arabs "terrorists"? Are all >email scams perpetuated by "Nigerians?" Are all Nigerians email >scammers? When I find it difficult to come up with much to say >about Nigeria, I don't want my limited vocabulary to be about >Nigerian scams after all, nor do I want to reinforce that vocabulary >elsewhere. This was no great leap nor grave concession. Moreover, >what grieves me, again, are the resistances to the validity of Oha's >request sent in the face of what could only have been a difficult >one to make. And now, the refusal to acknowledge that this list has >a history of such resistance--and that we may be carrying on tradition.
>
>Be well,
>
>Amy
>
>_____
>

>
>Recent work
>http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
>Amy's Alias
>http://amyking.org/
>
>
>
>On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>wrote:
>
> > I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid > > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?")
>and
> > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree > > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and >there's no
> > need to light fires.
> >
> > Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is
>the essence > > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a >group
> > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that
>have > > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us
would > > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in
>the > > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with
>the > > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's >even harder to > > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different > > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by
>the > > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is >limited
> > denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes >towards

> > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds
>it
> > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
> >
> > Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but > > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a >writers'
> > list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the > > apples and oranges.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> > PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more > > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never >been > > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I >was in > > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months.
We
> > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style > > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy
> > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer
> > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra > > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule,
>when
> > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa
of
> > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the > > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra > > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like
>"us."
> > Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to > > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and >starvation by
> > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then > > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm >aware can't > > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short >end.
> >

> > Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book
>"Walking," which I'm > > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
>Nigeria.
> >
> > None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the > > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
> >
> >
> > At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
> >
> >> Mark,
> >>
> >> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this >listserv, have > >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a >response to > >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of >race
> >> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
> >>
> >> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other
>members,
> >> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's >concerns?
> >> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp
>when > >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is
>to > >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this >community? Do
> >> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
> >>
> >> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist > >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that
>the > >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did
>not > >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
> >>
> >> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is
>"unintentional" or not

> >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of
>language,' > >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
>simply
> >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is >exactly the > >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets
>us into
> >> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being > >> "misunderstood."
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
> >> Amy:
> >>
> >> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
> >> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we >do.
> >>
> >> Mark
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
> >> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> >> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

> >> To: [redacted]
> >> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
> >>
> >> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
>list
> >> member
> >> found problematic. The latter said so.
> >>
> >> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
> >> strains
> >> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my >intentions
> >> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms
>exist &
> >> here's a list.
> >>
> >> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
>and
> >> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
> >>
> >> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
>...
> >> worth
> >> ignoring.
> >> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those >same > >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its >underlying > >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to >calls
> >> for > >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or >were
> >> unaware
> >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for >sensitivity
> >> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being >human
> >> and > >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
>being > >> seen

> >> as
> >> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his >intellectual > >> prowess.
> >>
> >> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the > >> ensuing
> >> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist > >> sentiment
> >> and
> >> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the >implications of
> >> some
> >> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points
out
> >> something
> >> we've said that could be offensive.
> >>
> >> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm >still > >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the >implications
> >> of my > >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some >of what
> >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
> >>
> >> An excerpt:
> >>
> >> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of
>being > >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon
>on the > >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is >not > >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial > >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that > >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have > >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being,
>as > >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics
>list

> >> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely > >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted >down."
> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he >was > >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist.
>After
> >> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I > >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For >me,
> >> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to > >> outweigh the benefits."
> >>
> >> Please read the entire note here:
> >>
>http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact >that he
> >> found
> >> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
> >> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this > >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of >Listserv
> >> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the > >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally > >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim > >> desired.
> >>
> >> Such is often the case with almost all message boards
> >> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
> >> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
> >> on the vast majority of message boards."
> >>
> >>
> >>
>http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-

and-listservs.html
> >>
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >
>guidelines
> >
>
>

>
>--
>Obododimma Oha
>Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>Dept. of English
>University of Ibadan
>Nigeria
>
>&
>
>Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>University of Ibadan
>
>Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
>
>

↑ Index

457. Obododimma Oha

Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Mon 24 Nov 2008

Those figures are totally wrong and have been seriously contested in Nigeria. The best place to go for such statistics is the relevant ministry of the Nigerian government and not Wiki. We know the uses and abuses of statistics! I don't know how those sources got their figures -- I suspect they simply saw every person saying salaam alaikum or putting on the long gown as "Muslim". Another point is that the Hausa are different from the Fulani, but some people tend to conflate the two groups. It is actually the Fulani (whose leader Othman dan Fodio conquered Hausaland in a jihad in the precolonial era) that are predominantly Muslims. I am away from Nigeria at the moment and cannot reach more reliable database. The point I had made in my previous note -- and which is more important -- is that Hausa and Igbo -- cannot be assigned to particular religions. It would be fallacious to say "Muslim Hausa" when some Hausa people are not Muslims. As a matter of fact, it is a form of assimilation that the non-Muslim Hausa in Nigeria have all along tried to resist. The Igbo society, too, is multi-religious and not necessarily "Christian". You should also know that today, in Nigeria, terms like "Muslim Hausa" and "Christian Igbo" are viewed (especially by the government) as inciting ethno-religious prejudice and violence. We, in Nigerian, have had series of religious crises and bloodshed, and would view any discourse that divides the nation along religious lines as wicked and anti-Nigerian.

Tomorrow, if you are appointed American Ambassador to Nigeria, Nigerians would not treat you as their friend if in addressing them you use terms such as "Muslim Hausa" and "Christian Igbo" and cite Wiki as your source!

My best regards, Mark.
-- Obododimma.

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 9:59 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> I apologize for my spelling. Ibo was the standard spelling back then in the US media. Igbo and the half a dozen variant spellings I know mostly from Cuban sources, and I thought they referred to a different people.
>
> This from http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Demographics_of_Nigeria#Religions_.282000_estimate.29, "Demographics of Nigeria," whose accuracy I of course can't vouch for:
>
> Religious Affiliation Among Major Ethnic Groups
>
> Source: <http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org> http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org
>  Hausa: 25,900,527 (Muslims 99.90%, Christians 0.10%)*
>  Yoruba: 22,921,473 (Christians 60.00%, Muslims 36.38%, Animists 3.00%, Non Religious 0.50%, Baha'is 0.07%, Atheists 0.05%)*
>  Igbo: 22,926,340 (Christians 97.00%, Animists 2.00%, Non Religious 0.80%, Atheists 0.10%, Baha'is 0.10%)*
>
> I've left out the rest of the table. If you have better sources, I'd be happy to learn. I'm of course aware that religion was used to manipulate international opinion during the war.
>
> I learn from others all the time, usually through civil discussion. Like most of us, it's not the first time that I've thought about these issues, and what I use of the language has changed, in part because of input from others. I remain unconvinced in this instance. I don't think, as you suggest, that that's because of a character flaw.
>
> I'm content to let this discussion end, but I'm not content to be insulted. If you want to have at me again, please take it backchannel. Front or backchannel, you might want to read your posts before sending them.
>
> Mark

At 01:52 PM 11/24/2008, you wrote:

*I didn't want to come into this debate, but it seems to me that Mark Weiss really has an orientation in language use that he thinks is entirely healthy and cannot accommodate to others. Quite unfortunate. I thought that, by referring to his age, he should be helping us (who are supposedly younger) to be a little more cautious in our use of words. I was amazed when I came across terms such as "Moslem Hausa" and "Christian Ibo" in his post that I am responding to. Shocking! Maybe he doesn't know that millions of Hausa people are Christians! And maybe he doesn't know that some Igbo (not "Ibo") people are Muslims (one of my cousins is!), adherents of African Traditional Religion, Eckists, Guru Maharajists, etc. How then can he characterize a whole ethnic group like the Hausa as being Muslim? Yes, it is true that many Hausa people are Muslims, but that does not make the whole group Muslim. I am afraid that in using the term, Mark has become a victim of the political rhetoric that tries to use religion as shibboleth. It is such shibboleth that Ojukwu's war rhetoric tried to arm itself with, to attract international Christian sympathy during the war. I am Igbo myself and did support the Biafran cause, but now, as somebody with a PhD in Stylistics (specifically in War Rhetoric and a criminologist), I can, without appearing disloyal to Biafra, tell what Ojukwu was trying to do when he used the terms
"Muslim Hausa Fulani" or "Islamic North". It would be a pity if the politician is now more clever than the poet the vates, the seer, the everything! But Mark is not a politician and should know the cost of words in the marketplace of meaning making.Mark, please, don't take offence at this: think seriously about your tendency to stick to your views, and refusal to welcome the fact that you could learn from another person!Be well, poet.
Obododimma.*

*On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
wrote:*

I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's *no

need to light fires.*

Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us would try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in the language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.

*Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the apples and oranges.*

Mark

*PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy
regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer
bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule,*

*when separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa
of the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of
the
resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like
"us."
Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation
by live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then
I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.*

*Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
Nigeria.*

None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.

At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:

Mark,

*Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv,
have joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a response to someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race
doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.*

*As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members, even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's concerns?
Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp
when
we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is to express his consternation over the use of a term within this community?
Do
we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?*

You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did not warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.

It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or not aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of language,' regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it simply shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us into all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being "misunderstood."

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
Amy:

Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language. Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.

Mark
--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
From: amy king <[redacted]>

Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list
member
found problematic. The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote strains
of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
here's a list.

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and
noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ...
worth
ignoring.
In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls
for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were unaware of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human
and possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen
as the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual
prowess.

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment
and the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications

*of
some
terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out something
we've said that could be offensive.*

*Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications
of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:*

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and

*"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,
the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to
outweigh the benefits."*

Please read the entire note here:

http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

*"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found
close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the* Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

guidelines

guidelines

> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

458. John Cunningham
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Unfortunately, the American language writers are much more well known than the Canadian. Furthermore, it is much easier in Vancouver to have knowledge due to the presence of Kootenay. John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 24, 2008 1:23 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

I mean, I couldnt believe that you yourself didn't know the field as well as anyone,.

gb

On Nov 24, 2008, at 5:28 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's > face it,
> you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of > language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also,
> right in > your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august
> halls
> most of Canada's language writers emanated.
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On
> Behalf Of George Bowering
> Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
> You're kidding!
>
> On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
>
> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of > Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down
> Canadian
> language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any

> Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham
>
> welcome.html
>
> G. Harry Bowering, OC
> Worth the trouble.
>
> guidelines
> Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
> 7:19 PM
>
> welcome.html

G. Bowering
Knows which door the tiger's behind.

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
7:19 PM

↑ Index

459. Robin Hamilton
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

<<
a) all email scams do not originate in Nigeria, but in fact, originate from everywhere, including the U.S.,
>>

Who's arguing this?

But what we're referring to is not simply any scam, not simply even any email scam, but to a quite prominent sub-variety -- the Spanish Prisoner Email Scam.

That would be an accurate way of referring to it, but somewhat cumbersome.

So what to name it?

I have to say, I'm surprised that no one has taken up what seems to me glaringly obvious, that the verbal *content of the text of the emails, from the start and continuing, is glaringly racist, in the originals and all sub-varieties, playing on stereotypical Western attitudes to the English linguistic competence of African first-language speakers.

{Jeezus fucking wept, we're arguing over what we *call a series Web-broadcasted texts that are *predicated, in their content, in a singularly slimy and racist use of implied linguistic responses. Leave aside the moral content of the texts themselves. Angels weep.}

If I had to put my money where my mouth is, the texts are written by highly-competent native English language speakers writing in blackface. And most likely, originating ultimately in the West.

<<
b) I don't refer to email scams that originate from elsewhere as "British Scams" or "American scams",
>>

What I am currently deluged with, in requests from Lloyds or Abbey National, for my bank details, are UK English region targeted scams.

Calling them "British" isn't racist (though it might have aspects of that) but blurs the fact that email scams hitting my Inbox are becoming more and more targetted, and misses the point that these scams are angled at a specifically *English (not a more generally UK British -- Scots or Welsh) audience.

<<
and c) isn't it simply easier, and more respectful as per Oha's request, to refer to these scams as "email scams",
>>

Except that we're talking about a *subset of a variety of email scams. I'd be happy to have a term that avoids "Nigerian" or even 419, but which acknowledges the history of not simply the activity of that scam but its current manifestation in cyberspace -- SPES[cam]?

As a last point, I'm dubious about Mark's worry about the connection between being gypped, and the Rom. I think this is a false parallel between being gypped and jewing someone down.

[Aside -- Mark, I'll go into details backchannel if you want about my doubts about the etymology of "gypped" as linked to the Rom -- the OED supports you, but the dates are totally wrong. I think this is an example of reverse folk-etymolygy.]

Robin

↑ Index

460. Jerome Rothenberg
Millennium-3 preview: Sousandrade
Mon 24 Nov 2008

A good chunk of "Wall Street Inferno" by the great Brazilian late-romantic/early-modernist Sousandrade appears on the University of California Press weblog as a preview of its appearance in Poems for the Millennium, volume 3: The University of California Book of Romantic and Postromantic Poetry (http://ucpress.typepad.com/ucpresslog/2008/10/wall-street-inferno-by-sousândrade.html). A different excerpt and the commentary from PM3 by me and Jeffrey Robinson is on my blog at http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2008/10/reconfiguring-romanticism-16.html, along with other previews from the big book.

First copies of the book have now reached me, well in advance of the mid-January pub date, so that Jeffrey and I are now considering readings & signings to mark the occasion.

Jerome Rothenberg
1026 San Abella
Encinitas, CA 92024
[redacted]
jrothenberg at cox.net

"There is an avant-garde that cannot be defeated."
M. Giroud, quoted in J.R., "Autobiography"

↑ Index

461. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: What we're called, was Re: David
Mon 24 Nov 2008

---

just calling cops pigs was bad enough

they weren't all bad and pigs themselves tho a trifle messy are very nice orderly and smart creatures
tasty as well
ah language the jew thing the jap thing the mick thing like lenny bruce said if we hadn't paid so much attention to it
it mighta gone away

On Mon, 24 Nov 2008 13:35:40 -0500 Ryan Daley <[redacted]> writes:
> Obododimma & Others,
>
> I have taken much from this discussion. I think just talking about > this, no > matter the timbre of our responses, has given me the chance to > discuss > language and its repercussions...something I rarely get to do > otherwise.

>
> -Ryan
>
> On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 4:38 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > Well, I guess I have I have made my point in this thread and > cannot compel > > anyone to give that point a second thought. By writing about "some > wars
> > starting from recklessness in the use of language", I was not > necessarily > > addressing your analysis, or your use of words. I was simply > referring to > > the orientation of
> > say-it-the-way-you-like-it-don't-care-about-what-anyone-feels.
> It's good > > that Anny Ballardini gave an example of a personal experience he > had when > > he > > used the expression "working as hard as a negro". For him, he > didn't mean > > any prejudice. But someone there saw something else in the analogy > and got > > offended. And what did Ballardini do next?One has to decide for > oneself how > > to manage one's language and situations that unfold from language > use in a > > world where people indeed see language as social semiotic.
> > For me, this is where the thread ends.
> >
> > Regards.
> > Obododimma.
> >
> > On Thu, Nov 20, 2008 at 12:37 AM, Mark Weiss
> <[redacted]>
> > wrote:
> >

> > > It's always interesting to be the butt of sarcasm, but accuracy
> also > > > counts. I was I thought pointing out the large gray areas, and > talking > > about > > > appropriateness (albeit with tongue wandering into cheek at > times). I > > doubt
> > > that I've caused too many wars today.
> > >
> > > But your examples present some interesting issues. Policeman > became > > > obsolete as a generic term when women were allowed to join > police forces,
> > > and other terms that cover both genders, like cops, police, or > police > > > officers, took over, because it would have been absurd to do > otherwise.
> > But
> > > we refer to policemen and policewomen when appropriate--it's
> not > > > anachronistic to point out a policewoman to someone who needs > help, if > > > that's who's available. The word stewardess, which is the term I > think
> > you
> > > were searching for, became an issue because it had an > extraprofessional
> > use > > > as fetish. That survives to an extent, but probably more than > the word
> > > itself, which dates back to when cabin crews were exclusively > female (and > > > exclusively young--there were age discrimination suits about
> that).
> > Poetess
> > > had largely fallen out of fashion by the time modern feminism > arrived, > > > relegated to designating only some women poets. And it's a good > thing
> > that > > > it died--the attitude expressed by the word had become > poisonous.

> > >
> > > These are all questions of gender, in a language that has become > less and > > > less gendered over the past thousand years. It's not something
> that > > speakers
> > > of more gendered languages worry about too much, because to do
> something > > > about it would require the restructuring of grammar. Airplane > crews are > > > still hotes and hotesses, actors are comedians and comediennes, > etc, and
> > the > > > French sun is masculine and the moon feminine, while in German
> it's the > > > reverse. So the battles are fought elsewhere. In modern English > there
> > were > > > so few distinct masculine and feminine forms for human > occupations that > > most > > > of the work of remaking the language would involve the renaming
> of the > > > beasts--stallion and mare, buck and doe, etc. Don't mistake > me--I'm > > plenty > > > aware of gender issues. I'm talking about the genders of > articles, nouns,
> > > pronouns and adjectives.
> > >
> > > A travel article in today's New York Times web edition, "The > Proud
> > Indians
> > > of Chiapas," has attracted a lot of comments, mostly about the > use of the > > > word Indian. Many of the respondents pointed out that in > Chiapas, and > > Latin
> > > America in general, the (recently) preferred term is "indigena" > (which is > > > both masculine and feminine, by the way). The objection noted to

> Indian
> > is > > > that it's inaccurate. In Spanish it's worse than that--Indio is > often a > > > derogatory term, and India in some places is a synonym for > whore. But the > > > article is written for gringos. In the US there's no unanimity > among > > (let's > > > call them) first peoples about what to call themselves. Native > American > > > doesn't seem to have caught on, though it appeared to for a > while, and > > > members of a lot of tribes prefer to be called American Indians > and don't > > > mind that their reservations are generically called Indian > reservations.
> > In
> > > the country at large Indian is nowhere near as derogatory as > Indio or > > India.
> > > It apparently didn't raise eyebrows among the Times staffers.
> > >
> > > It's not up to me, it's up to the people so designated, who have > a long > > > history of persecution by whatever name. Not so the compound > noun
> > Nigerian
> > > scam. It's hard for me to believe that anyone uses it with > derogation of > > > Nigerians in general in mind, and I don't think there's a shred
> of > > > antiNigerian sentiment in the US, where most people would be > hard put to > > say > > > what a Nigerian is.
> > >
> > > But ok, what about the name Nigeria--Blackland? Is that an > acceptable > > > inheritance from the colonialist past?
> > >
> > > If this thread continues, it would be nice if it involved

> discussion
> > rather > > > than verbal violence. The issues are interesting in themselves.
> > >
> > > Mark
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > At 02:53 AM 11/18/2008, Obododimma Oha wrote:
> > >
> > >> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language > does n
> > >> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language > does not > > >> change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in > different > > >> times have different tastes and different responses. One would > simply be
> > >> anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance,
> continues
> > >> using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air > hostess"
> > >> (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess" > (instead of > > >> simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering > out words
> > >> processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time.
> Perhaps you
> > are > > >> also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does > not and
> > would > > >> not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense
> with > > >> communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars > in the > > world
> > >> start from recklessness in the use of words. --- Obododimma > Oha.
> > >> _____

> > >>
> > >
> Check
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> > --
> > Obododimma Oha
> > Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> > Dept. of English
> > University of Ibadan
> > Nigeria
> >
> > &
> >
> > Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> > University of Ibadan
> >
> > Phone: [redacted];
> > [redacted].
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

462. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Mon 24 Nov 2008

---

so what's new so many smarts folks create things about things they know nothing about

On Mon, 24 Nov 2008 14:24:12 -0500 Vera Renczi <[redacted]> writes:
> I think it's funny that you are creating a coarse and yet you seem to
> have > very limited knowledge of the subject, but perhaps that is how it's > done

> when one teaches
>
>
>
> Colin smith
>
> Dorthy Trujillo Lusk
>
> Stephen Cain
>
> Margaret Christakos
>
> Daniel F Bradley
>
> Victor Coleman
>
> Christopher Dewdney
>
>
> V
>
>
> **
>
>
> On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 8:28 AM, John Cunningham
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's > face it,
> > you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the > reception of > > language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also,
> right in > > your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august
> halls
> > most of Canada's language writers emanated.
> > John Cunningham
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On

> > Behalf Of George Bowering
> > Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
> > To: [redacted]
> > Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
> >
> > You're kidding!
> >
> >
> > On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
> >
> > > I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the > University of > > > Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track
> down
> > > Canadian
> > > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any > > > Canadian
> > > language poets. Thanks.
> > > John Cunningham
> > >
> Check
> > > welcome.html
> > >
> >
> > G. Harry Bowering, OC
> > Worth the trouble.
> >
> >
> guidelines
> > Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> > Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> > Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
> 03/07/2008
> > 7:19 PM
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

463. Gwyn McVay
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 4:05 PM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:

> Amy & Others,
>
> I still feel like there's been a misreading of what the term "Nigerian email
> scam" refers to:

[very long prior discussion snipped]

For heaven's sake, people, how hard is it to refer to 419 letters as just that, as Ryan suggests, or say something like "so-called 'Nigerian' email scams," with quotation marks around "Nigerian" to make it clear that one does not personally believe all Nigerian individuals, or the country of Nigeria as a whole, to be engaged in scamming?

Little bitty scare quotes. So simple. So few pixels. And then we don't have to get into lengthily digressive discussions of ethnicity and religion as a way of justifying the original use of the term, yes?

Gwyn, end-of-semester-exhausted, McVay

↑ Index

464. Tony Trigilio
Spring 2008 Readings, Columbia College Chicago
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Spring 2008 Poetry Reading Series
Columbia College Chicago

All readings free and open to the public

For more information: [redacted]

COURT GREEN (Dossier: Letters) and FENCE reading and release party
(AWP Off-Site Reading)
Thursday, February 12, 2009, 6:30 p.m.
Film Row Cinema
1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th floor

BRANDI HOMAN & JAMES SHEA
Wednesday, February 25, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Ferguson Theater
600 South Michigan Avenue, 1st floor

KIMIKO HAHN & TRACI MORRIS
Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Sherwood Conservatory Recital Hall
1312 South Michigan Avenue

10th ANNUAL COLUMBIA COLLEGE CITYWIDE UNDERGRADUATE POETRY FESTIVAL
Thursday, April 2, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Conaway Center
1104 South Wabash, 1st Floor

MICHAEL BURKARD & RON PADGETT
Wednesday, April 22, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Film Row Cinema
1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th floor

COLUMBIA POETRY REVIEW (#22) reading and release party
Thursday, April 30, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Sherwood Conservatory Recital Hall
1312 South Michigan Avenue

↑ Index

465. Catherine Daly
Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Mon 24 Nov 2008

Sorry, I'm a little busy right now, and when I saw spam scam thread, tuned out, but I want to chime in about

So, my question is about the conscious cleansing of language--the sense of what's appropriate usage, and what merits the proverbial soaping. We don't have an official body, like the Academie Francaise, in charge of this (not that the Academie has been particularly successful of late--remember the circumflex?), and the dictionary-makers, who used to take it upon themselves to decide, have become increasingly democratic. Any such decision involves the ceding of linguistic choice. Which means it's a matter of case-by-case discussion, and case-by-case use. Unless we want the good old days of not very long ago, when books could be banned for officially unacceptable words. from Mark's last message.

One is that "bugger" is to me akin to "faggot" and "gay" in its migration. It became a perjorative, less descriptive, term.

But the first is that like race, so gender in language, and that I am still fascinated by the ways languages change vis a vis gender, but also etymologically and via pronunciation over time -- which is one of the things I try to make a subject and object in the confiteor project. The device in the first trilogy was the etymological synonyms of mystical keywords in a cross/halo around mystical keywords; in the second, terms go back to dualities in various ways, but also -- oh, the way that words for women have "grown up" from words for filth? -- All best, Catherine Daly [redacted]

↑ Index

466. Mark Weiss

Re: [SPAM]Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Mon 24 Nov 2008

I think you needn't worry just yet about my ambassadorial appointment.

All I have to check is the web. Every site gave a similar impression, except one, which said that the Nigerian census has stopped asking questions about religion, for the reasons you mention, which means that there are no accurate figures. See, for example, http://www.uiowa.edu/~africart/toc/people/Hausa.html, http://www.nvtc.gov/lotw/months/july/hausa.html. There are also numerous articles on the politicization and general unreliability of official census figures. Here's one: http://grandioseparlor.blogspot.com/2006/01/nigeria-2006-census.html.

I have no pony in this race, and there are plenty of problems here in the US.. If I've been naive, so be it, though shouting doesn't constitute proof.

It's difficult to imagine how anyone could read my rather nuanced statement as hostile. Is there anything about Nigeria that doesn't elicit a hair-trigger reaction from you?

Do you speak for all Nigerians?

In any case, a discussion of Nigerian demographics really has no business on this list. If you need to keep shouting, I can be reached backchannel.

Mark

At 04:41 PM 11/24/2008, you wrote:
>Those figures are totally wrong and have been seriously contested in >Nigeria. The best place to go for such statistics is the relevant ministry >of the Nigerian government and not Wiki. We know the uses and abuses of >statistics! I don't know how those sources got their figures -- I suspect >they simply saw every person saying salaam alaikum or putting on the long >gown as "Muslim". Another point is that the Hausa are different from the >Fulani, but some people tend to conflate the two groups. It is actually the >Fulani (whose leader Othman dan Fodio conquered Hausaland in a jihad in

the >precolonial era) that are predominantly Muslims. I am away from Nigeria at >the moment and cannot reach more reliable database. The point I had made in >my previous note -- and which is more important -- is that Hausa and Igbo -- >cannot be assigned to particular religions. It would be fallacious to say >"Muslim Hausa" when some Hausa people are not Muslims. As a matter of fact, it >is a form of assimilation that the non-Muslim Hausa in Nigeria have all >along tried to resist. The Igbo society, too, is multi-religious and not >necessarily "Christian".
>You should also know that today, in Nigeria, terms like "Muslim Hausa" and >"Christian Igbo" are viewed (especially by the government) as inciting >ethno-religious prejudice and violence. We, in Nigerian, have had series of >religious crises and bloodshed, and would view any discourse that divides >the nation along religious lines as wicked and anti-Nigerian.
>
>Tomorrow, if you are appointed American Ambassador to Nigeria, Nigerians >would not treat you as their friend if in addressing them you use terms such >as "Muslim Hausa" and "Christian Igbo" and cite Wiki as your source!
>
>My best regards, Mark.
>-- Obododimma.
>
>On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 9:59 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > I apologize for my spelling. Ibo was the standard spelling back then in the > > US media. Igbo and the half a dozen variant spellings I know mostly from > > Cuban sources, and I thought they referred to a different people.
> >
> > This from
> >
>
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Demographics_of_Nigeria#Religions_.282000_estimate.29,
> > "Demographics of Nigeria," whose accuracy I of course can't vouch for:
> >
> >
> > Religious Affiliation Among Major Ethnic Groups
> >
> > Source: <http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org>
> > http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org
> > * Hausa: 25,900,527 (Muslims 99.90%, Christians 0.10%)

> > * Yoruba: 22,921,473 (Christians 60.00%, Muslims 36.38%, Animists 3.00%, > > Non Religious 0.50%, Baha'is 0.07%, Atheists 0.05%)
> > * Igbo: 22,926,340 (Christians 97.00%, Animists 2.00%, Non Religious > > 0.80%, Atheists 0.10%, Baha'is 0.10%)
> >
> > I've left out the rest of the table. If you have better sources, I'd be > > happy to learn. I'm of course aware that religion was used to manipulate > > international opinion during the war.
> >
> > I learn from others all the time, usually through civil discussion. Like > > most of us, it's not the first time that I've thought about these issues, > > and what I use of the language has changed, in part because of input from > > others. I remain unconvinced in this instance. I don't think, as you > > suggest, that that's because of a character flaw.
> >
> > I'm content to let this discussion end, but I'm not content to be insulted.
> > If you want to have at me again, please take it backchannel. Front or > > backchannel, you might want to read your posts before sending them.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> >
> >
> > At 01:52 PM 11/24/2008, you wrote:
> >
> >> I didn't want to come into this debate, but it seems to me that Mark Weiss > >> really has an orientation in language use that he thinks is entirely > >> healthy
> >> and cannot accommodate to others. Quite unfortunate. I thought that, by > >> referring to his age, he should be helping us (who are supposedly younger)
> >> to be a little more cautious in our use of words. I was amazed when I came > >> across terms such as "Moslem Hausa" and "Christian Ibo" in his post that I > >> am responding to. Shocking! Maybe he doesn't know that millions of Hausa > >> people are Christians! And maybe he doesn't know that some Igbo (not > >> "Ibo")
> >> people are Muslims (one of my cousins is!), adherents of African > >> Traditional

> >> Religion, Eckists, Guru Maharajists, etc. How then can he characterize a > >> whole ethnic group like the Hausa as being Muslim? Yes, it is true that > >> many > >> Hausa people are Muslims, but that does not make the whole group Muslim. I > >> am afraid that in using the term, Mark has become a victim of the > >> political > >> rhetoric that tries to use religion as shibboleth. It is such shibboleth > >> that Ojukwu's war rhetoric tried to arm itself with, to attract > >> international Christian sympathy during the war. I am Igbo myself and did
> >> support the Biafran cause, but now, as somebody with a PhD in Stylistics > >> (specifically in War Rhetoric and a criminologist), I can, without > >> appearing > >> disloyal to Biafra, tell what Ojukwu was trying to do when he used the > >> terms
> >> "Muslim Hausa Fulani" or "Islamic North". It would be a pity if the > >> politician is now more clever than the poet the vates, the seer, the > >> everything! But Mark is not a politician and should know the cost of words
> >> in the marketplace of meaning making.Mark, please, don't take offence at > >> this: think seriously about your tendency to stick to your views, and > >> refusal to welcome the fact that you could learn from another person!Be > >> well, poet.
> >> Obododimma.
> >>
> >>
> >> On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> >> wrote:
> >>
> >> > I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > >> > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to > >> avoid > >> > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and > >> > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree > >> > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's > >> no
> >> > need to light fires.
> >> >
> >> > Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the > >> essence > >> > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a > >> group

> >> > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that
> >> have > >> > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us
> >> would > >> > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in
> >> the > >> > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the > >> > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder
> >> to > >> > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a > >> different > >> > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the > >> > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is > >> limited
> >> > denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes > >> towards > >> > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds
> >> it
> >> > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
> >> >
> >> > Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but > >> > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
> >> > list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the > >> > apples and oranges.
> >> >
> >> > Mark
> >> >
> >> > PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age
more
> >> > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been > >> > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I > >> was in > >> > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months.
> >> We
> >> > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style > >> > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and > >> Aloy

> >> > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > >> > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer > >> > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the > >> Biafra
> >> > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule,
> >> when
> >> > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > >> > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa
> >> of
> >> > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of
> >> the
> >> > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra > >> > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like
> >> "us."
> >> > Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to > >> > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation
> >> by > >> > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since > >> then
> >> > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware > >> can't > >> > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short > >> end.
> >> >
> >> > Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which > >> I'm
> >> > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
> >> Nigeria.
> >> >
> >> > None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the > >> > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
> >> >
> >> >
> >> > At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
> >> >
> >> >> Mark,
> >> >>

> >> >> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv,
> >> have > >> >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a > >> response to > >> >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race > >> >> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
> >> >>
> >> >> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other
members,
> >> >> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's > >> concerns?
> >> >> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp
> >> when > >> >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is to > >> >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this community?
> >> Do
> >> >> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
> >> >>
> >> >> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist > >> >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that
> >> the > >> >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did
> >> not > >> >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
> >> >>
> >> >> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or not > >> >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of
> >> language,' > >> >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
simply > >> >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly
> >> the > >> >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us > >> into
> >> >> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being > >> >> "misunderstood."
> >> >>
> >> >> Be well,
> >> >>

> >> >> Amy
> >> >>
> >> >> _____
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >> Recent work
> >> >>
> >> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >> Amy's Alias
> >> >>
> >> >> http://amyking.org/
> >> >>
> >> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
> >> >> Amy:
> >> >>
> >> >> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
> >> >> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
> >> >>
> >> >> Mark
> >> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
> >> >> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> >> >> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
> >> >> To: [redacted]
> >> >> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
> >> >>
> >> >> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
> >> list
> >> >> member
> >> >> found problematic. The latter said so.
> >> >>
> >> >> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
> >> >> strains
> >> >> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
> >> >> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &

> >> >> here's a list.
> >> >>
> >> >> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
> >> and
> >> >> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
> >> >>
> >> >> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
> >> ...
> >> >> worth
> >> >> ignoring.
> >> >> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same > >> >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying > >> >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to > >> calls
> >> >> for > >> >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
> >> >> unaware
> >> >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for > >> sensitivity
> >> >> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being > >> human
> >> >> and
> >> >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
> >> being > >> >> seen
> >> >> as
> >> >> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual > >> >> prowess.
> >> >>
> >> >> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the > >> >> ensuing
> >> >> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist > >> >> sentiment
> >> >> and
> >> >> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications
> >> of
> >> >> some
> >> >> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out

> >> >> something
> >> >> we've said that could be offensive.
> >> >>
> >> >> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still > >> >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the > >> implications
> >> >> of my > >> >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of > >> what
> >> >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
> >> >>
> >> >> An excerpt:
> >> >>
> >> >> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being > >> >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the > >> >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not > >> >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial
> >> >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that > >> >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have > >> >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being,
as
> >> >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list > >> >> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely > >> >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
> >> >>
> >> >> and
> >> >>
> >> >> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was > >> >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After > >> >> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I > >> >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,
> >> >> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to > >> >> outweigh the benefits."
> >> >>
> >> >> Please read the entire note here:
> >> >>
> >> http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
> >> >>
> >> >> and

> >> >>
> >> >> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
> >> >> found
> >> >> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
> >> >> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this > >> >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
> >> >> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the > >> >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally > >> >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim > >> >> desired.
> >> >>
> >> >> Such is often the case with almost all message boards
> >> >> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
> >> >> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
> >> >> on the vast majority of message boards."
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >>
> http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and-listservs.html
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >> Be well,
> >> >>
> >> >> Amy
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >> _____
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >> Recent work
> >> >>
> >> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >> Amy's Alias
> >> >>

> >> >> http://amyking.org/
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >> guidelines
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >> guidelines
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >>
> >> >
> >> guidelines
> >> >
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> --
> >> Obododimma Oha
> >> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> >> Dept. of English
> >> University of Ibadan
> >> Nigeria
> >>
> >> &
> >>
> >> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> >> University of Ibadan
> >>
> >> Phone: [redacted];
> >> [redacted].
> >>
> >>
> >
> >
>
>
>

>--
>Obododimma Oha
>Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>Dept. of English
>University of Ibadan
>Nigeria
>
>&
>
>Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>University of Ibadan
>
>Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>

↑ Index

467. Obododimma Oha

Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Mon 24 Nov 2008

Well, Mark, I don't think it is reducible to that kind of "case-by-case" problematic. To push it to that corner is to still wrestle to prove how difficult it is to drop that type of language. As a university teacher, I do not have problem with that, since I know that, in order to publish my articles in academic journals, I must avoid any form of language that communicates prejudice (either directly or indirectly). Being able to recognize which aspect of my language in the article expresses such prejudice is part of the communicative skills expected of me as a researcher and one trying to communicate knowledge: I am required to have the interests and preferences of my readers in mind! I am required to remember that my readers are not mere fiction! Moreover, filtering out offensive language in one's writing is one of the things taught in composition and research classes in recent times. As a teacher of research methods in my department in Ibadan, I always discuss that aspect at length with my students (as well as the implied logic in one's diction). One book that has discussed that communicative aspect of research, which my students and I love using, is Real World Research by Colin Robson, a fine text published by Blackwell. Regards. Obododimma.

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 10:27 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'm very tired of this, but I do appreciate your more reasonable tone.
>
> One might have hoped that a discussion like this would lead, as I think

Steve Vincent attempted, to a broader discussion of the remnants of difficult histories that all languages retain. What you or I or the list think about Nigerian scam will have little influence on broader usage. It's different in kind, I think, from current use of the word arab in the US, which is far more toxic than Nigerian scam and far more globalized, and also not something we can conveniently drop, as I suspect that with the passage of time Nigerian scam will be.

So that's where my question, to myself as well as to the discussion at large, leads. OK, arab can't be dropped from usage because it's what a large number of people call themselves, and the obloquy attached to it will pass away as circumstances change, hopefully in our lifetimes. But what about Steve's example, or the ones I mentioned, which for most of us don't carry over to a broader prejudice? What about words like "bugger," originally Bulgar? We cleanse the language, unconsciously, all the time--Dutch treat is the sole remnant in common use of a large amount of nastiness from 17th Century Anglo-Dutch wars.

So, my question is about the conscious cleansing of language--the sense of what's appropriate usage, and what merits the proverbial soaping. We don't have an official body, like the Academie Francaise, in charge of this (not that the Academie has been particularly successful of late--remember the circumflex?), and the dictionary-makers, who used to take it upon themselves to decide, have become increasingly democratic. Any such decision involves the ceding of linguistic choice. Which means it's a matter of case-by-case discussion, and case-by-case use. Unless we want the good old days of not very long ago, when books could be banned for officially unacceptable words.

Peace. I really do have other things to do.

Mark

At 03:59 PM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:

Mark,

I'm writing as a member of this listserv community who is slightly appalled and very bewildered by the lack of care & concern evidenced sent in a number of replies to Oha.

And yes, I have indeed thought much of Oha's request and analyzed my experience with the term, which is limited too. You might recall that my initial response to Oha was one of surprise, apology, and a note to say that I hadn't thought of the implications of using the term.

Since then, my conclusion is that a) all email scams do not originate in Nigeria, but in fact, originate from everywhere, including the U.S., b) I don't refer to email scams that originate from elsewhere as "British Scams" or "American scams", and c) isn't it simply easier, and more respectful as per Oha's request, to refer to these scams as "email scams", both here in this community and elsewhere? How hard is it to acknowledge the risk, make the switch, and let Oha know his note made me think? Why must he receive belligerence? I'm amazed at his consistent grace and civility through all of this.

My sense is, after much discussion with my students about the topic, that the average American doesn't know much about Nigeria or Nigerian culture, myself included. So why would I risk perpetuating the negativity that goes with calling email scams, "Nigerian scams?" Similarly, many Americans didn't have much reference when they heard the word "Arab." Post 9/11, we've got "Arab terrorists," which has pretty much become synonymous with "Arabs" in our culture now (of course, generally speaking), and look at the negativity that term generates.

Are all terrorists "Arab"? Are all Arabs "terrorists"? Are all email scams perpetuated by "Nigerians?" Are all Nigerians email scammers? When I find it difficult to come up with much to say about Nigeria, I don't want my limited vocabulary to be about Nigerian scams after all, nor do I want to reinforce that vocabulary elsewhere. This was no great leap nor grave concession. Moreover, what grieves me, again, are the resistances to the validity of Oha's request sent in the face of what could only have been a difficult one to make. And now, the refusal to acknowledge that this list has a history of such resistance--and that we may be carrying on tradition.

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work
http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias
http://amyking.org/

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
wrote:

I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no need to light fires.

Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us would try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in the language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.

Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers' list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the apples and oranges.

Mark

PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, when separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like "us." Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.

Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined Nigeria.

None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.

At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:

Mark,

Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a response to someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.

As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members,
even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's concerns?
Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp when we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is to express his consternation over the use of a term within this community? Do
we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?

You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did not warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.

It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or not aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of language,' regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it simply shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us into all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being "misunderstood."

Be well,

Amy

———

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
Amy:

Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.

Mark
--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
list
member
found problematic. The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
strains
of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms
exist &
here's a list.

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
and
noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
...
worth
ignoring.
In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls
for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were

unaware of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity
should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human
and possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
being seen
as
the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual
prowess.

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment
and
the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of
some
terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out
something
we've said that could be offensive.

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications
of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what
Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of
being able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon
on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being,
as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:

http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

guidelines

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

468. ALDON L NIELSEN
Re: Heat Strings posts
Mon 24 Nov 2008

>
Recently on the Heat Strings blog --
The Ends of the Ends of the Alphabets Modernist Studies 2008
Who Speaks for Whom?

>
<http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/>
>

<<

471. Jim Andrews
beastly for your nedification
Tue 25 Nov 2008

Some beastly music for your nedification:
http://vispo.com/arteroids/sounds/arteroidsIDsong2.mp3
http://vispo.com/arteroids/sounds/arteroidsIDsong.mp3

Needs fairly high volume.

You can create beoootiful muzic like this yourself in arteroids at http://vispo.com/arteroids/arteroids.htm . When you come to the screen where you are asked to input an ID, put one finger of your left hand on the s key, and a finger of your right hand on the backspace key. Now press the s and backspace keys percussively. Experiment with the lament of the doomed arteroids.

The sounds here are the crys of dying arteroids; in the arteroids game, one of the 19 sounds is played when you dispatch an arteroid with the language gun.

I recorded the sounds; they're all my voice. They sound rather beastly, though, partly because they are randomly pitch-shifted anywhere from normal pitch to 4 octaves lower than normal. And partly because I can't help it. Have I found my voice?

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

472. Philip Metres
new on Behind the Lines
Tue 25 Nov 2008

New on http://www.behindthelinespoetry.blogspot.com

"Genitalia=Commerce and Enterprise"/Allen Ginsberg's Annotations to "The Waste Land" Poet Suheir Hammad on her new film, "Salt of This ...
You Don't Know Dick Kafka is Alive and Well ("Held at Einab Junction: ...
"In Harm's Way" Looks at the Israel/Palestine Conf... from "The Cure at Troy" by Seamus Heaney/Thinking ...
Public Rally for Marriage Equality
Two Takes on Studs Terkel (R.I.P.), plus audio...
Phil Donahue's Body of War
Come Together: Imagine Peace (An Anthology of Peac...
Women of Liberia: Fighting for Peace

Nas' "Black President" and "Election Night"/"Yes W...
Derek Walcott, on Poetry and Isolation
"Black Watch" by Gregory Burke from Studio 360 Translated By: Shaindel Beers talking with Philip ...
Why Supporters of Palestinian Rights Worry about t...
"On 24th and South, Philadelphia" from To See the ...
Yes We Did
Bruce Springsteen and Obama in Cleveland
An Open Letter to Barack Obama from Ralph Nader
If Obama Loses the Election, I'll Blame the Cathol...
Cockroaches and Barack Obama and Lucille Clifton's...
Thanks, Rick Sanchez/Shame on McCain and the Slur ...
A Reading by Fady Joudah

& etc.,

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com
http://www.behindthelinespoetry.blogspot.com

↑ Index

473. Philip Metres

Come Together: Imagine Peace (the anthology of peace poetry)

Tue 25 Nov 2008

This just in/out:

COME TOGETHER: IMAGINE PEACE
http://www.amazon.com/Come-Together-Imagine-Peace-Poems/dp/1933964227

Poetry. Anthology. Edited by Ann Smith, Larry Smith, and Philip Metres. With an Introduction by Philip Metres. A grand collection of poetry (seventy poets both past and contemporary) written against war and for peace: poems that sustain us with their vision.

"Peace poetry is larger than a moral injunction against war; it is an articulation of the expanse, the horizon where we might come together. To adapt a line by the Sufi poet Rumi: beyond the realm of good and evil, there is a field."

--from the Introduction by Philip Metres.

100 poets voice their concern and vision for peace.

Poems of Witness & Elegy, Exhortation & Action, Reconciliation, Shared Humanity, Wildness & Home, Ritual & Vigil, Meditation & Prayer.

Precedents: Sappho, Whitman, Dickinson, Cavafy, Millay, Patchen, Rexroth, Shapiro, Lowell, Creeley, Rukeyser, Ginsberg, Levertov, Lorde, Stafford, Jordan, Amichai, Darwish

Contemporaries: Abinader, Ali, Bass, Berry, Bauer, Berrigan, Bly, Bodhrán, Bradley, Brazaitis, Bright, Bryner, Budbill, Cervine, Charara, Cording, Cone, Crooker, Daniels, di Prima, Davis, Dougherty, Ellis, Espada, Estes, Ferlinghetti, Forché, Frost, Gibson, Gundy, Gilberg, Habra, Hague, Hamill, Harter, Hassler, Haven, Heyen, Hirshfield, Hughes, Joudah, Jensen, Karmin, Kendig, Komunyakaa, Kovacik, Kryss, Krysl, LaFemina, Landis, Leslie, Lifshin, Loden, Lovin, Lucas, McCallum, McGuane, Machan, McQuaid, Meek, Metres, Miltner, Montgomery, Norman, Nye, Pankey, Pendarvis, Pinsky, Porterfield, Prevost, Ragain, Rashid, Rich, Roffman, Rosen, Ross, Rusk, Salinger, Sanders, Seltzer, Schneider, Shabtai, Shannon, Sheffield, Shipley, Shomer, Silano, Sklar, Smith, Snyder, Spahr, Sydlik, Szymborska, Trommer, Twichell, Volkmer, Waters, Weems, Wilson, Zale

Philip Metres
Associate Professor
Department of English
John Carroll University
20700 N. Park Blvd
University Heights, OH 44118
phone: [redacted] (work)
fax: [redacted]
http://www.philipmetres.com
http://www.behindthelinespoetry.blogspot.com

↑ Index

474. Joshua Clover double book party, 12/14
Tue 25 Nov 2008

[apologies for any x-posting]

Sunday, December 14th, 2008
in girum imus nocte et consumimur igni press presents Kevin Killian & Stephanie Young and the release of their books Action Kylie and Picture Palace

6:30 pm, 5 USDollars
there may be free wine, and dancing later and, for this single day, 20 bucks will get you in the door AND copies of the two new books both already SPD bestsellers!

416 25th St. (at Broadway), Oakland

Special guest appearances by Jasper Bernes and Jane Dark...

KEVIN KILLIAN, born 1952, is an art writer, poet, novelist, critic and playwright. He has written two novels, Shy (1989) and Arctic Summer (1996), a book of memoirs, Bedrooms Have Windows (1989), two books of stories Little Men (1997) and I Cry Like a Baby (2001) and a collection of poems, Argento Series (1997). With Lewis Ellingham he has written a biography of the poet Jack Spicer—Poet Be Like God: Jack Spicer and the San Francisco Renaissance (Wesleyan University Press, 1998). For the San Francisco Poets Theater he has written 37 plays, including Stone Marmalade, with Leslie Scalapino, and Often, with the late Barbara Guest. His most recent book, from Hooke Press, is a volume of his Selected Amazon Reviews, edited by Brent Cunningham, and now there is Action Kylie.

STEPHANIE YOUNG lives and works in Oakland. She edited the anthology BAY POETICS (Faux Press, 2006) and is currently at work on the collaborative website DEEP OAKLAND. Hey, you should propose a project for DEEP OAKLAND! Her books of poetry are Picture Palace and Telling the Future Off. She is here very sometimes: www.stephanieyoung.org/blog.

---

newyipes.blogspot.com

↑ Index

475. Alexander Jorgensen
THIS ONE - THIS IS IT - RACE, DAVID, NIGERIA - FINSIHEDDDDDDDDDDD
Tue 25 Nov 2008

First off, I really hate it when people demonstrate their level of ineptitude by being articulate while saying nothing. Certainly nothing new. Relativity is what it is - and it also means nothing has value. Please, folks. I remember some time ago when someone made the comment that kids in India working for pennies were earning money for their families. Well, I didn't respond as I had wanted to...but what he said was pure ignorance. Now, it would have been easier for me to have sat down with this gentleman, demonstrated face-to-face just how ignorant he was, but then...see...I don't have the patience to sit and write the obvious. And I know, unlike him. You can use language, this list as a proving ground, but idiocy is that. How articulate can you be, when you don't have anything (interesting, or useful, or all encompassing factual) to say. The world is big folks! This little bubble is gonna break and unlike the economy I hope some of you don't find yourself redundant.

Secondly, to share:

"I am also hurt when I notice how such poor image is being constructed and amplified by some people, simply because they are outside that society."

Why people found it necessary to get into the diatribes they did baffles me. What kind of arrogance and lack of compassion do some of us have. Shame!

I live in China, my wife, Czech, has worked as a reported as had to stop writing for an important newspaper in her home country, and I have to leave because I got big spreads in big journals...am gonna say something true. Have a Tibetan friend who while on invite to Italy for a reading made a break to Austra (and now lives in a refugee camp there), have known people who are willing to die for the right to speak. Why you waste your time alienating people and debating for the sake of debate sickens me! What about mutual nourishment, something a friend, Diran Adebayo, also a Nigerian, once said to me.

AND, I witnessed, a gang-up...perpetrated, and let's say it, by white folks who simply neither know or care! If we can use all those terms that re-inscribe, all those ugly words you have decided no longer hurt, then hell, white folks! And as a cultural narrative, what does this discourse articulate consciously or unconsciously!

Alex

↑ Index

476. Stephen Vincent
New de Blog - haptics and texts, etc.
Tue 25 Nov 2008

---

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Some new haptics, photographs and texts:

1. Haptics: Joseph Noble and Colleen Lookingbill at Books & Bookshelves 2. My Mother Leans Towards Death (Haptic and Text) My brother says that at night (while talking herself into sleep) she switches back and forth between numbers and letters. This last week he was brought up short when, two-thirds the way through the alphabet. he heard her say:

... p, q, r...'peculiar'... in an astonishingly quick leap from the associative sounds of the letters into a corresponding word of similar sound....

3. Huge Haptic w/ A.Ayler, J. Coltrane & Eric Friedlander plus "Obama Window" 4. The Ultimate Mother Ghost - Isleton, California 5. Election Eve Street Vision or Paul Hoover and Maxine Chernoff translate Holderin. 6. Haptic: Roberta Vargas, poet, 1968 Strike Commemoration, San Francisco State University, October 28, 2008

Enjoy. and, as always, appreciate your comments.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

477. Stephen Vincent
Literary Nigeria sans 'scam'
Tue 25 Nov 2008

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/?p=573

To take the current List eye and angst off the 'scam' trigger, this blog connection goes to my account - including pictures - of last year's September Christopher Okigbo Conference at Harvard and Boston Universities - an event that included poets, playwrights and novelists, and some of us who taught at Universities in Nigeria (as critics or writers). (Wole Soyinka, Chinua Achebe, and Chimanda Adichi (sp?) were among the 'stars'. An incredibly strong event, partly because it brought a focus back on the postions and roles of Nigerian and other African writers on the Nigerian-Biafran Civil War.

I thought this 'diasportic' glimpse of Nigeria might help eliminate the Internet blip 'scam' attention away from a country that offers so much (great and difficult) looked at from a much different, larger scope.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

478. Rob McLennan
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Tue 25 Nov 2008

to a degree, but its also something you learn through doing the reading; some of us are far away from vancouver manage to figure some of it out....

> Unfortunately, the American language writers are much more well known than the Canadian. Furthermore, it is much easier in Vancouver to have knowledge due to the presence of Kootenay.
> John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 24, 2008 1:23 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

I mean, I couldnt believe that you yourself didn't know the field as well as anyone,.

gb

On Nov 24, 2008, at 5:28 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it,
you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also,
right in your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august
halls
most of Canada's language writers emanated.
John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
[mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down
Canadian
language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
language poets. Thanks.
John Cunningham

welcome.html

> G. Harry Bowering, OC
> Worth the trouble.
>
> guidelines
> Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
> 7:19 PM
>
> welcome.html
>
> G. Bowering
> Knows which door the tiger's behind.
>
> Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
> 7:19 PM

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...13th poetry coll'n - The Ottawa City Project ...novel - white www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

479. Séamas Cain

New poems by Jennifer L. Williams

Tue 25 Nov 2008

Jennifer L. Williams is a performance-artist and innovative poet based in Edinburgh, Scotland. She founded the arts-cabaret "Silencio" and is very active with the Scottish Poetry Library and managing numerous events for the Edinburgh "Fringe" Festival.

To examine a showcase of selected new poems by Jennifer L. Williams, go to ...

http://www.laurahird.com/showcase/jlwilliams.html

And to read Jennifer's additional new poems,
go to ...

http://jlwpoetry.googlepages.com/

Respectfully,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

↑ Index

480. Steve Tills
Seeking ROCHESTER NY AREA poets for new project/publication.
Tue 25 Nov 2008

Dear Rochester NY Area poets,

Gerald Schwartz and I are currently seeking 3-4 additional others from this area for a Local Poets publication we want to put together.

We are certain that a few Poetics List members and like-minded pomers hailing from Rochester would make fabulous contributions to our little project if only we knew who you are and how we can get in contact with you. Indeed, you're probably living just around the corner from us and we didn't even know it!

In brief, any ROCHESTER, NEW YORK, poets/writers out there wanting to have work considered for our project, PLEASE CONTACT US at your earliest convenience and introduce yourselves to us! We're very eager to meet you and put this thing together.

[redacted] <mailto:[redacted]> or [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]>

Eager to hear from you,

Steve Tills and Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

481. Séamas Cain
Book by Oscar McLennan
Tue 25 Nov 2008

_____

Oscar McLennan is a performance-artist and innovative poet. Formerly from Dublin, Ireland (and formerly the partner of Ann Seagrave) today he lives and works in Argentina.

Oscar McLennan, who is fluent in Spanish, is the author of the performance-poem "El bastardo tranquilo," published by Pepitas de Calabaza in Spain. Oscar has performed this poem throughout Spain and Latin America.

ISBN 84-96044-62-9 | 304 páginas | 12x17 cm. | 12.5 euros

For additional information about this book, go to http://www.pepitas.net/

El desierto es el estado de ánimo que amenaza con dominar la vida de Phil Malone: envuelto en papel reluciente y presentado por un Santa Claus al que se le cae la barba al primer tirón. Phil es un espantapájaros, un marginado atiborrado de sueños de grandeza, un artista que se expresa a través de las estrafalarias producciones cinematográficas que idea mientras, oscilando entre la locura y la realidad, recorre las calles de Dublín. El viaje que emprende en busca de su álter ego perdido es una tormenta de imágenes e ideas, cómica, conmovedora e inquietante a la vez, una denuncia virulenta y surreal de una sociedad que prioriza los valores materiales frente a todos los demás.

Oscar McLennan (1955) nacido y criado en Glasgow, ha vivido en Londres, Belfast, New York, Dublín, Barcelona y Zaragoza. Además de como escritor y performer, a lo largo de su variopinto pasado se ha ganado la vida como cantante, músico, bibliotecario, artista de vídeo, obrero de la construcción, jornalero del campo, voceador de telegramas, pintor, decorador, buscavidas callejero, conferencian-te itinerante en escuelas de arte, jefe de estación en el metro londinense, músico ambulante, proletario fabril, traductor, repartidor de octavillas, cómico, ajedrecista, profesor de inglés, friegaplatos, camarero, coordinador de talleres y espectáculos artísticos en directo y jardinero.

Su último espectáculo en solitario, basado en este libro, ha sido puesto en escena en distintos países de habla inglesa, destacando su representación en el Festival Internacional de Teatro de UCLA (Los Ángeles). En la actualidad recorre España representándolo en castellano. Sus escritos han sido publicados en varias colecciones de relatos cortos, revistas literarias y emitidos por radio en el Reino Unido y los EE.UU. El Bastardo Tranquilo, su primera novela publicada, ha sido vertida al castellano por Federico Corriente, en estrecha colaboración con el autor.

La prensa ha dicho:

"Un mundo donde lo normal se torna anormal, donde la realidad queda desvelada en todo su absurdo". [...] "Recuerda los mejores momentos de Flan O'Brien."

"De forma surreal pero brillante, la emprende con la estrechez de miras y abre un mundo de posibilidades". [...] "Posee la poderosa habilidad de tejer con palabras patrones originales y desconcertantemente extraños".

The Scotsman

"La obra de McLennan le cautiva a uno de forma tan sutil que se encuentra en territorio desconocido (asomado a un precipicio) sin darse cuenta de que ni siquiera ha salido de la estación".

San Francisco Gael

"Una prosa que se enrosca como una serpiente alrededor del cerebro". [...] "Las influencias son Beckett y Joyce, pero la voz y la visión son exclusivas de McLennan".

The Independent

"Una prosa intransigente que se funde con un torrente hipnótico de visiones poéticas de forma tan sutil que uno experimenta lo que sólo puede ser descrito como alucinaciones verbales".

Edinburgh Festival Times

"Originario de Glasgow, y en la actualidad ciudadano del subconsciente".

The Sunday Times

"El reino imaginativo de McLennan reside en algún punto entre la comedia y la pesadilla".

Time Out

"Si se dejara a un psiquiatra recorrer la mente de Oscar, saldría con material suficiente para llenar The Lancet durante un año entero". [...] "Parte al galope por las grotescas zonas interiores de la imaginación."

The Guardian

"El poderío del lenguaje de McLennan y la fuerza de su imaginación visual asombran de inmediato". [...] "Nos sumerge en el universo de los solitarios y enajenados, saltando del humor negro a las observaciones crudas, todo ello sustentado por un flujo de conciencia surreal".

The List

"McLennan se ha aventurado donde nadie ha osado hacerlo con anterioridad".

City Limits

For additional information about "El bastardo tranquilo," go to http://www.pepitas.net/

Respectfully,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

↑ Index

482. Gottlieb, Michael
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Tue 25 Nov 2008

I agree.

Unless you are including Alan Davies, someone has to be kidding.

--- On Sun, 11/23/08, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 23, 2008, 9:37 PM

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of > Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down =20
> Canadian
> language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any =20
> Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of POETICS automatic digest system
Sent: Tuesday, November 25, 2008 12:00 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: [LIKELY JUNK]POETICS Digest - 23 Nov 2008 to 24 Nov 2008 (#2008-312)

There are 42 messages totalling 5935 lines in this issue.

Topics of the day:

1. "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo" (8)
2. Canadian language writers/poets (10)
3. Discussions of Race and the Poetics List (13)
4. overrun
5. Anglo-Saxon Riddle-Poem translations and illustrations on nycbigcitylit.com, from Bertha Rogers
6. Literary Buffalo Newsletter 11.24.08-11.30.08
7. Self-promotion - Visual Poetry and more... Alexander Jorgensen
8. What we're called, was Re: David (2)
9. Bonfire Broadside--Alice Notley
10. 3 new titles from Burning Deck
11. L&BH Radio Hour and Open Mic Nov. 25
12. Millennium-3 preview: Sousandrade
13. Spring 2008 Readings, Columbia College Chicago

Date: Sun, 23 Nov 2008 19:01:26 -0800
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

I would take reflection as "generative" in that way. It is producing something. I would argue that if it produced indifference, though, it's not really generative of anything.

Thanks for the clarification.

Troy

_____
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 5:27:37 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

When some people call art 'generative', they mean it stimulates them to write or whatever. I take it that's your usage, Troy.

But the term 'generative art' has another meaning. It refers to a type of art where the work of art, itself, generates not a response in the audience but the visible or audible (or whatever) manifestation of the viewed work of art. So, typically, this sort of work of art is an executable, digital work, an app, a program, though it needn't be. Could be an analog machine or perhaps, on a more conceptual level, injunctions to do this or that. Though, in that case, the piece itself is not really doing the 'generation' and it probably wouldn't be of much interest to people interested in 'generative art'.

Just to clarify the term.

On another note. A work could stimulate others to reflect. That needn't be stimulating them to create.

Would that be 'generative' in your sense? Is that of value? If so, and it is not generative, then not all art is generative in your sense.

ja
http://vispo.com

Date: Sun, 23 Nov 2008 18:37:53 -0800
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham
>
> welcome.html

G. Harry Bowering, OC
Worth the trouble.

Date: Sun, 23 Nov 2008 19:02:38 -0800
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Pettiness and purposefully missing the point are also not generative.

Troy

_____
From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 11:57:56 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.

Hal

You have no enemies in this folder.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.
>
> Troy Camplin
>
>
>
> _____
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
> Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
>
> Jim,
>
> You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea > of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an > algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not > openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

>
> Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was > applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to > take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected > light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those > photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of > photography?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>
> On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the >>> opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural >>> kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized.
>>> In
>>> that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.
>>>
>>
>> the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you >> mention, of course.
>>
>> for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or >> http://vispo.com/arteroids
>>
>> the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with >> proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field.
>> dbCinema is generative.
>>
>> you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation.

>> sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of
>> art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification.
>> that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are >> no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time.
>> some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time.
>> like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given >> program will halt.
>>
>> "though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some >>> artists
>>> like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a >>> sense, this is a pop approach."
>>>
>>> Well, pop can be a powerful art form.
>>>
>>
>> sure.
>>
>> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to
>>> some
>>> other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>>>
>>> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard >>> it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative >>> to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to >>> actualize. They are a limited number of them.
>>>
>>
>> true.
>>
>>

>> ja
guidelines
>>
>
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 04:35:12 -0800
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

For starters (& debatable):=A0=20

Christian Bok
bpnichol
Steve Mccaffery
Karen Mac Cormack
Scott Pound
Meredith Quartermain
Lisa Robertson

Try going through the EPC page for more info/poets:=A0=20
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/epc.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Sun, 11/23/08, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 23, 2008, 9:37 PM

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of > Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down =20

> Canadian
> language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any =20
> Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham

=0A=0A=0A

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Sun, 23 Nov 2008 22:24:53 -0800
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the > idea > of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, > an > algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a
> not
> openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

'algorithm' is the 'natural selection' of our time. by that i mean the two terms have both been widely misunderstood. Widely.

'algorithm' is misunderstood because the theory of computation is more than misunderstood--it's unknown and somewhat non-intuitive in its results.
it gives us some of the clearest statements we have about what computers can and can't do, i.e., it gives us our clearest statements about what algorithms can and cannot accomplish.

The focus of the birth of computing itself was on what computers cannot do.
Turing solved a famous math problem posed by Hilbert called the Entscheidungsproblem, a problem to decide whether it is theoretically possible to build a machine that will prove all math theorems. After understanding Godel's work, Turing understood that the answer to this question must be 'no'. But in order to prove it, he had to devise a machine that could execute any conceivable, finite algorithm, and then show that there are some true theorems this machine cannot prove. Thus was born the 'Turing machine', Turing's abstraction, the most powerful but simple machine known to humanity. It was devised mainly to help prove the Entscheidungsproblem, not to 'invent computers'. Turing invented the modern notion of what a computer is in order to prove there are some things such machines cannot do. beautiful, eh?

However, while there are things such machines cannot do, there is no real evidence that we can do them either. Fundamentally, a Turing machine is a machine that can execute any conceivable, finite algorithm. There is no good evidence that there exist thought processes of which we are capable and computers are not.

So, Murat, while algorithms are 'formulas', of a sort, they can get quite sophisticated with a few million lines of code. The power of the simple algorithm and a machine that can make decisions has yet to be really widely understood. At first glance, computers look like machines that are merely mechanical, like any other machine, and pose no serious resemblance to the processes of thought. But the fundamental operations of the computer are like the atomic scale of thought.

ja
http://vispo.com

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 04:59:45 -0800
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list m= ember found problematic.=A0 The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote stra= ins of resistance -- i.e.=A0 the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions w= eren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist & here's

a = list.=A0=20

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
and =
noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.=A0=20

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ...
wo= rth ignoring.=A0=20
In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same ins= titutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentim= ents (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls for sens= itivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were unaware
of= how our language use might be problematic.=A0 Such calls for sensitivity s= hould certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human an= d possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
being = seen as the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellec= tual prowess.=A0=20

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensui= ng discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist senti= ment and the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implica= tions of some terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone p= oints out something we've said that could be offensive.=A0=20

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something.=A0 I'm still tr= ying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications of m= y actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror.=A0 Take a peek at some of w= hat Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and=20

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and=
-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

_____
Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/=0A=0A=0A

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 07:28:28 -0600
From: John Cunningham <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it,
you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls
most of Canada's language writers emanated.
John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham
>
> welcome.html

G. Harry Bowering, OC
Worth the trouble.

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
7:19 PM

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 05:42:25 -0800
From: { brad brace } <[redacted]> Subject: overrun

a small free photo-book
of withdrawn 12hr images

http://216.70.118.235/overrun.pdf
(6.6 mb)

/:b

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 08:58:07 -0500
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Amy:

Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language. Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.

Mark

At 07:59 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that > another list member found problematic. The latter said so.
>
>Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with >rote strains of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality,
>my intentions weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist >terms exist & here's a list.
>
>Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is >problematic and noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
>

>The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
>... worth ignoring.
>In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those >same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its >underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should >be open to calls for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply >anything racist or were unaware of how our language use might be >problematic. Such calls for sensitivity should certainly not be >dismissed just because they are about being human and possibly even >admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen as >the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his >intellectual prowess.
>
>This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in >the ensuing discussion, many have left due to the expression of >further racist sentiment and the denial of granting that a) we might >be ignorant of the implications of some terms and b) maybe we should >be more sensitive when someone points out something we've said that >could be offensive.
>
>Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm >still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the >implications of my actions helps, then I'll pull out the >mirror. Take a peek at some of what Tim Yu and others have said >about the last race discussion on Poetics:
>
>An excerpt:
>
>"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being >able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the >street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not >possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial >minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that >over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have >most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as >it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list >is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely >heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
>
>and
>
>"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was >operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After >the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I >fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,

>the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to >outweigh the benefits."
>
>Please read the entire note here:
>http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
>
>and
>
>"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
found
>close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
>through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this >disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
>reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the >Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally >disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim >desired.
>
>Such is often the case with almost all message boards
>and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
>and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
>on the vast majority of message boards."
>
>http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs
-and-listservs.html
>
>
>Be well,
>
>Amy
>
>
>_____
>
>
>
>
>
>Recent work

>
>http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
>
>
>Amy's Alias
>
>http://amyking.org/
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 09:03:11 -0500
From: "Kimmelman, Burt" <[redacted]> Subject: Anglo-Saxon Riddle-Poem translations and illustrations on nycbigcitylit.com, from Bertha Rogers

If you have affection for Old English poetry then you might wish to check o= ut these translations (both literary and artistic) from Bertha Rogers:

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted] [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 6:17 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: my Anglo-Saxon Riddle-Poem translations and illustrations on nycbi= gcitylit.com

Dear Burt,
I thought you might be interested in seeing my Anglo-Saxon Riddle-P= oem translations and illustrations on nycbigcitylit.com. Here's the link:
http://www.bigcitylit.com/bigcitylit12.php?inc=3Dfall08/twelve_12.
Hope all is well with you, and hope you have a great Thanksgiving!
Best,
Bertha

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 06:39:20 -0800
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> I would take reflection as "generative" in that way. It is producing something. I would argue that if it produced indifference, though, it's not really generative of anything.
>
> Thanks for the clarification.
>
> Troy

Except indifference? Surely it generated indifference?

But no matter.

Because art is invisible, indifference does not always signify acute perception. Even when art is visible, this is true. Just because even the whole world is initially indifferent does not mean much, sometimes. The twist is sometimes incomprehensible for a while, foreign, not obviously relevant, emotionally unrecognized, yadayada.

I don't see 'generativeness' as a useful measure of artistic quality. Instead, think of it as a property that some art has for some people and not for others. A kind of joint property shared by the work and some people. They connected somehow. Com port not null.

Or, if we use the definition I used of generativeness (which is how i normally use it concerning art), then think of generativeness as a property works of art are said to have when they themselves somehow generate art algorithmically. This is not a judgement but a categorization by other criteria.

I don't think Halvard was being petty. He made an observation that occurred to me also. Namely, if you use generativeness as a criterion to determine what's great art or even just art, you begin the construction with difficulties, big leaks in the hull. If I'm not mistaken, that ship has never sailed to glory. It just doesn't really lend itself to being used in such a way. Not to say it isn't a useful distinction, but the tool can be formulated more objectively, particularly when generativeness isn't made to be measured by vague audience reaction (anything other than indifference is generative? then it is a distinction without significant difference, in the scheme of things, because all we can say is it's generative if it got a reaction other than indifference. yet if we stay with it needing to generate writing or whatever in the audience then we have the case Halvard raised.).

ja
http://vispo.com

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 10:39:48 -0500
From: Michael Kelleher <[redacted]>
Subject: Literary Buffalo Newsletter 11.24.08-11.30.08

LITERARY BUFFALO
11.24.08-11.30.08

EVENTS THIS WEEK

Visit the Literary Buffalo calendar at www.justbuffalo.org for more detaile= d info on these events. All events free and open to the pubic unless other= wise noted.

11.24.08

Rooftop Poetry Club at Buffalo State College
Andrew Zawacki and Katy Lederer
Poetry Reading
Monday, November 24, 4:30 PM
E.H. Butler Library, Rm. 210

11.27.08

HAPPY THANKSGIVING

For your reading and culinary pleasure, take a look at Buffalo poetry maven= /culinary whiz kid Geoffrey Gatza's annual Thanksgiving Menu Poem:

Thanksgiving Menu Poem
Guest of Honor: Anne Waldman
All invited=21
Online now at http://www.blazevox.org/thanks.htm

11.29.08

Just Buffalo Interdisciplinary Event
Poetry and Fashion
Performances by Phranchiz, Lonnie Harrell, and Ten Thousand
Hosted by Dr. Anthony Neal
Saturday, November 29, 7:30 PM
Uptown Performing Arts Theater,=A03165 Bailey Ave., Bflo

JUST BUFFALO MEMBER WRITER CRITIQUE GROUP

http://www.justbuffalo.org/docs/Writer_Critique_Group.pdf

_____
___

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will i= mmediately be removed.

_____
Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
mjk=40justbuffalo.org

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 09:58:18 -0600
From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Got your point, Troy. The hyperbole was also noted.

Hal

"Take what you can use and let the rest go by."
--Ken Kesey

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 9:02 PM, Troy Camplin wrote:

Pettiness and purposefully missing the point are also not generative.

Troy

From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 11:57:56 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.

Hal

You have no enemies in this folder.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:

Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.

Troy Camplin

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Jim,

You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

*Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of photography?*

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized. In that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.

the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you mention, of course.

for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or http://vispo.com/arteroids

the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field.

dbCinema is generative.

you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation.
sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation. spamification.
that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time.
some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the time.
like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given program will halt.

"though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some artists like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions. In a sense, this is a pop approach."

Well, pop can be a powerful art form.

sure.

"Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to
some
other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."

In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to actualize. They are a limited number of them.

true.

ja
guidelines

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 08:06:26 -0800
From: Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]>
Subject: Self-promotion - Visual Poetry and more... Alexander Jorgensen

http://www.venerealkittens.blogspot.com/2008/10/alexander-jorgensen.html

For those interested, here are examples of what I'll call a "fresh wave" of visual poetry (and I use visual poetry, because I think, and this is my need, that vispo sounds too sterile for my liking) - along with a poem not otherwise found online (as it first appeared in Noon #4).

Hope you enjoy. Will say thanks ahead of time to those who do opt to visit. Incidentally, this online journal is really worth a look. Matina Stamatakis does an exceptional job with it.

Regards,
Alexander Jorgensen

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 4:01 AM

I would take reflection as "generative" in that way. It is producing something. I would argue that if it produced indifference, though, it's not really generative of anything.

Thanks for the clarification.

Troy

_____
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 5:27:37 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art

is social.

When some people call art 'generative', they mean it stimulates them to write or whatever. I take it that's your usage, Troy.

But the term 'generative art' has another meaning. It refers to a type of art where the work of art, itself, generates not a response in the audience but the visible or audible (or whatever) manifestation of the viewed work of art. So, typically, this sort of work of art is an executable, digital work, an app, a program, though it needn't be. Could be an analog machine or perhaps, on a more conceptual level, injunctions to do this or that. Though, in that case, the piece itself is not really doing the 'generation' and it probably wouldn't be of much interest to people interested in 'generative art'.

Just to clarify the term.

On another note. A work could stimulate others to reflect. That needn't be stimulating them to create.

Would that be 'generative' in your sense? Is that of value? If so, and it is not generative, then not all art is generative in your sense.

ja
http://vispo.com
guidelines

guidelines

Date: Sun, 23 Nov 2008 20:30:49 -0500
From: Amanda Earl <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

try the anthology Shift and Switch edited by Jason Christie and a.rawlings and derek beaulieu
http://www.themercurypress.ca/?q=books/shift_switch

i also recommend the Canadian site Ditchpoetry.com which includes a lot of experimental poetry, and perhaps language poetry and links to those who write it.

best,
Amanda Earl

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 08:17:22 -0800
From: Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

I think this is a really important posting. Thanks, Amy.

I kept wondering what all those silent list members were thinking.

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list m= ember
found problematic.=A0 The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote stra= ins of resistance -- i.e.=A0 the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist & here's a list.=A0=20

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
and
noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.=A0=20

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ...
wo= rth
ignoring.=A0=20
In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls fo= r sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were unawar= e
of how our language use might be problematic.=A0 Such calls for sensitivity
should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human a= nd
possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being se= en as

the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual prowess.=A0=20

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensui= ng
discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentimen= t and the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications
of =
some
terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out
some= thing
we've said that could be offensive.=A0=20

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something.=A0 I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications
of=
 my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror.=A0 Take a peek at some of wha= t
Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to
"pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and=20

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and=
-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D =3D= guidelines
=0A=0A=0A

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 08:56:24 -0800
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Mark,

Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv,
have = joined a community of writers.=A0 Self righteous indignation as a response = to someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race =
doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.=A0=20

As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members, eve= n if only to=A0 maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's
concerns?=
=A0 Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp w= hen we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is
to= express his consternation over the use of a term within this community?
=
=A0 Do we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?=A0=A0= =20

You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist
implica= tions, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the usage c= arries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did not warrant s= ome of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.=A0=20

It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or not aime= d at us.=A0=A0 And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of
language,=
' regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it simply s= houldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the abs= tracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us into all = manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being "misunderstood."

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
Amy:

Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.=20 Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.

Mark
--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM

From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
list
member
found problematic.=A0 The latter said so.

Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote stra= ins of resistance -- i.e.=A0 the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist & here's a list.=A0=20

Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
and
noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.=A0=20

The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ...
wo= rth
ignoring.=A0=20
In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls
for sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
unaware of how our language use might be problematic.=A0 Such calls for

sensitivity
should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human a= nd
possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being se= en
as
the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual prowess.=A0=20

This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensui= ng
discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentimen= t
and
the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications
of =
some
terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out
something
we've said that could be offensive.=A0=20

Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something.=A0 I'm still trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications
of=
 my actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror.=A0 Take a peek at some of wha=
t
Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

An excerpt:

"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being able to
"pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

and=20

"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me, the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to outweigh the benefits."

Please read the entire note here:
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html

and

"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he found close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim desired.

Such is often the case with almost all message boards and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants on the vast majority of message boards."

http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-and=
-listservs.html

Be well,

Amy

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

=3D=3D=3D

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D
=3D= guidelines
=0A=0A=0A

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 11:38:37 -0500
From: Tisa Bryant <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

"experimental" and not "language" ? but I offer:

Nicole Brossard
M. NourbeSe Philip
Louky Bersianik
Madeleine Gagnon
France Theoret
Roy Miki
Christian Bok
Derek MacCormack
Corey Frost

-----Original Message-----
>From: John Cunningham <[redacted]>
>Sent: Nov 24, 2008 8:28 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
>Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face
it,
>you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of >language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also,
right in >your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august
halls
>most of Canada's language writers emanated.
>John Cunningham
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On
>Behalf Of George Bowering

>Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
>You're kidding!
>
>
>On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
>
>> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of >> Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down
>> Canadian
>> language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any >> Canadian
>> language poets. Thanks.
>> John Cunningham
>>
>> welcome.html
>>
>
>G. Harry Bowering, OC
>Worth the trouble.
>
>
guidelines
>Internal Virus Database is out of date.
>Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
>Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
03/07/2008
>7:19 PM
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 11:43:41 -0500
From: Tisa Bryant <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

There's also Christian Bok & Margaret Atwood's Ground Works: Avante-Garde for Thee, House of Anansi Press, 2003

-----Original Message-----
>From: Amanda Earl <[redacted]>
>Sent: Nov 23, 2008 8:30 PM

>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
>try the anthology Shift and Switch edited by Jason Christie and
>a.rawlings and derek beaulieu
>http://www.themercurypress.ca/?q=books/shift_switch
>
>i also recommend the Canadian site Ditchpoetry.com which includes a >lot of experimental poetry, and perhaps language poetry and links to >those who write it.
>
>best,
>Amanda Earl
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 13:02:53 -0500
From: Sarah Sarai <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

. . . the Canadian language? . . . sounds like a northern patois

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 13:03:52 -0500
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no need to light fires.

Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us would try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in the language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.

Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers' list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the apples and oranges.

Mark

PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, when separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like "us." Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.

Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined Nigeria.

None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.

At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
>Mark,
>
>Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this >listserv, have joined a community of writers. Self righteous >indignation as a response to someone asking for a little sensitivity
>when it comes to issues of race doesn't exactly work towards >respecting group decorum.

>
>As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other >members, even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other >member's concerns? Are we so certain of our positions on exactly >how language works, esp when we use it, that we must let Obododimma >Oha know just how wrong he is to express his consternation over the >use of a term within this community? Do we even bother to wonder >if we've insulted other list members?
>
>You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist
>implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out >that the usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that >certainly did not warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
>
>It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or >not aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business >of language,' regardless of just who we're using it around and who >we think it simply shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise
>-- which is exactly the abstracted mentality that ignores who we're >talking with and gets us into all manner of nastiness on a daily >basis in the name of being "misunderstood."
>
>Be well,
>
>Amy
>
>_____
>
>
>
>
>
>Recent work
>
>http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
>
>
>Amy's Alias
>

>http://amyking.org/
>
>--- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
>Amy:
>
>Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
>Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
>
>Mark
>--- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>From: amy king <[redacted]>
>Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
>To: [redacted]
>Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
>
> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list
>member
>found problematic. The latter said so.
>
>Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote strains
>of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
>weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
>here's a list.
>
>Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and
>noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
>
>The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ... worth
>ignoring.
>In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same >institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying >sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls
>for >sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
>unaware
>of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity

>should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human and >possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being seen
>as >the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual >prowess.
>
>This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the ensuing >discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist sentiment
>and
>the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the >implications of some
>terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out
>something
>we've said that could be offensive.
>
>Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still >trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications of my >actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what >Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
>
>An excerpt:
>
>"As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being >able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the >street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not >possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial >minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that >over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have >most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as >it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list >is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely >heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
>
>and
>
>"In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was >operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After >the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I >fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,

>the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to >outweigh the benefits."
>
>Please read the entire note here:
>http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
>
>and
>
>"It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
>found
>close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
>through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this >disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
>reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the >Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally >disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim >desired.
>
>Such is often the case with almost all message boards
>and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
>and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
>on the vast majority of message boards."
>
>http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs
-and-listservs.html
>
>
>Be well,
>
>Amy
>
>
>_____
>
>
>
>
>
>Recent work

>
>http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
>
>
>Amy's Alias
>
>http://amyking.org/
>
>
>
>
guidelines
>
>
>
>
>
guidelines
>
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 13:35:40 -0500
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: What we're called, was Re: David

Obododimma & Others,

I have taken much from this discussion. I think just talking about this, no matter the timbre of our responses, has given me the chance to discuss language and its repercussions...something I rarely get to do otherwise.

-Ryan

On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 4:38 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Well, I guess I have I have made my point in this thread and cannot compel > anyone to give that point a second thought. By writing about "some wars > starting from recklessness in the use of language", I was not necessarily > addressing your analysis, or your use of words. I was simply referring to > the orientation of > say-it-the-way-you-like-it-don't-care-about-what-anyone-feels. It's good > that Anny Ballardini gave an example of a personal experience he had when > he > used the expression "working as hard as a negro". For him, he didn't mean > any prejudice. But someone there saw something else in the analogy and got > offended. And what did Ballardini do next?One has to decide for oneself how > to manage one's language and situations that unfold from language use

in a > world where people indeed see language as social semiotic.
> For me, this is where the thread ends.
>
> Regards.
> Obododimma.
>
> On Thu, Nov 20, 2008 at 12:37 AM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > It's always interesting to be the butt of sarcasm, but accuracy also > > counts. I was I thought pointing out the large gray areas, and talking > about > > appropriateness (albeit with tongue wandering into cheek at times).
I
> doubt
> > that I've caused too many wars today.
> >
> > But your examples present some interesting issues. Policeman became > > obsolete as a generic term when women were allowed to join police forces,
> > and other terms that cover both genders, like cops, police, or police > > officers, took over, because it would have been absurd to do otherwise.
> But
> > we refer to policemen and policewomen when appropriate--it's not > > anachronistic to point out a policewoman to someone who needs help, if > > that's who's available. The word stewardess, which is the term I think

> you > > were searching for, became an issue because it had an extraprofessional
> use > > as fetish. That survives to an extent, but probably more than the word > > itself, which dates back to when cabin crews were exclusively female
(and > > exclusively young--there were age discrimination suits about that).
> Poetess
> > had largely fallen out of fashion by the time modern feminism arrived, > > relegated to designating only some women poets. And it's a good thing
> that > > it died--the attitude expressed by the word had become poisonous.
> >
> > These are all questions of gender, in a language that has become less and > > less gendered over the past thousand years. It's not something that > speakers
> > of more gendered languages worry about too much, because to do
something > > about it would require the restructuring of grammar. Airplane crews
are > > still hotes and hotesses, actors are comedians and comediennes, etc,
and
> the > > French sun is masculine and the moon feminine, while in German it's
the > > reverse. So the battles are fought elsewhere. In modern English there
> were > > so few distinct masculine and feminine forms for human occupations
that > most > > of the work of remaking the language would involve the renaming of
the > > beasts--stallion and mare, buck and doe, etc. Don't mistake me--I'm > plenty > > aware of gender issues. I'm talking about the genders of articles, nouns, > > pronouns and adjectives.

> >
> > A travel article in today's New York Times web edition, "The Proud > Indians
> > of Chiapas," has attracted a lot of comments, mostly about the use of the > > word Indian. Many of the respondents pointed out that in Chiapas, and > Latin > > America in general, the (recently) preferred term is "indigena" (which is > > both masculine and feminine, by the way). The objection noted to Indian
> is > > that it's inaccurate. In Spanish it's worse than that--Indio is often a > > derogatory term, and India in some places is a synonym for whore. But the > > article is written for gringos. In the US there's no unanimity among > (let's > > call them) first peoples about what to call themselves. Native American > > doesn't seem to have caught on, though it appeared to for a while, and > > members of a lot of tribes prefer to be called American Indians and don't > > mind that their reservations are generically called Indian reservations.
> In
> > the country at large Indian is nowhere near as derogatory as Indio or > India.
> > It apparently didn't raise eyebrows among the Times staffers.
> >
> > It's not up to me, it's up to the people so designated, who have a long > > history of persecution by whatever name. Not so the compound noun
> Nigerian
> > scam. It's hard for me to believe that anyone uses it with derogation of > > Nigerians in general in mind, and I don't think there's a shred of > > antiNigerian sentiment in the US, where most people would be hard put to > say

> > what a Nigerian is.
> >
> > But ok, what about the name Nigeria--Blackland? Is that an acceptable
> > inheritance from the colonialist past?
> >
> > If this thread continues, it would be nice if it involved discussion > rather > > than verbal violence. The issues are interesting in themselves.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > At 02:53 AM 11/18/2008, Obododimma Oha wrote:
> >
> >> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does
n > >> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language does
not > >> change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in different > >> times have different tastes and different responses. One would simply be > >> anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance,
continues
> >> using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air hostess"
> >> (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess"
(instead of > >> simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering out words
> >> processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time.
Perhaps you
> are > >> also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does not

and
> would > >> not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense
with > >> communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars in the > world
> >> start from recklessness in the use of words. --- Obododimma Oha.
> >> _____
> >>
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
guidelines
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 19:52:03 +0100
From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

I didn't want to come into this debate, but it seems to me that Mark Weiss really has an orientation in language use that he thinks is entirely healthy and cannot accommodate to others. Quite unfortunate. I thought that, by referring to his age, he should be helping us (who are supposedly younger) to be a little more cautious in our use of words. I was amazed when I came across terms such as "Moslem Hausa" and "Christian Ibo" in his post that I am responding to. Shocking! Maybe he doesn't know that millions of Hausa people are Christians! And maybe he doesn't know that some Igbo (not "Ibo") people are Muslims (one of my cousins is!), adherents of African Traditional Religion, Eckists, Guru Maharajists, etc. How then can he characterize a whole ethnic group like the Hausa as being Muslim? Yes, it is true that many Hausa people are Muslims, but that does not make the whole group Muslim. I am afraid that in using the term, Mark has become a victim of the political rhetoric that tries to use religion as shibboleth. It is such shibboleth that Ojukwu's war rhetoric tried to arm itself with, to attract international Christian sympathy during the war. I am Igbo myself and did support the Biafran cause, but now, as somebody with a PhD in Stylistics (specifically in War Rhetoric and a criminologist), I can, without appearing disloyal to Biafra, tell what Ojukwu was trying to do when he used the terms "Muslim Hausa Fulani" or "Islamic North". It would be a pity if the politician is now more clever than the poet the vates, the seer, the everything! But Mark is not a politician and should know the cost of words in the marketplace of meaning making.Mark, please, don't take offence at this: think seriously about your tendency to stick to your views, and refusal to welcome the fact that you could learn from another person!Be well, poet. Obododimma.

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no > need to light fires.
>
> Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us would > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in the > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with the > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited > denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.

>
> Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
> list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the > apples and oranges.
>
> Mark
>
> PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy
> regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer

> bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, when > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like "us."
> Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.
>
> Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined Nigeria.
>
> None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
>
>
> At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
>
>> Mark,
>>
>> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a response to >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of

race
>> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
>>
>> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other
members,
>> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's concerns?
>> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp when >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is
to >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this community? Do
>> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
>>
>> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did
not >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
>>
>> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or
not >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of language,' >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
simply >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly
the >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us into
>> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being
>> "misunderstood."
>>
>> Be well,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>> _____
>>
>>

>>
>>
>>
>> Recent work
>>
>> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>>
>>
>>
>> Amy's Alias
>>
>> http://amyking.org/
>>
>> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
>> Amy:
>>
>> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
>> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
>>
>> Mark
>> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>> From: amy king <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
>>
>> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
list
>> member
>> found problematic. The latter said so.
>>
>> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
>> strains
>> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
>> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
>> here's a list.
>>
>> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and
>> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
>>

>> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
...
>> worth
>> ignoring.
>> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls
>> for >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
>> unaware
>> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity
>> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human
>> and >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
being >> seen
>> as
>> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual >> prowess.
>>
>> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the >> ensuing
>> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist >> sentiment
>> and
>> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of
>> some
>> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points
out
>> something
>> we've said that could be offensive.
>>
>> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications

>> of my >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
>>
>> An excerpt:
>>
>> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list >> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
>>
>> and
>>
>> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After >> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,
>> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to >> outweigh the benefits."
>>
>> Please read the entire note here:
>>
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
>>
>> and
>>

>> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
>> found
>> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
>> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
>> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim >> desired.
>>
>> Such is often the case with almost all message boards >> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
>> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
>> on the vast majority of message boards."
>>
>>
>>
http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and-listservs.html
>>
>>
>> Be well,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>>
>> _____
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Recent work
>>
>> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>>
>>
>>
>> Amy's Alias
>>

>> http://amyking.org/
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>>
>>
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 11:23:21 -0800
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

I mean, I couldnt believe that you yourself didn't know the field as well as anyone,.

gb

On Nov 24, 2008, at 5:28 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it, you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls
most of Canada's language writers emanated.
John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
[mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian language poets. Thanks.
John Cunningham

welcome.html

G. Harry Bowering, OC
Worth the trouble.

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
7:19 PM

welcome.html

G. Bowering
Knows which door the tiger's behind.

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 14:24:12 -0500
From: Vera Renczi <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

I think it's funny that you are creating a coarse and yet you seem to have very limited knowledge of the subject, but perhaps that is how it's done when one teaches

Colin smith

Dorthy Trujillo Lusk

Stephen Cain

Margaret Christakos

Daniel F Bradley

Victor Coleman

Christopher Dewdney

V

**

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 8:28 AM, John Cunningham
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face
it,
> you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of > language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also,
right in > your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august
halls
> most of Canada's language writers emanated.
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]]
On
> Behalf Of George Bowering
> Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
> To: [redacted]

> Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
> You're kidding!
>
>
> On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
>
> > I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of > > Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down
> > Canadian
> > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any > > Canadian
> > language poets. Thanks.
> > John Cunningham
> >
> > welcome.html
> >
>
> G. Harry Bowering, OC
> Worth the trouble.
>
>
guidelines
> Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
03/07/2008
> 7:19 PM
>
guidelines
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 12:59:19 -0800
From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Mark,
=A0
I'm writing as a member of this listserv community=A0who is slightly appall= ed and very=A0bewildered=A0by the lack of care & concern=A0evidenced sent i= n a number of=A0replies to Oha.=A0=20

=A0
And yes, I have indeed thought much of Oha's request and analyzed my experi= ence with the term, which is limited too.=A0 You might recall that my initi= al response to Oha was one of=A0surprise, apology, and a note to say that I= hadn't thought of the implications of using the term.=A0=20
=A0
Since then, my conclusion is that a) all email scams do not originate in Ni= geria, but in fact, originate from everywhere, including the U.S., =A0b)
I =
don't refer to email scams that originate from elsewhere as=A0"British Scam=
s" or "American scams", and c) isn't it simply easier, and more respectful = as per Oha's request, to refer to these scams as "email scams", both here i= n this community and elsewhere?=A0=A0 How hard is it to acknowledge the ris= k, make=A0the switch, and let Oha know his note made=A0me think?=A0 =A0Why = must he receive belligerence?=A0 I'm amazed at his consistent grace and civ= ility through all of this.=A0=20
=A0
My sense is, after much discussion with my students about the topic, that t= he average American doesn't know much about Nigeria or Nigerian culture,
my= self included.=A0 So why would I risk perpetuating the negativity that goes= with calling email scams, "Nigerian scams?"=A0 Similarly, many Americans d= idn't have much reference when they heard the word "Arab."=A0 Post 9/11,
we=
've got "Arab terrorists," which=A0has pretty much become synonymous
with "= Arabs" in our culture now (of course, generally speaking), and look at
the=

=A0negativity that term generates.=A0=20
=A0
Are all terrorists "Arab"?=A0 Are all Arabs=A0"terrorists"?=A0 Are all emai= l scams=A0perpetuated by=A0"Nigerians?"=A0 Are all Nigerians=A0email scamme= rs?=A0 =A0When I find it difficult to come up with much to say about Nigeri= a, I don't want my limited vocabulary to be about=A0Nigerian scams after al= l, nor do I want to reinforce that vocabulary elsewhere.=A0 This was no gre= at leap nor=A0grave concession.=A0 Moreover,=A0what grieves me, again,=A0ar= e the=A0resistances to=A0the validity of=A0Oha's request=A0sent in the face= of what could only=A0have been=A0a difficult one to make.=A0 And now, the = refusal to acknowledge that this list has a history of such resistance--and= that we may be carrying on tradition.=A0=20
=A0
Be well,
=A0
Amy

_____

Recent work
http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias
http://amyking.org/

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no > need to light fires.

>
> Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is
the essence > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group
> with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that
have > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us woul= d
> try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in
the > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with
the > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a differen= t
> order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by
the > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited
> denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds
it
> offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
>
> Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
> list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the > apples and oranges.
>
> Mark
>
> PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age
more > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I was in > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. W= e > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style

> boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Alo= y > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafr=
a > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule,
when
> separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa o= f
> the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of
the > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra
> was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like
"us."
> Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans
to > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then
> I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short end.
>

> Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book
"Walking," which I'm > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
Nigeria.
>
> None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
>
>
> At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
>
>> Mark,
>>
>> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a response to >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race
>> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
>>
>> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other
members,
>> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's concerns?
>> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp
when >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is
to >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this community? Do
>> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
>>
>> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out
that
the >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did
not >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
>>

>> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is
"unintentional" or not >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of language,' >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
simply
>> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets
us into
>> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being
>> "misunderstood."
>>
>> Be well,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>> _____
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Recent work
>>
>> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>>
>>
>>
>> Amy's Alias
>>
>> http://amyking.org/
>>
>> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
>> Amy:
>>
>> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
>> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
>>
>> Mark
>> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

>> From: amy king <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
>>
>> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
list
>> member
>> found problematic. The latter said so.
>>
>> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
>> strains
>> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
>> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms
exist &
>> here's a list.
>>
>> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
and
>> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
>>
>> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
...
>> worth
>> ignoring.
>> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls
>> for >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
>> unaware >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity
>> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human

>> and >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
being >> seen
>> as
>> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual >> prowess.
>>
>> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the >> ensuing
>> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist >> sentiment
>> and
>> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of
>> some
>> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points
out
>> something
>> we've said that could be offensive.
>>
>> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications
>> of my >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some
of what >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
>>
>> An excerpt:
>>
>> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of
being >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon
on the >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial

>> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being,
as >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics
list
>> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
>>
>> and
>>
>> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist.
After
>> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,
>> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to >> outweigh the benefits."
>>
>> Please read the entire note here:
>>
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
>>
>> and
>>
>> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
>> found
>> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
>> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
>> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim >> desired.
>>
>> Such is often the case with almost all message boards

>> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
>> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
>> on the vast majority of message boards."
>>
>>
>>
http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and=
-listservs.html
>>
>>
>> Be well,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>>
>> _____
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Recent work
>>
>> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>>
>>
>>
>> Amy's Alias
>>
>> http://amyking.org/
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D
=
>> guidelines
>>

>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D
=
>> guidelines
>>
>>
>>
=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D
=
>>
>
>
=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D
=
guidelines
>

--=20
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D
=3D= guidelines
=0A=0A=0A

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 12:01:57 -0800
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Now, if I were to answer your point in a generative manner, I would point out that Picasso has in fact caused me to write poems, so his work is cross-generative. I've also been influenced to write works based on feelings evoked by music. Keats' "Ode on a Grecian Urn" was a result of his having gone to see a show of Greek artifacts. An art work does not have to be generative into the same art form, and it does not have to make everyone be generative of art work, either -- though telling others about what you experienced is also a form of generativeness many non-artists can and do engage in.

Troy

_____
From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 24, 2008 9:58:18 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Got your point, Troy. The hyperbole was also noted.

Hal

"Take what you can use and let the rest go by."
--Ken Kesey

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 9:02 PM, Troy Camplin wrote:

> Pettiness and purposefully missing the point are also not generative.
>
> Troy
>
>

>
> _____
> From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 11:57:56 AM
> Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
>
> Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., > none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go > Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.
>
> Hal
>
> You have no enemies in this folder.
>
> Halvard Johnson
> ==========
> [redacted]
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
> http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html
>
>
>
>
> On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:
>
>> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art is social.
>>
>> Troy Camplin
>>
>>
>>
>> _____
>> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
>> To: [redacted]
>> Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM

>> Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
>>
>> Jim,
>>
>> You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea >> of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an >> algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a not >> openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.
>>
>> Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was >> applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to >> take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected >> light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those >> photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay The Peripheral space of >> photography?
>>
>> Ciao,
>>
>> Murat
>>
>>
>> On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>>> Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify the >>>> opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural >>>> kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized.
>>>> In
>>>> that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.
>>>>
>>>
>>> the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you >>> mention, of course.

>>>
>>> for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or >>> http://vispo.com/arteroids
>>>
>>> the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with >>> proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field.
>>> dbCinema is generative.
>>>
>>> you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation.
>>> sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the work of >>> art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation.
spamification.
>>> that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not. there just are >>> no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every time.
>>> some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the
time.
>>> like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given >>> program will halt.
>>>
>>> "though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension so some >>>> artists
>>>> like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions.
In a >>>> sense, this is a pop approach."
>>>>
>>>> Well, pop can be a powerful art form.
>>>>
>>>
>>> sure.
>>>
>>> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to
>>>> some >>>> other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>>>>

>>>> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me how hard >>>> it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative >>>> to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard to >>>> actualize. They are a limited number of them.
>>>>
>>>
>>> true.
>>>
>>>
>>> ja
guidelines
>>>
>>
>>
>
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 12:15:42 -0800
From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

I clarified a bit in my response to Halvard what I meant by "generative" in the sense I was using it. Not everyone can be artistically generative. Some people just feel the need to share in a positive manner what they experienced. "To generate" is to grow and to reproduce. So let me go further: neither indifference nor a negative reaction to a work is generative (and I'm not sure "indifference" can be generated -- it seems to me to be a neutral state and not an emotional state at all). A work that is generative in this sense, then, is also a beautiful work. I was thinking of Elaine Scarry's comment in On Beauty that the experience of beauty makes you want to reproduce it. That can be as simple as telling others about it, getting others to come share it with you, etc., or as complex as writing a symphony or a sonnet or making a sculpture of a painting in response to it. A work that is generative for me is not necessarily one that influences me to make another work of the same kind -- or even results in an immediate response in some other genre. Things are not so linear and clear-cut that way. There is no linear cause-and-effect in artistic influence, inspiration, etc.

Troy

From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 24, 2008 8:39:20 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> I would take reflection as "generative" in that way. It is producing something. I would argue that if it produced indifference, though, it's not really generative of anything.
>
> Thanks for the clarification.
>
> Troy

Except indifference? Surely it generated indifference?

But no matter.

Because art is invisible, indifference does not always signify acute perception. Even when art is visible, this is true. Just because even the whole world is initially indifferent does not mean much, sometimes. The twist is sometimes incomprehensible for a while, foreign, not obviously relevant, emotionally unrecognized, yadayada.

I don't see 'generativeness' as a useful measure of artistic quality. Instead, think of it as a property that some art has for some people and not for others. A kind of joint property shared by the work and some people. They connected somehow. Com port not null.

Or, if we use the definition I used of generativeness (which is how i normally use it concerning art), then think of generativeness as a property works of art are said to have when they themselves somehow generate art algorithmically. This is not a judgement but a categorization by other criteria.

I don't think Halvard was being petty. He made an observation that occurred to me also. Namely, if you use generativeness as a criterion to determine what's great art or even just art, you begin the construction with difficulties, big leaks in the hull. If I'm not mistaken, that ship has never sailed to glory. It just doesn't really lend itself to being used in such a way. Not to say it isn't a useful distinction, but the tool can be formulated more objectively, particularly when generativeness isn't made to be measured by vague audience reaction (anything other than indifference is generative? then it is a distinction without significant difference, in the scheme of things, because all we can say is it's generative if it got a reaction other than indifference. yet if we stay with it needing to generate writing or whatever in the audience then we have the case Halvard raised.).

ja
http://vispo.com

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 13:29:28 -0700
From: "Steensen,Sasha" <[redacted]>
Subject: Bonfire Broadside--Alice Notley

Bonfire Press is pleased to announce the publication of
"To Ric" by Alice Notley.

DESCRIPTION:
Broadside printed using lead type. Signed by author. 12 x 10. (2008).
Editi= on of 75 copies.
$10 (includes shipping; Canada, $12; all other countries $14.50).

For more information, please visit:

http://bonfirepress.colostate.edu

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3
D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 12:47:12 -0800
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo" hasn't Harold Bloom been saying something about generative art for the longest???....

He refers to it as "the anxiety of influence."

--- On Sun, 11/23/08, Troy Camplin <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Troy Camplin <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, November 23, 2008, 10:02 PM

Pettiness and purposefully missing the point are also not generative.

Troy

_____
From: Halvard Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, November 23, 2008 11:57:56 AM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

Damn! There go Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky et al., none of whom have stimulated me to compose music. Oops, there go Rembrandt, Picasso, and a whole bunch of others.

Hal

You have no enemies in this folder.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Nov 23, 2008, at 12:52 AM, Troy Camplin wrote:

> Seems to me that art, to be art, is necessarily generative. If it doesn't stimulate others to create, it's of no real value to anyone other than the person who made it. Which means it really isn't art. All art
is social.
>
> Troy Camplin
>
>
>
> _____
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Saturday, November 22, 2008 2:37:50 PM
> Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
>
> Jim,
>
> You are right. Generative art proliferates more easily. But I like the idea
> of "concept' in "conceptual." Doesn't "generative" imply more a formula, an > algorithm? You would know that better, but even an algorithm may have a
not > openly spelled out idea, concept behind it.

>
> Walter Benjamin's mechanical reproduction is problematic. When he was > applying that term to photography, photographs were extremely difficult to > take, took a lot of time and exposure and the transformation from reflected > light to image was fragile and full of 'mistakes." That's what makes those > photographs sp powerful. did you read my essay *The Peripheral space
of > photography*?
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>
> On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 3:44 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> Though our points of view are converging, I should also try to clarify
the >>> opposite point I am making: when concepual, particularly of the procedural >>> kind, explodes into unmanagable profileration when it becomes actualized.
>>> In
>>> that way, the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened.
>>>
>>
>> the procedural doesn't necessarily involve the sort of proliferation you >> mention, of course.
>>
>> for instance, http://vispo.com/StirFryTexts/spastext.html or >> http://vispo.com/arteroids
>>
>> the generative, on the other hand, is more often associated with >> proliferation. not always, though. 'generative art' is a whole field.
>> dbCinema is generative.
>>

>> you say "the concept gets deluted, blurred, weakened" via proliferation.
>> sometimes. but sometimes proliferation is part of the concept. the
work of >> art in the age of mechanical reproduction. proliferation.
spamification.
>> that still doesn't tell us whether it's interesting or not.
there just are >> no recipes for interesting art. no algorithms that will do it every
time.
>> some algorithms that will do it from time to time. but not all the
time.
>> like there is no algorithm that will always be able to tell if any given >> program will halt.
>>
>> "though I suppose it's easy to miss the conceptual dimension
so some >>> artists
>>> like to focus attention on it by the absence of other dimensions.
In a >>> sense, this is a pop approach."
>>>
>>> Well, pop can be a powerful art form.
>>>
>>
>> sure.
>>
>> "Something. It's just easier to pretend to the conceptual than it is to
>>> some >>> other types of work where the chops are not so easily fakable."
>>>
>>> In my recent conversation with Chris Funhouser, he was telling me
how hard >>> it was to create some of his "flash"? pieces. They are gorgeous, evocative
>>> to watch. on the other hand, it is a blessing that they are hard
to >>> actualize. They are a limited number of them.
>>>

>>
>> true.
>>
>>
>> ja
guidelines
>>
>
>

guidelines

guidelines

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 15:48:52 -0500
From: "K. R. Waldrop" <[redacted]>
Subject: 3 new titles from Burning Deck

3 new Burning Deck titles are available from:
Small Press Distribution, www.spdbooks.org or [redacted]
www.burningdeck.com
and in Europe, after Jan.1, 2009, from H Press: www.hpress.no

1. DICHTEN =3D, NO. 10: 16 NEW (TO AMERICAN READERS) POETS translated from the German by A. Duncan, T. Frazer, N. Grindell, C. =20 Hawkey & R. Waldrop
Poetry, 144 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN 978-1-886224-92-6
original paperback $14
Publication date: December 15, 2008

A magazine issue with poems by Ann Cotton, Franz Josef Czernin, =20 Michael Donhauser, Ute Eisinger, Daniel Falb, Hendrik Jackson, Marget =20=

Kreidl, Bert Papenfuss, Steffen Popp, Monika Rinck, Farhad Showghi, =20 Hans Thill, Raphael Urweider, Anja Utler, Ron Winkler, and Uljana Wolf.

The poets in this issue, mostly in their thirties and forties, show =20 great formal diversity. The works range from the sound explorations =20 of Anja Utler to the camp sonnets of Ann Cotten; from Czernin=92s puns =20= and permutations to Rinck=92s and Falb=92s deceptively simple parlando; =20= from Donhauser=92s grammatical disruptions to Papenfuss=92s baroque = lists =20 and =93sassy East tone.=94 But they all share a concern with form and =20= with language as material. The poets have also all received at least =20 one prize.

2. S=E9rie d=92Ecriture #21:
Isabelle Baladine Howald
SECRET OF BREATH
translated from the French by El=E9na Rivera
Poetry, 64 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN 978-1-886224-91-9 original paperback $14
Publication date: December 15, 2008

SECRET OF BREATH is a suite for two voices =97 a voice from outside and =20=

a voice from inside, a voice of the living and a voice of the dying =97 =20= in a race against death and toward death. Caught in a narrative frame =20= and a landscape marked by war, snow, cold, speed, and separation, =20 these two voices, even while facing death, embody the approach of =20 love. The secret of breath is as much a kiss as a last sigh.

ISABELLE BALADINE HOWALD lives and works in Strasbourg, where she =20 directs the =93Philosophical and Literary Encounters=94 of the Librairie = =20 Kl=E9ber. Her books of poetry include LES NOMS, TR=C8S BAS (A Passage, =20=

1986) and LES ETATS DE LA D=C9MOLITION (Editions Jacques Br=E9mond, =20 2002). Our present volume, SECRET DES SOUFFLES, is her most recent =20 book (=E9ditions Melville, 2004).

EL=C9NA RIVERA was born in Mexico City and spent her childhood, to the =20=

age of thirteen, in Paris. She is the author of MISTAKES, ACCIDENTS =20 AND A WANT OF LIBERTY (Barque Press, 2006) and SUGGESTIONS AT EVERY =20 TURN (Seeing Eye Books, 2005). Her translations have appeared in the =20 CHICAGO REVIEW and CIRCUMFERENCE: POETRY IN TRANSLATION. She was =20 recently awarded the 2007 Witter Bynner Poetry Translator Residency =20 at the Santa Fe Institute for the Arts.

3. S=E9rie d=92Ecriture Supplement #5
Anne Portugal
QUISITE MOMENT
translated from the French by Rosmarie Waldrop
Poetry, 24 pages, offset, saddlestitched
ISBN 978-1-886224-95-7 chapbook $8
Publication date: December 15, 2008

As Anne Portugal has said, her poetry breaks with elevated subjects =20 as well as with the beauty of phrases. =93Poetry is is a laboratory of =20=

languages. It is first and foremost physical.=94 Here, she truncates =20 words to give rise to new rhythms, puzzlement, and sheer fun.

ANNE PORTUGAL was born in Angers, in 1949. She lives and teaches in =20 Paris. She is also the model of a famous =93Poets=92 Calendar.=94 Her = most =20 recent books of poetry are DANS LA REPRODUCTION EN DEUX PARTIES =20 =C9GALES DES PLANTES ET DES ANIMAUX (1999) and D=C9FINITIF BOB (2002). =20=

Norma Cole has translated NUDE (Kelsey St. Press, 2001).
=20=

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 12:54:14 -0800
From: Martha Cinader Mims <[redacted]>
Subject: L&BH Radio Hour and Open Mic Nov. 25

L&BH Radio Hour and Open Mic Nov. 25, 8-9pm PST

At the start of the show I will be joined by Listen & Be Heard Theatre Critic Maria Vrobel, to talk about holiday shows around the Bay Area and hear her recommendations.

As always, the show will also feature announcements posted at Listen & Be Heard Network Arts News, some poetry and/or storytelling, some arts editorializing, and calls from listeners with thoughts to share and arts announcements.

Poets are encouraged to call in with a poem.

Listen, Chat and "Click to Talk" at
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/listenandbeheard/2008/11/26/LBH-Radio-Hour-Nov-25
Call-in Number: [redacted]

Please join me to listen and be heard.

Wishing you Peace and Poetry

martha cinader mims

Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

Get Skype and call me for free.

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 15:59:56 -0500
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

I apologize for my spelling. Ibo was the standard spelling back then in the US media. Igbo and the half a dozen variant spellings I know mostly from Cuban sources, and I thought they referred to a different people.

This from
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Demographics_of_Nigeria#Religions_.282000_estimate.29,
"Demographics of Nigeria," whose accuracy I of course can't vouch for:

Religious Affiliation Among Major Ethnic Groups

Source:
<http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org>http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org
* Hausa: 25,900,527 (Muslims 99.90%, Christians 0.10%)
* Yoruba: 22,921,473 (Christians 60.00%, Muslims 36.38%, Animists 3.00%, Non Religious 0.50%, Baha'is 0.07%, Atheists 0.05%)
* Igbo: 22,926,340 (Christians 97.00%, Animists 2.00%, Non Religious 0.80%, Atheists 0.10%, Baha'is 0.10%)

I've left out the rest of the table. If you have better sources, I'd be happy to learn. I'm of course aware that religion was used to manipulate international opinion during the war.

I learn from others all the time, usually through civil discussion. Like most of us, it's not the first time that I've thought about these issues, and what I use of the language has changed, in part because of input from others. I remain unconvinced in this instance. I don't think, as you suggest, that that's because of a character flaw.

I'm content to let this discussion end, but I'm not content to be insulted. If you want to have at me again, please take it backchannel. Front or backchannel, you might want to read your posts before sending them.

Mark

At 01:52 PM 11/24/2008, you wrote:
>I didn't want to come into this debate, but it seems to me that Mark Weiss
>really has an orientation in language use that he thinks is entirely healthy >and cannot accommodate to others. Quite unfortunate. I thought that, by >referring to his age, he should be helping us (who are supposedly younger) >to be a little more cautious in our use of words. I was amazed when I came >across terms such as "Moslem Hausa" and "Christian Ibo" in his post

that I >am responding to. Shocking! Maybe he doesn't know that millions of Hausa
>people are Christians! And maybe he doesn't know that some Igbo (not "Ibo")
>people are Muslims (one of my cousins is!), adherents of African Traditional
>Religion, Eckists, Guru Maharajists, etc. How then can he characterize
a >whole ethnic group like the Hausa as being Muslim? Yes, it is true that many >Hausa people are Muslims, but that does not make the whole group Muslim. I >am afraid that in using the term, Mark has become a victim of the political >rhetoric that tries to use religion as shibboleth. It is such shibboleth
>that Ojukwu's war rhetoric tried to arm itself with, to attract >international Christian sympathy during the war. I am Igbo myself and did >support the Biafran cause, but now, as somebody with a PhD in Stylistics
>(specifically in War Rhetoric and a criminologist), I can, without appearing >disloyal to Biafra, tell what Ojukwu was trying to do when he used the terms
>"Muslim Hausa Fulani" or "Islamic North". It would be a pity if the >politician is now more clever than the poet the vates, the seer, the >everything! But Mark is not a politician and should know the cost of words
>in the marketplace of meaning making.Mark, please, don't take offence
at
>this: think seriously about your tendency to stick to your views, and >refusal to welcome the fact that you could learn from another person!Be >well, poet.
>Obododimma.

>
>
>On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
wrote:
>
> > I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid > > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?") and > > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree
> > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's no
> > need to light fires.
> >
> > Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the essence > > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a group > > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms that have > > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us
would > > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply > embedded in the > > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with
the > > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder to > > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different > > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by
the > > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is limited
> > denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes towards > > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds it > > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
> >

> > Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but > > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
> > list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the > > apples and oranges.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> > PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more > > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been > > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes.
> When I was in > > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We > > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style > > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy
> > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer
> > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra > > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, when > > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of > > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the > > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra > > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like "us."
> > Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to > > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation by > > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then > > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware can't > > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the > short end.

> >
> > Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which I'm > > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined Nigeria.
> >
> > None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the > > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
> >
> >
> > At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
> >
> >> Mark,
> >>
> >> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv, have > >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a > response to > >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race > >> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
> >>
> >> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members,
> >> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other > member's concerns?
> >> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language
> works, esp when
> >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is to > >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this > community? Do
> >> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?

> >>
> >> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist > >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out that the > >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did not > >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
> >>
> >> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or
not > >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business > of language,' > >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
simply
> >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly the > >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets
us into
> >> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being > >> "misunderstood."
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:

> >> Amy:
> >>
> >> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
> >> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
> >>
> >> Mark
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
> >> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> >> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
> >> To: [redacted]
> >> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
> >>
> >> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another list
> >> member
> >> found problematic. The latter said so.
> >>
> >> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
> >> strains
> >> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
> >> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
> >> here's a list.
> >>
> >> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic and
> >> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
> >>
> >> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be ...
> >> worth
> >> ignoring.
> >> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same > >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying > >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to calls
> >> for > >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
> >> unaware

> >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for sensitivity > >> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being human
> >> and > >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls being > >> seen
> >> as
> >> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual > >> prowess.
> >>
> >> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the > >> ensuing
> >> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist > >> sentiment
> >> and
> >> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications of
> >> some
> >> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out
> >> something
> >> we've said that could be offensive.
> >>
> >> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still > >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the implications
> >> of my > >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of what > >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
> >>
> >> An excerpt:
> >>
> >> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of being > >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on the > >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not > >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial > >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize that > >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I have > >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as > >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics list > >> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely > >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."

> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was > >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist. After > >> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I > >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For me,
> >> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to > >> outweigh the benefits."
> >>
> >> Please read the entire note here:
> >>
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
> >> found
> >> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
> >> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this > >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
> >> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the > >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally > >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that

Tim
> >> desired.
> >>
> >> Such is often the case with almost all message boards > >> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
> >> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
> >> on the vast majority of message boards."
> >>
> >>
> >>
>
http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and-listservs.html
> >>
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines

> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >
guidelines
> >
>
>
>
>--
>Obododimma Oha
>Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>Dept. of English
>University of Ibadan
>Nigeria
>
>&
>
>Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>University of Ibadan
>
>Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 16:05:01 -0500
From: Ryan Daley <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Amy & Others,

I still feel like there's been a misreading of what the term "Nigerian email scam" refers to: particularly, the Nigerian 419 Letter DOES originate in Nigeria and the appeal, the voice of the email DID originate in Nigeria. Most people DO NOT refer to these emails as "Nigerian emails" but rather use the term "419 Letters." Using this term locates the particular email in question as being punishable by Code 419 in Nigeria, but doesn't assume that all authors are living in or nationals of Nigeria.

-Ryan

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 3:59 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Mark,
>
> I'm writing as a member of this listserv community who is slightly appalled > and very bewildered by the lack of care & concern evidenced sent in a number > of replies to Oha.
>
> And yes, I have indeed thought much of Oha's request and analyzed my > experience with the term, which is limited too. You might recall that my > initial response to Oha was one of surprise, apology, and a note to say that > I hadn't thought of the implications of using the term.
>
> Since then, my conclusion is that a) all email scams do not originate in > Nigeria, but in fact, originate from everywhere, including the U.S., b) I > don't refer to email scams that originate from elsewhere as "British Scams" > or "American scams", and c) isn't it simply easier, and more respectful as > per Oha's request, to refer to these scams as "email scams", both here in > this community and elsewhere? How hard is it to acknowledge the risk, > make the switch, and let Oha know his note made me think? Why must he > receive belligerence? I'm amazed at his consistent grace and civility > through all of this.
>
> My sense is, after much discussion with my students about the topic, that > the average American doesn't know much about Nigeria or Nigerian culture, > myself included. So why would I risk perpetuating the negativity that goes > with calling email scams, "Nigerian scams?" Similarly, many Americans > didn't have much reference when they heard the word "Arab." Post 9/11,

> we've got "Arab terrorists," which has pretty much become synonymous
with
> "Arabs" in our culture now (of course, generally speaking), and look
at
> the negativity that term generates.
>
> Are all terrorists "Arab"? Are all Arabs "terrorists"? Are all email > scams perpetuated by "Nigerians?" Are all Nigerians email scammers?
When
> I find it difficult to come up with much to say about Nigeria, I don't want > my limited vocabulary to be about Nigerian scams after all, nor do I want to > reinforce that vocabulary elsewhere. This was no great leap nor grave > concession. Moreover, what grieves me, again, are the resistances to
the > validity of Oha's request sent in the face of what could only have been a > difficult one to make. And now, the refusal to acknowledge that this list
> has a history of such resistance--and that we may be carrying on tradition.
>
> Be well,
>
> Amy
>
> _____
>
>
> Recent work
> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
> Amy's Alias
> http://amyking.org/
>
>
>

> On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid > > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?")
> and > > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree
> > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and > there's no
> > need to light fires.
> >
> > Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is
> the essence > > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a > group
> > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms
that
> have > > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us
> would > > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in
> the > > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with
> the > > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's > even harder to > > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a > different > > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by
> the > > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is > limited
> > denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes > towards > > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds

> it
> > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
> >
> > Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree, but > > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a > writers'
> > list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate the > > apples and oranges.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> > PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more > > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never > been > > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I > was in > > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months.
> We
> > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style > > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and > Aloy
> > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer > > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the > Biafra
> > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule,
> when
> > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa
> of > > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most

of the > > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra
> > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like
> "us."
> > Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to > > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and > starvation by > > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then
> > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm > aware can't > > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short > end.
> >
> > Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book
> "Walking," which I'm > > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
> Nigeria.
> >
> > None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and
the > > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
> >
> >
> > At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
> >
> >> Mark,
> >>
> >> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this > listserv, have > >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a > response to > >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of > race
> >> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
> >>
> >> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other
> members,
> >> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's

> concerns?
> >> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp
> when > >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he
is
> to > >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this > community? Do
> >> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
> >>
> >> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist > >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out
that
> the > >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did
> not > >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
> >>
> >> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is
> "unintentional" or not > >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of
> language,' > >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
> simply
> >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is > exactly the > >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets
> us into
> >> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being > >> "misunderstood."
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>

> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
> >> Amy:
> >>
> >> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
> >> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we > do.
> >>
> >> Mark
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
> >> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> >> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
> >> To: [redacted]
> >> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
> >>
> >> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
> list
> >> member
> >> found problematic. The latter said so.
> >>
> >> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
> >> strains
> >> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my > intentions
> >> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms
> exist &
> >> here's a list.
> >>
> >> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic

> and
> >> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
> >>
> >> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
> ...
> >> worth
> >> ignoring.
> >> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those > same
> >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its > underlying > >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to > calls
> >> for > >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or > were
> >> unaware
> >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for > sensitivity
> >> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being > human
> >> and > >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
> being > >> seen
> >> as
> >> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his > intellectual
> >> prowess.
> >>
> >> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in
the > >> ensuing
> >> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist > >> sentiment
> >> and
> >> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the > implications of
> >> some
> >> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points
out

> >> something
> >> we've said that could be offensive.
> >>
> >> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm > still > >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the > implications
> >> of my > >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some > of what > >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
> >>
> >> An excerpt:
> >>
> >> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of
> being > >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon
> on the > >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is > not > >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial > >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize
that > >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I
have > >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of
being,
> as > >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics
> list
> >> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely > >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted > down."
> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he > was > >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist.

