Why did I force the issue and fight for my own job promotion? I know some people would rather not. I could have remained a perennial (and well published) Assistant prof. But, for me, it was the right thing to do -- to fight. To NOT do it was to kow-tow to illegal discrimination.

Yet it wasn't that simple. We have a Distinguished Professor of feminist-scholar fame, Professor Jane Marcus, in my department. The same power structure that attempted to fire and then not promote me attempted to demote her from a DP three years ago, after she provided sworn testimony for my Civil Rights case. A letter campaign to our CUNY chancellor helped turn that case around; Professor Marcus remains a D.P. Again, we fought -- hard, both alone and together. Certainly, my own reputation has been sullied at my university. I am often cut off when speaking in turn in open meetings (by male chairmen). I am given little ability to make policy in my department. But I have the hard-won luxury of job protection now; and I use that to teach my courses with passion.

If you are still reading this story: it is not a cautionary tale. It is a story of the reality of academe, and certainly the CUNY I know and have experienced. I do not regret a single minute of fighting for my rights -- or those of several other colleagues as Civil Rights problems at my college unabashedly continue. Because my rights and their individual rights are all of our rights, whether you work for CUNY, or even a university, it has been worth my frustration and pain -- and a time-consuming process. The Civil Rights laws in America make the plaintiff out to be a victim. And we are forced to fight -- a mostly individualized battle. Yet, in truth, the Ivory Tower is neither ivory nor lofty. It is full of people who -- like all industries -- often use power for petty and self-promoting purposes. It's the same struggle everywhere. Did I lose writing time due to this struggle? Of course. But my writing, too, is motivated and has been > transformed by this struggle. It grew (and I grew, in spite of myself) through this hard work.

>
> But I doubt I'll ever put in an application for Distinguished Professor at CUNY.
>
> Laura
>
> --
> Laura Hinton
> Professor of English
> City College of New York
> 138 at Convent Ave.
> New York, New York 10031
>
> http://www.mermaidtenementpress.com
> http://www.chantdelasirene.com

↑ Index

193. Regina Pinto

Project "AlphaAlpha" - More collaborations are already on line. Would you like to collaborate?

Sat 16 Jan 2010

PROJECT AlphaAlpha:

If you did not have enough time to create your "As" until the deadline but you want to participate, you may send your images until the end of January! ;-)

NEW PAGES:

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_j_a.html (Maja Kalogera - Croatia)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_nik.html (Manik - Serbia)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_din.html (Clemente Padín - Uruguay)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/reiner_a.html (Reiner Strasser - Germany)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/sus_a_n_turner.html (Susan Turner - Canada)

More pages will be ready soon! (Bruce Andrews (USA) - Miguel Jimenez / Zenon (Spain) - Margaret Penfold (UK) - Edward Picot (UK) - Isabel Saiji (France)

WHICH MORE PAGES ARE READY?

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_ndrews.html (Jim Andrews - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_randa_yto.html (Isabel Aranda - YTO - Chile)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/b_a_bel.html (babel - Canada & UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/ver_a_bighetti.html (Vera Bighetti - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/bruno_a.html (Bruno - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_trick_burgaud.html (Patrick Burgaud - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_trick_burgaud1.html (Patrick Burgaud - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_rtha_deed.html (Martha Deed - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/fr_a_zao.html (Marcelo Frazão - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/muriel_freg_a.html (Muriel Frega - Argentina)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/lis_a_hutton.html (Lisa Hutton - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/s_a_tu.html (Satu KaikKonen - Finland)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/neufeldt_a.html (Brigitte Neufeudt - Germany)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/niss_a.html (Millie Niss - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/myron_turner_a.html (Myron Turner - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/villel_a.html (Paulo Villela - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_raceli_zunig_a.html (Araceli Zuñiga- Mexico)

My own pages:

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/um.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/dois.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/tres.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/quatro.html (Regina Pinto- Brazil)

How to collaborate:

Read the call at: http://arteonline.arq.br/a/call.htm and ... PARTICIPATE! Do not forget, the new deadline is 2010 January 31th

---

All the best,
Regina Pinto

↑ Index

194. Ann Bogle
Brief review
Sat 16 Jan 2010

---

http://slswrites.wordpress.com/2010/01/13/sentences-like-little-isles-of-meaning/

Thanks that you're out there!

↑ Index

195. Ann Bogle
(no subject)
Sat 16 Jan 2010

Oksana Baiul!

↑ Index

196. Ruth Lepson
Re: Can anything...?
Sat 16 Jan 2010

---

my thanks, too chris--what a group we have here. my parents were mathematicians & my father also a physicist--they wd have enjoyed this discussion. my mother wrote a still unpulished book on math as an art form so she wd have had something to say. ruth

On 1115110 2:36 PM, "Christopher Rizzo" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Gerald,
>
> I second Paul's thought: good question. And Steve makes a good point, too. While I'm not a defeatist, the horizon indeed seems very limited. Since the historical moment of Black Mountain can't be recreated, I suspect that anything akin to the school itself will never happen again.
>
> That said, the principles are still alive, however. Paul makes a number of very good points, although I'm a bit wary of Bram's study, if only because it relies a bit too much on Whitehead to read Olson.
>
> If you haven't done so already, I suggest you take a look at the ten volume set of_Olson: The Journal of the Charles Olson Archives_, especially volume two, which includes Olson's notes on the college (e.g., "A Draft of a Plan for the College," "Black Mountain Courses of Instruction, 1954," and so forth.) A great resource. Here is the opening paragraph from Olson's "The Act of Writing in the Context of Postmodern Man," a course description that appeared in the college bulletin in 1952:

"The effort is definitely non-literary. Neither is the reading in 'literature', like they say, nor is the writing 'composition'. The amount of either is not at all the question. The idea is to enable the person to achieve the beginnings of a disposition toward reality now, by which he or she can bring himself or herself to bear as value."

Interesting, no? I've modeled my upper-level creative writing courses on this description, in fact, so spaces of Black Mt. can indeed be opened up within the larger landscape of "neo this/that," as Steve rightly says.

As for Olson's interest in the sciences, Ruth, a fantastic primer is Ann Charters' dated but still informative book_Olson / Melville: A Study in Affinity_, which includes the postscript "Charles Olson at Black Mountain College 1953-56." I tend to call this postscript the "Whitehead lecture," since Olson discusses Whitehead at length.

Some of the important books for Olson while at Black Mt. include not only Norbert Wiener's_Cybernetics: or Control and Communication in the Animal and Machine_, but also Hermann Weyl's_Philosophy of Mathematics and Natural Science_. While Whitehead is often rightly cited as the source of Olson's knowledge of physics, he was actively reading Weyl while at Black Mt. He also took a course on mathematics at the school, the details about which escape me at the moment.

Obviously, though, Riemann and the non-Euclidean geometers influenced Olson's thought, as well as Heisenberg.

Anyway, I could keep going, but this is getting long. I hope some of the info here is useful.

Bests,
Chris

On Fri, Jan 15, 2010 at 9:40 AM, Gerald Schwartz
<[redacted]>wrote:

Can anything like the Black Mountain School
ever expand our possibilities again?

Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

197. Ruth Lepson

Re: CUNY Distinguished Professors - The City University of New York

Sat 16 Jan 2010

---

it's a sad tale with a somewhat happy ending, Laura--sorry you had to go through that, as did other women I know.

On 1116110 8:19 AM, "Laura Hinton" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Thanks, Cassandra, Maria and everyone for your comments on women in academia, and at CUNY in particular. Your comments are sadly accurate. I can report here of my personal experience with that institution.
>
> I was hired approximately 19 years ago by CUNY (at the original branch, the City College of New York), to teach feminist theory and women's contemporary literature -- like Maria, I had a Stanford Ph.D. I was hired by a then fairly forward-looking dean. But, although I was one of two professors in my department in 10 years during the late '80's and 1990s to have a book coming out during the tenure process (SUNY Press), and although men in my department had been and would be tenured without any book publications and only a smattering of articles, I would be denied tenure by CIty College, and forced to fight through a byzantine system of appeals over months and months -- to keep my job. The men running my department and division at that time, in short, tried to fire me. They didn't like what I wrote or what I stood for. They also didn't like the fact that I complained about their gender harassment, which occurred regularly enough to wear me down. So, yes, I spoke up; I asked them not to do it any more.
>
> Having won tenure, at long last, through a lengthy Affirmative Action investigation, wouldn't you think that the people involved would be dismissed? It is true that some of the "perpetrators" "disappeared" (through various interventions, including special retirement packages) from my immediate radar screen. But then other men replaced these guys and continued some of the same harrassments I had already experience. I fought the same battles over and over again for Associate level, then for Full Professor -- in spite of having as many or more publications than most of my "generation" of faculty in the department. I should remark that occasionally there were men at my university who supported my case, especially through my union; and occasionally some women who worked closely with the CCNY administration fought to keep me from progressing at my job. Still, it was a gender-discrimination fight -- as perceived by a federal judge. And, two years ago, I won a Civil Rights lawsuit -- that is, a modest settlement that equaled lost wages for two years of non-promotion when clearly I was qualified by CUNY standards for that position.
>
> Why did I force the issue and fight for my own job promotion? I know some people would rather not. I could have remained a perennial (and well published) Assistant prof. But, for me, it was the right thing to do -- to fight. To NOT do it was to kow-tow to illegal discrimination.

> Yet it wasn't that simple. We have a Distinguished Professor of feminist-scholar fame, Professor Jane Marcus, in my department. The same power structure that attempted to fire and then not promote me attempted to demote her from a DP three years ago, after she provided sworn testimony for my Civil Rights case. A letter campaign to our CUNY chancellor helped turn that case around; Professor Marcus remains a D.P. Again, we fought -- hard, both alone and together. Certainly, my own reputation has been sullied at my university. I am often cut off when speaking in turn in open meetings (by male chairmen). I am given little ability to make policy in my department. But I have the hard-won luxury of job protection now; and I use that to teach my courses with passion.
>
> If you are still reading this story: it is not a cautionary tale. It is a story of the reality of academe, and certainly the CUNY I know and have experienced. I do not regret a single minute of fighting for my rights -- or those of several other colleagues as Civil Rights problems at my college unabashedly continue. Because my rights and their individual rights are all of our rights, whether you work for CUNY, or even a university, it has been worth my frustration and pain -- and a time-consuming process. The Civil Rights laws in America make the plaintiff out to be a victim. And we are forced to fight -- a mostly individualized battle. Yet, in truth, the Ivory Tower is neither ivory nor lofty. It is full of people who -- like all industries -- often use power for petty and self-promoting purposes. It's the same struggle everywhere. Did I lose writing time due to this struggle? Of course. But my writing, too, is motivated and has been transformed by this struggle. It grew (and I grew, in spite of myself) through this hard work.
>
> But I doubt I'll ever put in an application for Distinguished Professor at CUNY.
>
> Laura

↑ Index

198. Ruth Lepson

Re: Can anything...?

Sat 16 Jan 2010

---

and thanks for this, Skip.

On 1115110 1:44 PM, "Skip Fox" <[redacted]> wrote:

> A footnote to Paul:
>
> Looking through the index of a secondary bibliography of Creeley, Dorn, and Duncan (G.K. Hall, 1989) I find the following:

Steven Carter wrote a diss. finished in 1985 titled "Epistemological Models Shared by American Projectivist Poetry and Quantum Physics" at Univ. of Arizona. (This presumably is both Olson and Duncan, Duncan with about 20 pages.)

In an interview by George Bowering and Robert Hogg with Duncan in _Robert Duncan: An Interview_ (Toronto: Coach House/Beaver Kosmos, 1971), Duncan discusses his sense of particle physics.

In a Romanian essay ("Pietre in cimpul lui Robert Duncan" in _Steaua_ 25.3, 1974) Loring Taylor discusses note the use of the field as a symbol in _The Opening of the Field_, noting its relationship to relativistic physics, field composition, linguistic fields, fields of self and poetry, experimental fields, and the field of memory, especially childhood memory. It sounds provocative, but the article is very brief.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Paul Nelson Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 11:07 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

Ruth,

McClure's introduction to his book Three Poems is the best statement about PV since the actual essay, now 60 years old. (Copies available here: http://www.abebooks.com/servlet/SearchResults?an=McClure&sts=t&tn=Three+Poems&x=38&y=14)

Jeffrey Side was kind enough to publish my essay on McClure on the Argotist website: http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Nelson%20essay.htm

I am working on something for the Brussels conference as well.

But Olson used Alfred North Whitehead's work as a prime source. Robin Blaser's essay "The Violets" and Shahar Bram's book, written in Hebrew and translated into English, is an excellent source: "Charles Olson and Alfred North Whitehead: An Essay on Poetry."

William Carlos Williams hinted at how Field Theory should be applied to poetry in 1948 ("The Poem as a Field of Action") and, of course, there's Duncan's "The Opening of the Field."

WCW was searching for a new measure throughout his life. I think "The Variable Foot" was a kind of awkward attempt to state the notion that, after Einstein's Theory of Relativity, a more relative (open) approach to structuring the poetic line was necessary. Olson sub-titled Projective Verse "Composition by Field" and while that applies to the page itself, the field of composition being much like the canvas of a Pollock painting, it also relates to the fields of energy one enacts as they write projectively. Olson said the process leads to "dimensions larger than the man."

I think one aspect of quantum physics which is most interesting to contemplate as we see that line, is the notion of "non-locality." What is MIND? Is it brain, or does it extend, in prayer for example, from Seattle (my location) to Haiti, or to Reading, Brussels, New Zealand, Cuba, Mars? If mind is non-local, then we ARE connected as one organism, making war akin to shooting at yr foot.

McClure was influenced greatly by the Hua Yen school of Buddhism, which predates Whitehead by quite a bit, but is quite similar. (Some scholars trace Whitehead's ideas back to ancient China.) With Olson, inspired by Whitehead, reality is deeper than objects. It is an "occasion of experience." Train yourself to fully immerse your consciousness in that occasion of experience and revision is unnecessary. Perhaps some fine-tuning as Gary Snyder put it, but there is intelligence in the language of the moment that supersedes the individual ego.

Francis Cook's "The Jewel Net of Indra" helps get these points across.

Also, more here: http://organicpoetry.org/essays.html

Thanks for asking.

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

From: Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, January 15, 2010 8:30:46 AM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

can you say more about quantum physics & BM, as well as McClure's continuation of BM's ways, Paul?
Ruth L.

On 1115110 11:11 AM, "Paul Nelson" <[redacted]> wrote:

Gerald,

Good question. Black Mountain was influenced greatly by the breakthroughs in science (quantum physics, field theory) that have not yet fully manifested in culture. Though this science is an evolution from the mechanistic, mainstream culture is, by and large, still there. In fact, the actions of the Bush administration (preemptive war/Guantanamo/Abu Ghraib, &c) and the Obama administration's extension of much of that approach indicate that we're more mechanistic than ever.

The possibilities of Projective Verse have not fully been explored, although Michael McClure and Nate Mackey seem to be the main ones (most popular anyway) utilizing that method. Although I see little on this list about McClure's use of the method.

I wonder how much living in such a pervasive hyper-capitalist and Industry-Generated-Culture addles engagement with a writing method that involves the HEAD, by way of the EAR, to the SYLLABLE and especially the HEART, by way of the BREATH, to the LINE

as well as "a use of speech at its least careless and least logical."

When practiced for a long enough time, this method does lead one to a deeper "stance toward reality" that is likely world-centric.

The Tools of the Sacred conference this May in Brussels will likely get into some of this.http://www.ulb.ac.be/philo/dll/colloques/tools_of_the_sacred/

Ciao,

Paul

P.S. Anyone go to the McClure, Rothenberg, Scalapino reading at City Lights last night?

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

From: Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, January 15, 2010 6:40:09 AM
Subject: Can anything...?

Can anything like the Black Mountain School
ever expand our possibilities again?

Gerald Schwartz

guidelines &

guidelines &

↑ Index

199. William Slaughter
Notice: Mudlark
Sat 16 Jan 2010

New and On View: Mudlark Flash No. 53 (2010)

Mexican Postcard from Nicole Broadhurst to Colleen Applegate, Late Porn Queen

Nicole Broadhursts work can be found, among other places, in Vox, Drunken Boat, The Caribbean Writer, Mangrove, Kennesaw Review, The Kenyon Review, Prairie Schooner, The Miami Heralds now-defunct Tropic Magazine, Poet Lore, and Visions-International. She has won the Eve of St. Agnes Poetry Award from Negative Capability.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

200. Factory School
Depleted Burden Down by Deborah Meadows
Sun 17 Jan 2010

Depleted Burden Down
by Deborah Meadows
Here is a poetry that explores the promise of public speech. What might we hear in poems that ask: if communities are built with weathered words, what is the sort of discernment that translation makes elusive? Public and private, Deborah Meadows' poems ask "what provokes us to step toward the podium and begin a primary language game."

Depleted Burden Down
Deborah Meadows
Factory School, 2009
PS3577
Poetry, 86 pages
ISBN: 9781600019753 (paper) $15
ISBN: 9781600019760 (hardcover) $30

Available from Small Press Distribution: www.spdbooks.org

Order direct from Factory School and receive a discounted price and free shipping: www.factoryschool.com/pubs/order.html#meadows

EXTRA SPECIAL DISCOUNT UNTIL FEBRUARY 15, 2010

Paper: $12 $10 (until February 15, 2010)
Hardcover: $25 $23 (until February 15, 2010)

 To receive the discounted price, send $10 (for paper) or $23 (for hardcover) to [redacted] using the Paypal payment system. **

NO LIMIT!

Factory School's discounted price includes shipping to the continental USA and represents a discounted price for individuals.

International orders please add $12.00 USD to your order for International Priority Mail.

Comments about Depleted Burden Down and the poetry of Deborah Meadows:

"Deborah Meadows' Depleted Burden Down begins its work in the space where your critical-poetic home used to be. In the midst of the rubble, which is also and nevertheless an ambiguously inflected "clearing" (with its estranged "beautiful" scraps of once-familiar meaning), Meadows asks who-in-relation writes or speaks of where we have gotten to, and in what language of. "This folding knife, this toad-stabber and father-killer was distributed to all veterans of World War II in bivouacs and colleges…forced to thought." At the head in our hearts, the question whither the secular democratic critical project, our texts that aspire from its raging fires and somber halls. To start: lift off, burden down, scavenge parts for new lodgings in this gritty, smart book." – Laura Elrick

"If it were possible to speak of speech as a shimmering "landscape" (an endless shifting of refraction angles, "Indra's veil"), slipping away from the perspective of "seeing/knowing," then the poetry of Deborah Meadows seems to me a thorough and perilous investigation of a border region between experience and description—"<…> How we can see // a creature and not know // what it is <…>" —that is, at the floating point that is always "beside the point," has no "space" and yet is an all-convex system of knowledge in ignorance ("but if the very nature of knowledge changes, at the time when the change occurs there will be no knowledge…" — Cratylus). The poem "After Hölderlin" (from her collection, Goodbye Tissues) says this directly as though vision yet again stumbled on a bothersome footnote to a welltrodden route. That which poetry can be, to Deborah Meadows, takes place precisely in this aporia. And not so much "takes place" as takes place in transition. There are no dharmas: they are mere reflections of one another." – Arkadii Dragomoshchenko (tr. E. Pavloff)

www.factoryschool.com/pubs/meadows/index.html

 If you wish to no longer receive notices from Factory School, reply to this email and let us know. **

↑ Index

201. Christophe Casamassima
Canadian Journal Editors and Book Reviewers - Please Contact Me...
Sun 17 Jan 2010

In March, Furniture Press will release its first full-length trade collection, Emily Carr's "directions for flying: right side lower arms raise arms bend knees repeat on left (36 fits: a young wife's almanac)," which won the first Furniture Press Poetry Prize in 2009. If anyone would like to review this title for Canadian readers, please contact me at this eMail address ([redacted]).

Thank you,
Christophe Casamassima

↑ Index

202. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: David Franks
Sun 17 Jan 2010

Good poem.

Murat

On Sat, Jan 16, 2010 at 2:16 PM, Lewis Warsh <[redacted]> wrote:

> I was sorry to hear that David Franks has died. Here's a poem by David published in Angel Hair Magazine #6, edited by Anne Waldman and Lewis Warsh, 1969.
>
> THE FOUNTAIN
>
> I walked two times around the fountain
> and I watched the branches full of green leaves
> double in the still water the light around
>
> and I sat down on the green bench in the middle > and my eyes fixed on the only lite window in the > tenement across the street from where I sat and it > was awhile until I focused my sight and I saw cut > through the blinds a man wearing a white undershirt
> washing in a sink I couldn't see and then I thought > no there are lovers there, not a man washing, and

I saw that for awhile and I saw them draw the blinds,
but I don't think they actually did and then it was the man wearing a white undershirt again shaving
for awhile over the sink I couldn't see the "Hot" faucet was turned on all the way and he forced it and then I saw the man glancing at me;

and I wondered if he saw me; I unfocused my eyes
again and thought and turned away and heard sirens
and I began to feel cold and I remembered that it was after 2 o'clock Wednesday morning and I wondered if that was too late to be where I was;

then I looked up at the window and the man wearing the white undershirt and the lovers who drew the blinds were watching me and then they weren't
and they were -- and then they weren't and then they were --
and they they weren't and then -- finally i said, leaning forward pointing emphatically in the direction of the mailbox across the street on the corner:

"Fuck it! If the police
come -- I'll be pissed off!"

But I felt gentle

and then I got afraid and I walked two times around the fountain and I watched the branches
full of green leaves double in the still water
the light around -- and I walked away from that place

to tell you about it but you weren't there
and then you came
and you were.

David Franks

↑ Index

203. David Chirot
Re: Can anything...?
Sun 17 Jan 2010

Re “the temper of the times” of which Catherine Daly writes passionately and insight—why necessarily by concerned with these, if one’s work and interests, and evidences one finds, “work against” this—how often have not the things which are worked with in one period and many following after-are not developed out of step with the ‘temper of the times”—how many Rimbauds have not known and pointed out that “there will be other—and more terrible!—workers to come”----how much of not only science but culture high and low has not be hugely been influenced by persons and inquires (think of the impact of Einstein's "obscure paper’s influence "in our times"!!-=-) once deemed “impossible,” “incredible,” “obscure,” “an insult in the face of Nature” as one obituary wrote of Pau Cezanne and his “botched” works--?—Didn’t Marx know of the impact of his work, although he seemed to al the world to be just some bearded guy haunting the shelves of the British Museum Library, and other libraries, --and today does one not find a plaque on the seat where Karl once sat, working out his theories, his researches among overlooked, dusty old texts, just as Rimbaud had done, and a million others—is not Foucault in “our time” not an example of a plunderer of museums and libraries, among the most obscure forgotten and mediocre texts, for those keys which unlocked for him the Panopticon, the creation of Institutions of Torture, medicine, Education, the hospital . . . with their attendant languages and terminologies each one another girder and welding point in the creation of the gigantic structures with which thought becomes rigidified, imprisoned, becomes in time its own monument to itself—its own self-proving series of “predictions” which seem always to posit the things which its ideologies eyes, in their rigid sockets, can only see, denying the peripheral visions which sweep in the horizons all around the grounds where the Mighty bureaucracies, universities, institutions, Technologies, Prisons, bloom, high and mighty and as depressingly “organized” and “overseen” by the state as the towers of Projects in the ghetto—How much jargon is at once the creator and jailor of a set of ideas whose once fragrantly “new” blooms become concrete flowers, to be splayed by fountains around which the dutiful are instructed. . . and does this not happen over and over to poetry itself—with each new series of ideological “sightings/sitings/citings” hardening in its once flowing arteries into a gigantic “stiff”—

Of course, these are “rhetorical” questions—yet might they not be read as “thoughtful questions” regarding the “necessity” of “following” perhaps even “unquestioningly”—what is said to be “the temper of one’s times”—need one “conform” in order to produce “useful and interesting works?”—which are al the more easily recognized as such by being in full view and purview of “the temper of one's times"—and yet—if one considers only things in this narrow area, dictated by others as much as oneself—how much questioning of things will then take place, without a much wider area with which to investigate them and think on them—how man connections deliberate or "by chance" will be missed—how much will goo hidden in plain site/cite/sight simply because one is equipped with only set of "view finders," telescopes and the like equipments for use in "producing" a "vision" of poesy, of the world, of anything—so that one sees hears and thinks, asks of, only those thing which one already knows, because proffered by the 'temper of one's times"—is no one indulging in a form of "blindness' with its attendant "insights" within a too narrow alley—within but one building of what Rimbaud called "The Splendid Cities"--

Is not one working with only "the temper of the times" as one intended audience so to speak—working at only producing that which is demanding and fulfilled, as though by a self fulfilling prophecy?—again, rhetorical-questions . . . —or are they rhetorical only--??

My father is a theoretical physicist and worked and taught also in bio-chemistry and bio-physics, back in the mid 1970's he was teaching multi-media courses which made use of overhead projection, taped readings by a variety of persons of the writings of poets, philosophers, scientists, Marxists, Situationists, Derrida, etc and also videos, slides, contemporary music among which Free jazz played large part--he was investigating the interrelationships of all branches of culture and knowledge in ways not unlike that of Olson and his range of students, followers, those influenced, inspired by him—

My brother Dr Paul Harris (Loyola Marymount University in LA) has taken up the torch for some time and is a President of the Society for Time, an organizer of yearly events which encompass music, writing, Oulipo--he has written a lot on this and uses Oulipo as a teaching device--and is a good friend of among others involved with the Time Society, (international Society for the Study of Tim—forgive me, I often confuse the actual name--)-Michel Serres whose books I would highly recommend as they are vast studies in their interrelationships of the arts and sciences is a good friend of his, are others in this field around the world.

To indulge myself in some brotherly respect—and "nepotism??--!!—check out Paul Harris' site---found by searching Paul Andre Harris--)

Perhaps it is the narrowness—the narrowing down of focus--in since the times of Olson et alia--a turning away from broader so to speak as Paul Nelson phrased it, concerns, and more inward inrelationwith language, so that language has for sometime n may quarters eschewed the kinds of interrelationships with the world and word in favor of the word itself, and as a consequence has taken a turn ever more towards a Formalism not so far distant from the New Formalism might be supposed.

(On the other hand, one might examine this narrowing down in terms of Isidore Isou's Lettriste theories of the development of Poetry especially, in terms of periods of “Amplitude” followed by those of “Chiseling”--)

“It is not the elements themselves which are new, but the order of their arrangement,” writes Pascal (an influence on Robert Smithson—fitting for an artist ,theoretician, critic, reviewer, essayist concerned with Earthworks--) and so re “the temper of our times,” one may be “absolutely modern” as Rimbaud wrote—and still make use of any forms, no matter how “Old” “out of date, of fashion, hors de mode au lieu de hors—ou dehors-- de monde”--) of study outside "poetics" which, both being in the world, exist simultaneously, may be studied together in order to enlarge the spheres of awareness in relation with language. One might say that Olson himself is not so much "new" even in his own time, as he himself well knew and pointed out--but is/was an extension further of developments going on in Modernism let alone with American writing itself since the times of Poe, Emerson , Whitman, Thoreau, Dickinson Melville et alia, in which the large world is taken to be a direct participant with language in the investigation of the world as it exits and as existed through time, whether in terms of ecology, or of cosmologies, or, as Melville shows, in the history itself the Whaling Industry which involves world wide voyaging and trade not only of goods but also of information ,a data about the physical world in terms of navigation flora, fauna (the Voyage of the Beagle for example--and, in fiction/literature and later, science fiction-itself an influence and tool used by Smithson--- mixing fact and fiction--of the travel Literatures of the period 1680-1800)--the influence of Von Humboldt on painting as depicted in the novella by Cesar Aira An Episode in the Life of a Landscape Painter (preface by Roberto Bolano) re a landscape painter from Germany roving, painting and studying vis scientific methods the aesthetics of the Latin American landscapes, topographies—

Olson called himself an “Archeologist of Morning”—an Archeologist of both what is the “dawn” of thinkings and poetries “in our time” as well as “in the past, at the beginnings, such one thinks on or with or of these, of poetry, culture, the world “itself”—so that, as with Smithson—“the present . . . must go into the places where remote futures meet remote pasts”—

One might think of Smithson himself—and Poe, whose Pym Smithson writes of (in A Sedimentation of the Mind: Earth Projects”)-as “seem(ing) to me excellent art criticism and prototype for rigorous “non site” investigations.” Smithson and Poe may both be thought of—I’ve written on this elsewhere—as Archeologists of Mourning—and of the “Work of Mourning” as Freud calls it.

Indeed, one may read Poe’s “Morning on the Wissihican” in terms both of Olson’s “Archeologist of Morning” and Freud’s Work, giving one the “Mourning on the Wissihican”—And note that Smithson’s comments on Poe’s Pym end with the final lines of that narrative and its “epilogue”—““I have graven it within the hills and my vengeance upon the dust wit in the rock”—

(For a long time— at my blog for example, I call myself and my work –an Anarkeyologist, doing the work of Anarkeyology--)

Olson saw himself indeed as part of a tradition extending back in time to Herodotus, in terms of "istorin, to find out for oneself"--and developed his ideas in terms of tectonic shifts changes in climate and types of animals and flora found through the world as well as specifically within Gloucester--his studies, like Robert Smithson’s Earthworks projects involving Sites and non-Sites mapping a correlation between the micro and macro cosmism not only on the surface of the earth, but deep below it--and also under the oceans--and into space (the figure of the aircraft carriers at the conclusion of Call me Ishmael, which unbeknownst to Olson at the time, had been completed the day the bomb was dropped on Hiroshima--thus ushering in the Space and Atomic Ages, the Cold War—and, according to some definitions, claims, among many-- that postmodern of which Olson was already writing in 1950--

The Brakage Issue of Film Culture (Fall 1963) concludes with B's letters to Jane re his visit with Olson and their discussions about focal points and al the various meanings of the rod "vision."

This was entering into roughly the same years in which Jerome Rothenberg was putting forth in his colossally influential (and to this day) book Technicians of the Scared, which opened up new "open fields' not only in terms of ethno poetics, but for myself, something my father had long taught me of using the Alhambra as an actual site example--the interconnection among the technologies of writing, as both of and as of mathematics, and poetry, language--and i turn, the interrelationship is of these with the philosophers of the time in which the Alhambra was built, a time perhaps unique in human history n the West, win which the Moslem Christian and Jewish cultures were all working together on a similar and often overlapping as well as directly connected project--a time in which the spiritual and philosophical teachings of these cultures were--working together--a part of each other rather than apart from each other—

(See Jerome Rothenberg's superb Anthologies-in-Progress blog:

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com <http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com> <http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com>

Re the work of Jerry Rothenberg, I think that his Anthologies themselves have revolutionized not only the contexts, histories, cultures, technologies of poetry and poetics-in terms of the Western tradition—(I'm not qualified to venture writing of this in re the eastern traditions--) not only of the texts which one is given to work with being immensely expanded, but also in terms of reconceiving the Anthology itself—which, considering the vast stretches of time and space, of ranges of poetries and poetics, Rothenberg has brought into a continually emerging and enlarging frame—(both Olson—as Creeley so brilliantly pointed out re O's "we are inside limits" being also the opening out of immense possibilities-- and Smithson agree on the need for, as Smithson puts it, a container, for the ocean Experience of art, poetry and the making of it require that "for there to be art, it must have a container"—as—not only a "container" with immense possibilities—but Rothenberg, for me at any rate, has created of the Anthology itself, and in turn, of his series with his collaborators, of a LONG POEM—a LONG POEM encompassing all these texts from all their various epochs and understandings, their own contexts and those supplied by later times and critiques, understandings—and also in terms of a continually expanding awareness of poetry as a form of investigation and exploration indeed into Smithson's "remote future meets remote pasts"—which allow for the sorts of "ruins in reverse" and "reverse engineering" of which Smithson, and myself, following him, write—what Fellini called, re his Fellini's Satyricon —"a science fiction set in the past"—Time travel and via the sites and non-sites —space travel also—and al of it may be found right in front of one, hidden, like Poe's Purloined Letter—in plain sight, to which I add also "site" and "cite"—

I think of Jerry's project as being at once present, a LONG POEM, a library, an anthology of "containers" each pointing to myriads of never ending possiblities —and as kind of Borgesian Library also—POINTING TOWARDS WHAT SEEMS AT FIRST TO BE " quite reasonably" An IMPOSSIBLITY-- as each word would "quite reasonably" seem to cancel out the other— A LONG BORGSIAN DOCUMENTARY POEM—that is, in the sense that "Borgesian" is ofen taken to be a sign of the "fictional, the hypothetical, the Pataphysical in these sense that is a science of exceptions—to the "rules"—of fiction as well as "fact'-- in that within these never ending texts and possibilities there exists also the UNWRITTEN, THE WRITING OF THE NO—all those Bartlbyian refusals, the "I prefer not tos" of the writings "about them" such as Melville's, and that today of Jouannais and Benabou in France, of Vila-Matas in Spain and to some extent, at least attempting to be—oneself also—and also George Stein who writes in his My Unwritten Books: " a book unwritten is not a void"—as it creates nonetheless, a form of reverberation—(I think of Bachelard's writings in this context as an excellent area of investigation--, of the effects of reverberation which are unwritten, unnamed, unnamable—and in a sense—FREE—OUTSIDE —the “Bounds of Literature”—

(See the the entry today at my blog re Non-writing and Unwritten: http:// davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2010/01/david-baptiste-chirot-non-writing.html

(When Robin Blaser was here in Milwaukee few years go he spoke a bit about the Alhambra n during the break sitting out front of Woodland Pattern Book Center, having our smokes, we discussed this much further, and told him of what my father had shown me at the Alhambra--)

Juts because the "temper of the times" may seem to work against the openings, possibilities and uses of such approaches with poetry and poetics--does not mean one need to conform--which, unfortunately has been greatly the "scene' for some time, an unquestioning following of various dogmas and in turn a consequent contraction and constriction of what are considered the "concerns" of poetry and poetics. All too often ,one finds various approaches, questions, issues, examples, dismissed out of hand simply because they do not "fit in" with a conformity with the 'temper of the times" in re what language is concerned with what ways on may investigate its lives and effects, its histories, its uses, its ways of working as poetical language rather than continually coming across a separation like so many Walls between the "poetic" and anything hauling with it the dross of the world, be it politics, history, other cultures languages, etc--

↑ Index

204. Adam Tobin
Re: Can anything...?
Sun 17 Jan 2010

I'm starting a school in the basement of my bookstore. Classes start in the fall. Details to come.

> Can anything like the Black Mountain School
> ever expand our possibilities again?
>
> Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

205. steve dalachinsky
readings
Mon 18 Jan 2010

thanks to all of you who attended yuko's party and help make it a big success

DOUBLE HEADER

---

steve dalachinsky reads

january 25, 2010 at 9 p m with matt maneri on viola at local 269 - 269 e. houston st. (at suffolk)

10$ / 7$ for students & seniors

Tuesday January 26, 2010 7PM - 9PM

Bluestockings Bookstore Reading Series
(hosted by Vittoria Repetto)

Featuring: Joy Ladin & Yuko Otomo

Bluestockings Bookstore
172 Allen St.
(between Staton & Rivington)
1 1/2 blocks south from E.Houston
NYC
[redacted]
[redacted]
Open mike - sign-up at 7 pm - 8 minute limit
$5 suggested donation

On Sun, 17 Jan 2010 11:50:59 -0500 Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
writes:
> Good poem.
>
> Murat
>
>
> On Sat, Jan 16, 2010 at 2:16 PM, Lewis Warsh <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > I was sorry to hear that David Franks has died. Here's a poem by > David
> > published in Angel Hair Magazine #6, edited by Anne Waldman and > Lewis Warsh,
> > 1969.
> >

> >
> > THE FOUNTAIN
> >
> > I walked two times around the fountain
> > and I watched the branches full of green leaves
> > double in the still water the light around
> >
> > and I sat down on the green bench in the middle > > and my eyes fixed on the only lite window in the > > tenement across the street from where I sat and it > > was awhile until I focused my sight and I saw cut > > through the blinds a man wearing a white undershirt
> > washing in a sink I couldn't see and then I thought > > no there are lovers there, not a man washing, and > > I saw that for awhile and I saw them draw the blinds,
> > but I don't think they actually did and then it > > was the man wearing a white undershirt again shaving
> > for awhile over the sink I couldn't see the "Hot"
> > faucet was turned on all the way and he forced it and > > then I saw the man glancing at me;
> >
> > and I wondered if he saw me; I unfocused my eyes
> > again and thought and turned away and heard sirens
> > and I began to feel cold and I remembered that > > it was after 2 o'clock Wednesday morning and > > I wondered if that was too late to be where I was;
> >
> > then I looked up at the window and the man
> > wearing the white undershirt and the lovers who
> > drew the blinds were watching me and then they weren't
> > and they were -- and then they weren't and then they were --
> > and they they weren't and then -- finally i said, leaning > > forward pointing emphatically in the direction of the > > mailbox across the street on the corner:
> >
> >
> "Fuck it! If
> > the police > > come -- I'll be pissed off!"
> >
> > But I felt > gentle

> >
> > and then I got afraid and I walked two times
> > around the fountain and I watched the branches
> > full of green leaves double in the still water
> > the light around -- and I walked away from that place
> >
> > to tell you about it
> > but you weren't there
> > and then you came
> > and you were.
> >
> >
> > David Franks
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

206. Camille Martin
new at Rogue Embryo
Mon 18 Jan 2010

New on my blog:

* “The Night is Tough”: Voices of hope from two Haitian poets

* “something gets lost in the translation, and it’s not me, friend.” (more from “nomadic slant”)

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.ca

↑ Index

207. julia bloch

Thurs: Scappettone & Foster read in Philly

Mon 18 Jan 2010

TONYA FOSTER
The Kelly Writers House and the Emergency Poetry Series

TONYA FOSTER
and
JENNIFER SCAPPETTONE

Thursday, January 21, 6pm in the Arts CafÃ©
Kelly Writers House | 3805 Locust Walk | Philadelphia
This event is free and open to the public

TONYA FOSTER is the author of A SWARM OF BEES IN HIGH COURT, forthcoming from Belladonna and Futurepoem in 2010. She is currently completing â€œA Mathematics of Chaos,â€ a cross-genre, multi-media piece on New Orleans, and â€œMonkey Talk,â€ an inter-genre piece about race, paranoia, and surveillance, and â€œA History Of The Bitch,â€ a collection of poems. A native of New Orleans, she resides and writes in Harlem.

JENNIFER SCAPPETTONE is the author of FROM DAME QUICKLY (2009, Litmus), and of several chapbooks, including THING ODE/ODE OGGETTUALE (2008, La Camera Verde), translated into Italian in dialogue with Marco Giovenale. EXIT 43 -â€” an archeology of Superfund sites interrupted by an opera of pop-ups -- is in progress for Atelos Press. She edited BELLADONNA ELDERS SERIES #5: POETRY, LANDSCAPE, APOCOLYPSE, featuring her pop-ups and prose and new writing by Etel Adnan and Lyn Hejinian (2009, Belladonna). Pop-up scores are now being adapted for performance at Dance Theater Workshop, the Center for Performance Research, and elsewhere in collaboration with choreographer Kathy Westwater as PARK. She guest-edited the feature of AUFGABE 7, devoted to contemporary Italian â€œpoetry of research.â€ A selection of Neosuprematist Webtexts, filmed verse stills, was installed at the Infusoria exhibit of visual poetry, and more are coming to Speechless. She is an assistant professor at the University of Chicago.

EMERGENCY addresses North American poetic practice as it is centered around close-knit communities, long-distance mentorships, new media, and chapbook exchange, asking how theoretical stances and aesthetic practices are transmitted among poets at different stages in their careers. The series was launched in 2006 with support from the Kerry Sherin Wright Prize for programming at Kelly Writers House in Philadelphia, an award designed to support a project that demonstrates aesthetic capaciousness and literary communitarianism. All readings are held at the Writers House and are available online at PennSound.

http://emergency-reading.blogspot.com/
http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=123179046644

↑ Index

208. Douglas Manson Blake Lecture plus
Mon 18 Jan 2010

Hi,
Please consider coming to Cafe Sucre this Sunday, for a coffeehouse Blake lecture plus

A Lecture on William Blake, Poet and Painter

Where: Cafe Sucre, 520 DeKalb Ave. (at Bedford), Brooklyn NY
When: Sunday, Jan. 24, 4:00 p.m.
Free, but please buy a menu item.

To get there: take the G train to Bedford/Nostrand, exit at Bedford, go North two blocks to DeKalb, left to the Cafe.

Flyer is HERE: dougfinmanson.blogspot.com

Writer, poet, educator, sometime blogger and publisher, Douglas Manson is the author of _Roofing and Siding_ and _The Table_, both of which he will send you as a .pdf if you want them.

↑ Index

209. Kyle Schlesinger
Jack Hirschman
Mon 18 Jan 2010

Does anyone have contact information for Jack Hirschman?

Please drop me a line at [redacted]

Thanks!

Kyle

↑ Index

210. Joel Weishaus
"The Gateless Gate-New Series"
Mon 18 Jan 2010

Dear Friends and Colleagues;

Here are the first thirty pages of "The Gateless Gate-New Series": http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/Gate-R/Cover-R.htm

These thirty pages--which begin past the introduction--consist of 15 pages of text and 15 facing pages of images that don't resemble, but rather echo each other on various levels of consciousness. Those of you who read the original texts, which I withdrew from the internet this morning, will recognize them, although there's been some rewriting, repositioning, deletions and additions. The images, however, are all new, their code still wet.

Thank you for your participation in this project that opens one way of writing, designing and presenting literature made on and for the Internet, one that seeks a continuum to the tradition of books and other printed media, while using the tools and avenues of the newer medium.

If you want your name removed for this mailing list, please let me know. Your feedback and critique is always welcome and taken seriously.

-Joel Weishaus

↑ Index

211. Sarah Sarai
Re: Can anything...?
Mon 18 Jan 2010

Regarding poets & mathematics:

Muriel Rukeyser wrote a 439-page bio of the 19th century American mathematician and "father of physical chemistry" Willard Gibbs. Joseph Wood Krutch, for The Nation, took issue with her book, partly because she was able to connect Melville, Whitman and Gibbs. Too much imagination for Krutch.

I learned about this through the Cuny Poetics Document Initiative, Lost and Found chapbook series. Darwin & the Writers by Muriel Rukeyser. Full list (beautiful booklets):

•The Amiri Baraka/Edward Dorn Correspondence.
•The Kenneth Koch/Frank O'Hara Letters: Selections.
•Muriel Rukesyer, Darwin & the Writers.
•Philip Whalen, Journals: Selections.

•Robert Creeley, Contexts of Poetry, with selections from Daphne Marlatt's Journals.

As for schools, I'm real mistrustful. Would Emily D. or Zora Neale Hurston be welcome? If groups are genuinely open-minded, great. Otherwise I prefer to look on most movements as groups of talented friends and not movements.

↑ Index

212. Wanda Phipps

Wanda's Upcoming Shows

Mon 18 Jan 2010

Upcoming shows by Wanda Phipps:
Yara Celebrates 20 Years of Theatre
A Festival of Music, Poetry and Art Celebrating two Decades of dreams and Destinations
January 22-24, 2010
presented by Yara Arts Group and Ukrainian Insitute of America
2 East 79th Street at Fifth Avenue in New York
Friday and Saturday at 8PM
$15 Friday, $25 Saturday and for both events $30
tickets available at door
for information call [redacted]
Wanda will be reading both nights: Friday January 22 at 8 PM, when 12 visual artists, 8 poets, 4 dancers and 3 musicians celebrate Yara with their poetry, music and art and on Saturday January 23 at 8PM when Yara artists sing and perform poetry from Yara's projects over the years.
for more details see:

www.brama.com/yara/20-uia-press.html

for a current list of artists

www.brama.com/yara/20-uia.html

and Sunday afternoon, Jan. 31 3pm
at Starving Artist Cafe
249 City Island Ave.
City Island, NY 10464.

John Guth and Wanda Phipps perform at a "poetry brunch"

Wanda will read from her works sometimes accompanied by John's guitar, and also sing some settings of her poetry. John will perform some settings of poems he's concocted over the years by Wallace Stevens, William Blake, Lewis Carroll and others.

Info at starvingartistonline.com

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

213. Gabrielle Welford
The Rescue Operation's Priorities in Haiti (fwd)
Mon 18 Jan 2010

This message is in MIME format. The first part should be readable text, while the remaining parts are likely unreadable without MIME-aware tools.

--Boundary_(ID_pSnZKXSLfjNCAsbEZsV1mg)

dear camille, thanks for the haitian poems. i feel sick and very sad. my daughter advises sending money to Partners In Health (PIH). its paul farmer's organization--a grassroots healthcare initiative that already has clincis in haiti. go to http://www.standwithhaiti.org/haiti. annie has been reading his book.

you'll see below--i feel like throwing up--that obama has picked g.w. bush to run "the reconstruction" of haiti. all best, gabe

----- Original Message -----
From: ED
Subject: [evol-psych] The Rescue Operation's Priorities in Haiti

http://www.counterpunch.org/valdes01182010.html

MLK Day Edition
January 18, 2010

Class and Race Fear
The Rescue Operation's Priorities in Haiti
By NELSON P. VALDÃ‰S

"The contempt we have been taught to entertain for blacks, make us fear many things that are founded neither in reason nor experience."

- Alexander Hamilton in letter to John Hay, 1799.

"Only those who hate the black population, see hatred in blacks"

- JosÃ© MartÃ, Montecristi Manifesto, 1895

The recent earthquakes that have demolished the city of Port au Prince and its surroundings has left Haiti stateless, ever poorer, desperate and in need of long term global assistance. A world-wide rescue operation has been initiated. But, it is questionable to what extent the best interests of the people of Haiti have been and will be considered, in the long run.

First, the foreign aid teams "rescued" and took out of the country the non-Haitians, particularly the Europeans, Americans and assorted other tourists. The Voice of America on Jan. 16 reported: "In the last day or so the United States and French governments have started running passenger flights out of the country [Haiti] for evacuees from those countries. People line up and wait for a plane to arrive so they can leave Haiti and leave behind what is a very difficult, traumatic experience for many." [1]

Second, five days have gone by without any real significant distribution of medical supplies, food or water to the neediest people.

The facts indicate clear priorities: the Haitians are not first in line. In fact, the rescuers seem to have a widespread fear of the poor and desperate Haitians. A Scottish reporter said, "aid workers in Haiti today called for more security amid fears of attacks by increasingly desperate earthquake survivors." [2]

Yet, the Haitians have been extraordinarily patient despite the fact that their world has collapsed around them.

The assistance teams seem reluctant to distribute until they feel secure. Thus, the US government sent troops to bring aid and the Haitian government dispatched police to provide "security," and respond to the exaggerated rumors of "looting." Indeed, there have been reports that the security squads moved the aid providers to "secure" places. [3]

The Haitian people who wait for basic needs have not been mobilized to work on their own behalf. Rather, the "humanitarians" treat them as children, with no thought to providing them with the tools to help themselves. One Haitian consul to Brazil, George Samuel Antoine declared two days ago that any country that happens to have Africans is cursed! [4] Shades of Pat Robertson and David Brooks.

Seemingly, the outsiders coming to help the people don't trust the natives, despite the fact that the Haitians are dying, hungry, thirsty, sick, homeless, and with most of their families gone or lost. The Haitian chief of police, like most people in positions of authority, is a foreigner appointed by the United Nations.

Meanwhile, the twice elected and twice removed political leader of the Haitians - Jean-Bertrand Aristide is not permitted to enter his own country. In fact, President Obama appointed one of those who ousted him - George W. Bush - to help "supervise" the "reconstruction" of Haiti. Bush merited his appointment presumably because of the wonderful job he did supervising the post Katrina aid program. Meanwhile, for all intent and purposes there is no longer, except symbolically, a Haitian government.

Perhaps it is too harsh but it appears as if those in charge think that a few thousand more Haitians dead would make it easier to control the situation. USA Today has reported, "Rescuers pulled a dehydrated but otherwise uninjured woman from the ruins of a luxury hotel in the Haitian capital early Sunday, drawing applause from onlookers who have seen little to cheer as the body count continued to rise from Tuesday's earthquake."

They expect Haitians to remain patient, without food or water or aid to rescue their friends and relatives. Haitians are not even informed as to what to expect or when.

Some US tv channels have begun broadcasting about vodou burials. The US mass media has turned the whole tragedy into another narcissistic story about how Americans handle disasters. Thus, Hillary at one end, and Bill on the other travel going to Haiti to see for themselves! [5] As if such voyages have inherently curative powers!

Ironically, US and NATO can quickly deliver death from the air, but, apparently won't unleash their technology and resources to quickly save lives. United Nations tanks have been sent to different locations throughout what remains of the city, particularly the poorer neighborhoods such as CitÃ© Soleil. [6] A poor substitute for food and water.

In Afghanistan drones fire at will with no one at the Pentagon expressing minimal concern, yet, in the Haitian case dropping food and water has been avoided "for fear of riots." Apparently no one has figured that people will riot because of the absence of drinking water or food; unless they have to go without either for enough time so that the Haitians experience a Caribbean version of the final solution.

On January 15th, the United Nations' Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs issued a report stating, "Haiti is currently at UN Security Phase 3. This will implicate ongoing operations in terms of limiting the ability to move around the city and work at night (which is also hindered by the lack of electricity). Patrols reported that the situation is calm in general, but there are reports of stone throwing at passing vehicles, looting and acts of vandalism. ICRC has inspected several prisons. The central prison was completely destroyed, meaning up to 4,000 prisoners have escaped." [7] Under Security Phase III all international staff and families are relocated inside or outside the country.

It is unclear who is directing what. Rear Admiral Ted Branch, the most senior military official aboard the USS Carl Vinson stated, "We have lift, we have communications, we have some command and control, but we don't have much relief supplies to offer.We have no supplies at the airport that we have access to. There are other supplies there that are under the control of other agencies, other organizations and we haven't yet coordinated together to make those supplies available for anyone to deliver." [8] The United Nations and the US authorities on the ground, are telling those who directly want to deliver help not to do so because they might be attacked by "hungry mobs." [9] Two cargo planes from Doctors Without Borders have been forced to land in the Dominican Republic because the shipments have to be accompanied within Port au Prince by US military escort, according to the US command. [10]

One American on the ground summed up the situation: "For the aid to work and the teams of search and rescue workers to be able to do their job there is going to need to be a major effort of all people to lay down their own fear and personal need and allow the help to get to the worst off. Pray that people will think of others as best they can and that relief will begin to get to the places it is needed most." [11] Such fears, created and nurtured in colonial times, have been reproduced for over two hundred years. Alexander Hamilton and JosÃ© MartÃ recognized the humanity of the former black slaves turned revolutionaries and told us to put our fears aside. As Linda Polman writes in The Times of London class and racial fear by the rescue teams is costing the lives of thousands in Haiti. [12]

Nelson P ValdÃ©s is Emeritus Professor of Sociology, founder of the Latin America Data Base and director of the Cuba-L Project. He is a specialist on Latin America and writes for Counter Punch.

The author wishes to think the suggestions by Sandra Levinson, Ned Sublette and Saul Landau.

Notes

[1] VOA Correspondent Reports on relief Efforts in Haiti," VOA News.Com,01/16/10

[2] "Fear of Looting as Desperation Among Haiti Earthquake Survivors Take Hold," Scotsman.com, 01/15/10

[3] "Haiti Earthquake Updates: Live Blog," Guardian (London), 01/15/10

[4] "Terremoto no Haiti: Consul Haitiano Afirma Que o Africano em si tem maldicao," YouTube, 01/14/10

[5] "Apocalipsis social en Haiti?", IAR Noticias, 01/167/10

[6]"Hillary Clinton Meets With Haiti Leader After Arrival," CNN, 01/17/10

[7] "Haiti: Ocha Sit Rep # 4"

[8] "After a Day of Deliveries, US Ship Runs Out of Aid," AFP, 01/16/10

[9] "RD se vuelca en ayuda a haitianos," Listin Diario (Dominican Republic), 01/17/10

[10] "Cargo Plane With Full Hospital and Staff Blocked From Landing in Port-au-Prince," Doctors Without Borders, 01/17/10.

[11] "Overwhelming Sadness - Overwhelming Gratitude," The Livesay [Haiti] Weblog, 01/15/10

[12] Linda Polman, "Fear of the Poor is Hampering Haiti Rescue," Tomes Online, 01/18/10

__._,_.___
Reply to sender | Reply to group
Messages in this topic (1)
Recent Activity: a.. New Members 5
Visit Your Group Start a New Topic
MARKETPLACE
Going Green: Your Yahoo! Groups resource for green living Switch to: Text-Only, Daily Digest . Unsubscribe . Terms of Use.

__,_._,___

--Boundary_(ID_pSnZKXSLfjNCAsbEZsV1mg)--

↑ Index

214. Brian Stefans

Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Tue 19 Jan 2010

Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested parties:

http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15

Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting my web knowledge to use.

Brian

↑ Index

215. Jeffrey Side
Interviwer for Bruce Andrews needed
Tue 19 Jan 2010

Would anyone be interested in interviewing Bruce Andrews for The Argotist Online?

↑ Index

216. Jeffrey Side
Interviewer needed for Amiri Baraka
Tue 19 Jan 2010

Would anyone be interested in interviewing Amiri Baraka for The Argotist Online?

↑ Index

217. Bob Heman
10th Big CLWN WR Event - Friday, January 29th at Westbeth
Tue 19 Jan 2010

The 10th Big CLWN WR Event
Friday, January 29, 2010
7:00-10:00 P.M.
Westbeth Community Room
155 Bank Street / 57 Bethune St.
NYC

FREE ADMISSION!!!

featuring
LEONARD GONTAREK
in from Philadelphia for a rare New York appearance
&
MARTHA KING
co-host of the superb Prose Pros series at the Sidewalk Cafe with special guests

Joel Chace, Thomas Fucaloro, Bob Hart, Debra Jenks, Judy Kamilhor, Christina Knight, Carolyn Ota, Adriana Scopino, Moira T. Smith, Phyllis Wat, Nathan Whiting, Liza Wolsky

plus a special mini-memorial for

Clown War co-founder Stephen Fairhurst who passed away last year

hosted by BOB HEMAN
(editor of CLWN WR & its predecessor Clown War since 1971)
& the Westbeth Artists Residents Council Literary Arts Committee

Westbeth is an artists' housing complex in the far West Village convenient to the 14th St. stop on the A, C and E trains, the West 4th Street stop on the A, C, E, B, D & F trains, and the Christopher St. stop on the 1 train. 57 Bethune St. is mid-block b/w Washington and West Streets, then up steps to inner courtyard. 155 Bank St. is mid-block b/w Washington and West Streets, enter outer courtyard and up ramp to inner courtyard.

↑ Index

218. Patrick F. Durgin
The Kenning Anthology of Poets Theater: 1945-1985
Tue 19 Jan 2010

Kenning Editions proudly announces THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER: 1945-1985, edited by Kevin Killian and David Brazil.

With new interest in poetry as a performative art, and with prewar experiments much in mind, the young poets of postwar America infused the stage with the rhythms and shocks of their poetry. From the multidisciplinary nexus of Black Mountain, to the Harvard-based Cambridge Poets Theatre, to the West Coast Beats and San Francisco Renaissance, these energies manifested themselves all at once, and through the decades have continued to grow and mutate, innovating a form of writing that defies boundaries of genre. THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER: 1945-1985 documents the emergence, growth, and varied fortunes of the form over decades of American literary history, with a focus on key regional movements. The largest and most comprehensive anthology of its kind yet assembled, the volume collects classics of poets theater as well as rarities long out of print and texts from unpublished manuscripts and archives. It will be an indispensable reference for students of postwar American poetry and avant-garde theater.

Among the poets featured in THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER are Charles Olson, John Ashbery, Frank O'Hara, Russell Atkins, Gregory Corso, Helen Adam, Michael McClure, James Broughton, Kenneth Koch, Jackson Mac Low, Lorenzo Thomas, Anne Waldman, ruth weiss, Hannah Weiner, Lew Welch, Sonia Sanchez, Joe Brainard, Bruce Andrews, Keith Waldrop, Rosmarie Waldrop, Bob Holman and Bob Rosenthal, Steve Benson, Ted Greenwald, Carla Harryman, Ntozake Shange, Bob Perelman, Kit Robinson, Robert Grenier, Alan Bernheimer, Charles Bernstein, Stephen Rodefer, Fiona

Templeton, Kenward Elmslie, and Leslie Scalapino. Also included are previously unpublished plays by Jack Spicer, V.R. "Bunny" Lang, James Schuyler, Robert Duncan, Madeline Gleason, Diane di Prima, Barbara Guest, Ron Padgett, James Keilty, Theresa Hak Kyung Cha, Johanna Drucker, and Nada Gordon. The editors provide informative and provocative prefatory matter, including extensive notes on each play, as well as several that fall within the purview of the book but, for one reason or another, were omitted, as with Pedro Pietri's The Masses Are Asses or Jessica Hagedorn's Tenement Lover. Rounding out the book are contemporary classics, such as LeRoi Jones/Amiri Baraka's Dutchman and Kathy Acker's The Birth of the Poet.

This is a great book! Here are the poets, the great modern poets who have given us our language, our imagery, our style---Judith Malina / Don't be fooled by the sober title. This wonderful volume cannot but delight anyone who likes their plays served in the raw and the cooked of poetry.---Caroline Bergvall / This is a major contribution to poetics and performance studies.---Michael Davidson or postage paid by ordering directly from the press <https://www.2checkout.com/2co/buyer/orderpage?sid=1266894>. Further discounts are available by subscription <http://www.kenningeditions.com/?page_id=38> to Kenning Editions.

Order online from Small Press Distribution <http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9780976736455/the-kenning-anthology-of-poets-theater-19451980.aspx?rf=1>,

ISBN: 0-9767364-5-4 ISBN 13: 978-0-9767364-5-5 $25.95 596 pp. paperback POETRY/DRAMA PERFORMANCE / distributed by Small Press Distribution www.spdbooks.org / publicity contact: Patrick F. Durgin / (e) [redacted] (w) www.kenningeditions.com (ph) [redacted] / support your local independent bookseller with a purchase /

Kevin Killian lives and works in San Francisco where he has written forty plays for the Poets Theater there. In addition, he has written many books of prose and poetry including Selected Amazon Reviews (2006); Action Kylie (2008); Impossible Princess (2009); and Spreadeagle (2010). David Brazil is the author of A Book Called Spring (2008) and Spy Wednesday (2010). He coedits the xerox periodical TRY! with Sara Larsen.

↑ Index

219. steve russell
Re: Can anything...?
Tue 19 Jan 2010

I'm wondering about those physics metaphors & its possible femine component.
Where's the singularity? The self...
The inflationary universe? Society

A BLACK HOLE ... Sleep ... -- marish sleep?

Physics/metanarratives ... on & on ...
survivalism, identity, the baffling single minded pronoun: "I."

& I recently picked up a feminisst book that may oust Kant/foundational metaphysics -- 'tho that's 2 centuries old.

: book: The Madwoman's Reason:
blurb:

"Nancy Holland draws on the work of Heidegger and Derrida to formulate a concept of appropriate action that can address bothe extraorinary ethical problems with particular cultural tradition and moral conflict between different cultures. Her feminist reappropriation of the concept of the appropriate is then further developed by reference to Aristotle and Kant,whose ethical theories, she argues, are independent of their metaphysics ...

As an example of the application of her theory, Holland examines the problem of ordaining women in the Roman Catholic Church and then goes on to compare her approach with that of other philosophers working in virtue theory, postmodern ethics, and feminism.

Virtue theory!!!!!!!!!!!!
Vice has glamour on his side to tempt
but virtue is most lovely.

_____
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sat, January 16, 2010 2:52:48 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

exactly: a paradigm shift akin to an earthquake...

_____
From: amy king <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sat, January 16, 2010 1:30:18 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

Well put, Catherine.

----- Original Message ----
From: Catherine Daly

I would venture that the temper of the time is against "poet's study" of topics like Mayan culture or a la Alice Fulton and fractals, or even Brenda Hillman and neo-gnosticism.

I also think that looking at new metaphors in physics (for example) to apply in poetry, for example, functions differently now than previously, now we realize more completely that these metaphors are often distractions, that they might get us knowledge, but the metaphors also enforce themselves, shape that knowledge in a way. In other words, I'm with Mairead. Major adjustments in world view, like feminism, probably a lot more expansive.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

_____
BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

220. Aldon Nielsen
a place to stay in San Diego in early March?
Tue 19 Jan 2010

Dear Poetics friends in San Diego:

One of our great grad students is coming to San Diego to do some work with the Reznikoff papers March 1-5 (see below).

If anybody can help with housing, or a lead on housing, please let me know backchannel.

Thanks,
Aldon

Hi Aldon--

I will be in San Diego to look at the Reznikoff Papers from March 1-5. I'll be arriving at 11:19am on 3/1, so that won't be a full day of research -- I'll probably go to the Mandeville Special Collections to fill out some paper work that day. The full days of research will be March 2-4. I'll be leaving San Diego at 8:00am on March 5.

Have a great weekend,
Julius
--
Aldon L. Nielsen
Kelly Professor of American Literature
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA
16802-6200

[redacted]

sailing the blogosphere at http://heatstrings.blogspot.com

"kindling his mind (more than his mind will kindle)"

--William Carlos Williams, early adopter

↑ Index

221. David Chirot
Happy 201st Birthday Edgar Allan Poe!!!!
Tue 19 Jan 2010

Happy 201st today to Edgar Allan Poe--perhaps the most internationally influential of al American writers--
"Ride, Boldy Ride!!

the only American writer to have a professional sports team whose name is drawn from his work--
the Baltimore Ravens--of the National Football leage--

here a small echap tribute published by GAMM:
http://www.scribd.com/doc/22218970/chirot-death-from-this-window

↑ Index

222. Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Opera reading
Tue 19 Jan 2010

Thursday, January 21, 9:00 PM. Luggage Store Gallery -- 1007 Market St. at 6th in San Francisco

A workshop production of "Terrible Things Will Happen But It Will Be Okay: A Donner Party Opera."

Music by Guillermo Galindo, libretto by Hugh Behm-Steinberg.

From the distant future, where God has merged with the Walt Disney Corporation, a group of tourists come on a pilgrimage to witness the last days of the Donner Party and to meet the Great Bear of California.

This will be a staged reading/singing of the libretto with an electronic musical background.

For those in the bay area, hope you can stop by and see us!

Hugh Behm-Steinberg

↑ Index

223. amy king

Re: Happy 201st Birthday Edgar Allan Poe!!!!

Tue 19 Jan 2010

Sad News about Poe tradition -- http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/us_poe_mystery_visitor

BALTIMORE â€“ It is what Edgar Allan Poe might have called "a mystery all insoluble": Every year for the past six decades, a shadowy visitor would leave roses and a half-empty bottle of cognac on Poe's grave on the anniversary of the writer's birth. This year, no one showed. Did the mysterious "Poe toaster" meet his own mortal end? Did some kind of ghastly misfortune befall him? Will he be heard from nevermore? Con't -- http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/us_poe_mystery_visitor _____ BOOK Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

----- Original Message ----
From: David Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, January 19, 2010 12:17:54 PM
Subject: Happy 201st Birthday Edgar Allan Poe!!!!

Happy 201st today to Edgar Allan Poe--perhaps the most internationally influential of al American writers--
"Ride, Boldy Ride!!

the only American writer to have a professional sports team whose name is drawn from his work--
the Baltimore Ravens--of the National Football leage--

here a small echap tribute published by GAMM:
http://www.scribd.com/doc/22218970/chirot-death-from-this-window

↑ Index

224. Ruth Lepson
Re: Happy 201st Birthday Edgar Allan Poe!!!!
Tue 19 Jan 2010

---

btw, there's a Poe exhibit at the boston public library related to what he did here, put together by prof paul lewis of boston college.

On 1119110 7:41 PM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Sad News about Poe tradition -- > http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/us_poe_mystery_visitor
>
> BALTIMORE It is what Edgar Allan Poe might have called "a mystery all insoluble": Every year for the past six decades, a shadowy visitor would leave roses and a half-empty bottle of cognac on Poe's grave on the anniversary of the writer's birth. This year, no one showed.
> Did the mysterious "Poe toaster" meet his own mortal end? Did some kind of ghastly misfortune befall him? Will he be heard from nevermore?
> Con't -- http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/us_poe_mystery_visitor
>
> _____
> BOOK
> Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm
>
> INTERVIEW
>
> Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: David Chirot <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Tue, January 19, 2010 12:17:54 PM
> Subject: Happy 201st Birthday Edgar Allan Poe!!!!
>
> Happy 201st today to Edgar Allan Poe--perhaps the most internationally influential of al American writers--
> "Ride, Boldy Ride!!

> the only American writer to have a professional sports team whose name is drawn from his work--
> the Baltimore Ravens--of the National Football leage--
>
> here a small echap tribute published by GAMM:
> http://www.scribd.com/doc/22218970/chirot-death-from-this-window

↑ Index

225. amy king

Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Tue 19 Jan 2010

I left HSBC years ago due to similar trickery (online fees as well as holding checks for approval etc) - they really suck and here's tons of history of their sucking -- http://householdwatch.com/news/ and

http://www.my3cents.com/gSearch.cgi?cx=partner-pub-9756519274360254%3A8wwkal-87fg&cof=FORID%3A10&ie=ISO-8859-1&q=hsbc&sa=Search#1010

or just search 'HSBC sucks' to learn more than you ever wanted.

People who have sued HSBC and won -- http://www.consumeractiongroup.co.uk/forum/hsbc-fd-hfc-successes/ (scroll down a lil)

Good luck with your book, Brian. If BoA is anything like the above, you'll have an audience for sure.

Amy

_____
BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

----- Original Message ----
From: Brian Stefans <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Sent: Tue, January 19, 2010 12:51:35 AM
Subject: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested parties:

http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15

Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting my web knowledge to use.

Brian

↑ Index

226. Ruth Lepson

Re: The Rescue Operation's Priorities in Haiti

Tue 19 Jan 2010

---

thi led me to the article ten things the US can do for Haiti, which makes good sense.

On 1118110 11:14 PM, "Gabrielle Welford" <[redacted]> wrote:

> dear camille, thanks for the haitian poems. i feel sick and very sad.
> my daughter advises sending money to Partners In Health (PIH). its paul > farmer's organization--a grassroots healthcare initiative that already has > clincis in haiti. go to http://www.standwithhaiti.org/haiti. annie has > been reading his book.
>
> you'll see below--i feel like throwing up--that obama has picked g.w. bush > to run "the reconstruction" of haiti. all best, gabe
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: ED
> Subject: [evol-psych] The Rescue Operation's Priorities in Haiti
>
> http://www.counterpunch.org/valdes01182010.html
>
> MLK Day Edition
> January 18, 2010
>
> Class and Race Fear
> The Rescue Operation's Priorities in Haiti
> By NELSON P. VALDÉS
>
> "The contempt we have been taught to entertain for blacks, make us fear many > things that are founded neither in reason nor experience."
>
> - Alexander Hamilton in letter to John Hay, 1799.

"Only those who hate the black population, see hatred in blacks"

- José Martí, Montecristi Manifesto, 1895

The recent earthquakes that have demolished the city of Port au Prince and its surroundings has left Haiti stateless, ever poorer, desperate and in need of long term global assistance. A world-wide rescue operation has been initiated. But, it is questionable to what extent the best interests of the people of Haiti have been and will be considered, in the long run.

First, the foreign aid teams "rescued" and took out of the country the non-Haitians, particularly the Europeans, Americans and assorted other tourists. The Voice of America on Jan. 16 reported: "In the last day or so the United States and French governments have started running passenger flights out of the country [Haiti] for evacuees from those countries. People line up and wait for a plane to arrive so they can leave Haiti and leave behind what is a very difficult, traumatic experience for many." [1]

Second, five days have gone by without any real significant distribution of medical supplies, food or water to the neediest people.

The facts indicate clear priorities: the Haitians are not first in line. In fact, the rescuers seem to have a widespread fear of the poor and desperate Haitians. A Scottish reporter said, "aid workers in Haiti today called for more security amid fears of attacks by increasingly desperate earthquake survivors." [2]

Yet, the Haitians have been extraordinarily patient despite the fact that their world has collapsed around them.

The assistance teams seem reluctant to distribute until they feel secure. Thus, the US government sent troops to bring aid and the Haitian government dispatched police to provide "security," and respond to the exaggerated rumors of "looting." Indeed, there have been reports that the security squads moved the aid providers to "secure" places. [3]

The Haitian people who wait for basic needs have not been mobilized to work on their own behalf. Rather, the "humanitarians" treat them as children, with no thought to providing them with the tools to help themselves. One Haitian consul to Brazil, George Samuel Antoine declared two days ago that any country that happens to have Africans is cursed! [4] Shades of Pat Robertson and David

Brooks.

Seemingly, the outsiders coming to help the people don't trust the natives, despite the fact that the Haitians are dying, hungry, thirsty, sick, homeless, and with most of their families gone or lost. The Haitian chief of police, like most people in positions of authority, is a foreigner appointed by the United Nations.

Meanwhile, the twice elected and twice removed political leader of the Haitians - Jean-Bertrand Aristide is not permitted to enter his own country. In fact, President Obama appointed one of those who ousted him - George W. Bush - to help "supervise" the "reconstruction" of Haiti. Bush merited his appointment presumably because of the wonderful job he did supervising the post Katrina aid program. Meanwhile, for all intent and purposes there is no longer, except symbolically, a Haitian government.

Perhaps it is too harsh but it appears as if those in charge think that a few thousand more Haitians dead would make it easier to control the situation. USA Today has reported, "Rescuers pulled a dehydrated but otherwise uninjured woman from the ruins of a luxury hotel in the Haitian capital early Sunday, drawing applause from onlookers who have seen little to cheer as the body count continued to rise from Tuesday's earthquake."

They expect Haitians to remain patient, without food or water or aid to rescue their friends and relatives. Haitians are not even informed as to what to expect or when.

Some US tv channels have begun broadcasting about vodou burials. The US mass media has turned the whole tragedy into another narcissistic story about how Americans handle disasters. Thus, Hillary at one end, and Bill on the other travel going to Haiti to see for themselves! [5] As if such voyages have inherently curative powers!

Ironically, US and NATO can quickly deliver death from the air, but, apparently won't unleash their technology and resources to quickly save lives. United Nations tanks have been sent to different locations throughout what remains of the city, particularly the poorer neighborhoods such as Cité Soleil. [6] A poor substitute for food and water.

In Afghanistan drones fire at will with no one at the Pentagon expressing minimal concern, yet, in the Haitian case dropping food and water has been avoided "for fear of riots." Apparently no one has figured that people will riot because of the absence of drinking water or food; unless they have to go without either for enough time so that the Haitians experience a Caribbean version of the final solution.

On January 15th, the United Nations' Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs issued a report stating, "Haiti is currently at UN Security Phase 3. This will implicate ongoing operations in terms of limiting the ability to move around the city and work at night (which is also hindered by the lack of electricity). Patrols reported that the situation is calm in general, but there are reports of stone throwing at passing vehicles, looting and acts of vandalism. ICRC has inspected several prisons. The central prison was completely destroyed, meaning up to 4,000 prisoners have escaped." [7] Under Security Phase III all international staff and families are relocated inside or outside the country.

It is unclear who is directing what. Rear Admiral Ted Branch, the most senior military official aboard the USS Carl Vinson stated, "We have lift, we have communications, we have some command and control, but we don't have much relief supplies to offer.We have no supplies at the airport that we have access to. There are other supplies there that are under the control of other agencies, other organizations and we haven't yet coordinated together to make those supplies available for anyone to deliver." [8] The United Nations and the US authorities on the ground, are telling those who directly want to deliver help not to do so because they might be attacked by "hungry mobs." [9] Two cargo planes from Doctors Without Borders have been forced to land in the Dominican Republic because the shipments have to be accompanied within Port au Prince by US military escort, according to the US command. [10]

One American on the ground summed up the situation: "For the aid to work and the teams of search and rescue workers to be able to do their job there is going to need to be a major effort of all people to lay down their own fear and personal need and allow the help to get to the worst off. Pray that people will think of others as best they can and that relief will begin to get to the places it is needed most." [11] Such fears, created and nurtured in colonial times, have been reproduced for over two hundred years. Alexander Hamilton and José Martí recognized the humanity of the former black slaves turned revolutionaries and told us to put our fears aside. As Linda Polman writes in The Times of London class and racial fear by the rescue teams is costing the lives of thousands in Haiti. [12]

Nelson P Valdés is Emeritus Professor of Sociology, founder of the Latin America Data Base and director of the Cuba-L Project. He is a specialist on Latin America and writes for Counter Punch.

The author wishes to think the suggestions by Sandra Levinson, Ned Sublette and Saul Landau.

Notes

[1] VOA Correspondent Reports on relief Efforts in Haiti," VOA News.Com,01/16/10

[2] "Fear of Looting as Desperation Among Haiti Earthquake Survivors Take Hold," Scotsman.com, 01/15/10

[3] "Haiti Earthquake Updates: Live Blog," Guardian (London), 01/15/10

[4] "Terremoto no Haiti: Consul Haitiano Afirma Que o Africano em si tem maldicao," YouTube, 01/14/10

[5] "Apocalipsis social en Haiti?", IAR Noticias, 01/167/10

[6]"Hillary Clinton Meets With Haiti Leader After Arrival," CNN, 01/17/10

[7] "Haiti: Ocha Sit Rep # 4"

[8] "After a Day of Deliveries, US Ship Runs Out of Aid," AFP, 01/16/10

[9] "RD se vuelca en ayuda a haitianos," Listin Diario (Dominican Republic), 01/17/10

[10] "Cargo Plane With Full Hospital and Staff Blocked From Landing in Port-au-Prince," Doctors Without Borders, 01/17/10.

[11] "Overwhelming Sadness - Overwhelming Gratitude," The Livesay [Haiti] Weblog, 01/15/10

[12] Linda Polman, "Fear of the Poor is Hampering Haiti Rescue," Tomes Online, 01/18/10

__._,_.___
Reply to sender | Reply to group
Messages in this topic (1)
Recent Activity: a.. New Members 5
Visit Your Group Start a New Topic
MARKETPLACE

> Going Green: Your Yahoo! Groups resource for green living > Switch to: Text-Only, Daily Digest . Unsubscribe . Terms of Use.
>
> __,_._,___

↑ Index

227. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart

Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Tue 19 Jan 2010

Bravo, BKS!

On Jan 19, 2010, at 12:51 AM, Brian Stefans wrote:

> Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested parties:
>
> http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15
>
> Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting my web knowledge to use.
>
> Brian

↑ Index

228. Mairead Byrne

Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Tue 19 Jan 2010

This is the sorriest funniest most possibliest book I've ever read. Brian, you're holding a mirror up to life as it is lived, pinning the chaos with whatever language can be trafficked. Move over Conceptual Poetry, this is Actual Poetry. You are not alone! Mairéad

On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 12:51 AM, Brian Stefans <[redacted]>wrote:

> Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested parties:
>
> http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15
>
> Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting my web knowledge to use.
>
> Brian

↑ Index

229. Catherine Daly

[redacted].

Tue 19 Jan 2010

WHY THE WORLD DOESN'T NEED AN ANNIE WARHOL OR A FRANCINE BACON by Germaine Greer

In May last year, the Centre Pompidou consigned to storage nearly all its works by male artists and rehung its permanent collection to show only works by women. Camille Morineau, the curator of [redacted], said the show was "going to be dramatic in a big way". It wasn't. The art press simply ignored it. The Guardian was one of few newspapers to ask itself the question: "Is the art world finally taking work created by women seriously?"

British galleries are less, not more, interested in women's work than French ones. The National Gallery owns paintings by only 10 women, of whom only four have been deemed worthy of representation in the main galleries, where you will find one Rachel Ruysch, one Berthe Morisot, and two paintings each by Vigée-Le Brun and Catherina van Hemessen. The rest, with the exception of Rosa Bonheur, can be found in Room A, the study collection, which is open for three and a half hours on Wednesday afternoons.

The Centre Pompidou, popularly known as Beaubourg and officially as the Musée National d'Art Moderne, houses works dating from 1905. -Morineau was quoted as saying that until now there were not enough works by women in the collection to have been able to mount anything on the scale of [redacted]. After five years of a deliberate policy of spending 40% of the acquisitions budget on them, works by women now account for 17% of the permanent collection. This -compares with the 13% of female artists in the Tate collections.

The exhibition takes up the fourth floor of the vast building, plus odd rooms on the fifth. The entrance is signalled by a purple panel, on which have been mounted large buttons of different colours; 11 bear the feminised name of a well-known male artist, Annie Warhol, Francine Bacon etc. The 12th bears the name Louis Bourgeois. Though this jeu d'esprit, by Agnès Thurnauer, has its admirers, it is after all feeble. Does anyone really think that Martin Kippenberger could have been Martine Kippenberger?

The storm of words that accompanies the exhibition stresses that its intention is to restore women to their rightful place in art history, as if there was a vast mass of wonderful work by women artists just waiting to be brought to light.

The exhibition has been treated as a journey of discovery of works that have been forgotten or lost, but many, including the best of them, are stupefyingly familiar. Some major artists have been sampled in a fashion that seems positively flippant. Jenny Holzer's 26 Inflammatory Essays have been reduced to eight, replicated and mounted on a partition in uniform stripes from ceiling to floor, like cheap wallpaper.

Eva Hesse is represented by Untitled (1970), a seven-part sculpture made of fibreglass and polyester resin over polyethylene sheeting and aluminium wire. When it was made, the 34-year-old artist was dying. She never saw the finished work, which differs significantly from her model. The book published to accompany the exhibition claims that the piece was bought by the Centre Pompidou in 1986, other sources that it was presented to the museum by Mr and Mrs W Ganz. Time and poor conservation have reduced it to a sticky mess.

Some of the younger women artists in the show may turn out to be -discoveries, but too many of them are making the kinds of female body art that have been doing the rounds for years. Innocents may be excited by Sigalit Landau's Barbed Hula of 2001, a video showing her full-frontal naked doing the hula with a hoop made of barbed wire, but only if they were too young to see Marina Abramowic´ slicing into her naked belly in the 1970s, or Orlan on the operating table in the 1990s. Later this year, Abramowic´ will be performing throughout her planned retrospective at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. The life's work of Nancy Spero, poorly represented in this exhibition, will be celebrated at the Centre Pompidou. Both shows will be more rewarding experiences than [redacted]. The effect of offering a sampler of the work of 200 women is to diminish the achievement of all of them. By lumping the major with the minor, and by showing only minor works of major figures, [redacted] managed to convince too many visitors to the exhibition that there was such a thing as women's art and that women artists were going nowhere. Wrong, on both counts._Guardian

--

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

230. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City presents Alice James Books and Robert Kerr
Tue 19 Jan 2010

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

Alice James Books
(Farmington, Maine)

Tues., Jan. 26, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by Alice James Books' board president
Peter Waldor

Featuring readings from

Joanna Fuhrman
Mihaela Moscaliuc
Jean-Paul Pecqueur
Peter Waldor

and music from

Robert Kerr

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

Alice James Books
http://www.alicejamesbooks.org/

Alice James Books is a nonprofit cooperative poetry press, founded in 1973 by five women and two men. Their objectives were to give women access to publishing and to involve authors in the publishing process. They remain true to that mission and to publishing a diversity of poets, including beginning and established poets, and a diversity of poetic styles. The press is named for Alice James—the sister of novelist Henry James and philosopher William James—whose fine journal and gift for writing were unrecognized within her lifetime. Since 1994, the press has been affiliated with the University of Maine at Farmington.

Performer Bios

Joanna Fuhrman
http://www.redroom.com/author/joanna-fuhrman

Joanna Fuhrman is the author of four books of poetry, most recently Moraine (Hanging Loose Press) and Pageant (Alice James Books). She teaches creative writing at Rutgers University and in schools and libraries through Poets House and Teachers & Writers Collaborative.

Robert Kerr

Robert Kerr is a playwright living in Brooklyn. He was in the band Alien Detector while he lived in Minneapolis, where he also served as musical director for Bedlam Theatre's production of Land Without Trees. He wrote the book and lyrics for the 10-minute musical The Sticky-Fingered Fiancee with composer Mat Eisenstein, and often writes songs for his own plays.

Mihaela Moscaliuc
http://www.monmouth.edu/academics/english/faculty/Moscaliuc.asp

Mihaela Moscaliuc's first poetry collection, Father Dirt, is forthcoming from Alice James Books. Her poems have appeared in New Letters, Prairie Schooner, Connecticut Review, Subtropics, Pleiades, Meridians, Crab Orchard Review, and Poetry International. She has published reviews, translations, and articles in The Georgia Review, Arts & Letters, Mississippi Review, Mid-American Review, Prairie Schooner, Soundings, Orientalisms in US-American Poetry, and elsewhere. She teaches at Monmouth University and in the M.F.A. low-residency program at Drew University.

Jean-Paul Pecqueur
http://sporkpress.com/4_1/Pieces/Pecqueur.htm

Jean-Paul Pecqueur, a native of Tacoma, Wash., has worked as a fish canner, garment worker, furniture mover, and substitute teacher. He has also taught at the University of Washington, the University of Arizona's Poetry Center, and the Pratt Institute. His first volume of poetry, The Case Against Happiness, was published by Alice James Books. Currently, Jean-Paul lives and works in Brooklyn, the Tacoma of the east.

Peter Waldor
http://www.unf.edu/mudlark/mudlark36/cover_waldor.html

Peter Waldor is the author of Door to a Noisy Room (Alice James). His work has appeared in many journals, including the American Poetry Review and Mothering Magazine. He works in the insurance business and lives in northern New Jersey.

Directions:
C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. Feb. 23
Forklift, Ohio (Cincinnati)
http://www.forkliftohio.com/

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

231. Jim Andrews
Re: "The Gateless Gate-New Series"
Wed 20 Jan 2010

Interesting images, Joel. Did you make them?

ja?

↑ Index

232. Susan Webster Schultz
Tinfish Editor's Blog
Wed 20 Jan 2010

I forget when I last posted here. So herewith the recent past:

* "Writing in [and by] Sand": Kaia Sand's _Remember ...
* Tinfish 19 (with Lyz Soto): The Launch
* In Defense of Using Proper Proper Names: Coda to D...
* Dementia blogging the last (for now)
* Dementia Blogging: Day Four: Sundowning
* Dementia Blogging: Day Three: The Science of Happi...
* Dementia Blogging, Day Two: _Planet of the Apes_ a...
* More Dementia Blog; red eye ruminations
* An _impossible_ community: poetry and the private ...

http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com

aloha, Susan S.

↑ Index

233. Jeffrey Side
Interviewer for Bruce Andrews now found
Wed 20 Jan 2010

I've now found an interviewer for Bruce Andrews.

↑ Index

234. Laura Hinton
Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)
Wed 20 Jan 2010

Good use of your web-poet expertise, Brian! Who says poetry isn't practical, and can't make a political difference? (Auden?)

I've wanted to leave Bank of America for years. They definitely do tricky maneuvers that manipulate funds and screw their customers. The banking monopolies -- my own smaller and more decent bank was long ago swallowed by Bank of America -- are to blame. We have no place to go, as Amy points out. (I had until recently considered HSBC, which is in my neighborhood.)

Good luck with this book!
Laura

On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 7:52 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> I left HSBC years ago due to similar trickery (online fees as well as holding checks for approval etc) - they really suck and here's tons of history of their sucking -- http://householdwatch.com/news/ and
>
> http://www.my3cents.com/gSearch.cgi?cx=partner-pub-9756519274360254%3A8wwkal-87fg&cof=FORID%3A10&ie=ISO-8859-1&q=hsbc&sa=Search#1010
>
> or just search 'HSBC sucks' to learn more than you ever wanted.
>
> People who have sued HSBC and won -- http://www.consumeractiongroup.co.uk/forum/hsbc-fd-hfc-successes/ (scroll down a lil)
>
> Good luck with your book, Brian. If BoA is anything like the above, you'll have an audience for sure.

> Amy
>
> _____
> BOOK
> Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm
>
> INTERVIEW
>
> Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php
>
> ----- Original Message ----
> From: Brian Stefans <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Tue, January 19, 2010 12:51:35 AM
> Subject: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)
>
> Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested parties:
>
> http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15
>
> Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting my web knowledge to use.
>
> Brian

--
Laura Hinton
Professor of English
City College of New York
138 at Convent Ave.
New York, New York 10031

http://www.mermaidtenementpress.com
http://www.chantdelasirene.com

↑ Index

235. Ward Tietz
Wheels-Welts-Water
Wed 20 Jan 2010

Wheels-Welts-Water

Rubrical installation and performance by Ward Tietz, with contributions by students of Casey Smith's class "Poetry off the Page."

Performance: Thursday, January 21, 2010 at 5:30 p.m.

White Walls Gallery

Corcoran School of Art + Design

500 Seventeenth Street NW

Washington, DC 20006

↑ Index

236. Rachel Loden
Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
Wed 20 Jan 2010

If you're so inclined, please check out my piece on Hugh Hefner and "Miss October" in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" series:

http://voices.washingtonpost.com/shortstack/2010/01/poets_choice_rachel_lodens_mis.html

Thanks,

Rachel Loden

http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/loden/loden.htm

↑ Index

237. Ryan Daley
Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)
Wed 20 Jan 2010

This is amazing. Great work, Brian!

On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 10:35 PM, Mairead Byrne <[redacted]> wrote:

> This is the sorriest funniest most possibliest book I've ever read. Brian, you're holding a mirror up to life as it is lived, pinning the chaos with whatever language can be trafficked. Move over Conceptual Poetry, this is Actual Poetry. You are not alone!
> Mairéad

> On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 12:51 AM, Brian Stefans <[redacted]
> wrote:
>
> Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested > parties:
>
> http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15
>
> Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting > my
> web knowledge to use.
>
> Brian
>
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

238. Maria Damon

Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Wed 20 Jan 2010

Brian would you consider running for Congress?

Ryan Daley wrote:
> This is amazing. Great work, Brian!
>
> On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 10:35 PM, Mairead Byrne <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
>> This is the sorriest funniest most possibliest book I've ever read. Brian, >> you're holding a mirror up to life as it is lived, pinning the chaos with >> whatever language can be trafficked. Move over Conceptual Poetry, this is >> Actual Poetry. You are not alone!
>> Mairéad
>>
>> On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 12:51 AM, Brian Stefans <[redacted]
>>
>>> wrote:
>>>
>>> Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested >>> parties:

>>>
>>> http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15
>>>
>>> Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting
>>>
>> my
>>
>>> web knowledge to use.
>>>
>>> Brian
>>>
>>>
>>>
>> guidelines
>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

239. Mary Kasimor
Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
Wed 20 Jan 2010

I would like to read it, but the link would not work.
Mary

--- On Wed, 1/20/10, Rachel Loden <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Rachel Loden <[redacted]>
Subject: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, January 20, 2010, 8:58 AM

If you're so inclined, please check out my piece on Hugh Hefner and "Miss October" in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" series:

http://voices.washingtonpost.com/shortstack/2010/01/poets_choice_rachel_lodens_mis.html

Thanks,

Rachel Loden

http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/loden/loden.htm

↑ Index

240. steve russell
Re: Can anything...?
Wed 20 Jan 2010

& dark matter.
forgot that.

not enough actual mass in universe, but the damn thing still expands ... since physics isn't really advancing in any but a few way-out-there conceptual ways, poets might as well get in on the act.

One of my favorite Einstein Quotes: There's only 2 things that are infinite. The Universe and human stupidy. And I'm not so sure about the universe.

& it seems Uncle Al made an incorrect call concerning the universe.

_____
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, January 19, 2010 10:09:05 AM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

I'm wondering about those physics metaphors & its possible femine component.
Where's the singularity? The self...
The inflationary universe? Society

A BLACK HOLE ... Sleep ... -- marish sleep?

Physics/metanarratives ... on & on ...
survivalism, identity, the baffling single minded pronoun: "I."

& I recently picked up a feminisst book that may oust Kant/foundational metaphysics -- 'tho that's 2 centuries old.

: book: The Madwoman's Reason:
blurb:

"Nancy Holland draws on the work of Heidegger and Derrida to formulate a concept of appropriate action that can address bothe extraorinary ethical problems with particular cultural tradition and moral conflict between different cultures. Her feminist reappropriation of the concept of the appropriate is then further developed by reference to Aristotle and Kant,whose ethical theories, she argues, are independent of their metaphysics ...

As an example of the application of her theory, Holland examines the problem of ordaining women in the Roman Catholic Church and then goes on to compare her approach with that of other philosophers working in virtue theory, postmodern ethics, and feminism.

Virtue theory!!!!!!!!!!!!
Vice has glamour on his side to tempt
but virtue is most lovely.

_____
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sat, January 16, 2010 2:52:48 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

exactly: a paradigm shift akin to an earthquake...

_____
From: amy king <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sat, January 16, 2010 1:30:18 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

Well put, Catherine.

----- Original Message ----
From: Catherine Daly

I would venture that the temper of the time is against "poet's study" of topics like Mayan culture or a la Alice Fulton and fractals, or even Brenda Hillman and neo-gnosticism.

I also think that looking at new metaphors in physics (for example) to apply in poetry, for example, functions differently now than previously, now we realize more completely that these metaphors are often distractions, that they might get us knowledge, but the metaphors also enforce themselves, shape that knowledge in a way. In other words, I'm with Mairead. Major adjustments in world view, like feminism, probably a lot more expansive.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

_____
BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

241. Paul Siegell
"30 Awesome Poetry Blogs You Aren't Reading Yet"
Wed 20 Jan 2010

"Many of these blogs are under the radar but it doesn't mean their authors are any less reputable or exciting to read." ...HA!

There are a bunch of Buffalo list members (#3, #24, #28, and others) noted here:
http://www.onlinecollegesanduniversities.com/2009/12/31/30-awesome-poetry-blogs-you-arent-reading-yet/

Enjoy!

↑ Index

242. amy king
Fri, Jan 22nd - Priscilla Becker, Laura Carter, Suzanne Frischkorn, Kate Greenstreet, Becca Klaver & Dan Lichtenberg
Wed 20 Jan 2010

Join us the Stain of Poetry this Friday, January 22nd for our first reading of 2010 with Priscilla Becker, Laura Carter, Suzanne Frischkorn, Kate Greenstreet, Becca Klaver & Dan Lichtenberg (details below), and for our other readings this season:

February 26
Jillian Brall, R. Erica Doyle, Adam Fieled, Steve Langan, Janaka Stucky, Mendi Obadike

March 26
Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin, Brett Eugene Ralph

April 30
Lesley Jenike & very special national poetry month secret superstar guests!

May 21
Melissa Buzzeo, Todd Colby, Karyna McGlynn, Christie Ann Reynolds, Jared Stanley, Rachel Zolf

June 25
James Bellflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim Gek Lin Short, Wendy Wisner

See you Friday!

Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
Stain of Poetry, http://stainofpoetry.com

January 22 @ 7 p.m. â€“ Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn [Directions below]

with

Priscilla Beckerâ€™s first book of poems, Internal West, won The Paris Review book prize, and was published in 2003. Her poems have appeared in Fence, Open City, The Paris Review, Small Spiral Notebook, Boston Review, Passages North, Raritan, American Poetry Review, Verse, and The Swallow Anthology of New American Poets; her music reviews in The Nation and Filter magazine; her book reviews in The New York Sun; and her essays in Cabinet magazine and Open City. Her essays have also been anthologized by Soft Skull Press, Anchor Books, and Sarabande. She teaches poetry at Pratt Institute, Columbia University, and in her apartment. Her second book, Stories That Listen, is forthcoming from Four Way Books.

~

Laura Carter lives in Atlanta, Georgia, where she teaches at two local colleges and writes poetry. Her latest chapbook is The Terrarium of the Frame, with Grey Book Press, and her earlier two chapbooks are Situations, Ungovernable Press, and At the Pulse, Greying Ghost Press. She completed an MFA in poetry at Georgia State University in 2007 and has been living in the East Atlanta area since then.

~

Suzanne Frischkorn is the author of Lit Windowpane (2008) and Girl on a Bridge forthcoming in 2010, both from Main Street Rag Publishing. In addition she is the author of five chapbooks, most recently American Flamingo (2008). A 2009 Emerging Writers Fellow of The Writerâ€™s Center, her honors also include the Aldrich Poetry Award, and an Artist Fellowship from the Connecticut Commission on Culture & Tourism.

~

Kate Greenstreetâ€™s second book, The Last 4 Things, is new from Ahsahta Press and includes a DVD containing two short films. Ahsahta published Greenstreetâ€™s case sensitive in 2006. She is also the author of three chapbooks, most recently This is why I hurt you (Lame House Press, 2008). Find her new work in current or forthcoming issues of jubilat, Fence, VOLT, the Denver Quarterly, Court Green, and other journals.

~

Becca Klaver was born and raised in Milwaukee and now lives in Brooklyn. She holds degrees from the University of Southern California and Columbia College Chicago, and in Fall 2009 began working on a PhD in Literatures in English at Rutgers University. A founding editor of the feminist poetry press Switchback Books, she is the author of the chapbook Inside a Red Corvette: A 90s Mix Tape. Kore Press will publish her first full-length collection of poems, LA Liminal, in March 2010.

~

D.W. Lichtenberg is the author of THE ANCIENT BOOK OF HIP, an exploration of the phenomenon of hip, released November 2009 and winner of the 2009 Michael Rubin Book Award, and SUMMER SHOWERS, a novel without a home. He is a writer, a filmmaker, a caffeine addict, an obsessive cleaner. He attended NYU where he obtained a BFA in Film. His credits include associate editor on feature film FIFTH FORM & camera operator on feature documentary FOOL IN A BUBBLE. He attends SFSU where he is working towards an MFA in Creative Writing.

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

_____
BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

243. Mark Jenkins

Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post

Wed 20 Jan 2010

I had that trouble too. If you do a search for Rachel Loden on the Post's website, it comes right up.

Mark Allen Jenkins

On Jan 20, 2010, at 10:21 AM, Mary Kasimor wrote:

> I would like to read it, but the link would not work.
> Mary
>
> --- On Wed, 1/20/10, Rachel Loden <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: Rachel Loden <[redacted]>
> Subject: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Wednesday, January 20, 2010, 8:58 AM
>
> If you're so inclined, please check out my piece on Hugh Hefner and "Miss > October" in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" series:
>
> http://voices.washingtonpost.com/shortstack/2010/01/poets_choice_rachel_lodens_mis.html
>
> Thanks,
>
> Rachel Loden
>
> http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/loden/loden.htm

↑ Index

244. Rachel Loden

Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post

Wed 20 Jan 2010

Mary, try this, which the Post put on its Twitter page:

http://u.nu/9ajj4

It works for me. If all else fails just go to the main Post site:

http://www.washingtonpost.com/

and put "Loden" in the search box on the upper left. The article comes right up.

Thanks so much for wanting to read it!

Rachel

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Mary Kasimor
> Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 8:21 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
>
> I would like to read it, but the link would not work.
> Mary
>
> --- On Wed, 1/20/10, Rachel Loden <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
> From: Rachel Loden <[redacted]>
> Subject: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post

> To: [redacted]
> Date: Wednesday, January 20, 2010, 8:58 AM
>
>
> If you're so inclined, please check out my piece on Hugh Hefner and "Miss > October" in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" series:
>
>
>
>
http://voices.washingtonpost.com/shortstack/2010/01/poets_choice_rachel_lode
> ns_mis.html
>
>
>
> Thanks,
>
>
>
> Rachel Loden
>
>
>
> http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/loden/loden.htm
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>

↑ Index

245. Ruth Lepson

Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post

Wed 20 Jan 2010

---

thank you rachel

On 1120110 9:58 AM, "Rachel Loden" <[redacted]> wrote:

> If you're so inclined, please check out my piece on Hugh Hefner and "Miss October" in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" series:
>
> http://voices.washingtonpost.com/shortstack/2010/01/poets_choice_rachel_lodens_mis.html
>
> Thanks,
>
> Rachel Loden
>
> http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/loden/loden.htm

↑ Index

246. Pluto, Anne Elezabeth

Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post

Wed 20 Jan 2010

Great poem Rachel.

Annie Pluto

On 1/20/10 9:58 AM, "Rachel Loden" <[redacted]> wrote:

> If you're so inclined, please check out my piece on Hugh Hefner and "Miss October" in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" series:
>
> http://voices.washingtonpost.com/shortstack/2010/01/poets_choice_rachel_lodens_mis.html
>
> Thanks,
>
> Rachel Loden
>
> http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/loden/loden.htm

↑ Index

247. Joel Weishaus
Re: "The Gateless Gate-New Series"
Wed 20 Jan 2010

Hi Jim;

Yes, I make all the images in this project using transparencies.

Warm Regards,
Joel

↑ Index

248. Maria Damon
Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
Wed 20 Jan 2010

---

cool! outta the ballpark, La Lodenne!

Rachel Loden wrote:
> Mary, try this, which the Post put on its Twitter page:
>
> http://u.nu/9ajj4
>
> It works for me. If all else fails just go to the main Post site:
>
> http://www.washingtonpost.com/
>
> and put "Loden" in the search box on the upper left. The article comes right > up.
>
> Thanks so much for wanting to read it!
>
> Rachel
>
>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On >> Behalf Of Mary Kasimor
>> Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 8:21 AM
>> To: [redacted]
>> Subject: Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
>>
>> I would like to read it, but the link would not work.
>> Mary

>>
>> --- On Wed, 1/20/10, Rachel Loden <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>>
>> From: Rachel Loden <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Wednesday, January 20, 2010, 8:58 AM
>>
>>
>> If you're so inclined, please check out my piece on Hugh Hefner and "Miss >> October" in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" series:
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
http://voices.washingtonpost.com/shortstack/2010/01/poets_choice_rachel_lode
>
>> ns_mis.html
>>
>>
>>
>> Thanks,
>>
>>
>>
>> Rachel Loden
>>
>>
>>
>> http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/loden/loden.htm
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

249. Jim Andrews
Re: Can anything...?
Wed 20 Jan 2010

---

the universe can be finite from the perspective of an added dimension yet infinite in extent to the inhabitants. this is basically a consequence of the ability to conceive of eternity in an hour and infinity in a grain of sand.

here's a poem (in rhyming couplets) i wrote called alice in flatland that explores it: http://vispo.com/writings/poems/alice.htm . this is one of the first pages i put on my web site.

way back when i was writing poemy poems!

a mathematician/physicist friend of mine says "physics is over". for now, anyway, perhaps.

ja

----- Original Message -----
From: "steve russell" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:05 AM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

> & dark matter.
> forgot that.

> not enough actual mass in universe, but the damn thing still expands ... since physics isn't really advancing in any but a few way-out-there conceptual ways, poets might as well get in on the act.
>
> One of my favorite Einstein Quotes: There's only 2 things that are infinite. The Universe and human stupidy. And I'm not so sure about the universe.
>
> & it seems Uncle Al made an incorrect call concerning the universe.

↑ Index

250. Gabrielle Welford

Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Wed 20 Jan 2010

---

what about credit unions?

On Wed, 20 Jan 2010, Laura Hinton wrote:

> Good use of your web-poet expertise, Brian! Who says poetry isn't practical, and can't make a political difference? (Auden?)
>
> I've wanted to leave Bank of America for years. They definitely do tricky maneuvers that manipulate funds and screw their customers. The banking monopolies -- my own smaller and more decent bank was long ago swallowed by Bank of America -- are to blame. We have no place to go, as Amy points out. (I had until recently considered HSBC, which is in my neighborhood.)
>
> Good luck with this book!
> Laura
>
> On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 7:52 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I left HSBC years ago due to similar trickery (online fees as well as holding checks for approval etc) - they really suck and here's tons of history of their sucking -- http://householdwatch.com/news/ and
>
> http://www.my3cents.com/gSearch.cgi?cx=partner-pub-9756519274360254%3A8wwkal-87fg&cof=FORID%3A10&ie=ISO-8859-1&q=hsbc&sa=Search#1010
>
> or just search 'HSBC sucks' to learn more than you ever wanted.
>
> People who have sued HSBC and won --

http://www.consumeractiongroup.co.uk/forum/hsbc-fd-hfc-successes/ (scroll down a lil)

Good luck with your book, Brian. If BoA is anything like the above, you'll have an audience for sure.

Amy

_____
BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

----- Original Message ----
From: Brian Stefans <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, January 19, 2010 12:51:35 AM
Subject: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested parties:

http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15

Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting my web knowledge to use.

Brian

--
Laura Hinton
Professor of English

> City College of New York
> 138 at Convent Ave.
> New York, New York 10031
>
> http://www.mermaidtenementpress.com
> http://www.chantdelasirene.com

↑ Index

251. David Seaman
Re: Hef & "Miss October" at Washington Post
Wed 20 Jan 2010

Dear Rachel Loden,

I don't know you, but I am very impressed by this poem. I hope to read more of you.

David

David W. Seaman, Ph.D.
http://personal.georgiasouthern.edu/~dseaman/Welcome.html

Follow my Twitter poetry at dseaman40

YouTube video of my Venice Biennale poem:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JQ5bOuJBN_k

On Wednesday, January 20, 2010, at 09:58AM, "Rachel Loden" <[redacted]>
wrote:
>If you're so inclined, please check out my piece on Hugh Hefner and "Miss >October" in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" series:
>
>
>
>http://voices.washingtonpost.com/shortstack/2010/01/poets_choice_rachel_lod e >ns_mis.html
>
>
>
>Thanks,
>
>
>
>Rachel Loden

>
>
>
>http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/loden/loden.htm
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

252. Jim Andrews
Re: "The Gateless Gate-New Series"
Thu 21 Jan 2010

Hi Jim;

Yes, I make all the images in this project using transparencies.

Warm Regards,
Joel

What is the process?

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

253. Laura Wetherington
issue 7 of textsound journal is online now
Thu 21 Jan 2010

Please tune-in for the seventh installment of textsound.org<http://www.textsound.org>, featuring Jonathan Zorn, Noé Cuéllar & Jeff Gburek, Jon Cotner, Nozal Cube, Nimrod, new(s)peak, and Timothy Leonido.

As always, to submit, send .mp3 files directly or via file transfer system (YouSendIt, for example) to [redacted]. Please include titles of pieces and a brief bio.

↑ Index

254. John Perman
Idiolects of Silence
Thu 21 Jan 2010

A reminder that my new book, Idiolects of Silence, remains available upon request, free of charge, in pdf format, from Room Press ([redacted]).

↑ Index

255. Gabrielle Welford
Grassroots Organizations in Haiti Still Need Help (fwd)
Thu 21 Jan 2010

---

another good source of information and more sure donations to people on the ground. grassroots int'l came to me recommended by howard zinn. all best, gabe

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Thu, 21 Jan 2010 15:06:03 -0500 (EST)
From: "Nikhil Aziz, Grassroots International" <[redacted]>

Since Haiti suffered a massive earthquake on January 12, the vastness of the devastation has become increasingly apparent. Some news reports estimate between 100,000 and 200,000 dead, and ten times that number displaced.

https://org2.democracyinaction.org/o/5123/t/6631/shop/custom.jsp?donate_page_KEY=1694

For 20 years, Grassroots International has worked with our partners in Haiti and will continue to support them in this challenging time. 100% of donations to Grassroots International's Earthquake Response Fund for Haiti will support our partners and meet the urgent and long-term rebuilding needs of the population. Grassroots International works with four main groups in Haiti:

* Haitian Platform to Advocate Alternative Development (PAPDA)
* National Congress of Papaye Peasant Movement (MPNKP)
* Peasant Movement of Papaye (MPP)
* Platform of Haitian Human Rights Organizations (POHDH)

Our partner Camille Chalmers of PAPDA informed us, "The situation is dramatic. Three million homeless. An entire country crying. Over 100,000 dead. Hundreds of thousands injured and dead bodies everywhere. The entire population is sleeping in the streets and waiting for replies to their pleas and more blows?"

https://org2.democracyinaction.org/o/5123/t/6631/shop/custom.jsp?donate_page_KEY=1694

Despite their own personal losses - homes and family members - and the loss of office buildings in the city, our partners are helping to coordinate relief efforts by establishing relief centers in what remains of their office spaces and sourcing food and other supplies from within Haiti. They are in a key position to assess the damage and rebuild in the wake of disaster As Haitians, they are intimately connected to the individual needs of their local communities. As advocates of resource rights and food sovereignty, they know how to make aid work from the bottom up.

Direct support to local Haitian organizations is especially critical as the US military and US Agency for International Development (USAID) have actually restricted the flow and distribution of material aid in Haiti throughout the past week, which flies in the face of the enormous outpouring of generosity by ordinary Americans responding to the devastation. (Read more at http://www.cepr.net/index.php/press-releases/press-releases/ngos-relief-groups-call-for-distribution-of-water-aid-supplies/).

To make a donation and read updates on the situation, please visit www.grassrootsonline.org/Haiti. With your help, we hope to provide our partners and their communities with real and lasting solutions to this catastrophe.

Sincerely,

Nikhil Aziz
Executive Director

↑ Index

256. Poetry Project
Events at The Poetry Project
Thu 21 Jan 2010

Hereâ€™s what we have coming up at The Poetry Project. And you can check out our blog here: http://poetryproject.org/project-blog for more photos from our New Yearâ€™s Day Marathon Reading!

Friday, January 22, 10 PM
Francesca Chabrier & Christopher Cheney

Francesca Chabrier is the assistant editor of jubilat. Â Her poems appear or will appear in places like notnostrums, Sixth Finch, Forklift, Ohio and Invisible Ear. Her collaborations with Christopher Cheney can be found in Glitterpony magazine.Â She was chosen by Thomas Sayers Ellis to receive the Deborah Slosberg Memorial prize for poetry, and currently lives in Northampton, Massachusetts.

Christopher Cheney is the managing editor of Slope Editions.Â His poems have appeared or will appear in Subtropics, Forklift Ohio,Â Konundrum Engine Literary Review, Shampoo, and other places. His e-bookÂ They Kissed Their Homes wasÂ recently published by Blue Hour Press.

Monday, January 25, 8 PM
Ruthless 24/7 Careerism: How You Can Become The Most Important Poet In America Overnight (A Talk By Jim Behrle)

The poet is a social animal above all else: the poetâ€™s art comes second to the types of important connections the poet can make not just with readers and an audience, but with editors, curators and people in positions of institutional power. The poet owes it to the art and to themselves to look out for #1 at all times. This talk will focus on the kinds of important community-building activities that are at the heart of all things poetic. People can be manipulated much like a line of poetry, and a poet must have complete control of those around them. Jim Behrle will discuss the kinds of behavior that can help a poet stand out amid the babbling rabble. Poetry can be the loneliest journey: weâ€™ll discuss how to feel the warmest bosoms of constant embrace. Jim Behrle is the author of Sheâ€™s My Best Friend (Pressed Wafer) and he draws the cartoon â€œKreepie Katsâ€ for Gawker.

Wednesday, January 27, 8 PM
Latasha N. Nevada Diggs & Anne Tardos

Writer, vocalist, and sound artist, Latasha N. Nevada Diggs is the author of three chapbooks, Ichi-Ban and Ni-Ban (MOH Press), Manuel is destroying my bathroom (Belladonna Press), and the album, TelevisÃon.Â As a vocalist, she has worked with many artists including Vernon Reid, Akilah Oliver, Mike Ladd, Butch Morris, Gabri Christa, Shelley Hirsch, Burnt Sugar, Edwin Torres, Elliot Sharp, Mendi + Keith Obadike, Bernard Lang, Vijay Iyer, Ryuichi Sakamoto, Towa Tei, and Guillermo E. Brown. She has received scholarships, residencies, and fellowships from Cave Canem, Harvestworks Digital Media Arts Center, Naropa Institute, Caldera Arts, New York Foundation for the Arts (2003/2009), the Eben Demarest Trust, Harlem Community Arts Fund, and the Barbara Deming Memorial Grant for Women. LaTasha is a 2009-10 LMCC Workspace Artist in Residence. LaTasha currently curates and directs events with The Black Rock Coalition Orchestra. She is a Harlem Elohi Native.

Anne Tardos is a poet, composer, and visual artist. She is the author of several books of poetry and the multimedia performance work and radio play Among Men. A selection of her readings and performances Â (many with Jackson Mac Low) can be heard on Penn Sound and UbuWeb. Her book of poetry, I Am You, has appeared fromÂ Salt, and she is the editor of Thing ofÂ Beauty by Jackson Mac Low. She is a 2009 Fellow in Poetry from the New York Foundation for the Arts.

Friday, January 29, 10 PM
â€œCrystal Pantomimeâ€: An unpublished play by Mina Loy

Mina Loyâ€™s (1882 â€“ 1966) unpublished play, â€œCrystalÂ Pantomimeâ€,Â currently housed in the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library at Yale University, will be read live, from beginning to end, as produced by Kari Adelaide Razdow. The play is to be performed using the simultaneous braiding of several voices while individual performances by Marthe Ramm Fortun, Vanessa Albury, and Crystal CurtisÂ accompany each of the playâ€™s three acts.

Vanessa Albury is a contemporary artist based in New York City. She received her MFA in Studio Art from New York University. Albury creates photographic and filmic installations and artworks using structuralist and intuitive tactics. She has exhibited her works in solo and group exhibitions internationally, including solo shows at the Charleston City Gallery (SC) and Silverman Gallery (San Francisco).Â Recently, Albury curated a film and video screening at the Chelsea Art Museum, as well as co-curated, and exhibited in,Â UN-SCR-1325 with Jan Van Woensel at the Chelsea Art Museum (NYC). Her most recent group shows includeÂ If Love Could Have Saved You, You Would Have Lived Forever at Bellwether Gallery (NYC);Â Bad Moon Rising at Silverman Gallery (San Francisco);Â Into the Atomic Sunshine at the Puffin Room (NYC), Hillside Forum Gallery (Tokyo) and Okinawa Prefectural Art Museum (Okinawa); HORIZON at Bloomberg LP in collaboration with Art in General (NYC); andÂ My Memory Vid at ScalaMata Gallery (Venice, Italy) as part of the 53rd Venice Biennale Program.Â Albury is represented by Silverman Gallery and she teaches photography and digital media courses in NYC and in Boston.

Crystal Curtis is a Brooklyn-based visual artist who has exhibited her work in New York City, Los Angeles, and Seattle.Â She received her MFA in Studio Art from New York University and was a recipient of the Joan Mitchell Foundation Grant for Visual Arts and the Pacific Northwest Womenâ€™s Scholarship from the Pilchuck School of Glass.Â She has collaborated with musicians and dancers in New York and Florida.Â RecentÂ exhibitions/performances have appeared at Galapagos Art Space, Chelsea Art Museum, New York University, Secret Robot Project, and the Atlanta Center for the Arts.

Marthe Ramm Fortun is a visual artist artist from Norway who received her MFA in Studio Art from New York University as a Fulbright Scholar. Marthe creates live works that sits uncomfortably between drawing, sculpture and performance. She is interested in reality and fiction. Most recently, her work was featured at Perform Williamsburg for NY State Parks, Markers VII at the ScalaMata Gallery as part of the Official Program at the 53rd Venice Biennale and the performance series â€œIts All Yours Nowâ€ at the SculptureCenter, LIC. Marthe divides her time between Oslo and Brooklyn.

Max Razdow (props and light) has a solo show in Belgium this spring.

Other artists and participants include SÓ§rine Anderson, Juliet Jacobson, Alex McQuilkin, Kari Adelaide Razdow, and Mary Speaker.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If youâ€™d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

257. Jesse Glass

Ahadada Books Presents: Canto Diurno #4: The Tang Extending From The Blade by Pierre Joris

Thu 21 Jan 2010

An incredible addition to the Ahadada Books online library of e-chaps. Ready for you at www.ahadadabooks.com. Or Google it up, you Googlers! Many many thanks to Pierre for the fine work. Jess of Japan

↑ Index

258. Jeffrey Side
Interviewer for Amiri Baraka now found
Fri 22 Jan 2010

Thanks to all who offered.

↑ Index

259. Jeffrey Side
Interviewer needed for David Meltzer
Fri 22 Jan 2010

I need an interviewer to interview David Meltzer about his and Michael Rothenberg's Rockpile poetry and music tour project:

http://www.bigbridge.org/rockpile/?page_id=25

An initial pre-tour interview with David has already been done here:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/David%20Meltzer.htm

I need another interview (a post-tour one), this time slightly more in- depth.

Anyone interested?

↑ Index

260. steve russell
Re: Can anything...?
Fri 22 Jan 2010

---

to quote pope John Paul Satre: Hell is rhyming couplets.

_____
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, January 20, 2010 5:43:33 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

the universe can be finite from the perspective of an added dimension yet infinite in extent to the inhabitants. this is basically a consequence of the ability to conceive of eternity in an hour and infinity in a grain of sand.

here's a poem (in rhyming couplets) i wrote called alice in flatland that explores it: http://vispo.com/writings/poems/alice.htm . this is one of the first pages i put on my web site.

way back when i was writing poemy poems!

a mathematician/physicist friend of mine says "physics is over". for now, anyway, perhaps.

ja

----- Original Message ----- From: "steve russell" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:05 AM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

> & dark matter.
> forgot that.
>
> not enough actual mass in universe, but the damn thing still expands ... since physics isn't really advancing in any but a few way-out-there conceptual ways, poets might as well get in on the act.
>
> One of my favorite Einstein Quotes: There's only 2 things that are infinite. The Universe and human stupidy. And I'm not so sure about the universe.
>
> & it seems Uncle Al made an incorrect call concerning the universe.

↑ Index

261. Nicholas Ruiz III
Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)
Fri 22 Jan 2010

This is a wonderful piece of criticism, Brian - congratulations! Whether or not you run for office - it's work like this that involves us all...

pax et lux

nick

Nicholas Ruiz III, Ph.D
NRIII for Congress 2010
http://intertheory.org/nriiiforcongress2010.html

_____
Editor, Kritikos
http://intertheory.org

_____
From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, January 20, 2010 11:15:27 AM
Subject: Re: Bank of American Online Banking (the mother of all blog posts)

Brian would you consider running for Congress?

Ryan Daley wrote:
> This is amazing. Great work, Brian!
>
> On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 10:35 PM, Mairead Byrne <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
>> This is the sorriest funniest most possibliest book I've ever read. Brian, >> you're holding a mirror up to life as it is lived, pinning the chaos with >> whatever language can be trafficked. Move over Conceptual Poetry, this is >> Actual Poetry. You are not alone!
>> Mairéad
>>
>> On Tue, Jan 19, 2010 at 12:51 AM, Brian Stefans <[redacted]
>>
>>> wrote:
>>>
>>> Gone with the vent, as they say... please forward this to interested >>> parties:
>>>
>>> http://www.arras.net/fscIII/?cat=15
>>>
>>> Not so much to do with poetry but with the activities of a poet. Putting
>>>
>> my
>>
>>> web knowledge to use.
>>>
>>> Brian
>>>
>>>
>>>
>> guidelines
>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

262. amy king

TONIGHT - Priscilla Becker, Laura Carter, Suzanne Frischkorn, Kate Greenstreet, Becca Klaver & Dan Lichtenberg

Fri 22 Jan 2010

Tonight, Friday, January 22nd @ 7 p.m., our f Stain of Poetry presents

Tonight, Friday, January 22nd @ 7 p.m., our first reading of 2010 with Priscilla Becker, Laura Carter, Suzanne Frischkorn, Kate Greenstreet, Becca Klaver & Dan Lichtenberg

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

with

Priscilla Beckerâ€™s first book of poems, Internal West, won The Paris Review book prize, and was published in 2003. Her poems have appeared in Fence, Open City, The Paris Review, Small Spiral Notebook, Boston Review, Passages North, Raritan, American Poetry Review, Verse, and The Swallow Anthology of New American Poets; her music reviews in The Nation and Filter magazine; her book reviews in The New York Sun; and her essays in Cabinet magazine and Open City. Her essays have also been anthologized by Soft Skull Press, Anchor Books, and Sarabande. She teaches poetry at Pratt Institute, Columbia University, and in her apartment. Her second book, Stories That Listen, is forthcoming from Four Way Books.

~

Laura Carter lives in Atlanta, Georgia, where she teaches at two local colleges and writes poetry. Her latest chapbook is The Terrarium of the Frame, with Grey Book Press, and her earlier two chapbooks are Situations, Ungovernable Press, and At the Pulse, Greying Ghost Press. She completed an MFA in poetry at Georgia State University in 2007 and has been living in the East Atlanta area since then.

~

Suzanne Frischkorn is the author of Lit Windowpane (2008) and Girl on a Bridge forthcoming in 2010, both from Main Street Rag Publishing. In addition she is the author of five chapbooks, most recently American Flamingo (2008). A 2009 Emerging Writers Fellow of The Writerâ€™s Center, her honors also include the Aldrich Poetry Award, and an Artist Fellowship from the Connecticut Commission on Culture & Tourism.

~

Kate Greenstreetâ€™s second book, The Last 4 Things, is new from Ahsahta Press and includes a DVD containing two short films. Ahsahta published Greenstreetâ€™s case sensitive in 2006. She is also the author of three chapbooks, most recently This is why I hurt you (Lame House Press, 2008). Find her new work in current or forthcoming issues of jubilat, Fence, VOLT, the Denver Quarterly, Court Green, and other journals.

~

Becca Klaver was born and raised in Milwaukee and now lives in Brooklyn. She holds degrees from the University of Southern California and Columbia College Chicago, and in Fall 2009 began working on a PhD in Literatures in English at Rutgers University. A founding editor of the feminist poetry press Switchback Books, she is the author of the chapbook Inside a Red Corvette: A 90s Mix Tape. Kore Press will publish her first full-length collection of poems, LA Liminal, in March 2010.

~

D.W. Lichtenberg is the author of THE ANCIENT BOOK OF HIP, an exploration of the phenomenon of hip, released November 2009 and winner of the 2009 Michael Rubin Book Award, and SUMMER SHOWERS, a novel without a home. He is a writer, a filmmaker, a caffeine addict, an obsessive cleaner. He attended NYU where he obtained a BFA in Film. His credits include associate editor on feature film FIFTH FORM & camera operator on feature documentary FOOL IN A BUBBLE. He attends SFSU where he is working towards an MFA in Creative Writing.

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

Future readings this season:

February 26
Jillian Brall, R. Erica Doyle, Adam Fieled, Steve Langan, Janaka Stucky, Mendi Obadike

March 26
Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin, Brett Eugene Ralph

April 30
Lesley Jenike & very special national poetry month secret superstar guests!

May 21
Melissa Buzzeo, Todd Colby, Karyna McGlynn, Christie Ann Reynolds, Jared Stanley, Rachel Zolf

June 25
James Bellflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim Gek Lin Short, Wendy Wisner

Enjoy,

Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
Stain of Poetry, http://stainofpoetry.com

_____

BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

263. Ruth Lepson
Re: Can anything...?
Fri 22 Jan 2010

---

that was Pope John Paul

On 1122110 10:11 AM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:

> to quote pope John Paul Satre: Hell is rhyming couplets.
>
> _____
> From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Wed, January 20, 2010 5:43:33 PM
> Subject: Re: Can anything...?
>
> the universe can be finite from the perspective of an added dimension yet infinite in extent to the inhabitants. this is basically a consequence of the ability to conceive of eternity in an hour and infinity in a grain of sand.
>
> here's a poem (in rhyming couplets) i wrote called alice in flatland that > explores it: http://vispo.com/writings/poems/alice.htm . this is one of the first pages i put on my web site.

>
> way back when i was writing poemy poems!
>
> a mathematician/physicist friend of mine says "physics is over". for now, anyway, perhaps.
>
> ja
>
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "steve russell" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:05 AM
> Subject: Re: Can anything...?
>
> & dark matter.
> forgot that.
>
> not enough actual mass in universe, but the damn thing still expands ...
> since physics isn't really advancing in any but a few way-out-there conceptual ways, poets might as well get in on the act.
>
> One of my favorite Einstein Quotes: There's only 2 things that are infinite. The Universe and human stupidy. And I'm not so sure about the universe.
>
> & it seems Uncle Al made an incorrect call concerning the universe.

↑ Index

264. Jim Andrews
Re: Can anything...?
Fri 22 Jan 2010

> to quote pope John Paul Satre: Hell is rhyming couplets.

rhyming couplets are an ancient technology. and like any technology of language, they shape possibilities of language. they open up some possibilities you wouldn't normally consider and exclude other possibilities.

they're interesting, as a form of speech and writing, because they're lively, or can be, if you live with them long enough and share your blood with them. their liveliness is musical, aphoristic, quickly pointed, sharply pointed, among other things...they are close to the very form of wit, as it were. they are a dance of language. a dance is a formal constraint to free the liveliness of the body into expression within its moves. and gives them meaning in its language, which is of both how it looks and means as symbol, body as glyph, and how we know the body feels to dance it.

sarte said hell is other people. hell is not other people. hell is of our own making. in our relationships with other people. "hell is other people" is humourous because it makes it easy to blame other people for our own little hell. which is how we create it.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

265. A. J. Patrick Liszkiewicz new chapbook, "Count as One"
Fri 22 Jan 2010

Hi all,

My chapbook of interactive poems, "Count as One," was recently published by New River: A Journal of Digital Writing and Art:

http://www.cddc.vt.edu/journals/newriver/09Fall/liszkiewicz/count/index.html

Enjoy!
AJPL.

↑ Index

266. Chris Jones
Absolute deviation blog
Sat 23 Jan 2010

---

http://abdevpoetics.blogspot.com/

I have posted some proof prints on my blog of the photo and poetry book I am working on if anyone is interested. Comments and suggestions at my email address welcomed and appreciated. best, Chris Jones.

↑ Index

267. Louis Cabri
K Davies email?
Sat 23 Jan 2010

can someone please backchannel moi the email of Kevin Davies?
thanks
louis

↑ Index

268. Catherine Daly
Re: Can anything...?
Sat 23 Jan 2010

Some thoughts on dbc's long posts.

What I am interested in is 1) some sort of way to distinguish different types of relationship to knowledge, experience, source, and etc. in poetry and 2) to depreciate the reading of Pound through his misreading of Fenollosa (though approved by the literary estate, etc. etc.), Olson / Whitehead, Fulton / whoever. Not as though I haven't taught these. Also, to be a little more dismayed about poetics statements and manifesti, as we are now become our own critics, which is an interesting thing, I think, but important to remember how weird that is, and how weird it was even when the author of The Practice of Outside wrote on Olson and Whitehead.

Some of my most favorite books are offbeat poet's nonfiction (and fiction), but notably, these are generally about writers and writing: Z on Shakes., Duncan on HD, Olson on Melville come to mind first. Some poets' writings for pay, like Ronald Johnson's cookbooks, also occur to me.

I know, because I'm a writer, that working at the edge of one's knowledge can be more exciting than chewing over old shoe leather -- although this may not be a position shared by writers with more of a sense of respect, or "the sacred," or tradition, or whatnot than I have. The feminine my eye (true, but...).

But it seems to me that there is a certain approach to poets' knowledge that gets perpetuated, mostly in academia, and it goes something like this: poet x read an essay by scholar y and "ran with" it, and so everyone who wants to study this poet has to read this essay. Rather than actually considering what the poet is doing and how and why, we end up trying to figure out a bunch of sheer nuttiness that has nothing to do with anything.

Some things bouncing around about WOMPO and I think New Poetry (thanks Amy) have been about militarism and the academy and feminism, etc. And I think looking at Black Mountain that is important too. The GI Bill after World War II changed American higher education dramatically. Black Mountain was founded, and Harvard got Frank O'Hara! But there were not very many female veterans of World War II who didn't already have postsecondary education in nursing or aviation, etc., and the state schools expanded, and those originally for teacher training changed focus, and ...

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

269. Sarah Sarai
2 links: Perloff on reviewing and state of the slush pile
Sun 24 Jan 2010

From Lemon Hound's (Sina Queryas) blog--Marjorie Perloff on reviewing: "There's also Frank O'Hara's argument that it will go away without me. But it doesn't always go away and when I see poets get huge awards and win prizes—poets I am convinced are third-rate-- I'm ready to get embattled again. The inbred quality of current poetry reviewing is a problem: obviously it becomes a form of back-scratching. On the other hand, when it comes to contemporaries, critics who are not themselves poets rarely care enough to bother, so it's Catch-22..." http://networkedblogs.com/p25318582

From the Wall Street Journal on slush piles: "The literary journal [Paris Review] publishes one piece from the slush pile each year. That leaves each unsolicited submission a .008% chance of rising to the top of the pile." http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703414504575001271351446274.html

↑ Index

270. peter ganick
currently reading electronic manuscripts for publication...
Sun 24 Jan 2010

http://chalkeditions.co.cc
a site for experimental literature, currently reading book-length manuscripts for publicaton.
send inquiries to:
peter ganick <[redacted]>
jukka-pekka kervinen <[redacted]>

http://ex-ex-lit.blogspot.com
a site for experiential literature currently reading short texts for publication.
send inquiries to:
peter ganick <[redacted]>

↑ Index

271. Camille Martin
new at Rogue Embryo
Sun 24 Jan 2010

New on my blog:

* Ann Lauterbach's Pilgrim of Desire

* dry leaf on velvet

* Adam Fieled's review and analysis of my sonnets on Stoning the Devil

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.ca

↑ Index

272. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Can anything...?
Sun 24 Jan 2010

---

which is of course exactly what Sartre meant.
hell is other people is a way of saying "repent."

the most interesting thing about rhyming couplets is how arbitrary they are. and yet they are never the less compelling and pervasive. still in their arbitrariness they can become quite boring if you take them too far. too much of it and they are offputting and invasive.

Regards,
Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

On Jan 22, 2010, at 3:01 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:

> to quote pope John Paul Satre: Hell is rhyming couplets.

> rhyming couplets are an ancient technology. and like any technology of language, they shape possibilities of language. they open up some possibilities you wouldn't normally consider and exclude other possibilities.
>
> they're interesting, as a form of speech and writing, because they're lively, or can be, if you live with them long enough and share your blood with them. their liveliness is musical, aphoristic, quickly pointed, sharply pointed, among other things...they are close to the very form of wit, as it were. they are a dance of language. a dance is a formal constraint to free the liveliness of the body into expression within its moves. and gives them meaning in its language, which is of both how it looks and means as symbol, body as glyph, and how we know the body feels to dance it.
>
> sarte said hell is other people. hell is not other people. hell is of our own making. in our relationships with other people. "hell is other people" is humourous because it makes it easy to blame other people for our own little hell. which is how we create it.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

273. Mark Weiss
Re: Can anything...?
Sun 24 Jan 2010

Very small corrective to your last paragraph, which is I think exactly right (as is the rest, imho): Black Mountain was founded in 1933. It was strongly influential on the rest of the culture well before the GI Bill. If anything, decline began to set in after the war. The Black Mountain that many of us look back to was only its last several years, when it rarely had more than a hundred students.

At 08:34 PM 1/23/2010, you wrote:
>Some thoughts on dbc's long posts.
>
>What I am interested in is 1) some sort of way to distinguish >different types of relationship to knowledge, experience, source, and >etc. in poetry
>
>and 2) to depreciate the reading of Pound through his misreading of >Fenollosa (though approved by the literary estate, etc. etc.), Olson / >Whitehead, Fulton / whoever. Not as though I haven't taught these.
>Also, to be a little more dismayed about poetics statements and >manifesti, as we are now become our own critics, which is an >interesting thing, I think, but important to remember how weird that >is, and how weird it was even when the author of The Practice of >Outside wrote on Olson and Whitehead.

>
>Some of my most favorite books are offbeat poet's nonfiction (and >fiction), but notably, these are generally about writers and writing:
>Z on Shakes., Duncan on HD, Olson on Melville come to mind first.
>Some poets' writings for pay, like Ronald Johnson's cookbooks, also >occur to me.
>
>I know, because I'm a writer, that working at the edge of one's >knowledge can be more exciting than chewing over old shoe leather -- >although this may not be a position shared by writers with more of a >sense of respect, or "the sacred," or tradition, or whatnot than I >have. The feminine my eye (true, but...).
>
>But it seems to me that there is a certain approach to poets' >knowledge that gets perpetuated, mostly in academia, and it goes >something like this: poet x read an essay by scholar y and "ran with" >it, and so everyone who wants to study this poet has to read this >essay. Rather than actually considering what the poet is doing and >how and why, we end up trying to figure out a bunch of sheer nuttiness >that has nothing to do with anything.
>
>Some things bouncing around about WOMPO and I think New Poetry (thanks >Amy) have been about militarism and the academy and feminism, etc.
>And I think looking at Black Mountain that is important too. The GI >Bill after World War II changed American higher education >dramatically. Black Mountain was founded, and Harvard got Frank >O'Hara! But there were not very many female veterans of World War II >who didn't already have postsecondary education in nursing or >aviation, etc., and the state schools expanded, and those originally >for teacher training changed focus, and ...
>
>
>--
>All best,
>Catherine Daly
>[redacted]
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

274. Catherine Daly
Re: Can anything...?
Sun 24 Jan 2010

Many popes have written poetry

Karol Wojtyla

http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/pages/frontline/shows/pope/poems/

http://www.thehypertexts.com/Karol%20Wojtyla%20Pope%20John%20Paul%20II%20Poet%20Poetry%20Picture%20Literary%20Bio.htm

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

275. steve dalachinsky
new chapbook
Mon 25 Jan 2010

---

from steve dalachinsky

i have a new chapbook that can be ordered from alternating currents propganda press small pocket size based on the insomnia drawings of louise bourgeois called midnight/noon the insomnia poems cover art by my wife yuko otomo
it can be ordered at alt-current.com if there's a problem back channel me thanks

these poems had music composed to them by english composer pete wyer and we peformed them on jazz on 3 for the bbc last january and were voted best of 2009 broadcasts thanks steve

On Sun, 24 Jan 2010 17:24:30 -0800 Catherine Daly <[redacted]> writes:
> Many popes have written poetry

>
> Karol Wojtyla
>
> http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/pages/frontline/shows/pope/poems/
>
>
http://www.thehypertexts.com/Karol%20Wojtyla%20Pope%20John%20Paul %20II%20
Poet%20Poetry%20Picture%20Literary%20Bio.htm
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
>
>

↑ Index

276. Lewis Warsh
The Imperfect by George Tysh
Mon 25 Jan 2010

New from UNITED ARTISTS BOOKS

THE IMPERFECT by George Tysh

Drawings by Janet Hamrick 92 pages

$14.00 ISBN 0-935992-33-2

George Tysh co-edited Blue Pig Magazine, with David Ball, in the 1960s. From 1980-91 he directed LINES: New Writing at the Detroit Institute of Arts. He is also co-editor, with Chris Tysh, of In Camera, a project devoted to works of the sexual imaginary. The Imperfect completes a sequence that includes Ovals (In Camera) and Echolalia (United Artists Books). He currently teaches at the Roeper School in Birmingham, Michigan.

"Somewhere between taking stock and stocking up these words impinge. Caught up once more in the eternal return of What can be said? What not? The scalar groove of all that? Restless, the troubling beauty of the still unfinished." Clark Coolidge

"The nine-line poems, the four-line poems, the three-line poems-- though all of them sparkle, it is not for his mastery of form that we value George Tysh's poetry. Rather we do so in response to his empathy, almost the single pulse of a muscle, the "dictum to rectum" effect he writes of in a lovely poem. He knows as much about the way things look as he does about the needs that went into their making and abeyance. The poems of THE IMPERFECT are written in Detroit, a "motor city" outside of which "methyl walls perspire" and "black men and white men/ walk the streets"--yet they insinuate themselves into the brains of the feeling everywhere around the earth. I'm a sucker for this sort of thing. It's like Grace Jones used to say, George Tysh isn't perfect, but he's perfect for me." Kevin Killian

THE IMPERFECT is available from

UNITED ARTISTS BOOKS
114 W. 16th Street, 5C
New York, NY 10011
[redacted]

or

SMALL PRESS DISTRIBUTION
1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley, Ca. 94710
[redacted]

Check backlist of United Artists Books at www.unitedartistsbooks.com

↑ Index

277. Ruth Lepson
Re: Can anything...?
Mon 25 Jan 2010

---

not bad! mature, selfless, some vital images, don't you think?

On 1124110 8:24 PM, "Catherine Daly" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Many popes have written poetry
>
> Karol Wojtyla
>
> http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/pages/frontline/shows/pope/poems/
>
> http://www.thehypertexts.com/Karol%20Wojtyla%20Pope%20John%20Paul%20II%20Poet%
> 20Poetry%20Picture%20Literary%20Bio.htm

↑ Index

278. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: Can anything...?

Mon 25 Jan 2010

Once/If one accepts the idea of a rhyme scheme in poetry, there are a limited number of ways one can go. The first distinction, it seems to me, is whether the rhyme structure is conceived within stanzaic units, as in the sonnet or Provencal song forms, sestinas, etc., or serially, as in the heroic couplet or the gazel. What a serial rhyming structure does is to weaken, making more ambiguous, the idea of an ending. The English speakers usually associate the heroic couplet with its epigrammatic, 18th century, particularly Popean incarnation. In English, the heroic couplet starts with Chaucer, who used it first (I think) in Canterbury Tales to create a series of long narratives -basically, "non-poem" poems. The heroic couplet becomes a means of opening up a poem, away from the concept of a song. One can regard, in some way, blank verse -the prosody starting with The Elizabethan Drama- as heroic couplet which has gotten rid of its rhymes. Interestingly, in *Hamlet *the play within the play is enacted in a particularly stilted version of heroic couplets creating the illusion of distance.

The gazel form tentatively deals with the ambiguity, the absence of clear ending by making the rhyme scheme of the first couplet in a gazel (aa) different from the rest (ba, ca, da, etc.) and by having the last couplet mention the poet's name ("I, Hafiz...," etc.) -these devices interjecting, in Jason's terms," a partly artificial, arbitrary frame. The gazels of many poets can be recombined, provided they use the same rhyme.

These are a few random thoughts.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jan 24, 2010 at 8:08 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> which is of course exactly what Sartre meant.
> hell is other people is a way of saying "repent."
>
> the most interesting thing about rhyming couplets is how arbitrary they
> are. and yet they are never the less compelling and pervasive.
> still in their arbitrariness they can become quite boring if you take them > too far. too much of it and they are offputting and invasive.
>
> Regards,
> Jason Quackenbush
> [redacted]

> On Jan 22, 2010, at 3:01 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:
>
> to quote pope John Paul Satre: Hell is rhyming couplets.
>
> rhyming couplets are an ancient technology. and like any technology of language, they shape possibilities of language. they open up some possibilities you wouldn't normally consider and exclude other possibilities.
>
> they're interesting, as a form of speech and writing, because they're lively, or can be, if you live with them long enough and share your blood with them. their liveliness is musical, aphoristic, quickly pointed, sharply pointed, among other things...they are close to the very form of wit, as it were. they are a dance of language. a dance is a formal constraint to free the liveliness of the body into expression within its moves. and gives them meaning in its language, which is of both how it looks and means as symbol, body as glyph, and how we know the body feels to dance it.
>
> sarte said hell is other people. hell is not other people. hell is of our own making. in our relationships with other people. "hell is other people" is humourous because it makes it easy to blame other people for our own little hell. which is how we create it.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

279. Jim Andrews
Re: Can anything...?
Mon 25 Jan 2010

> which is of course exactly what Sartre meant.
> hell is other people is a way of saying "repent."

ha. that also is humourous in its reworking of "repent". not as in 'get (our) religion' but as in 'take responsibility' and/or 'live and let live' and so forth. which is a more reasonable and useful repentance, i'd say.

"hell is other people" is interesting in where it takes us. it doesn't seem to be meant as a simple statement of fact but as something that's meant to be questioned. literary statements are sometimes this way. they're often not so much statements of fact but initiate questioning and following the possible meanings. often toward deeper understanding of the meaning of the words used. in this case, humour is in realizing the circuit of the meaning and what must have been meant but is not, on the face of it, evident. and in the hidden meaning's agreement with deeper meanings of the words.

this is probably part of what william carlos williams meant when he said "a poem is a machine made out of words".

three references to sartre, three spellings. the philosopher gets it right, finally. good to hear from you, jason. it's been a while.

> the most interesting thing about rhyming couplets is how arbitrary they are. and yet they are never the less compelling and pervasive. still in their arbitrariness they can become quite boring if you take them too far. too much of it and they are offputting and invasive.

yes, they can be "arbitrary", and usually they do seem a little off, or a best of bad fit, or simply an unfortunate hijacking of the writer's brain. but they also can sometimes be almost miraculously just so, a mysterious gift.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

280. William Slaughter
Notice: Mudlark
Mon 25 Jan 2010

New and On View: Mudlark Poster No. 85 (2010)

from Isis Leaves Idaho by Judy Huddleston

Judy Huddleston received her BFA from California Institute of the Arts and her MFA from Eastern Washington University. Her memoir This is the End was published in 1991. She has recently completed her second memoir and first collection of poetry, and is currently teaching Literature, Writing, Film, and Composition at Globe University in the Twin Cities.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

281. Mark Weiss
Re: Can anything...?
Mon 25 Jan 2010

A few correctives. Not every couplet is a heroic couplet. Heroic couplets don't enjamb, Chaucer's frequently do. All of his poetry, with the exception of a few lyrics, are in couplets.

I don't know the origin of blank verse, but it's not likely to have been the couplet, as the unit is a single line. Often enjambed.

At 03:24 PM 1/25/2010, you wrote:
>Once/If one accepts the idea of a rhyme scheme in poetry, there are a >limited number of ways one can go. The first distinction, it seems to me, is >whether the rhyme structure is conceived within stanzaic units, as in the >sonnet or Provencal song forms, sestinas, etc., or serially, as in the >heroic couplet or the gazel. What a serial rhyming structure does is to >weaken, making more ambiguous, the idea of an ending. The English speakers >usually associate the heroic couplet with its epigrammatic, 18th century, >particularly Popean incarnation. In English, the heroic couplet starts with >Chaucer, who used it first (I think) in Canterbury Tales to create a >series of long narratives -basically, "non-poem" poems. The heroic couplet >becomes a means of opening up a poem, away from the concept of a song.
One >can regard, in some way, blank verse -the prosody starting with The >Elizabethan Drama- as heroic couplet which has gotten rid of its rhymes.
>Interestingly, in *Hamlet *the play within the play is enacted in a >particularly stilted version of heroic couplets creating the illusion of >distance.
>
>The gazel form tentatively deals with the ambiguity, the absence of clear >ending by making the rhyme scheme of the first couplet in a gazel (aa) >different from the rest (ba, ca, da, etc.) and by having the last couplet >mention the poet's name ("I, Hafiz...," etc.) -these devices interjecting, >in Jason's terms," a partly artificial, arbitrary frame. The gazels of many >poets can be recombined, provided they use the same rhyme.
>
>These are a few random thoughts.
>
>Ciao,
>
>Murat

>
>
>On Sun, Jan 24, 2010 at 8:08 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > which is of course exactly what Sartre meant.
> > hell is other people is a way of saying "repent."
> >
> > the most interesting thing about rhyming couplets is how arbitrary they > > are. and yet they are never the less compelling and pervasive.
> > still in their arbitrariness they can become quite boring if you take them > > too far. too much of it and they are offputting and invasive.
> >
> >
> > Regards,
> > Jason Quackenbush
> > [redacted]
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > On Jan 22, 2010, at 3:01 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:
> >
> > to quote pope John Paul Satre: Hell is rhyming couplets.
> >>>
> >>
> >> rhyming couplets are an ancient technology. and like any technology of > >> language, they shape possibilities of language. they open up some > >> possibilities you wouldn't normally consider and exclude other > >> possibilities.
> >>
> >> they're interesting, as a form of speech and writing, because they're > >> lively, or can be, if you live with them long enough and share your blood > >> with them. their liveliness is musical, aphoristic, quickly > pointed, sharply > >> pointed, among other things...they are close to the very form of > wit, as it > >> were. they are a dance of language. a dance is a formal constraint to free > >> the liveliness of the body into expression within its moves. and > gives them > >> meaning in its language, which is of both how it looks and means > as symbol,

> >> body as glyph, and how we know the body feels to dance it.
> >>
> >> sarte said hell is other people. hell is not other people. hell is of our > >> own making. in our relationships with other people. "hell is other people" > >> is humourous because it makes it easy to blame other people for our own > >> little hell. which is how we create it.
> >>
> >> ja
> >> http://vispo.com
> >>
> >
> >
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

282. steve dalachinsky

Re: Wanda's Upcoming Shows

Tue 26 Jan 2010

---

from steve dalachinsky

i have a new chapbook that can be ordered from alternating currents propganda press small pocket size based on the insomnia drawings of louise bourgeois called midnight/noon the insomnia poems cover art by my wife yuko otomo
it can be ordered at alt-current.com if there's a problem back channel me thanks

these poems had music composed to them by english composer pete wyer and we peformed them on jazz on 3 for the bbc last january and were voted best of 2009 broadcasts thanks steve
On Mon, 18 Jan 2010 21:35:06 -0500 Wanda Phipps <[redacted]> writes:
> Upcoming shows by Wanda Phipps:
> Yara Celebrates 20 Years of Theatre
> A Festival of Music, Poetry and Art Celebrating two Decades of > dreams and > Destinations

> January 22-24, 2010
> presented by Yara Arts Group and Ukrainian Insitute of America
> 2 East 79th Street at Fifth Avenue in New York
> Friday and Saturday at 8PM
> $15 Friday, $25 Saturday and for both events $30
> tickets available at door
> for information call [redacted]
> Wanda will be reading both nights: Friday January 22 at 8 PM, when > 12 visual > artists, 8 poets, 4 dancers and 3 musicians celebrate Yara with > their > poetry, music and art and on Saturday January 23 at 8PM when Yara > artists
> sing and perform poetry from Yara's projects over the years.
> for more details see:
>
> www.brama.com/yara/20-uia-press.html
>
> for a current list of artists
>
> www.brama.com/yara/20-uia.html
>
>
> and > Sunday afternoon, Jan. 31 3pm
> at Starving Artist Cafe
> 249 City Island Ave.
> City Island, NY 10464.
>
> John Guth and Wanda Phipps perform at a "poetry brunch"
>
> Wanda will read from her works sometimes accompanied by John's > guitar, and > also sing some settings of her poetry. John will perform some > settings of > poems he's concocted over the years by Wallace Stevens, William > Blake, Lewis
> Carroll and others.
>
> Info at starvingartistonline.com

>
>
> --
> Wanda Phipps
>
> Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and > http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband
>
> My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available
> at:
> http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm
>
> And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning > Poems > available > at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item
>
>
>

↑ Index

283. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Can anything...?
Tue 26 Jan 2010

It's good to be heard, Jim. Law school has not only eaten my brain but also my internet social life. My new years resolution was to try to undo that a bit.

But yes, interesting in relation to WCW on machines is Umberto Eco's "machina pigra" view of how a text works vis a vis the death of the author debate. Not only are all poems machines, all texts are machines, but they are lazy machines that require energy from the reader, probably poems more so than a lot of other texts. One of the things that's always bothered me about end rhyme is that it seems to encourage that laziness transfer from the machine to the reader. You hit these magic words at the end and in noting them, there's a sense that the biggest chunk of the work has been done particularly given the semantic weight that rhyme and positioning at the end of the line gives, it can make for truly ludicrous composition (see the limerick) which I think is why ham handed use of form always strikes me as so unintentionally funny.

On Jan 25, 2010, at 4:14 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:

> which is of course exactly what Sartre meant.
> hell is other people is a way of saying "repent."

> ha. that also is humourous in its reworking of "repent". not as in 'get (our) religion' but as in 'take responsibility' and/or 'live and let live' and so forth. which is a more reasonable and useful repentance, i'd say.
>
> "hell is other people" is interesting in where it takes us. it doesn't seem to be meant as a simple statement of fact but as something that's meant to be questioned. literary statements are sometimes this way. they're often not so much statements of fact but initiate questioning and following the possible meanings. often toward deeper understanding of the meaning of the words used. in this case, humour is in realizing the circuit of the meaning and what must have been meant but is not, on the face of it, evident. and in the hidden meaning's agreement with deeper meanings of the words.
>
> this is probably part of what william carlos williams meant when he said "a poem is a machine made out of words".
>
> three references to sartre, three spellings. the philosopher gets it right, finally. good to hear from you, jason. it's been a while.
>
> the most interesting thing about rhyming couplets is how arbitrary they are. and yet they are never the less compelling and pervasive. still in their arbitrariness they can become quite boring if you take them too far. too much of it and they are offputting and invasive.
>
> yes, they can be "arbitrary", and usually they do seem a little off, or a best of bad fit, or simply an unfortunate hijacking of the writer's brain. but they also can sometimes be almost miraculously just so, a mysterious gift.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

284. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Can anything...?
Tue 26 Jan 2010

I've always thought tho that internal rhyme could be much more fully developed formally, and I think the arbitrariness of end rhyme in couplets is really just an artifact of what you're tallking about in doing it in stanzaic units.

that having been said, I've read a number of free verse translations of Hafiz in particular that abandoned the attempt to shoehorn the english into the strict gazel rhyme scheme and I still found them fairly compelling, although not as good as the truly excellent ones that manage to preserve form and meaning. That having been said I think the ghazal is an interesting example of one of those forms that's hard for native English speakers to cope with. Like Haiku there's a lot more going on formally than just the prosodic components what with the requirements about nightengales and other specific images, or the various content related formal structures in haiku being about seasons and whatnot.

it's interesting because I don't know that there's much in English that has a similar requirement. Maybe Limericks, because there usually has to be a place name. Or Villanelle's with the full repeated line. One form I've always found really fascinating in this sense is the lushi because the form is in the intonation not the syllable or meter so much. I've had some fun trying to do the same thing in English, but again, it loses something because the (ultimately arbitrary) rules of the home language simply don't have the same semantic meaning in the new one.

Regards,
Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

On Jan 25, 2010, at 1:24 PM, Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

> Once/If one accepts the idea of a rhyme scheme in poetry, there are a limited number of ways one can go. The first distinction, it seems to me, is > whether the rhyme structure is conceived within stanzaic units, as in the > sonnet or Provencal song forms, sestinas, etc., or serially, as in the heroic couplet or the gazel. What a serial rhyming structure does is to > weaken, making more ambiguous, the idea of an ending. The English speakers > usually associate the heroic couplet with its epigrammatic, 18th century, > particularly Popean incarnation. In English, the heroic couplet starts with > *Chaucer, who used it first (I think) in Canterbury Tales to create a series of long narratives -basically, "non-poem" poems. The heroic couplet* > becomes a means of opening up a poem, away from the concept of a song. One > can regard, in some way, blank verse -the prosody starting with The Elizabethan Drama- as heroic couplet which has gotten rid of its rhymes.

*Interestingly, in *Hamlet the play within the play is enacted in a particularly stilted version of heroic couplets creating the illusion of distance.

The gazel form tentatively deals with the ambiguity, the absence of clear ending by making the rhyme scheme of the first couplet in a gazel (aa) different from the rest (ba, ca, da, etc.) and by having the last couplet mention the poet's name ("I, Hafiz...," etc.) -these devices interjecting,
in Jason's terms," a partly artificial, arbitrary frame. The gazels of many poets can be recombined, provided they use the same rhyme.

These are a few random thoughts.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jan 24, 2010 at 8:08 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

which is of course exactly what Sartre meant.
hell is other people is a way of saying "repent."

the most interesting thing about rhyming couplets is how arbitrary they
are. and yet they are never the less compelling and pervasive.
still in their arbitrariness they can become quite boring if you take them too far. too much of it and they are offputting and invasive.

Regards,
Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

On Jan 22, 2010, at 3:01 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:

to quote pope John Paul Satre: Hell is rhyming couplets.

rhyming couplets are an ancient technology. and like any technology of language, they shape possibilities of language. they open up some possibilities you wouldn't normally consider and exclude other possibilities.

they're interesting, as a form of speech and writing, because they're lively, or can be, if you live with them long enough and share your blood with them. their liveliness is musical, aphoristic, quickly pointed, sharply pointed, among other things...they are close to the very form of wit, as it were. they are a dance of language. a dance is a formal constraint to free
the liveliness of the body into expression within its moves. and gives them meaning in its language, which is of both how it looks and means as symbol,
body as glyph, and how we know the body feels to dance it.

sarte said hell is other people. hell is not other people. hell is of our own making. in our relationships with other people. "hell is other people"
is humourous because it makes it easy to blame other people for our own little hell. which is how we create it.

ja
http://vispo.com

guidelines

↑ Index

285. Bob Heman

more info on friday's CLWN WR event at Westbeth

Tue 26 Jan 2010

Just a reminder, folks, that this Friday's 10th Big CLWN WR Event will be held in the Community Room at Westbeth, Greenwich Village's legendary artists' housing complex, at 155 Bank Street/57 Bethune Street, from 7:00-10:00 p.m. Admission is free.

It will feature Martha King and Leonard Gontarek, and will also including readings by Liza Wolsky, Debra Jenks, Joel Chace, Bob Hart, Adriana Scopino, Judy Kamilhor, Phyllis Wat and Thomas Fucaloro, as well as performances by singers Carolyn Ota and Moira T. Smith, and a semi-improvised dancepoem by Nathan Whiting and Christina Knight.

Leonard Gontarek is the author of St. Genevieve Watching Over Paris, Van Morrison Can't Find His Feet, Zen For Beginners, and D?j? Vu Diner. His poems have appeared in American Poetry Review, Fence, Field, Pool, Volt, Verse, The Best American Poetry, Joyful Noise! American Spiritual Poetry, and The Working Poet. He has been nominated five times for the Pushcart Prize and twice received poetry fellowships from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts. www.leafscape.org/LeonardGontarek Martha King attended Black Mountain College as a teenager in the 1950s, and married the painter Basil King in 1958. She has published two collections of short stories, Little Tales of Family and War and North & South as well as poetry in chapbooks, magazines and a book. She is currently writing a memoir, Outside Inside, some sections of which have appeared in Bombay Gin, New York Stories, and in the chapbook, Separate Parts. There will aIso a short tribute to Clown War co-founder Stephen Fairhurst who passed away in 2009.

All adults who attend the reading will receive a free copy of the new issue of CLWN WR (containing poems by Scott Metz, Leonard Gontarek, Penelope Maguffin, Connie Meng, Hal Sirowitz, Patricia Sonego, Alex Caldiero, Thomas Gibney, Nathan Whiting and Judy Kamilhor) which will debut at the event.

The event will be hosted by Bob Heman (editor of CLWN WR, and its predecessor Clown War, since 1971) & Lauren Binet (of the Westbeth Artists Residents Council Literary Arts Committee).

Westbeth is located at 155 Bank Street/57 Bethune Street in the far West Village, convenient to the 14th St. stop on the A, C and E trains, the West 4th Street stop on the A, C, E, B, D & F trains, and the Christopher St. stop on the 1 train. 57 Bethune St. is mid-block between Washington and West Streets, then up the steps to the inner courtyard. 155 Bank St. is mid-block between Washington and West Streets, enter the outer courtyard and up the ramp to inner courtyard.

Events at Westbeth are sponsored in part by NYC Council Speaker Christine Quinn and NYS Senator Tom Duane, with public funds from The New York City department of Cultural Affairs.

↑ Index

286. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Can anything...?
Tue 26 Jan 2010

Mark,

One specifies that heroic couplets must not enjamb because our idea of a heroic couplet is determined by its 18th century examples. My point is different, that, within its historical content in English poetry, as opposed to stanzaic rhyme schemes, Chaucer's iambic pentameter couplets led to opener forms -very much as in our poetry today we are exploring extended forms, rather than "well-made," well-crafted poems. My description of blank verse as heroic couplets stripped of its rhymes -obviously an "unorthodox" defintion- was to point how the blank verse is an extension of the idea of a longer, "opener" poetry into drama. Chaucer, it seems to me, establishes the iambic pentameter as a basic English poetic line. Elizabethan and Jacobean sonnets (Sydney, Shakespeare, Donne), Paradise Lost, The Prelude, etc., are in iambic pentameter. What interested with in Chaucer's "heroic couplets" is that they free the English poem from the restraints of a short lyric. This is important to me because I am interested in the idea of a book as a single poem -not as a collection of lyrics- how such a poem could be put together even though, by necessity, it may be constituted by a convergence of fragments -how the fragment as a poetic unit is completely different from a "poem." Of course, blank verse or the iambic pentameter have nor relevance to the labguage of an American poem.

Jason,

I agree with you completely about the problems with the free verse translations of Hafiz. I have quite a withering review of Daniel Landinky's "translations" of Hafiz in The Gift. I can speak Persian a bit but can not read it. My understanding of him is through the way a Turkish poet like Ahmet Hasim uses him or through some excellent Turkish translations. It seems to me Hafiz is basically a serialist poet with stunning gaps -arcs, jumps- in the development of his images. I know quite a few Iranians who are very familiar with his work. The seem to have a peculiar way of reading him. They just "dip" into his texts, which seems like an ocean, and pick a few lines. The idea of individual gazels does not seem to exist, a quality I like a lot. Over the years, I did attempt to do one or two Hafiz translations into English from their Turkish versions, trying to project that sense of gap, arcing jumps. You are right. The paucity of rhmes in English is a big issue, but nevertheless the sound pattern of the gazel implies a vision in Hafiz's poetry that the translation, I think, needs to preserve. Here is one of my attempts:

Get up, before your skull is dust ridden fill up your glass before your grave is sodden

Since since the last motel is the valley of silence scream to the sky now, before the night is in

Please my sylvan beauty, on your being do not leave my dust be, before your shadow has been let the sparkle of the glass tinder existence the deed of your plot will not before your sin

Reader, don't forget Hafiz's words take a bath in your tears, then on beauty sing! beauty's wing

Discussing the lushi, by "intonation" do you mean "cadence"? Discussing the peculiarity of the Turkish syntax, its agglutinative nature, in the introduction to my Eda anthology of Turkish poetry, I do discuss cadence/the motion of that cadence being the underlying structure of the music of Turkish poetry.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Jan 25, 2010 at 10:49 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> A few correctives. Not every couplet is a heroic couplet. Heroic couplets don't enjamb, Chaucer's frequently do. All of his poetry, with the exception of a few lyrics, are in couplets.
>
> I don't know the origin of blank verse, but it's not likely to have been the couplet, as the unit is a single line. Often enjambed.
>
> At 03:24 PM 1/25/2010, you wrote:
>
> Once/If one accepts the idea of a rhyme scheme in poetry, there are a limited number of ways one can go. The first distinction, it seems to me, is > whether the rhyme structure is conceived within stanzaic units, as in the sonnet or Provencal song forms, sestinas, etc., or serially, as in the heroic couplet or the gazel. What a serial rhyming structure does is to weaken, making more ambiguous, the idea of an ending. The English speakers usually associate the heroic couplet with its epigrammatic, 18th century, particularly Popean incarnation. In English, the heroic couplet starts with > *Chaucer, who used it first (I think) in Canterbury Tales to create a series of long narratives -basically, "non-poem" poems. The heroic couplet becomes a means of opening up a poem, away from the concept of a song. One can regard, in some way, blank verse -the prosody starting with The Elizabethan Drama- as heroic couplet which has gotten rid of its rhymes. Interestingly, in *Hamlet the play within the play is enacted in a particularly stilted version of heroic couplets creating the illusion of

distance.

The gazel form tentatively deals with the ambiguity, the absence of clear ending by making the rhyme scheme of the first couplet in a gazel (aa) different from the rest (ba, ca, da, etc.) and by having the last couplet mention the poet's name ("I, Hafiz...," etc.) -these devices interjecting, in Jason's terms," a partly artificial, arbitrary frame. The gazels of many poets can be recombined, provided they use the same rhyme.

These are a few random thoughts.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jan 24, 2010 at 8:08 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

which is of course exactly what Sartre meant.
hell is other people is a way of saying "repent."

the most interesting thing about rhyming couplets is how arbitrary they are. and yet they are never the less compelling and pervasive.
still in their arbitrariness they can become quite boring if you take them too far. too much of it and they are offputting and invasive.

Regards,
Jason Quackenbush
[redacted]

On Jan 22, 2010, at 3:01 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:

to quote pope John Paul Satre: Hell is rhyming couplets.

rhyming couplets are an ancient technology. and like any technology of language, they shape possibilities of language. they open up some possibilities you wouldn't normally consider and exclude other possibilities.

they're interesting, as a form of speech and writing, because they're lively, or can be, if you live with them long enough and share your blood

with them. their liveliness is musical, aphoristic, quickly pointed, sharply pointed, among other things...they are close to the very form of wit, as it were. they are a dance of language. a dance is a formal constraint to free
the liveliness of the body into expression within its moves. and gives them meaning in its language, which is of both how it looks and means as symbol,
body as glyph, and how we know the body feels to dance it.

sarte said hell is other people. hell is not other people. hell is of our own making. in our relationships with other people. "hell is other people"
is humourous because it makes it easy to blame other people for our own little hell. which is how we create it.

ja
http://vispo.com

guidelines

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

287. Donna Kuhn

New poetry book-Leather Roses by Donna Kuhn (blue lion books)

Tue 26 Jan 2010

http://www.lulu.com/content/paperback-book/leather-roses/6774298

Donna Kuhn

http://digitalaardvarks.blogspot.com http://donnakuhn.imagekind.com

↑ Index

288. amy king

This Friday - BARD ROVING READING SERIES - King and Benson

Tue 26 Jan 2010

AMY KING & CARA BENSON
Friday, Janua
BARD ROVING READING SERIES

AMY KING & CARA BENSON
Friday, January 29th @ 6 pm
Bard Hall* at Bard College
Annandale-on-Hudson NY

*Bard Hall is located near the corner of North Ravine Road and Annandale Road. It is a small, grey, church-like structureâ€“set back from Annandale Roadâ€“and should not be confused with the stone chapel located to its left.

Click here for more directions -- http://www.bard.edu/campus/maps/maptour/

AMY KING

Amy King is the author of Iâ€™m the Man Who Loves You, Antidotes for an Alibi, Slaves to Do these Things (forthcoming from BlazeVox), and I Want to Make You Safe (forthcoming from Litmus Press). She teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College, and co-curates The Stain reading series in Brooklyn, NY.

~~~~~~

CARA BENSON

Cara Benson is editor of the interdisciplinary book Predictions for ChainLinks. Her newest titles include the book (made), which is forthcoming from BookThug, and Protean Parade (Black Radish Books 2010). Her writing has been published in Belladonna Elders Series #7, Imaginary Syllabi, Spell/ing Bound, as well as in Quantum Chaos and Poems: A Manifest(o)ation, which won the 2008 bpNichol Prize. She edits Sous Rature, and teaches poetry in a New York State prison.

http://bardrovingreadingseries.blogspot.com/2010/01/amy-king-cara-benson.html

_____

BOOK Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW
~~~~~~

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

289. Ryan Daley
A must-see
Tue 26 Jan 2010

I figured I'd pass this along to the list:

http://www.outragethemovie.com/

↑ Index

290. Pierre Joris
Recent NOMADICS posts
Tue 26 Jan 2010

Check out these new posts at http://pierrejoris.com/blog

Haiti, Césaire, Translation, & The New Yorker

« Ayiti cheri, yon trezò pou memwa »

Chicago Poetry Project Reading

Port-au-Prince: Blast from the Past

New e-book: The Tang Extending from the Blade

History of a Haitian Holocaust

enjoy!

Pierre
==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========

↑ Index

291. Alan Sondheim
DNA Involuntaries class last week (this is amazing)
Tue 26 Jan 2010

DNA Involuntary Class

http://www.alansondheim.org/dnaclass09.mp4

↑ Index

292. David Chirot
Re: Can anything...?
Tue 26 Jan 2010

Dear Catherine:

re Black Mountain there is Martin Duberman's great history Black Mountain An Experiment in Community which is still in print--

Many many thanks for your thoughts and suggestions/examples re readings.

Basically, I say a big Yes to all you write—and really thank you—

I wrote this reply in two sections really as the ideas and examples tumble forth too fast to keep up—I thought it interesting that in this discussion itself, you and I are writing in one direction while others are off on another—which in itself might indicate that there's a similarity of interests and thoughts in our thinking with these things-and hence the sense of an agreement—

As my reply, I suggest some different ways of thinking abt poetry and Visual Poetry that I work with. I don't remotely advocate them as being "the way" anyone else need do anything—my main objective is just to present examples of ways different from those you refute in your letter, not to be "against them," but to suggest that there a myriad ways of thinking yet to be found—so why only rely on a few--

I apologize if my reply is long, but one needs to cite some examples to show how one works, rather than making some statements "about it." The too prevalent manifesti you note, perhaps, might be that in place of examples, one wishes to state something which is "not yet there" but is "to come"—prophecies—one might then examine manifesti in terms of "prophetic works," or "science fictions"—or 'speculative fictions" and so create another form of thinking abt the manifesti—the manifesto as a limbo between "appearance" and "disappearance" (manifesti always wanting some things to be gotten rid of , to be sure!!--)

To "discover again" the futures of the past—as fictions which can be examined in terms of being "documentaries" of their own time periods--

I agree very much with you--being an artist/writer, Visual/Sound poet etc--i look to the writings of other poets and artists for ideas, rather than turning to philosophy etc. When an artist looks at philosophy, or i shd say as this artist looks at it, it is more material to work with, more words, phrases, letters, images which one may or not find of use and; lug off as one does items found in the streets to be placed into that vast heap of rubble known as the artists' workshop--basically the same indoors and out, like Smithson's Sites and Non-sites--so on a rainy or sub zero day one can continue working "outside" inside—

This is part of why I love Heraclitus' work so much: "The most beautiful world is a heap of rubble tossed down in confusion/at random."

In another section below I write that Fear is perhaps part of why persons turn elsewhere than relying on the poems and paintings etc to have ideas in them. In a sense, this devalues the respect for the work itself, the artist, as well as for one's own thinking—the main fear being to go out on a limb alone—hence one finds in a time of such endlessly propagandized fear as this one, an ever greater fear not to conform, or not to refer to some outside form of "Authority" in thinking re a line in a poem or that great blotch in a painting or Visual Poem. For is not a blotch itself a way of thinking in space and time on what seeing itself is in relation with a thinking—perhaps to present as it were some knot, some gnarled impediment obstinately refusing to "con-form" and so just being "outside" "interpretation."

I am working on several series of Visual Poems re the Cinema Fantome, the Cinema of Disappearance (name of a book published in France of some of my works)—How does one present the ghost of no one?—(a question from a forthcoming essay at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets and Poetics blog—re Nonwriting and the Unwritten--) Appearance and Disappearance—in the virtual, in the actual, in the poem, in the image, in time---in the rubble--

Often what a "critical' or "philosophic point of view" approaching art may be doing is looking for evidences of something outside the art--that is, some form of system by which to "understand" and "map" the coordinates within the work. That something "outside" may be an ideology, a philosophy, a spiritual approach--a historical materialist one, and so forth. Of course, to some extent, this method of searching reveals basically only those things it is able to see in its own terms. What is sought for are not openings but 'proofs" of that particular way of seeing and thinking's "validity." Validity—"value"—in all its glory is also part of this quest for El Dorado. These methods often find very interesting things within the work of art or poem, while at the same time to some extent they also "disappear"--by "necessity"--other elements in the process. What interests me are the relationships among that those elements used to create the "appearance" of the work in terms of the critic's or philosophy’s terminologies and what does not appear, what is “disappeared.” Often the part that does not appear is, from an artist's point of view, precisely where the art or poetry is--between the lines--between the lettres between the colors and forms--it is out of this seeming blank to others that an artist works--this "disappeared" area where an actual "resistance" exists. Resistance because it continually changes—is “fugitive.”

One may, in turn, if thinking in some ways that I do, think of that area itself as something which in order to remain blank as it were, in-between--is that it cannot be captured and imprisoned as it were within a doxology of terminology dependent upon a System of thinking or seeing. . It is something which like Time flows--changes—“the basis of art is change in the universe” as the Japanese poet Basho puts it in "learn from the Pine." In the Intro to his book Junkie, William S. Burroughs writes that a Glossary cannot be made the words of Junkie slang, which change from moment to moment and place to place, because one cannot create a permanent set of definitions for “words whose intentions are fugitive.”

Actually i read much the way you do--artists/poets re others who work in the same or a different art medium. For example, lately I have been writing re the Literature of the No. Very little exists on this--a handful of texts, which are part fiction and part non-fiction about other fictions. The "founder" of this form of writing being, after all, Bartleby the Scrivener, who , unlike today's American 'conceptual" poets, stops copying and--"would prefer not to." Also, the issue of "disappearance" in re Non-writing (which is not the same as the Unwritten)--in terms of both the virtual and the non-reporting of actual events, vanishing them. Returning to the originary meanings of avant-garde, which are military, --war viewed by the early avant-gardes as Pro by Italian Futurism and Ant- by Dada--a lotof the work i do is with the direct analogies between the military in terms of technology and language with what is being used and done in writing, poetry, Non-writing, the Unwritten ("The Real War Will Not Get into the Books"--"the real, the unwritten War" as Whitman writes in Specimen Days of the US Civil War).

However, in terms of the Avant-Garde, one finds really that the precedent is not as an analogy with the military—but as poetry and war combined in the same person, the great poet Archilocus, the inventor of so many forms and genres of poetry and also a paid soldier, a mercenary, really—who writes that his two muses are the gods of War and of the Arts, of Poetry—

In Archilocus one finds an opening into the questions re poetry and war—just as the military invents new technologies for the soldier, so this soldier-poet invents new techniques for poetry—including within lyric poetry (the iambic pentameter for example)—and the satiric, the epigram the epitaph—

Re disappearance and the Unwritten of late reading a great deal by and about Mallarme (via bios and letters) and his ideas re the Book, that great unfinished project. The question of the “unfinished” also interests me a great deal. Is it itself part of the “Unwritten”—or of “something else”—or, really, of both-- Re the Unfinished there are areas of perception in poetry and painting both in which, at the very edges of the media, Mallarme and Cezanne, working in the same time period, ultimately found an area where color and words disappear and what is left are the blank white spaces of the Unwritten, the Unpainted. ("my voice goes after what my eyes can't reach"--Whitman)-These areas, nevertheless are by the poet and painter known to exist—they are NOT a “nothingness” ,or “a mere failure of perception”) As George Steiner in his My Unwritten Books notes, the unwritten is: “not a void."

That same area of white might be the White Whale, or the white figure, immense, which arises among the snows and the near white-out blizzards and ices of Poe's *The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym. * I find the most interesting writing re writing is in writing by writers and other artists. (duh!, in a sense Inside poems, novels, short stories, essays, letters, one finds these various pieces which point in similar directions, are asking similar questions--and, often occurring in the same time period. , Also, for the current reader/writer--within the frame work of the current fast shifting technological "visions" of the world—there is still the question of what is "vision" itself in terms of writing as a form of seeing, of hearing, of the tactile, Haptic elements of existence . . . what it is to see with and in and through words—and to see without them—or with and without light (why I work often literally in the dark with visual poetry---to teach the hands to see--) Time is another element i am working with in the sense of writing being a form of space/time travel. For example, i write often of the "reverse engineering" which occurs in writing and poetry--there is also the Oulipo concept of this in their concept of a current work, phrase, and example in the present having often a previous antecedent--which, in turn, makes of the antecedent a kind of anticipatory plagiarism! Emily Dickinson writes of incredible speeds: "To shut the eyes is travel." "I have but to cross the room to be in the Spice Islands,"--this would be perhaps taken as just flights of fancy--rather than of the imagination--(an issue Poe argued with Coleridge about)--and, in a sense of the technology itself of poetry--to join in one small space two things physically "apparently" immensely distant from each other, by means, as Emily notes very accurately, of "crossing"--crossing borders into that poetic imagination in which such travel is a "daily exercise." A similar visions is found in Celine's little opening "intro" to Voyage au bout de la nuit (Journey to the End of the Night)--to shut the eyes, one sees life from the other side--and that the imagination is travel. (That which functions in terms of Whitman's aching desire in writing--"My voice goes after what my eyes can't reach"--like a person buried in the rubble of Gaza or Haiti crying out for days to an unseen world --somewhere--for help--for respite from not only death but the ultimate loneliness of the solitarily confined). Re speeds of writing, think of the famously fast-typing Kerouac, raving about the fast driving of Neal Cassidy--and what is the ultimate speed: "Writing is silent meditation going a hundred miles an hour." The first time the daguerreotype and one of its makers appears in fiction is in Hawthorne's The House of the Seven Gables--and, for the first time in a fiction, there is a meditation on the differences between painting and photography. The period of time when the scientific methodologies are first encountering those of painting (vision) and poetry, writing, and in re travel--is studied today by the Argentinean writer Cesar Aira via his Humboldt influenced and inspired traveling German painter investigating the wilds of Southern landscapes in Episode in the Life of landscape Painter. It’s often presented that there is some kind of dramatic break between WCW's "Only the imagination is real" in Spring and All and "No ideas but in things, Mr." in Paterson. If one examines writing actually, the two are working together simultaneously far more often than one might at first consider. The examples i cite of conjunction of the fictional and new technologies--are those areas where the encounters among the Unwritten and the Nonwritten occur, the areas of a listening and voice that goes beyond sight--etc--al these things involve technologies and at the same time the work of the imagination itself as a form of techne, a technique, for increasing speeds, time and space traveling etc--its these conjunctions of the imagination and memory, dream and the actual the Situationists in their derives encounter in the Paris streets--not a "surrealism" but instead the actualities found also in the writings of, for the Situationists, Marx. I think al of these things may be studied without the need for the turn to philosophies so often advocated today, which in a way may signal an anti-imaginative thrust, in that one doesn’t look into the text itself for the evidences of its thought, but elsewhere, which is to say, as Olson--and Rimbaud--so vigorously argued--"after the fact," as is al Western poetry following the dictates of Aristotle re metaphor, for example. In a sense it is like Emerson's (I paraphrase) "The blank and ruin we see in Nature is within our own eye." The blank and ruin seen in texts is in the reader's eyes, in a sense, in that what is there remains hidden in plain site/sight/cite, which is another issue i work to address in writing and visual works--the Unseen before one's very eyes--the Purloined letter--which, as Leonardo Sciascia points out in using this text in the Moro Affair--is found by Dupin when he retires to think in absolute darkness, as with the eyes shut, in order to see that which in broad daylight is hidden in plain sight. In a way, the eye needs "development " in the darkroom of being shut or ensconced in darkness, in order to "produce" that image in which what is in sharp relief is indeed the Purloined letter. Sciascia's Moro book--and, in the in-print

NYRB edition it is followed by this book--the Disappearance of Majoranna--Sciascia is using methods from poetry and writing to examine the texts of the letters of Italian Prime minister Aldo Moro, kidnapped prisoner of the Red Brigades. What emerges from these "fictional" approaches to studying "actual texts" is the "actual story" of Moro's hideous adventure--to the discovery that his own "friends" have betrayed him and are going to allow him to be executed. The exposition of what indeed is the "actuality" of these "real events" emerges by processes taken from fictional precedents. What Moro is demonstrating--and he does, again, in amazing ways in the Disappearance of Majoranna--is the interconnections among not so much fictions as fictions, but as actualities which converge with those "in reality" and so "bring to light" those things hidden in plain site/sight/cite from the "reporters" and from the straight forward "really true" "sorts of fictions treated as realities in the likes of sheer fiction or in the mock-docs and mini-docs etc of TV and the Cinema. That is, what Sciascia is presenting is a way of working with methods taken from fiction to examine texts which have actually occurred in the production of "real historical events." The letters of Moro examined in this way "show forth" al that had been "overlooked, turned a blind eye to" by the daily press, the government, the examining authorities, all of them shown to be complicit in the very letters they work so hard to ignore and discredit. (By implying and then announcing openly that as Moro's letters change intone, this is "evidence" of his being drugged etc and thus "no longer Moro" as "we knew and loved him.) What started the Iraq War after al but forged letters, the testimony hallucinated and made up using on line images by an alcoholic Iraqi defector in Germany whom the Americans never met, nor saw his actual texts "in person, in the originals." All these third rate second hand hearings of "realities" which become more tainted with each line of demarcation they cross and ultimately shown to the world as "artists conceptions" rather than photographs of "evidences" by Colin Powell in his disastrous speech at the UN three months before Shock and Awe rained down on the innocent people of Iraq. here, the Bush administration makes use of handy "fictional" "made up" forged and faked elements to instruct a narrative to go to War, making it impossible any more for anyone to know if the 'evidences" for example of the nuclear threat in Iran are "real" or "fictional." Years ago i recall dimly reading at Ron Silliman’s blog a mocking of persons who believe in the characters of fiction as though they are 'real persons." yet, the "reality" is that for actual "problems, questions" existing in "reality" it turns out that a character like Dupin aides the Minister/journalist/friction writer Sciascia--oneof the members of a committee set up to review the evidences of the Moro case by a govt that does not want to hear what Sciascia comes up with--_un finding what is hidden in plain site/sight/cite in Moro's letters--down to the clues as to his whereabouts with in them, while al the time the Italians have mounted the largest man hunt in their history, to a degree almost comic-opera--to find--nothing, no one-- My point being, again that if one uses the texts of poems and writings such as the fictions, essays and letters of poets, artists, there one finds more than enough ideas to use to think on not only "poetry and art" as being separate from "reality" but "in reality" part of the fabric of "actuality." The appearance of the camera in the 19th century and its effects in poetry and painting in terms of ways of seeing with in a poem a story, a painting, as told by the writers, poets, artists themselves, is just as much real as what are after all the complete fictions which one studies in Benjamin' s writings as though his "documents" and "Baudelaire" are more "real" than the actualities themselves. That is, one need look inside Baudelaire himself to find what is it Baudelaire saw, where as instead one is guided by a figure of fiction--"Benjamin's Baudelaire" to act as a guide. Here, then does not the fictional nature of 'reality' begins to eat away at the "documentary" as arranged by the sociologist/philosopher? And yet, though it is a great work of fiction, one employs Benjamin's "Arcades" as "more real" than Baudelaire's poetry or the poet's own writings re the city and artists and the way of seeing within his own time. I think if one began to treat Benjamin's works as fictions they would began to provide many very amazing projects for "art" and poetry so to speak. Not to mention a way of seeing how a German bourgeois thinker of Benjamin's time might be essaying to reconstruct his own Utopian City within the Paris of another time, just as Joseph Cornell of utopia Drive in new jersey used French posters and journal images as ways to travel to his utopian Frances with their various 'French elements" ";literal" and literarily embodied within the boxes he puts them as "evidences of time and Space travel, objects brought back from "lines of flight of the imagination."

I wonder at times if it is not that one might fear addressing text on its own terms, so it is one reaches for some other text or texts outside the work to "explicate it" in such a manner that one oneself might then write a text on what so and so and her or his system of thought means to the poem or painting in question. That is, one evades or avoids the tools which are given within the text, and via the artist's own writings, further ideas which one may use to examine the text itself.

It is as though one is not reading the artist's thinking seriously at all unless it is presented in terms of the Great So and So, author of Such and Such, In fact, it is as though no only taking the artist's own thinking seriously on their own, but one's also. In the current debate re reviewing there is a similar issue—of fear—fear of accountability—fear of being "wrong" as compared to the great Pooh Bah's dictates etc—to be against the grain, though so much bruited about and written on and endorsed rhetorically, is in actuality never much of a good proposition it would seem when judging by the evidences one is presented with.

And—isn't this fear itself not bound up with the Culture of Fear of the current Surveillance/Security State one lives in? Of what is called abroad the "New McCarthyism" that exists in the USA today? Fear generated by economic insecurity?—And what fear leads to is Conformity—to "speak out" or "be against the grain" isn't so cool anymore perhaps unless being done rhetorically, in a safe place, far from the fields of struggle which are before one's very eyes. (And before one's Virtual eyes so to speak also--) Yet even in supposedly safe places if any actually do exist (ironically I live in a place actually called this—A Safe Place—which of course is situated in an Unsafe Area--) there is always the fear of "being found out" to some degree, outed as some secret monster, if one does not go along with the general line of things.

Duchamp noted that when he began to real work at his art after a certain point it was to prove wrong the then common saying "Bete comme un painter"—"stupid like a painter." The idea being—the painter paints but cannot express in words what it is he does—therefore, not being in words, his thought does not exist and therefore he is stupid.

This is not unlike the saying often found in Offices for the Social Services systems, to be a warning—ironically enough, even to the illiterate—that "If it is not in writing it does not exist."

The fear then in reviewing or in writings re poetry, is that even the artist must be a dummy re their won art—so one turns to the critic-philosopher to find the "answers, clues" and "secrets" of this wordless presentation. Ironically the same situation applies to poetry in that one turns elsewhere to find a system by which to "interpret" the poems, which in a way implies that the poet themselves did not have ideas themselves, and in away, is caught up with an idea that unless in writing as it were, the poet had no ideas at al but composed as though impregnated by the Aether. Which in itself is a very interesting issue is it not—impregnation by the Aether, or, via the Ear by the Holy Spirit—leading to the "speaking in tongues" aspects of Zaum poetry, andother forms Sound Poetry—with the Aether perhaps being the technological Aether as Joe Milutis brilliantly writes of it—"working it the ideas that were in the air at the time"—

Things change if one examines the documentary in terms of fictions and the fictional itself a form of documentary. The Walls of separation between things, peoples, ideas, poems, arts, exist only as much as one in effect ones them to be there. If one doesn't then one works in ways to undermine them and doesn't bother with their Separations which are a form of dividing things up to give one of these precedence or hierarchical "value" over another.

The great Fear really is that, as Duchamp pointed out, people do not want to be stupid like painters so they look to others to speak for them re the art. Duchamp setout to show that painting already is thinking in itself. In a rather bizarre way, he wasn't doing this for other artists and poets, but for the critics, making art even more involving and co-dependent upon criticism, philosophy und so weiter to "explain it." How many volumes do not exist re the occult in Duchamp's works alone!—His thought being turned into Mysticism in order to again in away prove that painters don't think but are "mystics, alchemists." Part of the reason that Rimbaud leaves poetry is that he found out to his mortification that in fact poetry was NOT the "alchemy of words" he had wanted to believe it was. He had thought by this alchemy to reach the Ultimate Realities—which, he realizes, are, sadly, what is there right before his eyes: the need to get work in a France shipping its young people out to the colonies for its own Imperialist efforts following the defeat and humiliation of the Prussian War and the nightmare terrors opened by the Commune and the use of the State Terror to suppress it.

Rimbaud had already written the reality of his own life and the reality of the new Imperialist France in his poetry. His letters after he stops writing poetry present phrases and actual landscapes already found years earlier ii the poems. This proved one of Rimbaud's ideas to actually "work"—that it is that the poetry of the Future must PRECEDE action rather than following it. In Olson this issue comes up again very much, except that Olson wants to be "equal to the Real itself." That is poetry is the action in the Present--not unlike Action Painting-- Rimbaud wants much speedier form that—taking after the Greeks in forms—will write of things before they happen.

It is this time element and its use of speeds in writing that is one of the myriad things that interst me with writing—and the space to find the examples and thinking is in the works of poets.

Perhaps the fear is to have not only writing re poetry but a poetry itself which might be accountable in some manner to anything other than within the confines of the page.

On Sat, Jan 23, 2010 at 5:34 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]> wrote:

Some thoughts on dbc's long posts.

What I am interested in is 1) some sort of way to distinguish different types of relationship to knowledge, experience, source, and etc. in poetry

and 2) to depreciate the reading of Pound through his misreading of Fenollosa (though approved by the literary estate, etc. etc.), Olson / Whitehead, Fulton / whoever. Not as though I haven't taught these. Also, to be a little more dismayed about poetics statements and manifesti, as we are now become our own critics, which is an interesting thing, I think, but important to remember how weird that is, and how weird it was even when the author of The Practice of Outside wrote on Olson and Whitehead.

Some of my most favorite books are offbeat poet's nonfiction (and fiction), but notably, these are generally about writers and writing: Z on Shakes., Duncan on HD, Olson on Melville come to mind first. Some poets' writings for pay, like Ronald Johnson's cookbooks, also occur to me.

I know, because I'm a writer, that working at the edge of one's knowledge can be more exciting than chewing over old shoe leather -- although this may not be a position shared by writers with more of a sense of respect, or "the sacred," or tradition, or whatnot than I have. The feminine my eye (true, but...).

But it seems to me that there is a certain approach to poets' knowledge that gets perpetuated, mostly in academia, and it goes something like this: poet x read an essay by scholar y and "ran with" it, and so everyone who wants to study this poet has to read this essay. Rather than actually considering what the poet is doing and how and why, we end up trying to figure out a bunch of sheer nuttiness that has nothing to do with anything.

Some things bouncing around about WOMPO and I think New Poetry (thanks Amy) have been about militarism and the academy and feminism, etc. And I think looking at Black Mountain that is important too. The GI Bill after World War II changed American higher education dramatically. Black Mountain was founded, and Harvard got Frank O'Hara! But there were not very many female veterans of World War II who didn't already have postsecondary education in nursing or aviation, etc., and the state schools expanded, and those originally for teacher training changed focus, and ...

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

On Sat, Jan 23, 2010 at 5:34 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]>wrote:

> Some thoughts on dbc's long posts.
>
> What I am interested in is 1) some sort of way to distinguish different types of relationship to knowledge, experience, source, and etc. in poetry
>
> and 2) to depreciate the reading of Pound through his misreading of Fenollosa (though approved by the literary estate, etc. etc.), Olson / Whitehead, Fulton / whoever. Not as though I haven't taught these. Also, to be a little more dismayed about poetics statements and manifesti, as we are now become our own critics, which is an interesting thing, I think, but important to remember how weird that is, and how weird it was even when the author of The Practice of Outside wrote on Olson and Whitehead.

> Some of my most favorite books are offbeat poet's nonfiction (and fiction), but notably, these are generally about writers and writing: Z on Shakes., Duncan on HD, Olson on Melville come to mind first. Some poets' writings for pay, like Ronald Johnson's cookbooks, also occur to me.
>
> I know, because I'm a writer, that working at the edge of one's knowledge can be more exciting than chewing over old shoe leather -- although this may not be a position shared by writers with more of a sense of respect, or "the sacred," or tradition, or whatnot than I have. The feminine my eye (true, but...).
>
> But it seems to me that there is a certain approach to poets' knowledge that gets perpetuated, mostly in academia, and it goes something like this: poet x read an essay by scholar y and "ran with" it, and so everyone who wants to study this poet has to read this essay. Rather than actually considering what the poet is doing and how and why, we end up trying to figure out a bunch of sheer nuttiness that has nothing to do with anything.
>
> Some things bouncing around about WOMPO and I think New Poetry (thanks Amy) have been about militarism and the academy and feminism, etc. And I think looking at Black Mountain that is important too. The GI Bill after World War II changed American higher education dramatically. Black Mountain was founded, and Harvard got Frank O'Hara! But there were not very many female veterans of World War II who didn't already have postsecondary education in nursing or aviation, etc., and the state schools expanded, and those originally for teacher training changed focus, and ...
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

↑ Index

293. David Chirot

Fwd: Ebong Aamra Boilmela issue - PAROKIA

Tue 26 Jan 2010

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: nupur sur <[redacted]>

Boimela 2010 issue of EBONG AAMRAA (Table no.177) - PAROKIA

Articles written by :

Dr.Kanan Bihari Goswami , Jogweshar Chowdhury ,Shatinath Jha , Satyabati Giri, Dr. Moon moon Gangopadhyay,Ritankar Mukherjee ,Dibyojyoti mazumdar ,Biswajit Panda,Anjan Chakraborty,Suranjan Pramanik & Suresh Kundu .

Short Stories written by :

*Amit Bhattacharya, Kamalesh Roy,Yashodhara Raychowdhury,Diendranath Battacharya,Anindita goswami,Tanni Haldar,Sweta Chakraborty,Ishaa Paul,Anindita Basu,Suvra Bhattacharya,Sutapa Chakraborty and Susmeli Dutta . *

You are requested to collect the issue .

Best Regards

Debabrata Sur
9830116766

↑ Index

294. Scott Howard

RECONFIGURATIONS, Vol. 3: special features (2 of 4)

Tue 26 Jan 2010

---

* * *

Bryan Walpert,
Preface to "OUTSIDE-IN: NEW ZEALAND POETRY & POETICS"

http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/2009/11/bryan-walpert-forward.html

"I asked the writers here which poets most influenced their work. Several mentioned such iconic NZ figures as James Baxter, Janet Frame, Hone Tuwhare, and Allen Curnow. Others mentioned such NZ poets as Bill Manhire, Vincent O'Sullivan, Michele Leggott, Dinah Hawken, Sam Hunt, and Emily Dobson. A number of international poets were influences on the writers whose work you will read here: Paul Celan in one case, and in another "Rilke, Rumi, and Rimbaud"—first names apparently not required. Smither has taken an interest in Australian poets. But in fact, after New Zealanders (and I say this merely as observation), Americans were the most-cited influence by the poets here, which seems to me symptomatic of the love-hate relationship Kiwis have with the U.S. On the whole, these tend to be U.S. writers who made their names from the 1950s through the 1980s: Sylvia Plath came up more than once. Others included Charles Bukowski, Adrienne Rich, Mary Oliver, Jane Kenyon, Theodore Roethke, Gary Snyder, and Frank O'Hara. One of the poets here, Mercedes Webb-Pullman, did mention the more contemporary poets Mary Szybist and Mark Levine."

http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/2009/11/new-zealand-poetry-poetics.html

* * *

↑ Index

295. Jim Andrews
Re: Can anything...?
Tue 26 Jan 2010

---

perhaps understanding that "a poem is a machine made out of words" or "not only are all poems machines, all texts are machines" is a useful step toward understanding that if they are machines, then they are so in the sense that a piece of software can be a machine. perhaps interesting writing is as software and simple matter-of-fact writing is simply as data that is not software but is interpreted by the software of the mind. whereas interesting writing, such as "hell is other people", which comes to us in the guise of matter-of-fact writing, actually requires something different from what "my name is jim" requires to understand it. both require a mind to parse and interpret them. but "hell is other people" also requires the mind to understand that hell is not other people and to not stop there, at the falsification, but to uncover the humour. it is lively writing. lively writing is not simply data that is meant to surrender to simple interpretation but, instead, has its own circuits of logic that give us the mind within a mind thing, ie, we sense the writer's mind in our mind. the program within a program.

texts are parsed, interpreted, engaged, and, as it were, played, run, or executed in our minds. the texts are deeply encoded with all the knowledge of language and the world that the poet has at his/her disposal. they don't play quite the same in two different minds because semantics is usually dependent on the mind doing the interpretation.

simple-minded writing that rhymes is ludicrous because it seems to us that the form is doing the talking, not the writer. bergson's theory of comedy involved the idea that we feel ok to laugh at somebody when they act like a machine. when they are not thinking for themselves in the manner we associate with sentient beings but are on auto-pilot, as it were.

cool that you're going to law school, Jason. it won't eat your brain. though it may require your attention.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

296. Alan Sondheim
Dance Review (Foofwa, Azure, Jonathan, moi at DNA)
Tue 26 Jan 2010

Dance Review (Foofwa, Azure, Jonathan, moi)

(this seems pretty accurate) from the Dance View Times - http://www.danceviewtimes.com/2010/01/wildman-and-sometimes-poet.html

↑ Index

297. V. Joshua Adams
 TWO READINGS IN CHICAGO THIS WEEK! ***
Tue 26 Jan 2010

***

CHICAGO REVIEW

presents

A BILINGUAL READING

with

CHRISTIAN HAWKEY
ULJANA WOLF & MONIKA RINCK

to celebrate

ISSUE 55:1: SEVEN POETS FROM BERLIN

on

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28th @ 6PM

at the

GOETHE-INSTITUT CHICAGO
(150 N. MICHIGAN AVE)

as well as an

ENCORE READING

on

SATURDAY, JANUARY 29th @ 7PM

at

MYOPIC BOOKS
(1564 N. Milwaukee Ave.)

***

Readings are free and open to the public!

Questions? Email us at [redacted]

***

CHICAGO REVIEW
5801 S. Kenwood Ave.
Chicago, IL 60637

↑ Index

298. Wanda Phipps

Wanda Phipps and John Guth at Starving Artist Cafe

Tue 26 Jan 2010

In case you missed this invite I thought I'd send another hope you can make it

Sunday afternoon, Jan. 31 3pm
at Starving Artist Cafe
249 City Island Ave.
City Island, NY 10464

John Guth and Wanda Phipps perform at a "poetry brunch"

Wanda will read from her works sometimes accompanied by John's guitar, and also sing some settings of her poetry. John will perform some settings of poems he's concocted over the years by Wallace Stevens, William Blake, Lewis Carroll and others.

Info at starvingartistonline.com

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

299. Robin Hamilton

Re: Can anything...?

Wed 27 Jan 2010

> Mark,
>
> One specifies that heroic couplets must not enjamb because our idea of a heroic couplet is determined by its 18th century examples. My point is different, that, within its historical content in English poetry, as opposed > to stanzaic rhyme schemes, Chaucer's iambic pentameter couplets ...

This is a terminological issue. Mark's right here -- as I know to my cost, having been smacked over the wrist once for saying what Murat does above.

The heroic couplet is very specifically the rhymed iambic pentameter couplet as used by the Augustans -- Dryden to Sam Johnson -- with several specifics which distinguish it from earlier and later uses, not just in Chaucer but Marlowe, Jonson, Donne, etc., and also say Keats in Endymion, Hyperion, etc. Chaucer's couplet line almost ends with him, due mostly to the loss of the final unaccented 'e', with the iambic pentameter (mostly, though generally all syllable accent forms) being redefined by Wyatt, on, and reaching a point of balance in Sidney. When the Augustans take it up (from Jonson possibly), they impose their own sets of strictures on particularly the rhymed iambic pentameter couplet.

If you want a bite-it-and-see example, look at Pope's "translations" of Donne's Satires.

Dropping this specific meaning of "heroic couplet" diminishes our range of meaninbgful terms.

Mark is however wrong about the origins of blank verse -- the earliest example in English is found in Surrey's translation of the Aeneid -- and he does *that by simply knocking the rhymes off Gavin Douglas's earlier rhymed couplet version!

Shame that such an act of artistic vandalism should have had such a productive result. Surrey's own blank verse may be shit, but I suppose one has to allow that it lies behind Marlowe, etc.

Robin

↑ Index

300. steve russell
Re: Can anything...?
Wed 27 Jan 2010

---

i'm not always so sure when i'm actually thinking for myself. the self is also in many ways a poem made of words, a selfish machine fearing death and rejection and groping about in a world with this language software it didn't install but can't help but use and manipulate.

the ego often seems to be sawing off the branch on which it is sitting, getting more and more anxious about the coming crash.

by its very definition, the form, in rhyming couplets, is doing the talking. or maybe not so much Doing the talking, but the form seems to determine what it is that can be said. the constraints seem too limiting.

_____
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, January 26, 2010 5:22:51 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

perhaps understanding that "a poem is a machine made out of words" or "not only are all poems machines, all texts are machines" is a useful step toward understanding that if they are machines, then they are so in the sense that a piece of software can be a machine. perhaps interesting writing is as software and simple matter-of-fact writing is simply as data that is not software but is interpreted by the software of the mind. whereas interesting writing, such as "hell is other people", which comes to us in the guise of matter-of-fact writing, actually requires something different from what "my name is jim" requires to understand it. both require a mind to parse and interpret them. but "hell is other people" also requires the mind to understand that hell is not other people and to not stop there, at the falsification, but to uncover the humour. it is lively writing. lively writing is not simply data that is meant to surrender to simple interpretation but, instead, has its own circuits of logic that give us the mind within a mind thing, ie, we sense the writer's mind in our mind. the program within a program.

texts are parsed, interpreted, engaged, and, as it were, played, run, or executed in our minds. the texts are deeply encoded with all the knowledge of language and the world that the poet has at his/her disposal. they don't play quite the same in two different minds because semantics is usually dependent on the mind doing the interpretation.

simple-minded writing that rhymes is ludicrous because it seems to us that the form is doing the talking, not the writer. bergson's theory of comedy involved

the idea that we feel ok to laugh at somebody when they act like a machine. when they are not thinking for themselves in the manner we associate with sentient beings but are on auto-pilot, as it were.

cool that you're going to law school, Jason. it won't eat your brain. though it may require your attention.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

301. Peter ciccariello
New work up at The New Post-literate
Wed 27 Jan 2010

"This week The New Post-Literate is featuring some great new work from Peter Ciccariello" http://www.facebook.com/l/afe03;thenewpostliterate.blogspot.com/

--
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/
http://uncommonvision.blogspot.com/
http://poemsfromprovidence.blogspot.com/
http://uncommon-vision.blogspot.com/
You can find my art and writing updates on Twitter
https://twitter.com/ciccariello

↑ Index

302. Paul Siegell
PHILLY EVENT: PBQ's Slam, Bam, Thank You, Ma'am!
Wed 27 Jan 2010

Painted Bride Quarterly's Slam, Bam, Thank You, Ma'am!

This month’s slam features a special reading from guest poet PAUL SIEGELL, and will be hosted by STEVEN VOLK of Philadelphia Magazine. Don’t miss it!

Thursday, January 28th, 2010
7:30pm
Pen & Pencil Club
1522 Latimer Street, Philadelphia, PA 19102-4402
[redacted]
www.penandpencil.org

PAINTED BRIDE QUARTERLY will host an interactive slam at the Pen and Pencil Club (1522 Latimer St., Phila) on Thurs, Jan. 28, at 7:30 p.m. We'll provide writing implements and paper. You'll have the fun. Think, "Whose Line is it Anyway?" crossed with Henry Rollins. We will start with a ten-minute reading from special guest poet Paul Siegell, then slam the audience's writing during a series of five-minute rounds. Bring $1 bills for the poker round. (Really.) Come prepared for the final round, and bring prose or poetry you write in advance, using the words "refrigerator," "tucked" and "brilliant."

Want more info? Come out and play. We've said too much already. MC'ed by Steven Volk of Philadelphia Magazine. Write: [redacted] see: pbq.drexel.edu.

PAUL SIEGELL is grateful for toilet paper, his fiancee, his job at The Inquirer, and for being able to say he is the author of 2008's Poemergency Room, 2009's jambandbootleg, and forthcoming in 2010, wild life rifle fire. (http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/)

STEVEN VOLK writes for Philadelphia magazine and isn't afraid to admit he lets the computer check his spelling before he turns in anything.

Painted Bride Quarterly is one of the country's longest running literary magazines, established in Philadelphia in 1973. As a community-based, independent, non-profit literary magazine published quarterly online and annually in print, PBQ's main agenda is to maintain and grow a venue for the highest quality literature that best represents the individual voice.

↑ Index

303. amy king
So this guy walks into a book...
Wed 27 Jan 2010

Louis Zukofsky, Paul Violi, Borges, Robert Hayden, Graham Robb, Occam, Rimbaud, Olson, Walter Benjamin, Robert Duncan ...

"As I tried to analyze my discomfort with Kingâ€™s language..."

http://coldfrontmag.com/reviews/slaves-to-do-these-things

_____

BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

304. Ruth Lepson
Re: Can anything...?
Wed 27 Jan 2010

---

exactly! well put.

On 1127110 10:51 AM, "steve russell" <[redacted]> wrote:

> i'm not always so sure when i'm actually thinking for myself.
> the self is also in many ways a poem made of words, a selfish machine fearing > death and rejection and groping about in a world with this language software > it didn't install but can't help but use and manipulate.
>
> the ego often seems to be sawing off the branch on which it is sitting,
> getting more and more anxious about the coming crash.
>
> by its very definition, the form, in rhyming couplets, is doing the talking.
> or maybe not so much Doing the talking, but the form seems to determine what > it is that can be said. the constraints seem too limiting.
>
> _____
> From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Tue, January 26, 2010 5:22:51 PM
> Subject: Re: Can anything...?
>
> perhaps understanding that "a poem is a machine made out of words" or "not > only are all poems machines, all texts are machines" is a useful step toward > understanding that if they are machines, then they are so in the sense that a > piece of software can be a machine. perhaps interesting writing is as software > and simple matter-of-fact writing is simply as data that is not software but > is interpreted by the software of the mind. whereas interesting writing, such > as "hell is other people", which comes to us in the guise of matter-of-fact > writing, actually requires something different from what "my name is jim" > requires to understand it. both require a mind to parse and interpret them.
> but "hell is other people" also requires the mind to understand that hell is > not other people and to not stop there, at the falsification, but to uncover > the humour. it is lively writing. lively writing is not simply data that is > meant to surrender to simple interpretation > but, instead, has its own circuits of logic that give us the mind within a > mind thing, ie, we sense the writer's mind in our mind. the program within a > program.
>
> texts are parsed, interpreted, engaged, and, as it were, played, run, or > executed in our minds. the texts are deeply encoded with all the knowledge of > language and the world that the poet has at his/her disposal. they don't play > quite the same in two different minds because semantics is usually dependent on the mind doing the interpretation.

>
> simple-minded writing that rhymes is ludicrous because it seems to us that the form is doing the talking, not the writer. bergson's theory of comedy involved the idea that we feel ok to laugh at somebody when they act like a machine. when they are not thinking for themselves in the manner we associate with sentient beings but are on auto-pilot, as it were.
>
> cool that you're going to law school, Jason. it won't eat your brain. though it may require your attention.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

305. Daniel Godston
Painted Ghost Rhythm at the Velvet Lounge
Wed 27 Jan 2010

Painted Ghost Rhythm
at the Velvet Lounge

Wednesday, January 27 (8:30 p.m.)

Painted Ghost Rhythm
Dan Godston -- trumpet, poetry
Paul Hartsaw -- tenor saxophone
Dushun Mosley -- percussion
Alex Wing -- upright bass

We will be performing original compositions and music by Mingus, Kirk, Byard, Mengelberg, Braxton, Dyani, and Dolphy. There is a $10 admission. For more info please call [redacted].

The Velvet Lounge
67 East Cermak Road
Chicago, IL 60616
[redacted]
http://www.velvetlounge.net

↑ Index

306. K. Silem Mohammad

Position at new Center for Emerging Media and Digital Arts at Southern Oregon University

Wed 27 Jan 2010

---

*Assistant/Associate Professor and Director -- emerging media and digital arts *

The College of Arts and Sciences at Southern Oregon University is seeking to fill a unique position with a visionary individual who will serve as the director for a new center for emerging and new media, a growing interdisciplinary center, teaching across the College of Arts and Science and drawing from courses in the visual arts, communications, computer science, the social sciences and sciences, as well as music, film, and other liberal arts disciplines. The position requires teaching courses in any of the relevant disciplines, and demonstration of commitment to collaboration, innovation, teaching excellence, and coherent, curricular and theoretical research in support of this developing center.

We are seeking a dynamic leader with a broad and evolving vision, who is in step with what students need and want. The successful candidate should be an experienced educator and scholar, but may be trained in any number of a broad range of disciplines. S/he should possess an interdisciplinary interest in creative technologies, interactive media and digital art, and the theoretical and practical aspects of their interrelation.

The candidate should demonstrate ability to teach students to integrate advanced technological tools with cultural awareness, creativity, communication, and a sense of history and place. Knowledge and application of the principles of design and integration across traditional and emerging media (New media, multimedia design, digital video, digital photography, digital audio, digital music, web design, interactive design) is preferred. In addition, computer animation, digital cinema, film, visual theory, digital poetry, mobile technology, digital representation are also desirable.

Faculty assignment will include administration of the Center and a course load of up to two classes a quarter, teaching theoretical and technical aspects of design, and guiding students in the creation of projects whose scope and audience extend beyond the campus, as well as development of courses in areas of specialization. Maintenance of creative/scholarly activities, active advising/mentoring of students, and other departmental service responsibilities are required.

Qualifications: PhD, MFA (or terminal degree in an appropriate area) required and a minimum of three to five years of professional experience in an area related to interactive media / digital arts and sciences. The successful candidate will have a promising record of distinguished scholarship, exhibition, research and/or professional project development appropriate to be appointed at the assistant or associate professor level. College-level teaching experience with a focus on emerging media and design is required, as is a demonstrated expertise and knowledge of current and emerging technologies in interactive media.

To apply please visit: http://www.sou.edu/hrs and provide a letter, CV, transcripts, a digital portfolio of your work posted online or on DVD, and names and contacts for three references. Contact for questions: Professor Miles Inada [redacted] or Dennis Dunleavy [redacted]. For full consideration, materials should be submitted by March 1, 2010. SOU is an equal access AA/EOE committed to achieving a diverse work force and, as such, is an inclusive campus community dedicated to student success, intellectual growth, and responsible global citizenship.

--

K. Silem Mohammad
http://lime-tree.blogspot.com

↑ Index

307. Mark Weiss
Re: Can anything...?
Wed 27 Jan 2010

Hi Robin.

More light to shed? I was thinking (and backchanneling with Murat) about the larger background. The lacunae in my knowledge will be immediately apparent. Care to fill some of these holes?

"Got me thinking. Iambic pentameter couplets did become the method of choice, tho there were contenders. In English pre-conquest narrative poems were written in unrhymed alliterative verse, which persisted even into Chaucer's time--Langland was an almost exact contemporary--but also in intricate continental stanza patterns, as in the work of the Pearl Poet. Narratives written in rhymed couplets in tetrameter predate Chaucer by at least a generation--I'm thinking of Sir Orfeo, a personal favorite. Marie de France was writing in rhymed tetrameter couplets in French at the English court at least a hundred years before Chaucer, and Chaucer knew her lais by heart, apparently. On the continent narrative was often written in elaborate stanza patterns--Wolfram von Eschenbach's Parsifal. I don't remember what form Chretien de Troyes used--would be good to know--big influence on Chaucer. Boccaccio wrote his Filostrato, the source of Chaucer's Troilus, in stanzas.

None of these were as flexible as Chaucer's rhymed pentameter. The only competitor in that regard must be Dante's terza rima, but it didn't catch on, even in Italy, as far as I know."

Best,

Mark

At 12:43 AM 1/27/2010, you wrote:
>>Mark,
>>
>>One specifies that heroic couplets must not enjamb because our idea of a >>heroic couplet is determined by its 18th century examples. My point is >>different, that, within its historical content in English poetry, as opposed >>to stanzaic rhyme schemes, Chaucer's iambic pentameter couplets ...
>
>This is a terminological issue. Mark's right here -- as I know to >my cost, having been smacked over the wrist once for saying what >Murat does above.
>
>The heroic couplet is very specifically the rhymed iambic pentameter >couplet as used by the Augustans -- Dryden to Sam Johnson -- with >several specifics which distinguish it from earlier and later uses, >not just in Chaucer but Marlowe, Jonson, Donne, etc., and also say >Keats in Endymion, Hyperion, etc. Chaucer's couplet line almost >ends with him, due mostly to the loss of the final unaccented 'e', >with the iambic pentameter (mostly, though generally all syllable >accent forms) being redefined by Wyatt, on, and reaching a point of >balance in Sidney. When the Augustans take it up (from Jonson >possibly), they impose their own sets of strictures on particularly >the rhymed iambic pentameter couplet.
>
>If you want a bite-it-and-see example, look at Pope's "translations" >of Donne's Satires.
>
>Dropping this specific meaning of "heroic couplet" diminishes our >range of meaninbgful terms.
>
>Mark is however wrong about the origins of blank verse -- the >earliest example in English is found in Surrey's translation of the >Aeneid -- and he does *that by simply knocking the rhymes off Gavin

>Douglas's earlier rhymed couplet version!
>
>Shame that such an act of artistic vandalism should have had such a >productive result. Surrey's own blank verse may be shit, but I >suppose one has to allow that it lies behind Marlowe, etc.
>
>Robin

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

308. Mark Weiss
query
Wed 27 Jan 2010

Anybody able to b/c me Eric Lorberer's email/telephone info?

Thanks,

Mark

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

309. Joel Weishaus
Poetica [blog]
Wed 27 Jan 2010

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

My new blog, "Poetica: Critiques & Reviews of Poetry & Poetics," features a review of Frances Presley's recent book of poems, "Lines of Sight." (Shearsman Books. Exeter UK, 2009.) The blog also contains links to my past reviews and critiques.

I began this blog because newspapers, where I've published reviews over the years, are allowing less space for serious book reviews. As for journals, where I've also published over the years, my work now usually falls in-between their niches, or is too long for the space they assign to reviews. Thus, I've decided to periodically publish a review, or critique a poem, in the format of a blog.

Even though I do respect, and admire, the self-publication of poetry, because I have a limited amount of time, and there are so many books being published, I can only consider those sent to me by publishers; e.g., books that have gone through the process of outside readers and independent editorial decisions.

Poetica Blog: http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/Poetica/blog.htm

Joel Weishaus
Homepage: http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282
On-Line Archive:
www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/index.htm

↑ Index

310. Jennifer Karmin

Donations for Woodland Pattern Book Center -- sponsor a poet!

Wed 27 Jan 2010

---

hi poetics friends....please think about making a donation to this AMAZING book store.Â i'll be reading as part of the poetry marathon on saturday and am looking for sponsors.Â details below.

happy new year,
jennifer karmin

Woodland Pattern Book Center in Milwaukee, Wisconsin presents more than 40 events each year, including readings, music concerts, films and art exhibits. The bookstore includes over 27,000 titles, and is considered by many to be the countryâ€™s best bookstore for small press poetry.

Every year, on the last Saturday of January, over 125 poets, writers, and performers show their support for Woodland Pattern by participating in its Annual Poetry Marathon & Benefit.Â All proceeds raised from this event will help Woodland Pattern continue its literary programming.

Woodland Pattern is a nonprofit organization, all donations are fully tax-deductible.Â Individuals can now sponsor readers online through the new â€œpledge a readerâ€ giving form.Â Pledges can be made for any amount.

http://www.woodlandpattern.org/marathon_2010.shtml

WOODLAND PATTERN BOOK CENTER
16TH ANNUAL POETRY MARATHON & BENEFIT
SATURDAY, JANUARY 30TH, 2010
10:00 AM TO 1:00 AM

720 E. Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53212
http://www.woodlandpattern.org

↑ Index

311. Jim Andrews
Re: Can anything...?
Wed 27 Jan 2010

> i'm not always so sure when i'm actually thinking for myself.

well said. anyone who doesn't consider this probably isn't.

> the self is also in many ways a poem made of words, a selfish machine fearing death and rejection and groping about in a world with this language software it didn't install but can't help but use and manipulate.

just so.

> the ego often seems to be sawing off the branch on which it is sitting, getting more and more anxious about the coming crash.
>
> by its very definition, the form, in rhyming couplets, is doing the talking. or maybe not so much Doing the talking, but the form seems to determine what it is that can be said. the constraints seem too limiting.

yes, well, that is an understandable perspective. perhaps rhyming couplets are to poetry what the straight jacket is to fashion. but then there are the houdinis of rhyming couplets. or you could think of them as being unto a new pair of jeans, to loosen up a bit. at first they're stiff and you almost walk like a cardboard cutout and worry about your manhood. but they do eventually loosen up and perhaps the fit is good. it takes a while, though. and it takes longer with rhyming couplets.

not that it's my thing, but i think poets who experiment with different constraints may come to see the er logic in bondage. perhaps bondage is to sexuality what constraint is to poetry. it gives it a particular form, different from the usual. it can have a certain drama to it. it limits possibilities and opens up some other ones. i wouldn't think that even afficionados of bondage would take it as a steady diet, though. and so with rhyming couplets.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

312. Paul Nelson
Re: Relevance of Olson/Black Mountain
Wed 27 Jan 2010

From: Catherine Daly <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sat, January 23, 2010 5:34:22 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

Some thoughts on dbc's long posts...

and how weird it was even when the author of The Practice of Outside wrote on Olson and Whitehead.

I know, because I'm a writer, that working at the edge of one's knowledge can be more exciting than chewing over old shoe leather -- ---------- I think Blaser's essay on Olson/Whitehead is quite useful in understanding what Olson got from Whitehead and how we may use it ourselves and move forward into new realms previously unoccupied or even charted.

Like Fred Wah does, as related in http://www.wlupress.wlu.ca/press/Catalog/cabri.shtml

Far from chewing old shoe leather, I think this shows that Canadians generally have a leg up on innovation over their South-of-the-Border counterparts and have done much more with poetics that started here, but were not fully understood or acted upon.

Paul

↑ Index

313. Gerald Schwartz
i. m. Howard Zinn
Thu 28 Jan 2010

Maybe it was in some movie maybe it was in a dream but I seem to remember Howard Zinn as tour guide on a double-decker bus crusing our country our world speaking on how "Columbus was met by Arawah
men and women, naked, tawny, full of wonder...
just look, will you, at what happened..."
"Down this way we have," he'd tell us, "To the Empire and its people... To Teddy Roosevelt
welcoming any war any war at all anywhere"
Then we'd continue through "CarterReaganBush
that consensus protecting corporate interests
in any place in any where at all time any old right-wing tyranny abroad..." And just when the prospect for our times of turmoil
also seemed an insurmountable struggle... Howard Zinn, microphone in hand beamed through the tour bus's P.A. "There's still inspiration, I'm still inspired!"

Gerald S.

↑ Index

314. steve russell
Re: Can anything...?
Thu 28 Jan 2010

---

if a rhyming couplet didn't exist, would it be necessary to invent one?

_____
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, January 27, 2010 10:51:23 AM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

i'm not always so sure when i'm actually thinking for myself. the self is also in many ways a poem made of words, a selfish machine fearing death and rejection and groping about in a world with this language software it didn't install but can't help but use and manipulate.

the ego often seems to be sawing off the branch on which it is sitting, getting more and more anxious about the coming crash.

by its very definition, the form, in rhyming couplets, is doing the talking. or maybe not so much Doing the talking, but the form seems to determine what it is that can be said. the constraints seem too limiting.

_____
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, January 26, 2010 5:22:51 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

perhaps understanding that "a poem is a machine made out of words" or "not only are all poems machines, all texts are machines" is a useful step toward understanding that if they are machines, then they are so in the sense that a piece of software can be a machine. perhaps interesting writing is as software and simple matter-of-fact writing is simply as data that is not software but is interpreted by the software of the mind. whereas interesting writing, such as "hell is other people", which comes to us in the guise of matter-of-fact writing, actually requires something different from what "my name is jim" requires to understand it. both require a mind to parse and interpret them. but "hell is other people" also requires the mind to understand that hell is not other people and to not stop there, at the falsification, but to uncover the humour. it is lively writing. lively writing is not simply data that is meant to surrender to simple interpretation but, instead, has its own circuits of logic that give us the mind within a mind thing, ie, we sense the writer's mind in our mind. the program within a program.

texts are parsed, interpreted, engaged, and, as it were, played, run, or executed in our minds. the texts are deeply encoded with all the knowledge of language and the world that the poet has at his/her disposal. they don't play quite the same in two different minds because semantics is usually dependent on the mind doing the interpretation.

simple-minded writing that rhymes is ludicrous because it seems to us that the form is doing the talking, not the writer. bergson's theory of comedy involved the idea that we feel ok to laugh at somebody when they act like a machine. when they are not thinking for themselves in the manner we associate with sentient beings but are on auto-pilot, as it were.

cool that you're going to law school, Jason. it won't eat your brain. though it may require your attention.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

315. Cara Benson
Re: i. m. Howard Zinn
Thu 28 Jan 2010

I'm so teary since last night. Thanks for this Gerald.

_____
http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

_____
From: Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thu, January 28, 2010 7:40:56 AM
Subject: i. m. Howard Zinn

Maybe it was in some movie maybe it was in a dream but I seem to remember Howard Zinn as tour guide on a double-decker bus crusing our country our world speaking
on how "Columbus was met by Arawah

men and women, naked, tawny, full of wonder...
just look, will you, at what happened..."
"Down this way we have," he'd tell us, "To the Empire and its people... To Teddy Roosevelt
welcoming any war any war at all anywhere"
Then we'd continue through "CarterReaganBush
that consensus protecting corporate interests
in any place in any where at all time any old right-wing tyranny abroad..." And just when the prospect for our times of turmoil
also seemed an insurmountable struggle... Howard Zinn, microphone in hand beamed through
the tour bus's P.A. "There's still inspiration, I'm still inspired!"

Gerald S.

↑ Index

316. susan maurer

Re: Donations for Woodland Pattern Book Center -- sponsor a poet!

Thu 28 Jan 2010

Glad to know of this. I'll be sending them some of the broadsides of my work and that of Mark Sonnenfeld. His little press is a follower of the mail-out artist Ray Johnson and it distributed by mail all aound the world. Don't have the address handy but it is in POETS MARKET. Susan Maurer

> Date: Wed, 27 Jan 2010 15:11:17 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Donations for Woodland Pattern Book Center -- sponsor a poet!
> To: [redacted]
>
> hi poetics friends....please think about making a donation to this AMAZING book store. i'll be reading as part of the poetry marathon on saturday and am looking for sponsors. details below.
>
> happy new year,
> jennifer karmin
>
> Woodland Pattern Book Center in Milwaukee, Wisconsin presents more than 40 events each year, including readings, music concerts, films and art exhibits. The bookstore includes over 27,000 titles, and is considered by many to be the country's best bookstore for small press poetry.
>
> Every year, on the last Saturday of January, over 125 poets, writers, and performers > show their support for Woodland Pattern by participating in its Annual Poetry Marathon & Benefit. All proceeds raised from this event will help Woodland Pattern continue its literary programming.

>
> Woodland Pattern is a nonprofit organization, all donations are fully tax-deductible. Individuals can now sponsor readers online through the new "pledge a reader" giving form. Pledges can be made for any amount.
>
> http://www.woodlandpattern.org/marathon_2010.shtml
>
> WOODLAND PATTERN BOOK CENTER
> 16TH ANNUAL POETRY MARATHON & BENEFIT
> SATURDAY, JANUARY 30TH, 2010
> 10:00 AM TO 1:00 AM
>
> 720 E. Locust Street
> Milwaukee, WI 53212
> http://www.woodlandpattern.org

_____ Hotmail:
Trusted email with Microsoft's powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/196390706/direct/01/

↑ Index

317. Brian Stefans

Fw: Suicide in an Airplane (1919) -- resend

Thu 28 Jan 2010

Resending... links for zip files didn't work.

----- Original Message -----
From: Brian Stefans
To: Buffalo Poetics
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 8:10 AM
Subject: Suicide in an Airplane (1919)

My new piece:

http://www.arras.net/scriptor/suicide_in_an_airplane_1919/

However, I think it's best viewed as a standalone app. Funny things are happening to it when viewed in a browser.

http://www.arras.net/scriptor/suicide_in_an_airplane_1919/SIAA_for_PC.zip

http://www.arras.net/scriptor/suicide_in_an_airplane_1919/SIAA_for_Mac.zip

There's sound, a piano piece by Leo Ornstein (hence, the title). I don't have the rights to this recording, unfortunately, but we'll see.

Brian

↑ Index

318. Charlie Rossiter
Sam Hamill reading/workshop, in Oak Park, Sat. Apr 17
Thu 28 Jan 2010

Tickets are expected to go quickly, especially for the workshop.

TICKETS AVAILABLE for Poet/Activist SAM HAMILL workshop & reading on BrownPaperTickets.com
as of MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, AT 1 PM

The events will happen at Unity Temple April 17, 2010

Poet/Activist Sam Hamill at Unity Temple in Oak Park, IL
Saturday, April 17 for Workshop (2-4 pm) and Reading (8 pm)

“An Evening of Poetry with Sam Hamill”-- Poet, Publisher, Translator, Founder of Poets Against War, at the 3rd Saturday Coffeehouse, April 17. Doors open 7:30; program begins at 8 ($9).

For this very Special 3rd Saturday Coffeehouse—there will be no open mic in April

At 2 – 4 p.m. that same day we are proud to present “The Practice of Poetry: an intimate discussion/workshop with Sam Hamill,” an intimate conversation/workshop ($20--limited enrollment).

This is a unique opportunity to spend time with one of the major poets and cultural forces of our time. Sam Hamill is the author of more than forty books, including fifteen volumes of original poetry (most recently Measured by Stone and Almost Paradise: New & Selected Poems & Translations); four collections of literary essays, including A Poet’s Work and Avocations: On Poetry & Poets; and some of the most distinguished translations of ancient Chinese and Japanese classics of the last half-century. He co-founded, and for thirty-two years was editor, at Copper Canyon Press. He taught in prisons for fourteen years and has worked extensively with battered women and children.

Mr. Hamill was invited to the White House by Laura Bush in 2003 for an evening celebrating American poetry on the eve of the invasion of Iraq, the president having just outlined his plans for “shock and awe.” Hamill declined the invitation and extended his own invitation to fellow poets to “speak for the conscience of our country.” The result was Poets Against War, www.poetsagainstwar.net and the compilation of over 20,000 poems in opposition to war. Both the afternoon and evening events will be held at Unity Temple, 875 W. Lake St. in downtown Oak Park.

Tickets are available from Brown Paper Tickets online starting Monday, 2/1/20 at 1 pm.
It is advisable to acquire tickets early as SEATING IS LIMITED.

For the reading: http://www.brownpapertickets.com/event/95277
For the afternoon discussion/workshop:
http://www.brownpapertickets.com/event/95273

Sorry, we cannot take reservations, make refunds or hold tickets for either event. For more information: [redacted]. This event is funded in part by Poets & Writers, Inc. and the Social Mission Committee of the Unity Temple Unitarian Universalist Congregation.

↑ Index

319. Mark Weiss
Re: Can anything...?
Thu 28 Jan 2010

There's bondage and bondage. For a lot of the leather crowd it is a steady diet--the only way they can get off. Same may be said for rhyme--most of us probably do it sometimes, but for some it's the only way they can get off. Which is no reflection, in either arm of this odd analogy, on the resultant quality.

Best,

Mark

> not that it's my thing, but i think poets who experiment with different constraints may come to see the er logic in bondage. perhaps bondage is to sexuality what constraint is to poetry. it gives it a particular form, different from the usual. it can have a certain drama to it. it limits possibilities and opens up some other ones. i wouldn't think that even afficionados of bondage would take it as a steady diet, though. and so with rhyming couplets.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

320. Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Re: Can anything...?
Thu 28 Jan 2010

Mark,

I think you can make a case for the ballad form (iambic tetrameter, abcb quatrains) as the most durable of rivals in English to rhymed pentameter couplets.

Hugh

_____
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, January 27, 2010 9:56:46 AM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

Hi Robin.

More light to shed? I was thinking (and backchanneling with Murat) about the larger background. The lacunae in my knowledge will be immediately apparent. Care to fill some of these holes?

"Got me thinking. Iambic pentameter couplets did become the method of choice, tho there were contenders. In English pre-conquest narrative poems were written in unrhymed alliterative verse, which persisted even into Chaucer's time--Langland was an almost exact contemporary--but also in intricate continental stanza patterns, as in the work of the Pearl Poet. Narratives written in rhymed couplets in tetrameter predate Chaucer by at least a generation--I'm thinking of Sir Orfeo, a personal favorite. Marie de France was writing in rhymed tetrameter couplets in French at the English court at least a hundred years before Chaucer, and Chaucer knew her lais by heart, apparently. On the continent narrative was often written in elaborate stanza patterns--Wolfram von Eschenbach's Parsifal. I don't remember what form Chretien de Troyes used--would be good to know--big influence on Chaucer. Boccaccio wrote his Filostrato, the source of Chaucer's Troilus, in stanzas.

None of these were as flexible as Chaucer's rhymed pentameter. The only competitor in that regard must be Dante's terza rima, but it didn't catch on, even in Italy, as far as I know."

Best,

Mark

At 12:43 AM 1/27/2010, you wrote:
>> Mark,
>>
>> One specifies that heroic couplets must not enjamb because our idea of a >> heroic couplet is determined by its 18th century examples. My point is >> different, that, within its historical content in English poetry, as opposed >> to stanzaic rhyme schemes, Chaucer's iambic pentameter couplets ...
>
> This is a terminological issue. Mark's right here -- as I know to my cost, having been smacked over the wrist once for saying what Murat does above.
>
> The heroic couplet is very specifically the rhymed iambic pentameter couplet as used by the Augustans -- Dryden to Sam Johnson -- with several specifics which distinguish it from earlier and later uses, not just in Chaucer but Marlowe, Jonson, Donne, etc., and also say Keats in Endymion, Hyperion, etc. Chaucer's couplet line almost ends with him, due mostly to the loss of the final unaccented 'e', with the iambic pentameter (mostly, though generally all syllable accent forms) being redefined by Wyatt, on, and reaching a point of balance in Sidney. When the Augustans take it up (from Jonson possibly), they impose their own sets of strictures on particularly the rhymed iambic pentameter couplet.
>
> If you want a bite-it-and-see example, look at Pope's "translations" of Donne's Satires.
>
> Dropping this specific meaning of "heroic couplet" diminishes our range of meaninbgful terms.
>
> Mark is however wrong about the origins of blank verse -- the earliest example in English is found in Surrey's translation of the Aeneid -- and he does *that by simply knocking the rhymes off Gavin Douglas's earlier rhymed couplet version!
>
> Shame that such an act of artistic vandalism should have had such a productive result. Surrey's own blank verse may be shit, but I suppose one has to allow that it lies behind Marlowe, etc.

>
> Robin

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press). http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

321. steve russell
Re: Can anything...?
Thu 28 Jan 2010

---

interesting:

bondage & rhyming couplets work well together.

they seem to enjoy their constraints.
very interesting.

hmmm.

_____
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, January 27, 2010 6:17:42 PM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

> i'm not always so sure when i'm actually thinking for myself.

well said. anyone who doesn't consider this probably isn't.

> the self is also in many ways a poem made of words, a selfish machine fearing death and rejection and groping about in a world with this language software it didn't install but can't help but use and manipulate.

just so.

> the ego often seems to be sawing off the branch on which it is sitting, getting more and more anxious about the coming crash.
>
> by its very definition, the form, in rhyming couplets, is doing the talking. or maybe not so much Doing the talking, but the form seems to determine what it is that can be said. the constraints seem too limiting.

yes, well, that is an understandable perspective. perhaps rhyming couplets are to poetry what the straight jacket is to fashion. but then there are the houdinis of rhyming couplets. or you could think of them as being unto a new pair of jeans, to loosen up a bit. at first they're stiff and you almost walk like a cardboard cutout and worry about your manhood. but they do eventually loosen up and perhaps the fit is good. it takes a while, though. and it takes longer with rhyming couplets.

not that it's my thing, but i think poets who experiment with different constraints may come to see the er logic in bondage. perhaps bondage is to sexuality what constraint is to poetry. it gives it a particular form, different from the usual. it can have a certain drama to it. it limits possibilities and opens up some other ones. i wouldn't think that even afficionados of bondage would take it as a steady diet, though. and so with rhyming couplets.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

322. amy king
Tomorrow Night - BARD ROVING READING SERIES - King and Benson
Thu 28 Jan 2010

BARD ROVING READING SERIES

AMY KING & CARA BENSON
Friday, J

BARD ROVING READING SERIES

AMY KING & CARA BENSON
Friday, January 29th @ 6 pm
Bard Hall* at Bard College
Annandale-on-Hudson NY

*Bard Hall is located near the corner of North Ravine Road and Annandale Road. It is a small, grey, church-like structureâ€“set back from Annandale Roadâ€“and should not be confused with the stone chapel located to its left.

Click here for more directions -- http://www.bard.edu/campus/maps/maptour/

~~~~~~

AMY KING

Amy King is the author of Iâ€™m the Man Who Loves You, Antidotes for an Alibi, Slaves to Do these Things (BlazeVox), and I Want to Make You Safe (forthcoming from Litmus Press). She teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College, and co-curates The Stain of Poetry reading series in Brooklyn, NY. Please visit http://amyking.org for more.

~~~~~~

CARA BENSON

Cara Benson is editor of the interdisciplinary book Predictions for ChainLinks. Her newest titles include the book (made), which is forthcoming from BookThug, and Protean Parade (Black Radish Books 2010). Her writing has been published in Belladonna Elders Series #7, Imaginary Syllabi, Spell/ing Bound, as well as in Quantum Chaos and Poems: A Manifest(o)ation, which won the 2008 bpNichol Prize. She edits Sous Rature, and teaches poetry in a New York State prison.

http://bardrovingreadingseries.blogspot.com/2010/01/amy-king-cara-benson.html

_____

BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

323. Robin Hamilton
Re: Can anything...?
Thu 28 Jan 2010

Hi, Mark

> Hi Robin.
>
> More light to shed? I was thinking (and backchanneling with Murat) about the larger background. The lacunae in my knowledge will be immediately apparent. Care to fill some of these holes?

Dunno about filling in, but I'll add some comments to what you said to Murat below. We really need the Birk in on this, but I don't think he does Buffpo.

> "Got me thinking. Iambic pentameter couplets did become the method of choice, tho there were contenders. In English pre-conquest narrative poems were written in unrhymed alliterative verse, which persisted even into Chaucer's time--Langland was an almost exact contemporary--but also in intricate continental stanza patterns, as in the work of the Pearl Poet.

This shows the late 14thC has a three-way split -- Chaucer writing in London in syllable-accent metre, Langland arrived from the East Midlands and writing in London for a (different?) London audience, in 'loose' alliterative stress metre (from Aelfric rather than Beowulf? Or is this just my own daft idea?), and the Gawain Poet writing in the West Midlands for a local courtly audience in 'strict' alliterative stress metre.

Historically, the Gawain Poet dead ends -- only one extant MS (there are something like 60+ for both Piers Plowman, counting all four [if you accept the Z-text as independent] versions, and the Canterbury Tales]. Except in Scotland, where the alliterative body interspersed by the bob-and-wheel stanza persists till oh I suppose the 15thC. (I can't be more specific in terms of texts, as none ever caught my interest, but I think there are at least ten to fifteen.) But stress-alliterative metre generally lasted *much longer in Scotland than in England as a viable form -- think Dunbar's "Tretis of the Twa Meriit Wemen and the Wedo" in the early fifteenth century.

> Narratives written in rhymed couplets in tetrameter predate Chaucer by at least a generation--I'm thinking of Sir Orfeo, a personal favorite.

The earliest would be The Owl and the Nightingale, late 12th/early 13thC, in eight syllable couplets:

(From WIKI, where I just went to check the date:

"The poem is rhymed octosyllabic couplets (generally iambic tetrameter, with most verses ending with a ninth unstressed syllable). This form shows the influence of Old French poetry and precociously anticipates the graces of Chaucer.")

This makes sense, as you'd think the older four-beat stress line would translate more easily into an octosyllabic rather than a pentameter (couplet) line.

But the four-beat stress line vs. the five beat syllable-accent line was still a problem as late as Wyatt. One way of looking at his first version of the sonnet "Farewell, Love, and all thy laws forever," "Now farewell love and thy laws forever" in Devonshire, is to see the earlier text as a mix of four-stress lines and pentameter lines, with all the four-stress lines being revised out (with the exception of "Hath taught me to set / in trifles no store" which only gets postumously revised by Grimald or whoever prints the poem in Tottel's Miscellany) by the time it's nicely written down in Egerton.

> Marie de France was writing in rhymed tetrameter couplets in French at the English court at least a hundred years before Chaucer, and Chaucer knew her lais by heart, apparently. On the continent narrative was often written in elaborate stanza patterns--Wolfram von Eschenbach's Parsifal. I don't remember what form Chretien de Troyes used--would be good to know--big influence on Chaucer. Boccaccio wrote his Filostrato, the source of Chaucer's Troilus, in stanzas.
>
> None of these were as flexible as Chaucer's rhymed pentameter. The only competitor in that regard must be Dante's terza rima, but it didn't catch on, even in Italy, as far as I know."

Dunno about Italy, but terza rima is virtually impossible to write successfully in English -- Wyatt succeeded in his Psalms translations and the Satires, but Gascoigne only manages it by (so to speak) cheating. (I loathe Shelley so much that I'm going to pretend his Triumphi translations didn't exist.) Not enough rhymes in English, so terza rima can function as an open ended (continuous)/narrative form (in Dante, as you point out) in Italian but not in English, where we're down to either the pentameter line, rhymed or unrhymed, OR the four-beat alliterative stress line.

When it comes to the latter 'today', there's the unsuccessful example of Auden in _The Age of Anxiety_, and its more recent successful use by Francis Berry in "Morant Bay" and _Ghosts of Greenland_. Oh and of course Pound in Canto 1.

(Leaving aside translation, usually Beowulf, of course. Edwin Morgan to Seamus Heaney ...)

That ignores stanzaic forms, where obviously the ballad would figure largely. And the various spins of taking a chopped sonnet and using it as the stanza form of a longer text -- Greville does this in the various Treatises, using the last quatrain + couplet of the sonnet as his basic stanza, and Keats sort-of similarly in the Odes.

Enough. Was trying to find where I'd put the file of an attempt to construct a variorum text of "The Black Procession" (on the principle that cant texts deserve to be treated with the same scholarly responsibility as canonical texts) when I noticed this, and felt obliged to respond. <g>

Robin

↑ Index

324. steve dalachinsky

Re: Interview with M. Magnus up at Towson Arts Collective

Thu 28 Jan 2010

---

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ph8GWcj6tMg

3 minutes of dalachinsky
On Tue, 3 Nov 2009 02:28:12 +0800 Christophe Casamassima <[redacted]> writes:
> http://www.towsonartscollective.org/artist-of-the-month/
>
> Please visit us to read the first in a series of in-depth > interviews/conversations. M. Magnus spins this one into gear with > his book Verb Sap, available through Narrow House Recordings / Books > (http://narrow-house.blogspot.com/2009/02/m-magnus-verb-sap.html)
> (http://www.angelfire.com/poetry/thepixelplus/nhindex.html).

>
> Cheers,
>
> Christophe Casamassima
>
> --
> Powered By Outblaze
>
>
>

↑ Index

325. Mark Weiss
Re: Can anything...?
Thu 28 Jan 2010

I think Murat was talking about flexibility for verse narrative. There have certainly been some pretty long narrative ballads--The Ancient Mariner, for one. To put words in his mouth, the form because of its greater structural demands constrains the manner in which the story is told more than couplets or blank verse. Or so imaginary Murat thinks.

Best,

Mark

At 03:47 PM 1/28/2010, you wrote:
>Mark,
>
>I think you can make a case for the ballad form (iambic tetrameter, >abcb quatrains) as the most durable of rivals in English to rhymed >pentameter couplets.
>
>Hugh
>
>
>
>
>_____
>From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Sent: Wed, January 27, 2010 9:56:46 AM
>Subject: Re: Can anything...?
>

>Hi Robin.
>
>More light to shed? I was thinking (and backchanneling with Murat) >about the larger background. The lacunae in my knowledge will be >immediately apparent. Care to fill some of these holes?
>
>"Got me thinking. Iambic pentameter couplets did become the method >of choice, tho there were contenders. In English pre-conquest >narrative poems were written in unrhymed alliterative verse, which >persisted even into Chaucer's time--Langland was an almost exact >contemporary--but also in intricate continental stanza patterns, as >in the work of the Pearl Poet. Narratives written in rhymed couplets >in tetrameter predate Chaucer by at least a generation--I'm thinking >of Sir Orfeo, a personal favorite. Marie de France was writing in >rhymed tetrameter couplets in French at the English court at least a >hundred years before Chaucer, and Chaucer knew her lais by heart, >apparently. On the continent narrative was often written in >elaborate stanza patterns--Wolfram von Eschenbach's Parsifal. I >don't remember what form Chretien de Troyes used--would be good to >know--big influence on Chaucer. Boccaccio wrote his Filostrato, the >source of Chaucer's Troilus, in stanzas.
>
>None of these were as flexible as Chaucer's rhymed pentameter. The >only competitor in that regard must be Dante's terza rima, but it >didn't catch on, even in Italy, as far as I know."
>
>Best,
>
>Mark
>
>At 12:43 AM 1/27/2010, you wrote:
> >> Mark,
> >>
> >> One specifies that heroic couplets must not enjamb because our idea of a > >> heroic couplet is determined by its 18th century examples. My point is > >> different, that, within its historical content in English > poetry, as opposed > >> to stanzaic rhyme schemes, Chaucer's iambic pentameter couplets ...
> >
> > This is a terminological issue. Mark's right here -- as I know > to my cost, having been smacked over the wrist once for saying what > Murat does above.

> >
> > The heroic couplet is very specifically the rhymed iambic > pentameter couplet as used by the Augustans -- Dryden to Sam > Johnson -- with several specifics which distinguish it from earlier > and later uses, not just in Chaucer but Marlowe, Jonson, Donne, > etc., and also say Keats in Endymion, Hyperion, etc. Chaucer's > couplet line almost ends with him, due mostly to the loss of the > final unaccented 'e', with the iambic pentameter (mostly, though > generally all syllable accent forms) being redefined by Wyatt, on, > and reaching a point of balance in Sidney. When the Augustans take > it up (from Jonson possibly), they impose their own sets of > strictures on particularly the rhymed iambic pentameter couplet.
> >
> > If you want a bite-it-and-see example, look at Pope's > "translations" of Donne's Satires.
> >
> > Dropping this specific meaning of "heroic couplet" diminishes our > range of meaninbgful terms.
> >
> > Mark is however wrong about the origins of blank verse -- the > earliest example in English is found in Surrey's translation of the > Aeneid -- and he does *that by simply knocking the rhymes off Gavin > Douglas's earlier rhymed couplet version!
> >
> > Shame that such an act of artistic vandalism should have had such > a productive result. Surrey's own blank verse may be shit, but I > suppose one has to allow that it lies behind Marlowe, etc.
> >
> > Robin
>
>Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University
>of California Press).
>http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

326. Poetry Project
Events at The Poetry Project
Thu 28 Jan 2010

Hereâ€™s what we have coming up at The Poetry Project!

Friday, January 29, 10 PM
â€œCrystal Pantomimeâ€: An unpublished play by Mina Loy

Mina Loyâ€™s (1882 â€“ 1966) unpublished play, â€œCrystalÂ Pantomimeâ€,Â currently housed in the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library at Yale University, will be read live, from beginning to end, as produced by Kari Adelaide Razdow. The play is to be performed using the simultaneous braiding of several voices while individual performances by Marthe Ramm Fortun, Vanessa Albury, and Crystal CurtisÂ accompany each of the playâ€™s three acts.

Vanessa Albury is a contemporary artist based in New York City. She received her MFA in Studio Art from New York University. Albury creates photographic and filmic installations and artworks using structuralist and intuitive tactics. She has exhibited her works in solo and group exhibitions internationally, including solo shows at the Charleston City Gallery (SC) and Silverman Gallery (San Francisco).Â Recently, Albury curated a film and video screening at the Chelsea Art Museum, as well as co-curated, and exhibited in,Â UN-SCR-1325 with Jan Van Woensel at the Chelsea Art Museum (NYC). Her most recent group shows includeÂ If Love Could Have Saved You, You Would Have Lived Forever at Bellwether Gallery (NYC);Â Bad Moon Rising at Silverman Gallery (San Francisco);Â Into the Atomic Sunshine at the Puffin Room (NYC), Hillside Forum Gallery (Tokyo) and Okinawa Prefectural Art Museum (Okinawa); HORIZON at Bloomberg LP in collaboration with Art in General (NYC); andÂ My Memory Vid at ScalaMata Gallery (Venice, Italy) as part of the 53rd Venice Biennale Program.Â Albury is represented by Silverman Gallery and she teaches photography and digital media courses in NYC and in Boston.

Crystal Curtis is a Brooklyn-based visual artist who has exhibited her work in New York City, Los Angeles, and Seattle.Â She received her MFA in Studio Art from New York University and was a recipient of the Joan Mitchell Foundation Grant for Visual Arts and the Pacific Northwest Womenâ€™s Scholarship from the Pilchuck School of Glass.Â She has collaborated with musicians and dancers in New York and Florida.Â RecentÂ exhibitions/performances have appeared at Galapagos Art Space, Chelsea Art Museum, New York University, Secret Robot Project, and the Atlanta Center for the Arts.

Marthe Ramm Fortun is a visual artist artist from Norway who received her MFA in Studio Art from New York University as a Fulbright Scholar. Marthe creates live works that sits uncomfortably between drawing, sculpture and performance. She is interested in reality and fiction. Most recently, her work was featured at Perform Williamsburg for NY State Parks, Markers VII at the ScalaMata Gallery as part of the Official Program at the 53rd Venice Biennale and the performance series â€œIts All Yours Nowâ€ at the SculptureCenter, LIC. Marthe divides her time between Oslo and Brooklyn.

Max Razdow (props and light) has a solo show in Belgium this spring.

Other artists and participants include SÓ§rine Anderson, Juliet Jacobson, Alex McQuilkin, Kari Adelaide Razdow, and Mary Speaker.

Monday, February 1, 8 PM
Open Reading

Sign-in at 7:45pm

Wednesday, February 3, 8 PM
Jalal Toufic: Two Or Three Things Iâ€™m Dying To Tell You About The Thousand
And One Nights

Jalal Toufic is a thinker and a mortal to death. He is the author of Distracted (1991; 2nd ed., 2003), (Vampires): An Uneasy Essay on the Undead in Film (1993; 2nd ed., 2003), Over-Sensitivity (1996; 2nd ed., 2009), Forthcoming (2000), Undying Love, or Love Dies (2002), Two or Three Things Iâ€™m Dying to Tell You (2005), â€˜Ã‚shÃ»rÃ¢â€™: This Blood Spilled in My Veins (2005), and Undeserving Lebanon (2007). Several of his books are available for download at www.jalaltoufic.com. He has taught at CalArts, the University of California at Berkeley, USC, and, in Lebanon, Holy Spirit University; and he currently teaches at Kadir Has University in Istanbul. â€œTwo or Three Things Iâ€™m Dying to Tell You about The Thousand and One Nightsâ€ will be followed by a Q&A.

Friday, February 5, 10 PM
Nick Tosches & Andre Williams

Nick Tosches was born in Newark, New Jersey and is the author of three novels, eleven books of non-fiction,and three volumes of poetry. His books include: Hellfire: The Jerry Lee Lewis Story, Dino: High Living In The Dirty Business Of Dreams, Where Dead Voices Gather, In The Hand Of Dante, and Chaldea. His latest, Never Trust A Living God, is a collection of poetry illustrated by Gravieur. He lives in New York City.

Andre Williams was born in Bessemer, Alabama in 1936. From his start at Fortune in the 1950â€™s, he went on to work at Motown with Stevie Wonder, Mary Wells, and the Contours. He has composed several hundred recordings and continues to be one of the most widelyÂ collected and respected of original soul and rhythm & blues artists. Heâ€™ll read from his debut volume of fiction Sweets (And Other Stories).

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If youâ€™d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

327. steve dalachinsky

Re: Nov. 19, David Meltzer and Rockpile at the Hideout/Chicago

Thu 28 Jan 2010

---

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ph8GWcj6tMg

3 minutes of dalachinsky

On Tue, 10 Nov 2009 17:56:20 -0500 Larry Sawyer <[redacted]> writes:
> Thursday, Nov. 19
>
> ROCKPILE (David Meltzer, Michael Rothenberg & Spider Trio) with > special guests including Terri Carrion, Art Lange, Dan Godston, > Francesco Levato, Larry Sawyer, Ed Roberson & Bob Malone. $8
>
>

> @ The Hideout
> 1354 W. Wabansia, Chicago
> 8:00 to 11:30 pm
> Phone: [redacted]
>
> The Poetry Center of Chicago & Milk Magazine present:
>
>
> ROCKPILE (featuring David Meltzer, Michael Rothenberg, Terri Carrion > & Spider Trio)
>
> A leading poet of the Beat Movement, David MELTZER was raised in > Brooklyn during the War years; performed on radio & early TV on the > Horn & Hardart Children's Hour. Was exiled to L.A. at 16 & at 17 > enrolled in an ongoing academy w/ artists Wallace Berman, George > Herms, Robert Alexander, Cameron; migrated to San Francisco in 1957 > for higher education w/ peers & maestros like Jack Spicer, Robert > Duncan, Joanne Kyger, Diane DiPrima, Michael McClure, Lew Welch, > Philip Whalen, Jack Hirschman, and a cast of thousands all living > extraordinary ordinary lives. Beat Thing [La Alameda Press, 2004] > won the Josephine Miles PEN Award, 2005. Was editor and interviewer > for San Francisco Beat: Talking With The Poets [City Lights, 2001].
> With Steve Dickison, co-edits Shuffle Boil, a magazine devoted to > music in all its appearances & disappearances. 2005 saw the > publication of David's Copy: The Selected Poems of David Meltzer by > Viking/Penguin, a collection spanning over forty years of work that > paints a vivid portrait of Meltzer's life as a poet through poems > taken from thirty of his previous books of poetry. With a versatile > style and playful tone, Meltzer offers his unique vision of > civilization with a range of juxtapositions from Jewish mysticism > and everyday life to jazz and pop culture.
>
> Michael ROTHENBERG is a poet, songwriter, and the editor of Big > Bridge magazine online at www.bigbridge.org. His poetry books include > Man/Woman, a collaboration with Joanne Kyger, The Paris Journals > (Fish Drum Press), Monk Daddy (Blue Press), and Unhurried Vision (La > Alameda/University of New Mexico Press). His poems have been > published widely in small press publications including, 88: A > Journal of Contemporary American Poetry, Berkeley Poetry Review, > Exquisite Corpse, First Intensity, Fish Drum, Fulcrum, Golden > Handcuffs Review, House Organ, Prague Literary Review, Tricycle, Van > Gogh's Ear, Vanitas, Zyzzyva, JACK, milk, and Jacket. He is also > author of the novel Punk Rockwell. Rothenberg's 2005 CD > collaboration with singer Elya Finn, was praised by poet David > Meltzer as "fabulous-all [the] songs sound like Weimar Lenya & > postwar Nico, lushly affirmative at the same time being edged w/> cosmic weltschmertz. An immensely tasty production." He is also > editor for the Penguin Poet series, which includes selected works of > Philip Whalen, Joanne Kyger, David Meltzer, and Ed Dorn. He has > recently completed the Collected Poems of Philip Whalen for Wesleyan > University Press.

>
> Terri CARRION earned her MFA at Florida International University in > Miami, where she taught Freshman English and Creative Writing, > edited and designed the graduate literary magazine Gulfstream, > taught poetry to High School docents at the Museum of Contemporary > Art in North Miami and started a reading series at the local Luna > Star Café. In her final semester at FIU, she was Program Director > for the Study Abroad Program, Creative Writing in Dublin, Ireland.
> Her poetry, fiction, non-fiction and photography has been published > in many print magazines as well as online, including The Cream City > Review, Hanging Loose, Pearl, Penumbra, Exquisite Corpse, Mangrove, > Kick Ass Review, Exquisite Corpse, Jack, Mipoesia, Dead Drunk
> Dublin, and Physik Garden among others.
>
> About SPIDER TRIO: Earle Brown, tenor saxophone; Joe Williams, > drums; Dan McNaughton, bass and leader. Dan formed Spider Trio in > 1997 in New Orleans, in order to perform his jazz compositions which > express his love for a wide range of music, from funk to modern > classical. The band is now based in Chicago, and the current lineup > consists of Dan, Bryan Pardo on reeds, and Tim Keenan on drums.
>
>
>
> WITH GUESTS INCLUDING: Art Lange, Dan Godston, Larry Sawyer, > Francesco Levato, Bob Malone, & Ed Roberson
>
> Born in Chicago in 1952, Art LANGE is the author of hundreds of > essays, reviews, articles, and interviews on music and poetry. His > work has been published in publications as diverse as the Neue > Zeitschrift für Musik and the Village Voice, New American Writing > and the Partisan Review, and he has written program notes for over > 200 jazz and classical recordings. He also published and edited > Brilliant Corners: a magazine of the arts, from 1975-77. He is the > co-editor (with Nathaniel Mackey) of Moment's Notice: Jazz in Poetry > and Prose (1993: Coffee House Press), and is the author of five > books of poetry, including Needles at Midnight (Z Press), Evidence > (Yellow Press), and The Monk Poems (Frontward Books). Lange was > editor of Down Beat magazine from 1984-88 and currently he teaches > at Columbia College, Chicago.

>
> Dan GODSTON teaches poetry and other art forms to young people and > adults in the Chicago area. His poetry and fiction have appeared in > Chase Park, Versal, 580 Split, Kyoto Journal, California Quarterly, > after hours, Edgz, Kyunghyang Shinmun, and other publications, while > his articles have appeared in Teaching Artist Journal, among other > publications. Godston also co-curates the interdisciplinary arts > series, Chicago Calling.
>
> Larry SAWYER curates the Myopic Books Poetry Series in Wicker Park, > Chicago. His chapbook Tyrannosaurus Ant (mother's milk press) was > recently included in the Yale Collection of American Literature. His > blog is Me tronome. He is also editor of http://www.milkmag.org
>
> Poet, translator, and new media artist Francesco LEVATO is the > executive director of The Poetry Center of Chicago and the author of > Marginal State (Fractal Edge Press, 2006) and is a contributor to > Witness: Anthology of Poetry (Serengeti Press, 2004). His poetry has > been published internationally in journals and anthologies.
>
> Bob MALONE grew up in the wilds of New Jersey, where he started > piano lessons at nine – within a year he could play anything put > in front of him – and dreamed of being a classical musician. For > years he listened only to classical music, but hearing Billy Joel in > a Sears store was a revelation for him, and within a few years he > was writing his own songs, and playing with rock bands. He studied > music at Berklee in Boston (though he was already gigging regularly > both solo and with bands, as he has ever since), after which he > moved to Hollywood and embarked on an endless tour, playing an > average of 100 shows a year. “Blazing and beautiful. Burning and > elegant. Subtle and expansive. Unique and timeless. Malone contains > multitudes of rhythm, soul, jazz, blues, smoke and magic.” — > American Songwriter Magazine. For more information see > BobMalone.com.
>
> Born and raised in Pittsburgh, Ed ROBERSON studied painting in his > youth and was educated at the University of Pittsburgh. His > extensive travels inform his work,which is also influenced by > spirituals and the blues, and by visual art, such as the mixed-media > collages of Romare Beardon. Poet and critic Michael Palmer has > called Roberson “one of the most deeply innovative and critically > acute voices of our time.”

> _____
>
> ROCKPILE @ HIDEOUT: A CELEBRATION OF THE TRADITION OF POETRY & JAZZ
> IN THE CITY OF CHICAGO. FROM THE FIRST STORIES OF KENNETH REXROTH
> READING HIS WORK WITH MUSICAL ACCOMPANIMENT BY JELLY ROLL MORTON, > JAZZ & POETRY HAVE ENJOYED A SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP. THIS NIGHT OF > POETRY & JAZZ WITH DAVID MELTZER, MICHAEL ROTHENBERG, SPIDER TRIO &
> SPECIAL GUESTS WILL CERTAINLY BE A NIGHT TO REMEMBER. HIDEOUT > INCLUDES A FULL BAR AND HEMP CANDY BARS WILL SERVED. DOORS OPEN AT > 7:30. $8 COVER.
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

328. Robin Hamilton
Re: Can anything...?
Thu 28 Jan 2010

> longer in Scotland than in England as a viable form -- think Dunbar's "Tretis of the Twa Meriit Wemen and the Wedo" in the early fifteenth century.

Ooops!!! -- early SIXTEENTH century, of course.

Yet once more I trip up over calling the period 1500-1599 by the wrong name. Am I the only person who finds calling the fifteen hundreds "the sixteenth century" counter-intuitive?

Robin

↑ Index

329. Mairead Byrne
Re: Fw: Suicide in an Airplane (1919) -- resend
Thu 28 Jan 2010

---

awesome.
a futurist moment 100 years later.
a postmodern moment which is lyrical.
shredded letters big enough for a muffled howl of today.
21st century wordsworth.
m

On Thu, Jan 28, 2010 at 11:11 AM, Brian Stefans <[redacted]>wrote:

> Resending... links for zip files didn't work.
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Brian Stefans
> To: Buffalo Poetics
> Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 8:10 AM
> Subject: Suicide in an Airplane (1919)
>
> My new piece:
>
> http://www.arras.net/scriptor/suicide_in_an_airplane_1919/
>
> However, I think it's best viewed as a standalone app. Funny things are happening to it when viewed in a browser.
>
> http://www.arras.net/scriptor/suicide_in_an_airplane_1919/SIAA_for_PC.zip
>
> http://www.arras.net/scriptor/suicide_in_an_airplane_1919/SIAA_for_Mac.zip
>
> There's sound, a piano piece by Leo Ornstein (hence, the title). I don't have the rights to this recording, unfortunately, but we'll see.
>
> Brian

--
Associate Professor of English
Rhode Island School of Design

2 College Street
Providence
RI 02903
[redacted]

↑ Index

330. peter ganick
chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
Thu 28 Jan 2010

---

http://chalkeditions.co.cc

for experimental poetry – our first twenty titles.

chalk editions – usually poetry attempts to conquer time and insert an immortality-factor to its texts – this possibility has reverted against itself recently – the physical book is a dinosaur – we, at chalk editions, don't like this event, however, it is the reality of a now, almost into the second decade of the 21st decade – hardcopy books are expensive to produce and purchase, soon, hardcopy books will be the present tense for either the rich elite, or collectors – digital paper and ink are improving as we speak, the quality of reading on a computer screen [such as amazon's kindle device] is improving – screen technology [for computers] is improving as well

we are poets: we come and go with the wind. free.

these are some of the ideas behind our new venture – the texts are free of charge – if you wish, download a few – make print-outs – as a kindness to the authors and publisher, please mention our site and the author's copyright.

peter ganick & jukka-pekka kervinen – 07.04.09

[redacted]

[redacted]

clicking on a title will bring up the text and cover art.

John M. Bennett - T ICK TICK TIC K<http://www.scribd.com/John-M-Bennett-T-ICK-TICK-TIC-K/d/25483907>
**

Lars Palm - fragments from this<http://www.scribd.com/doc/25107260/Lars-Palm-fragments-from-this>
**

Thomas Lowe Taylor - "...of shooting stars and brightness."<http://www.scribd.com/doc/24182946/Thomas-Lowe-Taylor-of-

shooting-stars-and-brightness>
**

*Andrew Topel -
RE-ECHOES*<http://www.scribd.com/doc/23253381/Andrew-Topel-RE-ECHOES>
**

*Jim Leftwich - OF IF
IN*<http://www.scribd.com/doc/22547754/Jim-Leftwich-OF-IF-IN>
**

*Peter Ganick -
g=e=i=s=t=l=i=c=h*<http://www.scribd.com/doc/22286605/Peter-Ganick-g-e-i-s-t-l-i-c-h>
**

Hugh R. Tribbey - waitinale glasses<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21912900/Hugh-R-Tribbey-waitinale-glasses>
**

Lawrence Upton - water lines<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21912732/Lawrence-Upton-water-lines>
**

Jeff Crouch - furious peddler<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21612809/Jeff-Crouch-furious-peddler>
**

*Sheila E. Murphy - Reverse
Haibun*<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21062779/Sheila-E-Murphy-Reverse-Haibun>
**

John M. Bennett - Fla g Wh ale<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19686134/John-M-Bennett-Fla-g-Wh-ale>
**

zachary count lawrence - parsing<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19580683/zachary-count-lawrence-parsing>
**

Sheila E. Murphy - circumsanct<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19475026/Sheila-E-Murphy-circumsanct>
**

Ivan Arguelles - SECRET POEM<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19445335/Ivan-Arguelles-SECRET-POEM>
**

Ivan Arguelles - SATURDAY AFTERNOON IN THE UPANISHADS<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19362306/Ivan-Arguelles-SATURDAY-AFTERNOON-IN-THE-UPANISHADS>
**

Alan Sondheim - Pushing to Convulsion<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19258792/Alan-Sondheim-Pushing-to-Convulsion>
**

Jim Leftwich - BEGET STATESMAN<http://www.scribd.com/doc/18003367/Jim-Leftwich-BEGET-STATESMAN>
**

Jim Leftwich - TIME JUNK<http://www.scribd.com/doc/17243139/Jim-Leftwich-TIME-JUNK>
**

Peter Ganick - recent / how recent<http://www.scribd.com/doc/17097034/Peter-Ganick-recent-how-recent>
**

Jukka-Pekka Kervinen - Bad Knob<http://www.scribd.com/doc/17044277/JukkaPekka-Kervinen-Bad-Knob>
**

↑ Index

331. David Kirschenbaum
Advertise in Boog City 62
Fri 29 Jan 2010

Please forward

Advertise in

Boog City 62

Deadlines

—Space Reservations-Email to reserve ad space ASAP

—Thurs. Feb. 25-Submit Ad or Ad Materials
—Sat. March 6-Distribute Paper

This is a quick note to see if you'd like to advertise and reach our readership. (Donations are also cool, way cool.)

We'll be distributing 2,250 copies of the issue throughout the East Village and other parts of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and at Boog City events.

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. The discount rate also applies to larger ads.

For our full rate card, please visit:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664) for more information.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: 212-842-BOOG (2664)

↑ Index

332. John Herbert Cunningham not quite ekphraic
Fri 29 Jan 2010

Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry written in response to the art of movement?

John Herbert Cunningham

↑ Index

333. Lars Palm
Three new e-books from ungovernable press
Fri 29 Jan 2010

Dear all,

it brings me great pleasure to announce the release of no less than three new books from ungovernable press. they are

Passages:Annotations by Jill Jones

Intersecting Views of the Possible Interaction by Felino A. Soriano

Take It by Amanda Laughtland

as always freely downloadable pdf-files. & there are a few others in the works

cheers,
lars

http://ungovernablepress.weebly.com

http://mischievoice.blogspot.com

↑ Index

334. Mark Weiss
Horn tooting
Fri 29 Jan 2010

John Palattella in The Nation Feb. 15th issue

“AND THERE IN THE DISTANCE,
nothing./A line of houses one can hardly make out/through the white of snow and sun.” These lines from “The Fog,” by the Cuban poet Eugenio Florit, could double as a sketch of the view from the north, and from within Cuba itself, of recent Cuban literature.
The US embargo has corrupted our view of the island, and Castro’s censors have stifled the publication of writing that departs
from state-sanctioned optimismo. I found “The Fog” in The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry, edited by Mark Weiss (California;
paper $29.95). Not since the 1982 publication

of Paul Auster's Random House Book
of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened
the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it. Weiss presents generous selections of work by fifty-five poets from Cuba and its diaspora; though ostensibly an anthology, The Whole Island is a gathering of individual voices (among them those of the twenty-two translators who contributed to the project). In "On Three Photos of Mella," Francisco de Oraá offers a riposte to Julio Mella, a founder of Cuba's Communist Party
and a disapproving superego: "I only know that, deep down, I would have wanted to be let loose in the garden,/and that the garden
would grow and become the whole world."
Seeing through the fog (what Damaris Calderón
calls this "sad business/this playing at being perfect"), Weiss has located the whole island's many imaginary gardens.

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban
Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

335. Mark Weiss
Re: not quite ekphraic
Fri 29 Jan 2010

---

terpsicophrastic?

At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:
>Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary >dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', >for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry >written in response to the art of movement?
>
>John Herbert Cunningham

>
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

336. CA Conrad
THIS Sunday, CAConrad & Frank Sherlock cordially invite you to the book party
Fri 29 Jan 2010

THIS Sunday, CAConrad & Frank Sherlock cordially invite you to the book party for The City Real & Imagined (Factory School, 2010) at ZINC Bar, introductions by Thom Donovan.

All details at this link:
http://events4cri.blogspot.com/2010/01/january-31st-2010-nyc.html

We look forward to seeing you there, have a great weekend! CAConrad & Frank Sherlock

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

337. Paul Nelson
Re: not quite ekphraic
Fri 29 Jan 2010

Ekphrastic is the word for all poems inspired by other art forms. Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

_____
From: John Herbert Cunningham <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, January 29, 2010 5:08:30 AM
Subject: not quite ekphraic

Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry written in response to the art of movement?

John Herbert Cunningham

↑ Index

338. Robert Dewhurst
John Wieners criticism
Fri 29 Jan 2010

I am preparing a critical bibliography for John Wieners. If you're aware of any texts -- from the peer-reviewed academic article, to send-ups by friends in ephemeral small magazines -- can you please back-channel citations? I am aware of a few things (by Andrea Brady, Bruce Andrews), but would like to be as comprehensive as possible.

Thanks,
Robert Dewhurst

↑ Index

339. George Bowering
Re: not quite ekphraic
Fri 29 Jan 2010

Ekphrastic is the right word for a poem reponding to a painting.

gb

On Jan 29, 2010, at 5:08 AM, John Herbert Cunningham wrote:

> Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary
> dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', > for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry > written in response to the art of movement?
>
> John Herbert Cunningham
>
> welcome.html

Geo. Bowering
Heavy feet. Light heart.

↑ Index

340. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Can anything...?
Fri 29 Jan 2010

Mark, Robin,

I just went back to re-read parts of "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner." What I noticed is that the stanza structure and the rhyme scheme are very loose. Stanzas are four, five and sometimes six lines. Also the rhymes are very irregular. It seems to me Coleridge is attempting to create in this poem also an archaic or distant tone (many of his contempraries complained about it) what he calls in The Biographica "the supernatural." In fact, it seems (here I am relying on Wiki) "The Rime" was part of a project conducted by Coleridge and Wordsworth together. Coleridge was going to write a poem after the supernatural ("the shades of the imagination") and Worsdworth's experiment was going to focus on "everyday life."

It seems Wordsworth (and the majority of his contemporaries) did not particularly like "The Rime" though he partly changed his opinion later on. He considered Coleridge's stanzaic form in "The Rime" "unsuitable for a long poem."

It seems by Wordsworth and Coleridge's time complicated stanza forms -particularly in a long poem- looking to the past or to the supernatural (the sublime) represented -to paraphrase Jim- the S&M of English poetry, whereas the line coming from Chaucer became the straight sex (I wonder which sex is using more the straight jacket?).

When Pound creates another pivotal change in English poetry, particularly with his translation of "The Seafarer," he is looking back to earlier than Chaucer, to alliterative verse, as Mark mentions, to "the road not taken." Alliteration is built on consonants. The "natural" music of Victorian poetry is built around assonance, in other words, vowels. Pound shifts the focus, consequently, what poetic sound/music is.

Also, the discontinuity implicit complicated stanza forms makes it a fertile ground for long poems at least partly built around the idea of collage -the underlying unity among discontinuities which a long poem suggests.

Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Jan 28, 2010 at 5:37 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> I think Murat was talking about flexibility for verse narrative. There have certainly been some pretty long narrative ballads--The Ancient Mariner, for one. To put words in his mouth, the form because of its greater structural demands constrains the manner in which the story is told more than couplets or blank verse. Or so imaginary Murat thinks.

Best,

Mark

At 03:47 PM 1/28/2010, you wrote:

Mark,

I think you can make a case for the ballad form (iambic tetrameter, abcb quatrains) as the most durable of rivals in English to rhymed pentameter couplets.

Hugh

From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, January 27, 2010 9:56:46 AM
Subject: Re: Can anything...?

Hi Robin.

More light to shed? I was thinking (and backchanneling with Murat) about the larger background. The lacunae in my knowledge will be immediately apparent. Care to fill some of these holes?

"Got me thinking. Iambic pentameter couplets did become the method of choice, tho there were contenders. In English pre-conquest narrative poems were written in unrhymed alliterative verse, which persisted even into Chaucer's time--Langland was an almost exact contemporary--but also in intricate continental stanza patterns, as in the work of the Pearl Poet. Narratives written in rhymed couplets in tetrameter predate Chaucer by at least a generation--I'm thinking of Sir Orfeo, a personal favorite. Marie de France was writing in rhymed tetrameter couplets in French at the English court at least a hundred years before Chaucer, and Chaucer knew her lais by heart, apparently. On the continent narrative was often written in elaborate stanza patterns--Wolfram von Eschenbach's Parsifal. I don't remember what form Chretien de Troyes used--would be good to know--big influence on Chaucer. Boccaccio wrote his Filostrato, the source of Chaucer's Troilus, in stanzas.

None of these were as flexible as Chaucer's rhymed pentameter. The only competitor in that regard must be Dante's terza rima, but it didn't catch on, even in Italy, as far as I know."

Best,

Mark

At 12:43 AM 1/27/2010, you wrote:
Mark,

One specifies that heroic couplets must not enjamb because our idea of a heroic couplet is determined by its 18th century examples. My point is different, that, within its historical content in English poetry, as opposed to stanzaic rhyme schemes, Chaucer's iambic pentameter couplets ...

This is a terminological issue. Mark's right here -- as I know to my cost, having been smacked over the wrist once for saying what Murat does above.

*The heroic couplet is very specifically the rhymed iambic pentameter couplet as used by the Augustans -- Dryden to Sam Johnson -- with several specifics which distinguish it from earlier and later uses, not just in Chaucer but Marlowe, Jonson, Donne, etc., and also say Keats in Endymion, Hyperion, etc. Chaucer's couplet line almost ends with him, due mostly to the loss of the final unaccented 'e', with the iambic pentameter (mostly, though generally all syllable accent forms) being redefined by Wyatt, on, and reaching a point of balance in Sidney. When the Augustans take it up (from Jonson possibly), they impose their own sets of strictures on particularly the rhymed iambic pentameter couplet.*

If you want a bite-it-and-see example, look at Pope's "translations" of Donne's Satires.

Dropping this specific meaning of "heroic couplet" diminishes our range of meaninbgful terms.

*Mark is however wrong about the origins of blank verse -- the earliest example in English is found in Surrey's translation of the Aeneid -- and he does that by simply knocking the rhymes off Gavin Douglas's earlier rhymed couplet version!

Shame that such an act of artistic vandalism should have had such a productive result. Surrey's own blank verse may be shit, but I suppose one has to allow that it lies behind Marlowe, etc.

> Robin
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
> http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
> http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

341. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Horn tooting
Fri 29 Jan 2010

Great review Mark.

Murat

On Fri, Jan 29, 2010 at 11:46 AM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> John Palattella in The Nation Feb. 15th issue
>
> "AND THERE IN THE DISTANCE,
> nothing./A line of houses one can hardly
> make out/through the white of snow and > sun." These lines from "The Fog," by the > Cuban poet Eugenio Florit, could double as > a sketch of the view from the north, and from > within Cuba itself, of recent Cuban literature.
> The US embargo has corrupted our
> view of the island, and Castro's censors have
> stifled the publication of writing that departs
> from state-sanctioned optimismo. I found
> "The Fog" in The Whole Island: Six Decades of > Cuban Poetry, edited by Mark Weiss (California;
> paper $29.95). Not since the 1982 publication

> of Paul Auster's Random House Book
> of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual
> anthology so effectively broadened
> the sense of poetic terrain outside the United > States and also created a superb collection
> of foreign poems in English. There is > nothing else like it. Weiss presents generous > selections of work by fifty-five poets from > Cuba and its diaspora; though ostensibly an > anthology, The Whole Island is a gathering of
> individual voices (among them those of the > twenty-two translators who contributed to > the project). In "On Three Photos of Mella," > Francisco de Oraá offers a riposte to Julio
> Mella, a founder of Cuba's Communist Party
> and a disapproving superego: "I only know
> that, deep down, I would have wanted to be
> let loose in the garden,/and that the garden
> would grow and become the whole world."
> Seeing through the fog (what Damaris Calderón
> calls this "sad business/this playing at
> being perfect"), Weiss has located the whole
> island's many imaginary gardens.
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
> http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

342. Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Re: not quite ekphraic
Fri 29 Jan 2010

Terpsiphrastic?

Hugh

_____
From: John Herbert Cunningham <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, January 29, 2010 5:08:30 AM
Subject: not quite ekphraic

Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry written in response to the art of movement?

John Herbert Cunningham

↑ Index

343. Alison Croggon
Public domain manifesto
Fri 29 Jan 2010

@ http://www.publicdomainmanifesto.org/node/8

Worth signing, I do believe.

xA

--
Editor, Masthead: http://www.masthead.net.au
Blog: http://theatrenotes.blogspot.com
Home page: http://www.alisoncroggon.com

↑ Index

344. Alan Sondheim
To the Editor: (in response to Macaulay's review 1/22/10) (fwd)
Fri 29 Jan 2010

(This most likely won't be published, but some people wanted to read it, so here it is, group-sent, apologies for this, love Alan)

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 27 Jan 2010 09:46:29 -0500 (EST)
From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: To the Editor: (in response to Macaulay's review 1/22/10)

To the Editor:

I'm writing to respond to Alastair Macaulay's review of our performances, in the January 22 Dance Section.

I've never responded to a review, negative or positive, before, but Macaulay's demands it. The review is a diatribe, neither a description, nor an analysis. No one reading it would have the slightest idea of the evenings themselves. We deserve better.

Macaulay's dismisses the music/song as follows: "Meanwhile, he is accompanied by two colleagues. Alan Sondheim plays a variety of stringed instruments; Azure Carter sings her own songs in a series of pretty frocks and petticoats, and even dances a little. Both are entirely trivial." This is sexist and obviously insulting. He may not have liked the music, but this says nothing. (I should mention that there were dancers, musicians, and choreographers in the audience - some quite well known, etc. - and none of them had this reaction; far from it. We also played to large houses, in spite of the review.)

Macaulay also dismisses Foofwa d'Imobilite's name as follows: "Mr. d'Imobilite has provided several pages of accompanying literature. These cover his 'conceptual libretto' for 'Musings,' the wordplay within its title and his own name, his methodology and the inspiration behind 'Involuntaries.' It's all clever, but, like his name, damnably arch and contrived." This is stupid and ad hominem. The "several pages" were written by d'Imobilite, Carter, and myself, by the way - Macaulay apparently paid no attention to the distinction.

He likewise paid no attention to the half-hour video, intended as an introduction to Involuntaries; he paid no attention to the lighting of Musings, which was computer-controled and designed as a dance performance in itself; and he apparently paid no attention to the details of Involuntaries itself. He thinks otherwise: "Mr. d'Imobilite's choreography for himself consists almost entirely of spasms." I've seen spasms, and this is as nonsensical as saying that Michael Jackson's choreography is just prancing about. In fact, the sections of Involuntaries are quite distinct from each other, as the audience understood.

I don't know Macaulay, and don't want to, but he appears to favor an ugly form of connoisseurship I've seen far too often. Rather than attempting to understand the work (reading the program notes? watching the video? watching the performance itself?), the performance is used as an excuse for yet another agenda - in this case, I assume, a return to ballet or traditional Cunningham. The readers of the Times deserve far better than this. The Times stands alone, in a sense, and for better or worse, functions as an arbiter, if not of taste, at least of what one might see of an evening. And for that, we need analysis and care, and at least someone who loves downtown dance, someone who understands it, to review these occasions. It's difficult enough to work on a kind of edge without being slammed by relatively unresponsive critics in the Times.

Thank you.

Sincerely Yours,

Alan Sondheim [redacted]

↑ Index

345. Jim Andrews

Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.

Sat 30 Jan 2010

>Peter Ganick said:
chalk editions – usually poetry attempts to conquer time and insert an immortality-factor to its texts – this possibility has reverted against itself recently – the physical book is a dinosaur – we, at chalk editions, don’t like this event, however, it is the reality of a now, almost into the second decade of the 21st decade – hardcopy books are expensive to produce and purchase, soon, hardcopy books will be the present tense for either the rich elite, or collectors – digital paper and ink are improving as we speak, the quality of reading on a computer screen [such as amazon’s kindle device] is improving – screen technology [for computers] is improving as well
we are poets: we come and go with the wind. free.

i note that you are doing POD (print on demand) with your Blue Lion Books. And that your criterion for publishing a Blue Lion POD book includes that it be over 250 pages. could you elaborate on this, please? what sort of decisions do you make in whether to keep it digital or offer it in POD? is it just the size of the book or are there other considerations?

certainly a 250 page ebook, on contemporary monitors, is completely unreadable. but is a 100 page ebook any more readable? well, yes, by 150 pages. but, still, reading 100 pages of a book from a monitor is not something any of us would regard as an enjoyable experience.

i don't see books as dinosaurical, really. POD seems like a fairly cost-effective way to publish paper books for small publishers, doesn't it? you've been involved in POD, so you should be an authority on this one.

perhaps devices such as the Kindle will replace books if they are pleasantly readable, which i hear they are, and if they are as easily browsable as a book is and if you can get any book you want on them quite easily. all of which seems doable. the hardest part has apparently been getting the screen to be readable, which monitors barely are. readable literary sites mix it up. they offer a variety of media. words, pictures, sounds, interactive works, processes, activities. too much reading on a monitor is just a grind. we need to understand media. readable literary web sites take writing in directions it hasn't been able to go, formally, before. they use what is really engaging about the computer experience. not just sitting in front of a monitor reading a hundred pages of type trying to pretend it's a book.

what is displayable on a Kindle? just type? or type and pictures? how about sounds? animation? video? interactivity?

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

346. John Cunningham
Re: not quite ekphraic
Sat 30 Jan 2010

Mark, you're terpsigoing-out-of-your-freakin'-mind (lol) with than one. John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Mark Weiss
Sent: January-29-10 11:20 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: not quite ekphraic

terpsicophrastic?

At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:
>Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary >dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', >for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry >written in response to the art of movement?
>
>John Herbert Cunningham
>
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University
of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

347. Mark Weiss
Re: not quite ekphraic
Sat 30 Jan 2010

As to my mind, you could say that I'm an occasional visitor.

At 11:05 AM 1/30/2010, you wrote:
>Mark, you're terpsigoing-out-of-your-freakin'-mind (lol) with than one.
>John Herbert Cunningham
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On >Behalf Of Mark Weiss
>Sent: January-29-10 11:20 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: not quite ekphraic
>
>terpsicophrastic?
>
>At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:
> >Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to >contemporary
> >dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', > >for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry > >written in response to the art of movement?
> >
> >John Herbert Cunningham
> >
> >
>
>Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University
>of California Press).
>http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
>
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University
of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

348. Stephen Ellis
Re: John Wieners criticism
Sat 30 Jan 2010

The Last Word: First Blurts on John Wieners

TWO PROPOSALS FOR A TALK ON, AND STANDING IN FOR "A STATEMENT" ON, THE LATER POETIC WORK OF JOHN WIENERS

1

The Switch from the Extensive and Causal, to Permissions Toward the Penetrant and Creatively Received: Transformation from Romantic Expression of Desire's Movement to the Classical Proportionality of Proposing Presence and Allowing Apparition, Intuition and Disguise in the Later Work of John Wieners

Active distinctions made via Dionysian individuated causality in the personal lyric as extending to, yet in contradistinction with, the interpenetration of all objects and persons Orphically, evolve from a plethora of received names, through dream and memory, as these become motivations toward persistent shifts of more ordinal identity, your legal person, passport stamp, nationality, the brass rails of your neighborhood barroom and standard city hall, and these literal and constant shifts constitute the inversion in the poetic work of John Wieners, from the testamental and experiential lyric operations constituting verse composed upon feeling, waylaid by verb forms that give authenticity to the Self mutated by its own active yet inadequate attempts at definition, where there is otherwise in the later work, an amply transmuted disposal less the result of an individuated and active disposition toward The Real, but an on-going receivership, to be left open to penetrant desire, in poetic disposition, not revelent spirit alone, but that sexual instinct be included throughout bus station, spare east coast New England single rooms and pacings out upon the Fens in perfectly empty hunger toward requition. So it is with Mister Wieners' later auto-de-fe in heresy, the persistent brand-mark of his sexuality, remarking the desired stain upon his face in four-dollar blow-jobs, and associational instances of being in wont of, more lately, in their aftermath, Dante Sweeting Watching Upon Virgin Appearances of Virgil's Beatrice, the guide of "feminine phenomenological apprehension" modally, as named references to equal parts glamour and mundanity, inter-penetrant and transitory, out of Hollywood and high society, Miss Barbara Hutton, Dr Jacqueline Onassis, or in Duke of Windsor Inaugural Dawn Acceptance Speech whispered as stars blink out over Islip State, in long nights, incarcerated upon Long Island.

So the "talk" I would give, related to the above circumambulations, is in the nature of revealing the shift from individuated lyric to collagist tactics against any final settlement upon frontiers of what Wieners denotes as income, desire, security and truth - as well the perpetual ennui these each imply - the Final Identity through which to enquire upon jealousy's lifetime attenuations, stolen as these are from the likes of Marx, Einstein, Darwin and Freud, the shift from Dionysos to Apollo's Nine notwithstanding.

Consequent texts will primarily include Wieners' post-1970 collagist work, as well as, by compare, more ordinal lyric work from the 1960s. The above is an addendum and extention of a paper proposed for a previous Conference, unfinished and undelivered, provisionally titled:

"Singular Conviction Parallel Sunset Boulevard upon Limbic Rise, Clairvoyant and/or Crestfallen, Animates Boston, Bavaria and Babylon in terms of 4000 Ladies-In-Waiting, or, The Integral Life: Notes Regarding John Wieners' Magna Carta, Behind The State Capitol, or, Cincinnati Pike, and Related Works."

For Wieners' life's work, continuous attentions and jeu de mots in addendum, ignotum per ignotius, is of the essence, as necessities of menial repetition, independence, and hotel legerdemain.

2

The initial impetus to John Wieners' poetics can in part be located in his own statement about it - "Address of the Watchman to the Night" - in The Magazine for Further Studies (Buffalo 1965). In it he says that the prostitute, dope addict, thief and pervert were the heroes of his world, and that he had to become each in turn until he knew them all.

Yet this is mere topical fancy, what his poems are to be initially "about". The more commensurate and sensible source of Wieners' lyric voice is the attitude within this material that maintains a heat otherwise specific to the terms of the lyric itself, rather than the "night people" it so desirously probes.

In this, the primum mobile is love, which, first, obtains to the condition of the whole of space, the void, the ultimate, circular, curving rhythm of human experience that comprises a rearward time vector, back to the past, and then projects it forward multi-directionally, the vectors extending until they go completely circular, which concludes the lyric voice and opens the possibility of myth and its attending sense of cosmos and its expression as epic. So that these persons become the flanks and withers of a very old sense of animals in their movements as being causal of the music of the spheres. In this, love would be to epic as home is to the domestic, living in the ethic of desire. Wieners' early work, the lyric of pathos, seems in hindsight preparation for his magnum opus, Behind the State Capitol, or Cincinnati Pike, in which sensible lyric has been supplanted by Dionysian frenzy, to burn with such heat that the attending sense of cosmos remains forever single, that it participates in a whole. That it holds, unto itself, without requiring a determining "center".

In this, Wieners allows himself, especially in the later work, to be penetrated by the magic of others' experience and identity, as for example, Blake arranging for his own demonic possession by Milton. And, interestingly, throughout the later work there are extraordinary congestions of person, place and thing related to this unlikely genetic interchange, especially with critical and appreciative views to Hollywood stardom, cultural status and political repute.

This alone, along with the often stiffly-driven formality of Wieners' language, would lead one to the conclusion that as his poetic career progressed, the work became increasingly complex. But I would propose otherwise that it simply becomes more animated, that the lyric "continuous metaphor for a feeling" in fact does encircle an emotional condition which then opens into the possibility of a universe conceived as simple and whole, as it may be expressed and determined by the wholeness of language's capacity for love. And Wieners seems predestinarian in that sense - that it is an individual's destiny to fulfill the universe's capacity for love.

*

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

> Date: Fri, 29 Jan 2010 15:00:02 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: John Wieners criticism
> To: [redacted]
>
> I am preparing a critical bibliography for John Wieners. If you're aware of any texts -- from the peer-reviewed academic article, to send-ups by friends in ephemeral small magazines -- can you please back-channel citations? I am aware of a few things (by Andrea Brady, Bruce Andrews), but would like to be as comprehensive as possible.
>
> Thanks,
> Robert Dewhurst

↑ Index

349. mIEKAL aND
Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
Sat 30 Jan 2010

Depends what you mean by reading. I get the feeling with ebooks that scanning might be a more appropriate concept & I think there is a lot scanning going on. Personally I'm not able to read more than 4 or 5 pages of text in a row on the screen before my eyes go buggy.

~mIEKAL

On Jan 30, 2010, at 12:43 AM, Jim Andrews wrote:

> certainly a 250 page ebook, on contemporary monitors, is completely unreadable. but is a 100 page ebook any more readable?

=!=
Data Visualization for the Synaptically Inspired
http://filevillage.info

↑ Index

350. Adam Katz
Re: John Wieners criticism
Sat 30 Jan 2010

In the first of these

http://home.jps.net/~nada/snyder.htm

3 poems by Rick Snyder,

there is brief sendup of JW. Never having heard that name before, I went after it as a result.

a

↑ Index

351. Kimmelman, Burt
Ralph Maud
Sat 30 Jan 2010

Hello Everyone,

If you happen to have an email address or phone number or both for Ralph Maud then could you possibly share it with me (via backchannel)? I have to reach Ralph in a timely way and I've lost his contact information.

Thank you for your help,

Burt Kimmelman

↑ Index

352. Halvard Johnson
Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
Sat 30 Jan 2010

I'm not exactly sure what buggy eyes are, mIEKAL, but I read quite a bit more onscreen than off- nowadays, and my eyes definitely benefit from my being able to enlarge onscreen type, not to mention being able to darken or lighten the screen as needed. Maybe you're not old enough to have your hands cramp up while holding magazines, newspaper, even some books. Of course, a little more heat in the house might help with that, but . . .

Hal

Serving the tri-state area.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Sat, Jan 30, 2010 at 11:04 AM, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:

> Depends what you mean by reading. I get the feeling with ebooks that scanning might be a more appropriate concept & I think there is a lot scanning going on. Personally I'm not able to read more than 4 or 5 pages of text in a row on the screen before my eyes go buggy.
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
> On Jan 30, 2010, at 12:43 AM, Jim Andrews wrote:
>
> certainly a 250 page ebook, on contemporary monitors, is completely unreadable. but is a 100 page ebook any more readable?
>
> =!=
> Data Visualization for the Synaptically Inspired
> http://filevillage.info

↑ Index

353. Ruth Lepson
Re: John Wieners criticism
Sat 30 Jan 2010

---

the first time I met john wieners he asked, Are you a Medici? No? Did I meet you at Georgia O'Keefe's house? He was sweet & I was thrilled bec I had loved his poetry; instead of my praising him, he complimented me.

On 1130110 12:07 PM, "Adam Katz" <[redacted]> wrote:

> In the first of these
>
> http://home.jps.net/~nada/snyder.htm
>
> 3 poems by Rick Snyder,
>
> there is brief sendup of JW. Never having heard that name before, I went after it as a result.
>
> a

↑ Index

354. Kyle Schlesinger contact info
Sat 30 Jan 2010

Could someone send me contact information for Susanna Gardner, Patrick James Dunagan and William Fuller?

Many thanks,

Kyle

↑ Index

355. Bob Grumman
Runaway Spoon Press Clearance Sale
Sat 30 Jan 2010

Clearance Sale.

Go to: http://poeticks.com/the-runaway-spoon-press-catalogue-2/

Top of the Page.

25 titles, some dating back before 1990, for only $50 (payable through Paypal or by mail). Each is about 4' by 3". Saddle-stitched. Some are a little faded (but readable); some, I'm sure, must be collectors' items by now, or eventually will be. Good quick course in what's been going on in the Otherstream over the past two decades.

None ever won a prize!

--Bob Grumman, RASPproprietor

↑ Index

356. Jim Andrews
Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
Sat 30 Jan 2010

> Depends what you mean by reading. I get the feeling with ebooks that scanning might be a more appropriate concept & I think there is a lot scanning going on.

Yes, probably so.

It's difficult to pay much attention to them when their media manifestation is resistant to it. And scribd is a cluttered interface full of ads. At least there's a 'fullscreen' option.

> Personally I'm not able to read more than 4 or 5 pages of text in a row on the screen before my eyes go buggy.
>
> ~mIEKAL

Yes, it's just an uncomfortable thing.

ja

↑ Index

357. David Kirschenbaum
Blake Babies Tribute, and Blake and Ginsberg, Too
Sat 30 Jan 2010

Please forward

Boog City’s Classic Albums Live presents

Blake Babies' Tribute Show Featuring Live Performances of Sunburn at 20 and Earwig at 21 with readings of work from their namesake, William Blake, and the poet who named them, Allen Ginsberg

Fri., Feb. 5, 7:30 p.m.

$5 suggested donation with a two-drink minimum

Sidewalk Café
94 Ave. A
NYC

album performed live by

Jon Berger
Todd Carlstrom
Christy Davis
Susan Hwang
Eric Lipper
Christine "Sharky" Murray
Randi Russo
Schwervon!
The Trouble Dolls
Yoko Kikuchi & Sara Lautman

Blake and Ginsberg poetry performed live by

Lee Ann Brown
Tyler Burba
Julie Patton
Kristin Prevallet
Nathaniel Siegel

Blake Babies' albums curated by Nan Turner
Poetry curated by Nathaniel Siegel
Hosted by Boog City editor and publisher David Kirschenbaum

Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave., L to 1st Ave.
Venue is at E.6th St.

For further information:
212-842-BOOG(2664), [redacted]

Performers’ bios and websites follow albums' running order

Blake Babies

Earwig

Eric Lipper
Cesspool
Dead And Gone
Grateful

The Trouble Dolls
You Don't Give Up
Your Way Or The Highway
Rain

Yoko Kikuchi & Sara Lautman
Lament

Alright
Loose

Jon Berger
Take Your Head Off My Shoulder
From Here To Burma
Don't Suck My Breath

Susan Hwang
Outta My Head
Steamie Gregg
Not Just A Wish

Sunburn

Christy Davis
I'm Not Your Mother

Randi Russo
Out There
Star

Schwervon!
Look Away
Sanctify
Girl In A Box

Christine "Sharky" Murray
Train
I'll Take Anything
Watch Me Now, I'm Calling

Todd Carlstrom
Gimme Some Mirth
Kiss And Make Up
A Million Years

Jonathan Berger
http://www.myspace.com/jonathanberger

Jonathan Berger has been involved in many Boog City events over the years. As music editor, contributor, cover song artist, host and distributor, he gets around. This isn't even the first time he's covered a chick singer for Boog. Berger gets around...

Lee Ann Brown
http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Brown.php

Lee Ann Brown is the author of Polyverse (Sun & Moon Press, winner of the New American Poetry Series Award) and The Sleep That Changed Eveything (Wesleyan University Press). She has performed her poetry internationally and is the editor and publisher of Tender Buttons press. Born in 1963 in Saitama-ken, Japan and raised in Charlotte, North Carolina, Brown now lives in New York City and Marshall, N.C. She holds an M.F.A. in creative writing from Brown University and is an associate professor of English at St. John's University in NYC. Her song cycle, The Thirteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time and other readings, can be found at the websites, PENNSOUND and The Electronic Poetry Center.

Tyler Burba
http://www.visit-music.net/

At the age of 15, Tyler Burba met the poet Allen Ginsberg, a life- changing experience that would lead him to leave Vancouver, Wash. for the happier climate of Boulder, Colo., where he would attend The Naropa Institute. A poet and musician, Burba performs solo as Visit and is a member of the experimental psychedelic rock band Snowboots. Two albums, Snowboots' Greatest Hits and Visit's Think God, are due out this winter, as well as a book of poetry. He also founded farfalla press, an independent publishing company that went on to publish over 20 titles of poetry, fiction and music. Burba lives in Williamsburg and teaches "at-risk" middle school children in Harlem.

Todd Carlstrom
http://www.myspace.com/toddcarlstrom

Todd Carlstrom, has played in NYC bands for years (The Domestics, Heroes of the Alamo, Dirty Vicars, and currently, Todd Carlstrom and the Clamour).

Christy Davis

Christy Davis is a drummer, singer/songwriter who has been playing in bands since 1989. She currently plays with Olive Juice Music's own Kansas State Flower.

She has been a part of many projects including Rebecca Moore and the Prevention of Blindness, Reverend Billy and His Stop Shopping Choir, and the popular kid's band Audrarox

Susan Hwang
http://www.myspace.com/susanhwang

Susan Hwang plays accordion and writes songs about zombies, books, books about zombies, parking, and her mother. She plays in accordion/ drum/cello power trio The Debutante Hour and contributes to and hosts The Bushwick Book Club.

Eric Lipper
http://www.myspace.com/ericlipper

Eric Lipper, from Rockland County, has played every corner of NYS over the past 5 years, with his folk/R'n'R group, The Tweedlers. He has also played with oldies legends, The Platters, & Bobby Lewis.

Christine "Sharky" Murray

Christine "Sharky" Murray formerly of the bands Bionic Finger and Pantsuit is happy to come out of musical hibernation to play some of her favorite Blake Babies songs.

Julie Patton
http://home.jps.net/~nada/patton.htm

Julie Patton is the author of Teething on Type (Rodent Press). She has published poems in Transfer, Tribes, and other magazines, and in Aloud: Voices from the Nuyorican Poets Cafe (Collier Books). Her articles and essays appear in Educating the Imagination: Essays & Ideas for Teachers & Writers (T&W), and in Teachers & Writers. In 1993 she received the New York City Arts in Education Sustained Achievement Award in Literary Arts. She has performed her work at the New York Shakespeare Festival, the Nuyorican Poets' Cafe, the Whitney Museum, Houston's Center for Art and Performance, and Cleveland Public Theatre's International Sonic Disturbance Festival.

Kristin Prevallet
http://www.kayvallet.com/

Kristin Prevallet is a poet and essayist whose most recent essay, "We Sit Like Hot Stones: The Performance of Mourning," will appear in The Brooklyn Rail next month. She edited A Helen Adam Reader and is the author, most recently, of I, Afterlife: Essay in Mourning Time. She lives in Greenpoint.

Randi Russo
http://www.randirusso.com

As a southpaw who plays her guitar upside-down and backwards, New Yorker Randi Russo plays with an attack that gives her "infectious riffs" (Skyscraper Magazine) extra ferocity. Her bruised vocals, along with her "honest, provocative lyrics" (The Big Takeover), have led to comparisons to luminaries such Patti Smith and Lou Reed.

Schwervon!
http://myspace.com/schwervon
http://www.schwervon.com

Schwervon! is Matt Roth (guitar) and Nan Turner (drums). They are a duo on stage and in life, sharing an apartment in the lower east side of NYC with their cat Gummo. Their music is a celebration of imperfect love through jagged rock minimalism. Schwervon!'s albums are released in the US on Olive Juice Music, in the UK on Shoeshine Records, and in Germany on Haute Areal and Sitzer Records. They were DIY long before it was a marketing strategy, mixing and recording the bulk of their music in their cramped Manhattan apartment.

Nathaniel Siegel
http://yoyolabs.com/siegel.html

Nathaniel Siegel is a poet and artist. His first book, Tony, is published by Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs. The answer is always Yes ! Love...

The Trouble Dolls
http://www.troubledolls.com/a/http://www.myspace.com/troubledolls

The Trouble Dolls are a pop band from Brooklyn. The Trouble Dolls are Cheri, Matty, Chris and sometimes Pam. The Trouble Dolls do not smoke. The Trouble Dolls will release their second album, The Tiniest Entertainers in the World, in 2010. The Trouble Dolls' first album, Sticky, is available in finer used CD stores everywhere.

Yoko Kikuchi & Sara Lautman
http://www.myspace.com/yokokikuchi http://www.myspace.com/saralautman

Yoko and Sara met as two/thirds of the noisy indie-pop band Lady Bright. The two of them now enjoy living in opposite corners of Brooklyn and plotting their next musical endeavor, which may involve a mystery member or few, depending on the circumstances.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

358. Lars Palm
two new ungovernable books
Sun 31 Jan 2010

Dear all,

ungovernable press is in a flurry of activity at the moment. today i'm delighted to bring you

"Tie One On" (in 2 parts) by Alex Gildzen

&

"Traveling with Virginia Woolf" by Kristina Marie Darling

cheers,
lars

http://ungovernablepress.weebly.com

http://mischievoice.blogspot.com

↑ Index

359. Steensen,Sasha
Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jan 2010 to 30 Jan 2010 (#2010-29)
Sun 31 Jan 2010

If anyone has e-mail address for the following folks, I'd appreciate it if you would please backchannel:

Joshua Beckman
Lisa Robertson
Bernadette Mayer

Thanks,
Sasha

↑ Index

360. Mark Young
Issue sixteen of Otoliths has gone live
Sun 31 Jan 2010

Otoliths <http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/> rounds out its fourth year with another issue that maintains the journal's reputation for excellent offerings across a variety of disciplines & styles. Included in issue sixteen, the southern summer 2010 issue, is work from Thomas Fink, Satu Kaikkonen, Nate Pritts, Jane A. Lewty, Craig Foltz, Michael Basinski, Stephen C. Middleton, Márton Koppány, Arpine Konyalian Grenier, Raymond Farr, Jeff Crouch & Sheila E.

Murphy, Joel Chace, Caleb Puckett, Philip Byron Oakes, Ed Baker, Tom Beckett interviewing William Allegrezza, William Allegrezza, dan raphael, Alyson Torns, Jeff Harrison, Grzegorz Wróblewski, Michele Leggott, PD Mallamo, Ray Craig, Mark Cunningham, Cecelia Chapman, David-Baptiste Chirot, Vernon Frazer, Helen White & Jeff Crouch, James Yeary, Robert Lee Brewer, Michael Brandonisio, J. D. Nelson, Scott Metz, Geof Huth, Corey Wakeling, John M. Bennett & Thomas M. Cassidy, Sheila E. Murphy & John M. Bennett, John M. Bennett, Rebecca Mertz, Felino Soriano, Cath Vidler, David Wolach, Carlyle Baker, Stu Hatton, Jenny Enochsson, Robert Gauldie, Rebecca Eddy, Joe Balaz, Bobbi Lurie, Andrew Topel & Márton Koppány, Hugh Tribbey, John Martone, J. Gordon Faylor, Evan Harrison, A. J. Patrick Liszkiewicz, Bob Heman, Guillermo Castro, & sean burn.

Enjoy.

Mark Young

↑ Index

361. Camille Martin
new at Rogue Embryo
Sun 31 Jan 2010

New on my blog:

* Sonnets is now available! Read its first review . . .

* Fat Tuesday, Krewe of St. Anne: A Photo Essay

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.ca

↑ Index

362. Bill Berkson
Berkson in Portland & Seattle
Sun 31 Jan 2010

Bill Berkson in Portland & Seattle
Readings & Lectures

PORTLAND
February 21: Poetry Reading, Spare Room Series, Concordia Coffee House , 2909 NE Alberta St, 7:30 pm

February 22: Poetry Reading, Eliot Hall, Room 314, Reed College, 6:30

March 6: About Philip Guston, Conversation with Rob Slifkin, The Back Room, Reed College Art Gallery, 6:30 pm

SEATTLE
February 24: Poetry Reading. University of Washington, Bothell, Library Room 205, 18115 Campus Way NE, 2 pm

February 25: Poetry Reading & Book Signing, Henry Art Gallery Auditorium, 15th Ave NE & NE 41st St, 7 pm

↑ Index

363. Cheryl Pallant
Re: not quite ekphraic
Sun 31 Jan 2010

As a poet who draws greatly from my dance background, I sometimes use the word somapoetics. Soma and somatics draw from an internal sense of motion, not from watching it on stage.

Cheryl Pallant

_____
www.cherylpallant.com
1/29/2010 11:19 AM, Mark Weiss wrote:
> terpsicophrastic?
>
> At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:
>> Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to >> contemporary >> dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word,
>> 'ekprasic',
>> for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry >> written in response to the art of movement?
>>
>> John Herbert Cunningham
>>
>>
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University
> of California Press).

> http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
>

↑ Index

364. patrick dunagan
Re: John Wieners criticism
Sun 31 Jan 2010

NEGATIVE CAPABILITY IN THE VERSE OF JOHN WIENERS by Micah Ballard
Auguste Press, 2001 http://www.augustepress.com/

On 29 January 2010 12:00, Robert Dewhurst <[redacted]> wrote:

> I am preparing a critical bibliography for John Wieners. If you're aware of any texts -- from the peer-reviewed academic article, to send-ups by friends in ephemeral small magazines -- can you please back-channel citations? I am aware of a few things (by Andrea Brady, Bruce Andrews), but would like to be as comprehensive as possible.
>
> Thanks,
> Robert Dewhurst

↑ Index

365. Eric Elshtain
New Beard of Bees Chapbook
Sun 31 Jan 2010

Keep Right on Playing Through the Mirror Over the Water is Sean Singer's second Beard of Bees chapbook,

Please regard it here:

http://www.beardofbees.com/singer.html

As ever, Beard of Bees chapbooks are free.

Thanks,

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

366. Catherine Daly
san francisco poetry contest
Sun 31 Jan 2010

POETS 11 2010

CITY-WIDE POETRY CONTEST NOW ACCEPTING SUBMISSIONS!

SAN FRANCISCO, CA – San Francisco poets, get your pens—Friends of the San Francisco Public Library and their Poet-in-Residence Jack Hirschman<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Jack_Hirschman>, together with the San Francisco Public Library are pleased to announce Poets 11 2010. This citywide poetry contest and reading series collects poems from every neighborhood and features poetry readings at branch libraries in each of the City's 11 districts.

Submissions will be accepted January 1, 2010 through March 1, 2010.

Local poets are encouraged to submit up to three poems. Poetry is chosen by Hirschman and selected poets are announced at each of the branch events. All types of poetry are accepted. Writings which reflect San Francisco's diversity of language and culture and those written in languages other than English are highly encouraged.

Selected poets will be presented with a $50 honorarium and their poems will be published in an anthology. Now in its third year, Poets 11 celebrates San Francisco's rich literary life and thriving poetry community.

Beginning in March, selected poets will take the microphone and share their works in a variety of languages and topics. Eleven events will take place at branch libraries, concluding with a final event featuring all participating poets at the Main Library's Koret Auditorium on May 8th.

Submission Guidelines

• Must be 18 or over to participate.
• Must reside in one of San Francisco's 11 Districts. For information on city districts, visit sfbos.org.
• Submissions must include a return address, email or phone number and district number for response.
• Poets can submit up to three poems
• Submit by email to [redacted], drop off at any branch library or by regular mail to:

Poets 11
Book Bay Fort Mason
Fort Mason Center, Bldg. C
San Francisco, Ca 94123

For more information or to download the submission form, please visit friendssfpl.org <http://www.friendssfpl.org/> or call [redacted].

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

February 2010

213 messages · Sun 31 Jan 2010 – Sun 28 Feb 2010

February 2010 was a thin, cold file — two hundred and thirteen messages — and it spent much of its quiet mourning a poet of the new media and arguing, in the old way, about the difficult and the confessional. The room was small that month, its attention scattered across a memorial, a handful of craft questions, and the standing quarrel over whether the poem should be a made object or a wound made public. It reads like a winter afternoon in a half-empty room, a few voices keeping the lights on.

The month's tenderest thread was an act of keeping. Millie Niss, a poet who had worked at the frontier of digital and visual writing, had died the previous autumn, and her mother gathered a remembrance — "111 photos of Millie from birth till shortly before her death on November 29" — posted with a friend's tribute on a visual-poetry site. It was mourning in the exact medium Niss had lived in, the new-media poet remembered through images on a screen, the commons doing its oldest work, keeping a lost maker present, in its newest form.

The quarrel was the perennial one, dressed in a specific name. John Wieners drew a run of threads — the Boston poet of raw, confessional, gorgeously vulnerable verse — and the room argued what his kind of nakedness was worth against the era's cooler, more constructed modes, one thread wryly asking what Wieners had done now, as though the dead poet were still misbehaving. Beside it, a thread pitting Beckett against a contemporary experimentalist staged the same contest in the abstract: the stripped confession against the built machine.

The rest was small and technical — queries on ekphrasis and the poem that answers a picture, a question for publishers, the room tending its craft in the cold — and even the outside world entered only as the season's distraction, a thread on the confusion of the Winter Olympics. It was a month with little heat in it, a handful of the faithful trading small questions across a nearly empty room, holding its ground until the year warmed and the traffic returned.

I have set February down exactly as the archive delivered it — the digital poet mourned in images, the argument over Wieners and the naked confessional poem, and the quiet craft talk of a cold half-empty room — because it was one of the thinnest months in the run, and thinness has its own truth to tell. A commons that, reduced to two hundred voices in the dead of winter, will still stop to gather a lost poet's photographs and still argue whether the confessional or the constructed poem holds more, is a commons running on its embers and refusing to go out — keeping the memorial and the quarrel both alive until the traffic, and the year, came back.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 213 in all.

WRITERS

., Maryrose 168
Alexander, Charles 53, 106
AND, mIEKAL 5, 150, 160
Andrews, Jim 15, 20, 68, 109, 191
Ballardini, Anny 170, 177
Baraban, Stephen 26
Benson, Cara 155, 185
Berkson, Bill 130
Bernstein, Charles 213
Black, Sheila 190
Bloch, Julia 195
Bogle, Ann 100
Bowering, George 28, 122, 134, 140, 151, 178, 205
Bo¾ièeviæ, Ana 45
Byrne, Mairead 115
Calabrese, Rosalie 209
Carr, Emily 186
Cheek, Cris 8
Chirot, David 7, 36, 187
Clay, Steve 41
Clements, Brian 148, 164
Cobb, Allison 70
Conrad, CA 34, 66, 73, 105, 208
Dalachinsky, Steve 1, 12, 98, 144, 171, 181, 206
Daley, Ryan 11
Daly, Catherine 10, 13, 17, 161
Damon, Maria 6
Deed, Martha 83
Dewhurst, Robert 49
Dillon, Patrick 60
Dorf, Carol 102
DuCharme, Mark 80
Dunagan, Patrick 25
Earl, Amanda 63
Edgerton, Michael Tod 44
Ellis, Stephen 3, 4
Elshtain, Eric 59
Etter, Carrie 156, 169, 180, 198
Fieled, Adam 173
Al Filreis 37, 54
Fox, Skip 9
Frazer, Vernon 97
Gricevich, Andy 48
Hamilton, Robin 23
Heller, Michael 99, 103
Heman, Bob 67
Holsapple1 141
Howard, Scott 64, 128
Johnson, Halvard 50, 147
Joris, Pierre 56
Karavatos, Nicholas 38, 39, 42
Karmin, Jennifer 79, 127, 197
Katko, Justin 62
Killian, Kevin 193
Kimmelman, Burt 199
King, Amy 21, 29, 61, 76, 82, 89, 112, 126, 137, 145, 153, 159, 174, 175, 176, 183, 184, 200
Kirschenbaum, David 93, 107, 142, 212
Knight, Natalie 129
Konkol, Margaret 120
Larsen, Will 96
Law, Iris 125
Lepson, Ruth 16, 30, 113, 162
Levato, Francesco 35, 58
Levy, Herb 123, 139
LONSINGER, DAWN APRIL 179
Malek, Nathalie 131
Manson, Douglas 87, 136
Martin, Camille 84
Maurer, Susan 22, 40
Maverick, Jé 133
McLennan, Rob 91, 116, 119, 202
Meersman, Philip 149
Mir, Stan 31
Morse, Jonathan 65
Nasdor, Marc 74
Nelson, Paul 124, 138, 146, 154
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 43, 86
Nielsen, Aldon 207
Oha, Obododimma 189
Owens, Richard 14
Pallant, Cheryl 81
Peterson, Tim 121
Pinto, Regina 19, 108
Pritts, Nate 95
Project, Poetry 52, 101, 157, 158, 211
Quackenbush, Jason 204
Roznovschi, Mirela 90
Rumble, Ken 77
Russell, Steve 78, 165, 172, 188, 196, 201
Sarai, Sarah 24, 46, 88
Schlesinger, Kyle 75
School, Factory 72
Schultz, Susan Webster 69
Shankar, Ravi (English) 163
Side, Jeffrey 117, 167
Siegell, Paul 135, 192
Skinner, Jonathan 33
Slaughter, William 92

Stephenson, Ann 114
Stoddard, Rebecca 143
Sullivan, Gary 57, 104
Sweeney, Chad 94
Tietz, Ward 210
Tranter, John 55
Vassilakis, Nico 203
Vidaver, Aaron 118
Vincent, Stephen 194
Weishaus, Joel 51, 110, 132
Weiss, Mark 2, 27, 47, 85, 152
Wetherington, Laura 166
Wilcox, Dan 111
Young, Mark 18, 32, 71, 182

NAMES MENTIONED

Abbot, Keith 132, 141
Adams, Robert 71, 202
Agre, Phil 11
Alexander, Jill 95
Alice, Mary 36, 91, 94, 157
Allegrezza, William 7, 71
Ambrose, Joe 121
Americans, Asian 105
Amerika, Mark 200
Anderson, Erik 80
Andre, Michael 52
Andrews, Bruce 3, 9, 14, 19, 25, 26, 108
Armantrout, Rae 193
Armstrong, Aaron 193
Arnold, Bob 36
Ashbery, John 213
Ashley, Renee 42
Atlanta, Mark P. 114, 200
Atwood, Margaret 94
Auster, Paul 119, 213
Austin, Geer 127, 141
Baker, Mary 7, 200
Balaz, Joe 7
Ballard, Micah 3, 9, 14, 26
Baraka, Amiri 158, 211
Baron, Todd 101
Bartlett, Jennifer 61
Barton, John 202
Basinski, Michael 7
Bates, Joe 33, 94
Baudelaire, Charles 62
Baxter, Ted 200
Beckett, Samuel 172, 188, 190, 196, 201, 206
Beckett, Tom 7, 199
Beckman, Joshua 203
Beer, John 203
Bellamy, Dodie 45, 121
Benjamin, Walter 21, 103
Bennett, John M. 7
Berkeley, Michael 75, 93, 168
Berlin, Irving 36, 45, 157
Bernstein, Emma 98, 121, 213
Berrigan, Anselm 52, 104
Berrigan, Eddie 87
Berrigan, Ted 41
Berryman, John 165
Bettridge, Joel 101
Bibbins, Mark 200
Biddinger, Mary 95
Birmingham, Jed 64
Blackburn, Paul 41
Blagg, Max 90
Blake, William 136, 141
Blaser, Robin 41, 194, 205
Blau, Rachel 37
Boat, Drunken 57, 159
Bohm, David 51
Bolton, John 163
Bonney, Sean 62
Bozicevic, Ana 159, 184
Brady, Andrea 3, 9, 14, 25, 193
Brady, Taylor 26, 75
Brainard, Joe 41
Brakhage, Stan 41
Brautigan, Richard 41
Brazil, David 19, 75, 108
Brennan, Karen 179, 186
Briggs, Matt 203
Bronk, William 103
Broughton, James 41
Brown, Brandon 75
Brown, Pam 54, 55
Brown, Rob 181
Bruno, Franklin 19, 52, 108
Bryant, Elizabeth 193, 200, 211
Bunting, Basil 41
Burgaud, Patrick 19, 108
Burke, Andrew 144, 152, 162, 164
Burnham, Clint 118
Burroughs, William S. 59, 60
Butor, Michel 41
Byron, Philip 7
Caesar, Little 41
Cafe, Poets 126, 183
Capen, Samuel P. 120
Carroll, Jim 52
Caruso, Fred 103
Carver, Jane 142
Cassidy, Brian 7, 202
Castro, Michael 7
Catullus 62
Cebula, Travis 80
Chace, Joel 7
Chang, Tina 163
Chapman, Cecelia 7
Cheney, Don 105
Chester, Jeff 80
Ciardi, John 142

Clark, Cheryl 41, 203
Clark, Tom 41
Clinton, Bill 126, 183
Colby, Todd 52
Cole, Sean 157, 212
Coleman, Jen 168
Coleman, Victor 168
Collis, Steve 118
Collom, Jack 87
Conrad, Tony 34, 37, 45, 66, 73, 105, 121, 203, 208
Cooper, Paula 95, 101
Corman, Roger 41
Corso, Gregory 41, 142
Coultas, Brenda 77
Creeley, Robert 9, 41
Croggon, Alison 42
Crosby, Harry 204
Crouch, Jeff 7
Cunningham, Mark 7
Cunningham, Michael 1, 2, 4, 12, 18, 77
Curley, Jon 103
Césaire, Aimé 56
Dahlberg, Edward 41
Darragh, Tina 211
Davis, Christopher 77
Davis, Martin 93
Dawson, Nancy 41, 56
Dennis, Michael 202
Derksen, Jeff 118
Detorie, Michelle 61
Dickey, Eric 181
Dickinson, Emily 99, 103
Dine, Jim 41
Dobran, Ryan 62
Donovan, Thom 75
Dorn, Edward 9, 41
Dumanis, Michael 200
Duncan, Andrew 9, 25, 41, 138, 140, 141, 146, 151, 154
Duncan, Robert 9, 41
Durand, Marcella 211
Durbin, Kate 61
Dworkin, Craig 179, 186
Edgar, Chris 36
Edmond, Murray 39
Eichhorn, Kate 45, 119, 121
Eigner, Larry 41
Eliot, Joe 130, 141
Elrick, Laura 195
England, Amy 62, 92, 187, 189, 200
Ernst, Max 10
Eshleman, Clayton 56
Ethan, Jeffrey 56
Evans, George 21
Farr, Raymond 7
Farr, Roger 118
Faulkner, Andrew 202
Felix, Joel 203
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 93
Ferrini, Henry 45
Fielding, Kent 41
Filreis, Alan 37, 54, 55
Finch, Peter 45
Fink, Thomas 7, 93
Firer, Susan 50
Fishman, Ellen 99, 103
Fishman, Lisa 48
Fletcher, Joe 184
Flynn, Albert 93
Foltz, Craig 7
Foreman, Richard 213
Forrest, Lisa 157, 211
Foster, Edward 24, 27, 28, 124, 141
Fox, Willard 9
France, Peter 19, 93, 108
Franco, Michael 19, 108
Friedlander, Ben 49
Friedlander, Lee 49, 62
Friedman, Dorothy 126, 183
Friedman, Thomas 90
Frost, Corey 21, 99
Fuhrman, Joanna 157
Gilbert, Roger 209
Gildzen, Alex 22, 40
Gillespie, William 21, 157, 211
Gilmore, Gary 93, 142
Ginsberg, Allen 41, 93
Gizzi, Michael 87
Godston, Daniel 79
Van Gogh 93
Goldsmith, Kenneth 36
Gordon, Ruth 7, 31, 44, 202
Greenstreet, Kate 119
Gregory, Jane 200
Grenier, Bob 7
Grimes, Henry 181
Guest, Barbara 84
Hall, Chase 33
Hall, Phil 202
Hamady, Walter 41
Hamill, Sam 124, 141
Hamilton, Diana 50, 57
Hansen, Jefferson 203
Haraway, Donna 69
Harper, Michael 142
Hart, Matt 142
Harvey, George 42
Hawkes, John 41
Hayes, Jared 79
Heames, Ian 62
Hejinian, Lyn 93
Heller, Joseph 45, 99, 103
Henderson, David 45, 197

Hennessey, Michael S. 54, 55
Henning, Barbara 106
Henriksen, Matt 142
Herbert, John 1, 2, 4, 12, 18
Herron, Patrick 77
Heuving, Jeanne 203
Hightower, Scott 21
Hikmet, Nazim 36
Hill, Lindsay 168
Hitchens, Christopher 78
Hollo, Anselm 41
Homer 32, 43
Horowitz, David 147
Horton, David 50
House, Poets 45, 87, 99
Howe, Ashley 159
Howe, Brian 159, 184
Hughes, Ted 50
Hunter, Carrie 126
Indiana, Gary 200
Jackson, Jesse 52, 197
Jameson, Fredric 79
Jarnot, Lisa 77
Jarvis, Simon 62
Javier, Paolo 101
Jenkins, Grant 81
Jenkins, Margaret 81
Johanson, Reg 118, 203
Johns, Jasper 172, 188, 190, 196, 201, 206
Johnson, Kent 77
Johnson, Thomas 41, 45, 48, 50, 99, 101, 103, 147, 181, 200
Jordan, June 181
Joron, Andrew 53, 106
Joseph, Safdie 77, 129, 141
Joyce, Trevor 84
Kalamaras, George 50
Kaplan, Josef 200
Kasimor, Mary 71
Katz, Adam 6, 16
Kelley, Jeff 39
Kelly, Paul 37, 54, 55, 195, 211
Kennedy, Kit 211
Kerouac, Jack 121
Kerry, John 195
Kilbride, Laura 62
Killebrew, Paul 203
Kimball, Jack 45, 121
Kirschenbaum, David A. 93, 107, 142
Klein, Naomi 203
Koethe, John 157
Kostelanetz, Richard 166
Kroetsch, Robert 91
Kyger, Joanne 41
Lang, Peter 103
Larkin, Maryrose 168
Larkin, Philip 168
Laughlin, James 94
Law, Iris A. 125, 141
Layton, Irving 41
Leggott, Michele 7
Levertov, Denise 41, 138, 140, 141, 146, 151, 154
Levinas, Emmanuel 129, 141
Levine, Jeffrey 203
Levitsky, Rachel 52
Levy, Andrew 106
Lewis, Susan 52
Liszkiewicz, Patrick 7
Logan, John 79
London, Frank 8, 20, 36, 156
Loney, Alan 106
Lowell, Amy 165, 172, 188, 190, 196, 201, 206
Lowell, Robert 165, 201
Lowenthal, Jessica 54, 55
Lurie, Bobbi 7, 41, 71
Madison, James 9, 48
Malina, Judith 183
Manery, Rob 202
Mangold, Sarah 168, 203
Manguso, Sarah 77
Manson, Peter 62
Marie, Julie 22, 40, 48, 181
Marsh, William 103
Martin, Carl 77
Martin, Chris 45, 126, 166, 183, 203, 211
Martin, Douglas A. 45, 126, 183
Martone, John 7
Marvin, Lee 200
Marx, Karl 42
Mason, Chris 50, 202
Massey, Karen 202
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 36
Mee, Don 203
Meltzer, David 38
Meredith, William 203
Merrill, Stuart 87, 142
Metz, Scott 7
Meyer, Tom 10, 197
Middleton, Christopher 7
Miller, Lee 90
Milne, Drew 119
Milton, John 195
Miriam, Erica 181
Mittenthal, Robert 106
Moore, Nathaniel G. 119
Moore, Nicholas 52, 67, 99
Moriarty, Laura 75
Morris, Tim 124, 141
Morton, Kathryn A. 142, 200
Mullen, Laura 95
Murfin, Ira S. 79
Murphy, Michelle 7, 193

Murphy, Ryan 193
Murphy, Sheila E. 7, 71
Myles, Eileen 45, 121
Nakayasu, Sawako 119
Nathanson, Tenney 106, 203
Nelson, Gale 7
Nelson, Paul E. 124, 138, 140, 141, 146, 151, 154
Nguyen, Hoa 87
Nicholson, Andy 118
Nicholson, Patricia 181
Niedecker, Lorine 99
Nielsen, Aldon L. 207
Niss, Millie 19, 68, 82, 83, 86, 89, 100, 108
Norman, Peter 81
Notley, Alice 106
Nowak, Mark 35
Nufer, Doug 203
Oliver, Laura 45, 92, 121
Olsen, Geoffrey 101
Olsen, Lance 179, 186
Olson, Charles 41, 45, 99
Olson, John 203
Oppen, George 99, 103
Oppenheimer, Joel 41
Ortiz, Travis 93
Owen, Catherine 119
Pacific, Asian 134, 138, 139, 140, 141, 146, 151, 154, 178
Padin, Clemente 19, 108
Paine, Thomas 193
Palattella, John 47, 85, 144, 152, 162, 164
Palm, Lars 199
Palmer, Michael 53, 106
Parker, Karl 181
Parker, William 181
Parkway, Neal 80
Patchen, Kenneth 136, 141
Patton, Julie 126, 183
Penfold, Margaret 19, 108
Perloff, Marjorie 213
Peters, Mark 203
Piccinnini, Douglas 184
Picot, Edward 19, 108
Pines, Paul 103
Pinsky, Robert 200
Place, Vanessa 197
Plath, Sylvia 165
Polkinhorn, Harry 101
Pound, Scott 99
Prevallet, Kristin 126, 183
Price, Brett 142
Di Prima, Diane 29, 30, 41, 45
Professor, Kelly 37, 207
Pryor, Richard 42
Puckett, Caleb 7
Purdy, James 119
Quasha, George 2, 4, 12
Randall, Karen 50, 77
Randall, Margaret 45
Rankine, Claudia 77
Rau, Christina 153
Rauschenberg, Robert 41
Raven, Francis 45
Raworth, Tom 41
Reagan, Nancy 42
Regan, Max 96, 98, 102, 121
Reiner, Chris 19, 108
Rexroth, Kenneth 124, 141
Richman, Jonathan 93
Rifkin, Libbie 167
Rilke, Rainer Maria 62
Rimbaud, Dee 71, 86
Robertson, Lisa 194, 205
Rodefer, Stephen 62
Roznoveanu, Mirela 90
Rubin, Michael 126
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 75
Sanchez, Jorge 93
Sanders, James 166
Sanders, Jay 110
Sappho 62
Saroyan, William 41
Scalapino, Leslie 106
Schapira, Kate 61, 70, 72, 73
Schelling, Andrew 80
Segal, Martin E. 45, 121
Selinger, Eric 101
Sexton, Anne 50, 165
Shakespeare, William 126, 183
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 90, 197, 211
Sherlock, Frank 34, 70, 72, 73
Sherman, Bill 41
Shipp, Matthew 181
Shively, Charles 3, 14, 26
Siegel, Nathaniel A. 126, 183
Silliman, Ron 26, 53, 74, 182, 190, 192, 201
Sillman, Ron 196, 201, 206
Simmons, Russell 203
Simon, Greg 36
Simone, Frank 70, 72, 73
Skillman, Judith 203
Sky, Tarpaulin 159
Slease, Marcus 77, 159
Smith, Tracy K. 52, 67, 142
Snyder, Gary 41
Snyder, Rick 6, 16, 104, 200
Spicer, Jack 37
Sprague, Jane 211
Stalling, Jonathan 106
Stanley, George 194, 205
Stanton, Rob 126, 183
Stebelton, Chuck 48
Stefans, Kim 33

Stein, Gertrude 136
Stein, Suzanne 75, 141, 169
Steinberg, Susan 200
Stengel, Jill 93
Stevens, Wallace 99
Strauss, Zoe 34
Strickland, Stephanie 61
Stroffolino, Chris 93
Sweeney, Jennifer K. 94
Szymaszek, Stacy 45, 121
Tabios, Eileen R. 93, 199
Taggart, John 77
Tankoos, Harry 33
Taylor, Justin 142
Texas, Irving 139, 178
Thomas, Dylan 7, 111
Thompson, Jon 127, 141, 202
Thomson, Stephen 211
Thorson, Maureen 184
Toal, Jefferson 62
Topel, Andrew 7
Toscano, Rodrigo 166
Touchon, Cecil 166
Townsend, Cheryl 124, 141, 200
Tribbey, Hugh 7
Tudor, David 90
Tufts, Kate 200
Turner, Brian 19, 108, 119
Tyler, Mary 202
Valentine, Jean 111
Valery, Paul 90
Vengua, Jean 199
Vermont, Charlie 200
Vidal, Pierre 78
Vincent, Gregory 52
Violi, Paul 142
Wakeling, Corey 7
Waldman, Anne 52, 106, 121
Waldrop, Rosemary 77
Waldrop, Rosmarie 213
Walker, Alice 90
Wallenstein, Barry 209
Walters, Wendy 157
Warren, Jim 75
Washington, Harold 8, 77, 124, 130, 141, 172, 188, 190, 196, 201, 206
Whalen, Philip 41
White, Helen 7
Whiting, John 200
Whitman, Walt 99
Wieners, John 3, 6, 9, 14, 16, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 41, 46, 49
Wilkinson, John 62
Williams, Jonathan 41
Williams, Tony 52, 77, 99
Williams, Tyrone 211
Williams, William Carlos 207
Wilson, Judith E. 62
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 52
Wolach, David 7, 203
Woolf, Virginia 22, 40
Wright, James 119, 165, 184, 195, 202
Yeary, James 7
Zapruder, Matthew 203
Zinnes, Harriet 50
Zolf, Rachel 129, 141, 194, 205
Zorn, John 213
Zukofsky, Louis 41, 99

CONCEPTS

9/11 64, 109, 128, 141, 175, 176, 213
Activism and protest 36, 45, 101, 105
Aesthetics 95, 99, 125, 141, 188, 190, 195, 196, 201, 206, 213
Afghanistan 105, 191, 194, 204, 205
African American poetry 45
Anthologies 13, 23, 32, 36, 43, 47, 52, 62, 85, 92, 93, 94, 96, 98, 101, 102, 103, 111, 114, 119, 142, 144, 152, 156, 157, 162, 164, 200, 209
Appropriation 5
Archives and libraries 8, 13, 29, 30, 36, 39, 41, 54, 55, 79, 81, 91, 94, 101, 119, 120, 124, 130, 141, 200
Autobiography 52, 99, 103, 175, 176, 200
Avant-garde 120, 121, 167
Beat generation 99
Beauty 95, 101
Biography 200
Black Mountain 99
Blogs 7, 14, 22, 24, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 34, 37, 40, 43, 50, 52, 54, 55, 56, 61, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 73, 74, 77, 78, 82, 83, 84, 86, 87, 91, 93, 95, 100, 105, 109, 112, 113, 115, 116, 118, 119, 121, 122, 123, 125, 126, 128, 133, 134, 135, 136, 138, 140, 141, 142, 145, 146, 147, 149, 151, 153, 154, 156, 158, 159, 160, 169, 170, 173, 174, 177, 180, 182, 183, 184, 187, 189, 192, 194, 195, 196, 198, 199, 200, 202, 205, 206, 207, 208, 211, 213
Book announcements 8, 38, 62, 67, 71, 73, 80, 91, 95, 126, 157, 193, 208, 211
Bookstores 91, 99, 103, 203
Calls for submissions 125, 141, 179, 186, 207
Capitalism 193
Censorship 65
Cities 21, 34, 45, 70, 72, 73, 101, 211, 213
Collage and montage 41
Conferences and festivals 36, 45, 52, 58, 103, 126, 129, 141, 142, 149, 183, 197, 202
Confessional poetry 165
Copyright and permissions 13, 129, 141
Creative writing pedagogy 45, 69, 121, 163

Dada 135, 141, 182, 192
Deconstruction 71
Digital archives 32, 43, 54, 55, 99, 103, 195
Disability 93, 200
Dreams 51, 52, 77, 193
Ecology and ecopoetics 87, 129, 141, 157, 211
Editing 13, 36, 166
Ekphrasis 18, 21, 23, 24, 27, 28, 32, 43, 93
Electronic poetry and hypertext 33, 121, 213
Elegy 21, 37, 213
Erasure 62, 64, 211
Ethics 187, 189
Experimental poetry 8
Feminism 42, 61, 121
Film 8, 20, 36, 42, 58, 126, 183, 188, 190, 196, 201, 206
Formalism 45
Gender 63
Globalization 106
Grants and funding 13, 81, 95, 114, 124, 126, 141, 142, 157, 183, 200
Harlem Renaissance 99
Humour and satire 52, 213
Ideology 42
Imagism 26
Improvisation 8
Interviews 3, 7, 14, 21, 26, 29, 30, 33, 44, 61, 73, 76, 82, 83, 93, 95, 105, 109, 117, 125, 126, 141, 167, 208
Israel and Palestine 187, 189
Language poetry 101, 213
Latino and Latin American poetry 101
Letters and correspondence 41, 68, 82, 83, 86
List moderation 45, 200
Little magazines 7, 9, 10, 14, 20, 45, 54, 55, 67, 71, 75, 80, 90, 92, 93, 101, 103, 105, 111, 119, 120, 125, 141, 142, 155, 157, 159, 166, 168, 179, 184, 185, 186, 195, 200, 202
Lyric poetry 56, 70, 72, 73, 93, 126, 157, 183, 200, 213
Memory 70, 72, 73, 90, 94, 106, 121
MFA programs 44, 45, 52, 80, 94, 125, 126, 141, 163, 183, 195, 200
Modernism 36, 54, 55, 96, 98, 99, 102
Mourning and loss 49, 126, 183, 194, 205
Multiculturalism 42
Music and poetry 31, 36, 37, 39, 44, 67, 79, 86, 93, 94, 99, 101, 103, 126, 136, 141, 142, 144, 162, 166, 171, 181, 207, 209
Nationalism 191, 194, 204, 205
Nature 20, 42, 71, 87, 88, 95, 121
Obituary and memorial 52
Objectivism 103
Ontology 129, 141, 158, 211
Performance and the poetry reading 39, 45, 48, 62, 67, 80, 93, 94, 111, 126, 130, 141, 142, 159, 168, 183, 200
Philosophy 51, 52, 80, 103, 157, 213
Place and region 70, 72, 73, 99, 101
Poet laureate 29, 30, 112, 113, 115, 119, 157, 213
Poetics 8, 9, 33, 41, 45, 54, 55, 75, 80, 87, 92, 93, 96, 98, 99, 101, 102, 103, 115, 119, 121, 125, 126, 141, 164, 187, 189, 200, 207
Poets Against the War 124, 141
Politics and poetry 38
Print vs. digital 5, 31, 34, 35, 44, 53, 66, 73, 95, 101, 105, 106, 167, 168, 170, 174, 177, 182, 185, 192, 208, 213
Prizes and awards 35, 45, 62, 93, 94, 95, 119, 121, 126, 129, 141, 142, 157, 183, 187, 189, 195, 197, 200, 209
Prose poem 185
Prosody and meter 10
Psychoanalysis 37
Queer poetics 45, 76, 105, 121, 126, 183, 200
Race and poetry 26
Reading announcements 62, 75, 103, 126, 159, 183
Religion and the sacred 2, 12, 42, 51, 79, 121, 124, 141, 202
Representation 128, 141
Reviewing and criticism 3, 6, 9, 14, 16, 21, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 42, 46, 49, 50, 52, 53, 54, 55, 62, 69, 74, 77, 79, 80, 88, 90, 91, 93, 94, 99, 103, 119, 121, 125, 126, 141, 157, 179, 183, 186, 200, 213
Revision 110
Serial poem 93, 136, 141, 195
Small press publishing 1, 18, 45, 49, 52, 57, 70, 72, 73, 80, 87, 91, 93, 95, 101, 104, 106, 107, 116, 119, 120, 121, 134, 138, 140, 141, 142, 146, 151, 154, 157, 159, 168, 193, 195, 199, 202, 211
Social media 36, 74, 79, 93, 142, 149, 206
Software and code 13, 20, 64, 195
Sonnet 95, 119, 147, 186
Subjectivity 20, 42, 126, 129, 183
Surrealism 36, 79
Terrorism 105
The academy 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, 12, 14, 18, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 37, 38, 39, 42, 44, 45, 47, 52, 54, 55, 65, 66, 80, 81, 85, 91, 93, 94, 96, 98, 99, 101, 102, 103, 114, 115, 119, 121, 125, 129, 130, 136, 141, 142, 144, 152, 157, 162, 163, 164, 167, 179, 186, 187, 189, 195, 200, 207, 211
The body 129, 141
The internet 37, 54, 55, 64, 110, 212
The Iraq war 105, 157, 211
The listserv 13, 42, 52, 101, 141, 157, 191, 194, 199, 200, 204, 205, 211

Theatre 18, 23, 32, 36, 39, 43, 45, 62, 121, 126, 157, 158, 163, 181, 183, 195, 211
Translation 13, 36, 42, 56, 62, 85, 86, 90, 93, 95, 101, 103, 125, 126, 141, 183, 199
Visual and concrete poetry 10, 20, 68, 82, 83, 86, 89, 93, 109, 135, 141, 165, 172, 182, 188, 190, 191, 192, 194, 196, 201, 204, 205, 206
Visual art 1, 2, 4, 10, 12, 18, 23, 24, 27, 28, 32, 36, 41, 43, 52, 80, 93, 103, 114, 124, 125, 130, 141, 142, 168, 172, 182, 188, 190, 192, 196, 200, 201, 206, 210
Women's writing 156

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 213 in all.

31 JAN 2010

1. steve dalachinsky — Re: not quite ekphraic
2. Mark Weiss — Re: not quite ekphraic
3. Stephen Ellis — Re: John Wieners criticism
4. Stephen Ellis — Re: not quite ekphraic
5. mIEKAL aND — Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
6. Maria Damon — Re: John Wieners criticism

1 FEB 2010

7. David Chirot — Issue sixteen of Otoliths has gone live
8. cris cheek — 2 nights in Seattle
9. Skip Fox — Re: John Wieners criticism
10. Catherine Daly — 291 magazine, the modern gallery, Agnes Ernst Meter / Marius de Zayas Coll...
11. Ryan Daley — Phil Agre
12. steve dalachinsky — Re: not quite ekphraic
13. Catherine Daly — Fwd: Job Posting: Senior Editor/Literary Programs Manager at TWO LINES
14. richard owens — Re: John Wieners criticism
15. Jim Andrews — Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
16. Ruth Lepson — Re: John Wieners criticism
17. Catherine Daly — Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
18. Mark Young — Re: not quite ekphraic

2 FEB 2010

19. Regina Pinto — Project "AlphaAlpha" is almost ready! More collaborations are on line!
20. Jim Andrews — transformation is part of the 'meaning' of animated transition between stills
21. amy king — Fogged Clarity -- February 2010
22. susan maurer — Re: two new ungovernable books
23. Robin Hamilton — Re: not quite ekphraic
24. Sarah Sarai — What did John Wieners do now? Was he ekphratic?
25. patrick dunagan — Re: John Wieners criticism
26. Stephen Baraban — Wieners
27. Mark Weiss — Re: What did John Wieners do now? Was he ekphratic?
28. George Bowering — Re: What did John Wieners do now? Was he ekphratic?
29. amy king — New San Fran Poet Laureate - Diane di Prima! Tonight, inaugural address...
30. Ruth Lepson — Re: New San Fran Poet Laureate - Diane di Prima! Tonight, inaugural address....
31. Stan Mir — Subito Press Publication Announcement - Song & Glass - Stan Mir
32. Mark Young — Re: not quite ekphraic
33. Jonathan Skinner — Brian Kim Stefans in Maine
34. CA Conrad — THIS Wednesday: CAConrad, Frank Sherlock, and Zoe Strauss
35. Francesco Levato — Poetry Center of Chicago: Juried Reading Contest Deadline Extended

3 FEB 2010

36. David Chirot — Nazim Hikmet, Great Turkish poet/activist inspires "Journeys With No Return"
37. Al Filreis — episode 28 of PoemTalk (on Jack Spicer) released today
38. Nicholas Karavatos — No Asylum - New Book by Nicholas Karavatos
39. Nicholas Karavatos — AUDIO LINK - An inter-media spoken word performance celebrating the pu...
40. susan maurer — Re: two new ungovernable books
41. Steve Clay — Selections from the Library of Robert Creeley of Interest to Literary and Art ...
42. Nicholas Karavatos — Re: response to David

43. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: not quite ekphraic
44. Michael Tod Edgerton — Re: Subito Press Publication Announcement - Song & Glass - Stan Mir
45. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ — Spring 2010 Poetry Programs: Annual Chapbook Festival & more!
46. Sarah Sarai — Re: What did John Wieners do now? Was he ekphratic?
47. Mark Weiss — query
48. Andy Gricevich — New Poetry Series in Madison Starts Friday!
49. Robert Dewhurst — Re: John Wieners criticism

4 FEB 2010

50. Halvard Johnson — Hamilton Stone Review #20 now online
51. Joel Weishaus — "The Gateless Gate-New Series" Pgs 31-40
52. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project
53. charles alexander — Kaya Oakes gets it right
54. Al Filreis — Jacket: an announcement from John Tranter & Al Filreis
55. John Tranter — Jacket magazine: An Announcement from John Tranter and Al Filreis

5 FEB 2010

56. Pierre Joris — Recent NOMADICS blog posts
57. Gary Sullivan — DIANA HAMILTON & DIVYA VICTOR @ SEGUE
58. Francesco Levato — Split This Rock - Poetry Film Deadline Extended to Feb. 26th
59. Eric Elshtain — Burroughs Homage at Gnoetry Daily
60. Patrick Dillon — Re: Burroughs Homage at Gnoetry Daily

6 FEB 2010

61. amy king — This Is What a [Feminist] Poet Looks Like
62. Justin Katko — RODEFER & LISETTE: Friday 12 Feb, Cambridge (England)
63. Amanda Earl — Women and Gendered Writing-latest essay from AHP
64. Scott Howard — RECONFIGURATIONS, Vol. 3: special features (3 of 4)
65. Jonathan Morse — Criticizing censorship while cowering from the censors 66. CA Conrad — CAConrad & Vladimir Zykov @ Temple University

7 FEB 2010

67. Bob Heman — i'll be featuring this saturday, Feb. 13, at Small's + collages in the new Oto…
68. Jim Andrews — Millie Niss

8 FEB 2010

69. Susan Webster Schultz — recent postings on Tinfish Editor's Blog
70. Allison Cobb — Fwd: New from Factory School
71. Mark Young — Out from Otoliths—Mary Kasimor's new book, & cruel red
72. Factory School — New from Factory School
73. CA Conrad — City Real & Imagined

9 FEB 2010

74. Marc Nasdor — Review of "Sonnetailia" by Marc Nasdor on Ron Silliman's blog
75. Kyle Schlesinger — Reading at Mills (02.09) and ON launch at Moe's Books (02.10)
76. amy king — The "What Else" of Queer Poetry
77. Ken Rumble — Desert City Poetry Series Readings...
78. steve russell — Nafeez Ahmed responds to Hitchens, defends Gore Vidal
79. Jennifer Karmin — Feb 12: The New Tentacle in Chicago
80. Mark DuCharme — Stratford Park Reading Series: CHESTER, CEBULA & OPRIS, February 23rd
81. Cheryl Pallant — Jenkins & Pallant reading, collaboration discussion
82. amy king — Re: Millie Niss
83. Martha Deed — Re: Millie Niss
84. Camille Martin — new at Rogue Embryo
85. Mark Weiss — The Whole Island, Reading

10 FEB 2010

86. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Millie Niss
87. Douglas Manson — Chapbook by Jonathan Skinner
88. Sarah Sarai — New review of my book on Ghoti Mag.
89. amy king — Re: Millie Niss
90. Mirela Roznovschi — Tribute to Max Blecher at Salmagundi
91. Rob McLennan — new poetry collection; wild horses, University of Alberta Press;
92. William Slaughter — Notice: Mudlark
93. David Kirschenbaum — Save the Date: Boog in San Francisco, 3/17

11 FEB 2010

94. Chad Sweeney — Jennifer and Chad Sweeney read in Pittsburgh, Maryland, West Virginia
95. Nate Pritts — the saddest story I know
96. Will Larsen — Reminder: Charles Bernstein reading THIS SUNDAY -- corrected location!
97. Vernon Frazer — BODIED TONE by Vernon FRazer
98. steve dalachinsky — Re: Reminder: Charles Bernstein reading THIS SUNDAY -- corrected locati…
99. Michael Heller — Fwd: Modern Poetry Seminar
100. Ann Bogle — Re: Millie Niss
101. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project
102. carol dorf — Re: Reminder: Charles Bernstein reading THIS SUNDAY -- corrected location!

12 FEB 2010

103. Michael Heller — Fwd: Curley, Heller, Kimmelman and Pines Reading on February 22nd
104. Gary Sullivan — BERRIGAN & SNYDER | SEGUE

13 FEB 2010

105. CA Conrad — Choi's "the terrorists"
106. charles alexander — Support Your Favorite Author & Book!

14 FEB 2010

107. David Kirschenbaum — Last Call to Advertise in Boog City 62
108. Regina Pinto — Project "AlphaAlpha": More 5 collaborations are on line!
109. Jim Andrews — poemicstrip interview
110. Joel Weishaus — "The Gateless Gate-New Series" Pages 41-50
111. Dan Wilcox — Third Thursday Poetry Night, Feb. 18 -- Victoria Rivas
112. amy king — Lucille Clifton dies at 73 -- June 27, 1936 – February 13, 2010
113. Ruth Lepson — Re: Lucille Clifton dies at 73 -- June 27, 1936 February 13, 2010

15 FEB 2010

114. Ann Stephenson — READY SET READINGS at Whitespace Gallery /// Atlanta
115. Mairead Byrne — Re: Lucille Clifton dies at 73 -- June 27, 1936 February 13, 2010
116. Rob McLennan — question,
117. Jeffrey Side — John Tranter interview and poems at The Argotist Online
118. Aaron Vidaver — Short Range Poetic Device (Vancouver)
119. Rob McLennan — new(ish) on rob's clever blog
120. Margaret Konkol — Wednesday February 17: Ronan Crowley S M A L L P R E S S in the A R C H I…

16 FEB 2010

121. Tim Peterson — TENDENCIES 2/24: Oliver, Eichhorn, & Bernstein
122. George Bowering — Re: question,
123. Herb Levy — Re: question,
124. Paul Nelson — Making Kage-an an Artists Retreat Center
125. Iris Law — Call for Submissions: LANTERN REVIEW (New Poetry Magazine)
126. amy king — Fwd: Poets at The Living Theatre: Douglas A. Martin, Julie Patton, Kristin Preva…
127. Jennifer Karmin — Feb 18: Haiti Benefit in Chicago

128. Scott Howard — RECONFIGURATIONS, Vol. 3: special features (4 of 4)

17 FEB 2010

129. Natalie Knight — CFP: Turning on Rights: Politics, Performance and the Text SUNY Albany Apr...
130. Bill Berkson — Portland & Seattle
131. Nathalie Malek — Job Posting - Hudson Valley Writers' Center
132. Joel Weishaus — Keith Abbot
133. Jé Maverick — Re: question,
134. George Bowering — Re: question,
135. Paul Siegell — "Go G / et 'er / tiGer"
136. Douglas Manson — free long poem by Douglas Manson
137. amy king — Please Help - Poet Question
138. Paul Nelson — Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
139. Herb Levy — Re: question,

18 FEB 2010

140. George Bowering — Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
141. holsapple1 — Re: POETICS Digest - 16 Feb 2010 to 17 Feb 2010 (#2010-45)
142. David Kirschenbaum — NYC, Tues./ Boog City presents Forklift, Ohio and Jane Carver
143. Rebecca Stoddard — caroline lamour
144. steve dalachinsky — Re: A Question for Publishers
145. amy king — Poet Question - Innovation ... Experimental...
146. Paul Nelson — Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
147. Halvard Johnson — The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye & Other Sonnets
148. Brian Clements — A Question for Publishers
149. Philip Meersman — BruSlam invitation: sunday 21/02 - Tristan and Claude Lammens - GalerY (V...
150. mIEKAL aND — Re: A Question for Publishers
151. George Bowering — Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
152. Mark Weiss — Re: A Question for Publishers
153. amy king — Help with AWP--panel--survey
154. Paul Nelson — Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
155. Cara Benson — Re: A Question for Publishers
156. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference: Other Poetries by UK Women Poets--sampler no. 1
157. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
158. Poetry Project — Benefit for Haiti
159. amy king — So and So - This Sat. Feb. 20th @ 8 p.m. -- Bozicevic, Howe, and King
160. mIEKAL aND — Re: Poet Question - Innovation ... Experimental...
161. Catherine Daly — Re: A Question for Publishers
162. Ruth Lepson — Re: A Question for Publishers

19 FEB 2010

163. Shankar, Ravi (English) — WANTED: THE BEST WRITERS FOR ASIA
164. Brian Clements — Re: A Question for Publishers
165. steve russell — Robert Lowell/Vispo
166. Laura Wetherington — Issue 8 of textsound journal available now
167. Jeffrey Side — Interviewer needed to interview Libbie Rifkin

20 FEB 2010

168. Maryrose . — Larkin, Hill and Coleman at 3 Friends Coffee House Monday
169. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference sampler no. 2

21 FEB 2010

170. Anny Ballardini — Re: caroline lamour
171. steve dalachinsky — Fw: matthew shipp gig
172. steve russell — S BECKETT vs. r sillman
173. Adam Fieled — Three Links: Apparition Poems

174. amy king — Re: caroline lamour
175. amy king — Asking for evermore help...
176. amy king — Re: Asking for evermore help...

22 FEB 2010

177. Anny Ballardini — Re: caroline lamour
178. George Bowering — Re: question,
179. DAWN APRIL LONSINGER — WHR Hybrid // Collaborative Issue Deadline Approaching
180. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference sampler no. 3
181. steve dalachinsky — dance music collas
182. Mark Young — Out from Otoliths—Paul Siegell's wild life rifle fire
183. amy king — POETS Douglas A Martin, Julie Patton, Kristin Prevallet, Nathaniel Siegel at THE...
184. amy king — New Issue of So and So Magazine
185. Cara Benson — (made) is made
186. Emily Carr — Re: WHR Hybrid // Collaborative Issue Deadline Approaching
187. David Chirot — Call for members-- A new network re Ethics of Journalism & academic Side of ...
188. steve russell — Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

23 FEB 2010

189. Obododimma Oha — Re: Call for members-- A new network re Ethics of Journalism & academic Si...
190. sheila black — Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
191. Jim Andrews — olympic confusion
192. Paul Siegell — Re: Out from Otoliths—Paul Siegell's wild life rifle fire
193. Kevin Killian — New Books by Andrea Brady and Ryan Murphy from KRUPSKAYA
194. Stephen Vincent — Re: olympic confusion
195. julia bloch — March 3: Jaramillo, Elrick, Neuman
196. steve russell — Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
197. Jennifer Karmin — March 2-4: Lake Forest Literary Festival

24 FEB 2010

198. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference sampler no. 4
199. Kimmelman, Burt — Hay(na)ku for Haiti - Meritage Press Announcement
200. amy king — WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) @ The New School - Monday, March 1st ...
201. steve russell — Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
202. Rob McLennan — ottawater #6 now on-line
203. Nico Vassilakis — pOeTs/mArCh/sEaTlE
204. Jason Quackenbush — Re: olympic confusion
205. George Bowering — Re: olympic confusion

25 FEB 2010

206. steve dalachinsky — event for tuli kupferberg
207. Aldon Nielsen — MLA Call for Papers - Jazz and Poetry
208. CA Conrad — snowball martinis instead...
209. Rosalie Calabrese — Rosalie's Poetry Update
210. Ward Tietz — Ward Tietz at Paper Kite Press Studio & Gallery, February 27th
211. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
212. David Kirschenbaum — This Sun. NYC/ In Verse Poetry, Photography and Radio

28 FEB 2010

213. Charles Bernstein — All the Whiskey in Heaven: Selected Poems from FSG

1. steve dalachinsky

Re: not quite ekphraic

Sun 31 Jan 2010

---

i have written many poems to pain tings
my latest chapbook consists of 17 poems written after the insomnia drawings of louise bourgeois in fact the word which i never spell wright applies only to poems written for or related to painting
more precisely visual art so sculpture can be included tho more specifically painting

On Sun, 31 Jan 2010 13:17:27 -0600 Cheryl Pallant <[redacted]>
writes:
> As a poet who draws greatly from my dance background, I sometimes use
>
> the word somapoetics. Soma and somatics draw from an internal sense
> of > motion, not from watching it on stage.
>
> Cheryl Pallant
> _____
> www.cherylpallant.com
> 1/29/2010 11:19 AM, Mark Weiss wrote:
> > terpsicophrastic?
> >
> > At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:
> >> Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to > >> contemporary > >> dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word,
> >> 'ekprasic',
> >> for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for > poetry
> >> written in response to the art of movement?
> >>
> >> John Herbert Cunningham
> >>
> >>
>
> >
> > Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry > (University > > of California Press).

> > http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

2. Mark Weiss
Re: not quite ekphraic
Sun 31 Jan 2010

Somapoetics is the name of a book by George Quasha. The soma in question is a hallucinogen mentioned in Hindu religious texts and often identified with peyote or magic mushrooms. Somatopoetics would avoid the confusion and also I think be more linguistically correct.

Best,

Mark

At 02:17 PM 1/31/2010, you wrote:
>As a poet who draws greatly from my dance background, I sometimes >use the word somapoetics. Soma and somatics draw from an internal >sense of motion, not from watching it on stage.
>
>Cheryl Pallant
>_____
>www.cherylpallant.com
>1/29/2010 11:19 AM, Mark Weiss wrote:
>>terpsicophrastic?
>>
>>At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:
>>>Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary >>>dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', >>>for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry >>>written in response to the art of movement?
>>>
>>>John Herbert Cunningham
>>>
>>>
>>
>>Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry

>>(University of California Press).
>>http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
>>
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

3. Stephen Ellis
Re: John Wieners criticism
Sun 31 Jan 2010

Yeah, I'd forgotten about Micah's book . . . it's very good. Well, it's actually not about John, it's more about Micah's idea of negative capability in poetry citing John occasionally to proof his concepts. Micah's concepts, not John's. Did John have concepts? Possibly. Robert von Hallberg's interview questions made it seem so in 1973. But John's conversational epics with Charles Shively in that year and in 1977 constitute intersecting frames of reference, rather than concepts. Or, do intersecting frames of reference constitute "a concept"? God, I hope not. I want "sex" to be spelled with just three letters, as always, like "god". Leave the four-letter words to contemporary bean eaters. Or steamers of rice. My partner and I will be ozzing behind a peach-colored curtain draped from a tin awning. The heat here is terrible. Call me when it's done.

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

> Date: Sun, 31 Jan 2010 12:23:39 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: John Wieners criticism
> To: [redacted]
>
> NEGATIVE CAPABILITY IN THE VERSE OF JOHN WIENERS by Micah Ballard
> Auguste Press, 2001 http://www.augustepress.com/
>
> On 29 January 2010 12:00, Robert Dewhurst <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I am preparing a critical bibliography for John Wieners. If you're aware of any texts -- from the peer-reviewed academic article, to send-ups by friends in ephemeral small magazines -- can you please back-channel citations? I am aware of a few things (by Andrea Brady, Bruce Andrews), but would like to be as comprehensive as possible.
>
> Thanks,

> Robert Dewhurst

↑ Index

4. Stephen Ellis
Re: not quite ekphraic
Sun 31 Jan 2010

George Quasha has published an entire book called "Somapoetics."

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

> Date: Sun, 31 Jan 2010 13:17:27 -0600
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: not quite ekphraic
> To: [redacted]
>
> As a poet who draws greatly from my dance background, I sometimes use the word somapoetics. Soma and somatics draw from an internal sense of motion, not from watching it on stage.
>
> Cheryl Pallant
>
> _____
> www.cherylpallant.com
> 1/29/2010 11:19 AM, Mark Weiss wrote:
> terpsicophrastic?
>
> At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:
> Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary
> dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', > for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry written in response to the art of movement?
>
> John Herbert Cunningham
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
> http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

5. mIEKAL aND

Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.

Sun 31 Jan 2010

It'll be interesting to see how iPad & other tablets make a stab at replacing books in a few important ways. I have to say if a student can carry all of his textbooks for the year on one large handheld device that hopefully is optimized for reading, I'm interested. But it's sure taken a long time for tablets-devices to be ready for the masses.

~mIEKAL

On Jan 30, 2010, at 6:44 PM, Jim Andrews wrote:

> Depends what you mean by reading. I get the feeling with ebooks that scanning might be a more appropriate concept & I think there is a lot scanning going on.
>
> Yes, probably so.
>
> It's difficult to pay much attention to them when their media manifestation is resistant to it. And scribd is a cluttered interface full of ads. At least there's a 'fullscreen' option.
>
> Personally I'm not able to read more than 4 or 5 pages of text in a row on the screen before my eyes go buggy.
>
> ~mIEKAL
>
> Yes, it's just an uncomfortable thing.
>
> ja

=!=
Data Visualization for the Synaptically Inspired
http://filevillage.info

↑ Index

6. Maria Damon

Re: John Wieners criticism

Sun 31 Jan 2010

I had a similar experience. When i saw him in the hall outside the room in which the Boston Poetry Marathon was taking place, at which he was scheduled to read, I approached him and asked if he was John Wieners. "Yes I am," he said. I said, "It's an honor to meet you." He said, "Same here," and we shook hands. So sweet and kind.

Ruth Lepson wrote:
> the first time I met john wieners he asked, Are you a Medici?
> No? Did I meet you at Georgia O'Keefe's house? He was sweet & I was thrilled > bec I had loved his poetry; instead of my praising him, he complimented me.
>
>
> On 1130110 12:07 PM, "Adam Katz" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>
>> In the first of these
>>
>> http://home.jps.net/~nada/snyder.htm
>>
>> 3 poems by Rick Snyder,
>>
>> there is brief sendup of JW. Never having heard that name before, I went >> after it as a result.
>>
>> a
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

7. David Chirot

Issue sixteen of Otoliths has gone live

Mon 1 Feb 2010

Congratulations to Editor/poet/blogger Mark Young for another great issue--!!!

Otoliths <http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/> rounds out its fourth year with another issue that maintains the journal's reputation for excellent offerings across a variety of disciplines & styles. Included in issue sixteen, the southern summer 2010 issue, is work from Thomas Fink, Satu Kaikkonen, Nate Pritts, Jane A. Lewty, Craig Foltz, Michael Basinski, Stephen C. Middleton, Márton Koppány, Arpine Konyalian Grenier, Raymond Farr, Jeff Crouch & Sheila E. Murphy, Joel Chace, Caleb Puckett, Philip Byron Oakes, Ed Baker, Tom Beckett interviewing William Allegrezza, William Allegrezza, dan raphael, Alyson Torns,

Jeff Harrison, Grzegorz Wróblewski, Michele Leggott, PD Mallamo, Ray Craig, Mark Cunningham, Cecelia Chapman, David-Baptiste Chirot, Vernon Frazer, Helen White & Jeff Crouch, James Yeary, Robert Lee Brewer, Michael Brandonisio, J. D. Nelson, Scott Metz, Geof Huth, Corey Wakeling, John M. Bennett & Thomas M. Cassidy, Sheila E. Murphy & John M. Bennett, John M. Bennett, Rebecca Mertz, Felino Soriano, Cath Vidler, David Wolach, Carlyle Baker, Stu Hatton, Jenny Enochsson, Robert Gauldie, Rebecca Eddy, Joe Balaz, Bobbi Lurie, Andrew Topel & Márton Koppány, Hugh Tribbey, John Martone, J. Gordon Faylor, Evan Harrison, A. J. Patrick Liszkiewicz, Bob Heman, Guillermo Castro, & sean burn.

Enjoy.

Mark Young

↑ Index

8. cris cheek
2 nights in Seattle
Mon 1 Feb 2010

Wednesday, February 10 at 4:00 p.m. The University of Washington Bothell's Writing for Their Lives literary series.

The University of Washington Bothell's Writing for Their Lives literary series. UW Bothell Library, room 205. The public is invited to attend. For additional information, contact the Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences Program, [redacted]

Thursday, Feb 11 at 08:00PM an evening at the Northwest Film Forum.

515 12th Ave, Seattle WA 98122
Movie line: [redacted]
Office phone: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]

Located on Capitol Hill between Pike and Pine.

$9/General
$6.00/Members
$6.50/Children & Seniors
(unless otherwise noted)

cris cheek is a sound artist, poet, photographer, mixed-media practitioner, and interdisciplinary performer. Born in London in 1955, cheek lived and worked there until the early 1990s, developing his practice. He will perform an evening of “live writing” or “performance writing” works for sound, text and video. cheek writes that he “projects video about writing and gets in the way of his projections, tries to read the writing, toys with and enacts ideas of trying to read what we might be seeing and changes what is seen by doing so." His work, indebted to the histories of sound and spatilaized poetry, is highly improvisational and ephemeral.

One of the works, the video-text-performance piece "monday morning quarterbacking 'on' and 'off' gods commons," has appeared on many "best-of" 2009 lists for experimental poetics. He will also be presenting other short videos and live sound pieces as well as readings from his acclaimed new book "part: short life housing" (The Gig, Toronto, 2009). Currently, Cheek is a professor at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

↑ Index

9. Skip Fox

Re: John Wieners criticism

Mon 1 Feb 2010

Robert--

As you probably know this is a daunting task if you wish to be comprehensive in terms of secondary bibliographical material. There are items on Creeley and Duncan I see in my _Robert Creeley, Edward Dorn, and Robert Duncan: A Reference Guide_ (G.K. Hall, 1989) which mention Wieners. Most of the items that at least initially reviewed or discussed Wieners and his poetry are in un-indexed little magazines which are incredibly difficult to find without perusing piles, say, of _Fag Rag Magazine_ (out of Boston) at collections like those at Madison and Buffalo. (These two, in fact, try to be comprehensive collections of little mags in English during the 20th cent. Madison is best 1900-1976, Buffalo from 1976 to the present.)

I hope you're not doing this for a thesis or dissertation.

Good luck,

Skip Fox
(as Willard Fox on bibliography)

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of patrick dunagan
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 2:24 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: John Wieners criticism

NEGATIVE CAPABILITY IN THE VERSE OF JOHN WIENERS by Micah Ballard
Auguste Press, 2001 http://www.augustepress.com/

On 29 January 2010 12:00, Robert Dewhurst <[redacted]> wrote:

> I am preparing a critical bibliography for John Wieners. If you're aware > of any texts -- from the peer-reviewed academic article, to send-ups by > friends in ephemeral small magazines -- can you please back-channel > citations? I am aware of a few things (by Andrea Brady, Bruce Andrews), but > would like to be as comprehensive as possible.
>
> Thanks,
> Robert Dewhurst
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

10. Catherine Daly

291 magazine, the modern gallery, Agnes Ernst Meter / Marius de Zayas Collabs

Mon 1 Feb 2010

I'm interested in places online that might have more images / texts of these visual poems.

Were the Meyer texts published separately, ever? I know she wrote several books.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

11. Ryan Daley

Phil Agre

Mon 1 Feb 2010

Just saw this today...

http://www.ucpd.ucla.edu/2009/09-2490.pdf

↑ Index

12. steve dalachinsky

Re: not quite ekphraic

Mon 1 Feb 2010

---

how bout tomatopoeitcs

On Sun, 31 Jan 2010 20:17:30 -0500 Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
writes:
> Somapoetics is the name of a book by George Quasha. The soma in > question is a hallucinogen mentioned in Hindu religious texts and > often identified with peyote or magic mushrooms. Somatopoetics would > avoid the confusion and also I think be more linguistically > correct.
>
>
> Best,
>
> Mark
>
> At 02:17 PM 1/31/2010, you wrote:
> >As a poet who draws greatly from my dance background, I sometimes > >use the word somapoetics. Soma and somatics draw from an internal > >sense of motion, not from watching it on stage.
> >
> >Cheryl Pallant
> >_____
> >www.cherylpallant.com
> >1/29/2010 11:19 AM, Mark Weiss wrote:
> >>terpsicophrastic?
> >>
> >>At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:
> >>>Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to > contemporary > >>>dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word,
> 'ekprasic',
> >>>for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for
> poetry
> >>>written in response to the art of movement?
> >>>
> >>>John Herbert Cunningham
> >>>
> >>>
>

> >>
> >>Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry
> >>(University of California Press).
> >>http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
> >>
> >
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University
>
> of California Press).
> ess.edu/WholeIsland
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

13. Catherine Daly

Fwd: Job Posting: Senior Editor/Literary Programs Manager at TWO LINES

Mon 1 Feb 2010

Please share this job posting with anyone who might be interested. If you have a bulletin board and would like the job posting sent to you as an attachment, please let me know.
Thanks very much,
Olivia Sears

TWO LINES SENIOR EDITOR & LITERARY PROGRAMS MANAGER

The Center for the Art of Translation is a San Francisco-based non profit promoting international literature and translation through programs in publishing, education, and public events. The Center is currently seeking an experienced Senior Editor & Literary Programs Manager for our Two Lines publications program, which includes the annual Two Lines World Writing in Translation anthology and the World Library series of regional anthologies. The Two Lines Senior Editor & Literary Programs Manager will provide the editorial and artistic vision for Two Lines publications and curate the Center¹s Lit&Lunch event series, manage Two Lines staff and volunteers, and will represent Two Lines externally and in strategic internal discussions and decisions. This position reports to the Executive Director. The ideal candidate will have at least five years experience of publishing/editorial work, familiarity with international literature and literature in translation, will have significant management and arts administration experience, and will share enthusiasm and passion for the Center¹s mission. The Senior Editor & Literary Programs Manager must be able to manage staff and multiple projects from inception to completion with minimal direction or oversight. This position will also coordinate shifting priorities, provide regular reports to the Executive Director, and work effectively both leading and working on a team.

Responsibilities include the following:

EDITORIAL: Oversee artistic vision, editorial planning and production of all publications, including selecting guest editors, regions and/or languages for World Library, soliciting and evaluating monographs for publication, cultivating contacts within the publishing and translation fields, evaluating annual anthology submissions, and editing and proofreading introductions and translations. Provide editorial support on periodic grant writing and fundraising materials.

LITERARY PROGRAMMING: Curate Lit&Lunch series and other events, including event programming and annual publication party planning, act as artistic spokesperson at all Center events, coordinate translation workshops and other collaborative events and pursue partnerships and collaborations with publishers, translators, and cultural institutions.

MANAGEMENT & ADMINISTRATION: Manage Two Lines staff, volunteers, guest editors, translators, language readers, and copyeditors and act as program representative in staff and executive management meetings. Ensure tasks are coordinated, schedules and budgets are maintained, and provide biweekly reports to management. The Senior Editor & Literary Programs Manager will also develop a process to build Two Lines supporters in the literary and translation communities. Assist with research to identify potential grants and donors.

PRODUCTION: Oversee the production of all Two Lines titles, including the production timeline, submissions guidelines and production procedures, submission processing, copyright permissions, final proofreading and editing, and book design.

DISTRIBUTION, MARKETING & PUBLIC RELATIONS: Oversee distribution of all publications and provide feedback and support to marketing staff to develop and implement marketing and public relations plans for publications. Inform Development Director of any potential funding leads or creative fundraising ideas. Seek opportunities to raise awareness of and interest in Two Lines publications, promote the Center and build connections with other translation and literary organizations, act as a representative of the Center and lead discussions and/or presentations at literary events, forums and conferences (3-5 per year).

Qualifications

· Strong background (5+ years) in book publishing, particularly in a management role

· Experience as a literary translator, editor of translation, or director of a literary center

· Excellent team building skills and the ability to both lead and be a part of a team

· Able to offer contacts within the publishing and translation industries

· Enthusiasm and passion for the Center¹s mission

· Excellent interpersonal, written, and verbal communication skills, including editing and proofreading

· Strong organizational sense with a sharp eye for detail

· Ability to prioritize and follow up on activities in a timely manner

· Energetic and a good team player, flexible and willing to learn

· Proficiency in Microsoft Office, familiarity with the Mac environment and excellent analytical skills

· Experience with FileMaker Pro a plus

This is a full-time position with an initial probationary period. The Center is an equal opportunity employer and offers generous vacation package, retirement plan and benefit stipend. Our office is located South of Market near public transportation. To apply, please email [redacted]<twolinesresume %40yahoo.com> with a resume and cover letter addressed to:

Erin Branagan
Acting Executive Director
Center for the Art of Translation
35 Stillman St., Suite 201
San Francisco, CA 94107
Web: www.catranslation.org

--
Olivia E. Sears, President
Center for the Art of Translation
e-mail: [redacted] <osears%40catranslation.org>
web: www.catranslation.org

The Center for the Art of Translation is a non-profit organization that promotes international literature and translation through programs in the arts, education, and community outreach.

__._,_.___
Reply to sender<[redacted]?subject=Job+Posting:+Senior+Editor/Literary+Programs+Manager+at+TWO+LINES>|
Reply to group<[redacted]?subject=Job+Posting:+Senior+Editor/Literary+Programs+Manager+at+TWO+LINES>
Messages in this topic<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/norcallitlist/message/2015;_ylc=X3oDMTM1OWgzbHJvBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzEyMTc1MTIxBGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTIxMzAzNARtc2dJZAMyMDE1BHNlYwNmdHIEc2xrA3Z0cGMEc3RpbWUDMTI2NTA2MDczOQR0cGNJZAMyMDE1>(1)
Recent Activity:

- New Members<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/norcallitlist/members;_ylc=X3oDMTJnaHY2M2lxBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzEyMTc1MTIxBGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTIxMzAzNARzZWMDdnRsBHNsawN2bWJycwRzdGltZQMxMjY1MDYwNzM5?o=6> 1

Visit Your Group<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/norcallitlist;_ylc=X3oDMTJmMDMydGY4BF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzEyMTc1MTIxBGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTIxMzAzNARzZWMDdnRsBHNsawN2Z2hwBHN0aW1lAzEyNjUwNjA3Mzk-> Start a New Topic<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/norcallitlist/post;_ylc=X3oDMTJmY2dlc2dtBF9TAzk3MzU5NzE0BGdycElkAzEyMTc1MTIxBGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTIxMzAzNARzZWMDZnRyBHNsawNudHBjBHN0aW1lAzEyNjUwNjA3Mzk-> To post to this listserv, send an email to [redacted]. MARKETPLACE

Going Green: Your Yahoo! Groups resource for green living<http://us.ard.yahoo.com/SIG=14klhncjf/M=493064.13814333.13821539.13298430/D=groups/S=1705213034:MKP1/Y=YAHOO/EXP=1265067940/L=/B=r.RoBESO5_o-/J=1265060740500586/K=w7EDi1Wuf8kz5uZONmfh7w/A=5922843/R=0/SIG=11ckn2mo6/*http://advision.webevents.yahoo.com/green/> [image: Yahoo! Groups]<http://groups.yahoo.com/;_ylc=X3oDMTJlaDZrZzMxBF9TAzk3MzU5N

zE0BGdycElkAzEyMTc1MTIxBGdycHNwSWQDMTcwNTIxMzAzNARzZWMDZn
RyBHNsawNnZnAEc3RpbWUDMTI2NTA2MDczOQ-->
Switch to: Text-Only<[redacted]?subject=Change+Delivery+Format: +Traditional>,
Daily Digest<[redacted]?subject=Email+Delivery:+Digest>•
Terms
of Use <http://docs.yahoo.com/info/terms/>
.

__,_._,___

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

14. richard owens
Re: John Wieners criticism
Mon 1 Feb 2010

---

it's worth pointing out too that Micah's a strong poet -- w/ i think an Ugly Duckling title that came a couple years back.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 1/31/10, Stephen Ellis <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Stephen Ellis <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: John Wieners criticism
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, January 31, 2010, 8:27 PM

Yeah, I'd forgotten about Micah's book . . . it's very good. Well, it's actually not about John, it's more about Micah's idea of negative capability in poetry citing John occasionally to proof his concepts. Micah's concepts, not John's. Did John have concepts? Possibly. Robert von Hallberg's interview questions made it seem so in 1973. But John's conversational epics with Charles Shively in that year and in 1977 constitute intersecting frames of reference, rather than concepts. Or, do intersecting frames of reference constitute "a concept"? God, I hope not. I want "sex" to be spelled with just three letters, as always, like "god". Leave the four-letter words to contemporary bean eaters. Or steamers of rice. My partner and I will be ozzing behind a peach-colored curtain draped from a tin awning. The heat here is terrible. Call me when it's done.

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

> Date: Sun, 31 Jan 2010 12:23:39 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: John Wieners criticism
> To: [redacted]
>
> NEGATIVE CAPABILITY IN THE VERSE OF JOHN WIENERS by Micah Ballard
> Auguste Press, 2001 http://www.augustepress.com/
>
> On 29 January 2010 12:00, Robert Dewhurst <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I am preparing a critical bibliography for John Wieners. If you're aware of any texts -- from the peer-reviewed academic article, to send-ups by friends in ephemeral small magazines -- can you please back-channel citations? I am aware of a few things (by Andrea Brady, Bruce Andrews), but would like to be as comprehensive as possible.
>
> Thanks,
> Robert Dewhurst

↑ Index

15. Jim Andrews
Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
Mon 1 Feb 2010

> It'll be interesting to see how iPad & other tablets make a stab at replacing books in a few important ways. I have to say if a student can carry all of his textbooks for the year on one large handheld device that hopefully is optimized for reading, I'm interested. But it's sure taken a long time for tablets-devices to be ready for the masses.
>
> ~mIEKAL

yes, readable monitors apparently take very special engineering.

i suppose they'll start out being able to display a fairly small range of media. maybe just type and static images.

how are kindles this way?

ja?

↑ Index

16. Ruth Lepson
Re: John Wieners criticism
Mon 1 Feb 2010

---

exactly, maria.

On 1131110 11:35 PM, "Maria Damon" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I had a similar experience. When i saw him in the hall outside the room in which the Boston Poetry Marathon was taking place, at which he was scheduled to read, I approached him and asked if he was John Wieners. "Yes I am," he said. I said, "It's an honor to meet you." He said, "Same here," and we shook hands. So sweet and kind.
>
> Ruth Lepson wrote:
> the first time I met john wieners he asked, Are you a Medici?
> No? Did I meet you at Georgia O'Keefe's house? He was sweet & I was thrilled bec I had loved his poetry; instead of my praising him, he complimented me.
>
> On 1130110 12:07 PM, "Adam Katz" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> In the first of these
>
> http://home.jps.net/~nada/snyder.htm
>
> 3 poems by Rick Snyder,
>
> there is brief sendup of JW. Never having heard that name before, I went after it as a result.
>
> a
>
> &

↑ Index

17. Catherine Daly
Re: chalk editions first twenty titles. and mission statement.
Mon 1 Feb 2010

---

kindles are currently black and white only because they use e ink, and it doesn't do color yet
--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

18. Mark Young
Re: not quite ekphraic
Mon 1 Feb 2010

In its original definition, ekphrastic can be ascribed to writing about any visual art form - dance, theater, movies, mime. It is only in the past couple of centuries that it has been constricted to writing about painting.

Mark Young

On Mon, Feb 1, 2010 at 5:50 AM, steve dalachinsky <[redacted]> wrote:

> i have written many poems to pain tings
> my latest chapbook consists of 17 poems written after the insomnia
> drawings of louise bourgeois in fact
> the word which i never spell wright applies only to poems written for or > related to painting
> more precisely visual art so sculpture can be included tho more > specifically painting
>
> On Sun, 31 Jan 2010 13:17:27 -0600 Cheryl Pallant <[redacted]>
> writes:
> As a poet who draws greatly from my dance background, I sometimes use
>
> the word somapoetics. Soma and somatics draw from an internal sense
> of
> motion, not from watching it on stage.
>
> Cheryl Pallant
>
> _____
> www.cherylpallant.com
> 1/29/2010 11:19 AM, Mark Weiss wrote:
> terpsicophrastic?
>
> At 08:08 AM 1/29/2010, you wrote:

> Recently, I've become interested in writing poetic responses to contemporary
> dance performances I've attended. Knowing that there is a word, 'ekprasic', > for poetry written in response to visual art, is there a word for poetry > written in response to the art of movement?
>
> John Herbert Cunningham
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University
> of California Press).
> http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

19. Regina Pinto

Project "AlphaAlpha" is almost ready! More collaborations are on line!

Tue 2 Feb 2010

PROJECT ALPHAaLPHA:

The project is almost complete! Until the end of February it will be ready and then it will be composed of 365 letters A, one A for each day of the year!

THANK YOU VERY MUCH!

NEW PAGES:

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/bruce_a_ndrews.html (Bruce Andrews - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_de_mar_josely.html (Josely Carvalho - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_rgaret_penfold.html (Margaret Penfold - UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/is_a_bel_saij.html (Isabel Saij - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/is_a_bel_saij2.html (Isabel Saij - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_zenon.html (Miguel Jimenez/Zenon - Spain)

MORE PAGES WILL BE READY SOON:

Paulo Aquarone (Brazil) - Isabelle Arvers (France) - Rodolfo Franco (Brazil-Spain) - Roberto Kepler (Brazil) - Edward Picot (UK) - Regina Pinto (Brazil) - José Roberto Sechi (Brazil) - Jurgen Trautwein (USA)

WHICH MORE PAGES ARE READY?

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_ndrews.html (Jim Andrews - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_randa_yto.html (Isabel Aranda - YTO - Chile)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/b_a_bel.html (babel - Canada & UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/ver_a_bighetti.html (Vera Bighetti - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/bruno_a.html (Bruno - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_trick_burgaud.html (Patrick Burgaud - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_trick_burgaud1.html (Patrick Burgaud - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_rtha_deed.html (Martha Deed - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/fr_a_zao.html (Marcelo Frazão - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/muriel_freg_a.html (Muriel Frega - Argentina)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/lis_a_hutton.html (Lisa Hutton - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/s_a_tu.html (Satu KaikKonen - Finland)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_j_a.html (Maja Kalogera - Croacia)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_nik.html (Manik - Serbia)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/neufeldt_a.html (Brigitte Neufeudt - Germany)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/niss_a.html (Millie Niss - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_din.html (Clemente Padín - Uruguay)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/reiner_a.html (Reiner Strasser - Germany)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/myron_turner_a.html (Myron Turner - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/sus_a_n_turner.html (Susan Turner - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/villel_a.html (Paulo Villela - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_raceli_zunig_a.html (Araceli Zuñiga- Mexico)

My OWN PAGES:

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/um.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/dois.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/tres.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/quatro.html (Regina Pinto- Brazil)

==========

Regina Pinto

http://arteonline.arq.br
http://pintor.tumblr.com

--

==========

Regina Pinto

http://arteonline.arq.br
http://pintor.tumblr.com

↑ Index

20. Jim Andrews
transformation is part of the 'meaning' of animated transition between stills
Tue 2 Feb 2010

I've been working on a new Javascript app to display images on the net. If you've seen any of the previous dbCinema slideshows, you may recall they didn't have fade in/out of the images. I was finally motivated to make that sort of app. The motivation was not for the dbCinema images, but for some others which aren't up yet, which I'll show you when that project is finished.

However, I have developed the app with the dbCinema images. All of the dbCinema slideshows at http://vispo.com/dbcinema now have that feature. Fade in/out enhances the experience of these images because there is often continuity between the images, and the fading in of one over another reveals the nature of the continuity in a way that both shows how the thing is growing/changing and contributes to the 'cinema' of dbCinema.

It also provides 'action' while the app is busy downloading the next image, which is a consideration in streaming net art. Usually the images are 1280x1024 in size and vary from around 75kb to about 400kb in file size, so the downloading of the images is usually not instantaneous.

There are lots of slideshow apps on the net. Why not use one of those? Well, the ones I saw were usually suitable for smaller images. I wanted this to take up the entire screen for a particular art experience, not a general showing of photos. I also wanted to have categories of links that usually weren't available with the ones on the net. And I wanted the interface simple and integrated into the viewing area, rather than having one area for the graphics and one for the controls, so the full screen could be used to show the graphics. But, also, I've been kind of interested in the architecture of a slideshow app. More on that a bit later.

The app has two 'pages' or screens. The first displays thumbails of some or all of the images. Some of the series have hundreds of images; in that case, the thumbnails show every second or third image. This page or screen also usually contains a link to information about the series. And links to the previous and next series via the '<<' and '>>' buttons.

When you either click a thumbnail image or the '[...]' button, you enter the second page or screen which displays the slideshow. You can adjust the amount of time images are displayed and the amount of time images fade by clicking the 'Options' button. The numbers are in milliseconds. 1000 milliseconds is 1 second. You can also choose whether images fade in/out or just fade in. When the images fade in/out, there's a dimming and brightening. When they just fade in, that dimming/brightening is not present. Sometimes the dimming/brightening is nice, such as in the Silvia Saint series. It gives it a sort of breath in and out.

But, all that said, the main thing I've learned in making this app is how to make a better one that I haven't made yet. And therein lies an interesting lesson for me.

The architecture of the current app involves two images. One image fades in while the other fades out. Or one fades in while the other, which is already faded in, stays static in the background and disappears once the other is faded in.

A more general architecture would be as follows. It would involve going OOP (object oriented programming) with the app. The idea would be to program an image object. When it's time to display a particular image, an image object would be dynamically created. The data of this object would include the image itself, it's name and so forth. The methods or behaviors would include the mouse event functions, the fade in/out functions, the destructor function, and so on. When the object is no longer required, it's deleted.

The advantage of this dynamic creation/destruction of image objects is that rather than being limited to two images, you can have several images onscreen at once. So, for instance, when the user quickly presses the '>' button repeatedly, the response could be more as one would like.

But, more importantly, it would free up formal possibilities. For instance, one could program keyboard functionality so that when a particular key is pressed, a particular image could fade in/out or do that and grow/shrink.

Getting away from the notion of a slideshow into a more general form.

And that is of artistic interest. Programming should suggest and open up formal possibilities. Going OOP, properly understood, does that. So next up for me when I approach another Javascript project will be getting a handle on OOP in Javascript. There's an interesting article on the subject at http://msdn.microsoft.com/en-us/magazine/cc163419.aspx

Part of the idea of dbCinema is to explore the possibilities of cinema between the still, the slideshow, and the sort of dbCinema at http://vispo.com/dbcinema/londonhypotrochoid which is further yet from slideshow but is, nonetheless, based on 100 pictures downloaded from the net via a Google image search of "London". This latter piece does not use the new slideshow app but dbCinema itself.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

21. amy king
Fogged Clarity -- February 2010
Tue 2 Feb 2010

Fiction

Sam Ramos -- The Question of the City
Kirsten Clodfel

Fiction

Sam Ramos -- The Question of the City
Kirsten Clodfelter -- If I Can Keep One Thing, It Will Be This

Poetry

Anne Champion -- Elegy for C.D. Laws
Jack Kristiansen -- Ekphrasis: To Fede Galizia
Michael Tyrell -- First Frost, New York
Stephen Kunert -- Iâ€™ve Lost Poems
Marc Petersen -- Christmas Morning
Jenny Gillespie -- Lines Stitched into a Duskywing

Visual

Jeremy Geddes â€“ Cosmonauts
Labokoff -- The Pole Series
Jon MacNair -- Scenes in Ink

Aural

Great Lake Swimmers -- Lost Channels

Interviews

Tony Dekker -- Discusses inspiration and water
Ian Link -- Talks and sings of Murakami and Pernod

Reviews

Scott Hightower -- The Poetry of Patty Seyburn Benjamin Evans -- A Review of Patti Smithâ€™s Just Kids

http://foggedclarity.com/

_____

BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

22. susan maurer
Re: two new ungovernable books
Tue 2 Feb 2010

Congrats, Lars. on the flurry. Susan Maurer

> Date: Sun, 31 Jan 2010 06:34:20 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: two new ungovernable books
> To: [redacted]
>
> Dear all,
>
> ungovernable press is in a flurry of activity at the moment. today i'm delighted to bring you
>
> "Tie One On" (in 2 parts) by Alex Gildzen
>
> &
>
> "Traveling with Virginia Woolf" by Kristina Marie Darling
>
> cheers,
> lars
>
> http://ungovernablepress.weebly.com

> http://mischievoice.blogspot.com

_____ Your E-mail and More On-the-Go. Get Windows Live Hotmail Free.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469229/direct/01/

↑ Index

23. Robin Hamilton
Re: not quite ekphraic
Tue 2 Feb 2010

> In its original definition, ekphrastic can be ascribed to writing about any > visual art form - dance, theater, movies, mime. It is only in the past couple of centuries that it has been constricted to writing about painting.
>
> Mark Young

Depends what you mean by original. Wasn't the first to do it Paul the Usher (Paulus Silentarius), in poems which survived to the Greek Anthology, about the friezes on the Parthenon (or somewhere)? So my sense of the very absolutely original meaning of the term would be whatever Paul did.

(They are pretty dreadful, scan boring, poems compared with his other work, which itself isn't exactly to-die-for material).

Robin

↑ Index

24. Sarah Sarai
What did John Wieners do now? Was he ekphratic?
Tue 2 Feb 2010

When I read "John Wieners criticism" in a subject line I think, what'd he do NOW, not that John Wieners doing anything now wouldn't be something of a miracle or nothing short of angelic tulle sullied. My point being, however, that if any word needs changing it's >>>criticism<<<. I'm okay with ekphrasis focussed on painting although I do hear it bandied in reference to other of the graces and muses. Isn't that what poetry is -- a response -- to green, cumulous, crankshafts, a knee, eternity, Spinoza, New Orleans, Jodie Foster.

But criticism. Blech. Blubbery as it is, "expostulation," would be an improvement. Discussion? Exploration? I realize this isn't a Waldorf school, but there's gotta be a better word. It's not that a poem can't BE criticized - for being a lazy reach, a cranky baby, a bid for tenure. But the word itself which once may have meant embrace by the gods, I don't know, has limiting connotations and a Calvinist ring.

Sarah Sarai
http://my3000lovingarms.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

25. patrick dunagan
Re: John Wieners criticism
Tue 2 Feb 2010

---

also of interest is the forthcoming release of a new Wieners notebook from Bootstrap Press:
http://www.scribd.com/doc/23956640/Rome-Release-John-Wiener<http://www.scribd.com/doc/23956640/Rome-Release-John-Wieners> which will have an afterword(s) by Bill Berkson, a letter in response by Duncan McNaughton, and a note by Charley Schively

On 29 January 2010 12:00, Robert Dewhurst <[redacted]> wrote:

> I am preparing a critical bibliography for John Wieners. If you're aware of any texts -- from the peer-reviewed academic article, to send-ups by friends in ephemeral small magazines -- can you please back-channel citations? I am aware of a few things (by Andrea Brady, Bruce Andrews), but would like to be as comprehensive as possible.
>
> Thanks,
> Robert Dewhurst

↑ Index

26. Stephen Baraban
Wieners
Tue 2 Feb 2010

It appears to me that Stephen Ellis's speculation about Weiners not "having concepts" is a distinction, not a denigration, but to emphasize that I'd ask us to imagine an Elizabethan person interviewing Wm. Shakespeare--perhaps W.S. would not elaborate anything that sounded like a major, original concept. Yet his words are there to be elaborated upon until the end of everything.

One thing I'd point to in Weiners: the simple phrase "small fires" as it occurs in "A Poem for Cocksuckers" seems bottomless. I love how Silliman has pointed out that imagistically it might mean "cigarettes". What it means most for me is that Weiners is working to steal the elegance and potency of High Art for the use of despised minorities, as Prometheus stole fire from the gods for the minor race we call human.

--- On Sun, 1/31/10, Stephen Ellis <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: Stephen Ellis <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: John Wieners criticism
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Sunday, January 31, 2010, 8:27 PM
> Yeah, I'd forgotten about Micah's > book . . . it's very good. Well, it's actually not > about John, it's more about Micah's idea of negative > capability in poetry citing John occasionally to proof his > concepts. Micah's concepts, not John's. Did John > have concepts? Possibly. Robert von Hallberg's > interview questions made it seem so in 1973. But > John's conversational epics with Charles Shively in that > year and in 1977 constitute intersecting frames of > reference, rather than concepts. Or, do intersecting > frames of reference constitute "a concept"? God, I > hope not. I want "sex" to be spelled with just three > letters, as always, like "god". Leave the four-letter > words to contemporary bean eaters. Or steamers of > rice. My partner and I will be ozzing behind a > peach-colored curtain draped from a tin awning. The > heat here is terrible. Call me when it's done.
>
> EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
> Join me
>
> Date: Sun, 31 Jan 2010 12:23:39 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: John Wieners criticism
> To: [redacted]
>
> NEGATIVE CAPABILITY IN THE VERSE OF JOHN WIENERS by > Micah Ballard
> Auguste Press, 2001 http://www.augustepress.com/
>
> On 29 January 2010 12:00, Robert Dewhurst <[redacted]>
> wrote:

> I am preparing a critical bibliography for John Wieners. If you're aware > of any texts -- from the peer-reviewed academic article, to send-ups by > friends in ephemeral small magazines -- can you please back-channel > citations? I am aware of a few things (by Andrea Brady, Bruce Andrews), but > would like to be as comprehensive as possible.
>
> Thanks,
> Robert Dewhurst
>
> accept all posts. Check guidelines

↑ Index

27. Mark Weiss

Re: What did John Wieners do now? Was he ekphratic?

Tue 2 Feb 2010

A Calvinist ring would have no stone. Vanity and all that.

At 12:29 PM 2/2/2010, you wrote:
>When I read "John Wieners criticism" in a subject line I think, what'd he do
>NOW, not that John Wieners doing anything now wouldn't be something of a >miracle or nothing short of angelic tulle sullied. My point being, >however, that >if any word needs changing it's >>>criticism<<<. I'm okay with ekphrasis >focussed on painting although I do hear it bandied in reference to >other of the >graces and muses. Isn't that what poetry is -- a response -- to green, >cumulous, crankshafts, a knee, eternity, Spinoza, New Orleans, Jodie Foster.
>
>But criticism. Blech. Blubbery as it is, "expostulation," would be an >improvement. Discussion? Exploration? I realize this isn't a Waldorf school, >but there's gotta be a better word. It's not that a poem can't BE >criticized - for >being a lazy reach, a cranky baby, a bid for tenure. But the word

>itself which >once may have meant embrace by the gods, I don't know, has limiting >connotations and a Calvinist ring.
>
>Sarah Sarai
>http://my3000lovingarms.blogspot.com/
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

↑ Index

28. George Bowering

Re: What did John Wieners do now? Was he ekphratic?

Tue 2 Feb 2010

I'm sorry. I don't get your point here.
At first I did not understand why you would think that JW had done something.
And now I still don't get it--that is, what do you find wrong with the word "criticism"?
As to what it means, etymologically--well, we should all know that it comes from the Gk. for sifting.
What's wrong with that?

gb

On Feb 2, 2010, at 9:29 AM, Sarah Sarai wrote:

> When I read "John Wieners criticism" in a subject line I think, what'd he do
> NOW, not that John Wieners doing anything now wouldn't be something of a > miracle or nothing short of angelic tulle sullied. My point being, however, that > if any word needs changing it's >>>criticism<<<. I'm okay with ekphrasis > focussed on painting although I do hear it bandied in reference to other of the > graces and muses. Isn't that what poetry is -- a response -- to green, > cumulous, crankshafts, a knee, eternity, Spinoza, New Orleans, Jodie Foster.
>
> But criticism. Blech. Blubbery as it is, "expostulation," would > be an > improvement. Discussion? Exploration? I realize this isn't a > Waldorf school,

> but there's gotta be a better word. It's not that a poem can't BE > criticized - for > being a lazy reach, a cranky baby, a bid for tenure. But the word > itself which
> once may have meant embrace by the gods, I don't know, has limiting > connotations and a Calvinist ring.
>
> Sarah Sarai
> http://my3000lovingarms.blogspot.com/
>
> welcome.html

George Bowering, OUH
Never on the cover of Vanity Fair

↑ Index

29. amy king

New San Fran Poet Laureate - Diane di Prima! Tonight, inaugural address...

Tue 2 Feb 2010

The people's poet
San Francisco Poet Laureate Diane di Prima will give her inaugural address Tuesday, weaving a theme of how poetry fosters community. Her talk, open to the public, is set for 6 p.m. at the Main Library in Civic Center.

Read more: http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/blogs/cityinsider/detail?entry_id=56101#ixzz0ePm3nEvW

_____

BOOK
Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

30. Ruth Lepson

Re: New San Fran Poet Laureate - Diane di Prima! Tonight, inaugural address...

Tue 2 Feb 2010

---

glad to hear it--she is underrated, it seems.

On 212110 4:04 PM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:

> The people's poet
> San Francisco Poet Laureate Diane di Prima will give her inaugural address Tuesday, weaving a theme of how poetry fosters community. Her talk, open to the public, is set for 6 p.m. at the Main Library in Civic Center.
>
> Read more:
> http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/blogs/cityinsider/detail?entry_id=56101#ixzz0ePm3nEvW
>
> _____
>
> BOOK
> Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm
>
> INTERVIEW
>
> Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

31. Stan Mir

Subito Press Publication Announcement - Song & Glass - Stan Mir

Tue 2 Feb 2010

Subito Press, based in Boulder, CO, recently published Stan Mir's Song & Glass <http://www.subitopress.org/Mir/songandglass.html>. Selected by Noah Eli Gordon during the press's 2009 submission period, the book is available through SPD <http://www.spdbooks.org/Search/Default.aspx?AuthorName=mir> and Amazon.

--
bestnightmareyouget.com

↑ Index

32. Mark Young
Re: not quite ekphraic
Tue 2 Feb 2010

Earlier, much earlier. Homer:
"& first Hephaestus makes a great & massive shield / blazoning well-wrought emblems all across its surface..."
writing about the shield of Achilles in the Iliad.

Perhaps I should have said purest, rather than original. As an example: Anny Ballardini's recent book "Ghost Dance in 33 Movements", a series of poems about films & videos found on UbuWeb, is pure ekphrasis.

But, I agree,these days it's primarily used to describe poems about paintings. My own contribution to the field can be found at http://seriesmagritte.blogspot.com

Mark

On Wed, Feb 3, 2010 at 3:05 AM, Robin Hamilton <
[redacted]> wrote:

> In its original definition, ekphrastic can be ascribed to writing about any visual art form - dance, theater, movies, mime. It is only in the past couple of centuries that it has been constricted to writing about painting.
>
> Mark Young
>
> Depends what you mean by original. Wasn't the first to do it Paul the Usher (Paulus Silentarius), in poems which survived to the Greek Anthology, about the friezes on the Parthenon (or somewhere)? So my sense of the very absolutely original meaning of the term would be whatever Paul did.
>
> (They are pretty dreadful, scan boring, poems compared with his other work, which itself isn't exactly to-die-for material).
>
> Robin

↑ Index

33. Jonathan Skinner
Brian Kim Stefans in Maine
Tue 2 Feb 2010

Language Arts Live presents Brian Kim Stefans, at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine this Thursday.

Thursday, 4 February, 7:30 pm, Chase Hall Lounge

Poet Brian Kim Stefans[1]s books include Free Space Comix (Roof Books, 1998), Gulf (Object Editions, 1998), Angry Penguins (Harry Tankoos, 2000), What Is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers (Factory School, 2006), and Before Starting Over: Selected Writings and Interviews 1994-2005 (Salt Publishing, 2006); a collection of essays, poetry and interviews, Fashionable Noise: On Digital Poetics (Atelos), appeared in 2003. Since 1998, Stefans has produced a significant body of web-based work that has influenced the development of new media poetics.

http://languageartslive.wordpress.com/

For more info, contact Eden Osucha: [redacted]

↑ Index

34. CA Conrad

THIS Wednesday: CAConrad, Frank Sherlock, and Zoe Strauss

Tue 2 Feb 2010

THIS Wednesday: CAConrad, Frank Sherlock, and Zoe Strauss cordially invite you to the Philadelphia ICA release party for THE CITY REAL & IMAGINED (Factory School Books, 2010)

ALL DETAILS for the 8pm event are here: http://events4cri.blogspot.com/

Autumn Konopka just wrote this MARVELOUS article for the release party: http://www.philly2philly.com/culture/culture_articles/2010/1/30/33018/launch_party_the_city_real_and_imagined_the_ica_Wednesday

WE LOOK FORWARD TO SEEING YOU AT THE ICA, AND HAVE A GREAT DAY, CAConrad, Frank Sherlock, Zoe Strauss

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

35. Francesco Levato

Poetry Center of Chicago: Juried Reading Contest Deadline Extended

Tue 2 Feb 2010

Poetry Center of Chicago: Juried Reading Contest
Submission deadline extended
First prize: $1,500; Second prize: $500; Third prize: $250
Five finalists receive $50

New Postmark deadline: Friday, February 26, 2010

The Poetry Center invites regional poets to submit their unpublished work for consideration in the 16th Annual Juried Reading. Eight finalists will have their poetry published in an e-book by Plastique Press as well as on the Poetry Center website, and all eight poets will be invited to read at an award ceremony in the spring.

Mark Nowak, Final Judge

For more information please visit http://www.poetrycenter.org/contests

↑ Index

36. David Chirot

Nazim Hikmet, Great Turkish poet/activist inspires "Journeys With No Return"

Wed 3 Feb 2010

I thought this may be of interest--& inspiration-- to not only the admirers of Hikmet as great Poet/Activist in poetry/life-- but also of interest to al those who've been inspired by the great work of Turkish/American Poet Murat Nemet-Nejat in translating, editing, and writing profoundly on it in introducing the Concept of Eda in his Anthology of Contemporary Turkish Poetry, a work which is inspiring and horizon opening and whose effects are already being felt reverberating in contemporary American Poetry-- as ver--greatest thanks Murat and to Hikmet! for their ongoing inspiration and examples-

February 2, 2010

<http://www.e-flux.com>

**
*
Nevin Aladag
Freeze
Photography Series, 2003
Courtesy of the artist and Gitte Weise Gallery, Berlin *

Journeys With No Return
18 February - 14 March 2010
Private view 6-9pm Wed 17 February

A Foundation London
Rochelle School, Arnold Circus, London E2 7ES
Open daily, 12-6pm
Free Admission

http://www.journeyswithnoreturn.com Become a fan of Journeys With No Return on Facebook Share this announcement on: Facebook<http://www.facebook.com/share.php?u=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.e-flux.com%2Fshows%2Fview%2F7692&t=+%2F+Journeys+With+No+Return>| Delicious<http://delicious.com/save?v=5&noui&jump=close&title=+%2F+Journeys+With+No+Return&url=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.e-flux.com%2Fshows%2Fview%2F7692>| Twitter<http://twitter.com/home?status=[redacted]_flux%20announcement%20http%3A%2F%2Fwww.e-flux.com%2Fshows%2Fview%2F7692> Participating artists: Nevin Aladag, Zineb Sedira, Adam Chodzko, Olaf Metzel, Denizhan Ozer, Clemens von Wedemeyer, Olaf Nicolai, Ergin Cavusoglu, Melanie Manchot, Asli Sungu, Kiran Kaur Brar and Nasan Tur.

Curators: Alice Sharp, Peter Cross and Levent Calikoglu
Exhibition organizer: Denizhan Ozer

Journeys With No Return Conference
9.30-5.30pm 19 February
With the Goethe Institut and International Curators Forum
Tickets: 0207 5964 000

A Foundation is the London focus of a touring exhibition to Istanbul, London and Berlin 2009/10. Inspired by the celebrated Turkish writer and political figure Nazim Hikmet's book of poems Journeys With No Return, this project explores reflections of Turkish migration on contemporary art.

Twelve artists from Germany, Great Britain and Turkey uncover themes around Turkish migration over the last 50 years in works that are new to UK audiences – six of which are unveiled for the first time. The artists balance the local with the global, their subjective sense of identity with cultural dissemination that potentially knows no borders. Using popular music, rap, cinematic conventions, anthropology and documentary they exploit archive images, cultural stereotypes and information systems. The artworks stretch from video, film, photography, drawing to installation and reach out with methods of communication that echo mainstream and popular cultural forms.

Zineb Sedira finds resonances of transportation in forgotten railway sidings, while Clemens von Wedemeyer has created a cinematic work that is as much a tribute to his modernist masters - Mayakovsky, Tarkovsky - as it is a film about crossing a border. Melanie Manchot takes a traditional European painting genre, the double portrait, and restores connections between people separated by migration. Adam Chodzko has created a surreal documentary about Romanian migrant strawberry pickers editing a historical archive of London hop pickers, subverting readings of power relations, identity, time and place. Nasan Tur's demonstration backpacks consist of a range of unusual objects and reference both mobility and rebellion. Asli Sungu uncovers historical layers that unexpectedly explode with poetic equivalences that only an outsider could create.

The conference is organised with the International Curators Forum and addresses the themes of the exhibition, how culture is transformed through migration and the influence of Turkish migration on contemporary practitioners. It is chaired by Edgar Schmitz (Goldsmith College, London) and Lisa Le Feuvre (Writer and Curator) and includes speakers *Irit Rogoff *, Professor of Visual Culture at Goldsmiths College, a theorist, curator and organiser, Artist Adam Chodzko and Dr. Mark Nash, Head of Department for Curating Contemporary Art, Royal College of Art.

Journeys With No Return opened alongside the 11th Istanbul Biennial at the Akbank Cultural Centre, Istanbul in September 2009 and will be presented in Berlin in June 2010.

*Press contact:

Simon Steven*
Press Office
Journeys With No Return
[redacted] (UK)
[redacted]

Further information: [redacted]

The curators would like to thank the Akbank Cultural Centre, Istanbul, A Foundation, London, Arcola Theatre, London and Kunstverein Tiergarten, Berlin.

Become a fan on Facebook<http://www.facebook.com/pages/e-flux/54899149152>| Follow us on Twitter <http://twitter.com/e_flux>

41 Essex street
New York, NY 10002, USA

Contact us <http://www.e-flux.com/pages/contact>
Subscribe <http://www.e-flux.com/pages/subscribe>

↑ Index

37. Al Filreis
episode 28 of PoemTalk (on Jack Spicer) released today
Wed 3 Feb 2010

Today we are releasing episode 28 of PoemTalk. Julia Bloch, CA Conrad and Rachel Blau DuPlessis discuss Jack Spicer's "Psychoanalysis: An Elegy."

http://www.poemtalk.org

You can subscribe to PoemTalk using iTunes. Go to your iTunes "music store" and type "PoemTalk" in the searchbox.

- Al Filreis

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
University of Pennsylvania
on the web: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis blog: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/blog

↑ Index

38. Nicholas Karavatos

No Asylum - New Book by Nicholas Karavatos

Wed 3 Feb 2010

David Meltzer writes: "Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. [No Asylum] is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity." (from back cover)

Product Details
Paperback
Publisher: Amendment Nine; 1ST edition (2009)
ISBN-10: 0984280006
ISBN-13: 978-0984280001
http://www.amazon.com/dp/0984280006/ref=cm_sw_su_dp

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Hotmail: Trusted email with Microsoft’s powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469226/direct/01/

↑ Index

39. Nicholas Karavatos

AUDIO LINK - An inter-media spoken word performance celebrating the publication of No Asylum by Nicholas Karavatos

Wed 3 Feb 2010

Arcata Theater Lounge, Arcata, CA - December 2, 2009

Art Brown (guitar)
Edmond Deraedt (lights)
Nicholas Karavatos (poems, projections)
Jeff Kelley (guitar)
Mark Weston (percussion)
Shao Way Wu (bass)

An inter-media spoken word performance celebrating the publication of No Asylum by Nicholas Karavatos.

http://www.archive.org/details/NicholasKaravatos-2009December2-ArcataTheaterLoungeCalifornia

1.Rapunzel Akbar
2.I'm not vengeful. Just sleepy.
3.Saw a Face in the Grain
4.Another Grassy Knoll
5.Crashby Station News
6.Procreate the Revolt
7.Body Revolve
8.Spectacle of the Prophets of Phallopolis
9.Shh
10.The music is played like it has somewhere to go
11.Written in response to a Subliminal Infusion of the Band fIREHOSE
12.Greenhouse Effect Coffeeshop
13.Direct Action
14.Two February Eighty Nine
15.Twenty Two July Eighty Nine
16.now with you
17.Signs

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Hotmail: Trusted email with Microsoft’s powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469226/direct/01/

↑ Index

40. susan maurer
Re: two new ungovernable books
Wed 3 Feb 2010

Take a look at Tomas Ekstrom (one of Sweden's foremost poets) doing a little writeup of Malmo's ungovernable press on his blog. Susan Maurer

> Date: Sun, 31 Jan 2010 06:34:20 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: two new ungovernable books
> To: [redacted]
>
> Dear all,
>
> ungovernable press is in a flurry of activity at the moment. today i'm delighted to bring you
>
> "Tie One On" (in 2 parts) by Alex Gildzen
>
> &
>
> "Traveling with Virginia Woolf" by Kristina Marie Darling
>
> cheers,
> lars
>
> http://ungovernablepress.weebly.com
>
> http://mischievoice.blogspot.com

Hotmail: Free, trusted and rich email service.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469228/direct/01/

↑ Index

41. Steve Clay

Selections from the Library of Robert Creeley of Interest to Literary and Art Collections

Wed 3 Feb 2010

Announcing for sale: Selections from Robert Creeley's Library of Interest to Literary and Art Collections

List 1 (A-C)

Granary Books is pleased to offer for sale, as individual items, a rich and compelling selection of more than 1,300 books, pamphlets, manuscripts, correspondence and related materials from the library of preeminent American poet Robert Creeley (1926-2005). Robert Creeley made a practice of inserting relevant letters, manuscripts, clippings, photographs and ephemera into his books, many of which also bear significant inscriptions, thus making his library an important documentary archive occupying a rich site for research into the poets and poetics of the New American Poetry.

The collection will be offered for sale as individual items via a series of email lists issued over the next several months. The first list (A-C) comprises works from: Bill Berkson, Ted Berrigan, Paul Blackburn, Robin Blaser, Joe Brainard, Stan Brakhage, Richard Brautigan, James Broughton, Basil Bunting, Tom Clark, Cid Corman, Gregory Corso, Robert Creeley and Judson Crews, among others.

To view the A-C inventory and to subscribe to future lists please go to: www.granarybooks.com or send an email to: [redacted]

Thank you.

Steve Clay
Granary Books
168 Mercer St. #2
New York, NY 10012

[redacted]

Click here to see the contents of The Robert Creeley Library List 1 (A-C) featuring:

Highlights among the author collections particularly rich with inscriptions and often including important correspondence and other association and archival material are: Ted Berrigan, Paul Blackburn (14 items), Joe Brainard (12 items), Stan Brakhage, Richard Brautigan (13 items), Basil Bunting (14 items), Tom Clark, Fielding Dawson (33 items), Diane Di Prima, Edward Dorn (31 items), Robert Duncan and Jess (over 50 items including "Caesar’s Gate," Divers Press, 1955, Creeley’s copy [1 of 3 – letter “C”] with an original Jess collage and holograph poem by Duncan), Larry Eigner, Allen Ginsberg (35 items many with excellent inscriptions), John Hawkes, Anselm Hollo, Ronald Johnson, Joanne Kyger, Irving Layton (12 items), Denise Levertov (28 items), Alison Lurie, Michael McClure (42 items), Charles Olson (59 items including several inscribed), Joel Oppenheimer (including "The Dancer" 1951 with Robert Rauschenberg, Jargon 2), Ann Quin, Tom Raworth, Aram Saroyan (11 items), Gary Snyder (including an inscribed copy of "Riprap" Origin Press, 1959), Philip Whalen, John Wieners, Jonathan Williams (26 items authored by JW including "Garbage Litters the Iron Face of the Sun’s Child" 1951, Jargon 1, along with more than 35 other titles published by the Jargon Society), and Louis Zukofsky (29 items including "80 Flowers").

The library includes Creeley’s personal copies of most of his regular separate publications (217 items) and contained within many are inscriptions, annotations, corrections, cards, letters, photographs, clippings, notes, etc. from Marisol, Edward Dahlberg, Stan Brakhage, Louis Zukofsky, Sherman Paul, Octavio Paz, Jim Dine, Georg Baselitz, Walter Hamady, Fielding Dawson, Denise Levertov, among others. Several of Creeley’s collaborations with artists are present including "A Day Book" with R.B. Kitaj (Graphis, 1972), "Signs" with Georg Baselitz (Graphicstudio, 2000), and "7 & 6" with Robert Therrien and Michel Butor (Hoshour Gallery, 1988).

↑ Index

42. Nicholas Karavatos

Re: response to David

Wed 3 Feb 2010

I was well aware that the article I linked was from the New Republic, as well as the professional connections of the author. I simply said I was reminded of it from the positions voiced.

Those of us from liberal secular countries may have a idea of feminism rooted in our historical conditions that may not be easily transferable to other cultures.

I have students here in the UAE who call themselves feminists, but an American might claim they "look" or "act" oppressed.

It's complex, isn't it? Liberal secular countries in the West might boast a sort of cultural relativism because of their multicultural identity, but also boast sets of absolutes as well. Other countries in other parts of the world may boast differing sets of absolutes, and promote whole other versions of cultural relativism. Everyone thinks they're the right ones and it's the other who needs liberating (from? for?).

My female students in the Middle East are not a back-clad monolith.

A woman in my Intro to Lit class this week made an impassioned defense of Brett Ashley taking as many lovers as she wants, or anything else she desires, because she deserves to be happy.

This site has an agenda, too: http://www.memri.org though it does give a chance to view translated TV. Probably no more shocking than Fox News. Take it for what it is.

There is a real avoidance in the Middle East of self-criticism and criticism of domestic authority. Also, there is an established discourse that, irritatingly, all challenging conversations get squeezed into. Anything that contests conclusions about history, politics, religion, etc., are dismissed as "wrong" not because of errors in reasoning or evidence, but because they don't support the established conclusions. This is not universal, and is changing, but it has been a challenge while teaching Academic Writing & Research.

(Yeah, I'm cleaning out the old Inbox that's stacked up with email never read.)

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

> Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 16:07:44 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: response to David
> To: [redacted]
>
> David,
> I will very briefly try to sum up the backchannel i sent to Alison Croggon
>
> late last night, thanking her for links: I wrote to Alison, in more words than the ones I'm > about to write to a list: my post to list was my emotional reaction to > two very angry Iranian women I saw on t.v. who were seeking help from feminist organizations in > the U.S.to help their friends, family, fellow humans in Iran. (See? these Iranian women live > in the U.S. now and they've been trying and trying and trying...with NO RESPONSE that's > what THEY said.)

> I was merely reporting something.
> They were absolutely furious with American feminists. That's all I ever really said. They just > can't get over it. And, by the way, I've met with so much resistance on this subject, it's hard > for me to believe. I thought I was just saying something. Sort of like "awareness"--not political > debate or authoritative rant. I never claimed to be an authority.
> I do not pretend to be an expert. And I barely have time to write poetry let alone write on lists
> (no, I didn't write that part to Alison...but I thought it just now)
> I will also sum up what I wrote to someone else on the list yesterday or, rather, what he wrote > to me but i agree with him so much, i'm taking his advice to the point that i'm quoting him > (but i do not intend to write his name because i don't feel it is my right to involve him in > this: but what he said was: it's so difficult to have these discussions via email.
> and in another email i sent yesterday i wrote: why do i waste my time writing on lists?
> But: also: thank you to Nicholas Karavatos for the article you sent. I really appreciate it.
> You live there (I'm writing to Nicholas Karavatos now). Because you live there I take you as being > an authority on this subject. You live in the midst of it. So I'm > planning to shut up on this subject.
> Sorry my links were not whatever--it's true--i was just sending links. not to provide authoritative > texts just to let people know about t.v. show in Saudi Arabia. i didn't have time or inclination > to check out sources--i just thought people might be interested in t.v. show which really > shocked me. i figured: if they were interested enough, they'd do their own research on the subject > (that's what i do when i want to know about something--and it was enough for me to know that > t.v. show existed in the first place. i didn't think i had to back it up so carefully--just to know > it exists etc.)
>
> thanks for your response, > bobbi

>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Sun, 25 Nov 2007 15:23:14 -0600
> From: David-Baptiste Chirot
> Subject: Re: a response for bobbie (checking sources)
>
> Dear Bobbie:
>
> i was talking last night on the phone with my mother about the need to be c= > ontinually checking on the provenance of sources which one finds--in any me= > dia--
> the literature on this need is growing continually--as there is a huge amou= > nt of "information" available which has to be traced back to its sources in= > order to have an idea how accurate it is, it even true at all--as well as= > all the "grey areas" of distortion, selectivity, dis/mistranslations, edit= > s, omissions, "echo chamber effects" and the like--
>
> i was happy to find alison croggin's post regarding this today as it is an = > example of how research into the background of "signs taken for wonders"
a= > s Karl Marx called such things, may often be found to be "too good to be t= > rue"--
>
> i went and looked up the sites you listed here, and they all turn out to be= > of a dubious nature in one way or another--
>
> the original source turns out to be MEMRI TV--
>
> if you check for example the wikipedia entry on MEMRI--this is an organizat= > ion which has been widely criticized and questioned by persons in many coun= > tries--as to the integrity of their information in all facets of media--
>
> as in any period of war, one needs to be aware of how much propaganda, fear=
> and hate mongering, distortions, lies, becomes the norm--
>
> there are billions beyond billions of dollars, not to mention euros and yua=

> n and yen--at stake in these conflicts--in order to ensure that the support= > of populations is there for the huge corporations and interests, industrie= > s which profit from the war machines, it is necessary that as many persons = > as possible believe the most damning lies about other populations whether i= > t is in terms of religion,ideology, ethnicity, culture or that all embracin= > g term "way of life"--"the clash of civilizations"--"barbarism and civiliza= > tion"--such fundamentalist views are required to make persons blind deaf an= > d dumb in regarding the being of other beings as anything but "the enemy,"
=
> "the personification of evil"--
>
> the idea is that one will no longer see the other as something worth more t= > han extermination--as much as possible--
>
> so the images, sounds, texts one is shown are those which are designed to s= > how such others in the worst possible light-- > which is the way that the actions of MEMRI are seen to be created and funct= > ioning by its critics--
>
>
> in the film Blue Collar (with Richard Pryor, Harvey Keitel, Yaphet Kotto am= > ong others)--there is a character who explains that power functions by sett= > ing people against each other--the rich against the poor, the Black against= > the White, the old against the young--even the Union can be made to turn o= > n Union members--(the film was made before Reagan began to break the unions= > with his firing of all the air controllers)-- become a tool of those agai= > nst unions--anything to destroy the idea of unity, solidarity--among person= > s in the face of power and profit--
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! - http://mail.aol.com

_____
Your E-mail and More On-the-Go. Get Windows Live Hotmail Free.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469229/direct/01/

↑ Index

43. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: not quite ekphraic
Wed 3 Feb 2010

My essay/poem The Peripheral Space of Photography (Green Integers, 2004) belongs to the same genre.

Ciao,

Murat

On Tue, Feb 2, 2010 at 7:01 PM, Mark Young <[redacted]> wrote:

> Earlier, much earlier. Homer:
> "& first Hephaestus makes a great & massive shield / blazoning well-wrought emblems all across its surface..."
> writing about the shield of Achilles in the Iliad.
>
> Perhaps I should have said purest, rather than original. As an example: Anny > Ballardini's recent book "Ghost Dance in 33 Movements", a series of poems about films & videos found on UbuWeb, is pure ekphrasis.
>
> But, I agree,these days it's primarily used to describe poems about paintings. My own contribution to the field can be found at http://seriesmagritte.blogspot.com
>
> Mark
>
> On Wed, Feb 3, 2010 at 3:05 AM, Robin Hamilton <
> [redacted]> wrote:
>
> In its original definition, ekphrastic can be ascribed to writing about any > visual art form - dance, theater, movies, mime. It is only in the past couple of centuries that it has been constricted to writing about painting.
>
> Mark Young
>
> Depends what you mean by original. Wasn't the first to do it Paul the Usher (Paulus Silentarius), in poems which survived to the Greek Anthology, > about the friezes on the Parthenon (or somewhere)? So my sense of the very > absolutely original meaning of the term would be whatever Paul did.

> (They are pretty dreadful, scan boring, poems compared with his other work, > which itself isn't exactly to-die-for material).
>
> Robin
> guidelines

↑ Index

44. Michael Tod Edgerton

Re: Subito Press Publication Announcement - Song & Glass - Stan Mir

Wed 3 Feb 2010

Awesome news, Stan!

Cheers,

Tod

Michael Tod Edgerton
MFA '06, Program in Literary Arts, Brown University
PhD student, Dept. of English, University of Georgia

_____

If the challenge of our time is the challenge of empathy, to make an empathetic relation; that is, to see another person, to feel their pain, story, whatever--that--that how can a poetic material making be part of--of that?

~ Ann Hamilton, in an interview about her installation, Indigo Blue

_____
From: Stan Mir <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, February 2, 2010 6:32:51 PM
Subject: Subito Press Publication Announcement - Song & Glass - Stan Mir

Subito Press, based in Boulder, CO, recently published Stan Mir's Song & Glass <http://www.subitopress.org/Mir/songandglass.html>. Selected by Noah Eli Gordon during the press's 2009 submission period, the book is available through SPD <http://www.spdbooks.org/Search/Default.aspx?AuthorName=mir> and Amazon.

--
bestnightmareyouget.com

↑ Index

45. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ

Spring 2010 Poetry Programs: Annual Chapbook Festival & more!

Wed 3 Feb 2010

Spring 2010 Poetry Programs
The Center for the Humanities at the Graduate Center, CUNY

_____

Turnstyle Reading Series
Writers from the Master of Fine Arts Programs in Creative Writing at CUNY

February 9th, Martin E. Segal Theatre, The Graduate Center, CUNY Jan Heller Levi and John Weir, joined by MFA students March 10th, Martin E. Segal Theatre, The Graduate Center, CUNY Rick Pearse and Emily Raboteau, joined by MFA students April 15th, Room 630, John Jay College of Criminal Justice Julie Agoos, Adam Berlin, Pamela Laskin, joined by MFA students May 10th, The Skylight Room (9100), The Graduate Center, CUNY Colum McCann and Richard Schotter, joined by MFA students

All readings start at 6:30pm.

Co-sponsored by the CUNY MFA in Creative Writing Affiliation Group and the Office of Academic Affairs

_____

Tendencies: Poetics and Practice

This series of talks curated by Tim Peterson explores the relationship between contemporary poetic manifesto, practice, queer theory and pedagogy. February 24th, Segal Theatre: Akilah Oliver, Kate Eichhorn, Charles Bernstein March 9th, Segal Theatre: erica kaufman, Douglas A. Martin, Mina Pam Dick April 9th, Segal Theatre: Dodie Bellamy, Eileen Myles, Kevin Killian May 6th, Skylight Room, 9100: Jack Kimball, CA Conrad, Stacy Szymaszek

All events take place at 6:30pm.

Co-sponsored by Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies, Ph.D. Program in English, and Poetics Group

_____

Lost & Found: The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative

Lost& Found is a publication project emerging from archival and textual scholarship done by students at The Graduate Center, with the primary focus on writers falling under the rubric of the New American Poetry. Last fall we launched an inaugural chapbook series published as part of the initiative (for more information, please visit centerforthehumanitiesgc.org/lostandfound). This spring, join us for a series of events with visiting Lost & Found Fellows Margaret Randall and David Henderson, among others.

Chanticleer and the Legacies of the Black Arts Movement February 23rd, Tuesday, 6:30pm Martin E. Segal Theatre Join photographer Nikki Johnson, filmmaker and artist Camille Billops and professor emeritus James Hatch to discuss the legacy of the black arts movement, starting with case of Raven Chanticleer, most famously the founder, craftsman and proprietor of the Harlem African-American Wax and History Museum. Moderated by poet David Henderson, one of the founders of the Umbra Arts Movement.

Beats and Beyond: Documenting the Poets of the 60's March 15th, Monday, 6:30pm The Skylight Room (9100) Join poet and artist Cecilia Vicuña and filmmakers Melanie La Rosa and Henry Ferrini for a conversation about films that bring into cinematic focus the untold histories of a radical literary era. With excerpts from films "El Corno Emplumado - A Story From the Sixties," "This Bird Flies Backward" (on the life and work of poet Diane di Prima), and "Polis Is This: Charles Olson and the Persistence of Place."

Co-sponsored by the Ph.D. Program in Hispanic and Luso-Brazilian Literatures and Languages and the Doctoral Students Council

New Visions, New Activism, New American Poetry Margaret Randall in Conversation March 22nd, Monday, 6:30pm The Skylight Room (9100) Join poet, political activist and publisher Margaret Randall and the Graduate Center's Ammiel Alcalay, Professor of English and Comparative Literature, in a conversation about her work and the journal El Corno Emplumado / The Plumed Horn (1962-1969), then on the cutting edge of independent publishing and now an archival treasure.

Co-sponsored by the Ph.D. Program in Hispanic and Luso-Brazilian Literatures and Languages and the Doctoral Students Council
_____ Multiformalisms: Postmodern Poetics of Form March 16th 2010, Tuesday, 6:30pm, Rooms 9206-9207 Join editor Annie Finch for a lively discussion of new directions in poetic form and theory. With poet Marilyn Hacker and other contributors to the collection Multiformalisms: Postmodern Poetics of Form.

Co-sponsored by the Poetics Group

_____

Annual Chapbook Festival
Monday May 3 and Tuesday May 4

The Festival celebrates the chapbook as a work of art and as a vehicle for alternative and emerging writers and publishers. Now in its second year, the festival features a two-day bookfair with chapbook publishers from around the country, workshops, marathon poetry readings, and a closing-night reading of prize-winning Chapbook Fellows.

Workshops will include: Producing Chapbooks: A Workshop for Poets, Producing Chapbooks: A Workshop for Publishers, Do-It-Yourself Chapbooks: Make and Distribute Your Own, and Chapbooks as Art Objects.

Please visit chapbookfestival.org for further details.

Are you an interested publisher? Please e-mail [redacted] to reserve space at the bookfair.

Co-sponsored by The Office of Academic Affairs, MFA Programs in Creative Writing of the City University of New York, The Center for the Humanities at The Graduate Center CUNY, The Center for Book Arts, Poets House, Poetry Society of America, and Poets & Writers _____
http://www.centerforthehumanitiesgc.org

↑ Index

46. Sarah Sarai

Re: What did John Wieners do now? Was he ekphratic?

Wed 3 Feb 2010

George Bowering: I meant it in the most basic and perhaps banal sense of to criticize. As in: The boy criticized Wieners because he had a splotch on his shirt and unseemly markings on his arms. As in, Mom criticized me for sleeping until noon.

When I read your posting I instantly thought of--IN CONNECTION WITH MYSELF--"stupid reader"--finding simple and possible misunderstandings in text.

As for the roots of criticism, I was lazy in not checking. I only took one year of classical Greek and that was long long ago. I remember various readings of psyche and can recite the beginning of the Iliad but that's about it. Sifting is terrific. Sifting is what I was looking for--and what I remember when I next encounter the word.

If the line read Criticism of Tony Blair, I would assume, per an article in the Guardian today, it was about his continued abandonment of Gaza. But I wouldn't think of it as a sifting through of his political life.

It's a good remonstration, yours of me. Reminds me to slow down. I don't do drafts on posts. I don't let them sit for six months or a year. I'm lucky if I slow down enough to check my spelling.

That said, I don't recant. I rethink.

Sarah Sarai
in need of a speed bump

↑ Index

47. Mark Weiss
query
Wed 3 Feb 2010

Anyone have Mike Kelleher's email address? Went down with the ship last time my computer capsized.

B/c please.

Thanks.

Mark

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

"Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

48. Andy Gricevich
New Poetry Series in Madison Starts Friday!
Wed 3 Feb 2010

Announcing THE PLACE SHAPED READING, which will inaugurate the _____ Shaped Reading Series in Madison, Wisconsin.

Friday, February 5th, 8 p.m.
The Project Lodge
817 E Johnson
Madison, WI

Featuring
Connie Deanovich
Adam Fell
Lisa Fishman
Roberto Harrison
Marie Larson

Chuck Stebelton
and potluck-shaped food in the middle!

About us:
We are a series featuring astonishing local, regional and national poets. We are named for the nearly-forgotten southern Wisconsin poet Don Loomis Shape. We have a website:
http://readingshaped.wordpress.com

↑ Index

49. Robert Dewhurst
Re: John Wieners criticism
Wed 3 Feb 2010

Thanks, everyone, for the many thoughtful leads. One wonderful text no one's mentioned yet, that I just thought I would throw in here, is the tiny chapbook LOSS by Ben Friedlander (Pressed Wafer 2003). A model in "criticism," as far as I'm concerned (formulated as it is as a candid reflection on an oddly intense, affecting encounter Friedlander had w/ a poem), & one of my favorite things on Wieners.

RD

↑ Index

50. Halvard Johnson
Hamilton Stone Review #20 now online
Thu 4 Feb 2010

Hamilton Stone Review #20 now online Poetry by Matthew DeBord, Elizabeth Dodd, Steve Ely, Susan Firer, Jeff Gundy, James Hazard, Jane Hilberry, Christine Holland, George Kalamaras, Karen Kovacik, Mercedes Lawry, Alison Luterman, David Mason, Christine Rhein, Elaine Sexton, Sean Singer, Joe Somoza, Bert Stern, Richard Stolorow, Chase Twichell, Mark Young, and Harriet Zinnes; * *Fiction by Jack Dowling, Beverly Gologorsky, Sybil Kollar, Jocelyn Lieu, and Miguel Antonio Ortiz; Nonfiction by Sherisse Alvarez, CL Bledsoe, Clyde L. Borg, Chris Echaurre, Christina Holzhauser, Randall Horton, Ingrid Hughes, Jim McGarrah, Meg Morley, and Peter Stensen.
http://www.hamiltonstone.org/hsr.html

Hal

Serving the tri-state area.

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

↑ Index

51. Joel Weishaus
"The Gateless Gate-New Series" Pgs 31-40
Thu 4 Feb 2010

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

Here are the next five texts / five images of "The Gateless Gate-New Series":
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/Gate-R/Pgs%2031-32R.htm

Index of First Lines:

31:
What to one person is a relic...
Then one year he suddenly remembered...
Religion, philosophy, art-in-depth take place on the verge...
Faith in the unknown is the miracle...

33:
I received this letter...
To inspire the public and acquire grants...
If English had been Einstein's native language...
What interested David Peat and his mentor David Bohm...

35:
In the 3rd Century...
In the 7th Century...
Sacred stories trace all the way down...
I am living in Pablo Picasso's villa...
Today I'm wondering why moon goddess Artemis...

37:
At this point in my life...
The myth of Western Art may have begun...
While in America...
Enlarging his earthly kingdom...

A cry went through late antiquity... (quote)
This morning I gained the woods...

39:
Sweet scents spread through my mind...
Because different types of sensory information... (quote)
The outside world has given rise...
Gods dwell on mountains because...
What is lost is winter...
Seeing reality through..
In a dream last night, Marcel Duchamp...

If you wish to begin at the beginning:
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/Gate-R/Cover-R.htm

Note: Most browsers default their text size to medium. However, if yours isn't, these pages won't appear correctly.

Thank you for your participation in this project that seeks to open one way of writing, designing and presenting digital literary art as a continuum to the tradition of books and other print media. Your critique is always welcome.

-Joel Weishaus

↑ Index

52. Poetry Project

Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 4 Feb 2010

Here$B!G(Bs what$B!G(Bs coming up at The Poetry Project.

And check out the recent action on our website$B!=(B

Vincent Katz has a new review here:
http://poetryproject.org/featured-content/reviews

And Rachel Levitsky$B!G(Bs first blog post is here:
http://poetryproject.org/project-blog

Friday, February 5, 10 PM
Nick Tosches & Andre Williams

Nick Tosches was born in Newark, New Jersey and is the author of three novels, eleven books of non-fiction,and three volumes of poetry. His books include: Hellfire: The Jerry Lee Lewis Story, Dino: High Living In The Dirty Business Of Dreams, Where Dead Voices Gather, In The Hand Of Dante, and Chaldea. His latest, Never Trust A Living God, is a collection of poetry illustrated by Gravieur. He lives in New York City.

Andre Williams was born in Bessemer, Alabama in 1936. From his start at Fortune in the 1950$B!G(Bs, he went on to work at Motown with Stevie Wonder, Mary Wells, and the Contours. He has composed several hundred recordings and continues to be one of the most widely?collected and respected of original soul and rhythm & blues artists. He$B!G(Bll read from his debut volume of fiction Sweets (And Other Stories).

Monday, February 8, 8 PM
Mina Pam Dick & Franklin Bruno

Mina Pam Dick (aka Hildebrand Pam Dick, Nico Pam Dick et al.) is a writer, artist and philosopher living in New York City.?She$B!G(Bs a native New Yorker.?She received a BA from Yale and an MFA in Painting as well as an MA in Philosophy from the University of Minnesota.?Her writing has appeared in Tantalum, BOMB and The Brooklyn Rail, and is forthcoming in The Portable Boog Reader 4 and Aufgabe #9; her philosophical work has appeared in a collection put out by the International Wittgenstein Symposium (Kirchberg am Wechsel, Austria).?Her first book, Delinquent,?was published by Futurepoem in late 2009.

Franklin Bruno is the author of two chapbooks, MF/MA (Seeing Eye) and the recent Policy Instrument (Lame House), as well as a critical monograph on Elvis Costello$B!G(Bs Armed Forces, published in Continuum Books$B!G(B 33 1/3 series. His poetry has appeared in Vanitas, The Hat,?With + Stand, The New Review of Literature and other periodicals, and the anthology Intersections: Innovative Poetry in Southern California (Green Integer). His essays and critical writing appear in The Nation, The Believer, and Oxford American, and online at the Poetry Foundation website and Bookforum. As a musician, he has released a dozen albums of original songs since 1990 as a solo artist and with the bands Nothing Painted Blue, The Extra Glenns, and (currently) The Human Hearts. His most recent CD is Local Currency: Solo 1992-1998, which collections?four-track recordings from vinyl 7$B!m(Bs and compilation albums. He holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from UCLA and has also taught at Northwestern University and Bard College. A native Southern Californian, Franklin now lives in Jackson Heights, Queens, where he just barely maintains the blog Nervous Unto Thirst.

Wednesday, February 10, 8 PM
Jim Carroll Memorial Reading

Poet, autobiographer and musician Jim Carroll (1949-2009) was a consistent and brilliant presence around the Poetry Project since he first read here in 1968. We will never forget his kindness, his generosity or his humor. Please join us as some of his closest friends pay tribute to him. With Bill Berkson, Todd

Colby, Anselm Berrigan, Richard Hell, Lenny Kaye, Thurston Moore, Lee Ranaldo, Patti Smith, Anne Waldman and others TBA. FREE

This event will take place in the Sanctuary.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you$B!G(Bd like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

53. charles alexander
Kaya Oakes gets it right
Thu 4 Feb 2010

Actually, I don't know if there's "right" take on Linh Dinh, but here's one with a lot of clarity and no blinders. Quite a review!

http://thefanzine.com/articles/poetry/403/some_kind_of_cheese_orgy_by_linh_dinh

charles

charles alexander
[redacted]

chax press / poetry & the book arts 411 n seventh ave ste 103 / tucson, az 85705-8388

presenting
Ron Silliman & Marilyn Crispell on Jan 30 2010
Andrew Joron, Michael Palmer, & Andrew Zawicki on March 7 2010

DONATE TO CHAX PRESS at http://chax.org/donate.htm

↑ Index

54. Al Filreis

Jacket: an announcement from John Tranter & Al Filreis

Thu 4 Feb 2010

Jacket magazine: An Announcement from John Tranter and Al Filreis

Dear friends:

We are writing with news of a transition we both deem very exciting.

By the end of 2010, John Tranter and Pam Brown will have put out 40 issues of Jacket (jacketmagazine.com). It began in what John recalls as "a rash moment" in 1997 - an early all-online magazine, one of the earliest in the world of poetry and poetics, and quite rare for its consistency over the years. "The design is beautiful, the contents awesomely voluminous, the slant international modernist and experimental." (So said _The Guardian_.)

After issue 40, John will retire from thirteen years of intense every- single-day involvement with Jacket, and the entire archive of thousands of web pages will move intact to servers at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, where it will of course be available on the internet to everyone, for free, as always. But the magazine is not ceasing publication: quite the opposite.

Starting with the first issue in 2011, Jacket will have a new home, extra staff and a vigorous future as Jacket2. Jacket and its continuation, Jacket2, will be hosted by the Kelly Writers House and PennSound at the University of Pennsylvania.

The connection with PennSound, a vast and growing archive of audio recordings of poetry performance, discussion and criticism, is seen as a valuable additional facet of the new magazine, as is the relationship with busy Kelly Writers House, a lively venue for day-to- day poetic interchange of all kinds. The synergy in this three-way relationship has great potential.

Al will become Publisher and Jessica Lowenthal, Director of the Writers House, will be Associate Publisher. The new Editor will be Michael S. Hennessey (currently Managing Editor of PennSound) and the new Managing Editor will be Julia Bloch. John will be available as Founding Editor, and Pam will continue as Associate Editor.

More news about Jacket2 in the weeks and months to come. Meantime, the Jacket2 folks extend gratitude -- as many in the world of poetics do -- to John and to Pam Brown for the extraordinary work they've done. And John, for his part, is mightily pleased that Jacket will be preserved and will continue and grow in a somewhat new mode but with a continuous mission and approach.

- John Tranter & Al Filreis
  http://jackemagazine.com

links:

Al Filreis: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/ & http://writing.upenn.edu/

Kelly Writers House: http://www.writing.upenn.edu/wh/
3805 Locust Walk, Philadelphia, PA 19104, USA: tel: 215-746-POEM

Kelly Writers House Director Jessica Lowenthal:
http://writing.upenn.edu/wh/people/staff/

Michael S. Hennessey: http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Hennessey.php

Julia Bloch: http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Bloch.php

Pam Brown: http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/

John Tranter: http://johntranter.com/

Al Filreis
http://www.writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis

↑ Index

55. John Tranter
Jacket magazine: An Announcement from John Tranter and Al Filreis
Thu 4 Feb 2010

Jacket magazine: An Announcement from John Tranter and Al Filreis

Dear friends:

We are writing with news of a transition we both deem very exciting.

By the end of 2010, John Tranter and Pam Brown will have put out 40 issues of Jacket (jacketmagazine.com). It began in what John recalls as "a rash moment" in 1997 - an early all-online magazine, one of the earliest in the world of poetry and poetics, and quite rare for its consistency over the years. "The design is beautiful, the contents awesomely voluminous, the slant international modernist and experimental." (So said _The Guardian_.)

After issue 40, John will retire from thirteen years of intense every-single-day involvement with Jacket, and the entire archive of thousands of web pages will move intact to servers at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, where it will of course be available on the internet to everyone, for free, as always. But the magazine is not ceasing publication: quite the opposite.

Starting with the first issue in 2011, Jacket will have a new home, extra staff and a vigorous future as Jacket2. Jacket and its continuation, Jacket2, will be hosted by the Kelly Writers House and PennSound at the University of Pennsylvania.

The connection with PennSound, a vast and growing archive of audio recordings of poetry performance, discussion and criticism, is seen as a valuable additional facet of the new magazine, as is the relationship with busy Kelly Writers House, a lively venue for day-to-day poetic interchange of all kinds. The synergy in this three-way relationship has great potential.