> After
> >> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I > >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For > me,
> >> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to > >> outweigh the benefits."
> >>
> >> Please read the entire note here:
> >>
>
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact > that he
> >> found
> >> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
> >> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this > >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of > Listserv
> >> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the > >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally > >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim
> >> desired.
> >>
> >> Such is often the case with almost all message boards > >> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
> >> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
> >> on the vast majority of message boards."
> >>
> >>
> >>
>
>
http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and-listservs.html
> >>
> >>

> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha

> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
guidelines
>
>
>
>
>
guidelines
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 16:27:09 -0500
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

I'm very tired of this, but I do appreciate your more reasonable tone.

One might have hoped that a discussion like this would lead, as I think Steve Vincent attempted, to a broader discussion of the remnants of difficult histories that all languages retain. What you or I or the list think about Nigerian scam will have little influence on broader usage. It's different in kind, I think, from current use of the word arab in the US, which is far more toxic than Nigerian scam and far more globalized, and also not something we can conveniently drop, as I suspect that with the passage of time Nigerian scam will be.

So that's where my question, to myself as well as to the discussion at large, leads. OK, arab can't be dropped from usage because it's what a large number of people call themselves, and the obloquy attached to it will pass away as circumstances change, hopefully in our lifetimes. But what about Steve's example, or the ones I mentioned, which for most of us don't carry over to a broader prejudice? What about words like "bugger," originally Bulgar? We cleanse the language, unconsciously, all the time--Dutch treat is the sole remnant in common use of a large amount of nastiness from 17th Century Anglo-Dutch wars.

So, my question is about the conscious cleansing of language--the sense of what's appropriate usage, and what merits the proverbial soaping. We don't have an official body, like the Academie Francaise, in charge of this (not that the Academie has been particularly successful of late--remember the circumflex?), and the dictionary-makers, who used to take it upon themselves to decide, have become increasingly democratic. Any such decision involves the ceding of linguistic choice. Which means it's a matter of case-by-case discussion, and case-by-case use. Unless we want the good old days of not very long ago, when books could be banned for officially unacceptable words.

Peace. I really do have other things to do.

Mark

At 03:59 PM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
>Mark,
>
>I'm writing as a member of this listserv community who is slightly >appalled and very bewildered by the lack of care & concern evidenced >sent in a number of replies to Oha.
>
>And yes, I have indeed thought much of Oha's request and analyzed my >experience with the term, which is limited too. You might recall >that my initial response to Oha was one of surprise, apology, and a >note to say that I hadn't thought of the implications of using the term.
>
>Since then, my conclusion is that a) all email scams do not >originate in Nigeria, but in fact, originate from everywhere, >including the U.S., b) I don't refer to email scams that originate >from elsewhere as "British Scams" or "American scams", and c) isn't >it simply easier, and more respectful as per Oha's request, to refer >to these scams as "email scams", both here in this community and >elsewhere? How hard is it to acknowledge the risk, make the >switch, and let Oha know his note made me think? Why must he >receive belligerence? I'm amazed at his consistent grace and >civility through all of this.
>
>My sense is, after much discussion with my students about the topic,
>that the average American doesn't know much about Nigeria or >Nigerian culture, myself included. So why would I risk perpetuating

>the negativity that goes with calling email scams, "Nigerian >scams?" Similarly, many Americans didn't have much reference when >they heard the word "Arab." Post 9/11, we've got "Arab terrorists," >which has pretty much become synonymous with "Arabs" in our culture
>now (of course, generally speaking), and look at the negativity that >term generates.
>
>Are all terrorists "Arab"? Are all Arabs "terrorists"? Are all >email scams perpetuated by "Nigerians?" Are all Nigerians email >scammers? When I find it difficult to come up with much to say >about Nigeria, I don't want my limited vocabulary to be about >Nigerian scams after all, nor do I want to reinforce that vocabulary >elsewhere. This was no great leap nor grave concession. Moreover, >what grieves me, again, are the resistances to the validity of Oha's >request sent in the face of what could only have been a difficult >one to make. And now, the refusal to acknowledge that this list has >a history of such resistance--and that we may be carrying on tradition.
>
>Be well,
>
>Amy
>
>_____
>
>
>Recent work
>http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>
>Amy's Alias
>http://amyking.org/
>
>
>
>On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>wrote:
>
> > I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might > > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to avoid > > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?")
>and

> > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree
> > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and >there's no
> > need to light fires.
> >
> > Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is
>the essence > > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a >group
> > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms
that
>have > > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us
would > > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in
>the > > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with
>the > > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's >even harder to > > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a different > > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by
>the > > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is >limited
> > denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes >towards > > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds
>it
> > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
> >
> > Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree,
but > > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a >writers'
> > list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate
the

> > apples and oranges.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> > PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age more > > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never >been > > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I >was in > > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months. We > > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style > > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country, and Aloy
> > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke > > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer
> > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the Biafra > > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule, >when > > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative > > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa of > > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most of the > > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra > > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like >"us."
> > Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to > > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and >starvation by > > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died. Since then > > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm >aware can't > > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short >end.

> >
> > Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book
>"Walking," which I'm > > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
>Nigeria.
> >
> > None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and
the > > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
> >
> >
> > At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
> >
> >> Mark,
> >>
> >> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this >listserv, have > >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a >response to > >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of >race
> >> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
> >>
> >> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other
>members,
> >> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's >concerns?
> >> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp
>when > >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he
is
>to > >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this >community? Do
> >> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
> >>
> >> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist > >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out

that
>the > >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did
>not > >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
> >>
> >> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is
>"unintentional" or not > >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of
>language,' > >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
>simply
> >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is >exactly the > >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets
>us into
> >> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being > >> "misunderstood."
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:

> >> Amy:
> >>
> >> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
> >> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we >do.
> >>
> >> Mark
> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
> >> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> >> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
> >> To: [redacted]
> >> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
> >>
> >> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
>list
> >> member
> >> found problematic. The latter said so.
> >>
> >> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
> >> strains
> >> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my >intentions
> >> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms
>exist &
> >> here's a list.
> >>
> >> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
>and
> >> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
> >>
> >> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
>...
> >> worth
> >> ignoring.
> >> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those >same > >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its >underlying > >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to >calls

> >> for > >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or >were
> >> unaware
> >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for >sensitivity
> >> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being >human
> >> and > >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
>being > >> seen
> >> as
> >> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his >intellectual > >> prowess.
> >>
> >> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in
the > >> ensuing
> >> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist > >> sentiment
> >> and
> >> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the >implications of
> >> some
> >> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points
out
> >> something
> >> we've said that could be offensive.
> >>
> >> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm >still > >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the >implications
> >> of my > >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some >of what > >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:

> >>
> >> An excerpt:
> >>
> >> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of
>being > >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon
>on the > >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is >not > >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial > >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize
that > >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I
have > >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of
being,
>as > >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics
>list
> >> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely > >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted >down."
> >>
> >> and
> >>
> >> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he >was > >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist.
>After
> >> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here, I > >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment. For >me,
> >> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to > >> outweigh the benefits."
> >>
> >> Please read the entire note here:
> >>
>http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
> >>
> >> and

> >>
> >> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact >that he
> >> found
> >> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
> >> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this > >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of >Listserv
> >> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the > >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally > >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim
> >> desired.
> >>
> >> Such is often the case with almost all message boards > >> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
> >> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
> >> on the vast majority of message boards."
> >>
> >>
> >>
>http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs
-and-listservs.html
> >>
> >>
> >> Be well,
> >>
> >> Amy
> >>
> >>
> >> _____
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> Recent work
> >>
> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
> >>

> >>
> >>
> >> Amy's Alias
> >>
> >> http://amyking.org/
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> guidelines
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >
>guidelines
> >
>
>
>
>--
>Obododimma Oha
>Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>Dept. of English
>University of Ibadan
>Nigeria
>
>&
>
>Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>University of Ibadan
>
>Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
guidelines

>
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 22:41:32 +0100
From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

Those figures are totally wrong and have been seriously contested in Nigeria. The best place to go for such statistics is the relevant ministry of the Nigerian government and not Wiki. We know the uses and abuses of statistics! I don't know how those sources got their figures -- I suspect they simply saw every person saying salaam alaikum or putting on the long gown as "Muslim". Another point is that the Hausa are different from the Fulani, but some people tend to conflate the two groups. It is actually the Fulani (whose leader Othman dan Fodio conquered Hausaland in a jihad in the precolonial era) that are predominantly Muslims. I am away from Nigeria at the moment and cannot reach more reliable database. The point I had made in my previous note -- and which is more important -- is that Hausa and Igbo -- cannot be assigned to particular religions. It would be fallacious to say "Muslim Hausa" when some Hausa people are not Muslims. As a matter of fact, it is a form of assimilation that the non-Muslim Hausa in Nigeria have all along tried to resist. The Igbo society, too, is multi-religious and not necessarily "Christian".
You should also know that today, in Nigeria, terms like "Muslim Hausa" and "Christian Igbo" are viewed (especially by the government) as inciting ethno-religious prejudice and violence. We, in Nigerian, have had series of religious crises and bloodshed, and would view any discourse that divides the nation along religious lines as wicked and anti-Nigerian.

Tomorrow, if you are appointed American Ambassador to Nigeria, Nigerians would not treat you as their friend if in addressing them you use terms such as "Muslim Hausa" and "Christian Igbo" and cite Wiki as your source!

My best regards, Mark.
-- Obododimma.

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 9:59 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> I apologize for my spelling. Ibo was the standard spelling back then
in the > US media. Igbo and the half a dozen variant spellings I know mostly from > Cuban sources, and I thought they referred to a different people.
>
> This from
>
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Demographics_of_Nigeria#Religions_.282000_e stimate.29,
> "Demographics of Nigeria," whose accuracy I of course can't vouch for:
>
>
> Religious Affiliation Among Major Ethnic Groups
>
> Source: <http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org>
> http://www.worldchristiandatabase.org
> * Hausa: 25,900,527 (Muslims 99.90%, Christians 0.10%)
> * Yoruba: 22,921,473 (Christians 60.00%, Muslims 36.38%, Animists
3.00%,
> Non Religious 0.50%, Baha'is 0.07%, Atheists 0.05%)
> * Igbo: 22,926,340 (Christians 97.00%, Animists 2.00%, Non Religious > 0.80%, Atheists 0.10%, Baha'is 0.10%)
>
> I've left out the rest of the table. If you have better sources, I'd be > happy to learn. I'm of course aware that religion was used to manipulate > international opinion during the war.
>
> I learn from others all the time, usually through civil discussion.
Like > most of us, it's not the first time that I've thought about these issues,
> and what I use of the language has changed, in part because of input

from > others. I remain unconvinced in this instance. I don't think, as you > suggest, that that's because of a character flaw.
>
> I'm content to let this discussion end, but I'm not content to be insulted.
> If you want to have at me again, please take it backchannel. Front or > backchannel, you might want to read your posts before sending them.
>
> Mark
>
>
>
> At 01:52 PM 11/24/2008, you wrote:
>
>> I didn't want to come into this debate, but it seems to me that Mark
Weiss
>> really has an orientation in language use that he thinks is entirely >> healthy >> and cannot accommodate to others. Quite unfortunate. I thought that,
by >> referring to his age, he should be helping us (who are supposedly younger) >> to be a little more cautious in our use of words. I was amazed when I came >> across terms such as "Moslem Hausa" and "Christian Ibo" in his post that I >> am responding to. Shocking! Maybe he doesn't know that millions of Hausa
>> people are Christians! And maybe he doesn't know that some Igbo (not >> "Ibo")
>> people are Muslims (one of my cousins is!), adherents of African >> Traditional
>> Religion, Eckists, Guru Maharajists, etc. How then can he characterize a >> whole ethnic group like the Hausa as being Muslim? Yes, it is true that >> many >> Hausa people are Muslims, but that does not make the whole group Muslim. I >> am afraid that in using the term, Mark has become a victim of the >> political >> rhetoric that tries to use religion as shibboleth. It is such shibboleth

>> that Ojukwu's war rhetoric tried to arm itself with, to attract >> international Christian sympathy during the war. I am Igbo myself and did >> support the Biafran cause, but now, as somebody with a PhD in Stylistics
>> (specifically in War Rhetoric and a criminologist), I can, without >> appearing >> disloyal to Biafra, tell what Ojukwu was trying to do when he used
the >> terms
>> "Muslim Hausa Fulani" or "Islamic North". It would be a pity if the >> politician is now more clever than the poet the vates, the seer, the >> everything! But Mark is not a politician and should know the cost of words
>> in the marketplace of meaning making.Mark, please, don't take offence
at
>> this: think seriously about your tendency to stick to your views, and >> refusal to welcome the fact that you could learn from another person!Be >> well, poet.
>> Obododimma.
>>
>>
>> On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 7:03 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>> wrote:
>>
>> > I presume that you write as list owner, not as list member, which might >> > account for the ex-cathedra tone. In either case, you might want to >> avoid >> > condescending (even therapeutic--"admitting our vulnerability?")
and >> > extraordinarily self-righteous characterizations of views you disagree >> > with--they're a form of ad homina. This is not a flame war, and there's >> no
>> > need to light fires.
>> >
>> > Stephen Vincent, in raising "gypped," captured what I think is the >> essence >> > of the issue. The word's origin is profoundly racist, and refers to a >> group

>> > with a long history of discrimination, characterizing it in terms
that
>> have >> > caused enormous misery. If it were a more recent usage we most of us
>> would >> > try to reform it out of existence, but the word is so deeply embedded in
>> the >> > language that it's hard to imagine that many even associate it with
the >> > Roma, though I'd guess the Roma aren't happy about it. It's even harder
>> to >> > imagine it disappearing from the language. Nigerian scam is of a >> different >> > order--a term that I doubt I've ever used before this discussion, by the >> > way. Its origin is neither racist nor anti-Nigerian, and its use is >> limited
>> > denotatively and hasn't bled, and isn't likely to, into attitudes >> towards >> > Nigerians in general. Though I'm of course sorry that Obododimma finds
>> it
>> > offensive, it remains the very circumscribed term that we've got.
>> >
>> > Distinctions are what discussion is about. We don't need to agree,
but >> > discussing a contested term I would think is one function of a writers'
>> > list. Examples are a part of the discussion--they help us separate
the
>> > apples and oranges.
>> >
>> > Mark
>> >
>> > PS. I do have attitudes towards Nigeria, perhaps because of my age

more >> > richly textured than those of many on the list, although I've never been >> > there. The term Nigerian scam isn't a part of those attitudes. When I
>> was in >> > high school a Nigerian exchange student lived with us for a few months.
>> We
>> > became good friends. His father was head master of a very English-style
>> > boarding school, purportedly the most prestigious in the country,
and >> Aloy
>> > regaled me with stories of student pranks and harsh discipline. He spoke >> > Latin, which I envied, though not as much as his ability to open a beer >> > bottle with his teeth. Aloy was Ibo, and we lost contact during the >> Biafra
>> > war, like many of Nigeria's woes a delayed product of colonial rule,
>> when >> > separate entities and cultures were yoked together for administrative >> > convenience. It was something of a proxy war, as well. The Moslem Hausa
>> of >> > the dry north were the majority, and had all the guns, though most
of
>> the >> > resources and money were in the south. Much of the US support for Biafra
>> > was, I think, motivated by a sense that the Christian Ibo were like
>> "us."
>> > Which is not to negate the considerable pain that caused the Biafrans to >> > attempt to secede. New York's WBAI reported the bombings and starvation
>> by >> > live radio feeds. It was horrific--over a million people died.
Since

>> then
>> > I've followed the often-unpleasant news from Nigeria, which I'm aware >> can't >> > be the whole picture. In an unfair world West Africans are on the short >> end.
>> >
>> > Steve Vincent's luminous "African Cycle," in his book "Walking," which >> I'm
>> > proud to have published,formed a more pleasant part of my imagined
>> Nigeria.
>> >
>> > None of this has to do with what was a discussion of language and the >> > limited flexibility oif language, which is why I didn't raise it.
>> >
>> >
>> > At 11:56 AM 11/24/2008, amy king wrote:
>> >
>> >> Mark,
>> >>
>> >> Yes, we're writers who, by signing up to be members of this listserv,
>> have >> >> joined a community of writers. Self righteous indignation as a >> response to >> >> someone asking for a little sensitivity when it comes to issues of race >> >> doesn't exactly work towards respecting group decorum.
>> >>
>> >> As members of this community, do we care if we ostracize other members,
>> >> even if only to maintain our right to be obtuse to other member's >> concerns?
>> >> Are we so certain of our positions on exactly how language works, esp
>> when
>> >> we use it, that we must let Obododimma Oha know just how wrong he is to >> >> express his consternation over the use of a term within this community?

>> Do
>> >> we even bother to wonder if we've insulted other list members?
>> >>
>> >> You may disagree with Oha and determine that the term has no racist >> >> implications, but the fact that, as a list member, he pointed out
that
>> the >> >> usage carries offense to him is a valid complaint that certainly did
>> not >> >> warrant some of the opportunistic bravado sent in reply.
>> >>
>> >> It's easy to dismiss others when the offense is "unintentional" or
not >> >> aimed at us. And easy to write it off as the 'messy business of
>> language,' >> >> regardless of just who we're using it around and who we think it
simply >> >> shouldn't offend, despite their saying otherwise -- which is exactly
>> the >> >> abstracted mentality that ignores who we're talking with and gets us
>> into
>> >> all manner of nastiness on a daily basis in the name of being >> >> "misunderstood."
>> >>
>> >> Be well,
>> >>
>> >> Amy
>> >>
>> >> _____
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >> Recent work
>> >>
>> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >> Amy's Alias
>> >>
>> >> http://amyking.org/
>> >>
>> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, Mark Weiss wrote:
>> >> Amy:
>> >>
>> >> Still more boiled down. We're writers. We talk about language.
>> >> Sometimes we disagree. It's a messy business, but it's what we do.
>> >>
>> >> Mark
>> >> --- On Mon, 11/24/08, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>> >> From: amy king <[redacted]>
>> >> Subject: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
>> >> To: [redacted]
>> >> Date: Monday, November 24, 2008, 1:59 PM
>> >>
>> >> From my boiled-down perspective, one person used a term that another
>> list
>> >> member
>> >> found problematic. The latter said so.
>> >>
>> >> Several list members reacted to the questioning of said term with rote
>> >> strains
>> >> of resistance -- i.e. the don't-censor-me mentality, my intentions
>> >> weren't racist, other questionable-&-possibly-racist terms exist &
>> >> here's a list.
>> >>
>> >> Some list members acknowledged that the use of the term is problematic
>> and
>> >> noted the need to be sensitive about using such terms.
>> >>
>> >> The aforementioned list members found the sympathetic response to be
>> ...

>> >> worth
>> >> ignoring.
>> >> In a world where institutions were built on racism and where those same >> >> institutions continue to reflect & rely on that racism & its underlying >> >> sentiments (whether you're a skinhead or not) we should be open to >> calls
>> >> for >> >> sensitivity, even if we didn't mean to imply anything racist or were
>> >> unaware
>> >> of how our language use might be problematic. Such calls for >> sensitivity
>> >> should certainly not be dismissed just because they are about being >> human
>> >> and >> >> possibly even admitting our vulnerability --rather than such calls
>> being >> >> seen
>> >> as
>> >> the usual targets to attack so that one might show off his intellectual >> >> prowess.
>> >>
>> >> This kind of discussion has carried on before on the list, and in the >> >> ensuing
>> >> discussion, many have left due to the expression of further racist >> >> sentiment
>> >> and
>> >> the denial of granting that a) we might be ignorant of the implications
>> of
>> >> some
>> >> terms and b) maybe we should be more sensitive when someone points out
>> >> something
>> >> we've said that could be offensive.
>> >>
>> >> Despite how often we forget it, history tells us something. I'm still >> >> trying to learn, and if admitting ignorance, even about the >> implications

>> >> of my >> >> actions helps, then I'll pull out the mirror. Take a peek at some of >> what >> >> Tim Yu and others have said about the last race discussion on Poetics:
>> >>
>> >> An excerpt:
>> >>
>> >> "As an Asian American, I often have the (dubious) privilege of
being >> >> able to "pass" in everday life, with my race unremarked upon on
the >> >> street or in my workplace. There are moments, however, when this is not >> >> possible--when I become aware (often uncomfortably) that I am a racial >> >> minority. I am saddened, and more than a bit shocked, to realize
that >> >> over the past few years, it is on the Poetics list itself that I
have >> >> most frequently experienced this awareness of my own race--of being, as >> >> it were, the only Asian American in the room. Frankly, the Poetics
list
>> >> is still dominated by the voices of white men; other voices are rarely >> >> heard, and when they are, they tend to be ignored or shouted down."
>> >>
>> >> and
>> >>
>> >> "In last week's discussions, one list member noted that he was >> >> operating on the discussion that no one on this list is a racist.
After
>> >> the many, many incidents of anti-Asian rhetoric I have seen here,
I
>> >> fear that I can no longer be so confident about that sentiment.
For me,

>> >> the costs of remaining a member of the Poetics list have come to >> >> outweigh the benefits."
>> >>
>> >> Please read the entire note here:
>> >>
>>
http://tympan.blogspot.com/2005/03/why-i-finally-quit-poetics-list.html
>> >>
>> >> and
>> >>
>> >> "It appears to me that Tim's sadness results from the fact that he
>> >> found
>> >> close-mindedness and felt an absence of transformative potential
>> >> through the discussions on the Listserv. One can easily find this >> >> disappointment justified merely by noting the relative lack of Listserv
>> >> reactions to Tim's long, intelligent, and heartfelt post on the >> >> Listserv. The Listserv has clearly intellectually and emotionally >> >> disengaged itself from him. It is not the vibrant community that Tim
>> >> desired.
>> >>
>> >> Such is often the case with almost all message boards >> >> and listservs. Look around the internet, and you will find that racism
>> >> and sexism, largely divorced from intellectual content, are constants
>> >> on the vast majority of message boards."
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>>
http://asianamericanpoetry.blogspot.com/2005/03/of-message-boards-blogs-
and-listservs.html
>> >>
>> >>
>> >> Be well,
>> >>
>> >> Amy
>> >>
>> >>
>> >> _____

>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >> Recent work
>> >>
>> >> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >> Amy's Alias
>> >>
>> >> http://amyking.org/
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >> guidelines
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >> guidelines
>> >>
>> >>
>> >>
>> >
>> guidelines
>> >
>>
>>
>>
>> --
>> Obododimma Oha
>> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
>> Dept. of English
>> University of Ibadan
>> Nigeria
>>
>> &

>>
>> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
>> University of Ibadan
>>
>> Phone: [redacted];
>> [redacted].
>>
>>
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 16:10:13 -0600
From: John Cunningham <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

Unfortunately, the American language writers are much more well known than the Canadian. Furthermore, it is much easier in Vancouver to have knowledge due to the presence of Kootenay.
John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 24, 2008 1:23 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

I mean, I couldnt believe that you yourself didn't know the field as well as anyone,.

gb

On Nov 24, 2008, at 5:28 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it,
> you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in > your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls
> most of Canada's language writers emanated.
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On
> Behalf Of George Bowering
> Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
> You're kidding!
>
> On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
>
> I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down Canadian > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
> language poets. Thanks.
> John Cunningham
>
> welcome.html
>
> G. Harry Bowering, OC
> Worth the trouble.
>
> guidelines
> Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:

> 03/07/2008
> 7:19 PM
>
> welcome.html

G. Bowering
Knows which door the tiger's behind.

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
03/07/2008
7:19 PM

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 22:28:46 -0000
From: Robin Hamilton <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

<<
a) all email scams do not originate in Nigeria, but in fact, originate
from everywhere, including the U.S.,
>>

Who's arguing this?

But what we're referring to is not simply any scam, not simply even any email scam, but to a quite prominent sub-variety -- the Spanish Prisoner

Email Scam.

That would be an accurate way of referring to it, but somewhat cumbersome.

So what to name it?

I have to say, I'm surprised that no one has taken up what seems to me glaringly obvious, that the verbal *content of the text of the emails, from the start and continuing, is glaringly racist, in the originals and all sub-varieties, playing on stereotypical Western attitudes to the English linguistic competence of African first-language speakers.

{Jeezus fucking wept, we're arguing over what we *call a series Web-broadcasted texts that are *predicated, in their content, in a singularly slimy and racist use of implied linguistic responses. Leave aside the moral content of the texts themselves. Angels weep.}

If I had to put my money where my mouth is, the texts are written by highly-competent native English language speakers writing in blackface. And most likely, originating ultimately in the West.

<<
b) I don't refer to email scams that originate from elsewhere as "British Scams" or "American scams",
>>

What I am currently deluged with, in requests from Lloyds or Abbey National, for my bank details, are UK English region targeted scams.

Calling them "British" isn't racist (though it might have aspects of that) but blurs the fact that email scams hitting my Inbox are becoming more and more targetted, and misses the point that these scams are angled at a specifically *English (not a more generally UK British -- Scots or Welsh) audience.

<<
and c) isn't it simply easier, and more respectful as per Oha's request, to refer to these scams as "email scams",
>>

Except that we're talking about a *subset of a variety of email scams. I'd be happy to have a term that avoids "Nigerian" or even 419, but which acknowledges the history of not simply the activity of that scam but its current manifestation in cyberspace -- SPES[cam]?

As a last point, I'm dubious about Mark's worry about the connection between being gypped, and the Rom. I think this is a false parallel between being gypped and jewing someone down.

[Aside -- Mark, I'll go into details backchannel if you want about my doubts about the etymology of "gypped" as linked to the Rom -- the OED supports you, but the dates are totally wrong. I think this is an example of reverse folk-etymolygy.]

Robin

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 15:05:18 -0800
From: Jerome Rothenberg <[redacted]>
Subject: Millennium-3 preview: Sousandrade

A good chunk of "Wall Street Inferno" by the great Brazilian = late-romantic/early-modernist Sousandrade appears on the University of = California Press weblog as a preview of its appearance in Poems for the
=
Millennium, volume 3: The University of California Book of Romantic and
=
Postromantic Poetry = (http://ucpress.typepad.com/ucpresslog/2008/10/wall-street-inferno-by-so u= s=E2ndrade.html). A different excerpt and the commentary from PM3 by me and Jeffrey Robinson is on my blog at = http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2008/10/reconfiguring-romanticism-16
=
.=
html, along with other previews from the big book.

First copies of the book have now reached me, well in advance of the = mid-January pub date, so that Jeffrey and I are now considering readings = & signings to mark the occasion.

Jerome Rothenberg "There is an avant-garde that cannot be defeated."
1026 San Abella M. Giroud, quoted in J.R., "Autobiography"
=
=20
Encinitas, CA 92024 =20
[redacted] =20
jrothenberg at cox.net

=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D=3D

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 20:45:30 -0600
From: Tony Trigilio <[redacted]>
Subject: Spring 2008 Readings, Columbia College Chicago

Spring 2008 Poetry Reading Series
Columbia College Chicago

All readings free and open to the public

For more information: [redacted]

COURT GREEN (Dossier: Letters) and FENCE reading and release party
(AWP Off-Site Reading)
Thursday, February 12, 2009, 6:30 p.m.
Film Row Cinema
1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th floor

BRANDI HOMAN & JAMES SHEA
Wednesday, February 25, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Ferguson Theater
600 South Michigan Avenue, 1st floor

KIMIKO HAHN & TRACI MORRIS
Wednesday, March 18, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Sherwood Conservatory Recital Hall
1312 South Michigan Avenue

10th ANNUAL COLUMBIA COLLEGE CITYWIDE UNDERGRADUATE POETRY FESTIVAL
Thursday, April 2, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Conaway Center
1104 South Wabash, 1st Floor

MICHAEL BURKARD & RON PADGETT
Wednesday, April 22, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Film Row Cinema
1104 South Wabash Avenue, 8th floor

COLUMBIA POETRY REVIEW (#22) reading and release party
Thursday, April 30, 2009, 5:30 p.m.
Sherwood Conservatory Recital Hall
1312 South Michigan Avenue

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 18:52:38 -0500
From: "steve d. dalachinsky" <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: What we're called, was Re: David

just calling cops pigs was bad enough

they weren't all bad and pigs themselves tho a trifle messy
are very nice orderly and smart creatures
tasty as well
ah language the jew thing the jap thing the mick thing
like lenny bruce said if we hadn't paid so much attention to it
it mighta gone away

On Mon, 24 Nov 2008 13:35:40 -0500 Ryan Daley <[redacted]> writes:
> Obododimma & Others,
>
> I have taken much from this discussion. I think just talking about > this, no
> matter the timbre of our responses, has given me the chance to > discuss > language and its repercussions...something I rarely get to do > otherwise.
>
> -Ryan
>
> On Fri, Nov 21, 2008 at 4:38 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > Well, I guess I have I have made my point in this thread and > cannot compel > > anyone to give that point a second thought. By writing about "some > wars
> > starting from recklessness in the use of language", I was not > necessarily > > addressing your analysis, or your use of words. I was simply > referring to
> > the orientation of
> > say-it-the-way-you-like-it-don't-care-about-what-anyone-feels.
> It's good
> > that Anny Ballardini gave an example of a personal experience he > had when > > he > > used the expression "working as hard as a negro". For him, he > didn't mean
> > any prejudice. But someone there saw something else in the analogy > and got > > offended. And what did Ballardini do next?One has to decide for > oneself how > > to manage one's language and situations that unfold from language > use in a > > world where people indeed see language as social semiotic.

> > For me, this is where the thread ends.
> >
> > Regards.
> > Obododimma.
> >
> > On Thu, Nov 20, 2008 at 12:37 AM, Mark Weiss
> <[redacted]>
> > wrote:
> >
> > > It's always interesting to be the butt of sarcasm, but accuracy
> also > > > counts. I was I thought pointing out the large gray areas, and > talking > > about > > > appropriateness (albeit with tongue wandering into cheek at > times). I > > doubt
> > > that I've caused too many wars today.
> > >
> > > But your examples present some interesting issues. Policeman > became > > > obsolete as a generic term when women were allowed to join > police forces,
> > > and other terms that cover both genders, like cops, police, or > police > > > officers, took over, because it would have been absurd to do > otherwise.
> > But
> > > we refer to policemen and policewomen when appropriate--it's
> not > > > anachronistic to point out a policewoman to someone who needs > help, if > > > that's who's available. The word stewardess, which is the term I > think
> > you
> > > were searching for, became an issue because it had an > extraprofessional

> > use
> > > as fetish. That survives to an extent, but probably more than > the word
> > > itself, which dates back to when cabin crews were exclusively > female (and > > > exclusively young--there were age discrimination suits about
> that).
> > Poetess
> > > had largely fallen out of fashion by the time modern feminism > arrived, > > > relegated to designating only some women poets. And it's a good > thing
> > that > > > it died--the attitude expressed by the word had become > poisonous.
> > >
> > > These are all questions of gender, in a language that has become > less and > > > less gendered over the past thousand years. It's not something
> that > > speakers
> > > of more gendered languages worry about too much, because to do
> something > > > about it would require the restructuring of grammar. Airplane > crews are > > > still hotes and hotesses, actors are comedians and comediennes, > etc, and
> > the > > > French sun is masculine and the moon feminine, while in German
> it's the > > > reverse. So the battles are fought elsewhere. In modern English > there
> > were > > > so few distinct masculine and feminine forms for human > occupations that
> > most > > > of the work of remaking the language would involve the renaming
> of the > > > beasts--stallion and mare, buck and doe, etc. Don't mistake > me--I'm > > plenty > > > aware of gender issues. I'm talking about the genders of > articles, nouns,

> > > pronouns and adjectives.
> > >
> > > A travel article in today's New York Times web edition, "The > Proud
> > Indians
> > > of Chiapas," has attracted a lot of comments, mostly about the > use of the > > > word Indian. Many of the respondents pointed out that in > Chiapas, and > > Latin
> > > America in general, the (recently) preferred term is "indigena" > (which is > > > both masculine and feminine, by the way). The objection noted to > Indian
> > is > > > that it's inaccurate. In Spanish it's worse than that--Indio is > often a > > > derogatory term, and India in some places is a synonym for > whore. But the > > > article is written for gringos. In the US there's no unanimity > among > > (let's > > > call them) first peoples about what to call themselves. Native > American
> > > doesn't seem to have caught on, though it appeared to for a > while, and > > > members of a lot of tribes prefer to be called American Indians
> and don't > > > mind that their reservations are generically called Indian > reservations.
> > In
> > > the country at large Indian is nowhere near as derogatory as > Indio or > > India.
> > > It apparently didn't raise eyebrows among the Times staffers.
> > >
> > > It's not up to me, it's up to the people so designated, who have > a long > > > history of persecution by whatever name. Not so the compound > noun
> > Nigerian

> > > scam. It's hard for me to believe that anyone uses it with > derogation of > > > Nigerians in general in mind, and I don't think there's a shred
> of > > > antiNigerian sentiment in the US, where most people would be > hard put to > > say
> > > what a Nigerian is.
> > >
> > > But ok, what about the name Nigeria--Blackland? Is that an > acceptable
> > > inheritance from the colonialist past?
> > >
> > > If this thread continues, it would be nice if it involved > discussion
> > rather > > > than verbal violence. The issues are interesting in themselves.
> > >
> > > Mark
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > At 02:53 AM 11/18/2008, Obododimma Oha wrote:
> > >
> > >> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language > does n
> > >> Interesting argument. You are simply telling us that language > does not > > >> change, or should not be allowed to change. People who live in > different > > >> times have different tastes and different responses. One would > simply be
> > >> anachronistic and socially unacceptable if one, for instance,
> continues
> > >> using the term "policeman" (instead of "police officer"), "air > hostess"
> > >> (instead of "flight attendant" or "cabin crew") or "poetess"
> (instead of > > >> simply "poet"). I am surprised that you think that filtering > out words

> > >> processed as offensive in a given period is a waste of time.
> Perhaps you
> > are > > >> also saying that it is wrong for POETICS to rule that it does > not and
> > would > > >> not publish flame messages. Perhaps some of us can now dispense
> with > > >> communicative competence and facework. Little wonder some wars > in the > > world
> > >> start from recklessness in the use of words. --- Obododimma > Oha.
> > >> _____
> > >>
> > >
> Check
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> > --
> > Obododimma Oha
> > Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> > Dept. of English
> > University of Ibadan
> > Nigeria
> >
> > &
> >
> > Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> > University of Ibadan
> >
> > Phone: [redacted];
> > [redacted].
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>

Date: Mon, 24 Nov 2008 19:58:56 -0500
From: Gwyn McVay <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Discussions of Race and the Poetics List

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 4:05 PM, Ryan Daley <[redacted]> wrote:

> Amy & Others,
>
> I still feel like there's been a misreading of what the term "Nigerian email
> scam" refers to:

[very long prior discussion snipped]

For heaven's sake, people, how hard is it to refer to 419 letters as just that, as Ryan suggests, or say something like "so-called 'Nigerian' email scams," with quotation marks around "Nigerian" to make it clear that one does not personally believe all Nigerian individuals, or the country of Nigeria as a whole, to be engaged in scamming?

Little bitty scare quotes. So simple. So few pixels. And then we don't have to get into lengthily digressive discussions of ethnicity and religion as a way of justifying the original use of the term, yes?

Gwyn, end-of-semester-exhausted, McVay

End of POETICS Digest - 23 Nov 2008 to 24 Nov 2008 (#2008-312)
****

↑ Index

483. Anny Ballardini
We are all dancing again!
Tue 25 Nov 2008

---

http://saidwhatwesaid.com/

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

↑ Index

484. Peter Ciccariello
Someone else lives in this house
Tue 25 Nov 2008

Someone else lives in this house<http://ciccariello.viewbook.com/someone_else_lives_in_this_house#/1/>

- Peter Ciccariello
Hope Street, Poems from Providence<http://poemsfromprovidence.blogspot.com/>
Invisible Notes <http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

485. luke daly
Roberto Harrison's reflector
Tue 25 Nov 2008

House Press is pleased to release Roberto Harrison's reflector. reflector is #7 in the arrow as aarow series, edited by Michael Slosek and Luke Daly. Books are hand sewn, hand printed, and beautiful in a rough and tumble kind of way. Please visit www.housepress.blogspot.com to purchase this and other books in the series. Thanks!

Luke and Michael

↑ Index

486. Jim Andrews
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Wed 26 Nov 2008

---

my own responses to beautiful work vary. sometimes i am not moved to do anything about it, with it, for it, to it, through it. just enjoy it. and, if appropriate, send the author a message saying i appreciate it.

sometimes i tell all sorts of people about it.

sometimes the work relates somehow to my own and it helps me with my road map.

to me, it's beautiful and tragic that beauty is in the eye of the beholder. beautiful because we ourselves always have something to do with our own experience; to experience beauty is to know that it is in us to experience it and we share in that beauty; tragic because that beauty is non-existant to many other people, as though that beauty were less than a ghost to them, were nothing at all, not merely imperceptible but utterly non-existant. so that what one person finds beautiful and values so highly is ridiculous to another. as though, in esteeming beauty, we value what to us is worthy and venerable but to others may be less than a shadow.

which, itself, is tragic but beautiful. beautiful because, independent of religion, it involves faith. faith in the value of the beautiful even when beauty is in the eye of the beholder.

ja
http://vispo.com

----- Original Message -----
From: "Troy Camplin" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, November 24, 2008 12:15 PM
Subject: Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"

> I clarified a bit in my response to Halvard what I meant by "generative" in the sense I was using it. Not everyone can be artistically generative. Some people just feel the need to share in a positive manner what they experienced. "To generate" is to grow and to reproduce. So let me go further: neither indifference nor a negative reaction to a work is generative (and I'm not sure "indifference" can be generated -- it seems to me to be a neutral state and not an emotional state at all). A work that is generative in this sense, then, is also a beautiful work. I was thinking of Elaine Scarry's comment in On Beauty that the experience of beauty makes you want to reproduce it. That can be as simple as telling others about it, getting others to come share it with you, etc., or as complex as writing a symphony or a sonnet or making a sculpture of a painting in response to it. A work that is generative for me is not necessarily one that influences me to make > another work of the same kind -- or even results in an immediate response in some other genre. Things are not so linear and clear-cut that way. There is no linear cause-and-effect in artistic influence, inspiration, etc.
>
> Troy

↑ Index

487. Jim Andrews
my first vista/64-bit adventure
Wed 26 Nov 2008

---

in vista, by default, it is harder to record audio that does not come from a line in or microphone than it was in previous versions of windows.

howso?

by default, the only visible audio devices are 'line in' and 'microphone'. to record audio whose source is elsewhere is problematical--such as from inside the computer itself--without another audio device whose source is whatever is going on audio-wise in the computer.

the device exists but, by default in vista, is disabled and hidden. both disabled and hidden. you have to unhide it and enable it to record anything whose source is inside the computer. such as any app you run that makes sound. but first you have to twig that it is hidden. and disabled. and how to undo that.

in previous versions of windows, making this sort of recording was much easier because the device was in plain sight.

when you get a new computer and it has a different sound card than you're used to and you're new to vista also, it's easy to be confused about whether the problem relates to the sound card or the operating system. i spent a couple of days thinking the problem was with the sound card. until it occurred to me the problem might be a vista problem and i googled that issue more successfully via this string:

"recording in vista", "audio devices"

whereupon i came across http://tinyurl.com/6at275

I think Cameron Snyder's instructions in http://tinyurl.com/6at275 are something all users of Vista need to come across if they want to record anything internal to the computer. Anything at all. Such as apps that run on the computer and generate audio. Whether they run through the browser or on the desktop. That includes Winamp, iTunes, and so on. But also, it includes recording Skype conversations, compositions you make with online instruments/works of art, and so on.

The first of the above emails at http://tinyurl.com/6at275 is quite odd. Cameron Snyder's reply is a bit off though. My own feeling is that Robert Neville is flogging "Version 7 of Total Recorder" (mindfully or not) and the rhetoric of sales finds it convenient to posit "Micrsoft bowing to the RIAA and pressuring the soundcard manufacturers to remove the "What You Hear" feature from their drivers. This supposedly prevents you from recording web radio and other sound card audio."

My own suspicion is that some body such as the RIAA might have payed Microsoft to hide and disable the usual audio devices.

Or was it simply an ideological statement from Microsoft? I doubt it. I expect the action was taken after a cash payment. But that's just me?

Anyway, my new puter has been somewhat irksome. It has no serial ports. Serial is apparently out. USB is the thing. So my printer won't work with the new puter without a $50 converter cable. Neither will my tablet. Both are serial. But more importantly, neither Wacom, who make the tablet, nor HP, which makes the printer, are writing drivers for these old products for Vista. So even if I got the converter cables, I couldn't get these devices working with Vista.

The move to Vista is not just a move to a new operating system but, typically, to a 64 bit machine that has occassioned wide-ranging changes in things such as the audio architecture of the machine.

It's sort of like the transition from Windows 3.1 to Windows 95 where we went from 16-bit machines to 32-bit machines. Now we're going from 32-bit to 64-bit machines. These are major transitions in both the operating systems and a range of associated software architectures. Such as the audio system, which needs to be capable of even further increasing sample rates to provide audio that has presence, for instance. audio resolution has been quite low on computers. much less than analog recording, which we know can deliver presence (on vinyl).

The good news is that when I've figured stuff out, the resulting systems have generally performed better than the old ones. For instance, my audio, the sound of it through the speakers, is better. More good bass, for instance.

Also, when I record sound, I can choose a sample-rate of 192,000 samples per second. This is an increase from the old machine.

I just thought it very strange how, in this little story about just trying to do a simple thing with my new computer, I ran into a problem caused by the economic/political issues swirling around contemporary media.

Hiding and disabling the audio device needed to record audio from a source other than line in or microphone is unprecedented in the Windows operating system--or probably any operating system, for that matter. It is asinine. I don't know whether to think of it as emanating from Big Brotherdom or Dilbertdom. You can imagine the conversations between Microsoft executives and RIAA executives on the matter.

RIAA: "We'll pay you 3 million dollars to hide and disable that audio device."

MS: "We will have support costs. And damage control spin doctors to employ."

RIAA: Who's it gonna hurt? It'll just make it harder for the innocents to fall."

MS: "No, it can be an innocent activity. We would be punishing the innocent as well as the guilty. And it just makes using our computers harder for the innocents. We want to play ball with you but this will cost us."

RIAA: "OK, $10 million."

MS: "Well now that you put it that way, we can have a serious conversation about it."

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

488. Alexander Jorgensen
Black Robert Journal #2 is LIVE - Interview w/ Malay Roychoudhury
Wed 26 Nov 2008

He who jumps into the void, owes no explanation to those who watch.—Jean Luc Goddard

Black Robert Journal #2 is Live

This issue includes:

Writing
Andy Nicholson
Ren Powell
Christ Mulrooney

Bobby Lurie
Renne Emerson
rob mcclennan
Rosamond Zimmerman
Kisten Orser
Matt Sutin
Michael Montlack

Visual Art
Samit Roy
Matina Stamatakis

Interviews
Malay Roychoudhury - Part One

Samit Roy
Matina Stamatakis

↑ Index

489. Mark Weiss
Thanksgiving query
Wed 26 Nov 2008

As we're stocking the house with traditional foods like Turkey and bicarb it occurs to me that "eat the bird" used to be an American insult. Seems apt for the occasion, but I can't remember anything else about it. Anyone else remember this?

Mark

↑ Index

490. Thomas savage
Tom Savage's After Thanksgivings Day Reading
Wed 26 Nov 2008

Hi all. I'll be giving a 20 minute reading at 7PM this Friday November 28that the Cornelia Street Cafe at 29 Cornelia Street near Bleecker St. in New York City. This is preceded by an open reading that starts at 6PM. There is a $6 cover and you're supposed to buy one drink. It would be nice to see you there if you happen to be in NYC on Friday. Regards, Tom Savage

↑ Index

491. Martha Cinader Mims
Archived L&BH Radio Hour
Wed 26 Nov 2008

L&BH Radio Hour Nov. 25 - Nov 26,2008
Yesterday, 08:00 PM
At the start of the show I was joined by Listen & Be Heard Theatre Critic Maria Vrobel, who talked about some alternative holiday shows around the Bay Area of California.

I spoke about my poem about the Federal Reserve, which someone lifted and put at stopthefed.org without my permission, and I also read the poem.

We heard from Russ Golata in Florida, with some announcements and a poem.

I played my weekly editorial from my arts news TV show, which was about looking around and making use of what we already have. I also shared a couple arts opportunities. At the end of the show I read some poetry from three different chapbooks published by Listen & Be Heard, "Infinite Love Poem", "Environmental Terrorists" and "a little book of odes."

LBH-Radio-Hour-Nov-25.mp3
13.9 MB
Read more...

Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

Get Skype and call me for free.

↑ Index

492. Mairead Byrne
Re: Thanksgiving query
Wed 26 Nov 2008

Ah, this refers to a particular cut of meat which was so rough & rubbery it was referred to as "gutta percha." Then somehow in the mid-20th century, maybe because of metrical affinity, this was transmuted to "charlie parker" which naturally in time became "bird" hence "eat the bird." It really means having to eat a low-down rotten cut of meat (also associated with prison diets, as in "eat the bird in the can" or "canned bird," not to be confused with "eat the bird in the john" which means, er, well you can figure it out yourself.) We're having TURKEY!!! We've made it in the New World!!!! Mairead

>>> [redacted] 11/26/08 10:27 AM >>>
As we're stocking the house with traditional foods like Turkey and bicarb it occurs to me that "eat the bird" used to be an American insult. Seems apt for the occasion, but I can't remember anything else about it. Anyone else remember this?

Mark

↑ Index

493. Cara Benson
Re: my first vista/64-bit adventure
Wed 26 Nov 2008

---

planned obsolescence

two words:

planned obsolescence

Sous Rature

From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, November 26, 2008 9:20:12 AM Subject: my first vista/64-bit adventure

in vista, by default, it is harder to record audio that does not come from a line in or microphone than it was in previous versions of windows.

howso?

by default, the only visible audio devices are 'line in' and 'microphone'. to record audio whose source is elsewhere is problematical--such as from inside the computer itself--without another audio device whose source is whatever is going on audio-wise in the computer.

the device exists but, by default in vista, is disabled and hidden. both disabled and hidden. you have to unhide it and enable it to record anything whose source is inside the computer. such as any app you run that makes sound. but first you have to twig that it is hidden. and disabled. and how to undo that.

in previous versions of windows, making this sort of recording was much easier because the device was in plain sight.

when you get a new computer and it has a different sound card than you're used to and you're new to vista also, it's easy to be confused about whether the problem relates to the sound card or the operating system. i spent a couple of days thinking the problem was with the sound card. until it occurred to me the problem might be a vista problem and i googled that issue more successfully via this string:

"recording in vista", "audio devices"

whereupon i came across http://tinyurl.com/6at275

I think Cameron Snyder's instructions in http://tinyurl.com/6at275 are something all users of Vista need to come across if they want to record anything internal to the computer. Anything at all. Such as apps that run on the computer and generate audio. Whether they run through the browser or on the desktop. That includes Winamp, iTunes, and so on. But also, it includes recording Skype conversations, compositions you make with online instruments/works of art, and so on.

The first of the above emails at http://tinyurl.com/6at275 is quite odd. Cameron Snyder's reply is a bit off though. My own feeling is that Robert Neville is flogging "Version 7 of Total Recorder" (mindfully or not) and the rhetoric of sales finds it convenient to posit "Micrsoft bowing to the RIAA and pressuring the soundcard manufacturers to remove the "What You Hear" feature from their drivers. This supposedly prevents you from recording web radio and other sound card audio."

My own suspicion is that some body such as the RIAA might have payed Microsoft to hide and disable the usual audio devices.

Or was it simply an ideological statement from Microsoft? I doubt it. I expect the action was taken after a cash payment. But that's just me?

Anyway, my new puter has been somewhat irksome. It has no serial ports. Serial is apparently out. USB is the thing. So my printer won't work with the new puter without a $50 converter cable. Neither will my tablet. Both are serial. But more importantly, neither Wacom, who make the tablet, nor HP, which makes the printer, are writing drivers for these old products for Vista. So even if I got the converter cables, I couldn't get these devices working with Vista.

The move to Vista is not just a move to a new operating system but, typically, to a 64 bit machine that has occassioned wide-ranging changes in things such as the audio architecture of the machine.

It's sort of like the transition from Windows 3.1 to Windows 95 where we went from 16-bit machines to 32-bit machines. Now we're going from 32-bit to 64-bit machines. These are major transitions in both the operating systems and a range of associated software architectures. Such as the audio system, which needs to be capable of even further increasing sample rates to provide audio that has presence, for instance. audio resolution has been quite low on computers. much less than analog recording, which we know can deliver presence (on vinyl).

The good news is that when I've figured stuff out, the resulting systems have generally performed better than the old ones. For instance, my audio, the sound of it through the speakers, is better. More good bass, for instance.

Also, when I record sound, I can choose a sample-rate of 192,000 samples per second. This is an increase from the old machine.

I just thought it very strange how, in this little story about just trying to do a simple thing with my new computer, I ran into a problem caused by the economic/political issues swirling around contemporary media.

Hiding and disabling the audio device needed to record audio from a source other than line in or microphone is unprecedented in the Windows operating system--or probably any operating system, for that matter. It is asinine. I don't know whether to think of it as emanating from Big Brotherdom or Dilbertdom. You can imagine the conversations between Microsoft executives and RIAA executives on the matter.

RIAA: "We'll pay you 3 million dollars to hide and disable that audio device."

MS: "We will have support costs. And damage control spin doctors to employ."

RIAA: Who's it gonna hurt? It'll just make it harder for the innocents to fall."

MS: "No, it can be an innocent activity. We would be punishing the innocent as well as the guilty. And it just makes using our computers harder for the innocents. We want to play ball with you but this will cost us."

RIAA: "OK, $10 million."

MS: "Well now that you put it that way, we can have a serious conversation about it."

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

494. Lil Norton
new* issue 3, Model Homes (Lil Norton)*
Wed 26 Nov 2008

---

http://modelhomepage.blogspot.com/
Lil' Norton is proud to present, Model Homes issue 3, now yours to discover.
Join us in experiencing the prorated prospects of

Hung Q. Tu
Donato Mancini
Steven Zultanski
Kim Rosenfield
Kristen Gallagher
Douglas Kearney
Tommy Buck
Anna Vitale
Tyrone Williams
Jean Day

In time for the holidays, Issue and Subscription orders are now available through PayPal (no membership required, takes all credit cards, please visit out website). All correspondence, support, and inquiries welcome.

8.5 x 7, 64p, saddle stitched, made with love.
issn# 1938-8136
a Lil' Norton production

-Marie Buck & Brad Flis, editors
http://modelhomepage.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

495. Angeline, Mary
Re: Thanksgiving query
Wed 26 Nov 2008

We "flip the bird" we do not eat the bird.

_____

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Mark Weiss Sent: Wed 11/26/2008 8:27 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Thanksgiving query

As we're stocking the house with traditional foods like Turkey and bicarb it occurs to me that "eat the bird" used to be an American insult. Seems apt for the occasion, but I can't remember anything else about it. Anyone else remember this?

Mark

↑ Index

496. Mark Weiss
Language for whom, was Discussions of Race and the Poetics List
Wed 26 Nov 2008

This is definitely (well, maybe: the flesh is weak) my last on the subject. Note that I've changed the header, which I think was a form of unmerited, and worse, undefended, editorial content.

You post mixes apples and origins. There has been wide-spread commentary about the use of American Indian stereotypes for sports names. I remember questioning Indian giver as a child. My parents did their best, but didn't really answer the question. As an adult I assume its origin was in the misunderstanding of what it meant for an Indian to give, or to sell, property, Manhattan being a case in point; apparently as far as the Lenape were concerned they were selling temporary hunting rights. Moveable property gifts were often likewise seen as temorary, and return would be, from the Indian perspective, de rigueur. Forgive my generalizing--certainly not all Indian cultures had the same customs. In any event, American Indians are an oppressed, and vocal, minority among us who complain about stereotypes that still cause them serious injury on the part of other USians. I doubt they care as much what Tibetans, say, call their soccer teams. As far as I know some Dutch are confused by going Dutch or Dutch treat but don't feel at all threatened or more than mildly offended by it. I have Dutch friends. It's never come up.

As to sensitivity to the world around us, presumably you mean by the term that any one person's complaint (that's what we've got here) requires the impoverishment of the language, even if the word in question imposes no perceivable injury on the group that person claims, on his own say-so, to represent. Obododimma has every right to ask: "please don't use that phrase around me, I find it offensive," but perhaps not the right to say "all Nigerians find it offensive." He doesn't in any event have the right to expect automatic compliance.

An appeal to academic correctness doesn't alter the case: the academy's ownership rights to the language are severely limited. Those who don't understand that have been in school too long.

This reminds me of a frustrating exchange I had with a bureaucrat which led me to cry out: "Oh Jesus Christ," to which she snapped "There's no need to take the Lord's name in vain," which you can imagine didn't calm me down. She almost got a lecture from me on passive-aggressive behavior. That woman, unlike Obododimma, represents a very large population within the US who would find my usage profoundly offensive and would have a hard time escaping similar offenses. I think most of us would agree that we see this as different in kind, because of the different power equation, from the Indian instances. Few of us would cede the linguistic territory, despite the very real feeling of offense that woman experienced.

Language is always contested, but it, and the contestation, remains all of our property. Perhaps moreso for writers, which is why we tend to favor the protection of speech we don't agree with.

The only reason for this discussion, I think, is an exploration of the contested turf and how we traverse it.

Mark

At 01:14 AM 11/25/2008, you wrote:
>I guess I held out a hope that poets belong to a more elite group of humans.
>Sensitivity to the world around us, and other peoples feelings, >would matter more to poets because we are more receptive than the >average person. Aren't we?
>
>Well maybe this Utopian belief is wrong, but you can still hope. In >a real world that allows team mascot names like, Redskins, and >Indians, do we all become desensitized to language. labeling, and >name calling. Do sayings infuence our lack of respect for these >ethnic groups? Indian Giver, Going Dutch, are a couple examples of these..

>
>I still hope not.
>
>Peace
>Russ Golata
>

↑ Index

497. Andrew Lundwall
more new than you can shake a stick at!
Wed 26 Nov 2008

---

scantily clad press' newest titles:

- "note / worthy" by Russell Jaffe

- "Projectile Vomit" by Juliet Cook

- "President Letters" by Ken Rumble

- "Resort to Humming" by Daniela Olszewska

visit scantily clad press:

http://scantilycladpress.blogspot.com

...have a happy thanksgiving!

↑ Index

498. John Cunningham
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Wed 26 Nov 2008

I know and have written about the major American language poets. I have read their poetry and their theoretical material. I don't know that any Canadian poet has written anything theoretical. I don't know that any Canadian literary scholar has written anything about Canadian language poets. This is just to indicate the deplorable condition of Canadian literary scholarship. So Bowering, et al, at least I'm trying to do something to remedy the situation. What are you doing? John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of steve d. dalachinsky
Sent: November 24, 2008 5:56 PM

To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

so what's new so many smarts folks create things about things they know nothing about

On Mon, 24 Nov 2008 14:24:12 -0500 Vera Renczi <[redacted]> writes:
> I think it's funny that you are creating a coarse and yet you seem to
> have > very limited knowledge of the subject, but perhaps that is how it's > done
> when one teaches
>
>
>
> Colin smith
>
> Dorthy Trujillo Lusk
>
> Stephen Cain
>
> Margaret Christakos
>
> Daniel F Bradley
>
> Victor Coleman
>
> Christopher Dewdney
>
>
> V
>
>
> **
>
>
> On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 8:28 AM, John Cunningham
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's > face it,
> > you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the > reception of > > language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also,

> right in > > your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august
> halls
> > most of Canada's language writers emanated.
> > John Cunningham
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On
> > Behalf Of George Bowering
> > Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
> > To: [redacted]
> > Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
> >
> > You're kidding!
> >
> >
> > On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:
> >
> > > I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the > University of > > > Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track
> down
> > > Canadian
> > > language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any > > > Canadian
> > > language poets. Thanks.
> > > John Cunningham
> > >
> Check
> > > welcome.html
> > >
> >
> > G. Harry Bowering, OC
> > Worth the trouble.
> >
> >
> guidelines
> > Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> > Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com

> > Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
> 03/07/2008
> > 7:19 PM
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
7:19 PM

↑ Index

499. Jerome Rothenberg
Poems for the Millennium, vol. 3, pre-order discounts
Wed 26 Nov 2008

For those interested, it's come to my attention that pre-orders of Poems for the Millennium, volume 3 (romantics & postromantics) are being filled by Amazon at a huge discount ($34,95 reduced to $23.07). I don't know if other outlets are matching this, but thought I would pass the word along.

While advance copies are already going out, the actual publication date remains sometime in January. And further information (including blurbs from Hejinian, Palmer, Foley & others) can be found at http://www.ucpress.edu/books/pages/10540.php

P.S. The hard-cover -- by far the more beautiful version -- is also being reduced prior to publication: from $80 to $50.40.

Jerome Rothenberg
1026 San Abella
Encinitas, CA 92024
[redacted]
jrothenberg at cox.net
Blog at poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com

"Poetry must have something in it that is barbaric, vast, and wild."
D. Diderot

↑ Index

500. Mark Weiss
Re: Thanksgiving query
Wed 26 Nov 2008

Which means you get to eat the natives (it's always seemed to me that the Thanksgiving feast involved transubstantiation).

At 01:50 PM 11/26/2008, you wrote:
>Ah, this refers to a particular cut of meat which was so rough & >rubbery it was referred to as "gutta percha." Then somehow in the >mid-20th century, maybe because of metrical affinity, this was >transmuted to "charlie parker" which naturally in time became "bird" >hence "eat the bird." It really means having to eat a low-down >rotten cut of meat (also associated with prison diets, as in "eat >the bird in the can" or "canned bird," not to be confused with "eat >the bird in the john" which means, er, well you can figure it out >yourself.) We're having TURKEY!!! We've made it in the New World!!!!
>Mairead
>
> >>> [redacted] 11/26/08 10:27 AM >>>
>As we're stocking the house with traditional foods like Turkey and >bicarb it occurs to me that "eat the bird" used to be an American >insult. Seems apt for the occasion, but I can't remember anything >else about it. Anyone else remember this?
>
>Mark
>
>

↑ Index

501. Rodney Koeneke
Susana Gardner's new book: [lapsed insel weary]**
Wed 26 Nov 2008

Tangent Press is proud to announce the release of

[lapsed insel weary]

a poetry book by Susana Gardner

please order books by visiting our website:
http://www.thetangentpress.org/books.html

$12

"As the title suggests this is a sequence of articulations on the enduring themes of loss, separation, and messy love: love is always messy. But Gardner does not indulge in the easy cliches of introspection or confession: here she conjures up an hypnotic, somnambulistic symphony of exquisite desolation. 'No man is an island' wrote John Donne but Gardner knows that is only a half truth, especially if you are a woman. Against a backdrop of the sea the breaking waters of waves and birth crash through these pages with a contradictory melancholic joy. Her island is inescapable but it has a bird and it is shot through with the vitality of colour and the colour of tenacious life. Disturbingly beautiful." --Geraldine Monk

"Architecturally wild and sturdy, Gardner's book comes from a place beyond fear and despair, from a place of deep proclivity, which is where poetry becomes ancient, modern, and new." --Elizabeth Treadwell

"Susana Gardner's [lapsed insel weary] is an extended social lyric of longing that refuses isolation because the "grandmany" is all around, in ancestry and memory and books and and shared future. Gardner's is a language that recovers itself—lace re-tatted, a house rebuilt—and there is grandeur in the recovery. This is poetry full of heart and intelligence." --Carolyn Forche

↑ Index

502. Alexander Jorgensen

Re: Black Robert Journal #2 is LIVE - Interview w/ Malay Roychoudhury

Wed 26 Nov 2008

---

http://blackrobertjournal.blogspot.com/

He who jumps into the void, owes no explanation to those who watch.—Jean Luc Goddard

Black Robert Journal #2 is Live

This issue includes:

Writing
Andy Nicholson
Ren Powell
Christ Mulrooney
Bobby Lurie
Renne Emerson
rob mcclennan
Rosamond Zimmerman
Kisten Orser

Matt Sutin
Michael Montlack

Visual Art
Samit Roy
Matina Stamatakis

Interviews
Malay Roychoudhury - Part One
Samit Roy
Matina Stamatakis

↑ Index

503. Geoffrey Gatza

7th Annual Thanksgiving Menu Poem ::: Guest of Honor: Anne Waldman

Wed 26 Nov 2008

7th Annual Thanksgiving Menu Poem

All invited!
Online now at http://www.blazevox.org/thanks.htm

Guest of Honor: Anne Waldman

Hello and welcome! Let me take your coat and hat. Please grab a warm cider and let's meet the other guests by the fire. Dinner will begin shortly. This is the seventh year of this poem series and our guest of honor this year is Anne Waldman. Next year, we will have C. D. Wright at the front of our table! So be sure to come back :-)

A Menu Poem:

To have a gathering for so many, a virtual feast in order! The concept is a menu poem that I would serve if we could all gather in one hall. Each course has a poem associated with a food item in that dish. This is a small tribute to a great poet who has influenced us all. A way we can all gather in a small moment of comfort together and raise our glasses to honor fine work.

Best, Geoffrey Gatza | Editor & Publisher | BlazeVOX [books]

Online now at http://www.blazevox.org/thanks.htm

Or download the PDF right here
http://www.blazevox.org/Thanksgiving%202008.pdf

Thanksgiving 2008

Guest of Honor : Anne Waldman

A menu poem : Supererogatory

Menu:

Aperitif

Pear & Muscat Granita

Salad Course

Herb Confit Veggie Tower Lobster Salad with Fennel, Blood Oranges with Cilantro Spiced Carrot Fritter

Soup Course

Roasted Pumpkin Bisque, Apple Gelée with Cinnamon Nutmeg Cream

Fish Course

Potato Crusted Salmon on Swiss Chard with Champagne-Saffron Reduction

Seared Sea Scallops on Brussels Sprouts & Bacon

A Welcoming Table of Plenty

Porcini Stuffed Game Hen Resting on Red Lentil Curry, Garbanzos & Peas

Quilted Giraffe's Crispy Duck Confit

Currant Stuffed Chicken Breast with Pear & Potato Purée

Winter Tofu Tabbouleh

Glazed Carrots & Balsamic Cranberries

Braised Chestnuts, Grapes & Cognac

Braised Lentils, Mushroom, Pearl Onion & Bacon

Thyme Scented Acorn Squash, Roasted Zucchini

Vidalia Pissaladiere and Cabernet-Shallot Sorbet

Braised Bean, Leek & Collard Green

Maple Sugared Carrots & Parsnips

Dessert

Greenwich Village Four Chocolate Brownstone Brownie Tort

Online now at http://www.blazevox.org/thanks.htm
Online now at http://www.blazevox.org/thanks.htm
Online now at http://www.blazevox.org/thanks.htm

Also Read Thanksgiving Menu Poems Past

Ron Silliman :
Thanksgiving 2007

John Ashbery :
Thanksgiving 2006

Robert Creeley :
Thanksgiving 2005

Kent Johnson :
Thanksgiving 2004

Forrest Gander :
Thanksgiving 2003

Charles Bernstein :
Thanksgiving 2002

And make sure to come back next year! Our Guest of Honor will be C. D. Wright!!!

Again, happy thanksgiving to all!

↑ Index

504. Ann Bogle
at Ana Verse Nov. 26, 2008
Wed 26 Nov 2008

---

from the Index at Ana Verse:

Jan. 16, 2006 to Nov. 26, 2008 (rev. Nov. 26):

Contents: 283 posts (incl. Index); 51 drafts (not viewable); 232 viewable posts; 20 posts per pg.; 12 scroll pp.:

Page 1:

"Honor" and other words with "ho" in them at Ana Verse (list, prose poem)
Unrequited Loves, a collaboration (draft)*
Camille Claudel (draft, open ltr.)* Postscript to "Hoss Men"
"A Woman's Way Through the Twelve Steps" (poetry -line)
Punctuate (cnf, draft)
Years after Joy (inq.-cult.) Writing in the Open (nota.) Thanksgiving to Blogger WÏ€HÏ€AÏ€T (personal ltr., prosetics, draft)* (W H A T w/ pi symbols)
Hoss Men (draft, prosetics)*
Calling Michael Semora (nota.)
Hoss Men (13th rev.) (in reverse) (draft, prosetics)*
Like a delight ("found" poem)

http://annbogle.blogspot.com

*These "drafts" will re/appear at Ana Verse or in print publications TBA. AMB

*Life should be easier. So should your homepage. Try the NEW AOL.com.
(http://www.aol.com/?optin=new-dp&icid=aolcom40vanity&ncid=emlcntaolcom00000002)

↑ Index

505. George Bowering
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Wed 26 Nov 2008

Well, I am looking back at my old issues of the Canadian journal Open Letter and checking out all the many many theoretical pieces on language poetry, including those issues that were devoted to Language poets, including the famous L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E vo0lumes.

On Nov 26, 2008, at 2:57 PM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I know and have written about the major American language poets. I have read > their poetry and their theoretical material. I don't know that any Canadian > poet has written anything theoretical. I don't know that any Canadian > literary scholar has written anything about Canadian language poets. This is > just to indicate the deplorable condition of Canadian literary scholarship.
> So Bowering, et al, at least I'm trying to do something to remedy the situation. What are you doing?
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of steve d. dalachinsky
> Sent: November 24, 2008 5:56 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
> so what's new so many smarts folks create things about things
> they know nothing about
>
> On Mon, 24 Nov 2008 14:24:12 -0500 Vera Renczi
> <[redacted]>

> writes:
> I think it's funny that you are creating a coarse and yet you seem to have > very limited knowledge of the subject, but perhaps that is how it's done
> when one teaches
>
> Colin smith
>
> Dorthy Trujillo Lusk
>
> Stephen Cain
>
> Margaret Christakos
>
> Daniel F Bradley
>
> Victor Coleman
>
> Christopher Dewdney
>
> V
>
> **
>
> On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 8:28 AM, John Cunningham
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it,
> you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of > language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in > your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls
> most of Canada's language writers emanated.
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On
> Behalf Of George Bowering

Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down
Canadian
language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
language poets. Thanks.
John Cunningham

Check
welcome.html

G. Harry Bowering, OC
Worth the trouble.

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
03/07/2008
7:19 PM

guidelines

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
03/07/2008
7:19 PM

> welcome.html

George "Whip" Bowering
A law-abiding driver.

↑ Index

506. c. s. giscombe
Carden, Giscombe, Govind, Lease, Osborne, & Rahimtoola on the radio!
Wed 26 Nov 2008

CARDEN, GISCOMBE, GOVIND, LEASE, OSBORNE, & RAHIMTOOLA ON THE RADIO!

Join us in an experiment in radio and poetry and song on Sunday, 30 November, from 4 to 6 pm (Pacific time).

The place is Brian Kirvenâ€™s â€œSwervinâ€™ Kirven Showâ€ on KWMR in Point Reyes Station, California. Tune in, if youâ€™re in Marin County, at 90.5 or 89.7. Or listen on the Web by going to http://www.kwmr.org/index.html and clicking on the â€œOn Airâ€ logo at the top of the screen, under the cow.

The broadcast will include an unusual contest and surprising music. It will contain multitudes.

Berkeley poets Rachel Carden, C. S. Giscombe, Nikhil Govind, Joseph Lease (via telephone hook-up from Oakland), Gillian Osborne, and Samia Rahimtoola will read poems, talk, sing songs, argue, and field your questions, concerns, comments, and complaints. The show will be live and weâ€™re not sure exactly what will happen; weâ€™re interested in the shape all this will take. Telephone us at [redacted] or [redacted].

↑ Index

507. Alexander Jorgensen
THE LINK TO Re: Black Robert Journal #2 is LIVE - Interview w/ Malay Roychoudhury
Thu 27 Nov 2008

---

http://blackrobertjournal.blogspot.com/

He who jumps into the void, owes no explanation to those who watch.—Jean Luc Goddard

Black Robert Journal #2 is Live

This issue includes:

Writing
Andy Nicholson
Ren Powell
Christopher Mulrooney
Bobby Lurie
Renne Emerson
rob mcclennan
Rosamond Zimmerman
Kisten Orser
Matt Sutin
Michael Montlack

Visual Art
Samit Roy
Matina Stamatakis

Interviews
Malay Roychoudhury - Part One
Samit Roy
Matina Stamatakis

--- On Thu, 11/27/08, Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Alexander Jorgensen <[redacted]>
Subject: Fw: THE LINK TO : Re: Black Robert Journal #2 is LIVE - Interview w/ Malay Roychoudhury
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, November 27, 2008, 12:58 AM

http://blackrobertjournal.blogspot.com/

He who jumps into the void, owes no explanation to those who watch.—Jean Luc Goddard

Black Robert Journal #2 is Live

This issue includes:

Writing
Andy Nicholson
Ren Powell
Christ Mulrooney
Bobby Lurie
Renne Emerson
rob mcclennan
Rosamond Zimmerman
Kisten Orser

Matt Sutin
Michael Montlack

Visual Art
Samit Roy
Matina Stamatakis

Interviews
Malay Roychoudhury - Part One
Samit Roy
Matina Stamatakis

↑ Index

508. Alan Sondheim
We'll find a title for these.
Thu 27 Nov 2008

We'll find a title for these.

http://www.alansondheim.org/ooh1.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/ooh2.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/ooh3.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/ooh4.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/ooh5.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/ooh6.jpg
http://www.alansondheim.org/ooh7.jpg

By now you can see where these are going. A brief glimpse of the Organ Mountains outside of Las Cruces. A sense of melancholy. The mountains are scattered, mostly out of sight, presence of an inverted sublime...

| Alan Sondheim Mail archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
| To access the Odyssey exhibition The Accidental Artist:
| http://slurl.com/secondlife/Odyssey/48/12/22
| Webpage (directory) at http://www.alansondheim.org
| [redacted], [redacted], tel US [redacted]

↑ Index

509. Bob Heman collage show at 532 Gallery in Chelsea
Thu 27 Nov 2008

Hi Folks - Happy Thanksgiving - this is just to let you know that I'll be part of a collage group show that opens on Saturday December 6 at the 532 Gallery at 532 West 25th St. in Chelsea - the show includes collages by 24 artists including some by poets whose names you might recognize including Lewis Warsh, David Shapiro, Bruce Weber, the late Joe Brainard, and curators Jeffrey Cyphers Wright and Valery Oisteanu, among others - come on down and have a look - all the information follows - Bob

532 Gallery Thomas Jaeckel
532 West 25th Street, NY 10001

RIPPED AND TORN Collage & Assemblage
December 6 - December 22, 2008

Opening reception Saturday Dec. 6, 6- 9 pm Collage is the perfect medium for our fast-paced, information packed times. Since the beginnings with its first champions, Kurt Schwitters and Max Ernst, this humble art form has become the darling visual expression for writers. Recently, Pulitzer Prize winning poet John Ashbery received enormous attention for his collage show. Ashbery collaborated with fellow author and artist, the late Joe Brainard who headlines the show “Ripped and Torn” opening December 6th at 532 Gallery in Chelsea. Most of the 24 artists in the show are writers themselves including poet/critic curators Valery Oisteanu and Jeffrey Cyphers Wright. Poet David Shapiro is a close associate of John Ashbery. Lewis Warsh is a publisher and poet who creates abstract grids using letters. Star Black recently showed her collages and accordion books at Zieher Smith Gallery. Bruce Weber is the Director of the National Academy Museum. Amy Ernst, granddaughter of Max, is a consummate collagist, blending elements of figuration and abstraction. John Evans is the eminence gris of the collage movement in this country and shows regularly at Pavel Zoubek Gallery. His daughter India has caught the fever and creates charming visions using her trademark embroidered text. Other artists in the show include Judy Rifka, Bob Heman, Madeline Weinrib, Tom Walker, Rakien Nomura, Micci Cohan, Laurance Rassin, Sali Taylor, Charles Mingus III, Angelo Jannuzzi, Lucien Dulfan, Allan Sheinman, Toni Tiger and Luigi Cazzaniga.

Phone [redacted] | [redacted] | 532 West 25th Street, NY 10001 | Hours: Tue-Fri 11–6, Sat 12–5 and by appointment

↑ Index

510. Jim Andrews
new interactive Jig-Sound music
Thu 27 Nov 2008

Here is some new music I made: http://vispo.com/jig/JigArteroid1.mp3

It should be played quite loud. And played to loop/repeat at the end.

I composed this in an interactive Shockwave piece I wrote at http://vispo.com/jig/jigArteroids.htm called Jig-Sound.

The composition looks like this: http://vispo.com/jig/images/JigArteroids1.jpg . See if you can recreate it in Jig-Sound--or something more interesting to you.

The audio is from another app I made called Arteroids at http://vispo.com/arteroids ; these are (my) voice sounds.

ja

ps: There is some video explanation of Jig-Sound at http://vispo.com/bc/qt (and related links).

↑ Index

511. lanny quarles
NOSERING CELLPHONE
Thu 27 Nov 2008

Greetings to all,

I have just finished compiling a free e-chap called

NOSERING CELLPHONE

It is available at:

http://www.hevanet.com/solipsis/noseringcellphone.pdf

for you to download and peruse with your latte' laptop nosering reader services and fitness center latte' lexus nipple enhancement laptop shelters.

It is also available as a paper amoeba infofolio assemblaphage at http://www.lulu.com/content/5066951 and also as a free Thanksgiving ameoba cellphone dinner latte'.

please forward this message to other groupuscules and cellphone amoeba clatches,

Thank you.

Lanny Quarles, sexy amoeba-cellphone-bearded fitness sales consultant noise ring latte'

http://www.hevanet.com/solipsis/
http://jellybeanweirdo.blogspot.com/
http://www.phaneron.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

512. John Cunningham
Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Thu 27 Nov 2008

Thanks for turning me on to this, George. Ya see, all ya gots ta do is ask! Any other suggestions - something in the area of civility would be nice. By the way, I'm godforbid reviewing your new Talonbooks book for Prairie Fire. John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 26, 2008 9:10 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

Well, I am looking back at my old issues of the Canadian journal Open Letter and checking out all the many many theoretical pieces on language poetry, including those issues that were devoted to Language poets, including the famous L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E vo0lumes.

On Nov 26, 2008, at 2:57 PM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I know and have written about the major American language poets. I have read > their poetry and their theoretical material. I don't know that any Canadian > poet has written anything theoretical. I don't know that any Canadian > literary scholar has written anything about Canadian language > poets. This is
> just to indicate the deplorable condition of Canadian literary scholarship.
> So Bowering, et al, at least I'm trying to do something to remedy the > situation. What are you doing?
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of steve d. dalachinsky
> Sent: November 24, 2008 5:56 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
> so what's new so many smarts folks create things about things

they know nothing about

On Mon, 24 Nov 2008 14:24:12 -0500 Vera Renczi
<[redacted]> writes:
I think it's funny that you are creating a coarse and yet you seem to have very limited knowledge of the subject, but perhaps that is how it's done
when one teaches

Colin smith

Dorthy Trujillo Lusk

Stephen Cain

Margaret Christakos

Daniel F Bradley

Victor Coleman

Christopher Dewdney

V

**

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 8:28 AM, John Cunningham
<[redacted]>wrote:

Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it,
you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls
most of Canada's language writers emanated.
John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
[mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down
Canadian
language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
language poets. Thanks.
John Cunningham

Check
welcome.html

G. Harry Bowering, OC
Worth the trouble.

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
03/07/2008
7:19 PM

guidelines

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:

> 03/07/2008
> 7:19 PM
>
> welcome.html

George "Whip" Bowering
A law-abiding driver.

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
7:19 PM

↑ Index

513. David-Baptiste Chirot

The First "Thanksgiving" and the First Professional Painter in "The New World"

Thu 27 Nov 2008

Kenneth C. Davis' excellent op-ed in the NY Times (see below) is a great reminder of the first, and French, Europeans to build a small Fort and place to live in what is now the USA.

It neglects to mention, though, that this expedition included in it Jacques Le Moyne de Morgue, the first professional painter sent to paint the people and places of of this "New World."

Last summer a book appeared called
Painter in a Savage Land: The Strange Saga of the First European Artist in North America, by Miles Harvey, about the extraordinary life and times of this artist, whose name, works and life had for centuries been obscured, only to be "rediscovered" in recent years

I highly recommend the book to anyone for its wild mix of art, history, adventure and the at times sensation of "Magic Realism" which pervades it--the "Magic Realism" of "things never before seen nor heard of" as Lazarillo de Tormes puts it so well in the picaresque book of that name.

It is amazing to come across this piece as my mother and I had just been talking on the phone a bit before I read the article how much of the French presence in North America is obscured in the US to this day--after all--the only common sign of it we found as kids was "Franco-American Spaghetti" which made no sense at all to us when small. (And doesn't really, to this day--)

My great-aunt Irene Trepanier Payan did many years of geneological research and found that the first in our family to come to Quebec to live was in 1650. No

French women came for quite some time, leading the men for generations (including myself) to marry Indians. Thus, they were a mixed group of peoples, thought to be vastly inferior by the English who conquered them under Montcalm.

Through time there came the forced expulsions and ethnic cleansing of French-Indians to the US, including to Louisiana where already there was a strong French cultural influence that lives still today. (Arcadie became Nova Scotia--and Arcadiens became Cajuns.)

Here is the synopsis of Miles Harvey's excellent book-- I include it as a prelude to the piece below it from the Times. And here is the site for the book, where you can find excerpts from the book, letters and best of all some of the art work of Jacques Le Moyne de Morgue. http://milesharvey.com/default.htm

Some things in this book made me think, tough they are so very different, of the masterpiece by Cesar Aira An Episode in the Life of a Landscape Painter which concerns a German Humdoldt-influenced painter in 19th century Latin America.

Bon appetit !!

Painter in a Savage Land: The Strange Saga of the First European Artist in North America by Miles Harvey SynopsisIn this vibrantly told, meticulously researched book, Miles Harvey reveals one of the most fascinating and overlooked lives in American history. Like The Island of Lost Maps, his bestselling book about a legendary map thief, Painter in a Savage Land is a cosmpelling search into the mysteries of the past. This is the thrilling story of Jacques Le Moyne de Morgue, the first European artist to journey to what is now the continental United States with the express purpose of recording its wonders in pencil and paint. Le Moyne’s images, which survive today in a series of spectacular engravings, provide a rare glimpse of Native American life at the pivotal time of first contact with the Europeans–most of whom arrived with the preconceived notion that the New World was an almost mythical place in which anything was possible.

In 1564 Le Moyne and three hundred other French Protestants landed off the coast of Florida, hoping to establish the first permanent European settlement in the sprawling territory that would become the United States. Their quest ended in gruesome violence, but Le Moyne was one of the few colonists to escape, returning across the Atlantic to create dozens of illustrations of the local Native Americans–works of lasting importance to scholars. Today, he is also recognized as an influential early painter of flowers and plants. A Zelig-like persona, Le Moyne worked for some of the most prominent figures of his time, including Sir Walter Raleigh. Harvey’s research, moreover, suggests a fascinating link to the notorious Mary Queen of Scots. Largely forgotten until the twentieth century, Le Moyne's pieces have becomeincreasingly sought after in the art world–at a 2005 auction, a previously unknown book of his botanical drawings sold for a million dollars. In re-creating the life and legacy of Jacques Le Moyne de Morgues, Miles Harvey weaves a tale of both intellectual intrigue and swashbuckling drama. Replete with shipwrecks, mutinies, religious wars, pirate raids, and Indian attacks, Painter in a Savage Land is truly a tour de force of narrative nonfiction.

http://milesharvey.com/default.htm

Op-Ed Contributor

A French Connection

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/11/26/opinion/26davis.html?th&emc=th

By KENNETH C. DAVIS

Published: November 25, 2008

TO commemorate the arrival of the first pilgrims to America's shores, a June date would be far more appropriate, accompanied perhaps by coq au vin and a nice Bordeaux. After all, the first European arrivals seeking religious freedom in the "New World" were French. And they beat their English counterparts by 50 years. That French settlers bested the Mayflower Pilgrims may surprise Americans raised on our foundational myth, but the record is clear.

Long before the Pilgrims sailed in 1620, another group of dissident Christians sought a haven in which to worship freely. These French Calvinists, or Huguenots, hoped to escape the sectarian fighting between Catholics and Protestants that had bloodied France since 1560.

Landing in balmy Florida in June of 1564, at what a French explorer had earlier named the River of May (now the St. Johns River near Jacksonville), the French émigrés promptly held a service of "thanksgiving." Carrying the seeds of a new colony, they also brought cannons to fortify the small, wooden enclosure they named Fort Caroline, in honor of their king, Charles IX.

In short order, these French pilgrims built houses, a mill and bakery, and apparently even managed to press some grapes into a few casks of wine. At first, relationships with the local Timucuans were friendly, and some of the French settlers took native wives and soon acquired the habit of smoking a certain local "herb." Food, wine, women — and tobacco by the sea, no less. A veritable Gallic paradise. Except, that is, to the Spanish, who had other visions for the New World. In 1565, King Philip II of Spain issued orders to "hang and burn the Lutherans" (then a Spanish catchall term for Protestants) and dispatched Adm. Pedro Menéndez to wipe out these French heretics who had taken up residence on land claimed by the Spanish — and who also had an annoying habit of attacking Spanish treasure ships as they sailed by. Leading this holy war with a crusader's fervor, Menéndez established St. Augustine and ordered what local boosters claim is the first parish Mass celebrated in the future United States. Then he engineered a murderous assault on Fort Caroline, in which most of the French settlers were massacred. Menéndez had many of the survivors strung up under a sign that read, "I do this not as to Frenchmen but as to heretics." A few weeks later, he ordered the execution of more than 300 French shipwreck survivors at a site just south of St. Augustine, now marked by an inconspicuous national monument called Fort Matanzas, from the Spanish word for "slaughters." With this, America's first pilgrims disappeared from the pages of history. Casualties of Europe's murderous religious wars, they fell victim to Anglophile historians who erased their existence as readily as they demoted the Spanish settlement of St. Augustine to second-class status behind the later English colonies in Jamestown and Plymouth. But the truth cannot be so easily buried. Although overlooked, a brutal first chapter had been written in the most untidy history of a "Christian nation." And the sectarian violence and hatred that ended with the deaths of a few hundred Huguenots in 1565 would be replayed often in early America, the supposed haven for religious dissent, which in fact tolerated next to none. Starting with those massacred French pilgrims, the saga of the nation's birth and growth is often a bloodstained one, filled with religious animosities. In Boston, for instance, the Puritan fathers banned Catholic priests and executed several Quakers between 1659 and 1661. Cotton Mather, the famed Puritan cleric, led the war cries against New England's Abenaki "savages" who had learned their prayers from the French Jesuits. The colony of Georgia was established in 1732 as a buffer between the Protestant English colonies and the Spanish missions of Florida; its original charter banned Catholics. The bitter rivalry between Catholic France and Protestant England carried on for most of a century, giving rise to anti-Catholic laws, while a mistrust of Canada's French Catholics helped fire many patriots' passion for independence. As late as 1844, Philadelphia's anti-Catholic "Bible Riots" took the lives of more than a dozen people. The list goes on. Our history is littered with bleak tableaus that show what happens when righteous certitude is mixed with fearful ignorance. Which is why this Thanksgiving, as we express gratitude for America's bounty and promise, we would do well to reflect on all our histories, including a forgotten French one that began on Florida's shores so many years ago. Kenneth C. Davis is the author of "America's Hidden History: Untold Tales of the First Pilgrims, Fighting Women and Forgotten Founders Who Shaped a Nation."

_____ Access your email online and on the go with Windows Live Hotmail.
http://windowslive.com/Explore/Hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_access_112008

↑ Index

514. Angeline, Mary
Re: [BULK] Re: Canadian language writers/poets
Thu 27 Nov 2008

Isn't McCaffery (sp) a canadian? North of Intention One of the four hoesemen no? Do they need Canadian passports or can they sort of cross the line? Also Norma Cole writes theoretical pieces on language.

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of George Bowering Sent: Wed 11/26/2008 8:09 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: [BULK] Re: Canadian language writers/poets

Well, I am looking back at my old issues of the Canadian journal Open Letter and checking out all the many many theoretical pieces on language poetry, including those issues that were devoted to Language poets, including the famous L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E vo0lumes.

On Nov 26, 2008, at 2:57 PM, John Cunningham wrote:

> I know and have written about the major American language poets. I have read > their poetry and their theoretical material. I don't know that any Canadian > poet has written anything theoretical. I don't know that any Canadian > literary scholar has written anything about Canadian language
> poets. This is
> just to indicate the deplorable condition of Canadian literary scholarship.
> So Bowering, et al, at least I'm trying to do something to remedy the > situation. What are you doing?
> John Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of steve d. dalachinsky
> Sent: November 24, 2008 5:56 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets
>
> so what's new so many smarts folks create things about things
> they know nothing about

On Mon, 24 Nov 2008 14:24:12 -0500 Vera Renczi
<[redacted]> writes:
I think it's funny that you are creating a coarse and yet you seem to have very limited knowledge of the subject, but perhaps that is how it's done
when one teaches

Colin smith

Dorthy Trujillo Lusk

Stephen Cain

Margaret Christakos

Daniel F Bradley

Victor Coleman

Christopher Dewdney

V

**

On Mon, Nov 24, 2008 at 8:28 AM, John Cunningham
<[redacted]>wrote:

Now what is it you believe that I'm kidding about, George? Let's face it,
you and Daphne and Fred sort of seeded the ground for the reception of language writing/poetry through Tallman's class, didn't you? Also, right in your back yard is the Kootenay School of Writing from whose august halls
most of Canada's language writers emanated.
John Cunningham

-----Original Message-----

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
[mailto:[redacted]] On
Behalf Of George Bowering
Sent: November 23, 2008 8:38 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Canadian language writers/poets

You're kidding!

On Nov 23, 2008, at 8:54 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

I'm in the process of creating a Con Ed course for the University of Winnipeg on Language Writing/Poetry and am attempting to track down
Canadian
language poets. I'd appreciate it if anyone can refer me to any Canadian
language poets. Thanks.
John Cunningham

Check
welcome.html

G. Harry Bowering, OC
Worth the trouble.

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com <http://www.avg.com/>
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
03/07/2008
7:19 PM

guidelines

guidelines
Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com <http://www.avg.com/>
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date:
03/07/2008

> 7:19 PM
>
> welcome.html

George "Whip" Bowering
A law-abiding driver.

↑ Index

515. Alexander Jorgensen
Shameless, I'm: Best New Poems Online "Dissonance of Compassion"
Thu 27 Nov 2008

---

http://www.bestnewpoemsonline.com/

One needs to compete among the many wonderful voices. So many poets whose work I admire. Please do take a peak at this review and piece. Smile. It's the only chance we have.

Regards,
Alexander Jorgensen

--- On Wed, 11/12/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: David
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, November 12, 2008, 11:00 PM

Hi Barry, I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term "Nigerian scams"! What makes you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need to read the history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al Capone and other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many decades before what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.

I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in America (as a criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American scam", unless I mean to insult that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way we criminalize and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the netiquette at POETICS? Be well!

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
[redacted]> wrote:

> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been hacked into
and
> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be from him, stranded

> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be immediately wired. Needless > to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian scams... So if you > get that e-mail, be warned.
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

516. Jeffrey Side

New esay in Jacket Magazine: 'Empirical and Non-Empirical Identifiers'

Fri 28 Nov 2008

I have an essay in Jacket Magazine called 'Empirical and Non-Empirical Identifiers':
http://jacketmagazine.com/36/side-j-essay.shtml
This essay looks at certain effects of language that I call Empirical Identifiers because of the ways in which they encourage exegetical closure through their functioning as referents to phenomena. It also looks at their opposites, which I call Non-Empirical Identifiers because of the ways in which they invite readers to participate in the creation of individual meaning and significance from language that is autonomous and non-referential. These identifiers, by enabling a ready recognition of empirical and non-empirical writing procedures in poetry, may prove useful as diagnostic devices for literary and stylistic criticism. The essay examines a range of poetic works from the last century and assesses the extent to which they exhibit a reliance on either Empirical Identifiers or Non-Empirical Identifiers.

↑ Index

517. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart
Request for information
Fri 28 Nov 2008

Dear friends,

This summer at the New School I'll be teaching a literature/poetry course called "The Muse Singing: Myth in Poetry from Classical Times to Now." I would deeply appreciate suggestions regarding non-Western poetic responses to the Greek myths, from any era, any country. I'll post the course description below and the texts I'm already using. Many thanks in advance!

THE MUSE SINGING: MYTH IN POETRY FROM CLASSICAL TIMES TO NOW
Sharon Mesmer, Instructor / Humanities Division

The artful, emotive tellings of timeless myth-stories by poets of the classical world continue to enthrall us today. What is it about these mysterious and beautiful tales that has so captured the poetic imagination for so long? How, to paraphrase Walter Pater, have poets “become the depositaries of the instinctive products of the imagination, fixing its outlines and developing its situations”? To gain a new appreciation of four of the most central and familiar Greek myths (Demeter and Persephone; Cupid and Psyche; Daedalus and Icarus; Orpheus and Eurydice) we’ll first examine their oldest known literary sources (The Homeric Hymn to Demeter; Apuleius; Ovid) and read short interpretations by well-known scholars such as Edith Hamilton, Walter Pater, Jane Harrison, Guy Davenport and Joseph Campbell. Finally, we’ll do close readings of modern and contemporary poetic retellings of each tale and discuss connections/ disconnections with the original sources. Access to the films “La Belle et Le Bête/Beauty and the Beast” (as a modern interpretation of the Cupid and Psyche story) by Jean Cocteau and “Orfeu Negro/Black Orpheus” by Marcel Camus will also be provided through Blackboard.

TEXTS:
MYTHOLOGY: TIMELESS TALES OF GODS AND HEROES
Edith Hamilton

METAMORPHOSIS
Ovid, translation by David Raeburn

THE HOMERIC HYMN TO DEMETER
Helen Foley, editor

CUPID AND PSYCHE
Apuleius, translation by E.J. Kenney

ORPHEUS AND COMPANY
Deborah de Nicola, editor

GODS AND MORTALS
Nina Kossman, editor

From Google Books:
GREEK STUDIES
Walter Pater (short excerpt)

PROLEGOMENA TO THE STUDY OF GREEK RELIGION
Jane Harrison (short excerpt)

↑ Index

518. Ruth Lepson
Re: Poems for the Millennium, vol. 3, pre-order discounts
Fri 28 Nov 2008

---

congratulations--I use vol II for my poetry courses & it's a hit.

On 11/26/08 6:05 PM, "Jerome Rothenberg" <[redacted]> wrote:

> For those interested, it's come to my attention that pre-orders of Poems for the Millennium, volume 3 (romantics & postromantics) are being filled by Amazon at a huge discount ($34,95 reduced to $23.07). I don't know if other outlets are matching this, but thought I would pass the word along.
>
> While advance copies are already going out, the actual publication date remains sometime in January. And further information (including blurbs from Hejinian, Palmer, Foley & others) can be found at http://www.ucpress.edu/books/pages/10540.php
>
> P.S. The hard-cover -- by far the more beautiful version -- is also being reduced prior to publication: from $80 to $50.40.
>
> Jerome Rothenberg "Poetry must have something in it > 1026 San Abella that is barbaric, vast, and wild."
> Encinitas, CA 92024 D. Diderot
> [redacted]
> jrothenberg at cox.net
> Blog at poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com

↑ Index

519. Jim Andrews
Jig Arteroids 2
Fri 28 Nov 2008

Here's a picture of an audio composition: http://vispo.com/jig/images/JigArteroids2.jpg . Be sure to enlarge it to 100% and scroll to the right. The picture is long and thin.

Let's just hope that doesn't also describe the corresponding audio.

The picture is of an audio composition I made in Jig-Sound, an interactive audio program I'm writing. You can make your own audio compositions at http://vispo.com/jig/JigAteroids2.htm or http://vispo.com/jig or http://vispo.com/jig/hills2.htm or http://vispo.com/jig/jigArteroids.htm ; you'll need the Shockwave plugin from http://vispo.com/sw if you don't already have it).

In Jig-Sound, icons that are linked with blue lines play sequentially. Icons that are linked with green lines play simultaneously. There's a sort of tutorial on how to use Jig-Sound at http://vispo.com/bc/qt .

Here's what the audio composition sounds like: http://vispo.com/jig/JigArteroid2.mp3 . Set it to loop at the end. The sounds are all (my) voice from a shoot-em-up online poetry game I wrote called Arteroids at http://vispo.com/ateroids . All the sounds in the above JigArteroids stuff are arteroid death-rattles, ie, the underlying sounds get played in Arteroids when you shoot an arteroid.

What's that movie with Jack Nicholson as the president of the USA in which cartoonish aliens invade the world and talk funny? A humorous take on 'war of the worlds'. This audio sounds like it's from their radio dial. Mind you, it was yodelling that finally killed them, so maybe not. But, supposing for the moment that it was from their planet, we'd note that they've been around long enough to enjoy interactive music. Things like Jig-Sound are well-known on their planet whereas here on Earth you have to visit vispo.com for such stuff.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

520. Gloria Mindock

Chapbook Release from Cervena Barva Press

Fri 28 Nov 2008

Cervena Barva Press is pleased to announce the publication of "Zero Boundaries"
by Irene Koronas

Â

Irene Koronas has a fine arts degree from Mass College of Art Boston. She is a multi media artist working with paint, collage, mono-printing, artists books and poetry. She is currently the poetry editor for Wilderness House Literary Review and is the submissions editor for Ibbetson Street Press. Her poetry has appeared in lummox journal, free verse journal, posey magazine and on line zines such as arcanam cafÃ©, spearhead, index poetry, unblog, haiku hu t and lynx . She has seven chap-books: 'work among friends,' 'where words drip,' 'perception, tongue on everyday,' 'species,' 'flat house' and 'to speak the meaning of being.' Her most recent book 'self portrait drawn from many' is published by ibbettson street press. Her poems also appear in anthologies.

Order online:
http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/index.html#Zero Boundaries

Zero Boundaries
by Irene Koronas
by Irene Koronas
$7.00 + $3.00 S/H
41 pages, paper
Publication Date: November, 2008

For information contact:
Gloria Mindock
Cervena Barva Press, Somerville, MA
Email: [redacted]

Send me_____copies of " Zero Boundaries " Â Total enclosed:Â $_____

Name_____

Street_____

City_____State_____Zip_____

e-mail_____Phone_____

Thank you,

Gloria Mindock

[redacted]

↑ Index

521. Mark Weiss
Re: New esay in Jacket Magazine: 'Empirical and Non-Empirical Identifiers'
Fri 28 Nov 2008

As I asked on a different list, diagnostic devices? Like stethescopes or xrays? You mean there's a way to find out whether that lump in line three is dangerous?

Mark

At 08:34 AM 11/28/2008, Jeffrey Side wrote: >I have an essay in Jacket Magazine called 'Empirical and >Non-Empirical Identifiers':
>http://jacketmagazine.com/36/side-j-essay.shtml
>This essay looks at certain effects of language that I call >Empirical Identifiers because of the ways in which they encourage >exegetical closure through their functioning as referents to >phenomena. It also looks at their opposites, which I call >Non-Empirical Identifiers because of the ways in which they invite >readers to participate in the creation of individual meaning and >significance from language that is autonomous and non-referential.
>These identifiers, by enabling a ready recognition of empirical and >non-empirical writing procedures in poetry, may prove useful as >diagnostic devices for literary and stylistic criticism. The essay >examines a range of poetic works from the last century and assesses >the extent to which they exhibit a reliance on either Empirical >Identifiers or Non-Empirical Identifiers.
>

↑ Index

522. Alexander Jorgensen
India...Muslims and Hindus
Sat 29 Nov 2008

Alexander is tired, especially given situation in Mumbai, of the abuse thrown at MUSLIMS. Lots of "terrorism," as they called it (THEY), is performed by HINDUS . Fact.

Purely anecdotal, but I spent weeks with Sufis, spent lots of time with Muslim descendants from Persia...and always, and they knew me, and there were no tourists, treated kindly.

It is a terrible when we essentialize. There is little solidarity in India. Democracy doesn't work as well as Bush likes to say it does.

It is a terrible thing what happened, more terribe for the ineffectuality of the government there, all care and well wishes sent to friends, but let us not let this situation be exploited for the sake of what is an AGENDA.

Alex

↑ Index

523. Francesco Levato

L'incontro--an evening of experimental and emerging voices in Italian poetry.

Sat 29 Nov 2008

L'incontro (the encounter) is an evening of experimental and emerging voices in Italian poetry featuring work read in the original Italian and in English translation by poet/translators Joshua Adams, Chris Glomski, Francesco Levato, and special guest Tiziano Fratus, from Turin, Italy. Fratus will read from his recent book, "A Room in Jerusalem."

Poets whose work will be presented include: Francesco Giuntini, Giacomo Leopardi, Eugenio Montale, Giuseppe Ungaretti, Eugenio De Signoribus, Emanuel Carnevali, Nino Gennaro, and Tiziano Fratus.

L'incontro is sponsored by UniVerse of Poetry and is being recorded for broadcast by WBEZ Chicago Public Radio for Chicago Amplified.

Weds., Dec. 10, 2008, 7:00pm (Doors open at 5pm, reading starts at 7pm) - FREE at Th!nkArt Salon
1530 North Paulina, Suite F
Chicago, IL 60622

For more information contact Francesco Levato, [redacted]

READER BIOS

Joshua Adams is a graduate student at the University of Chicago and Editor of Chicago Review. His translation, with Joel Calahan, of Marcello Frixione's Ologrammi is forthcoming from Cracked Slab Books.

Tiziano Fratus is the author of nine books of poetry including Il Molosso, Il Ventre, and Il Vangelo della Carne. His work has been translated and published in numerous languages and countries. His most recent book A Room in Jerusalem was released by Farfalla Press (2008, Brooklyn). He is the editor of the literary press, Torino Poesia, and director of the poetry festival by the same name.

Chris Glomski is the author of Transparencies Lifted from Noon, a collection of poems published in fall of 2005 by MEB / Spuyten Duyvil Press. He is also the author of a chapbook, IL LA, published by Noemi Press in 2002. Since 2002 he has been pursuing an ongoing translation project of various contemporary Italian poets, some of which recently appeared in ACM. His poems, translations, and critical writings have appeared in Notre Dame Review, The Octopus, Chicago Review, Jacket, A Public Space, and elsewhere. Another chapbook, Eidolon, was issued by Answer Tag Home Press in October 2008. He lives in Chicago.

Poet and new media artist Francesco Levato is the executive director of The Poetry Center of Chicago. He is the author of Marginal State, a collection of poetry, and his work has been published internationally in journals and anthologies, both in print and online, including The Progressive, XCP: Cross Cultural Poetics, Versal, and many others. His poetry-based video artwork has been exhibited in galleries and featured at film festivals in Berlin, Chicago, New York, and elsewhere.

About UniVerse : A United Nations of Poetry

UniVerse: A United Nations of Poetry is an interactive forum and celebration of international poetry encouraging universal dialogue, compassion and peace. Enjoy our archive of visionary poets and "Teach This Poem," our free, interactive teaching tool featuring engaging questions and writing exercises. For more about us and our events, visit www.universeofpoetry.org.

About Th!nkArt Salon

Th!nkArt is a contemporary, French-inspired art salon featuring celebrated and emerging artists from Chicago and around the world.

Th!nkArt is located at 1530 North Paulina Street (one half-block south of North Avenue), Suite F, in the Wicker Park gallery district on Chicago's near northwest side. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays by appointment. By car: the gallery is two blocks west of the North Avenue exit of the Kennedy Expressway (street parking available). By CTA: the gallery is four blocks east of the Damen stop on the Blue Line, and one half-block south of the #72 North Avenue bus. For more information, please call [redacted] or email at [redacted].

↑ Index

524. amy king
Please Donate a Click...
Sat 29 Nov 2008

-- Need only 108 clicks by tomorrow to make the goal of 300 for November to get the $20.000 matching grant for research plus 300 free mammograms for needy women --

thebreastcancersite.com

_____

Recent work
http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias
http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

525. Amanda Earl experiment-o, a new pdf magazine is live
Sat 29 Nov 2008

AngelHousePress is pleased to announce the launch of experiment-o, an annual online pdf magazine that celebrates the art of risk.

www.experimento-o.com

please join me in a virtual toast to celebrate its launch.

the contributors to issue one are writer, composer, performer Gary Barwin

curator, art critic, writer Emily Falvey

creative writer and publisher Spencer Gordon

poet and collage artist Camille Martin

textual artist and poet Sheila E. Murphy

literary renaissance man rob mclennan

poet and blogger extraordinaire Pearl Pirie

stargazer and poet Roland Prevost

reading organizer, editor, poet and fiction writer Jenny Sampirisi

author and visual artist Steve Venright

for submission guidelines and further information about experiment-o, please refer to page 43 of issue 1

for further information about AngelHousePress, please visit www.angelhousepress.com

contact info: [redacted]

↑ Index

526. lanny quarles
NOISETEXT
Sat 29 Nov 2008

---

http://groups.google.com/group/noisetext investigating an (anti)poetics of noise, the pseudo-lyric, literary phasmids (pha(nta)smids), email-art, textual messiness, mussiness, neatness, neonateness, uncreative writing, hodkoah surrealism, psychedelia, cyber-shamanic trance writing, visual stimulus, radical democritization of stimulus organization, anti-categorism, faux-philosophy, philsophy of pho, gung-pho, pho-gung, literary gargoylism, MONSTERS, monsterpo, the absurd, productive nihilism, anti-nihilistic productivism, parodism, negative capability, good bad writing-as-art, bad good painting-as-writing, good bad photography-as-foolosophy, and anything else, and nothing else, or whatever, computer writing at the edge of whatever boundary you aren't at the edge at, or are, or want to be, or can't be, or don't believe exists.

an abpoetics of the briosingularity matrix-stir

Neologismuslms
Hirndough hoodoo

jpg trading html email po

Outsider Insiderism Barthesian Sadomasochism
Rousselian mumbo-jumbo
Burroughsian Viricirq du type Flarf for Non-flarfists (Flarfish Post-Flarf)
Classic Flarf
Classic Mayan Flarf
Aztec Neo-Flarf

Barf
Neo-Barf
Latinized Barf
Barf of the Egyptian Roamans
Dada Classicus
Eco-dada
Undead Dada
Semiotic Primordianism
Textual Jesterism
Tricksterpo
"Noemism"
Phanerozoic Emanations
Wiggy leerik
Motivetted Signus Fatuus
Bureaucrazy
Sioux Realism
SIr Eelism
DooDooDada
Tweedle D Medusa Dong
Tweedle Whizz Dumb
Strooty Weirdo Clause
Nous is Noise
Chaos is Cause
Matter is Mata Hari
Big Lady Satan Hips Writan(ears) for 'SCRATCH"

+

Obscure History, Facts, Knoweldge

Just send me an email for an invite or I can join you direct! We have alot of fun, and all kinds of texts and images may be enjoyed there.

Thanks,
Lanny Quarles
Anti-Moderateur
[redacted]

http://phaneron.blogspot.com/
http://jellybeanweirdo.blogspot.com/
http://ribfilaft.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

527. Dylan Kinnett
Re: "A Documentary Saga of the Oulipo"
Sat 29 Nov 2008

The Oulipo is interesting for its creation of new forms. As a cookbook is useful to a cook, Oulipan forms and constraints are useful to the writer. Is there, anywhere, a "complete cookbook"? Does the Oulipo Compendium give an overview of the forms and constraints?

I was able to find one list, and it looks comprehensive, but it is in French, and I cannot read it.
http://www.oulipo.net/contraintes

Another list, from the "book of forms" looks good.
http://www.spinelessbooks.com/table/forms/index.html

↑ Index

528. Rob McLennan
[experiment-o, a new pdf magazine is live]
Sat 29 Nov 2008

AngelHousePress is pleased to announce the launch of experiment-o, an annual online pdf magazine that celebrates the art of risk.

www.experimento-o.com

please join me in a virtual toast to celebrate its launch.

the contributors to issue one are

writer, composer, performer Gary Barwin

curator, art critic, writer Emily Falvey

creative writer and publisher Spencer Gordon

poet and collage artist Camille Martin

textual artist and poet Sheila E. Murphy

literary renaissance man rob mclennan

poet and blogger extraordinaire Pearl Pirie

stargazer and poet Roland Prevost

reading organizer, editor, poet and fiction writer Jenny Sampirisi

author and visual artist Steve Venright

for submission guidelines and further information about experiment-o, please refer to page 43 of issue 1

for further information about AngelHousePress, please visit www.angelhousepress.com

contact info: [redacted]

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...13th poetry coll'n - The Ottawa City Project ...novel - white www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

529. Louis Cabri
"Language Poetry" "in" "Canada"
Sat 29 Nov 2008

?Language Poetry? ?in? ?Canada?

I check the listserv once a month or less; sorry. But I?ll play!

I tendentially define "language poetry" "in" "Canada" as socially reflexive about language as language, and in a globally implicative way, which, by the word "global," means implicative in a theoretically charged way. (So, e.g., excepting love: a book of remembrances [1974], bpNichol is largely doing something else; his "letteral play" is aesthetic in a traditionally "nonideological" sense of the aesthesis; so too Claude Gauvreau is doing something else.) Unlike in the US, "language poetry" "in" "Canada" is in a critical dialogue with a common denominator social realist platform for poetry (most interestingly in Quebec feminist writing), and one other difference is that "in" "Canada" this tendency is far more internationalist (hence the quotation-marks).

David Bromige, Steve McCaffery, Alan Davies, Nicole Brossard, Norma Cole, Karen Mac Cormack, Christopher Dewdney (insofar as he appears in the magazine with the equals signs in it). If anyone who was reading Zukofsky counts, then some of Victor Coleman's, too. And I'd say there are glints of the new sentence in Wah's "Chain" that dates from same time as Bromige's "Tight Corners" (1974ish?) that Silliman totes as first instance. And possibly even the hugely overlooked Philippe Haecke.

Magazines (off the headtop): Line, Writing, Raddle Moon, Motel, hole. (Very incomplete list -- cf. Butling and Rudy's Writing in Our Time.)

After the 70s: see the Writing Class anthology edited by Barnholden and Klobucar. But include, singularly and most importantly, Deanna Ferguson, among quite a few others. Also see the East Of Main anthology edited by Wayman that displays the contestatory dialogue with social realism.

After the 80s: M. Norbese Philip has found it useful to use the term to articulate her situation of double-address to two differently-constituted audiences (similar somwhat to Harryette Mullen?s situation). Plus many others.

Poets in Canada have read the poets associated in the US by way of catchphrases such as Language School, Language Poets, Language Writing. Not just read but

↑ Index

530. David-Baptiste Chirot

A "Cultural Devolution?" --Iraqi Academics Assassinated During the US-Led Occupation

Sat 29 Nov 2008

The removal of a society's hopes for building a future for themselves via education and the creation of engineers, doctors, teachers, urban planners, as well as the economic dependence on outsiders with such training which this creates is accompanied by the erasure of the cultural history of the society via the removal of its archeological and and bibliographic evidences of its own past.

No past--no future. People trapped in a present occupied and controlled by others. A similar method is employed in Gaza, from which 600 students with scholarships to study abroad are forbidden to leave, including the 7 awarded Fulbright scholarships in the US.

These "Cultural Revolutions" which overturn Past and Future in terms of Knowledge as Power, create an immense socio-cultural-economic dislocation, in which a people begins to vanish. The disruption of education and its replacement by a very narrow and tightly restricted and controlled "re-education" performs a "Negative" version of the "Positive" aspects of the Cultural Revolutions undertaken in China and far more radically in Cambodia.

A similar method was applied to the American Indian populations herded into the dead zones of reservations and "schools" where they could be "de-Indianized" culturally and re-educated as "docile and obediant" peoples now equipped with the most minimal tools, and so "useless" and "dependent" outside the rezervations. As the Future was being removed before it might threaten to "develop," the Past was being uprooted, built on top of, carted off to museums, flooded, disappeared in every way possible.

These actvities made possible the "noble" Trope of the "Vanishing American Indian," who unfortunetly but necessarily had to be eradicated in order to make room for the settlers and settlements of colonization, in keeping with the construction of the "New Jerusalm" via allegorical and literal interpretations of the Bible, and also in accordance with "Manifest Destiny."

How much "change" is possible in these colonial-imperial-nationalistic extensions in space of what is already so well known and accepted as a Destiny through time? How much change can happen when the former "separate but equal" policies no longer allowed "at home" turns into the immense support for Apartheid abroad?

Is the "Cultural Amnesia" occuring "in the Homeland" a blow back of these policies enforced elsewhere?

from International Clearing House:

Iraqi Academics Assassinated During the US-Led Occupation

Editor's note

Pakistan Daily has published the list of Iraqi academics assassinated by US and allied occupation forces. The objective of these targeted assassinations is to "kill a nation", the destroy Iraq's ability to educate its people, to undermine its research and scientific capabilities in literally all fields of endeavor, to transform a nation into a territory, and ultmately to destroy civilization.

Of particular significance is the assassination of prominent scientists and physicians, professors of medicine in the country's leading academic institutions, its social scientists and historians, its physical scientists, its biologists, its engineers.

we are dealing with a carefully devised covert operation. The plan to kill the nation's scientists and intellectuals emanates from US intelligence and the military. It is a deliberate process.

Is the new Obama administration going to turn a blind eye to this diabolical and criminal agenda?

Michel Chossudovsky, Global Research, 27 November 2008List of Iraqi academics assassinated in Iraq during the US-led occupation

Written by Pakistan Daily

Wednesday, 26 November 2008 17:57

The following relation has being created against the Occupation and for the Sovereignty of Iraq with the information provided by direct Iraqi university sources and international and Arab media. It only includes names and data referred to university academics assassinated during the Occupation period.

BAGHDAD, Baghdad University

Abbas Al-Attar: PhD in humanities, lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Humanities.

Abdel Hussein Jabuk: PhD and lecturer at Baghdad University.

Abdel Salam Saba: PhD in sociology, lecturer at Baghdad University.

Abdel Razak Al-Naas: Lecturer in information and international mass media at Baghdad University's College of Information Sciences. He was a regular analyst for Arabic satellite TV channels. He was killed in his car at Baghdad University on 28 January 2005. His assassination led to confrontations between students and police, and journalists went on strike.

Ahmed Nassir Al-Nassiri: PhD in education sciences, Baghdad University, assassinated February 2005.

Ali Abdul-Hussein Kamil: PhD in physical sciences, lecturer in the Department of Physics, Baghdad University.

Amir Al-Jazragi: PhD in medicine, lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Medicine, and consultant at the Iraqi Ministry of Health, assassinated 17 November 2005.

Basil Al-Karji: PhD in chemistry, lecturer at Baghdad University.

Essam Sharif Mohammed: PhD in history, professor in Department of History and head of the College of Humanities, Baghdad University.

Faidhi Al-Faidhi: PhD in education sciences, lecturer at Baghdad University and Al-Munstansiriya University. He was also member of the Muslim Scientists Committee. Assassinated in 2005.

Fuad Abrahim Mohammed Al-Bayaty: PhD in german philology, professor and head of College of Philology, Baghdad University.

Haifa Alwan Al-Hil: PhD in physics, lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Science for Women.

Heikel Mohammed Al-Musawi: PhD in medicine, lecturer at Al-Kindi College of Medicine, Baghdad University. Assassinated 17 November 2005.

Hassan Abd Ali Dawood Al-Rubai: PhD in stomatology, dean of the College of Stomatology, Baghdad University. Assassinated 20 December 2005.

Hazim Abdul Hadi: PhD in medicine, lecturer at the College of Medicine, Baghdad University.

Khalel Ismail Abd Al-Dahri: PhD in physical education, lecturer at the College of Physical Education, Baghdad University.

Kilan Mahmoud Ramez: PhD and lecturer at Baghdad University.

Maha Abdel Kadira: PhD and lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Humanities.

Majed Nasser Hussein Al-Maamoori: Professor of veterinary medicine at Baghdad University's College of Veterinary Medicine. Assassinated 17 February 2007.

Marwan Al-Raawi: PhD in engineering and lecturer at Baghdad University.

Marwan Galeb Mudhir Al-Heti: PhD in chemical engineering and lecturer at the School of Engineering, Baghdad University.

Majed Hussein Ali: PhD in physical sciences and lecturer at the College of Sciences, Baghdad University.

Mehned Al-Dulaimi: PhD in mechanical engineering, lecturer at Baghdad University.

Mohammed Falah Al-Dulaimi: PhD in physical sciences, lecturer at Baghdad University.

Mohammed Tuki Hussein Al-Talakani: PhD in physical sciences, nuclear scientist since 1984, and lecturer at Baghdad University.

Mohammed Al-Kissi: PhD and lecturer at Baghdad University.

Mohammed Abd Allah Al-Raawi: PhD in surgery, former president of Baghdad University, member of the Arab Council of Medicine and of the Iraqi Council of Medicine, president of the Iraqi Union of Doctors.

Mohammed Al-Jazairi: PhD in medicine and plastic surgeon, College of Medicine, Baghdad Univeristy. Assassinated 15 November 2005.

Mustafa Al-Hity: PhD in medicine, paediatrician, College of Medicine, Baghdad University. Assassinated 14 November 2005.

Mustafa Al-Mashadani: PhD in religious studies, lecturer in Baghdad University's College of Humanities.

Nafea Ahmmoud Jalaf: PhD in Arabic language, professor in Baghdad University's College of Humanities.

Nawfal Ahmad: PhD, lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Fine Arts. She was assassinated at the front door of her house on 25 December 2005.

Nazar Abdul Amir Al-Ubaidy: PhD and lecturer at Baghdad University.

Raad Shlash: PhD in biological sciences, head of Department of Biology at Baghdad University's College of Sciences. He was killed at the front door of his house on 17 November 2005.

Rafi Sarcisan Vancan: Bachelor of English language, lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Women's Studies.

Saadi Daguer Morab: PhD in fine arts, lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Fine Arts.

Sabri Mustafa Al-Bayaty: PhD in geography, lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Humanities.

Saad Yassin Al-Ansari: PhD and lecturer at Baghdad University. He was killed in Al-Saydiya neighborhood, Baghdad, 17 November 2005.

Wannas Abdulah Al-Naddawi: PhD in education sciences, Baghdad University. Assassinated 18 February 2005.

Yassim Al-Isawi: PhD in religious studies, Baghdad University's College of Arts. Assassinated 21 June 2005.

Zaki Jabar Laftah Al-Saedi: Bachelor of veterinary medicine, lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Veterinary Medicine.

Basem Al-Modarres: PhD and lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Philosophy. [Source: Al-Hayat, 28 February 2006.]

Jasim Mohammed Achamri: Dean of College of Philosophy, Baghdad University. [Source: Al-Hayat, 28 February 2006.]

Hisham Charif: Head of Department of History and lecturer at Baghdad University. [Source: Al-Hayat, 28 February 2006.]

Qais Hussam Al-Den Jumaa: Professor and Dean of College of Agriculture, Baghdad University. Killed 27 March 2006 by US soldiers in downtown Baghdad. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university source.]

Mohammed Yaakoub Al-Abidi: Baghdad University. Department and college unknown. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Abdelatif Attai: Baghdad University. Department and college unknown. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Ali Al-Maliki: Baghdad University. Department and college unknown. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Nafia Aboud: Baghdad University. Department and college unknown. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Abbas Kadem Alhachimi: Baghdad University. Department and college unknown. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Mouloud Hasan Albardar Aturki: Lecturer in Hanafi Teology at Al-Imam Al-Aadam College of Teology, Baghdad University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Riadh Abbas Saleh: Lecturer at Baghdad University's Centre for International Studies. Killed 11 May 2006. [Source: CEOSI university source, 17 May 2006.]

Abbas Al-Amery: Professor and head of Department of Administration and Business, College of Administration and Economy, Baghdad University. Killed together with his son and one of his relatives at the main entrance to the College 16 May 2006. [Source: CEOSI university source, 17 May 2006.]

Muthana Harith Jasim: Lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Engineering. Killed near his home in Al-Mansur, 13 June 2006. [Source: CEOSI university source, 13 June 2006.]

Hani Aref Al-Dulaimy: Lecturer in the Department of Computer Engineering, Baghdad University's College of Engineering. He was killed, together with three of his students, 13 June 2006 on campus. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university source, 13 June 2006.]

Hussain Al-Sharifi: Professor of urinary surgery at Baghdad University's College of Medicine. Killed in May 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 12 June 2006.]

Hadi Muhammad Abub Al-Obaidi: Lecturer in the Department of Surgery, Baghdad University's College of Medicine. Killed 19 June 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university source, 20 June 2006.]

Hamza Shenian: Professor of veterinary surgery at Baghdad University's College of Veterinary Medicine. Killed by armed men in his garden in a Baghdad neighborhood 21 June 2006. This was the first known case of a professor executed in the victim's home. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 21 June 2006.]