Al will become Publisher and Jessica Lowenthal, Director of the Writers House, will be Associate Publisher. The new Editor will be Michael S. Hennessey (currently Managing Editor of PennSound) and the new Managing Editor will be Julia Bloch. John will be available as Founding Editor, and Pam will continue as Associate Editor.

More news about Jacket2 in the weeks and months to come. Meantime, the Jacket2 folks extend gratitude -- as many in the world of poetics do -- to John and to Pam Brown for the extraordinary work they've done. And John, for his part, is mightily pleased that Jacket will be preserved and will continue and grow in a somewhat new mode but with a continuous mission and approach.

John Tranter & Al Filreis
http://jackemagazine.com

Informative links:

The University of Pennsylvania: http://www.upenn.edu/

Al Filreis: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/
http://writing.upenn.edu/

Kelly Writers House: http://www.writing.upenn.edu/wh/
3805 Locust Walk, Philadelphia, PA 19104, USA: tel: 215-746-POEM

Kelly Writers House Director: Jessica Lowenthal:
http://writing.upenn.edu/wh/people/staff/

Michael S. Hennessey: http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Hennessey.php

Julia Bloch: http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Bloch.php

Pam Brown: http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/

John Tranter: http://johntranter.com/

Apologies for cross-posting

---------- John Tranter

> http://johntranter.com/
>
> http://jacketmagazine.com/

39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Australia

↑ Index

56. Pierre Joris
Recent NOMADICS blog posts
Fri 5 Feb 2010

Check out these recent Nomadics blog posts here: http://pierrejoris.com/blog

Lost Caul: Clayton Eshleman on Lascaux

Fee Dawson's Great Day

From Amtrack to the Feuilletons

New York Times' Ethan Bronner's Conflict of Interest

Howard Zinn (1922-2010)

SPECIAL GAZA EDITION of Woodstock International

Haiti, Césaire, Translation, & The New Yorker

wishing you a good read & a great day, & Hank Aaron a Happy 76th BirthDay!

Pierre
==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========

↑ Index

57. Gary Sullivan
DIANA HAMILTON & DIVYA VICTOR @ SEGUE
Fri 5 Feb 2010

DIANA HAMILTON & DIVYA VICTOR
SEGUE SERIES @ BOWERY POETRY CLUB
Saturday, February 6, 4:00pm - 6:00pm

308 Bowery 1 block above Houston
Six bucks, goes to the readers

Diana Hamilton's poetry has appeared in mid)rib, Nap, Foursquare 3.1 and The Boog Reader 3 and is forthcoming in The Physical Poets Vol 3. She maintains a Web site at: sites.google.com/site/dianahamilton.

Divya Victor has lived and learned in India, Singapore, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Seattle. Her work has appeared in ambit, XConnect, ixnay, generator, dusie, President’s Choice, P-QUEUE and Drunken Boat. Her chapbook SUTURES has been released by Little Red Leaves Press.
_____ Your E-mail and More On-the-Go. Get Windows Live Hotmail Free.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469229/direct/01/

↑ Index

58. Francesco Levato
Split This Rock - Poetry Film Deadline Extended to Feb. 26th
Fri 5 Feb 2010

Call for Poetry Film and Video - Deadline Extended

New Postmark deadline: Friday, February 26, 2010

Split This Rock invites poets, writers, artists, activists, dreamers, and all concerned world citizens to submit original poetry films or videos for the 2nd Split This Rock Poetry Festival, to be held March 2010. We are looking for artistic, experimental, and challenging film/video interpretations of poetry that explore critical social issues. Selected work will be screened during the Split This Rock Poetry Festival film program. Entries can be up to 15 minutes long.

See the guidelines and entry form for full details and submission requirements.

Guidelines:
http://www.splitthisrock.org/documents/2010film_guidelines.pdf

Entry Form
http://www.splitthisrock.org/documents/2010film_entry.pdf

↑ Index

59. Eric Elshtain
Burroughs Homage at Gnoetry Daily
Fri 5 Feb 2010

Read a few gnoetically treated Burroughs routines:

http://gnoetrydaily.wordpress.com/

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

60. Patrick Dillon
Re: Burroughs Homage at Gnoetry Daily
Fri 5 Feb 2010

Just in time for his birthday, today (Feb 5th).

On Fri, Feb 5, 2010 at 3:35 PM, Eric Elshtain <[redacted]> wrote:

> Read a few gnoetically treated Burroughs routines:
>
> http://gnoetrydaily.wordpress.com/
>
> Eric Elshtain
> Editor
> Beard of Bees Press
> http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

61. amy king
This Is What a [Feminist] Poet Looks Like
Sat 6 Feb 2010

Artist-as-Moth
From Delirious Hem today -- Curated by Danielle Pafunda

Artist-as-Mother/Mother-as-Artist: A Metaphorical Resurrection -- Kristen Kaschock http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/kirsten-kaschock-2.html

â€œMy Barbaric Bitch of a Yawpâ€ -- Amy King
http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

Featuring:
Monday, February 1: Ching-In Chen, Jennifer Bartlett, & Kate Durbin
Tuesday, February 2: Juliet Cook & Kate Schapira
Wednesday, February 3: Kirsten Kaschock & Michele Battiste
Thursday, February 4: Michelle Detorie & Stephanie Strickland
Friday, February 5: T.A. Noonan & Theodora Danylevich
Saturday, February 6: Amy King & Kirsten Kaschock 2

http://delirioushem.blogspot.com

Enjoy!

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

62. Justin Katko

RODEFER & LISETTE: Friday 12 Feb, Cambridge (England)

Sat 6 Feb 2010

To inaugurate the new Cambridge Reading Series (CRS), Stephen Rodefer and Francesca Lisette will read their poetry (and the poetry of others) on Friday 12 February, at 7:30pm in the Judith E. Wilson Drama Studio in the Faculty of English, Cambridge, United Kingdom. CRS website: crs0hq.tumblr.com. See general announcement for the reading series, with more details and schedule, below the poets' bios.

****
*

FRANCESCA LISETTE is a poet currently living in Brighton, where she studies Critical Theory and coordinates the Chlorine reading series. She has published â€˜Tarorchidâ€™ with Grasp Press and her work has appeared in Crater, Axolotl, Klatch and Holly White. A collection with Grasp is forthcoming.

Carcanet has just published the selected poems Call It Thought by the American writer STEPHEN RODEFER. Mr Rodefer is also the author of One or Two Love Poems from the White World, VILLON by Jean Calais, The Bell Clerkâ€™s Tears Keep Flowing, Four Lectures (which was a winner of the American Poetry Centerâ€™s Annual Book Award), Oriï¬‚amme Day (with Ben Friedlander), Emergency Measures, Passing Duration, Leaving, Erasures, Left Under A Cloud, and Mon Canard, among other titles. Chicago Review published a special issue on his work in 2008. In addition to Villon, RODEFER has published translations of Sappho, selections from the Greek Anthology, Catullus, Lucretius, Dante, Baudelaire, Rilke, Frank Oâ€™Hara and the Cuban poet Noel Nicola. He is currently translating Baudelaire for a collection to be published next year, entitled Fever Flowers: Les ï¬‚eurs du val.

****
*

NEW READING SERIES!

The Cambridge Reading Series (CRS) is a new cycle of poetry readings taking place at the Faculty of English in Cambridge.

Dialogic in form and international in scope, this dynamic series breaks with the usual format. In addition to reading their own work, poets will also read the work of another poet, bringing a new dimension to the readings.

Each reading will be accompanied by a pamphlet publication featuring a selection of the participating poetsâ€™ work and critical responses to them.

Readings begin at 7:30pm and are held in the Judith E. Wilson Drama Studio, in the Faculty of English, West Road, Cambridge, United Kingdom.

FREE; ALL WELCOME; WINE SERVED

A full list of up-coming dates and readers is given below. Please direct any queries to Ryan Dobran (rdobran [at] gmail [dot] com) or see the CRS website: crs0hq.tumblr.com

The Cambridge Reading Series is funded by the Judith E. Wilson Fund and organised by English graduate students Ryan Dobran, Ian Heames, Justin Katko, Laura Kilbride, and Mike Wallace-Hadrill.

****
*

SCHEDULE
Friday 12 February: Francesca Lisette & Stephen Rodefer (Call It Thought book launch)
Friday 5 March: Peter Manson & Jefferson Toal
April 1-7 (Date TBA): Nour Mobarak & TBA
Friday 30 April: Jonty Tiplady & TBA
Friday 21 May: Jow Lindsay & John Wilkinson
Friday 18 Jun: Sean Bonney & Simon Jarvis

↑ Index

63. Amanda Earl
Women and Gendered Writing-latest essay from AHP
Sat 6 Feb 2010

In the latest AHP essay, Women and Gendered Writing, Pearl Pirie muses about the role of gender in writing and publishing and discusses the concept of gender itself, and whether or not there is such a thing as female poetry.

www.angelhousepress.com

hope you enjoy,
Amanda

Amanda Earl
AngelHousePress
www.angelhousepress.com
the angel is in the house

↑ Index

64. Scott Howard
RECONFIGURATIONS, Vol. 3: special features (3 of 4)
Sat 6 Feb 2010

---

* * *

Page Hill Starzinger, ed.
Preface to "MYTH, ERASURE & CONSEQUENCE: SELECTED POEMS"

http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/2009/11/page-starzinger-myth-erasure.html

"At the same time as I was choosing poems for Reconfigurations, I read about Green Dam in The New York Times—new computer software that China is requiring which can block content or allow the government to monitor Internet use and collect personal information: “[it] may simply be a Trojan horse…like downloading spyware onto your computer, but the government is the spy.” The danger (a mortal one in China) and the outrage to this new devil (the linking of localized story with ancient myth) was exactly what I found compelling about the nine poems that follow, each crafted by a different poet camped-out in places as idiosyncratic as Birmingham, Alabama and Brooklyn, New York."

http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/2009/11/myth-erasure-consequence-selected-poems.html

* * *

↑ Index

65. Jonathan Morse
Criticizing censorship while cowering from the censors
Sat 6 Feb 2010

At

http://jonathan-morse.blogspot.com/2010/02/sous-rature-illustration-becomes.html

I blog about a liberal newspaper which criticizes Yale University Press for censoring one of its own books. Punch line: the liberal newspaper itself practices the same kind of censorship, and then refuses to admit that that's what it's doing.

Jonathan Morse

↑ Index

66. CA Conrad

CAConrad & Vladimir Zykov @ Temple University

Sat 6 Feb 2010

DETAILS WITH LINKS AT http://CAConradevents.blogspot.com

Temple University
Thursday, February 11
8pm
1515 Market Street, Room 222
Philadelphia

There is a link to Vladimir's blog on the above events page.
I'll be reading from new (Soma)tics:
http://somaticpoetryexercises.blogspot.com/
HOPE TO SEE YOU THERE!

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

67. Bob Heman

i'll be featuring this saturday, Feb. 13, at Small's + collages in the new Otoliths

Sun 7 Feb 2010

Hi folks,

this is just to let you know that i'll be featuring this coming Saturday, February 13, at SMALL'S JAZZ CLUB, 183 West 10th Street (near 7th Avenue South) in New York's West Village - the reading starts at 5:00 p.m. and my co-feature will be Alan Devenish - admission is $6 and there will also be an open mic - the closest subways are the A, D, E and F to West 4th St. and the 1 to Sheridan Square - the Club is down some steps from street level also, on Tuesday, March 2, at 6:00 p.m. i'll be reading with Moira T. Smith and Katrinka Moore at the Cornelia St. Cafe, 29 Cornelia St., also in the West

Village, to celebrate Katrinka's new book, Thief, recent published by BlazeVOX Books

i'll be reading different pieces at each event so you'll hear more if you come to both and for those of you who are interested in my collages i have 4 pieces in the new issue of the Australian magazine Otoliths (no. 16), plus 3 collages in each of the two previous issues (nos. 14 and 15) - so if you want to see all 10 collages (all created in 2009) go to Otoliths at http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/and you'll find the latest issue (and can navigate to the older issues by clicking on "archives")

hope to see you all soon

- Bob

Bob Heman
[redacted]

↑ Index

68. Jim Andrews
Millie Niss
Sun 7 Feb 2010

Martha Deed, Millie's Niss's mother, has put together 111 photos of Millie from birth till shortly before her death on November 29. I've put those photos and Martha's notes about the photos on vispo.com, along with a piece of writing I did about Millie.

http://vispo.com/millie
http://vispo.com/millie/s.htm

Many thanks to Martha for allowing me and you access to these photos which are dear to her. I found them very moving and learned much about my friend's life that I did not know, previously. Thanks also to Martha for her generous correspondence with me, in a difficult time for her, throughout the process of our doing this project. I quote one of Martha's emails in its entirety in the writing I did; it is very illuminating concerning several issues relevant to the photos and provides us with some knowledge of the health problems Millie experienced throughout her life.

'For Millie Niss' also contains many links to Millie's work, writings about her, and to Martha's work. They worked together as a creative team sometimes known as M & M. Martha is continuing her own work and is also working on various projects involving Millie's writings and web art. Martha is continuing in her creativity, which one can't help but know Millie would have wished for her very much. She is continuing the Sporkworld blog she and Millie did together, for instance, at http://sporkworld.tumblr.com .

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

69. Susan Webster Schultz recent postings on Tinfish Editor's Blog
Mon 8 Feb 2010

The latest being a post on Sarah Palin's critique of Obama's use of language. Others include:

"Being a critic is a little like cleaning the toilet (on Donna Haraway in Honolulu)...
Not "why poetry?" but "why language?" Dinner with ...
"Who am I but my own critic?" Bringing Spring (and All) into the classroom
"Writing in [and by] Sand": Kaia Sand's _Remember to Wave_

Catch it all here: http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com

aloha, Susan Schultz

↑ Index

70. Allison Cobb
Fwd: New from Factory School
Mon 8 Feb 2010

Begin forwarded message:

> From: Factory School <[redacted]>
> Date: February 7, 2010 10:04:29 AM PST
> To: Info <[redacted]>
> Subject: New from Factory School
>
> Factory School is pleased to announce the publication of Heretical Texts, Volume 5:
>
> 1. TOWN, by Kate Schapira (70 pages): How we live differently in the same world, who we mean when we say we, what we mean when we say here.
>
> 2. Green-Wood, by Allison Cobb (166 pages): Wanders Brooklyn’s famous nineteenth century Green-Wood Cemetery and discovers that its 500 acres--hills and ponds, trees and graves--mirror the American landscape: a place marked by greed, war, and death, but still > pulsing with life.

>
> 3. Underground National, by Sueyeun Juliette Lee (108 pages): Go underground and enter into a subterranean consideration of how History collides with human memory to generate new, unseen currents for being.
>
> 4. House Envy of All the World, by Simone White (78 pages): Family, death, power, Poetry and blackness---each is implicated in a general failure of perfection and subjected to furious lyric re-thinking.
>
> 5. The City Real & Imagined, by CAConrad & Frank Sherlock (100 pages): Visit landmarks that remain standing, revisit citizens that live on in memory, and participate in the future mappings of your city yet to be realized--the city real & imagined.
>
> For complete details, visit: www.factoryschool.org/ht
>
> All books $15 paperback, $30 hardcover -- available now through Small Press Distribution (www.spdbooks.org).
>
> VOLUME DISCOUNT: Get a complete paperback set of HT Vol. 5 for $50 (33.3% discount). Order direct from Factory School using PayPal: www.factoryschool.com/pubs/order.html
>
> To order by check, please write to bmarsh at factoryschool.org.
>
> Factory School's discounted price includes shipping to the continental USA. Individuals only.

↑ Index

71. Mark Young

Out from Otoliths—Mary Kasimor's new book, & cruel red

Mon 8 Feb 2010

& cruel red

Mary Kasimor

68 pages

Cover design by Sheila E. Murphy

Otoliths 2010

ISBN: 978-0-9806025-9-3

$12.50 + p&h

URL: http://www.lulu.com/content/paperback-book/cruel-red/8262152

A seductive exploration of the individual—Mary Kasimor's new book is innovative and energy packed, crafted and aurally interesting, with poems ranging from classical myth to Freud to Rimbaud to butterflies. These poems delve insightfully into the person and the process of writing and definitely reward reading and rereading. —William Allegrezza

'There are always butterflies around death' and around the vivid poems of & cruel red language leaps with multi-layered pleasures. Diverse spaces, where 'tractors tow a fleece of sky', 'secrets circulate', where grass grows a spine, and it can rain moss. As the very first poem suggests 'you are tangled up', and indeed we are as we are lead to the threshold between chaos and order, pain and relief, burden and symphony. Deconstruction/ reproduction—Mary Kasimor navigates what lies between. All 'safety rolls away', bones are reshaped, the poems look for surprised freedoms and find them. —Diana Adams

A curious and open mind, in love with the writing of and experimenting with language, is awake within the pages of Mary Kasimor's new book, *& cruel red *. Nature and her creatures, the lives of saints, mythology immersed in the everyday reflect the presence of a poet whose subjects exist in all that life might offer. —Bobbi Lurie

The full catalog of Otoliths books, plus print editions of the journal, can be found at The Otoliths Storefront <http://stores.lulu.com/l_m_young>.

↑ Index

72. Factory School

New from Factory School

Mon 8 Feb 2010

Factory School is pleased to announce the publication of Heretical Texts, Volume 5:

1. TOWN, by Kate Schapira (70 pages): How we live differently in the same world, who we mean when we say we, what we mean when we say here.

2. Green-Wood, by Allison Cobb (166 pages): Wanders Brooklyn's famous nineteenth century Green-Wood Cemetery and discovers that its 500 acres--hills and ponds, trees and graves--mirror the American landscape: a place marked by greed, war, and death, but still pulsing with life.

3. Underground National, by Sueyeun Juliette Lee (108 pages): Go underground and enter into a subterranean consideration of how History collides with human memory to generate new, unseen currents for being.

4. House Envy of All the World, by Simone White (78 pages): Family, death, power, Poetry and blackness---each is implicated in a general failure of perfection and subjected to furious lyric re-thinking.

5. The City Real & Imagined, by CAConrad & Frank Sherlock (100 pages): Visit landmarks that remain standing, revisit citizens that live on in memory, and participate in the future mappings of your city yet to be realized--the city real & imagined.

For complete details, visit: www.factoryschool.org/ht

All books $15 paperback, $30 hardcover -- available now through Small Press Distribution (www.spdbooks.org).

VOLUME DISCOUNT: Get a complete paperback set of HT Vol. 5 for $50 (33.3% discount). Order direct from Factory School using PayPal: www.factoryschool.com/pubs/order.html

To order by check, please write to bmarsh at factoryschool.org.

Factory School's discounted price includes shipping to the continental USA. Individuals only.

↑ Index

73. CA Conrad
City Real & Imagined
Mon 8 Feb 2010

CAConrad & Frank Sherlock are very pleased to announce the publication of their new book

The City Real & Imagined (Factory School, 2010)

NOW AVAILABLE TO ORDER @ SPD, PLEASE CLICK HERE: http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781600010736/the-city-real--imagined.aspx?rf=1

TO SEE PAGE SAMPLES & MORE, PLEASE CLICK HERE: http://CityRealAndImagined.blogspot.com

FOR AUTUMN KONOPKA'S INTERVIEW WITH THE POETS ABOUT THE BOOK, CLICK HERE: http://criinterview.blogspot.com/

Wander with CAConrad and Frank Sherlock through this psychogeographical poem. Experience peoples' histories and magical traditions rooted in the first capital of the American possible--the city of Philadelphia. Visit landmarks that remain standing, revisit citizens that live on in memory, and participate in the future mappings of your city yet to be realized--the city real and imagined.

THANKS SO MUCH

Below is the official release from the press for all 5 books in the new Heretical Texts Series:

Factory School is pleased to announce the publication of Heretical Texts, Volume 5:

1. TOWN, by Kate Schapira (70 pages): How we live differently in the same world, who we mean when we say we, what we mean when we say here.

2. Green-Wood, by Allison Cobb (166 pages): Wanders Brooklyn’s famous nineteenth century Green-Wood Cemetery and discovers that its 500 acres--hills and ponds, trees and graves--mirror the American landscape: a place marked by greed, war, and death, but still pulsing with life.

3. Underground National, by Sueyeun Juliette Lee (108 pages): Go underground and enter into a subterranean consideration of how History collides with human memory to generate new, unseen currents for being.

4. House Envy of All the World, by Simone White (78 pages): Family, death, power, Poetry and blackness---each is implicated in a general failure of perfection and subjected to furious lyric re-thinking.

5. The City Real & Imagined, by CAConrad & Frank Sherlock (100 pages): Visit landmarks that remain standing, revisit citizens that live on in memory, and participate in the future mappings of your city yet to be realized--the city real & imagined.

For complete details, visit: www.factoryschool.org/ht

All books $15 paperback, $30 hardcover -- available now through Small Press Distribution (www.spdbooks.org).

VOLUME DISCOUNT: Get a complete paperback set of HT Vol. 5 for $50 (33.3% discount). Order direct from Factory School using PayPal: www.factoryschool.com/pubs/order.html

To order by check, please write to bmarsh at factoryschool.org.

Factory School's discounted price includes shipping to the continental USA. Individuals only.

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

74. Marc Nasdor

Review of "Sonnetailia" by Marc Nasdor on Ron Silliman's blog

Tue 9 Feb 2010

Hi all,

Today Ron Silliman posted a review of my book of poems, "Sonnetailia," which was published at the end of 2007. I am thankful for his kind words:

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/or http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/search?q=nasdor (to go directly to the review).

"Sonnetailia" can be ordered online here:
http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781931824279/sonnetailia.aspx

- Marc

Marc Nasdor
127 Thames Street, #3L
Brooklyn, NY 11237
[redacted]

Email: [redacted]
http://www.myspace.com/poodlecannon

↑ Index

75. Kyle Schlesinger

Reading at Mills (02.09) and ON launch at Moe's Books (02.10)

Tue 9 Feb 2010

I'll be reading at Mills College in Oakland on Tuesday February 9th from 5:30 to 7:00. Free and open to the public.

The following night (Wednesday February 10th at 7:30) we'll be celebrating the release of the second issue of ON, an annual poetics journal I edit with Michael Cross and Thom Donovan, at Moe's Books (2476 Telegraph Avenue | Berkeley, CA 94704-2392). The event will feature readings and performances by: DZ Brazil, Brandon Brown, Taylor Brady, Jocelyn Saidenberg, Robin Tremblay-McGaw, Dan Thomas-Glass, Alli Warren, Suzanne Stein, and Laura Moriarty.

Hope to see you soon,

Kyle
www.kyleschlesinger.com <http://www.kyleschlesinger.com>

↑ Index

76. amy king
The "What Else" of Queer Poetry
Tue 9 Feb 2010

â€¦In queer poetry, desire blooms, and yes, I may just marry my dogâ€”

Excerpts (for abbreviated readers) -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/02/09/the-what-else-of-queer-poetry/

The Whole Shebang -- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

Gather ye rosebuds, while ye may,

Amy

--
BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

↑ Index

77. Ken Rumble
Desert City Poetry Series Readings...
Tue 9 Feb 2010

Hey folks,

I just posted audio files of all the Desert City readings from 2004 to 2006 that I have:

Season 2004-05:

http://715space.bandcamp.com/album/desert-city-2004-05-season

Season 2005-06:

http://715space.bandcamp.com/album/desert-city-2005-06-season

Readers include Kent Johnson <http://radio.weblogs.com/0113501/2005/03/28.html#a505> & Patrick Herron <http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2005/03/kjph-post-game.html> Lisa Jarnot<http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2005/04/readings-greyhounds-spartans-caracals.html>& Andrea

Selch<http://www.angelfire.com/poetry/lisajarnot/blog/index.blog?entry_id=392191> Lee Ann Brown<http://marcusslease.blogspot.com/2005/05/final-desert-city-reading-for-2005.html>& Carl Martin<http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2005/05/season-three-draws-to-close.html> Brenda Coultas <http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2005/09/from-monday.html> & Marcus Slease <http://marcusslease.blogspot.com/2005/09/desert-city.html> Brent Cunningham<http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2005/10/reading-post-game.html>& Tessa Joseph<http://unquietgrave.blogspot.com/2005/10/enjoying-miniature-duke-fall-break.html> John Taggart <http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2005/10/what-night.html> & Randall Williams Sarah Manguso <http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2005/11/2005-cest-fin.html> & Julian Semilian<http://marcusslease.blogspot.com/2005/11/nov-blue-door-and-dc-readings.html> Ed Roberson & Todd Sandvik<http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2006/01/afterwards.html> Claudia Rankine & Christopher Davis<http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2006/02/claudia-rankine-christopher-davis-this.html> Selah Saterstrom<http://unquietgrave.blogspot.com/2006/03/stunningly-terrific-evening-last-night.html> Emmanuel Hocquard & Rosmarie Waldrop<http://desertcity.blogspot.com/2006/04/cest-fin.html>

cheers,
Ken

--
Check out a review of my book Key Bridge
by Kevin Killian:
http://www.amazon.com/gp/product/customer-reviews/0932112544/ref=cm_cr_dp_all_top/002-7537401-5750437?ie=UTF8&n=283155&s=books#customerReviews

And recent projects & press:

715 Washington:
http://715space.bandcamp.com

News & Observer Video:
http://www.newsobserver.com/videos/?media_id=7034056

N & O Article:
http://www.newsobserver.com/entertainment/arts/story/166216.html

Duke Chronicle Features:
http://dukechronicle.com/node/36595

http://dukechronicle.com/article/space-becomes-dreams-come-true

Video of "Cliffs (Empty)":
http://kathrynlpringle.blogspot.com/2009/09/cliffs-empty-video.html

Durham Has the Worst Roads in the World with Violet Rumble http://durhamhastheworstroadsintheworld.blogspot.com

↑ Index

78. steve russell
Nafeez Ahmed responds to Hitchens, defends Gore Vidal
Tue 9 Feb 2010

Nafeez
Ahmed Responds to Christopher Hitchens in today's Independent on Sunday, in Defence of Gore Vidal
7.2.10

As published on Ahmed's blog (http://nafeez.blogspot.com):

↑ Index

79. Jennifer Karmin
Feb 12: The New Tentacle in Chicago
Tue 9 Feb 2010

THE NEW TENTACLE
literary uses for religious text: a reading

You are invited to an evening of work in response to religious texts (or to religion as text) -- from Gilgamesh to Buddha to Biblical woman to 18th century American hymns, watch the sacred and the profane mix and mingle before your very eyes for a one-time-only living room show overlooking Kedzie Boulevard in beautiful Logan Square, Chicago.

7pm Friday, February the 12th
free / donations accepted

2253 N. Kedzie Blvd -- Chicago, IL
Apartment #2 (buzzer: Murfin/Wooten/Bean) btw Belden & Lyndale, s. of Fullerton
CTA Logan Square Blue Line

The evening's entertainments will include the religo-linguistic stylings of:

HV Cramond
Daniel Godston
Nicholas Alexander Hayes
A D Jameson

Jennifer Karmin
Heather Momyer
Ira S. Murfin
Sherrie Weller
&
Alicia Jo Rabins
---> We are welcoming the Brooklyn-based poet & musician to town and celebrating the release of her her art-pop song cycle about Biblical women, Girls in Trouble. She is the violinist in klezmer-rock band Golem, and her album Girls in Trouble was released on Jdub Records in November 2009. Her poems have appeared in Boston Review, 6 x 6, Poems of Brooklyn (NYU Press) and Horse Poems (Everyman's Library).

Of her appearance at The New Tentacle she says,
"My performance will definitely involve live violin looping, singing about obscure Biblical women, and perhaps reading from an ongoing series of surreal instruction manuals."

http://www.myspace.com/girlsintroublemusic http://www.lmcc.net/art/residencies/workspace/2009/session/alicia-rabins.html

↑ Index

80. Mark DuCharme
Stratford Park Reading Series: CHESTER, CEBULA & OPRIS, February 23rd
Tue 9 Feb 2010

The Stratford Park Reading Series

proudly presents...

Travis Cebula, Jeff Chester & Gia Opris

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 23RD at 7:30 p.m.

A Donation is requested— but All are welcome!

A reception will follow the reading.

§

Address: 3030 O'Neal Parkway, Boulder, CO

http://www.mapquest.com/maps?city=Boulder&state=CO&address=3030+O’neal+Parkway&zipcode=80301

DIRECTIONS: O’Neal Parkway is off 30th Street in north Boulder between Valmont & Iris. Turn East at the signs for STRATFORD PARK WEST. The community house is the one-story building with a fence leading down to the street, half a block from 30th. Please park ONLY on O'Neal Parkway, O'Neal Circle, or in VISITOR spaces in the Stratford Park West lots. Please do not park in any other nearby lots. Thank you.

§

Gianina Opris is the author of three chapbooks of poetry, including Moon is Always Moon (Green Fuse Poetic Arts). Her most recent project is a musical recording entitled Lagrimas. Awards received: selected for 2004 international poetry exhibition, NW Cultural Council, Barrington, IL. Gianina holds a Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing from Naropa University and teaches Language Arts/Visual Arts in the Denver Public Schools. Her latest works have appeared in Blaze Vox, Not Enough Night, 63 Channels, and Cyclamens & Swords Publishing. Gianina has taught workshops and presented her poetics/multi-media and visual arts productions in Colorado, New Mexico, Cuernavaca (México) and Mancora, (Perú). "Gia" is a native of Lima, Perú who lives in Denver.

Gia's books, CDs, and PhOtoGraPhIc cards are available at: www.polkadotdenver.com

§

Travis Cebula currently resides in Golden, Colorado with his wife, Shannon. He holds an MFA in Writing and Poetics from Naropa University, as well as a BA in Philosophy, English, and Political Science from Colorado State University. In addition to helping out as Poetry Editor for Monkey Puzzle Magazine, he is the founder, publisher, and editor of Shadow Mountain Press and teaches poetry and literature classes through The University of Denver's adult and continuing education extension.

His poems, photographs, essays, and stories have appeared internationally in various print and on-line journals, including Monkey Puzzle, Dear Sir, Night Bomb, Eleven-Eleven, Noon, BlazeVOX, The Talking River Review, Bombay Gin, and Fact-Simile.

He is the author of four chapbooks: Commence, Some Colors Will Touch Regardless, Jamaica, and The Kingfisher Variations, which are available or forthcoming from Shadow Mountain Press, Fact-Simile Editions, Bedouin Books, and Scantily Clad Press, respectively. His first book-length collection of poetry and photography, Some Exits, was released in 2009 by Monkey Puzzle Press.

§

Jeff Chester: bio forthcoming.

§

Upcoming Events in the Stratford Park Reading Series:

TUESDAY, MARCH 30TH: Andrew Schelling & Erik Anderson.

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

81. Cheryl Pallant

Jenkins & Pallant reading, collaboration discussion

Tue 9 Feb 2010

In celebration of their recently published, collaboratively written poetry book, /Morphs/, published by Cracked Slab Books, Grant Jenkins and Cheryl Pallant will be reading in Fayetteville Arkansas and Norman Oklahoma. Join them in poetry and a discussion on collaboration.

Fayetteville AR
Feb 10, 7pm
Fayetteville Public Library, 401 W. Mountain St.

Norman OK
Feb 17, 7pm
University of Oklahoma
Ellison Hall, 632 Elm Avenue

↑ Index

82. amy king

Re: Millie Niss

Tue 9 Feb 2010

I don't see the photos, just your note - can you give a direct link? _____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

INTERVIEW

Bookslut-- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php

_____
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 7, 2010 3:57:37 PM
Subject: Millie Niss

Martha Deed, Millie's Niss's mother, has put together 111 photos of Millie from birth till shortly before her death on November 29. I've put those photos and Martha's notes about the photos on vispo.com, along with a piece of writing I did about Millie.

http://vispo.com/millie
http://vispo.com/millie/s.htm

Many thanks to Martha for allowing me and you access to these photos which are dear to her. I found them very moving and learned much about my friend's life that I did not know, previously. Thanks also to Martha for her generous correspondence with me, in a difficult time for her, throughout the process of our doing this project. I quote one of Martha's emails in its entirety in the writing I did; it is very illuminating concerning several issues relevant to the photos and provides us with some knowledge of the health problems Millie experienced throughout her life.

'For Millie Niss' also contains many links to Millie's work, writings about her, and to Martha's work. They worked together as a creative team sometimes known as M & M. Martha is continuing her own work and is also working on various projects involving Millie's writings and web art. Martha is continuing in her creativity, which one can't help but know Millie would have wished for her very much. She is continuing the Sporkworld blog she and Millie did together, for instance, at http://sporkworld.tumblr.com .

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

83. Martha Deed
Re: Millie Niss
Tue 9 Feb 2010

Dear Amy--

Thanks for letting us know you couldn't find the photos. Direct link is http://vispo.com/millie/s.htm

If you click between the brackets on the upper left-hand corner, you will see the photos in their larger format with the notes. Place to click looks like this: [...]

Hope this helps,
Martha

amy king wrote:
> I don't see the photos, just your note - can you give a direct link?
> _____

>
> BOOK
>
> Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm
>
> INTERVIEW
>
> Bookslut-- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php
>
>
>
>
> _____
> From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Sun, February 7, 2010 3:57:37 PM
> Subject: Millie Niss
>
> Martha Deed, Millie's Niss's mother, has put together 111 photos of Millie > from birth till shortly before her death on November 29. I've put those > photos and Martha's notes about the photos on vispo.com, along with a piece > of writing I did about Millie.
>
> http://vispo.com/millie
> http://vispo.com/millie/s.htm
>
> Many thanks to Martha for allowing me and you access to these photos which > are dear to her. I found them very moving and learned much about my friend's > life that I did not know, previously. Thanks also to Martha for her generous > correspondence with me, in a difficult time for her, throughout the process > of our doing this project. I quote one of Martha's emails in its entirety in > the writing I did; it is very illuminating concerning several issues > relevant to the photos and provides us with some knowledge of the health > problems Millie experienced throughout her life.
>
> 'For Millie Niss' also contains many links to Millie's work, writings about > her, and to Martha's work. They worked together as a creative team sometimes > known as M & M. Martha is continuing her own work and is also working on > various projects involving Millie's writings and web art. Martha is > continuing in her creativity, which one can't help but know Millie would > have wished for her very much. She is continuing the Sporkworld blog she and > Millie did together, for instance, at http://sporkworld.tumblr.com .

>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

84. Camille Martin
new at Rogue Embryo
Tue 9 Feb 2010

New on my blog:

* Trevor Joyce: Let them eat fire

* Barbara Guest: "BLEAT"

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.ca

↑ Index

85. Mark Weiss
The Whole Island, Reading
Tue 9 Feb 2010

Reading from The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry, Wednesday Feb. 17th at 8, at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church, 131 E. 10th Street, N.Y. Participants: poets and translators Chris Brandt, Lourdes Gil, Mónica de la Torre, Jason Weiss and Mark Weiss.

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press). http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

"Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

86. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: Millie Niss

Wed 10 Feb 2010

I am sorry to hear about Millie's death. We used to be in correspondence and had spent one afternoon together. At that time she was doing translations of Rimbaud's poetry. I thought they were the best Rimbaud translations into English I had read and told her so.

Her continuous onrush of physical misfortunes had, to me, a phantasmagorical air about them, not that they were not real; but an amazement that one could have so many of them, and so remorselessly. At that time, I think, she still assumed she was bi-polar or suffering from some other such mental disease. My reaction to her diseases was colored by that information.

She was one of the most brilliant people I knew, following her own music. I was an avid follower of her blogs. I even participated in one of her projects,

My best wishes to her mother.

Murat

On Sun, Feb 7, 2010 at 3:57 PM, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

> Martha Deed, Millie's Niss's mother, has put together 111 photos of Millie from birth till shortly before her death on November 29. I've put those photos and Martha's notes about the photos on vispo.com, along with a piece > of writing I did about Millie.
>
> http://vispo.com/millie
> http://vispo.com/millie/s.htm
>
> Many thanks to Martha for allowing me and you access to these photos which > are dear to her. I found them very moving and learned much about my friend's > life that I did not know, previously. Thanks also to Martha for her generous

> correspondence with me, in a difficult time for her, throughout the process > of our doing this project. I quote one of Martha's emails in its entirety in > the writing I did; it is very illuminating concerning several issues > relevant to the photos and provides us with some knowledge of the health > problems Millie experienced throughout her life.
>
> 'For Millie Niss' also contains many links to Millie's work, writings about > her, and to Martha's work. They worked together as a creative team sometimes > known as M & M. Martha is continuing her own work and is also working on > various projects involving Millie's writings and web art. Martha is > continuing in her creativity, which one can't help but know Millie would > have wished for her very much. She is continuing the Sporkworld blog she and > Millie did together, for instance, at http://sporkworld.tumblr.com .
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

87. Douglas Manson Chapbook by Jonathan Skinner
Wed 10 Feb 2010

Announcing the publication of Jonathan Skinner's chapbook With Naked Foot, which will be featured in the upcoming Poets House Showcase of new poetry books this April. Jonathan will be conducting two seminars and a workshop at Poets House entitled "Ecopoetics After Copenhagen" in May of this year. For more information about this seminar, please visit the "eco" page at Poets House <http://poetshouse.org/progwkshp.htm#eco>.

In the February/March 2010 issue of The Poetry Project Newsletter<http://poetryproject.org/publications/newsletter>, Edmund Berrigan describes Jonathan Skinner as a poet's poet who "has an elegant way across a poem, and offers an updated set of movements on a valuable resource: the nature poem."

Here is some additional praise for his poetry:

Jonathan Skinner has from the very beginning been the knight errant of eco-poetics. He stands in company with Jack Collom and Merrill Gilfillan, stalking "with naked foot" poetically and democratically (like St. George), the enormous carbon footprints of a no longer jolly, green GIANT. --Michael Gizzi Hoa Nguyen describes With Naked Foot as: a compact field guide to a life deeply lived. Not afraid to name birds, bodies in time and space, how the heart is, how animals. Lush sound fields--at once Keatsian and Olsonic in its mind moves. "do not eat me let me/ bloom and fuck let live/ this exhortation in me / against use." A fantastic group of poems from this Earth inhabitant.

little scratch pad press will happily and promptly mail you a copy of this book for $7 postage paid in the US, $10 to Canada & Mexico, $15 overseas). Orders can be requested by email, or by writing

douglas manson 246 77th St.
Brooklyn, NY 11209

http://dougfinmanson.blogspot.com/2010/02/jonathan-skinners-with-naked-foot.html

↑ Index

88. Sarah Sarai
New review of my book on Ghoti Mag.
Wed 10 Feb 2010

---

poet CL Bledsoe reviews The Future Is Happy
http://www.ghotimag.com/ReviewSarai.htm

It's an insightful review.

The Future Is Happy -- my first book. I've lost my way (a bit) since it was published. Thank God/goddesses/many named unnameable/unmoved but moving mover there are ways backs.

Sarah Sarai
she's not alone in the wilderness

http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ss2.htm

↑ Index

89. amy king
Re: Millie Niss
Wed 10 Feb 2010

Thanks very much, Martha - and thank you for Millie.

From: Martha Deed <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, February 9, 2010 8:20:17 PM
Subject: Re: Millie Niss

Dear Amy--

Thanks for letting us know you couldn't find the photos. Direct link is http://vispo.com/millie/s.htm

If you click between the brackets on the upper left-hand corner, you will see the photos in their larger format with the notes. Place to click looks like this: [...]

Hope this helps,
Martha

amy king wrote:

↑ Index

90. Mirela Roznovschi
Tribute to Max Blecher at Salmagundi
Wed 10 Feb 2010

Event @ Salmagundi: Wednesday, February 24, 6:00 PM
A Centenary Remembrance of a Visionary Poet (1909-1938)

Max Blecher (September 8, 1909 â€“ 1938) was already bedridden with spinal tuberculosis when his first work was published in Romania in 1930; a short story called "Herrant" in Tudor Arghezi's literary magazine Bilete de papagal. Despite his illness, he continued to write and in addition to a number of short prose pieces, articles, translations and a volume of poetry (1935), he published two major works; ÃŽntÃ¢mplÄƒri Ã®n irealitatea imediatÄƒ (Adventures in Immediate Unreality) and Inimi cicatrizate (Scarred Hearts).

On Wednesday, February 24, author and poet Valery Oisteanu will host an afternoon of readings in remembrance of this largely unknown talent. He will be joined by actors and poets Tom Walker, Shelley Miller, Max Blagg, Judy Altman, Ruth Friedman, pianist Carlo Altomare, and literary critic and author Mirela Roznoveanu. This event is free and open to the public.

Salmagundi: 47 Fifth Ave @ 12th street, NYC 10003 http://www.salmagundi.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

91. Rob McLennan

new poetry collection; wild horses, University of Alberta Press;

Wed 10 Feb 2010

My seventeenth poetry collection, wild horses, is now available from the University of Alberta Press. Watch for April launches (with Robert Kroetsch + Alice Major) in Edmonton and Calgary, with other launches in Toronto and Ottawa, at least, coming soon. Either order directly from the publisher, from your local bookstore, or send me $22 (CAN or US) and I'll drop one in the mail to you, c/o 858 Somerset Street West, main floor, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7. For media/review copies, send an email to Cathie Crooks at [redacted]

http://www.uap.ualberta.ca/UAP.asp?LIDA&bookID7 wild horses

rob mclennan

Cast during his year in the U of A's writer in residency, wild horses is Ottawan rob mclennan's deep lyrical engagement with Edmonton, Alberta. He sees the new terrain through his peculiar, sympathising lens--characterised by impassioned tones that range from brusque to tender. There is something of the magpie in him: nothing escapes his subtle gaze, his flighty wit, his voracious gleaning of experience. His supple lines meander and flit over scapes of love, home, family, and literature, rewarding the magpie-minded with a lucid estrangement to things both unfamiliar and familiar.

ISBN: 978-0-88864-535-7
Price: CND$ 19.95, USD$ 19.95, 13
Discount: Trade
Subject: Poetry/Canadian Literature

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

92. William Slaughter

Notice: Mudlark

Wed 10 Feb 2010

New and On View: Mudlark Poster No. 86 (2010)

Two Poems by Oliver Rice

Harry Comes, A Stranger, Perceiving
Who Sometimes Wake in the Wrong City

Oliver Rice's poems have appeared widely in journals and anthologies in the United States, as well as Canada, Argentina, England, The Netherlands, Austria, Turkey, and India. His book of poems, On Consenting to Be a Man, is offered by Cyberwit, a diversified publishing house in the cultural capital Allahabad, India, and is available on Amazon.com.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

93. David Kirschenbaum

Save the Date: Boog in San Francisco, 3/17

Wed 10 Feb 2010

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives:
celebrating editors from
Northern California renegade presses

Wed. March 17, 7:30 p.m. sharp, free

Books and Bookshelves
99 Sanchez St.
San Francisco

featuring readings from

Albert Flynn DeSilver
editor The Owl Press (Woodacre, Calif.)

Travis Ortiz
co-editor Atelos Publishing Project (Berkeley, Calif.)

Jill Stengel
editor a+bend press (Davis, Calif.)

Eileen R. Tabios
editor Meritage Press (San Francisco/St. Helena, Calif.)

and from New York City

David Kirschenbaum
editor, Boog City

and music from

The Chris Stroffolino Pop Snob Sideshow

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

For more info call Books and Bookshelves at [redacted]
or Boog City at 212-842-BOOG (2664)

Boog City
http://welcometoboogcity.com/

Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 19th year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women's writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates two regular performance series--d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Chelsea's ACA Galleries; and Classic Albums Live, where 5-13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, CBGB's, and The Knitting Factory. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

Albert Flynn DeSilver
http://www.theowlpress.com/

Albert Flynn DeSilver is a poet, teacher, visual artist, and publisher living in Woodacre, Calif. He is the editor and publisher of The Owl Press, which publishes innovative poetry and poetic collaboration. He received a B.F.A. in photography from the University of Colorado, and an M.F.A. in New Genres from the San Francisco Art Institute. He is the author, most recently, of Letters to Early Street, (La Alameda/ University of New Mexico Press), and Walking Tooth & Cloud (French Connection Press, Paris). He has published more than a hundred poems in literary journals worldwide including Zyzzyva, New American Writing, Jacket (Australia), Poetry Kanto (Japan), Van Gogh’s Ear (France), Hanging Loose, and Exquisite Corpse, among others. The most recent Owl Press title is Bill Berkson’s Our Friends Will Pass Among You Silently.

David Kirschenbaum
http://www.boogcity.blogspot.com
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

David Kirschenbaum's work has appeared in The Brooklyn Review Online, can we have our ball back, Chain, Pavement Saw, and unpleasant event schedule, among others. He is the lyricist for the band Gilmore Boys, and the editor and publisher of Boog City, a New York City-based small press now in its 19th year and East Village community newspaper.

Travis Ortiz
http://www.atelos.org/travis/

Travis Ortiz is a writer, publisher, dj, and designer living in San Francisco. Ortiz has work in various publications including Bay Poetics and Poetics Journal, and has written two books, Geography of Parts (Melodeon) and Variously, not Then (forthcoming, Tuumba). He is the co-director (with Lyn Hejinian) of Atelos, a literary project commissioning and publishing cross-genre work by poets. Atelos was nominated as one of the best independent literary presses by the Firecracker Awards in 2001.

Jill Stengel
http://www.dusie.org/Langiappe_Stengel.pdf

Jill Stengel is a poet, publisher of a+bend press, and parent of three young children. Formerly of San Francisco and Los Angeles, she now resides with her family in Davis, Calif. Several of her serial poems have appeared in chapbook form—cartography (WOOD); History, Possibilities (a+bend press); ladies with babies (Boog Literature); lagniappe (Nous-Zot Press, Dusie Kollektiv); late may (Dusie); may(be) (Dusie); and the forthcoming and I would open (Ypolita) and wreath (Texfiles). Some of these chapbooks, and individual poems, can be viewed online as well as in print, and she has new work in the forthcoming anthology Kindergarde. Her first full-length collection is forthcoming this year from Black Radish Books.

Begun in San Francisco in 1999, a+bend press published 40 chapbooks in its first 20 months of existence. Stengel produced the chapbooks in conjunction with her reading series, Second Sundays at BlueBar, held in the poetically historic North Beach district of San Francisco.

The press took a chapbook-publishing hiatus for nine years, during which time she produced three children and five issues of the journal mem, focusing on writing by women mothering young children, and page mothers. Now the hiatus is on hiatus: a new a+bend press chapbook was released at the end of last year.

Eileen R. Tabios
http://marshhawkpress.org/Tabios4.htm

Eileen R. Tabios has released 18 print, four electronic, and 1 CD poetry collections, an art essay collection, a poetry essay/interview anthology, a short story book, and two novels. She has also exhibited visual art and visual poetry in the United States and Asia. Recipient of the Philippines' National Book Award for Poetry, she's just come out with The Thorn Rosary: Selected Prose Poems 1998-2010, edited with an introduction by poet-critic-painter-scholar Thomas Fink and with an afterword by poet-scholar Joi Barrios. In poetry, Tabios has crafted a body of work that is unique for melding ekphrasis with transcolonialism. Her poems have been translated into Spanish, Italian, Tagalog, Japanese, Portuguese, Polish, Greek, computer- generated hybrid languages, paintings, video, drawings, visual poetry, mixed media collages, Kali martial arts, music, modern dance, and sculpture. She's the publisher of Meritage Press (St. Helena & San Francisco).

The Chris Stroffolino Pop Snob Sideshow
http://www.myspace.com/chrisstroffolino

Chris Stroffolino writes: "I dedicate this bio note to the late Vic Chesnutt, who died on boxing days eve 2009, as a direct result of American health insurance business. A quadriplegic since 1983, Chesnutt's 'pre-existing condition' prevented him from receiving adequate treatment. He could have received SSI Disability because of his condition, but his accident also awakened his songwriting ability, and he heroically battled his condition for 25 years--releasing many albums (the most recent one produced by Jonathan Richman)--and, though he never made enough money to pay for the exorbitant costs of his health treatement, he made TOO MUCH to be eligible for Social Security disability support. It's a sad cruelty of America that had he had not tried to make something of himself after his accident, and achieved success as a songwriter (at his best, he reminds me of what I love about Townes Van Zandt), he would have received more economic support for his 'health issues.'

"Of course, the basic obituaries will just say, 'he died of an overdose of pain killers,' but read his statements about his health care, and you tell me if this beautiful heroic survivor's death was 'suicide.' I am absolutely sure that Vic would not mind being used as a rallying cry in his death. He's so much more--but another reason to step up the fight for Single Payer."

Oh, as for Chris Stroffolino--he likes to think you can trust him, and says you might even like his new solo album, available at the above url.

Directions:
1.5 blocks from Church St. and Market St. Muni
Venue is bet. 14th St and Duboce Ave.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City

330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

94. Chad Sweeney

Jennifer and Chad Sweeney read in Pittsburgh, Maryland, West Virginia

Thu 11 Feb 2010

---

ennifer and Chad Sweeney readings in Pittsburgh, Maryland and West VirginiaÂ Dear poets, our first time to this area. Â Come out and meet us, if you're not too busy. Â We'll make snow angels. Â Cheers, CSÂ Tuesday, Feb 15: 8PM, Hungry Sphinx Reading SeriesSphinx CafÃ©, Oakland in Pittsburghcorner of Atwood and Bates,with open mic to follow, host Jan BeattyÂ Fairmont Statue University,Friday, Feb 12 at 6:30Fairmont, West Virginia, host Donna LongÂ Valentineâ€™s Day, Feb 14Blue Moose Cafe, 7:30 PM,248 Walnut Street,Morgontown, West Virginia, host Lori WintersÂ Frostburg State University: Monday, Feb 15 7:30 PMMain Street Books, downtown2 E. Main StreetFrostburg, Maryland, host Gerry Lafemina Jennifer K. Sweeneyâ€™s second poetry collection,Â How to Live on Bread and Music,received the 2009 James Laughlin Award from the Academy of American Poets as well as the Perugia Press Prize.Â Â Her first book,Â Salt Memory,Â won the 2006 Main Street Rag Poetry Award.Â After living in San Francisco for twelve years, she currently lives in Kalamazoo, Michigan, with her husband, poet Chad Sweeney, where she teaches poetry privately.Â Â Chad Sweeney is the author of three books of poetry,Â Parable of Hide and SeekÂ (Alice James, 2010),Â Arranging the BlazeÂ (Anhinga, 2009), andÂ An ArchitectureÂ Â (BlazeVox, 2007).Â Â He edited the anthologyÂ Days I Moved Through Ordinary Sounds: The Teachers of WritersCorps in Poetry and Prose (City Lights, 2009) and is coeditor ofÂ Parthenon West Review. His poems have appeared widely including in Best American Poetry and Verse Daily. He holds an MFA from San Francisco State University and is aPhD candidate in literature/poetry at Western Michigan University, where he teaches poetry and serves as assistant editor of New Issues Press.Â Â

↑ Index

95. Nate Pritts
the saddest story I know
Thu 11 Feb 2010

Hi ~

My new book of poetry, THE WONDERFULL YEARE, is just out from Cooper Dillon Books & I'm super excited.

It's a shepherd's calendar broken in seasons made up of, as Mary Biddinger says, "pastorals & anti-pastorals, sonnets & anti-sonnets."

Laura Mullen says that the book "invents new forms for feeling, bringing to life a speaker who sees, in nature, suggestive (but possibly untranslatable, inimitable) directions for moving forward from sorrow."

& go here for an interview where I talk about it :: bookslut.

I hope you'll consider checking it out.

-Nate

a blurb from the press:

The first full-length book of poems from Cooper Dillon has arrived! We're overjoyed to bring you THE WONDERFULL YEARE by Nate Pritts. Head to PressPressPress.blogspot.com or CooperDillon.com for all the details on the new collection, and also check out THE DEVASTATION by Jill Alexander Essbaum as well as THEY SPEAK OF FRUIT by the 2009 Orphic Prize winner Gary L. McDowell.

Cooper Dillon Books is a small poetry press founded on promoting and maintaining the values which make poems timeless. Through the publication and distribution of full-length collections and chapbooks, our intention is to nurture the poet and reader who finds joy in aesthetic, beauty, honesty and intimacy.

Cooper Dillon does not receive grants, government funding, endowments, or donations. We do not publish (select, print, advertise, etc.) at the expense of our authors. We earn money by selling books we believe in, in service of art and community.

_____

:: Dr. Nate Pritts

:: http://www.natepritts.com

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

96. Will Larsen
Reminder: Charles Bernstein reading THIS SUNDAY -- corrected location!
Thu 11 Feb 2010

Sun, Feb 14, 2010
2:00 pm
Reading
Charles Bernstein

Location: Swift 106 (NOT the Ren, as went out in the original email)
Admission: free
Sponsored by the Reniaissance Society

Highly esteemed poet, professor, and literary scholar Charles Bernstein will do a reading dedicated to his daughter Emma. The reading coincides with the release of All the Whiskey in Heaven, a thirty-year anthology. In addition, the reading will celebrate the recent release of Radical Poetics and Secular Jewish Culture, a collection of essays in which poets and critics, Bernsteinamong them, address the question of what constitutes radical poetry written by Jews defined as 'secular', and whether or not there is a Jewish component or dimension to radical and modernist poetic practice in general. The reading will be followed by a discussion and reception.

Charles Bernstein is Donald T. Regan Professor of English and Comparative Literature at the University of Pennsylvania.

↑ Index

97. Vernon Frazer
BODIED TONE by Vernon FRazer
Thu 11 Feb 2010

---

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cOzR1qE5eBI

↑ Index

98. steve dalachinsky
Re: Reminder: Charles Bernstein reading THIS SUNDAY -- corrected location!
Thu 11 Feb 2010

---

yes but where is this place
On Thu, 11 Feb 2010 14:13:19 -0600 Will Larsen <[redacted]>
writes:

> Sun, Feb 14, 2010
> 2:00 pm
> Reading
> Charles Bernstein
>
> Location: Swift 106 (NOT the Ren, as went out in the original > email)
> Admission: free
> Sponsored by the Reniaissance Society
>
> Highly esteemed poet, professor, and literary scholar Charles > Bernstein will > do a reading dedicated to his daughter Emma. The reading coincides > with the > release of All the Whiskey in Heaven, a thirty-year anthology. In > addition, > the reading will celebrate the recent release of Radical Poetics and > Secular
> Jewish Culture, a collection of essays in which poets and critics, > Bernsteinamong them, address the question of what constitutes > radical > poetry written > by Jews defined as ‘secular’, and whether or not there is a Jewish > component
> or dimension to radical and modernist poetic practice in general.
> The
> reading will be followed by a discussion and reception.
>
> Charles Bernstein is Donald T. Regan Professor of English and > Comparative > Literature at the University of Pennsylvania.
>
>
>

↑ Index

99. Michael Heller

Fwd: Modern Poetry Seminar

Thu 11 Feb 2010

> Dear friends and colleagues, I'll be presenting > this seminar at the new POETS HOUSE in Lower

Manhattan at 10 River Terrace, New York, NY 10280. Dates and times below. For more information and precise directions, go to: http://poetshouse.org/aboutstaff.htm.

On Modern Poetry: Public Seminars with Michael Heller
In two round-table discussions, poet and critic Michael Heller explores major aspects of the origins and aesthetics of modern poetry. These seminars are a wonderful way for newcomers as well as poetry experts to map the broad and divergent landscape of modern American poetry.

The Foundations of Modern and Contemporary Poetry with Michael Heller
Saturday, February 20, 2:00–5:00pm
$10, $7 for students and seniors, free to Poets House Members; pre-registration is not required Readings for this first session will include the poetry and prose of Whitman, Dickinson, Pound, Frost, Williams and Stevens, with reference to the intellectual and cultural environment in which modern poetry arose.
"No Ideas but in Things": Developments, Diversities, Dispersions, Disavowals with Michael Heller
Saturday, February 27, 2:00–5:00pm
$10, $7 for students and seniors, free to Poets House Members
Readings for this session include Zukofsky, Oppen, Moore, Niedecker, Harlem Renaissance poets, Olson, Black Mountain and Beat Poetry. We will discuss traceries, inflections and influences of the early modernist poets on the poetry that came after, with some reflections on shape and form in contemporary poetry.
Michael Heller is a poet, essayist and critic. Among his many books are the poetry collections Eschaton, Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems and In the Builded Place as well as the memoir, Living Root. His most recent critical book is Speaking the Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen. He taught for many years at New York University.
[]

Eschaton (new poems) Talisman House Publishers (2009) available at SPD, Greenfield Distribution (www.gfibooks.com), www.amazon.com and good bookstores. Two Novellas:

> Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press 2009) available from SPD, amazon.com and from ahadadpress at http://www.ahadadabooks.com/content/view/162/41/ . Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson at http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html
>
> Eschaton (new poems) Talisman House Publishers (2009) available at SPD, Greenfield Distribution (www.gfibooks.com), www. amazon.com and good bookstores. Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press 2009) available from SPD, amazon.com and from ahadadpress at http://www.ahadadabooks.com/content/view/162/41/. Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson at http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html

Eschaton (new poems) Talisman House Publishers (2009) available at SPD, Greenfield Distribution (www.gfibooks.com), www. amazon.com and good bookstores. Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press 2009) available from SPD, amazon.com and from ahadadpress at http://www.ahadadabooks.com/content/view/162/41/. Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm

Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson at
http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html
Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html

↑ Index

100. Ann Bogle
Re: Millie Niss
Thu 11 Feb 2010

Very sad to hear of Millie Niss' death. I subscribed to her blog feed. I am glad that she made it to &Now last year. I almost went, partly just to meet her, also to see Cris Cheek in a kilt. I decided to wait.

A reminder: there is no blood test for schizophrenia, manic-depression, or depression. Genetic tests are in development but not, I think, in use in diagnosis. Medications serve as trial prognosis; rival medical conditions, treatments, and specializations complicate it.

Ann Bogle

In a message dated 2/10/2010 8:52:36 A.M. Central Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

At that time, I think, she still assumed she was bi-polar or suffering from some other such mental disease.
My reaction to her diseases was colored by that information.

↑ Index

101. Poetry Project
Events at The Poetry Project
Thu 11 Feb 2010

Here¹s what¹s happening at The Poetry Project next week‹ we hope to see you here!

Monday, February 15, 8 PM
Joel Bettridge & Geoffrey Olsen

Joel Bettridge is the author of two books of poetry, That Abrupt Here (2007) and Presocratic Blues (2009) as well as the critical study, Reading as Belief: Language Writing, Poetics, Faith (2009). He co-edited, with Eric Selinger, Ronald Johnson: Life and Works (2008). Currently he is an Assistant Professor of English at Portland State University.

Geoffrey Olsen is the author of the chapbook End Notebook (Petrichord Books). He lives in Brooklyn and works at The Cooper Union.

Wednesday, February 17, 8 PM
Reading for The Whole Island:
Six Decades of Cuban Writing

Join us as we celebrate this landmark volume of Cuban poetry edited by Mark Weiss, The Whole Island (University of California Press, 2009). It makes available the astonishing achievement of a wide range of Cuban poets over the past 60 years. The translations, almost all of them new, convey the intensity and beauty of the accompanying Spanish originals and constitute an essential source for understanding the literature and culture of Cuba, its diaspora, and the Caribbean at large. With poet Lourdes Gil and translators Chris Brandt, Mónica de la Torre, Jason Weiss and Mark Weiss.

Lourdes Gil came to the United States from Cuba in 1961. Her poetry collections include El cerco de las transfiguraciones, Empieza la ciudad, Blanca aldaba preludia, Vencido el fuego de la especie and Neumas. Her poems and essays have been widely published and included in numerous anthologies. She teaches in the Latin American and Caribbean Studies Program at Baruch College of the City University of New York.

Chris Brandt is a writer, translator and political activist. He teaches poetry and Peace and Justice at Fordham University. His poems and essays have been widely published. His translations of Cuban fiction have appeared in The New Yorker, and his translations of two volumes of Carmen Valle¹s poetry were published by the Instituto de Cultura PuertorriqueZa. Seven Stories published his translation of Clara Nieto¹s Masters of War, a history of U.S. interventions in Latin America.

Mónica de la Torre is the author of the poetry books Talk Shows (Switchback, 2007); Acúfenos, published in 2006 in Mexico City by Taller Ditoria; and Public Domain (Roof Books, 2008). She is co-author of the artist book Appendices, Illustrations & Notes, available on Ubu.com and co-edited the multilingual anthology Reversible Monuments: Contemporary Mexican Poetry (Copper Canyon Press). She is a 2009 NYFA fellow in poetry and senior editor at BOMB Magazine.

Jason Weiss is the author of, among other books, The Lights of Home: A Century of Latin American Writers in Paris. He is currently completing a book on music, Always in Trouble: An Oral History of ESP-Disk¹, the Most Outrageous Record Label in America. He recently translated Silvia Baron Supervielle¹s latest book of poems, Around the Void.

Mark Weiss[1] most recent poetry collection is As Landscape (Chax Press, 2009). He edited, with Harry Polkinhorn, Across the Line / Al otro lado: The Poetry of Baja California (2002). Among his translations are Stet: Selected Poems of José Kozer (2006) Cuaderno de San Antonio / The San Antonio Notebook, by Javier Manríquez (2004), Notas del país de Z, by Gaspar Orozco, and the ebook La isla en peso/ The Whole Island, by Virgilio PiZera. His anthology The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry was published in 2009 by the University of California Press.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you[1]d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

102. carol dorf
Re: Reminder: Charles Bernstein reading THIS SUNDAY -- corrected location!
Thu 11 Feb 2010

It would be helpful to post city and institution when listing readings.

On Thu, Feb 11, 2010 at 12:13 PM, Will Larsen <[redacted]> wrote:

> Sun, Feb 14, 2010
> 2:00 pm
> Reading
> Charles Bernstein
>
> Location: Swift 106 (NOT the Ren, as went out in the original email)
> Admission: free
> Sponsored by the Reniaissance Society

Highly esteemed poet, professor, and literary scholar Charles Bernstein will do a reading dedicated to his daughter Emma. The reading coincides with the release of All the Whiskey in Heaven, a thirty-year anthology. In addition, the reading will celebrate the recent release of Radical Poetics and Secular Jewish Culture, a collection of essays in which poets and critics, Bernsteinamong them, address the question of what constitutes radical poetry written by Jews defined as 'secular', and whether or not there is a Jewish component or dimension to radical and modernist poetic practice in general. The reading will be followed by a discussion and reception.

Charles Bernstein is Donald T. Regan Professor of English and Comparative Literature at the University of Pennsylvania.

↑ Index

103. Michael Heller

Fwd: Curley, Heller, Kimmelman and Pines Reading on February 22nd

Fri 12 Feb 2010

Jon Curley, Michael Heller, Burt Kimmelman, and Paul Pines

Reading at the Cornelia Street Café (Cornelia Street just off Bleeker Street)

February 22nd, promptly at 6 PM

*Address and Directions:
<http://www.corneliastreetcafe.com/index_performances.asp>http://www.corneliastreetcafe.com/index_performances.asp*

Jon Curley's first book of poems, New Shadows, was published this past fall by Dos Madres Press. Fanny Howe describes his work as "gnostic and very New Englandy." He is a university lecturer in the Humanities at New Jersey Institute of Technology.

Michael Heller has published eight volumes of poetry, the most recent being Eschaton (2009). His collection of essays on George Oppen, Speaking the Estranged, was published in 2008. Uncertain Poetries, a book of essays appeared in 2006. Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems appeared in 2003. His memoir, Living Root, was published by the State University of New York Press in the Fall of 2000. Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study, a collection of fiction, was published in 2009. His libretto for the opera, Constellations of Waking, based on the life of the German-Jewish philosopher Walter Benjamin, has been set to music by the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson and performed at the Philadelphia Fringe Festival. His poetry and criticism have appeared in numerous magazines and anthologies including The Paris Review, Conjunctions, Harpers, New Letters, The Nation, American Poetry Review, Jewish American Poetry, Pequod, The New York Times Book Review, Parnassus: Poetry in Review and many others. His critical study, Conviction's Net of Branches: Essays on the Objectivist Poets and Poetry, was published by Southern Illinois University Press.

Burt Kimmelman has published six collections of poetry – Musaics (Sputyen Duyvil Press, 1992), First Life (Jensen/Daniels Publishing, 2000), The Pond at Cape May Point (Marsh Hawk Press, 2002), a collaboration with the painter Fred Caruso, Somehow (Marsh Hawk Press, 2005), There Are Words (Dos Madres Press, 2007), and As If Free (Talisman House, Publishers, 2009). For over a decade he was Senior Editor of Poetry New York: A Journal of Poetry and Translation. He is a professor of English at New Jersey Institute of Technology and the author of two book-length literary studies: The "Winter Mind": William Bronk and American Letters (Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 1998); and, The Poetics of Authorship in the Later Middle Ages: The Emergence of the Modern Literary Persona (Peter Lang Publishing, 1996; paperback 1999). He also edited The Facts on File Companion to 20th-Century American Poetry (Facts on File, 2005) and co- edited The Facts on File Companion to American Poetry (2007). He has published scores of essays on medieval, modern, and contemporary poetry.

Paul Pines is the author of the novels The Tin Angel (Wm Morrow, 83/ Author's Guild, 08) and Redemption (Editions du Rocher, 97), as well as the memoir My Brother's Madness (Curbstone, 07). He has published seven books of poetry: Onion (Mulch, 71), Hotel Madden Poems (Contact II, 91), Pines Songs (Ikon, 93), Breath (Ikon, 96), Adrift on Blinding Light (Ikon,03), Taxidancing (Ikon, 07) and Last Call at the Tin Palace (Marsh Hawk, 09). Poems set by composer Daniel Asia appear on the Summit label. His translations are included in Small Hours of the Night, Selected Poems of Roque Dalton, (Curbstone, 96); Pyramids of Glass, (Corona 95); Nicanor Parra, Antipoems: New and Selected, (New Directions, 86). He is the editor of Dark Times Full of Light, a tribute to Juan Gelman (Cafe Review, 09). Pines lives in Glens Falls, NY, where he practices as a psychotherapist and hosts the Lake George Jazz Weekend.

Eschaton (new poems) Talisman House Publishers (2009) available at SPD, Greenfield Distribution (www.gfibooks.com), www. amazon.com and good bookstores. Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press 2009) available from SPD, amazon.com and from ahadadpress at http://www.ahadadabooks.com/content/view/162/41 /. Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson at http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html

> Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html
>
> Eschaton (new poems) Talisman House Publishers (2009) available at SPD, Greenfield Distribution (www.gfibooks.com), www. amazon.com and good bookstores. Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press 2009) available from SPD, amazon.com and from ahadadpress at http://www.ahadadabooks.com/content/view/162/41/ . Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson at http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html
>
> Eschaton (new poems) Talisman House Publishers (2009) available at SPD, Greenfield Distribution (www.gfibooks.com), www. amazon.com and good bookstores. Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press 2009) available from SPD, amazon.com and from ahadadpress at http://www.ahadadabooks.com/content/view/162/41/. Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson at http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html

Eschaton (new poems) Talisman House Publishers (2009) available at SPD, Greenfield Distribution (www.gfibooks.com), www. amazon.com and good bookstores. Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press 2009) available from SPD, amazon.com and from ahadadpress at http://www.ahadadabooks.com/content/view/162/41/.

Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson at http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html

↑ Index

104. Gary Sullivan
BERRIGAN & SNYDER | SEGUE
Fri 12 Feb 2010

BERRIGAN & SNYDER | SEGUE | SAT FEB 13
4-6pm, 308 bowery
six dollars

"Hey Daddy, wanna kiss the Boopie?" was just asked of Anselm Berrigan, whose most recent book is Free Cell, published last year by City Lights. Excerpts from a newer piece called "Primitive State" can be read at necessetics.com/anselm.html.

Rick Snyder's full-length collection Escape from Combray was published last year by Ugly Duckling. He is the author of several chapbooks, including Flown Season (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs, 2004) and Forecast Memorial (Duration, 2002). Recent work has appeared or is forthcoming in Aufgabe, EOAGH, and The Poker. _____
Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

105. CA Conrad
Choi's "the terrorists"
Sat 13 Feb 2010

Openly gay Lieutenant Dan Choi continues his endless stream of appearances at college campuses, and in newspaper, magazine and radio interviews for the push for repealing "Don't Ask, Don't Tell." I tune in deliberately when I know he'll be on in order to listen to the way he handles himself, and better yet, the way he manages to continue using outdated pro-war propaganda.

For instance today on NPR the usual interview with poor, abused Dan Choi who only wants to defend the mighty but somehow also defenseless Americans. At one point he's talking about an earlier assignment in Iraq when he was still closeted and allowed to point his gun at Iraqis. He was talking about patrolling The Triangle of Death region looking for "the terrorists, the insurgents." There was literally a comma separating in his speaking, just like this, "the terrorists, the insurgents."

Haven't we COMPLETELY dealt with the lies of Bush, Cheney, Rice in this matter? The terrorists of 911 were not Iraqi. Choi gets away with it though, no one dares correct him conflating issues, especially not the liberal media who are in the middle of interviewing him because HE'S been made into the victim. Poor Dan Choi who can't go looking for "terrorists" (his word choice) in Iraq because he's gay. Dan Choi needs a remedial course in recent US history apparently.

This is the perfect time for Dan Choi to make his case though, perfect for everyone who is pro-war. Pro-war lesbian and gay soldiers will finally get the support of pro-war American elected officials who are either secretly or openly for war because the gay shield is in use. The state can make all of their arguments now as to WHY "DADT" should be repealed, and in doing so have indirect support for war by getting poster boy's like Choi to go around the country using the outdated propaganda glossary from the last administration.

It's a win-win for all who want war. The hyper-masculine model gets its way, all the way. And it's so subtle, so weirdly politically correct that it's nearly impossible to challenge in the end. Choi is masterful at sounding like a strong and powerful victim. He's the protector kept from doing his sacred job. It's amazing to me that he gets away with it. But he does get away with it, over and over again. And HE gets to set himself up as an activist, as someone seeking civil rights, while the rights of the Iraqi's are never in question.

I'm an openly queer man who is against war, especially the American occupations of Iraq and Afghanistan, and I believe very strongly that Dan Choi and other LGBT soldiers are being used to continue fanning the flames of war in a way which is completely new to us. Repealing "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" is genius to do right now at a time when support for our wars is waning.

Please consider reading and signing my online petition opposing the war Dan Choi is so proud of serving in. I direct you FIRST to a blog I wrote so that you can in fact see that the petition (which is linked on the blog) was written by me. I say this, and do this because many people have actually accused me of being a Republican uncover, looking for ways to trick the unsuspecting liberal into opposing a civil liberty.

There's nothing civil about war, especially these present American wars. Here is the blog which has a link to the online petition: http://invasionanniversary.blogspot.com/

CAConrad

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

106. charles alexander Support Your Favorite Author & Book!
Sat 13 Feb 2010

Forthcoming books and chapbooks will be out on or before March 12, 2010:

Alice Notley, Reason and Other Women
Charles Bernstein, Umbra
Barbara Henning, Cities and Memory
Anne Waldman, Matriot Acts
Tenney Nathanson, Ghost Snow Falling in the Void (Globalization)

and you can help. Chax Press is supported by government grants, book sale revenue, private foundation grants, and donations from individuals. The largest and most important of these amounts: donations from individuals.

Please choose to specifically support one (or more) of these books through a targeted donation. To do so, please visit the book sponsorship page on the Chax Press web site at http://chax.org/sponsorship.htm

In addition, on this page you will also find opportunities to support books by Robert Mittenthal, Nico Vassilakis, and Will Alexander. We will also soon be adding more opportunities to lend your important support to other books by Leslie Scalapino, Jonathan Stalling, Andrew Levy, Alan Loney, Standard Schaeffer, Mark Weiss, and more.

Thank you for choosing to support a book by one of your favorite authors; thank you for supporting Chax Press. Chax Press is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) charitable organization, and your contributions are tax deductible.

We have one more new program at Chax Press, for purchasing our books! Our first-ever subscription offer! For information on obtaining these five books, and other Chax Press books, by initiating a subscription to Chax Press publications, please visit our new subscription page at our web site at http://chax.org/subscribe.htm

charles alexander
[redacted]

chax press / poetry & the book arts 411 n seventh ave ste 103 / tucson, az 85705-8388

presenting
Andrew Joron, Michael Palmer, & Andrew Zawicki on March 7 2010 (with POG & UA Poetry Center)

DONATE TO CHAX PRESS at http://chax.org/donate.htm

↑ Index

107. David Kirschenbaum
Last Call to Advertise in Boog City 62
Sun 14 Feb 2010

Please forward

Advertise in

Boog City 62

Deadlines

—Space Reservations-Email to reserve ad space ASAP

—Thurs. Feb. 25-Submit Ad or Ad Materials
—Sat. March 6-Distribute Paper

This is a quick note to see if you'd like to advertise and reach our readership. (Donations are also cool, way cool.)

We'll be distributing 2,250 copies of the issue throughout the East Village and other parts of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and at Boog City events.

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. The discount rate also applies to larger ads.

For our full rate card, please visit:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664) for more information.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: 212-842-BOOG (2664)

↑ Index

108. Regina Pinto

Project "AlphaAlpha": More 5 collaborations are on line!

Sun 14 Feb 2010

PROJECT ALPHAaLPHA:

The project is almost complete! Until the end of February it will be ready and then it will be composed of 365 letters A, one A for each day of the year!

THANK YOU VERY MUCH!

NEW PAGES:

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/i_a_rvers.html (Isabelle Arvers - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/r_fr_a_nco.html (Rodolfo Franco - Brazil / Spain)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/edw_a_rd_picot.html (Edward Picot - UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_sechi.html (José Roberto Sechi - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_jtwine.html (Jurges Trautwein - USA)

MORE PAGES WILL BE READY SOON:

Paulo Aquarone (Brazil) - Roberto Kepler (Brazil) - Regina Pinto (Brazil)

WHICH MORE PAGES ARE READY?

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/bruce_a_ndrews.html (Bruce Andrews - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_ndrews.html (Jim Andrews - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_randa_yto.html (Isabel Aranda - YTO - Chile)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/b_a_bel.html (babel - Canada & UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/ver_a_bighetti.html (Vera Bighetti - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/bruno_a.html (Bruno - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_trick_burgaud.html (Patrick Burgaud - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_trick_burgaud1.html (Patrick Burgaud - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_de_mar_josely.html (Josely Carvalho - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_rtha_deed.html (Martha Deed - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/fr_a_zao.html (Marcelo Frazão - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/muriel_freg_a.html (Muriel Frega - Argentina)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/lis_a_hutton.html (Lisa Hutton - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/s_a_tu.html (Satu KaikKonen - Finland)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_j_a.html (Maja Kalogera - Croacia)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_nik.html (Manik - Serbia)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/neufeldt_a.html (Brigitte Neufeudt - Germany)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/niss_a.html (Millie Niss - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_din.html (Clemente Padín - Uruguay)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_rgaret_penfold.html (Margaret Penfold - UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/is_a_bel_saij.html (Isabel Saij - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/is_a_bel_saij2.html (Isabel Saij - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/reiner_a.html (Reiner Strasser - Germany)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/myron_turner_a.html (Myron Turner - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/sus_a_n_turner.html (Susan Turner - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/villel_a.html (Paulo Villela - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_zenon.html (Miguel Jimenez/Zenon - Spain)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_raceli_zunig_a.html (Araceli Zuñiga- Mexico)

My OWN PAGES:

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/um.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/dois.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/tres.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/quatro.html (Regina Pinto- Brazil)

==========

Regina Pinto aka pintor

http://arteonline.arq.br
http://pintor.tumblr.com

↑ Index

109. Jim Andrews
poemicstrip interview
Sun 14 Feb 2010

An interview of me by Piotr Szreniawski:
http://poemicstrip.blogspot.com/2009/11/interview-with-jim-andrews.html

Piotr publishes a blog called poemicstrip at http://poemicstrip.blogspot.com .
it's in exploration of poetry crossed with comics.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

110. Joel Weishaus
"The Gateless Gate-New Series" Pages 41-50
Sun 14 Feb 2010

Dear All;

Here are the next ten pages--five texts/five images--of "The Gateless Gate-New Series" :
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/Gate-R/Pgs%2041-42R.htm
(This includes the pages--here 43-44--that began this revision.)

---------- First Lines:

41:
Cap turned sideways, baggy pants...
When our brains evolved to a point where...
"Where have the ancient sages gone?" (quote)
At the turn of this century...
Colours never before coagulated..." (poem)
Neuroscientists are now testing...

43:
I once dreamed of my father's ring...
In summer a water- (poem)
About the middle of the Drum... (quote)
Last night I dreamed that a chorus of winds...

45:
What keeps me walking up the same path...
His work abounds with examples of staging... (quote)
I found myself back in the old temple...
I am going to school myself so well in things... (poem)
According to Karen Sanders, "There is no such thing...
Here is where every thing begins...

47:
The trail is a loop on land...
We reached the trailhead and took a narrow path...
We think nostalgically about a universe... (quote)
What distinguished Alberto Giacometti from his peers...
At a certain depth, there is only process.

49:
One day in August, I was backpacking alone...
Finding a dry plot of ground just large enough...
The preachers announced the end of the world... (quote)
Today I can see myself in those mountains again...
Although I've told this story before...

From the beginning: http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/Gate-R/Cover-R.htm

Thank you for your participation in this project that opens one way of writing, designing and presenting literature made on and for the Internet, one that seeks a continuum to the tradition of books and other printed media, while using the tools and avenues of the newer medium.

Your feedback and critique is always welcome.

-Joel Weishaus

↑ Index

111. Dan Wilcox
Third Thursday Poetry Night, Feb. 18 -- Victoria Rivas
Sun 14 Feb 2010

---

the Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Third Thursday Poetry Night

at
the Social Justice Center
33 Central Ave., Albany, NY

Thursday, February 18
7:00 sign up; 7:30 start
Featured Poet: Victoria Rivas

-- with an open mic for community poets before & after the feature: $3.00 donation, suggested; more if you got it, less if you can't.

Your Valentine host: Dan Wilcox.
* * *

Victoria Rivas is a math teacher, martial artist and poet. Her poetry has been published in many journals including the Journal of Asian Martial Arts and in two anthologies, Working Hard for the Money from Bottom Dog Press and Along the Lake, edited by Sean Thomas Dougherty.

UNPREPARED FOR CLASS
by Victoria Rivas

Carlita shows me photos,
sonograms of her baby,
due in August. I look, force a smile, feel sad. At least she's talking with me about it.

Paris wears tight tops that tie beneath her full breasts, shows off her belly, complains her back hurts. She is too tired for math, puts her head down, eyes closed.

I shake my head. This is not the type of trouble I could have imagined I would have with seventh grade girls. Teacher training didn't cover this.

↑ Index

112. amy king
Lucille Clifton dies at 73 -- June 27, 1936 – February 13, 2010
Sun 14 Feb 2010

Lucille Clifton, one-time poet laureate of Md., dies at 73 --
http://www.baltimoresun.com/news/obituaries/bal-md.ob.clifton14feb14,0,4245172.story

Tiny note -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/02/14/lucille-clifton-june-27-1936-â€“-february-13-2010/

Best,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

113. Ruth Lepson

Re: Lucille Clifton dies at 73 -- June 27, 1936 February 13, 2010

Sun 14 Feb 2010

Lucille Clifton, so important to women and to the African American community. She will be missed.

On 2/14/10 10:13 PM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Lucille Clifton, one-time poet laureate of Md., dies at 73 -- http://www.baltimoresun.com/news/obituaries/bal-md.ob.clifton14feb14,0,4245172.story
>
> Tiny note -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/02/14/lucille-clifton-june-27-1936--february-13-2010/
>
> Best,
>
> Amy
>
> _____

> BOOK
>
> Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm
>
> RANT
>
> "My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html
>
> ESSAY
>
> "The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

114. Ann Stephenson
READY SET READINGS at Whitespace Gallery /// Atlanta
Mon 15 Feb 2010

READY SET READINGS at Whitespace Gallery

http://www.whitespace814.com/

SABRINA ORAH MARK

Friday February 19th | 8:00pm

{A limited number of letterpress books created especially for this event will be given away at the reading.}

SABRINA ORAH MARK is the author of The Babies (2004) and Tsim Tsum (2009). She has received fellowships from the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, the Glenn Schaeffer Foundation, and The National Endowment for the Arts. Her writing has appeared or is forthcoming in many journals and in the anthologies, Legitimate Dangers, The Best American Poetry 2007, and My Mother She Killed Me, My Father He Ate Me: Forty New Fairy Tales. She teaches at the University of Georgia.

READY SET READINGS at Whitespace is committed to new and innovative writing.

WHITESPACE - 814 Edgewood Avenue Northeast - Atlanta, GA 30307
[redacted]

↑ Index

115. Mairead Byrne

Re: Lucille Clifton dies at 73 -- June 27, 1936 February 13, 2010

Mon 15 Feb 2010

Lucille Clifton's work: a very big mirror in which it is always possible to find your poetry + poetics. I had the great honor of being her squire when she made her first visit to the University of Mississippi in February 2002. At that time she said of her historic reading--hundreds of people packed in, students were literally wedged in the door frame, all the way up-- "I usually don't do anything in February, but I decided, why not?" Miss Clifton Mrs Clifton Ms Clifton why did you go do that in February, now why did you go do that? Mairéad

On Sun, Feb 14, 2010 at 10:38 PM, Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>wrote:

> Lucille Clifton, so important to women and to the African American community. She will be missed.
>
> On 2/14/10 10:13 PM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Lucille Clifton, one-time poet laureate of Md., dies at 73 --
>
> http://www.baltimoresun.com/news/obituaries/bal-md.ob.clifton14feb14,0,4245172.story
>
> Tiny note --
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/02/14/lucille-clifton-june-27-1936--februar > y-13-2010/
>
> Best,
>
> Amy
>
> _____
>
> BOOK
>
> Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm
>
> RANT
>
> "My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" --

> http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html
>
> ESSAY
>
> "The What Else"--
>
> http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html
>
> guidelines &

↑ Index

116. Rob McLennan
question,
Mon 15 Feb 2010

anyone have a contact for heller levinson?

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

117. Jeffrey Side
John Tranter interview and poems at The Argotist Online
Mon 15 Feb 2010

Interview:
http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Tranter%20interview.htm
Poems:
http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Tranter%20poems.htm

↑ Index

118. Aaron Vidaver
Short Range Poetic Device (Vancouver)
Mon 15 Feb 2010

[From SRPD: http://shortrangepoeticdevice.blogspot.com/]

"The Short Range Poetic Device, thanks to the good people at VIVO Media Arts in Vancouver, will project itself into the media-scape on Tuesday February 16th at 7:00 pm.

Readings and discussion as follows:

* Tuesday Feb 16 7 pm: Steve Collis, Roger Farr, and Donato Mancini * Wednesday 17th 2pm: Jeff Derksen, Kim Duff, Reg Johanson * Tuesday 23rd 9pm: Clint Burnham and Rita Wong * Wednesday 24th 7pm: Cecily Nicholson & Naava Smolash

Note: in their ongoing efforts to standardize and commodify our acoustic environment, the popo has shut down VIVO's transmitter, so for now we may be confined to a web stream.

More on that shortly."

[See also:
Evening News: http://vivoeveningnews.wordpress.com/
No2010: http://www.no2010.com/
Olympic Resistance Network: http://olympicresistance.net/
Vancouver Media Coop: http://vancouver.mediacoop.ca/Friendly Fire account of 2010 Olympics resistance:
http://friendlyfirecollective.info/2010/]

↑ Index

119. Rob McLennan
new(ish) on rob's clever blog
Mon 15 Feb 2010

-- ongoing notes: some journals (The Capilano Review, The New Quarterly)
-- true love, (poem)
-- fwd; Priscila Uppal at the Olympics
-- Jeanette Winterson, Weight
-- Vancouver poet laureate Brad Crans Olympic Response;
-- new poetry collection; wild horses, University of Alberta Press;
-- fwd; DIANA BREBNER PRIZE READING AND LAUNCH OF ARC #63 (Ottawa)
-- Barry McKinnon, In the Millennium
-- fwd; BookThug @ The Toronto New School of Writing
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Sonnet L'Abbe
-- Kate Greenstreet, The Last 4 Things
-- Sawako Nakayasu, Texture Notes
-- Nathaniel G. Moore, Wrong Bar
-- Catherine Owen, Frenzy

-- Short Grain (with variations),
-- from "eight poems of reconciliation" (poem)
-- Paul Quarrington: July 22, 1953 - January 20, 2010;
-- Paul Auster, Invisible
-- Lana Turner: A Journal of Poetry + Opinion, Nos. 1 + 2
-- In Stereo, by Paul Hegedus
-- Barbara Caruso: 1937-2009
-- 12 or 20 questions: with C.D. Wright
-- Prismatic Publics: Innovative Canadian Womens Poetry and Poetics, eds. Kate Eichhorn and Heather Milne
-- The Al Purdy A-Frame Anthology

www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at ottawa poetry newsletter,

www.ottawapoetry.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at the Chaudiere Booksblog,

www.chaudierebooks.blogspot.com

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

120. Margaret Konkol

Wednesday February 17: Ronan Crowley S M A L L P R E S S in the A R C H I V E

Mon 15 Feb 2010

---

* Please mark your calendars for this coming Wednesday, February 18th @ 2:00 pm for Ronan Crowley's talk, "Dead and Gone": John Montague's Patriotic Suite (1966) and the Yeats Centenary.

This talk will be held in The Poetry Collection, 420 Capen @ SUNY Buffalo. This event is free and open to the public.

Small Press in the Archive Lecture Series dedicates itself to the study of poetry outside the traditional literary historical plot. The lectures in this series draw on materials in The Poetry Collection, at SUNY Buffalo in order to explore community/discourse formations, the status of ephemera and the making of genre, the conditions of literary production, transatlantic cross-pollinations in and between specific magazines, the careers of poets, the role of book art, and how the little magazine functions in the making of the avant-garde.

↑ Index

121. Tim Peterson
TENDENCIES 2/24: Oliver, Eichhorn, & Bernstein
Tue 16 Feb 2010

TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice

Akilah Oliver, Kate Eichhorn, & Charles Bernstein

This series of talks by major poets, titled in honor of Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick, explores the relationship between contemporary poetic manifesto, practice, queer theory and pedagogy.

The spring 2010 series begins with talks by:

Akilah Oliver

Kate Eichhorn

Charles Bernstein

...followed by a discussion/Q&A session.

on Wednesday, February 24

at 6:30 PM

FREE

at CUNY Graduate Center

(in the Martin E. Segal Theater)

365 Fifth Avenue, NYC

Akilah Oliver is the author of A Toast in the House of Friends (Coffee House Press 2009), and the she said dialogues: flesh memory (Smokeproof/Erudite Fangs, 1999, Winner of the PEN Beyond Margins Award). Oliver's work is featured on the CD "Matching Half", with Anne Waldman and Ambrose Bye. Her chapbooks include: a (A)ugust (Yo-yo Labs, 2007) and The Putterer's Notebook (Belladonna, 2006), She is faculty at The Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa University in Boulder Colorado. She is a founding member of the feminist avant-garde performance group The Sacred Naked Nature Girls (1993-1999). She currently makes her home in Brooklyn, NY. .

Kate Eichhorn is the author of Fond (BookThug, 2008) and co-editor of Prismatic Publics: Innovative Canadian Women's Poetry and Poetics (Coach House Books, 2009). A second collection of poetry, Fieldnotes: a forensic, is forthcoming in fall 2010 from BookThug. Current projects include a novel and book-length work of criticism. She teaches writing and cultural theory at The New School.

Charles Bernstein's most recent books are All the Whiskey in Heaven: Selected Poems (Farrar, Straus, Giroux, March 2010); Blind Witness, (Factory School, 2008), Girly Man (University of Chicago Press, 2006), and Shadowtime (Green Integer, 2005). He is Donald T. Regan Professor of English and Comparative Literature at University of Pennsylvania. More info: epc.buffalo.edu.

* * *

TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice is curated by Tim Peterson (Trace). For additional information, visit the Tendencies blog.

All events are co-sponsored by the Center for the Humanities, CLAGS (the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies), The Graduate Center PhD Program in English, and the GC Poetics Group.

* * *

upcoming TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice events:

erica kaufman, Douglas Martin, and Mina Pam Dick on Tuesday, March 9 at 6:30 PM

in the Martin E. Segal Theater at CUNY Graduate Center

Dodie Bellamy, Eileen Myles, and Kevin Killian

on Friday, April 9 at 6:30 PM

in the Martin E. Segal Theater at CUNY Graduate Center

Jack Kimball, CA Conrad, and Stacy Szymaszek

on Thursday, May 6 at 6:30 PM

in the Skylight Room (9100) at CUNY Graduate Center

↑ Index

122. George Bowering

Re: question,

Tue 16 Feb 2010

Is that first word his/her name or description?

On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:

> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
>
> rob

> --
> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere
> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press
> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons
> *www.aboveground press.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*
>
> welcome.html

Bowering, George H.
A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

↑ Index

123. Herb Levy

Re: question,

Tue 16 Feb 2010

"anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.

On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:

> Is that first word his/her name or description?
>
> On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
>
> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
>
> rob
>
> --
> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere
> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press
> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons
> *www.aboveground press.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

↑ Index

124. Paul Nelson

Making Kage-an an Artists Retreat Center

Tue 16 Feb 2010

---

http://splab.org/?p=355
After 35 years in Port Townsend, Sam Hamill is closing a chapter in his life and beginning another. The home, studio and library, he created in the woods near Port Townsend, Washington in the late 1970â€™s is being made available for sale and our vision is to create a retreat for poets, scholars and painters to build on the remarkable legacy that has been created here in that time by the poet/ scholar/editor and his wife, painter, Gray Foster.

We envision purchasing the property from Hamill and Foster, with additional funding to ensure ten years of administration to facilitate retreats by individual artists and couples ranging from one week to three months. These would be made possible through a competitive application process and through partner organizations. The retreat would be made available for rental for writing retreats, but there would be time built into the yearly calendar allowing need-based writers to stay free as Kage-an Fellows. Sam Hamill, and his estate in the event of his death, would be involved in the process of deciding what artists use the facility, thereby continuing the focus of his legacy.

The current value of the property is $350,000 and we propose a budget of $500,000, with $400,000 going to Hamill and Foster, with the remaining $100,000 earmarked for ten years of administration.

We envision writers and painters with a focus similar to Hamillâ€™s and Fosterâ€™s legacy, including, but not limited to Engaged Buddhism, Chinese and Japanese poetry, the work of Kenneth Rexroth and other west coast poets and contemporary painters in the Northwest tradition, including those inspired by Morris Graves, Mark Tobey and others. Although writers with the focus outlined here would have primary consideration, we would ensure it becomes a place welcoming to writers and painters of varied backgrounds and scholarship and would welcome partnerships with organizations interested in helping facilitate the experience of Kage-an for serious artists.

Sam adds: "One of the major points about leaving Kage-an is my heart condition and my Drs being nearly 90 minutes away. In Anacortes they'll be five or ten minutes away.And if we manage to pull this rabbit our of the hat, I will leave behind a very nearly complete library of my years as Editor of Copper Canyon Press, plus many others books, totaling several thousand, probably."

Paul Nelson
Seattle, WA

2.16.10[redacted]
Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

↑ Index

125. Iris Law

Call for Submissions: LANTERN REVIEW (New Poetry Magazine)

Tue 16 Feb 2010

Lantern Review, a new online journal of Asian American poetry, seeks submissions of poetry, translations, visual art, essays on poetics, and collaborative work for its inaugural issue. Submissions will be accepted through April 15, 2010 via our online form. Please visit www.lanternreview.com to read our guidelines in detail.

*About Us * Lantern Review: A Journal of Asian American Poetry is published in two formats: a twice-annual electronic magazine, and a blog<http://www.lanternreview.com/blog>which our team of staff writers updates weekly with interviews, reviews, literary news, writing prompts, and more. We aim to serve the literary community by providing a virtual space in which to promote and discuss the work of contemporary Asian American poets and artists. LR seeks to publish expertly crafted work in a variety of forms and aesthetics, including traditional and experimental pieces, hybrid forms, multimedia work, and new translations. We welcome pieces from anglophone writers of all ethnic backgrounds whose work has a vested interest in issues relevant to the Asian diaspora in North America, as well as work created collaboratively in a community context.

Contact Information
[redacted]
Iris A. Law, Editor; Mia Ayumi Malhotra, Associate Editor

--
Iris A. Law
MFA Candidate
Department of Creative Writing
University of Notre Dame
[redacted]

↑ Index

126. amy king

Fwd: Poets at The Living Theatre: Douglas A. Martin, Julie Patton, Kristin Prevallet and Nathaniel Siegel Tuesday Feb 23rd at 8pm

Tue 16 Feb 2010

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Nathaniel Siegel Dea

---------- Forwarded message ---------- From: Nathaniel Siegel Dear Poetics List Members: You are invited to attend this upcoming performance in NYC ! Love, Nathaniel _____ The LIVING THEATRE Reading Series presents: Poets at The Living Theatre: Douglas A. Martin, Julie Patton, Kristin Prevallet and Nathaniel Siegel Read and perform their work on Tuesday February 23rd 2010 at 8pm Admission: $6 at the door Douglas A. Martin is the author most recently of a novel, Once You Go Back (Seven Stories Press) and a lyric narrative, Your Body Figured (Nightboat Books). His other works include: In the Time of Assignments, a book of poetry; Branwell, a novel of the Bronte brother; and They Change the Subject, a book of stories. His first novel, Outline of My Lover, was named an International Book of the Year in The Times Literary Supplement and adapted in part by the Forsythe Company for the multimedia ballet and live film Kammer/Kammer. He teaches in the low-residency MFA Program at Goddard College. http://douglasarthur.blogspot.com/ Julie Patton is the author of Teething on Type (Rodent Press). She has published poems in Transfer, Tribes, and other magazines, and in Aloud: Voices from the Nuyorican Poets Cafe (Collier Books). Her articles and essays appear in Educating the Imagination: Essays & Ideas for Teachers & Writers (T&W), and in Teachers & Writers. In 1993 she received the New York City Arts in Education Sustained Achievement Award in Literary Arts. She has performed her work at the New York Shakespeare Festival, the Nuyorican Poets' Cafe, the Whitney Museum, Houston's Center for Art and Performance, and Cleveland Public Theatre's International Sonic Disturbance Festival. http://home.jps.net/~nada/patton.htm Air: The Four Seasons A Performance in White Conceived by Kristin Prevallet (poet) and Colette Alexander (cellist) with Julie Patton (vocals) and Yael Acher (flute) Kristin Prevallet is the author of four books of poetry, most recently I, Afterlife: Essay in Mourning Time (Essay Press, 2007). She was the recipient of a 2007 New York Foundation for the Arts fellowship in poetry and a 2004 Pen translation fund award. Her edited collection of writings by Helen Adam, A Helen Adam Reader, was published by the National Poetry Foundation in 2007. Recent work has appeared in The Brooklyn Rail, The Chicago Review, and Words Without Borders. She lives in Greenpoint, Brooklyn. http://www.kayvallet.com/ Colette Alexander began playing the cello at the age of four in Detroit, Michigan, and has studied classical, contemporary classical, North Indian and Persian Music at Interlochen, Meadowmount, Sarah Lawrence College and the California Institute of the Arts. She has performed with Yo-Yo Ma, the New York New Music Ensemble, Jens Lekman, Josh Groban, Rilo Kiley and Rachael Yamagata. She currently resides in Brooklyn, New York. A native of Tel Aviv, Yael Acher Graduated with a BA degree in music and classical flute performance from the Rubin Academy for Music and Dance in Jerusalem. She has lived and worked as a performer, composer, and educator in Copenhagen since 1992. In 2003, she took a certificate course in MAX/MSP, at Harvestworks, New York, and in 2005 she won a Fulbright scholarship to study Composition at NYU and Hunter College. Since then she has resided and worked in New York City. Nathaniel A. Siegel is a poet and artist. His work has been exhibited at Visual AIDS, the Leslie/Lohman Gay Art Foundation, and The HOWL ! Festivalâ€™s Art Around the Park.. Upcoming projects include hosting COME HEAR ! a marathon four hour Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Queer poetry reading at The Rainbow Book Fair on Saturday March 27th at the CUNY Graduate Center at 34th St and 5th Avenue in New York City. A member of the Executive Board of The HOWL ! Festival, Nathaniel is working on September 2010â€™s HOWL ! Festival and HOWL ! Arts Project events. His first book Tony is published by Portable Press at Yo Yo Labs. http://yoyolabs.com/siegel.html â€œThe answer is always YES ! Love !â€ THE LIVING THEATRE 21 Clinton St. (between East Houston and Stanton Street) New York, New York 10002 http://www.livingtheatre.org/ Directions: Buses: Houston Street Bus M21 or Avenue B Bus M9 Subway: F train to "2nd Avenue" (exit front of train on 1st Ave; walk east along Houston) or F train to "Delancey Street" Thank you to Dorothy Friedman and THE LIVING THEATRE !

--
NEW BOOK Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm INTERVIEW Bookslut -- http://www.bookslut.com/features/2010_01_015554.php RANT "My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html ESSAY "The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

127. Jennifer Karmin
Feb 18: Haiti Benefit in Chicago
Tue 16 Feb 2010

Links to Haiti
a benefit

Thursday, Februrary 18th
7:30-10:30pm

at Links Hall
3435 N. Sheffield -- Chicago, IL
http://www.LinksHall.org

$15 admission
with all proceeds
being donated to Partners in Health
http://www.standwithhaiti.org/haiti

FEATURING PERFORMANCES BY:
Adam K. of Dear Adora
Annie Peacenik
Adam Rose
David Lakein
Rebecca Niziol
Austin Pruett
Aurora Tabar & Sara Thompson
Kate Corby & Dancers
MADD Rythms
Jennifer Karmin
Rocco Granite
Tamboula Ethnic Dance Company
Chicago Aissawa

buy tickets at Brown Paper Tickets
http://www.brownpapertickets.com/event/97880

↑ Index

128. Scott Howard
RECONFIGURATIONS, Vol. 3: special features (4 of 4)
Tue 16 Feb 2010

---

* * *

Obododimma Oha, ed.
Preface to "BAOBAB TREE: LOCAL KNOWLEDGE / GLOBAL POLITICS"

http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/2009/11/obododimma-oha-embracing-baobab-tree.html

“Knowledge is like a baobab tree; no one can embrace it with both arms”—Ewe Proverb

"Resistance to Western hegemony in the sphere of knowledge production has been around for quite a while and continues to be an issue in contemporary cultural studies. In theory and artistic representations, one continues to witness the struggle against assumptions built upon the supremacy of Western ideas, identity, expressions, etc. There has also been a robust counter-critique of the resistance rhetoric from non-Western scholars who try to show that anti-Western oppositional practices are not totally free from the same posture they want to dismantle."

http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/2009/11/baobab-tree-local-knowledge-global.html

* * *

↑ Index

129. Natalie Knight

CFP: Turning on Rights: Politics, Performance and the Text SUNY Albany April 16-17, 2010

Wed 17 Feb 2010

Turning on Rights: Politics, Performance, and the Text, April 16-17, 2010 SUNY Albany, Keynotes: Rachel Zolf, Joseph Slaughter

“The other is the neighbour, who is not necessarily kin, but who can be. And in that sense, if you're for the other, you're for the neighbour. But if your neighbour attacks another neighbour or treats him unjustly, what can you do? Then alterity takes on another character, in alterity we can find an enemy, or at least we are faced with the problem of knowing who is right and who is wrong, who is just and who is unjust.” (Emmanuel Lévinas, quoted in Rachel Zolf's Neighbour Procedure)

How do "rights" intervene in and compose our notions and notations of just and unjust, right and wrong? In wide ranging disciplines, rights of the subject and to the objective world are both historically grounded and contemporarily debated. If discourses of all varieties are also textual sites, then the places where rights are manifested (technology, culture, art and literature, science, law, and ontology) must be read and ultimately performed.

This conference features work that explores definitions, constructions, and performative notions of rights. How do texts challenge predominant conceptual narratives of rights? In what ways does literature explore notions of rights inside and outside of the juridical realm?

As the focus of our 8th annual Graduate Student Conference, the English Graduate Student Organization at the University at Albany seeks both critical and creative projects that further this discussion. Rachel Zolf is our keynote poet for the Friday evening performance. Zolf is the author of Neighbour Procedure (2010) and Human Resources (2007), winner of the Trillium Book Award for Poetry. Saturday's keynote will be Joseph Slaughter, Associate Professor of English and Comparative Literature at Columbia and author of Human Rights, Inc.: The World Novel, Narrative Form, and International Law (2007).

We solicit creative submissions for inclusion in the evening performance as well as panels and papers for Saturday. We encourage submissions from graduate students working in any field, historical period, or scholarly discipline. Critical abstracts should be limited to 250-300 words; creative abstracts should include a 300 word or less description and a 3-page sample. Submit abstracts to: [redacted] by March 12, 2010.

Possible areas of inquiry may include, but are not limited to:

• Witnessing vs. Performing Rights
• Authorship, Readership, Agency
• Animal and Other Alterities
• Violence, Trauma, and Testimony
• Sovereignty, Exemplarity, and Exception
• Environmental, Agricultural, and Terrestrial Rights
• Global vs. National Rights
• Unwritten, Inalienable Rights
• Definitions of Freedom
• Sexual and Reproductive Rights
• Corporate and Commercial Rights
• Information, Technology, and Copyright
• Rights and the Demarcations of the Body
• Rights in the Realm of the Post-Human and Virtual

↑ Index

130. Bill Berkson
Portland & Seattle
Wed 17 Feb 2010

Bill Berkson Readings
in Portland & Seattle

February 21, 7:30 pm
Poetry Reading, Spare Room Series
Concordia Coffee House
2909 NE Alberta Street, Portland

February 22, 6:30 pm
Poetry Reading, Eliot Hall, Room 314
Reed College, Portland

February 24, 2 pm
University of Washington, Bothell
Library Room 205, 18115 Campus Way NE

February 25, 7 pm
Henry Art Gallery Auditorium
15th Ave NE & NE 41st St
Seattle
>>>
>>>

↑ Index

131. Nathalie Malek
Job Posting - Hudson Valley Writers' Center
Wed 17 Feb 2010

Executive Assistant/Office Manager
The Hudson Valley Writers' Center
(Sleepy Hollow NY)

http://www.nyfa.org/opp_detail.asp?type=Job&id”&fid=1&sidT&oppid(124

↑ Index

132. Joel Weishaus
Keith Abbot
Wed 17 Feb 2010

Could someone please send me Keith Abbot's email address off-list.

Thanks so much.

Joel

↑ Index

133. Jé Maverick
Re: question,
Wed 17 Feb 2010

Ha!

----- Original Message -----
From: "Herb Levy" <[redacted]>

To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, February 17, 2010 2:37 AM
Subject: Re: question,

> "anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.
>
> On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:
>
> Is that first word his/her name or description?
>
> On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
>
> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
>
> rob
>
> --
> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere
> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press
> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons
> *www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com *
> http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

↑ Index

134. George Bowering
Re: question,
Wed 17 Feb 2010

Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
I owe you one punch on the shoulder.

gb

On Feb 16, 2010, at 7:37 AM, Herb Levy wrote:

> "anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.

> On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:
>
> Is that first word his/her name or description?
>
> On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
>
> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
>
> rob
>
> --
> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere
> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press
> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons
> *www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*
>
> welcome.html
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html

Bowering, George H.
A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

↑ Index

135. Paul Siegell
"Go G / et 'er / tiGer"
Wed 17 Feb 2010

Po/VisPo/Concrete/Rifle Fire News > http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com

Here we find DaDa dynamite and typographical talismans freshened by a poet whose native gifts imbue this exciting work with a whole new sense of "poetic object."—Vladimir Slender-Hedge

yours,
paul>

↑ Index

136. Douglas Manson

free long poem by Douglas Manson

Wed 17 Feb 2010

---

i've posted a long poem to my blog:

http://dougfinmanson.blogspot.com/2010/02/long-poem.html

Douglas Manson is a freelance academic, writer and micropublisher. In 2004 he took a Ph.D. from U.Buffalo, and soon after started little scratch pad press and Celery Flute: The Kenneth Patchen Newsletter. He adjuncts when his rice supply is getting low, and otherwise likes to make raucous music, fly kites and argue about the contemporary definition of good love with his friends in Brooklyn.

I'm also giving a Blake lecture in Greenpoint, Brooklyn on February 28:

Blake Lecture 2: Published Works

delivered by Douglas Manson

with some performance/dramatizations of his works

Sunday, February 28. 4:00 p.m.

99 Sutton Street, Greenpoint (Brooklyn)

in the Cork Building, please ring the Kevorkian bell for entry

Blake is cool because he’s a workshop for the mind of his readers, whether they be thinkers, poets or painters. His many works in text and design provide a generous supply of ideas for re-thinking artistic practice and performance. He came to full maturity in the midst of multiple revolutions, the results of which many would claim created our present social ideal of harmony as an enlightenment inheritance. Blake’s work questions these assumptions at the level of art and poetry. The present lecture will focus on his art: the style, techniques and themes of engravings and books in which he intertwined language and visual design. I will be using two American examples as a way of comparing the kinds of attention viewers and readers have given him in recent decades: the poetry of Gertrude Stein, and the stories and graphic work found in science fiction and fantasy titles published by Marvel Comics from the early 1970s to the early 1980s.

↑ Index

137. amy king
Please Help - Poet Question
Wed 17 Feb 2010

Responses very much appreciated for presentation I'm working on, here -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/02/17/please-help/

↑ Index

138. Paul Nelson
Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
Wed 17 Feb 2010

George,

These Pacific Coast Poetry Rules seem violent. Is that why Levertov and Duncan ended their friendship?

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

_____
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 1:07:18 PM
Subject: Re: question,

Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
I owe you one punch on the shoulder.

gb

On Feb 16, 2010, at 7:37 AM, Herb Levy wrote:

> "anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.
>
> On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:
>
> Is that first word his/her name or description?
>
> On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
>
> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?

> rob
>
> --
> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons
> *www.aboveground press.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

Bowering, George H.
A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

↑ Index

139. Herb Levy
Re: question,
Wed 17 Feb 2010

On Feb 17, 2010, at 3:07 PM, George Bowering wrote:

> Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
> I owe you one punch on the shoulder.
>
> gb

I don't expect to be in Vancouver any time soon. Let me know next time you're in Texas.

H

↑ Index

140. George Bowering
Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
Thu 18 Feb 2010

No, it was because Duncan borrowed Denise's curler and wouldnt give it back.

gb

On Feb 17, 2010, at 7:02 PM, Paul Nelson wrote:

George,

These Pacific Coast Poetry Rules seem violent. Is that why Levertov and Duncan ended their friendship?

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

_____
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 1:07:18 PM
Subject: Re: question,

Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
I owe you one punch on the shoulder.

gb

On Feb 16, 2010, at 7:37 AM, Herb Levy wrote:

"anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.

On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:

Is that first word his/her name or description?

On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:

anyone have a contact for heller levinson?

rob

> --
> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere
> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press
> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons
> *www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*
>
> welcome.html
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html

Giorgio H. Bowering
Does not kill snakes

↑ Index

141. holsapple1

Re: POETICS Digest - 16 Feb 2010 to 17 Feb 2010 (#2010-45)

Thu 18 Feb 2010

Somehow reassuring to know George Bowering & Herb Levy are still policing the listserv for grammatical obscurities, but I can't quite say how.

On Thu, 18 Feb 2010 00:02:09 -0500 POETICS automatic digest system
<[redacted]> writes:
> There are 15 messages totalling 685 lines in this issue.
>
> Topics of the day:
>
> 1. question, (3)
> 2. Making Kage-an an Artists Retreat Center

> 3. Feb 18: Haiti Benefit in Chicago
> 4. RECONFIGURATIONS, Vol. 3: special features (4 of 4)
> 5. CFP: Turning on Rights: Politics, Performance and the Text SUNY > Albany
> April 16-17, 2010
> 6. Portland & Seattle
> 7. Keith Abbot
> 8. Call for Submissions: LANTERN REVIEW (New Poetry Magazine)
> 9. Job Posting - Hudson Valley Writers' Center
> 10. Please Help - Poet Question
> 11. free long poem by Douglas Manson
> 12. "Go G / et 'er / tiGer"
> 13. Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
>
>
> ---
>
> Date: Tue, 16 Feb 2010 09:37:16 -0600
> From: Herb Levy <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: question,
>
> "anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.
>
> On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:
>
> > Is that first word his/her name or description?
> >
> >
> > On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
> >
> >> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
> >>
> >> rob
> >>
> >>
> >> --
> >> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press &
>
> >> Chaudiere
> >> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa > small > >> press

> >> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel -
> >> missing persons
> >> www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com *
> http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/
> >>
>
> >
> > Bowering, George H.
> > A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
> >
> >
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Tue, 16 Feb 2010 08:58:22 -0800
> From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Making Kage-an an Artists Retreat Center
>
> http://splab.org/?p=355
After 35 years in Port Townsend, Sam
> Hamill is > closing a chapter in his life and beginning another. The home, > studio and l> ibrary, he created in the woods near Port Townsend, Washington in > the late > 1970â€™s is being made available for sale and our vision is to > create> a retreat for poets, scholars and painters to build on the > remarkable lega> cy that has been created here in that time by the poet/> scholar/editor and > his wife, painter, Gray Foster.

We envision purchasing the > property fr> om Hamill and Foster, with additional funding to ensure ten years of > admini> stration to facilitate retreats by individual artists and couples > ranging f> rom one week to three months. These would be made possible through a > compet> itive application process and through partner organizations. The > retreat wo> uld be made available for rental for writing retreats, but there > would be t> ime built into the yearly calendar allowing need-based writers to > stay free> as Kage-an Fellows. Sam Hamill, and his estate in the event of his > death, > would be involved in the process of deciding what artists use the > facility,> thereby continuing the focus of his legacy.

The current value > of the > property is $350,000 and we propose a budget of $500,000, with > $400,000 goi> ng to Hamill and Foster, with the remaining $100,000 earmarked for > ten year> s of administration.

We envision writers and painters with a > focus sim> ilar to Hamillâ€™s and Fosterâ€™s legacy, including, but > not li> mited to Engaged Buddhism, Chinese and Japanese poetry, the work of > Kenneth> Rexroth and other west coast poets and contemporary painters in the > Northw> est tradition, including those inspired by Morris Graves, Mark Tobey > and ot> hers. Although writers with the focus outlined here would have > primary cons> ideration, we would ensure it becomes a place welcoming to writers > and pain> ters of varied backgrounds and scholarship and would welcome > partnerships w> ith organizations interested in helping facilitate the experience of > Kage-a> n for serious artists.

Sam adds: "One of the major points about > leavin> g Kage-an is my heart condition and my Drs being nearly 90 minutes > away. In> Anacortes they'll be five or ten minutes away.And if we manage to > pull thi> s rabbit our of the hat, I will leave behind a very nearly complete > library> of my years as Editor of Copper Canyon Press, plus many others > books, tota> ling several thousand, probably."

Paul Nelson
Seattle,
> WA

2.16.> 10[redacted]
 Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices
> Radio
SPLAB!

C.> City, WA [redacted]
>
>
>
> ----------
>

> Date: Tue, 16 Feb 2010 15:08:34 -0800
> From: Jennifer Karmin <[redacted]>
> Subject: Feb 18: Haiti Benefit in Chicago
>
> Links to Haiti
> a benefit
>
> Thursday, Februrary 18th
> 7:30-10:30pm
>
> at Links Hall
> 3435 N. Sheffield -- Chicago, IL
> http://www.LinksHall.org
>
> $15 admission
> with all proceeds
> being donated to > Partners in Health
> http://www.standwithhaiti.org/haiti
>
> FEATURING PERFORMANCES BY:
> Adam K. of Dear Adora
> Annie Peacenik
> Adam Rose
> David Lakein
> Rebecca Niziol
> Austin Pruett
> Aurora Tabar & Sara Thompson
> Kate Corby & Dancers
> MADD Rythms
> Jennifer Karmin
> Rocco Granite
> Tamboula Ethnic Dance Company
> Chicago Aissawa
>
> buy tickets at Brown Paper Tickets
> http://www.brownpapertickets.com/event/97880
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Tue, 16 Feb 2010 20:38:18 -0700
> From: Scott Howard <[redacted]>
> Subject: RECONFIGURATIONS, Vol. 3: special features (4 of 4)
>
> * * *
> Obododimma Oha, ed.
> Preface to "BAOBAB TREE: LOCAL KNOWLEDGE / GLOBAL POLITICS" >
>
>
http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/2009/11/obododimma-oha-embrac> ing-baobab-tree.html >
>
> “Knowledge is like a baobab tree; no one can embrace it with > both ar> ms”—Ewe Proverb >
>
> "Resistance to Western hegemony in the sphere of knowledge > production > has been around for quite a while and continues to be an issue
in > contem> porary cultural studies. In theory and artistic representations, > one> continues to witness the struggle against assumptions built upon > the su> premacy of Western ideas, identity, expressions, etc. There > has > also been a robust counter-critique of the resistance rhetoric from > non-> Western scholars who try to show that anti-Western oppositional > practice> s are not totally free from the same posture they want to > dismantle.">
>
>
http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/2009/11/baobab-tree-local-kno> wledge-global.html >
>
> * * *
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 09:04:05 -0500

> From: Natalie Knight <[redacted]>
> Subject: CFP: Turning on Rights: Politics, Performance and the Text
> SUNY Albany April 16-17, 2010
>
> Turning on Rights: Politics, Performance, and the Text, April 16-17, > 2010
> SUNY Albany, Keynotes: Rachel Zolf, Joseph Slaughter
>
> “The other is the neighbour, who is not necessarily kin, but who > can be. > And > in that sense, if you're for the other, you're for the neighbour.
> But if > your neighbour attacks another neighbour or treats him unjustly, > what can > you do? Then alterity takes on another character, in alterity we can > find a> n > enemy, or at least we are faced with the problem of knowing who is > right an> d
> who is wrong, who is just and who is unjust.” (Emmanuel Lévinas, > quoted> in > Rachel Zolf's Neighbour Procedure)
>
> How do "rights" intervene in and compose our notions and notations > of just > and unjust, right and wrong? In wide ranging disciplines, rights of > the > subject and to the objective world are both historically grounded
> and > contemporarily debated. If discourses of all varieties are also > textual > sites, then the places where rights are manifested (technology, > culture, ar> t > and literature, science, law, and ontology) must be read and > ultimately > performed.
>
> This conference features work that explores definitions, > constructions, and > performative notions of rights. How do texts challenge predominant > conceptual narratives of rights? In what ways does literature > explore > notions of rights inside and outside of the juridical realm?

>
> As the focus of our 8th annual Graduate Student Conference, the > English > Graduate Student Organization at the University at Albany seeks > both > critical and creative projects that further this discussion. Rachel > Zolf is > our keynote poet for the Friday evening performance. Zolf is the > author of > Neighbour Procedure (2010) and Human Resources (2007), winner of
> the > Trillium Book Award for Poetry. Saturday's keynote will be Joseph > Slaughter> ,
> Associate Professor of English and Comparative Literature at > Columbia and > author of Human Rights, Inc.: The World Novel, Narrative Form, and > International Law (2007).
>
> We solicit creative submissions for inclusion in the evening > performance as > well as panels and papers for Saturday. We encourage submissions > from > graduate students working in any field, historical period, or > scholarly > discipline. Critical abstracts should be limited to 250-300 words; > creative > abstracts should include a 300 word or less description and a 3-page > sample> .
> Submit abstracts to: [redacted] by March 12, 2010.
>
> Possible areas of inquiry may include, but are not limited to:
>
> • Witnessing vs. Performing Rights
> • Authorship, Readership, Agency
> • Animal and Other Alterities
> • Violence, Trauma, and Testimony
> • Sovereignty, Exemplarity, and Exception
> • Environmental, Agricultural, and Terrestrial Rights
> • Global vs. National Rights
> • Unwritten, Inalienable Rights
> • Definitions of Freedom
> • Sexual and Reproductive Rights

> • Corporate and Commercial Rights
> • Information, Technology, and Copyright
> • Rights and the Demarcations of the Body
> • Rights in the Realm of the Post-Human and Virtual
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 09:10:44 -0800
> From: Bill Berkson <[redacted]> > Subject: Portland & Seattle
>
> Bill Berkson Readings
> in Portland & Seattle
>
> February 21, 7:30 pm
> Poetry Reading, Spare Room Series
> Concordia Coffee House
> 2909 NE Alberta Street, Portland
>
> February 22, 6:30 pm
> Poetry Reading, Eliot Hall, Room 314
> Reed College, Portland
>
> February 24, 2 pm
> University of Washington, Bothell
> Library Room 205, 18115 Campus Way NE
>
> February 25, 7 pm
> Henry Art Gallery Auditorium
> 15th Ave NE & NE 41st St
> Seattle
> >>>
> >>>
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 10:15:18 -0800
> From: Joel Weishaus <[redacted]>

> Subject: Keith Abbot
>
> Could someone please send me Keith Abbot's email address off-list.
>
> Thanks so much.
>
> Joel
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Tue, 16 Feb 2010 12:08:51 -0500
> From: Iris Law <[redacted]>
> Subject: Call for Submissions: LANTERN REVIEW (New Poetry Magazine)
>
> Lantern Review, a new online journal of Asian American poetry, > seeks > submissions of poetry, translations, visual art, essays on poetics,
> and > collaborative work for its inaugural issue. Submissions will be > accepted > through April 15, 2010 via our online form. Please visit > www.lanternreview.com to read our guidelines in detail.
>
> *About Us *
> Lantern Review: A Journal of Asian American Poetry is published in > two > formats: a twice-annual electronic magazine, and a > blog<http://www.lanternreview.com/blog>which our team of staff > writers
> updates weekly with interviews, reviews, > literary news, writing prompts, and more. We aim to serve the > literary > community by providing a virtual space in which to promote and > discuss the > work of contemporary Asian American poets and artists. LR seeks to > publish > expertly crafted work in a variety of forms and aesthetics, > including > traditional and experimental pieces, hybrid forms, multimedia work, > and new > translations. We welcome pieces from anglophone writers of all > ethnic > backgrounds whose work has a vested interest in issues relevant to > the Asian > diaspora in North America, as well as work created collaboratively > in a > community context.

>
> Contact Information
> [redacted]
> Iris A. Law, Editor; Mia Ayumi Malhotra, Associate Editor
>
> --
> Iris A. Law
> MFA Candidate
> Department of Creative Writing
> University of Notre Dame
> [redacted]
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 12:27:24 -0500
> From: Nathalie Malek <[redacted]>
> Subject: Job Posting - Hudson Valley Writers' Center
>
> Executive Assistant/Office Manager
> The Hudson Valley Writers' Center
> (Sleepy Hollow NY)
>
>
http://www.nyfa.org/opp_detail.asp?type=Job&id”&fid=1&sidT&oppid(12 4
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 14:30:28 -0800
> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> Subject: Please Help - Poet Question
>
> Responses very much appreciated for presentation I'm working on, > here -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/02/17/please-help/

>
>
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 13:07:18 -0800
> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: question,
>
> Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
> I owe you one punch on the shoulder.
>
> gb
>
>
> On Feb 16, 2010, at 7:37 AM, Herb Levy wrote:
>
> > "anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.
> >
> > On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:
> >
> >> Is that first word his/her name or description?
> >>
> >>
> >> On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
> >>
> >>> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
> >>>
> >>> rob
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> --
> >>> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press
> &
> >>> Chaudiere
> >>> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa
> >>> small press
> >>> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel -
>

> >>> missing persons > >>> www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http:// > >>> robmclennan.blogspot.com/
> >>>
>
> >>> welcome.html
> >>
> >> Bowering, George H.
> >> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
> >>
> >>
>
> >> welcome.html
> >
>
> > welcome.html
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 16:47:35 -0500
> From: Douglas Manson <[redacted]>
> Subject: free long poem by Douglas Manson
>
> i've posted a long poem to my blog:
>
> http://dougfinmanson.blogspot.com/2010/02/long-poem.html
>
> Douglas Manson is a freelance academic, writer and micropublisher.
> In 2004
> he took a Ph.D. from U.Buffalo, and soon after started little > scratch pad > press and Celery Flute: The Kenneth Patchen Newsletter. He > adjuncts whe> n > his rice supply is getting low, and otherwise likes to make raucous > music,
> fly kites and argue about the contemporary definition of good love
> with > his friends in Brooklyn.

>
>
>
> I'm also giving a Blake lecture in Greenpoint, Brooklyn on February > 28:
>
>
> Blake Lecture 2: Published Works
>
> delivered by Douglas Manson
>
> with some performance/dramatizations of his works
>
> Sunday, February 28. 4:00 p.m.
>
> 99 Sutton Street, Greenpoint (Brooklyn)
>
> in the Cork Building, please ring the Kevorkian bell for > entry
>
>
> Blake is cool because he’s a workshop for the mind of his readers, > whethe> r > they be thinkers, poets or painters. His many works in text and > design > provide a generous supply of ideas for re-thinking artistic practice
> and > performance. He came to full maturity in the midst of multiple > revolutions> , > the results of which many would claim created our present social > ideal of > harmony as an enlightenment inheritance. Blake’s work questions > these > assumptions at the level of art and poetry. The present lecture > will focus > on his art: the style, techniques and themes of engravings and books
> in > which he intertwined language and visual design. I will be using > two > American examples as a way of comparing the kinds of attention > viewers and

> readers have given him in recent decades: the poetry of Gertrude > Stein, and > the stories and graphic work found in science fiction and fantasy > titles > published by Marvel Comics from the early 1970s to the early 1980s.
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Thu, 18 Feb 2010 07:58:35 +1100
> From: =?iso-8859-1?Q?Jé_Maverick?= <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: question,
>
> Ha!
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "Herb Levy" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Wednesday, February 17, 2010 2:37 AM
> Subject: Re: question,
>
>
> > "anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.
> >
> > On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:
> >
> >> Is that first word his/her name or description?
> >>
> >>
> >> On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
> >>
> >>> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
> >>>
> >>> rob
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> --
> >>> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press
> &
> >>> Chaudiere
> >>> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa

> small
> >>> press
> >>> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - > missing > >>> persons
> >>> www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com *
> >>> http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/
> >>>
>
> >>
> >> Bowering, George H.
> >> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
> >>
> >>
>
> >
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 16:08:04 -0500
> From: Paul Siegell <[redacted]>
> Subject: "Go G / et 'er / tiGer"
>
> Po/VisPo/Concrete/Rifle Fire News > http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com
>
> Here we find DaDa dynamite and typographical talismans freshened by > a poe> t > whose native gifts imbue this exciting work with a whole new sense
> of > "poetic object."—Vladimir Slender-Hedge
>
> yours,
> paul>
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Wed, 17 Feb 2010 19:02:17 -0800
> From: Paul Nelson <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules

>
> George,
>
> These Pacific Coast Poetry Rules seem violent. Is that why Levertov > and Duncan ended their friendship?
>
> Paul
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
>
> C. City, WA [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 1:07:18 PM
> Subject: Re: question,
>
> Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
> I owe you one punch on the shoulder.
>
> gb
>
>
> On Feb 16, 2010, at 7:37 AM, Herb Levy wrote:
>
> > "anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.
> >
> > On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:
> >
> >> Is that first word his/her name or description?
> >>
> >>

> >> On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
> >>
> >>> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
> >>>
> >>> rob
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> --
> >>> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press
> & Chaudiere
> >>> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa
> small press
> >>> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel -
> missing persons
> >>> www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com *
> http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/
> >>>
> >>
> >> Bowering, George H.
> >> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
> >>
> >>
> >
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
>
>
>
>
> ----------
>
> End of POETICS Digest - 16 Feb 2010 to 17 Feb 2010 (#2010-45)
> **********
>

↑ Index

142. David Kirschenbaum
NYC, Tues./ Boog City presents Forklift, Ohio and Jane Carver
Thu 18 Feb 2010

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

Forklift, Ohio
A Journal of Poetry, Cooking & Light Industrial Safety (Cincinnati)

This Tues., Feb. 23, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by Forklift, Ohio's editor-in-chief Matt Hart

Featuring readings from

Evan Commander
Darcie Dennigan
Justin Taylor
Paul Violi

and music from

Jane Carver

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

Forklift, Ohio: A Journal of Poetry, Cooking & Light Industrial Safety
http://www.forkliftohio.com/

Eric Appleby and Matt Hart founded Forklift, Ohio: A Journal of Poetry, Cooking and Light Industrial Safety in 1995 (that's 15 years without a lost time accident!), and since then have published 21 issues of the journal, several chapbooks, numerous recipes, and all manner of light industrial effects. Operations-wise, the journal now is pretty much exactly the same as it was in the beginning, except now Hart and Appleby have some help: Brett Price is the assistant poetry editor, Merrill Feitell is the assistant fiction editor, and Tricia Suit is the test kitchen supervisor. Issue 22 of Forklift, Ohio will appear at this year's AWP Conference in Denver, along with chapbooks by Abraham Smith and Chad Sweeney, and a poetry cookbook by Melissa Barrett.

Performer Bios

Jane Carver
http://www.myspace.com/janeortruncarver

Jane Carver is a performance artist and musician. Her performances and operas include Leda and the Swan, I've Been Away, and Muse-Sick: The Corso Suite. She lives and works in Brooklyn.

Evan Commander
http://www.evancommander.com/

Evan Commander is a visual artist, poet, and curator. He has worked as co-curator with the independent gallery, Publico, and as Curator of DAAP Galleries at the University of Cincinnati. He lives and works in Brooklyn, where he edits and curates the independent press and reading series, Moor.

Darcie Dennigan
http://www.h-ngm-n.com/h_ngm_n-6/darcie-dennigan.html

Darcie Dennigan's collection, Corinna A-Maying the Apocalypse, won the Poets Out Loud prize. She has new poems in Absent, Barrow Street, and POOL. She lives in Providence, R.I.

Justin Taylor
http://www.justindtaylor.net/

Justin Taylor is the author of a short story collection, Everything Here is the Best Thing Ever (Harper Perennial). He is also the co- editor of The Agriculture Reader, an arts annual. He contributed work to issues 17 and 19 of Forklift, Ohio. He lives in Brooklyn, and teaches expository and creative writing at Rutgers University.

Paul Violi
http://www.paulvioli.com/

Paul Violi is the author of 11 books of poetry, most recently Overnight. Widely published and anthologized here and abroad, he has received two National Endowment for the Arts fellowships in poetry, as well as grants from the Ingram Merrill Foundation, The New York Foundation for the Arts, the Fund for Poetry, The Foundation for Contemporary Arts, and a John Ciardi Lifetime Achievement Award. In 2001 he received The Morton Dauwen Zabel Award from the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Directions:
C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. March 23
Cannibal Books
http://flesheatingpoems.blogspot.com/
(Fayetteville, Ark.)
Matt Henriksen, ed.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

143. Rebecca Stoddard
caroline lamour
Thu 18 Feb 2010

---

http://koolkids.in/Annick.html

↑ Index

144. steve dalachinsky
Re: A Question for Publishers
Thu 18 Feb 2010

---

is any one out there interested in publishing the poems of the great composer musician cecil taylor??

On Thu, 18 Feb 2010 15:22:33 -0500 Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
writes:
> Sure. The people I work with (and I think any good digital printer) > will cut to whatever size you want within the limitations of the > paper. And as far as I know they'll all do matt. I use Sterling > Pierce. Contact, Bill Burke. [redacted]. (516) > [redacted]. Use my name. I've turned several other presses on to them.

>
> Lovely people to work with. They correct any mistakes (every printer
>
> makes the occasional mistake) cheerfully.
>
> Best,
>
> Mark Weiss
>
> At 01:45 PM 2/18/2010, you wrote:
> >Any publishers out there know of a good POD provider who is willing > >to work with custom trim sizes AND cover stock other than glossy?
>
> >
> >Thanks for any leads,
> >Brian Clements
> >Sentence/Firewheel Editions
> >
> >
> >
> >
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University
>
> of California Press).
> http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
>
> "Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book
> of > Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so > effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United
>
> States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in > English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The > Nation
>
>
>

↑ Index

145. amy king
Poet Question - Innovation ... Experimental...
Thu 18 Feb 2010

Catherine Daly's blog today -- http://cadaly.blogspot.com/2010/02/in-answer-to-amy-kings-query-about.html

And Ron Silliman's -- http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/2010/02/second-link-that-had-me-pondering-world.html

Still seeking answers on my own blog (thanks to all who have sent along so far!) -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/02/17/please-help/

Cheers,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

146. Paul Nelson
Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
Thu 18 Feb 2010

I did not know Duncan was into curling. Did he learn that on one of many trips to Canada? Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

_____
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 9:15:19 PM
Subject: Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules

No, it was because Duncan borrowed Denise's curler and wouldnt give it back.

gb

On Feb 17, 2010, at 7:02 PM, Paul Nelson wrote:

> George,
>
> These Pacific Coast Poetry Rules seem violent. Is that why Levertov and Duncan ended their friendship?
>
> Paul
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
>
> C. City, WA [redacted]
>
> ---
> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 1:07:18 PM
> Subject: Re: question,
>
> Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
> I owe you one punch on the shoulder.
>
> gb
>
> On Feb 16, 2010, at 7:37 AM, Herb Levy wrote:
>
> "anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.
>
> On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:
>
> Is that first word his/her name or description?

> On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:
>
> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
>
> rob
>
> --
> *writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

Giorgio H. Bowering
Does not kill snakes

↑ Index

147. Halvard Johnson
The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye & Other Sonnets
Thu 18 Feb 2010

You can find my new collection -- The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye and Other Sonnets from Chalk Editions right here --> http://www.scribd.com/people/documents/14481250-chalk-editions

Enjoy.

Hal

"Poetry is the antidote to the poison of rationality."
--Mikhail Horowitz

Halvard Johnson
==========

[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

↑ Index

148. Brian Clements

A Question for Publishers

Thu 18 Feb 2010

Any publishers out there know of a good POD provider who is willing to work with custom trim sizes AND cover stock other than glossy?

Thanks for any leads,
Brian Clements
Sentence/Firewheel Editions

↑ Index

149. Philip Meersman

BruSlam invitation: sunday 21/02 - Tristan and Claude Lammens - GalerY (VUB)

Thu 18 Feb 2010

BruSlam Free Podium
 *
Sunday 21/02/2010*

with
*Tristan
Claude Lammens
*
...more info<http://bruslam.over-blog.com/pages/022010_Tristan_amp_Claude_Lammens-1951889.html>
 *
*
*
*
@GalerY
Gebouw Y'
Campus Etterbeek
Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB)
Triomflaan - toegang 6 (near the CultuurCafé)

1050 Brussel
...localisation<http://bruslam.over-blog.com/pages/Localisation-967397.html>
*
*
20:00-22:30
*Inscription 19.30
*
info about BruSlam<http://bruslam.over-blog.com/pages/What_is_BruSlam-951626.html>
*
[image: Affiche_BruSlam02b.jpg][image: Verso BruSlam02b]
*
to unsuscribe, answer "slam is dead". Thanks!

--
Philip Meersman
A. Lynenstraat 25 bus 3
1210 St-Joost-ten-Noode
Belgium
tel[redacted]
www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
skype: Spooninmybrain
[redacted]
www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
21/02/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl< BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/03/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
02/04/10: Performance opening expo "Love Letters", KULTOUR10, Sint-Niklaas, BE (http://www.kultour10.be/kultour10/)
16/04/10: "Binnenkort ook in navulpak" op het Once upon a Festival, Kasteel van Laarne, BE (www.onceuponafestival.be)
21/04/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/07/10: BruSlam, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

↑ Index

150. mIEKAL aND
Re: A Question for Publishers
Thu 18 Feb 2010

Please post any answer front channel for the benefit of the rest of us....

On Thu, Feb 18, 2010 at 12:45 PM, Brian Clements <[redacted]> wrote:
> Any publishers out there know of a good POD provider who is willing to work with custom trim sizes AND cover stock other than glossy?
>
> Thanks for any leads,
> Brian Clements
> Sentence/Firewheel Editions
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

151. George Bowering
Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
Thu 18 Feb 2010

Didn't you notice the iciness in his later poems?

gb

On Feb 18, 2010, at 6:23 AM, Paul Nelson wrote:

> I did not know Duncan was into curling. Did he learn that on one of many trips to Canada?
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
>
> C. City, WA [redacted]
>
> _____
> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 9:15:19 PM
> Subject: Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
>
> No, it was because Duncan borrowed Denise's curler and wouldnt give it back.

gb

On Feb 17, 2010, at 7:02 PM, Paul Nelson wrote:

George,

These Pacific Coast Poetry Rules seem violent. Is that why Levertov and Duncan ended their friendship?

Paul

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 1:07:18 PM
Subject: Re: question,

Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
I owe you one punch on the shoulder.

gb

On Feb 16, 2010, at 7:37 AM, Herb Levy wrote:

"anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.

On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:

Is that first word his/her name or description?

On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:

> anyone have a contact for heller levinson?
>
> rob
>
> --
> writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere
> Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press
> fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons
> *www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html
>
> Bowering, George H.
> A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html
>
> Giorgio H. Bowering
> Does not kill snakes
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html

Georges Bowering, OC
If you say so.

↑ Index

152. Mark Weiss
Re: A Question for Publishers
Thu 18 Feb 2010

Sure. The people I work with (and I think any good digital printer) will cut to whatever size you want within the limitations of the paper. And as far as I know they'll all do matt. I use Sterling Pierce. Contact, Bill Burke. [redacted]. [redacted]. Use my name. I've turned several other presses on to them. Lovely people to work with. They correct any mistakes (every printer makes the occasional mistake) cheerfully.

Best,

Mark Weiss

At 01:45 PM 2/18/2010, you wrote:
>Any publishers out there know of a good POD provider who is willing >to work with custom trim sizes AND cover stock other than glossy?
>
>Thanks for any leads,
>Brian Clements
>Sentence/Firewheel Editions
>
>
>
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

"Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

153. amy king
Help with AWP--panel--survey
Thu 18 Feb 2010

---------- Forwarded message ----------From: Mary Lannon <Mary.Lannon at ncc.edu> Hi folks, Christina and I only need about 12 more people to answer our survey. So if you can think of anyone else to take this survey, we would appreciate. Thanks for all your help! More information about the survey, including the link is below. Many thanks to all who have already taken our survey! Thanks also to those of you who had your students take our student survey. We so appreciate your input and your time!

Christina Rau and I are presenting on the impact (if any) of demographics on college-level teaching of creative writing at AWP in April 2010. If you have taught creative writing at the college level, please take our short on-line survey by clicking on the following link: http://www.surveymonkey.com/s.aspx?sm=yE4As0Gs5_2byAUQXjyWarKg_3d_3d Mary Mary Lannon PhD Instructor Nassau Community College

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

154. Paul Nelson
Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
Thu 18 Feb 2010

At least he had the stones to write them!
Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

_____
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thu, February 18, 2010 12:18:09 PM
Subject: Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules

Didn't you notice the iciness in his later poems?

gb

On Feb 18, 2010, at 6:23 AM, Paul Nelson wrote:

> I did not know Duncan was into curling. Did he learn that on one of many trips to Canada?
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
>
> C. City, WA [redacted]
>
> _____
> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 9:15:19 PM
> Subject: Re: Pacific Coast Poetry Rules
>
> No, it was because Duncan borrowed Denise's curler and wouldnt give it back.
>
> gb
>
> On Feb 17, 2010, at 7:02 PM, Paul Nelson wrote:
>
> George,
>
> These Pacific Coast Poetry Rules seem violent. Is that why Levertov and Duncan ended their friendship?
>
> Paul
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
>
> C. City, WA [redacted]

From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, February 17, 2010 1:07:18 PM
Subject: Re: question,

Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
I owe you one punch on the shoulder.

gb

On Feb 16, 2010, at 7:37 AM, Herb Levy wrote:

"anyone" seems more like a description than a name to me, George.

On Feb 16, 2010, at 2:34 AM, George Bowering wrote:

Is that first word his/her name or description?

On Feb 15, 2010, at 12:17 PM, Rob McLennan wrote:

anyone have a contact for heller levinson?

rob

--
writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons
*www.aboveground press.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/*

Bowering, George H.
A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

Bowering, George H.
A relatively untravelled Canadian writer.

> Giorgio H. Bowering
> Does not kill snakes

Georges Bowering, OC
If you say so.

↑ Index

155. Cara Benson
Re: A Question for Publishers
Thu 18 Feb 2010

Book Mobile
http://www.bookmobile.com/

_____
http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

_____
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thu, February 18, 2010 3:11:00 PM
Subject: Re: A Question for Publishers

Please post any answer front channel for the benefit of the rest of us....

On Thu, Feb 18, 2010 at 12:45 PM, Brian Clements <[redacted]> wrote:
> Any publishers out there know of a good POD provider who is willing to work with custom trim sizes AND cover stock other than glossy?
>
> Thanks for any leads,
> Brian Clements
> Sentence/Firewheel Editions
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

156. Carrie Etter

Infinite Difference: Other Poetries by UK Women Poets--sampler no. 1

Thu 18 Feb 2010

Hello, all. On 10 March, the anthology I've edited for Shearsman,* Infinite Difference: Other Poetries by UK Women Poets*, will be launched in London at Swedenborg Hall. Between now and then I'll be posting on my blog samples of the work therein, and I began with Anna Reckin's poem, "Lone Thorn": http://carrieetter.blogspot.com.

I also want to say I'm going to be in NYC at the beginning of April, giving a reading the afternoon of the third, and would be glad to talk about the anthology, read from it, whatever, if there's an opportunity.

Cheers,
Carrie

↑ Index

157. Poetry Project

Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 18 Feb 2010

Hereâ€™s whatâ€™s coming up at The Poetry Project!

Scroll all the way down for information on becoming a member.

Monday, February 22, 8 PM
Sean Cole & Wendy Walters

Sean Coleâ€™s poems have appeared in Court Green, Black Clock, Pavement Saw and other magazines. Heâ€™s also the author of the chapbook Itty City (Pressed Wafer) and a collection of postcard poems called The December Project (Boog Literature). His poem â€œFreehandâ€ will be included in the forthcoming anthology Starting Today: 100 Poems for Obamaâ€™s First 100 Days (University of Iowa Press). Sean is a reporter for public radio and lives in Arlington, MA â€“ Âgateway to Lexington where The Revolution began.

Wendy S. Waltersâ€™ work resides at the intersection of the poem, essay and lyric drama. She is the author of Longer I Wait, More You Love Me (2009) and a chapbook, Birds of Los Angeles (2005), both published by Palm Press (Long Beach, CA). Â Waltersâ€™ poetry has been recognized with residency fellowships from Breadloaf, MacDowell and Yaddo, and her poems have recently appeared in Callaloo, HOW2, Natural Bridge, Seneca Review and the Yalobusha Review, among several others. Her lyric and personal essays have been published or are forthcoming in Seneca Review, Seattle Review, and Harperâ€™s Magazine.

Wednesday, February 24, 8 PM
Joanna Fuhrman & John Koethe

Joanna Fuhrman is the author of three collections published by Hanging Loose Press, most recently Moraine. Her new book, Pageant, has just been released by Alice James Books. From 2001-2003, she was the Monday Night Reading Series coordinator at the Poetry Project. She teaches creative writing at Rutgers University and in public schools and libraries. Her essay on teaching Jayne Cortezâ€™s work to high school students is in the current issue of Teachers & Writers magazine.

John Koetheâ€™s most recent book is Ninety-Fifth Street (HarperCollins). From 1973-2009 he was Distinguished Professor of Philosophy at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, and the first Poet Laureate of Milwaukee. His collection Falling Water won the Kingsley Tufts Award. North Point North: New And Selected Poems was a finalist for the Los Angeles Times Book Prize. In 2005 he was a fellow of the American Academy in Berlin, and in 2008 he was the Elliston Poet in Residence at the University of Cincinnati. He is currently the Bain-Swiggett Professor of Poetry at Princeton University.

Friday, February 26, 2010
Forrest Gillespie & Ellis Isenberg: The Green Death

The Green Death involves physical therapy, nutrition, and the afterlife.Â This will be be the final work of a trilogyÂ exploring the coordinated mutation of subcultural language spheres.

Forrest Gillespie works in the non-profit environmental building industry in New York and writes about a play a month.Â Lately:Â Future Rickshaw,Â Ridinâ€™ Dirt..Dirty,Â Â Merciless Shopping Spree,Â El Ojo Del Diablo,Â The Woman in the Mirror,Â The White and Yellow Spasms of Death,Â Baghdad Zookeeper,Â The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier,Â TheÂ Last Recorded Instance of the Paranormal,Â Rocky Mountain Rescue.Â Directed: most of the above, plus:Â Night of Pity (Ghelderode),Â Hamlet (BuÃ±uel).

Ellis Isenberg is from Minneapolis Minnesota.Â He used to write and print books of poetry but now he has been writing plays.Â There have been two so far:Â Csepian Tec is Going Public andÂ Enormous Sun Group Therapy.Â He also writes scienceÂ fiction.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If youâ€™d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

158. Poetry Project
Benefit for Haiti
Thu 18 Feb 2010

SAVE THE DATE
Sunday, March 14th, 6:30 PM at St. Mark¹s Church
A Celebration of Haitian Culture: Benefit for Earthquake Relief

Please join the Poetry Project , Danspace, Ontological-Hysteric Theater and St. Mark¹s Church in the Bowery for a celebration of Haitian culture. All proceeds from the evening will be donated to Partners in Health: Stand With Haiti. http://www.standwithhaiti.org/haiti

Readings by Amiri & Amina Baraka and Denizé Lauture! Performances by John Zorn and master Haitian drummer Bonga! More artists to be announced soon!

Tickets to the benefit and to the pre-show reception at Pangea Restaurant and Bar will be available for advanced purchase soon, and will also be sold at the door. Please visit the benefit blog for updates and ticket options. http://benefitforhaiti.wordpress.com/

↑ Index

159. amy king
So and So - This Sat. Feb. 20th @ 8 p.m. -- Bozicevic, Howe, and King
Thu 18 Feb 2010

Poetry by Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ * Brian How
SO AND SO presents:

Poetry by Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ * Brian Howe * Amy King

Designs by Brent Francese

Saturday * February 20th * 8pm

Morning Times * 10 E. Hargett Street * Raleigh, NC

http://www.thesoandsoseries.blogspot.com/

Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ emigrated to NYC in 1997. Stars of the Night Commute (Tarpaulin Sky Press, November 2009) is her first book of poems. Her fifth chapbook, Depth Hoar, will be published by Cinematheque Press in 2010. With Amy King, Ana co-curates The Stain of Poetry reading series in Brooklyn. She works at the Center for the Humanities of The Graduate Center, CUNY. For more, visit nightcommute.org.

Brian Howe is a freelance writer, poet, and multimedia artist living in Durham, NC. His poems and sound art have appeared in many print and online journals, including Drunken Boat, Fascicle, Effing Magazine, McSweeneys.net, Octopus, Soft Targets, and Cannibal. He's the author of three chapbooks: Guitar Smash (3rdness Press), This is the Motherfucking Remix (with Marcus Slease, Scantily Clad), and Foreign Letter (Beard of Bees). His videos (with Ashley Howe) have screened at various NC festivals and showcases. He does a lot of his multimedia jams here: http://glossolalia-blacksail.blogspot.com/.

Amy King's most recent book is Slaves to Do These Things (Blazevox), and forthcoming, I Want to Make You Safe (Litmus Press). She teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. For information on the reading series Amy co-curates in Brooklyn, NY, please visit The Stain of Poetry: A Reading Series (http://stainofpoetry.com) and http://amyking.org for more.

Brent Francese graduated with Bachelor's in Architecture in 2005 from NC State before the turning economy allowed him to explore a variety of creative of avenues. Using a strong graphic background, Brent currently designs logos, blogs and other stand alone graphic art pieces. When he's not working on graphic design or architecture he's playing drums with several local bands in the Raleigh, NC area. He lives with his wife Jessie and two dogs Tahoe and Denali.

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

160. mIEKAL aND Re: Poet Question - Innovation ... Experimental...
Thu 18 Feb 2010

The feeling I get from reading thru the replies on your blog is that for many the word innovative is synonymous with word unique.

~mIEKAL

On Feb 18, 2010, at 8:04 AM, amy king wrote:

> Still seeking answers on my own blog (thanks to all who have sent along so far!) -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/02/17/please-help/

=!=
Data Visualization for the Synaptically Inspired
http://filevillage.info

↑ Index

161. Catherine Daly
Re: A Question for Publishers
Thu 18 Feb 2010

---

a big no to book mobile as far as straightening out mistakes that are theirs

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

162. Ruth Lepson
Re: A Question for Publishers
Thu 18 Feb 2010

---

well, I a m poet-in-res at the NEng Conservatory of Music--maybe there is some interest there--dunno--please backchannel.

On 2/18/10 8:58 AM, "steve dalachinsky" <[redacted]> wrote:

is any one out there interested in publishing the poems of the great composer musician cecil taylor??

On Thu, 18 Feb 2010 15:22:33 -0500 Mark Weiss <[redacted]> writes:
Sure. The people I work with (and I think any good digital printer) will cut to whatever size you want within the limitations of the paper. And as far as I know they'll all do matt. I use Sterling Pierce. Contact, Bill Burke. [redacted]. (516) [redacted]. Use my name. I've turned several other presses on to them.

Lovely people to work with. They correct any mistakes (every printer makes the occasional mistake) cheerfully.

Best,

Mark Weiss

At 01:45 PM 2/18/2010, you wrote:
Any publishers out there know of a good POD provider who is willing to work with custom trim sizes AND cover stock other than glossy?

Thanks for any leads,
Brian Clements
Sentence/Firewheel Editions

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University

of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

"Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

163. Shankar, Ravi (English)

WANTED: THE BEST WRITERS FOR ASIA

Fri 19 Feb 2010

At the Department of English at City University of Hong Kong, they are looking for the top creative writers who want to 'write Asia.' This summer, the University is starting a ground-breaking MFA in Creative Writing specialising in Asian writing in English, the first programme of its kind in the world. Based in the Department of English, the innovative 45-credit, two-year programme will accept a limited number of students in creative non-fiction, fiction & poetry. The degree is benchmarked to international standards for the MFA. The Hong Kong-born author Xu Xi has assisted in the design of the programme and is joining the Department as their first writer-in-residence on March 1.

"We anticipate the majority of applicants to be from Asia," Xu says, "but many writers in the West, both of Asian and non-Asian ethnicity, are increasingly drawn to Asia, especially China. They're not always best served by MFA programmes in the West where there's little focus on either a contemporary or historical Asian perspective or Asian literature." The faculty comprises writers who 'know Asia, live Asia, read Asia, write Asia' as the launch advertisement says. The top criteria for admittance will be the quality of creative work. This initiative is part of an overall strategy to develop the creative curriculum at the university. Professor Kingsley Bolton, Head of English at City University says, "Our English Department is a very young one, but probably one of the most dynamic and innovative departments of its kind in Asia. In the next few years, we are aiming to make the English Department here a leading centre for creative writing, drama, and cultural studies, not only for Hong Kong but also for the whole of the Asian region." The MFA is generally considered a professional degree, qualifying students to work in professions where good writing skills are required, as well as providing the groundwork for an international writing and publishing career.

The low-residency graduate degree model is relatively new in Asia. A long-established pedagogical model in the U.S., such programmes are especially suited for the creative arts. In particular, this programme is ideal for working professionals who cannot afford to spend two years as full-time graduate students in a traditional writing programme. Structured for individualised learning, students work via distance learning with writing mentors on a one-on-one basis during the semesters, and attend brief 'residencies' at the university

two to three times a year. The low faculty-to-student ratio allows for intensive feedback on the student's work and approximates the professional editor-writer relationship.

The first residency is scheduled for summer 2010. The internationally-renowned novelist Timothy Mo will be visiting writer and the faculty writers for the 2010 class features an international cast from Hong Kong, India, the U.K, Canada and the U.S., with connections and roots in China, Japan, the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia and elsewhere. The writers include Tina Chang, Marilyn Chin, Luis Francia, Robin Hemley, Justin Hill, Sharmistha Mohanty, James Scudamore, Ravi Shankar, Jess Row and Madeleine Thien. For applications, please visit http://www.english.cityu.edu.hk/MFA and email [redacted] or call Xu Xi at ++ [redacted].2839 for further information.

↑ Index

164. Brian Clements
Re: A Question for Publishers
Fri 19 Feb 2010

Thanks for the lead, Mark (and everyone else who has sent leads). Most digital printers will do custom trim sizes on traditional print runs, but not on POD--the only offer a small range of sizes. Glad to know SP will.

Thanks,
bc

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Mark Weiss Sent: Thursday, February 18, 2010 3:23 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: A Question for Publishers

Sure. The people I work with (and I think any good digital printer) will cut to whatever size you want within the limitations of the paper. And as far as I know they'll all do matt. I use Sterling Pierce. Contact, Bill Burke. [redacted]. [redacted]. Use my name. I've turned several other presses on to them. Lovely people to work with. They correct any mistakes (every printer makes the occasional mistake) cheerfully.

Best,

Mark Weiss

At 01:45 PM 2/18/2010, you wrote:
>Any publishers out there know of a good POD provider who is willing >to work with custom trim sizes AND cover stock other than glossy?

>
>Thanks for any leads,
>Brian Clements
>Sentence/Firewheel Editions
>
>
>
>

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

"Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

165. steve russell
Robert Lowell/Vispo
Fri 19 Feb 2010

Robert Lowell was a creature, a casuality of his time. The self-portrait artist will always be with us. Lowell eventually became a confessional poet in the Plath, Berryman, Sexton mode. His "Imitations" was a welcomed exercise to anyone interested in comparitative lit.

Another look: While I'm in awe of the wierd, wild curves in the architecture of Frank Gehry, I'm also hip to the suburban house of Frank L Wright. Robert Venturi showed everyone how to concepualize: Look at the venacular ... build a mobile home ...

Does celebrating the innovative require us to shun a master? The Chinese have been doing vispo for centuries.

Geez, no computers during Lowell era either.

↑ Index

166. Laura Wetherington
Issue 8 of textsound journal available now
Fri 19 Feb 2010

Issue 8 of textsound <http://www.textsound.org> <www.textsound.org> is live, featuring work from Audrey Chen, Rodrigo Toscano, Cecil Touchon, Randy Thurman, James Sanders, Chris Martin, Mannlicher Caracano, Richard Kostelanetz & Joel Chadabe, and David Flood.

From Whitney Pow's editorial note:

"There is a sort of transmutable quality to these pieces as they slip from one form to another, re-defining themselves throughout their several-minute-plus courses, seeking to create a well of uncertainty in the listener’s mind. Questions of form are brought up, burned and then revived again — is Audrey Chen’s “Glacial” a practice in dissonant 20th-century cello music or is it examining the instrumental wails of the voice, as haunting and chocolate-rich as a bow pulled over strings?

Is Richard Kostelanetz and Joel Chadabe’s piece “Microfictions” a renouncing of ambiguous buzz-words like “freedom” and “dieting” and how their meanings have faded into incomprehensible pools of sound from over-use? Or is it instead a discussion of what it means to turn a human voice into something mechanized, a voice loop on repeat broken down into oddly growling, guttural sounds?"

Submissions for textsound are currently closed. You can check the submissions page in August 2010 for updates.

Additionally, we're excited to announce the launch of Just Magazine--Literature under severe constraint <http://www.justzine.com/> < http://www.justzine.com/ >, edited by Kyle Booten, a contributor in issue 6.

↑ Index

167. Jeffrey Side
Interviewer needed to interview Libbie Rifkin
Fri 19 Feb 2010

Is anyone interested in interviewing academic Libbie Rifkin for The Argotist Online? Libbie wrote the book 'Career Moves' critiquing certain avant-garde poets for being just as careerist as those in the mainstream. See the following for some info on it http://uwpress.wisc.edu/books/3260.htm
This will make a good interview topic. Anyone interested?

↑ Index

168. Maryrose .

Larkin, Hill and Coleman at 3 Friends Coffee House Monday

Sat 20 Feb 2010

Dears,

I'll be preforming DARC a neo-benshi for voice and language master at this reading....please come if you'd like!

*Larkin, Hill and Coleman at 3 Friends Coffee House Monday
SE 12th and Ash
Portland, OR
7pm
*

Maryrose Larkin lives in Portland, where she works as a freelance researcher. She is the author of *Inverse *(nine muses books, 2006), Whimsy Daybook 2007 (FLASH+CARD, 2006), The Book of Ocean (i.e. press, 2007), *DARC *(FLASH+CARD, 2009) and The name of this intersection is frost (Shearsman Books, Forthcoming). Maryrose is one of the organizers of Spare Room, a Portland-based writing collective, and is co-editor, with Sarah Mangold, of FLASH+CARD, a chapbook and ephemera poetry press.

Jen Coleman is a Portland poet transplanted from Minnesota by way of Wisconsin, DC and then New York. She’s the author of the chapbook * Propinquity*, and her work has appeared in many excellent journals including Chain, *Ixnay *and Tangent. She has co-edited the former literary journal Pom-Pom and co-hosted the In Your Ear reading series in DC.

Lindsay Hill was born in San Francisco and is a graduate of Bard College. His published books include *Avelaval *(Oyez, Berkeley), *Archaeology *(St. Luke’s, Memphis), Kill Series (Arundel Press, Los Angeles) *NdjenFerno *(Vatic Hum, San Francisco) and *Contango *(Singing Horse Press, San Diego). Lindsay lives in Portland, OR with his wife, the painter Nita Hill, and their two children, Ian and Helena.

Maryrose Larkin

↑ Index

169. Carrie Etter

Infinite Difference sampler no. 2

Sat 20 Feb 2010

Harriet Tarlo's "A Spoon for Stein": http://carrieetter.blogspot.com

I hope you like it!

↑ Index

170. Anny Ballardini
Re: caroline lamour
Sun 21 Feb 2010

They sell viagra here_ it is becoming a nightmare, they are able to slide through whatever filter you have on.

On Thu, Feb 18, 2010 at 12:17 PM, Rebecca Stoddard <[redacted]>wrote:

> http://koolkids.in/Annick.html

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

171. steve dalachinsky
Fw: matthew shipp gig
Sun 21 Feb 2010

Save The Date!
Sunday March 14th 5- 7pm Tribes is proud to welcome acclaimed pianist, Mathew Shipp.

"Shipp's playing is like some kind of inverted, dark-matter version of whatever you think a jazz pianist is going to sound like. - Mark D Fefer, Seattle Weekly $15.00 at the door.

All proceeds benefit A Gathering of the Tribes nonprofit.

Mr Shipp has reached the holy grail of jazz in that he possesses a unique style on his instrument that is all of his own- and he’s one of the few in jazz that can say so. Mr. Shipp has recorded a lot of albums with many labels but his 2 most enduring relationships have been with two labels. In the 1990s he recorded a number of chamber jazz cds with Hatology, a group of cds that charted a new course for jazz that, to this day, the jazz world has not realized. In the 2000s Mr Shipp has been curator and director of the label Thirsty Ear's "Blue Series" and has also recorded for them. In this collection of recordings he has generated a whole body of work that is visionary, far reaching and many faceted . Matthew Shipp is truly one of the leading lights of a new generation of jazz giants.

tribes info
285 E. 3rd St. (betw. Aves. C & D), 2nd fl.
NY, NY 10009

F/V train to 2nd Ave.; #6 train to Bleecker

[redacted] or [redacted]

[redacted]

Please come support Jazz and the historical Salon, A Gathering of The Tribes. - You may come day of, or RSVP Via [redacted]

Diet Help
Cheap Diet Help Tips. Click here.

↑ Index

172. steve russell
S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Sun 21 Feb 2010

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...

Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

↑ Index

173. Adam Fieled
Three Links: Apparition Poems
Sun 21 Feb 2010

Three more links for Apparition Poems for any interested parties:

Otoliths: http://www.the-otolith.blogspot.com/2010/02/adam-fieled-from-apparition-poems-1549.html

Listenlight: http://www.listenlight.net/20/adam-fieled

Stoning the Devil: http://www.adamfieled.blogspot.com/2010/02/three-apps.html

Best,
Adam Fieled

↑ Index

174. amy king
Re: caroline lamour
Sun 21 Feb 2010

That's my bad, Anny! I didn't check the link in my hurry the other day (was jet-setting to North Carolina!). Damn viagra. It's everywhere!

xo,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

_____
From: Anny Ballardini <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 3:49:03 AM
Subject: Re: caroline lamour

They sell viagra here_ it is becoming a nightmare, they are able to slide through whatever filter you have on.

On Thu, Feb 18, 2010 at 12:17 PM, Rebecca Stoddard <[redacted]>wrote:

> http://koolkids.in/Annick.html

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

175. amy king
Asking for evermore help...
Sun 21 Feb 2010

â€œBest
Women in Letters and Literary Arts -- www.willaweb.org/

â€œBest of â€¦â€, â€œTop Ten Picks of â€¦â€, â€œBest Gifts for â€¦â€ etc -- Like it or not, those seemingly-benign lists sell books, secure jobs, build reputations, and reap a variety of other rewards. They appear in various permutations often to promote books in a number of genres; weâ€™re interested in any generated for Childrenâ€™s Literature, Fiction, Creative Nonfiction (i.e. memoir, essay, etc), Playwriting and Poetry.

Many of those lists happen to be biased, intentionally or not, with the most obvious one being for books written by men and on traditionally-male interests. (A brief note on the Publisherâ€™s Weekly list-as-impetus can be found here -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2009/11/04/why-werenâ€™t-any-women-invited-to-publishers-weeklyâ€™s-weenie-roast/)

We want to identify those lists, consider the causes, and explore ways to react as well alternative responses to listing. But first, we need to locate those lists â€“ if you know of any instances similar to the one from Publishers Weekly in any of the genres listed above, please send them along to me at [redacted] , even if youâ€™ve posted them before -- Iâ€™d be most grateful.

Thanks much,

Amy

↑ Index

176. amy king
Re: Asking for evermore help...
Sun 21 Feb 2010

Please also include inequitable lists of awards, prizes, and titles [i.e. U.S. Poet Laureate Timeline from 1937 - 2009 = 38 Men and 8 Women] -- thank you!

Women in Letters and Literary Arts -- www.willaweb.org/

â€œBest of â€¦â€, â€œTop Ten Picks of â€¦â€, â€œBest Gifts for â€¦â€ etc -- Like it or not, those seemingly-benign lists sell books, secure jobs, build reputations, and reap a variety of other rewards. They appear in various permutations often to promote books in a number of genres; weâ€™re interested in any generated for Childrenâ€™s Literature, Fiction, Creative Nonfiction (i.e. memoir, essay, etc), Playwriting and Poetry.

Many of those lists happen to be biased, intentionally or not, with the most obvious one being for books written by men and on traditionally-male interests. (A brief note on the Publisherâ€™s Weekly list-as-impetus can be found here -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2009/11/04/why-werenâ€™t-any-women-invited-to-publishers-weeklyâ€™s-weenie-roast/)

We want to identify those lists, consider the causes, and explore ways to react as well alternative responses to listing. But first, we need to locate those lists â€“ if you know of any instances similar to the one from Publishers Weekly in any of the genres listed above, please send them along to me at [redacted] , even if youâ€™ve posted them before -- Iâ€™d be most grateful.

Thanks much,

Amy

↑ Index

177. Anny Ballardini

Re: caroline lamour

Mon 22 Feb 2010

I would never do your job for all the gold in the world (it is a saying, I did not mean that...) let alone for nothing.

Thank you, Amy!

Anny

On Mon, Feb 22, 2010 at 1:18 AM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> That's my bad, Anny! I didn't check the link in my hurry the other day (was jet-setting to North Carolina!). Damn viagra. It's everywhere!
>
> xo,
>
> Amy
>
> ———
>
> BOOK
>
> Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm
>
> RANT
>
> "My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html
>
> ESSAY
>
> "The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html
>
> ———————————————————
> From: Anny Ballardini <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 3:49:03 AM

> Subject: Re: caroline lamour
>
> They sell viagra here_ it is becoming a nightmare, they are able to slide through whatever filter you have on.
>
> On Thu, Feb 18, 2010 at 12:17 PM, Rebecca Stoddard <[redacted] wrote:
>
> http://koolkids.in/Annick.html
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Anny Ballardini
> http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
> http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
> http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
> I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
> Friedrich Nietzsche
>
> « Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
> vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
> Giovenale

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing

star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

178. George Bowering
Re: question,
Mon 22 Feb 2010

Hey, I have been in Texas three times in the past 37 years. Isn't that enough for anyone?

gb

On Feb 17, 2010, at 8:31 PM, Herb Levy wrote:

> On Feb 17, 2010, at 3:07 PM, George Bowering wrote:
>
> Okay, Herb, according to the Pacific Coast poetry rules,
> I owe you one punch on the shoulder.
>
> gb
>
> I don't expect to be in Vancouver any time soon. Let me know next > time you're in Texas.
>
> H
>
> welcome.html

L.A.C. Bowering, George
Up, up and away.

↑ Index

179. DAWN APRIL LONSINGER
WHR Hybrid // Collaborative Issue Deadline Approaching
Mon 22 Feb 2010

Call for Submissions Reminder // Western Humanities Review Special HYBRID // COLLABORATIVE Issue edited by Lance Olsen, Karen Brennan, Craig Dworkin & Paisley Rekdal deadline: postmarked by MARCH 15th

If one long prosaic piece, no more than 25 pages.
If poems or shorter pieces, up to 5 pieces (totaling no more than 25 pages)

Everything should be in a format that can be printed in WHR's standard black & white journal format, and should be submitted via regular mail to:

Western Humanities Review
HYBRID // COLLABORATIVE ISSUE
c/o dawn lonsinger
University of Utah English Dept.
255 S. Central Campus Drive, LNCO 3500
Salt Lake City, UT 84112

http://www.hum.utah.edu/whr/

↑ Index

180. Carrie Etter
Infinite Difference sampler no. 3
Mon 22 Feb 2010

Lucy Sheerman's "Mine": http://carrieetter.blogspot.com

I hope you enjoy it.

↑ Index

181. steve dalachinsky
dance music collas
Mon 22 Feb 2010

Don't Miss This!

7th Annual V i s i o n
C o l l a b o r a t i o n N i g h t s
MARCH 3, 4, 5, 6, 2010
7 to 10pm
AT 14th STREET Y THEATER
344 East 14th Street near First Ave

\\\\ F u l l S c h e d u l e ////

W e d n e s d a y M a r c h 3
7pm Mario Zambrano dance / Cooper-Moore hand-crafted instruments
7:20 Miriam Parker dance / Henry Grimes bass, violin
7:40 Jason Jordan dance / Joe McPhee sax, trumpet
[Pause]
8:15 Improv: Miriam Parker, Mario Zambrano, Jason Jordan / Cooper-Moore, Henry Grimes, Joe McPhee
8:45 Music: Cooper-Moore, Henry Grimes, Joe McPhee

T h u r s d a y M a r c h 4
7pm Djassi Dacosta Johnson dance / Cooper-Moore piano
7:20 Emily Coates dance / Rosie Hertlein violin
7:40 Miriam Parker dance / William Parker bass
[Pause]
8:15 Improv: Miriam Parker, Emily Coates, Yuko Mitsuishi, Djassi DaCosta Johnson
8:45 Music: William Parker, Rosi Hertlein, Cooper-Moore

F r i d a y M a r c h 5
7pm Marie Blocker & Emily Climer dance / Whit Dickey drums
7:20 Emily Coates dance / Rosie Hertlein violin
7:40 Mario Zambrano dance / Matthew Shipp piano
[Pause]
8:15 Improv: Mario Zambrano, Emily Coates, Marie Blocker, Emily Climer /
Matthew Shipp, Rosi Hertlein, Whit Dickey
8:45 Music: Matthew Shipp, Rosi Hertlein, Whit Dickey

S a t u r d a y M a r c h 6
7pm Brenda Buffalino tap & words / Jay Clayton voice & electronics
7:20 Yuko Mitsuishi dance / Rob Brown sax
7:40 Patricia Nicholson dance / Miya Masaoka koto
[Pause]
8:15 Improv: Jason Jordan, Patricia Nicholson, Miriam Parker, Yuko Mitsuishi, Emily Coates & Brenda Bufalino
8:45 Music: Miya Masaoka, Jay Clayton, Rob Brown, plus Special Guest!

We hope to see you there!

please visit

http://brownpapertickets.com/event/93710

to purchase advance tickets for any night.

Thanks for supporting the Innovative Arts in NYC.

↑ Index

182. Mark Young
Out from Otoliths—Paul Siegell's wild life rifle fire
Mon 22 Feb 2010

Finally! After trials, tribulations, panic attacks, potential coronaries, all brought about by what Ron Silliman aptly described as the print process deciding to collaborate on the content of the book, Paul Siegell's wild life rifle fire is out, later than its intended binary date of 01.11.10, earlier than its cautious rescheduling of 02.28.10. But it's passed its 2nd& 3 rd re-proofings with flying colors black & whites, so let's crack a be-ribboned bottle of champagne upon its spine & launch it now.

wild life rifle fire

Paul Siegell

96 pages

Otoliths 2010

ISBN: 978-0-9806025-6-2

$10.00 + p&h

Lulu URL link <http://www.lulu.com/content/paperback-book/wild-life-rifle-fire/8051795>

Amazon URL link<http://www.amazon.com/wild-life-rifle-fire-Siegell/dp/0980602564/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1266459725&sr=1-1>

Paul Siegell’s wild life rifle fire proves, if proof were needed, that the electrifying art and legacy of Concrete Poetry is not dead!

Siegell’s book-length carmen figuratum not only flashes the reader back to the heady first days of the Noigrandes Group in São Paulo and Eugen Gomringer’s adventures in VisPo, but even further back to Medieval anagrams, Greek bucolic poems and Sumerian figure poems. Here we find DaDa dynamite and typographical talismans freshened by a poet whose native gifts imbue this exciting work with a whole new sense of "poetic object."

Siegell’s haptic heroism compels the reader to re-examine the basic elements of a language that we too often take for granted, in the process creating an energetic and always surprising work of both visual art and poetry. Not to be missed! —Vladimir Slender-Hedge

Signed copies of wild life rifle fire are also available. Full details can be found at Paul Siegell's blog, [redacted]<http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/>
.

↑ Index

183. amy king

POETS Douglas A Martin, Julie Patton, Kristin Prevallet, Nathaniel Siegel at THE LIVING THEATRE Tues - Feb 23, 2010 @ 8pm $6

Mon 22 Feb 2010

The LIVING THEATRE Reading Series presents:
From Nathaniel Siegel --

The LIVING THEATRE Reading Series presents:
Poets at The Living Theatre:
Douglas A. Martin, Julie Patton, Kristin Prevallet and Nathaniel Siegel

Read and perform their work on

Tuesday February 23rd 2010 at 8pm

Admission: $6 at the door

Douglas A. Martin is the author most recently of a novel, Once You Go Back (Seven Stories Press) and a lyric narrative, Your Body Figured (Nightboat Books). His other works include: In the Time of Assignments, a book of poetry; Branwell, a novel of the Bronte brother; and They Change the Subject, a book of stories. His first novel, Outline of My Lover, was named an International Book of the Year in The Times Literary Supplement and adapted in part by the Forsythe Company for the multimedia ballet and live film Kammer/Kammer. He teaches in the low-residency MFA Program at Goddard College.
http://douglasarthur.blogspot.com/

Julie Patton is the author of Teething on Type (Rodent Press). She has published poems in Transfer, Tribes, and other magazines, and in Aloud: Voices from the Nuyorican Poets Cafe (Collier Books). Her articles and essays appear in Educating the Imagination: Essays & Ideas for Teachers & Writers (T&W), and in Teachers & Writers. In 1993 she received the New York City Arts in Education Sustained Achievement Award in Literary Arts. She has performed her work at the New York Shakespeare Festival, the Nuyorican Poets' Cafe, the Whitney Museum, Houston's Center for Art and Performance, and Cleveland Public Theatre's International Sonic Disturbance Festival.
http://home.jps.net/~nada/patton.htm

Kristin Prevallet is the author of four books of poetry, most recently I, Afterlife: Essay in Mourning Time (Essay Press, 2007). She was the recipient of a 2007 New York Foundation for the Arts fellowship in poetry and a 2004 Pen translation fund award. Her edited collection of writings by Helen Adam, A Helen Adam Reader, was published by the National Poetry Foundation in 2007. Recent work has appeared in The Brooklyn Rail, The Chicago Review, and Words Without Borders. She lives in Greenpoint, Brooklyn.
http://www.kayvallet.com/

Nathaniel A. Siegel is a poet and artist. His work has been exhibited at Visual AIDS, the Leslie/Lohman Gay Art Foundation, and The HOWL ! Festivalâ€™s Art Around the Park.. Upcoming projects include hosting COME HEAR ! a marathon four hour Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Queer poetry reading at The Rainbow Book Fair on Saturday March 27th at the CUNY Graduate Center at 34th St and 5th Avenue in New York City. A member of the Executive Board of The HOWL ! Festival, Nathaniel is working on September 2010â€™s HOWL ! Festival and HOWL ! Arts Project events. His first book Tony is published by Portable Press at Yo Yo Labs. http://yoyolabs.com/siegel.html

â€œThe answer is always YES ! Love !â€

THE LIVING THEATRE

OUR MISSION

To call into question who we are to each other in the social environment of the theater, to undo the knots
that lead to misery, to spread ourselves across the publicâ€™s table like platters at a banquet, to set our selves in motion like a vortex that pulls the spectator into action,
to fire the bodyâ€™s secret engines, to pass through the prism
and come out a rainbow, to insist that what happens in the jails matters, to cry â€œNot in my name!â€
at the hour of execution, to move from the theater to the street and from the street to the theater.
This is what The Living Theatre does today.
It is what it has always done.
-Julian Beck

THE LIVING THEATRE
21 Clinton St. (between East Houston and Stanton Street)
New York, New York 10002

http://www.livingtheatre.org/

Directions:
Buses: Houston Street Bus M21
or Avenue B Bus M9

Subway: F train to "2nd Avenue" (exit front of train on 1st Ave; walk east along Houston) or F train to "Delancey Street"

Thank you to Dorothy Friedman and Judith Malina and THE LIVING THEATRE !

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

184. amy king
New Issue of So and So Magazine
Mon 22 Feb 2010

So and So Magazine - http://soandso.org/

Ana Bozicevic
Brian Howe
Amy King
Joe Fletcher
Douglas Piccinnini
Maureen Thorson
Franz Wright

Enjoy!

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

185. Cara Benson
(made) is made
Mon 22 Feb 2010

Hey Gang, the book's all here!

(made) is apologies for xpstng

Hey Gang, the book's all here!

(made) is out with BookThug. (It's a book.)

These prose poems / juxtaposing the individual / intertwine / objects and occurrences repeatedly / a cosmological chronology / inhabits. Why /narrative tension / mention / barbed wire / pieces accumulate / Rather than a direct or linear / of the universe this / These / references to certain / prose poems / repeatedly / if altered / time it indicates / a filled space / that which surrounds it.

called (made). They /

http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=201006

Thanks,
Cara

_____
http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

↑ Index

186. Emily Carr
Re: WHR Hybrid // Collaborative Issue Deadline Approaching
Mon 22 Feb 2010

---

want to send sonnet cycle two with the renewed intro? are you in tonight? i wanted to chat about my big ideas for our UCSC presentation... xe E

On Mon, Feb 22, 2010 at 1:08 AM, DAWN APRIL LONSINGER <
[redacted]> wrote:

> Call for Submissions Reminder // Western Humanities Review
> Special HYBRID // COLLABORATIVE Issue

> edited by Lance Olsen, Karen Brennan, Craig Dworkin & Paisley Rekdal > deadline: postmarked by MARCH 15th
>
> If one long prosaic piece, no more than 25 pages.
> If poems or shorter pieces, up to 5 pieces (totaling no more than 25 pages)
>
> Everything should be in a format that can be printed in WHR's standard black & white journal format, and should be submitted via regular mail to:
>
> Western Humanities Review
> HYBRID // COLLABORATIVE ISSUE
> c/o dawn lonsinger
> University of Utah English Dept.
> 255 S. Central Campus Drive, LNCO 3500
> Salt Lake City, UT 84112
>
> http://www.hum.utah.edu/whr/

↑ Index

187. David Chirot

Call for members-- A new network re Ethics of Journalism & academic Side of Blogging-

Mon 22 Feb 2010

This message is from award winning journalist Iqbal Tamimi, founder of the superb site Palestinian Mothers -- forwarding it as concerns ethics of journalism and academic side of blogging--so may be of interest to some here--

a related essay of mine which may be of interest which will also appear in future at Jerome Rothernberg's Poets and Poetics blog may be found here:

Non-writing & the Unwritten: Writing as Invisibility, Detention, Disappearance, Death; the Unwritten as "Not a Void"

http:// davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2010/01/non-writing-unwritten-writing-as.html
Palestinian Mothers <http://palestinian.ning.com/>
Women are 50% of the world and gave birth to the other half... we are the world
A message to all members of Palestinian Mothers

Dear members

I have created a new network concerned with the ethics of journalism and the academic side of blogging, I will be extremely honored if you join me, this is part of a project for the University of West of England MA of Journalism. Please feel free to suggest and comment. Looking forward to see as many as possible of you there.

http://journomania.ning.com/

Visit Palestinian Mothers at:
http://palestinian.ning.com/?xg_source=msg_mes_network

To control which emails you receive on Palestinian Mothers, click here<http://palestinian.ning.com/profiles/profile/emailSettings?xg_source=msg_mes_network>

↑ Index

188. steve russell
Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Mon 22 Feb 2010

... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of principles.

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...

Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

↑ Index

189. Obododimma Oha

Re: Call for members-- A new network re Ethics of Journalism & academic Side of Blogging-

Tue 23 Feb 2010

Thanks for this, David.
Obododimma.

On Mon, Feb 22, 2010 at 11:43 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> This message is from award winning journalist Iqbal Tamimi, founder of the superb site Palestinian Mothers -- > forwarding it as concerns ethics of journalism and academic side of blogging--so may be of interest to some here--
>
> a related essay of mine which may be of interest which will also appear in future at Jerome Rothernberg's Poets and Poetics blog may be found here:
>
> Non-writing & the Unwritten: Writing as Invisibility, Detention, Disappearance, Death; the Unwritten as "Not a Void"
>
> http://
>
> davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2010/01/non-writing-unwritten-writing-as.html
> Palestinian Mothers <http://palestinian.ning.com/>
> Women are 50% of the world and gave birth to the other half... we are the world
> A message to all members of Palestinian Mothers
>
> Dear members
>
> I have created a new network concerned with the ethics of journalism and the > academic side of blogging, I will be extremely honored if you join me, this is part of a project for the University of West of England MA of Journalism.
> Please feel free to suggest and comment. Looking forward to see as many as possible of you there.
>
> http://journomania.ning.com/
>
> Visit Palestinian Mothers at:
> http://palestinian.ning.com/?xg_source=msg_mes_network
>
> To control which emails you receive on Palestinian Mothers, click here< > http://palestinian.ning.com/profiles/profile/emailSettings?xg_source=msg_mes_network

--
Obododimma Oha
http://ududе.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

190. sheila black
Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Tue 23 Feb 2010

Look at the poem "Sunset Debris" by Ron Silliman. That thing drove me crazy (not literal) so I wrote a duplicate poem (just for myself) called "Ron Silliman Writes Poetry Like a Four Year Old Child" (never submitted!). However, for you bandwagonners, I also wrote a poem called "Ron Silliman is my Father" inspired by "The Chinese Notebook" also Ron Silliman. As for Beckett, "Waiting For Godot" need I say more. Maybe "Endgame."
Each of us has a say. S. Black
Sheila Black

--- On Mon, 2/22/10, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:

From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, February 22, 2010, 2:23 PM

... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of principles.

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...

Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

↑ Index

191. Jim Andrews olympic confusion
Tue 23 Feb 2010

---

just for the benefit of the usamericans on the list, i thought i'd sketch some of the controversy that has gone on up here since the usamerican men's hockey team beat the canadian team at the vancouver olympics.

we were all surprised by sidney crosby's post game comments. he said

"well, i know it sucks to lose at hockey to our neighbours to the south. since we lose to them at so many other things and they beat us like their very own boy at others. but let's get one thing straight, canada. a nation's pride should have much more to do with how we treat one another in this society than with the outcome of a hockey game. the idea that winning at hockey is all that really counts at these olympics is kind of weirding us out. let's snap out of it, ok? what's important here is not winning but that canada is a good host to the people of the world and that the people of the world enjoy these games as something that brings us together in friendship, peace, and fair and fun competition. canadian national pride should not key on the outcome of a hockey game so much as on how we realize our best ideals in canada and show the way for others to do this in their own countries and internationally, also. so chins up, canada, and let's enjoy the rest of the games with pride and some perspective on what is really important on this stage."

ron mclean's jaw dropped to the ground. don cherry called for sidney crosby's execution, though we don't execute people here even for murder. cherry was forced to apologize and reduced the sentence to a tour of duty for crosby to afghanistan. then he showed another dead soldier and cried again. crosby responded by changing cherry's nickname from 'grapes' to 'drapes' in honour of cherry's 'sartorial splendour', and crosby went on to say

"let me add that we're all a bit disturbed by the tenor of much of the patriotism that has blossomed at these games. the olympics should not be a guise for political propaganda and fundamentalist nationalism hot for winning at all costs. the low point of canadian hockey was when bobby clarke chopped valeri kharlamov's ankle almost in two, breaking his ankle and ruining the russian's best player's illustrious career, in 1972, on route to canada narrowly winning the first canada-russia matchup of ours and their best players. from that time, we were seen on the international stage as barely civilized when it comes to hockey and national pride. we need to realize this and move on, evolve beyond the mindless savage. i love hockey and this country as much as the next person, but it's more important to conduct yourself with a sense of justice and fair play than it is to win at all costs. canada, can we talk?"

that's about where it's at, at this stage. we're not sure what has gotten into sidney, really. we're not sure if he's grown up all of a sudden or fallen victim to foreign propaganda. we are a nation perplexed and on the verge of elimination from the men's hockey tournament.

wish us luck, as i'm sure you will.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

192. Paul Siegell

Re: Out from Otoliths—Paul Siegell's wild life rifle fire

Tue 23 Feb 2010

Thank so much, Mark!

I literally can't thank you enough. Thank you for your patience, persistence and support. And professionalism. This one was nuts, but your leadership made all the difference. Gigantic thanks!

Here's to Otoliths!!!

Yours,
Paul
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com

On Mon, 22 Feb 2010 23:03:37 +1000, Mark Young <[redacted]> wrote:

>Finally! After trials, tribulations, panic attacks, potential coronaries, >all brought about by what Ron Silliman aptly described as the print process >deciding to collaborate on the content of the book, Paul Siegell's wild >life rifle fire is out, later than its intended binary date of 01.11.10, >earlier than its cautious rescheduling of 02.28.10. But it's passed its 2nd& 3 >rd re-proofings with flying colors black & whites, so let's crack a >be-ribboned bottle of champagne upon its spine & launch it now.
>
>wild life rifle fire
>Paul Siegell
>96 pages
>Otoliths 2010
>ISBN: 978-0-9806025-6-2
>$10.00 + p&h
>
>Lulu URL link
><http://www.lulu.com/content/paperback-book/wild-life-rifle-fire/8051795>
>
>Amazon URL
link<http://www.amazon.com/wild-life-rifle-fire-Siegell/dp/0980602564/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1266459725&sr=1-1>
>
>Paul Siegell’s wild life rifle fire proves, if proof were needed, that the >electrifying art and legacy of Concrete Poetry is not dead!
>
>Siegell’s book-length carmen figuratum not only flashes the reader back to >the heady first days of the Noigrandes Group in São Paulo and Eugen >Gomringer’s adventures in VisPo, but even further back to Medieval anagrams,
>Greek bucolic poems and Sumerian figure poems. Here we find DaDa dynamite >and typographical talismans freshened by a poet whose native gifts imbue >this exciting work with a whole new sense of "poetic object."
>
>Siegell’s haptic heroism compels the reader to re-examine the basic >elements of a language that we too often take for granted, in the process >creating an energetic and always surprising work of both visual art and >poetry. Not to be missed! —Vladimir Slender-Hedge

>
>Signed copies of wild life rifle fire are also available. Full details can >be found at Paul Siegell's blog, >[redacted]<http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/>
>
>

↑ Index

193. Kevin Killian

New Books by Andrea Brady and Ryan Murphy from KRUPSKAYA

Tue 23 Feb 2010

The Editors of KRUPSKAYA Books are very pleased to announce the publication of two new poetry books for 2010:

Wildfire: a verse essay on obscurity and illumination

by Andrea Brady

WILDFIRE is a verse essay. It is trying to persuade us, to recognize that certain catastrophes and felicities are not inevitable. It concerns the history of incendiary devices, of the evolution of Greek fire from a divine secret which could sustain or destroy empires, into white phosphorus and napalm; the elliptical fires of the pre-Socratics, Aristotle's service to Alexander in the fashioning of pyrotechnics, the burning/blooming/mating bodies of G. H. Schubert and the self-feeding crowds of Elias Canetti; mechanisms to project fire, to make it burn on water and stick to wood and skin, to keep it off the walls of the besieged towns, and what those mechanisms (projection and defense) have done to geometry; the courts of fire, the legal chamber and the hortus conclusus, and the margins of ambiguity where it is lobbed with impunity; embedded nuggets and embedded reporters, the discovery of the chemical element, industrial tragedy, the resistance of the matchgirls at Bryant & May, the corruption of Quaker capitalists, washing powder and toothpaste. It is an etiology of metaphors, "shake-n-bake" and whisky pete and phantom fury. It is also an argument about obscurity and illumination: WILDFIRE does both, smokes the bright air and singes the night with trajectories. And so an interrogation of writing practices which fume as much as they enlighten.

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781928650317/wildfire-a-verse-essay-on-obscurity-and-illumination.aspx

The Redcoats

by Ryan Murphy

"In one of the most striking lines in THE REDCOATS, Ryan Murphy says, 'I have cannibalized other moments to invent this one.' We all do that, of course, but, as Murphy shows us, the present is still tenuous, porous. In these poems you will find the ghosts of what are called American heroes, Paul Revere, Neil Armstrong, Thomas Paine, washed up along with other detritus, in a 'Yardsale: one broken promise/after another.' 'A lawnchair festooned with balloons.' This is Oppen's 'light of shipwreck,' an insomniac's waking dream. There is a restless sweep to this book, or, as the speaker tells us, 'I can't stop thinking of the nothing I want.'"

—Rae Armantrout

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781928650300/the-redcoats.aspx

Available through Small Press Distribution

http://www.spdbooks.org/Default.aspx

http://www.krupskayabooks.com/index.htm

↑ Index

194. Stephen Vincent
Re: olympic confusion
Tue 23 Feb 2010

Screw Hockey Nationalism! I put my vote in for Canada's Coach House Press. No Olympian pretensions, just a great list with a more than 40 year history of great hits. As far as I know no USA poet has been slammed across the shins, de-tongued, or hand broken by anyone from Canada. Maybe drunk under the table. Many of us can regret the loss of George Stanley and Robin Blaser to British Columbia, the work of both became better for the move. Tho 'we' have recently greatly benefited from have Rachel Zolf and Lisa Robertson in our eastern and western midst.

What is 'national' anymore anyway. Poetry - maybe at its best - is a 'trans-territory'. More vocabularies, more choices.

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
--- On Tue, 2/23/10, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
Subject: olympic confusion
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, February 23, 2010, 4:51 AM

just for the benefit of the usamericans on the list, i thought i'd sketch some of the controversy that has gone on up here since the usamerican men's hockey team beat the canadian team at the vancouver olympics.

we were all surprised by sidney crosby's post game comments. he said

"well, i know it sucks to lose at hockey to our neighbours to the south. since we lose to them at so many other things and they beat us like their very own boy at others. but let's get one thing straight, canada. a nation's pride should have much more to do with how we treat one another in this society than with the outcome of a hockey game. the idea that winning at hockey is all that really counts at these olympics is kind of weirding us out. let's snap out of it, ok? what's important here is not winning but that canada is a good host to the people of the world and that the people of the world enjoy these games as something that brings us together in friendship, peace, and fair and fun competition. canadian national pride should not key on the outcome of a hockey game so much as on how we realize our best ideals in canada and show the way for others to do this in their own countries and internationally, also. so chins up, canada, and let's enjoy the rest of the games with pride and some perspective on what is really important on this stage."

ron mclean's jaw dropped to the ground. don cherry called for sidney crosby's execution, though we don't execute people here even for murder. cherry was forced to apologize and reduced the sentence to a tour of duty for crosby to afghanistan. then he showed another dead soldier and cried again. crosby responded by changing cherry's nickname from 'grapes' to 'drapes' in honour of cherry's 'sartorial splendour', and crosby went on to say

"let me add that we're all a bit disturbed by the tenor of much of the patriotism that has blossomed at these games. the olympics should not be a guise for political propaganda and fundamentalist nationalism hot for winning at all costs. the low point of canadian hockey was when bobby clarke chopped valeri kharlamov's ankle almost in two, breaking his ankle and ruining the russian's best player's illustrious career, in 1972, on route to canada narrowly winning the first canada-russia matchup of ours and their best players. from that time, we were seen on the international stage as barely civilized when it comes to hockey and national pride. we need to realize this and move on, evolve beyond the mindless savage. i love hockey and this country as much as the next person, but it's more important to conduct yourself with a sense of justice and fair play than it is to win at all costs. canada, can we talk?"

that's about where it's at, at this stage. we're not sure what has gotten into sidney, really. we're not sure if he's grown up all of a sudden or fallen victim to foreign propaganda. we are a nation perplexed and on the verge of elimination from the men's hockey tournament.

wish us luck, as i'm sure you will.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

195. julia bloch
March 3: Jaramillo, Elrick, Neuman
Tue 23 Feb 2010

THE LAURA
The Kelly Writers House and EMERGENCY Poetry Series present

THE LAURAS

a reading by

LAURA JARAMILLO
LAURA ELRICK
LAURA NEWMAN

Wednesday, March 3, 5pm in the Arts CafÃ©
Kelly Writers House | 3805 Locust Walk
No registration required - this event is free & open to the public

---

LAURA JARAMILLO is the author of two chapbooks, THE REACTIONARY POEMS (Olywa) and CIVILIAN NEST (Love Among the Ruins Editions). She holds a BA from Bard College and a MA in Creative Writing from Temple University. Her poems have appeared in POCKET MYTHS: THE ODYSSEY, P-QUEUE, CROSS-CONNECT, TRIBLINGUAL, THE BARD PAPERS, and FOR GODOT. She lives in Brooklyn.

LAURA ELRICKâ€™s latest text-based project is a book-length poem that explores the relationship between speed (social time) and utterance. Previous work includes the video/poem STALK, originally commissioned for the POSITIONS COLLOQUIM in 2008. She has also written two books of poetry â€” SKINCERITY (2003, Krupskaya) and FANTASIES IN PERMEABLE STRUCTURES (2005, Factory School)â€”and has composed a set of audio pieces for doubled-voice that partially accessible via the online journal TEXTSOUND.

LAURA NEUMAN is a writer and performing artist based in Philadelphia. Locally, she is a regular performer and recent co-choreographer with WORKSHOP FOR POTENTIAL MOVEMENT, and has also worked and studied with members of GREEN CHAIR DANCE GROUP, HEADLONG DANCE THEATRE, and the PIG IRON THEATRE COMPANY. Laura studies poetry at Temple University's Masters in Creative Writing Program and at Bard College's Milton Avery School of the Arts.

EMERGENCY addresses North American poetic practice as it is centered around close-knit communities, long-distance mentorships, new media, and chapbook exchange, asking how theoretical stances and aesthetic practices are transmitted among poets at different stages in their careers. The series was launched in 2006 with support from the Kerry Sherin Wright Prize for programming at Kelly Writers House in Philadelphia, an award designed to support a project that demonstrates aesthetic capaciousness and literary communitarianism. All readings are held at the Writers House and are available online at PENNSOUND.

http://emergency-reading.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

196. steve russell
Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Tue 23 Feb 2010

... since I lack the proper credentials to enter into the vanguard chambers of Ron Sillman's mind, and since I'm working on a borrowed computer, my blog time is nearly nil ...

perhaps Sillman's post was simply about the workings of American poetry.
had nothing to do with Beckett.
still, dramatic monologues are sort of ...
i mean, Seasons in Hell is more or less...

... of course, as chief curator at the bureau of ill-advised verbs, I could have said that since Beckett, all contemporary writings SEEM little more than a hopeless quest ... having neglected to say Seems, having said what i said, it seems that I'm 1st in line for a promotion due to the very thing I did say.

_____
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, February 22, 2010 3:23:25 PM
Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of principles.

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...

Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

↑ Index

197. Jennifer Karmin
March 2-4: Lake Forest Literary Festival
Tue 23 Feb 2010

The Lake Forest Literary Festival that will take place from Tuesday, March 2 through Thursday, March 4.

The events will be held in various locations on the College's Middle Campus. The entrance to Middle Campus is at the intersection of College and Sheridan Roads in Lake Forest. The public is invited to attend free of charge. Lake Forest College (IL) is accessible from Chicago via the Metra train.

Please call [redacted] for more information.
http://www.lakeforest.edu/academics/english/lflf2010/default.asp

Tuesday, March 2, 2010

4:00 p.m. - 5:30 p.m.
Opening Panel Conceptual/Innovative/Unnamable
Shelley Jackson, Vanessa Place, Teresa Carmody, Lily Hoang, Gretchen E. Henderson
Meyer Auditorium

7:00 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.
Reading/Performance

Teresa Carmody and Lily Hoang
Meyer Auditorium

Wednesday, March 3, 2010

4:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.
Reading/Performance
Vanessa Place
Meyer Auditorium

8:00 p.m. - 9:30 p.m.
Keynote Reading/Performance
Shelley Jackson
Meyer Auditorium

Thursday, March 4, 2010

12:00 p.m. - 12:50 p.m.
On The Guilt Project: Rape, Morality and Law (Random House, 2010)
Vanessa Place
Meyer Auditorium

4:00 p.m - 5:00 p.m.
Reading/Performance
Angela Jackson and S.L. Wisenberg
Meyer Auditorium

7:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.
Gretchen E. Henderson
The Madeleine P. Plonsker Emerging Writerâ€™s Residency Prize winner 2010
Meyer Auditorium

↑ Index

198. Carrie Etter

Infinite Difference sampler no. 4

Wed 24 Feb 2010

Sophie Robinson's poem, "Glisten, Glisten, glisten, glisten":
http://carrieetter.blogspot.com

I hope you enjoy it.

↑ Index

199. Kimmelman, Burt
Hay(na)ku for Haiti - Meritage Press Announcement
Wed 24 Feb 2010

Eileen Tabios has asked me to forward the below to the List. Please contact her if you have any questions. Eileen's eddress is [redacted]<mailto:[redacted]>.

- Burt

==========

MERITAGE PRESS ANNOUNCEMENT

Open Palm Press (an imprint of Meritage Press), is pleased to announce the series:

Hay(na)ku for Haiti

-- a fundraiser for Haiti, edited by Eileen R. Tabios and blessed by support from chapbookpublishing.com.

Poets who write in the hay(na)ku form (about which more information is available at http://haynakupoetry.blogspot.com<http://haynakupoetry.blogspot.com/>) have consented to create hay(na)ku for helping Haiti's recovery efforts. The results are to be released as "pocket poem booklets" by Open Palm Press. Each will be sold for $3.00, reflecting the hay(na)ku's three lines, with all proceeds to be donated for Haiti relief.

The first five of the series are:

#1: PARTICLE AND WAVE and FROM THE CHAIR, two hay(na)ku sequences by Jean Vengua
#2: On A Pyre: An Ars Poetica by Eileen R. Tabios
#3: Hay(na)ku for Haiti by Tom Beckett
#4: when the earth moves by Lars Palm
#5: After René Depestre's "My Definition of Poetry", as translated by Edwidge Danticat, with lines at the end by Lafcadio Hearn by John Bloomberg-Rissman

Over time, more releases will occur as it is anticipated that Haiti's relief requirements will be prolonged and deep. Poets interested in exploring the hay(na)ku through this fundraising effort may contact the series editor at [redacted]<mailto:[redacted]>

"H for H" booklets are lovingly produced by chapbookpublishing.com (http://chapbookpublisher.com/) on lilac-colored paper to fit, at 2.75" x 4.5 X 2", on an open palm -- ideal for giving engagements.

To order some or all of the series, please send checks made out to "Meritage Press" for $3 per booklet and send to

Eileen Tabios
Meritage Press
256 North Fork Crystal Springs Rd.
St. Helena, CA 94574

For more information: [redacted]<mailto:[redacted]>

↑ Index

200. amy king
WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) @ The New School - Monday, March 1st at 6:30 p.m.
Wed 24 Feb 2010

Dear Poets,
I'm writing to let you know about WILLA's first public event to be held at the New School this coming Monday. More details are below, and if you would like a pdf flyer to distribute, please drop me a line directly at [redacted]

Please pass it on -- any help in getting the word out is most appreciated!

Hope to see you there,

Amy King
WILLA
http://www.willaweb.org/

~~

Riggio Forum: Women in Letters and Literary Arts

Monday, March 1st @ 6:30 p.m.
Alvin Johnson/J. M. Kaplan Hall
66 West 12th Street â€" Room 510
New York, NY

WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) will celebrate the formation of their new organization with a reading and panel presentation at the New School in New York, NY.

Merging the creative and the critical, this event will feature brief readings by women integrally involved in the development of the organization, including poets Cate Marvin (Co-director of WILLA), Ann Townsend, Amy King, and Natalie Bryant Rizzieri; creative nonfiction writer Barrie Jean Borich; childrenâ€™s literature authors Laurel Snyder and Kekla Magoon; and fiction writer Susan Steinberg.

A panel discussion will follow on the state of womenâ€™s literature today. Poet and New School Writing Program faculty member Mark Bibbins moderates.

Sponsored by the New School Writing Program.

FEATURED READERS INCLUDEâ€”

Barrie Jean Borich is the author of My Lesbian Husband (Graywolf), winner of an American Library Association Stonewall Book Award. Sheâ€™s the recipient of the 2010 Crab Orchard Review John Guyon Literary Nonfiction Prize, and has essays appearing in current or forthcoming issues of Ecotone, Seneca Review, Hotel Amerika, New Ohio Review and Seattle Review. Her work has been named Notable in Best American Essays and Best American Non-Required Reading, has received Pushcart Prize Special Mention, and has been awarded a Bush Artist Fellowship and Loft-McKnight Award of Distinction. Her first book, Restoring the Color of Roses, a memoir set in the Calumet region of Chicago, was published by Firebrand. Sheâ€™s an assistant professor in the MFA/BFA programs of Hamline University where sheâ€™s the nonfiction editor of Water~Stone Review.

Amy Kingâ€™s most recent books are Slaves to Do These Things (Blazevox) and, forthcoming, I Want to Make You Safe (Litmus Press). She edits the Poetics List (SUNY-Buffalo/University of Pennsylvania), moderates the Womenâ€™s Poetry Listserv (WOMPO), and teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. King also co-curates the Brooklyn-based reading series, The Stain of Poetry. For more information, please visit http://amyking.org.

Kekla Magoon is a New York City-based author, editor, speaker and educator. Her debut novel, The Rock and the River (Aladdin, 2009), won the Coretta Scott King/John Steptoe Award for New Talent and was nominated for an NAACP Image Award, in addition to being named an ALA/YALSA Best Book for Young Adults. Kekla is Co-Editor of YA and Childrenâ€™s Literature for Hunger Mountain, the arts journal of Vermont College of Fine Arts. She also leads writing workshops for youth and adults, and writes non-fiction titles for the educational market. Kekla holds a B.A. in History from Northwestern University and an M.F.A. in Writing from Vermont College of Fine Arts. For more information, visit www.keklamagoon.com.

Cate Marvinâ€™s first book of poems, Worldâ€™s Tallest Disaster, was chosen by Robert Pinsky for the 2000 Kathryn A. Morton Prize and published by Sarabande Books in 2001. In 2002, she received the Kate Tufts Discovery Prize. Her second book of poems, Fragment of the Head of a Queen, also published by Sarabande, appeared in 2007. A 2007 Whiting Award recipient and NYFA Gregory Millard Fellow, she co-edited with poet Michael Dumanis the anthology Legitimate Dangers: American Poets of the New Century (Sarabande, 2006).

Her poems have appeared in journals such as Poetry, Ninth Letter, The New England Review, Tin House, and Kenyon Review. She is an associate professor in English at the College of Staten Island, CUNY, and teaches in the low-residency M.F.A. program in creative writing at Lesley University. She lives in Staten Island, NY.

Natalie Bryant Rizzieri recently received her MFA in poetry from Lesley University. Her work has appeared in Crab Orchard Review and Connotations. She is also the founder of Friends of Warm Hearth, a group home for Armenian orphans with disabilities and travels to Armenia on a regular basis. She lives in Queens, New York.

Laurel Snyder is the author of two picture books, Inside the Slidy Diner and Baxter: the Pig who Wanted to Be Kosher, three novels, Up and Down the Scratchy Mountains, Any Which Wall, and Penny Dreadful, and three collections of poetry, including The Myth of the Simple Machines and Daphne & Jim: a choose-your-own-adventure-biography-in verse. A graduate of the Iowa Writersâ€™ Workshop and a contributor to NPRâ€™s All Things Considered, she lives in Atlanta and online at Laurelsnyder.com.

Susan Steinberg is the author of two short story collections, Hydroplane (FC2) and The End of Free Love (FC2). Her stories have also appeared in McSweeneyâ€™s, Conjunctions, The Gettysburg Review, American Short Fiction, Boulevard, The Massachusetts Review, Quarterly West, Denver Quarterly, Indiana Review, Alaska Quarterly Review, LIT, Columbia, and other literary journals. She has held residencies at The Vermont Studio Center, The Wurlitzer Foundation, the Blue Mountain Center, The MacDowell Colony, and Yaddo, and she was recently Scholar-in-Residence in the Department of Performance Studies at NYU. She received a BFA in Painting from the Maryland Institute College of Art and an MFA in English from The University of Massachusetts, Amherst. She is currently Associate Professor of English at the University of San Francisco.

Ann Townsend is the author of two collections of poetry: Dime Store Erotics (Silverfish Review Press, 1998), and The Coronary Garden (Sarabande Books, 2005). She is the editor of a collection of essays, Radiant Lyre: on Lyric Poetry (with David Baker), published by Graywolf Press in 2007. She is the recipient of a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship, an Individual Artistâ€™s grant from the Ohio Arts Council, and a Discovery Prize from The Nation. Her poems have appeared in many anthologies, including The New Young American Poets, American Poetry: The Next Generation, and The New American Poets: A Bread Loaf Anthology. Dominic Consolo Professor of English and Director of Creative Writing at Denison University, Ann Townsend also owns and operates Bittersweet Farm in Granville, Ohio.

———

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things -- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

201. steve russell
Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Wed 24 Feb 2010

---

hey, i've read Sillman.
admittedly, i'm not an authority on Sillman.
that Sillman.
those certain Sillman's that seem to haunt ...

i said
using a simple rhetorical device
WHO
is Ron Sillman???

comparing Ron Sillman
to Samuel Beckett

(since Sillman thrashed Lowell
 it seemed wisest to thrash Sillman
 using Beckett
 since it's impossible to thrash Beckett & who could stand such thrashings
 by being so compared?)

... or, as i said earlier --
to further clarify aforementioned sayings
as well as previous postings ...

Robert Lowell
(is worth reading)

i remember Lowell
(i remember reading Lowell)

i've forgotten most of what i've read
i remember mostly
the stuff Lowell imitated
in "Imitatiions."

i rarely think about Sillman
i've forgotten most Lowellisms

i'm presently thinking about myself
& my next cigarette

_____
From: sheila black <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, February 23, 2010 7:09:45 AM
Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

Look at the poem "Sunset Debris" by Ron Silliman. That thing drove me crazy (not literal) so I wrote a duplicate poem (just for myself) called "Ron Silliman Writes Poetry Like a Four Year Old Child" (never submitted!). However, for you bandwagonners, I also wrote a poem called "Ron Silliman is my Father" inspired by "The Chinese Notebook" also Ron Silliman. As for Beckett, "Waiting For Godot" need I say more. Maybe "Endgame."
Each of us has a say. S. Black
Sheila Black

--- On Mon, 2/22/10, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:

From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, February 22, 2010, 2:23 PM

... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of principles.

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...

Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

↑ Index

202. Rob McLennan
ottawater #6 now on-line
Wed 24 Feb 2010

THE SIXTH ISSUE OF OTTAWATER IS HERE!

The sixth issue of ottawater, Ottawa's own annual poetry pdf journal, edited by rob mclennan, features work by various residents current and former, including: Sylvia Adams, John Barton, Sara Cassidy, Michael Dennis, Andrew Faulkner, Spencer Gordon, Gwendolyn Guth, Phil Hall, Marilyn Irwin, Robyn Jeffrey, Anne Le Dressay, Rob Manery, Karen Massey, Marcus McCann, Heather McLeod, Christian McPherson, Soraya Peerbaye, Richard Rathwell, Peter Richardson, Janice Tokar, Paul Tyler, Priscila Uppal and Catriona Wright, and artwork by Reid McLachlan, Heather Munro, Gail Bourgeois, Stefan Thompson, Marc Adornato, Stefan Grambart, Pedro Isztin, Beaston, Danny Hussey , Rebecca Mason and Dan Martelock.

ottawater would like to thank designer Tanya Sprowl, the ottawa international writers festival, and Randy Woods at non-linear creations for their continuing support.

http://www.ottawater.com/

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - a compact of words (Salmon) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

203. Nico Vassilakis pOeTs/mArCh/sEaTlE
Wed 24 Feb 2010

POETRY in MARCH @ Pilot Bookstore www.pilotbooksseattle.com
6:00pm - 6:15pm, longer where noted *

3/1 - Don Mee Choi
3/2 - Matthew Zapruder (7pm – CA Conrad)
3/3 - Chelsea Martin
3/4 - Joshua Beckman
3/5 - Crystal Curry (7pm - Tom Hansen book release)
3/6 - Nico Vassilakis
3/7 - Stacey Levine
3/8 - Matt Briggs
3/9 - Jeanne Heuving
3/10 - Meredith Clark*
3/11 - John Olson
3/12 - Ezra Mark
3/13 - Carol Guess
3/14 - Linden Ontjes
3/15 - Sharon Alexander
3/16 - Judith Skillman
3/17 - Kristen Kosmas (an improvided staging of her playscript, Hello Failure)
3/18 - Matthew Simmons
3/19 - Tenney Nathanson*
3/20 - Kevin Sampsell
3/21 – BIG PELT III - Reg Johanson and David Wolach*
3/22 - Dan Peters (7pm Ish Klein, John Beer, Paul Killebrew (Canarium Books)
3/23 - Joel Felix
3/24 - Janee Baugher
3/25 - Yuko Enomoto
3/26 - Jenifer Browne-Lawrence
3/27 - Zachary Schomburg
3/28 - Doug Nufer
3/29 - Sarah Mangold
3/30 - Kim-An Lieberman
3/31 - Tao Lin*

Your E-mail and More On-the-Go. Get Windows Live Hotmail Free.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/196390709/direct/01/

↑ Index

204. Jason Quackenbush
Re: olympic confusion
Wed 24 Feb 2010

---

i can't find any links to the controversy on the google machine, and since i don't really give a rats ass about sports I haven't been following the olympics at all and I don't know Sidney Crosby from any other hockey player other than that I know he was some kind of wunderkind. but as a usamerican, I have to say that if you aren't pulling my leg on this one Jim, that I think Sidney Crosby may have just rocketed into being my sports hero.

On Feb 23, 2010, at 5:51 AM, Jim Andrews wrote:

> just for the benefit of the usamericans on the list, i thought i'd sketch some of the controversy that has gone on up here since the usamerican men's hockey team beat the canadian team at the vancouver olympics.
>
> we were all surprised by sidney crosby's post game comments. he said
>
> "well, i know it sucks to lose at hockey to our neighbours to the south. since we lose to them at so many other things and they beat us like their very own boy at others. but let's get one thing straight, canada. a nation's pride should have much more to do with how we treat one another in this society than with the outcome of a hockey game. the idea that winning at hockey is all that really counts at these olympics is kind of weirding us out. let's snap out of it, ok? what's important here is not winning but that canada is a good host to the people of the world and that the people of the world enjoy these games as something that brings us together in friendship, peace, and fair and fun competition. canadian national pride should not key on the outcome of a hockey game so much as on how we realize our best ideals in canada and show the way for others to do this in their own countries and internationally, also. so chins up, canada, and let's enjoy the rest of the games with pride and some perspective on what is really important on this stage."
>
> ron mclean's jaw dropped to the ground. don cherry called for sidney crosby's execution, though we don't execute people here even for murder. cherry was forced to apologize and reduced the sentence to a tour of duty for crosby to afghanistan. then he showed another dead soldier and cried again. crosby responded by changing cherry's nickname from 'grapes' to 'drapes' in honour of cherry's 'sartorial

> splendour', and crosby went on to say
>
> "let me add that we're all a bit disturbed by the tenor of much of the patriotism that has blossomed at these games. the olympics should not be a guise for political propaganda and fundamentalist nationalism hot for winning at all costs. the low point of canadian hockey was when bobby clarke chopped valeri kharlamov's ankle almost in two, breaking his ankle and ruining the russian's best player's illustrious career, in 1972, on route to canada narrowly winning the first canada-russia matchup of ours and their best players. from that time, we were seen on the international stage as barely civilized when it comes to hockey and national pride. we need to realize this and move on, evolve beyond the mindless savage. i love hockey and this country as much as the next person, but it's more important to conduct yourself with a sense of justice and fair play than it is to win at all costs. canada, can we talk?"
>
> that's about where it's at, at this stage. we're not sure what has gotten into sidney, really. we're not sure if he's grown up all of a sudden or fallen victim to foreign propaganda. we are a nation perplexed and on the verge of elimination from the men's hockey tournament.
>
> wish us luck, as i'm sure you will.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com

↑ Index

205. George Bowering
Re: olympic confusion
Wed 24 Feb 2010

You tool Bromige, you creeps!

On Feb 23, 2010, at 11:59 AM, Stephen Vincent wrote:

> Screw Hockey Nationalism! I put my vote in for Canada's Coach House Press. No Olympian pretensions, just a great list with a more than 40 year history of great hits. As far as I know no USA poet has been slammed across the shins, de-tongued, or hand broken by anyone from Canada. Maybe drunk under the table. Many of us can regret the loss of George Stanley and Robin Blaser to British Columbia, the work of both became better for the move. Tho 'we' have recently greatly benefited from have Rachel Zolf and Lisa Robertson in our eastern and western midst.
>
> What is 'national' anymore anyway. Poetry - maybe at its best - is a 'trans-territory'. More vocabularies, more choices.

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/
--- On Tue, 2/23/10, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
Subject: olympic confusion
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, February 23, 2010, 4:51 AM

just for the benefit of the usamericans on the list, i thought i'd sketch some of the controversy that has gone on up here since the usamerican men's hockey team beat the canadian team at the vancouver olympics.

we were all surprised by sidney crosby's post game comments. he said

"well, i know it sucks to lose at hockey to our neighbours to the south. since we lose to them at so many other things and they beat us like their very own boy at others. but let's get one thing straight, canada. a nation's pride should have much more to do with how we treat one another in this society than with the outcome of a hockey game. the idea that winning at hockey is all that really counts at these olympics is kind of weirding us out. let's snap out of it, ok? what's important here is not winning but that canada is a good host to the people of the world and that the people of the world enjoy these games as something that brings us together in friendship, peace, and fair and fun competition. canadian national pride should not key on the outcome of a hockey game so much as on how we realize our best ideals in canada and show the way for others to do this in their own countries and internationally, also. so chins up, canada, and let's enjoy the rest of the games with pride and some perspective on what is really important on this stage."

ron mclean's jaw dropped to the ground. don cherry called for sidney crosby's execution, though we don't execute people here even for murder. cherry was forced to apologize and reduced the sentence to a tour of duty for crosby to afghanistan. then he showed another dead soldier and cried again. crosby responded by changing cherry's nickname from 'grapes' to 'drapes' in honour of cherry's 'sartorial splendour', and crosby went on to say

"let me add that we're all a bit disturbed by the tenor of much of the patriotism that has blossomed at these games. the olympics should not be a guise for political propaganda and fundamentalist nationalism hot for winning at all costs. the low point of canadian > hockey was when bobby clarke chopped valeri kharlamov's ankle almost in two, breaking his ankle and ruining the russian's best player's illustrious career, in 1972, on route to canada narrowly winning the first canada-russia matchup of ours and their best players. from that time, we were seen on the international stage as barely civilized when it comes to hockey and national pride. we need to realize this and move on, evolve beyond the mindless savage. i love hockey and this country as much as the next person, but it's more important to conduct yourself with a sense of justice and fair play than it is to win at all costs. canada, can we talk?"

>
> that's about where it's at, at this stage. we're not sure what has gotten into sidney, really. we're not sure if he's grown up all of a sudden or fallen victim to foreign propaganda. we are a nation perplexed and on the verge of elimination from the men's hockey tournament.
>
> wish us luck, as i'm sure you will.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html

Dr. George Bowering,
Keeper of the eternal flume.

↑ Index

206. steve dalachinsky
event for tuli kupferberg
Thu 25 Feb 2010

Dear All, Please come to the reading/event for Tuli. Should be lots of fun, interesting, joyous, kind of like Tuli, right. We have a full roster of people reading/performing so you should plan to be on stage for approximately ten minutes. The work you present should either be something created by Tuli, or inspired by/related to him.

The event is at The Bowery Poetry Club (308 Bowery) on Saturday, March 6th, from 8 PM until 11 PM. Admission is $10, which will go to Tuli to assist with his medical expenses. As there are other bookings both prior to and following, we need to run a tight ship. There is a facebook page publicizing the event, along with flyers around town. In addition, I've contacted The Voice, The Villager, Time Out, The NY Post, The NY Times, and several other media outlets. The club will be filled, we want to put on a good show, one which will honor Tuli.

On Tue, 23 Feb 2010 12:35:10 -0800 steve russell <[redacted]>
writes:
> ... since I lack the proper credentials to enter into the vanguard > chambers of Ron Sillman's mind, and since I'm working on a borrowed > computer, my blog time is nearly nil ...
>
> perhaps Sillman's post was simply about the workings of American
> poetry.
> had nothing to do with Beckett.
> still, dramatic monologues are sort of ...
> i mean, Seasons in Hell is more or less...
>
> ... of course, as chief curator at the bureau of ill-advised verbs,
> I > could have said that since Beckett, all contemporary writings SEEM > little more than a hopeless quest ... having neglected to say > Seems,
> having said what i said, it seems that I'm 1st in line for a > promotion
> due to the very thing I did say.
>
>
>
> _____
> From: steve russell <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Mon, February 22, 2010 3:23:25 PM
> Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
>
> ... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing > with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on > film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the > rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than
> ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem > with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and > that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of > principles.
>
>
>
> ----- Forwarded Message ----
> From: steve russell <[redacted]>

> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
> Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
>
> ... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a > minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the > ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.
>
> But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still,
> consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...
>
> Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the > writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation ( > mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for > novelty. Still, as we're > hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a > tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not?
> Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ...
> Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub > (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

207. Aldon Nielsen

MLA Call for Papers - Jazz and Poetry

Thu 25 Feb 2010

Panel will explore jazz poems, poets, poetics; print poetry or poetry in jazz performance and recording; history, theory, form.

papers or 1500 word abstracts by March 1 to: [redacted]

--
Aldon L. Nielsen
Kelly Professor of American Literature
Department of English
117 Burrowes Building
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA
16802-6200

[redacted]

sailing the blogosphere at http://heatstrings.blogspot.com

"kindling his mind (more
than his mind will kindle)"

--William Carlos Williams, early adopter

↑ Index

208. CA Conrad snowball martinis instead...
Thu 25 Feb 2010

POSTPONED: NYC PhillySound reading for 2/25/10...

due to the snow, BUT hope to see you when it's rescheduled. Enjoy the snow! We'll be making snowball martinis down here in Philadelphia, very delicious! Have a great night!

REVIEWS AND INTERVIEWS of CAConrad & Frank Sherlock's new book The City Real & Imagined, click here: http://crireviews.blogspot.com/

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

209. Rosalie Calabrese
Rosalie's Poetry Update
Thu 25 Feb 2010

Hi - I'll be reading some of my poems Thursday, March 18, 2010 at 8:00 p.m.

Argonaut Series # 55, Poets CornerStudio 353Â
353 West 48th Street - 2nd Floor

(bet. 8th & 9th Aves.)
Closest subway: C train at 50th St.
For reservations, call [redacted]
Admission: $10Â - includes refreshments and discussion with the poets:

Sarah Barab, Seymour Barab, Rosalie Calabrese, Shari Cornutt, Rebecca Dobson, Ilsa Gilbert, Michael Howley, Anje Katcher,
Lucy Sorlucco, Mira J. Spektor, Barry Wallenstein

Publications news: I seem to have jumped the gun on announcing the publication of the anthology that will include my poem Rap Flap. It was due out in '09 but is still on hold, although I'm assured that it will appear this year. Meanwhile, Marymark Press has put the poem on a "Give-Out" Sheet, along with a poem by Mark Sonnenfeld (the publisher), and I've had great fun handing it out to people, sort of like a calling card. I'll have copies with me at the March 18th reading.

For those of you who are new to this list and can't attend my readings, here's the poem in question:

Â Â Â RAP FLAP

Me jealous, you jealous, Everybodyâ€™s hot for what the other guy has got,
But try to take it, wake it, shake it, fake it, make it any way you can,
Someoneâ€™s sure to say youâ€™re overzealous,
Slap you down, snap the lock,
Put you in a jail cell block.
What a life, all this strife just to come out on the short end of the stick Makes me sick, cuts my heart right to the quick,
But still we do the dance, take a chance on big romance.
Spin the wheel, no big deal
Unless the numbers come up wrong and noone wants to hear your song
No matter how loud you sing it. So go on, just wing it.

Skip the rules, letâ€™s not be fools,
All you need to succeed is lots of luck
 and spunk
Plus enough imagination to start a conflagration â€“
Fire in the soul, not the hell hole you came out of.
Have no doubt, keep on shouting all about it
To anyone whoâ€™ll pay attention,
Give you intervention to ease the tension,
An invention that wonâ€™t win a prize but might revise

The way you play the game of gaining fame and fortune,
Get a bigger portion of the pie until youâ€™re high
On life or some other narcotic thatâ€™s maybe more exotic.

Yeah, my man, thatâ€™s the plan
Ever since the world began.
Thereâ€™s no war or revolution gonna give us a solution
How to speed up evolution
Long as we are hot for what the other guy has got.
So while you wait around for things to change,
Keep an eye on the prize and take it, wake it, shake it, fake it,
Make it any way you can, and all the rest of it be damned!
Next reading date: June 4. Look for info in May.

All best ~ R

↑ Index

210. Ward Tietz

Ward Tietz at Paper Kite Press Studio & Gallery, February 27th

Thu 25 Feb 2010

Word-and-letterform artist Ward Tietz will speak on “Time and Being in the Margin,” on February 27th at Paper Kite Press Studio & Gallery, Kingston, PA.

Paper Kite Press Studio & Gallery
443 Main St., Kingston, PA
Feb. 27 at 6 p.m.
$5 entry
[redacted] or wordpainting.com

↑ Index

211. Poetry Project

Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 25 Feb 2010

SAVE THE DATE
Sunday, March 14th, 6:30 PM
A Celebration of Haitian Culture: Benefit for Earthquake Relief

Please join the Poetry Project, Danspace Project, Ontological-Hysteric Theater and St. Mark¹s Church in the Bowery for a celebration of Haitian culture. All proceeds from the evening will be donated to Partners in Health: Stand With Haiti. http://www.standwithhaiti.org/haiti

Readings by Amiri & Amina Baraka and Denizé Lauture! Performances by John Zorn and master Haitian drummer Bonga! More artists to be announced soon!

Tickets will be available soon for advanced purchase, and will be available at the door.

Sliding scale admission: $20-$75 General Audience

Reserved Seating: $75-100

Reserved seat + Ticket to pre-show reception at Pangea Restaurant & Bar: $125

Please check the event blog: http://benefitforhaiti.wordpress.com/ for more info!

And here¹s what¹s happening at The Poetry Project in the more immediate future:

Friday, February 26, 10 PM
Forrest Gillespie & Ellis Isenberg: The Green Death

The Green Death involves physical therapy, nutrition, and the afterlife. This will be be the final work of a trilogy exploring the coordinated mutation of subcultural language spheres.

Forrest Gillespie works in the non-profit environmental building industry in New York and writes about a play a month. Lately: Future Rickshaw, Ridin¹ Dirt..Dirty, Merciless Shopping Spree, El Ojo Del Diablo, The Woman in the Mirror, The White and Yellow Spasms of Death, Baghdad Zookeeper, The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, The Last Recorded Instance of the Paranormal, Rocky Mountain Rescue. Directed: most of the above, plus: Night of Pity (Ghelderode), Hamlet (Buñuel).

Ellis Isenberg is from Minneapolis Minnesota. He used to write and print books of poetry but now he has been writing plays. There have been two so far: Csepian Tec is Going Public and Enormous Sun Group Therapy. He also writes science fiction.

Monday, March 1, 6 PM
Urban Word
12th Annual Urban Word NYC Teen Poetry Slam Prelims

Come support some of the top teen poets in NYC as they compete for a chance to make it to Harlem¹s world famous Apollo Theater.

For more info or to sign-up visit: urbanwordnyc.org

Free for teen performers/$5 teens/$7 adults

Wednesday, March 3, 8 PM
Tina Darragh & Tyrone Williams

Tina Darragh has been writing poetry in the D.C. area for over 40 years. Her most recent work is a collaboration with the poets Jane Sprague and Diane Ward published as the belladonna Elders Series #8 (belladonna 2009). Deep eco pré, her collaboration with poet Marcella Durand, has just been published as an LRL e-edition by Little Red Leaves.

Tyrone Williams teaches literature and theory at Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio. He is the author of three books of poetry, c.c. (Krupskaya Books, 2002), On Spec (Omnidawn Publishing, 2008) and The Hero Project of the Century (The Backwaters Press, 2009) and several chapbooks. A prose eulogy is forthcoming from Hooke Press this year. He recently completed a manuscript of poetry commissioned by Atelos Books.

And, upcoming at Danspace:

PLATFORM 2010: Back to New York City
Shelley Senter and David Thomson
A shared evening of new work
March 4-6, 2010 € [Thu-Sat] € 8:00 PM
Admission: $18 ($12 for members)

In grey matter, Shelley Senter examines influence, history, visibility, authorship and ownership in collaboration with sound scores by Andrew Wass, and LOWER LEFT and NON FICTION collective members Nina Martin, Margaret Paek, Rebecca Bryant, Kelly Dalrymple-Wass and Andrew Wass.

In 1959, David Thomson explores the notions of erasure and overlay from the intersection of coexisting narratives of body and text. He collaborates with singular writers Onomé Ekeh, Glenn Ligon, Clarinda Mac Low, and Pamela Sneed and performers Sarena Kennedy and Omagbitse Omagbemi.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

212. David Kirschenbaum
This Sun. NYC/ In Verse Poetry, Photography and Radio
Thu 25 Feb 2010

The below is from the poet Sean Cole:

In Verse: an experiment in documentary poetry, photography and radio

- Sunday, February 28 at 7:30pm at UnionDocs
- 322 Union Ave., Brooklyn, NY
- Suggested donation $7
- Susan B.A. Somers-Willett and Lu Olkowski present: In Verse's "Women of Troy"
- http://www.uniondocs.org/inverse/
-
- In Verse is a multi-media reporting project that combines poetry, photography and audio footage to create “documentary poems” for radio, the web, print and the iPhone. Poet Susan B.A. Somers-Willett and radio producer Lu Olkowski share their work and talk about poetry as a documentary medium.

↑ Index

213. Charles Bernstein
All the Whiskey in Heaven: Selected Poems from FSG
Sun 28 Feb 2010

All the Whiskey in Heaven:
Selected Poems of Charles Bernstein
Farrar, Straus and Giroux
(on sale March 2) (300 pp.)
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/books/all-the-whiskey/

All the Whiskey in Heaven brings together some of Charles Bernstein’s best work from the past thirty years, an astonishing assortment of different types of poems. Yet, despite the distinctive differences from poem to poem, Bernstein's characteristic explorations of how language both limits and liberates thought are present throughout. Modulating the comic and the dark, structural invention with buoyant sound play, these challenging works give way to poems of lyric excess and striking emotional range. This is poetry for poetry's sake, as formally radical as it is socially engaged, providing equal measures of aesthetic pleasure, hilarity, and philosophical reflection. Long considered one of America's most inventive and influential contemporary poets, Bernstein reveals himself to be both trickster and charmer.

"Charles Bernstein's poems resemble each other only in being unexpected. Simultaneously mad, tragic and hilarious, they seem written to illustrate the truth of his lines: 'things are / solid; we stumble, unglue, recombine.' All the Whiskey in Heaven is a vast department store of the imagination." —John Ashbery

"Charles Bernstein uses words as a surgeon uses a scalpel. He strips away the skin and cuts to the bone to reveal reality and—ultimately—to heal. This essential collection from 30 years of cutting edge work will confirm Bernstein as our true poet laureate—the voice of a new generation." —John Zorn

"For more than thirty years Charles Bernstein has been America's most ardent literary provocateur. This long-needed selection of his poetry gives us a new perspective on his work, for it shows us that the many forms he has worked in over the years are in fact a single form, the Bernstein form, and it is unique, the product of an imagination unlike that of any other contemporary writer. His poems challenge you to think in unaccustomed ways. They address public matters, private matters, poetic matters—in other words, all that matters most. And, good Lord, can they ever make you laugh" —Paul Auster

"Charles Bernstein is our ultimate connoisseur of chaos, the chronicler, in poems of devastating satire, chilling and complex irony, exuberant wit, and, above all, profound passion, of the contradictions and absurdities of everyday life in urban America at the turn of the twenty-first century. From such early underground classics as "The Klupzy Girl," to the mordant verbal play of "The Lives of the Toll Takers," to the great meditation on 9/11 called "Report from Liberty Street" and the deeply personal ballads and elegies of recent years, Bernstein's much awaited Selected Poems displays a formal range, performative urgency, and verbal dexterity unmatched by other poets of his generation." —Marjorie Perloff

"A perfect introduction to the adventure that is Charles Bernstein's work. But even for those of us who have known his irrepressible inventiveness and engaged humor from the individual books it is a boon to see here the full range of his exuberant ingenuity in battling sclerosis of word, mind—and poetry.” —Rosmarie Waldrop

“This wonderful book confirms Charles Bernstein’s position as the pre-eminent American poet of mental activity—delineating not simply the mind as it registers stimuli, but the more radical commitment to mind as a machine that constantly invents totally new moves and strategies in the daily battles of perception. All the Whiskey in Heaven captures 30 years of ground breaking and revelatory work.” —Richard Foreman

Previews

Bookforum
Feb./March 2010
"... a rousing selection from thirty years of work ... Bernstein deftly shifts moods and tones, but a sense of urgency and a hard-won clarity are in eveidnce throught this volume."
--David O'Neill

Publisher's Weekly 2/20/10 starred review This gathering of 30 years worth of work by the prominent L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poet and essayist offers a rigorous critique of the art of poetry itself, which means, among other things, a thorough investigation of language and the mind. Varied voices and genres are at play, from a colloquial letter of complaint to the manager of a Manhattan subway station to a fragmentary meditation on the forces that underlie the formation of knowledge. Bernstein's attention to the uncertainty surrounding the self as it purports to exist in poetry—“its virtual (or ventriloquized)/ anonymity—opens fresh pathways toward thinking through Rimbaud's dictum that “I is another.” In addition to philosophical depth—which somehow even lurks beneath statements like “There is nothing/ in this poem/ that is in any/ way difficult/ to understand”—a razor-sharp wit ties the book together: “You can't/ watch ice sports with the lights on!” These exhilarating, challenging poems raise countless essential questions about the form and function of poetry. (Mar.)

http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/blog/

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

March 2010

347 messages · Thu 25 Feb 2010 – Wed 31 Mar 2010

March 2010 set two opposite ideas of what a poem is for against each other in the same inbox — the poem as a commodity to be commissioned and priced, and the poem as an act of courage that could cost a life. Three hundred and forty-eight messages moved through the list, and while its own largest threads worried, in comfortable American fashion, over whether a poet could ever be paid, the wider world sent in a reminder that elsewhere a poem was still a weapon a person could die holding. The month measured the distance between those two conditions.

The largest domestic thread asked whether poetry could be a livelihood at all. Prompted by news of a working poet taking commissions, a member opened the loaded question — "can creativity be prompted by pay?" — and whether a poet could actually sell poems, or whether all of them were merely supplementing real lives with side art and hobbies. It was the recession-era anxiety persisting into the new decade: the poem as a service one might invoice, the artist wondering if the work could be made to earn its keep, or whether it was condemned to be forever a thing done for love and never for money.

The world answered the question of a poem's stakes from a very different place. A widely shared story reported a Saudi woman who had gone on live television and, in verse, denounced the extremist clerics of her own country — poetry not as commission or hobby but as public defiance, delivered under threat, on a stage where the risk was real. Against the American list's worry over whether a poem could be sold sat a woman for whom a poem was the most dangerous thing she could possibly say aloud, and who said it anyway.

Between the two poles the room ran its lighter business — a questionnaire circulating in numbered installments, threads on younger poets and on whether one would ever buy art, or a poem, at all. The commerce of poetry, its small economies of attention and exchange, hummed along in the foreground while, in the background, the same art was being used somewhere as an instrument of genuine courage.

I have set March down exactly as the archive delivered it — the anxious question of whether creativity can be prompted by pay, and the Saudi woman who turned a poem into an act of public defiance on live television — because it was the month the list held the two extreme fates of poetry side by side: the poem as a commodity a comfortable culture is not even sure it will buy, and the poem as a weapon a woman will risk her safety to wield. A room debating whether anyone would pay for a poem, in the same weeks that a poem was the bravest thing a woman half a world away could speak, is a room being quietly instructed in what its art is actually capable of, and how little, sometimes, the price of it has to do with its worth.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 347 in all.

WRITERS

Alexander, Charles 241, 338
Allegrezza, William 55, 153, 176
AND, mIEKAL 84, 148, 151, 225, 313, 324
Andrews, Betsy 76
Andrews, Jim 16, 67, 71, 165, 207, 300
Aslongasittakes 29
Ball, Jonathan 122, 134, 140
Ballardini, Anny 57, 96, 102, 158
Beaulieu, Derek 12, 82, 239
Behm-Steinberg, Hugh 75
Benson, Cara 339
Berkson, Bill 24, 191
Bernstein, Charles 147
Blacksox 143, 228
Blomgen, Lance 259
Bolden, Emma 183
Books, Crane's Bill 129
Borchart, Sharon Mesmer/David 152
Bowering, George 205, 280
Brink, Dean 9
Brito, Manuel 4
Brown, Pam 301, 310
Byrne, Mairead 211
Cabri, Louis 299
Carson, Margaret 204
Casamassima, Christophe 46
Cha, Asian 11
Cheek, Cris 30, 343
Chirot, David 155, 164, 171, 276, 315, 346
Chirot, David-Baptiste 3, 20, 193, 271
Clay, Steve 22
Cleary, John 275
Conrad, CA 14, 26, 190, 270
Cotner, Jon 279
Craig, J.P. 133
Dalachinsky, Steve 1, 28, 41, 43, 44, 114, 115, 131, 166, 206, 284, 285, 308
Daley, Ryan 272
Daly, Catherine 127, 144, 277
Damon, Maria 185
Daniel Remein, Editor 214
Davidson, Ian 244
Deed, Martha 100
Devineni, Ram 59
Dewhurst, Robert 223
Dolin, Sharon 149
Dorf, Carol 321
DuCharme, Mark 92
Durgin, Patrick F. 80, 290
Earl, Amanda 31, 65
Edgerton, Michael Tod 54
Editions, Hand Held 39
Eichhorn, Kate 167
Ellis, Stephen 124, 142
Elshtain, Eric 15
Etter, Carrie 5, 23, 49, 68, 97, 110
Fieled, Adam 19, 70
Al Filreis 61, 111, 326
Foley, Jack 135
Fox, Skip 306
Frazer, Vernon 231, 238
Frost, Corey 85, 179
Ganick, Peter 172, 323, 333
Glass, Dan 123, 136, 337
Glass, Jesse 146, 180
Gordon, Noah Eli 154, 237
Grant, Peter 138
Gricevich, Andy 33, 36, 73
Grieco, Peter 173
Healy, Randolph 245
Heller, Michael 212
Heman, Bob 18
Hinton, Laura 120
Hoffman, Eric 45
Joey 8
Johnson, Halvard 168, 188, 273, 281, 320
Karavatos, Nicholas 103, 104, 105, 311
Karmin, Jennifer 93, 221
Kasimor, Mary 128, 141, 319
Katko, Justin 37, 303
Katz, Adam 87
Killian, Kevin 255, 304
King, Amy 52, 53, 62, 69, 72, 113, 118, 121, 125, 126, 137, 139, 184, 213, 232, 252, 258, 264, 268, 292, 295, 305, 318, 331, 347
Kirschenbaum, David 2, 94, 145, 293, 334
Kirschenbaum, David A. 202, 236
Konkol, Margaret 203, 296
Ladkin, Sam 208, 256, 340
Law, Iris 325
Lepson, Ruth 74, 278
Malek, Nathalie 77
Manson, Douglas 6
Marmer, Jake 322
Martin, Camille 13, 56, 240
Maurer, Susan 186, 216
McLennan, Rob 90, 99, 182, 197, 217, 235, 291
McPherson, Bruce 222, 249
McVay, Gwyn 86
Meadows, Deborah A. 307
Meersman, Philip 242

Melnicove, Mark 150
Minton, Jonathan 316
Mollohan, J. Michael 247
Morse, Jonathan 220, 312
Mukherjee, Aryanil 196, 246
Munday, Evan 233
Murray, Gregg 187
Nasdor, Marc 58
Nathanson, Tenney 169, 209
Nelson, Paul 42, 298
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 32, 195, 254, 287
Nielsen, Aldon 174, 253
Novack, Carol 66
Oha, Obododimma 98, 119
Palagi, Naomi Buck 91
Pallant, Cheryl 159
Palm, Lars 83
Peterson, Tim 40, 81, 163, 224, 234, 345
Pinto, Regina 17, 63, 199
Posamentier, Evelyn 178
Project, Poetry 35, 79, 219, 297
Quackenbush, Jason 266
Raven, Francis 262, 263
Ravnikar, Nicholas 288
Revich, Allan 282
Robins, Maureen 260
Rothenberg, Jerome 78, 161
Russell, Steve 21, 34, 50, 51, 229, 230, 251, 265, 289, 294, 330, 336
Samuels, Lisa 335
Sarai, Sarah 47, 192
Savage, Thomas 327
Schultz, Susan Webster 7, 27, 342
Schwartz, Gerald 157, 181, 226, 267
Seaman, David 283
Shankar, Ravi (English) 215, 344
Side, Jeffrey 48, 95, 106, 227, 317
Siegell, Paul 64, 116, 329
Slaughter, William 332
Sondheim, Alan 10, 25, 162, 194, 201, 248, 250, 261, 274, 286, 302
Spencer, George 101, 107
Stephenson, Ann 112
Tranter, John 109
Twshaner 341
Tynes, Jen 309
UbuWeb 117
Vincent, Stephen 160, 175, 189, 198, 314, 328
Warsh, Lewis 243
Weishaus, Joel 89, 218
Weiss, Mark 257
Wetherington, Laura 269
Wharton, Samuel 38
Wilcox, Dan 200
Xu, Lynn 177
Young, Mark 60
Zabic, Nana 88, 132, 156, 210
Zimmerman, Daniel 130
}, { Brad Brace 108, 170

NAMES MENTIONED

Abani, Chris 336
Abdul, Selim 311, 319, 320, 321, 327
Addonizio, Kim 169
Aitken, Adam 27
Albright, Madeline 191
Alexander, Elizabeth 88, 125
Alice, Mary 11
Allison, Dorothy 336
Alpert, Barry 96, 98, 102, 193, 230, 265
Altemus, Reed 239, 316
Americans, Asian 233, 346
Amerika, Mark 163
Amram, David 219
Anderson, Erik 92, 152, 309
Ang, Brian 123
Angelo, Michael 14, 28, 295
Anne, Sarah 93
Antin, David 3, 20, 32, 34, 50
Armand, Louis 153
Armantrout, Rae 13, 61, 78, 101, 115, 299
Arnold, Bob 78, 101, 115
Ashberry, John 153
Ashbery, John 21, 154, 177, 237, 289
Ashley, Robert 316
Atlanta, Mark P. 79, 112, 152
Austin, Geer 159, 334
Ave, Jackson 206, 308
Baker, Lori 75, 96, 98, 102, 212, 316
Balaban, John 196
Ballard, Micah 154, 237
Baraka, Amiri 79, 265, 315, 330
Barbour, Douglas 235
Barnes, Diane 212
Bartlett, Sarah 309
Barwin, Gary 82
Baudrillard, Jean 299
Baus, Eric 309
Beckett, Samuel 1, 3, 32, 34, 50, 117, 256
Beckett, Tom 1, 3, 20, 32, 33, 34, 50, 51, 57
Beckman, Joshua 206, 308
Beer, John 177
Behrle, Jim 2, 334
Bellamy, Dodie 81
Benedikt, Michael 250, 254, 255, 271, 278
Benjamin, Walter 222, 249, 287, 315, 330
Bennett, Bill 96, 98, 307, 333
Bennett, John M. 102, 153, 333
Berger, Jonathan 94, 334
Bergvall, Caroline 117
Berkeley, Michael 123, 145, 175, 177
Berlin, Irving 96, 98, 102, 163, 269
Berman, David 21

Berman, Tosh 324
Bernheimer, Alan 24
Berrigan, Edmund 94
Biggs, Simon 67
Birmingham, Jed 79
Black, Sheila 3, 32, 34, 50
Blake, William 6, 160, 174
Blau, Rachel 299
Blonstein, Anne 316
Boat, Drunken 149, 213, 232, 297
Bogle, Ann 93
Bok, Christian 233
Bolano, Roberto 315, 330
Bolton, Ken 215
Bonney, Sean 37, 160, 303
Borkhuis, Charles 40, 163, 345
Boully, Jenny 221
Bowering, Harry 280, 281
Boyle, Peter 309
Bozek, Jessica 93, 213, 232, 264, 305
Bozicevic, Ana 14, 28, 93, 295
BpNichol 233
Bradley, Jamie 65
Brandonisio, Michael 153
Brazil, David 17, 63, 255, 297
Brecht, Bertolt 315, 330
Breckenridge, Donald 243
Broder, Melissa 213, 232, 264, 305
Browne, Colin 169
Browning, Robert 3, 20, 32, 33, 34, 50, 51, 309
Bruno, Franklin 17, 63, 313
Bryan, John 75
Bryant, Elizabeth 93
Bryant, Tisa 268
Buckley, Jeff 75
Buffam, Suzanne 177
Bukowski, Charles 41, 292
Burgaud, Patrick 17, 63
Burk, Wendy 169
Burroughs, William S. 171, 195, 198, 315, 330
Butler, Judith 292
Butler, William 235
Cafe, Poets 94
Cage, John 256
Cain, Stephen 239
Cameron, Sharon 217
Campbell, Roy 206
Capen, Samuel P. 203
Card, Macgregor 334
Carlos, William 206, 308, 326
Carr, Angela 167
Carr, Emily 213, 232, 264
Carr, Julie 233
Carr, Michael 154, 237
Carroll, John 78, 101
Carroll, Lewis 115
Carson, Anne 133, 141, 142
Carter, Angela 10, 25, 43, 301, 310
Catanzano, Amy 78, 101, 115
Celan, Paul 78, 101, 115, 171, 195, 198, 315, 330
Chace, Joel 153, 333
Chang, Iris 170
Chang, Tina 215
Chernoff, Maxine 56
Chester, Jeff 222, 249
Chomsky, Noam 299
Christle, Heather 79
Ciccariello, Peter 102
Claire, Barbara 23
Clark, Cheryl 40, 163, 345
Clark, Douglas 96, 98, 102
Clark, Emilie 14, 28, 213, 232, 264, 295, 305, 316
Clark, Tom 106
Clarke, Robin 214
Clemente, Francesco 17, 63
Clifford, Pat 153, 196
Cobbing, Bob 171, 195, 198
Cohen, Julia 309
Coletti, John 2, 94
Collins, Martha 94
Comments, Poets 5, 212
Connor, Bruce 153
Conrad, Tony 3, 14, 20, 26, 28, 32, 34, 50, 81, 190, 270, 285
Conte, Joseph 213, 232, 264, 305
Cooley, Nicole 235
Coolidge, Clark 37, 84
Corbett, William 346
Cortez, Jayne 339
County, Madison 9, 222, 245, 249, 313, 324
Covey, Bruce 112, 309
Covino, Peter 211
Crane, Lee 316
Creeley, Robert 22, 222, 249, 289, 328
Crosby, Harry 94
Crouch, Jeff 333
Crouse, John 333
Cunningham, John 117, 345
Currin, Jen 233
Césaire, Aimé 78, 115
Darras, Jacques 78, 101, 115
Davenport, Steve 160
Davies, James 160, 296, 304
Davis, Jordan 30
Davis, Martin 45, 145
Dawson, Nancy 259
Dennis, Carl 96, 98, 102, 235
Dentz, Shira 40, 163
Detorie, Michelle 93
Deutch, Amanda 93

Devaney, Tom 61
Dick, Jennifer K. 309
Dickinson, Emily 276, 287, 315, 330
Dillon, Matt 102
Dillon, Richard 96, 98
Dobran, Ryan 37, 303
Donato, Claire 214
Donovan, Thom 147, 241
Doyle, Erica 213, 232
Drescher, Julia 93
Drucker, Johanna 45
Dumanis, Michael 213, 232, 264, 305
Dungy, Camille 309
Durgin, Patrick F. 80, 290
Dworkin, Craig 67, 117
Dylan, Michael 293
Edmond, Martin 60, 335
Eggers, Dave 336
Eisenstein, Sergei 315, 330
Elena, Maria 153, 339
Eliot, Joe 21
Ellen, Mary 75
Elrick, Laura 80, 290, 301
Emerson, Claudia 155, 166, 193, 230
England, Amy 213, 232, 264, 299, 305, 345
Enslin, Ted 222, 249
Ernst, Max 117, 307
Eshleman, Clayton 78, 101, 115
Eugene, Brett 177, 213, 232, 264, 305, 341
Fagin, Larry 24, 75
Fainlight, Ruth 96, 98
Falkoff, Marc 155, 166, 193, 230
Farr, Raymond 153, 333
Felix, Joel 11
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 145, 229
Finch, Annie 85, 93, 179, 309
Fink, Thomas 57, 145
Finkelstein, Norman 212
Fiorini, Jessica 96, 98, 102
Fischer, Norman 334
Fisher, Ann 336
Fishman, Ellen 212
Fitch, Andy 40, 163, 269, 279
Fitzgerald, Scott 45
Flynn, Albert 2, 94, 145
Flynn, Sean 96, 98, 102
Foster, Paul 11, 14, 28, 287, 295, 315, 330, 346
France, Peter 4, 17, 63, 94, 145, 152, 299, 313
Frances, Mary 5, 37, 110, 221, 303
Franco, James 17, 63
Fraser, Kathleen 113
Fraser, Simon 209
Freedman, Robert 10, 25, 43
Freeman, Micah 94
Fuhrman, Joanna 40, 79, 94, 163, 345
Gander, Forrest 309
Gardner, Janet 93, 344
Gatza, Geoffrey 48, 96, 98, 102
Gek, Kim 75
Gelsinger, Eric 6
Gilbert, Susan 344
Gillespie, William 94
Gilmore, Gary 2, 94, 145, 202, 293, 334
Gimenez, Carmen 93
Ginsberg, Allen 42, 145, 185, 187, 265, 283
Gizzi, Peter 147, 206, 308
Gladman, Renee 243
Godfrey, John 256, 340
Godston, Daniel 96, 98, 102
Van Gogh 145
Golata, Russ 143
Goldsmith, Kenneth 67, 147, 150, 151
Goldstein, Laura 221
Gonzalez, Ray 169, 295
Goode, Chris 256, 340
Gordon, Nada 297
Gottlieb, Michael 75
Gould, Glenn 213, 232, 264
Graham, Jorie 265
Graham, Lea 265
Gray, Stephanie 14, 28, 295
Greenberg, Arielle 93, 292
Greenwald, Ted 297
Gregg, Linda 187
Gregory, Dick 160, 213, 232, 264, 305
Grenier, Bob 326
Grenier, Robert 160, 326
Griffiths, Bill 160
Grinnell, Tracy 93, 345
Hadbawnik, David 80, 290
Hajnoczky, Helen 217
Hall, Donald 149
Halle, Steve 153
Halsey, Alan 160
Hamill, Janet 219
Hamilton, Ann 54
Harkey, John 40, 163
Harper, Michael 154, 237
Harris, Kaplan 2, 94, 203
Harris, Sharon 197
Harryman, Carla 196, 219
Harvey, James 177
Hawkey, Christian 39
Hayes, Jared 93, 94
Heames, Ian 37, 303
Hejinian, Lyn 145
Heller, Mike 59, 212
Hennessey, Michael 70, 74
Henning, Barbara 40, 163, 169, 224, 234, 241
Henriksen, Matt 202, 309
Herd, Colin 296, 304
Herman, Rachel 299

Hershon, Robert 334
Hibbard, Tom 153
Hightower, Scott 14, 28, 295
Hofer, Jen 93
Holman, Bob 219
Holmes, Michael 174
Horton, David 153
Howard, David 102
Howard, Scott 45, 75, 96, 98, 222, 249
Howe, Susan 85, 111, 163, 179, 270, 285
Howsare, Erika 309
Hume, Christine 75
Hunt, Erica 147
Hunter, Carrie 93
Iijima, Brenda 292, 345
Indiana, Robert 198
Inman, Peter 169
Ireland, Lauren 245, 303, 313, 340
Israel, David 41
Israeli, Henry 346
Jackson, Jesse 3, 20, 32, 34, 50, 94
Jacob, Max 208
Jameson, Fred 14, 28, 295
Jarvis, Simon 37, 303
Javier, Paolo 345
Jeanne, Sarah 219
Jenkins, Grant 159
Jenkins, Matthew 75
Joans, Ted 293
Johns, Jasper 1, 3, 30, 32, 34, 50, 324
Johnson, Jeff T. 214
Johnson, Kent 48
Johnston, Devin 296, 304
Jones, Brian 14, 28, 94, 123, 206, 295, 308, 336
Jones, Jill 153, 335
Jordan, June 13
Jorgensen, Alexander 153
Joris, Pierre 41, 78, 101, 196
Joron, Andrew 241
Joseph, Safdie 221, 309
Joyce, James 187
Joyce, Trevor 37, 56, 303
Kalleberg, Garrett 206, 308
Kao, Jason 206, 308
Kaplan, Josef 316
Kaplan, Leslie 260
Karasick, Adeena 143
Kaufman, Erica 334
Keats, John 78, 101, 115, 161
Kelly, Patrick 61, 111, 270, 285, 326
Kelly, Robert 78, 101, 115
Kempton, Karl 316
Kendal, Emily 307, 309, 316
Kerouac, Jack 92, 293, 328
Kerry, John 160
Kilbride, Laura 37, 303
Killebrew, Paul 177
Kimball, Jack 81
Kinsella, John 280, 281
Kirschenbaum, David A. 2, 94, 145, 202, 236, 293, 334
Klein, Lucas 177
Klinger, Paul 93
Knowles, Christopher 256
Koethe, John 79
Kooser, Ted 265
Kostelanetz, Richard 193, 230, 265
Kushner, Bill 14, 28, 295
Kyger, Joanne 317
Lacan, Jacques 12
Lally, Michael 243
Lamborn, Peter 324
Lamoureux, Mark 40, 93, 163, 345
Lang, Eugene 149
Laurence, Paul 160
Lauterbach, Ann 56
Law, Iris A. 325
Lawton, Pamela 243
Laynor, Gregory 14, 28, 295
Lease, Joseph 2, 94
Leftwich, Jim 96, 98, 102, 313, 333
Leggott, Michele 60, 335
Levitsky, Rachel 206, 233, 308
Levy, Andrew 40, 163, 345
Lewis, Bernard 75, 78, 101, 150, 151
Lilly, Ruth 332
Liu, Timothy 14, 28, 295
Loden, Rachel 2, 94
Lohmann, Sam 123
Lomax, Alan 93
London, Frank 37, 68, 160, 208
Lopez, Tony 160, 169
Lowe, Thomas 333
Lowell, Amy 1, 3, 20, 32, 34, 50, 213, 230, 232, 264, 289, 305
Lowell, Robert 3, 32, 34, 50
Machlin, Dan 206, 308
Mackey, Nathaniel 67
Madison, James 332
Magers, Dan 75
Mali, Elizabeth 179
Mallarmé, Stéphane 37
Mandel, Charlotte 96, 98, 102
Mandelstam, Osip 78, 101, 115
Manguso, Sarah 153
Manson, Doug 37
Marie, Anne 153
Marlowe, Philip 3, 20, 32, 34, 50
Marsh, Bill 47, 57, 149, 160
Martin, Douglas A. 14, 28, 81
Martinez, Michael 75, 346
Marvin, Lee 213, 232, 264, 305
Mason, Janet 334

Massey, Karen 197
Mauro, Nicole 57, 93
Maxwell, Andrew 309
Mayer, Bernadette 185, 187, 283
Meadows, Deborah A. 307
Meetze, James 224, 234
Meier, Richard 123
Meltzer, David 78, 101, 115
Meng, Catherine 93
Mercado, Nancy 41
Merrill, James 339
Meyer, Steven 303
Michaels, Leonard 67
Miller, Paul D. 45, 153, 214, 315, 330, 346
Mitchell, Joan 75
Mohammad, Kasey 233
Monk, Geraldine 160
Monroe, Harriet 312
Moody, Rick 11
Moore, Allison 18
Mornar, Brian 123
Morris, Dee 76
Morrison, Bill 150, 151, 160
Morton, Kathryn A. 213, 232, 264, 305
Moschovakis, Anna 93
Muldoon, Paul 85, 179
Murphy, Paul 13, 75, 333
Murphy, Sheila E. 66, 169, 235, 333
Myers, Michael 153
Myles, Eileen 81
Nakayasu, Sawako 93
Nelson, Paul E. 42, 298
Newlove, John 99
Nguyen, Hoa 11, 159
Niedecker, Lorine 3, 20, 22, 32, 34, 50, 163, 175
Nielsen, Aldon L. 174, 253, 290
Niss, Millie 17, 63
Nolan, Pat 35, 58
Norris, Ken 217
Noteboom, Michelle 93
Notley, Alice 169, 209, 241, 301
Oliver, John 167
Olsen, Lance 21, 34
Olson, Charles 22, 222, 224, 234, 249
Olson, Kirby 299
Oppen, George 163, 212, 222, 249
Oppenheimer, Joel 22
Ortiz, Travis 145
Pacosz, Christina 96, 98
Paige, Abby 213, 232
Palattella, John 257, 260
Palmer, Michael 241
Parish, Jefferson 35, 58
Parker, William 206, 308
Parkway, Neal 92
Patchen, Kenneth 6, 22
Paterson, Don 149, 213, 232
Patterson, Ian 160, 208
Peirce, Kathleen 163
Pendergast, Dawn 93
Penfold, Margaret 17, 63
Penton, Jonathan 160
Perelman, Bob 326
Perloff, Marjorie 78, 101, 115, 117
Peters, Michael 316
Peterson, Katie 40
Pettet, Simon 40, 163, 224, 234
Phillip, Andrew 153
Picabia, Francis 248
Picard, Maureen 260
Pickard, Tom 22
Picot, Edward 17, 63
Pine, White 79
Pines, Paul 309
Place, Vanessa 206, 308
Plath, Sylvia 265
Porter, Anne 150, 151, 286
Portugal, Anne 313
Pound, Ezra 3, 20, 32, 34, 50, 299
Powell, Ren 169
Di Prima, Diane 290
Prince, Richard 11, 94
Pritchett, Patrick 212
Pritts, Nate 153
Professor, Kelly 61, 111, 174, 253, 326
Purcell, Jack 291
Purdy, James 22
Quasha, George 78, 101, 115, 193, 230, 265
Randall, Karen 219
Randall, Margaret 204, 219
Rankine, Claudia 213, 232
Raworth, Tom 22
Ray, David 169
Reddin, Elizabeth 14, 28, 206, 295, 308
Reed, Marthe 301, 310
Reiner, Chris 17, 63
Remein, Daniel C. 214
Rexilius, Andrea 309
Reznikoff, Charles 299
Rhodes, Martha 75
Riggs, Don 336
Riley, Denise 96, 98, 102
Robertson, Lisa 123
Robinson, Elizabeth 122, 124, 129, 130, 140
Robinson, Jeffrey C. 78, 101, 115, 161
Robinson, Kit 61, 341
Rogal, Stan 197
Roggenbuck, Steve 153
Ronk, Martha 233
Rotando, Matt 213, 232
Rothenberg, Jerry 277, 284
Rothschild, Doug 169
Ruggieri, Helen 96, 98, 102

Rumaker, Michael 243
Russo, Linda 227
Sama, Metta 213, 232
Sanchez, Jorge 145, 297
Sanders, James 29
Sanders, Jay 160, 180
Santos, Craig 11
Saroyan, William 22
Sayers, Thomas 336
Scalapino, Leslie 299
Schapira, Kate 309
Schelling, Andrew 78, 92, 101, 115
Schneeman, George 255
Schoen, Jesse 94
Schultz, Lou 7, 11, 27, 342
Schultz, Susan M. 7, 27, 85, 342
Schuyler, James 224, 234
Schwabsky, Barry 328
Schwartz, Jerry 41, 157, 162, 168, 181, 188, 192, 201, 226, 246, 248, 289, 340
Scobie, Stephen 235
Scutti, Susan 41
Seaman, David W. 283
Segal, Martin E. 81
Seiferle, Rebecca 96, 98, 102
Selby, Spencer 75
Selland, Eric 75
Shakespeare, William 94
Shapiro, David 40, 47, 163, 345
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 346
Sheppard, Robert 160
Sherlock, Frank 270, 285
Shimoda, Brandon 309
Siegel, Nathaniel A. 14, 28, 295
Silem, Kasey 233
Silliman, Ron 3, 20, 32, 34, 50, 51, 241, 324
Sillman, Ron 1, 3, 32, 34, 50
Simone, Frank 313
Sinatra, Frank 344
Skoulding, Zoe 93
Sky, Tarpaulin 221
Smith, Dale 159
Smith, Harry 18, 93, 169, 219
Smith, Patricia 85, 179
Smith, Rod 337
Smither, Elizabeth 102
Smithson, Robert 117
Snyder, Gary 22, 78, 101, 115
Spears, Patricia 206, 308
Spence, Pete 313
Spicer, Jack 22
Spicer, John 265, 287, 299, 315, 330
Sprague, Jane 93
Spyker, James 291
Staiti, Erika 123
Stanley, Jared 344
Stanton, Rob 94
Steensen, Sasha 316
Stein, Gertrude 6, 193, 202, 230, 265
Steiner, Konrad 219
Stengel, Jill 93, 145
Stetser, Carol 313
Stewart, Christine 235
Stewart, Jon 197
Sullivan, Andrew 75
Svalina, Mathias 309
Sweeney, Chad 123
Swensen, Cole 233
Swift, Todd 95
Szymaszek, Stacy 35, 58, 81, 292
Tabios, Eileen R. 57, 96, 98, 102, 145
Taggart, John 213, 232
Taransky, Michelle 55
Tarn, Nathaniel 78, 101, 115
Taylor, Justin 309
Taylor, Tom 75, 212, 243, 333, 345
Tayson, Richard 14, 28, 295
Teare, Brian 233
Templeton, Fiona 297
Terry, Philip 340
Theater, Poets 290, 297
Thomas, Dylan 174, 206, 208, 308, 309, 327, 333
Thompson, George 160
Thorson, Maureen 93
Tieger, Aaron 154, 237
Timm, Steve 73
Toal, Jefferson 37
Topel, Andrew 153, 333
Toscano, Rodrigo 290
Trehy, Tony 160
Trigilio, Tony 96, 98, 102
Tucker, Aaron 217
Tufts, Kate 213, 232, 264, 305
Turner, Victor 2, 17, 63, 94, 202
Tyler, Richard 85, 179
Tysh, Chris 79
Tysh, George 79
Upton, Lawrence 333
Uschuk, Pamela 169
Vardaman, Wendy 96, 98, 102
Vassilakis, Nico 160
Vengua, Jean 96, 98, 102
Venturi, Robert 34
Veronica, Angela 345
Vickery, Ann 335
Vincenz, Marc 11
Viola, Bill 307
Virgil 212
Vogen, David 35, 58
Vogler, Brad 153
Waber, Dan 247
Wagner, Catherine 93
Waldman, Anne 169, 209, 241, 339

Waldman, Ken 169
Waldrop, Rosemary 132
Wallace, Nicole 270, 285
Walser, Robert 297
Walsh, Catherine 309
Warren, Kenneth 123
Washington, George 1, 3, 32, 34, 50, 191, 213, 222, 232, 249, 262, 263, 272, 344, 346
Watson, Carl 41
Watten, Barrett 4
Watts, Carol 160
Weaver, Andy 235
Wedde, Ian 335
Weeks, Laurie 295
Welch, Jen 140
Wertheim, Christine 78, 101, 115, 161
Whalen, Philip 22, 299
Whiting, John 213, 232, 264, 305
Whitman, Walt 94, 177, 243, 299
Wieners, John 22
Wilkinson, John 37, 303
Williams, Jonathan 22
Williams, Paul O. 326
Williams, Tyrone 196
Williams, William Carlos 174, 219, 243, 253
Willis, Elizabeth 147
Wilson, Judith E. 37, 303
Wilson, Karen 14, 28, 37, 160, 295, 324
Withers, Meg 96, 98
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 81
Wolach, David 301
Wolff, Christian 123
Woolf, Douglas 22
Wordsworth, William 161
Wright, C. D. 213, 232, 309
Yacht, Peter F. 197
Young, Mike 75
Young, Stephanie 79, 93, 123
Zawacki, Andrew 79
Zephaniah, Benjamin 75
Zolf, Rachel 14, 28, 295
Zroback, Jeff 11
Zukofsky, Louis 22, 222, 249

CONCEPTS

9/11 3, 20, 32, 34, 50
Activism and protest 204, 213, 232, 301, 311, 319, 320, 321, 327, 336
Aesthetics 1, 3, 4, 32, 34, 50, 143, 202, 262, 263, 272, 299, 315, 330
Afghanistan 315, 330, 346
African American poetry 213, 232
Anthologies 18, 66, 78, 80, 85, 94, 96, 98, 101, 102, 115, 145, 155, 163, 166, 176, 179, 183, 193, 200, 205, 210, 211, 213, 216, 221, 229, 230, 232, 255, 257, 260, 264, 265, 288, 290, 292, 297, 305, 309, 315, 330, 344, 345, 346
Appropriation 139, 144, 292, 301
Archives and libraries 19, 22, 56, 79, 89, 132, 149, 150, 151, 170, 177, 196, 201, 203, 248, 257, 260, 268, 274, 275, 276, 287, 325, 336, 338
Autobiography 174, 208, 213, 222, 232, 249, 264
Avant-garde 4, 193, 203, 208, 222, 230, 233, 249, 250, 254, 255, 256, 265, 271, 278
Beauty 13, 174, 207, 219, 228, 271, 278, 297, 311, 319, 320, 321, 327
Biography 150, 151, 174, 213, 232, 264
Black Mountain 292
Blogs 1, 3, 5, 7, 8, 14, 19, 20, 23, 26, 27, 28, 32, 34, 36, 38, 39, 48, 49, 50, 52, 53, 54, 56, 57, 61, 62, 68, 72, 78, 79, 80, 81, 90, 91, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 106, 110, 111, 112, 113, 115, 116, 118, 121, 122, 123, 124, 129, 130, 137, 145, 155, 158, 164, 166, 168, 172, 174, 175, 182, 188, 189, 190, 193, 197, 199, 200, 202, 207, 212, 213, 216, 217, 218, 220, 221, 230, 231, 232, 235, 240, 242, 252, 253, 256, 262, 263, 265, 270, 272, 273, 277, 280, 281, 284, 285, 290, 291, 292, 301, 310, 312, 313, 314, 315, 320, 325, 326, 328, 329, 330, 340, 342, 346
Book announcements 18, 46, 57, 92, 114, 115, 154, 213, 222, 232, 237, 241, 249, 264, 297, 303, 305, 315, 323, 330, 332, 346
Bookstores 99, 201, 212, 257, 260
Calls for submissions 4, 9, 45, 299, 344
Capitalism 125, 184, 185, 186, 187, 262, 263, 272, 283
Censorship 81, 257, 260, 315, 330, 346
Cities 2, 94, 123, 143, 194, 204, 221, 334
Climate 9
Close reading 56
Collage and montage 100, 114, 115, 213, 232, 339
Conceptual writing 82
Conferences and festivals 4, 9, 59, 60, 81, 99, 109, 161, 169, 185, 187, 209, 233, 242, 256, 283, 299, 335, 336, 340
Copyright and permissions 31, 292, 333, 344
Craft 13, 30, 72, 91
Creative writing pedagogy 81, 103, 119, 215
Dada 250, 254, 255, 271, 278
Deconstruction 162, 192, 201, 243
Difficulty 315, 330
Digital archives 70, 74, 117, 154, 163, 212, 237
Dreams 13, 123, 154, 208, 222, 228, 237, 249, 270, 271, 278, 285, 303
Ecology and ecopoetics 9, 71, 92, 162, 192, 201, 339
Editing 4, 11, 79, 96, 98, 102, 224, 234, 255, 257, 260, 292, 325

Ekphrasis 145, 212
Electronic poetry and hypertext 12, 60, 67, 147, 213, 232
Elegy 27
Empire and imperialism 213, 232, 264, 302, 305
Epic 79, 342
Epistemology 162, 192, 201
Erasure 160, 315, 330
Ethics 3, 20, 32, 34, 50, 288, 301
Experimental poetry 93, 155, 166, 193, 230
Fascism 88, 125, 276, 287, 315, 330
Feminism 9, 45, 143, 301, 310
Film 1, 3, 9, 32, 34, 50, 59, 72, 91, 94, 117, 143, 150, 151, 175, 195, 198, 207, 219, 262, 263, 272, 297, 339
Flarf 85, 152, 179, 233
Fluxus 256, 313, 340
Formalism 30, 85, 179
Futurism 315, 330, 339
Gender 45, 213, 232, 242, 292, 299, 339, 346
Ghazal 235
Globalization 9, 209, 241, 299
Grants and funding 9, 138, 152, 159, 162, 178, 192, 201, 213, 232, 332
Haiku 82, 185, 187, 218, 283, 333
Homophonic translation 239
Humour and satire 2, 45, 60, 291, 292, 334
Ideology 3, 20, 32, 34, 50, 299, 311, 319, 320, 321, 327
Improvisation 163, 194, 206, 219, 269, 279, 308
Interviews 2, 27, 48, 54, 75, 78, 79, 101, 106, 111, 115, 145, 196, 225, 311, 319, 320, 321, 327, 346
Israel and Palestine 34, 41, 265, 346
Jewish poetics 230
Language poetry 30, 94, 203, 299
Latino and Latin American poetry 176, 183, 205, 210, 211, 219, 229
Letters and correspondence 22, 323
List moderation 85, 179, 346
Little magazines 7, 11, 13, 40, 45, 48, 77, 78, 92, 93, 101, 109, 115, 123, 128, 133, 134, 139, 141, 142, 145, 155, 160, 166, 170, 171, 193, 195, 198, 202, 203, 212, 213, 214, 219, 221, 222, 223, 228, 230, 232, 235, 249, 251, 257, 260, 262, 263, 264, 272, 277, 284, 293, 297, 301, 304, 305, 310, 332, 339, 345, 346
Lyric poetry 13, 81, 145, 301, 344
Marxism 9, 262, 263, 272
Materiality of the text 198
Memory 11, 224, 234, 241, 255, 316, 346
MFA programs 54, 81, 103, 116, 149, 152, 154, 163, 213, 215, 232, 237, 264, 269, 305, 325, 332, 339
Modernism 208, 299
Mourning and loss 9, 11, 16, 212, 311, 319, 320, 321, 327
Music and poetry 2, 3, 6, 8, 10, 13, 18, 20, 25, 29, 30, 32, 34, 43, 50, 59, 82, 84, 85, 91, 94, 103, 117, 145, 152, 159, 164, 171, 179, 195, 198, 202, 206, 207, 212, 213, 219, 222, 232, 249, 256, 261, 264, 266, 286, 292, 293, 297, 303, 305, 308, 322, 334, 340, 344, 345
Nature 3, 9, 13, 20, 32, 34, 39, 50, 94, 155, 166, 170, 171, 193, 194, 195, 198, 207, 208, 228, 230, 265, 299, 315, 330, 339
Negativity and refusal 30, 171, 195, 198
New York School 30
Objectivism 222, 249
Ontology 79, 162, 192, 201
Performance and the poetry reading 14, 28, 37, 40, 47, 73, 92, 94, 99, 112, 116, 143, 145, 149, 163, 169, 191, 198, 213, 219, 224, 232, 234, 264, 303, 305, 336, 345
Philosophy 4, 9, 81, 163, 207, 339
Place and region 4, 113, 165, 194, 198, 222, 249, 299, 323
Poet laureate 336
Poetics 22, 27, 40, 78, 79, 81, 85, 92, 93, 101, 113, 115, 132, 143, 145, 155, 160, 161, 162, 163, 165, 166, 179, 182, 192, 193, 201, 202, 212, 230, 233, 259, 265, 277, 282, 284, 288, 297, 299, 307, 315, 330, 331, 332, 336, 338, 346
Politics and poetry 315, 330
Postmodernism 299
Print vs. digital 4, 14, 26, 28, 46, 60, 85, 92, 96, 98, 102, 132, 147, 158, 170, 174, 179, 190, 207, 209, 212, 221, 241, 250, 254, 255, 270, 271, 278, 285, 309, 338, 339
Prizes and awards 18, 30, 47, 66, 92, 99, 113, 116, 143, 145, 149, 152, 154, 174, 202, 206, 208, 212, 213, 219, 228, 232, 237, 264, 305, 308, 311, 319, 320, 321, 327, 344
Procedural and constraint writing 301, 330
Prose poem 221, 299
Prosody and meter 13, 301
Psychoanalysis 262, 263, 272
Queer poetics 14, 28, 81, 94, 213, 214, 232, 257, 260, 262, 263, 266, 270, 272, 285, 292, 293, 295
Race and poetry 63, 315
Reading announcements 37, 167, 180, 267, 273, 274, 275, 276, 280, 281, 282, 287, 288, 291, 294, 297, 298, 300, 306
Religion and the sacred 9, 16, 39, 45, 47, 79, 213, 232, 233, 242, 256, 264, 287, 301, 305, 310, 311, 315, 319, 320, 321, 327, 330, 339, 340, 346
Representation 288, 292, 299, 301

Reviewing and criticism 2, 3, 11, 20, 32, 34, 37, 40, 46, 48, 50, 66, 79, 92, 94, 99, 101, 107, 115, 116, 120, 145, 149, 174, 202, 208, 212, 213, 221, 232, 233, 241, 262, 263, 264, 272, 287, 291, 299, 301, 303, 305, 310, 315, 324, 325, 330, 332, 339, 346
Romanticism 78, 101, 115, 161
Science 9, 71, 339, 346
Semiotics 9, 12, 143, 292, 323
Serial poem 85, 145, 179, 222, 249, 299, 301
Small press publishing 2, 4, 7, 15, 18, 39, 46, 57, 79, 81, 90, 93, 99, 100, 114, 115, 145, 149, 152, 154, 163, 167, 169, 182, 197, 200, 202, 203, 212, 213, 216, 217, 220, 221, 232, 235, 236, 237, 239, 243, 247, 264, 291, 297, 299, 305, 334, 345
Social media 1, 2, 35, 58, 94, 145, 202, 242, 256, 270, 283, 285, 292, 293, 334, 340, 346
Software and code 199, 346
Sonnet 13, 30, 56, 333
Subjectivity 30, 66, 81, 92, 94, 129, 171, 195, 198, 262, 263, 272, 300, 307
Surrealism 233, 250, 254, 255, 271, 278, 315, 330
Terrorism 124, 129, 130, 311, 319, 320, 321, 327
The academy 6, 9, 12, 27, 30, 37, 54, 61, 76, 79, 81, 92, 98, 99, 103, 104, 105, 111, 112, 116, 119, 122, 124, 129, 130, 133, 140, 141, 142, 143, 145, 149, 152, 154, 155, 161, 163, 165, 166, 174, 192, 193, 201, 204, 208, 209, 211, 213, 215, 219, 221, 222, 224, 230, 232, 234, 237, 249, 253, 256, 257, 260, 264, 269, 284, 293, 297, 299, 305, 311, 315, 319, 320, 321, 325, 326, 327, 330, 335, 338, 339, 342, 344, 346
The body 221, 270, 285, 299, 301
The canon 162, 192, 201
The internet 61, 111, 119, 200, 207, 216, 326, 335, 339
The Iraq war 270, 285, 315, 330
The listserv 53, 54, 69, 79, 119, 155, 166, 193, 219, 230, 297, 305
The New Sentence 299
Theatre 8, 21, 35, 37, 39, 42, 58, 59, 79, 80, 81, 94, 103, 171, 195, 198, 207, 215, 219, 250, 254, 255, 271, 278, 290, 297, 303, 315, 330
Torture and Abu Ghraib 155, 166, 193, 230, 315, 316, 330, 346
Translation 8, 30, 57, 75, 78, 79, 82, 92, 101, 115, 145, 146, 152, 155, 161, 166, 193, 196, 206, 208, 219, 230, 239, 254, 257, 260, 271, 278, 308, 315, 330, 345, 346
Vietnam 299
Visual and concrete poetry 1, 3, 16, 29, 31, 32, 34, 50, 66, 67, 82, 117, 145, 153, 164, 165, 233, 239, 247, 300, 313, 315, 330
Visual art 1, 3, 28, 29, 32, 34, 42, 44, 50, 56, 59, 69, 81, 91, 94, 109, 112, 135, 145, 163, 165, 191, 195, 198, 207, 212, 213, 232, 315, 330, 341
Women's writing 68, 113

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 347 in all.

25 FEB 2010

1. steve dalachinsky — Re: event for tuli kupferberg
2. David Kirschenbaum — Last Call to Advertise in, Donate to Boog City 62

26 FEB 2010

3. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
4. Manuel Brito — CFP-SMALL PRESSES
5. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference sampler no. 5
6. Douglas Manson — Blake Talk w/Slides this Sunday
7. Susan Webster Schultz — _13 Ways of Looking at TheBus_ by Gizelle Gajelonia, (NEW chapbook …
8. joey — February update at www.newmystics.com
9. Dean Brink — Call for papers - Ecocriticism in Asia: Reorienting Modernity, Reclaiming Natu…
10. Alan Sondheim — JAZZ LOUNGE DATE COMING UP ON TUESDAY! (please announce)

27 FEB 2010

11. Asian Cha — Cha: An Asian Literary Journal #10 is HERE.
12. derek beaulieu — new from NO press: Peter Jaeger's SEMINAR XVII
13. Camille Martin — Camille Martin's Sonnets
14. CA Conrad — Poets at The Poet’s Salon The Rainbow Book Fair
15. Eric Elshtain — New Beard of Bees Chapbook
16. Jim Andrews — brodeur's last bat and the glove from above

28 FEB 2010

17. Regina Pinto — Project AlphaAlpha has now 365 letters A on line!
18. Bob Heman — Katrinka Moore, Bob Heman, Moira T. Smith - tuesday at 6:00 at Cornelia St. Cafe
19. Adam Fieled — Dune Rose: The Poems of Susan Wallack
20. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: S Beckett vs. ron silliman
21. steve russell — Ron (Dixie Chick?) Sillman
22. Steve Clay — Selections from the Library of Robert Creeley of Interest to Literary and Art …
23. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference sampler no. 6
24. Bill Berkson — Nowheremag.org
25. Alan Sondheim — More beautiful music/words (don't forget the Jazz Lounge Tuesday)
26. CA Conrad — 7 west coast events...

1 MAR 2010

27. Susan Webster Schultz — recent blog posts by Tinfish Editor
28. steve dalachinsky — matthew shipp solo at tribes gallery
29. aslongasittakes — Open Call for Visual Poetry: accepting art experiments in the space betwe…
30. cris cheek — Lee Ann Brown in Oxford, Ohio
31. Amanda Earl — AngelHousePress wants poems for Nat'l Poetry Month by March 15
32. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
33. Andy Gricevich — Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
34. steve russell — Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
35. Poetry Project — Service for David Nolan
36. Andy Gricevich — Cannot Exist no.6 is out!
37. Justin Katko — Manson and Toal: Friday 5 March: Cambridge, UK
38. Samuel Wharton — Fwd: sawbuck 4.1
39. Hand Held Editions — Series 3 - Hawkey/O'Brien/Nature Theater of Oklahoma

2 MAR 2010

40. Tim Peterson — EOAGH Reading Series: Spring 2010
41. steve dalachinsky — BUK LIVES
42. Paul Nelson — Michael McClure in Seattle
43. steve dalachinsky — Re: JAZZ LOUNGE DATE COMING UP ON TUESDAY! (please announce)
44. steve dalachinsky — Re: correction matthew shipp solo at tribes gallery
45. Eric Hoffman — Call for Papers
46. Christophe Casamassima — Ore by Christophe Casamassima (twentythreebooks)
47. Sarah Sarai — Karin Rudolph, Sarah Sarai, Saag Paneer: 5:30 pm, Sun., 3/7, NYC, Bengal Curr...
48. Jeffrey Side — "Impolitic: Kent Johnson's Radical Hybridity" -- a review
49. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference sampler no. 7
50. steve russell — Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
51. steve russell — Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
52. amy king — Non-poet reads poetry!
53. amy king — Women artists / poets
54. Michael Tod Edgerton — Re: Women artists / poets
55. William Allegrezza — Series A: Taransky and Shaw this Wed.
56. Camille Martin — new at Rogue Embryo

3 MAR 2010

57. Anny Ballardini — A Haiti Fundraiser with Complimentary New Book by Eileen R. Tabios
58. Marc Nasdor — Re: Service for David Nolan
59. Ram Devineni — China: Bookworm International Literary Festival
60. Mark Young — Out from Otoliths—Mark Young's Genji Monogatari
61. Al Filreis — PoemTalk #29: Armantrout, Dinh & Devaney on Kit Robinson
62. amy king — “...damned mob of scribbling women”
63. Regina Pinto — AlphaAlpha is ready!
64. Paul Siegell — Re: Out from Otoliths—Mark Young's Genji Monogatari
65. Amanda Earl — Some Green Words-latest essay from AHP
66. Carol Novack — FICTION & POETRY CONTEST

4 MAR 2010

67. Jim Andrews — "Digital Duende: Reading the Rasp in E-Poetry" by Amanda G. Michaels
68. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference, sampler no. 8
69. amy king — Re: Women artists / poets
70. Adam Fieled — New Apps on PennSound
71. Jim Andrews — abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz for iPhone and iPod touch by Joerg Piringer
72. amy king — Query - Poem Commissions?
73. Andy Gricevich — madison: friday, march 5th: the WITH PRAWN SHAPED POETRY READING
74. Ruth Lepson — Re: New Apps on PennSound
75. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Issue Eight of Eleven Eleven Now Up!
76. Betsy Andrews — ESL Teaching Job in New Jersey
77. Nathalie Malek — Managing Editor Position - BOMB Magazine
78. Jerome Rothenberg — horse songs complete, an interview, & new blog postings
79. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project
80. Patrick F. Durgin — Don Share on Bunny Lang
81. Tim Peterson — Tendencies 3/9: kaufman, Martin, & Dick
82. derek beaulieu — CHAINS by derek beaulieu (very few copies remaining)
83. Lars Palm — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
84. mIEKAL aND — New from Xerox Sutra Editions: SEARCHIX by mIEKAL aND
85. Corey Frost — Multiformalisms: A Public Conversation at the GC
86. Gwyn McVay — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

5 MAR 2010

87. Adam Katz — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

88. Nana Zabic — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
89. Joel Weishaus — "The Gateless Gate" Concluding Pages
90. Rob McLennan — above/ground press: state of the union,
91. Naomi Buck Palagi — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
92. Mark DuCharme — FW: Stratford Park Reading Series: SCHELLING & ANDERSON, March 30th
93. Jennifer Karmin — Dusie Kollektiv: new poetry online

6 MAR 2010

94. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City 62 Print and Online PDF Editions Available
95. Jeffrey Side — Poems on Todd Swift's blog
96. Anny Ballardini — the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology
97. Carrie Etter — Our penultimate offering, Infinite Difference sampler no. 9
98. Obododimma Oha — Fwd: To Our Contributors - the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology
99. Rob McLennan — new from above/ground press: Marcus McCann
100. Martha Deed — New chap -- The Lost Shoe- Martha Deed
101. george spencer — Re: horse songs complete, an interview, & new blog postings
102. Anny Ballardini — Re: the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology

7 MAR 2010

103. Nicholas Karavatos — Faculty Positions and Department Head for the Department of Visual and...
104. Nicholas Karavatos — Department of English, Faculty Posts in ESP and EST
105. Nicholas Karavatos — Department of English, Faculty Posts in Literature
106. Jeffrey Side — Interview with Tom Clark
107. george spencer — Review of Susan Maurer's perfect dark
108. { brad brace } — WATERS COLOURS
109. John Tranter — China: Bookworm International Literary Festival

8 MAR 2010

110. Carrie Etter — The final Infinite Difference sample, no. 10: Frances Kruk's concrete poem, ...
111. Al Filreis — Susan Howe by live video stream - interactive webcast - March 23
112. Ann Stephenson — <<BRUCE COVEY>> READY SET READINGS at Whitespace Gallery
113. amy king — From Ron Silliman's post on International Women's Day

9 MAR 2010

114. steve dalachinsky — 3 new chaps out from propaganda press/alternating current
115. steve dalachinsky — Re: horse songs complete, an interview, & new blog postings
116. Paul Siegell — Mar 9th! Poets Bojan Louis and Matt Shindell @ the Bubble House
117. UbuWeb — Marjorie Perloff Picks UbuWeb’s Top Ten for March 2010
118. amy king — How to Say What You Haven't Yet
119. Obododimma Oha — The Listserv and the Least Served
120. Laura Hinton — Re: From Ron Silliman's post on International Women's Day
121. amy king — On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...
122. Jonathan Ball — Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...
123. Dan Glass — With + Stand 4: the Lisa Robertson Issue
124. Stephen Ellis — Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...
125. amy king — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
126. amy king — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
127. Catherine Daly — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
128. Mary Kasimor — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
129. Crane's Bill Books — Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...
130. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...

10 MAR 2010

131. steve dalachinsky — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
132. Nana Zabic — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

133. J.P. Craig — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
134. Jonathan Ball — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
135. Jack Foley — FlashPoint DAVID JONES SPECIAL Now Up!
136. Dan Glass — steven fama
137. amy king — Somebody likes me after all...
138. Peter Grant — Fran Herndon
139. amy king — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
140. Jonathan Ball — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
141. Mary Kasimor — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
142. Stephen Ellis — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
143. blacksox — Tonight in Orlando Adeena Karasick
144. Catherine Daly — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

11 MAR 2010

145. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City Goes West Redux, This Wed.
146. Jesse Glass — Ahadada Books Presents the Prague Issue of Ekleksographia
147. Charles Bernstein — NY launch for All the Whiskey in Heaven: Selected Poems
148. mIEKAL aND — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
149. Sharon Dolin — Cornelia Street Reading on March 24th
150. Mark Melnicove — Bern Porter exhibit and event at MoMA and Esopus
151. mIEKAL aND — Lost and Found: The Work of Bern Porter from the Collection of The Museum of M…
152. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart — Cecilia Woloch and Sharon Mesmer at Bowery Poetry Club
153. William Allegrezza — New Issue of Moria

12 MAR 2010

154. Noah Eli Gordon — NYC reading 3/21 @ Zinc
155. David Chirot — Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
156. Nana Zabic — Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
157. Gerald Schwartz — 25 questions: question # 1…
158. Anny Ballardini — ARAKAWA & GINS
159. Cheryl Pallant — Cheryl Pallant & Grant Jenkins reading
160. Stephen Vincent — Ekleksographia - Get Ready!
161. Jerome Rothenberg — In Preparation for a Visit to Mount Aso & a Round of Renshi
162. Alan Sondheim — Re: 25 questions: question # 1…

13 MAR 2010

163. Tim Peterson — EOAGH presents (on 3/16) Jon Cotner, Andy Fitch, and John Harkey
164. David Chirot — Invitation to participate in Chirot Zero Zine An Anarkeyology of hand eye ea…
165. Jim Andrews — POET PIRATE NETBOT by Kedrick James
166. steve dalachinsky — Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
167. Kate Eichhorn — Angela Carr and Akilah Oliver - Reading (March 19)
168. Halvard Johnson — Re: 25 questions: question # 1…
169. Tenney Nathanson — Tucson Festival of Books: Bernstein Waldman Notley Berssenbrugge etc etc…
170. { brad brace } — Grenadines: a travel journal
171. David Chirot — re Ekleksographia - Get Ready!
172. peter ganick — (no subject)
173. Peter Grieco — Re: WATERS COLOURS
174. Aldon Nielsen — Raves for Rae
175. Stephen Vincent — New Lorine Niedecker Film!!!
176. William Allegrezza — Younger Italian-American Poets
177. Lynn Xu — CANARIUM WEST COAST READING TOUR
178. Evelyn Posamentier — Very OT: Californians for Education Funding (much apologies for cross…

15 MAR 2010

179. Corey Frost — Multiformalisms: This Tuesday, 6:30 at the CUNY Grad Center.
180. Jesse Glass — Ahadada Books Presents: Ekleksographia: William Blake's Haptic Tea Party--Now...
181. Gerald Schwartz — 25 questions/ # 2
182. Rob McLennan — how does one begin? a poetics at turning forty
183. Emma Bolden — Re: Younger Italian-American Poets
184. amy king — Would you buy art? A poem?
185. Maria Damon — Re: Would you buy art? A poem?
186. susan maurer — Re: Would you buy art? A poem?
187. Gregg Murray — Re: Would you buy art? A poem?
188. Halvard Johnson — Re: 25 questions/ # 2
189. Stephen Vincent — Elecsographia - Sarah Saunders life & much more
190. CA Conrad — Lamantia's THE BLOOD OF THE AIR on the Vernal Equinox

16 MAR 2010

191. Bill Berkson — Berkson in Buffalo
192. Sarah Sarai — Re: 25 questions: question # 1...
193. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
194. Alan Sondheim — 4 hopeful pieces with descriptions
195. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: re Ekleksographia - Get Ready!
196. Aryanil Mukherjee — Update-5 @ KAURAB Online Translation Archive
197. Rob McLennan — new from above/ground press; pfyc#14
198. Stephen Vincent — Re: re Ekleksographia - Get Ready!
199. Regina Pinto — News
200. Dan Wilcox — New Chapbook by Dan Wilcox from Benevolent Bird Press
201. Alan Sondheim — Re: 25 questions: question # 1...
202. David A. Kirschenbaum — Boog City presents Cannibal Books and The Briars of North America
203. Margaret Konkol — SUNY Buffalo S M A L L P R E S S in the A R C H I V E Kaplan Harris
204. Margaret Carson — Margaret Randall in Conversation at the GC
205. George Bowering — Re: Younger Italian-American Poets

17 MAR 2010

206. steve dalachinsky — readings etc
207. Jim Andrews — Net Art and the Fireflies of Eternity
208. Sam Ladkin — Reading in UCC (Cork) by Ian Patterson and Jenny Diski
209. Tenney Nathanson — new Chax book; upcoming readings this week in Vancouver, Seattle
210. Nana Zabic — Re: Younger Italian-American Poets
211. Mairead Byrne — Re: Younger Italian-American Poets
212. Michael Heller — (no subject)
213. amy king — This Friday, March 19 @ 7 p.m. with Jillian Brall, R. Erica Doyle, Adam Fieled, ...

18 MAR 2010

214. Daniel Remein, Editor — New from WHISKEY & FOX
215. Shankar, Ravi (English) — Tuition Scholarship to MFA Program in Hong Kong
216. susan maurer — Re: New Chapbook by Dan Wilcox from Benevolent Bird Press
217. Rob McLennan — five new above/ground press poetry chapbooks,
218. Joel Weishaus — Poetica Blog
219. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project
220. Jonathan Morse — Advertise small press books on e.g. Bravo or Ovation?
221. Jennifer Karmin — Red Rover Series / what's new in 2010?
222. Bruce McPherson — New Ted Enslin book

19 MAR 2010

223. Robert Dewhurst — satellite telephone #3

224. Tim Peterson — EOAGH presents Barbara Henning and Simon Pettet
225. mIEKAL aND — Interview with Malok (1997) at Dreamtime Village
226. Gerald Schwartz — 25 questions: question # 3...
227. Jeffrey Side — Linda Russo contact email?
228. blacksox — Sadly Sondra Ball has moved on...
229. steve russell — Re: Younger Italian-American Poets
230. steve russell — Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
231. Vernon Frazer — New Work from Vernon Frazer
232. amy king — TONIGHT @ 7 p.m. in the gorgeous just-about-summer air, come to Goodbye Blue Mon...
233. Evan Munday — Denver's Cross-Border Avant-Garde Extravaganza - an off-site AWP event
234. Tim Peterson — Henning and Pettet CORRECTION: Time is 2 PM, not 7 PM

20 MAR 2010

235. Rob McLennan — Douglas Barbour at 70; feature at Jacket magazine
236. David A. Kirschenbaum — Advertise in Boog City 63
237. Noah Eli Gordon — Zinc Bar reading: Carr, McCann, Gordon this Sunday 630pm
238. Vernon Frazer — Fading Melody by Vernon Frazer
239. derek beaulieu — new from NO press: 3 chapbooks
240. Camille Martin — new at Rogue Embryo
241. charles alexander — review of Jane Sprague's Port of Los Angeles
242. Philip Meersman — Invitation: BruSlam 21/03/2010 met/avec/with Marc Tiefenthal & Jibé @Gale...
243. Lewis Warsh — A Place in the Sun / Book Party

21 MAR 2010

244. ian davidson — +Hi+
245. Randolph Healy — New from Wild Honey Press
246. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: 25 questions: question # 3...
247. J. Michael Mollohan — Dan Waber does it again.
248. Alan Sondheim — Re: 25 questions: question # 3...

22 MAR 2010

249. Bruce McPherson — New Ted Enslin book
250. Alan Sondheim — Michael, who I never knew
251. steve russell — Old/still great/ Frederick Seidel
252. amy king — Passing of Ai [Florence Anthony -- October 21, 1947 – March 20, 2010]
253. Aldon Nielsen — Re: Passing of Ai [Florence Anthony -- October 21, 1947 – March 20, 2010]
254. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: Michael, who I never knew
255. Kevin Killian — Re: Michael, who I never knew
256. Sam Ladkin — FOOL'S ERRAND FESTIVAL
257. Mark Weiss — Boasting rights
258. amy king — Thinking about the Gurlesque today...
259. Lance Blomgen — Re: trouble posting
260. Maureen Robins — Re: Boasting rights

23 MAR 2010

261. Alan Sondheim — Two Tunes: Well I was thinking of George Russell
262. Francis Raven — A New Journal: The Short Movie Review: Please Submit!
263. Francis Raven — A New Journal: The Short Movie Review: Please Submit! WITH URL: http://thes...
264. amy king — This Friday, March 26th @ 7 p.m. -- Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, ...
265. steve russell — Rothenburg/Chirot/Outsider poetics/The Bourgeoisie? The Bohemian?
266. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Thinking about the Gurlesque today...
267. Gerald Schwartz — 25 questions, #4...
268. amy king — More on Ai from the Poetry Foundation

269. Laura Wetherington — textsound's special issue featuring Jon Cotner and Andy Fitch
270. CA Conrad — WE ARE 7
271. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Michael, who I never knew 272. Ryan Daley — Re: A New Journal: The Short Movie Review: Please Submit! WITH URL: http://the…

24 MAR 2010

273. Halvard Johnson — Re: 25 questions, #4...
274. Alan Sondheim — Re: 25 questions, #4...
275. John Cleary — Re: 25 questions, #4...
276. David Chirot — Re: 25 questions, #4...
277. Catherine Daly — Re: Rothenburg/Chirot/Outsider poetics/The Bourgeoisie? The Bohemian?
278. Ruth Lepson — Re: Michael, who I never knew
279. Jon Cotner — textsound's new issue: "Improvisations 2006-2010"
280. George Bowering — Re: 25 questions, #4...
281. Halvard Johnson — Re: 25 questions, #4...
282. Allan Revich — Re: 25 questions, #4...
283. David Seaman — Re: Would you buy art? A poem?

25 MAR 2010

284. steve dalachinsky — Re: Rothenburg/Chirot/Outsider poetics/The Bourgeoisie? The Bohemian?
285. steve dalachinsky — Re: WE ARE 7
286. Alan Sondheim — Porter (solo oud)
287. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: 25 questions, #4...
288. Nicholas Ravnikar — Re: 25 questions, #4...
289. steve russell — Re: 25 questions: question # 3...
290. Patrick F. Durgin — David Hadbawnik on Diane di Prima
291. Rob McLennan — the ottawa small press book fair, june 26
292. amy king — Riot Grrrl, Burlesque Gurlesque, Describing / "Outlining" / defining Poetries, Q…
293. David Kirschenbaum — rent-a-beatnik and voice photographer fred mcdarrah
294. steve russell — Re: 25 questions, #4...
295. amy king — Poet’s at The Poets Salon
296. Margaret Konkol — anything anymore anywhere spring 2010 out now!!
297. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
298. Paul Nelson — Re: 25 questions, #4...
299. Louis Cabri — Call for papers [please circulate!]: Symposium on the Alphabet 300. Jim Andrews — Re: 25 questions, #4...
301. Pam Brown — review a poetry book for Jacket magazine?

26 MAR 2010

302. Alan Sondheim — Porter2
303. Justin Katko — CRS : Joyce and Mobarak : Friday 2 April
304. Kevin Killian — Re: anything anymore anywhere spring 2010 out now!!
305. amy king — Reminder - TONIGHT - March 26, Friday ~ Jessica Bozek, Melissa Broder, Jackie Cl…
306. Skip Fox — Re: 25 questions, #4...
307. Deborah A. Meadows — FW: Deborah Meadows' "How, the means"
308. steve dalachinsky — Readings
309. Jen Tynes — Release of New Pony
310. Pam Brown — Thanks from Jacket and one title remaining for review

27 MAR 2010

311. Nicholas Karavatos — "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
312. Jonathan Morse — Jonathan Morse blogs about words and images
313. mIEKAL aND — Fwd: Fluxus Assembling box Nr 2

314. Stephen Vincent — Haptic +Writing International Event
315. David Chirot — Re: 25 Questions, #4 . . .

28 MAR 2010

316. Jonathan Minton — Word For/Word #16
317. Jeffrey Side — Contact email address needed for Joanne Kyger
318. amy king — One more on Ai - NYT
319. Mary Kasimor — Re: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
320. Halvard Johnson — Re: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
321. carol dorf — Re: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"

29 MAR 2010

322. Jake Marmer — Passover Jazz Poetry
323. peter ganick — It's Only Po-Et-Ry [apologies for cross-posting]
324. mIEKAL aND — Abecedarium by Peter Lamborn Wilson
325. Iris Law — Poetry Prompt Contest - Deadline April 1
326. Al Filreis — PoemTalk #30 released today: "the poem is remembering me"
327. Thomas savage — Re: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
328. Stephen Vincent — Re: Writing and Cars (Creeley edition)
329. Paul Siegell — "hot pepper people"
330. steve russell — Re: 25 Questions, #4 . . .
331. amy king — My Final Word on the Gurlesque ...
332. William Slaughter — Notice: Mudlark
333. peter ganick — 30 chalk editions titles. 10 are new. [apologies for cross-posting].

30 MAR 2010

334. David Kirschenbaum — Last Call to Advertise in, Donate to Boog City 63
335. Lisa Samuels — Home & Away Poetry Symposium 2010
336. steve russell — Fw: The Lannan Literary Symposium and Festival @ Georgtown, April 6 & 7, f...
337. Dan Glass — email address fr Rod Smith
338. charles alexander — Fwd: rental in Lo Que Pasa
339. Cara Benson — Moles Not Molar Predictions Event Friday - Philly
340. Sam Ladkin — Fool's ERRAND Festival - 1st April 2010, UCC, Ireland
341. twshaner — Correction: Kit Robinson reads in Eugene this Saturday, April 3
342. Susan Webster Schultz — recent Tinfish Editor blog posts
343. cris cheek — post_moot 2010

31 MAR 2010

344. Shankar, Ravi (English) — Call For Submissions: Poems wanted for a Sammy Cahn anthology
345. Tim Peterson — EOAGH Reading Series 4/4: Lamoureux, Vermeulen, and Wong
346. David Chirot — "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
347. amy king — "Charge Hell with a Bucket of Water"

1. steve dalachinsky

Re: event for tuli kupferberg

Thu 25 Feb 2010

---

sorry this event is full ignore the part aout you can read but please come as an audience member if ya can On Thu, 25 Feb 2010 15:40:25 +0530 steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>
writes:
> Dear All,
> Please come to the reading/event for Tuli. Should be lots of fun, > interesting, joyous, kind of like Tuli, right. We have a full roster
> of > people reading/performing so you should plan to be on stage for > approximately ten minutes. The work you present should either be > something created by Tuli, or inspired by/related to him.
>
>
> The event is at The Bowery Poetry Club (308 Bowery) on Saturday, > March
> 6th, from 8 PM until 11 PM. Admission is $10, which will go to Tuli
> to > assist with his medical expenses. As there are other bookings both > prior > to and following, we need to run a tight ship.
> There is a facebook page publicizing the event, along with flyers > around > town. In addition, I've contacted The Voice, The Villager, Time Out,
> The > NY Post, The NY Times, and several other media outlets. The club > will be > filled, we want to put on a good show, one which will honor Tuli.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> On Tue, 23 Feb 2010 12:35:10 -0800 steve russell > <[redacted]>
> writes:

> > ... since I lack the proper credentials to enter into the > vanguard > > chambers of Ron Sillman's mind, and since I'm working on a > borrowed > > computer, my blog time is nearly nil ...
> >
> > perhaps Sillman's post was simply about the workings of American
> > poetry.
> > had nothing to do with Beckett.
> > still, dramatic monologues are sort of ...
> > i mean, Seasons in Hell is more or less...
> >
> > ... of course, as chief curator at the bureau of ill-advised > verbs,
> > I > > could have said that since Beckett, all contemporary writings > SEEM
> > little more than a hopeless quest ... having neglected to say > > Seems,
> > having said what i said, it seems that I'm 1st in line for a > > promotion
> > due to the very thing I did say.
> >
> >
> >
> > _____
> > From: steve russell <[redacted]>
> > To: [redacted]
> > Sent: Mon, February 22, 2010 3:23:25 PM
> > Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
> >
> > ... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing > > with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words
> on > > film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the > > rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more > than
> > ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem > > with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and > > that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of > > principles.
> >

> >
> >
> > ----- Forwarded Message ----
> > From: steve russell <[redacted]>
> > To: [redacted]
> > Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
> > Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
> >
> > ... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a > > minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the > > ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.
> >
> > But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still,
> > consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...
> >
> > Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the > > writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation
> (
> > mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for > > novelty. Still, as we're > > hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is
> a > > tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why > not?
> > Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA)
> ...
> > Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C.
> pub
> > (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >

> >
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

2. David Kirschenbaum

Last Call to Advertise in, Donate to Boog City 62

Thu 25 Feb 2010

Please forward

Boog City's 62nd issue
Wants to spread the word about your latest offerings and events
and say a great big hello to each and everyone of you

So Help Us Help You (and Help Us, too)
By Placing a Lovely Advertisement
(We're also cool with donations, real cool.)

The issue will feature:

*Scott MX Turner on the saga of the Atlantic Yards project in Brooklyn

*The printed matter section with an interview of John Coletti and a review of his first perfect-bound book

*Our Urban Folk music section with a review of The Shivers and a piece on valuing songs in the digital age

*Poems from the Bay area, with new work from Albert Flynn DeSilver, Joseph Lease, and Rachel Loden

*Art from Jen P Harris

*And a Jim Behrle comic

Deadlines

—Space Reservations-Email to reserve ad space ASAP

—Thurs. March 4-Submit Ad or Ad Materials
—Sat. March 6-Distribute Paper

We'll be distributing 2,250 copies of the issue throughout the East Village and other parts of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and at Boog City events.

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. The discount rate also applies to larger ads. There are also discounts available to previous and repeat advertisers.

For our full rate card, please visit:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664) for more information.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

3. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Fri 26 Feb 2010

---

dear Steve:

i noted that you begin with criticizing Silliman's remarks someplace (it wasn't indicated precisely where/when on the blog) of dramatic monologue--is this critique re Browning, Pound, Lowell??--(i gather from your remarks it is most definitely the last named--that is involved)--is it a critique of a specific dramatic monologist or dramatic monologists in general, in the English language, to be sure, it goes without saying---?

i rarely read Silliman's blog; my impression is very often that it in itself is a long long ongoing extended and if not necessarily completely/always a "dramatic" monologue, then most certainly an extended rhetorical monologue--

i gather that perhaps the soliloquy is NOT tossed in with the dramatic monologue??--

might David Antin be considered a dramatic monologist?--how about the creator of Swimming to Cambodia?--sections of Jackson MacLow or Lorine Niedecker?--Hannah who saw words?-- there is a great deal of Silliman's blog, going by what i have read, that could be considered basically among the more rhetorical forms of dramatic monologue--

are stream of consciousness monologues such as molly Bloom's among the detested "dramatic monologues?"-- is a specific definition of dramatic monologue given that is being applied?-- let me know the particular passages of which you write--

are narrators such as Conrad
's Marlowe types of "dramatic monologists?--"

how about the extended solos taken by Jazz and blues, rock'n'roll musicians-classical artists---are these form of dramatic monologue? soliloquies?--

are certain Ballad forms "dramatic monologues?"--

are "criticism" and "reviewing" and "literary memoirs" of the Silliman variety not so much providing "critical, essay, researched theorizing, etc" thinking, but instead providing the reader with a form of rhetorical dramatic monologue with intentions of being the "final word" rather than the "opening words," opening that is outwo/ard, away from the monologue and pointing also away from the author & monologues' themselves towards an expanding area of questions, of ways of writing, of thinking, of encouraging DIY (do-it-yourself) in an inspirational/exemplary manner???--

please note i am not trying to start an argument(s) but hoping to open the questions and observations up, towo/ards more questions and areas--re the topics--

isn't perhaps Silliman's blog also a form of "confessional writing?"--as with much contemporary avant writing, so often concerned with the "confessional" aspect of writing re one's memories, life, jobs, favorite tv shows, pastimes, book lists, etc --with "events and behaviors, thoughts, attitudes, emotions since 9/11???"--

is the blog in itself not a form of confessional writing, even when essaying to restrict the blog writings to "literary thoughts?"--as these are bound up with the personal, the subjective, "the 'I'"--?? with ethical judgments on Good and Evil--

aren't often things that a particular poet, writer, is very concerned with making a critique of from a more or less subjective viewpoint--are not these often simply the projections of aspects of ones' self, one's character, thoughts, on to others and their thoughts, viewpoints?--is this part of the seemingly endless dividing up of writers, poets, forms of writing in to the US Goverment style of "Good vs Evil"? rhetoric and propaganda--and--what and why is this so important, this use of ethics as a form of literary criticism, in order to show oneself, one's group, one's Brand and Rebranded form of writing as the Good and others' as the Bad and the Ugly?--

why is for example "Opacity" in writing so Good--and transparency Bad--while the same person, poet may be crying for the Government to be "more transparent?"--esp when the nature of governmental rhetoric and ventures, plans are quite distinctly designed often to be of the most opaque nature?

in a sense--what could not be more transparent!! then the desire that one's words be opaque, while another's be transparent--

besides monologues, aren't there also stereologues, digitalogues--lincoln logs--blogalogs--logologues--egologues--ideologues--langologues--lingologues--jingologues--here alogue there a logue hear alogue their alogue . . . everyone everywhere alogues . . . lumberjack ologues..the o'logues of the o'paque alogues . . .onan ologues . . .

> Date: Wed, 24 Feb 2010 08:23:15 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
> To: [redacted]
>
> hey, i've read Sillman.
> admittedly, i'm not an authority on Sillman.
> that Sillman.
> those certain Sillman's that seem to haunt ...
>
> i said
> using a simple rhetorical device
> WHO
> is Ron Sillman???
>
> comparing Ron Sillman
> to Samuel Beckett
>
> (since Sillman thrashed Lowell

it seemed wisest to thrash Sillman
using Beckett
since it's impossible to thrash Beckett & who could stand such thrashings
by being so compared?)

... or, as i said earlier --
to further clarify aforementioned sayings
as well as previous postings ...

Robert Lowell
(is worth reading)
i remember Lowell
(i remember reading Lowell)

i've forgotten most of what i've read
i remember mostly
the stuff Lowell imitated
in "Imitatiions."

i rarely think about Sillman
i've forgotten most Lowellisms

i'm presently thinking about myself
& my next cigarette

From: sheila black <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, February 23, 2010 7:09:45 AM
Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

Look at the poem "Sunset Debris" by Ron Silliman. That thing drove me crazy (not literal) so I wrote a duplicate poem (just for myself) called "Ron Silliman Writes Poetry Like a Four Year Old Child" (never submitted!). However, for you bandwagonners, I also wrote a poem called "Ron Silliman is my Father" inspired by "The Chinese Notebook" also Ron Silliman. As for Beckett, "Waiting For Godot" need I say more. Maybe "Endgame."
Each of us has a say. S. Black
Sheila Black

--- On Mon, 2/22/10, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:

From: steve russell <[redacted]>

Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, February 22, 2010, 2:23 PM

... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of principles.

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...

Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

4. Manuel Brito
CFP-SMALL PRESSES
Fri 26 Feb 2010

Call for Papers (international conference, Université du Maine, Le Mans, France, 14-16 October 2010)

"Poets and Publishers: Circulating Avant-Garde Poetry (1945-2010)"

In the second half of the 20th century and the first decade of the 21st, the material conditions of avant-garde poetry's circulation have come to the attention of critics. With the development of reader-response theory, research about the poets' ways of informing the larger public of their experiments has come to encompass technical considerations, economic, social and political preoccupations. Small presses-not the vanity presses of former times-thus became the laboratories of the publishing world, picking up on the latest avant-garde movements.

How do these publishers, and the poets who entrust their works to them, contribute to poetic innovation in a publishing context marked by commercial decline of the book and the poem alike? To what extent do small presses convey aesthetic initiatives that would otherwise remain "readerless"? Could one talk, along with American poet Barrett Watten of a "systemic de-totalization" bringing about new configurations of the poetic landscape into networks and archipelagoes?

We are inviting papers that will risk answers to these questions in the context of a wider reflection on the publishing world, its margins and its objects, notably poetic texts inspired and shaped by the recent advances of sociology, philosophy and cultural studies. The aim is a global assessment of the circulation of avant-garde poetry.

300-word proposals in either English, French or Spanish to Hélène AJI (Université du Maine, France, [redacted]) and Manuel BRITO (Universidad de La Laguna, Canary Islands, Spain, [redacted]) by 31 March 2010.

Appel à contributions (colloque international, Université du Maine, Le Mans, France, 14-16 octobre 2010) :

"Poètes et éditeurs: comment diffuser la poésie d'avant-garde? (1945-2010)"

C'est dans les cinquante dernières années du 20e siècle et dans la première décennie du 21e siècle que les enjeux pratiques liés à la diffusion de la poésie d'avant-garde ont été pris en considération. Avec le développement de la théorie de la réception, les modalités par lesquelles les poètes sont en mesure de faire connaître leurs travaux et leurs expérimentations, dans leurs implications techniques, économiques, sociales et politiques, sont devenues l'objet de recherches plus intensives. Les presses à petit tirage, loin d'être les presses à compte d'auteur du passé, ont tenté de s'inscrire dans le paysage éditorial comme les laboratoires de l'avant-garde.

Comment ces éditeurs et les poètes qui leur confient leurs ouvres contribuent-ils à l'essor d'une poésie originale, dans un contexte éditorial souvent marqué par un recul commercial du livre et de la poésie ? Dans quelle mesure ces petites presses se font-elles les courroies de transmission d'initiatives esthétiques qui resteraient autrement sans lecteurs? Peut-on aller jusqu'à parler, comme le fait le poète américain Barrett Watten, d'une "dé-totalisation systémique" aboutissant à une restructuration du paysage poétique en réseaux et en archipels?

Nous invitons les communications qui tenteront d'apporter des éléments de réponse à ces questions, dans le cadre d'une réflexion portant sur le monde de l'édition, ses marges, et ses objets : des textes poétiques inspirés et informés par une connaissance intime des récentes innovations de la sociologie, de la philosophie, de la linguistique et des études culturelle visant une évaluation transnationale des enjeux de la diffusion de la poésie d'avant-garde.

Propositions d'environ 300 mots en français, en anglais ou en espagnol à Hélène AJI (Université du Maine, France, [redacted]) et Manuel BRITO (Universidad de La Laguna, Canaries, Espagne, [redacted]) avant le 31 mars 2010.

Solicitud de Ponencias (Congreso Internacional, Université du Maine, Le Mans, France, 14-16 de octubre 2010):

"Poetas y Editores: Divulgando la Poesía de Vanguardia (1945-2010)"

En la segunda mitad del siglo XX y en la primera década del siglo XXI las condiciones materiales relacionadas con la divulgación de la poesía de vanguardia han atraído la atención de los críticos. Con el desarrollo de la teoría crítica lector-respuesta, la investigación sobre las vías que los poetas utilizan para informar de sus experimentos al gran público ha abarcado consideraciones técnicas, económicas, sociales e incluso preocupaciones políticas. Las pequeñas editoriales-no aquellas que antiguamente exigían a sus autores pagar sus propios libros-se han convertido en laboratorios del mundo editorial y han logrado reunir a los últimos movimientos de vanguardia.

¿Cómo contribuyen los editores, y los poetas que les confían sus obras, a la innovación poética en un contexto editorial caracterizado por el declive comercial del libro y de la poesía? ¿Hasta qué punto las pequeñas editoriales son capaces de transmitir iniciativas estéticas que no saldrían a la luz si no fuera por ellas? ¿Se puede hablar, siguiendo al poeta americano Barrett Watten, de una "destotalización sistémica" que provocaría nuevas formas del paisaje poético convertido en sistemas reticulares y archipiélagos?

Invitamos a que se presenten ponencias que se arriesguen a contestar a estas preguntas en el contexto de una reflexión más amplia sobre el mundo editorial, sus márgenes y propósitos, y especialmente sobre textos poéticos que se han inspirado o elaborado a partir de los avances recientes de la sociología, la filosofía y los estudios culturales. El objetivo es una valoración global de la divulgación de la poesía de vanguardia.

Las propuestas de 300 palabras, tanto en inglés, francés como español, se deben dirigir a Hélène AJI (Université du Maine, Francia, [redacted]) y a Manuel BRITO (Universidad de La Laguna, Islas Canarias, España, [redacted]) antes del 31 de marzo de 2010.

↑ Index

5. Carrie Etter

Infinite Difference sampler no. 5

Fri 26 Feb 2010

---

consists of Frances Presley's "a" from Alphabet for Alina: http://carrieetter.blogspot.com . Comments encouraged!

↑ Index

6. Douglas Manson

Blake Talk w/Slides this Sunday

Fri 26 Feb 2010

Blake Lecture 2: Published Works

initial event for a series curated by Eric Gelsinger talk delivered by Douglas Manson with a reading of Blake's work

Sunday, February 28. 4:00 p.m.

99 Sutton Street #204, Greenpoint (Brooklyn)

in the American Cork Building, please ring the Kevorkian bell for entry

Blake is cool because he's a workshop for the mind of his readers, whether they be thinkers, poets or painters. His many works in text and design provide a generous supply of ideas for re-thinking artistic practice and performance. He came to full maturity in the midst of multiple revolutions, the results of which many would claim created our present social ideal of harmony as an enlightenment inheritance. Blake's work questions these assumptions at the level of art and poetry. The present lecture will focus on his art: the style, techniques and themes of engravings and books in which he intertwined language and visual design. I will be using two American examples as a way of comparing the kinds of attention viewers and readers have given him in recent decades: the poetry of Gertrude Stein, and the stories and graphic work found in titles published by Marvel Comics from the early 1970s to the early 1980s.

Douglas Manson is a freelance academic, writer and micropublisher. In 2004 he took a Ph.D. from U.Buffalo, and soon after started little scratch pad press and Celery Flute: The Kenneth Patchen Newsletter. He worries when his rice supply is getting low. Otherwise, he likes to make raucous music, fly kites and argue about contemporary definitions of good love with his friends in Brooklyn.

hope to see you there,

Doug

↑ Index

7. Susan Webster Schultz

13 Ways of Looking at TheBus by Gizelle Gajelonia, (NEW chapbook from Tinfish Press!)

Fri 26 Feb 2010

We are proud to announce imminent publication of _13 Ways of Looking at TheBus_, a fresh take on local transportation and modern and contemporary American poetry in English, Pidgin, and Filipino.

Details here: http://tinfishpress.com/chapbooks.html

Place an order and, while you're at it, take a look at our other offerings of books, chaps, and journal issues.

aloha, Susan M. Schultz Tinfish Editor

http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com
http://tinfishpress.com

↑ Index

8. joey

February update at www.newmystics.com

Fri 26 Feb 2010

We have a talented and varied group of contributors, both new and previous, at www.newmystics.com this month:

Frequent contributor ED BAKER's Hexapoems, a combination of art and poetry.

Frequent contributor JEAN-MARIE AVRIL has shared the first installment of his translation of Hirlas's "The King of Terror"

New contributors JOHN GARTLAND, RAYMOND NEELY, and FIONA SZE-LORRAIN offer their poetry.

New contributor MELISSA SILLITOE shares her short story "Your Eyes First"

Artist Alyssa Woodruff shares her fan art on the home page for Joey Madia's Jester-Knight.

Visit the links page for partnerships and collaborators both new and old.

Please visit our www.newmysticstheatre.com site for information on the social justice plays and bullying workshops that our two theatre companies are currently touring.

Visit www.newmysticscommunity.com to create a profile and join artists, writers, filmmakers, and theatre company members on our Community site.

Visit newmysticsreviews.blogspot.com to keep up with all the best from the independent press and indy music labels.

Over the next 6 months, you will begin to see changes being implemented for the whole New Mystics cyber-family. With the art and literary site, theatre companies in NJ and WV, and a new Center for Arts and Education opening in May/June in WV, we are in the process of making the New Mystics Universe easier to keep up with and navigate, even as we continue to expand and grow.

As always, thank you for supporting the well over 100 contributors, collaborators, theatre company members and staff that give so much to help New Mystics fulfill its missions to present the arts in all of their "infinite possibilities"!

As always, we encourage artists of all types, especially those with distinct Visions and Voices to contribute. Please visit our Submissions page for more information.

↑ Index

9. Dean Brink

Call for papers - Ecocriticism in Asia: Reorienting Modernity, Reclaiming Nature?

Fri 26 Feb 2010

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

As ecocriticism is a new and exciting field which you may be interested in, I hope you will consider participating in this conference which will include keynote addresses by many important senior scholars. Please see our Call for Papers below and circulate to associates who might take interest in this conference.

Sincerely yours,

Dean Brink
Assistant Professor/Conference Coordinator
English Department
Tamkang University
151 Ying-chuan Road
Tamsui, Taipei County
Taiwan 25137
[redacted], x2054
Email: [redacted]

- - -

The Fifth International Conference on Ecological Discourse
December 16-18, 2010
Tamkang University, Taipei County, Taiwan

CALL FOR PAPERS

Ecocriticism in Asia:
Reorienting Modernity, Reclaiming Nature?

Deadline for submission of abstracts: March 9, 2010
Response to submissions: April 15, 2010

Contributions are invited for Tamkang University's Fifth International Conference on Ecological Discourse. We seek papers that address Asian interests and contexts in terms of diversely contested approaches to "modernity" and "nature." Papers that are cross-disciplinary in purpose and scope are especially welcome. Such papers would intersect with a broad range of Asian environmental issues and concerns not limited to texts treated by scholars in the arts and humanities, including ecocritical projects and initiatives that intersect with biology, chemistry, economics, government policy, industry and technology, the social sciences, and the natural sciences. The conference aims to be representative of the many arguments emerging in ecocritical discourse, including debates within specialized fields of study as well as larger issues engendered by the crisis of human-caused climate change affecting various places in Asia. In addressing issues of modernity and nature in Asia, what can we gain by reassessing the conceptual tools—in the arts, literature and philosophy—that have been abandoned during centuries of colonialism and modernization? Are there places and communities in Asia that provide new models for development that could release the earth from the expanding hegemony of global capital?

TOPICS

We welcome proposals which reconsider modernity and nature in ecocriticism from an Asian-centered perspective. Possible topics include (but are not limited to) the following:

- ecocritical readings of Asian art, literature and film
- literature, philosophy and religion and Asian ecologies
- ecofeminism in Asia
- ecology (Asian ecosystems, invasive species/native species, toxicity, etc.)
- the impact of global warming in Asia
- economic and demographic studies addressing climate change, food, and species loss in Asia
- animal trafficking and animal rights in Asia
- bio/ecocentric public policy and political action in Asia
- ecocomposition and writing ecologies
- environmental justice/social justice/ecomarxism in Asia
- space, place, and globalisation
- biosemiotics
- ecotourism and ecopornography in Asia
- posthumanist readings of Asian art, literature and film including the applications of cyborg theory.

The conference is organized by the English Department at Tamkang University with the support of the Chemistry Department and the recently formed Association of the Study of Literature and Environment of Taiwan (ASLE-Taiwan).

ABSTRACT SUBMISSIONS

Proposals for individual papers and proposals for panels are both invited. Presenters are asked to prepare 20-minute (3,000-word) papers. Please submit your abstract in English or Mandarin (approx. 200 words). Send submissions in Mandarin or English to the organizing committee: [redacted].

Proposals in languages other than English will be considered if we can group these together in one or more panels.

ACCOMMODATIONS The historical town of Danshui is one of Taiwan's most famous tourist destinations, known for its winding brick roads and sunsets at the mouth of the Danshui River. The campus is just forty minutes by taxi from the international airport.

OTHER
Costs of registration and accommodation: these will be announced in April 2010. (Funding is currently being sought for bursaries to provide for some of these costs.)
Excursions: two optional, one-day excursions.

↑ Index

10. Alan Sondheim

JAZZ LOUNGE DATE COMING UP ON TUESDAY! (please announce)

Fri 26 Feb 2010

JAZZ LOUNGE DATE COMING UP ON TUESDAY!

ESP-Disk' LIVE @ The Jazz Lounge (Sucre Cafe)
520 Dakalb Avenue (Near Bedford Ave)
Brooklyn, NY 11205
G Train to Bedford/Nostrand

Tuesday, March 2nd, 2010

8:30 pm
Blaise Siwula & Bern Nix
Blaise Siwula - alto / tenor sax
Bern Nix - guitar

9:30 pm
Alan Sondheim
Alan Sondheim - electric oud / electric saz (or acoustic-electric oud or guitar or cura cumbus)
Azure Carter - vocals
Myk Freedman - lap steel (or guitar)

↑ Index

11. Asian Cha

Cha: An Asian Literary Journal #10 is HERE.

Sat 27 Feb 2010

---

http://www.asiancha.com

We are very pleased to announce that the February 2010 issue of Cha has now been launched. We would like to thank Gillian Sze, our first ever female guest editor, for reading the submissions with us and helping put the issue together. We would also like to thank our Reviews Editor, Eddie Tay, who has brought us a fine selection of reviews. The issue features a new editorial by Jeff Zroback titled "Thoughts of Trains; Trains of Thought".

The following writers/artists have generously allowed us to showcase their work:

Poetry: Anuradha Vijayakrishnan, Elizabeth Schultz, Daniel Bowman Jr., Michael O'Sullivan, Lucy Lu, Ocean Vuong, Mariejoy San Buenaventura, Papa Osmubal, Jean YeoJin Sung, Rocco de Giacomo, Selina Libi Bjorlie, Chris Tse, Angela Eun Ji Koh, Greg Santos, Lyn Lifshin, Marc Vincenz, Wena Poon and Richard Luftig

Fiction: Kimarlee Nguyen and Alka Khushalani

Photography & art: Steven Digman, Roberutsu (Cover artist), Papa Osmubal and Rohith Sundararaman

Reviews: Katherine Foster, Martin Alexander, Moira Moody, Hilary Chan Tsz-Shan, Michael Tsang, Alice Tsay and Phoebe Tsang who review the following books: Wena Poon's The Proper Care of Foxes, Felix Cheong's Sudden in Youth: New and Selected Poems, O Thiam Chin's Never Been Better, John Biggs' Tin Dragons, Gillian Bickley's China Suite and Other Poems, Rocco de Giacomo's Ten Thousand Miles between Us, C. P. Stewart's Taking it In, The Chicago-Kunming Poetry Group's on the no road way to tomorrow, Vera Schwarcz's Brief Rest in the Garden of Flourishing Grace: Poems of Remembrance and Loss by the Manchu Prince Yihuan, Kim Cheng Boey's Between Stations and Kim Echlin's The Disappeared

"Lost Teas": Ken Chau

Our eleventh issue is due out in May/June 2010. Poet Sam Byfield and writer E.K. Entrada will lend us their expertise in the role of guest poetry editor and guest fiction editor respectively. If you are interested in having your work considered for publication in Cha, please read our submission guidelines for details.

We hope you enjoy the new issue.

Tammy Ho Lai-Ming & Jeff Zroback Cha
http://www.asiancha.com

↑ Index

12. derek beaulieu
new from NO press: Peter Jaeger's SEMINAR XVII
Sat 27 Feb 2010

NO press is pleased to announce the publication of

Peter Jaeger's SEMINAR XVII

20 pages, sewn binding.
published in an edition of 40 copies (20 of which are for sale)
$5 each.

SEMINAR XVII is based on Lacan's seminar XVII, which has only recently been published in English for the first time. In this seminar, Lacan speaks about four discourses (master, university, hysteric, analyst). The master discourse is the underlying signifier that organizes all the others, and is taken either as the unified subject "I" or later, as impersonal bureaucracy. The university discourse bolsters up this sense of "I." The hysteric begins to question the master, and the analyst "coughs up" a new master signifier, in opposition to the"I."

for more information, or to order copies, please email:

derek beaulieu
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

13. Camille Martin
Camille Martin's Sonnets
Sat 27 Feb 2010

I’m pleased to announce the publication of my second full-length collection of poetry,

Sonnets

(Shearsman Books / Exeter, U.K.)
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html

“In her second book of poetry, Camille Martin breathes fresh life into the sonnet in a collection that is at once edgy and lyrical. The word ‘sonnet’ comes from ‘song,’ and the musicality of Sonnets is not surprising, given Martin’s background as a classical musician.

These poems demonstrate a virtuosic range of approaches and themes; some are inspired by texts as disparate as nursery rhymes, theories of cognitive science, a history of street names, and her own dream journals. The chorus of voices in this collection sing confidently and fluently, proving the sonnet to be an ideal vehicle for Martin’s love affair with language.” --Shearsman Books

“Sonnets is a delightful body of work. Even though we wander into the oblique there is never alienation . . . Incredible poetic craft.” --Stride Magazine

“Camille Martin's Sonnets bring the old form into the 21st century. In some ways, they are almost traditional; the speaker addresses a not-so-well beloved, a figure who occupies a ‘fraudulent elsewhere,’ an elusive lover or, more likely, another version of the poet herself. Identity theft is an issue here where we find ourselves ‘comatose in paradise but happy happy/feet! is this where I want to go? thrust/into an age unfavourable to being/a guest in one's own home?’ In these taut, fast-paced, self-aware poems, the lyric meets 21st century paranoia and sparks fly.” --Rae Armantrout

“In the tradition of the chansonnier, this collection of sonnets encompasses the sacred and the secular, tracing ‘perfection and fear’ across borders we may never have known were there or near. Martin, the virtuoso, welcomes the unsafe, perpetually-tested beauty, declaring that ‘i’m so/accustomed to frozen rivulets on rocks/i don’t see them anymore./now I do.’ These sonnets offer a geography of the possible, invoking questions, challenges, songs of praise, and fact. The miracle of these songs is a precision that earns infinity of choice, ‘even as we dissolve into the wilderness of my voice.’ Camille Martin’s poems shimmer with repetition deft as sweetest breath mid-spring.” --Sheila E. Murphy

“In Camille Martin’s Sonnets, the tongue knots the next line or drools with anarchists crouched in pentameter. Here language plays instants—a careful cadence pounding amok in the metric. In these poems we seep into fourteen layers of syllabic strata, our tonsils swollen and burlesque with visions of seducing Martin’s fluorescent incisions. Each of Martin’s syllables flood; both in geology and in mouths, and the image of course, that which tsunamis our own limits of language—such a pleasure and fear in the drench. Here, in this architecture of flood, gardens and grammar, the visitor stumbles and mouths disorient in the pleasure of ripe incoherence. What I want to say is that the language here hoards blooms or grips to the minute synaptic parasail’s that still are caught in weather systems when the reading is over. There is magnificence in these poems, a poetic magnetic, propelling you to turn the page.” --Jordan Scott

↑ Index

14. CA Conrad

Poets at The Poet's Salon The Rainbow Book Fair

Sat 27 Feb 2010

Poets at The Poet's Salon The Rainbow Book Fair

Saturday March 27th 11:30am-5:00pm

CUNY Graduate Center Fifth Avenue and 34th Street NYC

FREE ! OPEN TO THE PUBLIC !

COME HEAR ! a LGBTQ poetry reading series

coordinated/hosted by Nathaniel A. Siegel & Regie Cabico

present POETS:

Ana Bozicevic

Julian Brolaski

Steven Cordova

Mina Pam Dick

Jameson Fitzpatrick

David Garrett

Stephanie Gray

Scott Hightower

Paul Foster Johnson

Saeed Jones

Amy King

Bill Kushner

Jee Leong Koh

Gregory Laynor

Timothy Liu

Douglas A. Martin

David Messineo

Debrah Morkun

Angelo Nikolopoulos

Tim Peterson (Trace)

Elizabeth Reddin

Vittoriar repetto

Jason Roush

Moonshine Shorey

Richard Tayson

Vega

Ronaldo V. Wilson

Emanuel Xavier

Rachel Zolf

ALL reading their own poetry !

Also featuring poems from “persistent voices Poetry By Writers Lost to AIDS” edited by Philip Clark & David Groff, presented by Philip Clark

Poets books available for purchase !

additional poets to be announced (list as of 2/26/2010)

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

15. Eric Elshtain

New Beard of Bees Chapbook

Sat 27 Feb 2010

Maybe they are cheaper by the dozen...

vide: The Twelve Husbands of Citizen Jane, at http://www.beardofbees.com/olszewska.html

Best,

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

16. Jim Andrews
brodeur's last bat and the glove from above
Sat 27 Feb 2010

it was a game for the pucky ages: canada vs slovakia for a berth in the olympic gold medal game at the vancouver winter olympics of 2010. for the ages? ya sure. ah but the olympics are storied over ages.

the canadians dominated the first two periods, winning the first period 2-0 and the second period 1-0 with ryan getzlaf's goal, the 3-0 goal, which would prove to be the winner. the slovakians were to play a third period like few others we have seen in hockey before, with such skill and determination that the outcome of the game was not decided until the final horn blared and the vancouver audience went bonkers, absolutely bonkers with delight over the thrilling 3-2 game and its momentous outcome for the beleagured canuck squad recovered from their earlier loss to the usa and problems against much lower-rated clubs.

we learned that marian gaborick, the foxy slovak winger who plays for the new york rangers, makes plays behind his own back that are so clever and deceptive even he himself is caught by surprise.

we saw ryan getzlaf, the strongly emerging canadian star, execute the best backhand shot i have ever seen in my life from the slot into the top left corner of the slovakian net--a net manned like a human spider by jaroslav halak, the montreal canadiens's goalie. halak pounced like a hairy, heavily-padded spider around the net. only the truly bona fide unstoppable shots made it past halak.

we saw marian hossa, another of the wily slovak wingers, cause two canadians to crash into one another while hossa dipsy doodled past the keystone canadian defenders. but hossa did not score. while the two crumpled canadians dusted themselves off and got up quickly, other canadian defenders mobilized to deal with hossa's magic, and he didn't even get a shot on net, that time.

the first two canadian goals, in the first period, were both deflections of screen shots from well inside the blue line. halak stood no chance whatsoever. halak kept the slovakians in the game with brilliant save after brilliant save, while roberto luongo, the canadian netminder, was effective but not challenged to display the arachnoid quicksilver that the slovakian halak dazzled us with time after time.

the third period. o the third period and the glove from above. the story of the glove from above.

but, first, recall brodeur's last bat. in the qualification round, three games earlier, martin brodeur, the canadian national team's netminder since his brilliant 2002 gold medal performance in salt lake city, perhaps the most celebrated goaltender of all time, faltered in the canadian goal during a 5-3 loss to the usa. early in the game, the usamericans blazed past the center line and dumped the puck in, forcing brodeur to play it with his stick well out of his crease. brodeur batted the moving puck cricket-style, attempting to clear the zone. instead, the puck went directly to a usamerican forward who promptly shot it in the gaping canadian net. this fate was also to befall mikka kiprusof, the finnish goalkeeper, in the finnish-usa game, a startling reenactment of what appears to be a semi-planned play on the part of the usamericans: charge into the zone in the first minutes of the game, shoot the puck in in such a way as to force the goalie to come out and play the puck with the stick while the forwards close in with terrifying deadly speed. the usamericans have unmanned two of the best goalies in the game this way by forcing them to make big mistakes for very big, very bad goals. it rattled brodeur and it rattled kiprusof. more bad goals followed, in both cases, and the two celebrated goalies were chased from the net, ultimately and, very likely, from any further first-string status on their respective national teams. the usa won both those games against the canadians and the finns. the usa had their miracle on ice in the 1980 olympics; the game against finland was their massacre on ice. they clobbered the suddenly hapless and meek finns 6-0 in the first period and cruised to a 6-1 victory.

this changing of the guard opened up, in the canadian's case, the opportunity of a lifetime for roberto luongo, the backup canadian goaltender who had not previously played any key games for the biggest canadian national team. luongo did well enough in subsequent games with germany and russia, winning them both, to earn the start against slovakia in the semi-final. and the games were in vancouver, where luongo plays for the vancouver canucks in the nhl. in fact he is captain canuck, the only goalie captain of an nhl team. his rink. his crowd. his country. and what a luongo crowd. they chant "llllouuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuu" every time he makes a save, an awed and appreciative serenade of the canadian netminder every time he does anything. and they wail it with fervent devotion when he performs spectacular, sprawling, game-saving gymnastics on his keister.

the glove from above came with 9 seconds left in the game. the score was 3-2 for the canadians against the deadly slovaks who were pressing like vlad's overwhelming forces in upon the canadian net for a goal and a chance to play overtime. luongo's vancouver canuck teammate pavol demitra, now playing for slovakia, was left with the puck at the side of the net with lots of open space to smack the puck into the goal. somehow the puck stayed out and glanced off the crossbar away from the net. several replays showed that luongo sprawled to place his glove quite close to--and above--the spot where demitra shot the puck. this forced demitra to shoot high. did the puck glance off luongo's glove and then the post? commentators said it was so. the glove from above. they said it was so. let us say the faithful do indeed believe unto fervent devotion in vancouver and canada where hockey is not a religion but an obsession totally out of control.

perhaps we shall never know. perhaps unseen video will show it more clearly. the mysterious glove from above. did luongo touch the puck at all? was it divine intervention? or a trick of the camera? demitra put his hands over his head and shook his head in astonishment and shock when the play ended, the game was over, and utter joyful pandemonium ensued in the vancouver audience and on the ice for the canadian team.

the glove from above trumped the brilliant performance of jaroslav halak despite a questionable first goal against luongo where the clever slovaks squeaked the puck behind luongo's knee via a corner shot from the goal line. it didn't matter. the glove from above hovers in bright mystery as the game-saving brilliance of a night full of brilliant plays by both squads.

the glove from above was the exclamation point on a stupendous third-period performance by luongo. yes except for that first goal. he made timely saves. he made quite a few of them in the third period when the slovaks outshot the canadians 12-7 though, over the entire three periods, canada outshot the slovaks 28-21.

the crowd, in the third period, when it was still 3-0 for canada, began chanting "we want the usa". but as the slovaks closed in and made it a 3-2 game with 5 minutes left to play, that chant was totally silenced--the canadians were made to worry very deeply about just hanging on for the last 5 minutes.

it was a thrilling conclusion to a match played so well it will indeed go down in canadian hockey history as one of the most thrilling, well-played games of all time. there were only 3 penalties in the entire game. the last slovak penalty resulted in getzlaf's winning goal, while the slovaks could not pot one during their one power play opportunity.

the luongo legend deepens as canada moves on to play the usa in the gold medal game on sunday, two days from now, in a game that more or less every canadian on the planet will want to watch. and, i imagine, many more millions of usamericans. the usa has simply been perfect thus far in the tournament. they have beaten everyone they've played in regulation time. although they only have 3 olympic veterans on their squad, the young stars have emerged as the most formidable and impressive team in the tournament. they easily defeated canada 5-3 earlier in the tournament. and their goaltender, ryan miller, has been as good as any other. let's hope it's a beaut of a game.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

17. Regina Pinto

Project AlphaAlpha has now 365 letters A on line!

Sun 28 Feb 2010

PROJECT ALPHaALPHA:

The project is almost complete! We have already 365 letters A on line one A for each day of the year!
Next week I will send you the index page and the complete AlphaAlpha!

THANK YOU VERY MUCH!

NEW PAGES:

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_quarone.html Â (Paulo Aquarone - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/steve_d_a_lachinsky.html (Steve Dalachinsky - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/steve_d_a_lachinsky2.html (Steve Dalachinsky - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/keppler.html (Roberto Keppler - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_yuko_otomo (Yuko Otomo - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/cinco.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

COMING SOON:

THE LEAP YEAR> JoesÃ©r Alvarez - Brazil

WHICH MORE PAGES ARE READY?

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/bruce_a_ndrews.html (Bruce Andrews - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_ndrews.html (Jim Andrews - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_randa_yto.html (Isabel Aranda - YTO - Chile)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/i_a_rvers.html (Isabelle Arvers - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/b_a_bel.html Â (babel - Canada & UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/ver_a_bighetti.html (Vera Bighetti - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/bruno_a.html Â (Bruno - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_trick_burgaud.html (Patrick Burgaud - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_trick_burgaud1.html (Patrick Burgaud - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_de_mar_josely.html (Josely Carvalho - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_rtha_deed.html Â (Martha Deed - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/r_fr_a_nco.html (Rodolfo Franco - Brazil / Spain)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/fr_a_zao.html (Marcelo FrazÄƒo - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/muriel_freg_a.html (Muriel Frega - Argentina)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/lis_a_hutton.html (Lisa Hutton - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/s_a_tu.html (Satu KaikKonen - Finland)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_j_a.html Â (Maja Kalogera - Croacia)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_nik.html Â (Manik - Serbia)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/neufeldt_a.html (Brigitte Neufeudt - Germany)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/niss_a.html (Millie Niss - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/p_a_din.html (Clemente PadÃn - Uruguay)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/m_a_rgaret_penfold.html (Margaret Penfold - UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/edw_a_rd_picot.html (Edward Picot - UK)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/is_a_bel_saij.html (Isabel Saij - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/is_a_bel_saij2.html (Isabel Saij - France)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_sechi.html (JosÃ© Roberto Sechi - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/reiner_a.html (Reiner Strasser - Germany)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_jtwine.html (Jurges Trautwein - USA)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/myron_turner_a.html (Myron Turner - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/sus_a_n_turner.html (Susan Turner - Canada)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/villel_a.html (Paulo Villela - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_zenon.html (Miguel Jimenez/Zenon - Spain)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/a_raceli_zunig_a.html (Araceli ZuÅ„iga- Mexico)

My OWN PAGES:

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/um.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/dois.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/tres.html (Regina Pinto - Brazil)

http://arteonline.arq.br/a/quatro.html (Regina Pinto- Brazil)

==========

Regina Pinto aka pintor

http://arteonline.arq.br
http://pintor.tumblr.com

↑ Index

18. Bob Heman

Katrinka Moore, Bob Heman, Moira T. Smith - tuesday at 6:00 at Cornelia St. Cafe

Sun 28 Feb 2010

---

just a reminder - this tuesday, March 2, at 6:00 pm, Katrinka Moore, Bob Heman, and Moira T. Smith will be joining together at the Cornelia St. Cafe to celebrate Katrinka's new book, Thief, just published by BlazeVOX Books - please come and join us for a memorable event - all the information follows (the Cornelia St. Cafe is located at 29 Cornelia St., between Bleecker and West 4th, just around the corner from the West 4th St. A, C, E, B, D, and F station)

Come celebrate Thief with a reading/performance by Katrinka Moore, Bob Heman & Moira T. Smith
at Cornelia St. Café
29 Cornelia St., NYC
http://www.corneliastreetcafe.com/home.asp
Tuesday, March 2, 6:00 pm
Katrinka Moore’s book Thief was recently released by BlazeVOX [books]. She is a member of the One O’clock Poets, which published an anthology, The Full Green Hour, in 2008. Moore’s chapbook, This is Not a Story, won the New Women’s Voices prize and was published by Finishing Line Press in 2003.
Bob Heman has edited CLWN WR and its predecessor Clown War since 1971. His newest collection, Demographics, or, The Hats They Are Allowed to Wear, is available as a free download from Quale Press. His collages have been exhibited recently in group shows in Chelsea, D.U.M.B.O, and Williamsburg.
Moira T. Smith is a singer/song-writer/poet/bookworm/show-off who likes to get all dressed up and confront herself before a semi-captive audience. (That could be YOU!) She is "hilarious, disturbing, tender and mojo-rific!", or so says her deeply biased, but not inaccurate ego. Come on down and decide for yourself!

Bob Heman
[redacted]

↑ Index

19. Adam Fieled

Dune Rose: The Poems of Susan Wallack

Sun 28 Feb 2010

Susan Wallack, my mother, is an excellent, well-rounded, widely published poet. I am collecting her best poems on a blog meant to be an archive of her work.

The blog is called Dune Rose: The Poems of Susan Wallack, and it can be located here:

http://www.susanwallack.blogspot.com

Thanks for reading,
Adam Fieled [redacted]

↑ Index

20. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: S Beckett vs. ron silliman
Sun 28 Feb 2010

---

dear Steve:

i noted that you begin with criticizing Silliman's remarks someplace (it wasn't indicated precisely where/when on the blog) of dramatic monologue--is this critique re Browning, Pound, Lowell??--(i gather from your remarks it is most definitely the last named--that is involved)--is it a critique of a specific dramatic monologist or dramatic monologists in general, in the English language, to be sure, it goes without saying---?

i rarely read Silliman's blog; my impression is very often that it in itself is a long long ongoing extended and if not necessarily completely/always a "dramatic" monologue, then most certainly an extended rhetorical monologue--

i gather that perhaps the soliloquy is NOT tossed in with the dramatic monologue??--

might David Antin be considered a dramatic monologist?--how about the creator of Swimming to Cambodia?--sections of Jackson MacLow or Lorine Niedecker?--Hannah who saw words?--

there is a great deal of Silliman's blog, going by what i have read, that could be considered basically among the more rhetorical forms of dramatic monologue--

are stream of consciousness monologues such as molly Bloom's among the detested "dramatic monologues?"--

is a specific definition of dramatic monologue given that is being applied?-- let me know the particular passages of which you write--

are narrators such as Conrad
's Marlowe types of "dramatic monologists?--"

how about the extended solos taken by Jazz and blues, rock'n'roll musicians-classical artists---are these form of dramatic monologue? soliloquies?--

are certain Ballad forms "dramatic monologues?"--

are "criticism" and "reviewing" and "literary memoirs" of the Silliman variety not so much providing "critical, essay, researched theorizing, etc" thinking, but instead providing the reader with a form of rhetorical dramatic monologue with intentions of being the "final word" rather than the "opening words," opening that is outwo/ard, away from the monologue and pointing also away from the author & monologues' themselves towards an expanding area of questions, of ways of writing, of thinking, of encouraging DIY (do-it-yourself) in an inspirational/exemplary manner???--

please note i am not trying to start an argument(s) but hoping to open the questions and observations up, towo/ards more questions and areas--re the topics--

isn't perhaps Silliman's blog also a form of "confessional writing?"--as with much contemporary avant writing, so often concerned with the "confessional" aspect of writing re one's memories, life, jobs, favorite tv shows, pastimes, book lists, etc --with "events and behaviors, thoughts, attitudes, emotions since 9/11???"--

is the blog in itself not a form of confessional writing, even when essaying to restrict the blog writings to "literary thoughts?"--as these are bound up with the personal, the subjective, "the 'I'"--?? with ethical judgments on Good and Evil--

aren't often things that a particular poet, writer, is very concerned with making a critique of from a more or less subjective viewpoint--are not these often simply the projections of aspects of ones' self, one's character, thoughts, on to others and their thoughts, viewpoints?--is this part of the seemingly endless dividing up of writers, poets, forms of writing in to the US Goverment style of "Good vs Evil"? rhetoric and propaganda--and--what and why is this so important, this use of ethics as a form of literary criticism, in order to show oneself, one's group, one's Brand and Rebranded form of writing as the Good and others' as the Bad and the Ugly?--

why is for example "Opacity" in writing so Good--and transparency Bad--while the same person, poet may be crying for the Government to be "more transparent?"--esp when the nature of governmental rhetoric and ventures, plans are quite distinctly designed often to be of the most opaque nature?

in a sense--what could not be more transparent!! then the desire that one's words be opaque, while another's be transparent--

besides monologues, aren't there also stereologues, digitalogues--lincoln logs--blogalogs--logologues--egologues--ideologues--langologues--lingologues--jingologues--here alogue there a logue hear alogue their alogue . . . everyone everywhere alogues . . . lumberjack ologues..the o'logues of the o'paque alogues . . .onan ologues . . .

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

21. steve russell
Ron (Dixie Chick?) Sillman
Sun 28 Feb 2010

A distinguished poet in D.C tells me that the Dixie Chicks have

A distinguished poet in D.C tells me that the Dixie Chicks have been stealing from Sillman. Both Chapter & verse. But it wasn't that long ago when distinguished (though discreet) D.C. poet was playing Zepplin records backwards fearing, or perhaps eagerly anticipating Satanic whisperings.

or, as the kids say...

We must turn the pages back to the "two gruelling weeks in November and December," 1994, and read the Baffler, issue #6, for a great Ashbery imitation by David Berman, p.42.

... whatever.

Clip-On Tie
The Diary of a New York Art Museum Security Guard

& some say that Ashbery can't be imitated (HA).

Back to Sillman: is it that he wants an Objective (what-ever Eliot called it) instead of the Dramatic Monologue? Is that it? Is that what Olsen was doing?

It worked awhile, I guess, for Eliot. Until "free-thinking jews" and Tory politics and so-so drama got in the way.

↑ Index

22. Steve Clay
Selections from the Library of Robert Creeley of Interest to Literary and Art Collections
Sun 28 Feb 2010

Announcing for sale: Selections from Robert Creeley's Library of Interest to Literary and Art Collections

List 3 (M-Z)

Granary Books is pleased to offer for sale, as individual items, a rich and compelling selection of pamphlets, manuscripts, correspondence and related materials from the library of preeminent American poet Robert Creeley (1926-2005). Robert Creeley made a practice of inserting relevant letters, manuscripts, clippings, photographs and ephemera into his books, many of which also bear significant inscriptions, thus making his library an important documentary archive occupying a rich site for research into the poets and poetics of the New American Poetry.

The collection will be offered for sale as individual items via a series of email lists issued over several months. The third list (M-Z) comprises works from: Michael McClure, Lorine Niedecker, Charles Olson, Joel Oppenheimer, Kenneth Patchen, Tom Pickard, James Purdy, Ann Quin, Tom Raworth, Aram Saroyan, Gary Snyder, Jack Spicer, Alexander Trocchi, Philip Whalen, John Wieners, Jonathan Williams, Douglas Woolf and Louis Zukofsky.

To view the M-Z inventory please go to:

http://www.granarybooks.com/pages.php?which_page=creeley_library_m-z

To view the A-Z inventory please go to:

http://www.granarybooks.com/pages.php?which_page=creeley_library_a-z

Thank you.

Steve Clay
Granary Books
168 Mercer St. #2
New York, NY 10012

[redacted]

↑ Index

23. Carrie Etter

Infinite Difference sampler no. 6

Sun 28 Feb 2010

This time it's Claire Crowther's "Young Woman with Scythe": http://carrieetter.blogspot.com . I hope you enjoy it.

↑ Index

24. Bill Berkson
Nowheremag.org
Sun 28 Feb 2010

Nowhere: travel stories & notebooks by Bill Berkson, Alan Bernheimer, Larry Fagin et alia
www. nowheremag.com

↑ Index

25. Alan Sondheim
More beautiful music/words (don't forget the Jazz Lounge Tuesday)
Sun 28 Feb 2010

More beautiful music/words from the produce-productive laboratory of the AMA group:

Azure Carter, Myk Freedman, Alan Sondheim

http://www.alansondheim.org/imp.mp3 (Myk, Alan) http://www.alansondheim.org/darkrobe.mp3 (new version, Azure, Myk, Alan)

We go on.

↑ Index

26. CA Conrad
7 west coast events...
Sun 28 Feb 2010

---

readings and workshops, details at this link:
http://CAConradevents.blogspot.com

Looking forward to seeing the west coast poets, as always! CAConrad

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

27. Susan Webster Schultz recent blog posts by Tinfish Editor
Mon 1 Mar 2010

Language Acquisition: _Dictee_ and the "Radhika Bo...
An interview with Adam Aitken
"Grace as chance": teaching notes on elegy

The poetics of rage: cant and Cantos Walmart University

http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com

aloha, Susan M. Schultz

↑ Index

28. steve dalachinsky
matthew shipp solo at tribes gallery
Mon 1 Mar 2010

---

please spread the word
that matt shipp is playing solo piano
 at tribes gallery 285 e 3rd st 2nd fl
5pm March 14 saturday 10 $ donation

On Sat, 27 Feb 2010 12:04:17 -0500 CA Conrad <[redacted]>
writes:
> Poets at The Poet's Salon The Rainbow Book Fair
>
> Saturday March 27th 11:30am-5:00pm
>
> CUNY Graduate Center Fifth Avenue and 34th Street NYC
>
> FREE ! OPEN TO THE PUBLIC !
>
>
>
> COME HEAR ! a LGBTQ poetry reading series
>
> coordinated/hosted by Nathaniel A. Siegel & Regie Cabico
>
> present POETS:
>
>
>
> Ana Bozicevic
>
> Julian Brolaski
>
> Steven Cordova
>
> Mina Pam Dick

>
> Jameson Fitzpatrick
>
> David Garrett
>
> Stephanie Gray
>
> Scott Hightower
>
> Paul Foster Johnson
>
> Saeed Jones
>
> Amy King
>
> Bill Kushner
>
> Jee Leong Koh
>
> Gregory Laynor
>
> Timothy Liu
>
> Douglas A. Martin
>
> David Messineo
>
> Debrah Morkun
>
> Angelo Nikolopoulos
>
> Tim Peterson (Trace)
>
> Elizabeth Reddin
>
> Vittoriar repetto
>
> Jason Roush
>
> Moonshine Shorey
>
> Richard Tayson

>
> Vega
>
> Ronaldo V. Wilson
>
> Emanuel Xavier
>
> Rachel Zolf
>
>
>
> ALL reading their own poetry !
>
> Also featuring poems from “persistent voices Poetry By Writers Lost
> to > AIDS” edited by Philip Clark & David Groff, presented by Philip > Clark
>
>
>
> Poets books available for purchase !
>
>
>
> additional poets to be announced (list as of 2/26/2010)
>
>
> --
> PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com
>
>
>

↑ Index

29. aslongasittakes

Open Call for Visual Poetry: accepting art experiments in the space between viewing and reading.

Mon 1 Mar 2010

Below is a call for visual poetry.
Thanks,
James Sanders

VISPO at Eyedrum is a Visual Poetry show to be held at Eyedrum Art & Music Gallery on May 1st - May 15th 2010.

The mission of the show is to examine the boundaries of the creative and communicative process by seeking work that combines the literary and visual arts. All forms and approaches to Visual Poetry will be considered. Non-English based work is strongly encouraged.

Deadline for submission of work:
April 23, 2010
2d/3d work (received ready to display)
All sizes of ready to display work are accepted.
Digital file submissions accepted (maximum size 8.5x11-exceptions considered)

No Entry fee. The show is juried and produced by members of the eyedrum literary committee. Please provide email and any info about yourself and the work provided. Provide title, medium, and any display/handling instructions necessary. Please provide return addressed envelope and any mailing instructions to have work returned.

Mail all entries to: Jeff Dahlgren 132 Adair Street, Decatur, GA 30030 Information: eggtoothjeff at yahoo.com

details:
http://www.pd.org/~eyedrum/calendar/index.php?eventTypeId=4&id=3464&month=5&year=2010
<http://www.pd.org/%7Eeyedrum/calendar/index.php?eventTypeId=4&id=3464&month=5&year=2010>

↑ Index

30. cris cheek

Lee Ann Brown in Oxford, Ohio

Mon 1 Mar 2010

LEE ANN BROWN

reading her poetry

Thursday March 4th.

Bachelor Reading Room, Bachelor Hall. Miami University, Oxford. Ohio. 8pm. Free. ALL welcome.

Lee Ann Brown is a poet and filmmaker. She founded Tender Buttons press in 1989, a press dedicated to publishing experimental women's poetry, with the publication of Bernadette Mayer's Sonnets. Ten years later, in April 1999, her own first full-length collection, Polyverse, appeared from Sun & Moon Press and won the New American Poetry Series Award. Her second book, The Sleep That Changed Everything, came out in 2003 from Wesleyan and secured her recognition as an important American woman poet at the turn of the early Twenty-first century. A renowned workshop leader at the Naropa Institute in Colorado, she is currently an Assistant Professor at St Johns University in New York City.

"In the vexed and mainly irrelevant arena of allegiances to teachers and predecessors, Brown has pioneered a refreshing indifference to the rivalries between, say, Beats and New York School poets, or New York School poets and practitioners of projective verse, or for that matter between the language poets and the rest of the world. Collaging her influences from all these groups, collaborating with them, trimming her work with declarations that her attraction's more than textual, she is a central figure to many groups of younger poets. Born in Japan, raised in North Carolina, taking two degrees at the school that shares her name, and settling down in New York, she comes to her rejection of categorization honestly. Among younger poets, her absolute refusal to accept limits on what is permissible has given her something like political power." - Jordan Davis

"Pleasure is the subject of Lee Ann Brown's poetry. Pleasure in the craft and anti-craft of poem making. Pleasure in the vocalizing and harmonizing of voice and text--speech and writing. Giddy recombinings. Flirtatious collaborations. Irreverent anagrams." - Eliane Equi

"Shout, whisper, and strum these mercurial poems, old-time lyrics, and inventive translations and transpositions. Lee Ann Brown's The Sleep That Changed Everything is a sprung formalist ode to the 'open possibilities' of song." - Charles Bernstein

↑ Index

31. Amanda Earl

AngelHousePress wants poems for Nat'l Poetry Month by March 15

Mon 1 Mar 2010

You are invited to send one (1) quirky, innovative and playful poem to <mailto:[redacted]>[redacted] by March 15 to be considered for Nationalpoetrymonth.ca in April. Visual/concrete poetry especially welcome. Please also include a brief bio and a photo. Send as attachment (Word/Rtf/JPG).

The poem can be a previously published poem as long as you hold copyright.

Amanda Earl
AngelHousePress
www.angelhousepress.com
the angel is in the house

↑ Index

32. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

Mon 1 Mar 2010

David,

BULL'S EYE! Absolutely breathtaking.

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Feb 26, 2010 at 5:41 AM, David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

> dear Steve:
>
> i noted that you begin with criticizing Silliman's remarks someplace (it wasn't indicated precisely where/when on the blog) of dramatic monologue--is this critique re Browning, Pound, Lowell??--(i gather from your remarks it is most definitely the last named--that is involved)--is it a critique of a specific dramatic monologist or dramatic monologists in general, in the English language, to be sure, it goes without saying---?
>
> i rarely read Silliman's blog; my impression is very often that it in itself is a long long ongoing extended and if not necessarily completely/always a "dramatic" monologue, then most certainly an extended rhetorical monologue--
>
> i gather that perhaps the soliloquy is NOT tossed in with the dramatic monologue??--

might David Antin be considered a dramatic monologist?--how about the creator of Swimming to Cambodia?--sections of Jackson MacLow or Lorine Niedecker?--Hannah who saw words?--

there is a great deal of Silliman's blog, going by what i have read, that could be considered basically among the more rhetorical forms of dramatic monologue--

are stream of consciousness monologues such as molly Bloom's among the detested "dramatic monologues?"-- is a specific definition of dramatic monologue given that is being applied?-- let me know the particular passages of which you write--

are narrators such as Conrad
's Marlowe types of "dramatic monologists?--"

how about the extended solos taken by Jazz and blues, rock'n'roll musicians-classical artists---are these form of dramatic monologue?
soliloquies?--

are certain Ballad forms "dramatic monologues?"--

are "criticism" and "reviewing" and "literary memoirs" of the Silliman variety not so much providing "critical, essay, researched theorizing, etc" thinking, but instead providing the reader with a form of rhetorical dramatic monologue with intentions of being the "final word" rather than the "opening words," opening that is outwo/ard, away from the monologue and pointing also away from the author & monologues' themselves towards an expanding area of questions, of ways of writing, of thinking, of encouraging DIY (do-it-yourself) in an inspirational/exemplary manner???--

please note i am not trying to start an argument(s) but hoping to open the questions and observations up, towo/ards more questions and areas--re the topics--

isn't perhaps Silliman's blog also a form of "confessional writing?"--as with much contemporary avant writing, so often concerned with the "confessional" aspect of writing re one's memories, life, jobs, favorite tv shows, pastimes, book lists, etc --with "events and behaviors, thoughts, attitudes, emotions since 9/11???"--

is the blog in itself not a form of confessional writing, even when essaying to restrict the blog writings to "literary thoughts?"--as these are bound up with the personal, the subjective, "the 'I'"--?? with ethical judgments on Good and Evil--

aren't often things that a particular poet, writer, is very concerned with making a critique of from a more or less subjective viewpoint--are not these often simply the projections of aspects of ones' self, one's character, thoughts, on to others and their thoughts, viewpoints?--is this part of the seemingly endless dividing up of writers, poets, forms of writing in to the US Goverment style of "Good vs Evil"? rhetoric and propaganda--and--what and why is this so important, this use of ethics as a form of literary criticism, in order to show oneself, one's group, one's Brand and Rebranded form of writing as the Good and others' as the Bad and the Ugly?--

why is for example "Opacity" in writing so Good--and transparency Bad--while the same person, poet may be crying for the Government to be "more transparent?"--esp when the nature of governmental rhetoric and ventures, plans are quite distinctly designed often to be of the most opaque nature?

in a sense--what could not be more transparent!! then the desire that one's words be opaque, while another's be transparent--

besides monologues, aren't there also stereologues, digitalogues--lincoln logs--blogalogs--logologues--egologues--ideologues--langologues--lingologues--jingologues--here
alogue there a logue hear alogue their alogue . . . everyone everywhere alogues . . . lumberjack ologues..the o'logues of the o'paque alogues . . .onan ologues . . .

Date: Wed, 24 Feb 2010 08:23:15 -0800
From: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
To: [redacted]

hey, i've read Sillman.
admittedly, i'm not an authority on Sillman.
that Sillman.
those certain Sillman's that seem to haunt ...

i said
using a simple rhetorical device
WHO
is Ron Sillman???

comparing Ron Sillman
to Samuel Beckett

(since Sillman thrashed Lowell
it seemed wisest to thrash Sillman
using Beckett
since it's impossible to thrash Beckett & who could stand such thrashings
by being so compared?)

... or, as i said earlier --
to further clarify aforementioned sayings
as well as previous postings ...

Robert Lowell
(is worth reading)
i remember Lowell
(i remember reading Lowell)

i've forgotten most of what i've read
i remember mostly
the stuff Lowell imitated
in "Imitatiions."

i rarely think about Sillman
i've forgotten most Lowellisms

i'm presently thinking about myself
& my next cigarette

From: sheila black <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, February 23, 2010 7:09:45 AM
Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

Look at the poem "Sunset Debris" by Ron Silliman. That thing drove me crazy (not literal) so I wrote a duplicate poem (just for myself) called "Ron Silliman Writes Poetry Like a Four Year Old Child" (never submitted!). However, for you bandwagonners, I also wrote a poem called "Ron Silliman is my Father" inspired by "The Chinese Notebook" also Ron Silliman. As for Beckett, "Waiting For Godot" need I say more. Maybe "Endgame."
Each of us has a say. S. Black
Sheila Black

--- On Mon, 2/22/10, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:

From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, February 22, 2010, 2:23 PM

... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of principles.

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...

Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

> Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
> http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

33. Andy Gricevich
Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Mon 1 Mar 2010

Um, I don't think that's what RS meant by "dramatic monologue." The term has a specific sense in poetry, associated primarily with Robert Browning. It has nothing to do with literal monologues in stage dramas like Beckett's.

I think of Silliman's work all the time, and have even bothered to learn to spell his name.

Andy

↑ Index

34. steve russell
Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Mon 1 Mar 2010

You asked:

(is a specif
As usual, cool, thoughtful letter, Dave:

You asked:

(is a specific definition of dramatic monologue given that is being applied?-- let me know the particular passages of which you write) --
****

No specific definition was given on Sillman's blog, at least not the piece I read from Amy King's original link.

Sillman seems prepared to dismiss Lowell because of some aesthetic, or perhaps from the point of view of NO aesthetic, or from the point of view of an anasthetic. Maybe he simply doesn't like Lowell's work.

I've learned more from Learning From Las Vegas (Robert Venturi) than I've learned from Sillman.

He, Sillman, said something about Lowell's use of, ugh, monologue, which, ugh, is, ugh, why Olsen is, ugh, better. I think that was the point. If I had more of a life, I wouldn't go near a blog, but having the life I have, I occassionally (I confess) find myself in the blogosphere going where??? probably to a better blog than the one I just left.

I should go to your blog and learn some Vispo and find out what's happening in Palestine.
I should get my own blog.
I should get a life, but, it seems, I'm already alive, for better (sometimes) and sometimes worse.

_____
From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, February 26, 2010 5:41:50 AM
Subject: Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

dear Steve:

i noted that you begin with criticizing Silliman's remarks someplace (it wasn't indicated precisely where/when on the blog) of dramatic monologue--is this critique re Browning, Pound, Lowell??--(i gather from your remarks it is most definitely the last named--that is involved)--is it a critique of a specific dramatic monologist or dramatic monologists in general, in the English language, to be sure, it goes without saying---?

i rarely read Silliman's blog; my impression is very often that it in itself is a long long ongoing extended and if not necessarily completely/always a "dramatic" monologue, then most certainly an extended rhetorical monologue--

i gather that perhaps the soliloquy is NOT tossed in with the dramatic monologue??--

might David Antin be considered a dramatic monologist?--how about the creator of Swimming to Cambodia?--sections of Jackson MacLow or Lorine Niedecker?--Hannah who saw words?--

there is a great deal of Silliman's blog, going by what i have read, that could be considered basically among the more rhetorical forms of dramatic monologue--

are stream of consciousness monologues such as molly Bloom's among the detested "dramatic monologues?"--

is a specific definition of dramatic monologue given that is being applied?-- let me know the particular passages of which you write--

are narrators such as Conrad
's Marlowe types of "dramatic monologists?--"

how about the extended solos taken by Jazz and blues, rock'n'roll musicians-classical artists---are these form of dramatic monologue? soliloquies?--

are certain Ballad forms "dramatic monologues?"--

are "criticism" and "reviewing" and "literary memoirs" of the Silliman variety not so much providing "critical, essay, researched theorizing, etc" thinking, but instead providing the reader with a form of rhetorical dramatic monologue with intentions of being the "final word" rather than the "opening words," opening that is outwo/ard, away from the monologue and pointing also away from the author & monologues' themselves towards an expanding area of questions, of ways of writing, of thinking, of encouraging DIY (do-it-yourself) in an inspirational/exemplary manner???--

please note i am not trying to start an argument(s) but hoping to open the questions and observations up, towo/ards more questions and areas--re the topics--

isn't perhaps Silliman's blog also a form of "confessional writing?"--as with much contemporary avant writing, so often concerned with the "confessional" aspect of writing re one's memories, life, jobs, favorite tv shows, pastimes, book lists, etc --with "events and behaviors, thoughts, attitudes, emotions since 9/11???"--

is the blog in itself not a form of confessional writing, even when essaying to restrict the blog writings to "literary thoughts?"--as these are bound up with the personal, the subjective, "the 'I'"--?? with ethical judgments on Good and Evil--

aren't often things that a particular poet, writer, is very concerned with making a critique of from a more or less subjective viewpoint--are not these often simply the projections of aspects of ones' self, one's character, thoughts, on to others and their thoughts, viewpoints?--is this part of the seemingly endless dividing up of writers, poets, forms of writing in to the US Goverment style of "Good vs Evil"? rhetoric and propaganda--and--what and why is this so important, this use of ethics as a form of literary criticism, in order to show oneself, one's group, one's Brand and Rebranded form of writing as the Good and others' as the Bad and the Ugly?--

why is for example "Opacity" in writing so Good--and transparency Bad--while the same person, poet may be crying for the Government to be "more transparent?"--esp when the nature of governmental rhetoric and ventures, plans are quite distinctly designed often to be of the most opaque nature?

in a sense--what could not be more transparent!! then the desire that one's words be opaque, while another's be transparent--

besides monologues, aren't there also stereologues, digitalogues--lincoln logs--blogalogs--logologues--egologues--ideologues--langologues--lingologues--jingologues--here alogue there a logue hear alogue their alogue . . . everyone everywhere alogues . . . lumberjack ologues..the o'logues of the o'paque alogues . . .onan ologues . . .

> Date: Wed, 24 Feb 2010 08:23:15 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
> To: [redacted]
>
> hey, i've read Sillman.
> admittedly, i'm not an authority on Sillman.
> that Sillman.
> those certain Sillman's that seem to haunt ...
>
> i said
> using a simple rhetorical device
> WHO
> is Ron Sillman???
>
> comparing Ron Sillman
> to Samuel Beckett
>
> (since Sillman thrashed Lowell
> it seemed wisest to thrash Sillman
> using Beckett
> since it's impossible to thrash Beckett
> & who could stand such thrashings
> by being so compared?)
>
> ... or, as i said earlier --
> to further clarify aforementioned sayings
> as well as previous postings ...
>
> Robert Lowell
> (is worth reading)
> i remember Lowell
> (i remember reading Lowell)
>
> i've forgotten most of what i've read
> i remember mostly
> the stuff Lowell imitated
> in "Imitatiions."

i rarely think about Sillman
i've forgotten most Lowellisms

i'm presently thinking about myself
& my next cigarette

From: sheila black <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, February 23, 2010 7:09:45 AM
Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

Look at the poem "Sunset Debris" by Ron Silliman. That thing drove me crazy (not literal) so I wrote a duplicate poem (just for myself) called "Ron Silliman Writes Poetry Like a Four Year Old Child" (never submitted!). However, for you bandwagonners, I also wrote a poem called "Ron Silliman is my Father" inspired by "The Chinese Notebook" also Ron Silliman. As for Beckett, "Waiting For Godot" need I say more. Maybe "Endgame."
Each of us has a say. S. Black
Sheila Black

--- On Mon, 2/22/10, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:

From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, February 22, 2010, 2:23 PM

... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of principles.

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than > a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

>
> But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...
>
> Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

35. Poetry Project
Service for David Nolan
Mon 1 Mar 2010

Dear Friends,

It is with great sadness that we share the news of the passing of our friend, colleague, and East Village neighbor David Nolan. David suffered from a heart attack last Thursday, February 25. He had just turned 47 on Valentine¹s Day.

David has been involved with the Poetry Project for many years as our much cherished audio-technical consultant. He worked with John Fisk, and as recently as this past New Year¹s Day, with David Vogen. Many of you probably noticed him assisting at the sound table for twelve hours straight, photographing each performer and live-posting portraits to his Facebook page throughout the event!

David was a friend to many people in our community, and his wife, Joy Linscheid, would like to extend an invitation to his memorial service to anyone who has known him over the years.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday, March 3, here at St. Mark¹s Church (131 E. 10th St. at 2nd Ave). The service will run from 4PM to 5:30PM. A reception will follow in the Parish Hall from 5:30PM to 7PM.

David worked with a number of community and arts organizations during his life; in lieu of flowers his family would appreciate that donations be made in David¹s name to one of the charities listed below, or to one of your choosing.

Our deepest condolences go out to David¹s family and friends.

Love,

The Poetry Project

Community and Arts Organizations
East Village Community School 610 E. 12th St., Room 205, New York, NY 10009.
Attn: Mary Talbot [redacted] x.2056
Poet¹s House 10 River Terrace, New York, NY 10281. Attn: Jane Preston, Managing Director [redacted]
Theater for the New City 155 First Ave., New York, NY 10009. Attn: Crystal Field
WBAI 120 Wall Street, 10th Floor, New York, NY 10005. Attn: Morning Dew
The Poetry Project at St. Mark¹s Church 131 E. 10th St., New York, NY 10003. Attn: Stacy Szymaszek [redacted]

↑ Index

36. Andy Gricevich
Cannot Exist no.6 is out!
Mon 1 Mar 2010

What a pleasure it is to announce the appearance of Cannot Exist no.6! Such pleasure derives from the 60 pages of mind-bendingly strange, heartbr(e)aking, hilarious, urgent work contributed thereto by the following masters of contemporary versification:
Michael BernsteinDavid BuuckMairead ByrneJordan DunnLewis

FreedmanSteve GilmartinBob HemanCrag HillMary KasimorMonica ModyThe Nonsense Company
Nicholas Ravnikar
Juliana SpahrJordan StemplemanDavid WolachJoey Yearous-Algozin

You can buy the issue via http://cannotexist.blogspot.com.

all the best,

Andy Gricevich

↑ Index

37. Justin Katko

Manson and Toal: Friday 5 March: Cambridge, UK

Mon 1 Mar 2010

Cambridgeshire quakes at the arrival of Peter Manson and Jefferson Toal, who will read their poetry for the second event of the Cambridge Reading Series. TIME: 7:30pm, Friday, 5 March. PLACE: Judith E. Studio Drama Studio, Faculty of English, Cambridge. This prelapsarian dyad is here to teach us best practices for systematically wiping the bad poetry out from these our good heads. All are welcome; free entry; wine served.

****

PETER MANSON lives in Glasgow. His publications include *Between Cup and Lip * (Miami University Press 2008), For the Good of Liars (Barque Press 2006), *Adjunct: an Undigest *(Edinburgh Review 2005, Barque Press 2009) and Before and After Mallarmé (Survivors' Press 2005). He was the Judith E. Wilson Visiting Poetry Fellow of 2005-6. His website, "Freebase Accordion", is at petermanson.com. Peter Manson will read the poems of Clark Coolidge as part of his CRS reading.

JEFFERSON TOAL // D.O.B.: XX-XX-1985 / WEAPONS SKILL: 6 / BALLISTICS SKILL: 7 / PUBLICATIONS: "Arcobat" (©_© PRESS, forthcoming) "Training Session" (Quid 16), "Epyx Fastload" (Plantarchy 4), "Mortar Penne: Ha Ha Ha; Or 'The day Sigma Huda ate my gundog'" (Quid 18) / STAMINA: 4 / PSYCHIC: 9 / DENTAL WORK: Sussex University: BA '03-'06, MA '06-'08 / OFFICES: Secretary of the Random Acts of Kindness movement '04, Insert Riot Sorrowist Cadre and Jelly Procurement Delegate '05-'07, Chief Shadow Puppeteer of the Military Affairs Committee of the Faceplant International '07-'09. / CHARM: +1. // By day Jefferson Toal teaches the students of Coldfall Primary School (London) whose poetry he will read in addition to his own at the CRS reading.

****

The Cambridge Reading Series (CRS) is a new cycle of poetry readings taking place at the Faculty of English in Cambridge. Dialogic in form and international in scope, CRS revises the conventional performance format. In addition to reading their own work, both poets will also read the work of another poet. Each reading will be accompanied by a pamphlet publication featuring a selection of the participating poets' work and critical responses.

A full list of up-coming dates and readers is given below. Please direct any queries to Ryan Dobran (rdobran [at] gmail [dot] com) or see the CRS website: crs0hq.tumblr.com

The Cambridge Reading Series is funded by the Judith E. Wilson Fund and organised by English graduate students Ryan Dobran, Ian Heames, Justin Katko, Laura Kilbride, and Mike Wallace-Hadrill.

****

Readings begin at 7:30pm and are held in the Judith E. Wilson Drama Studio, in the Faculty of English, West Road, Cambridge.

LENT TERM
Friday 5 March: Peter Manson & Jefferson Toal

INTER-TERM
Friday 2 April: Nour Mobarak & Trevor Joyce

EASTER TERM
Friday 30 April: Jonty Tiplady & Frances Kruk
Friday 21 May: Lorqi Blinks & John Wilkinson
Friday 18 Jun: Sean Bonney & Simon Jarvis

FREE • ALL WELCOME • WINE SERVED

↑ Index

38. Samuel Wharton
Fwd: sawbuck 4.1
Mon 1 Mar 2010

---

readers~

thank you for another great year of contributions!

sawbuck 4.1 <http://sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com/> is here!

we begin our 4th year of publication with selections from :

Andrew Brenza | Becca Jensen
Elizabeth Barbato | Elizabeth Zuba
Eric Huff | Jack Boettcher

Jane Joritz-Nakagawa | Mark DeCarteret
Mark Jackley | Yotam Hadass

i hope you enjoy what they have to offer

~samuel wharton, editor

↑ Index

39. Hand Held Editions

Series 3 - Hawkey/O'Brien/Nature Theater of Oklahoma

Mon 1 Mar 2010

Announcing the official release of Hand Held Editions - Series 3, featuring:

Christian Hawkey, Petitions for an Alien Relative Geoffrey G. O'Brien, Poem with No Good Lines
Nature Theater of Oklahoma, Choregraphie

ALL THREE 5x7 chapbooks, on linen paper, in numbered editions of 75, for $12 (includes post).

See the site for details:

handheldeditions.blogspot.com
--
hand*held*editions
thomas hummel & brett fletcher lauer handheldeditions.blogspot.com

↑ Index

40. Tim Peterson

EOAGH Reading Series: Spring 2010

Tue 2 Mar 2010

---

*EOAGH Reading Series
Spring 2010*

All events take place at Unnameable Books,
600 Vanderbilt Ave, Brooklyn, NY

Jon Cotner, Andy Fitch, and John Harkey
Tuesday, March 16 @7PM*
*

Barbara Henning, Simon Pettet, and Shira Dentz
Sunday, March 21 @2PM

Andrew Levy, Cheryl Clark, and Mark Lamoureux
Sunday, April 4 @2PM

David Shapiro, Joanna Fuhrman, and Charles Borkhuis
Sunday, April 18 @2PM

EOAGH: A Journal of the Arts <http://chax.org/eoagh> is edited by Tim Peterson (Trace) and distributed by Chax Press <http://chax.org/>.

Submissions? Contact [redacted]. New poetics/essays/criticism especially desirable.

↑ Index

41. steve dalachinsky
BUK LIVES
Tue 2 Mar 2010

Bukowski Lives!!

Please join us at the Bowery Poetry Club to celebrate the work and life of Charles Bukowski on Tuesday March 9, 2010 at the Bowery Poetry Club's Sixth Annual Praise Bukowski Night!!!
(March 9 is the anniversary of Bukowski's death).
This event begins at 10pm and ends at midnight
It is Free! - "the people look like flowers at last."
 featuring :
Steven Ben Israel, Jennifer Blowdryer, Steve Cannon, Steve Dalachinsky, David Huberman, Pierre Joris, Tsaurah Litzky, Dave Mandl, Nancy Mercado, Big Mike, Iris M.Schwartz, Susan Scutti, Shappy, Carl Watson!!!
 + Open Reading! Bring a poem of Buk's to read!

Bowery Poetry Club, 308 Bowery NYC (between Bleeker and Houston Streets)
1-212 -[redacted]

↑ Index

42. Paul Nelson
Michael McClure in Seattle
Tue 2 Mar 2010

Michael McClure
March 12-13, 2010
Rainier Valley Cultural Center
3515 S. Alaska St, Seattle, WA
Workshop, reading, and lecture with the renowned poet. Space is limited for the Saturday, March 13 workshop.

Michael McClure is a poet, playwright, songwriter, and novelist who initially gained fame as one of the five poets who read at the legendary San Francisco Six Gallery reading in 1955, where Allen Ginsberg first read Howl. His next two books are Of Indigo and Saffron from UC Press, and Mysteriosos and other poems from New Directions.

Our thanks to co-sponsors: Dark Coast Press, Augusto Romano L.Ac. the State Commission on Humanities, KBCS-FM, Copper Canyon Press, Wabi Sabi restaurant in Columbia City and Poets & Writers. Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

↑ Index

43. steve dalachinsky
Re: JAZZ LOUNGE DATE COMING UP ON TUESDAY! (please announce)
Tue 2 Mar 2010

---

oops matt shipp solo gig is sunday march 14 at 5 at tribes

On Fri, 26 Feb 2010 23:49:04 -0500 Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
writes:
> JAZZ LOUNGE DATE COMING UP ON TUESDAY!
>
>
> ESP-Disk' LIVE @ The Jazz Lounge (Sucre Cafe)
> 520 Dakalb Avenue (Near Bedford Ave)
> Brooklyn, NY 11205
> G Train to Bedford/Nostrand
>
> Tuesday, March 2nd, 2010
>

>
> 8:30 pm
> Blaise Siwula & Bern Nix
> Blaise Siwula - alto / tenor sax
> Bern Nix - guitar
>
>
> 9:30 pm
> Alan Sondheim
> Alan Sondheim - electric oud / electric saz (or acoustic-electric > oud > or guitar or cura cumbus)
> Azure Carter - vocals
> Myk Freedman - lap steel (or guitar)
>
>
>

↑ Index

44. steve dalachinsky

Re: correction matthew shipp solo at tribes gallery

Tue 2 Mar 2010

please spread the word
that matt shipp is playing solo piano
at tribes gallery 285 e 3rd st 2nd fl
5pm March 14 sunday 10 $ donation

↑ Index

45. Eric Hoffman

Call for Papers

Tue 2 Mar 2010

Call for papers for a collection of critical essays on various aspects of or approaches to Cerebus, both a scholarly and popular, though coherent, companion (and introduction) to the series.

Any subject matter is welcome, so long as it pertains to Dave Sim and/or Cerebus.

Some recommendations of subjects that in which I am most interested:

Discussion of 1970's comics scene in which Dave first started to contribute together with a discussion of the various influences on Cerebus (Howard the Duck, Conan the Barbarian, Red Sonja)

Cerebus as satire of the comics medium (The Roach, "reads," etc)

Cerebus as social satire (political and religious satire)

The shift in tone from earlier and later Cerebus as a result of Dave's conversion

The influence of Cerebus on the comics industry

Cerebus and the graphic "Novel"

Dave Sim as self-publisher and his feud with Gary Groth and the Comics Journal

Dave Sim and the CBLDF

Comics fandom and Aardvark Comment (& the Yahoo Group)

Narrative structure in Cerebus

"Mind Games"

"Something Fell" (Yes, I know Craig Miller wrote something on this in "Following")

Dave Sim as magpie (Barry Windsor-Smith, Mort Drucker, etcetera)

Gerhard's impact on Cerebus

Sim's use of literary characters (Wilde, Fitzgerald, Hemingway, etc)

Sim's use of public personas (Elrod, Mick and Keef, Lord Julius, Konigsberg, The 3 Stooges, etc)

Meta-narrative in Cerebus (Viktor Davis/Reid in Reads, Sim in Minds and Guys)

Cerebus and Religion (both pre-and post-conversion)

Cerebus as a critique of feminism

Gender issues in Cerebus (male/female light/void, he/she/it, YHWH, God, "Tangent," "10 Impossible Things," etc)

Any suggestions this group might have about other forums that might be useful in soliciting submissions would be most appreciated. I would also be grateful for the names and contact information of any potential contributors. And I welcome any suggestions.

Thank you in advance for your kind attention to this matter.

Respectfully yours,
Eric Hoffman
lily_anselm@...

↑ Index

46. Christophe Casamassima

Ore by Christophe Casamassima (twentythreebooks)

Tue 2 Mar 2010

My new book, Ore, has recently been released by twentythreebooks, a terrific baltimore-based publisher. This book completes the Proteus Cycle, which began with the books The Proteus (Moria Books) and Joys: A Catalogue of Disappointments (BlazeVOX).

To read the press release, and a review, see http://www.twentythreebooks.com/images/OrePressRelease1.pdf

You can buy copies here http://www.twentythreebooks.com/books.htm

Thanks, everyone, for making this project a success. To see former titles visit http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html and http://blazevox.org/bk-cc.htm.

Although poets around the world lose the grips on their pens whenever I say it, please support small, independent presses!

Christophe Casamassima

↑ Index

47. Sarah Sarai

Karin Rudolph, Sarah Sarai, Saag Paneer: 5:30 pm, Sun., 3/7, NYC, Bengal Curry, 65 W. Broadway

Tue 2 Mar 2010

Details: 5:30, Sunday, March 7, 2010, at Bengal Curry, 65 West Broadway, 1-1⁄2 blocks s. of Chambers St. Manhattan.-- Most subways lead to Chambers. PHOENIX reading (George Spencer, Mike Graves, curators). Limited open mic. Eat and hear. Cheap.

Karin Randolph: Either She Was, Winner of Marsh Hawk Press Poetry Prize I love this book of . . . We need politics and wildness today, and here we find a quiet resistance and no shame. —David Shapiro

Sarah Sarai: The Future Is Happy, With both wit and tenderness, Sarah Sarai rigorously navigates the dialectics of knowledge and not knowing, thinking and being, the spiritual and the earthy. . .Lee Ann Roripaugh

Saag Paneer: "...cubes of freshly made cheese in a sauce of spicy, slow-simmered spinach. . . long a favorite of mine." Mark Bitten, NYT

↑ Index

48. Jeffrey Side
"Impolitic: Kent Johnson's Radical Hybridity" -- a review
Tue 2 Mar 2010

The information following is from Geoffrey Gatza who posted it on another list. I thought I'd reproduce it here. My apologies if this has already been done.

(In relation to this, you may be interested in reading an interview with Kent Johnson here:
http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Johnson%20interview.htm)

From Geoffrey Gatza:

"The new print issue of Pleiades journal features an extensive essay- review (thirty-four pages!) by the superb critic Michael Theune, titled "Impolitic: Kent Johnson's Radical Hybridity." It covers five of Johnson's books, including Epigramititis: 118 Living American Poets, published by BlazeVOX Books in 2005. Pleiades has put up a PDF of the essay at its website, here:

http://www.ucmo.edu/englphil/pleiades/currentissue.html

Epigramititis can be ordered here:

http://www.blazevox.org/bk-kj.htm

And Johnson's most recent book, the 836-page DAY (also from BlazeVOX) here:

http://blazevox.org/blog/?p=118

↑ Index

49. Carrie Etter
Infinite Difference sampler no. 7
Tue 2 Mar 2010

Andrea Brady's poem, "Still Hanging on Clinton's Second Visit":
http://carrieetter.blogspot.com

I hope you enjoy it.

↑ Index

50. steve russell
Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Tue 2 Mar 2010

---

i agree.
Chirot's post was dead on.

& Sillman, correctly spelled, is Silliman, assuming Chirot spelled the name correctly.

_____
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, March 1, 2010 3:29:13 PM
Subject: Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

David,

BULL'S EYE! Absolutely breathtaking.

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Feb 26, 2010 at 5:41 AM, David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

> dear Steve:
>
> i noted that you begin with criticizing Silliman's remarks someplace (it wasn't indicated precisely where/when on the blog) of dramatic monologue--is this critique re Browning, Pound, Lowell??--(i gather from your remarks it is most definitely the last named--that is involved)--is it a critique of a specific dramatic monologist or dramatic monologists in general, in the English language, to be sure, it goes without saying---?
>
> i rarely read Silliman's blog; my impression is very often that it in itself is a long long ongoing extended and if not necessarily completely/always a "dramatic" monologue, then most certainly an extended rhetorical monologue--
>
> i gather that perhaps the soliloquy is NOT tossed in with the dramatic monologue??--
>
> might David Antin be considered a dramatic monologist?--how about the creator of Swimming to Cambodia?--sections of Jackson MacLow or Lorine Niedecker?--Hannah who saw words?--
>
> there is a great deal of Silliman's blog, going by what i have read, that could be considered basically among the more rhetorical forms of dramatic monologue--
>
> are stream of consciousness monologues such as molly Bloom's among the detested "dramatic monologues?"--
>
> is a specific definition of dramatic monologue given that is being applied?--

let me know the particular passages of which you write--

are narrators such as Conrad
's Marlowe types of "dramatic monologists?--"

how about the extended solos taken by Jazz and blues, rock'n'roll musicians-classical artists---are these form of dramatic monologue? soliloquies?--

are certain Ballad forms "dramatic monologues?"--

are "criticism" and "reviewing" and "literary memoirs" of the Silliman variety not so much providing "critical, essay, researched theorizing, etc" thinking, but instead providing the reader with a form of rhetorical dramatic monologue with intentions of being the "final word" rather than the "opening words," opening that is outwo/ard, away from the monologue and pointing also away from the author & monologues' themselves towards an expanding area of questions, of ways of writing, of thinking, of encouraging DIY (do-it-yourself) in an inspirational/exemplary manner???--

please note i am not trying to start an argument(s) but hoping to open the questions and observations up, towo/ards more questions and areas--re the topics--

isn't perhaps Silliman's blog also a form of "confessional writing?"--as with much contemporary avant writing, so often concerned with the "confessional" aspect of writing re one's memories, life, jobs, favorite tv shows, pastimes, book lists, etc --with "events and behaviors, thoughts, attitudes, emotions since 9/11???"--

is the blog in itself not a form of confessional writing, even when essaying to restrict the blog writings to "literary thoughts?"--as these are bound up with the personal, the subjective, "the 'I'"--?? with ethical judgments on Good and Evil--

aren't often things that a particular poet, writer, is very concerned with making a critique of from a more or less subjective viewpoint--are not these often simply the projections of aspects of ones' self, one's character, thoughts, on to others and their thoughts, viewpoints?--is this part of the seemingly endless dividing up of writers, poets, forms of writing in to the US Goverment style of "Good vs Evil"? rhetoric and propaganda--and--what and why is this so important, this use of ethics as a form of literary criticism, in order to show oneself, one's group, one's Brand and Rebranded form of writing as the Good and others' as the Bad and the Ugly?--

why is for example "Opacity" in writing so Good--and transparency Bad--while the same person, poet may be crying for the Government to be "more transparent?"--esp when the nature of governmental rhetoric and ventures, plans are quite distinctly designed often to be of the most opaque nature?

in a sense--what could not be more transparent!! then the desire that one's words be opaque, while another's be transparent--

besides monologues, aren't there also stereologues, digitalogues--lincoln logs--blogalogs--logologues--egologues--ideologues--langologues--lingologues--jingologues--here
alogue there a logue hear alogue their alogue . . . everyone everywhere alogues . . . lumberjack ologues..the o'logues of the o'paque alogues . . .onan ologues . . .

Date: Wed, 24 Feb 2010 08:23:15 -0800
From: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
To: [redacted]

hey, i've read Sillman.
admittedly, i'm not an authority on Sillman.
that Sillman.
those certain Sillman's that seem to haunt ...

i said
using a simple rhetorical device
WHO
is Ron Sillman???

comparing Ron Sillman
to Samuel Beckett

(since Sillman thrashed Lowell
it seemed wisest to thrash Sillman
using Beckett
since it's impossible to thrash Beckett & who could stand such thrashings
by being so compared?)

... or, as i said earlier --
to further clarify aforementioned sayings
as well as previous postings ...

Robert Lowell
(is worth reading)

i remember Lowell
(i remember reading Lowell)

i've forgotten most of what i've read
i remember mostly
the stuff Lowell imitated
in "Imitatiions."

i rarely think about Sillman
i've forgotten most Lowellisms

i'm presently thinking about myself
& my next cigarette

From: sheila black <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, February 23, 2010 7:09:45 AM
Subject: Re: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

Look at the poem "Sunset Debris" by Ron Silliman. That thing drove me crazy (not literal) so I wrote a duplicate poem (just for myself) called "Ron Silliman Writes Poetry Like a Four Year Old Child" (never submitted!). However, for you bandwagonners, I also wrote a poem called "Ron Silliman is my Father" inspired by "The Chinese Notebook" also Ron Silliman. As for Beckett, "Waiting For Godot" need I say more. Maybe "Endgame."
Each of us has a say. S. Black
Sheila Black

--- On Mon, 2/22/10, steve russell <[redacted]> wrote:

From: steve russell <[redacted]>
Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, February 22, 2010, 2:23 PM

... or a dramatic monologue on video or film. That Beckett thing with a mouth. That singular grotesque thing that's mouthing words on film. What's the problem with dramatic monologues? If I knew the rationale ... Sillman's point of view, but it seems little more than ... o.k. ... it's his aesthetic ... but if the guy has a problem with dramatic monologues he's giving the finger to Beckett and that's as close to blasphemy as one can get in my stern book of principles.

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, February 21, 2010 2:02:24 PM
Subject: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

... or say I agree with Sillman. I'll at least consider Lowell a minor talent rather than a gifted, though priveleged (pity the ruling class) casuality of his dopey era.

But compared to Beckett, who is this Sillman? Better still, consider the quaint notion of free will ... type ... type ...

Compared to Beckett, Sillman, at best, is minor. Compared to the writings of Samuel Beckett, most, if not all so-called innovation (mid 20th century lit ... present) seems a hopeless search for novelty. Still, as we're hurried to say in D.C., why not throw in a little spin? There is a tunnel at the end of the light ... the quest continues ... why not? Vispo ... Christo wraps the Washington Monument in kleenex (HA) ... Jasper John's flag is mistaken for a dart board in a local D.C. pub (Jasper Johns, currently at the National Gallery) ...

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

51. steve russell
Re: S BECKETT vs. r sillman
Tue 2 Mar 2010

& i seem to be thinking too much about Silliman without spelling his name correctly. point taken.

_____
From: Andy Gricevich <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, March 1, 2010 3:56:50 PM
Subject: Fw: S BECKETT vs. r sillman

Um, I don't think that's what RS meant by "dramatic monologue." The term has a specific sense in poetry, associated primarily with Robert Browning. It has nothing to do with literal monologues in stage dramas like Beckett's.

I think of Silliman's work all the time, and have even bothered to learn to spell his name.

Andy

↑ Index

52. amy king
Non-poet reads poetry!
Tue 2 Mar 2010

Political scientist, Ashok Karra, continues to support poetry (something he doesn't write) by putting his thoughts out there about specific poems (for his mostly non-poetry-reading audience!) -- pretty daring if you ask someone who rarely critiques poetry (me!).

If you feel so moved, please visit and even post a note on his latest response to my poem, "State of a Nation" - thanks in advance!

http://www.ashokkarra.com/2010/03/amy-king-state-of-a-nation/

Best,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

53. amy king
Women artists / poets
Tue 2 Mar 2010

I don't know if I sent this here, but I sent it to a women's poetry listserv and have now second guessed myself: why shouldn't I send it to an "everyone" listserv?

Looks great --- take a gander at the short trailer here - http://www.whodoesshethinksheis.net/

Cheers,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

54. Michael Tod Edgerton
Re: Women artists / poets
Tue 2 Mar 2010

This looks awesome, Amy--and it's playing here in Athens! I'll get the word out to some folks here at UGA.

Cheers,

Tod

Michael Tod Edgerton
MFA '06, Program in Literary Arts, Brown University
PhD student, Dept. of English, University of Georgia

_____

If the challenge of our time is the challenge of empathy, to make an empathetic relation; that is, to see another person, to feel their pain, story, whatever--that--that how can a poetic material making be part of--of that?

~ Ann Hamilton, in an interview about her installation, Indigo Blue

_____
From: amy king <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, March 2, 2010 5:26:04 PM
Subject: Women artists / poets

I don't know if I sent this here, but I sent it to a women's poetry listserv and have now second guessed myself: why shouldn't I send it to an "everyone" listserv?

Looks great --- take a gander at the short trailer here - http://www.whodoesshethinksheis.net/

Cheers,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

55. William Allegrezza
Series A: Taransky and Shaw this Wed.
Tue 2 Mar 2010

Please come to Series A in Chicago to hear Michelle Taransky and Anne Shaw.

When: Wednesday, March 3.
Where: Hyde Park Art Center, 5020 S. Cornell, Chicago
Time: 7-8 (and we start on time)
BYOB!
Parking and easy public transit access.

For more info, see www.moriapoetry.com/seriesa.html or e-mail Bill Allegrezza at [redacted]

Bill

↑ Index

56. Camille Martin
new at Rogue Embryo
Tue 2 Mar 2010

New on my blog:

<Roundup>: links to eighteen close readings and other explorations that I've posted on this blog– from analysis of collaborative multidisciplinary performance to close readings of poems by Connie Deanovich, Ann Lauterbach, Trevor Joyce, Maxine Chernoff, and others

<Toronto Launch of Sonnets> at the fabulous This Ain't the Rosedale Library

<Third Gallery: Krewe of St. Anne, Mardi Gras>: third installment of Mardi Gras photo gallery

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

↑ Index

57. Anny Ballardini

A Haiti Fundraiser with Complimentary New Book by Eileen R. Tabios

Wed 3 Mar 2010

From Eileen Tabios:

==========

[Please Forward]

MARSH HAWK PRESS ANNOUNCEMENT
**
A Haiti Fundraiser with Complimentary New Book by Eileen R. Tabios

Marsh Hawk Press (New York) has teamed up with Meritage Press (San Francisco & St. Helena) to provide a poetry fundraiser for Haiti Relief.

Those who order five or more "Hay(na)ku for Haiti" booklets from Meritage Press' Open Palm Press will also receive a complimentary copy of Eileen R. Tabios' latest Marsh Hawk Press book, THE THORN ROSARY: Selected Prose Poems & New, edited by Thomas Fink (more information about THE THORN ROSARY at http://marshhawkpress.org/tabios4.htm).

As five booklets are available for $15 and Ms. Tabios' book retails for $19.95, we hope poetry lovers will find this offer an attractive way to contribute to Haiti relief. The following provides details on this Haiti fundraiser:

Open Palm Press
(an imprint of Meritage Press) is pleased to announce the series:
**
Hay(na)ku for Haiti

-- a fundraiser for Haiti, edited by Eileen R. Tabios and blessed by support from chapbookpublisher.com.

Poets who write in the hay(na)ku form (about which more information is available at http://haynakupoetry.blogspot.com) have consented to create hay(na)ku for helping Haiti's recovery efforts. The results are to be released as "pocket poem booklets" by Open Palm Press. Each will be sold for $3.00, reflecting the hay(na)ku's three lines, with all proceeds to be donated for Haiti relief.

The first eight of the series are:

#1: PARTICLE AND WAVE and FROM THE CHAIR, two hay(na)ku sequences by Jean
Vengua

#2: On A Pyre: An Ars Poetica by Eileen R. Tabios
#3: Hay(na)ku for Haiti by Tom Beckett
#4: when the earth moves by Lars Palm
#5: After René Depestre's "My Definition of Poetry", as translated by Edwidge Danticat, with lines at the end by Lafcadio Hearn by John Bloomberg-Rissman
#6: Mrs. Quake by Nicole Mauro
#7: Through Having Been, Vol. 1 by William Allegrezza
#8: Through Having Been, Vol. 2 by William Allegrezza

Over time, more releases will occur as it is anticipated that Haiti's relief requirements will be prolonged and deep. Poets interested in exploring the hay(na)ku through this fundraising effort may contact the series editor at
[redacted]

"H for H" booklets are lovingly produced by chapbookpublisher.com (http://chapbookpublisher.com/) on lilac-colored paper to fit, at 2.75" x 4.5 X 2", on an open palm -- ideal for giving engagements.

To order some or all of the series, please send checks made out to "Meritage Press" for $3 per booklet and send to

Eileen Tabios
Meritage Press
256 North Fork Crystal Springs Rd.
St. Helena, CA 94574

This offer is also available to non-U.S. residents, but with extra arrangements required for international shipping.

For more information, including on international orders:
[redacted]

--

↑ Index

58. Marc Nasdor
Re: Service for David Nolan
Wed 3 Mar 2010

To all who knew David Nolan,

This is indeed shocking news.David was one of a kind, a gentle man who had not a vindictive bone in his body. As a friend for nearly 30 years, I will miss him as a brother. Rest in peace Dave, may you bump into Jerry up there, and sing the Morning Dew together.

Goodbye, dear friend.

- Marc

Date: Mon, 1 Mar 2010 19:22:44 -0500
From: Poetry Project <[redacted]> Subject: Service for David Nolan

Dear Friends,

It is with great sadness that we share the news of the passing of our friend, colleague, and East Village neighbor David Nolan. David suffered from a heart attack last Thursday, February 25. He had just turned 47 on Valentine¹s Day.

David has been involved with the Poetry Project for many years as our much cherished audio-technical consultant. He worked with John Fisk, and as recently as this past New Year¹s Day, with David Vogen. Many of you probably noticed him assisting at the sound table for twelve hours straight, photographing each performer and live-posting portraits to his Facebook page throughout the event!

David was a friend to many people in our community, and his wife, Joy Linscheid, would like to extend an invitation to his memorial service to anyone who has known him over the years.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday, March 3, here at St. Mark¹s Church (131 E. 10th St. at 2nd Ave). The service will run from 4PM to 5:30PM. A reception will follow in the Parish Hall from 5:30PM to 7PM.

David worked with a number of community and arts organizations during his life; in lieu of flowers his family would appreciate that donations be made in David¹s name to one of the charities listed below, or to one of your choosing.

Our deepest condolences go out to David¹s family and friends.

Love,

The Poetry Project

Community and Arts Organizations
East Village Community School 610 E. 12th St., Room 205, New York, NY 10009.
Attn: Mary Talbot [redacted] x.2056
Poet¹s House 10 River Terrace, New York, NY 10281. Attn: Jane Preston, Managing Director [redacted]
Theater for the New City 155 First Ave., New York, NY 10009. Attn: Crystal Field
WBAI 120 Wall Street, 10th Floor, New York, NY 10005. Attn: Morning Dew

The Poetry Project at St. Mark¹s Church 131 E. 10th St., New York, NY 10003.
Attn: Stacy Szymaszek [redacted]

↑ Index

59. Ram Devineni

China: Bookworm International Literary Festival

Wed 3 Mar 2010

China: Bookworm International Literary Festival

Dear Friends:

If you plan to be in China in the next two week, please join me at the Bookworm International Literary Festival. Some of the great writers who will be there include Amitav Ghosh, Junot Diaz, Zoe Heller and many others. Here is my schedule of events:

March 6 at 6pm: screening and discussion of literature and cinema from Rattapallax. Guest is Caecilia Tripp. The Bookworm Sanlitun in BEIJING. http://www.beijingbookworm.com/schedule2010.php

March 7 at 2pm: discussion of "Notes on a Scandal" with Zoe Heller and screening of the film. BEIJING CNEX Theater. http://www.cnex.org.cn/

March 7 at 5pm: screening and discussion of literature and cinema from Rattapallax. Guest is Caecilia Tripp. BEIJING CNEX Theater. http://www.cnex.org.cn/

March 12 at 7pm: screening and discussion of literature and cinema from Rattapallax. Guest is Caecilia Tripp. The Bookworm Shi Quan Jie (near Shanghai). http://www.suzhoubookworm.com/schedule2010.php

March 16 at 6:30pm: Imagining India: Producer Ram Devineni and writer and musician Amit Chaudhuri discuss the presentation of contemporary India in film, music and literature. The Bookworm Sanlitun in BEIJING. http://www.beijingbookworm.com/schedule2010.php

While in China, Caecila and I will be working on a collaborative video project. She may have some gallery showings in either city, too. More information on Caecila Tripp http://www.martosgallery.com/artists/caecilia-tripp/bio/

Cheers
Ram Devineni
Rattapallax
Www.rattapallax.com

↑ Index

60. Mark Young
Out from Otoliths—Mark Young's Genji Monogatari
Wed 3 Mar 2010

Genji Monogatari

Mark Young

60 pages

Otoliths, 2010

ISBN: 978-0-9806025-8-6

$14.95 + p&h

URL: http://www.lulu.com/content/paperback-book/genji-monogatari/8350625

Genji Monogatari is a sequence of 54 poems, each keyed to one of the chapters of the 11th century Japanese classic by Murasaki Shikibu. The result is a complex and beautiful palimpsest, wherein we are privileged, simultaneously and sequentially, to look upon worlds within worlds within worlds. Mark Young opens the book on the processes of the composition of the sequence itself so that, along with his reading of The Tale of Genji, we are also given the progress of the writing of that reading. His technique, foregrounded here, demonstrates a fidelity to stochastics allied with a profound knowledge of, and respect for, tradition: replaying / our cached millennium. All the characteristics of Young’s recent work—ferocious intellect, coruscating satire, black humor, exquisite emotion—are fully present, along with something more difficult to name: as if, in the drawing back of screen after screen after screen, what is revealed is the nakedness of all enclosure, the silence inside both world and word.—Martin Edmond

Genji Monogatari will be launched by Michele Leggott in Auckland, New Zealand, on 31 March, at the Home & Away Symposium<http://www.nzepc.auckland.ac.nz/features/home&away/index.asp> organized by the New Zealand Electronic Poetry Center.

↑ Index

61. Al Filreis
PoemTalk #29: Armantrout, Dinh & Devaney on Kit Robinson
Wed 3 Mar 2010

Today we are releasing episode 29 of the PoemTalk podcast/radio series. In this episode, Rae Armantrout, Linh Dinh, and Tom Devaney discuss Kit Robinson's poem "Return on Word."

http://www.poemtalk.org

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
University of Pennsylvania

on the web: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis
blog: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/blog
PoemTalk: http://www.poemtalk.org
get your daily Al: http://bit.ly/1UCfRp dial 215-746-POEM or [redacted]

↑ Index

62. amy king
"...damned mob of scribbling women"
Wed 3 Mar 2010

This week's tops -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/03/damned-mob-of-scribbling-women-nathaniel-hawthorne/

Enjoy,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

63. Regina Pinto
AlphaAlpha is ready!
Wed 3 Mar 2010

Dear all,

"AlphaAlpha, an animated netbook of letters"

I am glad to say that it is ready at: http://arteonline.arq.br/a/ .

The concept of this netbook is the proper "history of writing, which is, in a way, the history of the human race, since in it are bound up, severally and together, the development of thought, of expression, of art, of intercommunication, and of mechanical invention."

"AlphaAlpha" is composed of 365 instances of the letter "A" plus one more for the leap year. The letters are collected in groups of about ten. "AlphaAlpha" is a collaborative work and includes participants â”€ artists & poets â”€ from several places around the world. "AlphaAlpha" is a good example of the possibilities of net art.

Artists:

JoesÃ©r Alvarez (Brazil) Â Bruce Andrews (USA) Â Jim Andrews (Canada) Â Paulo Aquarone (Brazil) Â Isabel Aranda - YTO (Chile) Â Isabelle Arvers (France) babel Â (Canada & UK) Â Vera Bighetti (Brazil) Â Bruno (Brazil) Â Patrick Burgaud (France) Â Josely Carvalho (Brazil) Â Steve Dalachinsky (USA) Martha Deed Â (USA) Â Rodolfo Franco (Brazil & Spain) Â Marcelo FrazÃ£o (Brazil) Â Muriel Frega (Argentina) Â Sabrina Gledhill (Brazil) Â Lisa Hutton (USA) Â Satu Kaikkonen Â (Finland) Â Maja Kalogera (Croatia) Â Roberto Keppler (Brazil) Â Manik (Serbia) Â Brigitte Neufeldt (Germany) Â Millie Niss (USA) Clemente PadÃn (Uruguay) Â Margaret Penfold (UK) Â Yuko Otomo (USA) Â Edward Picot (UK) Â Regina Pinto (Brazil) Â Isabel Saij (France) Â JosÃ© Roberto Sechi (Brazil) Â Reiner Strasser (Germany) Â Jurgen Trautwein (USA) Â Myron Turner (Canada) Â Susan Turner Â (Canada) Â Paulo Villela (Brazil) Â Miguel Jimenez - Zenon (Spain) Â Araceli ZuÃ±iga (Mexico)

I hope you like the complete site and send me your comments.

It is better visualized with Firefox and 1200 X 800 screen resolution.

Warmest regards,
Regina Pinto

--

==========

Regina Pinto

http://arteonline.arq.br
http://pintor.tumblr.com

↑ Index

64. Paul Siegell
Re: Out from Otoliths—Mark Young's Genji Monogatari
Wed 3 Mar 2010

---

outstanding news!

and, damn, that's a beautiful cover.
looking forward to my copy's arrival!

thanks so much,
paul>

↑ Index

65. Amanda Earl
Some Green Words-latest essay from AHP
Wed 3 Mar 2010

In the eleventh of AHP's essay series,"Some Green Words on Mostly One Topic," Jamie Bradley discusses the reading and writing of poetry: meaning, possession, elitism and youth.

to read the essay, please go to www.angelhousepress.com and click on essays.

hope you enjoy,
Amanda

Amanda Earl
AngelHousePress
www.angelhousepress.com
the angel is in the house

↑ Index

66. Carol Novack
FICTION & POETRY CONTEST
Wed 3 Mar 2010

ANNOUNCING THE FIRST MAD HATTERS' REVIEW KNOCK OUR HATS OFF CONTEST **

* *

Mad Hatters’ Review <http://www.madhattersreview.com>* is considering FICTION and POETRY submissions to our Knock Our Hats Off Contest until June 30th (11:59 p.m., USA EST). *

*First prize winners * in both genres will receive $250 (each)* plus publication *of their entries in Issue 12. The winning works of 5 runners-up in each genre will also be published in Issue 12.

All winning entries will be published in a print anthology called “Knock Our Hats Off: A Little Book of Curious Delights.” Each winner will receive a copy of this deluxe collector’s item. * The terms “fiction” and “poetry” * may be interpreted broadly. Take a walk on the wild side through our pages. Take liberties. Governments are taking them away from us, so we’re giving them away free.

*Our honorable judges: *

Cris Mazza , Fiction
www.cris-mazza.com

Sheila E. Murphy , Poetry
en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sheila_Murphy

*Our entry fee and modus operandi: *

$12 per entry via PayPal to [redacted].
Poetry: 3 poems max per entry.
Fiction: 3000 words max per entry.
By all means, enter as many times as you wish.

*All submissions * must be sent to [redacted] with the following information in the subject line:

- Your Name
- Genre (Fiction or Poetry)
- Title/s of submission
- Word Count

*Submitted works should *be copied and pasted into the exquisite corpus of your email AND attached as an RTF Doc. If you’re submitting visual poetry or visual fiction, attach your entries as jpeg/s or gif/s. If you absolutely MUST, submit these offerings in PDF format.

Pages of texts should be titled, but your name should only appear on the subject line of your email, as submissions will be read blind. We’ll ask for your bio and optional pic if you’re a first place winner or runner-up.

Simultaneous submissions are expected. Just tell us immediately if some other lucky editor has grabbed your gem/s. But please realize that we won’t refund entry fees.

Winning entries will be announced by September 15th. Please address queries to [redacted] (subject line: QUERY).

↑ Index

67. Jim Andrews
"Digital Duende: Reading the Rasp in E-Poetry" by Amanda G. Michaels
Thu 4 Mar 2010

I feel this is quite a good article on digital poetry: "Digital Duende: Reading the Rasp in E-Poetry" by Amanda G. Michaels (http://www.shiftjournal.org/articles/2009/michaels.htm). She explains Lorca's use of the term duende, concerning art, in his lecture "Play and Theory of the Duende". And moves on to look at work by Ken Goldsmith, Craig Dworkin, Simon Biggs, Mez, Alan Sondheim, and myself in relation to duende. And she discusses critical writing by Chris Funkhouser, Nathaniel Mackey, Michael Davidson, and Landow.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

68. Carrie Etter
Infinite Difference, sampler no. 8
Thu 4 Mar 2010

Sascha Akhtar's "The Sufi": http://carrieetter.blogspot.com

Just two more posts before the launch of Infinite *Difference: Other Poetries by UK Women Poets *in London on the tenth of March....

↑ Index

69. amy king
Re: Women artists / poets
Thu 4 Mar 2010

Very cool, Tod! Please let me know what you think, if you have time!

I think we're going to get a showing of it up here too. That is, we're going to try to get one... as anyone in any town can attempt - ask your local art gallery or school.

Best,
Amy

From: Michael Tod Edgerton

This looks awesome, Amy--and it's playing here in Athens! I'll get the word out to some folks here at UGA.

Cheers,

Tod

I don't know if I sent this here, but I sent it to a women's poetry listserv and have now second guessed myself: why shouldn't I send it to an "everyone" listserv?

Looks great --- take a gander at the short trailer here - http://www.whodoesshethinksheis.net/

Cheers,

Amy

↑ Index

70. Adam Fieled

New Apps on PennSound

Thu 4 Mar 2010

I'm thrilled to have a new set of Apps on PennSound:

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Fieled.php

Many thanks to Michael Hennessey and the other folks at PennSound.

Thanks for listening!
Adam Fieled [redacted]

↑ Index

71. Jim Andrews

abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz for iPhone and iPod touch by Joerg Piringer

Thu 4 Mar 2010

---

http://joerg.piringer.net/abcdefg

"abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz is a sound toy, a performance tool and an art work. You can play with the letter-creatures and watch and listen how they interact with each other or use them to produce soundscapes like you would with an electronic musical instrument. abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz blends art, biology, fun and physics to create a unique, dynamic and interactive sound ecology."

↑ Index

72. amy king

Query - Poem Commissions?

Thu 4 Mar 2010

So I commissioned a female artist not long ago to make some dolls of my partner-in-crime, Ana, and myself. I can't tell you how thrilled I was when they arrived today -- so much so that I posted a note and photos here --http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/04/strange-dolls/

But this got me to thinking, especially in relation to the film, "Who Does She Think She Is?" (http://www.whodoesshethinksheis.net/) -- how many of us are ever commissioned to sell our own art? How often do we support artists who are making a go of doing such? Is it possible to write poems for pay? Is there a way to start a trend, especially in the face of current economic climate, that gets back to supporting the little artist toiling away at her craft? Are you one of those artists who would be willing to give it a whirl?

I realize this raises a whole host of loaded issues (i.e. can creativity be prompted by pay? Can a poet actually sell poems? Is this a call to pull your dusty mimeograph and letterpress machines from the attics and basements?), but I ask after finding out a poet I know has done as much, and he's something of a name... and I'd like to open a discussion about such the business of making a life as an artist in this country. Or are we all just supplementing our lives with side art / "hobbies"?

Best,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

73. Andy Gricevich

madison: friday, march 5th: the WITH PRAWN SHAPED POETRY READING

Thu 4 Mar 2010

Please join us at the Project Lodge (817 E. Johnson) at 8pm on Friday, March 5th for this monthâ€™s installment of the _____-Shaped Reading Series. This monthâ€™s reading is shaped with prawn or simply shaped as with prawn.
Â
When you arrive you will hear the stimulating poetry of Michael Bernstein, Andy Gricevich, Matthew Guennette, and Steve Timm read by said poets in their own voices.
Â
Feel free to bring snacks to share for our potluck intermission where as-yet unanticipated conversations will take place.
Â
A $5-10 dollar donation is appreciated.
Â
More's to be found at http://readingshaped.wordpress.com

↑ Index

74. Ruth Lepson

Re: New Apps on PennSound

Thu 4 Mar 2010

---

thanks for writing about refusing to be cool & wanting to say everything.

On 3/4/10 10:36 AM, "Adam Fieled" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'm thrilled to have a new set of Apps on PennSound:
>
> http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Fieled.php
>
> Many thanks to Michael Hennessey and the other folks at PennSound.
>
> Thanks for listening!
> Adam Fieled [redacted]

↑ Index

75. Hugh Behm-Steinberg

Issue Eight of Eleven Eleven Now Up!

Thu 4 Mar 2010

Featuring poetry by: ThÃ©rÃ¨
At elevenelevenjournal.com!

Featuring poetry by: ThÃ©rÃ¨se Bachand, Dan Beachy-Quick, James Belflower, Oscar Bermeo, Amaranth Borsuk, Brian Brodeaur, John F. Buckley and Martin Ott, Cynthia Carmichael, JP Dancing Bear, Daphne Gottlieb, Elizabeth Hadaway, Marguerite L Harrold, Amy King, Ruth Ellen Kocher, Ada LimÃ³n, Dan Magers, Camille Martin, J. Michael Martinez, Maiana Minahal, Sara Mumolo, Tendai Mwanaka, James Ryan, Tim Seibles, Tanya Stepan, and Melissa Tuckey.

Prose by: Charlie Anders, Angela Jane Fountas, Jamey Genna, Lily Hoang, Ginnah Howard, Christine Hume, Baker Lawley, Jonathan Messinger, Anita Nair, James Scott, Kim Gek Lin Short, Lex Sonne, Paul Strohm, Diane M. Sullivan, Andrew R. Touhy and Mike Young.

Plays by: Josh Kornbluth, EM Lewis, and Gary Winter.

Translations of: Nurduan Duman (by RuÅŸen ErgÃ¼n), NÃ¢zÄ±m Hikmet (by James Ryan and HÃ¼da Cereb) and Yuka Tsukagoshi (by Yuka Tsukagoshi and Eric Selland).

Art by: Jenkins, Alyssa Monks, Pascale Monnin, Aubrey
Rhodes, Allyson Seal, Judith Selby Lang and Richard Lang, Kevin E. Taylor and Jean Tripier.

Plus poems and an interview with Benjamin Zephaniah.

I want to take this moment to thank my extremely hardworking staff, without whom Eleven Eleven would cease to exist: Adam Fagin, Adam Fagin, Daniel Ishofsky,Frank Weisberg, Rheea Mukherjee, David Mitchell, Vanelis Rodriguez-Laracuente, Neil Uzzell, Erin Francisco, Scott Allen, Chelsea Trescott, Josh Breitbart, Bryan Anthony, Samantha Boudrot, Lauren Camacho, Carrie Murphy, and Rachel Volk.

And a really huge shout for our designer,Sarah Magrish, and our webmaster,Tom Comitta.

I also want to thank all the discussions on this list about serendipity and how to make web interfaces for journals work in more interesting ways. I hope we measure up!

Our submissions for issue nine, our summer print issue, are now closed, but all that means is that we're now considering work for issue ten.

Send writing to:

Eleven Eleven
California College of the Arts 1111 Eighth St.
San Francisco, CA 94107

For more info, visit our site at elevenelevenjournal.com, or write to us at [redacted].

Cheers!

Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Faculty Editor
Eleven Eleven

↑ Index

76. Betsy Andrews
ESL Teaching Job in New Jersey
Thu 4 Mar 2010

Hey, all, this is a great little school. Pay is not great, but there could be opportunity for more classes down the line, and the work is good work.

JOB DESCRIPTION

Teach English as a foreign language for South and Central American students, mostly.

Course: Conversation 1 (Level 1)

Book: Ventures 1 (Cambridge)

Hours: 6:00PM to 7:20PM

Days: Monday to Friday

Venue: 310 Morris Ave. 2nd Floor - Elizabeth, NJ

Starting date: March 8th, 2010

Wages: $12 an hour

Contact: Daniel (Academic Director) - [redacted]

E-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

77. Nathalie Malek
Managing Editor Position - BOMB Magazine
Thu 4 Mar 2010

Managing Editor
BOMB Magazine
(Brooklyn NY)

http://www.nyfa.org/opp_detail.asp?type=Job&id”&fid=1&sidT&oppid(320

↑ Index

78. Jerome Rothenberg horse songs complete, an interview, & new blog postings
Thu 4 Mar 2010

I have two new appearances of work in magazines (online and off) that may be of interest to some here:

(1) All of the translation-derived versions of Navajo horse-songs (five in all) in the current issue of Bombay Gin out of Naropa. These have never appeared together except in an artist's version back in the 1970s and are presented here, along with my "total translation" essay, through the good offices of Andrew Schelling and Amy Catanzano.

(Copies can be ordered by checking their web site: http://www.naropa.edu/bombaygin/about.cfm)

(2) A new interview conducted by Mark Weiss and presently posted on Aryanil Mukherjee's Kaurab magazine (http://www.kaurab.com/english/interviews/rothenberg.html). This gives me a particular chance to speak for an international school of poetry and poetics, plus some other things.

In addition, a few recent postings on my Poems and Poetics blog (poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com), excluding various postings of my own work, might also be of interest here, e.g.

2010-03-01: Marjorie Perloff, An Afterword for Rae Armantrout

2010-02-25: Outsider Poems, a Mini-Anthology in Progress (13): American Sign Language as a Medium for Poetry

2010-02-21: Reconfiguring Romanticism (37): Jack Foley on "Hamlet, Keats, and La Conscience de Soi"

2010-02-17: Abdellatif Laâbi: from Fragments of a Forgotten Genesis

2010-02-09: John Bloomberg-Rissman: from No Sounds of My Own Making

2010-02-05: Homero Aridjis: Poems of the Double

2010-02-01: Christine Meilicke: Burrowing In, Digging Out: Digging Out Rose Drachler

2010-01-28: Robert Kelly: Three poems from "Fire Exit," with a note in celebration

2010-01-24: Ahira Tatehata: Seven Poems, with a note in praise of ...

2010-01-17: Reconfiguring Romanticism (36): Jacques Darras, We Are all German Romantics

2010-01-13: Aimé Césaire: Three Poems Newly Translated by Eshleman & Arnold

2010-01-09: Nathaniel Tarn: From Anthropologist to Informant, a Field Record of Gary Snyder

Forthcoming postings for March and April include work by myself and by Haroldo de Campos, David-Baptiste Chirot, Jeffrey C. Robinson, Christine Wertheim, Jack Foley, George Quasha, Rose Drachler, Moira Roth, David Meltzer, Hiromi Ito, Paul Celan, Osip Mandelstam, Pierre Joris, and Lewis Carroll.

2010-01-09: Nathaniel Tarn: From Anthropologist to Informant, a Field Record of Gary Snyder

↑ Index

79. Poetry Project

Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 4 Mar 2010

Here's what's coming up at The Poetry Project!

We also have some new audio content up on our website here:
http://poetryproject.org/multimedia/audio

And you should check out Lauren Russell's epic reading report on our recent Joanna Fuhrman/John Koethe reading here:
http://poetryproject.org/featured-content/reading-reports

SAVE THE DATE
Sunday, March 14th, 6:30 PM at St. Mark's Church
A Celebration of Haitian Culture: Benefit for Earthquake Relief

Please join The Poetry Project, Danspace, Ontological-Hysteric Theater and St. Mark's Church in the Bowery for a celebration of Haitian culture. All proceeds from the evening will be donated to Partners in Health: Stand With Haiti. http://www.standwithhaiti.org/haiti

Readings by Amiri & Amina Baraka and Denizé Lauture! Performances by John Zorn and master Haitian drummer Bonga! More artists to be announced soon!

Tickets to the benefit and to the pre-show reception at Pangea Restaurant are available for purchase at the benefit blog. Tickets will also be sold at the door. Please visit the benefit blog for updates and ticket options: http://benefitforhaiti.wordpress.com/

Monday, March 8, 8 PM
Andrew Zawacki & Mairéad Byrne

Andrew Zawacki is the author of three poetry books -- Petals of Zero Petals of One (Talisman House), Anabranch (Wesleyan), and By Reason of Breakings (Georgia) -- and several chapbooks. Coeditor of Verse and The Verse Book of Interviews (Verse), he has published criticism in the TLS, Boston Review, Talisman, How2, New German Critique, Open Letter, Australian Book Review, and elsewhere. A former fellow of the Slovenian Writers' Association, he edited Afterwards: Slovenian Writing 1945-1995 (White Pine) and edited and co-translated Ale¹ Debeljak's Without Anesthesia, due in spring from Persea. His translation, from the French, of Sébastien Smirou, My Lorenzo, is forthcoming from Burning Deck.

Mairéad Byrne's books include The Best of (What's Left of) Heaven (Publishing Genius 2010), Talk Poetry (Miami University Press 2007), SOS Poetry (/ubu Editions 2007), and Nelson & The Huruburu Bird (Wild Honey Press 2003); with chapbooks including State House Calendar (Dusie Kollektiv 2008), Vivas (Wild Honey Press 2005), An Educated Heart (Palm Press 2005) and Kalends (Belladonna 2005). She is an Associate Professor of Poetry + Poetics at Rhode Island School of Design.

Wednesday, March 10, 8 PM
George Tysh & Stephanie Young

George Tysh was born in Passaic, NJ, and educated in Detroit. In Paris in the '60s, he edited Blue Pig with poet David Ball, and collaborated with conceptual artists Christian Boltanski and Sarkis. From 1980 to 1991, he directed LINES: New Writing at the Detroit Institute of Arts, a series that brought more than 300 authors to read and discuss their works in the Motor City, and (with poet Chris Tysh) edited In Camera, a project devoted to works of the sexual imaginary. His latest collection, The Imperfect (United Artists Books), completes a sequence that includes Ovals (In Camera) and Echolalia (United Artists Books). Currently, he teaches at the Roeper School in Birmingham, MI.

Stephanie Young lives and works in Oakland. Her books of poetry are Picture Palace (in girum imus nocte et consumimur igni, 2008) and Telling the Future Off (Tougher Disguises, 2005). She edited Bay Poetics (Faux Press, 2006) and her most recent editorial project is Deep Oakland <http://www.deepoakland.org>.

Friday, March 12, 10 PM
Heather Christle & Andrew Dieck

Heather Christle grew up in Wolfeboro, New Hampshire. She is the author of the poetry collection The Difficult Farm (Octopus 2009), and a portfolio of her poems and other documents recently appeared in Slope. She lives in Atlanta, Georgia, and is a Creative Writing Fellow at Emory University.

Andrew Dieck is originally from Philadelphia, PA. He now lives in Tivoli, NY where he works as a personal assistant. He has a BA from Bard College. His poems have appeared or will appear in The Bard Papers, Gerry Mulligan, and The West Wind Review.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you'd like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

80. Patrick F. Durgin
Don Share on Bunny Lang
Thu 4 Mar 2010

The first in a new set of "Previews & Supplements": Don Share on V.R. "Bunny" Lang. See http://www.kenningeditions.com and stay tuned for other guest bloggers Laura Elrick, Peter O'Leary, Aldon Nielsen, and David Hadbawnik.

If you haven't yet picked up a copy of THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER: 1945-1985, consider a subscription. [For $35.00 you receive the anthology and, upon its release this spring, Pamela Lu's _Ambient Parking Lot_.] Also available from www.spdbooks.org, amazon.com, and any book seller worth surviving.

↑ Index

81. Tim Peterson

Tendencies 3/9: kaufman, Martin, & Dick

Thu 4 Mar 2010

TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice

erica kaufman, Douglas A. Martin, Mina Pam Dick

This series of talks by major poets, titled in honor of Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick, explores the relationship between contemporary poetic manifesto, practice, queer theory and pedagogy.

The next event features talks by:

erica kaufman

Douglas A. Martin

Mina Pam Dick

...followed by a discussion/Q&A session.

on Tuesday, March 9

at 6:30 PM

FREE

at CUNY Graduate Center

(in the Martin E. Segal Theater)

365 Fifth Avenue, NYC

erica kaufman is the author of censory impulse (factory school 2009) as well as several chapbooks including civilization day (Open24Hours, Winter 2007). recent work can be found in Little Red Leaves, Aufgabe, and elsewhere. essays and reviews can be found in The Poetry Project Newsletter, CutBank, Rain Taxi, Verse, among other places. kaufman is currently a Ph.D. candidate at the CUNY Graduate Center where she explores the interstices between contemporary poetics and composition & rhetoric. she lives in Brooklyn and teaches at Baruch College and Bard College.

Douglas A. Martin is the author most recently of a novel, Once You Go Back (Seven Stories Press). His other books include Your Body Figured, a lyric narrative; Branwell, a novel of the Bronte brother; They Change the Subject, a book of stories; and In the Time of Assignments, a collection of poetry. His first novel, Outline of My Lover, was named an International Book of the Year in the Times Literary Supplement and adapted in-part by the Forsythe Company for their multimedia dance-theater piece, "Kammer/Kammer." He teaches in the Low Residency MFA Writing Program at Goddard College.

Mina Pam Dick (aka Hildebrand Pam Dick, Nico Pam Dick et al.) is a writer, artist and philosopher living in New York City. She's a native New Yorker. She received a BA from Yale and an MFA in Painting as well as an MA in Philosophy from the University of Minnesota. Her writing has appeared in Tantalum, BOMB, The Brooklyn Rail and The Portable Boog Reader 4, and will be included in Aufgabe #9; her philosophical work has appeared in a collection published by the International Wittgenstein Symposium (Kirchberg am Wechsel, Austria). Her first book, DELINQUENT, was published by Futurepoem in December, 2009.

* * *

TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice is curated by Tim Peterson (Trace). For additional information, visit the Tendencies blog.

All events are co-sponsored by the Center for the Humanities, CLAGS (the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies), The Graduate Center PhD Program in English, and the GC Poetics Group.

upcoming TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice events this spring:

Dodie Bellamy, Eileen Myles, and Kevin Killian

on Friday, April 9 at 6:30 PM

in the Martin E. Segal Theater at CUNY Graduate Center

Jack Kimball, CA Conrad, and Stacy Szymaszek

on Thursday, May 6 at 6:30 PM
in the Skylight Room (9100) at CUNY Graduate Center

↑ Index

82. derek beaulieu

CHAINS by derek beaulieu (very few copies remaining)

Thu 4 Mar 2010

Hi folks;

my most recent book of visual poetry - CHAINS - is nearing the end of its print run, so if you are at all interested in picking up a copy, i recommend scooping it up relatively soon...

92 pages of visual poetry. $15 + postage.

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9780979847035/chains.aspx?rf=1

**

With CHAINS, derek beaulieu once again turns his attention to how "language regards itself, stalks itself, begins, slowly, to eat itself" (Canadian Literature) in a series of graceful abstractions made entirely from antiquated dry-transfer lettering. In chains, letters gather in elegant arrangements, architectural constructions and sinews of meaning. derek beaulieu is the author of 8 books of poetry and conceptual writing. In 2005 he co-authored, with Gary Barwin, fragments from the frag pool: haiku after basho, a book of playful translations. In 2006 he co-edited Shift & Switch: new Canadian poetry to wide acclaim. Alberta Views recently referred to beaulieu as a "mad scientist of visual poetry", and FFWD referred to his 2006 volume fractal economies as having "the potential to be like Miles Davis' Kind of Blue, which taps the veins of jazz for many listeners and musicians. Never read a book of concrete poetry before? This might be the one to hook you."

↑ Index

83. Lars Palm

Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

Thu 4 Mar 2010

---

when i lived in gran canaria i wrote some poems for pay. i simply sat down in a crowded place with a sign saying that for 5 euro i'd write a poem in 5 minutes on any subject they'd give me. of course they all turned out horrible, but for a few weeks it got me enough money for food & things

it appears that some english poets get commissioned by radio, tv & such quite regularly

http://larspalm.wordpress.com

↑ Index

84. mIEKAL aND

New from Xerox Sutra Editions: SEARCHIX by mIEKAL aND

Thu 4 Mar 2010

SEARCHIX
Sampletexts And Dissolution

http://xexoxial.org/is/SEARCHIX/by/mIEKAL_aND

Published by Xerox Sutra Editions
2010. 8x18, 138 pages, color. $16.00.
ISBN 1-438268-49-1 | EAN-13 978-1-438268-49-1

Xerox Sutra Editions presents mIEKAL aND's inconvenient disambiguation of search engines, spam, outside texts & literal displays of often loved hysteric sutras.

"Je préfère mon nouveau dégoût à l'ancien goût dégoûtant." -Isidore Isou

"While the sphinx retains her secret, who shall reveal the unconsummated significance of the asterisk—Nonwithstanding that the secret of the sphinx is not conveyed in words—the asterisk is an assumption that the secret is possessed by each of us and therefore need never be mentioned—the asterisk is the signal of a treasure which is not there" -Mina Loy

"When you make music or write or create, it's really your job to have mind-blowing, irresponsible, condomless sex with whatever idea it is you're writing about at the time. " —Lady Gaga

"Hello sheriff, give me another nose." —Clark Coolidge

↑ Index

85. Corey Frost

Multiformalisms: A Public Conversation at the GC

Thu 4 Mar 2010

Tuesday, March 16, 2010. 6:30 pm. At the CUNY Graduate Center, 365 Fifth Avenue New York, Rm. 9206. Multiformalisms : Postmodern Poetics of Form. (Essays. Edited by Annie Finch and Susan M. Schultz. Textos Books.)

Join poet and editor Annie Finch, along with contributors to the anthology Multiformalisms: Postmodern Poetics of Form, for a lively discussion of how contemporary poets use and understand forms. The conversation, like the book, will juxtapose traditional formalism and Flarf, the American long poem and native Hawaiian poetry, rhyme in Paul Muldoon and textual variability in New Media poetry, Susan Howe and Lucinda Roy, jazz and Asian American poetics, and much more. Featuring Marilyn Hacker, Patricia Smith, Tyler Hoffman, and Stefania deKenessey. Presented by the Center for the Humanities and the GC Poetics Group. Moderated by Corey Frost.

↑ Index

86. Gwyn McVay
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Thu 4 Mar 2010

I've done this at a punk-rock flea market. A member of the local roller-derby team was one of my patrons; while "My Wheels, Your Ass" will never rank among my finest contributions to litrachoor, it got me a little money and a big hug from the roller diva. And, of course, a silly story to tell.

Gwyn (Haven't started on a Norwegian-curling-pants poem yet, though) McVay

On Thu, Mar 4, 2010 at 8:11 PM, Lars Palm <[redacted]> wrote:

> when i lived in gran canaria i wrote some poems for pay. i simply sat down in a crowded place with a sign saying that for 5 euro i'd write a poem in 5 minutes on any subject they'd give me. of course they all turned out horrible, but for a few weeks it got me enough money for food & things

↑ Index

87. Adam Katz
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Fri 5 Mar 2010

Recently I've noticed some advertisements that appear to be in poem-y format.

For example:

http://www.qf.org.qa/think/Think.pdf

And it's pretty kind of good!

Maybe the way to get commissioned to write poems is to think about things they could be used for. Though I'm aware this idea of use is maybe taboo or incompatible with our for-its-own-sake mentality.

If for-its-own-sake is what poetry is, then it's not commissionable.

If for-a-commission is what we would like it to be, then we must think in terms of identifying, inspiring, and inventing market demand.

a

↑ Index

88. Nana Zabic
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Fri 5 Mar 2010

Lars,

You are my hero!

Amy, I remember when I was a kid in SFR Yugoslavia, poets (bad, of course, but not only poets, writers of all kinds) would tour schools and community centers all over the country, read, sell and sign books, and I believe they were getting paid for that either by their state-owned publisher or some state agency. Then they'd get drunk at the local "bohemian" bar/restaurant with the provincial amateur literati, sleep in some dingy hotel room, and then hit the road again in the morning. Or they wouldn't get drunk, that depends.

Also growing up, I saw all kinds of grave commemorations of the anti-fascist struggle and workers revolution in Yugoslavia that regularly featured poems written especially for the occasion, and read by famous actors. It was always televised. But I'm talking about ancient history in a non-existent land, maybe I'm just weaving a myth out of my unreliable memories. Go figure!

But poets in the US even nowadays get commissioned to write occasional poems, don't they? Not just Elizabeth Alexander. Although I don't know if they get paid for it. I remember (and this is not a myth) when a new chancellor was inaugurated at UNC Wilmington in the early 2000s, they commissioned a poem by a UNC Greensboro professor of creative writing. He read an ode that heavily utilized various words that end-rhyme with WilmINGTON. You'd be surprised how many words he came up with. I attended the inauguration because my role was to walk with other international students, each one of us carrying a flag of a foreign country to show off how cosmopolitan the school was.