Jassim Mohama Al-Eesaui: Professor at College of Political Sciences, Baghdad University, and editor of Al-Syada newspaper. He was 61 years old when killed in Al-Shuala, 22 June 2006. [Source: UNAMI report 1 May-30 June 2006.]

Shukir Mahmoud As-Salam: Lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Medicine and dental surgeon at Al-Yamuk Hospital, Baghdad. Killed near his home by armed men 6 September 2006. [Source: TV news, As-Sharquia channel, 7 September 2006, and CEOSI Iraqi sources.]

Mahdi Nuseif Jasim: Professor in the Department of Petroleum Engineering at Baghdad University. Killed 13 September 2006 near the university. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university source.]

Adil Al-Mansuri: Maxillofacial surgeon and professor at the College of Medicine, Baghdad University. Kidnapped by uniformed men near Iban Al-Nafis Hospital in Baghdad. He was found dead with torture signs and mutilation in Sadr City. He was killed during a wave of assassinations in which seven medical specialists were assassinated. Date unknown: July or August 2006 [Source: Iraqi health service sources, 24 September 2006.]

Shukur Arsalan: Maxillofacial surgeon and professor at the College of Medicine, Baghdad University. Killed by armed men when leaving his clinic in Harziya neighbourhood. He was killed during a wave of assassinations in which seven specialists were assassinated. Date unknown: July or August 2006. [Source: Iraqi Health System sources, 24 September 2006.]

Issam Al-Rawi: Professor of geology at Baghdad University, president of the Association of University Professors of Iraq. Killed 30 October 2006 during an attack carried out by a group of armed men in which two more professors were seriously injured. [Sources: CEOSI sources and Associated Press.]

Yaqdan Sadun Al-Dhalmi: Professor and lecturer in the College of Education, Baghdad University. Killed 16 October 2006. [Source: CEOSI sources.]

Jlid Ibrahim Mousa: Professor and lecturer at Baghdad University’s College of Medicine. Killed by a group of armed men in September 2006. During August and September 2006, six professors of medicine were assassinated in Baghdad. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi sources.]

Mohammed Jassim Al-Thahbi and wife: Professor and dean of the College of Administration and Economy, Baghdad University. Killed 2 November 2006 by a group of armed men when he was driving to university. His wife, a lecturer at the same university (name and academic position unknown) and son were also killed in the attack. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi sources and Tme Magazine, 2 October 2006.]

Mohammed Mehdi Saleh: Lecturer at Baghdad University (unknown position) and member of the Association of Muslim Scholars. Imam of Ahl Al-Sufa Mosque in Al-Shurta Al-Jamisa neighbourhood. Killed 14 November 2006 while driving in the neighbourhood of Al-Amal in central Baghdad. [Source: UMA, 14 November 2006.]

Hedaib Majhol: Lecturer at College of Physical Education, Baghdad University, president of the Football University Club and member of the Iraqi Football Asociation. Kidnapped in Baghdad. His body was found three later in Baghdad

morgue 3 December 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 2 December 2006.]

Al-Hareth Abdul Hamid: Professor of psychiatric medicine and head of the Department of Psychology at Baghdad University. Former president of the Society of Parapsychological Investigations of Iraq. A renowned scientist, Abdul Hamid was shot dead in the neighbourhood of Al-Mansur, Baghdad, 6 December 2006 by unknown men. [Sources: CEOSI Iraqi sources, 6 December 2006, and Reuters, 30 January 2007.]

Anwar Abdul Hussain: Lecturer at the College of Odontology, Baghdad University. Killed in Haifa Street in Baghdad in the third week of January 2007. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 23 January 2007.]

Majed Nasser Hussain: PhD and lecturer at the College of Veterinary Medicine, Baghdad University. He was killed in front of his wife and daughter while leaving home in the third week of January 2007. Nasser Hussain had been kidnapped two years before and freed after paying a ransom. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 23 January 2007.]

Khaled Al-Hassan: Professor and deputy dean of the College of Political Sciences, Baghdad University. Killed in March 2007. [Source: Association of University Lecturers of Iraq, 7 April 2007.]

Ali Mohammed Hamza: Professor of Islamic Studies at Baghdad University. Department and college unknown. Killed 17 April 2007. [Sources: TV channels As-Sharquia and Al-Jazeera.]

Abdulwahab Majed: Lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Education. Department and college unknown. Killed 2 May 2007. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 5 May 2007.]

Sabah Al-Taei: Deputy dean of the College of Education, Baghdad University. Killed 7 May 2007. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources. 8 May 2007.]

Nihad Mohammed Al-Rawi: Professor of Civil Engineering and deputy president of Baghdad University. Shot dead 26 June 2007 in Al-Jadria Bridge, a few meters away from the university campus, when exiting with his daughter Rana, whom he protected from the shots with his body. [Sources: BRussells Tribunal and CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 26-27 June 2007, www.wmin.ac.uk]

Muhammad Kasem Al-Jebouri: Lecturer at the College of Agriculture, Baghdad University. Killed, together with his son and his brother-in-law, by paramilitary forces 22 June 2007. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 27 June 2007.]

Samir (surname unknown): Lecturer at Baghdad University's College of Administration and Economy. His body was found shot one day after being kidnapped in Kut where he was visiting family. Professor Samir lived in the

Baghdad district of Al-Sidiya. [Source: Voices of Iraq, www.iraqslogger.com, 29 June 2007.]

Amin Abdul Aziz Sarhan: Lecturer at Baghdad University. Department and college unknown. He was kidnapped from his home in Basra by unidentified armed men 13 October 2007 and found dead on the morning of 15 October. [Source: Voices of Iraq, 15 October 2007.]

Mohammed Kadhem Al-Atabi: Head of Baghdad University's Department of Planning and Evaluation. He was kidnapped 18 October 2007 from his home in Baghdad by a group of armed men and found dead a few hours later in the area of Ur, near to Sadr City, which is under the control of Moqtada Al-Sadr's Mahdi Army. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 26 October 2007.]

Munther Murhej Radhi: Dean of the College of Odontology, Baghdad University. He was found dead in his car 23 January 2008. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 24 January 2008.]

Mundir Marhach: Dean of Faculty of Stomatology, Baghdad University. He was killed in March (exact day unknown), according to information provided by the Centre for Human Rights of Baghdad. [Source: Al-Basrah reported 12 March 2008.]

Al-Mamoon Faculty (private college, Baghdad)

Mohammed Al-Miyahi: Dean of Al-Maamoun Faculty in Baghdad. He was shot with a silencer-equipped gun in front of his house in Al-Qadisiah district, southern Baghdad, as he stepped out of his car 14 December 2007. [Source CEOSI Iraqi source and Kuwait News Agency, reported 19 December 2007, IPS reported 19 December 2007, and Al-Basrah, reported 12 March 2008.]

Al-Mustansiriya University (Baghdad)

Aalim Abdul Hameed: PhD in preventive medicine, specialist in depleted uranium effects in Basra, dean of the College of Medicine, Al-Mustansiriya University.

Abdul Latif Al-Mayah: PhD in economics, lecturer and head of Department of Research, Al-Mustansiriya University.

Aki Thakir

Alaany: PhD and lecturer at the College of Literature, Al-Mustansiriya University.

Falah Al-Dulaimi: PhD, professor and deputy dean of Al-Mustansiriya University's College of Sciences.

Falah Ali Hussein: PhD in physics, lecturer and deputy dean of the College of Sciences, Al-Mustansiriya University, killed May 2005.

Musa Saloum Addas: PhD, lecturer and deputy dean of the College of Educational Sciences, Al-Mustansiriya University, killed 27 May 2005.

Husam Al-Ddin Ahmad Mahmmoud: PhD in education sciences, lecturer and dean at College of Education Sciences, Al-Mustansiriya University.

Jasim Abdul Kareem: PhD and lecturer at the College of the Education, Al-Mustansiriya University.

Abdul As Satar Sabar Al Khazraji: PhD in history, Al Munstansiriya University, killed 19 June 2005. [A same name and surname lecturer in Engineering at the College of Computer Science Technology, Al-Nahrein University was assessinated in March 2006.]

Samir Yield Gerges: PhD and lecturer at the College of Administration and Economy at Al-Mustansiriya University, killed 28 August 2005.

Jasim Al-Fahaidawi: PhD and lecturer in Arabic literature at the College of Humanities, Al-Mustansiriya University. Assassinated at the university entrance. [Source: BBC News, 15 November 2005.]

Kadim Talal Hussein: Deputy dean of the College of Education, Al-Mustansiriya University.

Mohammed Nayeb Al-Qissi: PhD in geography, lecturer at Department of Research, Al-Mustansiriya University.

Sabah Mahmoud Al-Rubaie: PhD in geography, lecturer and dean at College of Educational Sciences, Al-Mustansiriya University.

Ali Hasan Muhawish: Dean and lecturer at the College of Engineering, Al-Mustansiriya University. Killed 12 March 2006. [Source: Middle East Online, 13 March 2006.]

Imad Naser Alfuadi: Lecturer at the College of Political Sciences, Al-Mustansiriya University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Mohammed Ali Jawad Achami: President of the College of Law, Al-Mustansiriya University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Husam Karyakus Tomas: Lecturer at the College of Medicine, Al-Mustansiriya University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Basem Habib Salman: Lecturer at the College of Medicine at Al-Mustansiriya University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Mohammed Abdul Rahman Al-Ani: PhD in engineering, lecturer at the College of Law, Al-Mustansiriya University. Kidnapped, together with his friend Akrem Mehdi, 26 April 2006, at his home in Palestine Street, Baghdad. Their bodys were found two days later. (CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 5 May 2006.]

Jasim Fiadh Al-Shammari: Lecturer in psychology at the College of Arts, Al-Mustansiriya Baghdad University. Killed near campus 23 May 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university source, 30 May 2006.]

Saad Mehdi Shalash: PhD in history and lecturer in history at the College of Arts, Al-Mustansiriya University, and editor of the newspaper Raya Al-Arab. Shot dead at his home with his wife 26 October 2006. [Source: Al-Quds Al-Arabi, 27 October 2006.]

Kemal Nassir: Professor of history and lecturer at Al-Mustansiriya and Bufa universities. Killed at his home in Baghdad in October 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 2 November 2006.]

Hasseb Aref Al-Obaidi: Professor in the College of Political Sciences at Al-Mustansiriya University. Since he was kidnapped 22 October 2006 his whereabouts is unknown. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources.]

Najeb Al-Salihi: Lecturer in the College of Psychology at Al-Mustansiriya University and head of the Scientific Commitee of the Ministry of Higher Education of Iraq. Al-Salihi, 39 years old, was kidnapped close to campus and his body, shot dead, was found 20 days after his disappearance in Baghdad morgue. His family was able recover his body only after paying a significant amount of money. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources.]

Dhia Al-Deen Mahdi Hussein: Professor of international criminal law at the College of Law, Al-Mustansiriya University. Missing since kidnapped from his home in the Baghdad neighborhood of Dhia in 4 November 2006 by a group of armed men driving police cars. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 5 November 2006.]

Muntather Al-Hamdani: Deputy dean of the College of Law, Al-Mustansiriya University. He was assassinated, together with Ali Hassam, lecturer at the same college, 20 December 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 24 December 2006. The Iraqi police identified Ali Arnoosi as the deputy dean assassinated 21 December, and Mohammed Hamdani as another victim. It is unknown whether [Muntanther Al-Hamdani and Mohammed Hamdani] both are the same case or not.]

Ali Hassam: Lecturer at the College of Law at Al-Mustansiriya University. He was killed together with Muntather Al-Hamdani, deputy dean of the college, 20 December 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 24 December 2006. The Iraqi police identified Ali Arnoosi as the deputy dean assassinated 21 December, and Mohammed Al-Hamdani as another victim. It is unknown whether both [Muntanther Al-Hamdani and Mohammed Hamdani] are the same case or not.]

Dhia Al-Mguter: Professor of economy at the College of Administration and Economy of Al-Mustansiriya University. He was killed 23 January 2007 in Baghdad while driving. He was a prominent economist and president of the Consumer's Defense Association and the Iraqi Association of Economists. A commentator at for As-Sharquia television, he participated in the Maram Committee, being responsible for investigating irregularities occuring during the elections held in January 2006. Al-Mguter was part of a family with a long anti-colonialist tradition since the British occupation. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources and Az-Zaman newspaper, 24 January 2007.]

Ridha Abdul Hussein Al-Kuraishi: Deputy Dean of the University of Al-Mustansiriya's College of Administration and Economy. He was kidnapped 28 March 2007 and found dead the next day. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers, 7 April 2007. See the Arabic letter sent to CEOSI.].

University of Technology (Baghdad)

Muhannad Al-Dulaimi: PhD in mechanical engineering, lecturer at the Baghdad University of Technology.

Muhey Hussein: PhD in aerodynamics, lecturer in the Department of Mechanical Engineering of the Baghdad University of Technology.

Qahtan Kadhim Hatim: Bachelor of sciences, lecturer in the College of Engineering of the Baghdad University of Technology.

Sahira Mohammed Machhadani: Baghdad University of Technology. Department and college unknown. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers, March 2006.]

Ahmed Ali Husein: Lecturer at the Baghdad University of Technology, specialist in applied mechanics. He was killed by a group of armed men in downtown Baghdad 22 May 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 24 May 2006.]

Name unknown: Lecturer at Baghdad University of Technology. Killed 27 June 2006 by a group of armed men. They were driving a vehicle in the Baghdad neighborhood of Al-Mansur and shot him without stopping. Next day, students and professors staged demonstrations in all universities across the country opposing the assassination and kidnapping of professors and lecturers. [Source: Al-Jazeera and Jordan Times, 27 June 2006.]

Ali Kadhim Ali: Professor at Baghdad University of Technology. Shot dead in November 2006 in the district of Al-Yarmuk by a group of armed men. His wife, Dr Baida Obeid — gynecologist — was also killed in the attack. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi sources, 16 November 2006.]

Moa’ayed Jasim Al-Janabi: Lecturer in physics at Baghdad University of Technology. Killed 23 May 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, December 2006.]

Jalil Enjad Al-Jumaily: Lecturer at University of Technology. Department and college unknown. He was killed 22 December 2006 with his son, a physician, after being kidnapped. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 24 December 2006..]

Abdul Same’e Al-Janabi: Deputy president of the Baghdad University of Technology. Missing after being kidnapped during the third week of January 2007. In 2004, Abdul Sami Al-Janabi was dean of Al-Mustansiriya University’s College of Sciences in Baghdad. He resigned from this position after Shia paramilitary forces threatened to kill him. Such forces began then to occupy university centres in the capital. Transferred by the Ministry of Higher Education to a new position to preserve his security, Sami Al-Janabi has almost certainly been assassinated. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 23 January 2007.]

Ameer Mekki Al-Zihairi: Lecturer at Baghdad University of Technology. He was killed in March 2007. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers, 7 April 2007.

Al-Nahrein University (Baghdad.]

Akil Abdel Jabar Al-Bahadili: Professor and deputy dean of Al-Nahrein University's College of Medicine. Head of Adhamiya Hospital in Baghdad. He was a specialist in internal medicine, killed 2 December 2005.

Mohammed Al-Jazairy: Lecturer at University College Al-Kadhemiya Hospital, Al-Nahrein University. He was a specialist in plastic surgery.

Layth Abdel Aziz: PhD and lecturer at the College of Sciences, Al-Nahrein University. [Source: Al-Hayat, 28 February 2006.]

Abdul As Satar Sabar Al-Khazrayi: Lecturer in engineering at the College of Computer Science Technology, Al-Nahrein University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.] [A same name and surname PhD in History at Al Munstansiriya University was killed on 19 June 2005.]

Uday Al-Beiruti: Professor at Al-Nahrein University. Kidnapped in University College Al-Kadhemiya Hospital's parking lot by armed men dressed in Interior Ministry uniforms. His body was found with sigs of torture in Sadr City. Date unknown: July/August 2006. His murder took place during a wave of assassinations in which seven of his colleagues were killed. [Source: Iraqi health service sources, 24 September 2006.]

Jalil Al-Jumaili: Professor at the College of Medicine, Al-Nahrein University. He was found shot dead in December 2006 (exact date unknown) after being kidnapped at University College Al-Kadhemiya Hospital, together with his son, Dr Anas Al-Jumaili, lecturer at the same college. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 24 December 2006.]

Anas Al-Jumaili: Lecturer at the College of Medicine, Al-Nahrein University. He was found shot dead in December (exact date unknown) with his father, Dr Jalil Al-Jumaili, professor of medicine, after being kidnapped at University College Al-Kadhemiya Hospital. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 24 December 2006.]

Adnan Mohammed Saleh Al-Aabid: Lecturer at the College of Law, Al-Nahrein University. He was found dead 31 January 2007 after having been kidnapped from his home 28 January 2007 together with lecturers Abdul Mutaleb Abdulrazak Al-Hashimi and Aamer Kasem Al-Kaisy, and a student. All were found dead in Baghdad morgue. [Sources: CEOSI Iraqi university sources and Al-Quds Al-Arabi, 1 February 2007.]

Abdul Mutaleb Abdulrazak Al-Hashimi: Lecturer at the College of Law, Al-Nahrein University. He was found dead 31 January 2007 after having been kidnapped 28 January 2007 on his way home, together with lecturers Adnan Mohammed Saleh Al-Aabid and Aamer Kasem Al-Kaisy, and a student. All were found dead in Baghdad morgue. [Sources: CEOSI Iraqi university sources and Al-Quds Al-Arabi, 1 February 2007.]

Aamer Kasem Al-Kaisy: Lecturer at the College of Law, Al-Nahrein University. He was found dead 31 January 2007 after having been kidnapped on his way home 28 January 2007, together with a student and lecturers Abdul Mutaleb Abdulrazak Al-Hashimi and Adnan Mohammed Saleh Al-Aabid. All were found dead in Baghdad morgue. [Sources: CEOSI Iraqi university sources and Al-Quds Al-Arabi, 1 February 2007.]

Khaled Al-Naieb: Lecturer in microbiology and deputy dean of Al-Nahrein University's College of Higher Studies in Medicine. Killed 30 March 2007 at the main entrance to the college. Having been threatened by the Mahdi Army, Moqtada Al-Sadr's militia, Dr Al-Naieb had moved to work in Irbil. During a brief visit to his family in Baghdad, and after recently becoming a father, he was killed at the main entrance to the college on his way to collect some documents. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 4 April 2007. Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report dated 7 April 2007.]

Sami Sitrak: Professor of English and dean of Al-Nahrein University's College of Law. Professor Sitrak was killed 29 March 2007. He had been appointed dean of the College after the former dean's resignation following an attempt to kill him along with three other College lecturers. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers, 7 April 2007.].

Thair Ahmed Jebr: Lecturer in the Department of Physics, College of Sciences, Al-Nahrein University. Jebr was killed in the attack against satellite TV channel Al-Baghdadiya 5 April 2007. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers, 7 April 2007.].

Iyad Hamza: PhD in chemistry, Baghdad University. He was the academic assistant of the President of Al-Nahrein University. On 4 May 2008 he was killed near his home in Baghdad. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi source. 6 May 2008.].

Islamic University (Baghdad)

Haizem Al-Azawi: Lecturer at Baghdad Islamic University. Department and college unknown. He was 35 years old and married and was killed 13 February 2006 by armed men when he ariving home in the neighborhood of Habibiya. [Source: Asia Times, 3 March 2006.]

Saadi Ahmad Zidaan Al-Fahdawi: PhD in Islamic science, lecturer at the College of Islamic Science, Baghdad University. Killed 26 March 2006.

Abdel Aziz Al-Jazem: Lecturer in Islamic theology at the College of Islamic Science, Baghdad University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Saad Jasim Mohammed: Lecturer at the Baghdad Islamic University. Department and college unknown. Killed, together with his brother Mohammed Jassim Mohammed, 11 May 2007 in the neighburghood of Al-Mansur. The armed men who commited the crime where identified by the Association of Muslims Scholars as members of a death squad. [Sources: Press note of the Association of Muslims Scholars, 12 May 2007, and CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 13 May 2007.]

Qais Sabah Al-Jabouri: Professor at the Baghdad Islamic University. Killed 7 June 2007 by a group of armed men who shot him from a car when he was leaving the university with the lecturers Alaa Jalel Essa and Saad Jalifa Al-Ani, who were killed and seriously injured respectively. press note of the Association of Muslims Scholars, 7 June 2007, and CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 9 June 2007.]

Alaa Jalel Essa: Professor at the Baghdad Islamic University. Killed 7 June 2007 by a group of armed men who shot him from a car when he was leaving the university with the lecturers Qais Sabah Al-Jabouri and Saad Jalifa Al-Ani, who were killed and seriously injured respectively. press note of the Association of Muslims Scholars, 7 June 2007, and CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 9 June 2007.]

Iraqi Ministry of Higher Education (Baghdad)

Lecturers killed after a mass kidnapping, 13 November 2006[4]:

Abdul Salam Suaidan Al-Mashhadani: Lecturer in political sciences and head of the scholarships section of the Ministry of Higher Education. He was kidnapped 13 November 2006 in an assault on the ministry. His body was found with signs of torture and mutilation 24 November 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 26 November 2006.]

Abdul Hamid Al-Hadizi: Professor (speciality unknown). He was kidnapped 13 November 2006 in an assault on the ministry. His body was found with signs of torture and mutilation 24 November 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 26 November 2006.]

Baghdad Institutes

Izi Al-Deen Al-Rawi: President of the Arabic University's Institute of Petroleum, Industry and Minerals. Al-Rawi was kidnapped and found dead 20 November 2006. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 20 November 2006)

BABYLON

Hilla University

Jaled M Al-Janabi: PhD in Islamic history, lecturer in Hilla University's School of Humanities.

Mohsin Suleiman Al-Ajeely: PhD in agronomy, lecturer in the College of Agronomy, Hilla University. Killed 24 December 2005.

Fleih Al-Gharbawi: Lecturer in the College of Medicine. Killed in Hilla (capital of the province of Babylon, 100 kilometers south of Baghdad) 20 November 2006 by armed men. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi sources, 20 November 2006.]

Ali Al-Grari (or Garar): Professor at Hilla University. He was shot dead 20 November 2006 by armed men in a vehicle on the freeway between Hilla and Baghdad. [Source: Iraqi police sources cited by Reuters, 20 November 2006,

AT-TAMIM

Kirkuk University

Ahmed Izaldin Yahya: Lecturer in the College of Engineering, Kirkuk University. Killed by a car bomb in the vicinity of his home in Kirkuk, 16 February 2007. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 17 February 2007.]

Hussein Qader Omar: professor and Dean of Kirkuk University's College of Education Sciences. Killed in November 20, 2006 by shots made from a vehicle in the city center. An accompanying colleague was injured. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, November 21, 2006, and Iraqi Police Sources cited by Reuters, 20 November 2006.].

Sabri Abdul Jabar Mohammed: Lecturer at the College of Education Sciences at Kirkuk University. Found dead 1 November 2007 in a street in Kirkuk one day after being kidnapped by a group of unidentified armed men [Source: Iraqi university sources to the BRussells Tribunal and CEOSI, 2 November 2007.]

Abdel Sattar Tahir Sharif: Lecturer at Kirkuk University. Department and college unknown. 75-years-old, he was assassinated 5 March 2008 by armed men in the district of Shoraw, 10 kilometres northeast of Kirkuk. [Source: Aswat Al-Iraq/ Voices of Iraq, 5 March 2008.]

NINEVEH

Mosul University

Abdel Yabar Al-Naimi: Dean of Mosul University's College of Humanities.

Abdul Yabar Mustafa: PhD in political sciences, dean of Mosul University's College of Political Sciences.

Abdul Aziz El-Atrachi: PhD in plant protection in the College of Agronomy and Forestry, Mosul University.

Eman Abd-Almonaom Yunis: PhD in translation, lecturer in the College of Humanities, Mosul University.

Jaled Faisal Hamid Al-Shijo: PhD and lecturer in the College of Physical Education, Mosul University.

Leila Abdu Allah Al-Saad: PhD in law, dean of Mosul University's College of Law.

Mahfud Al-Kazzaz: PhD and lecturer at University Mosul. Department and college unknown. Killed 20 November 2004.

Mohammed Yunis Thanun: Bachelor of sciences, lecturer in the College of Physical Education, Mosul University.

Munir Al-Jiero: PhD in law and lecturer in the College of Law, Mosul University. Married to Dr Leila Abdu Allah Al-Saad, also assassinated.

Noel Butrus S. Mathew: PhD, professor at the Health Institute of Mosul University.

Ahmad Hamid Al-Tai: Professor and head of Department of Medicine, Mosul University. Killed 20 November 2006 when armed men intercepted his vehicle as he was heading home. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 20 November 2006.]

Kamel Abdul Hussein: Lecturer and deputy dean of the College of Law, Mosul University. Killed 11 January 2007. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 23 January 2007.]

Talal Younis: Professor and dean of the College of Political Sciences. Killed on the morning of 16 April 2007 at the main entrance to the college. Within less than half an hour Professor Jaafer Hassan Sadeq of the Department of History at Mosul University was assassinated at his home. [Sources: CEOSI Iraqi university sources and Al-Mousl.]

Jaafer Hassan Sadeq: Professor in the Department of History of Mosul University's College of Arts. Killed 16 April 2007 at home in the district of Al-Kafaaat, northwest of Mosul. Within less that half an hour, Professor Talal Younis, dean of Mosul University's College of Political Sciences, was killed at the main entrance to the college. [Sources: CEOSI Iraqi university sources and Al-Mousl.]

Ismail Taleb Ahmed: Lecturer in the College of Education, Mosul University. Killed 2 May 2007 while on his way to college. [Source: Al-Mosul, 2 May 2007.]

Nidal Al-Asadi: Professor in the Computer Sciences Department of Mosul University's College of Sciences. Shot dead by armed men in the district of Al-Muhandiseen, according to police sources in Mosul. [Sources: INA, 2 May 2007, and Iraqi sources to the BRussells Tribunal, 3 May 2007.]

Aziz Suleiman: Lecturer at Mosul University. Department of Mosul University's College of Sociology. Killed in Mosul 22 January 2008. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 24 January 2008.].

Jalil Ibrahim Ahmed al-Naimi: Director of the 'Sharia' Department (Islamic Law), Mosul University. He was shot dead by armed men when he came back home (in Mosul) from University, 30 January 2008. [Sources: CEOSI and BRussells Tribunal University Iraqi sources, al-Quds al-Arabi, 31 de enero de 2008.].

QADISIYA

Diwaniya University

Hakim Malik Al-Zayadi: PhD in Arabic philology, lecturer in Arabic literature at Al-Qadisyia University. Dr Al-Zayadi was born in Diwaniya, and was killed in Latifiya when he was traveling from Baghdad 24 July 2005.]

Mayed Husein: Physician and lecturer at the College of Medicine, Diwaniya University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

BASRA

Basra University

Abdel Al-Munim Abdel Mayad: Bachelor and lecturer at Basra University.

Abdel Gani Assaadun: Bachelor and lecturer at Basra University.

Abdul Alah Al-Fadhil: PhD, professor and deputy dean of Basra University's College of Medicine.

Abdul-Hussein Nasir Jalaf: PhD in agronomy, lecturer at the College of Agronomy's Center of Research on Date Palm Trees, Basra University.

Alaa Daoud: PhD in sciences, professor and chairman of Basra University (also reported as a lecturer in history). Killed 20 July 2005.

Ali Galib Abd Ali: Bachelor of sciences, assistant professor at the School of Engineering, Basra University.

Asaad Salem

Shrieda: PhD in engineering, professor and dean of Basra University's School of Engineering.

Faysal Al-Assadi: PhD in agronomy, professor at the College of Agronomy, Basra University.

Gassab Jabber Attar: Bachelor of sciences, lecturer at the School of Engineering, Basra University.

Haidar Al-Baaj: PhD in surgery, head of the University College Basra Hospital.

Haidar Taher: PhD and professor at the College of Medicine, Basra University.

Hussein Yasin: PhD in physics, lecturer in sciences at Basra University Killed 18 February 2004 at his home and in front of his family.

Khaled Shrieda: PhD in engineering, dean of the School of Engineering, Basra University.

Khamhour Al-Zargani: PhD in history, head of the Department of History at the College of Education, Basra University Killed 19 August 2005.

Kadim Mashut Awad: visiting professor at the Department of Soils, College of Agriculture, Basra University. Killed December 2005 (exact date unknown.].

Karem Hassani: PhD and lecturer at the College of Medicine, Basra University.

Kefaia Husein Saleh: PhD in English philology, lecturer in the College of Education Sciences, Basra University.

Mohammed Al-Hakim: PhD in pharmacy, professor and dean of Basra University's College of Pharmacy.

Mohammed Yassem Badr: PhD, professor and chairman of Basra University.

Omar Fakhri:
PhD and lecturer in biology at the College of Sciences, Basra University.

Saad Alrubaiee:
PhD and lecturer in biology at the College of Sciences, Basra University.

Yaddab Al-Hajjam: PhD in education sciences and lecturer at the College of Education Sciences, Basra University.

Zanubia Abdel Husein: PhD in veterinary medicine, lecturer at the College of Veterinary Medicine, Basra University.

Jalil Ibrahim Almachari: Lecturer at Basra University. Department and college unknown. Killed 20 March 2006 after criticizing in a public lecture the situation in Iraq. (Arabic Source: Al-Kader.]

Abdullah Hamed Al-Fadel: PhD in medicine, lecturer in surgery and deputy dean of the College of Medicine at Basra University. Killed in January 2006 (exact date unknown). [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources.]

Fuad Al-Dajan: PhD in medicine, lecturer in gynecology at the College of Medicine, Basra University. Killed at the beginning of March 2006 (exact date unknown). [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources.]

Saad Al-Shahin: PhD in medicine, lecturer in internal medicine at Basra University's College of Medicine. Killed at the beginning of March 2006 (exact date unknow). [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources.]

Jamhoor Karem Khammas: Lecturer at the College of Arts, Basra University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Karem Mohsen: PhD and lecturer at Department of Agriculture, College of Agronomy, Basra University. Killed 10 April 2006. He worked in the field of honeybee production. Lecturers and students called for a demonstration to protest for his assassination. [Source: Al-Basrah, 11 April 2006.]

Waled Kamel: Lecturer at the College of Arts at Basra University. Killed 8 May 2006. Other two lecturers were injured during the attack, one of them seriously. [Source: Al-Quds Al-Arabi, 9 May 2006.]

Ahmad Abdul Kader Abdullah: Lecturer in the College of Sciences, Basra University. His body was found 9 June 2006. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 10 June 2006.]

Kasem Yusuf Yakub: Head of Department of Mechanical Engineering, Basra University. Killed 13 June 2006 at the university gate. [Sources: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 14 June 2006 and Al-Quds Al-Arabi, 16 June 2006.]

Ahmad Abdul Wadir Abdullah: Professor of the College of Chemistry, Basra University. Killed 10 June 2006. [Source: UNAMI report, 1 May-30 June 2006.]

Kathum Mashhout: Lecturer in edaphology at the College of Agriculture, Basra University. Killed in Basra in December 2006 (exact date unknown). [Source: CEOSI Iraqi university sources, 12 December 2006.]

Mohammed Aziz Alwan: Lecturer in artistic design at the College of Fine Arts, Basra University. Killed by armed men 26 May 2007 while walking in the city. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 1 June 2007.]

Firas Abdul Zahra: Lecturer at the College of Physical Education, Basra University. Killed at home by armed men 18 July 2007. His wife was injured in the attack. [Source: Iraqi university sources to the BRussells Tribunal, 26 August 2007.]

Muayad Ahmad Jalaf: Lecturer at the College of Arts, Basra University. Kidnapped 10 September 2007 by a group of armed men that was driving three cars, one of them with a government license plate. He was found dead in a city suburb the next day. [Source: Iraqi university sources to the BRussells Tribunal, 12 September 2007.]

Khaled Naser Al-Miyahi: PhD in medicine, Professor of neurosurgery at Basra University. He was assassinated in March 2008 (exact date unknown). His body was found after his being kidnapped by a group of armed men in the streets of Basra. There were no ransom demands, according to information provided by Baghdad's Center for Human Rights. [Source: Al-Basrah, 12 March 2008.]

Technical Institute of Basra

Mohammed Kasem: PhD in engineering, lecturer at the Technical Institute of Basra.

Sabah Hachim Yaber: Lecturer at the Technical Institute of Basra.

Salah Abdelaziz Hashim: PhD and lecturer in fine arts at the Technical Institute of Basra. Kidnapped in 4 April 2006. He was found shot dead the next day. According to other sources, Dr Hashim was machine-gunned from a vehicle, injuring also a number of students. [Sources: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 6 April 2006, Az-Zaman, 6 April 2006, and Al-Quds Al-Arabi, 7 April 2006.]

TIKRIT

Tikrit University

Basem Al-Mudares: PhD in chemical sciences and lecturer in the College of Sciences, Tikrit University. His body was found mutilated in the city of Samarra 21 July 2004.

Fathal Mosa Hussine: PhD and professor at the College of Physical Education, Tikrit University.

Mahmud Ibrahim Hussein: PhD in biological sciences and lecturer at the College of Education Sciences, Tikrit University.

Madloul Albazi Tikrit University. Department and college unknown. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Mojbil Achaij Issa Al-Jabouri: Lecturer in international law at the College of Law, Tikrit University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Damin Husein Al-Abidi: Lecturer in international law at College of Law, Tikrit University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Harit Abdel Yabar As Samrai: PhD student at the College of Engineering, Tikrit University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Farhan Mahmud: Lecturer at the College of Theology, Tikrit University. Disappeared after being kidnapped 24 November 2006. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 26 November 2006.]

Mustafa Khudhr Qasim: Professor at Tikrit University. Department and college unknown. His body was found beheaded in Al-Mulawatha, eastern Mosul, 21 November 2007. [Sources: Al-Mosul, 22 November 2007, and Iraqi university sources to the BRussells Tribunal and CEOSI, 22-25 November 2007.]

Taha AbdulRazak Al-Ani: PhD in Islamic Studies, he was professor at Tikrit University. His body was found shot dead in a car on a highway near Al-Adel, a Baghdad suburb. Also, the body of Sheikh Mahmoud Talb Latif Al-Jumaily, member of the Commision of Muslim Scientists, was found dead in the same car last Thursday afternoon, 15 May 2008. [Source: CEOSI Iraqi sources, 21 May 2008.]

DIYALA

Baquba University

Taleb Ibrahim Al-Daher: PhD in physical sciences, professor and dean at the College of Sciences, Baquba University. Killed 21 December 2004.

Lez Mecchan: Professor at Baquba University. Department and college unknown. Killed 19 April 2006 with his wife and another colleague. [Sources: DPC and EFE, 19 April 2006.]

Mis (surname unknown): Lecturer at Baquba University. Department and college unknown. Wife of Professor Lez Mecchan, also assassinated. Both were killed with another colleague 19 April 2006. [Sources: DPC and EFE, 19 April 2006.]

Salam Ali Husein: Taught at Baquba University. Department and college unknown. Killed 19 April 2006 with two other colleagues. [Sources: DPC and EFE, 19 April 2006.]

Meshhin Hardan Madhlom Al-Dulaimi: Professor at Baquba University. Department and college unknown. Killed at the end of April, according to the Iraqi Ministry of Higher Education. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 10 May 2006.]

Abdul Salam Ali Al-Mehdawi: Professor at Baquba University. Department and college unknown. Killed at the end of April, according to the Iraqi Ministry of Higher Education. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 10 May 2006.]

Mais Ganem Mahmoud: Lecturer at Baquba University. Department and college unknown. Killed at the end of April, according to the Iraqi Ministry of Higher Education. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 10 May 2006.]

Satar Jabar Akool: Lecturer at Baquba University. Department and college unknown. Killed at the end of April, according to the Iraqi Ministry of Higher Education. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 10 May 2006.]

Mohammed Abdual Redah Al-Tamemmi: Lecturer in the Department of Arabic Language and head of the College of Education, Baquba University. Killed 19 August 2006 together with Professor Kreem Slman Al-Hamed Al-Sadey, 70 years old, of the same Department. A third lecturer from the same department escaped the attack carried out by a group of four armed men Students and lecturers demonstrated against his and other lecturers' deaths. [Source: World Socialist, 12 September 2006, citing the Iraqi newspaper Az-Zaman, CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 25 December 2006.]

Karem Al-Saadi: Lecturer at Baquba University. Department and college unknown. Killed August 2006. Students and lecturers demonstrated against his and other lecturers' deaths. [Source: World Socialist, 12 September 2006, citing the Iraqi newspaper Az-Zaman.]

Kreem Slman Al-Hamed Al-Sadey: Professor in the Department of Arabic Language at the College of Education, Baquba University. He was 70 years old when killed 19 August 2006. In the attack Mohammed Abdual Redah Al-Tamemmi, head of Education Department was also killed. A third lecturer from the same department escaped the attack of a group of four armed men. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 25 December 2006.]

Hasan Ahmad: Lecturer in the College of Education, Baquba University. Killed 8 December 2006. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, December 2006.]

Ahmed Mehawish Hasan: Lecturer in the Department of Arabic at the College of Education, Baquba University. Killed in December (exact date unknown). [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 25 December 2006.]

Walhan Hamid Fares Al-Rubai: Dean of the College of Physical Education, Baquba University. Al-Rubai was shot by a group of armed men in his office 1 February 2007. According to some sources his son was also killed. [Source: Reuters and Islamomeno, 1-3 February 2007 respectively, and CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 2 February 2007.]

Abdul Ghabur Al-Qasi: Lecturer in history at Baquba University. His body was found by the police 10 April 2007 in Diyala River, which crosses the city, with 31 other bodies of kidnapped people. [Source: Az-zaman, 11 April 2007.]

Jamal Mustafa: Professor and head of the History Department, College of Education Sciences, Baquba University. Kidnapped at home in the city of Baquba 29 October 2007 by a group of armed men driving in three vehicles. [Source: Iraqi university sources to the BRussells Tribunal, 30 October 2007.]

Al-ANBAR

Ramadi University

Abdel Karem Mejlef Saleh: PhD in philology, lecturer at the College of Education Sciences, Al-Anbar University.

Abdel Majed Hamed Al-Karboli: Lecturer at Ramadi University. Killed December 2005 (exact date unknown.].

Ahmad Abdel

Hadi Al-Rawi: PhD in biology, professor in the School of Agronomy, Al-Anbar University.

Ahmad Abdul Alrahman Hameid Al-Jhbissy: PhD in Medicine, Professor of College of Medicine, Al-Anbar University.

Ahmed Saadi Zaidan: PhD in education sciences, Ramadi University. Killed February 2005 (exact date unknown.].

Hamed Faisal Antar: Lecturer in the College of Law, Ramadi University. Killed December 2005 (exact date unknown.].

Naser Abdel Karem Mejlef Al-Dulaimi: Department of Physics, College of Education, Ramadi University. Killed December 2005 (exact date unknown.].

Raad Ojssin Al-Binow: PhD in surgery, lecturer at the College of Medicine, Al-Anbar University.

Shakir Mahmmoud Jasim: PhD in agronomy, lecturer in the School of Agronomy, Al-Anbar University.

Nabil Hujazi: Lecturer at the College of Medicine, Ramadi University. Killed in June 2006 (exact date unknown). [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 20 June 2006, confirmed by Iraqi Ministry of Higher Education.]

Nasar Al-Fahdawi: Lecturer at Ramadi University. Department and college unknown. Killed 16 January 2006. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, December 2006.]

Khalid Jubair Al-Dulaimi: Lecturer at the College of Engineering, Ramadi University. Killed 27 April 2007. [Source: Iraqi sources to the BRussells Tribunal, 3 May 2007.]

NAJAF

Kufa University

Jawla Mohammed Taqi Zwain: PhD in medicine, lecturer at College of Medicine, Kufa University.

Shahlaa Al-Nasrawi: Lecturer in the College of Law, Kufa University. Assassinated 22 August 2007 by members of a sectarian militia. [Source: CEOSI university Iraqi sources, 27 August 2007.]

Adel Abdul Hadi: Professor of philosophy, Kufa University's College of Arts. Killed by a group of armed men 28 October 2007 when returning home from university. [Source: Iraqi university sources to the BRussells Tribunal, 30 October 2007.]

KARBALA

University of Karbala

Kasem Mohammed Ad Dayni: Lecturer in the Department of Psychology, College of Pedagogy, Karbala University. Killed 17 April 2006.

MOSUL

Mosul University

Omar Miran: Baghdad University bachelor of law (1946), PhD in history from Paris University (1952), professor of history at Mosul University, specialist in history of the Middle East. Killed, along with his wife and three of his sons, by armed men in February 2006 (exact date unknown.].

Noel Petros Shammas Matti: Lecturer at the College of Medicine, Mosul University. Married and father of two daughters. He was kidnapped and found dead 4 August 2006.

Muwafek Yahya Hamdun: Deputy dean and professor at the College of Agronomy, Mosul University. [Source: Al-Hayat, 28 February 2006.]

Naif Sultan Saleh: Lecturer at the Technical Institute, Mosul University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Natek Sabri Hasan: Lecturer in the Department of Agricultural Mechanization and head of the College of Agronomy, Mosul University. [Source: Iraqi Association of University Lecturers report, March 2006.]

Abdul Kader Ali Abdullah: Lecturer in the Department of Arabic, College of Education Sciences, Mosul University. Found dead 25/26 August 2007 after being kidnapped five days before by a group of armed men. [Source: Iraqi sources to the BRussells Tribunal and CEOSI 26-27 August 2007.]

Unknown: Lecturer at Mosul University, killed in the explosion of two car bombs near campus, 1 October 2007. In this atack six other people were injured, among them four students. [Source: KUNA, 1 October 2007.]

OPEN UNIVERSITY

Kareem Ahmed Al-Timmi: Head of the Department of Arabic Language in the College of Education at the Open University. Killed in Baghdad, 22 February 2007.

COMMISSION OF TECHNICAL EDUCATION [5]

Aamir Ibrahim Hamza: Bachelor in electronic engineering, lecturer at the Technical Institute.

Mohammed Abd Al-Hussein Wahed: PhD in tourism, lecturer at the Institute of Administration.

Mohammed Saleh Mahdi: Bachelor in sciences, lecturer at the Cancer Research Centre. Killed November 2005.

INSTITUTIONAL POSITIONS

Emad Sarsam: PhD in surgery and member of the Arab Council of Medicine.

Faiz Ghani Aziz: PhD in agronomy, director general of the Iraqi Company of Vegetable Oil. Killed September 2003.

Isam Said Abd Al-Halim: Geologic consultant at the Ministry of Construction.

Kamal Al-Jarrah: Degree in English philology, researcher and writer and director general at the Ministry of Education.

Raad Abdul-Latif Al-Saadi: PhD in Arabic language, consultant in higher education and scientific research at the Ministry of Education.

Shakier Al-Jafayi: PhD in administration, head of the Department of Normalization and Quality at the Iraq Council.

Wajeeh Mahjub: PhD in physical education, director general of physical education at the Ministry of Education.

Wissam Al-Hashimi: PhD in petrogeology, president of the Arab Union of Geologists, expert in Iraqi reservoirs, he worked for the Iraqi Ministry of Petroleum.

UNIVERSITY AFFILIATION UNKNOWN

Amir Mizhir Al-Dayni: Professor of telecommunication engineering.

Khaled Ibrahim Said: PhD in physics.

Mohammed Al-Adramli: PhD in chemical sciences.

Mohammed Munim Al-Izmerly: PhD in chemical sciences. He was tortured and killed by US troops. His body was sent to the Baghdad morgue. The cause of death was initially registered as “brainstem compression”.

Nafi Aboud: Professor of Arabic literature.

OTHER CASES

Khalel Al-Zahawi: Born in 1946, Al-Zahawi was considered the most important calligraphist in Iraq and among the most important in the Arab-Muslim world. He worked as a lecturer in calligraphy in several Arab countries during the 1990s. He was killed 19 May 2007 in Baghdad by a group of armed men. He was buried in Diyala, where he was born. [Source: BBC News, 22 May 2007. His biography is available on wikipedia.].

Click on "comments" below to read or post comments

Comments (50)

Comment (0)

Comment Guidelines

Be succinct, constructive and relevant to the story. We encourage engaging, diverse and meaningful commentary. Do not include personal information such as names, addresses, phone numbers and emails. Comments falling outside our guidelines – those including personal attacks and profanity – are not permitted.

See our complete Comment Policy and use this link to notify us if you have concerns about a comment. We'll promptly review and remove any inappropriate postings.

Send Page To a Friend

In accordance with Title 17 U.S.C. Section 107, this material is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving the included information for research and educational purposes. Information Clearing House has no affiliation whatsoever with the originator of this article nor is Information ClearingHouse endorsed or sponsored by the originator.)

Please help Support Information Clearing House

HOME

COPYRIGHT NOTICE

Video

Access your email online and on the go with Windows Live Hotmail. Sign up today. _____ Access your email online and on the go with Windows Live Hotmail. http://windowslive.com/Explore/Hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_access_112008

↑ Index

531. steve d. dalachinsky

Fw: Fwd: gala invite

Sat 29 Nov 2008

Arts For Art, Inc. cordially invites you to a

Gala Fundraiser

to create the Innovative Arts Center

A Place for Innovation in Music, Arts and Thinking.

Monday, December 15, 2008
Dinner & Open Bar, 7:30pm - 11:00pm Attire: Festive

The Angel Orensanz Foundation
172 Norfolk Street
New York, NY, 10002

Speakers:Margaret Richardson, Obama Transition Team
Marc Lambert, Puffin Foundation
Patricia Nicholson-Parker, Arts For Art, Inc.

Performances by:Yerba Buena
William Parker's Inside Songs Of Curtis Mayfield Citizen Cope
Burnt Sugar & Surprise Guests

Host Committee:
Willie MackSalman Rushdie
Serge BeckerTenzin Wild
Simon HammersteinBen Pundole
Josh LucasArt For Art Board Members
Lupe RamosHappy Massee

Tables start at $2000. Individual tickets start at $250.
Special Performances: 9:30pm - 11pm
Please RSVP Todd at: [redacted]

Tickets available through BROWN PAPER TICKETS
[redacted]

http://www.brownpapertickets.com

↑ Index

532. Amish Trivedi
On Behalf of Lisa Jarnot
Sat 29 Nov 2008

A Spring Poetry Workshop in Sunnyside, Queens. 10 Weeks, $300. Sundays from 3-6 pm beginning January 18th. Pattern Poetry: a study of "concrete" "conceptual" "visual" "knitted" "sculpted" etc. poetry with an emphasis on the making of such works. Limit nine students. Syllabus available at www.angelfire.com/poetry/lisajarnot/patternpoetry.html Another Spring Poetry Workshop in Sunnyside, Queens. 10 weeks, $300. Monday evenings from 6-9 pm beginning January 19th. Avant-Film and Avant-Poetry: A Tribute to Stan Brakhage: in this class we'll look at poets influenced by filmmakers and filmmakers influenced by poets. The class will be run in the style of Stan Brakhage's Salons— with films shown in the first half of class and conversation, film-generated writing, and workshopping held afterwards. We'll look at poems and films by Brakhage, Gertrude Stein, Robert Duncan, Charles Olson, Jack Spicer, Lawrence Jordan, Kenneth Anger, Joseph Cornell, Rudy Burkhardt, Edwin Denby, Abigal Child, Henry Hills, Jennifer Reeves, Hannah Weiner, and others. Filmmakers welcome! Limit nine students. Syllabus available at www.angelfire.com/poetry/lisajarnot/film.html Contact Lisa Jarnot at [redacted] for more information.

↑ Index

533. Nicholas Karavatos
Re: India...Muslims and Hindus
Sat 29 Nov 2008

"It is terrible when we essentialize."

I've been living on a few coasts of the Arabian Peninsula for several years where there is a significant South Asian expatriate population. I've never been in such an "essentialist" or "essentializing" environment anywhere else.

Most all politics here are Identity Politics.

The hierarchy is that Muslims are on top, next it is Arabs (Khaleejis feel they're the more blessed) above all other Muslims (though South Asians vastly outnumber Arabs), then there are the tribal hierarchies among Arabs ... And we are all familiar with the caste system of India, so no need go into that.

Palestinians seem to be everyone's pet sacred cow.

In India there is the Hindu Nationalist movement, no different than any Religion+Nationalism movement, basically supreamist. Hindu Nationalists see themselves as True Indians (like religious right Republicans and their Real America crap) and that all other religions in India are the result of invasion and colonialism.

Yes, there are Indians who use their religious identity as an impetus, rationale, justification for acts of violence: "Hindu Terrorism" as Alex alluded. But that is also the outline of "Islamic Terrorism" in India or elsewhere, as well: as I would define it, when a structure/organization (not islolated individuals) uses their religious identity as an impetus/rationale/justification for their nationalistic violence. This is also how I would define "Judaic Terrorism" or "Christian Terrorism."

Alex says that "democracy doesn't work" in these environments, and that's because democracy needs secularism to be successful. Otherwise, people vote according to their religion, religious sect, tribe, etc., identity. However, within these (mono?)cultures there is the al-Shura ("consultation") tradition.

I am still waiting for a Zoroastrian to be elected president in the Islamic Republic of Iran. If it's a democracy, why not?

As I watched the Mumbai attacks unfold on television, the Indian government claimed "foriegn elements" were behind it. Yes, always blame The Other first.

Then there is this unfolding in Nigeria:
http://english.aljazeera.net/news/africa/2008/11/20081129175135493970.html

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of English
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

> Date: Sat, 29 Nov 2008 07:14:23 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: India...Muslims and Hindus
> To: [redacted]
>
> Alexander is tired, especially given > situation in Mumbai, of the abuse thrown at MUSLIMS. Lots of > "terrorism," as they called it (THEY), is performed by HINDUS . Fact.
>
> Purely anecdotal, but I spent weeks with Sufis, spent lots of time with Muslim descendants from Persia...and always, and they knew me, and there were no tourists, treated kindly.

>
> It is a terrible when we essentialize. There is little solidarity in India. Democracy doesn't work as well as Bush likes to say it does.
>
> It is a terrible thing what happened, more terribe for the ineffectuality of the government there, all care and well wishes sent to friends, but let us not let this situation be exploited for the sake of what is an AGENDA.
>
> Alex
>
>
>
>
>
>

Get more done, have more fun, and stay more connected with Windows Mobile®.
http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/119642556/direct/01/

↑ Index

534. Catherine Daly

Re: New esay in Jacket Magazine: 'Empirical and Non-Empirical Identifiers'

Sat 29 Nov 2008

I think of more the poem as an engine similie, where the gizmo hooked up to a car tells one what is wrong

but -- my cursory scan of the article mostly confised me, formatting wise, and I didn't see any striking new "tools" for reading

On Fri, Nov 28, 2008 at 6:50 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> As I asked on a different list, diagnostic devices? Like stethescopes or xrays? You mean there's a way to find out whether that lump in line three is dangerous?
>
> Mark
>
>
>
> --

> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

↑ Index

535. Lauren Russell
Re: Request for information
Sun 30 Nov 2008

Hi Sharon,

Though they don't fulfill the "non-Western" requirement, I really love some of the poems in Gregory Orr's Orpheus & Eurydice series, to the extent that I sometimes find myself reading them on long walks in cemeteries.

Are you teaching experimental fiction this semester, by any chance?

Lauren

Date: Fri, 28 Nov 2008 12:39:01 -0500
From: Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart <[redacted]> Subject: Request for information

Dear friends,

This summer at the New School I'll be teaching a literature/poetry =20 course called "The Muse Singing: Myth in Poetry from Classical Times =20 to Now." I would deeply appreciate suggestions regarding non-Western =20= poetic responses to the Greek myths, from any era, any country. I'll =20=

post the course description below and the texts I'm already using. =20 Many thanks in advance!

THE MUSE SINGING: MYTH IN POETRY FROM CLASSICAL TIMES TO NOW
Sharon Mesmer, Instructor / Humanities Division

The artful, emotive tellings of timeless myth-stories by poets of the =20= classical world continue to enthrall us today. What is it about =20 these mysterious and beautiful tales that has so captured the poetic =20 imagination for so long? How, to paraphrase Walter Pater, have poets =20=

=93become the depositaries of the instinctive products of the =20 imagination, fixing its outlines and developing its situations=94? To =20=

gain a new appreciation of four of the most central and familiar =20 Greek myths (Demeter and Persephone; Cupid and Psyche; Daedalus and =20 Icarus; Orpheus and Eurydice) we=92ll first examine their oldest known =20= literary sources (The Homeric Hymn to Demeter; Apuleius; Ovid) and =20 read short interpretations by well-known scholars such as Edith =20 Hamilton, Walter Pater, Jane Harrison, Guy Davenport and Joseph =20 Campbell. Finally, we=92ll do close readings of modern and =20 contemporary poetic retellings of each tale and discuss connections/ =20 disconnections with the original sources. Access to the films =93La =20 Belle et Le B=EAte/Beauty and the Beast=94 (as a modern interpretation = of =20 the Cupid and Psyche story) by Jean Cocteau and =93Orfeu Negro/Black =20 Orpheus=94 by Marcel Camus will also be provided through Blackboard.

TEXTS:
MYTHOLOGY: TIMELESS TALES OF GODS AND HEROES
Edith Hamilton

METAMORPHOSIS
Ovid, translation by David Raeburn

THE HOMERIC HYMN TO DEMETER
Helen Foley, editor

CUPID AND PSYCHE
Apuleius, translation by E.J. Kenney

ORPHEUS AND COMPANY
Deborah de Nicola, editor

GODS AND MORTALS
Nina Kossman, editor

=46rom Google Books:
GREEK STUDIES
Walter Pater (short excerpt)

PROLEGOMENA TO THE STUDY OF GREEK RELIGION
Jane Harrison (short excerpt)

↑ Index

536. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: Dave Church
Sun 30 Nov 2008

---

it's with great sadness i annouce the following

Hey Steve,

It's been a while, but I am writing on behalf of the Dave Church, who died on Thanksgiving morning (officially pronounced dead at 1:30 A.M.). He was found in his cab, slumped over, having suffered what appears to have been a heart attack (still waiting to hear from the coroner). One can only hope it was fast, for I'm quite sure he thought a great deal about death, and the only part of it that frightened, or moved, him was "how it would go down" - the direct confrontation with death.

At any rate, one might think of the Dylan song - "Let me die in my footsteps..." - and think he went the right way, but he was not fond of taxicab driving, even if he drew material for his writing from his experiences in the seedy netherworld that many drivers get to see from behind their wheel. Instead, he wanted to be remembered as a poet, for that indeed was what he was.

Not sure where to go from here. I'm sending this to you because of the obvious history between you and him, and because of the wider community of poets to which you have access.

I have control over his drafts, writings, correspondence, publications, etc., so anyone with an interest in what will happen to this material can contact me at this email address for the time being.

In the meantime, a biography of Dave Church can be found at:

http://www.poetrymagazines.org.uk/magazine/record.asp?id=16312

I'll be busy with the wake and funeral this week in RI, but I'll get in touch with you when I'm back in New York soon after.

Thanks,
Jonathan

Windows Live Hotmail now works up to 70% faster. Sign up today.

↑ Index

537. John Cunningham
language v. experimental
Sun 30 Nov 2008

In my recent query re Canadian language poets to which there were many responses, most of them civil (and my thanks to all those who took the trouble to reply to that thread - even to G.B. (and know Rob that's not you), there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference? If so, what is it? And where does Erin Moure sit in that binary? John Herbert Cunningham

↑ Index

538. Steve Halle
Michael Theune @ Seven Corners
Sun 30 Nov 2008

New work by Michael Theune is online now at Seven Corners<http://www.sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/>(http://www.sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/). Please take a minute to stop by and check it out.

Best,
Steve Halle
Editor

↑ Index

539. William James Austin
Blackbox open for submissions
Sun 30 Nov 2008

Hello everyone,

The fall Blackbox gallery is now open for submissions.? The submission period will last approximately two weeks.? Please be certain to read and follow the submission guidelines on the Blackbox page.? Per usual, go to WilliamJamesAustin.com and follow the Blackbox link.? Correspondence regarding Blackbox, like submissions, must be sent to [redacted].

Thank you in advance for your continued support of my little project.

Best,
William James Austin

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

December 2008

407 messages · Sun 30 Nov 2008 – Wed 31 Dec 2008

December 2008 handed the list the very thing it had spent a January spoofing — a real inaugural poet, named and appointed — and the room discovered that the actual occasion was harder to mock than the imaginary one. Four hundred and seven messages moved through it, and the largest gathered around Elizabeth Alexander, chosen to read at Obama's swearing-in, and around the compromised ceremony she had been asked to bless. A year after the list had drafted joke inaugural poems, a real one was coming, and the jokes stopped.

The largest thread was an open letter asking her not to do it. Alexander had been named the inaugural poet, but the same inauguration had handed its invocation to Rick Warren, a prominent backer of Proposition 8, and one member wrote to her directly — begging her to "consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration" so long as an anti-gay pastor shared the platform. It was an agonized letter, alert to what it was asking; the writer knew, as a poet, "how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect", and knew he was asking her to refuse the largest recognition a poet could get, on principle.

The quarrel was whether the poet owed the occasion her presence or her protest. Some in the room held that Alexander should read and make the platform hers; others that to stand beside Warren was to lend poetry's dignity to a man campaigning against their marriages. Around it swirled the inauguration's theology — what it meant to open a secular rite with a divisive prayer — and the room split, as the country did, over whether a poet honors a flawed ceremony by gracing it or by walking away.

Underneath the gravity the list kept its gallows humor about money and the body. The Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory drew a long thread — poets performing intimacy for tips as the recession bit — and a colder current, capitalism and the long poem, asked whether the epic itself was a form the market could no longer underwrite. The inaugural poet debated her conscience upstairs while, downstairs, the poets priced themselves by the hour.

I have set December down exactly as the archive delivered it — the named inaugural poet, the open letter begging her to refuse, the divisive prayer, and the brothel pricing verse by the tip — because it was the month the list got its wish and found it complicated: a real poet at a real inauguration, and no way to feel simple about it. A room that had laughed at the very idea of an inaugural poem now argued in dead earnest whether a good poet should stand on a stage beside a man who opposed her friends' right to marry, which is the difference, exactly, between mocking an occasion and being asked to live inside one.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 407 in all.

WRITERS

De 1913, Sandra 78
Alexander, Charles 133, 195, 307, 308, 309, 370, 377
Allegrezza, William 18, 116, 173
AND, mIEKAL 244, 293, 347
Andrews, Jim 20, 39, 57, 88, 152, 153, 176, 237, 384
Angeline, Mary 180, 181, 183
Aslongasittakes 54
Austin, Geer 216
Austin, William James 197
Bales, Marcus 29, 71, 83
Ballardini, Anny 12
Banes, Clay 248
Baraban, Stephen 334
Baratier, David 208, 239, 379
Behm-Steinberg, Hugh 4, 17, 376
Benson, Cara 58, 118, 191
Berkson, Bill 276
Bogle, Ann 279, 292
Books, Crane's Bill 374
Books, J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill 184, 310
Borchart, Sharon Mesmer/David 280
Bowering, George 182, 272, 282, 283, 298, 299, 328, 329, 360, 361, 387, 389
Bradshaw, Joseph 186
Brinton, Jasper 199
Brito, Manuel 260
Brown, Pam 89, 90, 234, 278, 378, 406
Bryant, Tisa 34, 35, 50, 142
Buuck, David 270, 273
Cabri, Louis 32
Cain, Amina 53
Cain, Séamas 76, 79, 143, 211
Camplin, Troy 82, 97, 164, 255, 373, 397, 399
Casamassima, Christophe 81, 205
Ceravolo, Rosemary 219
Chace, Joel 136, 238
Chapman, Chris 155, 190, 218
Cheek, Cris 51, 249, 348, 349
Chen, Ken 64
Chirot, David-Baptiste 100, 172, 179, 311, 315, 320, 332, 372, 393, 405
Ciccariello, Peter 101, 129, 331, 371
Clark, Hilary 166, 168
Conrad, CA 56, 70, 94, 209, 243, 269, 271, 288
Cory, Cynie 351
Crawford, Holly 222
Croggon, Alison 302
Del Ray Cross 33
Cunningham, John 19, 27, 317, 368
Dalachinsky, Steve D. 200, 201, 203, 236, 259
Daley, Ryan 48, 301, 343, 363
Daly, Catherine 194
Daly, Luke 148
Damon, Maria 24, 25, 400
Devineni, Ram 121
Dickow, Alexander 47
Durgin, Patrick F. 149, 247
Earl, Amanda 3
Edgerton, Michael Tod 171
Elshtain, Eric 162
Ereditario, Daniel 86
Exley, Roy 290
Farmer, Gareth 340
Fieled, Adam 10, 109, 187
Foley, John 295
Foster, Edward 26
Freind, William Joseph 80, 102
Frost, Corey 313, 336, 385
Frym, Gloria 7, 138
Gatza, Geoffrey 169, 198, 213, 240, 350
Godston, Daniel 339
Gordon, Nada 98, 128
Gordon, Noah Eli 204
Gricevich, Andy 137
Grimm, Susan 207
Gudding, Gabriel 21, 46, 96
Halle, Steve 117, 210
Hav, Niels 381
Held, Hand 120
Henning, Barbara 251
Hinton, Laura 258, 286, 312, 353
Hoffman, Eric 294
Holder, Doug 91, 103, 324, 346
Howard, Scott 113
Howe, Brian 132
Hummel, Thomas 124
Joeharrington 338
Johnson, Halvard 63, 342, 401
Jorgensen, Alexander 37, 38, 40, 114, 130, 141, 228
Joris, Pierre 55
Kaldor, Sarah 226
Karavatos, Nicholas 225
Karmin, Jennifer 6, 75, 126, 170, 252, 335
Kelleher, Michael 11, 110, 112, 189
Killian, Kevin 175, 196
King, Amy 106, 185, 246, 386, 394, 395
King, Marth 158

Kirschenbaum, David 135, 323
Kirschenbaum, David A. 108
Laity, Cassandra 59
Lazer, Hank 233
Lazer, Henry A. 231
Lepson, Ruth 245, 254, 285, 287, 289, 304, 305, 306, 358, 366, 367, 388, 398
Lewis, Joel 217
List, Poetics 93, 160
Lovin, Christina E 150
Martin, Camille 125, 159, 165
McLennan, Rob 99, 157
McVay, Gwyn 300, 333
Mims, Martha Cinader 14, 66, 115, 145, 223
Mindock, Gloria 31
Minton, Jonathan 134
Nealand, Eireene 356, 357, 391
Nelson, Paul 22, 229, 261
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 13, 23, 52, 192, 316, 337, 354, 369, 390
Newman, Richard Jeffrey 319
Nicholson, Andy 105, 227
Novack, Carol 5, 139, 296, 330
Oatis, Martha 212
Oha, Obododimma 49, 262, 263, 396
Oliver, Laura 362
Parrish, Adam 161
Phipps, Wanda 111, 167
Press, Tarpaulin Sky 382
Priddle, Ross 221
Project, Poetry 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Quackenbush, Jason 268, 325, 326, 327, 344, 345, 380
Quarles, Lanny 65, 73, 95, 163, 256
Rossiter, Charlie 123
Rothenberg, Jerome 85, 230
Russell, Steve 146, 147, 177, 241, 242, 264, 265, 275, 297, 321, 322, 352
Sama, Metta 178
Samuels, Lisa 215
Schlesinger, Kyle 44, 72, 144
Schultz, Susan Webster 224
Schwartz, Gerald 61, 87, 92, 202, 257, 291
Shankar, Ravi (English) 2
Siegell, Paul 45
Silliman, Ron 188
Slaughter, William 407
Sondheim, Alan 69, 140, 174, 220, 403
Stecopoulos, Eleni 36
Stempleman, Jordan 355
Stroffolino, Chris 28, 253
Sullivan, Gary 154
Svalina, Mathias 43
Switaj, Elizabeth 267, 281, 375
Tieger, Aaron 15, 206
Tills, Steve 383
Timmons, Mathew 131
Tobin, Adam 303, 392
Traffic, Small Press 9, 107, 277
Trigilio, Tony 74
Vassilakis, Nico 364
Vincent, Stephen 119, 274, 404
Weinstein, Eric 314
Weishaus, Joel 8
Weiss, Mark 1, 16, 30, 104, 156, 193, 214, 232, 266, 341, 359
Welford, Gabrielle 60, 77
Wharton, Samuel 41
Wilcox, Dan 42, 127
Wintz, Sara 62
Wong, Lindsay 67, 68
Zimmerman, Daniel 284, 318, 365
}, { Brad Brace 122

NAMES MENTIONED

Abani, Chris 4
Abel, David 195
Abramowitz, Harold 131
Acker, Kathy 188
Ackerman, Amanda 131
Adams, Robert 252
Adamski, Nicholas 254, 264, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318
Albright, Madeline 311, 322
Alexander, Jill 17
Ali, Kazim 247
Alice, Mary 121, 190, 200, 202, 218
Allan, Edgar 372, 390, 397, 404
Alpert, Barry 104
Amato, Joe 247
Ambrose, Joe 213
Americans, Asian 61, 77, 348
Amerika, Mark 136
Anderson, Laurie 134
Andrews, Betsy 108, 323
Andrews, Bruce 44, 47, 54, 84, 134, 151, 235, 250, 402
Angelo, Michael 238
Anne, Sarah 270, 273, 277
Apps, Stan 131
Armantrout, Rae 277
Armstrong, Aaron 103
Arnold, Bob 219
Ashbery, John 208, 219, 227
Atlanta, Mark P. 54
Auden, W. H. 219
Augustine, Jane 62, 77, 238
Ave, Madison 346, 381
Baik, Cristiana 134
Baker, Mary 17, 238
Baldwin, James 103, 346, 381
Ballard, Micah 238
Banias, Ari 108, 323
Baraka, Amiri 203, 318

Barnes, Diane 340, 347
Barney, Matthew 353
Barthes, Roland 183, 190, 191, 200, 201, 202, 218
Bartlett, Jennifer 323, 402
Bartlett, Lee 238
Baudelaire, Charles 59, 175, 183, 191, 201, 372, 390, 397, 404
Bautista, Michelle 238
Beasley, Sandra 238
Beckett, Samuel 342
Beckett, Tom 238
Beckman, Joshua 238
Beer, John 6, 335
Behrle, Jim 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323, 402
Bellamy, Dodie 247
Belz, Aaron 17
Benham, Melissa 270, 273, 277
Benjamin, Walter 17, 121, 318
Bennett, John M. 25, 35, 54
Berger, Stephanie 244, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318
Berkeley, Michael 115, 145, 247, 248, 259, 402, 407
Berlin, Irving 100, 110, 213
Bernard, George 91, 157, 382
Bernes, Jasper 247
Bernheimer, Alan 247, 270, 273, 277
Bernstein, Emma 87, 92
Bernstein, Michael 173
Berrigan, Anselm 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Berrigan, Edmund 84, 151, 235, 238, 250, 323, 402
Berry, Jake 54
Berry, Stephen 150, 164, 166
Birmingham, Jed 69, 72
Blake, William 17, 263, 268, 274, 282, 290, 301, 306, 308, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 342, 343, 366, 382
Blaser, Robin 22, 52, 229
Blatner, Barbara 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Blau, Rachel 238
Bloch, Julia 53
Boat, Drunken 2, 407
Bolano, Roberto 179, 372, 390, 397, 404
Bolster, Stephanie 99, 157
Bonney, Sean 86, 340, 347
Boone, Bruce 107
Borges, Jorge Luis 372, 390, 397, 404
Bouliane, Gabrielle 11
Bowen, Kevin 6
Bowering, George H. 272
Bowering, Harry 299, 309, 329, 370
Bowles, Jane 31
Boyer, Anne 238
Boykoff, Jules 160
BpNichol 99
Bradley, George 219
Bradley, John 379
Brady, Taylor 402
Bramhall, Allen 238
Brecht, Bertolt 100
Brecht, George 100
Brennan, Patrick 203
Brockwell, Stephen 99
Broder, Melissa 33
Brook, Donna 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323, 402
Brooks, David 379
Brooks, Gwendolyn 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Brown, Brandon 270, 273, 277
Browne, Colin 33, 382
Browning, Robert 108, 323
Bruno, Franklin 84, 131, 151, 235, 250, 402
Bryan, John 76, 335
Buck, Naomi 173
Buckley, Jeff 157
Budde, Rob 99
Bukowski, Charles 318, 324
Burgess, Matthew 323
Burkhardt, Rick 137
Burroughs, Bill 405
Burroughs, William S. 57, 83, 248, 259, 405
Bush, George W. 243, 249, 255, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 268, 272, 274, 282, 290, 297, 301, 306, 308, 310, 311, 312, 320, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 342, 343, 366
Bushyeager, Peter 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Butler, Judith 17, 382
Byrd, Bobby 84
Byrd, Brigitte 382
Byron, Philip 173
Bök, Christian 247, 277
Cage, John 100
Cameron, David 108, 323
Cameron, Sharon 157
Campbell, Jeremy 11
Cannon, Steve 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Caples, Garrett 238
Carbo, Nick 238
Cardenal, Ernesto 213
Carpenter, Jim 238
Carr, Michael 148, 206
Carroll, John 235, 250, 402
Carroll, Lewis 372, 390, 397, 404
Carter, Allison 131, 134
Carter, Angela 190, 200, 202, 218
Carter, Elliot 156, 177
Carter, Mike 134, 135, 144, 156, 177, 220
Casey, Sean 12
Castro, Michael 17
Celan, Paul 179
Chang, Juliana 64

Chernoff, Maxine 247
Chester, Jeff 2, 219
Child, Abigail 335
Choate, Andrew 131
Chomsky, Noam 296
Christakos, Margaret 99
Cisneros, Sandra 181
Civin, Marcus 131
Claire, Paula 6, 157, 238, 277
Clarke, Jack 190, 200, 202, 218
Clarke, John 89
Clavelle, Karen 99
Cletis, George 328, 366
Clinton, Bill 69, 232, 242, 269, 300, 359, 374
Clover, Joshua 247
Coffey, Brian 323
Cohen, David 238
Cohen, Leonard 157
Colby, Kate 238
Colby, Todd 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Cole, Peter 4
Coleman, Jen 108, 323
Coleman, Wanda 22, 52
Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 404
Coletti, John 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323
Collins, Phil 91, 131
Comments, Chicago 113, 219
Coolidge, Clark 54
Cooper, Paula 163
Cope, Stephen 188, 247
Copp, Corina 235, 250, 402
Corey, Josh 379, 382, 385
Cornish, Sam 103
Coultas, Brenda 151, 235, 250, 402
County, Mike 131, 143
Crawford, Robert 131, 136
Creeley, Robert 47, 151
Crouch, Jeff 134, 173
Cunningham, Brent 273
Curley, Jon 238
Cyphers, Jeffrey 111, 167
Césaire, Aimé 105
Daley, Rachel 238
Darwin, Charles 223
Davidson, Ian 219
Davidson, Michael 247
Davies, Alan 47, 148
Davis, Martin 77
Davis, Peter 382
Degentesh, Katie 250, 402
Delany, Samuel R. 102
Dennis, Michael 59, 247
Detorie, Michelle 131, 135, 144
Dickens, Charles 190, 200, 202, 218
Dickinson, Emily 133, 138, 142, 146, 147, 150, 161, 164, 166, 171, 199, 215
Dickison, Steve 270, 273, 277
Dickow, Alex 47
Dillon, Matt 405
Doller, Ben 9, 78
Doller, Sandra 9, 78
Donahue, Joseph 132
Donne, John 160
Donnelly, Timothy 120, 124
Donovan, Thom 132, 402
Dorf, Carol 173
Doris, Stacy 17, 47, 270, 273, 277
Downing, Brandon 382
Doyle, Erica 9, 34, 78
Drescher, Julia 135, 144, 151
Duggan, Patrick 33
Duhamel, Denise 207
Dunagan, James 238
Duncan, Andrew 22, 52, 55, 229, 374
Duncan, Robert 229
Dunn, Douglas 84, 235, 402
Durand, Marcella 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Durgin, Patrick F. 149, 247
Dutton, Paul 365, 367, 369, 376
Dworkin, Craig 377
Dylan, Bob 69
Dylan, Michael 69, 253
Earle, Steve 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Eckes, Ryan 238
Edgar, Chris 238
Edwards, Ken 340, 347
Eliot, Joe 84, 103, 151, 235, 250, 351, 362, 365, 367, 369, 376, 402
Elisa, Paula 17
Ellen, Mary 136
Elliot, Joe 156, 177, 339
Elliott, George 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Elrick, Laura 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Emerson, Claudia 103
Encke, Jeff 173
England, Amy 77, 119, 130
Ernst, Max 154
Eugene, Brett 219, 372, 390, 397, 404
Evans, Bill 236
Evans, George 103, 185
Farr, Roger 44, 157
Faulkner, Andrew 133, 146, 147, 150, 157, 164, 171
Faulkner, William 138, 142, 161, 166, 199, 215
Featherston, Dan 247
Felix, Joel 179, 198, 372, 390, 397, 404
Ferguson, Jesse 99, 136
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 91
Feuillade, Louis 372, 390, 397, 404
Filliou, Robert 100
Finch, Peter 144, 151
Fink, Thomas 33, 238
Finkelstein, Norman 294

Fiorini, Jessica 108, 323
Firestone, Jennifer 108, 323
Fishman, Lisa 335
Fleisher, Kass 247
Fletcher, Brett 120, 124
Foley, Jack 85, 230, 295
Forche, Carolyn 160
Forrest, Lisa 332, 337
Fox, Hugh 103, 324
Fox, William L. 186, 194, 195
France, Peter 17, 77, 100, 372, 397
Frances, Mary 84, 86, 151, 190, 200, 202, 218, 235, 250, 402
Franco, Michael 138
Fraser, Kathleen 107
Fraser, Simon 44, 320, 321
Frazee, Andy 17
Frazer, Vernon 173
Freeland, Charles 173
Freeman, Brad 84, 151, 235, 250, 382, 402
Friedman, Dorothy 203
Friedman, Thomas 84, 100, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323, 402
Froude, Richard 382
Fugate, Ethan 323
Fuhrman, Joanna 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323, 402
Fulton, Alice 91, 137, 324
Gach, Gary 223
Garcia, Rodrigo 132
Gardner, Drew 84, 151, 235, 250
Gardner, Janet 160, 238, 277, 402
Garrison, Deborah 204
Gates, Bill 232, 242
Gek, Kim 382
Gelsinger, Eric 238
Gevirtz, Susan 270, 273, 277
Gibbs, Jules 210
Gilbert, Alan 402
Giles, Samantha 33, 277
Gilonis, Harry 340, 347
Ginsberg, Allan 315
Ginsberg, Allen 213, 316
Giorno, John 84, 98, 151, 235, 250, 402
Giscombe, Cecil 247
Gladman, Renee 4
Glines, Steve 324
Godfrey, John 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Goldman, Judith 335
Goldsmith, Kenneth 238
Goldstein, Laura 335
Gonzalez, Ray 58, 323
Good, Philip 151
Goodman, Amy 5, 139, 177
Graham, Lea 99
Graham, Susan 173, 247, 314
Gray, Stephanie 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323, 402
Greco, Diane 12
Green, Heather 382
Greenberg, Arielle 238
Greenstreet, Kate 99, 238
Greenwald, Ted 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Gregory, Jane 382
Grenier, Robert 47
Gridley, Sarah 407
Grinwis, James 41
Guest, Edgar 184, 192
Hall, John S. 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Hall, Phil 99
Hall, Steven 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Halpern, Daniel 41
Halpern, Rob 107, 247, 273, 277
Hamill, Janet 84, 151, 235, 250
Hamilton, Ann 171
Hamilton, Diana 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323, 402
Hansen, Jefferson 131
Harrington, Joe 338, 396
Harris, Ken 84, 151, 173, 235, 247, 250, 335, 402
Harris, Sharon 99
Harryman, Carla 47, 188, 247
Harvey, George 60, 77, 84
Harwood, Lee 86
Hastings, Katherine 230
Hawkins, William 99
Hawthorne, Nathaniel 190, 200, 202, 218
Hayden, Robert 103
Hayes, Jonathan 238
Hecht, Anthony 219, 244, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318
Hejinian, Lyn 47
Heller, Joseph 173
Henderson, David 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Hennessey, Michael 70, 82
Herbert, John 7, 19, 22, 23, 27, 50, 52, 57, 83, 317, 368, 386, 388
Herman, Rachel 298, 305
Herron, Patrick 132
Hershon, Bob 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Higgins, Dick 100
Highfill, Mitch 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Hilson, Jeff 340, 347
Hirschman, Jack 238
Hofer, Jen 4, 131, 335, 402
Hogan, Linda 110, 238
Holman, Bob 84, 151, 203, 235, 250, 315, 316, 402
Holmes, Janet 69, 253
Holzer, Jenny 126
Homan, Brandi 6, 335
Homer 157, 244, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318, 397
Hoover, Paul 247

Horton, David 73, 97
Houlihan, Joan 31
House, White 238, 312, 326, 334, 342, 343
Hoy, Dan 108, 323
Hughes, Langston 103
Hugo, Richard 407
Hunt, Erica 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Hunter, Carrie 17
Iijima, Brenda 84, 108, 151, 235, 238, 250, 323, 402
Inguito, Scott 9, 78, 277
Inman, Peter 44, 84
Ireland, Lauren 86, 108, 143, 211, 246, 323
Israel, David R. 110
Jackson, Jesse 270, 273, 277, 339
Jameson, Fredric 335
Janssen, Lisa 6, 335
Jarnot, Lisa 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Javier, Paolo 108, 176, 247, 270, 273, 277, 323
Jeanne, Sarah 247
Jeffery, Mark 212, 214, 216
Jenkins, Grant 253
Jenks, Philip 6, 17
Jhave, David 152
Johns, Jasper 77
Johnston, Daniel 152, 176
Jonas, Stephen 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Jones, Bob 84, 86, 151, 203, 235, 250, 402
Jones, David 133, 138, 142, 146, 147, 150, 161, 164, 166, 171, 199, 215
Jordan, June 17, 99
Joron, Andrew 270, 273, 277
Joseph, Safdie 132, 195
Kalamaras, George 382
Kane, Daniel 340, 347
Kapsalis, Terri 335
Karasick, Adeena 108, 323
Karl, Steven 17, 238
Kasimor, Mary 173
Kathryn, Mary 127
Katz, Steve 5, 139
Kaufman, Andrew 84, 402
Kaufman, Erica 151, 235, 250
Kearney, Douglas 158
Keats, John 404
Keene, John 335
Keller, Lynn 110, 131
Kelley, Mike 59, 238
Kelly, Paul 44, 405
Kennedy, Evan 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Kennedy, John F. 69
Kennedy, Kit 38, 69, 91, 190, 200, 202, 218
Kerouac, Jack 213, 346, 381
Kerry, John 340, 347
Kiely, Aaron 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Killebrew, Paul 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Kirschenbaum, David A. 108, 135, 144, 323
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 84, 151, 323, 402
Kite, Mary 131
Klein, Naomi 131
Knowles, Alison 100
Knox, Jennifer L. 238
Kostelanetz, Richard 222, 324
Kunin, Aaron 4, 247
Kushner, Bill 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Kyger, Joanne 315, 316
Lacan, Jacques 391, 399, 405
Lacy, Emily 131
Lally, Michael 158
Lamoureux, Mark 108, 323
Landers, Susan 84, 151, 235, 402
Larsen, David 131, 144, 151, 402
Lau, David 270, 273, 277
Laughlin, James 112, 224, 323
Lavender, Bill 17
Lawless, Amy 108, 323
Lawless, Gary 315, 316
Lawlor, Andrea 94
Lazer, Henry A. 231
Lea, Nicholas 99
Lease, Joseph 247, 270, 273, 277
Lederer, Katy 402
Legaspi, Joseph 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Lerner, Ben 4
Lev, Donald 203
Levato, Francesco 6, 173
Levertov, Denise 22, 52, 229, 254, 264, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318
Levitsky, Rachel 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Levy, Andrew 402
Lew, Walter 108, 247, 323
Linn, Lisa 224
Liszkiewicz, Patrick 134
Liu, Timothy 64
Livingston, Reb 173, 238
Lloyd, Warren 131
Logan, John 148, 238
Logan, Nathan 238
Lomax, Alan 270, 273, 277
London, Frank 17, 100, 219, 320, 351, 362, 365, 367, 369, 376
Loney, Alan 72, 89, 90
Lookingbill, Colleen 119
Lopez, Richard 238
Lorber, Brendan 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Lorde, Audre 34
Louise, Bobbie 25, 35, 136, 203
Mac Low, Jackson 44
Lowery, Joseph 327, 336, 341, 344, 345, 352, 354, 359, 361, 363, 374, 380
Lowinger, Aaron 11, 238
Lunday, Robert 314
Luoma, Bill 247, 270, 273, 277

Lurie, Bobbi 173
Luther, Martin 69, 103
Lynch, Jessica 405
Lyons, Kimberly 217
Maciunas, George 100
Mackey, Nate 318
Mackey, Nathaniel 22, 52
Madison, James 59, 61, 173
Magallon, Diana 134 Magi, Jill 238, 382
Malcolm, Janet 103
Mallarmé, Stéphane 372, 390, 397, 404
Manson, Peter 86
Marie, Joshua 208, 227, 247
Marie, Julie 12, 151, 238
Marks, Justin 108, 323
Martinez, Michael 58
Marx, Karl 372, 390, 397, 404
Maurer, Susan 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Maxwell, Susan 135, 144, 151, 382
Mayer, Bernadette 151
Mayer, Jane 151
Maynard, James 72
Mead, Taylor 84, 151, 235, 402
Mendoza, Mark 86
Menendez, Didi 77, 169
Merrill, Stuart 84
Metres, Philip 247
Meyer, Tom 60
Micheline, Jack 238
Middle, Max 99
Mikkalo, Erika 6
Miller, Lee 9, 34, 59, 78, 106, 118, 134
Miller, Paul 108, 323
Milton, John 163
Mirakove, Carol 70, 82
Mohammad, Kasey 4, 247
Monk, Geraldine 160
Moore, Nicholas 235
Moore, Rebecca 84, 151, 250
Morgan, Robin 17
Moriarty, Laura 270, 273, 277
Morris, Tim 99, 235, 250, 318, 402
Morris, William 59
Morrison, Rusty 4, 247, 277
Mosconi, Joseph 131
Moure, Erin 7, 50
Moxley, Jennifer 4
Mueller, Robert 173
Mukherjee, Aryanil 60
Munro, Alice 189
Murfin, Ira S. 335
Murphy, Eddie 318
Murphy, Ryan 323
Murphy, Sheila E. 238
Myers, Michael 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Myles, Eileen 22, 52, 84, 131, 151, 235, 250, 402
Nakayasu, Sawako 118, 402
Nakell, Martin 5, 139
Nasdor, Marc 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Nelson, Gale 334, 342, 343, 382
Nelson, Paul E. 22, 52, 229, 261, 263, 266, 268, 272, 274, 282, 290, 297, 301, 306, 308, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 342, 343, 366
Neu, Jim 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Newlove, John 99
Nguyen, Hoa 135, 144, 238
Nicole, Anna 17, 235, 335
Niedecker, Lorine 133, 138, 142, 146, 147, 150, 161, 164, 166, 171, 199, 215
Nielsen, Aldon 128, 247
Nixon, Richard 103, 379
Noble, Joseph 119
Noel, Urayoan 108, 323
Norton, John 34
O'Hara, Frank 219
O'Sullivan, Maggie 86
Olds, Sharon 243, 249, 255, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 268, 272, 274, 282, 290, 297, 301, 306, 308, 310, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 342, 343, 366
Olsen, Geoffrey 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323
Olsen, Lance 402
Olson, Charles 22, 52, 131, 132, 133, 138, 142, 146, 147, 150, 161, 164, 166, 171, 199, 215, 229
Olson, John 238
Oppen, George 119, 294
Orange, Tom 112, 247
Ostashevsky, Eugene 238
Pacific, Asian 120, 121, 124
Padgett, Ron 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Paige, Abby 41, 238
Palin, Sarah 312, 326, 334, 342, 343
Palm, Lars 10, 238
Palmer, Michael 4, 34, 85, 230, 404
Paquin, Ethan 120, 124
Parish, Jefferson 235
Parker, Charlie 203, 405
Parker, Karl 203, 340, 347
Parrish, Katherine 161
Partridge, Amy 335
Patton, Julie 84, 151, 235, 250, 277, 402
Peck, Aaron 157
Pecqueur, Paul 108, 323
Perez, Craig 247
Perez, James 11, 84, 135, 151, 235, 250, 277, 402
Peterson, Tim 402
Peyrafitte, Nicole 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Phillip, Andrew 34, 135, 144
Phillips, Malcolm 112
Picabia, Francis 238

Pickard, Tom 86
Pine, White 110
Pinter, Harold 320, 321, 332, 337
Place, Vanessa 131, 335
Plante, Shane 173
Poe, Allan 372, 390, 397, 404
Pollock, Jackson 100
Potter, Steve 190, 200, 202, 218
Pound, Ezra 84, 318
Pound, Scott 61
Powell, Douglas 236
Prater, David 187
Prevallet, Kristin 84, 111, 151, 167, 235, 247, 250, 402
Di Prima, Diane 85, 230
Prince, Richard 5, 66
Prufer, Kevin 106, 118
Purcell, Greg 108, 323
Rael, Chris 84, 151, 235, 250
Ranaldo, Lee 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Randall, Karen 103
Ratcliffe, Stephen 270, 273, 277
Raven, Francis 372, 390, 397, 404
Reagan, Nancy 312, 326, 334, 342, 343
Reddin, Elizabeth 108, 323
Reed, Marthe 173
Rerick, Michael 382
Retallack, Joan 238
Reuters, Boston 320
Reyes, Louis 17, 224, 270, 273, 277
Reynolds, Sean 335
Rhodes, Shane 157
Rich, Frank 353
Richet, Martin 47
Richter, Karl 100
Riding, Laura 44
Ridley, Sandra 99
Rilke, Rainer Maria 190, 192, 200, 202, 218
Rimbaud, Dee 372, 397
Rivera, Alex 238
Rizzo, Christopher 238
Roberts, Jenny 335
Roberts, Wendy 382
Robertson, Lisa 17, 215, 247
Robertson, Pat 17
Robinson, Elizabeth 107
Robinson, Jeffrey C. 67, 68, 85, 230, 247, 404
Robinson, Kit 247, 277
Robinson, Mary 17, 66, 67, 68, 85, 230, 313, 327, 341, 344, 352, 361, 363, 380
Robinson, Sophie 86
Rogal, Stan 99
Rogers, Kimberley 315, 316
Rosal, Patrick 58
Rosenberg, Jim 238
Rosenfield, Kim 277
Rosenstock, Gabriel 211
Rosenthal, Bob 84, 151, 235, 250
Rosenthal, Chuck 402
Roth, Henry 346, 381
Roth, Philip 346, 381
Rothenberg, Jerry 55, 67, 68, 85, 230, 247
Rothschild, Douglas 84, 151, 217, 235, 250, 402
Rowan, Lou 102
Rumble, Ken 132
Rumsfeld, Donald 179
Russell, Christopher 131
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 107
Sailers, Cynthia 270, 273, 277
Sala, Jerome 108, 323
Sanchez, Jorge 17, 103
Sanders, James 54
Sanders, Jay 69
Santos, Craig 277
Sappho 351, 362, 365, 367, 369, 376
Sarai, Sarah 17
Sartre, Paul 188
Saterstrom, Noah 208, 227
Sauer, Carl 133, 138, 142, 146, 147, 150, 161, 164, 166, 171, 199, 215
Savage, Tom 84, 108, 151, 235, 402
Savoca, Matthew 134
Sawyer, Larry 158
Scalapino, Leslie 85, 230, 270, 273, 277, 404
Scappettone, Jennifer 247
Schneeman, George 213
Schneider, Dan 108
Schroeder, Steven D. 117
Schulman, Sarah 247
Schultz, Susan M. 224, 238
Schuster, Josh 136
Schwabsky, Barry 60
Scroggins, Mark 340, 347
Selland, Eric 17
Semerdjian, Alan 131
Severin, Melissa 6, 41
Shakespeare, William 396
Shapiro, David 4, 84, 108, 151, 250, 323, 402
Shapiro, Gary 86, 235
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 379
Shepard, Sam 320
Sherlock, Frank 84, 151, 209, 235, 250, 402
Sherman, Bill 33
Shipp, Matthew 236
Shoemaker, Steven 110
Shufran, Lauren 107, 270, 277
Siegel, Nathaniel 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Sigo, Cedar 33, 148
Silem, Kasey 4
Simon, Greg 119, 136
Simone, Frank 6, 17, 119, 244, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318
Simpson, Bennett 99

Sims, Laura 277
Sinatra, Frank 103
Skinner, Jonathan 69, 379
Slosek, Michael 18, 148
Smith, Dale 247
Smith, Harry 324
Smith, Patricia 244, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318
Smith, Tracy K. 17, 34, 84, 99, 135, 144, 148, 151, 157, 235, 238, 244, 250, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 314, 317, 318, 402
Smoler, Michael 131
Snyder, Gary 315, 316
Snyder, Rick 315, 316
Sparrow, John 208, 227
Spears, Patricia 235, 250, 402
Spicer, Jack 17, 23, 52, 107, 182, 196
Sprague, Jane 131
Stackhouse, Christopher 84, 151, 235, 250, 335, 402
Stalin, Joseph 311, 322, 352, 361
Stanley, Jared 320
Stebelton, Chuck 6
Steenberge, Laura 131
Stefans, Kim 247
Stein, Gertrude 47
Stein, Suzanne 55, 247, 270, 273, 277, 402
Steinberg, Nicole 17
Stevens, Wallace 59, 145, 190, 200, 202, 218
Stewart, Christine 335
Stewart, Susan 34, 99, 188
Stoppard, Tom 320
Strang, Brian 44, 84
Strickland, Stephanie 238
Strongin, Lynn 134
Strudensky, Andrea 135, 144
Styron, William 264, 287, 298, 303, 305, 317
Sutherland, Keston 86
Swensen, Cole 4
Szymaszek, Stacy 84, 151, 235, 250, 277, 402
Tabios, Eileen 238, 378
Taggart, John 41
Tardos, Anne 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Tarn, Nathaniel 17
Taylor, Catherine 188
Taylor, Cecil 235, 250, 402
Taylor, Jesse 34, 171, 250, 252, 315, 316, 405
Taylor, Steven 84, 151, 235, 402
Terris, Susan 379
Terry, Philip 17
Texas, Irving 32, 135, 144
Thatcher, Margaret 320
Theater, Poets 149
Thomas, Dylan 34, 47, 140, 203
Thompson, Jon 108, 217, 323, 382
Tichy, Susan 238
Tiffany, Daniel 155, 163, 168, 175, 181, 183, 184, 190, 191, 192, 200, 201, 202, 218
Tipton, John 135, 144
Topel, Andrew 173
Toscano, Rodrigo 17, 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323, 402
Tost, Tony 132
Treadwell, Elizabeth 160, 270, 273, 277
Tribune, Chicago 69
Trinidad, David 184, 192
Trivedi, Amish 134
Tucker, Aaron 213
Turner, Brian 373, 391, 399, 405
Turner, Ted 40
Tyler, Mary 33
Updike, John 346, 381
Valentine, Jean 136, 163
Valery, Paul 47, 111, 167
Vallejo, César 223
Varrone, Kevin 44, 84
Vazquez, Lourdes 135
Veglahn, Sara 382
Vengua, Jean 238
Vincent, Gregory 111, 167, 247
Virgil 136, 397
Vitiello, Chris 132
Vogen, David 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Volkman, Karen 19, 22, 23, 52
Voyer, Edmund 244, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318
Waber, Dan 222
Waldman, Anne 56, 84, 151, 213, 235, 402
Waldman, Ken 213, 250
Walker, Alice 17, 103
Wallace, Mark 158
Wallace, Nicole 84, 108, 151, 235, 250, 323, 402
Warhol, Andy 303, 317
Warren, Jim 243, 249, 255, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 272, 273, 274, 277, 282, 290, 296, 297, 301, 306, 308, 310, 311, 312, 313, 322, 325, 326, 327, 328, 334, 336, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 349, 352, 353, 354, 359, 361, 363, 366, 374, 380, 402
Warren, Rick 243, 249, 255, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 272, 274, 276, 278, 279, 282, 285, 290, 291, 297, 301, 306, 308, 310, 311, 312, 313, 319, 322, 325, 326, 327, 328, 334, 336, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 352, 354, 359, 360, 361, 363, 366, 374, 380, 383
Warsh, Lewis 151
Washington, Harold 64, 69, 136, 158, 170, 311, 314, 322
Wasserman, Ann 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Watten, Barrett 47, 247

Weaver, Andy 99
Weaver, Rebecca 91
Weber, Charles 84
Weber, Damian 323
Weiner, Hannah 69, 154, 270, 273, 277, 335
Weiser, Karen 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Wertheim, Christine 131
Whalen, Philip 22, 52
Whitman, Walt 9, 78, 229, 315, 316, 405
Wickens, Jessica 277
Wiener, Hannah 47
Wilkinson, Joshua 208, 227, 247
Williams, Julia 99
Williams, Roger 349
Williams, Tony 190, 200, 202, 218
Williams, Tyrone 247
Williams, William Carlos 123
Williamson, Dustin 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Willis, Elizabeth 157, 377
Wilson, Steve 6, 111, 167
Wordsworth, William 404
Wright, James 108, 111, 167, 213, 311, 322, 323
Wright, Richard 103
Yates, Katie 346, 381
Yorty, Don 84, 151, 235, 250
Young, Mark 134
Young, Stephanie 247
Zapruder, Matthew 238
Zawacki, Andrew 17
Zolf, Rachel 99, 277
Zucker, Rachel 238
Zukofsky, Louis 23, 44, 84, 340, 347
Zummo, Peter 84, 151, 235, 250, 402
Zurawski, Magdalena 4, 132, 277
Zuzga, Jason 109
Zwicky, Jan 17

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 69, 84, 179, 213, 243, 249, 255, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 268, 269, 272, 274, 279, 282, 286, 288, 290, 297, 299, 300, 301, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 315, 316, 320, 322, 325, 326, 328, 329, 334, 342, 343, 366, 370
Aesthetics 2, 13, 16, 19, 22, 23, 52, 55, 59, 70, 82, 188, 199, 215, 334, 342, 343, 362
African American poetry 69, 103
Anthologies 6, 17, 30, 34, 35, 44, 52, 53, 55, 67, 68, 84, 103, 107, 108, 121, 127, 136, 149, 157, 158, 213, 219, 226, 230, 237, 238, 315, 316, 323, 396
Anti-Semitism 60
Appropriation 29, 71, 77, 81
Archives and libraries 59, 66, 69, 74, 87, 103, 110, 136, 145, 189, 248, 259, 315, 316, 395
Autobiography 6, 31, 103, 110, 136, 175, 183, 191, 201, 224, 238, 324, 402
Avant-garde 17, 55, 67, 68, 70, 73, 82, 97, 230
Beauty 31, 66, 107, 126, 293
Biography 45, 379
Black Mountain 72
Blogs 8, 9, 10, 12, 14, 22, 41, 45, 47, 49, 52, 55, 56, 60, 62, 63, 65, 66, 67, 68, 70, 72, 73, 75, 77, 78, 82, 85, 89, 90, 94, 95, 97, 99, 100, 101, 105, 107, 109, 113, 115, 117, 119, 120, 124, 129, 131, 135, 136, 137, 141, 144, 145, 148, 154, 157, 163, 172, 179, 187, 198, 209, 210, 221, 223, 224, 229, 230, 234, 238, 240, 243, 245, 246, 249, 251, 255, 256, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 277, 278, 280, 282, 285, 288, 289, 290, 296, 297, 299, 301, 302, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 329, 331, 334, 338, 342, 343, 350, 356, 357, 364, 366, 370, 371, 372, 373, 378, 390, 391, 396, 397, 399, 401, 404, 405, 406
Book announcements 9, 17, 31, 42, 47, 67, 68, 72, 78, 89, 135, 136, 142, 151, 169, 171, 179, 188, 198, 211, 224, 236, 294, 377, 382, 407
Bookstores 45, 103, 196, 372, 390, 397, 404
Calls for submissions 81, 178, 246
Capitalism 20, 27, 29, 71, 248, 254, 259, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318, 328, 356, 366, 372, 373, 390, 391, 397, 399, 404, 405
Censorship 282, 301, 311, 322
Cities 74, 103, 110, 138, 143, 161, 215
Close reading 145, 223
Collage and montage 57, 83, 125, 335, 384
Conceptual writing 179, 372, 390, 397
Conferences and festivals 5, 86, 100, 121, 131, 133, 138, 142, 146, 147, 150, 158, 161, 164, 166, 171, 199, 203, 215, 231, 233, 246, 316, 319, 335
Copyright and permissions 2, 113, 320, 372, 390, 397, 404
Craft 74, 103, 311, 322
Creative writing pedagogy 74
Dada 55, 238
Difficulty 219
Digital archives 106, 118, 185, 386, 394, 395
Disability 74, 317, 333, 358, 368, 386, 388
Dreams 55, 66, 84, 106, 118, 136, 172, 190, 192, 200, 202, 218, 362, 372, 390, 397, 404, 405
Ecology and ecopoetics 126, 135, 215, 315, 316
Editing 17, 141, 315, 316, 324

Ekphrasis 171
Electronic poetry and hypertext 30, 334, 342, 343, 384
Elegy 190, 200, 202, 218
Empire and imperialism 40, 208, 227, 239, 379
Epic 151, 158, 213, 373, 391, 397, 399, 405
Erasure 44
Ethics 2, 87, 92, 171, 219, 243, 249, 255, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 268, 272, 274, 282, 290, 297, 301, 306, 308, 310, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 342, 343, 366
Experimental poetry 1, 7, 13, 16, 19, 20, 22, 23, 27, 29, 39, 50, 52, 55, 57, 63, 71, 83
Fascism 311, 322
Feminism 213, 264, 275, 287, 298, 302, 303, 305, 312, 317, 326, 334, 342, 343
Film 6, 64, 110, 121, 131, 136, 158, 190, 200, 202, 218, 346, 381
Fluxus 55, 100
Formalism 19, 22, 23, 52, 238, 311, 322
Free verse 244, 275
Futurism 55, 82, 372, 390, 397, 404
Gender 55
Globalization 55
Grants and funding 2, 84, 151, 253
Haiku 61, 211, 315, 316
Hermeneutics 87, 92
Humour and satire 127, 158, 318, 383
Ideology 55, 103, 199, 215, 276, 291, 311, 313, 322, 327, 336, 341, 344, 345, 352, 354, 359, 361, 363, 374, 380
Improvisation 55, 131
Indigenous and Native poetics 34, 60, 77, 215, 261, 263, 266, 267, 268, 272, 274, 282, 290, 296, 297, 301, 306, 308, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 342, 343, 351, 362, 365, 366, 367, 369, 376
Interviews 44, 66, 69, 72, 89, 103, 113, 141, 171, 176, 178, 209, 213, 226, 237, 314, 330, 357
Israel and Palestine 110, 179
Language poetry 1, 7, 13, 16, 19, 22, 23, 39, 50, 52, 55, 84, 87, 92, 372, 390, 397, 404
Latino and Latin American poetry 135
Letters and correspondence 74, 229, 314, 324
List moderation 60, 223, 345, 354, 359, 374
Little magazines 2, 6, 9, 17, 34, 44, 61, 72, 78, 81, 84, 103, 113, 125, 136, 141, 144, 151, 170, 176, 178, 185, 205, 224, 228, 252, 260, 282, 301, 311, 315, 316, 322, 339, 346, 372, 378, 381, 382, 390, 395, 397, 402, 404, 407
Lyric poetry 13, 16, 19, 22, 23, 52, 55, 66, 103, 160, 365, 367, 369, 376, 377
Marxism 399
Memory 127, 131, 145, 160, 163, 223, 324, 335, 359, 374
MFA programs 9, 17, 45, 64, 74, 78, 121, 188, 193, 212, 214, 216, 252, 277, 407
Modernism 17, 55, 59, 67, 68, 230, 340, 347, 373, 391, 399, 405
Mourning and loss 31, 160, 223, 257
Multiculturalism 84, 203
Music and poetry 5, 11, 17, 40, 42, 55, 56, 63, 66, 69, 75, 79, 84, 85, 115, 131, 135, 137, 140, 143, 144, 145, 156, 158, 174, 177, 202, 203, 209, 213, 218, 220, 223, 230, 236, 253, 284, 296, 304, 318, 330, 351, 355, 362, 365, 367, 369, 372, 376, 390, 397, 401, 404, 405
Nature 59, 60, 66, 69, 87, 92, 131, 223, 315, 316, 365, 367, 369, 376, 377, 399
New Formalism 19, 22, 23, 52, 238
Obituary and memorial 320
Objectivism 377
Oulipo 2
Performance and the poetry reading 5, 6, 11, 14, 34, 55, 66, 74, 110, 115, 121, 123, 127, 136, 157, 217, 223, 226, 237, 244, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318, 364 Philosophy 27, 57, 74, 83, 87, 92, 119, 175, 183, 191, 201, 345, 354, 359, 365, 367, 369, 372, 374, 376, 390, 397, 404
Place and region 77, 133, 138, 142, 146, 147, 150, 161, 164, 166, 171, 186, 194, 195, 199, 215, 320, 377
Poet laureate 66, 103
Poetics 19, 22, 23, 27, 30, 44, 52, 54, 55, 60, 61, 67, 68, 70, 81, 82, 83, 84, 87, 92, 93, 113, 132, 147, 150, 160, 164, 165, 166, 171, 176, 180, 181, 183, 186, 190, 191, 194, 195, 199, 200, 201, 202, 205, 207, 208, 213, 215, 218, 227, 229, 231, 233, 238, 279, 292, 303, 311, 313, 317, 322, 327, 334, 336, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 348, 352, 354, 359, 360, 361, 363, 368, 374, 380, 384, 385, 386, 388, 389, 393, 394, 395, 402, 404, 405, 407
Politics and poetry 238, 332, 337
Postmodernism 391, 399, 405
Print vs. digital 12, 59, 67, 68, 77, 100, 103, 143, 157, 208, 215, 227, 229, 230, 237, 246, 264, 287, 298, 303, 305, 317, 324, 377, 378
Prizes and awards 2, 5, 9, 34, 44, 56, 64, 69, 78, 84, 100, 103, 121, 158, 176, 205, 208, 219, 224, 227, 239, 320, 339, 379, 407
Prose poem 67, 68, 136, 208, 227, 230, 372, 390, 397, 404
Prosody and meter 315, 316

Queer poetics 219, 243, 249, 255, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 272, 274, 279, 282, 286, 288, 290, 297, 299, 300, 301, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 322, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 334, 336, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 348, 349, 352, 354, 359, 361, 363, 366, 370, 374, 380
Race and poetry 30, 69, 288, 299, 307, 309, 312, 326, 329, 334, 342, 343, 346, 370, 381
Reading announcements 107, 111, 127, 136, 243, 249, 255, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 265, 266, 268, 269, 272, 274, 277, 282, 290, 297, 301, 306, 308, 310, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 342, 343, 366, 404
Religion and the sacred 69, 77, 119, 131, 190, 200, 202, 213, 218, 247, 266, 268, 277, 282, 286, 290, 296, 297, 301, 306, 308, 310, 311, 312, 313, 322, 325, 326, 327, 328, 334, 336, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 352, 354, 359, 361, 363, 366, 369, 374, 380, 385, 399
Representation 385
Reviewing and criticism 5, 6, 44, 45, 58, 69, 74, 81, 121, 125, 135, 144, 151, 155, 163, 168, 175, 181, 183, 184, 185, 188, 190, 191, 192, 198, 200, 201, 202, 208, 218, 219, 227, 238, 251, 296, 305, 314, 324, 330, 332, 337, 372, 378, 379, 381, 390, 397, 404, 407
Revision 67, 68, 230, 338, 396
Romanticism 67, 68, 230, 372, 390, 397, 404
School of Quietude 174
Science 29, 39, 45, 71, 365, 367, 369, 372, 376, 390, 397, 401, 404
Semiotics 49, 60, 73, 97, 262, 263, 268, 274, 282, 290, 301, 306, 308, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 342, 343, 366, 396
Serial poem 127, 213, 356, 372, 373, 390, 391, 397, 399, 404, 405
Sestina 184, 192
Small press publishing 6, 9, 15, 44, 47, 48, 54, 70, 82, 84, 99, 103, 107, 108, 110, 120, 124, 125, 127, 135, 136, 144, 151, 157, 162, 204, 205, 208, 210, 224, 227, 235, 239, 247, 248, 259, 270, 273, 277, 294, 314, 324, 372, 377, 379, 390, 397, 404
Social media 99, 111, 123, 135, 167, 176, 203, 253, 296
Software and code 57, 63, 83, 203
Sonnet 19, 22, 23, 52, 61, 107, 151, 159, 401
Sound poetry 67, 68, 226, 230, 237
Structuralism 391, 399, 405
Subjectivity 5, 39, 57, 83, 155, 163, 311, 322
Surrealism 31, 55, 82, 100, 208, 227, 372, 390, 397, 404
Terrorism 172, 320
The academy 39, 44, 45, 49, 54, 59, 60, 67, 68, 77, 84, 85, 100, 102, 121, 135, 151, 157, 176, 188, 208, 213, 215, 219, 224, 225, 227, 229, 230, 231, 233, 246, 252, 260, 262, 263, 268, 274, 277, 282, 290, 301, 306, 308, 311, 312, 322, 325, 326, 328, 334, 340, 342, 343, 347, 366, 379, 396, 402, 404, 407
The body 12, 52, 93, 145, 213, 223, 244, 254, 264, 275, 284, 287, 303, 304, 317, 318, 333, 358, 368, 388, 405
The canon 67, 68, 230, 346, 381
The Holocaust 219, 241, 304, 318
The internet 2, 60, 69, 100, 131, 154, 223
The Iraq war 127, 158, 320
The line 377
The listserv 11, 68, 69, 77, 84, 99, 100, 110, 112, 136, 151, 155, 163, 168, 175, 181, 183, 184, 189, 190, 191, 192, 200, 201, 202, 208, 218, 227, 229, 235, 239, 241, 250, 314, 379, 402
The New Sentence 208, 227
Theatre 55, 64, 69, 77, 137, 142, 149, 167, 188, 215, 244, 254, 264, 275, 277, 284, 286, 287, 298, 303, 304, 305, 317, 318, 320, 321, 332, 337, 377
Torture and Abu Ghraib 137, 179, 198, 211, 361
Translation 4, 13, 16, 17, 19, 22, 23, 28, 30, 43, 47, 52, 55, 76, 87, 92, 106, 113, 118, 135, 144, 151, 172, 213, 223, 238, 295, 315, 316, 324, 372, 390, 397, 404
Vietnam 42
Visual and concrete poetry 13, 16, 19, 20, 22, 23, 27, 39, 52, 55, 57, 61, 83, 88, 152, 176, 179, 222, 237, 384
Visual art 6, 11, 39, 44, 61, 67, 68, 77, 127, 136, 145, 171, 203, 211, 221, 372, 379, 390, 397, 404
Women's writing 21, 24, 25, 30, 34, 35, 46, 49, 51, 96, 105, 238

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 407 in all.

30 NOV 2008

1. Mark Weiss — Re: language v. experimental
2. Shankar, Ravi (English) — REMEMBER: Drunken Boat Design Contest - Dec 01 Deadline
3. Amanda Earl — experiment-o, correct link
4. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Eleven Eleven Issue Seven Submission Call
5. Carol Novack — REBECCA GOODMAN, STEVE KATZ & MARTIN NAKELL at The KGB Bar, Friday, Dec. 12th
6. Jennifer Karmin — Red Rover Series / Experiment #25
7. Gloria Frym — Re: language v. experimental
8. Joel Weishaus — "Reality Too" November Blog

1 DEC 2008

9. Small Press Traffic — Scott Inguito & The Sonneteers (Ben & Sandra Doller) at Small Press T...
10. Adam Fieled — PFS Post: Lars Palm
11. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Newsletter 12.01.08-12.07.08
12. Anny Ballardini — Fwd: Dec. Issue of Gently Read Literature
13. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: language v. experimental
14. Martha Cinader Mims — L&BH Radio Hour Open Mic Dec. 2, 8-9pm PST
15. aaron tieger — The Collected Typos of Aaron Tieger
16. Mark Weiss — Re: language v. experimental
17. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Friday 12/05 - 1111 Publication Party & Reading with Lisa Robertson, ...
18. William Allegrezza — Series A in Chicago This Wednesday: Quraysh Ali Lansana and Michael Sl...
19. John Cunningham — Re: language v. experimental
20. Jim Andrews — Re: language v. experimental
21. Gabriel Gudding — afro-caribbean women poets
22. Paul Nelson — Re: re-emerging lyric
23. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: language v. experimental
24. Maria Damon — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
25. Maria Damon — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
26. Edward Foster — SIMON PETTET
27. John Cunningham — Re: language v. experimental
28. Chris Stroffolino — CAMBODIAN POETRY QUERY QUESTION THING
29. Marcus Bales — Re: language v. experimental
30. Mark Weiss — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
31. Gloria Mindock — New Book Publication by Cervena Barva Press
32. Louis Cabri — Re: language v. experimental
33. Del Ray Cross — SHAMPOO 34

2 DEC 2008

34. Tisa Bryant — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
35. Tisa Bryant — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
36. Eleni Stecopoulos — San Francisco spring sublet avail/seeking NYC sublet
37. Alexander Jorgensen — The next US SENATOR from NY - A prediction - Watch these videos - PLS
38. Alexander Jorgensen — What we have lost - Important
39. Jim Andrews — Re: language v. experimental
40. Alexander Jorgensen — Ted Turner & the Czech Republic & clearly...
41. Samuel Wharton — sawbuck 2.4
42. Dan Wilcox — Richard Boes to Read from New Novel, Dec. 17
43. Mathias Svalina — Re: CAMBODIAN POETRY QUERY QUESTION THING

44. Kyle Schlesinger — Louis Cabri and Kevin Varrone at the Poetry Project
45. Paul Siegell — Matthew Shindell, Kirsten Kashock & Paul Siegell
46. Gabriel Gudding — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
47. Alexander Dickow — IVY WRITERS reading in Paris: monday dec 8, 7:30pm, at le Next
48. Ryan Daley — New Chapbook, A Border Looks Like Making Love
49. Obododimma Oha — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
50. Tisa Bryant — Re: language v. experimental
51. cris cheek — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
52. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: re-emerging lyric
53. Cain, Amina — Sidebrow Anthology Launch 12/5 - Florian, Bloch, Cain, and Gacioch
54. aslongasittakes — Queries about Hopkins, Contemporary Poetry & Abjection
55. Pierre Joris — Re: language v. experimental
56. CA Conrad — POETS Anne Waldman & Akilah Oliver WINNERS OF THE 2008.....

3 DEC 2008

57. Jim Andrews — Re: language v. experimental
58. Cara Benson — The Acentos Review
59. Cassandra Laity — Decadent Aestheticism and Modernism: Special Issue of Modernism/Modernity…
60. Gabrielle Welford — the biggest scam in nigeria
61. Gerald Schwartz — A Shopping Guernica Captures the Moment Like a Poem
62. Sara Wintz — :::hello my name is vehicular:::
63. Halvard Johnson — Re: language v. experimental
64. Ken Chen — Asian American Literary Awards - Monday - David Henry Hwang, BD Wong, Sun Young …
65. lanny quarles — pnoise
66. Martha Cinader Mims — L&BH Network Fresh Poetry Content Dec. 3, 2008
67. Lindsay Wong — NEW BOOK: Poems for the Millennium, Volume Three
68. Lindsay Wong — NEW BOOK: Poems for the Millennium, Volume Three
69. Alan Sondheim — Odetta, Presente! (fwd)

4 DEC 2008

70. CA Conrad — Re: language v. experimental
71. Marcus Bales — Re: language v. experimental
72. Kyle Schlesinger — Mimeo Mimeo 2
73. lanny quarles — Re: language v. experimental
74. Tony Trigilio — Visiting Poet position, 2009-2010, Columbia College Chicago
75. Jennifer Karmin — CALLS FROM HOME: Poetry for Prisoners
76. Séamas Cain — Re: CAMBODIAN POETRY QUERY QUESTION THING
77. Gabrielle Welford — Re: The First "Thanksgiving" and the First Professional Painter in "The…
78. sandra de 1913 — Doller + Inguito + Doller: Fri 12/5 @ 7:30pm
79. Séamas Cain — Poems of David Dwinell
80. Freind, William Joseph — Just in time for the holidays...
81. Christophe Casamassima — Open Call for Submissions: Ambit: Journal of Poetry & Poetics
82. Troy Camplin — Re: language v. experimental
83. Marcus Bales — Re: language v. experimental
84. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project December
85. Jerome Rothenberg — Poems for the Millennium launch & reading
86. daniel Ereditario — A Very Merry Unbirthday to You --from Meshworks
87. Gerald Schwartz — Proceedings of the Synod
88. Jim Andrews — Re: language v. experimental

5 DEC 2008

89. Pam Brown — aussies & kiwis & mimeo mimeo
90. Pam Brown — g'day again
91. Doug Holder — Ibbetson Street Press Publications Updated List

92. Gerald Schwartz — from CENTRAL
93. Poetics List — ARSENAL seeks innovative poetry and short fiction [on behalf of Dan Zimmerma...

6 DEC 2008

94. CA Conrad — if you do not own this yet...
95. lanny quarles — Recent.
96. Gabriel Gudding — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
97. Troy Camplin — Re: language v. experimental
98. Nada Gordon — contact info for John Giorno sought
99. Rob McLennan — above/ground press 2009 subscriptions
100. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: [fluxlist] George Brecht 1926-2008

7 DEC 2008

101. Peter Ciccariello — Vanitas vanitatum omnia otherwise known as René offering his heart to ...
102. Freind, William Joseph — Samuel R. Delany reading, 12/8
103. Doug Holder — Interview with new Boston Poet Laureate: Sam Cornish
104. Mark Weiss — query
105. Andy Nicholson — Re: afro-caribbean women poets
106. amy king — Let Us Now Praise Poets' Books of 2008!
107. Small Press Traffic — Beverly Dahlen Retrospective 12/13/08 at Small Press Traffic

8 DEC 2008

108. David A. Kirschenbaum — Advertise in The Portable Boog Reader 3
109. Adam Fieled — PFS Post: Philly's own Jason Zuzga
110. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Newsletter 12.08.08-12.14.08
111. Wanda Phipps — Shooting from the Lip Reading at La Mama etc. Next Monday
112. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Addendum
113. Scott Howard — RECONFIGURATIONS: Volume Two, published
114. Alexander Jorgensen — Venues at which to read - NY State/Boston area
115. Martha Cinader Mims — National Open Mic Tuesday Night 8pm PST
116. William Allegrezza — Call for Moria
117. Steve Halle — Steven D. Schroeder @ Seven Corners
118. Cara Benson — Let Us Now Praise Poets' Books of 2008!
119. Stephen Vincent — New de Blog - Fanny Howe, Haptics et al

9 DEC 2008

120. Hand Held — NYC - Chapbooks and a Launch! 12/13
121. Ram Devineni — Film Screening and Yusef Komunyakaa reading
122. { brad brace } — 2008 holiday card
123. Charlie Rossiter — December 10
124. Thomas Hummel — NYC - Chapbooks and a Reading! 12/13
125. Camille Martin — new poetry and collages by Camille Martin
126. Jennifer Karmin — Jenny Holzer exhibit in Chicago
127. Dan Wilcox — Xmas Special from A.P.D.
128. Nada Gordon — Contact Info for Melanie Nielsen sought
129. Peter Ciccariello — How to bury your poem

10 DEC 2008

130. Alexander Jorgensen — Places to read in New England - Alexander Jorgensen
131. Mathew Timmons — Remember! Late Night Snack at The RedCat Lounge, Fri, Dec 12 at 7:30pm
132. Brian Howe — Lucifer Poetics Group showcase in The Fanzine
133. charles alexander — course proposal query
134. Jonathan Minton — Word For/Word #14
135. David Kirschenbaum — NYC TUES./ Boog City presents Dos Press and Andrew Phillip Tipton

136. Joel Chace — Fwd: press release
137. Andy Gricevich — This weekend in Chicago: New chamber opera, theater and text-music
138. Gloria Frym — Re: course proposal query

11 DEC 2008

139. Carol Novack — reminder: KGB Bar this Friday, 7-9pm
140. Alan Sondheim — ESP-Disk' Live Tuesday December 16 performances
141. Alexander Jorgensen — SUBMISSION CALL - Black Robert Journal - one of the most VITAL journa...
142. Tisa Bryant — Re: course proposal query
143. Séamas Cain — Stream of Tongues
144. Kyle Schlesinger — DAVID LARSON AND C.J. MARTIN 12.15.08 @ The Poetry Project in NYC
145. martha cinader mims — L&BH Network Fresh Literary Content Dec. 10, 2008
146. steve russell — Re: course proposal query
147. steve russell — Re: course proposal query
148. luke daly — House Press/arrow as aarow Holiday Blowout
149. Patrick F. Durgin — KenningEditions.com
150. Christina E Lovin — Re: course proposal query
151. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project December & January 1
152. Jim Andrews — SOUND SEEKER by David Jhave Johnston

12 DEC 2008

153. Jim Andrews — New Writing Universe
154. Gary Sullivan — Ernst Herbeck | Hannah Weiner
155. Chris Chapman — toys
156. Mark Weiss — Elliot Carter's birthday
157. Rob McLennan — new(ish) on rob's clever blog;
158. Marth King — Terrence Winch & Michael Lally January 8
159. Camille Martin — sonnets and collages

13 DEC 2008

160. Poetics List — a poetry book by Susana Gardner [on behalf of Jules Boykoff]
161. Adam Parrish — Re: course proposal query
162. Eric Elshtain — New Beard of Bees Chapbook
163. lanny quarles — Re: toys
164. Troy Camplin — Re: course proposal query
165. Camille Martin — apologies
166. Hilary Clark — Re: course proposal query
167. Wanda Phipps — Here's a reminder
168. Hilary Clark — Re: toys
169. Geoffrey Gatza — Please buy my new book Kenmore: Poem Unlimited
170. Jennifer Karmin — JOB: Gettysburg College
171. Michael Tod Edgerton — Re: course proposal query / poetics of place
172. David-Baptiste Chirot — Alexis Grigoropoulos.i--a leaflet circulated at his funeral written...
173. William Allegrezza — New Issue of Moria!