SneÅ¾ana

On Fri, Mar 5, 2010 at 2:11 AM, Lars Palm <[redacted]> wrote:
> when i lived in gran canaria i wrote some poems for pay. i simply sat down > in a crowded place with a sign saying that for 5 euro i'd write a poem in 5 > minutes on any subject they'd give me. of course they all turned out > horrible, but for a few weeks it got me enough money for food & things
>
> it appears that some english poets get commissioned by radio, tv & such > quite regularly
>
>
> http://larspalm.wordpress.com
>
>

↑ Index

89. Joel Weishaus
"The Gateless Gate" Concluding Pages
Fri 5 Mar 2010

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

These are the concluding pages [10 texts/ten images] of "The Gateless Gate":
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/Gate-R/Pgs%2051-52R.htm

From the beginning:
http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282/Gate-R/Cover-R.htm

Entire project at archive site:
http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Gate-R/Cover-R.htm

[Best viewed with MS Explorer browser; text size : medium]

Thank you so much for your readings and critiques, as The Gateless Gate developed over the past year.

My Warm Regards.
Joel

↑ Index

90. Rob McLennan
above/ground press: state of the union,
Fri 5 Mar 2010

---

a note on near-seventeen years of publishing activity, http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/03/aboveground-press-state-of-union.html

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons
www.aboveground press.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

91. Naomi Buck Palagi
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Fri 5 Mar 2010

I think there is a very long history of artists working on commission-- and making great art. This is certainly true for visual arts and music, why not for poetry? I think the only danger would be if a writer doesn't do any writing at all outside the commission/ pay format. But to a large extent we want people to read and appreciate our work, it is why we try to publish, so why not have some of that appreciation be in the form of pay. "I like your poetry, can you write more for me and I will pay you?" I'd love that-- especially if there were few or no strings attached...

--- On Thu, 3/4/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Query - Poem Commissions?
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, March 4, 2010, 12:54 PM

So I commissioned a female artist not long ago to make some dolls of my partner-in-crime, Ana, and myself. I can't tell you how thrilled I was when they arrived today -- so much so that I posted a note and photos here --http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/04/strange-dolls/

But this got me to thinking, especially in relation to the film, "Who Does She Think She Is?" (http://www.whodoesshethinksheis.net/) -- how many of us are ever commissioned to sell our own art? How often do we support artists who are making a go of doing such? Is it possible to write poems for pay? Is there a way to start a trend, especially in the face of current economic climate, that gets back to supporting the little artist toiling away at her craft? Are you one of those artists who would be willing to give it a whirl?

I realize this raises a whole host of loaded issues (i.e. can creativity be prompted by pay? Can a poet actually sell poems? Is this a call to pull your dusty mimeograph and letterpress machines from the attics and basements?), but I ask after finding out a poet I know has done as much, and he's something of a name... and I'd like to open a discussion about such the business of making a life as an artist in this country. Or are we all just supplementing our lives with side art / "hobbies"?

Best,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

92. Mark DuCharme

FW: Stratford Park Reading Series: SCHELLING & ANDERSON, March 30th

Fri 5 Mar 2010

The Stratford Park Reading Series

proudly presents...

Andrew Schelling & Erik Anderson

TUESDAY, MARCH 30th at 7:30 p.m.

A Donation is requested— but All are welcome!

A reception will follow the reading.

§

Address: 3030 O'Neal Parkway, Boulder, CO

http://www.mapquest.com/maps?city=Boulder&state=CO&address=3030+O'neal+Parkway&zipcode=80301

DIRECTIONS: O'Neal Parkway is off 30th Street in north Boulder between Valmont & Iris. Turn East at the signs for STRATFORD PARK WEST. The community house is the one-story building with a fence leading down to the street, half a block from 30th. Please park ONLY on O'Neal Parkway, O'Neal Circle, or in VISITOR spaces in the Stratford Park West lots. Please do not park in any other nearby lots. Thank you.

§

Andrew Schelling is a poet, translator of the lyrical verse of ancient India, essay writer, and editor. He teaches at Naropa University where he supervises the letterpress print shop, and cutrrently serves as editor in chief of Bombay Gin. His poetry is known for its close observation of ecological realms. Recent titles: Old Tale Road (poetry) and Dropping the Bow: poems from Ancient India (translation, second edition of the book that received academy of american poets translation award in 1992. §

Erik Anderson's first book, The Poetics of Trespass, is forthcoming from Otis Books/Seismicity Editions in Spring 2010. His critical and creative work has appeared in American Letters & Commentary, Witness, The Laurel Review, The Poetry Project Newsletter, Versal, and Rain Taxi, among many others. A former contributing editor at the Denver Quarterly, he co-edits the mail-art magazine Thuggery & Grace and holds degrees from the University of Michigan, the University of Denver, and Naropa's Kerouac School. Born in Danbury, Connecticut and raised in Holland, Michigan, he lives outside of Longmont, Colorado.

§

If you no longer wish to receive email announcements of upcoming events in the Stratford Park Reading Series, please email [redacted] with the subject line "SPRS: REMOVE."

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection. Sign up now.

Hotmail: Trusted email with Microsoft's powerful SPAM protection. Sign up now.

Your E-mail and More On-the-Go. Get Windows Live Hotmail Free. Sign up now.
_____ Your E-mail and More On-the-Go. Get Windows Live Hotmail Free.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469229/direct/01/

↑ Index

93. Jennifer Karmin

Dusie Kollektiv: new poetry online

Fri 5 Mar 2010

DUSIE KOLLEKTIV
http://www.dusie.org

Read work by:

Samar Abulhassan
Derek Beaulieu
Cara Benson
Ann Bogle
Jessica Bozek
Ana Bozicevic
Elizabeth Bryant
Mairead Mairead
Mackenzie Carignan
Juliet Cook
Sarah Anne Cox
James Cummins
Michelle Detorie
Amanda Deutch

Julia Drescher
Kai Fierle-Hedrick
Annie Finch
Anna Fulford
Susana Gardner
Arielle Greenberg
E. Tracy Grinnell
Arielle Guy
Jared Hayes
Jen Hofer with Sawako Nakayasu
Carrie Hunter
Jennifer Karmin
Amy King
Paul Klinger
Mark Lamoureux
Juliana Leslie
Dana Teen Lomax
Nicole Mauro
Catherine Meng
Bonnie Jean Michalski
Anna Moschovakis
Michelle Noteboom
Dawn Pendergast
Emma Phillipps
Martha Reed
Kaia Sand
Kathrin Schaeppi
Zoe Skoulding
Carmen Gimenez Smith
Jane Sprague
Jill Stengel
Bronwen Tate
Maureen Thorson
Catherine Wagner
Stephanie Young

Dusie is an experimental poetics journal as well as a yearly poetry publishing kollektiv. Under the auspices of Dusie Press, poets participate both physically and virtually in communal projects. Poets in the Dusie Kollektiv write, design, produce and distribute poetic chapbooks in limited, signed, editions of 50 to 150 copies. Dusie also makes poetry available to a wider community through free online PDF downloads.

↑ Index

94. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City 62 Print and Online PDF Editions Available
Sat 6 Mar 2010

Please forward

Hi all,

The print edition of Boog City 62 will be available Sunday afternoon. You can read the pdf version now at:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc62.pdf

Thanks,
David

Boog City 62

featuring:

On the Cover

—"Controversial projects have seen developers continue to run roughshod over working-class neighborhoods that have little ability for residents to fight the steam shovels at their door." —from What Jobs, Hoops, and Housing? The Atlantic Yards Battlefield by Scott MX Turner.

And from this issue's all S.F. Bay Area poetry section, edited by Joanna Fuhrman (excerpt below)

—Woodacre, Calif.'s Albert Flynn DeSilver with "Desire"

A flock of Varied Thrushes is enough. They've made it in life. Onto the cover of Birders World. There is no word for individual in Bird or Thrush, no

And Inside

From our music section, Urban Folk, edited by Jonathan Berger

—"The first eight lines hold onto the A rhyme—veins, pain, rain, came, blame, same, train pass by before we get to a B rhyme. The message is clear—this album is about the slow build." from The Shivers' Dance Party for Frankensteins: Finding a Bump-In-The-Night Rock Groove; In The Morning by The Shivers, reviewed by Isaac Gillespie

—"Consider the case of legendary blues singer Robert Johnson. Although his last recorded words may have been "there's a woman here who want a dime and I lacks a nickel," his estate eventually grew to over $1.3 million dollars in 1998. Does that mean that at his death his 29 songs were worth the equivalent of $1.3 million 1998 dollars in 1938 dollars? They are, after all, the same songs." from Song Valuation in the Digital Age by JJ Hayes.

from our printed matter section, now edited by Arlo Quint

—"A little admission, a little blurriness, a little bravado—you get the feeling Coletti is comfortable with the role of underdog, though not without something in his back pocket." from The School of Opaque, Honest, Musical Glee: John Coletti Delivers With Mum Halo; Mum Halo (Rust Buckle Books), reviewed by Edmund Berrigan

—Arlo Quint poses 20 Questions to John Coletti

And the rest of our S.F. Bay Area poetry section (excerpts below)

—Palo Alto, Calif.'s Rachel Loden with "How Should Chicago Be Governed?"

Oh Chicago never stop being weird with your Casimir Pulaski oh Chicago!
Current mood: excited

Glitter is a killa in Chi tizzle
You are such a flirt with your Loose Leaf Lounge

—Oakland, Calif.'s Joseph Lease with "From X"

1 flowing over her face and green light flowing up into her hair—the past is wilderness—Fifteenth Century France is wilderness—tree trunks wet under a violet sky, streets overflow—you can't afford to go to Baja, Nieman-Marcus, Small Planet, Rizzoli, or Crate and Barrel—snow clicking in black branches, on mailboxes, tanbark, garbage—daylight’s long torso moves slowly—

Art editor Cora Lambert brings us work from Brooklyn Heights and Hudson, N.Y.'s Jen P Harris.

And thanks to Tracy Collins and Arlo for their photos, and Jesse Schoen for the Song Valuation art.

Please patronize our advertisers:

a+bend press * http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/80014/14000-facts.aspx Come Hear! LGBTQ poetry reading series * http://welcometoboogcity.com/comehear.pdf The Endangered Language Poetry Project * http://vimeo.com/2910357 Ugly Duckling Presse * http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org/

To advertise in Boog City, see our ad rate card:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Advertising or donation inquiries can also be directed to [redacted] or by calling 212-842-BOOG (2664), or you can send money to [redacted] via https://www.paypal.com/

Poetry Submission Guidelines: Email subs to [redacted], with no more than five poems, all in one attached file with “My Name Submission” in the subject line and as the name of the file, ie: Walt Whitman Submission. Or mail with an SASE to Poetry editor, Boog City, 330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H, N.Y., N.Y. 10001-4754.

Want to write a review (or be reviewed) in Boog’s Urban Folk music or printed matter sections?
Email UF editor Jonathan Berger, [redacted] or printed matter editor Arlo Quint, [redacted]

Want to have your work appear in our art section?
Query our art editor, Cora Lambert, [redacted]

2,250 copies of Boog City are distributed among, and available for free at, the following locations:

MANHATTAN

East Village
Sunshine Theater * 143 E. Houston St. (bet. 1st & 2nd Avenues)
Bluestockings * 172 Allen St. (bet. Stanton & Rivington sts.)
Pianos * 158 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.)
Living Room * 154 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.)
Cake Shop * 152 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.)
Bowery Poetry Club * 308 Bowery (bet. Houston & Bleecker sts.)
Think Coffee * 1 Bleecker St. (@ Bowery)
Trash and Vaudeville (upstairs) * 4 St. Mark's Pl. (bet. 2nd & 3rd aves.)
Mission Café * 82 Second Ave. (bet. 4th & 5th sts.)
Anthology Film Archives * 32 Second Ave. (bet. 1st & 2nd sts.)
Sidewalk Café * 94 Avenue A (bet. 6th & 7th sts.)
Nuyorican Poets Café * 236 E. 3rd St. (bet. Avenues B & C)
Lakeside Lounge * 162 Avenue B (bet. 10th & 11th sts.)
Life Café * 343 E. 10th St. (bet. Avenues A & B)
St. Mark's Books * 31 Third Ave. (bet. St. Mark's Pl. & 9th St.)
St. Mark's Church * 131 E.10th St. (bet. 2nd & 3rd aves.)

Lower Manhattan Acme Underground * 9 Great Jones St. (bet. Broadway & Lafayette St.) Shakespeare & Co. * 716 Broadway (bet. Waverly & Astor places) Other Music * 15 E. 4th St. (bet. Broadway & Lafayette St.) Angelika Film Center * 18 W. Houston St. (bet. Broadway & Mercer St.) Think Coffee * 248 Mercer St. (bet. W. 4th and W. 3rd sts.) Mercer Street Books * 206 Mercer St. (bet. Bleecker & Houston sts.) Housing Works Cafe 126 Crosby St. (East Houston & Prince sts.) McNally Jackson * 52 Prince St. (bet. Mulberry & Lafayette sts.) Hotel Chelsea * 222 W. 23rd St. (bet. 7th & 8th aves.)

BROOKLYN

Greenpoint Greenpoint Coffee House * 195 Franklin St. (bet. Freeman & Green sts.) Thai Café * 925 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Kent St. & Greenpoint Ave.) Matchless * 557 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Nassau and Driggs aves.) Champion Coffee * 1108 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Clay & DuPont sts.)

Williamsburg
Sideshow Gallery * 319 Bedford Ave. (bet. S.2nd & S.3rd sts.)
Supercore Café * 305 Bedford Ave. (bet. S.1st & S.2nd sts.)
Spoonbill & Sugartown * 218 Bedford Ave. (bet. N.4th & N.5th sts.)
Bliss Café * 191 Bedford Ave. (bet. N.6th & N.7th sts.)
Spike Hill * 184 Bedford Ave. (bet. N.6th & N.7th sts.)
Soundfix/Fix Cafe * 110 Bedford Ave. (at N.11th St.)

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

95. Jeffrey Side
Poems on Todd Swift's blog
Sat 6 Mar 2010

Todd Swift has kindly done a little write-up of me and included two of my poems on his Eyewear blog:

http://toddswift.blogspot.com/2010/03/featured-poet-jeffrey-side.html

Thanks Todd.

↑ Index

96. Anny Ballardini
the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology
Sat 6 Mar 2010

We are pleased to announce the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology with our felt acknowledgment to all those who sent their poems and visual work. An enormous accomplishment that is officially unveiled on a freezing Satur(n)/day here in the Alps and a terribly hot day in Nigeria, with an epileptic electricity supply that forces people to seek refuge under the trees outside:

· Editorial - Obododimma Oha<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3160>- · Editorial - Anny Ballardini<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3161>- · Michael Rothenberg<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3162> · Dennis Barone<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3163> · Daniel Zimmerman & Mom<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3164> · Ned Condini

<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3165> · Elizabeth Smither<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3166> · Douglas Clark<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3167> · Jeff Harrison<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3168> · John M. Bennett<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3169> · Tony Trigilio<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3170> · Peter Ganick<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3171> · Charlotte Mandel<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3173> · Ingrid Wendt<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3174> · Sohrab Sepehri<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3175> · Geoffrey Gatza<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3176> · Wendy Carlisle<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3177> · Peter Ciccariello<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3178> · Jim Leftwich<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3179> · Marilyn Hacker<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3180> · Ric Carfagne<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3188> · Jessica Fiorini<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3189> · George Bowering<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3202> · Márton Koppány <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3203>· Silvia Levenson <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3204> · Jameela ‘Nishat’ <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3205> · Hoshang Merchant <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3206> · Halvard Johnson <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3207> · Meg Withers <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3208> · Christina Pacosz <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3209> · Ruth Fainlight <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3210> · Jerry McGuire <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3211> · Jerry McGuire - 2nd part<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3212> · Evelyn Posamentier<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3213> · Evelyn Posamentier 2nd Part<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3214> · Wendy Vardaman <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3215>· Malaika King Albrecht <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3216>

· Grzegorz Wróblewski <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3217> · Rebecca Seiferle <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3220> · Luc Fierens <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3221> · Helen Ruggieri <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3222> · Ed Baker <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3223> · Daniel Godston <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3224> · David Howard <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3225> · Fan Ogilvie <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3226> · Christopher Flynn <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3227> · Nuri Gene Cos <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3228> · Penelope Scambly Schott <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3229> · Alan Sondheim Part 1<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3246> · Alan Sondheim Part 2<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3247> · Alan Sondheim Part 3<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3248> · Alan Sondheim Part 4<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3249> · Alan Sondheim Part 5<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3250> · Eileen Tabios<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3254> · Barry Alpert<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3255> · Jean Vengua and Michael A. Fink<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3256> · Kathrine Durham Oldmixon<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3257> · Sarah Rae <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3258> · harry k stammer<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3259> · Amy MacLennan<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3260> · Margo Berdeshevsky<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3261> · Obiwu <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3262> · Marco Giovenale <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3263> · Tom Savage <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3264> · Richard Dillon <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3266> · Drew Riley <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3267> · Richard M. Berlin <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3268> · Sola Olatunji <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3269> · Musa Idris Okpanachi <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?

pa=printpage&pid=3280> · Elizabeth Oakes<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3306> · Marian Veverka<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3310> · Judith E. Johnson<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3311> · Penny Harter<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3312> · Emma Bolden <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3313> · Marjory Wentworth<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3314> · Obododimma Oha<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3325>

With our best wishes,

The Editors

Obododimma Oha and Anny Ballardini

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

97. Carrie Etter

Our penultimate offering, Infinite Difference sampler no. 9

Sat 6 Mar 2010

This time it's a section of Elisabeth Bletsoe's "Birds of the Sherborne Missal": http://carrieetter.blogspot.com

I hope you enjoy it and would love to have your comments on this or any other selection if you'd like to post a response.

↑ Index

98. Obododimma Oha

Fwd: To Our Contributors - the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology

Sat 6 Mar 2010

We are pleased to announce the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology with our felt acknowledgment to all those who sent their poems and visual work. An enormous accomplishment that is officially unveiled on a freezing Satur(n)/day here in the Alps and a terribly hot day in Nigeria, with an epileptic electricity supply that forces people to seek refuge under the trees outside:

· Editorial - Obododimma Oha<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3160>- · Editorial - Anny Ballardini<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3161>- · Michael Rothenberg<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3162> · Dennis Barone<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3163> · Daniel Zimmerman & Mom<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3164> · Ned Condini <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3165> · Elizabeth Smither<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3166> · Douglas Clark<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3167> · Jeff Harrison<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3168> · John M. Bennett<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3169> · Tony Trigilio<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3170> · Peter Ganick<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3171> · Charlotte Mandel<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3173> · Ingrid Wendt<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3174> · Sohrab Sepehri<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3175> · Geoffrey Gatza<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3176> · Wendy Carlisle<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3177> · Peter Ciccariello<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3178> · Jim Leftwich<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3179> · Marilyn Hacker<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3180> · Ric Carfagne<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3188> · Jessica Fiorini<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3189> · George Bowering<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3202> · Márton Koppány <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3203>· Silvia

Levenson <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3204> . Jameela ‘Nishat’ <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3205> . Hoshang Merchant <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3206> . Halvard Johnson <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3207> . Meg Withers <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3208> . Christina Pacosz <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3209> . Ruth Fainlight <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3210> . Jerry McGuire <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3211> . Jerry McGuire - 2nd part<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3212> . Evelyn Posamentier<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3213> . Evelyn Posamentier 2nd Part<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3214> . Wendy Vardaman <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3215>. Malaika King Albrecht <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3216> . Grzegorz Wróblewski <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3217> . Rebecca Seiferle <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3220> . Luc Fierens <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3221> . Helen Ruggieri <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3222> . Ed Baker <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3223> . Daniel Godston <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3224> . David Howard <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3225> . Fan Ogilvie <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3226> . Christopher Flynn <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3227> . Nuri Gene Cos <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3228> . Penelope Scambly Schott <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3229> . Alan Sondheim Part 1<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3246> . Alan Sondheim Part 2<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3247> . Alan Sondheim Part 3<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3248> . Alan Sondheim Part 4<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3249> . Alan Sondheim Part 5<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3250> . Eileen Tabios<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3254> . Barry Alpert<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3255> . Jean Vengua and Michael A. Fink<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?

pa=printpage&pid=3256> · Kathrine Durham Oldmixon<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3257> · Sarah Rae <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3258> · harry k stammer<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3259> · Amy MacLennan<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3260> · Margo Berdeshevsky<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3261> · Obiwu <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3262> · Marco Giovenale <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3263> · Tom Savage <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3264> · Richard Dillon <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3266> · Drew Riley <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3267> · Richard M. Berlin <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3268> · Sola Olatunji <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3269> · Musa Idris Okpanachi <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3280> · Elizabeth Oakes<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3306> · Marian Veverka<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3310> · Judith E. Johnson<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3311> · Penny Harter<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3312> · Emma Bolden <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3313> · Marjory Wentworth<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3314> · Obododimma Oha<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3325>

With our best wishes,

The Editors

Obododimma Oha and Anny Ballardini

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

99. Rob McLennan

new from above/ground press: Marcus McCann

Sat 6 Mar 2010

Town in a long day of leaving by Marcus McCann

$3

Originally published by on the event of the authors relocation to Toronto from Ottawa by The Onion Union, November 2009; republished in Ottawa by above/ground press in an edition of 200 copies, March 2010; a/g subscribers receive a complimentary copy (2010 subscriptions still available); to order, send cheques (add $1 for postage; outside Canada, $2) c/o rob mclennan, 858 Somerset Street West, main floor, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7, or check out [redacted]

Point system

We are all the same is the moral of the story.
All men are the same is the moral of the story, but it is not good news. Strangers should never be encouraged is the moral of the story. Lose and forfeit your job is the moral of the story.

Come off hard is the moral of the story.

The wolf lives and probably will get you is the moral of the story. Resistance is justified is the moral of the story.

Your but Google is the moral of the story is the complete opposite of the truth. Think before you act is the moral of the story. The last line of the play is, The moral of the story isnt get along; its get to know your neighbor.

Marcus McCann lived in Ottawa for eight years. Evidence: he published poems in Ottawa-based journals including Bywords, Yawp, the Ottawa Arts Review, The Moose & Pussy, Peter F Yacht Club and Ottawater; performed at the citys reading series, including the Dusty Owl, Tree, Factory and the Ottawa International Writers Festival; worked with Ottawas Chaudiere Books to put out his first trade collection, Soft Where; won the John Newlove Award; hosted CKCUs Literary Landscapes; organized the Transgress Festival and the Naughty Thoughts Book Club; won the University of Ottawas 48 hour novella writing contest; worked with local writing group Ampers&; sold work at the Ottawa Small Press Book Fair; and shopped at Ottawas independent bookstores, including After Stonewall, Collected Works, Mother Tongue, Nicholas Hoare and Venus Envy.

http://www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com/

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

100. Martha Deed

New chap -- The Lost Shoe- Martha Deed

Sat 6 Mar 2010

Martha Deed goes where no poet has gone before. Combining cut-up and court transcript, oscillating deftly back and forth between textual poetry and visual poetry, adopting voice after effective voice, she brings us a gut-punch orb of truth where only the names have been changed, though the innocent remain unprotected. An excerpt:

Poppycock

Leave your common sense outside the door
do not speculate

what I say is not evidence the judge will instruct you on the law when I shout at the murder victim's mother do not hold it against me or take it out on my client sitting here in prison pallor, gray suit and tie so you will not know he is in custody
I am only doing my job
even a dead child’s mother can lie wouldn't you agree and her lies could put my client behind bars his freedom is at stake his innocence so important I will tell you what to think which facts you should ignore do not speculate I say leave your common sense
outside the door

—Martha Deed

http://chapbookpublisher.com/shop.html

48 pages. $10, includes standard shipping within the Continental USA.

↑ Index

101. george spencer

Re: horse songs complete, an interview, & new blog postings

Sat 6 Mar 2010

Â
My review (http://larspalm.wordpress.com/2010/03/02/george-views-the-perfect-dark/) of Susan Maurerâ€™s perfect dark (http://ungovernablepress.weebly.com/uploads/2/1/2/2/2122174/perfect_dark.pdf) is up on Lars Palmâ€™s site.
George Spencer

_____
From: Jerome Rothenberg <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thu, March 4, 2010 5:40:18 PM
Subject: horse songs complete, an interview, & new blog postings

I have two new appearances of work in magazines (online and off) that may be of interest to some here:

(1) All of the translation-derived versions of Navajo horse-songs (five in all) in the current issue of Bombay Gin out of Naropa.Â These have never appeared together except in an artist's version back in the 1970s and are presented here, along with my "total translation" essay, through the good offices of Andrew Schelling and Amy Catanzano.Â

(Copies can be ordered by checking their web site: http://www.naropa.edu/bombaygin/about.cfm)

(2) A new interview conducted by Mark Weiss and presently posted on Aryanil Mukherjee's Kaurab magazine (http://www.kaurab.com/english/interviews/rothenberg.html).Â This gives me a particular chance to speak for an international school of poetry and poetics, plus some other things.

In addition, a few recent postings on my Poems and Poetics blog (poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com), excluding various postings of my own work, might also be of interest here, e.g.

2010-03-01: Marjorie Perloff, An Afterword for Rae Armantrout

2010-02-25: Outsider Poems, a Mini-Anthology in Progress (13): American Sign Language as a Medium for Poetry

2010-02-21: Reconfiguring Romanticism (37): Jack Foley on "Hamlet, Keats, and La Conscience de Soi"

2010-02-17: Abdellatif LaÃ¢bi: from Fragments of a Forgotten Genesis

2010-02-09: John Bloomberg-Rissman: from No Sounds of My Own MakingÂ

2010-02-05: Homero Aridjis: Poems of the Double

2010-02-01: Christine Meilicke: Burrowing In, Digging Out: Digging Out Rose Drachler

2010-01-28: Robert Kelly: Three poems from "Fire Exit," with a note in celebration

2010-01-24: Ahira Tatehata: Seven Poems, with a note in praise of ...

2010-01-17: Reconfiguring Romanticism (36): Jacques Darras, We Are all German Romantics

2010-01-13: AimÃ© CÃ©saire: Three Poems Newly Translated by Eshleman & Arnold

2010-01-09: Nathaniel Tarn: From Anthropologist to Informant, a Field Record of Gary Snyder

Forthcoming postings for March and April include work by myself and by Haroldo de Campos, David-Baptiste Chirot, Jeffrey C. Robinson, Christine Wertheim, Jack Foley, George Quasha, Rose Drachler, Moira Roth, David Meltzer, Hiromi Ito, Paul Celan, Osip Mandelstam, Pierre Joris, and Lewis Carroll.

2010-01-09: Nathaniel Tarn: From Anthropologist to Informant, a Field Record of Gary Snyder

↑ Index

102. Anny Ballardini

Re: the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology

Sat 6 Mar 2010

And the direct link to the Anthology:
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=361

On Sat, Mar 6, 2010 at 5:24 PM, Anny Ballardini <[redacted]>wrote:

> We are pleased to announce the HEALTH & ILLNESS Anthology with our felt acknowledgment to all those who sent their poems and visual work. An enormous accomplishment that is officially unveiled on a freezing Satur(n)/day here in the Alps and a terribly hot day in Nigeria, with an epileptic electricity supply that forces people to seek refuge under the trees outside:
>
> · Editorial - Obododimma Oha<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3160>-*
> · Editorial - Anny Ballardini<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3161>-*
> · Michael Rothenberg<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3162>*
> · Dennis Barone<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3163>*
> · Daniel Zimmerman & Mom<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3164>*
> · Ned Condini<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3165>*
> · Elizabeth Smither<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3166>*
> · Douglas Clark<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3167>*
> · Jeff Harrison<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3168>*
> · John M. Bennett<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3169>*
> · Tony Trigilio<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3170>*
> · Peter Ganick<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3171>*
> · Charlotte Mandel<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3173>*

· Ingrid Wendt<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3174>
· Sohrab Sepehri<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3175>
· Geoffrey Gatza<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3176>
· Wendy Carlisle<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3177>
· Peter Ciccariello<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3178>
· Jim Leftwich<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3179>
· Marilyn Hacker<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3180>
· Ric Carfagne<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3188>
· Jessica Fiorini<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3189>
· George Bowering<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3202>
· Márton Koppány <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3203>· Silvia Levenson <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3204> · Jameela 'Nishat' <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3205> · Hoshang Merchant <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3206> · Halvard Johnson <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3207> · Meg Withers <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3208> · Christina Pacosz <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3209> · Ruth Fainlight <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3210> · Jerry McGuire <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3211> · Jerry McGuire - 2nd part<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3212>
· Evelyn Posamentier<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3213>
· Evelyn Posamentier 2nd Part<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3214>
· Wendy Vardaman <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3215>· Malaika King Albrecht <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3216>
· Grzegorz Wróblewski<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3217>
· Rebecca Seiferle<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3220>
· Luc Fierens<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3221>
· Helen Ruggieri<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3222>
· Ed Baker <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3223>
· Daniel Godston<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3224>
· David Howard<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3225>
· Fan Ogilvie<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3226> · Christopher Flynn<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?

pa=printpage&pid=3227>
· Nuri Gene Cos<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3228>*
· Penelope Scambly Schott<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3229>*
· Alan Sondheim Part 1<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3246>*
· Alan Sondheim Part 2<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3247>*
· Alan Sondheim Part 3<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3248>*
· Alan Sondheim Part 4<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3249>*
· Alan Sondheim Part 5<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3250>*
· Eileen Tabios<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3254>*
· Barry Alpert<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3255>*
· Jean Vengua and Michael A. Fink<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3256>*
· Kathrine Durham Oldmixon<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3257>*
· Sarah Rae <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3258>*
· harry k stammer<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3259>*
· Amy MacLennan<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3260>*
· Margo Berdeshevsky<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3261>*
· Obiwu <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3262> · Marco
Giovenale <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3263> · Tom Savage <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3264> · Richard Dillon <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3266> · Drew Riley <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3267> · Richard M. Berlin <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3268> · Sola Olatunji <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3269> · Musa Idris Okpanachi <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3280>· Elizabeth Oakes <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3306> · Marian Veverka <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3310> · Judith E. Johnson <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3311> · Penny Harter<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3312>*
· Emma Bolden<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3313>*
· Marjory Wentworth<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3314>*
· Obododimma Oha<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3325>*

> With our best wishes,
>
> The Editors
>
> Obododimma Oha and Anny Ballardini
>
> --
> Anny Ballardini
> http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
> http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
> http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
> I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
> Friedrich Nietzsche
>
> « Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
> vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
> Giovenale

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

103. Nicholas Karavatos

Faculty Positions and Department Head for the Department of Visual and Performing Arts

Sun 7 Mar 2010

Faculty Positions and Department Head for the Department of Visual and Performing Arts

Head of Department of Performing Arts

The American University of Sharjah is inviting applications for a Head of Department of Performing Arts beginning Fall 2010. The candidate should posses an understanding of international trends in performing arts education as well as performance experience on the university level. The role of the HOD will be to lead an exciting new performing arts program, begun in Fall 2007. The candidate should possess a doctorate or equivalent terminal degree in either Music or Theatre, strong communication skills, and proven administrative experience. This individual will also be expected to teach in one area of expertise within the department. AUS is located approximately twenty kilometers from Dubai. Please forward a CV, cover letter and list of three references to: [redacted]

Technical Director/Scenic and Lighting Designer

Theatre: The American University of Sharjah is inviting faculty applications for a Technical Director/Scenic and Lighting Designer to begin in Fall 2010. Responsibilities: teach courses in Theatre Appreciation, Stage Management, Stagecraft I and II, and other courses at the undergraduate level; supervise technical elements of theatre and music events affiliated with the Department of Performing Arts; design and construct scenic and lighting elements for theatre productions; comprehension of and experience implementing sound elements is a plus. This individual will be instrumental in writing new courses in technical theatre and developing a theatre program begun in January 2008. Minimum qualifications: MFA in theatre design; teaching experience; excellent communication and organizational skills; competency in scenic design, stage lighting, sound applications; ability to work collegially within a liberal arts setting; professional experience as scenic, lighting and or sound designer preferred. Candidate should submit a scenic/lighting/sound design portfolio with CV. Please forward a CV, cover letter and list of three references to: [redacted]

Piano Faculty

Music: The American University of Sharjah is inviting applications for a full-time piano faculty for the 2010-2011 academic year. Responsibilities: teach applied lessons and group class at the undergraduate level; teach courses in piano literature or general music literature depending on applicant’s qualifications; possible collaboration with voice students and choral ensemble. This individual will be instrumental in writing new courses and creating a dynamic vision for the Visual and Performing Arts Program. The candidate will also serve on university committees as needed. Minimum qualifications: M.M. in piano or piano pedagogy; experience teaching in a non-Western setting preferred; university level teaching experience; excellent communication and organizational skills; competency as a performer and teacher; ability to work collegially within a liberal arts setting; engagement in community building with a non-Western public preferred; willingness to contribute to local music styles preferred. Please forward a CV, cover letter and list of three references to: [redacted]

_____ Hotmail:

Trusted email with Microsoft's powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469226/direct/01/

↑ Index

104. Nicholas Karavatos

Department of English, Faculty Posts in ESP and EST

Sun 7 Mar 2010

Department of English, Faculty Posts in ESP and EST

The Department of English at the American University of Sharjah seeks a full-time faculty member with a specialty in English for Specific Purposes (ESP) to teach courses in English for Business and English for Science & Technology (EST).

The successful candidate will have a Ph D in a relevant field and a scholarly publication record. Preference will be given to applicants with experience in outreach programs related to ESP & EST, teaching non-native English speakers at the university level, and teaching in North American style universities. Work experience in the industry is also a plus.

Interested applicants should send a letter of application (including a statement of teaching experience and research interests), curriculum vitae, and the names and addresses of three referees to: Dr. William Heidcamp, Dean, College of Arts & Sciences, e-mail: [redacted]

The American University of Sharjah (AUS) is accredited by the Commission on Higher Education of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools.

For more information about AUS, please visit: http://www.aus.edu/about

---

Hotmail: Free, trusted and rich email service.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469228/direct/01/

↑ Index

105. Nicholas Karavatos

Department of English, Faculty Posts in Literature

Sun 7 Mar 2010

Department of English, Faculty Posts in Literature

The Department of English at the American University of Sharjah seeks a full-time faculty member with a Ph D and a scholarly publication record in Postcolonial Literature or Anglophone Diaspora Literatures. The successful candidate will be required to teach courses in advanced writing in addition to courses in literature. Preference will be given to applicants with at least five years teaching experience in North American style universities and with experience in teaching non-native English speakers.

Interested applicants should send a letter of application (including a statement of teaching experience and research interests), curriculum vitae, and the names and addresses of three referees to: Dr. William Heidcamp, Dean, College of Arts & Sciences, e-mail: [redacted]

The American University of Sharjah (AUS) is accredited by the Commission on Higher Education of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools.

For more information about AUS, please visit: http://www.aus.edu/about

http://www.aus.edu/employment/faculty_cas.php

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection.
http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469227/direct/01/

↑ Index

106. Jeffrey Side

Interview with Tom Clark

Sun 7 Mar 2010

There is an interview I did with Tom Clark at:

http://vanitasmagazine.blogspot.com/2010/03/tc-american-abroad- england-in-mid.html

↑ Index

107. george spencer
Review of Susan Maurer's perfect dark
Sun 7 Mar 2010

My review (http://larspalm.wordpress.com/2010/03/02/george-views-the-perfect-dark/) of Susan Maurerâ€™s perfect dark (http://ungovernablepress.weebly.com/uploads/2/1/2/2/2122174/perfect_dark.pdf) is up on Lars Palmâ€™s site. George Spencer

↑ Index

108. { brad brace }
WATERS COLOURS
Sun 7 Mar 2010

just finished my webpage for my watercolours that I've started to do on my trips -- a lot of fun for me without all the usual conceptual and 'project' baggage.... /:b

http://bbrace.net/webgallerywc/wc.html
http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/webgallerywc/wc.html

↑ Index

109. John Tranter
China: Bookworm International Literary Festival
Sun 7 Mar 2010

A polite note of warning to those rushing off to the China: Bookworm International Literary Festival. Jacket magazine has been banned in China for a decade. If you're discussing poetry in public or in private, it might be best not to bring up Jacket as a topic: something harmless like macrame, gardening or finger-painting would be a safer choice.

Oh, and don't admit you have HIV/AIDS if you have HIV/AIDS; Australian writer Robert Dessaix was denied a visa last week after he had admitted on his visa applicaiton form that he had HIV/AIDS.

Yours democratically,

---------- John Tranter

> http://johntranter.com/
>
> http://jacketmagazine.com/

↑ Index

110. Carrie Etter

The final Infinite Difference sample, no. 10: Frances Kruk's concrete poem, "flux"

Mon 8 Mar 2010

It's up at http://carrieetter.blogspot.com. I hope you enjoy it.

↑ Index

111. Al Filreis

Susan Howe by live video stream - interactive webcast - March 23

Mon 8 Mar 2010

Dear friends:

On Tuesday, March 23, beginning promptly at 10:30 AM Eastern Time, I will be interviewing and hosting a discussion with SUSAN HOWE. (Howe will be visiting the Kelly Writers House as the second of our three 2010 Writers House Fellows.)

This program will be streamed live. There will be an audience at the Writers House in Philadelphia, but also a large online audience.

Those watching the webcast will be able to pose questions to Susan Howe by email or telephone.

If you want to participate, contact [redacted]. We will give you instructions for logging on, etc.

For more information: http://writing.upenn.edu/wh/people/fellows/

- Al Filreis

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
University of Pennsylvania

on the web: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis
blog: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/blog
PoemTalk: http://www.poemtalk.org
get your daily Al: http://bit.ly/1UCfRp

↑ Index

112. Ann Stephenson
<<BRUCE COVEY>> READY SET READINGS at Whitespace Gallery
Mon 8 Mar 2010

READY SET READINGS at Whitespace Gallery

BRUCE COVEY
Friday, March 12th | 8:00pm

{A limited number of letterpress books created especially for this event will be given away at the reading.}

Bruce Covey's fourth and fifth books of poems, Glass Is Really a Liquid (No Tell Books) and Reveal (Black Radish) will both be out in 2010. He lives in Atlanta, Georgia, where he teaches at Emory University, edits Coconut Poetry, and curates the What's New in Poetry reading series.

Upcoming: April 16th - Kostas Anagnopoulos

READY SET READINGS at Whitespace is committed to new and innovative writing.

WHITESPACE - 814 Edgewood Avenue Northeast - Atlanta, GA 30307
[redacted]

http://www.whitespace814.com/
http://whitespace814.blogspot.com/2010/03/poet-bruce-covey-at-whitespace.html

↑ Index

113. amy king
From Ron Silliman's post on International Women's Day
Mon 8 Mar 2010

I hate to admit that this situation was perceived, at least by myself & the male poets I knew, as â€œnormalâ€ back in the 1960s, but it was...

So that when Kathleen Fraser â€“ that name again â€“ joined with some like-minded friends in 1983 to create HOW(ever), the timing was perfect: it proved to be an epoch-making event...

Still, nothing has done more to change â€“ blur, to some degree even erase â€“ the faultlines for poetry in my lifetime than the mass emergence of women writing. For all of the problems that I have with the concept of hybridity in poetry, I canâ€™t escape the fact that for many writers, especially those younger than myself, the bifurcation of poetry into two counter-posing traditions is experienced as a quarrel among men (white men at that), and that the landscape of poetry in the English language now looks entirely different.

Not that all is perfect. Far from it. It is still possible to have a major award shortlist that consists entirely of men, even though everyone now seems to concede that the absolute majority of poets writing in English are women. Further, this disparity continues to turn up in some of the ways women writers express themselves. Of the 1192 active blogs on my blogroll, 392 are written by women, slightly under 33 percent. For the next week, the top list on my new links page will consist of nothing but these women (and, knowing Blogger, that may be the only list visible). Now, itâ€™s conceivable that one of the reasons for this disparity is me â€“ if Iâ€™m missing anyone, send me an email and let me know. Itâ€™s also true that not all of the collective blogs are exclusively by men â€“ Give a Fig missed this list because one of its 13 contributors is male. But the distance between the 25 percent figure that marked the participation by women in In the American Tree in 1986 and the 32.9 percent in my blogroll 24 years later is not the sign of a successful revolution so much as it is of one still very much in process. Women who blog about poetry, poetics & the arts

CONT -- http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/2010/03/early-editors-of-however-l-to-r-bev.html

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

114. steve dalachinsky

3 new chaps out from propaganda press/alternating current

Tue 9 Mar 2010

---

just out from propaganda press:

3 new chapbooks

1. sunday afternoon on the isle of museum by yuko otomo (cover art by yuko)

2. the insomnia poems - midnite/noon -for/after lousie bourgeois by steve dalachinsky (cover art by yuko)

3. invasion of the animal people by steve dalachinsky (poems and collage by steve) go to alt-current.com or backchannel steve if ya want more info

↑ Index

115. steve dalachinsky

Re: horse songs complete, an interview, & new blog postings

Tue 9 Mar 2010

---

just out from propaganda press:

2 new chapbooks

1. sunday afternoon on the isle of museum by yuko otomo (cover art by yuko)

2. invasion of the animal people by steve dalachinsky (poems and collage by steve)

go to alt-current.com

On Sat, 6 Mar 2010 11:29:45 -0800 george spencer <[redacted]>
writes:
>
> My review
>
(http://larspalm.wordpress.com/2010/03/02/george-views-the-perfect-dark/)

> of Susan Maurer's perfect dark
>
(http://ungovernablepress.weebly.com/uploads/2/1/2/2/2122174/perfect_dark
.pdf)
> is up on Lars Palm's site.
> George Spencer
>
>
>
>
> _____
> From: Jerome Rothenberg <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Thu, March 4, 2010 5:40:18 PM
> Subject: horse songs complete, an interview, & new blog postings
>
> I have two new appearances of work in magazines (online and off) > that may be of interest to some here:

>
>
> (1) All of the translation-derived versions of Navajo horse-songs > (five in all) in the current issue of Bombay Gin out of Naropa.
> These have never appeared together except in an artist's version > back in the 1970s and are presented here, along with my "total > translation" essay, through the good offices of Andrew Schelling and > Amy Catanzano.
>
> (Copies can be ordered by checking their web site:
> http://www.naropa.edu/bombaygin/about.cfm)
>
>
>
> (2) A new interview conducted by Mark Weiss and presently posted on > Aryanil Mukherjee's Kaurab magazine > (http://www.kaurab.com/english/interviews/rothenberg.html). This > gives me a particular chance to speak for an international school of > poetry and poetics, plus some other things.
>
>
>
> In addition, a few recent postings on my Poems and Poetics blog > (poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com), excluding various postings of my own > work, might also be of interest here, e.g.
>
>
>
> 2010-03-01: Marjorie Perloff, An Afterword for Rae Armantrout
>
> 2010-02-25: Outsider Poems, a Mini-Anthology in Progress (13):
> American Sign Language as a Medium for Poetry
>
> 2010-02-21: Reconfiguring Romanticism (37): Jack Foley on "Hamlet, > Keats, and La Conscience de Soi"
>
> 2010-02-17: Abdellatif Laâbi: from Fragments of a Forgotten Genesis
>
> 2010-02-09: John Bloomberg-Rissman: from No Sounds of My Own > Making
>
> 2010-02-05: Homero Aridjis: Poems of the Double

>
> 2010-02-01: Christine Meilicke: Burrowing In, Digging Out: Digging > Out Rose Drachler
>
> 2010-01-28: Robert Kelly: Three poems from "Fire Exit," with a note > in celebration
>
> 2010-01-24: Ahira Tatehata: Seven Poems, with a note in praise of
> ...
>
> 2010-01-17: Reconfiguring Romanticism (36): Jacques Darras, We Are > all German Romantics
>
> 2010-01-13: Aimé Césaire: Three Poems Newly Translated by Eshleman > & Arnold
>
> 2010-01-09: Nathaniel Tarn: From Anthropologist to Informant, a > Field Record of Gary Snyder
>
>
>
> Forthcoming postings for March and April include work by myself and > by Haroldo de Campos, David-Baptiste Chirot, Jeffrey C. Robinson, > Christine Wertheim, Jack Foley, George Quasha, Rose Drachler, Moira
> Roth, David Meltzer, Hiromi Ito, Paul Celan, Osip Mandelstam, Pierre > Joris, and Lewis Carroll.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> 2010-01-09: Nathaniel Tarn: From Anthropologist to Informant, a > Field Record of Gary Snyder
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>

↑ Index

116. Paul Siegell

Mar 9th! Poets Bojan Louis and Matt Shindell @ the Bubble House

Tue 9 Mar 2010

IF IT'S MARCH 9TH, IT'S TONIGHT!

Painted Bride Quarterly is pleased to present a poetry reading on Tuesday, March 9th at 7:30 p.m. at Bubble House (3404 Sansom St., Phila., 19104) with poets Matthew Shindell and Bojan Louis, hoping for no snow this time around.

MATT SHINDELL's first full-length book of poems, "In Another Castle," was a finalist for the 2008 Tupelo Press First Book Award. He is currently a Fellow at the Chemical Heritage Foundation here in Philadelphia.

BOJAN LOUIS is Dine (Navajo) originally from Arizona where he worked as a general contractor and electrician. He holds an MFA from Arizona State University. His work, most recently, has appeared in The Kenyon Review. He's currently at work on a collection of short fictions and a collection of poetry.

For more information, see: http://www.pbq.drexel.edu, or write: [redacted].

hope to see you there,
paul>
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com

↑ Index

117. UbuWeb

Marjorie Perloff Picks UbuWeb's Top Ten for March 2010

Tue 9 Mar 2010

---

http://www.poetryfoundation.org/harriet/2010/03/marjorie-perloff-picks-ubuweb-top-ten-for-march/

1. Ernst Jandl, Bist eulen?
http://ubu.com/sound/jandl.html

2. William Kentridge â€“ Stereoscope http://ubu.com/film/kentridge_stereoscope.html

3. Samuel Beckett â€“ Quadrat 1+2
http://ubu.com/film/beckett_quad.html

4. Cheryl Donegan â€“ Refuses http://www.ubu.com/film/donegan_refuses.html

5. VerbiVocoVisual Concrete Poetry and Music (1956-1970) http://ubu.com/sound/noigandres.html

6. Merce Cunningham â€“ Points in Space (1986) http://ubu.com/film/cunningham_points.html

7. Robert Smithson and Nancy Holt â€“ Mono Lake http://ubu.com/film/smithson_mono.html

8. Caroline Bergvall, Via and About Face http://www.ubu.com/sound/bergvall.html

9. Derek Beaulieu -â€an afterword after words: notes towards a `concrete poeticâ€ [PDF] http://www.ubu.com/papers/beaulieu_concrete_commentary.pdf

10. Ã–yvind FahlstrÃ¶m â€“ Manifesto for Concrete Poetry (1952-55) http://www.ubu.com/papers/fahlstrom01.html

Marjorie Perloff co-edited with Craig Dworkin THE SOUND OF POETRY/THE POETRY OF SOUND (Chicago, 2009). Her UNORIGINAL GENIUS: POETRY BY OTHER MEANS IN THE NEW CENTURY will be published in Fall 2010.

UbuWeb can be found at http://ubu.com

↑ Index

118. amy king
How to Say What You Haven't Yet
Tue 9 Mar 2010

Response in kind --

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/09/how-to-say-what-you-havent/

Enjoy!

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

119. Obododimma Oha
The Listserv and the Least Served
Tue 9 Mar 2010

"As a context for sharing ideas, online resources, information, etc, listserv is, nevertheless, immensely useful to its subscribers. It is a context of education and consciousness-raising. A listserv that has specific professional commitments helps its members in their professional development a great deal and thus becomes indispensable as the imagined place to meet with those who know "the way."

These days that education in a country like Nigeria is in great travail, having access to the Internet and subscribing to a listserv where sound professional sharing goes on could be one way of maintaining one's intellectual wellbeing. Everyday one reads listserv postings and the resources shared, one has truly answered "present" in a classroom with little or no tuition paid."

Read the full text of "The Listserv and the Least Served<http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Opinion/5537716-184/shibboleth_the_listserv_and_the_least.csp>"
at:

http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Opinion/5537716-184/shibboleth_the_listserv_and_the_least.csp

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

120. Laura Hinton
Re: From Ron Silliman's post on International Women's Day
Tue 9 Mar 2010

Thanks, Amy, for posting Ron's bit. Here is one response: chantdelasirene.com<http://www.chantdelasirene.com/2010/03/look-at-me-look-at-my-arm-international.html>

And in "celebration" of Women's History Month and the younger women among us, you can check out my recently expanded and revised review of Nona Aronowitz and Emma Bee Bernstein's Girldrive, also in the Poetry Project Newsletter ("The 'Strangeness' of Girldrive") : http://www.chantdelasirene.com/2010/02/strangeness-of-girldrive.html

Laura

--
Laura Hinton
Professor of English
City College of New York
138 at Convent Ave.
New York, New York 10031

http://www.mermaidtenementpress.com
http://www.chantdelasirene.com

↑ Index

121. amy king
On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...
Tue 9 Mar 2010

---

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/09/two-poets-earning-their-keep/

Answers/speculations/questions welcome!

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

122. Jonathan Ball
Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...
Tue 9 Mar 2010

I'm always disappointed by these "buck-a-poem" projects. Is poetry worthless? Does it not require time, dedication, hours, days, weeks? I will write anybody a poem for $1000.

Jonathan

On Tue, Mar 9, 2010 at 4:31 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/09/two-poets-earning-their-keep/
>
> Answers/speculations/questions welcome!
>
> Amy
>
> ———
>
> BOOK
>
> Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm
>
> RANT
>
> "My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html
>
> ESSAY
>
> "The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

--
Dr. Jonathan Ball, Ph.D. (English)
Sessional Instructor

University of Manitoba
University of Winnipeg

www.jonathanball.com

EX MACHINA is out now!
Visit the publisher's page:
http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=200915
Visit the McNally Robinson page:
http://www.mcnallyrobinson.com/product/category/0/item/558194/
Visit the Amazon page:
http://www.amazon.ca/Ex-Machina-Jonathan-Ball/dp/1897388489/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1257005873&sr=8-1

“If someone tells you writing is easy, he is either lying or I hate him.” -- Farley Mowat

↑ Index

123. Dan Glass
With + Stand 4: the Lisa Robertson Issue
Tue 9 Mar 2010

"We always dream in colour. This is part of the history of surfaces." —*How to Colour, *The Office for Soft Architecture

With + Stand is thrilled to announce the publication of its fourth issue, devoted to the work of the great poet of materials and magenta, Lisa Robertson. Featuring essays and poetry by Stephanie Young, Scott Sweeney, Dan Thomas-Glass, Brian Ang, Anne Lesley Selcer, Alli Warren, Erika Staiti, Michael Marcinowski, Brian Mornar, Melissa Mack, Charles Legere, Jamey Jones, Richard Meier, Sam Lohmann, Alyssa Wolff, Sara Marcus, and Phoebe Wayne, as well as new work by Lisa Robertson.

The journal will be available to the public at a reading and release party, featuring Lisa Robertson and journal contributors:
Sunday, March 21st, 7-9pm
* Urban Ore EcoPark*
* 900 Murray St*
* Berkeley, CA*
* *The reading, like the journal, is free.

Details—
With + Stand:
http://withplusstand.blogspot.com/
Urban Ore:
http://urbanore.ypguides.net/

↑ Index

124. Stephen Ellis

Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...

Tue 9 Mar 2010

No poet should be selling a poem here and a poem there for a buck, a hundred, a thousand, etc. dollars. Poets ought to be supported by the 21st Century equivalent of royalty and courts: The banks. They should also conspire with the banks that support them to steal as much money as possible from the banks that don't support either the poet or his representative bank, while at the same time, using his new-found wealth and common wit to conspire with as many non-bankers (and/or non-poets, spontaneous non-poet poets, etc.) as seem willing, to blow up both the banks that support him and the banks that don't: The corporate world of American poetry: May we watch it fall apart, or be blasted to smithereens? Be a tourist, a theorist, a terrorist. Light the fuse, keep it short, but just be sure to smile when you say that, Miss, or Brother.

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

> Date: Tue, 9 Mar 2010 16:38:33 -0600
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...
> To: [redacted]
>
> I'm always disappointed by these "buck-a-poem" projects. Is poetry worthless? Does it not require time, dedication, hours, days, weeks? I will write anybody a poem for $1000.
>
> Jonathan
>
> On Tue, Mar 9, 2010 at 4:31 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/09/two-poets-earning-their-keep/
>
> Answers/speculations/questions welcome!
>
> Amy
>
> ———
>
> BOOK
>
> Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

> RANT
>
> "My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html
>
> ESSAY
>
> "The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html
>
> --
> Dr. Jonathan Ball, Ph.D. (English)
> Sessional Instructor
> University of Manitoba
> University of Winnipeg
>
> www.jonathanball.com
>
> EX MACHINA is out now!
> Visit the publisher's page:
> http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=200915
> Visit the McNally Robinson page:
> http://www.mcnallyrobinson.com/product/category/0/item/558194/
> Visit the Amazon page:
> http://www.amazon.ca/Ex-Machina-Jonathan-Ball/dp/1897388489/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1257005873&sr=8-1
>
> “If someone tells you writing is easy, he is either lying or I hate him.” -- Farley Mowat

↑ Index

125. amy king

Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

Tue 9 Mar 2010

Haha! That's one way of doing it! Of course, y

Dear SneÅ¾ana,

Haha! That's one way of doing it! Of course, you might see similar behavior as those first poets you mention at AWP each year...

As for the occasional poems, yes, I think this does happen now and then, if one is lucky. Of course, the poets commissioned are likely something of a "name" and ergo not likely in dire need of money to survive on. The capitalist catch...

I'd be curious to know if Croats and Serbs are still commissioned at all. One of my fellow faculty members, Mario Susko, is a well known poet there but not as much here. He often flies to Croatia and, I believe, Serbia, for public readings, etc. I don't think he is commissioned to write poems though. He does often write about the war though. Are many poets there not doing so?

Best,
Amy

From: Nana Zabic

Amy, I remember when I was a kid in SFR Yugoslavia, poets (bad, of course, but not only poets, writers of all kinds) would tour schools and community centers all over the country, read, sell and sign books, and I believe they were getting paid for that either by their state-owned publisher or some state agency. Then they'd get drunk at the local "bohemian" bar/restaurant with the provincial amateur literati, sleep in some dingy hotel room, and then hit the road again in the morning. Or they wouldn't get drunk, that depends.

Also growing up, I saw all kinds of grave commemorations of the anti-fascist struggle and workers revolution in Yugoslavia that regularly featured poems written especially for the occasion, and read by famous actors. It was always televised. But I'm talking about ancient history in a non-existent land, maybe I'm just weaving a myth out of my unreliable memories. Go figure!

But poets in the US even nowadays get commissioned to write occasional poems, don't they? Not just Elizabeth Alexander. Although I don't know if they get paid for it. I remember (and this is not a myth) when a new chancellor was inaugurated at UNC Wilmington in the early 2000s, they commissioned a poem by a UNC Greensboro professor of creative writing. He read an ode that heavily utilized various words that end-rhyme with WilmINGTON. You'd be surprised how many words he came up with. I attended the inauguration because my role was to walk with other international students, each one of us carrying a flag of a foreign country to show off how cosmopolitan the school was.

SneÅ¾ana

On Fri, Mar 5, 2010 at 2:11 AM, Lars Palm <[redacted]> wrote:
> when i lived in gran canaria i wrote some poems for pay. i simply sat down
> in a crowded place with a sign saying that for 5 euro i'd write a poem in 5

> minutes on any subject they'd give me. of course they all turned out > horrible, but for a few weeks it got me enough money for food & things
>
> it appears that some english poets get commissioned by radio, tv & such > quite regularly
>
>
> http://larspalm.wordpress.com
>
>

↑ Index

126. amy king

Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

Tue 9 Mar 2010

Yes, I often wonder how many poets go into advertising. And if that gig takes the poetry out of people...

As for the latter bit on "for-a-commission" - is that even possible? Seems like there is something of that market, or the seeds of it, via those contests. Maybe.

Best,
Amy

From: Adam Katz <[redacted]>

Recently I've noticed some advertisements that appear to be in poem-y format.

For example:

http://www.qf.org.qa/think/Think.pdf

And it's pretty kind of good!

Maybe the way to get commissioned to write poems is to think about things they could be used for. Though I'm aware this idea of use is maybe taboo or incompatible with our for-its-own-sake mentality.

If for-its-own-sake is what poetry is, then it's not commissionable.

If for-a-commission is what we would like it to be, then we must think in terms of identifying, inspiring, and inventing market demand.

a

↑ Index

127. Catherine Daly
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Tue 9 Mar 2010

As you may know, I write a great deal of occasional verse, and a lot of it makes its way into my books (especially Vauxhall and Locket thus far).

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

128. Mary Kasimor
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Tue 9 Mar 2010

I just got into this conversation...one of my master's thesis was on advertising and poetry. I was looking at very old ads from the Lady's Home Journal. Some of the language was quite interesting, and well, poetic. I do think, though, that a poet would become quite ill writing copy for advertisments. I also wrote copy for radio ads and that was very boring. I do remember having to figure out how to get as many words into a 30 or 60 second ad.

Mary Kasimor

--- On Tue, 3/9/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, March 9, 2010, 5:26 PM

Yes, I often wonder how many poets go into advertising. And if that gig takes the poetry out of people...

As for the latter bit on "for-a-commission" - is that even possible? Seems like there is something of that market, or the seeds of it, via those contests. Maybe.

Best,
Amy

From: Adam Katz <[redacted]>

Recently I've noticed some advertisements that appear to be in poem-y format.

For example:

http://www.qf.org.qa/think/Think.pdf

And it's pretty kind of good!

Maybe the way to get commissioned to write poems is to think about things they could be used for. Though I'm aware this idea of use is maybe taboo or incompatible with our for-its-own-sake mentality.

If for-its-own-sake is what poetry is, then it's not commissionable.

If for-a-commission is what we would like it to be, then we must think in terms of identifying, inspiring, and inventing market demand.

a

↑ Index

129. Crane's Bill Books

Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...

Tue 9 Mar 2010

I misread the subject line as 'On poets "eating their keepers"...'
Finally!
Jeffrey

----- Original Message -----
From: "Stephen Ellis" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, March 09, 2010 3:54 PM
Subject: Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...

No poet should be selling a poem here and a poem there for a buck, a hundred, a thousand, etc. dollars. Poets ought to be supported by the 21st Century equivalent of royalty and courts: The banks. They should also conspire with the banks that support them to steal as much money as possible from the banks that don't support either the poet or his representative bank, while at the same time, using his new-found wealth and common wit to conspire with as many non-bankers (and/or non-poets, spontaneous non-poet poets, etc.) as seem willing, to blow up both the banks that support him and the banks that don't: The corporate world of American poetry: May we watch it fall apart, or be blasted to smithereens? Be a tourist, a theorist, a terrorist. Light the fuse, keep it short, but just be sure to smile when you say that, Miss, or Brother.

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

> Date: Tue, 9 Mar 2010 16:38:33 -0600
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...
> To: [redacted]

I'm always disappointed by these "buck-a-poem" projects. Is poetry worthless? Does it not require time, dedication, hours, days, weeks? I will write anybody a poem for $1000.

Jonathan

On Tue, Mar 9, 2010 at 4:31 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/09/two-poets-earning-their-keep/

Answers/speculations/questions welcome!

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" --
http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

guidelines

--
Dr. Jonathan Ball, Ph.D. (English)
Sessional Instructor
University of Manitoba
University of Winnipeg

www.jonathanball.com

> EX MACHINA is out now!
> Visit the publisher's page:
> http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=200915
> Visit the McNally Robinson page:
> http://www.mcnallyrobinson.com/product/category/0/item/558194/
> Visit the Amazon page:
> http://www.amazon.ca/Ex-Machina-Jonathan-Ball/dp/1897388489/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1257005873&sr=8-1
>
> "If someone tells you writing is easy, he is either lying or I hate him." --
> Farley Mowat

↑ Index

130. Daniel Zimmerman

Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...

Tue 9 Mar 2010

You da bomb, Stephen.

~ Dan Zimmerman

----- Original Message -----
From: "Stephen Ellis" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, March 09, 2010 5:54 PM
Subject: Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...

No poet should be selling a poem here and a poem there for a buck, a hundred, a thousand, etc. dollars. Poets ought to be supported by the 21st Century equivalent of royalty and courts: The banks. They should also conspire with the banks that support them to steal as much money as possible from the banks that don't support either the poet or his representative bank, while at the same time, using his new-found wealth and common wit to conspire with as many non-bankers (and/or non-poets, spontaneous non-poet poets, etc.) as seem willing, to blow up both the banks that support him and the banks that don't: The corporate world of American poetry: May we watch it fall apart, or be blasted to smithereens? Be a tourist, a theorist, a terrorist. Light the fuse, keep it short, but just be sure to smile when you say that, Miss, or Brother.

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

> Date: Tue, 9 Mar 2010 16:38:33 -0600
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: On poets "earning their keep" one poem at a time...

To: [redacted]

I'm always disappointed by these "buck-a-poem" projects. Is poetry worthless? Does it not require time, dedication, hours, days, weeks? I will write anybody a poem for $1000.

Jonathan

On Tue, Mar 9, 2010 at 4:31 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/09/two-poets-earning-their-keep/

Answers/speculations/questions welcome!

Amy

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" --
http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"--
http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

guidelines

--
Dr. Jonathan Ball, Ph.D. (English)
Sessional Instructor
University of Manitoba
University of Winnipeg

> www.jonathanball.com
>
> EX MACHINA is out now!
> Visit the publisher's page:
> http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=200915
> Visit the McNally Robinson page:
> http://www.mcnallyrobinson.com/product/category/0/item/558194/
> Visit the Amazon page:
> http://www.amazon.ca/Ex-Machina-Jonathan-Ball/dp/1897388489/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1257005873&sr=8-1
>
> "If someone tells you writing is easy, he is either lying or I hate him." --
> Farley Mowat

↑ Index

131. steve dalachinsky
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Wed 10 Mar 2010

lew welsh was in advertising
look what happend to him

in some small way or another we're all in advertising
even if we think we are not

↑ Index

132. Nana Zabic
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Wed 10 Mar 2010

Amy,

So true about AWP "bohemian" poets. The world and its poets are the same everywhere, the differences are cosmetic.

Ex- or post-Yugo poets wrote a lot about the war while it was going on, as well as before it started, from all points of view and with all possible agendas. Fucking Radovan KaradÅ¾iÄ‡ was a published bad poet before he became a warlord. (At a Democratic Party Christmas reception in Richmond, VA, in the early 2000s, some drunken democrat told me, upon learning that I was from Croatia and that I was a poet, "You know, KaradÅ¾iÄ‡ was also a poet." I should have retorted, "You know, Hitler was also a politician." Too bad my comebacks are perennially late, so I get to play them only in my head. In my head, the drunken democrat's jaw hits the floor and I triumphantly walk away.)

Dubravka ÄuriÄ‡ is on this Poetics list (ciao!), she wrote awesome anti-war poems. Just check out Dubravka: http://writing.upenn.edu/library/Djuric-Dubravka_poems.html

Generally speaking (and as Dubravka's poems attest), you write against the war and oppression, but you want the poems to apply not just to today's news, but to a larger context, right? Just like nowadays in the US with the current wars. I love (ciao!) Juliana Spahr's "This Connection of Everyone with Lungs," that's a long anti-war poem, among other things. Also, a genius poet like Rosmarie Waldrop (ciao!) can write something more obvious and still kick ass, like the poem in "Love, Like Pronouns," the last poem in the book, I believe. (I don't have the book here with me, I'm visiting in Croatia, otherwise I'd look up the title.)

As for post-Yugo poets getting commissioned nowadays, maybe Dubravka will know? I left the Balkans a long time ago and I know less and less about the area.

BTW, in 1990s, Dubravka would "commission" poems and essays from my poet friends and me, but if we brought some texts she liked, she wouldn't pay us with money, only with her friendship and a publication in ProFemina etc. Haha.

SneÅ¾ana

On Wed, Mar 10, 2010 at 1:05 AM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]> wrote:
> As you may know, I write a great deal of occasional verse, and a lot > of it makes its way into my books (especially Vauxhall and Locket thus > far).
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
>

↑ Index

133. J.P. Craig

Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

Wed 10 Mar 2010

Azure
as ever
adz aver

I don't know. Advertising might not be so soul-killing, at least in comparison to many other careers.

What about writing, again and again, "quotations of four or more lines should be indented one inch from the left margin" -- or the equivalent?

Both advertising and teaching are in their own way attempts to interpolate the subject into a society, to make them fit for it, fit into it. Both can be drudgery, and both can be creative, inspiring and inspired. I'm assuming there are some institutions worth an effort to write ad copy for them.

(I wonder if the person who came up with "Change" got paid by the word?)

The Economy of the Unlost by Anne Carson offers an interesting take on the idea of patronage. She suggests that poetry does have a social role that should be reimbursed. And that its role is, as Stephen Ellis suggested, apocalyptic, preserving what is by proposing its extinction. (Of course that "what is" is polemic; you can imagine that the act of being-for-itself is an apocalyptic gesture aimed at revealing the atomic structure of society.)

But now I must get back to grading.

On Mar 9, 2010, at 7:14 PM, Mary Kasimor wrote:

> I just got into this conversation...one of my master's thesis was on advertising and poetry. I was looking at very old ads from the Lady's Home Journal. Some of the language was quite interesting, and well, poetic. I do think, though, that a poet would become quite ill writing copy for advertisments. I also wrote copy for radio ads and that was very boring. I do remember having to figure out how to get as many words into a 30 or 60 second ad.
>
> Mary Kasimor
>
> --- On Tue, 3/9/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Tuesday, March 9, 2010, 5:26 PM
>
> Yes, I often wonder how many poets go into advertising. And if that gig takes the poetry out of people...
>
> As for the latter bit on "for-a-commission" - is that even possible? Seems like there is something of that market, or the seeds of it, via those contests. Maybe.

> Best,
> Amy
>
> From: Adam Katz <[redacted]>
>
> Recently I've noticed some advertisements that appear to be in poem-y format.
>
> For example:
>
> http://www.qf.org.qa/think/Think.pdf
>
> And it's pretty kind of good!
>
> *Maybe the way to get commissioned to write poems is to think about things they could be used for. Though I'm aware this idea of use is maybe taboo or incompatible with our for-its-own-sake mentality.*
>
> If for-its-own-sake is what poetry is, then it's not commissionable.
>
> If for-a-commission is what we would like it to be, then we must think in terms of identifying, inspiring, and inventing market demand.
>
> a

Dr. J.P. Craig
Lecturer in English
University of Tennessee at Knoxville

↑ Index

134. Jonathan Ball
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Wed 10 Mar 2010

Didn't a well-known poet write "raid: kills bugs dead"?

Sent from my iPhone

On 2010-03-09, at 6:14 PM, Mary Kasimor <[redacted]> wrote:

> I just got into this conversation...one of my master's thesis was on advertising and poetry. I was looking at very old ads from the Lady's Home Journal. Some of the language was quite interesting, and well, poetic. I do think, though, that a poet would become quite ill writing copy for advertisments. I also wrote copy for radio ads and that was very boring. I do remember having to figure out how to get as many words into a 30 or 60 second ad.
>
> Mary Kasimor
>
> --- On Tue, 3/9/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Tuesday, March 9, 2010, 5:26 PM
>
> Yes, I often wonder how many poets go into advertising. And if that gig takes the poetry out of people...
>
> As for the latter bit on "for-a-commission" - is that even possible? Seems like there is something of that market, or the seeds of it, via those contests. Maybe.
>
> Best,
> Amy
>
> From: Adam Katz <[redacted]>
>
> Recently I've noticed some advertisements that appear to be in poem-y format.
>
> For example:
>
> http://www.qf.org.qa/think/Think.pdf
>
> And it's pretty kind of good!
>
> Maybe the way to get commissioned to write poems is to think about things > *they could be used for. Though I'm aware this idea of use is*

> maybe taboo
> or incompatible with our for-its-own-sake mentality.
>
> If for-its-own-sake is what poetry is, then it's not commissionable.
>
> If for-a-commission is what we would like it to be, then we must think in > terms of identifying, inspiring, and inventing market demand.
>
> a

↑ Index

135. Jack Foley

FlashPoint DAVID JONES SPECIAL Now Up!

Wed 10 Mar 2010

Announcing .....

FLASHPOINT #13

http://www.flashpointmag.com (http://www.flashpointmag.com/)

celebrating

DAVID JONES

painter & poet

with

KATHLEEN HENDERSON STAUDT

WILLIAM BLISSETT

TOM GOLDPAUGH

REV. DR. CALUM MACFARLANE

DEREK SHIEL

ANNE PRICE-OWEN

COLIN WILCOCKSON

THOMAS DILWORTH

ROSALIE GANCIE

BRADFORD HAAS

DAVID ANNWN

CARLO PARCELLI

DAVID HICKMAN

PETER O'BRIEN

JOE BRENNAN

JR FOLEY

"Along the frontier where the arts & politics clash ..."

↑ Index

136. Dan Glass
steven fama
Wed 10 Mar 2010

---

if anyone has an email address for Steven Fama, please backchannel.

thx,,,

Dan

↑ Index

137. amy king
Somebody likes me after all...
Wed 10 Mar 2010

Up on HTML Giant -- http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

Don't fall in,

Amy

_____

BOOK

Slaves to Do These Things-- http://www.blazevox.org/bk-ak3.htm

RANT

"My Barbaric Bitch of a Yawp" -- http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/2010/02/amy-king.html

ESSAY

"The What Else"-- http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/freeverse/Archives/Winter_2009/prose/A_King.html

↑ Index

138. Peter Grant
Fran Herndon
Wed 10 Mar 2010

Want to contact artist Fran Herndon. Any leads, please backchannel. Thanks, Pete

↑ Index

139. amy king
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Wed 10 Mar 2010

Yes, but the Raid company offered him a boatload of money to appropriate the poem the phrase appeared in; he was later accused of selling out...

Amy

_____

HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

_____
From: Jonathan Ball <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, March 10, 2010 10:45:53 AM
Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

Didn't a well-known poet write "raid: kills bugs dead"?

Sent from my iPhone

On 2010-03-09, at 6:14 PM, Mary Kasimor <[redacted]> wrote:

> I just got into this conversation...one of my master's thesis was on advertising and poetry. I was looking at very old ads from the Lady's Home Journal. Some of the language was quite interesting, and well, poetic. I do think, though, that a poet would become quite ill writing copy for advertisments. I also wrote copy for radio ads and that was very boring. I do remember having to figure out how to get as many words into a 30 or 60 second ad.

Mary Kasimor

--- On Tue, 3/9/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, March 9, 2010, 5:26 PM

Yes, I often wonder how many poets go into advertising. And if that gig takes the poetry out of people...

As for the latter bit on "for-a-commission" - is that even possible? Seems like there is something of that market, or the seeds of it, via those contests. Maybe.

Best,
Amy

From: Adam Katz <[redacted]>

Recently I've noticed some advertisements that appear to be in poem-y format.

For example:

http://www.qf.org.qa/think/Think.pdf

And it's pretty kind of good!

*Maybe the way to get commissioned to write poems is to think about things they could be used for. Though I'm aware this idea of use is maybe taboo or incompatible with our for-its-own-sake mentality.*

If for-its-own-sake is what poetry is, then it's not commissionable.

If for-a-commission is what we would like it to be, then we must think in terms of identifying, inspiring, and inventing market demand.

a

↑ Index

140. Jonathan Ball
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Wed 10 Mar 2010

That's it, Welch is the one typically credited with "Raid Kills Bugs Dead."

On Wed, Mar 10, 2010 at 1:30 AM, steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>wrote:

> lew welsh was in advertising
> look what happend to him
>
> in some small way or another we're all in advertising
> even if we think we are not

--
Dr. Jonathan Ball, Ph.D. (English)
Sessional Instructor
University of Manitoba
University of Winnipeg

www.jonathanball.com

EX MACHINA is out now!
Visit the publisher's page:
http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=200915
Visit the McNally Robinson page:
http://www.mcnallyrobinson.com/product/category/0/item/558194/
Visit the Amazon page:
http://www.amazon.ca/Ex-Machina-Jonathan-Ball/dp/1897388489/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1257005873&sr=8-1

“If someone tells you writing is easy, he is either lying or I hate him.” -- Farley Mowat

↑ Index

141. Mary Kasimor
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Wed 10 Mar 2010

Teaching the MLA format is quite frustrating and exhausting, also. I think that I would rather do that than write copy, though. I don't think that I would have the heart to write poetry in my spare time if worked in advertising.

--- On Wed, 3/10/10, J.P. Craig <[redacted]> wrote:

From: J.P. Craig <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, March 10, 2010, 9:14 AM

Azure
as ever
adz aver

I don't know. Advertising might not be so soul-killing, at least in comparison to many other careers.

What about writing, again and again, "quotations of four or more lines should be indented one inch from the left margin" -- or the equivalent?

Both advertising and teaching are in their own way attempts to interpolate the subject into a society, to make them fit for it, fit into it. Both can be drudgery, and both can be creative, inspiring and inspired. I'm assuming there are some institutions worth an effort to write ad copy for them.

(I wonder if the person who came up with "Change" got paid by the word?)

The Economy of the Unlost by Anne Carson offers an interesting take on the idea of patronage. She suggests that poetry does have a social role that should be reimbursed. And that its role is, as Stephen Ellis suggested, apocalyptic, preserving what is by proposing its extinction. (Of course that "what is" is polemic; you can imagine that the act of being-for-itself is an apocalyptic gesture aimed at revealing the atomic structure of society.)

But now I must get back to grading.

On Mar 9, 2010, at 7:14 PM, Mary Kasimor wrote:

> I just got into this conversation...one of my master's thesis was on advertising and poetry. I was looking at very old ads from the Lady's Home Journal. Some of the language was quite interesting, and well, poetic. I do think, though, that a poet would become quite ill writing copy for advertisments. I also wrote copy for radio ads and that was very boring. I do remember having to figure out how to get as many words into a 30 or 60 second ad.

Mary Kasimor

--- On Tue, 3/9/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, March 9, 2010, 5:26 PM

Yes, I often wonder how many poets go into advertising. And if that gig takes the poetry out of people...

As for the latter bit on "for-a-commission" - is that even possible? Seems like there is something of that market, or the seeds of it, via those contests. Maybe.

Best,
Amy

From: Adam Katz <[redacted]>

Recently I've noticed some advertisements that appear to be in poem-y format.

For example:

http://www.qf.org.qa/think/Think.pdf

And it's pretty kind of good!

*Maybe the way to get commissioned to write poems is to think about things they could be used for. Though I'm aware this idea of use is maybe taboo or incompatible with our for-its-own-sake mentality.*

If for-its-own-sake is what poetry is, then it's not commissionable.

If for-a-commission is what we would like it to be, then we must think in terms of identifying, inspiring, and inventing market demand.

a

Dr. J.P. Craig
Lecturer in English
University of Tennessee at Knoxville

↑ Index

142. Stephen Ellis
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Wed 10 Mar 2010

An indent is not a retreat. It just gives you a place to put your . . . "finger." Would you rather your poems be published in "yet another slim volume of American experimental verse", or used to sell designer perfume in LA and Paris? Rumi got enlisted for the latter. Not a bad gig, I wouldn't say, although it's notable that the perfumes aren't marketed in Konya or Tabriz, which no doubt smell better anyway. On the other hand, these "slim volumes of experimental verse" are unlikely to go even too far out of state. Which is to say, too, of course, in our time, the "state line" is everywhere and goes around everything, even though you can never cross or get away from it. Up against the wall? I think I'll go the perfume route. And I know just where I'm going to wear it.

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

> Date: Wed, 10 Mar 2010 10:14:45 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
> To: [redacted]
>
> Azure
> as ever
> adz aver
>
> I don't know. Advertising might not be so soul-killing, at least in comparison to many other careers.
>
> What about writing, again and again, "quotations of four or more lines should be indented one inch from the left margin" -- or the equivalent?
>
> Both advertising and teaching are in their own way attempts to interpolate the subject into a society, to make them fit for it, fit into it. Both can be drudgery, and both can be creative, inspiring and inspired. I'm assuming there are some institutions worth an effort to write ad copy for them.

(I wonder if the person who came up with "Change" got paid by the word?)

The Economy of the Unlost by Anne Carson offers an interesting take on the idea of patronage. She suggests that poetry does have a social role that should be reimbursed. And that its role is, as Stephen Ellis suggested, apocalyptic, preserving what is by proposing its extinction. (Of course that "what is" is polemic; you can imagine that the act of being-for-itself is an apocalyptic gesture aimed at revealing the atomic structure of society.)

But now I must get back to grading.

On Mar 9, 2010, at 7:14 PM, Mary Kasimor wrote:

I just got into this conversation...one of my master's thesis was on advertising and poetry. I was looking at very old ads from the Lady's Home Journal. Some of the language was quite interesting, and well, poetic. I do think, though, that a poet would become quite ill writing copy for advertisments. I also wrote copy for radio ads and that was very boring. I do remember having to figure out how to get as many words into a 30 or 60 second ad.

Mary Kasimor

--- On Tue, 3/9/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, March 9, 2010, 5:26 PM

Yes, I often wonder how many poets go into advertising. And if that gig takes the poetry out of people...

As for the latter bit on "for-a-commission" - is that even possible? Seems like there is something of that market, or the seeds of it, via those contests. Maybe.

Best,
Amy

From: Adam Katz <[redacted]>

> Recently I've noticed some advertisements that appear to be in poem-y format.
>
> For example:
>
> http://www.qf.org.qa/think/Think.pdf
>
> And it's pretty kind of good!
>
> *Maybe the way to get commissioned to write poems is to think about things they could be used for. Though I'm aware this idea of use is maybe taboo or incompatible with our for-its-own-sake mentality.*
>
> If for-its-own-sake is what poetry is, then it's not commissionable.
>
> If for-a-commission is what we would like it to be, then we must think in terms of identifying, inspiring, and inventing market demand.
>
> a
>
> Dr. J.P. Craig
> Lecturer in English
> University of Tennessee at Knoxville

↑ Index

143. blacksox

Tonight in Orlando Adeena Karasick

Wed 10 Mar 2010

Every [redacted]â€™s

Special Feature
Adeena Karasick & World famous Open Mic

Wednesday March 10 @ 8:00pm

Austinâ€™s Coffee and Film 929 W Fairbanks Ave.
Winter Park, Florida 32789

From New York City to Austins
It doesn't get any better than this!

DO NOT MISS THIS EVENT!

Adeena Karasick is a poet, media-artist and the award-winning author of seven books of poetry and poetic theory, Amuse Bouche: Tasty Treats for the Mouth (Talonbooks 2009), The House That Hijack Built (Talonbooks, 2004). The Arugula Fugues (Zasterle Press, 2001), Dyssemia Sleaze (Talonbooks, Spring 2000), Genrecide (Talonbooks, 1996), MÃªmewars (Talonbooks, 1994), and The Empress Has No Closure (Talonbooks, 1992). Marked with an urban, Jewish, feminist aesthetic that continually challenges normative modes of meaning production, and engaged with the art of combination and turbulence of thought, her work is a testament to the creative and regenerative power of language and its infinite possibilities for pushing meaning to the limits of its semantic boundaries. Karasick has lectured and performed worldwide and regularly publishes articles, reviews and dialogues on contemporary poetry, poetics and cultural/semiotic theory. She is Professor of Global Literature at St. John's University in New York.

Hosted by Open Words ,& Russ Golata
For directions or comments e-mail me at [masked]
Or phone me at [masked]

↑ Index

144. Catherine Daly
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Wed 10 Mar 2010

---

unlike black flag, which took the name after the product...

On Wed, Mar 10, 2010 at 2:16 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
> Yes, but the Raid company offered him a boatload of money to appropriate the poem the phrase appeared in; he was later accused of selling out...
>
> Amy

> _____
>

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

145. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City Goes West Redux, This Wed.
Thu 11 Mar 2010

---

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives:
celebrating editors from Northern California renegade presses

this Wed. March 17, 7:30 p.m. sharp, free

Books and Bookshelves
99 Sanchez St.
San Francisco

featuring readings from

Albert Flynn DeSilver
editor The Owl Press (Woodacre, Calif.)

Travis Ortiz
co-editor Atelos Publishing Project (Berkeley, Calif.)

Jill Stengel
editor a+bend press (Davis, Calif.)

Eileen R. Tabios
editor Meritage Press (San Francisco/St. Helena, Calif.)

and from New York City

David Kirschenbaum
editor, Boog City

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

For more info call Books and Bookshelves at [redacted]
or Boog City at 212-842-BOOG (2664)

Boog City
http://welcometoboogcity.com/

Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 19th year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women's writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates two regular performance series--d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Chelsea's ACA Galleries; and Classic Albums Live, where 5-13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, CBGB's, and The Knitting Factory. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

Albert Flynn DeSilver
http://www.theowlpress.com/

Albert Flynn DeSilver is a poet, teacher, visual artist, and publisher living in Woodacre, Calif. He is the editor and publisher of The Owl Press, which publishes innovative poetry and poetic collaboration. He received a B.F.A. in photography from the University of Colorado, and an M.F.A. in New Genres from the San Francisco Art Institute. He is the author, most recently, of Letters to Early Street, (La Alameda/ University of New Mexico Press) and Walking Tooth & Cloud (French Connection Press, Paris). He has published more than a hundred poems in literary journals worldwide including Zyzzyva, New American Writing, Jacket (Australia), Poetry Kanto (Japan), Van Gogh’s Ear (France), Hanging Loose, and Exquisite Corpse, among others. The most recent Owl Press title is Bill Berkson’s Our Friends Will Pass Among You Silently.

David Kirschenbaum
http://www.boogcity.blogspot.com
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

David Kirschenbaum’s work has appeared in The Brooklyn Review Online, can we have our ball back, Chain, Pavement Saw, and unpleasant event schedule, among others. He is the lyricist for the band Gilmore Boys, and the editor and publisher of Boog City, a New York City-based small press now in its 19th year and East Village community newspaper.

Travis Ortiz
http://www.atelos.org/travis/

Travis Ortiz is a writer, publisher, dj, and designer living in San Francisco. Ortiz has work in various publications including Bay Poetics and Poetics Journal, and has written two books, Geography of Parts (Melodeon) and Variously, not Then (forthcoming, Tuumba). He is the co-director (with Lyn Hejinian) of Atelos, a literary project commissioning and publishing cross-genre work by poets. Atelos was nominated as one of the best independent literary presses by the Firecracker Awards in 2001.

Jill Stengel
http://www.dusie.org/Langiappe_Stengel.pdf

Jill Stengel is a poet, publisher of a+bend press, and parent of three young children. Formerly of San Francisco and Los Angeles, she now resides with her family in Davis, Calif. Several of her serial poems have appeared in chapbook form—cartography (WOOD); History, Possibilities (a+bend press); ladies with babies (Boog Literature); lagniappe (Nous-Zot Press, Dusie Kollektiv); late may (Dusie); may(be) (Dusie); and the forthcoming and I would open (Ypolita) and wreath (Texfiles). Some of these chapbooks, and individual poems, can be viewed online as well as in print, and she has new work in the forthcoming anthology Kindergarde. Her first full-length collection is forthcoming this year from Black Radish Books.

Begun in San Francisco in 1999, a+bend press published 40 chapbooks in its first 20 months of existence. Stengel produced the chapbooks in conjunction with her reading series, Second Sundays at BlueBar, held in the poetically historic North Beach district of San Francisco.

The press took a chapbook-publishing hiatus for nine years, during which time she produced three children and five issues of the journal mem, focusing on writing by women mothering young children, and page mothers. Now the hiatus is on hiatus: a new a+bend press chapbook was released at the end of last year.

Eileen R. Tabios
http://marshhawkpress.org/Tabios4.htm

Eileen R. Tabios has released 18 print, four electronic, and 1 CD poetry collections, an art essay collection, a poetry essay/interview anthology, a short story book, and two novels. She has also exhibited visual art and visual poetry in the United States and Asia. Recipient of the Philippines' National Book Award for Poetry, she's just come out with The Thorn Rosary: Selected Prose Poems 1998-2010, edited with an introduction by poet-critic-painter-scholar Thomas Fink and with an afterword by poet-scholar Joi Barrios. In poetry, Tabios has crafted a body of work that is unique for melding ekphrasis with transcolonialism. Her poems have been translated into Spanish, Italian, Tagalog, Japanese, Portuguese, Polish, Greek, computer- generated hybrid languages, paintings, video, drawings, visual poetry, mixed media collages, Kali martial arts, music, modern dance, and sculpture. She's the publisher of Meritage Press (St. Helena & San Francisco).

Directions:
1.5 blocks from Church St. and Market St. Muni
Venue is bet. 14th St and Duboce Ave.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

146. Jesse Glass
Ahadada Books Presents the Prague Issue of Ekleksographia
Thu 11 Mar 2010

Edited by Jason Mashak and full of translations, new work and pretty people. http://ekleksographia.ahadadabooks.com/mashak or go directly to www.ahadadabooks.com and click the link. Hurrah! Jess

↑ Index

147. Charles Bernstein
NY launch for All the Whiskey in Heaven: Selected Poems
Thu 11 Mar 2010

All the Whiskey in Heaven: Selected Poems of Charles Bernstein launch & signing
Sunday March 28, 2010, 6:30pm
Zinc Bar
82 W. 3rd St, New York, NY
Poets & friends read from the book
Thom Donovan
Peter Gizzi
Kenneth Goldsmith
Erica Hunt
Dorothea Lasky

Tan Lin
Elizabeth Willis
& Charles Bernstein
more information at http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/books/all-the-whiskey/

↑ Index

148. mIEKAL aND
Re: Query - Poem Commissions?
Thu 11 Mar 2010

I always thought Blag Flag got it's name from the anarchist flag...

On Wed, Mar 10, 2010 at 5:18 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]> wrote:
> unlike black flag, which took the name after the product...

↑ Index

149. Sharon Dolin
Cornelia Street Reading on March 24th
Thu 11 Mar 2010

Dear Friends, Here's an announcement for a poetry reading I'm participating in on March 24th at 6pm at Cornelia Street Cafe. Please tell your friends and students.--Sharon

PERFECT SENSE READING SERIES is proud to invite you to a special evening of poetry with

SHARON DOLIN

ROCCO DE GIACOMO

FLORENCIA VARELA

&

JACOB SCHEIER

Where: Cornelia Street Café

When: Wednesday, March 24, 2010, 6pm

$7.00 cover includes free drink

SHARON DOLIN’s fourth book, Burn and Dodge (University of Pittsburgh Press, 2008) won the AWP Donald Hall Prize in Poetry. Her other books include Realm of the Possible (Four Way Books, 2004), Serious Pink (Marsh Hawk Press, 2003), and Heart Work (Sheep Meadow Press, 1995). She is Writer-in-Residence at Eugene Lang College, The New School. She also teaches at the Unterberg Poetry Center of the 92nd Street Y and directs The Center for Book Arts Annual Letterpress Poetry Chapbook Competition.

ROCCO DE GIACOMO is the author of the full-length poetry collection Ten Thousand Miles Between Us, published by Quattro Books, and Catching Dawn's Breath (LyricalMyrical Press, Toronto). His work is forthcoming in Vallum and The Carolina Quarterly and has recently appeared The Antigonish Review and Tower Poetry.

FLORENCIA VARELA has recently completed her MFA at Columbia University. Her work has appeared or is forthcoming in journals such as Paterson Literary Review, Diagram, Drunken Boat, Western Humanities Review, and Gulf Coast. She currently teaches at different colleges in New York City, and lives in Brooklyn.

JACOB SCHEIER's debut poetry collection, More to Keep Us Warm, was published by ECW Press in 2007 and was named the winner of Canada's 2008 Governor General's Award for English poetry. A former resident of Toronto, Scheier currently lives in New York City where he is volunteering for the radical newspaper The Indypendent and preparing his next book of poems. He is also a regular contributor to the Toronto alternative weekly NOW.

Sharon

Sharon Dolin
[redacted]
www.sharondolin.com

↑ Index

150. Mark Melnicove

Bern Porter exhibit and event at MoMA and Esopus

Thu 11 Mar 2010

Announcing a new Bern Porter exhibit and event.

Exhibit: Lost and Found: The Work of Bern Porter from the Collection of The Museum of Modern Art Library, April 7â€"July 5, 2010, Mezzanine, The Lewis B. and Dorothy Cullman Education and Research Building. http://www.moma.org/visit/calendar/exhibitions/1057

Event: Lost and Found: An Evening with Bern Porter, Thursday, April 22, 2010, 7:00 p.m., Esopus Space, 64 West Third Street #201, New York, NY. Featuring: Kenneth Goldsmith, performing Bern Porter's poetry; Dan Domench (and actors) performing his new play about Bern Porter--Bern Porter: The Authorized Fictional Biography of the Artist, Scientist, Poet, Publisher, Performer, Adventurer, and Iconoclast (2010); Mark Melnicove, showing his new movie--Joy Glows Where Confusion Was: A film about, with, and without Bern Porter (2010); Introduced by Rachael Morrison (exhibit organizer).

http://www.moma.org/visit/calendar/events/8983

↑ Index

151. mIEKAL aND
Lost and Found: The Work of Bern Porter from the Collection of The Museum of Modern Art Library
Thu 11 Mar 2010

Exhibit: Lost and Found: The Work of Bern Porter from the Collection of The Museum of Modern Art Library, April 7–July 5, 2010, Mezzanine, The Lewis B. and Dorothy Cullman Education and Research Building.
http://www.moma.org/visit/calendar/exhibitions/1057

Event: Lost and Found: An Evening with Bern Porter, Thursday, April 22, 2010, 7:00 p.m., Esopus Space, 64 West Third Street #201, New York, NY.
Featuring:
Kenneth Goldsmith, performing Bern Porter's poetry;
Dan Domench (and actors) performing his new play about Bern Porter--Bern Porter: The Authorized Fictional Biography of the Artist, Scientist, Poet, Publisher, Performer, Adventurer, and Iconoclast (2010);
Mark Melnicove, showing his new movie--Joy Glows Where Confusion Was: A film about, with, and without Bern Porter (2010); Introduced by Rachael Morrison (exhibit organizer).
http://www.moma.org/visit/calendar/events/8983

↑ Index

152. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart
Cecilia Woloch and Sharon Mesmer at Bowery Poetry Club
Thu 11 Mar 2010

Cecilia Woloch and Sharon Mesmer

Saturday March 20 at 2 p.m.

Bowery Poetry Club

308 Bowery

(Between Houston and Bleecker)

F train to 2nd Ave, 6 to Bleecker

[redacted]

$7

Cecilia Woloch is the author of four award-winning collections of poems, most recently Narcissus, winner of the Tupelo Press 2006 Snowbound Series Chapbook Award. Carpathia, newly available from BOA Editions Ltd., is her fifth book. She is currently a lecturer in the creative writing program at the University of Southern California, as well as the founding director of The Paris Poetry Workshop. She spends a part of each year traveling, and in recent years has divided her time between Los Angeles, California; Atlanta, Georgia; Shepherdsville, Kentucky; Paris, France; and a small village in the Carpathian mountains of southeastern Poland.

Sharon Mesmer is the recipient of two New York Foundation for the Arts poetry fellowships (1999 and 2007). Two poetry collections, The Virgin Formica (Hanging Loose) and Annoying Diabetic Bitch (Combo Books), came out in 2008. Other poetry collections include Half Angel, Half Lunch (Hard Press, 1998) and the chapbooks Vertigo Seeks Affinities (Belladonna Books, 2006) and Crossing Second Avenue (ABJ Books, Tokyo). Fiction collections are Ma Vie à Yonago (in French translation from Hachette Littératures, 2005) and In Ordinary Time and The Empty Quarter (Hanging Loose 2005 and 2000). In January 2009 Mesmer was featured along with several other poets of the flarf collective on National Public Radio's "Studio 360 with Kurt Anderson." Her music and book reviews can be found in The Brooklyn Rail.

↑ Index

153. William Allegrezza

New Issue of Moria

Thu 11 Mar 2010

Check out the new issue of Moria (http://www.moriapoetry.com).

Poetry and Vispo by:
Tom Hibbard, Michael Marks, Arkava Das, Brad Vogler, Kirsten Kaschock, Dion Farquhar, Matina L. Stamatakis, Holms Troelstrup, Jeffrey Side, Kristina Marie Darling, Peter Grieco, Adam Fieled, Justyna Bargielska, Jerrod Bohn, Steve Halle, SJ Fowler, Joel Chace, Amy Garrett-Brown, Francis Raven, Chella Courington, Lance Newman, Pat Clifford, Emeniano Acain Somoza, Jr, Steve Roggenbuck, Sam Schild, Anna Elena Eyre, Robert Verdon, David Harrison Horton, Nate Pritts, Jill Jones, Louis Armand, Charles Perrone, Michael Brandonisio, John Bennett, Raymond Farr, Mara Gálvez-Bretón, Gina Myers, Connor Coyne, Andrew Topel, Paul Siegell,

Alexander Jorgensen, Phillip Lund, Audacia Dangereyes, Sean Burn, Teresa K. Miller, Awan Amali.

Articles:
Aryanil Mukherjee on Ashberry and Vertigo and rob mclennan on Sarah Manguso

Bill Allegrezza, editor

↑ Index

154. Noah Eli Gordon
NYC reading 3/21 @ Zinc
Fri 12 Mar 2010

Dear Folks,

I'll be reading in NYC in a week or so. Hope some of you can make it out.

All the info's below.

thanks much,
Noah

Sunday, March 21, 2010

6:30pm - 9:00pm
Zinc Bar (82 West 3rd Street)

Readings by:

Michael Carr
Anthony McCann
Noah Eli Gordon

Michael Carr is the author of the Out Another, Softer White, and Platinum Blonde. Necco Face, a chapbook co-written with Jess Mynes and Aaron Tieger, came out from Editions Louis Wain last year, and a collaborative chapbook with Micah Ballard called Poems from the New Winter Palace is forthcoming from House Press this summer. He lives in Cambridge, MA.

Anthony McCann is the author of Moongarden (Wave Books 2006) and Father of Noise (Fence Books 2003). Originally from the upper Hudson Valley of New York State he now lives in Los Angeles, California. He will be reading poems from his forthcoming book New Dreams of Mammal Island--due out from Wave next spring.

Noah Eli Gordon is the author of several books, including Novel Pictorial Noise (Harper Perennial, 2007), which was selected by John Ashbery for the 2006 National Poetry Series and chosen for the 2007 San Francisco State University

Poetry Center Book Award. He lives in Denver and teaches in the MFA program at the University of Colorado-Boulder. Visit his PennSound page here: http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Gordon-Noah-Eli.php

http://www.lettermachine.org/

_____ Your E-mail and More On-the-Go. Get Windows Live Hotmail Free. http://clk.atdmt.com/GBL/go/201469229/direct/01/

↑ Index

155. David Chirot

Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog

Fri 12 Mar 2010

I'n very honored and excited to have as Jerome Rothenberg's Poets and Poetics blog current entry essay of mine on the Gunatanamo Poets, which originally appeared in KAURABI have provided the link here for the esay's original appearnce and the current one at Jerry's blog, along with the link to another piece of mine re the Guantanamo Poets which appeared in WordforWord #13 on "Waterboarding and Poetry: Francois Villon and the new Extreme Experimental American Poetry."

I hope that listserv memebrs and any and evryone may find something of interest and use in the essays, themselves part of an ongoing and ever expanding series of works across several genres and media-- onwo/ards! david-bc and happy weekend, with the advent of Daylight Savings Time!! Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress (14): David Baptiste Chirot, Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from Guantánamo)<http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html> [a commentary on *Poems from Guantánamo: The Detainees Speak<http://www.uipress.uiowa.edu/books/2007-fall/falpoefro.html> *, edited by Marc Falkoff, University of Iowa Press, 2007]

(towards a non-reading - American abolition of "non-literatures" - an entry in the Annals of the New Extreme Experimental Poetry)

"The blank and ruin we see in Nature is within our own eye." --R.W. Emerson, "Nature"

1. David-Baptiste Chirot // Word For/Word: A Journal of New Writing * ...* <http://www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm> Some American reviewers and commentators on the Poets of *Guantanamo*have so far found exactly what they were looking for: "bad" poetry in Formal terms, ... www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm - Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?

q=cache:sO3BV7NpjRQJ:www.wordforword.info/vol13/
dbc.htm+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&cd=4&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client =gmail> 2. Poems and Poetics <http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/>
... (14): David Baptiste Chirot, Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from Guantánamo). [a commentary on Poems from Guantánamo: The Detainees Speak, ... which and into which the Guantanamo poets and poems emerge and become re-confined. ... poemsand*poet*ics.blogspot.com/ - Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?
q=cache:tbc3EKdzZsYJ:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&cd=5&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail
>- Similar<http://www.google.com/search?
hl=en&client=gmail&rls=gm&q=related:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/
+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&sa=X&ei=bZKZS838LcL78Aavu8nGCg&ved =0CBoQHzAE> 3. KAURAB Online :: A Bengali Poetry Webzine :: Translation
Site<http://kaurab.tripod.com/english/books/guantanamo.html> David Baptiste Chirot. "The blank and ruin we see in Nature is within our ... and into which the Guantanamo poets and poems emerge and become re-confined. ... kaurab.tripod.com/english/books/guantanamo.html

↑ Index

156. Nana Zabic

Re: Query - Poem Commissions?

Fri 12 Mar 2010

On Wed, Mar 10, 2010 at 4:14 PM, J.P. Craig <[redacted]> wrote:

> Both advertising and teaching are in their own way attempts to interpolate the subject into a society, to make them fit for it, fit into it. Both can be drudgery, and both can be creative, inspiring and inspired.

So true.

I've never worked in advertising, but I've seen some old ads by Ranjan Adiga, a fiction writer now, and those were very inspired. He explained to me that people creating ads get to come up with a lot of very creative campaigns that never get picked up. There are conferences and awards out there given to those phantom, but super creative campaigns. I wish Ranjan was on this list to tell us more about that. But basically, an ad team may come up with a brilliant campaign for, say, laundry soap, they'll come up with clever words and and unexpected visuals, they'll win awards, but then that campaign would never actually get used by the soap company, because everyone knows that the only people who do laundry are wholesome, cute, preferably blond and blue-eyed, middle-class mothers of shenanigans-prone small brats. And so on.

SneÅ¾ana

↑ Index

157. Gerald Schwartz
25 questions: question # 1...
Fri 12 Mar 2010

Taking a page from David Hilbert's well-known list of 23 "Paris Problems" (1900), and, likewise, hoping to see solutions in this new century, I've formulated a list of questions, which of course there is not the slightest connection between Hilbert's list of problems and this line of questioning.

Not to mention the fact that many of my questions may contain the answers simply in the asking.

Question # 1:

Should any current poet be judged against only the very best works of the past?

G. E. Schwartz

↑ Index

158. Anny Ballardini
ARAKAWA & GINS
Fri 12 Mar 2010

---

http://ag3.griffith.edu.au/
An exceptional event starting today, register for the meeting!
Best wishes,

Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

159. Cheryl Pallant
Cheryl Pallant & Grant Jenkins reading
Fri 12 Mar 2010

Grant Jenkins and Cheryl Pallant will be reading poetry and performing their song from their newly released, collaboratively written book, Morphs (Cracked Slab Books).

March 16, 7pm
Legacy Books, 7300 Dallas Pkwy, Suite A120
Plano TX.

March 20, 7pm for drinks; 8:30 for reading
Home of Dale Smith and Hoa Nguyen 2208 Trailside Drive #A Austin TX

www.cherylpallant.com

↑ Index

160. Stephen Vincent Ekleksographia - Get Ready!
Fri 12 Mar 2010

As a contributor ("Tree Haptics"") it is my pleasure to help toot the horn for this coming Monday's release of a wonder filled, as well as smart new issue of Ekleksographia online magazine, â€˜William Blake and the Naked Teaparty,â€™ guest edited by Philip Davenport
Â
http://ekleksographia.ahadadabooks.com/davenport/
Â

This issue features textworks that emphasise the touch - handwrit and haptic â€“ particularly pieces that consider emotional engagements, human space - that weird trace and corporate/military erasure of the handmade, the human touch, the not-digital. These qualities link into the alternative tradition of poetics - and to 'outsider' artists who are owed a debt by the experimentersÂ (an IOU all the way back to Will Blake, he and the Mrs sitting on the lawn in London afternoons, naked, drinking tea). Â Contributors: Alan Halsey, Anna MacGowan, The Atlas Group, Ben Gwilliam, Carol Watts, Carolyn Thompson, Darren Marsh, Dave Griffiths, David Tibet, Geof Huth, George Widener, Geraldine Monk, The Gingerbread Tree, Hainer Wormann, Harald Stoffers, Helmut Lemke, Holly Pester, James Davies, Jesse Glass, Jonathan Penton, Julia Grime, Kerry Morrison, Kirstie Gregory, Laurence Lane, Lee Patterson, Li E Chen, Liz Collini, Matt Dalby, Michael Wilson, Morry Carlin, Nick Blinko, Nico

Vassilakis, Patricia Farrell, Rachael Elwell, Robert Grenier, Robert Sheppard, Sarah Sanders, Sean Bonney, Stephen Vincent, Steve Waling, Sue Arrowsmith, Todd Thorpe, Tony Lopez and Tony Trehy The issue goes online 15th March 2010 and will be launched with a 24 â€˜liveâ€™ online writing event by Sarah Saunders Â

Series Editor Jesse Glass; this issue designed by Jonathan Penton
Â
(apologies for cross-posting)
Â
Â
Â

↑ Index

161. Jerome Rothenberg
In Preparation for a Visit to Mount Aso & a Round of Renshi
Fri 12 Mar 2010

From March 17 through 20 I will be in Kumamoto, Japan, engaging in a renshi-writing collaboration with Japanese poets Shuntaro Tanikawa, Hiromi Ito, Yasuhiro Yotsumoto, Wakako Kaku, and the American translator Jeffrey Angles. This will be followed by a series of readings and lectures:

On March 22 a reading for the Japan International Poetry Society, at the Heartpia Kyoto, Conference Room #3, in Kyoto; on March 26, a talk and group discussion at Josai International University, Tokyo; and on March 27 a reading with Ryuta Imafuku and Keijiro Suga at Meiji University, also in Tokyo. During my time away, postings on Poems and Poetics will continue without interruption, as follows:

March 13 Christine Wertheim: The Infestation of Bodies by Tongues (Part One)

March 17 Jerome Rothenberg: Metamorphoses & Other Stories

March 20 Reconfiguring Romanticism (39): Jeffrey C. Robinson, Two Poems with Notes after Wordsworth and Keats

March 24 Haroldo de Campos: from Galáxias, 2 poems & an author's note

March 28 Rose Drachler, Two Poems with Numbers & Letters

The following is a poem for the first round of renshi and an open tribute to the masters of the game:

soon to be with you on Aso not Death Mountain

in the other poem

beneath which looms the shadow of a visionary fish

↑ Index

162. Alan Sondheim

Re: 25 questions: question # 1...

Fri 12 Mar 2010

On Fri, 12 Mar 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:

> Question # 1:
>
> Should any current poet be judged against only the very best works of the past?
>
> G. E. Schwartz

Beyond the issue of what constitutes genre, canon, and "best," not to mention "current" or "poet": there is also the question of judgment. Is a poem written to be judged, any more than an experience is judged? How does one judge anything that has no possibility either of quantifiable results or verification procedures (not to mention falsifiability)? How would you compare a contemporary poet to the poetry of Sumer? One might think immediately that the habitus of each is fundamentally unknowable to that of the other. The same might be true, say, of Swinburne and Sondheim. What about Sondheim and Damon? Does the synchronic necessarily lend itself to judgment and comparison? On the other hand, let's say that judgment has a pragmatics: of grant, job, publication. Then judgment also implies an ecology and competition: writing is now a contestation, which implies as well a curlicue or diacritical marking beyond the ostensible 'content' of the text, no matter how defined. In other words: Here is my poem; rate it; act accordingly. The poem is now a function. It's a function within a potentially limited space-time event or attention economy. There is nothing right or wrong with this approach, either. Nor of the other approach. It becomes a matter of taste, connoisseurship: Of who is judging, and who is being judged. And, like pretty much anything in poetry/poetics, this is also something that's basically - i.e. ontologically, epistemologically, unanswerable, because the question, just like the "Should" in the question above, is problematic, self-deconstructing upon closer examination.

- Alan

↑ Index

163. Tim Peterson

EOAGH presents (on 3/16) Jon Cotner, Andy Fitch, and John Harkey

Sat 13 Mar 2010

EOAGH Reading Series:

Jon Cotner, Andy Fitch, and John Harkey

Tuesday, March 16 at 7PM

at Unnameable Books,

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

Jon Cotner and Andy Fitch are the authors of Ten Walks/Two Talks (Ugly Duckling Presse, 2010). In 2009 they co-edited Interdisciplinary Transcriptions -- a 1,036-page digital anthology containing poets, critics, anthropologists and visual artists. Other publications include 1913, Brooklyn Rail, Denver Quarterly, Electric Literature, Hotel Amerika, LIT and UbuWeb. Cotner and Fitch have performed their dialogic improvisations at festivals and conferences across the United States, as well as in Toronto and Berlin. Cotner lives in New York City, where he is completing his Ph.D. for SUNY Buffalo's Poetics Program. Fitch is an assistant professor in the University of Wyoming's MFA Program.

Listen to "Those Ever-Expanding Legs of a V" by Cotner and Fitch at EOAGH 5:

http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/cotnerfitch.html

John Harkey, hailing from Georgia but currently living cozily in Sunnyside, Queens, is a PhD student at the CUNY Graduate Center. His dissertation, on "small poems" (small, not short, nota bene), devotes itself principally to Lorine Niedecker, George Oppen, Susan Howe, and the philosophy of Charles S. Peirce. Some of John's own small poems have appeared in EOAGH and The Solitary Plover, and he recently started Creature Press, a vehicle for hand-made chapbooks. He begs your pardon and thanks you, in advance, for your kind attentions, when- and wherever you may have occasion to bestow them.

Read "Beaded Lace" by John Harkey in EOAGH 5:

http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/harkey.html

upcoming EOAGH Reading Series events this spring:

Barbara Henning, Simon Pettet, and Shira Dentz

Sunday, March 21 at 2 PM

at Unnameable Books

Andrew Levy, Cheryl Clark, and Mark Lamoureux

Sunday, April 4 at 2 PM

at Unnameable Books

David Shapiro, Joanna Fuhrman, and Charles Borkhuis

Sunday, April 18 at 2 PM

at Unnameable Books

↑ Index

164. David Chirot

Invitation to participate in Chirot Zero Zine An Anarkeyology of hand eye ear notations

Sat 13 Mar 2010

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: David Chirot <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, Mar 12, 2010 at 11:20 PM
Subject: Invitation to participatein Chirot Zero Zine An Anarekyeology of hand eye ear notations
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]

Dear Followers, Friends, Fellow Workers:

I have just begun a new blog/zine called Chirot Zero Zine A Heap of Rubble-- Anarkeyology of hand eye ear notations--- http://chirotzerozine.blogspot.com the blog is more exusively concerned than my ongoing http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com
<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com%20>with presenting essays, reviews (inc. "bad reviews") , Visual Poetry, Sound Poetry, Event Scores, Manifestos, Manifotofestos, rantin' & raving, rock'roll, music all sorts--by myself and others--if you are interested in being a contributor, please feel free to contact me at
[redacted]
as with this blog, the arts are investigated as a part of rather than apart from the historical, economic, political actualities of yesterday, today, & tomorrow as with al my blogs-- contributions in any language are welcome

note: i also curate another blog which you are welcome to join as participant which is also a site for presenting works in any media-- http://nosobrasotros.blogspot.com this new blog i hope people wil contribute works in any form and also more commentaries on various issues which interest YOU--re an of the arts and any other issues you find thought provoking--esp in relation with the various media YOU or anyone else is working in and with- it is hoped a kind of ongoing conversation/discussion can be engaged in and with that is an open forum for all-- i hope man of you will like to join and share your works, ideas, arguments, doubts resaches satires--in short whatever is in yer mind and heart and soul!

↑ Index

165. Jim Andrews
POET PIRATE NETBOT by Kedrick James
Sat 13 Mar 2010

POET PIRATE NETBOT
Ruminations on the Undertaking of Excess Information
by Kedrick James
http://vispo.com/guests/kedrick/poetpiratebot

An essay by the Vancouver poet, musician, scholar, and visual artist Kedrick James. With 13 of his intriguing visual collages (click these for bigger versions).

Kedrick finished his doctorate last year. It is one of the few readable and interesting doctoral dissertations I've encountered. It's titled "Writing Post-Person: Poetics, Literacy and Sustainability in the Age of Disposable Discourse". One of the things he looked at was spam as a literary phenomenon. In POET PIRATE NETBOT, he looks at that and related things: how writing and education are and will continue to change in light of the geometricly increasing avalanches of writing and media occassioned by the net and the digital, not just by the wide access the world's population has to publishing tools, but by the presence of bots that write.

It's quite a hopeful look, really, at what sometimes appears to be a devastating change to the literary, artistic, and educational landscapes. For although we see this continuing avalanche of writing and media changing the literary landscape, we also see people using the tools and bots to both sift through the deluge and create works of art that begin to sort through what we have.

The visual images in the essay relate to this topic via their being made from google image search images (they're not made with dbCinema).

There's more work on vispo.com by Kedrick : http://vispo.com/dbcinema/kedrick is something I did in dbCinema on Kedrick's thesis "Writing Post-Person: Poetics, Literacy and Sustainability in the Age of Disposable Discourse".

Kedrick teaches English teachers at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver.

ja

↑ Index

166. steve dalachinsky
Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
Sat 13 Mar 2010

---

who what are outsider poets no one eer answered my quest/ion ME??? no education no whatt??? what??? what who is/are outsider(s)?

On Fri, 12 Mar 2010 00:31:19 -0800 David Chirot <[redacted]> writes:
> I'n very honored and excited to have as Jerome Rothenberg's Poets
> and > Poetics blog current entry essay of mine on the Gunatanamo Poets, > which > originally appeared in KAURABI have provided the link here for the
> esay's
> original appearnce and the current one at Jerry's blog, along with > the link
> to another piece of mine re the Guantanamo Poets which appeared in > WordforWord #13 on "Waterboarding and Poetry: Francois Villon and > the new > Extreme Experimental American Poetry."
>
> I hope that listserv memebrs and any and evryone may find something
> of > interest and use in the essays, themselves part of an ongoing and > ever > expanding series of works across several genres and media-- > onwo/ards!
> david-bc
> and happy weekend, with the advent of Daylight Savings Time!!
> Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress (14): David Baptiste
> Chirot,
> Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from
>
Guantánamo)<http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mi ni-anthology-in.html>
> [a commentary on *Poems from Guantánamo: The Detainees
> Speak<http://www.uipress.uiowa.edu/books/2007-fall/falpoefro.html>
> *, edited by Marc Falkoff, University of Iowa Press, 2007]

>
> (towards a non-reading - American abolition of "non-literatures" -
> an entry
> in the Annals of the New Extreme Experimental Poetry)
>
> "The blank and ruin we see in Nature is within our own eye."
> --R.W. Emerson, "Nature"
>
> 1. David-Baptiste Chirot // Word For/Word: A Journal of New > Writing *
> ...* <http://www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm>
> Some American reviewers and commentators on the Poets of > *Guantanamo*have so far found exactly what they were looking for:
> "bad" poetry in Formal
> terms, ...
> www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm -
>
vol13/dbc.htm+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&cd=4&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us
&clientgmail>
> 2. Poems and Poetics <http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/>
> ... (14): David Baptiste Chirot, Non-Poetry for Non-Readers > (Poems > from Guantánamo). [a commentary on Poems from Guantánamo:
> The > Detainees Speak, ... which and into which the Guantanamo > poets and > poems emerge and become re-confined. ...
> poemsand*poet*ics.blogspot.com/ -
>
Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?qÊche:tbc3EKdzZsYJ:poemsandpoetics.
blogspot.com/+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&cd=5&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us& clientgmail>-
>
>
Similar<http://www.google.com/search?
hl=en&client=gmail&rls=gm&q=related:
poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&sa=X&ei=bZ
KZS838
LcL78Aavu8nGCg&vedBoQHzAE>
> 3. KAURAB Online :: A Bengali Poetry Webzine :: Translation
> Site<http://kaurab.tripod.com/english/books/guantanamo.html>
> David Baptiste Chirot. "The blank and ruin we see in Nature is > within > our ... and into which the Guantanamo poets and poems emerge

> and
> become re-confined. ...
> kaurab.tripod.com/english/books/guantanamo.html
>
>
>

↑ Index

167. Kate Eichhorn

Angela Carr and Akilah Oliver - Reading (March 19)

Sat 13 Mar 2010

Date: Friday, March 19, 2010
Time: 7:30pm - 9:00pm
Location: Unnameable Books (600 Vanderbilt Ave, Brooklyn, NY)

Launch of Akilah Oliver's new chapbook, A Collection of Objects.

This is a cross-border publishing venture with Montréal-based Tente Press (designed in Montréal, pressed in Brooklyn, sewn up on the Lower East Side).

At the launch, Akilah will read with Tente Press publisher, Angela Carr (author most recently of The Rose Concordance) and Kate Eichhorn (author of Fond).

↑ Index

168. Halvard Johnson

Re: 25 questions: question # 1...

Sat 13 Mar 2010

Solutions to what?

Hal

follow this link to The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye, my latest collection --

http://www.scribd.com/people/documents/14481250-chalk-editions

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Fri, Mar 12, 2010 at 9:07 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>wrote:

> Taking a page from David Hilbert's well-known list of 23 "Paris Problems" (1900), and, likewise, > hoping to see solutions in this new century, I've formulated a list of questions, which of course > there is not the slightest connection between Hilbert's list of problems and this line of questioning.
>
> Not to mention the fact that many of my questions may contain the answers simply in the asking.
>
> Question # 1:
>
> Should any current poet be judged against only the very best works of the past?
>
> G. E. Schwartz

↑ Index

169. Tenney Nathanson

Tucson Festival of Books: Bernstein Waldman Notley Berssenbrugge etc etc today and tomorrow

Sat 13 Mar 2010

Poetry events at the gigantic Tucson Festival of Books today and tomorrow:

(all these readings in the Kiva Room at the Student Union unless otherwise noted):

Saturday, March 13

10:00 a.m. Charles Bernstein, Barbara Henning,
& Tenney Nathanson
11:30 a.m. Panel Discussion: “Chapbooks: How to Make One, and Why You Should”: Charles Alexander et al
1:00 p.m. Kim Addonizio & Abraham Smith
2:30 p.m. Poetry Reading on the International Stage, Modern Languages room 311, with Tedi López Mills & Wendy Burk
2:30 p.m. A Celebration of Will Inman with David Ray & Michael Rattee
4:00 p.m. Alice Notley & Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

Sunday, March 14

10:00 a.m. Jonathan Rothschild & Pamela Uschuk 11:30 a.m. D.A. Powell & Becca Klaver
1:00 p.m. Rigoberto González & Maria Meléndez
2:30 p.m. Sheila E. Murphy & Geraldine Connolly
4:00 p.m. Anne Waldman & Laynie Browne for more see

http://poetrycenter.arizona.edu/events/springreadings_10-festival.shtml

http://tucsonfestivalofbooks.org/section/index

↑ Index

170. { brad brace }
Grenadines: a travel journal
Sat 13 Mar 2010

Grenadines: (Island 6.0) a tedious and lengthy travel journal packed with helpful information and absurd detail: http://bbrace.net/wordpress/ http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/wordpress/

Global Islands Project -- ongoing series of multi-media pdf-ebooks/field-recordings -- a pastoral, pictorial and phonic elicitation of island parameters.

Your world is based on mutual relief at your common corruption. Maybe some cultures are based on even worse. But that wouldn't change the bad faith of it and as years go by, you wake at night in terror of your whole life being an act of bad faith, where everything is self-interest and nothing more, where every human interaction is driven by a silent, even subconscious calculation of some ulterior motive, to the point that a sea of bad faith has taken over your whole life, there's no small island left from which you can even try to build a bridge of good faith, because even that effort becomes suspect, even good faith is nothing but self-interested, even altruism is nothing but solipsistic, even your professed agonizing right here right now is nothing but a gesture, made to the conscience in order to assure it that it exists.

http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/id.html
http://bbrace.net/id.html

Island 1.0 is Ambergris Caye, Belize Island 2.0 is Koh Si Chang, Thailand
Island 3.0 is Lamu, Kenya
Island 4.0 is Narikel Jingira, Bangladesh Island 5.0 is Isla Mais, Nicaragua Island 6.0 are The Grenadines, West Indies

Global Islands Project:

Island 1.0 -> http://bbrace.net/islands/island1/island1.html or http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/islands/island1/island1.html -- over 800 images and hour-long audiotrack -- 69mb -- (acrobat 6)

Island 2.0 -> http://bbrace.net/islands/island2/island2.html or http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/islands/island2/island2.html -- over 535 images and hour-long audiotrack -- 78mb -- (acrobat 6)

--

http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_1.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_2.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_3.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_4.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_5.0

Global Islands Project -- ongoing series of multi-media pdf-books -- a pastoral, pictorial and phonic elicitation of island parameters...

http://www.bbrace.net/id.html
http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/id.html

bbs: brad brace sound
http://69.64.229.114:8000
http://www.bbrace.net/undisclosed.html

↑ Index

171. David Chirot
re Ekleksographia - Get Ready!
Sat 13 Mar 2010

Thank you for your posting Setphen--this is indeed a very stunning and fascinating journal--i sure hope to contribute to a future issue from just reading many of the pieces inside--

Something that has always struck me in the designation of your works and that of others as "haptic" is that itis not the haptic at al that one is writing of nor seeing, looking at, but the "touching"--that is the touching as in the sentimental, the recording of sentiments, rather than the actual physical touching, which is what the haptic really is. There is even a formof engineering now devoted to creating "haptic robots," which are able to discern the differences in touch between various textures which the robot is directed to touch and compare--to indicate that it does have a sense of touch developed enough to "feel the difference" between the different textures.

I find that in discussing these differences between the actual haptic act of the touch and the removed, distanced, as it were "narratives and sentimentalized"

'touching" response is that one is encountering a kind of gulf, a chasm, between what is considered being literally in touch with the world and one in which an experience in which an after the fact recording of a preconceived set of sensations as a form of “record” do not as it were “touch.”

Instead, there is a kind of gulf, a chasm, and it often gives me to wonder what it is that one might sense this. Perhaps a bit further on here I may express a few thoughts which have occurred to one through time-- Mind you, I do not mean this as a kind of put down of the kinds of works Stephen and other’s do, not at all, and especially not of dear friend mentor Bob Cobbing’s “allegorical haptic,” --what i find instead is a form of field of investigation into the meaning of what it is to touch and "to be touched" ("move") in encountering the visual records which are those of the encounter with the materials.

What I mean is a difference between actual direct physical touching and the emotionally “touching,” the recording of “sensations” of the mental and visual variety. Which is also not the same as the putting down on canvas of “mes petites sensations devant la Nature” as Cezanne wrote of his works. (“My little sensations before/in facing Nature.”)

A person wrote of my rubBeings that they proved that what Nerval called the impossibility of the ground itself speaking was made suddenly not impossible, for in these works it is the ground itself which is speaking, emerging in its own notations on the page, rather than an imposition of my own views on the nature of the ground or myself either one of us “speaking."

It is perhaps the difference between direct physical contact with an "Outside," and the "sentimentalized" (sentiment in the sense of feelings rather than feeling as in touch--) experience of "the touching" as recorded via techniques which present the "image of a feeling" rather than the direct imprint of the touching of the materials with the hand. In the "sentimental" case, one has a sense of the evacuation of the actual in favor of the re-construction of a set of detached images which "stand in" for an experience which occurs "after the fact" in the form of a narrative of an abstraction.

For I do not think that it is an “I” that speaks at al but something greater made out of the touching of the crayon and hand on one side of the paper and that of the materials on the other side, thus creating what Burroughs and Gysin called their works together, “The Third Mind.” And that Third Mind indeed is a ground speaking, an actual “material language” of texture, color, dirt, noise and song which emrge into a dance choreographed by the forms, while the hoise which rises into music is that of the singing of the lines of the matruial as it merges with that of the rubBEing and so—I touch the line and it sings-- Paul Celan wrote that "Poetry no longer impose itself, it exposes itself." Yet one still finds that in a poetry of the touching, one is imposing as it were a sensation from within one’s self onto a material which itself remains distanced, and doubly distanced in that its recording is not done directly but by the indirect means of the exposures the camera and distanced again by being formed into a series which did not exist as itself.

There is also involved here the discussions around what it is to have, to find, to make an "impersonal poetry." this tends to be done in this culture via machines as that is the association which is most often made in conjunction with an image of the "impersonal." The impersonal may also be thought of in relation with copying, with "non-originality," yet again the impersonality is simply the donning of another's mask and voice rather than using one's own. It is simply a substitution of subjectivities which is at work, and belongs to drama--I find it at least much more to the field of performance than to that of an impersonality. Is there then impersonality in the rubBEings? One hopes that as much as possible that is not such but more the personality of the materials themselves which is being expressed via the imprinting of itself done by as "primitive’s possible method--that ancient one of the rubBEing. What one hope is being conveyed is the taphonomic presence of the objet--that is the thing s as they exist in their current state, which is one that registers what may ion man ways be the most impersonal of al presences--that of Time.

By this I mean that as I work I am conscious of the exact Time which is existing in and as the work—the directions of the wind, the degree of heat or cold, the humidity or dryness, the materials around one which include dust and leaf mold, dirt and tar, car exhaust and cigarette smoke, the passing scents of perfumed young women or the sweating forms of runners and so on. At every instant al of these things are in flux, changing, in large ways and small and it is al of these thing which are going into the making of the piece itself whose surfaces are registering themselves the heat the wetness the movements the air the thicknesses of smoke or scents of blood or decay or molds . . . al of the things are the markings of Time, for with each moments things are passing away, changing , their forms being worn down, decaying crumbling, falling apart, the lettres becoming evermore blurred or fragmented, the wood become every more rotten or hardened, the air itself being evermore saturated with pollution—so Time, that great impersonal being which is passing, is expressing itself in the very fibers of the pieces, in the most tiny particles which have become ingrained as it were in the woven interstices of the paper, in the woven grains of the hands their lines, their broken and chipped bones, their smashed and tenuously functioning nerve endings—

And at the same time all of this disintegration is going on, there’s the creation of new forms out of the constellations made in the chaos collapses of every instant passing things further into the distances of time thought it is but millisecond away—the past the future and the present which is a presence passing—so ephemeral and at the same having a quality of endurance, an obdurate eternity as it were a stubborn refusal while at the same time dancing the night away—

Energy—time is in this energy, time is the energy, time and light as they affect the materials, the hands, the paper—

This gives an enduring sense of life as a form at once of refusal and acceptance of time—

In a sense this is the impersonality which is expressed, this ongoing time which is “outside oneself’ yet which one is “inside of.” Oneself at the same time. Similarly in the touch I feel that ongoing sense of al the hands that have been the blood coursing through mine, Al those hands that have worked with wood and bark and water and stone for three hundred fity years in North America, and longer—before the blood was mixed into French and Indian—so long the blood in the hands has been working with the things in these places that the hand itself is not one’s own—but simply a very active and haptically engaged hand of centuries stil finding its way along grains of wood and the time existing in waters and skies, in the stones and the passing of shadows of the outstretched limbs of trees playing over the cracks of the sidewalks which Bob Cobbing and I used to sound out as notations for performance many years ago

In that sense al these things touching each other understand the transience of their encounters, the speed—which means the swiftnesses and slownesses--with which al this is passing-and at the same time the deep encounter within the moment when the presences meet and make their signs together and pass on—

This does not mean an encounter with an identity but rather the passing away of identity into something far greater than itself, something that is truly outside and whose outside is also inside one, that continual sense of being at once present and incredibly distant, from some other time and place and al the while uncannily familiar yet always strangely here. It is an encounter with that other which is oneself, some otherness encountering the continual otherness of the things one lives among—things as much known as any person and at the same time just as strange--

↑ Index

172. peter ganick
(no subject)
Sat 13 Mar 2010

---

experiential-experimental literature blog.
literature that changes consciousness.

send submissions to <[redacted]> text-only. no visuals.

http://ex-ex-lit.blogspot.com

thanks, peter ganick

↑ Index

173. Peter Grieco
Re: WATERS COLOURS
Sat 13 Mar 2010

Hey Brad,

These are fantastic! 15, 28, 38 standout amoung many others. Give me a feeling of lightness & plentitude.

http://www.moriapoetry.com

check these poems.

Best,
Peter

--- On Sun, 3/7/10, { brad brace } <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: { brad brace } <[redacted]>
> Subject: WATERS COLOURS
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Sunday, March 7, 2010, 7:44 PM > just finished my webpage for my > watercolours that I've started to do on my trips -- > a lot of fun for me without all the usual conceptual and
> 'project' baggage.... /:b
>
> http://bbrace.net/webgallerywc/wc.html
> http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/webgallerywc/wc.html

↑ Index

174. Aldon Nielsen
Raves for Rae
Sat 13 Mar 2010

---

  awoke this morning to the good news of this well-deserved recognition for Rae Armantrout's Versed.

RTS, BRIEFLY
Book Critics Circle Presents Awards

By MOTOKO
RICH<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/reference/timestopics/people/r/motoko_rich/index.html?inline=nyt-per>;
Compiled by DAVE ITZKOFF
Published: March 12, 2010

The British author Hilary Mantel<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/reference/timestopics/people/m/hilary_mantel/index.html?inline=nyt-per> was awarded the National Book Critics Circle Award for fiction at the Tishman Auditorium of theNew School<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/reference/timestopics/organizations/n/new_school_university/index.html?inline=nyt-org>
on Thursday night for “Wolf Hall,” a historical novel about the court of Henry VIII that centered on the king’s adviser Thomas Cromwell. Ms. Mantel had already won the 41st-annualMan Booker Prize<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/reference/timestopics/subjects/m/man_booker_prize/index.html?inline=nyt-classifier> last fall for the book. The board of the National Book Critics Circle, a nonprofit group of more than 600 professional book reviewers, cited Ms. Mantel for a work that was “original in voice and ambitious in style.” Richard Holmes won the nonfiction award for “The Age of Wonder: How the Romantic Generation Discovered the Beauty and Terror of Science.” Blake Bailey won the biography award for “Cheever: A Life.” Diana Athill won the autobiography award for “Somewhere Towards the End: A Memoir.” The poetry prize went to Rae Armantroutfor “Versed,” and the criticism prize was awarded to Eula Biss for “Notes From No Man’s Land: American Essays.”
--
Aldon L. Nielsen
Kelly Professor of American Literature
Department of English
117 Burrowes Building
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA
16802-6200

[redacted]

sailing the blogosphere at http://heatstrings.blogspot.com

"kindling his mind (more
than his mind will kindle)"

--William Carlos Williams, early adopter

↑ Index

175. Stephen Vincent
New Lorine Niedecker Film!!!
Sat 13 Mar 2010

IMMORTAL CUPBOARD: In Search of Lorine Niedecker a film by Cathy C. Cook. (73 minutes). Just saw at Alternative Television Access, San Francisco last night. Extraordinary,'wet' & beautifully done. Sets a new high - at least for myself - in what is possible with a poet/bio flic. I you are Bay Area local it will be also screened at 5:30 at UC Berkeley English Department on Monday with Cook on board - who speaks real well, too. Check their website for room detail.

I did not ask but suspect the film (CD) will end up in some kind of distribution channel.

Stephen Vincent
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

176. William Allegrezza
Younger Italian-American Poets
Sat 13 Mar 2010

A Italian friend of mine is looking for young or lesser known American or Latin American poets of Italian descent for an upcoming anthology.
If you have someone to suggest, please send me an e-mail.

,

Un amigo mío italiano está buscando a poetas americanos o latinoamericanos jovenes o menos conocidos de la ascendencia italiana para una antología. Si tienes alguien a sugerir, envíeme un correo electrónico.

Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

177. Lynn Xu
CANARIUM WEST COAST READING TOUR
Sat 13 Mar 2010

CANARIUM BOOKS announces new titles for spring!
*www.canariumbooks.org

John Beer*: The Waste Land and Other Poems. ("Only a genius could write a book called The Waste Land and Other Poems. Well, John Beer is that person. 'I set out to write a treatise on failure, and it turned out my subject was love,' he writes. 'Call it my confusion.' We should all be so confused." -- John Ashbery)

Paul Killebrew: Flowers. (“All my poet friends mourned when Paul told us he’d be going into law, so soon after he appeared on the scene as a supernova. ‘No fear. The blue light. My breath washing out in the air.’ Yes. He came out strengthened. Grown in imagination. Bigger in his lucid scanning of America. Rejuvenating. To read him is a delight.” -- Tomaz Salamun)

Suzanne Buffam: The Irrationalist. (“Buffam’s often deadpan tone is like a magical dustpan that sweeps up the strangest observations and ideas, all worlds to themselves. Her ‘Little Commentaries’—‘On Piñatas,’ ‘On Fountains,’ and ‘On Vanishing Acts’ (to name only a few)—are absolute gems, kin to Anne Carson’s town poems and Yoko Ono’s Grapefruit. Buffam’s poems tug at new corners of the brain. They’re marvelous.” -- Matthea Harvey)

Ish Klein: Union! ("Klein resembles an updated Whitman in the best possible ways.” -- Gently Read Literature | “I mean it when I say Ish Klein is a genius." --* Dorothea Lasky*)

_____

*CANARIUM WEST COAST TOUR (JOHN BEER, PAUL KILLEBREW, and ISH KLEIN): *

THU 18 MAR (Hosted by Poetry Flash) MOE'S BOOKS (2476 Telegraph Ave, Berkeley) @ 7:30pm
*FRI 19 MAR @ GREAT OVERLAND BOOK CO (345 Judah St., San Francisco) @ 7:15pm

SAT 20 MAR @ ASHLAND PUBLIC LIBRARY (410 Siskiyou Blvd, Ashland) @ 1pm SAT 20 MAR @ DIVA CENTER (110 West Broadway, Eugene) @ 7pm SUN 21 MAR @ SPARE ROOM (2909 NE Alberta, Portland) @ 7:30pm MON 22 MAR @ PILOT BOOKS (219 Broadway E., Seattle) @ 7pm

*

Please join us! We look forward to seeing you,

Canarium Books | www.canariumbooks.org

↑ Index

178. Evelyn Posamentier

Very OT: Californians for Education Funding (much apologies for cross-posting)

Sat 13 Mar 2010

A message from a daily lurker:

I'm writing to tell you that all California schools (K - Nobel folk) succeded in our March 4 Day of Action rally throughout the state (and a number nationally, as well) to support our demand for proper educational funding.

Thousands of us statewide participated in Walkouts and Rallies. While considerable media coverage was of small highway sitins, most of us attended and conducted rallies at our various sites.

The next major California action takes place on March 22. Buses from all over the state will be converging in Sacramento, our state capitol, and then marching to Mr. Schwarzenegger's door.

I'm asking you all to keep us in your thoughts that day. (You might say that this is Poetry in Motion!)

Thanks for listening!

Lurkers Anonymous

p.s By way of introduction, google me to see some of my work --

↑ Index

179. Corey Frost

Multiformalisms: This Tuesday, 6:30 at the CUNY Grad Center.

Mon 15 Mar 2010

Tuesday, March 16, 2010. 6:30 pm. At the CUNY Graduate Center, 365 Fifth Avenue New York, Rm. 9206.
Multiformalisms : Postmodern Poetics of Form

Join poet and editor Annie Finch, along with contributors to the anthology Multiformalisms: Postmodern Poetics of Form, for a lively discussion of how contemporary poets use and understand forms. The conversation, like the book, will juxtapose traditional formalism and Flarf, the American long poem and native Hawaiian poetry, rhyme in Paul Muldoon and textual variability in New Media poetry, Susan Howe and Lucinda Roy, jazz and Asian American poetics, and much more. Featuring Marilyn Hacker, Patricia Smith, Tyler Hoffman, Stefania deKenessey, and Marie-Elizabeth Mali. Presented by the Center for the Humanities and the GC Poetics Group. Moderated by Corey Frost.

↑ Index

180. Jesse Glass

Ahadada Books Presents: Ekleksographia: William Blake's Haptic Tea Party--Now In Progress!

Mon 15 Mar 2010

Watch Sarah Sanders in her writing marathon. Then check out the rest of the issue. Jess, with more flash than he can say!

http://ekleksographia.ahadadabooks.com/davenport/authors/sarah_sanders.html

↑ Index

181. Gerald Schwartz

25 questions/ # 2

Mon 15 Mar 2010

2: Can there be truly objective criteria for judging a poem?

G. E. Schwartz

↑ Index

182. Rob McLennan

how does one begin? a poetics at turning forty

Mon 15 Mar 2010

---

by rob mclennan

http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/03/how-does-one-begin-poetics-at-turning.html

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

183. Emma Bolden

Re: Younger Italian-American Poets

Mon 15 Mar 2010

I am of Italian descent, as is Emari Digiorgio!

On Sat, Mar 13, 2010 at 12:57 PM, William Allegrezza
<[redacted]>wrote:

> A Italian friend of mine is looking for young or lesser known American or Latin American poets of Italian descent for an upcoming anthology. If you have someone to suggest, please send me an e-mail.
>
> ,
> --------
>
> Un amigo mío italiano está buscando a poetas americanos o latinoamericanos jovenes o menos conocidos de la ascendencia italiana para una antología. Si tienes alguien a sugerir, envíeme un correo electrónico.
>
> Bill Allegrezza

--
Emma Bolden

www.emmabolden.wordpress.com

Visiting Assistant Professor
Department of English
Georgetown College
400 East College Street
Georgetown, KY 40324

↑ Index

184. amy king
Would you buy art? A poem?
Mon 15 Mar 2010

Would you pay for a poem? Possible? Worth it? What's art worth? Is poetry art? Is capitalism art? Is there a support-artists culture?

Here - http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/15/paid-for-poem/

Thanks,

Amy

_____

HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

↑ Index

185. Maria Damon
Re: Would you buy art? A poem?
Mon 15 Mar 2010

---

i sometimes pay street people $1 for a poem if they have a sign offering that. i was going to pay Bernadette Mayer for a poem for a conference a few years ago (she had a standing offer out for topical poems for pay) but i didn't get it together. in 1977 i paid $2 for Allen Ginsberg to write a haiku for me for a Naropa benefit. I wish i could find that haiku now. Because i was standing with my friend Julia Sagebien, whom he knew, i know the phrase "rosy dyke" was in it.

amy king wrote:
> Would you pay for a poem? Possible? Worth it? What's art worth? Is poetry art? Is capitalism art? Is there a support-artists culture?
>
> Here - http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/15/paid-for-poem/
>
> Thanks,
>
> Amy
>
> _____
>
>
> HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:
>
> http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

186. susan maurer
Re: Would you buy art? A poem?
Mon 15 Mar 2010

---

hm wanted to comment on word press but was defeated by the technology. interesting topic as i am now reaping the rewards in terms of at least quadrupled readership as my first book is free and may be read or printed out online. certainly i draw a big line on paying to get published, self publishing and always send to mags which pay whenever possible. In general i hold to the notion valued and paid for are often cousins. i am frequently deviled by the question i have about what if anything constitutes social actvism in poetry but maybe sometimes..Susan Maurer

> Date: Mon, 15 Mar 2010 10:55:03 -0700
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Would you buy art? A poem?
> To: [redacted]
>
> Would you pay for a poem? Possible? Worth it? What's art worth? Is poetry art? Is capitalism art? Is there a support-artists culture?
>
> Here - http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/15/paid-for-poem/
>
> Thanks,
>
> Amy
>
> _____
>
> HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:
>
> http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_2

↑ Index

187. Gregg Murray

Re: Would you buy art? A poem?

Mon 15 Mar 2010

Hi Amy,

I tried to buy Maria Damon a beer during a group collaboration for saying, "James Joyce Audubon Society"

Ggg

_____
From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, March 15, 2010 2:04:45 PM
Subject: Re: Would you buy art? A poem?

i sometimes pay street people $1 for a poem if they have a sign offering that. i was going to pay Bernadette Mayer for a poem for a conference a few years ago (she had a standing offer out for topical poems for pay) but i didn't get it together. in 1977 i paid $2 for Allen Ginsberg to write a haiku for me for a Naropa benefit. I wish i could find that haiku now. Because i was standing with my friend Julia Sagebien, whom he knew, i know the phrase "rosy dyke" was in it.

amy king wrote:
> Would you pay for a poem? Possible? Worth it? What's art worth? Is poetry art? Is capitalism art? Is there a support-artists culture?
>
> Here - http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/15/paid-for-poem/
>
> Thanks,
>
> Amy
>
> _____
>
>
> HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:
>
> http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

188. Halvard Johnson
Re: 25 questions/ # 2
Mon 15 Mar 2010

Only if they can be arrived at by counting.

Hal

follow this link to The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye, my latest collection --

http://www.scribd.com/people/documents/14481250-chalk-editions

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Mon, Mar 15, 2010 at 9:56 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>wrote:

> # 2: Can there be truly objective criteria for judging a poem?
>
> G. E. Schwartz

↑ Index

189. Stephen Vincent
Elecsographia - Sarah Saunders life & much more
Mon 15 Mar 2010

The newÂ issue of Elecsographia has just gone up - including my very own "Tree Haptics" includingÂ a little essay, as well. For me it is very gratifying to see a number of writers usingÂ "haptics" as an operative term for the making of their workÂ (Helps take one of my obsessions out of the woods!).

If you go to the site right now (url below) you will a real time video of Sarah Saunders making a big piece - started this sunrise that will finish sunrise tomorrow. The video provides a wonderfully tangible sense of physical process and material - more like being in a woodshop than a workshop! Her fingers, pencils, the texture of paper, etc. Go to:

Â http://ekleksographia.ahadadabooks.com/davenport/authors/sarah_sanders.html

Stephen V

http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

↑ Index

190. CA Conrad
Lamantia's THE BLOOD OF THE AIR on the Vernal Equinox
Mon 15 Mar 2010

2010 marks the 40th anniversary of the publication of Philip Lamantia's THE BLOOD OF THE AIR

We're having an URCHIN reading 3/20/10 at the transition into renewal of the air, where the blood of the air awakens with pollen, sex, life. Details here: http://UrchinPoetry.blogspot.com

(NOTE: AT 7PM ONE BLOCK AWAY COME CELEBRATE STAN MIR'S NEW BOOK AT A BOOK PARTY AT BRICKBAT BOOKS)

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

191. Bill Berkson
Berkson in Buffalo
Tue 16 Mar 2010

Bill Berkson in Buffalo: Poetry Readings & Art Talks

Thursday, March 18, 4 pm
Poetry Reading & Discussion
Student Union Assembly Hall
Buffalo State College

Friday, March 19, 7 pm
Lecture: "DeKooning-esque"
Albright-Knox Art Gallery

Saturday, March 20, 12:30 pm
"Gotham News": Gallery Walk & Talk
Albright Knox Art Gallery
*
March 20, 8 pm
Poetry Reading
Just Buffalo
Western New York Book Arts Center
468 Washington Street

↑ Index

192. Sarah Sarai
Re: 25 questions: question # 1...
Tue 16 Mar 2010

Alan, So the question relates to recipients of grant money or tenure? It may, it does but temporal issues--are we "judging" now or will a new we judge in another century--fold into the batter. People are functions. Alas or not. Why not poems. Are poems better than people? Love is a judgment. Passion too.

Gerald: I might "judge" a poem I loved now against I poem I love from the past. This is fun.

Sarah

RE: On Fri, 12 Mar 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:

> Question # 1:
>
> Should any current poet be judged against only the very best works of the past?
>
> G. E. Schwartz

Beyond the issue of what constitutes genre, canon, and "best," not to mention "current" or "poet": there is also the question of judgment. Is a poem written to be judged, any more than an experience is judged? How does one judge anything that has no possibility either of quantifiable results or verification procedures (not to mention falsifiability)? How would you compare a contemporary poet to the poetry of Sumer? One might think immediately that the habitus of each is fundamentally unknowable to that of the other. The same might be true, say, of Swinburne and Sondheim. What about Sondheim and Damon? Does the synchronic necessarily lend itself to judgment and comparison? On the other hand, let's say that judgment has a pragmatics: of grant, job, publication. Then judgment also implies an ecology and competition: writing is now a contestation, which implies as well a curlicue or diacritical marking beyond the ostensible 'content' of the text, no matter how defined. In other words: Here is my poem; rate it; act accordingly. The poem is now a function. It's a function within a potentially limited space-time event or attention economy. There is nothing right or wrong with this approach, either. Nor of the other approach. It becomes a matter of taste, connoisseurship: Of who is judging, and who is being judged. And, like pretty much anything in poetry/poetics, this is also something that's basically - i.e. ontologically, epistemologically, unanswerable, because the question, just like the "Should" in the question above, is problematic, self-deconstructing upon closer examination.

↑ Index

193. David-Baptiste Chirot

Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog

Tue 16 Mar 2010

---

this is in response to Steve Dalichinsky's question:

Date: Sat, 13 Mar 2010 14:38:52 +0530
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
> To: [redacted]
>
> who what are outsider poets no one eer answered my quest/ion ME???
> no education no whatt??? what??? what who is/are outsider(s)?

Dear Stephen--

when i first read Jerry's announcement on the Poetics List last September--that he is working on line on an envisioned Anthology of Outsider Poetry--i also wondered--and do wonder yet--what an Outsider Poetry might be—

Does it mean a kind of extension into poetry of the examples drawn from "Outsider Art?"--(some of the examples you use here are among those used in the general ideas put forward as criteria for "Outsider Art")--is it “importing”—from another “field”-in a way that perhaps is like that of the Slow Food Movement being included into the Slow Poetry Movement--??)

Outsider in relation to what as "Inside?"--

How might the "Outside" Poet and Poetry mini-Anthology differ from Anthologies like the "Outlaw Bible of American Poetry" or--any number of anthologies previously assembled by Jerry, George Quasha, Richard Alpert, Richard Kostelanetz and many others?--Or any example of a collection of "avant-garde" and "experimental" poetries?

Since Jerry has worked so long in so many areas of Poetry, i thought he might have perhaps already some ideas as to his conceptions of what an Outsider Poetry is--yet i have a feeling--this is just my own "intuition" really--i have a feeling that part of what really sets this project apart is that the nature of the Outside and Outsider may emerge in at least some guises and that these will emerge as the projects moves along. That to me is the really beautiful part of the Anthology--that it is being assembled in "real time" and on line--one may follow it as it develops--and, more than that, besides finding examples which might function as "answers," what one really finds, to me at any rate, is the openness to a continual questioning and finding, an openness to the idea that this is not already a pre conceived set of examples, prejudices, opinions, nor a trendy tip of the hat to any other movements etc--but truly is an ongoing investigation.

When Gertrude Stein, so the story goes, was on her dying bed--she looked up at whoever was present--and said--"What is the answer?"--Then--laughing--she "answered" by saying--"What is the question?"

I think the nature of this project, or the way i understand it and work with it, is to keep asking questions--interesting & useful questions that as they emerge lead to further question, findings, researches and the development of new methods, techniques, new conceptions, as well as the re-finding of older examples from around the world which themselves ask questions which are just as alive today as when first asked--

Questioning is something much absent in discussions of any kind today--what is really wanted, for the most part, are examples, descriptions, categories, jargons, and ways to pigeon hole a poet or form of poetry. This allows for the creation of new anthologies, new job descriptions for candidates for such and such a position, opens much needed vacancies in the employment world of today--To have the answers means also that a sense of "order" is created, in order to fix with in the orders hierarchies, steps on the career path, ways to pad the resume and so forth. Answers also give one the sense that due to Order being established, it must be maintained and various "security measures taken," in order to protect the boundaries and members of such and such a grouping, such and such a "movement"--to the point where orders are in fact necessary to keep order. That is, a process of arranging a certain status quo which must be kept by following the orders of the day vis a vis such and such an Authority, Group and etc--

When the announcement of the Anthology was first made, i had only questions--and was amazed to find that they were invited to appear at the Poets and Poetics mini-anthology in the making of the Outsider Poetry and Poets--

since i can't give you an answer per se--here are the questions again, with the link where to find them.

hopefully they may be of interest and use--not in answering, but in finding ever more questions to ask--

Rather than the delineating of boundaries "in order" to demonstrate what are the boundaries of Outsider Poetry,--one finds bridges, links, trains of associations--with which to further investigate and think on these questions re the Outsider Poetry--

Not Barriers--Bridges--Not Walls--but Windows--

Here is the response to the announcement--i hope it's useful & interesting--

http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2009/09/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html

> Date: Sat, 13 Mar 2010 14:38:52 +0530
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
> To: [redacted]
>
> who what are outsider poets no one eer answered my quest/ion ME???
> no education no whatt??? what??? what who is/are outsider(s)?
>
> On Fri, 12 Mar 2010 00:31:19 -0800 David Chirot <[redacted]>
> writes:
> I'n very honored and excited to have as Jerome Rothenberg's Poets
> and > Poetics blog current entry essay of mine on the Gunatanamo Poets,
> which > originally appeared in KAURABI have provided the link here for the
> esay's
> original appearnce and the current one at Jerry's blog, along with
> the link
> to another piece of mine re the Guantanamo Poets which appeared in > WordforWord #13 on "Waterboarding and Poetry: Francois Villon and
> the new > Extreme Experimental American Poetry."
>
> I hope that listserv memebrs and any and evryone may find something
> of > interest and use in the essays, themselves part of an ongoing and
> ever > expanding series of works across several genres and media--
> onwo/ards!
> david-bc
> and happy weekend, with the advent of Daylight Savings Time!!
> Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress (14): David Baptiste
> Chirot,
> Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from
>
> Guantánamo)<http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mi
> ni-anthology-in.html>
> *[a commentary on Poems from Guantánamo: The Detainees
> Speak<http://www.uipress.uiowa.edu/books/2007-fall/falpoefro.html>
> , edited by Marc Falkoff, University of Iowa Press, 2007]
>
> (towards a non-reading - American abolition of "non-literatures" -
> an entry

in the Annals of the New Extreme Experimental Poetry)

*"The blank and ruin we see in Nature is within our own eye."*
--R.W. Emerson, "Nature"

*1. David-Baptiste Chirot // Word For/Word: A Journal of New Writing *
...* <http://www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm>
Some American reviewers and commentators on the Poets of *Guantanamo*have so far found exactly what they were looking for: "bad" poetry in Formal terms, ...
www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm -

vol13/dbc.htm+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&cd=4&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client= gmail>
2. Poems and Poetics <http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/>
... (14): David Baptiste Chirot, Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from Guantánamo). [a commentary on Poems from Guantánamo: The Detainees Speak, ... which and into which the Guantanamo poets and poems emerge and become re-confined. ...
poemsand*poet*ics.blogspot.com/ -

Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?q=cache:tbc3EKdzZsYJ:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&cd=5&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=
gmail>-

Similar<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&client=gmail&rls=gm&q=related:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&sa=X&ei=bZKZS838
LcL78Aavu8nGCg&ved=0CBoQHzAE>
3. KAURAB Online :: A Bengali Poetry Webzine :: Translation Site<http://kaurab.tripod.com/english/books/guantanamo.html>
David Baptiste Chirot. "The blank and ruin we see in Nature is within our ... and into which the Guantanamo poets and poems emerge and become re-confined. ...
kaurab.tripod.com/english/books/guantanamo.html

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_3

↑ Index

194. Alan Sondheim

4 hopeful pieces with descriptions

Tue 16 Mar 2010

---

4 hopeful pieces with descriptions

http://www.alansondheim.org/city.mp3 I've been thinking about the infinity of cities, the depth of soundscapes and the romantic plenitude of nature. This is out the window of our loft; every sound in the city contributes, every cough or whistle miles away, every tire on asphalt. It always amazes me: this is the murmuring of a technological world coming to an end, perhaps, within a century. There are sub-bass harmonies here as well - harmonies which dominate the aural landscape, but which are inaudible to human ears. Even in this recording, one senses them. I've just finished Lamartine's uncanny Raphael, a book in which the natural world of meadows and streams runs through emotional states, tending towards both exaltation and cessation. I can imagine Julie at walk among the Brooklyn forests of streets, still listening, but with a greater hunger. HOPEFUL: The depth of the city revealed as a new cosmos with everyone present, all the time.

http://www.alansondheim.org/melodeon.mp3 Recently acquired this 1847 melodeon thanks to book trading. The bellows are bad; the vacuum box won't hold a vacuum; three valves are broken; the vacuum box needs to be opened; several reeds won't sound. So it's in great need of repair. In the meantime, furious pumping and a lot of reverb makes this odd sound file; you can hear the bellows working. It's actually quite a beautiful instrument, and will sound great once it's restored. HOPEFUL: A melodeon sounding like it did in 1847, when it was in someone's parlor.

http://www.alansondheim.org/hybrid1.mp3 http://www.alansondheim.org/hybrid2.mp3 Playing around with the rishi on the oud, alternating with finger-picking. It's difficult to keep the rishi (pick) available if I'm using everything else on the strings. So it's rishi in the mouth, rishi on the floor, rishi on the knee, rishi held sometimes with two fingers, with a curled finger, with a thumb and finger, rishi sometimes dropped. On the other hand the sonority of the two interacting playing modes really interests me.

HOPEFUL: Smooth transitions in-tune make for wonderful textures, melodies, and harmonies.

HOPEFUL: The CITY SYMPHONY will make me rich; the MELODEON will bring untold pleasure to millions; the HYBRID OUD PLAYING will set new standards in improvisation world-wide.

↑ Index

195. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: re Ekleksographia - Get Ready!

Tue 16 Mar 2010

David,

"One hopes that as much as possible that is not such but more the personality of the materials themselves which is being expressed via the imprinting of itself done by as "primitive's possible method--that ancient one of the rubBEing."

What you are describing -both the nature of the escape from the ego and the fusion of the subjective into the objective- is so much like the escape from the ego in Sufism which I delineate in Eda:

"Everything in that poetry becomes relatively clear from that perspective. Not only trees or animals, but in this poetry colors, objects, things, natural processes are in dialogue with each other, weaving their endless patterns. Eda is the structure of that pattern, the mesh of linguistic and geographic coordinates which go to its creation. Not the individual, but objects, colors, things are at the center of this endless transformation, the ego attached to it only tangentially, a detail, suffering and ecstatic. It is this peripheral relationship of consciousness to wider natural forces — subjective and objective, visceral and abstract — which gives Turkish poetry its stunning originality.

Consciousness dies, the eye dis-solves into motion, silhouetted by the dark matter of words." "The Spritual Life of Replicants"

As also in rubBEings, in this process time becomes the true subject, the textures, the sounds of its unfolding, the intricate pattern it weaves. As a result one enters a space where language "almost" not exist, a spot at the periphery of language where language is in the process of being born, in your words, not yet "sentimentalized."

Have you seen the Rivette film La Petite Noisette (the long, several hours version) where one hears the squeaks of the pen on paper as a portrait is being painted "in real time" (which the spectator will never see in completion and only in fragments in the process of being "created")? The spectator only sees the "model" who stands nakes during most of the movie; the painting itself is destroyed by the artist.

The thoughts of disappearance is.

Disappearance was.

Thoughts of was

is. is.

is is sang the bird.

in alternating shades.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Mar 13, 2010 at 11:24 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Thank you for your posting Setphen--this is indeed a very stunning and fascinating journal--i sure hope to contribute to a future issue from just reading many of the pieces inside--
>
> Something that has always struck me in the designation of your works and that of others as "haptic" is that itis not the haptic at al that one is writing of nor seeing, looking at, but the "touching"--that is the touching as in the sentimental, the recording of sentiments, rather than the actual physical touching, which is what the haptic really is. There is even a formof engineering now devoted to creating "haptic robots," which are able to discern the differences in touch between various textures which the robot > is directed to touch and compare--to indicate that it does have a sense of touch developed enough to "feel the difference" between the different textures.
>
> I find that in discussing these differences between the actual haptic act of > the touch and the removed, distanced, as it were "narratives and sentimentalized" 'touching" response is that one is encountering a kind of gulf, a chasm, between what is considered being literally in touch with the world and one in which an experience in which an after the fact recording of > a preconceived set of sensations as a form of “record” do not as it were “touch.”
>
> Instead, there is a kind of gulf, a chasm, and it often gives me to wonder what it is that one might sense this. Perhaps a bit further on here I may express a few thoughts which have occurred to one through time--
> Mind you, I do not mean this as a kind of put down of the kinds of works Stephen and other’s do, not at all, and especially not of dear friend

mentor
Bob Cobbing's "allegorical haptic," --what i find instead is a form of field of investigation into the meaning of what it is to touch and "to be touched" ("move") in encountering the visual records which are those of the encounter with the materials.

What I mean is a difference between actual direct physical touching and the emotionally "touching," the recording of "sensations" of the mental and visual variety. Which is also not the same as the putting down on canvas of
"mes petites sensations devant la Nature" as Cezanne wrote of his works.
("My little sensations before/in facing Nature.")

A person wrote of my rubBeings that they proved that what Nerval called the impossibility of the ground itself speaking was made suddenly not impossible, for in these works it is the ground itself which is speaking, emerging in its own notations on the page, rather than an imposition of my own views on the nature of the ground or myself either one of us "speaking."

It is perhaps the difference between direct physical contact with an "Outside," and the "sentimentalized" (sentiment in the sense of feelings rather than feeling as in touch--) experience of "the touching" as recorded via techniques which present the "image of a feeling" rather than the direct imprint of the touching of the materials with the hand. In the "sentimental" case, one has a sense of the evacuation of the actual in favor of the re-construction of a set of detached images which "stand in" for an experience which occurs "after the fact" in the form of a narrative of an abstraction.

For I do not think that it is an "I" that speaks at al but something greater made out of the touching of the crayon and hand on one side of the paper and that of the materials on the other side, thus creating what Burroughs and Gysin called their works together, "The Third Mind." And that Third Mind indeed is a ground speaking, an actual "material language" of texture, color, dirt, noise and song which emrge into a dance choreographed by the forms, while the hoise which rises into music is that of the singing of the lines of the matruial as it merges with that of the rubBEing and so—I touch the line and it sings-- Paul Celan wrote that "Poetry no longer impose itself, it exposes itself." Yet one still finds that in a poetry of the touching, one is imposing as it were a sensation from within one's self onto a material which itself remains distanced, and doubly distanced in that its recording is not done directly but by the indirect means of the exposures the camera and distanced again by being formed into a series which did not exist as itself.

There is also involved here the discussions around what it is to have, to find, to make an "impersonal poetry." this tends to be done in this culture via machines as that is the association which is most often made in conjunction with an image of the "impersonal." The impersonal may also be thought of in relation with copying, with "non-originality," yet again the impersonality is simply the donning of another's mask and voice rather than using one's own. It is simply a substitution of subjectivities which is at work, and belongs to drama--I find it at least much more to the field of performance than to that of an impersonality.
Is there then impersonality in the rubBEings? One hopes that as much as possible that is not such but more the personality of the materials themselves which is being expressed via the imprinting of itself done by as "primitive's possible method--that ancient one of the rubBEing.
What one hope is being conveyed is the taphonomic presence of the objet--that is the thing s as they exist in their current state, which is one that registers what may ion man ways be the most impersonal of al presences--that of Time.

By this I mean that as I work I am conscious of the exact Time which is existing in and as the work—the directions of the wind, the degree of heat or cold, the humidity or dryness, the materials around one which include dust and leaf mold, dirt and tar, car exhaust and cigarette smoke, the passing scents of perfumed young women or the sweating forms of runners and so on. At every instant al of these things are in flux, changing, in large ways and small and it is al of these thing which are going into the making of the piece itself whose surfaces are registering themselves the heat the wetness the movements the air the thicknesses of smoke or scents of blood or decay or molds . . . al of the things are the markings of Time, for with each moments things are passing away, changing , their forms being worn down, decaying crumbling, falling apart, the lettres becoming evermore blurred or fragmented, the wood become every more rotten or hardened, the air itself being evermore saturated with pollution—so Time, that great impersonal being which is passing, is expressing itself in the very fibers of the pieces, in the most tiny particles which have become ingrained as it were in the woven interstices of the paper, in the woven grains of the hands their lines, their broken and chipped bones, their smashed and tenuously functioning nerve endings—

And at the same time all of this disintegration is going on, there's the creation of new forms out of the constellations made in the chaos collapses of every instant passing things further into the distances of time thought it is but millisecond away—the past the future and the present which is a presence passing—so ephemeral and at the same having a quality of endurance, an obdurate eternity as it were a stubborn refusal while at the same time dancing the night away—

Energy—time is in this energy, time is the energy, time and light as they affect the materials, the hands, the paper—

This gives an enduring sense of life as a form at once of refusal and acceptance of time—

In a sense this is the impersonality which is expressed, this ongoing time which is "outside oneself' yet which one is "inside of." Oneself at the same time. Similarly in the touch I feel that ongoing sense of al the hands that have been the blood coursing through mine, Al those hands that have worked with wood and bark and water and stone for three hundred fity years in North America, and longer—before the blood was mixed into French and Indian—so long the blood in the hands has been working with the things in these places that the hand itself is not one's own—but simply a very active and haptically engaged hand of centuries stil finding its way along grains of wood and the time existing in waters and skies, in the stones and the passing of shadows of the outstretched limbs of trees playing over the cracks of the sidewalks which Bob Cobbing and I used to sound out as notations for performance many years ago

In that sense al these things touching each other understand the transience of their encounters, the speed—which means the swiftnesses and slownesses--with which al this is passing-and at the same time the deep encounter within the moment when the presences meet and make their signs together and pass on—

This does not mean an encounter with an identity but rather the passing away of identity into something far greater than itself, something that is truly outside and whose outside is also inside one, that continual sense of being at once present and incredibly distant, from some other time and place and al the while uncannily familiar yet always strangely here.
It is an encounter with that other which is oneself, some otherness encountering the continual otherness of the things one lives among—things as > much known as any person and at the same time just as strange--

↑ Index

196. Aryanil Mukherjee
Update-5 @ KAURAB Online Translation Archive
Tue 16 Mar 2010

Update-5 of the KAURAB Online Translation Archive was released yesterday.

Please visit

http://poetry.kaurab.com

This update includes -

Bengali poetry (in translation)

Rabindranath Thakur (Tagore) - 25 new translations of songs/poems

Pronob Pal - Language Alternation & Collateral Damage

Masud Khan & his poetry

Interviews of -

Jerome Rothenberg by Mark Weiss

John Balaban by Ankur Saha

Book Reviews -

Poems for the Millennium (Vol.1)/ Ed. Jerome Rothenberg & Pierre Joris - Tyrone Williams

Adorno's Noise/Carla Harryman - Pat Clifford

Natural Light/Norma Cole - Biswamit Dwibedy

We look forward to your feedback.

Aryanil Mukherjee

Editor, Kaurab (Patrika & Webzine)

www.kaurab.com

↑ Index

197. Rob McLennan
new from above/ground press; pfyc#14
Tue 16 Mar 2010

---

new from above/ground press:

The Peter F. Yacht Club #14
Edited & compiled & typeset & paid for by rob mclennan
March 2010 (from one centre to anothera Toronto issue) $5

with new writing by a host of yacht club regulars & irregulars:

Christopher Doda
Anita Dolman
Amanda Earl
Sharon Harris
Lainna Lane El Jabi
Karen Massey
Marcus McCann
rob mclennan
Steve McOrmond
Pearl Pirie
Roland Prevost
Monty Reid
Stan Rogal
Fenn Stewart
Janice Tokar
& Natalie Zina Walschots

published in Ottawa by above/ground press

send cheques ($5 + $1 for postage) payable to rob mclennan; a/g subscribers receive a complimentary copy

write for submission/subscription info, c/o 858 Somerset Street West, main floor, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7, or check out [redacted] or abovegroundpress.blogspot.com

http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/03/new-from-aboveground-press-peter-f.html

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

198. Stephen Vincent

Re: re Ekleksographia - Get Ready!

Tue 16 Mar 2010

(Ekleksographia, the online mag is at:
Version:

http://ekleksographia.ahadadabooks.com/

Thanks David and Murat for these 'rich' and giving responses. David I love your 'industrial' vacant lot, street, etc. rubbings. Suggest by the way a visit to the 'nonsite collective' web page and the materials and introduction to Jonathan Skinner's discussion of the "Third Landscape" where the focus is on the middle ground between 'the preserved' and 'the wild'. I think it's quite relevant to the spaces you explore and revive as a kind of visual gardener. As to my own haptic work, I don't make my the process of my pieces to be a step removed from the materiality of the space in which I situate their making (if that is what you are suggesting). I am very much 'in it.'Â In fact, in terms of your process of 'rubbing', when I am working, I feel my senses are being 'rubbed' by whatever is emanating from the environment, poetry reading,music collaboration, and so forth. The pen becomes a kind of dancer - mediating between space and sense responses. Yes, it is not 'objective' in the way of letting space occur as independently as possible. But the work/art becomes, perhaps, a manifestation of this register of theÂ interplay between the two presences - ultimately a kind of oneness in which the artist works with neither an imperial eye/sense or in a totally submissive or passive state. Frankly I like the dialog (the dance) that leads to this state of being totally immersed and in the motion of things as they are.Â Restorative on all levels.Â

--- On Tue, 3/16/10, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: re Ekleksographia - Get Ready!
To:
[redacted]
Date: Tuesday, March 16, 2010, 5:17 AM

David,

"One hopes that as much as possible that is not such but more the personality of the materials themselves which is being expressed via the imprinting of itself done by as "primitiveâ€™s possible method--that ancient one of the rubBEing."

What you are describing -both the nature of the escape from the ego and the fusion of the subjective into the objective- is so much like the escape from the ego in Sufism which I delineate in Eda:

"Everything in that poetry becomes relatively clear from that perspective. Not only trees or animals, but in this poetry colors, objects, things, natural processes are in dialogue with each other, weaving their endless patterns. Eda is the structure of that pattern, the mesh of linguistic and geographic coordinates which go to its creation. Not the individual, but objects, colors, things are at the center of this endless transformation, the ego attached to it only tangentially, a detail, suffering and ecstatic. It is this peripheral relationship of consciousness to wider natural forces â€” subjective and objective, visceral and abstract â€” which gives Turkish poetry itsÂ stunning originality.

Consciousness dies, the eye dis-solves into motion, silhouetted by the dark matter of words." "The Spritual Life of Replicants"

As also in rubBEings, in this process time becomes the true subject, the textures, the sounds of its unfolding, the intricate pattern it weaves. As a result one enters a space where language "almost" not exist, a spot at the periphery of language where language is in the process of being born, in your words, not yet "sentimentalized."

Have you seen the Rivette film La Petite Noisette (the long, several hours version) where one hears the squeaks of the pen on paper as a portrait is being painted "in real time" (which the spectator will never see in completion and only in fragments in the process of being "created")? The spectator only sees the "model" who stands nakes during most of the movie; the painting itself is destroyed by the artist.

The thoughts of disappearance is.

Disappearance was.

Thoughts of was

 is. is.

is is sang the bird.

in alternating shades.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Mar 13, 2010 at 11:24 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Thank you for your posting Setphen--this is indeed a very stunning and > fascinating journal--i sure hope to contribute to a future issue from just > reading many of the pieces inside--
>
> Something that has always struck me in the designation of your works and > that of others as "haptic" is that itis not the haptic at al that one is > writing of nor seeing, looking at, but the "touching"--that is the touching > as in the sentimental, the recording of sentiments, rather than the actual > physical touching, which is what the haptic really is. There is even a > formof engineering now devoted to creating "haptic robots," which are able > to discern the differences in touch between various textures which the > robot > is directed to touch and compare--to indicate that it does have a sense of > touch developed enough to "feel the difference" between the different > textures.

>
> I find that in discussing these differences between the actual haptic act
> of > the touch and the removed, distanced, as it were "narratives and > sentimentalized" 'touching" response is that one is encountering a kind of > gulf, a chasm, between what is considered being literally in touch with the > world and one in which an experience in which an after the fact recording
> of > a preconceived set of sensations as a form of â€œrecordâ€ do not as it were > â€œtouch.â€
>
> Instead, there is a kind of gulf, a chasm, and it often gives me to wonder > what it is that one might sense this.Â Perhaps a bit further on here I may > express a few thoughts which have occurred to one through time-- > Mind you, I do not mean this as a kind of put down of the kinds of works
> Stephen and otherâ€™s do, not at all, and especially not of dear friend
> mentor
> Bob Cobbingâ€™s â€œallegorical haptic,â€ --what i find instead is a form of > field > of investigation into the meaning of what it is to touch and "to be > touched" > ("move") in encountering the visual records which are those ofÂ the > encounter with the materials.
>
> What I mean is a difference between actual direct physical touching and the > emotionally â€œtouching,â€ the recording of â€œsensationsâ€ of the mental
and > visual variety.Â Which is also not the same as the putting down on canvas >Â of >Â â€œmes petites sensations devant la Natureâ€ as Cezanne wrote of his works.

> (â€œMy little sensations before/in facing Nature.â€)
>
>
>Â Â Â Â A person wrote of my rubBeings that they proved that what Nerval called > the impossibility of the ground itself speaking was made suddenly not > impossible, for in these works it is the ground itself which is speaking, > emerging in its own notations on the page, rather than an imposition of my > own views on the nature of the ground or myself either one of us
>
 â€œspeaking."
>
>
>Â Â Â Â It is perhaps the difference between direct physical contact with an > "Outside," and the "sentimentalized" (sentiment in the sense of feelings > rather than feeling as in touch--) experience of "the touching" as recorded > via techniques which present the "image of a feeling" rather than the > direct > imprint of the touching of the materials with the hand. In the > "sentimental"
> case, one has a sense of the evacuation of the actual in favor of the > re-construction of a set of detached images which "stand in" for an > experience which occurs "after the fact" in the form of a narrative of an > abstraction.
>
>Â Â Â For I do not think that it is an â€œIâ€ that speaks at al but something > greater made out of the touching of the crayon and hand on one side of the > paper and that of the materials on the other side, thus creating what > Burroughs and Gysin calledÂ their works together, â€œThe Third Mind.â€ And > that > Third Mind indeed is a ground speaking, an actual â€œmaterial languageâ€ of > texture, color, dirt, noise and song which emrge into a dance choreographed > by the forms, while the hoise which rises into music is that of the singing > of the lines of the matruial as it merges with that of the rubBEing and > soâ€”I > touch the line and it sings-- >Â Â Â Paul Celan wrote that "Poetry no longer impose itself, it exposes > itself."Â Yet one still finds that in a poetry of the touching, one is > imposing as it were a sensation from within oneâ€™s self onto a material > which > itself remains distanced, and doubly distanced in that its recording is not > done directly but by the indirect means of the exposures the camera and > distanced again by being formed into a series which did not exist as > itself.

>
> There is also involved here the discussions around what it is to have, to > find, to make an "impersonal poetry." this tends to be done in this culture > via machines as that is the association which is most often made in > conjunction with an image of the "impersonal."Â The impersonal may also be > thought of in relation with copying, with "non-originality," yet again the > impersonality is simply the donning of another's mask and voice rather than > using one's own.Â It is simply a substitution of subjectivities which is at > work, and belongs to drama--I find it at least much more to the field of > performance than to that of an impersonality.
> Is there then impersonality in the rubBEings?Â One hopes that as much as > possible that is not such but more the personality of the materials > themselves which is being expressed via the imprinting of itself done by as > "primitiveâ€™s possible method--that ancient one of the rubBEing.
> What one hope is being conveyed is the taphonomic presence of the > objet--that is the thing s as they exist in their current state, which is > one that registers what may ion man ways be the most impersonal of al > presences--that of Time.
>
> By this I mean that as I work I am conscious of the exact Time which is > existing in and as the workâ€”the directions of the wind, the degree of heat > or cold, the humidity or dryness, the materials around one which include > dust and leaf mold, dirt and tar, car exhaust and cigarette smoke, the > passing scents of perfumed young women or the sweating forms of runners
and > so on.Â At every instant al of these things are in flux, changing, in large
>
 ways and small and it is al of these thing which are going into the making > of the piece itself whose surfaces are registering themselves the heat the > wetness the movements the air the thicknesses of smoke or scents of blood
> or > decay or molds . . . al of the things are the markings ofÂ Time, for with > each moments things are passing away, changing , their forms being worn > down, decaying crumbling, falling apart, the lettres becoming evermore > blurred or fragmented, the wood become every more rotten or hardened, the > air itself being evermore saturated with pollutionâ€”so Time, that great > impersonal being which is passing, is expressing itself in the very fibers > of the pieces, in the most tiny particles which have become ingrained as it > were in the woven interstices of theÂ paper, inÂ the woven grains of the > hands their lines, their broken and chipped bones, their smashed and > tenuously functioning nerve endingsâ€”

>
> And at the same time all of this disintegration is going on, thereâ€™s the > creation of new forms out of the constellations made in the chaos collapses > of every instant passing things further into the distances of time thought > it is but millisecond awayâ€”the past the future and the present which is a > presence passingâ€”so ephemeral and at the same having a quality of > endurance, > an obdurate eternity as it were a stubborn refusal while at the same time > dancing the night awayâ€”
>
> Energyâ€”time is in this energy, time is the energy, time and light as they > affect the materials, the hands, the paperâ€”
>
> This gives an enduring sense of life as a form at once of refusal and > acceptance of timeâ€”
>
> In a sense this is the impersonality which is expressed, this ongoing time > which is â€œoutside oneselfâ€™ yet which one is â€œinside of.â€ Oneself at the > same > time.Â Similarly in the touch I feel that ongoing sense of al the hands
> that > have been the blood coursing through mine, Al those hands that have worked > with wood and bark and water and stone for three hundred fity years in > North > America, and longerâ€”before the blood was mixed into French and Indianâ€”so > long the blood in the hands has been working with the things in these > places > that the hand itself is not oneâ€™s ownâ€”but simply a very active and > haptically engaged hand of centuries stil finding its way along grains of > wood and the time existing in waters and skies, in the stones and the > passing of shadows of the outstretched limbs of trees playing over the > cracks of the sidewalks which Bob Cobbing and I used to sound out as > notations for performance many years ago

>
> In that sense al these things touching each other understand the transience > of their encounters, the speedâ€”which means the swiftnesses and slownesses-- > with which al this is passing-and at the same time the deep encounter > within > the moment when the presences meet and make their signs together and pass > onâ€”
>
> This does not mean an encounter with an identity but rather the passing > away > of identity into something far greater than itself, something that is truly > outside and whose outside is also inside one, that continual sense of being > at once present and incredibly distant, from some other time and place and > al the while uncannily familiar yet always strangely here.
> It is an encounter with that other which is oneself, some otherness > encountering the continual otherness of the things one lives amongâ€”things
> as > much known as any person and at the same time just as strange--
>
>

↑ Index

199. Regina Pinto

News

Tue 16 Mar 2010

Hi,

An interesting blog by Judy Malloy:

Electronic Literature Authoring Software

http://www.well.com/user/jmalloy/elit/elit_software.html

Something about my work there:

http://www.well.com/user/jmalloy/elit/elit_software.html#regina

And my latest work: I Love You - Unforgetable

http://arteonline.arq.br/she/

==========

Regina Pinto

http://arteonline.arq.br
http://pintor.tumblr.com

↑ Index

200. Dan Wilcox
New Chapbook by Dan Wilcox from Benevolent Bird Press
Tue 16 Mar 2010

Benevolent Bird Press of Delmar, NY has published "boundless abodes of Albany," a chapbook of poems by Dan Wilcox.

Host of the Third Thursday Poetry Night at the Social Justice Center in Albany, NY, Dan Wilcox has had many poems published in a variety of small press zines, anthologies, internet sites, chapbooks, & broadsides. Benevolent Bird Press also recently published a broadside of Wilcox's poem "My Sather Gate Illumination." You can read Dan's popular Blog at dwlcx.blogspot.com.

Copies of "boundless abodes of Albany" are available from the publisher by mail at Benevolent Bird Press, P.O. Box 522, Delmar, NY 12054 for $5.00. Copies are also available from the poet at readings or by mail. For more information, email the publisher, Alan Casline: [redacted], or Dan Wilcox: [redacted].

↑ Index

201. Alan Sondheim
Re: 25 questions: question # 1...
Tue 16 Mar 2010

Hi Sarah,

You're missing the "Let's say" of my reply. The question is open in the broadest sense; pragmatically, it matters - it becomes a function - when grants, jobs, etc. are at stake.

I never thought of love or passion as a judgement, any more than illness or death.

Of course we won't judge in another century - others will, if there are still others. And judgement is never fixed; it's a question of taste, connoisseurship, etc. I tend to think this gets into the nasty areas of canon and genre - so much gets overlooked by the fetishization of critical filters.

Finally, judging in the future, as now, is also a question of an attention economy - none of us have infinite time to read, and a lot of our choices may have a high degree of randomness to them. I just finished Lamartine's Raphael, which I hadn't heard of, but stumbled upon in a used bookstore - it "seemed" interesting. (And within that "seemed" lies pretty much all of cultural studies).

- Alan

-

On Tue, 16 Mar 2010, Sarah Sarai wrote:

> Alan,
> So the question relates to recipients of grant money or tenure? It may, it does but temporal issues--are we "judging" now or will a new we judge in another century--fold into the batter. People are functions. Alas or not. Why not poems. Are poems better than people? Love is a judgment. Passion too.
>
> Gerald: I might "judge" a poem I loved now against I poem I love from the past. This is fun.
>
> Sarah
>
> RE: On Fri, 12 Mar 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:
>
> Question # 1:
>
> Should any current poet be judged against only the very best works of the past?
>
> G. E. Schwartz
>
> Beyond the issue of what constitutes genre, canon, and "best," not to mention "current" or "poet": there is also the question of judgment.
> Is a poem written to be judged, any more than an experience is judged?
> How does one judge anything that has no possibility either of quantifiable results or verification procedures (not to mention falsifiability)?
> How would you compare a contemporary poet to the poetry of Sumer?
> One might think immediately that the habitus of each is fundamentally unknowable to that of the other.
> The same might be true, say, of Swinburne and Sondheim.
> What about Sondheim and Damon? Does the synchronic necessarily lend itself > to judgment and comparison?
> On the other hand, let's say that judgment has a pragmatics: of grant, job, publication. Then judgment also implies an ecology and competition: writing is now a contestation, which implies as well a curlicue or > diacritical marking beyond the ostensible 'content' of the text, no matter how defined. In other words: Here is my poem; rate it; act accordingly.

> The poem is now a function.
> It's a function within a potentially limited space-time event or attention economy.
> There is nothing right or wrong with this approach, either.
> Nor of the other approach.
> It becomes a matter of taste, connoisseurship: Of who is judging, and who > is being judged. And, like pretty much anything in poetry/poetics, this is also something that's basically - i.e. ontologically, epistemologically, unanswerable, because the question, just like the "Should" in the question > above, is problematic, self-deconstructing upon closer examination.

==
email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
webpage http://www.alansondheim.org sondheimat gmail.com, panix.com
==

↑ Index

202. David A. Kirschenbaum
Boog City presents Cannibal Books and The Briars of North America
Tue 16 Mar 2010

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

Cannibal Books
(Fayetteville, Ark.)

Tues., March 23, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by Cannibal Books' editor
Matt Henriksen

Featuring readings from

Kevin Holden
Patrick Morrissey
Allyssa Wolf

and music from

The Briars of North America

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

Cannibal Books
http://flesheatingpoems.blogspot.com

Cannibal Books publishes hand-sewn literary journals and chapbooks that focus on divergent and emerging poetics. While their products fit into the category of book arts, the focus is entirely on presenting daring work from a broad range of styles. An aesthetic definition cannot define the hunger. Founded in Brooklyn in 2004, Cannibal Books currently nests in Fayetteville, Ark.

Performer Bios

Kevin Holden
http://www.typomag.com/issue12/holden.html

Kevin Holden is the author of two poetry chapbooks, Alpine and Identity, and his work has appeared or is forthcoming in Colorado Review, The Cincinnati Review, The Boston Review, The Harvard Advocate, Jubilat, The Liberal, Parcel, and Typo. He recently began doctoral work in comparative literature at Yale where he hopes to finish his blueprints for a combination letter and cider press.

Patrick Morrissey
http://www.typomag.com/issue11/morrissey.html

Patrick Morrissey?s poems and essays have appeared in Denver Quarterly, Colorado Review, New American Writing, Typo, Harp & Altar, and elsewhere. His chapbook, Transparency, was published by Cannibal Books last year. He lives in New York City.

The Briars of North America
http://www.myspace.com/thebriarsofnorthamerica

The Briars of North America are a psychedelic-indie-folk band from from Brooklyn. Members of the band have played with The National, Vetiver, Espers, and The Instruments.

Allyssa Wolf
http://allyssawolf.blogspot.com

Allyssa Wolf is the author of Vaudeville (Seismicity Editions), Sister (Cannibal Books, forthcoming), and the short tract Night Fast. She is the recipient of a Gertrude Stein Award for Innovative Writing, and her work was included in the 2001 Venice Biennale.

Directions:
C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. April 27
Lana Turner: A Journal of Poetry and Opinion
(Santa Monica, Calif.)
http://www.lanaturnerjournal.com/

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

203. Margaret Konkol
SUNY Buffalo S M A L L P R E S S in the A R C H I V E Kaplan Harris
Tue 16 Mar 2010

---

* Please mark your calendars for this coming Wednesday, March 17th @ 2:00 pm for Kaplan Harris's talk,

"After Language Poetry New Narrative: Innovation & Its Social Discontents"

This talk will be held in The Poetry Collection, 420 Capen @ SUNY Buffalo. This event is free and open to the public.

Small Press in the Archive Lecture Series, curated by Margaret Konkol, dedicates itself to the study of poetry outside the traditional literary historical plot. The lectures in this series draw on materials in The Poetry Collection, at SUNY Buffalo in order to explore community/discourse formations, the status of ephemera and the making of genre, the conditions of literary production, transatlantic cross-pollinations in and between specific magazines, the careers of poets, the role of book art, and how the little magazine functions in the making of the avant-garde.

↑ Index

204. Margaret Carson
Margaret Randall in Conversation at the GC
Tue 16 Mar 2010

Date: Monday, March 22, 2010
Time: 6:30pm
Location: The Graduate Center, The City University of New York, 365 Fifth Avenue, New York
Skylight Room (Rm. 9100)

New Visions, New Activism, New American Poetry: Margaret Randall in Conversation

The poet, political activist and publisher Margaret Randall helped shift the frame of New American Poetry beyond the US with her own political activism and by publishing El Corno Emplumado / The Plumed Horn (1962-1969), a forum for innovative writing from all parts of the Americas featuring the work of major poets from the United States, Canada and Latin America in English, Spanish and Portuguese. Join her and the Graduate Center’s Ammiel Alcalay, Professor of English and Comparative Literature in a conversation about her work and El Corno Emplumado, then on the cutting edge of independent publishing and now an archival treasure.

Co-sponsored by the Ph.D. Program in Hispanic and Luso-Brazilian Literatures and Languages and the Doctoral Students Council

↑ Index

205. George Bowering
Re: Younger Italian-American Poets
Tue 16 Mar 2010

You might check out Ed Prato, who made a stir a few years ago and seems to have faded from the scene.

gb

On Mar 15, 2010, at 10:06 AM, Emma Bolden wrote:

> I am of Italian descent, as is Emari Digiorgio!
>
> On Sat, Mar 13, 2010 at 12:57 PM, William Allegrezza
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> A Italian friend of mine is looking for young or lesser known American > or Latin American poets of Italian descent for an upcoming anthology.
> If you have someone to suggest, please send me an e-mail.
> ,
> --------
>
> Un amigo mío italiano está buscando a poetas americanos o latinoamericanos jovenes o menos conocidos de la ascendencia italiana para una antología. Si tienes alguien a sugerir, envíeme un correo electrónico.
>
> Bill Allegrezza
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Emma Bolden
>
> www.emmabolden.wordpress.com
>
> Visiting Assistant Professor
> Department of English
> Georgetown College
> 400 East College Street
> Georgetown, KY 40324
>
> welcome.html

Geo. Bowering
Heavy feet. Light heart.

↑ Index

206. steve dalachinsky

readings etc

Wed 17 Mar 2010

Thursday March 18th
ESP Records In-Store Concert Series
990 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11205 - G train to Bedford/Nostrand $ Free $

6-8pm
Opening celebration
w/ free wine!

8pm
Steve Dalachinsky - words

8:30pm
Sabir Mateen / Roy Campbell Jr. Duo
Sabir Mateen - saxophones
Roy Campbell Jr. - trumpets

UDP AT PS1
EVENTS EACH SUNDAY IN MARCH
Artbook @ PS1/MoMA
22-25 Jackson Ave, Long Island City, NY

Sunday, March 14, 4pm
Yelena Gluzman, Rachel Levitsky, Ben Luzzatto, and Dan Machlin

Sunday, March 21, 4pm
Poetry performances by UDP authors Filip Marinovich, Elizabeth Reddin, and Garrett Kalleberg.

Sunday, March 28, 4 pm A wine reception with performances and readings by Peter Gizzi and Steve Dalachinsky; a bilingual performance of Carlos Oquendo de Amat's classic 5 Meters of Poems by the translators Alejandro de Acosta and Joshua Beckman; and a performance of Vanessa Place and Rob Fitterman's new work "NO IDEA." The readings will be preceded by a screening (at 3:30) of Joel Schlemowitz's award-winning documentary, "Loudmouth Collective / Ugly Duckling Presse / Anti-Reading."

March 28, 8pm
The Stone

(NW corner of Avenue C and East 2nd St., F train to 2nd Ave.)
Admission $10, Students age 14-19 admitted at half price. Children 12 and under free.

LOCAL LINGO
Jason Kao Hwang (composer, violin/viola)
Sang Won Park (kayagum, ajeng, voice)
Thomas Buckner (voice)
William Parker (string bass)
Joe McPhee (tenor sax, pocket trumpet)

On Sunday, March 28, starting at 8pm, Local Lingo will premiere composer Jason Kao Hwang's suite, "Voices of Our Own," featuring the poetry of Lester Afflick, Fay Chiang, Steve Dalachinsky, Patricia Spears Jones and Yuko Otomo.

The music will employ notation and improvisation, with the inflection of jazz, opera and world music vibrant in the Local Lingo of sound.

Poetry books and the Local Lingo CD will be on sale.

↑ Index

207. Jim Andrews
Net Art and the Fireflies of Eternity
Wed 17 Mar 2010

---

imagine print without literature, just news and technical documentation, bills of lading, position papers, and so on.

imagine the moving picture without art, just as surveillance and video-phone, etc.

now imagine the net without net art.

to many people, the latter is much easier to imagine than the former two distopias. we have had literature for thousands of years and art has been a part of the moving picture since near its start in the nineteenth century. but net art has only been around since the early to mid 1990's. about 17 years, at this point, this being 2010. and the net is often treated as a spewing information pipeline that has to be managed and filtered for usable practical information often of a consumeristic nature. shopping information, banking info, calendar info, and so on. as an entertainment medium, it's mostly used for videos, online games, news, email communication, and so on. not as a medium in which we seek out the art particular to the net. by 'net art' i do not ,mean video or degraded print, (per se, although they can be part of net art) but art specific to the net. that's what i mean by net art. art that requires an internet connection and lives and breathes through a browser or because of its internet connection, if it's a desktop program.

what we lose with there not being as prominent an art of the net as there is of print and moving image is related to what we would lose were there not a prominent art of print or art of the moving image.

some might object to that proposition. they might say that the net without net art is no more difficult to imagine than the telephone without telephone art. which is easy to imagine because the telephone hasn't developed prominently as a medium for art. which isn't to say that there haven't been good telephone art projects. but name me five of them.

the telephone has developed as a medium primarily for conversations between participating parties. we don't dial up to listen to art, much. or participate in an art project when we are actually on the phone. there's nothing to say we couldn't. and perhaps we have, once or twice. still others will say that the art of the telephone is the art of conversation. which isn't specific to the telephone but is certainly different via telephone, in important ways, than it is face to face.

we imagine, then, a secret art of the telephone in which lovers and others really digging each other engage. often not recorded but enjoyed and remembered personally, just the two (or n) of them. a private art without a prominent public face. though telephone conversations and recordings play crucial parts, sometimes, in works of art for other media such as movies, drama, and music.

telephone has not developed a prominent public art because it is so strong concerning private conversations. the possibilities for dial-up telephone art or interactive telephone art are completely overshadowed by the way we typically use the telephone, which is not a public art use or even an artistic use of any kind, for the most part. we have trouble with fiction and pretend, often, on the telephone. the stakes are different than in reading a book or watching art because of the element of trust and personal disclosure. to say nothing of fraud, which we also are quite familiar with from the telephone.

the net is quite different from telephone, of course. it is not overwhelmed, currently, by live conversation. we have had many of them, over the net but it is by no means all we do over the net. the types of activities we engage in include writing, viewing visual information, listening to auditory information, responding to visual, sonic and written information, and a variety of media, interactive or not. the net subsumes several media at once. all broadcast media. and some broadcast that has not and cannot be broadcast otherwise. that'd be the net art and other net-specific broadcasts.

the net also subsumes private broadcasting, narrowcasting. the telephone-even all forms of radio-even the CB, eventually-can be net-based. the network is the frequency or set of frequencies. and the frequency or frequencies can be channeled around the world.

the net also subsumes certain dimensions of print culture. publications have a net component or are entirely net-based. the range is quite broad. the web site may simply be a desolate info booth, devoid of interest, or it may rock the universe in every way. it depends on the involvement in the net the publication has. artistically, financially, as a distribution mechanism and as a serious medium in its own right concerning content, the presentation of content, the definition of content, the media of it, the permanence of it, and so on. is it meant as entertainment or reference information or queriable service and/or store or news channel or personal blog or as a post within a larger network of sites one communicates with?

also, individuals publish their work on the net. sometimes on their own sites, sometimes elsewhere. on journals, the sites of other individuals, into huge youtubish databases, and so on. the net is both about publication and communication. broadcasting and interaction. we are struggling to understand how this changes the nature of publication itself. and the nature of communication itself.

one of the great powers of the internet is it's ability to carry a broad range of media and modes simultaneously or individually. by 'mode', i mean its type of interactivities or lack thereof. by 'media' i mean sound, visuals, text, and moving images.

it should be clear by now that the internet is going to play an increasingly important role in broadcast, narrowcast and communication media. and in knowledge storage and dissemination. and much else.

consequently, an art of the net poetentially becomes too broad and diffuse a notion. the notion of 'digital art' is so vast it includes scans of photos of one's cat posted to flickr. there can be no art form called 'digital art' because 'digital art' is just any art that may even simply have been digitized from analog and shoveled unreflectively to the realm of bits and bytes. is 'net art', similarly, so broad as to not be a particular art form in itself?

well, no, it's not. different people look at it in different ways. my way is to specify an art in which the internet connection is crucial. whether for communication or the querying of databases (and the subsequent retrieval of dynamic information), or for other decisions relayed or processed meaningfully via the net. the art of the net is one of the most important envisionings of the possibilities the net holds concerning broadcast and communications media, publication, and the synthesis of media, arts, communication, technology, and science. the art of the net, ideally, is where we go to get and understand our most intense and fully realized visions of these possibilities-even when the art doesn't seem to be about these things at all, sometimes. but of course we do not need to scratch too deeply to understand that every painting is, in some sense, about painting, every media work is about its medium, in some sense, to the degree that it uses its media/um in media-specific ways. in its 'rhetoric of media', then. and, more deeply yet, in its philosophy of media. stated or not. present or implied or vacuous, a vacuum filled by the activity of the media/um all over it like water over the swimmer.

net art encapsulates not only our deepest visions of the possibilities for meaningful change via or partly because of the internet, but our deepest visions concerning who and what we become via the existence of the net and electronic networks more broadly. anything that involves important changes in who and what we are and how we live and enjoy life and learn and communicate and view and publish work is important for us to understand and explore with passion-if for no other reason, then because to understand these helps us know who and what we are becoming and maybe even already are. and where we are going. and just what it means to be alive in this particular age.

that is an important part of what we treasure about the art of the past. the art of the past is one of our best ways of understanding life in the past. we wonder if net art will enjoy that sort of status in the future because of the issues of obsolescence of technology. will net art last long enough to have that sort of use to futurity? or will it be continually of the moment? firefly media of the moment that is burned quickly in the fire of techno-time.

well, the jury is still out. certainly much, most, almost all will perish and does so, so far, about every decade as browser technology changes and networks expand into other, non-browser technologies and some protocols fall out of use, eclipsed by brighter suns. but some net art persists. it takes special engineering, often, a savvy knowledge of what's a good bet to work with and what isn't.

the serious work will survive for some time. long enough to have that sort of use to futurity. we're just not sure how far that futurity extends.

but, you know, it's never the thing beyond the grave that we want in this life. except if it be peace or happiness or a like reward. and it is our joy to find these in this life as we proceed. which is a way of saying that whether net art now has a use to futurity later is not the only criterion to measure its importance now. in fact, it's a terrible criterion because we don't know the outcome now. the more important issue is what it does for us now. and what it does for us now is help us understand the wired life now and where it is going and how that changes us. and that's important to understand who we are.

which implies that if net art fails as an art form then we lack artistic ways to understand who and what we are via the introduction of the internet into our worlds. this, in turn, would imply a sort of telephone-like usage of the media/um of the net, a failure of imagination in the presence of overwhelming homogenization of discourse. or a fundamental unfitness of net worlds to provide an environment that can support art. permanence/impermanence of media is a consideration. but so is monetary economy. let's not forget that the monetary infrastructures that support art as business are crucial to non-digital and digital art alike. the economies of attention and valorization have strong ties to the monetary economies of print, visual art, music, and so forth. the circles of 'high art' typically have ties to the economic opportunities in the art. there is a sense in which art has nothing to do with art but with marketing, public relations, corporate or institutional sponsorship, friend networks, and other such factors which-more than the quality of the art itself-determine the standing of the art in society.

net art has not been particularly prominent in ecommerce. quite the contrary. the idea is basically do what you love and the rest will follow.

it doesn't necessarily follow, of course, with any financial reward. this is a hurdle net art has to navigate by hook or by crook. currently it is a very tough proposition. net art has been a follower in this regard. the artists have not really developed good economic models. or have not followed through on them, when they have been imagined.

i remember reading what a new york artist wrote about mail art. he said it was dead and wasn't of much account as art. isn't this sort of foolish attitude simply a consequence of mail art remaining at a distance from the galleries and a significant monetary economy? does his attitude have anything to do with the art itself or familiarity with it? not likely. the excitement people feel about art works or an art itself is often not about the art itself but the value of the art as commodity valorized, ie, marketed, in appealing ways. we like to think of art as the house of what really matters in life and relationships and thought and the meaning of life and the creation of beauty, truth, and justice. and it is, in important ways. but it is very much a house in this world, with all the troubles of other houses. will net art continue to exist as mail art does? basically outside the institutions? i think it's fundamentally a question of whether it develops a significant monetary economy. it's not fundamentally a question of the quality of the art itself. and this seems true to me also of mail art.

another impediment to net art is the depth of art experience it can support. what is the emotionally deepest flash work you've experienced? did it change your life? art needs to be capable of being taken as seriously as revelation. revelation and transformation are key aspects to our most important art experiences. firefly media might do it, but not likely. what is at issue here is the ability of net art to really help us understand who and where we are, as opposed to merely our being given caricatures and cartoons of existence- though they can be much more meaningful than we usually admit. but, still, it's possible for media to lose or never find its way to our deepest experience. net art seeks its way to our deepest experience via the wire to inner worlds, outer worlds, and their interpenetration.

net art must succeed for the internet to be as significant a human venture as print or cinema. for if it fails, that means we cannot really feel it and think in it in the ways we associate with art. and these are important to the ways we understand ourselves and the world, and come to be articulate and expressive and formulate what worlds we want to make now and for the future. the failure of net art would be a massive failure of imagination that would give unto the forces of dullness an unbearable lightness of media, too complete a capacity for forgetting, and a medium without an inner world.

net art seeks the human in the post-human, the post in the human, the human in the post, and the post-human in the post-human. to know what it is to be human now, and wired. no net art means the wired is tired. a tired wired is wired working for the man, is corporate complete, is shop till long after you have dropped, is dronification wired to the grind of slaves, the energy of slaves, the no poetry zone, no imagination but in products, no ideas but in products, the triumph of consumerism and perfectly thoughtless media.

accordingly, net art is important to the well-being and futurity of any possible wired world, and to our understanding of our current situation and capacities, even, as fireflies of eternity.

so we see what we lose with there not being as prominent an art of the net as there is of print and moving image is related to what we would lose were there not a prominent art of print or art of the moving image. those distopian possibilities seem very remote, as possibilities, because the media have such rich histories attached to them that we see the very existence of print and moving image implying the growth of the artistic cultures that have grown up with the media of print and the moving image, respectively.

will we have a similar sense of the richness of history of net art in a hundred years time? i think it will be a history fraught with more changes in the technology than we associate with the history of print or the moving image. so it will be more fragmented a history, consequently. the net art media species, as it were, will evolve and change and mutate in ways we associate with hyperspaces. but it will have known histories, nonetheless, contentious and mysterious, almost, as the present, for anyone who looks closely into the fire at the contradictions of even the moment of art.

ja
http://netpoetic.com/2010/03/net-art-and-the-fireflies-of-eternity

↑ Index

208. Sam Ladkin
Reading in UCC (Cork) by Ian Patterson and Jenny Diski
Wed 17 Mar 2010

Dear All,
Delighted to announce the following. All are very much welcome.
Best,
Sam

UCC English Literature Society Presents

Readings by

JENNY DISKI

&

IAN PATTERSON

Thursday, March 25th

6.30 pm

Council Room

North Wing

UCC Main Campus

Map:

http://www.ucc.ie/en/conferencing/useful-links/map/Fullimage,56677,en.JPG

FREE ENTRY

ALL ARE WELCOME

The UCC English Literature Society is delighted to welcome Ian Patterson and Jenny Diski to Cork.

JENNY DISKI was born in London in 1947. She was educated at University College, London, and worked as a teacher during the 1970s and early 1980s. She is a regular contributor to The Observer and the London Review of Books.

Her first novel, Nothing Natural, the story of a single parent locked in an abusive relationship, was published in 1986 (reissued 2003). Subsequent novels include Rainforest (1987), in which a female anthropologist is shocked by her discoveries about human nature; Then Again (1990), a complex narrative exploring the life of a persecuted Jewish girl living in fourteenth-century Poland; Happily Ever After (1991), the story of the relationship between an eccentric old woman and her landlord, a middle-aged alcoholic; and The Dream

Mistress (1996), set in contemporary London, about three women whose stories are loosely connected: Mimi, Leah - the mother who abandoned her -and Bella, a tramp who Mimi saves at the beginning of the novel. The Vanishing Princess (1995) is a collection of short stories.

She published a volume of autobiography, Skating to Antarctica, in 1997, which was shortlisted for the Jewish Quarterly Literary Prize for Non-Fiction, and a book of essays, Don't, in 1998. Jenny Diski is also the author of two television plays, A Fair and Easy Passage, written for Channel 4 television, and The Ultimate Object of Desire.

Stranger on a Train: Daydreaming and Smoking around America with Interruptions (2002), a travelogue narrating a railway journey around the United States, is the winner of the 2003 Thomas Cook Travel Book Award. A View from the Bed (2003) is a compendium of essays and literary reviews. Her novel, Only Human: A Comedy (2000), reworks the biblical story of Abraham and Sarah told in Genesis, chapters 11 to 22, and After These Things (2004) continues the story, centring on the relationship between Abraham's son Isaac and Isaac's son Jacob. Her non-fiction book, On Trying to Keep Still, was published in 2006.

Jenny Diski lives in Cambridge. Her recent books include Apology for the Woman Working (2008) and The Sixties (2009)

IAN PATTERSON

Ian Patterson is a critic, poet, translator and academic. He was born in 1948 and grew up in Cheshire and London. After a variety of jobs, he now teaches English at Queens' College, University of Cambridge. He has published numerous translations, most recently Finding Time Again, the final volume of Proust's In Search of Lost Time from Penguin. He is a scholar of modernism and twentieth-century literature, especially in avant-garde traditions.

His most recent book is The Glass Bell:
http://www.barquepress.com/glassbell.html

A selection of his poetry has been published as Time to Get Here:
Selected Poems 1969-2002 (Salt Publishing):
http://www.saltpublishing.com/books/smp/1876857927.htm

Information about Ian's book Guernica and Total War can be found here:
http://www.hup.harvard.edu/catalog/PATGUE.html

↑ Index

209. Tenney Nathanson
new Chax book; upcoming readings this week in Vancouver, Seattle
Wed 17 Mar 2010

Just in case anyone can make it, or can pass the word along:

I'll be reading this week in Vancouver (University of British Columbia and Simon Fraser University), and in Seattle (Pilot Books), mostly from my just-released Chax Press book, Ghost Snow Falls through the Void (Globalization).

A thousand bows to Chax Press and Charles Alexander, for doing the book AND for working some miracles at the Tucson Festival of Books (Charles Bernstein, Alice Notley, Anne Waldman, Mei-Mei Berssenbrugge all conjured up for a fabulous few days).

Reading details are at http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/tn/poetry.html

Tenney

↑ Index

210. Nana Zabic
Re: Younger Italian-American Poets
Wed 17 Mar 2010

I second Emma Bolden's suggestion to include Emma Bolden in the anthology!

Snezana

On Mon, Mar 15, 2010 at 12:06 PM, Emma Bolden <[redacted]> wrote:
> I am of Italian descent, as is Emari Digiorgio!
>
> On Sat, Mar 13, 2010 at 12:57 PM, William Allegrezza
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
>> A Italian friend of mine is looking for young or lesser known American >> or Latin American poets of Italian descent for an upcoming anthology.
>> If you have someone to suggest, please send me an e-mail.
>> ,
>> --------
>>
>> Un amigo mío italiano está buscando a poetas americanos o
>> latinoamericanos jovenes o menos conocidos de la ascendencia italiana >> para una antología. Si tienes alguien a sugerir, envíeme un correo >> electrónico.
>>
>> Bill Allegrezza

>>
>>
>
>
>
> --
> Emma Bolden
>
> www.emmabolden.wordpress.com
>
> Visiting Assistant Professor
> Department of English
> Georgetown College
> 400 East College Street
> Georgetown, KY 40324
>
>

↑ Index

211. Mairead Byrne
Re: Younger Italian-American Poets
Wed 17 Mar 2010

Peter Covino, teaching at the University of Rhode Island, born in Italy. Mairéad

On Wed, Mar 17, 2010 at 11:53 AM, Nana Zabic <[redacted]> wrote:

> I second Emma Bolden's suggestion to include Emma Bolden in the anthology!
>
> Snezana
>
> On Mon, Mar 15, 2010 at 12:06 PM, Emma Bolden <[redacted]>
> wrote:
> I am of Italian descent, as is Emari Digiorgio!
>
> On Sat, Mar 13, 2010 at 12:57 PM, William Allegrezza
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> A Italian friend of mine is looking for young or lesser known American > or Latin American poets of Italian descent for an upcoming anthology.
> If you have someone to suggest, please send me an e-mail.
> ,
> --------
>
> Un amigo mío italiano está buscando a poetas americanos o
> latinoamericanos jovenes o menos conocidos de la ascendencia italiana

> para una antología. Si tienes alguien a sugerir, envíeme un correo electrónico.
>
> Bill Allegrezza
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> Emma Bolden
>
> www.emmabolden.wordpress.com
>
> Visiting Assistant Professor
> Department of English
> Georgetown College
> 400 East College Street
> Georgetown, KY 40324

--
http://www.whatsleftofheaven.com/

↑ Index

212. Michael Heller
(no subject)
Wed 17 Mar 2010

Shearsman Books

Michael Heller: Beckmann Variations and other poems

Published 15 March 2010

Paperback, 80pp, 8.5x5.5ins, £8.95 / $15
ISBN 9781848610873

Ekphrasis, that ancient mode found in Homer's description of Achilles's shield or Keats' Grecian Urn, is here transformed in Michael Heller's meditations in poetry and prose on work by the painter Max Beckmann. Heller navigates, sometimes with Yeats as his Virgil, through a gallery of Beckmann's pictures, seeing them as uniquely bringing home contemporary civilization's catastrophic impulses ("as if days were not for sanity"), impulses at once horrific and unsettling yet strangely beautiful and restorative.

Comments on Michael Heller’s recent work:
“At once grave and uplifting, Heller’s poems are serene meditations on time, decay, and loss that recover from the ruin a repletion that is also a recognition of our necessary incompleteness before the world and language.”Patrick Pritchett in Jacket Magazine

“In a poetic generation that has frequently settled for small answers, his work insists upon the largest questions.”Robert Zaller in Rain Taxi

“He accepts that his poetry is a fold in a great conversation of commentary, that linguistic “meeting place” in which he posits his faith. And it is in this belief, inspiring his practice, that Heller’s poetry paradoxically achieves its magisterial power.”Norman Finkelstein on The Big Jewish Blog

Michael Heller is a poet, essayist and critic. His most recent books are Eschaton, a collection of poems (Talisman, 2009), Speaking
The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (Salt 2009), and Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadadabooks, 2009). He is the recipient of many honors and grants including the DiCastagnola Prize of the Poetry Society of America, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the New York Foundation for the Arts and the Fund for Poetry.

To order:

Please support your local bookshop by ordering Shearsman titles from them. If you prefer to order online, use the following links:

<http://www.shearsman.com/shop/shop.php?action=full&id=309>Order from the Shearsman online store, <http://www.bookdepository.co.uk/book/9781848610873/Beckmann-Variations-and-Other-Poems>Order from The Book Depository (UK), <http://www.amazon.co.uk/Beckmann-Variations-Other-Michael-Heller/dp/

1848610874/ref=sr_1_12?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1262983806&sr=1-12>Order from amazon.co.uk,
<http://www.bookdepository.com/book/9781848610873/Beckmann-Variations-and-Other-Poems>Order from The Book Depository (USA), Order from Barnes and Noble.com,
<http://www.amazon.com/Beckmann-Variations-Other-Michael-Heller/dp/1848610874/ref=sr_1_10?ie=UTF8&s=books&qid=1262982910&sr=1-10>Order from amazon.com,
<http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781848610873/beckmann-variations-and-other-poems.aspx?rf=1>Order from Small Press Distribution (USA)

UK trade orders via Bertrams Books or Gardners Books.
US trade orders via Ingrams or Baker & Taylor.

Eschaton (new poems) Talisman House Publishers
(2009) available at SPD, Greenfield Distribution (www.gfibooks.com), www. amazon.com and good bookstores. Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press 2009) available from SPD, amazon.com and from ahadadpress at http://www.ahadadabooks.com/content/view/162/41/.
Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (2003) available at www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at
http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm
Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman
Johnson at
http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html
Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html

↑ Index

213. amy king

This Friday, March 19 @ 7 p.m. with Jillian Brall, R. Erica Doyle, Adam Fieled, Matt Rotando, Metta Sama & Paige Taggart!

Wed 17 Mar 2010

Come one, come all to two spect
Dear listeners, poets & sake-drinkers,

Come one, come all to two spectacular Friday-in-March readings:

this Friday, March 19, with Jillian Brall, R. Erica Doyle, Adam Fieled, Matt Rotando, Metta Sama & Paige Taggart! &

next Friday, March 26, with Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin & Brett Eugene Ralph!

Could it get any better? Hardly. So come. We'll be there. So will they (details below). You too!

Love, Amy & Ana
www.stainofpoetry.com

March 19, Friday -- 7 p.m. ~ Jillian Brall, R. Erica Doyle, Adam Fieled, Matt Rotando, Metta Sama & Paige Taggart!

@ Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

with

Jillian Brall received both her BA in Creative Writing in 2004 and her MFA in Poetry in 2009 from The New School, in New York, NY. She is a NYC certified Teaching Artist, currently living in the Bushwick area of Brooklyn. She recently published a book of poems, Wet Information, under ZoeWo Press. She is also a saxophonist and visual artist, focusing on mixed media collage and painting. Several of her collages can be seen in the current issue of Pax Americana, as well as featured on The Best American Poetry Blog, and have been used as cover art for several electronic poetry books published by Scantily Clad Press. Prints of her collages, as well as copies of her book, Wet Information, are available for purchase at http://www.zoewopress.etsy.com.

~

R. Erica Doyle was born in Brooklyn to Trinidadian immigrant parents, and has lived in Washington, DC, Farmington, Connecticut and La Marsa, Tunisia. Her work has appeared in Best American Poetry, Our Caribbean: A Gathering of Lesbian and Gay Writing from the Antilles, Callaloo, Ploughshares, Best Black Womenâ€™s Erotica, Bum Rush the Page, and Ms. Magazine. She has received grants and awards from the Hurston/Wright Foundation, the Astraea Lesbian Writers Fund, and she was a New York Foundation for the Arts Poetry Fellow. She is also a fellow of Cave Canem: A Workshop and Retreat for Black Writers and her manuscript, proxy, was a finalist for the 2007 Cave Cavem Poetry Prize, selected by Claudia Rankine. She received her MFA in Poetry from the New School, and she lives in New York City, where she is at work on a novel, Fortune. Erica teaches in the NYC public schools and is the facilitator of Tongues Afire: A Creative Writing Workshop for queer women and trans and gender non-conforming people of color.

~

Adam Fieled is a poet based in Philadelphia. He has released three print books: â€œOpera Bufaâ€ (Otoliths, 2007), â€œWhen You Bitâ€¦â€ (Otoliths, 2008), and â€œChimesâ€ (Blazevox, 2009), as well as numerous chaps, e-chaps, and e-books, including â€œPositâ€ (Dusie Press, 2007) and â€œThe White Albumâ€ (ungovernable press, 2009). He has work in journals like Tears in the Fence, Great Works, The Argotist, Upstairs at Duroc, Jacket, and in the &Now Anthology from Lake Forest College Press. A magna cum laude graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, he also holds an MFA from New England College and an MA from Temple University, where he is completing his PhD.

~

Matt Rotando is a steak-man, a cyclist, and a skeet-shooter. He prefers swimming to the harpsichord, mangoes to mangosteen, and jackfruit above all fruits but the avocado. These days he can often be found skulking about the edges of Oyster Bay, Long Island, looking for something crunchy. Poems are for whying and sometimes for why-notting, but he likes those poems best that get him the odd fake cigarette or temporary tattoo. His book is The Comebackâ€™s Exoskeleton and he has poems in this monthâ€™s Shampoo. His favorite color is green and silver. The word is a lot weaker than a slap on the back of the head, except when it isnâ€™t. The inside of words is a spacey place for looking out. Thatâ€™s grandiloquence! And in the shade of a Bonzai tree, or just a rented white wall, his shoes await The Great Trans-American Spin.

~

Metta Sama says: I am a poet, professor, activist, painter, collage artist, fiction and essay writer. My poetry, currently, looks at instabilities in writings by persons subjected to various forms of oppression. I am interested in the joy of making and creating art and stories and images that will, eventually, disintegrate, return to the source it came from. I question what it means to make thoughts, ideas, & feelings stable, to devote oneself to immortality. My work has appeared in Proud Flesh Journal, The Drunken Boat, Blackbird, Paterson Literary Review, Yellow Medicine Review, Crab Orchard, and other journals, & I am the author of one published collection of poems.

~

Paige Taggart lives in Brooklyn. Her chapbook Polaroid Parade is forthcoming with Greying Ghost Press. She has an e-chapbook, Wonâ€™t Be A Girl with Scantily Clad Press. She is a recipient of the 2009 NYFA fellowship. Recent or forthcoming work can be found at No Tell Motel, Glitterpony, Raleigh Quarterly, Sink Review, RealPoetik, pax americana, We Are So Happy To Know Something. Peruse her blog: http://mactaggartjewelry.blogspot.com.

&

March 26, Friday ~ Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin & Brett Eugene Ralph!

March 26 @ 7 p.m. Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn

with

Jessica Bozek is the author of The Bodyfeel Lexicon (Switchback Books) and several chapbooks. Recent poems appear in Action, Yes, Artifice, Fairy Tale Review, P-QUEUE, and Womb. Jessica runs Small Animal Project (smallanimalproject.com), a reading series and web-text experiment based in Cambridge, MA.

~

Kate Braid is a poet, essayist, biographer, and teacher. Braidâ€™s first book, Covering Rough Ground, was about her experience as a carpenter, and won the Pat Lowther Award for best book of poems by a Canadian woman. She is also the author of To This Cedar Fountain, Inward to the Bones: Georgia Oâ€™Keefeâ€™s Journey with Emily Carr, A Well-Mannered Storm: The Glenn Gould Poems, and a co-editor, Sandy Shreve, of In Fine Form, the first anthology of Canadian form poetry. A second book of poems about her experiences in construction, Turning Left to the Ladies, was published by Palimpsest in June 2009. She has also written three books of non-fiction and is currently working on a memoir of her fifteen years as a carpenter.

~

Melissa Broder is the author of WHEN YOU SAY ONE THING BUT MEAN YOUR MOTHER (Ampersand Books, February 2010). She is the curator of the Polestar Poetry Series and the Chief Editor of La Petite Zine. Broder received her BA from Tufts University and is currently in the MFA program at CCNY. She is the winner of the Jerome Lowell Dejur Award and the Stark Prize for Poetry. By day, she works as a literary publicist. Her poems have appeared in many journals, including: Opium, Shampoo, Conte and The Del Sol Review.

~

Jackie Clark is currently co-editor-in-chief for LIT magazine. She also curates Poets off Poetry at coldfrontmag.com, where poets write about music. Her chapbook Office Work is forthcoming from Greying Ghost Press. She lives in Jersey City.

~

Cate Marvinâ€™s first book, Worldâ€™s Tallest Disaster, was chosen by Robert Pinksy for the 2000 Kathryn A. Morton Prize and published by Sarabande Books in 2001. In 2002, she received the Kate Tufts Discovery Prize. Her poems have appeared in The New England Review, Poetry, The Kenyon Review, Fence, The Paris Review, The Cincinnati Review, Slate, Verse, Boston Review, and Ninth Letter. She is co-editor with poet Michael Dumanis of the anthology Legitimate Dangers: American Poets of the New Century (Sarabande Books, 2006). Her second book of poems, Fragment of the Head of a Queen, was published by Sarabande in August 2007. A recent Whiting Award recipient and 2007 NYFA Gregory Millard Fellow, she teaches poetry writing in Lesley Universityâ€™s Low-Residency M.F.A. Program and is an associate professor in creative writing at the College of Staten Island, City University of New York.