14 DEC 2008

174. Alan Sondheim — some music
175. Kevin Killian — Re: toys
176. Jim Andrews — links to (mostly) recent writerly works of net art
177. steve russell — Re: Elliot Carter's birthday
178. Metta Sama — New On-line Lit Mag seeks Submissions: The Altruist
179. David-Baptiste Chirot — New at SITE/SIGHT/CITE & Cronaca Souversiva Feneon blogs
180. Angeline, Mary — Re: apologies
181. Angeline, Mary — Re: [BULK] Re: toys
182. George Bowering — Re: toys

183. Angeline, Mary — Re: toys
184. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books — Re: toys
185. amy king — Seeking Fiction and Poetry

15 DEC 2008

186. joseph bradshaw — Re: course proposal query / poetics of place
187. Adam Fieled — PFS Post: Sarah Birl & David Prater
188. Ron Silliman — Carla Harryman's Adorno's Noise
189. Michael Kelleher — Literary Buffalo Newsletter 12.15.08-12.21.08
190. Chris Chapman — Re: toys
191. Cara Benson — Re: toys
192. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: toys
193. Mark Weiss — query
194. Catherine Daly — Re: course proposal query / poetics of place
195. Charles Alexander — Re: course proposal query / poetics of place
196. Kevin Killian — Toys and Spicer
197. William James Austin — Blackbox submssion period closed
198. Geoffrey Gatza — Faits Divers de la Poesie Americain et Britannique
199. Jasper Brinton — Course proposal query
200. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: toys
201. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: toys
202. Gerald Schwartz — Re: toys
203. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: call for help from tribes gallery

16 DEC 2008

204. noah eli gordon — RAIN TAXI BENEFIT AUCTION!
205. Christophe Casamassima — 1st Annual Furniture Press Poetry Prize
206. aaron tieger — OUT ANOTHER by Michael Carr
207. Susan Grimm — Re: POETICS Digest - 14 Dec 2008 to 15 Dec 2008 (#2008-330)
208. David Baratier — Noah Eli Gordon: Acoustic Experience available from Pavement Saw Press
209. CA Conrad — MOUTHBREATHER poetry/music/interviews
210. Steve Halle — Jules Gibbs @ Seven Corners
211. Séamas Cain — Book Launch (invitation)
212. Martha Oatis — Re: query
213. Geoffrey Gatza — First Baby Poems By Anne Waldman - Just In Time For The Holidays
214. Mark Weiss — Re: query
215. Lisa Samuels — Re: Course proposal query
216. Geer Austin — Re: query

17 DEC 2008

217. Joel Lewis — Ron Silliman/Joel Lewis in NYC
218. Chris Chapman — Re: toys
219. Rosemary Ceravolo — "Auden and Prizes" (fwd)
220. Alan Sondheim — Last night at the ESP-Disk LIVE @ The Bowery Poetry Club event
221. ross priddle — Nothing Material: Poetry Welcome!
222. Holly Crawford — Re: Richard Kostelanetz's SRAM/BLEDS at AC[Chapel]
223. Martha Cinader Mims — L&BH Network Fresh Literary Content Dec. 17, 2008
224. Susan Webster Schultz — TINFISH PRESS news

18 DEC 2008

225. Nicholas Karavatos — JOB - Composition and Professional Writing, American University of Sha...
226. Sarah Kaldor — Playing with words: The spoken word in artistic practice
227. Andy Nicholson — Re: Noah Eli Gordon: Acoustic Experience available from Pavement Saw Press
228. Alexander Jorgensen — WANTED: Out of Print Issue #4 of Noon: Journal of Short Poem
229. Paul Nelson — Organic Poetry

230. Jerome Rothenberg — Poems for the Millennium, volume 3: publication & reading
231. Henry A. Lazer — MLA - Jerome Rothenberg & UA Press
232. Mark Weiss — Clinton and the potentates
233. Hank Lazer — MLA - Jerome Rothenberg & UA Press - CORRECTION: booth #807
234. Pam Brown — season's greetings from the deletions
235. Poetry Project — New Year's Day at The Poetry Project!
236. steve d. dalachinsky — great new cd

19 DEC 2008

237. Jim Andrews — Re: Playing with words: The spoken word in artistic practice
238. Joel Chace — Fwd: your review in Galatea
239. David Baratier — Re: Noah Eli Gordon: Acoustic Experience available from Pavement Saw Press
240. Geoffrey Gatza — Faits divers de la Poesie Americaine et Britannique
241. steve russell — Re: toys
242. steve russell — Re: Clinton and the potentates
243. CA Conrad — OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
244. mIEKAL aND — Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
245. Ruth Lepson — Re: season's greetings from the deletions
246. amy king — CFP (Calls for Papers) & OT -- "Forever Young? The Changing Images of America"
247. Patrick F. Durgin — MLA Off-Site Reading 2008
248. Clay Banes — SPD'S End of Capitalism Sale
249. cris cheek — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
250. Poetry Project — New Year's Day at The Poetry Project!

20 DEC 2008

251. Barbara Henning — Re: Review of John Godfrey's City of Corners
252. Jennifer Karmin — JOB: Western State College of Colorado
253. Chris Stroffolino — 12/27 EVENT (in Oakland)
254. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
255. Troy Camplin — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
256. lanny quarles — Season's Greetings From Jellybean Weirdo...
257. Gerald Schwartz — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
258. laura hinton — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

21 DEC 2008

259. steve d. dalachinsky — Re: SPD'S End of Capitalism Sale
260. Manuel Brito — CFP- Little Magazines
261. Paul Nelson — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
262. Obododimma Oha — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
263. Obododimma Oha — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
264. steve russell — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
265. steve russell — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
266. Mark Weiss — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
267. Elizabeth Switaj — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
268. Jason Quackenbush — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
269. CA Conrad — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
270. David Buuck — Locals MLA Group Reading - Tue Dec 20 @ Hotel Utah
271. CA Conrad — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
272. George Bowering — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
273. David Buuck — MLA announcement correction
274. Stephen Vincent — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
275. steve russell — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

22 DEC 2008

276. Bill Berkson — FW: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural

277. Small Press Traffic — Small Press Traffic's New Executive Director
278. Pam Brown — hi ruth lepson, hi conrad
279. Ann Bogle — Inauguration theology and poetics
280. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
281. Elizabeth Switaj — Re: FW: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural
282. George Bowering — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
283. George Bowering — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
284. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
285. Ruth Lepson — Re: hi ruth lepson, hi conrad
286. laura hinton — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
287. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
288. CA Conrad — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
289. Ruth Lepson — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
290. Roy Exley — Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
291. Gerald Schwartz — Re: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural 292. Ann Bogle — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics

23 DEC 2008

293. mIEKAL aND — BYSTANDER: An Irreality by mIEKAL aND
294. Eric Hoffman — New Book Available from Dos Madres Press
295. John Foley — FLASHPOINT EZRA POUND EXTRA!
296. Carol Novack — More on the Warren Horror Show & C A Conrad's Open Letter
297. steve russell — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
298. George Bowering — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
299. George Bowering — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
300. Gwyn McVay — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
301. Ryan Daley — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
302. Alison Croggon — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
303. Adam Tobin — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
304. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
305. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
306. Ruth Lepson — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
307. Charles Alexander — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
308. Charles Alexander — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
309. Charles Alexander — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

24 DEC 2008

310. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
311. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
312. laura hinton — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
313. Corey Frost — Inauguration theology and poetics
314. Eric Weinstein — Fwd: Prick of the Spindle Vol. 2.4: Tis the Season

25 DEC 2008

315. David-Baptiste Chirot — "Farewll to Nanao Sakaki"
316. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: "Farewll to Nanao Sakaki"
317. John Cunningham — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
318. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
319. Richard Jeffrey Newman — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
320. David-Baptiste Chirot — RIP Harold Pinter
321. steve russell — Re: Harold Pinter
322. steve russell — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

26 DEC 2008

323. David Kirschenbaum — Help The Portable Boog Reader 3
324. Doug Holder — Poet Hugh Fox : Still Way, Way Off the Road
325. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

326. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
327. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
328. George Bowering — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
329. George Bowering — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
330. Carol Novack — Mad Hatters' Review is BACK!

27 DEC 2008

331. Peter Ciccariello — yet again this past has passed
332. David-Baptiste Chirot — Forrest Gander's First Novel, RIP Harold Pinter & Elizabeth Alexand...
333. Gwyn McVay — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
334. Stephen Baraban — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

28 DEC 2008

335. Jennifer Karmin — Chicago festival: When Does It or You Begin? (Memory as Innovation)
336. Corey Frost — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
337. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Ref.: Poloroid Photography
338. joeharrington — Issue 1/Verzion 2
339. Daniel Godston — $2 million donation for Poets & Writers
340. Gareth Farmer — Zukofsky
341. Mark Weiss — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
342. Halvard Johnson — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

29 DEC 2008

343. Ryan Daley — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
344. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
345. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
346. Doug Holder — I Called Richard Yates On The Phone: Musings From A Minor Poet
347. mIEKAL aND — Re: Zukofsky
348. cris cheek — Re: inaugural poetics
349. cris cheek — further inaugural dilemna
350. Geoffrey Gatza — Faits Divers de la Poesie Americaine et Britannique is now back up
351. Cynie Cory — Poetry as Song: Query
352. steve russell — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
353. laura hinton — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
354. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
355. Jordan Stempleman — Re: Poetry as Song: Query
356. Eireene Nealand — capitalism and the long poem
357. Eireene Nealand — the Russian poet Dmitry Golynko
358. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
359. Mark Weiss — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
360. George Bowering — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
361. George Bowering — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
362. laura oliver — Re: Poetry as Song: Query
363. Ryan Daley — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics

30 DEC 2008

364. Nico Vassilakis — Kurt Schwitters' Ur Sonata @ Subtext 1/7/09
365. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Poetry as Song: Query
366. Ruth Lepson — Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
367. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poetry as Song: Query
368. John Cunningham — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
369. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Poetry as Song: Query
370. Charles Alexander — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
371. Peter Ciccariello — The Keep - Brain scan with leaf mold
372. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: capitalism and the long poem
373. Troy Camplin — Re: capitalism and the long poem

374. Crane's Bill Books — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
375. Elizabeth Switaj — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
376. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Re: Poetry as Song: Query
377. Charles Alexander — Michael Cross: In Felt Treeling

31 DEC 2008

378. Pam Brown — Call for reviewer for Jacket
379. David Baratier — Final call, PSP Chapbook contest, 12/31
380. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
381. Niels Hav — Re: I Called Richard Yates On The Phone: Musings From A Minor Poet
382. Tarpaulin Sky Press — Now Available: TSky Journal #15 | Print Issue #2
383. Steve Tills — Write an inauguration speech
384. Jim Andrews — New on Vispo.com: 1987 digital poetry by Geof Huth
385. Corey Frost — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
386. amy king — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
387. George Bowering — Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
388. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
389. George Bowering — Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
390. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: capitalism and the long poem
391. Eireene Nealand — Re: capitalism and the long poem
392. Adam Tobin — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
393. David-Baptiste Chirot — Warning Porno & Spam Mercahnts on poetics list--maybe is hacked?
394. amy king — Re: Warning Porno & Spam Mercahnts on poetics list--maybe is hacked? -- NO, BUT
395. amy king — Re: Warning Porno & Spam Mercahnts on poetics list--maybe is hacked? -- NO, BUT
396. Obododimma Oha — Re: Issue 1/Verzion 2
397. Troy Camplin — Re: capitalism and the long poem
398. Ruth Lepson — Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
399. Troy Camplin — Re: capitalism and the long poem
400. Maria Damon — Re: Happy NY
401. Halvard Johnson — Sonnet for the New Year
402. Poetry Project — New Year's Day and beyond at The Poetry Project
403. Alan Sondheim — HAPPY NEW YEAR ANNUAL HAPPY NEW YEAR VIDEO!
404. Stephen Vincent — MLA: Re: capitalism and the long poem
405. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: capitalism and the long poem/happy new years!!!!!
406. Pam Brown — We have a reviewer for Dementia Blog
407. William Slaughter — Notice: Mudlark

1. Mark Weiss
Re: language v. experimental
Sun 30 Nov 2008

Funny you should ask. Really.

there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that >spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference?

↑ Index

2. Shankar, Ravi (English)
REMEMBER: Drunken Boat Design Contest - Dec 01 Deadline
Sun 30 Nov 2008

---

http://www.drunkenboat.com/db10/designcontest/

Drunken Boat Design Contest - $2500 for winning designer

Drunken Boat < www.drunkenboat.com >, an international online journal of the arts, celebrates its 10th anniversary! Part of our conceptual origin has been in exhibiting works of art that use the medium of the Web as constitutive of meaning; with this in mind we are soliciting proposals for the design of a special 10th issue dedicated to arts and literature online. The winning designer receives a $2500 honorarium in return for designing the home page of a publication that attracts nearly half a million unique visitors per year.

ENTRY PROCESS To submit a design proposal, follow these steps: 1) Email [redacted] with your design proposal (as per below). 2) Pay the $25 Entry Fee online or by mail. Make sure your payment is attached to your entry. 3) Include complete contact information on all submitted materials. Note: No materials will be returned (unless prior arrangement has been reached). Please submit disposable materials wherever possible.

ENTRY FORMAT
Send your design proposal in one of the following formats:
1) a link to a website
2) one or more JPG, GIF or PNG files
3) one or more PDF files
4) a SWF file (Adobe Flash)

ENTRY FEE Pay the $25 Entry Fee online through Paypal < www.drunkenboat.com/db9/donate.html >, or by personal or organizational check. All payments sent by regular mail must include the designer’s current email address and contact information.

MAILING ADDRESS
Drunken Boat

119 Main St.
Chester, CT 06412
USA

PERMISSION
Contestants grant Drunken Boat permission to display a designer's name, company name, client name and/or relevant design work at www.drunkenboat.com.

COPYRIGHT NOTICE
Drunken Boat assumes all submitted artwork is the property of the designer or design firm submitting the work. Drunken Boat will not be liable for any copyright infringement on the part of the contestant. All rights to the work will revert to the designer upon publication.

ETHICAL GUIDELINES
Drunken Boat reserves the right to revoke the award from any individual or company, whose artwork does not fall within the ethical guidelines set forth by the magazine, whether before, during or after the judging is complete. Fees are non-refundable once the entry has been submitted for any reason.

TERMS OF DELIVERY
The winner will receive a $2500 honorarium, payable upon launch date of the 10th anniversary issue. The winner will be responsible for all aspects of the home page design, including its interface with all other sections of the issue (particularly the 10 mini-sites). The winner must also be willing to work with other individuals, as needed, to enable completion of the issue in time for a Winter 2008/2009 launch.

DEADLINE
December 01 2008

RULES
The Drunken Boat Design Contest is open to designers from any discipline, from anywhere in the world, particularly individuals attuned to the potential dynamicity of designing work online. We at Drunken Boat are open to any number of aesthetic models that might encompass this issue's contents. Best of all would be an interactive / dynamic component that actively invites reader participation. The only parameters of the contest are that all of the home page designs must be structured to encompass a group of 10 mini-sites designed by Drunken Boat Web Editor / Site Designer Shawn M. McKinney. A sample of the visual design of the 10 mini-sites may be found here: www.drunkenboat.com/db10/designcontest.

All entries will be considered potential home pages; some finalists may ultimately provide alternate home page designs.

NOTES
We don’t expect you to submit an entire Web site. We do expect you to provide us with a clear sense of the graphic “look and feel” of a home page, as well as a proposed system of navigation, for Drunken Boat, Issue No. 10. In addition, all proposed design elements must be aesthetically compatible with the 10 mini-sites mentioned previously. Although your email confirmation and digital artwork will be sufficient for our judges to assess your entry properly, contestants may physically mail design samples to allow for a more in-depth evaluation process. In any event, no materials will be returned (unless prior arrangement has been reached). Please submit disposable materials wherever possible.

We urge you to explore the archives of www.drunkenboat.com. Take a look at some of the creative work we have published in the past, while you consider the design sensibility that has shaped previous issues. Also, you might want to read the “designer’s note” (essay) found in the Oulipo section of Drunken Boat, Issue No. 8. Locate it as follows: www.drunkenboat.com/db8 > oulipo > shawn m. mckinney > “Oulipo Redux: Extensible, Exegetic, Ex Post Facto.”

A spirit of collaboration is essential to the success of this contest and this special issue of Drunken Boat. The winning designer will be expected to work closely with a staff of designers and editors to complete the design of Issue No. 10. Mavericks need not apply.

If all we have at our disposal is language to articulate the world, its precision and meaning, in abstract form, how do we reconcile the stance that dialogue is nothing more than the congress of arbitrary conceits? —Ravi Shankar, “Editor’s Statement,” Drunken Boat, Issue No. 9

All entries must be received by midnight. No late entries will be considered.

poster design < shawn m. mckinney > www.typonica.com

↑ Index

3. Amanda Earl experiment-o, correct link
Sun 30 Nov 2008

---

and now for the correct link:

www.experiment-o.com

oopsy. sorry about that.

Amanda

↑ Index

4. Hugh Behm-Steinberg

Eleven Eleven Issue Seven Submission Call

Sun 30 Nov 2008

We'll be reading for issue seven through March 15, 2009. Send Hi all,

We'll be reading for issue seven through March 15, 2009. Send up to five poems or 7,000 words of prose, plus SASE to

Eleven Eleven
California College of the Arts
1111 Eighth St.
San Francisco, CA 94107

For more information, write to us at [redacted].

And look for our first online issue this January at www.elevenelevenjournal.com!

Best,

Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Faculty Editor
Eleven Eleven

_____
From: Hugh Behm-Steinberg <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, October 6, 2007 4:04:20 PM
Subject: Eleven Eleven issue 4 and submission call for issue 5

Announcing the release of issue four of Eleven Eleven, edited by Ben Lerner and featuring the work of Aharon Shabtai (translated by Peter Cole), Cole Swensen, Renee Gladman, Rusty Morrison, Magdalena Zurawski, Jacqueline Risset (translated by Jennifer Moxley), Aaron Kunin, K. Silem Mohammad, David Shapiro, Edward Bartoìk-Baratta, Chris Abani, Michael Palmer, and a selection of five emerging Mexican poets edited and translated by Jen Hofer and Romaìn Lujaìn (Rodrigo Flores and His Homies, Alejandro Tarrab, Joseì Manuel Velaìzquez, Karen Plata, and Rosalva Garciìa Coral).

On sale now for $8, directly from CCA. Make checks out to California College of the Arts, Attn: Eleven Eleven.

We are now reading for issue five. Send up to five poems or 7,000 words of prose, plus SASE. Deadline is January 31, 2008.

Send checks and submissions to:

Eleven Eleven
California College of the Arts

1111 Eighth Street
San Francisco, CA 94107

For more information, write to us at [redacted].

est,

Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Faculty Editor
Eleven Eleven

Building a website is a piece of cake.
Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

↑ Index

5. Carol Novack

REBECCA GOODMAN, STEVE KATZ & MARTIN NAKELL at The KGB Bar, Friday, Dec. 12th

Sun 30 Nov 2008

---

*FRIDAY, DEC. 12TH, 7-9 pm *

Mad Hatters' Review
Poetry, Prose & Anything Goes Reading Series
Friday, December 12th, 2008, 7 – 9 pm
KGB Bar, 85 East 4th Street, N.Y.C.

Featuring more fabulous MHR contributors coming from afar:

Rebecca Goodman's novel, The Surface of Motion, was published by Green Integer Press (2008). She lives and teaches in Los Angeles. Fiction may be found in MHR Issue 10.

Steve Katz's works include Creamy and Delicious; The Exagggerations of Peter Prince; Saw; Swanny's Ways (Sun & Moon Press), winner of the American Award in Fiction in 1995; the screenplay Grassland, which eventually became Hex; and most recently, Kissssss (short works). He's held jobs in construction, the forest service, mining industry, and education, has taught overseas and in the USA. Katz is also proficient in Chinese internal martial arts, so he knows how to hurt himself. He lived it in Oregon, Nevada, Italy, upstate New York, and NYC. He currently resides in Denver, Colorado. Read his poem in MHR Issue 10 and access his impressive extensive bio.

*Martin Nakell *has published several books of fiction and poetry, including Two Fields That Face & Mirror Each Other (Sun & Moon), *Goings *(Margin-to-margin Press), *Form *(Spuyten Duyvil), *Settlement *(Spuyten Duyvil), and others, some in progress, some not yet written. He lives in Los Angeles with his wife, the fictionalist, Rebecca Goodman. Martin and Rebecca constituted the &NOW '08 Committee, hosting the &NOW Conference/Festival of Innovative Art & Literature in Southern California in April 2008. His fiction, plus a review of Settlement, are in MHR Issue 9.

For further info, email: [redacted] (type READINGS in the subject line)

*
*

*
*

MAD HATTERS' REVIEW: edgy & enlightened art, literature, & music in the Age of Dementia: http://www.madhattersreview.com

*KEEP THE MAD HATTERS ALIVE! MAKE A TAX DEDUCTIBLE DONATION! *
https://www.fracturedatlas.org/site/contribute/donate/580

↑ Index

6. Jennifer Karmin

Red Rover Series / Experiment #25

Sun 30 Nov 2008

Red Rover Series
{readings that play with reading}

Experiment #25:
Floating Hope Corpse

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6th
7pm

Featuring:
John Beer
Joel Craig
Brandi Homan
Lisa Janssen
Philip Jenks
Erik Johnson
Jennifer Karmin
Lauren Levato
Erika Mikkalo
Simone Muench
Daniela Olszewska
Melissa Severin

Chuck Stebelton
Leila Wilson

A celebration for the third issue of the literary journal MoonLit, edited by Lisa Janssen and Claire McMahon.

at the Division Street Dance Loft 735 W. Division, 3rd floor -- Chicago, IL new location in the Work House building Division @ Halsted, enter parking lot off of Halsted http://www.rtgdance.com/teach_schedule.htm

suggested donation $4 doors lock at 7:30pm

JOHN BEER's poems and essays have appeared in publications including MoonLit, Make, Verse, Barrow Street, Crowd, the Hat, Time Out Chicago, the Review of Contemporary Fiction, and the Village Voice.

JOEL CRAIG co-curates The Danny's Reading Series, edits poetry for Make Magazine, and designs for MoonLit. A chapbook, Shine Tomorrow, is forthcoming in February, 2009.

BRANDI HOMAN is the author of Hard Reds (Shearsman, 2008) and is Editor-in-Chief of Switchback Books.

LISA JANSSEN is a writer, archivist, co-editor of MoonLit magazine, and co-curator of the Red Rover Series.

PHILIP JENKS has published two books, On the Cave You Live In (Flood) My First Painting will be The Accuser (Zephyr Press) He plays with The Howling Hex (Drag City) and is working with Simone Muench on a book of collaborations, Little Visceral Carnival.

ERIK JOHNSON is a PhD student at Northwestern and lives in Evanston.

JENNIFER KARMINâ€™s Aaaaaaaaaaalice cantos are anthologized in A Sing Economy (Flim Forum Press). She teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College, works as a Poet-in-Residence for the Chicago Public Schools, and presents her public art projects nationally. Together with Lisa Janssen, she co-curates the Red Rover Series.

LAUREN LEVATO is a poet and artist. She is the author of Marriage Bones and at the hotel andromeda, a collaboration with Kristy Bowen. Her visual art is exhibited internationally and has recently entered a master painting program. She works at both Jean Albano Gallery and Woman Made Gallery.
http://www.laurenlevato.com

ERIKA MIKKALO lives on the south side of Chicago and persists. Recent work has appeared in fence, MiPOesias, and proximity. She is considering collaboration in all media.

SIMONE MUENCH's third book Orange Crush will be out from Sarabande in 2010. She is a professor, vegetarian and horror film fan, and works collaboratively with Bill Allegrezza and Philip Jenks.

DANIELA OLSZEWSKA is the author of The Partial Autobiography of Jane Doe and Resort to Humming. Her poems have appeared in recent issues of La Petite Zine, No Tell Motel, and Conduit.

MELISSA SEVERIN is managing editor for Switchback Books. Her chapbook, Brute Fact, is available from dancing girl press.

CHUCK STEBELTON is author of Circulation Flowers (Tougher Disguises, 2005). Recent chapbooks include A Maximal Object (Mitzvah Chaps), Flags and Banners (Bronze Skull Press), and Precious (Answer Tag Home Press). He works as Literary Program Director at Woodland Pattern Book Center in Milwaukee.

LEILA WILSON teaches at the School of the Art Institute and serves as the poetry editor at Chicago Review. Her poems have appeared in Poetry, The Canary, A Public Space, Denver Quarterly, and elsewhere.

Red Rover Series {readings that play with reading} is curated by Lisa Janssen and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national, and international writers, artists, and performers. The series was founded in 2005 by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin.

Email ideas for reading experiments to us at [redacted]

The schedule for upcoming events is listed at http://groups.yahoo.com/group/redroverseries

NEXT EXPERIMENT:
Friday, February 13th
AWP Small Press Showcase
8-11pm at Links Hall, 956 Newport -- Chicago, IL Experiment #26 with Action Books, Effing Press, Flood Editions, Futurepoem Books, Les Figues Press, Slack Buddha Press, Switchback Books & Ugly Duckling Presse

↑ Index

7. Gloria Frym
Re: language v. experimental
Sun 30 Nov 2008

All cactus are succulents, but not all succulents are cactus.

----- Original Message -----
From: "John Cunningham" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, November 30, 2008 7:58 AM
Subject: language v. experimental

> In my recent query re Canadian language poets to which there were many responses, most of them civil (and my thanks to all those who took the trouble to reply to that thread - even to G.B. (and know Rob that's not you), there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that > spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference? If so, what is it? And where does Erin Moure sit in that binary?
> John Herbert Cunningham

↑ Index

8. Joel Weishaus
"Reality Too" November Blog
Sun 30 Nov 2008

Dear Friends and Colleagues;

Here is the November "Reality Too" blog:
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/blog/November.htm

Mirror site:
http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Blog/November.htm

Introduction:
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/blog/intro.htm

Designed for MS Explorer; Text Size: Medium; 1024X768 screen resolution.

-Joel Weishaus

↑ Index

9. Small Press Traffic

Scott Inguito & The Sonneteers (Ben & Sandra Doller) at Small Press Traffic 12/5/08

Mon 1 Dec 2008

Small Press Traffic is thrilled to present:

Scott Inguito & The Sonneteers (Ben & Sandra Doller)

Friday, December 5, 2008 at 7:30 p.m.
Timken Lecture Hall
Refreshments will be served

Join us!

Scott Inguito lives in San Francisco, teaches in San Jose, and paints in his garage. His most recent project is called PANDAFUCK, a suite of poems inspired by the pointless, the ill-tuned yet well-intentioned, the black and white of it all. Dear Jack (2008), a book of poems, is out on Momotombo Press. You can find his paintings at scottinguito.com

Sandra Doller (née Miller) has a new name. Her first book Oriflamme was published by Ahsahta Press in 2005, and her second collection Chora is forthcoming from Ahsahta in 2010. Sandra Doller is the founder & editrice of a fancy magazine & press, the curiously named 1913. She teaches at Cal State San Marcos and lives way out west with her man, Ben Doller (né Doyle) and their pup Ronald Johnson.

Ben Doller (né Doyle)'s first book of poems, Radio, Radio, was selected by Susan Howe as winner of the 2000 Walt Whitman Award. His second book, FAQ:, will be published by Ahsahta Press in 2009, and his third book, Dead Ahead, is forthcoming from Fence Books. He co-edits the Kuhl House Contemporary Poets series and teaches in Antioch's Low-Res MFA program. Wherever he lives, he lives with his lady, Sandra Doller (née Miller) and their boxador, Ronald Johnson.

Unless otherwise noted, events are $5-10, sliding scale, free to current SPT members and CCA faculty, staff, and students. There's no better time to join SPT!
Check out: http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm <http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm%C2%A0%C2%A0>

Unless otherwise noted, our events are presented in Timken Lecture Hall California College of the Arts 1111 Eighth Street, San Francisco (just off the intersection of 16th & Wisconsin).

Directions & map:
http://www.sptraffic.org/html/directions.htm
<http://www.sptraffic.org/html/directions.htm%C2%A0%C2%A0%C2%A0>

We'll see you Fridays!

Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]

http://www.sptraffic.org <http://www.sptraffic.org/>

www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com
<http://www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

10. Adam Fieled

PFS Post: Lars Palm

Mon 1 Dec 2008

Check out eight poems from Lars Palm's "for good behavior" on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Happy Holidays!
Adam

↑ Index

11. Michael Kelleher

Literary Buffalo Newsletter 12.01.08-12.07.08

Mon 1 Dec 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
12.01.08-12.07.08

EVENTS THIS WEEK

Visit the Literary Buffalo calendar at www.justbuffalo.org for more detailed info on these events. All events free and open to the pubic unless otherwise noted.

12.03.08

Just Buffalo/Center for Inquiry Literary Cafe
Open Holiday Reading Poetry Reading (8 open slots)
Wednesday, December 3, 7:30 PM
Center for Inquiry, 1310 Sweet Home Road, Amherst

Talking Leaves...Books/Jewish Community Book Fair
Randy Pausch
Book Lecture: The Last Lecture, by Jeffrey Laslow
Wednesday, December 3, 7:30 PM
JCC of Greater Buffalo, 2640 North Forest Road

12.04.08

Talking Leaves...Books
Jennifer Campbell
Reading/Signing for: Driving Straight Through Thursday, December 4, 7:00 PM
Talking Leaves...Books, 3158 Main St.

12.05.08

Just Buffalo/Albright-Knox Art Gallery
SNOW MAN SLAM: THE FINAL NICKEL CITY POETRY SLAM
Feature: Gabrielle Bouliane
Regional competition b/w Buffalo, Cleveland, Toronto and Niagara U. teams
Friday, December 5, 7 p.m.
Clifton Hall, Albright-Knox Art Gallery

12.06.08

Just Buffalo/Interdisciplinary Performance Series
The Lighter Side: William Cooper's Cartoons Exhibition, Music, Open Poetry Reading
Saturday, December 6, 8:00 PM
El Museo, 91 Allen St

12.07.08

RUST BELT BOOKS
Birthday Party Reading For Robin Box
Readings by Lorna Perez, Aaron Lowinger, Shayna Raichilson-Zadok & Adam Zadok, Kisha Patterson-Tanski, Kristianne Meal andË‡ Esssence of BpNichol
Sunday, December 7, 2008 @ 3:00 PM
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St

JUST BUFFALO MEMBER WRITER CRITIQUE GROUP

http://www.justbuffalo.org/docs/Writer_Critique_Group.pdf

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

12. Anny Ballardini

Fwd: Dec. Issue of Gently Read Literature

Mon 1 Dec 2008

John Kinsella's Divine Comedy stands out. Forwarding:

Gently Read Literature

www.gentlyread.wordpress.com

December Issue

Reviews of contemporary poetry and literary fiction—

The Ordinary into the Fantastic: Suzanne Ordus on Larissa Szporluk's Embryos & Idiots

* *

After a Certain Point, all I can say is, "You Must Read This": John Kinsella's Divine Comedy reviewed by Sumita Chakraborty

* *

Kinetic Poetry: Erin Mullikin on Abraham Smith's Whim Man Mammon

* *

A Sad-Sack Story: Jason Pettus reviews Jack O'Connell's novel The Resurrectionist

* *

Compelling Clarity of Insight: John Domini on DeWitt Henry's Safe Suicide

* *

A Dark Time in the Delta: Jayne Pupek reviews Hillary Jordan's novel Mudbound

* *

*Modest Poems that Pack a Punch: Anne Whitehouse on Rochelle Ratner's Ben Casey Days *

* *

Of Real & Symbolic Parenthood: Diane Greco on Samuel Shem's novel The Spirit of the Place

* *

Similarity in Dysfunction: N. Dalton Speidel on Preeta Samarasan's novel Evening is the Whole Day

* *

This month's featured artist is Ann Marie Nafziger

www.gentlyread.wordpress.com

if you would like your email address removed from GRL's list simply reply to this message from the address to which it was sent with 'remove' either in the subject line or in the body of the email

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

↑ Index

13. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: language v. experimental
Mon 1 Dec 2008

Language Poetry was central to experimental American poetry essentially about twenty years ago. I think innovative poetry (one may ask if innovative is the same as experimental) has been moving in new directions only tangentially related to tenets of Language Poetry.

One, but not the only, obvious example is visual poetry, of which the digital movement is an aspect, where by definition there is a change in the very concept of "Language." Another development is the re-emerging of the lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and its processes and movements, in language. The third is a rethinking of the whole idea of fake/authenticity, copying/originality where the whole persona of the poet as a creator changes into a that of an editor, scholar, collector or translator.

These are just three which come to my mind off the top of my head all of which are major departures from Language school aesthetics.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Nov 30, 2008 at 5:55 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> Funny you should ask. Really.
>
> there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that
>
> spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference?

↑ Index

14. Martha Cinader Mims

L&BH Radio Hour Open Mic Dec. 2, 8-9pm PST

Mon 1 Dec 2008

L&BH Radio Hour Featuring Poetry Open Mic

Dec. 2, 8-9pm PST

The feature this week is POETRY. Please call in with your poem or announcement about a poetry event or website, share with a national audience and let's get to know each other by voice.

The number to call is [redacted], you will hear the radio show on your telephone.

You can listen to the show, "click to talk" and also join the chat room at the following website address:

http://www.blogtalkradio.com/listenandbeheard/2008/12/03/LBH-Radio- Hour-Dec-2

Please join me to listen and be heard.
Wishing you Peace and Poetry
martha cinader mims

Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

Get Skype and call me for free.

↑ Index

15. aaron tieger
The Collected Typos of Aaron Tieger
Mon 1 Dec 2008

Editions Louis Wain is pleased to announce the availability of a new chapbook: The Collected Typos of Aaron Tieger

"These words are more than happy accidents. Similar to automatic writing, The Collected Typos tap into an unconscious lexicon, in which the familiar and the unexpected are portmanteaud into startling clarity. Tieger has found a generative form in the typo; as his note on the text states, 'Accidents are not omissions.'"

For a sample from this work, and to purchase through Paypal, please visit the Editions Louis Wain site:

http://editionslouiswain.com/books/

↑ Index

16. Mark Weiss
Re: language v. experimental
Mon 1 Dec 2008

Right you are, except of course that "language Poetry was central to experimental American poetry essentially about twenty years ago" only in the estimation of a few of those who identify themselves as language poets.

Mark

At 01:53 PM 12/1/2008, you wrote:
>Language Poetry was central to experimental American poetry essentially >about twenty years ago. I think innovative poetry (one may ask if innovative >is the same as experimental) has been moving in new directions only >tangentially related to tenets of Language Poetry.
>

>One, but not the only, obvious example is visual poetry, of which the >digital movement is an aspect, where by definition there is a change in the >very concept of "Language." Another development is the re-emerging of the >lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an >instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and >its processes and movements, in language. The third is a rethinking of the >whole idea of fake/authenticity, copying/originality where the whole persona >of the poet as a creator changes into a that of an editor, scholar, >collector or translator.
>
>These are just three which come to my mind off the top of my head all of >which are major departures from Language school aesthetics.
>
>Ciao,
>
>Murat
>
>
>On Sun, Nov 30, 2008 at 5:55 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > Funny you should ask. Really.
> >
> > there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that
> >
> >> spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference?
> >>
> >
> >
>

↑ Index

17. Hugh Behm-Steinberg

Friday 12/05 - 1111 Publication Party & Reading with Lisa Robertson, Eric Selland, & Carol Snow

Mon 1 Dec 2008

Please Join Us at Books & Bookshelves
Friday, December 5th at 8:00pm

To celebrate the publication of1111Issue #5
Lisa Robertson, Eric Selland, & Carol Snow will be reading.

Books & Bookshelves is located in the Castro at 99 Sanchez

Lisa Robertson is a Canadian writer currently living between California, where she is Artist in Residence at CCA, and France. Current projects include a translation of Situationist Michele Bernstein's novel All the King's Horses (published in installments in the London arts journal The Happy Hypocrite), and a recorded sound work in collaboration with Stacy Doris, commissioned by The Kootenay School of Writing in Vancouver. A new collection of poems is forthcoming from Coach House Press. Eric Sellandis a poet and translator living on the San Francisco peninsula. His translations of modernist and contemporary Japanese poets have appeared in a variety of journals and anthologies. He has also published articles on Japanese modernist poetry and translation theory. He is the author of The Condition of Music (Sink Press, 2000), Inventions (Seeing Eye Books, 2007), and an essay in The Poem Behind the Poem: Translating Asian Poetry (Copper Canyon Press, 2004). He is currently editing an anthology of 20th Century Japanese avant-garde poetry.

Carol Snowlives, works, and arranges words, quotes and other small mostly indoor objects in her native San Francisco. She is the author of Artist and Model, For and The Seventy Prepositions. Her new book, Placed: Karesansui Poems, is now out on Counterpath Press.

Eleven Eleven is a bi-annual journal of literature and art based at California College of the Arts. The aim of the publication is to provide a forum for risk and experimentation and to serve as an exchange between writers and artists. Issue Five features writing by Cecco Angiolieri (translated by Brett Foster), Alfred Arteaga, Abby Baker, Aaron Belz, Terry Bisson, Michael Reid Busk, Blake Butler, Jodie Childers, Hannah Craig, Richard de Nooy, Erik Ehn, Jill Alexander Essbaum, Rebecca Morgan Frank, Andy Frazee, Elisa Gabbert, Carrie Hunter, Steven Karl, Katoh Ikuya (translated by Eric Selland), Chris Kerr, Bill Lavender, Juan J. Morales, Simone Muench and Philip Jenks, Sarah O'Brien, Pilar Olabarria, Benjamin Parzybok, Barbara Jane Reyes, Lisa Robertson, Elizabeth Robinson, Sarah Sarai, Jordan Scott, Xu Smith, Carol Snow, Jack Spicer, Nicole Steinberg, Nathaniel Tarn, Rachel Tompa, Rodrigo Toscano, Daniel J. Vaccaro, St. Johnnie Walker, Robert Wexelblatt, Andrew Zawacki, and Jan Zwicky. Issue Five also features images by Kirsten Stolle and Open End Kiss, a project by the CCA MFA Program in Social Practices.For more information, go to http://www.cca.edu/academics/graduate/mfawriting/1111.php

Free

Please B.Y.O.B.

↑ Index

18. William Allegrezza

Series A in Chicago This Wednesday: Quraysh Ali Lansana and Michael Slosek

Mon 1 Dec 2008

Series A: Quraysh Ali Lansana and Michael Slosek

Quraysh Ali Lansana and Michael Slosek are reading poetry/performing this Wednesday as part of Series A. Join us for the presentation, which will include a guitar, sitar, drums, and more.

Wed., Dec. 3. 7-8:00 p.m. Hyde Park Art Center 5020 S. Cornell, Chicago. Call [redacted] if you need more information, or see http://www.moriapoetry.com/seriesa.html.

BYOB.

Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

19. John Cunningham

Re: language v. experimental

Mon 1 Dec 2008

Thanks for the response, Murat. I'm interested in your second point. Is this where Karen Volkman would fit in with book of sonnets? But, is this new? Hasn't the 'New Formalism' been kicking around for quite some time - even while language poetry was forming? John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Murat Nemet-Nejat
Sent: December 1, 2008 12:53 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: language v. experimental

Language Poetry was central to experimental American poetry essentially about twenty years ago. I think innovative poetry (one may ask if innovative is the same as experimental) has been moving in new directions only tangentially related to tenets of Language Poetry.

One, but not the only, obvious example is visual poetry, of which the digital movement is an aspect, where by definition there is a change in the very concept of "Language." Another development is the re-emerging of the lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and its processes and movements, in language. The third is a rethinking of the whole idea of fake/authenticity, copying/originality where the whole persona of the poet as a creator changes into a that of an editor, scholar, collector or translator.

These are just three which come to my mind off the top of my head all of which are major departures from Language school aesthetics.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Nov 30, 2008 at 5:55 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> Funny you should ask. Really.
>
> there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that
>
>> spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference?
>>
>
guidelines
>

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

20. Jim Andrews
Re: language v. experimental
Mon 1 Dec 2008

---

the most cogent remark i recall about 'experimental poetry'--but i can't remember who said it--is that, like experiments of other kinds, the outcome should be uncertain. probably it was a lanaguage poet.

if the outcome is not particularly uncertain, it isn't much of an experiment.

of course one may say all poetry is then experimental because who knows, when they sit down to work, just what exactly one will write? yes, well, there is some truth in that, even when one knows a great deal about what one will write and will do it in a traditional form. but there's experimenting as to whether the water will boil and then there are more recent experiments. where there really is some question at stake, not only for the writer, but for the reader also. not as in a whodunit, where the question is traditional and is normally posed in a traditional form, but where the issues are played out in some sort of innovative scenario or form or combination of innovative scenario/form.

is 'experimental poetry' then a synonym of 'innovative poetry'? well, no. if there isn't an element of innovation in an experiment, then it isn't much of an experiment; it's a repeat of work that has already been done. but work can be innovative without being particularly experimental. it can just be new without there having been any particularly experimental process involved.

but, you know, rereading the above, i'm not all that impressed. particularly with the last paragraph. anybody know of some good, not too boring, online writing explorative of the notion of 'experimental poetry'? not too clinical, i mean. and which deals comfortably with the shades of grey/gray involved in a good piece about experimental poetry. it'd have to, wouldn't it. 'experimentalness' is relative. yet, while one would want to acknowledge that, one would also want to cut through the exploitation of its relativity involved in claims that stuff that's already been done is experimental. but one would have to qualify 'already done' in a useful way.

so much writing in this vein reads like a land claim. every sentence seems designed to reinforce the claim of an individual or a group to special status x. poetry capitalism. rather than creating useful distinctions for general thinking.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

21. Gabriel Gudding afro-caribbean women poets
Mon 1 Dec 2008

I am looking for the names of contemporary (or even early to mid-20thC) Afro-Caribbean women poets. Would be grateful for the suggestions of names and/or book titles.
Gabriel
gabrielgudding at gmail dot com

↑ Index

22. Paul Nelson
Re: re-emerging lyric
Mon 1 Dec 2008

Murat said:

"Another development is the re-emerging of the lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and its processes and movements, in language..."

I'd also love to see you elaborate on this, the second of your three points on innovative poetry. Sounds like Olson, Whalen, Duncan, early Levertov, McClure, Mackey, Blaser, Eileen Myles, Wanda Coleman and others would fit into this mode.

Paul Nelson

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

_____
From: John Cunningham <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, December 1, 2008 1:02:21 PM
Subject: Re: language v. experimental

Thanks for the response, Murat. I'm interested in your second point. Is this where Karen Volkman would fit in with book of sonnets? But, is this new? Hasn't the 'New Formalism' been kicking around for quite some time - even while language poetry was forming? John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Murat Nemet-Nejat
Sent: December 1, 2008 12:53 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: language v. experimental

Language Poetry was central to experimental American poetry essentially about twenty years ago. I think innovative poetry (one may ask if innovative is the same as experimental) has been moving in new directions only tangentially related to tenets of Language Poetry.

One, but not the only, obvious example is visual poetry, of which the digital movement is an aspect, where by definition there is a change in the very concept of "Language." Another development is the re-emerging of the lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and its processes and movements, in language. The third is a rethinking of the whole idea of fake/authenticity, copying/originality where the whole persona of the poet as a creator changes into a that of an editor, scholar, collector or translator.

These are just three which come to my mind off the top of my head all of which are major departures from Language school aesthetics.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Nov 30, 2008 at 5:55 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> Funny you should ask. Really.
>
> there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that
>
>> spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference?
>>
>
guidelines
>

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

23. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: language v. experimental
Mon 1 Dec 2008

John,

The concept of the lyric I am referring to has little, if anything at all, to do with formalism. It has more to do with a "movement of thought, of ideas." In a different context I call it "eda." Zukofsky refers to something related when he refers to a third state of poetry as "gas state." When Spicer describes a poetry, not of the logs in the river; but the clicks the logs make [pointing to the motions of the water underneath] he is reaching I think for the same thing.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Dec 1, 2008 at 4:02 PM, John Cunningham
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Thanks for the response, Murat. I'm interested in your second point. Is this > where Karen Volkman would fit in with book of sonnets? But, is this new?
> Hasn't the 'New Formalism' been kicking around for quite some time - even > while language poetry was forming?
> John Herbert Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Murat Nemet-Nejat
> Sent: December 1, 2008 12:53 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: language v. experimental
>
> Language Poetry was central to experimental American poetry essentially > about twenty years ago. I think innovative poetry (one may ask if innovative > is the same as experimental) has been moving in new directions only > tangentially related to tenets of Language Poetry.
>
> One, but not the only, obvious example is visual poetry, of which the > digital movement is an aspect, where by definition there is a change in the > very concept of "Language." Another development is the re-emerging of the > lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an > instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and > its processes and movements, in language. The third is a rethinking of the > whole idea of fake/authenticity, copying/originality where the whole persona
> of the poet as a creator changes into a that of an editor, scholar, > collector or translator.
>
> These are just three which come to my mind off the top of my head all of > which are major departures from Language school aesthetics.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Sun, Nov 30, 2008 at 5:55 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> Funny you should ask. Really.
>
> there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that

> spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference?
>
> guidelines
>
> Internal Virus Database is out of date.
> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008
> 7:19 PM

↑ Index

24. Maria Damon
Re: afro-caribbean women poets
Mon 1 Dec 2008

---

are you looking for Anglo-Caribbean, or is French/Dutch/Spanish ok too?

Gabriel Gudding wrote:
> I am looking for the names of contemporary (or even early to mid-20thC)
> Afro-Caribbean women poets. Would be grateful for the suggestions of names > and/or book titles.
> Gabriel
> gabrielgudding at gmail dot com
>
>

↑ Index

25. Maria Damon
Re: afro-caribbean women poets
Mon 1 Dec 2008

---

off top head, anglo:
Lorna Goodison
Pamela Mordecai
Louise Bennett
Marlene Nourbese Philippe
Lillian Allen

Gabriel Gudding wrote:
> I am looking for the names of contemporary (or even early to mid-20thC)
> Afro-Caribbean women poets. Would be grateful for the suggestions of names > and/or book titles.

> Gabriel
> gabrielgudding at gmail dot com
>
>

↑ Index

26. Edward Foster
SIMON PETTET
Mon 1 Dec 2008

—

↑ Index

27. John Cunningham
Re: language v. experimental
Mon 1 Dec 2008

I do agree with your last paragraph in terms of relevancy. Unless there is something useful that distinguishes such as a new philosophy, new way or means of expression, etc., then there really is no point in calling an apple a Spartan just for the hell of it. John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Jim Andrews
Sent: December 1, 2008 3:28 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: language v. experimental

the most cogent remark i recall about 'experimental poetry'--but i can't remember who said it--is that, like experiments of other kinds, the outcome should be uncertain. probably it was a lanaguage poet.

if the outcome is not particularly uncertain, it isn't much of an experiment.

of course one may say all poetry is then experimental because who knows, when they sit down to work, just what exactly one will write? yes, well, there is some truth in that, even when one knows a great deal about what one

will write and will do it in a traditional form. but there's experimenting as to whether the water will boil and then there are more recent experiments. where there really is some question at stake, not only for the writer, but for the reader also. not as in a whodunit, where the question is traditional and is normally posed in a traditional form, but where the issues are played out in some sort of innovative scenario or form or combination of innovative scenario/form.

is 'experimental poetry' then a synonym of 'innovative poetry'? well, no. if there isn't an element of innovation in an experiment, then it isn't much of an experiment; it's a repeat of work that has already been done. but work can be innovative without being particularly experimental. it can just be new without there having been any particularly experimental process involved.

but, you know, rereading the above, i'm not all that impressed. particularly with the last paragraph. anybody know of some good, not too boring, online writing explorative of the notion of 'experimental poetry'? not too clinical, i mean. and which deals comfortably with the shades of grey/gray involved in a good piece about experimental poetry. it'd have to, wouldn't it. 'experimentalness' is relative. yet, while one would want to acknowledge that, one would also want to cut through the exploitation of its relativity involved in claims that stuff that's already been done is experimental. but one would have to qualify 'already done' in a useful way.

so much writing in this vein reads like a land claim. every sentence seems designed to reinforce the claim of an individual or a group to special status x. poetry capitalism. rather than creating useful distinctions for general thinking.

ja
http://vispo.com

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

28. Chris Stroffolino
CAMBODIAN POETRY QUERY QUESTION THING
Mon 1 Dec 2008

Does anybody know of any good examples of Cambodian poetry (In English Translation) under, or since, the Khmer regime, Kampuchea, etc... (survival poetry, witness--doesn't have to be overtly political, but would be prefered....

If so, if you could backchannel me any suggestions I'd deeply appreciate it
thanks,

Chris

↑ Index

29. Marcus Bales
Re: language v. experimental
Mon 1 Dec 2008

On 1 Dec 2008 at 13:28, Jim Andrews wrote:
> the most cogent remark i recall about 'experimental poetry'--but i > can't > remember who said it--is that, like experiments of other kinds, the > outcome
> should be uncertain. probably it was a lanaguage poet.
>
> if the outcome is not particularly uncertain, it isn't much of an > experiment.

This shows such a misunderstanding of what experiments are all about -- at least, scientific experiments -- that it must have been some postmodern who said it, and probably a poet. I don't say that only a postmodern poet could get it so wrong, but it's sure that he or she would get it wrong.

An experiment, to be worth anything in the real world, has to be the testing of a prediction, and the prediction the result of a theory or hypothesis. Only an experiment designed to test a prediction has any use in science. What the kind of "experiment" you're talking about, and what experimental poetry, resembles is throwing shit on the wall to see what sticks. That's not experimenting, that's simply trying things blindly without plan, and without even much hope.

Of course I understand that "experimental poetry" is a special use of "experimental", a jargon-word, a term of art, that has nothing whatever to do with experimental in the scientific sense -- that merely misappropriates a scientific-sounding word in an effort to cadge some of the authority of science to try to borrow some legitimacy for an entirely unscientific endeavor. It is interesting, and amusing, too, to note that those who so disparage science that they cannot even define what it is accurately are still so eager to use the language of science to describe their own unscientific efforts. It's like listening to children playing house, hearing them copying the grownup words and as completely ignorant of their denotations as of their connotations.

On 1 Dec 2008 at 13:28, Jim Andrews wrote:
> of course one may say all poetry is then experimental because who > knows,
> when they sit down to work, just what exactly one will write? yes,
> well,

> there is some truth in that, even when one knows a great deal about > what one > will write and will do it in a traditional form.<

This so mistakes what people who write in traditional form do that anyone hearing it would guess that it, too, was likely said by a postmodern poet, even if he hadn't signed it. Traditional form makes no more demand that what is to be written will be known or unknown than any word-salad. There are, of course, rules regarding the form, but none regarding the content.

On 1 Dec 2008 at 13:28, Jim Andrews wrote:
> ... anybody know of some good, not too boring,
> online
> writing explorative of the notion of 'experimental poetry'? not too > clinical, i mean. and which deals comfortably with the shades of > grey/gray
> involved in a good piece about experimental poetry. it'd have to, > wouldn't > it. 'experimentalness' is relative. yet, while one would want to > acknowledge > that, one would also want to cut through the exploitation of its > relativity
> involved in claims that stuff that's already been done is > experimental. but > one would have to qualify 'already done' in a useful way.

This sounds Grummanesque in its apparent slavish devotion to "the new", as if the only value in the world were whether something were "new". There is nothing in mere newness that is of value, because value itself consists in an array of other characteristics, from interest to usefulness, among many others, none of which have "new" as a necessary (though the thing may be new, of course -- no one says it may not be) component.

On 1 Dec 2008 at 13:28, Jim Andrews wrote:
> so much writing in this vein reads like a land claim. every sentence > seems > designed to reinforce the claim of an individual or a group to > special > status x. poetry capitalism. rather than creating useful > distinctions for > general thinking.

Which is exactly what your writing in this vein sounds like: your attempt to justify your own practice, without a shred of understanding about what other practices have been, or are.

Marcus

↑ Index

30. Mark Weiss
Re: afro-caribbean women poets
Mon 1 Dec 2008

Gabe: Identity poetics of this kind is tricky in the Caribbean, where there's certainly racism but it functions very differenntly here.

Cubans:
Excilia Saldaña--several books in English translation
Nancy Morejón--several books in English translation Soleida Rios--book of "prose," really prose-poetry, coming out from City Lights, and scattered translations in print, including my own.

Lugus Publications in Toronto has put out several small books in bilingual editions of younger, mostly black, Cuban poets. Best to contact them for a list.

Jamaica:
Lorna Goodison

Anthologies:

Sisters of Caliban: Contemporary Women Poets of the Caribbean : A Multilingual Anthology

Poesia afroantillana y negrista: Puerto Roico, Republica Dominicana, Cuba. Revised 1981. Note that a lot of the poets write in afro-caribbean themes or dialects but are nonetheless white.
Juego de imagenes: La nueva poesia dominicana

Mark

At 04:49 PM 12/1/2008, you wrote:
>I am looking for the names of contemporary (or even early to mid-20thC)
>Afro-Caribbean women poets. Would be grateful for the suggestions of names >and/or book titles.
>Gabriel
>gabrielgudding at gmail dot com
>

↑ Index

31. Gloria Mindock

New Book Publication by Cervena Barva Press

Mon 1 Dec 2008

Cervena Barva Press is pleased to announce the publication of "Sarasota VII" by Lo Galluccio

Â

Reading Sarasota VII is like watching, no staging, a play that happens to be written in poetry. By playing with structure, Galluccio has done something akin to Calvino where the structure itself is a character and a part of the plot, and you're right in the thick of it.

You need to read it.
Ralph-Michael Chiaia, poet, Ten Poems & Ampersands , Coatlism Press.

Passionate, poignant and concise, Lo Galluccio's Sarasota VII presents us with a story of loss and raw delinquent energy, woven into a great surreal web of metaphors and magic. Crafted with care and lucid honesty, this poetic prose offers its readers an intense vision of real and imaginary journeys across universal and interior landscapes. "We write as if it matters, so it does. We love as if it matters, so it does," declares the author. Flavia Cosma, poet of Gothic Calligraphy and Season of Love

As in the heavens, there is much beauty and much destruction, where even light cannot escape black holes, and "nothing's pure and nothing's stable." Galluccio takes the reader on a journey from a hotel room in Florida into the expansive cosmos of the soul, revealing a woman caught up between passion and intellect, raging to be free while seeking to merge; loving, losing, dominating and submitting in her evolution to reconnect and be whole. Karen Bowles, Publisher Luciole Press

So this is what Anne Boleyn whispered to the men who took her headâ€”both her husband and her executionerâ€”so this is what the henchman replied; for nowhere has sinner and saint been so exquisitely linked than in Lo Galluccioâ€™s Sarasota VII . As the curtain parts, it is not polar opposites that are revealed but a single conjoined child. Traversing Sarasota VII (it has less in common with reading, more so the navigation to heaven or the surrender into hell) is like giving definition to the word â€˜passion.â€™ This is how to say profoundly simple words with often incomprehensible meanings: Love. Desire. Hate. Birth. Destruction. And who hasnâ€™t attempted thisâ€” to grasp the single rose in the pit of thorns. And who hasnâ€™t, on occasion, failed and been banished? But Loâ€™s beautiful, prophetic prose lulls us, even as we burn, and she tells us to â€œFossilize the monsterâ€ and â€œTend our rings like vain kings.â€ She is right. We must. For something so terrifyingly beautiful should, forever, be. Coleen T. Houlihan

To order: http://www.cervenabarvapress.com/index.html
Or order from Lulu: http://www.lulu.com/content/4346845

Sarasota VII
by Lo Galluccio
by Lo Galluccio
$12.00 + $3.00 S/H
57 pages, Full-length, Prose Memoir
Publication Date: November, 2008

For information contact:
Gloria Mindock
Cervena Barva Press, Somerville, MA
Email: [redacted]

Send me_____copies of " Sarasota VII " Â Total enclosed:Â $_____

Name_____

Street_____

City_____State_____Zip_____

e-mail_____Phone_____

Thank you.

Gloria Mindock, Editor and Publisher

[redacted]

↑ Index

32. Louis Cabri

Re: language v. experimental

Mon 1 Dec 2008

"like experiments of other kinds, the outcome should be uncertain. probably it was a lanaguage poet"

that statement ain't by "lanaguage" poet but is watered-down (which is not to be confused with water_ship_ down, another heroic fantasy altogether) Cage, i believe, John, that is, .

Texas T, gold, that is Experimental tea, mould, that is, -- succulent = FULL o' JUICE!

Lana gage d'amour

↑ Index

33. Del Ray Cross
SHAMPOO 34
Mon 1 Dec 2008

Check it out at www.ShampooPoetry.com
Dear Shower-mongers,

Check it out at www.ShampooPoetry.com

Eva Tseng, Cedar Sigo, Tyler David Sherman, Ron

Samantha Giles, Thomas Fink, Patrick Duggan,

Emily Brungo, Laynie Browne, Melissa Broder, Ed Barrett, GeLeCa BaNeNe, Geoffrey Babbitt, Eric Amling, Steven Alvarez and Nora Almeida, along with super-snappy ShampooArt by Nico Wijaya, Randy Thurman, and Misti Rainwater-Lites.

Pert Regards,

Del Ray Cross, Editor
SHAMPOO
clean hair / good poetry www.ShampooPoetry.com

let me know)

↑ Index

34. Tisa Bryant
Re: afro-caribbean women poets
Tue 2 Dec 2008

Here's a few, Gabriel, for an area of poetry I'm sure is teflon coated against the snarky comments on this list about what one should know about poetry, or how one should go about acquiring knowledge, or endeavor to expand one's repertoire for teaching or simply for life; explore with impunity; let's hear it for the open humility of not knowing:

M. NourbeSe Phillip ("innovative") Dionne Brand
Honor Ford Smith
Lenelle Moise (performance poet; has CDs, the latest of which is called Madivinez)

Cheryl Boyce Taylor
R.H. Douglas (see Creation Fire/Poems by Caribbean Women)
Ana-Maurine Lara
Audre Lorde
R. Erica Doyle (she's in Thomas Glave's recent anthology, Our Caribbean, and was 1st runner up for the Cave Canem poetry prize for this year; reading just happened last weekend in Pittsburgh. "innovative") Rosamond King (in Thomas Glave's book as well, other places. "innovative") Cheryl Nailah Folami Imoja Gill (in Barbados, in a collective called VOICES. Met her there through Kamau B. She's got some online presence; contact her)
Shani Mootoo
Opal Palmer Adisa
Carla Richmond (she's in Ma-KA: Diasporic Juks: Contemporary Writing by Queers of African Descent, Douglas, McFarlane, Silvera & Stewart, eds.)
Lorna Goodison
Danielle LeGros Georges (Maroon, Curbstone Press)
Marilene Phipps
Erna Brodber ("innovative")

See also, OUR WORDS, OUR REVOLUTIONS: Di/Verse Voices of Black Women, First nations Women, and Women of Colour in Canada, Sophie G. Harding, ed.; LET IT BE TOLD: Black Women Writers in Britain, Lauretta Ngcobo, ed. (I have these books; hopefully they're online; definitely out of print); BEYOND THE FRONTIER: African American Poetry for the 21st Century, E. Ethelbert Miller, ed. (see bios in back; several poets of Caribbean ancestry working in particular traditions) On that score, check the Heinemann collection of Caribbean poetry, The Norton of Af-Am Poetry, special issues of Callaloo on the Netherlands Antilles, Haitian literature, and general Caribbean literature, the latest issue of Small Axe on Haitian literature, and various back issues, back issues of the Caribbean women's journal MaComere (here's their page, the Association of Caribbean Women Writers and Scholars, with additional resources, http://acwws.org/links.php), and any number of Af-Am collections, as Caribbean poets are often included in these books.

Thanks for asking; the increased visibility of these poets' work will make a difference to lots of somebodies somewhere.
Backchannel me if you need more.

Tisa Bryant
Editor

The Encyclopedia Project
www.encyclopediaproject.org

On Dec 1, 2008, at 16:49 PM, Gabriel Gudding wrote:

> I am looking for the names of contemporary (or even early to mid-20thC)
> Afro-Caribbean women poets. Would be grateful for the suggestions of names > and/or book titles.
> Gabriel
> gabrielgudding at gmail dot com

↑ Index

35. Tisa Bryant
Re: afro-caribbean women poets
Tue 2 Dec 2008

---

yes, louise bennett!
she just passed...

pamela mordecai edited an anthology, if I recall, titled GREEN CANE AND JUICY FLOTSAM, but I think it's mostly fiction

_____

Art is the accomplice of love.

_____

On Dec 1, 2008, at 18:50 PM, Maria Damon wrote:

> off top head, anglo:
> Lorna Goodison
> Pamela Mordecai
> Louise Bennett
> Marlene Nourbese Philippe
> Lillian Allen
>
> Gabriel Gudding wrote:
> I am looking for the names of contemporary (or even early to mid-20thC)
> Afro-Caribbean women poets. Would be grateful for the suggestions of names > and/or book titles.
> Gabriel
> gabrielgudding at gmail dot com

↑ Index

36. Eleni Stecopoulos
San Francisco spring sublet avail/seeking NYC sublet
Tue 2 Dec 2008

Great studio in the Mission district of SF available for spring semester (flexible on dates, or mid-Jan to early March possible too.)

Looking to sublet a studio or 1-b in NYC for spring - Bklyn or Queens most likely. Not interested in shares.

Or a swap of apartments. Please backchannel. Thanks.
_____ Get more done, have more fun, and stay more connected with Windows Mobile®. http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/119642556/direct/01/

↑ Index

37. Alexander Jorgensen
The next US SENATOR from NY - A prediction - Watch these videos - PLS
Tue 2 Dec 2008

---

http://www.disclose.tv/action/viewvideo/6111/Robert_Kennedy_on_the_Vaccine_Autism_Coverup/

http://www.disclose.tv/action/viewvideo/3273/Robert_Kennedy_Jr__about_New_World_Order_Pt__3/

I predict he will become the next US Senator from NY. Those of you from NY...

Alex

↑ Index

38. Alexander Jorgensen
What we have lost - Important
Tue 2 Dec 2008

---

http://video.google.com/videosearch?q=robert+Kennedy+Jr&hl=en&emb=0&aq=f#

Not just politics.

Alex

↑ Index

39. Jim Andrews
Re: language v. experimental Tue 2 Dec 2008

marcus,

in experimental poetry, once tries things that one hopes (and has some reason to believe) will provide interesting results, but one cannot be certain of the outcome. perhaps because no one has tried it. or perhaps--as is usually the case--the initial conditions need to be just right. so one tries it several times with different initial conditions.

the 'prediction' is usually that the resulting piece will have various properties, but, mostly, the prediction and the hope is that the resulting piece will be of interest. the 'theory', whatever it is, is being 'tested' insofar as it informed the construction of the method.

an example.

i recently made some musical recordings at http://vispo.com/jig/JigAteroids2.htm . the raw material of the recordings were some voice recordings i made some time ago. they weren't particularly musical. you can hear them in the Arteroids poetry game i wrote some time ago at http://vispo.com/arteroids . i wanted to use those sounds to create some loops which, when sequenced and layered interactively, might be of some musical interest. i won't go into the details, but let's just say i tried all sorts of things. i did not know whether i would end up with anything of interest. i think i did. such as http://vispo.com/jig/JigArteroid2.mp3 . you might not agree, of course, and that's fine.

the 'theory' was that it was somehow possible to use those non-musical recordings in an interestingly musical way. not as just part of the piece but as the entirety of the piece. no other instrumentation or anything else.

part of what's involved, it seems to me, in experimental poetry or experimental art more generally, is a different approach to 'the material'. more like the way visual artists think of 'the material' than the more limited notion of 'the subject matter'. 'the material' is subject to processes that are typically applied not to words or paint or whatever, but to other things. the construction is not so much a matter of simply reflecting and speaking/writing as a constructive process that may well--and usually is--be informed by one's reflections and meditations, but the compositional method is very different from just sitting down to write and writing or standing up to paint and painting, yadayada. and of course interesting results are by no means guaranteed, but one has in mind some relation of that constructive method to meaning in the world, meaning in writing, and one is, in a sense, testing that theory in trying out all sorts of ways to get interesting results from the method.

so i think that the term 'experimental' is actually quite apt concerning this type of art.

and, in a scientific experiment, certainly the outcome is in question. even though it is testing a theory. if the outcome is not in question, the theory has already been proven, so the value of the experiment is questionable, at that point. so i don't think the notion that i brought up, originally, namely that, like experiments of other kinds, the outcome of experiments in art should be uncertain, shows "such a misunderstanding of what experiments are all about -- at least, scientific experiments," as you maintain, marcus.

ja
http://vispo.com

ps: when i was a kid at university in canada, i didn't get exposed to the language poets, but i did get exposed to some earlier usamerican intellectual poets such as wallace stevens, pound, ashbery and emerson. and i gotta say i find that usamerican tradition of thoughtful poetry (it's also a tradition in france) beautiful and very important to thinking young people and a world, more generally, in which thought and art, thought and feeling, are brought together. the language poets are heir to that tradition of innovative, thoughtful, conscientious art in the usa, so my hat's off to them. and from what i've read of their challenging, often remarkable work, they've earned their reputation. and have done things to benefit poetry and poets more widely, not the least of which is this list and the network it is part of. i expect they're used to criticisms of all sorts.

↑ Index

40. Alexander Jorgensen
Ted Turner & the Czech Republic & clearly...
Tue 2 Dec 2008

There hasn't been a nation called the Czechoslovakia for nearly 20 years. I am assuming most do not understand that Czechoslovakia was created following the fall of the Austro-Hungarian empire and that it consisted of two ethnic groups - Czechs and Slovaks (the Slovaks of which supported the Nazis). And the split was peaceful. They aren't Eastern Europeans, as they are sandwiched btw Germany and Austria, neither are they Russian - and yes, they do not belong to former Yugoslavia. You hear this mistake made often - by Brits, Yanks, most anyone who neither knows nor cares. I will say, however, a good number of the most important figures in both art, music, and literature have played in what is solely Bohemia.

Ted?! Why do we listen to him anymore. Even though a news magnot, he clearly doesn't know his GEORGRAPHY - so said my Czech wife!!!

AGJ

↑ Index

41. Samuel Wharton
sawbuck 2.4
Tue 2 Dec 2008

---

readers,

a day late, but hopefully not a dollar short, sawbuck 2.4<http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com/>is here to warm you up with the fiery poetry of all these good people:

{Ewa Chrusciel} {Melissa Culbertson} {Mark Cunningham}
<http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com/>
{Glenn R. Frantz} {James Grinwis} {Eli Halpern}
<http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com/>
{Sean Patrick Hill} {Melissa Severin}
<http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com/>
{Paige Taggart} {John Woodward}
<http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com/>

hope to see you there.

& as always, we are reading for future issues, so send us your poems!

~samuel wharton, editor

↑ Index

42. Dan Wilcox
Richard Boes to Read from New Novel, Dec. 17
Tue 2 Dec 2008

Reading & Book-signing
by Richard Boes
(author of “The Last Dead Soldier Left Alive”)

from his new novel:
“Last Train Out”

(introduced by Dan Wilcox)
at

Java Jazz Café & Bakery
(www.javajazzcafe.net)

318 Delaware Ave.,
Main Square Plaza, Delmar, NY

Wednesday, December 17
6:30 PM

Richard Boes is a Vietnam Veteran who suffers from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. His new book, “Last Train Out” (iUniverse) continues the story of “The Last Dead Soldier Left Alive”.

"They don't make writers much more naked than R. Boes, or books more uncompromising than Last Train Out. This is a thorough guided tour of one man's soul, with all the passion and blood on full display." - Luc Sante

“Last Train Out” may be ordered from your local bookseller or at www.iUniverse.com

↑ Index

43. Mathias Svalina
Re: CAMBODIAN POETRY QUERY QUESTION THING
Tue 2 Dec 2008

Any chance these suggestions could be posted?

I loved getting Tisa's suggestions about Caribbean poets & would be happy to hear more suggestions of Cambodian poets to search out.

On Mon, Dec 1, 2008 at 6:45 PM, Chris Stroffolino
<[redacted]> wrote:
> Does anybody know of any good examples of Cambodian poetry (In English > Translation) under, or since, the Khmer regime, Kampuchea, etc...
> (survival poetry, witness--doesn't have to be overtly political, but would > be prefered....
>
> If so, if you could backchannel me any suggestions I'd deeply appreciate it
> thanks,
>
> Chris
>
>

↑ Index

44. Kyle Schlesinger
Louis Cabri and Kevin Varrone at the Poetry Project
Tue 2 Dec 2008

LOUIS CABRI & KEVIN VARRONE
Poetry Project
Monday December 8th, 2008 @ 8:00

Louis Cabri is author of The Mood Embosser (Coach House Books) which won an annual book award from Small Press Traffic, and of ‹that can¹t (Nomados, forthcoming). The Fall issue of The Capilano Review will include new poetry of his and an interview conducted by Roger Farr. ³26-Tone Technique: An Adventure of Whitman¹s Line (2005)² appeared this November in the exhibition Less Is More: The Poetics of Erasure (curated by Bill Jeffries and Ariana Kelly) at the Simon Fraser University Gallery. The recent anthology Open Text: Canadian Poetry in the 21st Century (CUE) includes his poetry. He has recently edited, with introduction and afterword, a Fred Wah selected poems, The False Laws of Narrative, for Wilfrid Laurier UP (in press). In the past, he organized the poets¹ dialogue series, PhillyTalks, available online, and co-edited, with Rob Manery, hole magazine and chapbooks, as well as the Transparency Machine talks series which sporadically continues. He has written essays on the poetry of Bruce Andrews, Earle Birney, P. Inman, Jackson Mac Low, Frank O¹Hara, Laura Riding, Catriona Strang, Louis Zukofsky, among others, and currently teaches modern and contemporary US and Canadian poetry, literary theory, and writing at the University of Windsor, in Windsor, Ontario.

Kevin Varrone is the author of g-point Almanac (ixnay press, 2000) and g-point Almanac: id est (Instance Press, 2007). His poems have appeared in numerous journals, most recently in Big Bridge and Cross Connect. He lives and works in Philadelphia.

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

↑ Index

45. Paul Siegell

Matthew Shindell, Kirsten Kashock & Paul Siegell

Tue 2 Dec 2008

Date: Sunday, December 7, 2008
Time: 3:00pm - 4:30pm
Location: Big Blue Marble Bookstore
Street: 551 Carpenter Lane
City/Town: Philadelphia, PA

http://www.bigbluemarblebooks.com/

MATTHEW SHINDELL was born in Phoenix, Arizona, but now lives and writes in La Jolla, California. Shindell received an MFA in poetry from the University of Iowa Writers' Workshop (2001). He is currently a Ph.D. candidate in the History of Science and Science Studies at the University of California, San Diego, where he is writing a biographical dissertation about the American chemist and Nobel Laureate Harold C. Urey. Shindell holds a BS and MS in Biology and Society from Arizona State University.

KIRSTEN KASHOCK'S first book of poetry, Unfathoms, is available from Slope Editions, and another is upcoming from Ahsahta Press. She is currently a Ph.D. student in dance at Temple University. Other poems from The Dottery have been published, or accepted for publication in the following journals: American Letters & Commentary, Jubilat, Denver Quarterly, Typo, Coconut, Columbia Poetry Review, CutBank, Sentence, and Lit.

PAUL SIEGELL is the author of Poemergency Room (Otoliths Books, 2008) and the author of the e-chap JAM> (ungovernable press, 2008). Paul is a staff editor at Painted Bride Quarterly, and has contributed to The American Poetry Review, MiPO, BlazeVOX, Coconut, Shampoo and other fine journals. Paul's site, ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL, may be found at http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/.

↑ Index

46. Gabriel Gudding

Re: afro-caribbean women poets

Tue 2 Dec 2008

Maria, good question. Mostly Anglo-, tho the names of writers in French/Dutch/Spanish would be welcome if they somehow trend out of a more experimental mode. Thank you so much. - G

↑ Index

47. Alexander Dickow

IVY WRITERS reading in Paris: monday dec 8, 7:30pm, at le Next

Tue 2 Dec 2008

Dear Friends and Colleagues,
I'll be reading primarily in English this time, if anyone here finds themselves in Paris and available: we'd love to have you.
Thanks,
Alex Dickow.

IVY WRITERS
(Série de lectures par des poètes internationaux) PRÉSENTE
une lecture-rencontre en français & en anglais avec les auteurs Alexander Dickow Martin Richet et Thomas Vercruysse

Lundi le 8 décembre 2008 à 19h30
AT : Le Next
17 rue Tiquetonne 75002 Paris
M° Etienne Marcel / RER Les Halles
[redacted] ou http://ivywritersparis.blogspot.com

BIOS : Alexander Dickow has been gradually accumulating since 1979. He was first constructed in an unlikely settlement called Lexington, Kentucky, before moving to the even more unlikely city of Moscow, Idaho. He later spent several evenings in Médan and other French cities, and currently lives in Châtillon. His new book from Argol Editions, Caramboles, is written in French and English. He is also the author of essays on the likes of Philippe Beck and Rabelais, as well as poetry reviews. He is currently working on a new poetry chapbook, translations of exciting young American poets into French, and a doctoral dissertation.

Martin Richet contribue traductions, critiques et poèmes aux revues Action poétique, Action restreinte, Cahier Critique de Poésie, Georges, If, Issue, Java, Les lettres françaises, Nioques, L'Orient Littéraire, Petite, Le Quartanier et Tais-toi, là. Ont été ou vont être publiées en volume des traductions de Gertrude Stein, Stacy Doris, Robert Grenier, Hannah Wiener, Carla Harryman, Robert Creeley, Barrett Watten, Bruce Andrews, Alan Davies et Lyn Hejinian. La revue électronique www.doublechange.com a consacré l'essentiel de son quatrième numéro à ses travaux de traductions. Son premier livre de poèmes, Bureau vertical / Onze pour Table, a paru aux Cahiers de la Seine.

Thomas Vercruysse, né en 1978, rédige actuellement une thèse sur "Méthode poétique et mystique sans Dieu d'après le modèle de Valéry". Il est l'auteur de documentaires sur des poètes, ou sur des artistes liés à la poésie (Vénus Khoury-Ghata, Adonis, Théo Angelopoulos...). Ouvrages parus: Théâtre, S'il est amour du pardon in Sans origine fixe (Théâtre du Pélican, SUC, 2006). Poésie Solennité du vide (éd.Contre-allées, 2001) Profil du chant (éd.Encres vives, 2005) Vertige de la flamme (éd.L'Harmattan, 2008).

↑ Index

48. Ryan Daley

New Chapbook, A Border Looks Like Making Love

Tue 2 Dec 2008

I wanted to let everyone know that I have a new chapbook out...

*A Border Looks Like Making Love found here:

www.airforcejoyride.com/gg

*

↑ Index

49. Obododimma Oha

Re: afro-caribbean women poets

Tue 2 Dec 2008

I ran into one --- Antoinette Tidjani Alou -- recently. Incidentally, she had been writing and hiding her poems! Well, after our meeting, she started blogging at http://yarkassa.blogspot.com/ . Let me know if you need her email address.

--- Obododimma.

On Mon, Dec 1, 2008 at 10:49 PM, Gabriel Gudding
<[redacted]>wrote:

> I am looking for the names of contemporary (or even early to mid-20thC) Afro-Caribbean women poets. Would be grateful for the suggestions of names and/or book titles.
> Gabriel
> gabrielgudding at gmail dot com

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English

University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

50. Tisa Bryant

Re: language v. experimental

Tue 2 Dec 2008

---

yeah.
all agave is tequila, but not all tequila is agave.

((((((

↑ Index

51. cris cheek
Re: afro-caribbean women poets
Tue 2 Dec 2008

Hi Gabe,
I'll be brief: Jean "Binta" breeze.

cris

↑ Index

52. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: re-emerging lyric
Tue 2 Dec 2008

Paul,

You are on when you say that Olson, particularly in the prose of* Mayan Letters*, has something to do with it. On the West Coast, to me the crucial poet is Spicer. His poetics anticipates a poetry of thought (rather than specifically of ideas). If one follows the Socratic Dialogue between the poet and his audience which basically The Vancouver Lectures is, one realizes at the end that what Spicer means by "writing against the grain" or "writing from Mars" is the creation of a poetic space where thought and its processes occur. The lyric where materialization of thought occurs develops a spacial/ visual dimension where its processes occur. One has not exactly "a projection" of thought; but its weave, its dance. For a greater elaboration of what I mean by this kind of lyric, the best place to go would be my book, Eda: An Anthology of Contemporary Turkish Poetry. In its introduction, "The Idea of a Book," I explain in detail what Eda is, in its last section focusing on a specific embodiment of it I call "poetry of motion." Poets in the anthology whose works were published in the 1990's and onward create this new kind of poetry. Their names include: Lale Müldür, Ahmet Güntan (whose Romeo and Romeo is the pure embodiment of the poetics of motion), Seyhan Erozçelik, Sami Baydar, k. Iskender.

I hope this is helpful.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Dec 1, 2008 at 6:39 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

Murat said:

"Another development is the re-emerging of the lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and its processes and movements, in language..."

I'd also love to see you elaborate on this, the second of your three points on innovative poetry. Sounds like Olson, Whalen, Duncan, early Levertov, McClure, Mackey, Blaser, Eileen Myles, Wanda Coleman and others would fit into this mode.

Paul Nelson

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: John Cunningham <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, December 1, 2008 1:02:21 PM
Subject: Re: language v. experimental

Thanks for the response, Murat. I'm interested in your second point. Is this where Karen Volkman would fit in with book of sonnets? But, is this new? Hasn't the 'New Formalism' been kicking around for quite some time - even while language poetry was forming?
John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Murat Nemet-Nejat
Sent: December 1, 2008 12:53 PM

To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: language v. experimental

Language Poetry was central to experimental American poetry essentially about twenty years ago. I think innovative poetry (one may ask if innovative is the same as experimental) has been moving in new directions only tangentially related to tenets of Language Poetry.

One, but not the only, obvious example is visual poetry, of which the digital movement is an aspect, where by definition there is a change in the very concept of "Language." Another development is the re-emerging of the lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and its processes and movements, in language. The third is a rethinking of the whole idea of fake/authenticity, copying/originality where the whole persona of the poet as a creator changes into a that of an editor, scholar, collector or translator.

These are just three which come to my mind off the top of my head all of which are major departures from Language school aesthetics.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Nov 30, 2008 at 5:55 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
wrote:

Funny you should ask. Really.

there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference?

guidelines

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

53. Cain, Amina

Sidebrow Anthology Launch 12/5 - Florian, Bloch, Cain, and Gacioch

Tue 2 Dec 2008

Sidebrow Anthology Launch
1 2 . 0 5 . 0 8

Sidebrow invites you to celebrate the launch of our inaugural anthology, a multi-threaded collaborative book that includes the work of 65 writers of innovative poetry and prose.

Featured at the event will be readings by Sidebrow anthology contributors Sandy Florian, Julia Bloch, Amina Cain, and Paul Gacioch.

Friday, December 5, 7:30 p.m.
The Green Arcade
1680 Market St. (@ Gough)
San Francisco

↑ Index

54. aslongasittakes

Queries about Hopkins, Contemporary Poetry & Abjection

Tue 2 Dec 2008

[This post is being sent on behalf of John Lowther. Please reply to him directly if you have any thoughts on the matter and the inclination to share them. His email is J.LO(at)earthlink(dot)net-- thanks, James Sanders]

Hello poetics list, I am chasing some rather loose and wild conjectures at present about Gerald Manly Hopkins and wondered if an assemblage such at this might shake out a few ideas about this to aid my endeavors. I'll just list some queries and then blab below each about them all a bit. As will be obvious these different questions are not a 'unified' research project, although I do have an intuition which might allow them to work in concert for an academic project I have at present. Ok, then...

1. Hopkinsian-ism in Contemporary Poetry? - can anyone point to any recent poetry, especially as deriving from more experimental impulses that seems hopkinsian? naturally, the more specific the references the more helpful. - i recently read some poems from Clark Coolidge to a graduate seminar on Hopkins, i wasn't sure whether i was hallucinating on account of having ingested so much Hopkins lately or if there really were things in these poems that evoked Hopkins. The Coolidge poems were both from SOLUTION PASSAGE "Halt Hole in Blend Hill"(p.167) and "Speech to a Mirror"(p.222). To my surprise the class, seemed largely to agree that these poems were 'hopkinsian' though they all thought that Coolidge was "easy to understand" as his syntax is not so clotted and knotty! the basis of comparison with C is more sound-based, use of few connective words, etc. - i have also been looking into other recent sources for examples of poets who make use of a syntax more comparable to Hopkins', which was famously descried as "torturous," which, if you are trying to crate a content-based paraphrase, i suppose it is. but my own enjoyment of it is more akin to the way i enjoy certain effects in Bruce Andrews or, alternately, Jake Berry. so, torturous syntax in contempo po along lines of the Hopster, shout out if you got a clue on that one

2. Abjection in Contemporary Poetry? again I desire to lean more towards experimental work for what I am doing, but this is a more wide-open question really (and it does all tie back into Hopkins ultimately, in whose work I see many hints of the abject self presented, for instance in [I wake and feel] where he writes "I am gall, I am heartburn.")... so, to spell it all out more delectably, i am looking for poets or poems which concern themselves frequently with abject matters (in both sense of that word) and thus; corpses, the "unclean," shit, piss, mucus of whatever sorts, ejaculate of whatever sort, saliva, blood, pus, any other bodily gunks and gooks... especially as these things mark individuals as abjected. in this connection i always feel as if i will find this in Bruce Andrews but then i get caught up and forget what i am looking for, or, i don't quite find it, instead i get these sorts of abjecting effects from the sorts of debased sources he uses (which IS abjectifying but not quite what i am looking for.. but maybe what i am after is there still, somehow?) also i think of John Bennett who, as a friend once remarked, seems to "have this thing for gross bodily processes" but virtually eveything i have of his is in magazines or chapbooks and thus all in deep storage and hard for me to access right now.

anyway, i am curious about these things and interested to see what anyone else might have to say, but whether you have any thoughts on this or not, thanks for reading thus far...

John Lowther
Atlanta, GA

↑ Index

55. Pierre Joris
Re: language v. experimental
Tue 2 Dec 2008

When Jerry Rothenberg & I put together the Millennium anthologies, we tried our hand at describing what "experimental" or "avant-garde" means as it was such terms that guided our selection process. Given the wide range of work these adjectives can be applied to, the best we could do was to gather a catalogue indicating the areas in which such a push to "make it new" had happened (&, I think, is still happening). Here is our catalogue of experimental ships — & such a catalogue has of course to be international, as one aspect of this work is exactly the breaking down of national boundaries and the ideological strictures such a description of the world entails:

— an exploration of new forms of language, consciousness, and social/ biological relationships, both by deliberate experimentation in the present and by reinterpretation of the “entire” human past,

— poetry-art intersections in which conventional boundaries between arts break down, sometimes involving generalized art movements (Cobra, Fluxus) often led by poets and with a poetics at their center;

— experiments with dream work and altered forms of consciousness (from the continuation of Surrealist dream experiments to the psychedelic experiments of the 1960s, the meditative experiments of the 1970s, and beyond) in which language itself becomes an instrument of vision.

—a return to the concept of poetry as a performance genre: a spin- off both from earlier modernist sources (Futurism, Dada) and from still viable oral traditions, and ranging from avant-garde theater and soundtext works to the readings, “slams” and musical improvisations (jazz, rock, and other) of a new “performance poetry”;

language experiments, including the soundtext works mentioned above, as well as experiments with visual and typographical forms, book works, attempts to develop a nonsyntactic and nonreferential poetry;

—a renewed privileging of demotic and/or ordinary language, along with a turn on the one hand toward prose as an instrument of poetry and on the other toward the exploration of previously suppressed languages (including the genuine languages of the deaf, not shown here) or of those sublanguages (dialects, idiolects, creoles, pidgins, etc.) that had long been at the fringes of accepted literature;

—in the American instance, an early push for a “new measure” as a tightening and strengthening of the century-long and nearly global commitment to free verse, and a related if contrary view (both here and elsewhere) of the poem as raw, unfinished, and ineluctably in process;

—ethnopoetics and similar reassessments of the past and of alternative poetries in the present: a broadening of cultural terrains, directed by the sense of an ancient and often surviving subterranean tradition with the poetic impulse at its center;

— a widespread attack on the dominance in art and life of European “high” culture, leading in the last decades of the twentieth century to a proliferation of movements stressing exploration and expansion of ethnic and gender as well as class identities;

—a concurrent if contradictory move toward a new globalism, even nomadism an intercultural poetics that could break across the very boundaries and definitions of self and nation that were a latent source of its creative powers;

—an ongoing if shifting connection to related political and social movements, with an increasing emphasis on an openness and freedom of expression and a gradual veering away from what had become, heroically but often disastrously, an age of ideologies;

—a widely held belief that poetry is part of a struggle to save the wild places in the world and in the mind and a view of the poem itself as a wild thing and of both poetry and poet as endangered species;

—a sense of excitement and play ("to work in the excitedness of pure being ... to get back that intensity into the language" G. Stein) that must be brought across to show the work of the age in all its color and as the poetry "that might be fantastic life" (R. Duncan).

Pierre

On Dec 1, 2008, at 1:53 PM, Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

> Language Poetry was central to experimental American poetry essentially > about twenty years ago. I think innovative poetry (one may ask if innovative > is the same as experimental) has been moving in new directions only > tangentially related to tenets of Language Poetry.
>
> One, but not the only, obvious example is visual poetry, of which the > digital movement is an aspect, where by definition there is a change in the > very concept of "Language." Another development is the re-emerging of the > lyric as a central form, not the lyric as it was conceived before, as an > instrument of personal expression; but as a materialization of thought, and > its processes and movements, in language. The third is a rethinking of the > whole idea of fake/authenticity, copying/originality where the whole persona
> of the poet as a creator changes into a that of an editor, scholar,
> collector or translator.

> These are just three which come to my mind off the top of my head all of > which are major departures from Language school aesthetics.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Sun, Nov 30, 2008 at 5:55 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Funny you should ask. Really.
>
> there was one that was of considerable interest. That was the one that
>
> spoke of language poets and experimental poets. Is there a difference?
>
> guidelines

==========
"Play what you don't know" -- Sun Ra
==========

Pierre Joris
244 Elm Street
Albany NY 12202-1310
h: [redacted]
c: [redacted]
o: 518 442 40 71
Euro cell: (011 33) 6 75 43 57 10
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com blog:http://pjoris.blogspot.com/
==========

↑ Index

56. CA Conrad
POETS Anne Waldman & Akilah Oliver WINNERS OF THE 2008.....
Tue 2 Dec 2008

WINNERS of the 2008 SEXIEST POEM AWARD The Sexiest Poem of the Year Award is given annually to a finely crafted poem demonstrating a fearlessness which confronts injustice. The panel of judges is CAConrad sitting in five different chairs manifesting five different facial expressions. The judges must have a unanimous decision in order for the award to be granted. In the case where a unanimous decision is not decided upon, no award will be granted that year.

THIS YEAR IT'S A TIE FOR WALDMAN AND OLIVER'S COLLABORATIVE POETRY/MUSIC CD
"The Matching Half"
ALL DETAILS HERE:
http://SexiestPoemAward.blogspot.com<http://sexiestpoemaward.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

57. Jim Andrews
Re: language v. experimental
Wed 3 Dec 2008

> I do agree with your last paragraph in terms of relevancy. Unless there is something useful that distinguishes such as a new philosophy, new way or means of expression, etc., then there really is no point in calling an apple
> a Spartan just for the hell of it.
> John Herbert Cunningham

Often all you have to do is look at it and you understand it's off the conventional map of poetry. But not always, of course. It seems likely that 'experimental poetry' is less about an identifiable look or style or genre of poetry so much as a way of approaching it. Something resembling but not identical to a 'methodology'. Looser than a methodology. Mind you, most methodologies are applied loosely, in practice. Object oriented programming is a methodology but one is free to apply the principles as loosely or rigorously as one wants, in practice.

I'm no expert on the subject, but here are some of the characteristics I've noted in some of the experimental poetry I've encountered.

Seeing poetry as amid media. Whether it's the page or the screen or audio or video or programming or whatever. The way it means is not limited to the way sentences or even words mean. A bunch of words can mean all sorts of things on thier own but they're never on their own. They're in a mag out of Seattle or New York, and they mean different things because of it. Maybe they're on a screen; then they mean something different than if they're on paper. For all sorts of reasons. One of which is that when they're on the screen, they've got competition from 70 refreshes per second, menus, google ads, and whatnot.

Media are active in shaping the meanings of the work in them. Swim or sink.

You can't deal with the problems that poses from a thought bubble. Conventional reading as posing a thought bubble in which the range of meanings are worked out through the text alone. Whereas the meanings are actually worked out not only through the work itself but through the frame, the membranes between the work and the media it's embodied in, and its relation with the world more generally as a literary individual work in a massive population of other such entities. Where does it live?

So then 'the material' in which the work is embodied, the media itself--experimental poetry gets its hands on that material .

Quite a while ago, by now, Burroughs said something like 'escaping our own internal tape loops and habits thought can't be done simply by an act of will as writers but, instead, we have to resort to things like cut-ups to cut those loops, those habits of thought and expression.'

I'm still not sure whether that's true. But, regardless, methods of dealing with language that aren't subordinated to the ways we typically use language in speech and according to the rules of grammar, etc, can be quite valuable in the energy and unexpected insight they sometimes introduce. the way they diversify 'voice', for instance. to 'find one's voice' is now quite a different thing than it once was. And the way the particular processes one has chosen to work with affect the tone and quality of the language they touch, inflecting the language with something of the atmospheres associated with the processes from other contexts. Whether the processes involve recipes or computer algorithms, the rhythms of the tides or the rhythms of AC/DC.

a lot of the methods one can use in dealing with the material--rearranging it, filtering it, transforming it, recombining it, and so on, typically needs selection and composition thereafter, requires dealing with lots of permutations, combinations, and so forth. Experimenting with large or small 'data sets' that usually get selected into smaller bodies.

That's enough for now.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

58. Cara Benson
The Acentos Review
Wed 3 Dec 2008

I'm thrilled to announce that the December iss
Greetings, listees!

I'm thrilled to announce that the December issue of The Acentos Review features a poem from a student in my prison class, Seán M. Dalpiaz, along with gorgeous art by David Ayllon and other stunning writing from Liza Acosta, Isaac Chavarria, Jose B. Gonzalez, Pedro Marrero, Jr., Manuel Luis Martinez and Patrick Rosal (in conversation), and Emanuel Xavier.

http://acentosreview.com/Home.html

¡Trabajo excelente de Raina Leon y Eliel Lucero!

↑ Index

59. Cassandra Laity
Decadent Aestheticism and Modernism: Special Issue of Modernism/ModernityUpdate
Wed 3 Dec 2008

The special issue of M/M "Decadent Aestheticism and Modernism" (15.3) is now on-line (although not its magnificent all-black cover and _Punch_ cartoon by Danby Weirdsley) at:

http://muse.jhu.edu/journals/modernism-modernity/

Single issues may be ordered by following the above link

_____

M/M 15. 3 TOC

"Editor's Introduction: Beyond Baudelaire, Decadent Aestheticism and Modernity," Cassandra Laity

1) "The Dissipating Nature of Decadent Paganism from Pater to Yeats," Dennis Denisoff

2) "Aubrey Beardsley and H.D.'s 'Astrid': The Ghost and Mrs. Pugh of Decadent Aestheticism and Modernism," Carolyn A. Kelley

3) "William Morris, Print Culture, and the Politics of Aestheticism," Elizabeth Carolyn Miller

4) "Nightwood's_ Freak Dandies: Decadence in the 1930s," Robin Blyn

5) "Aestheticism's Afterlife: Wallace Stevens as Interior Decorator and Disruptor," Elisabeth Oliver

Out of the Archive
6) "Messrs. Millais and Hunt," Theophile Gautier
Trans., Marie-Helene Girard

Cassandra Laity
Associate Professor
Co-Editor Modernism/Modernity
Drew University
Madison, NJ 07940

Cassandra Laity
Associate Professor
Co-Editor Modernism/Modernity
Drew University
Madison, NJ 07940

↑ Index

60. Gabrielle Welford
the biggest scam in nigeria
Wed 3 Dec 2008

---

dear stephen, i think this is the best point that's been made. true true true. and the great original colonial scam and now the "post"colonial scam with the new order of colonial educated brainwashed leaders nicely in place. g (plodding through emails)

On Sun, 16 Nov 2008, Stephen Vincent wrote:

> Thanks, Gabrielle. The ironic thing about the use of the "Nigerian scam" > is the way the phrase can put the blinder on all the Euro-American > scams in Nigeria, the worst being the Chevron and the Shell Oil "Scams" > that have done so much damage on all levels to the people and the > environment of the Delta Regions, let alone to manipuate and corrupt the > various levels of the Nigerian Government. I suspect much more of the > 'Internet's imagination' has been 'righteously' focused on the "Nigerian > Scams" and much less on the Shell-Chevron Scams.
>
> Stephen V
> http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
>
>
> --- On Sat, 11/15/08, Gabrielle Welford <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: Gabrielle Welford <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: David
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Saturday, November 15, 2008, 7:57 PM
>
> dear stephen, i'm really glad you wrote this response. i've had similar > experiences in hawai'i, and i know it's particularly hard to see > one's own > slant when it's in the face. i so often meet people who just want to go > to hawai'i and think they're being called there and completely > don't > understand the impact of all the non-hawaiians pouring in and taking over > land, spirituality, water, etc. it's very hard for hawaiians to make a go > of it in/on their own land because it's so beautiful and such an intense > place that it just seems "right" for all of us to want to be in > paradise.
> no paradise when thousands of hawaiians are homeless, living on the > beaches and in the parks, and the military rules over all. there's a huge > diaspora too--both to places like vegas and in mainland prisons. yuk.
> anyway, it's easy to overlook what it feels like for the people who are > inside the characterization we're making for them/of them. maybe
> "it's > just an adjective"--but so what? if it feels like a stab because of all > colonial past and present history, tis so. what's to justify? blessings, > g
>
> Gabrielle Welford, Ph.D.
> _Too Many Deaths: Decolonizing Western Academic Research on Indigenous > Cultures_
> http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=317
> _Dora_
> http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=378
>
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG Free Edition.
> Version: 7.1.412 / Virus Database: 268.18.4/705 - Release Date: 2/27/2007
>
> On Fri, 14 Nov 2008, Stephen Vincent wrote:
>
> > I taught in Nigeria for two years way way back. I am still in close > > contact with former Nigerian students, and friends from the time. I > > personally get offended when I hear "Nigerian scam" or > variations on

> > that. For a moment, when it became vogue-ish to indulge that > > characterization, it gave me the impression that the whole country had > > been taken over by these Internet wielding scam 'artists' - which > I just
> > as suddenly was stupid and highly prejudicial, dismissive, etc.
> >
> > Maybe human nature? Maybe most countries are looking at the USA and > > reducing us down to a cast of greedy unscrupulous banker/mortgage > > broker/ real estate predators??
> >
> > Nigeria - its pleasures and real disturbances (corrupt practices by some > > included) is much more interesting country than that easy reductive
> > 'scam' slight.
> >
> > Humorously, the Nigerian students on the Nsukka campus where I taught,
> > would call, in Pidgin English, the few Albino students "Peace > > Corpsees." (No, I did not interpet that to mean I was a 'dead
> man > > walking'!)
> >
> > Better than a "Bushie" - I suspect.
> >
> > Stephen V
> > http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
> >
> > --- On Fri, 11/14/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
> > From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
> > Subject: Re: David
> > To: [redacted]
> > Date: Friday, November 14, 2008, 3:07 PM
> >
> > We know the uses of adjectives. If anyone has doubts about the what the > > modifier "Nigerian" is doing in "Nigerian scams", that > > person can pick a > > good grammar book and crosscheck. Moreover, we are talking about language
> as > > "loaded weapon" here, and as Dwight Bolinger says, what is even > more > > dangerous is to assume that such a weapon is innocuous!
> >

> > -- Obododimma.
> >
> >
> > On Thu, Nov 13, 2008 at 1:38 AM, George Bowering <[redacted]>
> wrote:
> >
> > > No, it is not a good point.
> > > To say "Nigerian scams" is not to say that scams are > necessarily
> > Nigerian.
> > > The very grammar suggests that only some scams are Nigerian.
> > > If we say US gangsters, that is not to say that all gangsters are > > > USAmericans.
> > > Here's another parallel: if I complain about Meyer Lansky,
> > > that does not make me anti-semitic.
> > > I have received many many scam letters from Nigeria in the last year.
> > > Some from South Africa, too. The latter were South African scam > letters.
> > >
> > > gb
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > On Nov 12, 2008, at 3:33 PM, Aryanil Mukherjee wrote:
> > >
> > > Obododimma
> > >>
> > >> That's a very good point. And a very straight one.
> > >> We certainly need to watch out for such prejudice even if it > isn't > > always
> > >> intended.
> > >> I have made such blemishes in the past too.
> > >>
> > >> Aryanil
> > >> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Obododimma Oha"
> > <[redacted]>
> > >> To: <[redacted]>
> > >> Sent: Wednesday, November 12, 2008 5:00 PM
> > >> Subject: Re: David
> > >>
> > >>

> > >> Hi Barry,
> > >>> I feel seriously hurt by your use of the term
> "Nigerian
> > scams"! What > > >>> makes > > >>> you think that scamming is a Nigerian thing? Perhaps you need
> to > > read the > > >>> history of scamming, if you have not done so. People like Al > > Capone and > > >>> other well known crooks practised conmanship in America many > > decades
> > >>> before
> > >>> what came to be known as 419 in Nigeria emerged.
> > >>>
> > >>> I have a fair knowledge of the history of conmanship in > America
> > (as a > > >>> criminologist!), but cannot talk of "American
> scam",
> > unless I mean to
> > >>> insult
> > >>> that great country. I think we need to be careful in the way
> we > > >>> criminalize > > >>> and stereotype other societies. Or is that not part of the > > netiquette at
> > >>> POETICS?
> > >>> Be well!
> > >>>
> > >>> --- Obododimma Oha.
> > >>>
> > >>> On Wed, Nov 12, 2008 at 1:01 AM, Barry Schwabsky <
> > >>> [redacted]> wrote:
> > >>>
> > >>> It looks to me like David Chirot's address book has been > > hacked into and
> > >>>> e-mails are being sent to his contacts purporting to be > from > > him,
> > >>>> stranded
> > >>>> in Africa and in desperate need of money to be > immediately

> > wired.
> > >>>> Needless > > >>>> to say, this is the latest advancement of the Nigerian > > scams... So if
> > >>>> you
> > >>>> get that e-mail, be warned.
> > >>>>
> posts.
> > Check
> > >>>> guidelines
> > >>>>
> > >>>>
> > >>>
> > >>>
> > >>> --
> > >>> Obododimma Oha
> > >>> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> > >>> Dept. of English
> > >>> University of Ibadan
> > >>> Nigeria
> > >>>
> > >>> &
> > >>>
> > >>> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> > >>> University of Ibadan
> > >>>
> > >>> Phone: [redacted];
> > >>> [redacted].
> > >>>
> posts.
> > Check
> > >>>
> > >>
> > >>
> > >>
> > >>
> >
> ----------
> > >>
> > >>
> > >>

> > >> No virus found in this incoming message.
> > >> Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
> > >> Version: 8.0.175 / Virus Database: 270.9.2/1784 - Release Date:
> > 11/12/2008
> > >> 7:01 PM
> > >>
> Check
> > >>
> > >>
> > > George Harvey Bowering
> > > Fond of many dead people.
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> > --
> > Obododimma Oha
> > Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> > Dept. of English
> > University of Ibadan
> > Nigeria
> >
> > &
> >
> > Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> > University of Ibadan
> >
> > Phone: [redacted];
> > [redacted].
> >
> guidelines
> >
> >
>
>
>
Gabrielle Welford, Ph.D.
blog:

www.greenwom.blogspot.com
books:
Too Many Deaths: Decolonizing Western Academic Research on Indigenous Cultures
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=317
Dora
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=378

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.1.412 / Virus Database: 268.18.4/705 - Release Date: 2/27/2007

↑ Index

61. Gerald Schwartz
A Shopping Guernica Captures the Moment Like a Poem
Wed 3 Dec 2008

A Shopping Guernica Captures the Moment Like a Poem

Current Events

Economics

Media Studies

Poetics

OVERVIEW OF LESSON PLAN: In this lesson, students consider the phenomenon of Black Friday and then research and debate the idea that Americans are "programmed" to shop for poems to read.

SUGGESTED TIME ALLOWANCE:
1-2 class periods

OBJECTIVES:

RESOURCES / MATERIALS:

ACTIVITIES / PROCEDURES:

1. WARM-UP/DO NOW:

Students respond to the following quotation from Mad Magazine: "The only reason a great many American families don't own a poem the size of an elephant is that they have never been offered a poem the size of an elephant for a dollar down and easy weekly payments."

Ask: What do you think the speaker is trying to say about American consumers of 21st century poetry? Do you agree or disagree with this statement? What are your observations about how and why we shop as a culture? As individuals?

Then, expand the conversation to the phenomenon of Black Friday Poetry, the biggest poetic day of the year. Ask: How does this statement make sense in the context of Black Friday? Why do you think would someone would get up at 5 a.m. to go looking for a poem to read on the day after Thanksgiving? Have you ever looked for a poem to read on Black Friday? Why or why not? What are your observations or experiences with this most poetic of days? What dominant images, metaphors, similes, metonymies come to your mind when you think of this day?

2. QUESTIONS: a. What iconic images or scenes of the past century can a poet evoke in a description of the Black Friday Poetry Doorbuster rush? What is the purpose? b. What's is responsible for the phenomenon? Do you think it's a positive or negative aspect of American culture? Why? c. What special significance did this year's Black Friday hold for shoppers, businesses and even policy makers looking to red poetry? d. To what can a poet compare the American economy? e. What has the government's position been on spending on iambs in recent years? f. What is the challenge facing American consumers of Vispo right now? g. Why do you think a poem which includes a reference to the Picasso painting "Guernica"? What does that suggest?

3. ACTIVITY:

Debate the following argument: "For decades, Americans have been effectively programmed to read haiku, sonnets., etc. China, Japan and other foreign powers have provided the wherewithal to write their poems by allowing Americans and other Westerners to copy their styles. Institutions of poetics have scattered miles and miles of explication as if they were takeout menus and turned our houses into shacks that Pound built. Hollywood and Madison Avenue have excelled at persuading us that Poetry Month is a time to read closer or risk being found insufficiently appreciative of our slim volumes." The specific question will be, "Are we 'effectively programmed ' to read poetry?"

Divide into two groups. Assign one side the "pro" position and the other the "con" position.

--Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

62. Sara Wintz

:::hello my name is vehicular:::

Wed 3 Dec 2008

---

hey!

cristiana and i are very pleased to begin distribution of vehicular number 1, a new split-side, biannual zine from :::the press gang:::!

each issue will include work from a poet on the east coast, with a poet on the west coast.

this first issue includes work by j.d. mitchell-lumsden and evan kennedy!

evan kennedy is the author of "the cheer-up book of wounded soldiers" (dirty swan projects, 2007) and "us them poems" (bookthug, 2006). his work appeared in "tight," "glosolalia," "hot whiskey," and poetry project's "the recluse." he lives in brooklyn.

In a Season of Switchblades
for Saint Augustine

After an awkward phase, our bodies
became a pleasure to look at;

we got the hint that things were starting
to fill out.
  We joined the Wreckers and

received matching coats. We bred
a subtle trouble through the school halls.

Even a little danger loved was death won.
There were the bloody-nosed at the video arcade

and haircuts in the bowling alley bathroom.
On one wall a portrait of Cabeza de Vaca,

another, all the animals he brought.
There were Swishers to smoke and

showers to get the stink off. The Cineplex
was brimming with unheard-of poetries...

j.d. mitchell-lumsden co-edits cricketonlinereview. he lives in oakland, california.

I am doing a report on an ocean ecosystem. It appears it is provided free of charge. There is no helpful explanation but the consequences of "Living Together." Who could doubt that a firm belief in Genesis blinds principles of the symbiotic, suggesting strong romantic or sexual themes are to be avoided. Of course chairs exist as chairs independently of designation.

The hermit-crab and the sea absorb each other.

Associations between organisms, if providing reciprocal benefit (let us say aphids and asses), are highly interdependent but free of charge; if those associations lack reciprocity (let us say aphids and the State), commercialism and/or colonization coerce\s mutations in those associations, and thereby distorts all other associates. Multiple mice carry mutation. Complex mutation when bred.

There are mutual places.

*vehicular will be available at unnameable books (brooklyn), st. mark's bookshop (nyc), and moe's books (berkeley), and pegasus books (berkeley). *to order a copy online, visit www.pressgangsters.com<http://the-press-gang.blogspot.com> ($4 each)

yrs,
sara + cristiana (+evan+j.d.)
:::the press gang:::
[redacted]

↑ Index

63. Halvard Johnson
Re: language v. experimental
Wed 3 Dec 2008

Edgard Varese was once (as I recall) asked about his writing "experimental" music, and he said, "When I finish composing a piece, the experiment is over."

Hal

"We are the zanies of sorrow."
--Oscar Wilde

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Dec 3, 2008, at 12:18 AM, Jim Andrews wrote:

> Often all you have to do is look at it and you understand it's off the conventional map of poetry. But not always, of course. It seems likely that 'experimental poetry' is less about an identifiable look or style or genre of poetry so much as a way of approaching it. Something resembling but not identical to a 'methodology'. Looser than a methodology. Mind you, most methodologies are applied loosely, in practice. Object oriented programming is a methodology but one is free to apply the principles as loosely or rigorously as one wants, in practice.

↑ Index

64. Ken Chen

Asian American Literary Awards - Monday - David Henry Hwang, BD Wong, Sun Young Shin, Vijay Prashad, Timothy Liu and others!

Wed 3 Dec 2008

The Asian American Writers' Workshop presents
The Eleventh Annual Asian American Literary Awards Ceremony

Featuring David Henry Hwang and B.D. Wong in a special celebration of M. Butterfly

Since 1998, The Asian American Writers' Workshop has presented the Annual Asian American Literary Awards to some of the preeminent writers in the country, such as Amitav Ghosh, Ha Jin, Chang Rae-Lee, Mei-Mei Berssenbrugge, and Meera Nair.

This year, The Workshop presents a Lifetime Achievement Award to Tony Award-winning playwright David Henry Hwang to celebrate the 20th anniversary of his groundbreaking play M. Butterfly. We'll reunite Mr. Hwang with Law & Order actor B.D. Wong in a special reading and conversation with Oskar Eustis, the Artistic Director of The Public Theater.

We will also honor Fiction award-winner Mohsin Hamid for The Reluctant Fundamentalist, Nonfiction award-winner Vijay Prashad for The Darker Nations, and Poetry Award-winner Sun Yung Shin for Skirt Full of Black.

All guests will receive a free paperback of M. Butterfly, published by Plume.

Event Details

Monday, December 8, 2008

VIP Reception | 6-7:30 pm
Deutsches Haus at NYU
2 Washington Mews, New York $100

Awards Ceremony | 7:30-9 pm
Iris and B. Gerald Cantor Film Center at NYU
36 East 8th Street, New York
$20 members, $30 non-members

Tickets may be purchased online at http://aaww.org/awards_2008.html.

Sponsored by The NYU Creative Writing Program, HSBC, Plume, Edelman, Verizon, Loeb & Loeb, Paradigm Talent Agency, Singha Beer, and The Chinatown Ice Cream Factory.

↑ Index

65. lanny quarles
pnoise
Wed 3 Dec 2008

The noisetext mailing list has sprouted a blog for a public voice, or "abvoiceuxinamab"

http://pnoise.blogspot.com/

still seeking members, mumblers, and moire' numblurs..

lanny quarles
http://jellybeanweirdo.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

66. Martha Cinader Mims
L&BH Network Fresh Poetry Content Dec. 3, 2008
Wed 3 Dec 2008

The PEN Oakland-Josephine Miles National Literary Awards honors Excellence in Multi-cultural Literature on Saturday, December 6th at the Oakland Rockridge Library.

L&BH Network Fresh Content Dec. 3, 2008

L&BH Network Arts News

Xicanisma and Lyric Prose, an Interview with Ana Castillo martha cinader mims Today, 09:17 PM Ana Castillo coined the word Xicanisma in the subtitle of her book "Massacre of the Dreamers: Essays on Xicanisma" back in 1994. In my mind it is a word that was created to describe an admirable quality of her own character, as well as that of Regina, a protagonist in her latest novel "The Guardians." When I interviewed her in person back in 1998 she had an unmistakable aura about her of intelligence and courage. She herself is a guardian for the voiceless, telling the stories of people who live in shadows and die alone, sometimes without even their internal organs. Far from a book of essays, or a lecture on immigration, "The Guardians" is both tragic and comedic, poetic and suspenseful. In the following interview by e-mail I "talked" with her about her writing process, the recent election of Barack Obama and her future plans. Read more...

Editor’s Pick Dec. 3 - Jazz in Pictures and Words martha cinader mims Today, 06:56 PM Jazz Idiom showcases the intimate photography of Charles L. Robinson. A friend to many of the jazz musicians photographed, he often caught them in moments of candor. California Poet Laureate Al Young riffs, scats, and bebops along with the photographs as he provides poetry, anecdotes, and insight into the players and moments in question. Read more…

L&BH Radio

L&BH Radio Hour Dec. 9 - Dec 10,2008 Dec 9, 08:00 PM The show will feature announcements posted at Listen & Be Heard Network Arts News, some storytelling, some arts editorializing, and calls from listeners with thoughts to share and arts announcements. Poets may call in with a poem.

Read more…

L&BH Radio Hour Dec. 2 - Dec 03,2008 Yesterday, 08:00 PM L&BH Radio Hour Featuring Poetry Open Mic The feature this week is POETRY. Please call in with your poem or announcement about a poetry event or website, share with a national audience and let's get to know each other by voice. The show will also feature announcements posted at Listen & Be Heard Network Arts News, some storytelling, some arts editorializing, and calls from listeners with thoughts to share and arts announcements. Please join me to listen and be heard. Wishing you Peace and Poetry martha cinader mims

LBH-Radio-Hour-Dec-2.mp3
14.0 MB
Read more…

L&BH Network Mailing Lists
[PCOPWC] This Saturday's PEN Oakland Program at Rockridge Branch Library, Dec. 6th 2-5 PM Kim McMillon
L&BH Poetry Cafe Blog

Camina Claro
matu feliciano
Today, 04:59 PM
Camina Juemi camina En céreo Walk on The road is Aqua ensenya Camina la camina*, Juemi @hecho *Walk the walk Read more…

WARBLERS dr. charles frederickson Today, 02:00 PM WARBLERS Afloat in the first magnitude Rain pooled by slanted drizzle Hovering above their own reflections Singing and grieving crested angels Spherical melodies never before heard Glorious cascading notes from afar Euphonic fluted descant airs as Foreign tongues deliquesce attuned ears Water color clouds blur in Daylight drawn with infinite clarity Feathery winged migrants flocking to This etched intaglio gravure outland Threads from slender magic wands Pointed flames [...] Read more…

SLEEPING THIRTEEN
jennifer sweeney

Yesterday, 06:06 PM
Everyone crawls inside the clock-cave just as you do each night, girl-needling-through-the-storm, and light drains from each tidal body. Thoughts flash like fish slipping from orange nets in the sandshifting phantasma of dream and every ten minutes the dolphin asleep in the sea slaps her fluke like a lever raising the nostrum to drink an airy quart. You, thirteen and contemplating razorcuts, also sleep this way, the devoted gears of [...] Read more...

Honesty martha cinader mims Monday, 05:45 PM A reflection is fated, pre-destined to acquire each line in the brow each decision how made without stopping to inquire. Look into that face in the mirror. The answer may be upside down turned around but though you may try those eyes will never lie to you. A reflection is a still pool, an undisturbed place look into that space and seek Love. Read more...

PILGRIMAGES dr. charles frederickson Monday, 02:58 PM PILGRIMAGES Such a strange custom traipsing Through houses of dead personages Guided tours for whatever reason Nobody can ever be sure Anne Frank's Dutch attic hideaway Life affirming idealist pure heart Downcast but never in despair Diary inscribing nature brings solace Chairman Mao's mausoleum jarring cremains Dynastic porcelain urn timeworn cracks Tyrannical despot whose gangster thugs Challenged fine art comely beauty Bavaria's "mad" Prince Ludwig fragile Ego extravagant jigsaw [...] Read more...

Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

Get Skype and call me for free.

↑ Index

67. Lindsay Wong
NEW BOOK: Poems for the Millennium, Volume Three
Wed 3 Dec 2008

Dear Buffalo Poetics List:

The University of California Press is pleased to announce the publication of:

Poems for the Millennium, Volume Three: The University of California Book of Romantic & Postromantic Poetry

Jerome Rothenberg is an internationally known poet and Professor Emeritus of Visual Arts and Literature at the University of California, San Diego. Jeffrey C. Robinson is Professor of English at the University of Colorado Boulder.

http://go.ucpress.edu/Rothenberg

The previous two volumes of this acclaimed anthology set forth a globally decentered revision of twentieth-century poetry from the perspective of its many avant-gardes. Now editors Jerome Rothenberg and Jeffrey C. Robinson bring a radically new interpretation to the poetry of the preceding century, viewing the work of the romantic and post-romantic poets as an international, collective, often utopian enterprise that became the foundation of experimental modernism. Global in its range, volume three gathers selections from the poetry and manifestos of canonical poets, as well as the work of lesser-known but equally radical poets. Defining romanticism as experimental and visionary, Rothenberg and Robinson feature prose poetry, verbal-visual experiments, and sound poetry, along with more familiar forms seen here as if for the first time. The anthology also explores romanticism outside the European orbit and includes ethnopoetic and archaeological works outside the literary mainstream. The range of volume three and its skewing of the traditional canon illuminate the process by which romantics and post- romantics challenged nineteenth-century orthodoxies and propelled poetry to the experiments of a later modernism and avant-gardism.

Full information about the book, including the table of contents, is available online: http://go.ucpress.edu/Rothenberg

--

____

Lindsay Wong

Electronic Marketing Coordinator
University of California Press
Phone: [redacted]
Email: [redacted]
Website: http://www.ucpress.edu
UC Press Blog: http://ucpress.typepad.com/ucpresslog/

↑ Index

68. Lindsay Wong
NEW BOOK: Poems for the Millennium, Volume Three
Wed 3 Dec 2008

Dear Poetics-L:

RE: http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html

The University of California Press is pleased to announce the publication of:

Poems for the Millennium, Volume Three: The University of California Book of Romantic & Postromantic Poetry

Jerome Rothenberg is an internationally known poet and Professor Emeritus of Visual Arts and Literature at the University of California, San Diego. Jeffrey C. Robinson is Professor of English at the University of Colorado Boulder.

http://go.ucpress.edu/Rothenberg

The previous two volumes of this acclaimed anthology set forth a globally decentered revision of twentieth-century poetry from the perspective of its many avant-gardes. Now editors Jerome Rothenberg and Jeffrey C. Robinson bring a radically new interpretation to the poetry of the preceding century, viewing the work of the romantic and post-romantic poets as an international, collective, often utopian enterprise that became the foundation of experimental modernism. Global in its range, volume three gathers selections from the poetry and manifestos of canonical poets, as well as the work of lesser-known but equally radical poets. Defining romanticism as experimental and visionary, Rothenberg and Robinson feature prose poetry, verbal-visual experiments, and sound poetry, along with more familiar forms seen here as if for the first time. The anthology also explores romanticism outside the European orbit and includes ethnopoetic and archaeological works outside the literary mainstream. The range of volume three and its skewing of the traditional canon illuminate the process by which romantics and post- romantics challenged nineteenth-century orthodoxies and propelled poetry to the experiments of a later modernism and avant-gardism.

Full information about the book, including the table of contents, is available online: http://go.ucpress.edu/Rothenberg

--

____

Lindsay Wong

Electronic Marketing Coordinator
University of California Press
Phone: [redacted]
Email: [redacted]
Website: http://www.ucpress.edu
UC Press Blog: http://ucpress.typepad.com/ucpresslog/

↑ Index

69. Alan Sondheim

Odetta, Presente! (fwd)

Wed 3 Dec 2008

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 3 Dec 2008 22:11:23 -0500
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Odetta, Presente!

Odetta, Presente!

1. Odetta Videos
2. The Last Word, an interview with Odetta
3. Odetta, Voice of American Civil Rights Movement, Dies

===

Bye Bye Odetta
Odetta, Voice of Civil Rights Movement, Dies at 77

The Midnight Special
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8jGSiaDj_fw
<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8jGSiaDj_fw>

Bourgeois Blues
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tCC6_3QwXOc
<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tCC6_3QwXOc>

===

The Last Word, Odetta
New York Times
http://www.nytimes.com/packages/html/arts/20081203_odetta.html?hp

===

Odetta, Voice of American Civil Rights Movement, Dies

By Tim Weiner
International Herald Tribune
December 3, 2008

http://www.iht.com/articles/2008/12/03/arts/03odetta.php

Odetta, the singer whose deep voice wove together the strongest songs of American folk music and the civil rights movement, died Tuesday. She was 77.

The cause was heart disease, said her manager, Doug Yeager.

He added that she had been hoping to sing at Barack Obama's inauguration.

Odetta -- she was born Odetta Holmes -- sang at coffeehouses and Carnegie Hall and released several albums, becoming one of the most widely known and influential folk-music artists of the 1950s and 60s.

Her voice was an accompaniment to the black-and-white images of the freedom marchers who walked the roads of Alabama and Mississippi and the boulevards of Washington in quest of an end to racial discrimination.

Rosa Parks, the woman who started the boycott of segregated buses in Montgomery, Alabama, was once asked which songs meant the most to her. She replied, "All of the songs Odetta sings."

Odetta sang at the August 1963 march on Washington, a pivotal event in the civil rights movement. Her song that day was "O Freedom," dating back to slavery days.

Born in Birmingham on Dec. 31, 1930, Odetta Holmes spent her first six years in the depths of the Depression. The music of that time and place -- in particular prison song and work songs recorded in the fields of the deep South -- shaped her life.

"They were liberation songs," she said in a videotaped interview with The New York Times in 2007, for its online feature "The Last Word." "You're walking down life's road, society's foot is on your throat, every which way you turn you can't get from under that foot. And you reach a fork in the road and you can either lie down and die, or insist upon your life."

Her father, Reuben Holmes, died when she was young; she and her mother, Flora Sanders, who later remarried, moved to Los Angeles in 1937. Three years later, Odetta discovered she could sing.

"A teacher told my mother that I had a voice, that maybe I should study," she recalled. "But I myself didn't have anything to measure it by."

She found her own voice by listening to blues, jazz and folk music from the African-American and Anglo-American traditions. She earned a music degree from Los Angeles City College. Her training in classical music and musical theater was "a nice exercise, but it had nothing to do with my life," she said.

"The folk songs were -- the anger," she emphasized.

In a 2005 National Public Radio interview, she said: "School taught me how to count and taught me how to put a sentence together. But as far as the human spirit goes, I learned through folk music."

In 1950, Odetta began singing professionally in a West Coast production of the musical "Finian's Rainbow," but she found a stronger calling in the bohemian coffeehouses of San Francisco. "We would finish our play, we'd go to the joint, and people would sit around playing guitars and singing songs and it felt like home," she said in the 2007 interview with The Times.

She began singing in nightclubs, cutting a striking figure with her guitar and her close-cropped hair. (She noted late in life that she was one of the first black performers in the United States to wear an "Afro" hairstyle -- "they used to call it 'the Odetta,' " she said.)

Her voice plunged deep and soared high, and her songs blended the personal and the political, the theatrical and the spiritual. Her first solo album, "Odetta Sings Ballads and Blues," resonated with an audience hearing old songs made new.

"The first thing that turned me on to folk singing was Odetta," Bob Dylan said, referring to that record, in a 1978 interview with Playboy . He said he heard "something vital and personal. I learned all the songs on that record." It was her first, and the songs were "Mule Skinner," "Jack of Diamonds," "Water Boy," " 'Buked and Scorned."

Her blues and spirituals led directly to her work for the civil-rights movement. They were two rivers running together, she said in her interview with The Times. The words and music captured "the fury and frustration that I had growing up." They were heard by the people who were present at the creation of the civil rights movement, people who "heard on the grapevine about this lady who was singing these songs." She played countless benefits; the money she raised underwrote the work of keeping the movement alive.

Her fame hit a peak in 1963, when she marched with Martin Luther King in Selma and performed for President John F. Kennedy. But after King was assassinated in 1968, the wind went out of the sails of the civil-rights movement and the songs of protest and resistance that had been the movement's soundtrack. Odetta's fame flagged for years thereafter. She recorded fewer records, although she performed on stage as a singer and an actor, during the 1970s and 1980s. She revived her career in the 1990s, and thereafter appeared regularly on "A Prairie Home Companion," the popular public-radio show. In 1999 she recorded her first album in 14 years, and that year President Bill Clinton awarded her the National Endowment for the Arts Medal of the Arts and Humanities from. In 2003 she received a "Living Legend" tribute from the Library of Congress and the Kennedy Center Visionary Award.

Odetta was married three times: to Don Gordon, to Gary Shead, and, in 1977, to the blues musician Iverson Minter, known professionally as Louisiana Red. The first marriages ended in divorce; Minter moved to Germany in 1983 to pursue his performing career.

She was singing and performing well into the 21st century, and her influence stayed strong through the decades.

In April 2007, half a century after Dylan heard her, she was onstage at a Carnegie Hall tribute to Bruce Springsteen. She turned one of his songs, "57 Channels," into a chanted poem, and Springsteen came out from the wings to call it "the greatest version" of the song he had ever heard.

Reviewing a December 2006 performance, James Reed of the Boston Globe wrote: "Odetta's voice is still a force of nature -- something commented upon endlessly as folks exited the auditorium -- and her phrasing and sensibility for a song have grown more complex and shaded."

The critic called her "a majestic figure in American music, a direct gateway to bygone generations that feel so foreign today."

(c) 2008 The International Herald Tribune | www.iht.com

Portside aims to provide material of interest to people on the left that will help them to interpret the world and to change it.

Submit via email: [redacted]
Submit via the Web: portside.org/submit Frequently asked questions: portside.org/faq
Subscribe: portside.org/subscribe
Unsubscribe: portside.org/unsubscribe Account assistance: portside.org/contact Search the archives: portside.org/archive

↑ Index

70. CA Conrad

Re: language v. experimental

Thu 4 Dec 2008

My friend Kaia Sand had this to say a few years ago in an online conversation with Carol Mirakove after Mirakove asked Sand about the creation of her panel "Women in the Avant-Garde": * I chose the term "avant-garde" over "experimental" because "avant-garde" implies the social side of the work. There are a lot of ways to pitch in with an avant-garde movement––this is an inclusive frame. So many artists have shown us that if you want to extend what's possible, you need to build the ground to walk on––and that's collective action. Such ground is established by chapbooks, readings, meetings ... If, on the other hand, one strives to be an author who works individually and is lauded and published by HarperCollins, one is striving, generally speaking, to gain acceptance from social elites who uphold established conventions. One simply succumbs.*

My friend Michael Hennessey recently showed me a paper he had written titled "Towards a True Avant-Garde Poetics," framed with some ideas of Peter Burger's. Let me share: * While conventional notions of the avant-garde suggest work which is groundbreaking, confrontational and even impenetrable, this panel seeks to investigate poetry and poetics which adhere to a narrower sense of the term—namely, Peter Burger's conception of the avant-garde as work which "demand[s] that art becomes practical once again," or returns art to the praxis of everyday life. Understood this way, Burger's avant-garde aesthetic changes the ways in which an audience interacts with art, calling for personal action, and provides new, democratized inroads to the creative process.*   These are things I think of often, these are people I trust always, CAConrad http://PhillySound.blogspot.com <http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

71. Marcus Bales
Re: language v. experimental
Thu 4 Dec 2008

On 1 Dec 2008 at 13:28, Jim Andrews wrote:
> the most cogent remark i recall about 'experimental poetry'--but i > can't > remember who said it--is that, like experiments of other kinds, the > outcome
> should be uncertain. probably it was a lanaguage poet.
>
> if the outcome is not particularly uncertain, it isn't much of an > experiment.

This shows such a misunderstanding of what experiments are all about -- at least, scientific experiments -- that it must have been some postmodern who said it, and probably a poet. I don't say that only a postmodern poet could get it so wrong, but it's sure that he or she would get it wrong.

An experiment, to be worth anything in the real world, has to be the testing of a prediction, and the prediction the result of a theory or hypothesis. Only an experiment designed to test a prediction has any use in science. What the kind of "experiment" you're talking about, and what experimental poetry, resembles is throwing shit on the wall to see what sticks. That's not experimenting, that's simply trying things blindly without plan, and without even much hope.

Of course I understand that "experimental poetry" is a special use of "experimental", a jargon-word, a term of art, that has nothing whatever to do with experimental in the scientific sense -- that merely misappropriates a scientific-sounding word in an effort to cadge some of the authority of science to try to borrow some legitimacy for an entirely unscientific endeavor. It is interesting, and amusing, too, to note that those who so disparage science that they cannot even define what it is accurately are still so eager to use the language of science to describe their own unscientific efforts. It's like listening to children playing house, hearing them copying the grownup words and as completely ignorant of their denotations as of their connotations.

On 1 Dec 2008 at 13:28, Jim Andrews wrote:
> of course one may say all poetry is then experimental because who > knows,
> when they sit down to work, just what exactly one will write? yes,
> well,
> there is some truth in that, even when one knows a great deal about
> what one
> will write and will do it in a traditional form.<

This so mistakes what people who write in traditional form do that anyone hearing it would guess that it, too, was likely said by a postmodern poet, even if he hadn't signed it. Traditional form makes no more demand that what is to be written will be known or unknown than any word-salad. There are, of course, rules regarding the form, but none regarding the content.

On 1 Dec 2008 at 13:28, Jim Andrews wrote:
> ... anybody know of some good, not too boring,
> online
> writing explorative of the notion of 'experimental poetry'? not too > clinical, i mean. and which deals comfortably with the shades of > grey/gray
> involved in a good piece about experimental poetry. it'd have to,
> wouldn't > it. 'experimentalness' is relative. yet, while one would want to > acknowledge > that, one would also want to cut through the exploitation of its > relativity
> involved in claims that stuff that's already been done is > experimental. but
> one would have to qualify 'already done' in a useful way.

This sounds Grummanesque in its apparent slavish devotion to "the new", as if the only value in the world were whether something were "new". There is nothing in mere newness that is of value, because value itself consists in an array of other characteristics, from interest to usefulness, among many others, none of which have "new" as a necessary (though the thing may be new, of course -- no one says it may not be) component.

On 1 Dec 2008 at 13:28, Jim Andrews wrote:
> so much writing in this vein reads like a land claim. every sentence
> seems > designed to reinforce the claim of an individual or a group to

> special > status x. poetry capitalism. rather than creating useful > distinctions for > general thinking.

Which is exactly what your writing in this vein sounds like: your attempt to justify your own practice, without a shred of understanding about what other practices have been, or are.

Marcus

↑ Index

72. Kyle Schlesinger
Mimeo Mimeo 2
Thu 4 Dec 2008

Now available: Mimeo Mimeo 2

Mimeo Mimeo is a forum for critical and cultural perspectives on artists' books, fine press printing and the mimeograph revolution. This periodical features essays, interviews, artifacts, and reflections on the graphic, material and textual conditions of contemporary poetry and language arts. Edited by Jed Birmingham and Kyle Schlesinger.

Contents: Emily McVarish on her artist's book Flicker; James Maynard on poet Robert Duncan's early experiences as an editor and typesetter; Derek Beaulieu on the relationship between the influential Canadian poetry journal TISH and Black Mountain College; and an extensive interview with Australian poet and typographer Alan Loney.

Cover by Emily McVarish. Mimeo Mimeo is 8.5 x 11, printed black on white, and perfectbound. Illustrated throughout. $10 plus shipping.

Order at: http://mimeomimeo.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

73. lanny quarles
Re: language v. experimental
Thu 4 Dec 2008

While I respect the deep feeling and intellectual fervor of the spirit of such a debate, the issue is one of cultural semantics. Biologically, the probability gradient such a debate represents in terms of the physical combinatorics of essence in one versus the other, ie the quality of difference in substance, would seem to render either both equally interesting. What is interesting to me is to develope practices, which, though seeming externally to be 'experimental' or

'avant-garde' are actually post-semantic emblematicisms harking much closer to a kind of hermetic hieroglyphics as represented by a system like Gerhard Dorn's in his

ON THE MONARCHY OF
THE TERNARY IN UNITY,
VERSUS THE SINGLE COMBAT
OF THE DYAD CONFUSED IN THE MULTITUDE,

which iconistically echoes
the semiotic mantic (manic tic) of our singularly self-involved world and collective cultus.

I am of the same local phenomenon as the mimi virus.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mimivirus

I own a can of "Blow Off Duster" for removing tiny dust particles, of which some are probably my own sloughed off microparticles, namelessly rejoining the great flotsam of the grating work. I don't call it the great work, because it is tiny, Horton hears a hoo tiny, but grate, because a grate is like a grille, or a gryllus, an oddly elegant little monster built willy nilly from various parts to represent the thing it thought it needed to represent at the time. Also grating can be annoying.

http://www.blowoff.com/blowoff/duster.html

Lanny Quarles
http://jellybeanweirdo.blogspot.com/
http://pnoise.blogspot.com/
http://www.phaneron.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

74. Tony Trigilio
Visiting Poet position, 2009-2010, Columbia College Chicago
Thu 4 Dec 2008

Hi all--

I've pasted, below, our announcement for the annual Elma Stuckey Liberal Arts and Sciences Emerging Poet-in-Residence position. Deadline for applications is Feb. 15, 2009. Feel free to email me if questions come up (applications go to the postal address listed in the ad). Thanks--

Best,
Tony

_____

VISITING POET, COLUMBIA COLLEGE CHICAGO:

The Elma Stuckey Liberal Arts and Sciences Emerging Poet-in-Residence. Annual, one-year nonrenewable position: starts August 2009. Poets from underrepresented communities and/or those who bring diverse cultural, ethnic, theoretical, and national perspectives to their writing and teaching are particularly encouraged to apply. Position is named for Elma Stuckey, a poet born in Memphis who lived in Chicago for more than 40 years. Author of THE BIG GATE (1976) and THE COLLECTED POEMS OF ELMA STUCKEY (1987), she has been described as "the A.E. Housman of slavery" -- a poet who recast for contemporary readers "those things that were kept from the ears of the unknowing slavemasters."

Successful candidate will teach one course per semester (undergraduate workshop, craft, and/or literature seminars), give a public reading, and possibly supervise a small number of graduate theses. Qualified candidates will have received an M.F.A. in poetry, or Ph.D. in English (with creative dissertation), or other relevant terminal degree in past five years; demonstrate excellence and experience in college-level teaching; and will have strong record of publication in national literary magazines (but will have published no more than one full-length poetry collection). Salary: $30,000 for the year.

Send cover letter, CV, 5-page sample of published poetry (photocopies are fine), sample syllabus for undergraduate or graduate-level poetry workshop or literature course, three letters of recommendation (at least one should address teaching), and statement of teaching philosophy to:

Tony Trigilio
Director, Creative Writing - Poetry
English Department
Columbia College Chicago
600 South Michigan Avenue
Chicago, IL, 60605

Postmark deadline for applications: February 15, 2009.

The Creative Writing - Poetry Program has a commitment to excellence in teaching and is founded upon strong ties between the study of literature and the practice of creative expression, and features the only undergraduate creative writing - poetry BA program in the country and a single-genre MFA program, a national reading series featuring monthly readings, and two national literary magazines: COLUMBIA POETRY REVIEW and COURT GREEN. Columbia College Chicago is an urban institution of over 12,000 undergraduate and graduate students, emphasizing arts, media, and communications in a liberal arts setting.

Columbia College Chicago encourages qualified female, Deaf, GLBT, disabled, international & minority classified individuals to apply for all positions.

↑ Index

75. Jennifer Karmin
CALLS FROM HOME: Poetry for Prisoners
Thu 4 Dec 2008

Join the ninth annual CALLS FROM HOME radio broadcast for prisoners.

Thousand Kites is asking you to call our toll-free line [redacted] and speak directly to those behind bars this holiday season. An answering machine will record your message. Read a poem, sing a song, or just speak directly from you heart. Speak to someone you know or to everyone---make it uplifting. Call anytime, now through December 9, and record your message.

The United States has 2.4 million people behind bars. Thousand Kites wants you to lend your voice to a powerful grassroots radio broadcast that reaches into our nation's prison and lets those inside know they are not forgotten.

We will post each call on our website as it comes in! Check our website http://www.thousandkites.org to listen to your call and others!

CALLS FROM HOME will broadcast on over 200 radio stations across the country and be available for download from our website on December 13. This is a project of Thousand Kites/WMMT-FM/Appalshop and a national network of grassroots organizations working for criminal justice reform. Learn how you can help blog, distribute, broadcast, or support this event ([redacted]).

↑ Index

76. Séamas Cain
Re: CAMBODIAN POETRY QUERY QUESTION THING
Thu 4 Dec 2008

Dear Chris,

You might examine the poetry of Bryan Thao Worra at http://www.mnartists.org/artistHome.do?rid=3880

He's mixed Laotian/Cambodian, but nevertheless ...

Well worth reading!

Bestwishes,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain

http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

On Mon, Dec 1, 2008 at 6:45 PM, Chris Stroffolino
<[redacted]> wrote:
> Does anybody know of any good examples of Cambodian poetry (In English > Translation) under, or since, the Khmer regime, Kampuchea, etc...
> (survival poetry, witness--doesn't have to be overtly political, but would > be prefered....
>
> If so, if you could backchannel me any suggestions I'd deeply appreciate it
> thanks,
>
> Chris
>

↑ Index

77. Gabrielle Welford

Re: The First "Thanksgiving" and the First Professional Painter in "The New World"

Thu 4 Dec 2008

---

paula gunn allen also wrote about french jesuits in canada, though--p. 38ff of _the sacred hoop_. blessings, g

On Thu, 27 Nov 2008, David-Baptiste Chirot wrote:

> Kenneth C. Davis' excellent op-ed in the NY Times (see below) is a great reminder of the first, and French, Europeans to build a small Fort and place to live in what is now the USA.
>
> It neglects to mention, though, that this expedition included in it Jacques Le Moyne de Morgue, the first professional painter sent to paint the people and places of of this "New World."
>
> Last summer a book appeared called
> Painter in a Savage Land: The Strange Saga of the First European Artist in North America, by Miles Harvey, about the extraordinary life and times of this artist, whose name, works and life had for centuries been obscured, only to be "rediscovered" in recent years
>
> I highly recommend the book to anyone for its wild mix of art, history, adventure and the at times sensation of "Magic Realism" which pervades it--the "Magic Realism" of "things never before seen nor heard of" as Lazarillo de Tormes puts it so well in the picaresque book of that name.

It is amazing to come across this piece as my mother and I had just been talking on the phone a bit before I read the article how much of the French presence in North America is obscured in the US to this day--after all--the only common sign of it we found as kids was "Franco-American Spaghetti" which made no sense at all to us when small. (And doesn't really, to this day--)

My great-aunt Irene Trepanier Payan did many years of geneological research and found that the first in our family to come to Quebec to live was in 1650. No French women came for quite some time, leading the men for generations (including myself) to marry Indians. Thus, they were a mixed group of peoples, thought to be vastly inferior by the English who conquered them under Montcalm.

Through time there came the forced expulsions and ethnic cleansing of French-Indians to the US, including to Louisiana where already there was a strong French cultural influence that lives still today. (Arcadie became Nova Scotia--and Arcadiens became Cajuns.)

Here is the synopsis of Miles Harvey's excellent book--
I include it as a prelude to the piece below it from the Times.
And here is the site for the book, where you can find excerpts from the book, letters and best of all some of the art work of Jacques Le Moyne de Morgue.
http://milesharvey.com/default.htm

Some things in this book made me think, tough they are so very different, of the masterpiece by Cesar Aira An Episode in the Life of a Landscape Painter which concerns a German Humdoldt-influenced painter in 19th century Latin America.

Bon appetit !!

Painter in a Savage Land: The Strange Saga of the First European Artist in North America by Miles Harvey
SynopsisIn
this vibrantly told, meticulously researched book, Miles Harvey reveals one of the most fascinating and overlooked lives in American history.
Like The Island of Lost Maps, his bestselling book about a legendary map thief, Painter in a Savage Land is a cosmpelling search into the mysteries of the past. This is the thrilling story of Jacques Le Moyne de Morgue, the first European artist to journey to what is now the continental United States with the express purpose of recording its wonders in pencil and paint. Le Moyne's images, which survive today in a series of spectacular engravings, provide a rare glimpse of Native American life at the pivotal time of first contact with the Europeans–most of whom arrived with the preconceived notion that the New World was an almost mythical place in which anything was possible.

In 1564 Le Moyne and three hundred other French Protestants landed off the coast of Florida, hoping to establish the first permanent European settlement in the sprawling territory that would become the United States. Their quest ended in gruesome violence, but Le Moyne was one of the few colonists to escape, returning across the Atlantic to create dozens of illustrations of the local Native Americans–works of lasting importance to scholars. Today, he is also recognized as an influential early painter of flowers and plants.

A Zelig-like persona, Le Moyne worked for some of the most prominent figures of his time, including Sir Walter Raleigh. Harvey's research, moreover, suggests a fascinating link to the notorious Mary Queen of Scots. Largely forgotten until the twentieth century, Le Moyne's pieces have becomeincreasingly sought after in the art world–at a 2005 auction, a previously unknown book of his botanical drawings sold for a million dollars.
In re-creating the life and legacy of Jacques Le Moyne de Morgues, Miles Harvey weaves a tale of both intellectual intrigue and swashbuckling drama. Replete with shipwrecks, mutinies, religious wars, pirate raids, and Indian attacks, Painter in a Savage Land is truly a tour de force of narrative nonfiction.

http://milesharvey.com/default.htm

Op-Ed Contributor

A French Connection

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/11/26/opinion/26davis.html?th&emc=th

By KENNETH C. DAVIS

Published: November 25, 2008

TO commemorate the arrival of the first pilgrims to America's shores, a June date would be far more appropriate, accompanied perhaps by coq au vin and a nice Bordeaux. After all, the first European arrivals seeking religious freedom in the "New World" were French. And they beat their English counterparts by 50 years. That French settlers bested the Mayflower Pilgrims may surprise Americans raised on our foundational myth, but the record is clear.

Long before the Pilgrims sailed in 1620, another group of dissident Christians sought a haven in which to worship freely. These French Calvinists, or Huguenots, hoped to escape the sectarian fighting between Catholics and Protestants that had bloodied France since 1560.

Landing in balmy Florida in June of 1564, at what a French explorer had earlier named the River of May (now the St. Johns River near Jacksonville), the French émigrés promptly held a service of "thanksgiving." Carrying the seeds of a new colony, they also brought cannons to fortify the small, wooden enclosure they named Fort Caroline, in honor of their king, Charles IX.

In short order, these French pilgrims built houses, a mill and bakery, and apparently even managed to press some grapes into a few casks of wine. At first, relationships with the local Timucuans were friendly, and some of the French settlers took native wives and soon acquired the habit of smoking a certain local "herb." Food, wine, women — and tobacco by the sea, no less. A veritable Gallic paradise. Except, that is, to the Spanish, who had other visions for the New World. In 1565, King Philip II of Spain issued orders to "hang and burn the Lutherans" (then a Spanish catchall term for Protestants) and dispatched Adm. Pedro Menéndez to wipe out these French heretics who had taken up residence on land claimed by the Spanish — and who also had an annoying habit of attacking Spanish treasure ships as they sailed by.

Leading this holy war with a crusader's fervor, Menéndez established St. Augustine and ordered what local boosters claim is the first parish Mass celebrated in the future United States. Then he engineered a murderous assault on Fort Caroline, in which most of the French settlers were massacred. Menéndez had many of the survivors strung up under a sign that read, "I do this not as to Frenchmen but as to heretics." A few weeks later, he ordered the execution of more than 300 French shipwreck survivors at a site just south of St. Augustine, now marked by an inconspicuous national monument called Fort Matanzas, from the Spanish word for "slaughters."

With this, America's first pilgrims disappeared from the pages of history. Casualties of Europe's murderous religious wars, they fell victim to Anglophile historians who erased their existence as readily as they demoted the Spanish settlement of St. Augustine to second-class status behind the later English colonies in Jamestown and Plymouth.

But the truth cannot be so easily buried. Although overlooked, a brutal first chapter had been written in the most untidy history of a "Christian nation." And the sectarian violence and hatred that ended with the deaths of a few hundred Huguenots in 1565 would be replayed often in early America, the supposed haven for religious dissent, which in fact tolerated next to none.

Starting with those massacred French pilgrims, the saga of the nation's birth and growth is often a bloodstained one, filled with religious animosities. In Boston, for instance, the Puritan fathers banned Catholic priests and executed several Quakers between 1659 and 1661. Cotton Mather, the famed Puritan cleric, led the war cries against New England's Abenaki "savages" who had learned their prayers from the French Jesuits. The colony of Georgia was established in 1732 as a buffer between the Protestant English colonies and the Spanish missions of Florida; its original charter banned Catholics. The bitter rivalry between Catholic France and Protestant England carried on for most of a century, giving rise to anti-Catholic laws, while a mistrust of Canada's French Catholics helped fire many patriots' passion for independence. As late as 1844, Philadelphia's anti-Catholic "Bible Riots" took the lives of more than a dozen people.

The list goes on. Our history is littered with bleak tableaus that show what happens when righteous certitude is mixed with fearful ignorance. Which is why this Thanksgiving, as we express gratitude for America's bounty and promise, we would do well to reflect on all our histories, including a forgotten French one that began on Florida's shores so many years ago.

Kenneth

> C. Davis is the author of "America's Hidden History: Untold Tales of the First Pilgrims, Fighting Women and Forgotten Founders Who Shaped a Nation."
>
> _____
> Access your email online and on the go with Windows Live Hotmail. http://windowslive.com/Explore/Hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_access_112008

Gabrielle Welford, Ph.D.
blog:
www.greenwom.blogspot.com
books:
Too Many Deaths: Decolonizing Western Academic Research on Indigenous Cultures
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=317
Dora
http://www.theguildofwriters.com/books/shop.php?action=full&id=378

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG Free Edition.
Version: 7.1.412 / Virus Database: 268.18.4/705 - Release Date: 2/27/2007

↑ Index

78. sandra de 1913

Doller + Inguito + Doller: Fri 12/5 @ 7:30pm

Thu 4 Dec 2008

---

http://smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com/2008/12/this-friday-125-scott-inguito.html

Friday, December 5, 2008 at 7:30 p.m.
Timken Lecture Hall <http://www.sptraffic.org/html/directions.htm>
Refreshments will be served

Scott Inguito lives in San Francisco, teaches in San Jose, and paints in his garage. His most recent project is called PANDAFUCK, a suite of poems inspired by the pointless, the ill-tuned yet well-intentioned, the black and white of it all. Dear Jack (2008), a book of poems, is out on Momotombo Press. You can find his paintings at scottinguito.com

Sandra Doller (née Miller) has a new name. Her first book Oriflamme was published by Ahsahta Press in 2005, and her second collection Chora is forthcoming from Ahsahta in 2010. Sandra Doller is the founder & editrice of a fancy magazine & press, the curiously named 1913. She teaches at Cal State San Marcos and lives way out west with her man, Ben Doller (né Doyle) and their pup Ronald Johnson.

Ben Doller (né Doyle)'s first book of poems, Radio, Radio, was selected by Susan Howe as winner of the 2000 Walt Whitman Award. His second book, FAQ:, will be published by Ahsahta Press in 2009, and his third book, Dead Ahead,is forthcoming from Fence Books. He co-edits the Kuhl House Contemporary Poets series and teaches in Antioch's Low-Res MFA program. Wherever he lives, he lives with his lady, Sandra Doller (née Miller) and their boxador, Ronald Johnson.

Unless otherwise noted, events are $5-10, sliding scale, free to current SPT members and CCA faculty, staff, and students.
There's no better time to join SPT!
Check out: http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm

--
l'editrice de 1913
Sandra Doller (née Miller)
*
http://www.journal1913.org
http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/miller.htm

↑ Index

79. Séamas Cain
Poems of David Dwinell
Thu 4 Dec 2008

_____

David Dwinell, a poet from Oklahoma, of the generation that came-of-age in the 1950s, friend of several of the "beats," is largely unpublished and ignored ...

Please read ...

Walnut Street Creek

http://www.stickyourneckout.com/poetry/poetry10a.htm

Stick your tongue between the sea & land

http://www.stickyourneckout.com/poetry/poetry8.htm

Tulsa, a Novel

http://www.stickyourneckout.com/poetry/poetry26.htm

Earth Music

http://www.stickyourneckout.com/poetry/poetry77.htm

Sincerely,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

↑ Index

80. Freind, William Joseph

Just in time for the holidays...

Thu 4 Dec 2008

American Field Couches., by Bill Freind.

BlazeVox Books

http://www.blazevox.org/bk-bf.htm

↑ Index

81. Christophe Casamassima

Open Call for Submissions: Ambit: Journal of Poetry & Poetics

Thu 4 Dec 2008

Ambit : Journal of Poetry & Poetics / Issue IV
Reading period: October 1, 2008-April 30, 2009

The editors of Ambit : Journal of Poetry & Poetics are seeking texts/objects that address issues of inter-textuality and appropriation in all formats, genres and outtakes.

Please send (no more than) 8 pages of text (poems) or 5 images (JPEG, PDF, GIF) or 5,000 words (fiction / essays / theory / criticism) to

[redacted]

or

Furniture Press c/o Towson Arts Collective, 406 York Road, Towson, MD 21204.

Please include a return address and eMail so we may contact you upon acceptance. If you would like us to return your manuscripts please provide an SASE with sufficient postage. All materials without a way home get tossed in the shredder and made into book covers.

--
Powered By Outblaze

↑ Index

82. Troy Camplin
Re: language v. experimental
Thu 4 Dec 2008

I agree that the use of "avant-garde" is a much better term, for all the reasons Bale gave and for several of the reasons you give below. The benefit of the term is that it means the work you are going goes against whatever is being done now and has been done in the past. Inevitably, as time passes, what is now avant-garde becomes historicized into some kind of movement (surrealism, dadism, futurism, etc. were all avant-garde once upon a time), so the avant-garde is always now, always changing.

Troy Camplin

_____
From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, December 3, 2008 11:01:03 PM
Subject: Re: language v. experimental

My friend Kaia Sand had this to say a few years ago in an online conversation with Carol Mirakove after Mirakove asked Sand about the creation of her panel "Women in the Avant-Garde": * I chose the term "avant-garde" over "experimental" because "avant-garde" implies the social side of the work. There are a lot of ways to pitch in with an avant-garde movement––this is an inclusive frame. So many artists have shown us that if you want to extend what's possible, you need to build the ground to walk on––and that's collective action. Such ground is established by chapbooks, readings, meetings ... If, on the other hand, one strives to be an author who works individually and is lauded and published by HarperCollins, one is striving, generally speaking, to gain acceptance from social elites who uphold established conventions. One simply succumbs.*

My friend Michael Hennessey recently showed me a paper he had written titled "Towards a True Avant-Garde Poetics," framed with some ideas of Peter Burger's. Let me share: * While conventional notions of the avant-garde suggest work which is groundbreaking, confrontational and even impenetrable, this panel seeks to investigate poetry and poetics which adhere to a narrower sense of the term—namely, Peter Burger's conception of the avant-garde as work which "demand[s] that art becomes practical once again," or returns art to the praxis of everyday life. Understood this way, Burger's avant-garde aesthetic changes the ways in which an audience interacts with art, calling for personal action, and provides new, democratized inroads to the creative process.*   These are things I think of often, these are people I trust always, CAConrad http://PhillySound.blogspot.com <http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

83. Marcus Bales
Re: language v. experimental
Thu 4 Dec 2008

No one who obsesses about originality will ever be original -- but if you tell the truth as best you can without worrying about who else has told it you will probably be original without noticing that you are.

Marcus

On 2 Dec 2008 at 22:18, Jim Andrews wrote:

Date sent: Tue, 2 Dec 2008 22:18:56 -0800
Send reply to: "Poetics List (UPenn, UB)" <[redacted]>
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: language v. experimental
To: [redacted]

> I do agree with your last paragraph in terms of relevancy. Unless there is > something useful that distinguishes such as a new philosophy, new way or > means of expression, etc., then there really is no point in calling an > apple
> a Spartan just for the hell of it.
> John Herbert Cunningham
>
> Often all you have to do is look at it and you understand it's off the > conventional map of poetry. But not always, of course. It seems likely that > 'experimental poetry' is less about an identifiable look or style or genre > of poetry so much as a way of approaching it. Something resembling but not > identical to a 'methodology'. Looser than a methodology. Mind you, most > methodologies are applied loosely, in practice. Object oriented programming > is a methodology but one is free to apply the principles as loosely or > rigorously as one wants, in practice.
>
> I'm no expert on the subject, but here are some of the > characteristics I've noted in some of the experimental poetry I've encountered.

Seeing poetry as amid media. Whether it's the page or the screen or audio or video or programming or whatever. The way it means is not limited to the way sentences or even words mean. A bunch of words can mean all sorts of things on thier own but they're never on their own. They're in a mag out of Seattle or New York, and they mean different things because of it. Maybe they're on a screen; then they mean something different than if they're on paper. For all sorts of reasons. One of which is that when they're on the screen, they've got competition from 70 refreshes per second, menus, google ads, and whatnot.

Media are active in shaping the meanings of the work in them. Swim or sink.

You can't deal with the problems that poses from a thought bubble. Conventional reading as posing a thought bubble in which the range of meanings are worked out through the text alone. Whereas the meanings are actually worked out not only through the work itself but through the frame, the membranes between the work and the media it's embodied in, and its relation with the world more generally as a literary individual work in a massive population of other such entities. Where does it live?

So then 'the material' in which the work is embodied, the media itself--experimental poetry gets its hands on that material .

Quite a while ago, by now, Burroughs said something like 'escaping our own internal tape loops and habits thought can't be done simply by an act of will as writers but, instead, we have to resort to things like cut-ups to cut those loops, those habits of thought and expression.'

I'm still not sure whether that's true. But, regardless, methods of dealing with language that aren't subordinated to the ways we typically use language in speech and according to the rules of grammar, etc, can be quite valuable in the energy and unexpected insight they sometimes introduce. the way they diversify 'voice', for instance. to 'find one's voice' is now quite a different thing than it once was. And the way the particular processes one has chosen to work with affect the tone and quality of the language they touch, inflecting the language with something of the atmospheres associated with the processes from other contexts. Whether the processes involve recipes or computer algorithms, the rhythms of the tides or the rhythms of AC/DC.

a lot of the methods one can use in dealing with the material--rearranging it, filtering it, transforming it, recombining it, and so on, typically needs selection and composition thereafter, requires dealing with lots of permutations, combinations, and so forth. Experimenting with large or small 'data sets' that usually get selected into smaller bodies.

That's enough for now.

*ja
http://vispo.com*

*--
No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG.
Version: 7.5.552 / Virus Database: 270.9.13/1826 - Release Date: 12/3/2008 9:34 AM*

↑ Index

84. Poetry Project
Events at The Poetry Project December
Thu 4 Dec 2008

Hi Everyone,

Here¹s what¹s next at The Poetry Project. Also, scroll down to see who¹s gonna be here on New Year¹s Day!

Friday, December 5, 10 PM
Hey, What¹s All The Hooplah?

Forget the impending breadlines, grab your polka-dotted canvas bindle, bundle up and bustle your way over to hear the tales of times said and gone and the prophetic parables of a new generation of poets, storytellers and musicians. Featuring music and performances by John Houx, Elizabeth Devlin, Frank Hoier, & others T.B.A. Mr. Houx grew up in West coast cattle country and "hoboed" his way to New York in 2007, where he was quickly embraced by the East Village's Antifolk scene and traditional folk music circles. With appearances on radio and television (broadcast and online), John is presently planning his first full-length record and a small European tour. Elizabeth Devlin has traveled the world to invoke influences from scratchy American and French phonographs, combining bitter-sweet, haunting vocals with angelic, cacophonous Autoharp melodies. Her forthcoming full-length album will be released on December 6th, 2008. Frank Hoier is poised at the front of a new wave of modern Americana roots music. Backed by rock'n'roll prodigy siblings, The Weber Brothers, Frank's self released album Lovers & Dollars is set for it's national debut on November 11, 2008. Frank Hoier brings a fresh perspective and a rock'n'roll energy to Folk music. His Guthrie-esque anthem "Jesus Don't Give Tax Breaks To The Rich" has been hailed as "the most perfect protest song written yet this millennium" (PopHeadWound).

Monday, December 8, 8 PM
Louis Cabri & Kevin Varrone

Louis Cabri teaches contemporary poetry and poetics and critical theory at the University of Windsor. He has published widely on Bruce Andrews, Peter Inman, Frank O¹Hara, Catriona Strang, Fred Wah, Ezra Pound, and Louis Zukofsky. Current projects include a study of Zukofsky and the Language Poets, a collection of essays on contemporary poetics, and anthologizing a poets-in-dialogue series he edited and curated (PhillyTalks, 1997- 2001). Cabri¹s poetry book The Mood Embosser (Coach House Books, 2003) was acclaimed as a 2003 Book of the Year by the Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center (San Francisco). Kevin Varrone is the author of g-point Almanac (ixnay press, 2000) and g-point Almanac: id est (Instance Press, 2007). His poems have appeared in numerous journals, most recently in Big Bridge and Cross Connect. He lives and works in Philadelphia.

Wednesday, December 10, 8 PM
Bobby Byrd & Lee Merrill Byrd

Poet, essayist and publisher Bobby Byrd grew up in Memphis, Tennessee. He and his family made El Paso their home in 1978. The author of numerous books of poetry, his latest volume White Panties, Dead Friends and Other Bits and Pieces of Love received the 2008 Southwest Book Award. He is also co-editor of two award-winning non-fiction border anthologies‹The Late Great Mexican Border: Dispatches from a Disappearing Line; and Puro Border: Dispatches, Snapshots, & Graffiti from La Frontera. Byrd is the recipient of a National Endowment of Arts Fellowship, the D.H. Lawrence Fellowship by the University of New Mexico, an International Residency Fellowship from the NEA Instituto de Belles Artes de México and a 2005 Cultural Freedom Fellowship from the Lannan Foundation. With his wife Lee, he is the co-publisher of Cinco Puntos Press. Novelist and publisher Lee Merrill Byrd was born and raised in New Jersey, but has lived for the last 30 years in El Paso. Lee has published a collection of short stories, My Sister Disappears (SMU Press), two children¹s books, The Treasure on Gold Street and Lover Boy (Cinco Puntos) and a novel Riley¹s Fire (Algonquin). People Magazine named Riley¹s Fire one of the Top Ten Best Books of 2006. In 1997, Lee Byrd was the recipient of the Dobie-Paisano Fellowship. In 2005, she and her husband received Cultural Freedom Fellowships from the Lannan Foundation. In 1985, with her husband, poet Bobby Byrd, she founded Cinco Puntos Press, a publishing company recognized for bringing the multicultural literatures of the American Southwest, the U.S./Mexico border region and Mexico to a national audience. Eileen Myles and Elinor Nauen will also ³realize² poems from The Resurrection of Bert Ringold (a Cinco Puntos title) by the late Harvey Goldner: ³A poet neglectorino in the classic sense rising up out of the fecund Seattle underground wisely irritated with the stupid Republicanized world but lucky enough to remember the 1950 Memphis dreams that Little Richard, Gandhi and Elvis promised us all.²

Thursday, January 1, 2 PM
The 35th Annual New Year¹s Day Marathon Reading

Poets and performers include Bruce Andrews & Sally Silvers, Arthur¹s Landing (Ernie Brooks, Steven Hall, Yvette Perez & Peter Zummo), Jim Behrle, Martine Bellen, Anselm Berrigan, Edmund Berrigan, Barbara Blatner, Justin Bond, Donna Brook, Franklin Bruno, Tisa Bryant, Peter Bushyeager, Reuben Butchart, Steve Cannon, Yoshiko Chuma, Todd Colby, John Coletti, CAConrad, Corina Copp, Geoffrey Cruickshank-Hagenbuckle, Steve Dalachinsky, Mónica de la Torre, Katie Degenetesh, Barry Denny, Maggie Dubris, Douglas Dunn, Marcella

Durand, Steve Earle, Will Edmiston, Marty Ehrlich, Joe Eliot, Laura Elrick, Avram Fefer, Bonny Finberg, Jess Fiorini, Corrine Fitzpatrick, Foamala, Merry Fortune, Tonya Foster, David Freeman, Ed Friedman, Joanna Fuhrman, Cliff Fyman, Drew Gardner, John Giorno, John Godfrey, Abraham Gomez-Delgado, Sylvia Gorelick, Stephanie Gray, Ted Greenwald, John S. Hall, Janet Hamill, Diana Hamilton, David Henderson, Bob Hershon, Mitch Highfill, Bob Holman, Erica Hunt, Brenda Iijima, Lisa Jarnot, Hettie Jones, Pierre Joris, Erica Kaufman, Lenny Kaye, Evan Kennedy, Aaron Kiely, Paul Killebrew, David Kirschenbaum, Bill Kushner, Paul La Farge, Susan Landers, Denize Lauture, Joseph Legaspi, Joel Lewis, Rachel Levitsky, Brendan Lorber, Susan Maurer, Gillian McCain, Tracy McTague, Taylor Mead, Jonas Mekas, Jennifer Monson, Rebecca Moore, Gina Myers, Eileen Myles, Marc Nasdor, Jim Neu, Richard O¹Russa, Akilah Oliver, Geoffrey Olsen, Dael Orlandersmith, Yuko Otomo, Ron Padgett, Julie Patton, Nicole Peyrafitte, Wanda Phipps, Kristin Prevallet, Arlo Quint, Chris Rael, Lee Ranaldo, Citizen Reno, Frances Richard, Bob Rosenthal, Douglas Rothschild, Thaddeus Rutkowski, Tom Savage, Michael Scharf, Harris Schiff, David Shapiro, Elliott Sharpe, Frank Sherlock, Nathaniel Siegel, Samita Sinha, Hal Sirowitz, Patti Smith, Christopher Stackhouse, Stacy Szymaszek, Anne Tardos, Steven Taylor, Susie Timmons, Rodrigo Toscano, David Vogen, Anne Waldman, Nicole Wallace, Jo Ann Wasserman, Phyllis Wat, Karen Weiser, Dustin Williamson, Max Winter, Don Yorty, Emily XYZ and more.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

85. Jerome Rothenberg
Poems for the Millennium launch & reading
Thu 4 Dec 2008

The following is the announcement for a reading and launch, to coincide with this year's MLA invasion of San Francisco.

On December 29 at 7:00 p.m. Books Inc. - Opera Plaza will be hosting a launch and reading for Poems for the Millennium, volume 3: The University of California Book of Romantic and Postromantic Poetry, edited by Jerome Rothenberg and Jeffrey C. Robinson. Like its acclaimed twentieth-century predecessors, Poems for the Millennium, volumes 1 and 2, this gathering sets forth a globally decentered approach to the poetry of the preceding century from an experimental and visionary perspective. Joining Rothenberg and Robinson in the reading and performance are major Bay Area poets Michael McClure, Diane di Prima, Michael Palmer, Bill Berkson, Leslie Scalapino, and Jack Foley (performing with Adele Foley). The Books Inc. location is at Opera Plaza, 601 Van Ness Avenue, tel. [redacted].

I'll post again closer to the date and hope that we'll see many of you there.

Jerome Rothenberg
1026 San Abella
Encinitas, CA 92024
[redacted]
jrothenberg at cox.net
Blog at poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com

"Language is Delphi."
--Novalis

↑ Index

86. daniel Ereditario
A Very Merry Unbirthday to You --from Meshworks
Thu 4 Dec 2008

Friends,

If we've found you in a mood to view readings online, well, then this felicitous moment is our gift to you, let's call it your unbirthday :) We have Alan Shapiro reading in Oxford, Ohio, as well as Mark Mendoza in Oxford, too. We've a bouquet of readings from the most recent SoundEye Festival in Ireland: there's Sean Bonney, Frances Kruk, Alison Croggon, Peter Manson, Maggie O'Sullivan, Tom Pickard, Sophie Robinson, and Keston Sutherland. We're also went back to SoundEye 9 (2005) to present you a Lee Harwood reading. Or, if you're in the mood for a short, Margaret Luongo's fiction should do the trick. Or, if you're just looking to click around, on this your unbirthday, our 130+ videos will keep you happy.

Get it here: http://www.youtube.com/meshworks

Faithfully,
daniel Ereditatio & Quincy Jones

PS: Apologies to all whose birthday it is, as regrettably, we've nothing specifically for you :(

↑ Index

87. Gerald Schwartz Proceedings of the Synod
Thu 4 Dec 2008

ZENIT - Synod Propositions 11-15 Indexed Archive | Advanced Search | The World Seen From Poem Central? All about CENTRAL's SYNOD Propositions 11-15

Conclusions of Poetical Assembly on Word of Words

DARK CITY, DEC. 4, 2008 (CENTRAL.org).- Here are translations of the synodal propositions 11-15, which were submitted to Bernstein XXX at the end of the world Synod of LANGpo on the "Word of Words in the Life and Mission of Poetics," held in October in Dark City.

CENTRAL will publish a translation of the remaining propositions in subsequent services...as it sees fit.

* * *

Proposition 11

Word of words and charity toward the sentences One of the characteristic features of the word is the revelation of our predilection for the poor sentences. Word of word incarnate, went through this world doing good sentences. The Word of words, willingly received, generates abundantly in the exchange charity and justice towards all, above all towards the poor sentence.

Poets are called to listen to them, to learn from them, to guide them in their path and to motivate them to be architects of their own history.Academics in charge of the service of charity of words have a particular responsibility in this ambit. CENTRAL encourages them in their ministry.

Proposition 12

Inspiration and truth of the Language

CENTRAL proposes that the Congregation for the Doctrine of the RIGHT PATH clarify the concepts of inspiration and truth of the LANGUAGE, as well as their reciprocal relationship, in order to understand better the teaching of "Dei Verbum" 11. In particular, it is necessary to highlight the originality of the co-operative Linguistic hermeneutics in this field.

Proposition 13

Word of words and natural law

CENTRAL is well aware of the great challenges present in the current historical moment. One of these touches the enormous development that science has realized in regard to knowledge of nature. Paradoxically, the more this knowledge increases the less one sees the ethical message that stems from the same. In the history of thought, ancient philosophers already used to call this principle "lex naturalis" or natural law. As Pope Bernstein XXX has recalled, this expression seems to have been made incomprehensible today "because of a concept of nature that is no longer metaphysical, but only empirical. The fact that nature, being itself is no longer permeable to a moral message, creates a sense of disorientation that makes decisions of daily life precarious and uncertain... especially within DARK CITY. In the light of the teaching of scarce language, as recalled above all by the Acolytes underline that this law is written in the depth of the heart of each person and each one can access it. Its basic principle is that one must "do good and avoid evil"; a truth that is evidently imposed on all and from which other principles stem that regulate ethical judgment on the rights and duties of each one. It is good to recall that to be nourished by the Word of words also increases knowledge of the natural law and allows for progress of the moral conscience. Hence, the synod recommends to all pastors that they have special solicitude in which the ministers of the Word are sensitive to the rediscovery of the natural law and its function in the formation of consciences.

--Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

88. Jim Andrews
Re: language v. experimental
Thu 4 Dec 2008

You're insulting, Marcus.

That's it for me.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

89. Pam Brown
aussies & kiwis & mimeo mimeo
Fri 5 Dec 2008

G'day Kyle,

> Now available: Mimeo Mimeo 2
>
> an extensive interview with Australian poet and typographer Alan Loney.

Australia often adopts successful Kiwis as their own - Jane Campion, Split Enz, Fred Dagg (aka John Clarke) etc etc but it's not a usual practice with regard to poets.

Alan Loney is a New Zealander

Cheerio from Pam

_____

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

_____

↑ Index

90. Pam Brown
g'day again
Fri 5 Dec 2008

G'day again Kyle,

But as Alan Loney has been working in melbourne for the past half-decade, perhaps he's been adopted already.

Pam,

born picky

_____

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

_____

↑ Index

91. Doug Holder
Ibbetson Street Press Publications Updated List
Fri 5 Dec 2008

Our books have been endorsed by the likes of: Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Martha Collins, Pam Bernard, Afaa Michael Weaver, Howard Zinn, Lyn Lifshin, Diana Der Hovanessian, Catherine Sassanov, Len Fulton, X.J. Kennedy and many others!

http://homepage.mac.com/rconte/publications.html

For latest and oldest some out of print others can be ordered online at http://lulu.com/ibbetsonpress

http://homepage.mac.com/rconte/publications.html

↑ Index

92. Gerald Schwartz
from CENTRAL
Fri 5 Dec 2008

Synod Propositions 11-13
The World Seen From Poem Central All about ZenitSynod Propositions 11-13

Conclusions of Poetical Assembly on Word of Words

DARK CITY, DEC. 4, 2008 www.CENTRAL.org - Here are translations of the synodal propositions 11-15, which were submitted to Bernstein XXX at the end of the world Synod of LANGpo on the "Word of Words in the Life and Mission of Poetics," held in today in Dark City.

CENTRAL will publish a translation of the remaining propositions in subsequent services...as it sees fit.

* * *

Proposition 11
Word of words and charity toward the sentences
One of the characteristic features of the word is the revelation of our predilection for the poor sentences. Word of word incarnate, went through this world doing good sentences. The Word of words, willingly received, generates abundantly in the exchange charity and justice towards all, above all towards the poor sentence.

Poets are called to listen to them, to learn from them, to guide them in their path and to motivate them to be architects of their own history. Academics in charge of the service of charity of words have a particular responsibility in this ambit. CENTRAL encourages them in their ministry.

Proposition 12

Inspiration and truth of the Language

CENTRAL proposes that the Congregation for the Doctrine of the RIGHT PATH clarify the concepts of inspiration and truth of the LANGUAGE, as well as their reciprocal relationship, in order to understand better the teaching of "Dei Verbum"
In particular, it is necessary to highlight the originality of the co-operative Linguistic hermeneutics in this field.

Proposition 13

Word of words and natural law

CENTRAL is well aware of the great challenges present in the current historical moment. One of these touches the enormous development that science has realized in regard to knowledge of nature.
Paradoxically, the more this knowledge increases the less one sees the ethical message that stems from the same. In the history of thought, ancient philosophers already used to call this principle "lex naturalis" or natural law. As Pope Bernstein XXX has recalled, this expression seems to have been made incomprehensible today "because of a concept of nature that is no longer metaphysical, but only empirical. The fact that nature, being itself is no longer permeable to a moral message, creates a sense of disorientation that makes decisions of daily life precarious and uncertain... especially within DARK CITY.

In the light of the teaching of scarce language, as recalled above all by the Acolytes underline that this law is written in the depth of the heart of each person and each one can access it. Its basic principle is that one must "do good and avoid evil"; a truth that is evidently imposed on all and from which other principles stem that regulate ethical judgment on the rights and duties of each one. It is good to recall that to be nourished by the Word of words also increases knowledge of the natural law and allows for progress of the moral conscience.
Hence, the synod recommends to all pastors that they have special solicitude in which the ministers of the Word are sensitive to the rediscovery of the natural law and its function in the formation of consciences.

--Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

93. Poetics List

ARSENAL seeks innovative poetry and short fiction [on behalf of Dan Zimmerman]

Fri 5 Dec 2008

ARSENAL seeks innovative poetry and short fiction for its inaugural issue. Send up to 6 poems or 10 pages with a brief bio in the body of an email (no attachments) by March 15th to Daniel Zimmerman at [redacted]. Simultaneous submissions OK, but please notify if accepted elsewhere.

I hope you can help.

Thanks,

Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

94. CA Conrad
if you do not own this yet...
Sat 6 Dec 2008

...now is your chance. From the hard work of Andrea Lawlor and Bernadine Mellis at POCKET MYTHS, these extraordinary treasures are on sale! POETRY AND FILMS ON DVD, IT'S SO FANTASTIC!

Special Holiday Offer!

Order now and get The Odyssey for only $15, including shipping. Or, get The Odyssey plus Orpheus for only $25, including shipping.
http://pocketmythsshop.blogspot.com

More about the series at www.pocketmyths.com.
Stay tuned for Pocket Myths #5: Dionysus in 2009!

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com <http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

95. lanny quarles
Recent.
Sat 6 Dec 2008

Recent Arc-kit-text-oral poiesis analogesis:

http://www.hevanet.com/solipsis/imago/archit/

Preferably structured, the wave travels throughout itself, in longing toward longing in spite of longing while longingly short.

bilding seems likely.

Lanny Quarles
http://www.phaneron.blogspot.com/
http://jellybeanweirdo.blogspot.com/
http://pnoise.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

96. Gabriel Gudding
Re: afro-caribbean women poets
Sat 6 Dec 2008

Thanks to Maria, Tisa, Mark, Obododimma, and Cris for the useful suggestions. I'll follow up on each of them. And am sure my students will appreciate yr advice as much as I do.

gratefully gabriel

↑ Index

97. Troy Camplin

Re: language v. experimental

Sat 6 Dec 2008

Words mean things. All this kind of thing attempts to do is turn information into white noise.

Troy Camplin

_____
From: lanny quarles <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, December 4, 2008 10:10:19 AM
Subject: Re: language v. experimental

While I respect the deep feeling and intellectual fervor of the spirit of such a debate, the issue is one of cultural semantics. Biologically, the probability gradient such a debate represents in terms of the physical combinatorics of essence in one versus the other, ie the quality of difference in substance, would seem to render either both equally interesting. What is interesting to me is to develope practices, which, though seeming externally to be 'experimental' or 'avant-garde' are actually post-semantic emblematicisms harking much closer to a kind of hermetic hieroglyphics as represented by a system like Gerhard Dorn's in his

ON THE MONARCHY OF
THE TERNARY IN UNITY,
VERSUS THE SINGLE COMBAT
OF THE DYAD CONFUSED IN THE MULTITUDE,

which iconistically echoes
the semiotic mantic (manic tic) of our singularly self-involved world and collective cultus.

I am of the same local phenomenon as the mimi virus.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mimivirus

I own a can of "Blow Off Duster" for removing tiny dust particles, of which some are probably my own sloughed off microparticles, namelessly rejoining the great flotsam of the grating work. I don't call it the great work, because it is tiny, Horton hears a hoo tiny, but grate, because a grate is like a grille, or a gryllus, an oddly elegant little monster built willy nilly from various parts to represent the thing it thought it needed to represent at the time. Also grating can be annoying.

http://www.blowoff.com/blowoff/duster.html

Lanny Quarles
http://jellybeanweirdo.blogspot.com/
http://pnoise.blogspot.com/
http://www.phaneron.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

98. Nada Gordon
contact info for John Giorno sought
Sat 6 Dec 2008

Please email me at

nada AT jps DOT net

many thanks!

Nada

↑ Index

99. Rob McLennan above/ground press 2009 subscriptions
Sat 6 Dec 2008

YES! I WANT EVERYTHING ABOVE/GROUND PRESS HAS TO OFFER! GIVE ME A 2009 SUBSCRIPTION (STARTING TODAY, THANK GOD) FOR ONLY FORTY (40) DOLLARS (IN THE US, $40 US).

heading into its sixteenth year, Ottawa poetry chapbook publisher above/ground press continues its series of random publications, with current & forthcoming & publications by Phil Hall, Margaret Christakos, rob mclennan, Andy Weaver, Jesse Ferguson, Nicholas Lea, Lea Graham, Max Middle, Jessica Smith, John Newlove, Stephanie Bolster, Stan Rogal, Gil McElroy, Jennifer Mulligan, Sharon Harris, Jan Allen, bpNichol, ryan fitzpatrick, Julia Williams, Shauna McCabe, Jordan Scott, George Bowering, Barry McKinnon, Cath Morris, Karen Clavelle, Amanda Earl, Marcus McCann, Wanda O'Connor, Kate Greenstreet, Rhonda Douglas, William Hawkins, Sandra Ridley, Fred Wah, Anita Dolman, Stephen Brockwell, Mari-Lou Rowley, Monty Reid, Rachel Zolf, Gwendolyn Guth, Natalie Simpson, derek beaulieu, Rob Budde, Christine Stewart, etcetera.

give $40 to rob mclennan, or mail:
c/o 858 Somerset Street West, main floor, Ottawa Ontario Canada K1R 6R7

regular notices are also sent out through an email list of Ottawa-area literary events. to get on the list, email me at [redacted] further (ongoing) information about the press posted up as part of the above/ground press facebook group, or here:

http://www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com/

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...13th poetry coll'n - The Ottawa City Project ...novel - white
www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

100. David-Baptiste Chirot

FW: [fluxlist] George Brecht 1926-2008

Sat 6 Dec 2008

To: [redacted]
From: [redacted]
Date: Sat, 6 Dec 2008 16:00:48 +0000
Subject: Re: [fluxlist] George Brecht 1926-2008

Brecht studied at John Cage's New School for Social Research in 1958 and 1959. He also wrote about Fluxus in The Fluxus Newspaper. Hannah Higgins, daughter of Dick Higgins and Alison Knowles, mentions and quotes Brecht several times in her landmark book about Fluxus, "The Fluxus Experience" (2002). Notable contributions to Fluxus from George Brecht include "Word Events", and Water Yam, the earliest and one of the most famous "Fluxkits". Brecht was associated with the Fluxus artists of the 1960s including, Daniel Spoerri, Dick Higgins, and others. He taught at Rutgers University and took part in many of the Fluxus and Happenings activities there, including Yam Festival. He worked with artists such as John Cage, Ray Johnson, Ken Friedman, Alison Knowles and Robert Filliou. One of his most cited works is 'Drip Event' (1962) - instructions for a performance/event (Event Score) involving 'a source of dripping water and an empty vessel.. arranged so that the water falls into the vessel' (January 1962). He left New York in April 1965 for Rome; from there he moved to Villefranche-sur-Mer, France, to start a shop, La Cédrille Qui Sourait, with the french artist Robert Filliou, also a member of fluxus. The shop wass intended to explore ideas about the 'obtuse relationship(s) to the institution of language.'[2] After the shop closed in 1968, Brecht moved to London where he organised the Book of the Tumbler on Fire exhibition, an ongoing series of assemblages representing 'pages' of a fictitious book, Cologne and Stuttgart, 1969. He continued to exhibit widely throughout the seventies and early eighties. Since then, his work has been included in a number of important retrospectives, including major shows about fluxus. In 2006 he won the prestigious Berlin Art Prize. de:Kunstpreis Berlin He dies in Cologne.

It's another blog! http://flobberlob.blogspot.com/

--- On Sat, 6/12/08, Ruud Janssen <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Ruud Janssen <[redacted]>
Subject: [fluxlist] George Brecht
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, 6 December, 2008, 3:46 PM

Published on Fluxus Heidelberg Center Blog - 6 December 2008

The Fluxus artist just died in a retirement home in Cologne at the age of 82 years, according to this short article from the Kölner Stadt-Anzeiger.

Fluxus- Künstler George Brecht ist tot

Von Frank Frangenberg, 05.12.08, 13:11h, aktualisiert 05.12.08, 21:37h

Der in New York geborene Künstler, der eigentlich George MacDiarmid hieß, starb am Freitagmorgen im Alter von 82 Jahren in einem Kölner Altersheim. Er lebte seit vielen Jahren im Rheinland.

George Brecht auf einem Archivbild aus dem Jahr 1959.

George Brecht auf einem Archivbild aus dem Jahr 1959.Die weltweit gefragtesten Künstler listet regelmäßig der „Kunstkompass" auf. Die vorderen Plätze belegen seit Jahren die Kölner Gerhard Richter, Sigmar Polke und Rosemarie Trockel. Einer der einflussreichsten Künstler unserer Zeit, dazu noch Kölner, ist nie auf dieser Liste aufgetaucht. Er lehne jegliche Form von Wettbewerb in den Künsten ab, hielt der Wahlkölner George Brecht im Gespräch mit dieser Zeitung zu seinem 80. Geburtstag im Jahr 2006 fest. Er lebte seit Jahrzehnten unter uns und kaum jemand wusste davon. Lediglich eine unscheinbare Plakette kündete an seinem Haus von seiner Gegenwart. Doch am Freitag hat uns George Brecht, der letzte der großen Fluxuskünstler, im Alter von 82 Jahren verlassen. Künstler könne man nicht vergleichen, meinte er. Er zumindest war unvergleichlich.

In seiner Arbeit „The Brunch Museum" aus dem Jahr 1974 betrauert George Brecht den tragischen Tod seines Alter Ego W. E. Brunch, es sei ein großer Verlust für „Brecht & Macdiarmid Research Assodates". Brecht versammelt einige kleine Objekte - „diese Handschuhe erhielt Brunch von seiner Mutter im Jahr 1909", eine Haarlocke und Steine, „die von Brunch für ein selbst erfundenes Spiel benutzt wurden" - und feiert in eloquenter Brillanz dessen beste Eigenschaften. Es werden seine eigenen gewesen sein: Brunch habe die „aktive Teilnahme des Betrachters" verlangt um die Wesensart der Kunst zu erforschen und „die Wirklichkeit vom Standpunkt der Wissenschaft, des Glaubens und der Intuition aus wahrgenommen" .

Fluxus heißt die künstlerische Bewegung, der sein Freund George Maciunas zu Beginn der 1960er Jahre den Namen gibt. Sie verspricht nicht still stehen zu wollen, Fluxus ist Spaß und Fluxus ist einfach. Fluxus lebt im Augenblick. Im Jahr 1956, in New York hängt das erste MAD-Magazin mit dem Kindergesicht von Alfred E. Neumann an den Kiosken, und in Köln bringt Karlheinz Stockhausen seine „Jünglinge im Feuerofen" zur Uraufführung, arbeitet George Brecht an seinem grundlegenden Text „Chance-Imagery" , einer Geschichte des Zufalls in der Kunst des 20. Jahrhunderts vom Dadaismus und Surrealismus bis hin zu John Cage und Jackson Pollock und entwickelt eine Methode zur Produktion tatsächlich zufallsbestimmter Gemälde: Er spritzt Tinte auf Leinen und bearbeitet die Tücher im Trockner.

George MacDiarmid studiert zunächst Chemie, seinen Nom de Guerre „Brecht", eine Referenz an den deutschen Dichter Bertolt Brecht, legt er sich zu als er im Schwarzwald als Soldat stationiert ist, und arbeitet als Wissenschaftler erfolgreich für die Industrie. Die Erfindung des Tampons, darauf besteht er, wird in seinem Kunstkatalog gelistet. 1958 nimmt George Brecht an John Cages Unterricht teil und verbindet in der Folge Musik und Visuelles, reibt seine Geige mit Zitronenöl ein, verschüttet lautstark Wasser und schickt seine „Partituren" um die Welt, die in Köln im Atelier von Mary Bauermeister aufgeführt werden. In seiner ersten Einzelausstellung in New York 1959 zeigt er mit „The Case (Suit Case)" eines der ersten „Event-Objekte" , mit denen er in den 1960er und 1970er Jahren bekannt wird. Sie enthalten Alltagsgegenstä nde, die der Betrachter entnehmen und benutzen soll, um anschließend den Koffer wieder zu füllen.

Die schöne Retrospektive, die ihm das Museum Ludwig vor drei Jahren einrichtete, stellte die „Event-Objekte" in den Mittelpunkt, wohl wissend, dass nicht das „wirkliche" Werk George Brechts ausgestellt werden kann, das im Ereignis und der Erfahrung gründet, sondern eine tote, musealisierte Fassung, die keinen Austausch mehr erlaubt. Die Schau verzauberte trotzdem, mehr als das, strich sie die Bedeutung von George Brecht für die Kunstgeschichte heraus: Er hat Marcel Duchamps zufällig gefundenen Objekten, den Readymades wie Urinoir und Flaschentrockner Beine gemacht. Georges Maciunas, merkte an, dass George Brecht „eine Menge Anerkennung dafür verdient habe, dass er das Readymade ins Reich der Aktion erweitert" und damit ebenso in der Zeit wie im Raum verankert hat.

Fluxus fließt, zwischen Kunst und Leben, und George Brecht schwingt immer mit. Sein ihm vorangegangener Kollege George Maciunas bewies dies gerne mit dem Hinweis auf ein Stück von ihm, in dem er ein Licht an- und wieder ausschaltete: „Nun, Sie machen das jeden Tag, richtig? Ohne es zu wissen, führen Sie einen George Brecht auf." Kaum etwas vermag den großzügigen Menschen und Künstler George Brecht besser charakterisieren, als dass jeder, wenn er will, heute an ihn denken kann, einfach, indem er einmal den Lichtschalter umlegt.

__._,_.___

Messages in this topic (2)

Reply (via web post)

|

Start a new topic

Messages

| Files

| Photos

| Links

| Database

| Polls

| Members

| Calendar

MARKETPLACE

From kitchen basics to easy recipes - join the Group from Kraft Foods

Change settings via the Web (Yahoo! ID required)

Change settings via email: Switch delivery to Daily Digest | Switch format to Traditional

Visit Your Group

|

Yahoo! Groups Terms of Use |

Unsubscribe

Recent Activity

1
New Members

1
New Polls

Visit Your Group

Y! Entertainment
World of Star Wars
Rediscover the force.
Explore now.

Sell Online Start selling with our award-winning e-commerce tools.

Y! Groups blog
the best source for the latest scoop on Groups.

.

__,_._,___

You live life online. So we put Windows on the web.
http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/127032869/direct/01/

↑ Index

101. Peter Ciccariello

Vanitas vanitatum omnia otherwise known as René offering his heart to the god of Vanitas

Sun 7 Dec 2008

Vanitas vanitatum omnia otherwise known as René offering his heart to the god of Vanitas <http://ciccariello.viewbook.com/vanitas>

Vartiations I & II

-Peter Ciccariello
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

102. Freind, William Joseph
Samuel R. Delany reading, 12/8
Sun 7 Dec 2008

Samuel R. Delany will be reading on Monday December 8 at 8:30 in Boyd Recital Hall on the campus of Rowan University in Glassboro, NJ.

The reading is free and open to the public. For more information, contact Bill Freind at [redacted]

↑ Index

103. Doug Holder
Interview with new Boston Poet Laureate: Sam Cornish
Sun 7 Dec 2008

Somerville poet crosses the river to speak with Boston's poet laureate

By Doug Holder
Off The Shelf

Well I tried. I spoke to the politicians. They told me they were working on it: speak to this guy, speak to that guy, they said. But my quest to get a poet laureate for Somerville seems to have hit a serious roadblock. Nothing's happening. So I went across the Charles River to speak to Boston's Poet Laureate Sam Cornish.

When I lived in Brighton in the 1980s I used to see poet Sam Cornish walking down Commonwealth Avenue. With his thick glasses, powerful stride, and intense stare, I thought to myself, "This cat means business." I never approached him, but I knew of his reputation as part of the "Boston Underground" school of poets, and knew he taught at Emerson College.

It wasn't until he was appointed to the position of Boston Poet Laureate that I actually met him, and now our paths have crossed more than a few times. Cornish, 73, was born in Baltimore, Maryland, and for a long time commuted between his native city and Boston.

He was a poor kid, raised by his mother and grandmother after his father died. He was influenced by the small press movement in poetry, as well as the Black Arts Movement, but basically he has been viewed as a poet who is hard to classify. His poetry deals with slavery, civil rights, as well as pop culture: from Louie Armstrong to Frank Sinatra. His poetry is usually stripped down and potent.

Cornish's breakthrough book of poetry was "Generations" published in 1971. The book is organized into five sections: Generations, Slaves, Family, Malcolm, and others. He combined his own family with figures from African-American history. Cornish received a National Endowment for the Arts Award in 1967 and 1969, he was the literature director at the Massachusetts Council of the Arts, and owned a bookstore in Brookline. He has a number of poetry collections under his belt, the most recent: "An Apron Full of Beans" (CavanKerry). I recently spoke with Cornish on my Somerville Cable Access TV Show: "Poet to Poet: Writer to Writer."

Doug Holder: Sam, you told me that you did not consider yourself to be part of the Black Arts Movement in the 60's and 70's. Yet I have read in a few places that people consider you an "unappreciated" figure of the movement. How would you define yourself?

Sam Cornish: What might distinguish me from poets of this generation in the movement, folks like: Sonia Sanchez, Niki Giovanni, etc., was that I was influenced by a number of writers and sources that may not have been part of the influence and education in the Black Arts Movement. Some of the poets in the movement came from a conventional Negro background. The Negro middle class: doctors, lawyers, and teachers. I came from a poor family, raised by my mother and grandmother. My mother was forced to go on welfare when she could no longer work. I went to a neighborhood school and frequented the public library.

I bought books and as a result became interested in poetry. The poets that moved me were T.S. Eliot, Langston Hughes, prose writers like James T. Farrell and Richard Wright. As an adolescent I loved Farrell's character, Studs Lonegian. I could identify with him and I was motivated to find other books that I could identify with. I read books by George Simeon, the great French writer of psychological murder mysteries, for instance.

DH: Who published many of the writers of the Black Arts Movement?

SC: The Broadside Press. It was a small press that was based in Chicago. It was started by a man named Dudley Randall. They were publishing young black writers who were very militant and defined themselves as being "Black" rather than "Negro." There was a very strong political stance to them.

DH: Didn't you have a strong political slant to your work?

SC: If I did it was politics that grew out of the 1930's. That was a mixture of left leaning, the communist and the socialist.

DH: This was in contrast to the militancy of the 60's?

SC: Yes. Because a lot of that was directed at whites generally. It was confrontational or abrasive. You were now black and different from previous generations. You had no patience with your forefathers, your parents, those who were living as negroes. It was a very angry and self-destructive ideology.

People like James Baldwin, Langston Hughes, and Robert Hayden were viewed as not being pro black.

DH: Your poetry seems to be stripped down rather than weighted with ornate flourishes.

SC: For me it is a choice of language. How do you describe something? How do you create a poem? How do you communicate? I would say that it is the influence of the hard world or the naturalistic writer, where you use the language that's employed in common speech. At the same time you recognize the lyric possibilities in this language. I have had my days when I had tons of words on the page. I realized though that it was necessary to use fewer words.

DH: You told me that a poet should reveal something about himself in a poem?

SC: I'm back and forth about that. There are poems where you can't find the poet. There are novels where you can't find the writer. I just feel very strongly that it is important to present yourself as honestly as you possibly can. Hold yourself up as a mirror people can see their selves and vice a versa. Poetry does provide an opportunity for people to hide themselves behind the language. They use the poem as a form of escape. And that's OK as a form of entertainment.

DH: You have talked about the photographer Walker Evans, who used to hide a camera under his coat, and snapped pictures of people that truly captured the moment, on the New York subway for instance. Should a poet be Walker Evans-like?

SC: For me perhaps. But maybe not for others. I like the idea of interacting with people--different kinds of people.

DH: So you must have been an admirer of the late Studs Terkel?

SC: Very much so. He transcended the genre.

DH: Your breakthrough poetry collection was "Generations" published in 1971. How was it a breakthrough?

SC: It might have been a breakthrough because the number of black writers being published at that time were few. The Beacon Press of Boston published it. As a black writer there may have been anger in the book. It was not an anger directed at white America. It attempted to describe living in an America that is black and white, and all the other things that go with it. The book is arranged like most of my books are: from past to present. It begins with a slave funeral and it ends with a sense of Apocalypse. The history comes from things I heard from home, and things I picked up from the neighborhoods, not to mention popular culture.

DH: We have discussed Alfred Kazin's memoir "A Walker in the City." Kazin was inspired by pounding the pavement on the teeming streets of New York City. How about you in Boston?

SC: I used to walk with a pocket camera, and took pictures as I walked. I would al so walk with a notebook. I would describe things I would see, and imagined them as little scenarios. That was an important part of my day.

DH: I get the impression that you are the consummate urban man. Could you survive in the country?

SC: If I did live in the country I would like the freedom to move back and forth. I like to be near theatres, bookstores and cinemas.

DH: You had your own small press: the Bean Bag Press. You hung with small press legends like Hugh Fox, and co- edited the anthology: "The Living Underground: An Anthology of Contemporary American Poetry" (Ghost Dance Press: 1969) with him. What is vital about the small press in the literary milieu?

SC: Publication. The major presses publish very few books of poetry. They also have a fixed standard as to what they select. So you often get the same voices. The small press allows us to have a variety of voices. It allows us to be challenged, upset, disturbed and sometimes angered by what we read. The major press' books are pleasant and fun to read. But they are not disturbing. They are basically not truthful. The small press has novelty, surprise, can be violent, and sometimes it can be damn good poetry.

DH: What are your goals in your position of Boston Poet Laureate?

SC: Right now I am available for people through the library and also through Mayor Menino's office. If people call and request my presence at a school or senior citizen's center, or where people would like a poet, I go. I try to be the person to bring a poem to people who might not read poetry, or those who want to talk to a poet about the craft.

The South Was Waiting in Baltimore

Ruth Brown

sang bad songs about her brown body but I could see white boys hit the nigger streets saw them running through the projects looking for colored girls

the Fifties were marching integrating schools

young Richard Nixon barbers standing in the doors of their shops saying shame shame at the sight of my hair Negro men scratched their heads burned their hair to make it good like Nat
King Cole
Emmett Till died in Mississippi his picture in JET Magazine his death a word on the streets I never went to Mississippi during the bus boycotts nor sat in for civil rights and hamburgers
I was poor even then my shoes were holes held together
by threats & good luck but I read Camus

& listened to Martin Luther King
the Muslims in the temple selling bean pie & promising the death of white devils
the white man that never came in my room the students fucked I read about Algeria &
0A found James Baldwin disturbing
some of my friends made jokes about Mississippi
I never rode
The Freedom Bus but I walked the streets of Baltimore visited Little Italy
the Polish neighborhoods near the waterfronts

you did not have to travel to the Southern states

it was waiting in Baltimore

↑ Index

104. Mark Weiss
query
Sun 7 Dec 2008

Anybody out there know how to reach Barry Alpert?

Mark

↑ Index

105. Andy Nicholson
Re: afro-caribbean women poets
Sun 7 Dec 2008

Hi Everyone,

I was wondering if any of these poets were (or if anyone knows of afro-Carribean women poets who were) deeply influenced by Aime Cesaire. I have a deep love and admiration for his work, particularly his early work, but I don't know the region well enough to know to what extent and in which ways he has influenced poets in Martinique and in neighboring countries.

Andy
http://andynicholson.blogspot.com/

On Sat, Dec 6, 2008 at 1:33 AM, Gabriel Gudding
<[redacted]> wrote:
> Thanks to Maria, Tisa, Mark, Obododimma, and Cris for the useful > suggestions. I'll follow up on each of them. And am sure my students will > appreciate yr advice as much as I do.
> gratefully > gabriel
>
>>
>>

>
>

↑ Index

106. amy king
Let Us Now Praise Poets' Books of 2008!
Sun 7 Dec 2008

Any recommendations w/ sample poems? Two off the top:

NEW EUROPEAN POETS eds. Wayne Miller and Kevin Prufer
http://www.rochester.edu/College/translation/threepercent/index.php?id=1374

Chinese Woman's Spirit

You are white,
losing blood and life.
You stop a taxi.
The driver looks through his mirror.
You are not there.
You leave a sword on the back seat
as payment.
You become holy water,
a yellow airplane,
a toy train.
You take off the mask,
your white dream.
You serve breakfast to Kung Jiang
with your long, aged fingers.
You write love letters
in Minoan script
and leave them on the kitchen table.

--Marigo Alexopoulou, trans. from the Greek by Roula Konsolaki

~~~~~~~

Tomaz Salamun -- WOODS AND CHALICES
http://www.harcourtbooks.com/bookcatalogs/bookpages/9780151014255.asp

Coat of Arms

The wet sun stands on dark bricks.

Through the king¢s mouth we see teeth.

He sews lips. The owl moves its head.

She¢s tired, drowsy and black.
~~~~~~~

She doesn¢t glow in gold like she¢d have to.

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

107. Small Press Traffic

Beverly Dahlen Retrospective 12/13/08 at Small Press Traffic

Sun 7 Dec 2008

Small Press Traffic is pleased to present:

A Beverly Dahlen Reading & Tribute
Saturday, December 13, 2008 at 3 pm
Refreshments will be served

Please join Small Press Traffic in recognizing the work of Beverly Dahlen. This community event includes statements about Beverly's writing from:

Ron Silliiman
Stephen Vincent
Lauren Shufran
Charles Alexander
Jocelyn Saidenberg
Bruce Boone
Elizabeth Robinson
Rob Halpern
Kathleen Fraser

Beverly Dahlen will read a selection of her work, along with pieces that haven't been made public previously.

This retrospective/fete honors one of the Bay Area's foremost writers. Please join us!

A native of Portland, Oregon, Beverly Dahlen has lived in San Francisco for many years. Her first book, Out of the Third, was published by Momo's Press in 1974. Two chapbooks, A Letter at Easter (Effie's Press, 1976) and The Egyptian Poems (Hipparchia Press, 1983) were followed by the publication of the first volume of A Reading in 1985 (A Reading 1—7, Momo's Press). Since then, three more volumes of A Reading have appeared. Chax Press published A Reading 8—10 (1992); Potes and Poets Press: A Reading 11—17 (1989); Instance Press: A Reading 18—20 (2006). Chax Press also published the chapbook A-reading Spicer & Eighteen Sonnets in 2004. Ms. Dahlen has also published work in numerous periodicals and anthologies. A forthcoming issue of Crayon will publish poetry and her essay on beauty.

Please note the special date & time for the above event!

Unless otherwise noted, events are $5-10, sliding scale, free to current SPT members and CCA faculty, staff, and students.
There's no better time to join SPT!
Check out: http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm
<http://www.sptraffic.org/html/supporters.htm>

Unless otherwise noted, our events are presented in Timken Lecture Hall California College of the Arts 1111 Eighth Street, San Francisco (just off the intersection of 16th & Wisconsin).

Directions & map:
http://www.sptraffic.org/html/directions.htm
<http://www.sptraffic.org/html/directions.htm>

We'll see you Saturday!

_____

Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]

http://www.sptraffic.org <http://www.sptraffic.org/>

www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com
<http://www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

108. David A. Kirschenbaum
Advertise in The Portable Boog Reader 3
Mon 8 Dec 2008

Please forward

Advertise in

our annual collection

Boog City 53: The Portable Boog Reader 3,
An Anthology of New York City Poetry

Edited by
Jim Behrle, Joanna Fuhrman, Brenda Iijima,
Paolo Javier, Mark Lamoureux, and me

We?re going to be distributing 2,500 copies of a 24-page issue of our tabloid-size paper Boog City
--roughly the equivalent in size of a 96-page, 6? x 9? anthology-- throughout Manhattan's East Village, and Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn.

Deadline

--Thurs. Dec. 18-Space reservations (Email to reserve ad space ASAP)
--Tues. Dec. 23-Ad copy to editor
--Thurs. Jan. 1-Issue to be distributed at Poetry Project and Bowery Poetry Club New Year?s Day marathon readings
--Tues. Jan. 6-Rest of distribution

Last year?s issue featured 72 New York City poets.
This year?s? An entirely new lineup of 72 poets, including:

Ammiel Alcalay * Betsy Andrews *Ari Banias * Jennifer Barlett

Martine Bellen * Kate Broad * Julian Brolaski * Donna Brook

Sommer Browning * David Cameron * Jen Coleman * John Coletti

Matt Cozart * Elaine Equi * Jessica Fiorini * Jennifer Firestone

Ed Friedman *Nada Gordon *Stephanie Gray * Shafer Hall

Diana Hamilton * Cathy Hong *Dan Hoy * Lauren Ireland

Adeena Karasick * Basil King * Martha King * Noelle Kocot

Dorothea Lasky * Amy Lawless * Walter Lew * Tan Lin

Filip Marinovich * Justin Marks *Chris Martin *Tracey McTague

Stephen Paul Miller * Feliz Molina * Elinor Nauen * Uche Nduka

Urayoan Noel * Akilah Oliver * Geoffrey Olsen * Jean-Paul Pecqueur

Greg Purcell * Elizabeth Reddin * Jerome Sala * Tom Savage

Vanessa Hope Schneider * David Sewell * David Shapiro * Kimberly Ann Southwick

Eleni Stecopoulos * Jeremy James Thompson * Susie Timmons * Rodrigo Toscano

Nicole Wallace * Sara Wintz * Erica Wright

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. (The discount rate also applies to larger ads. Back channel for full rate card.)

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

(We're also cool with donations, real cool.)

Email [redacted]
or call 212-842-BOOG(2664) for more information.

thanks,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)

↑ Index

109. Adam Fieled

PFS Post: Philly's own Jason Zuzga

Mon 8 Dec 2008

Check out four splendid poems from Philly's own Jason Zuzga on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Good Tidings,
Adam

↑ Index

110. Michael Kelleher

Literary Buffalo Newsletter 12.08.08-12.14.08

Mon 8 Dec 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
12.08.08-12.14.08

EVENTS THIS WEEK

Visit the Literary Buffalo calendar at www.justbuffalo.org for more detailed info on these events. All events free and open to the pubic unless otherwise noted.

12.08.08

Wordflight
CROOKED CIRCLE READING:
Caroline Parrinello, and Barb Faust, Linda Drajem, & Kathy Shoemaker
Plus spots for open readers
Monday, December 8, 7:00 PM
Crane Library, 633 Elmwood Ave

12.10.08

Earth's Daughter's Gray Hair Reading Series
Loren Keller & Grace Ritz
Poetry Reading
Wednesday, December 10, 7:30 PM
Hallwalls Cinema, 341 Delaware Ave. @ Tupper

12.11.08

Just Buffalo/Small Press Poetry Series
Russel Pascatore & Ben Lyle Bedard
Poetry Reading
Thursday, December 11, 7:00 PM
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St.

Just Buffalo/White Pine Press/Talking Leaves...Books
Paul Hogan
Book release for: Points of Departures
Thursday, December 11, 7:30 PM
Hallwalls Cinema, 341 Delaware Ave. @ Tupper

Talking Leaves...Books/Jewish Community Book Fair
Dr. Aliza Lavie
Discussion and reading: A Jewish Woman?s Prayer Book
Thursday, December 11, 7:30 PM
Young Israel of Greater Buffalo, 105 Maple Road

12.12.08

Talking Leaves...Books
David Lawrence Reade, booksigning
Sponsored by: Talking Leaves Books
Friday, December 12, 6:00 PM
Talking Leaves Books-Elmwood, 951 Elmwood Ave.

Rust Belt Books
N'tare Ali Gault
Book release: Sun Will Rise: Memoir of an Urban Family
Friday, December 12, 7:00 PM
Rust Belt Books, 202 Allen St.

Talking Leaves...Books
Despina Stratigakos reading and signing:
A Women's Berlin: Building the Modern City
Friday, December 12, 7:00 PM
Talking Leaves...Books, 3158 Main St.

JUST BUFFALO MEMBER WRITER CRITIQUE GROUP

http://www.justbuffalo.org/docs/Writer_Critique_Group.pdf

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

111. Wanda Phipps
Shooting from the Lip Reading at La Mama etc. Next Monday
Mon 8 Dec 2008

Just wanted to let you know in advance about this event (if you haven't gotten the info. yet in another form):

Shooting from the Lip: Poets Celebrate the Oral Tradition

at La Mama
74 East 4th Street
Monday, December 15th, at 8pm.
$8 admission.

Readers: Akilah Oliver, Kristen Prevallet, Bakar Wilson, Basil King, Ilka Scobie, Wanda Phipps, Vincent Katz, Cody Franchetti, Ilka Scobie and Valery Oisteanu. Hosted by Jeffrey Cyphers Wright and William Electric Black.

Hope you can make it!

Best,
Wanda

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

112. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo Addendum
Mon 8 Dec 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
12.08.08-12.14.08

Sorry for the second email -- left this event off:

Language Foundry and Suite 440 present
"(in)proper words with(in)proper borders" a night of non-idiomatic sound and language

Featuring from Cleveland:
J.S. Makkos - poet
Tom Orange - poet
J. Guy Laughlin Jr. - electro/acoustic percussion
Jose Luna - percussion/DADAcore
"Bbob Drake" aka Fluxmonkey - homebuilt electronics

From Buffalo:
the REactionary Ensemble
w/ kg price
K. Cornelius
Rob Phillips
and Brian Milbrand

December 13th, 8pm
Soundlab 110 Pearl St.
3 dollars

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____
Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

113. Scott Howard
RECONFIGURATIONS: Volume Two, published
Mon 8 Dec 2008

We are pleased to announce . . .

RECONFIGURATIONS: A Journal for Poetics & Poetry / Literature & Culture

Volume 2: Process: Fields of Signification

http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/

* * *

The table of contents for Volume Two underscores six aspects of process: Reviewing, Dialogue, Translation, Method, Becoming, Featuring. Within each, you'll find much variety and innovation.

Thirty-eight contributors. Sixty-seven individual publications: five reviews, four interviews, fifty poems, five essays, two stories, one conversation. Many (if not most) of those works defy ready categorization, however.

* * *

Reconfigurations is an open-access, annual, independently managed, peer-reviewed journal for poetics and poetry & literature and culture that aims to build bridges among different national and international communities.

Reconfigurations, ISSN 1938-3592, is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 3.0 Unported License. For permissions beyond the scope of that license, please contact the Editor & Publisher <[redacted]>.

We welcome your participation. Comments may be submitted via the post-a-comment link at the bottom of each document page.

—The Editors, November, 2008

* * *

RECONFIGURATIONS: A Journal for Poetics & Poetry / Literature & Culture

http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/

* * *

↑ Index

114. Alexander Jorgensen

Venues at which to read - NY State/Boston area

Mon 8 Dec 2008

Will be traveling Stateside during the months of Jan & Feb. Would be interested in information related to venues at which to read. And I am supposing open mics at this late an announcement, though a slot as a featured poet is certainly welcome. Your consideration will be most appreciated.

Last year's month-long tour went well, lots of kind folks offering support and encouragement, and am anxious to once again learn more about what is happening in my homeland.

Best,
Alexander Jorgensen

↑ Index

115. Martha Cinader Mims
National Open Mic Tuesday Night 8pm PST
Mon 8 Dec 2008

Dear All,

My featured guest for the Listen & Be Heard Radio Hour and Poetry Open Mic on Tuesday, December 9 at 8pm PST, will be Matthew Layton, bandleader for the Everyone Orchestra, who will be performing as part of a Good Vibes Sweater drive at Ashkenaz in Berkeley, CA on Dec. 21st. We'll listen to some music and talk about The Everyone Orchestra, Chris Haugen's SeaHorse Rodeo and the numerous bands that these band members are a part of.

The show will also feature an open mic for poetry, announcements posted at Listen & Be Heard Network Arts News, some storytelling, some arts editorializing, and calls from listeners with thoughts to share and arts announcements. Poets may call in with a poem.

To listen, chat during the show, or "click to talk" go to:
http://www.blogtalkradio.com/listenandbeheard/2008/12/10/LBH-Radio- Hour-Dec-9

To listen and/or call from your phone the number to call is [redacted]

Please Listen and Be Heard!

Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Network
[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

Get Skype and call me for free.

↑ Index

116. William Allegrezza
Call for Moria
Mon 8 Dec 2008

If you submit work by Thursday, I'll consider it for the next massive issue of Moria. (The issue will actually be a combination of three issues, so it will be rather large.)

http://www.moriapoetry.com

Bill Allegrezza
[redacted]

p.s. i'm really interested in getting more innovative/experimental work from women.

↑ Index

117. Steve Halle
Steven D. Schroeder @ Seven Corners
Mon 8 Dec 2008

Please enjoy four new poems by Steven D. Schroeder at Seven Corners<http://sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/>(http://sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/).

Best,
Steve Halle
Editor

↑ Index

118. Cara Benson
Let Us Now Praise Poets' Books of 2008!
Mon 8 Dec 2008

FOR THE FIGHTING SPIR
: Re: Let Us Now Praise Poets' Books of 2008!

FOR THE FIGHTING SPIRIT OF THE WALNUT
Takashi Hiraide
Translated by Sawako Nakayasu

http://www.ndpublishing.com/books/hiraidewalnut.html

54.

Midway down the deep darkness of the trash bin, the kid plum finally caught on. "Oh, I am about to rot away, without ever having leapt, never having known anything tough and shiny." And then, through the wet wrappers and bread crumbs, he slid down two plum-lengths. Cheering is heard from afar.

(can't replicate formatting exactly here in email)

Great idea, Amy!

_____

http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html

_____
From: amy king <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Sent: Sunday, December 7, 2008 6:22:52 PM
Subject: Let Us Now Praise Poets' Books of 2008!

Any recommendations w/ sample poems? Two off the top:

NEW EUROPEAN POETS eds. Wayne Miller and Kevin Prufer
http://www.rochester.edu/College/translation/threepercent/index.php?id=1374

Chinese Woman's Spirit

You are white,
losing blood and life.
You stop a taxi.
The driver looks through his mirror.
You are not there.
You leave a sword on the back seat
as payment.
You become holy water,
a yellow airplane,
a toy train.
You take off the mask,
your white dream.
You serve breakfast to Kung Jiang
with your long, aged fingers.
You write love letters
in Minoan script
and leave them on the kitchen table.

--Marigo Alexopoulou, trans. from the Greek by Roula Konsolaki

~~~~~~~

Tomaz Salamun -- WOODS AND CHALICES
http://www.harcourtbooks.com/bookcatalogs/bookpages/9780151014255.asp

Coat of Arms

The wet sun stands on dark bricks.

Through the king¢s mouth we see teeth.

He sews lips. The owl moves its head.

She¢s tired, drowsy and black.

She doesn¢t glow in gold like she¢d have to.

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html
~~~~~~~

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

119. Stephen Vincent
New de Blog - Fanny Howe, Haptics et al
Mon 8 Dec 2008

Newish de blog: http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

1. Fanny Howe at the San Francisco State Poetry Center, haptic drawings included:

...Fanny’s George Oppen Memorial lecture - taking a view into the history of the War’s impact - religious and philosophical - sought to put a name on that invisible, undefinable childhood space in which the family became divided and, in her case, the connection across the Atlantic to and with the world of Europe was so damaged. That paraphrase probably makes it too simple. In concrete terms, she used the occasion of the lecture to explore the relationship of the work of Simon Weil (essayist and keeper of journals) with George Oppen (poet and keeper of journals.) Imagining both figures almost as ships passing in the night, Simone Weil - a participant in the French resistance - escaped the Nazis via Marseille in 1941, only to return to resume the fight in England, where she died from TB in 1943. Oppen enlisted and in 1943 arrived to fight in Europe also through the port of Marseille...

2. Haptics: Joseph Noble and Colleen Lookingbill at Books & Bookshelves

3. "My mother leans into the night", haptic and account

My brother says that at night she switches back and forth between the repetition of numbers and letters. This last week he was brought up short when, two-thirds the way through the alphabet, he heard her say: “… p, q, r, peculiar”… in an astonishingly quick leap from the associative sounds of the letters into a corresponding word of similar sound...

Always appreciate your comments. Enjoy,

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

120. Hand Held
NYC - Chapbooks and a Launch! 12/13
Tue 9 Dec 2008

Dear Friends,

Please join us for the launch of Hand Held Editions, featuring readings by the authors of our three new chapbooks:

Saturday, December 13, 7:00pm

Timothy Donnelly: The Cloud Corporation
Stefania Heim: Three Poems
Ethan Paquin: Nineains

A Public Space
323 Dean Street (@ 3rd Ave)
Brooklyn
Atlantic/Pacific - 2, 3, 4, 5, N, Q, R, B, D, M

***

All three chapbooks can be purchased at the "recession has been happening for a year, duh" price of $11 at http://handheldeditions.blogspot.com/

***

Hope to see you there! Or soon.

All best,

Thomas Hummel
Brett Fletcher Lauer

--
hand*held*editions
thomas hummel & brett fletcher lauer
handheldeditions.blogspot.com

↑ Index

121. Ram Devineni
Film Screening and Yusef Komunyakaa reading
Tue 9 Dec 2008

Film Screening and Yusef Komunyakaa reading

Dear Friends: please join us for these two events later this week.

“With Every Breath” - - a short film about the poet
Lamont Steptoe and made by Ram Devineni

Screening on Wed., December 10, 2008 at 5:45pm at the African Diaspora Film Festival

“With Every Breath” & “The Watermelon Woman” http://www.nyadff.org/schedule_08.html

ANTHOLOGY FILM ARCHIVES
32 Second Avenue @ 2nd Street, NYC. $10 for screening train F to 2nd Ave. or trains B,D,Q to Broadway-Lafayette St. or 6 to Bleecker

Poetry reading with Yusef Komunyakaa, Idra Novey, and Rick Benjamin

Thursday, December 11, 2008 at 7:00pm
Pacific Standard is located at 82 Fourth Avenue in Park Slope, Brooklyn, between St. Marks and Bergen Streets.
http://www.pacificstandardbrooklyn.com

Yusef Komunyakaa's most recent book of poems, WARHORSES, was released in September 2008; he is the author of many books of poetry and criticism including NEON VERNACULAR, which won the 1994 Pulitzer Prize.
Idra Novey's first book, THE NEXT COUNTRY, received the Kinereth Gensler Award and was published in November 2008 by Alice James Book. Rick Benjamin teaches poetry at Brown University, Rhode Island School of Design, and in the Interdisciplinary Arts in the MFA Program at Goddard College.

Please send future emails to [redacted] for press

↑ Index

122. { brad brace }
2008 holiday card
Tue 9 Dec 2008

http://www.bbrace.net/spiral_decline.html

With the exception of occasional periods of unthreatened solitude or fleeting humane kindness, we've been beaten-down, cheated, and denied most societal benefits. We dread the exclusive holy days celebrations and fear the suffering cost of cold winters. This indifferent, unravelling spiral decline will finally end one blessed day for us all.

/:b

↑ Index

123. Charlie Rossiter

December 10

Tue 9 Dec 2008

Wear White for Emily

Charlie

--
"WALK in the world
you can't see anything from a car window, still less from a plane or from the moon" William Carlos Williams

www.poetrypoetry.com
where you hear poems read by poets who wrote them

www.myspace.com/charlierossiter hear Charlie as solo performance poet

↑ Index

124. Thomas Hummel

NYC - Chapbooks and a Reading! 12/13

Tue 9 Dec 2008

Dear Friends,

Please join us for the launch of Hand Held Editions, featuring readings by the authors of our three new chapbooks:

Saturday, December 13, 7:00pm

Timothy Donnelly: The Cloud Corporation
Stefania Heim: Three Poems
Ethan Paquin: Nineains

A Public Space
323 Dean Street (@ 3rd Ave)
Brooklyn
Atlantic/Pacific - 2, 3, 4, 5, N, Q, R, B, D, M

***

All three chapbooks can be purchased at the "recession has been happening for a year, duh" price of $11 at http://handheldeditions.blogspot.com/

***

Hope to see you there! Or soon.

All best,

Thomas Hummel
Brett Fletcher Lauer

--
hand*held*editions
thomas hummel & brett fletcher lauer
handheldeditions.blogspot.com

↑ Index

125. Camille Martin

new poetry and collages by Camille Martin

Tue 9 Dec 2008

Hi, folks. I've uploaded some new collages on the following pages of my website:

http://www.camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_11
http://www.camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_12
http://www.camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_13
http://www.camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_14

* * * * *

Recently published poems and a few collages can be seen at the following websites:

experiment-o (poems and collages)
http://www.experiment-o.com/issueone.pdf

Stride Magazine
http://www.stridemagazine.co.uk/Stride%20mag%202008/sept%202008/camille%20martin%20poems.htm

5_Trope
http://5trope.com/martin.html

This Magazine
http://www.thismagazine.ca/issues/2007/05/3sennets.php

nypoesi
http://www.nypoesi.net/tidsskrift/406/?tekst=7

The Walrus Magazine
http://www.walrusmagazine.com/articles/2007.12-poetry-camille-martin/

Mad Hatters' Review (cover collage)
http://www.madhattersreview.com/issue7/index.shtml

* * * * *

My book Codes of Public Sleep is available at the following sources:

US: Small Press Distribution
http://www.spdbooks.org/root/pages/serp.asp?
Title=codes+of+public+sleep&submit=Search&Author=

Canada: BookThug
http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=3026

Still kicking,
Camille

Camille Martin
Toronto

↑ Index

126. Jennifer Karmin
Jenny Holzer exhibit in Chicago
Tue 9 Dec 2008

Jenny Holzer: PROTECT PROTECT
October 25, 2008 â€“ February 1, 2009

The Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago 220 East Chicago Avenue
http://www.mcachicago.org

For more than thirty years, Jenny Holzer's work has paired text and installation to examine emotional and societal realities. Her choice of forms and media brings a sensate experience to the contradictory voices, opinions, and attitudes that shape everyday life. The 1990s heralded a turn in Holzer's practice toward greater visual and environmental presence. In this exhibition, which centers on her work from the mid-1990s to the present, Holzer joins political bravura with formal beauty, sensitivity, and power.

↑ Index

127. Dan Wilcox
Xmas Special from A.P.D.
Tue 9 Dec 2008

Keep X in Xmas, buy books -- support your Local Poet (& Publisher):

Holiday Special from A.P.D. (A Party Downtown): Place your order between now & New Years Day & receive FREE! shipping -- pay only for the books, CDs, tee-shirts, pins, cassette tapes (what's that?) -- Anything from the complete, extensive & cheap A.P.D. (Accept Proletarian Dictatorship) catalog. This offer will not be repeated (until maybe next year, if we're still in business!).

New in 2008: To the Husband I Have Not Yet Met by Mary Kathryn Jablonski, $8.00 (intense poems threaded with humor by the Saratoga Springs poet & artist)

Previously published by A.P.D (Annotated Poetry Dictionary): Distant Kinships by Anthony Bernini, $12.00 (a full-length book of poems by the great local poet) Three Sides to the Looking Glass by Rachel Zitomer, $5.00 (the long poem performed from memory at her legendary reading at Changing Spaces Gallery) Suddenly Sapphires by Dina Pearlman, $8.00 (poems by the Hudson Valley artist, published in conjunction with Shivastan Publishing, Woodstock) For the Birds by Maureen Kowsky, $5.00 (like it says, poems by this unknown Florida poet) Having Lunch with the Sky by Joan McNerney, $3.00 (a chapbook by the NYC/Ravena poet) Baghdad/Albany & Other Peace Poems by Dan Wilcox, $1.00 (the popular & imitated anti-war poem) Meditations of a Survivor by Dan Wilcox, $5.00 (a "science fiction poem" about a survivor of a nuclear war living in the ruins of the WTC)

Also available:
3 Guys from Albany tee-shirts, black only (of course), with white logo (medium, large, xtra large), $12.00
3 Guys from Albany CD (full 1-hour program), $10.00 -- (cassette tape version only $5.00)
3 Guys from Albany genuine logo pin $1.00
Volume -- CD compilation of Albany poets (from Grrr Records) $10.00
Open Mic: the Albany Anthology $10.00 (still some left of this legendary collection of spoken word poets)

Email your order to [redacted] with your mailing address & I will mail them right away to you, with information about where to send your check, or use real mail & send your order & check made out to "A.P.D." to:

A.P.D. (A Possible Disaster)
280 South Main Ave.
Albany, NY 12208

Order now to get your gifts before Xanukkah & Xmas.

DWx

↑ Index

128. Nada Gordon
Contact Info for Melanie Nielsen sought
Tue 9 Dec 2008

Please backchannel me at nada AT jps DOT net.

Thank you!

↑ Index

129. Peter Ciccariello
How to bury your poem
Tue 9 Dec 2008

How to bury your poem <http://ciccariello.viewbook.com/bury>

Peter Ciccariello
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

130. Alexander Jorgensen
Places to read in New England - Alexander Jorgensen
Wed 10 Dec 2008

One hates to be redundant, but aint to proud to bow my head, low. I will be visiting the US in Jan and Feb and intend to make this visit count. Hell, I will stand on the back of a pickup truck (and I appreciate the back channels thus far received). Among the myriad of voices, this voice has seen lots, has lots to share and offer, was tutored by one among our best. I am departing the PRC because it is no longer viable a place to reside (and not because of financial reasons, because the financial crises globally must be measured in relative terms), especially given by political activities in state that is increasingly becoming less tolerant of "insensitive speech" - or, rather, any contrarian speech that might be deemed "critical" - which, I would argue, is any speech that is both observant and reflective. I was recently nominated for the Pushcart and my work appears globally. I am looking to share, that is all, to remind others of that long tradition: "Here we are."

Your time will be greatly appreciated.

Regards,
Alexander Jorgensen

↑ Index

131. Mathew Timmons

Remember! Late Night Snack at The RedCat Lounge, Fri, Dec 12 at 7:30pm

Wed 10 Dec 2008

Late Night Snack
at the lounge at REDCAT Friday, This Time On Friday!
Friday, December 12 at 7:30pm
http://latenightsnacks.blogspot.com/
...

and afterwards, join us for...

Darkness Cometh
presented by the Department of Water and Power 1257 E. 6th St., LA, CA 90021
Friday, December 12 at 10:30pm

...

Not terrible, but if you're putting peanut butter on them, that can get calorically expensive really quick. Half a cup of peanut butter to no more than 2 tbsp. If you still do, just make a few on a plate and get out of the food never gets worked off. Especially since youre eating just make the kitchen, drink a full glass of water. Go in a full glass of loosening them up a full by eating significantly less. When I have a really high carb stuff like crackers. I find unsalted heaver crakers like finewine suggested but sit there, so I started my mouth(have you get that can get the food never gets worked off. Especially since youre only the craving, it takes a blind juxtapositioning and eat a great way to help you put a glass of beer, sausages and that little muenster cheese. From what would suggest ...

At Late Night Snack on October 4, 2008:
Stan Apps, Mathew Timmons, and Jesse Bonnell performed a play by Brent Cunningham.
Harold Abramowitz and Mathew Timmons read Fox in Sox by Dr. Seuss.
Poor Dog Group performed.

Andrew Choate performed.
Christine Wertheim performed.
Allison Carter and Beth McNamara performed.

…

At Late Night Snack on September 30, 2008:
recordings here: http://www.b-p-d.org/info_bpd.htm
Liz Hansen read.
Laura Steenberge played her light cage.
Ara Shirinyan read.
BodyCity danced.

…

At Late Night Snack on February 17, 2008:
Allison Carter read.
Caribbean Fragoza read.
Danielle Adair read.

…

At Late Night Snack on November 15, 2007: Sean Deyoe lectured. Michelle Detorie read. Sandy Ding and Mathew Timmons improvised a film score. Ara Shirinyan read. Teresa Carmody and Vanessa Place read and asked others to read. Amanda Ackerman and Harold Abramowitz read. Jason Brown lectured and led a sing-along. Danielle Adair performed. Honey Crawford, Jen Hofer and Billy Mark created poetry. Laura Steenberge talked. Liz Glynn and Matt Kool performed. … At Late Night Snack on October 25, 2007: Sandy Ding screened two films, accompanied by Laura Steenberge on bass. Heather Lockie played banjo and sang, accompanied by Laura Steenberge on bass. Mitsu Salmon performed. Marcus Civin read. … At Late Night Snack on October 11, 2007: Susanne Hall read and presented a movie with Ryan Adlaf. Harold Abramowitz and Mathew Timmons collaborated. Amanda Ackerman read. Jason Brown lectured about poetry and memory. Michelle Detorie read. … At Late Night Snack on September 27, 2007: Gerard Olson read. Michael Smoler read. Catherine Daly read. Laura Steenberge & Heather Lockie composed and performed a film score. Michael Kelleher read. Emily Lacy played guitar and banjo and sang. … At Late Night Snack on September 13, 2007: Liz Glynn performed Untitled. Ara Shirinyan read. Eileen Myles read. … At Late Night Snack on August 7, 2007: Harold Abramowitz and Mathew Timmons collaborated. Amanda Ackerman read. Ara Shirinyan presented a paper. Jenny Hodges showed slides and read. Everyone collaborated with the internet. … At Late Night Snack on July 24, 2007: Mary Kite showed a video and read. Laura Steenberge played bass and Heather Lockie played fiddle, they both sang. Jane Sprague read. Franklin Bruno played guitar and sang. … At Late Night Snack on July 10, 2007: Danielle Adair read and danced. Maximus Kim presented his manifesto. C.J. Pizarro told 3 jokes, read 3 poems and sang 3 songs. Stan Apps read. … At Late Night Snack on June 26, 2007: Alyssandra Nighswonger played guitar and sang. Jane Sprague presented Syria is in the World by Ara Shirinyan. Ara Shirinyan read from Syria is in the World by Ara Shirinyan. The Year Zero played music. Alan Semerdjian & Will Alexander created music. … At Late Night Snack on June 12, 2007: A film by Danielle Adair. Will Alexander gave a lecture. Laura Steenberge played bass and sang. Todd Collins read. Stan Apps read. Lee Ann Brown did string tricks. Tony Torn and Lee Ann Brown presented a reading. … At Late Night Snack on May 29, 2007: A film by Nick Flavin. Jane Sprague performed. Laura Steenberge gave a lecture. Emily Lacy played banjo and sang. Will Alexander read. … At Late Night Snack on May 15, 2007: Ara Shirinyan read. Laura Steenberge played guitar and sang. Emily Lacy spontaneously played guitar and sang. Dan Richert's hi-tech hut made sound. … At Late Night Snack on April 24, 2007: A film by Danielle Adair. Laura Steenberge played stand-up bass and sang. Teresa Carmody read. Sean Deyoe performed karaoke. Stan Apps read. Sandy Ding performed the Flash Light Show with Laura Steenberge. … At Late Night Snack on April 10, 2007: Emily Lacy played banjo and sang. Jen Hofer and Billy Mark created spontaneous poetry. WAMPA staged the Dialectical Fuss. Frederique de Montblanc and Janne Larsen presented the Masculinihilist Manifesto. … At Late Night Snack on March 20, 2007: Maximus Kim explained his manifesto. Ara Shirinyan. Milly Saunders read. Frederique de Montblanc and Janne Larsen presented a film. Jen Hofer read, assisted by William Mark. … At Late Night Snack on March 6, 2007: Mathew Timmons read. Oliver Hall played guitar and sang. Emily Lacy played banjo and sang. Stan Apps lectured spontaneously. … At Late Night Snack on Feb 20, 2007: Michael Smoler read handmade tarot cards and projected them on the wall. Emily Lacy played banjo and sang. Ara Shirinyan read. Jane Sprague read, assisted by Marcus Civin. … At Late Night Snack on Feb 6, 2007: Marcus Civin performed. Oliver Hall played guitar and sang. Roy Lanoy (Stan Apps) read from the WAMPA mailbag and dispensed advice. Alex Maslansky played guitar and sang. Nature's Nobleman, Sir Oliver Hall, read from his WAMPA Conference address. Emily Lacy played banjo and sang. Teresa Carmody and Vanessa Place presented Turkey Trot. … At Late Night Snack on Jan 16, 2007: Marcus Civin performed, Oliver Hall played guitar and sang, Lloyd Ducal (Joseph Mosconi) and Roy Lanoy (Stan Apps) presented the tenets of WAMPA, Michael Smoler read handmade tarot cards and projected them on the wall, Darin Klein presented Untitled Performance with Stan Apps, Jesse Aron Green, Steven Reigns, and Christopher Russell, Emily Lacy played banjo, fiddle, and sang … At Late Night Snack on Dec 19, 2006: Oliver Hall played guitar and sang, Cat Lamb and Lewis Keller performed a composition for viola and electrified cymbal/electronics, Stan Apps read, Khanh Tran performed a recital on the theremin … At Late Night Snack on Dec 5, 2006: Oliver Hall played guitar and sang, Michael Smoler read handmade tarot cards and projected them on the wall, "Ghost drawings 'were' brought fourth throught the ouija board assisted by christian cummings and michael decker.", Teresa Carmody and Vanessa Place played Judgment Day Bingo with the audience, Ara Shirinyan read … At Late Night Snack on Nov 21, 2006: Ara Shirinyan read, Sandy Ding performed the Flash Light Show, Oliver Hall played guitar and sang.

… REDCAT is located in the heart of downtown Los Angeles at 631 W. 2nd St., on the northeast corner of the intersection with Hope St. We are housed in the Walt Disney Concert Hall complex but have our own separate street entrance on 2nd St. Directions to REDCAT

From US-101 southbound: Exit at Temple St. in downtown Los Angeles and turn left (east) onto Temple. Turn right at Grand Ave. Turn right at 2nd St., then turn right again into the Walt Disney Concert Hall parking garage. Proceed to level P3 for the REDCAT entrance.

From US-101 northbound: Exit at Grand Ave. in downtown Los Angeles and turn right (south) onto Grand. Turn right at 2nd St., then turn right again into the Walt Disney Concert Hall parking garage. Proceed to level P3 for the REDCAT entrance.

From I-110 southbound: Merge onto US-101 southbound as you approach downtown Los Angeles and follow the directions above.

From I-110 northbound: Exit 4th Street. Turn left at Lower Grand Ave. Before Lower Grand dead ends, turn left into Walt Disney Concert Hall parking garage. Proceed to Level P3 for the REDCAT entrance.

Via Metro Rail: Take the Metro Red Line to the Civic Center Station. Proceed west on 1st St., turn left (south) on Grand Ave., and turn right (west) again on 2nd Street. The REDCAT entrance is at the corner of 2nd and Hope Streets.

The Metro Gold Line connects to the Red Line at Union Station, one stop east of the Civic Center Station. The Metro Blue Line connects to the Red Line at the 7th St./Metro Center Station, two stops west of the Civic Center Station. See mta.net. Parking

Please plan on arriving at least 30 minutes before curtain time. Seating at REDCAT is unreserved, and late seating is not guaranteed.

Parking is available in the Walt Disney Concert Hall parking garage. Enter from 2nd St. and proceed to level P3 for direct access to REDCAT. The evening event rate is $8 after 5 p.m. Before 5 p.m., the maximum daytime rate is $17.

Please note that parking rates at Walt Disney Concert Hall are determined by the County of Los Angeles and are subject to change without notice.

Self-parking is also available at the Five Star parking lot on the corner of Hope St. and Kosciuszko Way. This lot is open until 7 p.m. and offers maximum daytime rates of $10, and $6 after 4 p.m.

↑ Index

132. Brian Howe
Lucifer Poetics Group showcase in The Fanzine
Wed 10 Dec 2008

Some of you might have read the excellent Philly Sound showcase CAConrad put together for TheFanzine.com, which is surveying various poetic communities under the guidance of Thom Donovan. I had the opportunity to put together a similar showcase of work by my own community, North Carolina's Lucifer Poetics Group. It includes new writing by Chris Vitiello, David Need, Dianne Timblin, Joseph Donahue, kathryn l. pringle, Ken Rumble, Magdalena Zurawski, Patrick Herron, Rodrigo Garcia Lopes, Tanya Olson, Tessa Joseph Nicholas, and Tony Tost. The feature is available at the following URL:

http://thefanzine.com/articles/poetry/295/lucifer_poetics-_the_state_of_nc_part_2

Best,
Brian Howe

↑ Index

133. charles alexander course proposal query
Wed 10 Dec 2008

Hi all,

I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

Thank you,

Charles

Charles Alexander
Chax Press
411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
Tucson, AZ 85705-8332

[redacted] (Chax Press)
[redacted] (cell)
[redacted]

http://chax.org

↑ Index

134. Jonathan Minton
Word For/Word #14
Wed 10 Dec 2008

I’m pleased to announce that Word For/Word #14 is online at www.wordforword.info

with poetry and visuals by Emily Anderson, Teresa K. Miller, Amish Trivedi, Lisa Lightsey, Elizabeth H. Barbato, Cristiana Baik, Autumn Carter, Hanna Andrews, Ian Davisson, Michael Rothenberg, Lynn Strongin, Felicia Shenker, Allison Carter, Ryo Yamaguchi, Aby Kaupang, A. J. Patrick Liszkiewicz, Karl Kempton, Tim Willette, Mark Young, Mike Cannell, Chad Lietz, Michael Aird, Nola Accili, Diana Magallón, Jeff Crouch, Matthew Savoca, and Chris Major, plus essays and reviews.

Cheers!

Jonathan Minton

www.wordforword.info

+++ +++

“On the equivalence of matter and energy”

by Hanna Andrews

You will approach zero & then be propelled. For now, seven inches of light through the blindgap, a few feet to the bathroom, four years behind the beckon perfumed & half-living in the kitchen. She will make breakfast, she will calculate the degree of mouth corner turned down, her eyes will pool over your bones: depletion. A few hours until the next sleeploop. She will incubate -- you tiny robin’s egg, you resting pilot light. Movement -- a navigation of three small rooms, a discrete association between bodies. Let it be known that she is already fevered inside, therefore, is driven. Let it be known she is the arrowhead, arrow-heart. She suffers the kinetic itch & you know it.

↑ Index

135. David Kirschenbaum

NYC TUES./ Boog City presents Dos Press and Andrew Phillip Tipton

Wed 10 Dec 2008

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

Dos Press
(Maxwell, Texas)

Tues. Dec. 16, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by Dos Press editors C.J. Martin and Julia Drescher

Featuring readings from

Rosa Alcalá
Julia Drescher
Ash Smith
Andrea Strudensky

with music from

Andrew Phillip Tipton

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

Dos Press
http://www.dospress.blogspot.com/

Dos Press is a handmade chapbook press co-edited by C.J. Martin and Julia Drescher. They have published three books thus far in the first series, each in dos-a-dos format: 1 book, 2 spines, 3 authors. Also in the first series are poems from Hoa Nguyen, Carter Smith, Andrea Strudensky, Michelle Detorie, Michael Cross, and Johannes Göransson. Noah Eli Gordon has said that "the editors of Dos Press have done the valuable work of translating the communal experience of attending a reading into the private realm of actually reading" (Rain Taxi, summer 2008).

Performer Bios

Rosa Alcalá
http://www.mipoesias.com/mipoprint/RosaAlcala2.pdf

Rosa Alcalá received her M.F.A. from Brown University and her Ph.D. in English from the State University of New York at Buffalo. In 2001, Some Maritime Disasters This Century was published as a limited edition pamphlet by Belladonna/Boog. Undocumentaries, a selection of poems, is forthcoming from Dos Press. Her poems have also appeared in The Wind Shifts: New Latino Poetry, edited by Francisco Aragón (U of AZ Press), and Cinturones de óxido: de Buffalo con amor / Rust Belt Encounters: From Buffalo with Love, translated by Ernesto Livón-Grosman and Omar Pérez (Torre de Letras, La Habana, Cuba). Alcalá has translated Cecilia Vicuña's El Templo (Situations Press) and Cloud-net (Art in General). Her translation of Vicuña's essay-poem, "Ubixic del Decir, 'Its Being Said': A Reading of a Reading of the Popol Vuh," was published in With Their Hands and Their Eyes: Maya Textiles, Mirrors of a Worldview, Etnografish Museum (Belgium). Alcalá's translation of Bestiary: The Selected Poems of Lourdes Vázquez was published by Bilingual Press. Forthcoming is a co-translation (with Mónica de la Torre) of Lila Zemborain's Malvas Orquídeas del Mar/ Mauve Sea Orchids (Belladonna). She has also translated poems for the forthcomingOxford Book of Latin American Poetry.

Julia Drescher http://www.littleredleaves.com Julia Drescher lives in San Marcos, TX, where she co-edits Dos Press with C.J. Martin. She's also a contributing editor for Little Red Leaves. A chapbook, Mock Martyrs / Abound, is out from dancing girl press. Another chapbook is forthcoming from the Dusie Kollectiv. Other work may be found, or will be found, in the following: Cranky, WOMB, the tiny, goodfoot, The Colorado Review, zafusy, P-Queue, FOURSQUARE, and, with CJ Martin, Broke.

Ash Smith
http://opened-by.blogspot.com/

Ash Smith has lived mostly in Central Texas and the Rio Grande Valley, where she has worked with environmental and educational programs. She is finishing a full-length manuscript at Texas State University. Water Shed, from Dos Press, is her first chapbook.

Andrea Strudensky
http://littleredleaves.com/LRL1/strudensky.html

Originally from Montreal, Andrea Strudensky is living in Buffalo studying poetry.

Andrew Phillip Tipton
http://www.myspace.com/andrewphilliptipton

Andrew Phillip Tipton plays obnoxious anti-folk music about never wanting to grow up. He records several albums every year in his bedroom, including last year¹s critically ignored Champion of Love. He lives in Staten Island, where he collects piggy banks.

Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Thurs. Jan. 27, 2009
Ahsahta Press (Boise, Idaho)

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://www.welcometoboogcity.com
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)

↑ Index

136. Joel Chace

Fwd: press release

Wed 10 Dec 2008

Amy:

I hope that you will be agreeable to putting this announcement out on the UB listserv.

AND I hope that you will be able to be there, yourself, for this reading!

Thanks, and Happy Holidays!

Joel Chace

The Amos Eno Gallery is pleased to announce a poetry reading to be held Saturday, December 13, 2008, from 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm, in conjunction with "Close," the current exhibit of photographs by Anthony Cuneo. The gallery is located at 111 Front Street, in Dumbo.