~

Brett Eugene Ralph spent the better part of his youth in Louisville, Kentucky, playing football and singing in punk rock bands. His work has appeared in journals such as Conduit, Mudfish, Willow Springs, and The American Poetry Review; it has been anthologized in The McSweeneyâ€™s Book of Poets Picking Poets and The Stiffest of the Corpse: An Exquisite Corpse Reader. His first full-length collection, Black Sabbatical, was published by Sarabande Books in 2009. Brett has taught at the University of Massachusetts, Missouri State University, and the Central Institute of Buddhist Studies in the Himalayas of northern India. Currently, he lives in Empire, Kentucky, and teaches at Hopkinsville Community College. His country rock ensemble, Brett Eugene Ralphâ€™s Kentucky Chrome Revue, can be heard in seedy dives throughout the South.

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

--
HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

↑ Index

214. Daniel Remein, Editor
New from WHISKEY & FOX
Thu 18 Mar 2010

The New issue of Whiskey & Fox is out!

Everyone check it out at http://whiskeyandfox.org

Vol 4. No. 1, 'doing politics with animals,' includes:

A Preface from the editors, and work (in order of appearance) from Robin Clarke, Jeff T. Johnson, Ross Gay, Gary Lehmann, Claire Donato, Rebecca Mertz, Nicola Masciandaro, Eileen A. Joy, Chris Miller, and Afterwords from Karl Steel.

contact at editors [at] whiskeyandfox [dot] org.

Also, perfect-bound books are coming soon as an additional format for the journal. A new call for work will go out soon as well.

Very Best

Daniel C. Remein and the rest of the Editors

↑ Index

215. Shankar, Ravi (English)
Tuition Scholarship to MFA Program in Hong Kong
Thu 18 Mar 2010

The Department of English at City University of Hong Kong is pleased to announce a one-year full Tuition Scholarship, to be awarded to a 2010 candidate for our new, international, low-residency Masters of Fine Arts (MFA) in Creative Writing. The winner will be the applicant who submits the sample of creative writing that demonstrates the greatest potential for success as a professional literary author. Applicants in any genre are eligible, as long as they meet the acceptance criteria for this postgraduate degree. There is no restriction as to country of residence, age or nationality.

At City University, we seek to develop Asia's future writers, and this scholarship is offered to attract the most talented writers to our programme. This summer, we begin our first class of writers for the MFA in Creative Writing specialising in Asian Writing in English, the first programme in the world to offer this specialty. Based in the English department, the innovative 45-credit, two-year programme will accept a limited number of students in creative non-fiction, fiction and poetry. The degree is benchmarked to international standards for the MFA. The Hong Kong native author Xu Xi assisted in its development and joined the Department as their first Writer-in-Residence on March 1.

"We anticipate the majority of applicants to be from Asia," Xu says, "but many writers in the West, both of Asian and non-Asian ethnicity, are increasingly drawn to Asia, especially China. They're not always best served by MFA programmes in the West where there's little focus on either a contemporary or historical Asian perspective or Asian literature." The faculty will all be writers who 'know Asia, live Asia, read Asia, write Asia' as the programme's advertising says. The top criterion for admission will be the quality of creative work.

This initiative is part of an overall strategy to develop the creative curriculum at the university. Professor Kingsley Bolton, Head of English at City University says, "Our English Department is a very young one, but probably one of the most dynamic and innovative departments of its kind in Asia. In the next few years, we are aiming to make the English Department here a leading centre for creative writing, drama, and cultural studies, not only for Hong Kong but also for the whole of the Asian region." The MFA is generally considered a professional degree, qualifying students to work in professions where good writing skills are required, as well as providing the groundwork for an international writing and publishing career.

The low-residency graduate degree model is relatively new in Asia. A long-established pedagogical model in the U.S., such programmes are especially suited for the creative arts. In particular, this programme is ideal for working professionals who cannot afford to spend two years as full-time graduate students in a traditional writing programme. Structured for individualised learning, students work via distance learning with writing mentors on a one-on-one basis during the semesters, and attend brief 'residencies' at the university

two to three times a year. The low faculty-to-student ratio allows for intensive feedback on the student's work and approximates the professional editor-writer relationship.

The first residency is scheduled for summer 2010. The internationally renowned novelist Timothy Mo will be Visiting Writer and the faculty writers for the 2010 class features an international cast from Hong Kong, India, the U.K, Canada and the U.S., with connections and roots in China, Japan, the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia and elsewhere. The writers include Tina Chang, Marilyn Chin, Luis Francia, Robin Hemley, Justin Hill, Sharmistha Mohanty, James Scudamore, Ravi Shankar, Jess Row and Madeleine Thien. For applications, please visit http://www.english.cityu.edu.hk/MFA. For further information, please email [redacted] or call Xu Xi at +[redacted].

March 11, 2010

↑ Index

216. susan maurer

Re: New Chapbook by Dan Wilcox from Benevolent Bird Press

Thu 18 Mar 2010

---

congratulations, Dan. Susan Maurer

> Date: Tue, 16 Mar 2010 14:05:05 -0400
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: New Chapbook by Dan Wilcox from Benevolent Bird Press
> To: [redacted]
>
> Benevolent Bird Press of Delmar, NY has published "boundless abodes of Albany," a chapbook of poems by Dan Wilcox.
>
> Host of the Third Thursday Poetry Night at the Social Justice Center in Albany, NY, Dan Wilcox has had many poems published in a variety of small press zines, anthologies, internet sites, chapbooks, & broadsides. Benevolent Bird Press also recently published a broadside of Wilcox's poem "My Sather Gate Illumination." You can read Dan's popular Blog at dwlcx.blogspot.com.
>
> Copies of "boundless abodes of Albany" are available from the publisher by mail at Benevolent Bird Press, P.O. Box 522, Delmar, NY 12054 for $5.00. Copies are also available from the poet at readings or by mail. For more information, email the publisher, Alan Casline: [redacted], or Dan Wilcox: [redacted].

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_2

↑ Index

217. Rob McLennan

five new above/ground press poetry chapbooks,

Thu 18 Mar 2010

Green Wind, by Ken Norris (Maine)
$5 apartments, section three by Aaron Tucker (Toronto)

$3

Some Forty, by rob mclennan (Ottawa)
$3

Town in a Long Day of Leaving by Marcus McCann (Toronto/Ottawa)
$3

A History of Button Collecting by Helen Hajnoczky (Calgary)
$3

Frank St. by Cameron Anstee (Ottawa)
$4

spring is upon us, & a new batch of above/ground press poetry chapbooks!

add $1 to orders for shipping, etc (outside Canada, $2 US); payable to rob mclennan a/g subscribers receive complimentary copies; 2010 subscriptions still available;

write for submission/subscription info, c/o 858 Somerset Street West, main floor, Ottawa ON K1R 6R7, or check out [redacted] or abovegroundpress.blogspot.com

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

218. Joel Weishaus
Poetica Blog
Thu 18 Mar 2010

Dear All;

My second Poetica critique is on Vincent Tripi's book of haiku, "Pennyweight for Nothing": http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Poetica/blog-2.htm

Contents Page:
http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Poetica/intro.htm

Warm Regards,
Joel

↑ Index

219. Poetry Project
Events at The Poetry Project
Thu 18 Mar 2010

Here¹s what¹s coming up at The Poetry Project:

Monday, March 22, 8 PM
FORM FREE FORM
STEVE BENSON, CARLA HARRYMAN,
JON RASKIN QUARTET & KONRAD STEINER

Performing in various combinations, three short pieces will be presented: a structured improvisation for text and voice (Carla Harryman and Steve Benson); a free improvisation (Jon Raskin Quartet); and a scripted live film narration piece on two scenes featuring French actress Jeanne Moreau (Konrad Steiner and Carla Harryman). A larger ensemble piece will follow. Jon Raskin Quartet: Jon Raskin, reeds and electronics; Liz Allbee, horns; John Shiurba, guitar; Ches Smith, drums and percussion. See bios at poetryproject.org.

Wednesday, March 24, 8 PM
Janet Hamill & Margaret Randall

Janet Hamill is the author of five books of poetry: Troublante (Oliphant Press), The Temple (Telephone Books), Nostalgia of the Infinite (Ocean View Books), Lost Ceilings (Telephone Books); and her most recent collection, Body of Water, published by Bowery Books, and nominated for the Poetry Society of America¹s William Carlos Williams Prize. She has released two CD¹s of spoken word and music in collaboration with the band Moving Star. Flying Nowhere (Yes No Maybe Records, 2000) was produced by Lenny Kaye and executive-produced by Bob Holman; the CD featured cameo performances by Lenny Kaye and Patti

Smith. Genie of the Alphabet (Not Records 2005) featured cameos by Lenny Kaye, Patti Smith, Bob Holman and David Amram.

Margaret Randall lived for almost a quarter century in Latin America: Mexico, Cuba, and Nicaragua. When she returned to the United States, in 1984, the Immigration and Naturalization Service ordered her deported because of opinions expressed in some of her books. With the help of many writers and others, she won her case in 1989. During the 1960s, out of Mexico City, Randall and Mexican poet Sergio Mondragon published the influential bi-lingual poetry journal El Corno Emplumado / The Plumed Horn. She has also done a great deal of translation from the Spanish, making such Latin American poets as Roque Dalton, Otto Rene Castillo, and others available to an English readership. Among Randall¹s most recent books of poetry are Where They Left You For Dead (BookWorks), Stones Witness (The University of Arizona Press), and Their Backs To The Sea (Wings Press). My Town will be published by Wings in 2010. Randall lives with her partner, Barbara Byers, in Albuquerque, New Mexico, from where she travels widely to read and speak.

Friday, March 26, 10 PM
A Similar But Different Quality Magazine Reading

A Similar But Different Quality is an experimental text-based journal unspecific to any genre. The sole parameter is that the work is text, which opens us to the surprise and poetry of language that is everywhere. Published occasionally, their manifesto reads:

Accidents. Words are everywhere and inevitably beautiful. What tries to be poetic is often not because true poetry is an accident. The poetry genre is paradoxically unpoetic, too narrow to contain the full beauty of language that permeates everyday conversation, movie dialogue, graffiti, theatre, song lyrics, notes, diary entries, grocery lists, receipts, rap, text messages, emails, spam, tweets, etc, etc. To poetry without boundaries, except the words. Not poetry, but words. To an immediate, unpretentious and zesty poetry.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

220. Jonathan Morse
Advertise small press books on e.g. Bravo or Ovation?
Thu 18 Mar 2010

Here's the suggestive video.

http://www.slatev.com/video/how-i-ran-ad-fox-news/

Jonathan Morse
http://jonathan-morse.blogspot.com

↑ Index

221. Jennifer Karmin
Red Rover Series / what's new in 2010?
Thu 18 Mar 2010

Red Rover Series
{readings that play with reading}

NEW venue
NEW curator
NEW review
NEW readings

Experiment #35:
Fairy Tales

SATURDAY, APRIL 3rd
7pm / doors lock 7:30

Featuring:
Jenny Boully
Kate Zambreno

at Outer Space Studio
1474 N. Milwaukee

Chicago, Illinois
suggested donation $4

NEW VENUE
near CTA Damen blue line third floor walk up not wheelchair accessible

JENNY BOULLY is the author of the forthcoming not merely because of the unknown that was stalking towards them (Tarpaulin Sky Press), The Book of Beginnings and Endings (Sarabande), [one love affair]* (Tarpaulin Sky Books), and The Body: An Essay (Essay Press). Her work has been anthologized in The Next American Essay, The Best American Poetry, Language for a New Century, and Great American Prose Poems. Her work has been published in Boston Review, Gulf Coast, Fourth Genre, Columbia, Verse, Seneca Review, Conduit, and other places. She is currently a Ph.D. Candidate at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York and holds previous graduate degrees in creative writing from the University of Notre Dame and Hollins University. She teaches in the Nonfiction and Poetry programs at Columbia College Chicago.

KATE ZAMBRENO is the author of O Fallen Angel, published in April by Chiasmus Press, winner of their â€œUndoing the Novelâ€ contest. She is an editor at Nightboat Books. A collection of essays inspired by her blog Frances Farmer Is My Sister (http://francesfarmerismysister.blogspot.com) will be published by Semiotext(e)â€™s Active Agents series in Fall 2011.

RED ROVER SERIES WELCOMES NEW CURATOR LAURA GOLDSTEIN!
Laura's poetry, reviews and essays can be found in Requited, Little Red Leaves, How2, EAOGH, Text/Sound, Rabbit Light Movies, Otoliths, CutBank Reviews, Moria, and The Little Magazine. She has two chapbooks: Ice in Intervals from Hex Press and Day of Answers from Tir Aux Pigeons. She has performed her work in Chicago at Links Hall, the Elastic Arts Foundation, and in New York at the Bowery Poetry CafÃ© and Unnameable Books. She currently teaches Writing and Literature at the School of the Art Institute and Loyola University.

GOOD WISHES TO CURATOR LISA JANSSEN!
Lisa is taking time this year to focus on her awesome editoral projects, like the journal MoonLit. Look for a new issue soon (http://www.dragcity.com/artists/moonlit). We wish her the best success!

HOW2 FEATURE ON RED ROVER SERIES!
Check out the Red Rover Series as part of How2's special issue on Poetic Economies of Performance.
(http://www.asu.edu/pipercwcenter/how2journal/vol_3_no_3/performance/emanuel-reading-performance.html)

Red Rover Series is curated by Laura Goldstein and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national, and international writers, artists, and performers. The series was founded in 2005 by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin.

Email ideas for reading experiments to us at [redacted]

The schedule for events is listed at http://groups.yahoo.com/group/redroverseries

UPCOMING
May 22 - Asimina Chremos with Joseph Ravens & Alycia Scott

↑ Index

222. Bruce McPherson
New Ted Enslin book
Thu 18 Mar 2010

McPherson & Co. proudly announces Theodore Enslin's new book, I, Benjamin, to be published March 25th.

Special offer to fellow list members until April 16th: $8 per copy first-class postage paid (normally $12.50 with postage). To respond to this special offer simply email [redacted] with "Enslin032510" in subject line, and then place your order at our website www.mcphersonco.com

I, Benjamin: A Quasi-Autobiographical Novella by Theodore Enslin With an Afterword by Howard McCord.

Publication: March 25, 2010 (the author’s 85th birthday)

$10.00 trade paperback, 63 pages, 0-929701-90-9 / 978-0929701-90-5

A lonely man possessing special powers crosses into an unknown country. There he meets three mysterious figures: an alluring diva, a shape-shifting siren, and an oddly omniscient hunter. Gradually the four-part variations of I, Benjamin assume the disquieting dimensions of a visionary passageway to that unknowable thing called a beautiful life.

Theodore Enslin’s poetic career spans 52 years since the publication of his first book, The Work Proposed; now as his self-proclaimed swan song he presents a "quasi-autobiographical" fable of an artist’s life.

"Enslin writes himself a life, a melodious, ideal and legendary one, a dream life that comes to the man-child when he decides to make art his life. This tale is charming, and is, besides, a marvelous recipee for making oneself a life out of words. The reader roams this confined paradise until it suddenly opens, and then one wants to stay." -- Andrei Codrescu

"Enslin’s story, a pilgrimage from "Exurbia" to solitary life in the woods and his subsequent journey back, is reminiscent of Thoreau. The narrative, which approaches allegory, oscillates between a dreamy sublimity and Spartan intention. Running through this ethereal story are more austere currents: the limitations of time and body, and the despair of loneliness. Fans of the poet will of course be fascinated by the journey, but more broadly, this exploration offers an intriguing sojourn to those interested in metaphysical travel or in the life cycle of an artist." -- Jen Sperry-Steinorth, ForeWord Reviews (March-April issue)

Theodore Vernon Enslin (born March 25, 1925) is the last living American poet of the first circle associated with Cid Corman's Origin magazine and press (which included Robert Creeley, Charles Olson, and two earlier Objectivists, George Oppen and Louis Zukofsky). He is one of the most musical of American avant-garde poets. Enslin was born in Chester, Pennsylvania. His father was a noted biblical scholar and his mother a teacher of Latin. He studied musical composition at Cambridge, Massachusetts with Nadia Boulanger, who recognized his ability as a writer and encouraged him to pursue his interest in poetry. He has said "I like to be considered as a composer who happens to use words instead of notes." Hs first book, The Work Proposed, was published by Origin in 1958. Enslin moved to Maine in 1960 and has lived in Washington County ever since, working at odd jobs and making and selling handmade walking sticks. The Maine landscape forms an integral part of his poetry, as does the isolation, both geographic and in terms of distance from literary fashion and the academy. Ranger (1978) is regarded as one of the key American long poems of the second half of the 20th century.

↑ Index

223. Robert Dewhurst satellite telephone #3
Fri 19 Mar 2010

SATELLITE TELEPHONE is a handmade magazine of poetry and new narrative. New writing in issue #3 by:

BRUCE BOONE, JOSHUA BECKMAN, MARIE BUCK, TODD COLBY, CACONRAD, THOM DONOVAN, TANYA LARKIN, HEDI EL KHOLTI, ISH KLEIN, CHRIS KRAUS, NICOLE MAURO, SHARON MESMER, REBEKAH RUTKOFF, and ROD SMITH.

Original cover drawing by TRACEY EMIN.

$7, ppd.

http://nolongdistance.endingthealphabet.org

Robert Dewhurst

↑ Index

224. Tim Peterson
EOAGH presents Barbara Henning and Simon Pettet
Fri 19 Mar 2010

EOAGH Reading Series:

Barbara Henning and Simon Pettet

Sunday, March 21 at 7PM

at Unnameable Books,

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

BARBARA HENNING is the author of three novels, seven books of poetry and a series of photo-poem pamphlets. Her most recent books are a collection of poetry and prose, Cities & Memory (Chax Press 2010) and a novel, Thirty Miles from Rosebud (BlazeVox 2009). Professor Emerita at Long Island University Brooklyn Campus, she is presently teaching courses for Naropa University, as well as LIU.

Read "Little Tesuque" by Barbara Henning in EOAGH 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/henning.html

Read "The Content of History Will Be Poetry" (on Charles Olson) in EOAGH 5:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/henning.html

SIMON PETTET is the author of a number of books, most recently HEARTH, his Collected-Poems-so-far, which came out last year from Talisman. He recently completed (with James Meetze) co-editing Other Flowers: The UnCollected Poems of James Schuyler, which will be published by Farrar,Straus in April (next month!)

Read "Poem ('I don't think')" by Simon Pettet in EOAGH 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/pettet.html

↑ Index

225. mIEKAL aND
Interview with Malok (1997) at Dreamtime Village
Fri 19 Mar 2010

Interview with Malok (1997) at Dreamtime Village
By Miles Newcombe and Paul Gavriloff

http://vimeo.com/5969619

↑ Index

226. Gerald Schwartz
25 questions: question # 3...
Fri 19 Mar 2010

Question # 3: If a poet can write one or two or more great works of poetry why cannot all of his or her works be great?

G. E. Schwartz

↑ Index

227. Jeffrey Side
Linda Russo contact email?
Fri 19 Mar 2010

Does anyone have an email address for Linda Russo?

↑ Index

228. blacksox
Sadly Sondra Ball has moved on...
Fri 19 Mar 2010

For those of you who didn't know her, Sondra Ball was an amazing woman. She created the award winning poetry journal Autum Leaves. The dedication and work on her part to do this every Month for almost 20 years tells you a little about what kind of person Sondra was.

But to know her best was to read her poems. Always filled with nature, purity of spirit, and kindness, her poems were a glimpse at the wonderful heart that drove the woman.

Sondra changed my life's path, no doubt about it. She published my poetry over 100 times. She took the time to give me advice, and aim my own poetic aspirations.Lastly, she became a friend I spoke with, depended, on and will miss dearly as my life goes on .

This is one of her poems that now bring tears to my eyes because of it's beauty.
The Far Side
by Sondra Ball

She walks in my dream
among fields and winding roads.
It is a spring day,
and it is snowing on flowers scattered among the grasses.

Her face is troubled by snow falling on lilacs and on cherry blooms.
I lie on a purple bed
on the far side of the vale.

I watch her walking.
She does not know I am here, that I can see her inside her troubled poses, captured by this spring snow storm.

↑ Index

229. steve russell
Re: Younger Italian-American Poets
Fri 19 Mar 2010

---

proving Italian ain't always easy. Ferlinghetti is mostly Italian due 2 the spelling of his surname. Mary Jo Salter is half/Italian. I'm half Italian 2 although I don't speak a work of that tongue and my surname is Russell. I hate the word young. I hate young people. If I discover a young Latin American poet of Italian descent, I'll write. Pronto...

_____
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, March 16, 2010 10:38:17 PM
Subject: Re: Younger Italian-American Poets

You might check out Ed Prato, who made a stir a few years ago and seems to have faded from the scene.

gb

On Mar 15, 2010, at 10:06 AM, Emma Bolden wrote:

> I am of Italian descent, as is Emari Digiorgio!
>
> On Sat, Mar 13, 2010 at 12:57 PM, William Allegrezza
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> A Italian friend of mine is looking for young or lesser known American or Latin American poets of Italian descent for an upcoming anthology. If you have someone to suggest, please send me an e-mail.
> ,
> --------
>
> Un amigo mío italiano está buscando a poetas americanos o latinoamericanos jovenes o menos conocidos de la ascendencia italiana para una antología. Si tienes alguien a sugerir, envíeme un correo electrónico.
>
> Bill Allegrezza
>
> --Emma Bolden
>
> www.emmabolden.wordpress.com
>
> Visiting Assistant Professor
> Department of English
> Georgetown College
> 400 East College Street
> Georgetown, KY 40324

Geo. Bowering
Heavy feet. Light heart.

↑ Index

230. steve russell

Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog

Fri 19 Mar 2010

Frederick Seidel is sort of outside. Fucking great poet. Outside ... big fucking word ... outside the mainstream? Seidel refused to revise the so-called anti-Catholic/Jewish poems in his first book. Lowell nominated him for something but Seidel wouldn't budge or change a word ...

_____
From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, March 16, 2010 2:18:29 AM
Subject: Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog

this is in response to Steve Dalichinsky's question:

Date: Sat, 13 Mar 2010 14:38:52 +0530
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
> To: [redacted]
>
> who what are outsider poets no one eer answered my quest/ion ME???
> no education no whatt??? what??? what who is/are outsider(s)?

Dear Stephen--

when i first read Jerry's announcement on the Poetics List last September--that he is working on line on an envisioned Anthology of Outsider Poetry--i also wondered--and do wonder yet--what an Outsider Poetry might beâ€”

Does it mean a kind of extension into poetry of the examples drawn from "Outsider Art?"--(some of the examples you use here are among those used in the general ideas put forward as criteria for "Outsider Art")--is it â€œimportingâ€â€”from another â€œfieldâ€-in a way that perhaps is like that of the Slow Food Movement being included into the Slow Poetry Movement--??)

Outsider in relation to what as "Inside?"--

How might the "Outside" Poet and Poetry mini-Anthology differ from Anthologies like the "Outlaw Bible of American Poetry" or--any number of anthologies previously assembled by Jerry, George Quasha, Richard Alpert, Richard Kostelanetz and many others?--Or any example of a collection of "avant-garde" and "experimental" poetries?

Since Jerry has worked so long in so many areas of Poetry, i thought he might have perhaps already some ideas as to his conceptions of what an Outsider Poetry is--yet i have a feeling--this is just my own "intuition" really--i have a feeling that part of what really sets this project apart is that the nature of the Outside and Outsider may emerge in at least some guises and that these will emerge as the projects moves along. That to me is the really beautiful part of the Anthology--that it is being assembled in "real time" and on line--one may follow it as it develops--and, more than that, besides finding examples which might function as "answers," what one really finds, to me at any rate, is the openness to a continual questioning and finding, an openness to the idea that this is not already a pre conceived set of examples, prejudices, opinions, nor a trendy tip of the hat to any other movements etc--but truly is an ongoing investigation.

When Gertrude Stein, so the story goes, was on her dying bed--she looked up at whoever was present--and said--"What is the answer?"--Then--laughing--she "answered" by saying--"What is the question?"

I think the nature of this project, or the way i understand it and work with it, is to keep asking questions--interesting & useful questions that as they emerge lead to further question, findings, researches and the development of new methods, techniques, new conceptions, as well as the re-finding of older examples from around the world which themselves ask questions which are just as alive today as when first asked--

Questioning is something much absent in discussions of any kind today--what is really wanted, for the most part, are examples, descriptions, categories, jargons, and ways to pigeon hole a poet or form of poetry. This allows for the creation of new anthologies, new job descriptions for candidates for such and such a position, opens much needed vacancies in the employment world of today--To have the answers means also that a sense of "order" is created, in order to fix with in the orders hierarchies, steps on the career path, ways to pad the resume and so forth. Answers also give one the sense that due to Order being established, it must be maintained and various "security measures taken,â€ in order to protect the boundaries and members of such and such a grouping, such and such a "movement"--to the point where orders are in fact necessary to keep order. That is, a process of arranging a certain status quo which must be kept by following the orders of the day vis a vis such and such an Authority, Group and etc--

When the announcement of the Anthology was first made, i had only questions--and was amazed to find that they were invited to appear at the Poets and Poetics mini-anthology in the making of the Outsider Poetry and Poets--

since i can't give you an answer per se--here are the questions again, with the link where to find them.

hopefully they may be of interest and use--not in answering, but in finding ever more questions to ask--

Rather than the delineating of boundaries "in order" to demonstrate what are the boundaries of Outsider Poetry,--one finds bridges, links, trains of associations--with which to further investigate and think on these questions re the Outsider Poetry--

Not Barriers--Bridges--Not Walls--but Windows--

Here is the response to the announcement--i hope it's useful & interesting--

http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2009/09/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html

> Date: Sat, 13 Mar 2010 14:38:52 +0530
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
> To: [redacted]
>
> who what are outsider poets no one eer answered my quest/ion ME???
> no education no whatt??? what??? what who is/are outsider(s)?
>
> On Fri, 12 Mar 2010 00:31:19 -0800 David Chirot <[redacted]>
> writes:
> I'n very honored and excited to have as Jerome Rothenberg's Poets
> and > Poetics blog current entry essay of mine on the Gunatanamo Poets,
> which > originally appeared in KAURABI have provided the link here for the
> esay's
> original appearnce and the current one at Jerry's blog, along with
> the link
> to another piece of mine re the Guantanamo Poets which appeared in > WordforWord #13 on "Waterboarding and Poetry: Francois Villon and
> the new > Extreme Experimental American Poetry."
>
> I hope that listserv memebrs and any and evryone may find something
> of > interest and use in the essays, themselves part of an ongoing and
> ever > expanding series of works across several genres and media--
> onwo/ards!
> david-bc
> and happy weekend, with the advent of Daylight Savings Time!!
> Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress (14): David Baptiste
> Chirot,
> Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from
>
> GuantÃ¡namo)<http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mi
> ni-anthology-in.html>
> *[a commentary on Poems from GuantÃ¡namo: The Detainees
> Speak<http://www.uipress.uiowa.edu/books/2007-fall/falpoefro.html>
> , edited by Marc Falkoff, University of Iowa Press, 2007]
>
> (towards a non-reading - American abolition of "non-literatures" -
> an entry
> in the Annals of the New Extreme Experimental Poetry)

*"The blank and ruin we see in Nature is within our own eye."*
--R.W. Emerson, "Nature"

*1. David-Baptiste Chirot // Word For/Word: A Journal of New Writing **
... <http://www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm>*
*Some American reviewers and commentators on the Poets of *Guantanamo*have so far found exactly what they were looking for: "bad" poetry in Formal*
*terms, *...
www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm -

vol13/dbc.htm+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&cd=4&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail>
2. Poems and Poetics <http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/>
... (14): David Baptiste Chirot, Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems* *from GuantÃ¡namo). [a commentary on Poems from GuantÃ¡namo: The* *Detainees Speak, ... which and into which the Guantanamo poets and* *poems emerge and become re-confined. *...
*poemsand*poet*ics.blogspot.com/ -*

Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?q=cache:tbc3EKdzZsYJ:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&cd=5&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail>-

Similar<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&client=gmail&rls=gm&q=related:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/+chirot+on+guantanamo+poets&sa=X&ei=bZKZS838LcL78Aavu8nGCg&ved=0CBoQHzAE>
3. KAURAB Online :: A Bengali Poetry Webzine :: Translation Site<http://kaurab.tripod.com/english/books/guantanamo.html>
*David Baptiste Chirot. "The blank and ruin we see in Nature is within* *our ... and into which the Guantanamo poets and poems emerge and* *become re-confined. *...
*kaurab.tripod.com/english/books/guantanamo.html*

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_3

↑ Index

231. Vernon Frazer

New Work from Vernon Frazer

Fri 19 Mar 2010

BELLICOSE WARBLING, my relatively new blog, has links to a new poem and a new performance piece on Youtube.

Here's the link:

http://bellicosewarbling.blogspot.com/2010/03/new-works.html

Vernon

↑ Index

232. amy king

TONIGHT @ 7 p.m. in the gorgeous just-about-summer air, come to Goodbye Blue Monday, get some drink and poetry in your ear! Pour gently...

Fri 19 Mar 2010

Come one, come all to two spect
Dear listeners, poets & sake-drinkers,

Come one, come all to two spectacular Friday-in-March readings:

TONIGHT -- Friday, March 19, with Jillian Brall, R. Erica Doyle, Adam Fieled, Matt Rotando, Metta Sama & Paige Taggart! &

next Friday, March 26, with Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin & Brett Eugene Ralph!

Could it get any better? Hardly. So come. We'll be there. So will they (details below). You too!

Love, Amy & Ana
www.stainofpoetry.com

March 19, Friday -- 7 p.m. ~ Jillian Brall, R. Erica Doyle, Adam Fieled, Matt Rotando, Metta Sama & Paige Taggart!

@ Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

with

Jillian Brall received both her BA in Creative Writing in 2004 and her MFA in Poetry in 2009 from The New School, in New York, NY. She is a NYC certified Teaching Artist, currently living in the Bushwick area of Brooklyn. She recently published a book of poems, Wet Information, under ZoeWo Press. She is also a saxophonist and visual artist, focusing on mixed media collage and painting. Several of her collages can be seen in the current issue of Pax Americana, as well as featured on The Best American Poetry Blog, and have been used as cover art for several electronic poetry books published by Scantily Clad Press. Prints of her collages, as well as copies of her book, Wet Information, are available for purchase at http://www.zoewopress.etsy.com .

~

R. Erica Doyle was born in Brooklyn to Trinidadian immigrant parents, and has lived in Washington, DC, Farmington, Connecticut and La Marsa, Tunisia. Her work has appeared in Best American Poetry, Our Caribbean: A Gathering of Lesbian and Gay Writing from the Antilles, Callaloo, Ploughshares, Best Black Womenâ€™s Erotica, Bum Rush the Page, and Ms. Magazine. She has received grants and awards from the Hurston/Wright Foundation, the Astraea Lesbian Writers Fund, and she was a New York Foundation for the Arts Poetry Fellow. She is also a fellow of Cave Canem: A Workshop and Retreat for Black Writers and her manuscript, proxy, was a finalist for the 2007 Cave Cavem Poetry Prize, selected by Claudia Rankine. She received her MFA in Poetry from the New School, and she lives in New York City, where she is at work on a novel, Fortune. Erica teaches in the NYC public schools and is the facilitator of Tongues Afire: A Creative Writing Workshop for queer women and trans and gender non-conforming people of color.

~

Adam Fieled is a poet based in Philadelphia. He has released three print books: â€œOpera Bufaâ€ (Otoliths, 2007), â€œWhen You Bitâ€¦â€ (Otoliths, 2008), and â€œChimesâ€ (Blazevox, 2009), as well as numerous chaps, e-chaps, and e-books, including â€œPositâ€ (Dusie Press, 2007) and â€œThe White Albumâ€ (ungovernable press, 2009). He has work in journals like Tears in the Fence, Great Works, The Argotist, Upstairs at Duroc, Jacket, and in the &Now Anthology from Lake Forest College Press. A magna cum laude graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, he also holds an MFA from New England College and an MA from Temple University, where he is completing his PhD.

~

Matt Rotando is a steak-man, a cyclist, and a skeet-shooter. He prefers swimming to the harpsichord, mangoes to mangosteen, and jackfruit above all fruits but the avocado. These days he can often be found skulking about the edges of Oyster Bay, Long Island, looking for something crunchy. Poems are for whying and sometimes for why-notting, but he likes those poems best that get him the odd fake cigarette or temporary tattoo. His book is The Comebackâ€™s Exoskeleton and he has poems in this monthâ€™s Shampoo. His favorite color is green and silver. The word is a lot weaker than a slap on the back of the head, except when it isnâ€™t. The inside of words is a spacey place for looking out. Thatâ€™s grandiloquence! And in the shade of a Bonzai tree, or just a rented white wall, his shoes await The Great Trans-American Spin.

~

Metta Sama says: I am a poet, professor, activist, painter, collage artist, fiction and essay writer. My poetry, currently, looks at instabilities in writings by persons subjected to various forms of oppression. I am interested in the joy of making and creating art and stories and images that will, eventually, disintegrate, return to the source it came from. I question what it means to make thoughts, ideas, & feelings stable, to devote oneself to immortality. My work has appeared in Proud Flesh Journal, The Drunken Boat, Blackbird, Paterson Literary Review, Yellow Medicine Review, Crab Orchard, and other journals, & I am the author of one published collection of poems.

~

Paige Taggart lives in Brooklyn. Her chapbook Polaroid Parade is forthcoming with Greying Ghost Press. She has an e-chapbook, Wonâ€™t Be A Girl with Scantily Clad Press. She is a recipient of the 2009 NYFA fellowship. Recent or forthcoming work can be found at No Tell Motel, Glitterpony, Raleigh Quarterly, Sink Review, RealPoetik, pax americana, We Are So Happy To Know Something. Peruse her blog: http://mactaggartjewelry. blogspot.com.

&

March 26, Friday ~ Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin & Brett Eugene Ralph!

March 26 @ 7 p.m. Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn

with

Jessica Bozek is the author of The Bodyfeel Lexicon (Switchback Books) and several chapbooks. Recent poems appear in Action, Yes, Artifice, Fairy Tale Review, P-QUEUE, and Womb. Jessica runs Small Animal Project (smallanimalproject.com), a reading series and web-text experiment based in Cambridge, MA.

~

Kate Braid is a poet, essayist, biographer, and teacher. Braidâ€™s first book, Covering Rough Ground, was about her experience as a carpenter, and won the Pat Lowther Award for best book of poems by a Canadian woman. She is also the author of To This Cedar Fountain, Inward to the Bones: Georgia Oâ€™Keefeâ€™s Journey with Emily Carr, A Well-Mannered Storm: The Glenn Gould Poems, and a co-editor, Sandy Shreve, of In Fine Form, the first anthology of Canadian form poetry. A second book of poems about her experiences in construction, Turning Left to the Ladies, was published by Palimpsest in June 2009. She has also written three books of non-fiction and is currently working on a memoir of her fifteen years as a carpenter.

~

Melissa Broder is the author of WHEN YOU SAY ONE THING BUT MEAN YOUR MOTHER (Ampersand Books, February 2010). She is the curator of the Polestar Poetry Series and the Chief Editor of La Petite Zine. Broder received her BA from Tufts University and is currently in the MFA program at CCNY. She is the winner of the Jerome Lowell Dejur Award and the Stark Prize for Poetry. By day, she works as a literary publicist. Her poems have appeared in many journals, including: Opium, Shampoo, Conte and The Del Sol Review.

~

Jackie Clark is currently co-editor-in-chief for LIT magazine. She also curates Poets off Poetry at coldfrontmag.com, where poets write about music. Her chapbook Office Work is forthcoming from Greying Ghost Press. She lives in Jersey City.

~

Cate Marvinâ€™s first book, Worldâ€™s Tallest Disaster, was chosen by Robert Pinksy for the 2000 Kathryn A. Morton Prize and published by Sarabande Books in 2001. In 2002, she received the Kate Tufts Discovery Prize. Her poems have appeared in The New England Review, Poetry, The Kenyon Review, Fence, The Paris Review, The Cincinnati Review, Slate, Verse, Boston Review, and Ninth Letter. She is co-editor with poet Michael Dumanis of the anthology Legitimate Dangers: American Poets of the New Century (Sarabande Books, 2006). Her second book of poems, Fragment of the Head of a Queen, was published by Sarabande in August 2007. A recent Whiting Award recipient and 2007 NYFA

Gregory Millard Fellow, she teaches poetry writing in Lesley Universityâ€™s Low-Residency M.F.A. Program and is an associate professor in creative writing at the College of Staten Island, City University of New York.

~

Brett Eugene Ralph spent the better part of his youth in Louisville, Kentucky, playing football and singing in punk rock bands. His work has appeared in journals such as Conduit, Mudfish, Willow Springs, and The American Poetry Review; it has been anthologized in The McSweeneyâ€™s Book of Poets Picking Poets and The Stiffest of the Corpse: An Exquisite Corpse Reader. His first full-length collection, Black Sabbatical, was published by Sarabande Books in 2009. Brett has taught at the University of Massachusetts, Missouri State University, and the Central Institute of Buddhist Studies in the Himalayas of northern India. Currently, he lives in Empire, Kentucky, and teaches at Hopkinsville Community College. His country rock ensemble, Brett Eugene Ralphâ€™s Kentucky Chrome Revue, can be heard in seedy dives throughout the South.

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

--
HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author- spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a- lot/

↑ Index

233. Evan Munday

Denver's Cross-Border Avant-Garde Extravaganza - an off-site AWP event

Fri 19 Mar 2010

Dear friends,

Maybe I'm jumping the gun by talking about the AWP conference already, but I'm eager:

Please join the Denver Quarterly and Coach House Books for an off-site AWP reading on Friday, April 9, from 3 - 6 pm at The Dikeou Collection, located in downtown Denver, just a two-block-walk from the Colorado Convention Center. There will be free wine and snacks, and no charge for the event.

Coach House will be presenting The Cross-Border Avant-Garde Extravaganza, featuring Canadians Christian Bök (Eunoia), Jen Currin (The Inquisition Yours) and kevin mcpherson eckhoff (Rhapsodomancy) and Americans Rachel Levitsky (Neighbor) and K. Silem Mohammad (The Front). Hosted by Coach House senior editor Alana Wilcox, it promises to be a phenomenal afternoon of out-there poetry, with Flarf, surrealism, visual poetry and more! A Peace Bridge of Poetics!

DENVER QUARTERLY Reading and Publication Celebration (3 - 4:30 pm)

FEATURING
Dan Beachy-Quick
Julie Carr
Malinda Markham
Martha Ronk
Cole Swensen
Brian Teare

COACH HOUSE BOOKS: Cross-Border Avant-Garde Extravaganza (4:30 - 6 pm)

FEATURING
Christian Bök
Jen Currin
kevin mcpherson eckhoff
Rachel Levitsky
K. Silem Mohammad

For media requests or desk/review copies, please contact Evan Munday at [redacted] or [redacted].

Yours,

Evan

Evan Munday
Publicist
Coach House Books
80 bpNichol Lane
Toronto ON, M5S 3J4
[redacted]
[redacted]

↑ Index

234. Tim Peterson
Henning and Pettet CORRECTION: Time is 2 PM, not 7 PM
Fri 19 Mar 2010

EOAGH Reading Series:

Barbara Henning and Simon Pettet

Sunday, March 21 at 2PM

at Unnameable Books,

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

BARBARA HENNING is the author of three novels, seven books of poetry and a series of photo-poem pamphlets. Her most recent books are a collection of poetry and prose, Cities & Memory (Chax Press 2010) and a novel, Thirty Miles from Rosebud (BlazeVox 2009). Professor Emerita at Long Island University Brooklyn Campus, she is presently teaching courses for Naropa University, as well as LIU.

Read "Little Tesuque" by Barbara Henning in EOAGH 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/henning.html

Read "The Content of History Will Be Poetry" (on Charles Olson) in EOAGH 5:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/henning.html

SIMON PETTET is the author of a number of books, most recently HEARTH, his Collected-Poems-so-far, which came out last year from Talisman. He recently completed (with James Meetze) co-editing Other Flowers: The UnCollected Poems of James Schuyler, which will be published by Farrar,Straus in April (next month!)

Read "Poem ('I don't think')" by Simon Pettet in EOAGH 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/pettet.html

↑ Index

235. Rob McLennan
Douglas Barbour at 70; feature at Jacket magazine
Sat 20 Mar 2010

---

a feature on Edmonton poet Douglas Barbour Editor: rob mclennan

[¯¯] rob mclennan: Introduction: Call and Response, Douglas Barbour at 70

[¯¯] Douglas Barbour: Ten poems

[¯¯] Douglas Barbour: Three poems: Continuations 81 to 83

[¯¯] Douglas Barbour in conversation with Jenna Butler; Conducted by e-mail, April-June 2009

[¯¯] Dennis Cooley: Two poems: Hyoid / Lungs Flapping

[¯¯] Sheila E. Murphy: Collaborating with Doug Barbour

[¯¯] Stephen Scobie: The Rock Garden: a tribute to Douglas Barbour

[¯¯] Christine Stewart: From the Journals of Reading Early Barbour, Summer, 2009

[¯¯] Andy Weaver: : a ghazal for d. b.

http://jacketmagazine.com/39/index.shtml#barbour

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

236. David A. Kirschenbaum
Advertise in Boog City 63
Sat 20 Mar 2010

Please forward

Advertise in

Boog City 63

Deadlines

?Space Reservations-Email to reserve ad space ASAP

?Tues. March 30-Submit Ad or Ad Materials
?Wed. April 7-Distribute Paper

This is a quick note to see if you?d like to advertise and reach our readership. (Donations are also cool, way cool.)

We?ll be distributing 2,250 copies of the issue throughout the East Village and other parts of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and at Boog City events.

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. The discount rate also applies to larger ads.

For our full rate card, please visit:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664) for more information.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: 212-842-BOOG (2664)

↑ Index

237. Noah Eli Gordon

Zinc Bar reading: Carr, McCann, Gordon this Sunday 630pm

Sat 20 Mar 2010

This Sunday March 21st @630pm
NYC @ Zinc Bar (82 West 3rd Street)

Join us on 3/21 for readings by:

Michael Carr
Anthony McCann
Noah Eli Gordon

Michael Carr is the author of the Out Another, Softer White, and Platinum Blonde. Necco Face, a chapbook co-written with Jess Mynes and Aaron Tieger, came out from Editions Louis Wain last year, and a collaborative chapbook with Micah Ballard called Poems from the New Winter Palace is forthcoming from House Press this summer. He lives in Cambridge, MA.

Anthony McCann is the author of Moongarden (Wave Books 2006) and Father of Noise (Fence Books 2003). Originally from the upper Hudson Valley of New York State he now lives in Los Angeles, California. He will be reading poems from his forthcoming book New Dreams of Mammal Island--due out from Wave next spring.

Noah Eli Gordon is the author of several books, including Novel Pictorial Noise (Harper Perennial, 2007), which was selected by John Ashbery for the 2006 National Poetry Series and chosen for the 2007 San Francisco State University Poetry Center Book Award. He lives in Denver and teaches in the MFA program at the University of Colorado-Boulder. Visit his PennSound page here: http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Gordon-Noah-Eli.php
_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_3

↑ Index

238. Vernon Frazer

Fading Melody by Vernon Frazer

Sat 20 Mar 2010

---

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eQxVzWE8PFU

↑ Index

239. derek beaulieu

new from NO press: 3 chapbooks

Sat 20 Mar 2010

NO press is proud to announce the release of 3 new publications:

MANIFESTO: Planning to Stay
Al Filreis
8 pp, manifesto.
limited edition of 60 handbound copies.
$3

*

4 POEMS
Reed Altemus
4 pp, visual poetry.

limited edition of 40 handbound copies
$2

*

A HOMOPHONIC TRANSLATION OF CLAUDE GAUVREAU'S TRUSTFUL FATIGUE AND REALITY
Stephen Cain
1 fold leaflet, translation.
limited edition of 40 copies $1.50

for more information, or to order copies, contact derek beaulieu
[redacted]

↑ Index

240. Camille Martin
new at Rogue Embryo
Sat 20 Mar 2010

New on my blog:

1) Musicality in Poetry
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/03/15/musicality-in-poetry/

2) Barbara Guest's Musicalities http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/03/20/barbara-guests-musicalities/

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

↑ Index

241. charles alexander review of Jane Sprague's Port of Los Angeles
Sat 20 Mar 2010

Read a great review by Thom Donovan of Jane Sprague's The Port of Los Angeles here:

http://www.poetryfoundation.org/harriet/2010/03/jane-spragues-the-port-of-los-angeles/and you can order the book from Chax Press, http://chax.org, or from Small Press Distribution, http://spdbooks.org/

Five new books by Chax Press are up on our site, but only under the "subscription" link on the index page at chax.org -- in a number of days they will be up with their own pages, and I'll post a message. But it's not too late to take advantage of the subscription savings price. The books are:

Alice Notley, REASON AND OTHER WOMEN ($21)
Charles Bernstein, UMBRA ($15)
Barbara Henning, CITIES AND MEMORY ($16)
Tenney Nathanson, GHOST SNOW FALLS THROUGH THE VOID (GLOBALIZATION)
($17)
Anne Waldman, MATRIOT ACTS ($15)

Total retail price from our web site, when they are up, will be $84 plus shipping. The subscription price for these five is $70 with no shipping charges added, and the offer will be temporary.

For those of you who have already subscribed, your books will be shipped in the coming week.

Thank you for considering Chax Press books,

Charles

charles alexander
[redacted]

chax press / poetry & the book arts 411 n seventh ave ste 103 / tucson, az 85705-8388

presenting
Ron Silliman & Marilyn Crispell on Jan 30 2010
Andrew Joron, Michael Palmer, & Andrew Zawicki on March 7 2010

DONATE TO CHAX PRESS at http://chax.org/donate.htm

↑ Index

242. Philip Meersman

Invitation: BruSlam 21/03/2010 met/avec/with Marc Tiefenthal & Jibé @GalerY (VUB) Triomflaan - toegang 6 (near the KultuurKafé), Brussels

Sat 20 Mar 2010

BruSlam Free Podium

Sunday 21/03/2010

with/avec/en
Marc Tiefenthal

&
Jibé

...more info<http://bruslam.over-blog.com/pages/032010_Marc_Tiefenthal_amp_Jibe-2287828.html>

BruSlam is a multilingual Slam Free Podium every 21st of the month at VUB GalerY. Open to everybody without distinction between language, gender, religion, skin, age… with the intention to start up a dialogue between the different communities in Brussels: Belgians, Europeans & citizens of the world.
info about BruSlam<http://bruslam.over-blog.com/pages/What_is_BruSlam-951626.html>

@GalerY

Gebouw Y'

Campus Etterbeek

Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB)

Triomflaan - toegang 6 (near the CultuurCafé)

1050 Brussel

...localisation<http://bruslam.over-blog.com/pages/Localisation-967397.html>

20:00-22:30

Inscription 19.30

to unsuscribe, answer "slam is dead". Thanks!

--
Philip Meersman
A. Lynenstraat 25 bus 3
1210 St-Joost-ten-Noode
Belgium
tel[redacted]
www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
skype: Spooninmybrain
[redacted]
www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
21/03/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

02/04/10: Performance opening expo "Love Letters", KULTOUR10, Sint-Niklaas, BE (http://www.kultour10.be/kultour10/index.php/podium/31-qspooninmybrainq)
16/04/10: "Binnenkort ook in navulpak" op het Once upon a Festival, Kasteel van Laarne, BE (www.onceuponafestival.be)
21/04/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
05/05/10-09/05/10: Literature festival of Tallinn, Estonia
21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/07/10: BruSlam, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

--
Philip Meersman
A. Lynenstraat 25 bus 3
1210 St-Joost-ten-Noode
Belgium
tel[redacted]
www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
skype: Spooninmybrain
[redacted]
www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
21/03/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
02/04/10: Performance opening expo "Love Letters", KULTOUR10, Sint-Niklaas, BE (http://www.kultour10.be/kultour10/index.php/podium/31-qspooninmybrainq)
16/04/10: "Binnenkort ook in navulpak" op het Once upon a Festival, Kasteel van Laarne, BE (www.onceuponafestival.be)
21/04/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
05/05/10-09/05/10: Literature festival of Tallinn, Estonia
21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/07/10: BruSlam, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

↑ Index

243. Lewis Warsh
A Place in the Sun / Book Party
Sat 20 Mar 2010

Spuyten Duyvil Books

invites you to a book party/reading for

A PLACE IN THE SUN

a new novel by Lewis Warsh

Friday, March 26, 7-9:30

Bowery Poetry Club

308 Bowery

(between Houston & Bleecker) Manhattan

With a show of art work by cover artist Pamela Lawton

"A deeply engrossing book, I couldn't put it down. And now that I've finished reading it I can't put it away, for how it furthers my thinking of the genre itself. A Place in the Sun beautifully combines the high action and salaciousness of page-turners, with the self- reflection and risk-taking of post-modern fiction. It's a must-read and a must-study." Renee Gladman

"Lewis Warsh brings his poet's sensibility to a mash up of literary and genre fiction techniques – including constantly shifting perspectives and unexpected interconnections – to create an intriguingly compelling and deeply satisfying reading experience. I loved it." Michael Lally

"A Place in the Sun is a beautifully rendered and expertly deconstructed novel. Warsh's stunningly effective use of multiple narratives, provided in exquisitely detailed lines, conveys an elastic and powerful emotional honesty. This is a sensual and desperate story from a writer with formidable powers of invention." Donald Breckenridge

"In weaving together the cold, explicit facts, gossipy rumors and largely sexual fantasies of the lives of Clift, Taylor, and Drieser, Lewis Warsh creates a tripartite threnody of its own genuine American tragedy, the off-screen, off-page dark truths hidden beneath the drab, glittering surface crust of American life. William Carlos Williams wrote in "To Elsie": "The pure products of America go crazy...." Warsh has captured that in mimicking a sensationalized tabloid voice of a 1950s Confidential mag's hot, breathless prose, and taking a transcendent leap from that gossip and rumor into one of the "great poems of death" Walt Whitman exhorted American poets to write." Michael Rumaker

A PLACE IN THE SUN is avaliable from Small Press Distribution

[redacted]

www.spdbooks.org

↑ Index

244. ian davidson

+Hi+

Sun 21 Mar 2010

---

http://supersapidbag4.webs.com?Tzht4

_____ We want to hear all your funny, exciting and crazy Hotmail stories. Tell us now http://clk.atdmt.com/UKM/go/195013117/direct/01/

↑ Index

245. Randolph Healy
New from Wild Honey Press
Sun 21 Mar 2010

It's with great pleasure that I announce the publication of _Via_ by Andrew Brewerton.

Via consists of thirteen eight-line stanzas and any amount of sturdy grace. It's light and open structure seems practically inexhaustible, though by no means exhausting. Quite the opposite. A real joy.

To obtain a copy, please write to me at 16a Ballyman Road, Bray, County Wicklow, Ireland.

The cost is that figure other than infinity which is the same in all currencies.

See http://www.wildhoneypress.com/BOOKS/Via.htm for more details.

best

Randolph

Apologies if you receive this more than once

↑ Index

246. Aryanil Mukherjee
Re: 25 questions: question # 3...
Sun 21 Mar 2010

---

because a golfer can't match his/her handicap in every single match because Pele or Maradona couldn't score a goal in every single match they played because ... there is something called probability
...and writing is a worldly thing...

----- Original Message -----
From: "Gerald Schwartz" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, March 19, 2010 9:47 AM
Subject: 25 questions: question # 3...

> Question # 3: If a poet can write one or two or more great works of poetry why cannot all of his or her works be great?

> G. E. Schwartz

↑ Index

247. J. Michael Mollohan
Dan Waber does it again.
Sun 21 Mar 2010

Dan Waber is issuing a series of Visual Poetry Chapbooks (by invitation). Mine was one of the first, and I must say the reproduction is first rate. You may purchase mine, Dan's, and others at: http://thisisvisualpoetry.com/

Collect 'em all! LOL

↑ Index

248. Alan Sondheim
Re: 25 questions: question # 3...
Sun 21 Mar 2010

Hi Gerald,

Define "great," and "work" here. The question doesn't make sense. Why doesn't a good team win all its games? How do you compare earlier and later Picabia? Is Chaucer's Astrolabe a great work? The question, it seems to me, either has an obvious answer - that some things some people are "great" to other people, and some things aren't - or dissolves through an inherent sloppiness.

- Alan

On Fri, 19 Mar 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:

> Question # 3: If a poet can write one or two or more great works of poetry why cannot all of his or her works be great?
>
> G. E. Schwartz

==
email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
webpage http://www.alansondheim.org sondheimat gmail.com, panix.com
==

↑ Index

249. Bruce McPherson

New Ted Enslin book

Mon 22 Mar 2010

McPherson & Co. is very pleased to announce Theodore Enslin's new book, I, Benjamin, to be published on Thursday, March 25th.

I, Benjamin: A Quasi-Autobiographical Novella by Theodore Enslin With an Afterword by Howard McCord.

Publication: March 25, 2010 (the author’s 85th birthday)

$10.00 trade paperback, 63 pages, 0-929701-90-9 / 978-0929701-90-5

Theodore Enslin’s poetic career spans 52 years since the publication of his first book, The Work Proposed; now as his self-proclaimed swan song he presents a "quasi-autobiographical" fable of an artist’s life. A lonely man possessing special powers crosses into an unknown country. There he meets three mysterious figures: an alluring diva, a shape-shifting siren, and an oddly omniscient hunter. Gradually the four-part variations of I, Benjamin assume the disquieting dimensions of a visionary passageway to that unknowable thing called a beautiful life.

"Enslin writes himself a life, a melodious, ideal and legendary one, a dream life that comes to the man-child when he decides to make art his life. This tale is charming, and is, besides, a marvelous recipee for making oneself a life out of words. The reader roams this confined paradise until it suddenly opens, and then one wants to stay." -- Andrei Codrescu

"Enslin’s story, a pilgrimage from "Exurbia" to solitary life in the woods and his subsequent journey back, is reminiscent of Thoreau. The narrative, which approaches allegory, oscillates between a dreamy sublimity and Spartan intention. Running through this ethereal story are more austere currents: the limitations of time and body, and the despair of loneliness. Fans of the poet will of course be fascinated by the journey, but more broadly, this exploration offers an intriguing sojourn to those interested in metaphysical travel or in the life cycle of an artist." -- Jen Sperry-Steinorth, ForeWord Reviews (March-April issue)

Theodore Vernon Enslin (born March 25, 1925) is the last living American poet of the first circle associated with Cid Corman's Origin magazine and press (which included Robert Creeley, Charles Olson, and two earlier Objectivists, George Oppen and Louis Zukofsky). He is one of the most musical of American avant-garde poets. Enslin was born in Chester, Pennsylvania. His father was a noted biblical scholar and his mother a teacher of Latin. He studied musical composition at Cambridge, Massachusetts with Nadia Boulanger, who recognized his ability as a writer and encouraged him to pursue his interest in poetry. He has said "I like to be considered as a composer who happens to use words instead of notes." Hs first book, The Work Proposed, was published by Origin in 1958. Enslin moved to Maine in 1960 and has lived in Washington County ever since, working at odd jobs and making and selling handmade walking sticks. The Maine landscape forms an integral part of his poetry, as does the isolation, both geographic and in terms of distance from literary fashion and the academy. Ranger (1978) is regarded as one of the key American long poems of the second half of the 20th century.

Bruce McPherson www.mcphersonco.com

↑ Index

250. Alan Sondheim

Michael, who I never knew

Mon 22 Mar 2010

Michael, who I never knew

Michael Benedikt and George E. Wellwarth edited Modern French Theatre: The Avant-Garde, Dada, and Surrealism. I recently bought a used copy of the book, first edition. It might have been Benedikt's first book. There's an author's signature on the title page, and an inscription inside the front cover:

for Mother dear

and F.F.

with thanks for the right genes,

Michael

Michael Benedikt was born in 1935 and died in 2007. I didn't know him. There is something uncanny about the inscription. Michael Benedikt lived 72 years. I think perhaps he gave this to his mother with a sense of pride; he was 29. I think to myself: He gave this book to his mother and F.F., perhaps a father. His mother and perhaps F.F. died, and Michael inherited. It would have been sad for the book to be returned to him, after a temporary journey of pride and happiness. And then Michael died and someone, perhaps a wife or other relative, sold or gave away some of his books, perhaps all of them, and this was one of them. And so Modern French Theater ends up in Adam Tobin's book-store, coming from somewhere, somewhere unknown, perhaps untraceable, and I am reading and learning a great deal, revisiting some old friends, playwrights within. I fear death, death dominates me; I am constantly fighting off depression as best I can. As we run out of money, depression and stress increase. And I think: soon this book will be passed on, and I am less than a silent witness to its passing. So perhaps this is the singing of a solitary and mournful note, so that its passing will be remembered. And perhaps this will be forgotten as well.

↑ Index

251. steve russell
Old/still great/ Frederick Seidel
Mon 22 Mar 2010

---

a little late getting this.
Seidel gets my vote for most important American poet/2nd half/20th century.

http://www.nytimes.com/2009/04/12/magazine/12Seidel-t.html

↑ Index

252. amy king
Passing of Ai [Florence Anthony -- October 21, 1947 – March 20, 2010]
Mon 22 Mar 2010

Sorry if I'm repeating, but I didn't see mention of Ai's passing here:

http://blog.bestamericanpoetry.com/the_best_american_poetry/2010/03/in-memoriam-to-ai-1947-2010-by-jerry-wiliams-.html

and

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ai_(poet)

Best,

Amy

_____

HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

↑ Index

253. Aldon Nielsen
Re: Passing of Ai [Florence Anthony -- October 21, 1947 – March 20, 2010]
Mon 22 Mar 2010

This is the first news I've heard -- sorry to see it, but thanks for posting.

On Mon, Mar 22, 2010 at 1:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Sorry if I'm repeating, but I didn't see mention of Ai's passing here:

> http://blog.bestamericanpoetry.com/the_best_american_poetry/2010/03/in-memoriam-to-ai-1947-2010-by-jerry-wiliams-.html
>
> and
>
> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ai_(poet)
>
> Best,
>
> Amy
>
> _____
>
> HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:
>
> http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

--
Aldon L. Nielsen
Kelly Professor of American Literature
Department of English
117 Burrowes Building
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA
16802-6200

[redacted]

sailing the blogosphere at http://heatstrings.blogspot.com

"kindling his mind (more
than his mind will kindle)"

--William Carlos Williams, early adopter

↑ Index

254. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: Michael, who I never knew
Mon 22 Mar 2010

Dear Alan,

This is exactly how knowledge of certain kind, poetry, someone's vision gets translated, through happenstance, distraction partial destruction and occasional, precious momentary illuminations. Thank you for this wonderful passage. More real than desperate attempts to institutionalize hierarchies.

All knowledge is built on fragments of other knowledge.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Mar 22, 2010 at 4:36 AM, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:

> Michael, who I never knew
>
> Michael Benedikt and George E. Wellwarth edited Modern French Theatre: The Avant-Garde, Dada, and Surrealism. I recently bought a used copy of the book, first edition. It might have been Benedikt's first book. There's an author's signature on the title page, and an inscription inside the front cover:
>
> for Mother dear
>
> and F.F.
>
> with thanks for the right genes,
>
> Michael
>
> Michael Benedikt was born in 1935 and died in 2007. I didn't know him. There is something uncanny about the inscription. Michael Benedikt lived 72 years. I think perhaps he gave this to his mother with a sense of pride; he was 29. I think to myself: He gave this book to his mother and F.F., perhaps a father. His mother and perhaps F.F. died, and Michael inherited. It would have been sad for the book to be returned to him, after a temporary journey of pride and happiness. And then Michael died and someone, perhaps a wife or other relative, sold or gave away some of his books, perhaps all of them, and this was one of them. And so Modern French Theater ends up in Adam Tobin's book-store, coming from somewhere, somewhere unknown, perhaps untraceable, and I am reading and learning a great deal, revisiting some old friends, playwrights within. I fear death, > death dominates me; I am constantly fighting off depression as best I can. As we run out of money, depression and stress increase. And I think: soon this book will be passed on, and I am less than a silent witness to its passing. So perhaps this is the singing of a solitary and mournful note, so that its passing will be remembered. And perhaps this will be forgotten as well.

↑ Index

255. Kevin Killian
Re: Michael, who I never knew
Mon 22 Mar 2010

Thank you Alan, for your characteristically generous tribute to Michael Benedikt. I never met him either, but in recent years have had many occasions to bless his memory. His landmark 60s anthology of US poets theater work THEATRE EXPERIMENT was the direct predecessor to teh book that David Brazil and I have been editing, THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER 1945-1985. THEATRE EXPERIMENT, with its swirl of myriad theaters, everyone from e.e. cummings to Carolee Schneeman, was the benchmark we hoped to emulate. The guy must really have been something, as you suggest.

Kevin K.
>
>
> Michael Benedikt and George E. Wellwarth edited Modern French Theatre: The > Avant-Garde, Dada, and Surrealism. I recently bought a used copy of the > book, first edition. It might have been Benedikt's first book. There's an > author's signature on the title page, and an inscription inside the front > cover:
>
>
> for Mother dear
>
> and F.F.
>
> with thanks for the right genes,
>
> Michael
>
>

> Michael Benedikt was born in 1935 and died in 2007. I didn't know him.
> There is something uncanny about the inscription. Michael Benedikt lived > 72 years. I think perhaps he gave this to his mother with a sense of > pride; he was 29. I think to myself: He gave this book to his mother and > F.F., perhaps a father. His mother and perhaps F.F. died, and Michael > inherited. It would have been sad for the book to be returned to him, > after a temporary journey of pride and happiness. And then Michael died > and someone, perhaps a wife or other relative, sold or gave away some of > his books, perhaps all of them, and this was one of them. And so Modern > French Theater ends up in Adam Tobin's book-store, coming from somewhere, > somewhere unknown, perhaps untraceable, and I am reading and learning a > great deal, revisiting some old friends, playwrights within. I fear death, > death dominates me; I am constantly fighting off depression as best I can.
> As we run out of money, depression and stress increase. And I think: soon > this book will be passed on, and I am less than a silent witness to its > passing. So perhaps this is the singing of a solitary and mournful note, > so that its passing will be remembered. And perhaps this will be forgotten > as well.
>
>
>

↑ Index

256. Sam Ladkin
FOOL'S ERRAND FESTIVAL
Mon 22 Mar 2010

FOOL'S ERRAND FESTIVAL

An April Fool's Day evening festival of experimental music, poetry and performance.

Sponsored by the UCC English Literature Society.
http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=158991857645

Location:
Connolly A, University College Cork
Western Road, Cork
http://www.ucc.ie/en/VisitorstoUCC/Transportmapsandparking/Maps/East%20Campus.pdf

Time:
4pm until evening
More details to be announced.

FREE ENTRY

Including...

Performance:

*Chris Goode & Johnny Liron *
http://www.artsadmin.co.uk/projects/associate-artist.php?id=32
http://beescope.blogspot.com/

performing a mix-tape of avant-garde literature, including Samuel Beckett, fluxus, John Cage, Christopher Knowles...

Music:

Paul Hegarty & VIcky Langan
http://www.myspace.com/desamisducrime performing a work of Fluxus

Poetry:

Michael Kindellan and Fergal Gaynor
http://www.barquepress.com/notlove.html
http://www.soundeye.org/people/fergal-gaynor

AND

a cast of TENS for a rare performance of

Christian Wolff's BURDOCKS (1970-1971)
http://renewablemusic.blogspot.com/2006/09/landmarks-18.html

Players include Chris Goode, Paul Hegarty, John Godfrey, Vicky Langan, Mick O'Shea, Danny McCarthy and more to be announced.
http://www.dannymccarthy.ie/
http://www.dotdotdotmusic.com/
http://www.myspace.com/mickoshea
http://www.music.ucc.ie/index.php?/staff/detail/john_godfrey/

More details will be forthcoming. Please contact Sam Ladkin on [redacted] with any questions. Or visit the event on the ubiquitous facebook.

↑ Index

257. Mark Weiss
Boasting rights
Mon 22 Mar 2010

This from the March issue of Library Journal.

The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry.
ed. & tr. by Mark Weiss. U.S.: Univ. of California Pr. 2009. 624p. ISBN 978-0-520-25894-5. pap. $29.95. POETRY

Cuba’s poets have always found their place within the constructs of history, yet we remain naïve about these
The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry.
brilliant writers and the works that they have beautifully created, until now. From the depths of the Cuban psyche, editor and translator Weiss delicately gathers six decades of Cuban poetry in this bilingual anthology. This literary feat, an act of opposition to censorship, inevitably presents the works of poets who have had to fight for their independence. While many Cuban writers were forced into exile, their literature somehow flourished on the island and across the sea, becoming a force in the midst of war and communism. Despite ill-timed acts of bigotry and the crude editing imposed by the Cuban government, they prevailed, candidly sharing their messages at a time when homosexuality was outlawed and antirevolutionary opinions were suppressed. Represented within this book are poets from the mid-1900s to the present, such as Nicolás Guillén, Cintio Vitier, Nancy Morejón, and many others. This is a prized collection of Cuban poetry. Recommended for all libraries and bookstores.Rick Villalobos, Villa Park P.L., IL

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban
Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

"Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

258. amy king
Thinking about the Gurlesque today...
Mon 22 Mar 2010

So school me; I'm asking for it: http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/22/my-visceral-thought/

Best,

Amy

_____

HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

↑ Index

259. Lance Blomgen
Re: trouble posting
Mon 22 Mar 2010

Hi Poetics List Serve,

I receive your emails gladly, but am not sure how to actually post to your listserve. I sent this post, below, in last week and am wondering if I am doing something wrong.

any advice?

From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Lance Blomgren Website
Date: Fri, 19 Mar 2010 19:49:55 +0000

Hi There,

I have recently created a wordpress website documenting a number writing and text-based art projects.

http://acmetextworks.wordpress.com/

I would be happy and honoured if you took a look.

Thank you,

Lance Blomgren

Dawson City, Yukon.

Live connected with Messenger on your phone Learn more.

IM on the go with Messenger on your phone http://go.microsoft.com/?linkid=9712960

↑ Index

260. Maureen Robins
Re: Boasting rights
Mon 22 Mar 2010

Congratulations Mark.

Maureen Picard Robins
The Pressures of Teaching (Kaplan, June, 2010)

On Mon, Mar 22, 2010 at 4:46 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> This from the March issue of Library Journal.
>
> The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry.
> ed. & tr. by Mark Weiss. U.S.: Univ. of California Pr. 2009. 624p. ISBN 978-0-520-25894-5. pap. $29.95. POETRY
>
> Cuba's poets have always found their place within the constructs of history, yet we remain naïve about these
> The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry.
> brilliant writers and the works that they have beautifully created, until now. From the depths of the Cuban psyche, editor and translator Weiss delicately gathers six decades of Cuban poetry in this bilingual anthology. This literary feat, an act of opposition to censorship, inevitably presents the works of poets who have had to fight for their independence. While many Cuban writers were forced into exile, their literature somehow flourished on the island and across the sea, becoming a force in the midst of war and communism. Despite ill-timed acts of bigotry and the crude editing imposed by the Cuban government, they prevailed, candidly sharing their messages at a time when homosexuality was outlawed and antirevolutionary opinions were suppressed. Represented within this book are poets from the mid-1900s to the present, such as Nicolás Guillén, Cintio Vitier, Nancy Morejón, and many others. This is a prized collection of Cuban poetry. Recommended for all libraries and bookstores.Rick Villalobos, Villa Park P.L., IL
>
> Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
> http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland
>
> "Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively > broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

261. Alan Sondheim

Two Tunes: Well I was thinking of George Russell

Tue 23 Mar 2010

Well I was thinking of George Russell

Two Songs:

You Are My Sunshine (exactly a song)
You Are My Moonshine (not exactly a song)

http://www.alansondheim.org/urmysunshine.mp3 http://www.alansondheim.org/urmymoonshine.mp3

↑ Index

262. Francis Raven

A New Journal: The Short Movie Review: Please Submit!

Tue 23 Mar 2010

About The Short Movie Review (TSMR); Submissions

The Short Movie Review will investigate short movies that are freely available online from a variety of perspectives: Marxist, capitalist, poetic, Freudian, straight, gay, engendered, naive, know-it-all.

Email Submissions & Questions to: [redacted]
When submitting put the word ’submission’ in the subject.

I love short films. You can do so many things in them that in a longer film would be boring, too shocking, impossible to maintain, or way too random. They are like little windows into a world, a world where you may not actually want to live, but where it’s pretty cool to visit. Short movies give film makers an opportunity to explore a little nugget of an idea that might not be able to sustain a feature length film; sometimes they are the MacGuffin without the chase scene and other times they are the chase scene without main characters. They are a main idea that has exploded. They are experiments in living. There is an obvious parallel to short stories, but while much critical work has been devoted to short stories not much ink has been spilled over short films. We here at TSMR hope to remedy this dire situation.

In addition, we are living in the golden age of short films (and particularly movies that are freely available) due to the lower costs of production, the use of short films to lure audiences into bigger things or networks or pyramid schemes, and Youtube, Wholphin, and other websites specializing in short films.

The TSMR will be released quarterly, but will be updated as content arrives. Please submit reviews to TSMR. Guidelines: the movie (which should 40 minutes or less) must be available online for free. Please include a link to the film. Otherwise, go for it. Short and long reviews are fine by us. We'd love to see some poetry as reviews or drawings or diagrams or movies as reviews of short movies. Critical reviews assessing the genre as a whole will also be looked upon favorably. Be angry or submissive; positive or negative. Try not to be boring.

Email Submissions & Questions to: [redacted]

Francis Raven
2125 14th St. NW #332
Washington DC 20009
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://www.ravensaesthetica.com/

Some Stationary:
http://somestationary.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

263. Francis Raven

A New Journal: The Short Movie Review: Please Submit! WITH URL: http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/

Tue 23 Mar 2010

I completely forgot to include the URL in my announcement:
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/

About The Short Movie Review (TSMR); Submissions

The Short Movie Review will investigate short movies that are freely available online from a variety of perspectives: Marxist, capitalist, poetic, Freudian, straight, gay, engendered, naive, know-it-all.

Email Submissions & Questions to: [redacted]
When submitting put the word 'submission' in the subject.

I love short films. You can do so many things in them that in a longer film would be boring, too shocking, impossible to maintain, or way too random. They are like little windows into a world, a world where you may not actually want to live, but where it's pretty cool to visit. Short movies give film makers an opportunity to explore a little nugget of an idea that might not be able to sustain a feature length film; sometimes they are the MacGuffin without the chase scene and other times they are the chase scene without main characters. They are a main idea that has exploded. They are experiments in living. There is an obvious parallel to short stories, but while much critical work has been devoted to short stories not much ink has been spilled over short films. We here at TSMR hope to remedy this dire situation.

In addition, we are living in the golden age of short films (and particularly movies that are freely available) due to the lower costs of production, the use of short films to lure audiences into bigger things or networks or pyramid schemes, and Youtube, Wholphin, and other websites specializing in short films.

The TSMR will be released quarterly, but will be updated as content arrives. Please submit reviews to TSMR. Guidelines: the movie (which should 40 minutes or less) must be available online for free. Please include a link to the film. Otherwise, go for it. Short and long reviews are fine by us. We'd love to see some poetry as reviews or drawings or diagrams or movies as reviews of short movies. Critical reviews assessing the genre as a whole will also be looked upon favorably. Be angry or submissive; positive or negative. Try not to be boring.

Email Submissions & Questions to: [redacted]

http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/

--
Francis Raven
2125 14th St. NW #332
Washington DC 20009
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://www.ravensaesthetica.com/

Some Stationary:
http://somestationary.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

264. amy king

This Friday, March 26th @ 7 p.m. -- Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin & Brett Eugene Ralph!!!

Tue 23 Mar 2010

March Madness is a good kind of crazy: good to the last drop! Witness the miracle this Friday. We'll take care of those clouds for you.

Friday, March 26th @ 7 p.m -- Goodbye Blue Monday [http://www.goodbyeblue.com/wordpress/]

With:

Jessica Bozek, Kate Braid, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin & Brett Eugene Ralph!

Jessica Bozek is the author of The Bodyfeel Lexicon (Switchback Books) and several chapbooks. Recent poems appear in Action, Yes, Artifice, Fairy Tale Review, P-QUEUE, and Womb. Jessica runs Small Animal Project (smallanimalproject.com), a reading series and web-text experiment based in Cambridge, MA.

~

Kate Braid is a poet, essayist, biographer, and teacher. Braidâ€™s first book, Covering Rough Ground, was about her experience as a carpenter, and won the Pat Lowther Award for best book of poems by a Canadian woman. She is also the author of To This Cedar Fountain, Inward to the Bones: Georgia Oâ€™Keefeâ€™s Journey with Emily Carr, A Well-Mannered Storm: The Glenn Gould Poems, and a co-editor, Sandy Shreve, of In Fine Form, the first anthology of Canadian form poetry. A second book of poems about her experiences in construction, Turning Left to the Ladies, was published by Palimpsest in June 2009. She has also written three books of non-fiction and is currently working on a memoir of her fifteen years as a carpenter.

~

Melissa Broder is the author of WHEN YOU SAY ONE THING BUT MEAN YOUR MOTHER (Ampersand Books, February 2010). She is the curator of the Polestar Poetry Series and the Chief Editor of La Petite Zine. Broder received her BA from Tufts University and is currently in the MFA program at CCNY. She is the winner of the Jerome Lowell Dejur Award and the Stark Prize for Poetry. By day, she works as a literary publicist. Her poems have appeared in many journals, including: Opium, Shampoo, Conte and The Del Sol Review.

~

Jackie Clark is currently co-editor-in-chief for LIT magazine. She also curates Poets off Poetry at coldfrontmag.com, where poets write about music. Her chapbook Office Work is forthcoming from Greying Ghost Press. She lives in Jersey City.

~

Cate Marvinâ€™s first book, Worldâ€™s Tallest Disaster, was chosen by Robert Pinksy for the 2000 Kathryn A. Morton Prize and published by Sarabande Books in 2001. In 2002, she received the Kate Tufts Discovery Prize. Her poems have appeared in The New England Review, Poetry, The Kenyon Review, Fence, The Paris Review, The Cincinnati Review, Slate, Verse, Boston Review, and Ninth Letter. She is co-editor with poet Michael Dumanis of the anthology Legitimate Dangers: American Poets of the New Century (Sarabande Books, 2006). Her second book of poems, Fragment of the Head of a Queen, was published by Sarabande in August 2007. A recent Whiting Award recipient and 2007 NYFA Gregory Millard Fellow, she teaches poetry writing in Lesley Universityâ€™s Low-Residency M.F.A. Program and is an associate professor in creative writing at the College of Staten Island, City University of New York.

~

Brett Eugene Ralph spent the better part of his youth in Louisville, Kentucky, playing football and singing in punk rock bands. His work has appeared in journals such as Conduit, Mudfish, Willow Springs, and The American Poetry Review; it has been anthologized in The McSweeneyâ€™s Book of Poets Picking Poets and The Stiffest of the Corpse: An Exquisite Corpse Reader. His first full-length collection, Black Sabbatical, was published by Sarabande Books in 2009. Brett has taught at the University of Massachusetts, Missouri State University, and the Central Institute of Buddhist Studies in the Himalayas of northern India. Currently, he lives in Empire, Kentucky, and teaches at Hopkinsville Community College. His country rock ensemble, Brett Eugene Ralphâ€™s Kentucky Chrome Revue, can be heard in seedy dives throughout the South.

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
http://www.goodbyeblue.com/wordpress/

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

~
Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

———

THE GURLESQUE - NOT ENOUGH GRRRL?

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/22/my-visceral-thought/

↑ Index

265. steve russell

Rothenburg/Chirot/Outsider poetics/The Bourgeoisie? The Bohemian?

Tue 23 Mar 2010

Rothenburg's evolving outsider poetics seems almost t
Thank you, Dave:

Rothenburg's evolving outsider poetics seems almost too perfect (poetry, you know, it's an elitist thing, right?). Or does poetry belong to the people? We need a death & dying poetics, a domestic bliss poetics, a poetics that can somehow reach the poor. Is that possible? We've had instructors inside ofÂ the penitentiary, anthologies that focused on the poetry of prisoners. Jimmy Santiago Baca was once illiterate butÂ learned how to read and write while incarcerated. Maybe Rothenburg can look in that direction. It should be possible to appeal to the educated reader without including the standard list of mainstream poets and regardless the particular school of poetics. According to Jorie Graham, Poetry, the thing itself, is an outside art form. But Graham is refering to the marketplace. In "Best American Poetry," 1990, she writes:

Â Â What is especially interesting aboutÂ poetry's current situation is that it is pratically alone, among the art forms being practiced, in still viewing the artist as essentially an outsider to the marketplace. Â

In addition, consider: Is it still possible to shock the bourgeoisie with little more than the naked word? What if Mom & Dad had dinner with a poet, someone nice, not a beaten down bohemian. What if Mom & Dad had dinner with ME or Steve Dalichinsky (assuming that Steve isn't too shocking)? A presentable, well mannered poet such as myself could read some nice poetry, a little Robert Bly, some Ted Kooser, but Mom & Dad would also have to sit still and hear the voices of Baraka, Spicer, Plath, Ginsberg, the Buk, or OOga-Booga (a Seidel book). Dave, didn't you critique Bernstein for asking other poets to be other than direct when they argued for a fair deal for Palestine? Again, SeidelÂ refers to Â the West as "Oilchoholics," that "fist-fucking anus swallowing a fist." He adds, " you're wonderingÂ why I talk this way, so daintily." Good ole Sid, the ultimate man of leisure, a rich guy who gets IT.

Didn't Freud say something about poetics envy?Â

Perhaps an outsider (an anti-bohemian/anti-bourgeoisie) is simply the poet left out in the rain without an umbrella, a poet waiting for someone to invite his or her soaking words inside, into the warmth.

Â Again, I thank you, Dave for your thought provoking words, your insight, all that wisdom --

Â ... it never rains in hell, but every umbrella down here is open.

Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â

When Gertrude Stein, so the story goes, was on her dying bed--she looked up at whoever was present--and said--"What is the answer?"--Then--laughing--she "answered" by saying--"What is the question?"

I think the nature of this project, or the way i understand it and work with it, is to keep asking questions--interesting & useful questions that as they emerge lead to further question, findings, researches and the development of new methods, techniques, new conceptions, as well as the re-finding of older examples from around the world which themselves ask questions which are just as alive today as when first asked--

Questioning is something much absent in discussions of any kind today--what is really wanted, for the most part, are examples, descriptions, categories, jargons, and ways to pigeon hole a poet or form of poetry.Â This allows for the creation of new anthologies, new job descriptions for candidates for such and such a position, opens much needed vacancies in the employment world of today--To have the answers means also that a sense of "order" is created, in order to fix with in the orders hierarchies, steps on the career path, ways to pad the resume and so forth.Â Answers also give one the sense that due to Order being established, it must be maintained and various "security measures taken,â€ in order to protect the boundaries and members of such and such a grouping, such and such a "movement"--to the point where orders are in fact necessary to keep order.Â That is, a process of arranging a certain status quo which must be kept by following the orders of the day vis a vis such and such an Authority, Group and etc--

When the announcement of the Anthology was first made, i had only questions--and was amazed to find that they were invited to appear at the Poets and Poetics mini-anthology in the making of the Outsider Poetry and Poets--

since i can't give you an answer per se--here are the questions again, with the link where to find them.

hopefully they may be of interest and use--not in answering, but in finding ever more questions to ask--

Rather than the delineating of boundaries "in order" to demonstrate what are the boundaries of Outsider Poetry,--one finds bridges, links, trains of associations--with which to further investigate and think on these questions re the Outsider Poetry--

Not Barriers--Bridges--Not Walls--but Windows--

Here is the response to the announcement--i hope it's useful & interesting--

http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2009/09/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html

> Date: Sat, 13 Mar 2010 14:38:52 +0530
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Chirot at Jerome Rothenberg's Poets & Poetics blog
> To: [redacted].

↑ Index

266. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Thinking about the Gurlesque today...
Tue 23 Mar 2010

---

please forgive the straight white maleness of my thinking on this, but one of the things that I've noticed about the burlesque revival that this sort of poetry seems to fit into is that it is not so much about the experience of desire, but about being the object of desire and specifically of male desire. Which, strictly speakang, seems like it's a separate issue from straight vs. queer, which is the area of human experience defined by the experience of desire as opposed to being desired. to my thinking, then, what's therefore missing from a queer perspective in the burlesque revival is the subjugation of lesbian sexuality as a performance for a male audience.

the riot grrl movement, as i remember it, was more about a direct response to the violence inherent in male sexual desire and the various coping strategies for that. of course, i was pretty young at the time, and a lot of my experience of it was probably colored by both the reaction to Mia Zapata's rape and murder and the song 7 year bitch did about it which for a couple of my teenage summers was pretty ubiquitous, and also the fact that it was our scene unfortunately that pushed the whole riot grrl thing out of the underground with Hole's mainstream success. but that said, where burlesque revival stuff seems largely about enjoying being desired separate from one's own desire, the riot grrl position as I saw it was about the inseparability of desire and being desired and the affront to one's humanity that dealing with the sensuality of female bodies in isolation from the female libido is.

On Mar 22, 2010, at 3:46 PM, amy king wrote:

> So school me; I'm asking for it: http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/22/my-visceral-thought/
>
> Best,
>
> Amy
>
> _____

> HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:
>
> http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

↑ Index

267. Gerald Schwartz
25 questions, #4...
Tue 23 Mar 2010

Question # 4:

Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

↑ Index

268. amy king
More on Ai from the Poetry Foundation
Tue 23 Mar 2010

Via Tisa Bryant:

http://www.poetryfoundation.org/archive/poet.html?id€637

Still no major coverage but something...

Best,

Amy

_____

HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

THE GURLESQUE - NOT ENOUGH GRRRL?

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/22/my-visceral-thought/

↑ Index

269. Laura Wetherington
textsound's special issue featuring Jon Cotner and Andy Fitch
Tue 23 Mar 2010

March marks textsound's first feature issue. We're honored to share with you Jon Cotner and Andy Fitch's Improvisations 2006-2010.

Jon Cotner and Andy Fitch are the authors of *Ten Walks/Two Talks<http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org/catalog/browse/item/?pubID=63> * (Ugly Duckling Presse, 2010). Cotner and Fitch have performed their dialogic improvisations across the United States, as well as in Toronto and Berlin. Cotner lives in New York City. Fitch is an assistant professor in the University of Wyoming's MFA Program.

Have a listen at www.textsound.org.
**

↑ Index

270. CA Conrad
WE ARE 7
Tue 23 Mar 2010

Over a 7 year period the human body replaces all of its cells until -- 7 years later -- the body is completely new, a whole new body, a body which actually didn't exist 7 years ago. 7 years ago today we were not here as we are today. 7 years ago today when America invaded the sovereign nation of Iraq. Over a million people have been killed. Their bodies didn't make it here with us. So many people I'm never going to meet or see or know. I'm very sad today thinking about my new body, my luxury of a new body of cells over the past 7 years of war, 7 years of terrorizing people. This morning I went to the Kelly Writers House to hear Susan Howe give one of the finest Q&A's I've ever heard. And I almost asked her at the Q&A, "Susan, in your book THE EUROPE OF TRUSTS you write, 'Malice dominates the history of Power and Progress.' How do you feel about us stepping out of history today with today being the anniversary of the American invasion of Iraq?" But I didn't ask her that. She seemed so happy sitting there, and life is short, and here's this amazing elderly genius poet, and I thought, "Don't ask her that." So I didn't ask her that. Instead I asked her about her visit to Wallace Stevens's house, and how she had said that she couldn't believe THOSE poems came from THAT house, and I wanted her talk about HER poems being written where she writes them. Please tell us about the aura of space, is what I meant to say.

There's so much responsibility that goes into being a citizen, but somehow we have had the trouble of the responsibility removed from us. And it's the darkest thing, that removal. I'm not saying THAT I KNOW and UNDERSTAND the new bodies around me in the anniversary of America bringing UNIMAGINABLE suffering and agony to Iraq. I'm not saying THAT I KNOW but I do know some of the bodies in my proximity and how they fair. A week ago my new next door neighbor left the apartment with his girlfriend and dog, and said, literally said, "Well we don't have cable installed yet, so we're going to the park." He seemed sad about going to the park. The girlfriend said, "Yeah, the cable man didn't show, what a drag." The dog was the only one who seemed happy. And then the cable man came, and now, every single day, all day long I hear the television whenever I walk by their door. Canned laughter is what I hear sometimes. They're watching sitcoms or something and they're not laughing, just the canned laughter. And the dog is so annoyed that the cable man came, I'm sure of it. I'll always remember them leaving to go to the park, this very healthy young couple with their dog because they couldn't watch the television.

No, I'm not saying I understand what everyone's going through. Sometimes people watch a lot of television because they're depressed. But I'm not sure. And in Philadelphia we've been having Twitter Mobs (or some call them Flash Mobs), and part of me wants to say that I identify with these kids, today, on the anniversary of the American invasion of Iraq. Hundreds and hundreds of them meet up, and then each time something breaks loose and they begin beating on people, wrecking things, hundreds of them. And I want to say that I understand their anger. But I don't. I'm angry. I'm very angry. Every single day I'm angry. I'm living in a country that cares more about bombing people of color overseas and stealing their resources than putting kids through college. And the ad campaigns to make us FEEL OKAY like saying "MARCH IS AMERICAN RED CROSS MONTH" because WE'RE SUCH GOOD PEOPLE! We're such good people, here, in America, today, on the anniversary of bombing where there are many people who still hear the bombs in the middle of the night, and sometimes it's a dream, and sometimes it's not, because it's still a war, it's still not entirely a dream. But I'M ANGRY AT THESE KIDS for scaring me on the bus the other day when I found myself in the middle of a Twitter Mob WHILE ON THE BUS and the kids banged their fists on the sides of the bus as we drove down the street through the chaos. And Frank Sherlock called me to see if I made it home safely, he's a very good friend. I want to be SO ANGRY at these kids because I would never want to hurt anyone, just anyone, just any stranger. But yet we're living in a country which does that. We drop bombs on people's houses. And the animals in the zoos. The zoo of Baghdad and the apartments, and, and, and, we have new bodies this year.

There's never going to be a moment in this lifetime for us, THOSE OF US ALIVE NOW, IN AMERICA, PAYING TAXES, WHICH PURCHASE WAR, we will never be able to apologize enough to the people of Iraq, and we knew it. We knew it.

We all kept saying we knew it, we knew that there were no WMD's, we knew it, everyone knew it. We kept telling one another days before the invasion, "I THINK THEY'RE LYING DON'T YOU THINK THEY'RE LYING YEAH I THINK SO TOO YEAH ME TOO THEY'RE LYING WE KNOW THEY'RE LYING EVERYONE KNOWS IT!" But it happened anyway, the bombing. The occupation. And now the genocide of HUNDREDS of gay man in Iraq as a direct result of the invasion and occupation, we are now responsible for this new genocide. Gay men tortured and murdered in Iraq. A year of genocide. A year at the end of seven years of American occupation. And we distract ourselves with LISTENING about the health care reform. Health care reform? What about the health of EVERYONE in Iraq? What about them? But we get to feel good. And it's AMERICAN RED CROSS MONTH. And I'm not being mean, but that's fucked up to be saying MARCH IS AMERICAN RED CROSS MONTH when America brings more need for bandages than any other country on the face of the planet right now, how do we do it? How do we get to feel this way? How? I'm so sad today. I'm not being mean, I'm sad. I'm an American citizen who has believed lies and now I know I will never vote Democrat again. Ever. There's too much responsibility behind giving killers your time and your vote. It costs so much. I feel that costs today. I'm sad.

CAConrad

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

271. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: Michael, who I never knew
Tue 23 Mar 2010

Dear Alan:

Thank you so much for your beaitufl and moving piece. I know the book well--a classic-- what you write for myself is one of the examples of the Found, which is what my own work is directly working with always- the Found, as you note--untraceable often, and for that very reason, so freed of accrued and already-set associations wide open to your own--to on'e s own, which are created in the direct, touched and held contact, with the materials-- re your depression and death-- i have been clinically dead 4 times, another time experienced following a truck accident in which my spine was shattered the first time, an "Near Death Experience," though at the time, such a subject was not very much spoken of--right now i am slated for a hip surgery next month, to be followed by yet another broken back surgery--the doctors always say they have no idea how i am alive let alone able to walk at all-- i suffered many years and stil have the experience of a near overwhelming voice inside me directing me to kil myself accompanied by various hallucinatory visions- five members my immediate family killed themselves in the last thirty years--and sevral others attempted-- i carry a continual darkness some days which obliterates the brightest sun light and burns like flames through the darkest nights- all of these things have made me love life all the more--each day no matter what i more thankful than i can ever express to be alive in my experience, there is never a dull moment! to sit and see the passageoflight beam across a floor, among the dust motes and smoke swirls, with the sounds inside or from outside coming in-- is of infinite variety and interest and spurs a million thoughts dreams reveries memories ideas for works and --a sense of being in what i call deep time-- think how much has occurred with you just be finding this book!-- every instant such a plenitude it overflows and yet is also succeeded buy a new instant which may be uncannily familiar--as, with the book, your own forgotten memories voluntary and involuntarily arise and are seen heard smelled felt experienced thought of in ways never to have happened to you before-- i realize this al sounds perhaps trite, cliched, outworn as the hand of a dead man one plays card with and even deals the "dead man's card " to--an event of my own "real life" which has been transposed into one of my "stories" (in an issue of Otolith--) i apologize as the events themselves are not trite--the fault is with my words in essaying the expression-- i often think that one does not "die" completely as so much of others lives inside oneself--by these i mean the presence of the ancestors for me is very powerful--and the thought of al those generations come--already my own children having children while my youngest is barely older than the grandchild is- since i was very young i had a very powerful sense of the ancestors--i have no idea why and it seems --one of those powerful events within one like a geologic sense of being- sometimes down by the Lake i can feel the ancestors stirring and when i go out into the woods i hear them moving about-- my mom recently was in Quebec City to visit my brother who lives there--and they rented a car and drove far north to the rezervation where our family originally came from, the area around there-- who knows how many tens of thousands of years they have been in this continent, in that part of the world--and, gradually through time, expanded al the way est over 1,800 miles in Canada and in areas of northen minnesota and wisconsin-- most of them were genocide--and the intermarried french-indians ethnically cleansed, driven into the usa--my grandfather was the first of his family since 1650 to be born outside of quebec, and the first of two generations not to intermarry with Indians--i took up the thread and blood myself and married a Mohawk genocided--at one point by infected blankets given them when loaded onto freight trains being shipped in to the night never to return, yet i feel they never left, they wil always remain- so itia great honor to feel part of this continuous group of persons, as strange to oneself as oneself is and also in other ways uncannily familiar- in this sense, death is only apart of an ongoing life that one fears to end, to be final, yet which is not-- i dont want to "die" anymore than yourself-- yet--in one's work and in so many other ways as with the book you found, one lives on--

as some "find" at another time for a person at once strange and familiar-- thank you again for the beauty of your letter-and always, for your work and example--
david-bc

> Date: Mon, 22 Mar 2010 14:11:49 -0400
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Michael, who I never knew
> To: [redacted]
>
> Dear Alan,
>
> This is exactly how knowledge of certain kind, poetry, someone's vision gets translated, through happenstance, distraction partial destruction and occasional, precious momentary illuminations. Thank you for this wonderful passage. More real than desperate attempts to institutionalize hierarchies.
>
> All knowledge is built on fragments of other knowledge.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Mon, Mar 22, 2010 at 4:36 AM, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Michael, who I never knew
>
> Michael Benedikt and George E. Wellwarth edited Modern French Theatre: The Avant-Garde, Dada, and Surrealism. I recently bought a used copy of the book, first edition. It might have been Benedikt's first book. There's an author's signature on the title page, and an inscription inside the front cover:
>
> for Mother dear
>
> and F.F.
>
> with thanks for the right genes,
>
> Michael

> Michael Benedikt was born in 1935 and died in 2007. I didn't know him. There is something uncanny about the inscription. Michael Benedikt lived 72 years. I think perhaps he gave this to his mother with a sense of pride; he was 29. I think to myself: He gave this book to his mother and F.F., perhaps a father. His mother and perhaps F.F. died, and Michael inherited. It would have been sad for the book to be returned to him, after a temporary journey of pride and happiness. And then Michael died and someone, perhaps a wife or other relative, sold or gave away some of his books, perhaps all of them, and this was one of them. And so Modern French Theater ends up in Adam Tobin's book-store, coming from somewhere, somewhere unknown, perhaps untraceable, and I am reading and learning a great deal, revisiting some old friends, playwrights within. I fear death, death dominates me; I am constantly fighting off depression as best I can. As we run out of money, depression and stress increase. And I think: soon this book will be passed on, and I am less than a silent witness to its passing. So perhaps this is the singing of a solitary and mournful note, so that its passing will be remembered. And perhaps this will be forgotten as well.

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_3

↑ Index

272. Ryan Daley

Re: A New Journal: The Short Movie Review: Please Submit! WITH URL: http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/

Tue 23 Mar 2010

Francis,

I'm interested in writing reviews of short films. Are there any online viewing resources that you particularly favor and recommend?

Best,

Ryan

On Tue, Mar 23, 2010 at 6:42 AM, Francis Raven <[redacted]>wrote:

> I completely forgot to include the URL in my announcement: http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
> http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/

About The Short Movie Review (TSMR); Submissions

The Short Movie Review will investigate short movies that are freely available online from a variety of perspectives: Marxist, capitalist, poetic, Freudian, straight, gay, engendered, naive, know-it-all.

Email Submissions & Questions to: [redacted]
When submitting put the word 'submission' in the subject.

I love short films. You can do so many things in them that in a longer film would be boring, too shocking, impossible to maintain, or way too random. They are like little windows into a world, a world where you may not actually want to live, but where it's pretty cool to visit. Short movies give film makers an opportunity to explore a little nugget of an idea that might not be able to sustain a feature length film; sometimes they are the MacGuffin without the chase scene and other times they are the chase scene without main characters. They are a main idea that has exploded. They are experiments in living. There is an obvious parallel to short stories, but while much critical work has been devoted to short stories not much ink has been spilled over short films. We here at TSMR hope to remedy this dire situation.

In addition, we are living in the golden age of short films (and particularly movies that are freely available) due to the lower costs of production, the use of short films to lure audiences into bigger things or networks or pyramid schemes, and Youtube, Wholphin, and other websites specializing in short films.

The TSMR will be released quarterly, but will be updated as content arrives. Please submit reviews to TSMR. Guidelines: the movie (which should 40 minutes or less) must be available online for free. Please include a link to the film. Otherwise, go for it. Short and long reviews are fine by us. We'd love to see some poetry as reviews or drawings or diagrams or movies as reviews of short movies. Critical reviews assessing the genre as a whole will also be looked upon favorably. Be angry or submissive; positive or negative. Try not to be boring.

Email Submissions & Questions to: [redacted]

http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/
http://theshortmoviereview.wordpress.com/

> --
> Francis Raven
> 2125 14th St. NW #332
> Washington DC 20009
> [redacted]
> http://www.ravensaesthetica.com/
>
> Some Stationary:
> http://somestationary.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

273. Halvard Johnson
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Wed 24 Mar 2010

Write for the second, since the second includes the first. But I'd say "anyone" who reads it.

Hal

follow this link to The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye, my latest collection --

http://www.scribd.com/people/documents/14481250-chalk-editions

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Tue, Mar 23, 2010 at 2:26 PM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>wrote:

> Question # 4:
>
> Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who > read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

↑ Index

274. Alan Sondheim
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Wed 24 Mar 2010

I don't understand the question; why is there a "should" here? Different people write for different reasons. I don't think there's much more to say...

- Alan

On Tue, 23 Mar 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:

> Question # 4:
>
> Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

==
email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
webpage http://www.alansondheim.org sondheimat gmail.com, panix.com
==

↑ Index

275. John Cleary
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Wed 24 Mar 2010

This poet writes for himself. Does truth require an audience? - John

On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 10:22 AM, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:

> I don't understand the question; why is there a "should" here? Different people write for different reasons. I don't think there's much more to say...
>
> - Alan
>
> On Tue, 23 Mar 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:
>
> Question # 4:
>
> Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who > read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

> ==
> email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
> webpage http://www.alansondheim.org sondheimat gmail.com, panix.com
> ==

↑ Index

276. David Chirot
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Wed 24 Mar 2010

Like Alan, i don't understand the "should"--other than in such "extenuating circumstances" as in cases of the coerced, of desperation, of fear or perhaps the obscurely shifted desire to "do the right thing" in some inwardly confused sense of "moral duty" or "moral suasion."

Or--in the cases of propaganda and advertising.

A Ruyssian artist writes that language is a fascism not becuase it silences or censros, but because it forces one to speak.

Such would be the case of the "should" perhaps--

A writer writes for those who read, who in turn may read for those who do not read.

A writer writes--for whom? Oneself and other strangers?

I've made poems written for stones, tree, the air, a ray of light--without even the idea of a person involved--

In this sense one may write for those "illiterates" or "inanimates" who do not read yet understand and know the Unwritten--

"The hills know but do not tell" as Emily Dickinson writes-- On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 7:22 AM, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:

> I don't understand the question; why is there a "should" here? Different people write for different reasons. I don't think there's much more to say...
>
> - Alan

> On Tue, 23 Mar 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:
>
> Question # 4:
>
> Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who > read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?
>
> ==
> email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
> webpage http://www.alansondheim.org sondheimat gmail.com, panix.com
> ==

↑ Index

277. Catherine Daly

Re: Rothenburg/Chirot/Outsider poetics/The Bourgeoisie? The Bohemian?

Wed 24 Mar 2010

---

there was a life magazine article about the rent-a-beatnik thing, wasn't there?

I like the comments on the Rothenberg blog about cakes from flowershops

Add zing to the special occasions of your acquaintances in Pune by sending our fantastic flowers and tasty cakes. Our expert team affords excellent customer service support for the delivery of our flowers and cakes to Pune. Our supreme delivery networks all over Pune, Same day delivery option to Pune and punctual delivery of flowers and cakes to Pune have helped us to be more proficient. Moreover sending flowers and cakes to Pune online with us is 100% secured.

there are sandwiches on the flowershop site too

The comments are in response to Christine Wertheim's post, "Litteral Poetics" which talks about tongues...

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

278. Ruth Lepson
Re: Michael, who I never knew
Wed 24 Mar 2010

Thank you to all three for your bravery, strength, and honesty.

On 3/23/10 6:21 PM, "David-Baptiste Chirot" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear Alan:
>
> Thank you so much for your beaitufl and moving piece.
> I know the book well--a classic-- > what you write for myself is one of the examples of the Found, which is what > my own work is directly working with always- > the Found, as you note--untraceable often, and for that very reason, so freed > of accrued and already-set associations wide open to your own--to on'e s own, > which are created in the direct, touched and held contact, with the > materials-- > re your depression and death-- > i have been clinically dead 4 times, another time experienced following a > truck accident in which my spine was shattered the first time, an "Near Death > Experience," though at the time, such a subject was not very much spoken of-- > right now i am slated for a hip surgery next month, to be followed by yet > another broken back surgery--the doctors always say they have no idea how i am > alive let alone able to walk at all-- > i suffered many years and stil have the experience of a near overwhelming > voice inside me directing me to kil myself accompanied by various > hallucinatory visions- > five members my immediate family killed themselves in the last thirty > years--and sevral others attempted-- > i carry a continual darkness some days which obliterates the brightest sun > light and burns like flames through the darkest nights- > all of these things have made me love life all the more--each day no matter > what i more thankful than i can ever express to be alive > in my experience, there is never a dull moment! to sit and see the > passageoflight beam across a floor, among the dust motes and smoke swirls, > with the sounds inside or from outside coming in-- > is of infinite variety and interest and spurs a million thoughts dreams > reveries memories ideas for works and --a sense of being in what i call deep > time-- > think how much has occurred with you just be finding this book!-- > every instant such a plenitude it overflows and yet is also succeeded buy a > new instant which may be uncannily familiar--as, with the book, your own > forgotten memories voluntary and involuntarily arise and are seen heard > smelled felt experienced thought of in ways never to have happened to you > before-- > i realize this al sounds perhaps trite, cliched, outworn as the hand of a dead > man one plays card with and even deals the "dead man's card " to--an event of > my own "real life" which has been transposed into one of my "stories" (in an issue of Otolith--)

i apologize as the events themselves are not trite--the fault is with my words in essaying the expression-- i often think that one does not "die" completely as so much of others lives inside oneself--by these i mean the presence of the ancestors for me is very powerful--and the thought of al those generations come--already my own children having children while my youngest is barely older than the grandchild is-since i was very young i had a very powerful sense of the ancestors--i have no idea why and it seems --one of those powerful events within one like a geologic sense of being-sometimes down by the Lake i can feel the ancestors stirring and when i go out into the woods i hear them moving about-- my mom recently was in Quebec City to visit my brother who lives there--and they rented a car and drove far north to the rezervation where our family originally came from, the area around there-- who knows how many tens of thousands of years they have been in this continent, in that part of the world--and, gradually through time, expanded al the way est over 1,800 miles in Canada and in areas of northen minnesota and wisconsin-- most of them were genocide--and the intermarried french-indians ethnically cleansed, driven into the usa--my grandfather was the first of his family since 1650 to be born outside of quebec, and the first of two generations not to intermarry with Indians--i took up the thread and blood myself and married a Mohawk genocided--at one point by infected blankets given them when loaded onto freight trains being shipped in to the night never to return, yet i feel they never left, they wil always remain-so itia great honor to feel part of this continuous group of persons, as strange to oneself as oneself is and also in other ways uncannily familiar-in this sense, death is only apart of an ongoing life that one fears to end, to be final, yet which is not-- i dont want to "die" anymore than yourself-- yet--in one's work and in so many other ways as with the book you found, one lives on--

as some "find" at another time for a person at once strange and familiar-- thank you again for the beauty of your letter-
and always, for your work and example--
david-bc

Date: Mon, 22 Mar 2010 14:11:49 -0400
From: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Michael, who I never knew
To: [redacted]

Dear Alan,

This is exactly how knowledge of certain kind, poetry, someone's vision gets translated, through happenstance, distraction partial destruction and occasional, precious momentary illuminations. Thank you for this wonderful passage. More real than desperate attempts to institutionalize hierarchies.

All knowledge is built on fragments of other knowledge.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Mar 22, 2010 at 4:36 AM, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:

Michael, who I never knew

Michael Benedikt and George E. Wellwarth edited Modern French Theatre: The Avant-Garde, Dada, and Surrealism. I recently bought a used copy of the book, first edition. It might have been Benedikt's first book. There's an author's signature on the title page, and an inscription inside the front cover:

for Mother dear

and F.F.

with thanks for the right genes,

Michael

Michael Benedikt was born in 1935 and died in 2007. I didn't know him. There is something uncanny about the inscription. Michael Benedikt lived 72 years. I think perhaps he gave this to his mother with a sense of pride; he was 29. I think to myself: He gave this book to his mother and F.F., perhaps a father. His mother and perhaps F.F. died, and Michael inherited. It would have been sad for the book to be returned to him, after a temporary journey of pride and happiness. And then Michael died and someone, perhaps a wife or other relative, sold or gave away some of his books, perhaps all of them, and this was one of them. And so Modern French Theater ends up in Adam Tobin's book-store, coming from somewhere, somewhere unknown, perhaps untraceable, and I am reading and learning a great deal, revisiting some old friends, playwrights within. I fear death, death dominates me; I am constantly fighting off depression as best I can. As we run out of money, depression and stress increase. And I think: soon > this book will be passed on, and I am less than a silent witness to its passing. So perhaps this is the singing of a solitary and mournful note, so that its passing will be remembered. And perhaps this will be forgotten as well.

>
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_3

↑ Index

279. Jon Cotner
textsound's new issue: "Improvisations 2006-2010"
Wed 24 Mar 2010

textsound's editors have launched the new issue. It's called "Improvisations 2006-2010," and it features 8+ hours of solo and collaborative pieces by me and Andy Fitch. Here's a link:

http://textsound.org/

↑ Index

280. George Bowering
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Wed 24 Mar 2010

I am just here to say that Gerald's questions
are really good ones.

gb

On Mar 24, 2010, at 7:08 AM, Halvard Johnson wrote:

> Write for the second, since the second includes the first.
> But I'd say "anyone" who reads it.
>
> Hal
>
> follow this link to The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye, my latest collection --
>
> http://www.scribd.com/people/documents/14481250-chalk-editions
>
> Halvard Johnson

> ==========
> [redacted]
> http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
> http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
> http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
> http://www.hamiltonstone.org
>
> On Tue, Mar 23, 2010 at 2:26 PM, Gerald Schwartz
> <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> Question # 4:
>
> Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for > other poets
> who
> read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?
>
> guidelines
>
> welcome.html

George Harry Bowering
Younger than W.P. Kinsella

↑ Index

281. Halvard Johnson
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Wed 24 Mar 2010

But are you younger than springtime?

Hal

follow this link to The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye, my latest collection --

http://www.scribd.com/people/documents/14481250-chalk-editions

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 2:26 PM, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

I am just here to say that Gerald's questions
are really good ones.

gb

On Mar 24, 2010, at 7:08 AM, Halvard Johnson wrote:

Write for the second, since the second includes the first.
But I'd say "anyone" who reads it.

Hal

follow this link to The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye, my latest collection --

http://www.scribd.com/people/documents/14481250-chalk-editions

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Tue, Mar 23, 2010 at 2:26 PM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]
wrote:

Question # 4:

Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

George Harry Bowering

Younger than W.P. Kinsella

↑ Index

282. Allan Revich
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Wed 24 Mar 2010

Yes.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Gerald Schwartz
Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 2:26 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: 25 questions, #4...

Question # 4:

Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets
who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

↑ Index

283. David Seaman
Re: Would you buy art? A poem?
Wed 24 Mar 2010

The poem is free. You pay to have it delivered.

David

David W. Seaman, Ph.D.
http://personal.georgiasouthern.edu/~dseaman/Welcome.html

Follow my Twitter poetry at dseaman40

YouTube video of my Venice Biennale poem:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JQ5bOuJBN_k

On Monday, March 15, 2010, at 02:04PM, "Maria Damon" <[redacted]> wrote:
>i sometimes pay street people $1 for a poem if they have a sign offering >that.
>i was going to pay Bernadette Mayer for a poem for a conference a few >years ago (she had a standing offer out for topical poems for pay) but i >didn't get it together.
>in 1977 i paid $2 for Allen Ginsberg to write a haiku for me for a >Naropa benefit. I wish i could find that haiku now. Because i was >standing with my friend Julia Sagebien, whom he knew, i know the phrase
>"rosy dyke" was in it.
>

>amy king wrote:
>> Would you pay for a poem? Possible? Worth it? What's art worth? Is poetry art? Is capitalism art? Is there a support-artists culture?
>>
>> Here - http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/15/paid-for-poem/
>>
>> Thanks,
>>
>> Amy
>>
>> _____
>>
>>
>> HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:
>>
>> http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>
>

↑ Index

284. steve dalachinsky

Re: Rothenburg/Chirot/Outsider poetics/The Bourgeoisie? The Bohemian?

Thu 25 Mar 2010

---

yes ted joans a dear friend and "outsider" poet did rent-a beatnik in late 50's early 60's also the fanmous rent parties as well now maybe rent-a-nudnik or a laureate or a academic

On Wed, 24 Mar 2010 09:08:32 -0700 Catherine Daly <[redacted]> writes:
> there was a life magazine article about the rent-a-beatnik thing, > wasn't there?
>
> I like the comments on the Rothenberg blog about cakes from > flowershops
>

> Add zing to the special occasions of your acquaintances in Pune by > sending our fantastic flowers and tasty cakes. Our expert team > affords > excellent customer service support for the delivery of our flowers
> and > cakes to Pune. Our supreme delivery networks all over Pune, Same > day > delivery option to Pune and punctual delivery of flowers and cakes
> to > Pune have helped us to be more proficient. Moreover sending flowers > and cakes to Pune online with us is 100% secured.
>
> there are sandwiches on the flowershop site too
>
> The comments are in response to Christine Wertheim's post,
> "Litteral
> Poetics" which talks about tongues...
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
>
>

↑ Index

285. steve dalachinsky
Re: WE ARE 7
Thu 25 Mar 2010

---

boy do i wish after eaah 7 years my body feels completely OLD

On Tue, 23 Mar 2010 14:53:17 -0400 CA Conrad <[redacted]>
writes:
> Over a 7 year period the human body replaces all of its cells until
> --
> 7 years later -- the body is completely new, a whole new body, a > body > which actually didn't exist 7 years ago. 7 years ago today we were > not here as we are today. 7 years ago today when America invaded
> the > sovereign nation of Iraq. Over a million people have been killed.

> Their bodies didn't make it here with us. So many people I'm never > going to meet or see or know. I'm very sad today thinking about my > new body, my luxury of a new body of cells over the past 7 years of > war, 7 years of terrorizing people. This morning I went to the > Kelly > Writers House to hear Susan Howe give one of the finest Q&A's I've > ever heard. And I almost asked her at the Q&A, "Susan, in your
> book
> THE EUROPE OF TRUSTS you write, 'Malice dominates the history of > Power > and Progress.' How do you feel about us stepping out of history > today > with today being the anniversary of the American invasion of Iraq?"
> But I didn't ask her that. She seemed so happy sitting there, and > life is short, and here's this amazing elderly genius poet, and I > thought, "Don't ask her that." So I didn't ask her that. Instead
> I > asked her about her visit to Wallace Stevens's house, and how she > had > said that she couldn't believe THOSE poems came from THAT house, and > I > wanted her talk about HER poems being written where she writes > them.
> Please tell us about the aura of space, is what I meant to say.
>
> There's so much responsibility that goes into being a citizen, but > somehow we have had the trouble of the responsibility removed from > us.
> And it's the darkest thing, that removal. I'm not saying THAT I > KNOW
> and UNDERSTAND the new bodies around me in the anniversary of > America
> bringing UNIMAGINABLE suffering and agony to Iraq. I'm not saying > I KNOW but I do know some of the bodies in my proximity and how > they fair. A week ago my new next door neighbor left the apartment > with his girlfriend and dog, and said, literally said, "Well we > don't > have cable installed yet, so we're going to the park." He seemed > sad > about going to the park. The girlfriend said, "Yeah, the cable man > didn't show, what a drag." The dog was the only one who seemed > happy.

> And then the cable man came, and now, every single day, all day > long
> I hear the television whenever I walk by their door. Canned > laughter > is what I hear sometimes. They're watching sitcoms or something
> and > they're not laughing, just the canned laughter. And the dog is so > annoyed that the cable man came, I'm sure of it. I'll always > remember > them leaving to go to the park, this very healthy young couple with > their dog because they couldn't watch the television.
>
> No, I'm not saying I understand what everyone's going through.
> Sometimes people watch a lot of television because they're > depressed.
> But I'm not sure. And in Philadelphia we've been having Twitter
> Mobs
> (or some call them Flash Mobs), and part of me wants to say that I > identify with these kids, today, on the anniversary of the American > invasion of Iraq. Hundreds and hundreds of them meet up, and then > each time something breaks loose and they begin beating on people, > wrecking things, hundreds of them. And I want to say that I > understand their anger. But I don't. I'm angry. I'm very angry.
> Every single day I'm angry. I'm living in a country that cares > more > about bombing people of color overseas and stealing their resources > than putting kids through college. And the ad campaigns to make us > FEEL OKAY like saying "MARCH IS AMERICAN RED CROSS MONTH" because > WE'RE SUCH GOOD PEOPLE! We're such good people, here, in America, > today, on the anniversary of bombing where there are many people
> who > still hear the bombs in the middle of the night, and sometimes it's
> a > dream, and sometimes it's not, because it's still a war, it's still > not entirely a dream. But I'M ANGRY AT THESE KIDS for scaring me
> on > the bus the other day when I found myself in the middle of a > Twitter
> Mob WHILE ON THE BUS and the kids banged their fists on the sides
> of > the bus as we drove down the street through the chaos. And Frank

> Sherlock called me to see if I made it home safely, he's a very > good > friend. I want to be SO ANGRY at these kids because I would never > want to hurt anyone, just anyone, just any stranger. But yet we're > living in a country which does that. We drop bombs on people's > houses. And the animals in the zoos. The zoo of Baghdad and the > apartments, and, and, and, we have new bodies this year.
>
> There's never going to be a moment in this lifetime for us, THOSE
> OF > US ALIVE NOW, IN AMERICA, PAYING TAXES, WHICH PURCHASE WAR, we will > never be able to apologize enough to the people of Iraq, and we > knew > it. We knew it. We all kept saying we knew it, we knew that there > were no WMD's, we knew it, everyone knew it. We kept telling one > another days before the invasion, "I THINK THEY'RE LYING DON'T YOU > THINK THEY'RE LYING YEAH I THINK SO TOO YEAH ME TOO THEY'RE LYING > WE > KNOW THEY'RE LYING EVERYONE KNOWS IT!" But it happened anyway, the > bombing. The occupation. And now the genocide of HUNDREDS of gay > man > in Iraq as a direct result of the invasion and occupation, we are > now > responsible for this new genocide. Gay men tortured and murdered
> in > Iraq. A year of genocide. A year at the end of seven years of > American occupation. And we distract ourselves with LISTENING > about > the health care reform. Health care reform? What about the health
> of > EVERYONE in Iraq? What about them? But we get to feel good. And > it's AMERICAN RED CROSS MONTH. And I'm not being mean, but that's > fucked up to be saying MARCH IS AMERICAN RED CROSS MONTH when > America
> brings more need for bandages than any other country on the face of > the planet right now, how do we do it? How do we get to feel this > way? How? I'm so sad today. I'm not being mean, I'm sad. I'm an > American citizen who has believed lies and now I know I will never > vote Democrat again. Ever. There's too much responsibility behind > giving killers your time and your vote. It costs so much. I feel > that costs today. I'm sad.

>
> CAConrad
>
> --
> PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com
>
>
>

↑ Index

286. Alan Sondheim
Porter (solo oud)
Thu 25 Mar 2010

Porter

For Luke Mosley, Porter Records:

http://www.alansondheim.org/porter.mp3

solo oud inspired by 2 evenings of music at the Issue Project Room, Brooklyn

avoir dea ailes, une carapace, une excorce, souffler de la fumee, porter "The eternal gates' terrific porter lifted the northern bar: "The eternal gates' terrific porter lifted the northern bar:

↑ Index

287. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Thu 25 Mar 2010

Hi Alan, David,

Here is a quote from my review of Ed Foster's book of poems What He Ought To Know:

"For Ed Foster. Spicer’s comment, “no one listens to poetry,” is at the heart of a poetic revolution. He transforms this existential condition into Walter Benjamin’s suggestion that poetry listens to no one: “Art... posits man’s physical and spiritual existence, but in none of its works is it concerned with his response. No poem is intended for the reader, no picture for the beholder, no symphony for the listener.” This quotation appears in Foster’s poem, “Poetry

Has Nothing To Do With Politics." More than a denial of politics, the idea in the title is an assertion of the independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry."

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 11:41 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Like Alan, i don't understand the "should"--other than in such "extenuating circumstances" as in cases of the coerced, of desperation, of fear or perhaps the obscurely shifted desire to "do the right thing" in some inwardly confused sense of "moral duty" or "moral suasion."
>
> Or--in the cases of propaganda and advertising.
>
> A Ruyssian artist writes that language is a fascism not becuase it silences or censros, but because it forces one to speak.
>
> Such would be the case of the "should" perhaps--
>
> A writer writes for those who read, who in turn may read for those who do not read.
>
> A writer writes--for whom? Oneself and other strangers?
>
> I've made poems written for stones, tree, the air, a ray of light--without even the idea of a person involved--
>
> In this sense one may write for those "illiterates" or "inanimates" who do not read yet understand and know the Unwritten--
>
> "The hills know but do not tell" as Emily Dickinson writes--
> On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 7:22 AM, Alan Sondheim <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I don't understand the question; why is there a "should" here? Different people write for different reasons. I don't think there's much more to say...
>
> - Alan
>
> On Tue, 23 Mar 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:
>
> Question # 4:
>
> Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other

> poets
> who
> read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?
>
> ==
> email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
> webpage http://www.alansondheim.org sondheimat gmail.com, panix.com
> ==
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

288. Nicholas Ravnikar
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Thu 25 Mar 2010

Notice that Gerald (whom I don't know but have just called by first name) makes the caveat:

"Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?" (emphasis mine)

If I understand the question correctly, then all the previous comments certainly apply to what we might call its "weak version" (without caveat). People probably do generally just write for themselves and their own (private) reasons. That's the trouble with intentionality (in the broad sense) and part of the three F's of lit crit -- fun, fodder and folly. But if confronted with a choice implies that the individual may be unconscious of the audiences that they're writing to prior to knowing that such a choice can be made. When one can hold a mental state like [shall I write poem/s (Px) for audience of poets (Ap), or write poem/s (Pn) for the set of all readers (Ar)], it is an ethical choice and thus demands a "should" iff you think people who write poems can choose to write poem for particular audiences to read -- again, the intentionality problem -- and whether you think acts of reading are holistic as regards access to the intentional attitudes of the author (which may change with each given reader-instance, and possibly even every time slice).

For my part, I'd say that the answer would requires three individuated premises at least: (a.) whether or not the mental states I attempted to describe above can make any sense as regards writing a poem (or anything else for that matter); and (b). what conditions of satisfaction supervene on the mental representations POEM/S, POET/S, AUDIENCE and READERS in the cases of all possible people who might write poems for either other poets or the set of all possible readers. If these questions don't make any sense to ask, then there's no point in asking the ethical question, because we won't have a grounds for mental causation. Unless, again, we think the set of all possible readers have an atomistic disposition in their access toward the intentional attitudes of the author, or that that authors never can possibly write for anything.

I think that the answer to the ethical question depends on what stage of their development in writing poems the writer in question is at, as well as what goals that individual has for their writing. In either case, career decisions for the immediate and what winds up anthologized or otherwise preserved are two separate things, as are readers' mental operations and experience of the piece(s) in question. But the question itself "Should a poet..." implies that one formulate (constantly) the ethic, continue to wrestle with the question. If we have an answer that we refuse to budge, what texts do we then deny existence? And what consequence lies in that?

I also want to point out, for whatever it's worth, that the names seem to suggest this conversation is male-dominated. What importance, if any, does that bear in considering the question?

On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 3:46 PM, Allan Revich <[redacted]>wrote:

> Yes.
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Gerald Schwartz
> Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 2:26 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: 25 questions, #4...
>
> Question # 4:
>
> Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets
> who
> read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

↑ Index

289. steve russell
Re: 25 questions: question # 3...
Thu 25 Mar 2010

---

it's a quantity/ quality thing.
some very prolific poets are not terribly consistent.
Creeley had his ruts.
The Buk was often simply drunk, gazing at his navel, but stuck at the typwriter.

No. Because not everyone is great.
Especially now.
Consistent greatness belongs to past, coherent cultures.

Ashbery is consisent, but only great, or near great when he gets off a good long poem and avoids the same old goofiness. Frederick Seidel started out very good in a R Lowell sort of way and has become damn near great whenever he does poem.

From: Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, March 19, 2010 9:47:43 AM
Subject: 25 questions: question # 3...

Question # 3: If a poet can write one or two or more great works of poetry why cannot all of his or her works be great?

G. E. Schwartz

↑ Index

290. Patrick F. Durgin
David Hadbawnik on Diane di Prima
Thu 25 Mar 2010

Guest-blogger David Hadbawnik's post on Diane di Prima's RAIN FUR is the latest in the series of "Previews & Supplements" of/to the Kenning Anthology of Poets Theater 1945-1985 at www.kenningeditions.com

Take a look also at Don Share's recent post on V.R. "Bunny" Lang. Future guest-bloggers include Laura Elrick and Rodrigo Toscano, Peter O'Leary, and Aldon Nielsen.

↑ Index

291. Rob McLennan

the ottawa small press book fair, june 26

Thu 25 Mar 2010

---

span-o (the small press action network - ottawa) presents:

> the ottawa
> small press
> book fair

spring 2010 edition
will be happening Saturday, June 26, 2010

in room 203 of the Jack Purcell Community Centre (on Elgin, at 320 Jack Purcell Lane).

contact rob at [redacted] to sign up for a table, etc.

"once upon a time, way way back in October 1994, rob mclennan & James Spyker invented a two-day event called the ottawa small press book fair, and held the first one at the National Archives of Canada..." Spyker moved to Toronto soon after the first one, but the fair continues, thanks in part to the help of generous volunteers, various writers and publishers, and the public for coming out to participate with alla their love and their dollars.

General info:the ottawa small press book fair noon to 5pm (opens at 11:00 for exhibitors) admission free to the public.
$20 for exhibitors, full tables
$10 for half-tables
(payable to rob mclennan, c/o 858 Somerset St W, main floor, Ottawa Ontario K1R 6R7).

note: for the sake of increased demand, we are now offering half tables. for catalog, exhibitors should send (on paper, not email name of press, address, email, web address, contact person, type of publications, list of publications (with price), if submissions are being considered & any other pertinent info, including upcoming ottawa-area events (if any).

& don't forget the reading, usually held the night before at The Carleton Tavern!

also, due to the increased demand for table space, exhibitors are asked to confirm far earlier than usual. i.e. -- before, say, the day of the fair.the fair usually contains exhibitors with poetry books, novels, cookbooks, posters, t-shirts, graphic novels, comic books, magazines, scraps of paper, gum-ball machines with poems, 2x4s with text, etc, including (at previous events) Bywords, Dusty Owl, Chaudiere Books, above/ground press, Room 302 Books,

The Puritan, The Ottawa Arts Review, Buschek Books, The Grunge Papers, Broken Jaw Press, BookThug, Proper Tales Press, and others.

happens twice a year, founded in 1994 by rob mclennan & James Spyker. now run by rob mclennan thru span-o.questions, [redacted] free things can be mailed for fair distribution to the same address. we will not be selling things for folk who cant make it, sorry. also, always looking for volunteers to poster, move tables, that sort of thing. let me know if anyone able to do anything. thanks.

for more information, bother rob mclennan.if you're able/willing to distribute posters/fliers for the fair, send me an email at [redacted]

http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/03/ottawa-small-press-book-fair-spring.html

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

292. amy king

Riot Grrrl, Burlesque Gurlesque, Describing / "Outlining" / defining Poetries, Queer / Queering, What's a group?, What's in a name? What's in a book?, etc

Thu 25 Mar 2010

The more I read of how this book came to be (I started with the Gurlesque anthology first), the more invested I become. My opinions are taking shape, and yet, only a few, especially Danielle Pafunda primarily, join me in discussing what is beginning to feel like "my issue" -- I invite you to join the discussion (to whet your interest, my last response, from the comments thread, to Danielle is pasted below) -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/22/my-visceral-thought/ Thanks, Amy Good morning, Danielle! Okay, Iâ€™m going to try to make my contention clearer. Letâ€™s start with a Glenum quote from Johannes blog: â€œAnd Riot Grrr. Think zombified Courtney Love in her babydoll nightie, who somehow managed able to make female nudity threatening and aggressive rather than erotic.â€ Two anecdotes now & then my explanation in relation to the Gurlesque anthology: I loved Loveâ€™s music. Once, I was at one of her shows, pretty intimate, maybe a hundred people or so. (Drew Barrymore was even there, backstage, taking care of Francis Bean) Love rocked out; she spoke aggressively, wore her babydoll dress, combat boots, said lots of pro-women things, etc. Late in the show, she decided to stage dive, just like any guy singer would who could feel the energy from the crowd. But this crowd, especially the pit-as-usual, was more than half guys. And when she got carried across that pit, those men began ripping her clothes, feeling her up, etc. It was all security could do to get her back, a total struggle. Onstage again, she was pissed, frustrated, and could only scream into the mic angrily, â€œI test every crowd in every city, and you FAILED!â€ and stormed off stage. For all of her aggression, all of her posturing, all of her proclamations, her nudity was not threatening, as Glenum claims; she remained most certainly an erotic object to grab and fuck and disrespect. I've never seen a man experience a stage dive even remotely similar. Moving on to Tribe 8, Riot Grrrl band made up of all openly-queer women. This was one of the first shows to shock me. These women got on stage, they had hot bods that fit â€˜sexyâ€™ stereotypes. Several of them took off their shirts and began rocking out. Many of the men didnâ€™t know what the fuck to do. They just gaped, though some got into the music, moshing a bit, especially as the shock wore off and the show went on. More women were in the pit than usual too. But the initial problem for the men and those of us attuned to seeing women through the male gaze, despite the hardcore energy of the music (which is what we presumably paid for), was that these women became grotesque, they were parodies incarnate because these were womenâ€™s bodies with true bare breasts, those sexy orbs (the site of symbolic sex/sexiness), attached to real monsters: women who were publicly queer and therefore by default anomalies, performing this killer music but not as a site for masturbation or fucking. They were truly threatening, scary and not to be fucked with. Not one guy tried to touch them, though Iâ€™m sure a few had trouble processing/reconciling that female nudity with being there to rock out. Glenum and Greenberg say theyâ€™re â€œdescribing what theyâ€™ve seenâ€, but based on the anthology, they seem to have only seen hetero-women performing gender in grotesque/hybrid/paradoxical ways. Even if they didnâ€™t try to seek out the work of queer women, I know that Glenum is aware of Dodie Bellamyâ€™s poetry, which would lead one to imagine that, even if they didnâ€™t include Bellamyâ€™s work, they would have made a conscious attempt to seek out and include work by queer-identified women that includes representations/perspectives of queer women, especially as sites of resistance /grotesqueness / parody â€“ not just hetero-women and girls in the making. The â€œqueer womanâ€ certainly falls under the category of â€œrepresentations of womenâ€ in the public eye that Glenum and Greenberg define the anthology by. To omit any work of this sort from this anthology is not only a glaring omission, itâ€™s exclusionary and does a disservice to the project of the Gurlesque; the anthology narrows the Gurlesque at great cost. Considering that the kind of performance the editors describe has long been the staple, almost inherently necessary work of a queer woman as soon as she owns her queerness out loud, itâ€™s shocking to exclude any work by those women. I mean, Glenum founds the basis of her definition on Judith Butler, who obviously â€œdescribedâ€ gender as performance â€“ & itâ€™s no coincidence that the first theorist to publicly introduce that concept was a lesbian. To make a poor parallel, this anthology would be akin to editing an anthology of Experimental American Poetries and only including selections by Language Poets or Black Mountain poets. You can say itâ€™s â€œdescriptiveâ€ and â€œonlyâ€ what you â€œnoticedâ€ all you want, but the editors of such an anthology must have been wearing blinders if thatâ€™s all they include. I remain frustrated because the more I read from discussions online, the more I see that Glenum keeps conjuring â€œqueernessâ€ and Greenberg claims to have â€œcoinedâ€ the term â€œGurlesqueâ€ while also aligning it with Riot Grrrl, but to see no inclusion of the queer roots of such performance, to not acknowledge the ongoing work of confounding the notion of â€œwomanâ€ via queer perversion / queer womenâ€™s burlesque â€“ gurlesque is incredible. They may as well mark the exclusiveness of this project as defined/narrowed through this anthology and say â€œqueering the hetero-woman and girl concept by hetero-womenâ€, which really only smacks of efforts to subvert, not â€œqueerâ€ when you donâ€™t actually include the queer. Just one more note and Iâ€™ll stop, let my frustration go the way of the mostly-silence on this issue: A whole lot happens when a queer woman frustrates the male gaze that inspires a very different awareness, which emerges over time for queer women. This awareness births ideas and performances that are certainly co-opted and appropriated by hetero-women, and thatâ€™s absolutely fine. From the most basic of signifiers like dykes wearing combat boots and punking out/shearing their hair to larger behaviors that I will not go into right now, we have created and given permissions that may not have happened for a long time for straight women. Iâ€™m not trying to own all of the subversive stuff straight women have tried on or done for themselves, at all. But I havenâ€™t read anything in all of Glenumâ€™s and Greenbergâ€™s descriptions that queer women as poets, performers, mothers, etc, havenâ€™t also been doing/dealing with and adding to the conversation/culture. Just yesterday, a guy didnâ€™t like what I had to say about Bukowski on a frigginâ€™ throw-away Facebook post and, knowing Iâ€™m queer, told me to get my â€œhead out of my cuntâ€, made lewd claims about my relations with my â€œpartnerâ€ (his quotes) in an effort to delegitimize my relationship, and other shit â€“ and that was only one tiny fraction of my experience with men reacting to the queer grotesque monster woman that I am daily. So yes, the queer existence does have a leg up experientially when it comes to understanding what it means to perform for that male gaze while simultaneously and paradoxically excising oneâ€™s self from it just by default of primarily loving and being for and in relation to women â€“ and that kind of performance certainly does make its way into queer womenâ€™s poetry. I just canâ€™t believe these editors, two smart well-versed and theoretically-inclined women, didnâ€™t come across any writing that fit that bill or give a single nod to it, though they unabashedly have no problem referencing the type of work queer women have historically done and continue to do. Here, have some poems by Julian Brolaski and tell me how these donâ€™t fit the Gurlesque - http://chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/brolaski.html Or Brenda Iijima and Stacy Szymaszek -- http://chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/bracyiimaszek.html Or any number of queer poets I donâ€™t have time right now to sift through but would have if I were an editor of an anthology such as thisâ€¦ Sorry to be insistent; Iâ€™m still just emotional and pissed. But moreover, I appreciate your bravery and how constructively you continue to engage me on this matter, Danielle â€“ I know youâ€™re tons busy! I think you hit the nail on the head in your efforts in the last comment to note / outline what you see me reacting to. I wonder if others who see it will speak up (quite a few have backchannled, as noted), or if those involved will acknowledge this gap. Thanks lots, A _____

HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

THE GURLESQUE - NOT ENOUGH GRRRL?

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/22/my-visceral-thought/

↑ Index

293. David Kirschenbaum

rent-a-beatnik and voice photographer fred mcdarrah

Thu 25 Mar 2010

It was Village Voice photographer Fred McDarrah who conceived of the rent-a-beatnik idea and sent friends like Joans out to be rented. McDarrah's the photographer responsible for many iconic images of the day, including Kerouac during a rdg, arm's stretched out like Jesus; Dylan sitting on a Sheridan Square bench and saluting; Abbie Hoffman in his American flag shirt, among so many others. His photos were compiled in books like The Beat Scene, Beat Generation: Glory Days in Greenwich Village, and Gay Pride: Photographs from Stonewall to Today. Here's a link to his obit in the Voice, with links there, and below, to some of his photos:

http://www.villagevoice.com/2007-10-30/news/fred-w-mcdarrah-1926-2007/

http://www.stevenkasher.com/html/artistresults.asp?artist=75

http://images.google.com/images?hl=en&safe=off&client=firefox-a&hs=gQs&rls=org.mozilla:en-US:official&q=%22fred%20mcdarrah%22&um=1&ie=UTF-8&sa=N&tab=wi

On Mar 25, 2010, at 3:37 AM, steve dalachinsky wrote:

> yes ted joans a dear friend and "outsider" poet did rent-a beatnik in late 50's early 60's > also the fanmous rent parties as well now maybe rent-a-nudnik or a laureate or a academic
>
> On Wed, 24 Mar 2010 09:08:32 -0700 Catherine Daly <[redacted]
>
> writes:
> there was a life magazine article about the rent-a-beatnik thing, wasn't there?

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

294. steve russell
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Thu 25 Mar 2010

---

well, dead poets have written poems and we read their poems to others --

& yes, we should write for "an audience of everyone" who reads.

--- On Tue, 3/23/10, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>
Subject: 25 questions, #4...
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, March 23, 2010, 2:26 PM

Question # 4:

Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

↑ Index

295. amy king
Poet's at The Poets Salon
Thu 25 Mar 2010

Poetâ€™s at The Poets Salon

ROOM 198 on the Conco

Poetâ€™s at The Poets Salon

ROOM 198 on the Concourse Level

CUNY Graduate Center 5th Ave & 34th Street

Saturday March 27th 2010

COME HEAR ! over 40 AMAZING

Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer Poetâ€™s

Reading & Performing their own Poetry for You for FREE !

Starting Every Half Hour on the Half Hour in Room 198

11:30 am

Poets: Walter Holland, Bill Kushner, Jason Roush, Daniel Lau, Rosamond S. King and Vittoria repetto

followed by

Readings from

â€œPersistent Voices Poetry by Writers Lost to AIDSâ€

12:30 pm

Poets: David Bergman, Jameson Fitzpatrick, Saeed Jones, Richard Tayson, Ana Bozicevic, Amy King, Debrah Morkun, and Gregory Laynor

followed by

Readings from

â€œPersistent Voices Poetry by Writers Lost to AIDSâ€

1:30 pm

Poets: Davidson Garrett, David Messineo,

Nicholas
Glastonbury, Octavio Gonzalez, Rigoberto Gonzalez,

Tim Peterson (Trace), and Rachel Zolf

followed by

Readings from

â€œPersistent Voices Poetry by Writers Lost to AIDSâ€

2:30pm

Poets: Elizabeth Reddin, Laurie Weeks, Vega, Bakar Wilson, Ronaldo V. Wilson, Emanuel Xavier, Julian Brolaski, and Danielle Evennou

followed by

Readings from

â€œPersistent Voices Poetry by Writers Lost to AIDSâ€

3:30pm

Poets: Stephanie Gray, Paul Foster Johnson,

Douglas A.
Martin, Steven Cordova, Mina Pam Dick,

Jee Leong Koh,
and Angelo Nikolopoulos

followed by

Readings from

â€œPersistent Voices Poetry by Writers Lost to AIDSâ€

4:30pm

Poets: Ron Drummond, Scott Hightower, Timothy Liu,

Moonshine
Shorey, Philip Clark, Nathaniel A. Siegel

followed by

Readings from

â€œPersistent Voices Poetry by Writers Lost to AIDSâ€

A LIMITED EDITION COLLECTION OF POETRY:

â€œCOME HEAR !â€

FEATURING THE WORK OF THESE 40 POETS WILL BE AVAILABLE FOR PURCHASE AT THE READING FOR $10

THE READING IS FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC !

HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

THE GURLESQUE - NOT ENOUGH GRRRL?

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/22/my-visceral-thought/

↑ Index

296. Margaret Konkol

anything anymore anywhere spring 2010 out now!!

Thu 25 Mar 2010

Congratulations to Colin Herd and Reuben Sutton on an exquisite March 2010 issue of anything anymore anywhere.

My copy arrived in the mail today and I am reading the wonderful contributions of Maric Arrieta, James Davies, Marcus Whale, Devin Johnston as well as many others!

Cheers,
Margaret Konkol

↑ Index

297. Poetry Project

Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 25 Mar 2010

Hi Everyone,

Here¹s what we have coming up at The Poetry Project. You¹ll notice there are no readings next week‹ that¹s because next week is Holy Week and time for The Poetry Project to take a vacation!

Friday, March 26, 10 PM
A Similar But Different Quality Magazine Reading

A Similar But Different Quality is an experimental text-based journal unspecific to any genre. The sole parameter is that the work is text, which opens us to the surprise and poetry of language that is everywhere. Published occasionally, their manifesto reads:

Accidents. Words are everywhere and inevitably beautiful. What tries to be poetic is often not because true poetry is an accident. The poetry genre is paradoxically unpoetic, too narrow to contain the full beauty of language that permeates everyday conversation, movie dialogue, graffiti, theatre, song lyrics, notes, diary entries, grocery lists, receipts, rap, text messages, emails, spam, tweets, etc, etc. To poetry without boundaries, except the words. Not poetry, but words. To an immediate, unpretentious and zesty poetry.

Monday, April 5, 8 PM
Open Reading

Sign-In 7:45

Wednesday, April 7, 8 PM
The Kenning Anthology of Poets Theater

This reading will celebrate the release of The Kenning Anthology of Poets Theater 1945-1985, a superb documentation of the emergence, growth, and varied fortunes of the form over decades of American literary history. The largest and most comprehensive anthology of its kind yet assembled, the volume collects classics of poets theater as well as rarities long out of print and texts from unpublished manuscripts and archives. Editors David Brazil and Kevin Killian will be joined by some of the contributors who will read or perform their work. With Bruce Andrews, Charles Bernstein, Nada Gordon, Ted Greenwald, Sonia Sanchez and Fiona Templeton.

Friday, April 9, 10 PM
Joey Yearous-Algozin & Divya Victor

Joey Yearous-Algozin is the author of Kensington Notebook (Lean-To Press) and BOSTON STREET/TREES (Lean-To Press). His poetry has appeared or is forthcoming from Cannot Exist, Forage, and the Robert Walser Society of Massachusetts. He is currently a PhD student in Poetics at SUNY-Buffalo.

Divya Victor has lived and learned in India, Singapore, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Seattle. She has an M.A. from Temple University and is currently working towards her Ph.D. at the University at Buffalo. Her work has appeared in ambit, XConnect, The Ixnay Reader, dusie, President¹s Choice, P-QUEUE, and Drunken Boat. Her chapbook SUTURES was just published by Little Red Leaves.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

298. Paul Nelson
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Thu 25 Mar 2010

"Demands for communication [in art] are presumptuous and irrelevant"

Clyfford Still

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

_____
From: steve russell <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thu, March 25, 2010 1:19:26 PM
Subject: Re: 25 questions, #4...

well, dead poets have written poems and we read their poems to others --

& yes, we should write for "an audience of everyone" who reads.

--- On Tue, 3/23/10, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>
Subject: 25 questions, #4...
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, March 23, 2010, 2:26 PM

Question # 4:

Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

↑ Index

299. Louis Cabri

Call for papers [please circulate!]: Symposium on the Alphabet

Thu 25 Mar 2010

CALL FOR PAPERS
please circulate

the Alphabet: A Symposium on Ron Silliman's Long Poem

25-26 March 2011
University of Windsor, Windsor, Ontario, Canada

"I'm not writing for 'a small circle of friends,' I'm writing to you."

After three decades of composition, Ron Silliman's _the Alphabet_ is complete, and published under one cover (University of Alabama Press, 2008). When this twenty-six-sectioned, thousand-plus-page poem was only available in discrete portions, in magazines, chapbooks, limited-run books, what punctuated each was not the poem's next "new sentence" but concurrent claims and counterclaims on contemporary life. _the Alphabet_ was written during decades when high theory and cultural studies had arrived in the academy to exact formal and mostly progressive social evaluations from culture and the arts, but still often at the expense of poetry's own theoretical challenges to the academy's institutional base; when intensified corporate consolidation of the mass media and new technologies were transforming existing paradigms of "the consumer society" (Baudrillard), its "captains of consciousness" (Ewen), and "culture of narcissism" (Lasch); and when, among other factors, manufactured consent (theorized equally by Burawoy for factory work as by Chomsky and Herman for mass media) propelled the US mainstream rightwards into postmodern politics. Specific responses to claims by these dominant narratives (to pick just three) from the post-Vietnam War era are to be found among poets associated with Language Poetry (a label in part projected from such narratives) and other contemporaneous groupings and tendencies. But even in a given contextual and interpretive frame such as this one, loose and incomplete as it is in this version but in which some idea of ideological mediation prevails, how is it that one thing _the Alphabet_ does is embody perceptions of a sensible world ("the way old gum leaves its spotted shadow on the cement"), which is a poetic task much older than and yet foundational to "the ideology of the aesthetic" (in Eagleton's title phrase)? I offer this long-debated question of art's function - "to strengthen the perceptive faculties and free them from encumbrance" (to quote Pound on Dante, from almost a century ago) - as an example of how _the Alphabet_'s singularities and influences may re-illuminate received verities regarding the politics of aesthetic forms in Language Poetry's milieu. Put another way, once timely and key discursive interventions associated with Silliman's name and context - such as use of theory in poetry, "ethnography" of the everyday, critiques of accessible communication modes and of speech-based subjectivization, poetics of ideological mediation - may require further elaboration, or rethinking, if not their significance re-calibrated, in the face of this poem's challenges. For, arguably, Silliman's reputation, even notoriety, as critic, theorist, exponent of poetry's production as a socially relevant and collective act, has preceded and to a degree guided how the poetry is to be received. But if a reader responds to the poetry, then how and what does she or he see and hear? "I'm writing to you," the text says in the section called "Lit." So, what is reading _the Alphabet_ "like," for you?

This symposium aims to invite readings of Ron Silliman's long poem, _the Alphabet_, and encourages critical engagements with its formal and socio-historical/-ideological dynamics as well as with its contexts and interpretive frames that have accrued around the author's time and work. Papers on any issue focussed on or around _the Alphabet_ or an aspect thereof are welcome, including but not limited to those addressing how _the Alphabet_ engages elements of

? language (poetic language and form, grammar, syntax, pun, cliche, description, reference, etc)

? narrative / anti-narrative / story

? representation (recalling Stuart Hall's constructionist sense of "the active work of selecting and presenting, of structuring and shaping: not merely the transmitting of already-existing meaning, but the more active labour of making things mean," "things" including class stratification, gender construction, whiteness / racialization, etc)

? the aesthetic (& form; & ideology; & the body; & perception)

? the social (historical; sociological; psychological; poetic)

? nature (landscape, description, etc)

? realism (& 19C / 20C codes of "the reality effect"; & knowing)

? the unconscious (political, etc)

? genre (long poems, prose poems, novels, lyrics, etc)

? group & individual affiliation / disaffiliation (Language Poets / Language Writing / Language School; contemporaries in the poetic field such as Rae Armantrout, Rachel Blau DuPlessis, Leslie Scalapino, etc)

? "tradition" (e.g.: Whitman, Thoreau; first-, second-generation modernists such as H.D., Reznikoff; "New American Poets" such as Whalen, Olson, Spicer; etc)

? non-US poetry & poetics in/from Canada (e.g.: Kootenay School of Writing; Toronto Research Group; "the Canadian long poem"), China, Russia, France, Australia, England, etc

? theory (postmodernity / postmodernism / modernism / modernity / globalization)

? "after" (after theory; after "the American century"; after Language poetics; after "21st-century modernism"; etc)

Please send 300-500-word abstracts for twenty-minute papers, or detailed proposals for panels, by 1 Nov 2010 to Louis Cabri at lcabri at uwindsor dot ca.

↑ Index

300. Jim Andrews
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Thu 25 Mar 2010

---

everything we say is not for everyone.

i just try to say what i have to say the best way i know how. not so much for this audience or that audience, but for the writing, myself, the subject, and anyone in particular i might be addressing or writing about.

ja
http://vispo.com

Question # 4:

Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

↑ Index

301. Pam Brown
review a poetry book for Jacket magazine?
Thu 25 Mar 2010

Dear Poeticists,

If you would like to write a review of one of these books for Jacket magazine please contact me on the backchannel.
[redacted]

Gaze, by Marthe Reed, Black Radish Books, 2010: About Gaze: In the de-stabilized intersection of fashion, the war on terror, and cultural constructions of the feminine, Gaze explores the resulting tensions in a series of dichotomies central to an increasingly isolate and adversarial condition: Christianity/Islam, ancient/modern, sacred/secular, sexuality/spirituality, feminism/fundamentalism, power/resistance, self/other. Rikki Ducornet says this about these intersections in Gaze: “In these moments the world is given breath, heat, and voice. All at once it approaches, and the beloved's unfettered body is revealed as the antidote to tyranny.” What we see and what we fail to see are constantly juxtaposed, exposing a flawed desire to “become.” Kate Bernheimer says of Gaze, “Too beautiful to articulate’—dressed, undressed, terrorized, and entrancing. These unveilings, these poems, how they haunt me. Riding Angela Carter on a poetry-horse, Reed hallucinates language with certain and dissolving rhythm. Gaze at them; go blind inside this mentalist’s mind. Marthe Reed is unrelenting, unrelentingly kind.”

Occultations, by David Wolach, Black Radish Books, 2010: About Occultations: Employing an array of contemporary poetic strategies (somatics, enactment, procedural interference, abject lyric, ritual, affiliative appropriation), Occultations asks us to consider how the body's mortal we...might live its demise. To ask, "why do you hesitate at the covered parts?" is to pose the question of an ethics of the senses...David Wolach's experiments extend this exploration precisely through their variance: in these poems, speech, sex, war and militarism, domestic space, collectively, protest--not ghosted, not as representation, but as locational probabilities, as motional frameworks.--Laura Elrick Tomorrowland, by Lisa Samuels., Shearsman, 2009 About Tomorrowland: Tomorrowland is a book-length poem of bodily transit and colonial forgetting. Its names and events perpetually arrive in a new world, whose versions here combine promised lands and historical suicide. Eula moves among these real and imagined place-times with other symbolic names and unnamed figures, and Jack plays death. The primary formal note is the interrupted iambic.

Lisa Samuels' Tomorrowland is a guidebook and diary from an actuality existing among real sea and ships and coastline, history, and contemporary reflection. There are named “characters,” but the true characters are a colony, a “we” of the newly arrived to this land. The generous and graceful syntax is a fusing agent for yesterday, today, and tomorrow. The reader exults in the accomplishment of the verse. —Alice Notley http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2009/samuelsTOM.html

Thanks very much,
Pam

---

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

↑ Index

302. Alan Sondheim
Porter2
Fri 26 Mar 2010

Porter2

Not that you listened to porter.mp3, but it did split a nail, messing up my play. I taped on a saz pick, alternating finger styles. Anyway this is a pretty cool piece, makes me want to drive across the country again. I'd slam into every right-wing militia in sight. I wouldn't care if it made sense. Then I thought maybe I should use exclamation marks here but decided against it. The oud's unsweetened, just as it came through the amp. I wasn't going to do another porter piece but I thought, well this is a followup to the first since I messed up my play and Desiree made it all better:

http://www.alansondheim.org/porter2.mp3

Desiree was punctual to a minute. The porter, the garcons, the porterai avec pour toujours! offices, too, were to be performed by the wife of the porter, according to little Nathalie, the porter's daughter, remaining with her grandmother The sou was given, and the porter's daughter disappeared, leaving the porter's daughter, and she went forth to dispose of this: "The night Madame de la R* died, the wife of the porter, she had sex with minors, who said?" And all the reporters were looking at her poverty, soon divulged to the porteress: To porterage, -- 00.00 1/4: To porterage, -- 00.00 1/4: - after he signed the cheque that was to pay the importer. I overheard he's played recently, this reporter can only surmise. "The eternal gates' terrific porter lifted the northern Bar- Imperial - supporter of the empire. For she was The Supporter of All or One Who Remains Alive even after Everything, and he is like one who tries to reform that matter, those false porters and trekking guides carrying out at one sweep the whole arsenal of the old law.

↑ Index

303. Justin Katko
CRS : Joyce and Mobarak : Friday 2 April
Fri 26 Mar 2010

The Cambridge Reading Series continues on through the Easter holiday with its third poetry reading of the year. TREVOR JOYCE and NOUR MOBARAK will flick the hallowed stone from its purchase on Friday 2 April, 7:30pm. Poetry, dance, video projections: spend Black Friday right! Venue: Judith E. Studio Drama Studio, Faculty of English, Cambridge, UK. All are welcome; free entry; free pamphlet; wine served.

****

TREVOR JOYCE has lived and worked in Cork Ireland for twenty-five years, for the last twelve of which he's been a director of SoundEye. His books include with the first dream of fire they hunt the cold (New Writers' Press/Shearsman, 2001 & 2003) and What's in Store (NWP/The Gig, 2008), which collect work up to 2000 and 2001-07, respectively. Courts of Air and Earth (Shearsman, 2009) gathers all his workings from middle and early-modern Irish. He has been a Fulbright Scholar, is a member of Aosdána, and is the Judith E. Wilson Visiting Poetry Fellow for 2009-10.

NOUR MOBARAK resides in Portland Oregon and is an artist working with video, music, writing, and performance. She has just returned from a two month residency in Finland where she co-created a melodramatic 8-episode cable access television series, starring infamous Finnish personality Ibi Love. She plays music in the bands Smegma and Fred Meyer. Her book Rogue Iniki is forthcoming from Critical Documents, and her writing has been published in Poetry Salzburg Review, Hot Gun, ITIOFD[V]GNH-VRD, and Francis Crot's Xena Warrior Princess fan fic.

****

The Cambridge Reading Series (CRS) is a new cycle of poetry readings taking place at the Faculty of English in Cambridge. Dialogic in form and international in scope, CRS revises the conventional performance format. In addition to reading their own work, both poets will also read the work of another poet. Each reading will be accompanied by a pamphlet publication featuring a selection of the participating poets’ work and critical responses.

A full list of up-coming dates and readers is given below. Please direct any queries to Justin Katko ([redacted]) or see the CRS website: crs0hq.tumblr.com

The Cambridge Reading Series is funded by the Judith E. Wilson Fund and organised by English graduate students Ryan Dobran, Ian Heames, Justin Katko, Laura Kilbride, and Mike Wallace-Hadrill.

****

Readings begin at 7:30pm and are held in the Judith E. Wilson Drama Studio, in the Faculty of English, West Road, Cambridge.

Friday 2 April: Nour Mobarak & Trevor Joyce

EASTER TERM
Friday 30 April: Jonty Tiplady & Frances Kruk

Friday 21 May: Lorqi Blinks & John Wilkinson
Friday 18 Jun: Sean Bonney & Simon Jarvis

↑ Index

304. Kevin Killian

Re: anything anymore anywhere spring 2010 out now!!

Fri 26 Mar 2010

I second the praise Margaret Konkol has given to the new Edinburgh-based fiction and poetry journal, Anything, Anymore, Anywhere." It is glowing like a fire, without and within.

Here's how to order your copy,

http://www.anything-anymore-anywhere.com/

Thanks, Margaret,

Thanks Reuben and Colin,

Kevin K.
San Francisco

> *Congratulations to Colin Herd and Reuben Sutton on an exquisite March 2010 issue of *anything anymore anywhere.
>
> My copy arrived in the mail today and I am reading the wonderful contributions of Maric Arrieta, James Davies, Marcus Whale, Devin Johnston as well as many others!
>
> Cheers,
> Margaret Konkol

↑ Index

305. amy king

Reminder - TONIGHT - March 26, Friday ~ Jessica Bozek, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin, Brett Eugene Ralph & Stephanie Whited!

Fri 26 Mar 2010

March 26, Friday ~ Jessica Bozek, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate

March 26, Friday ~ Jessica Bozek, Melissa Broder, Jackie Clark, Cate Marvin, Brett Eugene Ralph & Stephanie Whited!

March 26 @ 7 p.m. Goodbye Blue Monday in Brooklyn
with

Jessica Bozek is the author of The Bodyfeel Lexicon (Switchback Books) and several chapbooks. Recent poems appear in Action, Yes, Artifice, Fairy Tale Review, P-QUEUE, and Womb. Jessica runs Small Animal Project (smallanimalproject.com), a reading series and web-text experiment based in Cambridge, MA. ~

Melissa Broder is the author of WHEN YOU SAY ONE THING BUT MEAN YOUR MOTHER (Ampersand Books, February 2010). She is the curator of the Polestar Poetry Series and the Chief Editor of La Petite Zine. Broder received her BA from Tufts University and is currently in the MFA program at CCNY. She is the winner of the Jerome Lowell Dejur Award and the Stark Prize for Poetry. By day, she works as a literary publicist. Her poems have appeared in many journals, including: Opium, Shampoo, Conte and The Del Sol Review. ~

Jackie Clark is currently co-editor-in-chief for LIT magazine. She also curates Poets off Poetry at coldfrontmag.com, where poets write about music. Her chapbook Office Work is forthcoming from Greying Ghost Press. She lives in Jersey City. ~

Cate Marvinâ€™s first book, Worldâ€™s Tallest Disaster, was chosen by Robert Pinksy for the 2000 Kathryn A. Morton Prize and published by Sarabande Books in 2001. In 2002, she received the Kate Tufts Discovery Prize. Her poems have appeared in The New England Review, Poetry, The Kenyon Review, Fence, The Paris Review, The Cincinnati Review, Slate, Verse, Boston Review, and Ninth Letter. She is co-editor with poet Michael Dumanis of the anthology Legitimate Dangers: American Poets of the New Century (Sarabande Books, 2006). Her second book of poems, Fragment of the Head of a Queen, was published by Sarabande in August 2007. A recent Whiting Award recipient and 2007 NYFA Gregory Millard Fellow, she teaches poetry writing in Lesley Universityâ€™s Low-Residency M.F.A. Program and is an associate professor in creative writing at the College of Staten Island, City University of New York. ~

Brett Eugene Ralph spent the better part of his youth in Louisville, Kentucky, playing football and singing in punk rock bands. His work has appeared in journals such as Conduit, Mudfish, Willow Springs, and The American Poetry Review; it has been anthologized in The McSweeneyâ€™s Book of Poets Picking Poets and The Stiffest of the Corpse: An Exquisite Corpse Reader. His first full-length collection, Black Sabbatical, was published by Sarabande Books in 2009. Brett has taught at the University of Massachusetts, Missouri State University, and the Central Institute of Buddhist Studies in the Himalayas of northern India. Currently, he lives in Empire, Kentucky, and teaches at Hopkinsville

Community College. His country rock ensemble, Brett Eugene Ralphâ€™s Kentucky Chrome Revue, can be heard in seedy dives throughout the South. ~

A New Yorker since 2001, Stephanie Whited received her BA in Psychology in 2005 from NYU which has greatly influenced her poetry. She trades her time and attention for writing, mentoring, advocating alternative health, and acting. You can find a few of her poems in the second issue of Spine Road. This is her first reading.

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]
J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
http://www.stainofpoetry.com

Send any email (subject and text are ignored) to [redacted] or click here:
http://gc.listserv.cuny.edu/scriptsgc/wa-gc.exe?SUBED1=POETRY-l&A=1&s=[redacted]

--
HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

↑ Index

306. Skip Fox
Re: 25 questions, #4...
Fri 26 Mar 2010

Such a choice seems precluded by earlier (and I believe, more significant) decisions concerning what poetry is and what its writing might be in one's life. Of course this choice might be seen as a part of those earlier decisions, though it is probably neither distinct or central.

To be distinct and significant, such a choice seems as though it would have to have been an initial one or one very early in the process. I can imagine it happening that way, but rarely. Or maybe only by beginning poets who are thinking of a career, of how poetry might serve them.

Question # 4:

Should a poet, if confronted with a choice, write a piece for other poets who read poetry or write for an audience of everyone who will read it?

↑ Index

307. Deborah A. Meadows

FW: Deborah Meadows' "How, the means"

Fri 26 Mar 2010

Poetics friends,

Shameless self-promotion, yet Guy has an interesting flier of his design in the link below.
Deborah

_____
From: Guy Bennett [[redacted]]
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 10:20 PM
To: Guy Bennett
Subject: Deborah Meadows' "How, the means"

Dear Reader,

I'm writing to let you know that How, the means by Deborah Meadows has just been published by Mindmade Books.

How, the means was written after Bill Viola's video installation Fall into Paradise and rings with echoes of the Tristan legend as the latter does. The fragmentary style of these small, tight lyrics only hints at the works that inspired it, revealing glimpses of them through the meshes of the text.

How, the means is available as part of Mindmade Books' 2010 series, which also includes work by Emily Kendal Frey, Ernst Jandl, and Philippe Soupault. If you would like to purchase these titles, you can do so from the Mindmade Books website or simply by replying to this message. If you have already done so – thank you! – and my apologies for this note.

If you wish, you can download a flyer for Mindmade Books' 2010 titles at:

http://www.mindmadebooks.com/mb.2010.eannouncement.pdf

Best wishes,

Guy Bennett
www.mindmadebooks.com

N.B. If you have received this note in error or would like to be removed from our list, please respond to this message with "Remove me" as the subject.

↑ Index

308. steve dalachinsky

Readings

Fri 26 Mar 2010

UDP AT PS1
EVENTS EACH SUNDAY IN MARCH
Artbook @ PS1/MoMA
22-25 Jackson Ave, Long Island City, NY

Sunday, March 14, 4pm
Yelena Gluzman, Rachel Levitsky, Ben Luzzatto, and Dan Machlin

Sunday, March 21, 4pm
Poetry performances by UDP authors Filip Marinovich, Elizabeth Reddin, and Garrett Kalleberg.

Sunday, March 28, 4 pm A wine reception with performances and readings by Peter Gizzi and Steve Dalachinsky; a bilingual performance of Carlos Oquendo de Amat's classic 5 Meters of Poems by the translators Alejandro de Acosta and Joshua Beckman; and a performance of Vanessa Place and Rob Fitterman's new work "NO IDEA." The readings will be preceded by a screening (at 3:30) of Joel Schlemowitz's award-winning documentary, "Loudmouth Collective / Ugly Duckling Presse / Anti-Reading."

March 28, 8pm
The Stone
(NW corner of Avenue C and East 2nd St., F train to 2nd Ave.)
Admission $10, Students age 14-19 admitted at half price. Children 12 and under free.

LOCAL LINGO
Jason Kao Hwang (composer, violin/viola)
Sang Won Park (kayagum, ajeng, voice)
Thomas Buckner (voice)
William Parker (string bass)
Joe McPhee (tenor sax, pocket trumpet)

On Sunday, March 28, starting at 8pm, Local Lingo will premiere composer Jason Kao Hwang’s suite, “Voices of Our Own,” featuring the poetry of Lester Afflick, Fay Chiang, Steve Dalachinsky, Patricia Spears Jones and Yuko Otomo.

The music will employ notation and improvisation, with the inflection of jazz, opera and world music vibrant in the Local Lingo of sound.

Poetry books and the Local Lingo CD will be on sale.

↑ Index

309. Jen Tynes
Release of New Pony
Fri 26 Mar 2010

New Pony: A Horse Less Anthology is here!
http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/new-pony-a-horse-less-anthology/6496790

edited by Erika Howsare & Jen Tynes including work by Erik Anderson, Cynthia Arrieu-King & Kristi Maxwell, Sarah Bartlett & Emily Kendal Frey, Eric Baus & Seth Perlow, Sommer Browning & Brandon Shimoda, Adam Clay, Gary L. McDowell, and Brandon Shimoda, Julia Cohen & Mathias Svalina, Thomas Cook & Nate Slawson, Bruce Covey & Terita Heath-Wlaz, MTC Cronin & Peter Boyle, Mark DeCarteret, DZ Delgado & Sandy Florian, Jennifer K. Dick, Camille Dungy & Ravi Shankar, Annie Finch & Erika Howsare, Shawn Huelle & Jess Wigent, Kirk Keen, The Pines, Seth Perlow & Catherine Theis, Dani Rado, Andrea Rexilius & Susan Scarlata, Kate Schapira, Paul Siegell, Justin Taylor & Bill Hayward, and William Walsh.

We'll be releasing the book officially and in person at AWP, where you can find us sharing a bookfair table with Lost Roads and Cinematheque Presses. And please join us Thursday, April 8, at 7 pm at the MCA in Denver to celebrate with some fabulous readings by C.D. Wright, Forrest Gander, Adam Clay, Matt Henriksen, Cynthia Arrieu-King, Sommer Browning, Julia Cohen, Bruce Covey, Nate Slawson, Jennifer Denrow, Eric Baus, Andrea Rexilius, Shawn Huelle, Emily Kendal Frey, Sarah Bartlett, Joseph Wood, Jen Tynes, and Susan Scarlata.

But you don't have to wait! You can order your copy now!

http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/new-pony-a-horse-less-anthology/6496790

↑ Index

310. Pam Brown
Thanks from Jacket and one title remaining for review
Fri 26 Mar 2010

Thanks everyone,
Jacket magazine has assigned reviewers for Tomorrowland and Occultations.

If you'd like to review Gaze (see below) just email me for details [redacted]

Gaze, by Marthe Reed, Black Radish Books, 2010:
About Gaze

In the de-stabilized intersection of fashion, the war on terror, and cultural constructions of the feminine, Gaze explores the resulting tensions in a series of dichotomies central to an increasingly isolate and adversarial condition: Christianity/Islam, ancient/modern, sacred/secular, sexuality/spirituality, feminism/fundamentalism, power/resistance, self/other. Rikki Ducornet says this about these intersections in Gaze: “In these moments the world is given breath, heat, and voice. All at once it approaches, and the beloved's unfettered body is revealed as the antidote to tyranny.” What we see and what we fail to see are constantly juxtaposed, exposing a flawed desire to “become.” Kate Bernheimer says of Gaze, “Too beautiful to articulate’—dressed, undressed, terrorized, and entrancing. These unveilings, these poems, how they haunt me. Riding Angela Carter on a poetry-horse, Reed hallucinates language with certain and dissolving rhythm. Gaze at them; go blind inside this mentalist’s mind. Marthe Reed is unrelenting, unrelentingly kind.”

Thanks again,
Pam

--

---

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

↑ Index

311. Nicholas Karavatos
"Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
Sat 27 Mar 2010

Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem

Saudi poet Hessa Hilal lashed out at hard-line clerics' religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."

AP
Published: 17:36 March 23, 2010
Reader comments (12)

Dubai: It was a startling voice of protest at a startling venue. Covered head-to-toe in black, a Saudi woman lashed out at hard-line Muslim clerics' harsh religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."

Well, not quite "American Idol": Contestants compete not in singing but in traditional Arabic poetry. Over the past episodes, poets sitting on an elaborate stage before a live audience have recited odes to the beauty of Bedouin life and the glories of their rulers or mourning the gap between rich and poor.

Then last week, Hessa Hilal, only her eyes visible through her veil, delivered a blistering poem against Muslim preachers "who sit in the position of power" but are "frightening" people with their fatwas, or religious edicts, and "preying like a wolf" on those seeking peace.

Her poem got loud cheers from the audience and won her a place in the competition's finals, to be aired on Wednesday.

It also brought her death threats, posted on several Islamic militant web sites.

Hessa shrugs off the controversy.

"My poetry has always been provocative," she told The Associated Press in an interview. "It's a way to express myself and give voice to Arab women, silenced by those who have hijacked our culture and our religion."

Her poem was seen as a response to Shaikh Abdul Rahman Al Barrak, a prominent cleric in Saudi Arabia who recently issued a fatwa saying those who call for the mingling of men and women should be considered infidels, punishable by death.

But more broadly, it was seen as addressing any of many hard-line clerics in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere in the region who hold a wide influence through television programmes, university positions or web sites. "Killing a human being is so easy for them, it is always an option," she told the AP.

Poetry holds a prominent place in Arab culture, and some poets in the Middle East have a fan base akin to those of rock stars.

The programme, The Million's Poet, is a chance for poets to show off their original work, airing live weekly on satellite television across the Arab world from Abu Dhabi, capital of the United Arab Emirates.

Contestants are graded on voice and style of recitation, but also on their subject matter, said Sultan Al Amimi, one of the three judges on the show and a manager of Abu Dhabi's Poetry Academy.

Hilal's 15-verse poem was in a form known as Nabati, native to nomadic tribes of the Arabian Peninsula. She criticised extremism that she told AP is "creeping into our society" through fatwas.

"I have seen evil in the eyes of fatwas, at a time when the permitted is being twisted into the forbidden," she said in the poem. She called such edicts "a monster that emerged from its hiding place" whenever "the veil is lifted from the face of truth."

She described hardline clerics as "vicious in voice, barbaric, angry and blind, wearing death as a robe cinched with a belt," in an apparent reference to suicide bombers' explosives belts.

The three judges gave her the highest marks for her performance, praising her for addressing a controversial topic. That, plus voting from the 2,000 people in the audience and text messages from viewers, put her through to the final round.

"Hessa Hilal is a courageous poet," said Al Amimi. "She expressed her opinion against the kind of fatwas that affect people's lives and raised an alarm against these ad hoc fatwas coming from certain scholars who are inciting extremism."

Fatwas are not legally binding and it is up to individual Muslims to follow them. Clerics of all ideological stripes pronounced fatwas on nearly every aspect of people's lives, from how they should deal with members of other religions to what they can watch on television.

Hessa said she had heard about the death threats posted on Islamic extremist Web sites and was concerned, but "not enough to send me into hiding."

What's more on her mind is how sudden fame will change her quiet family life at home in the Saudi capital, Riyadh.

"I worry how I will be perceived after the show is over, when judgment is passed and people begin to talk about my performance and ideas," said Hessa, a mother of four who has published poetry and previously was a poetry editor at the Arab daily Al Hayat. "I worry the lights of fame will affect my simple and quiet existence."

The Million's Poet was launched in 2006 by the government's Abu Dhabi Authority for Culture and Heritage to encourage poetry.

In this, the fourth season, 48 contestants from 12 Arab countries competed, including several women along with Hessa.

On Wednesday, Hilal will be joined by five other poets in the final round. The winner of the $1.3 million grand prize will be declared a week later on March 31.

Their topics are already known. One of Hessa's rivals will address terrorism. Another woman in the finals, Jaza Al Baqmi, will reflect on the role of women.

Hessa says her poem will tackle the media, but wouldn't elaborate so as not to spoil the surprise. "My message to those who hear me is love, compassion and peace," Hessa said. "We all have to share a small planet and we need to learn how to live together."

What do you think of this issue? Has the poet overstepped the line? Or do such acts promote dialogue? Join the debate...

http://gulfnews.com/news/gulf/saudi-arabia/saudi-woman-blasts-clerics-in-tv-contest-poem-1.601907

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_2

↑ Index

312. Jonathan Morse

Jonathan Morse blogs about words and images

Sat 27 Mar 2010

-- most recently, about some words of Henry James and an image of Marilyn Monroe -- at http://jonathan-morse.blogspot.com

↑ Index

313. mIEKAL aND

Fwd: Fluxus Assembling box Nr 2

Sat 27 Mar 2010

From: Francis Van Maele <[redacted]>
Date: March 26, 2010 7:31:03 AM CDT
To: undisclosed-recipients:;
Subject: Fluxus Assembling box Nr 2

NEW .. OUT NOW .. BOX Nr 2 BOX Nr 1 WAS SOLD OUT WITHIN A WEEK order now your copy

Franticham's Assembling Box
VISUAL POETRY AND WORKS INFLUENCED BY FLUXUS

A5 box with contributions from 23 invited artists
Visual poetry, collages, prints, multiples and objects
This is a project on invitation only 40 copies signed and numbered 1/40 to 40/40
Only 15 copies available for sale
Price: 70 euro / 100 $ / 60 UK st.

ASSEMBLING BOX NR 2

Contributions from:

Fernando Aguiar, Portugal - Antic-Ham, South Korea - Anna Banana, Canada - Vittore Baroni, Italy
Robert Brandy, Luxembourg _ Keith Buchholz, USA - Bruno Chiarlone, Italy - Geert Dedecker, Belgium
David Dellafiora, Australia - Klaus Peter Dencker, Germany - Klaus Groh, Germany - Susanna Lakner, Germany
Pascal lenoir, France - Jim Leftwich, USA - Serse Luigetti, Italy - mIEKAL aND, USA
Bernd Reichert, Belgium - Gianni Simone, Japan - Litsa Spathi, Germany - Pete Spence, Australia
Carol Stetser, USA - Thierry Tillier, Belgium - Francis Van Maele, Ireland -

You can order online with Payapl or by email at [redacted] --

==========

FRANCIS VAN MAELE
REDFOXPRESS
Dugort, Achill Island
County Mayo, Ireland

WEBSITE - http://www.redfoxpress.com
BLOG - http://franticham.blogspot.com
FLICKR - http://www.flickr.com/photos/[redacted]

[redacted] or [redacted]
Tel.: 00353 - (0)98 - 43784

=!=
Data Visualization for the Synaptically Inspired
http://filevillage.info

↑ Index

314. Stephen Vincent
Haptic +Writing International Event
Sat 27 Mar 2010

Wanted to draw attention to an international real-time video audio online unintended collaboration with British artist Sarah Sanders' 24 hour sunrise to sunrise writing launch of Ekleksographia on the Ides of March during the last hour of which I made a haptic while closely listening and watching her hand and pencil do the work. For an account, at least an account of my astonishment plus the drawing, go here: http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

315. David Chirot
Re: 25 Questions, #4 . . .
Sat 27 Mar 2010

Dear Murat:

On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 11:41 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]
>wrote:

 I've made poems written for stones, tree, the air, a ray of light--without even the idea of a person involved--
 In this sense one may write for those "illiterates" or "inanimates" who do not read yet understand and know the Unwritten--
"The hills know but do not tell" as Emily Dickinson writes—

Thing Language

This ocean, humiliating in its disguises

Tougher than anything.

No one listens to poetry. The ocean

Does not mean to be listened to. A drop

Or crash of water. It means

Nothing.

It

Is bread and butter

Pepper and salt. The death

That young men hope for. Aimlessly

It pounds the shore. White and aimless signals. No

One listens to poetry.

Note: Spicer writes that “no one listens to poetry.” He does NOT write that no one reads poetry. After all, it takes reading his poem to know that he wrote that no one listens to poetry . . . Are the poems only “white and aimless signals” when heard, even if one is not listening—as one does hear say such ongoing sounds as those of oceans and electricity lines night and day humming and whining in the weathers of a city . . or the country—their “written” manifestations seen as lines, calligraphic, still or rocking in the winds,--“white and aimless” as the space of the page, which becomes written, black and with an aim—at least of the eyes-- when read . . . does the meaningless unlistened to poetry and ocean only exist as a “speaker” when read amid the white aimless signals of the page---a form of decoding . . . a misreading set down in writing—disinformation deliberately spawned by some unknown “aim”—“Thing Language” as a “thing to be read” when “not heard?”—

For the letters among Murat and myself quoted from here, see below this present screed--

I am not playing devil’s advocate here; as you know I am very much in sympathy with what you write. On the other hand, I think all too often there is a too unquestioning welcoming of things which seem to prove the values for which one may be in search of, o r confident of, rather than a more open investigation into what it is that is always already existing al around one, hidden in plain site, sight, cite.

The statements, quotes, you write are beautiful and in the best sense, "noble." On the other hand, what you are writing of is based on a faith, an assumption, that indeed what Spicer, Benjamin and you write is "true."

A point of view via the imagination is taken to be a "natural born fact, Jack."

The ancient Romans had a saying that when an event occurs--one is to ask oneself: who benefits? In Leonardo Sciascia's The Moro Affair, the author turns to Pasolini's statement of investigation: "The first symptoms are in the language."

You write:
"the idea in the title {“ Poetry Has Nothing To Do With Politics”} is an assertion of the independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry."

Might one not ask: how can an assertion such as “Poetry Has Nothing To Do With Politics “be considered as having anything to do with "an independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry"?

Is the assertion “Poetry Has Nothing To Do With Politics” by its rhetorical absolutism not in itself a denial of such independence, accidents, chaos, while being at the same time very much an assertion of POWER?

Your statements, with the selected quotations denote a search for what poetry does, means, its existential condition—and so provides the “evidences” which support the search—as a search implies—it is a search for something—an answer, a Holy Grail—a poem—

Benjamin was a person on continual searches—when he wrote with one search in mind he wrote in the manner of the quotation here. Elsewhere, for example when writing on Brecht (and/or under his influence) or the Surrealists, he was asking the questions related to his search for an actual PROGRAM: as he wrote: “Communism politicizes aesthetics.” (As opposed to Fascism’s “aestheticization of politics.”) In that context, the idea of a poetry outside of politics would be an evidence of tacit approval for the “condition of things as they are, as they exist.” And, so, a poetry at the service of the status quo of existence. If one applied the ancient Roman’s question of “who benefits,” would it not yield the same answer? That such a position benefits the status quo, the Power of the Status Quo?

Does your quotation from Benjamin actually mean, as you suggest, that “poetry listens to no one? What gives Benjamin the particular, especial Power to make this assertion as a truth? How does he presume to know whether or not the work of art in itself cares or not about its reception? Aren’t you perhaps misreading the quotation as given here? My reading of “but in none of its [Art’s] works is it concerned with his [man’s] response” is that, not to be concerned with the response, does not mean a not listening, but simply a not caring for what is heard as a response or not. That is, the response will have no effect on the poem whatsoever, as far as the poem is “concerned.” Might this not mean also that the poem DOES hear the response but simply thumbs its nose at it?

Might not Benjamin write a quite opposite response when he is writing of Brecht for example, whose intended effects via the “A effect” are designed quite consciously and openly to effect a response, and one that opens the spectator’s mind to the particular point of view re man’s condition that Brecht is “bearing the message of?”

“Art... posits
> man’s physical and spiritual existence, but in none of its works is it > concerned with his response. No poem is intended for the reader, no picture > for the beholder, no symphony for the listener.”

Benjamin in some essays argues that there are Arts which are most certainly intended to produce certain desired effects, whether they are Communist or Fascist. The question of “anarchy,” let alone Anarchism, (not to mention “Democracy,”) is left out in favor of demonstrating the urgency of the choice between the two opposing systems threatening to engulf hundreds of millions of lives. Agit-prop, the work of Brecht’s form of Theater, the films of Eisenstein and Vertov’s, Picasso’s painting of “Guernica,” the Nazi attacks on “decadence” in the arts, the Mussolini-Marinetti formulations of a Fascist Futurism, the Spanish Falange’s ultra-reactionary conceptions of a State Holy/Holy State Art —Benjamin was surrounded by works whose intentions were anything but “fugitive” as William Burroughs calls the glossary-resisting languages of drug addicts. My point is that Benjamin himself does not consistently participate in the hard core forms of absolutism demonstrated by a title such as “Poetry has nothing to do with politics.”

After all, if one truly thinks with “an assertion of the independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry" then it does not exist in Foster’s title, which is an absolutist and exclusionary one. An absolutist “chaotic power,” is basically an oxymoron; if it is exclusionary of politics it is then just as exclusionary of such forms of “anti-political” assertions as Murat’s interpretation of Foster title is. Chaos is—the INCLUSION of “both/and” rather than an exclusionary “either/or”: Chaos does not censor, pick and choose, take one side over another —Chaos is IMPROBABLITY. “Un Coup de des n’abolira jamais le hazard,” yet speak with any gambler and very often “chance had nothing to do with it.”

--That is the paradoxical nature of Chaos: that a single event can be perceived, and is perceived, thus affecting its own actions, from such a multiplicity of points that it can appear simultaneously to be “pure hazard,” or “Fate,” “meant to be,” or “the Will of the Individual/God” asserting its “triumph in adversity” over “out of control” situations, etc etc. Poets employ imposed forms of “Chance Operations” on various materials, presenting the “chance results” as demonstrations of “impersonal” or “found” poetry. However, by the very construction of a “Method of Operations” in limiting the quantity of data/material being worked with, is there not a limit being set on the basically illimitable, and so-by ruling out a good deal of what is actually “chance operating?” The I Ching, for example, deliberately limits the number of lines employed, so that a sense of order arises out of the seeming Chaos and so demonstrates The Way to be taken in a particular situation.

The key to “an assertion of the independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry” might be for starters to eliminate the “assertion.” “Assertion” in such close provenance to the word “power” reminds one that assertions are just that, assertions of a “power” that Knows, or is Presumed to Know.” The “author” as “authority” in other words, and, by being a poet, being an authority on Poetry and what it has or not to do with, what its intentions and limits are. Does poetry care that “no one” listens to it? Or is it only the poet who does? How does the poet even know if “poetry” cares or not? Does a “poem” or “poetry” always do what the author/poet authorizes, what he or she intends it to do ?

Is not the assertion of “the independent, accidental, power of, poetry” in itself a political action, in that it is a “declaration of independence” from something, and, in this case, specifically, from a Political Poetry? How can an assertion of the “accidental power of poetry” be made , as an assertion? Is there not something in an assertion which rules out precisely the accidental possibilities, intentions, of the assertion? When one writes of “power” in any context, may it not be associated precisely with the power of “authority,” of Political power,” “the Power of the Word,” the power of “the author” and so remain well within the domain of am encounter with power in al its guises, political and not?

It has become an increasingly “powerfully” argued position of power which has especially since the eve of the Invasion and Occupation of Iraq been asserting that poetry has nothing to do with the political, that its “power” lies elsewhere, perhaps not even in the poet—or not even in the poem itself. From one viewpoint, one might “see this” as the assertion of an elitist position “above the mere fray” of the political and the rest of the “bad objects” which need not be claimed among those belonging to Poetry. If poetry, then, is actually the “independent, accidental, power, of poetry”—might it not be just as independent of this taking of an apolitical stance as of a political? If its truly accidental, might it not accidently run into politics on its way to the non political poem? Of poetry as power, might it not use its power against anyone who makes such assertions as the claim to know what the power of poetry is?

I think that when one makes such absolutist rhetorical statements about poetry, it is well to recall that they are indeed rhetorical statements. These are not statements of fact, but of belief, of a choice between what the writer delineates as an “either/or” rather than as a completely open ended situation, in which poetry may be seen, heard, listened, written by, for, with, to any one or no one, or by, to, with, for no one, any one, a one or a few or some or many and so on. To assert that Poetry has “nothing to do with politics” is to be kept in mind as the assertion of a specific poet in a very specific time and place, and within the historical context of that poet’s nation, then—now—being at War on multiple fronts in the Middle East, Colombia and North Eastern Africa, as well as being torn apart by various “warring factions” within the nation, including, as the assertion makes evident, within the nation’s various poetries and poetics, poets and groups of poets.

Since the eve of the Invasion and Occupation of Iraq, as well as during al the time the Invasion and attempted occupation of Afghanistan and many other countries, most recently Haiti, from some points of view—it has become popular to invoke the idea that poetry has nothing to do with the political. Amiri Baraka has written that for some large segments of the poetry writing community, especially among academic and academic-related poets and poetries, this apolitical position may have to do with maintaining job security in the face of an inquisitive and forceful Homeland Security. Certainly as the times grow worse economically and culturally, such an assertion of a poet's position might need to be more than ever emphasized—after al a self-proclaimed non political poet is likely to be far less trouble than those speaking out about the conditions of the academy, or of students, or of themselves or any other cause related to the academy or State. Granted that Amiri Baraka as a political poet will take a political view of those professing to be non-political, there is always the "probability," since he is also a poet, of his viewpoint being as much of a "poetic" one as any other poet's. Whether one agrees or disagrees with his position—does it not involve one with politics at least in order to deny one's involvement in it?

I like very much Murat's expression "the independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry;" I think for myself the difficulty with it arises with in the context it is expressed in: that of assertions, of quotations from "authorities" and so forth. That is, this manner of contextualizing such "independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry" basically denies the existence of al these elements by making of them an "either/or" statement of assertion, a taking of sides against inclusivity in poetry, the denial of its power to behave out of the poet's control, out of even its own control . . .

By imposing criteria, as I indicated earlier, one is attempting to control the direction and elements of the discussion. By imposing criteria, one is limiting what a poet, what a poem what a poetry and poetics may be. This is because, I think, it has to do with the idea that a poet, a poem, a poetry, a poetics, is involved with a seeking for something, even if that something has nothing to do with readers, listeners, writers at all, it is still a search for poetry as something which exists in such a such condition, of which one can be at a certain point and level, sure. One has faith, then , that it exists, it must exist—

For many years I have been working with and thinking on the Found, which is something very often –I would say nearly always in many ways though not "all" necessarily----independent, accidental and chaotic. Picasso stated: "I do not seek, I find." (Note he is speaking only for himself, not the overall run of artists, not making an assertion other than of his own and own work--) The more I have worked with l, lived with, though on this little phrase, the more profound I find it the more profound I see the gulf between the Search, the Seeker and the one who finds. The latter is operating in the area which Paul Celan writes of, in which "Poetry no longer imposes itself, but exposes itself."

One does not know what one may find, whether by accident, by being independent of preconceived images, ideas and dogmas, or open wide to the actions and elements of that chaotic power not only of poetry but of anything which one “comes across,” meets in one’s random, destination-less, “wanderings about.”

By the very accidental, independent, chaotic power of the Found, the poetry, the poem exposing itself may be political, it might not be—who knows? Is the one who finds even a poet? By which I mean does the one who finds impose already the limits of the so called “poetic” on what it finds exposed as “poetry?” Is it not perhaps that poetry, a poem, might be speaking, writing, al of the time —and that it is not that no one listens to this or reads it, it’s that perhaps no one recognizes that is always already speaking, writing, listening—

--and in the great vanity of “man’s/woman’s response” or not, in his/her hearing or not, in the immense vanity of her/his’s assertions—or not—these very things ever ongoing al around one at every instant are being completely ignored—not so much “unheard, unseen, untouched” as simply—rendered deaf, dumb and blind not to mention “non-existent” but by the power of assertions regarding things which are truly Outside a human’s control? Thus the assertion that not only does no one listen to poetry, but that poetry might also be listening to no one—a kind of cancelling out of negatives . . . leaving one with the assertion of—what? A conflict? A drama? A void . . . abhorred by Nature--

For myself, the assertion that poetry has nothing to do with politics is a very political one, in that it is limiting what the action, the elements of a poem, of poetry, of poetics is, it is limiting the actions by poets and groups of poets as wel as depriving them of vast areas of elements of materials to use. For myself, this is a deeply political act, for in denying the politics of its political act, the assertion is beginning to use that form of sophism one encounters non stop in the media, which has been used to drag a country into one War after another while its poets’ rhetorics are turned towards a critique of critiquing the conditions of poetry in the same manner that the polices of the State critique and essay to make irrelevant and non-existent any critique of its policies, increasingly dependent on a language of erasure and denial, so that one wil not notice that the proud election of a Black President means not the “end to racism” in America any more than it lessens the support for the world’s one Apartheid State. The only way to juggle such contradictions as this nation’s policies embody daily, is to also make the assertion that, along with poetry, one has nothing to do with politics. To deny the contradictions is to say that things that are opposites are the same. War=Peace. Love =Hate, etc What does Poetry = then? Non-Politics, Non Poetry---??? Poetry=Poetry!!!! Yet who decides what Poetry is?

The greatest victory for the State is when no one and nothing has anything to do with politics. “Let them write poetry!!!”—as “no one listens to it” and, perhaps, poetry does not listen to the poets either!

One might even find this situation developing:

In a jerky and ferocious style, [Defoe's] essay argued that literature should be written by non-literary people, just as politics should be and indeed was being taken over by non-politicians, as (Defoe) was delighted to observe. The corresponding revolution in writing, Defoe went on to say, would, in a sense, abolish literature itself. When poetry is written by non-poets and read by non-readers.

*Roberto Bolano, Distant Star

*As cited in *2010-03-09: Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress (14): David Baptiste Chirot, Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from Guantánamo)<http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html>

At Jerome Rothenberg’s http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html

Also appeared at:
· KAURAB Online :: A Bengali Poetry Webzine :: Translation Site<http://www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html>

The circumstances of the poets, the Pentagon supervision of censorships, ... With the Guantanamo Poems, as Flagg Miller suggests in his excellent preface, .... David Baptiste Chirot is an amazing litterateur, artist, reader and critic. ... www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:OtkLaOypEuoJ:www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html+david+chirot+guntanamo+poets+kaurab&cd=1&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=firefox-a>
· DAVID-BAPTISTE CHIROT: New Books @ Kaurab<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2010/02/new-books-kaurab.html>

Feb 5, 2010 ... (also has Visual Poetry by chirot). Kaurab Translation Site Poems from Guantánamo The Detainees Speak David Baptite Chirot * ...* *david*baptiste*chirot*.blogspot.com/2010/02/new-books-kaurab.h

Thing Language

This ocean, humiliating in its disguises

Tougher than anything.

No one listens to poetry. The ocean

Does not mean to be listened to. A drop

Or crash of water. It means

Nothing.

It

Is bread and butter

Pepper and salt. The death

That young men hope for. Aimlessly

It pounds the shore. White and aimless signals. No

One listens to poetry.

> Date: Thu, 25 Mar 2010 07:05:46 -0400
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: 25 questions, #4...
> To: [redacted]
>
> Hi Alan, David,
>
> Here is a quote from my review of Ed Foster's book of poems *What He Ought
> To Know*:
>
> "For Ed Foster. Spicer’s comment, “no one listens to poetry,” is at the > heart of a poetic revolution. He transforms this existential condition into > Walter Benjamin’s suggestion that poetry listens to no one: “Art... posits > man’s physical and spiritual existence, but in none of its works is it > concerned with his response. No poem is intended for the reader, no picture > for the beholder, no symphony for the listener.” This quotation appears in > Foster’s poem, “Poetry Has Nothing To Do With Politics.” More than a denial > of politics, the idea in the title is an assertion of the independent, > accidental, chaotic power, of poetry."
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat

>
>
> On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 11:41 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]
>wrote:
>
> > Like Alan, i don't understand the "should"--other than in such
"extenuating > > circumstances" as in cases of the coerced, of desperation, of fear or > > perhaps the obscurely shifted desire to "do the right thing" in some > > inwardly confused sense of "moral duty" or "moral suasion."
> >
> > Or--in the cases of propaganda and advertising.
> >
> > A Russian artist writes that language is a fascism not because it
silences
> > or censors, but because it forces one to speak.
> >
> > Such would be the case of the "should" perhaps--
> >
> > A writer writes for those who read, who in turn may read for those who do > > not read.
> >
> > A writer writes--for whom? Oneself and other strangers?
> >
> > I've made poems written for stones, tree, the air, a ray of light--without > > even the idea of a person involved--
> >
> > In this sense one may write for those "illiterates" or "inanimates" who do > > not read yet understand and know the Unwritten--
> >
> >
> >
> > "The hills know but do not tell" as Emily Dickinson writes--
>

↑ Index

316. Jonathan Minton
Word For/Word #16
Sun 28 Mar 2010

I'm pleased to announce that Word For/Word #16 is online at www.wordforword.info

with poetry and visuals by

Scott Abels, Elizabeth Winder, Donald Dunbar, Naomi Beth Tarle, Josef Kaplan, Cherise Bacalski, Emily Kendal Frey, Carlyle Baker, Crane Giamo, Steve Roggenbuck, erica lewis, Reed Altemus, Alexandra Mattraw, Stephanie Martz, Ashley VanDoorn, Karl Kempton, Breonna Krafft, James Capozzi, Sasha Steensen, and Jackie Clark, plus essays, reviews, and special features on Post-Neo-Absurdism (co-edited by Michael Peters) and Anne Blonstein (co-Edited by Kathrin Schaeppi)

Cheers!

Jonathan Minton

www.wordforword.info

+ + +

"Adieu," by James Capozzi

Adieu bridge like a horizon with stairs and a scar and an arch with infamous paints, red balustrade

Adieu bridge I bang feet on

Adieu tall chalet

your mauve torture, violent grays

your bent and sainted Haitian radio

Adieu chalet of the sweet potato

Adieu vile sets, the oblique life that paves black

the squalid grass befits me

Adieu villain city, death of memory

↑ Index

317. Jeffrey Side
Contact email address needed for Joanne Kyger
Sun 28 Mar 2010

Has anyone got Joanne Kyger's email address? I used to have it, but have lost it.
Best,
Jeff

↑ Index

318. amy king
One more on Ai - NYT
Sun 28 Mar 2010

Ai, a Steadfast Poetic Channel of Hard Lives, Dies at 62

http://www.nytimes.com/2010/03/28/books/28ai.html?hpw

Amy

_____

HTML GIANT -- You might like me too:

http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

THE GURLESQUE - NOT ENOUGH GRRRL?

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/22/my-visceral-thought/

↑ Index

319. Mary Kasimor
Re: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
Sun 28 Mar 2010

What a brave woman and an amazing thing--people listen to and read poetry in Arab culture. It has to be a tradition that goes back centuries.

--- On Sat, 3/27/10, Nicholas Karavatos <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Nicholas Karavatos <[redacted]>
Subject: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, March 27, 2010, 3:01 AM

Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem

Saudi poet Hessa Hilal lashed out at hard-line clerics' religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."

AP
Published: 17:36 March 23, 2010
Reader comments (12)

Dubai: It was a startling voice of protest at a startling venue. Covered head-to-toe in black, a Saudi woman lashed out at hard-line Muslim clerics' harsh religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."

Well, not quite "American Idol": Contestants compete not in singing but in traditional Arabic poetry. Over the past episodes, poets sitting on an elaborate stage before a live audience have recited odes to the beauty of Bedouin life and the glories of their rulers or mourning the gap between rich and poor.

Then last week, Hessa Hilal, only her eyes visible through her veil, delivered a blistering poem against Muslim preachers "who sit in the position of power" but are "frightening" people with their fatwas, or religious edicts, and "preying like a wolf" on those seeking peace.

Her poem got loud cheers from the audience and won her a place in the competition's finals, to be aired on Wednesday.

It also brought her death threats, posted on several Islamic militant web sites.

Hessa shrugs off the controversy.

"My poetry has always been provocative," she told The Associated Press in an interview. "It's a way to express myself and give voice to Arab women, silenced by those who have hijacked our culture and our religion."

Her poem was seen as a response to Shaikh Abdul Rahman Al Barrak, a prominent cleric in Saudi Arabia who recently issued a fatwa saying those who call for the mingling of men and women should be considered infidels, punishable by death.

But more broadly, it was seen as addressing any of many hard-line clerics in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere in the region who hold a wide influence through television programmes, university positions or web sites. "Killing a human being is so easy for them, it is always an option," she told the AP.

Poetry holds a prominent place in Arab culture, and some poets in the Middle East have a fan base akin to those of rock stars.

The programme, The Million's Poet, is a chance for poets to show off their original work, airing live weekly on satellite television across the Arab world from Abu Dhabi, capital of the United Arab Emirates.

Contestants are graded on voice and style of recitation, but also on their subject matter, said Sultan Al Amimi, one of the three judges on the show and a manager of Abu Dhabi's Poetry Academy.

Hilal's 15-verse poem was in a form known as Nabati, native to nomadic tribes of the Arabian Peninsula. She criticised extremism that she told AP is "creeping into our society" through fatwas.

"I have seen evil in the eyes of fatwas, at a time when the permitted is being twisted into the forbidden," she said in the poem. She called such edicts "a monster that emerged from its hiding place" whenever "the veil is lifted from the face of truth."

She described hardline clerics as "vicious in voice, barbaric, angry and blind, wearing death as a robe cinched with a belt," in an apparent reference to suicide bombers' explosives belts.

The three judges gave her the highest marks for her performance, praising her for addressing a controversial topic. That, plus voting from the 2,000 people in the audience and text messages from viewers, put her through to the final round.

"Hessa Hilal is a courageous poet," said Al Amimi. "She expressed her opinion against the kind of fatwas that affect people's lives and raised an alarm against these ad hoc fatwas coming from certain scholars who are inciting extremism."

Fatwas are not legally binding and it is up to individual Muslims to follow them. Clerics of all ideological stripes pronounced fatwas on nearly every aspect of people's lives, from how they should deal with members of other religions to what they can watch on television.

Hessa said she had heard about the death threats posted on Islamic extremist Web sites and was concerned, but "not enough to send me into hiding."

What's more on her mind is how sudden fame will change her quiet family life at home in the Saudi capital, Riyadh.

"I worry how I will be perceived after the show is over, when judgment is passed and people begin to talk about my performance and ideas," said Hessa, a mother of four who has published poetry and previously was a poetry editor at the Arab daily Al Hayat. "I worry the lights of fame will affect my simple and quiet existence."

The Million's Poet was launched in 2006 by the government's Abu Dhabi Authority for Culture and Heritage to encourage poetry.

In this, the fourth season, 48 contestants from 12 Arab countries competed, including several women along with Hessa.

On Wednesday, Hilal will be joined by five other poets in the final round. The winner of the $1.3 million grand prize will be declared a week later on March 31.

Their topics are already known. One of Hessa's rivals will address terrorism. Another woman in the finals, Jaza Al Baqmi, will reflect on the role of women.

Hessa says her poem will tackle the media, but wouldn't elaborate so as not to spoil the surprise. "My message to those who hear me is love, compassion and peace," Hessa said. "We all have to share a small planet and we need to learn how to live together."

What do you think of this issue? Has the poet overstepped the line? Or do such acts promote dialogue? Join the debate...

http://gulfnews.com/news/gulf/saudi-arabia/saudi-woman-blasts-clerics-in-tv-contest-poem-1.601907

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_2

↑ Index

320. Halvard Johnson

Re: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"

Sun 28 Mar 2010

And here in the US it goes back at least . . . oh, fifteen minutes.

Hal

follow this link to The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye, my latest collection --

http://www.scribd.com/people/documents/14481250-chalk-editions

Halvard Johnson
==========
[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com

http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Sun, Mar 28, 2010 at 1:32 PM, Mary Kasimor <[redacted]> wrote:

> What a brave woman and an amazing thing--people listen to and read poetry in Arab culture. It has to be a tradition that goes back centuries.
>
> --- On Sat, 3/27/10, Nicholas Karavatos <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> From: Nicholas Karavatos <[redacted]>
> Subject: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Saturday, March 27, 2010, 3:01 AM
>
> Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem
>
> Saudi poet Hessa Hilal lashed out at hard-line clerics' religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."
>
> AP
> Published: 17:36 March 23, 2010
> Reader comments (12)
>
> Dubai: It was a startling voice of protest at a startling venue. Covered head-to-toe in black, a Saudi woman lashed out at hard-line Muslim clerics' harsh religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."
>
> Well, not quite "American Idol": Contestants compete not in singing but in traditional Arabic poetry. Over the past episodes, poets sitting on an elaborate stage before a live audience have recited odes to the beauty of Bedouin life and the glories of their rulers or mourning the gap between rich and poor.
>
> Then last week, Hessa Hilal, only her eyes visible through her veil, delivered a blistering poem against Muslim preachers "who sit in the position of power" but are "frightening" people with their fatwas, or religious edicts, and "preying like a wolf" on those seeking peace.
>
> Her poem got loud cheers from the audience and won her a place in the competition's finals, to be aired on Wednesday.

It also brought her death threats, posted on several Islamic militant web sites.

Hessa shrugs off the controversy.

"My poetry has always been provocative," she told The Associated Press in an interview. "It's a way to express myself and give voice to Arab women, silenced by those who have hijacked our culture and our religion."

Her poem was seen as a response to Shaikh Abdul Rahman Al Barrak, a prominent cleric in Saudi Arabia who recently issued a fatwa saying those who call for the mingling of men and women should be considered infidels, punishable by death.

But more broadly, it was seen as addressing any of many hard-line clerics in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere in the region who hold a wide influence through television programmes, university positions or web sites. "Killing a human being is so easy for them, it is always an option," she told the AP.

Poetry holds a prominent place in Arab culture, and some poets in the Middle East have a fan base akin to those of rock stars.

The programme, The Million's Poet, is a chance for poets to show off their original work, airing live weekly on satellite television across the Arab world from Abu Dhabi, capital of the United Arab Emirates.

Contestants are graded on voice and style of recitation, but also on their subject matter, said Sultan Al Amimi, one of the three judges on the show and a manager of Abu Dhabi's Poetry Academy.

Hilal's 15-verse poem was in a form known as Nabati, native to nomadic tribes of the Arabian Peninsula. She criticised extremism that she told AP is "creeping into our society" through fatwas.

"I have seen evil in the eyes of fatwas, at a time when the permitted is being twisted into the forbidden," she said in the poem. She called such edicts "a monster that emerged from its hiding place" whenever "the veil is lifted from the face of truth."

She described hardline clerics as "vicious in voice, barbaric, angry and blind, wearing death as a robe cinched with a belt," in an apparent reference to suicide bombers' explosives belts.

The three judges gave her the highest marks for her performance, praising her for addressing a controversial topic. That, plus voting from the 2,000 people in the audience and text messages from viewers, put her through to the final round.

"Hessa Hilal is a courageous poet," said Al Amimi. "She expressed her opinion against the kind of fatwas that affect people's lives and raised an alarm against these ad hoc fatwas coming from certain scholars who are inciting extremism."

Fatwas are not legally binding and it is up to individual Muslims to follow them. Clerics of all ideological stripes pronounced fatwas on nearly every aspect of people's lives, from how they should deal with members of other religions to what they can watch on television.

Hessa said she had heard about the death threats posted on Islamic extremist Web sites and was concerned, but "not enough to send me into hiding."

What's more on her mind is how sudden fame will change her quiet family life at home in the Saudi capital, Riyadh.

"I worry how I will be perceived after the show is over, when judgment is passed and people begin to talk about my performance and ideas," said Hessa, a mother of four who has published poetry and previously was a poetry editor at the Arab daily Al Hayat. "I worry the lights of fame will affect my simple and quiet existence."

The Million's Poet was launched in 2006 by the government's Abu Dhabi Authority for Culture and Heritage to encourage poetry.

In this, the fourth season, 48 contestants from 12 Arab countries competed, including several women along with Hessa.

On Wednesday, Hilal will be joined by five other poets in the final round. The winner of the $1.3 million grand prize will be declared a week later on March 31.

Their topics are already known. One of Hessa's rivals will address terrorism. Another woman in the finals, Jaza Al Baqmi, will reflect on the role of women.

Hessa says her poem will tackle the media, but wouldn't elaborate so as not to spoil the surprise.
"My message to those who hear me is love, compassion and peace," Hessa said. "We all have to share a small planet and we need to learn how to live together."

What do you think of this issue? Has the poet overstepped the line? Or do such acts promote dialogue? Join the debate...

> http://gulfnews.com/news/gulf/saudi-arabia/saudi-woman-blasts-clerics-in-tv-contest-poem-1.601907
>
> Nicholas Karavatos
> Dept of Language & Literature
> American University of Sharjah
> PO Box 26666
> Sharjah
> United Arab Emirates
>
> _____
> Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_2

↑ Index

321. carol dorf

Re: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"

Sun 28 Mar 2010

I'm impressed that so many people care passionately about poetry -- let's imagine a popular TV show where poets (dressed in Chadors!) recited their poetry, and were judged by the poetry, not by all the externals of "performing poetry."

On Sun, Mar 28, 2010 at 9:32 AM, Mary Kasimor <[redacted]> wrote:

> What a brave woman and an amazing thing--people listen to and read poetry in Arab culture. It has to be a tradition that goes back centuries.

--- On Sat, 3/27/10, Nicholas Karavatos <[redacted]>
wrote:

From: Nicholas Karavatos <[redacted]>
Subject: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, March 27, 2010, 3:01 AM

Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem

Saudi poet Hessa Hilal lashed out at hard-line clerics' religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."

AP
Published: 17:36 March 23, 2010
Reader comments (12)

Dubai: It was a startling voice of protest at a startling venue. Covered head-to-toe in black, a Saudi woman lashed out at hard-line Muslim clerics' harsh religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."

Well, not quite "American Idol": Contestants compete not in singing but in traditional Arabic poetry. Over the past episodes, poets sitting on an elaborate stage before a live audience have recited odes to the beauty of Bedouin life and the glories of their rulers or mourning the gap between rich and poor.

Then last week, Hessa Hilal, only her eyes visible through her veil, delivered a blistering poem against Muslim preachers "who sit in the position of power" but are "frightening" people with their fatwas, or religious edicts, and "preying like a wolf" on those seeking peace.

Her poem got loud cheers from the audience and won her a place in the competition's finals, to be aired on Wednesday.

It also brought her death threats, posted on several Islamic militant web sites.

Hessa shrugs off the controversy.

"My poetry has always been provocative," she told The Associated Press in an interview. "It's a way to express myself and give voice to Arab women, silenced by those who have hijacked our culture and our religion."

Her poem was seen as a response to Shaikh Abdul Rahman Al Barrak, a prominent cleric in Saudi Arabia who recently issued a fatwa saying those who call for the mingling of men and women should be considered infidels, punishable by death.

But more broadly, it was seen as addressing any of many hard-line clerics in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere in the region who hold a wide influence through television programmes, university positions or web sites. "Killing a human being is so easy for them, it is always an option," she told the AP.

Poetry holds a prominent place in Arab culture, and some poets in the Middle East have a fan base akin to those of rock stars.

The programme, The Million's Poet, is a chance for poets to show off their original work, airing live weekly on satellite television across the Arab world from Abu Dhabi, capital of the United Arab Emirates.

Contestants are graded on voice and style of recitation, but also on their subject matter, said Sultan Al Amimi, one of the three judges on the show and a manager of Abu Dhabi's Poetry Academy.

Hilal's 15-verse poem was in a form known as Nabati, native to nomadic tribes of the Arabian Peninsula. She criticised extremism that she told AP is "creeping into our society" through fatwas.

"I have seen evil in the eyes of fatwas, at a time when the permitted is being twisted into the forbidden," she said in the poem. She called such edicts "a monster that emerged from its hiding place" whenever "the veil is lifted from the face of truth."

She described hardline clerics as "vicious in voice, barbaric, angry and blind, wearing death as a robe cinched with a belt," in an apparent reference to suicide bombers' explosives belts.

The three judges gave her the highest marks for her performance, praising her for addressing a controversial topic. That, plus voting from the 2,000 people in the audience and text messages from viewers, put her through to the final round.

"Hessa Hilal is a courageous poet," said Al Amimi. "She expressed her opinion against the kind of fatwas that affect people's lives and raised an alarm against these ad hoc fatwas coming from certain scholars who are inciting extremism."

Fatwas are not legally binding and it is up to individual Muslims to follow them. Clerics of all ideological stripes pronounced fatwas on nearly every aspect of people's lives, from how they should deal with members of other religions to what they can watch on television.

Hessa said she had heard about the death threats posted on Islamic extremist Web sites and was concerned, but "not enough to send me into hiding."

What's more on her mind is how sudden fame will change her quiet family life at home in the Saudi capital, Riyadh.

"I worry how I will be perceived after the show is over, when judgment is passed and people begin to talk about my performance and ideas," said Hessa, a mother of four who has published poetry and previously was a poetry editor at the Arab daily Al Hayat. "I worry the lights of fame will affect my simple and quiet existence."

The Million's Poet was launched in 2006 by the government's Abu Dhabi Authority for Culture and Heritage to encourage poetry.

In this, the fourth season, 48 contestants from 12 Arab countries competed, including several women along with Hessa.

On Wednesday, Hilal will be joined by five other poets in the final round. The winner of the $1.3 million grand prize will be declared a week later on March 31.

Their topics are already known. One of Hessa's rivals will address terrorism. Another woman in the finals, Jaza Al Baqmi, will reflect on the role of women.

Hessa says her poem will tackle the media, but wouldn't elaborate so as not to spoil the surprise.
"My message to those who hear me is love, compassion and peace," Hessa said. "We all have to share a small planet and we need to learn how to live together."

What do you think of this issue? Has the poet overstepped the line? Or do such acts promote dialogue? Join the debate...

http://gulfnews.com/news/gulf/saudi-arabia/saudi-woman-blasts-clerics-in-tv-contest-poem-1.601907

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

_____
Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_2

↑ Index

322. Jake Marmer
Passover Jazz Poetry
Mon 29 Mar 2010

Hey all,

Passover Jazz Poetry vids @ the Forward this week - http://www.forward.com/articles/126922/

Enjoy!
-JM

↑ Index

323. peter ganick
It's Only Po-Et-Ry [apologies for cross-posting]
Mon 29 Mar 2010

an important new book by Peter Ganick from white sky books:

**
*
[image: [cover thumbnail]]
It's Only Po-Et-Ry And I Like It
*

available at www.lulu.com/content/8488723

*567 pages, $25. paperbound, * *download *free until April 6, 2010.

*
*

"Ganick registers in their course the semiotic pulses of language--its rhythms and teeming vocabularies--its isness, its thisness and itness, this continuous unforming and forming of itself, spooling out across the verses. It forms here by virtue of a linked idea or analogous theme; there through correspondence of sound; again by ingesting the flotsam of brand-names and truisms littering the landscape, for the nth time--unexpectedly--through spans or lacunae of logic. We can imagine Thought staring through various planes of language like planes of glass, turning them with and against each other, rotating their intersecting transparencies, a cognitive kaleidoscope dancing with the light that passes through it in its motion."

-- Olchar Lindsann

↑ Index

324. mIEKAL aND Abecedarium by Peter Lamborn Wilson
Mon 29 Mar 2010

New from Xexoxial Editions

Abecedarium by Peter Lamborn Wilson

http://xexoxial.org/is/abecedarium/by/peter_lamborn_wilson 2010. 8.25 x 8.25, 68 pages, b + w. $10.00 + $3 shipping.

ISBN 0-9770049-8-8 | EAN-13 978-0-9770049-8-0

Alphapoetic meditation on the etymology of the English alphabet with diagrams by the author.

Peter Lamborn Wilson’s quick wit and poetic intelligence add immeasurably to the small store of recent art and poetry (Mac Low, Berman, Silliman, Bok, Johns, to name a few) celebrating or utilitizng the lore and wonder of alphabetic writing. As with Mac Low and Berman in particular, Wilson’s focus is on the Hebrew alphabet, coterminous with the Phoenician at the alphabet's beginnings: a meditation, visual and verbal, on the shape, form, history, and praxis of the letters and signs in question. The resultant Abecedarium, reads like poetry or what we now take poetry to be: short and tight prose versets that bring to life a world of lore and tradition, and by so doing, make it new. A book to read again and again, and a lettristic delight.

—Jerome Rothenberg

Abecedarium by Peter Lamborn WilsonThis remarkable lexicon explores tensions between life in a world before the State and the emergence of the alphabet, or the origin of the world as we purport to know it. Amidst the reign and terror of nonsense, in a land where 'everything is believable and nothing knowable,' Peter Lamborn Wilson—at the peak of his extraordinary power—tutors us in the old ways in an offering of both knowledge and wisdom.

—Ammiel Alcalay

Review copies available upon request.

Xexoxial Editions
10375 County Hway Alphabet
La Farge, WI 54639

[redacted]

↑ Index

325. Iris Law

Poetry Prompt Contest - Deadline April 1

Mon 29 Mar 2010

The *Lantern Review *Blog is hosting a prompt contest in honor of National Poetry Month 2010. Three runners-up and one winner will have the writing prompts that they submit featured on four successive Fridays during the month of April. In addition, the winner will receive a signed copy of Monica Youn's new poetry collection, Ignatz, thanks to the generous sponsorship of Four Way Books. The deadline for entry is 11:59 PM EST on April 1st. All you have to do is leave a comment on our contest post with your favorite writing exercise and some form of contact information (and if you're really uncomfortable with leaving contact info in a comment, you can also leave your prompt in the comments but email us separately at [redacted]).

Here's the link: * http://lanternreview.com/blog/2010/03/23/announcing-our-2010-national-poetry-month-prompt-contest/

*Best of luck!

Lantern Review Editorial Baord
Iris A. Law, Editor
Mia Ayumi Malhotra, Associate Editor

--
Iris A. Law
MFA Candidate
Department of Creative Writing
University of Notre Dame
[redacted]

↑ Index

326. Al Filreis
PoemTalk #30 released today: "the poem is remembering me"
Mon 29 Mar 2010

Today we are releasing PoemTalk episode #30, which features Robert Grenier, Bob Perelman, and Charles Bernstein discussing two poems by William Carlos Williams selected by Grenier.

http://www.poemtalk.org
http://www.poetryfoundation.org

- Al Filreis

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
University of Pennsylvania

on the web: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis
blog: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/blog

↑ Index

327. Thomas savage
Re: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
Mon 29 Mar 2010

This is wonderful. That there is a poetry "Idol" anywhere in the world where a poet can win a million dollars is astonishing. All power to this courageous woman who dared to speak out against the medieval conditions in which she finds herself trapped.

--- On Sat, 3/27/10, Nicholas Karavatos <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Nicholas Karavatos <[redacted]>
Subject: "Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, March 27, 2010, 4:01 AM

Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem

Saudi poet Hessa Hilal lashed out at hard-line clerics' religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."

AP
Published: 17:36 March 23, 2010
Reader comments (12)

Dubai: It was a startling voice of protest at a startling venue. Covered head-to-toe in black, a Saudi woman lashed out at hard-line Muslim clerics' harsh religious edicts in verse on live TV at a popular Arabic version of "American Idol."

Well, not quite "American Idol": Contestants compete not in singing but in traditional Arabic poetry. Over the past episodes, poets sitting on an elaborate stage before a live audience have recited odes to the beauty of Bedouin life and the glories of their rulers or mourning the gap between rich and poor.

Then last week, Hessa Hilal, only her eyes visible through her veil, delivered a blistering poem against Muslim preachers "who sit in the position of power" but are "frightening" people with their fatwas, or religious edicts, and "preying like a wolf" on those seeking peace.

Her poem got loud cheers from the audience and won her a place in the competition's finals, to be aired on Wednesday.

It also brought her death threats, posted on several Islamic militant web sites.

Hessa shrugs off the controversy.

"My poetry has always been provocative," she told The Associated Press in an interview. "It's a way to express myself and give voice to Arab women, silenced by those who have hijacked our culture and our religion."

Her poem was seen as a response to Shaikh Abdul Rahman Al Barrak, a prominent cleric in Saudi Arabia who recently issued a fatwa saying those who call for the mingling of men and women should be considered infidels, punishable by death.

But more broadly, it was seen as addressing any of many hard-line clerics in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere in the region who hold a wide influence through television programmes, university positions or web sites. "Killing a human being is so easy for them, it is always an option," she told the AP.

Poetry holds a prominent place in Arab culture, and some poets in the Middle East have a fan base akin to those of rock stars.

The programme, The Million's Poet, is a chance for poets to show off their original work, airing live weekly on satellite television across the Arab world from Abu Dhabi, capital of the United Arab Emirates.

Contestants are graded on voice and style of recitation, but also on their subject matter, said Sultan Al Amimi, one of the three judges on the show and a manager of Abu Dhabi's Poetry Academy.

Hilal's 15-verse poem was in a form known as Nabati, native to nomadic tribes of the Arabian Peninsula. She criticised extremism that she told AP is "creeping into our society" through fatwas.

"I have seen evil in the eyes of fatwas, at a time when the permitted is being twisted into the forbidden," she said in the poem. She called such edicts "a monster that emerged from its hiding place" whenever "the veil is lifted from the face of truth."

She described hardline clerics as "vicious in voice, barbaric, angry and blind, wearing death as a robe cinched with a belt," in an apparent reference to suicide bombers' explosives belts.

The three judges gave her the highest marks for her performance, praising her for addressing a controversial topic. That, plus voting from the 2,000 people in the audience and text messages from viewers, put her through to the final round.

"Hessa Hilal is a courageous poet," said Al Amimi. "She expressed her opinion against the kind of fatwas that affect people's lives and raised an alarm against these ad hoc fatwas coming from certain scholars who are inciting extremism."

Fatwas are not legally binding and it is up to individual Muslims to follow them. Clerics of all ideological stripes pronounced fatwas on nearly every aspect of people's lives, from how they should deal with members of other religions to what they can watch on television.

Hessa said she had heard about the death threats posted on Islamic extremist Web sites and was concerned, but "not enough to send me into hiding."

What's more on her mind is how sudden fame will change her quiet family life at home in the Saudi capital, Riyadh.

"I worry how I will be perceived after the show is over, when judgment is passed and people begin to talk about my performance and ideas," said Hessa, a mother of four who has published poetry and previously was a poetry editor at the Arab daily Al Hayat. "I worry the lights of fame will affect my simple and quiet existence."

The Million's Poet was launched in 2006 by the government's Abu Dhabi Authority for Culture and Heritage to encourage poetry.