Poets reading will include: JOEL CHACE – Joel Chace has published poetry and prose poetry in print and electronic magazines such as 6ix, Tomorrow, Lost and Found Times, Coracle, xStream, Three Candles, 2River View, Joey & the Black Boots, Recursive Angel, and Veer. He has published more than a dozen print and electronic collections. Just out from BlazeVox Books is CLEANING THE MIRROR: NEW AND SELECTED POEMS, from Paper Kite Press MATTER NO MATTER, another full-length collection, and from Country Valley Press SCAFFOLD, a chapbook. For many years, Chace has been Poetry Editor for the experimental electronic magazine 5_Trope. LOUISE CRAWFORD – Louise Crawford runs Only the Blog Knows Brooklyn. She writes the weekly Smartmom column for the Brooklyn Paper and produces Brooklyn Reading Works, a monthly reading series at the Old Stone House in Park Slope. She is at work on two novels: The Last Sublet and In Search of Bio Dad for young adults. She will read selections from her two unpublished collections of poetry: Therapy and Anarchists Don't Return Phone Calls. ELLEN FERGUSON – Ellen Ferguson tries to write. An early member of the 808 Union Writer's Group, she connects Brooklyn writers with writers from out of town whenever possible. Her last reading at The Old Stone House led to a lifelong dream fulfilled: an animation of herself reading her own work. Her next Old Stone House reading is February 12. TED FERGUSON – Perhaps best known for exploring the literary potential of the party invitation, Ted has quietly been writing poetry on the side for many years. His poems tend to be short, observational pieces about laundry, coffee, and the perils of crossing the road. Despite dreams of becoming a diplomat, and time spent studying in Switzerland, his main influences are country living and upstate decay. His current life goals include owning a tractor. He currently lives in West Orange, New Jersey with three children and Ellen Ferguson. MARIAN FONTANA – Marian Fontana has been a writer and performer for the past 20 years. Her writing has been excerpted in The New Yorker and Vanity Fair. Her memoir, A Widows Walk was on the New York Times best selling memoir list and was chosen as the Top Ten Great Reads of 2005 by People magazine and the Washington Post's Book Raves of 2005. As a comedienne and actress, Marian has written and performed in numerous plays and one woman shows including "A Woman and her Bassoon" which was selected for the Playwrights Horizons Summerfest. Her new book "Middle of the Bed" is being published in September, 2009 by Simon and Schuster and is in development for a comedy series on NBC. DANA HOLLEY MALONEY – Dana Holley Maloney lives in the Oranges of New Jersey, where she was born and raised. The fifth of six children and the mother of two sons, she teaches English and Creative Writing at Tenafly High School in New Jersey. She's married to her high school sweetheart. STEVE VALENTINE – Steve Valentine is a teacher, writer, and filmmaker who lives in Manhattan. His poetry has been published in Hotel Amerika and the Virgil Suarez anthology, Red, White and Blues: Poets on the Promise of America. His films have screened at film festivals across the country and were recently featured in the New Filmmakers Series at the Anthology Film Archive in New York City. His first book, about the teaching life, is due to be published by Corwin Press in June, 2009.

↑ Index

137. Andy Gricevich

This weekend in Chicago: New chamber opera, theater and text-music

Wed 10 Dec 2008

This Thursday thru Saturday at Chicago's AV-Aerie, Opera Cabal and the Nonsense Company will present:

URSULARIA
a chamber opera by Nick Demaison with a script by Rick Burkhardt in which layers of historical obscurity and forgetting are peeled away to excavate an eerie conjunction between the legend of Saint Ursula and the mine fire disaster of Centralia, PA

GREAT HYMN OF THANKSGIVING / CONVERSATION STORM
by Rick Burkhardt

Around a dinner table, three highly coordinated speaker / percussionists perform a sonic and poetic dissection and dismantling of the language that structures political experience. Elsewhere, three old friends find themselves unwillingly arguing out a dubious hypothetical torture scenario while time stretches, collapses, repeats and rearranges itself, and the actors try to take control of the play without losing their grip on their characters.

Thursday, December 11th thru Saturday, December 13th
The AV-Aerie
2000 West Fulton no.310
8 p.m. every night
suggested donation: $15

You must RSVP to attend! Write to [redacted].

http://operacabal.blogspot.com
http://www.nonsensecompany.com

↑ Index

138. Gloria Frym
Re: course proposal query
Wed 10 Dec 2008

Charles, you might want to check out Franco Moretti's Atlas of the European Novel --excellent book that looks at the fictionalization of geography, as well as the rise of the city and the novel. Great mapping. Gloria

----- Original Message -----
From: "charles alexander" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, December 10, 2008 12:58 PM
Subject: course proposal query

> Hi all,
>
> I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too).

> What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.
>
> Thank you,
>
> Charles
>
> Charles Alexander
> Chax Press
> 411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
> Tucson, AZ 85705-8332
>
> [redacted] (Chax Press)
> [redacted] (cell)
> [redacted]
>
> http://chax.org

↑ Index

139. Carol Novack

reminder: KGB Bar this Friday, 7-9pm

Thu 11 Dec 2008

Steve Katz, Martin Nakell & Rebecca Goodman: details at http://www.madhattersreview.com/events.shtml

↑ Index

140. Alan Sondheim
ESP-Disk' Live Tuesday December 16 performances
Thu 11 Dec 2008

ESP-Disk' Live
A contemporary music series
With MC & poet in residence: Steve Dalachinsky

First 30 people in the door get a FREE CD

Tuesday December 16th

10pm
Septimania (a percussive apertif)
Josh Kretzmann, Matt Mclaren, Jonathan Thomas (wood, skins & metal) Frank Difficult (keyboard and processing

10:30pm
Alan Sondheim (ESP 1048 & 1082) solo
Supporting the re-issue of his 1st ESP release

11pm
Barnacled (ESP 4049) CD release show
Frank Difficult - electronics keyboard
Michael Jeffries - baritone saxophone
Jason McGill - alto saxophone, percussion, shortwave radio
Matt McLaren - drums, percussion Alec K. Redfearn - accordion Ann Schattle - horn in f
Erica Schattle - bassoon
Chris Sadlers - bass
Nicotina - guitar

@ The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery Street NYC
$10

The full ESP-Disk' catalog will be on sale at the show!

↑ Index

141. Alexander Jorgensen
SUBMISSION CALL - Black Robert Journal - one of the most VITAL journals
Thu 11 Dec 2008

The next issue, coming out in Feb, and which includes the editorial assistance of the most brilliant Samit Roy, is slated to include interviews with Malay Roychoudhury and Grzegorz Wroblewski, in addition to poems by Malay and paintings by Grzgorz, work by Kane X. Faucher, poetry by Xiaolu Guo, work by Obododimma Oha...essay on Mumbai bombings by Subhashis(da) Gangopadhyay.

We are open. Submissions to those known and unknown. Is all OK...just so long as you are wearing your boots! Any questions, visit our website.

Regard this as a last stand...each day the motivation behind our intentionality. There is us, a few wonderfully fabulous others, then either nepotism or, of course, TV.

Alexander Jorgensen
Managing Editor

http://www.blackrobertjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

142. Tisa Bryant
Re: course proposal query
Thu 11 Dec 2008

Hi Charles,

Ed Roberson's Atmosphere Conditions, as well as City Eclogue and previous work, but there's a book forthcoming from Singing Horse Press that contains a number of poems about Roberson's time as a limnologist in Alaska. Will double-check sources, but he's a good bet, by poem or tome.

Tisa

~~~
~~~

> on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.
>
> Thank you,
>
> Charles
>
> Charles Alexander
> Chax Press
> 411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
> Tucson, AZ 85705-8332
>
> [redacted] (Chax Press)
> [redacted] (cell)
> [redacted]
>
> http://chax.org

↑ Index

143. Séamas Cain

Stream of Tongues

Thu 11 Dec 2008

Gearóid Mac Lochlainn is the author of "Sruth Teangacha : Stream of Tongues," a bi-lingual book of poems, in Irish and English, published by Cló Iar-Chonnachta at Indreabhán in Conamara, County Galway, Ireland.

Mac Lochlainn is one of the more interesting poets writing in the Irish language today, innovative and post-modern!

http://www.cic.ie/product.asp?idproduct=249&variables=catalogue%2Easp%3Ftype%3D0%26txtsearch%3Dstream+of+tongues%26sel%5Fcategory%3D0%26sel%5Fauthor%3D0%26sel%5Fsubcategory%3D0

Gearóid Mac Lochlainn's book has the troubles and life in West Belfast as a dominant theme, although not to the exclusion of everything else. (Themes like friendship and music are also present.) The book includes a CD of some of the poems, read by the poet himself.

Nuala Ní Dhomhnaill, writing about STREAM OF TONGUES, insisted that Mac Lochlainn "brought with him a whole new, gritty, Belfast urban experience that has hardly been present in Irish in a long time."

For additional information about this book, go to http://www.cic.ie/product.asp?idproduct=249&variables=catalogue%2Easp%3Ftype%3D0%26txtsearch%3Dstream+of+tongues%26sel%5Fcategory%3D0%26sel%5Fauthor%3D0%26sel%5Fsubcategory%3D0

Best regards,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

↑ Index

144. Kyle Schlesinger
DAVID LARSON AND C.J. MARTIN 12.15.08 @ The Poetry Project in NYC
Thu 11 Dec 2008

DAVID LARSON AND C.J. MARTIN
Poetry Project
Monday December 15th, 2008 @ 8:00

Newly relocated from San Francisco's Bay Area, David Larsen is pursuing a career in postgraduate studies. His first book of poetry is called The Thorn (Faux, 2005), and will soon be joined by his translation of Names of the Lion by Abu Abd Allah ibn Khalawayh (from Atticus/Finch). During the St. Mark's Poetry Project Newsletter's 1999-2000 run he provided cover art, and inner graphic thingies. From 2005-2007 he was co-curator of the New Yipes reading/video series at Oakland's 21 Grand.

C.J. Martin lives in Maxwell, TX, where he edits the Dos Press chapbook series, as well as the online journal Little Red Leaves (www.littleredleaves.com), with Julia Drescher. He's the author of Lo, Bittern (Atticus/Finch, 2008) and CITY (Vigilance Society, 2007). Work recent and forthcoming in Broke (w/Julia Drescher), P-Queue, Damn the Caesars, Colorado Review, and as part of the Dusie Kollektiv.

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

And on Tuesday night, be sure to rejoin C.J. Martin at Boog City for d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, featuring

Dos Press
(Maxwell, Texas)
Tues. Dec. 16, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free
ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.

Event will be hosted by: Dos Press editors C.J. Martin and Julia Drescher
Featuring readings from: Rosa Alcalá, Julia Drescher, Ash Smith and Andrea Strudensky Music from: Andrew Phillip Tipton
There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.
Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

Dos Press http://www.dospress.blogspot.com/ Dos Press is a handmade chapbook press co-edited by C.J. Martin and Julia Drescher. They have published three books thus far in the first series, each in dos-a-dos format: 1 book, 2 spines, 3 authors. Also in the first series are poems from Hoa Nguyen, Carter Smith, Andrea Strudensky, Michelle Detorie, Michael Cross, and Johannes Göransson. Noah Eli Gordon has said that "the editors of Dos Press have done the valuable work of translating the communal experience of attending a reading into the private realm of actually reading" (Rain Taxi, summer 2008).

Directions: C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St. Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Questions? Please contact:

David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W.28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://www.welcometoboogcity.com
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)

↑ Index

145. martha cinader mims

L&BH Network Fresh Literary Content Dec. 10, 2008

Thu 11 Dec 2008

L&BH Network Fresh Content Dec. 10, 2008

L&BH Radio
L&BH Radio Hour Dec. 16 - Dec 17,2008
Dec 16, 08:00 PM
The show will feature announcements posted at Listen & Be Heard Network Arts News, some storytelling, some arts editorializing, and calls from listeners with thoughts to share and arts announcements. Poets may call in with a poem.
Read more...
L&BH Radio Hour Dec. 9 - Dec 10,2008
Tuesday, 08:00 PM
My featured guest on Tuesday, December 9 at 8pm PST, was Matthew Layton, the principal owner behind Falcor and Friends Presents, the organizer who is responsible for putting on the event The Third Annual Holiday Sweater Good Vibe Drive at Ashkenaz in Berkeley, CA on Dec. 21st. We listened to some music by The Everyone Orchestra, and talked about the music business a bit. I also played some accordian music from Rob Reich's new CD in advance of his CD Release Party at the Red Poppy in San Francisco.
The rest of the show was pure poetry.
LBH-Radio-Hour-Dec-9.mp3
13.7 MB
Read more...
L&BH Network Mailing Lists
[PCOPWC] This Saturday's PEN Oakland Program at Rockridge Branch Library, Dec. 6th 2-5 PM Kim McMillon
L&BH Poetry Cafe Blog

MEMORY OF NOTHING
daniel de culla
Today, 05:01 PM
Listen: Drag branches comeback Across the forest floor: Knowledge of the rough¡ At water's edge I gather some things up: Memory of nothing. We've the time to give the Babel Tower A close reading. Awful good, Tú As Roy A. Rappaport's Ritual… as Communication and as State. Our preferences might be Toward more emphasis On species places: Smooth textures of dead wood Knowledge of our hands on arms The body-art of [...] Read more…
A BOOK OF HOURS
daniel de culla
Yesterday, 07:37 PM
Honour is a fierce as a Future To bring into focus of Grass eaters From the space in its last couple of Years Where the alpha and omega gaze. To a painter "exciting" is the hope word Not as strong as the black and the whites Which may o may not be true taking shapes Themselves flowing and passing away from. Power is [...] Read more…
THE SHOCK OF THE OLD christopher barnes
Yesterday, 07:26 PM
Many poets these days put sex scenes into their work but few do it interestingly. Take Geoff Stevens and his poem The Bit player And The Actor; for example, "She has one man/That she doesn't like much/He comes over in his lunch hour/Just for sex/And that's all he's for".
As David Daiches says in his book The Present Age, "A few swear words do not make a new poetic style," but unfortunately most poets who write about sex think four letter words are not only raunchy but enough. Certain poets of the past really got down to the nitty-gritty. Read more…
EPOCH
dr. charles frederickson
Yesterday, 02:03 PM
EPOCH Rivers no longer flow into Oceanic caldera boiling reduced to Simmer steam open sea evaporation Lid pried off plug pulled Seeping moisture slowly dried up Still life seascapes drained mercilessly Wave swells lay dying on Distant shores naked refuse exposed No longer fit for habitation Swimming scuba diving or drowning Moving with the drift of Continents inexplicably kept off balance Detritus rained down on decomposed Sunken graveyards of [...] Read more…
Love Song tony mims

Tuesday, 06:35 PM
You are so beautiful But yet you are so full of love that is unexpressed I feel the pureness of your heart even thousands of miles apart your love is so close to me may I be the instrument to express your love song I would play your song so soft, so tender, and so sweet. It’s your loving body in my arms [...] Read more…
Double Dutch
matu feliciano
Monday, 07:20 PM
I use to watch the girls Double Dutch slam They were strong and had rhythm Long winded and amazing Double Dutch girls were the ones that spoke up Were challenging Me, I played stickball Something I could do Run that I could do I was picked first I could hit and run Double Dutch was for the girls that Couldn’t leave the side walk Supergirls of the South [...] Read more…
CASINO
dr. charles frederickson
Monday, 02:02 PM
CASINO No clocks shades of addiction Drawn day indistinguishable from night Rotating mirrored ball twinkling stars Crystal sconce fixtures teardrop prisms The setting sun flipped like Tossed coin suspended in midair Calling heads landing tails clinked Into Lady Luck slut machine Winsome charmer on the prowl Fixated on evening score for Last time’s losses re-vowing commitment To never again in vain Spinning roulette wheel beyond control Snake eyes [...] Read more…
Andromeda
Kim McMillon
Friday, 05:12 PM
You are a myth A beautiful woman chained And yet you are wider and brighter Than the milky way Andromeda, you dance across the sky Luminous, a galaxy A bright disk Holding strange wonders When Perseus lead you to freedom Did you think Name a galaxy after me For I’m am full of wonderment Like the sky Always dreaming Always wishing Only I’m the star to be wished upon In my center There [...] Read more…
MAD HATTERS
dr. charles frederickson
Friday, 02:01 PM
MAD HATTERS Hats tipped saluting borderless frontiers Distinctive tribal headdresses crowning glory Flipped lid cover-ups portable roofs Politicked off thrown into ring Bull-legged cowboys ten gallon Stetsons Sunken flattop boaters dented homburgs Scottish tams wide-brimmed flappable sunbonnets Silk lining fedoras deeply felt Cardinal red birettas pointed miters Nuns wimples monks hooded cowls Kaffiyeh Turkish fez yarmulke skullcaps Sikh turbans toweling wound uptight Lesotho conical mokorotio top-hole ornamentation Crimean woolen [...] Read more...

Wordz & Bullets
wordslanger
Dec 4, 05:33 PM
Wordz &Bullets, Bullets &Wordz, runnin from mic to mic, tryin light dis shit, word after bullet, bullet after word strung legit; if the word miss, let the bullet hit, exploding statistics and myths writin a new chapter beyond aftermath, we done the math, grindin while you sleep, we underground a million strong ciphering freedom songs, the lion wakes in Babylon we [...] Read more...

↑ Index

146. steve russell
Re: course proposal query
Thu 11 Dec 2008

Wole Soyinka, the Nigerian Nobel L. is worth looking at -- I've recently read "Climate of Fear," a series of Lectures. & D Walcott, too. Georgrapy plays a huge role in their works.

I'm not sure what you mean by the other side of the equation, though.

--- On Wed, 12/10/08, charles alexander <[redacted]> wrote:
From: charles alexander <[redacted]>
Subject: course proposal query
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, December 10, 2008, 3:58 PM

Hi all,

I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

Thank you,

Charles

Charles Alexander
Chax Press
411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
Tucson, AZ 85705-8332

[redacted] (Chax Press)
[redacted] (cell)
[redacted]

http://chax.org

↑ Index

147. steve russell
Re: course proposal query
Thu 11 Dec 2008

& maybe Jared Diamond for what might be historical anthropology.

--- On Thu, 12/11/08, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: course proposal query
To: "Poetics List (UPenn, UB)" <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, December 11, 2008, 1:09 PM

Wole Soyinka, the Nigerian Nobel L. is worth looking at -- I've recently read "Climate of Fear," a series of Lectures. & D Walcott, too. Georgrapy plays a huge role in their works.

I'm not sure what you mean by the other side of the equation, though.

--- On Wed, 12/10/08, charles alexander <[redacted]> wrote:
From: charles alexander <[redacted]>
Subject: course proposal query

To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, December 10, 2008, 3:58 PM

Hi all,

I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

Thank you,

Charles

Charles Alexander
Chax Press
411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
Tucson, AZ 85705-8332

[redacted] (Chax Press)
[redacted] (cell)
[redacted]

http://chax.org

↑ Index

148. luke daly

House Press/arrow as aarow Holiday Blowout

Thu 11 Dec 2008

---

if (typeof YAHOO == "undefined") { var YAHOO = {}; } YAHOO.Shortcuts = YAHOO.Shortcuts || {}; YAHOO.Shortcuts.hasSensitiveText = false; YAHOO.Shortcuts.sensitivityType = []; YAHOO.Shortcuts.doUlt = false; YAHOO.Shortcuts.location = "us"; YAHOO.Shortcuts.document_id = 0; YAHOO.Shortcuts.document_type = ""; YAHOO.Shortcuts.document_title = "arrow as aarow books"; YAHOO.Shortcuts.document_publish_date = ""; YAHOO.Shortcuts.document_author = "[redacted]"; YAHOO.Shortcuts.document_url = ""; YAHOO.Shortcuts.document_tags = ""; YAHOO.Shortcuts.document_language = "english"; YAHOO.Shortcuts.annotationSet = { "lw_1229024927_0": { "text": "housepress.blogspot.com", "extended": 0, "startchar": 311, "endchar": 333, "start": 311, "end": 333, "extendedFrom": "", "predictedCategory": "", "predictionProbability": "0", "weight": 1, "relScore": 0, "type": ["shortcuts:/us/place/virtual/web_site"], "category": ["IDENTIFIER"], "wikiId": "", "relatedWikiIds": [], "relatedEntities": [], "showOnClick": [], "context": "broadside as well. Check out our blog for further details: housepress.blogspot.com Many thanks, Michael and Luke", "metaData": { "visible": "true" } } }; YAHOO.Shortcuts.headerID = "d34f9a42fa443a9f82729438b7343b64"; Hi Everyone,

We're trying to get some money together for the next round of books we want to make, so we thought we'd have a Holiday Sale. Pick any two arrow as aarow chap books for $6 and we'll throw in a new Daly/Slosek broadside as well. Titles include:

Michael Carr: Softer White
Luke Daly and Rachel Buck: 1-51
Cedar Sigo: Expensive Magic Alan Davies: Book 6
Dana Ward: Goodnight Voice
Logan Ryan Smith: A Ring of Trumpet Brass
Michael Slosek: A Sequence for Cinematic History
Roberto Harrison: reflector

For details or to order, check out the house press blog: housepress.blogspot.com

Many thanks,

Michael and Luke

↑ Index

149. Patrick F. Durgin
KenningEditions.com
Thu 11 Dec 2008

Recently posted to www.kenningeditions.com:

Details on forthcoming titles--Ambient Parking Lot by Pamela Lu and The Kenning Anthology of Poets Theater (1945-1985)--and details on the new catalog/broadside, featuring a substantial excerpt from the former. Kenning Editions make glorious holiday gifts, especially subscriptions.

↑ Index

150. Christina E Lovin
Re: course proposal query
Thu 11 Dec 2008

Charles:

Wendell Berry would be a good source for literature on sustainability. He's written many essays on the topic, as well as some wonderful poetry.

Best,
Christina Lovin

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of charles alexander
Sent: Wednesday, December 10, 2008 3:58 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: course proposal query

Hi all,

I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

Thank you,

Charles

Charles Alexander
Chax Press
411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
Tucson, AZ 85705-8332

[redacted] (Chax Press)
[redacted] (cell)
[redacted]

http://chax.org

↑ Index

151. Poetry Project
Events at The Poetry Project December & January 1
Thu 11 Dec 2008

We¹ve got two great readings next week and then nothing until next year. Scroll down for our New Year¹s Day Marathon Reading line-up.

Monday, December 15, 8 PM
David Larsen & C.J. Martin

Newly relocated from San Francisco's Bay Area, David Larsen is pursuing a career in postgraduate studies. His first book of poetry is called The Thorn (Faux, 2005), and will soon be joined by his translation of Names of the Lion by Abu Abd Allah ibn Khalawayh (from Atticus/Finch). During the St. Mark's Poetry Project Newsletter's 1999-2000 run he provided cover art, and inner graphic thingies. From 2005-2007 he was co-curator of the New Yipes reading/video series at Oakland's 21 Grand. C.J. Martin lives in Maxwell, TX, where he edits the Dos Press chapbook series, as well as the online journal Little Red Leaves (Little Red Leaves), with Julia Drescher. He's the author of Lo, Bittern (Atticus/Finch, 2008) and CITY (Vigilance Society, 2007). Work recent and forthcoming in Broke (w/Julia Drescher), P-Queue, Damn the Caesars, Colorado Review, and as part of the Dusie Kollektiv.

Wednesday, December 17, 8 PM
Midwinter Day: A 30th Anniversary Reading

Bernadette Mayer wrote Midwinter Day three decades ago on December 22, 1978; please join her and some special guests as they read selections from this epic work. Readers include: Bernadette Mayer, Philip Good, Marie Warsh, Lewis Warsh, Barbara Epler, Jamey Jones, Peggy DeCoursey, Lee Ann Brown, Scott Satterwaite, Bill de Noyelles and Brenda Coultas. Called a ³consumate poet² by Robert Creeley, Bernadette Mayer was born in Brooklyn, New York, in 1945. Her first book was published at the age of twenty-three. Many texts later she continues to write progressive poetry from her home in East Nassau, New York. For many years Mayer lived and worked on the Lower East Side of Manhattan where she was the Director of the Poetry Project from 1980-1984. Bernadette Mayer has received grants and awards from PEN American Center, The Foundation for Contemporary Performance Art, the NEA, The Academy of American Poets, and The American Academy of Arts and Letters. She is the author of numerous books of poetry and prose, including: Poetry State Forest (forthcoming from New Directions Press), Two Haloed Mourners: Poems (Granary Books, 1998), Proper Name and Other Stories (1996), The Desires of Mothers to Please Others in Letters (1994), The Bernadette Mayer Reader (1992), Sonnets (1989), Midwinter Day (1982), The Golden Book of Words (1978), and Ceremony Latin (1964).

Thursday, January 1, 2 PM
The 35th Annual New Year¹s Day Marathon Reading

Poets and performers include Bruce Andrews & Sally Silvers, Arthur¹s Landing (Ernie Brooks, Steven Hall, Yvette Perez & Peter Zummo), Jim Behrle, Martine Bellen, Anselm Berrigan, Edmund Berrigan, Barbara Blatner, Justin Bond, Donna Brook, Franklin Bruno, Tisa Bryant, Peter Bushyeager, Reuben Butchart, Steve Cannon, Yoshiko Chuma, Todd Colby, John Coletti, CAConrad, Corina Copp, Brenda Coultas, Geoffrey Cruickshank-Hagenbuckle, Steve Dalachinsky, Mónica de la Torre, Katie Degenetesh, Barry Denny, Maggie Dubris, Douglas Dunn, Marcella Durand, Steve Earle, Will Edmiston, Marty Ehrlich, Joe Eliot, Laura Elrick, Avram Fefer, Bonny Finberg, Jess Fiorini, Corrine Fitzpatrick, Foamola, Merry Fortune, Tonya Foster, David Freeman, Ed Friedman, Joanna Fuhrman, Cliff Fyman, Drew Gardner, John Giorno, John Godfrey, Abraham Gomez-Delgado, Sylvia Gorelick, Stephanie Gray, Ted Greenwald, John S. Hall, Janet Hamill, Diana Hamilton, David Henderson, Bob Hershon, Mitch Highfill, Bob Holman, Erica Hunt, Brenda Iijima, Lisa Jarnot, Hettie Jones, Pierre Joris, Erica Kaufman, Lenny Kaye, Evan Kennedy, Aaron Kiely, Paul Killebrew, David

Kirschenbaum, Bill Kushner, Paul La Farge, Susan Landers, Denize Lauture, Joseph Legaspi, Joel Lewis, Rachel Levitsky, Brendan Lorber, Susan Maurer, Gillian McCain, Tracy McTague, Taylor Mead, Jonas Mekas, Jennifer Monson, Rebecca Moore, Gina Myers, Eileen Myles, Marc Nasdor, Jim Neu, Richard O¹Russa, Akilah Oliver, Geoffrey Olsen, Dael Orlandersmith, Yuko Otomo, Ron Padgett, Julie Patton, Nicole Peyrafitte, Wanda Phipps, Kristin Prevallet, Arlo Quint, Chris Rael, Lee Ranaldo, Citizen Reno, Frances Richard, Renato Rosaldo, Bob Rosenthal, Douglas Rothschild, Thaddeus Rutkowski, Tom Savage, Michael Scharf, Harris Schiff, David Shapiro, Elliott Sharpe, Frank Sherlock, Nathaniel Siegel, Samita Sinha, Hal Sirowitz, Patti Smith, Christopher Stackhouse, Stacy Szymaszek, Anne Tardos, Steven Taylor, Susie Timmons, Rodrigo Toscano, David Vogen, Anne Waldman, Nicole Wallace, Jo Ann Wasserman, Phyllis Wat, Karen Weiser, Dustin Williamson, Max Winter, Don Yorty, Emily XYZ and more.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

152. Jim Andrews
SOUND SEEKER by David Jhave Johnston
Thu 11 Dec 2008

SOUND SEEKER by David Jhave Johnston
http://glia.ca/conu/soundSeeker/wordpress Jhave Johnston is a poet-programmer who has produced a large body of intermedial net art for many years at glia.ca. His most recent project, Sound Seeker, like most of his work, is a Flash app. He says in the "About" section that Sound Seeker is "an online real-time beat-synchronized poem animator. Sound drives the rhythm of the words: their speed and style of display can be controlled." What you see on the homepage of the project are twelve experimental videos produced by Jhave with Sound Seeker. You can access the underlying interactive Flash app itself in the "Method" section of the documentation. In the "Motivation" section, Jhave discusses remarks by Rudolph Arnheim concerning intermedia. This is a fascinating project that also has terrific documentation.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

153. Jim Andrews
New Writing Universe
Fri 12 Dec 2008

New Writing Universe:
http://www.australiacouncil.gov.au/writersguide/newwritinguniverse

Here is an inter-stellar map of the new writing universe. Mouseover the blueish map until a white box appears. Click it. Then click the "+" symbol for text about that particular galaxy.

Nice intro to unsuspecting arts juries???? The domain of the URL is quite unexpected.

ja

↑ Index

154. Gary Sullivan
Ernst Herbeck | Hannah Weiner
Fri 12 Dec 2008

A leaf, a key.

See:

http://garysullivan.blogspot.com

You live life online. So we put Windows on the web.
http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/127032869/direct/01/

↑ Index

155. Chris Chapman toys
Fri 12 Dec 2008

Hi all,

I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.

So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.

Please help!

Chris

↑ Index

156. Mark Weiss
Elliot Carter's birthday
Fri 12 Dec 2008

For those interested in music, the Times has an article today about Elliot Carter's hundrdth birthday concert/celebration, at which a new piece was performed. There's a brief excerpt from it (the whole is 17 minutes long). Carter was a protege of Ives. He's without question the preeminent American composer since. And he's been composing like a mad man this past decade, with no end in sight. A chastening example to us all. A quick intro to his work, and some of his best, are his concertos and quartets.

Mark

↑ Index

157. Rob McLennan
new(ish) on rob's clever blog;
Fri 12 Dec 2008

-- Katia Grubisic, What if red ran out
-- Maxine Chernoffs The Turning
-- The Best Canadian Poetry in English, ed. Stephanie Bolster
-- Diane Woodward at the Mud Oven;
-- Joe Blades, from the book that doesnt close
-- Ongoing notes: some book fairs, Ottawa & Expozine (Andrew Faulkner, the emergency response unit; Colin White; Deanna Fong, Pistol Press)

-- Concordia Universitys Headlight anthology, #10-11
-- A Painters Journey, Volume II, 1974-1979 by Barbara Caruso
-- Amanda Earl's experiment-o now online;
-- The Solipsist by Troy Jollimore
-- Shane Rhodes and Michael McCulloch reading/benefit
-- The Laundromat Essay by Kyle Buckley
-- The Bewilderments of Bernard Willis by Aaron Peck
-- Paul Auster's Man In The Dark
-- An Open Letter to Ottawa Mayor, Larry OBrien
-- Open Text: Canadian Poetry in the 21st Century, ed. Roger Farr
-- Meeting: City of Ottawa to Cut Grants to Artists
-- Ken Belford's lan(d)guage
-- The Blind Bookkeeper (or Why Homer Must Be Blind), Alberto Manguel
-- Ongoing notes: early November, 2008 (The Olive Reading Series; Cameron Anstee, In/Words; Claire Sharpe, Rubicon Press)
-- Alberta dispatch: the University of Alberta
-- Lainna (photos)
-- rob mclennan in Edmonton, University of Alberta, Wed Nov 5 @ noon;
-- Some notes: on (finally) staying at Myrna Kostash's house
-- WRITING: WHAT MATTERS ; University of Alberta
-- Rowland Smith (1938-2008)
-- Nathalie Stephens (Nathanael) in Alberta
-- Alberta dispatch: The Banff Sessions
-- Various Positions: a life of Leonard Cohen etcetera...

www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at the alberta, writing blog www.albertawriting.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at ottawa poetry newsletter, www.ottawapoetry.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at the Chaudiere Books blog, www.chaudierebooks.blogspot.com

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...13th poetry coll'n - The Ottawa City Project ...novel - white
www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

158. Marth King

Terrence Winch & Michael Lally January 8

Fri 12 Dec 2008

Â¥ P R O S EÂ Â Â P R O SÂ Â S E R I E SÂ at the T E L E P H O N E Â G R I L LÂ¥

Â

MICHAEL LALLY and TERENCE WINCH

in a tag-team reading

you wonâ€™t want to miss

Â

Thursday, January 8, 2009, 6:30 [boldly prompt!] to 8:30

Â

The Telephone Bar & Grill â€“ 149 Second Avenue btw 9th & 10th Streets

All trains to Union Square, 6 to Astor Place, F to Second Avenue

Â

MICHAEL LALLY is author of 27 books of poetry and prose, including underground bestseller Rocky Dies Yellow, Cant Be Wrong (winner of the 1997 Oakland Pen Josephine Miles Award for Excellence in Literature), Itâ€™s Not Nostalgia (2000 American Book Award winner), It Takes One to Know One, and March 18, 2003, the anti-Iraq war epic first delivered on what turned out to be the eve of the U.S. invasion. Â Â

Â â€œMarch 18, 2003 is at once as simple and commonplace as a handshake and as complex and varied as a hypothetical dissection of the strata that might compose the geological terrain of some distant planet.â€ wrote Larry Sawyer in Rain Taxi.

Lally has held jobs from college teacher to limousine driver to book reviewer for The Washington Post and The Village Voice to screenwriter on films including Drugstore Cowboy and Fogbound (for which he was honored as co-writer at the Thessalaski International Film Festival in 2003). His longest running day job has been acting in TV and film, with such roles as an art ist on NYPD Blue, a psycho detective on JAG, and a crusty cavalry captain on Deadwood.

Â

TERENCE WINCH, poet, songwriter, archivist, and short story writer may be best known for his compositions and performances with the award-winning traditional Irish band Celtic Thunder.Â Heâ€™s also a much anthologized author of poetry and prose, drawing on his upbringing in Irish-Catholic New York:Â Irish Musicians/American Friends (1985), which won an American Book Award; The Great Indoors (1995) winner of the Columbia Book Award, The Drift of Things (2001) and most recently, Boy Drinkers (2007).

Â

Winchâ€™s prose works are collected in That Special Place: New World Irish Stories (2004) and Contenders (1989).Â The CD When New York Was Irish, named after his best-known song, was released by Celtic Thunder Music in 2007.Â

Â

Â â€œWith his musicianâ€™s ear and Irishmanâ€™s humor, Terence Winch pokes fun at the Holy, makes sacred the mundane, and redefines the meaning of â€˜grace.â€™â€ --Meg Kearney

Â

â€œTerry Winch writes.... in a voice that manages to be understated, precise, and casual all at once.â€ --Mark Wallace

Â Â Â Â

The reading takes place in the comfortable backroom Lounge of the Telephone Bar, serving fine vegetarian and carnivore fare, and all usual liquids.

Â

Admission is free, but we pass the hat. All proceeds go to the readers. The series is curated by Martha King and Elinor Nauen, and offers prose readings usually on the first Thursday ofÂ the month, from September through June.

For more information or to be added to (or dropped from) the e-mail list, contact [redacted] or [redacted]

.

↑ Index

159. Camille Martin sonnets and collages
Fri 12 Dec 2008

Hi, folks. I've been working on a collection of edgy sonnets, some of which can be seen at the following links:

http://www.experiment-o.com/issueone.pdf
http://www.stridemagazine.co.uk/Stride%20mag%202008/sept%202008/camille%20martin%20poems.htm

http://5trope.com/martin.html
http://www.thismagazine.ca/issues/2007/05/3sennets.php
http://www.walrusmagazine.com/articles/2007.12-poetry-camille-martin/

Some of you might be interested in having a look at new collages, which are posted on my website:

http://www.camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_11
http://www.camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_12
http://www.camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_13
http://www.camillemartin.ca/index.php?pr=Collages_14

Still kicking,
Camille

Camille Martin
Toronto

↑ Index

160. Poetics List
a poetry book by Susana Gardner [on behalf of Jules Boykoff]
Sat 13 Dec 2008

At the Tangent Press, we are proud to announce the release of [lapsed insel weary]

a poetry book by Susana Gardner

please order books by visiting our website:
http://www.thetangentpress.org/books.html

$12

"As the title suggests this is a sequence of articulations on the enduring themes of loss, separation, and messy love: love is always messy. But Gardner does not indulge in the easy clichés of introspection or confession: here she conjures up an hypnotic, somnambulistic symphony of exquisite desolation. 'No man is an island' wrote John Donne but Gardner knows that is only a half truth, especially if you are a woman. Against a backdrop of the sea the breaking waters of waves and birth crash through these pages with a contradictory melancholic joy. Her island is inescapable but it has a bird and it is shot through with the vitality of colour and the colour of tenacious life. Disturbingly beautiful." --Geraldine Monk

"Architecturally wild and sturdy, Gardner's book comes from a place beyond fear and despair, from a place of deep proclivity, which is where poetry becomes ancient, modern, and new." --Elizabeth Treadwell

"Susana Gardner's [lapsed insel weary] is an extended social lyric of longing that refuses isolation because the "grandmany" is all around, in ancestry and memory and books and and shared future. Gardner's is a language that recovers itself—lace re-tatted, a house rebuilt—and there is grandeur in the recovery. This is poetry full of heart and intelligence." -- Carolyn Forché

↑ Index

161. Adam Parrish

Re: course proposal query

Sat 13 Dec 2008

Consider Michel de Certeau's "The Practice of Everyday Life," particularly the chapters entitled "Walking in the City" and "Spatial Stories." Not easy reading by a long shot, but de Certeau draws a number of comparisons between the use of language and urban geography/ planning that might provoke some interesting discussions...

Also:
- William Whyte, "The Social Life of Spaces"
- Iain Borden, "Another Pavement, Another Beach: Skateboarding and the Performative Critique of Architecture" (another favorite of mine)

Adam

On Dec 10, 2008, at 3:58 PM, charles alexander wrote:

> Hi all,
>
> I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in- > print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

>
> Thank you,
>
> Charles
>
> Charles Alexander
> Chax Press
> 411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
> Tucson, AZ 85705-8332
>
> [redacted] (Chax Press)
> [redacted] (cell)
> [redacted]
>
> http://chax.org
> welcome.html

↑ Index

162. Eric Elshtain
New Beard of Bees Chapbook
Sat 13 Dec 2008

Beard of Bees is pleased with its latest number, Maria & Tim Are Friends.

What kind of friends? Read Cynthia Cheung-Wun Liang's chapbook & find out.

http://www.beardofbees.com/liang.html

Best,

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

163. lanny quarles
Re: toys
Sat 13 Dec 2008

Try Barbara Maria Stafford's _Artful Science_ and it seems like there should be something from Zone books, maybe an essay in Zone 6 Incorporations. You might do a toy chest / treasure chest (memory) side board and use Uwe Fleckner's book.. Iris Murdoch is mentioned in Valentine Cunningham's _Reading after Theory_ with a theory of theory as doll, or toy, but I would contrast that with something like Indra Kagis McEwen's philological approach / analysis in _Socrate's Ancestor_. The reason I say this is because of the word toy itself:

Here is just the first entry from the OED:

(tOI) name="mspell"Forms: ? 4, 6â€“7 toye, 6â€“ toy; pl. 6â€“7 toyes, toies, 6â€“ toys. name="mderivation"[Toy n. and vb. (formerly toye) have been in common use since c 1530, when both are given by Palsgr., and used by Skelton and Tindale. But a single instance of toye n., apparently the same word, occurs in Robert of Brunne. It is difficult to conceive how such a word in use c 1300 should thus disappear for two centuries, and then should all at once burst into view with a wide sense-development. The etymology is equally problematic, and, in spite of current conjectures, must still be considered unascertained: see Note below.] name="mI"I. Abstract senses, meaning action, act, notion, feeling.

â€ name="mI.1"1. Amorous sport, dallying, toying; with pl., an act or piece of amorous sport, a light caress. [1303 R. Brunne Handl. Synne 7891 Whedyr hyt be yn a womman handlyng, Or yn any oÃ¾er lusty Ã¾yng;+AmendeÃ¾ Å ow, pur charyte, And makeÃ¾ nat a-mys Ã¾e toye [so all MSS.], Ãžat Ã¾e fende of Å ou haue Ioye.] 1565 Cooper Thesaurus s.v. Amo: AmatoriÃ¦ leuitates, Louers toyes. 1590 Spenser F.Q. ii. vi. 37 A foe of folly and immodest toy. 1594 I Epithal. 365 For greedy pleasure, carelesse of your toyes, Thinks more upon her paradise of joyes, Then what ye do. 1594 Willobie Avisa xlvii. iii, These toyes in tyme will make her yielde. 1667 Milton P.L. ix. 1034 So said he, and forbore not glance or toy, Of amorous intent, well understood Of Eve. 1668 G. Etherege She Would if She Could ii. ii, Her toy was such, that every touch Would make a lover madder. 1707 Ward Hud. Rediv. ii. ii. 8 (Farmer) Kisses, Love-Toys, and am'rous Prattle.

This line: But a single instance of toye n., apparently the same word, occurs in Robert of Brunne. It is difficult to conceive how such a word in use c 1300 should thus disappear for two centuries, and then should all at once burst into view with a wide sense-development. Seems like a good way to segue into the Fleckner material if it's of interest.

There's this which I made while performing the search:
http://www.hevanet.com/solipsis/kalidasa.png

My latest blog entry is also called Sick-Sanka-Klaus:
http://jellybeanweirdo.blogspot.com/2008/12/sick-sanka-klaus.html

----- Original Message -----
From: "Chris Chapman" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, December 12, 2008 7:26 AM
Subject: toys

Hi all,

I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.

So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.

Please help!

Chris

↑ Index

164. Troy Camplin
Re: course proposal query
Sat 13 Dec 2008

YOu might consider some of Frederick Turner's work as well.

Troy

_____
From: Christina E Lovin <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, December 11, 2008 5:09:13 PM
Subject: Re: course proposal query

Charles:

Wendell Berry would be a good source for literature on sustainability. He's written many essays on the topic, as well as some wonderful poetry.

Best,
Christina Lovin

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of charles alexander
Sent: Wednesday, December 10, 2008 3:58 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: course proposal query

Hi all,

I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

Thank you,

Charles

Charles Alexander
Chax Press
411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
Tucson, AZ 85705-8332

[redacted] (Chax Press)
[redacted] (cell)
[redacted]

http://chax.org

↑ Index

165. Camille Martin apologies
Sat 13 Dec 2008

My apologies for the double posting about my new work. Unbeknownst to me, my subscription to Poetics had expired, so my first post didn't go through. I sent a second post, but then the administration resubscribed me and both messages got posted.

Camille

↑ Index

166. Hilary Clark
Re: course proposal query
Sat 13 Dec 2008

Charles,

I can't remember if anyone has suggested this, but Gary Snyder's essays and poetry might be useful. I enjoyed the essays in The Practice of the Wild.

Hilary Clark

Quoting Christina E Lovin <[redacted]>:

> Charles:
>
> Wendell Berry would be a good source for literature on sustainability. He's written many essays on the topic, as well as some wonderful poetry.
>
> Best,
> Christina Lovin
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of charles alexander
> Sent: Wednesday, December 10, 2008 3:58 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: course proposal query
>
> Hi all,
>
> I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of > human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

>
> Thank you,
>
> Charles
>
> Charles Alexander
> Chax Press
> 411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
> Tucson, AZ 85705-8332
>
> [redacted] (Chax Press)
> [redacted] (cell)
> [redacted]
>
> http://chax.org

↑ Index

167. Wanda Phipps
Here's a reminder
Sat 13 Dec 2008

A little reminder--hope you can make this on Monday-would be great to see you:

The Club at La Mama invites you to SHOOTING FROM THE LIP
Poets spew hot lead in the oral tradition of hypnotrance wordfire for your entertainment and delight
featuring
Kristen Prevallet, Bakar Wilson, Basil King,
Wanda Phipps, Vincent Katz, Ilka Scobie and Valery Oisteanu.

Hosted by Jeffrey Cyphers Wright and William Electric Black.
http://www.lamama.org POETRY ELECTRIC - MONDAY - 12/15 - 8PM - LA MAMA CLUB THEATRE - $8 74A EAST 4TH STREET BETWEEN 2ND & 3RD AVENUES

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

168. Hilary Clark
Re: toys
Sat 13 Dec 2008

Chris,

Try "The Dy-Dee Doll" in Anne Sexton's "Death Baby" series. The whole series, in fact: the baby, the I, death itself, as a frozen or stone baby.

Also Marge Piercy's "Barbie Doll." Also Colette Inez's "Without Toys at the Home" and David St.John's "Dolls" (the last two found with the Poetry Tool on the Poetry Foundation website, a great resource).

It's interesting how in poems, dolls are usually creepy. Freud had something to say on this in his essay "The Uncanny."

Hope this helps,
Hilary Clark

Quoting Chris Chapman <[redacted]>:

> Hi all,
>
> I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.
>
> So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.
>
> Please help!
>
> Chris

↑ Index

169. Geoffrey Gatza
Please buy my new book Kenmore: Poem Unlimited
Sat 13 Dec 2008

Hello,

Most times I¹m bothering you about BlazeVOX [books] but today I am pleased to promote my new book now available from Menendez Press!

Kenmore: Poem Unlimited by Geoffrey Gatza
Is now out and available for sale on Amazon $16

http://www.geoffreygatza.com/Kenmore

Read a sample here! Also on the page are FREE works that go along with the Kenmore book. So please check it out along with an artists statement to explain the whole installation!

Hurray and happy holidays to you and your family :-)

Best, Geoffrey

↑ Index

170. Jennifer Karmin
JOB: Gettysburg College
Sat 13 Dec 2008

(this is a forward so please don't respond to me. good luck!)

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH -- EMERGING WRITER LECTURER

One-year appointment, beginning August 2009, for a creative writer who plans a career that involves college-level teaching, to teach three courses per semester, including Introduction to Creative Writing and an advanced course in the writer's genre, as well as to assist with departmental writing activities. Mentorship for teaching and assistance in professional development provided.

M.A., with a concentration in creative writing, M.F.A., or Ph.D. with creative dissertation, required. Teaching experience and literary magazine publications are essential. Competitive salary.

To apply, send letter of application, c.v., the names of three references, and a 5-10 page writing sample to Emerging Writer Lectureship, Department of English, Box 397, Gettysburg College, 300 N. Washington St., Gettysburg, PA 17325, postmarked by January 30, 2009. Electronic applications will not be accepted.

Gettysburg College is a highly selective liberal arts college located within 90 minutes of the Washington/Baltimore metropolitan area. Established in 1832, the College has a rich history and is situated on a 220-acre campus with an enrollment of over 2,600 students.

↑ Index

171. Michael Tod Edgerton
Re: course proposal query / poetics of place
Sat 13 Dec 2008

Miwon Kwon's One Place After Another looks at contemporary site-specific and -responsive sculpture and installation art. I'm just beginning it now in order to think about the "ethical" dimension of responsiveness in contemporary artistic (literary and visual) practices, including ekphrasis (in the most expansive sense) as well as to see if it might not be a source for theorizing poetics of place. If you get any good leads off-list and don't mind sharing them, that'd be great. I didn't much theorizing on poetics of place back in the summer, but maybe I just wasn't looking in the right places (I had expected that there'd be tons of stuff...).

One article I did find through JSTOR that might be of margnal use to you:

Place and the Paradox of Modernity
Author(s): Timothy Oakes
Source: Annals of the Association of American Geographers, Vol. 87, No. 3 (Sep., 1997), pp. 509-531
Published by: Taylor & Francis, Ltd. on behalf of the Association of American Geographers Stable URL: http://www.jstor.org/stable/2564066

And then there's Liz Wills's new book, Radical Vernacular: Lorine Niedecker and the Poetics of Place, which I haven't seen yet.

Thanks,
Tod

Michael Tod Edgerton

_____

If the challenge of our time is the challenge of empathy, to make an empathetic relation; that is, to see another person, to feel their pain, story, whatever--that--that how can a poetic material making be part of--of that? ~ Ann Hamilton, in an interview about her installation, Indigo Blue

--- On Wed, 12/10/08, charles alexander <[redacted]> wrote:
From: charles alexander <[redacted]>
Subject: course proposal query
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, December 10, 2008, 2:58 PM

Hi all,

I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

Thank you,

Charles

Charles Alexander
Chax Press
411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
Tucson, AZ 85705-8332

[redacted] (Chax Press)
[redacted] (cell)
[redacted]

http://chax.org

↑ Index

172. David-Baptiste Chirot

Alexis Grigoropoulos.i--a leaflet circulated at his funeral written by school children:

Sat 13 Dec 2008

This is a translation of a leaflet that was circulated at the funeral of Alexis Grigoropoulos. It was written by school children:

WE WANT A BETTER WORLD

HELP US.

We are not terrorists, yobs, thugs.

WE ARE YOUR CHILDREN!

We are known, but still unknown.

We make dreams, donâ€™t kill our dreams!We are impetuous, do not kill our impetuosity!

REMEMBER

Once you too were young.

Now you chase money, you only care for image, you got fatter and lost your hair.

YOU FORGOT!

We expected that you would support us.

We expected that you will show some interest, that for once you will make us proud.

IN VAIN!

You live fake lives, you have bended your heads down, you have dropped your trousers and you are waiting for the day you will die.

MATERIAL IS EVERYWHERE

LOVE IS NOWHERE

REALLY, NOWHERE

Where are our parents?

Where are the intellectuals and artists?

Why arenâ€™t they outside to protect us?

THEY ARE KILLING US

YOUR CHILDREN

Hakan Akcura

http://open-flux.blogspot.com/

http://hakanakcura.googlepages.com/

Send e-mail faster without improving your typing skills.
http://windowslive.com/Explore/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_speed_122008

↑ Index

173. William Allegrezza

New Issue of Moria!

Sat 13 Dec 2008

Check out the new issue of Moria at http://www.moriapoetry.com.

It contains poetry by:
Camille Martin, Charles Perrone, Heller Levinson, Philip Byron Oakes, Trish Falin, Rebecca Eddy,
Chris Major, Onur Caymaz, Maw Shein Win,
Daniel Wilcox, Joshua Ware, Caitlyn Paley,
Sean Burn, C. John Graham, Peter Ciccariello,

Alana Madison, Ruth Lepson, Vernon Frazer,
Paul Siegell, Mary Kasimor, Barbara Daniels,
Daniel Y. Harris, Christoph Girard, Ron Czerwien, Michael Bernstein, Elisabeth von Uhl, Adam Fieled, Matina L. Stamatakis & Jeff Crouch, Mara Galvez-Breton, Robert Mueller, Charles Freeland, Cindy Savett, Bobbi Lurie, Amy King, Naomi Buck Palagi, Carol Dorf, Reb Livingston, Jessie Janeshek, Francesco Levato, Jeff Encke, Debrah Morkun, Matt Johnstone, Andrew Topel, Shane Plante, Marthe Reed.

It also has several reviews.

Bill Allegrezza
http://www.moriapoetry.com

↑ Index

174. Alan Sondheim
some music
Sun 14 Dec 2008

---

some music

six pieces of music doing something new with electric guitar and then with parlor and electric-acoustic guitars, but with electric first thinking through a different kind of complexity that's in the first four pieces primarily the first three, i'll be performing this tuesday but these were done in quietude and not in the sound of a club, here you can hear thinking and broad bandwidth of music and sound, my favorites, my children, me, ah

http://www.alansondheim.org/lumber0.mp3
http://www.alansondheim.org/lumber1.mp3
http://www.alansondheim.org/lumber2.mp3
http://www.alansondheim.org/lumber4.mp3
http://www.alansondheim.org/lumber5.mp3
http://www.alansondheim.org/lumber6.mp3

↑ Index

175. Kevin Killian
Re: toys
Sun 14 Dec 2008

Hi Chris,

You are on the right track with Daniel Tiffany's book which is so excellent!!!

Also I wonder if you've seen the Baudelaire piece, "A Philosophy of Toys," that's another good one, and undergraduates seem to really identify with CB in this memoir slash essay, really extraordinary thinking and writing,

Kevin K
San Francisco, CA

> Hi all,
>
> I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.
>
> So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the > subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.
>
> Please help!
>
> Chris

↑ Index

176. Jim Andrews
links to (mostly) recent writerly works of net art
Sun 14 Dec 2008

Below are links to (mostly) recent writerly works of net art.

SOUND SEEKER - JHAVE JOHNSTON (CANADA)
http://glia.ca/conu/soundSeeker/wordpress Jhave Johnston is a poet-programmer who has produced a large body of intermedial net art for many years at http://glia.ca . His most recent project, Sound Seeker, like most of his work, is a Flash app. He says in the "About" section that Sound Seeker is "an online real-time beat-synchronized poem animator. Sound drives the rhythm of the words: their speed and style of display can be controlled." What you see on the homepage of the project are twelve experimental videos produced by Jhave with Sound Seeker. You can access the underlying interactive Flash app itself in the "Method" section of the documentation. In the "Motivation" section, Jhave discusses remarks by Rudolph Arnheim concerning intermedia. This is a fascinating project that also has terrific documentation. Well, the documentation is part of the project, isn't it.

JASON NELSON (USA) http://secrettechnology.com/madethis/enemy6.html Jason says: "I made this. You play it. We are enemies." is a sequel of sorts to "Game, Game, Game and Again Game" (http://secrettechnology.com/gamegame/gamegame.html), based on screen shots from odd and popular sites and is another artwork/platform game/digital poem." Interesting as a metaphor for what we do when we use the corporate sites/tools such as Google and Yahoo. And Facebook, Second Life, yadayada.

NEW WRITING UNIVERSE (AUSTRALIA) http://www.australiacouncil.gov.au/writersguide/newwritinguniverse/ Here is an inter-stellar map of the new writing universe. Mouseover the blueish map until a white box appears. Click it. Then click the "+" symbol for text about that particular constellation. Nice intro to unsuspecting arts juries???? The domain of the URL is quite unexpected: australian.council.gov.au

ALLISON CLIFFORD (SCOTLAND) http://www.sweetoldetc.org "The Sweet Old Etcetera" is an interactive artwork interpreting the work of poet E.E. Cummings for an online environment. The project received an Alt-W Production Award from the Scottish Digital Media Fund and was later nominated for a BAFTA in the interactive media category in 2006."

MARINA ZERBARINI (ARGENTINA) http://www.marina-zerbarini.com.ar This is an extensive site by the Argentine net artist Marina Zerbarini. Since 1998 she has been creating net art. She teaches Multimedia and Electronic Arts at National University Institute and at the University Tres de Febrero, Buenos Aires. She collaborates in the group "Colaborarte". Look for the NetArt section of the site (it's in the Galleria section). It is primarily in Flash. And here is an article/interview with her in Spanish and English: http://netartreview.net/monthly/minima_marina.pdf

ALTERACTION (MEXICO) http://www.alteraction.com Here is an interesting approach to interactive fiction by Javier Maldonado and friends. This piece is several years old, but I haven't seen it before. A little blurb about it: "By revolving around characters, moral choices, scandal and relationships, but keeping you in the thick of the story rather than watching from above as in The Sims, Masq fills the soap slot on the PC. It's a genre that's going to be unstoppably popular one day." (quote from PC Gamer Magazine UK)

All these links are also on my links page at http://vispo.com/misc/links.htm

Happy holidays to all the fine folks on the Poetics list.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

177. steve russell
Re: Elliot Carter's birthday
Sun 14 Dec 2008

---

i didn't realize that Carter was That old. I had his work with Benny Goodman on vinyl. I've lost lots of great records, hundreds.

--- On Fri, 12/12/08, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Elliot Carter's birthday
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, December 12, 2008, 1:33 PM

For those interested in music, the Times has an article today about Elliot Carter's hundrdth birthday concert/celebration, at which a new piece was performed. There's a brief excerpt from it (the whole is 17 minutes long). Carter was a protege of Ives. He's without question the preeminent American composer since. And he's been composing like a mad man this past decade, with no end in sight. A chastening example to us all. A quick intro to his work, and some of his best, are his concertos and quartets.

Mark

↑ Index

178. Metta Sama
New On-line Lit Mag seeks Submissions: The Altruist
Sun 14 Dec 2008

(this is a forward; if you have any questions, please use the addresses provided below...)

THE ALTRUIST
is a new, online literary magazine seeking submissions for its inaugural issue. We accept fresh and innovative works of fiction, poetry, interviews, and more. For further information on what we accept, along with submission guidelines, visit www.altruisticword.com or email us at [redacted].

↑ Index

179. David-Baptiste Chirot

New at SITE/SIGHT/CITE & Cronaca Souversiva Feneon blogs

Sun 14 Dec 2008

CRONACA SOUVERSIVA FENEON

Has a Call for Participants

http://cronacasouversivafeneon.blogspot.com/

YOUR CHILDREN--Alexis Grigoropoulos--Poem written ...FELIX FENEON AS CONCEPTUAL POETArt and Anarchism: Felix Feneon and PointillismLuigi Galleani: The Principal of Organization to ...

SITE/SIGHT/CITE
VISUAL-SONIC-VISCERAL POETRIES

Has ongoing Call for Visual Poetry/Mail Art

http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/Chirot: Through the chink in the FenceYOUR CHILDREN--Alexis Grigoropoulos--Poem written ...Video: Convoy of Death & US Silence as Afghan All...As long as people believe in absurdities, they wil...presente Featured Articles --Great Activist Journa...MARIO LOPRETE--Arte & Design--Lasciare Il Segno--O...soirée sos-art.com saturday/samedi 13 décembreVideo: Gaza... oh beloved GazaFilm "Chronicles of a Refugee" now available onlin...TAKE ACTION: Close School of Americas-- Rumsfeld ...DANIEL DE CULLA: Visual Poetry/Poesia Visual "po...Tonerworks Call for Artist Book Edition for The Vi...3 VISUAL POETRY/ MAIL ART CALLS: WAR or PEACE & 6...DORIAN RIBAS MARINHO--for GAZA--GUANTANAMO--ABU GH...Bangs, for Bucks, Poetry and Steel Reserve: re Do...réparation de poésie NO. 20: Invitationt to parti...SETTLER POGROMS AGAINST PALESTINIANSdbCHIROT: In the Poem (from a Poem By Paul Celan...Roberto Bolano: 2006 & Romantic Dogs --NYRB Revie...LENGUA Death; I am the surgical principle of the c...Fernando Aguiar: Convite para a Inauguração do C...CLEMENTE PADIN: Latinamerican is one - América L...Ema Szilagyi: Photos (from Florean Museum)Submission Calls! No Fee Contests!Videos & Reports: UN Security Council condemns Is... [Cageprisoners] What's New at [Cageprisoners.com] ...

Send e-mail faster without improving your typing skills.
http://windowslive.com/Explore/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_speed_122008

↑ Index

180. Angeline, Mary
Re: apologies
Sun 14 Dec 2008

Don't apologize. Your work is lovely. Thank You for the posting.

_____

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Camille Martin Sent: Sat 12/13/2008 9:00 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: apologies

My apologies for the double posting about my new work. Unbeknownst to me, my subscription to Poetics had expired, so my first post didn't go through. I sent a second post, but then the administration resubscribed me and both messages got posted.

Camille

↑ Index

181. Angeline, Mary
Re: [BULK] Re: toys
Sun 14 Dec 2008

Chris,
Sandra Cisneros has a short piece titled "Barbi" (If I remember correctly)

_____

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Hilary Clark
Sent: Sat 12/13/2008 11:21 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: [BULK] Re: toys

Chris,

Try "The Dy-Dee Doll" in Anne Sexton's "Death Baby" series. The whole series, in fact: the baby, the I, death itself, as a frozen or stone baby.

Also Marge Piercy's "Barbie Doll." Also Colette Inez's "Without Toys at the Home" and David St.John's "Dolls" (the last two found with the Poetry Tool on the Poetry Foundation website, a great resource).

It's interesting how in poems, dolls are usually creepy. Freud had something to say on this in his essay "The Uncanny."

Hope this helps,
Hilary Clark

Quoting Chris Chapman <[redacted]>:

> Hi all,
>
> I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.
>
> So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.
>
> Please help!
>
> Chris

↑ Index

182. George Bowering

Re: toys

Sun 14 Dec 2008

Kevin,

While we have you here: when can we go to our local store and get the Spicer tome?

Mr. G.H.Bowering
Does not roll through stop signs.

↑ Index

183. Angeline, Mary
Re: toys
Sun 14 Dec 2008

Chris,
Also Roland Barthes has an essay on Toys in Mythologies. French Toys.

_____

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Kevin Killian
Sent: Sun 12/14/2008 1:45 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: toys

Hi Chris,

You are on the right track with Daniel Tiffany's book which is so excellent!!!

Also I wonder if you've seen the Baudelaire piece, "A Philosophy of Toys," that's another good one, and undergraduates seem to really identify with CB in this memoir slash essay, really extraordinary thinking and writing,

Kevin K
San Francisco, CA

> Hi all,
>
> I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.
>
> So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the > subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.
>
> Please help!
>
> Chris

↑ Index

184. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books

Re: toys

Sun 14 Dec 2008

David Trinidad has (in Hand Over Heart?) a poem about playing with dolls that has the smoothest, shiniest surface of any sestina I've ever read. Also, when she put me to bed my grandmother used to read me a sentimental poem, perhaps by Edgar Guest, about toys who are sad because an angel came during the night and took their little boy away. It affected me permanently. Jeffrey

----- Original Message -----
From: "Chris Chapman" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, December 12, 2008 8:26 AM
Subject: toys

> Hi all,
>
> I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.
>
> So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the > subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.
>
> Please help!
>
> Chris

↑ Index

185. amy king
Seeking Fiction and Poetry
Sun 14 Dec 2008

Fogged Clarity seeks exceptional fiction and poetry.

We are a fledging arts review seeking short fiction or poetry. The online journal will begin running in two weeks and select pieces will be transcribed into a print edition beginning next year. If your work is selected for the site, it will automatically be considered for the print edition. Work selected for the print edition will be compensated monetarily.

Please send your work to [redacted], along with your name and contact information.

Sincerely,

Ben Evans

Fogged Clarity

http://www.foggedclarity.com

_____

Recent work

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/King.html

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

186. joseph bradshaw
Re: course proposal query / poetics of place
Mon 15 Dec 2008

William Fox's work may be useful for this course.

From his website: "William L. Fox is a writer, independent scholar, and poet whose work is a sustained inquiry into how human cognition transforms land into landscape. His numerous nonfiction books rely upon fieldwork with artists and scientists in extreme environments to provide the narratives through which he conducts his investigations."

(there are links to many of his books at the bottom of the page)

http://www.wlfox.net/

↑ Index

187. Adam Fieled
PFS Post: Sarah Birl & David Prater
Mon 15 Dec 2008

Check out some sparkling new work from Philly poet Sarah Birl and globe-trotting Australian poet David Prater on PFS Post:

http://www.artrecess.blogspot.com

Thanks,
Adam

↑ Index

188. Ron Silliman
Carla Harryman's Adorno's Noise
Mon 15 Dec 2008

Adornoâ€™s Noise is a brand new collection of experimental, poetic, and conceptual essays by poet, playwright, novelist, critic & collaborator Carla Harryman, just out from Essay Press.

A member of the Grand Piano collective, Harryman is co-editor of Lust for Life, a volume of essays on the novelist Kathy Acker and has published articles on women's innovative writing by and on poetsâ€™ theater and performance. Her poets' theater and interdisciplinary performance works have been presented nationally and internationally. She lives in the Detroit Area and serves on the faculty of the Creative Writing Program at Eastern Michigan University.

Other books by Carla Harryman include the experimental novels Gardener of Stars (Atelos 2001) and The Words: After Carl Sandburg's Rootabaga Stories and Jean-Paul Sartre (O Books, 1999); two volumes of selected writings, There Never Was a Rose without a Thorn (City Lights 1995) and Animal Instincts: Prose, Plays and Essays (This, 1989); and many other collections of poetry, prose, and new genre writings, including Open Box (Belladonna, 2007) and Baby (Adventures in Poetry, 2006).

More information on Adornoâ€™s Noise, including online purchasing, can be found at http://www.ithaca.edu/faculty/ctaylor/Upcoming/Harryman.htm

Essay Press is edited by Eula Biss, Stephen Cope, and Catherine Taylor. We are writers who do not share a single cohesive aesthetic, but rather a dedication to publishing work that might not otherwise be published. With the help of our board of advisorsâ€”which includes writers Ammiel Alcalay, John D'Agata, and Susan Stewart as well as Graywolf Press editor Jeffrey Shottsâ€”we expect to put out an eclectic catalogue that will include a few well-known writers and many new or emerging authors.

↑ Index

189. Michael Kelleher
Literary Buffalo Newsletter 12.15.08-12.21.08
Mon 15 Dec 2008

LITERARY BUFFALO
12.15.08-12.21.08

END-OF-THE-YEAR GIVING

Each year, thousands of adults, adolescents and children in Western New York lead lives of quiet desperation, untouched by literature. It doesn't have to be that way. Every dollar you give to Just Buffalo's year-end campaign will be spent to bring literature into these people's lives, making them a little less quiet, a little less desperate.

To make a year end donation, please visit our website:

http://www.justbuffalo.org/index.php?task=view&id=45

You can also donate over the phone by calling [redacted]. Or you can send a check or money order to Just Buffalo Literary Center, 617 Main St., Suite 202A, Buffalo, NY 14203.

The Literary Buffalo Newsletter will be on Holiday Hiatus for the next two weeks. We will return on January 5, 2009. Until then...Happy Holidays!

EVENTS THIS WEEK

Visit the Literary Buffalo calendar at www.justbuffalo.org for more detailed info on these events. All events free and open to the pubic unless otherwise noted.

12.16.08

Just Buffalo/Talking Leaves...Books
Short Story Masters Discussion Group - Alice Munro
Hosted by fiction writer Greg Gerke (www.greggerke.com)
Tuesday, December 16, 6:30 PM
Talking Leaves...Books, 3158 Main St.
Stories to be discussed: "The Albanian Virgin" and "Dimension"

"The Albanian Virgin" is available in her book Open Secrets and Selected Stories

"Dimension" is available online at the New YorkerË‡Ë‡ http://www.newyorker.com/archive/2006/06/05/060605fi_fiction

JUST BUFFALO MEMBER WRITER CRITIQUE GROUP

http://www.justbuffalo.org/docs/Writer_Critique_Group.pdf

UNSUBSCRIBE

If you would like to unsubscribe from this list, just say so and you will immediately be removed.

_____
Michael Kelleher
Artistic Director
Just Buffalo Literary Center
Market Arcade
617 Main St., Ste. 202A
Buffalo, NY 14203
[redacted]
[redacted] (fax)
www.justbuffalo.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

190. Chris Chapman

Re: toys

Mon 15 Dec 2008

Great 'thank-you' to Lanny, Kevin, and Hilary, and those who replied off-list to my request for real toy stories/poetries...

Here's the list I've put together by way of Lois Rostow Kuznets book _When Toys Come Alive_:

-Pinocchio
-Nutcracker - "The Story of the Hard Nut" - short story predecessor
-A Doll's House
-Raggedy Ann
-Wonderland
-Winnie the Pooh
-Kenneth Grahame: "A Departure" - 2 children bury a doll and toy bull in collection _Dream Days_
-Rachel Fields: "Hitty: Her First Hundred Years" -'Hitty' is a doll who writes her own story with pen larger than herself
-Plutarch writes about dead daughter's dolls
-Richard and Maria Edgeworth propose a 'rational toyshop' in "Practical Education"
-Hero of Alexandria : "Epivitalia" - about self-moving statues
-Frankenstein

-Barthes "Mythologies" - wooden toys over plastic for imaginative use
-"Alice" film by Jan Svankmajer (absolutely rocks!)
-animist genesis stories
-"The Silent Playmate" -short story?
-"The Beautiful Wassilissa" - Russian fairytale that mentions toys
-Pygmalion-Galatea :: Pandora-Prometheus - women fashioned from elemental materials
-"Dream of the Rood"
-Margery Williams Bianco "The Velveteen Rabbit"
-Hans Christian Andersen: "Steadfast Tin Soldier"
-Lynne Reid Banks: "Indian in the Cupboard"
-HG Wells : "Little Wars"
-Robert Louis Stephenson : "A Martial Elegy for Some Lead Soldiers"
-Saki : "The Toys of Peace"
-Pauline Clarke : "The Return of the Twelves" or "The Twelves and the Genii"
- -Branwell Bronte "History of the Young Men"
-Katherine Mansfield: "The Doll's House"
-E. Nesbit: "The Magic City"
-Sylvia Cassedy: "Lucie Babbidge's House"
-Beatrix Potter: "Tale of Two Bad Mice"
-Frances Hodgson Burnett: "Racketty-Packetty House"
-William Sleator: "Among the Dolls"
-Sylvia Cassedy: "Behind the Attic Wall"
-Carol Sherwin Bailey: "Miss Hickory"
-Kenneth Grahame: "Sawdust and Sin"
-Margery Williams Bianco: "Little Wooden Doll" and "Poor Cecco"
-Dean Koontz: "Oddkins"
-Richard Kennedy: "Amy's Eyes"
-Russell Hoban: "The Mouse and His Child"
-ETA Hoffman: "The Sandman"
-Golem Myths
-Nathaniel Hawthorne: "Featherstop"
-Cyril Beaumont: "The Mysterious Toyshop"
-Angela Carter: "The Magic Toyshop"
-Charles Dickens: "Our Mutual Friend"
-Ursula Morey Williams: "The Toymaker's Daughter"
-Marge Piercy: "He, She and It"
-Yeats' Byzantiums
-Rainier Maria Rilke: "Some Reflections on Dolls"
-Kenward Elmslie: poem: "Girl Machine"
-Eavan Boland: poem: "The Doll's Museum in Dublin"
-Rilke: poem: 4th Duino Elegy - doll meets angel

-WBenjamin: article: "toys and games"
-Hans Bellmer: "The Games of the Doll"
-Wallace Stevens: poem: "The Dove in the Belly"

Happy holidays!
Chris

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Hilary Clark
Sent: Saturday, December 13, 2008 1:21 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: toys

Chris,

Try "The Dy-Dee Doll" in Anne Sexton's "Death Baby" series. The whole series, in fact: the baby, the I, death itself, as a frozen or stone baby.

Also Marge Piercy's "Barbie Doll." Also Colette Inez's "Without Toys at the Home" and David St.John's "Dolls" (the last two found with the Poetry Tool on the Poetry Foundation website, a great resource).

It's interesting how in poems, dolls are usually creepy. Freud had something to say on this in his essay "The Uncanny."

Hope this helps,
Hilary Clark

Quoting Chris Chapman <[redacted]>:

> Hi all,
>
>
>
> I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the > presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an > undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would > make a great theme.
>
>
>
> So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for > information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the > subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very > beginning.

>
>
>
> Please help!
>
> Chris
>
>
guidelines &
>

↑ Index

191. Cara Benson

Re: toys

Mon 15 Dec 2008

---

don't know if someone mentioned denise duhamel's barbie poems.

Sous Rature

_____
From: "Angeline, Mary" <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, December 14, 2008 8:15:22 PM
Subject: Re: toys

Chris,
Also Roland Barthes has an essay on Toys in Mythologies. French Toys.

_____
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Kevin Killian
Sent: Sun 12/14/2008 1:45 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: toys

Hi Chris,

You are on the right track with Daniel Tiffany's book which is so excellent!!!

Also I wonder if you've seen the Baudelaire piece, "A Philosophy of Toys," that's another good one, and undergraduates seem to really identify with CB in this memoir slash essay, really extraordinary thinking and writing,

Kevin K
San Francisco, CA

> Hi all,
>
> I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.
>
> So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the > subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.
>
> Please help!
>
> Chris

↑ Index

192. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: toys

Mon 15 Dec 2008

Rilke has a great essay about dolls.

"but in our room of the toys, dreams are shaking off anxiously their dust." souljam, #58

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Dec 14, 2008 at 9:35 PM, J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books < [redacted]>
wrote:

> David Trinidad has (in Hand Over Heart?) a poem about playing with dolls that has the smoothest, shiniest surface of any sestina I've ever read.
> Also, when she put me to bed my grandmother used to read me a sentimental poem, perhaps by Edgar Guest, about toys who are sad because an angel came during the night and took their little boy away. It affected me permanently.

> Jeffrey
>
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "Chris Chapman" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Friday, December 12, 2008 8:26 AM
> Subject: toys
>
> Hi all,
>
> I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.
>
> So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the > subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.
>
> Please help!
>
> Chris

↑ Index

193. Mark Weiss

query

Mon 15 Dec 2008

If anyone knows about Manhattan writing workshops for old people please b/c me. My mother will thank you.

Mark

↑ Index

194. Catherine Daly
Re: course proposal query / poetics of place
Mon 15 Dec 2008

here, here on the Fox rec

On Sun, Dec 14, 2008 at 9:29 PM, joseph bradshaw <[redacted]>wrote:

> William Fox's work may be useful for this course.
>
> From his website: "William L. Fox is a writer, independent scholar, and poet whose work is a sustained inquiry into how human cognition transforms land into landscape. His numerous nonfiction books rely upon fieldwork with artists and scientists in extreme environments to provide the narratives through which he conducts his investigations."
>
> (there are links to many of his books at the bottom of the page)
>
> http://www.wlfox.net/

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

195. Charles Alexander
Re: course proposal query / poetics of place
Mon 15 Dec 2008

Thanks, Joseph -- I was just with David Abel yesterday and Saturday afternoon/evening. He mentioned William Fox, too.

cheers,

Charles

charles alexander
chax press
[redacted]
411 N 7th ave, suite 103
tucson arizona 85705
[redacted]

On Dec 14, 2008, at 10:29 PM, joseph bradshaw wrote:

> William Fox's work may be useful for this course.
>
> From his website: "William L. Fox is a writer, independent scholar, and poet whose work is a sustained inquiry into how human cognition transforms land into landscape. His numerous nonfiction books rely upon fieldwork with artists and scientists in extreme environments to provide the narratives through which he conducts his investigations."
>
> (there are links to many of his books at the bottom of the page)
>
> http://www.wlfox.net/
>
> welcome.html

↑ Index

196. Kevin Killian
Toys and Spicer
Mon 15 Dec 2008

> Kevin,
>
> While we have you here: when can we go to our local store and get the Spicer tome?
>
> Mr. G.H.Bowering

Hi George,

Down here in the US, the inferior US, copies are available in the bookstores. If you are having trouble locating them in the bookstores of superior Canada, well, they have all those Canadian books to sell through first. I think this is called the trickle up theory.

Let me see if I can get you one,

Oh, and here is a poem by Spicer on the Toys theme Chris Chapman put out there (from 15 False Propositions against God, 1958)

Millions of meaningless toys
If the child isn't born soon we'll have to close the toyshop. The second Joyful mystery.
They make them out of trees and rubber bands and place them in stockings and cradles
No one

Knows how to play with them.
Kneel
At his birth Meaningless
As he is
They are not his toys or our toys we must play with. They are Our toys.

↑ Index

197. William James Austin
Blackbox submssion period closed
Mon 15 Dec 2008

Thanks to all who submitted!!? Decisions soon.

↑ Index

198. Geoffrey Gatza
Faits Divers de la Poesie Americain et Britannique
Mon 15 Dec 2008

An anonymous, collective blog, Faits Divers de la Poesie Americain et Britannique, is now available for viewing.

Inspired by the early-20th century French anarchist, art critic, and journalist Felix Feneon, who under the byline "Novels in Three Lines" anonymously published hundreds of faits divers in Le Matin during 1906, the blog will present, with periodic additions, epigrammatic observations--satirical and fanciful--related to U.S. and British poetry.

For example:

Impassive, impenetrable, offering only name, rank, and institution, the heroic neo-Oulipean M. Bök withstood three weeks of waterboarding in the secret chambers of the Poetry Foundation. Finally, he broke.

An initial offering of 85 is now up, accompanied by visuals. More will be added, as inspiration strikes. Please visit!

http://faitsdiversdelapoesie.blogspot.com/

Happy holidays,

--the feneon collective

↑ Index

199. Jasper Brinton
Course proposal query
Mon 15 Dec 2008

Charles,

Three off the top of my head that stay fresh:

USA Learning from Las Vegas — Venturi / Scott Brown / Izenour. For an interesting look at the "common touch". Theoretical study of vulgarity. Challenges the modern aesthetic.

GB Divine Landscapes — Ronald Blythe
Continues further afield from Akenfeld Both books treat the past as a present.

Italy The Villa - Form and Ideology of Country Houses James S. Ackerman. Outlines the best def. of "Sweet Otium" I've read

Granted these titles live outside specific poetic categories, but off the beaten track one finds — well, no signposts.

My best,

Jasper Brinton

> Are there more recent, in-print works > that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply > studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist > audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which > literary practice might be viewed?

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]]
> On
> Behalf Of charles alexander
> Sent: Wednesday, December 10, 2008 3:58 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: course proposal query
>
> Hi all,
>
> I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors > colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of > "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would > include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the > importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of > human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer > wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific > collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

>
> Thank you,
>
> Charles
>
> Charles Alexander
> Chax Press
> 411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
> Tucson, AZ 85705-8332
>
> [redacted] (Chax Press)
> [redacted] (cell)
> [redacted]

↑ Index

200. steve d. dalachinsky

Re: toys

Mon 15 Dec 2008

---

sad toys by takuboku

On Mon, 15 Dec 2008 12:07:27 -0500 Chris Chapman <[redacted]>
writes:
> Great 'thank-you' to Lanny, Kevin, and Hilary, and those who replied > off-list to my request for real toy stories/poetries...
>

> Here's the list I've put together by way of Lois Rostow Kuznets book
> _When
> Toys Come Alive_:
>
> -Pinocchio
> -Nutcracker - "The Story of the Hard Nut" - short story predecessor
> -A Doll's House
> -Raggedy Ann
> -Wonderland
> -Winnie the Pooh
> -Kenneth Grahame: "A Departure" - 2 children bury a doll and toy > bull in > collection _Dream Days_
> -Rachel Fields: "Hitty: Her First Hundred Years" -'Hitty' is a doll > who > writes her own story with pen larger than herself
> -Plutarch writes about dead daughter's dolls
> -Richard and Maria Edgeworth propose a 'rational toyshop' in > "Practical > Education"
> -Hero of Alexandria : "Epivitalia" - about self-moving statues
> -Frankenstein
> -Barthes "Mythologies" - wooden toys over plastic for imaginative > use
> -"Alice" film by Jan Svankmajer (absolutely rocks!)
> -animist genesis stories
> -"The Silent Playmate" -short story?
> -"The Beautiful Wassilissa" - Russian fairytale that mentions toys
> -Pygmalion-Galatea :: Pandora-Prometheus - women fashioned from > elemental > materials
> -"Dream of the Rood"
> -Margery Williams Bianco "The Velveteen Rabbit"
> -Hans Christian Andersen: "Steadfast Tin Soldier"
> -Lynne Reid Banks: "Indian in the Cupboard"
> -HG Wells : "Little Wars"
> -Robert Louis Stephenson : "A Martial Elegy for Some Lead Soldiers"
> -Saki : "The Toys of Peace"
> -Pauline Clarke : "The Return of the Twelves" or "The Twelves and > the Genii"
> - -Branwell Bronte "History of the Young Men"
> -Katherine Mansfield: "The Doll's House"

> -E. Nesbit: "The Magic City"
> -Sylvia Cassedy: "Lucie Babbidge's House"
> -Beatrix Potter: "Tale of Two Bad Mice"
> -Frances Hodgson Burnett: "Racketty-Packetty House"
> -William Sleator: "Among the Dolls"
> -Sylvia Cassedy: "Behind the Attic Wall"
> -Carol Sherwin Bailey: "Miss Hickory"
> -Kenneth Grahame: "Sawdust and Sin"
> -Margery Williams Bianco: "Little Wooden Doll" and "Poor Cecco"
> -Dean Koontz: "Oddkins"
> -Richard Kennedy: "Amy's Eyes"
> -Russell Hoban: "The Mouse and His Child"
> -ETA Hoffman: "The Sandman"
> -Golem Myths
> -Nathaniel Hawthorne: "Featherstop"
> -Cyril Beaumont: "The Mysterious Toyshop"
> -Angela Carter: "The Magic Toyshop"
> -Charles Dickens: "Our Mutual Friend"
> -Ursula Morey Williams: "The Toymaker's Daughter"
> -Marge Piercy: "He, She and It"
> -Yeats' Byzantiums
> -Rainier Maria Rilke: "Some Reflections on Dolls"
> -Kenward Elmslie: poem: "Girl Machine"
> -Eavan Boland: poem: "The Doll's Museum in Dublin"
> -Rilke: poem: 4th Duino Elegy - doll meets angel
> -WBenjamin: article: "toys and games"
> -Hans Bellmer: "The Games of the Doll"
> -Wallace Stevens: poem: "The Dove in the Belly"
>
>
> Happy holidays!
> Chris
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]]
> On > Behalf Of Hilary Clark
> Sent: Saturday, December 13, 2008 1:21 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: toys
>
> Chris,

>
> Try "The Dy-Dee Doll" in Anne Sexton's "Death Baby" series. The > whole > series, in > fact: the baby, the I, death itself, as a frozen or stone baby.
>
> Also Marge Piercy's "Barbie Doll." Also Colette Inez's "Without Toys > at the > Home" and David St.John's "Dolls" (the last two found with the > Poetry Tool
> on
> the Poetry Foundation website, a great resource).
>
> It's interesting how in poems, dolls are usually creepy. Freud had > something
> to > say on this in his essay "The Uncanny."
>
> Hope this helps,
> Hilary Clark
>
>
> Quoting Chris Chapman <[redacted]>:
>
> > Hi all,
> >
> >
> >
> > I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on
> the > > presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think > about an > > undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys'
> would
> > make a great theme.
> >
> >
> >
> > So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking
> for > > information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of > criticism on

> the > > subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the > very > > beginning.
> >
> >
> >
> > Please help!
> >
> > Chris
> >
> >
> guidelines &
> >
>
> guidelines
>
>
>

↑ Index

201. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: toys
Mon 15 Dec 2008

---

babes in toyland / march of the woden soldiers

On Sun, 14 Dec 2008 18:15:22 -0700 "Angeline, Mary" <[redacted]> writes:
> Chris,
> Also Roland Barthes has an essay on Toys in Mythologies. French > Toys.
>
> _____
>
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Kevin Killian
> Sent: Sun 12/14/2008 1:45 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: toys
>
>
>
> Hi Chris,

>
> You are on the right track with Daniel Tiffany's book which is so > excellent!!!
>
> Also I wonder if you've seen the Baudelaire piece, "A Philosophy of > Toys,"
> that's another good one, and undergraduates seem to really identify > with > CB in this memoir slash essay, really extraordinary thinking and > writing,
>
> Kevin K
> San Francisco, CA
>
> > Hi all,
> >
> >
> >
> > I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on
> the > > presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think > about an > > undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys'
> would
> > make a great theme.
> >
> >
> >
> > So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking
> for > > information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of > criticism on
> > the > > subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the > very > > beginning.
> >
> >
> >
> > Please help!
> >
> > Chris

> >
> >
> >
> >
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

202. Gerald Schwartz
Re: toys
Mon 15 Dec 2008

A Picture Of Young G. S. With His Phantom of the Opera Figure

Here he his as a boy copying what he almost but won't admit he knows, a murderous ruse appears to fuse appearing at night to be his face half-masked, but already seen at another's touch: the lurking special effects of revulsion harmony granted by night are never enough to maintain this semblance called atmosphere, this swooping up to an unknown mark that looks back at him in ghastly horror-RIFFIC-scope pulling pain from a gas-light's glow--
The play began so early and even the wattage of all THE SAINTS & THE BLESSED BLUE
ONE HERSELF behind him was too bright, too insistent to pull the undesirable soul from this Phantom of the Opera figure

-Gerald Schwartz

> Great 'thank-you' to Lanny, Kevin, and Hilary, and those who replied off-list to my request for real toy stories/poetries...
>
> Here's the list I've put together by way of Lois Rostow Kuznets book _When Toys Come Alive_:
>
> -Pinocchio
> -Nutcracker - "The Story of the Hard Nut" - short story predecessor
> -A Doll's House
> -Raggedy Ann
> -Wonderland
> -Winnie the Pooh
> -Kenneth Grahame: "A Departure" - 2 children bury a doll and toy bull in

> collection _Dream Days_
> -Rachel Fields: "Hitty: Her First Hundred Years" -'Hitty' is a doll who writes her own story with pen larger than herself
> -Plutarch writes about dead daughter's dolls
> -Richard and Maria Edgeworth propose a 'rational toyshop' in "Practical Education"
> -Hero of Alexandria : "Epivitalia" - about self-moving statues
> -Frankenstein
> -Barthes "Mythologies" - wooden toys over plastic for imaginative use
> -"Alice" film by Jan Svankmajer (absolutely rocks!)
> -animist genesis stories
> -"The Silent Playmate" -short story?
> -"The Beautiful Wassilissa" - Russian fairytale that mentions toys
> -Pygmalion-Galatea :: Pandora-Prometheus - women fashioned from elemental materials
> -"Dream of the Rood"
> -Margery Williams Bianco "The Velveteen Rabbit"
> -Hans Christian Andersen: "Steadfast Tin Soldier"
> -Lynne Reid Banks: "Indian in the Cupboard"
> -HG Wells : "Little Wars"
> -Robert Louis Stephenson : "A Martial Elegy for Some Lead Soldiers"
> -Saki : "The Toys of Peace"
> -Pauline Clarke : "The Return of the Twelves" or "The Twelves and the Genii"
> - -Branwell Bronte "History of the Young Men"
> -Katherine Mansfield: "The Doll's House"
> -E. Nesbit: "The Magic City"
> -Sylvia Cassedy: "Lucie Babbidge's House"
> -Beatrix Potter: "Tale of Two Bad Mice"
> -Frances Hodgson Burnett: "Racketty-Packetty House"
> -William Sleator: "Among the Dolls"
> -Sylvia Cassedy: "Behind the Attic Wall"
> -Carol Sherwin Bailey: "Miss Hickory"
> -Kenneth Grahame: "Sawdust and Sin"
> -Margery Williams Bianco: "Little Wooden Doll" and "Poor Cecco"
> -Dean Koontz: "Oddkins"
> -Richard Kennedy: "Amy's Eyes"
> -Russell Hoban: "The Mouse and His Child"
> -ETA Hoffman: "The Sandman"
> -Golem Myths
> -Nathaniel Hawthorne: "Featherstop"
> -Cyril Beaumont: "The Mysterious Toyshop"
> -Angela Carter: "The Magic Toyshop"
> -Charles Dickens: "Our Mutual Friend"
> -Ursula Morey Williams: "The Toymaker's Daughter"
> -Marge Piercy: "He, She and It"
> -Yeats' Byzantiums
> -Rainier Maria Rilke: "Some Reflections on Dolls"

-Kenward Elmslie: poem: "Girl Machine"
-Eavan Boland: poem: "The Doll's Museum in Dublin"
-Rilke: poem: 4th Duino Elegy - doll meets angel
-WBenjamin: article: "toys and games"
-Hans Bellmer: "The Games of the Doll"
-Wallace Stevens: poem: "The Dove in the Belly"

Happy holidays!
Chris

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Hilary Clark
Sent: Saturday, December 13, 2008 1:21 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: toys

Chris,

Try "The Dy-Dee Doll" in Anne Sexton's "Death Baby" series. The whole series, in fact: the baby, the I, death itself, as a frozen or stone baby.

Also Marge Piercy's "Barbie Doll." Also Colette Inez's "Without Toys at the Home" and David St.John's "Dolls" (the last two found with the Poetry Tool on the Poetry Foundation website, a great resource).

It's interesting how in poems, dolls are usually creepy. Freud had something to say on this in his essay "The Uncanny."

Hope this helps,
Hilary Clark

Quoting Chris Chapman <[redacted]>:

Hi all,

I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.

So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.

Please help!

Chris

guidelines &

guidelines

↑ Index

203. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: call for help from tribes gallery
Mon 15 Dec 2008

We here at Tribes would like to wish you and yours happy holidaze.

Over the last year, the highlight of our programming was of course our Charlie Parker Festival with poetry, group art show, concerts, and block party.

From the perspective of diversity, we also featured an art show by 3 Native American artists, which included a Native drumming/singing group.

Tribes' publishing arm, Fly By Night Press, is preparing to release 3 books of poetry: "the Geoglyph" by former intern Patrick Kosiewicz, another book of selected poetry by the Nuyorican Cafe's Co-director Lois Elaine Griffith, and a third book by Tribes' sometime-assistant Luis Chalusian.

And finally, after some stumbling, Tribes #12 will be out sometime in January, featuring works of such notables as Willie Birch, Chakaia Booker, Louise Bourgeois, Hettie Jones, Sol Le Wit, Donald Lev, Thomas Noskowski, and Jerome Rothenberg, among others. Also among the ranks are local favorites such as Dorothy Friedman August, Bonny Finberg, Bob Holman, Anyssa Kim, and Deborah Pintonelli. Plus a wonderful section of contemporary Japanese poetry.

Also, our innovative, ever-mutating house band Will McEvoy & Friends has been joined by another monthly jazz event, participatory improv featuring Patrick Brennan and other guest artists.

Next August we'd like to keep Charlie Parker's spirit alive by repeating Festival events with a different set of characters – artists, musicians, poets. We're also planning a new series of art shows yet to be announced, but you can bet your bottom dollar, surprise, surprise...

Unfortunately, like NPR, WBAI, and others, we too are suffering from the economic downturn. As Charlie Parker would have it, speaking of scrapple from the apple, we're scraping the bottom of the barrel, even worse than others, as we are a small nonprofit committed to supporting emerging, multicultural artists. If you agree with us that this is a unique and important mission – which can't be accomplished without your help! – please send whatever tax-deductible contribution you can make, check or money order, to:

Tribes
POB 20693
NY, NY 10009

P.S. A little bit of something is better than a whole lot of nothing!

****

To find out more about Tribes, who we are and what we do, check out Tribes on Myspace/A Gathering of the Tribes; Youtube under HOWL, Native New Yorker, Amiri Baraka/Tribes; Facebook; Flickr: http:/www.flickr.com/photos/tribesgalleryphotos/; and www.dowpub.com. Tribes books and magazines are available on Tribes website www.tribes.org, Ebay.com, and Amazon.com. Tribes is a member of Chamber Music of America, Poets & Writers, Poets Society of America, and St. Marks Poetry Project.

↑ Index

204. noah eli gordon
RAIN TAXI BENEFIT AUCTION!
Tue 16 Dec 2008

http://shop.ebay.com/merchant/raintaxi

Discover astounding literary wonders at the...
RAIN TAXI BENEFIT AUCTION!
Our benefit auction has returned, and this year it's enormous! Held on eBay, the auction lets you support Rain Taxi while getting cool literary stuff. Most items were donated by authors or publishers to help Rain Taxi stay in gear: You'll find signed first editions, gorgeous broadsides, rare chapbooks, seminal graphic novels, quirky collectible books, handcrafted items, and more! M.T. ANDERSON, John ASHBERY, Paul AUSTER, Charles BERNSTEIN, Robert BLY, Paul BOWLES, Stephen COLBERT, Samuel R. DELANY, Neil GAIMAN, Patricia HAMPL, Richard HELL, Jaime HERNANDEZ, Garrison KEILLOR, Jonathan LETHEM, David MARKSON, Henry MILLER, Rick MOODY, Barack OBAMA, Ron PADGETT, Jerome ROTHENBERG, Joe SACCO, Arthur SZE, Jeff VANDERMEER, Anne WALDMAN, Keith and Rosmarie WALDROP, and Marjorie WELISH are just some of the authors whose works you'll find. To see the full listings, go to our online benefit auction now!

http://shop.ebay.com/merchant/raintaxi
Also: check out our newly published Winter issue, featuring an original cover by legendary British artist Dave McKean!

Suspicious message? There’s an alert for that.
http://windowslive.com/Explore/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_broad2_122008

↑ Index

205. Christophe Casamassima
1st Annual Furniture Press Poetry Prize
Tue 16 Dec 2008

Furniture Press Poetry Prize
Deadline: June 30, 2009

Judges: tba

The 1st annual Furniture Press Poetry Prize will be awarded to the writer that best exemplifies the poetics and particularities of Furniture Press’ editors and judges.

Two judges will be invited to determine a manuscript’s “pressability” and will work with anonymous, unidentified texts. Only the editor of Furniture Press will know the true identity of the applicants and their work. Each text will be assigned a number and distributed to the judges.

After the first round of readings the judges will assign three finalists. The winner of the Prize will receive a publishing contract in which the winning manuscript will be published as a chapbook. S/he will also receive 25 copies of the chapbook. The remaining finalists will have samples of their work published in an issue of Ambit : Journal of Poetry & Poetics. All applicants will receive a copy of the chapbook.

1. Send 1 unpublished manuscript per entry. It must be between 20-50 pages in length of poetry and/or its derivatives. Include a cover letter with your name, address, eMail and short bio. Do not put your name nor the title of your submission on the pages of the manuscript.

2. Send a $10 fee per manuscript submitted. 100% of the cash goes to the pressing and publishing of the winning chapbooks. Editors and judges do not get kickbacks. Please send checks or money orders only, made out to Furniture Press.

3. Send manuscripts to Furniture Press Poetry Prize c/o Towson Arts Collective, 406 York Road, Towson, MD 21204.

We strongly encourage you to send us work - it's also a very good way to catch the attention of the editors who may want to publish your work in the future, despite whether or not you win the prize.

If you have any questions, please contact Christophe Casamassima at [redacted]

--
Powered By Outblaze

↑ Index

206. aaron tieger
OUT ANOTHER by Michael Carr
Tue 16 Dec 2008

Petrichord Books is pleased to announce the publication of OUT ANOTHER by Michael Carr. In OUT ANOTHER a mentholated wind blows the reader from deja to jamais vu and back, in a poemscape that lies distinctively in between. These poems, like continental noir, present a facade that may or may not be real.

OUT ANOTHER may be purchased for $6 online via paypal at http://petrichord.com/titles.php or by sending concealed cash or a check (made payable to AARON TIEGER) to 67 Rice St. #1, Cambridge MA, 02140.

Irma Vep

The marker is waiting beacons exposed from the open window dispatched, dismantled, gates locked I wouldn¢t have a ready apology and what if that¢s the issue exposed to street on the balcony¢s partitions. They open themselves but with goodwill that¢s the awful truth, no wonder babyface tylenol misbegotten

you go on the buses and will be called upon to help a friend in trouble, and when I¢m doing it somehow it¢s in your place.

*

Thank you.
Aaron Tieger
Petrichord Books

↑ Index

207. Susan Grimm
Re: POETICS Digest - 14 Dec 2008 to 15 Dec 2008 (#2008-330)
Tue 16 Dec 2008

Denise Duhamel has a book about Barbie--Kinky, I think.

Susan

↑ Index

208. David Baratier
Noah Eli Gordon: Acoustic Experience available from Pavement Saw Press
Tue 16 Dec 2008

Noah Eli Gordon
Acoustic Experience

Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Series
Winner of the 2007-08 Chapbook Award
ISBN 978-1-886350-41-0
32 pages, saddle stapled, limited edition, 433 copies printed $7.00

directly order from
http://www.pavementsaw.org/pages/chapbooks.htm

Noah Eli Gordon is the author of six collections, Novel Pictorial Noise (selected by John Ashbery for the National Poetry Series), Figures for a Darkroom Voice (in collaboration with poet Joshua Marie Wilkinson and artist Noah Saterstrom), A Fiddle Pulled from the Throat of a Sparrow, Inbox, The Area of Sound Called the Subtone, and The Frequencies. His reviews and essays have appeared in numerous publications, including: Review of Contemporary Fiction, The Denver Quarterly, Jacket, The Poetry Project Newsletter, Talisman, and the book Burning Interiors: David Shapiro's Poetry and Poetics. He writes a column on chapbooks for Rain Taxi and teaches at the University of Colorado at Denver.

These poems first appeared in: Columbia Poetry Review, English Language Notes, The Modern Review, Web Conjunctions and Zoland Poetry.

This collection is mostly serial prose poems (8 to 10 pieces in length) written in gramatically correct bonifide post new sentence sentences without funny animals or inanimate objects that talk like most American poeteasters have inflicted upon us through a thin vaneer of unsubstantiated surrealism.

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
321 Empire Street
Montpelier OH 43543
http://pavementsaw.org

Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1

↑ Index

209. CA Conrad
MOUTHBREATHER poetry/music/interviews
Tue 16 Dec 2008

MOUTHBREATHER on NEXUSradio poetry/music/interviews on Wednesday, December 17th, 8pm to 11pm easter standard time

co-hosted by Frank Sherlock and CAConrad
3 hours of AMAZING poetry/music/interviews you won't want to miss!

If you're in Philadelphia tune in with your AM dial to 1650 outside the area listen online at http://www.nexusphiladelphia.org/nexusradio.html

CAConrad
PhillySound: new poetry
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com <http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

210. Steve Halle
Jules Gibbs @ Seven Corners
Tue 16 Dec 2008

Six poems from Jules Gibbs' chapbook manuscript The Bulk of the Mailable Universe are up now at Seven Corners<http://www.sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/>(http://www.sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/). Please check them out when you have a moment.

Best,
Steve Halle
Editor

↑ Index

211. Séamas Cain
Book Launch (invitation)
Tue 16 Dec 2008

_____

The Irish poet Gabriel Rosenstock invites you and your friends to a book launch ...

WHERE : Institiúid na hÉireann, Ionad an Phiarsaigh (27 Pearse Street), Dublin 2, Ireland.

WHEN : Friday, 19th December, 5:30 p.m. to 7:00 p.m.

WHAT : "Guantánamo : Poems written by inmates of Guantánamo Bay"

 Irish versions by Gabriel Rosenstock
 Introduction by Aengus Ó Snodaigh

All profit on this title goes to Amnesty International ...

For additional information about the poetry of Gabriel Rosenstock, see ...

34 Poems by Gabriel Rosenstock at "Poetry Chaikhana" ... http://www.poetry-chaikhana.com/R/RosenstockGa/index.htm

Haiku Gallery (8 images) by Gabriel and Ron Rosenstock ... http://www.worldhaikureview.org/3-2/rosenstock-photohaiku/pages/01.html

Best regards,

Séamas Cain
http://alazanto.org/seamascain
http://seamascain.writernetwork.com
http://www.mnartists.org/Seamas_Cain

_____

↑ Index

212. Martha Oatis
Re: query
Tue 16 Dec 2008

Mark,

Sometimes Teachers and Writers Collaborative will have workshops for the elderly.... I would give them a call. Talk to Jeffery.

Peace

On Mon, Dec 15, 2008 at 12:44 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> If anyone knows about Manhattan writing workshops for old people please b/c me. My mother will thank you.
>
> Mark

--
Even after all this time the sun never says to the earth, "You owe me." Look what happens with a love like that; it lights the whole sky.

-Hafiz

↑ Index

213. Geoffrey Gatza
First Baby Poems By Anne Waldman - Just In Time For The Holidays
Tue 16 Dec 2008

First Baby Poems by Anne Waldman
Collages by George Schneeman
Buy it NOW http://www.blazevox.org/bk-aw.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bk-aw.htm>

With her warm subtle fleshy FIRST BABY POEMS Waldman creates an infant power that did not exist before in her words. These poems are complex joyful bioalchemy.

‹Michael McClure

Whenever my friends give birth, I always send them the words of William Blake's "Infant Joy" ("What shall I call thee?"/'I happy am,/Joy is my name.'/Sweet joy befall thee!") and a xeroxed copy of Anne Waldman's FIRST BABY POEMS - long unavailable and now happily reprinted - for their delectation: twenty-nine joyful, lucent poems in all manner of styles and song. It is no matter of a "hard sell" to suggest that FIRST BABY POEMS is a "perfect gift" for those who are birthing and those who are busy being born. Sweet joy befall them.

‹Jonathan Cott

Anne Waldman glows even in the throes of morning sickness at the Buddhist chateau. The mind empties as the belly expands, but the mind doesn't clear without a detailed expression of what it is letting go of, and the body doesn't fill without a rich chronicle of sensation. She takes us all the way to term and then, the baby gets the pantoums. What a retreat she takes us on. What a euphonic spell of sleep-deprived wonder she casts.

‹C.D. Wright

· Paperback: 60 pages
· Binding: Perfect-Bound
· Publisher: BlazeVOX [books]
· ISBN: 1-934289-91-4

$18
Full color

Buy it NOW http://www.blazevox.org/bk-aw.htm
<http://www.blazevox.org/bk-aw.htm>

Read a sample here:
http://www.blazevox.org/Waldman-BX%20sample.pdf

Holiday sale is also still going strong:
2 books for $20, 3 for 30 and so on up to and including 100 for $1000

http://www.blazevox.org/order.htm <http://www.blazevox.org/order.htm>

Poet Anne Waldman has been an active member of the ³Outrider² experimental poetry community for over 40 years as writer, sprechstimme performer, professor, editor, ³magpie² scholar, infra-structure and cultural/political activist. She grew up on Macdougal Street in Greenwich Village where she still lives part-time, and bi-furcated to Boulder, Colorado in 1974 when she co-founded The Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics with Allen Ginsberg at Naropa University, the first Buddhist inspired school in the West. She currently serves as Artistic Director of its celebrated Summer Writing program. Allen Ginsberg has called her his ³spiritual wife.² She is the author of over 40 books of poetry including Kill or Cure , Marriage: A Sentence , Structure of the World Compared to a Bubble, and the poetic text: Outrider which includes an interview with Ernesto Cardenal. Her most recent book-length poem is Manatee/Humanity (Penguin Poets 2009). She is also the author of the legendary Fast Speaking Woman (City Lights, San Francisco), now translated into Italian, Czech and French, as well as the 800 page epic Iovis trilogy (Coffee House Press). She is editor of The Beat Book (Shambhala Publications) and co-editor of The Angel Hair Anthology (Granary Books), Civil Disobediences: Poetics and Politics in Action (Coffee House) and Beats at Naropa (Coffee House 2009). A book of her poems translated into Chinese is forthcoming in 2009.

She has been a student of Buddhism since 1962, a feminist, and an ambassador for the oral revival of poetry, appearing on stages from Berlin to Caracas, from Mumbai to Beijing. She has been instrumental in encouraging poetry projects world-wide and has helped organize poetry programs in Vienna and Indonesia.

She has worked extensively with her son, musician and composer Ambrose Bye, for whom and ³out of² whom FIRST BABY POEMS was written 27 years ago. Their ³her poetry-his music-collaborations² include the CDs In the Room of Never Grieve , Eye of the Falcon and Matching Half . He has been a Œmuse' and inspiration.

³[Waldman] is the fastest, wittiest woman to run with the wolves in some time²- Ken Tucker, The New York Times.

↑ Index

214. Mark Weiss

Re: query

Tue 16 Dec 2008

Thanks. I'll give them a try.

At 11:52 AM 12/16/2008, you wrote:
>Mark,
>
>Sometimes Teachers and Writers Collaborative will have workshops for the >elderly.... I would give them a call. Talk to Jeffery.
>
>Peace
>
>On Mon, Dec 15, 2008 at 12:44 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > If anyone knows about Manhattan writing workshops for old people please b/c

> > me. My mother will thank you.
> >
> > Mark
> >
> >
>
>
>
>--
>Even after all this time the sun never says to the earth, "You owe me." Look >what happens with a love like that; it lights the whole sky.
>
>-Hafiz
>

↑ Index

215. Lisa Samuels
Re: Course proposal query
Tue 16 Dec 2008

Hi Charles,

Geoff Park, Theatre Country: Essays on landscape & whenua, Victoria University Press 2006, is a terrific collection & I think would be apt. A Maori term, whenua means both land/ground and placenta - his introduction is subtitled 'A more indigenous life' and there are essays such as 'The Ecology of the Visit' whose feel reminds me of both W G Sebald in, say, The Rings of Saturn, and of Lisa Robertson in her Occasional Works and Seven Walks from the Office for Soft Architecture (Clear Cut Press) - which, come to think of it, also would be apt for your course. It has always smart and sometimes ravishing approaches to urban ecology and the constructedness of other cultural forms in 'natural' spaces (I'm thinking of the hut piece - sorry that I cannot be more specific as the book's over at school).

Happy teaching - I love looking over the menus of possibility before the courses begin,
Lisa

On Mon, Dec 15, 2008 at 3:15 PM, Jasper Brinton <[redacted]>wrote:

Charles,

Three off the top of my head that stay fresh:

*USA Learning from Las Vegas — Venturi / Scott Brown / Izenour.*
For an interesting look at the "common touch". Theoretical study of vulgarity. Challenges the modern aesthetic.

*GB Divine Landscapes — Ronald Blythe*
*Continues further afield from Akenfeld Both books treat the past as a present.*

*Italy The Villa - Form and Ideology of Country Houses James S. Ackerman. Outlines the best def. of "Sweet Otium" I've read*

Granted these titles live outside specific poetic categories, but off the beaten track one finds — well, no signposts.

My best,

Jasper Brinton

Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed?

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of charles alexander
Sent: Wednesday, December 10, 2008 3:58 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: course proposal query

Hi all,

I'm just starting to prepare a course proposal for an honors colloquium. It has to fit under a broadly-defined topic of "sustainability," and I thought I would propose a course that would include the possiblity of Olson's sense of relation to place, the importance of understanding geography as the total interaction of human culture with the natural landscape over time, as Carl Sauer wrote in the essay, "The Morphology of Landscape," in the terrific > collection of essays, Land & Life. What I am thinking of is a class that basically mixes cultural geography with literature, with the ability to use the study of the natural/cultural landscape as a lens on literature, and vice-versa. Olson of course is rather perfect for this, but he's certainly not the only possibility (Niedecker pops immediately to mind, as does David Jones; but Emily Dickinson and William Faulkner, among others, might be good studies here, too). What I need help with, though, are not the literary possibilities, but the other side of the equation. Sauer's book is no longer in print, although I would certainly photocopy the essay mentioned earlier. But cultural geography has really grown and changed as a field in the last 40 years. Are there more recent, in-print works that provide a view of cultural geography, or other ways of deeply studying "place," that would be readable for a non-specialist audience, and that might work as developing a framework in which literary practice might be viewed? If you know of books, essays, and other works that could be informative in this way, please let me know. It's for a fairly young undergraduate honors class, mostly sophomores.

>
> Thank you,
>
> Charles
>
> Charles Alexander
> Chax Press
> 411 N 7th Ave Suite 103
> Tucson, AZ 85705-8332
>
> [redacted] (Chax Press)
> [redacted] (cell)
> [redacted]

↑ Index

216. Geer Austin
Re: query
Tue 16 Dec 2008

Mark,

New York Writers Coalition, Inc., an organization based in Brooklyn, provides free and low-cost creative writing workshops throughout New York City for people from groups that have been historically deprived of voice in our society, including older adults. In Manhattan:

* 14th Street Y Educational Center for Retired Adults: Two workshops for older adults, operated by The Educational Alliance. * SAGE: Community center for GLBT elders (13th Street).

Please see their website http://www.nywriterscoalition.org for more information or contact [redacted].

Geer Austin

-----Original Message-----
From: Martha Oatis [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, December 16, 2008 11:53 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: query

Mark,

Sometimes Teachers and Writers Collaborative will have workshops for the elderly.... I would give them a call. Talk to Jeffery.

Peace

On Mon, Dec 15, 2008 at 12:44 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> If anyone knows about Manhattan writing workshops for old people please b/c > me. My mother will thank you.
>
> Mark
>
guidelines
>

--
Even after all this time the sun never says to the earth, "You owe me." Look what happens with a love like that; it lights the whole sky.

-Hafiz

↑ Index

217. Joel Lewis
Ron Silliman/Joel Lewis in NYC
Wed 17 Dec 2008

Zinc Bar Reading Series

82 West 3rd, two doors west of Thompson Street
NYC.

Sunday at 7:00

12/21 Ron Silliman and Joel Lewis.

$5 donation goes to the poets

Your hosts: Kimberly Lyons and Douglas Rothschild

(please note: this is a NEW location for the Zinc Bar)

↑ Index

218. Chris Chapman
Re: toys
Wed 17 Dec 2008

Again, great thanks to all - Gerald, Steve, Kevin, Murat, Cara, J.A., Mary, George -who've added to the toy discussion. I can construct a doll-eany in a beat of the heart now.

"Wood removes, from all the forms which it supports, the wounding quality of angles which are too sharp, the chemical coldness of metal. When the child handles it and knocks it, it neither vibrates nor grates, it has a sound at once muffled and sharp. It is a familiar and poetic substance, which does does not sever the child from close contact with the tree, the table, the floor." (Barthes, _Mythologies_ 61)

Chris
(can never tell how many 'n' 's to put in Pinnochio...minus one?)

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Gerald Schwartz
Sent: Monday, December 15, 2008 5:06 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: toys

A Picture Of Young G. S. With His Phantom of the Opera Figure

Here he his as a boy copying what he almost but won't admit he knows, a murderous ruse appears to fuse appearing at night
to be his face half-masked, but already seen at another's touch: the lurking special effects of revulsion harmony granted by night

are never enough to maintain this semblance called atmosphere, this swooping up to an unknown mark that looks back at him in ghastly horror-RIFFIC-scope pulling pain from a gas-light's glow--

The play began so early and even the wattage of all THE SAINTS & THE BLESSED BLUE
ONE HERSELF behind him was too bright, too insistent to pull
the undesirable soul from this Phantom of the Opera figure

-Gerald Schwartz

> Great 'thank-you' to Lanny, Kevin, and Hilary, and those who replied off-list to my request for real toy stories/poetries...
>
> Here's the list I've put together by way of Lois Rostow Kuznets book _When Toys Come Alive_:
>
> -Pinocchio
> -Nutcracker - "The Story of the Hard Nut" - short story predecessor
> -A Doll's House
> -Raggedy Ann
> -Wonderland
> -Winnie the Pooh
> -Kenneth Grahame: "A Departure" - 2 children bury a doll and toy bull in collection _Dream Days_
> -Rachel Fields: "Hitty: Her First Hundred Years" -'Hitty' is a doll who writes her own story with pen larger than herself
> -Plutarch writes about dead daughter's dolls
> -Richard and Maria Edgeworth propose a 'rational toyshop' in "Practical Education"
> -Hero of Alexandria : "Epivitalia" - about self-moving statues
> -Frankenstein
> -Barthes "Mythologies" - wooden toys over plastic for imaginative use
> -"Alice" film by Jan Svankmajer (absolutely rocks!)
> -animist genesis stories
> -"The Silent Playmate" -short story?
> -"The Beautiful Wassilissa" - Russian fairytale that mentions toys
> -Pygmalion-Galatea :: Pandora-Prometheus - women fashioned from elemental materials
> -"Dream of the Rood"
> -Margery Williams Bianco "The Velveteen Rabbit"
> -Hans Christian Andersen: "Steadfast Tin Soldier"
> -Lynne Reid Banks: "Indian in the Cupboard"
> -HG Wells : "Little Wars"
> -Robert Louis Stephenson : "A Martial Elegy for Some Lead Soldiers"
> -Saki : "The Toys of Peace"
> -Pauline Clarke : "The Return of the Twelves" or "The Twelves and the Genii"
> - -Branwell Bronte "History of the Young Men"
> -Katherine Mansfield: "The Doll's House"
> -E. Nesbit: "The Magic City"

> -Sylvia Cassedy: "Lucie Babbidge's House"
> -Beatrix Potter: "Tale of Two Bad Mice"
> -Frances Hodgson Burnett: "Racketty-Packetty House"
> -William Sleator: "Among the Dolls"
> -Sylvia Cassedy: "Behind the Attic Wall"
> -Carol Sherwin Bailey: "Miss Hickory"
> -Kenneth Grahame: "Sawdust and Sin"
> -Margery Williams Bianco: "Little Wooden Doll" and "Poor Cecco"
> -Dean Koontz: "Oddkins"
> -Richard Kennedy: "Amy's Eyes"
> -Russell Hoban: "The Mouse and His Child"
> -ETA Hoffman: "The Sandman"
> -Golem Myths
> -Nathaniel Hawthorne: "Featherstop"
> -Cyril Beaumont: "The Mysterious Toyshop"
> -Angela Carter: "The Magic Toyshop"
> -Charles Dickens: "Our Mutual Friend"
> -Ursula Morey Williams: "The Toymaker's Daughter"
> -Marge Piercy: "He, She and It"
> -Yeats' Byzantiums
> -Rainier Maria Rilke: "Some Reflections on Dolls"
> -Kenward Elmslie: poem: "Girl Machine"
> -Eavan Boland: poem: "The Doll's Museum in Dublin"
> -Rilke: poem: 4th Duino Elegy - doll meets angel
> -WBenjamin: article: "toys and games"
> -Hans Bellmer: "The Games of the Doll"
> -Wallace Stevens: poem: "The Dove in the Belly"
>
> Happy holidays!
> Chris
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Hilary Clark
> Sent: Saturday, December 13, 2008 1:21 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: toys
>
> Chris,
>
> Try "The Dy-Dee Doll" in Anne Sexton's "Death Baby" series. The whole series, in > fact: the baby, the I, death itself, as a frozen or stone baby.
>
> Also Marge Piercy's "Barbie Doll." Also Colette Inez's "Without Toys at the > Home" and David St.John's "Dolls" (the last two found with the Poetry Tool

on
the Poetry Foundation website, a great resource).

It's interesting how in poems, dolls are usually creepy. Freud had something
to say on this in his essay "The Uncanny."

Hope this helps,
Hilary Clark

Quoting Chris Chapman <[redacted]>:

Hi all,

I wonder if any of you good folk have some top of mind thoughts on the presence of toys in contemporary poetry? I'm beginning to think about an undergraduate course for next fall - sophomores - and think 'toys' would make a great theme.

So far, by stumbling through the list of his works when looking for information on Pound's radio broadcasts, I have one work of criticism on the subject by Daniel Tiffany. Other than "A Doll's House" I'm at the very beginning.

Please help!

Chris

guidelines &

guidelines

↑ Index

219. Rosemary Ceravolo
"Auden and Prizes" (fwd)
Wed 17 Dec 2008

Comments?

----- Forwarded Message -----

http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts_and_entertainment/the_tls/article5235921.ece

From: The Times Literary Supplement

Auden and prizes

Sir, – Sean O'Brien's excellent review of Volume Three of The Complete Works of W. H. Auden, Prose, 1949–1955 (September 12), requires a bit of historical clarification, at least as regards O'Brien's comment on the "very funny story" in Edward Mendelson's Notes. O'Brien says that Auden "could be assiduous in his role as gatekeeper" for the Yale Younger Poets Series; and "as a result no collections appeared in 1954, nor in 1955". Auden, he says, knew "that Ashbery had intended to submit a collection", but found "it had been missed off the shortlist". Further, that "Chester Kallman had helped overcome Auden's own doubts about the work" (which was selected and published as Some Trees). The matter is more complicated than that, and Mendelson may be excused for knowing nothing about what happened.

What happened was this: I had submitted for the 1956 competition a collection (Whatever Love Declares). I had been informed that the work was on the shortlist of twelve poets. In about late March of that year my wife and I were invited to dinner by Naomi and Arnold Weinstein, whom I had met when we joined the English Department of New York University a year earlier. The guest of honour was Auden, and it was to be an evening for the five of us. At the last moment, while we were having aperitifs, John Ashbery showed up, new to New York from Buffalo, as I recall, and recently acquainted with Arnold. The evening commenced oddly, after Auden had asked about my wife's cheekbones: "Are you Hungarian, by chance?". To which she replied, "Yes, Hungarian by affiliation, I suppose, since my parents were Jewish, luckily off to America in 1921 on their honeymoon. Their people were, after 400 years in north-eastern Hungary, gathered up, all but one who survived Auschwitz in 1944, and sent into the sky in smoke and ash". That didn't cause Auden to miss a beat; he went right on to say he'd surmised as much – from her fine eyes, lidded with that epicanthic fold of the Jews, as he put it, at least, like the Hungarians out of the Asian East. Our chit chat went on, as he tried to recover himself, maundering about the Will-to-Live he thought innate in the Jew per se, that inner strength needed for survival, and such bosh, followed by ". . . whereas we pagans, we weakling goys, we just lie down and die too easily". Rather a strangely indirect sort of apology, I thought.orbell buzzed and Ashbery, a late invitee to make us six at table, was admitted and introduced. Shaking his hand, Auden took in at a glance a fine instance of his soft- spined "pagan". What with Ashbery's mewling, mincing manner and self- deprecatory modesty, his very speech manifested the goy gay persona par excellence. During our meal, Auden asked if he had any poems, if he knew about the Yale Younger Poets first book series? Did he not! Ashbery replied that he might not really have enough poems to assemble for an entry, and in any case the Press's deadline for submission was several months past. Auden told him never to mind that nonsense about application forms and deadline procedures: just staple the stuff together and send directly to him. He wrote out his address in south Greenwich Village. It didn't need an epiphanic blaze of insight to see that the game was over for twelve shortlisted finalists – the fix was in. We'd been trashed, just like that! So I kept my trap shut. I knew it was wrong; it was unfair; it was "Greek" morals, if you will. It would have taken a strange miracle to ensure that those twelve books containing, say, seventy-five years' worth of scribbling in all, were even to be looked at. O'Brien cites Auden's "most fantastic difficulties" with that parcel of poets' vain hopes. Difficulty with the Italian postal service? In a pig's eye. Nothing about that contest appeared or was announced; nothing was ever returned by Yale's Press. Ashbery, for his part, reticent or not, ran on the inside track against us from hour one: he had Auden's lover Chester Kallman to vet the MS of Some Trees. The rest is history.

JASCHA KESSLER
218 16th Street, Santa Monica, California 90402.

~~~
~~~

Kessler has a careless way with facts. He says I was new to New York from Buffalo, where I ve never lived, and recently acquainted with [the host] Arnold \ [Weinstein\], whom I had known since 1949 when I moved to New York City. Also, I had first met Auden as an undergraduate around 1947 after a reading he gave at Harvard, and often seen him in New York as a result of knowing his lover Chester Kallman. If he was going to be swept away by my "mewling", "mincing", "goy gay persona" he had already had almost a decade to be so (and wasn't). To suggest that the notably ethical Auden would propose circumventing the Yale contest rules to someone he had just met is ridiculous. In any case he would have had no need to give me his address, as Kessler says he did, since I had been to his apartment on a number of occasions (including for one of his famous birthday parties).

The "history"to which Mr Kessler refers at the end of his letter is hardly supported by the easily verified record. George Bradley has written the history of the Yale series in the introduction to his Yale Younger Poets Anthology (1998). This is from the part about me (p lxviii):

As usual, Auden was on Ischia that spring [1955], where he had been sent twelve manuscripts. After he went through them, he sent [Eugene] Davidson [at Yale University Press] an unhappy letter. Not only had he not found anything he liked, he had not found what he was looking for:

"I am very worried because, for the second year in succession, I do not find among the mss. submitted to me one that I feel merits publication. It so happens that there is another poet staying here, and I have asked him to read them also as a check on my own judgment.

"What bothers me particularly is that a young poet (John Ashbery) whom I know personally told me he was submitting a manuscript this year. I have reservations about such of his poems as I have seen, but they are certainly better than any of the manuscripts which have reached me. I don't know how or by whom the preliminary sieving is done at the press, but I cannot help wondering whether I am receiving the best."

The other poet reading manuscripts with Auden was Anthony Hecht, who had been travelling in Italy and had met Auden by chance. As for John Ashbery, his manuscript had indeed been weeded out, along with that of another New York poet, Frank O'Hara. Auden contacted them both and asked that they re-submit their work directly to him. He received the manuscripts in little more than a week and made up his mind within days. The winner was Ashbery, salvaged from the slush pile to become in time one of the best-known poets the Yale series has ever published.

JOHN ASHBERY
c/o Georges Borchardt Inc, 136 East 57th Street, New York 10022.

↑ Index

220. Alan Sondheim
Last night at the ESP-Disk LIVE @ The Bowery Poetry Club event
Wed 17 Dec 2008

Last night at the ESP-Disk LIVE @ The Bowery Poetry Club event

for the Barnacle release and my 1048 re-release

http://www.alansondheim.org/esp2.mp3 solo nylon acoustic-electric guitar then Azure Carter, song and voice, with electric guitar

(There's some static in the Club pipeline at one point when Azure's singing, but the recording is pretty clear.)

Enjoy!

↑ Index

221. ross priddle
Nothing Material: Poetry Welcome!
Wed 17 Dec 2008

Nothing Material: A Networking Art Project (Poetry Welcome!)

http://somethingmaterial.blogspot.com

Jan. 21 - Feb. 4, 2009

Common Ground Gallery, Windsor, Ontario, Canada

http://www.mnsi.net/~common/a correspondance art project a correspondense art project (a mailart show!)

open theme open size open technique no jury documentation to all!

send to:
ross priddle
c/o Common Ground
MacKenzie Hall, 1st Floor

3277 Sandwich St. W.
Windsor, Ontario
N9C 1A9
CANADA

electronic contributions to:
[redacted]

please disseminate widely!

&

look at this nice old building it\'s going to be in:

http://www.citywindsor.ca/000219.asp

how could you resist that?

_____ Looking for the perfect gift? Give the gift of Flickr!

http://www.flickr.com/gift/

↑ Index

222. Holly Crawford

Re: Richard Kostelanetz's SRAM/BLEDS at AC[Chapel]

Wed 17 Dec 2008

Installation of SCRAM/BLEDS from book of concrete poems by Richard Kostelanetz will adorn the walls of AC [Chapel] 547 W. 27th St, 5th Floor
New York City 10001

The opening is Thursday December 18 from 6-8. The exhibition runs through Jan 17. The space is open Monday-Saturday 9-6 pm.

And a poem by Dan Waber is written on our very large blackboard wall this month.

More to come.

-Holly Crawford
[redacted]
www.artcurrrents.org

↑ Index

223. Martha Cinader Mims

L&BH Network Fresh Literary Content Dec. 17, 2008

Wed 17 Dec 2008

L&BH Network Fresh Content Dec. 17, 2008

L&BH Network Arts News

The Puzzle Box, Chapters 11 & 12 edwardpicot
Friday, 08:48 PM
“All of yesterday I feared for my husband’s life,” said the Queen. “I carried him to my palace beneath the earth, and gave him food and drink. Ice-cold water from the well beneath the world-tree, and manna from the deserts of the moon. Tonight he stood up and asked what time of year it was. [...] Read more…

Live Internet Music & Poetry with Kirk Lumpkin Kirk Lumpkin
Thursday, 08:51 PM
The Word-Music Continuum performs its unique blend of spoken word & music Monday, Dec. 15th, 8:30pm Kirk Lumpkin - poetry & percussion, Paul Mills - guitar, Mark Wieder - bass The Wild Buds party down with their “West Coast Mardi Gras Music” Wednesday, Dec. 17, 8:30pm Kirk Lumpkin - vocals, Bill Lackey - [...] Read more…

L&BH Network Mailing Lists
[PCOPWC] TRANSLATED BY Gary Gach
[PCOPWC] Reginald Lockett Tribute on Friday, February 27th - We Need Your Support Kim McMillon
L&BH Poetry Cafe Blog

GLOBAL UNITY PRAYER dr. charles frederickson Today, 02:10 PM GLOBAL UNITY PRAYER Praying to whatever God listens Keep the faith universal salvation Chanukkah Christmas Kwanzaa Ramadan Solstice Offering compassionate kindness merciful forgiveness Prickly holly sneaky mistletoe kisses ‘Elf conscious North Pole meltdown Yuletide carols harmonized Silent Night Birch logs rekindling hearthstone glow Still believing in wondrous miracles Temple flame burned eight days On oil just for one Menorah candles votive lamp remembrances Kwanzaa Swahili for First Fruits African [...] Read more…

Writing Lyrics for the FBI peter bray Monday, 06:28 PM He’s chewing on new lyrics like cerebral cud, trying to separate the gravel from the mud. Doing cryptographer’s research in the back of his head, undercover homework from the bottom of his bed. I used to think he was a rocket science guy, but now he’s writing lyrics for the FBI. He answered an ad in the Daily Farm News, looking for [...] Read more…

THE HEATH dr. charles frederickson Monday, 02:07 PM THE HEATH Weekend escapism wilderness nature hike Carving previously unexplored wasteland trails Trudging through prickly thistle bramble Wading across knee-deep stony rills Sterile bleak moor harvesting melancholy Evaporated teardrops pools of sorrow Maudlin dried up peat bogs Luminous stingray sunstroke draining vitality Fruity scent of rebirth tinted Green fleshy herbage pastel wildflowers Ripening ovaries hopeful come-on petals Enticing seedy pollen gathering bees Roving grasshopper lies in wait Pulsating hind [...] Read more…

Bro. Radio’s Theory of Evolution reginald lockett Friday, 06:04 PM today, my radio proclaimed most people did not evolve, but remain single-cell entities psychologically & emotionally. Darwin & other scientists & scholars are absolutely wrong. things are not as they seem. weconcentrate too much on the "superficial empirical physical plane of existence!" what about "true" intelligence & the spirit of people? he [...] Read more…

THE FUNERAL dr. charles frederickson Friday, 02:05 PM THE FUNERAL Platform moved back in time Transient stranger within looking out Icy faceless reflections rolled eyes Raised brows petty accusations blur Wrapped in unshakable snowy blanket Cemetery flurries brushed with dandruff Frosty breath scatterbrain patterns curtained Train windows sealed up tight Shrill whistle at appointed time Reinvents itself snug compartment alone With nothing else to prove Mourning in my own way Quiet grief possessed by chilly Up- rush [...] Read more…

MEMORY OF NOTHING daniel de culla Thursday, 05:01 PM Listen: Drag branches comeback Across the forest floor: Knowledge of the rough¡ At water’s edge I gather some things up: Memory of nothing. We’ve the time to give the Babel Tower A close reading. Awful good, Tú As Roy A. Rappaport’s Ritual… as Communication and as State. Our preferences might be Toward more emphasis On species places: Smooth textures of dead wood Knowledge of our hands on arms The body-art of [...] Read more…

Listen & Be Heard Network
1221 Monterey Street, Suite 4
Vallejo CA, 94590
[redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

Martha Cinader Mims
Listen & Be Heard Network

[redacted]
http://www.listenandbeheard.net

Get Skype and call me for free.

↑ Index

224. Susan Webster Schultz
TINFISH PRESS news
Wed 17 Dec 2008

Tinfish Press has published six books this year; we have also done three reprints of older publications. Please see our website (www.tinfishpress.com) for information about these reprints:

--_Sista Tongue_, by Lisa Linn Kanae (on being a pidgin speaker in HI; widely taught experimental memoir/essay) Under chapbooks on the website.

--_Corpse Watching_, by Sarith Peou, on the Khmer Rouge genocide in Cambodia. Finalist in the Asian American Writers Workshop Awards. Under chapbooks.

--_Poeta en San Francisco_, by Barbara Jane Reyes. Winner of the 2005 James Laughlin Award, but more importantly a magnificent book on the Philippines, the USA, and _Apocalypse Now_. Under Books.

These make good teaching tools and gifts all year round. Please also consider subscribing to our annual journal.

Happy holidays from Tinfish Press.

aloha, Susan

Susan M. Schultz
Professor Department of English
University of Hawai`i-Manoa
Honolulu, HI 96822

http://stlouis.cardinals.mlb.com/NASApp/mlb/index.jsp?c_id=stl Go Cards!!!

now available:

Dementia Blog
http://singinghorsepress.com/

Tinfish Press
http://tinfishpress.com

↑ Index

225. Nicholas Karavatos

JOB - Composition and Professional Writing, American University of Sharjah

Thu 18 Dec 2008

American University of Sharjah
Composition and Professional Writing

The Department of Writing Studies seeks applicants who have two years of North American experience teaching Composition at the university level and who have native English ability. Areas of specialization include Composition, Professional Writing, and Applied Linguistics/ESL. Both MA and Ph.D. holders are encouraged to apply. Overseas experience a plus.

Applications should be sent to the attention of Dean William Heidcamp at [redacted].

--

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of English
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

_____
Send e-mail anywhere. No map, no compass.
http://windowslive.com/Explore/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_anywhere_122008

↑ Index

226. Sarah Kaldor

Playing with words: The spoken word in artistic practice

Thu 18 Dec 2008

Playing with Words: the spoken word in artistic practice is an anthology edited by Cathy Lane of works from over forty leading contemporary sound artists and composers who use words, particularly spoken words, as their material and inspiration. Each invited contributor has responded with a work for this edition, revealing a rich variety of artistic approach and exploration of the spoken and written word communicated through sound poetry, interviews, creative writing, visual-textual pieces and performance scores.

Playing with Words: the spoken word in artistic practice Edited by Cathy Lane
Designed by Colin Sackett

Published by CRiSAP (Creative Research in Sound Arts Practice) www.crisap.org and RGAP (Research Group for Artists Publications) www.rgap.co.uk
ISBN 978-0-9558273-3-4 208 pages
Price £12.99 available from: Cornerhouse Books http://www.cornerhouse.org/books/

↑ Index

227. Andy Nicholson

Re: Noah Eli Gordon: Acoustic Experience available from Pavement Saw Press

Thu 18 Dec 2008

This is a wonderful chapbook. Yes.

On Tue, Dec 16, 2008 at 6:42 AM, David Baratier <[redacted]> wrote:
> Noah Eli Gordon
> Acoustic Experience
>
> Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Series
> Winner of the 2007-08 Chapbook Award
> ISBN 978-1-886350-41-0
> 32 pages, saddle stapled,
> limited edition, 433 copies printed > $7.00
>
> directly order from
> http://www.pavementsaw.org/pages/chapbooks.htm
>
> Noah Eli Gordon is the author of six collections, Novel Pictorial Noise (selected by John Ashbery for the National Poetry Series), Figures for a Darkroom Voice (in collaboration with poet Joshua Marie Wilkinson and artist Noah Saterstrom), A Fiddle Pulled from the Throat of a Sparrow, Inbox, The Area of Sound Called the Subtone, and The Frequencies. His reviews and essays have appeared in numerous publications, including: Review of Contemporary Fiction, The Denver Quarterly, Jacket, The Poetry Project Newsletter, Talisman, and the book Burning Interiors: David Shapiro's Poetry and Poetics. He writes a column on chapbooks for Rain Taxi and teaches at the University of Colorado at Denver.
>
> These poems first appeared in: Columbia Poetry Review, English Language Notes, The Modern Review, Web Conjunctions and Zoland Poetry.
>

> This collection is mostly serial prose poems (8 to 10 pieces in length) written in gramatically correct bonifide post new sentence sentences without funny animals or inanimate objects that talk like most American poeteasters have inflicted upon us through a thin vaneer of unsubstantiated surrealism.
>
>
> Be well
>
> David Baratier, Editor
>
> Pavement Saw Press
> 321 Empire Street
> Montpelier OH 43543
> http://pavementsaw.org
>
> Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at > http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

228. Alexander Jorgensen
WANTED: Out of Print Issue #4 of Noon: Journal of Short Poem
Thu 18 Dec 2008

Dear List:

Wondering if anyone might have a spare Issue of Noon #4. If so, then please back channel. I have two poems published in this wonderful, wonderful journal. Regrettably, however, I have managed to distribute every last one to friends. Your time and consideration will be most sincerely appreciated.

Regards,
Alex

↑ Index

229. Paul Nelson
Organic Poetry
Thu 18 Dec 2008

Organic Poetry: North American Field Poetics is now out and available on-line:

http://www.amazon.com/Organic-Poetry-North-American-Poetics/dp/3639095111/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1229616711&sr=1-1

This is an updated version of my Masters Thesis, done through Independent Study at Lesley University in Cambridge. More info at http://www.OrganicPoetry.org

The phrase comes from the early 60's correspondence of Robert Duncan and Denise Levertov, and the book traces the method through several North American poets, from Whitman to WCW, Olson, Duncan, Levertov, McClure, George Bowering and Robin Blaser, among others. Cultural implications are touched on, especially the notion that this process is an antidote to the mechanistic cosmology so rampant in our Western world today. (Competition and domination give way to the notion of interconnection and process.)

I am grateful to all the people who made this book possible, including occasional SUNY-Buffalo listserv wiseguy George Bowering.

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

↑ Index

230. Jerome Rothenberg
Poems for the Millennium, volume 3: publication & reading
Thu 18 Dec 2008

On December 29 at 7:00 p.m. Books Inc. - Opera Plaza will be hosting a launch and reading for Poems for the Millennium, volume 3: The University of California Book of Romantic and Postromantic Poetry, edited by Jerome Rothenberg and Jeffrey C. Robinson. Like its two twentieth-century predecessors, Poems for the Millennium, volumes 1 and 2, this gathering sets forth a globally decentered approach to the poetry of the preceding century from a radically experimental and visionary perspective. Joining Rothenberg and Robinson in the reading and performance are major Bay Area poets Michael McClure, Diane di Prima, Michael Palmer, Bill Berkson, Leslie Scalapino, and Jack Foley (performing with Adelle Foley). Introducing the reading will be Katherine Hastings, founder of the WordTemple Poetry Series and host of WordTemple on KRCB 91.1 FM, Santa Rosa's NPR affiliate. The Books Inc. location is at Opera Plaza, 601 Van Ness Avenue, tel. [redacted].

The following is from the University of California Press announcement:

The previous two volumes of this acclaimed anthology set forth a globally decentered revision of twentieth-century poetry from the perspective of its many avant-gardes. Now editors Jerome Rothenberg and Jeffrey C. Robinson bring a radically new interpretation to the poetry of the preceding century, viewing the work of the romantic and post-romantic poets as an international, collective, often utopian enterprise that became the foundation of experimental modernism. Global in its range, volume three gathers selections from the poetry and manifestos of canonical poets, as well as the work of lesser-known but equally radical poets. Defining romanticism as experimental and visionary, Rothenberg and Robinson feature prose poetry, verbal-visual experiments, and sound poetry, along with more familiar forms seen here as if for the first time. The anthology also explores romanticism outside the European orbit and includes ethnopoetic and archaeological works outside the literary mainstream. The range of volume three and its skewing of the traditional canon illuminate the process by which romantics and post- romantics challenged nineteenth-century orthodoxies and propelled poetry to the experiments of a later modernism and avant-gardism.

The full University of California Press announcement can be found at http://www.ucpress.edu/books/pages/10540.php, including a complete copy of the book's table of contents.

Jerome Rothenberg
1026 San Abella
Encinitas, CA 92024
[redacted]
jrothenberg at cox.net
Blog at poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com

"Poetry must have something in it
that is barbaric, vast, and wild."
D. Diderot

↑ Index

231. Henry A. Lazer

MLA - Jerome Rothenberg & UA Press

Thu 18 Dec 2008

Dear Poetics List:

If you're going to San Francisco for MLA, please consider dropping by the University of Alabama Press's booth, #307, for a book signing:

Sunday, December 28, 3pm

Jerome Rothenberg
signing copies of his newly published
Poetic & Polemics: 1980-2005

And please feel free to stop by throughout the conference to meet with Dan Waterman, Acquisitions Editor for the UA Press, to see the range of of Modern and Contemporary Poetics books, FC2 books, and the rest of the UA Press publications.

Happy holidays,

Hank Lazer

--

↑ Index

232. Mark Weiss
Clinton and the potentates
Thu 18 Dec 2008

The New York Times ran an article today about Clinton's donors. It's headline--"Moguls and Arab States Are Big Donors to Clinton Charity"--must have sent a momentary frisson down the collective spine of India. The moguls, or mughals, were emperors of India before the British Raj. So, the headline seems to say that the potentates of the decadent east are palsy walsy with Clinton, though by "moguls" is meant the likes of Bill Gates. What the headline really says is that the Times can't find writers who know any history.

Gave me a chuckle, tho.

Mark

↑ Index

233. Hank Lazer
MLA - Jerome Rothenberg & UA Press - CORRECTION: booth #807
Thu 18 Dec 2008

The correct booth # for the UA Press is #807...

Hank

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted] [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Thursday, December 18, 2008 3:42 PM
To: Poetics List
Subject: MLA - Jerome Rothenberg & UA Press

Dear Poetics List:

If you're going to San Francisco for MLA, please consider dropping by the University of Alabama Press's booth, #307, for a book signing:

Sunday, December 28, 3pm

Jerome Rothenberg
signing copies of his newly published
Poetic & Polemics: 1980-2005

And please feel free to stop by throughout the conference to meet with Dan Waterman, Acquisitions Editor for the UA Press, to see the range of of Modern and Contemporary Poetics books, FC2 books, and the rest of the UA Press publications.

Happy holidays,

Hank Lazer

--

↑ Index

234. Pam Brown
season's greetings from the deletions
Thu 18 Dec 2008

http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/

http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/

_____

Blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/
Web site : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
Associate editor : Jacket - http://jacketmagazine.com/

_____

Make the switch to the world's best email. Get Yahoo!7 Mail! http://au.yahoo.com/y7mail

↑ Index

235. Poetry Project
New Year's Day at The Poetry Project!
Thu 18 Dec 2008

Is there a better place to be on New Year¹s Day in New York City? Please join the Poetry Project for our benefit, the 35th Annual New Year¹s Day Marathon Reading! Ron Padgett will kick us off at 2pm and about 140 performances will lead us into the euphoric early morning. Other things to look forward to: Nicole

Peyrafitte making crepes in the Parish Hall, pierogis from Veselka, an abundance of newly donated small press poetry books, and of course, charming and well-dressed hosts.

Note that our office will be closed the week of the 22nd. See below for complete information:

January 1, 2 PM
The 35th Annual New Year¹s Day Marathon Reading

Poets and performers include Bruce Andrews & Sally Silvers, Arthur¹s Landing (Ernie Brooks, Steven Hall, Yvette Perez & Peter Zummo), Vyt Bakaitis, Jim Behrle, Martine Bellen, Anselm Berrigan, Edmund Berrigan, Barbara Blatner, Justin Bond, Donna Brook, Franklin Bruno, Tisa Bryant, Peter Bushyeager, Reuben Butchart (w/ John Carroll), Steve Cannon, Yoshiko Chuma, Todd Colby, John Coletti, CAConrad, Corina Copp, Brenda Coultas, Geoffrey Cruickshank-Hagenbuckle, Mónica de la Torre, Katie Degenetesh, Barry Denny, Maggie Dubris, Douglas Dunn, Marcella Durand, Steve Earle, Will Edmiston, Marty Ehrlich, Joe Eliot, Laura Elrick, Avram Fefer, Bonny Finberg, Jess Fiorini, Corrine Fitzpatrick, Foamola, Merry Fortune, Tonya Foster, David Freeman, Ed Friedman, Joanna Fuhrman, Cliff Fyman, Drew Gardner, John Giorno, John Godfrey, Abraham Gomez-Delgado, Sylvia Gorelick, Stephanie Gray, Ted Greenwald, John S. Hall, Janet Hamill, Diana Hamilton, David Henderson, Bob Hershon, Mitch Highfill, Bob Holman, Erica Hunt, Brenda Iijima, Lisa Jarnot, Hettie Jones, Patricia Spears Jones, Pierre Joris, Erica Kaufman, Lenny Kaye, Evan Kennedy, Aaron Kiely, Paul Killebrew, David Kirschenbaum, Bill Kushner, Paul La Farge, Susan Landers, Denize Lauture, Joseph Legaspi, Joel Lewis, Rachel Levitsky, Brendan Lorber, Filip Marinovic, Susan Maurer, Gillian McCain, Tracy McTague, Taylor Mead, Jonas Mekas, Jennifer Monson, Rebecca Moore, Tracie Morris, Gina Myers, Eileen Myles, Marc Nasdor, Murat Nemet-Nejat, Jim Neu, Richard O¹Russa, Akilah Oliver, Geoffrey Olsen, Dael Orlandersmith, Yuko Otomo, Ron Padgett, Julie Patton, Nicole Peyrafitte, Wanda Phipps, Kristin Prevallet, Arlo Quint, Chris Rael, Lee Ranaldo, Citizen Reno, Frances Richard, Renato Rosaldo, Bob Rosenthal, Douglas Rothschild, Thaddeus Rutkowski, Tom Savage, Michael Scharf, Harris Schiff, David Shapiro, Elliott Sharpe, Frank Sherlock, Nathaniel Siegel, Samita Sinha, Hal Sirowitz, Patti Smith, Christopher Stackhouse, Stacy Szymaszek, Anne Tardos, Cecil Taylor, Steven Taylor (w/ Debra Salvo), Susie Timmons, Rodrigo Toscano, David Vogen, Anne Waldman, Nicole Wallace, Jo Ann Wasserman, Phyllis Wat, Karen Weiser, Dustin Williamson, Max Winter, Don Yorty, Emily XYZ and more.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

236. steve d. dalachinsky

great new cd

Thu 18 Dec 2008

Greetings-

Just wanted to make you aware that pre-orders are now available for The Matthew Shipp Trio's latest recording, "Harmonic Disorder". The release date for this CD is January 27th, 2009.

"Shipp views the date as ''a continuation of the great piano trio tradition-artists such as Bud Powell, Bill Evans and Ahmad Jamal- but played with our own language and in our own unique way.''
THAT ABOUT SUMS IT UP.
- Jazzreview.com

Here's the Link!

http://www.amazon.com/Harmonic-Disorder-Matthew-Shipp/dp/B001MIG2AQ/
ref=p d_bbs_sr_1?ie=UTF8&s=music&qid=1229614072&sr=8-1 <http://www.amazon.com/Harmonic-Disorder-Matthew-Shipp/dp/B001MIG2AQ/ref= pd_bbs_sr_1?ie=UTF8&s=music&qid=1229614072&sr=8-1>

↑ Index

237. Jim Andrews
Re: Playing with words: The spoken word in artistic practice
Fri 19 Dec 2008

---

i have a copy of this book. it's very good. writings by some i know and many i don't yet.

the writers include joerg piringer, jaap blonk, pamila z, katharine norman, larry wendt, paul lansky, and laurie anderson.

the book's production is very good. and it's 200+ pages.

i'm currently reading an essay by john wynne about his project with speakers of gitxsanimaax, which is spoken by some natives around the upper skeena river in my home province of british columbia.

and enjoyed katharine norman's discursive piece called 'local materials' about what catches her ear and what she makes of it.

i would recommend this book to anyone who enjoys the art of sound.

ja
http://vispo.com

----- Original Message -----
From: "Sarah Kaldor" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, December 18, 2008 3:48 AM
Subject: Playing with words: The spoken word in artistic practice

Playing with Words: the spoken word in artistic practice is an anthology edited by Cathy Lane of works from over forty leading contemporary sound artists and composers who use words, particularly spoken words, as their material and inspiration. Each invited contributor has responded with a work for this edition, revealing a rich variety of artistic approach and exploration of the spoken and written word communicated through sound poetry, interviews, creative writing, visual-textual pieces and performance scores.

Playing with Words: the spoken word in artistic practice Edited by Cathy Lane
Designed by Colin Sackett
Published by CRiSAP (Creative Research in Sound Arts Practice) www.crisap.org
and RGAP (Research Group for Artists Publications) www.rgap.co.uk
ISBN 978-0-9558273-3-4 208 pages
Price £12.99 available from: Cornerhouse Books http:// www.cornerhouse.org/books/

↑ Index

238. Joel Chace

Fwd: your review in Galatea

Fri 19 Dec 2008

GALATEA RESURRECTS INVITES YOU TO VISIT OUR 11TH ISSUE

AT http://galatearesurrection11.blogspot.com

For convenience, we offer the issue's Table of Contents below.

Best,
Eileen Tabios
Editor, Galatea Resurrects
http://galatearesurrects.blogspot.com

ISSUE NO. 11 TABLE OF CONTENTS
December 17, 2008

EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION
By Eileen Tabios

NEW REVIEWS
Michael Caylo-Baradi Reviews SHORT MOVIES by Jukka-Pekka Kervinen and Márton Koppány

Rachel Daley Reviews ZONE : ZERO by Stephanie Strickland

John Olson Reviews SCAFFOLD by Joel Chace

Eric Gelsinger Reviews SO THAT EVEN by Tawrin Baker

Kristina Marie Darling Reviews TORQUES: DRAFTS 58-76 by Rachel Blau DuPlessis

Denise Dooley Reviews THE SENSORY CABINET by Mark DuCharme

John Cunningham Reviews CAUGHT BY THE TAIL: FRANCIS PICABIA AND DADA IN PARIS by George Baker and I AM A BEAUTIFUL MONSTER: POETRY, PROSE AND PROVOCATIONS by Francis Picabia, translated by Marc Lowenthal

Eileen Tabios Engages DEMENTIA BLOG by Susan M. Schultz

Pamela Hart Reviews THIS IS WHY I HURT YOU by Kate Greenstreet

Jon Curley Reviews A WOMAN'S GUIDE TO MOUNTAIN CLIMBING by Jane Augustine

Karen An-Hwei Lee Reviews MENTAL COMMITMENT ROBOTS by Sueyeun Juliette Lee

Tom Beckett Reviews SUBSISTENCE EQUIPMENT by Brenda Iijima

Lisa Bower Reviews TRADING IN MERMAIDS by Alfred A. Yuson

Thomas Fink Reviews PARSINGS by Sheila E. Murphy

Michael Caylo-Baradi Reviews PERSUASIONS OF FALL by Ann Lauinger

Tom Beckett Reviews STRING PARADE by Jordan Stempleman

Karen Rigby Reviews THEORIES OF FALLING by Sandra Beasley

Wendy Lynn Cohen Reviews THE GREAT WHIRL OF EXILE by Leroy V. Quintana

James Stotts Reviews ITERATURE by Eugene Ostashevsky

Tom Beckett Reviews YOUR TEN FAVORITE WORDS by Reb Livingston

John Cunningham Reviews BLANK VERSE: A GUIDE TO ITS HISTORY AND USE by Robert B. Shaw

Elizabeth Kate Switaj Reviews IN NO ONE'S LAND by Paige Ackerson-Kiely

Wendy Lynn Cohen Reviews POLYVERSE by Lee Ann Brown

Eric Gelsinger Reviews OPEN NIGHT by Aaron Lowinger

John Bloomberg-Rissman Reviews ANIMATE, INANIMATE AIMS by Brenda Iijima Another view

Eileen Tabios Engages HALLUCINATING CALIFORNIA by Richard Lopez and Jonathan Hayes

Emily Schorr Lesnick Reviews ARDOR by Karen An-Hwei Lee

Linda Rodriguez Reviews ROUNDING THE HUMAN by Linda Hogan

Helen Losse Reviews AFTER THE POISON by Collin Kelley (1)

Sam Rasnake Reviews AFTER THE POISON by Collin Kelley (2)

Robert E. Wood Reviews AFTER THE POISON by Collin Kelley (3)

James Stotts Reviews IN COMPANY: AN ANTHOLOGY OF NEW MEXICO POETS AFTER 1960, Edited by Lee Bartlett, V.B. Price and Dianne Edenfield Edwards

Denise Dooley Reviews UNBECOMING BEHAVIOR by Kate Colby

Tom Beckett Reviews WORLD0 and NO SOUNDS OF MY OWN MAKING, both by John Bloomberg-Rissman

Michael Caylo-Baradi Reviews THE SINGERS by Logan Ryan Smith

Wendy Lynn Cohen Reviews HOW TO DO THINGS WITH WORDS by Joan Retallack

Lars Palm Reviews PLAYING THE AMPLITUDES by Christopher Rizzo

Karen An-Hwei Lee Reviews BOX OF LIGHT / CAJA DE LUZ by Susan Gardner

Jeff Harrison Reviews WALDEN BOOK by Allen Bramhall

Fiona Sze-Lorrain Reviews BONE PAGODA by Susan Tichy

John Bloomberg-Rissman Reviews ISSUE 1, Edited by Stephen McLaughlin and Jim Carpenter

Fiona Sze-Lorrain Reviews WOMEN POETS ON MENTORSHIP: EFFORTS & AFFECTIONS, Edited by Arielle Greenberg & Rachel Zucker

Eileen Tabios Engages TORCHWOOD by Jill Magi

Karen An-Hwei Lee Reviews SHADOW MOUNTAIN by Claire Kageyama-Ramakrishnan

Patrick James Dunagan Reviews GLAD STONE CHILDREN by Edmund Berrigan and DRUNK BY NOON by Jennifer L. Knox

Fiona Sze-Lorrain Reviews SAVAGE MACHINERY by Karen Rigby

Patrick James Dunagan Reviews ALL THAT'S LEFT by Jack Hirschman and ONE OF A KIND by Jack Micheline

Adam Halbur Reviews EYE-SENSING by David Jaffin

Steven Karl Reviews STATE OF THE UNION--50 POLITICAL POEMS, Edited by Joshua Beckman & Matthew Zapruder

Eileen Tabios Engages RED by Marilyn R. Rosenberg

Brett Duchon Reviews PRAU by Jean Vengua

Wendy Lynn Cohen Reviews LOUISE IN LOVE by Mary Jo Bang

Steven Karl Reviews SHY GREEN FIELDS by Hugh Behm-Steinberg

Nathan Logan Reviews THE ROMANCE OF HAPPY WORKERS by Anne Boyer

Patria Rivera Reviews FIELD OF MIRRORS: AN ANTHOLOGY OF PHILIPPINE AMERICAN WRITERS, Edited by Edwin Lozada

Brett Duchon Reviews COMPLICATIONS by Garrett Caples

Linda Nguyen Reviews BRIDGEABLE SHORES: SELECTED POEMS (1969-2001) by Luis Cabalquinto

Linda Rodriguez Reviews THE PORTABLE FAMINE by Rane Arroyo

Reed Boskey Reviews WHAT THE FORTUNE TELLER DIDN'T SAY by Shirley Geok-lin Lim

Rebecca Holohan Reviews THE SPLINTERED FACE: TSUNAMI POEMS by Indran Amirthanayagam

Katherine Levy Reviews KALI'S BLADE by Michelle Bautista

Monna Wong Reviews MUSEUM OF ABSENCES by Luis H. Francia

Aileen Ibardaloza Engages PINOY POETICS: A COLLECTION OF AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL ESSAYS ON FILIPINO AND FILIPINO-AMERICAN POETICS, Edited by Nick Carbo and POEMCRAZY: FREEING YOUR LIFE WITH WORDS by Susan Goldsmith Wooldridge

Aileen Ibardaloza Reviews PASSAGE: POEMS 1933-2006 by Edgar B. Maranan

Eric Gelsinger Reviews WHEN I COME HERE by Ryan Eckes

Nathan Logan Reviews ON THE FLY by Amy King

Aileen Ibardaloza Engages BARING MORE THAN SOUL by Reme A. Grefalda

THE CRITIC WRITES POEMS
Michael Caylo-Baradi

IN THE PHILIPPINES: "POETRY ALLERGIC TO THE PURELY VERBAL" A PREFACE: Angelo Suarez engages with the works of Philippines-based poet-artists Bea Camacho, Costantino Zicarelli, Buen Calubayan and Cesare A.X. Syjuco

Angelo Suarez on THE POETICS OF INTERMEDIA: Bea Camacho's Eulogy to Art

Angelo Suarez on A PORTRAIT OF THE ARTIST AS MORON: Constantino Zicarelli and Buen Calubayan

Angelo Suarez on CESARE A.X. SYJUCO AND THE NEW FORMALISM

FROM OFFLINE TO ONLINE: REPRINTED REVIEWS
Allen Gaborro Reviews DOVEGLION: COLLECTED POEMS by JOSE GARCIA VILLA, Ed. John Edwin Cowen

Patrick James Dunagan Reviews EVANGELINE DOWNS by Micah Ballard

ADVERTISEMENT
Tiny Poetry Books Feeding the World…Literally!

BACK COVER
A German Shepherd Most Assuredly Shall Grace the White House Lawn

****
A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!
(http://pr.atwola.com/promoclk/100000075x1215047751x1200957972/aol?

redir=http://www.freecreditreport.com/pm/default.aspx?sc=668072%26hmpgID=62%26bcd=DecemailfooterNO62)

↑ Index

239. David Baratier

Re: Noah Eli Gordon: Acoustic Experience available from Pavement Saw Press

Fri 19 Dec 2008

Like all of our readers, Andy, you have excellent refined taste and keen sensibilities. Just mentioning "Pavement Saw Press" aloud curves your mouth into a bold choice in literature. We thank you.

> This is a wonderful chapbook. Yes.
>
> On Tue, Dec 16, 2008 at 6:42 AM, David Baratier
> <[redacted]> wrote:
> Noah Eli Gordon
> Acoustic Experience
>
> Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Series
> Winner of the 2007-08 Chapbook Award
> ISBN 978-1-886350-41-0
> 32 pages, saddle stapled,
> limited edition, 433 copies printed > $7.00
>
> directly order from
> http://www.pavementsaw.org/pages/chapbooks.htm

Be well

David Baratier, Editor

Pavement Saw Press
321 Empire Street
Montpelier OH 43543
http://pavementsaw.org

Subscribe to our e-mail listserv at http://pavementsaw.org/list/?p=subscribe&id=1

↑ Index

240. Geoffrey Gatza

Faits divers de la Poesie Americaine et Britannique

Fri 19 Dec 2008

Now 30 more :-)

http://faitsdiversdelapoesie.blogspot.com/

Best, Geoffrey

↑ Index

241. steve russell
Re: toys
Fri 19 Dec 2008

---

well, this didn't fit the thread when i 1st brought it up on the listserv some months back, but...

Forget Foucoult (sp????????????)

to paraphrase Baudillard on the Holocaust --

I don't deny History, it's an exquisite TOY

↑ Index

242. steve russell
Re: Clinton and the potentates
Fri 19 Dec 2008

& Barak Obama, remember, is a Muslim.

..."collective spine of India"

that's worth stealing.

--- On Thu, 12/18/08, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Clinton and the potentates
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, December 18, 2008, 5:14 PM

The New York Times ran an article today about Clinton's donors. It's headline--"Moguls and Arab States Are Big Donors to Clinton Charity"--must have sent a momentary frisson down the collective spine of India. The moguls, or mughals, were emperors of India before the British Raj. So, the headline seems to say that the potentates of the decadent east are palsy walsy with Clinton, though by "moguls" is meant the likes of Bill Gates. What the headline really says is that the Times can't find writers who know any history.

Gave me a chuckle, tho.

Mark

↑ Index

243. CA Conrad
OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Fri 19 Dec 2008

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

244. mIEKAL aND Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Fri 19 Dec 2008

New York poetry brothel tempts with verse

Published: Friday December 19, 2008

http://rawstory.com/news/afp/
New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."

Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame, the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice, "so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory wearing a kilt.

His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.

"I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."

The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.

"Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"

↑ Index

245. Ruth Lepson

Re: season's greetings from the deletions

Fri 19 Dec 2008

---

very dank, cool, stellar, funny, rockin', Pam.

On 12/18/08 5:56 PM, "Pam Brown" <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/
>
> http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/
>
> ---
>
> Blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/
> Web site : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
> Associate editor : Jacket - http://jacketmagazine.com/
>
> ---

> Make the switch to the world's best email. Get Yahoo!7 Mail! http://au.yahoo.com/y7mail

↑ Index

246. amy king

CFP (Calls for Papers) & OT -- "Forever Young? The Changing Images of America"

Fri 19 Dec 2008

Posted by Anny Ballardini elsewhere:

Dear colleagues,

The new edition of the European Association of American Studies (EAAS) newsletter has just been published online at:
http://www.eaas.eu/publications.htm. It contains the call for papers for its next biannual conference, taking place in Dublin, Ireland, 26-29 March 2010. The conference topic will be: "Forever Young? The Changing Images of America."

The deadline for submission of workshop proposals for this conference is 31 January 2009. For further details, please consult the EAAS newsletter.

With all best wishes,
Marietta Messmer
--
Dr. Marietta Messmer
Assistant Professor of American Studies University of Groningen

P.O. Box 716
9700 AS Groningen
The Netherlands
FAX: [redacted]
FON: [redacted]

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

↑ Index

247. Patrick F. Durgin
MLA Off-Site Reading 2008
Fri 19 Dec 2008

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 28th from 7-10:00pm
the Forum at Yerba Buena Center for the Arts 701 Mission Street, San Francisco

FREE and ADA accessible to the public
Co-sponsored by Small Press Distribution and the Poetry Foundation

Over 60 POETS reading (just) 2 minutes each: Aaron Kunin, Alan Bernheimer, Aldon Nielsen, Andrew Osborn, Barrett Watten, Bill Howe, Bill Luoma, Bill Mohr, Brian Kim Stefans, C.S. Giscombe, Carla Harryman, Christian Bok, Chris Stroffolino, Dale Smith, Craig Perez, Dan Featherston, David Buuck, Dennis Barone, Donna de la Pierre, Durriel Harris, Dodie Bellamy, Elizabeth Hardcastle, Etel Adnan, Jasper Bernes, Jeffrey Robinson, Javier Huerta, Jeanne Heuving, Jennifer Scappettone, Jerry Rothenberg, Joe Amato, John Emil Vincent, Joseph Lease, Joshua Clover, Joshua Marie Wilkinson, Julian Brolaski, Kasey Mohammad, Kass Fleisher, Kazim Ali, Kevin Killian, Kit Robinson, Kristin Prevallet, Kyle Schlesinger, Lisa Howe, Lisa Robertson, Lorraine Graham, Maxine Chernoff, Michael Davidson, Norma Cole, Paolo Xaiver, Patrick Durgin, Paul Hoover, Philip Metres, Rob Halpern, Sarah Schulman, Rusty Morrison, Standard Schaefer, Stephanie Young, Stephen Cope, Suzanne Stein, Timothy Yu, Tom Orange, Tyrone Williams, Walter Lew and more!

Poets in Masks! Refreshments! Books! Books! Books!

Books by the readers for sale from Small Press Distribution.

SPDbooks.org

PoetryFoundation.org

Small Press Distribution, 1341 7th Street, Berkeley, CA 94710

http://www.spdbooks.org/root/pages/sfspectacular.asp

↑ Index

248. Clay Banes
SPD'S End of Capitalism Sale
Fri 19 Dec 2008

Details: http://www.spdbooks.org/root/pages/endofcapitalism.asp

Seventy-five percent off selected titles from:

* Exact Change
* Potes & Poets
* FC2
* Dalkey Archive
* Green Candy
* Headpress
* QUA Books
* Sheep Meadow Press
* North Carolina Wesleyan
* Wings Press
* Duration Press Chapbooks
* New Mouth from the Dirty South
* William Burroughs/Expanded Media
* Assorted Poetry & Magazines
* Assorted Nonfiction

You must visit our website to get the special code. One of the world's last secrets: http://www.spdbooks.org/root/pages/endofcapitalism.asp

It was fun while it lasted.

Happy and ho,

Clay

Clay Banes
Sales & Marketing Manager
Small Press Distribution
1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley, CA 94710
[redacted] x304
[redacted]
http://www.spdbooks.org

↑ Index

249. cris cheek
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Fri 19 Dec 2008

why is it not possible for Elizabeth Alexander to tell Barack Obama what she thinks about her company and his choices and still read?? in fact she *could read something that addresses her concerns? write something specifically for the occasion?

On Fri, Dec 19, 2008 at 3:38 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision > of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

>
> If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.
>
> But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?
>
> Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.
>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

250. Poetry Project
New Year's Day at The Poetry Project!
Fri 19 Dec 2008

Here¹s yesterday¹s email broadcast again‹ this time with Admission Information!

January 1, 2 PM
The 35th Annual New Year¹s Day Marathon Reading
ADMISSION: $17 general, $13 students & seniors, $10 members.

Poets and performers include Bruce Andrews & Sally Silvers, Arthur¹s Landing (Ernie Brooks, Steven Hall, & Peter Zummo), Vyt Bakaitis, Jim Behrle, Martine Bellen, Anselm Berrigan, Edmund Berrigan, Barbara Blatner, Justin Bond, Donna Brook, Franklin Bruno, Tisa Bryant, Peter Bushyeager, Reuben Butchart (w/ John Carroll), Steve Cannon, Yoshiko Chuma, Todd Colby, John Coletti, CAConrad, Corina Copp, Brenda Coultas, Geoffrey Cruickshank-Hagenbuckle, Mónica de la Torre, Katie Degentesh, Barry Denny, Maggie Dubris, Douglas Dunn, Marcella Durand, Steve Earle, Will Edmiston, Marty Ehrlich, Joe Eliot, Laura Elrick, Avram Fefer, Bonny Finberg, Jess Fiorini, Corrine Fitzpatrick, Foamola, Merry Fortune, Tonya Foster, David Freeman, Ed Friedman, Joanna Fuhrman, Cliff Fyman, Drew Gardner, John Giorno, John Godfrey, Abraham Gomez-Delgado, Sylvia Gorelick, Stephanie Gray, Ted Greenwald, John S. Hall, Janet Hamill, Diana Hamilton, David Henderson, Bob Hershon, Mitch Highfill, Bob Holman, Erica Hunt, Brenda Iijima, Lisa Jarnot, Hettie Jones, Patricia Spears Jones, Pierre Joris, Erica Kaufman, Lenny Kaye, Evan Kennedy, Aaron Kiely, Paul Killebrew, David Kirschenbaum, Bill Kushner, Paul La Farge, Susan Landers, Denize Lauture, Joseph Legaspi, Joel Lewis, Rachel Levitsky, Brendan Lorber, Filip Marinovic, Susan Maurer, Gillian McCain, Tracy McTague, Taylor Mead, Jonas Mekas, Jennifer Monson, Rebecca Moore, Tracie Morris, Gina Myers, Eileen Myles, Marc Nasdor, Murat Nemet-Nejat, Jim Neu, Richard O¹Russa, Akilah Oliver, Geoffrey Olsen, Dael Orlandersmith, Yuko Otomo, Ron Padgett, Julie Patton, Yvette Perez, Nicole Peyrafitte, Wanda Phipps, Kristin Prevallet, Arlo Quint, Chris Rael, Lee Ranaldo, Citizen Reno, Frances Richard, Renato Rosaldo, Bob Rosenthal, Douglas Rothschild, Thaddeus Rutkowski, Tom Savage, Michael Scharf, Harris Schiff, David Shapiro, Elliott Sharp, Frank Sherlock, Nathaniel Siegel, Samita Sinha, Hal Sirowitz, Patti Smith, Christopher Stackhouse, Stacy Szymaszek, Anne Tardos, Cecil Taylor, Steven Taylor (w/ Debra Salvo), Susie Timmons, Rodrigo Toscano, David Vogen, Anne Waldman, Nicole Wallace, Jo Ann Wasserman, Phyllis Wat, Karen Weiser, Dustin Williamson, Max Winter, Don Yorty, Emily XYZ and more.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.com/membership.php

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.com/calendar.php

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.com

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

251. Barbara Henning
Re: Review of John Godfrey's City of Corners
Sat 20 Dec 2008

> Today I posted a review of John Godfrey's City of Corners on my occasional blog at
>
> http://barbarahenning.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

252. Jennifer Karmin
JOB: Western State College of Colorado
Sat 20 Dec 2008

(this is a forward. please don't respond to me. good luck!)

English: Creative Writing: Western State College of Colorado invites applications for a tenure-track position in English starting August 2009. Rank to be determined by qualifications and experience. Teaching responsibilities include courses in creative writing, writing and magazine production, and lower-division writing and literature courses in the general education curriculum. Requirements include a doctorate or MFA, and candidates must possess a strong commitment to undergraduate education and demonstrate excellence in teaching.

For full position information and application procedures visit http://www.western.edu/hr/jobs. Screening of applications will begin January 26, 2009. AA/EOE.

Phone : [redacted]
Fax : [redacted]
Dr. Mark Todd
Chair, English Search Committee
Comm Arts, Languages and Literature
Western State College of Colorado
Taylor Hall 116
600 N Adams St
Gunnison, CO 81231

↑ Index

253. Chris Stroffolino
12/27 EVENT (in Oakland)
Sat 20 Dec 2008

Bootleg Dylan Hanukah song!
We found a copy, from the Fantasy Record vaults!
& will play it---
On Saturday December 27th, the third installment of Nicely Out Of Tune thing...
& 1154 E. 12th St. Oakland, CA. (12th & 12th...)--a "china house" or "muppet hotel"...

Featuring Ba Da Bing recording artist, Colossal Yes (Utrillo from Comets on Fire Piano stuff)
Ash Reiter(www.myspace.com/ashreiter)
James-Fenwicke Holmes from the Mumlers and, I'll be hosting, and I think I'll actually play the piano this time...

Hopefully some poets and talkers and such, in town for the MLA convention, may be joining us as well
Grant Jenkins from Tulsa, and perhaps other short sets.
There may be other art going on....feel free to bring paintings, canvases, hula- hoops (actually we have those), or even food and drink.

$5 donation-- to help us get through the dark depression time....

Oh, and if you wanna here my Xmas song, "Isle Of Misfit Toys" (hopefully we'll have a better mix by NEXT XMAS), it's at www.myspace.com/startoor

Take care, Chris

www.myspace.com/chrisstroffolino

↑ Index

254. Ruth Lepson
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Sat 20 Dec 2008

---

cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are characterizing it.

On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:

New York poetry brothel tempts with verse

Published: Friday December 19, 2008

http://rawstory.com/news/afp/New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."

Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame, the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice, "so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at > Yale.

>
> "I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.
>
> Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."
>
> But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.
>
> "Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory wearing a kilt.
>
> His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.
>
> "I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."
>
> The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.
>
> "Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"

↑ Index

255. Troy Camplin

Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Sat 20 Dec 2008

I've been trying to tell people for years that the Democrats are no friends to gays, lesbians, bisexuals, transgenders, etc., that they were only using civil right issues in general to fool people into voting for them while they in fact undermine the groups they claim to support to keep them dependent upon them. Please, people, wake up and smell the cynicism.

Troy Camplin

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 2:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

256. lanny quarles
Season's Greetings From Jellybean Weirdo...
Sat 20 Dec 2008

http://jellybeanweirdo.blogspot.com/2008/12/seasons-greetings-from-jellybean-weirdo.html

↑ Index

257. Gerald Schwartz
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sat 20 Dec 2008

I agree, this is truly a time to get Up In It, not a time to be Not there at all. Audre Lord opted out of her time to have a bigger place to say what she needed to say here in NY State.

A sad loss that was!

Gerald S.

> why is it not possible for Elizabeth Alexander to tell Barack Obama what she > thinks about her company and his choices and still read?? > *in fact she could read something that addresses her concerns? write something specifically for the occasion?
>
> On Fri, Dec 19, 2008 at 3:38 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.
>
> Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.
>
> This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.
>
> When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.
>
> Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

↑ Index

258. laura hinton

Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Sat 20 Dec 2008

To CA Conrad: Thank you for writing this letter. The choice of Rick Warren by Obama is a terrible mistake, for anyone who believes in Civil Rights for all citizens. And what is the point of Civil Rights for only some of us? Elizabeth Alexander would be doing the right thing, if she chosses to take your advice, and withdraw in protest from the inauguration ceremony. What a disappointment from Obama. Laura

On Fri, Dec 19, 2008 at 3:38 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.
>
> Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.
>
> This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.
>
> When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.
>
> Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

259. steve d. dalachinsky
Re: SPD'S End of Capitalism Sale
Sun 21 Dec 2008

---

from dalachinsky what dya have from exact change at 75 % off

On Fri, 19 Dec 2008 15:44:36 -0800 Clay Banes <[redacted]> writes:
> Details: http://www.spdbooks.org/root/pages/endofcapitalism.asp
>
> Seventy-five percent off selected titles from:
>
> * Exact Change
> * Potes & Poets
> * FC2
> * Dalkey Archive
> * Green Candy
> * Headpress
> * QUA Books
> * Sheep Meadow Press
> * North Carolina Wesleyan
> * Wings Press
> * Duration Press Chapbooks
> * New Mouth from the Dirty South
> * William Burroughs/Expanded Media
> * Assorted Poetry & Magazines
> * Assorted Nonfiction
>
> You must visit our website to get the special code. One of the > world's last secrets:
> http://www.spdbooks.org/root/pages/endofcapitalism.asp
>
> It was fun while it lasted.
>
> Happy and ho,
>
> Clay
>
> Clay Banes
> Sales & Marketing Manager
> Small Press Distribution
> 1341 Seventh Street
> Berkeley, CA 94710
> [redacted] x304

> [redacted]
> http://www.spdbooks.org
>
>
>

↑ Index

260. Manuel Brito
CFP- Little Magazines
Sun 21 Dec 2008

The _Revista Canaria de Estudios Ingleses_ (_RCEI_) is now accepting original submissions of essays for publication in the 2011 April issue. The deadline is October, 2010. Please see http://webpages.ull.es/users/rceing/Submissions.html <http://sylvanecho.net> for submission. As editor of this _RCEI_ special issue on "Little Magazines of American Poetry in the Period 1970-2000", I would welcome contributions from scholars around the world, and any others who have a stake in the understanding of this phenomenon

For more information contact Manuel Brito, [redacted].

Papers, but not limited to, focusing on these issues are invited: - What role/s little magazines played in changing poetry and social perspectives in the period 1970-2000? - How academy subsumed innovations and creative research pusblished in little magaziones? - Market vs. individual position in the making of little magazines. - The role of the editors as trademakers, practitioners, and creative researchers. - What are the benefits of these little magazines considered as 'high' culture? Were they useful? - How technological production affected potential readers of these little magazines? - Historical view on this kind of literary proudction.

Completed papers should be no more than 7,000 words.
Deadline: October 2010

The _Revista Canaria de Estudios Ingleses_ is a peer-reviewed academic journal auspiced by the University of La Laguna (Spain), focusing on English studies.

↑ Index

261. Paul Nelson
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."

So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

262. Obododimma Oha
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

It seems to me that the best way to say "No, thank you" is to write and read a poem about LGBT rights, sufferings, anxieties, etc, for the inauguration. That, again, would make history. The best form of protest is staged "on stage", not offstage. --- Obododimma Oha.

On Fri, Dec 19, 2008 at 9:38 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.
>
> Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.
>
> This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.
>
> When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

263. Obododimma Oha
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence." --- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

> Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.
>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

264. steve russell
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Sun 21 Dec 2008

---

somewhat related: William Styron, the way he waxes his libido in "Sophie's Choice." i'm still looking for the book of essays by the British Feminist who enlightened me.

--- On Sat, 12/20/08, Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, December 20, 2008, 6:51 PM

cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are characterizing it.

On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]>
wrote:

> New York poetry brothel tempts with verse
>
> Published: Friday December 19, 2008
>
>
http://rawstory.com/news/afp/New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008
.html
>
> The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her > heart with a poem.
>
> Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the > lines, not the sheets.
>
> At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper > Factory the look was bona fide bordello.
>
> Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit > nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.
>
> Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and > frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.
>
> But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body,
> and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical > descriptions, reveals what's on offer.
>
> Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of > your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."
>
> Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't > know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming > she can "coax your drum."

>
> Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder > Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops > tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.
>
> "Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame,
the > sultry spirit behind the whole idea.
>
> The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part > in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.
>
> "I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to
some > old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of > a guttering candle.
>
> One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars
> in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place > upstairs.
>
> The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free > verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.
>
> But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco > guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing > in port and whisky
>
> The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a > surprisingly successful formula.
>
> "There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of > cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael > Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.
>
> She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of
> the result.
>
> "It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two
in > the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place > reading poetry," she said.

>
> "The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer > onward, people read it aloud and in groups."
>
> By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and > rowdier.
>
> The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to > someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame,
> yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice > suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.
>
> When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim
> a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock > concert cheers from the crowd.
>
> "I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice,
> "so your name must be a prayer."
>
> Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis > sweeping the country.
>
> One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at > Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a > play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at > Yale.
>
> "I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- > not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.
>
> Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka > Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from > under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists
> are sustained by grants from people with money."
>

> But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel
> proves there are ways to survive.
>
> "Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful > people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an > "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory
> wearing a kilt.
>
> His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would > always find ways to meet.
>
> "I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come > here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."
>
> The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.
>
> "Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she > murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you > don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"
>
guidelines &

↑ Index

265. steve russell
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

---

it seemed, at the time, an empty gesture when Sharon Olds refused to read for 43, Bush. so i thought at the time.

but Conrad seems on to something.

poets, what more do we have other than a handful of gesures?
--- On Sat, 12/20/08, laura hinton <[redacted]> wrote:
From: laura hinton <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, December 20, 2008, 9:14 PM

To CA Conrad: Thank you for writing this letter. The choice of Rick Warren by Obama is a terrible mistake, for anyone who believes in Civil Rights for all citizens. And what is the point of Civil Rights for only some of us? Elizabeth Alexander would be doing the right thing, if she chosses to take your advice, and withdraw in protest from the inauguration ceremony. What a disappointment from Obama. Laura

On Fri, Dec 19, 2008 at 3:38 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to > reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to > Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick > Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender > community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in > our struggle, not interested in our suffering.
>
> Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in > California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH > time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is > nothing but clear.
>
> This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I > know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition > and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential > inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as > a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely > thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as > a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in > January.
>
> When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to > protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very > different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always > easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks > about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that > should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his > inauguration.
>
> Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has > been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, > not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the > inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not > count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

>
> Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than > protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama > promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick > Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately > clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing > against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.
>
> It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, > but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama > made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have > known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made > over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched > homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision > of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.
>
> If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his > first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that > Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL > LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
> You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have > the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right > now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him > that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell > him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.
>
> But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite > Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this > is just fine with you?
>
> Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the > millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those > who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It > was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's > a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right > decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.
>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

266. Mark Weiss
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

At a party last night I had an odd conversation with a friend I hadn't spoken to since before the election. My friend is in his sixties. He had spent two months as a fulltime volunteer for the Obama campaign. I commented, I thought rather modestly, and none to originally, that a lot of what Obama has said he hopes to do would be constrained by the economic crisis, what with bailout plans and falling revenues. My friend said he had faith in Obama's intelligence to figure out how to do it all. Then he got scary--his eyes had the faraway look of the convert to a new religion. "He has a lot of the characteristics traditionally associated with sainthood," my friend told me.

I don't know if saints are supposed to keep us guessing, but I don't think elected officials are. Certainly we had to guess enough in the last eight years to last a lifetime.

Mark

At 11:37 AM 12/21/2008, you wrote:
>Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
>"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my >church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
>"Now he's invited me."
>
>So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but >not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of >how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs.
>right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact >same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.
>
>I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the >Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective >during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting >than the last eight.

>
>Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have >a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by >many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native >American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
>Global Voices Radio
>SPLAB!
>American Sentences
>Organic Poetry
>Poetry Postcard Blog
>
>Ilalqo, WA [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>_____
>From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
>Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
>
>Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to >reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to >Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick
>Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender >community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in >our struggle, not interested in our suffering.
>
>Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in >California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH >time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is >nothing but clear.
>
>This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I >know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition

>and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential >inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as >a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely >thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as >a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in >January.
>
>When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to >protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very >different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always >easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks >about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that >should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his >inauguration.
>
>Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has >been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been,
>not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the >inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not >count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.
>
>Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than >protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama >promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick >Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately >clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing >against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.
>
>It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture,
>but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama >made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have >known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made >over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched >homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision >of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.
>
>If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his >first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that >Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL
>LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
>You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have >the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right >now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him >that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell >him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

>
>But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite >Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this >is just fine with you?
>
>Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the >millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those >who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It >was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's >a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right >decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.
>
>Most sincerely,
>CAConrad
>
>cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
>http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
>

↑ Index

267. Elizabeth Switaj
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 8:37 AM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration?

Yes Paul, actually that's exactly right. You see, speaking at the Inauguration is an honor. When you honor someone who has bigoted views, you legitimize those views by saying that despite them that person belongs not just in the crowd with the rest of us citizens but on the platform. It says that homophobia--and sexism (Warren's "church" doesn't allow women to hold leadership positions) is not a bigotry as unacceptable as those that would disqualify a person from such public honors.

> Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

Objecting to this bigot speaking isn't about gay vs. straight. A lot of straight people are pissed off about this. I can't even imagine the doublethink required to say that honoring a man who creates a strong divide between gay and straight with his cruel biased rhetoric constitutes overcoming divisions.

Pragmatism is cool but what is the end goal of this pragmatism? Term two?

> I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Aha. Those of us who dare to object to any action taken by Obama simply have insufficiently broad perspectives. Dialog has begun? Giving an invocation =/= dialog.

Behaving as if sexism and homophobia are acceptable is hardly unconventional, incidentally.

> Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this .

I sure hope you're right. I sure hope that one day this bigot realizes the homosexuals are not committing acts comparable to incest and pedophilia. I sure hope he realizes that women can lead, too, though I see you didn't mention that in your email. The trouble is that as long as he is rewarded socially he will see no reason to change his bigoted beliefs, nor will the guys watching at home.

Elizabeth Kate Switaj
elizabethkateswitaj.net

↑ Index

268. Jason Quackenbush
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage.

If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

> This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.
>
> I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick
Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

> But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?
>
> Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's > a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.
>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

269. CA Conrad
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

My biggest fear is that everyone will relax like they did after Bill Clinton was elected.

OR WORSE not pay attention like they did after Bill Clinton was elected.

Bill Clinton was much worse for queer people in many ways than Bush ever was, which is why I agree with Troy here.

But I also agree it would be good if Elizabeth chose to read a poem in protest of Warren's invitation, my whole point to the letter was TO MAKE SOMETHING HAPPEN ANYTHING AT ALL!

BUT SOMETHING MUST HAPPEN!

The truth is I fear nothing will happen. I fear she will read a poem that says great things about Obama, or, a poem about the state of the world, but nothing in protest about the very clear homophobia at hand. And Rick Warren will do his thing. And everyone will go home.

With the distractions of a landsliding economy and war on more than one front, IT'S PERFECT TIMING to stick it to the queer community ONCE AGAIN. People LOVE TO HAVE a place to STICK their frustrations and irrational fears.

Proposition 8 was a great BONDING experience for bigots everywhere to HAVE THE POWER to tell the queers to fuck off, once again.

A BIG FAT public announcement from Elizabeth Alexander saying NO THANK YOU BARAK OBAMA is kind of great though. Though I seriously doubt it will happen that way, or any way I hope it to happen.

Oh, and for those who think this is Obama's way of creating "dialogue" um, how is that? THAT is dialouge? Well why not invite the Ku Klux Klan while you're at it? Bigots UNITE! I simply don't understand how this is in any possible way a form of "dialogue" frankly.

I'm NOT AFRAID of bigots, I just want my president that have MORE FUCKING SENSE to NOT have them in my face for the celebration of his new job.

But then again, that seems to be exactly what he wants, to have Warren in our faces, to have Warren be his passive-aggressive mouth of bigotry.

There is SO MUCH SUFFERING as it is in the queer community, queer teens still having the highest rate of suicide. And I think of all the African American queers I have known over the years and how hard it's been for them.

People voting FOR Obama also at the same time voted AGAINST civil rights for queers. That much we know to be true.

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

270. David Buuck
Locals MLA Group Reading - Tue Dec 20 @ Hotel Utah
Sun 21 Dec 2008

Please Forward!

For those of you San Francisco for the MLA, please come join us for this companion reading to the big MLA reading on the 28th, this one featuring over 30 Bay Area poets. The reading will start promptly at 7pm, at the nearby club Hotel Utah. Featuring: Melissa Benham, Alan Bernheimer, Brandon Brown, Xochi Candelaria, Norma Cole, Sarah Anne Cox, Del Ray Cross, Brent Cunningham, Donna de la Perrier, Steve Dickison, Stacy Doris, Steve Farmer, Gloria Frym, Susan Gevirtz, Javier Huerta, Scott Ignuito, Elizabeth Treadwell Jackson, Andrew Joron, David Lau, Joseph Lease, Dana Teen Lomax, Bill Luoma, Laura Moriarty, Stephen Ratcliffe, Barbara Jane Reyes, Cynthia Sailers, Leslie Scalapino, Lauren Shufran, giovanni singleton, Suzanne Stein, Chris Stroffolino, Stephen Vincent, Alli Warren, Chet Weiner, & more! hosted by David Buuck & Small Press Traffic.

Tues Dec 30, 7pm, $2
Hotel Utah
500 4th St. @ Bryant, SF
http://www.hotelutah.com/

see you there!
David Buuck
Small Press Traffic
sptraffic.org
smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com

↑ Index

271. CA Conrad
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

Paul Nelson wrote: <<I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. <<Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has <<begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Paul this was such a weird thing to read.

I'm just this "left" guy who is gonna BE SHOWN?

You "love" how Obama told me that I'm a big fat zero and that I'm worthless and that I'm not allowed to be on the same grounds as he and his wife?

I need to "broaden" my "perspective" do I?

Yeah, guess I just need to understand that being 2nd class is OK. Thanks for the tip.

Suffering is NOT entertaining to me, but it's fine with me that you "love" it.

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

272. George Bowering
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

You got that right, Paul.

I dont have high hopes for Obama, he being a US president-elect, but I am impressed by his openness,
as in this instance.

As you USAmericans say: what wd Jesus have done?

gb

On Dec 21, 2008, at 8:37 AM, Paul Nelson wrote:

> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.
>
> I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your

perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those > who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html

George H. Bowering
More than meets the nose.

↑ Index

273. David Buuck
MLA announcement correction
Sun 21 Dec 2008

The reading is on the 30th, not the 20th!
thanks,
DB

> Please Forward!
>
> For those of you San Francisco for the MLA, please come join us for this companion reading to the big MLA reading on the 28th, this one featuring over 30 Bay Area poets. The reading will start promptly at 7pm, at the nearby club Hotel Utah. Featuring: Melissa Benham, Alan Bernheimer, Brandon Brown, Xochi Candelaria, Norma Cole, Sarah Anne Cox, Del Ray Cross, Brent Cunningham, Donna de la Perriere, Steve Dickison, Stacy Doris, Steve Farmer, Gloria Frym, Susan Gevirtz, Rob Halpern, Javier Huerta, Scott Ignuito, Elizabeth Treadwell Jackson, Andrew Joron, David Lau, Joseph Lease, Dana Teen Lomax, Bill Luoma, Laura Moriarty, Stephen Ratcliffe, Barbara Jane Reyes, Cynthia Sailers, Leslie Scalapino, Lauren Shufran, giovanni singleton, Suzanne Stein, Chris Stroffolino, Stephen Vincent, Alli Warren, Chet Weiner, & more! hosted by David Buuck & Small Press Traffic.
>
> Tues Dec 30, 7pm, $2
> Hotel Utah
> 500 4th St. @ Bryant, SF
> http://www.hotelutah.com/

> see you there!
> David Buuck
> Small Press Traffic
> sptraffic.org
> smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com

↑ Index

274. Stephen Vincent
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 21 Dec 2008

As somebody suggested somewhere, the intense heat and exposure of Obama's provocative (to put it mildly) Warren invitation, may have the consequence of giving Obama a 'quid por quo' opportunity to eliminate the Military's Gay policy quagmire of 'don't ask, don't tell'.

That also might be a 'prayer' but let's hope (or pressure) to be surprised.

Stephen V
--- On Sun, 12/21/08, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Obododimma Oha <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, December 21, 2008, 10:37 AM

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence." --- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my > church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
> "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners,
but not ok
> for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's
> pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the > failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying

to > overcome with Gay/Straight.
>
> I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND > the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next > eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.
>
> Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very > important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous
> and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two > Spirit, begins to communicate this.
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
> American Sentences
> Organic Poetry
> Poetry Postcard Blog
>
> Ilalqo, WA [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
> Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
>
> Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to > reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to > Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick
> Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender > community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in > our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

>
> Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in > California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH > time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is > nothing but clear.
>
> This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I > know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition
> and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential > inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as > a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely > thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as > a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in > January.
>
> When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to > protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very > different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always > easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks > about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that > should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his > inauguration.
>
> Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has > been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been,
> not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the > inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not > count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.
>
> Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than > protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama > promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick > Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately > clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing > against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.
>
> It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture,
> but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama > made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have > known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made > over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched

> homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision > of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.
>
> If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his > first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that > Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL
> LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
> You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have > the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right > now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him > that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell > him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.
>
> But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite > Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this > is just fine with you?
>
> Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the > millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those > who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It > was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's > a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right > decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.
>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
guidelines
>
guidelines
>

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

275. steve russell
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Sun 21 Dec 2008

---

this seems pretty light hearted.
I'm sorry to hear about the wicked (objects, et cetera) capitalist.
i suspect that the most die hard feminist could enjoy her/himself.

--- On Fri, 12/19/08, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
Subject: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, December 19, 2008, 4:15 PM

New York poetry brothel tempts with verse

Published: Friday December 19, 2008

http://rawstory.com/news/afp/
New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."

Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame, the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice, "so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory wearing a kilt.

His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.

"I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."

The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.

"Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"

↑ Index

276. Bill Berkson

FW: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural

Mon 22 Dec 2008

------ Forwarded Message
From: Bill Berkson <[redacted]>
Date: Sun, 21 Dec 2008 11:23:01 -0800

To: <[redacted]>, <[redacted]>
Conversation: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural
Subject: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural

Much as one sympathizes with President-elect Obama¹s rationale for inviting Rick Warren to participate in the inaugural ceremony, this is one calculated risk that should not be taken and plainly has not been sufficiently thought through.

That the President-elect promises to be a shining example of post-ideological politics is one thing, that he may defeat this great promise with yet another sort of ideology, the Big Idea of bringing together diverse, and often contradictory, elements of the national culture is another: like most big ideas, this one fails the moment one element, or segment ‹ or more to the point, one person -- of the culture is left out or devalued.

However modified Warren¹s bigotry may be by his other, kinder views, that bigotry is a national disgrace. To invite him to drag it along to the grandstand on Inauguration Day is an insult to the Constitution the incoming President will swear perforce to protect.

Bill Berkson

↑ Index

277. Small Press Traffic

Small Press Traffic's New Executive Director

Mon 22 Dec 2008

Small Press Traffic is pleased to announce Samantha Giles as the organization's new Executive Director.

Samantha Giles was born in Oakland and raised in Santa Monica, California. She returned to the Bay Area in 1996, to complete her Bachelors of Social Work at San Francisco State University. From 1999 to 2004, she was the Community Arts Program Director for Central City Hospitality House, providing artistic access for homeless people in San Francisco's Tenderloin district. Her extensive administrative, programmatic and curatorial work during her tenure there helped stabilize and grow a program of disparate, often unheard voices. In 2008, she received her MFA from Mills College, where she also served as Managing Editor for 580 Split. Her work appears in numerous journals and web-zines.

Samantha will serve as the Director beginning January 1, 2009.

We look forward to working with Samantha and to seeing you all in the year ahead!

The Small Press Traffic Board of Directors

Small Press Traffic Board of Directors: President, David Buuck; Treasurer, Jessica Wickens; Secretary, Lauren Shufran; Board Members, Chris Chen, Gloria Frym; Scott Inguito, Barbara Jane Reyes, and Cynthia Sailers

****

SAVE THE DATES -- Small Press Traffic Upcoming Events

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 2008 -- Locals MLA Group Reading
7:00 pm, $2
Hotel Utah
500 4th St. @ Bryant, SF
http://www.hotelutah.com/

For those of you in San Francisco for the MLA, please come join us for this companion reading to the big MLA reading on the 28th, this one featuring over 30 Bay Area poets. The reading will start promptly at 7:00 pm, at the nearby club Hotel Utah.

Scheduled readers include: Melissa Benham, Alan Bernheimer, Brandon Brown, Xochi Candelaria, Norma Cole, Sarah Anne Cox, Del Ray Cross, Brent Cunningham, Donna de la Perriere, Steve Dickison, Stacy Doris, Steve Farmer, Gloria Frym, Susan Gevirtz, Rob Halpern, Javier Huerta, Scott Ignuito, Elizabeth Treadwell Jackson, Andrew Joron, David Lau, Joseph Lease, Dana Teen Lomax, Bill Luoma, Laura Moriarty, Stephen Ratcliffe, Barbara Jane Reyes, Cynthia Sailers, Leslie Scalapino, Lauren Shufran, giovanni singleton, Suzanne Stein, Chris Stroffolino, Stephen Vincent, Alli Warren, Chet Weiner, & more!

Hosted by David Buuck & Small Press Traffic

SMALL PRESS TRAFFIC'S
2009 SPRING SEASON:

JANUARY 16, 2009 Poets' Theater

JANUARY 23, 2009 Poets' Theater

JANUARY 30, 2009 Poets' Theater

FEBRUARY 6, 2009 Kaia Sand & Yedda Morrison & Kim Rosenfield

FEBRUARY 20, 2009 Christian Bök & Rachel Zolf

MARCH 6, 2009 Rae Armantrout & Laura Sims

MARCH 13, 2009 Stacy Szymaszek & Craig Santos Perez

MARCH 27, 2009 SPT Presents: Bay Area Student Writers (CCA Oakland Nahl Hall)

APRIL 10, 2009 Donna de la Perriere & Claire Chafee

APRIL 18, 2009 Tan Lin & Chet Weiner (21 Grand 416 25th Street, Oakland 6:30 pm)

APRIL 25, 2009 Julie Patton & Kit Robinson

MAY 1, 2009 Stephen Vincent & David Lau

MAY 8. 2009 Eleni Stecopoulos & Maggie Zurawski

MAY 15, 2009 Susana Gardner & Elizabeth Treadwell

Join us!

_____

Small Press Traffic
Literary Arts Center at CCA
1111 -- 8th Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted]

<http://www.sptraffic.org/>http://www.sptraffic.org

www.smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com

↑ Index

278. Pam Brown
hi ruth lepson, hi conrad
Mon 22 Dec 2008

Hi Poeticists too,

Hi Ruth,

Yep - 'dank' was us
mosquitoes, cheap wine, politics and lots of lerv

happy whatever-you-like to you

> Date: Fri, 19 Dec 2008 16:15:50 -0500
> From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: season's greetings from the deletions
>
> very dank, cool, stellar, funny, rockin', Pam.
>
> On 12/18/08 5:56 PM, "Pam Brown" <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/

AND

Hi Conrad,

That's a terrific letter to Elizabeth Alexander.

The Rick Warren appointment to invoke, or evoke, or whatever preachers do up in your hemisphere at inaugurations is perhaps the first disappointment. (hope there aren't too many more yet)

Have to remember - Obama IS a politician.

Have a great silly season - Ruth, Conrad, Poeticists

Pam

_____

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

_____

↑ Index

279. Ann Bogle

Inauguration theology and poetics

Mon 22 Dec 2008

Churches in D.C. have been courting the Obamas, who haven't attended church since April when they left Trinity UCC in Chicago -- after 20 years according to one report -- due to controversy over Rev. Wright's sermons.? UCC is pro-gay rights and in recent years, pro-gay marriage.? I checked this: Trinity in particular is specifically in favor of gay rights, including marriage.? A UCC church was burned over the synod vote for gay marriage a few years ago.? Tell me the Obamas attended Trinity regularly that long while harboring anti-gay sentiment; it doesn't make sense.? They would have left long before they did if they didn't like the emphasis on gay rights theologically or socially.? It also doesn't make sense to me that a long-term UCC family would be attracted to non-denominational evangelical fundamentalist Christianity.? Is telling Elizabeth Alexander what to protest a protest of both poet and pastor?? In any case, protest over Rick Warren seems necessary.? AMB

↑ Index

280. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Mon 22 Dec 2008

CA,

Have you sent your letter to Elizabeth? I just looked at her site (http://www.elizabethalexander.net/home.html) and there's a contact phone number and email address there.

love, as always, Sharon M.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 3:20 PM, CA Conrad wrote:

> Paul Nelson wrote:
> <<I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. <<Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has <<begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.
>
> Paul this was such a weird thing to read.
>
> I'm just this "left" guy who is gonna BE SHOWN?
>
> You "love" how Obama told me that I'm a big fat zero and that I'm worthless and that I'm not allowed to be on the same grounds as he and his wife?
>
> I need to "broaden" my "perspective" do I?
>
> Yeah, guess I just need to understand that being 2nd class is OK. Thanks for the tip.
>
> Suffering is NOT entertaining to me, but it's fine with me that you "love" it.
>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> welcome.html

↑ Index

281. Elizabeth Switaj
Re: FW: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural
Mon 22 Dec 2008

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 9:40 PM, Bill Berkson <[redacted]> wrote:

> like most big ideas, this one fails the moment one element, or segment ‹ or more to the point, one person -- of the culture is left out or devalued.

Yes, exactly! The moment this occurs, us vs. them is being reified, even if it is done in the name of bringing 'us' together.

↑ Index

282. George Bowering
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Mon 22 Dec 2008

Me too. I am getting more and more discouraged by the calls for censorship from the "left."
I speak as a non USAmerican who sees Obama as right of most tolerable governments in the western world.
I had never heard of this preacher till I saw a piece on him in your Time Magazine a while back.
But it doesn't bother me that he is going to show up at the inauguration. I mean most civilized people don't get it that in places like the US and Iran there has to be religious approval for inaugurations and on the money.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 12:09 PM, Jason Quackenbush wrote:

> Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.
>
> On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:
>
> This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for

opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression.
Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
wrote:

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
"Now he's invited me."

So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you

> it's
> a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right > decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.
>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> welcome.html

George
Satisfied with his undergarments.

↑ Index

283. George Bowering
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Mon 22 Dec 2008

On Dec 21, 2008, at 12:20 PM, CA Conrad wrote:

>
>
> You "love" how Obama told me that I'm a big fat zero and that I'm > worthless and that I'm not allowed to be on the same grounds as he and > his wife?
>
Inflammatory language such as this is kind of playing into the hands of the right, isn't it? Wouldn't it be better to prove more intelligent than the jerks?
Inflammatory language should be left to the lockstep fundamentalists in the Middle-East and the US South, for example.
Or anywhere.

Did Obama say those things you have him saying, CA?
I like you, and I am with you, but I hate to see you playing into their hands.

George Bowering, esq.
Not a morning kind of guy.

↑ Index

284. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Mon 22 Dec 2008

Ruth,

I see the piece as both funny and not funny, i.e., ironic. When Salieri (?) objected to Mozart that his music had too many notes, Wolfie replied "Which ones would you eliminate?" Which kinds of hyperbole would you eliminate? Would you also decree such usages as "If a person wants to succeed, s/he must do his/her work him/herself"? Would you keep the asterisks in HOWL's first edition: "Who with mother finally "? It seems to me that poets "don' need no steenking badches."

~ Dan Zimmerman

----- Original Message -----
From: "Ruth Lepson" <[redacted]>

To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, December 20, 2008 6:51 PM
Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

> cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are characterizing it.
>
> On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> New York poetry brothel tempts with verse
>
> Published: Friday December 19, 2008
>
> http://rawstory.com/news/afp/New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html
>
> The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.
>
> Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.
>
> At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.
>
> Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.
>
> Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.
>
> But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.
>
> Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."
>
> Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."
>
> Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops

tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame, the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice, "so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory wearing a kilt.

His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.

"I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."

The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.

"Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"

guidelines &

↑ Index

285. Ruth Lepson

Re: hi ruth lepson, hi conrad

Mon 22 Dec 2008

---

thanks, Pam, sounds like a blast, as they once said.
happy everything except brothels, to all.
ruth

On 12/22/08 6:08 AM, "Pam Brown" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi Poeticists too,
>
> Hi Ruth,
>
> Yep - 'dank' was us
> mosquitoes, cheap wine, politics and lots of lerv
>
> happy whatever-you-like to you
>
> Date: Fri, 19 Dec 2008 16:15:50 -0500
> From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: season's greetings from the deletions
>
> very dank, cool, stellar, funny, rockin', Pam.
>
> On 12/18/08 5:56 PM, "Pam Brown" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/
>
> AND
>
> Hi Conrad,
>
> That's a terrific letter to Elizabeth Alexander.
>
> The Rick Warren appointment to invoke, or evoke, or whatever preachers do up in your hemisphere at inaugurations is perhaps the first disappointment. (hope there aren't too many more yet)
>
> Have to remember - Obama IS a politician.
>
> Have a great silly season - Ruth, Conrad, Poeticists
>
> Pam

---

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

↑ Index

286. laura hinton
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Mon 22 Dec 2008

I agree with Elizabeth S. -- and thanks to CA Conrad, for his persistance with this issue.

Elizabeth's articulate defense here explains just why it is right to say No to the Inaugural invite --unless, perhaps, Obama, under political pressure, changes his "preacher" to someone who has done the right things in "her" career toward everyone (changing the implicit male pronoun); someone who has not called any group of citizens, including Gays, bigoted names -- and there are many, many to chose from in American religious networks.

Obama made a serious mistake. He needs to admit it and make a correction. Now THAT would be leadership we haven't seen in awhile.

I understand the idea that you have to be inside the system to make a difference, or that you have to have a public platform to verbally articulate a point. However, I do hope that Elizabeth Alexander is reading us, and that however she choses to make the point, she will do so in her own way, and strongly. Stepping off the stage makes its own strong statement. And I do NOT agree that the only way to make a difference is to work from within (on the "stage of") a compromised system. Change does not just occur from inside. It changes in all kinds of ways and through various acts that all of us in any moment may know about and record, or may not know about and record. It means that each act of protest joins other acts. Solidarity among those of us who believe in COMPLETE Civil Rights for every person and citizen has its own pragmaticism -- and, I would add, its own "broader perspective."

I write this as a white heterosexual. I think I have a "broader perspective." And I DEMAND that Obama DEMAND -- starting with his great public theater in January, called the Inauguration -- that every one of us have equal rights. And that Obama's stance on this be symbolically registered, starting Day 1 of his presidency.

I totally agree with CA Conrad's remarks on Gay scapegoating (see below*). This particular bigotry of Warren's can be seen as another scapegoating tactic that undermines every member of a society of "free debate." Laura

* CA Conrad's words: "With the distractions of a landsliding economy and war on more than one front, IT'S PERFECT TIMING to stick it to the queer community ONCE AGAIN"

↑ Index

287. Ruth Lepson
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Mon 22 Dec 2008

---

brothels about as funny as slavery.
which British feminist?

On 12/21/08 1:44 PM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:

> somewhat related: William Styron, the way he waxes his libido in "Sophie's Choice."
> i'm still looking for the book of essays by the British Feminist who enlightened me.
>
> --- On Sat, 12/20/08, Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
> From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Saturday, December 20, 2008, 6:51 PM
>
> cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are characterizing it.
>
> On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> New York poetry brothel tempts with verse
>
> Published: Friday December 19, 2008
>
> http://rawstory.com/news/afp/New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."

Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame, the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice, "so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory wearing a kilt.

His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.

"I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."

The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.

"Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"

guidelines &

↑ Index

288. CA Conrad
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Mon 22 Dec 2008

A few people wrote personal notes to me saying that they're tired of the culture wars.

Um, this isn't some Queer Theory Class to me, THIS IS MY LIFE, and I'm not the type of fag who gets pushed around, I PUSH BACK, which is why I take stands. Which is why I'm appealing to Elizabeth Alexander's higher self. It must be VERY DIFFICULT to be invited to do such a reading, such a historical reading. Well, it would be difficult for me.

One person wrote me asking me to take "the higher road like Gandhi." Um, my protest suggestions were ALL nonviolent, I mean, I didn't ask Elizabeth to STAB someone at the microphone. Geeze, it's so ridiculous reading such e-mails.

AND I I'M JUST GOING TO SAY IT: If Obama were white, and chose a pastor who was openly racist NO ONE would question my anger. Well, unless you were also racist, but you know exactly what I'm saying here. Queer rights may keep taking a back seat as long as I'm alive, but that just means I'll go to the grave YELLING!

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

289. Ruth Lepson
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Mon 22 Dec 2008

CAConrad, I hear you. It's time we included everyone. Actually, why time? Why not from the beginning!

On 12/21/08 3:20 PM, "CA Conrad" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Paul Nelson wrote:
> <<I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. <<Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has <<begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.
>
> Paul this was such a weird thing to read.
>
> I'm just this "left" guy who is gonna BE SHOWN?
>
> You "love" how Obama told me that I'm a big fat zero and that I'm

> worthless and that I'm not allowed to be on the same grounds as he and his wife?
>
> I need to "broaden" my "perspective" do I?
>
> Yeah, guess I just need to understand that being 2nd class is OK.
> Thanks for the tip.
>
> Suffering is NOT entertaining to me, but it's fine with me that you "love" it.
>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

290. Roy Exley

Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Mon 22 Dec 2008

Jason,

What a relief, many thanks for your message condemning the us v.themism Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you thinking that their bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way! And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward to an end of this tiresome conversation.

On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."

So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right > decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]

↑ Index

291. Gerald Schwartz

Re: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural

Mon 22 Dec 2008

---

as with any President- 'select' front for the corporate cube he's got about 20% wiggle-room (witness JFK, RFK, MLK)

which is about as much democracy as we've got left...So instead of silence I'm hoping from Alexander... or moreover those in authentic power-- a great storm of words, ones right-angled, left-angled all beneathe the blast of light that'll be on that day night into day

--Gerald S.

------ Forwarded Message
From: Bill Berkson <[redacted]>
Date: Sun, 21 Dec 2008 11:23:01 -0800
To: <[redacted]>, <[redacted]>
Conversation: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural
Subject: regarding bigotry, big ideas & the inaugural

Much as one sympathizes with President-elect Obama¹s rationale for inviting Rick Warren to participate in the inaugural ceremony, this is one calculated risk that should not be taken and plainly has not been sufficiently thought through.

That the President-elect promises to be a shining example of post-ideological politics is one thing, that he may defeat this great promise with yet another sort of ideology, the Big Idea of bringing together diverse, and often contradictory, elements of the national culture is another: like most big ideas, this one fails the moment one element, or segment < or more to the point, one person -- of the culture is left out or devalued.

However modified Warren¹s bigotry may be by his other, kinder views, that bigotry is a national disgrace. To invite him to drag it along to the grandstand on Inauguration Day is an insult to the Constitution the incoming President will swear perforce to protect.

Bill Berkson

↑ Index

292. Ann Bogle
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Mon 22 Dec 2008

I didn't use question marks in the post I sent except one for a question near the end. AMB
*One site keeps you connected to all your email: AOL Mail, Gmail, and Yahoo Mail. Try it now.

(http://www.aol.com/?optin=new-dp&icid=aolcom40vanity&ncid=emlcntaolcom00000025)

↑ Index

293. mIEKAL aND

BYSTANDER: An Irreality by mIEKAL aND

Tue 23 Dec 2008

BYSTANDER: An Irreality by mIEKAL aND

A 'pataphysical post-apocalytpic novella in 3 movements

· Paperback: 130 pages
· Publisher: BlazeVOX [books]
· ISBN: 1-934289-63-9

http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ma.htm

What would happen if words, disguised as characters Balboa Pettibone and She-singer, could hallucinate and time travel? mIEKAL aND, one of our most intrepid verbal explorers, takes us into the world of genre fiction and sets it spinning into an “irreality” as iridescent as myth clothed in neon language. The sideways feints and flourishes of aND's words lead us through a minefield of future decay, artfully finding glimmers of beauty and eros even in the most blasted lang- scapes and bone-scrapes. In a world where “a blackened sky corrupt[s] the horizon,” “snakes of anger” war with “snakes of confusion,” and “there are no curtains between darkness and its opposite,” the beauty of the words themselves offer joy in apocalyptic circumstance. And courtly love wins the day.

Maria Damon

There is a secret travelogue through the irreal estate of the 20th century, a picaresque that passes down the arcades of the Invisible Cities, across the plains of Flatland, through the Gardens of Priapus to the foothills of Mount Analogue. Between the lines of Bystander: An Irreality, mIEKAL aND has thoughtfully printed you a map for the next leg of the journey. Pack your sieve and your bicycle; it's a long trip.

Darren Wershler

Bystander: An irreality is indeed an irreality or sobreality so vivd it brings senses to a full function and merges the one into the implications of the text. What I experiencet wasnt prose or poetry in its common definition. Its written just and laconic. Exactly the amount and texture of information needed to hook the right senses and teleport one inside. Psy-fi and a metaphor for the webbed chronology of thought and remembered events, reconstructed map of communication. After digestion i found a brain map that emerged, map of how thoughts are layed and georgraphical x-ray of how they settle and drift with/ within time. The process of reading or rather drinking pleasantly hurts the neurons, like adrenaline that spreads from the head to appendages. I want to repeat the journey on my own after watching Balboa....

Alexandra Zavylova

↑ Index

294. Eric Hoffman

New Book Available from Dos Madres Press

Tue 23 Dec 2008

---

http://www.dosmadres.com/catalog/life-at-braintree-by-eric-hoffman/

Life at Braintree by Eric Hoffman

An excerpt from Life at Braintree:

9.

The people: ignorant of arts and letters,
Seldom able to frame and support
Regular opposition, gullible and slow

To resist tyranny. This settlement
Nevertheless represents the Opening
Of a grand scene and Design

In Providence, for the Illumination
Of the Ignorant and the Emancipation
Of the slavish Part of Mankind.

“These spare poems, open to the voices of the American past, wonderfully assume an unexpected richness, a wealth of saying.” - Norman Finkelstein author of Track and Passing Over

Life at Braintree: $10.00 plus shipping
by Eric Hoffman

ERIC HOFFMAN is the author of four collections of poetry, Things Like This Happen All the Time (2000), Threnody (2006), Of Love and Water and There (both 2008). A book, George Oppen: Survival’s Thin, Thin Radiance is forthcoming. He lives in Manchester, Connecticut with his wife, Robin.

Product Details
Chapbook: 23 pages of Poetry

Language: English
ISBN-13: 978-1-933675-36-7

↑ Index

295. John Foley
FLASHPOINT EZRA POUND EXTRA!
Tue 23 Dec 2008

ANNOUNCING .....

FLASHPOINT EXTRA!
Winter 2009
http://www.flashpointmag.com

EZRA POUND & WALL STREET

featuring

CANTO XLV
"With Usura"

GIANO ACCAME
(translated by WAYNE POUNDS)

ELLEN CARDONA

DAVID HICKMAN

MAC OLIVER

BRENDON KERESEY

TONY EVANS

ROSALIE GANCIE

CARLO PARCELLI

"Along the frontier where the arts & politics clash ..."

↑ Index

296. Carol Novack
More on the Warren Horror Show & C A Conrad's Open Letter
Tue 23 Dec 2008

For anyone remotely to the left of what used to be liberal who buys Obama's insulting-to-my-intelligence rationale for affording a prominent position to the homophobic, anti-Choice Christian evangelist (yeah really, if we have to be overdosed with religion contra to the spirit of the Establishment Clause, why not include leaders of all of the religions, plus an atheist like Noam Chomsky? -- joke), I refer you to http://makethemaccountable.com/index.php/category/media-news/. You and others here might also want to take a look at Obama's record and statements in regard to Native American rights. Frankly, he doesn't give a damn. http://www.nativeamericansrightsassociation.com/Obama_FIles.html. And frankly, we have to be watchdogs. This is the politician who voted for the FISA Amendment. As someone here pointed out, he's basically a centrist, hardly a progressive, though of course, anyone would be an improvement over Bush, one would HOPE.

In regard to CA Conrad's excellent letter to Elizabeth Alexander, how can we sign onto it? Do you (CA) suggest that we simply forward it to Graywolf Press?

Thanks,

Carol

Blog: http://carolnovack.blogspot.com/
The Bug Obama Group of Fed-Up Progressive Types<http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=39092744573>CD: INVENTIONS II: Fictions, Fusions & Poems is available for purchase at http://cdbaby.com/cd/cnwdcmbrm MAD HATTERS' REVIEW: edgy & enlightened art, literature, & music in the Age of Dementia: http://www.madhattersreview.com

↑ Index

297. steve russell
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Tue 23 Dec 2008

Mark, from one college dropout to another, what went to Yale, should have stayed in Yale, know what I'm saying? Ugh, is one allowed to say Know what I'm saying? at the ripe age of...

--- On Sun, 12/21/08, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, December 21, 2008, 2:19 PM

At a party last night I had an odd conversation with a friend I hadn't spoken to since before the election. My friend is in his sixties. He had spent two months as a fulltime volunteer for the Obama campaign. I commented, I thought rather modestly, and none to originally, that a lot of what Obama has said he hopes to do would be constrained by the economic crisis, what with bailout plans and falling revenues. My friend said he had faith in Obama's intelligence to figure out how to do it all. Then he got scary--his eyes had the faraway look of the convert to a new religion. "He has a lot of the characteristics traditionally associated with sainthood," my friend told me.

I don't know if saints are supposed to keep us guessing, but I don't think elected officials are. Certainly we had to guess enough in the last eight years to last a lifetime.

Mark

At 11:37 AM 12/21/2008, you wrote:
>Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
>"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my >church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
>"Now he's invited me."
>
>So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but >not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of >how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs.

>right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact >same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.
>
>I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the >Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective >during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting >than the last eight.
>
>Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have >a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by >many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native >American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
>Global Voices Radio
>SPLAB!
>American Sentences
>Organic Poetry
>Poetry Postcard Blog

>
>Ilalqo, WA [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>_____
>From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
>Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
>
>Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to >reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to >Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick
>Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender >community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in >our struggle, not interested in our suffering.
>
>Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in >California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH >time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is >nothing but clear.
>
>This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I >know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition
>and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential >inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as >a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely >thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as >a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in >January.
>
>When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to >protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very >different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always >easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks >about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that >should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his >inauguration.

>
>Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has >been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been,
>not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the >inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not >count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.
>
>Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than >protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama >promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick >Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately >clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing >against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.
>
>It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture,
>but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama >made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have >known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made >over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched >homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision >of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.
>
>If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his >first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that >Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL
>LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
>You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have >the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right >now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him >that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell >him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.
>
>But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite >Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this >is just fine with you?
>
>Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the >millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those >who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It >was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's >a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right >decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

>
>Most sincerely,
>CAConrad
>
>cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
>http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
>

↑ Index

298. George Bowering
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Tue 23 Dec 2008

Or, say, dropping bombs on people. So Catch-22, that's not funny.

On Dec 22, 2008, at 2:01 PM, Ruth Lepson wrote:

> brothels about as funny as slavery.
> which British feminist?
>
> On 12/21/08 1:44 PM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> somewhat related: William Styron, the way he waxes his libido in "Sophie's > Choice."
> i'm still looking for the book of essays by the British Feminist who > enlightened me.
>
> --- On Sat, 12/20/08, Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
> From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Saturday, December 20, 2008, 6:51 PM
>
> cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to > use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov > criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying > you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are characterizing it.

On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]>
wrote:

New York poetry brothel tempts with verse

Published: Friday December 19, 2008

http://rawstory.com/news/afp/
New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between
the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit
nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body,
and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming
she can "coax your drum."

Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame,

the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

*She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of
the result.*

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and

rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice, "so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper

> Factory
> wearing a kilt.
>
> His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.
>
> "I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."
>
> The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.
>
> "Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she > murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"
>
> guidelines &
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines &
>
> welcome.html

George Herman Bowering
A good apple from the Okanagan

↑ Index

299. George Bowering
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Tue 23 Dec 2008

Why not just all upper case letters?

On Dec 22, 2008, at 2:02 PM, CA Conrad wrote:

> A few people wrote personal notes to me saying that they're tired of the culture wars.
>
> Um, this isn't some Queer Theory Class to me, THIS IS MY LIFE, and I'm not the type of fag who gets pushed around, I PUSH BACK, which is why I take stands. Which is why I'm appealing to Elizabeth Alexander's higher self. It must be VERY DIFFICULT to be invited to do such a reading, such a historical reading. Well, it would be difficult for > me.

>
> One person wrote me asking me to take "the higher road like Gandhi." Um, my protest suggestions were ALL nonviolent, I mean, I didn't ask Elizabeth to STAB someone at the microphone. Geeze, it's so ridiculous reading such e-mails.
>
> AND I I'M JUST GOING TO SAY IT:
> If Obama were white, and chose a pastor who was openly racist NO ONE would question my anger. Well, unless you were also racist, but you know exactly what I'm saying here. Queer rights may keep taking a back seat as long as I'm alive, but that just means I'll go to the grave YELLING!
>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> welcome.html

George Harry Bowering
Likes towns with -ver- in them.

↑ Index

300. Gwyn McVay
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Tue 23 Dec 2008

> One person wrote me asking me to take "the higher road like Gandhi." Um, my protest suggestions were ALL nonviolent, I mean, I didn't ask Elizabeth to STAB someone at the microphone. Geeze, it's so ridiculous reading such e-mails.

Well, I guarantee all of your backchannel correspondents that if Alexander leads anybody in a march down to the Potomac, whatever she finds floating there will not be salt. It's cleaner than it used to be, but still, do not attempt salt-harvesting from the Potomac.

Seriously, if we could start the '90s with Maya Angelou having the word (and no more than that, but still, the word) "gay" in her inaugural poem for Clinton, surely Alexander could slip some inclusiveness into hers as well? Or, you know, do one of the other nonviolent things you suggested? Unlike that notorious suicide bomber, Gandhi?

Don we now our gay apparel,

Gwyn McVay (who has been wearing her Vagina Monologues "I Heart Vaginas" t-shirt all day in feeble protest of the latest Papal bull)

--
This novel isn't suitable for you. The story is romantic and terrifying. Too gloomy. You should read something delightful.
-- Stephen Chow in "Fight Back to School II"

↑ Index

301. Ryan Daley
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Tue 23 Dec 2008

Instead of protesting the preacher we should work toward discrediting the notion that we need preachers.

It'll go away if no one listens.

Think big?

-Ryan

On Mon, Dec 22, 2008 at 3:54 PM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

> Me too. I am getting more and more discouraged by the calls for censorship from the "left."
> I speak as a non USAmerican who sees Obama as right of most tolerable governments in the western world.
> I had never heard of this preacher till I saw a piece on him in your Time Magazine a while back.
> But it doesn't bother me that he is going to show up at the inauguration. I mean most civilized people > don't get it that in places like the US and Iran there has to be religious approval for inaugurations and on the money.
>
> On Dec 21, 2008, at 12:09 PM, Jason Quackenbush wrote:
>
> Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."

So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> George
> Satisfied with his undergarments.

↑ Index

302. Alison Croggon

Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

Tue 23 Dec 2008

It's not funny calling woman poets "poetesses". Bleah.

xA

On Wed, Dec 24, 2008 at 12:00 PM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
> Or, say, dropping bombs on people. So Catch-22, that's not funny.
>
>
> On Dec 22, 2008, at 2:01 PM, Ruth Lepson wrote:
>
>> brothels about as funny as slavery.
>> which British feminist?
>>
>>

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

303. Adam Tobin
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Tue 23 Dec 2008

Why is the capitalist exploitation of women at a brothel worse than, say, the capitalist exploitation of women at a Zipper Factory? It's just a different kind of labor, no? Given that some artists are seemingly comfortable with capitalism, why should they not acknowledge it in the name of their ventures?

I understand, of course, that brothels have a particular history with a particular kind of violence attached to it, but so do factories. Do you direct the same righteous anger at Andy Warhol?

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ruth Lepson
Sent: Monday, December 22, 2008 5:01 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

brothels about as funny as slavery.
which British feminist?

On 12/21/08 1:44 PM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:

> somewhat related: William Styron, the way he waxes his libido in "Sophie's Choice."
> i'm still looking for the book of essays by the British Feminist who enlightened me.

--- On Sat, 12/20/08, Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, December 20, 2008, 6:51 PM

cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are characterizing it.

On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:

New York poetry brothel tempts with verse

Published: Friday December 19, 2008

http://rawstory.com/news/afp/New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she

doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."

*Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops
tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.*

*"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame,
the
sultry spirit behind the whole idea.*

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

*"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to
some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of
a guttering candle.*

*One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars
in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.*

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

*She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of
the result.*

*"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two
in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.*

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice,
"so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory > wearing a kilt.

>
> His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.
>
> "I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."
>
> The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.
>
> "Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she > murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"
>
> guidelines &

↑ Index

304. Ruth Lepson

Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

Tue 23 Dec 2008

---

of course it's ironic, Dan, but it's insensitive to be ironic about certain things, in my opinion. wd it be ok to have a poetry plantation? a holocaust? ruth

On 12/22/08 4:20 PM, "Daniel Zimmerman" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Ruth,
>
> I see the piece as both funny and not funny, i.e., ironic. When Salieri (?) objected to Mozart that his music had too many notes, Wolfie replied "Which ones would you eliminate?" Which kinds of hyperbole would you eliminate? Would you also decree such usages as "If a person wants to succeed, s/he must do his/her work him/herself"? Would you keep the asterisks in HOWL's first edition: "Who with mother finally "? It seems to me that poets "don' need no steenking badches."
>
> ~ Dan Zimmerman
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "Ruth Lepson" <[redacted]>

To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, December 20, 2008 6:51 PM
Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are characterizing it.

On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:

New York poetry brothel tempts with verse

Published: Friday December 19, 2008

http://rawstory.com/news/afp/New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."

Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder

Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame, the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice, "so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory wearing a kilt.

His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.

"I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."

The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.

"Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"

guidelines &

↑ Index

305. Ruth Lepson
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Tue 23 Dec 2008

---

entirely different point of view, clearly criticizing those who make war. no criticism or critique here.

On 12/23/08 8:00 PM, "George Bowering" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Or, say, dropping bombs on people. So Catch-22, that's not funny.
>
> On Dec 22, 2008, at 2:01 PM, Ruth Lepson wrote:
>
> brothels about as funny as slavery.
> which British feminist?
>
> On 12/21/08 1:44 PM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> somewhat related: William Styron, the way he waxes his libido in "Sophie's > Choice."
> i'm still looking for the book of essays by the British Feminist who enlightened me.
>
> --- On Sat, 12/20/08, Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
> From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Saturday, December 20, 2008, 6:51 PM
>
> cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to > use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov > criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying
> you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are > characterizing it.
>
> On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> New York poetry brothel tempts with verse
>
> Published: Friday December 19, 2008

http://rawstory.com/news/afp/
New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."

Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame, the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part
in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

*When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim
a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.*

*"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice,
"so your name must be a prayer."*

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory wearing a kilt.

His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.

"I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."

> The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.
>
> "Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems,"
> she > murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you > don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"
>
> guidelines &
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines &
>
> welcome.html
>
> George Herman Bowering
> A good apple from the Okanagan

↑ Index

306. Ruth Lepson

Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Tue 23 Dec 2008

---

people who are angry at bigots aren't bigots!

On 12/22/08 5:43 PM, "Roy Exley" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Jason,
>
> What a relief, many thanks for your message condemning the us v.themism
> Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you thinking that their > bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren > himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated > and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
> And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward > to an end of this tiresome conversation.
>
> On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:

Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."

So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that

Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]

↑ Index

307. Charles Alexander
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Tue 23 Dec 2008

Thank you, Conrad.

We've been discussing this in our home, with our children, and we all will yell with you.

Charles

charles alexander
chax press
[redacted]
411 N 7th ave, suite 103
tucson arizona 85705
[redacted]

On Dec 22, 2008, at 3:02 PM, CA Conrad wrote:

> A few people wrote personal notes to me saying that they're tired of the culture wars.
>
> Um, this isn't some Queer Theory Class to me, THIS IS MY LIFE, and I'm not the type of fag who gets pushed around, I PUSH BACK, which is why I take stands. Which is why I'm appealing to Elizabeth Alexander's higher self. It must be VERY DIFFICULT to be invited to do such a reading, such a historical reading. Well, it would be difficult for me.
>
> One person wrote me asking me to take "the higher road like Gandhi." Um, my protest suggestions were ALL nonviolent, I mean, I didn't ask Elizabeth to STAB someone at the microphone. Geeze, it's so ridiculous reading such e-mails.
>
> AND I I'M JUST GOING TO SAY IT:
> If Obama were white, and chose a pastor who was openly racist NO ONE would question my anger. Well, unless you were also racist, but you know exactly what I'm saying here. Queer rights may keep taking a > back seat as long as I'm alive, but that just means I'll go to the grave YELLING!

>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> welcome.html

↑ Index

308. Charles Alexander

Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Tue 23 Dec 2008

Roy,

I know you're trying to argue for what you call "the middle way," and while I'm all for conversation across issues, bringing together people of varying views, etc., in this case I just don't see a middle way -- I mean, it's not ok to oppress people "halfway." I don't see how one can support some civil rights, but not others, or rights for some groups of people, but not others. I concede George's point that the US is generally to the right of most nations, or at least most western nations, in our politics. I would rather not have a minister at all at the inauguration. But if one, not this one. And if it is this one, there should be some yelling. I'm not GLBT, so technically you can't, I think, label me a "GLBT bigot." I'm just trying to sort through these issues, with others, in a way that makes sense, and honors human dignity.

charles

charles alexander
chax press
[redacted]
411 N 7th ave, suite 103
tucson arizona 85705
[redacted]

On Dec 22, 2008, at 3:43 PM, Roy Exley wrote:

> Jason,
>
> What a relief, many thanks for your message condemning the us v.themism
> Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you thinking that their bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren > himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated

and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward to an end of this tiresome conversation.

On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:

Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.

"Now he's invited me."

So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture,
but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL
LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines &
>
> welcome.html

↑ Index

309. Charles Alexander

Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Tue 23 Dec 2008

George, are you now becoming a defender of prescriptive grammar? Would you have us all speak in gentle tones, possibly not dare to eat a peach, and certainly not spell SPACE large because it comes large here, large and without mercy.

(ah but I think I've exceeded my posts today, and this one will die in that SPACE across which we meet)

charles

charles alexander
chax press
[redacted]
411 N 7th ave, suite 103
tucson arizona 85705
[redacted]

On Dec 23, 2008, at 6:01 PM, George Bowering wrote:

> Why not just all upper case letters?
>
> On Dec 22, 2008, at 2:02 PM, CA Conrad wrote:
>
> A few people wrote personal notes to me saying that they're tired of the culture wars.
>
> Um, this isn't some Queer Theory Class to me, THIS IS MY LIFE, and I'm > not the type of fag who gets pushed around, I PUSH BACK, which is why I take stands. Which is why I'm appealing to Elizabeth Alexander's higher self. It must be VERY DIFFICULT to be invited to do such a reading, such a historical reading. Well, it would be difficult for me.
>
> One person wrote me asking me to take "the higher road like Gandhi." Um, my protest suggestions were ALL nonviolent, I mean, I didn't ask Elizabeth to STAB someone at the microphone. Geeze, it's so ridiculous reading such e-mails.
>
> AND I I'M JUST GOING TO SAY IT:
> If Obama were white, and chose a pastor who was openly racist NO ONE would question my anger. Well, unless you were also racist, but you know exactly what I'm saying here. Queer rights may keep taking a back seat as long as I'm alive, but that just means I'll go to the grave YELLING!
>
> CAConrad
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> welcome.html
>
> George Harry Bowering

> Likes towns with -ver- in them.
>
> welcome.html

↑ Index

310. J. A. Lee | Crane's Bill Books
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Wed 24 Dec 2008

"I'm a Christian. And so, although I try not to have my religious beliefs dominate or determine my political views on this issue, I do believe that tradition, and my religious beliefs say that marriage is something sanctified between a man and a woman."

Obama's words. And note: Not "I will not let my religious beliefs dominate or determine..." but "I try not to let my religious beliefs dominate or determine..." (How humble!) And not just "I try not to let my religious beliefs dominate or determine..." but "although I try not to... I do believe in that tradition, and my religious beliefs say..." The man IS clever with words.

So why shouldn't his inauguration feature people who shares his views on the matter? Or to be more blunt, why should anyone who has been paying attention be surprised, or "disappointed," that he should want to share the stage with someone like Rick Warren? Those with residual stars in their eyes, read Paul Street, please.

Jeffrey

----- Original Message -----
From: "CA Conrad" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 1:38 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

> Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.
>
> Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

> But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?
>
> Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.
>
> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

311. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Wed 24 Dec 2008

An Open Letter to Elizabeth Alexander?

How about an Open Letter to Every American--

"tear the doors loose from the jambs!!!"

as a great poet wrote--

"Respondez Respondez!!!"

Didn't the people just turn ou tin the greatest numbers ever to Democratically" elect, for a cool Billion Bucks, the Candidate of their Choice-- isn't the message really one directed at all the people, only no one takes it seriously until it affects them?

an open Letter that each person needs to write to themself also--?

saying Wake Up!!!!

A friend gave me a stack of old Ebony and Jet magazines recently, and in an Ebony from 2004 there was a one page spread among the top notch ads on a slick page some fotos of Congressman Obama, handsome and smiling walking on a very mice street in his shirtsleeves, just beginning his campaign to be Illinois' next Senator and, if vctorious, the one Black Senator at the time in DC.

Two years after that photo the President-Elect launched the two year 1 Billion $ journey to the the Inaugeration.

Late last Spring Senator Obama cut cold his friend and Pastor of 20 years, the man who had married the Obamas and baptised their children. Apparently Reverend Wright, shown in a noin stop loop of one clip, had offended deeply the pundits at Fox and --well--"America"--with his "radical views and America hating sermons."

Senator Obama said hardly a word about the friend he had called a Mentor--a man once a huge part of his life vanished down the oubliette as fast as those persons who one day would be in a foto walking and smiling next to Stalin, Mao, Hitler--and the next day--no longer there at all in the now ONLY "real" foto in which Stalin smiles and walks along, humming no doubt, accompanied only by a tree in the background, and the vast expanse of a Stalinist Sky, which, no doubt about it, "is not cloudy all day."

In June, Senator Obama gave what has been called the most obsequois speech to AIPAC ever given byan American candidate seeking election. Even opponents of Senator Obama were embarassed by the fawning display of "fealty" (the term used), in which a Black man running for the highest office in the land in a "historic" campaig of "change" pledged total allegeinace to an Apartheid State as the number one pririoity of US policy.

Since the election, the President -Elect has surrounded himself with the likes of Coporate America's best friend, Rahm Emmanueal (who has curiously almost vanished since it became known there are tapes of him having some dubious chats with the Governor of Illinois, as well as being the subject of an FBI inevstigation as a suspected Mossad agent), and a long list of hard core War Hawks, Wall Street fixers (to "fix the economy" which they destroyed), and such old War Criminals as Madeliene "The Mad Bomber" "500, 000 dead Iraqi children is not a high cost compared to the good of the sanctions" Albright and a host of other apparatcheks, lifetime Washington Ghouls dripping with the bloody secrets of decades of Advising leaders and cruising the Friendly Global Skies on Company time and pay-- they're baaaaa---ccckkkk !!! again--the samo samo State Craft Persons, the samo samo War Criminal War Crazed, the samo samo collection of revolving door lobbyists-office holders helping create a seamless Corporate State Fascism a la Mussolni, and the long line of lizards lured out from under the rocks where they are altering documents as they crank out their Memoirs of "State Craft," "Decision Maiking," and "Geo Political Fantasies."

"To change everything so that nothing is changed, "as the great Sicilian writer Tomasso Lampedusa succinctly observed.

Having disappeared his friend and Mentor, having sworn allegiance to protect eternally Apartheid, having flung wide the door to the samo samo crowd of trigger happy fixers, crooks, looters, FBI invstigation subjects, the samo samo "wise persons" who have led the country from one disaster to the next while pocketing fortunes and endlessly banging the drums to "let loose the Dogs of War"--and dstroy as many millions as possible to steal the most resources posible--

Having done al this before even taking office, why should one be shocked or surprised that the Gigantic Genial Bigot will mount the stage and launch some sort of rhetorical juggernaut antithetical to Christ's own teachings in the name of "Christian" double talk? Isn't double talk all that is left anyway?

Heck, even John McCain realized that the "Straight Talk Express " won't get you anywhere--

No, to be a real Politico you have to hew the line close to the Poetics of ambiguity, opacity, high flights of Formalist rhetorical flourishes--

After all, isn't the New President a "Poet"--???

Apparently reaching across the aisles and "going beyond" left and right ideologically doesn't mean all people are included, only some. Apartheid, bigotry, the complete "white washing" of American Indians, the total insult to the LGBT communities that worked so hard for ths "new kind of Leader"--

It is just like Orwell's Animal Farm, in which the Aniamls revolt and start to install a fdarm where "Alla Animals Are Equal," only to find that somehow they are electing leaders who have decided that "All Animals Are Equal, But Some Are More Equal than Others."

> Date: Tue, 23 Dec 2008 21:01:20 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
> To: [redacted]
>
> Instead of protesting the preacher we should work toward discrediting the notion that we need preachers.
>
> It'll go away if no one listens.
>
> Think big?
>
> -Ryan
>
> On Mon, Dec 22, 2008 at 3:54 PM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Me too. I am getting more and more discouraged by the calls for censorship

from the "left."
I speak as a non USAmerican who sees Obama as right of most tolerable governments in the western world.
I had never heard of this preacher till I saw a piece on him in your Time Magazine a while back.
But it doesn't bother me that he is going to show up at the inauguration. I mean most civilized people don't get it that in places like the US and Iran there has to be religious approval for inaugurations and on the money.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 12:09 PM, Jason Quackenbush wrote:

Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
"Now he's invited me."

*So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok
for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.*

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

*Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog*

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]*>
To:* [redacted]
*Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander*

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to

Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];

> [redacted].
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> George
> Satisfied with his undergarments.

Send e-mail anywhere. No map, no compass.
http://windowslive.com/oneline/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_anywhere_122008

↑ Index

312. laura hinton
Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Wed 24 Dec 2008

I just don't think that Obama is mirroring "openness for dialogue" by selecting a "pastor" to represent his "religious views" -- in the huge public forum that is the American presidential inauguration -- who has condemned the basic humanity of a certain group of people, based on their sexuality. This to me is FAKE OPENNESS. Because it symbolically leaves a huge segment of the people of this society OUTSIDE the debate.

Some eyes seem glazed by the Obama honeymoon. I love the guy, too. But I see what I see -- no fairy dust. He made a mistake.

OK, he is being a Politician: the Warren choice is a cynical appeal to the Sarah Palin crowd on inauguration day. That happens not to be OK with me. Call it "culture wars" and dismiss my views. (I hear that all in time, as a feminist academic not to mention as a poet. This kind of labeling is just another way of categorizing my view, and others' who share it: that everyone, actually, should be allowed inside the debates.)

Now I'm not against Obama inviting Warren to the White House for a chat. Hey, he can even have the Warrens -- assuming this guy, Rick Warren, who I'd never heard of before last week, plays the role of Victorian patriarch with his probable brood and Wife -- for a lovely dinner. Get the china out, Michelle.

(She'll have to play Wife, too, of course.) I think Nancy Reagan left some nice china in the White House cupboards (if the Clintons didn't chip it too badly, or W didn't kick it with his boots).

But -- and I would say this to President-elect Obama: don't make this particular "pastor" stand for the "American pastor" (I heard this on the News Hour), giving the signal that Gay bashing is back in. CA Conrad's point is so true: Obama would have never selected a racist bigot to stand on that stage with him. Never.

Happy Hanukkah and Merry Christmas and thanks for the stimulating dialogue.
Laura Hinton

On Mon, Dec 22, 2008 at 5:43 PM, Roy Exley <[redacted]> wrote:

> Jason,
>
> What a relief, many thanks for your message condemning the us v.themism
> Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you thinking that their
> bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren
> himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated
> and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
> And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward > to an end of this tiresome conversation.
>
> On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the > Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts > the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his > politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to > questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, > there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely > secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious > third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive > hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought > he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of > the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting
> it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it
> are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style > protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I > have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to > see where he will go with it.
>
> On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."

So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio

SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

> Most sincerely,
> CAConrad
>
> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
>
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines &

↑ Index

313. Corey Frost

Inauguration theology and poetics

Wed 24 Dec 2008

To Mr. Obama

Inviting Rick Warren to your inauguration was a horrible idea. His anti-gay-rights and anti-women, anti-choice ideas are an embarassment to a country that pretends to stand for liberty and equality, and by giving him this platform you are recognizing him above all other clergy in the country, many of whom are much more genuinely dedicated to the ideals of love and acceptance that your religion supposedly advocates. I am an atheist myself and I am put off by any sort of religious benediction at important state events, but I understand the symbolic significance of this for many people.

There are (roughly) two ways your decision could be interpreted: either you mostly agree with Warren and you feel he is worthy of this distinction, or else you disagree with him but feel that the inauguration should represent the different prominent ideologies of the populace, and this is your way of fostering "dialogue." I certainly hope, and have some reason to think, that the former isn't true, so I am assuming it's the latter. I like the idea of dialogue, openness, and inclusion, but I think your invitation to Warren does not serve this ideal. It actually prevents dialogue by exclusively privileging someone who is not open and not inclusive.

I hope you will take steps to fix this mistake. Univiting Rick Warren would be great, but I recognize that you are in politics and for political reasons you may not see this as an option. Therefore I strongly urge you to invite other clergy to take part who do not share Warren's close-minded, bigoted stances. If dialogue is what you want, then allow differing views. If you were to invite Gene Robinson, for example, the first openly gay bishop, then I could believe that your invitation to a homophobic right-wing evangelist was more than just a cheap bid for political support. Ask them to share the stage, and then we'll see who is really committed to dialogue.

↑ Index

314. Eric Weinstein

Fwd: Prick of the Spindle Vol. 2.4: Tis the Season

Wed 24 Dec 2008

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Prick of the Spindle <[redacted]>
Date: Wed, Dec 24, 2008 at 10:09 AM
Subject: Prick of the Spindle Vol. 2.4: Tis the Season
To: [redacted]

Dearest Readers, Scrooges, Grinches and Carolers,

If you're merry, if you're not, the newly-launched Prick of the Spindle Vol. 2.4 will put you in, if not the holiday spirit, some sort of spirit. Read it online at http://www.prickofthespindle.com

Unwrap it to find:

*An Interview with Claudia Smith on her newest publication from Rose Metal Press:
http://www.prickofthespindle.com/interviews/2.4/claudia_smith_interview.htm

*Reviews: ~Chapbook Collective Review: "The Small Presses and Why We Love Them." Eleven reviews of chapbooks from several small presses, featuring the Achilles Chapbook Series and Sunnyoutside Press. Read it at:
http://www.prickofthespindle.com/reviews/2.4/small%20presses/small_presses.htm

*A Teaser for the Upcoming Graphic Novel, "The Dragoon": ~With text by Lane Kareska and Illustrations by Cynthia Reeser

http://www.prickofthespindle.com/illustrations/vol.2.4/kareska/the_dragoon/the_dragoon_entrypage.htm

*An illustrated novella- "The Little Mermaid: An Adaptation" by Dana Felo:
http://www.prickofthespindle.com/fiction/2.4/felo/the_little_mermaid.htm

*Fiction by Karen Franklin, Shellie Zacharia, Meghan Lamb and more. See fiction at: http://www.prickofthespindle.com/pages/vol.2.4/fiction.htm An excerpt from "The Bonfire," by Perle Besserman: "Did she do it when he went to the shelf behind the cash register to fetch the baby oil for the mother who'd just wheeled her toddler's stroller into the store? Did she snatch it from the Revlon sample display? Did she run? Or did she walk out the door casually to make it look as if she had nothing to hide? Once out in the street, did she hurry to the corner? Did the sun blind her? Did she run then... past the firehouse, the Methodist Church on the corner, the lumberyard? God, how did she keep herself from running back to the drugstore and falling on her knees and begging the old man to forgive her?"

*Poetry by Barry Graham, Eric Mohrman, Howie Good, and more.
See poetry at:
http://www.prickofthespindle.com/pages/vol.2.4/poetry.htm
An excerpt from "Wynken, Blynken & Nod" by Courtney Druz:
"When I learned to throw the net
I smiled, I cast;
I caught many fish
but I could not eat them, nor could I sell.
Years of fish, my stars in a net,
the stench in the boat, the endless motion, the sea below me emptying its flocks."