In this, the fourth season, 48 contestants from 12 Arab countries competed, including several women along with Hessa.

On Wednesday, Hilal will be joined by five other poets in the final round. The winner of the $1.3 million grand prize will be declared a week later on March 31.

Their topics are already known. One of Hessa's rivals will address terrorism. Another woman in the finals, Jaza Al Baqmi, will reflect on the role of women.

Hessa says her poem will tackle the media, but wouldn't elaborate so as not to spoil the surprise. "My message to those who hear me is love, compassion and peace," Hessa said. "We all have to share a small planet and we need to learn how to live together."

What do you think of this issue? Has the poet overstepped the line? Or do such acts promote dialogue? Join the debate...

http://gulfnews.com/news/gulf/saudi-arabia/saudi-woman-blasts-clerics-in-tv-contest-poem-1.601907

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_2

↑ Index

328. Stephen Vincent
Re: Writing and Cars (Creeley edition)
Mon 29 Mar 2010

Wanting to take the car keys away from the kids, are you Barry? Lucky for you and us, we ain't 17 years old anymore! Agreed. before we get taken back to Phedre, Hippolyte, chariots et al, personally, I am "carred" out!

Good, favorite, walking poems, anyone? Or maybe I shd put that up on another ladder, thread, whatever it's called.

Stephen V
http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

--- On Mon, 3/29/10, Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Barry Schwabsky <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Writing and Cars (Creeley edition)
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, March 29, 2010, 2:43 AM

As we are now descending to what seems like the 10th generation of Creeley and Kerouac citations, I would like to move that this thread be closed down herewith.

↑ Index

329. Paul Siegell
"hot pepper people"
Mon 29 Mar 2010

---

hey hey,

wanted to share with you a new series of "poemics" that i've started sending out:

@ Moria: http://bit.ly/cwAQNt

@ Antique Children: http://bit.ly/aUIbkf and look for more in Word For/Word #18 and here:

http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/

thanks for taking a look!

have a great week,
paul>

-

2010: wild life rifle fire
2009: jambandbootleg
2008: Poemergency Room

reviews > http://bit.ly/4nW70h

↑ Index

330. steve russell
Re: 25 Questions, #4 . . .
Mon 29 Mar 2010

Â By imposing criteria, as I indicated earlier, one is attempting to control the direction and elements of the discussion. By imposing criteria, one is limiting what a poet, what a poem what a poetry and poetics may be. This is because, I think,Â Â Â Â (what ???...)Â it has to do with the idea that a poet, a poem, a poetry, a poetics, is involved with aÂ Â (...does? ...)seeking for something, even if that something has nothing to do with readers, listeners,(...all? ...Â)writers at all, it is still a search for poetry as something which exists inÂ (... of this? ...)such a such condition, of which one can be at a certain point and level, sure.Â (... ?? mean: poet_in_hell: close caps)One has faith, then , that it exists, it must existâ€” Â ... but as i said earlier, watching, observing, listening to a mind unravel is revealing ... of what, i'm not sure. btw, i liked thing language.

--- On Sat, 3/27/10, David Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

From: David Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 25 Questions, #4 . . .
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, March 27, 2010, 9:16 PM

Dear Murat:

On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 11:41 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]
>wrote:

I've made poems written for stones, tree, the air, a ray of light--without even the idea of a person involved--
In this sense one may write for those "illiterates" or "inanimates" who do not read yet understand and know the Unwritten--
"The hills know but do not tell" as Emily Dickinson writesâ€”

Thing Language

This ocean, humiliating in its disguises

Tougher than anything.

No one listens to poetry. The ocean

Does not mean to be listened to. A drop

Or crash of water. It means

Nothing.

It

Is bread and butter

Pepper and salt. The death

That young men hope for. Aimlessly

It pounds the shore. White and aimless signals. No

One listens to poetry.

Note: Spicer writes that â€œno one listens to poetry.â€Â He does NOT write that no one reads poetry.Â After all, it takes reading his poem to know that he wrote that no one listens to poetry . . . Are the poems only â€œwhite and aimless signalsâ€ when heard, even if one is not listeningâ€”as one does hear say such ongoing sounds as those of oceans and electricity lines night and day humming and whining in the weathers of a city . . or the countryâ€”their â€œwrittenâ€ manifestations seen as lines, calligraphic, still or rocking in the winds,--â€œwhite and aimlessâ€ as the space of the page, which becomes written, black and with an aimâ€”at least of the eyes-- when read . . . does the meaningless unlistened to poetry and ocean only exist as a â€œspeakerâ€ when read amid the white aimless signals of the page---a form of decoding . . . a misreading set down in writingâ€”disinformation deliberately spawned by some unknown â€œaimâ€â€”â€œThing Languageâ€ as a â€œthing to be readâ€ when â€œnot heard?â€â€”

For the letters among Murat and myself quoted from here, see below this present screed--

I am not playing devilâ€™s advocate here; as you know I am very much in sympathy with what you write.Â On the other hand, I think all too often there is a too unquestioning welcoming of things which seem to prove the values for which one may be in search of, o r confident of, rather than a more open investigation into what it is that is always already existing al around one, hidden in plain site, sight, cite.

The statements, quotes, you write are beautiful and in the best sense, "noble." On the other hand, what you are writing of is based on a faith, an assumption, that indeed what Spicer, Benjamin and you write is "true."

A point of view via the imagination is taken to be a "natural born fact, Jack."

The ancient Romans had a saying that when an event occurs--one is to ask oneself:Â who benefits? In Leonardo Sciascia's The Moro Affair, the author turns to Pasolini's statement of investigation:Â "The first symptoms are in the language."

You write:
"the idea in the title {â€œ Poetry Has Nothing To Do With Politicsâ€} is an assertion of the independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry."

Might one not ask:Â how can an assertion such as â€œPoetry Has Nothing To Do With Politics â€œbe considered as having anything to do with "an independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry"?

Is the assertion â€œPoetry Has Nothing To Do With Politicsâ€ by its rhetorical absolutism not in itself a denial of such independence, accidents, chaos, while being at the same time very much an assertion of POWER?

Your statements, with the selected quotations denote a search for what poetry does, means, its existential conditionâ€”and so provides the â€œevidencesâ€ which support the searchâ€”as a search impliesâ€”it is a search for somethingâ€”an answer, a Holy Grailâ€”a poemâ€”

Benjamin was a person on continual searchesâ€”when he wrote with one search in mind he wrote in the manner of the quotation here.Â Elsewhere, for example when writing on Brecht (and/or under his influence) or the Surrealists, he was asking the questions related to his search for an actual PROGRAM: as he wrote: â€œCommunism politicizes aesthetics.â€ (As opposed to Fascismâ€™s â€œaestheticization of politics.â€)Â In that context, the idea of a poetry outside of politics would be an evidence of tacit approval for the â€œcondition of things as they are, as they exist.â€Â And, so, a poetry at the service of the status quo of existence. If one applied the ancient Romanâ€™s question of â€œwho benefits,â€ would it not yield the same answer?Â That such a position benefits the status quo, the Power of the Status Quo?

Does your quotation from Benjamin actually mean, as you suggest, that â€œpoetry listens to no one?Â What gives Benjamin the particular, especial Power to make this assertion as a truth? How does he presume to know whether or not the work of art in itself cares or not about its reception? Arenâ€™t you perhaps misreading the quotation as given here?Â My reading ofÂ Â Â â€œbut in none of its [Artâ€™s] works is it concerned with his [manâ€™s] responseâ€ is that, not to be concerned with the response, does not mean a not listening, but simply a not caring for what is heard as a response or not. That is, the response will have no effect on the poem whatsoever, as far as the poem is â€œconcerned.â€Â Might this not mean also that the poem DOES hear the response but simply thumbs its nose at it?

Might not Benjamin write a quite opposite response when he is writing of Brecht for example, whose intended effects via the â€œA effectâ€ are designed quite consciously and openly to effect a response, and one that opens the spectatorâ€™s mind to the particular point of view re manâ€™s condition that Brecht is â€œbearing the message of?â€

â€œArt... posits
> manâ€™s physical and spiritual existence, but in none of its works is it > concerned with his response. No poem is intended for the reader, no picture

> for the beholder, no symphony for the listener.â€

Benjamin in some essays argues that there are Arts which are most certainly intended to produce certain desired effects, whether they are Communist or Fascist.Â The question of â€œanarchy,â€ let alone Anarchism, (not to mention â€œDemocracy,â€) is left out in favor of demonstrating the urgency of the choice between the two opposing systems threatening to engulf hundreds of millions of lives. Agit-prop, the work of Brechtâ€™s form of Theater, the films of Eisenstein and Vertovâ€™s, Picassoâ€™s painting of â€œGuernica,â€ the Nazi attacks on â€œdecadenceâ€ in the arts, the Mussolini-Marinetti formulations of a Fascist Futurism, the Spanish Falangeâ€™s ultra-reactionary conceptions of a State Holy/Holy State Artâ€”Benjamin was surrounded by works whose intentions were anything but â€œfugitiveâ€ as William Burroughs calls the glossary-resisting languages of drug addicts. My point is that Benjamin himself does not consistently participate in the hard core forms of absolutism demonstrated by a title such as â€œPoetry has nothing to do with politics.â€

After all, if one truly thinks with â€œan assertion of the independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry" then it does not exist in Fosterâ€™s title, which is an absolutist and exclusionary one. An absolutist â€œchaotic power,â€ is basically an oxymoron; if it is exclusionary of politics itÂ is then just as exclusionary of such forms of â€œanti-politicalâ€ assertions as Muratâ€™s interpretation of Foster title is. Chaos isâ€”the INCLUSION of â€œboth/andâ€ rather than an exclusionary â€œeither/orâ€: Chaos does not censor, pick and choose, take one side over anotherâ€”Chaos is IMPROBABLITY. â€œUn Coup de des nâ€™abolira jamais le hazard,â€ yet speak with any gambler and very oftenÂ â€œchance had nothing to do with it.â€

--That is the paradoxical nature of Chaos: that a single event can be perceived, and is perceived, thus affecting its own actions, from such a multiplicity of points that it can appear simultaneously to beÂ â€œpure hazard,â€ or â€œFate,â€ â€œmeant to be,â€ or â€œthe Will of the Individual/Godâ€ asserting itsÂ â€œtriumph in adversityâ€ over â€œout of controlâ€ situations, etc etc. Poets employ imposed forms of â€œChance Operationsâ€ on various materials, presenting the â€œchance resultsâ€ as demonstrations of â€œimpersonalâ€ or â€œfoundâ€ poetry. However, by the very construction of a â€œMethod of Operationsâ€ in limiting the quantity of data/material being worked with, is there not a limit being set on the basically illimitable, and so-by ruling out a good deal of what is actually â€œchance operating?â€ The I Ching, for example, deliberately limits the number of lines employed, so that a sense of order arises out of the seeming Chaos and so demonstrates The Way to be taken in a particular situation.

The key to â€œan assertion of the independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetryâ€ might be for starters to eliminate the â€œassertion.â€ â€œAssertionâ€ in such close provenance to the word â€œpowerâ€ reminds one that assertions are just that, assertions of a â€œpowerâ€ that Knows, or is Presumed to Know.â€Â The â€œauthorâ€ as â€œauthorityâ€ in other words, and, by being a poet, being an authority on Poetry and what it has or not to do with, what its intentions and limits are.Â Does poetry care that â€œno oneâ€ listens to it?Â Or is it only the poet who does? How does the poet even know if â€œpoetryâ€ cares or not? Does a â€œpoemâ€ or â€œpoetryâ€ always do what the author/poet authorizes, what he or she intends it to do ?

Is not the assertion of â€œthe independent, accidental, power of, poetryâ€Â in itself a political action, in that it is a â€œdeclaration of independenceâ€ from something, and, in this case, specifically, from a Political Poetry? How can an assertion of the â€œaccidental power of poetryâ€ be made , as an assertion?Â Is there not something in an assertion which rules out precisely the accidental possibilities, intentions, of the assertion? When one writes of â€œpowerâ€ in any context, may it not be associated precisely with the power of â€œauthority,â€ of Political power,â€ â€œthe Power of the Word,â€ the power of â€œthe authorâ€ and so remain well within the domain of amÂ encounter with power in al its guises, political and not?

It has become an increasingly â€œpowerfullyâ€ argued position of power which has especially since the eve of the Invasion and Occupation of Iraq been asserting that poetry has nothing to do with the political, that its â€œpowerâ€ lies elsewhere, perhaps not even in the poetâ€”or not even in the poem itself. From one viewpoint, one might â€œsee thisâ€ as the assertion of an elitist position â€œabove the mere frayâ€ of the political and the rest of the â€œbad objectsâ€ which need not be claimed among those belonging to Poetry. If poetry, then, is actually the â€œindependent, accidental, power, of poetryâ€â€”might it not be just as independent of this taking of an apolitical stance as of a political?Â If its truly accidental, might it not accidently run into politics on its way to the non political poem? Of poetry as power, might it not use its powerÂ against anyone who makes such assertions as the claim to know what the power of poetry is?

I think that when one makes such absolutist rhetorical statements about poetry, it is well to recall that they are indeed rhetorical statements. These are not statements of fact, but of belief, of a choice between what the writer delineates as an â€œeither/orâ€ rather than as a completely open ended situation, in which poetry may be seen, heard, listened, written by, for, with, to any one or no one, or by, to, with, for no one, any one, a one orÂ a few or someÂ or many and so on.Â To assert that Poetry has â€œnothing to do with politicsâ€ is to be kept in mind as the assertion ofÂ a specific poet in a very specific time and place, and within the historical context of that poetâ€™s nation, thenâ€”nowâ€”being at War on multiple fronts in the Middle East, Colombia and North Eastern Africa, as well as being torn apart by various â€œwarring factionsâ€ within the nationâ€™s various poetries and poetics, poets and groups of poets.

Since the eve of the Invasion and Occupation of Iraq, as well as during al the time the Invasion and attempted occupation of Afghanistan and many other countries, most recently Haiti, from some points of viewâ€”it has become popular to invoke the idea that poetry has nothing to do with the political. Amiri Baraka has written that for some large segments of the poetry writing community, especially among academic and academic-related poets and poetries, this apolitical position may have to do with maintaining job security in the face of an inquisitive and forceful Homeland Security. Certainly as the times grow worse economically and culturally, such an assertion of a poetâ€™s position might need to be more than ever emphasizedâ€”after al a self-proclaimed non political poet is likely to be far less trouble than those speaking out about the conditions of the academy, or of students, or of themselves or any other cause related to the academy or State.Â Granted that Amiri Baraka as a political poet will take a political view of those professing to be non-political, there is always the â€œprobability,â€ since he is also a poet, of his viewpoint being as much of a â€œpoeticâ€ one as any other poetâ€™s. Whether one agrees or disagrees with his positionâ€”does it not involve one with politics at least in order to deny oneâ€™s involvement in it?

I like very much Muratâ€™s expression â€œthe independent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetry;â€ I think for myself the difficulty with it arises with in the context it is expressed in: that of assertions, of quotations from â€œauthoritiesâ€ and so forth. That is, this manner of contextualizing such â€œindependent, accidental, chaotic power, of poetryâ€ basically denies the existence of al these elements by making of them an â€œeither/orâ€ statement of assertion, a taking of sides against inclusivity in poetry, the denial of its power to behave out of the poetâ€™s control, out of even its own control . . .

By imposing criteria, as I indicated earlier, one is attempting to control the direction and elements of the discussion. By imposing criteria, one is limiting what a poet, what a poem what a poetry and poetics may be. This is because, I think, it has to do with the idea that a poet, a poem, a poetry, a poetics, is involved with a seeking for something, even if that something has nothing to do with readers, listeners, writers at all, it is still a search for poetry as something which exists in such a such condition, of which one can be at a certain point and level, sure. One has faith, then , that it exists, it must existâ€”

For many years I have been working with and thinking on the Found, which is something very often â€“I would say nearly always in many ways though not â€œallâ€ necessarily----independent, accidental and chaotic.Â Picasso stated: â€œI do not seek, I find.â€Â (Note he is speaking only for himself,Â not theÂ overall run of artists, not making an assertion other than of his own and own work--) The more I have worked with l, lived with, though on this little phrase, the more profound I find it the more profound I see the gulf between the Search, the Seeker and the one who finds.Â The latter is operating in the area which Paul Celan writes of, in which â€œPoetry no longer imposes itself, but exposes itself.â€ One does not know what one may find, whether by accident, by being independent of preconceived images, ideas and dogmas, or open wide to the actions and elements of that chaotic power not only of poetry but of anything which one â€œcomes across,â€ meets in oneâ€™s random, destination-less,Â â€œwanderings about.â€

By the very accidental, independent, chaotic power of the Found, the poetry, the poem exposing itself may be political, it might not beâ€”who knows? Is the one who finds even a poet?Â By which I mean does the one who finds impose already the limits of the so called â€œpoeticâ€ on what it finds exposed as â€œpoetry?â€ Is it not perhaps that poetry, a poem, might be speaking, writing, al of the timeâ€”and that it is not that no one listens to this or reads it, itâ€™s that perhaps no one recognizes that is always already speaking, writing, listeningâ€”

--and in the great vanity of â€œmanâ€™s/womanâ€™sÂ responseâ€ or not, in his/her hearing or not, in the immense vanity of her/hisâ€™s assertionsâ€”or notâ€”these very things ever ongoing al around one at every instant are being completely ignoredâ€”not so much â€œunheard, unseen, untouchedâ€ as simplyâ€”rendered deaf, dumb and blind not to mention â€œnon-existentâ€ but by the power of assertions regarding things which are truly Outside a humanâ€™s control? Thus the assertion that not only does no one listen to poetry, butÂ that poetry might also be listening to no oneâ€”a kind of cancelling out of negatives . . . leaving one with the assertion ofâ€”what?Â A conflict? A drama? A void . . . abhorred by Nature--

For myself, the assertion that poetry has nothing to do with politics is a very political one, in that it is limiting what the action, the elements of a poem, of poetry, of poetics is, it is limiting the actions by poets and groups of poets as wel as depriving them of vast areas of elements of materials to use. For myself, this is a deeply political act, for in denying the politics of its political act, the assertion is beginning to use that form of sophism one encounters non stop in the media, which has been used to drag a country into one War after another while its poetsâ€™ rhetorics are turned towards a critique of critiquing the conditions of poetry in the same manner that the polices of the State critique and essay to make irrelevant and non-existent any critique of its policies, increasingly dependent on a language of erasure and denial, so that one wil not notice that the proud election of a Black President means not the â€œend to racismâ€ in America any more than it lessens the support for the worldâ€™s one Apartheid State.Â The only way to juggle such contradictions as this nationâ€™s policies embody daily, is to also make the assertion that, along with poetry, one has nothing to do with politics. To deny the contradictions is to say that things that are opposites are the same. War=Peace. Love =Hate, etcÂ What does Poetry = then? Non-Politics, Non Poetry---???Â Poetry=Poetry!!!!Â Yet who decides what Poetry is?

The greatest victory for the State is when no one and nothing has anything to do with politics. â€œLet them write poetry!!!â€â€”as â€œno one listens to itâ€ and, perhaps, poetry does not listen to the poets either!

One might even find this situation developing:

In a jerky and ferocious style, [Defoe's] essay argued that literature should be written by non-literary people, just as politics should be and indeed was being taken over by non-politicians, as (Defoe) was delighted to observe. The corresponding revolution in writing, Defoe went on to say, would, in a sense, abolish literature itself. When poetry is written by non-poets and read by non-readers.

*Roberto Bolano, Distant Star

*As cited in *2010-03-09: Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress (14): David Baptiste Chirot, Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from GuantÃ¡namo)<http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html>

At Jerome Rothenbergâ€™s http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html

Also appeared at:
Â·Â KAURAB Online :: A Bengali Poetry Webzine :: Translation Site<http://www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html>

The circumstances of the poets, the Pentagon supervision of censorships, ... With the Guantanamo Poems, as Flagg Miller suggests in his excellent preface, .... David Baptiste Chirot is an amazing litterateur, artist, reader and critic. ... www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:OtkLaOypEuoJ:www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html+david+chirot+guntanamo+poets+kaurab&cd=1&hl=en&ct

=clnk&gl=us&client=firefox-a> Â·Â DAVID-BAPTISTE CHIROT: New Books @
Kaurab<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com/2010/02/new-books-kaurab.html>

Feb 5, 2010 ... (also has Visual Poetry by chirot). Kaurab Translation Site Poems from GuantÃ¡namo The Detainees Speak David Baptite Chirot * ...* *david*baptiste*chirot*.blogspot.com/2010/02/new-books-kaurab.h

Thing Language

This ocean, humiliating in its disguises

Tougher than anything.

No one listens to poetry. The ocean

Does not mean to be listened to. A drop

Or crash of water. It means

Nothing.

It

Is bread and butter

Pepper and salt. The death

That young men hope for. Aimlessly

It pounds the shore. White and aimless signals. No

One listens to poetry.

> Date: Thu, 25 Mar 2010 07:05:46 -0400
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: 25 questions, #4...
> To: [redacted]
>
> Hi Alan, David,
>
> Here is a quote from my review of Ed Foster's book of poems *What He Ought
> To Know*:
>
> "For Ed Foster. Spicerâ€™s comment, â€œno one listens to poetry,â€ is at the > heart of a poetic revolution. He transforms this existential condition into > Walter Benjaminâ€™s suggestion that poetry listens to no one: â€œArt...

posits
> manâ€™s physical and spiritual existence, but in none of its works is it > concerned with his response. No poem is intended for the reader, no picture
> for the beholder, no symphony for the listener.â€ This quotation appears in > Fosterâ€™s poem, â€œPoetry Has Nothing To Do With Politics.â€ More than a denial
> of politics, the idea in the title is an assertion of the independent, > accidental, chaotic power, of poetry."
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>
> On Wed, Mar 24, 2010 at 11:41 AM, David Chirot <[redacted]
>wrote:
>
> > Like Alan, i don't understand the "should"--other than in such
"extenuating > > circumstances" as in cases of the coerced, of desperation, of fear or > > perhaps the obscurely shifted desire to "do the right thing" in some > > inwardly confused sense of "moral duty" or "moral suasion."
> >
> > Or--in the cases of propaganda and advertising.
> >
> > A Russian artist writes that language is a fascism not because it
silences
> > or censors, but because it forces one to speak.
> >
> > Such would be the case of the "should" perhaps--
> >
> > A writer writes for those who read, who in turn may read for those who do
> > not read.
> >
> > A writer writes--for whom? Oneself and other strangers?
> >
> > I've made poems written for stones, tree, the air, a ray of
light--without > > even the idea of a person involved--

> >
> > In this sense one may write for those "illiterates" or "inanimates" who do > > not read yet understand and know the Unwritten--
> >
> >
> >
> > "The hills know but do not tell" as Emily Dickinson writes--
>

↑ Index

331. amy king
My Final Word on the Gurlesque ...
Mon 29 Mar 2010

For now at least. Poetics of the 'grrrl,' ahhh!

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/29/the-gurlesque/

Amy

↑ Index

332. William Slaughter
Notice: Mudlark
Mon 29 Mar 2010

New and On View: Mudlark Flash No. 55 (2010)

Broken Records and Other Formal Extremities

Several Poems by Laurel Bastian

Laurel Bastian has work in or forthcoming from Margie, Puerto del Sol, Tar River Poetry, Cream City Review, and Nimrod among others. She was a finalist for the Ruth Lilly Fellowship, sponsored by the Poetry Foundation, is on the faculty at Madison College, and runs a creative writing program in a men's correctional facility near Madison, Wisconsin.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

333. peter ganick

30 chalk editions titles. 10 are new. [apologies for cross-posting].

Mon 29 Mar 2010

---

below is a list of the 30 titles chalk-editions has published *to date. *

*the top ten are brand-new, this is the first time they have been advertised. *

the texts are free to read, free to download, and free to print-out. we just ask you leave the copyright page intact with each version.

*some of the newest and most adventurous writing in text format will be found here. *

please take some time with these texts. you will not be disappointed. to read a text, click on a title.

to submit a text for consideration of publication, send an electronic file to Peter Ganick [redacted] and Jukka-Pekka Kervinen [redacted]

Jim Leftwich - SO FOR BY<http://www.scribd.com/doc/29105250/Jim-Leftwich-SO-FOR-BY>
**

Billy Bob Beamer - WORD DUST POMES<http://www.scribd.com/doc/29028748/Billy-Bob-Beamer-WORD-DUST-POMES>
**

Peter Ganick - rehearse this<http://www.scribd.com/doc/29013806/Peter-Ganick-rehearse-this>
**

Ivan Arguelles - WHAT ARE PROBABLY MY MEMOIRS<http://www.scribd.com/doc/28974871/Ivan-Arguelles-WHAT-ARE-PROBABLY-MY-MEMOIRS>
**

Alan Sondheim - http:::::<http://www.scribd.com/doc/28974697/Alan-Sondheim-http>
**

Raymond Farr - Two Texts<http://www.scribd.com/doc/28974654/Raymond-Farr-Two-Texts>
**

Halvard Johnson - THE PERFECTION OF MOZART'S THIRD EYE & Other Sonnets<http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets>

Joel Chace - SCRIPTS TOO SCAFFOLD<http://www.scribd.com/doc/26145183/Joel-Chace-SCRIPTS-TOO-SCAFFOLD>
**

John Crouse - ENTRANCES<http://www.scribd.com/doc/26144648/John-Crouse-ENTRANCES> **

Jim Leftwich - AT AS ON<http://www.scribd.com/doc/26143482/Jim-Leftwich-AT-AS-ON>
**

John M. Bennett - T ICK TICK TIC K<http://www.scribd.com/John-M-Bennett-T-ICK-TICK-TIC-K/d/25483907>
**

Lars Palm - fragments from this<http://www.scribd.com/doc/25107260/Lars-Palm-fragments-from-this>
**

Thomas Lowe Taylor - "...of shooting stars and brightness."<http://www.scribd.com/doc/24182946/Thomas-Lowe-Taylor-of-shooting-stars-and-brightness>
**

Andrew Topel - RE-ECHOES<http://www.scribd.com/doc/23253381/Andrew-Topel-RE-ECHOES>
**

Jim Leftwich - OF IF IN<http://www.scribd.com/doc/22547754/Jim-Leftwich-OF-IF-IN>
**

Peter Ganick - g=e=i=s=t=l=i=c=h<http://www.scribd.com/doc/22286605/Peter-Ganick-g-e-i-s-t-l-i-c-h>

Hugh R. Tribbey - waitinale glasses<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21912900/Hugh-R-Tribbey-waitinale-glasses>
**

Lawrence Upton - water lines<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21912732/Lawrence-Upton-water-lines>

Jeff Crouch - furious peddler<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21612809/Jeff-Crouch-furious-peddler>
**

Sheila E. Murphy - Reverse Haibun<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21062779/Sheila-E-Murphy-Reverse-Haibun>
**

John M. Bennett - Fla g Wh ale<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19686134/John-M-Bennett-Fla-g-Wh-ale>
**

zachary count lawrence - parsing<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19580683/zachary-count-lawrence-parsing>
**

Sheila E. Murphy - circumsanct<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19475026/Sheila-E-Murphy-circumsanct>
**

Ivan Arguelles - SECRET POEM<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19445335/Ivan-Arguelles-SECRET-POEM>
**

Ivan Arguelles - SATURDAY AFTERNOON IN THE UPANISHADS<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19362306/Ivan-Arguelles-SATURDAY-AFTERNOON-IN-THE-UPANISHADS>
**

Alan Sondheim - Pushing to Convulsion<http://www.scribd.com/doc/19258792/Alan-Sondheim-Pushing-to-Convulsion>
**

Jim Leftwich - BEGET STATESMAN<http://www.scribd.com/doc/18003367/Jim-Leftwich-BEGET-STATESMAN>

Jim Leftwich - TIME JUNK<http://www.scribd.com/doc/17243139/Jim-Leftwich-TIME-JUNK>
**

Peter Ganick - recent / how recent<http://www.scribd.com/doc/17097034/Peter-Ganick-recent-how-recent>

**

Jukka-Pekka Kervinen - Bad Knob<http://www.scribd.com/doc/17044277/JukkaPekka-Kervinen-Bad-Knob>
**

↑ Index

334. David Kirschenbaum
Last Call to Advertise in, Donate to Boog City 63
Tue 30 Mar 2010

Please forward

Boog City's 63rd issue
Wants to spread the word about your latest offerings and events
and say a great big hello to each and everyone of you

So Help Us Help You (and Help Us, too)
By Placing a Lovely Advertisement
(We're also cool with donations, real cool.)

The issue will feature:

*The printed matter section with Erica Kaufman reviewing Macgregor Card's and Karen Weiser's first full-length collections;

*Urban Folk music section editor Jonathan Berger on the Major Matt Mason USA tribute and the Elastic No-No Band's dual-disc, 45-track magna opera, Fustercluck!!!;

*Poems from Nellie Bridge, Robert Hershon, Austin LaGrone, and Susan Lewis;

*Art from Rebecca Fischer; and

*A Jim Behrle comic.

Deadlines

—Space Reservations-Email to reserve ad space ASAP

—Thurs. April 8-Submit Ad or Ad Materials
—Sun. April 11-Distribute Paper

We'll be distributing 2,250 copies of the issue throughout the East Village and other parts of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and at Boog City events.

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. The discount rate also applies to larger ads. There are also discounts available to previous and repeat advertisers.

For our full rate card, please visit:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664) for more information.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

335. Lisa Samuels
Home & Away Poetry Symposium 2010
Tue 30 Mar 2010

Those in and near Auckland right now are welcome to the first part of the Home & Away Symposium

http://www.nzepc.auckland.ac.nz/features/home&away/index.asp already underway yesterday with talks by Ann Vickery and Jill Jones and others, more talks today from Ian Wedde, Cath Kenneally, Mark Young and more, and a reading starting at 5:30 today, 31 March, with all these writers plus others in the Old Government House Lounge at The University of Auckland.

The second part of Home & Away will feature New Zealand poets going to Australia in September. It's an exchange program and a fostering of conversations. Check out the web site for more information, including the construction of the Digital Bridge.

Thanks to Michele Leggott, Brian Flaherty, Pam Brown, Martin Edmond, Helen Sword, and all others who have made this Symposium a happening.

↑ Index

336. steve russell

Fw: The Lannan Literary Symposium and Festival @ Georgtown, April 6 & 7, featuring Dave Eggers, a Tribute to Lucile Clifton, and much more

Tue 30 Mar 2010

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: DCPoetry Events <[redacted]

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: DCPoetry Events <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, March 29, 2010 8:19:10 PM
Subject: The Lannan Literary Symposium and Festival @ Georgtown, April 6 & 7, featuring Dave Eggers, a Tribute to Lucile Clifton, and much more

The Lannan Literary Symposium and Festival

Literacy Â· Literature Â· Democracy

GeorgetownÂ Â Â 6 and 7 April 2010

Chris Abani Â· Uwem Akpan
Adam Hochschild

Georgetownâ€™s 2010 Lannan Literary Symposium and Festival will explore the most vital and purposeful connections across the themes in its title, Literacy, Literature and Democracy; the Symposium welcomes a rich selection of writers, journalists and activists to the Georgetown campus over the two days following Easter break, Tuesday 6 and Wednesday 7 April, to discuss and to demonstrate how universal access to literacy, critical attention to the urgency of the creative imagination and to the power of the written word, and care for the fragility of authentic democracy must all equally concern citizens working for justice in our contemporary world. Guests to Georgetown include noted writers Dave Eggers, Chris Abani, and Uwem Akpan, SJ, journalist, writer and Mother Jones founder Adam Hochschild, social justice activist Mekonnodji Nadingam,Â poet Thomas Sayers Ellis, and recent Georgetown alums Happy Johnson (COL â€™07) and Allison Correll (English MA â€™09). Topics across two days of readings, roundtables and performances will include local and national literacy projects like Mr. Eggersâ€™ 826 Valencia and 826 DC, literary, cultural and practical responses to historic challenges like the rebuilding of New Orleans after Katrina, and the ongoing global refugee crisis, with special focus on vulnerable populations in central Africa; the Symposium concludes with a special tribute to the poet Lucille Clifton by former Maryland poet laureate Michael S. Glaser and readings in her honor by Mr. Ellis and Mr. Abani. Participants from the Georgetown Community will include Professors Deborah Tannen, Maureen Corrigan, and Michael Eric Dyson, as well as Professor Carolyn ForchÃ©, the Director of Georgetownâ€™s Lannan Center for Poetics and Social Practice. For more information please contact Professor Ricardo OrtÃz at [redacted].

Schedule:

Tu 6 April/7:30PM/Gaston Hall

A Public Reading and Talk Featuring

Dave Eggers
In Conversation with

Maureen Corrigan and Deborah Tannen Reception to Follow, Copley Formal Lounge

Â·

Wednesday 7 April 2010
9:30 to 11amÂ Â Â Â Riggs Library

â€œWriting Beyond Catastrophe:
Literatures and Cultures of National Revival in Post-Katrina Americaâ€

A Discussion featuring
Michael Eric Dyson, Dave Eggers, Happy Johnson (â€™07)

Refreshments Served and Books Available in the Presidentsâ€™ Room

Â·

Copley Formal Lounge

â€œWriting (and Working) Beyond Genocide Literary, Cultural and Social Activisms in a Changing Africaâ€

Session 1Â Â· 1 to 3pm

readings by

Uwem Akpan, SJ
and Adam Hochschild

Session 2Â Â Â·Â Â 3 to 5PM

A Roundtable Featuring

Mekonndji Nadingam
Allison Correll (MA â€™09)
Chris Abani Â· Uwem Akpan
Adam Hochschild

Books Available and Light Refreshments Served

Copley Formal Lounge

Â·

The Fisher Family Colloquium Room
The Rafik Hariri Building
McDonough School of Business

7:30 pm

A Tribute to Lucille Clifton

Featuring
Michael S. Glaser and Carolyn ForchÃ©

Poetry Readings By Thomas Sayers Ellis
Chris Abani

Reception and Book Signing to Follow

For more information about upcoming events, or to subscribe to this list, check out our website at http://www.dcpoetry.com

_____
Change email address / Leave mailing list: http://ymlp197.com/u.php?YMLPID=gujyjsgsgbqhg Powered byÂ YourMailingListProvider

↑ Index

337. Dan Glass
email address fr Rod Smith
Tue 30 Mar 2010

if someone has Rod's contact info, please backchannel.

thx,,,

Dan

↑ Index

338. charles alexander
Fwd: rental in Lo Que Pasa
Tue 30 Mar 2010

Hi, I'm forwarding this message from an artist/friend in Tucson. It would be great if some poet or couple or family would decide to spend 2 to 3 months in Tucson, maybe even working with me at Chax Press in some way. July through September in Tucson can be hot, but the house has A/C, and Tucson is fairly quiet in the summer, if you're working to finish that book of poems or novel or critical book or whatever. Also a good poetry community, good university library, you're an hour away from Mexico, 5 hours away from the Grand Canyon, 2 hours away from the lovely old mining town now artist hang-out of Bisbee. If you're interested, let me know and I'll quickly forward your interest to Bailey Doogan, owner of the house. But make sure you back-channel me directly at [redacted], as I'm not currently seeing all of the poetics list messages. My guess is you should act quickly, as this won't be around for long. I have photos, but can't send them to the poetics e-list.

Charles

Begin forwarded message:

> From: Bailey Doogan <[redacted]>
> Date: March 30, 2010 9:37:52 AM PDT
>
> Subject: Fwd: rental in Lo Que Pasa
>
> Hello Friends,
>
> I will be spending the months of July, August, and September in Nova Scotia. I am looking for someone to sublet my house for those three months. The house is a fully-furnished one bedroom in the historic West University neighborhood, 5 minute walk to the Art School, 4th Avenue, and Downtown. Central heating and A/C, a washer/dryer. Walled back yard and patio. This could be ideal as a interim place for a responsible incoming graduate student or new faculty. I am asking $800 a month which includes all utilities, The price could be negotiable -- the main thing is to have a responsible person taking care of the house.
>
> Let me know if you have any questions.
>
> All best, Peggy Doogan

charles alexander
[redacted]

chax press / poetry & the book arts
411 n seventh ave ste 103 / tucson, az 85705-8388

DONATE TO CHAX PRESS at http://chax.org/donate.htm

↑ Index

339. Cara Benson
Moles Not Molar Predictions Event Friday - Philly
Tue 30 Mar 2010

PREDICTIONS: A Book Release Event

on Moles Not Molar
presents

PREDICTIONS: A Book Release Event

on Friday, April 2nd
at 7:30PM
@ Wooden Shoe Books
704 South Street (at South and 7th St)

ANIMATION, ANIMALS, ANIMA/US!
Animations! Readings! And Choral Performances!

For this special release event for the fourth volume in the Chain Links book series, a number of the contributors to Predictions - who range from climate scientists to animators to poets - will be presenting portions of their contributions to the collection.

Featuring:
CARA BENSON, JASON & DAVID ZUZGA, JULIE SADLER & THE MOLES NOT MOLAR SAYERS!

CARA BENSON is author of (made) with BookThug and Protean Parade (forthcoming, Black Radish Books 2010). She edited the interdisciplinary book Predictions for Chain Links. Other work is included in: Belladonna Elders Series #7 with Anne Waldman and Jayne Cortez, and NO GENDER: REFLECTIONS ON THE LIFE & WORK OF kari edwards (Litmus Press/Belladonna Books). Benson edits the online Sous Rature and teaches poetry in a NY State Prison.

JULIE SADLER is an artist who has lived in rural upstate New York her entire adult life. She has been exploring the technique of collage for over a decade by using the internet as a launching pad. Not allowing her location to be a barrier to communication, Sadler has collaborated in several round robin projects, been published in books as well as published her own, and participated in the 1000 Journals documentary film. www.magikglasses.com

DAVID ZUZGA, PhD, is a visiting Assistant Professor of Biology at St. Josephs University. He has authored publications in Science, Nature Genetics and Nature Medicine. His research currently focuses on stopping the spread of colon cancer by altering metastatic cytoskeletal architecture through the activation of an intestinal receptor for diarrheagenic bacteria. He lives in a very old house in Collingswood, NJ with his wife, two sons and a sometimes chaotic menagerie of pets.

JASON ZUZGA is a PhD student in English at the University of Pennsylvania. His poetry and nonfiction have appeared in journals such as The Yale Review, jubilat, Spork, VOLT, LIT, Cue, and The Seneca Review. He received an MFA in poetry and nonfiction from the University of Arizona, was a recipient of a Provincetown Fine Arts Work Center residency for 2001-2002 and was the 2005-2006 James Merrill Writer-in-Residence. He is the nonfiction editor of FENCE. ----

About PREDICTIONS:

As is painfully obvious for many a religious leader and many a psychic, predicting the future is an indeterminate business. The work collected in PREDICTIONS takes that indeterminancy as a starting point and celebrates it. A futurist points to how the question of the future, once a matter for dreamers and philosophers, has moved to the center of development and scientific agendas. Several artists, well aware that accelerating changes to the environment require that we learn quickly, suggest how art might help us to understand and to rethink the interface between old technologies and new technologies in this time of environmental crisis. A writer and a scientist team up to tell an alternate story of evolution. And a poet writes, "Predictions acquire full meaning when they apply to the, until then, unimaginable." Edited by Cara Benson, with contributors Paul Raskin, Bart Bridger Woodstrup, Julie Sadler, David Zuga, Jason Zuga, and Monica de la Torre.

Link to the series:
http://www.molesnotmolar.com/

To the venue:
http://www.woodenshoebooks.com/home.html

Review of the book at Brooklyn Rail by Anna Elena Eyre:
http://www.brooklynrail.org/2010/02/books/interdisciplinary-predictions-pretext

Book itself available at SPD, of course!
http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781930068452/predictions-chainlinks.aspx

---

http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

↑ Index

340. Sam Ladkin

Fool's ERRAND Festival - 1st April 2010, UCC, Ireland

Tue 30 Mar 2010

Dear All,

I am delighted at how generous people have been with their time in making a scratch performance of Burdocks possible (the musicians are listed at the bottom), and delighted to have these fine people in the same place at the same time for a day of it.

All are welcome.

Yours truly,
Sam Ladkin

Fool’s ERRAND…

Connolly A, Western Road, UCC

April 1st 2010

http://www.ucc.ie/en/VisitorstoUCC/Transportmapsandparking/Maps/East%20Campus.pdf
*
*

16:00 – 17:00 Michael Kindellan & Fergal Gaynor

* *Poems

17:30 – 18:30 Chris Goode & Jonny Liron

Mixed Ape: FOLLY SEEING ALL THIS

* *

20:00 – 21:00 Fluxus with *Vicky Langan & Paul Hegarty *

* *

plus a cast of tens for

Christian Wolff's BURDOCKS

FREE ENTRY
All are welcome

http://errantfools.blogspot.com/

Courtesy UCC English Literature Society.

* *

…Errant FOOLS

Any queries contact: [redacted]

All star cast for Burdocks includes:

John Godfrey

Paul Hegarty

Danny McCarthy

Francis Heery

Athoulis Tsiopani

Sadhbh O'Flynn

Eimear O'Donovan
Eimear O'Donovan
Ruti Lachs

Eoin O'Connor
David O'Regan
Marja Gaynor
Mick O'Shea
Vicky Langan
Andrea Ofnodiscernablesurname
Jennifer Schwartz
Kevin Terry

Sponsored by the UCC English Literature Society.
http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=158991857645

Various links:
http://www.ucc.ie/en/english/http://www.ucc.ie/french/http://www.music.ucc.ie/
http://www.artsadmin.co.uk/projects/associate-artist.php?id=32
http://beescope.blogspot.com/
http://www.myspace.com/desamisducrime
http://www.barquepress.com/notlove.html
http://www.soundeye.org/people/fergal-gaynor
http://renewablemusic.blogspot.com/2006/09/landmarks-18.html
http://www.dannymccarthy.ie/

http://www.dotdotdotmusic.com/
http://www.myspace.com/mickoshea
http://www.music.ucc.ie/index.php?/staff/detail/john_godfrey/
http://www.soundeye.org/

**

↑ Index

341. twshaner
Correction: Kit Robinson reads in Eugene this Saturday, April 3
Tue 30 Mar 2010

A New Poetry @ DIVA presents

Kit Robinson

Jen Tynes

Ce Rosenow

Saturday, April 3, 7:30

DIVA (Downtown Initiative for the Visual Arts)

110 W. Broadway

Eugene, Oregon

[redacted]

www.divacenter.org

↑ Index

342. Susan Webster Schultz recent Tinfish Editor blog posts
Tue 30 Mar 2010

---

* On Teaching the Difficulties
* The Decline and Fall of a State University, or, An...
* Epic Simile (Fail): Political Rhetoric and the Hea...
* Writing Off of DICTEE: A Lesson Plan
* Words Off the Wall [Pre-Write Tour of Honolulu's C...

http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com

Enjoy!

Susan M. Schultz
Blog purveyor

↑ Index

343. cris cheek
post_moot 2010
Tue 30 Mar 2010

—

↑ Index

344. Shankar, Ravi (English)
Call For Submissions: Poems wanted for a Sammy Cahn anthology
Wed 31 Mar 2010

Call For Submissions

Call for Submissions for a proposed anthology of new short works commemorating the centenary of the lyricist's birth.

SAMMY CAHN (1913-1993), the Academy- and Emmy-Award-winning lyricist of many of the standards commonly referred to as the "Great American Songbook," as well as the writer who "put more words into Frank Sinatra's mouth than any other," was very vocal in his disagreement with the policy that writers are not able to copyright the titles of their compositions.

In honor of the upcoming centenary of his birth in 2013, and with a loving wink at his titular annoynace, Dr. Gilbert L. Gigliotti of Central Connecticut State University is soliciting new poems, flash fiction, flash non-fiction, and micro-plays, each with the same title as one of his song lyrics. The new pieces need not refer to the songwriter's lyrics nor be similar in theme or style to the originals; the editor only seeks a variety of literary approaches toward – and treatments of – Cahn's titles. Among some of his most widely recognizable songs include Call Me Irresponsible, Come Fly With Me, Let It Snow! Let It Snow! Let It Snow!, and Until the Real Thing Comes Along — just to name a very few.

Please send your submission by 1 July 2010 to [redacted] or:

Dr. Gilbert L. Gigliotti
Department of English
Central Connecticut State University
1615 Stanley Street
New Britain, CT 06050

Gilbert L. Gigliotti is a Professor of English at Central Connecticut State University and the editor of a pair of anthologies published by Entasis Press of Washington, DC, Sinatra: But Buddy I'm a Kind of Poem (2008) and Ava Gardner: Touches of Venus (2010).

****

Ravi Shankar
Ed., http://www.drunkenboat.com
Poet-in-Residence
Associate Professor
CCSU - English Dept.
[redacted]

↑ Index

345. Tim Peterson

EOAGH Reading Series 4/4: Lamoureux, Vermeulen, and Wong

Wed 31 Mar 2010

EOAGH Reading Series:

Mark Lamoureux, Cheryl Clark Vermeulen, and Angela Veronica Wong

Sunday, April 4 at 2PM

at Unnameable Books

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

MARK LAMOUREUX's work has appeared in numerous venues both online and in print. His first full-length collection, Astrometry Orgonon, was realeased by BlazeVOX books in 2008. Another collection is due out from the Black Radish Books Collective in 2010.

Read Mark Lamoureux's poem "Merce Cunningham: Nearly Ninety" in EOAGH Issue 5:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/lamoureux.html

CHERYL CLARK VERMEULEN is the author of the poetry chapbook Dead-Eye Spring (Cy Gist Press) and peddler of a manuscript called Walking Opposite the Parade. Vermeulen teaches writing at Massachusetts College of Art and Design and at the New England Conservatory of Music. Her poems can be found in Third Coast, EOAGH, Inertia Magazine, Dispatx, and DIAGRAM, and her translations in the anthology Connecting Lines: New Poetry from Mexico.

Read "The Gate," "Placement," and "Bricked-in Window" by Cheryl Clark Vermeulen in EOAGH 5:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/vermeulen.html

ANGELA VERONICA WONG Angela Veronica Wong is the author of two chapbooks, All the Little Red Girls on Flying Guillotine Press and to know this on Cy Gist Press. She lives in Manhattan and is working on a young adult book.

Read a selection from "Inbetweenness" by Angela Veronica Wong in EOAGH 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/wong.html

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

David Shapiro and Joanna Fuhrman

Sunday, April 18 @2PM

Sueyuen Juliette Lee, Paolo Javier, and Filip Marinovich

Sunday, May 9 @2PM

Charles Borkhuis and Andrew Levy

Sunday, May 23 @2PM

E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor

Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

346. David Chirot

"Saudi woman blasts clerics in TV contest poem"

Wed 31 Mar 2010

**

---

* *

---

* *

Dear Friends and fellow poets

I was struck by the responses to the welcome news of "Saudi Woman Poet Blasts Clerics on TV," and some of the surprise re the immense role poetry plays in the Muslim world.

I have written 2 essay/reviews on line (see below) re the non-reception as it were by American non-readers/readers of the "non-literarily translated" Guantanamo "non" Poets" which examine "non-welcoming" responses of American poets and poetics to the Guantanamo "non-poetry." Read in such a context, the responses to the Saudi Woman Poet on American-style "American Idol" TV reveal further ironies in the American receptions of poetry in the Muslim world.

Below the essay/reviews are found very important articles, with videos and in one case at least, poetry, and links, which concern the treatments and reception of women and their actions--or the limited lack thereof, as in the Sciences--in areas of the world in which the Americans are directly involved, especially in the case of Dr Aafia Siddiqui, who with her three children was kidnapped and for many years "disappeared." It is now revealed that Dr Siddiqui was held for years and brutally tortured, sexually assaulted and humiliated before her rendition to the US by US Agents in the prison of Baghram Airbase, where President Obama just made a surprise appearance a few days ago to yet again extoll "the Right War" being carried out by drones, troops and corruption in Afghanistan and along and inside the Pakistani border. As an American General put is earlier this week, the US has killed an incredible number of Afghanis--almost all of them civilians.

*I also admire the courage of the Saudi poet, not only because of "blasting the clerics," but also in a very real sense indirectly blasting on American-style "American Idol" TV the regime which is one hundred percent backed and paid for by American tax payer and Big Oil dollars, just as the US funds the Israeli State which will not allow Palestinian recipients of American sholarships to study in the US. *

The issues of poets and poetics when mixed with "good" and "bad" poets in situations which are at heart bought and paid for with US tax payer (including tax paying poets') dollars are far more complex and contradictory than "yay/good" or "nay/bad" responses allow for . . .

Just recently here Murat and I were discussing the Ed Foster poem title "Poetry Has Nothing to Do with Politics;" I think perhaps such examples as given here give pause to investigate further how much it may be that the receptions of poetry may be affected by "politics."

-david

http://davidbaptisetchirot.blogspot.com, http://chirotzerozine.blogspot.com

http://nosobrasotros.blogspot.com

*

*

*

*

---

* *

1. Poems and Poetics <http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/> - 4 visits - Mar 28 Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress (14): *David Baptiste

Chirot *, Non-Poetry for .... When poetry is written by non-poets and read by non-readers. ... The "blank and ruin" of the Poems from *Guantanamo*is in the American reader's ... poemsand*poet*ics.blogspot.com/ - Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?q=cache:tbc3EKdzZsYJ:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/+david+baptiste+chirot+guantamo+poets&cd=3&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=firefox-a>- Similar<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&client=firefox-a&hs=0hu&pwst=1&rls=org.mozilla:en-US:official&q=related:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/+david+baptiste+chirot+guantanamo+poets&sa=X&ei=NxSzS868G4O88ga3ir3eAQ&ved=0CBYQHzAC> 2. Poems and Poetics: Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress ...<http://poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html> Outsider Poems, A Mini-Anthology in Progress (14): *David Baptiste Chirot *, Non-Poetry for Non-Readers (Poems from Guantánamo) ... Even giving the poets a "break" for writing in traditions foreign to Americans, and their being translated ... poemsand*poet*ics.blogspot.com/.../outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html- Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?q=cache:3sFfoUTiIyQJ:poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/03/outsider-poems-mini-anthology-in.html+david+baptiste+chirot+guantamo+poets&cd=4&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=firefox-a>

Show more results from poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com<http://www.google.com/search?q=david+baptiste+chirot+guantamo+poets&ie=utf-8&oe=utf-8&aq=t&rls=org.mozilla:en-US:official&client=firefox-a#>

3. KAURAB Online :: A Bengali Poetry Webzine :: Translation Site<http://www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html>

The circumstances of the poets, the Pentagon supervision of censorships, ... With the Guantanamo Poems, as Flagg Miller suggests in his excellent preface, .... David Baptiste Chirot is an amazing litterateur, artist, reader and critic. ... www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html - Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?q=cache:OtkLaOypEuoJ:www.kaurab.com/english/books/guantanamo.html+david+baptiste+chirot+guantamo+poets&cd=5&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=firefox-a>

4. David-Baptiste Chirot // Word For/Word: A Journal of New Writing ... <http://www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm>

Some American reviewers and commentators on the Poets of

*Guantanamo*have so far found exactly what they were looking for: "bad" poetry in Formal terms, ...
www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm - Cached<http://74.125.113.132/search?q=cache:sO3BV7NpjRQJ:www.wordforword.info/vol13/dbc.htm+david+baptiste+chirot+guantamo+poets&cd=6&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=firefox-a>

*
*

*
*

*JFAC Horrified by New Abuse Revelations, Aafia Siddiqui Forced to Walk Naked Over the Qur'an

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
March 30th 2010
Contact: [redacted]
*
As hundreds of concerned citizens hold a Day of Remembrance in Pakistan to commemorate the seventh anniversary of her disappearance, the Justice for Aafia Coalition reveal for the first time, in the English language, specific harrowing details of the abuse Aafia Siddiqui was forced to endure in the years spent in secret detention.

During the course of an interview by Kamran Shahid on Pakistan's Front Line, screened 26th March, Siddiqui's mother and sister described publicly for the first time the various forms of torture she underwent at the hands of US agents. This included being:

- forcefully stripped by six men and then repeatedly sexually abused
- beaten with rifle butts until she bled
- bound to a bed, with her hands and feet tied whilst unspecified forms of torture were administered to the soles of her feet and head
- injected with unknown substances
- dragged by her hair
- having her hairs pulled out one by one
- forced to walk on the Qu'ran which had been desecrated in her cell whilst naked

Maryam Hassan, founder of the Justice for Aafia Coalition (JFAC), commented:*

“These most recent horrific revelations shine a light for the first time on years of detention shrouded until now in darkness and mystery. Forced nudity, violent sexual abuse, the desecration of the Qu’ran, video-taped torture sessions have become infamous hallmarks of US detention since the start of the War on Terror, from Bagram to Abu Ghraib and Guantanamo.

The Obama administration must immediately disclose any video evidence in its possession relating to Ms Siddiqui’s detention and torture. The American public has a right to know what is being carried out in its name as much as the Pakistani public are deserving of knowing the horrendous abuse one of their citizens has been subjected to. “ * For the full interview, transcribed and translated into English by the Justice for Aafia Coalition, please visit: http://justiceforaafia.org/index.php/articles/articles/477-front-line-interview-with-aafia-siddiquis-family-

To view the video recording of the interview in Urdu: http://justiceforaafia.org/index.php/multimedia/475-aafia-siddiqi-front-line-special-program-26th-march-2010

A version with English subtitles will be available on www.justiceforaafia.org soon.

[Ends]

*

Notes for editor: * 1. The Justice for Aafia Coalition is an umbrella body for a number of organizations, groups, and activists created in February 2010 to campaign for the release and return of Aafia Siddiqui and for the opening of a full investigation into the circumstances of her detention and the whereabouts of her children.

2. Aafia Siddiqui’s lawyers maintain that she was abducted by the Pakistani and US agents along with her three children in 2003 and rendered to Afghanistan where she was detained by American forces for over five years. Siddiqui claims she was abused, raped and tortured throughout her detention. She was convicted in February 2010 of allegedly firing on US soldiers while in custody in what appears to have been a grave miscarriage of justice. Whilst her son Ahmed was released in September 2008 from Afghan custody, two of her children remain unaccounted for to date. For full details of Aafia Siddiqui’s case, please visit www.justiceforaafia.org

[image: Ensure Justice for the Women of Atenco]<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=hkIRKcPTLeKSKjL&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH> Mexican authorities are trying to brush police violence under the rug. Keep the heat on. Ensure justice for the women of

Atenco.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=anJDLRMrF7JFIZK&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

Dear David,

When the women left their homes that May morning in 2006, they never imagined the horrific experience that awaited them.

In San Salvador Atenco, they encountered masses of police cracking down on protests by a local peasant organization. Two people were killed, including a 14-year-old boy. Even bystanders faced beatings, house raids, and indiscriminate detentions. Of the hundreds detained, at least 45 were women.

On the way to prison, in a state police vehicle, many of the women were beaten, raped, and sexually assaulted by police officers who had arrested them.

More than two dozen of the women recounted being sexually assaulted. But the prison's medical staff ignored their claims and merely stitched up their most obvious head wounds, conducting no forensic exams.

*Almost four years later, these women still wait for justice. * [image: Mexico's highest ranks have dragged their feet on this police brutality case for four years. It's time hold to them accountable.]<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=dqLJI0NDLaIMK9J&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

The police officers' appalling crimes have been exposed. Help Amnesty pressure Mexican officials to prosecute the real criminals.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=gtIPI9PPJdKTIjI&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

In a particularly cruel twist, many of the women arrested at Atenco were charged with crimes such as ''blocking public roads.'' They even served prison time, with the last of the women released in 2008.

The Atenco abuse investigation is now in the hands of Mexico state authorities. Amnesty International is calling on them to bring the officers to justice and provide reparations to survivors and their families.

Please help Amnesty fight for the women of Atenco.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=jwKVJiM1IgJ0JtL&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>They have endured horrific crimes and deserve justice now. Your tax-deductible gift will help us protect their human rights.

In solidarity,

Diego Zavala
Country Specialist for Mexico
Amnesty International USA

[image: 1]

*
*

*JFAC Horrified by New Abuse Revelations, Aafia Siddiqui Forced to Walk Naked Over the Qur'an

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
March 30th 2010
Contact: [redacted]
*
As hundreds of concerned citizens hold a Day of Remembrance in Pakistan to commemorate the seventh anniversary of her disappearance, the Justice for Aafia Coalition reveal for the first time, in the English language, specific harrowing details of the abuse Aafia Siddiqui was forced to endure in the years spent in secret detention.

During the course of an interview by Kamran Shahid on Pakistan's Front Line, screened 26th March, Siddiqui's mother and sister described publicly for the first time the various forms of torture she underwent at the hands of US agents. This included being:

- forcefully stripped by six men and then repeatedly sexually abused
- beaten with rifle butts until she bled
- bound to a bed, with her hands and feet tied whilst unspecified forms of torture were administered to the soles of her feet and head
- injected with unknown substances
- dragged by her hair
- having her hairs pulled out one by one
- forced to walk on the Qu'ran which had been desecrated in her cell whilst naked

Maryam Hassan, founder of the Justice for Aafia Coalition (JFAC), commented:*

"These most recent horrific revelations shine a light for the first time on years of detention shrouded until now in darkness and mystery. Forced nudity, violent sexual abuse, the desecration of the Qu'ran, video-taped torture sessions have become infamous hallmarks of US detention since the start of the War on Terror, from Bagram to Abu Ghraib and Guantanamo.

The Obama administration must immediately disclose any video evidence in its possession relating to Ms Siddiqui's detention and torture. The American public has a right to know what is being carried out in its name as much as the Pakistani public are deserving of knowing the horrendous abuse one of their citizens has been subjected to. " * For the full interview, transcribed and translated into English by the Justice for Aafia Coalition, please visit: http://justiceforaafia.org/index.php/articles/articles/477-front-line-interview-with-aafia-siddiquis-family-

To view the video recording of the interview in Urdu: http://justiceforaafia.org/index.php/multimedia/475-aafia-siddiqi-front-line-special-program-26th-march-2010

A version with English subtitles will be available on www.justiceforaafia.org soon.

[Ends]

*

Notes for editor: * 1. The Justice for Aafia Coalition is an umbrella body for a number of organizations, groups, and activists created in February 2010 to campaign for the release and return of Aafia Siddiqui and for the opening of a full investigation into the circumstances of her detention and the whereabouts of her children.

2. Aafia Siddiqui's lawyers maintain that she was abducted by the Pakistani and US agents along with her three children in 2003 and rendered to Afghanistan where she was detained by American forces for over five years. Siddiqui claims she was abused, raped and tortured throughout her detention. She was convicted in February 2010 of allegedly firing on US soldiers while in custody in what appears to have been a grave miscarriage of justice. Whilst her son Ahmed was released in September 2008 from Afghan custody, two of her children remain unaccounted for to date. For full details of Aafia Siddiqui's case, please visit www.justiceforaafia.org

[image: Ensure Justice for the Women of Atenco]<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=hkIRKcPTLeKSKjL&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>
Mexican authorities are trying to brush police violence under the rug.
Keep the heat on. Ensure justice for the women of Atenco.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=anJDLRMrF7JFIZK&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

Dear David,

When the women left their homes that May morning in 2006, they never imagined the horrific experience that awaited them.

In San Salvador Atenco, they encountered masses of police cracking down on protests by a local peasant organization. Two people were killed, including a 14-year-old boy. Even bystanders faced beatings, house raids, and indiscriminate detentions. Of the hundreds detained, at least 45 were women.

On the way to prison, in a state police vehicle, many of the women were beaten, raped, and sexually assaulted by police officers who had arrested them.

More than two dozen of the women recounted being sexually assaulted. But the prison's medical staff ignored their claims and merely stitched up their most obvious head wounds, conducting no forensic exams.

*Almost four years later, these women still wait for justice. * [image: Mexico's highest ranks have dragged their feet on this police brutality case for four years. It's time hold to them accountable.]<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=dqLJI0NDLaIMK9J&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

The police officers' appalling crimes have been exposed. Help Amnesty pressure Mexican officials to prosecute the real criminals.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=gtIPI9PPJdKTIjI&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

In a particularly cruel twist, many of the women arrested at Atenco were charged with crimes such as ''blocking public roads.'' They even served prison time, with the last of the women released in 2008.

The Atenco abuse investigation is now in the hands of Mexico state authorities. Amnesty International is calling on them to bring the officers to justice and provide reparations to survivors and their families.

Please help Amnesty fight for the women of Atenco.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=jwKVJiM1IgJ0JtL&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>They have endured horrific crimes and deserve justice now. Your tax-deductible gift will help us protect their human rights.

In solidarity,

Diego Zavala
Country Specialist for Mexico
Amnesty International USA

[image: 1]

*
*

*
*

*JFAC Horrified by New Abuse Revelations, Aafia Siddiqui Forced to Walk Naked Over the Qur’an

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
March 30th 2010

Contact: [redacted]
*
As hundreds of concerned citizens hold a Day of Remembrance in Pakistan to commemorate the seventh anniversary of her disappearance, the Justice for Aafia Coalition reveal for the first time, in the English language, specific harrowing details of the abuse Aafia Siddiqui was forced to endure in the years spent in secret detention.

During the course of an interview by Kamran Shahid on Pakistan's Front Line, screened 26th March, Siddiqui's mother and sister described publicly for the first time the various forms of torture she underwent at the hands of US agents. This included being:

- forcefully stripped by six men and then repeatedly sexually abused
- beaten with rifle butts until she bled
- bound to a bed, with her hands and feet tied whilst unspecified forms of torture were administered to the soles of her feet and head
- injected with unknown substances
- dragged by her hair
- having her hairs pulled out one by one
- forced to walk on the Qu'ran which had been desecrated in her cell whilst naked

Maryam Hassan, founder of the Justice for Aafia Coalition (JFAC), commented:*

"These most recent horrific revelations shine a light for the first time on years of detention shrouded until now in darkness and mystery. Forced nudity, violent sexual abuse, the desecration of the Qu'ran, video-taped torture sessions have become infamous hallmarks of US detention since the start of the War on Terror, from Bagram to Abu Ghraib and Guantanamo.

The Obama administration must immediately disclose any video evidence in its possession relating to Ms Siddiqui's detention and torture. The American public has a right to know what is being carried out in its name as much as the Pakistani public are deserving of knowing the horrendous abuse one of their citizens has been subjected to. " * For the full interview, transcribed and translated into English by the Justice for Aafia Coalition, please visit: http://justiceforaafia.org/index.php/articles/articles/477-front-line-interview-with-aafia-siddiquis-family-

To view the video recording of the interview in Urdu: http://justiceforaafia.org/index.php/multimedia/475-aafia-siddiqi-front-line-special-program-26th-march-2010

A version with English subtitles will be available on www.justiceforaafia.org soon.

[Ends]

*

Notes for editor: * 1. The Justice for Aafia Coalition is an umbrella body for a number of organizations, groups, and activists created in February 2010 to campaign for the release and return of Aafia Siddiqui and for the opening of a full investigation into the circumstances of her detention and the whereabouts of her children.

2. Aafia Siddiqui’s lawyers maintain that she was abducted by the Pakistani and US agents along with her three children in 2003 and rendered to Afghanistan where she was detained by American forces for over five years. Siddiqui claims she was abused, raped and tortured throughout her detention. She was convicted in February 2010 of allegedly firing on US soldiers while in custody in what appears to have been a grave miscarriage of justice. Whilst her son Ahmed was released in September 2008 from Afghan custody, two of her children remain unaccounted for to date. For full details of Aafia Siddiqui’s case, please visit www.justiceforaafia.org

[image: Ensure Justice for the Women of Atenco]<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=hkIRKcPTLeKSKjL&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>
Mexican authorities are trying to brush police violence under the rug.
Keep the heat on. Ensure justice for the women of Atenco.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=anJDLRMrF7JFIZK&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

Dear David,

When the women left their homes that May morning in 2006, they never imagined the horrific experience that awaited them.

In San Salvador Atenco, they encountered masses of police cracking down on protests by a local peasant organization. Two people were killed, including a 14-year-old boy. Even bystanders faced beatings, house raids, and indiscriminate detentions. Of the hundreds detained, at least 45 were women.

On the way to prison, in a state police vehicle, many of the women were beaten, raped, and sexually assaulted by police officers who had arrested them.

More than two dozen of the women recounted being sexually assaulted. But the prison's medical staff ignored their claims and merely stitched up their most obvious head wounds, conducting no forensic exams.

*Almost four years later, these women still wait for justice. * [image: Mexico's highest ranks have dragged their feet on this police brutality case for four years. It's time hold to them accountable.]<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=dqLJI0NDLaIMK9J&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

The police officers' appalling crimes have been exposed. Help Amnesty pressure Mexican officials to prosecute the real criminals.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=gtIPI9PPJdKTIjI&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>

In a particularly cruel twist, many of the women arrested at Atenco were charged with crimes such as ''blocking public roads.'' They even served prison time, with the last of the women released in 2008.

The Atenco abuse investigation is now in the hands of Mexico state authorities. Amnesty International is calling on them to bring the officers to justice and provide reparations to survivors and their families.

Please help Amnesty fight for the women of Atenco.<http://www.kintera.org/TR.asp?a=jwKVJiM1IgJ0JtL&s=apIHIROyGdJNK3NEKqF&m=quKVI5NUIsLaH>They have endured horrific crimes and deserve justice now. Your tax-deductible gift will help us protect their human rights.

In solidarity,

Diego Zavala
Country Specialist for Mexico
Amnesty International USA

[image: 1]

[image: AAUW Action Network]

AAUW Presentation of Why So Few? Women in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics Now Available Online

More Info <http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/MGEUMHQBYC/4948710361>

AAUW Presentation of Why So Few? Women in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics Now Available Online AAUW's newest research report, Why So Few? Women in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics, was featured in an event at George Washington University on March 25. The research findings were presented by co-authors Catherine Hill, Andresse St. Rose, Christianne Corbett, and scholar Shelley Correll, whose work was profiled in the report. In addition, AAUW Executive Director Linda Hallman moderated a panel discussion that featured leaders in a variety of STEM-related fields and focused on how to move this research to practice.

Although some technical difficulties interrupted parts of the live streaming, a clean feed is now available at http://www.aauw.org/research/whysofew.cfm<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/JTJZMHQBYD/4948710361> . New AAUW Research Generates Wide Media Coverage, Attention AAUW's *Why So Few? Women in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics *received significant press attention with stories in *Time<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/HLPBMHQBYE/4948710361> *, the New York Times<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/OULLMHQBYF/4948710361>, the Washington Post<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/MHRKMHQBYG/4948710361>, *Voice of America<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/DZUFMHQBYH/4948710361> *, the Chronicle of Higher Education<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/ACCKMHQBYI/4948710361>, and the *Martinez News-Gazette<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/GUXBMHQBYJ/4948710361> *. To see the complete list of headlines, visit the AAUW website newsroom<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/BNZQMHQBYK/4948710361> . * * * * Take Action! Read AAUW's position on Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics Education. <http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/EUOEMHQBYL/4948710361>

---------- The grassroots liaisons in AAUW's Leadership Corps program will be reaching out to AAUW branch leaders to provide mentoring and assistance. Whether you are a member of an AAUW branch (an officer or not) or a member-at-large interested in becoming involved with other AAUW members, please fill out the online form here<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/HEBTMHQBYM/4948710361>to indicate areas of branch programming or administration for which you would like assistance. * * *Washington Update<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/NGXQMHQBYN/4948710361> * is AAUW's free, members-only weekly e-bulletin offering an insider's view on the legislative process, the latest policy news, resources for advocates, programming ideas, and updates from the Public Policy and Government Relations Department. Subscribe today<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/DBMXMHQBYO/4948710361> !

Read the 2009-2011 AAUW Public Policy Program<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/BOZAMHQBYP/494871

0361>
.

Become part of the AAUW national community and break through barriers for women and girls. Join now<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/MNDUMHQBYQ/4948710361> .

Strengthen AAUW's voice with policy-makers! Donate now<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/OANNMHQBYR/4948710361>
.

Connect with AAUW online via our website<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/NRQKMHQBYS/4948710361>and blog <http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/ENHIMHQBYT/4948710361>, and follow us on Facebook<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/MWMZMHQBYU/4948710361>and Twitter <http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/GMKWMHQBYV/4948710361>.

Keep up with all the weekly news and political coverage from around the world for just $35 with and exclusive AAUW discount on Newsweek. Hurry, this offer will expire on March 31, 2010. Click here now for more information.<http://capwiz.com/aauw/utr/1/KUXJMHQBPH/DYIQMHQBYW/4948710361>

[image: Truthdig]<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CGI9wsS7oFkcQr5yQS2f69tNQqrf7cSms6wrrgDAi1oa2htRNvESdfPkjrmSqbh7JfSY5EHCZrLdWIrT4PAnojCMiGvRVUyk7ZUfcYk-unKJw==> Drilling beneath the headlines DAILY.

Dear Reader,

A number of reputable organizations are rallying support to get the U.S. government on board the international campaign to extend full human rights to women, and your continued support is much needed. Violence against women and girls is pandemic throughout the world, crossing all boundaries of political, social and religious differences. An international standard to repel such violence is long overdue, and this appeal for passage of a congressional standard from the venerable International Rescue Committee<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLPQtb91ieg0KIXG6X-k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRsw

P27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>, which has been a leader in human rights work, merits our support.

Robert Scheer
Editor in Chief, Truthdig

* * *

[image: IRC]<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLPQtb91ieg0KIXG6X-k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRswP27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>
[image: TAKE ACTION]<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLPQtb91ieg0KIXG6X-k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRswP27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>

Stop Violence Against Women<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLPQtb91ieg0KIXG6X-k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRswP27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>
*
*<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLPQtb91ieg0KIXG6X-k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRswP27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>

Dear Friend,

In the aftermath of the earthquake in Haiti, women and girls are vulnerable to exploitation and abuse as they struggle to survive and protect their families. Stand up for women in Haiti – and other women around the world who face unspeakable violence. Watch our video and sign the IRC petition asking Congressional leaders to protect and empower women.<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?

et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLP
Qtb91ieg0KIXG6X-
k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRsw
P27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06
u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>

We must ensure a safer, more secure future for women and girls. The International Violence Against Women Act is a critical first step by helping survivors, protecting those still vulnerable and preventing further violence through international aid programs and foreign policy efforts.

Empower women by signing our petition<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?
et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLP
Qtb91ieg0KIXG6X-
k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRsw
P27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06
u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>to stop violence against women around the world. We have a responsibility
to support those who are threatened and abused.

Sincerely,
Robyn Yaker
Emergency Gender Based Violence Coordinator, International Programs International Rescue Committee [image: Submit the Petition]<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?
et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLP
Qtb91ieg0KIXG6X-
k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRsw
P27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06
u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>

[image: IRC Footer]<http://r20.rs6.net/tn.jsp?
et=1103221334089&s=41646&e=001JIDp3TxK1CHynVyeyDzVO95fmW6HnLP
Qtb91ieg0KIXG6X-
k9_YrZe4vwfmy1glUH_HuT53TgJeDaRPInEHZzpDdAD0_wDD9lCwVCFUEcRsw
P27yCVqEAW28hRG3KklBzqyG3tDywxns_Skcw8doBZPc13rFh53t7xRPtCWjF06
u--gGIbK0ye4YATfWITDRTF8YOU5NcWA=>

*Forward email<http://ui.constantcontact.com/sa/fwtf.jsp?
m=1101208527696&ea=david.chirot%40gmail.com&a=1103221334089> *

[image: AAUW Breaking through Barriers]

↑ Index

347. amy king
"Charge Hell with a Bucket of Water"
Wed 31 Mar 2010

---

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/31/â€œcharge-
The Links --

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/03/31/â€œcharge-hell-with-a-bucket-of-water-â€-liz-carpenter/

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

April 2010

303 messages · Tue 30 Mar 2010 – Fri 30 Apr 2010

April 2010 closed this long stretch of the archive on the perfect chord — the avant-garde arguing that all art is theft in the same weeks that the establishment handed its highest prize to one of the avant-garde's own. Three hundred and three messages moved through the list in National Poetry Month, and its largest currents ran between the theory of borrowing and the fact of being crowned, with the poet-musician as the month's recurring figure and, at the end, its casualty. It was a fitting close: the outsiders discovered, at last, both stealing and winning.

The largest theoretical thread put the decade's obsession as a flat provocation. A member offered a hundred-dollar prize for the best explanation of a single phrase — "Explain art is theft. I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer" — and the room noted, wearily, that when the question had come up before, everyone had simply cited Eliot's old line about mature poets stealing, as though nothing theoretical had happened in the eighty years since. The appropriative decade had been, in a sense, one long footnote to Eliot, and April knew it.

The counter-thread was a coronation the room could love. Rae Armantrout had won the Pulitzer Prize for Poetry — a Language poet, a founder of the West Coast wing of the movement, suddenly holding the most mainstream honor American verse can bestow — and the citation praised her poems as "little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the first reading". Here was the establishment reaching out and crowning exactly the kind of difficult, oppositional poet the list had championed for decades: the outside brought, improbably, all the way inside.

The month's recurring figure bound the two together and then was lost. A wide thread gathered poets who were also musicians, the cross-art maker who works in sound and word at once — and at the end of the month one such figure died, the composer-poet Franz Kamin, killed in a car crash, mourned by a friend as "a great artist", visionary in music and prose alike. The poet-musician the room had spent April celebrating turned, in its last days, into the poet-musician it had to bury.

I have set April down exactly as the archive delivered it — the hundred-dollar prize to explain that art is theft, Rae Armantrout's Pulitzer for her little thought-bombs, and the death of the composer-poet Franz Kamin — because it was the month the avant-garde met both of its long-deferred fates at once: vindicated as theory, that all making is borrowing, and vindicated as career, one of its own crowned by the very establishment it had defined itself against. That the same weeks took Franz Kamin, the cross-art maker at his most generous, is the archive keeping its habit to the last: handing the room its triumph and its grief in a single April, and leaving the reader to hold, once more, the two at the same time.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 303 in all.

WRITERS

De 1913, Sandra 55
Allegrezza, William 12, 56
AND, mIEKAL 35, 120, 153, 184
Austin, William James 145
Ballardini, Anny 88
Baraban, Stephen 264
Beaulieu, Derek 24, 76, 97, 158, 205
Behm-Steinberg, Hugh 112
Belle, Cecelia 114
Benson, Cara 144
Black, Sheila 133
Bogle, Ann 156, 191, 280
Bowering, George 168, 195, 196, 203
Boykoff, Jules 82
Bo¾ièeviæ, Ana 44, 273, 281, 301
Brown, Pam 68, 78, 90, 175, 231
Camplin, Troy 50
Carr, Harold 132
Carson, Margaret 157
Casamassima, Christophe 29, 214
Chace, Joel 142
Chapman, Chris 170, 215
Cheek, Cris 182
Chirot, David 28, 30, 99, 121, 250, 261
Chirot, David-Baptiste 21, 291
Ciccariello, Peter 135, 242
Cluff, Caleb 110, 202, 230, 232
Conrad, CA 13, 71, 222
Craig, J.P. 69, 83, 193
Cranesbill 84
Del Ray Cross 34
Crumpacker, Caroline 268
Cunningham, John 137, 187
D.Buuck 131
Dalachinsky, Steve 37, 119, 147, 176, 177, 246, 251, 252, 256, 279, 283, 286, 287
Daly, Catherine 98, 274, 278
Damon, Maria 58, 126, 138, 172
Daniel Remein, Editor 11
Dean, Larry O. 118
Dunagan, Patrick 259
Dunlap, Bill 234
Durgin, Patrick F. 27, 92, 129
Earl, Amanda 5
Ellis, Stephen 31
Elshtain, Eric 109
Fieled, Adam 73, 106
Al Filreis 206, 237
Florence, Debby 233
Foster, Edward 154
Fox, Skip 192
Frazer, Vernon 224
Freind, William Joseph 253
Friedman, Ed 161
Glass, Dan 4, 16, 20
Glass, Jesse 1, 36
Gordon, Noah Eli 46
Gudding, Gabriel 122
Guthrie, Annie 277
Halle, Steve 266
Hamilton, Scott 77
Hardy, Edmund 199
Healy, Randolph 91
Heller, Michael 51
Heman, Bob 79
Henriksen, Matt 173
Henry, Ron 219
Hinton, Laura 43
Jeroen, Nieuwland 89, 139
Johnson, Halvard 197, 217, 260
Johnson, Mark 255
Karavatos, Nicholas 148, 152
Karmin, Jennifer 6, 22, 54, 104, 140, 204, 243, 303
Katko, Justin 81, 245
Kimball, Jack 272
Kimmelman, Burt 302
King, Amy 8, 14, 41, 42, 113, 198, 210, 227, 239, 241, 248, 257, 282, 289, 290, 294, 295, 296, 298, 299
Kirschenbaum, David 223
Konkol, Margaret 75, 169
Ladkin, Sam 244
Laity, Cassandra 127
Landis, Matthew 190
Law, Iris 123
Lepson, Ruth 32, 111, 115, 125, 258
List, Poetics 166
Loden, Rachel 181
Lomax, Dana Teen 179
Lora 149
Lovelace, Patrick 117
MacAllister, Bonnie 9, 155
Malo, Mary Jo 236, 238
Manson, Douglas 164, 189
Marmer, Jake 247
Martin, Camille 178, 180, 221, 229
McLennan, Rob 17, 70, 96, 136, 151, 163, 209, 263, 292, 300
McPherson, Bruce 59
Meersman, Philip 159, 171
Mollohan, J. Michael 128

Mukherjee, Aryanil 211
Murphy, Sheila 200
Murray, Gregg 186
Nathanson, Tenney 284
Nelson, Paul 100
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 52, 66, 67, 85, 93, 102, 103, 130
Oha, Obododimma 47
Owens, Richard 160
Penton, Jonathan 33, 254
Peterson, Tim 49
Pinto, Regina 80
Piombino, Nicholas 39
Poe, Deborah 185
Press, Insert 207
Pritts, Nate 3, 167, 288
Project, Poetry 74, 143, 220, 240, 276
Quackenbush, Jason 141, 183, 216
Quasha, George 25, 108, 269, 285
Raven, Francis 165
Revich, Allan 225
Rosenthal, Sarah 105
Rothenberg, Jerome 57
Savage, Thomas 218
Schickling, Jared 23
Schultz, Susan Webster 226
Schwartz, Gerald 60, 61
Side, Jeffrey 19, 38, 48, 107, 150, 265, 270
Siegel, Gabriel 194
Siegell, Paul 62, 228
Skinner, Jonathan 134
Skyplums 64, 72, 94
Slaughter, William 45
Sondheim, Alan 7, 65, 116, 146, 271
Stecopoulos, Eleni 53, 201
Stephenson, Ann 124
Strand, Julie 162
Stroffolino, Chris 174
Svalina, Mathias 10
Sweeney, Chad 293
Taransky, Michelle 40
Teersteeg 212
St. Thomasino 15
Twshaner 2, 26
Vincent, Stephen 188
Waldrop, K. R. 63
Warsh, Lewis 95
Weeks, Jacquilyn 213
Weishaus, Joel 275
Weiss, Mark 262, 267
Wilcox, Dan 18, 86, 87
Winslow, Aaron 235
Young, Mark 297
Zabic, Nana 101, 208, 249

NAMES MENTIONED

Abramowitz, Harold 207
Acker, Kathy 129
Ackerman, Amanda 207
Adams, Robert 53, 173
Albon, George 188
Alice, Mary 5, 17, 140, 243
Allan, Don 199
Altemus, Reed 297, 299
Amadon, Samuel 173
Ambrose, Joe 177, 211, 251, 283, 287
Americans, Asian 30, 143, 154
Anderson, Laurie 7
Andrews, Bruce 19, 20, 92, 235
Anne, Sarah 28, 31, 179
Anton, Robert 219
Arbor, Ann 219
Armantrout, Rae 100, 110, 114, 127, 133, 135, 137, 138, 203, 210
Arnold, Bob 240, 276, 297, 299
Ashbery, John 68, 92, 129
Ashley, Renee 34
Atkins, Russell 92
Atkins, Tim 34, 204
Atlanta, Mark P. 124, 204
Austin, Geer 301
Austin, Nathan 204
Baker, Mary 34
Balaz, Joe 297, 299
Baraka, Amiri 129, 161, 176, 281
Barbour, Douglas 96
Barg, Barbara 161
Barker, Andrew 177, 211, 251
Barnard, Mary 223, 285
Barnes, Diane 34, 35, 223
Baron, Todd 285
Barton, John 209
Baxter, Ted 87
Becker, Claire 173
Bedient, Calvin 223
Bee, Susan 285
Belflower, James 6
Belford, Ken 163, 300
Belieu, Erin 14, 16, 32, 43
Bellamy, Dodie 49
Benjamin, Walter 59
Bennett, John M. 297, 299
Berkeley, Michael 4, 30, 53, 181, 196, 201, 240
Berman, David 118
Bernheimer, Alan 92
Bernstein, Charles 40, 92, 129, 140, 166, 179, 206, 235, 243, 285
Bernstein, Emma 166, 285
Berrigan, Anselm 143
Berrigan, Eddie 68, 131, 240, 276
Berrigan, Edmund 204, 240, 276
Berrigan, Ted 199
Berry, Jake 38, 175, 231

Betts, Gregory 163, 300
Billitteri, Carla 160
Blake, William 239
Blaser, Robin 179
Bloch, Julia 166
Boat, Drunken 74, 248, 298, 303
Bolton, John 68
Bolton, Ken 68
Bonney, Sean 199, 245
Borges, Jorge Luis 59
Bozicevic, Ana 22
Brainard, Joe 92
Brakhage, Stan 240, 276
Brandonisio, Michael 297, 299
Brazil, David 27, 92, 129
Bresson, Robert 52, 58, 61, 64, 66, 72, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 99, 102, 103
Brewerton, Andrew 91
Briante, Susan 173
Brinks, Dave 204
Brockwell, Stephen 199, 209
Broderick, Therese 87
Brodey, Jim 161, 176
Bromige, David 114, 127, 133, 138, 203
Bronk, William 302
Brook, James 269
Broughton, James 92
Brown, Brandon 131
Browne, Colin 15, 277
Browning, Robert 273
Buchanan, Pat 293
Budde, Rob 163, 300
Buffam, Suzanne 96
Burckhardt, Jacob 240, 276
Burnham, Clint 300
Buscemi, Steve 129
Butler, Judith 96, 136, 239
Byrd, Don 160
Byron, Philip 297, 299
Cage, John 268
Calton, Stuart 199
Cameron, Sharon 96, 136
Capen, Samuel P. 75, 169
Caples, Garrett 297, 299, 302
Card, Macgregor 143, 204
Carey, Steve 15, 34
Carey, Tom 143
Carlos, William 228, 297, 299
Carr, Angela 96, 136, 187, 189, 190, 193, 212, 213, 214, 300
Carr, Emily 29
Carragon, Patricia 251
Carroll, Jim 161, 176, 249
Carter, Allison 207
Carter, Mike 161, 176, 271
Cassavetes, John 52, 58, 61, 64, 66, 72, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 99, 102, 103
Catanzano, Amy 36
Cha, Theresa Hak Kyung 92, 129
Chapman, Wes 280
Chernoff, Maxine 54, 293
Child, Abigail 240, 276
Chomsky, Noam 30
Christi, Ellen 177, 211, 251
Clare, John 199, 268
Clark, Cheryl 1, 251
Clark, Tom 1
Clarke, Jack 11, 87
Clay, Adam 173
Clay, Steve 57
Clements, Brian 265, 297, 299, 302
Clinton, Bill 82
Clippinger, David 302
Clover, Joshua 235
Cohen, David 28, 31, 34
Cohen, Julia 34
Cohn, Jim 224, 249
Colby, Kate 34
Colby, Todd 204
Coleman, Jen 204
Coleman, Victor 34
Coletti, John 56, 143
Collins, Phil 228
Collis, Stephen 300
Collis, Steve 284
Columbus, Christopher 248, 298
Compton, Shanna 22
Conrad, Tony 13, 49, 71, 222
Cooke, Jennifer 199
Coolidge, Clark 161, 176, 244, 259
Cooper, Paula 118, 204
Copp, Corina 143
Corbett, Bill 143
Corso, Gregory 92
Cortez, Jayne 161, 176, 179
Costanza, George 290
County, Mike 91, 219
Covey, Bruce 204, 297, 299, 302
Crane, Lee 87
Creeley, Robert 276, 281
Crouch, Jeff 34
Cunningham, Brent 179
Curley, Jon 297, 299
Curtis, Dana 175, 231
Darwin, Charles 199, 281
Davidson, Ian 91
Davies, Alan 272, 297, 299
Davies, Kevin 40, 209
Davis, Martin 54, 206, 266
Dennis, Michael 8
Derksen, Jeff 163, 300
Derrida, Jacques 234, 252, 255
Detorie, Michelle 207
Deutch, Amanda 301

Devaney, Thomas 204
Dewey, Fred 160
Dickens, Charles 199
Dixon, Bill 53
Dobran, Ryan 81, 245
Dodd, David 34
Dolin, Sharon 301
Doller, Sandra 55, 96
Donato, Claire 11
Donne, John 158
Donnelly, Timothy 223
Donovan, Thom 166
Dorn, Edward 281
Doty, Mark 273
Doyle, Erica 235
Dragland, Stan 300
Drennan, Bill 107, 297, 299
Drucker, Johanna 92
Ducharme, Mark 36
Duggan, Laurie 163, 300
Duncan, Andrew 199
Duncan, Robert 92, 250
Dungy, Camille 198
Durbin, Kate 22, 207
Durgin, Patrick F. 27, 92, 129
Dworkin, Craig 235
Edmond, Murray 175, 231, 297, 299
Eichhorn, Kate 163, 300
Eigner, Larry 272
Eliot, Joe 48, 156, 172, 183, 186, 187, 189, 190, 193, 194, 197, 212, 213, 214, 218, 225, 230, 250, 280
Eliot, T. S. 280
Ellen, Mary 34, 161, 176, 209
Ellingham, Lew 49
Elliot, Joe 271
Elrick, Laura 27, 92
Emerson, Lori 166
Encke, Jeff 15
England, Amy 5, 17, 182
Ernst, Max 181, 196
Esther, Little 245, 293
Etter, Carrie 199, 245
Eugene, Brett 2, 26
Evans, Brett 74, 204
Evans, Steve 235
Fagin, Betsy 204
Falk, Peter 66, 72, 84, 85, 89, 94, 103
Farr, Raymond 297, 299
Farrell, Michael 34, 297, 299
Ferguson, Jesse 163, 300
Ferris, Mike 52, 58, 61, 64, 66, 72, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 99, 102, 103
Finch, Annie 1, 22
Fink, Thomas 297, 299, 302
Fiorini, Jessica 143, 240
Fishman, Ellen 51
Fitterman, Rob 235
Fitzgerald, Scott 15, 300
Flynn, Richard 239
Forbes, John 68
France, Peter 5, 17, 30, 204, 240, 276, 293
Frances, Mary 245
Fraser, Simon 284
Freedman, Lewis 271
Freeland, Charles 297, 299
Friedlander, Ben 235
Fulton, Alice 181, 196
Galassi, Jonathan 143
Gardner, Drew 223
Gardner, Janet 223
Garthe, Karen 223
Gatza, Geoffrey 297, 299, 302
Gevirtz, Susan 179
Gilmore, Gary 223
Gimenez, Carmen 22
Ginsberg, Allan 272
Ginsberg, Allen 161, 176, 281
Giscombe, Cecil 181, 196, 235
Gizzi, Michael 204
Gizzi, Peter 49, 143, 245
Gleason, Madeline 92
Godard, Barbara 52, 58, 61, 64, 66, 72, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 99, 102, 103
Goldberg, Ariel 105
Golding, Alan 235
Goldman, Judith 235
Goldsmith, Kenneth 131, 235
Gonzalez, Ray 95
Good, Philip 204
Goode, Chris 199
Goodman, Amy 291
Gordon, Nada 92
Gorrick, Anne 297, 299
Gottlieb, Michael 272
Gould, Glenn 239, 271
Graham, Susan 22
Gray, Stephanie 95
Greenberg, Arielle 55, 248, 298
Greenstreet, Kate 173
Greenwald, Ted 92, 161, 176
Gregg, Linda 186, 273
Gregory, Jane 6, 173
Grenier, Bob 251
Grenier, Robert 92
Griffin, Tim 173, 240, 276
Grinnell, Tracy 301
Grinwis, James 301
Guest, Barbara 49, 92, 129
Hadbawnik, David 92
Hajnoczky, Helen 300
Hall, Phil 163, 300
Halpern, Daniel 235
Halsey, Alan 15, 199

Hamill, Janet 37, 161
Hamill, Sam 176
Hamilton, Diana 199
Harkey, John 301
Harris, Ken 239
Harris, Sharon 300
Harryman, Carla 92, 129
Hart, Matt 204
Harvey, George 42
Hauser, Mike 74
Hawkins, Bobbie 199
Hawkins, Ralph 199
Hayes, Jared 235
Haynes, Bob 271
Heames, Ian 245
Heighton, Steven 209
Heller, Jan 273
Henderson, David 161, 176
Hennessey, Michael 73, 284
Henning, Barbara 204
Herbert, George 219
Herbert, John 137, 187, 189, 190, 193, 212, 213, 214
Herd, Colin 34
Hernandez, Victor 297, 299
Higginbotham, Keith 15
Hill, Gary 269
Hilson, Jeff 199
Hirsch, Edward 171
Hoag, Deb 36
Hofer, Jen 235
Hollander, Ben 87
Hollo, Anselm 199
Holloway, Rob 245, 293
Holman, Bob 92, 161, 176
Holmes, Janet 209
Holmes, Michael 209
Hoover, Paul 54, 181, 196, 293
House, Poets 44, 164, 262, 273
Howard, Richard 177, 211, 251
Howe, Susan 235
Hubbard, Melanie 173
Hughes, Peter 199
Hughes, Ted 173, 199
Hunt, Erica 235
Hunter, Carrie 248, 273, 298
Hunter, Robert 161, 176
Iantosca, Tony 95
Iijima, Brenda 39, 53, 273, 301
Ireland, Lauren 91, 204, 245
Israel, David R. 28, 30, 31
Israeli, Henry 28, 30, 31
Jackson, Jesse 95, 271
Jacob, Max 266
Jaeger, Peter 199
Jaramillo, Laura 301
Jarnot, Lisa 143
Jarvis, Simon 245
Javier, Paolo 143, 301
Jenkins, Grant 54, 173
Jenkins, Margaret 95
Johns, Jasper 223
Johnson, Jeff T. 11, 173
Johnson, Robert 121
Jonas, Stephen 240, 276
Jones, Bob 68, 92, 95, 240, 248, 276, 298
Jones, Jill 15, 68
Jordan, June 40
Jorgensen, Alexander 297, 299
Joris, Pierre 57, 140, 160, 243
Joron, Andrew 131, 181, 196
Joseph, Safdie 34, 140, 173, 237, 239, 301
Juan, Don 59
Kane, Daniel 220, 240, 276
Karl, Steven 301
Kearney, Douglas 179
Kearney, Larry 34
Keene, John 55
Kelleher, Michael 204
Kelly, Paul 40, 59, 230, 237
Kelly, Robert 59
Keppler, Joseph F. 15
Kilbride, Laura 245
Killian, Kevin 27, 49, 92, 129
Killian, Sean 49
Kirschenbaum, David A. 223
Klein, Naomi 30, 204
Knowles, Alison 153, 171
Koch, Kenneth 281
Kostelanetz, Richard 297, 299
Kraus, Karl 87, 301
Kroetsch, Robert 96, 292, 300
Kronovet, Jennifer 42
Kuszai, Joel 166
Lamoureux, Mark 297, 299, 301, 302
Lampert, Andrew 143, 240, 276
Lane, Eric 111, 119, 120, 125, 130, 139, 145
Languell, Krystal 22
Larkin, Peter 199
Lau, David 223
Laughlin, James 297, 299
Laughtland, Amanda 297, 302
Lauterbach, Ann 157
Lavender, Bill 38, 74, 175, 231
Law, Iris A. 123
Laynor, Gregory 143
Lea, Nicholas 70, 300
Leidner, Mark 239
Leng, Margaret 268
Leon, Jon 173
Levin, Lauren 240
Levitsky, Rachel 273
Levy, Andrew 273
Lilly, Ruth 219, 273, 301

Lin, Daniel 273
Liu, Timothy 297, 299, 302
Livingston, Ira 235
Logan, John 297, 299, 302
Logan, Nathan 8
Lohmann, Sam 173
London, Frank 68, 199, 245
Lopez, Tony 199
Lorber, Brendan 204
Lorca, Federico García 199
Mac Low, Jackson 92
Lowell, Amy 181, 196
Luoma, Bill 129
Lurie, Bobbi 297, 299
Luther, Martin 30
Lyons, Kim 301
Macdonald, Travis 15, 95, 297, 299
Madia, Joey 297, 299
Madison, James 35, 127
Magallon, Diana 34
Magi, Jill 273, 301
Mancus, Tony 228, 273
Marie, Joshua 96
Marie, Julie 240, 276
Markotic, Nicole 163, 300
Marshall, Robert 240, 273, 276
Martone, John 297, 299
Marvin, Lee 14, 16, 32, 41, 43
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 122
Mayer, Bernadette 134, 140, 204, 243
Meetze, James 143
Meirose, Jim 297, 299
Meltzer, David 152, 161, 176, 297, 299
Menard, Pierre 57
Menashe, Samuel 247, 251
Menendez, Didi 297, 299, 302
Meng, Catherine 240
Metz, Scott 297, 299
Meyer, Tom 302
Miller, Lee 11, 55, 87, 132, 248, 298
Minkus, Kim 300
Minton, Jonathan 87
Mirov, Ben 204, 239, 301
Mitchell, Joan 82
Mitchell, Stephen 143, 240
Moore, John 297, 299
Moore, Nicholas 105, 274
Morgan, Robin 160
Morris, Tim 161, 176, 208
Morrison, Rusty 34
Morton, Kathryn A. 139
Moschovakis, Anna 273
Mosconi, Joseph 207
Moure, Erin 96, 97, 187, 189, 190, 193, 212, 213, 214, 269
Moxley, Jennifer 74, 272
Mulford, Wendy 199, 245
Murphy, Ryan 96
Murphy, Sheila E. 297, 299
Murray, Elizabeth 175, 186, 231
Myles, Eileen 49, 143
Nakayasu, Sawako 204
Nasdor, Marc 161, 176
Nealon, Chris 26
Nelson, Cynthia 204
Nelson, Gale 198, 204, 297, 299
Nelson, Paul E. 100, 110, 114, 127, 133, 135, 137, 138, 203
Nguyen, Hoa 173
Nichols, Travis 22
Nielsen, Aldon 27, 129
Nixon, Richard 99, 102, 103, 301
Norman, Peter 28, 31, 163, 300
Norton, John 223
Notley, Alice 220, 240, 253, 272, 276
Nowak, Mark 235
O'Hara, Frank 92
Obadike, Keith 55
Oliver, Laura 283, 287
Olivia, Carrie 173
Olsen, Lance 245
Olson, Charles 62, 92, 160, 250, 302
Oppen, George 13, 51
Orwell, George 83
Osman, Jena 164, 235, 237
Ostashevsky, Eugene 143
Pacific, Asian 82
Padgett, Ron 92
Palattella, John 262, 267
Pallant, Cheryl 22, 54
Palm, Lars 297, 299, 302
Palmer, Michael 173
Parish, Jefferson 120
Parker, Frank 284
Parker, Karl 199, 271
Pasold, Lisa 136
Paterson, William 34, 248, 298
Penn, Joanna 204
Perelman, Bob 92, 131, 237
Perloff, Marjorie 235
Perry, David 204
Pettet, Simon 143, 199
Pettit, Emily 301
Peverett, Michael 199
Peyrafitte, Nicole 57
Piccinnini, Douglas 223
Pines, Paul 86, 240, 276
Piombino, Nick 39, 166
Place, Vanessa 140, 207, 243
Porter, Anne 271
Pound, Ezra 158
Pound, Scott 156, 172, 183, 186, 187, 189, 190, 193, 194, 197, 210, 212, 213, 214, 218, 225, 230, 250

Preminger, Noah 111, 119, 120, 125, 130, 139, 145
Priego, Ernesto 297, 299, 302
Di Prima, Diane 92, 129
Prince, Richard 68, 204
Prize, Poets 223
Professor, Kelly 237
Prynne, J. H. 81
Puckett, Caleb 297, 299
Purdy, James 209
Purves, Robin 199
Queyras, Sina 241, 264, 294
Quinn, Alice 273
Quixote, Don 193
Randall, Karen 34
Reckin, Anna 245
Reed, Marthe 22
Reed, Pat 131
Reeves, Jennifer 240, 276
Regan, Max 166
Retallack, Joan 143, 235
Reyes, Louis 297, 299, 302
Reynolds, Sean 96
Riley, Denise 199
Rimbaud, Arthur 291
Rimbaud, Dee 199
Rioux, Stephanie 207
Risset, Jacqueline 74
Rizzo, Christopher 297, 299, 302
Robertson, Lisa 4, 187, 189, 190, 193, 212, 213, 214, 235
Robinson, Adam 239
Robinson, Jen 204
Robinson, Kit 2, 26, 92, 131
Robinson, Mary 273
Rodefer, Stephen 92
Rogal, Stan 300
Rosal, Patrick 297, 299, 302
Rosenberg, Jim 42, 285, 297, 299
Rothenberg, Diane 57
Rothenberg, Jerry 25, 52, 58, 61, 64, 66, 72, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 99, 102, 103, 153, 171
Rowan, Lou 253
Roy, Camille 179
Sacks, Peter 223
Sama, Metta 248, 298
Sampirisi, Jenny 300
Sanchez, Jorge 92, 95, 129, 188
Sandburg, Carl 161, 176
Sanders, Jay 161, 176
Sawyer, Larry 297, 299
Scalapino, Leslie 49, 92, 129
Scappettone, Jennifer 235
Schelling, Andrew 235
Schjeldahl, Peter 68
Schlesinger, Kyle 173
Schneiderman, Kurt 266, 281, 301
Schultz, Susan M. 226, 297, 302
Schuyler, James 92, 143
Schwartz, Judy 301
Schwartz, Leonard 157
Searle, John 22
Segal, Martin E. 49, 273
Shakespeare, William 280
Shaner, Tim 26
Shapiro, Gary 34
Sharma, Prageeta 204
Shaw, Lytle 235
Sheerman, Lucy 245
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 49, 240, 248, 276, 298
Sherlock, Frank 74
Shoemaker, Steven 87
Sigo, Cedar 173
Silem, Kasey 235
Silliman, Ron 65, 133, 138, 139
Simon, Toni 39
Sirois, Justin 222
Skillman, Judith 33, 36
Skoulding, Zoe 245
Sky, Tarpaulin 248, 273, 298, 301
Sleigh, Tom 248, 298
Sloan, Margaret 54
Smith, Steven 187, 189, 190, 193, 212, 213, 214
Smith, Tracy K. 22, 34, 87, 161, 176, 179, 204, 249, 291, 297, 299, 302
Snyder, Donna 33, 36
Solie, Karen 187, 189, 190, 193, 212, 213, 214
Spahr, Juliana 179, 235
Sparrow, John 161, 176, 204
Spicer, Jack 49, 92, 129, 188, 226
Stackhouse, Christopher 55
Stanley, Jared 240, 247, 251
Stanley, Josh 199
Stebelton, Chuck 162, 204
Steensen, Sasha 160
Stefans, Kim 49, 204
Stein, Charles 160, 269
Stengel, Jill 297, 299, 302
Stephens, Paul 235
Stevens, Wallace 206
Stewart, Christine 163, 292, 300
Sullivan, Gary 204
Sutherland, Mark 199
Sweeney, Jennifer K. 281
Szymaszek, Stacy 49, 143, 220
Tabios, Eileen 297, 299, 302
Tardi, Mark 143
Taussig, Michael 235
Taylor, Cecil 161
Taylor, Jesse 34, 176
Taylor, Steven 161, 176

Taylor, Wendy 33, 36
Templeton, Fiona 92
Texas, Irving 181, 196
Theater, Poets 82, 92
Thomas, Dylan 27, 34, 92, 218
Thompson, Jon 204, 273
Tieger, Aaron 240
Tietz, Ward 55
Timmons, Jeffrey 143, 272
Timmons, Mathew 207
Torra, Joseph 34
Toscano, Rodrigo 27, 92, 235
Tost, Tony 173
Towle, Tony 68
Tribbey, Hugh 54
Trigilio, Tony 54
Trivedi, Amish 173
Turner, Brian 223
Tyler, Mary 239, 283, 287
Tynes, Jen 2, 26
Upton, Lawrence 199
Valery, Paul 297, 299
Vendler, Helen 223
Vengua, Jean 297, 299, 302
Verlaine, Paul 249
Vermont, Charlie 268
Veronica, Angela 301
Vincent, Gregory 15, 34, 143, 188, 297, 299, 302
Volpert, Megan 22
Waber, Dan 80
Wagner, Catherine 96
Wakeling, Corey 297, 299
Wakoski, Diane 57
Wald, Diane 55
Waldman, Anne 92, 143, 160, 161, 176, 283, 287
Waldrop, Keith 92
Waldrop, Rosemary 63
Waldrop, Rosmarie 92, 179
Walker, Alice 268
Walker, Mary 95
Wallace, Sara 99, 102, 103, 206, 248, 298
Wallenstein, Barry 177, 211, 251
Walser, Robert 74
Warhol, Andy 49
Warren, Jim 131, 204
Washington, Harold 42, 53, 165, 177, 181, 196, 211, 248, 251, 298
Waters, Charles 177, 211, 251
Watten, Barrett 235
Watts, Carol 245
Weiner, Hannah 27, 92, 129, 272, 301
Weinstein, Norman 59
Weiss, Irving 297, 299
Welch, Brian 199
Welch, John 199
Welch, Lew 92
Wellman, Donald 33, 36, 160
Welsh, Lawrence 33, 36
Westbrook, Dillon 131
Whalen, Philip 281
White, Tom 199
Wieners, John 272
Wilkinson, John 199, 245
Wilkinson, Joshua 96
Williams, Hank 110, 114, 121, 127, 133, 138
Williams, Tony 9, 45, 95, 121, 203, 245, 297, 299
Willis, Elizabeth 235
Wilson, Judith E. 245
Wilson, Steve 245
Winks, Christopher 262
Wolach, David 53
Wolfe, Thomas 87
Wolff, Rebecca 204
Woodward, Jon 204
Woolf, Virginia 156, 172, 183, 186, 187, 189, 190, 193, 194, 197, 212, 213, 214, 218, 225, 230, 250
Wordsworth, William 65
Wright, Jeff 177, 211, 251
Wright, Tim 297, 299
Yacht, Peter F. 96
Yankelevich, Matvei 273
Young, Andy 204
Young, Geoffrey 143
Young, Mike 239
Young, Stephanie 235
Zapruder, Matthew 204
Zolf, Rachel 235
Zorn, John 271
Zucker, Rachel 55

CONCEPTS

9/11 31
Activism and protest 28, 30, 31, 248, 291, 298
Aesthetics 82, 123, 124, 129, 140, 158, 165, 193, 271, 278
Afghanistan 30
Anthologies 27, 55, 92, 129, 140, 143, 181, 196, 198, 207, 223, 240, 245, 248, 262, 267, 269, 276, 291, 293, 298
Appropriation 158, 183, 189, 190, 193, 197, 207, 212, 213, 214, 218, 246, 260, 271, 293
Archives and libraries 28, 31, 42, 51, 57, 65, 75, 116, 129, 143, 146, 148, 157, 166, 169, 177, 181, 196, 205, 211, 240, 251, 272, 275, 277, 288
Asemic writing 5, 17, 261
Autobiography 74, 86, 143, 199, 272, 288
Avant-garde 33, 36, 63, 75, 92, 155, 169, 179, 208, 268

Beauty 59
Biography 261
Blogs 4, 6, 9, 13, 17, 20, 22, 25, 27, 28, 30, 31, 49, 52, 53, 57, 58, 61, 62, 64, 66, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 78, 83, 84, 85, 88, 89, 90, 92, 93, 94, 96, 99, 102, 103, 104, 106, 113, 121, 123, 124, 129, 134, 135, 136, 137, 140, 143, 148, 151, 155, 159, 160, 163, 165, 166, 171, 173, 175, 178, 179, 180, 182, 193, 197, 199, 208, 209, 217, 221, 222, 226, 228, 229, 231, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 241, 242, 243, 246, 248, 250, 259, 260, 263, 264, 266, 270, 275, 282, 289, 290, 292, 294, 295, 297, 298, 299, 300, 302
Book announcements 39, 53, 55, 63, 74, 82, 91, 96, 124, 140, 143, 144, 150, 207, 223, 240, 269, 281, 291, 296, 297, 299, 302
Bookstores 9, 35, 51, 223, 281
Capitalism 83
Censorship 30
Cities 4, 140, 162, 273
Class 72, 84, 85, 89, 94
Climate 258
Collage and montage 68, 120, 248, 256, 279, 298
Conferences and festivals 30, 33, 44, 53, 55, 57, 96, 143, 159, 160, 171, 177, 178, 182, 208, 209, 211, 235, 240, 243, 250, 251, 268, 271, 273, 281, 285, 301, 303
Confessional poetry 48
Copyright and permissions 110, 114, 127, 133, 138, 166, 187, 189, 190, 193, 202, 203, 212, 213, 214, 216, 230, 232, 233
Creative writing pedagogy 49, 182
Deconstruction 199, 236, 238, 246, 260
Difficulty 166
Digital archives 40, 51, 73, 143, 206, 208, 223, 284
Dreams 30, 40, 53, 59, 99, 102, 103, 271
Ecology and ecopoetics 53, 68
Editing 74, 143, 166, 297, 299, 302
Electronic poetry and hypertext 6, 24, 40, 57, 76, 97, 166, 205, 223
Elegy 68
Epic 104, 303
Experimental poetry 143, 179
Feminism 28, 31
Film 49, 52, 58, 61, 64, 66, 72, 82, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 99, 102, 103, 120, 143, 175, 220, 240, 245, 276
Flarf 182, 187, 189, 190, 193, 212, 213, 214
Free speech 30
Gender 53
Grants and funding 30, 42, 49, 53, 54, 143, 162, 173, 181, 196, 219, 240, 248, 269, 273, 276, 277, 298
Haiku 177, 211, 251, 293
Humour and satire 63, 68, 100, 110, 114, 127, 133, 135, 137, 138, 199, 203, 268
Improvisation 52, 58, 61, 64, 66, 72, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 99, 102, 103, 120, 140, 149, 177, 199, 211, 243, 271
Interviews 15, 19, 20, 41, 62, 96, 123, 136, 199, 208, 228, 239, 240, 248, 249, 265, 276, 291, 295, 298
Israel and Palestine 28, 30, 31, 291
Language poetry 48, 69, 139, 182
Latino and Latin American poetry 268
Letters and correspondence 49, 166, 240, 276, 281, 302
List moderation 42, 166, 235, 240, 276
Little magazines 4, 23, 30, 39, 45, 53, 55, 68, 74, 75, 82, 96, 113, 123, 143, 144, 149, 154, 160, 166, 169, 175, 177, 204, 207, 211, 219, 223, 237, 239, 240, 245, 248, 273, 281, 293, 297, 298, 299, 301, 303
Lyric poetry 59, 121, 175, 181, 182, 196, 209
Marxism 181, 196
Materiality of the text 158, 235
Memory 86, 93, 156, 172, 183, 186, 187, 189, 190, 191, 193, 194, 197, 199, 208, 212, 213, 214, 217, 218, 225, 230, 250
MFA programs 22, 42, 44, 45, 53, 95, 123, 140, 143, 182, 240, 248, 249, 273, 293, 298
Modernism 48, 83, 127, 154, 158, 245
Music and poetry 6, 35, 37, 39, 51, 62, 64, 69, 82, 85, 86, 87, 89, 94, 101, 106, 108, 110, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 138, 139, 141, 142, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 152, 153, 155, 159, 161, 171, 176, 177, 178, 180, 203, 207, 208, 211, 219, 221, 223, 224, 229, 243, 249, 250, 251, 268, 271, 274, 279, 283, 287, 291
Nationalism 175
Nature 48, 75, 82, 85, 89, 94, 166, 198, 246, 260, 293
Negativity and refusal 30
New York School 48, 240, 276, 281
Obituary and memorial 166
Objectivism 48, 49
Performance and the poetry reading 26, 35, 37, 40, 42, 44, 45, 51, 57, 74, 79, 86, 87, 157, 166, 209, 219, 223, 245, 251, 273, 274, 293
Philosophy 30, 52, 58, 61, 64, 66, 72, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 99, 102, 103, 181, 190, 196, 212, 213, 214, 271, 285
Place and region 41, 63
Poet laureate 151, 242
Poetics 25, 29, 40, 42, 45, 49, 51, 52, 53, 58, 59, 61, 64, 66, 72, 74, 84, 85, 88, 89, 93, 94, 96, 99, 102, 103, 110, 114, 123, 127,

133, 137, 138, 140, 143, 164, 166, 175, 178, 182, 187, 189, 190, 193, 201, 202, 203, 208, 212, 213, 214, 216, 229, 230, 232, 233, 235, 239, 245, 281, 288
Postmodernism 48
Print vs. digital 12, 13, 28, 31, 55, 71, 88, 92, 93, 129, 133, 138, 143, 154, 181, 196, 220, 222, 223, 234, 252, 255, 269, 288, 291
Prizes and awards 29, 41, 42, 44, 49, 100, 110, 114, 121, 127, 133, 135, 137, 138, 143, 156, 172, 181, 183, 186, 187, 189, 190, 191, 193, 194, 196, 197, 203, 212, 213, 214, 217, 218, 219, 223, 225, 230, 240, 248, 250, 269, 271, 273, 276, 293, 298, 303
Prose poem 63, 96, 181, 196
Prosody and meter 158
Queer poetics 11, 49, 63, 154, 199, 226
Race and poetry 166
Reading announcements 40, 51, 57, 79, 82, 177, 188, 211, 220, 245, 247, 251, 284
Religion and the sacred 30, 99, 102, 103, 223, 271, 280
Reviewing and criticism 21, 30, 42, 50, 53, 59, 68, 74, 82, 104, 123, 140, 143, 166, 175, 180, 181, 185, 196, 199, 209, 219, 223, 228, 248, 270, 275, 278, 280, 292, 293, 298, 303
San Francisco Renaissance 92
Science 281
Semiotics 235
Serial poem 53, 60, 65, 67, 69, 240, 276
Small press publishing 1, 6, 17, 29, 44, 49, 53, 70, 74, 75, 80, 82, 91, 92, 96, 104, 124, 129, 136, 140, 143, 151, 163, 169, 179, 209, 240, 248, 259, 263, 273, 281, 286, 292, 296, 298, 300, 301, 303
Social media 30, 42, 127, 135, 137, 140, 149, 155, 159, 171, 174, 177, 178, 208, 211, 223, 294, 303
Software and code 76, 162, 220, 229
Sonnet 96, 109, 178, 180, 188, 197, 208, 217, 221, 229, 260
Sound poetry 153, 171, 187, 189, 190, 193, 208, 212, 213, 214, 269
Subjectivity 41, 150, 156, 172, 183, 186, 187, 189, 190, 193, 194, 197, 212, 213, 214, 218, 225, 230, 250, 269, 280
Sublime 126, 181, 196
Surrealism 181, 196
Terrorism 30
The academy 30, 42, 44, 47, 49, 53, 54, 57, 74, 82, 95, 100, 104, 110, 114, 123, 127, 133, 135, 137, 138, 140, 142, 143, 148, 152, 166, 175, 181, 182, 196, 203, 209, 219, 223, 231, 235, 237, 240, 245, 248, 253, 262, 267, 269, 271, 273, 276, 277, 285, 288, 292, 293, 298, 303
The body 275, 302
The canon 65, 158
The Holocaust 28, 31
The internet 62, 166, 237, 278
The Iraq war 28, 30, 31
The line 185
The listserv 28, 31, 42, 74, 143, 146, 166, 208, 240, 276, 280, 302
Theatre 27, 49, 72, 82, 84, 85, 89, 92, 94, 99, 102, 103, 129, 142, 179, 182, 245, 268, 273
Torture and Abu Ghraib 291
Translation 42, 53, 55, 59, 74, 76, 123, 143, 154, 157, 169, 181, 182, 190, 196, 199, 208, 212, 213, 214, 223, 248, 262, 293, 298, 303
Visual and concrete poetry 5, 17, 80, 182, 190, 200, 212, 213, 214
Visual art 2, 6, 26, 45, 57, 82, 87, 105, 120, 123, 143, 144, 147, 190, 204, 212, 213, 214, 234, 240, 248, 252, 253, 254, 255, 268, 269, 276, 298
Voice 190, 212, 213, 214
Women's writing 14, 16, 32, 41, 43, 223, 245

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 303 in all.

30 MAR 2010

1. Jesse Glass — Tom Clark, Annie Finch, Jack Foley--New E-chaps from Ahadada
2. twshaner — Kit Robinson reads in Eugene 6/3

31 MAR 2010

3. Nate Pritts — H_NGM_N _X_
4. Dan Glass — With + Stand 4: The Lisa Robertson Issue PDF!
5. Amanda Earl — National Poetry Month celebration begins April 1
6. Jennifer Karmin — April 8: Samples / a reading from 9 poets in Denver

1 APR 2010

7. Alan Sondheim — Laurie Anderson, someone else, Alan Sondheim, violin, mandolin, etc.
8. amy king — GRL - 2nd Year Anniversary
9. Bonnie MacAllister — SWAN Day Reading 4/1 7 p.m. Philadelphia
10. Mathias Svalina — Octopus Books Open Reading Period Begins Today
11. Daniel Remein, Editor — Perfectbound Whiskey & Fox!
12. William Allegrezza — New E-Book/POD
13. CA Conrad — Oppen URCHIN 4/11/10

2 APR 2010

14. amy king — WILLA's Website Has Launched!
15. St. Thomasino — a noun sing the Alan Halsey interview at e·ratio
16. Dan Glass — Re: WILLA's Website Has Launched!
17. Rob McLennan — [[redacted]: NationalPoetryMonth.ca is live]
18. Dan Wilcox — Re: National Poetry Month celebration begins April 1
19. Jeffrey Side — Bruce Andrews interview at The Argotist Online
20. Dan Glass — Interview with Bruce Andrews online
21. David-Baptiste Chirot — NYT Book Review: Next Big Thing in English: uSING m.r.i.'S & Evolut...
22. Jennifer Karmin — April 7: Dusie Pussipo Stonecoast Femiganza in Denver
23. jared schickling — Mayday #2
24. derek beaulieu — new from NO press: Kyle Schlesinger's DARK GLASSES

3 APR 2010

25. George Quasha — Preverbs posting on Rothenberg blog Poems & Poetics
26. twshaner — Correction: Kit Robinson reads today in Eugene (not June 3)
27. Patrick F. Durgin — Peter O'Leary on Robert Ducan's ORIGINS OF OLD SON
28. David Chirot — A Feminist Perspective/Its Suppression: Iran, Israel & the Conspicuous Absen...
29. Christophe Casamassima — 2nd Annual Furniture Press Poetry Prize: open submissions till Aug...
30. David Chirot — The Nation: Naomi Klein's Open Letter to Berkeley Students--BDS of Firms Bac...

4 APR 2010

31. Stephen Ellis — Re: A Feminist Perspective/Its Suppression: Iran, Israel & the Conspicuous ...
32. Ruth Lepson — Re: WILLA's Website Has Launched!
33. Jonathan Penton — Print Submissions and the AWP Reading
34. Del Ray Cross — SHAMPOO 37
35. mIEKAL aND — Maria Damon | mIEKAL aND reading in Madison on Thursday April 8

5 APR 2010

36. Jesse Glass — Just to Claify--Mark DuCharme Will Be Reading With Us at the Ahadada/Unlikely...
37. steve dalachinsky — Reading
38. Jeffrey Side — 'Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes'
39. Nicholas Piombino — New from Green Integer--Contradicta by Nick Piombino, iillustrated by T...
40. Michelle Taransky — 3/8 reading & book party for Charles Bernstein: ALL THE WHISKEY IN HEAV...
41. amy king — + New Coldfront Interview
42. amy king — White Swallow Reading Series! -- McClure, Guez, Kronovet, and King
43. Laura Hinton — Re: WILLA's Website Has Launched!
44. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ — Announcing The Annual Chapbook Festival, May 3 and 4 in NYC
45. William Slaughter — Notice: Mudlark

6 APR 2010

46. Noah Eli Gordon — Counterpath Press & Letter Machine Editions AWP reading
47. Obododimma Oha — A Plato of Crayfish
48. Jeffrey Side — "Century XX after Four Quartets" by Adam Fieled at The Argotist Online
49. Tim Peterson — Tendencies 4/9: Bellamy, Killian, and Myles
50. Troy Camplin — Re: NYT Book Review: Next Big Thing in English: uSING m.r.i.'S & Evolution t...
51. Michael Heller — POETRY READING, Saturday April 10th at 2 PM
52. Murat Nemet-Nejat — John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
53. Eleni Stecopoulos — Closing Event for Belladonna's Year of New Releases
54. Jennifer Karmin — April 10: Cracked Slab Books, U of Tulsa & Midwest Friends in Denver
55. sandra de 1913 — 1913's AWP news that stays news...
56. William Allegrezza — Series A Reading in Chicago Wednesday
57. Jerome Rothenberg — on the road -- again

7 APR 2010

58. Maria Damon — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
59. Bruce McPherson — After 16 years, a new fiction collection by Robert Kelly
60. Gerald Schwartz — 25 Questions: # 5
61. Gerald Schwartz — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
62. Paul Siegell — “Who’s Got My Extra?” @ I Thought I Was New Here
63. K. R. Waldrop — 2 new Burning Deck books
64. skyplums — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

8 APR 2010

65. Alan Sondheim — Re: 25 Questions: # 5
66. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
67. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: 25 Questions: # 5
68. Pam Brown — Wanted - Reviewers for two Australian poetry books for Jacket Magazine
69. J.P. Craig — Re: 25 Questions: # 5
70. Rob McLennan — Marcus McCann on Nicholas Lea
71. CA Conrad — HERETICAL
72. skyplums — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
73. Adam Fieled — Pennsound Apps: Two Final Installments
74. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
75. Margaret Konkol — S M A L L P R E S S in the A R C H I V E Margaret Konkol
76. derek beaulieu — new from NO press: Eric Zboya's Algorithmic translation of UN COUP DE DES
77. Scott Hamilton — UK tabloid editor in shock poetry scandal

9 APR 2010

78. Pam Brown — Thanks once again - Jacket has reviewers for Aussie titles
79. Bob Heman — Lydia Cortes, Bob Heman & George Spencer will read next Thursday at Space on Wh...

80. Regina Pinto — This is visual poetry
81. Justin Katko — Glossator 2: on the poems of J.H. Prynne
82. Jules Boykoff — Buuck/Hardacker/Kemp in Portland, Oregon--Sat. 10 April
83. J.P. Craig — Re: UK tabloid editor in shock poetry scandal
84. cranesbill — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
85. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
86. Dan Wilcox — Third Thursday Poetry Night, April 15: Paul Pines
87. Dan Wilcox — Albany WordFest Update
88. Anny Ballardini — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
89. nieuwland jeroen — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

10 APR 2010

90. Pam Brown — Pam Brown's AUTHENTIC LOCAL published by soi 3 modern poets
91. Randolph Healy — New from Wild Honey Press: Into Thick Hair by Ian Davidson
92. Patrick F. Durgin — Laura Elrick & Rodrigo Toscano on performing Hannah Weiner
93. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
94. skyplums — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

11 APR 2010

95. Lewis Warsh — THE BEST THING FOR YOU WOULD BE ME
96. Rob McLennan — new(ish) on rob's clever blog
97. derek beaulieu — new from No press: The Rose Letters by Erin Moure
98. Catherine Daly — Sacramento, CA: Reading Tomorrow Night
99. David Chirot — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

12 APR 2010

100. Paul Nelson — Rae's Pulitzer
101. Nana Zabic — query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
102. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
103. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
104. Jennifer Karmin — April 18 @ the Iowa Writers' House

13 APR 2010

105. Sarah Rosenthal — Headlands Center for the Arts - Reading & Open House
106. Adam Fieled — "Nirvana and the Sense of Revolutions"
107. Jeffrey Side — Some poems in issue 2 of Cleaves
108. George Quasha — Franz Kamin (1941-2010)
109. Eric Elshtain — Beard of Bees Celebrates the Sonnet
110. Caleb Cluff — Re: Rae's Pulitzer
111. Ruth Lepson — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
112. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in mus...
113. amy king — OT: Reports on WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) AWP Event
114. Cecelia Belle — Re: Rae's Pulitzer
115. Ruth Lepson — Re: Franz Kamin (1941-2010)
116. Alan Sondheim — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
117. Patrick Lovelace — Re: Franz Kamin (1941-2010)

14 APR 2010

118. Larry O. Dean — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
119. steve dalachinsky — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music...
120. mIEKAL aND — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
121. David Chirot — Pulitzer for Hank Williams!!!
122. Gabriel Gudding — vladimir mayakovsky - april 14 1930
123. Iris Law — Lantern Review Submissions Deadline EXTENDED
124. Ann Stephenson — KOSTAS ANAGNOPOULOS /// READY SET READINGS at Whitespace
125. Ruth Lepson — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

126. Maria Damon — Re: Franz Kamin (1941-2010)
127. Cassandra Laity — Re: Rae's Pulitzer
128. J. Michael Mollohan — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in mus…
129. Patrick F. Durgin — Aldon Nielsen on Lorenzo Thomas' "Two One-Act Plays"
130. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music…

15 APR 2010

131. D.Buuck — query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
132. Harold Carr — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
133. sheila black — Re: Rae's Pulitzer
134. Jonathan Skinner — SARDINE SONGS
135. Peter ciccariello — Re: Rae's Pulitzer
136. Rob McLennan — 12 or 20 (small press) questions (third series):
137. John Cunningham — Re: Rae's Pulitzer
138. Maria Damon — Re: Rae's Pulitzer
139. nieuwland jeroen — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
140. Jennifer Karmin — Aaaaaaaaaaalice & Flim Forum Press
141. Jason Quackenbush — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music…
142. Joel Chace — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
143. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
144. Cara Benson — (made): Mon April 19 @ Troy Arts
145. William James Austin — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in mu…

16 APR 2010

146. Alan Sondheim — My sound files are in a new archive - check it out! (please announce)
147. steve dalachinsky — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music…
148. Nicholas Karavatos — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in musi…
149. lora — query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
150. Jeffrey Side — 'Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes' is now available at Amazon
151. Rob McLennan — vote for the 2010
152. Nicholas Karavatos — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in musi…
153. mIEKAL aND — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
154. Edward Foster — New Boooooks
155. Bonnie MacAllister — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in musi…
156. Ann Bogle — Art is theft
157. Margaret Carson — Ann Lauterbach and Leonard Schwartz Reading -- in English and Spanish
158. derek beaulieu — new from talonbooks: HOW TO WRITE by derek beaulieu

17 APR 2010

159. Philip Meersman — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
160. richard owens — Olson Conference Videos!
161. Ed Friedman — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
162. Julie Strand — Woodland Pattern Book Center is looking to hire a full-time Education Coordi…
163. Rob McLennan — the globe & mail book blog
164. Douglas Manson — Contact info Field and Osman
165. Francis Raven — Raven's Occasional Spice Club

166. Poetics List — Poetics List Welcome Message
167. Nate Pritts — H_NGM_N Open Reading Period
168. George Bowering — Re: Art is theft
169. Margaret Konkol — S M A L L P R E S S in the A R C H I V E Douglas Basford
170. Chris Chapman — Re: Art is theft
171. Philip Meersman — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
172. Maria Damon — Re: Art is theft
173. Matt Henriksen — Announcing Cannibal 5 and Allyssa Wolf's Sister
174. Chris Stroffolino — 45 RPM Books...
175. Pam Brown — Review a poetry book for Jacket magazine?

18 APR 2010

176. steve dalachinsky — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music...
177. steve dalachinsky — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music...
178. Camille Martin — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
179. Dana Teen Lomax — Small Press Traffic Proudly Presents Kindergarde
180. Camille Martin — new at Rogue Embryo

19 APR 2010

181. Rachel Loden — this Friday: Joron, Loden, Giscombe at the de Young in SF
182. cris cheek — post_moot. Springtime in Ohio.
183. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Art is theft
184. mIEKAL aND — Re: Art is theft
185. Deborah Poe — Elements: Review & Potential Reviewers
186. Gregg Murray — Re: Art is theft
187. John Cunningham — Re: Art is theft
188. Stephen Vincent — After Spicer - A Reading!
189. Douglas Manson — Re: Art is theft
190. Matthew Landis — Re: Art is theft
191. Ann Bogle — Re: Art is theft
192. Skip Fox — Re: Art is theft
193. J.P. Craig — Re: Art is theft
194. gabriel siegel — Re: Art is theft
195. George Bowering — Re: Art is theft
196. George Bowering — Re: this Friday: Joron, Loden, Giscombe at the de Young in SF
197. Halvard Johnson — Re: Art is theft
198. amy king — Today -- Camille Dungy on NPR
199. Edmund Hardy — Delay-Line Memory: I.S. Spring 2010
200. Sheila Murphy — THIS IS VISUAL POETRY - SHEILA E. MURPHY (see link)
201. Eleni Stecopoulos — Poetics of Healing APRIL 29-MAY 1, SF & Berkeley
202. Caleb Cluff — Re: Art is theft
203. George Bowering — Re: Rae's Pulitzer
204. Jennifer Karmin — 4/24: LUNGFULL! release party in NYC
205. derek beaulieu — new from NO press: Vanessa Place's THE ALLEGORY AND THE ARCHIVE
206. Al Filreis — new at PennSound: Wallace Stevens

20 APR 2010

207. Insert Press — Subscribe to Insert Press!
208. Nana Zabic — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
209. Rob McLennan — above/ground press: out-of-print (sale!);
210. amy king — An Armantrout Admission ...
211. Aryanil Mukherjee — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music...
212. teersteeg — Re: Art is theft

213. Jacquilyn Weeks — Re: Art is theft
214. Christophe Casamassima — Re: Art is theft
215. Chris Chapman — Re: Art is theft
216. Jason Quackenbush — Re: Art is theft
217. Halvard Johnson — Re: Art is theft
218. Thomas savage — Re: Art is theft
219. Ron Henry — Poetry Reading (Ithaca, NY, 4/25, 3 pm) - Emily Rosko and Anthony Reed at the H…
220. Poetry Project — Poetry Project Spring Fundraiser
221. Camille Martin — sonnet songs on youtube
222. CA Conrad — BALTIMORE

21 APR 2010

223. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City presents Lana Turner and Drew Gardner
224. Vernon Frazer — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
225. Allan Revich — Re: Art is theft
226. Susan Webster Schultz — Tinfish Editor's Blog
227. amy king — My Poetry Genitals Hurt
228. Paul Siegell — “wash Uffizi drive me to Firenze”
229. Camille Martin — Re: sonnet songs on youtube
230. Caleb Cluff — Re: Art is theft
231. Pam Brown — thanks reviewers from Jacket
232. Caleb Cluff — Re: Art is theft
233. Debby Florence — Re: Art is theft
234. Bill Dunlap — Artaud Art

22 APR 2010

235. Aaron Winslow — Rethinking Poetics Conference
236. Mary Jo Malo — Re: Art is theft
237. Al Filreis — PoemTalk #31: on Grenier's Sentences
238. Mary Jo Malo — Re: Art is theft
239. amy king — We Are Champion
240. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
241. amy king — Vote for Sina Queyras
242. Peter ciccariello — 2010 Poet Laureate of the Blogosphere
243. Jennifer Karmin — 4/25: Aaaaaaaaaaalice in NYC

23 APR 2010

244. Sam Ladkin — Clark Coolidge, Act of Providence
245. Justin Katko — CRS 4: Redell Olsen and Frances Kruk
246. steve dalachinsky — Re: Art is theft
247. Jake Marmer — Samuel Menashe & Stanley Moss Reading in NYC
248. amy king — Hot Friday the Next - Sandy Florian, Lara Glenum, Lesley Jenike, Saeed Jones, Me…
249. Nana Zabic — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

24 APR 2010

250. David Chirot — Re: Art is theft
251. steve dalachinsky — Re: Samuel Menashe & Stanley Moss Reading in NYC
252. steve dalachinsky — Re: Artaud Art
253. Freind, William Joseph — Alice Notley in South Jersey
254. Jonathan Penton — one week left to submit to the Unlikely Stories print edition!

25 APR 2010

255. Mark Johnson — Re: Artaud Art
256. steve dalachinsky — new chapbbooks by steve dalachinsky
257. amy king — The Most Important Book Every Man Should Read
258. Ruth Lepson — Re: The Most Important Book Every Man Should Read

259. patrick dunagan — Re: Clark Coolidge, Act of Providence
260. Halvard Johnson — Re: Art is theft
261. David Chirot — Catalogue of The First Asemic Exhibitionin Russia is available

26 APR 2010

262. Mark Weiss — event
263. Rob McLennan — rob on the chelsea hotel
264. Stephen Baraban — Re: Vote for Sina Queyras
265. Jeffrey Side — Interview at The Argotist Online with Brian Clements on prose poetry
266. Steve Halle — Davis Schneiderman @ Seven Corners
267. Mark Weiss — Hello, I must be going
268. Caroline Crumpacker — May 21 Great Small Works Parties

27 APR 2010

269. George Quasha — Gary Hill/George Quasha/Charles Stein Tue 6:30 PM Electronic Arts Intermix ...
270. Jeffrey Side — Review of 'Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes'
271. Alan Sondheim — AMA Trio and Secret Orchestra at the Jazz Lounge, Tuesday May 4th
272. Jack Kimball — Faux | Other
273. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ — NEXT WEEK: Annual Chapbook Festival on Monday & Tuesday!
274. Catherine Daly — Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
275. Joel Weishaus — Poetica Review
276. Poetry Project — Special events at The Poetry Project
277. Annie Guthrie — UA Poetry Center -please post
278. Catherine Daly — Fwd: [NetBehaviour] Iowa Review on the Web

28 APR 2010

279. steve dalachinsky — Re: new chapbbooks and recent books by steve dalachinsky most easily go...
280. Ann Bogle — T. S. Eliot quotation
281. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ — Now available: Lost & Found: The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative chapbooks!
282. amy king — Vote Sina -- she's almost there...
283. steve dalachinsky — anne waldman reads

29 APR 2010

284. Tenney Nathanson — Poet for a Day on PennSound
285. George Quasha — C Bernstein/ Susan Bee/ G Quasha et al. in RAUCOUS - talks/performances rel...
286. steve dalachinsky — new chapbook by yuko otomo other books by her upon request
287. steve dalachinsky — correction waldman reading date and time
288. Nate Pritts — Lord Dragonfly & submissions
289. amy king — One more time... [plus major linkage]
290. amy king — Re: One more time... [plus major linkage] - Whoops!
291. David-Baptiste Chirot — Patti Smith on Democracy Now today
292. Rob McLennan — lainna el jabi on christine stewart
293. Chad Sweeney — Issue 7 PWR Launch at Poetry Center
294. amy king — Dear Patrons of the Arts -- In less than two hours, plus...
295. amy king — OT: Voting called quits!
296. amy king — Thank you, SPD.

30 APR 2010

297. Mark Young — Otoliths #17 is now live
298. amy king — TONIGHT - Friday, April 30th @ 7 p.m. Sandy Florian, Lara Glenum, Lesley Jenike,...
299. amy king — POET-EDITOR issue up at Otoliths...and Poetry Foundation!
300. Rob McLennan — globe & mail books blog; poetry month,
301. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ — MON & TUES: Chapbook Festival! Marathon Reading Details!

302. Kimmelman, Burt — William Bronk - Charles Olson Correspondence (etc.) in Otoliths 17
303. Jennifer Karmin — May 7-8: Cain, Karmin & Shaw in Providence/Cambridge

1. Jesse Glass

Tom Clark, Annie Finch, Jack Foley--New E-chaps from Ahadada

Tue 30 Mar 2010

Announcing 3 New Free Ahadada E-chapbooks: Starlight and Shadow by Tom Clark; My Baby Fell Apart by Annie Finch and A Disordered City by Jack Foley--All available along with 31 other e-titles and "book-books" that you should buy at www.ahadadabooks.com Enjoy! Jess

↑ Index

2. twshaner

Kit Robinson reads in Eugene 6/3

Tue 30 Mar 2010

A New Poetry @ DIVA presents

Kit Robinson

Jen Tynes

Ce Rosenow

Â

Saturday, April 3, 7:30 PM

DIVA (Downtown Initiative for the Visual Arts)

110 W. Broadway

Eugene , Oregon

[redacted]

www.divacenter.org

Â

↑ Index

3. Nate Pritts

H_NGM_N _X_

Wed 31 Mar 2010

H_NGM_N _X_ is now live & online - not quite a ten-year anniversary but a blow-out nonetheless.

Check us out at:

http://www.h-ngm-n.com/cur_ent-i_sue

& while you're there, remember that we're looking at full-length poetry manuscripts until the end of April:

http://www.h-ngm-n.com/h_ngm_n-b__ks/h_ngm_n-poets.html

blue spark,
nate.

_____
:: Dr. Nate Pritts

:: http://www.natepritts.com

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID27925::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:032010_2

↑ Index

4. Dan Glass
With + Stand 4: The Lisa Robertson Issue PDF!
Wed 31 Mar 2010

Dear Friends,,,

For the first time in our history, With + Stand is making available a pdf version of the journal.

A link to the issue and pictures from the reading/release party at Urban Ore Eco Park in Berkeley are here:

http://withplusstand.blogspot.com/2010/03/lisa-robertson-issue-reading-release.html

There are a limited number of physical copies of the journal still available, for free, as always. Please email if you're interested.

Dan

↑ Index

5. Amanda Earl
National Poetry Month celebration begins April 1
Wed 31 Mar 2010

happy national poetry month from AngelHousePress.

please visit www.nationalpoetrymonth.ca every day
in April for 30 days of fish, klingon, asemic
writing, Gertrude, Alice, comedy, intrigue, lust,

love, flâneurs, frostbites, visual poetry,water, hearts, kidneys, lungs, ghosts, gusts, ghouls and gulls from Budapest, Belgium, England, France, the USA and Canada.

thanks to the contributors and those who submitted poems for making this celebration possible. this is our second annual celebration of the nation of poetry. thanks to the readers
for visiting the site and celebrating with us.

best,
Amanda

Amanda Earl
AngelHousePress
www.angelhousepress.com
the angel is in the house

↑ Index

6. Jennifer Karmin

April 8: Samples / a reading from 9 poets in Denver

Wed 31 Mar 2010

Samples:
a reading from 9 poets

Thursday, April 8th
7pm

at PLUS Gallery
2501 Larimer Street
Denver, Colorado
http://www.plusgallery.com admittance is free

James Belflower
Caroline Crumpacker
Susanne Dyckman
Jim Elledge
Jane Gregory
Jennifer Karmin
Susan Manchester
Jaime Robles
Sarah Suzor

Books will be available from presses:

EtherDome Chapbooks
http://etherdomepoetry.org

Instance Press
http://www.instancepress.com

Flim Forum Press
http://www.flimforum.blogspot.com

Shearsman Books
http://www.shearsman.com

The Song Cave
http://www.the-song-cave.com

Woodland Editions
http://www.fivefingersreview.org/woodland_editions.htm

For more information email
[redacted]

↑ Index

7. Alan Sondheim

Laurie Anderson, someone else, Alan Sondheim, violin, mandolin, etc.

Thu 1 Apr 2010

Laurie Anderson, someone else, Alan Sondheim, violin, mandolin, etc.

Again, from what passes for archives.

http://www.alansondheim.org/lauriealan0.mp3

This is from 1975? I lose track of dates. This was recorded in Laurie's loft; someone else is heard on occasion but who? We played together a few times. Laurie's early performances were the most amazing I've ever seen. This cassette is 35 years old and mint. I don't remember playing mandolin this well. Enjoy.

↑ Index

8. amy king

GRL - 2nd Year Anniversary

Thu 1 Apr 2010

-- http://gentlyread.wordpress.com/2010/04/01
Nathan Logan on Slaves:

-- http://gentlyread.wordpress.com/2010/04/01/when-will-we-stop-swimming-nathan-logan-on-amy-kings-slaves-to-do-these-things/

Gently Read LiteratureApril 2010 Issue 25 2nd Year Anniversary www.gentlyread.wordpress.com Reviews of Contemporary Poetry and Literary Fiction In the Beginning There Was Mathias Svalina: Dennis Etzel Jr. on Mathias Svalina's Destruction Myth http://wp.me/pcuKI-wx You've Been Warned: Jen Michalski on American Soma by Savannah Schroll Guz http://wp.me/pcuKI-ww Lost Inside Maryam: Marcia Lynx Qualey on Mansoura Ez Eldin's Maryam's Maze http://wp.me/pcuKI-wJ My Turn to Praise: Rick Marlatt on Jack Henry's With the Patience of Monuments http://wp.me/pcuKI-wK Slip Back Into Living: Glenda Burgess on JW Marshall's Meaning A Cloud http://wp.me/pcuKI-wO The Dialogue of Origin and Ear: Zach Savich on Joshua Harmon's Scape http://wp.me/pcuKI-wN These Are No Temporary Stars: David James on Keith Taylor's If the World Becomes So Bright http://wp.me/pcuKI-wL Without That Bottle of Tequila: James Tolan on Kim Addonizio's Lucifer at the Starlite http://wp.me/pcuKI-wP When Will We Stop Swimming?: Nathan Logan on Amy King's Slaves To Do These Things http://wp.me/pcuKI-wM Breaking the Law: Jim Ruland on Patrick Somerville's The Cradle http://wp.me/pcuKI-wv Aprilâ€™s Featured Artist: Alexis Duque, http://www.praxis-art.com/eng/ -- HTML GIANT -- You might like me too: http://htmlgiant.com/author-spotlight/i-like-amy-king-a-lot/

↑ Index

9. Bonnie MacAllister

SWAN Day Reading 4/1 7 p.m. Philadelphia

Thu 1 Apr 2010

Thursday, April 1, 7:00 pm

SWAN (Support Women Artists Now) Day Reading Featuring:
Lora Bloom, Jane Cassady, Bonnie MacAllister, and Dr. Niama Leslie Williams.

SWAN Day/Support Women Artists Now Day is a new international holiday that celebrates women artists. It is an annual event taking place on the last Saturday of March (Women’s History Month) and the surrounding weeks. Celebrate at Big Blue Marble Bookstore with a curated line-up of readings followed by a women's open reading and art share.

Event is sponsored by Women's Caucus for Art Philadelphia, Women Artist Network, and Breaking Down Barriers Enterprises

Location:
Big Blue Marble Bookstore

Street:
551 Carpenter Lane
Philadelphia, PA
http://www.*bigbluemarble*books.com
--
http://bonnie-macallister.blogspot.com/
http://tinyurl.com/bonnie-macallister

↑ Index

10. Mathias Svalina
Octopus Books Open Reading Period Begins Today
Thu 1 Apr 2010

Octopus Books will hold an open reading period for full-length poetry manuscripts this month.
Manuscripts must be submitted between April Fools day and April 30, 2010.

More details here: http://www.octopusbooks.net/submit.html

↑ Index

11. Daniel Remein, Editor
Perfectbound Whiskey & Fox!
Thu 1 Apr 2010

Cheers all:

Whiskey & Fox V. 4 No. 1, previously announced below for free PDF download, is now also available for purchase on the cheap as a perfect bound book, is you fancy a fancier format. The cover features one heck of a respectable looking fox nosing around an archaeologist's campsite in Alaska. No kidding.

Everyone check it out at http://whiskeyandfox.org

Vol 4. No. 1, 'doing politics with animals,' includes:

A Preface from the editors, and work (in order of appearance) from Robin Clarke, Jeff T. Johnson, Ross Gay, Gary Lehmann, Claire Donato, Rebecca Mertz, Nicola Masciandaro, Eileen A. Joy, Chris Miller, and Afterwords from Karl Steel.

contact at editors [at] whiskeyandfox [dot] org.

Very Best

the Editors

↑ Index

12. William Allegrezza
New E-Book/POD
Thu 1 Apr 2010

Check out David Huntsperger's new e-book/POD Postindustrial Folktales on Moria. http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html

Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

13. CA Conrad
Oppen URCHIN 4/11/10
Thu 1 Apr 2010

Oppen URCHIN 4/11/10

GEORGE OPPEN
all details here: http://UrchinPoetry.blogspot.com
SEE YOU THERE, above the image of the engine

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

14. amy king
WILLA's Website Has Launched!
Fri 2 Apr 2010

WILLA is live -- please check out our features (including my work on "The Count"), tell your friends, forward widely, and stay tuned!

Best,

Amy
http://willaweb.org/

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: Cate Marvin Dear Friends, You may or may not recall that eight months ago I sent out an email about the need for an organization for women writers of literature. The response was a bit overwhelming. As, it soon became clear, is the need. Since that time, my Co-Director Erin Belieu and I have pulled together a simply amazing group of women writers to help us pull off the creation of our new organization: WILLA (Women in Letters & Literary Arts). I canâ€™t begin to tell you all of time and thought that has gone into this! It was truly, apologies for the clichÃ©, a labor of love. This is to say: we launched our website today. Please check WILLA out at: http://willaweb.org With happiness, Cate -- Cate Marvin, Associate Professor

Department of English
College of Staten Island, CUNY Co-Director, WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) www.willaweb.org

↑ Index

15. St. Thomasino

a noun sing the Alan Halsey interview at e·ratio

Fri 2 Apr 2010

---

e·

e·ratio is celebrating poetry with the Alan Halsey interview:

http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com/editor_Alan_Halsey.html

Alan Halsey is the author of Marginalien and Lives of the Poets (both Five Seasons Press), Not Everything Remotely (Selected Poems 1978-2004) (Salt) and Term as in Aftermath (Ahadada).

e·ratio 13 features poetry by Laynie Browne, Jill Jones, Jane Adam, Jeff Encke, Joseph F. Keppler, Mark Cunningham, Jadon Rempel, Keith Higginbotham, Anne Fitzgerald, and Halvard Johnson, and with e·ratio editions e·chaps by Travis Macdonald and Carey Scott Wilkerson

http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com/issue13.html

e·ratio is reading for issue 14, the fall 2010 issue.

http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com e·ratio is edited for real by Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino

e·

↑ Index

16. Dan Glass

Re: WILLA's Website Has Launched!

Fri 2 Apr 2010

Congratulations and thank yous to everyone involved—it's an important resource, an important set of questions, and it looks great.

Dan

On Fri, Apr 2, 2010 at 4:12 AM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> WILLA is live -- please check out our features (including my work on "The Count"), tell your friends, forward widely, and stay tuned!
>
> Best,
>
> Amy
> http://willaweb.org/
>
> ----- Forwarded Message ----
> From: Cate Marvin Dear Friends, You may or may not recall that eight months ago I sent out an email about the need for an organization for women writers of literature. The response was a bit overwhelming. As, it soon became clear, is the need. Since that time, my Co-Director Erin Belieu and I have pulled together a simply amazing group of women writers to help us pull off the creation of our new organization: WILLA (Women in Letters & Literary Arts). I can't begin to tell you all of time and thought that has gone into this! It was truly, apologies for the cliché, a labor of love. This is to say: we launched our website today. Please check WILLA out at: http://willaweb.org With happiness, Cate --
> Cate Marvin, Associate Professor
> Department of English
> College of Staten Island, CUNY Co-Director, WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) www.willaweb.org

↑ Index

17. Rob McLennan

[[redacted]: NationalPoetryMonth.ca is live]

Fri 2 Apr 2010

happy national poetry month from AngelHousePress.

please visit www.nationalpoetrymonth.ca every day
in April for 30 days of fish, klingon, asemic
writing, Gertrude, Alice, comedy, intrigue, lust, love, flâneurs, frostbite, visual poetry, water,
hearts, kidneys, lungs, ghosts, gusts, ghouls and
gulls from Budapest, Belgium, England, France, the USA and Canada.

thanks to the contributors and those who
submitted poems for making this celebration
possible. this is our second annual celebration

of the nation of poetry. thanks to the readers
for visiting the site and celebrating with us.

best,
Amanda

Amanda Earl
AngelHousePress
www.angelhousepress.com
the angel is in the house

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

18. Dan Wilcox
Re: National Poetry Month celebration begins April 1
Fri 2 Apr 2010

In Albany, every day is Poetry Month!

↑ Index

19. Jeffrey Side
Bruce Andrews interview at The Argotist Online
Fri 2 Apr 2010

Bruce Andrews interview at The Argotist Online:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Andrews%20interview.htm

Excerpt:

"Since Iâ€™m interested in the experience of the reader, I havenâ€™t been interested in chance. Chance might seem to open the possibilities for the reader to the widest level, but often it doesnâ€™t get the reader anywhere, itâ€™s so open that nothing counts, nothing has any significance, none of the connections are designed to have any effect on the reader, and therefore it often seems like it ignores the reader, just as much as any type of closed textual work. So in a weird way chance and the old notion of intentionality end up having the same relationship to the reader, in both cases the reader is ignored. Either you donâ€™t care what the reader makes of something because thereâ€™s not much to make of it, or you ignore the reader because youâ€™ve already figured out what everything means, maybe theyâ€™ll get it maybe they wonâ€™t, but you donâ€™t care either way because your job is to create this edifice, this autotelic text, as if it means by itself and doesnâ€™t require the reader to get on board, and if the reader does have some interest in getting on board then they have to pay tuition to take the class to be told what things actually meant as if the lecturer is ventriloquizing the author. You know, if you read old lit crit, itâ€™s often outrageous, the presumptiveness of it. I mean, â€œthis means this, and I know because this is what the author meant.â€ I mean, who the fuck knows what the author meant? Thatâ€™s always irritating to me, because it closes things down. But in a weird way, totally randomizing product does too."

↑ Index

20. Dan Glass

Interview with Bruce Andrews online

Fri 2 Apr 2010

Dear folks,,,

An interview I did with the fascinating poet Bruce Andrews during his recent left coast trip is now online @:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Andrews%20interview.htm

And just a reminder, you can find the latest issue of With + Stand @:

http://withplusstand.blogspot.com/2010/03/lisa-robertson-issue-reading-release.html

All bests,,,

Dan

↑ Index

21. David-Baptiste Chirot

NYT Book Review: Next Big Thing in English: uSING m.r.i.'S & Evolution to Explore Reading of Fiction

Fri 2 Apr 2010

Book News

Next Big Thing in English: Knowing They Know That You Know

By PATRICIA COHEN

Some scholars are turning to M.R.I.'s and evolutionary theory to explore how and why people read fiction.http://www.nytimes.com/2010/04/01/books/01lit.html?nl=books&emc=booksupdateemb5

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

22. Jennifer Karmin

April 7: Dusie Pussipo Stonecoast Femiganza in Denver

Fri 2 Apr 2010

Dusie Pussipo Stonecoast Femiganza
Wednesday, April 7th
7-10pm

at Packing House Center for the Arts http://www.controlgroupproductions.org 835 E. 50th Avenue
Denver, Colorado

FREE!
Everyone welcome!

featuring:
Bronwen Tate
Ann Bogle
Jennifer Karmin
Marthe Reed
Annie Finch
Amy King
Cara Benson
Mackenzie Carignan
Danielle Pafunda
Deborah Poe
Ana Bozicevic
Teresa Carmody
Kate Durbin
Megan Volpert
Elizabeth Hildreth
Anna Aguilar-Amat
Sarah Rosenthal
Krystal Languell
K. Lorraine Graham
Carmen Gimenez Smith
Robin Reagler
Cheryl Pallant
Shanna Compton

Lara Glenum
Deb Marquart
Elizabeth Searle
Mel Nichols
Jesse Glass
j/j hastain

Dusie
http://dusie.org

Pussipo
http://delirioushem.blogspot.com

Stonecoast MFA at U of SMaine
http://www.usm.maine.edu/stonecoastmfa

↑ Index

23. jared schickling
Mayday #2
Fri 2 Apr 2010

Dear All,

Pleased to announce the second issue of Mayday Magazine:

http://www.maydaymagazine.com/

All the best --

Jared

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

24. derek beaulieu
new from NO press: Kyle Schlesinger's DARK GLASSES
Fri 2 Apr 2010

NO press is pleased to announce the publication of

Kyle Schlesinger's DARK GLASSES

12 pages, sewn binding.
published in an edition of 40 copies (20 of which are for sale)
$3 each.

for more information, or to order copies, please email:

derek beaulieu
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

25. George Quasha

Preverbs posting on Rothenberg blog Poems & Poetics

Sat 3 Apr 2010

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,

now surfacing in an acceptable state.

I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

GQ

George Quasha
www.quasha.com
www.baumgartnergallery.net
www.stationhill.org

↑ Index

26. twshaner

Correction: Kit Robinson reads today in Eugene (not June 3)

Sat 3 Apr 2010

I had posted a correction to the 6/3 date earlier -- that Kit was reading on April 3 rather than June 3 -- but the post below went out anyway.

In any case, I'll take this opportunity to make a plug for A New Poetry @ DIVA:

If anyone's passing through the region and would like to give a reading, please let me know. I'm trying to coordinate readings with the Spare Room series up in Portland and Kasey Mohammad's reading series down in Ashland, Oregon. And we try to adhere to a first Saturday of each month schedule, though that's flexible. In fact, our next reading is on Monday, May 17 and includes the poets Chris Nealon and Jenne Knight.

My email address is [redacted]

--Tim Shaner

Date: Â Â Tue, 30 Mar 2010 23:43:57 +0000
From: Â Â [redacted]
Subject: Kit Robinson reads in Eugene 6/3

A New Poetry @ DIVA presents=20

Kit Robinson=20

Jen Tynes=20

Ce Rosenow=20

=C2=A0=20

Saturday, April 3, 7:30 PM=20

DIVA (Downtown Initiative for the Visual Arts)=20

110 W. Broadway=20

Eugene , Oregon=20

[redacted]=20

www.divacenter.org=20

↑ Index

27. Patrick F. Durgin

Peter O'Leary on Robert Ducan's ORIGINS OF OLD SON

Sat 3 Apr 2010

Peter O'Leary is the latest guest blogger at www.kenningeditions.com, with a fresh essay on Robert Duncan's recently exhumed poets theater piece, ORIGINS OF OLD SON. Have a look:

http://www.kenningeditions.com/?p=209

And don't miss the launch event for THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER: 1945-1985, edited by Kevin Killian and David Brazil, this coming Wednesday evening at the Poetry Project, St. Mark's Church, NYC. Details at www.poetryproject.org Future guest bloggers will include Aldon Nielsen (on Lorenzo Thomas) and the duo of Laura Elrick and Rodrigo Toscano (on performing Hannah Weiner).

↑ Index

28. David Chirot

A Feminist Perspective/Its Suppression: Iran, Israel & the Conspicuous Absence of Nuclear Debate

Sat 3 Apr 2010

---

from Jewish Voice for Peace:

In an extensive, research-based 2009 position paper titled: On Nuclear Weapons: A Feminist Perspective, Ednay Gorney and Hedva Eyal of the Isha L'Isha Haifa Feminist Center wrote, "the Israeli public remains excluded from the [nuclear] debate. The public does not ask questions, does not demand that the state takes responsibility, nor does it demand to be involved in decision making; it accepts and is content with the information or, more accurately, with the lack of information."

This passive indifference to the nuclear weaponry widely believed to be in the public's backyard is, in my view, a highly dangerous manifestation of Israel's longtime and entrenched militarization. As Gorney and Eyal have put it, "Decision-making in all areas related to security is characterized by secrecy and vagueness, excluding anyone who does not belong to the security elite. … The secret functions both on the outside as well as on the inside. Denying information under the guise of maintaining secrecy is one of the common ways through which elites maintain their status. … [While o]ne of the ways they can attain legitimacy for their control and actions is to continuously disseminate and instill fear – real and imaginary – among the citizens of Israel. This fear justifies and, in turn, foments military power and its use against any security threat, as defined by this elite group."

Meanwhile, Gorney and Eyal have noted, "We are flooded with information on the great threat Iran poses and on the necessity of military operations. The debate within the Israeli public discourse is almost devoid of the possibility of solution through diplomatic means."

Outlining the severely undemocratic suppression of any public nuclear debate in Israel, the position paper lists a line of researchers, journalists, politicians, activists and ex-security personnel who's critical voices have been stifled by the security establishment, using a broad range of tactics. This in addition to the constant dissemination of fear underpinning militarization in general and the unquestioning Israeli public acceptance of its governments' nuclear armament in particular. Thus, the risks of such armament to this public itself, as well as the entire area or even the globe, go unexamined and undebated for decades on end.

Resisting this reality and reaching for an actual, participatory democracy, Gorney and Eyal explain, "As feminists we wish to expose the connections between the policy of opacity, concealment and fear, and the current perception of security. We want to take responsibility for our lives and for actions carried out in our name."

In one of the rare public voices taking up these issues, the position paper concludes: "We demand the removal of opacity surrounding the issue of nuclear weapons in Israel; We demand a public debate and the development of an alternative policy that will enable us to live in peace in the Middle East; We demand nuclear disarmament; We demand that the State of Israel join the International Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons."

To read the full 22 page position paper, see:

http://www.isha.org.il/files/files/File/1325_reports/On_Nuclear_Weapons.pdf

---

Another such public voice, sounded now for many years, is that of nuclear historian and analyst, Avner Cohen, whose work is one of main sources repeatedly referred to by the Isha L'Isha position paper. Cohen is equally critical of successive Israeli governments' successful barring of nuclear debate and, in the recent op-ed forwarded in full below, offers a series of serious arguments against what he views as the irresponsible and extremely dangerous possibility that Israel might launch a military attack against Iran in an attempt to quash its nuclear capacity.

Cohen's op-ed, converging in part with some of the conclusions presented by the Isha L'Isha position paper, was published April 2nd in Haaretz.

Rela Mazali

---

http://www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/1160524.html

Fri., April 02, 2010

We look at Iran and see ourselves

By Avner Cohen

If Israel takes military action against Iran, it will be one of the biggest decisions in the history of the state. The risks involved will make it unprecedented.

There is no comparison between such a decision and the ones that established and implemented the so-called Begin doctrine: the decision by Menachem Begin's government to attack the Osirak reactor in Iraq in 1981 and the attack on the nuclear facility in Syria in 2007. In terms of both the complexity of the military operation and the uncertainty about the consequences and where they may lead, there is a qualitative difference between the legacy of the past and the challenge of the present.

The seriousness of the challenge requires as open and thorough a public discussion as possible. But unfortunately, such a discussion has been virtually nonexistent, even on a basic conceptual level. Instead of a public discussion there has been a belligerent press, which makes demagogic use of statements that intensify the message of the politics of fear. These include expressions such as "Iran is galloping toward a bomb" and a "second Holocaust" that Israel must prevent. Such discourse creates a feeling that if Iran is not attacked, and soon, we have no choice but to accept a nuclear Iran.

It's doubtful whether the people making those statements are capable of giving them a precise (technical and political) interpretation. It's doubtful whether they have a suitable answer to the question: When should Iran be considered a nuclear state? Where exactly is the red line? What is the precise significance of such a line and what makes it red?

One thing is clear: As long as Iran is a member of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, it will not be able to test a nuclear device or declare that it has one. Also, as long as Iran is subject to the treaty, it will not be a nuclear state according to the accepted definition of such a state.

It's true that under cover of the treaty Iran can get very close to the nuclear threshold and still claim - as it claims now - that it is not deviating from its legal obligations under the treaty. Iran as a threshold state can perhaps even position itself a few weeks away from a nuclear test. Such an Iran, despite supervision by the International Atomic Energy Agency, will of necessity be opaque; there will always remain a fear that it is working in secret, including making weapons in secret. But even in such a case, Iran would be considered a threshold state, not an actual nuclear state.

Even those who disparage the practical limitations of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (as Israelis tend to do) must recognize that it is almost impossible for Iran to be a nuclear state in the full sense without withdrawing from the treaty. And even if it is outside the treaty, it will take Iran years, many years, to make the transition from a threshold state to a mature nuclear state. Such a transition is not trivial; certainly it is not inevitable, even if we look at the experience of states that in the past were considered threshold states and were not bound by the treaty's restrictions.

For example, India, which carried out a nuclear test in 1998, is still making this transition slowly, and many experts say it should still not be considered a mature nuclear state. Even Pakistan, whose nuclear path was faster and more purposeful than India's, needed about a generation to become a nuclear state to all extents and purposes. In its nuclear behavior Iran is more like India than Pakistan.

It's ironic that an Iran under attack would probably become more determined and purposeful in its nuclear ambitions. After an attack, Iran would abandon the treaty in protest, declare its right to nuclear arms and almost certainly succeed in implementing it.

The public discussion in Israel about a nuclear Iran is simplistic, inadequate, confused and confusing. It reflects to some degree our own biases. We come from a culture of national security in which nuclear opacity has been exploited to the hilt to create a specific model of deterrence. The result is that when we look at Iran we see ourselves: how we would behave in a similar situation. But Iran is not Israel exactly, and the Israeli experience does not necessarily reflect Iran's behavior. On the contrary, it leads to systematic errors when making assessments.

The writer is the author of the book "Israel and the Bomb." His forthcoming book, "The Worst-Kept Secret," will be published in the United States in September.

.....

Jewish Peace News editors:
Joel Beinin
Racheli Gai
Rela Mazali
Sarah Anne Minkin
Judith Norman
Lincoln Z. Shlensky
Rebecca Vilkomerson
Alistair Welchman

Jewish Peace News archive and blog: http://jewishpeacenews.blogspot.com
----
Jewish Peace News sends its news clippings only to subscribers. To subscribe, unsubscribe, or manage your subscription, go to http://www.jewishpeacenews.net

↑ Index

29. Christophe Casamassima

2nd Annual Furniture Press Poetry Prize: open submissions till August 31

Sat 3 Apr 2010

2nd Annual Furniture Press Poetry Prize

Deadline: August 31, 2010

Judge: M. Magnus, author of Verb Sap (Narrow House, 2008), and the forthcoming Heraclitean Pride (Furniture Press, 2010).

Winner of the 2009 Furniture Press Poetry Prize: Emily Carr's Directions for Flying: Right Side Lower Arms Raise Arms Bend Knees Repeat on Left (36 Fits: A Young Wife's Almanac).

The 2nd annual Furniture Press Poetry Prize will be awarded to the writer that best exemplifies the poetics and particularities of Furniture Press' editors and judges.

One judge will be invited to determine a manuscript's "pressability" and will work with anonymous, unidentified texts. Only the editor of Furniture Press will know the true identity of the applicants and their work. Each text will be assigned a number and distributed to the judge.

After the first round of readings, the judge will assign a winner. The winner of the Prize will receive a publishing contract in which the winning manuscript will be published as a trade paperback. S/he will also receive 20 copies of his/her book. All applicants will receive a copy of the winning title.

1. Send 1 unpublished manuscript per entry. It must be between 50 and 80 pages of poetry and/or its derivatives. Include a cover letter with your name, address, eMail and short bio. Do not put your name or the title of your submission on the pages of the manuscript.

2. Send a $10 fee per manuscript submitted. 100% of the cash goes to the pressing, publishing and promotion of the winning books. Editors and judges do not get kickbacks. Please send checks or money orders only, made out to Furniture Press.

3. Send manuscripts to Furniture Press Poetry Prize c/o Towson Arts Collective, 406 York Road (lower level), Towson, MD 21204. The manuscripts may also be sent electronically to [redacted]. Please use the following format in your subject line: FPPP submission, [author name], [title]. Also, please let us know when the $10 fee was sent so we may match it with the submission.

We strongly encourage you to send us work – it's also a very good way to catch the attention of the editors who may want to publish your work in the future, despite whether or not you win the prize. Plus you get copies of the winning book (hopefully yours!) plus chapbooks and ephemera from our past catalogues.

↑ Index

30. David Chirot

The Nation: Naomi Klein's Open Letter to Berkeley Students--BDS of Firms Backing/Funding Israel

Sat 3 Apr 2010

Since the Berkeley Campus has long been one of the most activist in the USA, and its actions very often "read" as the symptoms of a much larger and steadily growing "malaise," thought to post this as"sings of things to come" in the backlash against what journals in the UK and France have openly called "The New McCarthyism" in the USA and on US campuses specifically. This phrase, "The New McCarthyism" refers to the ongoing suppression of open, public debates and discourses, reporting and research regarding the US policies connected with Israel, Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan and many other people, places, events lumped together under various slogans and catchwords, reporting and research. Since this suppression of Free Speech is done in the name of "Homeland Security, "The War on Terror," etc it essays to wrap censorship, silencing, "forcing one to speak" as a form of psychological terrorism in the America Flag. As was pointed out by Hermann Goering during his trial at Nuremberg, even the most educated, sophisticated, respected citizens will give up just about everything, including Freedom of Speech, when confronted with a Threat--real or not--to their personal Security and/or that of the Homeland. So it is that even the "most secure" academics,bureaucrats, artists, poets, will gladly "hand over," or "report on" any thing and anyone they regard as a potential "threat," and/or an "existential threat."

While Goering openly stated that even fabricated threats may be used to create the "atmosphere of fear, necessary for the "handing over of rights to Freedom of Speech," today in the USA such an admission is not accepted. Despite all the "faked" evidence of the last roughly nine years, one is supposed to unquestioningly believe any new "information" provided by the Israelis, as well as the Americans, In re some of the effects on American campuses, a number of Professors in the US have lost their jobs and had their published works and persons persistently attacked by pro-Israeli groups in the US, and, since January of 2009, have experienced an "open assault" conducted by the Israeli State's policy of "going after" any criticism of its policies shown on you tube, twitter, blogs, etc. Seven Palestinian students who had been awarded Fulbright fellowships to study at various American Universities were blocked from attending these institutions by refusal of visas to them by the Israeli State. (Eventually, under much pressure, one student was finally granted a visa.)

Currently over 600 Palestinian students with grants nd fellowships to study at foreign institutions are being refused visas to study aboard. This, coupled withe systematic bombing and destruction of schools for students of al ages, has severely curtailed the educational opportunities for Palestinians who want to become doctors, nurses, engineers, teachers so that their fellows may be prepared for peace time jobs, in which capacity they would be working for a future Palestinian State aimed at developing conditions which would NOT encourage and nurture terrorism and violence. People being busy studying and working with definite and promising, peaceful goals in mind are going to be far less interested in jeopardizing their country and country persons by irrational acts By torpedoing such education and jobs in Palestine and by banning Palestinians from American institutions, the Israeli State is directly affecting the Americans' opportunities to meet Palestinians in a peaceful and cooperative situation. By also attacking any speech, videos, professors, publications, presses from contributing positively to a discourse, a debate, whether critical or positive of the actions and policies of the Israeli State and its support groups aboard, the options of education about the actual aims and goals, the dreams and hopes of Palestinians and other peoples in the US, the option of their being shared openly with the American people, is being thwarted by a power not elected by the American people. This in itself poses a threat to future American openness to ideas and points of view both inside and outside the US, and makes the students of today as well as the citizenry, ever more ignorant of all but one side of the question, of al but one side of discourses and debates. Effectively, American Institutions are being asked to do the work of the Israeli State and its support groups, at the expense of al others' histories, cultures, economic situations, of their poetries, musics, political and philosophical thinking etc etc--

This "New McCarthyism" is one of the ongoing situations which the Berkeley events and Naomi Klein's letter to the Berkeley Students is hoping, in part to ameliorate. Such a "New McCarthyism" hurts everyone--Israelis, Palestinians and Americans. By fostering, emphasizing and forcibly creating an atmosphere of fear,distrust, hatred and paranoia, based on deliberate mis- and disinformation, all peoples and the hope for a Peaceful debate and discussion hopefully bringing about Peaceful generations who can trust and learn frm each other how to create a Peaceful outcome to the present situation does npot need to be destroyed by such tactics as are presently being employed.

Open Letter to Berkeley Students <http://salsa.wiredforchange.com/dia/track.jsp?v=2&c=Hietv8gIG9UljTDn3EauFupM9Hux2%2B%2FQ> NAOMI KLEIN | When it comes to acting to end Israeli war crimes, the international response has not suffered from too much haste but from far too little.

here are some (almost all) very recent links regarding the situation re Palestinians, Americans and Israelis and their various positions regarding the events discussed above and an older post is one dealing specifically with the seven denied--and one letter allowed--admission to the USA to study on Fulbright Fellowships A rapidly growing Non Violent Protest movement organized by Jewish, Palestinian and Christian groups has beenstaging ever more proetests in Isarel and inside the Occupied Territories including within Gaza. The Israeli State has begun an open policy of suppression of any Peace movements within Israel, whether those organized by former IDF soldiers or religious and Human Rights activists, including students. The major policy now of protest groups both within and outside Israel world wide including in/at the borders with Palestine, is that of Non-Violence. There is a growing in terst in the study of Gandhi and his effective methods in India, and those of Reverend Doctor martin Luther King, Jr in the USA. Non-Violence may, once again, prove to be the most effective approach to Violence, Occupation, illegal Sieges, the building of Apartheid and Border Walls in Israel and world wide--including those the USA has built and is building in Ira and Afghanistan as well as along the USA-Mexican Border, which is being built by a combined US-Isreali group of engineers, "contractors" and corporations.

1. Palestinian student: Israel Border Police beat me for hours ...<http://www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/1159294.html> Mar 28, 2010 ... Palestinian student: Israel Border Police beat me for hours -News ... Russian Compound police station, where he was * denied* medical treatment. ... 20:32 Barak: U.S. ties are 'pillar and cornerstone' of Israel's security ... www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/1159294.html - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:L51gfe9-v0IJ:www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/1159294.html+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=1&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail> 2. The Palestine Chronicle: A Leading Online Newspaper on Palestine * ...* <http://palestinechronicle.com/> Mar 29, 2010 ... Online news magazine and journal about Palestine, * Israel*, the Arab world, and the Middle East. ... Keep Us On The Job. Noam Chomsky: "The Palestine Chronicle has been ... Passover is the * seven*-day holiday of the Feast of Unleavened Bread ... but are *denied * their basic human right of returning home. ... *palestine*chronicle.com/ - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:GZNHTYSl6ZwJ:palestinechronicle.com/+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=2&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail> 3. Palestinian Center for Human Rights<http://www.google.com/url?sa=t&source=web&ct=res&cd=3&ved=0CAwQFjAC&url=http%3A%2F

%2Fwww.pchrgaza.org%2Ffiles%2Fcampaigns%2Fenglish%2Fgaza_closure %2FNarratives_14.html&ei=cqq3S5D-CoT7lwfro8mXCg&usg=AFQjCNFV7ZG1ThKr09TZbrqVRVQhVlJBqA&sig2=_Tg s0zpFEUiGk5_m0ziDRA> Hadeel is one of seven Gaza students who, on 29 May, all received letters from ... In the face of mounting criticism from both within the US and Israel, ... But hundreds of other *Palestinian students*remain stranded inside the ... and they are being denied their rights to pursue their education, and their futures. ...
www.pchrgaza.org/files/campaigns/.../Narratives_14.html - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?
q=cache:anpCJm_kjYAJ:www.pchrgaza.org/files/campaigns/english/gaza_closure/
Narratives_14.html+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Isra el+in+usa&cd=3&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail>- Similar<http://www.google.com/search?
hl=en&client=gmail&rls=gm&q=related:www.pchrgaza.org/files/campaigns/english/gaza_closure/Narratives_14.html+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Isra el+in+usa&sa=X&ei=cqq3S5D-CoT7lwfro8mXCg&ved=0CA0QHzAC> 4.
Students for Justice in Palestine at UC Berkeley » Events<http://calsjp.org/events/> RJI staff living in the West Bank work with Palestinian students to produce ... and their cousins are denied a narrative because of apartheid exclusion within ... the U.S., to organize and work for peace and justice in Israel/Palestine. ...
calsjp.org/events/ - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?
q=cache:ks8nmmND1R4J:calsjp.org/events/
+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=4& hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail> 5. Palestine Think Tank » Education Grassroots Activism Israel
...<http://palestinethinktank.com/2010/03/19/wave-of-divestment-resolutions-destroys-israels-legitimacy-on-campus/> Mar 19, 2010 ... From UC Berkeley SJP (Students for Justice in * Palestine*) .... 3 * Red Cross Report “Dignity Denied in the Occupied Palestinian Territories” .... "Arms Divestment and Cessation of *US*Military Aid to Israel" ... *palestine*thinktank.com/.../wave-of-divestment-resolutions-destroys-* israel*s-legitimacy-on-campus/ - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?
q=cache:my9CxfRnGRoJ:palestinethinktank.com/2010/03/19/wave-of-divestment-resolutions-destroys-israels-legitimacy-on-campus/+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=5& hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail> 6. USC Students for Justice in Palestine<http://uscsjp.wordpress.com/> Israel has neither confirmed nor denied its involvement in al-Mabhouh's death... ... At least seven of the names on the passports belong to Israeli residents whose .... While he was invited by a * student* organization to speak on US-Israeli ... uscsjp.wordpress.com/ - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:CYOooyzTyLoJ:uscsjp.wordpress.com/+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=6&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail>- Similar<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&client=gmail&rls=gm&q=related:uscsjp.wordpress.com/+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&sa=X&ei=cqq3S5D-CoT7lwfro8mXCg&ved=0CBcQHzAF> 7. Aberystwyth Friends of Palestine - Student Society | Facebook<http://www.facebook.com/pages/Aberystwyth-United-Kingdom/Aberystwyth-Friends-of-Palestine-Student-Society/161416943487> Please come all and support us, show presence! And bring candles! *...*About 11000 students, most from inside Israel, already attend the college in *... * She was later denied tenure in 2007. With the tenure review board voting unanimously ... www.facebook.com/pages/. <http://www.facebook.com/pages/>..Palestine-* Student*.../161416943487 - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:wwjm3yEpppEJ:www.facebook.com/pages/Aberystwyth-United-Kingdom/Aberystwyth-Friends-of-Palestine-Student-Society/161416943487+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=7&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail> 8. Committee on Academic Freedom Letters<http://www.mesa.arizona.edu/caf/caf_letters.htm> The grant helped fund the York University conference, Israel/*Palestine *: Mapping .... US Department of State's second visa denial for Professor Tareq Ramadan ... September 21, 2006, Israel, Occupational therapy students denied access to ... www.mesa.arizona.edu/caf/caf_letters.htm - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:p9Wsmb45zc0J:www.mesa.arizona.edu/caf/caf_letters.htm+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=8&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail> 9. Israel News - Daily News Alert from Israel<http://www.dailyalert.org/> Mar 31, 2010 ... Palestinian Journalists Who Visited Israel Face Expulsion from Palestinian ... and another member of the inner group of seven ministers, ... An Obama administration official denied a recent BBC report according to which the U.S. is ... Qutb, who spent time as a student in the U.S. in the late 1940s, ... www.dailyalert.org/ - Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:3BOIgkehMOsJ:www.dailyalert.org/+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=9&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail>-

Similar<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&client=gmail&rls=gm&q=related:www.dailyalert.org/+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&sa=X&ei=cqq3S5D-CoT7lwfro8mXCg&ved=0CCEQHzAI> 10. Students for Justice in Palestine - University of Pittsburgh<http://www.pitt.edu/%7Esorc/pittsjp/recent.html> The US Campaign to End the Israeli Occupation is partnering with Pitt * Students* for .... A student and Palestinian-led workshop with a focus on Israel's .... -A reading of Seven Jewish Children, a 10-minute play written in response to .... of Jewish towns was promoted, while development in Arab centers was denied. ... www.pitt.edu/~sorc/pittsjp/recent.html<http://www.pitt.edu/%7Esorc/pittsjp/recent.html>- Cached<http://74.125.93.132/search?q=cache:uZgpJJPpEDYJ:www.pitt.edu/%7Esorc/pittsjp/recent.html+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&cd=10&hl=en&ct=clnk&gl=us&client=gmail>- Similar<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&client=gmail&rls=gm&q=related:www.pitt.edu/%7Esorc/pittsjp/recent.html+seven+palestinian+students+denied+fellowships+by+Israel+in+usa&sa=X&ei=cqq3S5D-CoT7lwfro8mXCg&ved=0CCUQHzAJ>

↑ Index

31. Stephen Ellis

Re: A Feminist Perspective/Its Suppression: Iran, Israel & the Conspicuous Absence of Nuclear Debate

Sun 4 Apr 2010

A high-yield, low-fallout .01 megaton directed-discharge thermonuclear device the size of a baseball is now being manufactured by an Israeli weapons plant. Similar weapons the size of a gallon jug were being made here in the US in the early 1970s. Exactly what further technological advances have been made? Word is out and about that such a weapon was used to vaporize the core columns of the two WTC towers that came down on 9/11/2001. We should all be asking questions about both our military's and private contractor's store of weapons whose existence has yet to be broadcast to the population at large. Naturally what I just said about the Twin Towers sounds suspiciously like a "conspiracy theory" because no one knows that such highly developed weapons even exist, and therefore have no option to believe that such things could happen. But they do.

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

Date: Sat, 3 Apr 2010 11:49:21 -0700
From: [redacted]
Subject: A Feminist Perspective/Its Suppression: Iran, Israel & the Conspicuous Absence of Nuclear Debate
To: [redacted]

from Jewish Voice for Peace:

In an extensive, research-based 2009 position paper titled: On Nuclear Weapons: A Feminist Perspective, Ednay Gorney and Hedva Eyal of the Isha L'Isha Haifa Feminist Center wrote, "the Israeli public remains excluded from the [nuclear] debate. The public does not ask questions, does not demand that the state takes responsibility, nor does it demand to be involved in decision making; it accepts and is content with the information or, more accurately, with the lack of information."

This passive indifference to the nuclear weaponry widely believed to be in the public's backyard is, in my view, a highly dangerous manifestation of Israel's longtime and entrenched militarization. As Gorney and Eyal have put it, "Decision-making in all areas related to security is characterized by secrecy and vagueness, excluding anyone who does not belong to the security elite. ... The secret functions both on the outside as well as on the inside. Denying information under the guise of maintaining secrecy is one of the common ways through which elites maintain their status. ... [While o]ne of the ways they can attain legitimacy for their control and actions is to continuously disseminate and instill fear – real and imaginary – among the citizens of Israel. This fear justifies and, in turn, foments military power and its use against any security threat, as defined by this elite group."

Meanwhile, Gorney and Eyal have noted, "We are flooded with information on the great threat Iran poses and on the necessity of military operations. The debate within the Israeli public discourse is almost devoid of the possibility of solution through diplomatic means."

Outlining the severely undemocratic suppression of any public nuclear debate in Israel, the position paper lists a line of researchers, journalists, politicians, activists and ex-security personnel who's critical voices have been stifled by the security establishment, using a broad range of tactics. This in addition to the constant dissemination of fear underpinning militarization in general and the unquestioning Israeli public acceptance of its governments' nuclear armament in particular. Thus, the risks of such armament to this public itself, as well as the entire area or even the globe, go unexamined and undebated for decades on end.

Resisting this reality and reaching for an actual, participatory democracy, Gorney and Eyal explain, "As feminists we wish to expose the connections between the policy of opacity, concealment and fear, and the current perception of security. We want to take responsibility for our lives and for actions carried out in our name."

In one of the rare public voices taking up these issues, the position paper concludes:
"We demand the removal of opacity surrounding the issue of nuclear weapons in Israel; We demand a public debate and the development of an alternative policy that will enable us to live in peace in the Middle East; We demand nuclear disarmament; We demand that the State of Israel join the International Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons."

To read the full 22 page position paper, see:

http://www.isha.org.il/files/files/File/1325_reports/On_Nuclear_Weapons.pdf

---

Another such public voice, sounded now for many years, is that of nuclear historian and analyst, Avner Cohen, whose work is one of main sources repeatedly referred to by the Isha L'Isha position paper. Cohen is equally critical of successive Israeli governments' successful barring of nuclear debate and, in the recent op-ed forwarded in full below, offers a series of serious arguments against what he views as the irresponsible and extremely dangerous possibility that Israel might launch a military attack against Iran in an attempt to quash its nuclear capacity.

Cohen's op-ed, converging in part with some of the conclusions presented by the Isha L'Isha position paper, was published April 2nd in Haaretz.

Rela Mazali

---

http://www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/1160524.html

Fri., April 02, 2010

We look at Iran and see ourselves

By Avner Cohen

If Israel takes military action against Iran, it will be one of the biggest decisions in the history of the state. The risks involved will make it unprecedented.

There is no comparison between such a decision and the ones that established and implemented the so-called Begin doctrine: the decision by Menachem Begin's government to attack the Osirak reactor in Iraq in 1981 and the attack on the nuclear facility in Syria in 2007. In terms of both the complexity of the military operation and the uncertainty about the consequences and where they may lead, there is a qualitative difference between the legacy of the past and the challenge of the present.

The seriousness of the challenge requires as open and thorough a public discussion as possible. But unfortunately, such a discussion has been virtually nonexistent, even on a basic conceptual level. Instead of a public discussion there has been a belligerent press, which makes demagogic use of statements that intensify the message of the politics of fear. These include expressions such as "Iran is galloping toward a bomb" and a "second Holocaust" that Israel must prevent. Such discourse creates a feeling that if Iran is not attacked, and soon, we have no choice but to accept a nuclear Iran.

It's doubtful whether the people making those statements are capable of giving them a precise (technical and political) interpretation. It's doubtful whether they have a suitable answer to the question: When should Iran be considered a nuclear state? Where exactly is the red line? What is the precise significance of such a line and what makes it red?

One thing is clear: As long as Iran is a member of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, it will not be able to test a nuclear device or declare that it has one. Also, as long as Iran is subject to the treaty, it will not be a nuclear state according to the accepted definition of such a state.

It's true that under cover of the treaty Iran can get very close to the nuclear threshold and still claim - as it claims now - that it is not deviating from its legal obligations under the treaty. Iran as a threshold state can perhaps even position itself a few weeks away from a nuclear test. Such an Iran, despite supervision by the International Atomic Energy Agency, will of necessity be opaque; there will always remain a fear that it is working in secret, including making weapons in secret. But even in such a case, Iran would be considered a threshold state, not an actual nuclear state.

Even those who disparage the practical limitations of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (as Israelis tend to do) must recognize that it is almost impossible for Iran to be a nuclear state in the full sense without withdrawing from the treaty. And even if it is outside the treaty, it will take Iran years, many years, to make the transition from a threshold state to a mature nuclear state. Such a transition is not trivial; certainly it is not inevitable, even if we look at the experience of states that in the past were considered threshold states and were not bound by the treaty's restrictions.

For example, India, which carried out a nuclear test in 1998, is still making this transition slowly, and many experts say it should still not be considered a mature nuclear state. Even Pakistan, whose nuclear path was faster and more purposeful than India's, needed about a generation to become a nuclear state to all extents and purposes. In its nuclear behavior Iran is more like India than Pakistan.

It's ironic that an Iran under attack would probably become more determined and purposeful in its nuclear ambitions. After an attack, Iran would abandon the treaty in protest, declare its right to nuclear arms and almost certainly succeed in implementing it.

The public discussion in Israel about a nuclear Iran is simplistic, inadequate, confused and confusing. It reflects to some degree our own biases. We come from a culture of national security in which nuclear opacity has been exploited to the hilt to create a specific model of deterrence. The result is that when we look at Iran we see ourselves: how we would behave in a similar situation. But Iran is not Israel exactly, and the Israeli experience does not necessarily reflect Iran's behavior. On the contrary, it leads to systematic errors when making assessments.

The writer is the author of the book "Israel and the Bomb." His forthcoming book, "The Worst-Kept Secret," will be published in the United States in September.

.....

Jewish Peace News editors:
Joel Beinin
Racheli Gai
Rela Mazali
Sarah Anne Minkin
Judith Norman
Lincoln Z. Shlensky
Rebecca Vilkomerson
Alistair Welchman

Jewish Peace News archive and blog: http://jewishpeacenews.blogspot.com
----
Jewish Peace News sends its news clippings only to subscribers. To subscribe, unsubscribe, or manage your subscription, go to http://www.jewishpeacenews.net

↑ Index

32. Ruth Lepson
Re: WILLA's Website Has Launched!
Sun 4 Apr 2010

congratulations on this important resource!

On 4/2/10 7:12 AM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:

> WILLA is live -- please check out our features (including my work on "The Count"), tell your friends, forward widely, and stay tuned!
>
> Best,
>
> Amy
> http://willaweb.org/
>
> ----- Forwarded Message ----
> From: Cate Marvin Dear Friends, You may or may not recall that eight months ago I sent out an email about the need for an organization for women writers of literature. The response was a bit overwhelming. As, it soon became clear, is the need. Since that time, my Co-Director Erin Belieu and I have pulled together a simply amazing group of women writers to help us pull off the creation of our new organization: WILLA (Women in Letters & Literary Arts). I can¹t begin to tell you all of time and thought that has gone into this! It was truly, apologies for the cliché, a labor of love. This is to say: we launched our website today. Please check WILLA out at: http://willaweb.org
> With happiness, Cate --
> Cate Marvin, Associate Professor
> Department of English
> College of Staten Island, CUNY Co-Director, WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) www.willaweb.org

↑ Index

33. Jonathan Penton
Print Submissions and the AWP Reading
Sun 4 Apr 2010

Yes, it's true! I thought you might be wondering if it isn't true, but it is true! I know sometimes people put vague headlines that aren't true, like, "You won a million dollars," or, "I care about your feelings," but this one is true! Unlikely Stories will be reading off-site at the AWP Conference in Denver, with Ahadada Books!

Check us out:
Saturday, April 10, 2010
*7:00pm - 11:00pm
Michelangelo's Wine and Coffee Bar
1 Broadway Suite B*
Denver, Colorado

Where you'll hear readings by Janée J. Baugher, Wendy Taylor Carlisle, Amy Catanzano, León De la Rosa, Adam Halbur, Judy Halebsky, Michael Harold, Deb Hoag, Anne McMillen, Jared Schickling, Judith Skillman, Jeffrey Spahr-Summers, Donna Snyder, Dayana Stetco, Violetta Tarpinian, Donald Wellman, Lawrence Welsh and Joe Zanghi! That's funky, avant-garde and transgressive literature by eighteen writers from Japan, Germany, Mexico, and the U.S.!

And because we're all way too busy to have dealt with it properly, submissions for /Unlikely Stories of the Third Kind/ have been extended to April 30th! That's like May Day, except as an American I don't know what May Day is! So head over to http://www.unlikelystories.org/printsubmissions.shtml and catch your only chance to be in a physical, multimedia edition of /Unlikely Stories/ for a long, long, long time!

"I promise to be polite in all rejections,"
--
Jonathan Penton
http://www.unlikelystories.org/

↑ Index

34. Del Ray Cross
SHAMPOO 37
Sun 4 Apr 2010

Those more frequent bathers may have already noticed

Dear All,

Those more frequent bathers may have already noticed a particularly robust new shampoo on the shelves.Â It's SHAMPOO issue 37, which can be found here-- http://www.shampoopoetry.com/

--and has the following magical ingredients: Sharon Zetter, Cyril Wong, Sarah Wetzel, Ellen Welcker, Ashley VanDoorn, Thomas Trudgeon, Joseph Torra, Shelly Taylor, Michael Thomas Taren, Mathias Svalina, Tamara M. Soban,
Mike Smith, Amy Silbergard, Daniel M. Shapiro, Tomaz

Salamun, Matthew Rotando, Ryan B. Richey, Sam Rasnake, Jessy Randall, Doug Ramspeck, Eddie Paterson, Seth Oelbaum, Brane Mozetic, Anna Morrison, David M. Morini, T.J. Meneely, John McKernan, Jennifer Manzano, Steven Manuel, Joseph Mains, Diana Magallon, Chris Lin, Cassie Lewis-Getman, Chandler Lewis, David Dodd Lee, Margaret Konkol, Larry Kearney, Vincent Katz, Thomas Kane, Crow Jane, Uyen Hua, Colin Herd, KJ Hays, Rachel Gruskin, Joseph Goosey, Michael Farrell, Steffi Drewes, Shira Dentz, J. P. Dancing Bear, Jeff Crouch, Lindsay Coleman, Kate Colby, Sharmila Cohen, Julia Cohen, Sarah Cavallaro, Sten Carlson, Stephen Carey, Craig Cady, Louis Bury, Maurice Burford, Eric J. Brinovec, Brian Dean Bollman, Lisa Beskin, Luis Cuauhtemoc Berriozabal, Christopher Barnes, Ed Baker, Joe Atkins, Shawn Arrajj, Rachel Andelman, Jeff Alessandrelli, Michael Aird, Liz Afton, and tattoo-worthy SHAMPOOArt by Otto Chan.

Next up, our ten year anniversary issue!

Stay tuned,

Del Ray Cross, Editor
SHAMPOO
clean hair / good poetry
www.ShampooPoetry.com

(if you'd prefer not to receive these notices, please let me know)

↑ Index

35. mIEKAL aND

Maria Damon | mIEKAL aND reading in Madison on Thursday April 8

Sun 4 Apr 2010

Thursday, April 8 at 7 pm:

Poetry reading by longtime DIY cultural anarchist & creator of an infoplex worth of visual-verbal literature, mIEKAL aND, along with poet & teacher Maria Damon, author of "The Dark End of the Street: Margins in American Vanguard Poetry" and the forthcoming "Bagel Shop Jazz: Selected Essays for a Post-literary America."

Selected Xexoxial Editions titles will be on display.

"This is the days of year when events happen far too quickly. & now is the day of days
we leap across."

Avol's Bookstore
315 West Gorham St.
Madison, WI 53703
USA

[redacted]
http://www.avolsbooks.com/

Avol's lists fine books for sale at:
Abebooks.com, Alibris.com, and Barnes&Noble.com

↑ Index

36. Jesse Glass

Just to Claify--Mark DuCharme Will Be Reading With Us at the Ahadada/Unlikely Stories Offsite Event

Mon 5 Apr 2010

Check us out:
Saturday, April 10, 2010
*7:00pm - 11:00pm
Michelangelo's Wine and Coffee Bar
1 Broadway Suite B*
Denver, Colorado

Where you'll hear readings by Mark Ducharme, Janée J. Baugher, Wendy Taylor Carlisle,Amy Catanzano, León De la Rosa, Adam Halbur, Judy Halebsky, Michael Harold, Deb Hoag, Anne McMillen, Jared Schickling, Judith Skillman, Jeffrey Spahr-Summers, Donna Snyder, Dayana Stetco, Violetta Tarpinian, Donald Wellman, Lawrence Welsh and Joe Zanghi! That's funky, avant-garde and transgressive literature by eighteen writers from Japan, Germany, Mexico, and the U.S.!

Mark is with us, hand honored to have him! Jess

↑ Index

37. steve dalachinsky
Reading
Mon 5 Apr 2010

---

*/Sunday April 11th , 5-7/

/Poetry Readings from 5-7 pm in Tribes Reading Room/

/Poets* *Fay Chiang, Cynthia Kraman and Janet Hamill. /
285 e 3rd st (c and d) music by jason whang william parker etc

↑ Index

38. Jeffrey Side
'Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes'
Mon 5 Apr 2010

Jake Berry and I have collaborated on a poem called â€˜Cyclones in High Northern Latitudesâ€™. Itâ€™s available in book form from Lavender Ink: http://lavenderink.org/cyclone/

↑ Index

39. Nicholas Piombino
New from Green Integer--Contradicta by Nick Piombino, iillustrated by Toni Simon
Mon 5 Apr 2010

Book Launch & Signing
Sunday April 25, 2010
6:30pm
Zinc Bar
82 W. 3rd St, New York, NY

Contradicta: Aphorisms
By Nick Piombino with illustrations by Toni Simon
Green Integer Press
Available from SPD
http://www.spdbooks.org/Search/Default.aspx?SearchTerm=Contradicta St. Marks Bookshop (NYC) Unnameable Books (Brooklyn)

and

If Not Metamorphic
Brenda Iijima
Ahsahta Press

Music and projection by Pattern Diver (aka Mike Burakoff) of the band Keepaway Pitchfork magazine's "Best Music 2009"

↑ Index

40. Michelle Taransky

3/8 reading & book party for Charles Bernstein: ALL THE WHISKEY IN HEAVEN

Mon 5 Apr 2010

The Kelly Writers House presents:
a poetry reading and book party with

CHARLES BERNSTEIN
& friends

celebrating the release of ALL THE WHISKEY IN HEAVEN
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/books/all-the-whiskey/

Thursday, April 8th, at 6:00 PM (EST) in the Arts CafÃ©
Kelly Writers House | 3805 Locust Walk
No registration required - this event is free & open to the public

Not in Philadelphia? Tune in to our live webcast via KWH-TV:
http://writing.upenn.edu/wh/multimedia/tv/

CHARLES BERNSTEIN has published three collections of essays â€“ MY WAY: SPEECHES AND POEMS (1999, Chicago), A POETICS (1992, Harvard), and CINTENTâ€™S DREAM: ESSAYS 1975-1984 (1985, Sun & Moon; rpt 2001, Northwestern). He is the author of over twenty collections of poetry, including ALL THE WHISKEY IN HEAVEN: SELECTED POEMS (2010, Farrar, Straus, and Giroux), GIRLY MAN (2006, Chicago), WITH STRINGS (2001, Chicago), REPUBLICS OF REALITY: 1975 - 1995 (2000, Sun & Moon), DARK CITY (1994, Sun & Moon), THE SOPHIST (1987, Sun & Moon; rpt 2004, Salt), ISLETS/IRRITATIONS (1983, Jordan Davies; rpt. 1992, Roof); and CONTROLLING INTERESTS (1980, Roof). Charles is executive editor of the Electronic Poetry Center and co-director of PennSound, and teaches poetics at Penn.

Michelle Taransky
Kelly Writers House
3805 Locust Walk
Philadelphia PA 19104

215-746-POEM
http://writing.upenn.edu/~wh/

↑ Index

41. amy king
+ New Coldfront Interview
Mon 5 Apr 2010

Thanks, Ruth! And here's a just-published interview with Marvin and Belieu:

http://coldfrontmag.com/features/spotlight-erin-belieu-cate-marvin

WILLA GOES LIVE

The much anticipated website for Willa (Women in letters & literary arts) launched this week. It can be found at http://willaweb.org .

Willaâ€™s website offers new content monthly, written by both established and emerging women writers. The feature essays include â€œState of the Art,â€ in which an author addresses issues particular to the concerns of her specific genre; â€œDeal With it,â€ where a featured essayist offers her candid take on the more practical concerns of being a female writer in a male-dominated literary world; and â€œThe Count,â€ where Willaâ€™s Amy King gathers the hard numbers to examine rates of publication, award recognition and other factors that affect women writers both artistically and financially within the national literary community.

Another feature, coming next month, is â€œFor the record,â€ where editors, agents and publishers are interviewed and asked to provide their candid opinion on the contemporary landscape for womenâ€™s writing in the United States.

The present issue features novelist A.J. Verdelle on the subject of literary recognition and the work of chimamanda adiche and Willa co-founder, the poet Cate Marvin, exploring the issue of â€œterrible mother poemsâ€ and how new mothers are treated by the literary establishment.

Willa was founded in August 2009 to explore critical and cultural perceptions of writing by women through meaningful conversation and the exchange of ideas among existing and emerging literary communities.

Please forward - thank you!

↑ Index

42. amy king
White Swallow Reading Series! -- McClure, Guez, Kronovet, and King
Mon 5 Apr 2010

A very special Ladies' Night at The White Swallow, featuring Monica McClure, Julia Guez, Jennifer Kronovet, and Amy King.

Tuesday, April 6, 2010 - 6:00pm - 8:00pm
Cornelia Street Cafe (downstairs)
29 Cornelia St. New York, NY

Monica McClure is currently pursuing her MFA at New York University. Her debut book of poetry, Now Iâ€™ve Got the Pill, will be out by Low Hanging Branch Press (2011).

Julia Guez, after five years of service with Teach For America, is now living in New York, pursuing a Masters in Fine Arts at Columbia and working part-time at The Academy of American Poets. At work on a first full-length collection of poetry, she has received a Harvey Fellowship and Dorothy Sargent Rosenberg Poetry Prize. New verse is soon to appear in Western Humanities Review, Inscape, The Blue Fifth and Basilica Review.

Jennifer Kronovet is the author of the poetry collection Awayward (BOA Editions) and the co-founder and co-editor of Circumference: Poetry in Translation. Beginning in the fall, she will be writer-in-residence at Washington University in St. Louis.

Amy Kingâ€™s most recent books are Slaves to Do These Things (Blazevox) and, forthcoming, I Want to Make You Safe (Litmus Press). She edits the Poetics List (SUNY-Buffalo/University of Pennsylvania), moderates the Womenâ€™s Poetry Listserv (WOMPO), and teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. King also co-curates the Brooklyn-based reading series, The Stain of Poetry. For more information, please visit http://amyking.org.

http://www.facebook.com/event.php?eid=109628102394253&ref=mf _____

AMY'S ALIAS

http://amyking.org

↑ Index

43. Laura Hinton
Re: WILLA's Website Has Launched!
Mon 5 Apr 2010

Wonderful site! I look forward to more. Thanks, Amy.

On Sun, Apr 4, 2010 at 1:40 PM, Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:

> congratulations on this important resource!
>
> On 4/2/10 7:12 AM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> WILLA is live -- please check out our features (including my work on "The Count"), tell your friends, forward widely, and stay tuned!
>
> Best,
>
> Amy
> http://willaweb.org/
>
> ----- Forwarded Message ----
> From: Cate Marvin Dear Friends, You may or may not recall that eight months > ago I sent out an email about the need for an organization for women writers > of literature. The response was a bit overwhelming. As, it soon became clear, > is the need. Since that time, my Co-Director Erin Belieu and I have pulled > together a simply amazing group of women writers to help us pull off the > creation of our new organization: WILLA (Women in Letters & Literary Arts). I > can¹t begin to tell you all of time and thought that has gone into this! It > was truly, apologies for the cliché, a labor of love. This is to say: we > launched our website today. Please check WILLA out at:
> http://willaweb.org
> With happiness, Cate --
> Cate Marvin, Associate Professor
> Department of English
> College of Staten Island, CUNY Co-Director, WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) www.willaweb.org
>
> guidelines &

--
Laura Hinton
Professor of English
City College of New York

138 at Convent Ave.
New York, New York 10031

http://www.mermaidtenementpress.com
http://www.chantdelasirene.com

↑ Index

44. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ

Announcing The Annual Chapbook Festival, May 3 and 4 in NYC

Mon 5 Apr 2010

PUBLISHERS, FREE SPACE IS STILL AVAILABLE! See below for details.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
ANNUAL CHAPBOOK FESTIVAL

* *

Monday May 3 &Tuesday May 4, 2010

**

* The Annual Chapbook Festival* celebrates the chapbook as a work of art and as a medium for alternative and emerging writers and publishers. Now in its second year, the festival features a two-day bookfair with chapbook publishers from around the country, workshops, marathon poetry readings, and a closing-night reading of prize-winning Chapbook Fellows.

Workshops will include: Producing Chapbooks: A Workshop for Poets, Producing Chapbooks: A Workshop for Publishers, Do-It-Yourself Chapbooks: Make and Distribute Your Own, and Chapbooks as Art Objects. **

For more information, schedule, and a list of participating publishers, please visit http://www.chapbookfestival.org.

* PUBLISHERS: FREE SPACE IS STILL AVAILABLE IN THE BOOKFAIR. PLEASE CONTACT [redacted] FOR A TABLE!*

Co-sponsored by The Office of Academic Affairs, The Center for the Humanities, The Graduate Center and MFA Programs in Creative Writing of the City University of New York, The Center for Book Arts, Poets House, Poetry Society of America, and Poets & Writers

↑ Index

45. William Slaughter
Notice: Mudlark
Mon 5 Apr 2010

New and On View: Mudlark Poster No. 87 (2010)

Some Father's Heart

Five Poems by Megan Williams

Megan Williams is currently an MFA candidate at Sarah Lawrence College, where she serves as a poetry editor of LUMINA. With her writing group, she co-curates the from here to the corner reading series at the 25CPW gallery in Manhattan. Recent poems can be found in Ducts and are forthcoming in Tin House.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

46. Noah Eli Gordon
Counterpath Press & Letter Machine Editions AWP reading
Tue 6 Apr 2010

Counterpath Press & Letter Machine Editions

This Friday 6-10pm
@ Mercury Café 2199 California Street Denver, CO

full dinner menu and bar (Jungle Room: take a left when you enter)

AARON KUNIN
BARBARA CLAIRE FREEMAN
BRENDA HILLMAN
COLE SWENSEN
FARID MATUK
FORREST GANDER
GILLIAN CONOLEY
JULIANA LESLIE

LAYNIE BROWNE
MARTHA RONK
PAUL HOOVER
PETER GIZZI
STEPHEN RATCLIFFE
TRAVIS NICHOLS

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

47. Obododimma Oha

A Plato of Crayfish

Tue 6 Apr 2010

A "Plato" of crayfish may after all be the smallest of all market wraps of knowledge.
Read full text of "A Plato of Crayfish<http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Opinion/5550548-148/shibboleth__a_plato_of_crayfish.csp>"
at:
http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Opinion/5550548-148/shibboleth__a_plato_of_crayfish.csp

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

48. Jeffrey Side

"Century XX after Four Quartets" by Adam Fieled at The Argotist Online

Tue 6 Apr 2010

"Century XX after Four Quartets" by Adam Fieled at The Argotist Online

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Fieled%20essay%202.htm

Excepts:

"What do we see around us in 2010? It is a poetry world stumbling for direction, still largely lost in the theoretical wilderness of post-modernism..."

"I do not believe that much English language poetry composed after 1943, the year that Eliotâ€™s Four Quartets were released, deserves the title of high art. Before I explain why the twentieth century, post Four Quartets, was mostly a washout for English language poetry, let me explain what distinctions I believe subsist between high and low art. "

"Low art impulses often maintain a stance that technical competence is unnecessary, that breadth of vision is too ambitious, that narrative solidity is a remnant of the nineteenth century...and that â€œseriousnessâ€ is an outdated and outmoded concern. "

"... Eliotâ€™s language is taut, sinewy, disciplined, and rich [and] makes the whole of Four Quartets ring as a solid, major work of high literary art. If another such work exists that was released between 1943 and 2000, I havenâ€™t seen it."

"The Objectivists, the Beats, the New York School (first and second generation), the Confessional poetsâ€”what do these poets lack, so that the appellation high art does not affix to their work ..."

"...Objectivists, the Beats, and the New York School poets, fall squarely under the rubric that covers minor poetry and poets, when placed next to the scope and achievements of Eliot and Yeats."

↑ Index

49. Tim Peterson

Tendencies 4/9: Bellamy, Killian, and Myles

Tue 6 Apr 2010

TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice
Dodie Bellamy, Kevin Killian, and Eileen Myles

This series of talks by major poets, titled in honor of Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick, explores the relationship between contemporary poetic manifesto, practice, queer theory and pedagogy.

The next event features talks by:

Dodie Bellamy
Kevin Killian
Eileen Myles

...followed by a discussion/Q&A session.

on Friday, April 9
at 6:30 PM
FREE

at CUNY Graduate Center
(in the Martin E. Segal Theater)
365 Fifth Avenue, NYC

Dodie Bellamy's chapbook Barf Manifesto was named best book of 2009 under 30 pages by Time Out New York. Other books include Academonia, Pink Steam and The Letters of Mina Harker. Her book Cunt-Ups won the 2002 Firecracker Alternative Book Award for poetry. She teaches creative writing in various grad programs in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Kevin Killian has written two novels, Shy (1989) and Arctic Summer (1997), a book of memoirs, Bedrooms Have Windows (1990), two books of stories, Little Men (1996) and I Cry Like a Baby (2001) and two books of poetry, Argento Series (2001), and Action Kylie (2008). With Lew Ellingham, Killian has written often on the life and work of the American poet Jack Spicer [1925-65] and with Peter Gizzi has edited My Vocabulary Did This To Me: The Collected Poetry of Jack Spicer (2008) for Wesleyan University Press. For the San Francisco Poets Theater Killian has written thirty plays, including Stone Marmalade (1996, with Leslie Scalapino), The American Objectivists (2001, with Brian Kim Stefans), and Often (also 2001, with Barbara Guest). New projects include Screen Tests, an edition of Killian's film writing, and Impossible Princess, a new fiction collection brand new from City Lights Books. A new novel Spreadeagle will appear in the spring.

Eileen Myles is a poet who lives in New York. Her collection of essays The Importance of Being Iceland (Semiotext(e)/MIT) received an Warhol Creative Capital art writing grant. This semester she's the Hugo Writer at U. of Montana, Missoula. The Inferno (a poet's novel) will be out in fall 2010 from O/R books. She reads and performs her work widely - her last book of poems was Sorry, Tree, (Wave Books) 2007. She just won the Shelley Memorial Prize from the PSA.

* * *

TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice is curated by Tim Peterson (Trace). For additional information, visit the Tendencies blog.

All events are co-sponsored by the Center for the Humanities, CLAGS (the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies), The Graduate Center PhD Program in English, and the GC Poetics Group.

Upcoming TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice events this spring:

Jack Kimball, CA Conrad, and Stacy Szymaszek
on Thursday, May 6 at 6:30 PM
in the Skylight Room (9100) at CUNY Graduate Center

↑ Index

50. Troy Camplin

Re: NYT Book Review: Next Big Thing in English: uSING m.r.i.'S & Evolution to Explore Reading of Fiction

Tue 6 Apr 2010

This is great news for those of us already doing this. Maybe it being in the NYT will get English departments to take this approach seriously.

Troy Camplin, Ph.D.

Sent from AT&T's Wireless network using Mobile Email

------Original Message------
From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, April 2, 2010 7:58:57 PM GMT-0500
Subject: NYT Book Review: Next Big Thing in English: uSING m.r.i.'S & Evolution to Explore Reading of Fiction

Book News

Next Big Thing in English: Knowing They Know That You Know

By PATRICIA COHEN

Some scholars are turning to M.R.I.'s and evolutionary theory to explore how and why people read fiction.http://www.nytimes.com/2010/04/01/books/01lit.html?nl=books&emc=booksupdateemb5

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

51. Michael Heller

POETRY READING, Saturday April 10th at 2 PM

Tue 6 Apr 2010

ILYA BERNSTEIN, JON CURLEY, MICHAEL HELLER and SAMUEL MENASHE

will be reading at THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY at 112 East 96th Street

at 2 PM, April 10th

Beckmann Variations & other poems (Shearsman, 2010), Eschaton (new poems) (Talisman House Publishers, 2009), Two Novellas: Marble Snows & The Study (ahadada press, 2009) are all available from their publishers, at good bookstores and from SPD and amazon.com. Speaking The Estranged: Essays on the Work of George Oppen (Salt, 2008); Uncertain Poetries: Essays on Poets, Poetry and Poetics (Salt, 2005) and Exigent Futures: New and Selected Poems (Salt, 2003) are available from www.saltpublishing.com, amazon.com and good bookstores. Survey of work at http://www.thing.net/~grist/ld/heller.htm Collaborations with the composer Ellen Fishman Johnson at http://www.efjcomposer.com/EFJ/Collaborations.html Recordings at http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Heller.html

↑ Index

52. Murat Nemet-Nejat

John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

Tue 6 Apr 2010

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites - Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]>wrote:

> Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog
>
> poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/
>
> including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
> now surfacing in an acceptable state.
>
> I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:
>
> http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems
>
> Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.
>
> GQ
>
> George Quasha
> www.quasha.com
> www.baumgartnergallery.net

> www.stationhill.org

↑ Index

53. Eleni Stecopoulos

Closing Event for Belladonna's Year of New Releases

Tue 6 Apr 2010

If you're having trouble viewing this email, you may see it online.

Closing Event!

Belladonna's Year of New Releases

Come join us for a reading and celebration of four great poets and their new work! We will be toasting:

Brenda Iijima (revv. you'll—ution, Displaced Press; If Not Metamorphic, Ahsahta Press; eco language reader, Nightboat Books)

Dorothea Lasky (Black Life, Wave Books)

Eleni Stecopoulos (Armies of Compassion, Palm Press)

and David Wolach, (Occultations, Black Radish Books)

Tuesday, April 13, 2010 @ 7:30 pm

Dixon Place

161 Christie Street; New York

$6.00

Brenda Iijima's recent titles include revv. you'll—ution (Displaced Press) and If Not Metamorphic (Ahsahta Press). She is the editor of the eco language reader (Nightboat Books and PPAYYL)—a collection of essays by poets responding to environmental issues. At present, she is writing an informal encyclopedia on animals used as surrogates by humans—the snake and the mouse are recent entries. As well she is researching the women who were murdered in her hometown of North Adams, Massachusetts and choreographing site specific dances that relate to these crimes. She runs Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs ( http://e2ma.net/go/8121209696/2679498/92899800/27410/goto:http://yoyolabs.com) from Prospect Heights, Brooklyn.

Dorothea Lasky is the author of two full-length collections of poetry: Black Life (Wave Books, 2010) and AWE (Wave Books, 2007). She is also the author of Poetry is Not A Project (Ugly Duckling Presse, 2010) and several chapbooks. Born in St. Louis in 1978, her poems have appeared in The New Yorker, The Paris Review, Boston Review, American Poetry Review, The Laurel Review, and Columbia Poetry Review, among other places. She is a graduate of the MFA program for Poets and Writers at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst and also has been educated at Harvard University and Washington University. Currently, she lives in New York City and researches creativity and education at the University of Pennsylvania.

Eleni Stecopoulos was born on Fort Washington Avenue, raised on the Upper West Side and on Long Island, and now lives in Berkeley, CA. Armies of Compassion is her first full-length collection. She has published a chapbook, Autoimmunity (Taxt, 2006), and poems and essays in publications including Chain, Ecopoetics, Xcp: Cross Cultural Poetics, The Capilano Review, the SFMOMA blog, and NO GENDER: Reflections on the Life & Work of kari edwards. In 2008 she received a grant from the Creative Work Fund to curate a program series around art, healing, and somatic practice for the San Francisco State University Poetry Center, and write a related book. She is at work as well on a book-length poem, "Earth Also is a Private Language," which deals with things like rift zones and dream incubation and the history of her grandfather’s hometown on the island of Euboea, renowned since antiquity for curative springs once associated with cults of Apollo and Heracles. She teaches in the Language and Thinking program at Bard College and sometimes co-directs the Paros Translation Symposium in Greece.

David Wolach is founding editor of Wheelhouse Magazine & Press, & curator of the series devoted to the intersection of experiments in texts & radical politics, PRESS. Wolach’s most recent books are Occultations (Black Radish Books, forth. 2010), Prefab Eulogies Vol 1: Nothings Houses (BlazeVox, forth. 2010), Hospitalogy (Scantily Clad Press, forth. 2010) and book alter(ed) (Ungovernable Press, 2009). His work has most recently appeared in or is forthcoming from 5_Trope, Aufgabe, Jacket, No Tell Motel, & Little Red Leaves. Often making use of multiple media and site-specific, Wolach's work has been commissioned for performance at such venues as The American Cybernetics Conference 2009, The EconVergence Conference 2009, and Tacoma Contemporary Series. Wolach is professor of text arts, & poetics The Evergreen State College & visiting professor in Bard College’s Workshop In Language & Thinking.

Belladonna Books | 925 Bergen Street, Suite 405 | Brooklyn, NY 11238 | www.belladonnaseries.org

This email was sent to [redacted].

To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

manage your preferences | opt out using TrueRemove®.

Got this as a forward?
Sign up to receive our future emails.

powered by

_____ The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multicalendar&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_5

↑ Index

54. Jennifer Karmin

April 10: Cracked Slab Books, U of Tulsa & Midwest Friends in Denver

Tue 6 Apr 2010

Cracked Slab Books, University of Tulsa & Midwest Friends
Saturday, April 10th @ 8pm

at Mercury Cafe
2199 California Street
Denver, Colorado
http://mercurycafe.com

readings by:
Sheila Black
Maxine Chernoff
Sloan Davis
Paul Hoover
Grant Jenkins
Jennifer Karmin
Shin Yu Pai

Cheryl Pallant
Michelle Taransky
Hugh Tribbey
Tony Trigilio

↑ Index

55. sandra de 1913

1913's AWP news that stays news...

Tue 6 Apr 2010

News from 1913, as we head off Denver-way...

*We'll be celebrating the launch of 1913 a journal of forms' Issue 4 at AWP in Denver this week... Please stop by our table in the Book Room (Exhibit Hall A, Table L10) to say hola & ogle the new.

*Join 1913 Press for Author Signings at our AWP table:
Thursday 4/8 @ 1-2pm John Keene "Seismosis"
Thursday 4/8 @ 2-3pm Shin Yu Pai "Sightings"

*We'll have copies of Issue 4 & books from 1913 Press including: "Read" the translation anthology from the Tamaas seminars in Paris, "Seismosis" by Christopher Stackhouse & John Keene, "Sightings" by Shin Yu Pai...and the NEWEST member of the 1913 family, "Ozalid" by Biswamit Diwbedy.

*1913 & Fence are co-hosting an off-site Salon on Saturday April 10 at Mario's Double Daughter's Salotto, from 5-7pm. Please join us for happy hour drinks & deals, & cabaret collaborations. This is not your father's reading. 1632 Market Street, Denver. http://www.doubledaughters.com/

All best things de 1913, Sandra.
--
l'editrice de 1913, Sandra Doller (née Miller)
http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/sdoller/sdoller.htm
*
NEW! from 1913:
1913 a journal of forms, Issue 4
"Ozalid" by Biswamit Dwibedy
"READ" 1913's annual translation anthology from the Tamaas seminars in Paris
http://www.journal1913.org
*
Please join 1913 for its off-site Salon & Issue 4 launch, co-hosted with Fence at this year's AWP in Denver:
http://www.awpwriter.org/conference/2010offsite.php#saturday

*
Forthcoming from 1913:
"Hg-the liquid" by Ward Tietz
Two collaborations by Mendi+Keith Obadike
"Home/Birth: A Poemic" by Arielle Greenberg & Rachel Zucker
"Wonderbender" by Diane Wald
http://www.1913press.org

↑ Index

56. William Allegrezza
Series A Reading in Chicago Wednesday
Tue 6 Apr 2010

Please come to the Series A reading in Chicago on Wed.

April 7, 7:00-8:00 p.m.
Dana Ward
John Coletti
Jess Mynes

At the Hyde Park Art Center, 5020 S. Cornell. Easy parking. Access to public transportation. Byob.

Note: We actually start at 7 and end at 8.