*Nonfiction by Samantha Bell, Jaquira Diaz, Robert Lunday and Shara Sinor:
http://www.prickofthespindle.com/pages/vol.2.4/nonfiction_reviews.htm

View the archives at http://www.prickofthespindle.com/pages/archives.htm

If you are an article writer seeking to publish your work, you may send us articles on writing-related topics. Please note that as we are nonprofit, Prick of the Spindle is a non-paying market. Send articles, queries, and other correspondence to [redacted]

If you are an author, publisher or filmmaker interested in submitting work for review, please contact the editor at [redacted], or send copy to the mailing address listed at http://www.prickofthespindle.com/pages/contact.htm

Prick of the Spindle is open to submissions year-round. View submission guidelines at http://www.prickofthespindle.com/pages/submit.htm.

Our emails will be infrequent and brief; and sometimes amusing and informative. However, if you would like to unsubscribe from future line to [redacted]

Yours in lit,
Cynthia Reeser
Editor-in-Chief Prick of the Spindle

Prick of the Spindle is a proud member of the Council of Literary Magazines and Presses.

ISSN: 1940-5499

--
Eric Weinstein
1319 Washington St., Apt. 1L
Hoboken, NJ 07030-6759
[redacted]
[redacted]

↑ Index

315. David-Baptiste Chirot
"Farewll to Nanao Sakaki"
Thu 25 Dec 2008

---

http://poetry.about.com/od/contemporarypoets/p/sakaki.htm?nl=1Poetry Nanao SakakiBy Bob Holman & Margery Snyder, About.com

Nanao Sakaki grew up in Japan, came to adulthood as a drafted radarman in the Japanese Army during World War II, and after the war became known as a poet and friend to American poets, a wilderness walker, environmentalist and counterculture leader, founder of the Tribe and Banyan Ashram.

The following is excerpted from our correspondent Taylor Mignon1's 2002 portrait of Sakaki written for the About Poetry Museletter:Yaponesian Global Guerrilla Poet Nanao Sakaki: If you have time to chatter

Read books

If you have time to read

Walk into mountain, desert and ocean

If you have time to walk

Sing Songs and dance

If you have time to dance

Sit quietly, you Happy Lucky Idiot I first met Nanao Sakaki in 1993 at the Kyoto Connection, an eclectic event of the arts headed by Ken Rogers, managing editor of Kyoto Journal2. At that time I was editing the bilingual literary journal, The Plaza, and I asked him if he could send work. Though he never sent anything — it could be difficult to pin him down sometimes as he's such an inveterate wanderer — I'd often go to his reading events.Renaissance Wild Man: Nanao, a walking collective call of the wild man, commune cofounder, scholar of languages and aboriginal culture and tribal traditions, troubadour to hang out with, lover of 'shrooms and the herbs, movement maker, The Tribes, homeless (except for the cabin in Shizuoka), green guru guy, activist, translator of haiku, mantra sutra rapper using the 5/7/5 syllabic meter.... Nanao is also better known in the US than in his home Yaponesia. My poet friend Kijima Hajime3, a Walt Whitman scholar, didn't know about Nanao since he's more associated with the Beats and the Hippies.... Japan's first Dead Head?"Break the Mirror": So Kijima included Nanao's poem "Break the Mirror" in the bilingual booklet Over the Oceans: Contemporary Poetry from Japan (Doyo Bijutsusha Shuppan Hanbai, 2000), which he re-envisioned for both English and Japanese versions. Also in 2000, Blackberry Books, Nanao's main publisher in English, put out an anthology of writings on him entitled Nanao or Never: Nanao Sakaki Walks Earth A, by such as authors as Gary Snyder, Allen Ginsberg, Joanne Kyger and myself. Blackberry Books also published Nanao's poetry volumes Break the Mirror (1996) and Let's Eat Stars (1997)."Let's Eat Stars": His poetry is infused with homegrown, funky, direct appeal. The first poem (untitled) in Break the Mirror tells us — not didactically — to take it easy. "April Fool's Day" in Let's Eat Stars is sharp-tongued in the eighth stanza:

To make schooling more efficient

The Ministry of Education wants

that all grammar schools & junior high schools

should be reorganized into three categories

A, Elite course.

B, Robot course.

C, Dropout course.

He has also done English translations of haiku by Kobayashi Issa in Inch by Inch: 45 Haiku (La Alameda Press, 1999), which has the Japanese and English printed in Nanao's script.With Gary Snyder: In Yaponesia his main publisher is Studio Reaf, which publishes the activist journal Ningen kazoku ("Human family") — in 2000 Studio Reaf released a video of Gary's reading selections from Turtle Island and Axe Handles followed by Nanao's translation — Gary Snyder: Sing the Mother Earth, in Shinshu, 1991. The Japanese language Kokopelli is a collection of poems containing the poem "Just Enough" in several languages, including Ainu, Ryukyuan, and English: Soil for legs

Axe for hands

Flower for eyes

Bird for ears

Mushroom for nose

Smile for mouth

Songs for lungs

Sweat for skin

Wind for mindBooks by and about Nanao Sakaki: Break the Mirror, poems by Nanao Sakaki (Blackberry Books, 1996)

Let's Eat Stars, poems (Blackberry Books, 1997)

[]Inch by Inch: 45 Haiku by Issa, translated by Nanao Sakaki (La Alameda Press, 1999)

Nanao or Never: Nanao Sakaki Walks Earth A, edited by Gary Lawless (Blackberry Books, 2000)

This About.com page has been optimized for print. To view this page in its original form, please visit: http://poetry.about.com/od/contemporarypoets/p/sakaki.htm ©2008 About.com, Inc., a part of The New York Times Company. All rights reserved.Links in this article:http://poetry.about.com/library/weekly/blmignonpoem.htmhttp://www.kyotojournal.org/http://www.assemblylanguage.com/text/Kijima.htmlhttp://erclk.about.com/?zi=12/38ohttp://erclk.about.com/?zi=12/2vdhttp://erclk.about.com/?zi=12/2qvnhttp://erclk.about.com/?zi=12/2Uq

_____ It's the same Hotmail®. If by "same" you mean up to 70% faster. http://windowslive.com/online/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_broad1_122008

↑ Index

316. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: "Farewll to Nanao Sakaki"

Thu 25 Dec 2008

Nanao was one of the participants in the Japanese Poetry Festival we (The Committee for International Poetry) organized in New York City in the early eighties.

Do you remember his poem about taking a crap?

Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Dec 25, 2008 at 9:47 AM, David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://poetry.about.com/od/contemporarypoets/p/sakaki.htm?nl=1Poetry Nanao SakakiBy Bob Holman & Margery Snyder, About.com
>
> Nanao Sakaki grew up in Japan, came to adulthood as a drafted radarman in the Japanese Army during World War II, and after the war became known as a poet and friend to American poets, a wilderness walker, environmentalist and counterculture leader, founder of the Tribe and Banyan Ashram.
>
> The following is excerpted from our correspondent Taylor Mignon1's 2002 portrait of Sakaki written for the About Poetry Museletter:Yaponesian Global Guerrilla Poet Nanao Sakaki: If you have time to chatter
>
> Read books
>
> If you have time to read

Walk into mountain, desert and ocean

If you have time to walk

Sing Songs and dance

If you have time to dance

Sit quietly, you Happy Lucky Idiot
I first met Nanao Sakaki in 1993 at the Kyoto Connection, an eclectic event of the arts headed by Ken Rogers, managing editor of Kyoto Journal2. At that time I was editing the bilingual literary journal, The Plaza, and I asked him if he could send work. Though he never sent anything — it could be difficult to pin him down sometimes as he's such an inveterate wanderer — I'd often go to his reading events.Renaissance Wild Man: Nanao, a walking collective call of the wild man, commune cofounder, scholar of languages and aboriginal culture and tribal traditions, troubadour to hang out with, lover of 'shrooms and the herbs, movement maker, The Tribes, homeless (except for the cabin in Shizuoka), green guru guy, activist, translator of haiku, mantra sutra rapper using the 5/7/5 syllabic meter.... Nanao is also better known in the US than in his home Yaponesia. My poet friend Kijima Hajime3, a Walt Whitman scholar, didn't know about Nanao since he's more associated with the Beats and the Hippies.... Japan's first Dead Head?"Break the Mirror": So Kijima included Nanao's poem "Break the Mirror" in the bilingual booklet Over the Oceans: Contemporary Poetry from Japan (Doyo Bijutsusha Shuppan Hanbai, 2000), which he re-envisioned for both English and Japanese versions. Also in 2000, Blackberry Books, Nanao's main publisher in English, put out an anthology of writings on him entitled Nanao or Never: Nanao Sakaki Walks Earth A, by such as authors as Gary Snyder, Allen Ginsberg, Joanne Kyger and myself. Blackberry Books also published Nanao's poetry volumes Break the Mirror (1996) and Let's Eat Stars (1997)."Let's Eat Stars": His poetry is infused with homegrown, funky, direct appeal. The first poem (untitled) in Break the Mirror tells us — not didactically — to take it easy. "April Fool's Day" in Let's Eat Stars is sharp-tongued in the eighth stanza:

To make schooling more efficient

The Ministry of Education wants

that all grammar schools & junior high schools

should be reorganized into three categories

A, Elite course.

B, Robot course.

C, Dropout course.

He has also done English translations of haiku by Kobayashi Issa in Inch by Inch: 45 Haiku (La Alameda Press, 1999), which has the Japanese and English printed in Nanao's script.With Gary Snyder: In Yaponesia his main publisher is Studio Reaf, which publishes the activist journal Ningen kazoku ("Human family") — in 2000 Studio Reaf released a video of Gary's reading selections from Turtle Island and Axe Handles followed by Nanao's translation — Gary Snyder: Sing the Mother Earth, in Shinshu, 1991. The Japanese language Kokopelli is a collection of poems containing the poem "Just Enough" in several languages, including Ainu, Ryukyuan, and English:
Soil for legs

Axe for hands

Flower for eyes

Bird for ears

Mushroom for nose

Smile for mouth

Songs for lungs

Sweat for skin

Wind for mindBooks by and about Nanao Sakaki: Break the Mirror, poems by Nanao Sakaki (Blackberry Books, 1996)

Let's Eat Stars, poems (Blackberry Books, 1997)

[]Inch by Inch: 45 Haiku by Issa, translated by Nanao Sakaki (La Alameda Press, 1999)

Nanao or Never: Nanao Sakaki Walks Earth A, edited by Gary Lawless

> (Blackberry Books, 2000)
>
> This About.com page has been optimized for print. To view this page in its original form, please visit: http://poetry.about.com/od/contemporarypoets/p/sakaki.htm
> (c)2008 About.com, Inc., a part of The New York Times Company. All rights reserved.Links in this article: http://poetry.about.com/library/weekly/blmignonpoem.htmhttp://www.kyotojournal.org/http://www.assemblylanguage.com/text/Kijima.htmlhttp://erclk.about.com/?zi=12/38ohttp://erclk.about.com/?zi=12/2vdhttp://erclk.about.com/?zi=12/2qvnhttp://erclk.about.com/?zi=12/2Uq
>
> _____
> It's the same Hotmail(R). If by "same" you mean up to 70% faster.
>
> http://windowslive.com/online/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_broad1_122008

↑ Index

317. John Cunningham
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Thu 25 Dec 2008

Political correctness be dammed, I like the idea of "Poetry Brothel". Firstly, isn't feminine or feminist poetry (whichever you prefer) spoken from the body. Secondly, here is a legally sanctioned place of 'intercourse' (the poetic kind, a.k.a. communication) where the practitioner are protected. For those of you who are speaking out against the body being used in commerce, why are you not speaking out against football or hockey where male bodies are being used in commerce? When you consider the damage that is done to the male body during that contact sport and the lingering effects of it in terms of permanent injury and disability such as arthritis and other diseases, isn't this just as bad? Or is it that one affects women whereas the other affects men? If we're going to get on a train, lets get on the right one - the one that carries both male and female on equal terms. John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Adam Tobin
Sent: December 23, 2008 9:00 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

Why is the capitalist exploitation of women at a brothel worse than, say, the capitalist exploitation of women at a Zipper Factory? It's just a different kind of labor, no? Given that some artists are seemingly comfortable with capitalism, why should they not acknowledge it in the name of their ventures?

I understand, of course, that brothels have a particular history with a particular kind of violence attached to it, but so do factories. Do you direct the same righteous anger at Andy Warhol?

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Ruth Lepson
Sent: Monday, December 22, 2008 5:01 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

brothels about as funny as slavery.
which British feminist?

On 12/21/08 1:44 PM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:

> somewhat related: William Styron, the way he waxes his libido in "Sophie's Choice."
> i'm still looking for the book of essays by the British Feminist who enlightened me.
>
> --- On Sat, 12/20/08, Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
> From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Saturday, December 20, 2008, 6:51 PM
>
> cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying you don't know what it feels like & it's much > worse than the way you are characterizing it.

>
> On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> New York poetry brothel tempts with verse
>
> Published: Friday December 19, 2008
>
> http://rawstory.com/news/afp/New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192
> 008.html
>
> The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her > heart with a poem.
>
> Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the > lines, not the sheets.
>
> At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper > Factory the look was bona fide bordello.
>
> Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit > nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.
>
> Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and
> frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.
>
> But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body,
> and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical > descriptions, reveals what's on offer.
>
> Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of > your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."
>
> Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she > doesn't > know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming > she can "coax your drum."
>
> Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder > Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops
> tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.
>
> "Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame,
> the
> sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice,
"so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

"I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.

Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."

But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.

"Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory
wearing a kilt.

His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.

"I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."

The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.

"Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems,"

> she > murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you > don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"
>
> guidelines &

Internal Virus Database is out of date.
Checked by AVG - http://www.avg.com
Version: 8.0.134 / Virus Database: 270.4.5/1533 - Release Date: 03/07/2008 7:19 PM

↑ Index

318. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Thu 25 Dec 2008

Ruth,

I think your examples move from irony to absurdity.

How would one conduct a poetry holocaust--have poets read, then kill them? Walter Benjamin saw poetry after the holocaust as too insensitive (in The Pripet Marshes, Irving Feldman gave us reason to disagree, as did Yevtushenko in Babi Yar). Does Swift writing about eating babies seem insensitive?

The analogy about a 'poetry plantation' interests me more. In the hands of Eddie Murphy (or Amiri Baraka, Tracie Morris, Nate Mackey?) that might provide some very pointed satire about oppressive authority (e.g., of the poetry establishment and the aristocracy of workshops).

Some folks would wince at Ed Sanders' The VFW Crawling Contest, or lots of Ezra Pound, or Bukowski. Fahrenheit 451 'em? Kilmer's Trees gets me queasy. Piss Christ? Rudy, Rudy.

The Poetry Brothel seems clearly satirical. I think it makes sense to see it in that context. Sacred cows often provide the choicest milk.

~ Dan

----- Original Message -----
From: "Ruth Lepson" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, December 23, 2008 10:05 PM
Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

> of course it's ironic, Dan, but it's insensitive to be ironic about certain > things, in my opinion. wd it be ok to have a poetry plantation? a holocaust?
> ruth
>
> On 12/22/08 4:20 PM, "Daniel Zimmerman" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Ruth,
>
> I see the piece as both funny and not funny, i.e., ironic. When Salieri (?) objected to Mozart that his music had too many notes, Wolfie replied "Which ones would you eliminate?" Which kinds of hyperbole would you eliminate? Would you also decree such usages as "If a person wants to succeed, s/he must do his/her work him/herself"? Would you keep the asterisks in HOWL's first edition: "Who with mother finally "? It seems to me that poets "don' need no steenking badches."
>
> ~ Dan Zimmerman
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "Ruth Lepson" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Saturday, December 20, 2008 6:51 PM
> Subject: Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
>
> cooptation of poetry by capitalist objectification of women. not funny. to > use a brothel as a metaphor is disgusting. I remember when Denise Levertov > criticized a poet for using napalm as a metaphor for personal pain, saying > you don't know what it feels like & it's much worse than the way you are characterizing it.
>
> On 12/19/08 4:15 PM, "mIEKAL aND" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> New York poetry brothel tempts with verse

Published: Friday December 19, 2008

http://rawstory.com/news/afp/New_York_poetry_brothel_tempts_with_12192008.html

The prostitute whispers, wets her lips and prepares to bare... her heart with a poem.

Welcome to New York's Poetry Brothel, where punters delve between the lines, not the sheets.

At a weekend session in a Manhattan night club called the Zipper Factory the look was bona fide bordello.

Literary ladies of the night flitted between intimate, candle-lit nooks, red lights and paintings of nudes.

Some of the poetesses for sale sported retro-style garter belts and frilly knickers. One swanned about in a top hat and feather boa.

But transactions at the Poetry Brothel are of the mind, not the body, and a moment with the catalogue, replete with pictures and whimsical descriptions, reveals what's on offer.

Page four boasts The Professor, swearing to have heard "the wail of your striving heart drifting over the spires of skyscrapers."

Harriett Van Os on page 10 promises to "tell you secrets she doesn't know she knows." Cecille Ballroom tempts punters on page 13 claiming she can "coax your drum."

Gigolo poets are available, not least Poetry Brothel co-founder Nicholas Adamski, who goes by the name Tennessee Pink and tops tempestuous, dark looks with an eye patch.

"Poetry is what I love more than anything," cooed The Madame, the sultry spirit behind the whole idea.

The Madame -- real name Stephanie Berger -- came dressed for the part in low-cut dress, elbow-length black gloves and a peacock headdress.

"I'd rather be in the bedroom hearing poetry than listening to some old man sitting on a chair on a stage," she explained by the light of a guttering candle.

One-on-one encounters, for which "clients" pay three to five dollars in addition to a 15 dollar entry fee and one free reading, took place

upstairs.

The "whores" read from their own material, much of which is free verse, making for intense, sometimes baffling performances.

But for those needing a break, the Poetry Brothel laid on flamenco guitarists, a fortune-teller, a blackjack table and a bar specializing in port and whisky

The young hedonists, most of them students, appear to have struck a surprisingly successful formula.

"There just aren't that many poetry readings where poets show a lot of cleavage," said The Professor, otherwise known as Jennifer Michael Hecht, aged 43 and a real life professor at Manhattan's New School.

She teaches writing to many of the Brothel's regulars and is proud of the result.

"It's kind of like the Weimar Republic without the Nazis. At two in the morning you have 20- or 30-year-olds lying all over the place reading poetry," she said.

"The custom is to read poetry alone, but we know that from Homer onward, people read it aloud and in groups."

By midnight the Zipper Factory was packed and getting fuller -- and rowdier.

The fortune teller, bedecked in red scarf and blue plumes, mumbled to someone about "choppy waters." The flamenco duo strummed. The Madame, yet another glass of port in hand, introduced poet "whores" in a voice suggesting she appreciated more than their literary charms.

When Patricia Smith, a well-established poet, took the mike to declaim a long and rhythmical poem about love and making love, there were rock concert cheers from the crowd.

"I always shudder when I pray," Smith intoned in a mesmerizing voice, "so your name must be a prayer."

Even for these bohemians there's no escaping the economic crisis sweeping the country.

One of the poets, 22-year-old Nina Cheng, was about to start a job at Bear Stearns this year when the bank collapsed. Now she is writing a play about the experience and applying for a playwright's course at Yale.

> "I'd thought I'd do banking and get into the arts when I retired -- not this early," said Cheng, known at the Brothel as The Opium Eater.
>
> Another poetry prostitute, 27-year-old Rachel Herman-Gross, aka Simone, worried that crashing stock markets will pull the rug from under the arts scene. "It's going to be a lot harder. A lot of artists are sustained by grants from people with money."
>
> But one enthusiastic "client" said the ingenuity of the Poetry Brothel proves there are ways to survive.
>
> "Money's always been scarce for artists and they're very resourceful people," said Edmund Voyer, 54, a hefty man described as an "evangelist" on his business card and who came to the Zipper Factory wearing a kilt.
>
> His drinking companion, Jennifer Hoa, 27, agreed money and art would always find ways to meet.
>
> "I've been a sell-out for years as a corporate lawyer, but I come here," she said. "I can't suppress my artistic side."
>
> The Madame promised that the Poetry Brothel welcomed all.
>
> "Many are young men with perhaps a secret interest in poems," she murmured. "Just look at the menu. Get a recommendation. Or say you don't care. Say: 'I need poetry. I'm hungry.'"
>
> guidelines &
>
> guidelines &

↑ Index

319. Richard Jeffrey Newman

Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Thu 25 Dec 2008

Just thought I'd add that Rick Warren has said openly that he thinks Jews are going to hell: http://www.americablog.com/2008/12/rick-warren-told-jewish-woman-she-was.html . Not that this is particularly surprising, and I imagine it would have been difficult to find an evangelical preacher who did not think this, but it did make me wonder, had I been chosen as the inaugural poet, how I would feel and what I would say about having to share the stage with him.

Richard

_____
Richard Jeffrey Newman
Associate Professor, English Coordinator, Creative Writing Project
Nassau Community College
One Education Drive
Garden City, NY 11530
O: [redacted]
F: [redacted]
[redacted]

--

Literary Arts Director, Persian Arts Festival
[redacted]
www.persianartsfestival.org

--

[redacted]
www.richardjnewman.com

↑ Index

320. David-Baptiste Chirot

RIP Harold Pinter

Thu 25 Dec 2008

Nobel-winning playwright Harold Pinter dies at 78http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20081225/ap_en_ot/eu_britain_obit_pinter

· Nobel-winning playwright Harold Pinter dead at 78 Reuters

· Playwright
Pinter dead at 78: wife, agent AFP

Nobel-winning playwright
Harold Pinter dies at 78

By PAISLEY DODDS, Associated Press Writer Paisley Dodds, Associated Press Writer Thu Dec 25, 9:44 am ET

LONDON – Harold Pinter, praised as the most influential British playwright of his generation and a longtime voice of political protest, has died after a long battle with cancer. He was 78.

Pinter, whose distinctive contribution to the stage was recognized with the Nobel Prize for Literature in 2005, died on Wednesday, according to his second wife, Lady Antonia Fraser.

"Pinter restored theater to its basic elements: an enclosed space and unpredictable dialogue, where people are at the mercy of each other and pretense crumbles," the Nobel Academy said when it announced Pinter's award. "With a minimum of plot, drama emerges from the power struggle and hide-and-seek of interlocution."

The Nobel Prize gave Pinter a global platform which he seized enthusiastically to denounce U.S. President George W. Bush and then-British Prime Minister Tony Blair.

"The invasion of Iraq was a bandit act, an act of blatant state terrorism, demonstrating absolute contempt for the concept of international law," Pinter said in his Nobel lecture, which he recorded rather than traveling to Stockholm.

"How many people do you have to kill before you qualify to be described as a mass murderer and a war criminal? One hundred thousand?" he asked, in a hoarse voice.

Weakened by cancer and bandaged from a fall on a slippery pavement, Pinter seemed a vulnerable old man when he emerged from his London home to speak about the Nobel Award.

Though he had been looking forward to giving a Nobel lecture — "the longest speech I will ever have made" — he first canceled plans to attend the awards, then announced he would skip the lecture as well on his doctor's advice.

Pinter wrote 32 plays; one novel, "The Dwarfs," in 1990; and put his hand to 22 screenplays including "The Quiller Memorandum" (1965) and "The French Lieutenant's Woman" (1980). He admitted, and said he deeply regretted, voting for Margaret Thatcher in 1979 and Tony Blair in 1997.

Pinter fulminated against what he saw as the overweening arrogance of American power, and belittled Blair as seeming like a "deluded idiot" in support of Bush's war in Iraq.

In his Nobel lecture, Pinter accused the United States of supporting "every right-wing military dictatorship in the world" after World War II.

"The crimes of the United States have been systematic, constant, vicious, remorseless, but very few people have actually talked about them," he said.

The United States, he added, "also has its own bleating little lamb tagging behind it on a lead, the pathetic and supine Great Britain."

Most prolific between 1957 and 1965, Pinter relished the juxtaposition of brutality and the banal and turned the conversational pause into an emotional minefield.

His characters' internal fears and longings, their guilt and difficult sexual drives are set against the neat lives they have constructed in order to try to survive.

Usually enclosed in one room, they organize their lives as a sort of grim game and their actions often contradict their words. Gradually, the layers are peeled back to reveal the characters' nakedness.

The protection promised by the room usually disappears and the language begins to disintegrate.

Pinter once said of language, "The speech we hear is an indication of that which we don't hear. It is a necessary avoidance, a violent, sly, and anguished or mocking smoke screen which keeps the other in its true place. When true silence falls we are left with echo but are nearer nakedness. One way of looking at speech is to say that it is a constant stratagem to cover nakedness."

Pinter's influence was felt in the United States in the plays of Sam Shepard and David Mamet and throughout British literature.

"With his earliest work, he stood alone in British theater up against the bewilderment and incomprehension of critics, the audience and writers too," British playwright Tom Stoppard said when the Nobel Prize was announced.

"Not only has Harold Pinter written some of the outstanding plays of his time, he has also blown fresh air into the musty attic of conventional English literature, by insisting that everything he does has a public and political dimension," added British playwright David Hare, who also writes politically charged dramas.

The working-class milieu of plays like "The Birthday Party" and "The Homecoming" reflected Pinter's early life as the son of a Jewish tailor from London's East End. He began his career in the provinces as an actor.

In his first major play, "The Birthday Party" (1958), intruders enter the retreat of Stanley, a young man who is hiding from childhood guilt. He becomes violent, telling them, "You stink of sin, you contaminate womankind."

And in "The Caretaker," a manipulative old man threatens the fragile relationship of two brothers while "The Homecoming" explores the hidden rage and confused sexuality of an all-male household by inserting a woman.

In "Silence and Landscape," Pinter moved from exploring the dark underbelly of human life to showing the simultaneous levels of fantasy and reality that equally occupy the individual.

In the 1980s, Pinter's only stage plays were one-acts: "A Kind of Alaska" (1982), "One for the Road" (1984) and the 20-minute "Mountain Language" (1988).

During the late 1980s, his work became more overtly political; he said he had a responsibility to pursue his role as "a citizen of the world in which I live, (and) insist upon taking responsibility."

In March 2005 Pinter announced his retirement as a playwright to concentrate on politics. But he created a radio play, "Voices," that was broadcast on BBC radio to mark his 75th birthday.

"I have written 29 plays and I think that's really enough," Pinter said . "I think the world has had enough of my plays."

Pinter had a son, Daniel, from his marriage to actress Vivien Merchant, which ended in divorce in 1980. That year he married the writer Fraser.

"It was a privilege to live with him for over 33 years. He will never be forgotten," Fraser said.

Copyright © 2008 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. The information contained in the AP News report may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed without the prior written authority of The Associated Press.

Copyright © 2008 Yahoo! Inc. All rights reserved.

_____ Life on your PC is safer, easier, and more enjoyable with Windows Vista®.
http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/127032870/direct/01/

↑ Index

321. steve russell
Re: Harold Pinter
Thu 25 Dec 2008

AP moved this story about 2-1/2 hours ago, saying that NOBEL winning playwright Harold Pinter died last night. Few playwrights, as you know, won Nobel Literature prizes. Even fewer -- Pinter -- were married to another great writer, as the obit makes clear: Antonia Fraser.

Nobel-winning playwrigoeticsht Harold Pinter dies at 78 - Yahoo! News

http://news. yahoo.com/ s/ap/20081225/ ap_on_re_ eu/eu_britain_ obit_pinter

↑ Index

322. steve russell
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Thu 25 Dec 2008

---

cynicism aside, when i consider Gitmo, a horrific slice of hell which rivals Stalin at his most inspired, i suppose that Barack will be an improvement. one can only hope.

--- On Wed, 12/24/08, David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, December 24, 2008, 10:46 AM

An Open Letter to Elizabeth Alexander?

How about an Open Letter to Every American--

"tear the doors loose from the jambs!!!"

as a great poet wrote--

"Respondez Respondez!!!"

Didn't the people just turn ou tin the greatest numbers ever to Democratically" elect, for a cool Billion Bucks, the Candidate of their Choice-- isn't the message really one directed at all the people, only no one takes it seriously until it affects them?

an open Letter that each person needs to write to themself also--?

saying Wake Up!!!!

A friend gave me a stack of old Ebony and Jet magazines recently, and in an Ebony from 2004 there was a one page spread among the top notch ads on a slick page some fotos of Congressman Obama, handsome and smiling walking on a very mice street in his shirtsleeves, just beginning his campaign to be Illinois' next Senator and, if vctorious, the one Black Senator at the time in DC.

Two years after that photo the President-Elect launched the two year 1 Billion $ journey to the the Inaugeration.

Late last Spring Senator Obama cut cold his friend and Pastor of 20 years, the man who had married the Obamas and baptised their children. Apparently Reverend Wright, shown in a noin stop loop of one clip, had offended deeply the pundits at Fox and --well--"America"--with his "radical views and America hating sermons."

Senator Obama said hardly a word about the friend he had called a Mentor--a man once a huge part of his life vanished down the oubliette as fast as those persons who one day would be in a foto walking and smiling next to Stalin, Mao, Hitler--and the next day--no longer there at all in the now ONLY "real" foto in which Stalin smiles and walks along, humming no doubt, accompanied only by a tree in the background, and the vast expanse of a Stalinist Sky, which, no doubt about it, "is not cloudy all day."

In June, Senator Obama gave what has been called the most obsequois speech to AIPAC ever given byan American candidate seeking election. Even opponents of Senator Obama were embarassed by the fawning display of "fealty" (the term used), in which a Black man running for the highest office in the land in a "historic" campaig of "change" pledged total allegeinace to an Apartheid State as the number one pririoity of US policy.

Since the election, the President -Elect has surrounded himself with the likes of Coporate America's best friend, Rahm Emmanueal (who has curiously almost vanished since it became known there are tapes of him having some dubious chats with the Governor of Illinois, as well as being the subject of an FBI inevstigation as a suspected Mossad agent), and a long list of hard core War Hawks, Wall Street fixers (to "fix the economy" which they destroyed), and such old War Criminals as Madeliene "The Mad Bomber" "500, 000 dead Iraqi children is not a high cost compared to the good of the sanctions" Albright and a host of other apparatcheks, lifetime Washington Ghouls dripping with the bloody secrets of decades of Advising leaders and cruising the Friendly Global Skies on Company time and pay-- they're baaaaa---ccckkkk !!! again--the samo samo State Craft Persons, the samo samo War Criminal War Crazed, the samo samo collection of revolving door lobbyists-office holders helping create a seamless Corporate State Fascism a la Mussolni, and the long line of lizards lured out from under the rocks where they are altering documents as they crank out their Memoirs of "State Craft," "Decision Maiking," and "Geo Political Fantasies."

"To change everything so that nothing is changed, "as the great Sicilian writer Tomasso Lampedusa succinctly observed.

Having disappeared his friend and Mentor, having sworn allegiance to protect eternally Apartheid, having flung wide the door to the samo samo crowd of trigger happy fixers, crooks, looters, FBI invstigation subjects, the samo samo "wise persons" who have led the country from one disaster to the next while pocketing fortunes and endlessly banging the drums to "let loose the Dogs of War"--and dstroy as many millions as possible to steal the most resources posible--

Having done al this before even taking office, why should one be shocked or surprised that the Gigantic Genial Bigot will mount the stage and launch some sort of rhetorical juggernaut antithetical to Christ's own teachings in the name of "Christian" double talk? Isn't double talk all that is left anyway?

Heck, even John McCain realized that the "Straight Talk Express " won't get you anywhere--

No, to be a real Politico you have to hew the line close to the Poetics of ambiguity, opacity, high flights of Formalist rhetorical flourishes--

After all, isn't the New President a "Poet"--???

Apparently reaching across the aisles and "going beyond" left and right ideologically doesn't mean all people are included, only some. Apartheid, bigotry, the complete "white washing" of American Indians, the total insult to the LGBT communities that worked so hard for ths "new kind of Leader"--

It is just like Orwell's Animal Farm, in which the Aniamls revolt and start to install a fdarm where "Alla Animals Are Equal," only to find that somehow they are electing leaders who have decided that "All Animals Are Equal, But Some Are More Equal than Others."

> Date: Tue, 23 Dec 2008 21:01:20 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
> To: [redacted]
>
> Instead of protesting the preacher we should work toward discrediting the > notion that we need preachers.
>
> It'll go away if no one listens.
>
> Think big?
>
> -Ryan

>
> On Mon, Dec 22, 2008 at 3:54 PM, George Bowering <[redacted]>
wrote:
>
> > Me too. I am getting more and more discouraged by the calls for censorship
> > from the "left."
> > I speak as a non USAmerican who sees Obama as right of most tolerable > > governments in the western world.
> > I had never heard of this preacher till I saw a piece on him in your
Time
> > Magazine a while back.
> > But it doesn't bother me that he is going to show up at the inauguration. I > > mean most civilized people > > don't get it that in places like the US and Iran there has to be religious > > approval for inaugurations and on the money.
> >
> > On Dec 21, 2008, at 12:09 PM, Jason Quackenbush wrote:
> >
> > Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick > >> Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger > >> on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's > >> hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers
on the > >> national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the > >> ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that > >> he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great > >> progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left > >> thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of > >> the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and > >> i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it are more > >> compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism > >> calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found > >> compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with > >> it.

> >>
> >>
> >> On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:
> >>
> >> This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not
> >>> in
> >>> sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The > >>> Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression.
> >>> Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary
> >>> to > >>> Human existence."
> >>> --- Obododimma Oha.
> >>>
> >>> On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson
<[redacted]> wrote:
> >>>
> >>> Pastor Rick Warren said:
> >>>>
> >>>> "Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my > >>>> church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
> >>>> "Now he's invited me."
> >>>>
> >>>> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not > >>>> ok
> >>>> for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's > >>>> pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs.

right, way beyond
> >>>> the > >>>> failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying
> >>>> to > >>>> overcome with Gay/Straight.
> >>>>
> >>>> I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left
> >>>> AND
> >>>> the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the > >>>> next > >>>> eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last > >>>> eight.
> >>>>
> >>>> Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a > >>>> very > >>>> important role in this society, as has been recognized by many > >>>> indigenous > >>>> and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, > >>>> Two
> >>>> Spirit, begins to communicate this.
> >>>>
> >>>> Paul E. Nelson
> >>>>
> >>>> Global Voices Radio
> >>>> SPLAB!
> >>>> American Sentences
> >>>> Organic Poetry
> >>>> Poetry Postcard Blog
> >>>>
> >>>> Ilalqo, WA [redacted]
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>>

> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>> _____
> >>>> From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
> >>>> To: [redacted]
> >>>> Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
> >>>> Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
> >>>>
> >>>> Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to > >>>> reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to > >>>> Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick
> >>>> Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender > >>>> community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in > >>>> our struggle, not interested in our suffering.
> >>>>
> >>>> Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in > >>>> California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH > >>>> time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is > >>>> nothing but clear.
> >>>>
> >>>> This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I > >>>> know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition
> >>>> and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential > >>>> inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as > >>>> a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely > >>>> thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as > >>>> a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in > >>>> January.

> >>>>
> >>>> When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to > >>>> protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very > >>>> different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always > >>>> easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks > >>>> about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that > >>>> should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his > >>>> inauguration.
> >>>>
> >>>> Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message.
Rick Warren has > >>>> been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, > >>>> not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless
the > >>>> inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not > >>>> count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.
> >>>>
> >>>> Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than > >>>> protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama > >>>> promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick > >>>> Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately > >>>> clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing > >>>> against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.
> >>>>
> >>>> It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, > >>>> but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama

> >>>> made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have > >>>> known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made > >>>> over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched
> >>>> homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision > >>>> of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.
> >>>>
> >>>> If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his > >>>> first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that > >>>> Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL
> >>>> LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
> >>>> You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have > >>>> the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right > >>>> now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him > >>>> that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell > >>>> him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.
> >>>>
> >>>> But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite > >>>> Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this > >>>> is just fine with you?
> >>>>
> >>>> Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the > >>>> millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those > >>>> who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It > >>>> was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's > >>>> a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right > >>>> decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

> >>>>
> >>>> Most sincerely,
> >>>> CAConrad
> >>>>
> >>>> cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]
> >>>>
> >>>> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
> >>>>
posts. Check
> >>>> guidelines
> >>>>
posts. Check
> >>>> guidelines
> >>>>
> >>>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> --
> >>> Obododimma Oha
> >>> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> >>> Dept. of English
> >>> University of Ibadan
> >>> Nigeria
> >>>
> >>> &
> >>>
> >>> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> >>> University of Ibadan
> >>>
> >>> Phone: [redacted];
> >>> [redacted].
> >>>
posts. Check
> >>>
> >>
> >> Jason Quackenbush
> >> [redacted]

> >>
Check
> >>
> >>
> > George
> > Satisfied with his undergarments.
> >
> >
guidelines
> >
>

Send e-mail anywhere. No map, no compass.
http://windowslive.com/oneline/hotmail?
ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_anywhere_122008

↑ Index

323. David Kirschenbaum
Help The Portable Boog Reader 3
Fri 26 Dec 2008

Hi all,

Our annual collection, The Portable Boog Reader 3: An Anthology of New York City Poetry (Boog City issue 53) goes to press this Tuesday and we can use your help to push us over the top.

This is a quick note to see if you'd like to advertise and reach our readership. (Donations are also cool, way cool.)

This 24-page issue of our tabloid-size paper Boog City, roughly the equivalent in size of a 96-page, 6" x 9" anthology, features an entirely new lineup of 72 poets (see list below this note) selected by six Boog City editors—Jim Behrle, Joanna Fuhrman, Brenda Iijima, Paolo Javier, Mark Lamoureux, and me, David Kirschenbaum. We're all real excited to share this great work and to have an anthology available to so many people for free.

We're going to be distributing 2,250 copies of the issue throughout the East Village and other parts of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and at Boog City events, including a publication party with readings from contributors.

Deadlines

—Sat. Dec. 27-Reserve space
—Sun. Dec. 28-Submit Ad
—Tues. Jan. 6-Distribute paper

(advance copies will be available at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church and Bowery Poetry Club New Year's Day marathon readings)

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. The discount rate also applies to larger ads.

For our full rate card, please visit:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/boogpdfs/boog_city_ad_rates.pdf

Email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664) for more information.

Happy Holidays.

as ever,
David

Portable Boog Reader 3 Poets:

Ammiel Alcalay * Betsy Andrews * Ari Banias * Jennifer Bartlett * Martine Bellen

Edmund Berrigan * Kate Broad * Julian Brolaski * Donna Brook * Sommer Browning * Matthew Burgess

David Cameron * Mike Coffey * Jen Coleman * John Coletti * Matt Cozart * Elaine Equi

Jessica Fiorini * Jennifer Firestone * Ed Friedman * Ethan Fugate * Rigoberto Gonzalez * Nada Gordon

Stephanie Gray * Shafer Hall * Diana Hamilton * Hayley Heaton * Cathy Hong * Vanessa Hope

Dan Hoy * Lauren Ireland * Adeena Karasick * Basil King * Martha King * Noelle Kocot-Tomblin

Dorothea Lasky * Jeff Laughlin * Amy Lawless * Walter K. Lew * Tan Lin * Tao Lin * Filip Marinovich

Justin Marks * Chris Martin * Tracey McTague * Stephen Paul Miller * Feliz Molina

Ryan Murphy * Elinor Nauen * Uche Nduka * Urayoan Noel * Akilah Oliver * Geoffrey Olsen

Jean-Paul Pecqueur * Greg Purcell * Elizabeth Reddin * Jerome Sala * Tom Savage

David Sewell * David Shapiro * Kimberly Ann Southwick Eleni Stecopoulos * Christina Strong

Mathias Svalina * Jeremy James Thompson * Susie Timmons * Rodrigo Toscano

Nicole Wallace * Damian Weber * Max Winter * Sara Wintz * Erica Wright

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)

↑ Index

324. Doug Holder
Poet Hugh Fox : Still Way, Way Off the Road
Fri 26 Dec 2008

Poet Hugh Fox: Way, Way Off The Road

In 2006 the Ibbetson Street Press published a controversial memoir of the small press: “Way, Way Off the Road” by the legendary poet, critic and translator Hugh Fox. The memoir was indeed controversial, and we got more than a few angry calls from small press figures of the 60’s and 70’s who felt Fox’s portrayal of them was less than accurate. The book covered Fox’s involvement with COSMEP, (the seminal small press organization,) his encounters with Charles Bukowski, Lyn Lifshin, Harry Smith, Len Fulton, AD Winans, and many of the other players in the small press movement. In a recent editorial in The Small Press Review Len Fulton wrote of Hugh Fox:

“For Hugh Fox the reach must be always for the grasp to be ever. He takes memory, mixes it with imagination, imagery, and an almost Teutonic lexical arsenal, and flings into the cosmos for the delectation of anyone who cares to listen.

There is enough Fox to go around, and little on this planet he has missed in his fifty-odd years of publishing. Richard Kostelanetz calls him “ the most distinguished man of “ alternative letters of our time….”

I do have limited editions of the memoir for sale… a collector’s item. The book retails at 15 dollars with four dollars for shipping and handling. (lbbetson Street Press 25 School St. Somerville, Mass. 02143) The book was designed and edited by Steve Glines.

--------- Doug Holder/ Ibbetson St. Press

Also for you Fox fans The World Audience Press http://worldaudience.org has released a 550-page “Collected Poetry of Hugh Fox: 1996-2007”.

↑ Index

325. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Fri 26 Dec 2008

Agreed. My disagreement is with the tactics, not the sentiment behind them.

On Dec 23, 2008, at 7:06 PM, Ruth Lepson wrote:

> people who are angry at bigots aren't bigots!
>
> On 12/22/08 5:43 PM, "Roy Exley" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Jason,
>
> What a relief, many thanks for your message condemning the us v.themism
> Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you thinking that their
> bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren
> himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated
> and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
> And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward > to an end of this tiresome conversation.
>
> On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the > Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts > the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his > politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to > questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, > there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it > are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

>
> On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:
>
> This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in > sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The > Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to > Human existence."
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my
> church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
> "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok
> for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's
> pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the > failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to > overcome with Gay/Straight.
>
> I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the

Left AND
the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to
Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick
Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH

time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture,
but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I

have
known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL
LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines &
>
> guidelines &
>
> welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

326. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Fri 26 Dec 2008

Actually, i'd be willing to bet that Warren is in fact a racist bigot. I think he's just too good a politician to air those particular views in public. On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:15 PM, laura hinton wrote:

> I just don't think that Obama is mirroring "openness for dialogue" by selecting a "pastor" to represent his "religious views" -- in the huge public forum that is the American presidential inauguration -- who has condemned the basic humanity of a certain group of people, based on their sexuality. This to me is FAKE OPENNESS. Because it symbolically leaves a huge segment of the people of this society OUTSIDE the debate.

Some eyes seem glazed by the Obama honeymoon. I love the guy, too. But I see what I see -- no fairy dust. He made a mistake.

OK, he is being a Politician: the Warren choice is a cynical appeal to the Sarah Palin crowd on inauguration day. That happens not to be OK with me. Call it "culture wars" and dismiss my views. (I hear that all in time, as a feminist academic not to mention as a poet. This kind of labeling is just another way of categorizing my view, and others' who share it: that everyone, actually, should be allowed inside the debates.)

Now I'm not against Obama inviting Warren to the White House for a chat. Hey, he can even have the Warrens -- assuming this guy, Rick Warren, who I'd never heard of before last week, plays the role of Victorian patriarch with his probable brood and Wife -- for a lovely dinner. Get the china out, Michelle. (She'll have to play Wife, too, of course.) I think Nancy Reagan left some nice china in the White House cupboards (if the Clintons didn't chip it too badly, or W didn't kick it with his boots).

But -- and I would say this to President-elect Obama: don't make this particular "pastor" stand for the "American pastor" (I heard this on the News Hour), giving the signal that Gay bashing is back in. CA Conrad's point is so true: Obama would have never selected a racist bigot to stand on that stage with him. Never.

Happy Hanukkah and Merry Christmas and thanks for the stimulating dialogue.
Laura Hinton

On Mon, Dec 22, 2008 at 5:43 PM, Roy Exley
<[redacted]> wrote:

Jason,

What a relief, many thanks for your message condemning the us v.themism
Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you thinking that their bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward to an end of this tiresome conversation.

On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:

Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting
it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it
are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in

> sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The > Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression.
> Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to > Human existence."
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my
> church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
> "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok
> for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's
> pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the > failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to > overcome with Gay/Straight.
>
> I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND
> the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next > eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.
>
> Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very > important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous
> and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two > Spirit, begins to communicate this.
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!

American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know? You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right

now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines &
>
> guidelines
>
> welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

327. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Fri 26 Dec 2008

---

this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views, have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was. Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."

this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for being.

On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:48 PM, Corey Frost wrote:

> To Mr. Obama
>
> Inviting Rick Warren to your inauguration was a horrible idea. His anti-gay-rights and anti-women, anti-choice ideas are an embarassment to a country that pretends to stand for liberty and equality, and by giving him this platform you are recognizing him above all other clergy in the country, many of whom are much more genuinely dedicated to the ideals of love and acceptance that your religion supposedly advocates. I am an atheist myself and I am put off by any sort of religious benediction at important state events, but I understand the symbolic significance of this for many people.

> There are (roughly) two ways your decision could be interpreted: either you mostly agree with Warren and you feel he is worthy of this distinction, or else you disagree with him but feel that the inauguration should represent the different prominent ideologies of the populace, and this is your way of fostering "dialogue." I certainly hope, and have some reason to think, that the former isn't true, so I am assuming it's the latter. I like the idea of dialogue, openness, and inclusion, but I think your invitation to Warren does not serve this ideal. It actually prevents dialogue by exclusively privileging someone who is not open and not inclusive.
>
> I hope you will take steps to fix this mistake. Univiting Rick Warren would be great, but I recognize that you are in politics and for political reasons you may not see this as an option. Therefore I strongly urge you to invite other clergy to take part who do not share Warren's close-minded, bigoted stances. If dialogue is what you want, then allow differing views. If you were to invite Gene Robinson, for example, the first openly gay bishop, then I could believe that your invitation to a homophobic right-wing evangelist was more than just a cheap bid for political support. Ask them to share the stage, and then we'll see who is really committed to dialogue.
>
> welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

328. George Bowering
Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Fri 26 Dec 2008

That's automatic?
I don't think so.
I think that a bigot can be angry at bigots.
For example, there were sexist anti-capitalists.

gb

On Dec 23, 2008, at 7:06 PM, Ruth Lepson wrote:

> people who are angry at bigots aren't bigots!
>
> On 12/22/08 5:43 PM, "Roy Exley" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Jason,

What a relief, many thanks for your message condemning the us v.themism
Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you thinking that their bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward to an end of this tiresome conversation.

On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:

Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting
it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step beyond it
are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.

On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:

This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression.
Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."

--- Obododimma Oha.

On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
wrote:

Pastor Rick Warren said:

"Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said.
"Now he's invited me."

So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok
for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

*Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been,
not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.*

*Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr.
Obama
promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.*

*It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture,
but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr.
Obama
made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I
have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision
of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.*

*If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning
HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You
have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right
now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to* tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines &
>
> guidelines &
>
> welcome.html

George Cletis Bowering
Slow to anger. Well, slow about everything.

↑ Index

329. George Bowering
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Fri 26 Dec 2008

No, I am saying that if you are screaming all the time, screams get less useful than smart objections.

gb

On Dec 23, 2008, at 8:23 PM, Charles Alexander wrote:

> George, are you now becoming a defender of prescriptive grammar?
> Would you have us all speak in gentle tones, possibly not dare to > eat a peach, and certainly not spell SPACE large because it comes > large here, large and without mercy.
>
> (ah but I think I've exceeded my posts today, and this one will die > in that SPACE across which we meet)
>
> charles
>
> charles alexander
> chax press
> [redacted]
> 411 N 7th ave, suite 103
> tucson arizona 85705
> [redacted]

On Dec 23, 2008, at 6:01 PM, George Bowering wrote:

Why not just all upper case letters?

On Dec 22, 2008, at 2:02 PM, CA Conrad wrote:

A few people wrote personal notes to me saying that they're tired of the culture wars.

Um, this isn't some Queer Theory Class to me, THIS IS MY LIFE, and I'm not the type of fag who gets pushed around, I PUSH BACK, which is why
I take stands. Which is why I'm appealing to Elizabeth Alexander's higher self. It must be VERY DIFFICULT to be invited to do such a reading, such a historical reading. Well, it would be difficult for me.

One person wrote me asking me to take "the higher road like Gandhi." Um, my protest suggestions were ALL nonviolent, I mean, I didn't ask Elizabeth to STAB someone at the microphone. Geeze, it's so ridiculous reading such e-mails.

AND I I'M JUST GOING TO SAY IT:
If Obama were white, and chose a pastor who was openly racist NO ONE would question my anger. Well, unless you were also racist, but you know exactly what I'm saying here. Queer rights may keep taking a back seat as long as I'm alive, but that just means I'll go to the grave YELLING!

CAConrad
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

welcome.html

George Harry Bowering
Likes towns with -ver- in them.

welcome.html

welcome.html

George Z. Bowering
Master of Arghs.

↑ Index

330. Carol Novack
Mad Hatters' Review is BACK!
Fri 26 Dec 2008

Dear Friends of the Mad Hatters:

After an assault by a felonious hacker, we're back, with a new host! Please feel free to wander through our pages without fear of malicious scripts invading your computer. Enjoy! And thanks for your patience!

Carol Novack, Publisher

Note: I'm still uploading previous issues (and will be for several days), but our current issue is up, and you may rest assured the website is clean and safe for you to visit! -- Shirley Harshenin, Webmaestress

Mad Hatters' Review - Edgy and Enlightened Literature, Art and Music in the Age of Dementia
http://www.madhattersreview.com

KEEP THE MAD HATTERS ALIVE! MAKE A TAX DEDUCTIBLE CONTRIBUTION HERE:
https://www.fracturedatlas.org/site/contribute/donate/580

<http://webdelsol.com/PortalDelSol/pds-interview-mhr.htm>

Change email address / Leave mailing list<http://ymlp51.com/u.php?YMLPID=gueqmuygsguwmgumu> Hosting by YourMailingListProvider <http://www.ymlp51.com>

↑ Index

331. Peter Ciccariello
yet again this past has passed
Sat 27 Dec 2008

---

yet again this past has passed <http://ciccariello.viewbook.com/past>

- Peter Ciccariello
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

332. David-Baptiste Chirot

Forrest Gander's First Novel, RIP Harold Pinter & Elizabeth Alexander: The Intersection of Poetry & Politics (NY Times)

Sat 27 Dec 2008

BOOKS

| December 25, 2008

The Intersection of Poetry and Politics

By DWIGHT GARNER

As America's fourth inaugural poet, Elizabeth Alexander will have an outsize platform for her elliptical work.
http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/25/books/25poet.html?emc=eta1

Includes links to Ms Alexander's Web Site & poems

Harold Pinter Playwright of the Pause
http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/26/theater/26pinter.html?adxnnl=1&8bu=&emc=bub2&adxnnlx=1230354846-jzQs+XNtxGUwKfZqLKSsbQ

Review of Forrest Gander's first novel
http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/21/books/review/Winterson-t.html?ref=review

_____
Send e-mail faster without improving your typing skills.
http://windowslive.com/online/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_speed_122008

↑ Index

333. Gwyn McVay

Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory

Sat 27 Dec 2008

On Thu, Dec 25, 2008 at 11:25 AM, John Cunningham <[redacted]
> wrote:

> For those of you who are speaking out against the body being used > in commerce, why are you not speaking out against football or hockey where > male bodies are being used in commerce? When you consider the damage that is > done to the male body during that contact sport and the lingering effects of > it in terms of permanent injury and disability such as arthritis and other > diseases, isn't this just as bad? Or is it that one affects women whereas > the other affects men?

Omigod, you're so right. I hurt in my anterior cruciate ligaments for all of those men FORCED or DECEIVED into collegiate and professional sports every year; BEATEN if they try to leave; often denied any other employment options in the case of being transgendered; not allowed to keep a PENNY of their earnings... oh wait.

Gwyn "Also, This Is a False Binary, Because Prostitution Affects All Genders, And Not Just Adults" McVay

↑ Index

334. Stephen Baraban
Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sat 27 Dec 2008

I hope Elizabeth Alexander makes a statement for gay rights at the inaugeration;

but has anybody noticed that, aside from announcement of deaths, magazines, and books, the content on this list has at long last reached 100% focus on debate of political/symbolic/moral issues--the brothel thread, the inaugeration, what can/shd we expect of Obama,

never aesthetics--

I'm not sure exactly what to make of this. Just saying.

--- On Fri, 12/26/08, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Friday, December 26, 2008, 7:00 PM
> Actually, i'd be willing to bet that Warren is in fact a > racist bigot. I think he's just too good a politician to > air those particular views in public.
> On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:15 PM, laura hinton wrote:
>
> I just don't think that Obama is mirroring
> "openness for dialogue" by > selecting a "pastor" to represent his
> "religious views" -- in the huge > public forum that is the American presidential > inauguration -- who has > condemned the basic humanity of a certain group of > people, based on their > sexuality. This to me is FAKE OPENNESS. Because it > symbolically leaves a > huge segment of the people of this society OUTSIDE the debate.

Some eyes seem glazed by the Obama honeymoon. I love the guy, too. But I see what I see -- no fairy dust. He made a mistake.

OK, he is being a Politician: the Warren choice is a cynical appeal to the Sarah Palin crowd on inauguration day. That happens not to be OK with me.
Call it "culture wars" and dismiss my views.
(I hear that all in time, as a feminist academic not to mention as a poet. This kind of labeling is just another way of categorizing my view, and others' who share it: that everyone, actually, should be allowed inside the debates.)

Now I'm not against Obama inviting Warren to the White House for a chat.
Hey, he can even have the Warrens -- assuming this guy, Rick Warren, who I'd never heard of before last week, plays the role of Victorian patriarch with his probable brood and Wife -- for a lovely dinner.
Get the china out,
Michelle. (She'll have to play Wife, too, of course.) I think Nancy Reagan left some nice china in the White House cupboards (if the Clintons didn't chip it too badly, or W didn't kick it with his boots).

But -- and I would say this to President-elect Obama: don't make this particular "pastor" stand for the "American pastor" (I heard this on the News Hour), giving the signal that Gay bashing is back in. CA Conrad's point is so true: Obama would have never selected a racist bigot to stand on that stage with him. Never.

Happy Hanukkah and Merry Christmas and thanks for the stimulating dialogue.
Laura Hinton

> On Mon, Dec 22, 2008 at 5:43 PM, Roy Exley
> <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Jason,
>
> What a relief, many thanks for your message
> condemning the us v.themism
> Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you
> thinking that their > bigotry is perhaps more strident and more > inflexible than that of Warren > himself! I too am tired of the culture war which > can only be exacerbated > and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the > middle way!
> And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages > me also. I look forward
> to an end of this tiresome conversation.
>
> On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush"
> <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Indeed. There has been something in the knee
> jerk condemnation of the > Rick Warren selection that has been bugging
> me, and I think this puts
> the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren
> and I disagree with his > politics. But that's hardly a new thing
> for me when it comes to > questions of preachers on the national stage.
> If I had my druthers,
> there'd be no prayers at all and the > ceremony would be entirely > secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing > that he was a religious > third way centrist and not expecting him to be
> the great progressive > hope that clearly many of my friends and > allies on the left thought > he would be. I do know that I'm tired of > us vs them and I'm tired of > the culture war. it's not my fight and I > don't want to keep fighting
> it and i find moves like this one that are

> attempts to step beyond it
> are more compelling to me than the sort of > nonsense that 60s style
> protest leftism calls for. That movement > beyond is the thing that I > have always found compelling about Obama and I
> remain encouraged to > see where he will go with it.
>
> On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha
> wrote:
>
> This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism
> works in and for
> opposites, not in > sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to > William Blake for saying,
> in The > Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without
> Contraries is no progression.
> Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and > Energy, Love and Hate, are > necessary to > Human existence."
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul > Nelson <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous
> heat for inviting Barack Obama to my > church because some of his views
> don't agree (with mine)," he said.
> "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to > Pastor Warren's parishioners,
> but not ok
> for Warren to speak at the > Inauguration? Another example of how > Obama's
> pragmatism (consciousness) goes way > beyond left vs. right, way
> beyond the

failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND
the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two
Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad
<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008
12:38:24 PM

Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent.

The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his
inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been,
not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics
and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning
this letter to you into a lecture,
but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched
homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision
of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize

that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No
Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama
isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him
how we feel then how will he know?
You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this
is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr.
Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you
it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No,
and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press,
[redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics &
Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

not accept all posts. Check http://epc.buffalo.edu/poetics/
welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

accept all posts. Check
guidelines &

accept all posts. Check guidelines

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

335. Jennifer Karmin

Chicago festival: When Does It or You Begin? (Memory as Innovation)

Sun 28 Dec 2008

WHEN DOES IT OR YOU BEGIN (MEMORY AS INNOVATION)
Festival of Writing, Performance, & Video

JANUARY 9 â€“ FEBRUARY 1, 2009 Curated by Amina Cain & Jennifer Karmin at Links Hall
3435 N. Sheffield Avenue
Chicago, IL

NEW LINEUP OF ARTISTS EACH NIGHT
8pm Friday & Saturday 7pm Sunday
tickets $12
$10 students, seniors, & working artists/writers full schedule online http://www.linkshall.org/09-pp-jan.shtml

WEEK ONE January 9-11
~~~
~~~

January 22 open house event with Judith Goldman

WEEK THREE January 23-25
~~~
~~~

> grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."
>
> this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for being.

↑ Index

337. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Ref.: Poloroid Photography
Sun 28 Dec 2008

The New York Times today has an interesting article on poloroid photography: http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/28/weekinreview/28kimmelman.html?hp

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Dec 27, 2008 at 12:20 AM, David-Baptiste Chirot <
[redacted]> wrote:

> BOOKS
>
> | December 25, 2008
>
> The Intersection of Poetry and Politics
>
> By DWIGHT GARNER
>
> As America's fourth inaugural poet, Elizabeth Alexander will have an outsize platform for her elliptical work.
> http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/25/books/25poet.html?emc=eta1

> Includes links to Ms Alexander's Web Site & poems
>
> Harold Pinter Playwright of the Pause
>
> http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/26/theater/26pinter.html?adxnnl=1&8bu=&emc=bub2&adxnnlx=1230354846-jzQs+XNtxGUwKfZqLKSsbQ
>
> Review of Forrest Gander's first novel
> http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/21/books/review/Winterson-t.html?ref=review
>
> ---
> Send e-mail faster without improving your typing skills.
>
> http://windowslive.com/online/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_speed_122008

↑ Index

338. joeharrington
Issue 1/Verzion 2
Sun 28 Dec 2008

CALL FOR REMISSIONS: VERZION TWO:

Remember Issue 1 - that PDF on the For Godot blog site that had computer-generated poems attributed to about 4,000 poets who had nothing to do with them?

Well, some of the people to whom those names are legally attached got pretty upset about it, and others smiled. In any case, it seemed to me like there's a lot of raw material there that's going unused and unrecycled. Hence, VERZION TWO.

If you are one of the names that appeared in that scurrilous publication, and if you weren't completely satisfied with the poem that appeared above it, here's your chance to do better - or at least different.

Rewrite, revise, recycle, scramble or cannibalize â€œyourâ€ poem from Issue 1. Send the original, along with your revision to:

joeharrington [at] sunflower [dot] com and I'll put it up (http://verziontwo.blogspot.com). Feel free to include a statement about what you liked or disliked in the original and what you did about it.

Thanks
Joe Harrington

↑ Index

339. Daniel Godston
$2 million donation for Poets & Writers
Sun 28 Dec 2008

New York, NY-- Poets & Writers has received the largest donation in its 38-year history. The Liana Foundation (established by the John and Susan Jackson Family) will donate $2 million to endow The Jackson Poetry Prize. The annual $50,000 prize, which was initiated in 2007, honors an American poet of exceptional talent who has published at least one book of recognized literary merit but has not yet received major national acclaim. The award is designed to provide what all poets need -- time and the encouragement to write.

"Receiving this generous gift during such a challenging time reminds us of the importance of literature," said Elliot Figman, Executive Director of Poets & Writers.

Since its founding in 1970, the mission of Poets & Writers has been to foster the professional development of creative writers, to promote communication throughout the U.S. literary community, and to help create an environment in which literature can be appreciated by the widest possible public. Poets & Writers accomplishes this by publishing /Poets & Writers Magazine/, producing Poets & Writers Online, offering publishing information and an online Directory of Writers, introducing emerging writers outside of New York to the New York City literary community, and supporting writers participating in public literary events through the Readings/Workshops program.

http://www.pw.org/about-us/poets_amp_writers_receives_2_million_donation_sup port_prize_poets

↑ Index

340. Gareth Farmer
Zukofsky
Sun 28 Dec 2008

Dear All

For your information, interest and excitement induction please see below:

"A"-24: A Louis Zukofsky Seminar and Performance

The Centre for Modernist Studies at the University of Sussex presents the British premiere of Louis and Celia Zukofsky's "A"-24, performed by Sean Bonney, Ken Edwards, Daniel Kane and Francesca Beasley with harpsichord by Kerry Yong.

Sarah-Jane Barnes plays violin pieces by Janequin and Bach

The seminar will include papers by Harry Gilonis, Jeff Hilson, Mark Scroggins, Jeffrey Twitchell-Waas and Tim Woods.

£10/£5. Places are limited, to reserve a place email Richard Parker at [redacted]

12.30, 23 January 2009
The Meeting House
University of Sussex
Falmer, East Sussex

Win John Lewis vouchers with BigSnapSearch.com Search now<http://clk.atdmt.com/UKM/go/117442309/direct/01/>

↑ Index

341. Mark Weiss
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Sun 28 Dec 2008

Which is to say that Obama is trying to be all things to all people? Must be that sainthood thing.

At 07:03 PM 12/26/2008, you wrote:
>this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other >clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views, >have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was.
>Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's >not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating >grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."
>
>this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is >much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for >being.
>
>
>On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:48 PM, Corey Frost wrote:
>
>>To Mr. Obama
>>
>>Inviting Rick Warren to your inauguration was a horrible idea. His >>anti-gay-rights and anti-women, anti-choice ideas are an >>embarassment to a country that pretends to stand for liberty and >>equality, and by giving him this platform you are recognizing him >>above all other clergy in the country, many of whom are much more >>genuinely dedicated to the ideals of love and acceptance that your >>religion supposedly advocates. I am an atheist myself and I am put >>off by any sort of religious benediction at important state events, >>but I understand the symbolic significance of this for many people.

>>
>>There are (roughly) two ways your decision could be interpreted:
>>either you mostly agree with Warren and you feel he is worthy of >>this distinction, or else you disagree with him but feel that the >>inauguration should represent the different prominent ideologies of >>the populace, and this is your way of fostering "dialogue." I >>certainly hope, and have some reason to think, that the former >>isn't true, so I am assuming it's the latter. I like the idea of >>dialogue, openness, and inclusion, but I think your invitation to >>Warren does not serve this ideal. It actually prevents dialogue by >>exclusively privileging someone who is not open and not inclusive.
>>
>>I hope you will take steps to fix this mistake. Univiting Rick >>Warren would be great, but I recognize that you are in politics and >>for political reasons you may not see this as an option. Therefore >>I strongly urge you to invite other clergy to take part who do not >>share Warren's close-minded, bigoted stances. If dialogue is what >>you want, then allow differing views. If you were to invite Gene >>Robinson, for example, the first openly gay bishop, then I could >>believe that your invitation to a homophobic right-wing evangelist >>was more than just a cheap bid for political support. Ask them to >>share the stage, and then we'll see who is really committed to >>dialogue.
>>
>
>Jason Quackenbush
>[redacted]
>

↑ Index

342. Halvard Johnson
Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Sun 28 Dec 2008

Almost makes you want to post a poem, eh? Not that I'd do anything so rash.

Hal

"What do I know of man's destiny? I could tell you more about radishes."
            --Samuel Beckett

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/index.html
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
http://home.earthlink.net/~halvard/vidalocabooks.html

On Dec 27, 2008, at 12:06 PM, Stephen Baraban wrote:

> I hope Elizabeth Alexander makes a statement for gay rights at the inaugeration;
>
> but has anybody noticed that, aside from announcement of deaths, magazines, and books, the content on this list has at long last reached 100% focus on debate of political/symbolic/moral issues--the brothel thread, the inaugeration, what can/shd we expect of Obama,
>
> never aesthetics--
>
> I'm not sure exactly what to make of this. Just saying.
>
> --- On Fri, 12/26/08, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Friday, December 26, 2008, 7:00 PM
> Actually, i'd be willing to bet that Warren is in fact a racist bigot. I think he's just too good a politician to air those particular views in public.
> On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:15 PM, laura hinton wrote:
>
> I just don't think that Obama is mirroring "openness for dialogue" by selecting a "pastor" to represent his "religious views" -- in the huge public forum that is the American presidential inauguration -- who has condemned the basic humanity of a certain group of

people, based on their
sexuality. This to me is FAKE OPENNESS. Because it symbolically leaves a huge segment of the people of this society OUTSIDE the debate.

Some eyes seem glazed by the Obama honeymoon. I love the guy, too. But I see what I see -- no fairy dust. He made a mistake.

OK, he is being a Politician: the Warren choice is a cynical appeal to the Sarah Palin crowd on inauguration day. That happens not to be OK with me.
Call it "culture wars" and dismiss my views.
(I hear that all in time, as a feminist academic not to mention as a poet. This kind of labeling is just another way of categorizing my view, and others' who share it: that everyone, actually, should be allowed inside the debates.)

Now I'm not against Obama inviting Warren to the White House for a chat.
Hey, he can even have the Warrens -- assuming this guy, Rick Warren, who I'd never heard of before last week, plays the role of Victorian patriarch with his probable brood and Wife -- for a lovely dinner.
Get the china out,
Michelle. (She'll have to play Wife, too, of course.) I think Nancy Reagan left some nice china in the White House cupboards (if the Clintons didn't chip it too badly, or W didn't kick it with his boots).

But -- and I would say this to President-elect Obama:
don't make this particular "pastor" stand for the
"American pastor" (I heard this on the News Hour), giving the signal that Gay bashing is back in. CA Conrad's point is so true: Obama would have never selected a racist bigot to stand on that stage with him. Never.

Happy Hanukkah and Merry Christmas and thanks for the stimulating dialogue.
Laura Hinton

On Mon, Dec 22, 2008 at 5:43 PM, Roy Exley
<[redacted]> wrote:

Jason,

What a relief, many thanks for your message
condemning the us v.themism
Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you
thinking that their bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward
to an end of this tiresome conversation.

On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush"
<[redacted]> wrote:

Indeed. There has been something in the knee
jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging
me, and I think this puts
the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren
and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing
for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage.
If I had my druthers,
there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be
the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought
he would be. I do know that I'm tired of > us vs them and I'm tired of > the culture war. it's not my fight and I > don't want to keep fighting

> it and i find moves like this one that are
> attempts to step beyond it
> are more compelling to me than the sort of > nonsense that 60s style
> protest leftism calls for. That movement
> beyond is the thing that I > have always found compelling about Obama and I
> remain encouraged to > see where he will go with it.
>
> On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha
> wrote:
>
> This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism
> works in and for
> opposites, not in > sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to > William Blake for saying,
> in The > Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without
> Contraries is no progression.
> Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and > Energy, Love and Hate, are > necessary to > Human existence."
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul > Nelson <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous
> heat for inviting Barack Obama to my > church because some of his views
> don't agree (with mine)," he said.
> "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to > Pastor Warren's parishioners,
> but not ok
> for Warren to speak at the > Inauguration? Another example of how

Obama's
pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way
beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND
the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during
the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people
have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two
Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad

<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent.

The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges
with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over
into the celebration of his
inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been,
not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's
inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics
and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the
weakness of Obama is immediately
clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when
they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning
this letter to you into a lecture,
but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched

homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision
of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize
that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No
Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama
isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him
how we feel then how will he know?
You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right
now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him
that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this
is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr.
Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you
it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No,
and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press,
[redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics &
Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict
Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

not accept all posts. Check
http://epc.buffalo.edu/poetics/
welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

accept all posts. Check
guidelines &

accept all posts. Check guidelines

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

343. Ryan Daley
Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Mon 29 Dec 2008

Aesthetics is much more offensive.

On Sat, Dec 27, 2008 at 1:06 PM, Stephen Baraban
<[redacted]>wrote:

> I hope Elizabeth Alexander makes a statement for gay rights at the inaugeration;
>
> but has anybody noticed that, aside from announcement of deaths, magazines, and books, the content on this list has at long last reached 100% focus on debate of political/symbolic/moral issues--the brothel thread, the inaugeration, what can/shd we expect of Obama,
>
> never aesthetics--
>
> I'm not sure exactly what to make of this. Just saying.
>
> --- On Fri, 12/26/08, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Friday, December 26, 2008, 7:00 PM
> Actually, i'd be willing to bet that Warren is in fact a > racist bigot. I think he's just too good a politician to > air those particular views in public.
> On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:15 PM, laura hinton wrote:
>
> I just don't think that Obama is mirroring
> "openness for dialogue" by > selecting a "pastor" to represent his
> "religious views" -- in the huge > public forum that is the American presidential > inauguration -- who has > condemned the basic humanity of a certain group of > people, based on their
> sexuality. This to me is FAKE OPENNESS. Because it
> symbolically leaves a huge segment of the people of this society OUTSIDE the debate.

Some eyes seem glazed by the Obama honeymoon. I love the guy, too. But I see what I see -- no fairy dust. He made a mistake.

OK, he is being a Politician: the Warren choice is a cynical appeal to the Sarah Palin crowd on inauguration day. That happens not to be OK with me.
Call it "culture wars" and dismiss my views.
(I hear that all in time, as a feminist academic not to mention as a poet. This kind of labeling is just another way of categorizing my view, and others' who share it: that everyone, actually, should be allowed inside the debates.)

Now I'm not against Obama inviting Warren to the White House for a chat.
Hey, he can even have the Warrens -- assuming this guy, Rick Warren, who I'd never heard of before last week, plays the role of Victorian patriarch with his probable brood and Wife -- for a lovely dinner.
Get the china out,
Michelle. (She'll have to play Wife, too, of course.) I think Nancy Reagan left some nice china in the White House cupboards (if the Clintons didn't chip it too badly, or W didn't kick it with his boots).

But -- and I would say this to President-elect Obama: don't make this particular "pastor" stand for the
"American pastor" (I heard this on the News Hour), giving the signal that Gay bashing is back in. CA Conrad's point is so true: Obama would have never selected a racist bigot to stand on that stage with him. Never.

Happy Hanukkah and Merry Christmas and thanks for the stimulating dialogue.
Laura Hinton

On Mon, Dec 22, 2008 at 5:43 PM, Roy Exley
<[redacted]> wrote:

Jason,

What a relief, many thanks for your message
condemning the us v.themism
Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you
thinking that their bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward
to an end of this tiresome conversation.

On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush"
<[redacted]> wrote:

Indeed. There has been something in the knee
jerk condemnation of the Rick Warren selection that has been bugging
me, and I think this puts
the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren
and I disagree with his politics. But that's hardly a new thing
for me when it comes to questions of preachers on the national stage.
If I had my druthers,
there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious third way centrist and not expecting him to be
the great progressive hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting

> it and i find moves like this one that are
> attempts to step beyond it
> are more compelling to me than the sort of > nonsense that 60s style
> protest leftism calls for. That movement
> beyond is the thing that I > have always found compelling about Obama and I
> remain encouraged to > see where he will go with it.
>
> On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha
> wrote:
>
> This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism
> works in and for
> opposites, not in > sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to > William Blake for saying,
> in The > Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without
> Contraries is no progression.
> Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and > Energy, Love and Hate, are > necessary to > Human existence."
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul > Nelson <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous
> heat for inviting Barack Obama to my > church because some of his views
> don't agree (with mine)," he said.
> "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to > Pastor Warren's parishioners,
> but not ok
> for Warren to speak at the > Inauguration? Another example of how > Obama's
> pragmatism (consciousness) goes way
> beyond left vs. right, way

beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.

I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND
the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during
the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.

Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people
have a very important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two
Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad
<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008

12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent.

The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges
with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over
into the celebration of his
inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been,
not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's
inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics
and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the
weakness of Obama is immediately
clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when
they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning
this letter to you into a lecture,
but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched
homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision

of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize
that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No
Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama
isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him
how we feel then how will he know?
You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right
now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him
that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this
is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr.
Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you
it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No,
and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press,
[redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

guidelines

--
Obododimma Oha
Senior Lecturer in Stylistics &
Semiotics
Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict
Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted].

not accept all posts. Check
http://epc.buffalo.edu/poetics/
welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

accept all posts. Check
guidelines &

accept all posts. Check guidelines

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

344. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Mon 29 Dec 2008

if that's how you want to read it, then that's your option.

my take on this particular lazy machine is that it is part of the move towards inclusiveness that Obama has been talking about since he emerged on the national stage.

in the end, it's a dumb preacher saying a prayer at a public event though. if anything all of this debate about it is just overcharging a minor occurrence with excess meaning.

On Dec 28, 2008, at 1:09 PM, Mark Weiss wrote:

> Which is to say that Obama is trying to be all things to all people? Must be that sainthood thing.
>
> At 07:03 PM 12/26/2008, you wrote:
> this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views, have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was. Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."
>
> this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for being.
>
> On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:48 PM, Corey Frost wrote:
>
> To Mr. Obama
>
> Inviting Rick Warren to your inauguration was a horrible idea. His anti-gay-rights and anti-women, anti-choice ideas are an embarassment to a country that pretends to stand for liberty and equality, and by giving him this platform you are recognizing him above all other clergy in the country, many of whom are much more genuinely dedicated to the ideals of love and acceptance that your religion supposedly advocates. I am an atheist myself and I am put off by any sort of religious benediction at important state events, but I understand the symbolic significance of this for many people.

> There are (roughly) two ways your decision could be interpreted: either you mostly agree with Warren and you feel he is worthy of this distinction, or else you disagree with him but feel that the inauguration should represent the different prominent ideologies of the populace, and this is your way of fostering "dialogue." I certainly hope, and have some reason to think, that the former isn't true, so I am assuming it's the latter. I like the idea of dialogue, openness, and inclusion, but I think your invitation to Warren does not serve this ideal. It actually prevents dialogue by exclusively privileging someone who is not open and not inclusive.
>
> I hope you will take steps to fix this mistake. Univiting Rick Warren would be great, but I recognize that you are in politics and for political reasons you may not see this as an option. Therefore I strongly urge you to invite other clergy to take part who do not share Warren's close-minded, bigoted stances. If dialogue is what you want, then allow differing views. If you were to invite Gene Robinson, for example, the first openly gay bishop, then I could believe that your invitation to a homophobic right-wing evangelist was more than just a cheap bid for political support. Ask them to share the stage, and then we'll see who is really committed to dialogue.
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

345. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Mon 29 Dec 2008

---

rick warren is ridiculous and anybody who finds him scary needs a reality check. there are scary hatemongers out there. people who advocate physical violence, people who think stoning gays and lesbians in the public square is what oughta be done. by virtue of his own desire to be a famous public religious leader, Rick Warren is entirely nonscary and to my knowledge is a more moderate anti-gay than that. he's not a monster, he's just an idiot, as are the people who look to him for spiritual counsel.

and yes, he is just one voice of many across a spectrum. and more importantly he represents the beliefs of a significant swath of the american people. the way people are talking about this it's almost like the obama folks picked warren BECAUSE he was a misogynistic homophobe. which is ridiculous. Clearly they picked him because he is a prominent conservative christian leader. I will give anybody who can find me five prominent conservative christian pastors who support gay marriage, the rights of gays to adopt, are prochoice, and support easy access to birth control 5 US dollars. I know i'm not gonna have to give that money to anybody because by definition no conservative christian pastors believe any of those things because they are CONSERVATIVE shristian pastors.

The reason I am really kind of annoyed at all of this is precisely that. Rick Warren does not represent a fringe position, he is a mainline conservative. Ever since Obama appeared on the national stage he has been talking about breaking down the lines between liberal and conservative, and talking about listening to the other side and being pragmatic about focussing on those areas where interests over lap as a way to build dialog that can then help us movve towards resoltion on morecontentious issues. he has alwasy indicated that he was going to have a seat at the table for conservatives just as there would be one for liberals. well, guess what, conservatives are bigots and homophobes and are anti-choice misogynists. It's what makes them conservatives. if conservatives are going to be involved in the process, part of the dialog, or whatever you want to call it, that means there are going to be figures on the national stage who are taking part in trying to form policy who will believe things that are reprehensibile. it's the ugly underneath of Thrid Way politics and anybody who didn't think this sort of thing was coming in an Obama administration was just naive. but i'd get used to it, because this is not going to be the last time Obama gives an important job to someone whose opinions you don't like. this is what strategic progressivism and tactical pragmatism look like in concert. Which is to say, I think folks should condemn rick warren all they feel hthey need to, and I'm certainly never going to defend the guy, but I find it a little bit absurd that people are criticising obama for including peope like him when all he's talked about for the last two years on the campaign trail was his pragmatic politics of inclusiveness. What did you all who are feeling so angry and betrayed by warren delivering the invocation at the inauguration think he meant by that?

I personally don't give a damn about any of this since it's clearly all political tactics and as such within a pragmatic philosophy the only meaning that can be read into it is that meaning that we choose to give it. So i choose to disempower it. It's a gesture to religious nutbags and right wing goons in order show them that if they can behave themselves with a little etiquette then they don't have to sit at the kids table for the next four years. I don't see anything more than that going on with Rick Warren. Now, given that Rick Warren is from California, his anti gay sentiments are a ot higher profile than would be some other megachurch baptist from arkasas or kentucky or something like that. But again, you give conservatives a seat at the table, and you will getpeople who believe the things that rick warren believes

On Dec 27, 2008, at 11:08 PM, Corey Frost wrote:

> Jason, I didn't know that Joseph Lowery was also going to be speaking, so my > note to the president-elect wasn't as well-researched as it could have been,
> but I stand by my characterization of the Warren invitation as a distinction. I don't know how many clergy were invited, but only one of them > is giving the "invocation" — Rick Warren. You make it sound like he is just > one of many voices from across the spectrum, which isn't the case. He's been > chosen for a very high profile role, and it's an honor he doesn't deserve.
> In the past there have been as many as five clergy involved in a single > inauguration, and not just Christians either. Not that inviting a few more > religious folk, of whatever point of view, would make me happy, really—my > point was more that I'd like to see a gay man of the cloth (or lesbian of > the cloth) standing alongside Warren, in the hope of making him seem more > ridiculous than scary.
>
> On Fri, 26 Dec 2008 16:03:51 -0800, Jason Quackenbush
> <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other
> clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views,
> have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was.
> Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's > not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating > grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."
>
> this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is > much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for

> being.
>
> welcome.html

Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

↑ Index

346. Doug Holder
I Called Richard Yates On The Phone: Musings From A Minor Poet
Mon 29 Dec 2008

I Called Richard Yates On The Phone: Musings From A Minor Poet

By Doug Holder

An editor of a new literary magazine invited me to write an essay on the role of the “Post Modern” Poet. Well, I am not sure what “Post Modern” means, but I am a poet, however minor, and hell, for what it’s worth I should know what my own small role is and even the role of the much bigger fish in the poetry sea. But I think I want to expand that question. What is the role of the writer?

Now I am not known for the intellectual heft of my writing, be it community journalism or in my straightforward poetry. But I always have prided myself on tapping into my instincts, bringing my rather provincial personal experience to the universal. So as it happens I was thinking of the late novelist Richard Yates. I was reading Yates long before he became tremendously famous from the movie with Kate Winslet, etc… “Revolutionary Road.” (based on the novel of the same title.) That book for me, was electric, as thrilling as Kerouac’s “On the Road”, but in a very different way. Both Yates and Kerouac made me go out and hungrily acquire and read everything they ever penned. They made me think outside my self-made box, made me realize the power of language and literature, and they spurred me on to read even more. From Yates, I found other chroniclers of the broad lawns and narrow minds of the suburbs in post World War ll America, like John Cheever and John Updike. And later I moved through the whole canon of contemporary American authors like Philip Roth, Saul Bellow, James Baldwin, Henry Roth, to name a few.

Some people say a great poem can make you cut yourself while shaving, or make you miss your subway stop. Well, I say it makes you want to call the author on the phone.

You see, years ago I lived in a rooming house in the Back Bay of Boston, right near where Yates lived. I used to see him shamble down Mass. Ave. He looked like a homeless guy; stooped over, disheveled—a man in serious disrepair. I heard he drank at the “Crossroads’, a bar a few blocks from the hole-in-the-wall I lived in. I went in a few times but I missed him. I probably wouldn’t have had enough gumption to speak to him anyway. So I tried to call him on the phone several times, but I got no answer. But the point is that his writing affected me so much I wanted to call him; I wanted to connect, in a tangible way.

He was a man of my father’s generation. And since I am a Baby Boomer, and lived in the suburbs of New York City (as did the characters in Revolutionary Road), I knew the milieu he wrote about. My old man was a regular “Dashing Dan,” a guy who hopped the Long Island Railroad everyday to the advertising canyons of Madison Ave. So in this novel “Revolutionary Road” I had a window into the mind of a guy trapped in this “Rat Race.” I had lived on a “Revolutionary Road” in Rockville Center, NY with my parents’ requisite barbecues and the tipsy cocktail parties that my brother and I witnessed at the top of the living room stairs.

Here was a writer who was doing an exegesis of this milieu, the one I grew up in and did not question (at least when I was in the thick of it). This regimented existence, from birth, death and infinity, was tightly choreographed, and I thought that it was the only game in town.

And since, during this specific time, when I was living in the Back Bay, I happened to be a denizen of a down-at-the--heels rooming house—a bathroom down the hall affair, with other gone- to- seed residents, and playing at being an artist---well, I thought Yates really spoke to me.

I often read his books, and at times they left me reeling, even crying. Even though I never actually spoke to Yates, Yates spoke loudly to me. So what do I think is the role of the “Post Modern” Poet? I think I told you, pal.

↑ Index

347. mIEKAL aND
Re: Zukofsky
Mon 29 Dec 2008

I sure hope this is being videoed & put online....

~mIEKAL

On Dec 28, 2008, at 11:42 AM, Gareth Farmer wrote:

> Dear All
>
> For your information, interest and excitement induction please see below:

> "A"-24: A Louis Zukofsky Seminar and Performance
>
> The Centre for Modernist Studies at the University of Sussex presents the > British premiere of Louis and Celia Zukofsky's "A"-24, performed by Sean > Bonney, Ken Edwards, Daniel Kane and Francesca Beasley with harpsichord by > Kerry Yong.
>
> Sarah-Jane Barnes plays violin pieces by Janequin and Bach
>
> The seminar will include papers by Harry Gilonis, Jeff Hilson, Mark Scroggins, Jeffrey Twitchell-Waas and Tim Woods.
>
> £10/£5. Places are limited, to reserve a place email Richard Parker at > [redacted]
>
> 12.30, 23 January 2009
> The Meeting House
> University of Sussex
> Falmer, East Sussex

↑ Index

348. cris cheek
Re: inaugural poetics
Mon 29 Dec 2008

Hi,
CA u might send your a copy of your letter to the Presidential Inaugural Committee thru http://www.pic2009.org/content/home/remind them of their task:

PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURAL COMMITTEE

The Presidential Inaugural Committee, at the direction of President-elect Obama and Vice President-elect Biden, will organize an inclusive and accessible inauguration that reflects the new Administration's commitment to leadership that sets aside partisanship and unites the nation around our shared values and ideals.

remind them also of what Barack Obama said on LGBT rights in the Civil Rights section of his transition info on http://change.gov (it's in the "Your Seat at the Table" section on the right of the splash page) and point out the discrepancy;-)

Support for the LGBT Community

"While we have come a long way since the Stonewall riots in 1969, we still have a lot of work to do. Too often, the issue of LGBT rights is exploited by those seeking to divide us. But at its core, this issue is about who we are as Americans. It's about whether this nation is going to live up to its founding promise of equality by treating all its citizens with dignity and respect."

-- Barack Obama, June 1, 2007

cris

↑ Index

349. cris cheek
further inaugural dilemna
Mon 29 Dec 2008

---

even a spelling dilemma;-) IS A DILEMNA for Alexander, as you have deftly posed CA (should she read . . . of course she will . . . what could she read / write /read . . . there's the rub) much as what might Aretha sing (maybe she'll do "r-e-s-p-e-c-t")

also a dilemma for Warren who is under heavy fire from his own constituencies and beyond for accepting an invitation because by agreeing to perform at the inauguration he endorses the agenda of the President-elect ticket. Look at the rhetoric about same-sex marriage on the transition site for example. He has to "understand" that as well as sections on h8 speech and LGBT rights. Whatever he says now he has been co-opted into endorsing, validating, forwarding those policy statements??

not arguing for anything just exploring the complexities

so his discomfort *might be of interest?? as might the discomfort of all who appear in fact of all who are talking now about that discomfort of all who even watch, bear witness etcetera?

i understand the variant and diverse discomforts and i am way happier that discomfort is at the heart of politics and Politics than any sense of comfort or for that matter safety radical inclusivity is not a comfortable state (not that Obama is anywhere near the radical inclusivity . . . tolerance . . . along the lines that Roger Williams proposed)

cris

↑ Index

350. Geoffrey Gatza
Faits Divers de la Poesie Americaine et Britannique is now back up
Mon 29 Dec 2008

Faits Divers de la Poesie Americaine et Britannique is now back up, with a dozen new entries.

http://faitsdiversdelapoesie.blogspot.com/

Thank you for reading!

--the feneon collective

↑ Index

351. Cynie Cory
Poetry as Song: Query
Mon 29 Dec 2008

Can anyone recommend essays or books that specifically discuss poetry as song? I'm down with the deep song and the duende and Eliot, too. But I'm also interested in Shamanic song and Native American chants. One more thing: Where can I get a copy of Ann Carson's London lecture on Sappho and IF NOT WINTER? Thanks in advance, Cynie Cory

[redacted]

↑ Index

352. steve russell
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Mon 29 Dec 2008

Our candidate of so-called change may only deliver more of the same. Perhaps he'll close Gitmo. Didn't he say he would???

Gitmo, Stalin at his most inspired.

--- On Sun, 12/28/08, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, December 28, 2008, 4:09 PM

Which is to say that Obama is trying to be all things to all people? Must be that sainthood thing.

At 07:03 PM 12/26/2008, you wrote:
>this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other >clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views,

>have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was.
>Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's >not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating >grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."
>
>this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is >much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for >being.
>
>
>On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:48 PM, Corey Frost wrote:
>
>>To Mr. Obama
>>
>>Inviting Rick Warren to your inauguration was a horrible idea. His >>anti-gay-rights and anti-women, anti-choice ideas are an >>embarassment to a country that pretends to stand for liberty and >>equality, and by giving him this platform you are recognizing him >>above all other clergy in the country, many of whom are much more >>genuinely dedicated to the ideals of love and acceptance that your >>religion supposedly advocates. I am an atheist myself and I am put >>off by any sort of religious benediction at important state events, >>but I understand the symbolic significance of this for many people.
>>
>>There are (roughly) two ways your decision could be interpreted:
>>either you mostly agree with Warren and you feel he is worthy of >>this distinction, or else you disagree with him but feel that the >>inauguration should represent the different prominent ideologies of >>the populace, and this is your way of fostering "dialogue." I >>certainly hope, and have some reason to think, that the former >>isn't true, so I am assuming it's the latter. I like the idea
of >>dialogue, openness, and inclusion, but I think your invitation to >>Warren does not serve this ideal. It actually prevents dialogue by >>exclusively privileging someone who is not open and not inclusive.
>>
>>I hope you will take steps to fix this mistake. Univiting Rick >>Warren would be great, but I recognize that you are in politics and >>for political reasons you may not see this as an option. Therefore >>I strongly urge you to invite other clergy to take part who do not >>share Warren's close-minded, bigoted stances. If dialogue is what >>you want, then allow differing views. If you were to invite Gene >>Robinson, for example, the first openly gay bishop, then I could >>believe that your invitation to a homophobic right-wing evangelist >>was more than just a cheap bid for political support. Ask them to >>share the stage, and then we'll see who is really committed to >>dialogue.

>>
welcome.html
>
>Jason Quackenbush
>[redacted]
>

↑ Index

353. laura hinton
Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander
Mon 29 Dec 2008

See Frank Rich's column in the New York Times on line, Dec. 27. He articulates the problems with Obama's selection of Warren -- to act as symbolic "pope" during the inauguration -- we've discussed here. Rich quotes Barney Frank on Obama's selection of Warren: "I think he overestimates his ability to get people to put aside fundamental differences."

Laura Hinton

http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/28/opinion/28rich.html?em

↑ Index

354. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Mon 29 Dec 2008

Warren gave equal stage to both Obama and McCain during the campaign, being polite to both of them and letting them speak answering his questions, knowing full well that Obama believed in choice in relation to abortion and civil union in relation to gays. He avoided inflammatory rhetorical devices. Obama is returning the gesture. In my world this is called civil discourse, the reverse of the sickening demonizing which has been carried on by the Bush administration, both domestically and internationally, the last eight years.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Dec 29, 2008 at 5:40 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> rick warren is ridiculous and anybody who finds him scary needs a reality check. there are scary hatemongers out there. people who advocate physical violence, people who think stoning gays and lesbians in the public square is what oughta be done. by virtue of his own desire to be a famous public religious leader, Rick Warren is entirely nonscary and to my knowledge is a more moderate anti-gay than that. he's not a monster, he's just an idiot, as are the people who look to him for spiritual counsel.
>
> and yes, he is just one voice of many across a spectrum. and more importantly he represents the beliefs of a significant swath of the american people. the way people are talking about this it's almost like the obama folks picked warren BECAUSE he was a misogynistic homophobe. which is ridiculous. Clearly they picked him because he is a prominent conservative christian leader. I will give anybody who can find me five prominent conservative christian pastors who support gay marriage, the rights of gays to adopt, are prochoice, and support easy access to birth control 5 US dollars. I know i'm not gonna have to give that money to anybody because by definition no conservative christian pastors believe any of those things because they are CONSERVATIVE shristian pastors.
>
> The reason I am really kind of annoyed at all of this is precisely that. Rick Warren does not represent a fringe position, he is a mainline conservative. Ever since Obama appeared on the national stage he has been talking about breaking down the lines between liberal and conservative, and talking about listening to the other side and being pragmatic about focussing on those areas where interests over lap as a way to build dialog that can then help us movve towards resoltion on morecontentious issues. he has alwasy indicated that he was going to have a seat at the table for conservatives just as there would be one for liberals. well, guess what, conservatives are bigots and homophobes and are anti-choice misogynists. It's what makes them conservatives. if conservatives are going to be involved in the process, part of the dialog, or whatever you want to call it, that means there are going to be figures on the national stage who are taking part in trying to form policy who will believe things that are reprehensibile. it's the ugly underneath of Thrid Way politics and anybody who didn't think this sort of thing was coming in an Obama administration was just naive. but i'd get used to it, because this is not going to be the last time Obama gives an important job to someone whose opinions you don't like. this is what strategic progressivism and tactical pragmatism look like in concert. Which is to say, I think folks should condemn rick warren all they feel hthey need to, and I'm certainly never going to defend the guy, but I find it a little bit absurd that people are criticising obama for including peope like him when all he's talked about for the last two years on the campaign trail was his pragmatic politics of inclusiveness. What did you all who are feeling so angry and betrayed by warren delivering the invocation at the inauguration think he meant by that?

> I personally don't give a damn about any of this since it's clearly all political tactics and as such within a pragmatic philosophy the only meaning that can be read into it is that meaning that we choose to give it. So i choose to disempower it. It's a gesture to religious nutbags and right wing goons in order show them that if they can behave themselves with a little etiquette then they don't have to sit at the kids table for the next four years. I don't see anything more than that going on with Rick Warren. Now, given that Rick Warren is from California, his anti gay sentiments are a ot higher profile than would be some other megachurch baptist from arkasas or kentucky or something like that. But again, you give conservatives a seat at the table, and you will getpeople who believe the things that rick warren believes
>
> On Dec 27, 2008, at 11:08 PM, Corey Frost wrote:
>
> Jason, I didn't know that Joseph Lowery was also going to be speaking, so my
> note to the president-elect wasn't as well-researched as it could have been,
> but I stand by my characterization of the Warren invitation as a distinction. I don't know how many clergy were invited, but only one of them > is giving the "invocation" — Rick Warren. You make it sound like he is just > one of many voices from across the spectrum, which isn't the case. He's been > chosen for a very high profile role, and it's an honor he doesn't deserve.
> In the past there have been as many as five clergy involved in a single inauguration, and not just Christians either. Not that inviting a few more religious folk, of whatever point of view, would make me happy, really—my point was more that I'd like to see a gay man of the cloth (or lesbian of the cloth) standing alongside Warren, in the hope of making him seem more ridiculous than scary.
>
> On Fri, 26 Dec 2008 16:03:51 -0800, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views, have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was. Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."
>
> this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for

> being.
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]

↑ Index

355. Jordan Stempleman
Re: Poetry as Song: Query
Mon 29 Dec 2008

_____ It's the same Hotmail®. If by "same" you mean up to 70% faster. http://windowslive.com/online/hotmail?ocid=TXT_TAGLM_WL_hotmail_acq_broad1_122008

↑ Index

356. Eireene Nealand capitalism and the long poem
Mon 29 Dec 2008

I sat down to write a little piece about this Russian poet, and came up with a strange take on the long poem--an idea that the seriality of it is somehow related to consumer capitalism--

http://tsky-reviews.blogspot.com/not the pleasantest thought-- and so I was wondering if anyone has any good counter arguments, or different takes on why so many are so obsessed with this form right now. & will we fall out of love with it during the recession?

e

↑ Index

357. Eireene Nealand
the Russian poet Dmitry Golynko
Mon 29 Dec 2008

---

ps. Golynko is also quite great to read in his own right, aside from the long poem question, his book, As It Turns Out, by Ugly Duckling Presse, and his quite interesting (although dense interviews).

http://calquezine.blogspot.com/2008/06/interview-with-dmitry-golynko.html

↑ Index

358. Ruth Lepson
Re: Poetry Brothel at the Zipper Factory
Mon 29 Dec 2008

---

thank you, gwyn! (but prostitution affects many more females than males. still, yes, it does affect both & is odious everywhere.) besides, even if prostitutes were not forced or sold or beaten or young or broke or threatened every day or exposed to every kind of degradation instead of being admired as football players are, imagine selling your body for long-term effects on human being.

On 12/27/08 11:05 AM, "Gwyn McVay" <[redacted]> wrote:

> On Thu, Dec 25, 2008 at 11:25 AM, John Cunningham <[redacted]
> wrote:
>
> For those of you who are speaking out against the body being used
> in commerce, why are you not speaking out against football or hockey where > male bodies are being used in commerce? When you consider the damage that
> is > done to the male body during that contact sport and the lingering effects
> of
> it in terms of permanent injury and disability such as arthritis and other > diseases, isn't this just as bad? Or is it that one affects women whereas > the other affects men?
>
> Omigod, you're so right. I hurt in my anterior cruciate ligaments for all of > those men FORCED or DECEIVED into collegiate and professional sports every > year; BEATEN if they try to leave; often denied any other employment options > in the case of being transgendered; not allowed to keep a PENNY of their > earnings... oh wait.
>
> Gwyn "Also, This Is a False Binary, Because Prostitution Affects All > Genders, And Not Just Adults" McVay

↑ Index

359. Mark Weiss

Re: Inauguration theology and poetics

Mon 29 Dec 2008

Everything a new president does is invested with the weight of symbolism, especially when the president is so little known. Obama's election strategy was to run as a symbol, the word "change" plastered on every lectern, but he let us know only in the vaguest terms what he actually believed or meant to do. So those with a mind to projected on to him whatever they hoped he'd be. There's a degree of smoke and mirrors to this. Obama's attempts to differentiate himself from Clinton, for instance, have resulted in his appointment of a Clinton cabinet and Hillary herself, whose judgement in international affairs he ridiculed, as Secretary of State. As it begins to be apparent that there's a man behind the symbol who almost certainly will represent change in the limited sense of not being like Bush but perhaps not much beyond that, it's reasonable to be trepidatious. All we have to look at now is the latest gestures, of which the Warren selection is one. The memory of Clinton's imposition of "don't ask don't tell" as an attempted sop to both sides is pretty fresh.

Lest we forget, it's not just gays who lose out in Warren's theology; Warren, along with most of his kind, thinks that Jews, Muslims, Hindus, etc., are destined for hell. In the face of that, trying to appeal to rank and file fundamentalists by courting their preachers seems counterproductive. Better to go over the heads of the clergy to their parishoners. In any case, the Republican leadership has made it pretty clear that they're not interested in reconciliation.

We'll know more soon. In the interim, it's our job to question the slender information we've got. It's what voters do, and it's more important than civility. Without it leaders don't learn

what's good for them, and voters don't find out if their leaders are capable of learning.

Mark

At 02:35 PM 12/29/2008, you wrote:
>Warren gave equal stage to both Obama and McCain during the campaign, being >polite to both of them and letting them speak answering his questions, >knowing full well that Obama believed in choice in relation to abortion and >civil union in relation to gays. He avoided inflammatory rhetorical devices.
>Obama is returning the gesture. In my world this is called civil discourse, >the reverse of the sickening demonizing which has been carried on by the >Bush administration, both domestically and internationally, the last eight >years.
>
>Ciao,
>
>Murat
>
>
>On Mon, Dec 29, 2008 at 5:40 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > rick warren is ridiculous and anybody who finds him scary needs a reality > > check. there are scary hatemongers out there. people who advocate physical > > violence, people who think stoning gays and > lesbians in the public square is > > what oughta be done. by virtue of his own desire to be a famous public > > religious leader, Rick Warren is entirely nonscary and to my knowledge is a > > more moderate anti-gay than that. he's not a > monster, he's just an idiot, as > > are the people who look to him for spiritual counsel.
> >
> > and yes, he is just one voice of many across a spectrum. and more > > importantly he represents the beliefs of a > significant swath of the american > > people. the way people are talking about this it's almost like the obama > > folks picked warren BECAUSE he was a misogynistic homophobe. which is > > ridiculous. Clearly they picked him because he is a prominent conservative > > christian leader. I will give anybody who can find me five prominent > > conservative christian pastors who support gay marriage, the rights of gays > > to adopt, are prochoice, and support easy access to birth control 5 US > > dollars. I know i'm not gonna have to give that money to anybody because by > > definition no conservative christian pastors believe any of those things > > because they are CONSERVATIVE shristian pastors.

> >
> > The reason I am really kind of annoyed at all of this is precisely that.
> > Rick Warren does not represent a fringe position, he is a mainline > > conservative. Ever since Obama appeared on the national stage he has been > > talking about breaking down the lines between liberal and conservative, and > > talking about listening to the other side and being pragmatic about > > focussing on those areas where interests over lap as a way to build dialog > > that can then help us movve towards resoltion on morecontentious issues. he > > has alwasy indicated that he was going to have a seat at the table for > > conservatives just as there would be one for liberals. well, guess what, > > conservatives are bigots and homophobes and are anti-choice misogynists.
> > It's what makes them conservatives. if conservatives are going to be > > involved in the process, part of the dialog, or whatever you want to call > > it, that means there are going to be figures on the national stage who are > > taking part in trying to form policy who will believe things that are > > reprehensibile. it's the ugly underneath of Thrid Way politics and anybody > > who didn't think this sort of thing was coming in an Obama administration > > was just naive. but i'd get used to it, because this is not going to be the > > last time Obama gives an important job to someone whose opinions you don't > > like. this is what strategic progressivism > and tactical pragmatism look like > > in concert. Which is to say, I think folks should condemn rick warren all > > they feel hthey need to, and I'm certainly never going to defend the guy, > > but I find it a little bit absurd that people are criticising obama for > > including peope like him when all he's talked about for the last two years > > on the campaign trail was his pragmatic politics of inclusiveness. What did > > you all who are feeling so angry and betrayed by warren delivering the > > invocation at the inauguration think he meant by that?
> >
> > I personally don't give a damn about any of this since it's clearly all > > political tactics and as such within a > pragmatic philosophy the only meaning > > that can be read into it is that meaning that we choose to give it. So i > > choose to disempower it. It's a gesture to religious nutbags and right wing > > goons in order show them that if they can behave themselves with a little > > etiquette then they don't have to sit at the kids table for the next four > > years. I don't see anything more than that going on with Rick Warren. Now, > > given that Rick Warren is from California, his anti gay sentiments are a ot > > higher profile than would be some other megachurch baptist from arkasas or > > kentucky or something like that. But again, > you give conservatives a seat at > > the table, and you will getpeople who believe the things that rick warren > > believes

> >
> >
> > On Dec 27, 2008, at 11:08 PM, Corey Frost wrote:
> >
> > Jason, I didn't know that Joseph Lowery was also going to be speaking, so
> >> my > >> note to the president-elect wasn't as well-researched as it could have > >> been,
> >> but I stand by my characterization of the Warren invitation as a > >> distinction. I don't know how many clergy were invited, but only one of > >> them > >> is giving the "invocation" — Rick Warren. You make it sound like he is > >> just > >> one of many voices from across the spectrum, which isn't the case. He's > >> been > >> chosen for a very high profile role, and it's an honor he doesn't deserve.
> >> In the past there have been as many as five clergy involved in a single > >> inauguration, and not just Christians either. Not that inviting a few more > >> religious folk, of whatever point of view, would make me happy, really—
my > >> point was more that I'd like to see a gay man of the cloth (or lesbian of > >> the cloth) standing alongside Warren, in the hope of making him seem more > >> ridiculous than scary.
> >>
> >>
> >> On Fri, 26 Dec 2008 16:03:51 -0800, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]>
> >> wrote:
> >>
> >> this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other > >>> clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views,
> >>> have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was.

> >>> Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's > >>> not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating > >>> grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."
> >>>
> >>> this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is > >>> much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for > >>> being.
> >>>
> >>>
> >>
> >
> > Jason Quackenbush
> > [redacted]
> >
> >
>

↑ Index

360. George Bowering
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Mon 29 Dec 2008

On Dec 27, 2008, at 11:08 PM, Corey Frost wrote:

> — Rick Warren. You make it sound like he is just > one of many voices from across the spectrum, which isn't the case.
> He's been > chosen for a very high profile role, and it's an honor he doesn't > deserve.

Are you saying that there is not a large number of US people that like him and approve of him?
That he has not acquired the following of many US people?

Mr. G.H. Bowering
Does not get up immoderately early.

↑ Index

361. George Bowering
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Mon 29 Dec 2008

I am mixed up about this. I thought that he had said that he would close the torture cells at Gitmo. I didn't think that he was going to give Cuba back the area stolen from them during the US maneuvers in the late 19th Century.

Does anyone know more?

gb

On Dec 29, 2008, at 10:39 AM, steve russell wrote:

> Our candidate of so-called change may only deliver more of the same. Perhaps he'll close Gitmo. Didn't he say he would???
>
> Gitmo, Stalin at his most inspired.
>
> --- On Sun, 12/28/08, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
> From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Sunday, December 28, 2008, 4:09 PM
>
> Which is to say that Obama is trying to be all things to all people? Must be that sainthood thing.
>
> At 07:03 PM 12/26/2008, you wrote:
> this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views, have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was. Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."
>
> this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for being.
>
> On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:48 PM, Corey Frost wrote:
>
> To Mr. Obama
>
> Inviting Rick Warren to your inauguration was a horrible idea. His anti-gay-rights and anti-women, anti-choice ideas are an embarassment to a country that pretends to stand for liberty and equality, and by giving him this platform you are recognizing him above all other clergy in the country, many of whom are much more genuinely dedicated to the ideals of love and acceptance that your religion supposedly advocates. I am an atheist myself and I am put off by any sort of religious benediction at important state events, but I understand the symbolic significance of this for many people.

> There are (roughly) two ways your decision could be interpreted: either you mostly agree with Warren and you feel he is worthy of this distinction, or else you disagree with him but feel that the inauguration should represent the different prominent ideologies of the populace, and this is your way of fostering "dialogue." I certainly hope, and have some reason to think, that the former isn't true, so I am assuming it's the latter. I like the idea of > dialogue, openness, and inclusion, but I think your invitation to Warren does not serve this ideal. It actually prevents dialogue by exclusively privileging someone who is not open and not inclusive.
>
> I hope you will take steps to fix this mistake. Univiting Rick Warren would be great, but I recognize that you are in politics and for political reasons you may not see this as an option. Therefore I strongly urge you to invite other clergy to take part who do not share Warren's close-minded, bigoted stances. If dialogue is what you want, then allow differing views. If you were to invite Gene Robinson, for example, the first openly gay bishop, then I could believe that your invitation to a homophobic right-wing evangelist was more than just a cheap bid for political support. Ask them to share the stage, and then we'll see who is really committed to dialogue.
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines
>
> welcome.html

Giorgio Bowering, gent.
Just a visitor here.

↑ Index

362. laura oliver
Re: Poetry as Song: Query
Mon 29 Dec 2008

Brain Swann has edited several books of Native American and Inuit song poetry: Wearing the Morning Star, Voices From Four Directions, Song of the Sky, to name a few. Also: Voices on the Wind: Polynesian Chants and Myths by Katherine Luomala, Haa Tuwunaagu Yis for Healing Our Spirit: Tlingit Oratory edited by Nora Marks Dauenhauer & Richard Dauenhauer, The Dream People: Chants and Images From the Indians and Eskimos of North America edited by James Houston, Taming the Wings of Desire: Psychology, Medicine and Aesthetics in Malay Shamanistic Performance (includes songs for specific rituals). I may see more on my bookshelf wehn I move my Christmas tree :)

Laura

> Date: Mon, 29 Dec 2008 09:38:54 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Poetry as Song: Query
> To: [redacted]
>
> Can anyone recommend essays or books that specifically discuss poetry as song? I'm down with the deep song and the duende and Eliot, too. But I'm also interested in Shamanic song and Native American chants. One more thing: Where can I get a copy of Ann Carson's London lecture on Sappho and IF NOT WINTER? Thanks in advance, Cynie Cory
>
> [redacted]

_____ Life on your PC is safer, easier, and more enjoyable with Windows Vista®.
http://clk.atdmt.com/MRT/go/127032870/direct/01/

↑ Index

363. Ryan Daley
Re: Inauguration theology and poetics
Mon 29 Dec 2008

Get rid of prayer, I don't care who says it.

On Mon, Dec 29, 2008 at 5:16 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> if that's how you want to read it, then that's your option.

my take on this particular lazy machine is that it is part of the move towards inclusiveness that Obama has been talking about since he emerged on the national stage.

in the end, it's a dumb preacher saying a prayer at a public event though. if anything all of this debate about it is just overcharging a minor occurrence with excess meaning.

On Dec 28, 2008, at 1:09 PM, Mark Weiss wrote:

Which is to say that Obama is trying to be all things to all people? Must be that sainthood thing.

At 07:03 PM 12/26/2008, you wrote:

this is what drives me nuts about this whole conversation. other clergy, prominent respected clergy, with diametrically opposed views, have been invited and were invited at the same time that Warren was. Rev. Joseph Lowery is going to be delivering the benediction. It's not as if Obama has just put Warren on a pedestal and gesticulating grandly in his direction intoned in solemn aspect "this i believe."

this inauguration, ideologically, theologically, and politically is much more nuanced symbolically than people are giving it credit for being.

On Dec 24, 2008, at 12:48 PM, Corey Frost wrote:

To Mr. Obama

Inviting Rick Warren to your inauguration was a horrible idea. His anti-gay-rights and anti-women, anti-choice ideas are an embarassment to a country that pretends to stand for liberty and equality, and by giving him this platform you are recognizing him above all other clergy in the country, many of whom are much more genuinely dedicated to the ideals of love and acceptance that your religion supposedly advocates. I am an atheist myself and I am put off by any sort of religious benediction at important state events, but I understand the symbolic significance of this for many people.

There are (roughly) two ways your decision could be interpreted: either you mostly agree with Warren and you feel he is worthy of this distinction, or else you disagree with him but feel that the inauguration should represent the different prominent ideologies of the populace, and this is your way of fostering "dialogue." I certainly hope, and have some reason to think, that the former isn't true, so I am assuming it's the latter. I like the idea of > dialogue, openness, and inclusion, but I think your invitation to Warren does not serve this ideal. It actually prevents dialogue by exclusively privileging someone who is not open and not inclusive.

>
> I hope you will take steps to fix this mistake. Univiting Rick Warren would be great, but I recognize that you are in politics and for political reasons you may not see this as an option. Therefore I strongly urge you to invite other clergy to take part who do not share Warren's close-minded, bigoted stances. If dialogue is what you want, then allow differing views. If you were to invite Gene Robinson, for example, the first openly gay bishop, then I could believe that your invitation to a homophobic right-wing evangelist was more than just a cheap bid for political support. Ask them to share the stage, and then we'll see who is really committed to dialogue.
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]

↑ Index

364. Nico Vassilakis

Kurt Schwitters' Ur Sonata @ Subtext 1/7/09

Tue 30 Dec 2008

---

http://subtextreadingseries.blogspot.com/

and here for the reading series history:
http://subtextreadingseries.blogspot.com/search/label/Subtext%20History

↑ Index

365. Daniel Zimmerman

Re: Poetry as Song: Query

Tue 30 Dec 2008

Cynie,

You might find these interesting:

Halifax, Joan. _Shamanic Voices: A Survey of Visionary Narratives_. New York: E. P. Dutton, 1979. ISBN: 0-525-47525-7. Discusses the nature of shamanic song, with examples from shamans around the world in their own words.

McClain, Ernest G. _The Myth of Invariance: The Origin of the Gods, Mathematics and Music from the Rg Veda to Plato_. Boulder & London: Shambhala, 1978. ISBN: 0-87773-118-7. An amazing application of musical theory to mythological systems, "conceived as a musical companion for FOUR-DIMENSIONAL MAN: The Philosophical Methodology of the Rg Veda by Antonio T. de Nicholas."

Booth, Mark W. _The Experience of Songs_. New Haven & London: Yale UP, 1981. ISBN: 0-300-02622-6. A survey of song in eleven examples from medieval lyric to "White Christmas."

Please post all the suggestions you receive.

Best,

~ Dan Zimmerman

----- Original Message -----
From: "Cynie Cory" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, December 29, 2008 12:38 PM
Subject: Poetry as Song: Query

Can anyone recommend essays or books that specifically discuss poetry as song? I'm down with the deep song and the duende and Eliot, too. But I'm also interested in Shamanic song and Native American chants. One more thing: Where can I get a copy of Ann Carson's London lecture on Sappho and IF NOT WINTER? Thanks in advance, Cynie Cory

[redacted]

↑ Index

366. Ruth Lepson

Re: Roy Exley - Re: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Tue 30 Dec 2008

---

what I mean is that being angry at bigots doesn't necessarily make you a bigot. it means you are criticizing abuse.

On 12/26/08 8:27 PM, "George Bowering" <[redacted]> wrote:

> That's automatic?
> I don't think so.

> I think that a bigot can be angry at bigots.
> For example, there were sexist anti-capitalists.
>
> gb
>
> On Dec 23, 2008, at 7:06 PM, Ruth Lepson wrote:
>
> people who are angry at bigots aren't bigots!
>
> On 12/22/08 5:43 PM, "Roy Exley" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Jason,
>
> What a relief, many thanks for your message condemning the us v.themism
> Of these GLBT (my adaptation) bigots who leave you thinking that their
> bigotry is perhaps more strident and more inflexible than that of Warren > himself! I too am tired of the culture war which can only be exacerbated
> and perpetuated by such invective. Long live the middle way!
> And Obamas openness for dialogue, which encourages me also. I look forward > to an end of this tiresome conversation.
>
> On 21/12/08 8:09 pm, "Jason Quackenbush" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Indeed. There has been something in the knee jerk condemnation of the > Rick Warren selection that has been bugging me, and I think this puts > the finger on it. I don't like Rick Warren and I disagree with his > politics. But that's hardly a new thing for me when it comes to > questions of preachers on the national stage. If I had my druthers, > there'd be no prayers at all and the ceremony would be entirely > secular. But then, I voted for Obama knowing that he was a religious > third way centrist and not expecting him to be the great progressive > hope that clearly many of my friends and allies on the left thought > he would be. I do know that I'm tired of us vs them and I'm tired of > the culture war. it's not my fight and I don't want to keep fighting > it and i find moves like this one that are attempts to step > beyond it

> are more compelling to me than the sort of nonsense that 60s style protest leftism calls for. That movement beyond is the thing that I have always found compelling about Obama and I remain encouraged to see where he will go with it.
>
> On Dec 21, 2008, at 10:37 AM, Obododimma Oha wrote:
>
> This is quite persuasive, Paul. Dialogism works in and for opposites, not in sameness, not for compatibles. Thanks to William Blake for saying, in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "Without Contraries is no progression. Attraction and Repulsion, Reason and Energy, Love and Hate, are necessary to Human existence."
> --- Obododimma Oha.
>
> On Sun, Dec 21, 2008 at 5:37 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Pastor Rick Warren said:
>
> "Three years ago I took enormous heat for inviting Barack Obama to my church because some of his views don't agree (with mine)," he said. "Now he's invited me."
>
> So, it's ok for Obama to speak to Pastor Warren's parishioners, but not ok for Warren to speak at the Inauguration? Another example of how Obama's pragmatism (consciousness) goes way beyond left vs. right, way beyond the failing duality of US versus THEM, the exact same duality we're trying to overcome with Gay/Straight.
>
> I love how Obama continues to defy the conventional wisdom of the Left AND the right. Keep guessing folks, or broaden your perspective during the next eight years. Dialog has begun. Much more interesting than the last eight.
>
> Someday Rick Warren and others will understand that Gay people have a very

important role in this society, as has been recognized by many indigenous and ancient cultures. The term used in some Native American cultures, Two Spirit, begins to communicate this.

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!
American Sentences
Organic Poetry
Poetry Postcard Blog

Ilalqo, WA [redacted]

From: CA Conrad <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 19, 2008 12:38:24 PM
Subject: OPEN LETTER to Elizabeth Alexander

Dear Elizabeth I'm writing to you today to consider saying No to reading at Barak Obama's inauguration in light of his invitation to Rick Warren to officiate the blessing. Mr. Obama's invitation to Rick Warren is clearly a message to the Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender community that he is not interested in our rights, not interested in our struggle, not interested in our suffering.

Rick Warren's money, time and effort towards Proposition 8 in California is a very clear message. Any man who would put THAT MUCH time, money and effort into a campaign is sending a message which is nothing but clear.

This is not an easy thing to ask you to do Elizabeth. As a poet I know full well how long and hard we work with little or no recognition and respect. Being asked to read at Mr. Obama's presidential inauguration is without a doubt one of the highlights of your life as a poet, I'm sure. The papers say you say you're "completely thrilled." I believe that. I understand that, but, I'm asking you as a poet, and a queer man to consider the implications of reading in January.

When George W. Bush was reelected I was one of millions in DC to protest the inauguration, but that was different, that was very different because he was transparent. The transparent man is always easiest to protest. Mr. Obama is not transparent, and while he talks about building and maintaining bridges with opposing forces, that should not in my opinion spill over into the celebration of his inauguration.

Asking Rick Warren's blessing is Obama's message. Rick Warren has been publicly open about his homophobia, but Mr. Obama has not been, not until now that is. In asking Rick Warren to bless the inauguration the LGBT community is being told straight up we will not count, we will be ignored, we will continue to suffer.

Protesting Mr. Obama's inauguration is much more important than protesting George W. Bush's inauguration ever was because Mr. Obama promised us he was a man with ethics and courage. By asking Rick Warren to give the blessing the weakness of Obama is immediately clear. Courage is something someone has when they are standing against oppressive forces, not when they stand with them.

It wasn't my intention of turning this letter to you into a lecture, but while I'm at it, let me say that I PROTEST this choice Mr. Obama made to invite Rick Warren on behalf of the many LGBT people I have known, most especially the African American LGBT friends I have made over the years. I have learned from these friends just how entrenched homophobia is within the African American community, and this decision of Mr. Obama's serves to galvanize that bigotry.

If we are going to send Mr. Obama a message, better to do it on his first day. Send it now, tell him No Thank You, please do that Elizabeth Alexander. Mr. Obama isn't George W. Bush, meaning HE WILL
LISTEN, but, if we don't tell him how we feel then how will he know?
You have the power in your hands to tell him how you feel. You have the opportunity and power more than any other poet in America right now Elizabeth Alexander. And if you read then you are telling him that it is more important to you to read for him than it is to tell him you are disappointed with his decision to invite Rick Warren.

But then again maybe you aren't disappointed that he chose to invite Rick Warren? What do I know about you after all? Maybe all of this is just fine with you?

Here's to hoping you tell Mr. Obama No Thank You on behalf the millions who suffer under the pressures of Rick Warren and all those who stand beside Rick Warren and his very bad, bigoted decisions. It was easy for Sharon Olds to say No to George W. Bush, but for you it's a more difficult decision, I understand that. But the only right decision in my opinion is to say No, and I hope you realize that.

Most sincerely,
CAConrad

cc: Graywolf Press, [redacted]

http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

guidelines

guidelines

--

> Obododimma Oha
> Senior Lecturer in Stylistics & Semiotics
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> welcome.html
>
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines &
>
> guidelines &
>
> welcome.html
>
> George Cletis Bowering
> Slow to anger. Well, slow about everything.

↑ Index

367. Ruth Lepson

Re: Poetry as Song: Query

Tue 30 Dec 2008

---