For more info, conact Bill Allegrezza at [redacted]

↑ Index

57. Jerome Rothenberg on the road -- again
Tue 6 Apr 2010

On the 12th of April, Diane Rothenberg and I are heading off again, this time for a cross country drive and the whole month of May in New York City. During a part of that time there will, as usual, be some poetry readings and similar events, which I'm listing in the following itinerary, for any of you who may be interested and able to catch up with any of them.

April 12, leaving San Diego and driving to Las Vegas. April 13-14, Moab and Arches in Utah. April 15, Denver. April 16-18, driving to Chicago for arrival on April 19.

April 20, 4:30 p.m.: talk and reading at University of Chicago, Department of English/Creative Writing, room TBA; please contact [redacted]

April 21, 7:00 p.m.: reading at Myopic Books, 1564 North Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, phone: [redacted].

April 23, 4:30 p.m., reading with Diane Wakoski, Michigan Writers Series, W449 in the Main Library, Michigan State University, East Lansing.

April 25, 2:00 p.m., reading at the Scarab Club, 217 Farnsworth St, Detroit.

April 25, 5:00 p.m., reading in Grosse Point, Michigan, venue and address not available.

April 27/28, arriving in New York City and staying through May 30 c/o Mark Weiss, 5009 Broadway, NY NY 10034.

May 7, 6:30 p.m., talk on books in the Threads series, at Steve Clay & Granary Books loft, 168 Mercer Street, New York.

May 20, reading at Pierre Menard Gallery, 10 Arrow Street, Harvard Square, Cambridge, MA, phone: [redacted].

May 27, reading/performance with Pierre Joris, Nicole Peyrafitte, & others, as part of MaelstrÖm Revolution Festival (from Brussels) at Invisible Dog, 51 Bergen Street, Brooklyn, phone: [redacted]

May 30, return flight to San Diego.

Jerome Rothenberg
1026 San Abella
Encinitas, CA 92024
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/rothenberg/ethnopoetics web site: http://ubu.com/ethno/j.r. in spanish: http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/rothenberg/esp/blog: poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com

Poetry must have something in it that is barbaric, vast and wild..
-- D. Diderot

We are otherwise most easily reachable by cell phone: [redacted] or [redacted].

↑ Index

58. Maria Damon

Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

Wed 7 Apr 2010

---

i saw this movie in college. i had no idea about any kind of experimental film. it had a deep effect on me.
i've never forgotten it, though of course i've forgotten many specifics.
and i had no idea at the time that it was about alcoholism.

Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:
> I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see > how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches
> one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the > limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was > the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the > movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, > Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité > works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other > movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or > moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human > relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity > nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out > of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.
>
> Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical,
> stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of > their children.
>
> Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites
> -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the > director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not > believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed > truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to > capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same > scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw > anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, > to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to > achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not > shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not > know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of > panic- for that purpose.
>
> The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena > Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by > the reality of her situation.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>

>
> On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]>wrote:
>
>
>> Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for >> Themselves" on his blog
>>
>> poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/
>>
>> including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief >> intro to a 12 year project,
>> now surfacing in an acceptable state.
>>
>> I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might >> go to:
>>
>> http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems
>>
>> Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.
>>
>> GQ
>>
>> George Quasha
>> www.quasha.com
>> www.baumgartnergallery.net
>> www.stationhill.org
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

59. Bruce McPherson

After 16 years, a new fiction collection by Robert Kelly

Wed 7 Apr 2010

McPherson & Co. is very pleased to announce the publication of Robert Kelly's new fiction collection, The Logic of the World and Other Fictions, and to offer signed copies to list members at a substantial discount until May 1: $16 postpaid (instead of $29). Simply add POETICS to your address when ordering at www.mcphersonco.com, or telephone us [[redacted]]. (You can also still order Ted Enslin's new novella, I, Benjamin, at the same time for only $5 more.)

The Logic of the World and Other Fictions by Robert Kelly

Adult fiction.

Publication: April 6, 2010

$24.00 clothbound, 244 pages, 5 ½ x 8 ½", 978-0-929701-89-9.

Four previous volumes of Robert Kelly's manifestly original fictions have been hailed as "exhilarating.full of signs and wonders" in the New York Times Book Review, "sparking, multiform, yet indivisible" in American Book Review, and "tantalizing, unsettling" in the Review of Contemporary Fiction. Choice rightly points to his "affinities with the writings of Borges, Nabokov, Calvino, and Coover." The thirty works in this fifth collection of short fictions-the first to appear in sixteen years-knowingly trespass into fictional realms of droll lyricism, audacious description, studied anachronism, sensual immediacy and subtle compassion. In one, a woman waits at a window for the moon to return her body; another reveals the triple identity of Don Juan; in still another, an itinerant tragedian invents a dangerous form of theatrical performance; in the title story a dragon questions a youthful knight's errancy, as well as his sanity. Scattered throughout are nine pieces known as "sudden fiction," a genre Kelly named, while other tales appear in the guises of myths, letters, rituals, and quite frequently dreams. "That is the single mystery of sleep," one narrator reminds, "to teach us to wake up." The author's agile imagination mines from the thick substance of language the numinous qualities buried within it. His fictions defy the conventionally plotted short story, and seem to conjure narrative from an infinitely recombinant DNA of the psyche. After reading The Logic of the World, the reader risks awakening to discover a hitherto unexplored territory of the mind.

"There is such beauty and mystery and surprise on the path we are seductively invited to follow in Robert Kelly's The Logic of the World. Do not miss this deeply charmed and haunting foray." - Carole Maso, author of AVA

NOTE: The title story has been selected for inclusion in The Year's Best Science Fiction & Fantasy 2010 (forthcoming).

Robert Kelly was born in 1935 in Brooklyn, and educated at CCNY and Columbia, where he studied mediaeval literature and linguistics. His first book, Armed Descent, was published in 1961; since then he has published over sixty more, including novels, short fiction collections, and poetry, receiving many awards. He has been especially interested in collaborations with artists (The Garden of Distances, Shame) and other poets (Mont Blanc, Unquell the Dawn Now). For over fifty years he has been involved with such celebrated journals as Chelsea, Trobar, Caterpillar, Alcheringa, and Conjunctions. For almost a half century he has taught at Bard College, where he is the Asher B. Edelman Professor of Literature and co-directs the Program in Written Arts. He lives in the Hudson Valley with his wife, the translator Charlotte Mandell.

Praise for earlier collections of Robert Kelly's fictions

"By means of language, Kelly invades our senses, bringing us to places in consciousness where we have never been and where we yearn to go, or which we long ago abandoned." - Publishers Weekly

"A craftsman who shares our intimate thoughts and knows how to glance along with us at the chambers of our imagination.. Profound lessons in the art of knowing how the imagination takes hold of the ordinary world."-Marilyn Moss, Review of Contemporary Fiction

"Essential storytelling, raised to the highest power of the imagination."-Norman Weinstein, Los Angeles Reader

"Capable of creating entire genres from the modulations of one mood, small kingdoms that may be entered at will with concentration the only key required."-Marc Laidlaw, American Book Review

"A lyrical prose style that mixes eroticism and erudition, a focus on the act of perception and on the presentation of sensory stimuli and sexual impulses in highly charged images, a sense of shock, wonder and utter bewilderment that human consciousness exists at all." -Larry McCaffery, New York Times Book Review

"What Kelly offers above all, in the tradition of all great poetic visionaries, is the way he unleashes the reader's own power of second sight-the power we all have.of recognizing the universe in a single object or moment."- John Strausbaugh, City Paper

"The quality of those dazzling, structured, receding arches seen in old abbeys, which entice the mind away into spaces of light, air, and stone." - James Polk, Woodstock Times

"Mystical glimpses of a rich inner world."- Kirkus Reviews

McPherson & Company
[redacted] (phone & fax)
[redacted]
www.mcphersonco.com

↑ Index

60. Gerald Schwartz
25 Questions: # 5
Wed 7 Apr 2010

25 Questions, # 5:

Is the long poem still relevant or is it just a museum?

Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

61. Gerald Schwartz
Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Wed 7 Apr 2010

Murat,

Cassavetes' neo-realism began long before W.U.T.I. and it began parallel to the French new wave-- with "Shadows" (56-59)... and was inspired by "La Tera Trema," "I Vitelloni," "Umberto D.," and "Bellissima".

He (like those) was not afraid to face reality; to look it straight in the face.

Godard would later follow.

I have often wondered if there has (or will be) a poetry (or poetics) that would approach his achievement, both in style and substance... and improvization.

Any examples?

Till then,
Gerald

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites - Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog
>
> poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/
>
> including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
> now surfacing in an acceptable state.
>
> I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:
>
> http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

> Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.
>
> GQ
>
> George Quasha
> www.quasha.com
> www.baumgartnergallery.net
> www.stationhill.org
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

62. Paul Siegell

"Who's Got My Extra?" @ I Thought I Was New Here

Wed 7 Apr 2010

Hello friends and fellow colleagues,

Greg Lawless, author of "I Thought I was New Here," was kind enough to cook an interview with me recently for his series at "I Thought I Was New Here."

If you've ever been curious, please have a look here: http://bit.ly/98fkUM

Firecrackers include Charles Olson and sleepiness, buzzbangboom, ugly looking poems, community, live music, Coventry, VT, the all-out nuttiness of the Internet, and two books.

Thank you,
Paul
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/

-

wild life rifle fire:
@ http://bit.ly/b4O4Wx ...A Bunch Books says, â€œThe effect is shocking... an important book.â€

jambandbootleg:
@ http://bit.ly/afDDcH ...news at Dorothee Langâ€™s DAILY s-PRESS

↑ Index

63. K. R. Waldrop
2 new Burning Deck books
Wed 7 Apr 2010

---

2 new books from Burning Deck now available from www.burningdeck.com, www.spdbooks.org, and in Europe: www.audiatur.no/Bokhandel

1. Jane Unrue
LIFE OF A STAR
Novella, 112 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN13: 978-1-936194-00-1, original paperback $14

A woman's life lived as a carefully crafted and rehearsed engagement with a real and imagined world; a search for love and meaning that has left her, in the end, alone. Unrue's intricate and intriguing sentences — now one word, now comprising whole paragraphs and interrupting one another — manage to fuse detachment and emotion, heartbreak and humor. Jane Unrue, born in Nevada, now lives in Boston and teaches at Harvard. Her novella THE HOUSE was published by Burning Deck in 2000; her collection ATLASSED, by Triple Press in 2005.

"Quietly plumbing the intimacies of architecture, landscape, and domesticity, Unrue's debut, THE HOUSE… accrue[s] a subtly disarming power as the speaker investigates her domestic environment from a wide array of perspectives, including the intergalactic.… Unrue successfully forges an evocative approach that could be seen as metacubist in its dizzying, varied takes of the familiar world."— Publishers Weekly

2. Jennifer Martenson
UNSOUND
Poetry, 64 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN13: 978-1-936194-01-8, original paperback $14

Poem-landscapes in which abstract concepts have the presence and force of physical objects. The focus is on dissonance, whether between perception and received ideas, between feelings and convention, between lesbian identity and social prejudice, or between the desire to make the world orderly, intelligible, and finding the systems for doing so wanting. Jennifer Martenson was born in Seattle, and has lived in Chicago and, now, Providence, RI. UNSOUND is her first full book.

"Concise, extraordinarily thoughtful, often challenging, and sometimes sexy, Martenson's debut could find admirers far beyond the East Coast avant-garde that seems its natural home. She's certainly a thinker, and her strongest sentences ask how thoughts—her own, but also society's stereotypes—at once create and interfere with apparently natural, visceral pleasure and pain…

Honesty and desire (especially lesbian desire) are hard to consider apart from received ideas, but impossible to portray accurately within them: often abstract, sometimes typographically odd, the couplets and prose poems strain against the dilemma they portray, while never failing (once you look hard) to make sense.”-- Publishers Weekly (2/22/2010)

↑ Index

64. skyplums
Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Wed 7 Apr 2010

---

here here gerald shadows husbands etc all great i think in shadows which was his first (?) he used some mingus music- chinese bookie even his last film opening night wow and his wife gena rowlands from woman to that one wow again

---------- Original Message ----------
From: Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Date: Wed, 7 Apr 2010 10:30:59 -0400

Murat,

Cassavetes' neo-realism began long before W.U.T.I. and it began parallel to the French new wave-- with "Shadows" (56-59)... and was inspired by "La Tera Trema," "I Vitelloni," "Umberto D.," and "Bellissima".

He (like those) was not afraid to face reality; to look it straight in the face.

Godard would later follow.

I have often wondered if there has (or will be) a poetry (or poetics) that would approach his achievement, both in style and substance... and improvization.

Any examples?

Till then,
Gerald

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites - Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog
>
> poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/
>
> including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
> now surfacing in an acceptable state.
>
> I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:
>
> http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

> Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.
>
> GQ
>
> George Quasha
> www.quasha.com
> www.baumgartnergallery.net
> www.stationhill.org
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

65. Alan Sondheim

Re: 25 Questions: # 5

Thu 8 Apr 2010

Everything is as relevant as everything else. Again this implies canon/genre/conoisseurship. I hear Silliman writes long. Some like short Wordsworth (he was only 4' 8" - think of it).

- Alan

On Wed, 7 Apr 2010, Gerald Schwartz wrote:

> 25 Questions, # 5:
>
> Is the long poem still relevant or is it just a museum?
>
> Gerald Schwartz

==
email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
webpage http://www.alansondheim.org sondheimat gmail.com, panix.com
==

↑ Index

66. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

Thu 8 Apr 2010

Gerald,

Well, that's what I am trying to do in my work. That's why I was so taken with it. You may be right about the dates, but this movie has a roughness in terms of technique- which nearer I think to what Godard means by "bad cinema." What are the dates of My Life to Live or Band of Outsiders? Cassavetes's film was made in 1972.

Maria, A Woman Under the Influence is not about alcoholism though the title may suggest that. It deals with a woman's eccentric behavior which can be taken as insanity, but which Cassavets insists it is not, but the result of the rules of a society which will not let her be fully who she is. Gena Rawlands, Peter Falk and the kids are something to see.

Many people in the film are family members. Rawland's mother plays her mother, Cassaveteses's mother plays Falk's mother.

The film has absolutely stunning things in it. For example, a spaghetti brealfast with about ten people around a table suddenly has two characters suddenly starting to burst into arias, in one case the person does not know the words... Wow!

Worth a revisit.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 10:30 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>wrote:

> Murat,
>
> Cassavetes' neo-realism began long before W.U.T.I. and it began parallel to the French new wave-- with "Shadows" (56-59)... and was inspired by "La Tera Trema," "I Vitelloni," "Umberto D.," and "Bellissima".
>
> He (like those) was not afraid to face reality; to look it straight in the face.
>
> Godard would later follow.
>
> I have often wondered if there has (or will be) a poetry (or poetics) that would > approach his achievement, both in style and substance... and improvization.
>
> Any examples?

Till then,
Gerald

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

> On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
> wrote:
>
> Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog
>
> poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/
>
> including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
> now surfacing in an acceptable state.
>
> I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:
>
> http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems
>
> Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.
>
> GQ
>
> George Quasha
> www.quasha.com
> www.baumgartnergallery.net
> www.stationhill.org
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

67. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: 25 Questions: # 5

Thu 8 Apr 2010

Relevant, relevant. Nothing but. What is a short poem?

Murat

(By the way, Maria, I think Cassavetes's Opening Night is about alcoholism (about an alcoholic great actresses' opening night in a play.)

On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 10:07 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>wrote:

> 25 Questions, # 5:
>
> Is the long poem still relevant or is it just a museum?
>
> Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

68. Pam Brown

Wanted - Reviewers for two Australian poetry books for Jacket Magazine

Thu 8 Apr 2010

Dear Poeticists,

Please contact me at [redacted] if you'd like to review either of these interesting new titles :

A Whistled Bit Of Bop - poems by Ken Bolton
PRICE Austn $27.50 * Vagabond Press

Ken Bolton's A Whistled Bit of Bop begins and ends with poems that embrace the abstract via collage - working with pre-existing materials, the initial selection often arbitrary. Thus 'Double Trouble' deals with time and timing, art, friendship; closing the collection, 'Triumvirate' works similarly but in a context that is political and historical. Bolton acknowledges parts of a particular pantheon (F.T. Prince, Tony Towle, Peter Schjeldahl, Ashbery, Berrigan, John Forbes) in the sequence 'Late Night Reading', which tips from satire to elegy and out again, while 'Some Photos for Gabe' takes the form of a letter, wondering at the recipient's life in London and meditating on two images of domestic life in Australia. In a different register, 'Australian Suburban Garden' is spun out of the 'everyday' - art, time, Europe. Some poems are amusing tours de force, others are like spells. "The light changed? Must have."

published by Vagabond Press -
http://www.vagabondpress.net/Vagabond_Press/Vagabond.html

Dark Bright Doors - poems by Jill Jones
Price Austn $19.95 * Wakefield Press

Jill Jones' sixth book, raises questions of the self, as well as the ecology of place and language. This is Jones at her most versatile and idiosyncratic, at times a little wild and dark. The poems are intimate, sharp, self-critical and very present.

Published by Wakefield Press - http://www.wakefieldpress.com.au/books/darkbrightdoors.html

All the best from Pam

---

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

↑ Index

69. J.P. Craig
Re: 25 Questions: # 5
Thu 8 Apr 2010

What is meant here by long poem? Does serial poetry count?

Muse & Drudge, a collection or a long poem? Either way, relevant to me as an example of what play with language can teach.

Song of the Andoumboulou, I'd say is relevant, in its cross-culturality.

Silliman's The Alphabet?

Frank Stanford's The Battlefield Where the Moon Says I Love You seems relevant to me as an exploration of the South at a particular moment and as an attempt to make something lyrical from a sort of patchwork of peoples, from a patchwork segregated culture.

Hejinian's My Life is often used to introduce students to Language writing. And is itself a thought-provoking example of how process can enter into (intervene in?) life writing.

I feel like I'm giving this question more than it gave me. Unless somebody brings more to this stone soup, I'm whistling in the wind.

JP

On Apr 7, 2010, at 10:07 AM, Gerald Schwartz wrote:

> 25 Questions, # 5:
>
> Is the long poem still relevant or is it just a museum?

> Gerald Schwartz

JP Craig
http://jpcraig.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

70. Rob McLennan
Marcus McCann on Nicholas Lea
Thu 8 Apr 2010

Ottawa/Toronto poet Marcus McCann on Ottawa poet Nicholas Lea in the Globe & Mail books blog;

http://www.theglobeandmail.com/books/in-other-words/poetry-month-marcus-mccann-on-nicholas-lea/article1527667/

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

71. CA Conrad HERETICAL
Thu 8 Apr 2010

Factory School published HERETICAL TEXT

the only time authors of all 5 books will be reading together is this Saturday details here: http://events4cri.blogspot.com/

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

72. skyplums
Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Thu 8 Apr 2010

---

both goddard films mentioned are much earlier band one of his first
i saw woman when it first came out at waverly theater
lovced it then and now under the influence of her lir life her insanity

her husband's dominance her role as a house wife
one thing that struck me when i first saw it was that i felt tho i knew falk etc that i was in a real situation
i was still young grew up working class etc
but what also struck me due to cassavettes approach
it was the first film in which i saw the boom mike hanging over the actors
i believe in a kitchen scene - sadly that detracted from me at the time and i always wondered if if were an accident which due to budgeting
i'm sure it was ....bad cinema so diff from grade A films made with less than grade B budgets
tho in art terms BAD CINEMA has a diff connotation BAD in several ways
purposely purposefully BAD

---------- Original Message ----------
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Date: Thu, 8 Apr 2010 00:32:05 -0400

Gerald,

Well, that's what I am trying to do in my work. That's why I was so taken with it. You may be right about the dates, but this movie has a roughness in terms of technique- which nearer I think to what Godard means by "bad cinema." What are the dates of My Life to Live or Band of Outsiders? Cassavetes's film was made in 1972.

Maria, A Woman Under the Influence is not about alcoholism though the title may suggest that. It deals with a woman's eccentric behavior which can be taken as insanity, but which Cassavets insists it is not, but the result of the rules of a society which will not let her be fully who she is. Gena Rawlands, Peter Falk and the kids are something to see.

Many people in the film are family members. Rawland's mother plays her mother, Cassaveteses's mother plays Falk's mother.

The film has absolutely stunning things in it. For example, a spaghetti brealfast with about ten people around a table suddenly has two characters suddenly starting to burst into arias, in one case the person does not know the words... Wow!

Worth a revisit.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 10:30 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>wrote:

Murat,

Cassavetes' neo-realism began long before W.U.T.I. and it began parallel to the French new wave-- with "Shadows" (56-59)... and was inspired by "La Tera Trema," "I Vitelloni," "Umberto D.," and "Bellissima".

He (like those) was not afraid to face reality; to look it straight in the face.

Godard would later follow.

I have often wondered if there has (or will be) a poetry (or poetics) that would approach his achievement, both in style and substance... and improvization.

Any examples?

Till then,
Gerald

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
now surfacing in an acceptable state.

I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

GQ

George Quasha
www.quasha.com
www.baumgartnergallery.net
www.stationhill.org

> guidelines

↑ Index

73. Adam Fieled

Pennsound Apps: Two Final Installments

Thu 8 Apr 2010

I'm totally thrilled to have two final installments of Apps on Pennsound:

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Fieled.php

Many thanks, as always, to Michael Hennessey and the rest of the Pennsound folks.

Adam

↑ Index

74. Poetry Project

Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 8 Apr 2010

Friday, April 9, 10 PM
Joey Yearous-Algozin & Divya Victor

Joey Yearous-Algozin is the author of Kensington Notebook (Lean-To Press) and BOSTON STREET/TREES (Lean-To Press). His poetry has appeared or is forthcoming from Cannot Exist, Forage, and the Robert Walser Society of Massachusetts. He is currently a PhD student in Poetics at SUNY-Buffalo.

Divya Victor has lived and learned in India, Singapore, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Seattle. She has an M.A. from Temple University and is currently working towards her Ph.D. at the University at Buffalo. Her work has appeared in ambit, XConnect, The Ixnay Reader, dusie, President¹s Choice, P-QUEUE, and Drunken Boat. Her chapbook SUTURES was just published by Little Red Leaves.

Monday, April 12, 8 PM
Brett Evans & Mike Hauser

Brett Evans recent books include Slosh Models (Factory School, 2009) and (with Frank Sherlock) Ready-to-Eat Individual (Lavender Ink, 2007). He is currently looking for a kind publisher to release a special 20-year collector¹s edition of Horse Pills. He is one of the founding members of New Orleans¹ only carnival microkrewe, Œtit rex.

Mike Hauser lives in Milwaukee. His books include crets crets crets, and Psychic Headset. His work has appeared in Sprung Formal, Abraham Lincoln, The Hat, Rust Buckle, The Blue Canary, and Fell Swoop, among other fine publications. He is editing an issue of the Milwaukee magazine Burdock, which is published by Keith Gaustad. He co-curates a reading series called Salacious Banter with Karl Saffran.

Wednesday, April 14, 8 PM
Miles Champion & Jennifer Moxley

Miles Champion¹s books include Compositional Bonbons Placate, Sore Models, Three Bell Zero and How to Laugh (forthcoming from Adventures in Poetry). Providence, an artist¹s book in collaboration with Jane South, was published by Sienese Shredder Editions in 2008. His recent writing appears in American Book Review, Critical Quarterly, Mimeo Mimeo, PN Review and The Poetry Project Newsletter. He lives in Brooklyn.

Jennifer Moxley is the author of five books of poetry: Clampdown (Flood 2009), The Line (Post-Apollo 2007), Often Capital (Flood 2005), The Sense Record (Edge 2002; Salt 2003) and Imagination Verses (Tender Buttons 1996; Salt 2003). Her memoir The Middle Room was published by Subpress in 2007. She has translated two books by the French poet Jacqueline Risset, The Translation Begins (Burning Deck 1996) and Sleep¹s Powers (Ugly Duckling 2008). She is poetry editor of The Baffler, and contributing editor of The Poker. She works as an Associate Professor at the University of Maine.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

75. Margaret Konkol

S M A L L P R E S S in the A R C H I V E Margaret Konkol

Thu 8 Apr 2010

++

Please mark your calendars for this coming Monday, April 12th @ 2:00 pm for another Small Press in the Archive lecture: "Nature in N-Dimensions."

This talk will be held in The Poetry Collection, 420 Capen @ SUNY Buffalo. This event is free and open to the public.

Small Press in the Archive Lecture Series dedicates itself to the study of poetry outside the traditional literary historical plot. The lectures in this series draw on materials in The Poetry Collection, at SUNY Buffalo in order to explore community/discourse formations, the status of ephemera and the making of genre, the conditions of literary production, transatlantic cross-pollinations in and between specific magazines, the careers of poets, the role of book art, and how the little magazine functions in the making of the avant-garde.

↑ Index

76. derek beaulieu

new from NO press: Eric Zboya's Algorithmic translation of UN COUP DE DES

Thu 8 Apr 2010

NO press is pleased to announce the publication of

UN COUP DE DES JAMIAS N'ABOLIRA LE HASARD (vecteur)

by

Eric Zboya

Like the translations of Un Coup de dés by Marcel Broodthaers, Michael Maranda, Guido Molinari, and Michalis Pichler (all of whom emphasize the spatial quality of the text itself), my response attempts to expose the higher-dimensional motifs found within the original text by Mallarmé-but unlike my predecessors, my translation uses graphic imaging software to add an element of dimensionality to the text by reconfiguring and redesigning each page as a non-Euclidean entity. Through a series of algorithmic calculations, the computer program extrudes a sequence of abstract images based upon the original positions of the type on the page. Within the cyberspace continuum, these abstract Mallarméan images possess an array of spatial properties that allow for each entity to be viewed from all angles in a more volumetric space. In the end, the result quite literally showcases a three-dimensional, computer-generated translation that physically upholds the spatial lattice suggested by the text's structure, while semantically retaining the text's abstract, higher-dimensional concepts.

-- Eric Zboya, from the afterward to "Un Coup de Des..."

32 pages, sewn binding.
published in an edition of 40 copies (20 of which are for sale)
$5 each.

for more information, or to order copies, please email:

derek beaulieu
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

77. Scott Hamilton
UK tabloid editor in shock poetry scandal
Thu 8 Apr 2010

---

http://books.scoop.co.nz/2010/04/06/2148/

↑ Index

78. Pam Brown
Thanks once again - Jacket has reviewers for Aussie titles
Fri 9 Apr 2010

Dear Poeticists,

Thanks once again for your responses. Too good. Too kind.

Jacket has reviewers for Ken Bolton's & Jill Jones' new poetry books.

Very best from Pam

--

_____

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

_____

↑ Index

79. Bob Heman

Lydia Cortes, Bob Heman & George Spencer will read next Thursday at Space on White

Fri 9 Apr 2010

Hi folks, this is just to let you know that I'll be featuring next thursday, April 15, with Lydia Cortes and George Spencer at Space on White, as part Evie Ivy and Jack Tricarico's new reading series, Poets on White.

The reading will start at 7:00 and there will also be an open mic. I expect to be reading from my Dr. Cone series, along with a few surprises.

Space on White is a new performance space located at 81 White St. between Broadway and Lafayette a couple of blocks below Canal St. Any train that stops on Canal St. will you leave you close by, including the R, the N, the M, the J and the 6, and a little farther away the A and the E.

I hope to see you all there.

- Bob

Bob Heman
[redacted]
EarthLink Revolves Around You.

↑ Index

80. Regina Pinto

This is visual poetry

Fri 9 Apr 2010

Hello all,

Maybe you already know this project by Dan Waber: "This is Visual Poetry"
What you do not know is that now I have a chapbook there:

http://thisisvisualpoetry.com/

Go down to find my chapbook, it has my latest series "Roads" and, participate too!

Best regards,
Regina

↑ Index

81. Justin Katko
Glossator 2: on the poems of J.H. Prynne
Fri 9 Apr 2010

Announcing ----- Ten new commentaries on the poetry of J.H. Prynne are now available as PDFs from Glossator 2, edited by Ryan Dobran, here: http://ojs.gc.cuny.edu/index.php/glossator/issue/current. It will soon be available as a print volume through Amazon.

↑ Index

82. Jules Boykoff
Buuck/Hardacker/Kemp in Portland, Oregon--Sat. 10 April
Fri 9 Apr 2010

Tangent is thrilled to host a multi-media poetry event on SATURDAY, 10 APRIL at 7 PM. Bay Area poet and interventionary artist DAVID BUUCK will perform, as will ARNOLD J. KEMP, a poet and visual artist who heads the Master in Fine Arts program at Pacific Northwest College of Art in Portland. Local filmmaker JENNIFER HARDACKER will also screen her work. The event will take place at our usual spot, the Clinton Corner Cafe in SE Portland. Admission is free.

Tangent presents:
DAVID BUUCK, JENNIFER HARDACKER, & ARNOLD J. KEMP
SATURDAY, APRIL 10 at 7 PM
Clinton Corner Cafe, 2633 SE 21st Ave. (@ Clinton) Portland, Oregon
www.thetangentpress.org/readings.html

DAVID BUUCK is the author of The Shunt (Palm Press, 2009) and numerous small-press chapbooks and pamphlets. He is the founder of BARGE (the Bay Area Research Group in Enviro-aesthetics), and teaches at Mills and Bard Colleges. He lives in Oakland, California. For more information about him and his work, see: http://buuckbarge.wordpress.com/ and davidbuuck.com/barge

JENNIFER HARDACKER is is an experimental short film/video maker and educator. She has been making films and videos for over 13 years and her films have screened widely in festivals across the US. Her films are often personal in nature and are interested in re-imaging and re-imagining the meaning and context of images. Currently, Hardacker teaches film/video studies and production at Pacific University in Oregon. Prior to life in the Northwest, she taught film at the University of Michigan and The New School University in New York City. She also spent time working professionally in New York as an editor and assistant editor of television commercials, short films and music videos.

ARNOLD J. KEMP was recently named Chair of the Master in Fine Arts in Visual Studies Program at Pacific Northwest College of Art. He's received awards from Printed Matter, Art Matters, the Joan Mitchell Foundation, Pollock-Krasner Fouundation, and Artadia Fund for Art. His works are in the collections of the Studio Museum in Harlem. Kemp's poetry and prose has appeared in Callaloo, Three Rivers Poetry Journal, Agni Review, Mirage#4 Period(ical), River Styx, Nocturnes, and Art Journal. In 2005 and 2007 Small Press Traffic commissioned two of his plays/performances for the San Francisco Poets Theater. Kemp is preparing chapbooks forthcoming from Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs and Publication Studios. He lives in Portland.

↑ Index

83. J.P. Craig
Re: UK tabloid editor in shock poetry scandal
Fri 9 Apr 2010

On Newspeak, you may want to check out the wikipedia entry on Basic English. BE influenced Orwell. I don't see reference there to Basic English's use as part of US Cold War efforts to build a capitalist bloc, but it was.

Ogden was interestingly connected to the Heretic's society. There's more on this in Damon Franke's Modernist Heresies.

On Apr 8, 2010, at 9:44 PM, Scott Hamilton wrote:

> http://books.scoop.co.nz/2010/04/06/2148/

JP Craig
http://jpcraig.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

84. cranesbill
Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Fri 9 Apr 2010

I don't have it in front of me, but I think Ray Carney writes at length in his Cassavetes book about such "mistakes", particularly as they occur in my own particular favorite, Killing of a Chinese Bookie. Jeffrey

----- Original Message -----
From: "[redacted]" <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, April 8, 2010 12:11:17 PM GMT -07:00 US/Canada Mountain
Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

both goddard films mentioned are much earlier band one of his first
i saw woman when it first came out at waverly theater
lovced it then and now under the influence of her lir life her insanity
her husband's dominance her role as a house wife
one thing that struck me when i first saw it was that i felt tho i knew falk etc that i was in a real situation
i was still young grew up working class etc
but what also struck me due to cassavettes approach
it was the first film in which i saw the boom mike hanging over the actors
i believe in a kitchen scene - sadly that detracted from me at the time and i always wondered if if were an accident which due to budgeting
i'm sure it was ....bad cinema so diff from grade A films made with less than grade B budgets
tho in art terms BAD CINEMA has a diff connotation BAD in several ways
purposely purposefully BAD

---------- Original Message ----------
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Date: Thu, 8 Apr 2010 00:32:05 -0400

Gerald,

Well, that's what I am trying to do in my work. That's why I was so taken with it. You may be right about the dates, but this movie has a roughness in terms of technique- which nearer I think to what Godard means by "bad cinema." What are the dates of My Life to Live or Band of Outsiders? Cassavetes's film was made in 1972.

Maria, A Woman Under the Influence is not about alcoholism though the title may suggest that. It deals with a woman's eccentric behavior which can be taken as insanity, but which Cassavets insists it is not, but the result of the rules of a society which will not let her be fully who she is. Gena Rawlands, Peter Falk and the kids are something to see.

Many people in the film are family members. Rawland's mother plays her mother, Cassaveteses's mother plays Falk's mother.

The film has absolutely stunning things in it. For example, a spaghetti brealfast with about ten people around a table suddenly has two characters suddenly starting to burst into arias, in one case the person does not know the words... Wow!

Worth a revisit.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 10:30 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]>wrote:

> Murat,
>
> Cassavetes' neo-realism began long before W.U.T.I. and it began parallel to the French new wave-- with "Shadows" (56-59)... and was inspired by "La Tera Trema," "I Vitelloni," "Umberto D.," and "Bellissima".
>
> He (like those) was not afraid to face reality; to look it straight in the face.
>
> Godard would later follow.
>
> I have often wondered if there has (or will be) a poetry (or poetics) that would > approach his achievement, both in style and substance... and improvization.
>
> Any examples?
>
> Till then,
> Gerald
>
> I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see > how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film VeritÃ©. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film VeritÃ© works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity
> nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
now surfacing in an acceptable state.

I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

> GQ
>
> George Quasha
> www.quasha.com
> www.baumgartnergallery.net
> www.stationhill.org
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

85. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

Fri 9 Apr 2010

i did not think it was intentional, but Cassevetes didn't care. he knew he was hiring people with very little experience and that things like that would happen (occasionally, characters walk off the frame); but he felt their lack of experience gave the scene an edginess -provided people worked very hard- and the trade-off was worth it for him. That is what I mean by "bad cinema" -not intentionally bad -which perhaps the French New Wave thought, or perhaps not- but bad as a trade-off, a necessary step to achieve the rawness. It is part -an integral part- of a process. In that way, it is more akin to mistakes which may occur in a live t.v. comedy show, for instance, or improvisational jazz.

Interesting, you saw Falk's position within the family as dominance; I experienced it more as protective of her, suddenly putting down the clamp on her when certain limits are crossed (for example, in the spaghetti breakfast scene when she is touching the black guy, urging him to sing, and he is feeling uncomfortable). He does tell her later that he knew "she didn't mean anything by it," that it was her affectionate nature; but the guy didn't. I thought there was love, a lot of affection, a gentleness between the two. Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Apr 8, 2010 at 2:11 PM, [redacted] <[redacted]> wrote:

> both goddard films mentioned are much earlier band one of his first
> i saw woman when it first came out at waverly theater
> lovced it then and now under the influence of her lir life her insanity
> her husband's dominance her role as a house wife

one thing that struck me when i first saw it was that i felt tho i knew falk etc that i was in a real situation
i was still young grew up working class etc
but what also struck me due to cassavettes approach
it was the first film in which i saw the boom mike hanging over the actors
i believe in a kitchen scene - sadly that detracted from me at the time and i always wondered if if were an accident which due to budgeting
i'm sure it was ....bad cinema so diff from grade A films made with less than grade B budgets
tho in art terms BAD CINEMA has a diff connotation BAD in several ways
purposely purposefully BAD

---------- Original Message ----------
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Date: Thu, 8 Apr 2010 00:32:05 -0400

Gerald,

Well, that's what I am trying to do in my work. That's why I was so taken with it. You may be right about the dates, but this movie has a roughness
in terms of technique- which nearer I think to what Godard means by "bad cinema." What are the dates of My Life to Live or Band of Outsiders?
Cassavetes's film was made in 1972.

Maria, A Woman Under the Influence is not about alcoholism though the title may suggest that. It deals with a woman's eccentric behavior which can be taken as insanity, but which Cassavets insists it is not, but the result of the rules of a society which will not let her be fully who she is. Gena Rawlands, Peter Falk and the kids are something to see.

Many people in the film are family members. Rawland's mother plays her mother, Cassaveteses's mother plays Falk's mother.

The film has absolutely stunning things in it. For example, a spaghetti brealfast with about ten people around a table suddenly has two characters suddenly starting to burst into arias, in one case the person does not know the words... Wow!

Worth a revisit.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 10:30 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]
wrote:

Murat,

Cassavetes' neo-realism began long before W.U.T.I. and it began parallel to the French new wave-- with "Shadows" (56-59)... and was inspired by "La Tera Trema," "I Vitelloni," "Umberto D.," and "Bellissima".

He (like those) was not afraid to face reality; to look it straight in the face.

Godard would later follow.

I have often wondered if there has (or will be) a poetry (or poetics) that would approach his achievement, both in style and substance... and improvization.

Any examples?

Till then,
Gerald

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches
one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted] wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for > Themselves" on his blog

>
> poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/
>
> including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
> now surfacing in an acceptable state.
>
> I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might
> go to:
>
> http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems
>
> Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.
>
> GQ
>
> George Quasha
> www.quasha.com
> www.baumgartnergallery.net
> www.stationhill.org
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
> guidelines

↑ Index

86. Dan Wilcox

Third Thursday Poetry Night, April 15: Paul Pines

Fri 9 Apr 2010

---

the Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Third Thursday Poetry Night

at
the Social Justice Center
33 Central Ave., Albany, NY

Thursday, April 15
7:00 sign up; 7:30 start

Featured Poet: Paul Pines

& the official unofficial start of Albany WordFest 2010!

-- with an open mic for community poets before & after the feature: $3.00 donation, suggested; more if you got it, less if you can't.

Your jazzy, poetic host: Dan Wilcox.

Paul Pines is the author of two novels, The Tin Angel (Morrow, '83), and Redemption (Rocher, '97). My Brother's Madness (Curbstone, '07), a memoir, enjoyed wide critical acclaim. Pines' seven books of poetry are: Onion, Hotel Madden Poems, Pines Songs, Breath, Adrift on Blinding Light, Taxidancing and Last Call at the Tin Palace. He lives in Glens Falls, New York, where he practices as a psychotherapist and hosts the Lake George Jazz Weekend.

* * *

ART OF MEMORY

— for Hilton Ruiz

Driving from the airport to New Orleans

on a May evening
the silence that comes after so many notes light suspended

in the southern sky like fire in a river mind reflecting on itself the unheard music of dusk melting into jungle from which a single chord is struck somewhere

a freighter slips coastwise

from the delta into the Gulf

* * *

↑ Index

87. Dan Wilcox
Albany WordFest Update
Fri 9 Apr 2010

We are just eight short days away from the biggest poetry and spoken word event in New York's Capital Region. Here is an update on Word Fest weekend and who is scheduled to perform.

In celebration of National Poetry Month, Albany Poets is proud to present the 2010 Albany Word Fest featuring the poetry, spoken word, and music of upstate New York. This year's event will take place on Friday, April 16 and Saturday, April 17, 2010 at the UAG Gallery (247 Lark Street, Albany, NY).

The 2010 Albany Word Fest will start off on Friday evening with a very special Youth Open Mic at 5:00PM. This is a chance for all of the young poets and performers of the area to share their work. All poets who wish to participate in this open mic can sign up at the gallery.

At 7:00PM, the 12-Hour Open Mic begins. After the success of the first night long open mic last year, we have decided to do it again. This open mic for poetry and spoken word will be held from 7:00PM – 7:00AM.

Poets who wish to participate in the open mic can sign up online by going to the Albany Word Fest website, www.albanywordfest.com until April 15. Poets will also be able to sign up at Professor Java's Wide Open Mic on Monday, April 12.

Thom Francis, President of Albany Poets explains, "The first Albany Word Fest was held in 2001 in Thatcher Park. It featured poets from all over the upstate area sharing their words all day and into the evening in a beautiful outdoor setting. Through all of the Word Fests since then, we have kept the same idea in mind; invite the poets and spoken word artists from all over the capital region and beyond to share their words and show that 'poetry lives in Albany'."

This year we have a great list of new poets and poets who have been a part of the local literary community for years. Artists and poets already scheduled to perform include Jan Tramontano, Judith Prest, Erica Wolfe, Justin Miller, ILLiptical, Cecele Kraus, Poets from the Hudson Valley Writers Guild, Todd Fabozzi, John Raymond, Jacqueline Renee Ahl, Carol Graser, Barbara Garro, Jason Crane, Tim Verhaegen, Joe Hesch, Matt Galletta, Joanne Trapanese, Nancy Denofio, Cheryl A. Rice, Julie Lomoe, Robb Smith, Karin Maag-Tanchak, Adarro Minton, Tess Lecuyer, Bob Sharkey, Jacqueline Kirkpatrick, Shannon Lynette, Robert Eaton, Shannon Shoemaker, Therese Broderick, R.M. Engelhardt, Christopher James, Justin Parrinello, Robert Milby, Christopher "Pinky" Gazeent, The Poet Essence, Shaun Baxter, Joe Hollander, Adrianna Delgado, Anthony Bernini, AVERY, Carli McCoy, Dan Wilcox, W.D. Clarke, and Don Levy. The open mic is open to all poets and spoken word artists with no style or content restrictions. Admission is based on donation.

On Saturday at 8:00PM, day two of the 2010 Albany Word Fest brings the annual Psycho Cluster F*#k to the UAG Gallery featuring poetry, music and spoken word from Rebecca Schumejda, Nathan Graziano, The Johnnie Bravehearts, Ed Rinaldi, Murrow, Ms. Bliss, Q Diamond, Eloquence, Poetyc Vyzyonz, Sunshine, Souljourner Truth, and more. Admission for this event is $5.00. This event is open to all ages.

Again this year, Albany Poets will be streaming the whole two day event live onwww.albanypoets.com for all of those who are not able to make it to the UAG Gallery to be in the audience.

The 2010 Albany Word Fest is sponsored by Albany Poets, Tess' Lark Tavern, UAG Gallery, and the very generous donations of supporters of the arts in upstate New York.

For more information, up-to-date event news, open mic sign up, flyers, handouts and more, go to www.albanywordfest.com

Schedule of Events:
Friday, April 16
5:00PM – Youth Open Mic at UAG Gallery (247 Lark St., Albany)
7:00PM – 12-Hour Friday Night Open Mic at UAG Gallery (247 Lark St., Albany)

Saturday, April 17
8:00PM – Psycho Cluster F#*k at UAG Gallery (247 Lark St., Albany)

↑ Index

88. Anny Ballardini

Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

Fri 9 Apr 2010

It seems that the entire movie is on YouTube, if you wish to watch some scenes. I went back to see some parts since I had almost forgotten it. It is a movie that touches hard. She acts out what people are not supposed to say, probably not even think if they do not want to cross the borderline.

On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 2:26 PM, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:

i saw this movie in college. i had no idea about any kind of experimental film. it had a deep effect on me.
i've never forgotten it, though of course i've forgotten many specifics. and i had no idea at the time that it was about alcoholism.

Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of

panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
now surfacing in an acceptable state.

I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

GQ

George Quasha
www.quasha.com
www.baumgartnergallery.net
www.stationhill.org

guidelines

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

89. nieuwland jeroen

Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

Fri 9 Apr 2010

Had not yet seen it, but watched it yesterday. Beautiful movie

Had not yet seen it, but watched it yesterday. Beautiful movie, thanks for mentioning it (although forget now what the original reason was).

I also felt the relationship was very close. But Falk's character is also damned awkwardly masculine, unable very well to be gentle. Am thinking for example about the welcome-back party for Rowlands' character. All she needed was space and for everyone to get out but Falk insists on having 'fun', and 'normal conversation'. Think it was an endearing inability to handle the situation, but not one that is helping his wife.

Another interesting moment is when she asks him if he loves her and he only mumbles. Is that because he loves her so much he can't speak or is it because he is not sure anymore because of the whole history, or maybe because he is no longer sure who she is?

(Also funny, and very moving at the same time - although a bit of an undeveloped sub-plot-thing going on there - is when she tells her father to stand up for her and he physically gets up from his chair)

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, April 9, 2010 8:41:50 PM
Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

i did not think it was intentional, but Cassevetes didn't care. he knew he was hiring people with very little experience and that things like that would happen (occasionally, characters walk off the frame); but he felt their lack of experience gave the scene an edginess -provided people worked very hard- and the trade-off was worth it for him. That is what I mean by "bad cinema" -not intentionally bad -which perhaps the French New Wave thought, or perhaps not- but bad as a trade-off, a necessary step to achieve the rawness. It is part -an integral part- of a process. In that way, it is more akin to mistakes which may occur in a live t.v. comedy show, for instance, or improvisational jazz.

Interesting, you saw Falk's position within the family as dominance; I experienced it more as protective of her, suddenly putting down the clamp on her when certain limits are crossed (for example, in the spaghetti breakfast scene when she is touching the black guy, urging him to sing, and he is feeling uncomfortable). He does tell her later that he knew "she didn't mean anything by it," that it was her affectionate nature; but the guy didn't. I thought there was love, a lot of affection, a gentleness between the two. Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Apr 8, 2010 at 2:11 PM, [redacted] <[redacted]> wrote:

> both goddard films mentioned are much earlier band one of his first
> i saw woman when it first came out at waverly theater
> lovced it then and now under the influence of her lir life her insanity
> her husband's dominance her role as a house wife
> one thing that struck me when i first saw it > was that i felt tho i knew falk etc that i was in a real situation
> i was still young grew up working class etc
> but what also struck me due to cassavettes approach
> it was the first film in which i saw the boom mike hanging over the actors
> i believe in a kitchen scene - sadly that detracted from me at the time > and i always wondered if if were an accident which due to budgeting
> i'm sure it was ....bad cinema so diff from grade A films made with less
> than grade B budgets
> tho in art terms BAD CINEMA has a diff connotation BAD in several ways > purposely purposefully BAD
>
> ---------- Original Message ----------
> From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Date: Thu, 8 Apr 2010 00:32:05 -0400

Gerald,

Well, that's what I am trying to do in my work. That's why I was so taken with it. You may be right about the dates, but this movie has a roughness in terms of technique- which nearer I think to what Godard means by "bad cinema." What are the dates of My Life to Live or Band of Outsiders? Cassavetes's film was made in 1972.

Maria, A Woman Under the Influence is not about alcoholism though the title may suggest that. It deals with a woman's eccentric behavior which can be taken as insanity, but which Cassavets insists it is not, but the result of the rules of a society which will not let her be fully who she is. Gena Rawlands, Peter Falk and the kids are something to see.

Many people in the film are family members. Rawland's mother plays her mother, Cassaveteses's mother plays Falk's mother.

The film has absolutely stunning things in it. For example, a spaghetti brealfast with about ten people around a table suddenly has two characters suddenly starting to burst into arias, in one case the person does not know the words... Wow!

Worth a revisit.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 10:30 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]
wrote:

Murat,

Cassavetes' neo-realism began long before W.U.T.I. and it began parallel to the French new wave-- with "Shadows" (56-59)... and was inspired by "La Tera Trema," "I Vitelloni," "Umberto D.," and "Bellissima".

He (like those) was not afraid to face reality; to look it straight in the face.

Godard would later follow.

I have often wondered if there has (or will be) a poetry (or poetics) that would approach his achievement, both in style and substance... and improvization.

Any examples?

Till then,
Gerald

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did

*not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same
scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies
to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not
shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.*

*The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena
Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed
by
the reality of her situation.*

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
wrote:

*Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done
for Themselves" on his blog*

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

*including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief
intro to a 12 year project,
now surfacing in an acceptable state.*

*I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might
go to:*

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

> GQ
>
> George Quasha
> www.quasha.com
> www.baumgartnergallery.net
> www.stationhill.org
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
> guidelines

↑ Index

90. Pam Brown

Pam Brown's AUTHENTIC LOCAL published by soi 3 modern poets

Sat 10 Apr 2010

---

soi 3 modern poets, an imprint of papertiger media, presents

AUTHENTIC LOCAL
a new collection of poems by Pam Brown

Visit these sites for more information :

http://thedeletions.blogspot.com/

http://www.papertigermedia.com/soi3-modern-poets/pam-brown.html

---

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

↑ Index

91. Randolph Healy

New from Wild Honey Press: Into Thick Hair by Ian Davidson

Sat 10 Apr 2010

I'm very happy to say that "Into Thick Hair", a chapbook by Ian Davidson, is now available from Wild Honey Press.

Phrases are knitted, unpicked, reknitted, in a sequence pitting tension against gravity, plain against purl, lovingly crafted and full of holes that the sun shines through.

Price zero, though you are welcome to make a donation to a charity of your choice.

If you'd like a copy please email me or drop me a line at Randolph Healy, 16a Ballyman Road, Bray, County Wicklow, Ireland.

More details including a pic and a quote at

http://www.wildhoneypress.com/BOOKS/Into%20Thick%20Hair.htm

Copies of "Via" by Andrew Brewerton

http://www.wildhoneypress.com/BOOKS/Via.htm

are still available on the same terms.

best

Randolph

Apologies for cross-posting

↑ Index

92. Patrick F. Durgin

Laura Elrick & Rodrigo Toscano on performing Hannah Weiner

Sat 10 Apr 2010

Friends of Kenning Editions,

I invite you to read a new guest-blog by Laura Elrick and Rodrigo Toscano on performing Hannah Weiner's "Romeo and Juliet" at www.kenningeditions.com

Permalink at http://www.kenningeditions.com/?p=241

See previous posts in the "Previews and Supplements" series, revolving around the many texts and authors represented in THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER: 1945-1985: Peter O'Leary on Robert Duncan, David Hadbawnik on Diane di Prima, Don Share on V. R. "Bunny" Lang, and posts on

Theresa Hak Kyung Cha, Fiona Templeton, Pedro Pietri, and Jack Spicer. See also Thom Donovan's post to the Harriet blog, "What Is Poets Theater?" athttp://www.poetryfoundation.org/harriet/2010/04/what-is-poets-theater/

Please help spread the word & support your local, independent bookseller with a purchase.

*/The Kenning Anthology of Poets Theater: 1945-1985/ *

*Edited by Kevin Killian and David Brazil. *

POETRY/DRAMA/PERFORMANCE

ISBN 978-0-9767364-5-5 $25.95

Order from Small Press Distribution <http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9780976736455/the-kenning-anthology-of-poets-theater-19451980.aspx?rf=1>

Order from the press, via 2CO <https://www.2checkout.com/2co/buyer/orderpage?sid=1266894>

Order from Amazon <http://www.amazon.com/gp/product/0976736454/sr=1-1/qid=1263157088/ref=olp_product_details?ie=UTF8&me=&qid=1263157088&sr=1-1&seller=>

With new interest in poetry as a performative art, and with prewar experiments much in mind, the young poets of postwar America infused the stage with the rhythms and shocks of their poetry. From the multidisciplinary nexus of Black Mountain, to the Harvard-based Cambridge Poets Theatre, to the West Coast Beats and San Francisco Renaissance, these energies manifested themselves all at once, and through the decades have continued to grow and mutate, innovating a form of writing that defies boundaries of genre. /THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER: 1945-1985/ documents the emergence, growth, and varied fortunes of the form over decades of American literary history, with a focus on key regional movements. The largest and most comprehensive anthology of its kind yet assembled, the volume collects classics of poets theater as well as rarities long out of print and texts from unpublished manuscripts and archives. It will be an indispensable reference for students of postwar American poetry and avant-garde theater.

Among the poets featured in/ THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER/ are Charles Olson, John Ashbery, Frank O'Hara, Russell Atkins, Gregory Corso, Helen Adam, Michael McClure, James Broughton, Kenneth Koch, Jackson Mac Low, Lorenzo Thomas, Anne Waldman, ruth weiss, Ron Padgett, Hannah Weiner, Lew Welch, Sonia Sanchez, Joe Brainard, Bruce Andrews, Keith Waldrop, Rosmarie Waldrop, Bob Holman and Bob Rosenthal, Steve Benson, Ted Greenwald, Carla Harryman, Ntozake Shange, Bob

Perelman, Kit Robinson, Robert Grenier, Alan Bernheimer, Charles Bernstein, Stephen Rodefer, Fiona Templeton, Kenward Elmslie, and Leslie Scalapino. Also included are previously unpublished plays by Jack Spicer, V.R. "Bunny" Lang, James Schuyler, Robert Duncan, Madeline Gleason, Diane di Prima, Barbara Guest, James Keilty, Theresa Hak Kyung Cha, Johanna Drucker, and Nada Gordon. The editors provide informative and provocative prefatory matter, including extensive notes on each play, as well as several that fall within the purview of the book but, for one reason or another, were omitted, as with Pedro Pietri's /The Masses Are Asses/ or Jessica Hagedorn's/ Tenement Lover/. Rounding out the book are contemporary classics: LeRoi Jones/Amiri Baraka's /Dutchman /and Kathy Acker's /The Birth of the Poet/.

↑ Index

93. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

Sat 10 Apr 2010

I think "mistakes" in Cassevetes's films arise out of the objective conditions he creates on the set. Giving the job of the cinematographer to a novice is one of them. Another was the fact that people were never sure when a scene was being rehearsed or shot. Cathevetes never answered questions about a character's motivation. He told the actor, including Gena his wife in actual life, to find for himself or herself. People say there was always a sense of giddy anxiety on the set. The actors remained on the edge. It is out of these conditions that both "mistakes" and raw emotions, the sense that things were occurring then, in real time, happened; it was not due to a decision to be "improvisatory" or or "to make mistakes," as is often assumed today.

To me, it is fascinating to compare the kind of acting Cassavetes required to method acting. There is no delving "inside oneself," no delving into memory, which Cassavetes's method implies are illusions, a kind of solipsism, that if you "feel" something, others will feel it to. For him, it seems to me, "acting" was reacting to the moment, which is a different kind of acting -acting closer to being, "of the moment," "at the moment."

Ciao,

Murat

On Fri, Apr 9, 2010 at 5:46 PM, Anny Ballardini
<[redacted]>wrote:

> It seems that the entire movie is on YouTube, if you wish to watch some scenes. I went back to see some parts since I had almost forgotten it. It is > a movie that touches hard. She acts out what people are not supposed to > say,

> probably not even think if they do not want to cross the borderline.
>
> On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 2:26 PM, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> i saw this movie in college. i had no idea about any kind of experimental film. it had a deep effect on me.
> i've never forgotten it, though of course i've forgotten many specifics. and i had no idea at the time that it > was about alcoholism.
>
> Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:
>
> I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see > how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches
> one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was > the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the > movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, > Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité > works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or > moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity
> nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out > of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.
>
> Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.
>
> Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites
> -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not > believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted] wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project, now surfacing in an acceptable state.

I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

GQ

George Quasha
www.quasha.com
www.baumgartnergallery.net
www.stationhill.org

guidelines

guidelines

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

94. skyplums
Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Sat 10 Apr 2010

here i agree with yer assessment of falk was also thinking in terms of patriarchy withoin this type of labor oriente family as well as matriarchal how those roles change and revolve around and effect eachother i grew up around many of these types and in one very similar tho nowhere near as inttense

---------- Original Message ----------
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Date: Fri, 9 Apr 2010 14:41:50 -0400

i did not think it was intentional, but Cassevetes didn't care. he knew he was hiring people with very little experience and that things like that would happen (occasionally, characters walk off the frame); but he felt their lack of experience gave the scene an edginess -provided people worked very hard- and the trade-off was worth it for him. That is what I mean by "bad cinema" -not intentionally bad -which perhaps the French New Wave thought, or perhaps not- but bad as a trade-off, a necessary step to achieve the rawness. It is part -an integral part- of a process. In that way, it is more akin to mistakes which may occur in a live t.v. comedy show, for instance, or improvisational jazz.

Interesting, you saw Falk's position within the family as dominance; I experienced it more as protective of her, suddenly putting down the clamp on her when certain limits are crossed (for example, in the spaghetti breakfast scene when she is touching the black guy, urging him to sing, and he is feeling uncomfortable). He does tell her later that he knew "she didn't mean anything by it," that it was her affectionate nature; but the guy didn't. I thought there was love, a lot of affection, a gentleness between the two. Ciao,

Murat

On Thu, Apr 8, 2010 at 2:11 PM, [redacted] <[redacted]> wrote:

> both goddard films mentioned are much earlier band one of his first
> i saw woman when it first came out at waverly theater
> lovced it then and now under the influence of her lir life her insanity
> her husband's dominance her role as a house wife
> one thing that struck me when i first saw it > was that i felt tho i knew falk etc that i was in a real situation
> i was still young grew up working class etc
> but what also struck me due to cassavettes approach
> it was the first film in which i saw the boom mike hanging over the actors
> i believe in a kitchen scene - sadly that detracted from me at the time and i always wondered if if were an accident which due to budgeting

i'm sure it was ....bad cinema so diff from grade A films made with less than grade B budgets
tho in art terms BAD CINEMA has a diff connotation BAD in several ways
purposely purposefully BAD

---------- Original Message ----------
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Date: Thu, 8 Apr 2010 00:32:05 -0400

Gerald,

Well, that's what I am trying to do in my work. That's why I was so taken with it. You may be right about the dates, but this movie has a roughness
in terms of technique- which nearer I think to what Godard means by "bad cinema." What are the dates of My Life to Live or Band of Outsiders?
Cassavetes's film was made in 1972.

Maria, A Woman Under the Influence is not about alcoholism though the title may suggest that. It deals with a woman's eccentric behavior which can be taken as insanity, but which Cassavets insists it is not, but the result of the rules of a society which will not let her be fully who she is. Gena Rawlands, Peter Falk and the kids are something to see.

Many people in the film are family members. Rawland's mother plays her mother, Cassaveteses's mother plays Falk's mother.

The film has absolutely stunning things in it. For example, a spaghetti brealfast with about ten people around a table suddenly has two characters suddenly starting to burst into arias, in one case the person does not know
the words... Wow!

Worth a revisit.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Apr 7, 2010 at 10:30 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]

> wrote:
>
> Murat,
>
> Cassavetes' neo-realism began long before W.U.T.I. and it began parallel to the French new wave-- with "Shadows" (56-59)... and was inspired by "La Tera Trema," "I Vitelloni," "Umberto D.," and "Bellissima".
>
> He (like those) was not afraid to face reality; to look it straight in the face.
>
> Godard would later follow.
>
> I have often wondered if there has (or will be) a poetry (or poetics) that would approach his achievement, both in style and substance... and improvization.
>
> Any examples?
>
> Till then,
> Gerald
>
> I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites
-Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,

> now surfacing in an acceptable state.
>
> I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might
> go to:
>
> http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems
>
> Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.
>
> GQ
>
> George Quasha
> www.quasha.com
> www.baumgartnergallery.net
> www.stationhill.org
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
> guidelines

↑ Index

95. Lewis Warsh
THE BEST THING FOR YOU WOULD BE ME
Sun 11 Apr 2010

THE BEST THING FOR YOU WOULD BE ME

new work from the MFA program in creative writing Long Island University (Brooklyn)

Friday, April 16, 5-7

The Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery
(between Houston & Bleecker)

F train to 2nd Ave., 6 train to Bleecker

featuring

Yani Gonzalez
Mary Walker
Tejan Green
Jon Jenkins
Liz Dalton
Jessica Wedge
Elspeth Macdonald
Uche Nduka
Tamara Lebron
Eric Alter
John Casquarelli
Rachel Jackson
Stephanie Gray
Christine Francavilla
Christine Gans
Jon L. Peacock
Alicia Berbenick
Patia Braithwaite
Tony Iantosca
Gulay Isik
Jhon Sanchez
Wendi Williams
Jamey Jones

↑ Index

96. Rob McLennan

new(ish) on rob's clever blog

Sun 11 Apr 2010

-- Camille Martin, Sonnets
-- rob curates the Globe & Mail book blog, April 2010
-- Ryan Murphy, The Redcoats
-- the ottawa international writers festival; spring 2010
-- The Age of Orphans, Laleh Khadivi
-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: Cameron Anstee on Apt. 9 Press
-- Joshua Marie Wilkinson, Selenography
-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: Angela Carr on Tente Press
-- Suzanne Buffam, The Irrationalist
-- rob (+ Major, Kroetsch) launches in Calgary, Edmonton
-- fools in love, happily
-- Erin Moure, my beloved wager: Essays from a Writing Practice

-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: Jenna Butler on Rubicon Press
-- The Lost Boys (a very short story)
-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: with Janet Vickers, lipstick press
-- the ottawa small press book fair; spring 2010 edition, June 26
-- a question of questions: watching the "12 or 20 (second series)"
-- Christine Hume's SHOT
-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: Amanda Earl on AngelHousePress
-- feature on Edmonton poet Douglas Barbour at Jacket (ed. rob mclennan)
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Michael Eden Reynolds -- sentence: a journal of prose poetics #7
-- interview with Tom Fowler
-- new from above/ground press: The Peter F. Yacht Club
-- How does one begin? : a poetics at turning forty
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Nino Ricci
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Sandra Doller
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Dave Margoshes
-- above/ground press: state of the union
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Jeff Latosik
-- Ongoing notes: early March, 2010;
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Eleonore Shonmaier
-- George Bowering, The Box
-- ottawater #6 now on-line;
-- mclennan launches 2 new books (novel, poetry) at Dusty Owl
-- Angela Carr, The Rose Condordance
-- Norma Cole, Where Shadows Will: Selected Poems 1988-2000
-- ongoing notes: mid-February, 2010
-- Catherine Wagner, Miss America and Macular Hole

www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at ottawa poetry newsletter
www.ottawapoetry.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at the Chaudiere Booksblog
www.chaudierebooks.blogspot.com

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons
www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

97. derek beaulieu
new from No press: The Rose Letters by Erin Moure
Sun 11 Apr 2010

No press is proud to announce the publication of

The Rose Letters
by Erin Moure

24 pages, sewn binding.
published in an edition of 50 copies (25 of which are for sale)
$6 each.

for more information, or to order copies, please email:

derek beaulieu
[redacted]. ca http://epc.buffalo. edu/authors/ beaulieu/

↑ Index

98. Catherine Daly
Sacramento, CA: Reading Tomorrow Night
Sun 11 Apr 2010

Emmanuel Sigauke Hosts Catherine Daly and Margaret Hoehn
Presented by Sacramento Poetry Center at Sacramento Poetry Center
Monday, April 12, 2010

7:30

1719 25th St
Sacramento, CA 95814

Phone: [redacted]

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

99. David Chirot
Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Sun 11 Apr 2010

Dear Murat

I saw this film again a few months ago on turner cable--and first saw it when it came out-- what you write re Bresson and Cassavetes is interesting; however i think that though it may appear that the two are "aiming" so to speak for the same effect-the methods are very different. Cassavetes wants to create an ambiance of spontaneity out of which a rough truth will rawly emerge. In many of his works, he has a carefully assembled ensemble cast, who through working together have learned to improvise off of each other. Cassavetes, himself a fine actor, wants to give room to the actor—Bresson wants, in effect, to abolish the actor.

Bresson worked for a long time with strictly non-actors. Beginning with such a minimum of experience, Bresson seeks, not to “create an actor” but rather to as much as possible keep “acting” from happening. Bresson would obsessively shoot even a simple scene, one “actor” only, with a few lines of dialogue sometimes as many as 80 times--what he wanted to do with his actors was achieve what in the French language is regarded as an ideal--a perfect monotone. The lack of inflexion in speech is just as important as the lack of inflexion, of drama, in the physicality of the actors. This neutralityof effect was also a dream of Flaubert’s--the wish to create a perfectly "grey" prose at one point in his writing. In a sense, this is also an ideal in the theater of Racine, a purity, a classical flatness of affect, out of which arises, for the Jansenist Bresson, the "moment of Grace." In keeping with this classicism and the extremes of the Jansenist concept of purity--that is, purity of language, action, camera angle, lighting--everything toned down to rigorously prepare for and create a mystical sense of a revelation, a moment of Grace which arises from the most minimal events in the "drama"--which can be, all the while, over al quite "dramatic" and often violent. The rigor of Bresson's is a spiritual rigor, concerned with, among others, the very fundamental question: how does one show the moment of Grace as it occurs? The rigor of the method is linked to the trails through which the characters pass--it reaches its apotheosis in the incredible film Au Hasard Balthazar, in which the main character is a donkey--it is to the donkey that the moment of Grace happens. The human characters are too “fallen” to attain this purity—

IN a sense, in many of Bresson’s films the tension is generated by the focus on the exteriority, the surface, of the characters—and this exteriority is to give away as few clues as possible to the inner life of the character as an individual —again a spiritual purification of “personality,” as action making possible the flooding of inner light which is the Moment of Grace.

A few years ago I saw a mini-retrospective of Bresson’s works—I had seen them al before—but this time they became more sharply etched in mind than all but a few films I have seen since.

there is a fascinating documentary on the making of Bresson’s film Pickpocket, in which the documentary film maker "catches up with" the actors some decades later--how, once having "starred" in a film did these previously non-actors--whom Bresson in a sense forbids to "act deal with this discovery of themselves, not only by others, but by themselves? Before he became a screen writer and later director, Paul Schrader wrote a very interesting book called Transcendental Cinema: Ozu, Bresson, Dreyer. Schrader himself was brought up in a fundamental religious family and did not see a film until he was 18 years old. The influence of fundamentalismcan be seen in a number of his films as both writer and director, perhaps most specifically in Scorcese's Taxi Driver, in which the character of Travis Bickle, played by Robert de Niro, is a ne example of the American fundamentalist conception of "regeneration through violence." Travis is seen preparing himself, purifying himself, before attempting to carry out his plan, first, foiled, to murder a political candidate and second, to kill the pimp and his colleagues who are exploiting the child prostitute played by Jody Foster. The film is fascinating in many scenes to watch how Schrader’s fundamentalism is played off of Scorcese's Catholicism, which becomes most apparent in another film of violence, Raging Bull, in which the characterfinds regeneration as it were, through language. Travis keeps a diary and attempts to chart his struggle, his inward search and his development of a daily regime of physical discipline to turn him into a political, then a religious, compassionate, assassin.

(Much of the film was loosely based on the story of Arthur Bremer and his Diaries, which were buried on the Lake Bluffs here in Milwaukee near where I work outdoors a lot on my rubBEings etc. Bremer was last year released from prison—he had originally stalked Richard Nixon with intent to assassinate him during the 1972 Presidential election; Nixon being too well guarded, Bremer turned his attention and gun towards former Alabama Governor George Wallace, running as Third Party Candidate. Wallace was permanently paralyzed from the waist down. Bremer’s Diaries were published after their exhumation, and have remained out of print ever since. At one point in prison, Arthur Bremer was housed in the same units that the notorious Ed Gein was.

A Woman Under the Influence very much struck me in the sense of awkwardness it conveyed. I think what really moved me most in the film was the sense of the family’s love and acceptance of each other. In a way, the Gena Rowlands character is in a state of grace which others can feel yet not understand. Failing to understand, they offer love, however clumsily, to make a safe place in the world for a person they sense may be out on an edge they can not see or imagine for themselves, for in protecting her, they find in a sense that she is protecting them from an/the unknown. The wife/mother becomes a kind of “Holy figure” as it were, in the way in which the “Holy Fool” has been historically in a great many cultures. One of the exceptional aspects of the film, for me, was that the family sense the mystery an distance at times of the Gena character—sense, in an uncanny way, the kind of loneliness she might endure if it were not for the love they give her. There are moments of “grace” as it were for this character in which she is being observed—continually observed—which can be as hard on one as being continually ignored—and, knowing this, stil finds a way in which to marvel at at what she alone is seeing, a sense of privacy in the midst of al this surrounding wave of protective love, which might otherwise be almost stifling. But then, thisis but one of many ways one might think of the film—one might see it again and find something completely different . .

On Tue, Apr 6, 2010 at 9:00 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]> wrote:

> I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see > how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity > nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.
>
> Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical, stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.
>
> Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites -Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief intro to a 12 year project,
now surfacing in an acceptable state.

I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might go to:

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

GQ

George Quasha
www.quasha.com
www.baumgartnergallery.net
www.stationhill.org

guidelines

↑ Index

100. Paul Nelson
Rae's Pulitzer
Mon 12 Apr 2010

So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:

Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041202750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

↑ Index

101. Nana Zabic
query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
Mon 12 Apr 2010

Hi All,

I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.

If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.

Thanks,

Snezana

↑ Index

102. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"
Mon 12 Apr 2010

Dear David,

I completely agree with (and greatful for) your analysis of Bresson's films, that through minimalism (of outward act and intonation) his films are trying to reach, to project a moment of grace -a zero moment. That moment of grace arrived at by Balthazar at its moment of death also appears in a poem of mine from *The Structure of Escape:

Au hazard*

On Sun, Apr 11, 2010 at 10:27 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Murat
>
> I saw this film again a few months ago on turner cable--and first saw it when it came out--
> what you write re Bresson and Cassavetes is interesting; however i think that though it may appear that the two are "aiming" so to speak for the same > effect-the methods are very different. Cassavetes wants to create an ambiance of spontaneity out of which a rough truth will rawly emerge. In many of his works, he has a carefully assembled ensemble cast, who through working together have learned to improvise off of each other. Cassavetes, himself a fine actor, wants to give room to the actor—Bresson wants, in effect, to abolish the actor.
>
> Bresson worked for a long time with strictly non-actors. Beginning with such > a minimum of experience, Bresson seeks, not to “create an actor” but rather to as much as possible keep “acting” from happening. Bresson would obsessively shoot even a simple scene, one “actor” only, with a few lines of > dialogue sometimes as many as 80 times--what he wanted to do with his actors > was achieve what in the French language is regarded as an ideal--a perfect monotone. The lack of inflexion in speech is just as important as the lack of inflexion, of drama, in the physicality of the actors. This neutralityof effect was also a dream > of Flaubert’s--the wish to create a perfectly "grey" prose at one point in his writing. In a sense, this is also an ideal in the theater of Racine, a purity,
> a classical flatness of affect, out of which arises, for the Jansenist Bresson, the "moment of Grace." In keeping with this classicism and the extremes of the Jansenist concept of purity--that is, purity of language, action, camera angle, lighting--everything toned down to rigorously prepare for and create a mystical sense of a revelation, a moment of Grace which arises from the most minimal events in the "drama"--which can be, all the while, over al quite "dramatic" and often violent.

The rigor of Bresson's is a spiritual rigor, concerned with, among others, the very fundamental question: how does one show the moment of Grace as it occurs? The rigor of the method is linked to the trails through which the characters pass--it reaches its apotheosis in the incredible film Au Hasard Balthazar, in which the main character is a donkey--it is to the donkey that the moment of Grace happens. The human characters are too "fallen" to attain this purity—

IN a sense, in many of Bresson's films the tension is generated by the focus on the exteriority, the surface, of the characters—and this exteriority is to give away as few clues as possible to the inner life of the character as an individual—again a spiritual purification of "personality," as action making possible the flooding of inner light which is the Moment of Grace.

A few years ago I saw a mini-retrospective of Bresson's works—I had seen them al before—but this time they became more sharply etched in mind than all but a few films I have seen since.

there is a fascinating documentary on the making of Bresson's film Pickpocket, in which the documentary film maker "catches up with" the actors some decades later--how, once having "starred" in a film did these previously non-actors--whom Bresson in a sense forbids to "act deal with this discovery of themselves, not only by others, but by themselves?
Before he became a screen writer and later director, Paul Schrader wrote a very interesting book called Transcendental Cinema: Ozu, Bresson, Dreyer. Schrader himself was brought up in a fundamental religious family and did not see a film until he was 18 years old. The influence of fundamentalismcan be seen in a number of his films as both writer and director, perhaps most specifically in Scorcese's Taxi Driver, in which the character of Travis Bickle, played by Robert de Niro, is a ne example of the American fundamentalist conception of "regeneration through violence." Travis is seen preparing himself, purifying himself, before attempting to carry out his plan, first, foiled, to murder a political candidate and second, to kill the pimp and his colleagues who are exploiting the child prostitute played by Jody Foster.
The film is fascinating in many scenes to watch how Schrader's fundamentalism is played off of Scorcese's Catholicism, which becomes most apparent in another film of violence, Raging Bull, in which the characterfinds regeneration as it were, through language. Travis keeps a diary and attempts to chart his struggle, his inward search and his development of a daily regime of physical discipline to turn him into a political, then a religious, compassionate, assassin.

(Much of the film was loosely based on the story of Arthur Bremer and his Diaries, which were buried on the Lake Bluffs here in Milwaukee near where I work outdoors a lot on my rubBEings etc. Bremer was last year released from prison—he had originally stalked Richard Nixon with intent to assassinate him during the 1972 Presidential election; Nixon being too well guarded, Bremer turned his attention and gun towards former Alabama Governor George Wallace, running as Third Party Candidate. Wallace was permanently paralyzed from the waist down. Bremer's Diaries were published after their exhumation, and have remained out of print ever since. At one point in prison, Arthur Bremer was housed in the same units that the notorious Ed Gein was.

A Woman Under the Influence very much struck me in the sense of awkwardness it conveyed. I think what really moved me most in the film was the sense of the family's love and acceptance of each other. In a way, the Gena Rowlands character is in a state of grace which others can feel yet not understand. Failing to understand, they offer love, however clumsily, to make a safe place in the world for a person they sense may be out on an edge they can not see or imagine for themselves, for in protecting her, they find in a sense that she is protecting them from an/the unknown. The wife/mother becomes a kind of "Holy figure" as it were, in the way in which the "Holy Fool" has been historically in a great many cultures. One of the exceptional aspects of the film, for me, was that the family sense the mystery an distance at times of the Gena character—sense, in an uncanny way, the kind of loneliness she might endure if it were not for the love they give her. There are moments of "grace" as it were for this character in which she is being observed—continually observed—which can be as hard on one as being continually ignored—and, knowing this, stil finds a way in which to marvel at at what she alone is seeing, a sense of privacy in the midst of al this surrounding wave of protective love, which might otherwise be almost stifling. But then, thisis but one of many ways one might think of the film—one might see it again and find something completely different . .

On Tue, Apr 6, 2010 at 9:00 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
wrote:

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches
one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical,
stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites
-Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief
intro to a 12 year project,
now surfacing in an acceptable state.

I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might
go to:

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

GQ

George Quasha
www.quasha.com
www.baumgartnergallery.net
www.stationhill.org

> guidelines
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

103. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: John Cassavetes' "A Woman Under the Influence"

Mon 12 Apr 2010

Dear David,

I completely agree with (and greatful for) your analysis of Bresson's films, that through minimalism (of outward act and intonation) his films are trying to reach, to project a moment of grace -a zero moment. That moment of grace arrived at by Balthazar at its moment of death also appears in a poem of mine from *The Structure of Escape:

" au hazard* balthazar

how can you let a donkey die for your film. in a final gesture, a wandering lamb from nowhere, sniffing its feet?

is it because it can not act?"

The theme of the whole poem The Structure of Escape are inspired by Bresson's A Prisoner Escaped. The Spiritual Life of Replicants is replete with quotes from The Art of the Cinematographer, pointing to parallels between the "mechanical" actions of the robots and the ideal of "non-acting" Bresson pursues.

I experienced A Woman Under the Influence very much like you did, that the love Gena Rowlands and Peter Falk have for each other, the way they protect their children (do you remember Falk repeatedly carrying one of the kids up the stairs to prevent her(?) from seeing the mother "distracted?) are at the sweet heart of this movie. I had not thought of it, but yes, the Gena character can be best seen as a "holy fool," with her own kind of grace, making people both unconfortable swith and drawn to her.

It is very insightful of you to see that the Rowlands/Falk characters are being "continuously observed." Finally, isn't cinema the art of continually observing, seeing. In that respect, isn't the camera itself implicitly projecting the panopticon within which the two characters are contunously living? As you notice, despite that, they are able to create their own private world. The two big scenes in the movie -the spaghetti brealfast scene (which I love) and Rawlands return from the asylum- end up first Falk kicking everyone out of the house, despite the fact that in both cases he himself had created the crowded condition.

Do you remember that eerie, mysterious long shot in which the couple is seen in bed from the other side of the french doors, a very dim light half illuminating their movements?

I agree with you about the cultural, stylistic (to me relatively superficial) distinctions you see between Bresson and Cassavetes' film. What unites them is that both of them are after a moment of "being." Bresson, as you say, as a Jansenist and classicist, sees the moment of purity (grace) achieved through a "chaste" withdrawal from visible action. Cassavetes sees it in the flotsam and jetsam of daily life, the gore of its messiness (a non-classical, very American value). In my view, Cassavetes' camera in Under the Influence is as pure as Bresson's. They are French and American versions of moments of "grace" as moments of "being." That's why "non-acting" is so important to Bresson, as in his own version of danger-tinged spontaneity is important to Cassavetes.

Though I am aware of Schrader's interest in Bresson, I think the similarities between their works are superficial. Unless I am mistaken, death is Bresson movies alway occurs naturally, through suffering (for instance, with Balthazar and the village curate). Even A Prisoner Escaped has no death in it (murders occur in silence, off the camera, off the frame). I think a physically violent death, a la Taxi Driver, would be anathema to Bresson, exactly the kind of excess -acting out- his sensibility is against. The moments of grace in Woman Under the Influence are gentle and occur in private, for instance, after the breakfast guests are kicked out, when Falk tells Rowlands "I know you mean nothing by it," or, at her return from the asylum, when everyone has left and she returns to her true state (herself) and the children gather around their parents (like the sheep gathering around Balthazar's expiring body...)

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Apr 12, 2010 at 6:41 PM, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear David,
>
> I completely agree with (and greatful for) your analysis of Bresson's films, that through minimalism (of outward act and intonation) his films are trying to reach, to project a moment of grace -a zero moment. That moment of grace arrived at by Balthazar at its moment of death also appears in a poem *of mine from The Structure of Escape:

*Au hazard

On Sun, Apr 11, 2010 at 10:27 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

Dear Murat

I saw this film again a few months ago on turner cable--and first saw it when it came out-- what you write re Bresson and Cassavetes is interesting; however i think that though it may appear that the two are "aiming" so to speak for the same effect-the methods are very different. Cassavetes wants to create an ambiance of spontaneity out of which a rough truth will rawly emerge. In many of his works, he has a carefully assembled ensemble cast, who through working together have learned to improvise off of each other. Cassavetes, himself a fine actor, wants to give room to the actor—Bresson wants, in effect, to abolish the actor.

Bresson worked for a long time with strictly non-actors. Beginning with such a minimum of experience, Bresson seeks, not to “create an actor” but rather to as much as possible keep “acting” from happening. Bresson would obsessively shoot even a simple scene, one “actor” only, with a few lines of dialogue sometimes as many as 80 times--what he wanted to do with his actors was achieve what in the French language is regarded as an ideal--a perfect monotone. The lack of inflexion in speech is just as important as the lack of inflexion, of drama, in the physicality of the actors. This neutralityof effect was also a dream of Flaubert’s--the wish to create a perfectly "grey" prose at one point in his writing. In a sense, this is also an ideal in the theater of Racine, a purity,
a classical flatness of affect, out of which arises, for the Jansenist Bresson, the "moment of Grace." In keeping with this classicism and the extremes of the Jansenist concept of purity--that is, purity of language, action, camera angle, lighting--everything toned down to rigorously prepare for and create a mystical sense of a revelation, a moment of Grace which arises from the most minimal events in the "drama"--which can be, all the while, over al quite "dramatic" and often violent.
The rigor of Bresson's is a spiritual rigor, concerned with, among others, the very fundamental question: how does one show the moment of Grace as it occurs? The rigor of the method is linked to the trails through which the characters pass--it reaches its apotheosis in the incredible film Au Hasard Balthazar, in which the main character is a donkey--it is to the donkey that the moment of Grace happens. The human characters are too "fallen" to attain this purity—

IN a sense, in many of Bresson's films the tension is generated by the focus on the exteriority, the surface, of the characters—and this exteriority is to give away as few clues as possible to the inner life of the character as an individual—again a spiritual purification of "personality," as action making possible the flooding of inner light which is the Moment of Grace.

A few years ago I saw a mini-retrospective of Bresson's works—I had seen them al before—but this time they became more sharply etched in mind than all but a few films I have seen since.

there is a fascinating documentary on the making of Bresson's film Pickpocket, in which the documentary film maker "catches up with" the actors some decades later--how, once having "starred" in a film did these previously non-actors--whom Bresson in a sense forbids to "act deal with this discovery of themselves, not only by others, but by themselves? Before he became a screen writer and later director, Paul Schrader wrote a very interesting book called Transcendental Cinema: Ozu, Bresson, Dreyer. Schrader himself was brought up in a fundamental religious family and did not see a film until he was 18 years old. The influence of fundamentalismcan be seen in a number of his films as both writer and director, perhaps most specifically in Scorcese's Taxi Driver, in which the character of Travis Bickle, played by Robert de Niro, is a ne example of the American fundamentalist conception of "regeneration through violence." Travis is seen preparing himself, purifying himself, before attempting to carry out his plan, first, foiled, to murder a political candidate and second, to kill the pimp and his colleagues who are exploiting the child prostitute played by Jody Foster. The film is fascinating in many scenes to watch how Schrader's fundamentalism is played off of Scorcese's Catholicism, which becomes most apparent in another film of violence, Raging Bull, in which the characterfinds regeneration as it were, through language. Travis keeps a diary and attempts to chart his struggle, his inward search and his development of a daily regime of physical discipline to turn him into a political, then a religious, compassionate, assassin.

(Much of the film was loosely based on the story of Arthur Bremer and his Diaries, which were buried on the Lake Bluffs here in Milwaukee near where I work outdoors a lot on my rubBEings etc. Bremer was last year released from prison—he had originally stalked Richard Nixon with intent to assassinate him during the 1972 Presidential election; Nixon being too well guarded, Bremer turned his attention and gun towards former Alabama Governor George Wallace, running as Third Party Candidate. Wallace was permanently paralyzed from the waist down. Bremer's Diaries were published after their exhumation, and have remained out of print ever since. At one point in prison, Arthur Bremer was housed in the same units that the notorious Ed Gein was.

A Woman Under the Influence very much struck me in the sense of awkwardness it conveyed. I think what really moved me most in the film was the sense of the family's love and acceptance of each other. In a way, the Gena Rowlands character is in a state of grace which others can feel yet not understand. Failing to understand, they offer love, however clumsily, to make a safe place in the world for a person they sense may be out on an edge they can not see or imagine for themselves, for in protecting her, they find in a sense that she is protecting them from an/the unknown. The wife/mother becomes a kind of "Holy figure" as it were, in the way in which the "Holy Fool" has been historically in a great many cultures. One of the exceptional aspects of the film, for me, was that the family sense the mystery an distance at times of the Gena character—sense, in an uncanny way, the kind of loneliness she might endure if it were not for the love they give her. There are moments of "grace" as it were for this character in which she is being observed—continually observed—which can be as hard on one as being continually ignored—and, knowing this, stil finds a way in which to marvel at at what she alone is seeing, a sense of privacy in the midst of al this surrounding wave of protective love, which might otherwise be almost stifling. But then, thisis but one of many ways one might think of the film—one might see it again and find something completely different . .

On Tue, Apr 6, 2010 at 9:00 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
wrote:

I just saw John Cassavetes' A Woman Under the Influence. If one wants to see how technique, technology and professionalism are ultimately briar patches
one should be wary off -that art is created out the struggle with the limitations of the tools one is using- one should see this movie. This was the cinematographer Mike Ferris's first ever film. There is no question the movie (made in 1974) is inspired by French Film Verité. But in this work, Cassavetes takes it to a completely new dimension. Most French film Verité works were focused on politics or ideas (Godard), referential to other movies (Truffaut or Godard in Breathless), centered around philosophical or moral themes (Rohmer). Cassavetes's film deals utterly with human relationship, within a blue color family. As a result, it has a raw humanity nothing less than breath taking. "Mistakes" in the film, actors moving out of the frame, for instance, become incadescent pluses.

Some bonus delights of the film: Gena Rawlands and Peter Falk's radical,
stunningly daring acting; the sweet presences, in everything they do, of their children.

Even though on the surface seemingly completely different, almost opposites
-Cassavetes' abondon as opposed to the other's minimalist style- the director Cassavetes' reminds me of most is Robert Bresson. Bresson did not believe in "actors" and used almost always non-professionals. He believed truth derived out of a person whole being, and he wanted to shoot, to capture that. Cassavetes uses both professionals and non, often in the same scene, forcing the professionals to react to and be captured by the raw anxiety of their counterparts. The film attempts to reach, in its totality, to the sense of being. All his directorial method consists of strategies to achieve that. For instance, he seems to have chose Mike Ferris -who had not shot a full film before and confesses during the filming he often did not know how to shoot a scene and was forced to improvise often in a state of panic- for that purpose.

The film is also I think ambiguous in its attitude towards the life the Gena Rawlands character is leading; nevertheless, one is completely absorbed by the reality of her situation.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, Apr 3, 2010 at 2:37 AM, George Quasha <[redacted]
wrote:

Jerry Rothenberg has posted my "preverbs-complex" called "Things Done for Themselves" on his blog

poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com/

including a "Note on preverbs and axial poetics" which serves as a brief
intro to a 12 year project,
now surfacing in an acceptable state.

I have posted an updated version of that Note, so anyone interested might
go to:

http://www.quasha.com/poetry/preverbs-and-axial-poems

Some other preverb-complexes are posted there too.

GQ

George Quasha
www.quasha.com
www.baumgartnergallery.net
www.stationhill.org

guidelines

guidelines

↑ Index

104. Jennifer Karmin
April 18 @ the Iowa Writers' House
Mon 12 Apr 2010

JENNIFER KARMIN
LUCAS PINGEL
ISSAC SULLIVAN

Sunday, April 18th
7pm

at The University of Iowa Writers' House 111 Church Street, Iowa City
http://at-lamp.its.uiowa.edu/virtualwu/index.php/main/fellows

JENNIFER KARMINâ€™s text-sound epic, Aaaaaaaaaaalice, was published by Flim Forum Press in 2010. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, community centers, and on city streets across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. Walking Poem, a collaborative street project, is featured online at How2. At home in Chicago, she curates the Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise.
http://aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

LUCAS PINGEL is the author of two chapbooks: The Storm That Killed The Tree (Pudding House, 2008) and All Types of Breath Included (Further Adventures, 2009). His work has appeared in The William and Mary Review, The Green Hills Literary Lantern, and Ellipsis, among others. He is an assistant professor of English at St. Catherine University in Minneapolis.
http://furtheradventurespress.blogspot.com

ISSAC SULLIVAN's videos and installations aim to hold the material and abstract in equal measure and explore their convergence by foregrounding the musicality of clashing positivisms. http://www.isaac-sullivan.com

↑ Index

105. Sarah Rosenthal

Headlands Center for the Arts - Reading & Open House

Tue 13 Apr 2010

If you'll be in the Bay Area this weekend...

Headlands Spring Open House: This Sunday, April 18, 12-5pm

Visual artists open their studios to the public and writers read their work.

Fantastic lunch available in the café (Building 944 - one of the main buildings).

1:30-2:45pm: reading in East Wing of Building 944:
Ariel Goldberg
LJ Moore
Megan Pruiett
Sarah Rosenthal

In addition to poetry, art, and food, enjoy beach-walking, trail-hiking, wildflower-gazing, bird-watching, and fresh-air-breathing. Family-friendly!

Details: http://www.headlands.org/event_detail.asp?key=20&eventkey=674

Guided tour of Headlands: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DlAvu1MAQ7g

From the North:
Highway 101 South to the fourth Sausalito exit, the last exit before Golden Gate Bridge. Turn right toward Sausalito at stop sign. Take first left turn to tunnel. Follow Bunker Road for 2 miles. Fork left onto Field Road. Headlands Center for the Arts main buildings are on left-hand side of road. To get to Building 960, where many studios are, travel up road past Gymnasium building on left, past entrance to Nike Missile Base entrance on right. Building 960 is at top of hill on right-hand side of road.

From the South:
Highway 101 North to Alexander Avenue exit, just after Golden Gate Bridge. Bear right, toward Sausalito. Take first left turn to tunnel. Then continue with directions as described above.

By Bus:
Sundays and holidays MUNI Bus #76 runs every hour between 9:30 a.m and 5:30 p.m.

Thanks,
Sarah

↑ Index

106. Adam Fieled
"Nirvana and the Sense of Revolutions"
Tue 13 Apr 2010

This piece was written for Todd Swift's blog Eyewear. It concerns Nirvana, the rock band that showed up in 1991 and established Alternative Rock as the dominant trend in popular music. Many of the lessons derived from this piece apply also to poetry:

http://www.toddswift.blogspot.com/2010/04/fieled-on-nirvana-revolutions.html

Many thanks, spring is here again....
Adam

↑ Index

107. Jeffrey Side
Some poems in issue 2 of Cleaves
Tue 13 Apr 2010

I have some poems in issue 2 of Cleaves

http://www.cleavesjournal.com/issue2/northwest/northwest.htm

My thanks to editor Bill Drennan.

↑ Index

108. George Quasha
Franz Kamin (1941-2010)
Tue 13 Apr 2010

With deep sadness I have to report that our friend of decades Franz Kamin died in a car crash with another composer friend James Brody on Sunday; Brody, Franz's old close friend, was driving him to the country when the unexplained accident occurred. Franz was in my view a great artist--visionary composer, poet, writer of unexampled prose, extraordinary pianist and organizer of powerful events, inspiration and guide to many many people--far too much to say now--and I will say more later when the impact of this lets me. For many of us Franz was a cornerstone of a big imaginal building we do everything in our work to live inside of.

George Quasha

www.quasha.com

↑ Index

109. Eric Elshtain
Beard of Bees Celebrates the Sonnet
Tue 13 Apr 2010

Beard of Bees is pleased to present artifacts from an evening of sonneteering:

http://beardofbees.com/pubs/Sonneteering.pdf

Enjoy!

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

110. Caleb Cluff
Re: Rae's Pulitzer
Tue 13 Apr 2010

Another great (greater) poet acknowledged: - Special citation: Hank Williams for his craftsmanship as a songwriter who expressed universal feelings with poignant simplicity and played a pivotal role in transforming country music into a major musical and cultural force in American life.

Caleb

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Paul Nelson
Sent: Tuesday, 13 April 2010 7:54 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Rae's Pulitzer

So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:

Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041202750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

111. Ruth Lepson

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Tue 13 Apr 2010

Hi, Nana,

I'm in a group called low road with sax player Noah Preminger & keyboard player Eric Lane. They do jazz settings of my poems & I read them.

Thanks for asking.

On 4/12/10 6:31 PM, "Nana Zabic" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon.

> But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana

↑ Index

112. Hugh Behm-Steinberg

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Tue 13 Apr 2010

Hi Nana,

I'm part of a new music group called The Crank Ensemble (http://www.crankensemble.com/). I'm not in charge or anything, I just turn a crank. If folks would like to see us, and are in the bay area, come visit us at the Makers Fair May 22-23.

Best,

Hugh Behm-Steinberg

_____
From: Nana Zabic <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, April 12, 2010 3:31:23 PM
Subject: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Hi All,

I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.

If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.

Thanks,

Snezana

↑ Index

113. amy king
OT: Reports on WILLA (Women in Letters and Literary Arts) AWP Event
Tue 13 Apr 2010

Ms. Magazine Blog -- http://msmagazine.com/blog/blog/2010/04/09/the-new-old-girls-club/

and

The Huffington Post -- http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ru-freeman/there-willa-be-at-awp_b_535834.html

and

The Boulder Reporter - http://boulderreporter.com/2010/04/women-writers-shine-brightly-at-denver-events/

Cheers,

Amy

↑ Index

114. Cecelia Belle
Re: Rae's Pulitzer
Tue 13 Apr 2010

Just had to write in to congratulate, Rae, and don't know how to get a hold of her; to say David Bromige was a Huge fan of Rae's, and often quoted her line, " the smallest distance inexhaustible". (Hope I got it right.) He would be so pleased. So am I. Cecelia Belle Bromige

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Caleb Cluff
Sent: Tuesday, April 13, 2010 3:48 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Rae's Pulitzer

Another great (greater) poet acknowledged: - Special citation: Hank Williams for his craftsmanship as a songwriter who expressed universal feelings with poignant simplicity and played a pivotal role in transforming country music into a major musical and cultural force in American life.

Caleb

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Paul Nelson

Sent: Tuesday, 13 April 2010 7:54 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Rae's Pulitzer

So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:

Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041202 750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

115. Ruth Lepson
Re: Franz Kamin (1941-2010)
Tue 13 Apr 2010

very sorry to hear it, George.
take care.

On 4/13/10 4:29 PM, "George Quasha" <[redacted]> wrote:

> With deep sadness I have to report that our friend of decades Franz Kamin died in a car crash with another composer friend James Brody on Sunday; Brody, Franz's old close friend, was driving him to the country when the unexplained accident occurred. Franz was in my view a great artist--visionary composer, poet, writer of unexampled prose, extraordinary pianist and organizer of powerful events, inspiration and guide to many many people--far too much to say now--and I will say more later when the impact of this lets me. For many of us Franz was a cornerstone of a big imaginal building we do everything in our work to live inside of.
>
> George Quasha
>
> www.quasha.com

↑ Index

116. Alan Sondheim
Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
Tue 13 Apr 2010

I do both, record and play out a fair amount, various instruments and techniques. It's not dabbling - it takes far too much practice.

- Alan

==
email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/
webpage http://www.alansondheim.org sondheimat gmail.com, panix.com
==

↑ Index

117. Patrick Lovelace
Re: Franz Kamin (1941-2010)
Tue 13 Apr 2010

Amazing sadness. I'll always recall when I first read him--the experience was endlessly edifying--& I never stopped.

Scrbble Death, particularly, stands out as an enduring & continually impressive achievement.

Best wishes to all.

On Apr 13, 2010, at 4:29 PM, George Quasha <[redacted]> wrote:

> With deep sadness I have to report that our friend of decades Franz Kamin died in a car crash with another composer friend James Brody on Sunday; Brody, Franz's old close friend, was driving him to the country when the unexplained accident occurred. Franz was in my view a great artist--visionary composer, poet, writer of unexampled prose, extraordinary pianist and organizer of powerful events, inspiration and guide to many many people--far too much to say now--and I will say more later when the impact of this lets me. For many of us Franz was a cornerstone of a big imaginal building we do everything in our work to live inside of.
>
> George Quasha
>
> www.quasha.com

↑ Index

118. Larry O. Dean
Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
Wed 14 Apr 2010

Hi Nana,

There's, er, me. Also David Berman from the Silver Jews, Joe Pernice of The Pernice Brothers, Wyn Cooper.

I know there's more, these are just off the top of my head.

Larry

On Mon, April 12, 2010 5:31 pm, Nana Zabic wrote:
> Hi All,

>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read > and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least > did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole > lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, > although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio > blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or > form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't > have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon.
> But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana
>
>

--
Larry O. Dean
Poetry Center of Chicago
37 S. Wabash
Chicago, IL 60603

↑ Index

119. steve dalachinsky

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Wed 14 Apr 2010

---

joe mcphee william parker cecil taylor henry grimes
musicians who are poets many more like that in jazz world

On Tue, 13 Apr 2010 19:15:06 -0400 Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
writes:
> Hi, Nana,
>
> I'm in a group called low road with sax player Noah Preminger &
> keyboard
> player Eric Lane. They do jazz settings of my poems & I read them.
>
>

> Thanks for asking.
>
>
> On 4/12/10 6:31 PM, "Nana Zabic" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > Hi All,
> >
> > I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've
> read
> > and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at > least > > did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a > whole
> > lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us,
> > although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio
> > blurbs.
> >
> > If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape
> or > > form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I > don't > > have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this > phenomenon.
> > But there might be an event in the future.
> >
> > Thanks,
> >
> > Snezana
> >
> guidelines &
>
>
>

↑ Index

120. mIEKAL aND

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Wed 14 Apr 2010

We (mIEKAL aND + Elizabeth Was) had an art / noise / performance band that changed it's name every year for about 15-20 years. The majority of the audio was improvised & ranged from jazz improv to industrial noise depending on the gig. We made a lot of invented instruments out of things like gourds (which we grew) to playing a huge array of winds, percussion,strings, computers & homemade electronics. As well the ensemble ranged from duo to settings such as a piece called Post Punk Martian Big Band where we got a lot of local punk kids to play on instruments they had never played before. Text, film projects, live painting, movement, costumes were always part of our shows. When Elizabeth died in 2004 I stopped playing live music altogether & have focussed on audio collage & microsound using a Mac workstation.

Here's a list of partial list of our names:

Two Dogs in Paris
Twa Digs in Paris
Qwa Digs under Paris's
Qwa Digs Never Parish
Aquatics Ever Tarnish
Semantics Could Vanish
Floating Concrete Octopus
Wisconsin Conservatory of Noise
The Driftless Ensemble of Botanical Apparitions

Hope this helps.

~mIEKAL

Academy

On Apr 13, 2010, at 6:15 PM, Ruth Lepson wrote:

> Hi, Nana,
>
> I'm in a group called low road with sax player Noah Preminger & keyboard > player Eric Lane. They do jazz settings of my poems & I read them.
>
> Thanks for asking.
>
> On 4/12/10 6:31 PM, "Nana Zabic" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read > and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, > although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.

>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana
>
> guidelines &

=!=
Data Visualization for the Synaptically Inspired
http://filevillage.info

↑ Index

121. David Chirot
Pulitzer for Hank Williams!!!
Wed 14 Apr 2010

One of US America's greatest songwriters was awarded posthumously with the Lifetime Achievement Award. Few American writers in any genre have expressed loneliness and "lonesomeness" with the terse, harsh lyricism of Hank Williams. Hank Williams used the simplest words to express the most complex human emotions with a directness that knew no boundaries of genre--his songs have been covered by countless musicians worldwide, and he's inspired and continues to inspire writers not only of songs but of poetry, fiction and non-fiction as well. One of the best deserving Pulitzers ever awarded! Combine Robert Johnson and Hank Williams and you have --the basis of not only rock'n' roll but tens of thousands of singers-songwriters and musicians, poets, writers of al genres--given material that is still being mined--a deep and rich inheritance, a bed rock and soil for endless growth-- Sembrar la memoria!
david-bc http://chirotzerozine.blogspot.com
http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com http://nosobrasotros.blogspot.com

> I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry"

Hear that lonesome whippoorwill,
He sounds too blue to fly.
The midnight train is whining low,

I'm so lonesome I could cry.
I've never seen a night so long
When time goes crawling by.
The moon just went behind a cloud
To hide its face and cry.

Did you ever see a robin weep,
When leaves began to die?
That means he's lost the will to live,
I'm so lonesome I could cry.

The silence of a falling star
Lights up a purple sky.
And as I wonder where you are
I'm so lonesome I could cry.

↑ Index

122. Gabriel Gudding vladimir mayakovsky - april 14 1930
Wed 14 Apr 2010

Mayakovsky shot himself on this day 80 years ago.

A and B and C and D and E and F and H. Pity.

↑ Index

123. Iris Law
Lantern Review Submissions Deadline EXTENDED
Wed 14 Apr 2010

Lantern Review, a new online journal of Asian American poetry, seeks submissions of poetry, translations, visual art, essays on poetics, and collaborative work for its inaugural issue. Submissions are now being accepted through April 29, 2010 via our online form. Please visit www.lanternreview.com to read our guidelines in detail.

*About Us * Lantern Review: A Journal of Asian American Poetry is published in two formats: a twice-annual electronic magazine, and a blog<http://www.lanternreview.com/blog>which our team of staff writers updates weekly with interviews, reviews, literary news, writing prompts, and more. We aim to serve the literary community by providing a virtual space in which to promote and discuss the work of contemporary Asian American poets and artists. LR seeks to publish expertly crafted work in a variety of forms and aesthetics, including traditional and experimental pieces, hybrid forms, multimedia work, and new translations. We welcome pieces from anglophone writers of all ethnic backgrounds whose work has a vested interest in issues relevant to the Asian diaspora in North America, as well as work created collaboratively in a community context.

Contact Information
[redacted]
Iris A. Law, Editor; Mia Ayumi Malhotra, Associate Editor

--
Iris A. Law
MFA Candidate
Department of Creative Writing
University of Notre Dame
[redacted]

↑ Index

124. Ann Stephenson
KOSTAS ANAGNOPOULOS /// READY SET READINGS at Whitespace
Wed 14 Apr 2010

READY SET READINGS at Whitespace

KOSTAS ANAGNOPOULOS

Friday April 16th
8:00pm

Kostas Anagnopoulos is the founding editor of Insurance Editions, and his chapbooks include Daydream, Irritant, and Various Sex Acts. Moving Blanket, his first full-length book was recently published by Ugly Duckling Presse. His new chapbook, Some of My Reasons, is forthcoming from Insurance. Kostas was born and raised in Chicago, and he now lives in Queens, New York where he works as a salesman and is the style director for Aesthetic Movement, a design firm and showroom. In his spare time he volunteers as an end of life doula. He is delighted to be reading in Atlanta, a place where he has never visited before.

http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org/contact/list/event/?event_id=75
http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org/catalog/browse/item/?pubID=68

{A limited number of letterpress books created especially for this event will be given away at the reading.}

READY SET READINGS at Whitespace is committed to new and innovative writing.

WHITESPACE
814 Edgewood Avenue Northeast - Atlanta, GA 30307
[redacted]

http://www.whitespace814.com/
http://whitespace814.blogspot.com/2010/04/poetry-reading-kostas-anagnopoulos.html

↑ Index

125. Ruth Lepson

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Wed 14 Apr 2010

& henry grimes has a huge number of poems looking for a press

On 4/14/10 4:36 AM, "steve dalachinsky" <[redacted]> wrote:

> joe mcphee william parker cecil taylor henry grimes
> musicians who are poets many more like that in jazz world
>
> On Tue, 13 Apr 2010 19:15:06 -0400 Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> writes:
> Hi, Nana,
>
> I'm in a group called low road with sax player Noah Preminger &
> keyboard
> player Eric Lane. They do jazz settings of my poems & I read them.
>
> Thanks for asking.
>
> On 4/12/10 6:31 PM, "Nana Zabic" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've
> read
> and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at
> least > did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a
> whole
> lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us,
> although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio
> blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape
> or > form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I > don't > have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this > phenomenon.

> But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana
>
> guidelines &

↑ Index

126. Maria Damon
Re: Franz Kamin (1941-2010)
Wed 14 Apr 2010

I saw him play Ives's Concord Sonatas at a private house concert a few years ago. Sublime. A really wonderful experience.
Very sad, so very sad.

Patrick Lovelace wrote: > Amazing sadness. I'll always recall when I first read him--the > experience was endlessly edifying--& I never stopped.
>
> Scrbble Death, particularly, stands out as an enduring & continually > impressive achievement.
>
> Best wishes to all.
>
>
>
> On Apr 13, 2010, at 4:29 PM, George Quasha <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
>> With deep sadness I have to report that our friend of decades Franz >> Kamin died in a car crash with another composer friend James Brody on >> Sunday; Brody, Franz's old close friend, was driving him to the >> country when the unexplained accident occurred. Franz was in my view >> a great artist--visionary composer, poet, writer of unexampled prose, >> extraordinary pianist and organizer of powerful events, inspiration >> and guide to many many people--far too much to say now--and I will >> say more later when the impact of this lets me. For many of us Franz >> was a cornerstone of a big imaginal building we do everything in our >> work to live inside of.

>>
>>
>> George Quasha
>>
>> www.quasha.com
>>
>>
>>
>

↑ Index

127. Cassandra Laity
Re: Rae's Pulitzer
Wed 14 Apr 2010

She's on facebook-- she "friended" me, I feel so honored. Friend her and you can "get a hold of her."

cassandra

Cassandra Laity
Associate Professor
Co-Editor Modernism/Modernity
Drew University
Madison, NJ 07940
>>> Cecelia Belle <[redacted]> 04/14/10 6:29 PM >>>
Just had to write in to congratulate, Rae, and don't know how to get a hold of her; to say David Bromige was a Huge fan of Rae's, and often quoted her line, " the smallest distance inexhaustible". (Hope I got it right.) He would be so pleased. So am I. Cecelia Belle Bromige

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Caleb Cluff
Sent: Tuesday, April 13, 2010 3:48 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Rae's Pulitzer

Another great (greater) poet acknowledged: - Special citation: Hank Williams for his craftsmanship as a songwriter who expressed universal feelings with poignant simplicity and played a pivotal role in transforming country music into a major musical and cultural force in American life.

Caleb

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Paul Nelson
Sent: Tuesday, 13 April 2010 7:54 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Rae's Pulitzer

So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:

Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041202 750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

128. J. Michael Mollohan

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Wed 14 Apr 2010

I have been a musician on and off for roughly 50 years. I still perform live occasionally and record the odd song now and then. Currently I'm trying to figure out what to do with some of Alan Sondheim's crystal radio recordings.

I have a site for music: http://pages.suddenlink.net/ideas

What was the question?

↑ Index

129. Patrick F. Durgin

Aldon Nielsen on Lorenzo Thomas' "Two One-Act Plays"

Wed 14 Apr 2010

The series of "Previews & Supplements" of/to THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER: 1945-1985 concludes with guest-blogger Aldon Nielsen on Lorenzo Thomas' "Two One-Act Plays." See http://www.kenningeditions.com for the whole series, including posts on Diane di Prima, V. R. "Bunny" Lang, Pedro Pietri, Theresa Hak Kyung Cha, and others, some of which are culled right out of the book, some of which offer exclusive texts and graphics (e.g. a stunning archival photograph of Steve Buscemi in Fiona Templeton's "Against Agreement"). THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER is edited by Kevin Killian and David Brazil and distributed by Small Press Distribution; ask for it at your local, independent bookseller's or your hometown library. Online, the book is available from Small Press Distribution <http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9780976736455/the-kenning-anthology-of-poets-theater-19451980.aspx?rf=1>, Amazon <http://www.amazon.com/Kenning-Anthology-Poets-Theater-1945-1985/dp/0976736454/>, or postage paid by ordering directly from the press <https://www.2checkout.com/2co/buyer/orderpage?TCOIDÕ4e524cdaede0a92e13fc41fae0d3db&sid66894>. Further discounts are available by subscription <http://www.kenningeditions.com/?page_id8>to Kenning Editions.

With new interest in poetry as a performative art, and with prewar experiments much in mind, the young poets of postwar America infused the stage with the rhythms and shocks of their poetry. These energies manifested themselves all at once, and through the decades have continued to grow and mutate, innovating a form of writing that defies boundaries of genre. THE KENNING ANTHOLOGY OF POETS THEATER: 1945-1985 documents the emergence, growth, and varied fortunes of the form over decades of American literary history, with a focus on key regional movements. The largest and most comprehensive anthology of its kind yet assembled, the volume collects classics, long out of print rarities and texts from unpublished manuscripts. Copiously annotated, it will be an indispensable reference for students of postwar American poetry and avant garde theater. Included are works by Jack Spicer, John Ashbery, Michael McClure, Diane di Prima, Amiri Baraka, Hannah Weiner, Barbara Guest, Sonia Sanchez, Theresa Hak Kyung Cha, Carla Harryman, Charles Bernstein, Leslie Scalapino, Kathy Acker, and many others. A unique feature of the book is its editors' notes even on works omitted but falling within the anthology's purview, including Pedro Pietri's The Masses Are Asses and Jessica Hagedorn's Tenement Lover. Erudite yet highly readable, the plays and prefatory matter offer a highly entertaining glimpse of the ways in which poets have used the theater to widen their audience, develop new techniques, or negotiate their aesthetic community's precepts and desires. In the process, some of the most mature and progressive work within and about the theater was produced, and is at last gathered in one place.

The press is working on three new titles this summer: AMBIENT PARKING LOT, by Pamela Lu; SOME MATH, by Bill Luoma; and a chapbook by Tan Lin. Thanks for spreading the word!

↑ Index

130. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Wed 14 Apr 2010

---

steve dalchinsky, clark coolidge, drew gardner...

murat

On Wed, Apr 14, 2010 at 4:36 AM, steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>wrote:

> joe mcphee william parker cecil taylor henry grimes
> musicians who are poets many more like that in jazz world
>
> On Tue, 13 Apr 2010 19:15:06 -0400 Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> writes:
> Hi, Nana,
>
> I'm in a group called low road with sax player Noah Preminger &
> keyboard
> player Eric Lane. They do jazz settings of my poems & I read them.

> Thanks for asking.
>
> On 4/12/10 6:31 PM, "Nana Zabic" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read
> and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least > did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole > lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us,
> although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio
> blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or > form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't > have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon.
> But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana
>
> guidelines &

↑ Index

131. D.Buuck

query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Thu 15 Apr 2010

Chris Stroffolino. Pat Reed. Eddie Berrigan. Kit Robinson. Julian Brolaski. Bob Perelman? Dillon Westbrook. Andrew Kenower. Lindsey Boldt. Brandon Brown & Alli Warren had a rap group. Kenny Goldsmith sings the classics. cris cheek. Andrew Joron.

From: Nana Zabic <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, April 12, 2010 3:31:23 PM
Subject: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Hi All,

I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.

If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.

Thanks,

Snezana

↑ Index

132. Harold Carr

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Thu 15 Apr 2010

Check out the link:

"Harold Carr and Geoff Miller - Live at City Art May 13, 2009"

at

http://haroldcarr.com/sound/index.html

for one of my recent poetry/music performances.

Regards,
H. Carr

_____ The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multicalendar&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_5

↑ Index

133. sheila black
Re: Rae's Pulitzer
Thu 15 Apr 2010

I don't know Rae personally but I would also like to congratulate her. Her poetry in Veil is the book that had me turn away from traditional, conceptual work to explore language and experimental forms of writing--especially the piece where she collaborates with Ron Silliman. Sheila Black

Sheila Black

--- On Tue, 4/13/10, Cecelia Belle <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Cecelia Belle <[redacted]>
Subject: RE: Rae's Pulitzer
To: "'Poetics List (UPenn, UB)'" <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, April 13, 2010, 7:06 PM

Just had to write in to congratulate, Rae, and don't know how to get a hold of her; to say David Bromige was a Huge fan of Rae's, and often quoted her line, " the smallest distance inexhaustible". (Hope I got it right.) He would be so pleased. So am I. Cecelia Belle Bromige

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Caleb Cluff
Sent: Tuesday, April 13, 2010 3:48 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Rae's Pulitzer

Another great (greater) poet acknowledged: - Special citation: Hank Williams for his craftsmanship as a songwriter who expressed universal feelings with poignant simplicity and played a pivotal role in transforming country music into a major musical and cultural force in American life.

Caleb

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Paul Nelson
Sent: Tuesday, 13 April 2010 7:54 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Rae's Pulitzer

So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:

Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041202 750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

134. Jonathan Skinner
SARDINE SONGS
Thu 15 Apr 2010

The last sardine cannery in the US closes on Friday. Please consider submitting a sarding song (or herring hymn) to Gary Lawless¹s and Karin Spitfire¹s blog:

http://www.bangordailynews.com/external/slideshows/cannery/index.html

http://www.cbsnews.com/stories/2010/04/14/national/main6394365.shtml

http://sardinesong.blogspot.com/

SARDINES

is a yellow, red, orange, black & green word. I got sardines at the dollar store where everything except sardines is more than a dollar, for sixty cents, as they should be my father used to take sardine sandwiches to work perhaps therefore, I love sardines. when people used to talk about the subway, they'd say:
we were packed like sardines which sends a message:
small, cheap, tightly packed, anchovies for the poor or you too can be both colorful & inexpensive as a really snappy, tiny bright blue convertible in which you can enjoy the good things about feeling like a sardine but maybe you'd rather be a striped bass or be a manatee with me or a grand whale, forgetful of nothing even being so big, the ocean's CEO, you'll take home a giant amount of cash when the ocean goes bust so you can share it even with the downtrodden sardines who get packed in cans in Thailand & shipped to the family dollar store for Bernadette

--Bernadette Mayer

↑ Index

135. Peter ciccariello

Re: Rae's Pulitzer

Thu 15 Apr 2010

"Versed" is an outstanding collection, the prize is well deserved!

- Peter Ciccariello

On Mon, Apr 12, 2010 at 5:54 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

> So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:
>
> Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.

> http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041202750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826
>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
>
> C. City, WA [redacted]

--
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/
http://uncommonvision.blogspot.com/
http://poemsfromprovidence.blogspot.com/
http://uncommon-vision.blogspot.com/
You can find my art and writing updates on Twitter
https://twitter.com/ciccariello

↑ Index

136. Rob McLennan
12 or 20 (small press) questions (third series):
Thu 15 Apr 2010

Conducted by rob mclennan and Lisa Pasold, this new series of 12 or 20 questions (originally based on mclennans own first and second series of interviews with writers) is a response to a conversation between mclennan (founder/coordinator of the ottawa small press book fair) and Pasold (current co-coordinator of the Toronto Small Press Fair) after the fall 2009 edition of the Toronto fair, held at the Gladstone Hotel. Over drinks, the two colluded to work a series of interviews with purveyors of small and micro-press, whether chapbook or book publishers, or editors/publishers of magazines, journals or zines. Much thanks to the Gladstone Hotel, who originally provided drinks and the opportunity, and Open Book Toronto, where a number of these pieces have been featured.

interviews (posted) so far:

-- Mark McCawley, Greensleeve Editions, Edmonton AB: April 15, 2010 -- Cameron Anstee, Apt. 9 Press, Ottawa ON: April 6, 2010 -- Angela Carr, Tente, Montreal QC: April 4, 2010 -- Jenna Butler, Rubicon Press, Edmonton AB: March 30, 2010 -- Janet Vickers, Lipstick Press, Gabriola Island BC: March 26, 2010 -- Amanda Earl, AngelHousePress, Ottawa ON: March 22, 2010 ;

http://robmclennansindex.blogspot.com/2010/03/12-or-20-small-press-questions-third.html

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

137. John Cunningham

Re: Rae's Pulitzer

Thu 15 Apr 2010

Having reviewed 'Versed', Peter, I can wholeheartedly concur. John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Peter ciccariello
Sent: April-15-10 11:00 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Rae's Pulitzer

"Versed" is an outstanding collection, the prize is well deserved!

- Peter Ciccariello

On Mon, Apr 12, 2010 at 5:54 PM, Paul Nelson <[redacted]> wrote:

> So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:
>
> Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book > striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that > are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the > first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College > Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, > array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the > Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of > poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits > of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.
>
>
>
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041202
750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826

>
> Paul E. Nelson
>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
>
> C. City, WA [redacted]
>
guidelines
>

--
http://invisiblenotes.blogspot.com/
http://uncommonvision.blogspot.com/
http://poemsfromprovidence.blogspot.com/
http://uncommon-vision.blogspot.com/
You can find my art and writing updates on Twitter
https://twitter.com/ciccariello

↑ Index

138. Maria Damon
Re: Rae's Pulitzer
Thu 15 Apr 2010

---

yes, woo-hoo Rae!

sheila black wrote:
> I don't know Rae personally but I would also like to congratulate her. Her poetry in Veil is the book that had me turn away from traditional, conceptual work to explore language and experimental forms of writing--especially the piece where she collaborates with Ron Silliman. Sheila Black
>
> Sheila Black
>
> --- On Tue, 4/13/10, Cecelia Belle <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: Cecelia Belle <[redacted]>
> Subject: RE: Rae's Pulitzer
> To: "'Poetics List (UPenn, UB)'" <[redacted]>
> Date: Tuesday, April 13, 2010, 7:06 PM
>
> Just had to write in to congratulate, Rae, and don't know how to get a hold > of her; to say David Bromige was a Huge fan of Rae's, and often quoted her > line, " the smallest distance inexhaustible". (Hope I got it right.) He > would be so pleased. So am I. Cecelia Belle Bromige

>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Caleb Cluff
> Sent: Tuesday, April 13, 2010 3:48 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Rae's Pulitzer
>
> Another great (greater) poet acknowledged: - Special citation: Hank Williams > for his craftsmanship as a songwriter who expressed universal feelings with > poignant simplicity and played a pivotal role in transforming country music > into a major musical and cultural force in American life.
>
> Caleb
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Paul Nelson
> Sent: Tuesday, 13 April 2010 7:54 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Rae's Pulitzer
>
> So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:
>
> Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book > striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that > are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the > first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College > Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, > array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the > Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of > poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits > of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.
>
>
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041 202
> 750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826
>
> Paul E. Nelson

>
> Global Voices Radio
> SPLAB!
>
> C. City, WA [redacted]
>
> Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.
>
>
>
> The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential
> and
>
> may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only > for
>
> the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this
>
> email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email > or
>
> any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify > the
>
> sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not
>
> represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free.
> Before
>
> opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is > limited to resupplying any email and attachments.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

139. nieuwland jeroen

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Thu 15 Apr 2010

Samuel Vriezen. He is a Dutch poet (very much influenced by Silliman and other Language poets) and composer (in Cage tradition, and influenced by Morton Feldman, and the Wandelweiser project)

_____

From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thu, April 15, 2010 2:25:04 AM
Subject: Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

steve dalchinsky, clark coolidge, drew gardner...

murat

On Wed, Apr 14, 2010 at 4:36 AM, steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>wrote:

> joe mcphee william parker cecil taylor henry grimes
> musicians who are poets many more like that in jazz world
>
> On Tue, 13 Apr 2010 19:15:06 -0400 Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
> writes:
> Hi, Nana,
>
> I'm in a group called low road with sax player Noah Preminger &
> keyboard
> player Eric Lane. They do jazz settings of my poems & I read them.
>
> Thanks for asking.
>
> On 4/12/10 6:31 PM, "Nana Zabic" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've
> read
> and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at
> least > did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a
> whole
> lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us,
> although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio

> blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or > form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't > have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon.
> But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana
>
> guidelines &

↑ Index

140. Jennifer Karmin
Aaaaaaaaaaalice & Flim Forum Press
Thu 15 Apr 2010

hi poetics friends....i'm happy to share that my new book from flim forum press is now out.Â details below.

big thanks to all who have offered their support on this project.Â for those interested in review copies and/or setting up performances, please be in touch.

onwards,
jen karmin

Flim Forum Press presents
Aaaaaaaaaaalice by Jennifer Karmin

travelogue in 11 cantos scored for polyvocal improvisation

112 pages, 7x9
ISBN 978-0-9790888-3-4
http://www.aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

"This book, a score, is full of information both literal and (im)possible. Do dip in; see what you come out with."

â€” Bernadette Mayer

"Jennifer Karmin brings an openness and generosity to these poems of public address and private insistence. Aaaaaaaaaaalice's buoyant charm calls out for new listeners."

â€” Charles Bernstein

"I like tightly proposed structures in which anything can happen & does because the more tightly controlled the structures, the more explosively the language will implode, disseminate, fold in or out or whatever it is it needs to do to loosen up or reverse direction & meaning. And thatâ€™s the fun of Aaaaaaaaaaalice, lithe row of straight aâ€™s followed by biting animal commentary."

â€” Pierre Joris

"Alice and anime, Asia and uncertainty, we do so want our sounds to make sense, our textual travels to have a guide, even if that guide is the white rabbit that will hide. Aaaaaaaaaaalice is the sound and sight of the disappearing rabbit, the one with a hat, the one who pops up with regular unpredictability whenever we go somewhere not here, and while words will swivel around us like our very own heads, making the unfamiliar familiar and the familiar unfamiliar, making no sense but nonsense and non-sense sense, like in this very text, whatâ€™s moreover curious, as Karmin rightly notes, is that 'yesterday a man was walking.' "

â€” Vanessa Place

Jennifer Karmin has published, performed, exhibited, taught, and experimented with language across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. She curates the Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, community centers, and on city streets, including Betalevel (CA), Links Hall (IL), the French Broad Institute of Time and the River (NC), the Poetry Project (NY), the Urban Institute for Contemporary Arts (MI), and Woodland Pattern Book Center (WI).

A proud member of the Dusie Kollektiv, she is the author of the Dusie chapbook Evacuated: Disembodying Katrina. Walking Poem, a collaborative street project, is featured online at How2. Her poems are widely published in anthologies and journals, like A Sing Economy (Flim Forum Press), Come Together: Imagine Peace (Bottom Dog Press), Not A Muse (Haven Books), The City Visible: Chicago Poetry for the New Century (Cracked Slab Books), Bird Dog, Cannot Exist, Delirious Hem, MoonLit, Otoliths, and Womb. She is the Community Aesthetician for Les Figues Press at Give A Fig.

In Chicago, Jennifer teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the public schools. She earned her BA in the Poetics Program at the University of Buffalo and MFA in the Writing Program at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. Past grants and residencies were funded by the Chicago Department of Cultural Affairs, the Djerassi Program, the Joseph Kellman Family Foundation, the Poetry Center of Chicago, Poets & Writers, Rochester Community Savings Bank, Summer Literary Seminars, and the Synapses Foundation.

To buy online, read some early reviews & find performance dates:
http://www.aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

To buy thru the mail, send a check for $20 ($16 +$4 shipping & handling):

Flim Forum Press
418 Brown Street, #17
Iowa City, IA 52245

To query:
klane at flimforum dot com
http://www.flimforum.blogspot.com
also find Flim Forum on Facebook

↑ Index

141. Jason Quackenbush

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Thu 15 Apr 2010

---

i was a musician before i was a poet. i went to berklee college of music and graduated from their electronic music and recording program. i still compose but i mostly keep it to myself.

On Apr 12, 2010, at 3:31 PM, Nana Zabic wrote:

> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't > have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon.

> But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana

↑ Index

142. Joel Chace

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Thu 15 Apr 2010

Joel Chace, here--working poet, playwright, and still occasionally working keyboard player. Music Samples----------

http://www.purevolume.com/compass/albums/Live+at+St.+Lawrence+University

Thanks! Interesting subject!

On Mon, Apr 12, 2010 at 6:31 PM, Nana Zabic <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana

↑ Index

143. Poetry Project

Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 15 Apr 2010

This is what the next week looks like at The Poetry Project.

Check out the first post from our April guest-blogger Macgregor Card here: http://poetryproject.org/project-blog

Friday, April 16, 10 PM
Hillary Juster & Gregory Laynor

Hillary Juster has black hair and soon a BA in interdisciplinary studies from NYU as well. She won 1st place in a poetry competition in 8th grade, won the Lamont Younger Poet's Prize at 15, but hasn't won much since. As a compliment to reading poetry, she likes to engage members of audience with sculpture, lighting, photography, and touching. In her spare time, she edits the old college lit mag, The Minetta Review, or is about to do something pretty impressive. Check out her work in the forthcoming The Physical Poets Home Library.

Gregory Laynor has been teaching & studying at Temple University in Philadelphia. His reading of Gertrude Stein's The Making of Americans appears on UbuWeb. He does a blog at academicpoetry.com. He is co-editing for Chax Press the collected writings of the Philadelphia poet Gil Ott.

Monday, April 19, 8 PM
THE SALT OF STRUCTURE: A Celebration of Miron Bia³oszewski & Launch of Aufgabe Magazine #9

The Salt of Structure: A Celebration of Miron Bia³oszewski will comprise readings from Bia³oszewski's poems, prose, a performance of several of his cabaret pieces, as well as readings from the new issue of Aufgabe which features Polish poetry & poetics in translation. The work will be presented by American poets Peter Gizzi, Lisa Jarnot, Joan Retallack, Corina Copp, Paolo Javier, and Eugene Ostashevsky; Edwin Frank, Editor of the NYRB Classics Series; and Polish poet Ewa Chru¶ciel, who is featured in the Aufgabe issue and will also read from her own poetry. The evening will be introduced by Harvard professor Joanna Ni¿yñska. There will be a post-reading reception.

Miron Bia³oszewski (1922-1983) was one of Poland's great postwar poets but is so far little known in English. At once playful, meditative, provocative, perplexing, and evasive, his work is extraordinarily difficult to translate. Aside from a handful of poems published in Mi³osz's anthology Postwar Polish Poetry, only one slim volume of Bia³oszewski's verse has so far appeared in English; but both it and the acclaimed, unconventional Memoir of the Warsaw Uprising remain long out of print. This situation is hopefully changing. In a recent survey of translation desiderata conducted by The Quarterly Conversation, poet and Words without Borders editor Ilya Kaminsky replied: "Poems of Miron Bia³oszewski is the book I hope to one day hold in my hands." And the new (#9) issue of the Brooklyn-based literary journal Aufgabe, which features a special section on Polish poetry and poetics edited by Mark Tardi, is a big step in that direction. The portfolio presents an ample selection of new translations of Bia³oszewski's work as well as several previously published poems, along with a critical essay by critic Kacper Bartczak and work by younger Polish poets, including Ewa Chru¶ciel, who might be considered inheritors of the Bia³oszewskian tradition of innovative, experimental poetry.

Visit poetryproject.org for performer bios.

Wednesday, April 21, 8 PM
Other Flowers: A Celebration of James Schuyler

Other Flowers: Uncollected Poems, edited by Simon Pettet and James Meetze, brings together 165 unseen poems from Schuyler, spanning from the early 1950s until his death in 1991. Featuring both editors with Anselm Berrigan, Tom Carey, John Coletti, Bill Corbett, Elaine Equi, Jonathan Galassi, Vincent Katz, Eileen Myles, Charles North, Arlo Quint, Stacy Szymaszek, Susie Timmons, Geoffrey Young and Anne Waldman.

Friday, April 23, 10 PM
Still Talking: New Film & Poetry

In conjunction with We Saw The Light: Conversations Between New American Cinema & Poetry (4/30), tonight's event features readings, screenings and performance from five young Brooklyn-based poets and filmmakers: Jessica Fiorini, Derek Kroessler, Andrew Lampert, Dani Leventhal & Fern Silva.

Jessica Fiorini is the author of the chapbooks Sea Monster at Night (Goodbye Better) and Light Suite (forthcoming from Pudding House Publications). She has been published in Lungfull!, Brooklyn Rail and the Poetry Project Newsletter. Jessica currently lives in Brooklyn.

Derek Kroessler originally hails from Providence, RI and is finishing up his senior year at NYU. His poems have appeared in Pleasure, and he has one homemade chapbook, Word/Turd.

Born in the mid-70s in the Midwest, Andrew Lampert has staged performances and exhibited his films at The Whitney Museum of American Art, The Getty Museum, The British Film Institute, The Kitchen, The Rotterdam International Film Festival, Kill Your Timid Notion Festival, Light Industry, Mitchell Algus Gallery and many other venues here and abroad. He lives in Brooklyn.

Dani Leventhal's videos are distributed through the Video Data Bank. She has screened her work at Oberhausen, Rotterdam, Gene Siskel Film Center, CineCycle and Anthology Film Archives. In 2007 she got an Astraea Visual Arts Award and a Women's Studio Workshop Book Arts Grant. In 2003 she received an MFA in Sculpture from the University of Illinois at Chicago and in 2009 an MFA in film/video from Bard College.

Fern Silva's work has been screened and performed at various festivals, galleries, and cinematheques including International Film Festival Rotterdam, New York Film Festival, Anthology Film Archive, Images Festival, IndieLisboa International Film Festival, Bangkok Experimental Film Festival, Biennale Bandits-Mages Festival, Roulette Gallery, Millennium Film Workshop and White Box Gallery. He received a BFA from Massachusetts College of Art and is in the process of receiving his MFA from Bard College.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you'd like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

144. Cara Benson
(made): Mon April 19 @ Troy Arts
Thu 15 Apr 2010

Monday, April 19 | 7:00 pm
Â
Cara Benson will perform a se

Monday, April 19 | 7:00 pm
Â
Cara Benson will perform a series of interconnected poems from her new book, (made). Through breath, repetition and trance chant Benson embodies a socio-political process of presenting the performer as both maker and destroyer.

Â Come a few moments early to check out:
Â In the Presidentâ€™s Gallery -Â â€œReal Estateâ€ - an architextural exhibit by Cara Benson and Jon Lathrop.
Â
"How do the rooms we inhabit accommodate speech? Consider walls as punctuation. A window -- a verb. Though architectural syntax may appear less malleable than the structures of sentences, language and buildings are constructs. We hope for integrity at the intersection."

Financial assistance provided by:

Â
The Arts Center of the Capital Region
265 River Street, Troy, NY 12180
Phone: [redacted]
Â
_____Â
http://www.necessetics.comÂ {homepage}Â http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.htmlÂ {journal}

↑ Index

145. William James Austin

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Thu 15 Apr 2010

Try William James Austin (moi). If you check my website, WilliamJamesAustin.com, you'll get some info re: my professional experience as a guitarist. WJA

-----Original Message-----
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, Apr 14, 2010 8:25 pm
Subject: Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

steve dalchinsky, clark coolidge, drew gardner...
murat

n Wed, Apr 14, 2010 at 4:36 AM, steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>wrote:
> joe mcphee william parker cecil taylor henry grimes
musicians who are poets many more like that in jazz world

On Tue, 13 Apr 2010 19:15:06 -0400 Ruth Lepson <[redacted]>
writes:
> Hi, Nana,
>
> I'm in a group called low road with sax player Noah Preminger &
> keyboard
> player Eric Lane. They do jazz settings of my poems & I read them.
>
>
> Thanks for asking.
>
>
> On 4/12/10 6:31 PM, "Nana Zabic" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > Hi All,
> >
> > I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've
> read
> > and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at > least > > did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a > whole
> > lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us,
> > although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio
> > blurbs.
> >
> > If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape
> or > > form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I > don't > > have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this > phenomenon.
> > But there might be an event in the future.
> >
> > Thanks,
> >
> > Snezana
> >
> guidelines &
>
>
>

↑ Index

146. Alan Sondheim

My sound files are in a new archive - check it out! (please announce)

Fri 16 Apr 2010

Hi -

My sound files are in a new archive - please check it out!

ESP-Disk has given me server space for my sound/music works (solos and collaborations). I won't have them any longer at - www.alansondheim.org, but do check out -

http://www.espdisk.com/alansondheim/

The following has the latest at the top - at this point, however, it depends only on upload order -

http://www.espdisk.com/alansondheim/?M=D

Eventually there will be about 550 or more files up. They're almost all mp3s. Please enjoy, and let me know if you have questions about individual works. (There are about 240 up now; it's a long upload.)

When I make newer pieces, I'll announce them with the new URL; they'll be at the top of the list. Note this work is all for free, but you can still support the musicians!

I want to thank everyone at espdisk.com for giving me this space. Needless to say, ESP-Disk, like every alternative recording company, needs your support!

Thanks, Alan

↑ Index

147. steve dalachinsky

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Fri 16 Apr 2010

---

marisol limon martinez poet musician painter

On Wed, 14 Apr 2010 18:59:06 -0400 "J. Michael Mollohan"
<[redacted]> writes:
> I have been a musician on and off for roughly 50 years. I still > perform > live occasionally and record the odd song now and then. Currently > I'm > trying to figure out what to do with some of Alan Sondheim's crystal

> radio
> recordings.
>
> I have a site for music: http://pages.suddenlink.net/ideas
>
> What was the question?
>
>
>

↑ Index

148. Nicholas Karavatos

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Fri 16 Apr 2010

Hi,

Nicholas Karavatos

http://www.archive.org/details/NicholasKaravatos-2009December2-ArcataTheaterLoungeCalifornia
http://www.archive.org/details/NicholasKaravatos1992September20NorthCountryFairArcataPlaza Also explore http://nicholaskaravatos.blogspot.com/

For much, much more.

Thanks,
Nick

Nicholas Karavatos

Dept of Language & Literature

American University of Sharjah

PO Box 26666

Sharjah

United Arab Emirates

> Date: Mon, 12 Apr 2010 17:31:23 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
> To: [redacted]
>
> Hi All,

> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

149. lora

query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Fri 16 Apr 2010

I am Lora Bloom, a poet whose outlet is mostly music these days. I

I am Lora Bloom, a poet whose outlet is mostly music these days. In the late nineties I published a lot and started my own literary magazine, Siren's Silence. Now my poems see light mostly in my band "Radio Eris" http://www.myspace.com/radio5eris - we are an experimental spoken-word outfit in Philadelphia. Some of my new work, instead of being written, comes out as spontaneous improvisations with the band.

↑ Index

150. Jeffrey Side

'Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes' is now available at Amazon

Fri 16 Apr 2010

'Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes' is now available at Amazon:

http://www.amazon.com/Cyclones-High-Northern-Latitudes-Berry/dp/1935084089

Sorry for posting this again, but I left out the subject heading on the last one.

↑ Index

151. Rob McLennan vote for the 2010
Fri 16 Apr 2010

---

poet laureate of the blogosphere;

http://bloggingpoet.squarespace.com/bloggingpoetcom/vote-for-the-2010-poet-laureate-of-the-blogosphere.html

i was on this a couple of years ago (before i realized it even existed) & apparently came EXTREMELY close to winning;

there, i leave it now in yr hands.....

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

152. Nicholas Karavatos
Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
Fri 16 Apr 2010

---

and David Meltzer, of course

Nicholas Karavatos

Dept of Language & Literature

American University of Sharjah

PO Box 26666

Sharjah

United Arab Emirates

> Date: Mon, 12 Apr 2010 17:31:23 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
> To: [redacted]
>
> Hi All,

> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

153. mIEKAL aND

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Fri 16 Apr 2010

This is a very interesting thread but it would be muchly useful to have more than just a list of names...

& where does sound poetry fit into this or someone like Jerry Rothenberg who accompanies himself with various handheld percussion. & the wonderful performances of Alison Knowles who makes music instruments like drums & rattles out of handmade paper.

~mIEKAL

↑ Index

154. Edward Foster

New Boooooks

Fri 16 Apr 2010

Talisman is publishing two important books this week: a new translation of Panait Istrati's "Kyra Kyralina" by Christopher Sawyer-Laucanno and the second volume in John High's trilogy, "The Book of Unknowing." For details, see http://www.spdbooks.org/Search/Default.aspx?SearchTerm=Kyra+Kyralina and http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781584980681/a-book-of-unknowing.aspx.

A brief note re: the Istrati book: this is one of the great Modernist novels, much celebrated abroad, although until now little known in the United States. -- When an earlier translation appeared in the 1920s, a reviewer in Time magazine said the book was not "for the general public, which takes unkindly to abnormality no matter how subtly treated." In short, the hero happens to be gay. We can hope that Americans in 2010 are better prepared to deal with such issues, for truly "Kyra Kyralina" is a delight, not to be missed. Istrati, wrote Romain Rolland, "is a born storyteller, a teller of Oriental tales, and once he launches into a story, no one knows, not even him, if it will last an hour or a thousand and one nights."

↑ Index

155. Bonnie MacAllister

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Fri 16 Apr 2010

Lora Bloom and I would qualify.

Lora fronts the poetic experimental avant-garde noise band, Radio Eris.

http://www.myspace.com/radio5eris

I've recorded tracks with various studio musicians, and I'm about to reenter the studio for the curated Oracle Sessions on the Main Street West label (West Philadelphia).

Best,
Bonnie MacAllister

--
http://bonnie-macallister.blogspot.com/
http://tinyurl.com/bonnie-macallister

↑ Index

156. Ann Bogle

Art is theft

Fri 16 Apr 2010

Explain art is theft.

I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could think of for poor.

The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all? Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something about a mountain.

I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?

Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?

Chicago Style. 300 words.

Ann Bogle

↑ Index

157. Margaret Carson

Ann Lauterbach and Leonard Schwartz Reading -- in English and Spanish

Fri 16 Apr 2010

Bilingual poetry reading (English-Spanish)
by Ann Lauterbach author of Eclipse con objeto translated from the English by Marta Lopez-Luaces

&

Leonard Schwartz author of Bendiciones gnosticas y otros poemas translated from the English by Mercedes Roffe

Wednesday April 21, 6:30 pm
at the Mulberry Street Public Library
10 Jersey Street, between Mulberry and Lafayette
New York, NY 10012 - (212) 966-342

↑ Index

158. derek beaulieu

new from talonbooks: HOW TO WRITE by derek beaulieu

Fri 16 Jul 2010

---

new from Talonbooks:

**

HOW TO WRITE

by derek beaulieu

http://www.talonbooks.com/index.cfm?event=titleDetails&ISBN=0889226296 available from your favourite independent bookseller!

**

How to Write is a perverse Coles Notes: a paradigm of prosody where writing as sampling, borrowing, cuttingÂ and Âpasting and mashÂ-up meets literature. This collection of conceptual short ï¬ction takes inspiration from LautrÃ©amontâ€™s decree that â€œplagiarism is necessary. It is implied in the idea of progress. It clasps the authorâ€™s sentence tight, uses his expressions, eliminates a false idea, replaces it with the right idea.â€

Already early in the twentieth century, the modernist Ezra Pound asserted that poets should â€œmake it new,â€ and of course by â€œitâ€ he meant â€œthe traditionâ€: the materiality of preÂ-existent writing. The assertion is by no means original, much less post-modern: John Donne, for example, argued centuries ago that â€œall mankind is of one author, and is one volume.â€

How to Write is an instruction manual for the demise of ownership. A multitudinous dialogue of writers and subjects, words and contexts, it unleashes a cacophony of voices where authors donâ€™t own their words, they merely rent them from other authors. Containing ten pieces of conceptual prose ranging from the purely appropriated through the entirely recomÂposed, and covering a range of texts from the anonymous to the famous, it includes samplings from, among many others: Lawrence Sterne; Agatha Christie; Bob Kane; Roy Lichtenstein; and every piece of text within one block of the authorâ€™s home. Its title story is an exhaustive record of every incidence of the words â€œwriteâ€ or â€œwritesâ€ in forty different English Âlanguage texts picked aesthetically to represent a disparate number of genres.

With How to Write, beaulieu suggests writers and artists would be better served to â€œmake it reframed, make it borrowed, make it reÂ-contextualized.â€ By recasting the canon with cutÂup directions for successful writing, catalogues of events, and lists of vocabulary, he gleefully illustrates Picassoâ€™s dictum that â€œGood artists copy. Great artists steal.â€

ISBN 978Â0Â88922Â629Â6

NonÂï¬ction / Language Arts / Creative Writing

4.25" x 7"; 72pp.; trade paper, $16.95

↑ Index

159. Philip Meersman

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Sat 17 Apr 2010

The Belgian Poet Dirk Elst, you can also add to your list. You can find more on him on his blogsite: http://dirkelst.blogspot.com/ which is in Dutch but he writes and performs also in English, see also: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Vv538I9hdVk&feature=related, http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tOo_WM-bWbk and http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vZnZc5ZH9mU

Fragments out of one of his latest performance shows.
I worked with Dirk for several performances and I recommend him as a poet, a performer and a musician.

On Thu, Apr 15, 2010 at 11:14 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> i was a musician before i was a poet. i went to berklee college of music and graduated from their electronic music and recording program. i still compose but i mostly keep it to myself.
>
> On Apr 12, 2010, at 3:31 PM, Nana Zabic wrote:
>
> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana

--
Philip Meersman

!!! New Address
Tentoonstellingslaan 418, bus 46
1090 Jette
Belgium
tel[redacted]
www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
skype: Spooninmybrain
[redacted]
www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
21/03/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
02/04/10: Performance opening expo "Love Letters", KULTOUR10, Sint-Niklaas, BE (http://www.kultour10.be/kultour10/index.php/podium/31-qspooninmybrainq)
16/04/10: "Binnenkort ook in navulpak" op het Once upon a Festival, Kasteel van Laarne, BE (www.onceuponafestival.be)
21/04/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
05/05/10-09/05/10: Literature festival of Tallinn, Estonia
21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/07/10: BruSlam, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

↑ Index

160. richard owens
Olson Conference Videos!
Sat 17 Apr 2010

About two dozen video clips from the Olson Centenary in Worcester, MA (March 25, 2010) can be viewed at Youtube (click on "uploads" to navigate):

http://www.youtube.com/user/damnthecaesars

Speakers include: Ammiel Alcalay, Carla Billitteri, Don Byrd, Pierre Joris, Charles Stein, Anne Waldman, Kate Tarlow Morgan, Sasha Steensen, Donald Wellman, Fred Dewey, Paul Cardoni (Olson's landlord at 28 Fort Square), Roy Skodnick and others.

The aim is to embed these in a web page eventually, but here for now!

into the fog ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

↑ Index

161. Ed Friedman

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Sat 17 Apr 2010

Dear Snezana,

There are a lot of poets who have been involved with music in one way or another. Off the top of my head.... Some of the more famous ones: Carl Sandburg, Patti Smith, Jim Carroll, Amiri Baraka, Robert Hunter, Cecil Taylor, Ed Sanders, Tuli Kupferberg, Allen Ginsberg. Less famous: Barbara Barg, Maggie Dubris, Jim Brodey, Clark Coolidge, Jayne Cortez, Bob Holman, David Henderson, Elinor Nauen, Ravi Singh (Neal Hackman); Janet Hamill; Jane Siberry, Marc Nasdor, Ellen Carter and Sparrow (their band Foamola), Vernon Reid (more music than poetry), Vernon Frazer, Miguel Algarin, Ted Greenwald, David Meltzer, Steven Taylor, the late Sekou Sundiatta. Then there are poets who musically vocalize in performing their works (just to name a few): Tracie Morris, Anne Waldman, Jerome Rothenberg, Edwin Torres, the late Pedro Pietri.

Some of my music activities over the years: wrote songs; played guitar & sang; mixed soundtrack music for various readings/performances/plays; collaborated fairly extensively with composer Garrett List; played guitar and sang in all-composer bands (the Charles Lee Redman Trio, the Prairie Oysters, and Peter Gordon¹s Love of Life Orchestra); wrote poems with sung lines in them.

Sincerely,

Ed Friedman

↑ Index

162. Julie Strand

Woodland Pattern Book Center is looking to hire a full-time Education Coordinator.

Sat 17 Apr 2010

Woodland Pattern Book Center is looking to hire a full-time Education Coordinator.

Woodland Pattern Book Center is dedicated to the discovery, cultivation and presentation of contemporary literature and the arts.

Our goals are to promote a lifetime practice of reading and writing, to provide a forum and resource center for writers/artists in Milwaukee and our region, and to increase and diversify the audience for contemporary literature through innovative approaches to multi-arts programming.

Position Title: Education Coordinator

Start Date: Between May 25, 2010 and June 1, 2010

Position Objective: To coordinate all aspects of Woodland Pattern's growing Education program, including after school creative writing classes for children, in-school workshops, summer writing camps, evening workshops for adults, master classes with visiting writers and any other educational or community outreach activities. Education Coordinator directs the Urban Youth Literary Arts program.

Qualifications: Excellent oral and written communication skills, experience in educational and/or nonprofit setting, commitment to contemporary literature, grant writing and administration experience.

Pay Rate, Benefits and Terms: This is a professional position, full-time permanent, eligible for health insurance. The Education Coordinator reports to the Executive Director.

If interested, a more lengthy job description is available upon request.

Applicants should send their resume to [redacted]. Or:

Woodland Pattern Book Center

Attn: Chuck Stebelton

720 E. Locust Street

Milwaukee, WI 53212

http://woodlandpattern.org/

↑ Index

163. Rob McLennan
the globe & mail book blog
Sat 17 Apr 2010

---

another week of exciting entries during April's 'poetry month' feature at the Globe & Mail book blog (curated by yours truly);

week #2 features:

Phil Hall on Laurie Duggan
Sachiko Murakami on a. rawlings
Rob Budde on Ken Belford

Nicole Markotic on Nikki Reimer & Jesse Patrick Ferguson on Peter Norman

http://www.theglobeandmail.com/books/in-other-words/

still to come: pieces on Kate Eichhorn, Gregory Betts, Christine Stewart, Jeff Derksen, Phoebe Tsang, Artie Gold & others!

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

164. Douglas Manson
Contact info Field and Osman
Sat 17 Apr 2010

Could anyone backchannel email/contact addresses for Thalia Field and Jena Osman?

engaging forum on Research (&poetics) last night at Poets House, with John D'Agata.

d

↑ Index

165. Francis Raven
Raven's Occasional Spice Club
Sat 17 Apr 2010

Hey Everyone,

Carolyn and I have started a spice club that I thought might interest you. Kickstarter has a great model for arts based businesses. We'd love to send you some spices.

You can sign up here:
http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/716933849/ravens-occasional-spice-club

What is Raven's Occasional Spice Club?

Are you ever bored by the foods you are eating? Think all food is tasting bland? Can’t find any new flavors? If so, you need to join Raven’s Occasional Spice Club!

In the spice club, members receive a small packet of a rare spice (such as berbere from Ethiopia), a homemade spice (such as pecoconut, a novel blend of powdered pecans and coconut), a strange spice (such as puffed lotus seeds), or a unique spice (such as persnickety—what's that? You need to join to find out!). The spices are specially chosen by our curator, Francis Raven. Whenever possible, the ingredients used in the spice club are sustainably produced.

As you can tell, at the Occasional Spice Club, we have a broad definition of what a spice is. Something is a spice if it (1) makes food more interesting or tasty, (2) is used in nutritionally insignificant quantities, and (3) can be sprinkled or shaken.

Why the club? Because spice is the spice of life. That's our motto.

What is included in an installment of the spice club?

With each installment of the spice club, you will receive a small amount of the spice in question, a recipe (or two or three) using the spice, fun facts about its origin and history, and maybe some artsy photos of it or examples of its use in literature or a poem written in its honor or celebrity testimonials.

What does your pledge cover?

Your pledge covers the costs of buying and/or making the spices, producing the informational content accompanying the spice, shipping, and the time of our dedicated research and curatorial staff in investigating the spices.

peace out francis and carolyn

--
Francis Raven
2125 14th St. NW #332
Washington DC 20009
[redacted]
http://www.ravensaesthetica.com/

Some Stationary:
http://somestationary.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

166. Poetics List

Poetics List Welcome Message

Sat 17 Apr 2010

Reminder -- The list editors reserve the right to decide what messages will be approved for posting to this list. Submitting posts to the list does not guarantee that they will be published.

-- Flame messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List.

The Poetics List

Sponsored by: The Electronic Poetry Center (SUNY-Buffalo/University of Pennsylvania) and the Regan Chair (Department of English, Penn) & Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing (Penn)

Poetics List Editor: Amy King

Poetics List Editorial Board:
Charles Bernstein, Julia Bloch, Lori Emerson, Amy King, Joel Kuszai, Nick Piombino, Thom Donovan

Note: this Welcome message is also available at the EPC/@Buffalo page

Poetics Subscription Registration (required) poetics.list --at -- gmail.com

Poetics Subscription Requests:
http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html

Poetics Listserv Archive:
http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html

Poetics Post:
[redacted]

Note that any correspondence sent to the Poetics List administration account takes about ten days, for response; mail to this account is checked about once per week.

C O N T E N T S:
1. About the Poetics List
2. Posting to the List
3. Subscriptions
4. Subscription Options
5. To Unsubscribe
6. Cautions
7. Flaming

June 2008: Refocussed List Policy In line with our editorial focus, we do not automatically post submissions but select those we think are most useful for sustaining this online community. We appreciate all submissions, but will be more selective in what we choose to post. Queries for contact info, messages intended for just a few subscribers, messages that are not on topic, "flame" messages, and free-standing personal poems or journal entries will, in general, not be forwarded to the list.

1. Posting to the List

Our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible. While we recognize that other lists may sponsor other possibilities for exchange, we request that those participating in this forum keep in mind the specialized and focused nature of this project and respect our decision to operate a moderated list. The Poetics List exists to support and encourage divergent points of view on innovative forms of modern and contemporary poetry and poetics, and we are committed to doing what is necessary to preserve this space for such dialog.

subscribers. All messages are reviewed by the editors in keeping with the goals of the list as articulated in this Welcome Message. The listserv is intended to be a productive communal space for discussion and announcements; as such, subscribers who do not follow listserv policy will be removed from the subscription roll.

Please note that this list is primarily concerned with discussions of poetry and poetics. We strongly encourage subscribers to post information, including web links, relating to publications (print and internet), reading series, and blogs that they have coordinated, edited or published, or in which they appear. Such announcements constitute a core function of this list. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications (print or digital) are always welcome.

The Poetics List is not a forum for a general discussion of poetry or for the exchange of poems. Queres for contact info, messages intended for just a few subscribers, "flame" messages, and free-standing personal poems or journal entries will, in general, not be forwarded to the list.

Also, please note that the Poetics List is not a "chat" list and we discourage the posting of very short messages intended for only a few subscribers. Personal queries and off-topic submissions will not be posted.

Send messages directly to the list address: [redacted].

2. About the Poetics List

Above the world-weary horizons
New obstacles for exchange arise
Or unfold,
O ye postmasters!

With the preceding epigraph, the Poetics Listserv was founded by Charles Bernstein in late 1993. Now in its fourth incarnation, the list has over 1500 subscribers worldwide. We also have a substantial number of nonsubscribing readers, who access the list through our web site (see archive URL above).

Due to the high number of subscribers, we no longer maintain the open format with which the list began (at under 100 subscribers).

Please also note that this is a not a general interest poetry list and information about this list should not be posted to directories of poetry lists. The idea is to keep the list membership to those with specific engagement related to the list's stated orientation.

In addition to being archived through the EPC and at the UB Listerv archive, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas.

Note also that Roof Books published Joel Kuszai's edited collection of the Poetics List; this is available from ROOF and also online at the EPC.

3. Subscriptions

*For all subscription requests go to http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html.

*To subscribe for the first time click on "Subscribe (join) a List." Immediately following your subscription to the poetics listserv we ask that you email us at poetics.list --at -- gmail.com, subject-line "registration," with your full name, street address, email address, and telephone number. Failure to register at the time of subscription will result in automatic deletion from the subscription roll.

*To manage your subscription (for descriptions of the different subscription options please see section 3), click on "Subscriber's Corner."

Subscriptions to the Poetics List are free of charge, but formal registration is required. All other questions about subscriptions, whether about an individual subscription or subscription policy, should be addressed to this same administrative address.

PLEASE NOTE: All subscription-related information and correspondence remains absolutely confidential.

All posts to the list must provide your full real name, as registered. If there is any discrepancy between your full name as it appears in the "from" line of the message header, please sign your post at the bottom. Subscribers who do not include their full name with each post will be unsubscribed from the list.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced, which will result in your subscription being automatically terminated by the Listserv program and the automatically generated message telling you that this has occurred will also likely bounce. If this happens, you may re-subscribe to the list by the same process described above. One remedy to avoid this happening in the future: set your list options to "no-mail" and read the list on the web.

4. Subscription Options

We encourage you to alter your subscription options via the link on the right side of the screen at http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html. If you would prefer not to use the web-interface, you may also email <[redacted]> the following commands:

*to subscribe to the Poetics listserv send [redacted] this one-line message with no "subject":

*RECOMMENDED: if you wish to read the list on our web interface and not receive any messages sent directly, while remaining subscribed to the list and so eligible to send us posts, send this one-line message to <[redacted]> with no "subject": set poetics nomail. Note: this option is also useful for temporary suspension of email service.

*to reactivate Poetics e-mail send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics mail

* to receive the list in digest form (you will receive the day's individual posts in one email sent just after midnight EST), send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics digest

*to receive posts in the default option (you will receive individual postings immediately), send <[redacted]> this one- line message with no "subject": set poetics nodigest

* to receive the list in index form (you will receive a list, without the text of the posts, of the subjects discussed each day along with the author's name and address and the number of lines it comprises; you can also choose to have the index sent to you in either plain text or in HTML format with hyperlinks), send <[redacted]> this one-line message with no "subject": set poetics nohtml index -- or-- set poetics html index

PLEASE NOTE: do not leave your Poetics subscription in default or digest mode if you are going to be away for any extended period of time. Your account may become flooded and you may lose Poetics messages as well as other important mail. In such cases, switch your subscription to "nomail" as recommended above.

5. To Unsubscribe

To unsubscribe (or change any of your subscription options), again, we strongly encourage you to go to the right-hand side of the screen at http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html You may also may unsubscribe by sending a one-line email to

If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note: sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to send messages old address, then resubscribe with your new email address.

6. Cautions

In moderating this list, the editors must consider sometimes competing interests. The basis for our decisions, however, rests with our collective judgment about the kind of space we want for the list.

All posts not only go out to list subscribers but also become a public part of the list archive on the web. Note that posting to the list is a form of publication and that by sending your message to the list you formally consent to such web publication. Posts are currently being indexed by search engines such as Google. It is not possible for us to remove posts from the list archive or to control search engine indexing of these posts.

For reasons of basic security, we do not allow pseudonymous subscriptions. All messages intended for the Poetics List should be sent in Text-Only format, without attachments. We do not accept HTML-formatted messages or attached files. As a general rule, keep individual posts to 1,000 words or less.

Please do not publish list postings without the express permission of the author. Posting on the list is a form of publication. Copyright for all material posted on Poetics remains with the author; material from this list and its archive may not be reproduced without the author's permission, beyond the standard rights accorded by "fair use" of published materials.

All material on the Poetics List remains the property of the authors; before you reproduce this material, in whole or in part, we ask that you get permission (by email is fine) from the authors. If they give permission, then we ask only that you say that the post or posts appeared originally on the Poetics List Used by permission of the author.

Note: Private correspondence via email and letters are always © the author and may not be reproduced in whole or in part without the written permission of the author. As a general rule, we will not publish posts that include such material unless they indicate that permission has been given.

We request that posters limit the number of posts they send to the list on any given day. Given that our goal is a manageable list (manageable both for moderators and subscribers), the list accepts 75 or fewer messages per day, though these parameters may be changed at the discretion of the list moderator.

Like all systems, the listserv will sometimes be down: if you feel your message has been delayed or lost, please wait at least one day to see if it shows up, then check the archive to be sure the message is not posted there; if you still feel there is a problem, you may wish to contact the editors at <[redacted]>.

7. Flaming "Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. We define 'flaming' as any post that resembles a personal attack or personal insult to anyone--subscriber or not. This, of course, includes racist, sexist, or other slurs as well as ad hominem arguments in which the person rather than their work is attacked; in other words while critique of a person's work is welcome (critical inquiry is one of the main functions of the list), this critique cannot extend to a critique or criticism of the person.

↑ Index

167. Nate Pritts
H_NGM_N Open Reading Period
Sat 17 Apr 2010

Hi all -

Just a reminder that H_NGM_N is reading full-length manuscripts through the end of the month.

$10 cheap.

http://www.h-ngm-n.com/h_ngm_n-b__ks/h_ngm_n-poets.html

Thanks,

Nate

_____
:: Dr. Nate Pritts

:: http://www.natepritts.com

_____ The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multicalendar&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_5

↑ Index

168. George Bowering
Re: Art is theft
Sat 17 Apr 2010

On Apr 16, 2010, at 5:23 PM, Ann Bogle wrote:

> Explain art is theft.

Yeah. I agree that explain art is the worst kind of art.

But I don't think that it is theft.

gb

↑ Index

169. Margaret Konkol
S M A L L P R E S S in the A R C H I V E Douglas Basford
Sat 17 Apr 2010

++Please mark your calendars for this Wednesday April 21st. Doug Basford will give a talk at 2pm in The Poetry Collection, 420 Capen:

"'what do they mean by* noigandres*?': On Translating Anglophone Poets into Italian"

This talk will be held in The Poetry Collection, 420 Capen @ SUNY Buffalo. This event is free and open to the public.

Small Press in the Archive Lecture Series dedicates itself to the study of poetry outside the traditional literary historical plot. The lectures in this series draw on materials in The Poetry Collection, at SUNY Buffalo in order to explore community/discourse formations, the status of ephemera and the making of genre, the conditions of literary production, transatlantic cross-pollinations in and between specific magazines, the careers of poets, the role of book art, and how the little magazine functions in the making of the avant-garde.

↑ Index

170. Chris Chapman
Re: Art is theft
Sat 17 Apr 2010

theft + disguise = metaphor?

1. theft: a repetition that doesn't use negation for instantiation.
eg.: a, a not a, A.
2. disguise: a different species within one genus.
3. metaphor: gifts of insubordinate resemblance

if art is the use of metaphor, creative comparison, then it is theft.

On 4/17/10, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
> On Apr 16, 2010, at 5:23 PM, Ann Bogle wrote:
>
>> Explain art is theft.
>>
>
> Yeah. I agree that explain art is the worst kind of art.
>
> But I don't think that it is theft.
>
>
> gb
>
>

↑ Index

171. Philip Meersman

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Sat 17 Apr 2010

Dear mIEKAL, indeed a good question, thinking also about the soundpoets like the Dutch poets Jaap Blonk and Rosalie Hirsch, the Belgian poets Maja Jantar and Jelle Meander...

On Fri, Apr 16, 2010 at 10:14 PM, mIEKAL aND <[redacted]> wrote:

> This is a very interesting thread but it would be muchly useful to have more than just a list of names...
>
> & where does sound poetry fit into this or someone like Jerry Rothenberg who accompanies himself with various handheld percussion. & the wonderful performances of Alison Knowles who makes music instruments like drums & rattles out of handmade paper.
>
> ~mIEKAL

--
Philip Meersman
!!! New Address
Tentoonstellingslaan 418, bus 46
1090 Jette

Belgium
tel[redacted]
www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
skype: Spooninmybrain
[redacted]
www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
21/03/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
02/04/10: Performance opening expo "Love Letters", KULTOUR10, Sint-Niklaas, BE (http://www.kultour10.be/kultour10/index.php/podium/31-qspooninmybrainq)
16/04/10: "Binnenkort ook in navulpak" op het Once upon a Festival, Kasteel van Laarne, BE (www.onceuponafestival.be)
21/04/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
05/05/10-09/05/10: Literature festival of Tallinn, Estonia
21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/07/10: BruSlam, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

↑ Index

172. Maria Damon
Re: Art is theft
Sat 17 Apr 2010

---

here's a shot. but off the cuff. art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not? being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.

Ann Bogle wrote:
> Explain art is theft.
>
> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in > Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could > think of for poor.
>

> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously > cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's > syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all?
> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something > about a mountain.
>
> I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read
> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great > artists incarcerate?
>
> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>
> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>
> Ann Bogle
>
>

↑ Index

173. Matt Henriksen

Announcing Cannibal 5 and Allyssa Wolf's Sister

Sat 17 Apr 2010

Cannibal: Issue 5 112 pages, hand-sewn, silk-screen printed cover w/ poems Carrie Olivia Adams, Samuel Amadon, Claire Becker, Susan Briante, Lily Brown, Adam Clay, CAConrad, Kate Dougherty, Farrah Field, Laura Goode, Kate Greenstreet, Jane Gregory, Whit Griffin, Melanie Hubbard, Andrew Hughes, MC Hyland, Grant Jenkins, Jeff T. Johnson, Jon Leon, Sam Lohmann, Sara Mumulo, Hoa Nguyen, Danielle Pafunda, Alison Palmer, Kyle Schlesinger, Cedar Sigo, Nate Slawson, Tony Tost, Steven Toussaint, Amish Trivedi, G.C. Waldrep, & Joseph Wood

Sister
by Allyssa Wolf 60 pages, hand-sewn, full-color cover $10

Buy them together for $20
Subscribe to all Cannibal Books 2010 titles for $75

flesheatingpoems.blogspot.com

↑ Index

174. Chris Stroffolino
45 RPM Books...
Sat 17 Apr 2010

Excerpt from book "in progress"---Still Life With Silver Jew up at www.chrisstroffolino.com

Also, some new POP SNOB singles---including one featuring a spoken word piece by poet Delia Tramontina-- at www.chrisstroffolino.com

There's also "calls for proposals" etc...

join the POP SNOB group on Facebook if you wish,
http://www.facebook.com/pages/Pop-Snob/106602229379153?ref=ts

I'm being evicted, but WE take requests!
I may be a little slow getting back to you--- but I haven't lost a home, just gained a web-site!

cheers!
C

↑ Index

175. Pam Brown
Review a poetry book for Jacket magazine?
Sat 17 Apr 2010

Hello again Poetics reviewers -

If you would like to review either or both of these titles for Jacket magazine please contact me here
[redacted]

Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes (Lavender Ink, 46 pp)

A collaborative poem by Jake Berry and Jeffrey Side, with drawings and cover art by Rich Curtis.

More Info: http://lavenderink.org/cyclone/

Walls to Kick and Hills to Sing From : A Comedy With Interruptions by Murray Edmond (Auckland university Press, 80pp

Murray Edmond’s new collection of poems is a theatrical assemblage of language and form, arranged in six acts. In ballads, dialogues, choruses and songs, from biking narrow Polish roads to storyboarding a nationalistic film, Edmond presents a collection that is ‘alertinng’, playful, subversive and profound. A consummate director, Edmond balances his dramatic, mock-dramatic and narrative pieces with intense lyric poems, taking the reader into the complex sites where language and experience meet.

More Info: http://web.auckland.ac.nz/uoa/aup/book/2010/edmond-walls-to-kick.cfm

Thanks,
Very best from Pam

---

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

↑ Index

176. steve dalachinsky

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Sun 18 Apr 2010

---

i think we were originally talking about those poets who actually play/make/sing music ????

On Sat, 17 Apr 2010 11:47:20 -0400 Ed Friedman <[redacted]>
writes:
> Dear Snezana,
>
>
> There are a lot of poets who have been involved with music in one > way or > another. Off the top of my head.... Some of the more famous ones:
> Carl
> Sandburg, Patti Smith, Jim Carroll, Amiri Baraka, Robert Hunter, > Cecil
> Taylor, Ed Sanders, Tuli Kupferberg, Allen Ginsberg. Less famous:
> Barbara
> Barg, Maggie Dubris, Jim Brodey, Clark Coolidge, Jayne Cortez, Bob > Holman,
> David Henderson, Elinor Nauen, Ravi Singh (Neal Hackman); Janet

> Hamill; Jane
> Siberry, Marc Nasdor, Ellen Carter and Sparrow (their band Foamola), > Vernon
> Reid (more music than poetry), Vernon Frazer, Miguel Algarin, Ted > Greenwald,
> David Meltzer, Steven Taylor, the late Sekou Sundiatta. Then there > are poets > who musically vocalize in performing their works (just to name a > few):
> Tracie Morris, Anne Waldman, Jerome Rothenberg, Edwin Torres, the > late Pedro > Pietri.
>
> Some of my music activities over the years: wrote songs; played > guitar &
> sang; mixed soundtrack music for various > readings/performances/plays;
> collaborated fairly extensively with composer Garrett List; played > guitar
> and sang in all-composer bands (the Charles Lee Redman Trio, the > Prairie
> Oysters, and Peter Gordon¹s Love of Life Orchestra); wrote poems > with sung > lines in them.
>
> Sincerely,
>
> Ed Friedman
>
>
>

↑ Index

177. steve dalachinsky

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Sun 18 Apr 2010

---

haiku reading at this year's Sakura Matsuri (Cherry Blossom Festival), at the Brooklyn Botanic Garden.

steve dlachinsky, tony pupello, yuko otomo, cor van den huevel and others

For those of you who don't know, the Brooklyn Botanic Garden has MORE species of cherry than anywhere outside of Japan. We don't have more trees than Washington - but way more varieties. And the festival boasts daiko drumming, ikebana, Butoh dance, and many, many other cultural events.

If you plan on going, just make sure to get there early as the lines to get in can be daunting! (Folks are just clamoring to hear the haiku/senryu poets!).
FREE
Brooklyn Botanic Garden
Sakura Matsuri
Saturday, May 1st
2:00 - 3:00 PM
Alfred T. White Memorial

May 14 7pm at Bowery Poetry Club steve dalachinsky jane and albey balgochian's basscentric

May 22 - 2 pm at Grand Army Plaza Library steve dalachinsky and Matt Maneri

Sunday June 20 - 2-5pm
the Vision Festival presents @ AGathering of Tribes 285 East 3rd St. (between C & D - 2nd floor) donation to Tribes poetry by

Jeff Wright
Bob Heman
Aaron Howard w/music to be announced
Lewis Warsh

Poetry & Music

Albey Balgochian & Jane
Barry Wallenstein
Yuko Otomo - Shayna Dulberger
Jake Marmer / plus musician to be announced
Steve Dalachinsky
Alexandre Pierrepont
Tamara Gombert

Musicians / Improvs
Ellen Christi
Ambrose Bie piano
Max Johnson bass
Andrew Barker drums
Charles Waters reeds
plus others

On Fri, 16 Apr 2010 02:31:03 -0700 lora <[redacted]>
writes:
> I am Lora Bloom, a poet whose outlet is mostly music these days. I
>
>
> I am Lora Bloom, a poet whose outlet is mostly music these days. In > the late nineties I published a lot and started my own literary > magazine, Siren's Silence. Now my poems see light mostly in my band > "Radio Eris" http://www.myspace.com/radio5eris - we are an > experimental spoken-word outfit in Philadelphia. Some of my new > work, instead of being written, comes out as spontaneous > improvisations with the band.
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

178. Camille Martin

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Sun 18 Apr 2010

I'm a recovering pianist - master's degree at a conservatory - now composing a song cycle from some of poems in my recently-released Sonnets.

If any sopranos out there would like to look at the scores or hear a sound file, let me know. One is a capella, and the rest have piano accompaniment.

Camille Martin

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [[redacted]] On Behalf Of Philip Meersman [[redacted]]
Sent: Saturday, April 17, 2010 6:22 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

The Belgian Poet Dirk Elst, you can also add to your list. You can find more on him on his blogsite: http://dirkelst.blogspot.com/ which is in Dutch but he writes and performs also in English, see also: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Vv538I9hdVk&feature=related, http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tOo_WM-bWbk and http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vZnZc5ZH9mU

Fragments out of one of his latest performance shows.
I worked with Dirk for several performances and I recommend him as a poet, a performer and a musician.

On Thu, Apr 15, 2010 at 11:14 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> i was a musician before i was a poet. i went to berklee college of music and graduated from their electronic music and recording program. i still compose but i mostly keep it to myself.
>
> On Apr 12, 2010, at 3:31 PM, Nana Zabic wrote:
>
> Hi All,
>
> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio blurbs.
>
> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon. But there might be an event in the future.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Snezana

--
Philip Meersman
!!! New Address
Tentoonstellingslaan 418, bus 46
1090 Jette
Belgium
tel[redacted]
www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
skype: Spooninmybrain
[redacted]
www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
21/03/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
02/04/10: Performance opening expo "Love Letters", KULTOUR10, Sint-Niklaas, BE (http://www.kultour10.be/kultour10/index.php/podium/31-qspooninmybrainq)
16/04/10: "Binnenkort ook in navulpak" op het Once upon a Festival, Kasteel van Laarne, BE (www.onceuponafestival.be)
21/04/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
05/05/10-09/05/10: Literature festival of Tallinn, Estonia
21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/07/10: BruSlam, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

↑ Index

179. Dana Teen Lomax
Small Press Traffic Proudly Presents Kindergarde
Sun 18 Apr 2010

Small Press Traffic and The Creative Work Fund Proudly Present:

Kindergarde: Avant-garde Poems, Plays, Stories, & Songs for Children

World Premier
Sunday, April 25th, 2010 5:30 p.m.
California College of the Arts, Timken Hall
1111 8th Street, San Francisco

What do cutting-edge, experimental writers have to say to children? Don't miss this opportunity to find out!

Featuring:

Jesus Donut by Jaime Cortez

Avant-Garde Exercises by Juliana Spahr

Young Willie Wonka by Brent Cunningham

The Carpet Square by Sarah Anne Cox

Nakkaloo by Juan Felipe Herrera

Streetnamer on the Moon by Susan Gevirtz

The Night I Walked Into The Jungle by Bhanu Kapil

The Word Play by Douglas Kearney

Throat Bird by Camille Roy

Also Featuring the Poetry of:
Robin Blaser, Noelle Kocot, Edwin Torres,
Rosmarie Waldrop, and Charles Bernstein

This is experimental poets' theater at its best!

Under the Artsist Direction of Dana Teen Lomax, Directed by Chris Smith and with Sets and Costumes by Patrick Maloney Kindergarde is sure to stir your imagination and open your head!

Join us!

Dana Teen Lomax
Kindergarde Producer
Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
1111 Eighth Street
San Francisco, CA 94107
[redacted] sptraffic.org
smallpresstraffic.blogspot.com

_____ The New Busy
is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?
ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

180. Camille Martin
new at Rogue Embryo
Sun 18 Apr 2010

New on my blog:

1) rob mclennan's review of Sonnets

2) song setting of one of my sonnets: “katrina, tundra” (YouTube link)

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

↑ Index

181. Rachel Loden

this Friday: Joron, Loden, Giscombe at the de Young in SF

Mon 19 Apr 2010

C.S. Giscombe, Andrew Joron, and Rachel Loden
read from their work at the de Young Museum

Koret Auditorium
Friday, April 23, 7 p.m.

Free to Museum members; $5 for all others

The de Young Museum of Fine Art
50 Hagiwara Tea Garden Drive
Golden Gate Park
San Francisco

Parking lot inside the museum:
enter on Fulton just west of Park Presidio Drive

More info at the de Young Web site:

http://tinyurl.com/yj7vm5g

or

http://www.famsf.org/deyoung/calendar/day.asp?categoryid=62 <http://www.famsf.org/deyoung/calendar/day.asp?
categoryid=62&calendarid=5234 &day=4%2F2%2F2010>
&calendarid=5234&day=4%2F2%2F2010

Andrew Joron was born in San Antonio, Texas, in 1955, and grew up in Stuttgart, Germany; Lowell, Massachusetts; and Missoula, Montana. He attended U.C. Berkeley, where he majored in history and philosophy of science. After a decade and a half spent writing science-fiction poetry, culminating in his volume Science Fiction (Pantograph Press, 1992), he turned to a more philosophical mode of speculative lyric. This work has been collected in The Removes (Hard Press, 1999), Fathom (Black Square Editions, 2003) and The Sound Mirror (Flood Editions, 2008). He is also the translator, from the German, of the Marxist-Utopian philosopher Ernst Bloch's Literary Essays (Stanford University Press, 1998), and of the surrealist Richard Anders's aphorisms and prose poems. His literary essays have been collected in The Cry at Zero (Counterpath Press, 2008). City Lights will publish his Trance Archive: New and Selected Poems in the spring of 2010. Joron lives in Berkeley, where he works as a freelance bibliographer and indexer.

Rachel Loden is the author of Dick of the Dead, currently one of five finalists for the California Book Award. The Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" column featured a poem from the book, and it has been called "oddly sublime" and "intoxicating" by the Poetry Project Newsletter and "expansive and whimsical" by the Brooklyn Rail. Loden's first book, Hotel Imperium, won the Contemporary Poetry Series competition and was selected as one of the ten best poetry books of the year by the San Francisco Chronicle, which called it "quirky and beguiling." It was also shortlisted for the Bay Area Book Reviewers Award. Her work has appeared in New American Writing, the Paris Review, Jacket, two editions of the Best American Poetry series, and many other magazines and anthologies. She is the recipient of a Pushcart Prize, a Fellowship in Poetry from the California Arts Council, an &NOW Award, and a grant from the Fund for Poetry.

C. S. Giscombe has authored books of poetry Prairie Style, Giscombe Road, and Here, and the nonfiction book Into and Out of Dislocation. His poetry has been published in several anthologies, including Best American Poetry, Oxford Anthology of African American Poetry, Lyric Postmoderns, and elsewhere. Giscombe was recently awarded the American Book Award for 2008 for Prairie Style. He currently is a Professor of Poetry at U.C. Berkeley.

The de Young Poetry Series is curated by Paul Hoover, a poet, editor, and professor of creative writing at San Francisco State University.

Advance tickets:

https://tickets.famsf.org/public/

↑ Index

182. cris cheek
post_moot. Springtime in Ohio.
Mon 19 Apr 2010

---

post_moot 2010, poetry + performance: a convocation

* April 22-25th, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio*

Neither quite an academic conference nor a festival, post_moot 2010 brings almost 70 poet-scholars and scholar-poets, language poets, the Black Took Collective, the Flarf Collective, sound artists, voice artists, lyric poets, book artists, digital text artists and poets' theater makers together for four days of immersion into early twenty-first century thinking about poetry + performance. Hosted on the campus of Miami University in Oxford, southwest Ohio, participants are coming from close to home and far afield, New Zealand, England, Wales, Canada and all around the United States. The practitioners presenting at post_moot 2010 are recognized leaders in their work; several are directors of Creative Writing programs and Literature conferences and many are major artists and editors with international reputations.

Themes that will be explored include eco-poetics, translation, polylingualism, poetry in the classroom, digital texts, bookarts, poets' theater, sound art, talk-based poetics, voice art, visual poetry, and live writing.

For more information visit:
http://www.units.muohio.edu/creativewriting/postmoot/

And track our live blog throughout the events: http://postmoot.com/10/

↑ Index

183. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

The word "is" functions both as copula and expression of identity. If I say "X is Y" I can mean either that Y is some way of describing X or that X and Y are identical. If they are identical then they can be substituted for one another in a sentence without any change in meaning. Observe: 1.) "Theft is the taking of something from someone who has more right to possess it than the thief." 2.) "Art is the taking of something from someone who has more right to possess it than the artist." If there is no change in meaning here, then "Art is Theft" is a mere expression of identity. This is not the case. Therefore "is" in this sentence is functioning as a copula. In that case theft is a predicate of art. It is possible that the sentences "Art is theft" and "Art is yellow" are both true in a way that would not be possible if the "is" in both sentences were functioning as a marker of identity. To explain "Art is theft" you must therefore just know what "theft" means as a predicate. As such it is worth pointing out that theft as a predicate indicates that art is a crime, art takes possession of some (intellectual) property that does not belong to the artist. To create art then is to appropriate and to do wrong; to be guilty and deserving of punishment. "Art is theft" is therefore a condemnation of God as first creator for creating us and a warning to artists that there is nothing redemptive in what they do. In creation, the artist takes from infinite possibility and fixes in imitation the previously unrealized. Such an act is clearly larcenous and its perpetrators mere criminals trafficking in contraband.

On Apr 16, 2010, at 5:23 PM, Ann Bogle wrote:

> Explain art is theft.
>
> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could think of for poor.
>
> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all? Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something about a mountain.
>
> I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?
>
> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>
> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>
> Ann Bogle

↑ Index

184. mIEKAL aND
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

By definition originality is impossible.

↑ Index

185. Deborah Poe
Elements: Review & Potential Reviewers
Mon 19 Apr 2010

Friends,

I wanted to pass along this review of my new collection Elements: http://thelinebreak.wordpress.com/. If you are interested in doing a review of Elements, please let me know. I'm happy to mail a review copy to you.

Best wishes,
Deborah Poe
http://www.deborahpoe.com
http://www.stockportflats.org/elements.htm

↑ Index

186. Gregg Murray
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

My thots
It ainâ€™t
I reappropropriate apro poe and some think I Smuggle
Makes a mind boggle on this feed speed
I read from Ann Bogle
Saw it while lying in bed, truth told,
It said â€œArt is Theftâ€ in 300 words
For/get what you he(a)rd, take it
My style; "stole" it
Yâ€™all need a zip line from Shy-town to the ATL
Rent some wheels as well
Steal some meals and rip off vs.
Too, for starterz yâ€™all can rechew the gum(p) sum stuck
On my shoe
Life is like a box a chalk lits
You ainâ€™t know
I role (play) up in cars I stole Whole vs. stale, my foods, sometimes I thieve it slo
Steelinâ€™ my rims
Verse is ripped from slim waves, folks told me I was numero uno
With middle fingers, meddle digits

(K)now
Iâ€™m Chief Thief of the Poetry Police Coppin a feel
Poâ€™ poe folks chasin me for a toke
On what I smoke
Vs. I slopped and draped on the white page

Who woulda thot I cd unbleach it Degreeâ€™d hoes ears rapt while i Preach and teach, didact
The mind-blowin fact that I didnâ€™t steal shit
I already own all of it

Y'all can have it back

From: Ann Bogle <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, April 16, 2010 8:23:27 PM
Subject: Art is theft

Explain art is theft.

I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could think of for poor.

The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all? Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something about a mountain.

I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?

Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?

Chicago Style. 300 words.

Ann Bogle

↑ Index

187. John Cunningham
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

You have raised a question that I've been pondering for some time although perhaps in a different context. This past Sunday, I had Steven Smith, formerly of the sound poetry group Owen Sound as well as director of Sage Hill Writing who is now director of Literary Arts at the Banff Centre, on my radio show 'Speaking of Poets' heard every Sunday from 4:30 to 5:00 p.m. CST on CKUW 95.9 FM (and available for streaming or download from the CKUW website). We talked about the concepts of sampling and found poetry. I've had poets as diverse as Karen Solie and Jan Conn to the experimental such as Erin Moure, Lisa Robertson and Angela Carr on the show who have used these techniques. I have also had discussion with poets who are aghast at this plagiarism. What are the parameters in these days of FLARF poetic techniques for the legitimacy of 'borrowings'? When does one have to cite? I've heard others who, if wanting to use a phrase, line or brief passage from another writer's work actually indicate that they would send a request to that writer for permission to use that material. Is this necessary? John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Maria Damon
Sent: April-17-10 5:37 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Art is theft

here's a shot. but off the cuff. art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not? being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.

Ann Bogle wrote:
> Explain art is theft.
>
> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in > Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could > think of for poor.
>
> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously

> cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's > syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all?
> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something > about a mountain.

>
> I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had
read
> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great > artists incarcerate?
>
> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>
> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>
> Ann Bogle
>
>

↑ Index

188. Stephen Vincent

After Spicer - A Reading!

Mon 19 Apr 2010

If you happen to be in the Bay Area:
What: After Spicer

Who:
Poets: George
Albon, Beverly Dahlen & Stephen Vincent

Where: Books
&
Bookshelves (14th & Sanchez, San Francisco)

When: 7:30,
Tuesday,
May 4

George
Albon will read from a new work in progress, Cafe Orpheus.

Beverly Dahlen will read will read a brief introduction, After Spicer, and from

A-Reading
Spicer
& Eighteen Sonnets.

Stephen Vincent will read selections from After Language / Letters to Jack Spicer

David Highsmith,
poet, publisher & proprietor will host.

(If thirsty, the management suggests, please, BYOB).

↑ Index

189. Douglas Manson
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

A carrot is dangled in front of the artist (if a poetics is art).

The artist wants the carrot (sound of empty stomach).

The condition of art amidst capital's excesses, paroxysms, death grimaces on a Halloween mask--the condition IS theft—of the artist's work, mode of existence.

The theft is all around you.

The artist doesn't care about creativity, originality, authority, the artist wants the carrot. What else is pushing her to produce? The artist, except for weird anomalous individuals amongst millions who work in the arts, is never paid/given according to their contribution, unless that reciprocation appear outside the system entirely, with none of its inherent values. The only value to be gained by the artist must be an unvalued value.

The artist's capacity and capabilities are enormous, while her needs are presumed to be few.

Analyst's couch.

Language of shipping offices.

Art is theft: because the work envisaged needs no form, there is an unlimited number of previously constituted examples of the very form that so excited her.

Why write? Only mix. Art is appropriation because there is no compelling reason to write from one's head or heart anymore. There are nothing but examples of the conception already out there, one click away, already amply and fully articulated. Steal that. Mix it up a little. Sell it under your name. Theft? No, it's market. Moving units. One who can shift an icon most effectively onto their person, an affiliated name.

The artist steals back the thing the culture demanded of her, and damned her for, or pays a heavy price.

The operative condition IS theft. The work is stolen from the artist, reframed, engineered and mass produced, and then she must pay to consume it.

The EXPERIENCE of a work of art is pure gratuity.

On Mon, Apr 19, 2010 at 11:12 AM, John Cunningham <
[redacted]> wrote:

> You have raised a question that I've been pondering for some time although perhaps in a different context. This past Sunday, I had Steven Smith, formerly of the sound poetry group Owen Sound as well as director of Sage Hill Writing who is now director of Literary Arts at the Banff Centre, on my radio show 'Speaking of Poets' heard every Sunday from 4:30 to 5:00 p.m.
> CST on CKUW 95.9 FM (and available for streaming or download from the CKUW website). We talked about the concepts of sampling and found poetry. I've had poets as diverse as Karen Solie and Jan Conn to the experimental such as > Erin Moure, Lisa Robertson and Angela Carr on the show who have used these techniques. I have also had discussion with poets who are aghast at this plagiarism. What are the parameters in these days of FLARF poetic techniques for the legitimacy of 'borrowings'? When does one have to cite? I've heard others who, if wanting to use a phrase, line or brief passage from another writer's work actually indicate that they would send a request > to that writer for permission to use that material. Is this necessary?
> John Herbert Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Maria Damon
> Sent: April-17-10 5:37 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Art is theft
>
> here's a shot. but off the cuff.
> art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and > others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not? being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.

>
> Ann Bogle wrote:
> Explain art is theft.
>
> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could > think of for poor.
>
> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously
>
> cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all?
> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something > about a mountain.
>
> I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read
> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?
>
> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>
> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>
> Ann Bogle

↑ Index

190. Matthew Landis
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

1

the translation and appropriation of not only that which we approve of or value but that which is most reprehensible;

to separate the intentionality of the author from the production of meaning and EMBRACE exemplarity not just as an argumentative or rhetorical strategy, but as a poetics in and of itself:

to let the detritus of our cultural and politcal lives speak on their own terms---to think of the poet less as the painter and more as the craftsman who constructs the frame

2

this past decade and the future of poetry has eroded the pretense of the confessional and the vulgarity of the topical & the opportunism of influence---in the sense that the topical simply adopts the tropes and rhetorical logic of media's narrative structure--- (ie, the war is happening, we oppose the war, but how long can you write about war?
what happens when the war is over? do we just find another war? and if there is none do we sit around WAITING for one with baited breath?) it highlights the value of the poetic voice addressing and reflecting the everyday--- of interrupting and detourning; of intervening in the narratives, language, thought--processes and values of our present culture and thereby, not only oppose & question the logic and practice of war, but the behavior, language, and philosophical foundation that war is built upon--- to construct dialectical "IMAGES" which are concrete (in the vispo and literal sense), enduring, and impactful collections and galleries of the ephemera & carrion of culture; as well as the traumatic and the horroific; as well as the joyful and celebratory--- not in the delusional quest for permanence or tradition but the wholly absurd and yet wholly necessary quest to use poetry to not only settle those unsettled debts of history, but to challenge the very notion of indebtedness--- to light the fuses which will result in these explosions of these dialectical images in the minds of the reader: to write poetry in the service of uncovering and enacting new consciousness.

3

the love of linguistic play, an anarchistic spree celebrating the freedom of consciousnes, which is the endless possibility of the verbal expression of consciousness that is language---fashioning
"chorals out of random input"

John Cunningham wrote:
> You have raised a question that I've been pondering for some time although > perhaps in a different context. This past Sunday, I had Steven Smith, > formerly of the sound poetry group Owen Sound as well as director of Sage > Hill Writing who is now director of Literary Arts at the Banff Centre, on > my radio show 'Speaking of Poets' heard every Sunday from 4:30 to 5:00
p.m.
> CST on CKUW 95.9 FM (and available for streaming or download from the CKUW
> website). We talked about the concepts of sampling and found poetry. I've > had poets as diverse as Karen Solie and Jan Conn to the experimental such as > Erin Moure, Lisa Robertson and Angela Carr on the show who have used > these techniques. I have also had discussion with poets who are aghast at > this plagiarism. What are the parameters in these days of FLARF poetic > techniques for the legitimacy of 'borrowings'? When does one have to cite?
> I've heard others who, if wanting to use a phrase, line or brief passage > from another writer's work actually indicate that they would send a request > to that writer for permission to use that material. Is this necessary?
> John Herbert Cunningham
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of Maria Damon
> Sent: April-17-10 5:37 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Art is theft
>
> here's a shot. but off the cuff.
> art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of > activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much > ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and > others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses > good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not?

> being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because > of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive > genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as > stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. > stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.
>
> Ann Bogle wrote:
>
>> Explain art is theft.
>>
>> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in >> Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I
>>
> could
>
>> think of for poor.
>>
>> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously
>>
>
>
>> cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's >> syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark
>>
> is all?
>
>> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting,
>>
> something
>
>> about a mountain.
>>
>> I was glad after renting Tom& Viv years after its release that I had
>>
> read
>
>> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great

>> artists incarcerate?
>>
>> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>>
>> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>>
>> Ann Bogle
>>
>>
>
>>
>>
>
>
>

↑ Index

191. Ann Bogle
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

Six answers so far. I'll keep it open while replies are oncoming. My objective is to realize something I haven't realized (come to believe) in reading poetry and observing other arts as well.

In a message dated 4/17/2010 2:57:23 P.M. Central Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could think of for poor.

↑ Index

192. Skip Fox
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

"If art be theft which life reflects,
And mind be life that art inflects,
Then all--art, life & mind--be in such debt
That steals the primacy of prime Unhinges light from time
And . . ."

The first lines of a boring poem discarded by Richard Lapauvre, ca. 1962.

↑ Index

193. J.P. Craig
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

What if art is an invitation to attention?

I've read a lot of different aesthetics and poetics and manifestos, and this seems to be a recurring theme: "hey, consider this."

There's a lot of evidence that we view attention as appropriation/ownership: grasp, comprehend, "get it," and so on.

And often our ways of saying "obscure" or "difficult" or "multiplex" involve inability to grasp or penetrate. We wrestle with slippery subjects, find it hard, impenetrable.

Maybe there's some limitation in our imagination, sot that we have this expression of body in any desire, even if it's to know something without material qualities.

But, so, yes, maybe art is theft in the same way that any apprehension of the phenomenal world is theft, except art is inviting theft?

So, for me, any reframing of words--even if it's saying that "I have struggled and have finally rewritten Don Quixote perfectly, word for word"--is an invitation for a new sort of attention and is therefore a new work of art. So, no, maybe art can never be theft.

Though of course art can be stolen, even if it's just a reproduction.*

*And to that one special person: I know you, my pretty, have my Awede edition of Articulation of Sound Forms in Time, my precious.

On Apr 19, 2010, at 11:12 AM, John Cunningham wrote:

> You have raised a question that I've been pondering for some time although perhaps in a different context. This past Sunday, I had Steven Smith, formerly of the sound poetry group Owen Sound as well as director of Sage Hill Writing who is now director of Literary Arts at the Banff Centre, on my radio show 'Speaking of Poets' heard every Sunday from 4:30 to 5:00 p.m. CST on CKUW 95.9 FM (and available for streaming or download from the CKUW website). We talked about the concepts of sampling and found poetry. I've had poets as diverse as Karen Solie and Jan Conn to the experimental such as Erin Moure, Lisa Robertson and Angela Carr on the show who have used these techniques. I have also had discussion with poets who are aghast at this plagiarism. What are the parameters in these days of FLARF poetic techniques for the legitimacy of 'borrowings'? When does one have to cite?

I've heard others who, if wanting to use a phrase, line or brief passage from another writer's work actually indicate that they would send a request to that writer for permission to use that material. Is this necessary?
John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Maria Damon
Sent: April-17-10 5:37 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Art is theft

here's a shot. but off the cuff.
art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not? being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.

Ann Bogle wrote:
Explain art is theft.

I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could think of for poor.

The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all?

Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something about a mountain.

I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?

Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?

> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>
> Ann Bogle

JP Craig
http://jpcraig.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

194. gabriel siegel
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

Change without exchange.

On 4/17/10, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:
> here's a shot. but off the cuff.
> art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of > activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much > ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and > others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses > good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not?
> being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because > of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive > genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as > stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. > stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.
>
> Ann Bogle wrote:
>> Explain art is theft.
>>
>> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in >> Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I >> could >> think of for poor.
>>
>> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously
>>
>> cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's >> syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark >> is all?

>> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, >> something
>> about a mountain.
>>
>> I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had
>> read
>> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great >> artists incarcerate?
>>
>> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>>
>> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>>
>> Ann Bogle
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

195. George Bowering

Re: Art is theft

Mon 19 Apr 2010

On Apr 17, 2010, at 1:53 PM, Chris Chapman wrote:

> theft + disguise = metaphor?
>
> 1. theft: a repetition that doesn't use negation for instantiation.
> eg.: a, a not a, A.
> 2. disguise: a different species within one genus.
> 3. metaphor: gifts of insubordinate resemblance
>
> if art is the use of metaphor, creative comparison, then it is theft.

Ah, but this is an example of begging the question.

gb
>
>
>
>
>
> On 4/17/10, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:

>> On Apr 16, 2010, at 5:23 PM, Ann Bogle wrote:
>>
>>> Explain art is theft.
>>>
>>
>> Yeah. I agree that explain art is the worst kind of art.
>>
>> But I don't think that it is theft.
>>
>>
>> gb
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>
> welcome.html

Georges Bowering, OC
If you say so.

↑ Index

196. George Bowering
Re: this Friday: Joron, Loden, Giscombe at the de Young in SF
Mon 19 Apr 2010

Boy, I wish I were in SF!
But I have to be in Edmonton tomorrow.

gb

On Apr 19, 2010, at 4:14 AM, Rachel Loden wrote:

> C.S. Giscombe, Andrew Joron, and Rachel Loden
> read from their work at the de Young Museum
>
> Koret Auditorium
> Friday, April 23, 7 p.m.
>
> Free to Museum members; $5 for all others
>
> The de Young Museum of Fine Art
> 50 Hagiwara Tea Garden Drive
> Golden Gate Park

San Francisco

Parking lot inside the museum:
enter on Fulton just west of Park Presidio Drive

More info at the de Young Web site:

http://tinyurl.com/yj7vm5g

or

http://www.famsf.org/deyoung/calendar/day.asp?categoryid=62 <http://www.famsf.org/deyoung/calendar/day.asp?
categoryid=62&calendarid=5234
&day=4%2F2%2F2010> &calendarid=5234&day=4%2F2%2F2010

Andrew Joron was born in San Antonio, Texas, in 1955, and grew up in Stuttgart, Germany; Lowell, Massachusetts; and Missoula, Montana. He attended U.C. Berkeley, where he majored in history and philosophy of science. After a decade and a half spent writing science-fiction poetry, culminating in his volume Science Fiction (Pantograph Press, 1992), he turned to a more philosophical mode of speculative lyric. This work has been collected in The Removes (Hard Press, 1999), Fathom (Black Square Editions, 2003) and The Sound Mirror (Flood Editions, 2008). He is also the translator, from the German, of the Marxist-Utopian philosopher Ernst Bloch's Literary Essays (Stanford University Press, 1998), and of the surrealist Richard Anders's aphorisms and prose poems. His literary essays have been collected in The Cry at Zero (Counterpath Press, 2008). City Lights will publish his Trance Archive: New and Selected Poems in the spring of 2010. Joron lives in Berkeley, where he works as a freelance bibliographer and indexer.

Rachel Loden is the author of Dick of the Dead, currently one of five finalists for the California Book Award. The Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" column featured a poem from the book, and it has been called "oddly sublime" and "intoxicating" by the Poetry Project Newsletter and "expansive and whimsical" by the Brooklyn Rail. Loden's first book, Hotel Imperium, won the Contemporary Poetry Series competition and was selected as one of the ten best poetry books of the year by the San Francisco Chronicle, which called it "quirky and beguiling." It was also shortlisted for the Bay Area Book Reviewers Award. Her work has appeared in New American Writing, the Paris Review, Jacket, two editions of the Best American Poetry series, and many other magazines and anthologies. She is the recipient of a Pushcart Prize, a Fellowship in Poetry from the California Arts Council, an &NOW Award, and a grant from the Fund for Poetry.

C. S. Giscombe has authored books of poetry Prairie Style, Giscombe Road, and Here, and the nonfiction book Into and Out of Dislocation. His poetry has been published in several anthologies, including Best American Poetry, Oxford Anthology of African American Poetry, Lyric Postmoderns, and elsewhere. Giscombe was recently awarded the American Book Award for 2008 for Prairie Style. He currently is a Professor of Poetry at U.C. Berkeley.

The de Young Poetry Series is curated by Paul Hoover, a poet, editor, and professor of creative writing at San Francisco State University.

> Advance tickets:
>
> https://tickets.famsf.org/public/
>
> welcome.html

Mr. G.H. Bowering
Does not get up immoderately early.

↑ Index

197. Halvard Johnson
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

My thoughts exactly. You thief.

Hal

Halvard Johnson
==========

The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye (downloadable and free) is @ http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets

[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Mon, Apr 19, 2010 at 9:54 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> The word "is" functions both as copula and expression of identity. If I say "X is Y" I can mean either that Y is some way of describing X or that X and Y are identical. If they are identical then they can be substituted for one another in a sentence without any change in meaning. Observe: 1.) "Theft is the taking of something from someone who has more right to possess it than the thief." 2.) "Art is the taking of something from someone who has more right to possess it than the artist." If there is no change in meaning here, then "Art is Theft" is a mere expression of identity. This is not the case. Therefore "is" in this sentence is functioning as a copula. In that case theft is a predicate of art. It is possible that the sentences "Art is theft" and "Art is yellow" are both true in a way that would not be possible if the "is" in both sentences were functioning as a marker of identity. To explain "Art is theft" you must therefore just know what "theft" means as a predicate. As such it is worth pointing out that theft as a predicate indicates that art is a crime, art takes possession of some (intellectual) property that does not belong to the artist. To create art then is to appropriate and to do wrong; to be guilty and deserving of punishment. "Art is theft" is therefore a condemnation of God as first creator for creating us and a warning to artists that there is nothing redemptive in what they do. In creation, the artist takes from infinite possibility and fixes in imitation the previously unrealized. Such an act is clearly larcenous and its perpetrators mere criminals trafficking in contraband.

On Apr 16, 2010, at 5:23 PM, Ann Bogle wrote:

Explain art is theft.

I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could think of for poor.

The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all? Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something about a mountain.

I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?

Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?

Chicago Style. 300 words.

Ann Bogle

↑ Index

198. amy king

Today -- Camille Dungy on NPR

Mon 19 Apr 2010

Camille Dungy discusses an anthology she edited on African American nature poetry, Black Nature, and reads poems by Marilyn Nelson, Evie Shockley, Lucille Clifton, and three others here:

http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=126029674&ft=1&f=1032

↑ Index

199. Edmund Hardy

Delay-Line Memory: I.S. Spring 2010

Mon 19 Apr 2010

An index of everything since the last update:http://intercapillaryspace.blogspot.com/2010/04/spring-2010.html

"This savage anomaly"

ESSAYS

Alex Latter, "Scheming for the possible world": J.H. Prynne's The White Stones and The English Intelligencer

Peter Larkin, Scarcely on the Way: The Starkness of Things in Sacral Space

Robin Purves, To “Iceland”: On Improvisation During The Fall

Peter Larkin, Being Seen for Seeing: a tribute to R F Langley's Journals

Abena Sutherland, On John Ashbery's 'Definition of Blue'

Michael Peverett, Athwart

Ralph Hawkins, Frank O’Hara’s 'Naphtha'

Ralph Hawkins,
Underwhelmed. Ted Berrigan via John Wilkinson.

INTERVIEWS

The desire to testify:
Interview with Chris Goode by Lawrence Upton

Less than, more at: an interview with Peter Larkin

POETRY

Olwen Hughes, "I was an Aries once": 3 Poems

Jonty Tiplady, Happiness 4

Harry Godwin, Experiments in Deconstruction : Flushing

Sean Bonney, The Commons set 3 // 31 – 33, 27 – 28, Two poems (after Rimbaud)

Carrie Etter, Divining for Starters (65)

Nathan Hamilton, Sunbathe

Johan de Wit, from annulus

Ralph Hawkins and Alan
Halsey, From 'The Incomplete Pseudo-Necronomicon'

Tina Bass, 2 Poems

Peter Larkin, Lean Earth
Off Trees Unaslant, IV

Steve Parker, 3 Poems

Anna Ticehurst, 3 Poems

Tom White, from 'Old Sense'

Jeff Hilson, In the Assarts
31 - 36

William King, How To Eat

Federico García Lorca, traduced by Michael Peverett, Nueva York, again

Jenny Allan, Adapted from Intermittent Voices

Josh Stanley, 3 Poems

Timothy Thornton, A Poem

John Welch, Fresco

John Lowther, from Correspondences

Matina Stamatakis, Behind Eyes

Hannah Silva, A Poem

Jennifer Cooke, A Poem

REVIEWS

Stuart Calton reviews Ryan Dobran's Your Guilt Is A Miracle

'Variable Magnitudes:
The Wrack of Watts' by Edmund Hardy

Catherine Daly's Vauxhall
reviewed by Michael Peverett

The Eye on James Wilkes'
Weather A System

Ralph Hawkins:
Poly-Parrot(s). Allen Fisher's Birds

Tony Lopez, Darwin,
reviewed by Michael Peverett

Alistair Noon on Ralph
Hawkins: No Artificial Additives or Colourings

Edmund Hardy: Modifiers & Indistinctions - Jonty Tiplady's 'Zam Bonk Dip'

Xtin on Poetical Histories
No. 3, D. S. Marriott's Mortgages

Nathan Hamilton: Babylon’s
Flowcharts - Kumin, Hoch, Fried

Peter Jaeger in and of the world - Melissa Flores-Bórquez and Edmund Hardy review 'Rapid Eye Movement'

Michael Peverett on Leevi
Lehto's Lake Onega and Other Poems

Michael Peverett on Anne Campbell's No Memory of a Move

Wendy Mulford & the Escape - Melissa Flores-Bórquez and Edmund Hardy

Simon Pettet’s HEARTH
reviewed by Ralph Hawkins

Abena Sutherland - "a brackish ring / for you": Stuart Calton's The Corn Mother

Lisa Samuels' The Invention of Culture reviewed by Michael Peverett

Peter Hughes on Ian Seed's
Anonymous Intruder

Peverett on Reality
Street's 'Five from Finland'

Peter Hughes on John Welch's Collected Poems

Peter Larkin on GLOGY by Josh Stanley

Pentti Saarikoski, The Edge of Europe, by Michael Peverett

Walking the Streets of Eighteenth-Century London: John Gay's Trivia (Edited by Clare Brant and Susan E. Whyman) reviewed by Melissa Flores-Bórquez

Melissa Flores-Bórquez on Ben Borek

Michael Peverett reviews
Gunnar Björling, You go the words

Peter Hughes on Anselm
Hollo, Guests of Space

Laura Steele on Stephen
Brockwell

Edmund Hardy: Rage &
Suspense - R. F. Langley, Journals

Colin Falck's Post-Modern
Love reviewed by Michael Peverett

Elizabeth Willis' The Great
Egg of Night reviewed by Michael Peverett

rob mclennan's aubade
reviewed by Michael Peverett

Peter Hughes on Andrew Duncan

Philippe Viellard: Like a Book out of Hell - Boccaccio's Life of Dante

Michael Peverett: Catherine
Daly, That Locket Sound

Laura Steele: Allen
Fisher's Place

Michael Peverett: Donald Ward - Lark Over Stone Walls

INVESTIGATIONS

Real time diagrammatic reviews of readings at Xing the Line in 2009

Michael Peverett - Robert Browning's Strafford

Melissa Flores-Bórquez investigates Gilberto Freyre, and John Gay's Tyburn Tree

Abena Sutherland: Bouncing
Over Death - Gay & Ariosto

Michael Peverett investigates Samples from The Many Press; The Best of William Canton; Some Denise Riley poems; Charles Dickens, The Old Curiosity Shop; John Gay's The Birth of the Squire; the end of Richard Makin's St Leonards; and surveys Euripides.

Laura Steele: Buzz Off -
Gay, Mandeville, Eutopia

Edmund Hardy investigates The rhetoric of land law; The art of instruction; Index Humour; Hip-hop & the Autobiographical - Ice T, Biggie, Cannibal Ox, Estelle, and, in passing, Jurassic 5.

FINAL CHEERFUL SING-A-LONG BEFORE THE RETURN TO USELESS PASSIONS

Lyrics to Kenzo Masaoka's classic cartoon KUMO-TO-CHURIPPU (Spider and Tulip, 1943) translated, with accompanying video.

_____
http://clk.atdmt.com/UKM/go/195013117/direct/01/
We want to hear all your funny, exciting and crazy Hotmail stories. Tell us now

↑ Index

200. Sheila Murphy
THIS IS VISUAL POETRY - SHEILA E. MURPHY (see link)
Mon 19 Apr 2010

THIS IS VISUAL POETRY - SHEILA E. MURPHY (SEE LINK BELOW)

http://thisisvisualpoetry.com/

↑ Index

201. Eleni Stecopoulos
Poetics of Healing APRIL 29-MAY 1, SF & Berkeley
Mon 19 Apr 2010

—

↑ Index

202. Caleb Cluff
Re: Art is theft
Mon 19 Apr 2010

I've heard that before.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of mIEKAL aND Sent: Monday, 19 April 2010 11:56 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Art is theft

By definition originality is impossible.

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

203. George Bowering
Re: Rae's Pulitzer
Mon 19 Apr 2010

I am, too.

Hi, Cecilia!

GB

On Apr 13, 2010, at 5:06 PM, Cecelia Belle wrote:

> Just had to write in to congratulate, Rae, and don't know how to get a hold of her; to say David Bromige was a Huge fan of Rae's, and often quoted her line, " the smallest distance inexhaustible". (Hope I got it right.) He would be so pleased. So am I. Cecelia Belle Bromige
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)
> [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Caleb Cluff
> Sent: Tuesday, April 13, 2010 3:48 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Rae's Pulitzer
>
> Another great (greater) poet acknowledged: - Special citation: Hank Williams for his craftsmanship as a songwriter who expressed universal feelings with poignant simplicity and played a pivotal role in transforming country music into a major musical and cultural force in American life.
>
> Caleb
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB)

[mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Paul Nelson
Sent: Tuesday, 13 April 2010 7:54 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Rae's Pulitzer

So good to see someone whose work you value get one of these things:

Poetry: "Versed," by Rae Armantrout (Wesleyan University Press), a book striking for its wit and linguistic inventiveness, offering poems that are often little thought-bombs detonating in the mind long after the first reading. Finalists: "Tryst," by Angie Estes (Oberlin College Press), a collection of poems remarkable for its variety of subjects, array of genres and nimble use of language, and "Inseminating the Elephant," by Lucia Perillo (Copper Canyon Press), a collection of poems, often laced with humor, that examine popular culture, the limits of the human body and the tragicomic aspects of everyday experience.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/12/AR2010041202
750_2.html?sid=ST2010041202826

Paul E. Nelson

Global Voices Radio
SPLAB!

C. City, WA [redacted]

guidelines
Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential
and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only

for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy > this email

> or
>
> any attachments. If you have received this message in error, > please notify
> the
>
> sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC > does not
>
> represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free.
> Before
>
> opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's > liability is
>
> limited to resupplying any email and attachments.
> guidelines
>
> welcome.html

George Bowering, M.A.
From Heaven with a burp.

↑ Index

204. Jennifer Karmin
4/24: LUNGFULL! release party in NYC
Mon 19 Apr 2010

Celebrate a year of horrible mistakes with one night of even worse ones.

THE LUNGFULL! MAGAZINE
GALA RELEASE PARTY
RAUCOUS AUCTION
& READING EXTRAVAGANZA

WHEN/WHERE:
6:45pm Saturday 4/24Â
Zinc Bar, 82 W 3rd NYC
Between Sullivan & Thompson
Subway ACEBDQF to West 4thÂ Â
RW to 8th or Prince

LUNGFULL! is the only literary journal that publishes rough drafts along with the final versions so you can see the creative process as it happens - with all its missteps, secret foibles and regrets!

On Saturday 4/24 it all comes to life and YOU get to:

HEAR marvelous writers at the apogee of their skill!
WITNESS astounding water-defying demonstrations of Lungfullismo!
BID on indescribable items of vast allure & untellable value!
HECKLE everyone involved!
PURCHASE a brand-new copy of Lungfull! Magazine!
TAKE HOME fabulous volumes of poetry, rough drafts, art, world news reports, cranky letters, & perhaps the writers themselves!

$5-15 admission sliding scale fund raiser. $20 gets you in, plus a copy of the magazine. Generosity always comes back to you sevenfold. A pair of sparkly pants & fiery hoops will earn you our unending awe, though not necessarily respect.

The event will be hosted by Editor Brendan Lorber.
The Auction will be barked by Todd Colby with Tracey McTague.

THE LINE UP:

Contributors to this issue, many of whom will be here & be reading, are: Hossannah Asuncion â€¢ Nathan Austin â€¢ Macgregor Card â€¢ Giuseppe CastellacciÂ â€¢ Todd Colby â€¢ Joanna Penn Cooper â€¢ Joel Craig â€¢ Molly DorozenskiÂ â€¢ Ian DreiblattÂ â€¢ Betsy Fagin â€¢ Farrah FieldÂ â€¢ James Grinwis â€¢ Barbara Henning â€¢ Lauren Ireland â€¢ Ish Klein â€¢ Brian Koppen â€¢ Kevin Leal â€¢ Brendan Lorber â€¢ Tracey McTagueÂ â€¢ Stefania IreneÂ Marthakis â€¢ Laura Minor â€¢ Ben Mirov â€¢ Cynthia Nelson â€¢ Jennifer Nelson â€¢ Greg PurcellÂ â€¢ Rick Smith â€¢ Mathias Svalina â€¢ Maureen ThorsonÂ â€¢ Bill Ward â€¢ Alli Warren â€¢ Michael J. WilsonÂ â€¢ Rebecca Wolff â€¢ Jon Woodward â€¢ Jen Robinson

World News Reporters, some of whom will also appear are: Sawako Nakayasu in Tokyo, JapanÂ â€¢ Michael Gizzi in Hawkesbury River, Australia â€¢ David Perry in Shanghai, China â€¢ Andy Young on Egypt â€¢ Jennifer K Dick in Paris, France â€¢ Tim Atkins in Great Britain â€¢ Edmund Berrigan in Brooklyn, NY â€¢ Bernadette Mayer and Philip Good in Upstate NY â€¢ Sparrow in Cresskill, New Jersey â€¢ Thomas Devaney in Philadelphia, PA â€¢ John Most in Virginia â€¢ Michael Kelleher in Buffalo, NY â€¢ Bruce Covey in Atlanta, GA â€¢ Brett Evans in the air above New Orleans, LA â€¢ Dave Brinks on the ground in New Orleans, LA â€¢ Matt Hart in Cincinnati, OH â€¢ Jennifer Karmin in Chicago, IL â€¢ Chuck Stebelton in Milwaukee, WI â€¢ Sarah Fox and John Colburn in Minneapolis, MN â€¢ Prageeta Sharma in Missoula, MT â€¢ Brian Kim Stefans in Los Angeles, CA â€¢ Matthew Zapruder in San Francisco, CA â€¢ Julie Reid in Petaluma, CA â€¢ Jen Coleman in Portland, OR â€¢ C.E. Putnam in Seattle, WA

Visual Artists: Mauro Altamura â€¢ Aaron Cantor â€¢ Amy Chan â€¢ Tracey McTague

Letters to the editor from about 30 people â€” if you drunk-emailed us this past year, here's the evidence. Nice job!

Auctioned items include:
â€¢ Original Mork & Mindy action figures in unopened package â€¢ Membership at the Brooklyn Creative League (green shared workspace, office amenities, and a community of professional colleagues for freelance professionals, small-shop companies, and nonprofits)
â€¢ Antique working typewriters â€¢ Antique Burmese cigarette lighter â€¢ Lots of art
â€¢ Broadsides from Best Fucking Friends Press
â€¢ Unique handmade booties, hats & shawl
...and much much more

http://WWW.LUNGFULL.ORG

↑ Index

205. derek beaulieu
new from NO press: Vanessa Place's THE ALLEGORY AND THE ARCHIVE
Mon 19 Apr 2010

No press is proud to announce the publication of

Vanessa Place's
THE ALLEGORY AND THE ARCHIVE

28pp, sewn binding published in an edition of 50 copies (25 of which are for sale)
$5 each

for more information, or to order copies, please email:
derek beaulieu
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

206. Al Filreis
new at PennSound: Wallace Stevens
Mon 19 Apr 2010

We are pleased to announce a new PennSound author page - that of Wallace Stevens. We begin by making available two recordings made in Boston - a project in collaboration with the Woodberry Poetry Room at Harvard. New Stevens recordings will be added to this page in the coming months:

http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Stevens-Wallace.html

We especially wish to thank Christina Davis, Peter Hanchak, and John Serio.

- Al Filreis & Charles Bernstein
  Co-Directors, PennSound

↑ Index

207. Insert Press

Subscribe to Insert Press!

Tue 20 Apr 2010

Dear All - I'm excited for the coming year of Insert Press and wanted to send you this note about what's coming up and about how to subscribe to the press. I've been working with a brilliant printmaker, Maggie White, to make Insert Press titles even more gorgeous.

Hope all is swell,

Mathew Timmons

Subscribe to Insert Press now for $42.00 and receive everything Insert Press has published to date plus a year’s worth of new titles including Bruna Mori’s new book Poetry for Corporations, The Ups & Downs anthology (a collection of writings and imagery from the installation series, The Ups & Downs), plus anything else we decide to do this year (excluding the PARROT series).

The very First subscriber will get the absolute last issue of Fold Magazine: Fold Appropriate Text as well as one of the last issues of Three Column Table by Harold Abramowitz. The Second and Third subscribers will also get one of the last copies of Three Column Table by Harold Abramowitz. All subscribers will get copies of Absurd Good News by Julien Poirier, Handsome Fish Offices by Ara Shirinyan, the forthcoming Poetry for Corporations by Bruna Mori, the forthcoming Ups & Downs, plus anything else we do in the next year (excluding the PARROT series).

Subscribe to Insert Press!<https://www.paypal.com/cgi-bin/webscr?cmd=_s-xclick&hosted_button_id=FE9SL9ACLPAKG>for $42.00

Subscribe to PARROT and receive all the individual titles from the PARROT series for $42.00 or pre-order the Limited Edition hand-bound set of the collection, signed and numbered 1-50 for $75.00. PARROT will print the work of Stephanie Rioux’s My Beautiful Beds, Harold Abramowitz’s A House on a Hill (House on a Hill Part 1), Amanda Ackerman’s I Fell in Love with a Monster Truck, Will Alexander’s On the Substance of Disorder, Amina Cain’s Tramps

Everywhere, Allison Carter’s All Bodies Are The Same and They Have The Same Reactions, Kate Durbin’s Kept Women, Joseph Mosconi’s But On Geometric, Amaranth Ravva’s Airline Music, Brian Kim Stefans' Viva Miscegenation, Mathew Timmons’ Complex Textual Legitimacy Proclamation, Allyssa Wolf’s Loquela as well as the work of Michelle Detorie, Vanessa Place and others…

Subscribe to PARROT<https://www.paypal.com/cgi-bin/webscr?cmd=_s-xclick&hosted_button_id=WUFNWCCURXGWW>for $42.00 and receive each of the individual titles as they are released.

Order the Limited Edition set!<https://www.paypal.com/cgi-bin/webscr?cmd=_s-xclick&hosted_button_id=7U7SJ8FNRDQBG>for $75.00

http://insertpress.net

↑ Index

208. Nana Zabic

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Tue 20 Apr 2010

Hi All,

